“The day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured.”

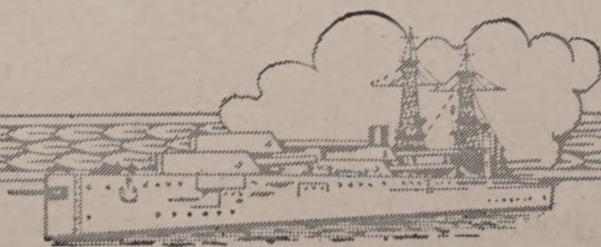

Woodrow Wilson

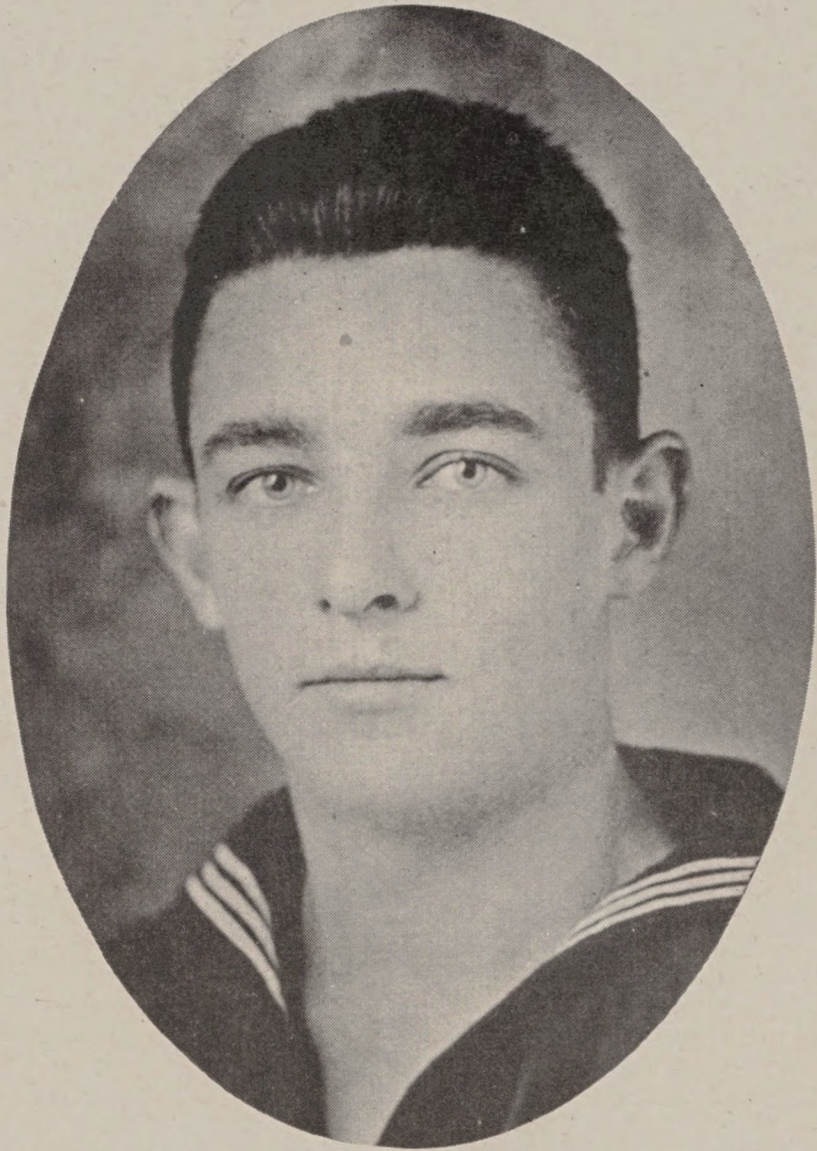

PREFACE

MORE than a century ago, a flaming torch of patriotism was kindled by Annapolis boys which made Annapolis harbor glow red with the leaping flames of liberty and freedom from the burning decks of the Peggy Stewart.

And when the mighty guns have roared their last in this great war and poppies grow once more in Flanders fields, the achievements of Annapolis and Anne Arundel County boys in making the world safe for democracy will illumine one of the brightest pages of American history.

For Annapolis and Anne Arundel County have contributed more than the apportioned share of their youth to our far-flung battle lines. And the glory of their achievements will flame with inextinguishable light down through the ages, an inspiration and a beacon light for future generations, exempt from mutability and decay, immortal as the holy fire of patriotism from which it derived its origin and over which it exercises its control.

CHARLES BARNES ABBOTT, JR.

Charles Barnes Abbott, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Abbott, of Annapolis, and brother of Edward A. Abbott and James V. Abbott, was born in Annapolis, Oct. 24, 1897. He was one of Maryland's first "Navy 800" and enlisted at the Naval Academy at the same moment President Wilson signed the declaration of war. This was learned by a comparison of the records of the ship Reina Mercedes with dispatches from Washington announcing the signing of the declaration. He was at first stationed at Norfolk, and then transferred to the U. S. S. Collier Nep-tune, the first American naval vessel to land U. S. forces in France. He is now serving in foreign waters.

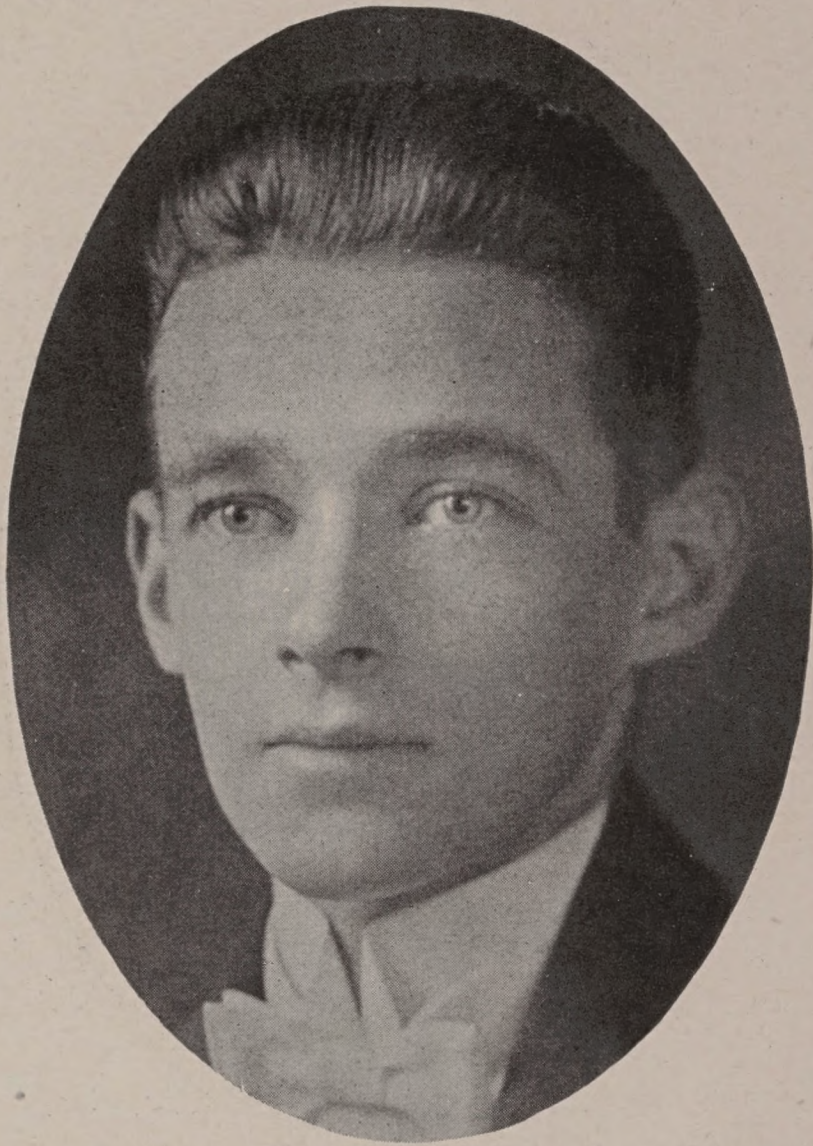

EDWARD AUGUSTINE ABBOTT

Edward Augustine Abbott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Abbott, of Annapolis, and brother of Charles Barnes Abbott, Jr., and James V. Abbott, was born Feb. 5, 1900. The day after war was declared he volunteered in the Navy as one of Maryland's "first 800." He was pronounced physically perfect by the Navy medical officers who examined him. He was sent to Norfolk and then assigned to the old U. S. monitor Ozark, which is acting as a station ship in foreign waters. He is descended from a family of fighters and is a nephew of Lieut.-Col. J. E. Abbott, U. S. A.

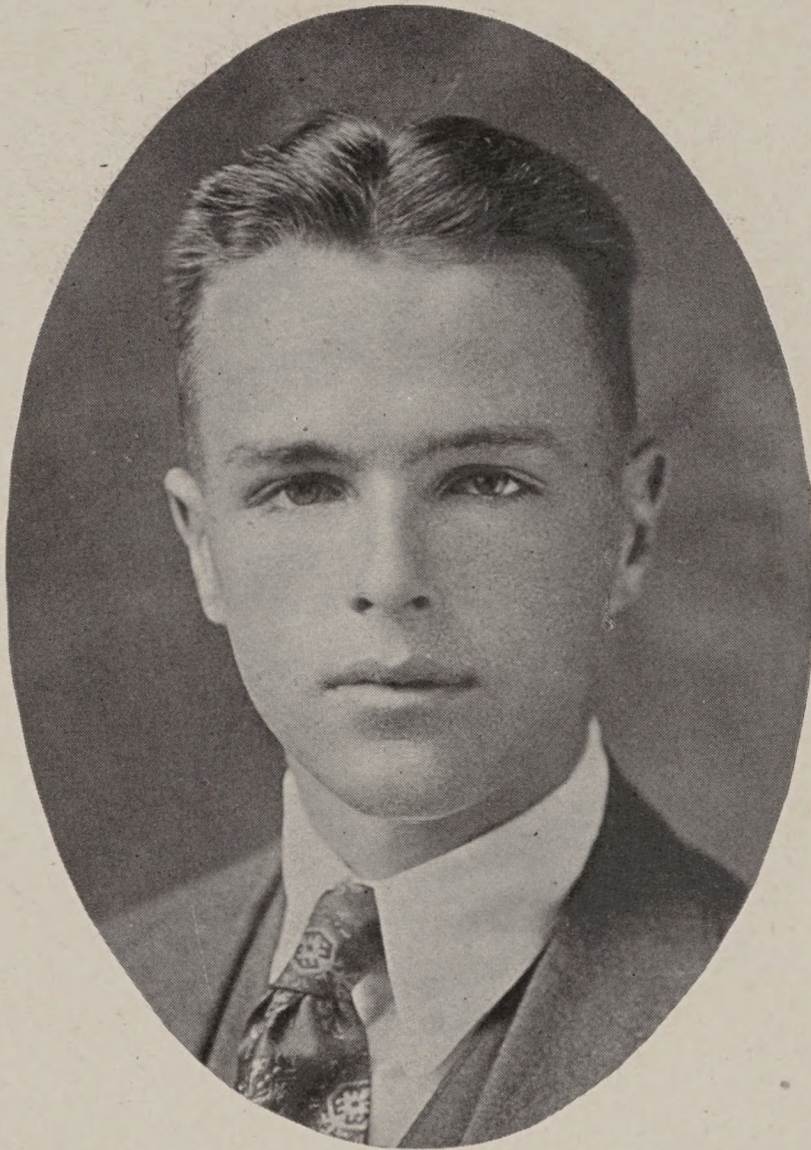

JAMES EDWARD ABBOTT

Lieutenant-Colonel James Edward Abbott, son of Mrs. Fannie V. and the late Wm. M. Abbott, founder of The Evening Capital, was born in Annapolis, Aug. 16, 1873, and was educated at St. John's College. Descended from a family of fighters; his maternal great-great-grandfather, Captain Wm. Eskridge, of Virginia, distinguished himself in the Revolution. His maternal grandfather was wounded in the war of 1812, and his paternal ancestor, Major Wm. Kenley, was a distinguished fighter. He was in the Porto Rico expedition, and was commended for gallantry by the Secty. of War. He organized and took to Cuba a battery of field artillery, and served in the Philippines, where he was again commended for gallantry. He later served on the border, and is now at Camp Upton.

JAMES VERNON ABBOTT

James Vernon Abbott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Abbott, of Annapolis, and brother of Charles B. Abbott, Jr., and Edward A. Abbott, was born in Annapolis, March 27, 1896. He entered the Army, April 30, 1918, and is now stationed at Accotink, Va., with an engineer detachment. His education was received at the Annapolis public schools. Later he was employed at the midshipment's store at the Naval Academy. Like his two brothers, he is descended from a long line of fighting stock.

LAWRENCE MAYO BAILLIERE

Lawrence Mayo Bailliere, son of the late James Lawrence and Mrs. Georgie Mayo Bailliere, was born in Annapolis, Nov. 25th, 1899. He received his education at the Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Va. After coaching in the Wilmer and Chew Preparatory School he entered the Naval Academy in 1918. His brother, Thomas Henry Gaither Bailliere, is seeing service in the Aviation Division of the Army. These brothers are great-grandsons of Commodore Isaac Mayo, on their mother's side; and great-grandnephews of James Lawrence on that of their father. The names of Mayo and Lawrence are carved on the tablets of American history with honors. It is only natural to expect much will be accomplished by the Bailliere brothers to win the war for democracy.

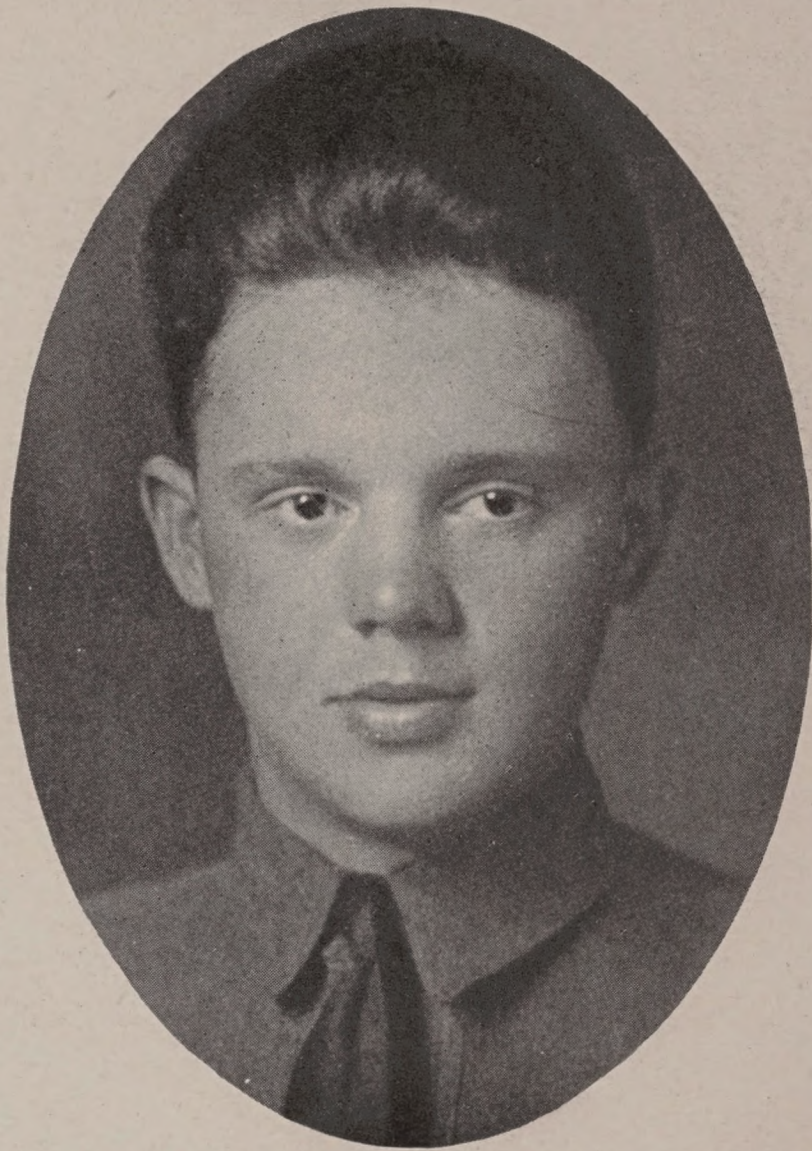

THOMAS HENRY GAITHER BAILLIERE

Thomas Henry Gaither Bailliere, son of the late James Lawrence and Mrs. Georgie Mayo Bailliere, was born in Annapolis, June 18th, 1897. Attended the Gilman Country School in Baltimore, and later engaged in financial business in that city. He enlisted in the Aviation Division of the Army, and is now stationed at Camp Dick, Texas. He is a brother of Lawrence Mayo Bailliere, of the U. S. Navy. These brothers come from a long line of American naval fighters. They descend on their mother's side from Commodore Isaac Mayo, of the war of 1812, who was prominently associated with many important events in the history of Annapolis. They are also great-grandnephews of James Lawrence, also of the American Navy of 1812, whose famous cry "Don't give up the ship!" is quoted in history.

THOMAS G. BASIL

Thomas G. Basil, son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Basil, of Annapolis, was born in Annapolis, September 11, 1896. He was educated at St. John's College and was the first member of his class to volunteer for service in the United States Army, joining the Machine Gun Co. of the First Maryland Regiment, of which his brother, William H. Basil is also a member. He was promoted to sergeancy in this organization, and is now a candidate in the Fourth Officers' Training School. He was also a member of the Rescue Hose Volunteer Fire Department of Annapolis.

WILLIAM HURST BASIL

William Hurst Basil, son of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Basil, of Annapolis, was born at Annapolis, Nov. 15, 1898. He was educated in the public schools of Annapolis, and was formerly connected with the post graduate department of the Naval Academy. At the outbreak of the war he enlisted with the Machine Gun Company of the First Maryland Regiment, and has been promoted to corporal. He is a brother of Thomas G. Basil, who is also a member of this company. He was also a member of the Rescue Hose Volunteer Fire Department.

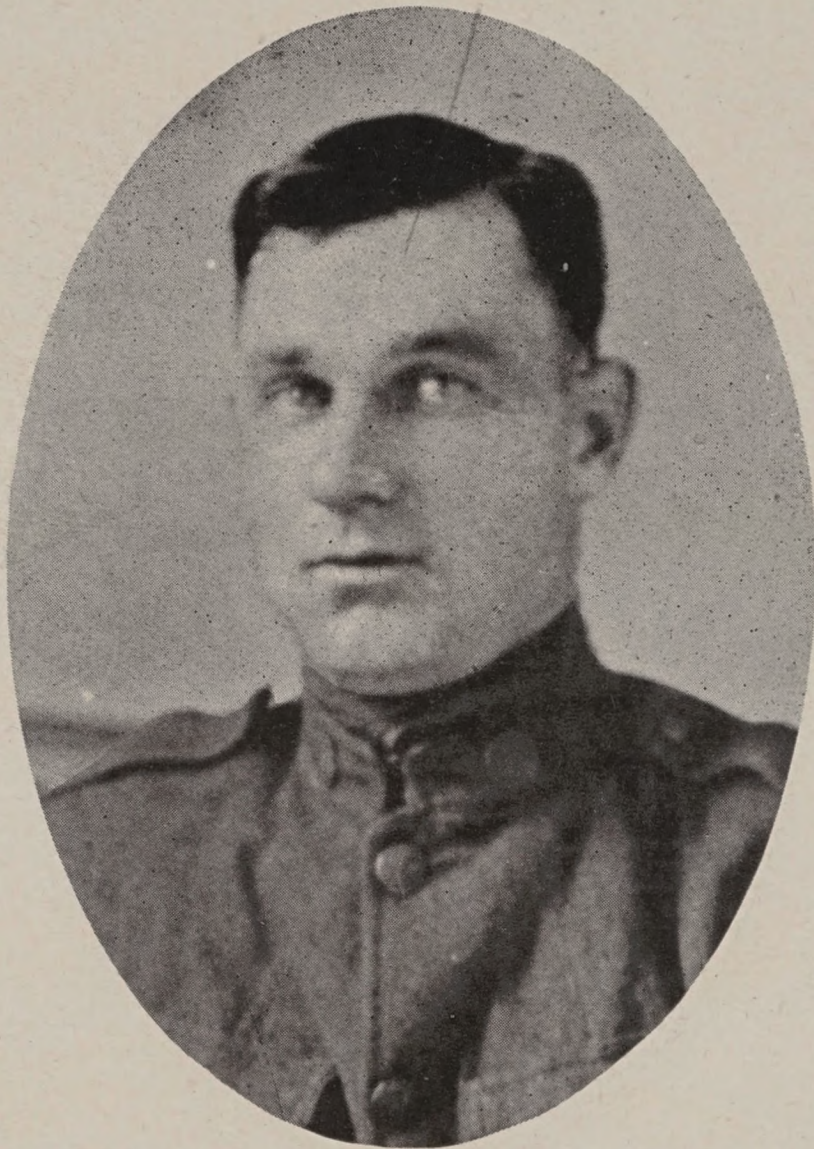

JAMES ALVIN BLUEFORD

James Alvin Blueford son of Mr. and Mrs. James Blueford, was born in St. Mary's county, Md., December 16, 1898. He was educated at St. Mary's Parochial School. At the declaration of war with Germany he, with his two brothers, Roland A. and Leonard C., offered themselves to their country for service in the conflict, and volunteered with Company M, First Maryland Regiment. He is in active service "over there."

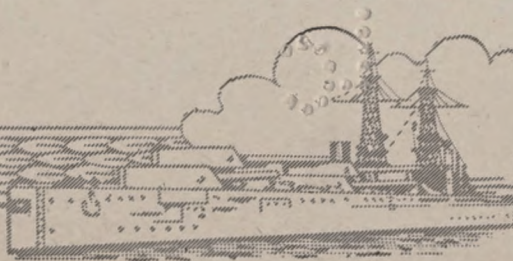

LEONARD CALVERT BLUEFORD

Leonard Calvert Blueford, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Blueford, was born in St. Mary's county, March 17, 1892, and was educated at St. Mary's Parochial School. At the outbreak of the war he volunteered and left Annapolis with Company M, First Maryland Regiment, and is now in active service in the Veteran Corps somewhere in France. He is a brother of Roland A. and James Alvin Blueford, both young men helping to win the war for Democracy in the same company.

ROLAND A. BLUEFORD

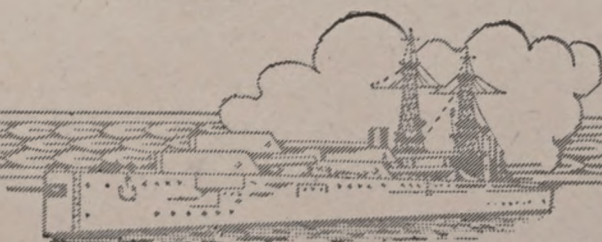

Roland A. Blueford, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Blueford, was born in St. Mary's county, Md., February 14, 1895, and was educated at St. Mary's Parochial School.
