

Chapter III

Manners and Customs in Divine Age.

SI They reached to the Iron Age - Their implements. SII Their House and mode of its building - Cane. SIII Their food, garments, Hair dressing and ornaments. SIV Different degrees of relationship - Wedding. SV Their Education - They were ignorant of Writing.

Section I

They reached to the Iron Age:
Their implements.

Before we enter in the history of the Emperor Jimmu's time we must <sup>well</sup> study manners and Customs in Divine Age. The Japanese of Divine Age as pictured in the legends were a race who had long emerged from the savage state and had attained to a high level of human condition. ~~The Stone Age was forgotten by them -~~ <sup>whether they possessed the</sup> Bronze Age or not is a disputable point of historians - and they had attained to the Iron Age.

Chapter III

Manners and Customs in Divine Age.

SI They reached to the Iron Age - Their implements. SII Their House and mode of its building - Cave. SIII
Their food, garments, Hair dressing and ornaments. SIV Different degrees of relationship - Wedding
SV Their Education - They were ignorant of writing.

Section I

*They reached to the Iron Age.
Their implements.*

Before we enter in the history of the Emperor Jimmu's time we must <sup>we</sup> study manners and customs in Divine Age. The Japanese of Divine Age as pictured in the legends were a race who had long emerged from the savage state and had attained to a high level of human condition. The Stone Age was forgotten by them - <sup>whether</sup> had they passed the Bronze Age or not is a disputable point of historians - and they had attained to the Iron Age.