

Christchurch Massacre but leaves out a lot of key histories

The article prioritises an approach that benefits the settler state and does not consider Māori and Indigenous voices in Australia and Aotearoa-New Zealanad that encourage decolonisation.

This is seen in the article immediately glorifying the work of Jacinta Arden, an extension of the settler colonialism in Aotearoa-New Zealand, who donned a hijab as a symbol of solidarity in the attack, but fails to conceptualise this icon in a breast of anti-immigration and xenophobic decisions made in "multicultural" New Zealand.

Settler Colonialism Lurked Beneath the Christchurch Massacre by Azeezah Kanji & David Palumbo-Liu

The Christchurch Massacre continues to Haunt Muslims Around the World by Kawsar Ali.

The Christchurch Shooting & The Bosnian Genocide - Part 1: Constructing Nationalist Narratives