PREFATORY NOTE

In March 1913 the first part of a "List of references on Federal control of commerce and corporations" was published by the Library. It was made up of references of a general character on Interstate commerce, the Constitutional question involved, the Interstate commerce commission, and the Sherman antitrust act. The second part, here offered, is devoted to various special aspects of the subject; to the ways, for example, in which Federal control is to be exercised, by Federal incorporation or licensing, by Federal taxation, by the regulation of capitalization, by the supervision of accounts, etc.; and to the means by which Federal control is to be accomplished through the Interstate commerce commission, the Commerce court, or other such agency. References are also given on the application of Federal control to railroads, express companies, the telegraph and telephone, etc., to interstate liquor shipments, to bills of lading, and to industrial combinations or trusts; and, finally, (see the Table of contents) to the more important litigation which has contributed to the development of the subject of Federal control of commerce and corporations. A full analytical index discloses the more minute ramifications of the subject.

"Our conclusion is that the true intent and meaning of sections 3982-85 of the Revised statutes of the United States make it unlawful to either send or deposit for transportation, in any other manner than by mail, any mailable article within the weight limits described by law, except letters under full prepaid postage and in the manner provided in section 3992. And that it is unlawful for any person or persons, firm, company, or corporation to transport over any post route, any mailable article, in any other manner than as a part of the mail, saving the exceptions found in the statutes above mentioned."
