MR. EDITOR,

I cannot forbear offering a few remarks on the strange production which appeared in your last paper, termed "Lines on Haufez." How could you in sober seriousness insert so miserable an attempt? The surprise excited by its appearance has I assure you been extreme, many wondering how it could have been offered, and more how accepted. If report be true, you sometimes woo yourself the honour was paid.—The description of the not reluctant muse, and surely some judgment "tefal" or Lortes Hafizians is vastly amusing must accompany your poetic powers.

"Let such teach others who themselves excel, " And censure freely who have written well."

Make reparation then in your next paper, by sacrificing this J. T. to the just vengeance of the muse, he has so rudely attempted to violate. Trusting that you will thus far indulge the public, I shall leave the merits or rather the demerits of his verse entirely to your castigations. For my assumption of the reviewer's office, the stale plea of an invincible caccethes is all I can adduce, -- but I shall He proves then after all to be a Christian confine my observations merely to a few of incog. The vulgar will is copied entirely and letter for letter from never comprehend this:—we can conceive "Flowers of Persian Literature" page 28.; that a poet may raise the same of a city, but except indeed that "refused" is inserted in a city does not usually contrive to return lieu of "rejected with disdain;" but even the compliment. I should like, I confess, to this phrase he could not afford to lose, he South Wales. hear J. T. explain in what way Shiraz has accordingly makes use of it in one of his been the cause of raising Hafiz's name.

The next piece of information is that Timur rewarded the poet for singing the praises of Summer cand. Why would J. T. particu. larize, -in this instance he has been peculiar. ly unfortunate, for it was precisely for mentioning Samarcand, that Timur had nearly made poor Hafiz a head shorter. The wellknown hyperbole on the mole on his mistress's check-

· Bekháli hinduish bakshem Samarcand u Bokhárárá." or as Sir William Jones elegantly, but not very closely translates it :--" That rosy cheek, that lily hand,

" Would give thy poet more delight " Than all Bokhara's vaunted gold,

" Than all the gems of Samarcand"

is recorded to have incensed greatly the despotic Prince.

line has puzzled me much:

The personage mentioned in the following

" Delightful Bard, King Jezdi heard thy name."

I can boldly assert that Hafiz never heard his,—and I challenge J. T. to tell us who this King Jezdi is. The fact is that in copying from Mr. S. Ronsseau's book, p. 28, the minute but very essential particle "of" escaped borrower, and if J. T. can point this out and his sight, -not King Jezdi, but "the King of will defend it, I am prepared to enter the Jezdi" (or rather more correctly of Yezd) is arena with him :- 'till then he must content. spoke of. J. T. has merely mistaken the himself with the condemnation of even his name of a very well known place for that of a King. The metre bars any new reading to save his credit, and besides the mistake is repeated a few lines lower down.

These lines I shall quote, but for another purpose:-

"Unworthy King! that suffer'd, thus renown'd,

"The muse who made unto the skies resound,

" The mighty name of Jezdi high and great, " Dismissed the poet with unvalu'd rate."

Did J. T. ever study grammar, or by accident hear of such things as the nominative case and the verb, or the antecedent and relative? If so, let him tell what is the nominative to "Dismissed;"—who dismissed? And where the end is of the sentence that begins-"Unworthy King that suffer'd the muse;"what did he suffer her to do or not to do?— These are plain questions, and ought not to be difficult to answer; yet I am much afraid, were Priscian to prosecute in the Supreme Court of Justice, our classic President lieve me to be your obedient servant, would grant damages for a broken head.

The next flight is, that Hasiz was doomed to tread the paths "unto far Rukuabad,"-By such a line and the context would not one imagine that a town of this name was meant, which was at a considerable distance from Hafiz's place of abode, Shiraz? Yet Roc. after an illness of three months, nabad is a river,—one of the first pages of hirs. Micro, aged 40 years and 5 months, his Persian grammar could have shewn him "Kundri abi Roenabad," and so far from being distant from Shiraz, it runs under the Previous to their publication. very walls of it.

What follows of this effusion is really such an incoherent medley as almost to defy any EPASSEERDE Zondag den 15de attempt at analysis:—sense, grammar, and historical truth are equally made war with.

But take examples. Fortune had marked Poet is suspected of disgracing the Koraun Laws, but the thought is said to be base, -and the conclusion drawn from this must be that he observed them. Then follows, very appropriately, an attack on Mahommud's race, they are to "blot from their sacred book the filled up space"-" that says from pleasure only they must sway:"-what can be meant by blotting a filled up space, or swaying from pleasure?-These blind Mahommudans are then exclaimed against for having contrived to deprive their Mussulman brother Hafiz of burial honours; -- yet the note on this passage tells us and tells us truly, that it was not so contrived, and that every funerel the note luckily tells us what the verses a nokta chin, I must ask him to parse this sentence, -" who could say" -what?

"Finis coronat opus" may here with justice be said, the end is admirable;—the good Mussulman Hafiz at last turns out to be a pious member of our own church:--

" For tho' in youth voluptuous he had been,

"Devout were his thoughts to the Christian Scheme." But more of this hereafter.

When I first read J. T's lines I marvelled was "born descended from a race of those greatly whence he could have picked up the unknown." Even his favorite Mr. S. Rons. little information they contain,-for his blunseau would have told him, on the contrary, that ders in most parts would not allow me to give 44 he is allowed on all hands to have been of him credit for the remainder that was correct. no mean extraction." But mark the object When I came to the notes, however, the secret of this obscure descent. Hafiz was born stood revealed, I at once recognized my old to grace poetsc lines!" The note beginning "many Princes, &c."

" The Sultaun's gifts rejecting with disdain."

The other long note is taken verbatim from London: the same book p. 31:-J. T's only merit being that of having copied correctly.

I think it is Sheridan who says that ideas frequently float in our minds of which we are in doubt whether they are original or merely recollected. But this could have scarcely been the case with J. T.; a floating idea of six and twenty lines at one stretch, besides a number of lesser expressions and turns, is somewhat too much to be in any doubt of; and I defy him to disprove my accusation of plagiarism.

Even that choice vulgarism-" Christian Scheme" is not his own; Mr. S. Ronsseau says, p. 29.—" some have even ventured to assert, that he (Hafiz) was inclined to the Christian Scheme." But let J. T. if he can, prove that this book,—let him only tell us who these ledgements.

some are, and what are the grounds for considering Hafiz to have been a Christian.

I chance to know where Mr. Ronsseau borrowed his passage from, for he too is a own oracle, for in p. 32, he will find it asserted ed as the prevalent opinion that the verses of Hafiz "inculcate true Mohommedanism." Instead of trusting to Mr. S. Ronsseau, who though perhaps a worthy man, is literally a month. In the morning of the 8th, about Book-printer and a Book-maker, Had J. Agreeing entirely with the elegant Sir William Jones, when he says-" Est meherculè Hafiz noster ambrosià alendus poëta."-I could not with patience endure that he should be served with J. T's coarse fare, and my anger like Acres' valour has oozed from my hand, -excuse its prolixity and be-

Shipwreck.—Extract of a letter from Buenos Ayres, dated April 8:- On the 30th ult. a boat of about 17 feet keel arrived at this place, with six perso is on board. The following is the account they have given:-They sailed from New South Wales, on board the brig Isabella, George Highton, master, on the 4 h of Dedember last; they made the land about Cape Horn on the 2d of February, and Falkland Islands on the 7th of the same ing one of the group of the Falkland Islands, and the weather being moderate, third of February, having raised the long boat and decked her, it was agreed that a part of the unhappy sufferers should embark in her, for the purpose of arriving at some inhabited place, where the means might be procured of sending a vessel to bring away the other part of the crew and passengers. The six men who arrived here accordingly put to sea on the 23d of February, and after a voyage of upwards of 460 leagues on the ocean, they arrived in this river, without having seen the land for 36 days. Nothing but the protection of the Almighty could have preserved them from the inclemency of the weather, considering the great fatigue they must have endured, both in mind and body, and so long a vavigation in seas almost proverbial for storms. On the first intelligence of the event, Captain Heywood, of his. Majesty's ship Nereus, gave instructions to Lieut. D'Aranda, commander of the Nancy brig of war, to prepare for sea, and to proceed to the relief of the unhappy sufferers; it is expected she will sail about the 9th instant. It appears there were 55 souls on board the Isabella at the time she was wrecked, among whom are the following passengers:-

"Captain Drury, 73d regiment, wife and family, Mr. Holt, (Irish rebel), do. do. Sir Henry Hayes, and three females, returned convicts; Mr. Madison; three marines and their wives.

On Monday last, the several Prisoners who have been convicted of felonies during the present Session of Oyer and Terminer for this Island, were brought up before the Judges of the Court, to have sentences passed on them, when the Honorable the Recorder, in a most emphatic manner pronounced the awful sen. tence of the Law on Thomas Robjent, a Serjeant in the 17th Regiment of Light Dragoons, for shooting at one Robert Chambers' of the same Corps. He had been indicted! upon the Statue commonly called the Black Act, which renders it a capital offence to shout at another with a malicious intent, whether the person shot at is killed or not. We are sorry to say that there did not appear either in the circumstances of the case, or in the character of the prisoner, any thing at all favorable.

Sentence of death was also passed on another prisoner named Raghoo Mallaree, who in attempting to rob a native woman of a Neck Joy, and finding that the resistance she made was likely to create an alarm in the On the 29th ultimo, at Tagal, Lieutenant neighbourhood of the place where the offence was committed, drew out of his pocket a knife, and cut her throat in a most shocking manner. The woman subsequently recovered of the wounds inflicted by the prisoner, but as there could be no doubt that he intended to murder her, it seemed a cause peculiarly deserving of the awful punishment which the prisoner is to undergo.

Several prisoners were transported to Prince of Wales Island for Burglaries committed in different parts of the Island, and BILLY'S CASE.

Billy, with many deep drawn sighs, of late, Of evils talks, and hardships truly great, Let us, impartial Viewers, fairly say, In how far justice or injustice lay.
"'Tis hard" says Billy, "after such a time, "As eighteen years, in India's sultry clime,
"Thave reap'd no profit from a loyal aim, "To serve my King, and gain myself a name; "Thave held no office, tho' each nerve applied, " No pains unspar'd, no ways nor means untried, " To reach the end to which I've long aspir'd, " My language splendid, as myself, attir'd, " A zeal unbounded, an experience great, "All, all concentred in my noble pate, " To see each beardless, every unstart boy "Rise o'er my head, and taste preferment's joy "While worth long tried, and known, neglected lays, "And mourns in secret such misjudging days." 'Tis strange, most strange, of such a truth to learn, Of claims so weighty, meeting no return!!! But every moment adds to our surprise, When further facts are brought before our eyes, When each heroic act, each valiant deed, Which rival all, and many do exceed, Of those extolled in history's antient page, Alike the pride and wender of the age, Without or notice or reward remain, While undeservers every favour gain; But 'ris the case, a cruel one indeed, Which makes our feeling hearts with sorrow blesd, And prompts us all with one united voice, To call it an unjust and partial choice, That elevates the worthless and unknown, And o'erlooks one to deeds of valor prone; But ere we bid you, Billy, our adien, We deem it in compassion due to you, A word of consolation to impart, To ease at once your now half drooping heart; To make the thoments that must heavy seem, To glide as smoothly as a morning dream, To banish all your melancholy fears, That have so many dull vexatious years, Sådden'd each day from morning until night, Destroying soothing hope and soft delight. Much as your country has o'erlook'd your fame, Your tow'ring genius, your exalted name; The fair, for whom we still aspire to risc, Judge by true merit, and for valor prize; None but the valiant can their favor gain, Or one soft smile, or tender glance obtain; Your comely person, and engaging charms, Added to prowess, and renewn in arms, Will, doubtless, love to each fair breast impart, And crown you conquerer of every heart.
To you, sweet youth, they'll yield their tender joys, And teach new pleasure as the former cloys; As this what earthly bliss is half so great; Belov'd, ador'd, with victory elate! Then banish painful thoughts far from your mind, Arising merely from your stars unkind, Study to live but in their lovely eyes, As good as handsome, and as brave as wise;

And all your griefs will quickly pass away,

And naught but joy, await each coming day."

Larceny. But we did not meet with any cases sufficiently marked by any circumstances of public interest to render it worthy of a detailed report

We understand that one case of Misdemeanor, being a serious charge against one of the Native Officers of the Court, is likely to come on for trial in a few days.

MCUSE of COMMONS, JULY 14 1813.

PORTUGUESE SLAVE TRADE.

Mr. Wilberforce rose to make his motion on this subject, for an Address to the Prince Regent, praying for information respecting all communications with the Prince Regent of Portugal, on the steps taken by that Government, in parsuance of the Treaty of the 19th of February, 1810, concluded at Rio de Janeiro, as to the provisions for taking efficacious measures for the gradual abolitions of the Slave Trade. The latter part of his Address was taken from the express words of the Treaty itself; in which the Regent of Portugal declared his conviction of the impolicy and injustice of the Slave Trade. The House had offered advice on such subjects, both in 1806 and 1810, when the sense of Parliament was expressed strongly; and he believed Government had acted sincerely in consequênce—which sincerity was shewn in an article in the late treaty with

. If the information he had received was correct, and he had every reason to be-

Lieve it was so, then it would appear, that notwithstanding the Regent of Portugal's wishes to abolish the slave trade, the Portuguese trade in slaves, had, since we relinquished it, been greatly increased, and under fresh circumstances of aggravation and oppression. The Portuguese had taken the ground which we had Shandoned in Africa, and by so doing, had disappointed the fair hopes we had entertained of redressing the wrongs of Injured Africa, and checked the means of carrying civilization and improvement to that suffering country. Thwarted as we thus were, it had now become time to institute some inquiry, in order to know what measures the Portuguese Government had taken to fulfil the treaty. The Portuguese regulations were formerly humane, and contained many precautions. At that time their trade was chiefly on the south west coast of Africa, but a peculiar aggravation of the case, was their recent extension of it to the north, without the same regulations which they had applied to traffic in the souther the result of which was, that they crowded numbers of unfortunate fellow creatures into small vessels, forming a most detestable scene of misery. They were stowed together, as it was called, spoonwise, so many were of course sufficated, and destroyed by the small pox, and other infectious and disgusting diseases. These sorrows had actually been extended since the Portuguese" engaged to stop them. He hoped the Portuguese Regent would hear of such things with unfeigned concern, from what he had heard of his character. No man, more often than himself, had reflected with pleasure on the long friendship of the two countries. He recollected strong instances of Portuguese fidelity to our alliance, particularly in the seven years war, when Portugal was suddenly threatened by France and Spain with the bombardment of her would prefer that calamity to quitting his connection with England. He trusted the Regent would feel equally alive to his treaty, in which the interests of justice and humanity were concerned. Dearly as he prised this ancient attachment, connected, as he believed it to be, with the true interests of both countries, yet he? while we were supporting Portugal by land and by sea, we should be also supporting a system of cruelty and tyramy, fin the face of a positive agreement. participation in it by Spain. The little settlement of the Portuguese in the north of Africa had become the general mart and focus of the slave trade, and prevented all amelioration of Africa in that quarter.

Mr. Grant, Junior, rose to express his sentiments briefly. Unless unceasing vigilance was used on this great question, all the bright hopes, and all the solemn enactments of Parliament, would be rendered useless. Efforts had indeed been made even here, to evade the solemn abolition of the slave trade; but the wisdom of the Legislature had in a great degree defeated them. He was glad to hear and believe that Government were capital, if she did not renounce her con- serious and anxious; but it was singular nection with us. BELFAST, -JULY 14.

It is with much regret we have to mention the circumstances which occurred on Monday of Hungary, King and Elector of Bohemia, night in this town, in consequence of the re- and Arch-Cup-beared of the Roman Empire, vival of that hateful spirit of party which has born February 12, 1768, married August 14, so long divided this country. We had hoped, 1790, Maria Teresa, Eldest Daughter of the that as the Legislature had given their opinion in such a decided manner against the legality of by whom he has 1, Maria-Louisa, born De-Orange Societies, there would have been pru- cember 12, 1791; married to Napoleon, Emdence, and even patriotism, in abstaining from peror of France. He was married again; on the usual processions on the 12th of July, the 6th of January, 1808, to the Princess (the Anniversary of the battle of Agbrim). This, however, was disregarded. A number of lodges (about 3,000 men in all) assembled seph-Crescentius, born April 19, 1793. in Lisburn, where they walked in procession, with some respectable men at their head. They afterwards heard a sermon in the Linen hall there. It is but justice to state, that in Lisburn they conducted themselves with the most unexceptionable propriety; to shew that 1799. cordiality prevailed, a number of them even took their refreshment in the house of a Roman Catholic.

In the evening, about seven, the lodges that had gone from this town, returned, with colours flying, and all the usual Orange insignia. One party proceeded by Herculesstreet to the house of one Thompson, in North-street. In their progress they were hooted by some of the spectators, and stones and mud were thrown amongst them. Some gary, born March 9, 1776. of Thompson's windows were broken, when the Orangemen rushing out of the house with loaded muskets, fired upon the people, in consequence of which a cooper, of the name of Hugh Graham, was shot dead on the spot; a bricklayer, named Andrew M'Narry, was mortally wounded, and died next morning at one o'clock: and William M'Laughlin, a young lad, received a ball in his thigh, and yesterday underwent amputation. Another man, we understand, was shot in the arm.

On the circumstances being made known, several Magistrates immediately attended in and Elector of Bohemia, Arch-cup-bearer of North-street, and General Mitchell having ordered out a party of military, peace was restored; a soldier was made prisoner in Thompson's house, along with two other.

A Coroner's inquest was next day held on the bodies, and a warrant issued for the apprehension of one Morgan, charged with the murder of M'Narry.

We have been informed, that a number of Orangemen had assembled in Hillsborough, on Monday, when the Marquis of Downshire came out to them; and representing to them that they were acting in opposition to the laws, as expressed by Parliaments advised them to disperse, and go to their work; and this recommendation they immediately complied with .- Belfast Com.
