State Minimum Wages: An Overview

Summary

The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), enacted in 1938, is the federal legislation that establishes the general minimum wage that must be paid to all covered workers. While the FLSA mandates broad minimum wage coverage, states have the option of establishing minimum wage rates that are different from those set in it. Under the provisions of the FLSA, an individual is generally covered by the higher of the state or federal minimum wage.

As of 2019, minimum wage rates are above the federal rate of $7.25 per hour in 29 states and the District of Columbia, ranging from $0.25 to $6.75 above the federal rate. Another 14 states have minimum wage rates equal to the federal rate. The remaining seven states have minimum wage rates below the federal rate or do not have a state minimum wage requirement. In the states with no minimum wage requirements or wages lower than the federal minimum wage, only individuals who are not covered by the FLSA are subject to those lower rates.

In any given year, the exact number of states with a minimum wage rate above the federal rate may vary, depending on the interaction between the federal rate and the mechanisms in place to adjust the state minimum wage. Adjusting minimum wage rates is typically done in one of two ways: (1) legislatively scheduled rate increases that may include one or several increments; (2) a measure of inflation to index the value of the minimum wage to the general change in prices.

Of the 29 states and the District of Columbia with minimum wage rates above the federal rate, 9 currently have no scheduled increases beyond 2019, 3 states have legislatively scheduled rate increases after 2019, and 17 states and the District of Columbia have scheduled increases through a combination of planned increases and current- or future-year indexation of state minimum wage rates to a measure of inflation.

Because the federal and state minimum wage rates change at various times and in various increments, the share of the labor force for which the federal rate is the binding wage floor has changed over time. Since 1981, there have been three series of increases in the federal minimum wage rate—1990-1991, 1996-1997, and 2007-2009. During that same period, there have been numerous changes in state minimum wage policies. As a result of those interactions, the share of the U.S. civilian labor force living in states in which the federal minimum wage is the floor has fluctuated but generally declined, and is about 39% as of 2018.

Introduction

The Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), enacted in 1938, is the federal legislation that establishes the general minimum wage that must be paid to all covered workers.¹ The FLSA mandates broad minimum wage coverage. It also specifies certain categories of workers who are not covered by general FLSA wage standards, such as workers with disabilities or certain youth workers.

In 1938, the FLSA established a minimum wage of $0.25 per hour. The minimum wage provisions of the FLSA have been amended numerous times since then, typically to expand coverage or raise the wage rate. Since its establishment, the minimum wage rate has been raised 22 separate times.² The most recent change was enacted through P.L. 110-28 in 2007, which increased the minimum wage from $5.15 per hour to its current rate of $7.25 per hour in three steps (the final step occurring in 2009).

States generally have three options in setting their minimum wage policies (1) they can set their own minimum wage provisions that differ from those in the FLSA, (2) they can explicitly tie their minimum wage provisions to the FLSA, or (3) they can include no specific minimum wage provisions in state law.

This report begins with a brief discussion of FLSA minimum wage coverage. It then provides a summary of state minimum wage laws, followed by an examination of rates and mechanisms of adjustments in states with minimum wage levels above the FLSA rate (Table 1 provides summary data). Next, the report discusses the interaction of federal and state minimum wages over time, and finally, the Appendix provides detailed information on the major components of minimum wage policies in all 50 states and the District of Columbia.

The state policies covered in this report include currently effective policies and policies enacted with an effective date at some point in 2019. While most states' scheduled state minimum wage rate changes (due to inflation adjustments or statutorily scheduled changes) occurred on January 1 of each year, a few states have rate increases scheduled for later in the year. Effective dates of rate increases are noted in Table 1 and in the Appendix.

The FLSA Minimum Wage

The FLSA extends two types of minimum wage coverage to individuals: “enterprise coverage” and “individual coverage.”³ An individual is covered if they meet the criteria for either category.

Enterprise Coverage

To be covered by the FLSA at the enterprise or business level, an enterprise must have at least two employees and annual sales or “business done” of at least $500,000. Annual sales or business done includes all business activities that can be measured in dollars. Thus, for example, retailers are covered by the FLSA if their annual sales are at least $500,000.⁴ In non-sales cases, a measure other than sales must be used to determine business done. For example, for enterprises engaged in leasing property, gross amounts paid by tenants for property rental will be considered business done for purposes of determining enterprise coverage.

¹ In addition, the FLSA provides for overtime pay and child labor protections. For a broader overview of the minimum wage, see, The Federal Minimum Wage: In Brief, by David H. Bradley.

² Although the rate has increased 22 separate times, this does not mean that there have been 22 separately enacted laws to increase the minimum wage. In some cases, one law contained multiple increases in the minimum wage rate that were phased in over time.

In addition, regardless of the dollar volume of business, the FLSA applies to hospitals or other institutions primarily providing medical or nursing care for residents; schools (preschool through institutions of higher education); and federal, state, and local governments.

Thus, regardless of how enterprise coverage is determined (by business done or by specified institutional type), all employees of a covered enterprise are considered to be covered by the FLSA.

Individual Coverage

Although an enterprise may not be subject to minimum wage requirements if it has less than $500,000 in annual sales or business done, employees of the enterprise may be covered if they are individually engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods for interstate commerce. To be engaged in interstate commerce—the definition of which is fairly broad—employees must produce goods (or have indirect input to the production of those goods) that will be shipped out of the state of production, travel to other states for work, make phone calls or send emails to persons in other states, handle records that are involved in interstate transactions, or provide services to buildings (e.g., janitorial work) in which goods are produced for shipment outside of the state.⁵

While individual coverage is broad under the FLSA, there are also specific exemptions from the federal rate, including individuals with disabilities; youth workers; tipped workers; and executive, administrative, and professional workers, among others.⁶

FLSA Minimum Wage Rates

In 1938, the FLSA established a minimum wage of $0.25 per hour. The minimum wage provisions of the FLSA have been amended numerous times since then, typically for the purpose of expanding coverage or raising the wage rate. Since its establishment, the minimum wage rate has been raised 22 separate times. The most recent change was enacted in 2007 (P.L. 110-28), which increased the minimum wage from $5.15 per hour to its current rate of $7.25 per hour in three steps.

Figure 1 shows the nominal and real (inflation-adjusted) value of the federal minimum wage from its enactment in 1938 through 2018. The real value of the minimum wage generally rose from 1938 to 1968, after which it has generally fallen in real terms, with some brief increases in value following periodic statutory rate changes. From an initial rate of $0.25 per hour in 1938 ($4.43 in inflation-adjusted terms), the minimum wage increased to $1.60 per hour in 1968 ($11.50 in inflation-adjusted terms, a peak value to date). The real value of the minimum wage has fallen by $1.20 since it was increased to $7.25 in 2009.

⁴ The $500,000 threshold refers to the annual gross volume of sales. It is not a measure of net revenue or profits.

Notes: The inflation-adjusted minimum wage is expressed in 2018 dollars based on the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (CPI-U), U.S. City Average. The CPI-U value for 2018 is the semi-annual average for the first half of 2018.

Minimum Wage Policies in the States

State policymakers may also choose to set labor standards that are different from federal statutes. The FLSA establishes that if a state enacts minimum wage, overtime, or child labor laws more protective of employees than those provided in the FLSA, then state law applies. In the case of minimum wages, this means FLSA-covered workers are entitled to the higher state minimum wage in those states with rates above the federal minimum. On the other hand, FLSA-covered workers would receive the FLSA minimum wage in states that have set minimum wages lower than the federal rate. Given the generally broad minimum wage coverage of the FLSA, it is likely that most workers in states with minimum wages below the federal rate are covered by the FLSA rate.

In 2019, the range of state minimum wage rates is as follows:

- 29 states and the District of Columbia have enacted minimum wage rates above the federal rate of $7.25 per hour;
- 2 states have minimum wage rates below the federal rate;
- 5 states have no state minimum wage requirement; and

- the remaining 14 states have minimum wage rates equal to the federal rate.⁷

In the states with no minimum wage requirements or wages lower than the federal minimum wage, only individuals who are not covered by the FLSA are subject to those lower rates.

The Appendix provides detailed information on state minimum wage policy in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, including the legislation authorizing the state minimum wage and the relevant legislative language regarding the rate and mechanism of adjustment.

The remainder of this report focuses on states with minimum wages above the federal rate.

Rates and Mechanisms of Adjustment

In states with minimum wage rates above the federal rate, variation occurs mainly across two dimensions: the rate and the mechanism of adjustment to the rate. This section (including data in Table 1) summarizes these two dimensions for the states with rates currently above the federal minimum. State rates range from $0.25 to $6.75 above the federal rate, with a majority of these states using some sort of inflation measure to index the state minimum wage.

Rates

In the 29 states and the District of Columbia with minimum wage rates above the federal rate in 2019, minimum hourly rates range from $7.50 per hour in New Mexico to $12.00 per hour in Massachusetts and Washington and $14.00 in the District of Columbia. Of the states with minimum wage rates above $7.25:

- 3 states have minimum wages within $1 of the federal rate of $7.25 per hour;
- 10 states have rates between $1.00 and $2.00 per hour above the federal rate; and
- 16 states and the District of Columbia have rates greater than $2.00 per hour above the federal rate (i.e., $9.26 or higher).

Figure 2 shows the geographic and rate dispersion of state minimum wages. In terms of coverage, a majority of the civilian labor force is in states with a minimum wage rate above the federal rate of $7.25. Specifically, the 29 states and the District of Columbia with minimum wage rates above $7.25 represent about 61% of the total civilian labor force, which means the federal rate is the wage floor in states representing 39% of the labor force.⁸

Mechanisms for Future Adjustments

In any given year, the exact number of states with a minimum wage rate above the federal rate may vary, depending on what mechanism is in place to adjust the state minimum wage. Some states specifically set rates above the federal rate. Other states have rates above the federal minimum wage because the state minimum wage rate is indexed to a measure of inflation or is increased in legislatively scheduled increments, and thus the state rate changes even if the federal minimum wage stays unchanged.

Below are the two main approaches to regulating the adjustment of state minimum wage rates in states with rates above the federal minimum: legislatively scheduled increases and indexing to inflation.⁹ In this section, states are counted by the primary method of adjustment. While most states use only one of these methods, some states combine a series of scheduled increases followed by indexing the state rate to a measure of inflation. In these cases, states are counted as “indexing to inflation,” as that is the long-term mechanism of adjustment in place.

Legislatively Scheduled Increases

If a state adopts a minimum wage higher than the federal rate, the state legislature may specify a single rate in the enacting legislation and then choose not to address future rates. In these cases, the only mechanism for future rate changes is future legislative action. Alternatively, a state may specify future rates in legislation through a given date. Rhode Island in 2017, for example, set a rate of $10.10 per hour beginning January 1, 2018, and $10.50 beginning January 1, 2019. After the final increase, the rate will remain at $10.50 per hour until further legislative action. This is the same approach taken in the most recent federal minimum wage increase (P.L. 110-28), which increased the minimum wage from $5.15 an hour in 2007 to $7.25 per hour in 2009 in three phases. Of the 29 states and the District of Columbia with minimum wage rates above the federal rate, 9 currently have no scheduled increases beyond 2019, while Arkansas, Massachusetts, and Michigan have legislatively scheduled rate increases after 2019.¹⁰

Indexing to Inflation

If a minimum wage rate is established as a fixed amount and not increased, its value will erode over time due to inflation.¹¹ For this reason, several states have attempted to maintain the value of the minimum wage over time by indexing the rate to some measure of inflation. This mechanism provides for automatic changes in the minimum wage over time and does not require legislative action to make annual adjustments.

Currently, nine states index state minimum wages to a measure of inflation. In addition, another eight states and the District of Columbia are scheduled in a future year to index state minimum wage rates to a measure of inflation. Thus, of the total of 17 states and the District of Columbia that currently or are scheduled to index minimum wage rates,

- seven states—Arizona, Montana, Nevada, New York, Oregon, South Dakota, and Vermont—index the state minimum wage to the national Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (CPI-U);
- five states—California, Missouri, New Jersey, Ohio, and Washington—index the state minimum wage to the national Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W);¹²
- two states—Alaska and Colorado—and the District of Columbia use a sub-national version of the CPI-U to index the state minimum wage;
- two states—Florida and Maine—use a regional version of the CPI-W to index the minimum wage; and
- one state (Minnesota) uses the implicit price deflator for personal consumption expenditures (PCE) to index the minimum wage.

¹¹ For a detailed discussion of indexing the minimum wage, see CRS Report R44667, The Federal Minimum Wage: Indexation, by David H. Bradley.

¹² For additional information about CPI, see <http://www.bls.gov/cpi/cpiovrw.htm>.

Reference to the Federal Rate

While scheduled increases and indexation are the two main ways that states adjust their minimum wage rates, a few states also add a reference to the federal minimum wage rate as a possible mechanism of adjustment. Thus any time the federal rate changes, the state rate may change.¹³ Currently, Alaska, Connecticut, the District of Columbia, and Massachusetts use this federal reference to supplement their primary mechanisms of adjusting state minimum wage rates.

- In Alaska, the state minimum wage rate is indexed to the CPI-U for Anchorage Metropolitan Statistical Area. However, Alaska state law requires that the state minimum wage must be at least $1.00 per hour higher than the federal rate. So it is possible that a federal wage increase could trigger an increase in the Alaska minimum wage but the main mechanism is indexation to inflation.
- Although Connecticut does not currently include scheduled rate increases in the minimum wage, Connecticut state law requires that the state rate must exceed the federal minimum wage rate by 0.5% if the federal rate becomes greater than or equal to the state rate.
- The District of Columbia’s minimum wage rate is the higher of the level required by the District of Columbia statute or the federal rate plus $1.00. Starting in 2021, the District of Columbia minimum wage will be indexed to inflation and the reference to the federal rate will no longer be in effect.
- While Massachusetts law includes scheduled rate increases in the minimum wage through 2023, the law also requires that the state rate must be at least $0.50 above federal minimum wage rate.

Notes: In Table I, cells with “CPI-U,” “CPI-W,” or “PCE” indicate that the state minimum rate is indexed to the relevant inflation measure in those years.

- a. The minimum wage for California in Table I is for large employers, which are defined as any employer employing 26 or more employees. For employers with 25 or fewer employees, the minimum wage in 2019 is $11.00 per hour and is scheduled to reach $15.00 on January 1, 2023.
- b. The minimum wage in Delaware is $8.75 per hour from January 1, 2019, through September 30, 2019. As of October 1, 2019, the minimum wage is $9.25 per hour.
- c. The minimum wage in the District of Columbia is $13.25 per hour through June 30, 2019. The new rate of $14.00 in the District of Columbia is scheduled to go into effect July 1, 2019. Future rate increases begin on July 1.
- d. The minimum wage of $10.10 in Maryland went into effect July 1, 2018.
- e. The minimum wage in Michigan is $9.25 per hour through March 28, 2019. As of March 29, 2019, the minimum wage is $9.45 per hour.
- f. The minimum wage for Minnesota in Table I is for large employers, which are defined as enterprises “whose annual gross volume of sales made or business done is not less than $500,000 (exclusive of excise taxes at the retail level that are separately stated) and covered by the Minnesota Fair Labor Standards Act.” The minimum wage for small employers (defined as enterprises “whose annual gross volume of sales made or business done is less than $500,000”) is $8.04 as of January 1, 2019.
- g. Nevada maintains a two-tier minimum wage system. The minimum wage for workers who do not receive qualified health benefits from their employer is $8.25 per hour, while the minimum wage for workers receiving qualified health benefits is $7.25 per hour. An annual adjustment, if any, occurs on July 1 of each year and is the greater of the amount of increases in the federal minimum wage over $5.15 or the cumulative inflation since December 31, 2004.

- h. The state of New York has four minimum wage rates—large employers in New York City, small employers in New York City, New York City suburbs, and the Remainder of the State—each with different scheduled rate increases. Following scheduled increases for large employers (11 or more employees) in New York City, small employers (10 or fewer employees) in New York City, and New York City suburbs to $15 per hour (in 2019, 2020, and 2022, respectively), the minimum wage rate for the Remainder of the State becomes indexed in 2022 from its scheduled rate of $12.50 at that time and remains indexed until it reaches $15 per hour. Indexation is not applied to the other three New York rates after they reach $15 per hour. The rate in Table 1 is for the Remainder of the State (outside of New York City and Nassau, Suffolk, and Westchester counties). Future rate increases begin on December 31. See Table A-1 for details.
- i. The state of Oregon has three minimum wage rates—Standard, Portland Metro, and Nonurban Counties—each with different scheduled rate increases. The rate in Table 1 is the Standard rate. Future rate increases begin on July 1. See Table A-1 for details.

Trends in State Minimum Wages

Because federal and state minimum wages do not change in regular intervals or by regular increments, the number of states and the share of the labor force covered by higher minimum wages changes annually. In general, during periods in which the federal minimum wage remains constant, more states enact higher minimum wages and the share of the workforce for which the federal rate serves as the floor likewise decreases. When the federal rate increases, some state rates become equal to or less than the federal rate.

Table 1 presents a snapshot of minimum wage rates in the 29 states and the District of Columbia with minimum wages above the federal rate from 2018 through 2024, while Figure 3 shows the changes in the coverage of the federal minimum wage.¹⁴ Specifically, Figure 3 plots the percentage of the civilian labor force residing in states in which the federal wage serves as the floor.¹⁵ If no state had a minimum wage above the federal rate, then the federal minimum wage would be the floor for states in which 100% of the labor force resides. Similarly, if every state had a minimum wage above the current rate of $7.25, then the federal rate would not be binding for the labor force. Instead the interaction of federal and state rates has led to the federal minimum wage playing a fluctuating, but generally decreasing, role in establishing a wage floor for the civilian labor force, particularly during periods in which the federal rate is not increased.

The Share of the U.S. Labor Force Residing in States with the Federal Minimum Wage as the Floor

Notes: Prior to 1993, the District of Columbia did not have a broad minimum wage covering the general population. Thus for periods prior to 1993, this report uses a weighted average of occupation-specific minimum wages, as reported in David Neumark and Olena Nizalova, Minimum Wage Effects in the Longer Run, National Bureau of Economic Research, Working Paper 10656, Cambridge, MA, March 2006, <http://www.nber.org/papers/w10656>. Based on this data, the District of Columbia has maintained a minimum wage above the federal rate for the entire 1983-2019 period.

Examining the specific time periods around changes in the federal minimum wage (see Figure 1 for the history of federal minimum wage rate changes), data in Figure 3 shows a general trend toward a lower share of the labor force being covered by the federal minimum wage only. Federal rate increases in 2007 through 2009 mitigated this reduction, as did earlier changes in the federal rate.

- In the period from 1983 through 1989, the federal minimum wage remained constant at $3.35 per hour. Prior to the federal increases in 1990 and 1991, the number of states with higher minimum wages rose from 3 in 1984 to 16 in 1989 and the share of the U.S. civilian labor force in states for which the federal rate was the floor fell from 98% to 70%.

- Following a two-step federal increase in 1990 and 1991 from $3.35 to $4.25 per hour, the number of states with higher minimum wages fell to 8 in 1992, which meant that the federal rate was the floor for states comprising 92% of the civilian labor force.
- The next federal minimum wage increase occurred in two steps in 1996 and 1997, increasing from $4.25 to $5.15 per hour. Prior to that increase, in 1995, there were 10 states, representing 10% of the civilian labor force, with minimum wages above the federal rate. After the second increase in 1997, the number of states with higher minimum wages dropped to 8, but the share of the labor force in states for which the federal rate served as a floor decreased to 82%.
- The federal minimum wage did not increase after 1997 until 2007. During much of that period the number of states with higher minimum wages stayed somewhat steady, increasing from 8 (comprising 18% of the civilian labor force) in 1998 to 12 (comprising 21% of the civilian labor force) in 2003. However, by 2006, 22 states representing 50% of the civilian labor force had minimum wage rates above the federal rate. This increase was due in part to a few populous states, such as Florida, Michigan, and New York, adopting minimum wage rates above the federal rate in this period.
- Following the three-step increase in the federal minimum wage from $5.15 to the current $7.25 (2007-2009), 15 states, comprising 33% of the civilian labor force, had rates above the federal minimum wage in 2010. By 2019, this rose to 29 states and the District of Columbia, which means that the federal rate is the wage floor in states representing 39% of the civilian labor force.

Appendix. Selected Characteristics of State Minimum Wage Policies

For the 29 states and the District of Columbia with state minimum wage rates above the federal rate as of 2019, Table 1 and much of the text above summarizes information on those states' minimum wage policies, highlighting minimum wage rates and mechanisms used to establish and adjust wage rates. As discussed previously, for those states with current or scheduled minimum wages above the federal rate, three main mechanisms are in place to adjust future rates: (1) scheduled increases, (2) indexation to inflation, or (3) reference to the federal rate plus an add-on (i.e., a state minimum wage is a percentage or dollar amount above the federal rate). For the 21 states with minimum wage rates equal to or below the federal rate, however, there are no mechanisms in place to move rates above the federal rate. Thus, the main difference within this group of states is the relationship of the state rate, if any, to the federal rate.

For those 21 states with minimum wages equal to or below the federal rate, the state rate may be set in four ways:¹⁶

- No state minimum wage provisions: In five states—Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Tennessee—there are no provisions for state minimum wage rates. In practice, this means that most workers in these states are covered by the FLSA minimum wage provisions since coverage is generally broad.
- State minimum wage provisions with no reference to the FLSA: Five states have state minimum wage rates but do not reference the FLSA. Two of these states—Georgia and Wyoming—have state rates below $7.25, while three of these states—Kansas, North Dakota, and Wisconsin—have rates equal to $7.25. However, because there is no reference to the FLSA rate or other provision for adjustment in any of these states, the state rate does not change unless the state policy is changed.
- State minimum wage equals the FLSA rate: Six states—Idaho, Indiana, New Hampshire, Oklahoma, Texas, and Virginia—set the state rate equal to the FLSA rate. Thus, when the FLSA rate changes, the state rates in these six states change to equal the FLSA rate.
- State minimum wage equals FLSA rate if FLSA is greater: In four states—Iowa, Kentucky, North Carolina, and Pennsylvania—the state rate is specified separately but includes a provision to equal the FLSA rate if the latter is above the state specified rate.

Table A-1 provides detailed information about minimum wage policies in the 50 states and the District of Columbia, including those summarized in a more concise manner in Table 1.

Alaska	Alaska Statute 23.10.065	AS 23.10.065 reads: “(a) Except as otherwise provided for in law, an employer shall pay to each employee a minimum wage, as established herein, for hours worked in a pay period, whether the work is measured by time, piece, commission or otherwise. An employer may not apply tips or gratuities bestowed upon employees as a credit toward payment of the minimum hourly wage required by this section. Tip credit as defined by the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 as amendment does not apply to the minimum wage established by this section. Beginning with the passage of this Act, the minimum wage shall be $8.75 per hour effective January 1, 2015, $9.75 per hour effective January 1, 2016 and thereafter adjusted annually for inflation. The adjustment shall be calculated each September 30, for the proceeding January-December calendar year, by the Alaska Department of Labor and Workforce Development, using 100 percent of the rate of inflation based on the Consumer Price Index for all urban consumers for the Anchorage metropolitan area, compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, United States Department of Labor; the department shall round the adjusted minimum hourly wage up to the nearest one cent; the adjusted minimum hourly wage shall apply to work performed beginning on January 1 through December 31 of the year for which it is effective. (d) If the minimum wage determined under (a) of this section is less than one dollar over the federal minimum wage, the Alaska minimum wage shall be set at one dollar over the federal minimum wage. This amount shall be adjusted in subsequent years by the method established in (a) of this section.”
Arizona	Arizona Revised Statutes, 23-363	“A. Employers shall pay employees no less than the minimum wage, which shall be not less than: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. $10 on and after January 1, 2017. 2. $10.50 on and after January 1, 2018. 3. $11 on and after January 1, 2019. 4. $12 on and after January 1, 2020. B. The minimum wage shall be increased on January 1, 2021 and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase in the cost of living. The increase in the cost of living shall be measured by the percentage increase as of August of the immediately preceding year over the level as of August of the previous year of the consumer price index (all urban consumers, U.S. city average for all items) or its successor index as published by the U.S. department of labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase rounded to the nearest multiple of five cents.”

West Virginia	West Virginia Code 21-5C-2	“(a) Minimum wage: (1) After June 30, 2006, every employer shall pay to each of his or her employees wages at a rate not less than $ 5.85 per hour. (2) After June 30, 2007, every employer shall pay to each of his or her employees wages at a rate not less than $ 6.55 per hour. (3) After June 30, 2008, every employer shall pay to each of his or her employees wages at a rate not less than $ 7.25 per hour. (4) After January 1, 2015, every employer shall pay to each of his or her employees wages at a rate not less than $ 8.00 per hour. (5) After January 1, 2016, every employer shall pay to each of his or her employees wages at a rate not less than $ 8.75 per hour. (6) When the federal minimum hourly wage as prescribed by 29 U.S.C. Section 206(a)(1) is equal to or greater than the wage rate prescribed in the applicable provision of this subsection, every employer shall pay to each of his or her employees wages at a rate of not less than the federal minimum hourly wage as prescribed by 29 U.S.C. Section 206(a)(1). The minimum wage rates required under this subparagraph shall be thereafter adjusted in accordance with adjustments made in the federal minimum hourly rate. The adoption of the federal minimum wage provided by this subdivision includes only the federal minimum hourly rate prescribed in 29 U.S.C. Section 206(a)(1) and does not include other wage rates, or conditions, exclusions, or exceptions to the federal minimum hourly wage rate. In addition, adoption of the federal minimum hourly wage rate does not extend or modify the scope or coverage of the minimum wage rate required under this subdivision.” Note: This is language from legislation signed into law in June 2014, but a 2006 law had already set the state minimum wage at $7.25, effective 6/30/08.
Wisconsin	Wisconsin Administrative Code 272.03	“This subsection is effective on July 24, 2009. Except as provided in ss. DWD 272.05 to 272.09, no employer may employ any employee in any occupation, trade, or industry at a lesser hourly rate than as follows: (a) All employees except opportunity and minor employees $7.25 per hour. (b) Minor employees $7.25 per hour. (c) Opportunity employees $5.90 per hour.”
Wyoming	Wyoming Statutes Annotated 27-4-202	“Every employer shall pay to each of his or her employees wages at a rate of not less than five dollars and fifteen cents ($5.15) per hour”
