The Iris Garden

...1933...

Dorothy Stoner

Overland Park, Kans.

"Fie, fie, indeed! How wanton and perverse!
Grow only flowers?—as well write only verse!"

Opus Seven

by Silvia Townsend Warner.

A Favorable Season

As this is being written in late April, the prospects are for the finest iris bloom this section has known in years. The dwarfs have had the longest and most floriferous season I can remember. The bloom began in late March and there will be dwarfs blooming far into May. The intermediates and the earlier tall bloomers are coming into bloom and all varieties are making a bewildering show of buds. Mr. Emerson of Concord once had something to say about the compensations of gardening. But he didn't know everything for he let young Mr. Thoreau do the spade work.

Fall Bloomers Again

Interest in the fall bloomers increases geometrically, one might say, and certainly geographically. Last year until December, I received letters from people who had seen late bloom in the gardens of some of my customers and who wanted to know if I thought they, too, might have October or November bloom. In this latitude or south of here fall bloom should come naturally. In the North early frosts may be cheated by speeding up the fall bloom to August or September by the use of a little extra food and a lot of extra water. Remember that to bloom two and three times as often as the usual iris, the fall bloomers must grow two and three times as fast.

Vox Populi

Because it is fortunately located and Kansas City is interested in irises, many thousands visit the garden each year. Some of them stay a long time and express freely their opinions of the many varieties grown—many more than can be listed here. I try to make up this list of those that please them most and to indicate to you, who must select from a catalogue, the reasons for their preferences. It seems to me that their reactions will be substantially yours.

Never-the-less climate and soil conditions must be considered. We have a hot sun and a natural limestone soil. If you live in the East or the West Coast some of the blends will be lighter than here, some darker. Undoubtedly the dark velvety colors will be lovelier for you than for us. If you live on the West Coast you may grow freely the many lovely varieties on which I have lighted a red lantern saying tender. But you must avoid those named as variegatas for they prefer a good freeze. This is advice for the South, too, except for the Southwest, Tennessee and West, which has soil and blooming conditions similar to ours.

And Now My Thanks

Addressing envelopes is a mean chore, but for me it is always lightened by trying to speculate on the names as I come to them. There are many gratifying things about those names and addresses. Some of you I know a lot about and feel that you are friends; some of you are still just names. When, as often, a good many names are clustered in some one far-away place, I know I have at least one satisfied customer there who has been a good friend to me without my knowing. Impossible usually to divine whom. So, will you please accept my thanks publicly?
