Activity Report
Ishidama

1. It would be interesting to find out if this activities report is written and used for civil affairs only, or also for the information of the Japanese prefectural welfare staff, and the ministry.

2. In either case, it fails to reflect any advance what so ever in understanding what we, and presumably the ministry, have been attempting to get over to the prefectural welfare officials during the past year.

3. Administrative reviews are still aparently thought of as institution inspections and concern for the handicapped, work shop employees and repatriates.

4. Child Welfare is primarily concerned with "Welfare Week", and the use of sound trucks to inform the general public - of just what is not clear.

5. Social Insurance is devoted to statistics, which are probably appropriate in their reporting.

6. The main difficulty with the report is it's concern with the efforts to educate the public, and to report on the so called "positive" things officials dream up, ie demonstrations, welfare week, etc. There is not one reference to the education of the welfare officials themselves, or administration problems, or technical aspects of child welare etc.

7. The report reminds you of some of the early monthly activities reports that Military Government Welfare Officers, completely untrained, would turn in to justify their jobs.

8. The problem reflected by the report is more complex than that, however, because this sort of concept of public and private welfare is typically Japanese, and the report demonstrates that in the past year little if anything has been acomplished in giving them a broader and more specific concept of public welfare administration.

DECLASSIFIED E.O. 12065 SECTION 3-402/NNDG NO. 775013

9. It is possible, of course, that the report is written by some clerk in the office, with no help from the supervisor. Even so, the fact that the supervisor allows this type of report to go thru is significant, and probably reflects his lack of understanding rather than his negligence.

10. I should like your ideas on this, and any suggestions as to the use we can make of this type of reporting, in our work with Japanese officials. As an example of terrible reporting? As a means of finding out why they have failed to understand their programs and where we have failed?

It seems to me to be significant enough to provide an interesting basis for discussion, at least.
