JULY'S FEATURED TEXT

"Megalithic Monuments in Spain and Portugal" by Jean-François-Albert du Pouget.

Jean-François-Albert du Pouget, born July 1818, was a French anthropologist and palæontologist. His special interest in cave drawings involved him in the exploration of the caves of southern France, and exploration of the earliest peoples to dwell in Europe. His article describing the megalithic monuments of the Iberian peninsula was published in Popular Science Monthly, volume 31.

NOTHING in the ancient history of man is of more considerable interest than are those monuments, at once rudely grand and mysteriously simple, which have been designated megalithic. They may be simply raised stones, isolated menhirs, cromlechs arranged in a circle, or artificial caves formed by placing flat flags horizontally on standing supports. Dolmens or covered passages were usually buried under masses of earth or stones, so as to form veritable tumuli; but they always present the common character of being constructed in rough blocks, virgin of all human labor.

Megaliths are important on account of their number and their dispersion. They are to be found, with a likeness running through them all, in places most remote from one another, on different continents. At

- Connecting WMF with cultural heritage institutions in S.Asia for training events

The screenshot shows the Wikisource page for the project. At the top, there is a navigation bar with 'Project Page' and 'discussion' tabs, and a search bar. Below the navigation bar, there is a notice in memory of Rabindranath Tagore. The main heading is 'Wikip compilation: Joint Collaboration/British Library - Two Centuries of Indian Printing'. Below the heading is a large graphic with the word 'GLAM' in stylized letters. The main text describes the joint coordination and cooperation of the Bengali Wikip compilation Project with the British Library's two-century project of Indian printing. A 'Timeline' section follows, listing key events from December 2019 to March 2021. On the right side, there are sections for 'Shortcuts' and 'Sections'.

Almost all of the writings in Balinese were digitized and preserved here in 2011 by the Internet Archive from their major library in Denpasar, Bali. A official in the cultural ministry said that this collection is "90% of all writings in Balinese." Most of the Balinese literature is written on palm leaves, or Lontar. Some were not digitized because of the culturally sensitive materials they contain. This makes the Balinese the first to have their complete literature online and available for ...
