

THE LEGEND OF JUBAL

When Cam was driven from Jehovah's land
He wandered eastward, seeking some far strand
Ruled by kind gods who asked no offerings
Save pure field-fruits, as aromatic things,
To feed the subtler sense of frames divine
That lived on fragrance for their food and wine
Wild joyous gods, who winked at faults and folly,
And could be pitiful and melancholy
He never had a doubt that such gods were,
He looked within, and saw them mirrored there
Some think he came at last to Tartary,
And some to Ind, but, howsoe'er it be,

His staff he planted where sweet waters ran, And in that home of Cain the Arts began

Man's life was spacious in the early world

It paused, like some slow ship with sail unfurled

Waiting in seas by scarce a wavelet curled,

Beheld the slow star-paces of the skies,

And grew from strength to strength through centuries

Saw infant trees fill out their giant limbs,

And heard a thousand times the sweet birds' marriage hymns

In Cam's young city none had heard of Death
Save him, the founder, and it was his faith
That here, away from harsh Jehovah's law,
Man was immortal, since no halt or flaw
In Cam's own frame betrayed six hundred years,
But dark as pines that autumn never sears
His locks thronged backward as he ran, his frame
Rose like the orbed sun each morn the same,

Lake mirrored to his gaze, and that red brand,
The scorching impress of Jehovah's hand,
Was still clear-edged to his unwearied eye,
Its secret firm in time-fraught memory
He said, "My happy offspring shall not know
That the red life from out a man may flow
When smitten by his brother" True, his race
Bore each one stamped upon his new-born face
A copy of the brand no whit less clear,
But every mother held that little copy dear

Thus generations in glad idlesse throve,

Nor hunted prey, nor with each other strove,

For clearest springs were plenteous in the land,

And gourds for cups, the ripe fruits sought the hand,

Bending the laden boughs with fragrant gold,
And for their roofs and garments wealth untold
Lay everywhere in grasses and broad leaves
They laboured gently, as a maid who weaves

Her hair in mimic mats, and pauses oft

And strokes across her hand the tresses soft,

Then peeps to watch the poisèd butterfly,

Or little burthened ants that homeward hie

Time was but leisure to their lingering thought,

There was no need for haste to finish aught,

But sweet beginnings were repeated still

Like infant babblings that no task fulfil,

For love, that loved not change, constrained the simple will

Till, hurling stones in mere athletic joy,
Strong Lamech struck and killed his fairest boy,

And tried to wake him with the tenderest cries,
And fetched and held before the glazed eyes
The things they best had loved to look upon,
But never glance or smile or sigh he won
The generations stood around those twain
Helplessly gazing, till their father Cain

Parted the press, and said, "He will not wake. This is the endless sleep, and we must make A bed deep down for him beneath the sod. For know, my sons, there is a mighty God Angry with all man's race, but most with me I fled from out His land in vain !—'tis He Who came and slew the lad, for He has found This home of ours, and we shall all be bound By the harsh bands of His most cruel will. Which any moment may some dear one kill Nay, though we live for countless moons, at last We and all ours shall die like summers past This is Jehovah's will, and He is strong, I thought the way I travelled was too long For Him to follow me my thought was vain! He walks unseen, but leaves a track of pain, Pale Death His footprint is, and He will come again '"

And a new spirit from that hour came o'er The race of Cain. soft idlesse was no more,

But even the sunshine had a heart of care. Smiling with hidden dread—a mother fair Who folding to her breast a dving child Beams with feigned joy that but makes sadness mild Death was now lord of Life, and at his word Time, vague as air before, new terrors stirred. With measured wing now audibly arose Throbbing through all things to some unknown close Now glad Content by clutching Haste was torn, And Work grew eager, and Device was born It seemed the light was never loved before. Now each man said. "'Twill go and come no more" No budding branch, no pebble from the brook, No form, no shadow, but new dearness took From the one thought that life must have an end, And the last parting now began to send Diffusive dread through love and wedded bliss, Thrilling them into finer tenderness. Then Memory disclosed her face divine. That like the calm nocturnal lights doth shine

Within the soul, and shows the sacred graves,
And shows the presence that no sunlight craves,
No space, no warmth, but moves among them all,
Gone and yet here, and coming at each call,
With ready voice and eyes that understand,
And lips that ask a kiss, and dear responsive hand

Thus to Cain's race death was tear-watered seed
Of various life and action-shaping need
But chief the sons of Lamech felt the stings
Of new ambition, and the force that springs
In passion beating on the shores of fate
They said, "There comes a night when all too late
The mind shall long to prompt the achieving hand,

The eager thought behind closed portals stand,
And the last wishes to the mute lips press
Buried ere death in silent helplessness
Then while the soul its way with sound can cleave,
And while the arm is strong to strike and heave,

Let soul and aim give shape that will abide
And rule above our graves, and power divide
With that great god of day, whose rays must bend
As we shall make the moving shadows tend Come, let us fashion acts that are to be,
When we shall lie in darkness silently,
As our young brother doth, whom yet we see Fallen and slain, but reigning in our will
By that one image of him pale and still"

For Lamech's sons were heroes of their race
Jabal, the eldest, bore upon his face
The look of that calm river-god, the Nile,
Mildly secure in power that needs not guile
But Tubal-Cain was restless as the fire
That glows and spreads and leaps from high to higher

Where'er is aught to seize or to subdue,
Strong as a storm he lifted or o'erthrew,
His urgent limbs like granite boulders grew,

Such boulders as the plunging torrent wears

And roaring rolls around through countless years

But strength that still on movement must be fed,

Inspiring thought of change, devices bred,

And urged his mind through earth and an to rove

For force that he could conquer if he strove,

For lurking forms that might new tasks fulfil

And yield unwilling to his stronger will

Such Tubal-Cain But Jubal had a frame

Fashioned to finer senses, which became

A yearning for some hidden soul of things,

Some outward touch complete on inner springs

That vaguely moving bred a lonely pain,

A want that did but stronger grow with gain

Of all good else, as spirits might be sad

For lack of speech to tell us they are glad

Now Jabal learned to tame the lowing kine,

And from their udders drew the snow-white wine

That stirs the innocent joy, and makes the stream Of elemental life with fulness teem, The star-browed calves he nursed with feeding hand. And sheltered them, till all the little band Stood mustered gazing at the sunset way Whence he would come with store at close of day He soothed the silly sheep with friendly tone And reared their staggering lambs that, older grown, Followed his steps with sense taught memory, Till he, their shepherd, could their leader be And guide them through the pastures as he would, With sway that grew from ministry of good He spread his tents upon the grassy plain Which, eastward widening like the open main, Showed the first whiteness 'neath the morning star, Near him his sister, deft, as women are, Plied her quick skill in sequence to his thought Till the hid treasures of the milk she caught Revealed like pollen 'mid the petals white, The golden pollen, virgin to the light

Even the she-wolf with young, on rapine bent,

He caught and tethered in his mat-walled tent,

And cherished all her little sharp-nosed young

Till the small race with hope and terror clung

About his footsteps, till each new-reared brood,

Remoter from the memories of the wood,

More glad discerned their common home with

This was the work of Jabal he began

The pastoral life, and, sire of joys to be,

Spread the sweet ties that bind the family

O'er dear dumb souls that thrilled at man's caress,

And shared his pains with patient helpfulness

But Tubal-Cain had caught and yoked the fire,
Yoked it with stones that bent the flaming spire
And made it roar in prisoned servitude
Within the furnace, till with force subdued
It changed all forms he willed to work upon,
Till hard from soft, and soft from hard, he won

The pliant clay he moulded as he would. And laughed with joy when 'mid the heat it stood Shaped as his hand had chosen, while the mass That from his hold, dark, obstinate, would pass, He drew all glowing from the busy heat. All breathing as with life that he could beat With thundering hammer, making it obey His will creative, like the pale soft clay Each day he wrought and better than he planned. Shape breeding shape beneath his restless hand (The soul without still helps the soul within, And its deft magic ends what we begin) Nay, in his dreams his hammer he would wield And seem to see a myrad types revealed. Then spring with wondering triumphant cry. And, lest the inspiring vision should go by. Would rush to labour with that plastic zeal Which all the passion of our life can steal For force to work with. Each day saw the birth . Of various forms which, flung upon the earth,

Seemed harmless toys to cheat the exacting hour, But were as seeds instinct with hidden power The axe, the club, the spiked wheel, the chain, Held silently the shrieks and moans of pain. And near them latent lay in share and spade, In the strong bar, the saw, and deep-curved blade, Glad voices of the hearth and harvest home. The social good, and all earth's joy to come Thus to mixed ends wrought Tubal, and they say, Some things he made have lasted to this day, As, thirty silver pieces that were found By Noah's children buried in the ground He made them from mere hunger of device. Those small white discs, but they became the price The traitor Judas sold his Master for . And men still handling them in peace and war Catch foul disease, that comes as appetite, And lurks and clings as withering, damning blight But Tubal-Cam wot not of treachery, Nor greedy lust, nor any ill to be,

Save the one ill of sinking into nought,

Banished from action and act-shaping thought

He was the sire of swift-transforming skill,

Which arms for conquest man's ambitious will,

And round him gladly, as his hammer rung,

Gathered the elders and the growing young

These handled vaguely and those plied the tools,

Till, happy chance begetting conscious rules,

The home of Cain with industry was rife,

And glimpses of a strong persistent life,

Panting through generations as one breath,

And filling with its soul the blank of death

Jubal, too, watched the hammer, till his eyes,

No longer following its fall or rise,

Seemed glad with something that they could not see,

But only listened to—some melody,

Wherein dumb longings inward speech had found,

Won from the common store of struggling sound.

Then, as the metal shapes more various grew,
And, hurled upon each other, resonance drew,
Each gave new tones, the revelations dim
Of some external soul that spoke for him
The hollow vessel's clang, the clash, the boom,
Like light that makes wide spiritual room
And skyey spaces in the spaceless thought,
To Jubal such enlarged passion brought
That love, hope, rage, and all experience,
Were fused in vaster being, fetching thence Concords and discords, cadences and cries
That seemed from some world-shrouded soul to lise,
Some rapture more intense, some mightier rage,
Some living sea that burst the bounds of man's brief

Then with such blissful trouble and glad care

For growth within unborn as mothers bear,

To the far woods he wandered, listening,

And heard the birds their little stories sing

In notes whose rise and fall seem melted speech-Melted with tears, smiles, glances—that can reach More quickly through our frame's deep-winding night, And without thought raise thought's best fruit, delight Pondering, he sought his home again and heard The fluctuant changes of the spoken word The deep remonstrance and the argued want, Insistent first in close monotonous chant, Next leaping upward to defiant stand Or downward beating like the resolute hand, The mother's call, the children's answering cry. The laugh's light cataract tumbling from on high, The suasive repetitions Jabal taught, That timid browsing cattle homeward brought, The clear-winged fugue of echoes vanishing, And through them all the hammer's rhythmic ring Jubal sat lonely, all around was dim, Yet his face glowed with light revealed to him. For as the delicate stream of odour wakes The thought-wed sentience and some image makes

From out the mingled fragments of the past,
Finely compact in wholeness that will last,
So streamed as from the body of each sound
Subtler pulsations, swift as warmth, which found
All prisoned germs and all their powers unbound,
Till thought self-luminous flamed from memory,
And in creative vision wandered free
Then Jubal, standing, rapturous arms upraised,
And on the dark with eager eyes he gazed,
As had some manifested god been there
It was his thought he saw—the presence fair
Of unachieved achievement, the high task,
The mighty unborn spirit that doth ask
With irresistible cry for blood and breath,
Till feeding its great life we sink in death

He said, "Were now those mighty tones and cries That from the giant soul of earth arise, Those groans of some great travail heard from far, Some power at wrestle with the things that are,

Those sounds which vary with the varying form Of clay and metal, and in sightless swarm Fill the wide space with tremors were these wed To human voices with such passion fed As does but glimmer in our common speech, But might flame out in tones whose changing reach, Surpassing meagre need, informs the sense With fuller union, finer difference— Were this great vision, now obscurely bright As morning hills that melt in new-poured light, Wrought into solid form and living sound, Moving with ordered throb and sure rebound, Then—Nay, I Jubal will that work begin! The generations of our race shall win New life, that grows from out the heart of this, As spring from winter, or as lovers' bliss From out the dull unknown of unwaked energies"

Thus he resolved, and in the soul-fed light Of coming ages waited through the night,

Watching for that near dawn whose chiller ray Showed but the unchanged world of yesterday, Where all the order of his dream divine Lay like Olympian forms within the mine, Where fervour that could fill the earthly round With thronged joys of form-begotten sound Must shrink intense within the patient power That lonely labours through the niggard hour Such patience have the heroes who begin, Sailing the first toward lands which others win Jubal must dare as great beginners dare. Strike form's first way in matter rude and bare, And, yearning vaguely toward the plenteous quire Of the world's harvest, make one poor small lyre He made it, and from out its measured frame Drew the harmonic soul, whose answers came With guidance sweet and lessons of delight Teaching to ear and hand the blissful Right, Where strictest law is gladness to the sense, And all desire bends toward obedience

Then Jubal poured his triumph in a song—

The rapturous word that rapturous notes prolong

As radiance streams from smallest things that burn,

Or thought of loving into love doth turn And still his lyre gave companionship In sense-taught concert as of lip with lip Alone amid the hills at first he tried His winged song, then with adoring pride And bridegroom's joy at leading forth his bride, He said, "This wonder which my soul hath found, This heart of music in the might of sound. Shall forthwith be the share of all our race And like the morning gladden common space The song shall spread and swell as rivers do, And I will teach our youth with skill to woo This living lyre, to know its secret will, Its fine division of the good and ill So shall men call me sire of harmony, And where great Song is, there my life shall be "

THE LEGEND OF JUBAL

Thus glorying as a god beneficent,

Forth from his solitary joy he went

To bless mankind — It was at evening,

When shadows lengthen from each westward thing,

When imminence of change makes sense more fine

And light seems holier in its grand decline

The fruit-trees were their studded coronal,

Earth and her children were at festival,

Glowing as with one heart and one consent—

Thought, love, trees, rocks, in sweet warm radiance blent

The tribe of Cain was resting on the ground,

The various ages wreathed in one broad round

Here lay, while children peeped o'er his huge thighs,

The sinewy man embrowned by centuries,

Here the broad-bosomed mother of the strong

Looked, like Demeter, placid o'er the throng

Of young lithe forms whose rest was movement too—

Tricks, prattle, nods, and laughs that lightly flew,

And swayings as of flower-beds where Love blew

For all had feasted well upon the flesh Of juicy fruits, on nuts, and honey fresh, And now their wine was health-bred merriment, Which through the generations circling went, Leaving none sad, for even father Cain Smiled as a Titan might, despising pain Jabal sat circled with a playful ring Of children, lambs and whelps, whose gambolling, With tiny hoofs, paws, hands, and dimpled feet, Made barks, bleats, laughs, in pretty hubbub meet But Tubal's hammer rang from far away, Tubal alone would keep no holiday, His furnace must not slack for any feast, For of all hardship work he counted least, He scorned all rest but sleep, where every dream Made his repose more potent action seem

Yet with health's nectar some strange thirst was blent,

The fateful growth, the unnamed discontent,

The inward shaping toward some unborn power. Some deeper-breathing act, the being's flower After all gestures, words, and speech of eyes. The soul had more to tell, and broke in sighs Then from the east, with glory on his head Such as low-slanting beams on corn-waves spread, Came Jubal with his lyre—there 'mid the throng. Where the blank space was, poured a solemn song, Touching his lyre to full harmonic throb And measured pulse, with cadences that sob, Exult and cry, and search the inmost deep Where the dark sources of new passion sleep Joy took the air, and took each breathing soul, Embracing them in one entranced whole. Yet thrilled each varying frame to various ends. As Spring new-waking through the creature sends Or rage or tenderness, more plenteous life Here breeding dread, and there a fiercer strife He who had lived through twice three centuries, Whose months monotonous, like trees on trees

In hoary forests, stretched a backward maze,

Dreamed himself dimly through the travelled days

Till in clear light he paused, and felt the sun
That warmed him when he was a little one,
Knew that true heaven, the recovered past,
The dear small Known amid the Unknown vast,
And in that heaven wept—But younger limbs Thrilled toward the future, that bright land which swims

In western glory, isles and streams and bays,
Where hidden pleasures float in golden haze
And in all these the rhythmic influence,
Sweetly o'ercharging the delighted sense,
Flowed out in movements, little wayes that spread Enlarging, till in tidal union led
The youths and maidens both alike long-tressed,
By grace-inspiring melody possessed,
Rose in slow dance, with beauteous floating swerve
Of limbs and hair, and many a melting curve

Of ringed feet swayed by each close-linked palm
Then Jubal poured more rapture in his psalm,
The dance fired music, music fired the dance,
The glow diffusive lit each countenance,
Till all the circling tribe arose and stood
With glad yet awful shock of that mysterious good

Even Tubal caught the sound, and wondering came,
Urging his sooty bulk like smoke-wrapt flame
Till he could see his brother with the lyre,
The work for which he lent his furnace-fire
And diligent hammer, witting nought of this—
This power in metal shape which made strange bliss,
Entering within him like a dream full-fraught
With new creations finished in a thought

The sun had sunk, but music still was there,
And when this ceased, still triumph filled the air
It seemed the stars were shining with delight
And that no night was ever like this night

All clung with praise to Jubal some besought

That he would teach them his new skill, some caught,

Swiftly as smiles are caught in looks that meet,
The tone's melodic change and rhythmic beat
'Twas easy following where invention trod—
All eyes can see when light flows out from God

And thus did Jubal to his race reveal

Music their larger soul, where woe and weal

Filling the resonant chords, the song, the dance,

Moved with a wider-wingèd utterance

Now many a lyre was fashioned, many a song

Raised echoes new, old echoes to prolong,

Till things of Jubal's making were so rife,

"Hearing myself," he said, "hems in my life,

And I will get me to some far off land,

Where higher mountains under heaven stand

And touch the blue at rising of the stars,

Whose song they hear where no rough mingling mars

The great clear voices Such lands there must be,
Where varying forms make varying symphony—
Where other thunders roll amid the hills,
Some mightier wind a mightier forest fills
With other strains through other-shapen boughs,
Where bees and birds and beasts that hunt or browse
Will teach me songs I know not Listening there,
My life shall grow like trees both tall and fair
That rise and spread and bloom toward fuller fruit each year"

He took a raft, and travelled with the stream

Southward for many a league, till he might deem

He saw at last the pillars of the sky,

Beholding mountains whose white majesty

Rushed through him as new awe, and made new song

That swept with fuller wave the chords along, Weighting his voice with deep religious chime, The iteration of slow chant sublime It was the region long inhabited

By all the race of Seth, and Jubal said

"Here have I found my thirsty soul's desire,

Eastward the hills touch heaven, and evening's fire

Flames through deep waters, I will take my rest,

And feed anew from my great mother's breast,

The sky-clasped Earth, whose voices nurture me

As the flowers' sweetness doth the honey-bee"

He lingered wandering for many an age,

And, sowing music, made high heritage

For generations far beyond the Flood—

For the poor late-begotten human brood

Born to life's weary brevity and perilous good

And ever as he travelled he would climb

The farthest mountain, yet the heavenly chime,
The mighty tolling of the far-off spheres

Beating their pathway, never touched his ears.
But wheresoe'er he rose the heavens rose,
And the far-gazing mountain could disclose

Nought but a wider earth, until one height
Showed him the ocean stretched in liquid light,
And he could hear its multitudinous roar,
Its plunge and hiss upon the pebbled shore
Then Jubal silent sat, and touched his lyre no more

He thought, "The world is great, but I am weak,
And where the sky bends is no solid peak
To give me footing, but instead, this main Like myriad maddened horses thundering o'er the plain

"New voices come to me where'er I roam,
My heart too widens with its widening home
But song grows weaker, and the heart must break
For lack of voice, or fingers that can wake
The lyre's full answer, nay, its chords were all Too few to meet the growing spirit's call
The former songs seem little, yet no more
Can soul, hand, voice, with interchanging lore

Tell what the earth is saying unto me The secret is too great, I hear confusedly

"No farther will I travel once again

My brethren I will see, and that fair plain

Where I and Song were born There fresh voiced youth

Will pour my strains with all the early truth
Which now abides not in my voice and hands,
But only in the soul, the will that stands
Helpless to move My tribe remembering
Will cry 'Tis he' and run to greet me, welcoming"

The way was weary Many a date-palm grew, And shook out clustered gold against the blue, While Jubal, guided by the steadfast spheres, Sought the dear home of those first eager years, When, with fresh vision fed, the fuller will Took living outward shape in pliant skill,

For still he hoped to find the former things, And the warm gladness recognition brings His footsteps erred among the mazy woods And long illusive sameness of the floods, Winding and wandering Through far regions, strange With Gentile homes and faces, did he range, And left his music in their memory, And left at last, when nought besides would free His homeward steps from clinging hands and cries, The ancient lyre And now in ignorant eyes No sign remained of Jubal, Lamech's son, That mortal frame wherein was first begun The immortal life of song His withered brow Pressed over eyes that held no lightning now, His locks streamed whiteness on the hurrying air, The unresting soul had worn itself quite bare Of beauteous token, as the outworn might Of oaks slow dying, gaunt in summer's light His full deep voice toward thinnest treble ran, He was the rune-writ story of a man.

And so at last he neared the well-known land,
Could see the hills in ancient order stand
With friendly faces whose familiar gaze
Looked through the sunshine of his childish days,
Knew the deep-shadowed folds of hanging woods,
And seemed to see the self-same insect broods
Whirling and quivering o'er the flowers—to hear
The self-same cuckoo making distance near Yea, the dear Earth, with mother's constancy, Met and embraced him, and said, "Thou art he!
This was thy cradle, here my breast was thine,
Where feeding, thou didst all thy life entwine
With my sky-wedded life in heritage divine"

But wending ever through the watered plain,
Firm not to rest save in the home of Cain,
He saw dread Change, with dubious face and cold
That never kept a welcome for the old,
Like some strange heir upon the hearth, arise
Saying "This home is mine." He thought his eyes

Mocked all deep memories, as things new made,
Usurping sense, make old things shrink and fade
And seem ashamed to meet the staring day
His memory saw a small foot-trodden way,
His eyes a broad far stretching paven road
Bordered with many a tomb and fair abode,
The little city that once nestled low
As buzzing groups about some central glow, Spread like a murmuring crowd o'er plain and steep,

Or monster huge in heavy-breathing sleep
His heart grew faint, and tremblingly he sank
Close by the wayside on a weed-grown bank,
Not far from where a new-raised temple stood,
Sky-roofed, and fragrant with wrought cedar wood
The morning sun was high, his rays fell hot
On this hap-chosen, dusty, common spot,
On the dry withered grass and withered man
That wondrous frame where melody began
Lay as a tomb defaced that no eye cared to scan.

But while he sank far music reached his ear He listened until wonder silenced fear And gladness wonder, for the broadening stream Of sound advancing was his early dream, Brought like fulfilment of forgotten prayer, As if his soul, breathed out upon the air, Had held the invisible seeds of harmony Quick with the various strains of life to be He listened the sweet mingled difference With chaim alternate took the meeting sense, Then bursting like some shield-broad lily red, Sudden and near the trumpet's notes out-spread, And soon his eyes could see the metal flower, Shining upturned, out on the morning pour Its incense audible, could see a train From out the street slow-winding on the plain With lyres and cymbals, flutes and psalteries, While men, youths, maids, in concert sang to these With various throat, or in succession poured. Or in full volume mingled But one word

Ruled each recurrent rise and answering fall,

As when the multitudes adoring call

On some great name divine, their common soul,

The common need, love, joy, that knits them in one whole

The word was "Jubal!" "Jubal" filled the air
And seemed to ride aloft, a spirit there,
Creator of the quire, the full-fraught strain
That grateful rolled itself to him again
The aged man adust upon the bank—
Whom no eye saw—at first with rapture drank
The bliss of music, then, with swelling heart,
Felt, this was his own being's greater part,
The universal joy once born in him
But when the train, with living face and limb
And vocal breath, came nearer and more near,
The longing grew that they should hold him dear,
Him, Lamech's son, whom all their fathers knew,
The breathing Jubal—him, to whom their love was due

All was forgotten but the burning need
To claim his fuller self, to claim the deed
That lived away from him, and grew apart,
While he as from a tomb, with lonely heart,
Warmed by no meeting glance, no hand that pressed,
Lay chill amid the life his life had blessed What though his song should spread from man's small race

Out through the myriad worlds that people space,
And make the heavens one joy-diffusing quire?——
Still 'mid that vast would throb the keen desire
Of this poor aged flesh, this eventide,
This twilight soon in darkness to subside,
This little pulse of self that, having glowed
Through thrice three centuries, and divinely strowed
The light of music through the vague of sound,
Ached smallness still in good that had no bound

For no eye saw him, while with loving pride Each voice with each in praise of Jubal vied Must he in conscious trance, dumb, helpless lie
While all that ardent kindred passed him by?
His flesh cried out to live with living men
And join that soul which to the inward ken
Of all the hymning train was present there.
Strong passion's daring sees not aught to dare
The frost-locked starkness of his frame low-bent,
His voice's penury of tones long spent,
He felt not, all his being leaped in flame
To meet his kindred as they onward came Slackening and wheeling toward the temple's face

He rushed before them to the gluttering space,

And, with a strength that was but strong desire,

Cried, "I am Jubal, I! I made the lyre!"

The tones amid a lake of silence fell
Broken and strained, as if a feeble bell
Had tuneless pealed the triumph of a land
To listening crowds in expectation spanned.

Sudden came showers of laughter on that lake,
They spread along the train from front to wake
In one great storm of merriment, while he Shrank doubting whether he could Jubal be,
And not a dream of Jubal, whose rich vein
Of passionate music came with that dream-pain,
Wherein the sense slips off from each loved thing
And all appearance is mere vanishing
But ere the laughter died from out the rear,
Anger in front saw profanation near,
Jubal was but a name in each man's faith
For glorious power untouched by that slow death Which creeps with creeping time, this too, the spot,

And this the day, it must be crime to blot, Even with scoffing at a madman's he Jubal was not a name to wed with mockery.

Two rushed upon him two, the most devout In honour of great Jubal, thrust him out, And beat him with their flutes 'Twas little need,
He strove not, cried not, but with tottering speed,
As if the scorn and howls were driving wind
That urged his body, serving so the mind
Which could but shrink and yearn, he sought the screen

Of thorny thickets, and there fell unseen
The immortal name of Jubal filled the sky,
While Jubal lonely laid him down to die
He said within his soul, "This is the end
O'er all the earth to where the heavens bend
And hem men's travel, I have breathed my soul
I lie here now the remnant of that whole,
The embers of a life, a lonely pain,
As fai-off rivers to my thirst were vain,
So of my mighty years nought comes to me again.

"Is the day sinking? Softest coolness springs From something round me dewy shadowy wings Enclose me all around—no, not above—
Is moonlight there? I see a face of love,
Fair as sweet music when my heart was strong
Yea—art thou come again to me, great Song?"

The face bent over him like silver night

In long-remembered summers, that calm light

Of days which shine in firmaments of thought,

That past unchangeable, from change still wrought

And there were tones that with the vision blent

He knew not if that gaze the music sent,

Or music that calm gaze to hear, to see,

Was but one undivided ecstasy

The raptured senses melted into one,

And parting life a moment's freedom won

From in and outer, as a little child

Sits on a bank and sees blue heavens mild

Down in the water, and forgets its limbs,

And knoweth nought save the blue heaven that swims.

"Jubal," the face said, "I am thy loved Past, The soul that makes thee one from first to last I am the angel of thy life and death, Thy outbreathed being drawing its last breath. Am I not thine alone, a dear dead bride Who blest thy lot above all men's beside? Thy bride whom thou wouldst never change, nor take Any bride living, for that dead one's sake? Was I not all thy yearning and delight, Thy chosen search, thy senses' beauteous Right, Which still had been the hunger of thy frame In central heaven, hadst thou been still the same? Wouldst thou have asked aught else from any god-Whether with gleaming feet on earth he trod Or thundered through the skies—aught else for share Of mortal good, than in thy soul to bear The growth of song, and feel the sweet unrest Of the world's spring-tide in thy conscious breast? No, thou hadst grasped thy lot with all its pain, Nor loosed it any painless lot to gain

Where music's voice was silent, for thy fate Was human music's self incorporate Thy senses' keenness and thy passionate strife Were flesh of her flesh and her womb of life And greatly hast thou lived, for not alone With hidden raptures were her secrets shown. Burned within thee, as the purple light Of gems may sleep in solitary night. But thy expanding joy was still to give. And with the generous air in song to live. Feeding the wave of ever-widening bliss Where fellowship means equal perfectness And on the mountains in thy wandering Thy feet were beautiful as blossomed spring, That turns the leafless wood to love's glad home. For with thy coming Melody was come This was thy lot, to feel, create, bestow. And that immeasurable life to know From which the fleshly self falls shrivelled, dead. A seed primeval that has forests bred

It is the glory of the heritage

Thy life has left, that makes thy outcast age

Thy limbs shall lie dark, tombless on this sod,

Because thou shinest in man's soul, a god,

Who found and gave new passion and new joy

That nought but Earth's destruction can destroy

Thy gifts to give was thine of men alone

'Twas but in giving that thou couldst atone

For too much wealth amid their poverty "—

The words seemed melting into symphony,
The wings upbore him, and the gazing song
Was floating him the heavenly space along,
Where mighty harmonies all gently fell
Through veiling vastness, like the far-off bell,
Till, ever onward through the choral blue,
He heard more faintly and more faintly knew,
Quitting mortality, a quenched sun-wave,
The All creating Presence for his grave

AGATHA

Come with me to the mountain, not where rocks

Soar harsh above the troops of hurrying pines,

But where the earth spreads soft and rounded breasts

To feed her children, where the generous hills

Lift a green isle betwixt the sky and plain

To keep some Old World things aloof from change

Here too 'tis hill and hollow new-born streams

With sweet enforcement, joyously compelled

Like laughing children, hurry down the steeps,

And make a dimpled chase athwart the stones,

Pine woods are black upon the heights, the slopes

Are green with pasture, and the bearded corn

Fringes the blue above the sudden ridge
A little world whose round horizon cuts
This isle of hills with heaven for a sea,
Save in clear moments when southwestward gleams

The monks of old chose here their still retreat,
And called it by the Blessed Virgin's name,
Sancta Maria, which the peasant's tongue,
Speaking from out the parent's heart that turns
All loved things into little things, has made
Sanct Margen,—Holy little Mary, dear
As all the sweet home things she smiles upon,
The children and the cows, the apple-trees,
The cart, the plough, all named with that caress
Which feigns them little, easy to be held,
Familiar to the eyes and hand and heart.
What though a Queen? She puts her crown away
And with her little Boy wears common clothes,
Caring for common wants, remembering

That day when good Saint Joseph left his work To marry her with humble trust sublime

The monks are gone, their shadows fall no more Tall-frocked and cowled athwart the evening fields At milking-time, their silent corridors Are turned to homes of bare-armed, aproned men, Who toil for wife and children But the bells. Pealing on high from two quaint convent towers, Still ring the Catholic signals, summoning To grave remembrance of the larger life That bears our own, like perishable fruit Upon its heaven-wide branches At their sound The shepherd boy far off upon the hill, The workers with the saw and at the forge, The triple generation round the hearth,— Grandames and mothers and the flute-voiced girls,-Fall on their knees and send forth prayerful cries To the kind Mother with the little Boy, Who pleads for helpless men against the storm,

Lightning and plagues and all terrific shapes Of power supreme Within the prettiest hollow of these hills, Just as you enter it, upon the slope Stands a low cottage neighboured cheerily By running water, which, at farthest end Of the same hollow, turns a heavy mill, And feeds the pasture for the miller's cows, Blanchi and Nageli, Veilchen and the rest. Matrons with faces as Griselda mild. Coming at call And on the farthest height A little tower looks out above the pines Where mounting you will find a sanctuary Open and still, without, the silent crowd Of heaven-planted, incense-mingling flowers, Within, the altar where the Mother sits 'Mid votive tablets hung from far-off years By peasants succoured in the peril of fire, Fever, or flood, who thought that Mary's love, Willing but not omnipotent, had stood

Between their lives and that dread power which slew Their neighbour at their side The chapel bell Will melt to gentlest music ere it reach That cottage on the slope, whose garden gate Has caught the rose-tree boughs and stands agar, So does the door, to let the sunbeams in, For in the slanting sunbeams angels come And visit Agatha who dwells within,-Old Agatha, whose cousins Kate and Nell Are housed by her in Love and Duty's name, They being feeble, with small withered wits, And she believing that the higher gift Was given to be shared So Agatha Shares her one room, all neat on afternoons, As if some memory were sacred there And everything within the four low walls An honoured relic

One long summer's day

An angel entered at the rose-hung gate,

With skirts pale blue, a brow to quench the pearl,

Hair soft and blonde as infants', plenteous As hers who made the wavy lengths once speak The grateful worship of a rescued soul The angel paused before the open door To give good day "Come in," said Agatha I followed close, and watched and listened there The angel was a lady, noble, young, Taught in all seemliness that fits a court, All lore that shapes the mind to delicate use, Yet quiet, lowly, as a meek white dove That with its presence teaches gentleness Men called her Countess Linda, little girls In Freiburg town, orphans whom she caressed. Said Mamma Linda yet her years were few, Her outward beauties all in budding-time. Her virtues the aroma of the plant That dwells in all its being, root, stem, leaf. And waits not ripeness

"Sit," said Agatha Her cousins were at work in neighbouring homes

But yet she was not lonely, all things round Seemed filled with noiseless vet responsive life. As of a child at breast that gently clings Not sunlight only or the breathing flowers Or the swift shadows of the birds and bees. But all the household goods, which, polished fair By hands that cherished them for service done, The wooden beams Shone as with glad content Dark and yet friendly, easy to be reached, Bore three white crosses for a speaking sign, The walls had little pictures hung a-row, Telling the stories of Saint Ursula, And Saint Elizabeth, the lowly queen, And on the bench that served for table too, Skirting the wall to save the narrow space, There lay the Catholic books, inherited From those old times when printing still was young With stout-limbed promise, like a sturdy boy And in the farthest corner stood the bed Where o'er the pillow hung two pictures wreathed

With fresh-plucked ivy one the Virgin's death, And one her flowering tomb, while high above She smiling bends and lets her girdle down For ladder to the soul that cannot trust In life which outlasts burial Agatha Sat at her knitting, aged, upright, slim, And spoke her welcome with mild dignity She kept the company of kings and queens And mitred saints who sat below the feet Of Francis with the ragged frock and wounds, And Rank for her meant Duty, various, Yet equal in its worth, done worthily Command was service, humblest service done By willing and discerning souls was glory Fair Countess Linda sat upon the bench, Close fronting the old knitter, and they talked

With sweet antiphony of young and old

You like our valley, lady? I am glad

You thought it well to come again But rest— The walk is long from Master Michael's inn

COUNTESS LINDA

Yes, but no walk is prettier

AGATHA

It is true

There lacks no blessing here, the waters all
Have virtues like the garments of the Lord,
And heal much sickness, then, the crops and cows
Flourish past speaking, and the garden flowers,
Pink, blue, and purple, 'tis a joy to see How they yield honey for the singing bees
I would the whole world were as good a home

And you are well off, Agatha?—your friends Left you a certain bread is it not so? 58 AGATHA

AGATHA

Not so at all, dear lady I had nought,
Was a poor orphan, but I came to tend Here in this house, an old afflicted pair,
Who wore out slowly, and the last who died,
Full thirty years ago, left me this roof
And all the household stuff It was great wealth,
And so I had a home for Kate and Nell

COUNTESS LINDA

But how, then, have you earned your daily bread These thirty years?

AGATHA

O, that is easy earning We help the neighbours, and our bit and sup Is never failing they have work for us In house and field, all sorts of odds and ends, Patching and mending, turning o'er the hay,

Holding sick children,—there is always work,
And they are very good,—the neighbours are Weigh not our bits of work with weight and scale,
But glad themselves with giving us good shares
Of meat and drink, and in the big farm-house
When cloth comes home from weaving, the good wife

Cuts me a piece,—this very gown,—and says
"Here, Agatha, you old maid, you have time
To pray for Hans who is gone soldiering
The saints might help him, and they have much to do,
"Twere well they were besought to think of him"
She spoke half jesting, but I pray, I pray
For poor young Hans I take it much to heart
That other people are worse off than I,—
I ease my soul with praying for them all

COUNTESS LINDA

That is your way of singing, Agatha,

Just as the nightingales pour forth sad songs,

And when they reach men's ears they make men's

Feel the more kindly

AGATHA

Nay, I cannot sing
My voice is hoarse, and off I think my prayers
Are foolish, feeble things, for Christ is good
Whether I pray or not,—the Virgin's heart
Is kinder far than mine, and then I stop
And feel I can do nought towards helping men,
Till out it comes, like tears that will not hold,
And I must pray again for all the world
'Tis good to me,—I mean the neighbours are To Kate and Nell too I have money saved
To go on pilgrimage the second time

And do you mean to go on pilgrimage With all your years to carry, Agatha?

AGATHA

The years are light, dear lady 'tis my sins

Are heavier than I would And I shall go

All the way to Einsiedeln with that load

I need to work it off

COUNTESS LINDA

 $\label{eq:What sort of sins,}$ Dear Agatha i $\,$ I think they must be small

AGATHA

Nay, but they may be greater than I know,
'Tis but dim light I see by So I try
All ways I know of to be cleansed and pure
I would not sink where evil spirits are There's perfect goodness somewhere so I strive

COUNTESS LINDA

You were the better for that pılgrımage

12

You made before? The shrine is beautiful, And then you saw fresh country all the way

AGATHA

Yes, that is true. And ever since that time
The world seems greater, and the Holy Church
More wonderful The blessed pictures all,
The heavenly images with books and wings,
Are company to me through the day and night

The time! the time! It never seemed far back,

Only to father's father and his kin

That lived before him But the time stretched out

After that pilgrimage I seemed to see

Far back, and yet I knew time lay behind,

As there are countries lying still behind

The highest mountains, there in Switzerland

O, it is great to go on pilgrimage!

COUNTESS LINDA

Perhaps some neighbours will be pilgrims too, And you can start together in a band

AGATHA

Not from these hills people are busy here,

The beasts want tendance One who is not missed

Can go and pray for others who must work

I owe it to all neighbours, young and old,

For they are good past thinking,—lads and girls

Given to mischief, merry naughtiness,

Quiet it, as the hedgehogs smooth their spines,

For fear of hurting poor old Agatha.

This pretty why, the cherubs in the sky

Look young and merry, and the angels play

On eitherns, lutes, and all sweet instruments

I would have young things merry See the Lord!

A little baby playing with the birds,

And how the Blessed Mother smiles at him

AGATHA

Nay, nay, I shall be called, and I shall go Right willingly I shall get helpless, blind,
Be like an old stalk to be plucked away
The garden must be cleared for young spring plants
'Tis home beyond the grave, the most are there,
All those we pray to, all the Church's lights,—
And poor old souls are welcome in their rags
One sees it by the pictures Good Saint Ann,
The Virgin's mother, she is very old,
And had her troubles with her husband too
Poor Kate and Nell are younger far than I,
But they will have this roof to cover them
I shall go willingly; and willingness Makes the yoke easy and the burden light

When you go southward in your pilgrimage,

Come to see me in Freiburg, Agatha

Where you have friends you should not go to inns

AGATHA

Yes, I will gladly come to see you, lady
And you will give me sweet hay for a bed,
And in the morning I shall wake betimes
And start when all the birds begin to sing

You wear your smart clothes on the pilgrimage, Such pretty clothes as all the women here Keep by them for their best—a velvet cap And collar golden-broidered? They look well On old and young alike

AGATHA

Nay, I have none,—
Never had better clothes than these you see
Good clothes are pretty, but one sees them best
When others wear them, and I somehow thought
'Twas not worth while I had so many things
More than some neighbours, I was partly shy
Of wearing better clothes than they, and now
I am so old and custom is so strong
'Twould hurt me sore to put on finery

Your grey hair is a crown, dear Agatha

Shake hands, good-bye The sun is going down,

And I must see the glory from the hill.

I stayed among those hills, and oft heard more
Of Agatha I liked to hear her name,
As that of one half grandame and half saint,

Uttered with reverent playfulness The lads And younger men all called her mother, aunt, Or granny, with their pet diminutives, And bade their lasses and their brides behave Right well to one who surely made a link 'Twixt faulty folk and God by loving both Not one but counted service done by her, Asking no pay save just her daily bread At feasts and weddings, when they passed in groups Along the vale, and the good country wine. Being vocal in them, made them quire along In quaintly mingled mirth and piety, They fain must jest and play some friendly trick On three old maids, but when the moment came Always they bated breath and made their sport Gentle as feather-stroke, that Agatha Might like the waking for the love it showed Their song made happy music 'mid the hills, For nature tuned their race to harmony, And poet Hans, the tailor, wrote them songs

That grew from out their life, as crocuses

From out the meadow's moistness 'Twas his song

They oft sang, wending homeward from a feast,—
The song I give you — It brings in, you see,
Their gentle jesting with the three old maids

Midnight by the chapel bell!

Homeward, homeward all, farewell!

I with you, and you with me,

Miles are short with company

Heart of Mary, bless the way,

Keep us all by might and day!

Moon and stars at feast with night Now have drunk their fill of light Home they hurry, making time Trot apace, like merry rhyme.

> Heart of Mary, mystic rose, Send us all a sweet repose!

Swiftly through the wood down hill,
Run till you can hear the mill
Toni's ghost is wandering now,
Shaped just like a snow-white cow
Heart of Mary, morning star,
Ward off danger, near or far!

Toni's wagon with its load

Fell and crushed him in the road

'Twixt these pine-trees Never fear!

Give a neighbour's ghost good cheer

Holy Babe, our God and Brother,

Bind us fast to one another!

Hark! the mill is at its work,

Now we pass beyond the murk

To the hollow, where the moon

Makes her silvery afternoon

Good Saint Joseph, faithful spouse,

Help us all to keep our vows!

Here the three old maidens dwell,
Agatha and Kate and Nell,
See, the moon shines on the thatch,
We will go and shake the latch
Heart of Mary, cup of joy,
Give us mith without alloy!

Hush, 'tis here, no noise, sing low,
Rap with gentle knuckles—so!
Like the little tapping birds,
On the door, then sing good words

Meek Saint Anna, old and fair,
Hallow all the snow-white hair!

Little maidens old, sweet dreams!

Sleep one sleep till morning beams

Mothers ye, who help us all,

Quick at hand, if ill befall

Holy Gabriel, lily-laden,

Bless the aged mother-maiden!

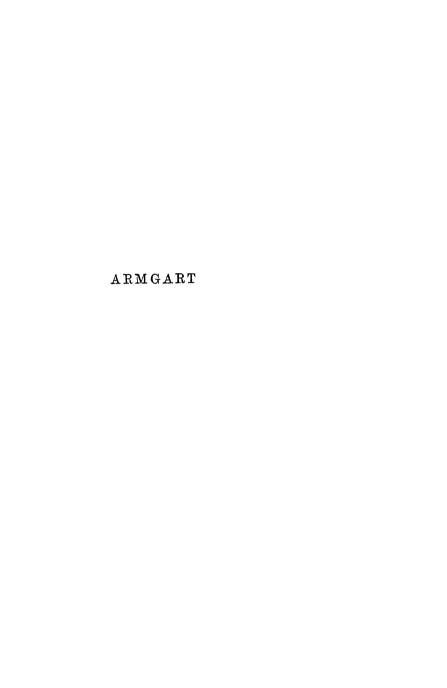

Forward, mount the broad hillside
Swift as soldiers when they ride
See the two towers how they peep,
Round-capped giants, o'er the steep

Heart of Mary, by thy sorrow,

Keep us upright through the morrow!

Now they rise quite suddenly
Like a man from bended knee,
Now Saint Margen is in sight,
Here the roads branch off—good night!

Heart of Mary, by thy grace,
Give us with the saints a place!

SCENE I

A Salon lit with lamps and ornamented with green plants. An open piano, with many scattered sheets of music. Bronze busts of Beethoven and Gluck on pillars opposite each other. A small table spread with supper. To Fraulein Walpurga, who advances with a slight lameness of gart from an adjoining room, enters Graf Dornberg at the opposite door in a travelling dress.

GRAF

Good moining, Fraulein !

WALPURGA

What, so soon returned?

I feared your mission kept you still at Prague.

GRAF

But now arrived! You see my travelling dress
I hurried from the panting, roaring steam
Like any courier of embassy
Who hides the fiends of war within his bag

WALPURGA

You know that Armgart sings to-night?

GRAF

Has sung !

'Tis close on half-past nine The Orphcus

Lasts not so long Her spirits—were they high?

Was Leo confident?

He only feared

Some tameness at beginning Let the house Once ring, he said, with plaudits, she is safe

GRAF

And Armgart?

WALPURGA

She was stiller than her wont
But once, at some such trivial word of mine,
As that the highest prize might yet be won
By her who took the second—she was roused
"For me," she said, "I triumph or I fail
I never strove for any second prize"

Poor human-hearted singing-bird! She bears Cæsar's ambition in her delicate breast, And nought to still it with but quivering song!

WALPURGA.

I had not for the world been there to-night

Unreasonable dread oft chills me more Than any reasonable hope can warm

GRAF

You have a rare affection for your cousin, As tender as a sister's

WALPURGA

Nay, I fear

My love is little more than what I felt For happy stories when I was a child She fills my life that would be empty else, And lifts my nought to value by her side

GRAF

She is reason good enough, or seems to be,
Why all were born whose being ministers
To her completeness—Is it most her voice
Subdues us? or her instinct exquisite,
Informing each old strain with some new grace

Which takes our sense like any natural good lOr most her spiritual energy That sweeps us in the current of her song l

49

I know not Losing either, we should lose

That whole we call our Armgart For herself,

She often wonders what her life had been

Without that voice for channel to her soul

She says, it must have leaped through all her limbs—

Made her a Mænad—made her snatch a brand
And fire some forest, that her rage might mount
In crashing roaring flames through half a land, Leaving her still and patient for a while
"Poor wretch!" she says, of any murderess—
"The world was cruel, and she could not sing
I carry my revenges in my throat,
I love in singing, and am loved again"

Mere mood! I cannot yet believe it more.

Too much ambition has unwomaned her,

But only for a while Her nature hides

One half its treasures by its very wealth,

Taxing the hours to show it

WALPURGA

Hark! she comes

Enter Leo with a wreath in his hand, helding the door ope for Armgart, who wears a furred mantle and hoo She is followed by her maid, carrying an armful a bouguets

TEO

Place for the queen of song!

GRAF (advancing towards ARMGART, who throws of her hood and mantle, and shows a star of brilliani in her hair)

A triumph, then

You will not be a niggard of your joy

And chide the eagerness that came to share it

O kind! you hastened your return for me
I would you had been there to hear me sing!
Walpurga, kiss me never tremble more
Lest Armgart's wing should fail her. She has found

This night the region where her rapture breathes—
Pouring her passion on the air made live
With human heart-throbs Tell them, Leo, tell them

How I outsang your hope and made you cry
Because Gluck could not hear me That was folly!
He sang, not listened every linked note
Was his immortal pulse that stirred in mine,
And all my gladness is but part of him
Give me the wreath

[She crowns the bust of Gluck

LEO (sardonically)

Ay, ay, but mark you this

It was not part of him—that trill you made

In spite of me and reason!

ARMGART

You were wrong—
Dear Leo, you were wrong the house was held
As if a storm were listening with delight
And hushed its thunder

LEO

Will you ask the house
To teach you singing? Quit your Orpheus then,
And sing in farces grown to operas,
Where all the prurience of the full-fed mob
Is tickled with melodic impudence
Jerk forth burlesque bravuras, square your arms,
Akimbo with a tavern wench's grace,

And set the splendid compass of your voice

To lyric jigs Go to ' I thought you meant

To be an artist—lift your audience

To see your vision, not trick forth a show

To please the grossest taste of grossest numbers

ARMGART (taking up LEO'S hand, and kissing it)

Pardon, good Leo, I am penitent
I will do penance—sing a hundred trills
Into a deep-dug grave, then burying them
As one did Midas' secret, rid myself
Of naughty exultation—O I trilled
At nature's prompting, like the nightingales
Go scold them, dearest Leo

I stop my ears

Nature in Gluck inspiring Orpheus,

Has done with nightingales Are bird-beaks lips?

GRAF

Truce to rebukes! Tell us — who were not there—

The double drama how the expectant house Took the first notes

WALPURGA (turning from her occupation of decking the room with the flowers)

Yes, tell us all, dear Armgart

Did you feel tremors? Leo, how did she look?

Was there a cheer to greet her?

Not a sound

She walked like Orpheus in his solitude,

And seemed to see nought but what no man saw

'Twas famous Not the Schroeder-Devrient

Had done it better But your blessed public

Had never any judgment in cold blood—

Thinks all perhaps were better otherwise, Till rapture brings a reason

ARMGART (scornfully)

I knew that !

The women whispered, "Not a pietty face!"

The men, "Well, well, a goodly length of limb

She bears the chiton "—It were all the same
Were I the Virgin Mother and my stage
The opening heavens at the Judgment day
Gossips would peep, jog elbows, rate the price
Of such a woman in the social mart
What were the drama of the world to them,
Unless they felt the hell-prong?

Peace, now, peace 1

I hate my phrases to be smothered o'er With sauce of paraphrase, my sober tune Made bass to rambling trebles, showering down In endless demi-semi-quavers

ARMGART (taking a bon-bon from the table, uplifting it before putting it into her mouth, and turning away)

Mum!

GRAF

Yes, tell us all the glory, leave the blame

WALPURGA

You first, dear Leo—what you saw and heard, Then Armgart—she must tell us what she felt

Well! The first notes came clearly firmly forth
And I was easy, for behind those rills
I knew there was a fountain I could see
The house was breathing gently, heads were still,

Parrot opinion was struck meekly mute,

And human hearts were swelling Armgart stood

As if she had been new-created there

And found her voice which found a melody

The minx! Gluck had not written, nor I taught

Orpheus was Armgart, Armgart Orpheus

Well, well, all through the scena I could feel

The silence tremble now, now poise itself

With added weight of feeling, till at last

Delight o'er-toppled it The final note

Had happy drowning in the unloosed roar

That surged and ebbed and ever surged again,

Till expectation kept it pent awhile

Ere Orpheus returned Pfui! He was changed

My demi-god was pale, had downcast eyes

That quivered like a bride's who fain would send

Backward the rising tear

ARMGART (advancing, but then turning away, as if to check her speech)

I was a bride,

As nuns are at their spousals

Ay, my lady,

That moment will not come again applause

May come and plenty, but the first, first draught 1

(Snaps his fingers)

Music has sounds for it—I know no words

I felt it once myself when they performed

My overture to Sintram Well! 'tis strange,

We know not pain from pleasage in such jey

ARMGART (turning quickly)

O, pleasure has cramped dwelling in our souls, And when full Being comes must call on pain To lend it liberal space

WALPURGA

I hope the house

Kept a reserve of plaudits I am jealous

Lest they had dulled themselves for coming good

That should have seemed the better and the best

No, 'twas a revel where they had but quaffed

Their opening cup I thank the artist's star,

His audience keeps not sober once afire,

They flame towards climax, though his merit hold

But fairly even

ARMGART (her hand on LEO'S arm)

Now, now, confess the truth.
I sang still better to the very end—

All save the trill, I give that up to you,

To bite and growl at. Why, you said yourself

Each time I sang, it seemed new doors were oped

That you might hear heaven clearer

LEO (shaking his finger)

I was raving

ARMGART

I am not glad with that mean vanity

Which knows no good beyond its appetite

Full feasting upon praise! I am only glad,

Being praised for what I know is worth the praise,

Glad of the proof that I myself have part

In what I worship! At the last applause—

Seeming a roar of tropic winds that tossed

The handkerchiefs and many-coloured flowers,

Falling like shattered rainbows all around—

Think you I felt myself a prima donna?

No, but a happy spiritual star

Such as old Dante saw, wrought in a rose
Of light in Paradise, whose only self
Was consciousness of glory wide-diffused,
Music, life, power—I moving in the midst
With a sublime necessity of good

LEO (with a shrug)

I thought it was a prima donna came

Within the side-scenes, ay, and she was proud

To find the bouquet from the royal box

Enclosed a jewel-case, and proud to wear

A star of brilliants, quite an earthly star,

Valued by thalers Come, my lady, own

Ambition has five senses, and a self

That gives it good warm lodging when it sinks

Plump down from ecstasy

Own it? why not?

Am I a sage whose words must fall like seed

Silently buried toward a far-off spring?

I sing to living men and my effect

Is like the summer's sun, that ripens corn

Or now or never — If the world brings me gifts,

Gold, incense, myrrh—'twill be the needful sign

That I have stirred it as the high year stirs

Before I sink to winter

Ecstasies

Are short—most happily! We should but lose
Were Armgart borne too commonly and long
Out of the self that chaims us Could I choose,
She were less apt to soar beyond the reach
Of woman's foibles, innocent vanities,
Fondness for trifles like that pretty star
Twinkling beside her cloud of ebon hair

ARMGART (taking out the gem and looking at it)

This little star! I would it were the seed

Of a whole Milky Way, if such bright shimmer
Were the sole speech men told their rapture with At Armgart's music Shall I turn aside
From splendours which flash out the glow I make,

And live to make, in all the chosen breasts

Of half a Continent? No, may it come,

That splendour! May the day be near when men

Think much to let my horses draw me home,
And new lands welcome me upon their beach,
Loving me for my fame. That is the truth
Of what I wish, nay, yearn for. Shall I lie?
Pretend to seek obscurity—to sing
In hope of disregard? A vile pretence!
And blasphemy besides. For what is fame.
But the benignant strength of One, transformed.
To joy of Many? Tributes, plaudits come.
As necessary breathing of such joy,
And may they come to me!

The auguries

Point clearly that way Is it no offence

To wish the eagle's wing may find repose,

As feebler wings do, in a quiet nest?

Or has the taste of fame already turned

The Woman to a Muse

LEQ (going to the table)

Who needs no supper

I am her priest, ready to eat her share Of good Walpurga's offerings

WALPURGA

Armgart, come

Graf, will you come?

GRAF

Thanks, I play truant here,

And must retrieve my self-indulged delay But will the Muse receive a votary At any hour to-morrow?

Any hour

After rehearsal, after twelve at noon

SCENE II

The same Salon, morning ARMGART seated, in her bonnet and walking dress The GRAF standing near her against the prano

Armgart, to many minds the first success
Is reason for desisting I have known
A man so versatile, he tried all arts,
But when in each by turns he had achieved
Just so much mastery as made men say,

"He could be king here if he would," he threw
The lauded skill aside He hates, said one,
The level of achieved pre-eminence,
He must be conquering still, but others said—

ARMGART

The truth, I hope he had a meagre soul,

Holding no depth where love could root itself

"Could if he would?" True greatness ever wills—

It lives in wholeness if it live at all,

And all its strength is knit with constancy

GRAF

He used to say himself he was too sane

To give his life away for excellence

Which yet must stand, an ivory statuette,

Wrought to perfection through long lonely years,

Huddled in the mart of mediocrities

He said, the very finest doing wins

The admiring only, but to leave undone,

Promise and not fulfil, like buried youth,
Wins all the envious, makes them sigh your name
As that fair Absent, blameless Possible,
Which could alone impassion them, and thus,
Serene negation has free gift of all,
Panting achievement struggles, is denied,
Or wins to lose again What say you, Armgart?
Truth has rough flavours if we bite it through,
I think this sarcasm came from out its core
Of bitter irony

It is the truth

Mean souls select to feed upon. What then?

Their meanness is a truth, which I will spurn

The praise I seek lives not in envious breath

Using my name to blight another's deed

I sing for love of song and that renown

Which is the spreading act, the world-wide share,

Of good that I was born with Had I failed—

Well, that had been a truth most pitiable
I cannot bear to think what life would be
With high hope shrunk to endurance, stunted aims
Like broken lances ground to eating-knives,
A self sunk down to look with level eyes
At low achievement, doomed from day to day
To distaste of its consciousness But I——

GRAF

Have won, not lost, in your decisive throw

And I too glory in this issue, yet,

The public verdict has no potency

To sway my judgment of what Armgart is

My pure delight in her would be but sullied,

If it o'erflowed with mixture of men's praise

And had she failed, I should have said, "The pearl

Remains a pearl for me, reflects the light

With the same fitness that first charmed my gaze—

Is worth as fine a setting now as then"

ARMGART (rising)

O you are good! But why will you rehearse
The talk of cynics, who with insect eyes
Explore the secrets of the rubbish-heap?
I hate your epigrams and pointed saws
Whose narrow truth is but broad falsity
Confess your friend was shallow

I confess

Life is not rounded in an epigram,

And saying aught, we leave a world unsaid

I quoted, merely to shape forth my thought

That high success has terrors when achieved—

Like preternatural spouses whose dire love

Hangs perilous on slight observances

Whence it were possible that Armgart crowned

Might turn and listen to a pleading voice,

Though Armgart striving in the race was deaf

You said you daied not think what life had been Without the stamp of eminence, have you thought How you will bear the poise of eminence With dread of sliding? Paint the future out As an unchecked and glorious career, 'Twill grow more strenuous by the very love You bear to excellence, the very fate Of human powers, which tread at every step On possible verges

ARMGART

I accept the peril
I choose to walk high with sublimer dread
Rather than crawl in safety And, besides,
I am an artist as you are a noble
I ought to bear the burthen of my rank.

GRAF

Such parallels, dear Armgart, are but snares

To catch the mind with seeming argument—

Small baits of likeness 'mid disparity

Men rise the higher as their task is high,

The task being well achieved A woman's rank

Lies in the fulness of her womanhood

Therein alone she is royal

ARMGART

Yes, I know

The oft-taught Gospel "Woman, thy desire
Shall be that all superlatives on earth
Belong to men, save the one highest kind—
To be a mother Thou shalt not desire
To do aught best save pure subservience
Nature has willed it so!" O blessed Nature!
Let her be arbitress, she gave me voice
Such as she only gives a woman child,
Best of its kind, gave me ambition too,
That sense transcendent which can taste the joy
Of swaying multitudes, of being adored
For such achievement, needed excellence,

As man's best art must wait for, or be dumb
Men did not say, when I had sung last night,
"'Twas good, nay, wonderful, considering
She is a woman"—and then turn to add,
"Tenor or baritone had sung her songs Better, of course—she's but a woman spoiled"
I beg your pardon, Graf, you said it

GRAF

No !

How should I say it, Armgart? I who own
The magic of your nature-given art
As sweetest effluence of your womanhood
Which, being to my choice the best, must find
The best of utterance But this I say
Your fervid youth begules you, you mistake
A strain of lyric passion for a life
Which in the spending is a chronicle
With ugly pages Trust me, Armgart, trust me,
Ambition exquisite as yours which soais

Toward something quintessential you call fame,
Is not robust enough for this gross world
Whose fame is dense with false and foolish breath
Ardour, a-twin with nice refining thought,
Prepares a double pain Pain had been saved,
Nay, purer glory reached, had you been throned
As woman only, holding all your art
As attribute to that dear sovereignty—
Concentering your power in home delights
Which penetrate and purify the world

What, leave the opera with my part ill-sung
While I was warbling in a drawing-room?
Sing in the chimney-corner to inspire
My husband reading news? Let the world hear
My music only in his morning speech
Less stammering than most honourable men's?
No! tell me that my song is poor, my art
The piteous feat of weakness aping strength—

That were fit proem to your argument

Till then, I am an artist by my birth—

By the same warrant that I am a woman

Nay, in the added rarer gift I see

Supreme vocation—if a conflict comes,

Perish—no, not the woman, but the joys

Which men make narrow by their narrowness

O I am happy! The great masters write

For women's voices, and great Music wants me!

I need not crush myself within a mould

Of theory called Nature—I have room

To breathe and grow unstunted

Armgart, hear me

I meant not that our talk should hurry on
To such collision. Foresight of the ills
Thick shadowing your path, drew on my speech Beyond intention True, I came to ask
A great renunciation, but not this

Towards which my words at first perversely strayed, As if in memory of their earlier suit, Forgetful

Armgart, do you remember too? the suit

Had but postponement, was not quite disdained—

Was told to wait and learn—what it has learned—

A more submissive speech

ARMGART (with some agitation)

Then it forgot

Its lesson cruelly As I remember,
"Twas not to speak save to the artist crowned,
Nor speak to her of casting off her crown

GRAF

Nor will it, Armgart I come not to seek

Any renunciation save the wife's,

Which turns away from other possible love

Future and worthier to take his love

Who asks the name of husband He who sought

Armgart obscure, and heard her answer, "Wait"—
May come without suspicion now to seek Armgart applauded

ARMGART (turning towards him)

Yes, without suspicion Of aught save what consists with faithfulness In all expressed intent Forgive me, Graf-I am ungrateful to no soul that loves me— To you most grateful Yet the best intent Grasps but a living present which may grow Like any unfledged bird. You are a noble. And have a high career, just now you said 'Twas higher far than aught a woman seeks Beyond mere womanhood You claim to be More than a husband, but could not rejoice That I were more than wife What follows, then? You choosing me with such persistency As is but stretched-out rashness, soon must find Our marriage asks concessions, asks resolve

To share renunciation or demand it

Either we both renounce a mutual ease,

As in a nation's need both man and wife

Do public services, or one of us

Must yield that something else for which each lives

Besides the other Men are reasoners

That premiss of superior claims perforce

Urges conclusion—" Armgart, it is you"

GRAF

But if I say I have considered this

With strict prevision, counted all the cost

Which that great good of loving you demands—
Questioned my stores of patience, half-resolved

To live resigned without a bliss whose threat

Touched you as well as me—and finally,

With impetus of undivided will

Returned to say, "You shall be free as now,

Only accept the refuge, shelter, guard,

My love will give your freedom "—then your words Are hard accusal

Well, I accuse myself

My love would be accomplice of your will

GRAF

Again-my will?

ARMGART

O your unspoken will Your silent tolerance would torture me, And on that rack I should deny the good I yet believed in

Whom I refuse to love !

No, I will live alone and pour my pain
With passion into music, where it turns
To what is best within my better self
I will not take for husband one who deems
The thing my soul acknowledges as good—
The thing I hold worth striving, suffering for,
To be a thing dispensed with easily,
Or else the idol of a mind infirm

Armgart, you are ungenerous, you strain
My thought beyond its mark Our difference
Lies not so deep as love—as union
Through a mysterious fitness that transcends
Formal agreement

It hes deep enough

To chafe the union If many a man

Refrains, degraded, from the utmost right,

Because the pleadings of his wife's small fears

Are little serpents biting at his heel,—

How shall a woman keep her steadfastness

Beneath a frost within her husband's eyes

Where coldness scorches ² Graf, it is your sorrow

That you love Armgart Nay, it is her sorrow

That she may not love you

Woman, it seems,

Has enviable power to love or not According to her will

ARMGART

She has the will-

I have—who am one woman—not to take Disloyal pledges that divide her will.

The man who marries me must wed my Art—
Honour and cherish it, not tolerate

GRAF

The man is yet to come whose theory

Will weigh as nought with you against his love

Whose theory will plead beside his love

GRAF

Himself a singer, then? who knows no life Out of the opera books, where tenor parts Are found to suit him?

ARMGART

You are bitter, Graf Forgive me, seek the woman you deserve,

Without the bliss of singing to the world, And feeling all my world respond to me

GRAF

May it be lasting Then, we two must part?

ARMGART

I thank you from my heart for all Farewell!

SCENE III -A YEAR LATER

The same Salon Walpurga is standing looking towards the window with an air of uneasiness Doctor Grahn

DOCTOR

Where is my patient, Fraulein?

н

WALPURGA

Fled ! escaped !

Gone to rehearsal Is it dangerous !

No, no, her throat is cured I only came

To hear her try her voice Had she yet sung?

WALPURGA

No, she had meant to wait for you She said,
"The Doctor has a right to my first song"
Her gratitude was full of little plans,
But all were swept away like gathered flowers
By sudden storm She saw this opera bill—
It was a wasp to sting her she turned pale,
Snatched up her hat and mufflers, said in haste,
"I go to Leo—to rehearsal—none Shall sing Fidelio to-night but me!"
Then rushed down-stairs

DOCTOR (looking at his watch)

And this, not long ago?

Barely an hour

I will come again

Returning from Charlottenburg at one

WALPURGA

Doctor, I feel a strange presentiment Are you quite easy?

She can take no harm
"Twas time for her to sing her throat is well
It was a fierce attack, and dangerous,

I had to use strong remedies, but—well!

At one, dear Fraulein, we shall meet again

SCENE IV -Two Hours Later

Walpurga starts up, looking towards the door Armgart enters, followed by Leo She throws herself on a chair which stands with its back towards the door, speechless, not seeming to see anything Walpurga casts a questioning terrified look at Leo He shrugs his shoulders, and lifts up his hands behind Armgart, who sits like a helpless image, while Walpurga takes off her hat and mantle

Armgait, dear Armgart (kneeling and taking her hands), only speak to me,

Your poor Walpurga O your hands are cold

Clasp mine, and warm them! I will kiss them warm

(ARMGART looks at her an instant, then draws away her hands, and, turning aside, buries her face against the back of the chair, Walpurga rising and standing near)

(DOCTOR GRAHN enters)

News! stirring news to-day! wonders come thick

ARMGART (starting up at the first sound of his voice, and speaking vehemently)

Yes, thick, thick ' and you have murdered it '
Murdered my voice—poisoned the soul in me,
And kept me living
You never told me that your cruel cures
Were clogging films—a mouldy, dead'ning blight—
A lava-mud to crust and bury me,
Yet hold me living in a deep, deep tomb,
Crying unheard for ever! O your cures
Are devils' triumphs—you can rob, maim, slay,
And keep a hell on the other side your cure

Where you can see your victim quivering

Between the teeth of torture—see a soul

Made keen by loss—all anguish with a good

Once known and gone! (Turns and sinks back on her chair)

O misery, misery!

You might have killed me, might have let me sleep

After my happy day and wake—not here!

In some new unremembered world,—not here,

Where all is faded, flat—a feast broke off—

Banners all meaningless—exulting words

Dull, dull—a drum that lingers in the air

Beating to melody which no man hears

DOCTOR (after a moment's silence)

A sudden check has shaken you, poor child!

All things seem livid, tottering to your sense,

From inward tumult Stricken by a threat

You see your terrors only Tell me, Leo

'Tis not such utter loss

(LEO, with a shrug, goes quietly out)

The freshest bloom

Merely, has left the fruit, the fruit itself

Is numed, withered, is a thing to hide

Away from scorn or pity O you stand

And look compassionate now, but when Death came

With mercy in his hands, you hindered him

I did not choose to live and have your pity

You never told me, never gave me choice

To die a singer, lightning-struck, unmaimed,

Or live what you would make me with your cures—

A self accursed with consciousness of change,

A mind that lives in nought but members lopped,

A power turned to pain—as meaningless

As letters fallen asunder that once made

A hymn of rapture O, I had meaning once,

Like day and sweetest air What am I now?

The millionth woman in superfluous herds. Why should I be, do, think? 'Tis thistle-seed, That grows and grows to feed the rubbish-heap Leave me alone!

Well, I will come again, Send for me when you will, though but to rate me That is medicinal—a letting blood

ARMGART

O there is one physician, only one, $\label{eq:who} \mbox{Who cures and never spoils} \quad \mbox{Him I shall send for ,}$ He comes readily

DOCTOR (to WALPURGA)

One word, dear Fraulein

SCENE V

ARMGART, WALPURGA

ARMGART

Walpurga, have you walked this morning?

WALPURGA

ARMGART

Go, then, and walk, I wish to be alone

WALPURGA

I will not leave you

ARMGART

Will not, at my wish?

WALPURGA.

Will not, because you wish it Say no more, But take this draught

ARMGART

The Doctor gave it you?

It is an anodyne Put it away

He cured me of my voice, and now he wants

To cure me of my vision and resolve—

Drug me to sleep that I may wake again

Without a purpose, abject as the rest

To bear the yoke of life He shall not cheat me

Of that fresh strength which anguish gives the soul,

The inspiration of revolt, ere rage

Slackens to faltering Now I see the truth

WALPURGA (setting down the glass)

Then you must see a future in your reach,

With happiness enough to make a dower For two of modest claims

O you intone

That chant of consolation wherewith ease Makes itself easier in the sight of pain

WALPURGA

No, I would not console you, but rebuke

ARMGART

That is more bearable Forgive me, dear
Say what you will. But now I want to write

(She rises and moves towards a table)

WALPURGA

I say then, you are simply fevered, mad,
You cry aloud at horrors that would vanish
If you would change the light, throw into shade

The loss you aggrandise, and let day fall
On good remaining, nay on good refused
Which may be gain now Did you not reject
A woman's lot more brilliant, as some held,
Than any singer's? It may still be yours
Graf Dornberg loved you well

ARMGART

Not me, not me

He loved one well who was like me in all
Save in a voice which made that All unlike
As diamond is to charcoal O, a man's love!

Think you he loves a woman's inner self Aching with loss of loveliness?—as mothers
Cleave to the palpitating pain that dwells Within their misformed offspring?

But the Graf

Chose you as simple Armgart—had preferred

That you should never seek for any fame

But such as matrons have who rear great sons

And therefore you rejected him, but now—

ARVGART

Ay, now—now he would see me as I am,

(She takes up a hand-muror)

Russet and songless as a missel-thrush
An ordinary gul—a plain brown gul,
Who, if some meaning flash from out her words,
Shocks as a disproportioned thing—a Will
That, like an arm astretch and broken off,
Has nought to hurl—the torso of a soul
I sang him into love of me my song
Was consecration, lifted me apart
From the crowd chiselled like me, sister forms,
But empty of divineness Nay, my charm
Was half that I could win fame yet renounce!
A wife with glory possible absorbed Into her husband's actual

For shame!

Armgart, you slander him What would you say

If now he came to you and asked again

That you would be his wife?

ARMGART

No, and thrice no!

It would be pitying constancy, not love,

That brought him to me now I will not be

A pensioner in marriage Sacraments

Are not to feed the paupers of the world

If he were generous—I am generous too

Proud, Armgart, but not generous

Say no more

He will not know until-

WALPURGA

He knows already

ARMGART (quickly)

Is he come back?

WALPURGA

Yes, and will soon be here

The Doctor had twice seen him and would go

From hence again to see him

ARMGART

Well, he knows

It is all one

WALPURGA

What if he were outside?

I hear a footstep in the ante-room

ARMGART (raising herself and assuming calmness)
Why let him come, of course I shall behave
Like what I am, a common personage
Who looks for nothing but civility
I shall not play the fallen heroine,
Assume a tragic part and throw out cues
For a beseeching lover

Some one raps

(Goes to the door)

A letter—from the Graf

ARMGART

Then open it
(Walpurga still offers it)

Nay, my head swims Read it I cannot see (Walfurga opens it, reads and pauses)

Read it Have done! No matter what it is

WALPURGA (reads in a low, hesitating voice)

"I am deeply moved—my heart is rent, to hear of your illness and its cruel result, just now communicated to me by Dr Grahn—But surely it is possible that this result may not be permanent—For youth such as yours, Time may hold in store something more than resignation—who shall say that it does not hold renewal?—I have not dared to ask admission to you in the hours of a recent shock, but I cannot depart on a long mission without tendering my sympathy and my farewell—I start this evening for the Caucasus, and thence I proceed to India, where I am intrusted by the Government with business which may be of long duration"

(Walpurga sits down dejectedly)

ARMGART (after a slight shudder, bitterly)

The Graf has much discretion I am glad He spares us both a pain, not seeing me What I like least is that consoling hope—
That empty cup, so neatly ciphered "Time,"
Handed me as a cordial for despair
(Slowly and dreamily) Time—what a word to fling as charity!

Bland neutral word for slow, dull-beating pain—

Days, months, and years !—If I would wait for them!

(She takes up her hat and puts it on, then wraps her mantle round her Walfurga leaves the room)

Why, this is but beginning (WALP reenters) Kiss me, dear

I am going now—alone—out—for a walk
Say you will never wound me any more
With such cajolery as nurses use
To patients amorous of a crippled life
Flatter the blind I see

WALPURGA

Well, I was wrong

In haste to soothe, I snatched at flickers merely Beheve me, I will flatter you no more

Bear witness, I am calm I read my lot As soberly as if it were a tale Writ by a creeping feuilletonist and called "The Woman's Lot a Tale of Everyday" A middling woman's, to impress the world With high superfluousness, her thoughts a crop Of chick-weed errors or of pot-herb facts, Smiled at like some child's drawing on a slate "Genteel?" "O yes, gives lessons, not so good As any man's would be, but cheaper far " "Pietty?" "No, yet she makes a figure fit For good society Poor thing, she sews Both late and early, turns and alters all To suit the changing mode Some widower Might do well, marrying her, but in these days! Well, she can somewhat eke her narrow gains

By writing, just to furnish her with gloves

And droschkies in the rain They print her things

Often for charity "—O a dog's life!

A harnessed dog's, that draws a little cart

Voted a nuisance! I am going now

WALPURGA

Not now, the door is locked

Give me the key !

WALPURGA

Locked on the outside Gretchen has the key She is gone on errands.

ARMGART

What, you dare to keep me

Your prisoner?

WALPURGA

And have I not been yours?

Your wish has been a bolt to keep me in

Perhaps that middling woman whom you paint

With far-off scorn

I paint what I must be! What is my soul to me without the voice
That gave it freedom?—gave it one grand touch
And made it nobly human?—Prisoned now,
Prisoned in all the petty mimicries
Called woman's knowledge, that will fit the world
As doll-clothes fit a man I can do nought
Better than what a million women do—
Must drudge among the crowd and feel my life
Beating upon the world without response,
Beating with passion through an insect's horn

That moves a millet-seed laboriously

If I would do it !

WALPURGA (coldly)

And why should you not?

ARMGART (turning quickly)

Because Heaven made me royal—wrought me out
With subtle finish towards pre-eminence,
Made every channel of my soul converge
To one high function, and then flung me down,
That breaking I might turn to subtlest pain
An inborn passion gives a rebel's right
I would rebel and die in twenty woilds
Sooner than bear the yoke of thwarted life,
Each keenest sense turned into keen distaste,
Hunger not satisfied but kept alive
Breathing in languor half a century
All the world now is but a rack of threads
To twist and dwarf me into pettiness

And basely feigned content, the placid mask Of women's misery

WALPURGA (indignantly)

Ay, such a mask As the few born like you to easy joy, Cradled in privilege, take for natural On all the lowly faces that must look Upward to you! What revelation now Shows you the mask or gives presentiment Of sadness hidden? You who every day These five years saw me limp to wait on you, And thought the order perfect which gave me, The girl without pretension to be aught, A splendid cousin for my happiness To watch the night through when her brain was fired With too much gladness-listen, always listen To what she felt, who having power had right To feel exorbitantly, and submerge The souls around her with the poured-out flood

Of what must be ere she were satisfied!

That was feigned patience, was it? Why not love,
Love nurtured even with that strength of self

Which found no room save in another's life?

O such as I know joy by negatives,
And all their deepest passion is a pang

Till they accept their pauper's heritage,
And meekly live from out the general store

Of joy they were born stripped of I accept—

Nay, now would sooner choose it than the wealth

Of natures you call royal, who can live

In mere mock knowledge of their fellows' woe,

Thinking their smiles may heal it

ARMGART (tremulously)

Nay, Walpurga,

I did not make a palace of my joy

To shut the world's truth from me All my good

Was that I touched the world and made a part

In the world's dower of beauty, strength, and bliss,

It was the glumpse of consciousness divine
Which pours out day and sees the day is good
Now I am fallen dark, I sit in gloom,
Remembering bitterly Yet you speak truth,
I wearied you, it seems, took all your help
As cushioned nobles use a weary serf,
Not looking at his face

O, I but stand

As a small symbol for a mighty sum—
The sum of claims unpaid for myriad lives,
I think you never set your loss beside
That mighty deficit—Is your work gone—
The prouder queenly work that paid itself
And yet was overpaid with men's applause?
Are you no longer chartered, privileged,
But sunk to simple woman's penury,
To ruthless Nature's chary average—
Where is the rebel's right for you alone?

Noble rebellion lifts a common load,
But what is he who flings his own load off
And leaves his fellows toiling? Rebel's right?
Say rather, the deserter's O, you smiled
From your clear height on all the million lots
Which yet you brand as abject

I was blind

With too much happiness—true vision comes Only, it seems, with sorrow—Were there one
This moment near me, suffering what I feel,
And needing me for comfort in her pang—
Then it were worth the while to live, not else

WALPURGA

One—near you—why, they throng! you hardly stir
But your act touches them We touch afar
For did not swarthy slaves of yesterday
Leap in their bondage at the Hebrews' flight,

Which touched them through the thrice millennial dark ?

But you can find the sufferer you need With touch less subtle

Who has need of me i

WALPURGA

Love finds the need it fills But you are hard

Is it not you, Walpurga, who are hard? You humoured all my wishes till to-day, When fate has blighted me

WALPURGA

You would not hear

The "chant of consolation" words of hope
Only embittered you Then hear the truth—

A lame girl's truth, whom no one ever praised For being cheerful. "It is well," they said "Were she cross-grained she could not be endured" A word of truth from her had startled you, But you—you claimed the universe, nought less Than all existence working in sure tracks Towards your supremacy The wheels might scathe A myriad destinies—nay, must perforce, But yours they must keep clear of, just for you The seething atoms through the firmament Must bear a human heart—which you had not! For what is it to you that women, men. Plod, faint, are weary, and espouse despair Of aught but fellowship? Save that you spurn To be among them ? Now, then, you are lame-Maimed, as you said, and levelled with the crowd Call it new birth—birth from that monstrous Self Which, smiling down upon a race oppressed. Says, "All is good, for I am throned at ease" Dear Armgart—nay, you tremble—I am cruel

O no! hark! Some one knocks Come in!—come in!

(Enter Leo)

See, Gretchen let me in I could not rest Longer away from you

ARMGART

Sit down, dear Leo

Walpurga, I would speak with him alone
(Walpurga goes out)

LEO (hesitatingly)

You mean to walk?

ARMGART

No, I shall stay within

(She takes off her hat and mantle, and sits down immediately After a pause, speaking in a subdued tone to Leo)

How old are you?

Threescore and five

That's old

I never thought till now how you have lived They hardly ever play your music?

LEO (raising his eyebrows and throwing out his lip)

Schubert too wrote for silence half his work

Lay like a frozen Rhine till summers came

That warmed the grass above him Even so!

His music lives now with a mighty youth

Do you think yours will live when you are dead ?

LEO

Pfui! The time was, I drank that home-brewed wine

And found it heady, while my blood was young

Now it scarce warms me Tipple it as I may,

I am sober still, and say "My old friend Leo,

Much grain is wasted in the world and rots.,

Why not thy handful?"

ARMGART

Strange! since I have known you
Till now I never wondered how you lived
When I sang well—that was your jubilee
But you were old already

LEO

Yes, child, yes
Youth thinks itself the goal of each old life,
Age has but travelled from a far-off time
Just to be ready for youth's service Well!
It was my chief delight to perfect you

Good Leo! You have lived on little joys
But your delight in me is crushed for ever
Your pains, where are they now? They shaped intent
Which action frustrates, shaped an inward sense
Which is but keen despair, the agony
Of highest vision in the lowest pit

LEO

Nay, nay, I have a thought keep to the stage, To drama without song, for you can actWho knows how well, when all the soul is poured.

Into that sluce alone?

I know, and you

The second or third best in tragedies

That cease to touch the fibre of the time

No, song is gone, but nature's other gift,

Self-judgment, is not gone — Song was my speech,

And with its impulse only, action came

Song was the battle's onset, when cool purpose

Glows into rage, becomes a warring god

And moves the limbs with miracle — But now—

O, I should stand hemmed in with thoughts and rules—

Say "This way passion acts," yet never feel
The might of passion How should I declaim?
As monsters write with feet instead of hands
I will not feed on doing great tasks ill,
Dull the world's sense with mediocrity,

K

And live by trash that smothers excellence
One gift I had that ranked me with the best—
The secret of my frame—and that is gone
For all life now I am a broken thing
But silence there! Good Leo, advise me now
I would take humble work and do it well—
Teach music, singing—what I can—not here,
But in some smaller town where I may bring
The method you have taught me, pass your gift
To others who can use it for delight
You think I can do that?

(She pauses with a sob in her voice)

LEO

Yes, yes, dear child!

And it were well, perhaps, to change the place—
Begin afresh as I did when I left
Vienna with a heart half broken

ARMGART (roused by surprise)

You?

LEO

Well, it is long ago But I had lost—
No matter! We must bury our dead joys
And live above them with a living world
But whither, think you, you would like to go?

To Fieiburg

LEO

 $\label{eq:constraints} \mbox{In the Breisgau?} \quad \mbox{And why there?}$ It is too small

Walpurga was born there,
And loves the place She quitted it for me

These five years past Now I will take her there Dear Leo, I will bury my dead joy

Mothers do so, bereaved, then learn to love Another's living child

O, it is hard
To take the little corpse, and lay it low,
And say, "None misses it but me"
She sings
I mean Paulina sings Fidelio,
And they will welcome her to-night

Well, well,

'Tis better that our griefs should not spread fai

HOW LISA LOVED THE KING

Six hundred years ago, in Dante's time,

Before his cheek was furrowed by deep rhyme—

When Europe, fed afresh from Eastern story,

Was like a garden tangled with the glory

Of flowers hand-planted and of flowers air-sown,

Climbing and trailing, budding and full-blown,

Where purple bells are tossed amid pink stars,

And springing blades, green troops in innocent wars,

Crowd every shady spot of teeming earth,

Making invisible motion visible birth—

Six hundred years ago, Palermo town

Kept holiday A deed of great renown,

A high revenge, had freed it from the yoke
Of hated Frenchmen, and from Calpe's rock
To where the Bosporus caught the earlier sun,
'Twas told that Pedro, King of Aragon,
Was welcomed master of all Sicily,
A royal knight, supreme as kings should be
In strength and gentleness that make high chivalry

Spain was the favourite home of knightly grace,
Where generous men rode steeds of generous race,
Both Spanish, yet half Arab, both inspired
By mutual spirit, that each motion fired
With beauteous response, like minstrelsy
Afresh fulfilling fresh expectancy
So when Palermo made high festival,
The joy of matrons and of maidens all
Was the mock terror of the tournament,
Where safety, with the glimpse of danger blent,
Took exaltation as from epic song,
Which greatly tells the pains that to great life belong

And in all eyes King Pedro was the king
Of cavaliers as in a full-gemmed ring
The largest ruby, or as that bright star
Whose shining shows us where the Hyads are His the best jennet, and he sat it best,
His weapon, whether tilting or in rest,
Was worthiest watching, and his face once seen
Gave to the promise of his royal mien
Such rich fulfilment as the opened eyes
Of a loved sleeper, or the long-watched rise
Of vernal day, whose joy o'er stream and meadow files

But of the maiden forms that thick enwreathed The broad piazza and sweet witchery breathed, With innocent faces budding all arow From balconies and windows high and low, Who was it felt the deep mysterious glow, The impregnation with supernal fire Of young ideal love—transformed desire,

Whose passion is but worship of that Best

Taught by the many-mingled creed of each young breast?

'Twas gentle Lisa, of no noble line, Child of Bernardo, a rich Florentine, Who from his merchant-city hither came To trade in drugs, yet kept an honest fame, And had the virtue not to try and sell He loved his riches well, Drugs that had none But loved them chiefly for his Lisa's sake, Whom with a father's care he sought to make The bride of some true honourable man — Of Perdicone (so the rumour ran), Whose birth was higher than his fortunes were, For still your trader likes a mixture fair Of blood that hurries to some higher strain Than reckoning money's loss and money's gain And of such mixture good may surely come Lords' scions so may learn to cast a sum,

A trader's grandson bear a well-set head,

And have less conscious manners, better bred,

Nor, when he tries to be polite, be rude instead

'Twas Perdicone's friends made overtures To good Bernardo, so one dame assures Her neighbour dame who notices the youth Fixing his eyes on Lisa, and in truth Eves that could see her on this summer day Might find it hard to turn another way She had a pensive beauty, yet not sad, Rather, like minor cadences that glad The hearts of little birds amid spring boughs, And oft the trumpet or the joust would rouse Pulses that gave her cheek a finer glow, Parting her lips that seemed a mimic bow By chiselling Love for play in coral wrought, Then quickened by him with the passionate thought, The soul that trembled in the lustrous night Of slow long eyes Her body was so slight,

It seemed she could have floated in the sky,

And with the angelic choir made symphony,

But in her cheek's rich tinge, and in the dark

Of darkest hair and eyes, she bore a mark

Of kinship to her generous mother earth,

The fervid land that gives the plumy palm-trees birth.

She saw not Perdicone, her young mind
Dreamed not that any man had ever pined
For such a little simple maid as she
She had but dreamed how heavenly it would be
To love some hero noble, beauteous, great,
Who would live stories worthy to narrate,
Like Roland, or the warriors of Troy,
The Cid, or Amadis, or that fair boy
Who conquered everything beneath the sun,
And somehow, some time, died at Babylon
Fighting the Moors For heroes all were good
And fair as that archangel who withstood

The Evil One, the author of all wrong—
That Evil One who made the French so strong,
And now the flower of heroes must be he
Who drove those tyrants from dear Sicily,
So that her maids might walk to vespers tranquilly

Young Lisa saw this hero in the king,
And as wood-lilies that sweet odours bring Might dream the light that opes their modest eyne
Was lily-odoured,—and as rites divine,
Round turf-laid altars, or 'neath roofs of stone,
Draw sanctity from out the heart alone
That loves and worships, so the miniature
Perplexed of her soul's world, all virgin pure,
Filled with heroic virtues that bright form,
Raona's royalty, the finished norm
Of horsemanship—the half of chivalry
For how could generous men avengers be,
Save as God's messengers on coursers fleet?—
These, scouring earth, made Spain with Syria meet

In one self world where the same right had sway,
And good must grow as grew the blessed day
No more, great Love his essence had endued
With Pedro's form, and entering subdued
The soul of Lisa, fervid and intense,
Proud in its choice of proud obedience
To hardship glorified by perfect reverence

Sweet Lisa homeward carried that dire guest,
And in her chamber through the hours of rest
The darkness was alight for her with sheen
Of arms, and plumed helm, and bright between Their commoner gloss, like the pure living spring
'Twixt porphyry lips, or living bird's bright wing
'Twixt golden wires, the glances of the king
Flashed on her soul, and waked vibrations there
Of known delights love-mixed to new and rare
The impalpable dream was turned to breathing flesh,

Chill thought of summer to the warm close mesh

Of sunbeams held between the citron-leaves, Clothing her life of life O, she believes That she could be content if he but knew (Her poor small self could claim no other due) How Lisa's lowly love had highest reach Of winged passion, whereto winged speech Would be scorched remnants left by mounting flame Though, had she such lame message, were it blame To tell what greatness dwelt in her, what rank She held in loving a Modest maidens shrank From telling love that fed on selfish hope, But love, as hopeless as the shattering song Wailed for loved beings who have joined the throng Nav, but she was weak-Of mighty dead ones Knew only prayers and ballads—could not speak With eloquence save what dumb creatures have, That with small cries and touches small boons crave

She watched all day that she might see him pass With knights and ladies, but she said, "Alas! Though he should see me, it were all as one

He saw a pigeon sitting on the stone

Of wall or balcony—some coloured spot

His eye just sees, his mind regardeth not

I have no music-touch that could bring nigh

My love to his soul's hearing—I shall die,

And he will never know who Lisa was—

The trader's child, whose soaring spirit rose

As hedge-born aloe-flowers that rarest years disclose

"For were I now a fair deep-breasted queen
A-horseback, with blonde hair, and tunic green
Gold bordered, like Costanza, I should need
No change within to make me queenly there,
For they the royal-hearted women are
Who nobly love the noblest, yet have grace
For needy suffering lives in lowliest place,
Carrying a choicer sunlight in their smile,
The heavenliest ray that pitieth the yile

My love is such, it cannot choose but soar

Up to the highest, yet for evermore,

Though I were happy, throned beside the king,

I should be tender to each little thing

With hurt warm breast, that had no speech to tell

Its inward pang, and I would soothe it well

With tender touch and with a low soft moan

For company my dumb love-pang is lone,

Prisoned as topaz beam within a rough-garbed stone"

So, inward-wailing, Lisa passed her days
Each night the August moon with changing phase
Looked broader, harder on her unchanged pain,
Each noon the heat lay heavier again
On her despair, until her body frail
Shiank like the snow that watchers in the vale
See narrowed on the height each summer morn,
While her dark glance burnt larger, more forlorn,
As if the soul within her all on fire
Made of her being one swift funeral pyre

Father and mother saw with sad dismay

The meaning of their riches melt away

For without Lisa what would sequins buy?

What wish were left if Lisa were to die?

Through her they cared for summers still to come,

Else they would be as ghosts without a home

In any flesh that could feel glad desire

They pay the best physicians, never tire

Of seeking what will soothe her, promising

That aught she longed for, though it were a thing

Hard to be come at as the Indian snow,

Or roses that on alpine summits blow—

It should be hers She answers with low voice,
She longs for death alone—death is her choice,

Death is the King who never did think scorn,

But rescues every meanest soul to sorrow born

Yet one day, as they bent above her bed

And watched her in brief sleep, her drooping head

Turned gently, as the thirsty flowers that feel Some moist revival through their petals steal, And little flutterings of her lids and lips Told of such dreamy joy as sometimes dips A skyey shadow in the mind's poor pool She oped her eyes, and turned their dark gems full Upon her father, as in utterance dumb Of some new prayer that in her sleep had come "What is it, Lisa?" "Father, I would see Minuccio, the great singer, bring him me" For always, night and day, her unstilled thought, Wandering all o'er its little world, had sought How she could reach, by some soft pleading touch, King Pedro's soul, that she who loved so much Dying, might have a place within his mind-A little grave which he would sometimes find And plant some flower on 1t-some thought, some memory kind

Till in her dream she saw Minuccio Touching his viola, and chanting low A strain that, falling on her brokenly,

Seemed blossoms lightly blown from off a tree,

Each burthened with a word that was a scent—

Raona, Lisa, love, death, tournament,

Then in her dream she said, "He sings of me—

Might be my messenger, ah, now I see

The king is listening——" Then she awoke,

And, missing her dear dream, that new born longing spoke

She longed for music—that was natural,

Physicians said it was medicinal,

The humours might be schooled by true consent

Of a fine tenor and fine instrument,

In brief, good music, mixed with doctor's stuff,

Apollo with Asklepios—enough!

Minuccio, entreated, gladly came

(He was a singer of most gentle fame—

A noble, kindly spirit, not elate

That he was famous, but that song was great—

Would sing as finely to this suffering child As at the court where princes on him smiled) Gently he entered and sat down by her, Asking what sort of strain she would prefer— The voice alone, or voice with viol wed, Then, when she chose the last, he preluded With magic hand, that summoned from the strings Aerial spirits, rare yet vibrant wings That fanned the pulses of his listener, And waked each sleeping sense with blissful stir Her cheek already showed a slow faint blush, But soon the voice, in pure full liquid rush, Made all the passion, that till now she felt, Seem but cool waters that in warmer melt. Finished the song, she prayed to be alone With kind Minuccio, for her faith had grown To trust him as if missioned like a priest With some high grace, that when his singing ceased Still made him wiser, more magnanimous Than common men who had no genius

So laying her small hand within his palm. She told him how that secret glorious harm Of loftiest loving had befallen her, That death, her only hope, most bitter were, If when she died her love must perish too As songs unsung and thoughts unspoken do. Which else might live within another breast She said, "Minuccio, the grave were rest, If I were sure, that lying cold and lone, My love, my best of life, had safely flown And nestled in the bosom of the king. See, 'tis a small weak bird, with unfledged wing But you will carry it for me secretly, And bear it to the king, then come to me And tell me it is safe, and I shall go Content, knowing that he I love my love doth know

Then she wept silently, but each large tear Made pleading music to the inward ear Of good Minuccio "Lisa, trust in me,"

He said, and kissed her fingers loyally,

"It is sweet law to me to do your will,

And ere the sun his round shall thrice fulfil,

I hope to bring you news of such rare skill

As amulets have, that aches in trusting bosoms still"

He needed not to pause and first devise

How he should tell the king, for in nowise

Were such love-message worthily bested

Save in fine verse by music renderèd

He sought a poet-friend, a Siennese,

And "Mico, mine," he said, "full oft to please

Thy whim of sadness I have sung thee strains

To make thee weep in verse pow pay my pains,

And write me a canzòn divinely sad,

Sinlessly passionate and meekly mad

With young despair, speaking a maiden's heart

Of fifteen summers, who would fain depart

From ripening life's new-urgent mystery—
Love-choice of one too high her love to be—
But cannot yield her breath till she has poured
Her strength away in this hot bleeding word
Telling the secret of her soul to her soul's lord"

Said Mico, "Nay, that thought is poesy,
I need but listen as it sings to me
Come thou again to-morrow" The third day,
When linked notes had perfected the lay,
Minuccio had his summons to the court
To make, as he was wont, the moments short
Of ceremonious dinner to the king
This was the time when he had meant to bring Melodious message of young Lisa's love
He waited till the air had ceased to move
To ringing silver, till Falernian wine
Made quickened sense with quietude combine,
And then with passionate descant made each ear incline

Love, thou didst see me, light as morning's breath,
Roaming a garden in a joyous error,
Laughing at chases vain, a happy child,
Till of thy countenance the alluving terror
In majesty from out the blossoms smiled,
From out their life seeming a beauteous Death

O Love, who so didst choose me for thine own,
Taking this little isle to thy great sway,
See now, it is the honour of thy throne
That what thou gavest perish not away,
Nor leave some sweet remembrance to atone
By life that will be for the brief life gone
Hear, ere the shroud o'er these frail limbs be thrown—
Since every king is vassal unto thee,
My heart's lord needs must listen loyally—
O tell him I am waiting for my Death!

Tell him, for that he hath such royal power 'Twere hard for him to think how small a thing,

How slight a sign, would make a wealthy down

For one like me, the bride of that pale king

Whose bed is mine at some swift-nearing hour

Go to my lord, and to his memory bring

That happy birthday of my sorrowing

When his large glance made meaner gazers glad,

Entering the bannered lists 'tuas then I had The wound that laid me in the arms of Death

Tell him, O Love, I am a lowly mard,
No more than any little knot of thyme
That he with careless foot may often tread,
Yet lowest fragrance oft will mount sublime
And cleave to things most high and hallowed,
As doth the fragrance of my life's springtime,
My lowly love, that soaring seeks to climb
Within his thought, and make a gentle bliss,
More blissful than if mine, in being his
So shall I live in him and rest in Death

The strain was new It seemed a pleading cry, And yet a rounded perfect melody, Making grief beauteous as the tear-filled eyes Of little child at little miseries Trembling at first, then swelling as it iose, Like rising light that broad and broader grows, It filled the hall, and so possessed the air That not one breathing soul was present there, Though dullest, slowest, but was quivering In music's grasp, and forced to hear her sing But most such sweet compulsion took the mood Of Pedro (tired of doing what he would) Whether the words which that strange meaning bore Were but the poet's feigning or aught more, Was bounden question, since their aim must be At some imagined or true royalty He called Minuccio and bade him tell What poet of the day had writ so well, For though they came behind all former rhymes, The verses were not bad for these poor times

"Monsignor, they are only three days old," Minuccio said, "but it must not be told How this song grew, save to your royal ear" Eager, the king withdrew where none was near, And gave close audience to Minuccio, Who meetly told that love-tale meet to know The king had features pliant to confess The presence of a manly tenderness-Son, father, brother, lover, blent in one, In fine harmonic exaltation-The spirit of religious chivalry He listened, and Minuccio could see The tender, generous admiration spread O'er all his face, and glorify his head With royalty that would have kept its rank Though his brocaded robes to tatters shrank He answered without pause, "So sweet a maid, In nature's own insignia arrayed, Though she were come of unmixed trading blood That sold and bartered ever since the Flood,

Would have the self-contained and single worth
Of radiant jewels born in darksome earth
Raona were a shame to Sicily,
Letting such love and tears unhonoused be Hasten, Minuccio, tell her that the king
To-day will surely visit her when vespers ring"

Joyful, Minuccio bore the joyous word,
And told at full, while none but Lisa heard,
How each thing had befallen, sang the song,
And like a patient nuise who would prolong
All means of soothing, dwelt upon each tone,
Each look, with which the mighty Aragon
Marked the high worth his royal heart assigned
To that dear place he held in Lisa's mind
She listened till the draughts of pure content Through all her limbs like some new being went—

Life, not recovered, but untried before, From out the growing world's unmeasured store Of fuller, better, more divinely mixed
"Twas glad reverse—she had so firmly fixed
To die, already seemed to fall a veil
Shrouding the inner glow from light of senses pale

Her parents wondering see her half arise—
Wondering, rejoicing, see her long dark eyes
Brimtul with clearness, not of 'scaping tears,
But of some light ethereal that enspheres
Their orbs with calm, some vision newly learnt
Where strangest fires erewhile had blindly burnt
She asked to have her soft white robe and band
And coral ornaments, and with her hand
She gave her locks' dark length a backward fall,
Then looked intently in a mirror small,
And feared her face might perhaps displease the king,

"In truth," she said, "I am a tiny thing,
I was too bold to tell what could such visit bring"

Meanwhile the king, revolving in his thought That virgin passion, was more deeply wrought Co chivalrous pity, and at vesper bell, With careless mien which hid his purpose well, Went forth on horseback, and as if by chance Passing Bernardo's house, he paused to glance At the fine garden of this wealthy man, This Tuscan trader turned Palermitan But, presently dismounting, chose to walk Amid the trellises, in gracious talk With this same trader, deigning even to ask If he had yet fulfilled the father's task Of marrying that daughter whose young charms Himself, betwixt the passages of arms, Noted admiringly "Monsignor, no, She is not married, that were little woe, Since she has counted barely fifteen years. But all such hopes of late have turned to fears, She droops and fades, though for a space quite brief-Scarce three hours past—she finds some strange relief "

The king avised "'Twere dole to all of us,

The world should lose a maid so beautous,

Let me now see her, since I am her liege lord,

Her spirits must wage war with death at my strong word"

In such half-serious playfulness, he wends,
With Lisa's father and two chosen friends,
Up to the chamber where she pillowed sits
Watching the opened door, that now admits
A presence as much better than her dreams,
As happiness than any longing seems
The king advanced, and, with a reverent kiss
Upon her hand, said, "Lady, what is this?
You, whose sweet youth should others' solace be,
Pierce all our hearts, languishing piteously
We pray you, for the love of us, be cheered,
Nor be too reckless of that life, endeared
To us who know your passing worthness,
And count your blooming life as part of our life's bliss"

Those words, that touch upon her hand from him Whom her soul worshipped, as far seraphim Worship the distant glory, brought some shame Quivering upon her cheek, yet thrilled her frame With such deep joy she seemed in paradise, In wondering gladness, and in dumb surprise That bliss could be so blissful—then she spoke—"Signor, I was too weak to bear the yoke, The golden yoke of thoughts too great for me, That was the ground of my infirmity

But now, I pray your grace to have belief

That I shall soon be well, nor any more cause grief"

The king alone perceived the covert sense
Of all her words, which made one evidence
With her pure voice and candid loveliness,
That he had lost much honour, honouring less
That message of her passionate distress
He stayed beside her for a little while
With gentle looks and speech, until a smile

As placed as a ray of early morn

On opening flower-cups o'er her lips was borne

When he had left her, and the tidings spread

Through all the town how he had visited

The Tuscan trader's daughter, who was sick,

Men said, it was a royal deed and catholic

And Lisa? she no longer wished for death,
But as a poet, who sweet verses saith
Within his soul, and joys in music there,
Nor seeks another heaven, nor can bear
Disturbing pleasures, so was she content,
Breathing the life of grateful sentiment
She thought no maid betrothed could be m blest,

For treasure must be valued by the test
Of highest excellence and rarity,
And her dear joy was best as best could be,
There seemed no other crown to her delight
Now the high loved one saw her love aright

Thus her soul thriving on that exquisite mood,

Spread like the May-time all its beauteous good

O'er the soft bloom of neck, and arms, and cheek,

And strengthened the sweet body, once so weak,

Until she rose and walked, and, like a bird

With sweetly rippling throat, she made her spring

joys heard

The king, when he the happy change had seen,
Trusted the ear of Constance, his fair queen,
With Lisa's innocent secret, and conferred
How they should jointly, by their deed and word,
Honour this maiden's love, which, like the prayer
Of loyal hermits, never thought to share
In what it gave The queen had that chief grace
Of womanhood, a heart that can embrace
All goodness in another woman's form,
And that same day, ere the sun lay too warm
On southern terraces, a messenger
Informed Bernardo that the royal pair

Would straightway visit him and celebrate
Their gladness at his daughter's happier state,
Which they were fain to see—Soon came the king
On horseback, with his barons, heralding
The advent of the queen in courtly state,
And all, descending at the garden gate,
Streamed with their feathers, velvet, and brocade,
Through the pleached alleys, till they, pausing, made
A lake of splendour 'mid the aloes grey—
When, meekly facing all their proud array,
The white-robed Lisa with her parents stood,
As some white dove before the gorgeous brood
Of dapple-breasted birds born by the Colchian flood

The king and queen, by gracious looks and speech,
Encourage her, and thus their courtiers teach
How this fair morning they may courtliest be
By making Lisa pass it happily
And soon the ladies and the barons all
Draw her by turns, as at a festival

Made for her sake, to easy, gay discourse, And compliment with looks and smiles enforce, A joyous hum is heard the gardens round, Soon there is Spanish dancing and the sound Of minstrel's song, and autumn fruits are pluckt, Till mindfully the king and queen conduct Lisa apart to where a trellised shade Made pleasant resting Then King Pedro said— "Excellent maiden, that rich gift of love Your heart hath made us, hath a worth above All royal treasures, nor is fitly met Save when the grateful memory of deep debt Lies still behind the outward honours done And as a sign that no oblivion Shall overflood that faithful memory, We while we live your cavalier will be, Nor will we ever arm ourselves for fight, Whether for struggle dire or brief delight Of warlike feigning, but we first will take The colours you ordain, and for your sake

Charge the more bravely where your emblem is,
Nor will we ever claim an added bliss
To our sweet thoughts of you save one sole kiss
But there still rests the outward honour meet
To mark your worthiness, and we entreat
That you will turn your ear to proffered vows
Of one who loves you, and would be your spouse
We must not wrong yourself and Sicily
By letting all your blooming years pass by Unmated you will give the world its due
From beauteous maiden and become a matron true"

Then Lisa, wrapt in virgin wonderment

At her ambitious love's complete content,

Which left no further good for her to seek

Than love's obedience, said with accent meek—

"Monsignor, I know well that were it known

To all the world how high my love had flown,

There would be few who would not deem me mad,

Or say my mind the falsest image had

Of my condition and your lofty place But heaven has seen that for no moment's space Have I forgotten you to be the king, Or me myself to be a lowly thing-A little lark, enamoured of the sky, That soared to sing, to break its breast, and die But, as you better know than I, the heart In choosing chooseth not its own desert, But that great ment which attracteth it, Tis law, I struggled, but I must submit. And having seen a worth all worth above, I loved you, love you, and shall always love But that doth mean, my will is ever yours, Not only when your will my good insures. But if it wrought me what the world calls harm-Fire, wounds, would wear from your dear will a charm.

That you will be my knight is full content,

And for that kiss—I pray, first for the queen's consent"

Her answer, given with such firm gentleness,

Pleased the queen well, and made her hold no less

Of Lisa's merit than the king had held And so, all cloudy threats of grief dispelled, There was betrothal made that very morn 'Twixt Perdicone, youthful, brave, well-born, And Lisa, whom he loved, she loving well The lot that from obedience befell The queen a rare betrothal ring on each Bestowed, and other gems, with gracious speech And that no joy might lack, the king, who knew The youth was poor, gave him rich Ceffalù And Cataletta, large and fruitful lands— Adding much promise when he joined their hands At last he said to Lisa, with an air Gallant yet noble "Now we claim our share From your sweet love, a share which is not small For in the sacrament one crumb is all " Then taking her small face his hands between,

He kissed her on the brow with kiss serene, Fit seal to that pure vision her young soul had seen

Sicilians witnessed that King Pedro kept
His royal promise Perdicone stept
To many honours honourably won,
Living with Lisa in true union
Throughout his life the king still took delight
To call himself fair Lisa's faithful knight,
And never wore in field or tournament
A scarf or emblem save by Lisa sent

Such deeds made subjects loyal in that land
They joyed that one so worthy to command,
So chivalrous and gentle, had become
The king of Sicily, and filled the room
Of Frenchmen, who abused the Church's trust,
Till, in a righteous vengeance on their lust,
Messina rose, with God, and with the dagger's thrust

L'ENVOI

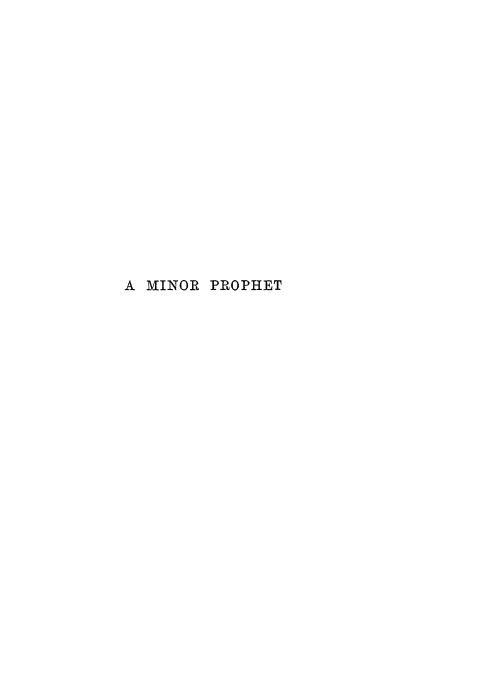

Reader, this story pleased me long ago

In the bright pages of Boccaccio,

And where the author of a good we know,

Let us not fail to pay the grateful thanks we one

A MINOR PROPHET

I HAVE a friend, a vegetarian seer,
By name Elias Baptist Butterworth,
A haimless, bland, disinterested man,
Whose ancestors in Cromwell's day believed
The Second Advent certain in five years,
But when King Charles the Second came instead,
Revised their date and sought another world
I mean—not heaven but—America
A fervid stock, whose generous hope embraced
The fortunes of mankind, not stopping short
At rise of leather, or the fall of gold,
Nor listening to the voices of the time

As housewives listen to a cackling hen,
With wonder whether she has laid her egg
On their own nest-egg Still they did insist
Somewhat too wearisomely on the joys
Of their Millennium, when coats and hats
Would all be of one pattern, books and songs
All fit for Sundays, and the casual talk
As good as sermons preached extempore

And in Elias the ancestral zeal
Breathes strong as ever, only modified
By Transatlantic air and modern thought
You could not pass him in the street and fail
To note his shoulders' long declivity,
Beard to the waist, swan-neck, and large pale eyes,
Or, when he lifts his hat, to mark his hair
Brushed back to show his great capacity—
A full grain's length at the angle of the brow
Proving him witty, while the shallower men
Only seem witty in their repartees

Not that he's vain, but that his doctrine needs The testimony of his frontal lobe On all points he adopts the latest views, Takes for the key of universal Mind The "levitation" of stout gentlemen, Believes the Rappings are not spirits' work, But the Thought-atmosphere's, a steam of brains In correlated force of raps, as proved By motion, heat, and science generally, The spectrum, for example, which has shown The self-same metals in the sun as here, So the Thought-atmosphere is everywhere High truths that glimmered under other names To ancient sages, whence good scholarship Applied to Eleusinian mysteries-The Vedas—Tripitaka—Vendidad— Might furnish weaker proof for weaker minds That Thought was rapping in the heary past, And might have edified the Greeks by raps At the greater Dionysia, if their ears

Had not been filled with Sophoclean verse

And when all Earth is vegetarian—

When, lacking butchers, quadrupeds die out,

And less Thought-atmosphere is reabsorbed

By nerves of insects parasitical,

Those higher truths, seized now by higher minds

But not expressed (the insects hindering)

Will either flash out into eloquence,

Or better still, be comprehensible

By rappings simply, without need of roots

'Tis on this theme—the vegetarian world—
That good Elias willingly expands
He loves to tell in mildly nasal tones
And vowels stretched to suit the widest views,
The future fortunes of our infant Earth—
When it will be too full of human kind
To have the room for wilder animals
Saith he, Sahara will be populous
With families of gentlemen retired

From commerce in more Central Africa, Who order coolness as we order coal. And have a lobe anterior strong enough To think away the sand-storms Science thus Will leave no spot on this terraqueous globe Unfit to be inhabited by man. The chief of animals all meaner brutes Will have been smoked and elbowed out of life No lions then shall lap Caffranian pools, Or shake the Atlas with their midnight roar Even the slow, slime-loving crocodile, The last of animals to take a hint, Will then retire for ever from a scene Where public feeling strongly sets against him Fishes may lead carnivorous lives obscure, But must not dream of culmary rank Or being dished in good society Imagination in that distant age, Aiming at fiction called historical, Will vainly try to reconstruct the times

When it was men's preposterous delight To sit astride live horses, which consumed Materials for incalculable cakes, When there were milkmaids who drew milk from cows With udders kept abnormal for that end Since the rude mythopœic period Of Aryan dairymen, who did not blush To call their milkmaid and their daughter one— Helplessly gazing at the Milky Way, Nor dreaming of the astral cocoa-nuts Quite at the service of posterity 'Tis to be feared, though, that the duller boys. Much given to anachronisms and nuts, (Elias has confessed boys will be boys) May write a jockey for a centaur, think Europa's surtor was an Irish bull, Æsop a journalist who wrote up Fox, And Bruin a chief swindler upon 'Change Boys will be boys, but dogs will all be moral, With longer alimentary canals

Suited to diet vegetarian

The ugher breeds will fade from memory,

Or, being palæontological,

Live but as portraits in large learned books,

Distasteful to the feelings of an age

No stupid brutes, no cheerful queernesses,

No naive cunning, grave absurdity

Wart-pigs with tender and parental grunts,

Wombats much flattened as to their contour,

Perhaps from too much crushing in the ark,

But taking meekly that fatality,

The serious cranes, unstung by ridicule,

Long-headed, short-legged, solemn looking curs,

(Wise, silent critics of a flippant age),

The silly straddling foals, the weak-brained geese

Hissing fallaciously at sound of wheels-

All these rude products will have disappeared

Along with every faulty human type

By dint of diet vegetarian

All will be harmony of hue and line,

Bodies and minds all perfect, limbs well-turned,

And talk quite free from aught erroneous

Thus far Elias in his seer's mantle

But at this climax in his prophecy

My sinking spirits, fearing to be swamped,

Urge me to speak "High prospects these, my friend,

Setting the weak carnivorous brain astretch,

We will resume the thread another day"

"To-morrow," cries Elias, "at this hour?"

"No, not to-morrow—I shall have a cold—

At least I feel some soreness—this endemic—

Good-bye"

No tears are sadder than the smile
With which I quit Elias Bitterly
I feel that every change upon this earth
Is bought with sacrifice. My yearnings fail
To reach that high apocalyptic mount
Which shows in bird's-eye view a perfect world,

Or enter warmly into other joys Than those of faulty, struggling human kind That strain upon my soul's too feeble wing Ends in ignoble floundering I fall Into short-sighted pity for the men Who living in those perfect future times Will not know half the dear imperfect things That move my smiles and tears—will never know The fine old incongruities that raise My friendly laugh, the innocent concerts That like a needless eyeglass or black patch Give those who wear them harmless happiness, The twists and cracks in our poor earthenware, That touch me to more conscious fellowship (I am not myself the finest Parian) With my coevals So poor Colin Clout, To whom raw onion gives prospective zest, Consoling hours of dampest wintry work, Could hardly fancy any regal joys Quite unimpregnate with the onion's scent

Perhaps his highest hopes are not all clear Of waftings from that energetic bulb Tis well that onion is not heresy Speaking in parable, I am Colin Clout A clinging flavour penetrates my life-My onion is imperfectness I cleave To nature's blunders, evanescent types Which sages banish from Utopia "Not worship beauty?" say you Patience, friend! I worship in the temple with the rest, But by my hearth I keep a sacred nook For gnomes and dwarfs, duck-footed waddling elves Who statched and hammered for the weary man In days of old And in that piety I clothe ungainly forms inherited From toiling generations, daily bent At desk, or plough, or loom, or in the mine, In pioneering labours for the world. Nay, I am apt when floundering confused From too rash flight, to grasp at paradox,

And pity future men who will not know A keen experience with pity blent, The pathos exquisite of lovely minds Hid in harsh forms—not penetrating them Like fire divine within a common bush Which glows transfigured by the heavenly guest, So that men put their shoes off, but encaged Like a sweet child within some thick-walled cell, Who leaps and fails to hold the window-bars. But having shown a little dimpled hand Is visited thenceforth by tender hearts Whose eyes keep watch about the prison walls A foolish, nay, a wicked paradox! For purest pity is the eye of love Melting at sight of sorrow, and to grieve Because it sees no sorrow, shows a love Warped from its truer nature, turned to love Of merest habit, like the miser's greed. But I am Colin still my prejudice Is for the flavour of my daily food

Not that I doubt the world is growing still
As once it grew from Chaos and from Night,
Or have a soul too shrunken for the hope
Which dawned in human breasts, a double morn,
With earliest watchings of the rising light
Chasing the darkness, and through many an age
Has raised the vision of a future time
That stands an Angel with a face all mild
Spearing the demon—I too rest in faith
That man's perfection is the crowning flower,
Toward which the urgent sap in life's great tree
Is pressing,—seen in puny blossoms now,
But in the world's great morrows to expand
With broadest petal and with deepest glow

Yet, see the patched and plodding citizen
Waiting upon the pavement with the throng
While some victorious world-hero makes Triumphal entry, and the peal of shouts
And flash of faces 'neath uplifted hats

Run like a storm of joy along the streets ! He says, "God bless him!" almost with a sob, As the great hero passes, he is glad The world holds mighty men and mighty deeds, The music stirs his pulses like strong wine, The moving splendour touches him with awe— 'Tis glory shed around the common weal, And he will pay his tribute willingly, Though with the pennies earned by sordid toil Perhaps the hero's deeds have helped to bring A time when every honest citizen Shall wear a coat unpatched And yet he feels More easy fellowship with neighbours there Who look on too, and he will soon relapse From noticing the banners and the steeds To think with pleasure there is just one bun Left in his pocket, that may serve to tempt The wide-eyed lad, whose weight is all too much For that young mother's arms and then he falls To dreamy picturing of sunny days

When he himself was a small big-cheeked lad In some far village where no heroes came, And stood a listener 'twixt his father's legs In the warm fire-light, while the old folk talked And shook their heads and looked upon the floor, And he was puzzled, thinking life was fine-The bread and cheese so nice all through the year And Christmas sure to come O that good time! He, could he choose, would have those days again And see the dear old-fashioned things once more But soon the wheels and drums have all passed by And tramping feet are heard like sudden rain The quiet startles our good citizen, He feels the child upon his arms, and knows He is with the people making holiday Because of hopes for better days to come But Hope to him was like the brilliant west Telling of sunrise in a world unknown, And from that dazzling curtain of bright hues He turned to the familiar face of fields Lying all clear in the calm morning land

Maybe 'tis wiser not to fix a lens Too scrutinising on the glorious times When Barbarossa shall arise and shake His mountain, good King Arthur come again, And all the heroes of such giant soul That, living once to cheer mankind with hope, They had to sleep until the time was ripe For greater deeds to match their greater thought Yet no! the earth yields nothing more Divine Than high prophetic vision—than the Seer Who fasting from man's meaner joy beholds The paths of beauteous order, and constructs A fairer type, to shame our low content. But prophecy is like potential sound Which turned to music seems a voice sublime From out the soul of light, but turns to noise In scrannel pipes, and makes all ears averse

The faith that life on earth is being shaped

To glorious ends, that order, justice, love

Mean man's completeness, mean effect as sure

As roundness in the dew-drop—that great faith Is but the rushing and expanding stream Of thought, of feeling, fed by all the past Our finest hope is finest memory, As they who love in age think youth is blest Because it has a life to fill with love Full souls are double mirrors, making still An endless vista of fair things before Repeating things behind so faith is strong Only when we are strong, shrinks when we shrink It comes when music stirs us, and the chords Moving on some grand climax shake our souls With influx new that makes new energies It comes in swellings of the heart and tears That rise at noble and at gentle deeds— At labours of the master-artist's hand Which, trembling, touches to a finer end, Trembling before an image seen within It comes in moments of heroic love. Unjealous joy in joy not made for us-

n conscious triumph of the good within

Taking us worship goodness that rebukes

Even our failures are a prophecy,

Even our yearnings and our bitter tears

After that fair and true we cannot grasp,

As patriots who seem to die in vain

Make liberty more sacred by their pangs

Presentiment of better things on earth

Sweeps in with every force that stirs our souls

To admiration, self renouncing love,

Or thoughts, like light, that bind the world in one

Sweeps like the sense of vastness, when at night

We hear the roll and dash of waves that break

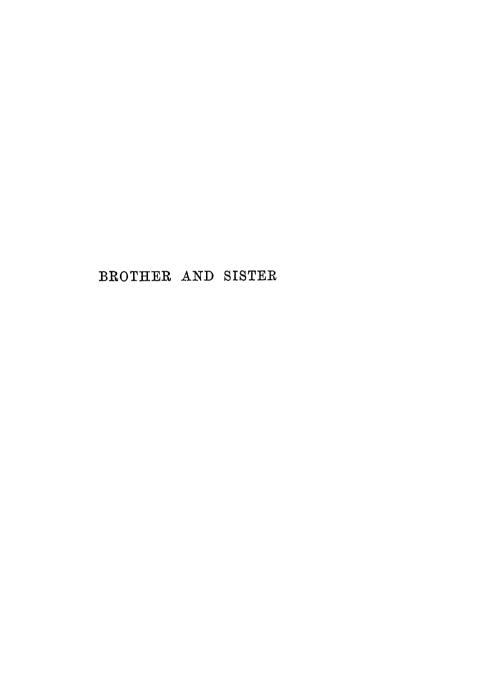

Nearer and nearer with the rushing tide,

Which rises to the level of the cliff

Because the wide Atlantic rolls behind

Throbbing respondent to the far-off orbs

BROTHER AND SISTER

I

I cannot choose but think upon the time
When our two lives grew like two buds that kiss
At lightest thrill from the bee's swinging chime, Because the one so near the other is

He was the elder and a little man
Of forty inches, bound to show no dread,
And I the girl that puppy-like now ran,
Now lagged behind my brother's larger tread

I held him wise, and when he talked to me
Of snakes and birds, and which God loved the best,
I thought his knowledge marked the boundary
Where men grew blind, though angels knew the rest

If he said "Hush!" I tried to hold my breath, Wherever he said "Come!" I stepped in faith

II

Long years have left their writing on my brow,
But yet the freshness and the dew-fed beam
Of those young mornings are about me now,
When we two wandered toward the far-off stream

With rod and line Our basket held a store
Baked for us only, and I thought with joy
That I should have my share, though he had more,
Because he was the elder and a boy

The firmaments of daisies since to me

Have had those mornings in their opening eyes,

The bunchèd cowslip's pale transparency

Carries that sunshine of sweet memories,

And wild-rose branches take their finest scent From those blest hours of infantine content III

Our mother bade us keep the trodden ways, Stroked down my tippet, set my brother's frill, Then with the benediction of her gaze Clung to us lessening, and pursued us still

Across the homestead to the rookery elms,
Whose tall old trunks had each a grassy mound,
So rich for us, we counted them as realms
With varied products here were earth-nuts found,

And here the Lady-fingers in deep shade,

Here sloping toward the Moat the rushes grew,

The large to split for pith, the small to braid,

While over all the dark rooks cawing flew,

And made a happy strange solemnity,

A deep-toned chant from life unknown to me

IV

Our meadow-path had memorable spots.

One where it bridged a tiny rivulet,

Deep hid by tangled blue Forget-me-nots,

And all along the waving grasses met

My little palm, or nodded to my cheek,

When flowers with upturned faces gazing drew

My wonder downward, seeming all to speak

With eyes of souls that dumbly heard and knew

Then came the copse, where wild things rushed unseen,
And black-scathed grass betrayed the past abode
Of mystic gypsies, who still lurked between Me and each hidden distance of the road

A gypsy once had startled me at play, Blotting with her dark smile my sunny day v

Thus rambling we were schooled in deepest lore,
And learned the meanings that give words a soul,
The fear, the love, the primal passionate store,
Whose shaping impulses make manhood whole

Those hours were seed to all my after good,

My infant gladness, through eye, ear, and touch,

Took easily as warmth a various food

To nourish the sweet skill of loving much

For who in age shall roam the earth and find Reasons for loving that will strike out love With sudden rod from the hard year-pressed mind? Were reasons sown as thick as stars above,

'Tis love must see them, as the eye sees light Day is but Number to the darkened sight

VΙ

Our brown canal was endless to my thought,
And on its banks I sat in dreamy peace,
Unknowing how the good I loved was wrought,
Untroubled by the fear that it would cease

Slowly the barges floated into view
Rounding a grassy hill to me sublime
With some Unknown beyond it, whither flew
The parting cuckoo toward a fresh spring time

The wide-arched bridge, the scented elder-flowers,
The wondrous watery rings that died too soon,
The echoes of the quarry, the still hours
With white robe sweeping-on the shadeless noon,

Were but my growing self, are part of me, My present Past, my 100t of piety VII

Those long days measured by my little feet
Had chronicles which yield me many a text,
Where irony still finds an image meet
Of full-grown judgments in this world perplext

One day my brother left me in high charge,

To mind the rod, while he went seeking bait,

And bade me, when I saw a nearing barge,

Snatch out the line, lest he should come too late

Proud of the task, I watched with all my might

For one whole minute, till my eyes grew wide,

Till sky and earth took on a strange new light

And seemed a dream-world floating on some tide—

A fair pavilioned boat for me alone Bearing me.onward through the vast unknown

VIII

But sudden came the barge's pitch-black prow, Nearer and angrier came my brother's cry, And all my soul was quivering fear, when lo Upon the imperilled line, suspended high,

A silver perch! My guilt that won the prey, Now turned to ment, had a guerdon rich Of series and praises, and made merry play, Until my triumph reached its highest pitch

When all at home were told the wondrous feat,
And how the little sister had fished well
In secret, though my fortune tasted sweet,
I wondered why this happiness befell

"The little lass had luck," the gardener said And so I learned, luck was with glory wed IX

We had the self-same world enlarged for each
By loving difference of girl and boy
The fruit that hung on high beyond my reach
He plucked for me, and oft he must employ

A measuring glance to guide my tiny shoe

Where lay firm stepping-stones, or call to mind

"This thing I like my sister may not do,

For she is little, and I must be kind"

Thus boyish Will the nobler mastery learned
Where inward vision over impulse reigns,
Widening its life with separate life discerned,
A Like unlike, a Self that self restrains

His years with others must the sweeter be For those brief days he spent in loving me

His sorrow was my sorrow, and his joy Sent little leaps and laughs through all my frame, My doll seemed lifeless and no girlish toy Had any reason when my brother came

I knelt with him at marbles, marked his fling Cut the ringed stem and make the apple drop, Or watched him winding close the spiral string That looped the orbits of the humming top

Grasped by such fellowship my vagrant thought Ceased with dream fruit dream-wishes to fulfil, My aery-picturing fantasy was taught Subjection to the harder, truer skill

That seeks with deeds to grave a thought-tracked line, And by "What is," "What will be" to define XI

School parted us, we never found again

That childish world where our two spirits mingled

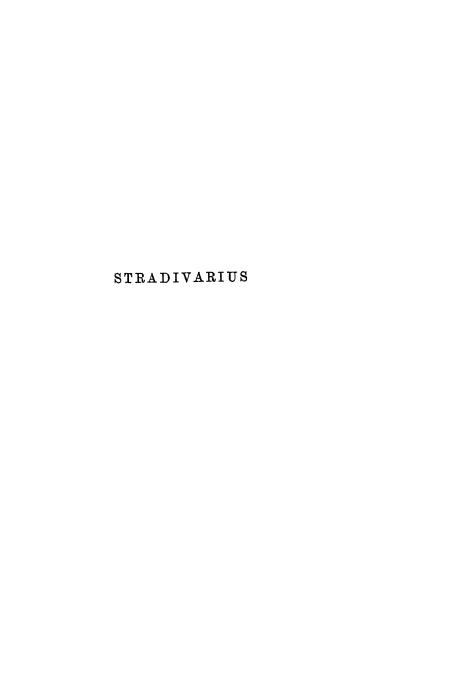

Like scents from varying roses that remain

One sweetness, nor can evermore be singled

Yet the twin habit of that early time
Lingered for long about the heart and tongue
We had been natives of one happy clime
And its dear accent to our utterance cling

Till the dire years whose awful name is Change
Had grasped our souls still yearning in divorce,
And pitiless shaped them in two forms that range
Two elements which sever their life's course

But were another childhood-world my share, I would be born a little sister there

STRADIVARIUS

Your soul was lifted by the wings to-day
Hearing the master of the violin
You praised him, praised the great Sebastian too
Who made that fine Chaconne, but did you think Of old Antonio Stradivan?—him
Who a good century and half ago
Put his true work in that brown instrument
And by the nice adjustment of its frame
Gave it responsive life, continuous
With the master's finger-tips and perfected
Like them by delicate rectitude of use

Not Bach alone, helped by fine precedent
Of genius gone before, nor Joachim
Who holds the strain afresh incorporate
By inward hearing and notation strict
Of nerve and muscle, made our joy to-day
Another soul was living in the air
And swaying it to true deliverance
Of high invention and responsive skill —
That plain white-aproned man who stood at work
Patient and accurate full fourscore years,
Cherished his sight and touch by temperance,
And since keen sense is love of perfectness
Made perfect violins, the needed paths
For inspiration and high mastery

No simpler man than he he never cried, '
"Why was I born to this monotonous task
Of making violins?" or flung them down
To suit with hurling act a well hurled curse
At labour on such perishable stuff

Hence neighbours in Cremona held him dull,
Called him a slave, a mill-horse, a machine,
Begged him to tell his motives or to lend
A few gold pieces to a loftier mind
Yet he had pithy words full fed by fact,
For Fact, well-trusted, reasons and persuades,
Is gnomic, cutting, or ironical,
Draws tears, or is a tocsin to arouse—
Can hold all figures of the orator
In one plain sentence, has her pauses too—
Eloquent silence at the chasm abrupt
Where knowledge ceases Thus Antonio
Made answers as Fact willed, and made them strong

Naldo, a painter of eclectic school,

Taking his dicers, candlelight and grins

From Caravaggio, and in holier groups

Combining Flemish flesh with martyrdom—

Knowing all tricks of style at thirty-one,

And weary of them, while Antonio

At sixty-nine wrought placidly his best

Making the violin you heard to-day—

Naldo would tease him oft to tell his aims

"Perhaps thou hast some pleasant vice to feed—
The love of louis d'ors in heaps of four,
Each violin a heap—I've nought to blame,
My vices waste such heaps—But then, why work
With painful nicety? Since fame once earned
By luck or merit—oftenest by luck—(Else why do I put Bonifazio's name
To work that 'pinxit Naldo' would not sell?)
Is welcome index to the wealthy mob
Where they should pay their gold, and where they pay
There they find merit—take your tow for flax,
And hold the flax unlabelled with your name,
Too coarse for sufferance"

Antonio then
"I like the gold—well, yes—but not for meals
And as my stomach, so my eye and hand,

And inward sense that works along with both,
Have hunger that can never feed on coin
Who draws a line and satisfies his soul,
Making it crooked where it should be straight?
An idiot with an oyster-shell may draw
His lines along the sand, all wavering,
Fixing no point or pathway to a point,
An idiot one remove may choose his line,
Straggle and be content, but God be praised,
Antonio Stradivari has an eye
That winces at false work and loves the true,
With hand and arm that play upon the tool
As willingly as any singing bird
Sets him to sing his morning roundelay,
Because he likes to sing and likes the song"

Then Naldo "Tis a petty kind of fame
At best, that comes of making violins,
And saves no masses, either Thou wilt go
To purgatory none the less"

But he

"'Twere purgatory here to make them ill,
And for my fame—when any master holds,
'Twixt chin and hand a violin of mine,
He will be glad that Stradivari lived,
Made violins, and made them of the best
The masters only know whose work is good
They will choose mine, and while God gives them skill

I give them instruments to play upon, God choosing me to help Him"

"What | were God

At fault for violins, thou absent?"

"Yes,

He were at fault for Stradıvarı's work "

"Why, many hold Giuseppe's violins As good as thine"

"May be they are different His quality declines he spoils his hand

With over-drinking But were his the best. He could not work for two My work is mine, And, heresy or not, if my hand slacked I should rob God—since He is fullest good Leaving a blank instead of violins I say, not God Himself can make man's best Without best men to help Him I am one best Here in Cremona, using sunlight well To fashion finest maple till it serves More cunningly than throats, for harmony 'Tis rare delight I would not change my skill To be the Emperor with bungling hands, And lose my work, which comes as natural As self at waking"

"Thou art little more
Than a deft potter's wheel, Antonio,
Turning out work by mere necessity
And lack of varied function Higher arts
Subsist on freedom—eccentricity—
Uncounted inspirations—influence

That comes with drinking, gambling, talk turned wild,
Then moody misery and lack of food—
With every dithyrambic fine excess
These make at last a storm which flashes out
In lighting revelations—Steady work
Turns genius to a loom, the soul must lie
Like grapes beneath the sun till ripeness comes
And mellow vintage—I could paint you now
The finest Crucifixion, yesternight
Returning home I saw it on a sky
Blue-black, thick-starred—I want two louis d'ois
To buy the canvas and the costly blues—Trust me a fortnight"

"Where are those last two
I lent thee for thy Judith?—her thou saw'st
In saffron gown, with Holofernes' head
And beauty all complete?"

"She is but sketched
I lack the proper model—and the mood
A great idea is an eagle's egg,

Craves time for hatching, while the eagle sits Feed her"

"If thou wilt call thy pictures eggs
I call the hatching, work "Tis God gives skill,
But not without men's hands He could not make Antonio Stradivari's violins
Without Antonio Get thee to thy easel"

TWO LOVERS

Two lovers by a moss-grown spring

They leaned soft cheeks together there,

Mingled the dark and sunny hair,

And heard the wooing thrushes sing

O budding time !

O love's blest prime!

Two wedded from the portal stept

The bells made happy carollings,

The an was soft as fanning wings,

White petals on the pathway slept

O pure-eyed bride!

O tender pride!

Two faces o'er a cradle bent

Two hands above the head were locked,

These pressed each other while they rocked,

Those watched a life that love had sent

O solemn hour !

O hidden power!

Two parents by the evening fire

The red light fell about their knees

On heads that rose by slow degrees

Like buds upon the lily spire

O patient life!

O tender strife !

The two still sat together there,

The red light shone about their knees,

But all the heads by slow degrees

Had gone and left that lonely pair

O voyage fast !

O vanished past 1

The red light shone upon the floor

And made the space between them wide,

They drew their chairs up side by side,

Their pale cheeks joined, and said, "Once more!"

O memories!

O past that is !

ARION

(HEROD I 24

Arion, whose melodic soul

Taught the dithyramb to roll

Like forest fires, and sing

Olympian suffering,

Had carried his drviner lore

From Corinth to the sister shore

Where Greece could largelier be,

Branching o'er Italy

Then weighted with his glorious name
And bags of gold, aboard he came
'Mid harsh seafaring men
To Corinth bound again

The sailors eyed the bags and thought
"The gold is good, the man is nought—
And who shall track the wave
That opens for his grave?"

With brawny arms and cruel eyes

They press around him where he lies

In sleep beside his lyre,

Hearing the Muses quire

He waked and saw this wolf-faced Death
Breaking the dream that filled his breath
With inspiration strong
Of yet unchanted song

"Take, take my gold and let me live!"

He prayed, as kings do when they give

Their all with loyal will,

Holding born kingship still

To rob the living they refuse,

One death or other he must choose,

Either the watery pall

Or wounds and burial

"My solemn robe then let me don,
Give me high space to stand upon,
That dying I may pour
A song unsung before"

It pleased them well to grant this prayer,

To hear for nought how it might fare

With men who paid their gold

For what a poet sold

In flowing stole, his eyes aglow

With inward fire, he neared the prow

And took his god-like stand,

The cithara in hand

The wolfish men all shrank aloof,

And feared this singer might be proof

Against their murderous power,

After his lyric hour

But he, in liberty of song,

Fearless of death or other wrong,

With full spondaic toll

Poured forth his mighty soul

Poured forth the strain his dream had taught,

A nome with lofty passion fraught,

Such as makes battles won

On fields of Marathon

The last long vowels trembled then

As awe within those wolfish men

They said, with mutual stare,

Some god was present there

But lo! Arion leaped on high
Ready, his descant done, to die,
Not asking, "Is it well?"
Like a pierced eagle fell

"O MAY I JOIN THE CHOIR INVISIBLE"

Longum illud tempus, quum non ero, magis me movet, quam hoc exiguum —Cioero, ad Att , xii 18

O MAY I join the choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence—live
In pulses stirred to generosity,
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search
To vaster issues

So to live is heaven

To make undying music in the world. Breathing as beauteous order that controls With growing sway the growing life of man So we inherit that sweet purity For which we struggled, failed, and agonised With widening retrospect that bred despair Rebellious flesh that would not be subdued, A vicious parent shaming still its child Poor anxious penitence, is quick dissolved, Its discords, quenched by meeting harmonies, Die in the large and charitable air And all our rarer, better, truer self, That sobbed religiously in yearning song, That watched to ease the burthen of the world, Laboriously tracing what must be, And what may yet be better-saw within A worther image for the sanctuary, And shaped it forth before the multitude Divinely human, raising worship so

To higher reverence more mixed with love—
That better self shall live till human Time
Shall fold its eyelids, and the human sky
Be gathered like a scroll within the tomb
Unread for eyer

This is life to come,
Which martyred men have made more glorious
For us who strive to follow. May I reach
That purest heaven, be to other souls
The cup of strength in some great agony,
Enkindle generous ardour, feed pure love,
Beget the smiles that have no cruelty—
Be the sweet presence of a good diffused,
And in diffusion ever more intense
So shall I join the choir invisible
Whose music is the gladness of the world

Chronicles of Carlingford By Mrs Oliphant. SALEM CHAPEL. 28

This story so ficeh so powerfully written and so tragic stands out from among its fellows like a piece of newly comed gold in a handful of dim commonplace shillings. I sless of pastoral experience and scene from clercal life we have that in plenty but she sarred things of the conventicies he relative position of pastor and flock in a \one comforming connection were but guessed at by the world outside and terrible is the revelation—Westmuster Review

Tom Cringle's Log

A New Edition With Illustrations by STANFIELD, WEIR, SKELTON, WALKER, &c, Engraved by WHYM PER Crown 8vo, 6s Another Edition at 2s

Everybody who has failed to read Tom Cringle's Log should do so at once The Quarterly Review went so far as to say that the papers compoung it when it first ap peared in Blackwood' were the most brilliant series of the time and that time one invalled for the number of famous magaanniss existing in it. Coleradge says in his Table Talk that the Log is most excellent and these vendicts have been ratified by generations of men and boys and by the manifestation of Continental approval which is shown by repeated translations. The engravings illustrating the present issue are excellent.—

Mary Queen of Scots and her Accusers

By John Hosack A New and Enlarged Edition, continuing the Narrative down to the Death of Queen Mary With a Photograph from the Bust on the Tomb in Westminster Abbev 2 vols 8vo 31s 6d

He has confuted those who by brilliant writing and a judicious selection of evidence paint the Queen of Scots as an incarnate fiend and who are dramatic poets rather than instorians.—Times

Whatever surmises may be formed about Mary s knowledge or assent there can now be no doubt that the murder was contrived not by Mary but by her accuses.—Sootsman

Sermons

By the Rev John Caird, D.D., Professor of Divinity in the University of Glasgow, and one of Her Majesty's Chaplains for Scotland In crown 8vo, 5s This Edi tion includes the Sermon on 'Religion in Common Life.' preached in Crathie Church, Oct 1855, before Her Majesty the Oueen and the late Prince Consort

They are noble sermons and we are not sure but that with the cultivated reader, bey will gain rather than lose by being read not heard. There is a thoughtfulness and lepth about them which can hardly be appreciated unless when they are studied at eissure and there are so many sentences so felicitously expressed that we should guidge esting hurried away from them by a rapid speaker without being allowed to enjoy them is second time. Fraser's Magazina.
