SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

THE CITIZENS of the United States are responsible for the greatest trust ever confided to a political society. If justice, good faith, honor, gratitude and all the other qualities which ennoble the character of a nation and fulfil the ends of government be the fruits of our establishments, the cause of Liberty will acquire a dignity and lustre which it has never yet enjoyed; and an example will be set which cannot but have the most favorable influence on the rights of Mankind.

JAMES MADISON, 1783.

THE SOCIETY OF SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION enables the man of the North and the man of the South to stand on the same platform. We shall have an electric current of fraternal interest reaching from the St. Lawrence to the Rio Grande.

ADMIRAL PORTER, 1890.

THE SOCIETY OF THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION is purely patriotic in its purposes. Through its agency representative men of all parties and from every section, the descendants of the patriots who achieved independence for our Nation, are brought together in sympathetic and friendly association for the promotion of objects specifically named in its Constitution, as follows:—

(1) To perpetuate the memory and the spirit of the men who achieved American Independence, by the encouragement of historical research in relation to the Revolution and the publication of its results, the preservation of documents and relics and of the records of the individual services of Revolutionary soldiers and patriots, and the promotion of celebrations of all patriotic anniversaries.

(2) To carry out the injunction of Washington in his farewell address to the American people:—"To promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge,"—thus developing an enlightened public opinion and affording to young and old such advantages as shall develop in them the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizens.

(3) To cherish, maintain, and extend the institutions of American freedom, to foster true patriotism and love of country, and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty.

The Society is National in its scope and is governed in matters of general importance by a board of officers elected at its annual convention. It is made up of the following State Societies, in every respect co-equal in rank:—

The California Society, which stands at the head of the list, is (with the exception of the SOCIETY OF THE CINCINNATI, founded May 13, 1783, and the AMERICAN REVOLUTION SOCIETY, or SEVENTY-SIX ASSOCIATION, composed of officers and soldiers, founded in the South in 1784, which existed for many years, but long ago became extinct) the first patriotic organization ever founded in America, with membership based upon service in the cause of American Independence. It came into existence on the Fourth of July, 1876, when citizens of San Francisco, about forty in number, descendants of the patriots of the Revolution, having marched together in the great procession which was the most striking feature of California's celebration of the Centennial Anniversary of Independence, met to organize the Society of SONS OF REVOLUTIONARY SIREs.* The objects of the society then founded were defined in a circular letter, sent out in August, in the following terms:

“To unite the descendants of Revolutionary patriots and perpetuate the memory of those who took part in the American Revolution, and maintained the independence of the United States of America; to organize auxiliaries, co-equal branches and representative bodies, at such time and place as the directors may determine.”

The desire of the founders of the new society to extend its work beyond the boundaries of California met with much encouragement. Honorary membership was accepted by Ex-Presidents Grant and Hayes and other public men throughout the country, and before the close of 1876, Vice Presidents had been appointed in Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Illinois, Iowa and the District of Columbia,† with authority to found branch societies, and these efforts were continuous up to 1883. It is not certain that any such branches were ever formed, but

*On June 29th (1876) the following request was published in the news columns of the “Alta”: “The descendants of the Revolutionary patriots are requested to meet at the headquarters of the Grand Marshal, at No. 212 Kearney street, at 8 o'clock this evening, for the purpose of making arrangements to participate in the celebration.” In response to the call between forty and fifty citizens assembled. General N. M. Winn presided, and Dr. E. L. Willard was chosen secretary. All present signed the roll. After the parade the organization marched to the Palace Hotel and partook of refreshments. It was at this meeting that they formally organized under the title of “Sons of Revolutionary Sires” (July 4th, 1876). Ten days later the new organization adopted a constitution and by-laws, and has since been a permanent society in this city.

From the “Alta California,” May 5th, 1889.

†Mr. N. T. E. Chandler, of the U. S. Patent Office, Vice President for the District of Columbia, died in 1889, and the papers relating to the history of his work cannot be found.

the California Society maintained a continuous existence until 1889, when it changed its name in order to participate in the organization of the NATIONAL SOCIETY OF THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, and is still one of the strong organizations in the federation.

In 1876 Mr. John Austin Stevens, of New York, proposed the organization of a society, to be called "SONS OF THE REVOLUTION," and to be composed of descendants of officers and soldiers of the Revolutionary Army. No meetings appear to have been held under this plan. The New York society of the SONS OF THE REVOLUTION was formally established December 31, 1883. In 1888 some of its members founded a similar society in Philadelphia, and in March and April, 1889, similar organizations were formed in thirteen other States. Through some unfortunate misunderstanding the society in New York failed to participate in the movement now begun for the establishment of a National organization, although it was the desire of the other States that New York should take the lead. The technical difficulty seems to have been the unwillingness of the other States to recognize the supposed claim of the New York society to be the central and sole source of authority.

On the Anniversary day, April 30, 1889, upon the invitation of the New Jersey Society, delegates from fourteen States met in the historic "Long Room" of Fraunces's Tavern, in New York, the apartment in which Washington took leave of his Generals at the close of the Revolution, and formed an organization of National scope under the name of THE SOCIETY OF THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, and under the Constitution then adopted the several State societies already mentioned have become federated.

The District of Columbia Society, SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION, was organized April 11, 1890, by Mr. William O. McDowell, of New Jersey, at that time Vice President General of the National Society. Its career, though short, has been prosperous, and it is already one of the largest and strongest of the associations of descendants of the patriots of the Revolution.

In 1890 the New York Society abandoned its plan of auxiliary branches, and joined with that in Pennsylvania to form a general or National Society, under the name of SONS OF THE REVOLUTION. This action removed all tangible obstacles to the union of all the State societies in one National organization. The question of priority of organization is not one of the highest importance, for all will concede that the present widespread interest is largely the outgrowth of the part which the SONS OF THE REVOLUTION in New York have taken in the movement which began in 1876 in both San Francisco and New York, which took tangible form in San Francisco in 1876 and in New York in 1883, and which culminated in 1889 in a general organization of State societies throughout the whole Union.

Prior to the organization of the Society of the SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION in Washington City, a society of the SONS OF THE REVOLUTION was in existence. This was organized April 3, 1890, under the Presidency of the Hon. John Lee Carroll, and with a very distinguished membership. On April 3, 1890, this society subscribed to the Constitution of the SONS OF THE REVOLUTION, prepared by the Representatives of the New York and Pennsylvania Societies.

The National Society of the DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION was organized in Washington City, October 11, 1890, and has already a large membership, which is extending over the entire country. Its objects are identical with those of the two other societies already referred to, though its organization and eligibility requirements are somewhat different.

Serious work has already been begun by all the societies. Members of the old New York Society did noble service in providing for the completion of the pedestal of the Bartholdi Statue of Liberty, in New York Harbor; and it was to its members that the Centennial Celebration of 1889 owed its origin, and largely its success. It also aided materially in the erection of a monument to Nathan Hale. The State societies are planning for the systematic celebration of local events of historic interest; Massachusetts has celebrated the anniversary of "Lexington," and New Jersey those of "Red Bank," "Trenton" and "Springfield," and Tennessee that of "King's Mountain." Our National Society has asked the interest of the Congress to prevent the desecration of the National flag by its use for advertising purposes, and is endeavoring to encourage the playing of National airs by all bands on National anniversaries. All the societies are urging the more general display of the National flag. The California Society and our own set the example of a patriotic gathering on July 4, 1890; an example afterwards strengthened by the issue of an official circular from the National Society.

Much still remains to be done in the way of patriotic endeavor. The localities of historic events and the birthplaces and graves of Revolutionary heroes are to be identified and marked by suitable monuments. Revolutionary documents and records, especially the unpublished rolls of the soldiers, and the stories of individual service are to be brought to light, indexed and printed. The Pennsylvania Society, SONS OF THE REVOLUTION, has begun serious work in the preservation of historical documents. The Michigan Society, S. A. R., passed a resolution April 24, 1890, urging the publication of the records of the Army of the Revolution, and Col. Hubbard, the President of the California Society, wrote to the President of the National Society, February 18, 1890, as follows:—

“I hope that some method will be formulated whereby the United States Government will undertake to gather, compile and publish, from its archives, and the archives of the thirteen original States, the record of every officer, soldier and sailor who participated in the war of 1776, and that the work thus published will be recognized as the American Domesday Book. The National Society of Sons of the American Revolution should be more than an auxiliary in the production of such a work.”

A wholesome and intelligent interest in the principles and acts of the Revolution may well be encouraged throughout the country. It is believed that whenever any question of real importance is to be considered, unanimity of sentiment and harmony of action will always be found among the various organizations of the descendants of the patriots of 1776.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

There are three stages in the history of the North American Revolution—the first of which may be considered as beginning with the order of the British Council for enforcing the acts of trade in 1760, and as having reached its crisis at the meeting of the first Congress fourteen years after, at Philadelphia. It was a struggle for the preservation and recovery of the rights and liberties of the British Colonies. It terminated in a civil war, the character and object of which were changed by the Declaration of Independence.

The second stage is that of the War of Independence, usually so-called—but it began fifteen months before the Declaration, and was itself the immediate cause and not the effect of that event. It closed by the preliminary Treaty of Peace concluded at Paris, on the 30th of November, 1782.

The third is the formation of the Anglo-American People and Nation of North America. This event was completed by the meeting of the first Congress of the United States, under their present Constitution, on the Fourth of March, 1789.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, 1836.

There is nothing more common than to confound the terms of AMERICAN REVOLUTION with those of THE LATE AMERICAN WAR. The American War is over, but this is far from being the case with the American Revolution. On the contrary, nothing but the first act of the great drama is closed. It remains yet to establish and perfect our new forms of government, and to prepare the principles, morals and manners of our citizens for these forms of government, after they are established and brought to perfection.

BENJAMIN RUSH, 1787.

officers who personally fought with and for the Colonies were Chevaliers of the Order. It is intended as a recognition of them and their services, and as a compliment to their country and their descendants that we propose, in some part, the adoption of the form of the historic Cross of St. Louis.

“The medallion in gold, which forms the center of the cross on its obverse side, and bears the bust in profile of Washington, appears too appropriate to demand explanation or argument. The legend surrounding it in letters of gold on a ribbon of blue enamel, ‘Libertas et Patria,’ appears at once in keeping with the general design and in harmony with the principles and purposes of the order.

“The reverse side of the cross is like the obverse, except that the reverse bears on the gold medallion the figure of a ‘Minute-Man,’ a type of those old Continental Soldiers who and rushed to the defense of liberty and country at the first sound of the gun, the echo of which was heard around the world,—one of the heroes and martyrs of Valley Forge.

Their flocks and herds without a fold,*

“The decoration is to be suspended from the left breast or collar by a blue ribbon with white edges. Blue and white were the colors of the uniform of Washington’s staff.”

THE OBJECTS OF THE SOCIETY.

[From the address by REV. JOHN McDOWELL LEAVITT, D.D., LL.D.]

“The Society of the Sons of the American Revolution rests on a wider basis than military rank and service. Pen and voice may be as useful to liberty as the sword. By essay and oration Henry, Adams and Jefferson accomplished as much for their country as Gates or Green or Putnam by the most brilliant exploits of battle. Washington as commander was no more a patriot and benefactor than Washington as president. Nor must the heroes of the ranks be overlooked. Descendants of the sailor, soldier and civilian are recognized by our society; membership is based on true patriotic service, however and wherever rendered, during the war of the Revolution.

“Two paths open to our society:

“It may live in and for the past, it may collect and treasure relics, trace ancestors and extol the heroic era of our nation. Many naturally look behind rather than before for the golden age of our humanity; and let us not discourage those inclined to venerable fashions.

“But we have a nobler mission than devotion to the antique and æsthetic. As our society grows out of the past of our country, so it may become a potent element in the future.

“Our country has been exempt from the peculiar trials of other lands. Humanity began with us anew. The Atlantic is the barrier between us and the past; hence on our soil liberty had an unimpeded growth. New obstacles gave new strength. Colonial struggles made our American manhood. The Revolution was our evolution. Nor has growth stopped; we are a century in advance of our ancestors. Our prisons are better;

our schools are better; our colleges are better. Steam and electricity have enlarged our views even more than our means of intercommunication.

“Where then was the glory of our fathers? Rich patriots imperiled wealth and life for liberty. Poor citizens, through rags and blood and hunger and defeat, stood by the cause until victory was won. States quarreled and delayed their quotas. Congress was sometimes divided and uncertain; cabals and ambitions and dishonesties were not wanting; but always there were men faithful to their leaders and their country. Valor and virtue triumphed. Hard experience made successful both revolution and constitution. Greece, Rome and England instructed our fathers; but American needs and trials were their best teachers. Measured by truest tests their patriotic wisdom has never been excelled. Out of bitter and paltry contests emerged a structure of liberty to endure forever. Amid cramping and belittling influences our constitution was shaped into a comprehensive instrument adapted to social needs, political requirements and territorial magnitudes of which its framers could have had no conception. For all time and all the world it stands their immortal monument.

“Let our society study the work of our fathers as it is—it wants no glamour of a golden mist. When fancy converts our Revolutionary sires into ideals we lose interest. Men, not statues, stir living thoughts. History to be profitable must be honest. Whatever the frailties of others in peace and war, Washington without stain or cloud stands forth in solitary glory.

“Nor should the Sons of the American Revolution forget that from the beginning they had a mingled blood. New England was moulded by the British Puritans. The Dutch controlled New York. Quakers and Germans settled Pennsylvania. English Catholics largely shaped Maryland. Swedes prevailed in Delaware. Virginia boasted cavalier and churchman. The Scotch and Scotch-Irish immigrated extensively into New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the Carolinas. Florida was long the home of the Spaniard. In Louisiana, French and Creoles were numerous. Huguenots leavened our whole republic. Our manhood grew from mixed nationalities. Side by side their representatives fought in the Revolution, and side by side evolved the constitution. To hide these facts is to be ashamed of ourselves. Origin creates our sympathy for humanity, hence in Americans these promises of universal liberty. We do not fear that immigrant nations will cloud or exhaust our sun. Rather we believe that they will diffuse the light until it circles the world. As statesmen we may wisely provide against an overwhelming flood of paupers, criminals and adventurers; but as citizens and christians, we will welcome opportunities of moulding to republicanism and religion those who will be heralds of truth and apostles of the millennium.

“And this leads to the noblest work of our society. We might specify much to be accomplished by gathering materials for history and souvenirs of the Revolution, by studying men, manners and measures, and by devising the best methods of perpetuating the memories of our ancestors and celebrating their achievements. These, however, will naturally be considered in their time. But one noble field of usefulness should be extended to our view.

“But why confine ourselves to a single country? On our own continent we have fifty republics. Let us form with them leagues of fellowship. Our hearts should embrace self-government throughout the world. The American instinct for freedom is irrepressible; it cannot be restricted by bonds of nationalities. Humanity is its object. We only express and exercise a national impulse when we cultivate fraternity with men everywhere, who, by justice and intelligence, strive to elevate the people from sovereignty and help forward for earth a day of light and love and liberty.”

AMERICAN PATRIOTISM.

[From the Address of the HONORABLE CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, President of the New York Society, at the Hartford Convention of the Sons of the American Revolution, 1891.]

“No people have ever founded a State which has become a great nation, have ever preserved and enlarged their liberty, unless they had largely developed the qualities of imagination and of sentiment. They must deify the heroes to whose valor and statesmanship they owe their origin. They must picture in the eye of the mind the battlefields upon which their forefathers fought and conquered. They must see the clash of contending armies, hear the roar of the mighty hosts and the din of battle, and be enthused on patriotic occasions with the fire and the spirit which animated the men who created them as a power in the earth.

“This republic has advanced or stood still just in proportion as its people have revered the men of the revolution and practiced the principles of the Declaration of Independence and of Washington’s farewell address.

“Every society like this of the Sons of the American Revolution is a seminary of patriotism. To belong to it is a liberal education for liberty. Fourteen millions of people have landed in this country and become absorbed in our population since 1820. Of our 63,000,000 of population nearly one-half have no ancestry or traditions which go back to the Revolutionary War. It is our duty for the good government of to-day and the greatness and growth of the republic in the future that the unification of our people shall be not only in loyalty to the flag and devotion to the Constitution, but in pride in the traditions and the history of our past.

“We have need to cultivate stalwart and robust Americanism. We do not want an Americanism which is boastful and puffed up, but one of the objects of this association is to cultivate that knowledge of a glorious origin, an unequalled century, a land developed in one hundred years beyond any example in recorded time and yet in its infancy, a nation to-day one of the most powerful upon earth, an educational system which disseminates at the public expense universal education, a patriotism which is equal to all the requirements of troublous periods and peaceful times, which, when thoroughly appreciated and understood, will enable us to contemplate the past, knowing the present and defining the future, and say to our children, ‘The proudest title on earth is to be an American citizen.’”
