Gamified photo contests: implementing a quest format

User:Gikü, Wikimedians of Romania and Moldova User Group

Let's recall Wiki Loves X

at its core, a photo contest usually structured around some sort of a list
where the winners are determined by a jury that assesses quality

...although we as organizers want
quantity / completion

WIKI loves
monuments

wiki loves
EARTH

FOLKLORE

People tend to visit popular landmarks

that represent (or are close to) a touristic spot, or that look spectacular, or that have some special history

But if we want images of all the monuments in the list,

we need to encourage participants to take photos of places far away,
or not easily reachable,
or that are outright boring

They'll go on their bikes anyway

Applying further* gamification

* - because “Wiki Loves” is itself gamified

The classic quest

A traditional quest:

- involves a route handed out to participants
- has some sort of hints
- guides participants to a “treasure” in the end – or has a points system
- ...everything above is set by the organiser(s)

Adapting the quest format

In the bike quest:

- routes are built by the participants
- the hints are the actual monuments
- the points system awards monuments visited and images made
- ...very little is actually set by the organiser(s)

Not only monuments!

Since they are already visiting those towns and villages, participants are encouraged to take photos of other landmarks: town halls, schools, etc.

Lessons learned

People hesitate to travel far from their origin city (which almost always is the capital)

People who are used to travel farther usually have a better chance to visit more places and take more photos.

and applied

Compensation:

- food, refreshments, and beverages
- transport, if needed

Tiers (level the field):

- up to 50 km
- between 50–150 km
- more than 150 km

Results 2022

3 participating teams have contributed with 137 photos of cultural heritage monuments
covering 50 distinct

as well as 204 photos of
other points of interest.

Expectations 2023

10 participants to contribute with
heritage monuments
covering 100 distinct

other points of interest.

Like I said, they'll go on their bikes :)
