

FOR THE BELGIANS

The people of this country have never shown to better advantage than in the generosity they are exhibiting toward the unfortunate inhabitants of Belgium. In all the history of the world there never has been a nation more deserving of the pity and aid of all whose hearts are wrung by human suffering. By far the greater portion of their country has been laid waste. Their means of subsistence have either been confiscated or destroyed. There are no means by which they can possibly supply their own wants and there is nothing left for them but to perish of hunger and exposure if the charity of other nations does not cover their needs.

The response which the people of the United States has made and is making to their appeal for assistance is no more than a common humanity would suggest. It would be impossible to enjoy our own abundance with the ever-present knowledge of the sufferings and privations of this devoted people. From every section of the Union there is going a constant stream of supplies, the like of which has never before been known under similar circumstances. What is better still, it is constantly growing in volume and promises to continue through the coming winter.

ACRES OF ROSES

One hundred and twenty thousand rose bushes in full bloom, all in one big garden patch, is a sight that greets the eye in Altadena. There are five acres of the roses, all in rows, one thousand bushes to a row and one hundred and twenty varieties to a row. The plants are only one year old, but such a vision of bloom has rarely been seen. A peculiarity of the "rose patch" is that most of the roses, in fact, almost all, are new varieties. The fragrant Ophelia, with striking resemblance to the tea roses; the brilliant Irish Fire Flame, with its sharply pointed buds of brilliant flame tints, and a host of other new and beautiful roses attract attention of hundreds of visitors.

TRIED TO BE FUNNY

Just what sort of a sense of humor those persons have who persist in sending in fake reports of happenings to a newspaper and consider the matter in the light of a joke, is hard to determine. There is decidedly something lacking in one who finds it necessary to stoop to such acts in order to gratify a misguided sense of humor.

Recently there was reported to us a musical-tea, supposed to have been given by Miss Mildred Hastings of 1215 West Ninth street, and inquiry develops the fact that the report was absolutely devoid of truth. The family of the young lady say they know nothing about any social affair being held at their home.

COSTLY LACK OF CO-OPERATION

The first day of school, to the majority of mothers, is simply a time when the youngsters must be presented at the schoolhouse, washed, scrubbed and mended. Responsibility for their welfare is turned over to the teacher for the term. The ordinary home takes too little interest in school work. Teachers do not hold one position year after year as much as they used to do. They take low-paid positions a short time, then are apt to move on and up or elsewhere. Under these conditions they may not know the parents personally.

Lacking such knowledge, there is little mutual helpfulness.

Another cause creating this break is the fact that new methods are so much used. Formerly a parent could give the child a good deal of help on problems that bothered him. Now the language of the text book and the method of operation are apt to be wholly new. Assistance rendered in the home often leaves the child more perplexed than he was before. This creates in the mind of the parents a feeling that it is useless to interfere.

The less parents understand of school methods the more they become critical and suspicious. Hence the many complaints that this boy or that girl is not getting fair play, while the teacher is left with the feeling that the home atmosphere is hostile and will not back her up. Parents should not take the education of their children thus lightly. It is not a matter merely of merchandise, which they buy with their tax bills as they buy their groceries. A little attention to a child's report cards and his tests may help save a waste of school privileges that will afterward be a lifelong regret. It takes but a little time to drop in at the school room. It is a scene of hope and cheer. Any parent will feel younger for the visit, and may be able to make some valuable suggestions.

WILD CALIFORNIA METHODS

Through the courtesy of George L. Dickinson, formerly of this city, The Courant has been supplied with some of the election literature of the state of California. It is simply astounding. The ballot itself is about four feet by three and each topic and candidate upon it must be properly marked. On the ballot are forty-eight constitutional amendments or proposed acts referred to the people for final action. It would be hard to manufacture more wild ideas. While everybody is crying out against dull times and high prices for the necessities of life, one act submitted to the people limits all labor to eight hours a day. It is designed to reduce the work of farmhands and household servants. If farmhands are limited in their hours of work, how about the cost of living? Practically every amendment to the constitution might be met by an act. It is folly itself to put into a constitution regulations that cannot be changed except by a new amendment, while these ends could be reached by statute. Crises arrive when the things prohibited are especially needful. Statutes can be altered by a special session of a legislature, but a constitution cannot be amended without a lot of machinery and a considerable interval of valuable time.—The Courant, Hartford, Conn.

EASILY REMEDIED

"Doctor," complained Sim Dorkins. "I can't see nothin' through these here specks."

"They were all right for the first day or two, were they not?" asked the oculist, after a glance at the spectacles.

"Ya'as," admitted Sim. "But they kept a gittin' wuss and wuss, till I couldn't hardly see at all."

"They will do as well as ever," said the doctor dryly, "if you will wash them!"—Judge.

A ranch is a business establishment and should be so operated.

Co-operation is the force that keeps the wolf from the door.

A CAB DOOR NEEDED

A number of jockeys and horses had lined up for the start of a free-for-all steeplechase, but a delay occurred owing to a tall, raw-boned beast obstinately refusing to yield to the importunities of the starter.

"Bring up that horse," he shouted, "bring him up! You'll get yourself in trouble if you don't."

The rider of the stupid animal, a grocer's delivery boy, yelled back:

"I can't help it. This horse has been a cab horse and he won't move till the door shuts; and there ain't no door."—Philadelphia Record.
