Considering how needful it is that Presbyteries be very tender of giving any ground of complaint, in their planting of parishes, especially tanquam jure devoluto, and that any who judge themselves lesed may have an opportunity of being heard by superior judicatories, and if wronged, may be redressed: It is therefore overtured, that when a parish falls vacant, the Presbytery in whose bounds it lies, shall with all diligence declare and intimate the vacancy; and if there be no legal eldership settled therein, the Presbytery shall not proceed to plant upon the jus devolutum, until they first use all proper means to establish a legal eldership in the parish; and if access to the church be refused in order to these ends, after all endeavours used to obtain the same, or if after an eldership is settled, or where there was a legal eldership in the parish before the vacancy; and that the heritors and elders delay to give a legal call, then the Presbytery shall propose to the heritors and elders, or to the heritors and people, where there is no legal eldership, a leet of several fit persons, that they may agree to one of them to be their pastor, and endeavour to gain their consent to one of that leet; or in case a fit person be proposed by the heritors, elders, or people, the Presbytery shall endeavour to bring the heritors and elders, or the heritors and people, where there is no legal eldership, to an agreement to that person; and in order to this, some of the Presbytery shall be appointed to discourse with those concerned from time to time, or to essay to do it within the currency of the six months after falling of the vacancy, and even when the six months are expired; and before the Presbytery proceed to settle the parish tanquam jure devoluto, they shall continue to deal with the parish, at least for their consent to a Presbyterial call, and when there is no hope of success, then the Presbytery may proceed to the said settlement; but if any of the heritors, elders, or heads of families, or persons of good reputation in the parish, do compare before the Presbytery, and offer sufficient objections against the person to be settled, as to his orthodoxy, literature, life and conversation, or other ministerial qualifications, the Presbytery, before they proceed to the settlement, shall take trial of the said objections; and if any difficulty occur, or that there appear any heat or division in the parish about a call, the Presbytery shall not proceed until they have the advice and direction of the Synod, and shall acquaint the parish, that they may attend the Synod to hear their determination; or if there be any appeal from the Presbytery's procedure, they shall sist the foresaid settlement till the time appointed for the next meeting of the Synod or General Assembly appealed to; and if the appellants do not then insist in their appeal, the Presbytery may proceed as if the same had never been made; but if the appellants do insist, then the judicature appealed to shall proceed and discuss the same without delay, and give sentence therein as they shall find cause; and if there be a further appeal from the Synod to the General Assembly, the foresaid settlement shall likewise stop, until the time appointed for the meeting of the next General Assembly, unless the appellants do pass from their said appeal: But because some persons, from a litigious or disaffected humour, do oppose the settlement of a vacant church, with a fit and qualified person, and do appeal with a design to continue the vacancy for some time longer; therefore, to prevent this, it should be declared, that unless those who do oppose the planting of any vacant parish, do timeously give in in writing under their hands, sufficient objections against the person designed to be settled, and offer to prove the same in due time, and give in also the reasons of their appeal within ten days thereafter, in manner appointed by the Acts of the General Assembly, the same shall not be regarded, nor the appeal be received without it, but the settlement shall go on as if the appeal had never been made, and the judicature shall intimate this to the appellant at making the said appeal. The General Assembly, having heard and considered the above Overtures, they did, and hereby do, transmit the same to the several Presbyteries of this Church; and appoints them to be careful to send in their remarks thereupon to the next General Assembly, that the same may be turned into a standing act and constitution of this Church, if the plurality of Presbyteries, who shall send in their remarks thereupon, shall be found to agree thereto; and, in the meantime, the General Assembly appoints the rules and directions therein proposed to be strictly observed until the next Assembly.

*Sess. 1, May 1, 1712.—Act appointing the Queen's Commission to his Grace
John Duke of Atholl to be Recorded.*

The General Assembly, being convened and constituted, there was produced to them by his Grace John Duke of Atholl, her Majesty's commission, sealed at Edinburgh the 30th day of April last, with the Seal appointed by the Treaty of Union of the two kingdoms of Scotland and England, to be kept and used in Scotland in place of the Great Seal of Scotland, and of the same tenor with former commissions, constituting him her Majesty's High Commissioner and Representative in this Assembly ; which commission being publicly read with all due honour and respect, it is, by order of this Assembly, recorded in their books, ad futuram rei memoriam.

II.

The Queen's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them the 1st of May 1712.

ANNE, R.,

Right reverend and well-beloved,

We greet you well. We have had so much experience of your good conduct in your Assemblies, that we have very gladly countenanced by our authority this your meeting ; and we hope that you will take it as a particular mark of our regard to you, that we have appointed our right trusty and right entirely beloved cousin and counsellor, John Duke of Atholl, to represent our royal person in this Assembly, who, we doubt not, will be acceptable to you. It hath always been our concern to employ our authority for suppressing vice and immorality ; and we assure you, that such magistrates as shall be most faithful in executing the laws, and conforming themselves to our royal pleasure, signified in our proclamations, in punishing all such practices as are a scandal to the Christian profession, shall have most of our countenance and favour. Lest any late occurrences may have possessed some of you with fears and jealousies, we take this solemn occasion to assure you, it is our firm purpose to maintain the Church of Scotland as established by law ; and whatever ease is given to those who differ from you in points that are not essential, we will, however, employ our utmost care to protect you from all insults, and redress your just complaints. As we are sensible that a pious and learned ministry is (under God) the great support of Christianity, so we are resolved to countenance you in your endeavours to promote it. The address of the Commission of the late General Assembly, which was presented to us by those commissioned by them to take care of their affairs here, did so much manifest their loyalty and good affection to our royal person and government, and their true concern for the succession in the Protestant line, as established by law, that it could not but be acceptable to us ; and it gives us ground to expect, that there will be nothing in your procedure but what shall be dutiful to us, and agreeable to the conduct of former Assemblies ; and so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 17th day of April 1712, in the eleventh year of our reign.

By Her Majesty's Command,

DARTMOUTH.

Directed thus,—To the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church, of that part of our Kingdom of Great Britain called Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 3, 1712.—The General Assembly's Answer to her Majesty's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We do accept, with all thankfulness, your Majesty's royal favour, in continuing to countenance, by your authority, our meetings ; and do take it as a very particular mark of your regard to us, that you have been pleased to appoint the Duke of Atholl to represent your royal person in this Assembly ; a choice for us, so visibly attended with all desirable advantages, specially considering his known zeal for the Protestant religion, and against all immorality, that we cannot but acknowledge it to be most acceptable and obliging.

Your Majesty's great concern to employ your authority for suppressing vice and immorality, doth tend so much to the advancement of the glory of God, and the interest of our holy religion, and withal to the honour of your Majesty's reign, and the peace and quiet of this Church and country, that we must ever make it our utmost study and endeavour, in our places and stations, to promote the practice of true Christianity, in opposition to all profaneness and impiety; and it is a satisfaction to us, that your Majesty is pleased to assure us, that such magistrates as shall be most faithful in executing the laws against those practices which are a scandal to the Christian profession, shall have most of your Majesty's countenance and favour; and we humbly presume to persuade ourselves, that your Majesty will, in your royal wisdom, find out such methods as shall be most proper for making your pious purposes, expressed in your proclamations, more effectual than hitherto, to our deep regret, they have been.

The late occurrences which your Majesty is pleased to take notice of have, we must acknowledge, possessed us with fears and jealousies; but, as we have always embraced, and do at present lay hold upon the assurance your Majesty is pleased to give us of your firm purpose to maintain the Church of Scotland, as established by law, so we cannot, but with all dutiful submission, and in that truth and ingenuity that becomes the faithful ministers and servants of our Lord Jesus Christ, put your Majesty in mind of the representations and petitions laid before you by the Commission of the last General Assembly, for a remedy in these matters; humbly hoping, that these our most just complaints may come in due time and manner to be redressed.

Your Majesty's just sense, that a pious and learned ministry is (under God) the great support of Christianity, doth greatly encourage us to use our utmost endeavours for promoting of it, as being most firmly persuaded, that your Majesty's best assistance to us will never be wanting in so good a work.

That the address of the Commission of the late General Assembly, presented to your Majesty, asserting their loyalty and good affection to your Majesty's royal person and government, and their true concern for the succession, in the Protestant line, of the illustrious House of Hanover, upon which it is established by law, was acceptable to your Majesty, is to us most satisfying; specially, since your Majesty is graciously pleased to take it for a ground to expect that there will be nothing in our procedure but what shall be dutiful, it being indeed our most earnest desire, ever to testify to your Majesty, and to all men, our most firm and steady loyalty and affection to your Majesty and your government; and also our sincere and zealous concern for the succession in the Protestant line, as being certainly the greatest securities both of our religion and liberties, and all that can be dear to men.

That your Majesty may be guided and directed of God in the great and weighty affairs of your government, and that after a long and happy reign upon earth, you may be possessed of a blessed immortality, shall be the earnest and constant prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most humble subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by
WILL. HAMILTON, Moderator.

Sess. 5, May 6, 1712.—Act concerning the Admission of Infants to Baptism.

Children born within the verge of the visible Church of parents, one or both, professing the Christian religion, have a right to baptism.

It being the duty of Christian parents to dedicate their children to God in baptism, and to covenant for their education in the faith of Christ, no other sponsor is to be taken, unless the parents be dead, or absent, or grossly ignorant, or under scandal, or contumacious to discipline; such being unfit to stand as sponsors in transacting a solemn covenant with God. In which cases, the immediate parent who is in such circumstances is to be required to provide some fit person; and if it can be, one related to the parent of the child, should be sponsor; but if either of the parents, whether father or mother, give evidence to Church judicatories, and the congregation offended, of their repentance for removing the scandal, the suspension they were under as to Church privileges should be taken off, according to the rules of this Church, and the penitent parent should be allowed to present the child.

In the case of children exposed, whose baptism, after inquiry, cannot be known, the Kirk-session is to order the presenting of the child to baptism, and to see to the Christian education thereof; and it is recommended to the parish to take care of the maintenance of the child.

The parent or sponsor ought to speak to the minister of the parish before the child be offered to baptism.

Sess. 6, May 7, 1712.—A Representation of the Committee of the Society in Scotland for Promoting Christian Knowledge, with an Act of the General Assembly thereupon.

Unto the very Reverend the Moderator, and the remanent Reverend and Honourable Members of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, the Committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge,

Humbly represents,

That before the erection of the said Society, the General Assembly, 1709, by their sixth Act, did, out of their great wisdom and zeal for that pious undertaking of propagating Christian knowledge, seriously recommend to all the ministers and elders of this Church to go through their respective parishes on such days as the several Presbyteries should appoint, to receive and collect subscriptions and contributions for promoting thereof; and appointed ministers on a Sabbath day, before they begin this work, to read and intimate this act from the pulpit to their respective congregations; and to exhort and excite their people to subscribe and contribute; and recommended to the several Presbyteries to be careful to promote subscriptions and collections within their bounds, and to appoint some of their number to preach in vacant parishes, and to intimate the said act, and to join with and assist the elders or heritors and parishioners in taking subscriptions, and making collections; and to call for reports from each minister in their bounds, containing a particular account of the subscribers, and sums subscribed for, and money collected in each parish; and to send in an extract thereof, subscribed by their moderator and clerk, to the clerk of the Commission, now secretary to the society; and thereafter, upon advertisement, to send in the principal subscriptions, and money collected, to the society's treasurer.

And after the society was constituted, they did apply to the General Assembly, 1710, who, by the 11th Act of that Assembly, did enjoin the exact observation of the foresaid sixth act, 1709; and recommended to the several Synods concerned in the Highlands and Islands, to inquire into the state of the several parishes in their bounds, as to the particulars contained in the said act; and to send an exact account thereof to the secretary of the society, subscribed by their moderator and clerk, that the society might the better know what places of the country did most need the assistance of charity schools; and they exhorted all ministers, and other charitable persons, to put their contributions forthwith in the treasurer to the society's hands.

And since that time, the society, in pursuance of the pious ends of their erection, have, by themselves and their committees, in the first place, essayed all proper means to bring in the money subscribed for, and to procure more subscriptions and contributions, by dealing themselves with persons of all ranks of their acquaintance, writing frequently to the reverend Synods and Presbyteries, and particular ministers of this Church, to the justices of the peace in their quarter-sessions, and to magistrates of burghs; and by settling societies of correspondents, consisting of gentlemen in the several shires, and in some of the royal burghs; and by these means there is come to their treasurer's hands about four thousand four hundred pounds sterling money; all which, except a very small part, is lent out upon good security for annual rent, to sufficient and responsible hands.

And, in the next place, for the due employing of the annual rents of this stock, which only the society are empowered to dispose of, the society and their committees have made it their work to find out the most proper places of the Highlands and Islands, and remote corners of Scotland, in which they should erect their charity schools, and persons most fit for teaching the said schools, by writing letters upon that subject to the several Synods and Presbyteries, and particular ministers and gentlemen concerned in the Highlands and Islands, and to the professors in the universities.

And after having received all the information that they could expect, they agreed to set up presently eleven charity schools—beside the catechist or schoolmaster of St Kilda—in the following places, viz., one in Abertarff; one in Castletoun of Braemar; a third in Auchintoul, both in the Highlands of the shire of Aberdeen; a fourth in the parish of Larg in Sutherland; a fifth in the parish of Diurness, in the country of Strathnaver; a sixth in Elrish, in the Presbytery of Skye; a seventh in his Grace the Duke of Atholl's Highlands; an eighth in Glenelg; a ninth in Harray, in the continent of Orkney; a tenth in the Island of Sanday, in the North Isles there; and the eleventh in Zetland.

The society have found out a competent number of young men, duly attested by their respective Presbyteries, and whom (upon suitable trials) they have found sufficiently qualified for teaching the said schools; and they have settled schoolmasters in several of the foresaid places, and have given them commissions and the necessary instructions, and are going on with all diligence to settle the rest; and they have allowed to the schoolmasters of the first eight schools, and to the catechist or schoolmaster at St Kilda, each of them two hundred pounds; and to the three schools in Orkney and Zetland, one hundred pound Scots each per annum of salaries, which, with books needful to be furnished, goes near to exhaust all the annual rents of the money yet got in; and the society have resolved, as their stock increases, to settle free schools also in the countries of Assynt and Gairloch, Glenlivet, and Inveraven, and other remote places that most need their assistance.

So that nothing hinders the further progress of that good work but the want of a fund sufficient to carry it on; and as to this, albeit the committee, in the society's name, does thankfully acknowledge the commendable zeal and concern of some reverend Presbyteries and ministers in this matter; yet they cannot but regret that the distinct and excellent method laid down by the foresaid sixth act of the Assembly, 1709, has not been so duly observed by some reverend Presbyteries as might have been expected, whereby it has fallen out that the society cannot possibly get the names of subscribers and contributors, with their sums subscribed for and contributed, so exactly and regularly booked and recorded, as they proposed at first to do; nor can they for the most part know what parishes and persons in parishes have contributed, which deprives them of the means of dealing with persons of note and others that are deficient, and in many other respects exceedingly prejudices the work: And there are a great many Presbyteries and parishes in Scotland from which there is no contribution at all come in; and the society are informed that there are several subscriptions taken, and money collected in some parishes not yet brought to their treasurer's hands; and there are several subscribers deficient in payment, and many persons of honour and note, and others charitably inclined, who would willingly subscribe and contribute to this pious undertaking, if they were applied to and dealt with for that effect; which the society does attribute to forgetfulness in some of the reverend ministers, or perhaps to some prejudices and mistakes arising from misrepresentations, which some who are no friends to this undertaking do very industriously propagate, and others who are friends to it do too easily give credit to. For removing whereof, the society did formerly cause print and disperse a scheme of their designed management, and now are ready to lay their books open to any persons who shall think fit for their satisfaction to peruse the same.

And, seeing this charitable and pious undertaking is now so far advanced, and did it meet with suitable encouragement, would prove of excellent use to the nation, both with respect to its religious and civil concerns, and that the only probable way to promote it, is, that the reverend judicatures and ministers of this Church will resolve to follow exactly the method prescribed by the former acts of Assembly.

It is therefore humbly entreated, that this Venerable Assembly would be pleased again earnestly to recommend to the reverend Presbyteries and ministers the exact observation of the two acts of Assembly above mentioned, and would appoint the reverend Presbyteries to report to their several Synods an account of what they have done at any time before this, or shall hereafter do, in order to forward this pious design; and, particularly, to require an account of the diligence of the several ministers within their bounds in this matter, and record their reports in their books; and would ordain the reverend Synods to take an account of the diligence of their several Presbyteries, and record their reports in their books; and also to report an account of their diligence to the Commission from time to time; and that the Venerable Assembly will do what else they shall see proper for advancing this so pious and charitable an undertaking. This, in name, and by the appointment of the said Committee, is subscribed by

J. A. JUSTICE, I. P. C.

The General Assembly, having heard and considered the representation of the Committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, giving a distinct account of the diligence of that society in prosecution of the pious ends of their erection, and the progress they have made in their work, and of the things that hinder the further advancement thereof, they did, and hereby do, again renew the recommendations of former Assemblies, to the several Synods, Presbyteries, Sessions, Ministers, and charitably inclined persons within this Church, desiring that the judicatures above mentioned would exactly observe and follow forth the distinct and orderly method prescribed by the sixth act of the General Assembly held in the year 1709, and the eleventh act of the General Assembly held in the year 1710, in furthering subscriptions and contributions in the several parishes, and reporting the same to the society. And for the better securing of the observation of the said acts and recommendations, the General Assembly strictly enjoins and appoints the several Presbyteries of this Church to report to their Synods a distinct account of what they have done at any time before this, or what they shall hereafter do, in order to forward this pious undertaking; and that in the method prescribed by the said two former acts of Assembly. And, particularly, the General Assembly appoints the several Presbyteries again to require an account of the diligence of all the ministers within their bounds in this matter, and that they record the reports of every minister in their Presbytery books. And the General Assembly likewise ordains the several Synods to take a particular account of the diligence of their respective Presbyteries, and record it in their Synod books. And, further, the General Assembly hereby appoints the several Presbyteries and Synods of this Church to send a full and distinct report of their diligence in this matter, subscribed by their moderator and clerk, in manner prescribed by the foresaid sixth act of the General Assembly, anno 1709, and eleventh act of the General Assembly, 1710, to the meeting of the Commission in December next; and that the Commission give in a list of such Presbyteries and Synods as shall omit to send in these accounts to the next General Assembly, And, lastly, the General Assembly seriously and earnestly entreats and exhorts persons of all ranks and degrees within this Church, according to their abilities, to contribute to the advancement of this charitable and Christian undertaking.

VI.

Sess. 7, May 8, 1712.—Act concerning the Representation of Presbyteries in the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, considering that by the fifth act of the General Assembly, 1694, appointing the number of representatives for Presbyteries, there is a proportion observed with respect to the number of ministerial charges in each Presbytery, and that the regulation contained in the said act is no further expressed, than to allow five ministers and two ruling elders as the representatives of each Presbytery whose number exceeds twenty-four; therefore, the General Assembly, according to the design of the said act, founding upon a proportion to be observed betwixt the number of ministerial charges in Presbyteries and the number of representatives, doth declare and appoint, that each Presbytery, whose number doth exceed thirty ministerial charges, shall send to the General Assembly six ministers and three ruling elders; and this shall take place at the election to the next General Assembly.

VII.

Sess. 8, May 9, 1712.—Act directing the right Application of the Money granted by her Majesty for defraying the Public Charges of this Church.

The General Assembly, considering that the Assembly held in the year 1709 did, by their act dated the 25th day of April that year, discharge any more precepts to be drawn till all former debts of the Church were paid, and all precepts ordered or drawn before that time were declared payable out of the Equivalent, according to the order of their dates: And the said act appoints that her Majesty's yearly allowance be, in the first place, applied for defraying the charges of the Church for that particular year for which it is given; and, if there be any remains, that the same be applied for payment of the Church's debts for preceding years, according to the order of ranking set down in the act of the commission, dated the 7th day of January 1707: And the Church's receiver is appointed to apply the said money in the manner and order above prescribed; and that so soon as the money comes to his hands he put some thereof yearly in the hands of one of the agents for the Church, to be given out by him for the incidental charges of the Church, for which he shall be accountable to each General Assembly. And the General Assembly, finding it necessary that the said rules be further explained and extended, and that the proper uses to which the public money should be applied be fixed and determined, and that a certain proportion thereof yearly be allotted for the incidental charges of the Church's affairs, and that such other orders be laid down, as that the pressing affairs of the Church may not be retarded for want of money to expedite the same: Therefore, the General Assembly does hereby enact and appoint—First, That of her Majesty's yearly allowance for defraying the public charges of the Church's affairs, and the salaries of the Church's public servants, there be always the sum of L.100 sterling money in reserve, for answering any extraordinary emergencies in the Church's affairs. Secondly, That no commission of any General Assembly in time coming shall have power, and they are hereby discharged to dispose of any more of the Church's money but of one year's allowance only, reckoning the commencement of the year as the same is fixed by her Majesty's grant, viz., from the 24th day of June in the year preceding: and the commission of this Assembly is hereby allowed only to dispose of what is untouched of this year's allowance, reckoning the commencement from the 24th day of June last bypast, that thereby the next General Assembly, and every subsequent General Assembly of this Church, and their commissions, may have one year's allowance entire, without any anticipations or encroachments by preceding Assemblies or Commissions, to defray the necessary charges of the Church during the time of their administration. Thirdly, The General Assembly appoints that each year's allowance be applied, in the first place, for defraying the stated annual charges of the Church quarterly, and the necessary exigencies of each particular year; that is, in such matters only as, during the time of every Commission's administration shall occur, which do immediately and directly concern the public interest of the whole Church in general, and any arrears of these that shall happen to be resting; and, in the next place, for payment of the other bygone debts of the Church then resting, according to the foresaid order of ranking already established: and the General Assembly discharges any new orders to be given, or precepts to be drawn upon any other accounts, until all the Church's bygone debts be paid; but, after payment of all prior debts, the General Assembly allows the several commissions to bestow that which remains of each year's allowance to such other uses of the Church as they shall judge most proper. Fourthly, The General Assembly hereby provides and declares, that no appointments upon the procurator or agents for the Church to manage processes for particular Synods, Presbyteries, or ministers, shall in time coming warrant the agents to lay out any money thereupon, except there be a special order of a General Assembly, agreeably to the present rules, expressly appointing them to that effect. Fifthly, The General Assembly appoints that L.12, 10s. sterling money quarterly, as the Church's money comes in, be lodged in the hands of one of the agents for the Church for defraying the said incidental charges, for which they are hereby ordered to make an account at each General Assembly; and, if any balance shall be found due to them, the same shall be paid to them, and the sum of L.12, 10s. sterling further; or, if the balance that shall be found due by them shall not extend to that sum, the said sum shall be made up to them out of the first money that comes in after clearing their accounts, as said is, including this year. And, Lastly, The General Assembly appoints the receiver of the Church's money, in his disbursing thereof in time coming, strictly to observe the foresaid rules; and discharges him to make payments in any other manner or order, as he will be answerable to the General Assemblies of this Church.

VIII.

Sess. 8, May 9, 1712, ante meridiem.—Commission by the General Assembly to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do therefore nominate and appoint their reverend brethren, Messrs William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the College of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c., to be commissioners of the General Assembly, to the effect after mentioned; with power to the said persons or their quorum. (Powers the same as in three preceding years.)

Sess. 11, May 13, 1712.—Act approving of the Representations and Addresses made by the Commission of the late General Assembly to the Queen, concerning the Toleration and Patronages.

The General Assembly having considered the proceedings of the Commission of the late General Assembly, with relation to public affairs, and, in particular, having had produced and read before them the representations made by them to her Majesty, concerning the bill entitled, “A Bill to prevent the disturbing of those of the Episcopal Communion in Scotland, in the exercise of their Religious Worship, and in the Use of the Liturgy of the Church of England, and for repealing an Act against irregular Marriages and Baptisms,” then depending in Parliament; and the “Bill for restoring of Patronages,” which were reserved by them in their approbation of the proceedings of the said Commission: The General Assembly did, by their vote, and hereby do, unanimously approve and ratify the foresaid proceedings of the said Commission in the premises, and particularly the said representations, as having been most faithful and seasonable. And, in token of their said approbation, they hereby ordain the said representations to be here inserted verbatim, as follows:—

TO THE QUEEN’S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The most humble Representation and Petition of the Commission of the late General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

The Church of Christ in Scotland, being, as we apprehend, in hazard of sad alterations and innovations, inconsistent with, and contrary to, that happy establishment secured to us by the laws both of God and the realm, from a bill entitled, “A Bill to prevent the disturbing those of the Episcopal Communion in Scotland, in the Exercise of their Religious Worship, and in the Use of the Liturgy of the Church of England, and for repealing the Act against irregular Baptisms and Marriages.” We do, in all duty and humility, flee to your Majesty’s royal protection, so often and so graciously assured to us, both by your royal word and letters.

If the matters in question did only relate to our own ease and better accommodation, we should patiently bear the same; but when we see the glory of God, and the power and purity of our holy religion, and of the ordinances of Jesus Christ, in this Church so much concerned, and the peace and quiet thereof, and of this whole country, so visibly in danger, to the prejudice of your Majesty’s honour and government, we cannot but hope that your Majesty will allow us to plead our just right, with that gracious liberty you are pleased to give the meanest of your subjects.

When, after the great and many hardships, troubles, and vicissitudes, wherewith the Church of Scotland had been tossed, even from its first Reformation from Popery, it pleased our gracious God, at, and by the late happy Revolution, to bless us with a full and complete restitution, and that by the Claim of Right, and the Acts of Parliament following, viz., the fifth Act of the Parliament, 1690, entitled, "Act ratifying the Confession of Faith, and settling Presbyterian Church Government;" whereby Presbyterian Church Government is established, ratified, and confirmed, "as the only government of Christ's Church within this kingdom," rescinding, annulling, and making void all Acts of Parliament, statutes and ordinances in the contrary, allowing and declaring the general meeting and representatives of the Presbyterian ministers and elders, in whose hands the exercise of the church government is established, to have power to try and purge out all insufficient, negligent, scandalous, and erroneous ministers, by due course of ecclesiastical process and censure; and, likewise, to redress all other Church disorders. By which act it is evident, that Presbyterian church government being thus established, the ministers and elders of this Church have all the powers committed by our Lord and Master to his ministers and officers, to watch over the flock, and to guard against all usurpers and intruders. Secondly, By the twenty-third Act of the Parliament, 1693, entitled, "Act for settling the Quiet and Peace of the Church," whereby it is expressly statute and ordained, That no person be admitted or continued to be a minister or preacher within this Church, unless he first take and subscribe the Oath of Allegiance and Assurance, and also subscribe the Confession of Faith, as the confession of his faith: And likewise, that he owns and acknowledges Presbyterian Church Government to be the only government of this Church. And, further, that he observe the uniformity of worship, and of the administration of all public ordinances, as the same are at present performed and allowed within this Church; and that no minister or preacher be admitted or continued, unless that he subscribe to observe, and do actually observe, the foresaid uniformity. Thirdly, By the twenty-second Act of Parliament, 1695, entitled, "Act against intruding into Churches without a legal Call and Admission thereto;" by which act it is statuted and declared, That whoever shall intrude themselves into any church, or shall exercise any part of the ministerial function within any parish, without an orderly call from the heritors and eldership, and legal admission from the Presbytery of the bounds, shall be removed, and also incapable for the space mentioned in the Act. And, Fourthly, By the third act of the Parliament, 1702, entitled, "Act for securing the Protestant Religion and Presbyterian Government;" whereby the foresaid Act 1690 is fully ratified. By which acts, and several others to that purpose, which we humbly presume to lay together, for your Majesty's more full information, we, with all submission, conceive, that Presbyterian Church Government is as fully settled and secured as could be devised; and, as the worship, discipline, and government of this Church were complied with, and submitted to, without any separation in all times since the Reformation, when Presbyterian Government was established by law; so there is no reason to doubt, but the same cheerful and universal compliance had been given thereto, at and ever since the late happy Revolution, if it had not been for that woeful seed of disaffection to the Revolution, and your Majesty's Government, as thereby established, and which indeed hath been the principal if not the only cause of these few prosecutions that occasion so loud and unjust a clamour.

But that your Majesty may be further satisfied of the injustice of these calumnies, wherewith we are reproached for excessive rigour, we cannot but lay before your Majesty this pregnant instance of our moderation; that since our late happy establishment, there have been taken in and continued hundreds of dissenting ministers upon the easiest terms; and we are further assured, that when any just trial shall be made, we shall ever be found inclined to all the Christian tenderness that can be expected from such as fear God, and love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Your Majesty, then, by what is here humbly represented, may plainly perceive what security we have for our present settlement before the Union; but then, in order to the Union, and for facilitating thereof, we have the 6th Act of the Parliament, 1707, entitled, "Act for securing the Protestant Religion and Presbyterian Government," whereby the whole acts above set down are ratified and approven. And your Majesty further, with advice and consent of the Estates of Parliament, expressly provides and declares, that the foresaid true Protestant religion, contained in the above-mentioned Confession of Faith, with the form and purity of worship presently in use within this Church, and its Presbyterian church government and discipline, "all established by the foresaid Acts of Parliament, pursuant to the Claim of Right, shall remain and continue unalterable;" and that the said Presbyterian government shall be the only government of the Church within the kingdom of Scotland. And, further, that after the decease of your Majesty, (whom God long preserve,) the Sovereign succeeding shall, in all time coming, at his or her accession to the Crown, swear and subscribe, "that they shall inviolably maintain and preserve the foresaid settlement of the true Protestant religion, with the government, worship, discipline, rights, and privileges of this Church, as above by law established." And it is further statute and ordained, that this Act of Parliament, with the establishment therein contained, shall be held and observed, in all time coming, as a fundamental and essential condition of any treaty of union to be concluded betwixt the two kingdoms, without any alteration thereof, or derogation thereto, in any sort whatsoever; as, also, that this Act of Parliament, and settlement therein contained, shall be inserted and repeated in any Act of Parliament that should pass for agreeing or concluding the foresaid treaty of union betwixt the two kingdoms; and that the same shall be therein expressly declared to be a fundamental and essential condition of the said treaty of union in all time coming; and, accordingly, and that our Chureh might have the plenary security above provided, and that, as was then plainly said, and as the acts sufficiently import, our security above-mentioned might be stated and established in a manner even beyond the reach of Parliament; in both Acts of Parliament passed in both kingdoms, ratifying and approving the treaty of union, the foresaid act for securing the Protestant religion, and Presbyterian Church government, is expressly inserted; and it is thereby statute and ordained, that this act, with the Establishment therein contained, shall be held and observed in all time coming, as a fundamental and essential condition of the foresaid treaty of union, without any alteration thereof, or derogation thereto, in any sort, for ever.

This being our great and plenary security in law, that we have for our present Church government and establishment; and we being in danger, on the other hand, of alterations and innovations intended by the foresaid bill, depending before the Honourable House of Commons; wherein, besides the hard reflections contained in the preface, it is proposed to be enacted, That Episcopall Dissenters shall have liberty to meet and assemble, for the exercise of Divine Worship in their own manner, and to use in their congregations the Liturgy of the Church of England, without any disturbance; and that for qualifying such pastors, Episcopall orders, and presenting letters of their orders to the justices of peace, shall be sufficient; and that no person or persons shall incur any penalty whatsoever, upon account of his or their resorting to the said Episcopall meeting: And that it shall be free and lawful for all the subjects in that part of Great Britain called Scotland to assemble and meet for divine service, without any disturbance, and to settle their congregations where they think fit: And for the Episcopall ministers not only to pray and preach in these congregations, but to administer the Sacraments, and marry, without incurring any pain or penalty whatsoever, without any other caveat that appears for their doctrine, save that they shall not deny, in their preaching or writing, the doctrine of the blessed Trinity; and withal, that the Presbyterian clergy are still allowed to inflict ecclesiastical censures upon those of their own communion, which plainly imports an exemption of all who shall disown their communion, we cannot but, in the first place, express our astonishing surprise and deep affliction to hear of such a bill offered for such a large and almost boundless toleration, not only threatening the overthrow of this Church, but giving a large licence almost to all errors and blasphemies, and throwing up all good discipline to the dishonour of God, and the scandal and ruin of the true Christian religion, and the infallible disturbance of the quiet, and to the confusion, of this Church and nation. And, therefore, in the next place, we do, in all humility, but with the greatest earnestness, beseech, nay, obtest your Majesty, by the same mercy of God that restored this Church, and raised your Majesty to the throne, to interpose for the relief of this Church, and the maintenance of the present establishment against such a manifest and ruining encroachment, in such manner as in your royal wisdom and justice you shall think fit.

That the gracious God may ever guide your Majesty with his counsel, till, after a long and happy reign upon earth, he crown you with glory in heaven, shall be the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most humble subjects, the Ministers and Elders, Commissioners of the late General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, and at our appointment, by (Sic subscribitur) WILLIAM MITCHELL, Moderator.

TO, THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address and Representation of the Commission of the late General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

Though we cannot forbear to regret the want of success in our endeavours with relation to a bill lately passed into an act, entitled, "An Act for preventing the disturbing of those of the Episcopal Communion in Scotland, in the exercise of their religious Worship, and in the use of the Liturgy of the Church of England;" yet, seeing we must still judge that the form and purity of worship presently within this Church, and its Presbyterian government and discipline, established by the Acts of Parliament pursuant to the Claim of Right, are to remain and continue unalterable, and that the Act of Parliament securing our Presbyterian Church government, and the establishment thereof, are to be held and observed in all time coming as a fundamental and essential condition of the treaty of union concluded betwixt the two kingdoms, without any alteration thereof, or derogation thereto, in any sort, for ever.

We cannot but with all humble duty and submission take notice of another bill presented in the Parliament of Great Britain for restoring of patronages, which we conceive is contrary to our Church constitution, so well secured by the treaty of union, and solemnly ratified by the Acts of Parliament of both kingdoms, and will inevitably obstruct the work of the Gospel, and create great disorder and disquiet in this Church and nation. For the further clearing whereof, we beg leave to represent to your Majesty, that from our first reformation from Popery, patronages have been reckoned a yoke and burden upon the Church of Scotland, as is declared by the First and Second Books of Discipline, published soon after the said Reformation; since which time they were still judged a grievance, till at length they came to be by law abolished.

These patronages having been restored with Prelacy, in the year 1661 and 1662, did indeed continue till the year 1690, that Prelacy was abolished, and Presbyterian government again established; and, though the Act of Parliament, 1690, resettling Presbyterian Church government, was founded upon the Act of Parliament, 1592, which bears a relation to patronages, yet the said Act of Parliament, 1690, doth expressly except that part of the old act, and refer patronages to be afterwards considered; which accordingly followed in the same Parliament, 1690. Whereby your Majesty may plainly perceive that the abolition of patronages was made a part of our Church constitution, enacted by the act 1690, and that this act 1690, with all other acts relative thereto, being expressly ratified, and for ever confirmed by the act securing the Protestant religion, and Presbyterian Church government, and engrossed as an essential condition of the ratifications of the Treaty of Union, passed in the Parliaments of both kingdoms, the said act abolishing patronages must be understood to be a part of our Presbyterian constitution, secured to us by the Treaty of Union for ever.

Yet the same Parliament, 1690, was so tender of the civil rights of patrons, and so sincerely desirous only to restore the Church to its just and primitive liberty in calling ministers, in a way agreeable to the word of God, that they only discharged the patron's power of presenting ministers to churches vacant; but, as to any thing or their civil rights, did better the condition of patrons, not only by reserving to them the right of disposal of vacant stipends for pious uses within the parish, but also giving to them the heritable right of the tithes restricting the ministers who formerly had the said right to stipends much below the value of the said tithes.

This being, then, the true account of our legal settlement as to this matter, we presume also, in all humble duty, to represent to your Majesty, that the restitution of patronages as to the point of presentation, can only gratify a few, while, on the other hand, it must necessarily disoblige a far greater part of your Majesty's good subjects, that are now freed of that imposition.

Neither can we forbear to suggest to your Majesty, that from what is said, it may easily be gathered what difficulties and hardships presbyteries may be laid under, as to their compliance with this innovation; and what differences, contests, and disorders, may probably ensue betwixt patrons, presbyteries, heritors, and people, besides the known abuses wherewith patronages have been attended, even in their most settled condition; whereof many instances might be given, especially that thereby a foundation was laid for simoniacal pactions betwixt patrons and those presented by them; and likewise ministers were imposed upon parishes by patrons who were utterly strangers to their circumstances, having neither property nor residence therein.

And, therefore, we cannot but most humbly and earnestly obtest your Majesty to consider this affair of restoring patronages in this Church, with all its circumstances and consequences; and since, through the blessing of God, and your Majesty's gracious protection, we have hitherto been at quiet and ease in this matter, that your Majesty would be graciously pleased, in your great wisdom, to use proper means for preventing this encroachment, so evidently prejudicial to the work of the Gospel and the peace of this Church.

That your Majesty may be guided and directed of God, in the great and weighty affairs of your government, and that, after the fulness of earthly blessings here, you may for ever wear a crown of glory that fadeth not away, are the earnest and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most humble subjects, the Ministers and Elders, Commissioners of the late General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by WILLIAM MITCHELL, Moderator.

And the General Assembly doth not only approve of the foresaid two Addresses and representations above inserted; but also hereby do further empower the Commission appointed by them to advert carefully to the concerns of this Church, in the matters above mentioned; and ordains them to use all dutiful and proper means for obtaining redress of what is or may be found therein grievous; and to advert to, and lay hold, with all duty and deference, on every fit occasion for that effect.

XI.

Sess. 11, May 13, 1712.—Act appointing the more frequent Celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The General Assembly, considering that the Assemblies of this National Church have, by several acts, appointed the frequent celebration of the holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in all the congregations of this Church; and judging that the due observation of these acts will greatly tend to the glory of God, and edification of souls; therefore, they do hereby enjoin all Presbyteries to inquire if the said acts be duly observed by all the brethren; and in case any minister shall neglect to celebrate the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in his parish for a whole year, the Assembly appoints the Presbytery in which the said parish lies to call for an account of the reasons of his omission of that great and solemn duty and ordinance, and to approve or disapprove the same as they shall see cause, and to record their diligence in this matter. And for making this and other acts and recommendations of Assemblies effectual, the General Assembly enjoins the Synods, at their several meetings, to inquire at the Presbyteries within their bounds, what care they have taken to execute the said act, and other recommendations foresaid; and ordains that their books shall bear an account of their diligence therein: And in order thereto, the Assembly appoints the several Synods to make up a roll of all matters that have been, or shall be recommended by the Assemblies of this Church, to be inquired at Presbyteries; and ordains the said roll to be inserted in their register, and given to the visitors of the Presbytery books, that they may take notice of, and report the diligence of Presbyteries in executing the said acts and recommendations. And in like manner it is agreed, that the Assembly shall make up a roll of all matters appointed to be inquired at Synods; and ordains every new act and recommendation, so soon as they are made, to be added to the said rolls, that thereby the General Assemblies may know how their acts and recommendations are observed by the several Synods and Presbyteries of this Church.

XII.

Sess. 12, May 13, 1712, post meridiem.—Act for the further Encouragement of Students having Irish.

The General Assembly recommends to Synods to admit no more bursars having the Irish language, but so many, to each of whom they are in a condition to pay ten pounds sterling at least; and for that end, appoints the bursaries of more Presbyteries than two or three, if they be small, to be joined together to make up the said sum; and for making this recommendation the more effectual, the Assembly appoints the several Presbyteries to send in to the meeting of the commission of this Assembly, in July next, a particular and distinct account of the quotas of their bursaries, subscribed by their moderator and clerk, and appoints the commission to proportion the said bursaries in the several districts, so as to make ten pounds sterling, at least, to each bursar, out of the half of the bursaries, appropriated by the acts of Assembly for that use. And, considering that there are several hopeful young men unprovided, the Assembly requires the several Synods timeously to fill up their vacant bursaries, in manner above mentioned, and ordains them to examine bursars, at least once every year, at their meetings, in harvest or winter. And the Assembly, understanding that there are many of the students who rely upon these bursaries for their maintenance and encouragement, that are reduced to great straits through not-payment thereof, they do enjoin Presbyteries to pay in punctually their several proportions of the said bursaries; and appoints the names of deficient to be given in to the meetings of the commission that immediately precede each Assembly. And the Assembly instructs their commission to look out for hopeful young men, having the Irish language, in order to be put on trials; and renews the powers given to the last commission to this effect.

XIII.

Sess. 12, May 13, 1712, post meridiem.—Advice concerning Soldiers under Scandals.

The General Assembly, considering that it may prove inconvenient to bring soldiers under scandals back to the parishes where they were delated as guilty, to satisfy church discipline there, after they are removed to places very remote; therefore, in case of scandals among soldiers, the Assembly does advise kirk-sessions to proceed without delay against the delinquents, so soon as the scandal breaks out; and in case the soldiers guilty be removed from their bounds before any scandal breaks out, or during the dependence of the process against them, the Assembly allows that the said scandalous soldiers satisfy church discipline in the parish where they are quartered for the time; and appoints the kirk-session of that parish to report what is done to the kirk-session of the parish in which the scandal broke out, or where the process was commenced, that they may cause intimate the same in their congregation. And the Assembly advises Church judicatories to proceed with all tenderness and prudence in dealing with strangers, so that the ends of Church discipline may be reached.

 XIV.

Sess. 12, May 13, 1712, post meridiem.—Act concerning the Preservation of the Registers of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, judging it sufficient for the preservation of the Records of this Church, that copies thereof be lodged in the Library of each University, according to the Act passed in the Assembly, 1692, and this in place of sending them to each Synod, as was ordered by the General Assembly, 1703: Therefore, they do hereby appoint, that a copy of the proceedings of every Assembly be sent to the Library of each of the Universities in Scotland, to be lodged there, and kept for the use of the Church and Judicatories thereof; and that the Faculties of the several Universities do, upon receipt of the said copies, send in to the Commissions of each General Assembly an extract of an act of their Faculty, under their Clerk's hand, acknowledging the receipt of the said copies; and that they are lodged in their Library only in trust, for the use and behoof of the Church; and obliging them to make them forthcoming to any of the Judicatories of this Church that calls for them, upon their receipt and obligation to return the same: And the Assembly repeals the said Act, 1703, which appoints copies to be sent to each Synod upon the public charges of the Church, but allows the Clerk of Assembly to give copies to such of the Judicatories of this Church as shall call for them, upon their own expenses.

 XV.

Sess. 13, May 14, 1712, ante meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers to join with the Presbytery of Lorn for visiting Lochaber, and other Parishes in the Bounds of that Presbytery.

The General Assembly having had under consideration the state of Lochaber, and other parishes within the bounds of the Presbytery of Lorn, the length and breadth thereof, the abounding of Popery therein, and want of schools in those parts, judged it necessary that three ministers from the Lowlands, and as many from the Synod of Argyle, should be sent to join with the said Presbytery of Lorn, to perambulate the said bounds, discourse with the heritors and inhabitants concerning new erections of churches in that country, and settlement of schools therein, and to endeavour to get places condescended on for that effect; and to obtain in writing the consent of the heritors. And the General Assembly did, and hereby do, nominate, commission, and appoint, the Reverend Mr Neill Campbell, minister at Roseneath, Mr Daniel M'Gilchrist at Luss, Mr Alexander Fraser at Croy, Mr Dugald Steuart at Rothesay, Mr Daniel M'Lean at Kilbride, and Mr Duncan Campbell at Kilhennan, ministers, to join with the said Presbytery of Lorn, for the ends above mentioned; and also for preaching the gospel, visiting of families, and doing other ministerial duties in the said country. And the General Assembly appoints the persons above named, and the foresaid Presbytery of Lorn, to meet for the ends foresaid at Fort-William, the first Wednesday of July next to come, at ten o'clock forenoon; and to continue in that country, in prosecution of the ends of this their commission, such part of this summer as they shall find necessary for the effect foresaid; and report to the next General Assembly.

 XVI.

Sess. 13, May 14, 1712, ante meridiem.—Act concerning the Oath of Abjuration.

The General Assembly, in pursuance of the reserve made by them in their approbation of the proceedings of the Commission of the last General Assembly of this Church, taking into their more particular consideration the proceedings of the said Commission about the Oath of Abjuration; and, more especially, the humble address and representation of the said Commission, made to the Queen's most excellent Majesty in that matter; they do approve and ratify the foresaid proceedings, and, more especially, the foresaid humble address and representation, judging the same to have been true, dutiful, faithful, and most seasonable; and, in token of their said approbation, have ordained, and hereby ordain, the said humble address and representation to be here inserted verbatim, as follows:—

UNTO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address and Representation of the Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, met by appointment of the said Assembly at Edinburgh, the 5th of March 1712 years.

May it please your Majesty,

Upon notice we had of a bill depending in Parliament, entitled, "A Bill to prevent the Disturbing of those of the Episcopal Communion in Scotland in the Exercise of their religious Worship, and in the Use of the Liturgy of the Church of England;" we, in all humility, presumed to address your Majesty for the preservation of our present establishment as secured to us by law, and for preventing the inconveniences that might ensue on the foresaid toleration, at the passing whereof thereafter in both Houses of Parliament we cannot but be deeply affected.

But now, that by the foresaid bill, the Oath of Abjuration, enacted for the better security of your Majesty's person and government, and establishment of the succession to the crown in the Protestant line, is appointed to be taken by all ministers; we do, in most humble duty, truly and sincerely own and acknowledge that your Majesty is lawful and rightful Queen of this realm, and of all your other dominions and countries thereunto belonging: And do solemnly and sincerely declare, that we do believe the person pretended to be the Prince of Wales, during the life of the late King James, and since his decease pretending to be, and taking upon himself the style and title of King of England, by the name of James the Third, or of Scotland, by the name of James the Eighth, or the style and title of King of Great Britain, hath not any right or title whatsoever to the crown of this realm, or any other of the dominions thereunto belonging; and we do most heartily renounce and refuse any allegiance or obedience to him; and we, withal, solemnly and sincerely profess that we will bear faith and true allegiance to your Majesty in all duties and occasions whatsoever that can be incumbent on us: And, further, we do faithfully promise, to the utmost of our power, to support, maintain, and defend the succession of the crown in the Protestant line against the said Pretender, and all other persons whatsoever, understanding the foresaid Oath of Abjuration in the fullest sense, wherein it can be understood to renounce and disclaim any right that the said Pretender can claim to your foresaid dominions; and, in the plain sense of the words, in so far as the said oath, and the acts to which it refers, settles and entails the succession of the crown of these dominions, for default of issue of your Majesty, on the Princess Sophia, Electoress Duchess Dowager of Hanover, and the heirs of her body, being Protestants.

But seeing we cannot dissemble with your Majesty, that there remains a scruple with many, as if the conditions mentioned in the acts of Parliament establishing the succession, referred to by the said oath, were to be understood as a part thereof, and that to swear to something in these conditions seems not consistent with our known principles: And that it is expressly declared and statuted by the Treaty and Articles of Union, and the acts of Parliament of both kingdoms ratifying the same, that none of the subjects of Scotland shall be liable to, but all and every one of them for ever free of any oath, test, or subscription within Scotland, contrary to or inconsistent with our present Presbyteriau Church Establishment; we, in the most humble and dutiful manner, most earnestly beseech and obtest, that this our address and representation, and most sincere declarations therein contained, may be graciously accepted by your Majesty, without respect to the foresaid conditions scrupled at, as the just and true signification of our allegiance and duty, and our sense of the foresaid oath and engagement, to prevent all mistakes and misrepresentations that possibly we may be liable to in this matter.

That the Lord may eminently bless your Majesty, and, after a long and happy reign upon earth, receive you into everlasting glory, is, and shall be, the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most humble subjects, the Ministers and Elders, Commissioners of the late General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by WILLIAM MITCHELL, Moderator.

And the Assembly farther considering, that it hath pleased her Majesty, in her gracious letter to this Assembly, to declare that the said address of the commission presented to her by those therewith entrusted, did so much manifest their loyalty and good affection to her royal person and government, and their true concern for the succession in the Protestant line by law established, that it could not but be acceptable, as giving her Majesty good ground to expect that there will be nothing in the procedure of this Assembly but what shall be dutiful; and, withal, considering that such of this Church as have taken, or may be clear to take, the foresaid Oath of Abjuration, and such as are not clear, do all equally profess that they heartily agree to all the points of loyalty and duty above asserted, the security whereof appears to be intended by the said oath, as fully witnessed by her Majesty's foresaid gracious acceptance; and that such as are not clear to take the said oath as it is proposed, do differ, as being apprehensive that the oath, as it stands, in terminis, doth contain, or may be interpreted to imply, some further engagement not agreeable to our principles, and such as can be only cleared by the legislature, which such as are clear (if they did not judge groundless) would be as careful to avoid; therefore the Assembly, for a full and unanimous manifestation of their loyalty and duty in the premises to all concerned, and, withal, to establish a right and good understanding among themselves, and all the members of this Church, in the matters wherein they are agreed, and to prevent, as much as possible, all mistakes upon the foresaid difficulties, and different practices that may thereon ensue, to the prejudice of true Christian and mutual charity, have thought fit to declare, and do hereby solemnly declare and ascertain their allegiance to her Majesty, Queen Anne, as only lawful and rightful Queen of this realm, and all other her Majesty's dominions and countries thereunto belonging; and their disowning and disclaiming of the foresaid Pretender, his having any right or title whatsoever to the crown of this realm, or any other of the dominions thereunto belonging; and, therefore, renouncing and refusing all allegiance and obedience to him; and that they will bear faith and true allegiance to her Majesty, in all duties and occasions whatsoever that can be incumbent on them; and, further, that they do promise faithfully, to the utmost of their power, to support, maintain, and defend the succession of the crown in the Protestant line, settled and entailed, for default of issue of her Majesty's body, on the Princess Sophia, Electoress and Duchess Dowager of Hanover, and the heirs of her body, being Protestants, against the said Pretender, and all other persons whatsoever. Which being the obligations and duties contained in the said oath, wherein we are all agreed, the General Assembly doth most seriously obtest all the ministers and members of this Church, whatever may happen to be their different practice, to entertain a good understanding herein, in all mutual forbearance; firmly hoping, through the grace of God, that if they continue in the same good mind, seeking and serving the Lord in sincerity, and bearing with one another in mutual love and charity, our gracious God will extricate us out of all these difficulties.

May 14, 1712.—An Address to the Queen concerning the Oath of Abjuration.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the Ministers and Elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

The Commission of the last General Assembly of this Church, being informed that the Oath of Abjuration was to be enjoined to all the ministers thereof, did enter into an humble address and representation to your Majesty, for declaring and ascertaining their loyalty to your Majesty, their disowning and disclaiming of the Pretender, and their faithful promising, to the utmost of their power, to support, maintain, and defend the succession of the crown in the Protestant line, settled and entailed on the Princess Sophia, Electoress and Duchess Dowager of Hanover, and the heirs of her body, being Protestants, against the said pretender, and all other persons whatsoever; but withal, did humbly suggest to your Majesty, that a scruple remained with many, as if the conditions mentioned in the Acts of Parliament, establishing the succession, referred to by the said oath, were to be understood as a part thereof, which is judged not to be consistent with our known principles; and, therefore, did plead to be relieved in the terms of the Treaty and Articles of the Union. And your Majesty has been pleased, in your gracious letter to this Assembly, to declare, that the said address did so much manifest their loyalty and good affection to your royal person and government, and their true concern for the succession in the Protestant line, that it could not but be acceptable. We, at present met in this Assembly, finding that the foresaid scruples do still remain with many of us, thought fit, in pursuance of our most humble duty, and for further manifestation of our loyalty in the premises, and for establishing a right and good understanding among the ministers and members of this Church, to renew the foresaid declaration and assertion of our loyalty to your Majesty, as our only lawful and rightful sovereign; and of our true and zealous concern for the succession of the crown in the Protestant line, against the said Pretender, and all other persons whatsoever. But seeing that the aforesaid scruples, as to the said oath, do still remain with many of us, and that your Majesty may plainly perceive how that all the ministers of this Church do, notwithstanding of the foresaid scruples, fully agree in their asserting their loyalty to your Majesty, and disowning any right or title in the Pretender, or any other, and their dutiful and zealous concern for the succession of the crown in the Protestant line, all which points we are willing to affirm by our great oath, if thereto required. We cannot but, in all humble duty to your Majesty, and Christian charity to one another, and for preserving the unity, peace, and quiet of this Church, most humbly and earnestly address your Majesty, that such of us as may remain unclear as to the taking of the said oath, may yet be favourably regarded by your Majesty as your most loyal and dutiful subjects; and that your Majesty would be graciously pleased to interpose for their relief, in such manner as in your royal wisdom you shall judge expedient. And this most humble address we, with all submission, are moved to make with the greater earnestness, that we are all of us most seriously desirous to keep the ministers of this Church, and all under their charge, in the greatest unanimity as to the points of loyalty and duty to your Majesty, and in peace and concord among themselves, for the advancing of your Majesty's service, and the honour and interest of your government.

That your Majesty's reign may be long and prosperous, and that you may be guided and directed of God in the great and weighty affairs of your government, and that your councils and undertakings may be still successful for preserving and defending the reformed Protestant interest at home and abroad, are the earnest and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most humble subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, and at our appointment, by WILLIAM HAMILTON, Moderator.

XVIII.

Sess. 15, May 15, 1712, ante meridiem.—An Address to the Queen concerning the Representations made to Her Majesty by the late Commission.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the Ministers and Elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

Having taken liberty in another address, humbly to represent to your Majesty what may tend to the full declaration of our duty and loyalty to your Majesty, and our sincere concern for the succession in the Protestant line, and for procuring relief and ease to such of us as may find ourselves straitened as to the taking of the Oath of Abjuration, in the manner appointed: We being met in the General Assembly of this Church, do, in all humble duty, beg leave to put your Majesty further in mind of the things which were laid before your Majesty by the Commission of the last General Assembly, as grievous and prejudicial to this Church; and, indeed, the late occurrences that have happened do so nearly affect our well settled and secured Church establishment, that we cannot possibly be silent. That the inconveniences and troubles that we thence apprehend may never be found amongst us, is our most serious wish. But since your Majesty, in your gracious letter to this Assembly, hath been pleased not only to assure us of your firm purpose to maintain the Church of Scotland as established by law, but also that you will employ your utmost care to protect us, and redress our just complaints, we most humbly beg leave to acquaint your Majesty, that we have instructed and empowered the Commission appointed by this Assembly, to advert carefully to all good opportunities, and to use all proper and dutiful means and methods whereby these our grievances may be happily redressed.

And, therefore, we do, in all humble duty, address your Majesty, that according to your wonted goodness and the gracious condescendence wherewith you have favoured us on the like occasions, your Majesty would be pleased to give such countenance to the addresses that may happen to be made to your Majesty by our said Commission, for relief in the premises, and to interpose your royal authority in such sort for a just redress, that this Church may still have the comfort of your Majesty's protection, with the benefit of the royal assurances that have been so often confirmed to us.

That God may long preserve your Majesty for the good of all your people, and the protection and comfort of all the churches of Christ, and that, after a prosperous reign upon earth, you may enjoy an eternal crown in heaven, is, and shall be, the sincere prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most humble subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

 John Duke of Atholl to be Recorded.*

The General Assembly being convened and constituted, there was produced to them, by his Grace John Duke of Atholl, her Majesty's commission, sealed at Edinburgh the 29th day of April current, with the Seal appointed by the Treaty of Union of the two kingdoms of Scotland and England to be kept and used in Scotland in place of the Great Seal of Scotland, and of the same tenor with former commissions, constituting him her Majesty's High Commissioner and Representative in this Assembly; which commission being publicly read with all due honour and respect, it is, by order of this Assembly, recorded in their books, ad futuram rei memoriam.

The Queen's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them the last day of April 1713.

ANNE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. We have had so many proofs of your good and prudent management in former Assemblies, and particularly the last, that we have cheerfully countenanced, by our authority, this your meeting; and we doubt not but you will take it as a particular mark of our regard to you, that we have appointed our right trusty, and right entirely beloved cousin and counsellor, John Duke of Atholl, to be our Commissioner, who, we persuade ourselves, will be acceptable to you. Our concern for promoting true piety and godliness, the great ends of the Gospel, is such, that you may be fully satisfied it shall be our care to employ such as shall be faithful in executing the laws, in punishing all such practices as are a scandal to the Christian profession, and against which we have signified our displeasure in our proclamations. We are sensible, that a pious and learned ministry is, under God, the great support and ornament of Christianity; and, therefore, we are resolved to countenance you in your endeavours to promote it, and to employ our power and authority for the advancing of it to your just satisfaction. We take this solemn occasion to renew the assurances we have formerly given you, of our firm purpose to maintain the Church of Scotland as established by law. The address of the late General Assembly did so much manifest their loyalty and good affection to our royal person and government, and their true concern for the succession in the Protestant line of the House of Hanover, as established by law, that it could not but be very acceptable to us: And your moderation and unanimity amongst yourselves is not more for your own good, than it will be for our satisfaction. And we assure ourselves, that there will be nothing in your procedure but what shall be dutiful to us, and shall manifest the wisdom of your conduct; and so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 15th day of April 1713, in the twelfth year of our reign.

By Her Majesty's Command,

DARTMOUTH.

Directed thus,—To the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of that part of our Kingdom of Great Britain called Scotland.

May 2, 1713.—The General Assembly's Answer to her Majesty's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter with which your Majesty hath been pleased to honour us doth manifest so great goodness, and so much concern for our happiness under your auspicious government, that we bless God for his having given us such a sovereign to reign over us: And we judge it our duty to offer to your Majesty our humble and hearty thanks, for all the favour you have been pleased to show to this Church; and more particularly, for the expressions of your Majesty's satisfaction with the proceedings of the last, as well as of former General Assemblies, which cannot but be a strong tie upon us, to be careful that there be nothing in our management that may be unanswerable to what your Majesty hath just reason to expect from us.

That your Majesty hath been pleased to make choice again of so noble a person as the Duke of Atholl to represent your Majesty in our Assembly, after the evidence of his fidelity to your Majesty, and the experience we have had of his good affection towards this Church, is not only most acceptable to us, but is such a very particular and obliging proof of your Majesty's regard to all our concerns, as cannot but engage us to pay him all that respect and duty that we owe to the high character he bears.

It gives this Church real comfort, and will be the perpetual glory of your reign and memory, that your Majesty is so zealously concerned for the promoting of piety, and that you are graciously pleased to give us your royal promise, that you will take care that none shall be employed but such as shall be faithful in executing the laws, in punishing all such practices as are a scandal to the Christian profession, and against which your Majesty hath testified your displeasure in your proclamations.

We do, with the greatest thankfulness, acknowledge that your Majesty hath been pleased to signify to us your gracious purpose to countenance us in our endeavours to promote a pious and learned ministry, (being, under God, the great support and ornament of Christianity,) by employing your royal power and authority for the advancement of it to our just satisfaction. This great favour, together with the renewed assurances your Majesty is pleased to give us of your firm purpose to maintain the Church of Scotland, as established by law, do oblige us to give all suitable returns of duty and gratitude, and encourage us to hope that your Majesty, in your great wisdom and goodness, will find a fit opportunity to remedy what we have formerly humbly laid before your Majesty, for the ease and quiet of this Church.

It gives us no small satisfaction, that the address of the late General Assembly, manifesting their loyalty and good affection to your royal person and government, and their true concern for the Protestant succession in the House of Hanover, upon which it is established by law, was so acceptable to your Majesty; and we crave leave to assure your Majesty, that there are none in your dominions more firm in their resolutions steadily to continue in both these, against all Pretenders whatsoever, and their adherents, than the ministers and members of the Church of Scotland, as established by law.

We also beg leave to testify to your Majesty, how much it did rejoice us to be acquainted by your Commissioner from the throne, with the great care that your Majesty has been pleased so conspicuously to show for the Protestant religion, and the continuation of it to succeeding generations in your own dominions; and that your Majesty has further extended the same pious care to the Protestant Churches abroad, and that God has blessed your endeavours for obtaining the release of those who are in the French galleys for their religion; and also the consent of France to redress the hardships to which the Protestant Churches in Germany were liable.

It is a very convincing proof of your Majesty's concern for us, that you are graciously pleased to recommend to us moderation and unanimity. We should be wanting to the duty we owe to God, and to so excellent a Queen, if we did not proceed with all calmness, temper, and concord, amongst ourselves, and all dutiful respect to your Majesty.

That the God of heaven may present your Majesty with the best blessings of His goodness, and ever guide your Majesty by His counsel, till after a long and happy reign upon earth, He crown you with glory in heaven, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most dutiful, most obedient, and most humble subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by
WILL. WISHART, Moderator.

May 2, 1713.—Act containing Directions to the Visitors of Synod Books.

The General Assembly, considering that, by the 11th Act of the General Assembly, 1712, entitled, "Act appointing the more frequent Celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper," it is ordained, that the Assembly shall make up a roll of all matters appointed to be inquired at Synods, and that every new recommendation, so soon as it is made, be added to the said rolls, that thereby the Assemblies may know how their acts and recommendations are observed by the several Synods and Presbyteries of this Church; and finding, that the matters following have been by former Assemblies recommended, and the observation thereof enjoined to Synods and Presbyteries; therefore, it is appointed that the following roll or list of the said matters be put in the hands of the revisers of Synod books at each Assembly, for their direction and assistance in visiting the said books; and the Assembly do appoint the said visitors, in their going through the said Synod books, carefully to advert,

6. If Synods inquire concerning Presbyteries holding parochial visitations, and ministers' visiting of families, according to the 16th Act of the General Assembly, 1706; the buying and reading of the acts and overtures of the General Assembly, according to the 16th Act of the General Assembly, 1700, and 18th Act of the General Assembly, 1705; and concerning their diligence in observing the Acts against profanity, particularly the 7th Act of the General Assembly, 1699, and inquire after mortifications for pious uses, as enjoined by the 22d Act of the General Assembly, 1700.

7. If Synods call their Presbyteries to an account as to the pains they take to get a school settled in every parish, and provided with a sufficient master and maintenance according to law, and take care that the school be visited conform to the 5th Act of the General Assembly, 1705, and 5th Act of the General Assembly, 1707; and if Presbyteries contribute for bursars having Irish, according to the 13th Act of the General Assembly, 1706; and if the Synod's advice be taken anent licensing probationers, according to the 10th Act of the Assembly, 1711.

8. If Synods inquire at Presbyteries concerning the increase and decrease of Popery, and other errors, and the pains taken to reclaim erroneous persons. See 8th Act of the General Assembly, 1707, &c.

9. If Synods take care to have the Acts of the General Assembly, particularly the 5th Act of the late Assembly, "Concerning a Contribution for promoting Christian Knowledge," observed; and if the account of their diligence in these matters be recorded, conform to the 11th Act of the General Assembly, 1710, &c.

10. If Presbytery books be punctually produced, revised, and attested, and if Presbyteries undergo their privy censures every Synod, and if there be a roll made up of matters recommended by the General Assembly to Synods, and if the said roll be recorded, and a copy thereof given to the visitors, according to the 18th Act of the General Assembly, 1712.

11. That the visitors of Synod books communicate all their remarks on these books to some of the Synod, and hear them thereupon, before they bring in the same to the General Assembly, as has been frequently enjoined by former Assemblies.

V.

May 5, 1713.—Act and Recommendation for furthering Contributions and Subscriptions towards promoting of Christian Knowledge.

The General Assembly, having heard and considered a representation and petition given in to them by the committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, with the opinion of the committee for bills thereupon, and heard several members of the said society, who are also members of this Assembly, give an account of the state of their matters, and success of their work; they found that the care and diligence of the society and their committee is very commendable, and they earnestly recommend to all ministers and elders, and charitably inclined persons, in their several stations, cheerfully to concur in this so good a work; and they did, and hereby do, again renew the recommendations of the last and preceding General Assemblies to the several Synods and Presbyteries of this Church, and particular ministers, entreating them carefully to observe the methods prescribed by these acts, for furthering subscriptions and contributions in the several parishes, and to transmit them to the society : And also, the Assembly do require and appoint the several Presbyteries to call for an account of the diligence of the ministers and sessions within their bounds in the said matter, at their privy censures and parochial visitations, and record their reports in their Presbytery books ; and ordains Synods, at their privy censures, to take a particular account of the diligence of their Presbyteries, and record the reports of Presbyteries in their books ; and Synods and Presbyteries to send a full and distinct report of their diligence in this matter, subscribed by the moderator and clerk, in manner prescribed by former acts, to the Commission of this Assembly, at their meeting in November next. And the Assembly appoints and instructs their Commission to call for the foresaid accounts, and see to the due observation of this and former recommendations made for the furthering of this pious and charitable work ; and that they lay before the next General Assembly an account of such Synods and Presbyteries as shall neglect to send in to them the reports of their diligence in this matter.

VI.

May 8, 1713.—Act for Maintaining the Unity and Peace of this Church.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration, that, by the 16th Act of the late Assembly, entitled, “ Act concerning the Oath of Abjuration,” mutual forbearance, love, and charity, notwithstanding of different sentiments and practices with respect to the said oath, was seriously recommended to all ministers and members of this Church ; and being informed that the said recommendation hath not been duly observed by some ministers and people, and that there are appearances of division in divers parts, upon occasion of the said different sentiments and practices ; and the Assembly being unanimously agreed, that these differences are no ground of separation from the judicatories presently established, and ordinances of Christ as they are now dispensed in this Church, seeing the ministers on both hands do own their firm adherence (notwithstanding the said differences) to the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government of this Church, and to their duty and loyalty to the Queen, and good affection to the Protestant succession in the illustrious House of Hanover : And further, the General Assembly, being deeply touched with the sense of danger there is to this Church under her present circumstances, by divisions, which tend to weaken our interest, and to expose us to our enemies ; and it being incumbent to the supreme judicatory of this Church to take care of her safety, and apply proper remedies to the disorders that happen, and not knowing to what height these evils may grow, unless withstood in the beginning, do therefore not only renew the foresaid recommendation, but most seriously obtest all ministers and people, in the bowels of our Lord Jesus Christ, charging them, as they regard his honour, and the peace and quiet of this Church, that they abstain from all divisive courses upon occasion of different sentiments and practices about the said oath ; and that they would, notwithstanding thereof, live in love and Christian communion together ; that ministers study to strengthen one another’s hands by a conscientious and close attendance upon the several judicatories of this Church ; that they use all prudent and gaining methods, as they have access, to keep the people in due subjection and love to their own pastors : That they do not encourage their withdrawing from them ; and that all judge charitably one of another, as having acted according to the light of their conscience in this matter ; and, therefore, that they carefully abstain from reproaching one another on account of the said different sentiments and practices. And the General Assembly doth seriously exhort all the ministers and members of this Church, as they would not mar and obstruct the success of the Gospel, the serious exercise of practical godliness, and the comely order of the house of God, that they endeavour, by the observation of the foresaid injunctions, to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

VII.

Sess. 7, May 8, 1713.—Act and Recommendation for Teaching the Common Tunes.

The Queen's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them the 6th day of May 1714.

ANNE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. We are so well satisfied with the accounts we have had of your prudent conduct in the last Assembly, we very willingly countenance, by our authority, your meeting at this time.

We have again made choice of our right trusty, and right entirely-beloved cousin and counsellor, John Duke of Atholl, keeper of our privy seal for Scotland, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our royal person in this Assembly; believing that none could be more acceptable to you than he, who has already more than once so well discharged that trust to our satisfaction.

We are very sensible how much the promoting of true piety and godliness, the great ends of the Gospel, depends upon the due execution of the laws against profaneness and immorality; and, therefore, it will be always our chief care to employ such persons as shall be faithful in executing the laws, and in punishing all such practices as are a scandal to our holy religion, and against which we have so often signified our just displeasure in our proclamations.

And as nothing can more effectually contribute to the propagating of the Gospel than the example of a pious and learned clergy, so we are resolved to use our endeavours, as we doubt not you will do yours, that vacant churches be supplied with pastors of an exemplary life and conversation.

We readily embrace this opportunity to renew the assurances we have formerly given you of our firm purpose to maintain the Church of Scotland, as by law established. The frequent proofs you have given us of your loyalty and good affection to our royal person and government, and of your concern for the Protestant succession in the House of Hanover, as by law established, as they could not but be very acceptable to us, so we doubt not of your continuing in the same dutiful dispositions.

Our concern for the good and peace of our subjects makes us take this opportunity earnestly to recommend to you moderation and unanimity in your present meeting, and that, at your return to your respective congregations, you would use your utmost endeavours for quieting the minds of the people, and to remove any jealousies and fears which have, without any just grounds, been suggested to them by persons of factious and turbulent spirits, and to make them sensible of the present blessings they enjoy, and of the bad consequences any kind of disturbance would have to the present tranquillity, as well as to their future happiness; all which we expect from you as faithful ministers of the Gospel of peace, which you profess, and who wish well to the present establishment in Church and State. So we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James', the 14th day of April 1714, in the thirteenth year of our reign.

By Her Majesty's Command,

MAR.

Directed thus,—To our Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

May 8, 1714.—The General Assembly's Answer to her Majesty's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's continuing to give your protection and countenance to our annual Assemblies is a favour which we do with all thankfulness acknowledge; and that our conduct in the last Assembly hath been acceptable to your Majesty, is what but cannot give us great satisfaction, and oblige us to manage ourselves so as we may not lose the honour and comfort of the good opinion your Majesty is pleased to have of us.

The choice that your Majesty hath again made of his Grace the Duke of Atholl, keeper of your privy seal for Scotland, to represent your royal person in this Assembly, is such a signal mark of your Majesty's goodness to us, as we cannot but be very thankful for. His fidelity to your Majesty, the prudence of his conduct when formerly clothed with the high character that he now again bears, the experience we have had of his favour to this Church, and his zeal for suppressing all profaneness and immorality where he hath authority or influence, cannot but make us have a high value for him, and engage us to contribute what is in our power to his being easy in the discharge of that high trust which your Majesty hath honoured him with.

It is a great comfort to us that your Majesty is pleased to give us renewed assurances, that it will be your royal care to promote true piety and godliness, by employing such persons as shall be faithful in duly executing the laws against profaneness and immorality, without which true religion must greatly decay; and we humbly presume to persuade ourselves that your Majesty will, in your royal wisdom, find out such means as shall be most proper for making your religious purposes more effectual than to our deep regret they have hitherto been.

We should be very unworthy of the character we bear of ministers of Christ, if we should not, to the utmost of our power, contribute to the supplying vacant churches with pious and learned men, especially while your Majesty hath the goodness to encourage us, by declaring your purpose to use your royal endeavours for that end.

We cheerfully embrace and lay hold upon the assurance your Majesty gives us, of your firm purpose to maintain Presbyterian Government in the Church of Scotland, as established by law, and do presume to hope that these things which are grievous to us may come in due time and manner to be redressed, and that all the vain confidences of enemies to our constitution shall at last be brought to nought.

It shall, Madam, be our constant care not only to be steadily loyal ourselves to your Majesty, and fixed in our concern for the Protestant succession in the House of Hanover, but it shall also be our endeavour, that all who join in communion with us be duly possessed with principles of true loyalty and affection to your Majesty as our only rightful sovereign, and firmness to the Protestant succession in the illustrious House of Hanover, upon both which, under God, the security of our religion and liberties does entirely depend.

Moderation and unanimity in our present meeting, so earnestly recommended to us by your Majesty, are so much both our duty and interest, that we should be greatly wanting to ourselves, and unanswerable to the duty we owe to God, and the regard we ought to have to what your Majesty exhorts us to, should we not be seriously concerned that nothing opposite to these be found among us.

However hold and unaccountable the proceedings of such as are enemies to your Majesty's government, and friends of the Pretender, have of late been, and whatever grounds they may have given for fears and jealousies amongst your faithful subjects, we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that as it has been, so it ever shall be, our care to make all we have influence upon deeply sensible of the blessings they enjoy under your Majesty's Government, and of the bad consequences that anything tending to disturb the same, or endanger the Protestant succession, would have to the present tranquillity, as well as to their future happiness.

That your Majesty may be always highly favoured of God for the comfort of the Protestant churches, and the happiness of your people as to their religious and civil concerns; and after a very long and happy reign here upon earth, be at last crowned with glory, honour, and immortality, leaving a peaceable access to the throne to the Protestant heirs of the illustrious Family of Hanover, are and shall be the fervent and constant prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by

WILL. MITCHELL, Moderator.

May 8, 1714.—The General Assembly's Congratulatory Address to the Queen, upon her Majesty's Recovery from her late Indisposition.

Most gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most faithful and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, think it our duty to embrace the first opportunity in our meeting of this General Assembly, to acquaint your Majesty, that as your late indisposition did justly grieve and alarm us, we do now, with the greatest joy and thankfulness to Almighty God, congratulate your Majesty's happy recovery and perfect health, of which we had the most agreeable confirmation by your Majesty's High Commissioner from the throne.

It hath been, and ever shall be. our fervent prayer, that the infinitely good God may preserve your Majesty in firm health and prosperity, and enable you to defeat the designs of the Pretender, and all his adherents, against your Majesty's just title; and that, after a very long, happy, quiet, and peaceable reign on earth, you may be crowned with glory and immortality; and that the peaceable possession of the throne of these nations may be conveyed to a Protestant of the most illustrious House of Hanover; our firm zeal for which your Majesty hath frequently declared to be acceptable to you.

WILL. MITCHELL, Moderator.

Sess. 3, May 8, 1714.—Act for the better Execution of the Laws against Profaneness.

The General Assembly finding, that albeit there have been many excellent acts, both of Parliaments and General Assemblies, made for suppressing of immorality and vice; and that the Queen's Majesty, by her royal proclamation, dated 18th August 1708 years, hath required the punctual execution of the good laws made for encouragement of piety and virtue, and punishing of vice and immorality, and hath appointed her said proclamation to be read from the pulpits, at such times as shall be found needful by the Presbyteries and Synods of the bounds; yet all manner of immorality does abound through this nation, to the dishonour of God and the scandal of our holy religion, which threatens us with severe strokes and judgments; do therefore appoint that her Majesty's proclamation of the date foresaid, with the abbreviate of the laws subjoined thereto; as also the 13th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1694; 7th and 11th Acts of the General Assemblies, 1697; and 7th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1699, be reprinted in a small volume; and that a copy thereof be sent to every parish and Kirk-session, Presbytery, and Synod in Scotland; and do appoint the said proclamation and abbreviate to be read from the pulpits of all the churches in Scotland, upon the third Lord's day of August next to come, before pronouncing of the blessing; and the General Assembly recommends to ministers on that day to preach a sermon suited to the occasion; and do seriously exhort all the members of this Church, in their several stations, to do what is required of them by the said acts and her Majesty's foresaid proclamation: But because that the too frequent reading of the foresaid proclamation and abbreviate has been found inconvenient; therefore, the General Assembly leaves it to the several Synods and Presbyteries, after the first reading thereof, to give orders about the time of reading it afterward, as often, and at such times, as they shall judge it needful and convenient; and ordains Synods and Presbyteries to record their diligence in this matter in their books.

VI.

Sess. 5, May 11, 1714.—Act for further regulating the Trials of Probationers.

The General Assembly, considering how necessary it is, especially at this juncture, that Presbyteries be very cautious in admitting persons to trials in order to their being licensed to preach, and that they be exact in the said trials; do, therefore, seriously recommend to all the Professors of Divinity and Presbyteries within this national Church, the strict observation of the 5th Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1705, and 10th Act of the General Assembly, held anno 1711, concerning young men to be entered on trials, and other Acts of the General Assembly about trying and licensing probationers; and further do recommend to Presbyteries, that they cause read to the young men about to be tried, the engagements required by the said Act 10th, anno 1711, of such as are to be licensed; and that they take the said young men their promise that they will subscribe to and punctually observe the same, in case the Presbytery shall see cause to license them; and Presbyteries are desired to record this their promise in their books, and to cause all this to be done before any part of the public trials be prescribed; and, in the case of students, their bringing testimonials from their professors, and from the Presbyteries wherein they have for the most part resided, in the terms of the foresaid Act 5th, anno 1705, and Act 10th, 1711, in order to their passing trials in some other Presbytery; such Presbyteries, to whom they shall come so recommended, are not to begin their trials until they have resided at least half a year immediately before in their bounds. And, lastly, the visitors of the Presbytery books are appointed to report to their Synods an account of the diligence of the several Presbyteries in this matter; provided always, that what is herein contained be not extended to students having the Irish language.

VII.

Sess. 5, May 11, 1714.—Act for discouraging unworthy Bursars.

The General Assembly, considering that bursaries have been conferred upon some young men that are found very unworthy of any encouragement from this Church; for remeid whereof, the General Assembly recommends to Synods and Presbyteries to make particular and exact inquiry into the education, piety, literature, principles and conversation of those whom they recommend to bursaries; and that they recommend none of whom they have not ground to believe that they will be useful, and who are firm to the interests of this Church: And, further, the General Assembly appoints such Presbyteries as shall discover any just ground of suspicion in young men having these bursaries, with respect to these things, to acquaint the General Assemblies of this Church, or Commissions thereof; and also the Presbyteries or Synods whose bursars they are, that if they be found unworthy, the encouragement they enjoy may be taken from them, and bestowed on persons having the qualifications required by the acts of Assembly.

VIII.

Sess. 5, May 11, 1714.—Act for restoring and preserving Unity in this Church.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration, that by the 6th act of the last General Assembly, 1713, it is strictly and seriously enjoined, that all the ministers and members of this Church live in love and Christian communion together; and that ministers study to strengthen one another's hands by a close and conscientious attendance on the judicatures of this Church, notwithstanding of different sentiments and practices about the Oath of Abjuration, all being of the same mind in owning and adhering to that pitch of reformation to which the Lord had happily raised this Church; and being deeply concerned that nothing contrary to these great and necessary duties should be found amongst the ministers or members of this Church at this time especially, when our circumstances call upon us to watch against any appearances of division; doth therefore renew the exhortations contained in the foresaid act, seriously obtesting all, in the bowels of our Lord Jesus Christ, whether ministers or people, that they lay to heart these important duties, and that there be no distinguishing courses taken contrary thereunto, on occasion of celebrating the holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which ought to be the bond of love and unity among Christians. And, in regard it appeareth unto this Assembly, from the records of the late Commission, that representations have been sent to them from judicatures in the bounds of Dumfries, concerning the practices of some brethren in that Synod, who are said to have separated from their Synod and Presbyteries, and to have baptized and married irregularly, and admitted persons to the Lord's Supper without certificates from their own ministers, and to have gone out of their own parishes, and preached and baptized without the appointment of any judicatory, and that both in vacant and planted congregations; and these practices, if true, being very disorderly, and contrary to the great and necessary duties enjoined in the said act, and portending much danger to this Church; therefore, the General Assembly, being on the one hand deeply concerned for the preventing of schism, and preserving the peace and unity of this Church, and, on the other hand, much inclined to show all tenderness to these brethren, so far as is consistent with the safety of the Church, and their fidelity to the trust reposed in them, doth appoint Mr William Mitchell, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, Messrs William Carstares, William Wishart, William Hamilton, John Flint, and James Hart, Ministers there; Messrs James Hog at Carnock, William Monerieff at Largo, John Schaw at Leith, Robert Livingston at Biggar, Patrick Cuming at Ormiston, John Currie at Haddington, John Stirling, Principal of the College of Glasgow, John Muirhead at Cambusnethan, James Ramsay at Kelso, and Samuel Nairn at Errol, the Right Honourable the Earl of Buchan, the Lord Ormiston, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, John Aird, Provost of Glasgow, Lieutenant-Colonel John Erskine of Carnock, Lieutenant-Colonel John Blackadder, Lieutenant-Colonel William Maxwell of Cardoness, and John Martin of Arries, Ruling Elders, thirteen of whom to be a quorum, whereof nine are always to be ministers, to be a committee to consider the representations, or any others that may be offered to them concerning those or other brethren that may follow the like courses, to deal with them in order to remove their scruples, and reclaim them to their duty; and for that end to meet at Edinburgh the fourth Wednesday of June next to come, with power to choose their own moderator and clerk, and to adjourn themselves from time to time; and that either at Edinburgh, or to Glasgow or Ayr, as they shall see cause; and the General Assembly appoints these brethren to attend that committee at that diet, and any other to which the said committee shall require them to come; and ordains letters to be written advertising them hereof, and requiring their attendance; and also requiring them to keep within their own parishes as to their ministerial duties; and the Assembly empowers this committee also to call any other brethren that may be represented to follow the like disorderly courses, and appoints them to report their diligence to the Commission to be appointed by this Assembly: And the said Commission is hereby empowered from time to time to give to the said committee instructions and directions as to their procedure, and to cognosce and finally determine in what concerns the said affair.

 IX.

Sess. 8, May 14, 1714.—Act approving the Proceedings of the Commission of the late General Assembly, and particularly the Seasonable Warning concerning the Danger of Popery.

The General Assembly, having heard and considered the report of those appointed to revise the register of the actings and proceedings of the Commission of the late General Assembly, and having had the said register produced before them, did find that the said Commission have proceeded according to their commission and instructions, and have been diligent and faithful in the work committed to them, for which the Assembly gave them thanks, and particularly for their zeal against Popery, and seasonably impressing the minds of the people with loyalty to her Majesty, firmness to the Protestant succession in the illustrious Family of Hanover, and just aversion to the Pretender, all fully expressed in their Seasonable Warning.

 X.

Sess. 8, May 14, 1714.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration, that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do, therefore, nominate and appoint their reverend brethren, Messrs William Mitchell, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of the General Assembly to the effect after mentioned, with power to the said persons, &c.; (their powers are the same as in the corresponding act of the immediately preceding years.)

 XI.

Sess. 8, May 14, 1714.—Act for procuring the better Execution of former Acts against Popery, and for preventing the Growth thereof.

The General Assembly, for preventing the growth of Popery, do enjoin ministers and members of kirk-sessions to keep a watchful eye over Papists, and deal with them for their conviction, according to the 8th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1707, and carefully to give in yearly to the Presbytery lists of their names and designations, particularly of Popish bishops, priests, Jesuits, and other traffickers, who go about to pervert people from the truth, and of apostates from the true religion, with an account of their Popish meetings, times, and places thereof, and witnesses for proving the same, with the names of children under Popish parents, tutors, curators, or governors, and of the nearest Protestant relations of such children; and likewise of all Papists who keep schools, or teach any science, art, or exercise, and also of Protestants who keep Popish servants, and of all Papists who have succeeded to lands or heritages within their bounds, since the year 1700, and of all other contraveners of the 3d Act of the Parliament held that year, entitled, "Act for preventing the Growth of Popery;" and Presbyteries are strictly enjoined to give in yearly, upon the 21st day of February, full informations of these things, subscribed by their moderator and clerk, to the Justices of the Peace in the several shires within which the said Presbyteries do lie, and Papists reside or haunt, at their quarter sessions or meetings, and to the other Judges Ordinary within the bounds of the said Presbyteries, in order to due trial: And appoints Presbyteries to send another authentic copy of the said informations, subscribed, as said is, to the procurator or agent for the Church, to be by them laid before the Lords Justice General, or Justice Clerk, or her Majesty's Advocate or Solicitors; and the Assembly further appoints Presbyteries to give in also copies of the said informations to their Synods, according to former Acts of Assembly, and ordains Synods to call for the same from Presbyteries, and record their diligence herein in their books, that the General Assembly may see it, and give such orders thereanent as they shall judge proper.

XII.

Sess. ult., May 17, 1714.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's known zeal for the true reformed Protestant religion, and the renewed gracious assurances we have from your Majesty, to maintain and protect the Presbyterian government of this Church, as by law established, do encourage us in pursuance of those Christian ends, recommended to us by your most gracious letter to this Assembly, to lay before your Majesty, in all humble duty, these things that so nearly concern the interest of religion and of this Church.

It is our extreme sorrow, that we find ourselves obliged to represent to your Majesty the extraordinary growth of Popery, and bold and insolent carriage of Popish bishops, priests, Jesuits, and other trafficking Papists in several parts of this nation, and that not only by secret practices, but by avowed keeping of mass meetings and chapels, to which people do openly resort, by whose artifices, several hundreds have of late been perverted in a few parishes, and that their bishops do presume, at stated times, to confirm great multitudes as in a Popish country, to the great dishonour of God, the violation of your Majesty's good laws, the increase of disaffection to your royal government, and the grief and disquiet of the hearts of your faithful subjects; a more full and particular account whereof shall be sent to your Majesty's Secretaries of State, to be laid before your Majesty.

Though we own ourselves, both as Christians and as ministers, indispensably bound to exercise charity towards Protestants that differ from us, yet we cannot forbear to represent to your Majesty the disorders of some of the Episcopal persuasion, who transgress your laws by possessing themselves of parish churches, and introducing therein a way of worship never allowed in this Church, and manifestly contrary to the act for securing Presbyterian government, declared to be a fundamental act of the Union, of which we have a pregnant instance, by the late violent and tumultuary invasion of the Church of Old Aberdeen; and however fond some of that way appear to be of the Liturgy of the Church of England, they do either altogether omit the prayers for your Majesty, or make such alterations of these prayers as render them equally applicable to the Pretender as to your Majesty: Nor can we omit this opportunity to regret to your Majesty the disturbance Mr David Anderson, Professor of Divinity in your College of Old Aberdeen, has met with in the peaceable possession of his office: On this occasion, also, we are constrained in all humility to acquaint your Majesty how much we are astonished and grieved, that some of late have had the boldness to represent the ministers of this Church, and those of our communion, as disloyal and seditious; and we know no reason why they thus express their hatred and malice against us, but because, on all occasions, we assert and maintain your Majesty's undoubted title to the Crown, and use our utmost endeavours to confirm the people in their affection and loyalty to your Majesty's person and government, their zeal for the Protestant succession in the House of Hanover, and their just aversion to the Pretender, which we conceive to be the true cause, that in a late address from Fife, the reasons of a fast appointed by the Synod of that province, which contain becoming expressions of duty and loyalty to your Majesty, and affectionate zeal to the Protestant succession, are so grossly misrepresented; and we cannot but observe, that those who in their addresses do insinuate anything against us and our constitution, make no mention of the Protestant succession in the House of Hanover, being equally, and for the same reasons, disaffected to both.

We must also crave leave deeply to regret the abounding of error, and profaneness of all sorts, notwithstanding the clear light of the Gospel, and the many excellent laws, and your Majesty's royal proclamations to restrain them.

These being the heads of our grievances, wherein your Majesty cannot but perceive how much the glory of God, the purity of religion, the obedience to your laws, the honour of your government, and the peace and welfare of this nation are concerned—we do, in all humility, most earnestly entreat that your Majesty will be pleased, in your royal wisdom and goodness, to appoint, that the laws against Popery and profaneness may be executed with all vigour, and that all unwarrantable and illegal practices and attempts against our most holy religion, and present happy establishment of this Church, may be prevented, and punished according to law.

That God may long preserve your Majesty for the defence of the true Protestant religion, the comfort of all the churches of Christ, and the welfare and prosperity of this Church in particular, shall be the constant and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

WILL. MITCHELL, Moderator.

Sess. ult., May 17, 1714.—Act and Recommendation in favour of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge.

Upon the 10th day of May current, there was produced to, and read in presence of, the General Assembly, a representation and petition, the tenor whereof follows, viz.

“Unto the Right Reverend and Honourable the Moderator, and remanent Ministers and Ruling Elders, members of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, the Representation and Petition of the Committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, humbly sheweth,

That her Majesty having been graciously pleased to erect a Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the General Assemblies of this Church have, ever since the erecting of that Society, showed a great zeal to promote the pious design thereof, not only by instructing their commissions to keep a correspondence with the Society, but also by recommending to Synods, Presbyteries, ministers, members of sessions, and persons of all ranks, to contribute towards that excellent design, as is fully expressed in the several acts made to that purpose—these have been very encouraging to the members of the Society and their committee, to bestow part of their time and pains to forward, as far as they could, so good a work. It has been the study of the Society to follow the directions laid down in her Majesty's Letters Patent, and to avoid every thing that might justly be ground of offence to any serious Christian, and for the satisfaction of contributors, have been, and still are, willing to consider any proposals that may be made to them for furthering the design of the Society, so far as the annual rent of the stock will allow, agreeably to her Majesty's Letters Patent; and whatever have been the secret whispers, groundless and false reports of some, who are either enemies to this promising undertaking, or ignorant of this pious design, and unwilling to give any assistance thereto, yet the Society's management has been such, that they are always ready to expose it to any person who desires to understand the same, for they keep their books and accounts distinct and open, that any contributor who pleases may have access thereto; and this has been not only published in the printed newspapers, but a public intimation thereof has been given by the committee of the Society, and the same was sent to the several Synods and Presbyteries, by order of the last Assembly, to be read from all the pulpits in Scotland. The Society cannot but bless God for the great zeal and clarity that many Presbyteries, ministers, elders, and other well disposed persons, have showed in this matter; for by their liberality, the Society's stock laid out, preceding the 7th of January last, does amount to the sum of £5087 sterling, upon the interest of which there are maintained, one who officiates as minister and schoolmaster in Hirta, alias St Kilda, and schoolmasters at Snizort, in the Isle of Skye—Glenelg, in the remote Highlands—Abertarff, in the shire of Inverness—Lairg and Kildonan in Sutherland—Duirness in Strathnaver—Harray in the Continent, and Shapinshay in the North Isles of Orkney—Walls in Zetland—Tomnamvillian, in the Duke of Gordon's country—Tombelly and Castletown in Aberdeenshire—Lochearnside, Glenlednoch, and Glenarclnae, in Perthshire—and one in Gairloch, in the bounds of the Synod of Ross—in all seventeen schools; and some of the masters have allowance for maintaining assistants, where their schools are numerous, and there is a considerable sum given out yearly for books to these schools, and transporting thereof to them; and each scholar taught gratis at the Society's schools is allowed a new Bible, the Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, with Vincent's or Hall's Exposition of the Catechism, and Guthrie's Trial of a Saving Interest in Christ, so soon as it is attested that they are in ease to read the Bible distinctly. There are comfortable accounts of the usefulness of these schools, and of their great success and number of the scholars, for there are 118 scholars at one school, at others 70, 67, 50, 40, 39, 36, &c., where they have for any time been settled, and many of the scholars can read the Bible pointedly, repeat the Shorter Catechism in the church, are learning to write, and to understand arithmetic, and to sing the common tunes used in the churches; and such care is taken in the choice of masters, as to their piety, learning, prudence, and other qualifications, that in remote places where ministers have large parishes, or more kirks than one, they, by the minister's allowance and direction, do help to supply his absence, by convening the scholars, and such others as are pleased to attend on the Lord's Day, and reading the Holy Scriptures to them, and a sermon out of a book, praying, singing Psalms in the forenoon, and catechising in the afternoon, and by the example of the scholars, there is an emulation begot in those of riper years, whereas before, the Lord's Day was little regarded in such places when the ministers were absent. But though the Society must acknowledge the great and laudable zeal of some persons of quality, gentlemen, ministers, and other well disposed persons, particularly in Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Glasgow, Dumfries, and other places, who have contributed liberally for advancing the Christian and noble design of her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent, and that the success of the schools already erected hath been very encouraging—yet we must beg leave again to represent, that some Presbyteries and ministers have never to this day made any return of their having intimated the Acts of Assembly that concerned the Society, although the same were timeously sent to them, so that in some places the pious design of the said Society is wholly concealed and unknown, and people have not had an opportunity to contribute towards so Christian and excellent a work, who would cordially do it. Other ministers have satisfied themselves in that they have contributed or subscribed for their own part, though they have used little or no diligence to promote contributions among their people, apprehending that their endeavours would be without success, whereas it is certain, that some who have been under these apprehensions, before they attempted to collect, have, after their setting about the work, by reading the foresaid papers sent to them, and giving suitable exhortations to their people, found them cheerful and liberal in their contributions, beyond their expectations; for they have found even children and servants show a zeal to and concern for this pious undertaking, and desirous to forward the same, and that the small mites thrown in by the poorer sort, when laid together, have amounted to a considerable sum. Other ministers have extended their endeavours no further than by making a collection at the church doors, (as in the case of common charity,) and in such parishes, what has been collected has come to a very small account; whereas others who have been at the pains to go from house to house to obtain the contribution of each particular person, as is prescribed by the Acts of Assembly, have got together very considerable sums, and people have declared, that their hearts never gave them so much to any collection as to this, which is for such an excellent and glorious design; and there are some who, though they have collected, yet delay to transmit the money to the Society's Treasurer, upon pretence either of waiting till they get more, or that they want an account how the money already raised is employed, (notwithstanding of the distinct accounts transmitted to them of the Society's progress from time to time.) If others had been thus backward and careless, this Christian and pious design, proposed after maturest deliberation, by the Commission of the General Assembly, and authorised by royal authority, had been frustrated, and such delays and neglect of what is so seriously recommended by her Majesty and the General Assembly, do greatly obstruct the progress of the Society, for the money must first come to their hands, and then be laid out on interest, and the interest be raised before they can supply the schools; seeing, by the Letters Patent, it is only the interest of their stock that can be employed for that end. The Society is not willing, at this time, to condescend upon particular Synods, Presbyteries, and parishes thus deficient, or persons who have not paid in the money they subscribed for, or collected from others, but is rather desirous that such deficient have some longer time allowed them to exonerate their consciences in such an important trust, according to former Acts of the General Assembly, Letters from their Commissions, and from the Society and their committees; and for the further satisfaction of the Assembly, the Committee is willing to meet with such as shall be named by them, and to lay the Society's accounts and books before them.

May it therefore please this Venerable Assembly to consider the premises, and to cause read the 5th Act of the late General Assembly, and renew the recommendations and orders therein contained in all points, and, further, to recommend to Presbyteries to look out for fit persons, duly qualified in the terms of her Majesty's Letters Patent, who are willing to serve the Society, and send an account of them with certificates in their favour to the Society or their Committee.

This, at the appointment, and in name of the said Committee, is subscribed by Jo. Duncan, Pr. Com., Jo. Dundas, Sec. Soc."

Which Representation and Petition being considered by the General Assembly, with the deliverance of the Committee of Bills thereupon, they caused read the 5th Act of the late General Assembly, anno 1713, and did, and hereby do, renew the recommendations and injunctions therein contained in all points; and, further, recommend to Presbyteries to look out for persons, duly qualified in the terms of her Majesty's Letters Patent, who are willing to serve the Society, and to send an account of them with certificates in their favour to the Society or their committee. And the General Assembly did give the said Society their hearty thanks for their great care and diligence in carrying on the excellent design of her Majesty's Letters Patent for Propagating Christian Knowledge; and several members of the Society present in the Assembly, having desired that they would appoint a committee of their number to meet with the committee of the Society, to discourse with them, and by joint counsel to advise what further may be proposed to the General Assembly, to be done for the benefit of the said Society, and by the Society, for fully satisfying, not only the members of this Assembly, but all others, as to the exactness and fairness of their management. The General Assembly appointed their committee already named, being some out of the several Synods, for revising the commission book, when they have done with the said book, to meet with the committee of the Society for the ends foresaid, and report.

And this day the committee of the General Assembly appointed to meet with the committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, reported that they had discoursed with that committee at length, and had all their books laid before them, and were fully satisfied of the groundlessness of all the objections that were moved against them, and they saw that the Society can give clear and satisfying documents of all the particulars contained in their representation to this Assembly; and, therefore, the Committee give it as their opinion, that the nature and constitution of that Society is such, that it is as well secured against the danger of future events as any Society can be, and they thought that the Assembly should empower their Commission to appoint public intimations in all the congregations of this Church, of an additional representation of the further progress and success of the Society, which they are preparing. The General Assembly having heard and considered the said report, they were well satisfied therewith, and approved of their committee's opinion, and did empower their Commission to the effect above mentioned.

Sess. ult., May 17, 1714.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, the fourth day of May next to come, in the year of our Lord 1715 years.

This Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing the 133d Psalm, and pronouncing of the blessing.

Sess. 1, May 4, 1715.—The King's Commission to John Earl of Rothes produced, and ordered to be Recorded.

The General Assembly of the ministers and ruling elders of this national Church, being convened and constituted, there was produced to them by the Right Honourable John Earl of Rothes his Majesty's Commission, sealed with the seal appointed by the Treaty of Union betwixt the two kingdoms of Scotland and England to be kept and used in Scotland in place of the Great Seal of Scotland, appointing him his Majesty's High Commissioner and Representative in this National Assembly; which Commission being publicly read with all due honour and respect, the General Assembly ordered the same to be recorded in their Registers, ad futuram rei memoriam, the tenor whereof follows:—

May 4, 1715.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner,

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. We are so well satisfied with the proofs the Church of Scotland have given of their steady adherence to the Protestant succession in our family, the loyalty and affection they have shown to our person and government, and their constant zeal for the Protestant interest, that we very willingly countenance with our authority this first Assembly of our reign. We have made choice of our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, John Earl of Rothes, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our royal person in this Assembly, believing that none can be more acceptable to you than he, who, upon all occasions, has eminently distinguished himself for the interest of the Protestant succession and of the established Church of Scotland. We cheerfully embrace this opportunity of assuring you that we will inviolably maintain the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, her rights and privileges, as we engaged to do upon our accession to the crown, and will protect her from any illegal insults and encroachments being made upon her of what kind soever.

Nothing can be more acceptable to us than the promoting of true piety, suppressing of vice and immorality, and preventing the growth of Popery, as we have declared in our royal proclamation; and we doubt not but you, on your parts, will do every thing that can contribute thereto.

We earnestly wish that the vacant churches may be supplied with men of learning and probity; and we recommend to you to take effectual care, on your parts, to do every thing that may tend to so good and pious an end; and, in all your actings, to study unanimity and charity, and make our people sensible of the blessings they enjoy, and of the bad consequences any kind of divisions would have to the present tranquillity as well as to their future happiness.

We have had such satisfactory accounts of your former good conduct, us gives us full confidence that you will act in such a manner as we shall have reason to be satisfied with you. So we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 23d April 1715, in the first year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

MONTROSE.

Directed thus,—To the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

May 6, 1715.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

It was with a particular joy and satisfaction that we received the gracious letter with which your Majesty was pleased to honour us. We esteemed your peaceable accession to the throne of these nations, upon the demise of our late Sovereign Queen Anne, so great a blessing, that we were fervent in our prayers to God for it; and we can never be thankful enough for the merciful return he hath given to our requests; for it is to your Majesty, under God, we owe the preservation both of our holy religion and our valuable civil liberties; and we must have been betrayers of both if we had not been zealously concerned for the succession in your Royal Family; and though your Majesty, in your great goodness, is pleased to express a kind resentment of our firm adherence to it, yet we presume not to plead merit upon the account of that, to which both duty and interest did oblige us; but your Majesty's countenancing us with your authority gives us no small comfort, and engageth us to thankful acknowledgments of your royal favour to us, and to be concerned to manage ourselves so as not to lose the happiness of the good opinion your Majesty is pleased to have of us.

We cannot but look upon it as a signal proof of your Majesty's favour to us, that you honour us with such a noble person as the Earl of Rothes to represent your Majesty in our Assembly. None could have been more acceptable to us than he, who, in all turns and changes of affairs, did, with a peculiar zeal, stand up for the Protestant succession as the true interest of his country, and who was never either afraid or ashamed to manifest his unbiassed affection to our Church; and we hope that there shall be nothing in our management that shall give him the least uneasiness in the discharge of the duties of his high trust.

The solemn engagement your Majesty did cheerfully come under at your first accession to the crown, to maintain inviolably the rights and privileges of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, of which you have the goodness to give us renewed assurances, as also protecting us against all illegal insults and encroachments being made upon us, of what kind soever, leaves us no place for doubts and fears as to any success that our enemies may have in their designs against us, under your Majesty's happy government; and obligeth us to all the returns of gratitude and duty that we are capable of.

Your Majesty's pious concern for suppressing vice and immorality, and preventing the growth of Popery, cannot but endear your royal person and government to all truly wise and good men; and, we hope, shall bring down blessings from heaven upon your Majesty and your Royal Family, and prevent judgments from God upon your people. And we have good grounds to be assured, that, under your Majesty's auspicious reign, such shall be employed as shall faithfully execute the laws against Popery, and all such practices as are a stain to the Christian profession, and against which your Majesty hath signified your displeasure in your royal proclamation.

We are deeply sensible of the necessity of a holy and well qualified ministry, for advancing the great ends of the gospel of our Redeemer; and that profane churchmen are one of the greatest plagues that either a church or civil society can have: And we shall not be wanting in using our utmost endeavours to answer what your Majesty can expect of us, in our present circumstances, as to this matter.

We should be unworthy of your Majesty's favour, if we had not a dutiful regard to what you are in your great goodness pleased so kindly to recommend to us, even with a respect to our own interest, as to charity and unanimity. We are, Sir, very sensible that it must be a great unhappiness, especially to religious societies, to be plagued with divisions; and, therefore, we look upon ourselves as under peculiar obligations to be aware of them. And we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that, as we have unanimously at all times witnessed our hearty zeal and affection for the Protestant succession in your royal family, so it is our firm resolution to testify, by all methods proper to be taken by us, the sense that we have of the wonderful goodness of God, in blessing us with so good and wise a Sovereign, and to possess all under our charge with just impressions of the mercy of the overruling God, in bringing your Majesty to the throne, which hath confounded the hopes of enemies to the true interest of these nations, and given a comfortable prospect of great advantages to the Protestant churches at home and abroad; and it shall be our care to manage ourselves so in all our proceedings in this Assembly as it may appear that, next to our duty to God, it is our sincere desire to approve ourselves to your Majesty, in bringing this Assembly to such an issue as shall show our hearty concern for the honour and quiet of your government.

That your Majesty may be always under Divine protection and conduct, and may be long preserved for the defence of the true Protestant religion, the welfare and prosperity of all your dominions, and of this Church in particular, that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and their royal issue, and all your royal family, may be highly favoured of God, and long preserved for public blessings in the world, and that there never may be wanting one of your royal progeny to sway the sceptre of these nations; and that all designs against our happy settlement under your Majesty, the peace of your government, and the security of the Protestant succession in your royal line, may be brought to nought, is, and shall be, the constant and fervent prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by

W. CARSTARES, Moderator.

Eodem die.—Act appointing the Oath taken by his Majesty, for maintaining the Church of Scotland, to be Recorded.

The General Assembly, for the satisfaction and encouragement of the ministers and other members of this Church, thought fit to cause read openly, from the books of the last Commission, where the same stands recorded, the solemn engagement that his Majesty came under upon his first accession to the crown, to maintain inviolably the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government, rights, and privileges, of the Church of Scotland; and they ordered the same to be also recorded in the books of Assembly; the tenor whereof follows:—

EDWARD SOUTHWELL, Cler. Concilii.

Whereas by an act of Parliament made in Scotland, entitled, "Act for Securing the Protestant Religion, and Presbyterian Church Government," which is made part of another act, entitled, "Act Ratifying and Approving the Treaty of Union of the two Kingdoms of Scotland and England;" and of another act passed in England, in the fifth year of the late Queen, entitled, "An Act for the Union of the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland;" it is provided, "That after the decease of her late Majesty, the sovereign succeeding to her in the royal government of the kingdom of Great Britain shall, in all times coming, at his or her accession to the Crown, swear and subscribe that they shall inviolably maintain and preserve the settlement (mentioned in the said act) of the true Protestant religion, with the government, worship, discipline, right, and privileges of the Church of Scotland, as established by the laws of that kingdom, in prosecution of the Claim of Right." And his most sacred Majesty having this day, in his first general council, taken the oath according to the form used by the law of Scotland, and subscribed the same in two several instruments, is pleased to order, as it is hereby ordered, that one of the said instruments which is hereunto annexed, containing the said oath, taken and signed by his Majesty, and witnessed by the Lords of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council then present, be transmitted to the Court of Session to be recorded in the Books of Sederunt, and afterward to be forthwith lodged in the Public Register of Scotland; and that the other of them remain among the records of the Council, and be entered in the Council Book; and that all persons concerned do take notice hereof, and govern themselves accordingly.

EDWARD SOUTHWELL.

Sess. 8, May 12, 1715.—Act for Encouragement of Preachers to be sent to the North, the Highlands, and Islands.

The General Assembly, finding it expedient for the furthering of the Gospel, that the ordinary allowances payable to preachers, sent from time to time by the General Assemblies of this Church, or commissions thereof, to supply vacant churches, or in order to be settled in the North, the Highlands, and Islands, be punctually paid; do therefore appoint, that in all time coming, the ordinary allowances payable by the acts of Assembly to such preachers be paid next to the stated annual charges of the Church, and before any other claim or demand whatsoever that shall be made out of the Church's public money.

VI.

May 12, 1715.—Act for Preventing of Division in the Church.

The General Assembly, considering the representation of the heritors of the parish of Lesmahagow, concerning the irregular and disorderly practices of some elders and people in that parish, in withdrawing from ordinances dispensed by the Reverend Mr Robert Black, one of the ministers of the said parish, and others who have taken the Oath of Abjuration, when appointed by the Presbytery to supply that church: And considering also how inconsistent such a practice is with the rule of God's Word, whereby we are enjoined to exercise mutual love and charity, and to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and contrary to the Acts of Assembly of this Church, particularly the sixth act of the General Assembly, anno 1713, and the eighth

Act of the General Assembly, anno 1714; and considering how prejudicial this is to the peace and unity of this Church, and how much it obstructs the success of the Gospel, the General Assembly do therefore seriously, and in the bowels of the Lord Jesus Christ, exhort and obtest all concerned in that and other parishes, to forbear and avoid those disorders, which are so prejudicial to peace and unity, and do so much obstruct the success of the Gospel; and the General Assembly having now transported Mr Black from Lesmahagow, do hereby order and appoint the Presbytery of Lanark to give all brotherly assistance and encouragement to the Reverend Mr Thomas Linnen, under such a weighty charge, and particularly, that they punctually supply the vacancy by members of their Presbytery without distinction, the more effectually to dispose the people to their duty. And the General Assembly further considering, that the distinguishing course taken by ministers in the choice of their assistants at the celebration of the holy sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which ought to be the bond of unity and love among Christians, does exceedingly contribute to the confirming people in their unjust prejudice against ministers, and in their divisive practices—do therefore earnestly obtest all the ministers of this Church carefully to guard against this, as they would not be found to lay a stumbling-block before the people.

VII.

May 13, 1715.—Act for Preferring Students having the Irish Language to Bursaries.

The General Assembly, considering how needful it is to encourage hopeful students having the Irish language, in order to their being useful in the Highlands and Isles, where Popery abounds, do therefore enjoin all the Synods and Presbyteries of this Church, to prefer such students to their bursaries when they vaik, and punctually to pay them their provisions; and to take trial of their proficiency; and to mark their diligence herein in their books: And appoints the visitors of Synod and Presbytery books to take particular notice how the Acts of Assembly concerning bursaries are observed, and report the same; and further, the General Assembly instructs and requires the Commissions of the Assemblies of this Church to see to the observation of the said acts, and to inquire after such students, and recommend them to bursaries; and they do hereby renew all the powers given to former Commissions in this matter.

VIII.

May 13, 1715.—Act appointing a Committee for preserving the Purity of Doctrine, and for considering the Process, Mr James Webster against Mr John Simson.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, for preserving and maintaining the purity of the doctrine of the Church of Scotland, and for bringing the process, Mr James Webster against Mr John Simson, to an issue, did resolve to appoint a committee of thirty ministers and six ruling elders, twenty-one being a quorum, whereof eighteen to be ministers, to meet at Edinburgh, the third Wednesday of July next to come, and to continue de die in diem, and to adjourn themselves to what time and place they think fit, with power to them to make inquiry into whatsoever shall be found necessary for preserving and maintaining the purity of the doctrine of this Church; and, particularly, to take the foresaid process into their consideration, and to do whatsoever they shall find necessary, to prepare a full and distinct state thereof, to be reported to the next General Assembly, together with the Committee's Overture thereupon, in order to a final decision by the Assembly: And, in order to these ends, the General Assembly appoints the said committee to observe the following instructions, 1mo, That the committee draw out the libel, representation, and other papers, whatever is found erroneous, or charged by Mr Webster on Mr Simson as error, laying the same down in certain distinct propositions. 2do, That they class the propositions under distinct heads; such as, First, Those which are contrary to the Word of God, Confession of Faith, Catechisms of this Church. Secondly, Those which are controverted amongst orthodox divines, and not determined by our Confession of Faith and Catechisms. Thirdly, Such as are not clearly contained either in the Scriptures or the writings of orthodox divines, and that the committee proceed according to the weight and import of those propositions so classed. 3to, That the parties being called, Mr Simson be interrogated what of these he acknowledges, what he denies, and what he qualifies: And that Mr Webster be interrogated what evidence by writing, witnesses, or both, he can produce to prove the propositions denied or qualified, which the committee shall think fit to admit to probation. 4to, That Mr Simson, in the first place, be allowed to adduce witnesses for his exculpation, providing always, that whatever orthodox sense or alleviations it be found he has given of propositions advanced by him. Mr Webster be also allowed to prove that he uttered these propositions charged in a heterodox sense, if he think fit so to do. 5to, That when any article of the libel or exculpation is circumstantiated with time and place, and persons present, that either party be allowed to cite and examine the whole witnesses present, at that time and place, upon the whole facts and expressions, in so far as they concern the charge and exculpation. 6to, That in order to a clear representation to the Assembly, the committee be careful to distinguish betwixt those things taught by Mr Simson in the school, and those emitted by him in private conversation. And, 7mo, The General Assembly hereby empowers their said committee to receive informations against any ministers or teachers of this Church, concerning any thing not agreeable to the doctrine or form of sound words received in this Church, and to examine any books or pamphlets published by any minister or teacher within this Church, containing any thing not agreeable to the said doctrine and form of sound words, and to call those concerned, and in an orderly way make what inquiry is necessary to ripen the same, and prepare an overture thereanent to the next General Assembly. The above overture and instructions being agreed to, the General Assembly did next resolve to remit, and hereby do remit, to their Committee for Overtures, the nomination of the above mentioned committee of thirty ministers and six ruling elders, who are to examine these matters, to be done by them in the manner following, viz., that each member of the foresaid Committee for Overtures give in to it a full list subscribed with his hand of the persons who he thinks should be of that other committee, consisting of any ministers and elders of this Church, who are not either libellers or libelled in this process, especially of such professors of divinity as are ministers, the members of the Presbytery of Glasgow, and the witnesses in this cause, not excluded: And these lists being compared, and the persons therein contained being marked, that the said number of thirty ministers and six ruling elders of those contained in the said lists, who shall be found to have the greatest number of votes, shall be made the members of the above mentioned committee, and be reported as such to the General Assembly at their next meeting.

IX.

Sess. 10, May 14, 1715.—Act concerning the Grievances of this Church from Toleration, Patronages, &c.

The Committees for Instructions and Overtures, having had under consideration the grievances this Church lies under from Patronages, from the Toleration as it stands, the hardships imposed upon Scotsmen in office in England and Ireland, and the prejudice done to this Church by the differences that have arisen about the Oath of Abjuration; and having also considered what the Commission of the late General Assembly had done with respect to these, and particularly a memorial which they had drawn about the same and sent to Members of Parliament: The Committee for Overtures gave it as their opinion, that the said memorial did fully express all that was necessary upon these heads; and, therefore, they laid the said memorial before the General Assembly, with an overture as to the management thereof. And which memorial and overture being heard and considered by the General Assembly, they did approve thereof and agree thereto, and ordained it to be held as the deed and mind of this Assembly, as follows:—

MEMORIAL FOR THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

The Church of Scotland being restored at the happy Revolution, was, by the Claim of Right, and acts of Parliament following thereupon, established in its doctrine, worship, discipline, and government, and that this legal constitution and establishment might be unalterably secured, it was declared to be a fundamental and essential condition of the Union, and accordingly ratified in the Parliaments of both kingdoms: But the zeal of the Established Church of Scotland for, and their steady adherence to, the Protestant succession, did expose them to the resentments of a disaffected party; and likewise, they account themselves aggrieved by some acts passed in the Parliament of Great Britain; as, 1mo, By the act granting such a large, and almost boundless, toleration to those of the Episcopal persuasion in Scotland, while the liberty allowed to Protestant Dissenters in England, who had always given the most satisfying proofs of their undoubted zeal and good affection to the Protestant succession, was retrenched: And though the Church of Scotland hath an equal security in a legal establishment with that of England, yet there is a vast inequality as to the toleration of the respective Dissenters. In Scotland, the toleration doth not restrain the disseminating the most dangerous errors, by requiring a Confession of Faith, or subscription to the doctrinal articles of the Established Church, as is required of Dissenters in England; it also weakeneth the discipline of the Church against the scandalous and profane, by withdrawing the concurrence of the civil magistrate. It is also an inequality and hardship upon the Established Church of Scotland, that those of her communion who are employed in his Majesty's service in England or Ireland, should be obliged to join in communion and conformity with the Church of England; whereas conformity to this Church is not required (nor do we plead that it should be) of members of the Church of England, when called to serve his Majesty in Scotland, who here enjoy the full liberty of Dissenters without molestation; and the common and equal privileges of the subjects of the United Kingdom, stipulated by the Union, claim the same liberty to the members of the Church of Scotland, when employed in his Majesty's service in England or Ireland. 2do, By the act restoring the power of presentations to patrons, the legally established constitution of this Church was altered in a very important point; and while it appears equitable in itself, and agreeable to the liberty of Christians and a free people, to have interest in the choice of those to whom they entrust the care of their souls, it is a hardship to be imposed upon in so tender a point, and that frequently by patrons who have no property nor residence in the parishes; and this, besides the snares of simoniacal pactions, and the many troubles and contests arising from the power of patronages, and the abuses thereof, by disaffected patrons putting their power in other hands, who as effectually serve their purposes, by patrons competing for the right of presentation in the same parish; and by frequently presenting ministers settled in eminent posts to mean and small parishes, to elude the planting thereof; by all which, parishes are often kept long vacant, to the great hinderance of the progress of the Gospel.

The General Assembly, considering the circumstances of the Church of Scotland, with respect to the Oath of Abjuration, as they are fully represented in the humble addresses of the Commission and General Assembly, held anno 1712, copies whereof are herewith transmitted, do humbly and earnestly entreat that suitable remedies may be thought of.

W. CARSTARES, Moderator.

And the General Assembly recommended to all their members to use their best endeavours with friends at London, that the ends of the addresses of the Commission and General Assembly, 1712, and Act of the General Assembly, the 14th May that year, concerning the Oath of Abjuration, may be obtained; and most humbly desired his Majesty's High Commissioner, that he would be pleased to use his good offices for that end.

The General Assembly did appoint this memorial to be put in the hands of their Commission, and did enjoin them to use all proper and due means to obtain redress, and particularly at their first meeting, to send the same to the Duke of Montrose, principal Secretary of State, most humbly entreating his Grace to take a fit opportunity to acquaint his Majesty thereof.

X.

Sess. 11, May 16, 1715.—Commission to some Ministers and Elders for preserving and maintaining Purity of Doctrine, &c.

The which day the Committee for Overtures reported, that they having taken in from each of their members subscribed lists of such as they thought fit to be of the committee for preserving and maintaining the purity of the doctrine of this Church, and examining and considering the process at the instance of Mr James Webster against Mr John Simson; and made an exact scrutiny, in pursuance of the Assembly's appointment upon Friday last, the 13th of May current; they found that the following persons had the majority of votes, and, therefore, they returned them as the members of that committee, viz., the Rev. Mr William Carstares, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, Moderator, Mr James Haddow, Principal of the New College of St Andrews, Mr Thomas Linnen, minister at Lesmahagow, Mr William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the College of Edinburgh, Mr Thomas Blackwell, Professor of Divinity in the Marischal College of Aberdeen, Mr David Anderson, Professor of Divinity in the King's College at Aberdeen, Mr William Mitchell, minister at Edinburgh, Mr John Anderson at Dumbarton, Mr Andrew Cameron at Kirkcudbright, Mr James Ramsay at Kelso, Mr John Hunter at Ayr, Mr William Wishart at Edinburgh, Mr James Smith at Cramond, Mr John Currie at Haddington, Mr John Gray at Glasgow, Mr John Ritchie at Old Kilpatrick, Mr Andrew Rodger at Galstoun, Mr Alexander Lauder at Mordington, Mr John Hamilton at Glasgow, Mr Robert Horsburgh at Saltpreston, Mr John Brand at Borrowstounness, Mr George Turnbull at Tyningham, Mr James Alston at Dirleton, Mr Thomas Black at Perth, Mr James Cuthbert at Culross, Mr William M'George at Pennycook, Mr George Chalmers at Kilwinning, Mr Allan Logan at Torryburn, Mr William Miller, and Mr John Flint, at Edinburgh, Ministers; Sir Hugh Dalrymple of North-Berwick, Baronet, Lord President of the Session, Adam Cockburn of Ormistoun, Lord Justice-Clerk, Mr John Clark, one of the Barons of Exchequer, Sir James Stuart of Goodtrees, his Majesty's Solicitor, Colonel John Erskine of Carnock, and Dr Alexander Dundas, physician, Ruling Elders. The said report being thus made, parties were called and compared, and Mr James Webster repeated his former declaration, that he would not farther state himself as a pursuer in this matter, having already sufficiently exonerated himself, as he alleged. And Mr John Simson repeated his answers, alleging, that Mr Webster was obliged to make out his charge, under pain of censure; whereupon they were both removed. And the General Assembly having heard and considered the said report and nomination, did approve thereof; and hereby do commission and appoint the thirty ministers and six ruling elders above named, to convene here at Edinburgh, within the Assembly-House, upon the third Wednesday of July next to come, at ten o'clock forenoon, for their first diet, and to proceed according to the powers and instructions formerly agreed upon and approved by this Assembly, the said 13th day of May current, in all points.

XI.

May 16, 1715.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot undertake, do nominate and appoint their reverend brethren, Messrs William Carstares, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, and one of the ministers of that city, their Moderator, &c.; to be Commissioners of the General Assembly, to the effect after mentioned, with power to the said persons, &c. (their powers were the same as in the preceding year.)

XII.

May 17, 1715.—Act recommending a Public Collection for the use of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge.

The which day, there was a petition presented to the General Assembly for the committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, showing, that the said Society had, for the space of six years, been prosecuting the noble design of their erection, and had done what they could to obtain the concurrence and assistance of charitably disposed persons; and that full representations of the state of their affairs had been yearly given in to the venerable General Assemblies of this National Church; letters had been written to the reverend Synods and Presbyteries, to the Justices of Peace at their Quarter Sessions, Sheriffs of Shires, and to the several Royal Burghs in Scotland; and that correspondents had been nominated in the several shires, and also in divers places abroad, by which means the Society had got in, and laid out on interest, as a stock, the sum of L.6000 sterling and upwards; and that the said Society, upon the interest of this stock, had erected twenty-four charity schools, and are about to erect more; but being obliged to furnish books, paper, and other necessaries for these schools, which does amount to a considerable sum, and the rate of annual rents being now reduced by law to five per cent., and some of the Society's annual rents not being punctually paid, the Society are not in case to answer the necessary demands of divers Presbyteries and ministers, with relation to settling of schools and furnishing books; and seeing the Society neither will nor can diminish any of their stock, and that it is hoped many who have already contributed, as well as others, will contribute to enable the Society to furnish their scholars with books, and to settle a greater number of small itinerant schools in remote glens and places in the Highlands and Islands, where Popery and ignorance abounds, and otherwise to carry on this good and hopeful design, which has been already so much countenanced of God in a very signal manner; for in some of these schools already settled there are forty, fifty, sixty, seventy, and in one of them upwards of a hundred scholars. And the said committee have had very satisfying and comfortable accounts of their progress in learning to read and write, and in learning of arithmetic, in so much, that, in some of these places where the schools are settled, the generality of the children, who knew not a letter when they came to these schools, have, within a short time thereafter, read the Bible distinctly, and repeated the Shorter Catechism in the churches, and answered the questions gravely and distinctly, to the great satisfaction of the congregations; and the said committee have had accounts from some of the ministers of those parishes, where these schools are fixed, that their parishes, which were the most ignorant in the country, would become the most knowing, through the blessing of God upon the great pains and care taken by the schoolmasters, (who are under the inspection of the Presbyteries and ministers of the bounds,) and that it is thought the youth trained up in some of these schools, through the same blessing of God, will be among the first that will yield a cordial reception to the Gospel; and that some of these young ones, children of Popish parents, are come to that length that they will by no means hear a Popish priest; that in some of these schools married persons are learning to read, and servants, male and female, were quitting service for a time and attending the school: That in divers of these places where superstition and Popery abounds, there was an earnest desire among people after Christian knowledge; and several other instances could be given, but the said committee were unwilling to take up the venerable Assembly's time, seeing any who desired further information might have the same in an account of the rise and progress of the said Society, printed by itself, and other papers of the Society; and, therefore, craving to the effect after mentioned. The General Assembly having heard and considered the said petition, and the opinion of their committee for bills thereupon, and finding that very satisfying reports of the Society's diligence had been made to former Assemblies by such as, at the Society's desire, were appointed to inquire into their management, and to inspect their books; the General Assembly did unanimously, and hereby do, recommend a public collection at all the church doors in Scotland, upon such days as the several Presbyteries and magistrates of burghs shall think fit, any time betwixt and the first day of January next to come, for buying books to the Society's scholars, and settling more schools; and appoints that the money so to be collected be sent in timeously to Mr George Watson, merchant in Edinburgh, the Society's treasurer, to be disposed of for the uses mentioned in the above narrated petition, as the Society shall judge most conducive to the furthering the instruction of the poorer sort, who are not in case to board themselves at any distance from the places of their residence, and advancing the other pious ends of their erection. And the General Assembly finding that the recommendations of former Assemblies, in favour of the said Society, have not been duly observed by divers Presbyteries and ministers, they did, and hereby do, renew the same; and do appoint that the said acts and recommendations of former Assemblies in favour of the Society be read in those congregations where the same has not been done; and the Assembly earnestly desires ministers and others, who have subscribed, but have not paid in what they subscribed for, to send in the same with all diligence to the Society's treasurer; and also appoints the account of the diligence and success of the Society in their pious undertaking, as above narrated, to be read at the intimation of this collection from the several pulpits on the Lord's Day. And, lastly, the General Assembly appointed the Rev. Mr William Carstares, their Moderator, Mr William Mitchell, and Mr James Haddow, members of this Assembly, to be present with the said Society at their next general meeting, and give them the Assembly's thanks for their great concern and unwearied diligence in advancing so noble a work, and show them that the Assembly did unanimously grant the desire of their petition.

XIII.

Sess. 12, May 17, 1715.—Act against Popery and Profanity.

The General Assembly appoints that his Majesty's proclamation against profanity, as also the abbreviate of the laws against immorality, be read from the pulpits of all the churches of Scotland, upon the first Lord's Day of August next; and renews the 5th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1714, "For the better Execution of the Laws against Profaneness;" and also the 11th Act of that same General Assembly, entitled, "Act for procuring the better Execution of former Acts against Popery, and for preventing the Growth thereof."

XIV.

May 17, 1715.—Act discharging Prelatical Preachers, and some who profess to be Presbyterians, and separate from this Church, to exercise Church Discipline.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, being informed that Elizabeth Salmon, who was convened before the Presbytery of Kirkaldy for uncleanness, did judicially declare that Mr Colin Mackenzie of Rossend was the father of the child she had brought forth; whereupon the Presbytery ordered the said Mr Colin Mackenzie to be cited to compare before them at their next meeting, the 26th day of this month; and it being farther represented that Mr David Blair and Mr David Middleton, in conjunction with Mr William Duguid, and Mr James Guthrie, prelatical preachers, have taken upon them to convene the said Mr Colin Mackenzie of Rossend three times before them the last week, and have given him an oath of purgation, which was read in the meeting-house of Burntisland, intimating that the said Mr Colin Mackenzie is to swear that oath in the said meeting-house next Lord's Day, for removing the scandal; and considering that this is an illegal encroachment upon the discipline of the Church, which may prove of dangerous consequence, the General Assembly orders the Presbytery of Kirkaldy to proceed against the said Mr Colin Mackenzie of Rosend, according to the rules of this Church, notwithstanding of any thing these prelatical preachers have done, or may do, in that affair. And, further, the General Assembly discharges these prelatical preachers to proceed any further in that matter, as they will be answerable; and appoints this to be intimated to them by the officers of this Assembly, and refers it to the Commission to take care that the Assembly's authority be not contemned in this case. And the Assembly does appoint this method to be observed in the cases of scandal when any others, either Episcopal preachers, or such as pretend to be Presbyterian ministers, but do separate from this Church, take upon them to exercise discipline.

 XV.

Sess. 12, May 17, 1715.—Act for prosecuting some, who, professing to be Presbyterians, do separate from this Church; and an appointment concerning Papists and Episcopal Intruders.

The General Assembly, taking into consideration the representations made to them concerning the irregularities of Mr John M'Millan, late minister at Balmaghie, Mr John Taylor, late minister at Wamphray, both now deposed, Mr John M'Neil, and Mr John Adamson, pretended preachers, Mr John Hepburn, minister at Orr, and Mr James Gilchrist, minister at Dunscore; they do refer it to their Commission, at their first meeting, to take the irregularities of the foresaid persons under their consideration; and, if the said Commission think fit, the General Assembly does empower them to summon the said Mr John M'Millan, Mr John Taylor, Mr John M'Neil, and Mr John Adamson, before them, and to proceed to further censure, or apply to the civil magistrate against them, as shall be thought most fit. And as to the said Mr John Hepburn and Mr James Gilchrist, the Assembly appoints the Presbytery of Dumfries forthwith to cause cite them before them, to answer for their irregular practices; and, if need be, to summon witnesses, and take depositions in that matter, and thereafter, either to proceed to sentence, or refer the affair to the said Commission, as they shall see cause; and they empower the Commission to proceed to censure as they shall think fit. And the General Assembly hereby declares that the said Mr John Hepburn and the parish of Orr are under the inspection of the Presbytery of Dumfries; and the Assembly makes void all acts made formerly to the contrary. And the Assembly instructs their Commission, if need be, to apply to the civil government for suppressing the disorders of the said Mr John M'Millan, Mr John Taylor, Mr John M'Neil, Mr John Adamson, Mr John Hepburn, and Mr James Gilchrist, and also for punishing such as are guilty of solemnizing marriages clandestinely, and contrary to law; and appoints Presbyteries to send in timeously full informations to the Commission, that the same may be laid before the Government.

The General Assembly appoints Presbyteries, and the several brethren in those countries where Popery abounds, or where Episcopal preachers do intrude into parishes, churches, manses, or glebes, to send up to the Lord Justice-Clerk, and his Majesty's Advocate and Solicitor, particular informations, containing the facts, parties' names, the circumstances of the transgression, such as time, place, &c., with lists of the witnesses, their names and designations, that can prove the said facts.

THE PRINCIPAL ACTS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, HOLDEN AND BEGUN AT EDINBURGH, MAY 3, 1716.

I.

Sess. 1, May 3, 1716.—Act appointing the King's Commission to John Earl of Rothes to be recorded.

The General Assembly of the Ministers and Ruling Elders of this National Church of Scotland being convened and constituted, there was produced to them, by the Right Honourable John Earl of Rothes, his Majesty's commission, sealed with the Seal appointed by the Treaty of Union betwixt the two kingdoms of Scotland and England to be kept and used in Scotland in place of the Great Seal of Scotland, of the same tenor with the commission granted by his Majesty to the foresaid Earl last year, constituting him his Majesty's High Commissioner and Representative in this Assembly; which commission being publicly read with all due honour and respect, is, by order of this Assembly, recorded in their books, to remain therein ad futuram rei memoriam.

II.

The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner, May 3, 1716.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved,

We greet you well. The fresh proofs you have given us, during the course of the late unhappy and unnatural Rebellion, of your firm adherence to those principles on which the security of our government, and the happiness of our subjects do entirely depend; and the accounts we have from time to time received of your great care to infuse the same into the people under your charge, do engage us to return you our hearty thanks, and to renew to you the assurances we have formerly given you, of our unalterable resolution to maintain the established government of the Church of that part of our kingdom of Great Britain, in the full enjoyment of all just rights and privileges. For this end, we have thought fit to countenance your meeting together at this time, and again to make choice of our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, John Earl of Rothes, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our royal person in this Assembly, whose singular zeal for our service, and the interest of his country, by which he has always distinguished himself, as well as his faithful discharge of the same high trust on the last occasion, will, we doubt not, render him acceptable to you. And as we have nothing more in view than promoting true religion and piety, the restoring the peace and quiet of the country, that all our subjects may have it in their power to be happy under our administration, and easy with regard both to their religious and civil concerns, your concurring on your parts to the carrying on of these laudable ends, and your answering these our just views, for the public tranquillity, both of Church and State, is what we earnestly recommend to you; and the confidence we have in your prudence and moderation is such, as leaves us no room to doubt but that we shall have full satisfaction in your conduct. So we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, this 23d day of April, 1716 years, in the second year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

TOWNSHEND.

Directed thus.—To the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

May 5, 1716.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We accept, with the greatest thankfulness, your Majesty's royal favour, in continuing to countenance our Assemblies, and the honour of your gracious letter to us. The notice your Majesty is pleased to take of our behaviour, upon occasion of the late unhappy and unnatural Rebellion, as it greatly heightens our satisfaction in having been enabled, by the Divine assistance, to exert ourselves in any way answerably to our duty to your Majesty, so it puts us under new obligations to lay out ourselves, as we have access, to advance the interest of your Majesty's government, upon the peace and prosperity whereof the preservation of our holy religion and our own safety, under God, do entirely depend; and particularly, we judge ourselves most strictly bound to continue our endeavours to impress the minds of the people under our charge with a sense of their happiness under your Majesty's wise and good administration, and of the strictest ties they are under, by laws divine and human, to all the duties of loyalty and fidelity to your Majesty, their only rightful and lawful Sovereign.

That your Majesty should have, in your great condescension, put so high an honour upon us, as to give us thanks for doing what was our unquestionable duty and interest, is a proof of that distinguishing goodness which makes so bright a part of your Majesty's princely character.

We cannot sufficiently express the grateful sense we have of your Majesty's goodness in giving us repeated assurances of your unalterable resolution to maintain the established government of your Church, in the full enjoyment of all just rights and privileges; which gives us full hopes, that in due time we shall obtain redress of the grievances that we were brought under before your Majesty came to the throne, and which were laid before your Majesty by a memorial from the last Assembly.

Your Majesty's choice of the Earl of Rothes to represent your royal person in this Assembly is a particular instance of your Majesty's royal favour to this Church. The extraordinary zeal he hath shown upon all occasions for the Protestant succession, by the part he acted, both before your Majesty's happy accession to the throne, and in the time of the late Rebellion, and his wise and kind conduct in the last Assembly, render him most acceptable to us.

Your Majesty having nothing more in your view than the promoting of true religion and piety, and making all your people happy under your administration, leaves us utterly inexcusable, should we not on our part concur, as we have access, for advancing those great and noble ends, since we are, in the great goodness of God, by a very peculiar providence, under the influence of a prince, who is so great a pattern and encourager of piety and virtue.

We should be wanting to the duty we owe to God, and to the best of kings, if we did not endeavour, by our department, to answer the just expectations your Majesty is pleased to have of our prudence and moderation in this Assembly.

We adore the blessed God, who, in great mercy to us, hath brought your Majesty to the throne, and appeared so gloriously in behalf of your just cause, giving you victory over your unprovoked and ungrateful enemies; and, to our amazement, blessed your councils and arms with such speedy success in restoring peace and tranquillity, that the remotest places and islands are represented in this Assembly. That the same God may long preserve your royal person in health and safety; that he may enrich your Majesty, and your royal family, with all the blessings of His grace and goodness here on earth; and after a long and prosperous reign, crown you with immortal glory, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most dutiful, most obedient, and most humble subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 4, May 7, 1716.—Act for furthering the pious Design of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge.

The which day there was transmitted from the Committee for Bills a petition, the tenor whereof follows:—

“Unto the very reverend the Moderator and others, the reverend and honourable members of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, The Petition of the Committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, humbly sheweth—That we, by our address to the late General Assembly did lay before them a distinct account of the diligence, success, and progress of the Society, and obtained from them a pressing recommendation for a public contribution toward the further advancing of the Christian undertaking of the Society, by furnishing their scholars with necessary books, and settling of more schools in those places that want the same; but the breaking out of the late unnatural Rebellion did put a stop to the prosecuting of that recommendation. We think this late insurrection has given a convincing evidence how hurtful the rudeness and ignorance of the common people in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland has proven, and may yet prove, to the commonwealth, if care be not taken to cure it; for it is obvious that this did, and will still make them fit tools in the hands of their Popish and Jacobite chieftains and landlords, for carrying on their rebellious projects of overturning our happy establishment: whereas, were those poor people more impressed with the right notions of a Deity, and were better acquainted with the principles of our holy religion, that teaches obedience, next unto God, unto supreme lawful authority; were they, by being inured to virtue, and by education, in honest employments, freed from the pinching straits of extreme poverty, which occasions their slavish subjection to their masters, they would not so blindly go in to the measures of their imperious landlords or superiors; and the procuring all these advantages is the plain design and palpable tendency, and will be the certain effect of the care of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, if it be duly encouraged: And it is hoped, that all the true lovers of our holy religion, and of their king and country, will need no other argument to induce them cheerfully and liberally to contribute to so noble and Christian an undertaking than this, to make of a poor, rude, and ignorant people, now dangerous and hurtful to the nation, profitable members of the commonwealth. And the Committee does not doubt but as our Church has, in all her Assemblies, shown a great readiness to forward the design of the Society, so now, when, through the mercy and goodness of God, that dangerous Rebellion is suppressed, this venerable Assembly will find themselves called and encouraged to continue the same pious and Christian zeal.

“May it therefore please this Venerable Assembly, to cause read the said Act and Recommendation, and to renew the same, appointing all Presbyteries to cause intimate the foresaid Act from the pulpits within their bounds, and to send in their contributions to the treasurer of the Society; and also a Report of their diligence to the Commission of the General Assembly, betwixt and the first day of January next.

The General Assembly having heard and considered the foresaid petition, and opinion of their Committee for Bills thereupon; and having caused read the said Act and recommendation of the late General Assembly in favour of the foresaid Society, did, and hereby do, renew the same, and did unanimously recommend a public collection at all the church doors within Scotland, (except the churches of Edinburgh,) upon the third Lord's Day of August next; and that the said collection be in Edinburgh at such a time, and in such a manner, as shall be thought most proper by the magistrates of the said city, and committee of the Society. And the General Assembly appoints the money thus collected to be forthwith lodged by the several ministers in the hands of the moderators of their Presbyteries, who are desired to keep an exact account of what they receive, and from whom, and when; and the said moderators are desired to send up the said money as it comes to their hands, together with a copy of the said accounts, to Mr George Watson, merchant, the Society's treasurer, with all convenient diligence, to be disposed of for the uses expressed in the said Act and recommendation of the late General Assembly; and appoints that Act, together with these presents, to be read at the intimation of this collection, from the pulpits, on the Lord's Day preceding the said collection. And the General Assembly earnestly desires all ministers and others who have subscribed, and have not paid in what they subscribed for, to send in the same to the Society's treasurer; and appoints the several Presbyteries to see to the effectual prosecution of this recommendation within their respective bounds, and to report their diligence herein to their Synods, and also to the Commission of this Assembly, betwixt and the first day of January next. And, further, the General Assembly appoints their Moderator, and others of their number, who are members of the foresaid Society, at their first general meeting, to give them the hearty thanks of this Assembly, for their great concern and unwearied diligence in advancing so noble an undertaking, and to show them that this Assembly did most unanimously and cordially grant the desire of the foresaid petition.

V.

May 14, 1716, post meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders, for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, taking into their consideration, that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate and appoint their reverend brethren, Messrs William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the College of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be Commissioners of the General Assembly, to the effect after mentioned, with power to the said persons, &c. (Powers the same as in the immediately preceding years.)

VI.

Sess. 12, May 15, 1716.—A congratulatory Address to the King, upon suppressing the Rebellion.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, cannot look upon ourselves as sitting again under your Majesty's most auspicious protection, after the late wicked Rebellion, which threatened us with the loss of so dear a blessing, without expressing our unfeigned thanks to the Almighty, and declaring to the world our inward joy for your Majesty's successes and our own deliverance.

Safe under your Majesty's happy government—we can look back on the blackest scenes of the late unnatural treason—we can see Rome, in league with the enemy of our Church and State, sowing the seeds of rebellion, souring the minds of heedless people with groundless jealousies, plotting the destruction of your Royal person, on which our happiness, with that of all the Protestant Churches, under God, doth depend, and breaking out at length into open war, with such multitudes of armed traitors as seemed for a season irresistible—and at the same time, we can view, with pleasure, heaven interposing in your Majesty's behalf and in ours, seating your Majesty so seasonably upon the throne, early disclosing the hidden treason, guiding your Majesty's steady councils, leading your victorious General, the Duke of Argyle, to the unexpected overthrow of such unequal numbers, and conducting him in the pursuit of the Pretender to your Crown, till, by an inglorious flight, he left our country free from the great dangers we were in by the Rebellion, and his deluded friends filled with confusion. Upon all which, we cannot but, with thankful hearts, acknowledge our deep sense of your Majesty's wise and fatherly care for your loyal subjects, which neither the extraordinary rigour of the season, nor the fallacious proposals of the rebels, could divert from the necessary means of their speedy relief.

Great Sir, it is to us matter of particular thankfulness and joy, that, amidst so great difficulties and dangers, the ministers and members of this Church have, through the Divine favour, been helped to a firm and zealous adherence to your Majesty's person and government; and it is our firm resolution to persevere in our duty and loyalty to your Majesty, and to make it our constant and earnest request to our gracious God, that He may unite the hearts of all your subjects into a sense of their great happiness under the government of the best of kings.

May the same kind Providence that hath so signally watched over, and eminently blessed your royal person, continue to preserve your Majesty, bless your royal family, direct your councils, and make your reign over us long and prosperous; and, after your Majesty, may the crown of these kingdoms, and the defence of the Protestant religion, descend to your royal issue to latest posterity.

WILL. HAMILTON, Moderator.

May 15, 1716.—Act renewing the Commission and Powers given by the late General Assembly to their Committee for preserving and maintaining the Purity of Doctrine, and for considering the Process, Mr James Webster against Mr John Simson.

The General Assembly, considering that they have not now time fully and deliberately to consider the points charged by Mr James Webster against Mr John Simson as error, and that it is necessary, for preserving the purity of doctrine and peace of this Church, that the same be thoroughly examined, and that the Assembly do what is proper for them at this time to hinder the spreading of error in this Church; therefore, the General Assembly do hereby enjoin the said Mr John Simson, and all others whatsoever, to forbear teaching, or any way venting the propositions charged by the said Mr James Webster against the said Mr Simson as error, and given in to this Assembly, until they be cognosced and determined by the judicatures of this Church. And the Committee appointed by the last Assembly having made some progress in their work, which they had not time to finish, being hindered therein by the late Rebellion; therefore, to the end that this affair may be fully tried and examined, the General Assembly does hereby renew the commission and instructions given by the late General Assembly to the ministers and ruling elders therein named; and do not only appoint such of the said persons as are yet alive to proceed according to the said commission and instructions, in examining the points remitted to them by the said last Assembly; but they do now also refer to their consideration the positions that have been laid before this said Assembly by the said Mr James Webster, and Mr Simson's answers thereto, and all other things relating to this affair; particularly they remit to the consideration of the said committee the following points that were reserved by them to be determined after the finishing of the principal cause, viz., that as to Mr Simson's publishing copies of the printed process, and the manner in which Mr Webster brought in the cause before this Assembly, by publishing in print his charge of error, in a postscript to the printed copies of Mr Simson's letters to the deceased Mr Robert Rowan, and Mr Webster's answers to this Assembly, when they desired him to class his propositions, and specify the articles of the Confession of Faith to which they were opposite. And the General Assembly do hereby empower the said Committee to give such directions to the said Mr Simson as they shall think necessary; and, in the mean time, until the matter be fully tried and examined by this Church, and the said Mr John Simson be convicted, the Assembly discharges all the ministers of this Church, either in preaching or by printing, to charge the said Mr Simson as guilty of error; but prejudice always to them to state the same propositions that are charged against him, and to refute the same by as strong arguments as they shall think fit. And the General Assembly appoints the said committee to meet for the ends above mentioned, and expressed in their former commission and instructions, at Edinburgh, upon Friday the tenth day of August next to come, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, in the Assembly-House, and to sit de die in diem, until they have finished their work. And the Assembly do peremptorily require all the members of the said committee to give punctual attendance at all the diets of their meetings, as they would not be chargeable by this Church with all the bad consequences that may follow the delaying of this affair; and to the end they may have no excuse, the Assembly appoints the clerk to advertise all the members of the said committee by letters or otherwise, of the time appointed for their meeting, four weeks before the same approach; and do appoint the several Presbyteries, to which the ministers, members of the said Committee, do belong, to supply their churches by preaching during all the time that they are waiting upon the business hereby committed to them. And the Assembly appoints the said Committee to prepare and lay before the next ensuing Assembly a full and distinct report of their proceedings in the matter above committed to them. The Assembly having called parties to intimate the premises to them, Mr Simson compar'd, and protested, That all these errors contained in Mr Webster's libel that are contrary to the Scriptures, and our Confession of Faith or Catechism, he has never taught them as his opinion, or as truth, but has, on the contrary, refuted them, and is resolved, through the grace of God, still to forbear the teaching such errors; and, therefore, he did look upon the foresaid injunction only to import that he is not to teach such errors as several members of this Church have (by wrong reports that have gone through the land) imagined had been taught by him, for which the former part of this his declaration, he hoped, would give sufficient satisfaction until the process be duly tried; for he was persuaded the venerable Assembly would not do any thing so contrary to the common rules of equity and justice, as to lay on him an injunction which did insinuate that he had taught any error before they had heard the cause, and found him guilty; and he protested further, That Mr Webster had succumbed in the probation of his printed libel, viz., his postscript to the printed copy of the letters to Mr Robert Rowan; and that, in case if this Assembly do not publish in their minutes what may clear this to the world, he protested, that he might have liberty to publish his own vindication. The General Assembly having heard this protest, they do hereby empower the said committee to suspend the said Mr Simson for such time as they shall think fit, in case it be found that he contravene the injunctions hereby given to him; and they remitted the consideration thereof to the committee appointed to consider the whole process.

VIII.

Sess. 10, May 14, 1716.—Act for facilitating the Planting of the Highlands.

The General Assembly, considering the many vacancies that are now in the North and Highlands, they do discharge the planting in Lowland congregations preachers having the Irish language, especially such as have been educated upon the Highland bursaries, or the transporting to the Lowlands ministers plant'd in the Highlands without a particular allowance of the General Assembly.

IX.

May 16, 1716.—Act empowering the Commission to send Committees to the Highlands, &c.

The General Assembly empowers their Commission to send committees to the North and Highlands, to visit the churches there, and consider the state thereof, and to purge and plant kirks; and which committees are to join the Presbyteries of the bounds they are sent to, and to assist them in their work.

X.

Sess. ult., May 16, 1716.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, the first Thursday of May next to come, being the second day of that month, in the year of our Lord 1717.

This Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing of the 124th Psalm throughout, and pronouncing of the blessing.

I.

Sess. 1, May 2, 1717.—Act appointing the King's Commission to John Earl of Rothes to be Recorded.

The General Assembly of the Ministers and Ruling Elders of this National Church of Scotland being convened and constituted, there was produced to them, by the Right Honourable John Earl of Rothes, his Majesty's Commission, sealed with the Seal appointed by the Treaty of Union betwixt the two kingdoms of Scotland and England to be kept and used in Scotland in place of the Great Seal of Scotland, of the same tenor with the Commission granted by his Majesty to the foresaid Earl the last year, and also in the year 1715, constituting him his Majesty's High Commissioner and Representative in this Assembly; which Commission being publicly read with all due honour and respect, is ordered by this Assembly to be recorded in their books, to remain therein, ad futuram rei memoriam.

IV.

Sess. 7, May 8, 1717.—Act and Recommendation for the further Encouragement of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and bringing in the Collections for buying Books, &c.

The which day there was presented and read a representation from the Committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, showing that the said Society are very sensible of the care and concern which this Church and her Assemblies have shown for the success of their Christian undertaking, and that the kind assistance given by this Church to the said Society has much advanced their work, particularly the recommendation of the late General Assembly for a contribution to buy books has taken very good effect in some places; for divers charitable persons in many parishes have contributed very liberally, though there are still some few Presbyteries, and several parishes, deficient in this late collection, as there are some who either have not yet collected or contributed, or at least have not sent in the money recommended by the General Assembly, 1709; wherefore, the Committee took this occasion, in name of the Society, to acknowledge the assistance given to them by this Church from time to time, particularly by the recommendation of the late collection, and earnestly to entreat that they would cause the diligence of Synods, Presbyteries, and ministers, in making the foresaid collections effectual, to be noticed in the revising of the Synod books, and to be otherwise inquired into, and would again pressingly recommend both to ministers and people, deficient in both or either of the foresaid collections, to send in the same to the Society's treasurer as soon as possible, and also to recommend to Synods, Presbyteries, and ministers, who have failed in observing what has been enjoined by former Assemblies as to such contributions, that with all diligence they set about what is required of them in that matter. The Committee did not trouble the Assembly with a particular account of the progress and success of the Society's undertaking, having done that so often before; but for the encouragement of all well-wishers to that charitable design, they did notify that the Society had erected as many schools, in such places of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland which did most need the same, as their revenue can support, and that their said schools do flourish extraordinarily, as would appear from the records of the Society and Committee, which are patent to all the contributors that please to inspect them; and the Committee did, in their said representation, invite all such of them as desired to be satisfied as to the management and success of the Society, to call for the secretary or clerks of the said Society, who will communicate to them the Society's said registers and books, for their information in the premises.

The General Assembly having heard and considered this representation, and the deliverance of their Committee for Bills thereupon, bearing, that the desire thereof should be granted; and having further heard some of the members of the said Society upon the subject, they enjoined the visitors of their Synod books, in their going through the same, to take special notice what care Synods have taken in calling Presbyteries to an account of their diligence in promoting the collections for Christian knowledge in the several parishes of their bounds, according to the recommendations of former Assemblies, and to lay a full and distinct account hereof before the General Assembly. And the General Assembly again seriously and earnestly recommended both to ministers and people, deficient in both, or either of the foresaid collections, yet to collect and contribute with all cheerfulness, and to send in their money to George Watson, merchant in Edinburgh, the Society's treasurer, as soon as they can; and further, recommended earnestly to all Synods, Presbyteries, and particular ministers, who have failed in what has been enjoined by former Assemblies, as to such contributions, to set about with all diligence what is recommended to them in that matter. And because it is probable that there are several ministers who have entered to their charges since the respective dates of the foresaid recommendations, and so have neither contributed themselves nor collected from their people; therefore, the General Assembly did earnestly desire the said intrant ministers both to contribute themselves, and to set about collecting in their parishes, in the method prescribed by the Acts of former Assemblies, and that with all diligence. And, lastly, the General Assembly did most seriously recommend to all the ministers and members of this Church, that they would give all manner of encouragement to this so pious and charitable an undertaking.

V.

Sess. 11, May 13, 1717.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders, for discussing divers Matters referred to them.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate and appoint their reverend brethren, Messrs William Mitchell, one of the ministers of Edinburgh their Moderator, &c.; to be Commissioners of the General Assembly, to the effect after mentioned, with power to the said persons, or their quorum, which is hereby declared to be any thirty-one of the said Commissioners, whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers, to meet and convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh, the first day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and afterward, the second Wednesday of August, November, and March, and oftener, when or where they shall think needful and convenient, with power to the said Commissioners to choose their own Moderator; and suchlike, the General Assembly fully empowers and authorises their said Commission, or their quorum above mentioned, to cognosce and finally to determine as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred, to them by any act or order of this General Assembly, and to do every thing contained in and conform to the instructions given, or to be given, them by this Assembly, and to advert to the interests of the Church on every occasion, that the Church and present establishment thereof do not suffer or sustain any prejudice which they can prevent, as they will be answerable, providing this general clause be not extended to particular affairs or processes, before Presbyteries or Synods, that are not of universal concern to or influence upon this whole Church. And it is declared and appointed, that what shall be determined at one diet of the said Commission, with relation to private causes, shall be unalterable by any other diet thereof, and shall stand and continue in force till disapproved by the General Assembly; and the said Commissioners are hereby strictly prohibited and discharged to meddle in any other matters than what are committed or referred to them as above mentioned; and in all their actings they are to proceed according to the acts and constitutions of this Church, and do nothing contrary thereto, or to the prejudice of the same; declaring, that in and for all their actings they shall be accountable to and censurable by the next General Assembly, as they shall see cause; and this Commission is to continue and endure until another Commission be appointed, and members are required to attend the diets of the said Commission, and absentees therefrom ordered to be noticed, according to the seventeenth Act of the General Assembly, anno 1706. And for the better securing of a quorum, and attendance of members on the Commission, the General Assembly prohibits the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and other Presbyteries within twelve miles thereof, to meet any of the days or weeks appointed for meetings of the Commission, and such of the members of these Presbyteries as are on the Commission are required all of them to give punctual attendance on the diets thereof, and Presbyteries at a greater distance, who have four or more members on the Commission, are to take care that at least two of them attend each diet of the same.

VI.

8. The said Commission are appointed to use their best endeavours to obtain a fund for erecting schools in the Highlands and Islands, and to get the same rightly proportioned, and to do what else may tend to the advancement of religion and reformation in these places; and to keep a correspondence with the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee, and to give them all suitable assistance and encouragement, according to the acts of this and former Assemblies; and to use all proper means in their power for extirpating idolatrous and superstitious practices; and to observe the instructions given by former Assemblies to their Commissions, concerning Libraries, Irish Bibles, Psalm Books, and Catechisms, a school in every parish, according to the fifth Act of the General Assembly, 1707; also to hold hand to the execution of the eighth Act of that Assembly, for "Suppressing Popery, and Preventing the Growth thereof;" and likewise, the fifteenth Act of that Assembly against "Innovations in the Worship of God."

9. The Commission are empowered to send ministers and probationers as need requires, to the North, the Highlands and Islands, and to remove them from one place to another there, as they shall see cause.

10. The Commission are empowered to cognosee and finally determine in all references and appeals about planting vacant churches in the North, the Highlands and Islands, which shall be brought before them, and that in the most expeditious manner, providing that the Commission do not meddle with sentences of Synods in such cases, excepting causes particularly referred to them; but this restriction is not to be extended to ministers or probationers having Irish.

11. The said Commission are empowered to receive any representations or references that shall be made to them by Presbyteries, and others concerned, about large and spacious parishes; and to use all means proper for them for obtaining, and also rendering effectual and preserving new erections in such parishes, or stipends to collegiate ministers.

12. The said Commission are empowered to give all due assistance to the several universities and colleges, when any minister is called to any office therein; and to receive appeals and references in these cases, and finally to determine in the same; and they are appointed to consider the state of the said universities and colleges, and to observe the 14th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1711, and as they shall see cause, to apply for a visitation thereof; as likewise, to inquire whether Synods and Presbyteries do maintain bursars, according to the Acts of the General Assembly, and to take care to provide hopeful youths having the Irish tongue, and take the usual obligations of them; and when students having that language are found fit to be entered on trials, that they recommend them to Presbyteries for that effect; and when they shall be licensed, to send them to the North, the Highlands and Islands.

13. To inquire how the tenth Act of the General Assembly, anno 1711, concerning probationers, and settling ministers, with questions to be proposed to, and engagements to be taken of them, are observed, and to advert that masters in colleges, and all schoolmasters, do subscribe and engage according to the Act of Parliament, anno 1707.

14. That the Commission use their best endeavours for further reformation of manners, and the more effectual curbing and suppressing of profaneness and vice, and promoting true religion and godliness, and think on some effectual way to excite to and recommend family worship, in pursuance of the Acts of Assembly, particularly the thirteenth Act of the General Assembly, anno 1694, and seventh and eleventh Acts of the General Assembly, anno 1697, and others, and to inquire if his Majesty's pious proclamation against immorality has been read from the pulpits, according to former orders.

15. The Commission are appointed to take the most effectual course to get the printing, vending, or importing, of incorrect copies of the Holy Scriptures, and of our Confession of Faith and Catechisms, stopped and prevented.

VII.

Sess. 11, May 13, 1717, ante meridiem.—Act concerning the Trial of Students having Irish, who shall be preferred to Bursaries, and licensed.

The General Assembly, considering that divers Students have been recommended to bursaries, as persons having the Irish language, who, after they have been educated, are found not capable to serve in Highland countries, for want of sufficient knowledge of that tongue; and that sundry probationers have been entered upon trials for the ministry, upon view that they might be useful in the Highlands, who yet, when they are passed and licensed, can do no service, for want of sufficient skill in the said language, do, for preventing these inconveniences in time coming, appoint, that such as crave the benefit of Highland bursaries, or who are to be admitted to trials for the ministry, in order to be sent to the Highlands, be first examined upon their knowledge in the Irish language, by persons having a competent measure of knowledge in that language, bearing that they have so much knowledge of that language as that they may be useful in a Highland congregation. And do ordain that the names of the said examiners, together with their report, be recorded in the books of the judicatory that employs them in the said trials.

VIII.

Sess. 11, May 13, 1717.—Act for suppressing of Popery.

The General Assembly, having considered the complaints from Presbyteries of the growth of Popery, do find, that the laws against the same are very full; and, therefore, in order to the execution of them, the General Assembly instructs their Commission to apply to the Lord Justice-Clerk, the Lord Advocate, and his Majesty's Solicitor, in order to obtain a vigorous execution of the laws against Popery; and as to Popish schoolmasters and mistresses, and Popish factors and chamberlains, the Assembly appoints informations about them to be sent to the Procurator and Agents for the Church, that they may be presented according to law; and because it is necessary that the informations to be given be regular, and the means of probation such as the law requires: Therefore, the General Assembly appoints the informers, in framing the said informations, to observe exactly the directions given in this matter, in the 15th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1714.

IX.

Sess. 12, May 14, 1717.—Act for maintaining the Purity of the Doctrine of this Church, and determining the Process, Mr James Webster against Mr John Simson.

The General Assembly, considering that much of their time has been spent upon the process pursued by Mr James Webster, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, against Mr John Simson, Professor of Divinity in the College of Glasgow, laid before them by the report of the committee for purity of doctrine; and that they cannot overtake the whole, by discussing particularly every article—it being, nevertheless, expedient and requisite that this affair be brought to some issue, that may testify the zeal and concern of this Assembly for the preservation of truth and peace in this Church, and preventing what may tend to the hurt and prejudice thereof; therefore, although Professor Simson does declare his adherence to our Confession of Faith, and doctrines therein contained, as his judgment, and his disowning the errors opposite thereto, wherewith he was charged; yet, considering that, by his printed answers, and the letters written by him to the now deceased Mr Robert Rowan, some time minister at Penninghame, and his letter to the foresaid committee for purity of doctrine, dated the 14th of April 1716 years, he hath given offence, and that it is judged that therein he hath vented some opinions not necessary to be taught in divinity, and that have given more occasion to strife than to the promoting of edification; that he hath used some expressions that bear and are used by adversaries in a bad and unsound sense, though he doth disown that unsound sense; and for answering more satisfiably (as he supposeth) the cavils and objections of adversaries, he hath adopted some hypotheses different from what are commonly used among orthodox divines, that are not evidently founded on Scripture, and tend to attribute too much to natural reason and the power of corrupt nature,—which undue advancement of reason and nature is always to the disparagement of revelation and efficacious free grace. The General Assembly, for the reasons above mentioned, prohibits and discharges the said Mr John Simson to use such expressions, or to teach, preach, or otherwise vent such opinions, propositions, or hypotheses as aforesaid; and as concerning the parties in this process, whatever complaints have been made as to the manner of raising or managing this process on either hand, the General Assembly, for peace's sake, do overlook and pass these without further insisting thereon, and do discharge any prosecution on either side on these accounts; and further, for the more effectual preserving the purity of doctrine and peace of this Church, and preventing strife and contentious debates, which are prejudicial to truth, brotherly love, and the life of serious religion, the General Assembly extends the foresaid prohibition to all professors of divinity, ministers, and preachers, and all others in this Church; and, particularly, the General Assembly discharges them to vent any doctrines not agreeable to our Confession of Faith and Catechisms, especially such opinions as either ascribe too much to corrupt nature, or tend to encourage sloth among Christians, or slacken people's obligation unto gospel holiness. And, moreover, the General Assembly recommends to all Faculties in Universities, and to all Presbyteries within this Church, to see this Act observed by all the persons foresaid, within their several jurisdictions, and to censure the contraveners, as they shall see cause. And the General Assembly empowers their Commission to give advice to Presbyteries, and to judge in causes and cases of that kind that shall be brought before them; and when any such cases shall happen, the General Assembly hereby appoints Presbyteries to acquaint the Commission before they proceed to any sentence of suspension or deposition, against any person that shall come to be tried in prosecution of this Act.

X.

Sess. 13, May 14, 1717.—Act discharging Presbyteries to use any Formula in licensing Probationers, and ordaining or admitting Ministers, but such as is or shall be agreed unto by the General Assembly, with a Reference to the Commission of the Presbytery of Auchterarder's carriage in that matter.

The Committee for Bills having transmitted to the Assembly an appeal entered by Mr William Craig against the Presbytery of Auchterarder, for their refusing to give him an extract of his licence to preach the Gospel, notwithstanding that he was approved by them in all the steps of his trials, and was actually licensed—the opinion of the Committee for Bills in this matter was read; and the said Mr William Craig, and the commissioners from the Presbytery of Auchterarder, being called, the said Mr Craig, pursuer of this appeal, and Mr Andrew Burgh, one of the commissioners from the Presbytery, appeared; and the moderator of the Committee for Bills gave a distinct account of the whole matter, as the same was laid before the said committee; particularly, that the said Presbytery had refused Mr Craig the extract of his licence, because he did not satisfy them as to some articles of faith required of him by them, whereof this was one, viz. “And farther, That I believe that it is not sound and orthodox to teach that we must forsake sin in order to our coming to Christ, and instating us in covenant with God.” Parties being heard and removed, the Assembly, after discoursing upon the subject of the said appeal, and answers made thereto by the commissioners from the Presbytery, did agree that the foresaid Presbytery of Auchterarder be forthwith appointed, and the General Assembly hereby appoints the said Presbytery, to give the said Mr William Craig an extract of his licence to preach the Gospel, and do instruct their Commission to see this appointment obeyed. And the General Assembly discharges the Presbytery of Auchterarder, or any other Presbytery within this National Church, to require subscriptions of any young men to be licensed to preach the Gospel, or ordained to the office of the ministry, to any formula but such as is or shall be agreed to and approved by the Assemblies of this Church. And further, the General Assembly did declare their abhorrence of the foresaid proposition, as unsound and most detestable, as it stands, and was offered by the said Presbytery to be subscribed by Mr Craig; but in regard the ministers of the said Presbytery of Auchterarder were not present to answer for themselves, what they could design by such a proposition, the Assembly agreed that they should be called to an account upon this head. But a question arising, Whether this should be done before the Synod of Perth and Stirling or the Commission of the General Assembly? a vote was stated, Synod or Commission; and before calling of the rolls, it was resolved, that in case the vote should carry for the Synod, then the Synod shall report to the Commission. After this, the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried Commission; wherefore, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, appoint the Presbytery of Auchterarder to be cited to compare before the Commission of the General Assembly at Edinburgh, in the Assembly-House, the second Wednesday of August next, with continuation of days, to answer to them in the matter above written, with certification, &c. And the Assembly did, and hereby do, empower their Commission to cognosce and determine in this matter as they shall find just.

XI.

Sess. ult., May 15, 1717.—Act appointing the Dict of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church of Scotland is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, the 14th day of May next to come, in the year of our Lord 1718.

This Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing of the 133d Psalm throughout, and pronouncing of the blessing.

Sess. 5, May 19, 1718.—Act and Recommendation concerning a Fund for maintaining the Indigent Widows and Orphans of Ministers.

The General Assembly, finding that it often falls out that many of the widows and orphans of the ministers of this Church are brought into great straits, do judge it necessary and laudable that some way be fallen upon for relief of such, they, in order thereunto, did, and hereby do, seriously recommend to every minister in Scotland to give and dedicate the tenth part of his stipend for one year, for the end foresaid, and do appoint the same to be paid in, in money, and no otherwise, to the moderator of each Presbytery, betwixt and the 15th day of May 1719 years, or betwixt and the 15th day of May 1721 years, with the ordinary annual rent thereof, from the said 15th day of May 1719 to the time that the same shall be paid; and if ministers do not pay in their tenth part of their stipends for one year, at the times and in the terms above mentioned, they discharge the Presbyteries and Synods to receive the same, though afterwards offered; and appoints every Synod to nominate a responsible person within their bounds, for receiving the same from the moderators of the Presbyteries. 2do, The General Assembly farther recommends to every minister hereafter to be ordained or admitted within the bounds of any Synod, that he, within the space of two years after his admission, pay in, in manner foresaid, the tenth part of one year's stipend he is entitled to, by that admission, if he has not already paid into another Synod; and the Assembly declares, that his relief and children shall be entitled to a share of the fund in that Synod where the said minister paid, and not in that where he last served, except he have contributed in that Synod also, which it is hereby declared he is at liberty to do or not as he pleases. 3tio, The Assembly appoints that the money collected in every Synod be turned into a stock, and that it be lent out upon good security, and that only the yearly interest thereof be distributed, and that the stock be kept entire; and if the annual rent shall at any time happen to do more than serve the exigencies of the widows and children in the Synod, they appoint the said superplus annual rent to be added to the stock, in order to increase the fund. 4to, The Assembly appoints that the contributors in every Synod shall have the management of what sums shall be collected and given for the ends foresaid, to the widows and children of ministers who have served and contributed within their bounds, and that none other shall have right thereto. 5to, That no ministers' widows and children shall have any benefit from this fund, except their husband or father have actually paid in the tenth part of their stipend for one year, and do instruct the same. 6to, That no minister's widow shall have any title to this fund after they shall be married to another husband, or children after their marriage, or being in case to do for themselves, or be known to have a competency to subsist upon, or shall be found unworthy thereof, by any unsuitable carriage; of all which, the contributors within the bounds of every Synod are to be the judges. 7mo, That no widow or child, entitled to a share of this fund, shall be allowed above ten pounds sterling yearly thereof; and the Assembly hereby allows the contributors to give less, and in such proportions as the fund will bear, and the circumstances of the persons require. 8vo, If any other charitably disposed person, besides ministers, shall think fit to contribute to this pious design, the Assembly hereby resolve and declare that they shall have a vote and power in the management and distribution of the foresaid funds; provided always, that their said contribution be not under ten pounds sterling money. 9no, The Assembly hereby enacts and declares, that none shall have a vote or power in the management and distribution of this fund, but such as have contributed thereto; and for that end, they appoint that there be a meeting of those persons every Synod, for ordering what concerns this matter; and the moderator of the Synod shall preside in that meeting, and the clerk of the Synod shall be clerk thereto, if they have contributed; but if not, the General Assembly appoints others to be chosen preses and clerk to the said meeting: And the Assembly hereby warrants and allows the said contributors to appoint a committee of their own number to manage the concerns of this fund, in the intervals of the Synod's meetings; but it is hereby provided and declared, that the said committee shall have no power to dispose of any part of the money; and they are hereby ordained to report an account of their aetings to the next meeting at the Synod. 10mo, The General Assembly hereby prohibit and discharge any distribution to be made but at the ordinary diets of the Synod; and do appoint and declare, that the plurality of the meeting shall, by their vote, determine any difference that may arise about the matter. 11mo, The Assembly hereby declares, that such Presbyteries as have already settled a fund for their widows and children, shall be at liberty either to keep and manage the same by themselves, or to join with the Synod, as they shall think best, provided that the quota of the Presbytery's said fund do extend to a tenth part of the whole stipends within the said Presbytery, and that they declare their resolution at the meeting of their Synod preceding the year 1719. And, lastly, It is hereby provided and declared, that if any event unforeseen shall fall in, that may stop and hinder the execution of the above articles in the manner that they are proposed, the premises shall be ordered and managed according to further rules and directions, to be given by the subsequent General Assemblies of this Church.

V.

Sess. 12, May 23, 1718, post meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Elders for discussing divers Matters referred to them.

The General Assembly of the Charch of Scotland, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate and appoint their reverend brethren, Messrs William Wisheart, Principal of the Colledge of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be Commissioners of the General Assembly, to the effect after mentioned, with power to the said persons, &c. (The powers are the same as those given to the Commission of last year; and a clause is inserted renewing the instructions of 1717, and appointing them to stand in full force.)

VI.

Sess. 15, May 26, 1718.—Act discontinuing the extraordinary Correspondence with the Synod of Angus and Mearns.

*The General Assembly, finding that the Assembly, held anno 1701, by their 7th Act did appoint the Synods of Lothian and Tweeddale, Perth and Stirling, Fife and Aberdeen, to send correspondents to the Synod of Angus and Mearns; and that the said correspondence is, by the said act, appointed to continue until the Assembly shall see cause to alter it: And the Assembly considering, that now, in the good Providence of God, the churches within the said Synod are generally planted, so that the reasons which moved the Assembly to enjoin the said extraordinary correspondence have thereby ceased: Therefore, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, continue the extraordinary correspondence appointed by the said act only for one year next ensuing, declaring, that thenceforth the said extraordinary correspondence shall cease, and the foresaid four Synods shall be freed of the burden thereof, unless, upon application from the Synod of Angus and Mearns to subsequent Assemblies, they shall see cause to continue or renew the same.

VII.

Sess. 15, May 26, 1718.—Act for the better dispatching the Business of Assemblies.

The General Assembly, finding that their business is much retarded by parties having references, appeals, and complaints, to lay before the Assembly, their not giving them timeously in to the Committee for Bills; and that by such delays the Assembly is often necessarily obliged to commit several of their weighty affairs to their Commission, which were more proper to be judged by themselves: Therefore, they do hereby appoint and ordain all references, appeals, and complaints, that shall be made in time coming to the General Assemblies of this Church, to be lodged in the clerk's hands on or before the second or third days of the Assembly's meetings, that thereby they may timeously have a full view of all their work, and may be able to judge what things are of the greatest weight, and are necessary to be dispatched by themselves, if they cannot overtake the whole; with certification, that all appeals or complaints not lodged in the clerk's hands within the time foresaid, shall be held as deserted and fallen from, and shall not thereafter be received, unless upon the first opportunity the parties concerned make it appear to the Assembly, that insuperable difficulties did withhold them from lodging the same in manner above set down. And the General Assembly enjoins the clerks of the several judicatories to transmit to the clerk of Assembly within the time foresaid, all references made by the respective judicatures to the General Assembly.

VIII.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1718.—Act concerning the Presbytery of Auchterarder.

The General Assembly, finding that the Assembly, held anno 1717, did condemn a proposition emitted by the Presbytery of Auchterarder, and referred to their Commission, to call the brethren of that Presbytery before them, to give an account what they meant by the said proposition; and that they having compared before the Commission, and represented what they intended by it, the Commission agreed to accept of the sense they offered, declaring always, that however sound and orthodox they were in their meaning, and what they intended by that proposition, yet they had expressed it in words very unwarrantable and exceptionable; and the Commission did admonish them and discharge them to use that expression in time coming; and the brethren of Auchterarder did engage to observe this their prohibition. The General Assembly approves of the actings of the said Commission in this matter; and, for the vindication of the brethren of the Presbytery of Auchterarder, they appointed these presents to be printed among their public acts.

 IX.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1718.—Act Regulating Elections of Members of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, finding it necessary, for the good and safety of the Church, that the General Assemblies be rightly constituted, do, therefore, resolve and appoint, that in all time coming no commission from any Presbytery, burgh, or university, to their representatives in the General Assemblies of this Church, shall be sustained, but such as are in the terms of the Acts of the General Assembly, made for regulating elections of members of Assemblies, particularly the 5th Act of the General Assembly, 1694, entitled, "Act anent the Representation of Presbyteries in the General Assemblies;" Act 6th of the General Assembly, 1698, entitled, "Act for punctual sending of Commissioners to the General Assemblies, and their Attendance during the Sitting thereof;" and the 6th Act of the General Assembly, 1704, entitled, "Act anent Commissions to the General Assembly, and their subscribing the Confession of Faith, which are hereby renewed." And the General Assembly appoints Presbyteries not only to elect their full number of commissioners, but also to be careful to choose such persons as probably can attend. And the Assembly appoints that Presbyteries who send not up their full number of commissioners, and persons commissioned, who either come not up, or are absent from any of the diets of Assembly, be censured, unless relevant excuses for them be laid before and be admitted by the General Assembly: And further, the General Assembly does resolve, and peremptorily enact and appoint, that in all time coming, no commission whatsoever, for any ruling elder, or ruling elders, to sit as members of the General Assemblies of this Church, be sustained, but such as shall bear particularly that they have signed the formula prescribed by the 11th Act of the General Assembly, 1694, unless the said elders do either instantly subscribe it in presence of the Assembly, or a committee appointed by them, or do instruct that they have already subscribed the same; and to prevent all inconveniences of this sort in time coming, the General Assembly appoints that all Commissions after they are written out and extracted, and before they be put in the hands of the commissioners, be first read in the presence of the Presbytery, and be revised by them, and that it be attested by the moderator or clerk of the Presbytery upon the said Commissions that this was so done: And suchlike, the General Assembly has resolved, until the matter concerning commissions from burghs be further thought upon, and hereby do resolve, appoint, and ordain, that, in the meantime, no commissions from royal burghs to their representatives in Assembly shall be sustained, but such as shall be consented to and approved, not only by the ministry and kirk-sessions of the burgh, as is resolved by the Act of Assembly, July 15, 1647, but also by the Presbytery of the bounds within which the burgh lies; and upon which it shall be attested, both by the Kirk-session and Presbytery foresaid, that the person or persons therein named are elders lawfully ordained, and have signed the formula above mentioned; and likewise, that they are either residents in the burgh, or heritors in the burgh, or in the bounds of the Presbytery where the burgh lies, or that they have formerly resided and officiated as elders in the said burgh or Presbytery. And, lastly, The General Assembly extends the time limited by the foresaid 6th Act of the General Assembly, 1698, for choosing commissioners from Presbyteries, to those that shall hereafter be sent from royal burghs.

X.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1718.—Act concerning the larger Overtures for Discipline.

The General Assembly, considering the necessity of having a complete system of rules for the procedure of the judicatures of this Church in matters of discipline, and that the framing of this is one of the most proper works of the General Assemblies of this Church, from which they have been long diverted by other incidental things, and not having time now to overtake this necessary work, the General Assembly do revive the 17th Act of Assembly, 1707, and the 16th Act of Assembly, 1710, and again appoints the several Presbyteries who have not sent up their remarks upon the larger overtures, to transmit them to the Clerk of the Commission, betwixt and their meeting in August next, or November at farthest; and they appoint letters to be written by their Commission, at their first meeting, to each Presbytery for this effect; and ordains their Commission, at their said first meeting, to appoint a committee to class and put in order the remarks upon those overtures which are already come up, and those which shall be sent up; that upon the report of this Commission, the next General Assembly may be ready to enter upon this necessary work. And the General Assembly recommends it to the several Presbyteries to send up such members to the next General Assembly as may be most in case to help forward this important work.

XI.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1718.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church of Scotland is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, the second Thursday of May next to come, in the year of our Lord 1719, being the 14th day of that month.

This General Assembly was concluded with prayer, and singing of the 122d Psalm, from verse 6th to the close, and pronouncing of the blessing.

The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner, 14th May 1719.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. Under the full assurance of the constant zeal and affection of the Church of Scotland to our person and government, we do, with great willingness, countenance your General Assembly at this time, being confident that you will now meet with the same good disposition, and conduct yourselves with that temper and unanimity as you have hitherto done.

You may most firmly assure yourselves of our ready and cheerful concurrence in whatever methods shall be taken for the promoting true religion and piety, the discouraging profaneness and immorality, and for the preventing the growth of Popery.

The differences which have for some time been among you on account of the oaths, I hope, shall now be happily removed, and I must recommend it to you to be upon your guard against the practices of such as would endeavour to raise unhappy divisions among you, there being nothing that can tend more to your honour and welfare than concord and brotherly love.

We have again made choice of our right trusty and well-beloved cousin, John Earl of Rothes, to represent our person in this Assembly, whose known abilities to discharge that trust, together with his former services therein, will, we doubt not, make him acceptable to you. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court, at St James's, the 23d April 1719, in the fifth year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

ROXBURGH.

Directed to the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 16, 1719.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The great honour done us by your Majesty's most gracious Letter, and your royal goodness in condescending to signify your satisfaction with former General Assemblies, adds new life and vigour to that constant zeal and affection to your Majesty's person and government, which the members of this Church reckon their duty and their glory, and lays us under the strongest obligations to conduct ourselves with that temper and unanimity that becomes us; and to endeavour, in the best manner we are able, to approve ourselves to God and to your Majesty.

The great encouragement we have, by your Majesty's assuring us of your ready and cheerful concurrence in whatever methods shall be taken for promoting true religion and piety, the discouraging profaneness and immorality, and preventing the growth of Popery, renders us inexcusable, should we be wanting on our part to exert ourselves to the utmost towards obtaining these good ends.

Your Majesty's extraordinary condescension in taking care to have the differences amongst us, on account of the oaths, happily removed, is an unparalleled instance of royal goodness, for which we can never be sufficiently thankful; and as it gives us the comfortable prospect of happy effects to follow upon it, so it calls us to guard ourselves, with the strictest care and watchfulness, against the practices of such as would endeavour to raise unhappy divisions amongst us, and whatever may lessen that concord and brotherly love, which tends so much to the honour and welfare of this Church.

The Earl of Rothes his steady adherence at all times to the interest of the happy Revolution and Protestant succession, his great zeal for your Majesty's service, his good affection to the Church of Scotland, the proof he has formerly given of his eminent abilities for discharging the high trust wherewith he is now clothed, render your Majesty's choice of him to represent your Royal person in this Assembly most acceptable to us.

That Almighty God may plentifully enrich your Majesty with his best blessings, and advance your glorious designs for the happiness of your own people, and the good of the whole Protestant interest; that his watchful Providence may be your protection, and return you in safety to Great Britain; that he may eminently bless their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, their Royal offspring, and all your Royal Family; that as He has signally appeared in defeating the attempts of your Majesty's enemies, so He would continue his goodness in supporting your righteous cause, bless and direct your councils, and prosper your arms for preserving the quiet of your dominions, and restoring the peace of Europe; and that, after a long and prosperous reign on earth, your Majesty may be crowned with immortal glory in Heaven, are the most fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by

JAMES GRIERSON, Moderator.

IV.

Sess. 4, May 18, 1719.—Act for preventing the Growth of Popery, for Encouragement of Ministers, and the Settlement and Provision of Schools.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration the extraordinary growth of Popery in several places of Scotland, do, for preventing thereof, exhort and enjoin all Presbyteries and particular ministers, and Kirk-sessions, to have a watchful eye on the Papists within their bounds, and to take up lists of their names, and to send the same to the Commission of the General Assembly, to be laid before his Majesty's Advocate, or to be otherwise used by the Commission as they shall see cause; and that the said Presbyteries, ministers, and Kirk-sessions, be at all pains to reclaim Papists, and that they observe what is enjoined for that end, by the 8th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1707; and suchlike, that Presbyteries, in whose bounds there are Papists, do give in informations against them, according to the 11th Act of the General Assembly, 1714; and the General Assembly likewise appoints Presbyteries to hold visitations in those parishes where Popery abounds, and inquire into the circumstances thereof, the number of catechisable persons therein, how many of them are Protestants, and how many Papists, and who of them are apostates; as also, what is the length and breadth of such parishes, and what the real rent, and also the valued rent of each heritor extends to, that so it may be known where new erections are practicable, and how much each parish may afford toward the maintenance of schools, conform to law. And, further, the General Assembly appoints that at these visitations the churches and manses be also inspected by tradesmen in a legal manner; and that where ministers do want glebes, grass, or other accommodations, the course prescribed by law be followed; and that an extract of what is done in the premises be sent to the procurator and agent for the Church, that diligence may be taken out thereon, according to law. And, in like manner, where schools are wanting in any parish, the General Assembly hereby appoints that Presbyteries make legal intimation to the heritors and parishioners to meet on a certain day, and at a certain place, to stent themselves for a salary to a schoolmaster, and for the needful accommodations for him, as is appointed by 5th Act Parliament 1st, Charles I. anno 1633, and 26th Act, Sess. 2d, Parliament King William, anno 1696, and that they appoint a committee to meet with them; and if the heritors and parishioners, and, failing the heritors, the most part of the parishioners, do meet, they may proceed to stent, and also to proportion the money laid on; but if they either meet not, or, being met, do fail in settling a salary and providing a house for the schoolmaster, then, and in that case, the Assembly appoints the Presbytery to present a petition to the Commissioners of Supply, or any five or more of them, with an extract of the valued rent of the parish, and crave that the Commissioners may, in the terms of the foresaid Acts of Parliament, settle a school; and if the Commissioners refuse or shift the doing of it, that instruments be taken against them, and thereupon a process be commenced before the Lords of Council and Session, who have already, in the like cases, provided salaries and houses for schoolmasters. And if, when all this is done, the heritors will not call a qualified schoolmaster, the General Assembly appoints and requires the Presbytery, after the expiring of one year, to order intimation to be made from the pulpit to the heritors and parishioners to meet upon a certain day, in order to elect and present one to be schoolmaster; and if at that time they do it not, the Presbytery is appointed to present one; and, after edicts duly published with respect to him, to admit and settle him. And, lastly, where competent stipends are not provided in parishes where Popery abounds, or where the stipends are paid in small parcels, the General Assembly appoints the Presbytery concerned to cause draw up a state of these stipends, how, and by whom they are paid, and also an account of the real rent of each heritor in such parishes, and send the same to the procurator and agent for the Church, who, upon receipt thereof, are ordered to commence processes for settling of competent stipends to the ministers, where the same is not already done; and the Assembly appoints the expenses of processes for settling of stipends and schools in parishes where Popery abounds, to be borne out of the Church's public money.

Sess. 5, May 19, 1719.—Representation of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, with an Act thereupon.

The which day, there was again brought in from the Committee for Bills a representation, the tenor whereof follows:—

“Unto the Right Reverend and Honourable, the Moderator and remanent Members of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, the Committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge humbly represents—That the venerable Assemblies, and other judicatures of this Church, having all along showed so much zeal for the advancement of the Society's undertaking, they find themselves bound in duty, in the Society's name, to make a public acknowledgment of it; and for the encouragement of the Church to continue her kind assistance to the Society in their work, to lay before this venerable Assembly a short account of the success with which it has pleased God to bless their endeavours, and to show them, that not only did a multitude of charitable people, of all ranks, contribute liberally in the ordinary public collections, but divers persons have, beside their first donations in common with others, mortified considerable sums to the Society's stock, whereby it is now increased to upwards of L.7000 sterling; and the Society and their committee have not only taken care to lay out this on good and unquestionable security, but have, upon the yearly annual rent thereof, erected, and have determined instantly to erect, to the number of forty-two, schools in such places of the Highlands and Islands as appeared to them, from the best informations, to stand most in need of their assistance, viz., Kintail in Strathnaver, Braecadale in Isle of Skye—this school was formerly at Snizort; Hirta, alias St Kilda, a far remote island, where the Society maintains a minister, who is also schoolmaster; Glenmuick in Braemar; Monaltry there; Harray in Orkney; Abertarf in the Shire of Inverness; Tomnavillan in Banffshire; Shapinshay in Orkney—an Island; Westray there; Kildonan in the Shire of Sutherland; Mull—an Island; Laggan in Badenoch; Strowan in Atholl; Kilmorack in Ross; Lohearn in Perthshire; Glenladnoch there; Glenarehna there; Tillichon in the Shire of Moray; Culphern there; Drummoyn there; Tillidivie there; Brae of Balquhidder in Perthshire; Strathyre there; Lohearn there; South Ronaldshay in Orkney—an Island; North Ronaldshay there; Bracklain in Perthshire; Collintogle there; Bridge of Turk there; Evie in Orkney; Orphire there; Rivan in Banffshire; Hoy in Orkney; Gremsay—an Island there; Tombowie in Dunbartonshire; Ardlewig there; Coverelet there; Clashmore there; Port in Stirlingshire; Firth in Orkney; Auldearn in Moray: From the greater part of all which places, the Society do from time to time receive most encouraging accounts of a multitude of scholars, and almost surprising advances in their learning.

“But there being applications made in favour of a great many other places beside these above mentioned, that greatly want the means of Christian education, the Society are earnestly solicitous to have them as speedily supplied as may be; but their present stock being capable to sustain no more schools than they have already established; and the committee being informed that there will be a balance remaining in the hands of the General Assembly of the money that was due to the Church, upon the fund of the equivalent, after payment of all the Church's debts stated upon that fund, which was set apart by the last Assembly for advancing the knowledge of God in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, they do, with the greatest submission, propose to this venerable Assembly, that the foresaid balance may be employed toward the erecting and maintaining charity schools in those places where Popery does most abound.

“The committee do own, that they were likewise informed, that the late Assembly had in view to maintain probationers as catechists, with the said money in such places; but their main design being the promoting of the knowledge of Christ, this present Assembly will still find themselves at liberty to follow those means that are most likely to reach that end; and the committee are very hopeful that the venerable Assembly will soon be of the mind that the erecting of charity schools, where not only the first foundations of the knowledge of the principles of the reformed Protestant religion will be firmly and solidly laid, and at leisure inculcated in the minds of the rude and ignorant, especially the younger sort; but the seeds of knowledge thus sown will be preserved by the scholars, their being taught to read the Holy Scriptures, the fountain of all truth, will be a much more probable way to advance the knowledge of Christ, and root out the Popish errors, than the overly instruction of an itinerant catechist, who cannot be supposed to have time enough to make his scholars understand distinctly the full meaning of the very terms in which the mysteries of our holy religion are expressed, without which his teaching can be of little use; especially if it be considered that the teachers of the charity schools do really perform all the work that such catechists can do, except it be to ease the minister of some diets of preaching; for the charity schools being commonly set up in places remote from the parish church, these schoolmasters do upon the Lord's Days, by the minister's direction, read the Holy Scriptures, and other good and pious books to the people, do sing Psalms and pray with them, and catechise them; and in the summer time, when the parents are obliged to remove their children from the schools to their sheilings, for herding their cattle, the schoolmaster may be enjoined to travel to and fro amongst those sheilings, and instruct the people.

“The venerable Assembly will please further to consider what difficulties occur in getting preachers having the Irish language, sufficiently qualified to be catechists, according to the scheme set forth in the act of the late Assembly, when, notwithstanding all the encouragements given by the Assemblies of this Church to students having that language, there cannot be as many found as to supply the vacancies in Highland congregations, when the same fall out.

“And, to persuade the venerable Assembly to give all encouragement to the Society's undertaking, the committee lays hold on this occasion to inform them a little of their constitution and method of management; for, besides five general meetings of the whole Society yearly, their committee of fifteen, which by their patent is obliged to meet monthly, meets for the most part every week; and matters are so ordered by the Society, that this committee, upon any necessary emergency, is always convened upon half an hour's advertisement; so that the Society and their committees have more frequent occasions to inquire into the state of their schools, and diligence of their schoolmasters, than any Church judicatory can have to oversee their catechists; and for the Society's better direction, and more exact management, they keep a close and constant correspondence with the ministers of the parishes, and Presbyteries of the bounds within which their schools are settled; and when they find their schools do not prosper in one place, they, by the Presbytery's advice, do transport them to another. Many other instances could be here given to show the exactness of the Society's administration; but the same is so well known to a great number of the reverend and honourable members of this Assembly, that the committee forbears to give the Assembly the trouble now to mention them.

“ May it therefore please this venerable Assembly to renew the recommendations of former Assemblies to Presbyteries and particular ministers, to deal seriously with well disposed persons, who have not yet contributed, to extend their charity for advancing the pious ends of the Society’s erection, that they may be soon enabled to establish schools in those countries where Popery prevails, that do yet want the same; and, if the Assembly shall find any occasion for the Society’s assistance in the way that they shall think fit to bestow the foresaid balance, the Committee does, in the name of the said Society, freely offer their service to the Assembly.

The General Assembly having discoursed fully upon the matter of the said representation, they did, and hereby do, appoint the excescence of the Church’s money upon the fund of the equivalent, that shall remain after payment of the Church’s debts stated upon that fund, to be lodged with the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, for erecting schools in the Highlands and Islands; and they declare that the receipt of the treasurer of the said Society to the procurator for the Church for the said remains, shall be a sufficient exoneration to him at his accounting for the said monies. And, further, the General Assembly renews all recommendations given by former General Assemblies in favour of the said Society, and do give the said Society and their committee hearty thanks for their great care and faithful management of the trust reposed in them.

VI.

Sess. 5, May 19, 1719.—Act concerning the Qualification of Members of the Commission.

The General Assembly do resolve and appoint that all the members of the Commissions of this and subsequent Assemblies be qualified according to the Acts of Assembly, particularly the 9th Act of the last General Assembly, before they vote or act as such.

VII.

Sess. 5, May 19, 1719.—Recommendation concerning Deacons.

The General Assembly recommends to all the ministers of this Church to take care that deacons as well as elders be ordained in such congregations where deacons are wanting; but declares that deacons, as such, shall have no decisive voice in calling of ministers, or in the exercise of Church discipline.

VIII.

Sess. 7, May 21, 1719, ante meridiem.—Act for the right Management of the Church’s Public Money.

The General Assembly, considering how unsuitable it is for the Church to engage their credit beyond what their funds are able to answer, therefore, to prevent this inconvenience in time coming, the General Assembly do hereby prohibit and discharge the applying of any of the said money toward the payment of the expenses of processes for stipends, except in parishes where Popery abounds, or such as shall be recommended both by the Presbytery and Synod to which the parish belongs, and the case laid before the Assembly, and their particular order given for that effect before the commencement of the process: And the General Assembly does resolve and declare, that for hereafter no new warrants or orders shall be granted for payment of any money to any person whatsoever, except to preachers sent to supply in the North for their allowances; and they hereby strictly prohibit and discharge the clerk of Assembly, or sub-clerk, to write out, or the moderator of this or subsequent Assemblies to subscribe, any orders or warrants for payment of any new grants out of the Church's yearly allowance, until all former debts already contracted by preceding Assemblies or Commissions be first paid. And, further, the General Assembly resolves and declares, that at no time hereafter any warrants for money shall be granted, until it be known that there is as much in the hands of the receiver of the Church's money as will be sufficient to answer the same; and they appoint the 7th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1712, to be punctually observed, and do require the procurator for the Church, when any demands for money come before the General Assembly or Commissions thereof, to acquaint them with the state of their funds, and to read the foresaid act, anno 1712, and this present act to them. And the Assembly discharges the committee chosen by each Assembly for auditing and revising the Church's public accounts, to propose the giving either of money, or precepts for money, exceeding that part of the year's allowance belonging to that Assembly which is free and unappropriated; and appoints them to bring their report first to the Committee for Overtures, before it be brought into the General Assembly. And the General Assembly also appoints the said committee for the public accounts to cause this present act, and any new regulations that shall be made about money, to be read to them yearly, and to reject all petitions and demands not in the terms thereof; and to report an account of any breaches that shall be made therein to the Assembly.

IX.

Sess. 8, May 22, 1719.—Act showing the Sin and Evil of Running Unentered Goods, and of the Perjuries at the Custom-Houses in Matters of Trade.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration the many sins and scandals that are occasioned in this nation, especially upon the sea-coasts thereof, by the running of uncustomed goods, to the great discouragement and detriment of all fair traders; the multiplied perjuries that some shipmasters, merchants, and others, become guilty of in his Majesty's custom-houses, through this unlawful and unwarrantable practice, to the great dishonour of God, the reproach of the Christian name and character, and to the wounding and ruining of precious souls; the dreadful profanation of the Lord's Day that these impious courses do lead seamen, farmers, merchants, and others of their assistants to, in transporting and hiding of their goods on the Sabbath; and that all this is attended with horrid lying and dissimulation, with beastly drunkenness and stealing—the persons who help to carry off these unentered goods, and are disposed, through influence, friendship, and money, to lodge and conceal them, reckoning it a small offence and sin, if any, to take a share of them to themselves; and that such practices are sometimes the occasion of fighting, beating, slaughter, and blood, and do not a little lessen his Majesty's just revenues, that by the laws of God, and laws of the land, his Majesty's trading subjects (under his protection) are obliged to render to him for conscience sake, in obedience to the commands of God's holy Word, "That we should render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's," Matth. xxii. 21; "And to give tribute to whom tribute is due, and custom to whom custom," &c., Rom. xiii. 7; do judge themselves bound, in duty and conscience, to warn all men of the sin, evil, and danger, of such courses; and they strictly enjoin all ministers, especially those whom the providence of God has fixed in sea-trading towns and places, to represent to the people and hearers the great impiety and monstrous wickedness of such methods to gain this world, to the endangering of their souls; and, as they have access, seriously to deal with the consciences of such as they have ground to suspect guilty in this matter, and to show to them the evil of their ways, earnestly beseeching and obtesting them, in the fear of God, and from the consideration of a future judgment, to abstain from such crying sins and deadly courses, that cannot but justly provoke a holy God to deny them success in their enterprises and undertakings, to lessen their means, and to send heavy judgments upon them; that are so contrary to divine laws, and inconsistent with Christians, their professions and engagements to the most high God; that have so plain a tendency to ruin their souls, and to draw down the wrath of God upon them and theirs; and that serve so palpably to debauch the consciences and morals of so many in the country, and to involve others in guilt with themselves, by bribing and otherwise. And the General Assembly ordains this Act to be once read in all the churches in Scotland, and as often in particular parishes as the prudence of ministers shall direct.

X.

Sess. 8, May 22, 1719.—Recommendation against Abuses at Penny Weddings.

The General Assembly did, and hereby do, recommend to Synods, Presbyteries, and Kirk-sessions, to see to the execution of the Acts of the General Assembly against abuses at penny weddings, and to apply to the civil magistrate for the execution of the laws against persons guilty of abuses and disorders on these occasions.

XI.

Sess. 9, May 22, 1719, post meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, having taken into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint, their reverend brethren, Messrs James Grierson, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be Commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effect after mentioned, with power to the said Commission, or their quorum, which is hereby declared to be any thirty-one of the said Commissioners, whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers, to meet and convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh, the first free day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon; and afterwards, the second Wednesdays of August, November, and March, next to come, and oftener, when or where they shall think fit and convenient; with power to the said Commission to choose their own moderator. And suchlike, the General Assembly fully empowers and authorises their said Commissioners, or their quorum, above mentioned, to cognosce and finally determine, as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred to them, by any act or order of this Assembly; and to do every thing contained in and conform to the instructions given, or to be given, by this Assembly; and to advert unto the interests of the Church on every occasion, that the Church, and present establishment thereof, do not suffer or sustain any prejudice which they can prevent, as they will be answerable; providing this general clause be not extended to particular affairs or processes before Synods or Presbyteries, that are not of universal concern to or influence upon the whole Church. And it is hereby appointed, that what shall be determined at one diet of the said Commission, with relation to private causes, shall be unalterable by any other diet thereof, and shall stand and continue in force till disapproved by the General Assembly. And the General Assembly renews the instructions given by the General Assembly, anno 1717, to their Commission, and appoints the same to stand in full force, as instructions to the Commissioners above named, and to be observed by them in all points, as if the same were specially therein inserted; and that they inquire how the prohibition has been observed in the bounds of the Presbytery of Auchterarder, or elsewhere, whereby the using of the proposition emitted by that Presbytery, and condemned by the General Assembly, anno 1717, was discharged; and that they inquire into the publishing and spreading of books and pamphlets tending to the diffusing of that condemned proposition, and promoting a scheme of opinions relative thereto, which are inconsistent with our Confession of Faith; and that the recommenders of such books or pamphlets, or the errors therein contained, whether by word or print, be called before them to answer for their conduct in such recommendations. And the Commission are empowered to judge in cases of doctrine that shall be brought before them by appeals or references from Synods or Presbyteries; and they are likewise appointed to take care that impressions of the Holy Scriptures, of the Confession of Faith, and Catechisms, and of all other books relating to the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government of this Church, be correct. And the said Commissioners are hereby strictly prohibited and discharged to meddle in any other matters than what are committed and referred to them as above mentioned; and in all their actings, they are to proceed according to the acts and constitutions of this National Church, and to do nothing contrary thereto, or to the prejudice of the same; declaring, that in and for all their actings they shall be accountable to and censurable by the next General Assembly, as they shall see cause; and this Commission is to continue and endure until another Commission be appointed; and members are required to attend the diets of the said Commission, and absentees therefrom ordered to be noticed, according to the 17th Act of the General Assembly, 1706. And for the better securing of a quorum, and attendance of members on the Commission, the General Assembly prohibits the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and other Presbyteries within twelve miles thereof, to meet any of the days or weeks appointed for the meeting of this Commission; and such of the members of these Presbyteries as are on the Commission are required, all of them, to give punctual attendance on the diets thereof; and Presbyteries at a greater distance, who have four or more members on the Commission, are to take care that at least two of them attend each diet of the same.

XII.

Sess. 9, May 23, 1719.—Act for promoting Religion and Learning in Universities and Colleges.

The General Assembly, considering how much it is their duty to do all that is in their power for promoting religion and learning in this Church, do hereby instruct their Commission carefully to advert to everything whereby they may contribute to the flourishing of the sciences and good literature, and to the propagating of religion and loyalty in universities; and, particularly, that they diligently inquire what privileges and interest the judicatories of this Church, or the ministers thereof, have by the constitutions of the several universities and colleges, and by the laws of the land, with respect to the settlement of the masters and professors in them, which the General Assembly hereby appoints their Commission, by all just methods, to maintain inviolably, and improve towards the promoting the foresaid interests of true piety and learning; and that, for this end, they receive and give all due encouragement to whatever applications may be made to them for this effect.

XIII.

Sess. ult., May 23, 1719.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church of Scotland is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, the second Thursday of May next to come, in the year of our Lord 1720.

This General Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing the 133d Psalm throughout, and pronouncing of the blessing.

IV.

Sess. 6, May 18, 1720.—Act concerning Commissions to Members of the General Assembly, and Attestations of the same.

The General Assembly, considering that there have been divers acts passed with respect to the qualifications of the members of Assembly since the Act 8th, Assembly, anno 1695, which prescribes a form of their commissions, particularly the Act 6th, Assembly, anno 1698; Act 6th, Assembly, anno 1704; and Act 9th, Assembly, anno 1718; and that it is expedient, for the direction of Presbyteries, and for procuring, as near as may be, an uniformity amongst them, in granting commissions to their representatives in Assemblies, that an addition be made to the foresaid directory in the Act 1695, with regard to the other posterior acts above mentioned: Therefore, the General Assembly do appoint and ordain, that, in all time coming, there be subjoined and adjoined to the foresaid formula in the Act 1695 the following clause, viz.:—"And the said Presbytery does hereby testify and declare, that all the ministers above named have signed the formula enjoined by the 10th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1711, and all the ruling elders above written have signed the formula prescribed by the 11th Act of Assembly, 1694;" but if the Presbytery be uncertain whether the said elders have signed the said formula or not, then the attestation shall bear, that they are either to sign it in presence of the Assembly, or instruct that they have done it before. And further, "That all the said commissioners are every other way qualified to be members of the Assembly, according to the Acts of Assembly. Extracted by _____ Clerk, Presb." And because the said Act, anno 1718, appoints that all commissions, after they are written out and extracted, and before they be put in the hands of the commissioners, be first read in presence of the Presbytery, and be revised by them, and that it be attested by the Moderator and Clerk of the Presbytery upon the said commissions that this was so done: Therefore, the Assembly appoints, that the Presbytery's attestation shall run thus:—"At _____ the _____ day of _____ the Presbytery having had the above written extract of their commission to their representatives in the ensuing Assembly laid before them, they caused it to be read, and having revised and considered the same, they did approve thereof. Attested by Moderator, or Clerk." And because the foresaid Act 9th, Assembly, 1718, does appoint and ordain, that no commissions from royal burghs to their representatives in Assembly shall be sustained, but such as shall be consented to and approved, not only by the ministry and kirk-sessions of the burghs, but also by the Presbytery of the bounds within which the burghs lie; and upon which it shall be attested both by the Kirk-session and Presbytery foresaid, according to the tenor of the foresaid Act: Therefore, the General Assembly appoints, that the foresaid attestations of the Kirk-session and Presbytery shall be in the terms following:—" At the _____ day of _____ the which day the Kirk-session of _____ having had laid before them a commission given by the magistrates and town-council of _____ to _____ to represent the said burgh in the ensuing General Assembly of this National Church, do, in the terms of the Act 9th, Assembly, 1718, testify and declare, that the said _____ is an elder lawfully ordained, and that he has signed the formula prescribed by the 11th Act of Assembly, 1694; and likewise that he is (a residenter in the said burgh,) or (an heritor in the said burgh,) or (an heritor in the bounds of the Presbytery of _____ within which the said burgh lies,) or has (formerly resided and officiated as an elder in the said burgh,) or (Presbytery of _____ within which the said burgh does lie.)" And that the Presbytery's attestation shall run thus, viz. :—" At the _____ day of _____ the which day the Presbytery of _____ having had produced before them a commission given by the magistrates and town-council of _____ to _____ to represent the said burgh in the ensuing General Assembly of this National Church, with an attestation of the Kirk-session of the said burgh, conform to the direction of the Act 9th, Assembly, 1718, and Act 4th, Assembly, 1720, do, in the terms of the foresaid Acts, likewise testify and declare, that," &c., and so forth, precisely in the words of the form above prescribed to the Kirk-sessions. And the General Assembly does resolve and declare, that all commissions not in the terms above mentioned shall be rejected. And it is hereby provided and declared, that if the person elected by the burgh royal be qualified as above, that the ministry and session, and Presbytery, respectively, do attest him when his commission is presented to them.

Sess. 9, May 20, 1720.—Act concerning a Book, entitled, The Marrow of Modern Divinity.

The General Assembly, having had under their consideration the book entitled "The Marrow of Modern Divinity," reprinted at Edinburgh, anno 1718, with an ample recommendation prefixed thereto, which they found was dispersed and come into the hands of many of the people; and having had laid before them the following passages, collected out of the said book by a committee for preserving the purity of doctrine in this Church, appointed by the Commission of the late General Assembly; the tenor whereof follows:—

Concerning the Nature of Faith.

Page 118.—" There is no more for him to do, but only to know and believe that Christ hath done all for him." Page 119.—" This, then, is perfect righteousness,—only to know and believe that Jesus Christ is now gone to the Father, and sitteth at his right hand, not as a judge, but as made unto you of God wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption; wherefore, as Paul and Silas said to the jailor, so say I unto you, ' Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved ;'—that is, be verily persuaded in your heart that Jesus Christ is yours, and that you shall have life and salvation by him; that whatsoever Christ did for the redemption of mankind, he did it for you." Page 120.—" Forasmuch as the Holy Scripture speaketh to all in general, none of us ought to distrust himself, but believe that it doth belong particularly to himself." The same is asserted, pages 121, 122, 123, 124, 131, 136, 137, 175, 176, 177, and in many other places of the book. This notion of saving faith appears contrary to Scripture: Isa. l. 10; Rom. viii. 16; 1 John v. 13; and to Confess. Cap. xviii. § 1, 3, 4; and to Larger Catechism, Quest. 81, 172; all which passages show that assurance is not of the essence of faith, whereas the passages cited from "The Marrow," &c., appear to assert the contrary, making that saving faith commanded in the Gospel a man's persuasion that Christ is his, and died for him; and that whoever hath not this persuasion or assurance hath not answered the Gospel call, nor is a true believer.

Of Universal Atonement and Pardon.

Page 108.—"Christ hath taken upon him the sins of all men." Page 119.—"The Father hath made a deed of gift and grant unto all mankind, that whosoever of them all shall believe in his Son shall not perish, &c., (i. e. whosoever believes or is persuaded that Christ is his; for this must be the sense according to the former passages.) Hence it was that Christ said to his disciples, 'Go and preach the Gospel to every creature under heaven;'—that is, Go and tell every man, without exception, that here is good news for him; Christ is dead for him. Even so, our good King, the Lord of heaven and earth, hath, for the obedience and desert of our good brother, Jesus Christ, pardoned all our sins." To the same purpose, pages 127 and 128. Here is asserted an universal redemption as to purchase, contrary to John x. 15, 27, 28, 29; and xv. 13 and 17; Titus ii. 14; Confess. Cap. iii. § 6; Cap. viii. § 8; Larger Catechism, Quest. 59.

Holiness not necessary to Salvation.

From page 150 to page 153.—"And if the Law say good works must be done, and the commandment must be kept, if thou wilt obtain salvation, then answer you, and say, I am already saved before thou camest; therefore, I have no need of thy presence—Christ is my righteousness, my treasure, and my work. I confess, O Law! that I am neither godly nor righteous; but this yet I am sure of, that he is godly and righteous for me." Page 185.—"Good works may rather be called a believer's walking in the way of eternal happiness than the way itself." This doctrine tends to slacken people's diligence in the study of holiness, contrary to Heb. xii. 14; 2 Thess. ii. 13; Ephes. ii. 10; Isa. xxxv. 8; James ii. 20; Confess. Cap. xiii. § 1; Larger Catechism, Quest. 32; Confess. Cap. xv. § 2.

A great deal more to this purpose is to be seen, pages 175, 179, 180, 182, 183, 184, and appears contrary to Psalms xlv. 11; Psal. cxix. 4, 6; Exod. xx. 2; James i. 25; and ii. 8, 10, 11, 12; 1 Tim. iv. 8; Col. iii. 24; Heb. xi. 6, 26; Rev. ii. 10; 2 Cor. v. 9, 10, 11; Heb. xii. 2, 28, 29; 2 Pet. iii. 14; Confess. Expressions in the Marrow, &c.

Page 192.—“A minister that dares not persuade sinners to believe their sins are pardoned before he see their lives reformed, for fear they should take more liberty to sin, is ignorant of the mystery of faith.” And, page 27.—“Christ undertook to suffer under the penalty that lay upon man to have undergone.” And, page 117.—“The covenant of works was twice made,—first with man, and a second time God was on both sides.” Page 115.—“The law practised his whole tyranny upon the Son of God; and because it did so horribly and cursedly sin against his God, it is cursed and arraigned, and as a thief, and cursed murderer of the Son of God, loseth all his right, and deserveth to be condemned; the law, therefore, is bound, dead, and crucified, to me.” Page 126.—“Whosoever is married to Christ, and so in him by faith, he is as acceptable to God the Father as Christ himself.” Page 127.—“And so shall the love and favour of God be as deeply insinuated into you as it is into Christ himself.” Page 144.—“Whence it must needs follow, that you cannot be damned, except Christ be damned with you, neither can Christ be saved, except ye be saved with him.” Pages 145, 146.—“Say unto Christ, with bold confidence, I give to thee, my dear husband, my unbelief, my mistrust, my pride, my arrogancy, my ambition, my wrath, and anger, my envy, my covetousness, my evil thoughts, affections, and desires. I make one bundle of those, and all my other offences, and give them unto thee.” 2 Cor. v. 21.—“And thus was Christ made sin for us, who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.” Page 207.—“Nor yet, as touching your justification and eternal salvation, will he love you ever a whit the less, though you commit never so many or great sins.”

These are collected out of many other exceptionable positions contained in that book, which for brevity's sake are omitted.

And the General Assembly having had the said passages, and several others, read to them from the said book, and having compared them with the texts of Holy Scripture, articles of our Confession of Faith, and of the Larger Catechism of this Church, above cited, the General Assembly found, that the said passages and quotations, which relate to the five several heads of doctrine above mentioned, are contrary to the Holy Scriptures, our Confession of Faith and Catechisms; and that the distinction of the law, as it is the law of works, and as it is the law of Christ, as the author applies it, in order to fence and defend the six Antinomian paradoxes above written, is altogether groundless; and that the other expressions above set down, excerpted out of the said book, are exceedingly harsh and offensive; and, therefore, the General Assembly do hereby strictly prohibit and discharge all the ministers of this Church, either by preaching, writing, or printing, to recommend the said book, or, in discourse, to say any thing in favour of it; but, on the contrary, they are hereby enjoined and required to warn and exhort their people, in whose hands the said book is, or may come, not to read or use the same.

Sess. 10, May 21, 1720.—Commission to some Ministers and Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint, their reverend brethren, Messrs William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the College of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be Commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effect after mentioned, with power to the said Commission, or their quorum, which is hereby declared to be any thirty-one of the said Commissioners, whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers, to meet and convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh, the first free day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, and afterwards, the second Wednesdays of August, November, and March, next to come, and oftener, when or where they shall think fit and convenient, with power to the said Commission to choose their own moderator. And suchlike, the General Assembly fully empowers and authorises their said Commissioners, or their quorum above mentioned, to cognosce and finally determine as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred to them, by any act or order of this Assembly, and to do every thing contained in and conform to the instructions given, or to be given, by this Assembly; and to advert unto the interests of the Church on every occasion, that the Church, and present establishment thereof, do not suffer or sustain any prejudice which they can prevent, as they will be answerable; providing this general clause be not extended to particular affairs or processes before Synods or Presbyteries, that are not of universal concern to or influence upon the whole Church: And it is hereby appointed, that what shall be determined at one diet of the said Commission, with relation to private causes, shall be unalterable by any other diet thereof, and shall stand and continue in force till disapproved by the General Assembly. And the General Assembly renews the instructions given by the General Assembly, 1717, to their Commission, and appoints the same to stand in full force, as instructions to the Commissioners above named, and to be observed by them in all points, as if the same were specially therein inserted; and that they inquire into the publishing and spreading of books and pamphlets tending toward the promoting a scheme of opinions inconsistent with our Confession of Faith; and that the recommenders of such books or pamphlets, or the errors therein contained, whether by word or print, be called before them to answer for such recommendations. And the Commission are empowered to judge in cases of doctrine, that shall be brought before them by appeals or references from Synods or Presbyteries; and they are likewise appointed to take care that impressions of the Holy Scriptures, of the Confession of Faith, and Catechisms, and of all other books relating to the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government of this Church, be correct. And the said Commissioners are hereby strictly prohibited and discharged to meddle in any other matters than what are committed and referred to them as above mentioned, and in all their actings they are to proceed according to the acts and constitutions of this National Church, and to do nothing contrary thereto, or to the prejudice of the same; declaring, that in and for all their actings they shall be accountable to and censurable by the next General Assembly, as they shall see cause; and this Commission is to continue and endure until another Commission be appointed, and members are required to attend the diets of the said Commission, and absentees therefrom ordered to be noticed, according to the 17th Act of the General Assembly, 1706. And for the better securing of a quorum, and attendance of members on the Commission, the General Assembly prohibits the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and other Presbyteries within twelve miles thereof, to meet any of the days or weeks appointed for the meeting of this Commission, and such of the members of these Presbyteries as are on the Commission are required all of them to give punctual attendance on the diets thereof, and Presbyteries at a greater distance, who have four or more members on the Commission, are to take care that at least two of them attend each diet of the same.

Sess. 10, May 23, 1720, ante meridiem.—Act and Reference against Popery.

The which day, there being brought in from the Committee for Overtures a report concerning the extraordinary increase of Popery in divers places of this nation, together with a large and particular memorial of the instances thereof, and an overture concerning the same; and the General Assembly having considered the said overture and memorial, they, in pursuance thereof, did, and hereby do, instruct and empower their Commission to do what in them lies to prevent the growth of Popery, by directing and assisting ministers in those bounds where Popery prevails, in applying all proper ecclesiastical remedies, particularly those prescribed in the 4th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1719, and former acts. And the General Assembly does appoint all the ministers of this Church, especially in such corners as there are Papists in, to preach against the errors of Popery, and deal seriously with Papists for their conviction. And, farther, the General Assembly does instruct their said Commission to use all suitable endeavours to get the civil remedies that are now under consideration brought to some good issue; and likewise to think upon means to get proper books against Popery put in the hands of the people in those places where Popery prevails, or people are in danger of being perverted. And the General Assembly did approve of the draught of the said memorial against Popery brought in, and appoints the Moderator, in their name, to sign the same, and orders that it be sent to the Secretary of State, to be laid before his Majesty.

VIII.

Sess. 10, May 23, 1720.—Act for Preaching Catechetical Doctrine, with Directions therein.

The General Assembly, considering how much it may conduce unto the establishment of people in the Christian faith, and to the promoting of piety in practice, that they be well instructed in the principles of our holy religion; do, therefore, recommend to the several ministers of this Church punctually to observe the acts of former General Assemblies for preaching catechetical doctrine; and that in these their catechetical sermons they more especially insist upon the great and fundamental truths, according to our Confession of Faith and Catechisms, such as that of the Being and Providence of God, and the Divine authority of the Holy Scriptures, the necessary doctrine of the ever-blessed Trinity in the unity of the Godhead; particularly, of the eternal deity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and of the satisfaction to Divine Justice made by him who is our only propitiation, of regeneration by efficacious grace, of free justification through our blessed surety the Lord Jesus Christ, received by faith alone, and of the necessity of a holy life, in order to the obtaining of everlasting happiness; and that they be earnest and instant in their prayers to God, that, through his blessing upon their labours, their flocks may be preserved from the infections of dangerous errors, and engaged to maintain a conversation that becomes the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, who is God over all, blessed for ever.

Sess. 10 et ult., May 23, 1720.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church of Scotland is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, the second Thursday of May next to come, in the year of our Lord 1721, being the 11th day of that month.

This General Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing the 133d Psalm throughout, and pronouncing of the blessing.

OVERTURES CONCERNING PLANTING OF VACANT CHURCHES, ESPECIALLY TANQUAM JURE DEVOLUTO.*

Considering how necessary it is, that Presbyteries be very tender of giving any ground of complaint in their planting parishes tanquam jure devoluto; and that any who judge themselves lesed may have an opportunity of being heard by superior judicatories, and, if wronged, may be redressed; and that there were some overtures concerning this case, transmitted by the General Assembly, in anno 1711, to the several Presbyteries of this Church, that they might send their remarks thereupon to the then ensuing General Assembly, before the same should be turned into standing acts; but no returns having been made thereto from Presbyteries, by reason of a law soon after made, restoring to patrons the power of presentation, a grievance which this Church hath always complained of from the Reformation; it is therefore over-tured, that when a parish falleth vacant, the Presbytery in whose bounds it lies shall, with all diligence, declare and intimate the vacancy, and, if there be no legal eldership settled therein according to the constitution of this Church, the Presbytery shall not proceed to plant upon the jus devolutum, until they first use all proper means to establish an eldership, consisting of such a number as has been usual in the parish; as also, that before they proceed to plant upon the jus devolutum, they shall make intimation, from the pulpit of that parish, that the right is devolved upon the Presbytery; but that they desiring to have the vacancy comfortably planted with the consent of all concerned, do advertise and invite heritors and elders, or heritors and heads of families, where there is not a legal eldership settled, to give in lists to the Presbytery of such well qualified persons as they incline to call to the holy ministry. If such lists shall be brought in to the next meeting of the Presbytery, either by the heritors and elders jointly, or by the heritors apart, or the elders apart, or heads of families, where there is no legal eldership, then the Presbytery shall appoint one of their number to preach in that congregation, and moderate in a meeting of the heritors and elders for choosing one out of the said list to be their minister; and the moderator of that meeting shall attest a call to him unto whom the plurality of the meeting have given their suffrages; providing always, that the majority of the heritors who are well affected, and do join in communion with this Church, do concur in the said call; as also, that due and timeous intimation be made of the day of this meeting, that all concerned may be advertised to attend the same. The elders likewise should try the inclinations of the heads of families, and persons of good reputation in that parish, and have regard thereto in their choice of a minister, and where there are no elders, that the Presbytery sound the inclinations of the people; and if it shall happen that there be not a majority of heritors well affected, and joining in communion with this Church, concurring in the said call, then the Presbytery shall not proceed to a settlement on the said call till such heritors be dealt with for their consent and concurrence, or till the advice of the Synod be had in that case; and that Synods, in judging of such cases, shall have special regard to such heritors as are well affected and join in communion with this Church, as now by law established; but if, upon advertisement given, no lists shall be brought in to the Presbytery from the vacant parish, then the Presbytery shall make a list of two or three whom they judge well qualified and fit for undertaking the ministry in that parish, and shall order intimation of their list to be made to the vacant congregation, that any of the congregation may attend the next meeting of the Presbytery, and show which of these in the Presbytery's list they desire to be their minister, or to object against any of the said list, if they have anything of moment to offer, or even to add to the said list any other fit person, which addition the Presbytery shall admit; and the Presbytery shall use means both to know the inclinations of heritors and people, and to obtain their consent unto the person they most incline to, before they give a Presbyterial call to one in the list proposed; and if, after all pains taken, and dealing with the heritors, elders, and people of the vacant parish, in order to their comfortable settlement, with their own good liking and consent, there be no hope of success, then the Presbytery may proceed to the said settlement; but if any of the heritors, elders, or heads of families, or persons of good reputation in the parish, do compare before the Presbytery, and offer objections against the person to be settled, either as to his orthodoxy, literature, life and conversation, or other ministerial qualifications, the Presbytery, before they proceed to the settlement, shall take trial of the said objections; and if any difficulty occur, or that there appear any heat or division in the parish about a call, the Presbytery shall not proceed until they have the advice and direction of the Synod, and shall acquaint the parish, that they may attend the Synod to hear their determination; or if there be any appeal from the Presbytery's procedure, they shall sist the foresaid settlement till the time appointed for the next meeting of the Synod or the General Assembly appealed to; and if the appellants do not then insist in their appeal, the Presbytery may proceed as if the same had never been made; but if the appellants do insist, then the judicatory appealed to shall discuss the same without delay, and give sentence therein as they shall see cause; and if there be a further appeal from the Synod to the General Assembly, the foresaid settlement shall likewise stop until the time appointed for the meeting of the next General Assembly, unless the appellants do pass from the said appeal: But because some persons, from a litigious and disaffected humour, may oppose the settlement of a vacant church, and appeal, with a design to continue the vacancy for some time longer; therefore, to prevent this, that it be declared, that unless those who do oppose the planting of any vacant parish do timeously give in, in writing, under their hands, objections against the settlement designed, and give in also the reasons of their appeal within ten days after the entering of it, in manner appointed by the Acts of the General Assembly, the same shall not be regarded, nor the appeal received; but the settlement designed shall go on, as if the objections and appeal had never been made; and the judicatory shall intimate this to the objectors or appellants at making the said objections or appeals. Lastly, That in case of vacant kirks in royal burghs, the magistrates and town council, ministers, and elders, of the burgh, be the electors; but where a part of the parish belongs to the landward, the heritors and elders of that part of the vacant parish are to join in the election and calling of the ministers to supply these vacancies, according to use and wont.

Overtures concerning Kirk-Sessions and Presbyteries.

The General Assembly, having had under consideration the Overtures concerning Kirk-sessions and Presbyteries, transmitted by the late Commission, with the observations and remarks of several Presbyteries thereupon; but finding that divers Presbyteries had not had time maturely to consider these overtures, the Assembly did, and hereby do, continue the foresaid overtures under the consideration of Presbyteries till the next General Assembly, and appoints Presbyteries to send up their remarks and opinion upon them to the next General Assembly; and because the meaning and intention of divers passages in them hath been mistaken and understood differently from the sense of the Commission and their committee, therefore, to prevent any mistakes which may be entertained, the General Assembly have, from the remarks of Presbyteries, made some amendments and explanations, as follows, viz. :—Page 5, line 13.—That the words (“Foundation of the Presbyterian government”) be transposed to line 7, after “God's Word.”

Page 8, parag. 4.—The first three lines are to be deleted, and to run thus,—“The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration,” &c.

Page 11, line 3.—These words (“which are hereby allowed to continue”) to be deleted.

Page 11.—In place of paragraph 8, read, “The kirk-sessions are to meet at such times as are most convenient for the well ordering of the affairs of their congregations.”

The ministers and elders ought always to study harmony and unanimity; but if any question fall out in a session in matters of discipline to be executed by the minister, nothing should be concluded, unless it be agreed to by the minister and plurality of elders, till the Presbytery give their advice and direction thereupon. And in a collegiate session, where there are two ministers, one of them agreeing with the majority of the elders, or both, with half of the elders, shall decide a cause; if more ministers than two, then a majority of both ministers and elders, or an equal half of one agreeing with the majority of the other, is necessary for a decisive sentence in matters of discipline, to be executed as above. In matters concerning the relief of the poor, the deacons have an equal vote with the elders.

And the General Assembly, considering that it is but in some few burghs where general sessions are, and that the Presbyteries in whose bounds these burghs lie have most access to know the constitution and practice of the General Sessions; the General Assembly do therefore recommend to the respective Presbyteries in whose bounds these burghs are, to inquire into the constitution and practice of the said General Sessions, and report to the next General Assembly.

Nota.—The foresaid overtures having been already laid before the several Presbyteries in print, it was thought not needful to print them again this year, and send them to Presbyteries a second time.

Sess. 6, May 17, 1721.—Commission to some Ministers and Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint, their reverend brethren, Messrs Thomas Black, at Perth, their Moderator, &c.; to be Commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effect after mentioned, with power to the said Commission, or their quorum, which is hereby declared to be any thirty-one of the said Commissioners, whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers, to meet and convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh, the first free day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten of the clock forenoon, and afterwards the second Wednesdays of August, November, and March, next to come, and oftener, when or where they shall think fit and convenient, with power to the said Commission to choose their own moderator. And suchlike, the General Assembly fully empowers and authorises their said Commissioners, or their quorum above mentioned, to cognosce and finally determine, as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred, to them by any act or order of this Assembly, and to do every thing contained in and conform to the instructions given, or to be given, by this Assembly, and to advert to the interests of the Church on every occasion, that the Church, and present establishment thereof, do not suffer or sustain any prejudice which they can prevent, as they will be answerable; providing this general clause be not extended to particular affairs, or processes before Synods or Presbyteries, that are not of universal concern to or influence upon the whole Church. And it is hereby appointed, that what shall be determined at one diet of the said Commission, with relation to private causes, shall be unalterable by any other diet thereof, and shall stand and continue in force till disapproved by the General Assembly. And the General Assembly renews the instructions given by the General Assembly, 1717, to their Commission, and appoints the same to stand in full force, as instructions to the Commissioners above named, and to be observed by them in all points, as if the same were specially herein inserted; and that they inquire into the publishing and spreading of books and pamphlets tending toward the promoting a scheme of opinions inconsistent with our Confession of Faith; and that the recomenders of such books or pamphlets, or the errors therein contained, whether by word or print, be called before them, to answer for such recommendations. And, further, the said Commission is hereby empowered to receive any references and appeals that shall be made to them from Synods and Presbyteries in matters of doctrine; and, particularly, to take under consideration the representation presented to this Assembly by Mr James Hog and others, about the book, entitled, The Marrow of Modern Divinity, and to call the subscribers of that representation before them or their committees, and ripen and prepare these matters concerning doctrine for the next Assembly, but not to give a final decision therein. Likewise, to take care that the impressions of the Holy Scriptures, the Confession of Faith, and Catechisms, and such books as are authorised by this Church, relating to the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government thereof, be correct, and to give directions about printing the same. They are also appointed at their first meeting to take under consideration all the representations of the growth of Popery within the bounds of this National Church, and of Jacobite meetings therein, which have been brought up to this and former Assemblies or Commissions thereof, or that may be further offered to this Commission, and to apply to the government for a proper remedy and speedy redress. And the said Commissioners are hereby strictly prohibited and discharged to meddle in any other matters than what are committed and referred to them as above mentioned; and in all their actings they are to proceed according to the acts and constitutions of this National Church, and do nothing contrary thereto, or to the prejudice of the same; declaring, that in and for all their actings they shall be accountable to and censurable by the next General Assembly, as they shall see cause; and this Commission is to continue and endure until another Commission be appointed, and members are required to attend the diets of the said Commission, and absentees therefrom ordered to be noticed, according to the 17th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1706. And for the better securing of a quorum, and attendance of members on the Commission, the General Assembly prohibits the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and other Presbyteries within twelve miles thereof, to meet any of the days or weeks appointed for the meeting of this Commission; and such of the members of these Presbyteries as are on the Commission, are required all of them to give punctual attendance on the diets thereof, and Presbyteries at a greater distance, who have four or more members on the Commission, are to take care that at least two of them attend each diet of the same.

Sess. 6 et ult., May 17, 1721.—Act and Resolution about the Overtures concerning Kirk-Sessions and Presbyteries, and Planting Vacant Churches.

The General Assembly, finding that the plurality of Presbyteries who have sent their remarks upon the “Overtures concerning the Kirk-Sessions and Presbyteries,” and “concerning the Planting of Vacant Churches, tanquam jure devoluto,” are not for passing them into acts at this time; therefore, this Assembly does unanimously agree and resolve not to pass the foresaid overtures into acts; and further, they declare and appoint that before the foresaid overtures be passed into acts by any subsequent Assembly, they shall be again transmitted by the General Assembly to the several Presbyteries, in order to have their opinion thereupon.

Sess. 1, May 10, 1722.—The King's Commission to Hugh Earl of Loudoun produced, and ordered to be Recorded.

The General Assembly of the ministers and ruling elders of this National Church being convened and constituted, there was produced to them, by the Right Honourable Hugh Earl of Loudoun, his Majesty's Commission, sealed with the seal appointed by the Treaty of Union betwixt the two kingdoms of Scotland and England to be kept and used in Scotland in place of the Great Seal of Scotland, appointing him his Majesty's High Commissioner and Representative in this National Assembly; which Commission being publicly read with all due honour and respect, the General Assembly ordered the same to be recorded in their registers, ad futuram rei memoriam, the tenor whereof follows:—

II.

Sess. 1, May 10, 1722.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved,

We greet you well. The Church of Scotland have given us so many proofs of their steady adherence to the Protestant succession in our family, their loyalty and affection to our person and government, and their constant zeal for the Protestant interest in general—which neither the force and violence of our open enemies, nor the artful contrivances of factious and ill-designing men, have been able to alter—that we do, with great cheerfulness, countenance your General Assembly at this time, being fully persuaded, from your prudent and dutiful behaviour upon former occasions, that you will now meet with the same good disposition, and behave yourselves with the same temper and unanimity in this present Assembly.

We take this opportunity of renewing to you the assurances we have so often given heretofore of our unalterable resolution to maintain the established government of the Church of that part of our kingdom of Great Britain in the full enjoyment of all their rights and privileges.

We have made choice of our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin and councillor, Hugh Earl of Loudoun, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our royal person in this present Assembly, being confident that his known concern for the Church, as well as zeal for our service, will render him acceptable to you.

As we have nothing more at heart than the promoting true religion and piety, the preserving the peace and public tranquillity both in Church and State, and preventing the growth of Popery, you may most firmly assure yourselves of our ready and cheerful concurrence in promoting those good and glorious ends; to which end, I must recommend it to you to be upon your guard against the practices of such as shall endeavour to create unhappy divisions among you; there being nothing that can tend more to your honour and welfare than concord and brotherly love. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 18th day of April 1722, in the 8th year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

CARTERET.

III.

Sess. 3, May 12, 1722.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

This new opportunity we have of meeting in a General Assembly, honoured with the renewed assurances, in so ample a manner, of your Majesty's royal favour, lays us under the strongest ties of gratitude to our gracious God, and the most dutiful sense of your Majesty's great goodness.

The inviolable obligations we are under to do our utmost to preserve our holy religion would have rendered us inexcusable, if we had neglected any opportunity, in the most difficult times, to give proof of our hearty zeal for the Protestant interest, the succession to the crown of those dominions in your Majesty's royal family, and of our most cordial affection to your Majesty's person and government, whose interests are so inseparably connected with those of the reformed churches: And we hope, from the assistance of our God, that neither force and violence of open enemies, nor the artful contrivance of factious and ill-designing men, shall be able to divert us from those principles of loyalty which, by the blessing of God, we have hitherto pursued.

The approbation your Majesty is graciously pleased to give of our behaviour on former occasions, as dutiful and prudent, is an additional engagement to the ties which our interest, and regard to our character bring us under, to behave ourselves in this our present Assembly with the greatest temper and unanimity we are capable of.

We do humbly rely upon your Majesty's most gracious and repeated assurances of your unalterable resolution to maintain the Established Church of Scotland in the full enjoyment of all their rights and privileges; and do esteem your Majesty's royal favour, and the succession to the crown in your royal family, as our greatest security under God.

The Earl of Loudoun's known concern for this Church, in which he follows the example of his noble ancestors, as well as his zeal for your Majesty's service, render your Majesty's choice of him to represent your royal person in this Assembly most acceptable to us.

The care your Majesty hath showed, in your wise and just administration ever since your happy accession to the crown, for preserving of peace and the public tranquillity, both in Church and State, your Majesty's having so much at heart the promoting true religion, and preventing the growth of Popery, together with your gracious assurances of your royal concern for the advancement of the same good and glorious ends, leave us no ground to doubt that your Majesty will favourably countenance such methods as may tend to the preventing the growth of Popery, the increase of which, we humbly believe, is dangerous to the interests of your Majesty's government, as well as to those of our holy religion.

We are firmly resolved, through the grace of our God, in order to the promoting those great and good ends which your Majesty is pleased to recommend unto us, to be upon our guard against the practices of such as shall endeavour to create unhappy divisions among us; being fully persuaded that nothing can tend more to the welfare and honour of this Church than concord and brotherly love.

That God may eminently bless your Majesty with all spiritual blessings in Christ, and long preserve you to reign over a people sensible of their own happiness, and to be a support to all the Protestant Churches of Europe; that he may plentifully pour out his blessings upon their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and their royal issue; that when, after a long and prosperous reign, you shall receive an immortal crown in heaven, you may have successors to the latest posterity, worthy of yourself, and possessed of your royal virtues, to inherit your crown, is the constant, earnest, and fervent prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Ruling Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 4, May 14, 1722.—Act for the better Observation of Fasts and Thanksgivings.

The General Assembly, for the more exact observation of the 7th Act of the General Assembly, 1710, concerning fasts and thanksgivings, do appoint and ordain the several Presbyteries within this National Church, at their first meeting after every public fast or thanksgiving, whether appointed by the Church or the supreme magistrate, to call the several brethren within their bounds to an account how they have observed the foresaid fasts or thanksgivings, and to record their diligence herein in their books. And the General Assembly does likewise enjoin the several Synods, at their revising of Presbytery books, and at their privy censures, in case the Presbytery book be not brought up to them, or be not so far filled up as their diet after the foresaid fasts or thanksgivings, to take particular notice how the said 7th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1710, and this present Act, have been observed by the said Presbyteries, and the several ministers therein: and appoints the Synods likewise to record their diligence herein in their books.

Sess. 7, May 17, 1722.—Act in favour of Lithuanian Students.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration the distressed state of the Protestants in the great Duchy of Lithuania, for whom the Church of Scotland hath made lately a liberal contribution; and having also under their consideration a letter to the Assembly from the Protestant Synod in these parts, petitioning them to the effect underwritten; do, for the further support of their Protestant brethren in these parts, appoint and ordain that the bursaries of the Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, one whereof Synodical and three Presbyterial, that have been employed for maintaining of students having the Irish language, be, at the term of Martinmas 1723, applied for the maintenance of two Lithuanian students, to be educated at the University of Edinburgh; and do appoint Mr James Young of Killicantie to be collector of the said bursaries. And in case any of the Highland bursars, who at present enjoy the said bursaries, their time of four years from the commencement of their bursaries be not run out at the foresaid term of Martinmas 1723, the General Assembly hereby recommend to the Commissions of the Assemblies of this Church to take care that the said Lithuanian students be otherwise provided in the meantime; and, for that end, they hereby discharge the several Synods to supply any of the Highland bursaries that shall happen to fall vacant before that time, to the end that there may be room for providing such as are to give place to the foresaid Lithuanians. And the General Assembly appoints the produce of these four bursaries to be divided betwixt them by equal proportions; providing always, that none shall be received from Lithuania, as bursars, but such as shall be attested and recommended by the Protestant Synod there. And the General Assembly ordains the premises to be intimate to the King of Prussia's resident at the Court of Great Britain, and to the Reverend Mr Boguslaus Kopijewicz, minister of the Gospel at Vilna, in Lithuania, that they may acquaint the foresaid Protestant Synod of Lithuania of this resolution of the General Assembly. And the General Assembly do resolve that no other alteration shall be made at present, as to the bursaries appointed by former Acts of Assembly, to be employed for maintenance of students having the Irish language.

Sess. 8, May 18, 1722.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

The duty we owe to our merciful God; our concern for the advancement of the kingdom of our blessed Saviour; the regards we have to the interests of your Majesty's government; the just abhorrence we have always maintained of such principles and actions as may tend to the subversion of that happy constitution we now enjoy, bring us under an indispensable necessity of representing to your Majesty the lamentable increase of Popery, and pernicious practices of Romish priests and emissaries, their encouragers and abettors; and, with all humble duty, to beseech your Majesty to apply an effectual and speedy remedy.

It must be matter of inexpressible grief to us, who are office-bearers in the House of God, to observe, that since this nation and Church was delivered in so remarkable a manner by the immediate hand of Divine Providence, in bringing about the glorious Revolution, from the dangers that then threatened them; and even since that blessing was renewed, and the security of our religion and liberties more strongly confirmed by your Majesty's happy accession to the throne, and the settlement of the crown in your royal Protestant family, the number, not only of Papists, but of Popish bishops, priests, and Jesuits, is so greatly increased in several parts of this nation, who take upon them, notwithstanding of the many good laws made for preventing the growth of Popery, in contempt thereof, and in defiance of your Majesty's authority, openly to assemble in great numbers, for hearing and saying of mass, for dispensing of sacraments in their idolatrous manner; and that those bishops and priests do presume to exercise the functions of their several offices with avowed freedom and insolence; that seminaries are openly erected and maintained in the remoter parts of the kingdom, for educating of youth in the principles of Romish error and superstition; that numbers of those, whose genius and capacity seem to distinguish them from others, are carried abroad to foreign parts, in order to be further confirmed and instructed in those pernicious and damnable doctrines, which are equally dangerous to our holy religion and the foundations of your Majesty's government; and when they are fully poisoned with the principles of idolatry and arbitrary power, and many of them, clothed with the character of priesthood, do return into your Majesty's dominions, and exercise the utmost power and diligence in perverting your Majesty's subjects from the true reformed Protestant faith, and from that loyalty and affection to your Majesty, which love to liberty, and a due regard to the peace of their country, ought to engage them to promote; of which we have transmitted more particular accounts to your principal Secretary of State, in order to be laid before your Majesty.

Those violations of the public laws, and attempts to undermine our constitution in Church and State, seem the more extraordinary, that they appear to be countenanced by persons of considerable power, influence, and distinction, some of whom owe their all to your Majesty's great goodness and clemency; and that they are not only done in the remoter corners of the kingdom, but that very open meetings for idolatrous worship are commonly held within the liberties of this city, where now we have the happiness to meet, under your Majesty's protection and favour.

We cannot presume to lay open all the various causes of these growing evils; but, as the enemies of our constitution must perceive the absolute inconsistency that is betwixt the Romish tenets and those principles upon which our present establishment in Church and State is founded, this, no doubt, hath rendered them more assiduous, since the Revolution and your Majesty's happy accession to the crown, in diffusing their poison; which they have the more easy access to do, by reason of the great extent of the northern country, the small number of churches, the utter inactivity of inferior judges in executing the laws against Popery, and the many defects which yet appear in these laws; which we, with great humility, apprehend does render it necessary that some further laws on that subject should be enacted, and that a more effectual method of executing them be provided than that which the ordinary course of proceedings, as the law now stands, does afford; which we humbly submit to your Majesty's great wisdom.

We embrace this opportunity of laying those particulars before your Majesty, when you have been graciously pleased to declare, that you have repeated and unquestionable advices of the designs of your undutiful subjects, in concert with traitors abroad, to raise a rebellion against your Majesty, in your kingdom of Great Britain; the rather that we apprehend those unnatural and traitorous conspiracies are the native produce of a Popish influence, and of the practices of Romish emissaries, connived at by others, inexcusable Protestants, who cannot but perceive, that as the security of our religion and liberty does, under God, in the strongest manner depend upon the safety of your Majesty's person and government, so the increase of Popery is a proper step towards the endangering of both.

We beg leave, heartily, to declare our thankfulness to our gracious God for this new proof of his goodness towards this Church and nation, in blessing your Majesty's councils and prudent administration with a happy discovery of the wicked designs of your undutiful and ungrateful subjects, and to testify our utter detestation of their horrid and bloody resolutions; and to assure your Majesty that no fear, either of open violence or secret wicked attempts whatsoever, shall, through the blessing of God, be able to divert us from an inviolable loyalty, and from that care and diligence incumbent upon us to impress the minds of your subjects, according to our several capacities and stations, with the principles of true religion, and of affection to your Majesty's person and interests, and with a due sense of the happiness they are blessed with, under so mild, so prudent, and careful an administration.

That God may long preserve your Majesty for the protection of this, and comfort of all Protestant Churches; that he may turn the councils of your enemies into folly, and return their wicked devices upon their own heads; that he may establish the succession to the crown of these dominions in your royal family to the latest ages; and, after a prosperous and easy reign, crown you with eternal blessings, is the most fervent prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 10, May 21, 1722.—Act concerning Doctrine, confirming and explaining the Acts 5th and 8th of the General Assembly, anno 1720.

The General Assembly, having taken under their consideration a representation and petition, signed by twelve ministers of this Church, and craving that the 5th Act of the General Assembly, 1720, concerning a book, entitled, "The Marrow of Modern Divinity," might be repealed; and the several heads and articles of the said representation having been read in presence of the Committee of Overtures, where all the members of Assembly were desired to be present and declare their opinion; and the subscribing brethren having been fully heard upon the same before them, find, that the said brethren in their representation do lay a grievous and heavy charge against the General Assembly, anno 1720, and load with foul reproaches their 5th Act, wherein they censure some erroneous passages, and harsh and offensive expressions in that book, called "The Marrow of Modern Divinity;" and also their 8th Act, wherein they direct ministers, in preaching catechetical doctrine, to insist upon the great and fundamental truths, according to our Confession of Faith and Catechisms: Such reproaches are these following, viz., "That by the said 5th Act Gospel truth hath suffered: That in finding fault with this doctrine of the Marrow, viz., 'That the believer is not under the law as a rule of life,' from several passages of the said book, the Assembly doth suppose, 'That a man cannot be under the law as a rule of life, unless he be under the covenant of works: That the declaring that distinction of the law, as it is the law of works, and as it is the law of Christ, to be groundless, as the author senses and applies it, page 198, 199, 'is of dismal tendency; and that the Assembly seems to them to have buried divers truths in the ruins of that distinction: That, when the Assembly cites the Marrow, from page 150 to page 153, to show the erroneous opinion of its author, viz.,—that holiness is not necessary to salvation,—they have hereby condemned, in cumulo, a bundle of sweet and pleasant Gospel truths, and cut off and condemned the believer's plea in the case of justification, in answer to the demands of the law: That by censuring the Marrow, for making a man's persuasion, that Christ is his, and died for him, to be that saving faith commanded in the Gospel, 'the Assembly hath excluded from the nature of faith its appropriating act, without which there can be no receiving and closing with Christ for salvation; and thereby turned it into that general doubtful faith, abjured in our National Covenant: That by adducing that passage of the Marrow concerning a deed of gift to all mankind, to prove that its author was for a universal atonement and pardon, 'the Assembly hath encroached upon the Divine warrant unto all to receive Christ, and also upon sovereign grace: That this act of Assembly hath so opened the sluice, unto the turning of religion into mere morality, that, if remedy be not timely provided, this matter must terminate in a confounding of the law and the gospel; and that the Assembly, in this act, hath showed too great concern for binding on the necks of believers in Christ the yoke of the law, as a covenant of works: That in the above mentioned 8th Act, wherein the General Assembly directs ministers, in preaching catechetical sermons, to insist especially upon the necessary doctrine of satisfaction to Divine justice, made by Jesus Christ, who is our only propitiation, and of free justification through our blessed surety, the Lord Jesus Christ, received by faith alone, 'the Assembly hath winded up the great doctrine of justification in such terms as give shelter to the erroneous doctrine of justification for something wrought in or done by the sinner, as his righteousness, or keeping the new and Gospel law.' And that, in the same act, the Assembly's directing ministers to preach the necessity of a holy life, in order to the obtaining everlasting happiness, 'is of very dangerous consequence to the doctrine of free grace.'

All which, the General Assembly cannot but look upon to be injurious and undutiful aspersions cast upon the supreme judicatory of this Church, who, in these two quarrelled acts, have given an open and evident proof of their true zeal for maintaining the received Gospel truths, and of their sincere concern for preserving this Church from the infection of the opposite errors. And the General Assembly finds, that the said Assembly, 1720, in these acts, had no design to recede from the received doctrine of this Church, nor by them have done injury to truth, nor given countenance to error, as they are charged with; and that the accusers themselves, by the accusations they have advanced, and by standing up in defence of that book, so justly censured, have laid themselves open to be suspected of favouring too much the errors contained in it. And, in vindication of the said two acts of Assembly, and for wiping off the above mentioned injurious aspersions, and for preserving the purity of Gospel truths received in this Church, and in opposition to the Antinomian errors censured in that book called "The Marrow of Modern Divinity," (the defence whereof is so keenly espoused by the subscribers of the Representation,) the General Assembly have thought fit to declare, and they hereby do declare, that they own and maintain, agreeable to the holy Scriptures, the received doctrine of this Church contained in our Confession of Faith and Catechisms; and, particularly, they assert, in the express words of our Confession and Catechisms:—

1. Concerning the Covenants of Works and of Grace.—"That the first covenant made with man was a covenant of works, wherein life was promised to Adam, and, in him, to his posterity, upon condition of perfect and personal obedience. That man, by his fall, having made himself incapable of life by that covenant, the Lord was pleased to make a second, commonly called the covenant of grace, wherein he freely offereth unto sinners life and salvation by Jesus Christ; requiring of them faith, as the condition to interest them in him, and promising to give unto all those that are ordained unto life his Holy Spirit, to make them willing and able to believe."—Confess. Chap. vii. § 2, 3; Larger Catechism, Quest. 32.

2. Concerning the Mediator, and the extent of his purchase.—"That it pleased God, in his eternal purpose, to choose and ordain the Lord Jesus, his only begotten Son, to be the Mediator between God and man. That the Lord Jesus, by his perfect obedience, and sacrifice of himself, hath fully satisfied the justice of his Father, and purchased not only reconciliation, but an everlasting inheritance in the kingdom of heaven for all those whom the Father hath given unto him. To all those for whom Christ hath purchased redemption, he doth certainly and effectually apply and communicate the same."—Confess. Chap. viii. § 1, 5, 8. "And they are in time, by the Holy Ghost, enabled to believe in Christ, according to the Gospel."—Larger Catechism, Quest. 5.

3. Concerning Free Justification.—"That them whom God effectually calleth, he also freely justifieth, not by infusing righteousness into them, but by pardoning their sins, and by accounting and accepting their persons as righteous; not for anything wrought in them, or done by them, but for Christ's sake alone: Not by imputing faith itself, the act of believing, or any other evangelical obedience to them, as their righteousness, but by imputing the obedience and satisfaction of Christ unto them; they receiving and resting on him and his righteousness by faith alone, which faith they have, not of themselves, it is the gift of God.”—Confess. Chap. xi. § 1; Larger Catechism, Quest. 70.

4. Concerning Justifying Faith, and its appropriating act.—“That the grace of faith, whereby the elect are enable to believe to the saving of their souls, is the work of the Spirit of Christ in their hearts. Its principal acts are,—accepting, receiving, and resting upon Christ alone, for justification, sanctification, and eternal life, by virtue of the covenant of grace.”—Confess. Chap. xiv. § 1, 2. “That justifying faith is a saving grace wrought in the heart of a sinner by the Spirit and Word of God, whereby, he being convinced of his sin and misery, and of the disability in himself, and all other creatures, to recover him out of his lost condition, not only assenteth unto the truth of the promise of the Gospel, but receiveth and resteth upon Christ, and his righteousness therein held forth, for pardon of sin, and for the accepting and accounting of his person righteous in the sight of God for salvation. That it is an instrument whereby he receiveth and applieth Christ and his righteousness.”—Larger Catechism, Quest. 72, 73. “That this faith is different in degrees,—weak or strong,—growing up in many to the attainment of a full assurance through Christ.”—Confess. Chap. xiv. § 3. “That such as truly believe in Christ, and endeavour to walk in all good conscience before him, may, without extraordinary revelation, by faith, grounded upon the truth of God’s promises, and by the Spirit enabling to discern in themselves those graces to which the promises of life are made, and bearing witness with their spirits that they are the children of God, be infallibly assured that they are in a state of grace, and shall persevere therein unto salvation; that this infallible assurance doth not so belong to the essence of faith, but that a true believer may wait long, and conflict with many difficulties, before he be made partaker of it. And that assurance of grace and salvation not being of the essence of faith, true believers may wait long before they obtain it. One who doubteth of his being in Christ may have true interest in Christ, though he be not yet assured thereof.”—Confess. Chap. xviii. § 1, 3; Larger Catechism, Quest. 80, 81, 172.

5. Concerning the Believer’s plea for acceptance with God, and title to eternal life, against the demands of the law and justice.—“That Christ, by his obedience and death, did fully discharge the debt of all those that are thus justified, and did make a proper, real, and full satisfaction to his Father’s justice in their behalf.”—Confess. Chap. xi. § 3. “And although Christ, by his obedience and death, did make a proper, real, and full satisfaction to God’s justice in behalf of them that are justified; yet, inasmuch as God accepteth the satisfaction from a surety, which he might have demanded of them, and did provide this surety, his own only Son, imputing his righteousness to them, and requiring nothing of them, for their justification, but faith, which also is his gift, their justification is to them of free grace. That faith justifies a sinner in the sight of God, not because of those other graces which do always accompany it, or of good works, that are the fruits of it; nor as if the grace of faith, or any act thereof, were imputed to him for his justification, but only as it is an instrument, by which he receiveth and applieth Christ and his righteousness.”—Larger Catechism, Quest. 71, 73. “That repentance is not to be rested in, as any satisfaction for sin, or any cause of the pardon thereof.”—Confess. Chap. xv. § 3. “That we cannot, by our best works, merit pardon of sin or eternal life at the hand of God.”—Confess. Chap. xvi. § 5. “They that are regenerated, and believe in Christ, are delivered from the Moral Law, as a covenant of works, so as thereby they are neither justified nor condemned.”—Larger Catechism, Quest. 97; Confess. Chap. xix. § 6.

6. Concerning the standing, obligation of the Moral Law in the dispensation of grace, and the necessity, of personal holiness and good works, in order to the obtaining the enjoyment of eternal salvation.—“That the Law, after man’s fall, continued to be a perfect rule of righteousness, and as such was delivered by God upon Mount Sinai, in the Ten Commandments. That the Moral Law doth for ever bind all, as well justified persons as others, to the obedience thereof; and that not only in regard of the matter contained in it, but also in respect of the authority of God, the Creator, who gave it. Neither doth Christ, in the Gospel, any way dissolve, but much strengthen this obligation.”—Confess. Chap. xix. § 2, 5. “That it is likewise of great use to the regenerate to restrain their corruptions, in that it forbids sin; and the threatenings of it serve to show what even their sins deserve. The promises of it, in like manner, show them God’s approbation of obedience, and what blessings they may expect upon the performance thereof, although not as due to them by the law as a covenant of works; so a man’s doing good, and refraining from evil, because the law encourageth to the one, and deterreth from the other, is no evidence of his being under the law, and not under grace. Neither are the forementioned uses of the Law contrary to the grace of the Gospel, but do sweetly comply with it.”—Ibid. § 6, 7. “That they who are effectually called and regenerated, having a new heart and a new spirit created in them, are further sanctified, really and personally—and more and more quickened and strengthened in all saving graces, to the practice of true holiness, ‘without which no man shall see the Lord.’”—Confess. Chap. xiii. § 1. “That God promiseth and giveth his Holy Spirit to all the elect, to enable them to all holy obedience, as the evidence of the truth of their faith and thankfulness to God, and as the way which he hath appointed them to salvation.”—Larger Catechism, Quest. 32. “That good works, done in obedience to God’s commandment, are the fruits and evidences of a true and lively faith, and by them believers manifest their thankfulness. That having their fruit unto holiness, they may have the end eternal life.”—Confess. Chap. xvi. § 2.

7. Concerning the desert of Sin, and necessity of Repentance, in order to remission.—“That as there is no sin so small but it deserves damnation; so there is no sin so great that it can bring damnation upon those who truly repent.”—Confession, Chap. xv. § 4. “That every sin, even the least, being against the sovereignty, goodness, and holiness of God, and against his righteous law, deserveth his wrath and curse, both in this life, and that which is to come, and cannot be expiated but by the blood of Christ.”—Larger Catechism, Quest. 152. “That repentance unto life is an evangelical grace, the doctrine whereof is to be preached by every minister of the gospel, as well as that of faith in Christ; and it is of such necessity to all sinners, that none may expect pardon without it.”—Confession, Chap. xv. § 1, 3. “That we may escape the wrath and curse of God due to us, by reason of the transgression of the law, he requireth of us repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ.”—Larger Catechism, Quest. 153.

8. Concerning Believers’ Sins, their confessing them, begging pardon, and humbling themselves before the Lord for them.—“That although true believers be not under the law as a covenant of works, to be thereby justified or condemned; yet it is of great use to them, as well as to others, in that, as a rule of life, informing them of the will of God and their duty, it directs and binds them to walk accordingly; discovering also the sinful pollution of their nature, hearts, and lives, so as, examining themselves thereby, they may come to further conviction of, humiliation for, and hatred against sin. And the threatenings of it serve to show what even their sins deserve, and what afflictions in this life they may expect for them, although freed from the curse thereof threatened in the law.”—Confession, Chap. xix. § 6. “That every man is bound to make private confession of his sins to God, praying for the pardon thereof; upon which, and the forsaking them, he shall find mercy.”—Confession, Chap. xv. § 6. “That in the fifth petition, (which is, Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors,) acknowledging, that we and all others are guilty both of original and actual sin, and thereby become debtors to the justice of God, we pray for ourselves and others, that God, of his free grace, would, through the obedience and satisfaction of Christ, apprehended and applied by faith, acquit us both from the guilt and punishment of sin, accept us in his Beloved, continue his favour and grace to us, pardon our daily failings, and fill us with peace and joy, in giving us daily more and more assurance of forgiveness.”—Larger Catechism, Quest. 194. “That in the fifth petition, we pray that God, for Christ’s sake, would freely pardon all our sins, which we are the rather encouraged to ask, because by his grace we are enabled from the heart to forgive others.”—Shorter Catechism, Quest. 105. “That God doth continue to forgive the sins of those that are justified; and although they can never fall from the state of justification, yet they may, by their sins, fall under God’s Fatherly displeasure, and not have the light of his countenance restored unto them, until they humble themselves, confess their sins, beg pardon, and renew their faith and repentance.”—Confess. Chap. xi. § 5.

And whereas, in the two above mentioned acts, it was the true intent and design of the General Assembly to have these precious truths preserved in purity, and maintained and inculcated; and that people might be kept from the infection of the opposite errors, the General Assembly do judge it a very undutiful and uncharitable practice, in any ministers of this Church, to suggest that the Assembly have therein receded from the received doctrine contained in our Confession of Faith and Catechisms.

Moreover, that well-meaning people may not be imposed upon by the evil suggestions of the said Representation, its authors and abettors, and for removing mistakes, which the unthinking may fall into, about the true design and import of the 5th Act of Assembly, anno 1720, the General Assembly do hereby declare, that the passages cited in the said act, from the book entitled, The Marrow of Modern Divinity, to show it contains the erroneous opinions ascribed to it, are to be taken and understood (as in justice and equity they ought) in the sense and meaning of its author, gathered and appearing from the book itself; and that the said passages are condemned only in so far as they import the said erroneous opinions, or are applied by the author to that purpose: and, particularly,—

1. With respect to the fourth paragraph of the Representation, it is to be observed, that the Assembly, in the first paragraph of the Act, concerning the nature of faith, do blame the Marrow for placing assurance in the essence of faith, and making that saving faith, commanded in the Gospel, to be “A man’s being verily persuaded that Jesus Christ is his; and that he shall have life and salvation by him; and that whatever Christ did for the redemption of mankind, he did it for him,”—the brethren, in their Representation, do not disown that the passage here adduced from the book does evince this to be the opinion of its author; but they charge the Assembly, on account of their censuring this doctrine, with excluding from the nature of faith its appropriating act, without which there can be no receiving and closing with Christ for salvation; and with turning it into that general and doubtful faith, abjured in our National Covenant, though most unjustly, seeing the assurance the Assembly doth there blame is that which the author of the Marrow advanceth, when he makes that to be the justifying act of faith, a man’s being persuaded that Jesus Christ is his; that he shall have life and salvation by him; and whatever Christ did for the redemption of mankind, he did it for him; which is contrary to the texts of Scripture, and passages of our Confession and Larger Catechism there cited; the doctrine of which Confession they have solemnly engaged to maintain, defend, and adhere to; and which is altogether different from the general and doubtful faith of the Papists, who allow a man’s believing implicitly as the Church believes, and place true faith in a general assent to revealed truths, without a cordial accepting of Christ as offered in the Gospel for salvation, deny perseverance, and do not own assurance to be attainable by a true believer without extraordinary revelation. The brethren do not, nor can they charge the Assembly with denying, that the assurance of grace and salvation is attainable by a believer, or that it is his duty to endeavour the attaining thereof, seeing these are expressly asserted in the passages of our Confession cited by them. Nor can they charge the Assembly with denying, that a belief and persuasion of the mercy of God in Christ, and of Christ’s ability and willingness to save all that come unto him, is necessary unto justifying faith; but they do, and must maintain, with our Confession and Catechisms, that a true believer is not at all times, even when he is acting faith unto salvation, assured of his present being in a state of grace, and that he shall be saved; but that he may wait long before he obtain this assurance. See Larger Catechism, Quest. 81.

2. With respect to the fifth paragraph of the Representation, it is to be observed, that the Assembly, in the second paragraph of the Act, concerning universal atonement and pardon, doth censure the book for asserting an universal redemption as to purchase, and to show that this opinion is there taught, several passages of the book are quoted, and particularly page 119, “The Father hath made a deed of gift and grant unto all mankind, that whosoever of them all shall believe in his Son, shall not perish," &c. Here the brethren do not blame the Assembly for condemning the assertion of an universal atonement, but they allege they have condemned that deed of gift and grant extracted out of the Sacred Record, viz., "He that beheveth on the Son shall not perish, but have eternal life;" by which, the brethren say, they understand no more but the revelation of the Divine will in the Word, affording a warrant to offer Christ unto all, and a warrant unto all to receive him; which revelation and warrant the Assembly owns. And here the brethren give their gloss upon that text of Scripture, which is not denied by the Assembly, nor to the purpose; but they omit the sense and meaning of the author, which the Assembly evinceth to be an asserting of universal redemption as to purchase, both from what goes before, and from what follows, upon that passage in the book; which is no fair treatment of the Assembly's Act.

3. With respect to the third paragraph of the Representation, it is to be observed, that, in the third paragraph of the Act, the Assembly censures that false opinion, "That holiness is not necessary to salvation;" and, for fixing it upon The Marrow, they cite page 150 to 153. They cite these pages for clearing the author's mind from the connection of purposes, and, particularly, that he is speaking of a person already justified; and then adduce the words from page 153, which plainly bear his rejecting of the law, as it requires good works to be done, and the commandments to be kept, in order to obtain salvation. Which is farther strengthened by the following words, (the omitting whereof by the Assembly is complained of in the Representation,) viz., "For in Christ I have all things at once, neither need I any thing more that is necessary unto salvation." Then personal holiness and good works, and perseverance in holy obedience to the law of God, are not (in his opinion) necessary unto salvation; and a man may have all things necessary to salvation, though he be not yet a godly man; and, therefore, the Assembly have given no just ground of quarrel in this, nor for any who understand the Gospel to be offended, seeing, though good works be excluded from being the ground of justification, yet they are necessary in the justified, in order to their obtaining the enjoyment of eternal salvation; and this doth no way cut off or condemn the believer's only plea, in answer to the law demands of perfect obedience, for justification and title to eternal life, as the Representation alleges.

4. The brethren, in the second part of their Representation, and third instance of the hard treatment of The Marrow, do quarrel the fourth paragraph of the Assembly's Act; and they complain that the Assembly do infer the author's not allowing fear of punishment and hope of reward to be motives of a believer's obedience, from his saying, "That he would not have believers to eschew evil, or do good, for fear of hell or hope of heaven." And their reason against this inference is, that there are other punishments besides hell, and other rewards besides heaven, which, they would insinuate, are not excluded by the author from being motives of the believer's obedience. But, 1. This passage, adduced from page 181, proves the charge against the author, as to the chief reward and punishment, a respect whereunto ought not to be excluded from the believer's obedience; nor does the Assembly make these the only motives, as in the Representation they would allege. 2. This part of the Assembly's Act is unfairly represented, seeing they do not draw that inference from that one passage alone, but cite other passages, as pages 175 and 179, where fear of punishment and hope of reward, in express terms, and in general, without exception, are removed from being motives unto the believer's obedience. To which may be added page 73, where he says of believers under the Old Testament, "That answerably as they believed, answerably they yielded obedience to the law, without fear of punishment or hope of reward;" and page 216, cited in the following paragraph of the Act, where he exhorts the believer "to yield free obedience, without having respect either to what the law of works either promiseth or threateneth; but, also, without having respect to what the law of Christ either promiseth or threateneth." 3. And when they say, they heartily approve of the author's position in this sense, viz., "That believers are not to do good, for hope of obtaining heaven by their own works and doings," (which is a calumnious insinuation against the orthodox doctrine,) they do not declare themselves, whether they allow that a believer may and ought to be moved unto obedience by the hope of heaven, in any other sense than that of a hope of obtaining a right and title to it by his own works; or if no regard can be had to the promised reward of the heavenly inheritance by a believer in his obedience, without its being mercenary.

5. And whereas by the Act of Assembly, 1720, this passage, page 150 of The Marrow,—"As the law is the covenant of works, you are wholly and altogether set free from it;" and this other passage, page 151, "You are now set free both from the commanding and condemning power of the covenant of works;" are condescended upon as a part of the proof against the author, of his maintaining this erroneous tenet, "That the believer is not under the law as a rule of life." The General Assembly hereby declares, that it was not the meaning or intention of the said Act in the least to insinuate, "That believers in Christ are under the law as a covenant of works, or that they are obliged to seek justification by their own obedience," it being a precious Gospel truth, "That believers are free from the law, as it is a covenant of works." But that these passages are adduced in the said Act as a proof of the author of The Marrow's maintaining the foresaid erroneous proposition, "That believers are not under the law as a rule of life," in regard that the Assembly did apprehend that the author understood, by the covenant of works, "the Moral Law, strictly and properly taken," as it appears he does in other places of the book; as, particularly, page 7, he says, "That indeed the law of works signifies the Moral Law; and the Moral Law, strictly and properly taken, signifies the covenant of works." And the General Assembly appoints that these two passages shall not be understood as a proof of the foresaid error in any other sense.

6. With respect to the second paragraph of the Representation, it is to be observed, that the other passages, cited and referred to in this fifth and the following paragraph of the Act, respect his distinction of the law, "as it is the law of works, and as it is the law of Christ;" by which he justifies the six positions, that are either Antinomian, or wrested by the Antinomians into an unsound sense. And as to the law of Christ, pages 209, 210, he will have it to be such as hath not eternal, but temporal rewards and penalties annexed to it, and to be delivered to believers only, page 157. So that unbelieving hearers of the Gospel are under no obligation by it. Moreover, in page 267, he will have a believer to be under no "law which commands any moral duty to be done, either for eschewing of punishment, or upon promise of any reward, temporal or eternal;" and so not under the Moral Law, nor even the law of Christ, in the author's own account of it. And when this is the plain meaning of the author in this his distinction, and is applied by him to justify and fence the foresaid six positions, the brethren, in their Representation, had no ground to quarrel the Assembly for rejecting the "distinction as it is applied by the author," nor so injuriously to charge them, as they do, with "staking down believers under the covenant of works, and with directing them to an obedience upon which they may boast, and with burying several Gospel truths in the ruins of this distinction."

7. The brethren do, in their Representation, advance a charge against the 8th Act of the same Assembly, entitled, "Act for preaching catechetical doctrine, with directions therein," and complain, 1st, That two clauses therein, concerning justification and the necessity of holiness, are not expressed in the form of words used in our Confession and Catechisms. 2dly, That the article of justification is expressed, without mentioning Christ's righteousness imputed to us. And, 3dly, That ministers are directed to preach the necessity of a holy life, in order to the obtaining of everlasting happiness; which they conceive to be of very dangerous consequence unto the doctrine of free grace. But these are unjust exceptions, and afford no strength unto their groundless objections against the former Act: For, 1st, When the Assembly, in that 8th Act, do direct ministers, in their catechetical sermons, more especially to insist upon the great and fundamental truths of our holy religion, expressly according to our Confession of Faith and Catechisms, it was not needful, in their enumerating some special articles, to describe every one of them in the very form of words used in our Confession or Catechisms. 2dly, The article of justification is so expressed in itself, and in conjunction with the preceding article of the satisfaction to Divine justice, made by Christ, who is our only propitiation, that it necessarily implies our being justified, for the righteousness of Christ imputed to us, seeing it is called free justification through our blessed surety, the Lord Jesus Christ, received by faith alone. And, 3dly, The article immediately following, concerning the necessity of holiness, can be accounted of no dangerous consequence, if they truly own personal holiness to be necessary to salvation. And if they quarrel the phrase, “of obtaining everlasting happiness,” they may also quarrel the Apostle’s expression, 1 Cor. ix. 24, 25, and Phil. iii. 11, 12. For it relates to the obtaining of enjoyment and possession, and not of right and title to everlasting happiness, which all justified persons have already attained. So that this Act, designedly calculated for maintaining of truth, and preventing the infection of error, gives no shadow of ground for the jealousies the brethren vent against it.

And the General Assembly considering, that, in the above mentioned Representation, the subscribers thereof have vented divers positions, and used several expressions of dangerous tendency, and not agreeable to the form of sound words, contained in the Holy Scripture, and our Confession of Faith and Catechisms, particularly page 2, line 11, “That the law, as to believers, is really divested of its promise of life and threatening of death;” which is contrary to Heb. xii. 28, 29; Matt. x. 28; 1 Cor. ix. ult.; Rev. xxii. 14; and Confess. Chap. xix. § 6; Larger Cat. Quest. 194, if by the law they understand the moral law, the rule of life. Page 7, line 4, “That the Assembly’s directing of ministers to preach the necessity of holiness, in order to the obtaining of everlasting happiness, is of very dangerous consequence to the doctrine of free grace.” Page 7, line 3, “That the law acknowledgeth no works for obtaining salvation, but such as found a title to it before the Lord.” Whereas the law requires good works in order to the obtaining salvation, though they do not found a title to it. “That the Assembly’s rejecting the author of The Marrow’s definition of justifying faith, viz., ‘A man’s being verily persuaded in his heart that Christ Jesus is his, and that he shall have life and salvation by him; that whatever Christ did for the redemption of mankind he did it for him;’ excludes from the nature of faith its appropriating act, and turns it into that general and doubtful faith, abjured in our National Covenant.”—Page 3, line last, &c. Contrary to Shorter Cat., Quest. 33, which plainly makes “receiving” of Christ the appropriating act of faith; and to Shorter Cat., Quest. 31, which makes that act “embracing.”

And, besides other expressions and insinuations to be found in the said Representation, that are of a dangerous tendency, such as that, “The promise of life, or threatening of death, and hope of heaven, and fear of hell, are not to influence a believer’s obedience;” which plainly follows from their assertion, “That the moral law as to believers is divested of its promise of life and threatening of death;—that a promise of life and a threatening of death being added to a law or command, makes it a covenant of works.”—Page 2, middle. “That the distinction of the law into the law of works and the law of Christ, which are two branches of the tripartite division of the law, as it is explained and applied by the author of The Marrow of Modern Divinity, and condemned by the Act of Assembly, 1720, is to be maintained.”

And the Assembly, likewise considering that there have, at this time, been published several positions and expressions of a pernicious and dangerous tendency, such as, “That in the Gospel, properly so taken, there are no precepts, the commands of faith and repentance not excepted;—that holy obedience is not properly a federal or conditional mean, nor has any kind of causality, in order to the obtaining of glory,” whereby all usefulness and influence of holy obedience, in order of means towards the possession of heaven, seem to be excluded. “That the law, as a covenant of works, wills us to accept of the non-such Saviour offered to us, of the payment of a responsible surety; and that the law wills that the sinner make full payment himself, or provide good and sufficient payment by a surety.” Besides several other positions and expressions of the like nature and tendency, not here mentioned. And although some of those above mentioned positions and expressions may be explained into a sound sense; yet, because, in the obvious meaning of them, they tend to mislead the minds of the less judicious into erroneous notions,—

Therefore, the Assembly did, and hereby do, strictly prohibit and discharge all the ministers of this Church to use, by writing, printing, preaching, catechising, or otherwise teaching, either publicly or privately, these, or any of these positions above mentioned, or what may be equivalent to them, or of like tendency, under the pain of the censures of this Church, conform to the merit of their offence. And do ordain the several Presbyteries and Synods, and Commissions of the General Assemblies of this Church, to take particular care that the premises be punctually observed by all ministers and members of this Church; and, more especially, the Presbyteries and Synods within whose bounds any of the brethren reside who signed the Representation. And, considering that the brethren's desire that the Act, 1720, should be repealed, is unjust, the Assembly does refuse the same. And because of the injurious reflections contained in their Representation, as above mentioned, the Assembly do appoint their moderator, in their name, to rebuke and admonish them; and though their offence deserves a much higher censure, yet the Assembly forbears it, in hopes that the great lenity used towards them shall engage them to a more dutiful behaviour in time coming.

VIII.

 IX.

Sess. 11, May 22, 1722.—Act against Profaneness, and concerning the Duty of Elders and Deacons.

The General Assembly, being deeply affected with the great decay of Christian piety amongst all ranks, and the abounding of vice and immorality, the neglect of public ordinances, and profanation of the Lord's Day; and considering that slackness and partiality in the exercise of discipline, and untenderness in the walk and conversation of the office-bearers of this Church, cannot but greatly contribute to the increase of these evils; therefore, the General Assembly do earnestly beseech, exhort, and require all ministers to take heed to themselves and to their doctrine, and to be exemplary to their people in sobriety, righteousness, and holiness, abstaining from all appearance of evil; and, in like manner, the General Assembly do earnestly beseech, exhort, and require elders and deacons to be faithful in the discharge of their respective offices, tender and circumspect in their walk, and punctual in their attending upon ordinances, and strict in their observation of the Lord's Day, and in regularly keeping up the worship of God in their families; and the General Assembly appoints the judicatures of the Church to take good heed that none be admitted to or continued in these offices, but such as are found qualified, and do behave themselves as above required; and appoints Kirk-sessions, Presbyteries, and Synods, strictly and impartially, without respect of persons, to observe this and former acts of Assembly, relative to office-bearers in this Church; and appoints Presbyteries, at their privy censures, to inquire into the behaviour of their members, and of all the elders and deacons in their bounds, with respect to the premises; and appoints Synods to inquire into the conduct of Presbyteries; and both Synods and Presbyteries to record their diligence herein, that the same may be reported to General Assemblies by the visitors of Synod books. And, lastly, the General Assembly appoints this Act to be read in all parish churches, on or before the first Sabbath of August next, and for that end, ordains copies thereof to be printed, and timeously transmitted.

X.

Sess. ult., May 22, 1722.—Act concerning Commissioners from Universities to the General Assembly.

The General Assembly appoints and ordains, that, in all time coming, the commissions given by universities to their representatives in the Assemblies of this Church, as well as those given by Presbyteries to theirs, shall expressly bear, that the commissioners therein named have signed the Confession of Faith, with the Formula, according to the 11th Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1720, and acts therein mentioned, under the certification therein specified.

XI.

Sess. ult., May 22, 1722.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, upon the second Thursday of May next to come, 1723 years.

This General Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing the 133d Psalm throughout, and pronouncing of the blessing.

THE PRINCIPAL ACTS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, HOLDEN AND BEGUN AT EDINBURGH, MAY 9, 1723.

I.

Sess. 1, May 9, 1723.—The King's Commission to Charles Earl of Hopetoun produced, and ordered to be recorded.

The General Assembly of the Ministers and Ruling Elders of this National Church being convened and constituted, there was produced to them, by the Right Honourable Charles Earl of Hopetoun, his Majesty's Commission, sealed with the Seal appointed by the Treaty of Union betwixt the two kingdoms of Scotland and England to be kept and used in Scotland in place of the Great Seal of Scotland, appointing him his Majesty's High Commissioner and Representative in this National Assembly; which commission being publicly read with all due honour and respect, the General Assembly ordered the same to be recorded in their registers, ad futuram rei memoriam, the tenor whereof follows:—

GEORGIUS, &c.

II.

Sess. 1, May 9, 1723.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R., &c.

III.

Sess. 3, May 11, 1723.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty, &c.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 11, 1723.—To the King's most Excellent Majesty, the humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

The grateful sense of the goodness of God, in blessing us with such a gracious Sovereign, and the duty and loyalty toward your Majesty, which so justly fill our hearts, oblige us to show the deepest concern for every thing that affects the safety of your Majesty's person and government; and, therefore, though with the greatest satisfaction we do understand that the Commission of the late General Assembly did, according to their duty, present a humble address to your Majesty, upon occasion of the happy discovery of the late horrid conspiracy, which address we heartily approve, as expressing the most sincere thoughts of our minds; yet we cannot omit laying hold of this first opportunity of our meeting in a General Assembly, to declare, in the most public and solemn manner, our utmost detestation of that most wicked and execrable design, and to express our great joy that it hath pleased God to assist your Majesty in making a seasonable discovery thereof.

A design so bloody and detestable in itself, and so pernicious and fatal in its consequences, raises in our hearts the greatest horror and indignation. We have for a long time observed, with astonishment, the restless and impudent malice of your enemies, endeavouring to misrepresent your Majesty's just and gracious administration, in order to diffuse their own disaffection to your person and government into the minds of others of your Majesty's unwary, though well-meaning subjects. With this view have they charged upon your reign those evils to which none but themselves gave rise. They have set forth the most innocent, necessary, and prudent steps of your administration in the falsest and blackest colours, and have even denied and ridiculed your royal goodness and mercy, to which multitudes of themselves, and of their nearest relations, owe their very lives and fortunes. So monstrous is their disingenuity and ingratitude, and such is their unaccountable fondness to have your kingdoms again enthralled under all the miseries of Popery and arbitrary power.

Your enemies are abundantly sensible, that there is no accomplishing this their most wicked desire, so long as the throne is filled by a Prince so wise and steady in all his measures, and so powerful a protector and guardian of the Protestant religion, and the liberties of his people, as your most sacred Majesty. But, how shall we express our amazement and just indignation, that any of your Majesty's subjects, especially such as call themselves Protestants, should have contrived to destroy your Majesty's sacred person and your royal family, and to cut off many of your best servants and subjects, by the complicated wickednesses of perjury, murder, and parricide, in order to set a Popish Pretender upon your throne? This we look on as striking at the root of the religion and liberties of a Protestant and free people, and of all that is valuable and dear to us, both as men and Christians, and as a horrible evidence to what barbarous wickedness an incurable malice can drive men of abandoned spirits.

Had God, for the sins of your kingdoms, permitted this hateful conspiracy to take effect, it must have been attended with such a dismal train of fatal consequences, as makes our hearts to tremble: And, therefore, while, with hearts full of joy and thankfulness, we adore the wisdom and goodness of our gracious God, in discovering and disappointing such an execrable design, permit us, Great Sir, with the greatest loyalty and most dutiful affection, to congratulate your Majesty upon the success of your prudent and watchful administration in this matter.

The opening up so much of this deep-laid plot, and tracing it through so many of its various mazes and windings, the stripping it of those veils of darkness which were so industriously spread over it by men of the most artful cunning, and the deliverance thereby wrought for your Majesty's sacred person and your royal family, and also for the dearest privileges of all your faithful subjects, and of this Church in particular, will, we hope, be remembered by latest posterity, to the honour of God, and as one of the glories of your Majesty's most auspicious reign.

We humbly presume, upon this occasion, to assure your Majesty of the continuance of our loyalty and affection, and of all that duty and fidelity which is owing from the most faithful subjects to the best of Kings; and that we will use our utmost endeavours to instil into the people among whom we have charge, the same sentiments of duty and loyalty to your Majesty's person and government, and the same zeal for the Protestant succession in your royal family, which we ourselves esteem it our great happiness to entertain.

May the same wise and merciful God, who brought you so seasonably to the throne, and who hath hitherto so graciously preserved your sacred Majesty, continue His watchful care over you. May He lay open to the very bottom, and effectually disappoint, all the dark and malicious designs of your enemies, and turn their counsels into foolishness. May the crown, wherewith He hath adorned your royal head, sit long and easy and flourishing upon it. And may all your subjects be made sensible of the valuable blessings which they enjoy under your happy government. May He eminently bless their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and their offspring, and make them the happy instruments of much good to the world, and to the Church in their day. May Protestant Sovereigns, of your royal line, always inherit your crown, and these illustrious qualities with which your Majesty does now adorn it. May you be long honoured to do eminent service to God on earth, and at length enjoy a great reward in heaven. So pray,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by

J. A. SMITH, Moderator.

Sess. 5, May 14, 1723.—Act concerning the Election of a Representative from the University of Edinburgh in the General Assembly.

The General Assembly did, and hereby do, enact and declare, that the right of election of a representative in the General Assemblies of this National Church, from the University of Edinburgh, is only in the professors, principal, regents, masters, and others bearing office in the said University; that is to say, the chancellor, rector, and dean of faculty, if any such there be, exclusive of all others; and discharge the Clerk of the General Assembly, in all time hereafter, to receive in any commission to any person, or to insert any person's name in the rolls of Assembly, as a representative from the said University, in succeeding Assemblies, whose commission is given otherwise than is appointed by this Act.

VII.

Sess. 8, May 17, 1723.—Act concerning the Form of Commissions from Burghs and Universities to their Representatives in the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, for the greater uniformity in commissions to members of the General Assembly, and attestations of the same, do, in the meantime, until the matter concerning commissions from burghs be further thought upon, appoint, that the rules and forms prescribed by the 8th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1695, Act 6th General Assembly, 1704, Act 9th General Assembly, 1718, and 4th Act General Assembly, 1720, in commissions from Presbyteries to their representatives in the General Assembly, be strictly observed in commissions to be given to representatives of Universities and Royal Burghs: And do appoint, that all commissions to members of the General Assembly, whether from Universities or Royal Burghs, and attestations of the same, shall be conceived in the terms prescribed by the former Acts above mentioned, mutatis mutandis.

VIII.

Sess. 8, May 17, 1723.—Act concerning the Church's Public Money.

The General Assembly having had laid before them a report of the Committee appointed by the last Assembly for examining the public accounts, which was referred by the said Assembly to their Commission, together with the said Commission their judgment thereupon, and upon the several petitions and claims for money laid before the said Assembly; and having considered the several Acts of Assembly with relation to the disposal of the Church's public money, do find, that there are many demands made upon that fund which it will not answer for several years to come: And, therefore, the Assembly do resolve and appoint, that not only no more orders shall be granted by the General Assemblies of this Church, and Commissions thereof, until all the claims already stated be first paid; but also, seeing that now the vacancies in the North, the Highlands and Islands, are for the most part planted, and that when any vacancies shall happen in these places, it will be more easy to get the same planted than formerly it was, therefore, the General Assembly do hereby rescind and repeal the 5th article of the 8th Act of the General Assembly, held anno 1698, which relates to the allowances to ministers or probationers to be sent to the foresaid places, and likewise the 6th article of the 11th Act of the General Assembly, 1699, and the 5th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1715, in so far as concerns the said allowances.

IX.

Sess. 12, May 18, 1723.—Commission to some Ministers and Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do hereby nominate and appoint their reverend brethren, Messrs James Smith at Cramond, their Moderator, &c.; to be Commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned, with power to the said Commission, or their quorum, (the powers and instructions are the same as in the preceding year.)

X.

Sess. 11, May 20, 1723.—Act enlarging the Time allowed by the 4th Act of Assembly, anno 1718, for contributing to the Fund for maintaining the indigent Widows and Orphans of Ministers.

The General Assembly, having heard and considered a proposal made by some of the contributors in the Synod of Lothian to the fund for maintaining the indigent widows and orphans of ministers, setting forth, that there are divers ministers, who have neglected in due time to pay in their decimas of their stipends, according to the 4th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1718, and are now desirous to contribute; but the receiving thereof is prohibited by the said act. And the said contributors being unwilling that any should be deprived of the opportunity of contributing to so necessary and charitable a fund, and therefore proposing, that any minister who pleases may be yet allowed another year to pay in the decima of their stipends, provided they pay in therewith the annual rent thereof from the time it should first have been paid. The General Assembly did, and hereby do, enlarge the time allowed by the foresaid Act of Assembly, for ministers paying in their contributions, in Synods, where no such contributions have yet been made, until the term of Whitsunday 1725, and as to such Synods, where the said contributions have in part been made, the General Assembly recommend to the ministers who have contributed, that they would willingly consent yet to admit such as shall pay in the decima of their stipends, to the ends above mentioned, betwixt and the term of Whitsunday next to come, 1724, with the annual rent thereof from the time it should first have been paid, to join with them in the foresaid pious and charitable design, upon the footing of the foresaid Act of Assembly made to that effect.

 XI.

Sess. 12, May 21, 1723.—Act anent Mr Gabriel Wilson, Minister at Maxton, his Sermon, preached before the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale.

The General Assembly having had under consideration a reference made by the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale to the Commission of the late General Assembly, and by them transmitted to this Assembly, containing some remarks of that Synod upon a sermon preached before them by Mr Gabriel Wilson, minister at Maxton, in October 1721; find three points of doctrine, wherein the Synod represent that he did not satisfy them as to his orthodoxy, viz. 1mo, That the moral law to a believer is divested of the curse or threatening of eternal damnation, and hath no other sanction but fatherly chastisement. 2do, That gospel or saving repentance is not necessary in a sinner, in order to the pardon of his sins in justification. 3tio, That assurance, or a man's persuasion, that he shall be saved by Christ, is of the essence of justifying faith. And the General Assembly having heard what was contained in the remarks of the Synod, and offered by them upon these three points of doctrine, and having also heard Mr Gabriel Wilson at full length thereupon, thought fit to appoint a committee of their number to converse further with Mr Gabriel Wilson, and prepare an overture upon the whole; and having heard the report of the committee, wherein they represented, that Mr Wilson pleads, that these points of doctrine are not expressed in his sermon; and that it was purely in obedience to the Synod's command, that he had said any thing about them before the Synod, or their committee. And as to the first proposition concerning the sanction of the law, he declared before the committee that he did not tenaciously adhere to that expression, that the moral law is divested of the threatening of eternal damnation as to the believer; and that all his meaning is, that a believer, by his union with Christ, is for ever delivered from the curse of the law, so that he shall never for one moment come under the sentence of eternal condemnation. As to the second proposition, he declared, that justifying faith and gospel repentance are inseparable both in their principles and exercise. And being asked, if he would own it as a truth, that God did never justify an impenitent sinner; he answered, that he could not express himself in these terms, or in any words that might seem to import that a sinner was justified by any works of his own; and that the cautioning against that was the main thing he had in his view, in expressing himself so as he did in his sermon, and to the Synod. And as to the third proposition, he declared, that he owned all that is contained in our Confession of Faith and Catechisms upon that head. And, at the same time, adhered to the answers given in to the Commission of the General Assembly, anno 1721, upon that point, by the twelve ministers then before them, of which he was one. And the committee in the report having further represented, that they having reasoned upon what Mr Wilson had laid before them, though they had not received satisfaction from him upon these points, yet, considering that all the foresaid three points had been under the particular consideration of the last General Assembly, and that they had passed an Act thereupon, and that this process concerning Mr Gabriel Wilson was commenced, and depending before the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale before that act; upon the whole, they declared their opinion, that the General Assembly should admonish the said Mr Gabriel Wilson, and prohibit and discharge him to use, by writing, printing, preaching, catechising ing, or otherwise teaching, either publicly or privately, any expression upon these three points of doctrine, that are inconsistent with, or contrary unto, the points of doctrine maintained in this Church, agreeable to the Word of God and the Confession of Faith and Catechisms thereof, and contrary to what was determined in the Act of the General Assembly, anno 1722, upon these subjects; and that he should be admonished to keep the form of sound words, and to beware of expressing himself upon any occasion, in such terms as may be of bad influence on Christian practice, or any ways tend to weaken the life and power of godliness, and be of dangerous consequence to the great interests of precious souls: which report of the committee the General Assembly having heard, and maturely considered, they did, and hereby do, agree thereto, and enact accordingly; and the said Mr Gabriel Wilson being called in, was admonished and prohibited by the Moderator in the terms of this act.

Sess. 3, May 16, 1724.—Act concerning Commissions from Universities and Burghs.

The General Assembly, for the greater uniformity in commissions to the members of Assemblies, do resolve and appoint, that the Presbytery's attestation and approbation of all commissions from universities and burghs to their representatives in Assembly, as well as the commissions from Presbyteries, shall, in all time coming, bear the following clause, viz.—“ And, further, that the said commissioner is every other way qualified to be a member of the Assembly, according to the Acts of Assembly.”

V.

Sess. 5, May 19, 1724.—Act erecting the Synod of Glenelg, and four Presbyteries therein.

The General Assembly, taking under consideration the overture transmitted by the late Assembly for erecting of four new Presbyteries and a Synod, and having heard the returns of the Synods and Presbyteries concerned, thereupon; and considering that through the greatness of ministerial charges in the bounds after mentioned—the great way that the ministers thereof have to travel to their Synods and Presbyteries—and that when they do attend the same, they are long detained, and much diverted from their parochial and ministerial work, and from watching over their flocks, and guarding their people against the poisonous influence of Popish emissaries, and others disaffected to our happy establishment; do, for a remedy to these things, hereby rescind and make void and null the Act of the General Assembly, anno 1642, entitled, “ Act anent the joining the Presbytery of Skye to the Synod of Argyle;” and also do disjoin the parishes and Presbyteries after named, from the Presbyteries and Synods they formerly belonged to, and do erect the parishes of Glenelg, Kintail, Lochalsh, Lochcarron, Gairloch, Loehbroom, and Assint, with the pertinents thereof, into a Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Gairloch, and to have their meetings for ordinary in that place: And do erect the parishes of Kilmalie in Lochaber, Kilmanivaig, Abertarff, Laggan, and Urquhart, and Glenmorrison, into another Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Abertarff, and to have their meetings at Killiwhimin: And do erect the whole parishes of the Isle of Skye, and small islands next adjacent thereto, into a third Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Skye, and to have their meetings for ordinary at Strowan in Braecadale: And do erect the whole parishes in the Lewis, Harris, North and South Uists, and Barra, and small islands adjacent thereto, with Hirta, into a fourth Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Long Island, and to have their meetings, per vices, at Rudil in Harris, and Ballallan in Lewis: And ordains the foresaid four Presbyteries to have their first meetings, at their respective places of meeting above mentioned, the second Wednesday of July next. And the General Assembly hereby erects the foresaid four Presbyteries into a provincial Synod, to be called the Synod of Glenelg, and to have their first meeting at Glenelg, the first Wednesday of July 1725 years; and thereafter to meet once in the year, that day and place, and oftener, when and where they shall see needful; and appoints them to send one minister and a ruling elder to correspond with each of the Synods of Argyle and Ross; and these two Synods, each of them, to send two ministers and one ruling elder, to correspond with the said Synod of Glenelg, aye and until the Assembly see cause to restrict the number of these correspondents. And the Assembly declares the foresaid Synod and Presbyteries therein to have the same powers and privileges which any other Synod or Presbyteries of this Church, by the Word of God, and constitutions of this Church, have. And because the ministers at present in the Presbyteries of Gairloch and Abertarff are few, the General Assembly appoints the Presbytery of Skye to send two or more ministers, and a ruling elder with each of them, to meet with and assist the said Presbytery of Gairloch in their presbyterial work; and also to send ministers and probationers to supply vacant churches therein. And likewise appoints the Presbyteries of Inverness and Abernethy to send each of them a minister and a ruling elder, to correspond with the Presbytery of Abertarff, until the vacancies in the said Presbyteries of Gairloch and Abertarff shall be fully planted. And the General Assembly ordains the whole four new Presbyteries above named to lay an account of their circumstances before the next General Assembly or Commission; and appoints letters to be written to the old Presbyteries and Synods above mentioned, intimating the premises to them, and requiring them to acquaint the brethren in their bounds to give obedience to this Act. And the Assembly appoints all concerned to observe what is hereby enjoined, as they will be answerable to the General Assemblies of this Church. And, lastly, it is referred to the Commission of the General Assembly to give all the assistance, concurrence, and encouragement they can to the foresaid new Synod and Presbyteries, and to the brethren therein, in order to the carrying on a reformation in the foresaid bounds, and to give them advice in difficult matters when applied unto for that effect. And it is hereby declared, that the annexation of the parish of Assint to the Presbytery of Gairloch is only temporary, until the Assembly shall consider what other Presbytery the same ought to be joined unto.

VI.

Sess. 6, May 20, 1724.—Act concerning the more frequent Celebration of the Lord's Supper.

The General Assembly, considering that the Act 6th of Assembly, anno 1711, entitled, "Recommendation concerning the Administration of the Lord's Supper," has not had its full effect, do hereby revive and renew the said Act; and do appoint Presbyteries to do all they can to have the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper more frequently administered in their bounds throughout the several months of the year. And in regard it has been represented, that there are some disorders committed in divers places at such occasions, especially on the Lord's Day; therefore, the General Assembly does hereby enjoin Kirk-sessions and Presbyteries to endeavour the reformation of such disorders; and for that end, that Presbyteries take care that on the Lord's Day, upon which the sacrament is to be administered in any congregation, the neighbouring congregations be supplied with sermon; and that the ministers of the several parishes, where the sacrament is to be administered, do give public warning, on the preparation day, to all their audience, that if any disorders shall be committed by any person on the Lord's Day, those guilty will be censured according to the degree of their offence. And the General Assembly appoints the several Presbyteries, at their privy censures, to call the respective brethren in their bounds to an account as to their observation of this and the other above mentioned Act, and to record their diligence in their books. And likewise ordains the several Synods to see to the punctual observation of the said Acts, and, particularly, at their privy censures, to call their respective Presbyteries to a strict account with regard to their observation of what is above enjoined; and to record also their diligence in their books, that their obedience herein may come under the consideration of the General Assemblies of this Church.

VII.

Sess. 13, May 26, 1724.—Act concerning vagrant Beggars, Maintenance of the Poor, and Recommendations for Charity.

The General Assembly does instruct their Commission to consider what may be proper for ministers and church judicatures, in their several capacities, to do, for maintaining of the poor, and restraining of vagrant beggars in their respective bounds. And, in the meantime, the Assembly recommends it to ministers and Kirk-sessions, Presbyteries, and Synods, to take effectual care, and use all due means, to get every parish to maintain their own poor; and to make earnest application to Sheriffs, Justices of the Peace, Commissioners of Supply, and heritors in their respective bounds, and to Magistrates of Burghs, that the laws against vagrant and sturdy beggars be put into vigorous execution. And the General Assembly further enjoins Synods, Presbyteries, Kirk-sessions, and Ministers, strictly to observe the 19th Act of Assembly, 1696, which discharges them to give recommendations for charity to any without their own bounds; and appoints that recommendations given within their bounds be for a definite time.

VIII.

Sess. 14, May 26, 1724, post meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do hereby nominate and appoint their reverend brethren, Mr William Wisheart, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, and one of the ministers of that city, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned, with power to the said commissioners or their quorum, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as the corresponding Act of the two preceding years.)

IX.

Sess. 14, May 26, 1724, post meridiem.—Act concerning Commissions to Ruling Elders.

The General Assembly appoints and ordains, that all commissions hereafter to be given to ruling elders in this Church, as members of Assembly, shall bear this additional clause, viz., “And in particular, that the said elders are qualified in all respects, according to what is required by the 9th Act of the General Assembly, held anno 1722.”

X.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1724.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, upon the first Thursday of May next to come, 1725 years.

This General Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing of the 122d Psalm, from the 6th verse to the close, and pronouncing of the blessing.

Collected and extracted from the Records of the General Assembly, by JO. DUNDAS, Cls. Eccl. Scot.

*Sess. 4, May 18, 1724.—Overture concerning the Form of a Licence to Probationers.

The Committee for Overtures brought in the draught of a licence to be given by Presbyteries to probationers, after they have passed their trials, in order to their being allowed to preach the Gospel, which was transmitted by the late Commission to this Assembly, with an overture that the said form of a licence should be established, and that every probationer should be obliged to have such a licence before he be allowed to preach the Gospel; and that no other form of a licence than that after mentioned should be regarded, the tenor of which follows:—“The Presbytery of _____ taking into consideration that _____ having passed his course at the college, and thereafter studied divinity for the space of six years; as also having resided for the most part of that time within the bounds of this Presbytery, or having resided six months within those bounds, and been recommended by the Presbytery or Presbyteries of _____, where he resided for the most part of that time, as a person fit to be entered on trials; and they being satisfied with the testimonials given as to his life and conversation; as also, having had sufficient testimonials from the Professors of Divinity with whom he studied, during the time of his attendance with them, as to his proficiency in his studies, and his good behaviour; and neighbouring Presbyteries, as also the Synod of the bounds, having been acquainted with the design of entering him on trials, and their advice obtained thereto, he was admitted to the usual trials appointed by the Acts of the General Assembly of this Church;* and having passed through all the parts thereof, the said Presbytery did, upon the _____ day of _____ years, declare their satisfaction with the said _____ his literature, and other necessary qualifications; and thereupon the questions appointed to be put to such as are to be licensed, prescribed by the 10th Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1711, being put to him, he gave satisfying answers to all the said Questions, and then did judicially subscribe the Formula annexed to the said Act, and thereby coming under the engagements to the doctrine, worship, discipline, and Presbyterian government of this Church, contained in the said Act, Question, and Formula; he was licensed by the foresaid Presbytery to preach the Gospel of Christ, and exercise his gifts as a probationer for the holy ministry. And now being designed to go elsewhere, the said Presbytery doth hereby allow him this extract of his licence." And the General Assembly having heard the said form of a licence and overture read, and having reasoned thereupon, they did transmit the same to the several Presbyteries within this Church, to be considered by them, and appointed them, in the terms of the 9th Act of Assembly, 1697, to send up their opinion thereupon to the next General Assembly; and to render the examining the said form more easy to the Presbyteries, they appointed the Acts of Assembly related to therein to be set down upon the margin thereof.

* This and the following Overture do not appear to have been passed into Acts —Ed. 1843.

Sess. 14, May 20, 1724, post meridiem.—Overture as to Ministers, Probationers, Elders, and Deacons, their signing the Formula prescribed by Act of Assembly, anno 1711.

The General Assembly, for the greater uniformity and equality amongst the office-bearers of this Church, as to their obligations with respect thereto, do transmit to the several Presbyteries the following overture, to be considered by them, that they may send in their opinion of it to the next General Assembly, in manner directed by the 9th Act of Assembly, anno 1697, viz., "That all the ministers of this Church, and probationers for the holy ministry, who have not yet subscribed the Formula prescribed by the 10th Act of Assembly, held anno 1711; and all ruling elders and deacons that shall be hereafter ordained to these offices within this Church, shall, at their admission, and before they begin to act or vote in Church Judicatories, in their foresaid capacities, subscribe the said Formula."

Sess. 1, May 6, 1725.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved,

We greet you well. That steady zeal and affection to our person and government, as well as concern for the interest and prosperity of the Church, which have so eminently appeared in your former Assemblies, leave us no room to doubt but we shall find in you the same good spirit and disposition on all future occasions, especially in this your present meeting, which we therefore most willingly approve of, and countenance with our royal authority.

We have given you so many assurances of our resolutions to maintain inviolable the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland, as by law established, that we think it unnecessary to repeat them at this time, or to recommend to you such measures as shall be conceived to conduce most to the flourishing estate of the true reformed religion, the promoting of virtue, and discouraging vice and immorality; in all which you may be assured of our approbation and concurrence.

Our Commissioner has it in his instructions to signify to you the steps taken by us to put some stop to the spreading of ignorance and profaneness on the one hand, and the traffieking of Popish priests and emissaries on the other, in the Highlands and Islands, of which frequent representations have been laid before us, from several preceding Assemblies and their Commissions.

As nothing can be more becoming a religious assembly than the spirit of moderation and unanimity, so can it suffer in nothing more than in divisions; which we therefore most earnestly exhort you to avoid, and guard against the practices of such as would labour to destroy that brotherly love and affection which ought to shine and prevail in all your debates and councils.

We are so sensible of the capacity and abilities of our right trusty and well-beloved cousin and counsellor, Hugh Earl of Loudoun, that we have thought fit to renew our choice of him to represent our royal person in this Assembly, not doubting but his true concern for the Church, as well as zeal for our service, will render him acceptable to you. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court of St James', the 17th day of April 1725, in the 11th year of our reign.

By his Majesty's command,

ROXBURGH.

III.

Sess. 3, May 8, 1725.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We embrace, with the greatest satisfaction, this new opportunity of making a dutiful return to your Majesty's most gracious letter to us. We esteem it our great honour that your Majesty is pleased again to take notice, in so kind and encouraging terms, of the steady zeal and affection to your Majesty's royal person and government, which has appeared in the former Assemblies of this Church; and we should be most unworthy of so many instances of your royal favour if we did not continue to be of the same good spirit and disposition on all future occasions, and particularly in this our present meeting, which your Majesty is pleased so willingly to approve of, and countenance with your royal authority.

It is with the greatest joy and satisfaction we reflect on the many repeated assurances your Majesty has been pleased formerly to give us of your resolution to maintain inviolable the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland, by law established, on which we rely with the most entire confidence; and do acknowledge ourselves to be thereby laid under the strongest obligations to pursue such measures as shall be conceived to conduce most to the flourishing estate of the true reformed religion, the promoting of virtue, and discouraging vice and immorality; in which we are greatly encouraged by the assurance your Majesty gives us of your royal approbation and concurrence.

May it please your Majesty,

As your Majesty's reign and wise administration has, from the beginning, been most auspicious to all your dominions, so they have, in a very particular manner, proved a great blessing to this Church; and we have now a new and distinguished instance of your Majesty's great goodness and fatherly care, in appointing a proper fund to be applied for the provision and entertainment of such itinerant preachers and catechists as shall be employed in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, for removing of ignorance, and putting a stop to profaneness and the growth of Popery; for which royal bounty we are engaged, by the strongest ties, to return our most sincere and dutiful thanks.

We cannot but rejoice that the representations, made by former Assemblies and their Commissions, have moved your royal heart so effectually to take care of the good of mankind and the welfare of precious souls, as to provide so bountifully for instructing them in the faith and practice of the true Christian religion, and preventing their being seduced to vice and the errors of Popery.

As we have the deepest sense of gratitude for this your royal donation, so we hope the due and faithful application of it to the pious purposes for which it is granted by your Majesty, shall appear by the accounts of the distribution, which shall be annually exhibited to your Majesty's High Treasurer, or Commissioners of your Treasury, or Barons of your Majesty's Court of Exchequer in Scotland, in obedience to the direction contained in your Majesty's royal warrant; and it does afford us the greatest pleasure and encouragement to consider, that by the blessing of God on our endeavours, the same methods that contribute to remove the ignorance and superstition of the rude inhabitants of those remote places, and to defeat the attempts of Popish emissaries, must necessarily tend to impress them with sentiments of loyalty towards your Majesty, to promote the interest of your happy government and royal family, and dispose them to give a due and cheerful obedience to your Majesty and the just laws, to which all your subjects ought to conform themselves. We have always looked on ourselves to be bound, by the strictest ties, to endeavour to influence the people committed to our charge with a due sense of their duty in those particulars, and we shall be careful to instruct such as shall be employed upon your Majesty's gracious donation, to use their utmost endeavours among the people with whom they are to deal for the same purpose.

We are very sensible, that nothing can be more becoming a religious Assembly than the spirit of moderation and unanimity, and that it can suffer by nothing more than by divisions; and, therefore, (as your Majesty is pleased graciously to exhort us,) we are resolved, by the grace of God, to avoid them, and to guard against the practices of all such as, under any pretence whatsoever, would labour to destroy that brotherly love and affection which, your Majesty so justly observes, ought to shine in all our debates and councils.

The Earl of Loudon's capacity and abilities, by which he has so often distinguished himself in your Majesty's service, and in promoting the good of this Church, whose interests were on many occasions the particular care of his noble ancestors, render your Majesty's choice of him to represent your royal person in this Assembly most acceptable to us.

That our gracious God may plentifully reward your Majesty and your royal family the many great favours you have conferred upon this Church; that He may long preserve your Majesty, to reign a happy prince over an obedient people; that He may long continue you to be guardian of the Protestant religion both at home and abroad; that He may greatly bless their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and their royal offspring, and make these nations happy in a succession of Protestant princes of your royal line to latest posterity, who may inherit your royal virtues as well as your crown, is, and shall be, the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by
 JA. ALSTON, Moderator.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint their reverend brethren, Mr James Alston, minister at Dirleton, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners or their quorum, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as the corresponding Act of the three preceding years.)

Sess. 11, May 15, 1725.—Act erecting the Presbytery of Cairston, and a Synod in Orkney.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration the circumstances of the ministers of Orkney and Caithness, and the great difficulty they have in attending their judicatures, as they are now constituted, by reason of the dangerous seas and ferries that lie betwixt their residences and the places at present fixed for the meeting of the said judicatures; for remedying of the which inconveniences, and for the more easy and regular carrying on of the Lord's work in those countries, they did, and hereby do, unite and erect the ministers of Kirkwall, Deerness and St Andrews, Holme, South Ronaldshay, and Evie and Rendall, and a ruling elder from each united parish, in one Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Kirkwall, and to meet at the town of Kirkwall; the ministers of the parishes of Birsay and Harray, Firth and Stenhouse, Orphir, Sandwick and Stromness, Græmsay and Hoy, and Walls and Flotta, with a ruling elder from each of these united parishes, into another Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Cairston, and to meet at Cairston. Also, they appoint the ministers of the parishes of Rousay and Egilshay, Westray, and Papa Westray, Cross-parish, Burness and North Ronaldshay, Lady-parish, Stronsay and Eday, and Shapinshay, with their ruling elders, to continue their meeting together as formerly, and to constitute a third Presbytery, to retain the name of the Presbytery of North Isles; and they appoint the Presbytery of Kirkwall to have their first meeting at Kirkwall, upon the first Wednesday of July next, and thereafter at such times as they shall find convenient; and the Presbytery of Cairston to meet at the Church thereof, upon the third Wednesday of July next, and thereafter at such times as they shall see cause. And, further, the General Assembly unites and erects the said three Presbyteries of Kirkwall, Cairston, and North Isles, into a Synod, to be called the Synod of Orkney; and appoints them to meet at Kirkwall, and to hold their first meeting upon the last Wednesday of July next, and thereafter at such times and places as they shall judge needful and convenient, and so to continue in all time coming. And the Assembly hereby declares, that the said Synod, and the Presbyteries that constitute the same, shall have the same powers and privileges that any other Synods and Presbyteries of this Church have, by the Word of God and constitutions of this Church. And, further, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, disjoin and dismember the Presbytery of Caithness from the Synod of Orkney, and do adjoin and annex them to the Synod of Ross and Sutherland; and appoints the said Synod to have their first meeting at Tain, the first Tuesday of September next, and their second at Dornoch, the first Tuesday of April next; and thereafter to hold their meetings at the said places per vices, at such times as they shall find necessary and expedient. And the General Assembly hereby ordains the Synod of Ross and Caithness to send two ministers correspondents to the said Synod of Orkney at every meeting; and ordains the Synod of Orkney to send one of their number to correspond with the Synod of Ross at their meetings. And, lastly, considering that the minister of Shapinshay lives within two miles of the town of Kirkwall, therefore, for the better assistance of the foresaid Presbyteries, they ordain the said minister to correspond with the Presbytery of Kirkwall; and suchlike, appoints the two ministers of Kirkwall, by turns, to correspond with the Presbytery of Cairston, beginning with the eldest of the said ministers.

Sess. 1, May 5, 1726.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved,

We greet you well. The many proofs we have received of your zeal and affection for our person and government, of your care and concern for the peace and welfare of the Church, for the suppressing of profaneness and immorality, and the preventing the growth of Popery, have induced us most willingly to approve of your present meeting, and to countenance the same with our royal authority; not doubting but you come together with the same good dispositions you have formerly shown in so eminent a manner, and with a resolution to do all that in you lies, towards promoting the desirable ends and purposes before mentioned; in the doing of which, you may be well assured of our protection and assistance, being always ready to contribute to so pious a work, and which so nearly concerns the honour of God, the peace and quiet of our government, and the welfare of our subjects.

As we are firmly resolved to maintain the established government of the Church in that part of our kingdom of Great Britain in the full enjoyment of all their rights and privileges, we doubt not but you, on your part, will conduct yourselves with that moderation and unanimity in all your debates and councils, and with that prudence in all your proceedings, which become so venerable an Assembly, and which will further entitle you to our royal favour.

We have again made choice of our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin and counsellor, Hugh Earl of Loudoun, to represent our royal person in this present Assembly, not doubting but the experience you have had of his great knowledge and capacity, as well as of his zeal for our service, and his adherence to the principles of the Church of Scotland and concern for its prosperity, will make him acceptable to you. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 12th day of April 1726, in the twelfth year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

HOLLIS NEWCASTLE.

III.

Sess. 3, May 7, 1726.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal and faithful subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, do, as in all duty bound, return your Majesty our most humble and hearty thanks for your gracious letter to us, and for your great goodness in signifying your favourable acceptance of the zeal and affection of this Church for your Majesty's royal person and government—duties which we account ourselves bound to by the strongest obligations. And that your Majesty is pleased graciously to take notice of the concern we have shown for the peace and welfare of the Church, for the suppressing of profaneness and immorality, and preventing the growth of Popery, animates us to exert ourselves yet the more in these duties, under the great encouragement given us by your Majesty's approving our present meeting, and countenancing the same with your royal authority; and it shall be our earnest care to show the like dispositions as formerly, to do all that in us lies towards promoting these desirable ends and purposes. The assurances your Majesty is graciously pleased to give us of your royal protection and assistance in doing of the same, and of your readiness to countenance us in so pious a work, which so nearly concerns the honour of God, the peace and quiet of your government, and welfare of your subjects, make us deeply sensible of the great kindness of Heaven in blessing us with such a Sovereign, and are such encouragements from a prince piously disposed, and who has so much at heart the weal of his subjects, as must render us without excuse should we be remiss in our duty.

It is most comforting to us, and gives us a full confidence in your Majesty's royal goodness, that you are graciously pleased to renew the assurances of your firm resolution to maintain the established government of this Church in the full enjoyment of all their rights and privileges; these being what we have exceedingly at heart, and do judge ourselves the more strongly obliged, by these your Majesty's gracious assurances, to conduct ourselves on our part with that moderation, unanimity, and prudence that become us, and which may entitle us humbly to hope for the continuance of your Majesty's royal favour.

Your Majesty's pious and bountiful donation to the last Assembly of a sum to be employed in maintaining itinerant preachers and catechists, in places where ignorance and Popery prevail, for remedying these evils, we humbly hope will be found to have been exactly managed according to your Majesty's intentions, as will appear by the accounts of the management, ready to be exhibited to your Majesty's Lord High Treasurer, or Commissioners of your Majesty's Treasury, or to the Barons of your Majesty's Court of Exchequer in Scotland, as your Majesty was graciously pleased to direct. And now that your Majesty has, out of your royal goodness and laudable concern for the good of the souls of your subjects, been pleased to renew your royal gift to this Assembly, for the like pious purposes, which your Majesty's Commissioner has delivered to us, we accept it with the most profound respect and thankfulness, and shall endeavour not to be wanting on our part to employ it agreeably to your Majesty's royal will, and account for it as your Majesty has appointed in your royal warrant; and in this we act with great cheerfulness, seeing, as we are bound to promote obedience to your Majesty's just laws, the tendency of our endeavours is to make those upon whom we bestow our labours, in so far as we succeed, by the blessing of God, at the same time better subjects to your Majesty, as they are made better Christians. And for this end, all care shall be taken by us that none be employed in this service but such as are unquestionably well affected to your Majesty and your auspicious government; and we shall be careful to take all those we employ strictly engaged to instil in the people the principles of loyalty and duty to your Majesty.

Your Majesty's choice of the Earl of Loudoun to represent your royal person in this Assembly, we acknowledge thankfully, as a special mark of your regard to the good of this Church, having had experience of his great knowledge and capacity, and of his zeal for your Majesty's service; and it gives us particular satisfaction that your Majesty is pleased to mention, as a reason of your choice, his adherence to the principles of this Church, and concern for its prosperity, of which he has given many convincing proofs.

That your Majesty's precious life, which is so great a blessing to all your people, and the whole Protestant interest, may be long preserved;—that the best of Heaven's blessings may be plentifully poured out upon your royal person, the Prince of Wales, the Princess, and all your royal offspring;—that your wise councils and undertakings, for the happiness of your own kingdoms, the relief of distressed and persecuted Protestants, the welfare of all the reformed Churches, and the good of Christendom, may be crowned with remarkable success;—that the designs of all your secret and avowed enemies may be defeated;—that your crown may long flourish upon your head, and at length you may inherit immortal glory, are, and shall be, the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by

WILL, MITCHELL, Moderator.

Sess. 6, May 11, 1726.—Act erecting the Presbytery of Tongue and Synod of Caithness.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration a proposal made to the late Assembly, concerning the erecting of a Presbytery in Strathnaver, with the opinion of the late Commission in that matter; and having heard the brethren from the Presbyteries concerned; and it being informed that the ministers of the parishes after named, whereof this Presbytery is to consist, are some of them twenty-four, others forty and forty-two, and one of them fifty-two miles distant from the seat of their Presbyteries, so that they can seldom attend the same, which is very uneasy both to ministers and people: and that by this erection brethren will have for the most part but one half of that way to travel to the Presbytery hereby erected; and finding that there have been of late divers new parishes erected in the foresaid bounds, and that there will be a competent number of ministers in the Presbyteries of Dornoch and Caithness, besides the brethren of that new Presbytery; and judging that the erections after mentioned may tend to the interest of religion and advantage of the country, do therefore disjoin the parishes of Diurness, Edrachillis, Tongue, and Farr, from the Presbytery of Caithness, and the parishes of Kildonan and Assint from the Presbytery of Dornoch, and do hereby erect those six parishes into a Presbytery by themselves, to be called the Presbytery of Tongue, and to have their meetings for ordinary at Tongue; and do appoint their first meeting to be there upon the first Wednesday of October next to come; and until all the parishes in that Presbytery be fully planted, the General Assembly appoints the Presbyteries of Dornoch and Caithness to send correspondents to the Presbytery of Tongue. And likewise, considering that the Presbytery of Caithness was, by the last Assembly, disjoined from the Synod of Orkney, for the reasons mentioned in the Act made to that effect, and that the Presbyteries of Caithness, Dornoch, and Orkney, were formerly a Synod, and that it would be a hardship to oblige the Presbytery of Caithness to attend the Synod of Ross twice in the year, because of the great distance; and it being the Assembly's intention to make the meetings of Synods as easy as possible to all concerned, therefore, they do disjoin the Presbytery of Dornoch from the Synod of Ross, and hereby erect the Presbyteries of Dornoch, Caithness, and Tongue, into a Provincial Synod, to be called the Synod of Caithness and Sutherland; and ordain their ordinary meetings to be at least once a year at Dornoch and Thurso per vices, and their first diet to be at Dornoch the third Wednesday of June 1727; and do appoint that Synod to send correspondents to the Synods of Ross and Orkney, and the said two Synods to send correspondents to the Synod of Caithness and Sutherland. And the General Assembly declares the foresaid Synod, and Presbyteries therein, to have the same powers and privileges which any other Synod or Presbytery have by the Word of God and constitutions of this Church.

V.

Sess. 11, May 16, 1726.—Act appointing a solemn National Fast.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration the many weighty causes of solemn fasting and humiliation before God, by reason of abounding sin, and the withdrawing of his presence from his ordinances, and the power of his Spirit in a great measure; that gross ignorance, errors, impiety, profaneness, and immoralities of all sorts do prevail; and also considering the great growth of Popery in divers parts of the land, and how much the practice of serious religion is neglected, the holy laws of God, and the precious Gospel of his ever blessed Son, our Saviour, are contemned; that pride, luxury, dishonesty, and uncharitableness, are arrived to so great a height; and that perjury, and other gross impieties and immoralities, are so common in the land, and so little laid to heart and mourned over, whereby a holy God is greatly provoked; and that all those evils are aggravated by the height of ingratitude to God, to whom we stand engaged by the strongest ties and obligations, who, by a long tract of merciful Providences, has dealt most kindly with us, in sparing us, and preserving unto us our valuable liberties and reformed religion, for which he has often signally interposed, especially by the late glorious Revolution, and the happy accession of his present Majesty, King George, to the throne,—events never to be forgotten; and that these sins do still prevail, notwithstanding his Majesty's good laws against vice, and his royal proclamation, out of a true zeal for the glory of God, for putting the same in execution; and in a time of clear light of the Gospel, and pure administration of the ordinances of Christ, by contemning of which the guilt of these sins is aggravated to a high degree.

And considering, that by these things we are exposed to the hazard of calamitous judgments, if God, of his infinite mercy, for the sake of our Lord and Saviour, prevent it not; and that our Protestant brethren abroad have had barbarous cruelty exercised upon them, and are still groaning under great hardships and persecution; the General Assembly does, therefore, most seriously call and exhort all to the duties of solemn fasting, humiliation, and prayer, upon such a day as his Majesty shall please to appoint,—the Assembly having made humble application to him for naming the day, and for interposing his royal authority for the due observation of the same. And hereby all are earnestly obtestated to apply to the said duties seriously and devoutly, mourning for, and endeavouring reformation of, those evils; and, for that end, to put up fervent prayers for the plentiful effusion of the Holy Spirit, to give power and efficacy to the blessed Gospel, and enable us to practise the duties of repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, for mercy through his blood, the only atonement, that deserved judgments may be averted, and that God may continue his precious blessings with us, and give us grace to improve them.

That he may long preserve our Gracious Sovereign, and eminently bless the Prince of Wales, the Princess, and all the royal family;—that he may direct and prosper his Majesty's councils and enterprises, for the good of his own subjects, and the preservation of the peace of Christendom, and relief of our persecuted Protestant brethren in foreign parts;—that he would strengthen and support them under their afflictions, defeat the attempts of their adversaries, provide in mercy for their speedy deliverance, and overrule the great affairs now in agitation for that end—and that God would be graciously pleased to disappoint the restless endeavours of those who are enemies to our religion and liberties—and that he may bless endeavours in prosecution of the encouraging means his Majesty hath afforded for removing ignorance, and putting a stop to the growth of Popery—and that God may be graciously pleased to continue the blessing of seasonable weather, joining thankfulness for the remarkable favour he hath shown us this way. And the Assembly enjoins all ministers to take care that this fast be duly observed; and, for this cause, to intimate this act from their pulpits upon the Lord's Day preceding the day that shall be appointed by his Majesty for the observation thereof, and to take occasion to excite the people to their duty, with grave and serious exhortations suitable to the occasion.

VI.

And ordains the foresaid Synod and Presbyteries, and other Presbyteries concerned, to draw up and send to the said committee, from time to time, distinct informations of the state of their bounds, particularly as to Popery, and the success of the missionaries, and what discouragements they meet with.

VII.

Sess. 13, May 17, 1726.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint their reverend brethren, Mr William Mitchell, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners or their quorum, &c. VIII.

Sess. 13, May 17, 1726, post meridiem.—Act making an Alteration in the Form of Commissions from Universities.

The General Assembly, considering that the present form of the commissions from universities does not agree to the state of some universities, therefore, they do hereby appoint, that in place of the words preceding "did and hereby do," in the beginning of the said form, the words following be inserted, viz. :—"The which day, a meeting of the University of _____ being called and convened, they did, and hereby do," &c.

IX.

Sess. 13, May 17, 1726.—Act regulating Transportations of Ministers settled in Highland Congregations.

The General Assembly, considering how necessary it is to be particularly careful that Highland congregations be planted with well qualified ministers, and that the settlement of such congregations as are so planted may not be unnecessarily disturbed; therefore, they hereby ratify and confirm all former Acts made for planting preachers and ministers in the Highlands who have the Irish language, and concerning the transporting of ministers from the Highlands to the Lowlands; and further appoint and ordain, that no transportation from the Highlands to the Lowlands, nor from one part of the Highlands to another, be granted, nor any act or thing be done by any judicature, which directly tends thereunto, without duly calling all concerned, and hearing them thereupon, and examining the sufficiency and proof of the reasons on both sides of the question. And the Assembly hereby declares and ordains, that from any Highland place, especially where Popery abounds, a minister shall not be transported, nor any step be made towards the same, but upon great and weighty reasons, and for the evident good of the Church of Christ. And, moreover, that in Highland parishes, wherein Popery abounds, no minister shall be transported, nor anything done leading thereto, but by the General Assembly of this Church, except it be to another Highland parish wherein Popery does also prevail.

Sess. 1, May 4, 1727.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. It is with the greatest pleasure and satisfaction that we reflect upon the wise and prudent behaviour of your former Assemblies; and as we doubt not but you come together with the same zeal for the honour and glory of God, for the advancement of true religion and piety, the preventing the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice and irreligion, we do most willingly countenance this your present meeting by our approbation and royal authority.

We have had so many proofs of the loyalty and affection of the Church established by law in Scotland to our person and government, and of its steady adherence to the succession in our family, and to the Protestant interest in general, that you may always depend upon our firm resolution to maintain the said Church in the full enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges.

You may also be fully assured of our readiness to concur in whatever may tend to the promoting of its peace and prosperity, not doubting but you, on your part, will be equally careful to do all that in you lies which may conduce to our service, and to the welfare of our people; and that your debates and proceedings will be conducted with that spirit of concord and brotherly love, which so much become this venerable Assembly; carefully avoiding whatever may create unhappy divisions among you, as the most effectual means that the enemies to our happiness and tranquillity could make use of, to disappoint and frustrate the good ends for which you are convened.

The experience you have already had of the abilities and integrity of our right rusty and entirely beloved cousin and counsellor, James Earl of Findlater and Seafield, and of his concern for the Church, and zeal for our service, will, we doubt not, render the choice very agreeable to you, which we have made of him, to represent our royal person in this Assembly; and we are persnaded that his diligence and application, in the discharge of so important a trust, will be assisted and encouraged by the unanimity and dispatch with which you will go through the several affairs that are proper for your consideration. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 18th day of April 1727, in the thirteenth year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

TOWNSHEND.

Directed thus,—To the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 6, 1727.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We humbly beg leave to acknowledge, with hearts full of joy and thankfulness, the honour of your Majesty's gracious letter to us, approving the behaviour of former Assemblies, and expressing your Majesty's confidence of our zeal for the honour and glory of God, for the advancement of true religion and piety, the preventing the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice and irreligion; duties to which your Majesty's favourable expectations from us do greatly oblige and excite us, and the more, that our meeting is countenanced by your Majesty's approbation and royal authority.

We account it the great honour and happiness of this Church, that the testimonies of our loyalty and affection to your Majesty's royal person and government, and our steady adherence to the succession in your royal family, and to the Protestant interest in general, have been acceptable to your Majesty; and it fills our hearts with joy, and quickens our zeal for your Majesty's service, that in your great goodness, you are graciously pleased to renew the assurances of your firm resolution, to maintain this Church in the full enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges, and readily to concur in whatever may tend to the promoting of its peace and prosperity; upon which your royal assurances we entirely depend. And we should be altogether inexcusable, to be wanting on our part to do all that in us lies for your Majesty's service and the welfare of your people, or should we not conduct ourselves with that spirit of concord and brotherly love which becomes us; and we judge we are bound to watch strictly against all divisions among ourselves, which may tend to disappoint the good ends for which we are convened, by affording your Majesty's enemies any handle to disturb the happiness and tranquillity of your Majesty's auspicious administration, which is, under God, our great safety.

Our experience of the Earl of Findlater and Scafield's abilities and integrity, and of his concern for the Church and zeal for your Majesty's service, renders your Majesty's choice of him to represent your royal person in the Assembly most obliging and acceptable to us, and the full confidence we have of his diligence and application in the discharge of his high and important trust, obliges us to give him the best assistance and encouragement, upon our part, by unanimity and dispatch, in going through the affairs proper for our consideration.

We have received from your Majesty's Commissioner your most pious and bountiful donation for this year, to be employed in maintaining itinerant preachers and catechists, in places where ignorance and Popery prevail, which we accept with the most profound respect and thankfulness, and shall use our utmost care in employing it for the pious ends to which it is designed, and account for it as your Majesty's royal warrant directs.

May it please your Majesty,

The present critical juncture of affairs, which has moved others of your loyal subjects to address your Majesty, expressing their duty and loyalty upon occasion of formidable alliances and designs framed against your Majesty, and the happiness of your people, under your wise administration, calls us to embrace, with the greatest cheerfulness, this opportunity to testify our utter abhorrence of all the desigus and attempts of your open or secret enemies against your royal person, and the happy constitution of your government, which we account our great security under God, for all that is dear to us as men and Christians. The early humble address of the Commission of the last Assembly to your Majesty, expressing the duty and loyalty of this Church, we heartily approve and concur with, being deeply concerned, that our gracious God, who has eminently appeared in behalf of your Majesty, and blessed your people with your signal preservation hitherto, may now, when you are attacked with open hostilities, bless your councils and arms remarkably, and enable your Majesty to carry on a successful war, or to procure a safe and lasting peace to Europe, for the relief of our oppressed Protestant brethren abroad, and security of the valuable rights of your own subjects; and that he may defeat all designs of restless and deluded abettors of the desperate cause of a Popish Pretender, who, should they succeed in their wicked attempts, which God forbid, nothing could remain for your loyal and dutiful subjects to expect but utter ruin.

It is, therefore, with the most ardent desires, and in the greatest sincerity of our hearts, that we pray the most High God long to preserve your Majesty's precious life, to bless your Majesty, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all their royal offspring, with the best of heaven's blessings; and, after a long and happy reign upon earth, to crown your Majesty with immortal glory. These are the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our presence, in our name, and at our appointment, by
WILL. HAMILTON, Moderator.

Sess. 15, May 16, 1727.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers and weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint, their reverend brethren, Mr William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the University of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners, or their quorum, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as the corresponding Acts of the five immediately preceding years.)

V.

Sess. 17, May 17, 1727.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Management of the King's Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that it has pleased the King, out of his royal bounty, again this year to grant the sum of L.1000 sterling, to encourage the itinerant preachers and catechists to go to the Highlands and Islands, for instructing the people in the principles of the true religion; and the Assembly being desirous to carry on the reformation in the foresaid places, and to prosecute the design of his Majesty's grant, do hereby continue Mr John Dundas of Philipstoun, procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid sum, in the terms of the 6th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1725; and suchlike, do nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the University of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee for disposing upon the foresaid royal bounty, for the ends mentioned in the foresaid royal grant, and for carrying on a reformation in the foresaid places, according to the powers granted by the foresaid 6th Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1725, also in the 6th Act of the late General Assembly; and which powers are hereby renewed. And, further, this General Assembly do instruct and empower the said committee, as they shall see cause, to apply to his Majesty, and those in the government, or any magistrate, for assistance in carrying on a reformation, and the interest of true religion in the foresaid places; and the said committee are appointed to keep a correspondence with the Presbyteries, Protestant heritors, ministers, preachers, and catechists, in the above mentioned places, and to do all that is competent for them towards the encouragement of ministers and Protestants in these countries; and the said committee are enjoined in their management to have a particular regard to the regulations and resolutions of the late committee for reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and to use their endeavours to make the same effectual; and to report their diligence to the next General Assembly.

VI.

Sess. 18, May 18, 1727.—Act concerning the Printing of Papers in Processes brought before the Judicatories of this Church.

The General Assembly, finding that the Act of Assembly inhibiting the printing of papers in processes before Church judicatories has not had the desired effect; therefore, they hereby enact and declare, that, in case parties concerned in processes brought before the judicatories of this Church shall think fit to print states of their case, or other papers relating to the said processes, such printing is permitted only under the provisions, and with the restrictions, following, viz.: that a written copy of such printed papers be given in to the clerk of the judicatory, subscribed by the party or his commissioner, and that the printed copies have the name of the party or his commissioner subjoined thereto, to the end that if any facts that are false, or not instructed, be therein inserted, or any indecent expressions be used, the subscriber may be censured according to the demerit of the fault; and the Assembly do hereby strictly discharge parties to disperse, or the members of the Church judicatories to regard, any printed paper concerning matters depending before them, not subscribed in the terms of this act.

VII.

Sess. 18, May 18, 1727.—Act concerning the Duties and Qualifications of Ruling Elders.

The General Assembly, finding that the Acts of Assembly, made with respect to the duties and qualifications of elders, are not so duly observed as they ought to be, do, therefore, enjoin the several Presbyteries of this Church to have a strict regard to what is required as to the duties and qualifications of elders by the 9th Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1722, especially in choosing of elders to represent them in General Assemblies, and in attesting the commissions of such as are chosen either by themselves, by universities, or by royal burghs.

VIII.

Sess. 18, May 18, 1727.—Act concerning the admitting of Persons to the Lord's Table.

The General Assembly, having considered an overture from the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale, about admission of persons to the Lord's Table, they strictly enjoin the observation of the Act, February 7, anno 1645, § 12, "Of the Opinion of the Committee for keeping greater Uniformity in this Kirk, in the practice and observation of the Directory in some points of Public Worship;" and leaves it to the several Church judicatories to give directions in cases of this nature, as the same do occur.

IX.

Sess. 19, May 18, 1727, post meridiem.—Act and Recommendation in favour of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge.

The General Assembly, finding, from a representation laid before them by the committee of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, in name and by order of the general meeting thereof, that it is now above eighteen years since this Society was first erected, by letters patent from the Sovereign, upon an application from this Church, and, ever since, the utmost diligence has been applied to make it answer the great end for which it was obtained, to promote Christian knowledge and virtue, to suppress error and vice, and to preserve our happy constitution both in Church and State; and by the blessing of God their endeavours have proved successful in attaining some of these ends, as is sufficiently attested from many parts in this nation, by reports from Presbyteries, ministers, and gentlemen their correspondents, which have been read to them at their meetings, and heard with the greatest pleasure and satisfaction; that in several places not only great numbers of children, but persons far advanced in years, crowded to their schools to learn reading, writing, arithmetic, and Church music, who never probably could have had any measure of knowledge had it not been for the Society's schools, and few of them left their schools till they had learned the Assembly's Catechism by heart. By the benefit of these schools, and the masters' diligence, together with the supplying them with useful books, such as Bibles, New Testaments, Confessions of Faith, Vincent's Catechism, and Guthrie's Trial of a Saving Interest, and others, many of these poor people have been happily delivered from their ignorance; the schoolmasters have been useful in remote islands and large parishes by reading the Scriptures, praying, and singing of psalms, and catechising the people on the Lord's Day in the places of public worship, by the minister's allowance, when he himself is employed in other places of his parish. The discipline used in these schools has had great influence upon the morals of the people; some children of Popish parents have been trained up in the principles of the true Protestant religion; and the English language is become more universal. The remarkable advantages and success that have attended these schools have encouraged the Society, being also thereto excited by the pressing recommendations of the Committee of Assembly for Reformation in the Highlands, to settle more schools. By this addition, in those places where they were so necessary, their number increased to eighty, the salaries of the schoolmasters, and other incidents, amounted to the sum of L.526, 18s. 10²/₆d. sterling in one year, and the charges of books, carriage, &c. that year came to near L.200 sterling, besides the great expense of maintaining hopeful youths of more than ordinary capacity, having the Irish language, who were not in a condition to maintain themselves, and whose parents and nearest relations became bound that these boys should serve as schoolmasters; and some of them are now teaching schools for smaller salaries than others either would or could, to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The Society, upon a review of the state of their funds, found that the income would by no means balance their charge; and they being tied down by their patent not to encroach upon their stock, were forced to sink some of their schools in places where they were much wanted. The Society had, indeed, flattered themselves with more donations, and that Presbyteries would have sent up their collections according to the General Assembly's recommendation; but both these have failed in great measure.

Upon this the Society inquired how the recommendations of the General Assembly and Commission for collections and donations had been obeyed, and found that several had contributed very liberally, whose names are recorded as promoters of this noble design, and to whose bounty its success is much owing; but, on the other hand, it was not a little discouraging, that it appeared from the Society's books, that some Synods, excepting a very few ministers and parishes, and not a few Presbyteries, have never sent up their collections to the Society's treasurer; and it is even suspected that the Assembly's recommendations have not been so much as published to the people. The Society, in the years 1715, 1716, 1717, and 1718, gave in to the General Assembly a particular state of their affairs, as also to the Commission in the year 1723; and, that every particular person might be satisfied, they printed their letters patent, with an account of their rise, constitution, and management, as also lists of their schools, bearing the dates of erection, with the names of Presbyteries, parishes, and places where each school was settled, and names of schoolmasters, number of scholars, both boys and girls. Letters have been frequently written to Presbyteries to satisfy them about the Society's management, and also to put them in mind of deficiencies; and because few or no returns came to these letters, the Society, in March last, by their preses, wrote to Synods, to inquire into the diligence of their Presbyteries about collections, and to acquaint them that a list of deficiencies was to be laid before this venerable Assembly; but the Society were averse to the doing of any thing which might give offence, or put to the blush any who might be in the least deficient in promoting so good a design, and yet are inclined to contribute, and therefore chose rather to delay the giving a particular condescendence of deficiencies, that they might have a new opportunity of contributing; and new intrants, and others transported to better benefices, might have an opportunity of sending their donations up with the collections. That there were also several who, since the Assembly's recommendation, are grown up, and others who have either come to estates, or are preferred to places of profit, who, it was hoped, would not be wanting to promote that pious and charitable undertaking, not to mention those who have already given something, and have promised to give more liberally; and the present situation of affairs seemed to call every true Christian, as God gives them ability and opportunity, to concern themselves in this matter. Our Gracious Sovereign does countenance the design, and has given liberally out of his own royal bounty for maintaining preachers and catechists in those places which very much need the same. Our ancestors never had such a price put in their hands, and it should be improved for advancing the interests of religion.

The General Assembly, having much at heart the success and advancement of the pious and charitable design of the said Society, and being much concerned that their most useful and painful endeavours should meet with so much obstruction from the forgetfulness or backwardness of some, and slothfulness of others, who are otherwise well and charitably disposed, in not contributing to the encouragement of the fore-said good work; do, therefore, most seriously and earnestly recommend to all the Presbyteries within this Church, that they diligently inquire at kirk-sessions and ministers within their bounds how the recommendations of former Assemblies, with respect to donations, subscriptions, and collections for the above pious and laudable design, have been obeyed. And the Assembly orders such ministers as have not collected, forthwith to do the same, and to use their endeavours to persuade charitable persons to contribute something towards the buying of books and maintaining of poor scholars; and the General Assembly does appoint every Presbytery to enjoin the several kirk-sessions within their bounds to give a particular account to them what has been collected for the end foresaid in their parishes since the year 1709, and that betwixt and the term of Martinmas next to come. And the Assembly ordains every Presbytery to keep distinct minutes of their proceedings in this matter until full reports are made to them from all their parishes, and then to transmit the said reports to the anniversary general meeting of the said Society, the first Thursday of January next, and that they send therewith a list of subscribers who have not yet paid in their money. And the General Assembly does likewise hereby recommend to the several Synods within this National Church, that they call Presbyteries to an account of their diligence in this matter; and that they report an account of their own diligence therein to the next General Assembly. And, lastly, the Assembly appoints this their act and recommendation to be printed, and copies thereof to be sent to the several parishes in Scotland; and that the same be read from the pulpits, immediately after divine worship in the forenoon, upon the first Lord's Day of August next.

Sess. 19, May 18, 1727, post meridiem.—Act and Commission of this Assembly for preserving Purity of Doctrine, and concerning Mr John Simson.

The General Assembly, considering that it is not practicable for them to overtake what yet remains of the process laid before them, from the reports of the last Assembly's committee for purity of doctrine, and the Presbytery of Glasgow, concerning Mr John Simson, Professor of Divinity in the University of Glasgow, in such a manner as the variety of the matter, and great importance thereof, and also the clearing and vindicating of divine truths require; and yet that it is fit that the supreme judicatory of this Church only should give a final determination therein, did therefore agree that the same be delayed till the next General Assembly; and in order to the further preparing and ripening this whole affair, did appoint the persons after mentioned, viz.:—Mr William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the University of Edinburgh, their Moderator, Messrs James Haddow, Principal of the New College of St Andrews, William Wishart, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, George Chalmers, Principal of the King's College of Aberdeen, Thomas Blackwell, Principal of the College of New Aberdeen, David Anderson, Professor of Divinity in the King's College of Aberdeen, Matthew Crawford, Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Edinburgh, William Mitchell at Edinburgh, James Ramsay at Kelso, Allan Logan at Culross, Thomas Black at Perth, Thomas Linning at Lesmahagow, William M^r George at Pennyueik, John Hamilton at Glasgow, Samuel Semple at Libberton, James Mercer at Aberdalgie, Robert Wodrow at Eastwood, James Smith at Cromond, James Bannatyne at Edinburgh, James Craig there, John Brand at Borrowstounness, William Miller at Edinburgh, Alexander Anderson at St Andrews, John Mathison at Edinburgh, John Scott at Glasgow, and Alexander Robertson at Tinwald, Ministers; the Right Honourable Adam Cockburn of Ormiston, Lord Justice-Clerk, Mr James Erskine of Grange, Mr James Hamilton of Pencaitland, and Mr Hugh Dalrymple of Drummore, four of the Senators of the College of Justice, George Drummond, Esq., Lord Provost of Edinburgh, Mr Robert Dundas of Arncliffe, advocate, Colonel John Erskine of Carnock, and Mr James Boswell of Auchinleck, advocate, Ruling Elders; to be a committee, whereof thirteen to be a quorum, and nine always to be ministers; and that their first meeting shall be in the Old Church Aisle of Edinburgh, upon Monday the 22d instant, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, and their subsequent stated meetings to be upon Tuesday, before each quarterly meeting of the Commission of this General Assembly, in the same place, at four o'clock in the afternoon; with power to them to choose their own moderator and clerk, and to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall see cause. And the Assembly hereby earnestly obtests all the members of the said committee punctually to attend, as they shall be accountable to the next General Assembly. And it is hereby declared, that any ministers of the Presbytery of Glasgow, who shall attend the meetings of this committee, shall be members thereof, though not of the above nomination. And the General Assembly gives full power to the said committee to proceed upon the articles in the process, both as to the libel and queries, and what has followed thereupon, not judged by this Assembly, and upon what else is contained in the Act of the last Assembly for preserving purity of doctrine, which the Presbytery of Glasgow and former committee could not overtake. And that they proceed in the whole hereby committed to them, conform to the powers and directions of that act, and usque ad sententiam; but shall not pass a sentence either absolving or condemning Mr Simson, but report their diligence to the next General Assembly; all being reserved to their judgment. And it is recommended to the Presbytery of Glasgow to be assistant to the committee as they shall be required by them. And Mr Simson is appointed to attend upon the said committee, when called by them, and upon the next General Assembly, when and where they shall happen to meet. And the General Assembly, in the interim, on account of the articles in the libel charged on Mr Simson, which have been found relevant and proven, judged he ought to be suspended; likeas they hereby suspend him from teaching and preaching till the meeting of the next General Assembly.

Follows the Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1726, referred to in the foresaid act, viz. "At Edinburgh, 17th May 1726.—The General Assembly, considering that several Presbyteries have instructed their Commissioners to propose that inquiry be made into the grounds of some reports of unsound doctrine, concerning the persons of the Blessed Trinity, being taught at Glasgow, and that the Committee for Instructions having called their brethren Commissioners from the Presbytery of Glasgow to give them an account what they knew about these reports, and what they had done about the same? These brethren answered, that upon some surmises of Mr John Simson, Professor of Divinity in Glasgow, his having taught erroneous doctrine, particularly with respect to the Blessed Trinity, the Presbytery of Glasgow had sent two of their number to converse him thereupon, that he had sent to the Presbytery a letter, owning that there were such reports; but that they were false and calumnious, and giving an account of what he said he taught upon that article, and that the Presbytery had appointed a committee of their number to consider his said letter; but that their committee had not yet made report to the Presbytery; and the General Assembly, being zealously concerned for the preservation of the purity of doctrine in this Church, and for preventing the entry and spreading of any error, especially in such a weighty and fundamental article; do, therefore, recommend to, and appoint the Presbytery of Glasgow to proceed with all diligence in their inquiry into Mr Simson's opinions concerning the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, and, particularly, as to the passages and expressions relative thereto, contained in his letter to them, or other letters or papers written by him; and also that they make inquiry into what he hath taught or vented concerning the Trinity, and also how he has obeyed the injunctions of the General Assembly, in anno 1717, as to the points which they had then prohibited him to teach. And, further, if they shall see ground to suspect him to be unsound in any other Article of our Confession of Faith, they shall likewise make inquiry into his opinion and sentiments concerning the same; and for the help and assistance of the said Presbytery in these matters, the General Assembly do hereby nominate and appoint the Reverend Mr William Mitchell, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, Messrs James Haddow, Principal of the New College of St Andrews, Allan Logan at Culross, William Wishart, Principal of the University of Edinburgh, William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity there, James Craig at Edinburgh, James Bannatyne there, James Smith at Cramond, James Alston at Dirleton, William McGeorge at Pennycook, John Brand at Borrowstonness, Michael Potter at Kippen, John Hunter at Ayr, Hugh Fauside at Loudoun, Robert Wodrow at Eastwood, Thomas Linning at Lesmahagow, John Currie at Old Monkland, and James Bayne at Bonhill, Ministers; the Right Honourable Sir Hugh Dalrymple of North Berwick, Lord President of the Session, Adam Cockburn of Ormiston, Lord Justice-Clerk, Mr James Erskine of Grange, Mr James Hamilton of Peneaitland, Sir Walter Pringle of Newhall, Senators of the College of Justice, Sir James Stewart of Goodtrees, Bart., and Mr Robert Dundas of Arniston, younger, Ruling Elders; to be a select committee, and thirteen of them to be a quorum, whereof nine are always to be ministers; and appoints their first meeting to be in the Old Church Aisle of Edinburgh, upon the next day after the dissolving of this present Assembly, at nine of the clock in the forenoon, and that their subsequent stated meetings be upon the Tuesdays before each ordinary meeting of the Commission of the General Assembly, at four o'clock in the afternoon, with full power to them to choose their own moderator and clerk; that they give advice and direction in these affairs to the Presbytery, as they shall be applied to for the same, and that the Presbytery send an account of the steps of their procedure to the several meetings of this committee that are or shall be afterwards appointed, that they may give advice and direction as the case shall require;—that the moderator of the committee shall correspond with the Presbytery; and he is hereby empowered to call meetings of the said committee pro re nata, as he shall be advised by the said Presbytery, or as occasion shall require. And the Assembly hereby gives full power to the said committee to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall see cause; and also to meet and join with the Presbytery in the trial of the affair recommended to them; but neither committee nor Presbytery, jointly nor separately, shall pass a judgment, either absolving or condemning Mr Simson, but shall only prepare this affair by all proper ways of inquiry, and proceed usque ad sententiam, and then report their diligence to the next General Assembly. Yet, if Mr Simson shall refuse or decline to answer questions that shall be proposed to him by the said Presbytery or committee, and conform to the direction of this act; or if he shall give such answers, or behave himself with relation to the premises in such manner as that it shall appear to them to be unsafe to the Church of God, that he continue to teach or preach, in any of these cases, the Presbytery, or Presbytery and committee, are empowered to suspend him till the next General Assembly. And the General Assembly appoint that the select committee, at their meeting in March next, shall order an abstract of their procedure to be sent to the several Synods within this Church, and that in all their actings, the Presbytery and committee be careful to proceed according to the Word of God, the Confession of Faith, and Larger and Shorter Catechisms of this Church founded thereupon, and they are not to insist upon any articles not contained therein.

Sess. ult., May 19, 1727.—Address to the King in regard to the Growth of Popery, &c.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty having been graciously pleased, on many occasions, to express your royal confidence in our loyalty and duty to your Majesty's sacred person and government, and our hearty affection and zeal for the Protestant succession in your royal family, and your firm resolution to maintain the Presbyterian government of this Church; and having recommended to us the promoting religion and piety, and using our best endeavours to prevent the growth of Popery, ignorance, and immorality, as we have the greatest encouragement, we are thereby laid under the strongest ties to apply ourselves with the utmost diligence to the accomplishing of those pious ends.

It is from our sincere desire faithfully to answer this great trust, that we now crave leave most humbly to represent to your Majesty, that the Papists, especially in the Highlands and Islands, and northern parts of this country, continue still to diffuse their corrupt and pernicious doctrines among your subjects, their bishops and priests taking upon them to say mass publicly, and exercise other parts of their superstitious worship, and even to train up great numbers of youth at schools in a most open manner, in manifest contempt and defiance of your Majesty's laws, disowning them, as established by unlawful authority, to which no manner of obedience is due; and instilling into the people an opinion, contrary to the rules of the Gospel, and destructive of society and good order, that, under no less than the pain of damnation, they are bound to oppose them, and to do every thing which may contribute to sap and undermine their foundations; and maintaining that nothing can be more meritorious than to propagate these impious maxims by all means whatsoever. For a more full account of this, we beg leave to refer to former memorials, particularly to one in November 1725, from the Commission of the General Assembly, laid before the Lords-Justices in your Majesty's absence.

We reckon ourselves also obliged humbly to inform your Majesty, that the Non-juring pretended Protestant bishops, and those who are put in orders by them, restlessly endeavour to sow the seeds of disaffection to the present happy establishment in your royal person and family, especially this last year, both in city and country; and in everything that tends to this they unite in measures with professed Papists. Their preachers do not only forbear to pray expressly for your Majesty, but, on the contrary, they pray in terms by which their hearers understand that none else can be meant but the Pretender. They take every opportunity to insinuate into their minds that they are oppressed under your Majesty's administration, and can have no prospect of redress but from his success. By these means their followers entertain favourable impressions of Popery, and are the more easily perverted to it; concerning which we have sent to your Secretary of State a particular memorial.

With the greatest thankfulness we acknowledge your Majesty's pious and princely care to prevent the growth of Popery, and to promote the reformed religion. It remains only that your subjects should follow your royal example; that all persons in public stations, and, more particularly, inferior judges, should conform to your royal intentions, lay themselves out towards a vigorous execution of the laws, which the well-affected among them cannot but incline to, and would probably effectuate, were they furnished with proper funds necessary for defraying the charges thereof.

We presume, therefore, with all submission, to offer these matters to your royal consideration, and humbly pray that such effectual measures may be taken against these growing evils above mentioned as to your Majesty, in your consummate wisdom, shall seem fit.

That God may long preserve your Majesty, for the good of all your people, the maintaining of the true Protestant religion, and the protection and comfort of all the churches of Christ; that he may direct your councils, and prosper your arms against all your enemies; and that a Protestant in your royal family may always sit on the throne, shall be the earnest and constant prayers of,

WILL. HAMILTON, Moderator.

Sess. ult., May 19, 1727.—Act concerning the Licensing of Probationers for the Holy Ministry, and Students of Divinity.

The General Assembly, finding it needful now, when the number of probationers is so great, to take all due care that no persons be entered on trials for the holy ministry but with all due caution and deliberation; do, therefore, enjoin the strict observation of all former Acts of Assembly made with respect to the entering of students upon trials for the end foresaid. And further, they do appoint and ordain that when any Presbytery, who is about to enter a person upon trials, shall receive a letter from another Presbytery showing their dissatisfaction with the person to be entered, and giving grounds for the same, the said person shall not be licensed until the Synod give their directions in that matter, unless the above mentioned Presbytery, who showed their dissatisfaction, do afterwards signify their consent that the said trials should go on. And the General Assembly appoints Presbyteries who shall receive such letters about students from any other Presbytery, to write a return to the said letters with the first post after their meeting. And the Assembly likewise appoints, that when any young man comes to wait upon the profession of divinity in any university, he shall bring along with him a testimonial from the minister of the parish from whence he comes; and when he leaves the profession, he shall also take with him, beside the professor's certificate, a testimonial from the minister of that parish in which he resided when he attended the profession.

Sess. 1, May 2, 1728.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The many proofs and repeated instances which your former Assemblies have given of their firm and steady adherence to the succession in our family, and to the Protestant interest in general, and of their zeal for the advancement of piety and virtue, and the prudence, wisdom, and moderation which influenced their councils and debates, have engaged us most willingly to countenance your present meeting with our royal authority; and we do with the greatest pleasure take this first opportunity of assuring you of our fixed and determined purpose and resolution to maintain and support the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, as by law established.

We have the most entire confidence in your loyalty and affection for our person and government, and are fully persuaded that you come together with the best disposition to contribute all in your power to the happiness of our reign, as well as to promote the true interest of the Church whereof you are members, and the good of your country; and you may be assured of our ready concurrence in whatever may end to those great and desirable ends, particularly in the preventing of the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice and irreligion. And we doubt not, but as ye will avoid all disputes and contentions among yourselves, which might give advantage to those who are enemies to our peace and prosperity, you will also make the people under your charge sensible of the blessing of a perfect tranquillity which they now enjoy, and will infuse into them those principles on which the security of our happy constitution and their own welfare entirely depend.

We have appointed our right trusty and right entirely beloved cousin and councillor, Hugh Earl of Loudoun, to represent our royal person in this Assembly, being well satisfied of his loyalty, integrity, and zeal for our service; which qualifications, and his abilities for the discharge of this important trust which he has had opportunity of showing upon former like occasions, and the affection and concern which you have experienced in him for the Church of Scotland, cannot but make our choice of him very agreeable to you. And we hope that the unanimity and brotherly love and charity with which you will dispatch the business before you, will bring this your meeting to as happy conclusion as that of any former Assembly. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 1st day of April 1728, in the first year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

HOLLES NEWCASTLE.

Directed thus,—To the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 4, 1728.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The honour done by your Majesty's most gracious letter to this first General Assembly of the Church of Scotland which hath had the happiness to meet since the beginning of your Majesty's most auspicious reign, we have received with the greatest joy, and do acknowledge with the utmost gratitude.

The mention your Majesty is pleased to make of the firm and steady adherence of our former General Assemblies to the succession in your royal family, and to the Protestant interest in general; of their zeal for the advancement of piety and virtue; and of the prudence, wisdom, and moderation, which influenced their councils and debates, shows us your Majesty's kind inclination to approve, in the most favourable manner, what hath been done by others before us, according to their duty, and is a great encouragement to us to follow the good example of those with whom your Majesty hath the goodness to express yourself so well pleased. And the countenancing our present meeting with your Majesty's royal authority we take as a great blessing from God, and a most engaging evidence of your Majesty's royal goodness.

Your Majesty's being pleased to acquaint us in so kind and gracious a manner, that it is with the greatest pleasure you take this first opportunity of assuring us of your fixed and determined purpose and resolution to maintain and support the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges as by law established, is an endearing testimony of your royal favour to us, which we humbly accept with the greatest thankfulness, and rely upon with the firmest confidence, as esteeming your Majesty's royal protection to be, under God, our great security.

Your Majesty does us the greatest honour when you are pleased to express the most entire confidence in our loyalty and good affection for your person and government, and it shall be our care, through Divine assistance, so to acquit ourselves upon every occasion, as your Majesty may never have reason either to alter or to lessen it. These sentiments are deeply rooted in our hearts, and we shall most cheerfully embrace every proper opportunity of showing them.

To promote the happiness of your Majesty's reign, the true interest of this Church whereof we are members, and the good of our country, are great and desirable ends, which we are bound always to have in view; and we think them so closely connected together, that not any one of them can be advanced without the rest; and we should be most unworthy of your Majesty's favour, and of the character we bear, if we had not the best disposition to contribute all in our power unto them, seeing the assurance your Majesty gives us of your hearty concurrence in whatever may tend to these great purposes, is at once the greatest encouragement and obligation for us to exert ourselves in the most vigorous manner for accomplishing them. With pleasure also we acknowledge your Majesty's royal wisdom, when you observe that the preventing the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice and irreligion, will, in a particular manner, contribute to the happiness of your Majesty's reign and the good of our country, as well as to the promoting the true interest of this Church.

In this we are greatly animated by your Majesty's recommending them to us, and also by your royal proclamation, emitted so early in the beginning of your reign, and in a special manner by your bountiful and princely donation to this General Assembly, and the intimation given us by your Majesty's royal warrant, directed to the Barons of your Exchequer in Scotland, of your royal and gracious inclination to contribute yearly so considerable a fund for promoting the knowledge and practice of religion in the Highlands and Islands of our country; for this we beg leave to return your Majesty our most humble and grateful acknowledgments, and shall earnestly pray that God may abundantly reward you for so great a charity to souls. And we hope the due and faithful application of it to the pious purposes for which it is granted by your Majesty, shall appear by the accounts which shall be annually exhibited, according to the direction contained in your Majesty's warrant; and the most effectual care that we can shall be taken, that the persons to be employed upon that fund shall be duly qualified for serving the purposes for which your Majesty hath been pleased to bestow it. And it is with great pleasure we observe that the same endeavours which we use for preventing the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice and irreligion, and for advancing the knowledge and service of God among the people under our charge, do also contribute to make them sensible of the perfect tranquillity, and other great blessings which they now enjoy under your Majesty's happy government and wise administration, and to infuse into them those principles of duty and loyalty on which the security of our happy constitution, and their own welfare, entirely depend; for next to the persuading men to become faithful subjects to our Lord Jesus Christ, our chief care shall be to make them loyal and dutiful subjects to your Majesty.

The Earl of Loudoun hath given such eminent proofs of his loyalty, integrity, and zeal for your Majesty's service, and, upon many former occasions, of his abilities for the discharge of this important trust, and of his most affectionate concern for the prosperity and happiness of this Church, as render your Majesty's choice of him to represent your royal person in this Assembly most acceptable and obliging to us, and we humbly acknowledge it as a particular evidence of your Majesty's goodness.

We are sensible how much disputes and contentions among ourselves would give advantage to those who are enemies to the peace and prosperity of your Majesty's government, upon which our own welfare under God does depend; and we humbly acknowledge your Majesty's fatherly tenderness for us, in being pleased to caution us against them. We pray and hope that the good Spirit of God, who is the Spirit of love and peace, will assist us to dispatch all our business with that unanimity, brotherly love, and charity, which becomes the servants of the Prince of Peace, and which is so necessary to the bringing of our meeting, at this time, to a happy conclusion.

That the Most High God, by whom kings reign, may graciously preserve your Majesty's person, direct all your councils, and bless your government;—that your Majesty may long reign a happy prince over a loving and obedient people;—that He may pour down his best blessings upon your Royal Consort the Queen, upon his Royal Highness the Prince, and all your royal progeny;—that there may never be wanting a Protestant prince of your royal family to sway the sceptre over us;—and that your Majesty may late, very late, exchange the crown which you now wear for a crown of glory that fadeth not away, are, and shall be, the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Address to the King on his Majesty's Accession to the Throne.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

The great concern which we, according to our duty, have in all the events which happen to your royal family, obliges us to take hold of every proper opportunity to express it; and the death of our late gracious Sovereign, your Majesty's royal father, of glorious memory, with your Majesty's most peaceable and happy accession to the crown, having in Providence fallen out since the last meeting of the General Assembly of this Church, we humbly presume to take hold of this first occasion to give vent to those different passions, which, even at this distance of time, continue to work in our minds, upon account of these important occurrences.

It is with great satisfaction that we understand that the Commission of the late General Assembly did, according to their duty, in the most respectful manner they could, by some of their number, present a humble address to your Majesty, upon an occasion of so great concern to us and all your Majesty's good subjects, which your Majesty was pleased to accept very graciously, and which address we have in this our meeting unanimously approved; yet we cannot forbear to take hold of this first opportunity of expressing, in the most public and solemn manner which our constitution admits of, our own sentiments upon this subject, wherein we are well assured we have the hearty concurrence of all the members of this Church, whom we have the honour in this our meeting to represent.

The death of our late gracious Sovereign, your Majesty's royal father, of glorious memory, whom God made the instrument of so great blessings to us and to all Europe, was so sensible and heavy a stroke to us, that we should have been inconsolable under it, if so great a loss had not been made up to us by your Majesty's most peaceable and happy accession to the throne.

Permit us, then, great Sir, to congratulate your Majesty upon your ascending the throne of your royal ancestors, with the joyful acclamations of all your dutiful subjects.

We can never cease to bless our gracious God, when we think of his setting a king over us, whose royal qualities do so brightly adorn the throne upon which he sits; who, even from the beginning of his reign, hath given so evident proofs of his being the guardian of the peace and liberty of Europe, and of all the just rights and privileges of his subjects; who, at his entering upon the administration of his government, did, with the greatest cheerfulness, give us the most firm and solemn assurances of his inviolable resolution to maintain and protect our Church in the enjoyment of all her rights established by law, and hath fully made good, to our great joy, this his gracious purpose in the following steps of his reign.

It is with the greatest joy that we observe these blessings multiplied upon your Majesty, which we hope shall continue to distinguish your reign, and render it more and more illustrious. That you are blessed with a Royal Consort, who, for her many excellent qualities, and particularly her distinguished zeal and constancy in adhering to the Protestant religion, ought to be dear to all the Protestant Churches while she lives, and have her memory highly honoured by them to the latest posterity. And it greatly adds to our joy for the present, and fills our hearts with the most encouraging hopes for the time to come, that we behold your Majesty's throne encompassed with so numerous and hopeful a progeny, born, as we trust, for great blessings to the world, and for securing the succession to the crown in the Protestant line of your Majesty's royal house for many generations.

That God may bless your Majesty with a long life and a prosperous reign;—that he may ever defeat all the open and secret attempts of your enemies;—that he may establish your throne by righteousness, and make you more and more a blessing to your own subjects, and to all the Protestant Churches;—that he may eminently bless your Royal Consort, our gracious Queen, his Royal Highness the Prince, and the whole royal family, with all temporal and eternal blessings;—and when your Majesty hath been long honoured of God to serve him and promote the good of mankind upon earth, you may be rewarded with eternal happiness in heaven, is, and shall be, the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in a General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Address to the King, by the late Commission, on the same subject.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We lay hold of this first opportunity that our meeting together affords us to express our just sorrow and concern for the unspeakable loss which we, together with all the Protestant churches, have sustained, in the unexpected death of his late Majesty, your royal father, our most indulgent Sovereign; and, at the same time, to declare the hearty joy and complete satisfaction that possess us on your Majesty's quiet and peaceable accession to the throne.

When we revolve in our thoughts, how melancholy our situation appeared to be by the sudden removal of our late most gracious and wise king, at a season when the critical juncture of public affairs in Europe seemed to call for the most steady hand to conduct them; and when we reflect how momentary our fears were, how quickly they were dispelled upon your Majesty's ascending the throne of your ancestors, with the universal and joyful consent and congratulation of your people; and when we see the weight of British councils, in supporting the Protestant interest abroad, and preserving the balance of Europe, prevail as formerly, we cannot but admire and adore the kind Providence of Almighty God, who hath turned our sorrow into gladness, and under those gloomy circumstances which threatened us with danger, hath opened to us the prospect of lasting happiness and security.

It has been the unhappiness of Britain for more than a century past, that it never saw the throne filled at the same time with a Protestant King and Queen, blessed and supported by a hopeful progeny; whence grew that weakness in the state, and uncertainty in the settlement in matters of religion, that has frequently threatened the Protestant churches with ruin. But now, thanks be to our most gracious God, we see joined to our King, whose wisdom, justice, and magnanimity, secure the Church and State from all apprehensions, a Queen, whose virtues and piety are a fit pattern for your people, and whose generous contempt of diadems, when standing in competition with the Protestant religion, is rewarded even in this life with one of the most considerable crowns in Europe; and assures religion in this island of finding in her a tender nursing-mother, as it gives a solid expectation, that the growing royal family, the hope and glory of this kingdom, will be brought up in the same principles.

Under these happy circumstances, we can have no apprehensions of what we formerly dreaded; but may reasonably hope, that the abjured Pretender will soon have no friend in Britain, who is not likewise a friend to his absurd religion; and our faithful endeavours must, with the blessing of God, have the same success against him, as against those errors that lead captive his blinded abettors into his interest against their own.

That the profession we make of affection to your Majesty is unfeigned and genuine, no enemy we have can pretend to doubt. Early upon your accession to the crown we received the strongest security that your Majesty will maintain inviolably the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland; and its main support, under God, is from the present happy establishment of the crown on your Majesty and your royal family. Our preservation depends so evidently upon your undoubted title to the imperial crown of this realm, that though the Popish Pretender to your Majesty's throne, in public papers and declarations, has often attempted to delude others with the vain hopes of protection, should his arbitrary and tyrannical government take place over this island, yet not the remotest insinuation either was or could, with any colour, be made in favour of our Church—so inseparably are our duty to your Majesty and our interest connected together: and, therefore, we humbly presume to hope, that your Majesty will graciously accept of this first declaration and tender of our unalterable love, duty, and loyalty.

That God may long preserve your Majesty, the great pattern and promoter of religion, and the defender of the true faith; that your reign may be happy and undisturbed; that you may always possess the hearts and affections of all your subjects; that you may be the guardian of the liberties of Europe, the support of the Protestant interest, and the blessed instrument of relief to our suffering brethren abroad; that all divine blessings in Christ Jesus may be plentifully dispensed to your Majesty, to our most gracious Queen, to the Prince, and all your royal family; and that it may ever be the happiness of Britain to have a Prince of your royal line to sway the sceptre, are the ardent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, at our appointment, and in our presence, by
WILL. HAMILTON, Moderator.

Sess. 6, May 8, 1728, ante meridiem.—Act renewing the Recommendation of the last Assembly in favour of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge.

The Lord President of the Session, preses of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, gave in to the Assembly a memorial from the said Society, representing that they did lay before the late General Assembly the then state of their affairs, upon which a recommendation was granted; but are sorry to find that divers Synods and Presbyteries have neglected to make any report as to their diligence in what was therein desired of them,—that there are new demands made by several Presbyteries and parishes for charity schools, which the Society cannot answer, because they have already more schools than their fund can well maintain; but when collections come in, they are ready, as far as they can, to settle schools in places that most need the same; and, for enabling the Society to do this, humbly desiring that the recommendation of the late General Assembly may be renewed. The Society also represented, that they having received payment of the L.1000 sterling, mortified by John Raining, merchant in Norwich, for a school, they laid out the same upon heritable security; and having formerly intimated to the Assembly a proposal of settling that school at Inverness, to which hopeful youths having Irish at the Society's other schools might be brought, in order to learn the English language, and, when further instructed, be returned to take up schools in the Highlands, it was now reported that the magistrates, town-council, ministers, and kirk-session of Inverness, have agreed to give accommodation and encouragement thereto, and that thereupon that school was, in May last, settled in the said town, and is in a flourishing condition. The General Assembly having heard and considered the above memorial, with the act and recommendation of the late Assembly in favour of the said Society, and heard the Lord President, and other members of that Society, give account of the state and management thereof, they did, and hereby do, renew the recommendation of the said Assembly, and instruct and appoint their Commission to be named by them to take care that the said recommendation be executed; and, likewise, do appoint the several Synods and Presbyteries within this Church to send up to the meeting of the Commission, in November next, and also to the next Assembly, with the commissioners from their bounds, a particular account in writing of their diligence, with a list of deficient in contributing within the several Presbyteries. And they appoint their said Commission to take this matter under their consideration, at their said meeting in November next, at furthest, and report their diligence, and an account of their success, to the next General Assembly.

Sess. 12, May 11, 1728, post meridiem.—Act and Recommendation for a Voluntary Contribution, to be applied towards erecting an Infirmary or Hospital for Diseased Poor at Edinburgh.

There was presented to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland a petition for the Royal College of Physicians in Edinburgh, showing, that they having observed many poor miserable objects in this place, as well strangers from all corners of the nation, as inhabitants of the city, seeking after the means of health, having nothing either to maintain themselves or provide medicines, they did, some years ago, erect a dispensatory, provided it with medicines at the lowest rates, and by turns gave attendance at their public hall to give advice gratis; but finding that the advice given, and the medicines applied, often proved unsuccessful, and came short of their good effect, through the patients their wanting due care taken of them, and their being destitute of means for providing a proper diet and lodging while under cure. For remedy of which, the said college did lately propose the establishing an infirmary or hospital for sick and wounded poor, after the example and practice of most other countries and cities, unto which proper objects may be taken for cure, and to raise a stock for that end, by voluntary subscriptions and donations, that so poor persons may not only have advice and medicines gratis, but also (when any physician sees it necessary) be entertained at bed and board, with proper servants to attend them during the time of their cure; and having already made some good progress in obtaining subscriptions and donations for the end foresaid, by the care and pains of some worthy gentlemen, and the charitable disposition of persons of all ranks to whom application has been made, they thought it proper to make the good design more publicly known, in hopes of an universal approbation; and that many will cheerfully contribute towards carrying on so Christian and necessary a work, which may prove universally profitable to the nation; the commendable practice of erecting and maintaining many such hospitals abroad, and the great advantages that are well known to arise therefrom, being a strong motive for us in Scotland to establish one amongst us, whereby many poor tradesmen, servants, apprentices, journeymen, and labourers, who casually meet with fractures, bruises, wounds, dislocations, or do fall into sickness, may, by the blessing of God, and the timeous application of proper medicines, be recovered and restored to health and strength, who, through the want of such help, become beggars, or a burden upon their friends or the public, but by means of this hospital may be restored to health, and enabled to follow their employments and business, gain their own livelihood, and be useful in the commonwealth. And another great use of such an hospital is, that the overseers thereof will be a check upon many idle and slothful persons, who, under pretence of some slight lameness, sickness, or weakness, become a burden upon the country; for such, being brought into the hospital and cured, will be debarred from begging, and the really poor and incurably lame or sick will the more easily and cheerfully be pitied and supplied by charitable persons. And therefore the foresaid college do invite all persons, societies, and corporations, who are in case to contribute towards carrying on this charitable and necessary design, to concur therein, and earnestly desire the General Assembly of this National Church to recommend a voluntary contribution at the several parish churches in Scotland, for advancing the foresaid charitable work, in such manner as to them shall seem most suitable.

The General Assembly, having heard the said petition, and taking into their most serious consideration the deplorable circumstances of many industrious poor of both sexes, who, while in health and firmness of body, do labour with diligence, and maintain themselves and families, yet when they fall into sickness, or are otherwise disabled, are in the greatest extremity of misery, being not only destitute of bread, but want the necessary means of cure and recovery; against both which inconveniences a remedy is proposed by this pious and Christian project; and the Assembly also considering that this infirmary or hospital will be of universal and common use to the poor of the whole nation; they do, therefore, with the greatest earnestness, recommend a public contribution through all the parishes of Scotland for advancing thereof, to be made upon such Lord's Days as the several Presbyteries or ministers shall think most proper, after these presents come to their hands; and do exhort all well disposed persons, especially those on whom God has bestowed the inestimable blessings of health and strength, and any competent measure of the other good things of this life, that they lay to heart the distress of such their fellow Christians as are deprived of them, and, according to their ability, contribute cheerfully to their relief, by encouraging this so necessary and charitable a design. And the Assembly appoints this Act and recommendation to be published in all the parish churches of Scotland, upon the Lord's Day preceding the day to be appointed for the collection, immediately after sermon in the forenoon; and recommends to the several ministers who preach on the said Lord's Days to enforce the same with suitable exhortations. And appoints the money collected in the several parishes to be put into the hands of the moderators of the respective Presbyteries, and by them to be carefully transmitted to Edinburgh, with the first opportunity; to David Spence, Secretary to the Bank of Scotland, who, at the desire of the said Royal College of Physicians, has undertaken the trouble of receiving the whole contributions for this charitable work, and will give receipts for the same, to be accounted for by him to the managers of the said infirmary, conform to his obligation granted for that end.

Sess. 16, May 14, 1728, post meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint, the Reverend Mr William Wishart, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this Assembly; any thirty-one of them are hereby declared to be a quorum, whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers; with power declared to them to cognosce and finally determine, as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred to them, by any Act or order of this Assembly; which commissioners are hereby ordained to convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh the first free day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten of the clock in the forenoon, and afterwards the second Wednesdays of August, November, and March next, and oftener, when and where they shall think convenient; with power to them to choose their own moderator. And this General Assembly do hereby renew the powers, granted by the late General Assembly, to their commissioners by their Act, dated the 16th day of May last, entitled, "Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them," and the instructions therein mentioned in all points; and ordains this Commission to proceed according thereunto, and report to the next General Assembly.

VIII.

Sess. 18, May 15, 1728, post meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Management of the King's Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration, that it has pleased the King, out of his royal bounty, to grant the sum of L.1000 sterling, to encourage itinerant preachers and catechists to go to the Highlands and Islands, for instructing the people in the principles of the true religion; and being desirous to carry on the reformation in the foresaid places, and to prosecute his Majesty's pious design, do hereby continue Mr John Dundas of Philipston, Procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid money, and to lay out the same in the terms of his Majesty's grant and 6th Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1725, entitled, "Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and Management of the King's Bounty for that end;" and do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Reverend Mr William Wishart, Principal of the College of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and disposing upon the foresaid royal bounty, for the ends above mentioned, according to the said 6th Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1725, 6th Act of Assembly, 1726, and 5th Act of Assembly, 1727; and the whole rules and powers contained in these Acts are hereby renewed, any seven of the foresaid persons are declared to be a quorum, whereof four to be always ministers. And the General Assembly appoints the said committee to have their meetings in the hall of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, in Edinburgh, the last Thursdays of every month, at three of the clock in the afternoon, but to have a quarterly meeting the first lawful day after the adjournment of the four stated meetings of the Commission of the General Assembly, at ten of the clock in the forenoon, with power to adjourn themselves as they shall find needful; and they are appointed to keep a correspondence with the said Commission, also with the foresaid Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and with Presbyteries and Synods concerned in the Highlands and Islands, and places where Popery abounds in the North; and the said Commission are empowered to concur with the said committee in their work when applied unto for that effect; and ordains the said committee to report an account of their actings and diligence to the next General Assembly. And this committee are to continue till another committee be named in their room.

IX.

Sess. ult., May 16, 1728.—Act concerning Mr John Simson, Professor of Divinity in the University of Glasgow.

The General Assembly, having maturely considered the affair concerning Mr John Simson, Professor of Divinity in the University of Glasgow, with all that hath appeared to them, both from the depositions of the witnesses and his own writings and papers, do find, that, in his papers, given in to the General Assembly upon the 14th and 15th days of this instant, and this day, he does assert the necessity of the existence and generation of the person of our Lord Jesus Christ; also, that he declares that the titles, Summus Deus, and the only true God, are equally applicable to the Father and the Son, and not in any lower sense to the Son than to the Father. Likewise, that he affirms that the three Persons in the Godhead are one substance or essence in number; therefore, the General Assembly does find that his sentiments, as above expressed in his foresaid papers upon these articles, are sound and orthodox; nevertheless, considering what hath been found both relevant and proved against him by this present and the preceding General Assembly, of his having taught and uttered such things, and expressed himself in such terms, as are subversive of these blessed truths, as they are contained in the Holy Scriptures, and laid down in our Confession of Faith and Catechisms, and tend to shake the belief of them, and to inject needless and ill-grounded doubts and scruples into the minds of men, and to render them dark and uncertain as to what they ought to believe concerning the same; and, likewise, considering the great offence which he hath given by neglecting so many opportunities, during the course of the proceedings against him, of giving satisfaction to the judicatories of the Church, as to the soundness of his faith concerning those important articles, find themselves obliged, for the honour of truth, and in order to prevent the spreading of error, and preserving the purity of doctrine in this Church, to testify their high dissatisfaction with his conduct and behaviour. And many members declaring that they thought the said Mr John Simson deserved deposition, the Assembly, after mature deliberation, considering that the process is not entirely finished, and the other circumstances of the case, as it now stands, did agree to suspend, and hereby do suspend, the foresaid Mr John Simson, from preaching and teaching, and all exercise of any ecclesiastical power or function, until another General Assembly shall think fit to take off this sentence; and this Assembly does leave it to the next ensuing General Assembly to do concerning him, with relation to this process, and the other, not yet brought under consideration of this Assembly, as to them shall seem fit. And the Assembly further orders the proceedings of this Assembly to be printed, and to be transmitted, with the state of this process, printed by an order of the committee of the last Assembly for purity of doctrine, to the several Presbyteries of this Church, that they may send up their commissioners to the next Assembly duly instructed upon what they think proper to be further done in that which remains of Mr Simson's affair.

Sess. ult., May 16, 1728.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, upon the first Thursday of May next to come, 1729 years.

This General Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing of a part of the 72d Psalm, from the 17th verse to the close, and pronouncing of the blessing.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 3, 1729, ante meridiem.—Act renewing the Recommendation of the last General Assembly in favour of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge.

There was brought into the General Assembly, from their Committee for Bills, the petition and representation of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, showing that the foresaid Society having formerly, from time to time, given an account to the General Assembly of the state of their affairs, and having, since the last General Assembly, caused print the present state thereof, and sent copies to all parishes, Presbyteries, and Synods, in Scotland, do now present a copy of the same to this Assembly, whereby it appears that the number of their schools is seventy-eight, and the number of scholars are near 3000; and the Society are about erecting more schools.

As to the school erected upon the fund left by the deceased John Raining, merchant in Norwich, it is in a flourishing condition, having therein, at the last visitation, 101 scholars; and the Society are using their endeavours for recovering what remains unpaid of that fund.

Many places are yet needing and petitioning for schools, but the Society's funds do not allow thereof; and divers of the masters do complain of the smallness of their salaries, and the Society are convinced that they need augmentations; but the expenses of furnishing books, postage, and other incidents, are so great, that the Society are much straitened how to answer the demands on them; and therefore did, for increasing their funds, grant a commission this year to divers noblemen, persons of honour, ministers, and other worthy and charitable persons in England, to be correspondent members, in order to obtain donations, and for negotiating the Society's affairs there; which commission is printed in the foresaid state.

The Society, considering that the coming of the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour is what all sincere believers wish and pray for, and that it has pleased God to put it in the hearts of many in his Majesty's dominions to contribute their endeavours, and to bestow of their worldly substance for advancing the knowledge of Christ in places needing the means thereof, both at home and abroad; and not only does our gracious Sovereign countenance it, but also out of his royal bounty gives yearly a considerable sum for that end; and Protestant powers abroad are concerning themselves in this laudable design, by sending missionaries to heathen nations, and with good success.

This being a matter of the greatest moment, the promoters thereof do need direction and encouragement from the Word of God, and also the prayers and concurrence of the Lord's people.

The Society, by their committee, did therefore apply to the reverend ministers of the Presbytery of Edinburgh to appoint a sermon on the foresaid subject, in the High Church of Edinburgh, the first Thursday of January yearly, being the day of the anniversary meeting of the foresaid Society; and that these sermons be for confirmation of people in the truth of the holy Christian religion, and the excellency thereof, and in the faith of the great promises made for spreading the knowledge of Christ; and the ministers of the foresaid Presbytery did very cordially agree thereunto; and that when the Society shall invite any of their number, the Presbytery should lay their appointment on him to preach that sermon; and left it to the Society to apply to the venerable Assembly to have their allowance to invite any minister of this National Church, who may conveniently be had, to preach that sermon annually.

It has been a great satisfaction and encouragement to this Society, that as their erection was at the earnest desire of the General Assembly, so they have still had the concurrence and approbation of the Established Church, and by the pious zeal and great care of the ministers thereof, considerable sums have been brought in to the Society, so that their present fund is upwards of L.9000 sterling, besides what of Mr Raining's mortification is already paid in, and divers other legacies by charitable persons, liferented and yet resting. But, at the same time, the Society cannot but represent that there are many ministers and parishes in Scotland who never, to this day have given any thing to the Society's funds. The Society are unwilling to be more particular in this matter, being hopeful those concerned will lay it to heart, and with their first conveniency contribute, but are resolved to prepare, in order to be laid before the next General Assembly, a full list of parishes in every Synod and Presbytery in Scotland deficient in contributing; and, therefore, humbly craving to the effect after mentioned.

The General Assembly, having heard and considered the foresaid representation and petition, they did, and hereby do, renew their former recommendations to deficient in contributing to the Society's funds, and do earnestly entreat them yet to contribute cheerfully to so excellent and Christian an undertaking, and to send their donations in the terms of the eighth Act of the last General Assembly, to Mr Joseph Cave, merchant in Edinburgh, the Society's treasurer. And the Assembly recommends to any minister of this Church whom the Society shall invite, yearly to preach a sermon at their anniversary meetings suitable to the occasion; and likewise, recommends to the several Presbyteries where the Society's schools are or may be settled, to visit them frequently, and give them all encouragement, and to report to the said Society the state of their charity schools, according to the rules laid down by them in the foresaid printed state of the Society.

V.

Sess. 14, May 12, 1729, post meridiem.—Act Dividing the Presbytery of Lorn, and erecting a new Presbytery in Mull.

The General Assembly, having had laid before them a petition of the Presbytery of Lorn, concurred with by the Synod of Argyle, setting forth the great extent of the bounds of that Presbytery, and the distance at which sundry of the parishes in it do lie from the Presbytery seat, and that travelling in that country, both by sea and land, is very difficult, which often stops the members of Presbytery from meeting, and other persons concerned from attending their diets, and occasions much expenses and trouble ; and, for a remedy of this, in some measure, proposing the erection of another Presbytery therein—as the said petition and Act of the Synod, both read in Assembly, more fully bear. And the General Assembly, having considered the premises, and judging the present situation of the said Presbytery very inconvenient, and a great obstruction to the exercise of discipline, as well as an hinderance to the ministers in their work, they being thereby frequently detained long from their parishes ; do, therefore, hereby disjoin the said Presbytery and parishes after named, and erect the same into two Presbyteries, in manner following, viz., the whole parishes within the Isles of Mull, Tiree, and Coll, and the country of Ardnamurchan, Sunnard, and Morven, consisting at present of six ministerial charges, into one Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Mull ; and ordains, that their ordinary place of meeting be at Arros in Mull ; and the parishes of Lismore and Appin, Ardchattan and Muckairn, Kilmore and Kilbride, Kilbrandon and Kilchattan, Kilninver and Kilmelfort, part of the old Presbytery of Lorn, with the parishes of Kilchrennan and Dallavich, and Innishall and Clachandysart, now in the bounds of the Presbytery of Inverary, into another Presbytery, consisting at present of seven ministerial charges, to be continued under the name of the Presbytery of Lorn ; and appoints that their place of meeting be for ordinary at Kilmore. And the Assembly ordains the foresaid two Presbyteries to have their first meetings respective at the places above mentioned, upon the first Wednesday of July next ; and they declare both the said Presbyteries to be still a part of the Synod of Argyle, as formerly, and to have the same powers and privileges which any other Presbytery have, by the Word of God and constitutions of this Church. And, lastly, the General Assembly ordains that the records and papers formerly belonging to the old Presbytery of Lorn remain with the new Presbytery of that name, but that they may be patent to the Presbytery of Mull, and that they have all necessary extracts therefrom, as they shall require the same.

 VI.

Sess. 15, May 13, 1729, ante meridiem.—Act concerning Mr John Simson, Professor of Divinity in the College of Glasgow.

The General Assembly, considering how necessary it is that the process which hath so long depended, concerning Mr John Simson, Professor of Divinity in the College of Glasgow, should be brought to an issue, such as may tend to the preservation of the purity of the doctrine and of the peace of this Church ; and being now to give their determination in it, do observe, with great pleasure and thankfulness, that God hath so happily directed all the judicatories of this Church which have had this process under their consideration, that there hath not appeared the least difference of sentiment ; but, on the contrary, there hath been the most perfect and unanimous agreement among them, as to the doctrine of the glorious Trinity, and the proper Supreme Deity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, according as the same is revealed in the Holy Scriptures, and contained in our Confession of Faith and Catechisms.

And they having maturely and seriously considered all that hath been found relevant and proven against the said Mr John Simson by the two last preceding Assemblies, together with all that hath been offered by him, for alleviating the censure that ought to be inflicted for the same ; and having also considered the declarations given in by him to the two former General Assemblies, and to this, wherein he owns the orthodox doctrine concerning those great and fundamental articles of our holy religion, and disclaims and renounces all those errors, and erroneous or suspicious ways of speaking which he had been charged with, and declares himself exceedingly sorry for the offence he had given, by such ways of expressing himself. And though the said Mr John Simson hath constantly disowned that ever he held, or deliberately taught, the gross errors whereof he was accused, yet many members of this General Assembly declared it to be their opinion, that the uttering such things, and making use of such expressions, as have been found against Mr Simson, was such a fault in a minister, especially in one of his station, who had the care of the education of youth designed for the holy ministry, as deserved no less than the censure of deposition; and other members, in respect of the alleviations found in the course of the process, and of the declarations made by Mr Simson, having, on the other hand, given it as their opinion, that he ought to be treated with more tenderness; and the General Assembly being desirous to avoid going to extremities on either side, but to give such a decision in the matter as may give just and reasonable satisfaction on all hands, and preserve peace, both among the members of this Assembly, and among all the other ministers and members of the Church, find that the foresaid Mr John Simson, by what hath been found relevant and proven against him in this process, and also by his neglecting so many opportunities, as he had during the course thereof, of giving satisfaction to the judicatories of this Church, when called to do so, as to the soundness of his faith concerning those important articles about which he was called in question, had given such offence as renders it not fit or safe that he should further teach as a Professor of Divinity in this Church: Therefore, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, ratify and confirm the sentence of the last Assembly, suspending the said Mr John Simson from preaching and teaching, and all exercise of any ecclesiastical power or function, until another General Assembly shall think fit to take off this sentence; and also give it as their judgment, that it is not fit or safe that he be further employed in teaching divinity, and instructing of youth designed for the holy ministry in this Church.

And that the judicatories of this Church may have no more trouble about this process, the General Assembly have thought fit, that, for peace's sake, this whole affair concerning Mr Simson should rest here.

VII.

Sess. 16, May 13, 1729, post meridiem — Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Management of the King's Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration the great extent of many parishes in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and that, by reason thereof, ignorance, Popery, superstition, and vice, do abound in many places therein, and that it has pleased our gracious Sovereign the King, out of his royal bounty, to bestow yearly the sum of L.1000 sterling, to encourage itinerant preachers and catechists to go to the foresaid Highlands and Islands, for assisting the ministers established there, in giving the people in those parts such instruction as is necessary to enlighten and arm them against the practices of many Popish priests that resort thither to pervert and seduce them from the profession and principles of the reformed religion; and the General Assembly being glad of such an opportunity of advancing the interest of religion and good of their country, under such favourable circumstances, with so great encouragement and assistance, and earnestly desirous to improve the same, and to promote his Majesty's pious design; and seeing they cannot do what is necessary in that matter during the short time of their continuing together, and that it is proper there be a standing committee of fit persons, such as may best attend and be most useful, appointed for this matter, to meet frequently in the intervals of the General Assemblies: The General Assembly do, by these presents, nominate, commission, and appoint, the Reverend Mr James Alston, minister of the Gospel at Dirleton, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and for disposing upon the foresaid royal bounty for the ends above mentioned, and according to his Majesty's grant; and do hereby renew the powers contained in the fifth Act of the General Assembly, anno 1727, and eighth Act of the Assembly, in the year 1728, entitled, "Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and Managing the King's Bounty for that end," and the several acts therein mentioned, which are held as here repeated; and any seven of the foresaid persons are declared to be a quorum, whereof four are always to be ministers. And the fore-said committee are appointed to have their meetings in Edinburgh, in the Hall of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the last Thursdays of every month, at three o'clock in the afternoon, and also the first lawful day after the adjournment of the four stated diets of the Commission of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon; with power to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find needful, and with power to nominate ministers, preachers, and catechists, to go in mission to the foresaid parts; and such ministers as they shall appoint to go in mission are hereby empowered to act as members of Presbyteries and Synods while within their bounds, and keep sessions for discipline. And the General Assembly does hereby continue the forenamed Mr John Dundas of Philipston, Procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, and for laying out the same in the terms of his Majesty's grant, and according to the orders and directions of the foresaid committee; and the said committee are enjoined to take special care that the foresaid money be no otherwise disposed of than for the purposes contained in the royal grant, and not only that those who receive thereof be duly qualified in all respects for what they are to be employed in by the foresaid committee, but also that they do punctually serve for the same, according to the rules of the former committee, contained in their register, and be ordered and enjoined to observe the same; and the said committee are required, besides the register of their actings, to keep distinct books of accounts how the foresaid money is bestowed; and which books of accounts are to be patent to any concerned, who please to inspect the same; and the said committee are appointed to keep a correspondence with the Commission of this Assembly, also with the foresaid Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and with the Synods and Presbyteries concerned in the Highlands and Islands, and places in the North of this Church, and where Popery does abound; and the said Commission are empowered to concur with the said committee in their work, when applied unto for that effect; also, the said committee are ordained and empowered to state the accounts of their distribution of the foresaid royal bounty, and to lay the same before the Lord High Treasurer, or Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, or Barons of Exchequer in Scotland, according to his Majesty's royal pleasure expressed in the foresaid grant; and also to lay the same before the next General Assembly, with the register of their actings and proceedings. And, lastly, this committee are to continue till another committee be appointed in their room; and members, especially those in Edinburgh, are required to give punctual attendance on all the diets of this committee, and when they cannot do it to send their excuse; and the clerk of the said committee is ordered to keep an exact account of the attendance of members, and lay the same before the next General Assembly, in so far as the excuses for absence are not sustained by the committee.

Sess. 18, May 14, 1729, post meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs remitted to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, so as to determine therein themselves, for want of time, do therefore nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr James Alston, minister at Dirleton, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this Assembly, any thirty-one of whom are declared to be a quorum, whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers; with power to them to cognosce and finally determine as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred, to them by any act or order of this Assembly, which commissioners are hereby ordained to convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh, the first free day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, and afterwards the second Wednesdays of August, November, and March next, and oftener, when and where they shall think convenient; with power to them to choose their own moderator. And this General Assembly do hereby renew the powers granted by the late General Assembly to their commissioners by their Act, dated the 14th day of May last, entitled, "Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them," and the instructions therein mentioned in all points; and ordains this Commission to proceed according thereunto, and report to the next General Assembly.

IX.

Sess. ult., May 16, 1729.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at dinburgh, upon the second Thursday of May next to come, 1730 years.

The General Assembly was concluded with prayer, singing of the 133d Psalm throughout, and pronouncing the blessing.

IV.

Sess. 10, May 21, 1730.—Act concerning the Management of the King's Royal Bounty for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

The General Assembly did approve of the rules laid down by the committee of the last Assembly for managing his Majesty's bounty for reformation of the Highlands and Islands, in their letters to Presbyteries for the regular distribution of the foresaid bounty, and do appoint all concerned hereafter punctually to observe the same; particularly, the Assembly ordains the several Presbyteries to insert in their registers the committee's appointments of the designations, salaries, and stations, of the respective missionaries, and enjoins them to have an exact regard thereto, in all the letters that they shall write about the said missionaries, and in giving of their certificates to them. And the Assembly also appoints the several Presbyteries to direct all their letters concerning missionaries in their bounds only to the moderator of the committee, and ordains that the said letters be signed, at the appointment of the Presbytery, by the moderator or clerk thereof. And the General Assembly does discharge for the future any payments to be made of the salaries of missionaries, except upon receipts from the missionaries themselves, and upon certificates from Presbyteries, bearing that they have served the time mentioned in the receipts, yet reserving liberty to the committee, when they first employ missionaries, to allow them, upon their own receipts as above, one quarter's salary per advance, if they find it necessary; provided always, that before the said new missionaries receive their second quarter, they produce certificates of their service for the whole half year preceding. And the General Assembly likewise appoints that all the committee's accounts with their cashier be duly signed and attested, and immediately thereafter recorded in the book prepared for that effect; and in regard the Barons of his Majesty's Exchequer did, upon the 7th of July 1729, allow twenty-five pounds sterling per annum of the expenses in managing the royal bounty, to be for the future stated in the accounts thereof that shall be laid before them; therefore, the General Assembly declares the Church's annual allowance of five hundred pounds sterling to be in so far relieved of the burden laid upon it by the Act of the last Assembly, dated the 13th day of May 1729, post meridiem. And the Assembly appoints a particular account of all money disbursed in managing the foresaid bounty to be annually stated by the committee, and laid with their report before the Assembly, for their approbation; and this without prejudice to the other heads of the foresaid Act of Assembly, which the General Assembly appoints to take effect, according to the committee's acts dated August 25, 1725, and May 9, 1726, approved in the subsequent Assemblies.

V.

Sess. 14, May 23, 1730, ante meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, so as to determine therein themselves, for want of time, do therefore nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the College of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this Assembly, and any thirty-one of them are declared to be a quorum, whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers; with power to them to cognosce, and finally determine, as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred, to them by any act or order of this Assembly; which commissioners are hereby ordained to convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh, the first free day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, and afterwards the second Wednesdays of August, November, and March next, and oftener, when and where they shall think convenient; with power to them to choose their own moderator. And this General Assembly do hereby renew the powers granted by the late General Assembly to their commissioners, by their Act dated the 14th day of May last, entitled, "Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them," and the instructions therein mentioned in all points; and ordains this Commission to proceed according thereunto; and all affairs referred to the late Commission, not yet finally determined, are hereby remitted to the Commission of this Assembly, to be proceeded in until the same be finished; and this Commission is to report to the next General Assembly.

VI.

IV.

Sess. 9, May 14, 1731, post meridiem.—Act and Overture concerning the Method of Planting Vacant Churches.

The General Assembly, considering the inconveniences and divisions that have arisen, in planting of vacant parishes, occasioned partly by Presbyteries not following an uniform method in supplying those vacancies with Gospel ministers, and that those evils may be in part remedied and prevented, they appoint that Presbyteries, when the planting of any parish falls into their hands, tanquam jure devoluto, take care to have the same supplied with a well qualified Gospel minister, to labour amongst the people for their spiritual edification; and in order thereunto, they shall appoint one or more of their number to meet with the heritors, being Protestants, and the elders who represent the people, that they may elect and call one to be their minister, whom they are to propose to the whole congregation, to be either approved or disapproved by them; and the disapprovers to offer their reasons to the Presbytery of the bounds at whose judgment, and by whose determination, the calling and entry of a minister is to be ordered and concluded. And when the like case happens in royal burghs, that the call or election be by the magistrates, town-council, and kirk-session, where there is no landward parish; and where there is a part of the parish in landward, the call or election shall be by the magistrates, town-council, kirk-session, and heritors of the landward parish.

And that there may be no unnecessary delays in planting of churches, the Assembly further ordain, that Presbyteries when applied unto, within the six months after the vacancy for supplying thereof, by consent of the patron and others concerned, shall forthwith proceed to the planting of the vacant charge, in the manner and way above specified, without putting off till the six months be elapsed: And the Assembly recommends to all ministers, preachers, and members of this Church, to take care that they do not encourage or go into any method for planting vacant churches, contrary to or inconsistent with this rule.

The General Assembly do transmit this overture to the several Presbyteries of this Church, that they may return their opinion to the next Assembly, whether it shall be turned into a standing act; and the General Assembly do enjoin Presbyteries, in the meantime, to observe it until the next Assembly. And in case Presbyteries shall neglect to send up their opinion upon it, the General Assembly do appoint the overture to be laid before the next General Assembly to be passed into a standing act or not, as they see cause.

V.

Sess. 10, May 15, 1731, ante meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, so as to determine therein themselves, for want of time, do therefore nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr James Smith, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this Assembly, and any thirty-one of them are declared to be a quorum, whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers; with power to them to cognosce, and finally determine, as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred, to them, by any act or order of this Assembly; which commissioners are hereby ordained to convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh, the first free day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, and afterwards the second Wednesdays of August, November, and March next, and oftener, when and where they shall think convenient; with power to them to choose their own moderator. And this General Assembly do hereby renew the powers granted by the late General Assembly to their commissioners, by their act, dated the 23d day of May last, entitled, "Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them," and the instructions therein mentioned in all points; and ordain this Commission to proceed according thereto; and all affairs referred to the late Commission, not yet finally determined, are hereby remitted to the Commission of this Assembly, to be proceeded in until the same be finished; and this Commission is to report to the next General Assembly.

 VI.

Sess. 10, May 15, 1731, ante meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Management of the King's Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration the great extent of many parishes in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and that by reason thereof ignorance, Popery, superstition, and vice, do abound in many places therein, and that it has pleased our gracious Sovereign the King, out of his royal bounty, to bestow yearly the sum of .L.1000 sterling, to encourage itinerant preachers and catechists to go to the foresaid Highlands and Islands, for assisting ministers established there in giving the people in those parts such instruction as is necessary to enlighten and arm them against the practices of many Popish priests that resort thither; and finding that divers preceding General Assemblies have appointed some ministers and elders for managing of the royal bounty for the end foresaid; and it being necessary the like be now done, the General Assembly do, by these presents, nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr James Smith, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, Messrs William Hamilton, Professor of Divinity in the University of Edinburgh, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for disposing upon the foresaid royal bounty according to his Majesty's grant; and the General Assembly do hereby renew the powers contained in the seventh Act of the General Assembly, 1729, and the several acts therein mentioned, also the regulations contained in the fourth and sixth Acts of the Assembly, 1730, which are held as here repeated; and any seven of the foresaid persons are declared to be a quorum, whereof four are always to be ministers, and the foresaid committee are appointed to have their meetings in Edinburgh, in the Hall of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the last Thursday of every month, at three o'clock in the afternoon, and also the first lawful day after the adjournment of the four stated diets of the Commission of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, except when it falls to be Saturday, and then the meeting is to be on the Monday following; with power to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find needful, and with power to nominate ministers, preachers, and catechists, to go in mission to the foresaid places; and the General Assembly do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, Mr William Grant, Advocate, Procurator for the Church of Scotland, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, he giving bond and caution to hold account for what thereof he receives, and to pay out the same as he shall be ordered by the foresaid committee, and according to their rules and directions; and the foresaid committee are hereby empowered to account with the heirs and representatives of the deceased Mr John Dundas of Philipston, late cashier of the foresaid royal bounty, and, upon payment of the balance that was in his hands, to discharge the same, and to put the foresaid balance in the hands of the said Mr William Grant, who is to lay it out as he shall be directed by the said committee. And, lastly, the foresaid committee are enjoined to take special care to observe the whole directions contained in the foresaid seventh Act of the said General Assembly, 1729; and the said committee are likewise to have a particular regard to the regulations agreed upon by the foresaid committee upon the 30th September last, and to take care that Presbyteries and others concerned observe the same.

VII.

Sess. 12, May 17, 1731, post meridiem.—Act and Recommendation in favour of the Infirmary or Hospital for Diseased Poor at Edinburgh.

The General Assembly, considering that by an Act of the Assembly, 1728, for very weighty causes therein set forth, a collection in all the parish churches was recommended to be made, for encouraging the laudable design of erecting in Edinburgh an infirmary or hospital for diseased poor; and it being represented to this Assembly that the foresaid hospital was actually erected some years ago, and that, by the blessing of God upon that pious undertaking, many diseased poor have been successfully cured of very dangerous distempers, and dismissed in good health, able to work for their livelihood, and that the said hospital is open to all objects throughout the nation, who are readily received upon application, and not only carefully attended by able physicians, chirurgeons, and nurses, and furnished with proper medicines, but also well attended and accommodated with convenient lodging in the house, and furnished with the diet fit for them, by the prescription of physicians; all which requires a considerable expense for servants' wages, and otherwise; and the Assembly being informed that the far greater part of parishes have yet sent in no collections, do, therefore, in the most earnest manner, recommend to all those parishes who have not made or sent in their collections, that with all the expedition they can they would proceed to make the same; and for that end, that ministers cause intimate the Act and recommendation of the Assembly, 1728, and also this present act, upon a Lord's Day immediately preceding the day in which the collection is to be made; and recommends it to ministers to represent to the people the great usefulness of this charity, and exhort them to contribute to the carrying on a work so beneficial to their distressed countrymen, and which the more the fund is enlarged will be of more extensive usefulness; all that hath been hitherto contributed, though many charitable persons have given liberal donations, being far from sufficient to answer the demands of help that are made for the many objects that offer. And the Assembly appoints the money collected to be sent to David Spence, Secretary to the Bank of Scotland, according to the directions given in the foresaid Act of Assembly, 1728.

VIII.

Sess. ult., May 18, 1731.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, upon the first Thursday of May next to come, being the 4th day of that month, in the year 1732, in this the ordinary place of their meeting.

This General Assembly was concluded with prayer, and singing a part of the 122d Psalm, from the 6th verse to the close, and pronouncing of the blessing.

IV.

Sess. 8, May 12, 1732.—Act and Recommendation of the General Assembly for encouraging a Collection towards the further Propagating of Christian Knowledge.

The General Assembly having, at a former diet, presented to them a petition for the general meeting of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, showing, "That the said Society, erected by royal authority, having had the countenance of the General Assembly and other judicatories of this Church, and assistance of many ministers and other charitable persons therein, and in England, have been enabled, by the blessing of God, to carry on the design of their erection with good success, so that they have at present the number of 105 schools, at which there are about 4146 scholars, besides that there are great numbers who have been taught thereat formerly; and by reports of ministers and other correspondents who have visited these schools, it appears that many are not only taught reading English, and the principles of our holy religion, but writing and arithmetic, also the common tunes sung in churches, and the English language is spreading in the Highlands and Islands; and care is taken that the rising generation be brought up in the abhorrence of vice, and in love with piety and virtue. In parishes where formerly few or none of the common people could read, but were living in gross ignorance and superstition, there are now about 300 who can read, in others 400, yea, 500, and upwards, reading the Holy Scriptures and other pious books, and the young ones reading to their aged parents and others in the family; and in the parishes where it does not appear that ever the holy sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, ministers have had the freedom to celebrate the same with comfort.

"That Dr Daniel Williams, a pious Presbyterian minister in England, lately deceased, did give a large sum to this Society towards promoting Christian knowledge in Scotland, and also did mortify some lands, to the value of L.68 sterling yearly rent, to be paid in to the said Society, at the end of one year after they should have three missionary qualified ministers to abide in infidel foreign countries; and it being thought a pity that such a charitable fund should not be employed accordingly, but lost to the Society, they have agreed to essay this good work, and have settled a correspondence with his excellency the Governor of New England in America, and divers mi nisters and gentlemen there, in order to the finding out and employing fit persons for instructing the native Indians, and a very agreeable return is already come from the foresaid correspondents, so that in a little time it is expected, that persons shall be set to work for the end foresaid; and from what appears from a former attempt of this nature, in a book lately printed, entitled, ‘Magnalia Christi Americana,’ there is ground to hope for success in this design. But the Society having so much to do at home, by the many schools they maintain, which is not by far the half of what is necessary for the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, they are not in case as yet to do anything considerable for foreign parts, seeing they cannot break their stock, but only dispose of the revenue; but this being a glorious design, and hoping that many good Christians will be ready to concur therein, and perhaps some who have already contributed for schools in the Highlands and Islands will, when they hear of the good effects thereof, again bestow something of what God has given them for advancing the kingdom of Christ in foreign infidel parts, and others may, perhaps, give for this, who do not incline to give for the other; this has encouraged the Society to lay the case before the venerable Assembly.

“That though many Presbyteries, ministers, and others, have done worthily towards the furtherance of the design of this Society in Scotland, yet others have very much neglected the same; and it has been designed to have given in a list of deficient Presbyteries and parishes to the General Assembly, but it has been delayed, waiting their sending in their contributions, both for stock and buying books, and maintaining poor scholars.” And craving to the effect after mentioned.

The General Assembly, again having this day heard the said petition, with the report of their committee thereupon, and considered the same, did unanimously, and hereby do, recommend it to Presbyteries and ministers to deal with charitable Christians in their bounds, to contribute for promoting of Christian knowledge, both at home and abroad; and do ordain, that intimation of these presents be made from the pulpits of all the churches in Scotland, upon or before the first Lord’s Day of August next, that so piously inclined persons may know that such a noble design is carrying on; that they who have a mind to concur therein may give in their contributions to their ministers, or transmit the same to Mr Joseph Cave, merchant in Edinburgh, treasurer to the foresaid Society, with their first conveniency, and a signification how they incline to have their donations bestowed, whether towards maintaining schools in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, or for buying books thereto, or for maintaining poor boys at these schools, or for helping to subsist missionary ministers or schoolmasters in foreign parts of the world; and whether they desire their donations to be added to the stock, and laid out on interest, or bestowed presently on the most pressing exigencies of the Society. And the General Assembly appoints that Presbyteries inquire particularly into ministers’ diligence in this matter, and deal with deficient yet to pay in, and send their written report to the foresaid Society betwixt and the first day of November next.

V.

Sess. 9, May 13, 1732.—Act anent Appeals, and for explaining the Tenth Paragraph of the Fifth Chapter of the Form of Process, agreed to by the Assembly, 1707, anent Appeals.

The General Assembly appoints that, in all time coming, an appeal shall stop the finishing of the settlement of a parish by an inferior judicature, until it is either fallen from or discussed. Nevertheless, a Presbytery may proceed to take trials, serve the edict, and to all the other previous steps towards the settlement—only the ordination or admission shall stop until the appeal be discussed.

VI.

Sess. 11, May 15, 1732.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers and weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint, their reverend brethren, Mr Neil Campbell, Principal of the College of Glasgow, their Moderator, &c. ; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners or their quorum, which is hereby declared to be any thirty-one of the said commissioners—whereof twenty-one are always to be ministers—to meet and convene within the Assembly-House at Edinburgh, the first free day after the dissolution of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, and afterwards the second Wednesdays of August, November, and March, next to come, and oftener, when and where they shall think fit and convenient; with power to the said commissioners to choose their own moderator. And likewise, the General Assembly fully empowers and authorises their said commissioners, or their quorum above mentioned, to cognosce and finally determine, as they shall see cause, in every matter referred, or that shall be referred, to them by any act or order of this Assembly, and to do every thing contained in and conform to the instructions given, or to be given, by this Assembly, and to advert to the interest of the Church on every occasion, that the Church and present establishment thereof do not suffer or sustain any prejudice which they can prevent, as they will be answerable; providing always, that this general clause be not extended to particular affairs or processes before Synods or Presbyteries, that are not of universal concern to or influence upon the whole Church. And it is hereby appointed, that no private processes be determined, except at the four stated diets, and what shall be determined at one diet of the said Commission, with relation to private causes, shall be unalterable by any other diet thereof, and shall stand and continue in force, till disapproved by the General Assembly. And the General Assembly renews the instructions given by the General Assembly, anno 1717, to their Commission, and appoints the same to stand in full force, as instructions to the commissioners above named, and to be observed by them in all points, as if the same were specially here inserted; and that they inquire into the publishing and spreading of books and pamphlets, tending towards the promoting of opinions, of whatever kind, inconsistent with our Confession of Faith, and the recommenders of such books or pamphlets, or the errors therein contained, whether by word, writing, or print, be called before the said Commission, to answer for the same. And further, the said Commission is hereby empowered to receive any references and appeals that shall be made to them from Synods in matters of doctrine, and ripen such affairs for the General Assembly; likewise, to take care that the impressions of the Holy Scriptures, the Confession of Faith and Catechisms, and such books as are authorised by this Church, relating to the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government thereof, be correct, and to give directions about printing the same; they are also appointed, at their first meeting, to take under consideration all representations of the growth of Popery within the bounds of this National Church, and of meeting-houses not authorised by law, which have been brought up to this and former Assemblies, or Commissions thereof, or may be further offered to this Commission, and to apply to the government for a proper remedy and speedy redress. And the said commissioners are hereby strictly prohibited and discharged to meddle in any other matters than what are committed and referred to them as above mentioned, and in all their actings they are to proceed according to the acts and constitutions of this Church, and to do nothing contrary thereto, or to the prejudice of the same; declaring, that in and for all their actings they shall be accountable to and censurable by the next General Assembly, as they shall see cause. And this Commission is to continue and endure until another Commission be appointed, and members are required to attend the diets of the said Commission, and absentees therefrom ordered to be noticed, according to the 17th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1706. And, for the better securing of a quorum and attendance of members on the Commission, the General Assembly prohibits the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and any other Presbyteries within twelve miles thereof, to meet any of the days or weeks appointed for the meeting of this Commission; and such of the members of those Presbyteries as are on the Commission are required all of them to give punctual attendance on the diets thereof; and Presbyteries at a greater distance, who have four or more members on the Commission, are to take care that at least two of them attend each diet of the same.

VII.

Sess. 11, May 15, 1732.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Managing the King's Bounty, and for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

The General Assembly, finding that it has pleased our gracious Sovereign the King, out of his royal bounty, to renew his grant of L.1000 sterling, for encouraging itinerant preachers and catechists, for assisting ministers established in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, in giving the people in those parts such instruction as is necessary to enlighten and arm them against the practices of Popish priests that resort thither; and finding that divers preceding General Assemblies have appointed some ministers and elders for managing of the royal bounty given for the end foresaid, who did yearly account for their management; and it being necessary that some be of new nominated for that effect, the General Assembly do, by these presents, nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr Neil Campbell, Principal of the University of Glasgow, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for disposing upon the foresaid royal bounty, according to, and in terms of, his Majesty's grant above mentioned. And the General Assembly do hereby renew the powers contained in the 6th Act of the late General Assembly, anno 1731, and the 7th Act of the General Assembly, 1729, and the several Acts therein mentioned; also the regulations contained in the 4th and 6th Acts of the General Assembly, anno 1730, which are held as here repeated; and any seven of the foresaid persons are declared to be a quorum, whereof four are always to be ministers; and the foresaid committee are appointed to have their meetings in Edinburgh, in the Hall of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the last Thursday of every month, at three o'clock afternoon, and also the first lawful day after the adjournment of the four stated diets of the Commission of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, except when it falls to be on Friday or Saturday, and then the meeting is to be on the Monday next thereafter; with power to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find needful. And the said committee are hereby empowered to nominate ministers, preachers, and catechists, in the terms before mentioned, to go in mission to the foresaid places, and assign them their several posts, and determine the time of their continuance therein, and to inquire anent their diligence, faithfulness, and carriage, and what their salaries shall be, and give orders about the payment thereof, as the said committee shall see cause. And the General Assembly do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, Mr William Grant, Procurator for the Church of Scotland, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, and to pay out the same as he shall be directed and ordered by the foresaid committee, and according to their rules and directions; and the said committee are likewise to have a particular regard to the regulations agreed upon by the foresaid committee, upon the 30th of September 1730, and to take care that Presbyteries and others concerned observe the same.

VIII.

Sess. 11, May 15, 1732.—Act anent the Method of Planting Vacant Churches.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration how necessary it is that (until it shall please God, in his Providence, to relieve this Church from the grievances arising from the act restoring patronages) there should be an established rule for the planting of vacant parishes, when the right of doing so falls into the hands of Presbyteries, either tanquam jure devoluto, or by the consent of such as have interest; and that there may be a uniform method followed by Presbyteries in this matter, and so the unhappy debates and divisions which have often fallen out upon such occasions may be prevented in time coming; and also, that it may be evident that this Church desires to have all the parishes in it settled in such a manner as may give reasonable satisfaction to all concerned; therefore, enacts and ordains, that all Presbyteries, when the planting of any parish shall fall into their hands, tanquam jure devoluto, take care to have the same supplied by a well qualified Gospel minister, to labour among the people for their spiritual edification. And, in order thereunto, when application shall be made unto them by any two or more of the heritors and elders, jointly or separately, for the moderation of a call, the Presbytery shall appoint intimation to be made from the pulpit of the vacant parish, ten free days before the meeting for that effect, that a call is to be moderated, and shall appoint one or more of their number, who, after sermon, shall meet with the heritors and elders of the vacant parish, in presence of the congregation, upon the day fixed for the moderation, to moderate in a call to one to be minister of the parish, who is to be elected and called by the heritors and elders in a conjunct meeting. That after the finishing of the election, the person so elected to be minister shall be proposed to the congregation, to be either approved or disapproved of by them. That the disapprovers shall offer their reasons to the Presbytery of the bounds, at whose judgment, and by whose determination, the calling and entry of the minister shall be ordered and concluded, according to the rules of this Church. That in case of vacancies in royal burghs, the election or call shall be by the magistrates, town-council, and elders, in a joint meeting, where there is no landward parish; and by the magistrates, town-council, heritors, and elders, in a joint meeting, where part of the parish is to landward. And the General Assembly declares, that all heritors, being Protestants, who shall be willing to subscribe the call by themselves, or their lawful proxies, or who shall, by a writing under their hand, invite the person called to be minister of the parish, and to exercise the duties of his ministerial function, and promise to encourage him in it, shall be admitted to vote in calls or elections of ministers to vacant parishes. And that no vote, either of heritors or elders, shall be sustained, except such as shall have either signed the call, or for whom there shall be produced a writing in the manner and to the purpose above mentioned, in presence of the minister moderating in the call. And in case of difference amongst the heritors and elders about the person to be elected, the minister moderating is appointed to reduce what shall be alleged on both sides into a minute, containing the true matters of fact impartially, and to lay the same before the Presbytery for their decision. And in case no application shall be made to the Presbytery in manner foresaid, by the heritors or elders, for moderating a call within six months after the jus devolutum begins to take place, the General Assembly recommends it to Presbyteries to plant vacant churches in such manner as shall contribute most to the advancement of religion, and to the peace and comfort of parishes.

And that there may be no unnecessary delays in planting of churches, the Assembly further ordains, that in case within the six months next after the vacancy, such as have interest shall show their disposition to comply with this ecclesiastical rule, by applying to the Presbytery to have the parish planted in the way and manner above specified, the Presbytery shall proceed to the settlement thereof in the foresaid way and manner, without putting it off till the said six months are expired. And the General Assembly recommends it to all ministers, preachers, and members of this Church, to take care that they do not encourage nor go into any method for planting vacant churches contrary to or inconsistent with this act.

Sess. 10, May 14, 1733, ante meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Management of the King's Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly, finding that divers late General Assemblies had granted commissions to some ministers and ruling elders for reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and management of his Majesty's royal bounty for that end; and the Assembly finding that it has pleased our gracious Sovereign the King, out of his royal bounty, to renew his grant of L.1000 sterling for the end foresaid, therefore, they do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, Mr John Gowdie, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c. ; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for managing the royal bounty for the end foresaid, according to, and in terms of, his Majesty's grant above mentioned ; and do hereby renew the powers granted to the said committee by the 7th Act of the General Assembly, anno 1732, and the whole Acts therein mentioned, in all points. Any seven of the foresaid persons are declared to be a quorum, whereof four are always to be ministers ; and the foresaid committee are appointed to have their meetings in the Hall of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the last Thursday of every month, at three o'clock afternoon, and also the first lawful day after adjournment of the four stated diets of the Commission of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, except when it falls to be on Friday or Saturday, and then the meeting is to be on the Monday next thereafter ; with power to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find needful, and to keep a correspondence with the Commission of this Assembly, and Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee. And the General Assembly do hereby nominate and appoint Mr William Grant, Advocate, Procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, and to pay out the same as he shall be directed and ordered by the foresaid committee, and according to their rules.

V.

Sess. 10, May 14, 1733, ante meridiem.—Act concerning some of the Ministers of the Presbytery of Dunfermline, and for preserving the Subordination of the Judicatories of the Church, and good Order therein.

The General Assembly, having fully and maturely considered the disobedience of Mr James Wardlaw and Mr Ralph Erskine at Dunfermline, Mr John Gib at Cleish, Mr Daniel Hunter at Carnock, Mr John Geddes at Culross, and Mr Thomas Mair at Orwell, ministers of the Gospel, members of the Presbytery of Dunfermline, to the Act of the General Assembly, dated the 12th day of May 1732, and several Acts of the Commission of the said Assembly, appointing the said Presbytery to enrol Mr Robert Stark, minister of Kinross, as a member thereof ; and the behaviour and conduct of the said ministers before this Assembly, during their procedure on the said affair ; do judge it highly contrary to, and utterly inconsistent with, the subordination of judicatories, happily established among us, and the duty they owe to the said judicatories, which they had engaged to perform at their ordination, and, therefore, deserving the highest censures : Yet the Assembly, inclining to show all tenderness towards the said brethren, they appoint them to be sharply rebuked in their presence, and appoint and command them to own Mr Robert Stark as minister of the Gospel at Kinross, to encourage and strengthen his hands in the Lord's work in the said parish, and to discourage all separation from, and non-subjection to, his ministry. And the Assembly do hereby strictly inhibit and discharge the said brethren from admitting any of the parish of Kinross to sealing ordinances, without the consent of Mr Robert Stark, according to the 12th paragraph of the Act of Assembly, February 7, 1645. And, further, the Assembly do hereby strictly discharge the offering, admitting, or receiving any protest or dissent, by any member of the said Presbytery, or other person whatsoever, against the said Mr Stark's sitting and acting in the Presbytery of Dunfermline, as a member thereof, and minister of Kinross. And they empower the Commission to be appointed by them to summon before them any person or persons who shall offer any such protest or dissent, and also the said Presbytery, if they shall receive or admit the same, and censure the said persons or Presbytery as they shall see cause. And, in regard several within the bounds of the said Presbytery do withdraw from the ministry of their respective pastors, therefore, the Assembly does hereby enjoin the observation of the Act of Assembly, dated the 24th day of August 1647, "Against such as withdraw themselves from the Public Worship in their own Congregation ;" and ordains the foresaid paragraph of the Act 1645, and the said Act 1647, to be publicly intimated by the ministers of the Presbytery of Dunfermline, from their respective pulpits, on any Lord's Day of June next, with suitable exhortations. And the Assembly appoints the said ministers to appear before the Commission to meet in August next, and to report their obedience to this whole Act and appointment; and appoints and requires the said Commission, in case of disobedience or non-compearance, to proceed to the highest censures, if they see occasion for it, then, or any subsequent diet or meeting of the Commission.

And because the brethren within the bounds of the Presbytery of Dunfermline who have done their duty, in obeying the appointment of the Assembly, may be in hazard of being discouraged in the exercise of their ministry, by persons of a schismatical and divisive temper, notwithstanding of what is contained in this present Act; therefore, the Assembly, considering that these brethren deserve all encouragement, do enjoin their Commission to receive any complaint that may be offered by any of these brethren, and to judge and censure, as they shall see cause, any minister or ministers, or others, who shall give them disturbance or discouragement in their work. And appoints this Act to be read in the first meeting of the Presbytery of Dunfermline, and recorded in their register; and that this Act be printed and published among the other Acts of the Assembly.

VI.

Sess. 10, May 14, 1733, ante meridiem.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do nominate, commission, and appoint, their reverend brethren, Mr John Gowdie, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners or their quorum, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as that of last year.)

VII.

Sess. 12, May 15, 1733, ante meridiem.—Act and Sentence concerning Mr Ebenezer Erskine, and some other Ministers adhering to his Protest, for their Contempt of the Authority of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, having at a former diet considered an appeal, entered by Mr Ebenezer Erskine, minister at Stirling, from a sentence of the Synod of Perth and Stirling, wherein the said Synod had found ground to censure him, and appointed him to be rebuked on account of several indecent expressions uttered by him in a sermon preached before the said Synod in October last, tending to disquiet the peace of this Church, and impugning several Acts of Assembly and proceedings of the Church judicatories; and had appointed him to be admonished to behave orderly for the future—the Assembly found these expressions vented by Mr Erskine, and contained in the minutes of the foresaid Synod's proceedings, with the answers thereto, made by him, to be offensive, and to tend to disturb the peace and good order of this Church: Therefore, they approved the proceedings of the Synod, and appointed him to be rebuked and admonished by the Moderator at their own bar, in order to terminate the process, which was done accordingly. But the foresaid Mr Ebenezer Erskine, together with Mr William Wilson, minister at Perth, Mr Alexander Moncrieff, minister at Abernethy, and Mr James Fisher, minister at Kinclaven, gave in a paper at the Assembly's bar, subscribed by them, craving and protesting that the same might be read and recorded in the minutes of the Assembly; but the Assembly having represented to them the irregularity and danger of such a practice, and desired them to withdraw their paper and protest, and they refusing to do it, and withdrawing, they were ordered to be cited to the next diet; and a committee was appointed to consider the paper and their conduct in this affair, and to bring in, by an overture, what might be fit for the Assembly to do upon the whole affair. This day the said four brethren having compeared, the Assembly, to show all tenderness towards them, appointed a committee to confer with them, and endeavour to persuade them to withdraw their paper and protest, and submit themselves to the Assembly; who having retired, did return, and showed that these four brethren continued fully resolved to adhere to their said paper and protest. Then the Committee reported that they had considered the paper given in by the foresaid brethren the last night, and the whole of their conduct. The said paper being produced, was read, the tenor whereof follows:—

PROTEST BY MR EBENEZER ERSKINE AND OTHERS, GIVEN IN TO THE ASSEMBLY, 1733.

Although I have a very great and dutiful regard to the judicatories of this Church, to whom I own my subjection in the Lord, yet, in respect the Assembly have found me censurable, and have tendered a rebuke and admonition to me, for things I conceive agreeable unto and founded upon the Word of God, and our approved standards; I find myself obliged to protest against the foresaid censure, as importing that I have, in my doctrine, at the opening of the Synod of Perth, October last, departed from the Word of God, and the foresaid standards; and that I shall be at liberty to preach the same truths of God, and to testify against the same or like defections of this Church, upon all proper occasions. And I do hereby adhere unto the testimonies I have formerly emitted against the Act of Assembly, 1732, whether in the protest entered against it in open Assembly, or yet in my Synodical sermon, craving this my protest and declaration be inserted in the Records of Assembly, and that I be allowed extracts thereof.

EBENEZER ERSKINE.

Edinburgh, May 14, 1733.

We, undersubscribing ministers, dissenters from the sentence of the Synod of Perth and Stirling, do hereby adhere to the above protestation and declaration, containing a testimony against the Act of Assembly, 1732; and asserting our privilege and duty to testify publicly against the same or like defections, upon all proper occasions.

WILLIAM WILSON.

ALEX. MONCRIEFF.

I, Mr James Fisher, minister at Kinclaven, appellant against the sentence of the Synod of Perth, in this question, although the committee of bills did not think fit to transmit my reasons of appeal, find myself obliged to adhere unto the foresaid protestation and declaration.

J. A. FISHER.

The Committee offered their overture upon the whole affair; which being read and considered, the Assembly, by a very great majority, enacted and appointed as follows:—

The General Assembly ordains that the four brethren aforesaid appear before the Commission in August next, and then show their sorrow for their conduct and misbehaviour, in offering to protest, and in giving in to this Assembly the paper by them subscribed; and that they then retract the same. And, in case they do not appear before the said Commission in August, and then show their sorrow, and retract, as said is, the Commission is hereby empowered and appointed to suspend the said brethren, or such of them as shall not obey, from the exercise of their ministry. And, further, in case the said brethren shall be suspended by the said Commission, and that they shall act contrary to the said sentence of suspension, the Commission is hereby empowered and appointed, at their meeting in November, or any subsequent meeting, to proceed to a higher censure against the said four brethren, or such of them as shall continue to offend by transgressing this act. And the General Assembly do appoint the several Presbyteries, of which the said brethren are members, to report to the Commission in August, and subsequent meetings of it, their conduct and behaviour with respect to this Act.

Sess. 3, May 4, 1734.—Address to his Majesty on the Marriage of the Princess Royal.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the Ministers and Ruling Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, now convened in a National Assembly, beg leave, with the greatest sincerity, and with hearts full of joy, to take this first opportunity unanimously to congratulate your Majesty upon the happy marriage of the Princess Royal with his Serene Highness the Prince of Orange, and to assure you, that the satisfaction and pleasure we have upon this joyful occasion is not inferior to that of any of your most faithful and loyal subjects.

The goodness of God, which has directed your Majesty's wisdom to a choice that must both contribute to strengthen the Protestant interest in Europe, and to secure to that most excellent Princess, for whose honour and welfare we have the most tender concern, all the joys and comforts of conjugal life, is what we acknowledge with great thankfulness.

A fresh union of the royal family with the illustrious House of Nassau and Orange, in the person of a Prince who is the worthy heir of our great deliverer King William, to whom, under God, we owe the inestimable blessings of the glorious Revolution, whereby we are rescued from ecclesiastical and civil tyranny, and the establishment of the Protestant succession. The happiness we enjoy under your Majesty's auspicious reign, and the eminent virtues which adorn both their Highnesses, fit to make them shining examples in every rank and station of life, fill us with the greatest hopes that this happy marriage shall produce a series of blessings to this and after ages.

As this Church has, upon all occasions, given undoubted proofs of her great zeal and loyalty to your royal person and government, so we most cheerfully embrace this opportunity of praying Almighty God, that your Majesty may ever have the happiness to possess the hearts and affections of your people, and be a blessing to this and all the Protestant Churches; and, after a long and prosperous reign upon earth, you may exchange your temporal crown for a crown of glory that fadeth not away; and that your imperial crown may be handed down by a succession of Protestant princes, descended of your royal person, to latest posterity, are, and shall be, the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

JA. GORDON, Moderator.

V.

Sess. 7, May 9, 1734, ante meridiem.—Act declaring the seventh Act of the General Assembly, 1730, and eighth Act of Assembly, 1732, to be no longer binding Rules in this Church.

The General Assembly, considering that, whereas, by the penult Act, Sess. 23, Assembly, 1639, it is ordained, that no novation, which may disturb the peace of the Church, and make division, be suddenly proponed and enacted, but so as the motion be first communicated to the several Synods, Presbyteries, and kirks, that the matter may be approved by all at home, and commissioners may come well prepared, unanimously to conclude a solid deliberation upon those points in the General Assembly—and by Act 9th, Assembly, 1697, it is appointed, enacted, and declared, that before any General Assembly of this Church shall pass any Acts which are to be binding rules and constitutions to the Church, the same Acts be first proposed as overtures to the Assembly, and being by them passed as such, be remitted to the consideration of the several Presbyteries of this Church, and their opinions and consent reported by their commissioners to the next General Assembly following, who may then pass the same into Acts, if the more general opinion of the Church, thus had, agree thereunto— and by Act 16th, Assembly, 1700, it is enacted and appointed, that when any thing of public concern and great weight is proposed to the General Assembly, to be passed as overtures or acts for a standing rule to the Church, after the first reading, it be delayed till the next day of the Assembly's sitting, and lie on the table, to be seen and considered by all the members; and likewise, when any thing is passed as overtures by the General Assembly, it is ordained, that all and every Presbytery read them publicly in their Presbyterial meeting—and by Act 18th, Assembly, 1705, it is appointed, that the agent for the Kirk in all time coming, after every Assembly, as soon as the acts thereof shall be printed, do transmit as many copies of the same to every Presbytery within the kingdom as will serve them and each parish within their bounds; and ordains, that both Presbyteries and Sessions, at their first meeting, after receiving of the said Acts, cause read the same, at least so many of them as are of public concern: And whereas the Act 7th, Assembly, 1730, entitled, "Act discharging the Recording of Reasons of Dissent," and Act 8th, Assembly, 1732, entitled, "Act anent the Method of Planting Vacant Churches," were not made according to the said former Acts, and are found hurtful to this Church; therefore the said Acts, 1730 and 1732, are hereby declared to be no longer binding rules in this Church; and the General Assembly recommends unto, and ordains the several judicatories of this Church, when the planting of vacant parishes falls into the hands of Presbyteries, to proceed therein according to the former rules and practice of this Church, that obtained before the making of the said Act, 1732.

VI.

Sess. 10, May 13, 1734.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Management of the King's Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly, finding that divers late General Assemblies had granted commissions to some ministers and ruling elders for reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and management of his Majesty's royal bounty for that end; and the Assembly finding, that it has pleased our gracious Sovereign the King, out of his royal bounty, to renew his grant of L.1000 sterling, for the end foresaid this year; therefore, they do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, Mr James Gordon, minister of the Gospel at Alford, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for managing the royal bounty for the end foresaid, according to, and in terms of, his Majesty's grant above mentioned, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as that of last year.)

VII.

Sess. ult., May 14, 1734.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, finding there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr James Gordon, minister at Alford, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned, with power to the said commissioners, or their quorum, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as the corresponding Act of the immediately preceding years, the following being added, viz.) And the Assembly recommend to their Commission, at their first meeting, to discuss as many of the causes and questions relative to the settlement of vacant churches, which are or shall be referred to them by the Assembly, as they can overtake. And it is further provided, that when any Presbytery or Synod of this Church shall decline to comply with the sentences of the Commission, or to give the same a full execution; in that case, the Commission is hereby prohibited to execute the same, by appointing any such correspondent meetings as has been the practice of late, but shall allow the matter to lie over to the ensuing Assembly, to which such Presbyteries or Synods shall be answerable for such their conduct; and are hereby appointed to send up with their commissioners their reasons for the same.

VIII.

Sess. ult., May 14, 1734.—Act concerning Mr Ebenezer Erskine, and other Ministers, his Adherents; and a Commission and Recommendation to the Synod of Perth and Stirling concerning them.

The General Assembly, considering the great hurt and prejudice that hath at all times arisen, and must yet arise, to the Church, from divisions and animosities creeping in, and taking root amongst the members thereof, notwithstanding their unanimity in sentiments upon material and fundamental points, which more nearly concern the promoting the interests of our blessed Lord and Saviour, the establishing the peace of the Church, and the advancement of practical godliness and true religion within the bounds of it; and, particularly, the lamentable consequences that have followed, and may yet follow, upon the separation of Messrs Ebenezer Erskine, William Wilson, Alexander Moncrieff, and James Fisher, from this Church, and judicatories thereof; and judging it their duty to endeavour, by all just and proper means, consistent with the honour and glory of God, and the maintaining the peace and authority of the Church, to restore harmony and brotherly love amongst all the members of it; therefore, the General Assembly, without further inquiring into the occasions or steps of proceeding, either on the part of the said brethren, or by the several judicatories, under whose consideration their case hath been, which may have produced that unhappy separation; but resolving that all questions upon those heads shall for hereafter be comfortably removed, have empowered, and hereby do empower, the Synod of Perth and Stirling, (before whom the exceptions to some part of the conduct of two of these four reverend brethren were first taken and tried,) upon such application made to them as they shall judge proper, to take the case of the said four brethren, as it now stands, under their consideration; with full power to the said Synod to proceed, and do therein as they shall find most justifiable and expedient for restoring the peace, and preserving the authority of this Church, and for promoting the edification of the members of the body of Christ; and, particularly, for uniting the said four brethren to the communion of this Church, and restoring them to their respective ministerial charges; but with this express direction, that the Synod shall not take upon them to judge of the legality or formality of the former proceedings of the Church judicatories in relation to this affair, or either to approve of or censure the same, but shall only, in virtue of the power and authority now delegated to them by the Assembly, proceed to take such steps for attaining the above ends for the future as they shall find just, and tending to edification: And the Assembly do hereby appoint the foresaid Synod to meet at Stirling upon the first Tuesday of July next, and from time to time, to name and appoint the place and diets of their after meetings on the said affair, as they shall see cause, until the matter shall be ripened for a final conclusion; and recommend to them to use their utmost endeavours to bring the matter, as-soon as reasonably can be, to a final and happy issue.

IX.

Sess. ult., May 14, 1734.—Act concerning Ministerial Freedom in this Church.

The General Assembly, considering that some are under apprehensions, that, by the Act 7th of Assembly, 1733, concerning Mr Ebenezer Erskine and others, ministers of this Church, are laid under greater restraints, as to their ministerial freedom, than they were by the rules of this Church before the said Act was passed; therefore, they do, for the satisfaction of all, hereby declare that due and regular ministerial freedom is still left entire to all ministers, and that the same was not, nor shall be, held or understood to be anywise impaired or restrained by the late Assembly's decision in that particular process.

X.

Sess. ult., May 14, 1734.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, upon the second Thursday of May next, in the year 1735.

The General Assembly was concluded with prayer, and singing part of the 122d Psalm, from the 6th verse to the close, and pronouncing the blessing.

WILLIAM GRANT, Cls. Eccl. Scot.

Sess. 10, May 13, 1734.—Remit to Presbyteries concerning an Overture for Planting Vacant Churches.

Whereas the General Assembly have not now time to prepare and transmit a proper overture about the method of planting vacant churches, they recommend to and enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church to take that matter into their consideration, and send up their members to the next General Assembly, instructed to propose such overtures as shall be prepared by the several Presbyteries concerning the same, to be considered by the next General Assembly.

IV.

Sess. 8, May 16, 1735, ante meridiem.—Act reviving a former Recommendation for raising a Fund in each Synod for Maintaining the indigent Widows and Orphans of Ministers therein.

The General Assembly, having considered a scheme proposed for one general fund, to be managed by the General Assembly and their deputies, for maintaining all the widows and orphans of ministers within this National Church; as also, considering the scheme for Synodical funds for that effect, established by the 4th Act of the General Assembly, 1718, and judging that the said scheme for Synodical funds should be adhered to, and vigorously advanced, as being free of several great difficulties which would necessarily occur, both in raising and managing of the more general fund; and there being now no prospect of any success in the said scheme for a general fund; and whereas the project for the said general fund has, for some years past, very much interrupted the usual and ordinary contribution to the Synodical funds, which are, by the above Act of Assembly, 1718, required to be paid in by every minister within two years after his ordination or admission; and whereas the General Assembly, by their 10th Act, 1723, did, with consent of the contributors, enlarge the time formerly allowed for receiving new contributions for one year further, after Whitsunday 1723: The General Assembly, for the encouragement of all who are now desirous to contribute to the said fund, and have neglected it in the time appointed, do again grant a further enlargement of time for that effect, in the manner mentioned in the said 10th Act, Assembly, 1723; and accordingly recommend to ministers, within the several Synods and Presbyteries of this National Church, who have already contributed, that they would consent yet to admit such others to join with them as shall be willing to pay in the decima of their stipend to the said fund, betwixt and the term of Whitsunday 1736, with the annual rent thereof from the time it should first have been paid, conform to the foresaid Acts of Assembly made to that effect.

Sess. 11, May 17, 1735.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, finding that there are divers weighty affairs which they cannot overtake, do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr Alexander Anderson at St Andrews, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned, with power to the said commissioners, or their quorum, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as that of last year.)

VI.

Sess. 11, May 19, 1735.—Act and Recommendation concerning Students in Divinity.

The General Assembly recommends to all Presbyteries and ministers, when they come to know any error or vice in students of divinity, to give notice thereof to the Professor of Divinity under whom such students are taught, with an account how the same can be proved; and also recommends to them not to be rash or hasty in receiving reports to the prejudice of students, but to be careful to discourage groundless or malicious reports, and to protect the characters of such as do not appear to be truly guilty. And the Assembly recommends it to Professors of Divinity to be diligent to inquire concerning the principles and practice of the youth under their care; and do renew their former recommendation to Professors of Divinity, contained in the 22d Act of the General Assembly, 1696, concerning the requiring testimonials from students whom they admit to exercises.

VII.

Sess. 11, May 19, 1735.—Act and Recommendation for Preserving Unity, and Preventing Error within this Church.

The General Assembly, considering, with great grief and regret, that deism, infidelity, Popery, and other gross errors, appear to be very prevalent and threatening in this island at this day; and that it is the duty of this Church to do all in her power, under Divine direction, for suppressing the same, and preventing the growth thereof; therefore, do earnestly recommend it to all ministers and others to have this matter at heart, and to do, under God, what they can for reaching the above ends; and in order thereto, and for their greater success herein, the Assembly earnestly recommend it to all ministers to maintain, as far as in them lies, brotherly love, peace, and unity amongst themselves and amongst the people under their charge; and in all their more public appearances to avoid uncharitable reflections, and all just grounds of irritation, tending to gender strife more than to promote edification.

Sess. 11, May 19, 1735.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and Managing his Majesty's Royal Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly, finding that divers late General Assemblies had granted commissions to some ministers and ruling elders for reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and management of his Majesty's royal bounty for that end; and finding that it has pleased our gracious Sovereign the King, out of his royal bounty, to renew his grant of L.1000 sterling, for the ends foresaid, this year; therefore, they do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr Alexander Anderson at St Andrews, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for managing the royal bounty for the end foresaid, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as that of last year.)

An Address to the King, on occasion of the Marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

Edinburgh, May 15, 1736.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most faithful and most loyal subjects, the ministers and elders now met in a National Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to offer to your Majesty our most sincere and unanimous congratulations, on the joyful occasion of the marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales with the most serene Princess Augusta of Saxe-Gotha.

As the Church of Scotland has never failed to give convincing proofs of her loyalty to your Majesty, and of her steady attachment to the Protestant succession in your most august house, so it cannot but fill our hearts with joy and gratitude, when we reflect on the goodness of God, and your Majesty's fatherly care and wisdom, in thus providing for the lasting continuance of those invaluable blessings, secured to your people by the happy Revolution, and the settlement of the crown in the Protestant line.

We may expect, through the favour of God, from this auspicious alliance, that there will never be wanting princes, descendants of your Majesty, to support and assert the Protestant cause against Popery and arbitrary power, and to prove in their day what the magnanimous Elector of Saxony was in his, and your Majesty is in ours.

That a rich increase of comforts may flow upon your Majesty from this desirable event;—that all felicities may be poured out on their Royal Highnesses, and all your royal family,—that your Majesty may long be preserved for a blessing to your people, blessed by them, and by all the Protestant Churches, till after all earthly joy and prosperity an eternal crown is conferred upon you; and that your Majesty's royal offspring may, to the end of time, fill the throne of these realms, is, and shall be, to the Almighty God, the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

LAUCHLAN M'INTOSH, Moderator.

Sess. 5, May 18, 1736.—Act about Praying for the Royal Family.

The General Assembly, considering that it hath pleased God to bless this nation with an addition to the royal family, by the happy marriage of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, do, therefore, enjoin all the ministers of this Church that they pray for her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, as well as for his Majesty King George, his royal consort the Queen, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Duke, the Princesses, and all the Royal Family; and that her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales be named immediately after the Prince.

VI.

Sess. 7, May 20, 1736.

The General Assembly called for the report of the commissioners sent to London by the late Assembly to solicit and endeavour the redress of the grievance of patronage, and repeal of the Act, anno decimo Annæ, reimposing the same; and they produced their said report, with a copy of their address to his Majesty, the tenor of which address follows:—

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of Mr Alexander Anderson, Moderator of the last General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, Mr James Gordon, Minister, and Colonel John Erskine of Carnock, Ruling Elder, commissioners appointed for that Church by the said Assembly, 1735.

May it please your Majesty,

The Church of Scotland, after great sufferings, was, at the late happy Revolution, restored, by the gracious Providence of Almighty God, to the possession of her former rights and privileges, so long contended for. His Majesty King William, of immortal memory, was then the glorious instrument of her deliverance, and, at the same time, of delivering Great Britain from Popery and slavery.

Amongst other great and worthy things done at that memorable juncture for the Church and people of Scotland, the power of patrons to present ministers to churches was abolished, by an Act of Parliament, in consequence of the Scots Claim of Right in the year 1690, for which the patrons obtained a recompence, and were also allowed to retain all the temporal benefits of patronage which they had formerly enjoyed.

By the same Act of Parliament another method of settling ministers in churches was established, in the exercise of which, that great point in the constitution of a church, viz.—the establishing of a just relation between pastor and people, was managed with much calmness, decency, and order; and the ministers thus established, by the Divine blessing on their labour, were successful in the work of the Gospel, and religion and loyalty daily gained ground against profane principles and practices, and against disaffection to the civil government.

By the Act of Union, which passed by the Parliaments of both the British nations, and was made the fundamental constitution of the Kingdom of Great Britain, this freedom from the presentations of patrons, and the said method appointed for settling ministers in churches, did, with the other rights and privileges of the Church and people of Scotland, become an essential and fundamental part of the foresaid constitution of Great Britain.

Notwithstanding whereof, certain disaffected persons, at a time when the most valuable rights and interests of Britain were thought to be in imminent danger, had the address to procure an Act of Parliament, in the 10th year of the late Queen Anne, rescinding the foresaid Act of Parliament, 1690, that abolished the power of patrons to present ministers, and established the method of their settlement in churches; and that this was done in resentment against the Church of Scotland; and that further threatenings were by these persons breathed out against her, for her firm and loyal adherence to the Revolution interest, and especially to the succession of the crown in your Majesty's royal Protestant family, was not then denied, but boasted of; and is still remembered by all who observed those times.

The bad effects which have thence proceeded to the interests of religion and loyalty, none but an utter stranger to Scotland can be unacquainted with, nor with the grounds of fear that these evils may mightily increase till the cause be removed.

The Church of Scotland having long waited for redress of this heavy grievance, and not having as yet obtained the same, did humbly believe it her duty now again to lay the case, with the utmost dutifulness, before your Majesty, and to implore your most gracious and royal favour and justice, for relieving her from these hardships, which are the more affecting, because of the lamentable consequences thereof, that seem to multiply and increase. Discontents and division appear to be growing upon the one hand, as does disaffection upon the other, whereby irreligion and licentiousness are like to prevail.

As no Act of Parliament can be made or repealed but by your Majesty and Parliament, we, as commissioned by your Majesty's subjects of the Church of Scotland, (whose unshaken loyalty is testified even by her enemies,) do, with hearts zealous for your royal person, family, and government, and zealous also, we hope, for the glory of God and the success of the Gospel, presume most dutifully to approach your sacred person, as the nursing-father of the Church of Christ, and the guardian of your people's rights and privileges, and in name and behalf of our constituents, most humbly to implore,

That it may please your most excellent Majesty to favour the repeal of the foresaid Act of the 10th of Queen Anne, that so the Church and people of Scotland may be restored to their just right and privilege, as to the settling of ministers, secured to them by the above mentioned Act of Union; and that Almighty God may greatly bless and prosper your Majesty's royal person and family, and may remarkably countenance your government, and direct the same to his own glory, your Majesty's honour, and the welfare of your people, is the hearty prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful and most loyal subjects,

ALEXANDER ANDERSON.
JAMES GORDON.
JOHN ERSKINE.

Sess. 8, May 21, 1736.—Act concerning Preaching.

The General Assembly, being moved with zeal for the honour of God and our Lord Jesus Christ, especially at a time when the Christian revelation is openly impugned, and infidelity, deism, and other errors, do so much prevail; they do hereby recommend to all ministers and preachers seriously to consider and observe the Directory of this Church, concerning the preaching of the Word, which is approved by the General Assembly, 1645; and in particular, that they be careful to warn their hearers against any thing tending to Atheism, Deism, Arianism, Socinianism, Arminianism, Bourignonism, Popery, superstition, Antinomianism, or any other errors; and that in their sermons they insist frequently upon the truth, necessity, and excellency of supernatural revelation, the supreme Deity of the Son and Holy Ghost as well as of the Father, together with the oneness of the Godhead; our sinful and lost estate by nature, the necessity of supernatural grace, and of faith in the righteousness of Christ, without which the best works cannot please God; and that they make it the great scope of their sermons to lead sinners from a covenant of works to a covenant of grace for life and salvation, and from sin and self to precious Christ. And the General Assembly recommends to all who preach the Gospel, when they handle the doctrines of God's redeeming love, and of his free grace in the justification and salvation of sinners, the blessings of the Redeemer's purchase, and privileges of the new and better covenant, to study to manage these subjects so as to lead their hearers unto an abhorrence of sin, the love of God and our neighbours, and the practice of universal holiness, seeing it is one great end of the Gospel to destroy the works of the devil, and to teach men to live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world. Upon which account, it is incumbent on all who preach the Gospel to insist not only upon the necessity and excellency of faith in Jesus Christ for salvation, but also upon the necessity of repentance for sin and reformation from it, and to press the practice of all moral duties, both with respect to the First and Second Tables of the Law, as indispensably necessary in obedience to God's command to testify our gratitude to him, to evidence the sincerity of our faith for the benefit of human society, the adorning the profession of religion, and making us meet for eternal life, seeing without holiness no man can see the Lord.

And the Assembly do seriously recommend to all ministers and preachers of the Gospel, that in pressing moral duties or obedience to the law, they show the nature and excellency of Gospel holiness, and enforce conformity to the moral law both in heart and life, not from principles of reason only, but also, and more especially, of revelation; and in order to attain thereto, it is necessary to show men the corruption and depravity of human nature by their fall in Adam, their natural impotence for and aversion to what is spiritually good, and to lead them to the true and only source of all grace and holiness, viz., union with Christ by the Holy Spirit's working faith in us, and renewing us more and more after the image of God; and to let their hearers know that they must first be grafted into Christ, as their root, before their fruit can be savoury unto God; that they must have a new principle to animate, and a new end to direct, them, before their actions become gracious and acceptable in the sight of God; and that they teach them the necessity of living by faith on the Son of God, in a constant looking to and dependence upon him as the great author of all gracious influences for the performance of every duty; and with all, that after their best performances and attainments, they must count them but loss and dung in point of justification before God, and to make it their great desire only to be found in Christ and his righteousness. And that ministers, in application of their sermons, do endeavour rightly to divide the word of truth, speaking distinctly to such various cases of the converted and unconverted, as arise natively from the subjects they have been handling; and that in the whole of their discourses they take care to suit themselves to the capacity of their hearers, as to matter, method, and expression, and to the prevailing sins of the time and place, with all prudent and zealous freedom and plainness; as also, that they make Gospel subjects their main theme and study, and press, with all earnestness, the practice of moral duties in a Gospel manner: And that they forbear delivering anything in public that may tend more to amusement than edification, and beware of bringing into their sermons and public discourses matters of doubtful disputation, which tend to gender strife, rather than to promote the edification of Christians. And the Assembly exhort all to study to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.

And, finally, the General Assembly recommends to all professors of divinity to use their best endeavours to have the students under their care well acquainted with the true method of preaching the Gospel, as above directed; and that Presbyteries, at their privy censures, inquire concerning the observation of this act.

VIII.

Sess. 8, May 21, 1736.—Act anent Acts rescissory.

The General Assembly appoints and enacts that no Act rescissory of any standing Acts of the General Assembly be passed, until such Acts rescissory be first transmitted to the several Presbyteries of this Church, and their general opinion had for rescinding the same.

IX.

Sess. 8, May 21, 1736.—Act appointing Lists of Probationers to be annually presented to the General Assembly.

Whereas the commissioners to the General Assembly from the several Presbyteries within this Church are, by Act of Assembly, the 4th of January 1697, appointed to bring in lists of all the students of divinity who have passed their trials in order to the ministry, to be annually presented to the General Assembly, and recorded in their register; and whereas an overture was transmitted by the last General Assembly to the several Presbyteries for the more exact and effectual execution of the said Act; and whereas the commissioners to this Assembly, from several Presbyteries, have brought up instructions with them, wherein they agree to several of the regulations overtured for the better execution of the said Act; therefore, the General Assembly, in conformity to the said instructions reported to them by their committee, did, and do hereby, enact and appoint, 1mo, That every probationer residing for the space of two months, betwixt this and the next Assembly, within the bounds of any Presbytery in this Church, and, in like manner, annually hereafter, shall, within the said time, present his licence to the said Presbytery; and that the said Presbytery shall cause to be marked in their register the said probationer's name, and likewise the Presbytery which licensed him. 2do, That each Presbytery shall extract from their records annually, in March or April, a complete list of all the probationers then residing within their bounds, or that resided therein for the space before mentioned, immediately preceding either of the said months, mentioning in the said extracts, first, the names of the said probationers licensed by themselves, and then the names of the rest residing as above, together with the names of the Presbyteries that licensed them. 3tio, That the said extracts be annually made out upon the same schedule which bears the Presbytery's commission to the members sent yearly to the General Assembly, and be signed in like manner by the moderator or clerk; and that the said extracts further mention the names of such students as are presently under trials before the said Presbyteries. 4to, That the committee for examining Commissions to the members of Assembly shall annually make up a roll of the said probationers and students from the above mentioned extracts, according to the printed orders of the several Synods and Presbyteries: and that the said roll be presented to the General Assembly as a part of the said committee's annual report, and be recorded in the Assembly's register.

Sess. 8, May 21, 1736.—Act and Recommendation for preserving Purity of Doctrine, and concerning Professor Campbell.

The General Assembly, having resumed the consideration of the affair relating to Mr Archibald Campbell, Professor of Divinity and Ecclesiastical History in the University of St Andrews, they caused to be again read the report of a committee, appointed by the Commission of the late Assembly for purity of doctrine, brought in upon Tuesday last; and which report had been since under consideration of the Committee for Overtures, joined with the other members of Assembly, who thought fit to attend their meetings, and by that committee amended and transmitted with their approbation to the Assembly, as follows:—

Report of the Committee for Purity of Doctrine.

Edinburgh, March 16, 1736.

The committee having, at several different meetings, considered the explications offered by Professor Campbell to the excerpts out of his writings, which had been excepted against by several in this Church; and having given him opportunity of declaring his mind in the fullest manner concerning them, in order to his giving full satisfaction to the objections proposed against him, (as their minutes do show,) did this day agree to make the following report:—

“That at the last meeting of the committee in January, the heads of his writings objected to were reduced to four.

“The first, Concerning the inability of men by their natural powers to find out the being of a God.

“The second, Concerning the law of nature’s being sufficient to guide rational minds to happiness.

“The third, Concerning self-love’s being the sole principle and motive of all virtuous and religious actions.

“The fourth, Concerning the sentiments the Apostles entertained of our blessed Saviour between the time of his death and the day of Pentecost.

“As to the first of these, the committee are of opinion, that though the same, as it is delivered by the Professor in his ‘Oratio Academica,’ is justly exceptionable, as tending to darken and render doubtful the truth of natural religion, and as appearing not to agree with our Confession of Faith, Chap. i. § 1, and Chap. xxi. § 1, and Larger Catechism, Quest. 2, nor with the doctrine of the apostle, Rom. i. 19, 20, 21; yet, having heard his explications and defences upon this head, and being persuaded that he had no intention, by teaching such doctrine, to enervate natural religion, or to give any handle or countenance to the enemies of it, but rather to show the necessity of a supernatural revelation; therefore, it is their judgment, that this should not be insisted upon further than to recommend to him, in the strongest terms, not to teach, by preaching or writing, this doctrine in any time coming.

“As to the second, viz. ‘That the laws of nature are in themselves a certain and sufficient rule to direct rational minds to happiness,’ which was apprehended by some to mean that a supernatural revelation of a Saviour, and faith in him, were not necessary to the happiness of fallen man; the committee having heard and considered his explications, as well those contained in his books, as those offered to the committee, it does not appear to them that this was his meaning, he having declared fully his persuasion of the necessity of a Saviour and faith in him, in order to our justification and salvation; although they cannot but wish he had better guarded his expressions upon this point in the preface to his discourse, ‘The Apostles no Enthusiasts.’

“As to the third, viz. ‘Self-love’s being the sole principle and motive of all virtuous and religious actions,’ which was apprehended to make the glory of God only a subordinate end, and a regard to it only a subordinate motive to the desire of our own happiness; the committee having read and considered his explications, and he having also declared before them, that by his saying, that the chief or sole motive to virtuous and religious actions was the desire of our own happiness, he meant no more but that our delight in the honour and glory of God was that chief motive. They therefore judge, that though the expressions objected against are too high on the side of self-love, (particularly his asserting it to be the sole principle, standard, and motive of all religious actions,) and cannot approve of several other too high expressions he uses on this subject, and are of opinion it may be recommended to him to abstain from using such high expressions in time coming; yet they hope, from what is above mentioned, he has had no unsound meaning in them.

“As to the fourth head, in which it is taken notice of that Professor Campbell had affirmed, ‘That the disciples, during our Saviour’s life, only expected and hoped for a temporal deliverance and worldly kingdom; and that between his death and resurrection they concluded him to be a cheat and an impostor;’ and further, ‘That before his resurrection they had no notion of his divinity;’ the committee, although they are of opinion that Professor Campbell has no just ground for these sentiments, and that they are too disrespectful to Christ’s disciples, whom he honoured to be his apostles, and not consistent with several passages of the Gospel history upon that subject; yet, considering that they contain only his conjectural opinions concerning the inward sentiments of other men, and that our Confession and Catechisms teach nothing concerning these matters; as also, that his design was to give the greater strength to his arguments for vindicating the apostles from enthusiasm; are, therefore, of opinion, that it may be sufficient to recommend it to him, in time coming to abstain from speaking so incautiously upon this subject, and always to maintain the honour that is due to the memory of these eminent instruments of propagating the Christian faith through the world.”

The General Assembly having heard the report of the committee for purity of doctrine in relation to some writings of the Rev. Professor Campbell’s, and having at great length heard Mr Campbell himself upon it, as likewise several members of the committee, and many other members of this Assembly; and finding, that with respect to the first article of the report, the committee have declared, in the report itself, their being persuaded that Mr Campbell had no intention, by teaching the doctrine to which that article relates, to enervate natural religion, or to give any handle or countenance to the enemies of it, but rather to show the necessity of supernatural revelation. And with respect to the second article, that it does not appear to them that it was Mr Campbell’s meaning that a supernatural revelation of a Saviour and faith in him were superfluous, and not necessary to the happiness of fallen man. And with respect to the third article, concerning self-love, that he had declared he meant no more but that our delight in the honour and glory of God was the chief motive of all virtuous and religious actions. And with respect to the fourth article, that the sentiments to which it relates contain only Mr Campbell’s conjectural opinions concerning the inward sentiments of other men; and that our Confession and Catechisms teach nothing concerning these matters; as also, that his design was to give the greater strength to his argument for vindicating the apostles from enthusiasm; are of opinion, that the examining and stating the matter, as has been done by the committee for purity of doctrine, is sufficient for cautioning against the errors that some at first supposed Mr Campbell was guilty of, without giving any judgment or formal sentence upon the report; and therefore do resolve and appoint that the matter rest here. And do recommend to the said Professor Campbell, and to all ministers and teachers of divinity whatsoever within this National Church, to be cautious in their preaching and teaching, or writing, not to use doubtful expressions or propositions, which may be constructed in an erroneous sense, or lead the hearers or readers into error, however sound such words or propositions may be in themselves, or however well intended, but to hold fast the form of sound words.

XI.

Sess. 10, May 24, 1736.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing divers Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, finding that there are divers affairs which they cannot overtake, do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr Lauchlan M'Intosh, minister of the gospel at Errol, their Moderator, &c. ; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners, or their quorum. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as that of the two immediately preceding years, with this addition :)—And the Assembly do further empower and direct the said Commission to make due application to the King and Parliament for redress of the grievance of patronage, in case a favourable opportunity for so doing shall occur during the subsistence of this Commission.

XII.

Sess. 10, May 24, 1736.—Act anent the manner of Electing the Members of the Commission, and concerning their Powers.

The General Assembly enacts, that for hereafter the committee for naming the members of the Commission be appointed to observe that due proportion betwixt ministers and elders, which obtains in the Assembly; and that care be taken by them that such of the nobility, Officers of State, Lords of Session, and Barons of Exchequer, who are to be superadded to the nomination, be in time coming named from the several Presbyteries or burghs which they are to represent in Assemblies; and that such others of them allanarly be superadded, who cannot be named as above; and that this may be evident to the members of the Assembly, the clerks be appointed to extend the rolls in the same order with the rolls of Assembly. 2do, That when any Presbytery of this Church do not comply with the sentences of the Commissions relating to settlement of ministers, or shall not give the same a full execution, in that case the Commission be discharged to execute the same, by appointing any correspondent meetings, but shall allow the matter to lie over till the ensuing Assembly. Lastly, And if any Presbytery refuse to obey the sentences of the said Commission, they are hereby required to give their reasons to the next General Assembly, to whom they are to be accountable for their conduct therein; and they are hereby declared to be ipso facto sisted before the then next General Assembly.

XIII.

Sess. 18, May 24, 1736.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Managing his Majesty's Royal Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr Lauchlan M'Intosh, at Errol, their Moderator, &c. ; to be a committee of this Assembly for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for management of the royal bounty given for that end, according to and in terms of his Majesty's grant; and the General Assembly do hereby renew the powers granted to the said committee by the 8th Act of the late General Assembly, and whole acts therein mentioned, and former commissions to the foresaid committees; any seven of the foresaid persons are declared to be a quorum, whereof four to be ministers; and the foresaid committee are appointed to have their meetings in the place and at the times mentioned in the foresaid 8th Act of the late General Assembly; and with power to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find needful, and to keep a correspondence with the Commission of this Assembly, and the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee of directors, and the Synods and Presbyteries concerned; and the General Assembly do, by these presents, nominate, commission, and appoint, Mr William Grant, Advocate, Procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, and to pay out the same, as he shall be directed and ordered by the foresaid committee, and according to their rules.

XIV.

Sess. ult., May 25, 1736.—Act against Intrusion of Ministers into vacant Congregations, and Recommendation to Presbyteries concerning Settlements.

The General Assembly, considering, from Act of Assembly, August 6, 1575, Second Book of Discipline, Chap. iii. § 4, 6, and 8, registered in the Assembly Books, and appointed to be subscribed by all ministers, and ratified by Acts of Parliament, and likewise the Act of Assembly, 1638, December 17 and 18, and Assembly, 1715, Act 9, that it is, and has been since the Reformation, the principle of this Church—that no minister shall be intruded into any parish contrary to the will of the congregation—do, therefore, seriously recommend to all judicatories of this Church to have a due regard to the said principle in planting vacant congregations; and that all Presbyteries be at pains to bring about harmony and unanimity in congregations, and to avoid every thing that may excite or encourage unreasonable exceptions in people against a worthy person that may be proposed to be their minister, in the present situation and circumstances of the Church, so as none be intruded into such parishes, as they regard the glory of God, and edification of the body of Christ.

XV.

Sess. ult., May 25, 1736.—Act against Perjuries in Custom-houses in Scotland.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration the crying and multiplied abominations of perjury in many of the custom-houses of Scotland, especially in the French wine trade, to the great reproach of religion, the offence of all sober and good men, a wasting of conscience, and diffusing of most pernicious example; and that methods hitherto used for the suppressing of it, according to the Act of Assembly, 1719, have not had the effect that might have been justly expected from it, do not only renew their former testimony against it, in the name of this Church, but also do order and enjoin all the judicatories thereof, as there shall be occasion, to use their best endeavours to put a stop to it, by the conscientious and impartial use of all the means appointed by the Lord Jesus against scandals of such an heinous nature.

XVI.

Sess. ult., May 25, 1736.—Act for better Observation of former Acts of Assembly concerning Students in Divinity and Probationers.

The General Assembly enjoins Presbyteries to take care of the more punctual and exact execution of the Acts of the General Assembly concerning students in divinity, and the time of their studying, licensing probationers, and anent intrants to the holy ministry; and that none coming licensed from abroad be allowed to preach in Scotland till they be re-examined, and come under the engagements, and sign the formula, according to the 10th Act of the General Assembly, 1711; and refers it to the Commission to consider the state of the bursaries, and bring in their opinion concerning the same to the next General Assembly.

XVII.

Sess. ult., May 25, 1736.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, upon the second Thursday of May next, in the year 1737.

The General Assembly was concluded with prayer, and singing part of the 46th Psalm, from the beginning to the 6th verse, and pronouncing the blessing.

WILLIAM GRANT, Cls. Eccl. Scot.

Sess. 1, May 12, 1737.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right trusty and well-beloved, we greet you well. After the repeated proofs which you have given of your zeal for the advancement of true religion and piety, the prosperity of the Church of which you are members, and the good of your country, we cannot but be persuaded you will continue to pursue those measures which may most effectually contribute to the attaining of those desirable ends in this your present meeting, which we therefore most willingly countenance with our royal approbation and authority; and as we are well satisfied of your loyalty and affection for us and our royal family, so you may be assured of our constant resolution to support and maintain the Church of Scotland established by law, in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges.

The dependence which we have on your coming together with these good dispositions and intentions, leaves us no room to doubt of your employing your best endeavours to bring about the great and good purposes for which you are now assembled, by conducing all in your power to the peace and welfare of the Church, the increase of piety and virtue, the preventing of the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of profaneness and immorality, wherein you may rely upon our countenance and encouragement. And as you must be sensible the success of your councils and deliberations will, under God, chiefly depend upon the wisdom, moderation, and charity, with which they are conducted, we earnestly recommend to you to avoid all disputes and contentions among yourselves, and to proceed upon the business proper for your consideration, with that unanimity and brotherly love, as may justly be expected from so venerable a body, and which cannot fail to recommend you to our further favours.

The experience you have had of the capacity and abilities of our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, William Marquis of Lothian, will, we doubt not, render the choice very agreeable to you which we have made of him to represent our royal person in your Assembly, being induced thereto by the knowledge we have of his zeal and loyalty for our service, of his affection and concern for the Church of Scotland, and of his qualifications for the discharge of so great a trust, wherein we hope the prudence with which you will dispatch the business before you will be of great assistance to him. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 23d day of April 1737, in the tenth year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

HOLLES NEWCASTLE.

Directed thus,—To the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 14, 1737.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The great honour done us by your Majesty's most gracious letter, and your royal goodness in condescending to take notice of the zeal of former Assemblies for the advancement of true religion and piety, the prosperity of this Church, and the good of our country, is most encouraging to us, and cannot but animate us warmly to pursue those measures which may most effectually contribute to the attaining the desirable ends of our meeting, which your Majesty has been graciously pleased to countenance with your royal approbation and authority.

It gives us the most sensible joy that your Majesty has been pleased to express your satisfaction with our loyalty and affection for your royal person and family, which we may, with great confidence, assure your Majesty, possesses the hearts of all the members of this Church; and we entirely depend upon the royal assurances you are pleased to give us of your constant resolution to support and maintain the Church of Scotland, established by law, in the full enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges. And we humbly hope, by your royal goodness, to obtain in due time redress of the grievance which has been represented to your Majesty by former Assemblies.

The confidence your Majesty has expressed of our coming together with these good dispositions and intentions, cannot but oblige us to employ our best endeavours to bring about the great and good purposes for which we are now assembled, by conducting all in our power to the peace and welfare of this Church, the increase of piety and virtue, the preventing the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of profaneness and immorality; and for our happy success therein, next to the Divine assistance, we rely upon your Majesty's countenance and encouragement. And as the success of our councils and deliberations must, under God, also greatly depend upon the wisdom, moderation, and charity, whereby they are conducted, so we are obliged to own that we should not act agreeably to the spirit of our holy religion, and the character we bear, if we paid not the highest regard to your Majesty's earnest and pious recommendations, to avoid all disputes and contentions among ourselves, and to proceed upon the business proper for our consideration, with that unanimity and brotherly love which may so justly be expected from us, and which also we are so graciously assured cannot fail to recommend us further to your royal favour.

The experience we have had of the capacities and abilities of the most Honourable the Marquis of Lothian, of his zeal and loyalty for your Majesty's service, of his affection and concern for the Church of Scotland, and of his qualifications for the discharge of so great a trust, renders your Majesty's choice of him to represent your royal person in this Assembly most acceptable to us; and we hope we shall conduct ourselves in the dispatch of the business before us in such a manner as may render the duties of his high station easy to him.

Your Majesty's High Commissioner has delivered to us your royal warrant for the renewal of your charitable donation towards the reformation of the Highlands and Islands for the twelfth year, which we most thankfully receive and acknowledge, as a fresh instance of your Majesty's tender concern for the spiritual as well as temporal interest of your subjects in these more remote and less civilized parts of your British dominions; and as this royal bounty has produced very good effects among them, and has served as an useful mean to counteract the Popish emissaries trafficking in these parts, it shall be our care to employ the same in exact conformity to your royal intentions, that the fruits of it may more and more appear to your Majesty's satisfaction.

That your Majesty's precious life, which is so great a blessing to all your people, and the whole Protestant interest, may be long preserved; that the best of Heaven's blessings may be plentifully poured out upon your royal person, and her Majesty the Queen, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the rest of your royal family; and that, after the crown has long flourished upon your head, you may at length, through Jesus Christ, inherit immortal glory, are, and shall be, the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by NIEL CAMPBELL, Moderator.

Sess. 10, May 23, 1737.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into consideration that there are divers affairs which they cannot overtake, do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr Niel Campbell, Principal of the College of Glasgow, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners, or their quorum, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as that of the year preceding.)

V.

Sess. ult., May 24, 1737.—Act relating to the Tenth Act of the General Assembly, anno 1736.

The General Assembly, considering that the instructions of some of the Presbyteries presented to this Assembly do represent that several have taken offence at the Act of the late Assembly, in the process against Mr Archibald Campbell, Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of St Andrews, as if that Assembly had adopted some of his expressions, which were reckoned offensive, on the head of self-love; therefore, for satisfaction to all concerned, this Assembly does declare, that as the last Assembly, in their Act, say, That they gave no judgment or formal sentence upon the report of the committee, and therefore could not be construed to adopt any of his expressions, so this Assembly do stedfastly adhere to the doctrine of our Church on that head, expressed in our Standards, particularly in the answers to that question in our Shorter and Larger Catechism, "What is the chief end of man?"

VI.

Sess. ult., May 24, 1737.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Managing his Majesty's Royal Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr Niel Campbell, Principal of the College of Glasgow, their Moderator, &c. ; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, for promoting the knowledge of true religion, suppressing of Popery, superstition, and profanity, and for management of the royal bounty given for that end, according to, and in terms of, his Majesty's grant to this Assembly, and the 13th Act of the late General Assembly, and whole Acts therein mentioned, and in former commissions to the said committee; any seven of the foresaid persons are declared to be a quorum, whereof four to be ministers; and the said committee to have their meetings in the Hall of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the last Thursday of every month, at three o'clock afternoon; and also the first lawful day after adjournment of the four stated diets of the Commission of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, except when it falls to be on Friday or Saturday, and then the meeting is to be on Monday next thereafter, with power to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find needful, and to keep a correspondence with the Commission of this Assembly, and Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee. And the General Assembly do hereby nominate and appoint Mr William Grant, Advocate, Procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, and to pay out the same as he shall be directed and ordered by the foresaid committee, and according to their rules.

VII.

Sess. ult., May 24, 1737.—Act superseding the Obligations upon Synods and Presbyteries to maintain Bursars.

The General Assembly, considering that through the multitude of probationers in this Church the reasons of Synods and Presbyteries maintaining bursaries do now cease, the Assembly does supersede the obligation upon Synods and Presbyteries to maintain, as bursars, students in divinity, until the Assembly see fit to revive the same, and leaves it to Synods and Presbyteries, meantime, to apply these funds to other charitable and pious uses as they shall see convenient; but appoints that such as are preferred to bursaries in Synods or Presbyteries shall enjoy them till their ordinary time be run out.

VIII.

Sess. ult., May 24, 1737.—Act concerning the Qualifications of Elders, Members of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, considering the instructions sent up to them from Presbyteries, do strictly enjoin all Presbyteries to be careful that all to be chosen elders of this Church be qualified according to the Acts of the Assembly; and, particularly, that they attest none as members of the Assembly but such as are qualified, not only by subscribing the formula prescribed, but likewise according to all the other qualifications required of such by former Acts of Assembly.

IX.

Sess. ult., May 24, 1737.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held at Edinburgh, upon the second Thursday of May next, in the year 1738.

The General Assembly was concluded with prayer, and singing part of the 72d Psalm, from the 17th verse to the close, and pronouncing the blessing.

IV.

Sess. 6, May 17, 1738.—Act concerning the Ministers seceding from this Church.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration the representations and complaints laid before them concerning Messrs Ebenezer Erskine at Stirling, William Wilson at Perth, Alexander Moncrieff at Abernethy, and James Fisher at Kinclaven, within the bounds of the Synod of Perth and Stirling; also concerning Messrs Ralph Erskine at Dunfermline, Thomas Mair at Orwell, and Thomas Nairn at Abbotshall, within the bounds of the Synod of Fife, ministers ordained in this National Church, and admitted to their respective charges by the judicatories thereof, who have, notwithstanding, seceded from the communion of this Church, and made a positive separation therefrom; and the Assembly having too good reason to believe, from these representations, the notoriety of facts, and from the personal knowledge of many of the members of this Assembly, that the said ministers have seceded from this Church without any justifiable grounds, and are continuing in their unwarrantable secession, notwithstanding their own solemn engagements to the contrary at their ordination and admission, the clemency showed to some of them in the year 1734, and the tenderness to all of them ever since. That, albeit their parochial charges are discontinuous, and at a considerable distance from one another, yet they have assumed a power of associating and erecting themselves into a Presbytery, and of exercising a judicial Presbyterial power, not only over their own congregations, but also over the whole Church, a power to which never any Presbytery, duly constituted in this Church, could or did lay claim. That, as a Presbytery, and in a pretended judicative capacity, they have framed, and published to the world, a printed paper, called their Act, Declaration, and Testimony, and have emitted other papers, wherein they have pretended not only to assign the grounds of their own unreasonable and irregular conduct, but also, with the air of a paramount power and authority, to condemn this Church and the judicatories thereof for their proceedings, and to cast many groundless and calumnious reflections upon her and them. That not confining themselves to their own congregations and particular charges, they dispense the ordinances to persons of other congregations, without the knowledge and consent of the ministers to which they belong, and have taken upon them, in some of these congregations, to ordain elders; and to promote their dangerous schism, they not only receive at their Presbyterial meetings such persons of whatsoever character as will accede to them from other congregations, but also the reasons of their accession, containing injurious calumnies against this Church, and the ministers thereof. And that nothing may be wanting to promote their end, they appoint and keep fasts in different corners of the country, to which there is a resort of several thousands of persons of both sexes, and too many of them, as there is good ground to think, come there with other views than to promote religion; and by these practices their proper ministerial work in their own parishes is in a great measure neglected. And, that their schism may not die with themselves, that they have authorised one of their number to teach divinity, and have taken some persons under probationary trials for the ministry.— The General Assembly did, and hereby do, unanimously resolve, declare, and enact, that although upon these, and other such accounts, this Church might now proceed, in the due exercise of discipline, to appoint these seceding and separating brethren, and their followers, to be proceeded against, and censured according to the demerit of their faults; yet this Assembly, choosing rather still to treat them in the spirit of meekness, brotherly love, and forbearance, did, and hereby do, enjoin all the ministers of this National Church, as they shall have access, and especially the ministers of the Synods and Presbyteries within which these seceding brethren reside, to be at all pains, by conference and other gentle means of persuasion, to reclaim and reduce them to their duty and the communion of this Church; and all Presbyteries and Synods to report their diligence and success, and what they can learn or observe concerning the future behaviour of these brethren, to the Commission to be appointed by this Assembly, at any of the diets thereof; which Commission is hereby authorised and appointed to take such reports or representations, with those already made to this Assembly, under their consideration; and, if they shall see cause, to take all proper steps and methods for duly assisting the separating brethren above named before the next Assembly, to answer for their irregular conduct, and all the parts thereof. And the said Commission is also empowered to do what they shall think proper to prepare and ripen the case for the decision of that Assembly. And, in the meantime, the General Assembly earnestly recommends to all the ministers, elders, and members of this Church, to endeavour, in their respective stations, and by all means proper for them, to reclaim those poor deluded people who have been carried away by this division, and to prevent the seducing of others, and the increase of this schism, which is so dangerous to the peace of this Church, so contrary to the spirit of the Gospel, so very hurtful to religion and serious godliness, to Christian charity, and brotherly love.

V.

Sess. ult., May 23, 1738.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers affairs which they cannot overtake, do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr James Ramsay, minister at Kelso, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners, or their quorum, &c. (The terms of the Act are the same as in the immediately preceding year.)

VI.

Sess. ult., May 23, 1738.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and for Managing his Majesty's Royal Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr James Ramsay at Kelso, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, for promoting the knowledge of true religion, suppressing of Popery, superstition, and profanity, and for management of the royal bounty given for that end, according to, and in terms of, his Majesty's grant to this Assembly, and the 6th Act of the late General Assembly, and whole Acts therein mentioned, and in former commissions to the said committee; any seven of the foresaid persons are declared to be a quorum, whereof some to be ministers; and the said committee to have their meetings in the Hall of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the last Thursday of every month, at three o'clock afternoon; and also the first lawful day after adjournment of the four stated diets of the Commission of this Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, except when it falls to be on Friday or Saturday, and then the meeting is to be on Monday next thereafter; with power to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find needful, and to keep a correspondence with the Commission of this Assembly, and Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee. And the General Assembly do hereby nominate and appoint Mr William Grant, Advocate, Procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, and to pay out the same as he shall be directed and ordered by the foresaid committee, and according to their rules. And it is recommended to the members of the said committee, especially those who reside in or near Edinburgh, to attend the diets thereof punctually; and the clerk is hereby ordered to mark their attendance, and present the roll to the next General Assembly, with the excuses of absentees.

VII.

Sess. ult., May 23, 1738.—Act about the manner of electing Members of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, for the more regular election of members of Assembly in time coming, considering that it is already provided that the election shall be made at least forty days before the meeting of the Assembly, do hereby further enact, that hereafter each Presbytery of this Church (except those lying in Northern or Western Isles) shall make their elections yearly, within a month preceding the first of the said forty days; and that every Presbytery, without exception, shall appoint the day of election by an order of the Presbytery, at an ordinary meeting, to be entered in their minutes at least ten free days before such election; and that on the day of election, the Presbytery shall make their elections betwixt the hours of one and eight in the afternoon; and that the burghs and universities who send members to the Assembly shall, in like manner, appoint the days of their elections, at an ordinary meeting of their council or university respectively, at least ten days before the day of such elections.

VIII.

Sess. ult., May 23, 1738.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held in this place, upon the second Thursday of May next, in the year 1739.

The General Assembly was concluded with prayer, and singing the 133d Psalm throughout, and pronouncing the blessing.

Sess. 9, May 19, 1739.—Act concerning the Ministers who have Seceded from the Church.

arms ;”—the said defenders, instead of accepting or being thankful for such lenity, produced, and offered to read as their answer a paper, entitled, “ Act of the Associate Presbytery, finding and declaring that the present judicatories of this National Church are not lawful nor right constituted courts of Christ ; and declining all authority, power, and jurisdiction, that the said judicatories may claim to themselves over the said Presbytery, or any of the members thereof, or over any that are under their inspection ; and, particularly, declining the authority of a General Assembly now met at Edinburgh, the 10th of May 1739.” Upon which the Assembly caused the said libel to be read, and then permitted the said defenders, by the said Mr Thomas Mair, who spoke as the mouth of them all, to read the said paper, and thereafter to give in the same, to which all the defenders declared their adherence ; whereupon they were ordered to withdraw, after being directed by the moderator to attend when they should be again called upon by the Assembly ; and they having been this day again called, and not comparing, the General Assembly found, and hereby find, the said libel relevant to infer deposition ; and do find the same also proven, in its most material articles, by the said paper, produced by them as aforesaid ; and, particularly, finds it, by the said paper, proved, that the said defenders have seceded and separated from this Church, and have taken upon them to associate themselves into a presbytery, and, as such, have framed and published, and do adhere to the pretended Act, Declaration, and Testimony, libelled ; wherein they endeavour to assign the grounds of their unreasonable and irregular conduct, and take upon them to condemn this Church, and the judicatories thereof, for their proceedings, and to cast many groundless and calumnious reflections upon her and them. And, further, find that the said defenders, by the paper given in to this Assembly, have had the unparalleled boldness to appear before the highest judicatory of this Church, to which they had vowed obedience, and, instead of answering for themselves as pannels or defenders at the bar, pretended to appear as a separate, independent, and constituted judicatory, and to read or pronounce an act of theirs, condemning this Church, and the judicatories thereof, upon several groundless pretences, and to decline the authority of the same ; and that they have further, in presence of the Assembly, by their said paper, taken upon them to speak in most injurious, disrespectful, and insolent terms concerning the highest civil authority :—Therefore, the General Assembly do find and declare, that the said defenders, for the offences so found relevant and proven, do justly merit the highest censures of this Church, and particularly that of deposition ; but in respect that in this Assembly, before they proceeded to call the said defenders, an inclination had been expressed by several members not to proceed to a final sentence against them at this time, but to forbear the same yet another year, in order to give them a further time to return to their duty, and to render them still more inexcusable if they should persist in their unwarrantable separation ; and though, from their behaviour at their appearance, and the paper given in by them, there is little hope left of their being reclaimed to their duty, but they seem determined to continue in their most unwarrantable and schismatical courses, and, as far as in them lies, to ruin and destroy the interest of religion in this Church, this Assembly have thought fit to forbear inflicting the just censure upon them at this time, and to refer the same to the next General Assembly, to which this Assembly do earnestly recommend to inflict the censure of deposition, without further delay, upon such of the said defenders as shall not, betwixt and that time, either in presence of the Commission to be named by this Assembly, or of the ensuing General Assembly, retract the said pretended Act and Declinature, and return to their duty and submission to this Church. And the Assembly further recommend to all the members of this Assembly, and particularly such of them as shall be members of the next Assembly, there to urge and insist for their compliance with this recommendation, which this Assembly cannot allow themselves to doubt will be granted, as it will then be absolutely necessary, for the interest and credit of this Church, that the foresaid censure be pronounced and inflicted against such of the said defenders as shall then be persisting in their separation. And, in respect the said defenders have not appeared, though called, this diet, the Assembly order their Commission to cause cite them again to appear before the next Assembly, to abide the judgment thereof upon the said libel, and the said paper given in by the defenders instead of an answer; to which Assembly the said libel and process is hereby continued and referred as above. And as to one of the defenders, Mr James Thomson, minister at Burnt-island, who was not contained in the Act of the last Assembly, the General Assembly, without determining on the objection offered by his parish to the citation of him, did agree and resolve, that their Commission do cite him, de novo, to answer to the next Assembly for the matters contained in the said libel and paper given in by him and the other defenders. And, to the end the like schismatical and divisive courses, which have so much disturbed the peace and quiet of the Church and of the country, and are so very contrary to serious religion and godliness, may be, for hereafter, effectually discouraged and prevented, the General Assembly ordains all Presbyteries and Synods strictly to observe the 6th Act of the Assembly, 1708, entitled, "Act for Suppressing Schisms and Disorders in the Church," by which "It is strictly enjoined, and peremptorily appointed, that all the Presbyteries and Synods take particular notice of all their members, preachers, or others under their inspection; and if they find any ministers or others to fall into irregularities, or schismatical courses, that they duly call them to an account, and censure them according to the merits of their fault, even to deposition of ministers and elders, and to apply to the Commission for their advice, as they shall see cause." And, without derogating from the generality thereof, the Assembly ordains all Presbyteries, to whom any minister shall presume to give in a secession or separation from this Church, forthwith to give notice thereof to the moderator of the Commission of Assembly for the time, and to instruct the members of their Presbytery, who shall be members of such Commission, to ask the opinion and direction of that Commission at their first diet, after offering such secessions; to the end that, if such Presbyteries cannot, in the meantime, prevail with the brethren who shall so presume to secede, to retract their secession, such brethren may be forthwith proceeded against, according to the above Act of Assembly; and what opinions and directions of the Commission for the time, as Presbyteries shall receive, agreeable thereto, these Presbyteries are hereby strictly enjoined to follow the same. And in case any Presbytery, to whom such secession or separation shall be given in, shall fail in their duty in the premises, the Assembly ordains the Synods within whose bounds they may lie, without delay to do therein as they shall think fit, agreeable to the above Act of Assembly. And in case such Synods shall fail in their duty, the Assembly ordains the Commission to be appointed by this Assembly to take such matters into their own cognizance. And in all such cases the Presbyteries, Synods, or Commission to be appointed by this Assembly respectively, if they cannot quickly reclaim such seceding brethren, are hereby ordained to proceed against them, by way of libel, to the sentence of deposition. And the Assembly appoints that a short state of the proceedings of the judicatories of this Church, with relation to the foresaid ministers, setting forth the gentle methods used for reclaiming them, and their undutiful behaviour to this Church, be drawn up by a committee to be named for that effect, and printed, and copies thereof to be transmitted to each Presbytery: And that all the ministers of this Church shall be careful to exhort the people, both publicly and privately, to guard against all divisive courses, "and to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," as they would consult the true interest of serious religion, and the quiet of their country.

 V.

Sess. ult., May 22, 1739.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration that there are divers affairs which they cannot overtake, do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr James Bannatyne, minister at Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners of this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power to the said commissioners, or their quorum, &c. (Same as immediately preceding years, with this addition, viz.) And the General Assembly do enjoin their Commission, that in passing their sentences, and in ordering the execution of the same, they strictly observe the 12th Act of Assembly, 1736.

VI.

Sess. ult., May 22, 1739.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and for Managing his Majesty's Royal Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr James Bannatyne, minister of the Gospel at Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c. ; to be a committee of this Assembly for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, for promoting the knowledge of true religion, suppressing of Popery and profanity, and for managing of the royal bounty given for these ends, according to, and in terms of, his Majesty's grant to this Assembly, and the 6th Act of the late Assembly, and whole Acts therein mentioned, and in Acts formerly made and referred to in the Commissions granted to former committees ; any seven of the persons above named are declared to be a quorum, whereof some to be ministers ; but it is hereby appointed, that at the quarterly meeting of the said committee, to be held after the rising of the Commission in August next, when the scheme or establishment of missionaries for the year ensuing shall be approved and determined, nine ministers and five ruling elders at least shall be the quorum. And the said committee are appointed to have their meetings at Edinburgh, in the Hall of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the last Thursday of every month, at three o'clock in the afternoon, and also the first lawful day after the adjournment of the four stated meetings of the Commission of the General Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, except when it falls to be on Friday or Saturday, and then the meeting is to be on the Monday following next thereafter, at the said hour ; with power to the said committee to adjourn themselves to such times and places, as they shall find most convenient and needful ; and they are to keep a correspondence with the Commission of the General Assembly, and the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee of directors, and take their advice and assistance. And the General Assembly do, by these presents, nominate the said Mr William Grant, Advocate, his Majesty's Solicitor, and Procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, and to pay out the same as he shall be directed and ordered by the said committee, and according to their rules. And the said committee are appointed to examine the accounts of the distribution of the said royal bounty, and lay the same before the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, or Barons of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer, and to report their diligence to the General Assembly, to whom they are to be accountable. And it is agreed that no person once employed and inserted in the scheme shall be struck out thereof for that year, but by the quorum of, at least, nine ministers and five ruling elders ; and in case any complaint shall be made against any of them on the scheme, it shall not be determined at the first ordinary meeting that the same is offered, but shall lie on the table till another meeting, and, in the meantime, the person complained of, and the Presbytery of the bounds wherein he officiates, shall be acquainted of such a complaint, and those concerned be required to send to the said committee a just account of the matter against the said next meeting. And it is further appointed, that after the yearly scheme of missionaries on the royal bounty, in manner above directed, and notice thereof given by letters to the Presbyteries concerned, such Presbyteries shall send up to the said committee their answers to these letters, at farthest, with their commissioners to the General Assembly, if the same be not got done sooner ; and the committee, at their meeting in May, shall name a sub-committee of their number for preparing the next year's scheme, who are to lay their draught thereof before the said meeting, immediately after the Commission in August.

VII.

Sess. ult., May 22, 1739.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held in this place, upon the second Thursday of May next, being the 8th day of that month, in the year 1740.

Sess. 4, May 12, 1740.—Act and Sentence of Deposition from the Office of the holy Ministry against eight Ministers, Seceders from the Church.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, pursuant to their resolution on Saturday last, proceeded to the affair relating to the seceding ministers, viz. Messrs Ebenezer Erskine at Stirling, William Wilson at Perth, Alexander Moncrieff at Abernethy, James Fisher at Kinclaven, Ralph Erskine at Dunfermline, Thomas Mair at Orwell, Thomas Nairn at Abbotshall, and James Thomson at Burntisland; and having caused all the eight to be called thrice publicly at the doors of the Assembly-House and of the New Church, and none of them compearing, nor any person for them, the Assembly caused to be read the libel drawn up by the Commission of the General Assembly, 1738, and executed against all the foresaid brethren, with the paper entitled, "Act of the Associate Presbytery," finding and declaring, "That the present judicatories of this National Church are not lawful nor right constituted courts of Christ, and declining all authority, power, and jurisdiction, that the said judicatories may claim to themselves over the said Presbytery, or any of the members thereof, or over any that are under their inspection; and particularly declining the authority of a General Assembly, met at Edinburgh the 10th of May 1739," which paper they had delivered in at the bar of the last Assembly, in a pretended presbyterial capacity. There was also read the libel drawn up and executed against Mr James Thomson, minister at Burntisland, by order of the Commission of the last Assembly, in obedience to the 4th Act of that Assembly. After reading of which libel, with the said fourth Act of last Assembly, the General Assembly, (in respect that the relevancy and proof of the libel against all the said ministers was judged by the last Assembly, and that there was no doubt of the competency of the process as to any of the seceding ministers, except Mr Thomson, in respect of which a new libel was ordered to be raised and executed against him,) after reasoning proceeded to state the question, "Is the libel against Mr Thomson relevant and proven, as to the material articles, to infer deposition, or not?" viz. "That the said Mr Thomson has seceded and separated from this Church, and that he, with his said other brethren, associate themselves into a Presbytery, and as such have framed and published, and do adhere to the pretended Act, Declaration, and Testimony libelled, wherein they endeavour to assign the grounds of their unreasonable and irregular conduct, and take upon them to condemn this Church, and the judicatories thereof, for their proceedings; and to cast many groundless and calumnious reflections upon her and them; and that the said Mr Thomson, with the other defenders, by the paper given in to the last Assembly, had the unparalleled boldness to appear before the highest judicatory of this Church, to which they had vowed obedience, and, instead of answering as pannels and defenders at the bar, pretended to appear as a separate, independent, and constituted judicatory, and to read or pronounce an act of theirs, condemning this Church, and the judicatories thereof, upon several groundless pretences, and to decline the authority of the same; and that he, the said Mr Thomson, with the other defenders, did, in presence of the Assembly, by their said paper, take upon them to speak in most injurious, disrespectful, and indecent terms concerning the highest civil authority." And the vote being put, "Find as above?" or "Not?" And it was carried, by a very great majority, "Find." And, therefore, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, find the said libel against the said Mr James Thomson relevant to infer deposition, and also proven as to its most material articles, as above. But the Assembly delayed further procedure in this affair till Thursday next.

Sess. 7, May 15, 1740.

The General Assembly, pursuant to their resolution of the 12th instant, resumed the consideration of the process against the eight seceding ministers; and having caused them to be again called, and none of them compearing, nor any person for them, the Assembly caused to be read the minute of their proceeding in this affair on Monday last, and also the act of the last Assembly of May 19, 1739, and then proceeded to consider, Whether, upon the libel found relevant to infer deposition, and proven as to its most material articles, by the last General Assembly, against the whole ministers therein named, and again found relevant and proven by this Assembly, in so far as concerns Mr James Thomson, upon the new libel executed against him, in pursuance of the said act of the last Assembly, this Assembly should proceed to inflict the said censure of deposition? And after full reasoning upon the expediency thereof, and prayer to God for direction how to judge in this weighty affair, and for his blessing on such decision as the Assembly should come to, it was agreed to put the question, Depose, or Not? And rolls being called, and votes marked, it carried, by a very great majority, Depose; and, therefore, the General Assembly, in respect of the articles found relevant and proven against the persons therein and hereafter named by the last and this Assembly, as aforesaid, did, and hereby do, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, the sole King and Head of the Church, and by virtue of the power and authority committed by him to them, actually depose Messrs Ebenezer Erskine at Stirling, William Wilson at Perth, Alexander Moncrieff at Abernethy, James Fisher at Kinclaven, Ralph Erskine at Dunfermline, Thomas Mair at Orwell, Thomas Nairn at Abbotshall, and James Thomson at Burntisland, ministers, from the office of the holy ministry, prohibiting and discharging them, and every one of them, to exercise the same, or any part thereof, within this Church in all time coming; and the Assembly did, and hereby do, declare all the parishes or charges of the persons above named vacant, from and after the day and date of this sentence; and ordains copies hereof to be sent to the several Presbyteries of Stirling, Perth, Dunkeld, Dunfermline, and Kirkaldy; and the said respective Presbyteries are hereby ordered to send copies hereof to the kirk-sessions of Perth and Dunfermline, and session clerks of the other respective parishes hereby declared vacant, to be communicated to the elders. And the Assembly appoints that letters be written by their Moderator to the magistrates of the respective burghs concerned, with copies of this sentence; and the Assembly recommends to the Presbyteries within whose bounds the parishes or charges, now declared vacant, do lie, to be careful in using their best endeavours for supplying the same during the vacancy, and for promoting the speedy and comfortable settlement thereof.

Sess. 8, May 16, 1740.

The General Assembly do instruct and empower the Commission to be appointed by them to take in and finally decide in any process that may come before them from any Synod or Presbytery, towards the speedy settlement of any of the parish churches declared vacant by the Assembly's sentence passed yesterday.

V.

Sess. 9, May 17, 1740.—Act discharging Presbyteries to consent to the Suppressing of Parish Churches.

The General Assembly, having heard the overture transmitted by the late General Assembly to Presbyteries, concerning their consenting to suppressing of parish churches: and finding that divers Presbyteries have given their opinion that the same be passed into an act; the General Assembly do hereby discharge all Presbyteries within this National Church to consent to, or connive at, the annexation or suppressing of parishes, without the consent or approbation of the Synod of the bounds, or the General Assembly.

Sess. 10, May 19, 1740.—Act for the Maintenance of Mr Nicodemus Bieniaszeuski, Student in Divinity from Lithuania.

Whereas the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland did, by their Act dated the 22d May 1736, appoint the Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and the Synod of Fife, to pay their Synodical burse, and the Synod of Glasgow to pay their Presbyterial burse, towards the maintaining of Mr Andrew Kurnatousky, the late Lithuanian bursar, for the space of four years immediately succeeding Martinmas 1735.

And whereas the Synod of Lithuania, in consequence of the Assembly's resolution, dated the 23d of May 1738, did, in September last, send hither Mr Nicodemus Bieniaszeuski to succeed as bursar to the said Mr Kurnatousky for the next four years thereafter.

And whereas it is reasonable and equal that the said public burden should be laid upon the several Synods in their turns; therefore, the General Assembly, conform to the overture and opinion of the Commission of the late General Assembly, dated the 15th of November last, did, and hereby do, appoint the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr, the Synod of Dumfries, and the Synod of Galloway, to pay their Synodical burse, and the Presbytery of Ayr to pay their Presbyterial burse, towards the maintaining the said Mr Bieniaszeuski, the present Lithuanian bursar, for the space of four years immediately succeeding Martinmas 1739; and they further appoint the moderators of the said Presbyteries for the current half year to collect, each in his own Presbytery, the first year's proportion of the said burse, and send in the same to the general collector of the said bursary, the one half of the said year's burse at or before the quarterly meeting of the Commission in August next, and the other half thereof at the quarterly meeting of the Commission in November next; and that the moderators of the said Presbyteries for the half-year after Martinmas next collect and send, in like manner, the said half-year's burse at the quarterly meeting of the Commission in March next, or, at furthest, before the Whitsunday thereafter; and so on termly, at Martinmas and Whitsunday, yearly thereafter, for the space of the above said four years. And the Assembly do instruct and empower their Commission to take special care of the premises; and remit to the said Commission to name a proper person to be general collector of the said bursaries.

Sess. 9, May 23, 1741.—Act and Recommendation for the observation of a Fast within the Bounds of the several Presbyteries of this Church.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration, and being deeply affected with the distressed state of the land, by reason of the scarcity and famine we are groaning under; the dangerous and expensive war we are engaged in; with many other tokens of the Lord's wrath against us; and all these justly inflicted by a righteous God, for our many sins, grievous backslidings, and provocations, did judge it their duty speedily to call persons of all ranks to humble themselves before the Lord, acknowledging our transgressions, and flying, by faith and repentance, to the blood of Jesus Christ, that a merciful God may, for his sake, pity us, and not give us over to the will of our enemies abroad, nor consume us with famine and other judgments at home: Therefore, the Assembly did, and hereby do, recommend to, and appoint all the several Presbyteries, at their first meeting, to fix upon a day most expedient for their respective bounds; and that this day be, at least, within the month of June next; and that where Presbyteries lie at such a distance as this Aet cannot reach them before their first meeting, that the moderator shall call a Presbytery for this effect, and appoint a day with all the convenient speed: That Presbyteries consider not only the general causes, but the particular sins most prevalent among them, that they may be confessed and mourned over before the Lord; and all persons be called to repentance, and amendment of heart and way, as they would escape, through the Lord's mercy, the judgments hanging over our heads, and heavier strokes being yet inflicted.

Mr James Ramsay, minister at Kelso, their Moderator, &c. ; to be commissioners to this General Assembly, to the effects after mentioned; with power, &c. Sess. ult., May 25, 1741.—Congratulatory Address to his Majesty, upon occasion of taking the Forts near Carthagena.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in a National Assembly, beg leave, with hearts full of joy and thankfulness to Almighty God, to approach your sacred person, to congratulate your Majesty on the successful progress of your arms against your insolent enemies, the Spaniards; and, particularly, on the late signal victory obtained at Carthagena; in which there appear evident marks of the powerful interposition of the good providence of God, in favour of your Majesty and these kingdoms, by protecting your fleet, under the command of the brave and victorious Admiral Vernon, and by animating your sailors and soldiers with uncommon courage and resolution, which gives us the agreeable prospect that this may be a means of further advancing the glory of your Majesty's reign, by humbling the hearts of your haughty enemies, and procuring a speedy, honourable, and lasting peace, which may secure the rights and privileges, the trade and navigation, of your subjects, and prevent the further effusion of human blood.

May God long preserve your Majesty to promote the good of mankind, to be the guardian of the peace and liberties of Europe, and of all the valuable rights and privileges of your subjects, and to be the protector of the Protestant interest at home and abroad. May he bless their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke, the Princesses, the issue of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all your royal family! That God may continue to direct your councils, and prosper your arms, watch over you while abroad, and return you with safety and honour to these your dominions; and that, after your Majesty hath been long honoured to be an instrument of doing great good upon earth, you may be crowned with everlasting happiness, is, and shall be, the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

JAMES RAMSAY, Moderator.

Sess. ult., May 25, 1741.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held in this place, upon the first Thursday of May next, being the 6th day of the said month, in the year 1742.

The General Assembly was concluded with prayer, and singing of the 133d Psalm throughout, and pronouncing the blessing.

*May 23, 1741.—Overture about the Manner of Purging of Scandals.

There was brought in to the General Assembly, from their committee for overtures, an overture for establishing an uniform rule for deciding in cases of scandal; which being read, the General Assembly recommend to the several Presbyteries to consider the rules already set down in the Form of Process, or other Acts made upon that subject; and send their opinion to the next General Assembly upon what relates to the manner of purging of scandals.

May 23, 1741.—Overture about Members of Inferior Judicatories judging in Superior Courts.†

An overture, brought in from the Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, having been yesterday transmitted from the committee for overtures, was this day again called for and read; and after being reasoned upon at full length, the General Assembly transmitted the same to the several Synods and Presbyteries of this National Church, that they may send their opinions thereupon to the next General Assembly. The tenor whereof follows:—

Edinburgh, May 7, 1741.

The Provincial Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale do unanimously agree, that such of their number as are members of the ensuing General Assembly shall represent to the venerable Assembly, That there appears to this Synod many obvious inconveniences attending the present practice of this Church, whereby the members of inferior judicatories are considered as parties before the Superior Courts, when any cause in which they have given judgment comes to be viewed upon an appeal; and seeing this is likewise contrary to the practice of all other courts, this Synod humbly move, That the Assembly shall take this matter under their consideration, and transmit an overture to the several Presbyteries, that they may give their opinion as to the proposed alteration.

May 25, 1741.—Overture for an Act concerning Licensing of Probationers for the holy Ministry.‡

* It does not appear that this overture led to any subsequent proceedings.

† This overture was not passed. The subject was revived in 1754, and an overture again transmitted, but not passed. It was again revived in 1771, and an overture transmitted for several years, but no enactment took place.—Ed. 1843.

‡ An enlarged, and more matured overture, on this subject, was brought forward in the following year, and passed into an interim Act. (See Act 6th, Assembly, 1742.)—Ed. 1843.

Sess. 3. May 8, 1742.—Act disjoining the Presbytery of Long-Island, and erecting the same into two distinct Presbyteries.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, from their committee for bills, a scheme prepared by the Presbytery of Long-Island, upon a recommendation of the Synod of Glenelg, who had consented to the disjunction of the said Presbytery, and erecting the same into two distinct Presbyteries. And the General Assembly having heard the said scheme read over, with the opinion of the committee for bills thereupon, did, and hereby do, according thereto, disjoin the parishes of Lochs, Stornoway, Barvas, and Uig, from the Presbytery of Long-Island, and do erect these four parishes into a Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Lewis, and to have their meetings for ordinary at Carlway; and did, and hereby do, erect the parishes of Harris, North Uist, South Uist, and Barra, into another Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Uist, and to have their ordinary meetings at Carinish; and that the Presbytery of Lewis shall, at the first meeting after their erection, appoint the ministers of Stornoway and Uig for that year as their correspondents; and, at their first meeting in the ensuing year, the ministers of Lochs and Barvas, and so on, in all succeeding years, by turns to attend the meeting of the Presbytery of Uist, at Scarista in Harris, when, upon any emergency, they shall be called to meet with them there; and do appoint that the Presbytery of Uist, in like manner, appoint the ministers of Harris and Barra for the first year, and the ministers of North and South Uists for the next year, and so on, in all subsequent years, by turns, as correspondents, to attend the meetings of the Presbytery of Lewis, at Scarista in Harris, as the importance of any affair depending before them shall require; and that each of these Presbyteries have right to be represented in the General Assembly; and the Assembly do authorise the Synod of Glenelg to appoint the time of the first meeting of the above mentioned Presbyteries of Uist and Lewis. And the Assembly declare these Presbyteries to have the same powers and privileges which any other Presbytery have, by the Word of God and constitution of this Church.

Sess. 9, May 15, 1742.—Act for the better Attendance of Members on the Commission of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly do enjoin the several Presbyteries to the observance of the 6th Act of Assembly, 1703, and the 6th and 15th Acts, 1705, “For the better Attendance of Members on the Meetings of the Commission;” and that the Presbyteries read over these Acts at their first meetings after the Assembly, and enjoin the observation of them on their members; and that the Presbyteries, after every quarterly meeting of the Commission, take account of the attendance of their members, and to inquire into the reasons or excuses of such as have not attended, and to censure them who have been absent without sufficient cause.

VI.

*Sess. 10, May 17, 1742, ante meridiem.—Act and Overture about the Manner of Licensing Probationers.

The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration the danger that ariseth to this Church, and to the souls of people, by licensing any to preach the Gospel who are not duly qualified, according to the rules laid down in the Holy Scriptures; and considering that the several Acts made by former General Assemblies lie so scattered in many separate articles, at great distance from one another, that the directions therein given are in danger of being overlooked by Presbyteries: Therefore, the General Assembly renew all former Acts, and strictly ordain them to be observed by Presbyteries in all time coming, in manner following, viz. :—

1mo, That no Presbytery admit any person to probationary trials but such as are found to be of good report, of sufficient learning, sound principles, of a pious, sober, grave, and prudent behaviour, and of a peaceable disposition, and well affected to the government in Church and State; and of whom they have sufficient grounds to conceive that they shall be useful and edifying in the Church; and that careful inquiry be made thereanent; and that, without respect of persons, such as are esteemed to be light and vain in their behaviour, imprudent, proud, worldly-minded, or unacquainted with the power of practical godliness, be kept back from that sacred work.

2do, That none be admitted to trials, in order to be licensed, but such as have attended the profession of divinity for six years, or have closely followed the study of divinity and of the languages for that space, at least, after they have passed their full course of philosophy at the College; and that the usual school degrees be inquired after, and made proficiency therein, in case their circumstances did not allow them to attend the profession; though it were to be desired they should attend the profession of divinity much of that time. But this shall not be extended to students having the Irish language, providing, that before any Presbytery license such students within six years, they first consult the Synod of the bounds.

3tio, The General Assembly, considering the reproach that may be brought on religion in general, and particularly on this Church, by the unworthy behaviour of such as follow the study of divinity, do earnestly recommend to the Presbyteries, professors of divinity, and ministers and members of this Church, to keep a watchful eye on such students during the said six years. And, further, that when any student comes to attend the profession of divinity in any university, he shall produce to the Professor, and to the minister of the parish where he is to reside during the time of his attendance on the profession, a testimonial from the minister from whence he comes; and, when he leaves the profession, he shall carry back testimonials from the minister of the parish, of his grave and suitable behaviour becoming his character, and from the Professor, testifying the same; and also his regular attendance on the diets of the profession, and the time he has attended. And when any Professor of Divinity shall think fit to recommend a student, in order to probationary trials, his testimonials shall bear not only his proficiency in his studies, but his judgment of his moral and Christian character; and that, in his opinion, such an one may be useful and edifying in the work of the ministry, on producing whereof, the Presbytery, after due consideration, shall admit him or not, as they shall see cause.

4to, The General Assembly do appoint and ordain, that no Presbytery admit any student to probationary trials, except such as have resided within their bounds for the space of six years, or do produce to them sufficient testimonials from the Presbyteries in whose bounds they have lived, or for the most part resided, expressly, that it is the desire of these Presbyteries that these students should be entered upon trials. And such students as come from abroad shall produce satisfying testimonials from the professors under whom they studied, and the time of their being abroad shall be accounted a part of the said six years; but none of these students shall be entered upon trials for the space of a whole year after they come to Scotland.

5to, When any student is proposed to a Presbytery, in order to be taken on trials, the proposal shall lie on the table till the next ordinary meeting, before they give judgment therein, that diligent inquiry may be made, and information had concerning the said student's qualifications and behaviour; and the Presbytery shall be alone both when the proposal is made and judged on. And the General Assembly recommends to all students to take all opportunities of cultivating an acquaintance with the ministers of the Presbytery where they reside; and, particularly, during the said interval, they are hereby appointed to attend such of the ministers as shall desire to discourse with them in private.

6to, When the Presbytery, after serious inquiry and mature deliberation, shall agree to take the proposed candidate on trials, before his entry thereto, the General Assembly appoints them, by themselves, or a committee of their number, to take a private and previous trial of the progress he has made in the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages; in the study of philosophy, and his knowledge in divinity, theoretical, polemical, and practical, especially such points as shall be matter of the present debates and controversies; his acquaintance with the Holy Scriptures, and what impression he has of religion on his own soul; his knowledge of the constitution of the primitive Christian Church, and also of our own, and of the government and discipline thereof; and of his spiritual wisdom to deal with the several sorts of persons he may have to do with, namely, Atheists, despisers of religion, careless and secure persons, weak and tender consciences, and others, wherein the great difficulty of the pastoral charge lies; and, particularly, anent his ends and intentions in entering upon the preaching of the Gospel; and that they appoint three or four of their number for managing the said trials. And the General Assembly further appoint the several Presbyteries concerned to take special care that these trials be not managed in an overly and superficial manner, but as in the sight of God and our Lord Jesus Christ, the alone King and Head of his Church; and either to reject or delay to further trial such as are found not sufficiently qualified.

7mo, The General Assembly appoints the same method to be observed, and trials to be taken in all the above particulars, before any Presbytery recommend a student to pass trials in another Presbytery; and that the student so recommended shall not be entered on trials in any other Presbytery, until he has resided at least half a year within their bounds.

8vo, The General Assembly do also appoint and ordain that, the above space of six years being expired, and testimonials produced, and previous trials taken in manner above directed, the Presbytery, before they prescribe any part of public trials, shall write letters to all the Presbyteries within the bounds of the Synod, three months at least before the sitting of the Synod, acquainting them with their design; and, at the next meeting of the Synod, they shall also acquaint the Synod thereof, and obtain their special advice and judgment in that particular; and that the members of the said Presbytery and Synod may be ripely advised thereanent, the General Assembly appoints the said letters to be duly and carefully transmitted to the several Presbyteries, and that intimation thereof be publicly made at the second diet of the Synod, to lie on the table till another diet, and then particular inquiry be made whether any person have any thing to object against the students being entered on trials for preaching the Gospel.

9no, The General Assembly recommends to Presbyteries, that, before any student is entered on trials, the engagements required by Act 10, Assembly, 1711, of such as are to be licensed, be read to them; and that the Presbytery take promise of them that they will subscribe to and punctually observe the same, in case the Presbytery see cause to license them; and that this promise be recorded in their books.

11mo, The General Assembly judging it fit that the same method should be followed in all Presbyteries, as to questions put to and engagements taken of probationers when licensed; and that the said probationers should not only give sufficient proof of their piety, literature, and other good qualifications for the sacred ministry, but also come under the strictest engagements to adhere to and maintain the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government of this Church, do, therefore, enact and appoint that the questions appointed by Act 10, 1711, be put to all such as pass trials; and, likewise, that they shall subscribe the formula set down in the said Act, before they be licensed to preach the Gospel. And the General Assembly strictly prohibits the licensing any person whatsoever, who shall not give explicit and satisfying answers to these questions, and subscribe the said formula, and discharges any Presbytery to make use of any other questions or formula.

12mo, When any Presbytery who, with the Synod's allowance, has entered, or who is about to enter a student on trials, shall receive a letter from any Presbytery, showing their dissatisfaction with the student entered, or to be entered on trials, and giving relevant grounds for the same, which they offer to verify to the Presbytery at their next meeting, the said student shall not be licensed until the matter be tried. And the General Assembly appoints Presbyteries who shall receive such letters anent students, from any other Presbytery, to write a return with the first post after their meeting, acquainting them of their next diet.

13mo, The General Assembly, considering that some persons, who, upon application to the judicatories of this Church, have not been admitted on trials, or have not been found fit and worthy to be licensed to preach, do yet retire out of the bounds of this Church, where they are not so well known, in order to enter upon trials, and after they have been licensed do not recommend themselves by a holy life and ministerial conversation, to the reproach of the Church of Scotland, where they were educated: Therefore, the General Assembly do hereby inhibit and discharge all young men, educated in this Church, or students of divinity, to go to foreign places, and offer themselves to trials for licence to preach the Gospel, without testimonials and recommendations from their Presbyteries as above directed. And further, order and appoint that no student whatsoever, coming from abroad, shall be allowed to preach within this Church, as one of our probationers, until it appear documented that they have followed the study of divinity for six years after their finishing their course of philosophy, and until they undergo anew their catechetical trials, and come under the engagements, and sign the formula appointed by the 10th Act, Assembly, 1711, and it appear by their licence, that the said probationers have been licensed by a regularly constituted Presbytery or classical meeting.

14mo, For the better observation of this Act, it is particularly recommended to the Professors of Divinity to communicate the contents thereof to their students, in a public meeting annually, at such time in the month of January as to them seem most convenient. And all Presbyteries and Synods are peremptorily appointed to observe the same in all its parts. And it is strictly enjoined, that the visitors of Presbytery-books make strict inquiry how the several Presbyteries do observe the same.

The General Assembly do appoint, that the above overture have the force of an Act for the space of one year from this date; and do order that all Presbyteries shall read this Act when they are about to take any young man on trials, and shall, in the licences they grant, express the particular trials the candidate has passed in terms of this Act; and if the Presbytery shall not report any material objections or alterations to the next Assembly thereupon, this Assembly are of opinion that the next General Assembly may fitly pass the same into a standing Act.

Sess. 1, May 12, 1743.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. It is with great pleasure and satisfaction that we reflect on the wise and prudent behaviour of the former Assemblies of the Church of Scotland; and as we are persuaded that you come together with the same zeal for the glory of God, and the advancement of true religion and piety, for the preventing the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice, we most willingly countenance this your present meeting with our royal approbation and authority.

The steady loyalty and affection which the Church has, on all occasions, shown to our person and government, and her firm adherence to the Protestant interest in general, and to the cause of virtue and religion in particular, are reasons sufficient to induce us to give fresh assurances of our resolution to protect and maintain the Church of Scotland in the full enjoyment of all her rights and privileges, as by law established.

You may be fully assured of our readiness to concur in whatever may tend to promote true religion, suppress vice and immorality, and secure the peace and prosperity of the Church, not doubting but that you, on your part, will sincerely endeavour, to the utmost of your power, to do every thing that can conduce to our service and the welfare of our people; and that your debates and proceedings be managed with a spirit of meekness becoming so venerable an assembly, carefully avoiding whatever may create unhappy divisions, which are the most effectual means that the enemies of our happiness and tranquillity can lay hold of, to disappoint the good ends for which you are assembled.

The experience you have already had of the abilities and integrity of our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, Alexander Earl of Leven, of his concern for the Church, and his zeal for our service, will, we doubt not, render our choice of him to represent our royal person in this Assembly agreeable to you. And we are persuaded, that his diligence and application in the discharge of so important a trust will be assisted and encouraged by the unanimity and dispatch with which you will go through the several affairs that shall come under your consideration. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 23d day of April 1743, in the sixteenth year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

TWEEDDALE.

Directed—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 14, 1743.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The General Assembly of this Church have been honoured with your Majesty's most gracious letter, and acknowledge, with the greatest thankfulness, the countenance you are pleased to give to our meeting at this time.

As it is with great pleasure and satisfaction we observe your Majesty's approbation of the conduct of former Assemblies of the Church of Scotland, and the confidence you place in us, we hope on this occasion to show the same zeal for the glory of God, and the advancement of true religion and piety, for the preventing the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice, which has appeared in former Assemblies; and that the proceedings of this Assembly shall likewise be favoured with your Majesty's royal approbation.

The repeated declarations your Majesty is pleased to give of your resolution to protect and maintain the Church of Scotland in the full enjoyment of all her rights and privileges, as by law established, greatly encourage us to persevere in that steady loyalty and affection to your Majesty's person and government, for which this Church has been remarkable on all occasions; and as we are persuaded the security of the Protestant religion, and of our liberties, does, under God, depend on the preservation of your Majesty's government, your Majesty may firmly rely on our unshaken loyalty, and that we will promote the same loyal principles among the people.

The assurances your Majesty gives us at this time of your readiness to concur in whatever may tend to promote true religion, suppress vice and immorality, and secure the peace and prosperity of the Church, are extremely agreeable, and must be powerful motives to excite us on our part sincerely to endeavour, to the utmost of our power, to do every thing that may promote such valuable ends, and can conduce to your Majesty's service and the welfare of our country. We should much neglect our true interest, and be unworthy of the character we bear, if we did not carefully avoid whatever may create unhappy divisions, and manage our debates and proceedings with that spirit of meekness your Majesty recommends.

We look on the continuance of your royal bounty, for promoting the knowledge of true religion, and preventing the increase of Popery in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, as a fresh instance of your paternal regard, and of your generous designs for the good and prosperity of your subjects. It shall be our care to manage this your royal donation in such manner as may best answer the good ends proposed by your Majesty.

The abilities and integrity of the Earl of Leven, his zeal for your Majesty's service, his sincere regard to the interest of this Church, and his prudent conduct in former Assemblies, render your Majesty's choice of him to represent your royal person in this Assembly most agreeable to us. And your Majesty may be firmly persuaded that nothing shall be wanting on our part to assist and encourage him in the discharge of his important trust, by going through the several affairs that shall come under our consideration with a becoming unanimity, and all possible dispatch.

That God may abundantly bless your Majesty, and long preserve you for the happiness of these nations;—that he may make your reign prosperous, direct your councils, and render your arms successful for redressing the injuries done to your subjects, restoring the peace and preserving the liberties of Europe;—that he may eminently bless the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke, the Princesses, the issue of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the branches of your royal family;—that he may protect you while you are abroad, and restore you in peace and honour to your British dominions; and that, after a long and happy reign on earth, over a flourishing and free people, your Majesty may inherit an immortal crown, are the sincere and hearty prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

ROBERT WALLACE, Moderator.

Sess. 9, May 21, 1743.—Act and Overture about the manner of Licensing Probationers.

There was transmitted, from the committee for overtures, an overture and interim act, passed by the General Assembly last year, with relation to the licensing of probationers, with their opinion that the same be continued in force as an Act for another year, and that before next Assembly Presbyteries, particularly those in the Highlands, do give their opinion on the following amendment proposed to be made thereto, viz., That there be no exception of students having the Irish language, as to the time of their studying divinity. The General Assembly having heard the said overture and opinion, agreed thereto in the above terms, and do enact for one year, from the meeting of this Assembly; and also transmit the same as an overture to the several Presbyteries accordingly.

V.

Sess. 9, May 21, 1743.—Act Disjoining certain Parishes of the Presbyteries of Middlebie, Lochmaben, and Jedburgh, and erecting the same into two new Presbyteries, to be called the Presbyteries of Annan and Langholm.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly, from their committee for bills, the petition of the Presbytery of Middlebie, representing that the said Presbytery consists of eleven parishes, of which six are in Annandale, viz., Annan, Hoddam, Dornock, Middlebie, Kirkpatrick, and Graitney; the other five are in Eskdale, viz., Langholm, Ewes, Westerkirk, Eskdalemuir, and Canonbie: That by reason of the great distance of many of these parishes from the Presbytery seat, the badness of the roads through mossy or marshy ground, and other inconveniences, more particularly set forth in the said petition, the said Presbytery seldom meets at Middlebie, but the members were in use to meet sometimes at Annan, Langholm, Halfmorton, and other churches, wandering about from one place to another, without any order, whereby a great many difficulties and inconveniences ensued, of which the Synod of Dumfries was so sensible that they advised them to meet at Annan and Langholm by turns, in winter, and at Middlebie and Halfmorton in summer; and yet this, with all other expedients, have been tried without effect. They therefore proposed that the six parishes in Annandale be erected into a Presbytery, to meet at Annan; and that Cummertrees and Ruthwell, in the Presbytery of Lochmaben, (which at present consists of fifteen parishes,) be added to them, of which the first is two miles from Annan, and the other four. That this will effectually remove all the hardships which affect that part of the Presbytery; they will have good accommodation at Annan, the remotest church is not above six miles from it, and the road is always good. They further proposed that the five parishes in Eskdale be erected into another Presbytery, to meet at Langholm, (where they will have the like advantages as at Annan,) and that the parish of Castleton (which at present belongs to the Presbytery of Jedburgh, where there are fifteen parishes) be annexed to them, which will be likewise highly convenient for the minister of this parish, as he lies sixteen miles from Jedburgh, and only eight from Langholm. The said petition further sets forth, that the Synods of Dumfries, and of Merse and Teviotdale, and the Presbyteries of Lochmaben and Jedburgh, had, for their respective concerns, consented to the aforesaid disjunctions and new erections, as appears by extracts of their several sentences produced. The General Assembly, having heard the said petition, and opinion of their committee for bills thereupon, and having had the consents of the above mentioned Presbyteries and Synods produced before them, did, and hereby do, according thereto, disjoin the six parishes in Annandale, viz., the parishes of Annan, Hoddam, Dornock, Middlebie, Kirkpatrick, and Graitney, from the Presbytery of Middlebie, and the parishes of Cummertrees and Ruthwell from the Presbytery of Lochmaben, and do erect these eight parishes into a Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Annan, and to have their meetings for ordinary at Annan; and did, and hereby do, disjoin the five parishes in Eskdale, viz., the parishes of Langholm, Ewes, Westerkirk, Eskdalemuir, and Canonbie, from the said Presbytery of Middlebie, and the parish of Castleton from the Presbytery of Jedburgh, and do erect these six parishes into another Presbytery, to be called the Presbytery of Langholm, and to have their ordinary meetings at Langholm. And the Assembly do authorise the Synod of Dumfries, at their first meeting, to appoint the time of the first meeting of the above mentioned Presbyteries of Annan and Langholm; and the Assembly declare these Presbyteries to have the same powers and privileges which any other Presbytery have, by the Word of God and constitution of this Church.

*May 23, 1743.—Overture about the Manner of deciding Causes before the Commission.

The following overture being proposed, viz., That hereafter it be an instruction to the Commission, that all causes brought to the Assembly by appeal directly from Presbyteries, and not decided by the Assembly, be determined by the Commission at their meeting in May, or otherwise be remitted to the Synod of the bounds, and receive their judgment, from which the same may be brought to the Commission in November or March. IV.

Sess. 7, May 17, 1744.—Act appointing Presbyteries to keep separate Records, for inserting Particulars relating to the Scheme for a Provision for Ministers' Widows, &c.

The General Assembly, considering that by an Act of Parliament, passed in the 17th year of the reign of his present Majesty, King George the Second, entitled, "An Act for Raising and Establishing a Fund for a Provision for the Widows and Children of Ministers of the Church of Scotland, and of the Heads, Principals, and Masters of the Universities of St Andrews, Glasgow, and Edinburgh," it is, among other things, provided, "That Presbyteries shall, from time to time, make up certain lists therein specified;" as also, all other lists that shall be found necessary by the trustees, which lists are to be "attested by the moderator and clerk of every Presbytery, and transmitted to the trustees' clerk residing at Edinburgh, under a certain penalty therein mentioned:" Therefore, that the said Act of Parliament may be executed in the most easy and effectual manner, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, appoint and ordain every Presbytery to keep a separate register, wherein they shall record the names and the parish churches of all the ministers, now members of their respective Presbyteries, with a particular account, if such ministers be married, with the dates of their present and future marriages; and shall also therein record the dates of their first ordination or admission to a benefice in the Church of Scotland, the names of all their present children, the day, month, and year of the birth of such of them as are under the age of sixteen, the names and dates of the birth of such of their children as shall hereafter be born; and likewise the time of their present or future children's death, as the same shall happen.

Further, the General Assembly hereby enjoin and ordain every Presbytery to record the names and parish churches of the several ministers, who shall hereafter be admitted to a benefice within their bounds, with the particular dates of their respective admissions; and an account if such ministers be married, with the dates of their then marriages, or such of them as shall happen after their admissions; and shall also record the several facts relating to their children in like manner, as above appointed, with respect to ministers, now members of the Church.

The Assembly likewise hereby enjoin and ordain Presbyteries to record the time of the deaths of ministers, as the same shall happen, with the names of their respective widows, and also the dates of the marriages or deaths of ministers' widows, residing at the time of their death or marriage within their bounds; as also the dates of the several vacancies that were vacant on the 25th of March last, or which have since happened, or shall happen hereafter within their bounds, with the causes of the vacancies: And in general, the Assembly hereby ordain Presbyteries to record, from time to time, all other things that shall be found necessary by the trustees, for the more easy execution of the said Act; and they also ordain and appoint all the ministers now entitled, or who shall be hereafter admitted to a benefice in the Church of Scotland, to lodge, from time to time, in the hands of the clerk of their respective Presbyteries, a particular condescendence of the facts relating to their respective cases, as the same shall happen; all which facts are hereby appointed and ordained to be entered distinctly by Presbytery clerks in the said separate register, under proper columns, and regularly signed by moderators and clerks, and by the ministers respectively concerned, from which the Presbyteries may annually make up the list necessary for each year, and transmit the same, duly attested, to the trustees, as directed in the said Act of Parliament.

VI.

Sess. 11, May 19, 1744.—Act about Electing of Members to the General Assemblies, and attesting their Commissions.

The General Assembly, considering that they have at this time set aside several commissions by Presbyteries and burghs to their representatives in the Assembly, as not being in terms of the Acts of Assembly, do hereby recommend to and enjoin Presbyteries, in time coming, to take care that all commissions be in due form, according to the Acts of Assembly; and in order to this, that they be at all due pains to get themselves informed that the elders sent up by them to the Assembly, or attested by them, as sent up by burghs, be qualified in these terms; and the Assembly do recommend to sessions to take all proper care to ordain only such to be elders as they know to be thus qualified.

VII.

Sess. 11, May 19, 1744.—Act and Recommendation against the sinful Practice of Smuggling of Goods.

The General Assembly recommend it to all the ministers of this Church, &c., to discourage, so far as in them lies, by their discourses and example, the sinful and pernicious practice of smuggling; and do appoint that the 9th Act of Assembly, 1719, and 15th Act of Assembly, 1736, be reprinted, and forthwith transmitted to Presbyteries and ministers: and ordain that the same be read from the pulpits of all the parish churches within Scotland, betwixt and the first of August next.

VIII.

May 21, 1744.—An Address to his Majesty, upon occasion of the present Critical Juncture of Affairs.

Most gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in our National Assembly, take this first opportunity of concurring with your Majesty's other faithful subjects, in testifying our abhorrence of the late intended invasion of your Majesty's kingdoms, in favour of a Popish Pretender, supported by a French power.

As the Church of Scotland, ever since the settlement of the British Crown in your Majesty's illustrious house, have considered all their interests, sacred and civil, as inseparably connected with that happy establishment, we should, of all others, be most unworthy of our invaluable privileges, if, on this occasion, we did not express the warmest resentment of such an audacious attempt.

Great Sir,

We reflect, with particular pleasure, that the ministers and members of this Church have always distinguished themselves, by their firm and zealous adherence to the Protestant succession in your Majesty's royal family; and we can assure your Majesty that, no less sensible of our present happy situation, influenced by the same loyal principles, and equally concerned for the security of the reformed religion, we shall steadily pursue the laudable example our predecessors have set us, and hope to show, even in times of the greatest danger, that we count nothing too dear in support of your Majesty's auspicious government, the great bulwark, under God, of our religion, laws, and liberties.

That our gracious God, by whom kings reign, may continue to direct your Majesty's councils, and give success to your arms—may dispose all the friends of liberty and the Protestant religion to imitate your great example, in defence of the common cause;—that the same kind Providence which has hitherto protected your Majesty's person and government in the most remarkable manner, may make your reign long and prosperous, may entail the happiness of it upon these kingdoms to latest posterity in your august house; and that, after a long and happy reign on earth, over a brave, a free, and loyal people, you may inherit immortal glory, is, and shall be, the fervent prayers of,

Most gracious Sovereign,

Your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by JOHN ADAMS, Moderator.

IX.

May 21, 1744.—Act concerning Mr William Leechman, Professor of Divinity in the College of Glasgow.

The General Assembly having called for the report of the committee named to consider the case about Professor Leechman, and caused to be read the remarks of the committee of the Presbytery of Glasgow, upon the passages in the Professor's sermon excepted against by them, with his answers thereto; there was also read a paper given in by the said Professor to the said committee of the Assembly, explaining himself further on the occasion of the said sermon, and on the subject of a passage thereof, taken notice of by the said committee; of which paper the tenor follows, viz.:—"One main occasion of publishing this sermon on Prayer, was to prevent the bad effects of a late pamphlet, which represents Prayer as an absurd and unreasonable, nay, as an impious and blasphemous practice. For that wicked pamphlet being spread in the part of the country where I live, and having had observable bad influence upon young and unthinking minds, I was persuaded by some friends, who are zealous for the interests of religion, to publish this sermon (which they had occasionally heard me preach) as a proper antidote to the poison of it. As the pamphlet which occasioned the publication of this sermon did attack only one part of Prayer, viz., offering up our desires to God; but did not attack the other part of it, viz., the offering them up in the name of Christ, the discourse is therefore mainly limited to the explication and the vindication of this first part of Prayer, without explaining and vindicating the second part of it; which I considered as a separate subject, or, at least, a different branch of the same subject; so that the omissions complained of in that performance did not proceed from any disregard of these important and fundamental doctrines of Christianity—the offering up our desires to God in the name of Christ, and the merits and satisfaction of the Mediator, as the only grounds of our acceptance with God, and of our obtaining the pardon of sin; but from a persuasion that it is necessary to convince men of the reasonableness of offering up their desires to God, before you can convince them that it is a reasonable thing to offer them up in the name of Christ; and from a persuasion that it might be of some use (through the Divine blessing) to endeavour to do the first of these at the time when, and in the place of the country where I attempted it.

"If, therefore, any passages of this sermon have been so incautiously expressed, as naturally to lead any to think (which I am not yet convinced they are) that I meant to assert that the necessity of the Christian religion itself is superseded by the light of nature; or that the light of nature is sufficient to give that knowledge of God and of his will, which is necessary to salvation; that praying in the name of Christ is not the duty of Christians, or a foreign and superfluous circumstance; or that the merits and propitiation of Jesus Christ are not the only grounds of a sinner's acceptance with God, and of his obtaining the forgiveness of sin; and that the only end of punishment is the reformation of the offender; I honestly declare,

I had no such intention in these passages; and that this is really so may be further confirmed from this certain fact, that this sermon, which is now printed, was only one sermon enlarged out of eight or nine, delivered from the same text, at the same time this sermon was first preached, when I spoke at considerable length on the doctrine of the intercession of Jesus Christ; besides, it is well known to the Presbytery of Irvine, that I preached regular courses of sermons on the particular doctrines of Christianity in my own congregation, as well as I frequently preached abroad on the same subjects, as occasion offered; and as I have already subscribed the Confession of Faith, where these doctrines are taught in the strongest manner as the confession of my faith, I am still willing to do the same again. (Subscribitur.) WIL. LEECHMAN." The above paper being read over, parties were fully heard, and removed. Then the Assembly caused to be read the report and overture of their committee; the tenor whereof follows, viz. :—

That from the importance of this case, and the steps taken by the Presbytery of Glasgow, the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr had sufficient reasons to take into their own hands the cognizance of the inquiry touching the sermon.

That the judgment passed by the Synod, notwithstanding that no appeal was taken against it, does not make it a res judicata, or preclude this Assembly from deliberating, whether the sermon affords a just occasion for trial or censure against the Professor, in respect that there was no libel against, or formal trial of the Professor, but a preliminary inquiry in order to such trial, in case sufficient cause should be found for it.

That the committee having considered the sermon, and particularly the passages thereof chiefly excepted against; and having read and considered the remarks of the Presbytery of Glasgow, and the Professor's answers to the same; and having heard the parties, and received and considered a paper voluntarily offered by the Professor, explaining himself farther on the occasion of the sermon, and on the subject of the passages excepted to; and again called the parties, and read that declaration in their presence, and heard the members of the Presbytery of Glasgow thereupon, are of opinion, that the Professor has given abundant satisfaction concerning the orthodoxy of his sentiments; and that there is no ground or occasion remaining for any further trial of the said Professor, in respect of that sermon; and that the Presbytery of Glasgow be prohibited to commence or carry on any farther or other proceedings against the Professor on account of that sermon.

The General Assembly, having heard the said report and overture, did, without a vote, agree to approve thereof, with this explanation, that by the expressions in the narrative, viz. :—"And particularly the passages chiefly excepted against," no more was intended by the committee, (as by several members thereof was declared,) nor is intended or meant by this Assembly, in approving their overture above inserted, than that the committee, and thereafter the Assembly, considered the passages in the said sermon that had been remarked upon by the Presbytery of Glasgow; and another passage taken notice of by some members of the committee of Assembly; but not that either the committee or the Assembly had read over or considered the whole of that sermon. And parties being called, the premises were intimated to them, whereupon Professor Leechman took instruments; and the members from the Presbytery of Glasgow, appellants, declared their acquiescence in the said sentence.

Sess. 1, May 9, 1745.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The sincere and constant zeal you have shown for the glory of God, and the advancement of true religion and piety, and the remarkable loyalty and affection you have ever expressed for our person and government in your former Assemblies, fully persuade us at this time, you will be directed by the same laudable spirit; and, therefore, we most willingly countenance your present meeting by our approbation and royal authority. And we take this opportunity to renew to you the assurances of our firm resolution to support and maintain all the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland, as by law established.

As we make no doubt but you now come together with the like good dispositions and intentions, so you may depend upon our protection and assistance in all your endeavours to promote the true interest of religion, to prevent the growth of Popery, and to discourage and suppress profaneness and immorality; and as you must be sensible of the great importance of a good agreement and unanimity among yourselves in all your proceedings, so we hope your debates will be conducted with all moderation, brotherly love, and charity.

We have again made choice of our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, Alexander Earl of Leven, to represent our royal person in this Assembly. His known zeal for our service, and his firm adherence to the principles of the Church of Scotland, and concern for its prosperity, will always render him acceptable to you. And as we have the greatest confidence in his capacity, diligence, and application in the discharge of so important a trust, we are persuaded that you, on your part, will contribute every thing in your power towards the unanimous and speedy dispatch of the business proper for your consideration, and the attaining the good and desirable ends for which you are now convened. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 18th day of April 1745, and in the eighteenth year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

TWEEDDALE.

Directed,—To the Right Reverend and well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 11, 1745.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The very gracious letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour us was received with all the duty and thankfulness becoming loyal subjects, sensible of the great happiness they enjoy under your benign and auspicious government.

That your Majesty is pleased so willingly to countenance our meeting in this Assembly, by your royal approbation and authority, cannot but affect us with the more warm and lively sense of gratitude, that it is supported by such honourable sentiments of the zeal shown for the glory of God, and the advancement of true religion; and the loyalty and affection expressed for your Majesty's person and government in our former Assemblies, and such a full persuasion that we will be directed by the same laudable spirit in this Assembly. So obliging a confidence in us must render us utterly inexcusable, if, by any neglect of our duty, we should disappoint it, and should forfeit the applauses our Sovereign discovers such forwardness to bestow on us.

Your Majesty's renewed assurances of your firm resolution to support and maintain all the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland, as by law established, oblige us, in the strongest manner, to renew our humble and dutiful expressions of the most inviolable affection and loyalty to your Majesty's person and government, of our entire reliance on your royal assurances, and of our firm confidence in your protection and favour.

Your Majesty's goodness, in entertaining such a firm persuasion of the good dispositions and intentions with which we are now come together, and so strongly encouraging our dependence upon your royal protection and assistance, in our endeavours to do what is our unquestionable duty, lays us under additional obligations to use our best endeavours for promoting the true interest of religion, for preventing the growth of Popery, and for discouraging and suppressing profaneness and immorality. And the sense we must have of the great importance of a good agreement and unanimity among ourselves in all our proceedings, and that our debates be conducted with all moderation, brotherly love, and charity, highly recommend to us such a compliance with your Majesty's kind and gracious injunctions, as may answer your favourable hopes.

The continuance of your royal bounty, for promoting the knowledge of true religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, we most thankfully receive, as a fresh instance of your paternal regard, and of your generous designs for the greatest good of your subjects, which obliges us to the strictest care in managing this your royal donation in such manner as may best answer the purposes of so tender a nursing-father.

Your Majesty's repeated choice of the Earl of Leven to represent your royal person in this Assembly, could not fail to be most agreeable to us, and to be regarded by us as a further proof of your royal favour. His known zeal for your Majesty's service, and his firm adherence to the principles of the Church of Scotland, and concern for its prosperity, must always render him acceptable to us. And it is with the greatest satisfaction we observe the just confidence your Majesty has in his capacity, diligence, and application, in the discharge of so important a trust. We should be highly culpable if we were wanting on our part to contribute every thing in our power towards the unanimous and speedy dispatch of the business proper for our consideration, and the attaining the good and desirable ends for which we are now convened.

That God may long preserve your Majesty for the good of all your people, and the maintaining the true Protestant interest, the liberties of mankind, and the balance of Europe;—that your sacred person and valuable life may always, and everywhere, be under the protection of his good and watchful Providence;—that he may abundantly bless the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke, the Princesses, and all the branches of your royal family;—and that there may never be wanting one of your most illustrious house to sway the sceptre of these realms while sun and moon endure;—that he may prosper your arms, and those of your allies, against the common disturbers of the peace of Europe;—and that, after a long and prosperous reign over a free and happy people, you may at last inherit a crown of glory that fadeth not away, are, and shall be, the hearty and unfeigned prayers of,

WILL. WISHART, Moderator.

Sess. 8, May 17, 1745.—Act concerning the Fund for a Provision to the Widows and Children of the Ministers of this Church.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, having had laid before them a representation of the trustees, nominated and appointed by the late Act of Parliament, for managing the Fund for a Provision to the Widows and Children of the Ministers of the Church of Scotland, and of the Heads, Principals, and Masters of the Universities of St Andrews, Glasgow, and Edinburgh, setting forth, that by the delay of several Presbyteries in transmitting timely the lists of particulars necessary to be known by the trustees, it was with the utmost difficulty that they could make the charge on the collector in due time, which delay was occasioned, in a great measure, through Presbyteries not keeping a separate register, according to the fourth Act of the late General Assembly, appointing every Presbytery to keep a separate register, and therein to record the names and parish churches of the several ministers, members of their respective Presbyteries, with the particular dates of their admissions and marriages; and also the dates of the birth or death of their children, and of several other facts; as the said act more fully bears. And the Assembly, considering the great inconveniences that may arise, through Presbyteries not duly keeping, and regularly filling up, the several particulars in their said separate register in an uniform manner, out of which the facts may, from time to time, be taken, and in the most authentic manner attested and transmitted to the said trustees, did, therefore, and hereby do, renew the foresaid 4th Act of last General Assembly, and strictly enjoin the observation thereof; and to the end the same may be more regularly and uniformly observed, do appoint the several Presbyteries to keep the said separate register according to the plan this day agreed upon by the Assembly, and recorded in their register. And each minister is hereby required duly to report to the Presbytery, either by himself or by letter, any alteration which shall happen from time to time in his family, at the first diet of Presbytery immediately subsequent to such alteration; or in case of an unavoidable necessity preventing his then notifying such alteration, he shall intimate the same as soon as possible. And the Assembly do appoint the several Synods to call for the said separate registers at least once a year, and carefully inspect the same, and attest that they are kept according to the plan referred to in this Act; which attestation shall also be marked in the Synod's records. And for the better securing, and more regular transmission of the foresaid annual lists to the trustees, the General Assembly do enact and ordain, that every Presbytery shall meet annually on such day, betwixt the 11th of November and the 11th of December, as they shall respectively judge most convenient, (the Presbyteries in the Western and Northern Isles excepted;) and shall, at such meeting, prepare and transmit to the trustees' clerk, at Edinburgh, their respective lists for the preceding year, to the end the trustees may be the better enabled with accuracy to carry on the scheme. And the General Assembly do recommend to and enjoin the several Presbyteries to be careful in uplifting and transmitting to the collector-general of the fund the rates due out of vacant parishes, and out of the annats in their several bounds. And the Assembly further appoints the several Presbyteries, so soon as this Act shall come to their hands, to insert the same, and also the 4th Act of Assembly, 1744, in their separate register; and to acquaint such of their members as are absent of the contents of this Act.

V.

Sess. 8. May 17, 1745.—Act prohibiting Synods to disjoin or annex Parishes from one Presbytery to another.

The General Assembly, considering the inconveniences that may arise, by Synods passing acts for annexation or disjunction of parishes from one Presbytery to another, did, and hereby do, prohibit Synods to disjoin any parish from a Presbytery, and annex the same to another, without first having the authority of the General Assembly; and that what shall be done in virtue of such authority be reported to the Assembly next following, and have their approbation to any such annexation or disjunction.

Sess. 9, May 18, 1745.—Act and Overture about some pieces of Sacred Poesy.

The General Assembly had laid before them, by their committee, some pieces of sacred poesy, under the title of Translations and Paraphrases of several Passages of Sacred Scripture, composed by private persons; and though the Assembly have not sufficient time to consider these poems maturely, so as to approve or disapprove of them, yet they judge the same may be printed; and do remit the consideration of them to the several Presbyteries, in order to their transmitting their observations to the next General Assembly, that they, or any subsequent Assembly, may give such orders about the whole affair as they shall judge for edification; and the Assembly appoint this their resolution to be prefixed to the impression.

The General Assembly, considering how much it is for the honour of God and edification of the Church, that all ministers and preachers of the Gospel be persons of good life and character, do earnestly recommend to and enjoin all Presbyteries to take care that all ministers behave themselves as becomes their character; and to be strict in adverting that young men whom they license to preach the Gospel, be persons of good report, and carefully observe their behaviour after they are licensed; they do also appoint that the rules of the Form of Process, Chap. vii., with respect to informations against ministers of this Church, be extended to probationers.

Sess. 4, May 16, 1746.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right trusty and well-beloved, we greet you well. The experience we have at all times had, and the fresh proofs you have given on occasion of the present unnatural Rebellion, of your steady attachment to our person and government, and of your zeal for the support of the Protestant succession, engage us to return you our hearty thanks; and we do most readily countenance with our royal authority your meeting at this time, not doubting but you will continue to give us marks of your loyalty and affection to us, by exciting the people under your charge to a due sense of the blessings they enjoy under our government, and to a just abhorrence of the pernicious designs of those who have endeavoured to overturn our most holy religion, to subvert the laws and constitution of this kingdom, and to introduce Popery and arbitrary power.

We have again made choice of our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, Alexander Earl of Leven, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our person in this

* The Assembly met on the 8th of May, according to adjournment; but, in the confusion of the times, the Royal Commission to the Earl of Leven had not been forwarded. Principal Wishart was continued in the chair for the first and second diets. Before the third diet, May the 10th, the Royal Commission had arrived, but it did not authorise the commission to act till the 16th. The Assembly, however, proceeded on that day to choose a Moderator, and having appointed Mr John Lumsden, Professor of Divinity, King's College, Aberdeen, to that office, and having named the usual committees for the dispatch of business, the Assembly adjourned to the 16th, when the Earl of Leven produced his Commission. This accounts for the Assembly meeting on the 8th of May, and the King's Commission not being produced till the 16th.—Ed. 1843.

Assembly, who, from his known zeal for our service, his firm adherence to the true interest of his country, and the fidelity and prudence with which he has already discharged this important trust, we are persuaded will be acceptable to you. We do, on this occasion, repeat to you the assurances of our unalterable resolution to maintain the established Church of Scotland in the possession of all their just rights and privileges; and as we promise ourselves, by the blessing of Almighty God, that a speedy and effectual end will be put to the Rebellion, the peace and tranquillity of the country restored, and all our subjects again made happy, in the full enjoyment of their civil and religious rights; we have the firmest reliance on your doing every thing on your parts that may contribute to the attaining of these desirable ends. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 30th day of April 1746, in the nineteenth year of our reign.

By his Majesty's command,

HOLLES NEWCASTLE.

Sess. 9, May 17, 1746.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

It is with unspeakable joy we received your Majesty's most gracious letter. As our attachment to your Majesty's person and government, and the Protestant succession in your royal family, is the effect of principle, duty, and interest, so your Majesty's great condescension, in taking notice of our conduct during the present wicked and unnatural Rebellion, and in putting so high an honour upon us, as to give us thanks for doing what we were unquestionably bound to do, we look upon as a great proof of that distinguishing goodness which makes so bright a part of your princely character. The security of our religion and liberty is so closely interwoven with the stability of your throne, that we can claim no merit when we fall in with our unquestionable duty.

The ready countenance which your Majesty is graciously pleased to give to our meeting at this time, cannot fail to animate us to give all possible evidences of our unshaken loyalty and inviolable affection to your Majesty; and, particularly, by exciting the people under our charge to a due sense of the blessings they enjoy under the best government, together with a just abhorrence of the worst, and of all the pernicious designs which tend to subvert our holy religion and good laws, in order to introduce Popery and arbitrary power.

We esteem the choice your Majesty has again made of the Earl of Leven to represent your royal person in this Assembly, as another instance of your Majesty's goodness to the Church of Scotland. His known zeal for your Majesty's service; his firm adherence on all occasions to the true interest of his country, and especially during its late calamitous state; his great affection to this Church, and the many and recent proofs given of his eminent abilities for discharging this high trust, render your Majesty's choice of him most acceptable to us.

The repeated assurance of your Majesty's unalterable resolution to maintain the Church of Scotland in the possession of all her just rights and privileges, is a further proof of your Majesty's royal favour, and, under God, the great security against the invasions of those who are equally disaffected to the Crown and this Church. As we do entirely confide in the assurances your Majesty gives us, so they cannot but prompt us to exert ourselves in making all the returns of gratitude and duty in our power.

When we reflect upon the dismal scene of blood, rapine, and oppression, which so lately filled this land with horror; when we view our happy constitution, lately threatened with destruction, and our religion and liberty ready to be offered up victims to superstition and tyranny; and now have the happy prospect of seeing a speedy and effectual end put to the present Rebellion, the peace of our country restored, and your Majesty's subjects again fully possessed of their civil and religious rights; we cannot but offer our sincere and humble thanks to Almighty God, through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, for such inestimable blessings, and contribute every thing in our power for attaining these desirable ends. We must ascribe our present tranquillity, under the Divine Providence, to your Majesty's care, vigilance, and wise administration, and to the conduct and valour of your heroic son, Prince William Duke of Cumberland, our second deliverer, and restorer of those blessings procured us by another glorious prince of that name at the late happy Revolution.

Your Majesty having been graciously pleased, by your High Commissioner, to signify your royal intention of continuing your pious donation in order to reform the barbarous parts of our country, whereof some have lately made the most unworthy requital, engages us by the strongest ties to return your Majesty our most humble and hearty thanks, and to promise our continued care to manage this royal donation in such manner as may best answer the good ends proposed by your Majesty.

That your Majesty may be always under the Divine care, and long preserved for the defence of our holy religion, and the happiness of all your subjects;—that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, with their issue, and all your royal family, may be highly favoured of God, and made public blessings to their country;—that Almighty God may make his Royal Highness the Duke an eminent instrument, under your Majesty, for repressing the insolence of arbitrary power and tyranny, and vindicating the liberties of Europe in general, and of your Majesty's dominions in particular;—that He may direct your councils, and prosper your Majesty's arms, both by sea and land, with remarkable success;—that a speedy end may be put to this unnatural Rebellion, peace and order restored, and the seeds of disloyalty may be for ever rooted out of the minds of your Majesty's subjects; and that the crown may descend in your royal Protestant line to latest posterity, are, and shall be, the hearty prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 6, May 19, 1746.—Congratulatory Address to his Majesty upon the Victory obtained by his Army, under command of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, over the Rebels in this Country.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Most gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to approach your throne, with sincere expressions of our utmost detestation of the present wicked and unnatural Rebellion, to testify our unfeigned thanks to the Almighty, and to congratulate your Majesty on the happy success of your arms, by which we have the greatest hopes of seeing a solid and lasting peace quickly re-established in your kingdoms, and your loyal subjects restored to the full enjoyment of all their just rights and privileges.

The gloomy prospect lately set before our eyes, by the ungrateful disturbers of your Majesty's mild and just government, makes us reflect with horror on the pernicious plot contrived by the policy, and fomented by the power and interest, of the avowed enemies of our country, its religion, laws, and liberties, and of the balance of power in Europe.

It raises our astonishment and indignation, that any who have tasted of the manifold blessings of your indulgent administration, should have attempted to exchange their religion and liberty for tyranny and lawless power, superstition, and slavery; and, by violating the most solemn obligations of oaths, and ties of gratitude, become tools to the declared enemies of their native country.

Now, that we are, by the good providence of God, sheltered, under the protection of your auspicious government, from the storm that threatened our happy constitution, we behold, with pleasure, the remarkable success of your Majesty's arms, under the wise conduct, and by the intrepid valour of your heroic son the Duke, dispelling the cloud and defeating the rebels, who, hopeless of escaping the vengeance of your victorious arms, sink under their own confusion.

Great Sir, it affords us the highest satisfaction to observe, that notwithstanding the calamities of our country, and the traitorous practices of too many of our infatuated countrymen, the ministers of this Church have, by Divine grace, manifested a firm, zealous attachment to your Majesty's person and government; and as it is our duty, so it is our unalterable resolution, to persevere in our loyalty to your Majesty, and steady adherence to the Protestant succession in your royal family; and it shall be our constant prayer to God, that he may unite the minds of all your subjects into a just sense of the happiness they enjoy under the best of kings.

May the same Providence that has hitherto preserved your sacred person and protected your dominions, continue to watch over your Majesty and your royal family, for a blessing to all Protestant Churches, and the peculiar happiness of your subjects.

Jo. LUMSDEN, Moderator.

Sess. 7, May 20, 1746.—Congratulatory Letter to his Royal Highness William Duke of Cumberland.

SIR,

That the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland has met at this time in a state of peace and security exceeding our greatest hopes, is, under God, owing to his Majesty's wisdom and goodness, in sending your Royal Highness, and to your generous resolution in coming to be the deliverer of this Church and nation. We might, therefore, be justly charged with ingratitude to the glorious instrument of Divine Providence, if we neglected to pay your Royal Highness our most humble and thankful acknowledgments for that happiness we enjoy.

As, for some months past, the many fatigues you endured, and the alarming dangers you ran, in pursuing an ungrateful and rebellious crew, filled our minds with the greatest pain; so the complete victory now obtained over them by the bravery of your Royal Father's troops, led on by your wise conduct, and animated by your heroic example, gives us the highest joy.

Every loyal subject, every sincere lover of the religion, laws, and liberty of his country, is ready to express his just gratitude to your Royal Highness, by whom these inestimable blessings are preserved to us. The Church of Scotland are under peculiar obligations to offer their most thankful acknowledgments to Almighty God, who has raised you up to be the brave defender of your Royal Father's throne, the happy restorer of our peace, and, at this time, guardian of all our sacred and civil interests.

The many instances of your favourable regard to the ministers of the Church of Scotland, and of that entire confidence you have placed in us, ever since this part of Great Britain has been blessed with your presence, must for ever excite us to give the strongest proofs that we have not been unworthy of that countenance you have been pleased to give us, and of that trust with which you have honoured us.

That the Lord of Hosts, who has hitherto covered your head in bloody battles, may still guard your precious life amidst those dangers to which you may be yet exposed, in leading armies against the common invaders of the liberties of Europe, and crown you with the same glorious success over our enemies abroad which you have obtained over traitors at home;—that your illustrious name, so dear to us, may be transmitted still with greater glory to latest posterity;—and that you may share at last in that eternal happiness and glory, bestowed by the Divine mercy, in a distinguished manner, upon those who have been eminent examples of virtue, and the happy instruments of communicating public blessings to mankind, are, and shall be, the prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, your most obliged, most obedient, and most humble servants, the Ministers and Elders met in a General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 9, May 22, 1746.—Act about the Office-bearers in this Church and others, concerned in the Rebellion.

The General Assembly do appoint the several Presbyteries duly to inquire into the behaviour of the office-bearers in this Church during the late unnatural Rebellion, and to commence and carry on the proper processes against offenders; and, in case of difficulty, to take the advice of the Synod of the bounds, or Commission of the General Assembly. And the Commission is hereby instructed to receive, cognosce, and finally determine, in any reference or appeal that may be brought before them from Synods or Presbyteries, with respect to persons that may be accused of having been guilty in the said Rebellion. And the Assembly recommend to ministers and Presbyteries to call before them all others that may have been guilty as aforesaid, and to censure them according to the degrees of their offence, and as they shall judge for edification; and that ministers and Presbyteries take care that all teachers of youth within their bounds be qualified in terms of law, and that Presbyteries inquire concerning this at ministers, and Synods at Presbyteries, at their privy censures.

XIII.

Sess. 9, May 22, 1746.—Act against Profaneness and Immorality.

The General Assembly, taking into their most serious consideration how much profaneness and immoralities of all sorts abound, to which we ought to impute all our troubles and national calamities; and considering, on the other hand, the many most gracious deliverances wrought for us, particularly by the late victory; and that these various providences loudly call on all ranks (after such public judgments and deliverances) to exert themselves, suitably to their several stations, to promote public reformation; the Assembly judge it highly seasonable, at this juncture, to revive the various Acts of former Assemblies against profaneness and immoralities; and particularly, the 11th Act of Assembly, 1697, which “seriously recommends to ministers and members of kirk-sessions, from a true zeal for God, to hold hand to the delating, informing against, and punishing of all profane transgressors, without respect of persons, by civil punishments, conform to the Acts made in that behalf; and that they record their diligence in their session-books, that the same may be seen by their Presbyteries, who are hereby required to make inquiry therein at their visitations.” And the Assembly further appoints, that the abstract of the laws against profaneness and immoralities be reprinted, and that all kirk-sessions provide themselves with copies thereof, and have meetings at stated times, on purpose to consider of the most proper methods for obtaining the execution of these laws; and that ministers frequently preach sermons, on purpose to persuade and direct Christians in general to contribute their endeavours, according to their several stations, and to take the best methods to strengthen one another’s hands in this important work; and that Presbyteries and Synods inquire (at the diet of privy censures) into the diligence of ministers and sessions in this matter. And the Assembly instruct their Commission to have under their view the Act of Parliament of Great Britain, now preparing, against profane swearing and cursing, and other Acts formerly made; and to frame a proper Act against vice and immorality, and to point out some of the proper expedients for discouraging it, and promoting true religion and godliness.

XIV.

Sess. 10, May 22, 1746, post meridiem.—Act for a Thanksgiving.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, taking into their serious consideration the surprising deliverance a good and gracious God has been pleased to bestow upon us in this land, from the late wicked and unnatural Rebellion, carried on by an infatuated party amongst ourselves, and supported and encouraged by the Popish powers abroad, the declared enemies of our peace and happiness, and of the liberties of Europe; which Rebellion, if it had succeeded, would at once have stripped us of our religion and liberty, and subjected us to the cruel yoke of Popery and arbitrary power. And the Assembly, considering how God has thus mercifully interposed for us, when we were most unworthy of the least favour from his bountiful hand, being a people laden with iniquity, and highly ungrateful to him for former deliverances of this kind, and particularly for the late glorious and never to be forgotten Revolution, and the continued peace and tranquillity we have enjoyed since; do judge it their duty to call all ranks and degrees of persons in this National Church to stir up their souls, and all that is within them, to bless and praise the God of our salvation for this and all his wonders of mercy that he has wrought for us, both formerly and of late; and to give unto the infinitely wise God the glory of his free and undeserved goodness; taking shame and confusion of face unto ourselves, because of our highly aggravated iniquities; searching and trying our ways, and turning again to the Lord, from whom we have deeply revolted, as the only way to secure to ourselves the continuance of those blessings we are presently possessed of. And the General Assembly do seriously call and exhort all within this Church, to join, with their humble and hearty thanksgiving, earnest prayers to the God of all grace, to turn us to himself, in his dear Son, our only propitiation, and to one another in the ways of truth and holiness: That he would eminently bless, and long preserve our only rightful Sovereign King George, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the royal family: That he would, in a remarkable manner, protect and defend his Royal Highness the Duke, who, under God, has at this time been the instrument of our deliverance: That he would kindly direct and influence the public councils of the nation at this critical conjuncture; give success to his Majesty's arms, and those of his allies, by sea and land, against the enemies of our religion and liberties, and of the peace of Europe: That he would assist and enable all ranks and degrees of persons within this Church to make a right improvement of the mercies bestowed upon us: That he would, in his infinite mercy, continue to give us favourable weather, and at last crown the year with his goodness; and, above all, that he would give us grace to fear him and serve him, inclining our hearts to obey his voice, that he may not be provoked to turn and do us hurt, after all the great good he hath done us. And the General Assembly appoints the said thanksgiving to be observed in all the parishes within this National Church, upon the fourth Thursday of June next; and that humble application be made to his Majesty for his royal sanction, in order to the more effectual and due observation of the said day. And the Assembly further appoints, that this their Act be read from the pulpits of all the parish churches within Scotland, upon the Sabbath day immediately preceding the foresaid fourth Thursday of June, with suitable exhortations to the people.

The General Assembly, considering that the several Presbyteries have not transmitted to this Assembly their observations upon some pieces of sacred poesy, under the title of "Translations and Paraphrases of several Passages of Sacred Scripture," which had been remitted to their consideration by the last General Assembly, do therefore remit the same to the further consideration of the several Presbyteries, that they may report their opinion thereof to the next General Assembly.

Letter from his Royal Highness William Duke of Cumberland to his Grace the Commissioner.

The following letter not having come to hand till after the rising of the General Assembly, could not be printed among the public Acts, but it is here subjoined by direction of the committee for revising the minutes.

Inverness, May 21, 1746.

My Lord Commissioner,

The meeting of the venerable the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland furnishes an occasion I have wished for, of expressing publicly the just sense I have of the very steady and laudable conduct of the clergy of that Church, through the whole course of this most wicked, unnatural, and unprovoked Rebellion.

I owe it to them in justice to testify, that, upon all occasions, I have received from them professions of the most inviolable attachment to his Majesty's person and government, of the warmest zeal for the religion and liberties of their country, and of the firmest persuasion that these blessings could not be preserved to the nation but by the support of his Majesty's throne, and of the succession in his royal family; and, in support of the sincerity of their professions, I have always found them ready and forward to act, in their several stations, in all such affairs as they could be useful in, though often to their own great hazard; and of this I have not been wanting to give due notice from time to time to his Majesty.

I must desire your Grace to assure the venerable the General Assembly of the very sincere acknowledgment I shall always feel for the particular marks of good-will and affection I have received every where from the clergy, of my regard and esteem for their body, and of my good wishes for all its members.

I heartily wish success to the good work you are upon for the service of his Majesty, and the true benefit of his faithful subjects. I am,

My Lord Commissioner,

Your Grace's most affectionate Friend,

WILLIAM.

Directed thus—To his Grace the Lord Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, Edinburgh.

Sess. 1, May 7, 1747.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The signal proofs you have given in your former Assemblies of your zeal for the advancement of true religion, and the experience we have had of your loyalty and affection to our person and government, and especially on occasion of the late unnatural Rebellion, which, by the blessing of God, is now happily extinguished, leave us no room to doubt but that you are now come together with the same good dispositions and intentions; and we do, therefore, most willingly countenance this your meeting with our approbation and royal authority; and we gladly take this opportunity to assure you of our firm resolution to protect and maintain the Church of Scotland, as by law established, in the full enjoyment of all their rights and privileges.

As we have always had entire satisfaction in the fidelity and abilities of our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, Alexander Earl of Leven, and as we have the firmest dependence on his diligence and prudence in the discharge of so important a trust, we have again made choice of him to represent our person on this occasion, being fully persuaded that the knowledge you have of his steady attachment to our service, and of his zealous adherence to the Church of Scotland, will render him acceptable to you. We promise ourselves that nothing will be wanting on your part that may tend to the advancement of religion and piety, and to the attaining those good ends for which you are at this time assembled. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 28th day of April 1747, and in the twentieth year of our reign.

III.

Sess. 3, May 9, 1747.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's goodness in taking notice, in your gracious letter to this General Assembly, of the loyalty and affection of the Church of Scotland to your royal person and government, particularly on occasion of the late unnatural Rebellion, the happy extinction of which gives us the highest joy, we esteem as the greatest honour that could be done us; and as our unshaken zeal for the service and support of your Majesty's government and royal family is the natural and just effect of your Majesty's unwearied care for the support, defence, and protection of your subjects, in the full enjoyment of all their rights and privileges, both sacred and civil, we look on it as our duty to manifest it on all occasions, especially in the meetings of our General Assembly, and place on it our hopes of the continuance of your royal favour to us, and of our happiness under your auspicious reign; which we pray God may long continue and prosper.

Your Majesty's kind assurances of maintaining and protecting the Church of Scotland in the full enjoyment of all their rights and privileges, do lay such obligations on us to our duty, as we shall endeavour better to express in the course of our actings, than now we are able to do by words.

Your Majesty's choice of the Right Honourable the Earl of Leven, to represent your royal person in this Assembly, is most acceptable to us—he, following the example of his noble ancestors, having given the Church of Scotland many proofs of his adherence to their interest, as well as of fidelity, abilities, diligence, prudence, and affection, to your Majesty, in the discharge of that important trust.

We shall, on our part, be wanting in nothing that may be necessary for attaining the wished-for success to your Majesty's tender care and concern for the advancement of religion and piety; and hope, by the blessing of God, to attain those good ends for which we are at this time assembled.

We acknowledge, with humble thankfulness, your Majesty's great goodness in renewing, at this time, your royal bounty for the reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and committing the distribution of it to our care, of which your Majesty's High Commissioner has given us notice; and we shall endeavour to execute that trust with fidelity, prudence, and exactness, suitable to the confidence your Majesty is graciously pleased to repose in us.

We beg leave to add, that we daily put up our fervent prayers, in private and public, to Almighty God, that as Divine Providence was graciously pleased to place your royal family on the throne of these realms, for their deliverance, protection, and defence, from the threatened calamities of Popery, slavery, and arbitrary power, it may likewise please the Divine goodness, in reward of your Majesty's tender and fatherly care for the religion, laws, and liberties of your subjects, to pour down in abundance heavenly blessings on your sacred person; on his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, his Princess, and royal issue ; and on all the branches of your royal house : And, in particular, for the safety and preservation of his Royal Highness the Duke, now in the field at the head of your armies ; and that victory and success may attend the distinguished courage, wise conduct, and indefatigable application with which his Royal Highness generously exposes his precious life, for the religious and civil interests of his native country, and the liberties of Europe. And are, with the greatest gratitude, and most profound respect,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 8, May 15, 1747.—Act concerning the Fund for a Provision to Ministers' Widows, &c., and enjoining Presbyteries to transmit to the Trustees regularly their Annual Lists.

The General Assembly having had laid before them, and considered the report of the trustees, appointed by Act of Parliament, for managing the fund raised and established for a provision to the widows and children of the ministers of the Church of Scotland, setting forth, That their trust is become almost insupportable, through the many inaccuracies in the annual lists transmitted to them from several Presbyteries, and cannot be discharged with that exactness which is absolutely necessary in the due execution of such a plan : And further, representing that the fund sustains a considerable loss, by ministers not calling from the collector for the L.30 sterling ordered for them by the trustees, according to the directions of the Assembly ; therefore, the General Assembly do hereby enjoin the strict observation of the Acts of former Assemblies, respecting what is thereby required from Presbyteries, for the more effectually bringing the purposes of the foresaid Act of Parliament into execution ; particularly the keeping separate registers in the several Presbyteries, and the making out therefrom, and timeously transmitting to the trustees, annually, before Candlemas, lists of all the particular facts that shall, from time to time, be found necessary to be known by the trustees. And whereas, by the 4th Act of the Assembly, 1745, it is appointed, that the several Synods call for the said separate registers, at least once every year, and carefully inspect the same, and attest that they are kept according to the plan therein referred to,—it is hereby further required, that the said Synods do report their diligence to each General Assembly ; and it is also hereby appointed and ordained, that the annual lists, to be transmitted from time to time to the trustees, shall be drawn up in the precise words, columns, and order, contained in the specimens that have been or shall hereafter be prepared by the said trustees, and sent to the several Presbyteries. And in case Presbyteries shall fail in making their annual returns at the time, and in manner foresaid, the Assembly do recommend to the trustees to exert those powers the law has put into their hands, for obliging Presbyteries to transmit their lists in a regular and uniform manner. And the General Assembly do likewise appoint and ordain each minister to transmit to the collector his bond for L.30, according to the form established by the General Assembly, so soon as notice shall be given him by the trustees or their clerk, that there is money in the collector's hands for payment of the same, as such minister shall be answerable to the General Assembly.

Sess. 8, May 15, 1747.—Act for preventing the Growth of Popery.

And the Commission is hereby empowered and enjoined to make proper representations concerning them to the civil government.

Sess. 6, May 18, 1748.—Act concerning the Qualifications of Persons claiming to vote in the Calling of Ministers to Vacant Parishes.

The General Assembly do enact, appoint, and declare, that, in the moderation of calls to ministers, for supplying vacant parishes, no persons shall be admitted to vote, or, if claiming a vote, shall have any regard paid to their votes, who have either twice heard sermon in any meeting or congregation not allowed by the laws, or attended divine worship performed by any Non-jurant minister, or preacher professing himself to be of the Episcopal communion, or where his Majesty King George and the royal family were not prayed for in express words, within twelve calendar months immediately preceding the vacancy of the church to be supplied; or who, during any part of the said twelve calendar months, have received the sacrament of the Lord's Supper dispensed by such ministers, or allowed their children to be baptized by any of them; and that it shall be competent to prove the said facts by the judicial declaration of the person claiming a vote, and objected to; or by any other mean of proof known and competent in law; and that if the person objected to shall refuse to give his declaration when required, he shall be held as confessed. Further, that the proposed declaration to be given by any person claiming a vote as above, shall contain at length the particular exceptions, viz. "That they have not twice heard sermon, or attended divine worship, performed by a Non-jurant minister, or preacher professing himself to be of the Episcopal communion, in any meeting or congregation not allowed by the laws; or where his Majesty King George and royal family were not prayed for in express words, within twelve calendar months immediately preceding the vacancy of the church to be supplied; and that they have not, during any part of the said calendar months, received the sacrament of the Lord's Supper dispensed by such ministers, nor allowed their children to be baptized by them;" and that the declaration shall not be admitted upon its having reference in general to these exceptions. That no proxy from any person claiming a vote shall be sustained, unless there be annexed to the commission of proxy a subscribed declaration in the terms above mentioned; and that, though a party do claim a vote by proxy, and send a declaration in manner and terms before mentioned; yet, if any person shall object to him, as falling under the exceptions above inserted, it shall be competent to such person to bring a proof of his objection, notwithstanding such declaration.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held in this place, upon the second Thursday of May next, being the 11th day of that month, in the year 1749.

The General Assembly was concluded with prayer, and singing a part of the 89th Psalm, from the 15th to the 19th verse, and pronouncing the blessing.

Sess. 7, May 19, 1748.—Overture about Processes against Probationers.

The committee for overtures transmitted to the Assembly an account of the reports of Presbyteries sent up this year, anent the overture concerning processes against probationers, hearing, that fourteen of the Presbyteries are for passing it into an act, three are for it with amendments, twenty-one are against it, and one for delaying it. And the Assembly having caused to be read the 9th Act of the Assembly, 1697, as also the certifying clause at the end of the foresaid overture, did, after long reasoning, agree, without a vote, to transmit the said overture again to the several Presbyteries of this Church without the said certifying clause, and in place thereof, in time coming, appoint the following rule to be observed, viz. :—"That all Presbyteries shall be put in mind by their several Synods, at such of their stated meetings as shall first be held after the rising of each Assembly, to report their diligence in preparing their opinions and answers, concerning all overtures, (to be reported to future General Assemblies,) to such meetings of their Synods as shall be held immediately preceding the meetings of the General Assembly respectively; and in case, upon inquiry, any Presbytery shall be found to have neglected this part of their duty, by preparing no such answer, the Synod finding such instance of neglect, and no valid excuse offered and sustained, shall censure the Presbytery so neglecting."

* Mr George Wishart, Clerk to the Assembly, being this year Moderator, Mr Robert Hamilton, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, acted as his substitute.—Ed. 1843.

Sess. 9, May 21, 1748.—Overture about the Psalmody.

Upon report of the committee for overtures, the General Assembly agreed to remit the Translations and Paraphrases of Passages of Sacred Scripture, with all the amendments offered thereupon, to the consideration of the committee named by the last and preceding Assemblies for that end, and added Mr George Blackwell to their number; which committee are hereby instructed to prepare a state of the whole, to be laid before the next General Assembly. And it is recommended to Presbyteries, or particular members, to have this matter under consideration, and correspond thereanent with the committee, as they shall see cause. And the Assembly appoints that the remarks sent up at this time be put in the hands of the said committee.

*Sess. ult., May 23, 1748.—Proposals about Voters in Elections of Ministers.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, from their committee for overtures, a proposal for distinguishing the respect, in the calling of ministers, due to such as are known to express a suitable regard to religion and Gospel ordinances, and excluding those who are of a contrary character. And the General Assembly, judging that this is a matter which requires deliberation, in order to concert the most proper terms in which an overture to the above effect should be conceived, before it be transmitted from the Assembly to Presbyteries, agreed that the above proposal be referred to the Commission of this Assembly, that they may take it under consideration, and be empowered to receive what helps may be transmitted to them from the several Presbyteries of this Church, in order to their forming an overture, to be laid before the next Assembly, that they may transmit it to the several Presbyteries to have their opinion reported, in order to the establishing a standing rule on this subject, if they shall see meet. And it is appointed that this be printed at the end of the Acts of this Assembly, and that the Commission take it under consideration, at farthest, at their meeting in August or November next.

* It does not appear that any Overture on this subject was laid before the Assembly of 1749.—Ed. 1843.

Sess. 8, May 19, 1749.—Act and Recommendation for Preaching on the Principles of the Reformation and Revolution.

The General Assembly, considering the strong evidence we had, in the late wicked Rebellion, of the obstinacy and restless spirit of the enemies of our happy constitution, the continued enmity they still show to the best of governments, and the vigilance and art with which they endeavour to lessen people's zeal for the Protestant religion, and to carry them off from their adherence to the interests of the Revolution, and their fidelity and allegiance to our most gracious Sovereign King George; and at the same time being sensible, from past experience, how apt even the friends of our happy establishment are, in the continued enjoyment of peace, to fall into security, and thereby to give advantage to our vigilant enemies, do therefore earnestly beseech and obtest all the ministers of this Church to continue to be diligent in instructing the people committed to their care in those principles of pure Christianity that are particularly opposite to the errors and corruptions of Popery, and in the grounds and reasons of the Reformation, and the principles on which the late glorious Revolution, and our present happy establishment, are founded, and to stir up all to a grateful sense and suitable improvement of the inestimable blessings we enjoy, by the free exercise of the pure religion of Jesus, and the security of our liberties and properties under a legal government. And for these purposes, and perpetuating the memory of the great things God has done for us in these lands, the General Assembly do warmly recommend to all the ministers of this Church to preach expressly, and on purpose, on the subjects above mentioned, or some of them, at least four Lord's Days every year, with proper exhortations to their people, and suitable prayers and praises to our most gracious God, in the name of the only Mediator between God and man, our Lord Jesus Christ. And further, the Assembly do earnestly recommend to all Presbyteries to take a watchful inspection of schools within their bounds, and of the character and behaviour of schoolmasters, and to take care that they be qualified, by taking the oaths to the government, and that they instruct the youth in just principles of religion and loyalty.

Sess. 9, May 20, 1749.—Act appointing Presbyteries to hold Visitations for settling Parochial Schools.

There was brought into the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, from their committee for bills, the petition of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, representing that the Society have, since the year 1709, been constantly employed in carrying on the ends of their erection, by settling schools, and employing schoolmasters in the large parishes of the Highlands of the Northern and Western parts of Scotland, and their endeavours have, by the blessing of God, been attended with remarkable success: That the Society were sorry to represent to the Assembly, that, notwithstanding the good laws made for establishing parochial schools and providing salaries, with school-house and other accommodations for the master at every parish church, yet several Presbyteries have for some time past, and particularly of late, neglected to hold visitations, and take the proper steps for bringing these laws into execution, but seem totally to depend upon the charity schools established by the said Society. This being not only a manifest disregard of those beneficial rules established by the legislature, but also a direct misimprovement of the good intentions and effects of the said Society, a matter of great importance to the country in general, it was judged proper to send letters to the several Presbyteries in whose bounds any of the Society's charity schools are settled, requesting them to use their endeavours forthwith to settle a public school in every parish; and at the same time informing them that otherwise the Society would not fail to withdraw theirs, which were never meant to supersede any mean of instruction whatever, far less a mean established by law. And in order to enforce the certification, and to prevent its taking effect, the Society could not but hope that this Assembly, upon due consideration, would interpose their authority thereto, and enjoin all the Presbyteries in this Church to do their duty in this respect; and, therefore, humbly craving to the effect after mentioned. The General Assembly having heard and considered the said petition, and opinion of their committee for bills thereupon, did, and hereby do, recommend to and enjoin the several Presbyteries of this Church to hold visitations of parishes where public schools are wanting, and to take all proper and legal steps for settling such schools therein, with competent salaries and building of school-houses, as the law directs.

Sess. ult., May 22, 1749.—Congratulatory Address to his Majesty upon occasion of the General Peace.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and faithful subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, humbly beg leave to approach your throne with our most hearty congratulations on the happy return of the national tranquillity.

While, warmed with a just sense of the Divine goodness, we adore the Almighty hand which hath turned war into peace, how ungrateful should we be, did we not acknowledge your Majesty as the great instrument, under God, of procuring to us this inestimable blessing.

Ambitious to express on every occasion the most dutiful and affectionate regard for your sacred person and government, we embrace with joy this first opportunity of testifying our unfeigned satisfaction in the success of your Majesty's arms and councils, by which, through the Divine favour, we are now so happily secured in the undisturbed exercise of the best religion, and the full enjoyment of all the blessings of a British constitution.

Permit us, Great Sir, to say, that while other countries, amidst the continued oppression of despotic power, scarce feel relief from the calamities of war, it is our distinguished privilege to be the subjects of a Prince, no less ready to bless his people with the comforts of peace, than to draw the sword in defence of their just rights and liberties; and we should doubtless be most unworthy of your royal favour, if we did not, in our stations, contribute our best endeavours to improve the public tranquillity, for promoting religion, virtue, and loyalty, which alone can render peace truly valuable to us, and the nation happy and glorious.

Permit us, likewise, to assure your Majesty, that the late increase of your royal family affords us the sincerest joy. We cease not to give thanks to our God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, for every new accession of strength to your illustrious house; whence we have the more abundant hope that peace shall remain within the walls of our Jerusalem, and prosperity in all her palaces.

And it is our constant prayer to the Father of mercies, that your Majesty may be long preserved to be the protector of the religious and civil rights of mankind, and to make Britain still more happy and glorious in the enjoyment of peace and liberty; that you may be high in the special favour of God; that he may abundantly bless their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke, the Princesses, the issue of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the royal family; that, after you have acted a shining part on earth, as the father of your people, and the faithful servant of God, you may inherit a crown of glory that fadeth not away; and that your posterity may fill the British throne with honour and renown to latest ages. These are the fervent, unfeigned prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most dutiful, and most loyal subjects.

Sess. 8, May 19, 1749.—Overture about the Psalmody.

The committee for overtures transmitted to the Assembly their opinion concerning the overture with respect to the Translations and Paraphrases of Sacred Scripture; and the Assembly, considering that amendments have been proposed by several Presbyteries, but that by far the greatest part of them have as yet sent up no opinion; and it being represented, that, in the confusions of the late Rebellion, many Presbyteries had lost the copies which had been sent them, the General Assembly do again remit this matter to the committee named for the same purpose by preceding Assemblies; and do instruct them to consider the amendments which have been offered, and to admit such of them as they judge proper and material, and to cause print a new impression of the collections so amended, and send copies of the same to the several Presbyteries, who are hereby appointed to send up their opinion to the next General Assembly.

Sess. 7, May 17, 1750.—Act and Resolution concerning an Application to Parliament for an Augmentation to Ministers' Stipends.

The General Assembly, considering the distressed circumstances of many ministers of this Church, arising from the smallness of their stipends, the expense of processes for augmentations, and the dilatory payment of stipends, do resolve on an humble application to be made to the King and Parliament for the following purposes:—That in raising of summonses for modification, locality, or augmentation of stipends, instead of the usual method of summoning by a messenger, it shall be sufficient that a general citation be made by every parish clerk from his desk, upon a Lord's Day, immediately after divine service in the forenoon, and that letters be written, by the Moderator of the Presbytery, to the absent heritors, except such as are forth of the kingdom, who are to be summoned by a messenger, at the market cross of Edinburgh, pier and shore of Leith: That it shall be in the power of the Moderator, with consent of the Presbytery, to pursue for modification, locality, or augmentation, whether there be a minister settled in the parish, or the parish be vacant: That ministers' stipends, if not paid within the year, shall bear interest from the first half year after they become due: That power be given to the Commission of Teinds to suppress parishes which they find not proper to be continued separate parishes, and to annex them to one or more of the adjacent parishes: That the said Commission have likewise a power to alter the divisions of parishes, on a view to divide them as they see cause. The General Assembly instructs those to be commissioned by them most humbly to pray for relief in the premises, and for such further relief as to his Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament shall, in their great wisdom, seem meet. And it was declared by the Moderator from the chair to be the mind of the Assembly, that, by this last clause, it was understood, that the commissioners to Parliament might apply for an increase of the minimum.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly, humbly beg leave to approach your sacred person, with our sincere and hearty congratulations on the birth of a young Prince in your illustrious and royal house.

We cheerfully embrace this opportunity to assure your Majesty, that the increase of the family of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales gives us the highest and most sensible pleasure, as it is, under God, a pledge of all the happiness of a good government, of all the blessings of religion and liberty to us and to our latest posterity, as it is the firmest security of the Protestant interest, and of the peace and freedom of Europe; and as it tends to prevent our fears, and to extinguish the hopes of the enemies of our country, and of our present happy constitution.

In this, as in many other happy events, we contemplate and adore the wisdom and goodness of the Divine Providence, and cease not, with most thankful acknowledgments, daily to present our earnest and ardent prayers to the Sovereign of the universe, and our merciful Father in Christ Jesus, to make us, with all the subjects of your Majesty's happy government, worthy of those instances and proofs of Divine favour.

That your Majesty may be long preserved to reign in the hearts of a free and flourishing people, and at last receive a crown of unfading glory;—that their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, blest in a numerous progeny, his Royal Highness the Duke, and all the branches of your august family, may live long the objects of the love and affection of all your faithful subjects; and, having finished a course of honour and virtue here, may receive the reward of immortal glory, are the constant and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most dutiful, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 8, May 22, 1752.—Act Deposing Mr Thomas Gillespie, Minister at Carnock, from the Office of the holy Ministry within this Church, and appointing the Presbytery of Dunfermline to admit Mr Andrew Richardson as Minister of the Parish of Inverkeithing.

The General Assembly, in pursuance of the orders given on Monday last to the Presbytery of Dunfermline, proceeded to call for the ministers of the said Presbytery to give an account of their conduct in consequence of the appointment then laid upon them to admit Mr Andrew Richardson as minister at Inverkeithing. The warrant to summon all the members of that Presbytery to meet at Inverkeithing, upon Thursday the 21st of May, for the said admission, and to summon each of the ministers of the Presbytery to appear at the bar of this House this day, together with a written execution of the same, were produced and read. The said ministers being called, there appeared Mr Robert Stark at Torryburn, Mr James Thomson at Dunfermline, Mr Thomas Fernie there, Mr David Hunter at Saline, Mr Robert Stark at Kinross, Mr James Stoddart at Culross, Mr Thomas Gillespie at Carnock, Mr Alexander Daling at Cleish, and Mr John Spence at Orwell. The Moderator produced and read a letter from Mr John Liston, minister at Aberdour, representing, that, according to the Assembly's appointment, he did attend at Inverkeithing yesterday, but could not appear before the Assembly this day because of his present indisposition; also, a letter from Mr James Bathgate, minister at Dalgettie, showing that he, in like manner, attended at Inverkeithing, but could not appear before the Assembly on account of the indisposition of his family. There was also produced and read a letter from Mr Robert Steedman, minister at Beith, together with an attestation from his physician, showing the bad state of his health, which made it unsafe for him to travel, so that he was not in condition to obey the Assembly's appointment concerning the admission of Mr Richardson, which otherwise he would willingly and cheerfully have submitted to. Then the ministers present being called upon, one by one, to give an account whether or not they had obeyed the Assembly's appointment, Mr James Thomson represented, that, according to the Assembly's appointment, he came to Inverkeithing yesterday at ten o'clock, and there met with Mr John Liston and Mr James Bathgate;—that they ordered the church bell to be rung between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock forenoon;—that immediately upon the ringing of the bell they went to the session-house within the church of Inverkeithing, and there waited till two o'clock afternoon;—that they were required, under form of instrument, by Colonel Arthur Forbes and others, callers of Mr Richardson, to admit him as minister there, but found they were not empowered to proceed, there being only three of them, whereas the Act of Assembly required five to make a quorum, for the purpose of the said admission;—that to show their readiness to execute the said sentence before they left the church, they intimated to all present, and ordered the Presbytery officer to intimate at the most patent church door, that they were to stay an hour or more in town, in a house which they named, in order to meet with any other ministers, in case more should appear, so as to make a quorum; all which was contained in the instrument of protest taken by Colonel Forbes, and now lodged in the clerk's hands; and, accordingly, they waited in town till five o'clock at night. Mr Robert Stark at Torryburn represented, that he went to Inverkeithing yesterday morning, in order to converse with the elders, and others, opposers of Mr Richardson's settlement, and endeavour so far to reconcile them to his admission, as to give him clearness to join in it;—that having met with them, he did all in his power to soften them, but to no purpose; so that he left the place;—that he had nothing further to offer but what was contained in a representation signed by him and other five brethren, to which he referred. Mr James Stoddart being called upon, acknowledged that he was not at Inverkeithing, and pled his peculiar situation, as, by a sentence of the Court of Session, he was found to have no title to the legal benefice in the parish of Culross, for which reason he had chosen to behave himself in the manner that appeared to him the most inoffensive, and had acted no part in the present question, or in other affairs, which came before the Presbytery. Then Messrs David Hunter, Thomas Gillespie, Alexander Daling, Thomas Fernie, and John Spence, being called upon, acknowledged they had received the summons; that they had not obeyed the Assembly's appointment, and for the reasons of their conduct, they gave in a representation signed by them, and Mr Stark at Torryburn, whereof the tenor follows, viz.:—“Unto the very Reverend the Moderator, and the Reverend and Honourable Members of the Venerable Assembly of the Church of Scotland, met at Edinburgh 1752, the humble Representation of the Members of the Presbytery of Dunfermline, whose names are hereunto subjoined. We cannot but be deeply affected with our present situation, in being obliged to stand at the bar of this Venerable Assembly, to answer for non-compliance with any of their appointments; but as this court is so good as to allow us to speak in our own behalf, we shall therefore beg leave humbly to represent some of those things which have all along straitened us in the execution of the orders we received, and which still lay such difficulties in our way as we are not able to surmount; and this we hope to do with that plainness and honesty, and, at the same time, with that decent and dutiful respect to the supreme judicatory of this Church, which it is so justly entitled to expect from us. We need scarce observe how unjustly we have been represented, as having no other difficulty but the unreasonable fear of opposing the ill-grounded prejudices of our people; nor need we inform this House, that ever since the Act restoring patronages, in the end of Queen Anne's reign, there has been a vehement opposition to all settlements by presentations, where there was but small concurrence; which settlements have already produced a train of the most unhappy consequences, greatly affecting the interest of religion; and if turned into the stated and fixed rule of procedure, will, in all probability, be attended with every fatal effect. Now, under such a view and apprehension as this, was it any wonder, or was it inconsistent with that obedience with we owe to our earthly superiors in the Lord, that we should demur and stop short in carrying a settlement into execution, where, in our apprehension, there was by no means such a concurrence of persons residing in the parish as might give sufficient weight and influence for promoting the great ends of the ministry? The Assembly know well, that it appears, from their own Acts and resolutions, entered into their records, that the law of patronage has been considered as no small grievance to this Church, not to say as inconsistent with our Union settlement; and we find it declared, Act 25th of May, 1736, that it is, and has been, since the Reformation, the principle of this Church, that no minister shall be intruded into any parish contrary to the will of the congregation; and, therefore, it is seriously recommended by the said Act to all judicatories of this Church to have a due regard to the said principle, in planting vacant congregations, so as none be intruded into such parishes, as they regard the glory of God and the edification of the body of Christ; which recommendation we humbly apprehend to be strongly supported by the principles of reason, and the laws of our Lord Jesus Christ. Permit us to inform the Assembly, that after repeated endeavours used by committees of the Presbytery, to lessen the opposition to Mr Richardson in the parish of Inverkeithing, matters still remain in such a situation, that we are brought to this unhappy dilemma, either of coming under the imputation of disobedience to a particular order of our ecclesiastical superiors, or contributing our part to the establishment of measures, which we can neither reconcile with the declared principles, nor with the true interest of this Church. On the whole, we cannot help thinking, that by having an active hand in carrying Mr Richardson's settlement into execution, we should be the unhappy instruments, as matters now stand, to speak in the language of Holy Writ, of scattering the flock of Christ, not to mention what might be the fatal consequences of such settlements to our happy civil constitution. If the Venerable Assembly shall, on this account, judge us guilty of such criminal disobedience as to deserve their censure, we trust they will at least allow that we acted as honest men, willing to forego every secular advantage for conscience-sake. In such an event, this, through grace, shall be our support, that not being charged with any neglect of the duties of our ministry among those committed to our care, we are to suffer for adhering to what we apprehend to be the will of our great Lord and Master, whose we are, whom we are bound to serve in all things, and on whom we cast all our care. ROBERT STARK, DAVID HUNTER, THOMAS GILLESPIE, ALEXANDER DALING, THOMAS FERNIE, JOHN SPENCE." Mr Robert Stark, minister at Kinross, being called upon, said he had not received the summons;—that he was in Inverkeithing yesterday morning, but did not meet with the three brethren who were there, in order to execute the Assembly's appointment, for which he offered his reasons viva voce. But, afterwards, of his own proper motion, he signified to the Assembly that he was so sensible of the straits his brethren were in, and of the bad effects of disobeying the authority of the Church, that he was willing to expose himself to all hazards, and concur with the other three brethren who had shown their readiness in obeying the Assembly's appointment, in case they thought proper to renew the same. Then the Moderator earnestly recommended it to the six brethren who gave in the above Representation, to consider seriously the situation they were now in, and take the opportunity they as yet had of saving themselves from the displeasure of the Church. And being again called upon, and asked, one by one, if they had any more to offer, they declared they had nothing further to add; whereupon they were removed. The Assembly then caused read over again the Representation given in by the six ministers above mentioned, and proceeded to consider what was proper for them to do in the present case; and after long reasoning, it was proposed that the General Assembly should now resolve that one of the six disobedient brethren shall be deposed. Whereupon, the question was agreed to be put, Depose or Not? it being understood, that if it carried Depose, the Assembly's resolution should be as above. Then the rolls being called, and votes marked, it carried by a considerable majority, Depose. Accordingly, the Assembly did, and hereby do, resolve that one of the said six ministers shall be deposed, and they adjourn till to-morrow the consideration of what remains to be done in this matter; and the ministers of the Presbytery of Dunfermline being called in, the above resolution of the Assembly was intimated to them, and they were ordered to attend to-morrow.

Sess. 9, May 23, 1752.

The Assembly proceeded to the cause respecting the brethren of the Presbytery of Dunfermline, and having caused to be called the six ministers who had subscribed the Representation given in yesterday, they all compeared; after which they were removed, and then were severally called in, one by one, and asked, if they had any thing further to offer before the Assembly should proceed to consider their ease, pursuant to the resolution of the Assembly yesterday. Mr Robert Stark at Torryburn answered, That he hears there will be some further accession to Mr Richardson in the parish of Inverkeithing, which, if he finds to be such as may clear his way, that will open his eyes in that matter. Mr Thomas Fernie answered, That as matters now stand, he has no freedom to have an active hand in the settlement. What he may do in the case of a change of circumstances he could not say till that change appears. Mr David Hunter answered, That as there is no alteration in the case since yesterday, as little can there be any change in his mind and sentiments. If an agreeable accession happen, it will be neither his inclination nor interest to be backward. Mr Alexander Daling answered, That he had nothing further to add. Mr John Spence, That he choosed to add nothing. Mr Thomas Gillespie read at the bar a Representation, expressing his adherence to the Representation given in yesterday, and said, that he had nothing further to add upon the subject. Then, after prayer for light and direction to the Assembly in their procedure and decision of this matter, it was put to the vote, which of the six brethren above mentioned shall be deposed, in pursuance of the resolution of yesterday; and the roll being called and votes marked, it was carried, Mr Thomas Gillespie. And, therefore, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, the sole King and Head of the Church, and by virtue of the power and authority committed by him to them, depose Mr Thomas Gillespie, minister at Carnock, from the office of the holy ministry, prohibiting and discharging him to exercise the same, or any part thereof, within this Church in all time coming; and the Assembly did, and hereby do declare, the church and parish of Carnock vacant from and after the day and date of this sentence. Then the Assembly proceeded to consider the case of the other ministers, members of the said Presbytery of Dunfermline, and, without a vote, came to the following resolution, viz.: They do hereby acquit Mr James Stoddard, minister at Culross, in respect of his special circumstances. They sustain the excuse of Mr Robert Steedman at Beith for not complying with the appointment of this Assembly, and not comparing at the bar yesterday, in respect of his bad state of health: And find, that Messrs James Thomson at Dunfermline, John Liston at Aberdour, and James Bathgate at Dalgettie, did their duty in attending at Inverkeithing, and showing their readiness to execute the Assembly's orders in case there had been a quorum, and the Assembly sustains the excuses of the said Messrs Liston and Bathgate for not attending at the bar of this Assembly; and because of the declaration yesterday emitted by Mr Robert Stark at Kinross at the bar, the Assembly pass from any censure upon him for his conduct hitherto. And the General Assembly, taking into their consideration the case of the remaining five disobedient brethren of the Presbytery of Dunfermline who have signed the Representation to this Assembly, and that, by the deposition of Mr Thomas Gillespie at Carnock, they not only have asserted the authority of this Supreme Court, but have inflicted upon him a censure adequate to repeated acts of disobedience adhered to tenaciously when at the bar; and that albeit the remaining offenders may have deserved the same censure, as being involved in the same transgression, yet being desirous to mix mercy and lenity with their judgment, do therefore remit to the Presbytery of Dunfermline to settle and admit the said Mr Andrew Richardson as minister of the parish of Inverkeithing, on or before the 18th day of June next to come, and ordain an exact list of the ministers who shall be present on that day, for the effect foresaid, to be made up and entered into the minutes of the Presbytery, with such excuses as may be made by any of them who shall happen to be absent; and the Assembly empowers and requires the Synod of Fife, at their first meeting after the said admission, to consider the said excuses, and either to sustain or reject the same; and the General Assembly hereby suspends such of those who shall be absent, and shall not send excuses from and after the day of the said admission, and such of them whose excuses shall be rejected by the said first meeting of the Synod after their admission, from and after the date of such sentence of the Synod, from the exercise of their offices in all Presbyteries, Synods, and General Assemblies, ay and until they shall respectively testify their sorrow for their disobedience to the Acts and ordinances of the General Assembly, either to their own Presbytery or Synod, or to any Assembly or Commission thereof, upon entering of which into the minutes of the Presbytery, Synod, or Commission, they are empowered and required to take off this sentence of suspension, and to reponne them, or any of them, respectively, to the full exercise of their office in their judicative capacity. And it is hereby declared, that it shall be competent for any member of the said Synod to dissent from the judgment of the Synod, sustaining or rejecting the excuses offered, and that such dissent shall be a sufficient foundation for reviewing that sentence in the ensuing General Assembly. And the ministers above named, of the said Presbytery of Dunfermline, being called, and all of them comparing, the foresaid sentence of deposition was pronounced and intimated in the words before mentioned, to the said Mr Thomas Gillespie, by the moderator from the chair, and the foresaid judgment and resolutions of the Assembly, with respect to the other brethren, were likewise intimated to them; and it being represented to the Assembly, that the next ordinary meeting of the Presbytery of Dunfermline is to be held on the first Wednesday of June, the General Assembly appoint the said Presbytery, at that meeting, to fix the particular day for the admission of the said Mr Richardson at Inverkeithing, in pursuance of this Act and appointment; which being also intimated to the parties at the bar, promoters of Mr Richardson's said settlement, Mr Archibald Murray, Advocate, in their name, took instruments thereupon in the clerk's hands.

*Sess. ult., May 25, 1752.—Act concerning Presbyteries neglecting to send up their Opinions upon Overtures transmitted to them.

The General Assembly, considering that a great many Presbyteries neglect to send up their opinions concerning overtures transmitted to them, whereby the consideration and enacting of several overtures hath been postponed, do hereby enact, that when any overture hath been twice transmitted, the General Assembly will, without further transmission, take such overtures into consideration, and pass into acts or reject the same as they shall see cause, although Presbyteries have not sent up their opinions.

Sess. ult., May 25, 1752.—Overture for regulating the Effect of Dissents from Judgments of Inferior Courts.†

There was transmitted to the General Assembly, from their Committee for Overtures, an overture for regulating the effect of dissents, which was read as follows, viz.:—The General Assembly, considering that the appearing of dissenters against particular judgments of inferior courts has created much trouble to the superior judicatories—for remedying thereof in all time coming, enact and ordain, that in all causes litigated betwixt parties before any inferior judicatories, when judgment is given in such way as one or more members think themselves obliged to dissent, this shall give them no title to appear before the superior courts in opposition to such judgment, unless they be called upon to defend themselves against censure, according to the Act of Assembly, 1644, anent dissenting voices. The General Assembly, having heard the above overture, do transmit the same to the several Presbyteries of this Church, that they may report their opinion thereon to the next Assembly.

* Remonstrances having been made against the way of passing this Act, it was, in 1753, transmitted as an overture. In 1758 it was re-enacted, (see 5th Act of that year.)—Ed. 1843.

† This overture does not appear to have been passed into an act.—Ed. 1843.

Sess. 3, May 26, 1753.—Act Discharging Presbyteries to elect Missionary Ministers or Preachers as their Commissioners to the General Assemblies.

The General Assembly, taking into consideration the case of commissions given sometimes by Presbyteries to missionary ministers, employed by the managers of the Royal Bounty, to represent them in the Assembly, do hereby discharge all Presbyteries to elect such missionary ministers to be their commissioners to the General Assembly in time coming.

V.

Sess. 7, June 1, 1753.—Act against Simoniack Practices.

The General Assembly, taking into consideration a representation made to them by the Synod of Angus and Mearns, relating to bargains betwixt patrons or heritors in parishes, and candidates for the ministry, or the friends of such candidates, and the great danger which may thence arise to this Church, do hereby enjoin the several Presbyteries in this Church, in order to prevent such practices for the future, to take all proper measures to discover if any such have happened in their bounds, and if, upon inquiry, it shall be found that any minister or probationer hath obliged himself, or that his friends, before his settlement, and in order to promote the same, have obliged themselves, upon the account of the candidate, that he shall not, during his incumbency, commence any process against the heritors for augmentation of stipend, reparation of manse, office-houses, or enlarging his glebe; or shall have become bound in any sum or sums of money, or any prestation to the patron or persons connected with the patron, in order to procure the presentation, or to the heritors or others concerned, in order to obtain a concurrence with the said presentation, or otherwise to procure a call to a vacant parish; or has entered into any simoniack paction or practice for that effect; that such Presbytery lay a representation of the said matter before the General Assembly, that the Procurator for the Church may have orders to raise and carry on a process of reduction of such bargains or obligations before the Court of Session; and also, the Assembly do hereby declare it a just cause of deposition in ministers, or of taking away the licence of a probationer; and ordain Presbyteries to proceed to such sentences against all such ministers and probationers as shall be hereafter found to have either entered into such bargains themselves, previous to their settlements, or who shall, after their settlements, homologate the deed of their friends, and do not immediately, when they come to the knowledge of it, intimate the same to the Presbytery of the bounds. And, further, the Assembly appoint this Act to be read by all Presbyteries to every person before he be licensed to preach the Gospel, and to every candidate for a settlement in their bounds, before they take any steps towards his settlement. And, further, the General Assembly being informed that in the case of a certain settlement in the Presbytery of Dundee, the present incumbent's friends, before his settlement, had, without his knowledge, entered into a bargain with the heritors, which has been very inconvenient for him ever since; they do therefore appoint their Procurator to raise and carry on a process of reduction of that bargain before the Lords of Council and Session at the public charge; and ordain the Presbytery of Dundee to give the Procurator a distinct account of the particulars of that matter, so far as they have access to know them, for the above mentioned purpose.

Sess. ult., June 4, 1753.

The General Assembly, finding, by the report of their Committee for Overtures, that a great number of Presbyteries have not yet sent up their returns to the overtures transmitted to them by the last and former Assemblies, do require such Presbyteries, as are still deficient, to send up their opinions on these overtures to the next General Assembly, viz. :—

Overture about the Psalmody, transmitted in the year 1750.

Overture about Licensing Probationers, transmitted in the year 1749, and, with an addition, in the year 1750.

Overture anent Processes against Probationers, transmitted in the year 1748.

Sess. ult., June 4, 1753.—Overture anent Presbyteries neglecting to send up their Opinions on the Overtures transmitted to them by the Assembly.

(See Act 5th, 1758.)

Upon a motion that the Assembly should consider the 7th Act of last Assembly with respect to overtures transmitted to Presbyteries, concerning which there were a good many instructions sent up with commissioners to this Assembly, remonstrating against the way of passing the said Act, the same not having been previously transmitted as an overture to Presbyteries, the General Assembly do hereby now transmit the said Act as an overture to the several Presbyteries of this Church; and appoint that they send up their opinions thereon to the next General Assembly; of which Act the tenor follows, viz. :—“The General Assembly, considering that a great many Presbyteries neglect to send up their opinions concerning overtures transmitted to them, whereby the consideration and enacting of several overtures hath been postponed, do hereby enact, that when any overture hath been twice transmitted, the General Assembly will, without further transmission, take such overtures into consideration, and pass into Acts or reject the same as they shall see cause, although Presbyteries have not sent up their opinions.”

The General Assembly enjoin all Presbyteries that they take care, in licensing probationers, strictly to observe the rules of the Word of God, and Acts of Assembly relative thereto—also strictly to observe the rules of this Church, with respect to Probationers for the ministry licensed in England, or in foreign parts; that before taking any steps towards a settlement in consequence of a presentation, they take care that the patron and presentee be duly qualified, and that the presentation be in the terms of law; and that when one is presented to a parish, against whom there appears to be no just objection, they use their best endeavours to render the presentee acceptable to the parish.

GEORGE WISHART, Cls. Eccl. Scot.

*May 30, 1754.—Overture anent Ministers ordained in England, or in Foreign Parts.

The General Assembly transmit the following overture to the several Presbyteries of this Church, that they may report their opinion thereupon to the next General Assembly, viz. :—“That before any minister ordained in England, or in foreign parts, be considered as a minister of this Church, so as to be capable of a charge in the Establishment, he shall preach before the Presbytery in whose bounds the charge is, and be examined by them, in order to their judging if he be duly qualified. And in case any such minister shall be presented by a patron, or receive a call to any parish previously to his undergoing the trial now mentioned, it shall be competent for the Presbytery to take trial of him as above, in order to his settlement.”

June 1, 1754.—Overture anent Members of Inferior Courts judging in Causes appealed from them to the Superior Courts.

(See 1741.)†

The General Assembly agreed to transmit the following overture, transmitted to them by the Commission of last Assembly, to the consideration of the several Presbyteries, that they may report their opinion thereon to the next General Assembly; which overture is as follows, viz. :—“The Commission considering that the present practice of this Church, whereby the members of inferior judicatories are excluded from judging or voting in the superior judicatories, in case of an appeal, is contrary to the practice of all other courts, both of law and equity, and in some measure subversive of that exact parity which is a leading part of our constitution, as it sometimes subjects the sentence of the far greater number to that of the lesser; and further, considering that, by this means, those who a little before acted in the character of judges, are obliged to stand at the bar on a level with the pannel, must enter into the spirit and warmth of a party, and, perhaps, are condemned for no other reason than giving sentence according to their best judgment, and which they would willingly have altered upon a review; and as it often, if not always, happens that when the members of inferior courts, before whom the cause was first tried and thoroughly canvassed, are removed, the affair is not sufficiently understood, particularly because those who voted among the minority are not allowed to assign any reasons for their conduct, except they have entered a complaint, which one would not choose to do, unless in a very strong case; and every one knows that, in the course of reasoning, things frequently cast up which perplex or mislead the judges, that could easily have been obviated or cleared up if the members of the inferior courts had not been deprived of the liberty of speaking. On all these accounts, and for many other obvious reasons, the Commission propose that the Assembly should transmit an overture to the consideration of the several Presbyteries, for allowing the members of inferior judicatories to sit, judge, and vote, in the Superior Courts, in cases of appeals, as they do at present in the case of a reference.

* This overture was again transmitted in the following year; but Presbyteries do not appear to have reported their opinion.—Ed. 1843.

† This overture appears to have been again and again transmitted, (see especially 1771. &c.) but never enacted.—Ed. 1843.

The General Assembly, being filled with the deepest concern on account of the prevalence of infidelity and immorality, the principles whereof have been, to the disgrace of our age and nation, so openly avowed in several books published of late in this country, and which are but too well known among us; do, therefore, judge it proper and necessary for them at this time to express the utmost abhorrence of these impious and infidel principles, which are subversive of all religion, natural and revealed, and have such pernicious influence on life and morals. And they do earnestly recommend it to all the ministers of this Church to exercise the vigilance, and to exert the zeal, which becomes their character, to preserve those under their charge from the contagion of these abominable tenets, and to stir up in them a solicitous concern to guard against them, and against the influence of those who are infected with them.

Sess. 1, May 20, 1756.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The frequent proofs you have given of your zeal and steadiness in promoting true piety, and the repeated experience we have had of your loyalty, attachment, and affection to our person and government, cannot but induce us most heartily to concur in your present meeting, and to countenance the same with our royal approbation and authority. And as we are persuaded that you will at all times, and more especially in the present juncture, be governed by, and are now come together with, the same good principles and dispositions, you may be assured of our firm resolution to protect the Church of Scotland, as by law established, and to maintain it in the full enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges.

We have had such proofs of the fidelity, prudence, and conduct of our right trusty and well-beloved Charles Lord Cathcart, that we have again thought fit to make choice of him to represent our person in this Assembly, not doubting, from the knowledge you have of his firm attachment to our person, family, and government, and of his zeal for the Church of Scotland, but that he will be most agreeable to you.

We have a thorough dependence, that your best endeavours will not be wanting, in whatever may contribute to the good and desirable end of advancing true piety and virtue, which is the chief intent of your present Assembly. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 21st day of April 1756, in the twenty-ninth year of our reign.

By His Majesty's Command,

HOLDERNESSE.

Sess. 3, May 22, 1756.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We received your Majesty's most gracious letter with that respect and gratitude which we owe to the best of Sovereigns, under whose auspicious government we enjoy so many inestimable blessings.

Your Majesty's countenancing our present meeting with your royal approbation and authority, is one of the many evidences you have given of your regard for the prosperity of this National Church.

Nothing can do more honour to us than that your Majesty is graciously pleased to take notice of our zeal and steadiness in promoting true piety, and of our loyalty, attachment, and affection to your sacred person and government.

When we reflect upon the justice and mildness of your government, and the unwearied attention your Majesty has given to the prosperity of all who are so happy as to live under it, we have the greatest confidence and joy in the assurances of your Majesty's firm resolution to protect the Church of Scotland, as by law established, and to maintain it in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges: At the same time, it fills our hearts with gratitude to Almighty God, by whom kings reign, with an ardent zeal to support your Majesty's government; and with the warmest resolution to promote the same pious and loyal principles, wherever our influence can reach; and, particularly, in the breasts of all those with whom we are more immediately concerned.

Your Majesty, in the present critical juncture, hath given such signal proofs of your fortitude and steadiness in the support of the rights and privileges of the crown of Britain, and of all, even its remotest subjects, against the attempts and usurpations of lawless power, that we consider ourselves as called upon, in a particular manner, to exert our utmost endeavours in defence of your Majesty's sacred person, and in support of that constitution and government which must be dear to us as men, Britons, and Protestants.

Your Majesty's renewal of your royal bounty for the reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and places where Popery and ignorance abound, we acknowledge with all thankfulness, and shall not fail to employ so pious a gift for promoting the important purposes for which it is most graciously bestowed.

The choice your Majesty has again been pleased to make of Lord Cathcart to represent your person in this Assembly, gives the highest pleasure to us, and to every member of the Church of Scotland.

The proofs your Majesty has had of his fidelity, prudence, and conduct; and the knowledge we have of his steady and firm attachment to your Majesty's person, family, and government, and of his regard and zeal for the rights and interests of the Church of Scotland, must render the choice of him most acceptable to us, and endear him to all who wish well to our present happy Establishment in Church and State.

We can, with great truth, assure your Majesty, that, as we are at this time met together in the National Assembly of this Church, our best endeavours shall be employed to promote the good and desirable end of advancing true piety and virtue, the great intent of our present meeting; studying to approve ourselves to Almighty God, and to justify the trust and confidence your Majesty is most graciously pleased to repose in us.

That he who is the King of kings may pour down his choicest blessings upon your Majesty's person and family; that the crown may long flourish upon your sacred head, and your precious life be preserved for a blessing to these realms; that that wisdom which is from above may inspire all your councils, and that strength which is Almighty may go forth with your arms; that God may abundantly bless his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, the Princess Dowager of Wales, the Duke, the Princesses, and all the branches of your royal family; and that after a long and happy reign upon earth, you may at last be received into that kingdom which cannot be moved, are, and shall be, the sincere and hearty prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

IV.

Sess. 4, May 24, 1756.—The General Assembly's Address to his Majesty, on Occasion of his Declaration of War against the French King.

Most gracious Sovereign,

Your Majesty's just resentment of the encroachments of the French in America has compelled that nation to throw off the mask of peace, under which they have carried on designs so pernicious to Great Britain. Hostilities are begun in Europe; war is now declared; France has invaded Minorca, and threatens with invasion the British Isles.

In this critical situation of public affairs, we, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the National Assembly, think it our duty to express our deep concern for the general welfare, and our affectionate regard for a prince who is the guardian of liberty, and the father of his people; and we heartily embrace this opportunity of giving your Majesty assurances which cannot fail of being acceptable to your benign disposition—authentic assurances of the loyalty of the people of Scotland.

The members of this Established Church, who make so great a majority of the inhabitants of North Britain, are universally fervent in their zeal for your Majesty's person and family. Devoted of old to the best of causes, religion and liberty, the Presbyterians early fixed their hearts and hopes on the House of Hanover, by whose succession alone religion and liberty could have been preserved. The happy experience of almost half an age, during the reign of your Majesty, and your royal father, have demonstrated the wisdom of our ancestors, and confirmed the present generation in their loyalty and love to your illustrious House.

Nor is it less from our certain knowledge of the present spirit, than of the ancient principles of the Church of Scotland, that we can venture to assure your sacred Majesty, that, in no part of your dominions the zeal of the subjects may be more safely relied on; for never was the affection of this nation to their prince so manifest as at this juncture. Roused by the approach of danger, the hearts of your people, most gracious Sovereign, are more than ever yours; and should that danger come, which may the Providence of God avert, it will be found, Great Sir, that your government will be supported in this part of the united kingdom, by the zeal and courage of your most faithful people, who hold nothing so dear as religion and liberty, and esteem nothing so glorious as loyalty to a prince by whom religion and liberty are held sacred.

We beg leave to assure your Majesty, that in our sphere we shall make it our great care to cultivate these good and happy dispositions in your people; and shall endeavour to make it manifest that we have nothing so much at heart as the glory of God, the honour of your Majesty, and the support of your government.

That mutual love and confidence may still subsist between your Majesty and your subjects; that the God of battles may bless your fleets and armies with success; and that a race of kings of your royal line, lovers of religion, liberty, and their country, may always sway the sceptre of these lands, is the fervent prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

PATRICK CUMING, Moderator.

VI.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1756.—Act appointing a solemn National Fast.

Whereas our Sovereign, in defence of Great Britain and Ireland, and the dominions thereto belonging, has declared war against France, the formidable enemy of the religion and liberties of our country; And whereas the Almighty, in former times, has done great things for these nations; has bestowed upon them inestimable privileges; and, in the day of danger, when our fathers cried unto God, he heard from heaven, raised up deliverers, and saved, according to his manifold mercies; and still continues to distinguish us beyond all nations, blessing us with the best religion, and best of governments.

Yet, notwithstanding all this goodness showed to these nations, just cause there is to lament that we have not learned wisdom from our dangers, nor gratitude from our deliverances; that we have not duly prized nor improved our advantages; but as God has multiplied his favours upon us, we have multiplied our transgressions against the God of heaven; and too visible it is, that infidelity, luxury, vice, and profaneness, have widely diffused their contagion, and infected this nation.

From this aggravated guilt we have reason to dread that God may be provoked to depart from us; to deliver us a prey into the hands of our enemies; and, by an inclement season, to blast the fruits of the earth, and break the staff of bread in our land; thus visiting us, for our iniquities, with the desolating calamities of war and famine.

The National Assembly of the Church of Scotland, in this important crisis, when we have much to fear from our enemies, and more from our own follies and heinous transgressions, do, therefore, most seriously call and exhort all to the duties of solemn fasting, humiliation, and prayer, upon such a day as his Majesty shall please to appoint; the Assembly having made humble application to him to name the day, and interpose his royal authority for the due observation thereof; and they do earnestly obtest persons of all ranks, as they tender the favour of Almighty God, and the welfare of these nations, to humble themselves, with penitent and contrite souls, in the sight of that God who, dwelling in his high and holy place, dwelleth also with them who are of contrite and humble hearts, to confess and forsake their sins, imploring, through Jesus Christ, grace and mercy from the Father of mercies; beseeching the Divine Majesty to revive among us a spirit of primitive integrity, piety, and virtue; that we may be inspired with reverence of the Almighty, loyalty to our Sovereign, love and zeal for our constitution, civil and religious; that there may be one mind and one heart in us all; that every heart may be warm with the love of our country, and every hand cheerfully employed in her service: And if, in the Providence of God, we shall be called to appear in the defence of the Protestant religion, and our national privileges, that in so noble a cause we may act a part becoming our characters, as Protestants and free Britons; may be of good courage, and may play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God.

The Assembly further enjoins, that in the day of public prayer, supplications be offered to the God of heaven, that he may bless our Sovereign King George, long preserve his valuable life, direct his councils, establish his throne in righteousness, and that he may continue to reign in the hearts of a free and happy people; that God may bless their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Princess Dowager of Wales, the Duke of Cumberland, the Princesses, and all the royal family: That God may give wisdom to our counsellors, conduct to our commanders, and strength to those who turn the battle from our gates; that our trust and confidence being placed not in an arm of flesh, but in the Lord Jehovah, in whom there is everlasting strength, he, the Righteous Governor of the universe, may favour our righteous cause; the Lord of Hosts may go forth with our fleets and armies, protect those in the day of battle who expose their lives for our safety, and crown their arms with victory and success; that God, who setteth bounds to the sea, stilleth the raging of its waves, and the tumults of the people, would make this expensive and dangerous war speedily to terminate in a safe and honourable peace; that the God of nature, whom all the elements obey, would send such weather as will cherish the fruits of the earth, that our pastures may be clothed with flocks, and our valleys covered over with corn; that our land may yield her increase, and the year at length be crowned with the Divine goodness; that we, enjoying the blessings of peace and plenty in all our borders, and, being delivered by the Almighty from the hands of our enemies, may serve our God without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him all the days of our lives; that the beauty of the Lord our God may be upon us, and glory, the glory of civil and religious liberty, may ever dwell in our land. And the Assembly enjoins all ministers to intimate this Act from their pulpits upon the Lord's Day immediately preceding the day that shall be appointed by his Majesty for the observance of the fast, and to excite the people to their duty by suitable exhortations.

VII.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1756.—Act and Recommendation of the General Assembly respecting Irish Bursaries.

The General Assembly, taking into their consideration repeated representations that have been made of the great scarcity of preachers and students in divinity, having the Irish language, by which means many parishes in the Highlands and Islands, where the English is not generally understood, are likely to become destitute of the means of religious knowledge, and several parishes already vacant, particularly where Popery abounds, cannot be supplied for want of persons capable of preaching to them in that language which they are acquainted with, did, therefore, agree, that the former laudable practice, of giving bursaries to students having the Irish language, be revived; and the General Assembly do hereby, in so far, repeal the 7th Act of the Assembly, 1737, superseding that practice; and do earnestly recommend to every minister of this Church to pay in, from year to year, to the clerk of his Presbytery, three shillings sterling; and appoint the money, so collected, to be transmitted to William Ross, clerk to the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, before the second day of February each year; and that the foresaid money be applied for educating students for the ministry, having the Irish language, in such manner as the General Assembly of this Church shall judge most proper. And the Assembly ordains that every student that shall be trained for the ministry in the Highlands and Islands, upon the fund to be raised for this purpose, shall, when he comes to be settled as a minister, preach every Lord's Day in English, as well as in the Irish language: And it is recommended to all the ministers now settled in those parts to do the same. And they are hereby appointed to do everything in their power, with the assistance of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and other friends of our country, religion, and government, to have as many good schools as may be in that part of the kingdom, so as the English tongue may spread the faster, till it be universally understood and spoken.

Sess. 6, May 25, 1757.—Act anent the Method of keeping the Separate Registers.

The General Assembly, having heard the report of the Trustees for Managing the Fund for a Provision to Ministers' Widows, &c. concerning the manner of keeping the separate registers, do appoint, that, for the future, the separate registers shall be divided into as many parts as the respective Presbyteries consist of parishes; and that the facts respecting the ministers and vacancies of every parish shall be stated under its own proper head or division, marked with the name of the parish: And further, as an abstract is to be prepared of the two Acts relative to the fund, and of what other papers are necessary for the direction of Presbyteries and Universities respecting the said fund, the General Assembly appoint, that, as soon as this abstract shall be transmitted, every Presbytery and University shall cause it to be bound up with a quire of clean paper, in order that whatever after regulations shall be found necessary with respect to the fund, these may be copied over into the said book, by which means the whole of the rules concerning the fund will be always at hand.

Sess. 8, May 27, 1757.—Recommendation to Presbyteries to take care that none of the Ministers of this Church attend the Theatre.

The General Assembly, considering how much the success of the Gospel depends on the regular and inoffensive behaviour of the ministers of this Church, do earnestly recommend to the several Presbyteries to take such wise and effectual measures as may promote the spirit of our holy religion, and preserve the purity and decorum of the ministerial character; and that they take care that none of the ministers of this Church do, upon any occasion, attend the theatre.

Sess. 9, May 28, 1757.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, &c.

VII.

Sess. ult., May 30, 1757.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and for Managing his Majesty's Royal Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint, the Rev. Mr William Leechman, Professor of Divinity in the College of Glasgow, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, for promoting the knowledge of true religion, suppressing Popery and profaneness, and for managing the royal bounty given for these ends, according to and in terms of his Majesty's grant to this Assembly. In prosecution of which purposes, the committee are to appoint preachers and catechists to go to such places as they shall find, upon due information, to be most proper, according to his Majesty's design, expressed in his warrant. And they shall take care that the persons they employ be certified, and found, upon due trial, to be properly qualified for these respective offices, of good abilities for the same, of a pious life and conversation, prudent, of undoubted loyalty to his Majesty, and of competent skill in the principles of divinity, and particularly in Popish controversies; such preachers and catechists being hereby appointed to be subject to and under the inspection of the Presbyteries of the bounds to which they are sent, who are to take care that the orders of the committee be duly observed by them. And the preachers are also appointed to catechise, and both they and the catechists to instruct the people from house to house, and to visit the sick; and in all their labours among the people to be careful to teach them the principles and duties of the true Christian Protestant religion, and the obligations they are under to duty and loyalty to our Sovereign King George, and obedience to the laws; and the committee are empowered to give them such instructions, as to their work and behaviour, as they shall judge meet; which instructions the preachers and catechists are hereby ordered to obey. The General Assembly do further appoint the said committee to have a particular regard, in their proceedings, to the regulations agreed upon by the committee of the Assembly for managing the royal bounty, on the 30th day of September 1730, approved by subsequent Assemblies; and to take care that Presbyteries, and others concerned, observe the same, which they are hereby ordered to do; particularly, the Assembly ordains the several Presbyteries to insert in their registers the committee's appointments of the designations, salaries, and stations, of the several missionaries, and to have an exact regard thereto in all the letters they shall write about the said missionaries, and in giving of certificates to them, and to direct all their letters concerning missionaries in their bounds only to the moderator of the committee; which letters shall be signed, at the appointment of the Presbytery, by the moderator or clerk thereof. And the Assembly does discharge any payments to be made of the salaries of missionaries, except upon receipts from the missionaries themselves, and upon certificates from the Presbyteries, bearing that they have served for the time mentioned in the receipts. The General Assembly do also empower the said committee to apply, for the purposes above mentioned, what may remain of the last year's royal bounty not disposed of, by reason of any of the missionaries not fulfilling the appointments laid upon them; and they are to keep a register of their proceedings, and likewise distinct books of accounts how the foresaid money is bestowed, which shall be patent to any concerned who please to inspect the same. Of the persons above named as members of this committee, five are declared to be a quorum, whereof three are to be ministers. But it is hereby appointed, that at the quarterly meeting of the committee, in which the scheme or establishment of missionaries for the ensuing year is to be approved and determined, not less than fourteen shall be the quorum, whereof nine shall be ministers; and the said committee are appointed to have their meetings at Edinburgh, in the Hall of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the last Thursday of every month, at four o'clock afternoon, and also the first lawful day after the adjournment of the four stated diets of the Commission of the General Assembly, at ten o'clock forenoon, except that day should fall to be Saturday, and then the meeting shall be upon Monday next thereafter, at the said hour; with power to the said committee to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find most needful and convenient; and they are to keep a correspondence with the Commission of the General Assembly and the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee of directors, and take their advice and assistance; and also to correspond with Synods and Presbyteries concerned. They are likewise instructed and empowered, as they shall see cause, to apply to the government, or any magistrate, for assistance and support in carrying on the design of the commission now given to them. And the General Assembly do, by these presents, nominate and appoint Mr David Dalrymple, Advocate, Procurator for the Church, to be receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, and to pay out the same as he shall be directed and ordered by the said committee, and according to their rules. And the said committee are appointed to examine the accounts of the distribution of the royal bounty, and lay the same before the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, or the Barons of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer, and to report their diligence to the General Assembly, to whom they are to be accountable. And it is agreed that no person, once employed and inserted in the scheme, shall be struck out thereof for that year, but by the quorum of at least fourteen, whereof nine to be ministers; and in case any complaint shall be made against any of them on the scheme, it shall not be determined at the first ordinary meeting that the same is offered, but shall lie on the table till another meeting; and, in the meantime, the person complained of, and the Presbytery of the bounds wherein he officiates, shall be acquainted of such complaint, and those concerned be required to send to the said committee a just account of the matter against their next meeting. And it is further appointed, that after the yearly scheme of missionaries on the royal bounty is settled in manner above directed, and notice thereof given, by letters, to the Presbyteries concerned, such Presbyteries shall send up to the said committee their answers to these letters, at farthest, with their commissioners to the General Assembly, if the same be not done sooner; and that the committee, at their first meeting after the General Assembly, in case they do not complete the next year's scheme themselves, shall name a sub-committee of their number for completing the same, who are to lay their draught thereof before a subsequent meeting.

May 28, 1757.—Act and Overture against Simoniacal Practices.

(See 8th Act, 1759.)

An explanation or amendment being proposed of a part of the 1st Act, June 1753, against simoniacal practices, the General Assembly agreed to transmit the foresaid Act, and explication thereof, as an overture, to the consideration of the several Presbyteries of this Church, that they may send up their opinions thereupon to the next General Assembly, and appoint that, in the meantime, the same have the force of an Act, and that Presbyteries take it into their consideration as soon as the Acts of Assembly shall come into their hands; of which explication the tenor follows, viz. :—“Whereas, in the Act of Assembly of the 1st June 1753, against simoniacal practices, there is the following branch or clause,—‘and do not immediately, when they come to the knowledge of it, intimate the same to the Presbytery of the bounds;’ and whereas it is found necessary to explain and amend the said clause, it is, therefore, hereby enacted, that if any such simoniacal practices as are mentioned and described in the said Act, shall be carried on by any person or persons whatsoever, in order to the promoting or procuring any benefice or office in this Church, to any minister or probationer, though without his consent or approbation; and if such minister or probationer shall at any time be told or informed that such practices have been or are carried on, or proposed to be carried on, for the purpose aforesaid, and shall not make discovery or intimation thereof to the Presbytery of the bounds, at their first meeting after he shall receive such information, then, and in that case, he shall, if a minister, be deposed, and if a probationer, be deprived of his licence.”

Sess. 5, May 30, 1758.—Act declaring Mr Thomas Boston, late Minister at Oxnam, incapable of receiving or accepting a Presentation or Call to any Parish in this Church, without the special allowance of the General Assembly.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly, from their Committee for Bills, a reference from the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale, concerning the Rev. Mr Thomas Boston, who had deserted his charge of the parish of Oxnam, and set up a separate meeting in the parish of Jedburgh, containing an overture given in to them by a committee of their number, and the Synod's approbation thereof, bearing, that Mr Boston's conduct deserved severe censure; but that, in order to give weight to any censure which may be inflicted, they proposed the authority of the General Assembly of this Church should be interposed; and, therefore, had appointed the Presbytery of Jedburgh to transmit to this Assembly extracts from their records, of the demission given in to them by Mr Boston, and of their deliverance thereupon; and that the Presbytery should cause summon Mr Boston to compare before this Assembly, in order to their giving a final judgment or direction in the affair as they shall see cause. Upon the reading of the above reference, the Presbytery of Jedburgh being inquired at, with respect to the appointment laid upon them by the Synod, represented, that, in obedience thereto, they had ordered Mr Boston to be summoned to this Assembly; and an execution being produced and read of his being accordingly summoned, he was called, but did not compare. Then the Assembly caused to be read the minutes of the Presbytery of Jedburgh, dated the 7th of December last, containing a demission given in to them by Mr Boston of his charge at Oxnam; and a question being moved, how far it was proper for the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale to have taken up this affair, and to have brought it immediately before the Assembly? that part of the 4th Act of Assembly, 1739, concerning ministers who secede from this Church, which directs the several judicatories in their method of procedure in such cases, was read. After some reasoning, the General Assembly did agree, in respect of the particular circumstances attending this cause, to take Mr Boston's demission under their consideration, together with the proceedings of the Presbytery of Jedburgh, relating to him; whereby the Assembly finds that the said Mr Thomas Boston has declared himself to be no minister of this Church, and that he will not hold communion with her judicatories; and, therefore, they did, without a vote, and hereby do, declare, that he is incapable of receiving or accepting of a presentation or call to any parish in this Church, without the special allowance of some future General Assembly. And the General Assembly do hereby prohibit all the ministers of this Church from employing him to preach or perform any ministerial offices for them, or from being employed by him, unless some future Assembly shall see cause to take off this prohibition. And Mr Boston being called, and not comparing, the above sentence was publicly read.

V.

Sess. 9, June 3, 1758.—Act anent Presbyteries neglecting to send up their Opinions on Overtures transmitted to them.

The General Assembly, considering that a great many Presbyteries neglect to send up their opinions concerning overtures transmitted to them, whereby the consideration and enacting of several overtures has been postponed, do hereby enact, that when any overture hath been twice transmitted, the General Assembly will, without further transmission, take them into consideration, and pass them into Acts, or reject them, as they shall see cause, although Presbyteries have not sent up their opinions.

VI.

Sess. 9, June 3, 1758.—Act anent Parochial Schools.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly, from the Committee for Overtures, a representation by the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, setting forth—“That by divers laws and Acts of Parliament, particularly the 17th Act of the Parliament, 1646, and 26th Act of the Parliament, 1696, it is statuted and ordained, that there be a school settled, and a schoolmaster appointed, in every parish; and, for that effect, that a commodious house be provided for a school, and a salary modified for the schoolmaster, not under 100 merks, nor above 200 merks, to be paid by the heritors and liferenters, according to their valuations, and to be laid on and uplifted in manner mentioned in the foresaid Acts; and, particularly, by the said Acts it is provided, that if the heritors of the parish shall not convene and agree amongst themselves anent the premises, that the Commissioners of Supply, or any five of them, upon application from the Presbytery, shall have power to settle a school, and modify a salary to the schoolmaster, as aforesaid. That, notwithstanding of the above quoted, and other acts of Parliament, as well as several acts of the Privy Council of Scotland to the same purpose, the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge are sorry to find, that in no less than 175 parishes, within the bounds of 39 Presbyteries, where the Society's schools are erected, parochial schools are not yet erected, and of these parishes the Society have given in a list, founded on the information of the Presbyteries in which the parishes lie. The Society are extremely sensible that it would be improper for them to point out to the Assembly the fatal consequences of this neglect; these must occur to every person who considers of how much consequence it is to train up the youth of this, or of any country, in learning and Christian knowledge. The Society are also unwilling to suggest to the Assembly to what causes, at least in some places, this neglect may be owing. They are sorry to say, that those for whose benefit this salutary regulation was principally designed are not always so ready and willing as they ought to be to carry it into execution, although the burden it lays upon them is so extremely small, as to bear no proportion to the benefit derived from it. The Society have done every thing in their power to have this neglect remedied; so far as their influence has reached, they have excited all concerned to comply with so reasonable a demand. They have done more; they have threatened to withdraw their charity schools from those parishes which neglect or refuse to provide parochial ones; they have passed an act to that purpose, and have notified the same to every Presbytery where their schools lie. It was never surely the intention of the donors, nor of the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, to substitute their charity schools in place of parochial schools, which are by law appointed to be established through the whole country. It will easily occur to the Assembly that there is work enough for both. As it is but too certain that in many places the heritors are backward in raising and establishing parochial schools, and as, by the acts already quoted, in every case when that happens, the remedy is by an application from the Presbytery to the Commissioners of Supply, the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge thought it their duty to apply to the Assembly, that, by their authority, it may be recommended to every Presbytery through Scotland to inquire whether or not a parochial school is established in every parish within their bounds, and in every instance where that shall not be found to be the case, that an immediate application be made by the Presbytery to the Commissioners of Supply, to have a parochial school forthwith established in that parish. And as they conceive this affair to be of the last consequence to the interests of learning, religion, and virtue, and to the peace and prosperity of the country, the Society beg leave further to suggest, that the result of the above inquiry and requisition be forthwith notified to the Procurator and Agent for the Church, that under their direction a process may, in name of the particular Presbytery, and of the Procurator, be, in case of necessity, immediately commenced, for having a school erected in that parish; and that the expense of these processes, which cannot be considerable, as the law is clear, and as one summons will do for all the parishes within the same Presbytery, may be defrayed out of the Church's funds." The General Assembly, having heard the said representation read, with the opinion of the Committee for Overtures thereupon, do hereby appoint the several Presbyteries of this Church to inquire whether or not a parochial school is established in every parish in their bounds, and where such schools are wanting, the Presbyteries concerned are hereby appointed to make application to the Commissioners of Supply for having parochial schools, with legal salaries, erected in every parish, as the law directs. And the General Assembly appoint the Procurator and Agent for the Church, at the public charge, to commence and carry on all processes necessary for having the laws respecting parochial schools put in execution.

Sess. 4, May 28, 1759.—Act appointing the Synod of Ross to meet once in the Year, and that on the second Tuesday of May yearly.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly, from their Committee for Bills, a representation and petition by the Provincial Synod of Ross, setting forth, That the said Synod consists only of three Presbyteries, which are made up of twenty-five parishes. That the bounds, however, are very spacious, and interjected by branches of the sea, where the crossing of ferries, especially about the time of the Synod's meetings, which happen to be about the seasons of the Equinoctial storms, makes the attendance of members both dangerous and precarious. That there have been instances more than once, and one at the very last meeting of Synod, when all the members of a Presbytery have been stopped at ferries, and their design of attending disappointed, whereby it frequently happened that in some cases the sentence and decree of the Synod was only the deed of one Presbytery, the other being removed as parties, and the third almost, or altogether, absent: That of late years business has not been throng, so that two Synodical meetings yearly have been held more for form's sake, and in obedience to the Assembly's Act, than for real necessity. For which causes, and several others, too tedious to be enumerated, the said Synod have for a long time had under deliberation, and at length, at the last meeting, which was held in April, determined and appointed that an application should be made to this Assembly for an Act repealing the former Act, which appointed the Synod to meet twice annually, viz., once in September, and again in April; and, instead thereof, that the annual meeting of the Synod of Ross should be appointed to hold yearly, upon the second Tuesday of the month of May, which the Synod are encouraged to insist for, and hope, not only for the onerous causes above mentioned, but because also the same is the case with the two adjacent Synods of Caithness and Glenelg, the correspondents of which Synods might, with great propriety and conveniency, attend the Synod of Ross, in their way to the General Assembly; their annual meeting holding only in the month of July. And, therefore, praying the Assembly would take the premises under their consideration, and appoint the said Synod to hold but one meeting annually, and that upon the second Tuesday of May:—Which petition being read, with the opinion of the Committee for Bills thereupon, the General Assembly did, in terms thereof, and hereby do, repeal the Act of Assembly, appointing the Synod of Ross to meet twice in the year, viz., in the months of April and September; and the General Assembly do appoint, that in time coming the said Synod meet once in the year, and that on the second Tuesday of May yearly.

V.

Sess. 5, May 30, 1759.—Act appointing the Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale to meet on the first Tuesday of May yearly.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly, from the Committee for Bills, a petition by the Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, bearing, That it was found very inconvenient to have their meetings in May, sometimes on the second Tuesday, and at other times on the third Tuesday of that month; therefore, praying that their meetings after this might be fixed on the first Tuesday of May:—Which petition being read, with the opinion of the Committee for Bills thereon, the General Assembly unanimously agreed to grant the desire thereof; and accordingly do appoint that in the month of May the Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale shall meet, in time coming, on the first Tuesday of that month.

VI.

Sess. 5, May 30, 1759.—Act against Ministers making Agreements with their Heritors, with respect to obtaining a Decree of Modification and Locality for their Stipends.

The General Assembly, having had represented to them the great loss which many of the present ministers of this Church sustain from agreements which have been made betwixt their predecessors in office and the heritors of their respective parishes, concerning the extent of their stipends, wherenpon decreets of modification and locality have been obtained, with consent of parties, do, therefore, enact and ordain, that in all time coming no minister shall make any composition with his heritors with respect to obtaining a decree of modification and locality for his stipend, but at the sight, and with the advice and consent of the Presbytery of the bounds.

VII.

Sess. 5, May 30, 1759.—Act anent the Supplying of Vacancies.

The General Assembly, in order to prevent long and unnecessary protracting of the vacancy of parishes, do appoint, that it shall be among the questions asked by Synods at the several Presbyteries at the privy censures, What vacancies there are in their bounds; of how long continuance these have been; and the reasons why they are not supplied? and if the Synod shall find any Presbytery dilatory, after the right of planting any parish has by law fallen into their hands, the Synod shall enjoin them to proceed toward the settlement of that parish without further delay.

VIII.

Sess. 5, May 30, 1759.—Act against Simoniacal Practices, containing an Explication of the Fifth Act of Assembly, 1753.

The General Assembly, taking into consideration a representation of the Synod of Angus and Mearns, relating to bargains betwixt patrons or heritors in parishes, and candidates for the ministry, or the friends of such candidates, and the great danger which may thence arise to this Church; do hereby enjoin the several Presbyteries in this Church, in order to prevent such practices for the future, to take all proper measures to discover if any such have happened in their bounds; and if, upon inquiry, it shall be found that any minister or probationer hath obliged himself, or that his friends, before his settlement, and in order to promote the same, have obliged themselves upon the account of the candidate, that he shall not during his incumbency commence any process against the heritors for augmentation of stipend, reparation of manse, office-houses, or enlarging his glebe, or shall have become bound in any sum or sums of money, or any prestation to the patron or person connected with the patron, in order to procure the presentation, or to the heritors or others concerned, in order to obtain a concurrence with the said presentation, or otherwise to procure a call to a vacant parish, or has entered into any simoniacal paction or practice for that effect, that such Presbytery lay a representation of the said matter before the General Assembly, that the Procurator for the Church may have orders to raise and carry on a process of reduction of such bargains or obligations before the Court of Session; and also the Assembly do hereby declare it a just cause of deposition in ministers, or of taking away the licence of a probationer; and ordain Presbyteries to proceed to such sentences against all such ministers and probationers as shall be hereafter found to have either entered into such bargains themselves, previous to their settlements, or who shall, after their settlements, homologate the deed of their friends. And it is hereby enacted, that if any such simoniacal practices as are mentioned and described in this Act shall be carried on by any person or persons whatsoever, in order to the promoting or procuring any benefice or office in this Church, to any minister or probationer, though without his consent or approbation; and if such minister or probationer shall at any time be told or informed that such practices have been or are carried on, or proposed to be carried on, for the purpose aforesaid, and shall not make discovery or intimation thereof to the Presbytery of the bounds, at their first meeting after he shall receive such information, then, and in that case, he shall, if a minister, be deposed, and if a probationer, be deprived of his licence. And, further, the Assembly appoint this Act to be read by all Presbyteries to every person before he be licensed to preach the Gospel, and to every candidate for a settlement in their bounds before they take any steps towards his settlement.

X.

Sess. 8, June 2, 1759.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands, and for Managing his Majesty's Royal Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly do hereby nominate, commission, and appoint the Rev. Dr George Kay, one of the ministers of Edinburgh, their Moderator, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, &c. (The Act proceeds in the same terms as the corresponding Act of the two preceding years, with the additional injunction to the committee to have particular regard to such parishes as South Uist, Small Isles, Glencoe, Harris, the countries of Moidart, Glengarry, and Lochaber, and the other parishes of the Synods of Glenelg and Argyle.)

Sess. 7, June 1, 1759.—Overture for an Addition to be made to the Sixth Act of this Assembly, against Ministers making Agreements with their Heritors.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly, from their Committee for Overtures, an overture of an addition to be made to the Act of this Assembly, the 30th day of May, which addition being made to the Act, the whole is as follows, viz. :—
 “That in all time coming no minister shall make any composition or agreement with his heritors, or any others, with respect to obtaining a decret of modification and locality for his stipend, or with respect to his glebe, grass, or any other emoluments, to which a minister has, or may have any right, but at the sight, and with the advice and consent of the Presbytery of the bounds, under the pain of such censure as the Presbytery of the bounds shall think proper to inflict; and that no minister shall enter into any agreement, or accept of any payment of his stipend, inconsistent with the decret of modification or locality, or use and wont of payment, without an acknowledgment in writing, obtained from the heritor or heritors, produced to the Presbytery, and such acknowledgment inserted in the Presbytery records.” Which overture being read, the General Assembly agreed to transmit this addition to the Act foresaid to the several Presbyteries of this Church, that they may send up their opinion thereon to the next General Assembly. Sess. 6, May 21, 1760.—The General Assembly's Address to the King, on Account of the signal Successes of his Arms since the last General Assembly.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in a National Assembly, take this first opportunity of approaching your sacred person, with our most humble and sincere congratulations upon the signal and uninterrupted success with which, since our last meeting, it hath pleased Almighty God to bless your arms. All the efforts of your Majesty's enemies have been disconcerted or defeated, while every battle fought by your fleets and armies hath led to victory, every armament hath accomplished its intention; and as the operations of war have been more extensive, they have likewise been more prosperous than those any former age can boast of. These great events we have observed with the utmost gratitude to your Majesty, under whose prudent and vigorous administration we enjoy such distinguished blessings; nor have we ceased continually to offer up our devout acknowledgments to the Lord of Hosts, from whom alone strength and wisdom are derived, and who hath enabled us both to fight and to overcome.

But amidst our rejoicings for victories obtained in every part of the world, it was with the utmost concern that we beheld the approach of domestic calamity, and were witnesses of the alarm and terror which the invasion, threatened and attempted by the French King, spread among the inhabitants of this part of the island, sensible, at that juncture, both of the danger to which they were exposed, and of their inability to exert themselves in repelling your Majesty's enemies with such vigour as their principles of religion and loyalty would naturally have inspired.

We have always reckoned it an important part of our duty to animate the people committed to our care with zeal for the Protestant religion, with veneration for our happy constitution, and with attachment to your Majesty's person and family, nor have our unwearied endeavours been unaccompanied with success; and it is with great pleasure we can assure your Majesty, that the wisdom, justice, and lenity, of your Majesty's administration, your paternal attention to the welfare of this part of Great Britain, and your magnanimity in reposing confidence even in those who, from their former conduct, could not hope for such marks of your royal favour, have operated with a most powerful and happy influence, and have gone far towards overcoming ancient and unreasonable prejudices. Our constant intercourse with the people under our charge gives us the best access to be acquainted with their principles and inclinations; and we think ourselves called upon by our duty to your Majesty, as well as in justice to them, to assure your Majesty, that the members of this National Church (of whom the great body of the people is composed) have discovered such sentiments as become British subjects, upon every appearance of danger with which your Majesty's kingdoms and government were threatened, that they would embrace with joy every opportunity of exerting themselves in defence of both, and would act with such spirit and loyalty, as would render Great Britain still more formidable to its enemies, and add to its internal strength and security.

That Almighty God may long preserve your Majesty's important life ; that he may bless your royal family ; that he may continue to go forth with your fleets and armies ; and that, after blessing your Majesty with success in war, he may enable you to put a period to the desolation and calamities of Europe by a lasting peace, are the daily and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most dutiful, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 5, May 26, 1761.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.*

GEORGE, R.,

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. Having the most perfect confidence as well in your loyalty and affection to our person and government, as in your zeal for the encouragement of virtue and piety, we take this first opportunity of assuring you of our fixed purpose and resolution to support the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, in the full enjoyment of its rights and privileges, as by law established.

At the same time, as we have no doubt of your coming together in the best intentions to promote the happiness of our reign, and the true interest of the Church whereof you are members, we have a particular satisfaction in countenancing your present meeting with our royal authority.

The many and repeated proofs which your former Assemblies have given of their wisdom, prudence, and temper, are an earnest to us of the moderation which we may expect from you, in avoiding all unnecessary debates and contentions amongst yourselves, and giving your whole attention to the means of advancing true religion, and the service of Almighty God.

The preventing, as much as possible, the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice and immorality to the utmost of your power, are objects of so great consequence that you may be fully assured of our ready concurrence with you, in whatever may tend to the attainment of so desirable ends.

And as you cannot but be affected with the most sensible pleasure, in reflecting upon the present undisturbed tranquillity and freedom which you enjoy in common with the rest of our good subjects of Scotland, we are persuaded you will think it of the highest moment to infuse into the minds of the people under your charge such principles, and such a spirit, as may be best adapted to the security of our happy constitution, and their own most valuable interests.

* The Assembly met on the 21st of May, according to the appointment of the General Assembly of 1760. Owing to the death of the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, (the Duke of Argyle,) to whom the Royal Commission to Lord Cathcart was sent down, the Deputy-Keeper did not consider himself at liberty to append the Seal, in which case the Commissioner did not appear at the first diet of the Assembly. An express, however, having been sent to London, a King's messenger arrived in Edinburgh on the 25th, with His Majesty's warrant to the Deputy-Keeper to append the Seal, which having been done, Lord Cathcart appeared in the Assembly on the following day as his Majesty's Commissioner. This explains the circumstance of the Royal Commission and King's Letter not having been presented till the 5th Session of the Assembly.—Ed. 1843.

We have appointed our right trusty and well-beloved Charles Lord Cathcart to represent our royal person in this Assembly, being well satisfied with his loyalty, integrity, and zeal for our service. You have before had experience of his abilities for the discharge of this important trust which we now confer upon him, and of his particular affection to the Church of Scotland, and concern for its prosperity; so that we have the greatest reason to believe that our choice of him upon this occasion will be most agreeable to you.

There is nothing more remaining, but to acquaint you with our hopes, that the charity, brotherly love, and unanimity of your proceedings in the business before you, will bring this your meeting to as happy a conclusion as that of any former Assembly. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 6th day of May 1761, in the first year of our reign.

Sess. 6, May 27, 1761.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most gracious letter to this first General Assembly of the Church of Scotland which hath had the happiness to meet since the beginning of your Majesty's most auspicious reign, we received with the greatest joy, and do acknowledge with the utmost gratitude.

Your Majesty's being pleased, in so gracious a manner, to take this first opportunity of assuring us of your fixed purpose and resolution to support the Church of Scotland in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, as by law established, is a most endearing testimony of your royal favour to us, which we humbly accept of with the greatest thankfulness, and rely upon with the firmest confidence, as esteeming your Majesty's royal protection to be, under God, our greatest security. Your Majesty does us the greatest honour, when you are pleased to express the most perfect confidence in our loyalty and affection to your person and government, and in our zeal for the encouragement of virtue and piety; and it shall be our constant care, through Divine assistance, so to acquit ourselves upon every occasion, as that your Majesty may never have reason to entertain a less favourable opinion of this Church. These sentiments are deeply rooted in our hearts, and we shall most cheerfully embrace every opportunity of expressing them.

Your Majesty's countenancing our present meeting with your royal authority we take as a great blessing from God, and a most engaging evidence of your Majesty's royal goodness. To promote the happiness of your Majesty's reign, and the true interests of this Church, are great and desirable ends, which we are bound always to have in view; and we should be most unworthy of your Majesty's favour, and of the character we bear, if we had not the best disposition to contribute to them all in our power.

The mention your Majesty is pleased to make of the many and repeated proofs which our former General Assemblies have given of their wisdom, prudence, and temper, shows us your Majesty's kind inclination to approve what hath been done by others before us according to their duty, and is a great incitement to us to follow the good example of those with whom your Majesty hath the goodness to express yourself so well satisfied. We are sensible how much disputes and contentions among ourselves would give advantage to those who are enemies to the peace and prosperity of your Majesty's government, upon which our own welfare, under God, does depend. And we humbly acknowledge your Majesty's fatherly tenderness for us, in being pleased to caution us against them, and in recommending to us the giving our whole attention to the means of advancing true religion, and the service of Almighty God. We pray and hope that the good Spirit of God, who is the Spirit of love and peace, will assist us to dispatch all our business with that unanimity, brotherly love, and charity, which becomes the servants of the Prince of Peace, and which is so necessary to the bringing of our meeting at this time to a happy conclusion.

We cannot but thankfully acknowledge your Majesty's royal wisdom and watchful care, in calling upon us to prevent, as much as possible, the growth of Popery, and the suppressing of vice and immorality, to the utmost of our power; and the assurance your Majesty gives us of your ready concurrence in whatever may tend to the attainment of so desirable ends, is at once the greatest encouragement and obligation for us to exert ourselves in the most vigorous manner for accomplishing them.

The present undisturbed tranquillity and freedom we enjoy, in common with the rest of your Majesty's good subjects, excite in us the most sensible pleasure; and it shall always be our principal care to make the people under our charge deeply sensible of the many great and invaluable blessings they now enjoy under your Majesty's wise government and administration; and to infuse into them those principles of piety and loyalty on which the security of their own most invaluable interests entirely depend.

To this we are greatly animated by your royal proclamation, in the beginning of your reign, and, in a special manner, by your princely donation to this General Assembly, for promoting the knowledge and practice of religion in the Highlands and Islands, and places where Popery and ignorance prevails. For this we beg leave to return your Majesty our most humble and grateful acknowledgments; and earnestly pray that God may abundantly reward you for so great a charity; and we shall take the most effectual care faithfully to apply it to the pious purposes for which it is granted by your Majesty.

Lord Cathcart hath given such eminent proofs of his loyalty, integrity, and zeal for your Majesty's service, and of his abilities, on many former occasions, for the discharge of this important trust which your Majesty has reposed in him, and of his most affectionate concern for the prosperity and happiness of this Church, as render your Majesty's choice of him, to represent your royal person in this Assembly, most acceptable and obliging to us; and we humbly acknowledge it as a particular evidence of your Majesty's goodness.

That the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ may long preserve your Majesty, to be a blessing to these lands, the guardian of our liberties, civil and sacred, and the support of the Protestant interest; that he may bless your Majesty's arms in the just and necessary war in which you are now engaged, for vindicating the honour of your Crown, and redressing the injuries done to your subjects; and that he may prosper all your Majesty's endeavours for restoring the peace, and preserving the liberties of Europe; that he may bless the Princess Dowager of Wales, and all the branches of your royal family; that there may never be wanting one of your most illustrious house to fill the throne of these kingdoms to latest ages; and that, after a long and happy reign, over a free and dutiful people, you may exchange an earthly for a heavenly crown, are, and shall be, the sincere and hearty prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Scss. 6, May 27, 1761.—The General Assembly's Address to the King on his Accession to the Throne of these Realms.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, as we heartily approve the conduct of the Commission of the late Assembly, in congratulating your Majesty's auspicious accession to the throne of your ancestors, so we embrace with pleasure this first opportunity, which our meeting together in a National Assembly affords us, of expressing our own joy on account of an event so happy for Great Britain.

The many blessings which we had enjoyed, during so long a tract of time, under the mild and paternal government of your royal grandfather, gave us the highest reason to join in that deep and universal sorrow which filled the nation on his death. The memory of so just and gracious a Sovereign, whose councils and arms were so remarkably blessed by the Almighty, as it must long remain engraved on our hearts, cannot fail to endear to us the more every descendant of his illustrious family.

With most lively gratitude to Heaven, we now behold your Majesty raised, in the prime of life, to the throne of these realms; and, under your happy administration, we have the greatest reason to promise ourselves the continuance and increase of all public felicity. Trained up from your earliest youth to every princely virtue; conspicuous for a steadiness and greatness of mind superior to the snares of royalty; endowed with a heart and affections truly British; and formed to know and to love that constitution of which you are the guardian; distinguished, in particular, for that sincere regard to religion which adds so much lustre to your exalted character, your Majesty became, from the moment of your accession to the Crown, the object of the highest hopes to all your subjects. Every step of your administration, since that time, has confirmed and enlarged these hopes.

Nor can we omit to join in the general admiration and applause due to that virtue, which disposed your Majesty to relinquish power and revenues, which, though most safely lodged in hands so pure as yours, might have been employed, in some future period, to the prejudice of that liberty which you love and cherish. With hearts full of affection, we repose an entire confidence in your Majesty, as the great defender of our faith and liberties; and, in particular, as the protector of the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland, which you have given us the most gracious assurances of your intention to maintain.

Permit us to assure your Majesty, that amongst all your subjects none are more distinguished for their fidelity and loyalty to your person and government than the members of the Church of Scotland. A Church which dates the era of its secure establishment from that happy period of the Revolution, which introduced your royal house to the throne of Great Britain, must have the strongest motive to a most sincere and faithful attachment to your Majesty. Animated, as we are, with the deepest sense of the inestimable happiness we derive from our sacred and civil constitution, it ever has been, it ever shall be, our zealous endeavour to inspire with like sentiments all who are within our influence, or under our care. The blessings of a wise and merciful government, now so universally felt in every part of your dominions, give us the best reason to hope that your Majesty will reign in the hearts, and may command the united strength of all your people.

That the great God of heaven, by whom kings reign, may crown all your undertakings with success; that he may inspire you with the Spirit both of counsel and of might; that he may scatter all your foes; and that, after having long made you the instrument of blessing a free and happy people, he may raise you to an high place in his glory above, are the sincere and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

"The Presbytery of _____ having considered the overtures transmitted by last Assembly, their answer to which is hereto subjoined, proceeded to the election," &c.; or, in case there be no overtures transmitted, then the form to be, "There being no overtures transmitted by last Assembly, the Presbytery of _____ proceeded," &c. GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. Experience has strengthened and confirmed in us those favourable dispositions towards the Church of Scotland, of which we gave assurances to the last General Assembly. We are happy, therefore, in this opportunity of repeating our fixed resolution to support it, as by law established, in all its rights and privileges.

We confide in you who are the present representatives of that Church, that, by the prudence of your conduct, you will afford us reason to increase our affection towards it: and that, avoiding all unnecessary debates and contentions, you will apply yourselves with temper and moderation to promote the good ends for which you are assembled, the advancement of religion, and the service of Almighty God; and you may be assured that your laudable endeavours in these respects shall not want our steady concurrence and support.

We doubt not but you will agree with us that we ought, in the present moment, to pay a more than ordinary attention to our respective religious duties. The blessings with which Providence has of late, in so wonderful a manner, distinguished these our kingdoms, require of us and our subjects, that, by a conduct suitable to the occasion, we should show a due sense of gratitude for them. We trust, therefore, that you will infuse into the minds of our people committed to your charge, such a zeal for the interests of religion, and such a spirit of piety and devotion, as can alone make us worthy of those favours which the Almighty has been pleased to bestow upon us, and may contribute to the continuance of them.

We have appointed our right trusty and well-beloved Charles Lord Cathcart to represent our royal person in this Assembly, being well satisfied with his loyalty, integrity, and zeal for our service; and we have reason to believe that our choice of him will be most agreeable to you, as you have already had so frequent experience of his abilities for the discharge of the important trust we now confer on him, and such repeated proofs of his particular affection for the Church of Scotland, and his concern for its prosperity.

There is nothing more remaining but to express our hopes, that, by proceeding in the business before you with that charity, brotherly love, and unanimity, which we have recommended to you, you may bring this meeting to as happy a conclusion as that of any former Assembly. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Sess. 3, May 22, 1762.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We received your Majesty's most gracious letter with the respect and gratitude that was due for so condescending a mark of your royal favour.

We esteem it as our greatest honour, that your Majesty's experience has confirmed your favourable dispositions towards us, and led you to repeat your fixed resolution to support the Church of Scotland, as by law established, in all its rights and privileges.

The confidence your Majesty is pleased to express in the prudence of our conduct, and the hopes of obtaining an increase of your paternal affection, are additional and most engaging motives to make us avoid all unnecessary debates and contentions, and apply ourselves with temper and moderation, to promote the advancement of religion, and the service of Almighty God; and we thankfully acknowledge it as one of our greatest blessings, and as the happiest presage of success, that our endeavours in these respects are sure of your Majesty's ready concurrence and support.

We listen, with the most profound reverence, to the call your Majesty is pleased to give us, to pay a particular attention to our religious duties in the present moment; and we count it our honour and happiness to be ready to follow our King in sentiments so becoming the father of his people.

The hand of God, so piously traced by your Majesty in the wonderful success of these your kingdoms in war, will, in due time, we trust, distinguish your reign by a blessing more agreeable to the wishes of your royal heart, the enabling your Majesty to give a lasting peace to all your faithful subjects.

Warmed by your Majesty's most religious sentiments, we feel in our minds the deepest gratitude to Almighty God, for giving us a prince whose virtue must interest the care of Providence in behalf of his kingdoms; and, encouraged by your great example, we will not fail to infuse into the minds of your people committed to our charge such a zeal for the interests of religion, and such a spirit of piety and devotion, as may promote the great ends your Majesty has in view, the rendering your people worthy of those favours the Almighty has already bestowed, and may contribute to the continuance of them.

We beg leave to express our humble thanks to your Majesty for your attention to the Propagation of Christian Knowledge, and the principles of the reformed religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, parts of your Majesty's dominions in which the interests of religion and of government coincide in a particular manner. It is our duty and inclination at all times to apply your Majesty's royal donations with the most prudent care; but we think ourselves called upon at present to double our attention to an object that has so much engaged your Majesty's zeal, and for which you have expressed so particular a concern.

Lord Cathcart's loyalty, integrity, and zeal for your Majesty's service, is so well known to us, and we have had such frequent experience of his abilities to discharge the important trust which your Majesty has reposed in him, and are so fully convinced of his particular affection to the Church of Scotland, that we look on your Majesty's choice of him to represent your royal person in this Assembly as a most obliging mark of your favour; for which we beg leave to make our most thankful acknowledgments to your Majesty.

Permit us to assure your Majesty that, next to the favour of that God whom we serve, your royal approbation, from affection no less than duty, is our constant aim; and that we will proceed in the business before us with that charity, brotherly love, and unanimity, which your Majesty so strongly recommends, and which you have had the rare felicity, by your most just and merciful government, to establish in a high degree among all your subjects.

That the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ may long preserve your Majesty, to reign in the hearts of an affectionate people, and to be the watchful guardian of religion and liberty; that he may continue to bless your arms with success; and that your magnanimity and moderation, in the midst of so much glory, may be crowned with the power of giving lasting peace to Europe; that he may bless and long preserve your Royal Consort the Queen, and make her the happy mother of a race of kings to sway the sceptre of these realms; that he may bless the Princess Dowager of Wales, and all the royal family; and that, after having reigned over a free and happy people, he may bestow upon you the crown of glory that fadeth not away, are, and shall be, the constant prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

The General Assembly appoints that the Act of Parliament against Murdering of Children be read from the pulpits of each parish in this Church, at least twice every year, and that the Presbyteries, at their privy censures, make inquiry if the same be done; and the Assembly appoints the several ministers of this Church to cause engross the said Act into their session records, to the end the same may always be at hand and not lost.

V.

Sess. 6, May 26, 1762.—The General Assembly's congratulatory Address to the King, on the happy event of his Marriage.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, embrace with joy this first opportunity of congratulating your Majesty on your happy nuptials with a Princess of illustrious descent, and most eminent virtues.

As our duty and affection to the best of Kings do not permit us to behold unmoved the completion of your Majesty's domestic felicity, so our sense of your mild and equitable reign, and of the great blessings we enjoy under your auspicious government, make us, on this happy event, look forward to posterity, and rejoice in the goodness of Providence, who gives us the prospect of a race of kings descended from your Majesty, to inherit the virtues of your royal line, and perpetuate the happiness of these your kingdoms.

We beg leave, at the same time, to congratulate your Majesty on the amazing success with which it has pleased Almighty God to bless your reign. When we consider the rapid and uninterrupted conquests of your Majesty's arms, your undisputed empire of the sea, your constitutional establishments for internal defence, your mild administration of government, your felicity in abolishing ancient factions and animosities, and in gaining the hearts of your people; when we behold your Majesty's magnanimity and moderation, amidst such a tide of prosperity; when, in such a situation, we perceive religious veneration for Divine Providence, and tender concern for the welfare of your people, to be the reigning passions of your heart, we bless the God of our fathers, not less for giving us a King who adorns the most exalted state of human greatness, than for the present distinguished glory of our country; and we fervently pray that he may render us a people worthy of such conspicuous marks of his favour.

We should be wanting in our duty on this occasion, if we did not assure your Majesty, that our fellow-subjects are not insensible of the blessings of which they partake, under your benign and prosperous government. The members of this Established Church, always remarkable for their zeal for religion and liberty, are not less distinguished for their loyalty to your Majesty and their love of the constitution; and if, in the course of this war, prolonged by a new combination of your enemies, your Majesty should think it proper to call them out in defence of your sacred person, their religion and liberties, we are persuaded they would be found inferior to none of their fellow-subjects, in the exertion of that spirit which becomes a free people, and members of the British community.

That Almighty God may establish your throne in righteousness, and in the hearts of your subjects; that, after having brought your kingdoms to the summit of glory in war, he may honour your Majesty to confer on them the blessings of a lasting peace, that you may daily behold the increasing felicity of your people; that the King and Queen may be long preserved to each other, and to an affectionate and grateful nation; and that, when they shall be exalted to an heavenly kingdom, their posterity may reign over ours to the latest ages, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 6, May 26, 1762.—The General Assembly's congratulatory Address to the Queen, on the happy event of her Marriage.

May it please your Majesty,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to take this first opportunity of congratulating your Majesty on your arrival in these kingdoms, and your auspicious marriage with a monarch who, by his eminent virtues and happy government, has acquired the full affection and confidence of all his subjects.

Our gracious Sovereign's choice alone would have endeared your Majesty to us, even though we had not been informed of your amiable and distinguished qualities; but experience having confirmed early report, and given us the strongest proofs of your wisdom and virtue, and of your firm attachment to the Protestant religion, we, with grateful hearts, bless Almighty God, who has brought so accomplished a Princess to share the throne of our beloved Sovereign. We humbly offer to your Majesty our most respectful duty and cordial affection, and earnestly beg that our most gracious Queen would honour the Church of Scotland with her countenance and favour.

That God Almighty may ever have your Majesty under his gracious tuition; that he may long preserve you to the King and to the people, to soothe the cares of government, and bless us with a hopeful progeny; and that, very late, you may exchange this earthly crown for the crown of righteousness that endureth for ever, are the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most devoted servants, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 6, May 26, 1762.—The General Assembly's congratulatory Address to the Princess of Wales, on the happy event of the King's Marriage.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland, take this first opportunity of addressing your Royal Highness on an event that must have given you the highest pleasure, the happy marriage of our beloved Sovereign, your son, with a Princess of illustrious birth, and most amiable endowments.

Not insensible of what we owe to the mother of our King, nor of what she must feel on such an occasion, we beg leave to assure your Royal Highness of our unfeigned joy for an union that cannot fail to give you entire satisfaction, and continually implore the Almighty to pour down such blessings on the royal pair, as may fulfil all the wishes of your maternal heart.

That the King and Queen may live long for their mutual happiness, and to bless their people; that your Royal Highness may see yourself repaid for your tender care of your illustrious son, by their no less tender care of their royal offspring; and that, sprung of you, and inheriting your virtues, a race of kings, who shall fear God and love the people, may never be wanting to these kingdoms, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, your most faithful and devoted servants, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Upon report of the Committee for Overtures, the General Assembly enjoin the several Presbyteries of this Church to take an exact account on the place of the extent of the stipend, glebe, grass, and other emoluments, belonging to every minister within their bounds, and record the same with accuracy in the Presbytery books, so that every succeeding incumbent may see at once what he is entitled to, and Presbyteries may be better able to give check to any dilapidations which may be attempted; and the Assembly appoint that the respective incumbents shall, in case any persons liable in payment of stipends refuse or withhold any part thereof, report the same to the next Presbytery after such refusal, who are to give such directions for recovery of the same as the nature of the case may require; and that where a minister is possessed of more glebes than one, and has been in use of setting the glebe or glebes most remote from his manse, that such glebe or glebes shall, in all time coming, after the boundary and limits thereof are ascertained, as above directed, be let only by tack, in which the extent and marches thereof shall be particularly set forth, and the same lodged with the Presbytery clerk.

May 26, 1763.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The repeated proofs which we have received, as well of the loyalty and good affections of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, as of their attention to promote the cause of religion and virtue, which we have above all things at heart, give us great pleasure in assuring you of our most favourable and gracious dispositions towards you, and of our resolution to support that Church in all its rights and privileges, as by law established. We have no doubt of your exerting yourselves with a truly Christian zeal, and conformably to the intent of your meeting, in the discouragement of vice and infidelity; and you may rely upon our ready concurrence with you in every thing that may tend to the advancement of purposes so essential to the welfare of our people.

The preventing of the growth of Popery, and the instilling into the minds of those committed to your charge a devout reverence towards Almighty God, and an humble gratitude to his Divine Providence for the inestimable blessings of peace, which he has so lately vouchsafed to us, and all his other innumerable mercies, are likewise such great and important objects, that we are persuaded you will think them worthy of your most serious attention, and heartiest endeavours.

We shall receive the highest satisfaction in being informed of your having applied yourselves, with your accustomed piety and prudence, to matters so well deserving our recommendation, and all your care.

We have appointed our right trusty and well-beloved Charles Lord Cathcart to represent our royal person in this Assembly; and as our appointment of him arises from the experience we have had, upon many like occasions, of his loyalty, integrity, and zeal for our service, so we have full cause to be satisfied that the same reasons, together with your knowledge of his fitness to discharge this important trust, and of his affection to the Church of Scotland, will render our choice of him to discharge the said office very agreeable to you.

We conclude with recommending to you such temper and moderation in all your proceedings, and such charity, brotherly love, and unanimity, as may secure a happy conclusion to this your meeting. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 9th day of May 1763, in the third year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

DUNK HALIFAX.

III.

Sess. 3, May 28, 1763.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We received your Majesty's most gracious letter, with the respect and gratitude which are due to such a distinguishing proof of your royal favour.

Your Majesty's approbation of our past conduct we consider as the most agreeable recompence we could have received for having done our duty. Your royal declaration of your resolution to support our Church in all her rights and privileges, affords us the greatest satisfaction, and we rely upon it as the most perfect security.

It shall be our care, in obedience to your Majesty's command, to exert ourselves so zealously in discouraging vice and infidelity, as will show how desirous we are to merit the confidence your Majesty reposes in us, and we deem it our particular felicity, that we are subject to a Sovereign, who, by exciting us to our proper work, shows us that the faithful and conscientious discharge of our duty is the most certain recommendation to his favour.

We thankfully ascribe the return of the inestimable benefits of peace to the blessing of Divine Providence, upon the wisdom and steadiness with which your Majesty hath carried on the negotiations for that salutary purpose; and as by the definitive treaty with your enemies, your Majesty hath gained acquisitions of vast extent, and of great importance to your crown, which far exceed the most sanguine expectations of your subjects at the commencement of the war, and are fully adequate to the great success of the British arms, it hath been, and shall be our care at this juncture, to instil into the minds of our people proper sentiments of gratitude towards your Majesty, and of thankfulness to Almighty God, whose hand they discern and bless in the conduct of this great event.

We beg leave to offer our humble thanks to your Majesty for your attention to the propagation of Christian knowledge, and of the reformed religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. It shall be our endeavour to apply the sum appropriated by your royal bounty for that purpose, in such a manner as may best answer the generous and pious intention with which it is bestowed, and to exert the greatest zeal on our part to communicate the blessings of knowledge, and the arts of peace, to those of our countrymen who have displayed their valour during the war, with no less benefit to Great Britain than glory to themselves.

We have had experience on so many former occasions of the loyalty, integrity, and prudence of the noble Lord whom your Majesty has appointed to represent your royal person in this General Assembly; we are so sensible of his abilities to discharge this important trust, of his zeal for religion, and of his attention to the true interest of this Church, that we consider your Majesty's repeated choice of him as an additional mark of your favour and regard to us.

Permit us to assure your Majesty, that we shall conduct our deliberations and proceedings with such temper and moderation, with such brotherly love and unanimity, as, we trust, shall secure to us the continuance of your royal protection and favour, which, next to the approbation of that God whom we serve, we esteem our greatest honour and happiness.

That Almighty God may protect your person, prolong your days, and bless your administration; that he may render the peace which you have concluded as permanent as it is honourable; that you may behold the increasing felicity of your people; that you may be honoured as the instrument of Divine Providence for their good; and that, after reigning long in righteousness, and ruling in judgment, you may receive the recompence of an heavenly crown, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 28, 1763.—The General Assembly's congratulatory Address to the King, on the happy event of the Birth of the Prince of Wales, and the re-establishment of Peace.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, embrace with pleasure the first opportunity of presenting our humble congratulations upon the birth of the Prince of Wales. As we are attached to your Majesty from love, no less than from duty, an event which contributes so much to your domestic felicity affords us the most sincere joy. As we are deeply sensible of our own happiness, under your righteous and mild administration, we could frame no better wish for after ages, than that the same blessings which we enjoy might be transmitted to them. We adore the goodness of God, who hath heard our prayers, and who now giveth us the prospect that our posterity shall be governed by a prince formed by your Majesty's precept, and taught by your example, to be the guardian of a free constitution, and the father of his people.

To our expressions of joy on account of this important event, we beg your Majesty's permission to add our warmest congratulations on the re-establishment of peace. After a long war, the most extensive, and the most successful, but, at the same time, the most burthensome ever carried on by Great Britain, peace became a desirable object to a nation whose wealth and power are derived from its commerce. Your Majesty, undazzled by the splendour of continual victories, and always attentive to the true interest of your people, took early measures for procuring them this necessary blessing; and your magnanimity and steadiness have accomplished the salutary work which your wisdom and humanity prompted you to undertake.

By a definitive treaty with your enemies, the great objects for which war was undertaken are attained; the possessions of chief consequence to Britain are secured; new sources of commerce are opened; and territories are added to your crown, more extensive and of greater value than have been acquired by any nation since the division of Europe into great kingdoms, and the establishment of a balance of power, have put a stop to the rapidity of conquest; and as your Majesty can now turn your whole attention towards the cultivation and encouragement of the arts of peace, which, even under the pressure, and amidst the avocations of war, you did not neglect, these, under your royal patronage, must revive and flourish, and Britain, as it is the greatest, will become the most polished and illustrious nation in Europe.

Nor are our hopes of beneficial consequences from the return of peace confined to ourselves alone. As the chief obstacles which have hitherto prevented the instruction of the American nations are now removed, we trust to your Majesty's known zeal for promoting true religion, and to the blessing of the Almighty upon your endeavours, that the people now under your dominion which know not God, shall at length receive the knowledge of that holy faith which civilizes and refines the manners of men, at the same time that it improves and sanctifies their hearts.

Permit us to assure your Majesty, that sentiments of loyalty and attachment towards their gracious Sovereign, the blessings of whose mild and paternal government they have experienced, prevail universally among the people under our care; and as, during the continuance of war, their courage, in defence of the rights and possessions of their country, has not been inferior to that of their fellow-subjects, so they will be no less zealous, on the return of peace, to express their love and fidelity to your Majesty's person, and to contribute towards the internal vigour and constitutional security of the kingdom.

That Almighty God may bless your administration, and prolong your days; that he may preserve the Prince of Wales, to be your comfort and our hope; that he may render the peace which in his great mercy he hath restored, as permanent as it is honourable and advantageous, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders, met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to take this first opportunity of presenting our humble congratulations to your Majesty, upon the birth of the Prince of Wales. Our attachment to his Majesty's illustrious house, and our love of our happy constitution, fill us with most sincere pleasure, on account of an event which contributes to the preservation of the former, and the perpetuity of the latter; our admiration of your royal virtues, and our solicitude for the happiness of a Queen, so much and so deservedly beloved by our gracious Sovereign, lead us to participate deeply in your Majesty's joy, on a circumstance which increases your domestic felicity.

Sess. 1, May 23, 1765.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. It is with the highest satisfaction that we embrace every opportunity of renewing to you those testimonies of our paternal affection, which your duty and loyalty to us and our government, and your steady attention to the great concerns of religion and virtue, deserve at our hands. It is from the experience we have had of your prudence, candour, and moderation, those constant attendants of a truly Christian spirit, that we gladly support the General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland, and this present meeting in particular, with our royal countenance and authority.

We need not recommend the avoiding of all contention and unedifying debates, to those who have no other object in their view than the suppressing licentiousness, immorality, and vice; and who are actuated by no other zeal than that which tends to the advancement of true religion, and, consequently, to the general peace and happiness of society.

No religion can be sincere which does not require a conscientious discharge of the duties it prescribes. No government can be steady which is not founded on maxims of public liberty, under the influence and restriction of wholesome laws. The purity of the Christian faith is distinguished by the first;—the happiness of the British constitution is derived from the second. It is by infusing into the minds of the people committed to your care those civil and religious principles, so essential to their happiness, both here and hereafter, that you will be effectually entitled to our favour.

We have again appointed our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, John Earl of Glasgow, to represent our royal person in this Assembly. You, who have already experienced his affection for you, will be sensible of our attention to you in this choice. We need not assure you that the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, as by law established, will always meet with our support in the full enjoyment of their rights and privileges; and with such conviction on your part, we have no doubt but that this meeting will be concluded with the same unanimity, harmony, and brotherly affection, which have distinguished any former Assembly. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 20th day of April 1765, in the fifth year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

SANDWICH.

III.

Sess. 3, May 25, 1765.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most gracious Letter to this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was received with the highest respect and gratitude. We are deeply sensible of the honour done us by your Majesty's approbation of the past conduct of the Church of Scotland. Our hearts are sensibly affected with the tender concern your Majesty expresses for the interests of religion and virtue, and the encouragement you give us to pursue the ends of our office; and it is our steady purpose to improve the advantages of our happy situation.

Your Majesty has been pleased to point out to us the great objects of our attention and zeal, which ought to be ever in our view, and we should be unworthy of your royal favour, and of the countenance of Almighty God, if we should allow ourselves to be turned aside from these, and should fail in exerting our endeavours for the advancement of true religion, for the restraint of every species of vice and immorality, and of that licentiousness of spirit which is so much to be guarded against in a tide of national prosperity, and under so mild and gentle a government.

As we are entrusted with the office of explaining and enforcing a religion, the sole tendency of which is to prepare mankind for inconceivable happiness in another life, by teaching them to pursue their duty and true interest in this present state; and as we act under the protection of a Prince devoted to the worship and obedience of God, and under a constitution of government formed for maintaining the rights and liberties of mankind, we shall be utterly inexcusable if we do not, to our utmost ability, pursue those great and noble ends with steadfastness and ardour. Placing, therefore, our humble confidence in Him from whom every good and perfect gift doth come, we are determined to cultivate in our own hearts, and in the hearts of those committed to our care, such principles of religion and public liberty as tend to produce the peace of society, and the happiness of mankind, in this life and in the life to come; in the prosecution of which purposes, we rest assured, under your Majesty's protection, of the full enjoyment of the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland.

With the warmest gratitude of heart, we offer up our prayers to God for your Majesty's happy recovery from your late indisposition; and, at the same time, permit us, Great Sir, to make our most thankful acknowledgments to your sacred Majesty, for the late instance you have been pleased to give, with such magnanimity of spirit, of your paternal affection, in proposing a method for securing the future peace and happiness of these nations, in the view of an event, which we fervently pray to God we may never see.

We most gratefully acknowledge your Majesty's royal donation for promoting Christian knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, as a renewed proof of your Majesty's zeal for the best interests of your subjects; and we shall be careful to apply it in such a manner as may most effectually contribute to the accomplishment of your Majesty's pious and charitable design.

The approved zeal and fidelity of the Earl of Glasgow in your Majesty's service, our experience of his abilities for the discharge of so high a trust, his exemplary regard for religion, his warm affection to this Church, and his many amiable qualities and Christian virtues, make your Majesty's choice of him, to represent your royal person in this Assembly, most acceptable to this whole Church.

That the King of heaven and earth may long preserve your Majesty the guardian of liberty, and the patron of piety and virtue, to your people;—that he may render your administration prosperous;—that he may pour down his best blessings on your Royal Consort, our most gracious Queen; that God may bless his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and all your Royal Family; that one of your royal progeny may, to latest ages, reign over a free and loyal people;—that, after a long and happy life on earth, you may enjoy the glorious crown of immortality, are, and ever shall be, the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

VI.

Sess. ult., June 3, 1765.—The General Assembly's Address to the King, anent the new Erections in the Highlands.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland, humbly beg leave to approach your throne, in behalf of our fellow-subjects residing in the more remote corners of this part of the United Kingdoms. With the deepest concern we behold many of them labouring under gross ignorance, or deluded by dangerous errors, which render them insensible to those blessings, religious and civil, which the inhabitants of the other parts of your Majesty's extensive dominions enjoy under your auspicious reign.

To communicate to the inhabitants of the Highlands and Islands a more perfect knowledge of true religion, and to inspire them with just sentiments concerning our happy constitution, we have always considered as objects worthy of our most serious attention; and we are confident that every measure, calculated for attaining such important ends, will not only merit your Majesty's approbation, but receive such countenance from your royal authority as may be necessary towards carrying it into execution. Animated by these hopes, the General Assembly of this Church, held in the year 1761, thought it their duty to lay before your Majesty the report of commissioners, who had been appointed by the preceding General Assembly to visit the Highlands and Islands, and to inquire into the state of religion in those parts; and, at the same time, they humbly suggested to your Majesty, that if you should be pleased to continue the royal donation, which you have annually made to this Church for reformation of the Highlands and Islands, such alteration might be made in the terms of the grant as to permit a part of it to be applied towards the erection of new parishes, with fixed pastors, in different parts of those countries, as the most effectual method for instructing and reforming the people.

The gracious reception which your Majesty was pleased to give to that application hath encouraged us to lay before you the report of a reverend minister, who, in obedience to the appointment of last General Assembly, visited several parts of the Highlands and Islands, the state of which the former commissioners had no access to inspect. Although we are fully satisfied that the labours of the missionaries and catechists, which your Majesty's royal bounty enables us to employ in the Highlands and Islands, are attended with good effects, we are persuaded that the erecting of new parishes, in different parts of those countries, would be productive of more certain and permanent advantages. But as the sum granted annually to the Church does not enable us to carry on both these plans in that vigorous manner with which we would wish to prosecute your Majesty's pious intentions, and promote the happiness of our fellow-subjects, we, with all humility, suggest to your royal wisdom, that some part of the rents and produce of those estates, which, by a statute made in the 25th year of his late Majesty, were annexed inalienably to the Crown, may be applied towards erecting parishes in those places of the Highlands and Islands where to your Majesty they shall appear to be most wanted. By that statute the rents and produce of these estates are declared to be applicable to the purposes mentioned in it, or "in such manner as his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, should, from time to time, by warrants under his or their sign manual, be pleased to direct, to the purposes of civilizing the inhabitants of said estates, and other parts of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, the promoting amongst them the Protestant religion, good government, industry, manufactures, and the principles of duty and loyalty to his Majesty, his heirs, and successors, and to no other use or purpose whatsoever."

From our certain knowledge of the state of the Highlands and Islands, we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that the application of some part of the rents and produce of these estates, in the manner we have humbly proposed, will greatly conduce to promote the salutary purposes which the legislature had in view; and we have such confidence in your Majesty's paternal tenderness towards all your people, that we are persuaded it will appear to you an object highly worthy of your royal consideration.

That it may please Almighty God long to continue the blessing of your Majesty's reign, and that the principles of true religion and virtue, with a firm attachment to our invaluable constitution, may, under your gracious government, be diffused into every part of your extensive dominions, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 5 and 7, May 25 and 27, 1766.—Act declaring Mr James Bain, late Minister at Paisley, incapable of receiving or accepting a Presentation or Call to any Parish in this Church, without the special allowance of the General Assembly.

At Edinburgh, the 27th day of May 1766 years.

The which day, the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland had transmitted to them, from their Committee for Bills, a petition for Messrs Warner, Davidson, and Kennedy, ministers in the Presbytery of Paisley, tabling an appeal taken by them, in name of said Presbytery, from a sentence of the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr; by which sentence, the said Synod had accepted of a demission from Mr James Bain, one of the ministers of Paisley, and declared his kirk vacant; and appointed the Presbytery of Paisley to meet on the 23d day of April, in order to receive any application that might be made to them for the supply of the said vacancy: Which petition sets forth, "That the Presbytery of Paisley had laid before them a letter from Mr James Bain, one of the ministers of Paisley, bearing a demission of his office and charge as minister of Paisley, upon the 26th day of March last. The Presbytery, by their deliverance of that date, delayed the further consideration of that affair until the 23d day of April, in order that Mr Bain might be heard upon that subject before final sentence was passed; and ordered a letter to be written to the said Mr Bain, requiring him to attend upon the said 23d day of April; against which sentence the Magistrates of Paisley protested, and appealed to the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr. That the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr sustained the said appeal, accepting of said demission, declared his kirk vacant, and appointed the Presbytery of Paisley to meet on the 23d day of April, in order to receive any application that might be made to them for the supply of the said vacancy. That the petitioners, by virtue of powers from the Presbytery of Paisley, who considered Mr Bain's conduct to be very irregular, protested against the said sentence of Synod, and appealed to the venerable Assembly for redress; and praying that it might please the venerable Assembly to take in the said appeal, reverse the judgment of the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr, and take such further steps in it as to their wisdom shall seem meet, and as the very great importance of the cause deserved." As also, another petition from the Magistrates and Town-Council of Paisley, complaining of the Presbytery not having met upon the said 23d of April, in terms of the Synod's sentence, and praying for redress, in such manner as the venerable Assembly should judge proper. The moderator being a member of the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr, Dr Oswald, at the Assembly's desire, took the chair. Parties being called, there compeared for the appellants, the said Messrs Warner, Davidson, and Kennedy; for the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr, Messrs Dun, Freebairn, and Mr Colin Campbell; and for the town of Paisley, Mr Joseph Williamson, Advocate. The letter of demission by the said Mr James Bain to the moderator of the Presbytery of Paisley was called for and read; the sentence of the Synod appealed from; the petition of appeal and reasons, and answers by the Synod to the said petition of appeal and reasons, together with the petition of the Magistrates of Paisley, were all read over; and parties being fully heard at the bar, were removed. The General Assembly, after some reasoning on this affair, ordained that the said Mr James Bain be summoned to appear before them upon Thursday next, in the New Church Aisle, at ten o'clock, in order to answer for his conduct in giving up his ministerial charge at Paisley, and appointed their clerk to issue out an order upon one of their officers for this purpose, who should deliver the summons to the said Mr James Bain, personally, or at his dwelling-house, and should return a written execution thereupon; and in the meantime, the Assembly delayed proceeding any further in the affair till that diet, and parties were then ordered to attend. Parties were called in, and the above sentence was intimated to them.

At Edinburgh, the 29th day of May 1766 years.

The General Assembly proceeded to the determination of the cause of Paisley, in consequence of their resolution of Tuesday last; and the cause being called, parties compeared as formerly. The General Assembly called for the execution of citation against

Mr James Bain, which was produced and read, bearing him to have been summoned personally ; and Mr Bain having appeared personally at the bar, was heard. The letter of demission by him to the Presbytery of Paisley was read, the tenor whereof follows :—
 “ Reverend dear Sir, It would have given me great pleasure to have met with my brethren of the Presbytery of Paisley, as it would have given me an opportunity of acquainting them with what I now inform you of, as their moderator, to be laid before them, viz., that I entirely give up my charge of the High Church in this town, and the care of the flock belonging to it, into the Presbytery’s hand. They know not how far I am advanced in life, who see not that an house for worship, so very large as the High Church, and commonly so crowded too, must be very unequal to my strength ; and this burden was made more heavy, by denying me a session to assist me in the common concerns of the parish, which I certainly had a title to ; nor am I singular in thinking so, as I have the opinion of the first judge of the kingdom, that it was peevish to refuse it. But the load became quite intolerable, when, by a late unhappy process, the just and natural right of the common session was wrested from us, which drove away from sitting in it twelve men of excellent character, so that I had not one elder for five hundred of examinable persons in my proportion ; nor does it alleviate the burden, that this right of the session was so tamely given up (some, perhaps, will say betrayed) by those who ought to have defended it. For in any society where candour is thought to be gone, confidence must die. I would earnestly beg of my very reverend brethren to think, that this change of my condition, and the charge I have now accepted, makes no change in my former creed and Christian belief, none in my principles of Christian and ministerial communion, nay, none in my cordial regard to the constitution and interest of the Church of Scotland, which I solemnly engaged to support some more than thirty years ago, and hope to do so while I live. At the same time, I abhor persecution in every form, and that abuse of Church power of late, which to me appears inconsistent with humanity, with the civil interests of the nation, and destructive of the ends of our office, as ministers of Christ. I would only add, and assure my brethren, that I go away with a grateful sense of their civilities to me while among them. As a small recompence, it is my heart’s desire to God, that they and their flocks may prosper, and they may be directed to promote a speedy and comfortable settlement of a pastor over that very numerous and affectionate people, who are now my charge no more. With esteem, I am, Reverend dear Sir,” &c.

Then the parties were removed. The moderator being a member of the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr, Dr Oswald, at the Assembly’s desire, took the chair. The General Assembly determined the cause anent the vacancy of the parish ; and then the moderator having resumed the chair, proceeded to take under their consideration Mr Bain’s conduct, and what is contained in his letter. And he being called upon, was further heard, and again removed ; and, after a very long debate, a motion was made by a member to the following purpose :—1mo, That the Assembly should declare him to be no minister of this Church ; and that he is incapable of receiving or accepting of a presentation or call to any parish in this Church, without the special allowance of some future General Assembly. And, 2do, That the General Assembly should prohibit all the ministers of this Church from employing him to preach, or perform any ministerial offices for them, or from being employed by him, unless some future Assembly shall see cause to take off this prohibition. The General Assembly, after deliberating upon the above motion, agreed to the first part thereof without a vote ; but, members being divided in their opinions with regard to the second part of the motion, the General Assembly came to the following state of a vote, Agree to the last part of the motion, or Not ; and the rolls being called, and votes marked, it carried, by a great majority, Agree. And, therefore, the General Assembly find and declare, that the said Mr James Bain is no minister of this Church, and that he is incapable of receiving or accepting of a presentation or call to any parish in this Church, without the special allowance of some future General Assembly. And the General Assembly do hereby prohibit all the members of this Church from employing him to preach or perform any ministerial offices for them, or from being employed by him, unless some future Assembly shall see cause to take off this prohibition. Mr Bain being called in, the above sentence was intimated to him.

Sess. 6, May 28, 1766.—Act anent the Form of Commissions.

The General Assembly, having had laid before them the report of a committee appointed to revise the forms of commissions to members of the General Assembly, and considering that it is of the greatest importance for the honour and interest of religion, that the office-bearers of the Church should behave and conduct themselves in all respects becoming their character, do, in terms of the Act of Assembly, 22d May 1722, earnestly beseech, exhort, and require all ministers to take heed to themselves, and to their doctrine, and to be exemplary to their people in sobriety, righteousness, and holiness, abstaining from all appearance of evil; and, in like manner, the General Assembly do earnestly beseech, exhort, and require the elders and deacons to be faithful in the discharge of their respective offices, tender and circumspect in their walk, punctual in their attending upon ordinances, strict in their observation of the Lord's Day, and regular in keeping up the worship of God in their families. The Assembly do further enjoin and require, for the more regular election of members to the Assembly in time coming, Presbyteries, Burghs, and Universities, strictly to observe the acts of former Assemblies, appointing that the election shall be made at least forty days before the meeting of Assembly, and within a month preceding the first of the said forty days, except those lying in the Northern and Western Isles, and shall appoint the day of election at a meeting to be entered in their minutes, at least ten free days before such election; and that on the day of election, they shall make their elections betwixt the hours of one and eight o'clock in the evening.

The General Assembly, considering also that some acts regulating the manner and time of electing members to the Assembly are posterior to the Act 17th May 1725, establishing the present form of their commissions; and that these forms refer in general to Acts of Assembly that contain some particulars, of which Presbyteries, Universities, and Burghs, cannot have any certain evidence, and are thereby reduced to the necessity either of attesting what does not come properly under their own knowledge, or of omitting clauses in the established form, whereby their commissions have been rendered void and null, the Assembly did, on all these accounts, and hereby do, appoint and ordain the forms of commissions and attestations, hereunto subjoined, to be observed by Presbyteries, Sessions, Universities, and Burghs; and enact and ordain, that all such commissions and attestations as are not conceived and attested in these very words of the form now prescribed shall be rejected.

The General Assembly do further declare and enact, that when a Kirk-Session or Presbytery refuse their concurrence or attestation to a commission by a burgh or university, without assigning the reasons of their refusal, that commission shall be sustained as if duly attested, in case the matter shall be brought before the Assembly by protest or appeal. And they appoint the Agent for the Church to cause print this act, together with the following forms of commissions, and transmit the same to the several Presbyteries, Universities, and Burghs.

(Then follow, in the original edition, "Forms of Commissions;" but it is unnecessary here to give them, as they appear at length in Act 4th, 1768.—Ed. 1843.)

Recommendation anent the Orphan Children of Soldiers.

Proposals for more effectually executing a Scheme for Maintaining and Educating the Infants and Orphans of Soldiers.

That every infant born in any of his Majesty's regiments of foot or dragoons in Great Britain, be provided with proper clothing, and its mother with necessary sustenance, to the amount of one shilling per week.

That a request be made to the Right Honourable the Secretary at War, to issue his orders to the respective commanding officers, to take upon them the care of the above article.

That when a regiment shall be quartered together, the surgeon and quartermaster, under the direction of the commanding officer, be appointed to buy and provide necessaries within the said sum of one shilling per week.

That when the regiment shall be divided, the commanding officer in each quarter be ordered to undertake this charge.

That in case of a march before the lying-in women are in a condition to accompany their husbands, without danger of their own or infants' lives, application be made to some magistrate or justice of the peace, or to the minister of the parish, to undertake this charitable office, and a sum not exceeding one shilling per week be allowed for lodging, exclusive of the allowance for support.

That a furlough be allowed to the husband of the lying-in woman thus left behind, for a month or six weeks, according to the discretion of the commanding officer.

That when a child becomes an orphan, it be boarded in some village, near the place where the parents died, till it arrives to the age of five years; at which time to be put, if possible, to the parish school for two years, and then boarded at some reputable farmer's for three years more, or put to some trade or manufacture.

That though it is hoped and believed, that the clergy in general will cheerfully engage in this charitable work, yet, as a further inducement, that my Lords the Bishops be humbly requested to recommend it by their influence, and enforce it by their example. The minister of the parish where the parents died will then think it his duty to appoint a proper person to take care of the orphan, and to make a monthly report to the register, whether it be living or dead.

As a great many objects of this charity will reside in Scotland, that application be made to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, to recommend the inspection of the orphan children to the care of the respective ministers within whose parishes they shall be boarded.

To ascertain the persons who are entitled to the benefit of this charity, and to prevent, as much as possible, all abuse of it, the commanding officer at quarters shall send up a certificate, with the first monthly return, specifying that A. B. is wife of C. D., corporal, drummer, or private man, in such a regiment and company, and has been so at least nine months before her delivery.

That if a sergeant die during his wife's pregnancy, the widow and orphan be entitled to this charity.

That a monthly return be made to the register, by the commanding officer of each corps, specifying the state of the children, and the time when any of them die; the subsistence then to cease, except the woman be in her first month; but, in that case, to continue the four first weeks after delivery.

That the children continue under the care of their parents, who will be enabled by this charity to maintain them, and, encouraged by the continuance of it, to suffer them, at the age of five years, to be put to school, and afterwards boarded with some reputable farmer, or put to some trade or manufacture, as proposed for the orphans; and thus a vigorous and hardy race may be formed for agriculture and the service of their country. If they refuse to comply with this kind and charitable proposal, then all subsistence immediately to cease for ever.

That the proceedings of this charity be annually printed, for the information of the subscribers, and the public in general.

Every subscriber paying five guineas annually shall be entitled to be a governor of this charity.

This proposal has been approved by their Royal Highnesses the Dukes of York, Gloucester, and Cumberland, by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, by several of the first general officers of the army, by the Paymaster of the Forces, Secretary at War, Adjutant-General, &c.

His Majesty has been most graciously pleased to declare himself Patron of this charity.

The Secretary at War has been pleased to order the commanding officers of the several corps to report the state of the infants and orphans to his office, where an exact register will be kept of the proceedings of this charity.

Subscriptions to be received at Messrs Backwell and Co., Pall-Mall; Drummond and Co., Charing Cross; Colebroke and Co., Threadneedle Street; Martin and Co., Lombard Street; and Messrs Forrest and Maxwell, merchants at Edinburgh.

Sess. 9, May 30, 1767.—Act supplying certain Defects in the Forms of Commissions, and Attestations thereof.

The General Assembly, considering that some defects have been observed in the forms of commissions to members of Assembly, and attestations thereof, prescribed by the last General Assembly, do hereby appoint the following additions to be made to these forms; and do enact and ordain, that all such commissions and attestations as are not conceived and attested in the very words of the forms prescribed by last Assembly, and of the supplement now made to them, shall be rejected. Sess. ult., June 1, 1767.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be held in this place, on Thursday the 19th of May, in the year 1768.

GEORGE WISHART, Cls. Eccl. Scot.

Former Overtures again Transmitted.

*Sess. 9, May 30, 1767.—Overture of an Act concerning Students in Divinity, and the Licensing of Probationers.

There was transmitted to the General Assembly, from their Committee for Overtures, an overture concerning students in divinity, and the licensing of probationers, prepared by a committee appointed for that purpose by the last General Assembly; together with another overture respecting students, proposed by the Committee for Overtures to be added to this; which overture, prepared by the committee of last Assembly, including the said additional overture, which comes in as Article 4th, the General Assembly do hereby transmit to the several Presbyteries of this Church, to be considered by them, that they may send up their opinions thereupon to the next General Assembly. The same is as follows:—

The General Assembly, considering the dangerous consequences to religion, of licensing any to preach the Gospel who are not duly qualified; and whereas former acts relative hereto are scattered, and at great distances from each other, by which means they cannot easily come so distinctly under view, as if they were digested into one general act comprehending the substance of them, together with such alterations and additions, as in the present state of things in this Church, relative to students in divinity, their admission to probationary trials, and licensing them to preach, are become either necessary or highly expedient.

* This overture was not passed into an act.—Ed. 1843.

For these and other weighty reasons, the General Assembly renews the former acts relative thereto, in form and manner following.

Article I. None shall be admitted to pass trials in order to their being licensed to preach the Gospel, excepting such as are of good report for piety, gravity, sobriety, good affection to the constitution in Church and State, and concerning whom there shall be ground to hope that they will prove able, faithful, and edifying, in discharging the duties of their station.

Article II. It is hereby more particularly enacted and ordained, that none be admitted to trials, or licensed, unless in the cases and under the conditions immediately hereto subjoined.

Sect. 1. Students found qualified, as is above required, may be proposed to be taken on trials when five complete years shall have passed, from and after their finishing their course in philosophy; provided always, that it be documented by a certificate of the form and tenor by this act appointed, that they prosecuted their theological studies at the University during some part of every one of the five several sessions, between the time of completing their studies in philosophy, as above required, and their being proposed in Presbyteries to be admitted to trials. Provided also, that it shall appear that they did publicly deliver in the Hall, with approbation, five several exercises at least during said sessions; and that they attended two sessions on the lectures of the Professor of Church History, and during at least one session on the Professor of Hebrew.

Sect. 2. In order to encourage a more close and regular prosecution of public study, it is hereby enacted, that students qualified, as required per Section 1st, may, after four years complete from the time of finishing their course in philosophy, be admitted to probationary trials, provided it be certified in form and manner hereafter by this act required, that they did prosecute at a university their theological studies, during the greatest part of the four intermediate sessions, between their finishing their course in philosophy, and their being proposed to be put upon said trials; and that during the course of said sessions, they did deliver not fewer than five several exercises with approbation, and that they gave like attendance, as by the preceding article is required, on the colleges of Church History and Hebrew.

Sect. 3. The General Assembly, in favour of those who shall distinguish themselves by prosecuting their studies with the greatest assiduity and regularity, do hereby enact and ordain, that students qualified, as is above required, may be proposed to be taken on trials on the expiration of three years, from and after completing their course in philosophy, provided always, that they be certified in manner and form after mentioned and appointed, to have given close and punctual attendance on the divinity lessons and exercises, during the three intermediate sessions between the end of their philosophical course and their being proposed to trials, and to have delivered in the Hall at least six several discourses or exercises with approbation, and to have attended the lectures on Church History and the Hebrew class, in like manner as in the cases of students above described, is required.

Sect. 4. It is hereby expressly ordained and enacted, that no student shall, on any consideration whatever, be licensed to preach the Gospel till he shall appear to the Presbytery, by unquestionable evidence, to have attained to the age of majority or twenty-one years complete; and the Presbytery is hereby enjoined to mark in their register the production of such evidence, and to specify the nature of it, and if it is contained in a written certificate, to appoint their clerk to keep the same in retentis.

Article III. The General Assembly earnestly recommends to the members of this Church, and more especially to the Professors of Divinity, Church History, Hebrew, and others, under whom students of divinity may carry on any branch of their studies, and to all ministers of the Gospel, to have a watchful eye over such students; and it is further recommended, particularly to the Professors of Divinity, when making up the roll of their students yearly, to require, as a necessary condition of being enrolled, from all new intrants, and to keep in retentis, letters recommendatory, or certificates from the ministers in whose parishes such intrants reside, or from other persons of known and established character for candour and discernment, bearing and attesting that they have completed their course in philosophy, and are of blameless behaviour.

Article IV. The General Assembly further appoints, that every person when he is about to enter upon the study of divinity, and to apply to a Professor of Divinity to be enrolled by him for that purpose, shall signify his intention to the Presbytery in whose bounds he resides, that he may, at the same time, be enrolled by them in their records as a student in divinity.

Article V. It is further hereby enacted and ordained, that no Presbytery shall admit to trials before them any student not actually at the time residing, or who has not, since his becoming a student, resided for the space of six weeks continued in their bounds, unless he be recommended by a Presbytery in whose bounds he resideth or hath resided, as said is, during said space as, in their judgment, qualified to be admitted: And it is further hereby provided, that students coming from foreign parts shall not be entered on trials until six months at least shall have elapsed from the time of their arrival in Scotland; nor even then, until they produce certificates of their diligence and proficiency in their studies, and of their good behaviour, from the universities where, or professors under whom they studied; and till it shall further appear that their studies were so conducted and prosecuted as to bring them on a footing with the students of one or other of the three several classes described in the 2d article of this Act, and in Sections 1st, 2d, and 3d of the same.

Article VI. When any student is proposed to a Presbytery in order to be taken on trials, the proposal shall lie on the table till the next ordinary meeting, before they give judgment therein, that diligent inquiry may be made and information had concerning the said student's qualifications and behaviour; and the Presbytery shall be alone both when the proposal is made and judged on. And the General Assembly enjoins all students to take all opportunities of cultivating an acquaintance with the ministers of the Presbytery where they reside, and where they are to pass trials.

Article VII. When a Presbytery resolves to take a student on trials, they shall by themselves, or by a committee appointed for that purpose, take a private trial of his progress in the learned languages, in philosophy, especially in moral philosophy, and in divinity; and particularly they shall take trial of his acquaintance with the Holy Scriptures, and what impression of religion he hath on his own soul; and being satisfied in these respects, the committee of examiners shall require him to read aloud in their presence, or (when the Presbytery themselves take the said private trial) their clerk shall read in open court, and in hearing of the candidate, the engagements to be entered into by Act 10th, Assembly, 1711; and the Formula appointed (by Assembly, 1714, Act 6th of the same) to be signed by such as are licensed to preach immediately before licensing them; and Presbyteries are strictly charged to conduct those trials impartially, as in the sight of God and our Lord Jesus Christ, the alone King and Head of his Church, and either reject or delay to further trial such as shall not be found sufficiently qualified.

Article VIII. The same steps are hereby ordained to be taken in all respects, before any Presbytery shall recommend a student to be taken on trials by another.

Article IX. It is likewise enacted that Presbyteries, after sustaining the above private trial, and resolving to admit the candidate to public trials, shall two months (at least) before the then ensuing meeting of Synod, direct circular letters to be written, and sent away to each Presbytery within the bounds, informing them of their intention, that the members of the Synod may be ripely advised thereanent; and it is likewise ordained, that intimation of the same shall be publicly made at the second diet of Synod, to lie on the table till another diet, or in case of no third diet, till the end of said second one, and then particular inquiry shall be made, whether there is any objection against entering the said student on trials? And in case any relevant one shall be moved, the Presbytery proposing the candidate shall stop procedure till the same be discussed or brought to an issue.

Article X. The General Assembly appoints the public probationary trials of students, who are to be licensed probationers, to be these following, viz. ; 1mo, The catechetic trials to be renewed in presence of the Presbytery, and that previously to all the other parts of public trials; 2do, A homily in English on a Scripture text; 3tio, An exegesis in Latin, on a controverted head of divinity, and sustaining a thesis or dispute thereon; 4to, An exercise and addition; 5to, A lecture on a large portion of Scripture; 6to, A popular sermon on a particular text of Scripture. Lastly, To interpret the Greek of the New Testament, ad aperturam libri, and not only to translate and analyse any portion of the Hebrew Bible prescribed by the Presbytery, but also to read the Hebrew text, ad aperturam libri. And it is hereby further enacted, that the foresaid public trials shall not be taken and concluded in fewer than three several meetings of Presbytery, nor shall the interval between the first and last of these meetings be, in any case, shorter than six weeks.

Article XI. When any Presbytery who, with the Synod's allowance, has entered, or who is about to enter a student on trials, shall receive a letter from any Presbytery, showing their dissatisfaction with the student entered, or to be entered on trials, and giving relevant grounds for the same, which they offer to the Presbytery at their next meeting, the said student shall not be licensed until the matter be tried. And the General Assembly appoints Presbyteries, who shall receive such letters anent students from any other Presbytery, to write a return with the first post after their meeting, acquainting them of their next diet.

Article XII. The General Assembly considering, that some persons who, upon application to the judicatories of this Church, have not been admitted on trials, or have not been found fit and worthy to be licensed to preach, do yet retire out of the bounds of this Church, where they are not so well known, in order to enter upon trials, and after they have been licensed, do not recommend themselves by a holy life and ministerial conversation, to the reproach of the Church of Scotland where they were educated; therefore, the General Assembly do hereby inhibit and discharge all young men, educated in this Church, or students of divinity, to go to foreign places and offer themselves to trials for licence to preach the Gospel, without testimonials and recommendations from their Presbytery, as above directed. And further, order and appoint, that no student whatsoever, coming from abroad, shall be allowed to preach within this Church, as one of our probationers, until it appear documented that they have followed the study of divinity for six years, after their finishing their course of philosophy, and until they undergo anew their catechetic trials, and come under the engagements, and sign the Formula appointed by Act 10th, Assembly, 1711, and it appear by their licence that the said probationers have been licensed by a regularly constituted Presbytery, or classical meeting.

Article XIII. For the better securing the attainment of the purposes of this Act, and to prevent the eluding thereof, the General Assembly does hereby enact and ordain, that no young man educated in this Church shall go without the bounds thereof, and offer himself to trials, unless he carry with him such certificates as are by this Act appointed to be produced to Presbyteries within the Church, previously to their admitting any to trials, at the desire and on the recommendation of another Presbytery. And it is hereby further enacted, that no person licensed without the bounds of this Church shall be held or considered as one of her probationers, nor shall be entitled to, or capable of, enjoying any of the privileges belonging to that character, till he shall undergo a-new his catechetic trials, and until it shall be documented, that he did follow the study of divinity, so as to fall under one or other of the three classes of students above described in paragraph or section 2, Article 1, 2, and 3, and until he come under the engagements, and sign the Formula appointed by Act of the General Assembly, 1714; and till it shall likewise appear that he was licensed to preach by a regularly constituted Presbytery or classical meeting. Provided always, that the space of time intervening between the admission of such students to trial before Presbyteries or classical meetings, not within the Church of Scotland, and their being actually licensed, shall not have been less than six weeks.

Proposals annexed to the above Overture.

1mo, That a form of a licence adapted to the frame and chief clauses of this Act be drawn up, and be strictly enacted to be observed as the only valid form in the power of Presbyteries to grant, and that no one presume to officiate in the character of a preacher, till he shall either have extracted his licence drawn up in manner and form hereby required, and shall have the same ready to produce and exhibit to all concerned; or until he shall obtain and be in possession of an attestation by the Presbytery, that the materials out of which such a licence can be framed are actually engrossed and contained in their minutes.

2do, That certificates be drawn up in such manner and form as shall suit the requisites of this Act, be printed, leaving blank spaces to be filled up with the dates and other particulars, that can only be inserted by the granter of the certificates.

3tio, That an edition of this Act be printed, and copies thereof given to students of divinity already enrolled, and prosecuting their studies, and to intrants on said study in time coming.

4to, That when Presbyteries suspend preachers, or deprive them of their licences, notice should be given of such sentences, either in the public newspapers, or by circular letters to the Presbyteries, at least of the Synod of the bounds, if not to the whole Church; and in like manner notice be given when such as have been suspended or deprived of their licences are restored to their character of preachers.

Act of the Assembly anent the Form of Commissions.

The General Assembly, 1766, having prescribed certain forms of commissions to members of Assembly, and attestations thereof, and the Assembly, 1766, having, in respect of some defects observed in these forms, made a supplement thereto; the General Assembly, now considering the disadvantage of having what belongs to the necessary forms of commissions and attestations lying in separate Acts, by which the electors or their clerks may be more liable to mistakes or omissions, than if the whole was laid before them in one view, did appoint both to be brought together into one Act as follows; and the Agent for the Church to cause print the same, and transmit copies thereof to the several Presbyteries, Universities, and Burghs.

The General Assembly, considering that it is of the greatest importance for the honour and interest of religion, that the office-bearers of the Church should behave and conduct themselves in all respects becoming their character, do, in terms of the Act of Assembly, 22d May 1722, earnestly beseech, exhort, and require all ministers to take heed to themselves, and to their doctrine, and to be exemplary to their people, in sobriety, righteousness, and holiness, abstaining from all appearance of evil; and, in like manner, the General Assembly do earnestly beseech, exhort, and require the elders and deacons to be faithful in the discharge of their respective offices, tender and circumspect in their walk, punctual in their attending upon ordinances, strict in their observation of the Lord's Day, and regular in keeping up the worship of God in their families. The Assembly do further enjoin and require, for the more regular election of members to the Assembly in time coming, Presbyteries, Burghs, and Universities, strictly to observe the Acts of former Assemblies, appointing that the election shall be made at least forty days before the meeting of Assembly, and within a month preceding the first of the said forty days, except those lying in the Northern and Western Isles, and shall appoint the day of election at a meeting to be entered in their minutes, at least ten free days before such election; and that on the day of election, they shall make their elections betwixt the hours of one and eight o'clock in the evening.

The General Assembly, considering also that some Acts regulating the manner and time of electing members to the Assembly are posterior to the Act 17th May 1725, establishing forms of their commissions; and that these forms refer in general to Acts of Assembly that contain some particulars, of which Presbyteries, Universities, and Burghs, cannot have any certain evidence, and are thereby reduced to the necessity either of attesting what does not come properly under their own knowledge, or of omitting clauses in the established form, whereby their commissions have been rendered void and null; the Assembly did, on all these accounts, and hereby do, appoint and ordain the forms of commissions and attestations hereunto subjoined, to be observed by Presbyteries, Sessions, Universities, and Burghs; and enact and ordain, that all such commissions and attestations as are not conceived and attested in these very words of the form now prescribed shall be rejected.

The General Assembly do further declare and enact, that when a Kirk-session or Presbytery refuse their concurrence or attestation to a commission by a Burgh or University, without assigning the reasons of their refusal, that commission shall be sustained as if duly attested, in case the matter shall be brought before the Assembly by protest or appeal.

Sess. 5, May 23, 1769.—An Address by the General Assembly to his Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland, consider it as our duty, at this juncture, to approach your throne with the warmest professions of our sincere attachment to your royal person and family. As the Church of Scotland is indebted for its preservation, in times of danger and persecution, to the Divine protection, it owes its civil establishment to the principles of liberty. Under the same Illustrious Monarch who secured the succession of the British Throne to the House of Hanover, the protection of law was obtained for the Church of Scotland; and the members of this Church have uniformly distinguished themselves, no less by the love of liberty, which the genius of our ecclesiastical constitution tends to cherish, than by their attachment to your Majesty's royal ancestors, the faithful guardians of the rights of their people.

Animated with the warmest sentiments of loyalty and affection to our Sovereign, we embrace the first opportunity that hath offered to us of expressing our hearty concern at that spirit of licentiousness, and those unhappy dissensions which have disturbed your Majesty in the seat of your government, and begin now to alarm the minds of good citizens in the most remote parts of your dominions. Fully sensible of your Majesty's paternal goodness, and constant endeavours to promote the public happiness, we cannot sufficiently lament that this gracious purpose should be obstructed by any part of your subjects.

It is, however, with much satisfaction that we assure your Majesty, that the great body of the people under our care, sensible of the blessings which they enjoy under your auspicious reign, are actuated with zeal for our happy constitution, and with respect and love for their Sovereign. No pains shall be wanting on our part to cherish and improve those happy dispositions. At the same time that we inculcate upon them a supreme reverence for the doctrines and precepts of Christianity, we will omit no opportunity of impressing them with loyalty to our King, veneration for the constitution, and obedience to the laws of our country.

We offer, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, our prayers to Almighty God, that he may long preserve your Majesty to be the guardian of our civil and religious rights: That he may comfort your heart under the cares and burdens of government, and guide your councils by his unerring wisdom: That there may ever surround the throne men of approved ability and integrity, possessing the confidence of their Sovereign, and the esteem of their fellow-subjects; and that these lands, ruled by your Majesty and your royal descendants, may continue to the latest ages to be the happy seat of religion, liberty, and the valuable arts of life, are, and shall be, the constant prayers of,

Most Gracious Sovereign, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 8, June 1, 1770.—An Address by the General Assembly to his Majesty on the Birth of a Princess.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, embrace with pleasure an opportunity which is offered us by Providence, during our meeting in the General Assembly, of congratulating your Majesty on the safe delivery of the Queen, and the birth of a Princess.

This happy event, while it fills our hearts, as it must do those of all your faithful subjects, with joy, gives us fresh reason to acknowledge the goodness of God, in thus farther securing to us, by the increase of your royal family, a long continuance of those estimable blessings which we have hitherto enjoyed under the protection of your Majesty's illustrious house.

While attempts have been made to disturb the order of government, and diminish the affection of your people towards a Sovereign who is so worthy of their confidence and trust, we esteem ourselves happy, in being able to assure your Majesty of the firm and unperverted loyalty of the people under our care, and of their taking equal concern with us in every event that is auspicious to your Majesty's family, persuaded that liberty is only secure when due reverence to the laws is preserved. We rejoice in having a Prince who has shown that, while he maintains the most sacred regard to the British constitution, he knows how to support, with propriety, the dignity of the throne.

That Almighty God may pour down his blessings on your Majesty, on the Queen, and on all the royal family; that he may prolong your reign in the midst of national prosperity, and may establish your throne in the hearts of a dutiful people, are the constant and fervent prayers of,

Most Gracious Sovereign, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, embrace with pleasure this first opportunity which our meeting in a General Assembly affords us, of approaching your throne with humble congratulations on the birth of another Prince.

Attached to your Majesty by that affection which your Majesty's amiable qualities inspire, we cannot but rejoice in an event which adds to your domestic felicity. The loyalty which we bear to our Sovereign, and a deep sense of the intimate connection betwixt the prosperity of your royal family and the public welfare, increase our satisfaction. Engaged as we are by every motive of duty and of interest to wish the continuance of the British sceptre in your illustrious house, we regard every addition to your royal family as a new pledge of the security of our religion and liberties. We adore the goodness of God, who, by the flourishing state of your royal house, and the persevering wisdom and clemency of your government, affords us so much reason to be grateful for the happiness which we now enjoy, and for the future prospects which are before us.

That his gracious protection may ever continue to watch over your royal person, your illustrious consort the Queen, the Prince of Wales, and every branch of your Majesty's august race; that his Spirit may prompt all your undertakings, his wisdom may direct all your councils, and his Providence crown them with success; and that, after having long made that extensive and flourishing empire over which you reign happy, by your mild and just administration, you may at length attain the full reward of those righteous princes who shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, in the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, are the sincere prayers of, Sess. 5, May 30, 1775.—The General Assembly's Address of Condolence to his Majesty on the Death of the late Queen of Denmark.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave humbly to approach your Majesty with sentiments of respectful and sincere condolence, on occasion of the untimely death of your Majesty's royal sister, the late Queen of Denmark.

* An act on this subject was passed in 1779. See Act 9th of that year.—Ed. 1843.

Attached to your sacred person, by affection no less than by duty, we are deeply interested in whatever affects our gracious Sovereign, and are most sincerely touched with an event, which, to the cares inseparable from royalty, adds the feeling of domestic affliction.

Possessed, as we are, with reverence and with gratitude towards the illustrious House of Hanover, to which, under God, the nation is indebted for that full enjoyment of the Protestant religion, and of public liberty, which our ancestors were solicitous to secure, when they called it to the British throne, every loss sustained by your Majesty in your august family fills us with the most sincere concern.

That the God of grace, and Father of mercies, may on this occasion pour into your royal heart those consolations which flow from sentiments of reverence for the Divine government, and of dutiful submission to the Divine will; that he may sanctify this national affliction, and, by graciously prolonging your valuable life, and that of our gracious Queen, and the lives of your royal offspring, may afford us the comfortable prospect of continuing to enjoy the many blessings by which we are distinguished from the nations around us, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

IV.

Sess. 5, May 28, 1776.—The General Assembly's Address to his Majesty on the present situation of Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, animated with the same sentiments of loyalty which prevail among the people under our care, embrace this first opportunity of joining with them in declaring, that, at this interesting juncture, our attachment to your Majesty's person and government, and our zeal for the constitution and rights of Great Britain, continue firm and unshaken.

Under a constitution founded on the principles of liberty, and governed by a Sovereign whose reign has been uniformly distinguished by a sacred regard for the rights of his people, we have enjoyed a felicity which our forefathers struggled and prayed for, but did not obtain; and we daily bless that God, by whom kings reign, for your mild and equitable administration. Sensible of our own happiness, and reposing with confidence on your Majesty's attention to the welfare of all your people, it is with no less astonishment than regret that we have beheld those alarming events which disturb the tranquillity of your reign.

But while we deeply bewail the progress of that spirit which hath prompted our fellow-subjects in North America to take arms in opposition to your Majesty's authority, and the supremacy of the British legislature, we contemplate, with peculiar satisfaction, that striking proof which your Majesty now gives of your paternal affection, by vesting in the same respectable persons whom you have entrusted with the command of your formidable fleets and armies, the power of displaying the extent of your Majesty's clemency, and of conciliating the alienated minds of your subjects.

We consider ourselves as called upon, in the present situation of public affairs, to exert our utmost diligence in discharging the important functions of our sacred office, in order to confirm the people committed to our charge in their reverence for the laws of their country, in their attachment to the system of legal government established by the glorious Revolution, and in their loyalty towards your Majesty, whom they have experienced to be the faithful guardian of those liberties which your illustrious House was called to maintain.

These endeavours shall ever be accompanied with our fervent prayers to Almighty God, that he may go forth with the fleets and armies of our country; that he may bless the humane means employed by your Majesty to recal our fellow-subjects to a sense of their duty, and to put a speedy period, without effusion of blood, to the present dangerous and unnatural rebellion; that he who stilleth the tumults of the people, and ruleth the spirit of man, may, in his good time, turn the hearts of the children unto their fathers; that out of confusion order may arise; that in place of anarchy and civil discord, submission to legal authority may return; and the union between Great Britain and her Colonies may be happily re-established, so that both may long rejoice under the government of your Majesty, as their common parent and benefactor.

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 6, May 29, 1776.—The General Assembly's Congratulatory Address to his Majesty on the Birth of another Princess.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, embrace with pleasure the opportunity which our meeting in a General Assembly affords us of approaching your throne with respectful congratulations on the birth of another Princess.

Animated with the principles of loyalty and inviolable regard to your royal person and family, we cannot fail to rejoice in an event which adds to your domestic felicity.

Possessed as we are with reverence and gratitude towards the illustrious House of Hanover, to which, under God, the nation is indebted for the full enjoyment of the Protestant religion, and of public liberty, we must consider the increase of your royal family as an happy pledge of the security of our civil and religious rights, which our ancestors were solicitous to establish, by calling your august family to the throne of these kingdoms. On that throne may it flourish to the latest posterity!

With our fervent prayers for the blessing of the Most High to rest on your Majesty, on your illustrious Consort the Queen, and on all your royal progeny, we are,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 5, May 28, 1776.—Act disjoining the Parish of Nenthorn from the Presbytery of Lauder, and annexing the same to the Presbytery of Kelso.

The which day, the General Assembly had transmitted to them, by their Committee for Bills, a petition for Mr Abraham Kerr, minister at Nenthorn, setting forth, that the removal of the Presbytery of Lauder from Earlston to Lauder, which is at a considerable distance from Nenthorn, made it extremely inconvenient for him (especially in winter) to attend the meetings of the Presbytery of Lauder; and as Kelso is much nearer, it would be more convenient for him and his parishioners that the parish of Nenthorn be disjoined from the Presbytery of Lauder, and united to the Presbytery of Kelso. That both the Presbyteries and the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale had agreed thereto; and along with the petition he produced a letter, addressed to the Moderator of this Assembly, signed by all the heritors of the parish of Nenthorn, agreeing to the disjunction, and craving that the General Assembly would disjoin the said parish of Nenthorn from the Presbytery of Lauder, and unite and annex the same to the Presbytery of Kelso. Which petition and letter being read and considered by the General Assembly, they unanimously did, and hereby do, disjoin the parish of Nenthorn from the Presbytery of Lauder, and unite and annex the same to the Presbytery of Kelso; and declare Mr Kerr, and his successors in office, constituent members of the Presbytery of Kelso in all time coming.

IX.

Sess. 6, May 29, 1776.—Act Reponing Mr Robert Dalrymple to the Office of the Holy Ministry.

The General Assembly, taking into consideration a petition of Mr Robert Dalrymple, late minister at Dallas, presented to the Synod of Moray, and referred by them to this Assembly, craving that he might be restored to the ministerial character, of which he was deprived by a sentence of this Church more than twelve years ago, in the justice of which he acquiesced; at the same time, that it had been unspeakably distressing to him, had borne so hard upon his mind, and given him so deep concern, that nothing appeared to him of such importance, and so comforting, as to be restored to his former character. And the Assembly having had laid before them, together with the above petition, a representation from the Synod of Moray, bearing, That they had unexceptionable evidence, both from the testimony of their own members, and from the places where Mr Dalrymple had resided, of his decent and useful behaviour since he was deposed, and were, therefore, unanimously of opinion, that it would be in no respect hurtful to the interests of religion, but otherwise, to agree to his petition; but that as the Assembly had affirmed the sentence of the Synod deposing him, they submitted it to the Assembly, whether, upon what is above represented, it would not be proper to take off the said sentence? The General Assembly, considering the above petition and representation, did unanimously, and hereby do, take off the sentence of deposition passed upon the said Mr Robert Dalrymple, and reponc him to the office of a minister of the Gospel.

Sess. 6, May 29, 1776.—Act altering the Day of Meeting of the Synod of Fife.

The which day, the General Assembly had transmitted to them, from their Committee for Overtures, an overture from the Synod of Fife, craving that the Assembly would alter the day of the Synod's meeting, from the first to the second Wednesday of October: Which being read and considered by the General Assembly, they unanimously did, and hereby do, change the day of meeting of the Synod of Fife from the first to the second Wednesday of October yearly; and appoint the said Synod to meet on the second day of October next.

XI.

Sess. ult., June 3, 1776.—Act Changing the Place of Meeting of the Synod of Galloway.

The which day, the General Assembly had transmitted to them, by their Committee for Bills, a petition for the Synod of Galloway, craving, that the Assembly would be pleased to change the place of the Synod's meeting from Wigton to Newton-Stewart; and along with the petition there was produced an extract of the Synod's proceedings relative to this matter: Which petition and extract being considered by the General Assembly, they unanimously did, and hereby do, change the place of the Synod of Galloway's meeting from Wigton to Newton-Stewart; and appointed the ordinary and stated meetings of that Synod to be held at Newton-Stewart in all time coming, allowing the Synod to adjourn occasionally to Kirkcudbright, Wigton, Stranraer, or elsewhere.

XII.

Sess. 5, May 28, 1776.—Act anent the Age of Ruling Elders.

The General Assembly, upon the report of their Committee for Overtures, finding that a considerable majority of the Presbyteries of this Church have now agreed to an overture anent the age of ruling elders, and the electing them to represent sessions in Presbyteries and Synods, did thereupon agree, without a vote, to turn the said overture into a standing act. And, accordingly, the General Assembly did, and hereby do enact,—1mo, That no person shall be ordained an elder of this Church before he is twenty-one years of age complete; 2do, That all Presbytery elders shall be elected, within two months after the sitting of Synod, to attend the Presbytery and ensuing Synod of that bounds, and in case of death or demission, a new election shall be made within one month of the same; 3tio, That every elder so chosen shall produce an extract of his election, under the hand of the session-clerk, before he be received on the roll either of Presbytery or Synod.

Sess. ult., June 3, 1776.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

Sess. 4, May 26, 1777.—The General Assembly's Address to his Majesty on the present situation of Affairs in North America.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met together in a National Assembly, consider it as our duty, at this interesting juncture, to approach your throne, in order to assure your Majesty that our attachment to your person and government, and the zeal of the people under our care for the constitution and rights of Great Britain, continue firm and unshaken.

Sensible of our own felicity under the reign of a Prince who has been the faithful guardian of those laws and liberties which the illustrious House of Hanover was called to secure and maintain, we observed, with deep concern, the first appearances of a turbulent and ungovernable spirit among the people of North America. We have contemplated its alarming progress with astonishment, and beheld fellow-subjects, who enjoyed in common with us the blessings of your Majesty's mild administration, take arms in opposition to your just authority, and disclaim the supremacy of the British legislature, reject with disdain the means of conciliation, generously held out to them by your Majesty, and labour to erect their unlawful confederacies into independent states.

With reverence and gratitude to Divine Providence, we offer our congratulations to your Majesty on the success which has attended the fleets and armies, which you have been constrained to employ, in order to oppose the violence of rebellious subjects, and reclaim them to a sense of their duty. While we trust that your Majesty's councils will be conducted with wisdom, and your troops continue to act with valour, we regard it as our immediate duty, in the present situation of public affairs, to increase our diligence in discharging the functions of our sacred office, that we may not only confirm the people under our care in sentiments of loyalty to their Sovereign, and attachment to the British constitution, but may impress all ranks of men with a deep sense of their manifold transgressions, and incite them to such reformation in their hearts and lives, as will avert from our country those judgments which our iniquities justly deserve.

That the Lord of Hosts, in whose hand is power and might, may go forth with the fleets and armies of our country; that he who stilleth the tumults of the people, and ruleth the spirit of man, may, in his good time, turn the hearts of the children unto their fathers, that the destroying sword may return into his scabbard, and be at rest; that the union between Great Britain and her colonies may be speedily re-established, on terms so just and equitable that both may long rejoice under the government of your Majesty, as their common parent and benefactor, are the daily and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 1, May 21, 1778.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The proofs which we have so constantly received of the duty, loyalty, and affection, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and of their invariable attention to the very important objects committed to their care, give us the greatest pleasure. We have the strongest reliance on your endeavours to promote, with a truly Christian zeal, the cause of religion and virtue, and to discountenance every practice which may have a tendency to impiety and immorality. You may rely upon our ready concurrence with you in every thing that may advance these laudable purposes, so essential to the welfare of our people, and in our resolution to support the Church of Scotland in all its rights, as by law established.

We need not recommend the avoiding of all contention and unedifying debates to those who have no other object in their view than that of suppressing licentiousness, immorality, and vice; and who are actuated purely by that zeal which tends to the advancement of true religion, and the general peace and happiness of society.

We have again appointed our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, George Earl of Dalhousie, to represent our royal person in this Assembly, being well satisfied of his loyalty, integrity, and zeal for our service, and of his particular affection to the Church of Scotland; and we are persuaded that our choice of him will be agreeable to you.

We have the fullest reliance, from long experience, that charity, brotherly love, and unanimity, will prevail in all your proceedings in the business before you, and that you will bring this meeting to a happy conclusion. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 12th day of May 1778, in the 18th year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

SUFFOLK.

III.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1778.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most gracious letter was received and read with all the respect and gratitude due to so condescending a mark of royal favour.

Your Majesty's approbation of the duty, loyalty, and affection, of the General Assemblies of this Church, gives us the greatest satisfaction, and cannot but animate us with such zeal to give invariable attention to the important objects committed to our care, as may recommend us to the continuance of your Majesty's favourable regard.

The manner in which your Majesty is pleased to express your reliance on our endeavours to promote the cause of religion and virtue, and to discountenance every practice which may have a tendency to impiety and immorality, whilst it clearly points out to us the great objects of our attention, powerfully excites us to use our most vigorous efforts in advancing those valuable purposes; and the assurances your Majesty is pleased to give of your countenance to our endeavours, affords us the most agreeable prospect of success.

The gracious declaration of your Majesty's resolution to support the Church of Scotland in all her rights, as by law established, we receive with the greatest thankfulness, and rest in it with the most entire satisfaction and security.

It shall be our study to keep invariably in view the important ends of our meeting; and, agreeably to your Majesty's recommendation, to avoid contention and unedifying debates, fully sensible that they are inconsistent with the spirit of true religion, and destructive of the welfare of society.

Your Majesty's royal donation for propagating religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, we receive with all thankfulness, and we will be careful to apply it to the pious purpose for which it is bestowed.

The choice which your Majesty has been pleased to make of the Earl of Dalhousie to represent your royal person in this Assembly, we regard as an additional instance of your Majesty's favour. The approved fidelity and ability of that noble Lord, his affection to the Church of Scotland, and the happy experience of a former Assembly, render your Majesty's nomination of him most acceptable to us.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may long preserve your Majesty, direct your councils, and prosper your administration;—that he may bestow his choicest blessings on your Royal Consort the Queen, the Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family;—that there never may be wanting one of your royal house to sway the British sceptre;—and that, after a long and happy reign over a free people, your Majesty may receive an unfading and eternal crown of righteousness, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

PAT. GRANT, Moderator.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1778.—The General Assembly's Address to his Majesty, on the present situation of Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most faithful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in National Assembly, consider it as our duty, at this season of public danger and alarm, to approach your throne, with the warmest declarations of our continued and inviolable attachment to your Majesty's person and government. While we view, with no less astonishment than concern, an unnatural and unprovoked rebellion still subsisting in North America, we must, at the same time, applaud that lenity which hath prompted your Majesty, as the father of your people, to hold out terms of conciliation to those deluded men, who have withdrawn their allegiance from a government under which they had attained the highest prosperity. We behold with satisfaction the measures which are taken, both for internal security, and for the support of the national honour, against the insult of every hostile power; and have the pleasure to assure your Majesty, that in no part of your dominions have exertions been made for that purpose with greater unanimity and ardour, than among the people under our care. We entertain the firmest hopes, under the blessing of Almighty God, that by a proper mixture of vigour and courage, with wisdom and mercy in the public councils, your Majesty will continue to render the British name everywhere respectable and great. We can assure your Majesty, that to the ministers, the elders, and every member of this Church, nothing will give more joy than to behold all the subjects of your wide extended empire happy under subjection of that free and legal government to which we are indebted for the most valuable blessings.

That, for this end, your Majesty's councils may be ever inspired with wisdom from above, and your arms may be crowned with victory;—that He who turneth wars into peace in all the ends of the earth, may so rule in the hearts of men, that the present unhappy contest in which this kingdom is engaged may speedily terminate in a peace, which shall be equitable, lasting, and consistent with the honour and true interests of Great Britain;—and that your Majesty may long reign the happy Sovereign of a happy people, are the sincere and earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 22, 1779.—The General Assembly's Address to his Majesty, on the Birth of another Prince, and on the present situation of Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most faithful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in National Assembly, beg leave to approach your throne with our respectful congratulations upon the birth of another Prince. While we rejoice in every event which augments the domestic felicity of a Sovereign endeared to his people by his amiable virtues, we regard the increase of your Majesty's family as an additional security to our religion and liberties; and we number, with much satisfaction and thankfulness, the princes born in the royal family, as raised up, by the Divine Providence, to afford your subjects the happy prospect of enjoying, through a course of ages, under the protection of your Majesty's descendants, that full exercise of the Protestant religion, and those civil immunities which the illustrious House of Hanover was called to maintain, and of which your Majesty has been the faithful guardian.

In this season of national exertion and public alarm, we consider it as our duty to express an inviolable attachment to your Majesty's person and government. And we are happy in being able to assure your Majesty, that the same sentiments of duty and affection which we entertain, prevail amongst the people committed to our care. That loyalty which prompted the exertions lately made in this part of your Majesty's dominions, for internal security and the support of the national honour, remains unshaken. The open assistance given by the natural rivals and enemies of Great Britain to the rebellious colonies in North America, has united all ranks of men in zeal for the common cause. They rejoice in the success which attends your Majesty's arms in different quarters of the world. They confide in the wisdom and vigour of your Majesty's councils; and they look forward, trusting in the Almighty, with the solicitude of good citizens, to a happy termination of the present commotions.

It shall be our constant study to cherish these sentiments of loyalty in the breasts of our people, and to approve ourselves the dutiful servants of the Prince of Peace, by inspiring those over whom we have influence with the warmest sense of the security and felicity which they enjoy under your Majesty's mild, legal, and paternal administration.

That the Lord God of Hosts may go forth with your Majesty's fleets and armies, and crown them with victory; that he may defeat the designs of our enemies; that he may open the eyes of our deluded fellow-subjects; that the authority of law, and the blessings of liberty, may be speedily felt and acknowledged throughout all the parts of this extended empire; and that your Majesty may long reign the Sovereign of a free, a happy, and united people, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

JAMES GILLESPIE, Moderator.

The General Assembly, &c.

VI.

Sess. 9, May 29, 1779.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for discussing Affairs referred to them.

The General Assembly, &c.—The Commission of this year contains the following additional instructions, viz. :—And the Assembly further did, and hereby do, appoint the Commission to watch over any steps which may hereafter be taken for removing or weakening our legal securities against Popery. And that they may be able more effectually to attend to this object, the Assembly hereby authorise and appoint the Moderator of the Commission to call meetings pro re nata, as often as he shall be required so to do by any ten members of the Commission.

VII.

Sess. 5, May 25, 1779.—Act and Resolution of the General Assembly anent Popery.

The General Assembly proceeded, agreeably to the resolution of yesterday, to take under their serious consideration the overtures transmitted, by the Committee for Overtures, to this Assembly, concerning Popery. The several overtures were read over, and, after long reasoning on this affair, the General Assembly, agreeably to a motion made in the course of their reasonings, unanimously came to the following resolution: The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, having taken into their serious consideration the public alarm excited in this part of the United Kingdom, from the apprehension of an intention to repeal the laws enacted to prevent the growth of Popery, think it their duty to make this public declaration of their sentiments, on a subject in which the interests of religion and of their country are so deeply concerned. While they express their gratitude to Providence for the invaluable privileges enjoyed by this National Church, and the security afforded to the Protestant religion by established laws, they declare their firm attachment to the principles of civil and religious liberty, and their earnest desire that universal toleration and liberty of conscience may be extended to Protestants of every denomination. But they think it their duty also to declare their firm persuasion, that a repeal of the penal laws now in force against Papists would be highly inexpedient, dangerous, and prejudicial to the best interests of religion and civil society in this part of the United Kingdom. Entertaining these sentiments, it is with much satisfaction they have received assurances from the highest authority, that the bill intended for repealing the laws for preventing the growth of Popery in Scotland is laid aside; and they confide in the wisdom of the legislature, that it will not in future be resumed. They likewise think it their duty, on this occasion, to express their strongest disapprobation of those lawless mobs, which have so lately disgraced the good cause which, in the blindness of popular zeal, they were meant to serve; and earnestly recommend it to the people under their care to show the influence of their religion, by a quiet and charitable spirit, approving themselves worthy of their civil and religious liberties, by a peaceable and moderate behaviour. The General Assembly further judge it expedient and necessary to give particular instructions to their Commission on this subject; and they did, and hereby do, appoint the Commission to watch over any steps which may hereafter be taken for removing or weakening our legal securities against Popery. And, that they may be able more effectually to attend to this object, the Assembly hereby authorise and appoint the moderator of the Commission to call meetings, pro re nata, as often as he shall be required so to do by any ten members of the Commission. The General Assembly do further resolve to exert their most effectual endeavours, in order to provide for the better instruction of the people in those corners of the Church where Popery chiefly abounds, by increasing the number of stated pastors among them.

VIII.

Sess. 7, May 27, 1779.—Regulations respecting the Chapel of Ease in Dunfermline.

1. The General Assembly allow and authorise the petitioners to employ any licentiate or minister of the Church of Scotland to officiate occasionally in the meeting-house now to be used as a Chapel of Ease, until a stated minister be appointed; it being always understood, that, previous to their employing any minister or probationer, they shall lodge a list of the names of such persons as they intend to employ, before they preach in the chapel; and every probationer shall lodge his licence and other certificates in the hands of the moderator of the Presbytery before preaching in the chapel.

2. The petitioners shall proceed to the election of a stated minister on or before the first of May next.

3. When the petitioners resolve to proceed to an election, they shall intimate their resolution to the Presbytery of Dunfermline, requesting them to appoint one of their number to preside at that election; and the Presbytery is hereby enjoined to comply with that request within a fortnight at farthest after it is made. If the Presbytery make no appointment within the time limited, or if the person nominated by the Presbytery does not attend, the petitioners are authorised to proceed to the election by themselves.

4. If the person elected shall be a probationer, the Presbytery is appointed to proceed to ordain him to the office of a minister according to the rules of the Church. If the person elected shall be an ordained minister of the Church of Scotland, it shall be competent for any of the ministers of the parish to preach along with the person elected, and introduce him to the Chapel of Ease; or if they shall decline that service, when application is made to them, this shall be competent for any other minister of the Presbytery.

5. It shall not be competent for the petitioners to elect any minister or probationer to be minister of the Chapel of Ease, but one entirely of the principles of the Church of Scotland, with regard to worship, doctrine, discipline, and government, and who shall subscribe the Standards and Formula enjoined by the Church: it being also understood and provided, that the petitioners and others, who shall form the congregation that meets in the Chapel of Ease, shall remain subject to the jurisdiction of the Church of Scotland, and her different judicatories.

6. That collections shall be made regularly at the doors of the chapel, and the sums arising therefrom shall be applied as part of the common fund for the maintenance of the poor of the parish.

7. That before the Presbytery ordain a probationer, or introduce a minister to the said chapel, the petitioners shall lay before the Presbytery a security which appears to the Presbytery sufficient, for a sum not less than fifty pounds sterling, as his yearly stipend, so long as he shall continue to officiate in that congregation; and if the Presbytery entertain any doubt concerning the validity of the security which is offered, the same shall be transmitted to the Procurator of the Church for his opinion; and the Presbytery is appointed to proceed according to that opinion.

IX.

Sess. 8, May 28, 1779.—Act concerning Persons going to be Licensed and Ordained without the Bounds of this Church.

The General Assembly, upon the report of their Committee for Overtures, finding that a considerable majority of the Presbyteries of this Church have now agreed to an overture anent persons going to be licensed and ordained without the bounds of this Church, did thereupon agree, without a vote, to turn the said overture into a standing act; and accordingly the General Assembly did, and hereby do, enact and prohibit all persons, educated or residing within the bounds of this Church, from going out of its bounds to obtain licences to preach; and prohibit all preachers licensed by this Church from going without its bounds to obtain ordination, unless they are called to a particular congregation in another country; and enact that licences obtained in that manner shall not be received, or have any effect in this Church; and such preachers as contravene this act shall forfeit the licence formerly given them, and be no longer entitled to the privileges which belong to a preacher of the Gospel in this Church.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1779.—Order respecting the Acts of Assembly, and transmitting the same to Synods, Presbyteries, and Universities.

The General Assembly, upon considering the petition for James Dickson, printer for the Church, with the report of the committee thereupon, resolved, that, in place of taking one hundred copies of the printed Acts of Assembly from the printer annually, that they should, for the future, take two hundred copies annually; viz., one for the moderator, and one for the clerk of each Presbytery; and that a copy for each Synod and University should also be delivered annually, and a copy delivered to the Keeper of the Advocates' Library, for the use of the Faculty of Advocates: And to prevent expense to the fund in time coming, it is hereby ordered, that the Acts shall, for the future, be left at the Society Hall, and Presbyteries, Synods, and Universities, are desired to send for their copies on or before the first day of December annually; certifying, if they do not send for their copies on or before that day, they will be sent by post at their expense: And further, when they do send for their copies, they shall send a receipt therefor, that the clerks of Assembly may have evidence of their being delivered.

Sess. 3, May 26, 1781.—The General Assembly's Address to his Majesty on the Birth of another Prince, and on the present situation of Public Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland, humbly beg leave to approach your throne, to express our firm attachment to your person and government, and to assure you that the sentiments which we entertain are the sentiments of the people committed by Providence to our charge.

With the most lively joy and heartfelt satisfaction we have beheld the increase of your Majesty's family in your royal offspring; an event which, while it contributes to your Majesty's domestic felicity, must, on that account, give pleasure to all your loyal subjects; but which, in a particular manner, must be felt as of the utmost national importance, by encouraging us to hope for a long continuance of those civil and religious blessings which, as British subjects and Protestants, we have hitherto enjoyed under the government of your Illustrious House.

The tumultuous outrages which, under the mask of religious zeal, have disturbed the peace of your Majesty's subjects, filled us with the deepest concern; and we heard with abhorrence the name of our holy faith prostituted to encourage acts of violence, which were adverse to its principles, and forbidden by the precepts of our blessed Redeemer.

While your Majesty was engaged in a necessary, though expensive war, against the ancient enemies of these realms, and against your own rebellious subjects, in support of the honour, dignity, and just prerogatives of your crown, we have seen with indignation your ancient allies, who ought to have been united to your Majesty, by the closest ties of religion, civil interest, and gratitude, not only refusing to supply your Majesty with such succours as by treaty they were bound to give, but even affording their assistance to your enemies, to enable them the more effectually to pursue hostile measures against your Majesty. We rejoice in the success which it hath already pleased the Almighty to bestow upon your arms, in chastising their perfidy. We indulge the hope that this success may be a mean of opening their eyes, and of renewing the friendship which, to the mutual advantage of both nations, so long subsisted between Great Britain and the States of Holland. And we confide in the wisdom of your Majesty's councils, under the Divine Providence, for bringing the present bloody and destructive war to a happy issue.

In the meantime, we consider it to be our peculiar duty, at this juncture, to cherish the loyalty and affection to your Majesty, and the zeal for the success of your arms, which prevails among all ranks in this part of your dominions; and to impress those over whom we have influence with a due sense of the blessings they enjoy under your Majesty's government, and of those duties of charity and brotherly love which they owe to each other, and to their fellow Christians.

That the Lord of Hosts may go forth with your fleets and armies; that he may crown your arms with victory; and that your Majesty may long reign over a free, happy, and united people, is the sincere and ardent prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders, met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 8, June 1, 1781.—Interim Act anent Licensing Probationers.

The General Assembly, in consequence of an overture from the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale, having taken into their serious consideration the dangerous consequences that would arise to this Church if Presbyteries were allowed to receive on trials young men who have never studied divinity at an university, did, and hereby do, strictly prohibit all Presbyteries from following such a practice; and ordain that this prohibition shall have the force of a law till next General Assembly.

Sess. 8, June 1, 1781.—Overture anent Licensing Probationers.

The following is part of an Overture from the Synod of Perth and Stirling considered by the Assembly of this year. It is appended to the Acts of 1782 in the original edition, having been omitted in the printed Acts of 1781.—Ed. 1843.

Whereas the receiving extrajudicial papers into the proceedings of superior judicatories, and founding decisions upon them, is highly irregular, injurious to the rights of inferior courts, and of dangerous consequences to the interests of individuals, and particularly the admitting private letters of non-residing heritors and others, never before the inferior judicatory, and sustaining the same, in place of a call regularly authenticated, is directly contrary to the rules of this Church, confirmed by immemorial practice, of fatal tendency to the interests of religion, and derogatory to the authority of Presbyteries, who have, in the first instance, the only right of judging in the settlement of vacant parishes: For remedying and preventing these abuses, the Synod of Perth and Stirling humbly overture to the General Assembly, that, in conformity to the fundamental constitution of this Church, they will be pleased to resolve and enjoin that no papers or evidence whatever, not offered to the inferior court, shall be received at discussing any appeal or complaint; but that, when any new matter or evidence occurs which the parties judge of importance, the cause shall be remitted to the inferior court. The Assembly finding this part of the overture unnecessary, as what it proposes is already sufficiently secured by the standing rules of the Church, agreed to dismiss it; and did, and hereby do, dismiss it accordingly.

*Sess. 1, May 23, 1782.—The General Assembly's Address to his Majesty on the present situation of Public Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in National Assembly, beg leave to embrace this first opportunity of approaching the throne, with our respectful congratulations upon the success with which it hath pleased Almighty God to crown your Majesty's arms.

Convinced that we owe our existence and protection, as a National Church, to the stability of that government under which we live, we take a warm interest in the train of striking events which, in the course of Divine Providence, we have been called to behold; and it is our constant study to cherish and diffuse sentiments of loyalty amongst the people with whom we are connected. With the heartfelt satisfaction natural to subjects of a free state, we have heard of the important advantages lately gained by your Majesty's arms in Europe, in Asia, and in America. We admire the gallantry and good conduct displayed by the commanders employed in your Majesty's service, both at home and abroad, by which the designs of your combined enemies against some of our most valuable settlements have been in a great measure defeated. Relying upon the wisdom and vigour of your Majesty's councils, we look forward with the most pleasing hopes to the salutary consequences of the glorious victory obtained in the West Indies; and we lift our souls in devout and thankful acknowledgments to the Lord of Hosts.

* The following notice respecting this address appears in the Abridgment of the Assembly's Proceedings of 1782:—"The draught of an address to his Majesty, on the present state of public affairs, which had been approved of by the committee appointed to prepare it, was produced and read. Another draught, which had not been agreed to by said committee, but being read by a member in his place, and transmitted simpliciter by the Committee for Overtures, was also produced and read. And the question being put, which of these should be adopted, it carried that which had been approved of by the committee; against which several members dissented."—Ed. 1843.

That the blessing of heaven may continue to attend your Majesty's councils; that your enemies, feeling in every quarter of the globe the force of the British arms, may be disposed to listen to reasonable terms of accommodation; that He who ruleth in the kingdoms of men, who gives to the sword its charge, and who alone can command it to return to its scabbard, may enable your Majesty speedily to accomplish the paternal wish of your royal breast, by restoring to your people the blessings of an honourable and lasting peace; that you may long sway the sceptre over a united, grateful, and happy people; and that the Crown may descend with undiminished splendour, through your illustrious family, to the latest generations, are the daily and earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 9, June 1, 1782.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for the Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Marrying his Majesty's Royal Bounty for that end.

The General Assembly did, and hereby do, nominate and appoint the Rev. Dr Joseph M'Cormick, minister of the Gospel at Prestonpans, their Moderator, all the ministers who are members of the Presbytery of Edinburgh, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for the reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, for promoting the knowledge of true religion, suppressing Popery and profaneness, and for managing the royal bounty for these ends, according to, and in terms of, his Majesty's grant to this Assembly. In prosecution of which purposes, the committee are to appoint preachers and catechists to go to such places as they shall find, upon due information, to be the most proper, according to his Majesty's design, expressed in his warrant; and, in so doing, that they have particular regard to such parishes in South Uist, Small Isles, Glencoe, Harris, the countries of Moidart, Glengarry, and Lochaber, and the other parishes of the Synods of Glenelg and Argyle, which the committee shall find, by reason of the vast extent, by the prevalency of Popery and ignorance, and other unhappy circumstances, to be in the greatest distress. And they shall take care that the persons they employ be certified, and found, upon due trial, to be properly qualified for these respective offices, of good abilities for the same, of a pious life and conversation, prudent, of undoubted loyalty to his Majesty, and of competent skill in the principles of divinity, and particularly in Popish controversies: Such preachers and catechists being hereby appointed to be subject to, and under the inspection of, the Presbyteries of the bounds, to which they are sent, who are to take care that the orders of the committee be duly observed by them. And the preachers are also appointed to catechise, and both they and the catechists to instruct the people from house to house, and to visit the sick; and, in all their labour, among the people, to be careful to teach them the principles and duties of the true Christian

Protestant religion, and the obligations they are under to duty and loyalty to our Sovereign King George, and obedience to the laws. And the committee are empowered to give them such instructions, as to their work and behaviour, as they shall judge meet; which instructions the preachers and catechists are hereby ordered to obey. The General Assembly do further appoint the said committee to have a particular regard, in their proceedings, to the regulations agreed upon by the committee of the Assembly for managing the royal bounty, on the 30th of September 1730, approved by frequent Assemblies; and to take care that Presbyteries, and others concerned, observe the same, which they are hereby ordered to do; particularly, the Assembly ordains the several Presbyteries to insert in their registers the committee's appointments of their designations, salaries, and stations of the several missionaries, and to have an exact regard thereto, in all the letters they shall write about the said missionaries, and in giving of certificates to them; and to direct all their letters, concerning missionaries in their bounds, only to the moderator of the committee; which letters shall be signed, at the appointment of the Presbytery, by the moderator or clerk thereof: And the Assembly does discharge any payment to be made of the salaries of the missionaries, except upon receipts from the missionaries themselves, and upon certificates from the Presbyteries, bearing that they have served for the time mentioned in the receipts. And that every catechist who receives a salary from the royal bounty, on condition that the parishioners or gentlemen of the district shall pay a certain sum in aid of such salary, shall insert, in the body of his receipt to the cashier, a declaration that he has received the particular sum specified; and that the attestation of the Presbytery shall, in like manner, bear that the catechist has received the stipulated sum which the committee make the condition of his appointment; it being understood by this resolution, that the several stations, with regard to which such conditions were originally made by the committee, when no such declaration of the catechist, or attestation of the Presbytery, as is now proposed, is received by the cashier, shall be afterwards suppressed by the committee, though the catechist shall, notwithstanding, receive the salary for the time he is certified to have performed his duty. That a journal of the itinerant's labours in the ministry of the mission committed to him be written on the back of the Presbytery's certificate, and signed by him, as the ground on which the Presbytery have granted him said certificate. The General Assembly do also empower the said committee to apply, for the purposes above mentioned, what may remain of the last year's royal bounty not disposed of, by reason of any of the missionaries not fulfilling the appointments laid upon them; and that they are to keep a register of their proceedings, and likewise distinct books of accounts how the foresaid money is disposed, which shall be patent to any concerned who please to inspect the same. Of the persons above named as members of this committee, five are declared to be a quorum, whereof three are to be ministers; but it is hereby appointed, that at the quarterly meeting of the committee, in which the scheme or establishment of missionaries for the ensuing year is to be approved and determined, not less than fourteen shall be the quorum, whereof nine shall be ministers; and the said committee are appointed to have their general meetings at Edinburgh, the first lawful day after the adjournment of each of the four stated diets of the Commission of the General Assembly, within the Assembly Aisle, at ten o'clock forenoon, except that day shall fall to be Saturday, and then the meeting shall be upon Monday next thereafter, at the said hour; with power to the said committee to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find most needful and convenient: And they are to keep a correspondence with the Commission of the General Assembly, and the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee of directors, and to take their advice and assistance; and also to correspond with the Synods and Presbyteries concerned. They are likewise instructed and empowered, as they shall see cause, to apply to the government, or any magistrate, for assistance and support in carrying on the design of the commission now given to them. And the General Assembly do appoint Mr William Robertson, Advocate, Procurator for the Church, and receiver of the foresaid royal bounty, to pay out the same as he shall be directed and ordered by the foresaid committee, and according to their rules. And the said committee are appointed to examine the accounts of the distribution of the royal bounty, and lay the same before the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, or the Barons of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer, and to report their diligence to the General Assembly, to whom they are to be accountable. And it is agreed, that no person once employed and inserted in the scheme shall be struck out thereof for that year, but by the quorum of at least fourteen, whereof nine to be ministers; and in case any complaint shall be made against any of them on the scheme, it shall not be determined the first ordinary meeting that the same is offered, but it shall lie on the table till another meeting; and, in the meantime, the person complained of, and the Presbytery of the bounds wherein he officiates, shall be acquainted of such complaint, and those concerned be required to send to the said committee a just account of the matter against the next meeting. And it is further appointed, that after the yearly scheme of missionaries on the royal bounty is settled, in manner above directed, and notice thereof given by letters to the Presbyteries concerned, such Presbyteries shall send up to the said committee their answer to these letters at farthest with their commissioners to the General Assembly, if the same be not done sooner; and that the committee, at their first meeting after the General Assembly, shall endeavour to complete the next year's scheme themselves; and if they cannot complete it, they shall name a sub-committee of their number for that purpose, who are to lay their draught thereof before a subsequent meeting, which is appointed to meet as soon after the rising of the Assembly as possible. And empowered the committee, at their first meeting, to reject any petition for a new station, in case they shall find sufficient objections against it; and that the said committee, in making up the scheme of missionaries, &c., do not exceed the sum in the grant.

Sess. 7, May 30, 1782.—Act Declaratory concerning Moderation of Calls.

Upon a motion, That the resolution of Assembly respecting the moderation of calls should, for the satisfaction of all concerned, be converted into a declaratory Act, and printed amongst the Acts of Assembly, the General Assembly agreed thereto, without a vote; and in terms of said resolution, did, and hereby do, declare, that the moderation of a call, in the settlement of ministers, is agreeable to the immemorial and constitutional practice of this Church, and ought to be continued. *

Sess. 7, May 30, 1782.—Act respecting the Licensing of Probationers.

The General Assembly, having taken into their serious consideration the danger that ariseth to this Church, and to the souls of people, by licensing any to preach the Gospel who are not duly qualified, according to the rules laid down in the Holy Scriptures; and considering that the several Acts made by former Assemblies on this subject lie so scattered, in many separate articles, at great distances from one another, that the directions therein given were in danger of being overlooked by Presbyteries, did collect what appeared to them most material in former Acts, and transmit the same, in form of an overture, to Presbyteries; and now finding, by report from their Committee for Overtures, that a majority of Presbyteries

* The other motion made on this occasion, and which was lost, was to the following effect:—"That the Assembly declare that the moderation of a call is agreeable to the immemorial practice of this Church; but not having sufficient evidence laid before them that any Presbyteries have departed so far from established usage, as to lay aside the moderation of a call in the settlement of a minister, dismiss these overtures as at this time unnecessary."—Ed. 1843.

have agreed to turn the same into a standing law of the Church, the General Assembly, after reasoning, resolved, by a very great majority, to turn the said overture into a standing law of the Church, and accordingly did, and hereby do, enact and ordain, that the following regulations shall be strictly observed in all time coming:—

1mo, That no Presbytery admit any person to probationary trials but such as are found to be of good report, of sufficient learning, of sound principles, of a pious, sober, grave, and prudent behaviour, and of a peaceable disposition, and well affected to the government in Church and State, and of whom they have sufficient ground to conceive that they shall be useful and edifying in the Church, and that careful inquiry be made thereanent; and that, without respect of persons, such as are esteemed to be light and vain in their behaviour, proud, worldly-minded, or unacquainted with the power of practical godliness, be kept back from that sacred work.

2do, That none be admitted to trials in order to be licensed, but such as have produced to the Professor of Divinity, at the time of their being enrolled, either a diploma of Master of Arts, or a certificate, bearing that they have gone through a full course of philosophy at the College, and who have either given close attendance on the Divinity Hall for the space of four years, from the time of their names being entered upon the roll of the Presbytery as students of divinity; or, if their circumstances did not permit them to give close attendance on the Hall, have continued to prosecute the study of divinity for six years, and have in that time delivered the usual number of discourses. Provided also, that at the time of their being admitted to trials they are twenty-one years of age complete.

3tio, The General Assembly, considering the reproach that may be brought on religion in general, and particularly on this Church, by the unworthy behaviour of such as follow the study of divinity, do earnestly recommend to the Presbyteries, Professors of Divinity, and ministers and members of this Church, to keep a watchful eye on such students during the terms above specified. And further, that when any student comes to attend the Professor of Divinity in any university, he shall produce to the professor, and to the minister of the parish where he is to reside during the time of his attendance on the profession, a testimonial from the minister of the parish from whence he comes; and when he leaves the profession, he shall carry back testimonials, from the minister of the parish, of his grave and suitable behaviour becoming his character; and from the professor, testimonials certifying the same, and also his regular attendance on the diets of the profession, and the time he has attended. And when any Professor of Divinity shall think fit to recommend a student, in order to probationary trials, his testimonials shall certify his proficiency in his studies and his moral character.

4to, The General Assembly do appoint and ordain, that no Presbytery admit any student to probationary trials, except such as have resided within their bounds for the space of six months, or do produce to them sufficient testimonials from the Presbyteries in whose bounds they have lived, or for the most part resided, expressing that it is the desire of these Presbyteries that these students should be entered upon trials. And such students as come from abroad shall produce satisfying testimonials from the professors under whom they studied; and the time of their being abroad shall be accounted a part of the six years; but none of these students shall be entered upon trials for the space of half a year after they come to Scotland.

5to, When any student is proposed to a Presbytery, in order to be taken on trials, the proposal shall lie on the table till the next ordinary meeting, before they give judgment therein, that diligent inquiry may be made, and information had, concerning the said student's qualifications and behaviour; and the Presbytery shall be alone when the proposal is made and judged on. And the General Assembly enjoins all students to take all opportunities of cultivating an acquaintance with the ministers of the Presbytery where they reside, and where they are to pass trials.

7mo, The General Assembly appoints the same method to be observed, and trials to be taken in all the above particulars, before any Presbytery recommend a student to pass trials in another Presbytery.

8vo, The General Assembly do also appoint and ordain, that the terms above specified being expired, and testimonials produced, and previous trials taken, in manner above directed, the Presbytery, before they prescribe any part of public trials, shall write letters to all the Presbyteries within the bounds of the Synod, acquainting them with their design, two months at least before sitting of the Synod; and at the next meeting of the Synod they shall also acquaint the Synod thereof, and obtain their special judgment and advice in that particular. And, that the members of the said Presbytery and Synod may be ripely advised thereanent, the General Assembly appoints the said letters to be duly and carefully transmitted to the several Presbyteries, and that intimation thereof be publicly made at the first diet of the Synod, to lie on the table till the second, or some subsequent diet, and then particular inquiry be made whether any person have anything to object against the student's being entered on trials for preaching the Gospel. Provided always, that in any part of this Church when Synods meet but once a-year, a student may be proposed to the Synod half a year sooner than would have been competent if the Synod had met twice a-year.

9no, The General Assembly recommends to Presbyteries that, before any student is entered on trials, the engagements required by Act 10th of Assembly, 1711, of such as are to be licensed, be read to them; and that the Presbytery take promise of them, that they will subscribe to and particularly observe the same, in case the Presbytery see cause to license them; and that this promise be recorded in their books.

11mo, The General Assembly, judging it fit that the same method shall be followed in all Presbyteries, as to questions put to and engagements taken of probationers when licensed; and that the said probationers should not only give sufficient proof of their piety, literature, and other good qualifications for the sacred ministry, but also come under the strictest engagements to adhere to and maintain the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government of this Church,—do, therefore, enact and appoint, that the questions appointed by Act 10th, 1711, be put to all such as pass trials; and likewise that they shall subscribe the Formula set down in the said Act, before they be licensed to preach the Gospel. And the General Assembly strictly prohibits the licensing any person whatsoever, who shall not give explicit and satisfying answers to these questions, and subscribe the said Formula; and discharge any Presbytery to make use of any other questions or Formula.

12mo, When any Presbytery, who, with the Synod's allowance, has entered, or who is about to enter, a student on trials, shall receive a letter from any Presbytery, showing their dissatisfaction with that student, and giving relevant grounds for the same, which they offer to verify to the Presbytery at their next meeting, the said student shall not be licensed until the matter be tried. And the General Assembly appoints Presbyteries who shall receive such letters anent students from any other Presbytery, to write a return with the first post after their meeting, acquainting them of their next diet.

13mo, That the Acts concerning Simony be read before licensing any probationer.

14mo, For the better observation of this Act, it is particularly recommended to the Professors of Divinity to communicate the contents thereof to their students, in a public meeting annually, at such time in the month of January as to them seems most convenient. And all Presbyteries and Synods are peremptorily appointed to observe the same in all its parts. And it is strictly enjoined, that visitors of Presbytery-books make strict inquiry how the several Presbyteries do observe the same.

II.

Sess. 1, May 22, 1783.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. Having the most entire confidence in your duty, loyalty, and affection to our person and government, and being convinced of your unwearied attention to the cause of virtue, piety, and religion, we take this opportunity of assuring you of our fixed purpose and resolution to support the Presbyterian Church of Scotland in the full enjoyment of all its privileges, as by law established.

Convinced that you bring with you the best intentions for promoting the happiness of my government, and the true interest of the church whereof you are members, we have great satisfaction in countenancing your present meeting with our royal authority.

As the preventing the growth of Popery, so repugnant to the constitution of my kingdoms, and the suppressing all vice and immorality, so destructive to Christianity, are objects which will distinguish your zeal in the advancement of true religion, and in all which you will always meet with my steady concurrence, so the avoiding all unnecessary debates and contentions amongst yourselves will be equal proofs of, what we have hitherto experienced, your great prudence, wisdom, and moderation.

As you cannot but be highly sensible of the benefits which will arise from the inestimable blessings of peace, we make no doubt but you will think that an humble gratitude is due to Almighty God for these and other mercies which his Divine Providence has lately vouchsafed to us.

We are persuaded that you will conscientiously discharge your duties to the people committed to your care, by infusing such principles into their minds as their holy religion dictates, and which are the best adapted to the security of our happy constitution, and their and our most valuable interests, both here and hereafter.

We have appointed our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, David Earl of Leven, to represent our royal person in this Assembly, being well satisfied of his loyalty, integrity, and zeal for our service, and of his particular affection for the except when the preceding regulations are strictly complied with; and the Presbytery exacts and ordains accordingly.

The Presbytery also appoints a copy of these regulations to be sent to all the ministers of the communion of the Church of Scotland, whose ordinary residence is within their bounds, with a letter from their clerk, requiring that they likewise shall comply with these regulations.

The Presbytery farther appoints a copy of them to be transmitted by their clerk to every kirk-session within their bounds, in order to their being inserted in the session-books; and the several kirk-sessions are hereby ordained to see them strictly carried into execution; and as irregularities have been chiefly complained of in the city of Edinburgh and suburbs thereof, the ministers of Edinburgh, and of the parishes immediately adjacent, are enjoined to be particularly attentive that their respective session-clerks do, in all respects, comply with the preceding regulations.

And, lastly, the Presbytery ordains a copy of these regulations to be inserted in the several Edinburgh newspapers, for the information of the public.

Church of Scotland, so that our choice of him cannot but be agreeable to you; and we trust that this meeting will be concluded with the same unanimity and brotherly affection which have distinguished your former Assemblies. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 5th day of May 1783, in the 23d year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

NORTH.

III.

Sess. 3, May 24, 1783.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most gracious letter to this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was received with the respect and gratitude due to this renewed proof of your royal favour.

Your Majesty's confidence in our loyalty to the best of Sovereigns, and in our attachment to the interests of religion, we feel as a most pleasing recompence of our past conduct; and your royal assurance that it is your fixed purpose and resolution to support this Church in all its privileges, we consider as a most powerful incitement to persevere in fulfilling your Majesty's desire.

May it please your Majesty to accept our most affectionate gratitude for this fresh proof of your goodness, in countenancing our present meeting with your royal authority.

To prevent the growth of Popery, at once so repugnant to the constitution of these kingdoms, and to the holy and beneficent spirit of the Gospel, is an object worthy of our constant zeal; and to this, together with the suppressing of all vice and immorality, we resolve, in the strength of God, to exert our strenuous endeavours, animated to so good a work by the declaration of your Majesty's steady concurrence. In this honourable employment, and in avoiding all unnecessary debates and contentions amongst ourselves, permit us to hope, that your Majesty's experience of the prudence, wisdom, and moderation, of former Assemblies, will be received as a pledge of our firm purpose to cultivate the same spirit in our present meeting.

We beg leave to return our humble thanks to your Majesty for your persevering attention to the increase of Christian knowledge, and the interests of the Reformation in the remote parts of Scotland. Your royal donation for this purpose it shall be our endeavour to apply in such a manner as may best promote the generous and pious intention with which it is bestowed.

Your Majesty's well-known affection to your people teacheth us to repose an entire confidence in the wisdom of those counsels that have induced your Majesty to restore to these kingdoms the blessings of peace; for which, and for all the other mercies of a gracious Providence, we desire to express our thankfulness to Almighty God, and to stir up a like spirit in the people committed to our care.

The inviolable attachment of his noble ancestors to the civil and religious liberties of their country, and in particular to the Church of Scotland, his own exemplary regard to religion, and warm affection to this Church, together with his many other amiable qualities and Christian virtues, make your Majesty's choice of the Earl of Leven, to represent your royal person in this Assembly, most acceptable to us.

That the King of kings may establish your Majesty's throne in righteousness and mercy; that he may preserve you long to reign over a free, grateful, and affectionate people; that all your councils may be wise and prosperous; that he may bless your Majesty in your person and in your family; and that when at length you shall relinquish an earthly crown, you may receive that which fadeth not away, through Jesus Christ our Lord, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 24, 1783.—The General Assembly's Address to his Majesty on the Peace.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to address your Majesty, with hearts full of affection and attachment, and with the most grateful sense of your Majesty's paternal goodness, in having pursued measures, by which, under God, we now enjoy the inestimable blessing of peace; a blessing at all times desirable, but especially at a time when this country, pressed by a powerful confederacy of its inveterate enemies, united with its former subjects and old allies, was also afflicted with an uncommon degree of scarcity of provisions.

At the end of a war less successful than former wars have been, we consider ourselves as specially called upon, by the Providence of God, to exert ourselves in the discharge of our duty, and to cultivate in the minds of the people committed to our care those sentiments of religion and virtue, which form the hearts of men to that "righteousness which exalteth a nation."

We are happy in being able to assure your Majesty of the unaltered affection of the people of this part of the United Kingdom to your Majesty's person and government, and of their zeal for your illustrious family, under whose mild administration they have so long enjoyed the blessings of civil and religious liberty.

That Almighty God, the King of kings, and the Ruler of all the nations of men, may continually have your Majesty under his Divine protection; that he may bless you in your person and in your family; that he may reward your Majesty's private virtues with domestic felicity, and your mild government with the love and fidelity of your subjects; that your reign may be long, happy, and prosperous; and that at last your Majesty may, through Jesus Christ our Lord, receive a crown of glory, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 7, May 29, 1783.—Resolution of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland relating to a Fast.

There were transmitted to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, overtures from the Synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and from the Synod of Moray, proposing, that, upon account of the present scarcity, and other obvious reasons, a day should be set apart for fasting and prayer, to be observed as a national fast through Scotland; which being read, the following motion was made, viz. :—The General Assembly, taking into their serious consideration the late visitation of Divine Providence, in afflicting these kingdoms with an uncommon scarcity of provisions, and also the seasonable relief which the people of Scotland have lately received by the importation of large quantities of grain, the favourable seed-time, and the comfortable prospect of an early harvest, which God, in his great goodness, hath been pleased to afford us, do earnestly exhort and beseech the people of this land to lift up their souls with contrition and thankfulness to Almighty God, who, tempering his chastisements and his mercies together, calleth us to return to himself. And, further, the General Assembly being informed that a day of fasting has already been appointed by some Synods and Presbyteries, and observed within their bounds; and judging it, upon this account, inexpedient to appoint a national fast, do hereby recommend to the several Presbyteries, and to all the ministers of this Church, to exert their utmost endeavours in imprinting upon the minds of the people committed to their charge a sense of their dependence upon our Father which is in heaven, who giveth us our daily bread; and to take such methods as to them shall appear most effectually to minister to edification, in order to fix the attention of all ranks upon those lessons of contrition, of thankfulness, and of liberality, which the various dispensations of Divine Providence are, at this time especially, teaching us. The General Assembly having considered the above motion, approved thereof, and enacted accordingly, and appointed this resolution to be printed separately, and transmitted to Presbyteries as soon as possible.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1783.—Act and Resolution concerning Lawyers and Agents who are Members of the Court, appearing as Procurators or Agents, to plead or agent in Causes at the Bar of the General Assembly or Commission.

The General Assembly, considering that they have a title to the assistance of their members as judges in all causes brought before them, they being expressly commissioned by their constituents to consult, vote, and determine, in all matters that shall come before the Assembly; as also, that those who are appointed members of the Commission of the General Assembly are obliged, by that appointment, to concur in cognoscing and determining in every matter referred to them, do therefore resolve, enact, and declare, that in time coming, none who are constituent members of the Court shall act as counsel or procurators, agents or solicitors, in any causes which come before the Assemblies, or Commissions thereof.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met together in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave, with all humility and respect, to approach your Majesty's throne, and with that affection which we owe to our gracious Sovereign, to assure your Majesty of our sincere and inviolable attachment to your royal person, family, and government.

Sensible of the many inestimable blessings which these kingdoms, and this Church in particular, derive from the beneficent reign of a Prince who is so justly esteemed as the affectionate father of his people, we feel ourselves deeply interested in every event which is conducive to the prosperity and happiness of your Majesty's family.

While we rejoice in such events, as contributing to your Majesty's domestic felicity, we are at the same time convinced that they afford additional security to those privileges, both sacred and civil, which this nation have had the happiness to enjoy under the auspicious government of your Majesty, and of your illustrious ancestors.

Animated by these sentiments, we do, with the most cordial satisfaction, and with the most devout gratitude to Almighty God, the sovereign Disposer of all events, congratulate your Majesty, that, since the last meeting of the General Assembly, God, in his kind Providence, hath been pleased to add to your Majesty's family by the birth of another Princess, and to gratify the ardent wishes of all your Majesty's loyal subjects, by the happy recovery of your Royal Consort, our most gracious Queen, from her late indisposition.

That God may be graciously pleased to preserve your Majesty's most valuable life for a blessing to your kingdom and people;—that he may take under his merciful protection our most gracious Queen, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and all your royal family;—that the descendants of your Majesty's illustrious house may sit on the British throne, and be eminent protectors of the liberties of all your Majesty's dominions to the latest posterity; and that your Majesty, after a long, a glorious, and a happy reign over a free and faithful people, may at last, through the merits of Jesus Christ our Lord, be rewarded with a crown of immortal glory in the kingdom of heaven, are, and ever shall be, the most fervent prayers of,

Sess. 9, May 29, 1784.—Resolution concerning Marriages.

The General Assembly do resolve that no session-clerk in this Church proclaim any persons in order to marriage, until he give intimation to the minister of the parish in a writing, dated and subscribed by him, of the names, designations, and places of residence of the parties to be proclaimed, and obtain the said minister's leave to make the said proclamation; with certification, that if any certificate of proclamation of banns is given without observing the above order, the said certificate shall be held as a false certificate, and the session-clerk who subscribes it shall be censured accordingly; and in case of a vacancy, the above intimation is to be made to two of the elders of the parish; and that this resolution be printed in the Acts of this Assembly; and appointed the clerks to transmit copies of this their resolution to the several Presbyteries, to be by them transmitted to the sessions of the parishes within their bounds, in order to its being observed.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1784.—Recommendation respecting Ordination to the Office of a Minister, without relation to a particular Charge.

The Committee appointed to consider the overture respecting ordination to the office of a minister, without relation to a particular charge, reported as follows:—Having carefully considered the said overture, find that matter attended with so many difficulties, that they are not ripe to propose to the General Assembly any precise rules concerning it, fit for being enacted into standing laws; and can only move, that the Assembly should, in the meantime, recommend it to Presbyteries to be cautious in granting ordination to such persons as have neither a fixed charge, nor a reasonable prospect of such provision as may enable them to support the ministerial character; and that no Presbytery grant ordination to any person who has a near prospect of removing from the bounds of that Presbytery into another, from whom he may, in constituents, are; that thus the Assembly may be enabled to regulate their procedure, upon a subject so interesting to the public at large, and to this Church in particular. &c. It was proposed, that one state of the vote be 'Reject,' or 'Not;' another state also was proposed, viz. 'Reject,' or 'Consult.' After reasoning on the state of the vote, the Assembly agreed, that the state of the vote be, 'Reject,' or 'Not,' it being understood, that if it carries Reject, the overtures be rejected in terms of the first motion; against which state of the vote Mr Bryce Johnston protested. The question being then put, it carried by a great majority, 'Reject.' The Assembly, therefore, rejected these overtures as inexpedient, ill-founded, and dangerous to the peace and welfare of this Church, against which several members dissented."

due time, receive ordination, if it shall by them be found necessary or proper. Which being considered by the General Assembly, they approved thereof, and do recommend accordingly, and order this recommendation to be printed in the Acts of this Assembly.

*Sess. ult., May 31, 1784.—A new Overture respecting the Ordination of Elders.

Whereas great irregularities have crept into the Church with respect to the ordination of elders, the General Assembly overtures, that it be enacted, that no minister should set apart any person to the office of elder in his congregation who has not a fixed residence in the parish, or who is not an heritor in the parish; it being the true meaning and intent of this overture, to prevent elders being ordained in congregations who are in nowise connected with them; and it being understood that any city or town where there are more congregations than one shall be held as one parish, so far as respects the purpose of this overture.

Sess. 7, May 29, 1788.—An Address by the General Assembly to his Majesty, on the proposed Commemoration of the glorious Revolution.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the National Assembly, beg leave to approach your throne with hearts full of loyalty and affection.

We should be unworthy of the station we hold, if we did not gladly embrace this first opportunity of congratulating your Majesty on the happy effects of your wise and vigorous measures during the course of last year, when, under the direction of Divine Providence, you delivered this nation from the danger of being involved in war, by preserving the independence, and re-establishing the legal government of a neighbouring Protestant State, and happily revived with it an ancient and close alliance, which, for so long a period, had been salutary to your Majesty's kingdoms.

While we contemplate the present posture of our public affairs in general, and our friendly league with the Republic of the United Provinces in particular, with thankfulness to Heaven, and the warmest approbation of your Majesty's conduct, we feel ourselves called upon to commemorate that glorious event, the Revolution of 1688, which delivered us from Popery and arbitrary power, and fixed that constitution of government which is the wonder and envy of the world, not more for civil and political liberty, than for justice and humanity—which has hitherto had force sufficient to repair its internal disorders, as well as to repel external violence, and which the experience of a century now entitles us to hope may be as lasting as it is excellent—an event, the more endeared to our remembrance, as from thence was derived the settlement of the crown of Britain on your Majesty's illustrious family, who have hitherto swayed the sceptre with so much wisdom and equity; and with such a sacred regard to the rights of the nation, as to secure the confidence and affection of their subjects, and to leave no doubt on our minds that the stability of the constitution, and the prosperity of the people, will ever continue to be the great object of their government.

With such deep impressions of the felicity of that great era, to which, besides all other advantages, we owe the restoration and security of our ecclesiastical establishment, your Majesty may be assured that we shall neglect no proper opportunity of making the people under our care duly sensible of the distinguished blessings they enjoy under Divine Providence, and of exciting in their minds sentiments of affection and loyalty to your Majesty, the faithful guardian of all our liberties.

That your Majesty may reign long over a free and happy people; that the Almighty may guard your sacred person from every danger, and bestow on you every blessing; that he may bless and preserve the Queen, Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and that a race of kings of your illustrious line may, to the latest posterity, sit on the throne of these realms, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 9, May 31, 1788.—Act concerning the Attestation of Kirk-Sessions to Commissions from Burghs.

It was overtured to the General Assembly, that, for removing certain difficulties in the mode of attesting commissions from certain burghs, the Assembly should pass an Act to the following purport:—

Whereas, by the 9th Act of Assembly, 1718, and the 4th Act of Assembly, 1720, it is ordained and required, That commissions from royal burghs, to their representatives in the General Assembly, shall be attested by the kirk-sessions of the electing burghs respectively:

The Assembly, considering that in certain of the greater burghs within the bounds of this Church there are several parishes and different kirk-sessions within the royalty; and that, in these cases, there has been hitherto no legal enactment to direct the mode in which the sessional attestations are to be adhibited to commissions from such burghs to their representatives in the General Assembly:

To remove any doubts which may arise in such situations, the Assembly hereby appoints and declares, That the attestation of any one kirk-session within the electing burgh shall be held as competent and sufficient to all the purposes for which sessional attestations are required.

Sess. 7, May 29, 1788.—Act appointing a National Thanksgiving in Commemoration of the Revolution in 1688.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, recollecting, with gratitude to Almighty God, the happy and glorious event, that, in the year 1688, (of which the present year is the secular anniversary,) delivered the nation from civil and religious oppression, set proper bounds to the royal prerogative, secured the liberties and just rights of the people, and confirmed to this National Church all the religious rights and privileges which she now enjoys under the illustrious House of Hanover—and being fully convinced, that the principles of the Revolution settlement are the only foundation on which the security of the throne, and the happiness of the subjects, can be permanently established, They think themselves called upon, by their duty to God and to their country, to embrace every proper opportunity of recalling to the serious and grateful recollection of the people committed to their charge this special interposition of Divine Providence in their favour, of impressing on their minds a lively sense of the value of the civil and religious liberties thereby attained, and of exhorting them, by every constitutional means, to preserve and transmit them inviolate to the latest posterity. And considering that the blessings enjoyed by the people of this free and happy country, in consequence of the Revolution, do far exceed the measure of civil and religious advantages which the Providence of God hath allotted to any other nation: Therefore, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, appoint the fifth day of November this year to be observed within the bounds of this National Church as a day of solemn thanksgiving to Almighty God, for the enjoyment of those inestimable blessings for a century past, and of earnest supplication for their continuance to the latest generations: And the Assembly enjoins all ministers to intimate this Act from their pulpits upon the Lord's Day immediately preceding the said fifth day of November this year, and to accompany the intimation with suitable exhortations.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1789.—An Address by the General Assembly to the King, congratulating his Majesty on his Recovery from Sickness.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most faithful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in National Assembly, embrace with joy this first opportunity of approaching the throne, with our most dutiful and sincere congratulations upon your Majesty's recovery.

At a time when the inhabitants of the British Empire were rejoicing under your Majesty's mild and auspicious government, in the blessings of peace, and the manifold advantages derived from the rank which Great Britain holds amongst the nations of the earth, it pleased the Almighty, by the alarm which lately filled the hearts of your Majesty's faithful subjects, to teach them how entirely the prosperity of nations depends upon the will of Heaven. The anxiety which they felt during the continuance of your Majesty's illness, and the fervour of their wishes and prayers for your recovery, were the spontaneous tribute of duty and affection to a Sovereign who is endeared to his people, by those amiable virtues of which he is the illustrious pattern, as well as by that sacred regard to the principles of a free constitution, which has uniformly distinguished his reign; and the unanimity and zeal which have marked the public demonstrations of joy, correspond to the sentiments of entire satisfaction and thankfulness, with which a great and happy people, united in affectionate attachment to your Majesty's person and government, receive from Heaven that inestimable gift, by which the Almighty hath graciously vouchsafed to reward the national loyalty.

While we thus presume to speak in the name of the great body of the people of this country who are under our care, with a confidence arising from a perfect knowledge of their sentiments, acquired by a constant intercourse with them in the discharge of our sacred functions, permit us, Most Gracious Sovereign, to assure you that no class of your Majesty's subjects were more deeply interested in the great event which has diffused such universal joy, than the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland. Entertaining no doubt of a continuance of the royal protection, under the government of a prince who has been the nursing father of the Church, and being assured that our zealous endeavours to promote the interests of religion and virtue will always receive countenance from that piety which ennobles the other graces of your Majesty's character, we number the gracious answer that has been given to our prayers amongst the many mercies which we are accustomed to trace in the history of this favoured land; and we lift our souls in thanksgiving to the God of our fathers, who, by restoring to us a King whom we love and honour as the faithful guardian of our rights, hath afforded us a gracious pledge of their being transmitted unimpaired to latest posterity.

It shall be our constant study to cherish these sentiments of loyalty to your Majesty, and of gratitude to Almighty God, which universally prevail; and the first wish of our hearts will be fulfilled, if a lasting sense of this great national blessing shall revive a spirit of religion, and by disposing the minds of men to learn those lessons of wisdom which it conveys, shall, through the blessing of God, prove instrumental in promoting that righteousness which exalteth a nation.

That your Majesty may live long to be a blessing to your family, to behold the happiness of your people, to enjoy the exalted satisfaction of requiting their affection, and to maintain the glory and prosperity of the British Empire; and that succeeding princes of the House of Brunswick, formed upon your example, may sway the British sceptre with the same justice and moderation, and may receive from their subjects the same homage and love, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1789.—An Address by the General Assembly to the Queen, on the Recovery of his Majesty.

May it please your Majesty,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in National Assembly, presume to approach your Majesty with our humble congratulations upon an event most interesting to your happiness, and most joyful to his Majesty's faithful subjects—the recovery of our beloved Sovereign from his late alarming illness.

The most exalted station is not exempted from those pungent distresses, which, in this mixed state, are often occasioned by the most delicate and amiable affections of the human heart. But the distress of your Majesty was alleviated by those consolations which true religion opens to a devout mind in the hour of deep affliction. The God of grace whom you had honoured in the time of prosperity, while he tried the tenderness of your nature, was pleased to support your faith and patience by that strength with which he strengthens the souls of his servants; and the deliverance which he hath wrought for us, hath graciously rewarded that piety which adorns the throne, by giving you the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness.

Your Majesty witnessed, in the solicitude which all ranks expressed during the illness of the King, how truly he reigns in the hearts of his subjects: Your Majesty received, in the sympathy with which a great nation took part in your sorrows, and in the gratitude, respect, and confidence, with which they looked up to your character, the recompence provided for those qualities by which greatness is rendered amiable; and your Majesty has now the satisfaction of observing, that the demonstrations of joy for that national blessing, by which God hath wiped the tears from your eyes, are mingled with expressions of the most affectionate interest in the happiness of a Queen, whose virtues have united all his Majesty's subjects in her praise.

That your Majesty may long be preserved to be a blessing to the King, to form the minds of your illustrious offspring—to be the pattern of your sex—and the protectress of virtue and religion; that God, in whom alone the families of the earth are blessed, may perpetuate your domestic felicity; that you may taste the most exquisite delight which a mother's heart can know, in beholding the virtue and happiness of your posterity; and that, after enjoying the largest measure of good which can crown the most excellent characters in this world, you may receive, through Jesus Christ our Lord, that crown of life which fadeth not away, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most devoted servants, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

PROPOSALS for the MELIORATION of GLEBES, submitted by the General Assembly to the consideration of the Church.

Sess. 1, May 17, 1792.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The experience we have had of your loyalty and affection to our person and government, and of your zeal for the encouragement of true religion and virtue, leaves us no doubt of your disposition, on the present occasion, to persevere in promoting the happiness of our reign, and the true interest of the Church of which you are members.

We therefore feel the highest satisfaction in continuing to countenance your meetings with our royal authority, and to assure you of our fixed determination to maintain the Church of Scotland in the perfect enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges.

We are persuaded that you will apply yourselves, with temper and moderation, to promote the good ends for which you are assembled, the advancement of religion, and the service of Almighty God; that you will avoid all unnecessary debates and contentions, and that your deliberations will be directed to the means of checking the growth of vice and impiety, of promoting the practice of all Christian duties, and of keeping alive that respect and regard for the clergy, and that deference and subordination to the magistracy, which are essential to the peace and good order of every society, and must always be conducive to the happiness and prosperity of this kingdom.

You will, no doubt, study to impress upon the minds of our subjects a just sense of the many blessings they at present enjoy under the favour of Providence, that, by manifesting a spirit of devotion, a respect for the laws, and an attention to the various duties of our holy religion, they may render themselves worthy of such blessings, and best ensure the future continuance of them.

We have again appointed our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, David Earl of Leven, to represent our royal person in this Assembly, being well satisfied with his upright and faithful conduct in the execution of that important trust, and not doubting but he must continue to be acceptable to you from the affection to the Church of Scotland, and the zeal for the interests of religion, which he has manifested on so many former occasions.

We take this opportunity of repeating to you our earnest exhortations, that you will proceed in the business before you with that unanimity, charity, and brotherly love, which truly become such an Assembly, and without which no real dignity or utility can attend your deliberations; and we trust that you will bring this meeting to a happy conclusion. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 7th day of May 1792, in the 32d year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

HENRY DUNDAS.

Addressed thus,—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1792.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The most gracious letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, was received with that respect and gratitude which are due for so signal a mark of your royal condescension and favour.

We offer our most sincere and humble acknowledgments for the confidence your Majesty has been pleased to repose in our loyalty and affection to your person and government, and in our zeal for the encouragement of true religion and virtue. We beg leave to assure your Majesty that we come together at present, possessed of the same dispositions and principles which have regulated our conduct on former occasions. While we regard the approbation of our Sovereign as a most agreeable recompence for our past services, we trust that the hope of being again honoured with it, will animate us to a steady perseverance in our endeavours to promote the happiness of your reign, and the true interests of the Church of which we are members.

That your Majesty continues to countenance our meetings with your royal authority, we consider as a most satisfactory proof of your paternal goodness; and we rely, with the most perfect security, on your fixed determination to maintain the Church of Scotland in the perfect enjoyment of all her just rights and privileges.

Assembled for the advancement of true religion, and the service of Almighty God, we shall apply ourselves with temper and moderation to promote these good ends. We shall endeavour to avoid all unnecessary debates and contentions, as not more displeasing to your Majesty than dishonourable to ourselves, and inconsistent with the wisdom that is from above; and we shall bear in mind the special obligations we are laid under, to direct all our deliberations to the means of checking the growth of vice and impiety, of promoting the practice of all Christian duties, and of keeping alive among all ranks of men committed to our charge, that respect and regard for the clergy, and that deference and subordination to the magistracy, which are essential to the peace and good order of any society, which must always be conducive to the happiness and prosperity of this kingdom, and which invariably mark the character of the followers of the Prince of Peace.

In our several stations we shall use our best endeavours to impress upon the minds of your Majesty's subjects a just sense of the many important blessings they at present enjoy under the favour of Providence; and we shall strenuously inculcate upon them that, by manifesting a spirit of devotion, a respect for the laws, and an attention to the various duties of our holy religion, they will most suitably express their gratitude to that God who hath dealt so bountifully with them, and take the most effectual method to ensure a continuance of his blessing and protection.

We rejoice in the renewed expression of your Majesty's zeal for the propagation of the reformed Protestant religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland; and it shall be our care, by a faithful application of the sum your Majesty hath graciously bestowed, to fulfil the pious and benevolent intentions of the royal donor.

The unfeigned attachment of the Right Honourable the Earl of Leven to your Majesty's sacred person and government, his approved fidelity and uprightness in the execution of the important trust with which he hath formerly been vested, that zealous and affectionate regard to the civil and religious interests of his country by which he and his ancestors have been distinguished, his amiable character in private life, and his good offices to ourselves, render your Majesty's re-appointment of him to represent your royal person in this Assembly entirely acceptable to us; and for this particular testimony of your royal favour towards us, we feel and desire to express most cordial gratitude.

Convinced that unanimity, charity, and brotherly love, truly become our Assembly, and that without them no real dignity or utility can attend our deliberations, we are solicitous to be possessed of those qualities when we proceed in the business more immediately before us; and we shall study so to comply with your Majesty's earnest and most wise exhortations, as to bring our present meeting to a happy conclusion.

That the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ may establish your throne in righteousness, and in the hearts of your people;—that he may long preserve your Majesty, the guardian of religion and liberty;—that he may enrich your Royal Consort, our most gracious Queen, with all heavenly blessings;—that His Divine favour may attend his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and all your Royal Family;—that your descendants, to the latest posterity, may sway the sceptre over a free, a loyal, and a happy people;—and that when he shall call you hence, full of years and of glory, he may give you a kingdom which cannot be moved, are the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1792.—The General Assembly's Congratulatory Address to his Majesty, upon the Marriage of his Royal Highness the Duke of York with the Princess-Royal of Prussia.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly of this National Church, embrace the first opportunity of approaching the throne, with our respectful congratulations upon the marriage of his Royal Highness the Duke of York with the Princess-Royal of Prussia.

We rejoice in every event which contributes to the domestic felicity of the father of his people, and we regard the auspicious union of a British Prince with the daughter of our illustrious Protestant ally as an additional security to the Protestant succession.

That your Majesty may long continue to reign in the hearts of a free and happy people;—that the Almighty may pour down his choicest blessings upon the Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, and all the branches of the Royal Family;—that Princes of the House of Hanover, formed upon your Majesty's example, may, in every succeeding age, sway the British sceptre with the same moderation and renown; and that, under their protection, the inhabitants of Great Britain may, to latest posterity, derive from that excellent constitution, by which, through the favour of Providence, we are distinguished amongst the nations of the earth, the same full measure of religious and civil liberty which we at present enjoy, and for which we daily bless the God of our fathers, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 18, 1793.—The General Assembly's dutiful Address to his Majesty on the subject of the present War.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly, think it our duty, in the present situation of public affairs, to express our zeal for the welfare of our country, and our affectionate regard for a Prince, who is the guardian of liberty, and the father of his people.

We have beheld, with the strongest feelings of disapprobation, the insidious designs and violent attempts of the French nation to overturn the constitutions and disturb the peace of most of the other nations in Europe. We are fully sensible, that, in consequence of the declaration of war by the National Convention of France against Great Britain, and by the acts of hostility in which they have been engaged, your Majesty, with the approbation of Parliament, was necessarily led to take vigorous measures for repressing their ambition, and defeating their unjust enterprises.

Though some of the people under our care were deluded by the dangerous principles which were industriously propagated, we can assure your Majesty that the great body of the members of this National Church continues strongly attached to your Majesty's person and government, and ardently desirous of the success of those measures, which, with the blessing of Providence, may transmit our excellent constitution unimpaired to the latest posterity.

Your Majesty has been graciously pleased to express, by the Lord High Commissioner, the sense which you entertain of the boldness and zeal with which the ministers of the Church of Scotland manifested their loyalty upon a late trying occasion; a mark of your royal approbation which we received with profound respect, and which affords us the most entire satisfaction, because we are conscious that it is not misplaced.

Attached by the genius of Presbyterian government to good order, no less than to freedom, we have employed all our influence in counteracting the tendency of the seditious writings which were assiduously circulated, and in warning the people committed to our care against the busy efforts of designing or deluded men. In the true spirit of those principles which our fathers, in former seasons of danger and alarm, strenuously asserted, we shall continue to cherish in the minds of the people loyalty to our gracious Sovereign, veneration for the British constitution, and obedience to the laws. And having nothing so much at heart as the glory of God, the honour of your Majesty, and the support of your government, we trust, that while we approve ourselves the dutiful servants of the Prince of Peace, we shall enjoy the continuance of your royal protection, and the good opinion of all the true friends of their country.

While we congratulate your Majesty upon the check which, under Divine Providence, has already been given to the alarming progress of our enemies, we offer our earnest supplications that the God of battles may continue to bless your fleets and armies with success, and may bring the present war to a speedy and happy termination. That mutual love and confidence may ever subsist between your Majesty and your subjects; and that a race of Kings of your royal line, lovers of religion, liberty, and their country, may always sway the sceptre over these lands, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The uniform experience which we have had, during so long a course of years, of your unalterable attachment to our person and government, and of your zealous and prudent attention to the important objects of your meeting, has not failed to make the deepest impression upon our mind, and justly calls for our highest commendation of your conduct. At the same time, you may be assured that this so faithful discharge of your duty will ensure to you the continuance of our undiminished confidence and affection. In declaring our firm reliance upon that wisdom and discretion which have at all times so eminently marked your proceedings, we cannot press too earnestly upon your minds the necessity of redoubling your common efforts to check that prevalent spirit of licentious innovation, by which the present times are so unhappily distinguished, and which threaten to fill the whole Christian world with violence and confusion. By so doing, you will contribute the most effectually to promote the great and important ends for which you are assembled, the maintenance of true religion and virtue, the prosperity of your Established Church, and the security of those invaluable blessings which you have derived from our happy constitution. We have again appointed our righty trusty and right well-beloved cousin, David Earl of Leven, to represent our royal person in this Assembly, being well satisfied with his upright and faithful conduct in the execution of that important trust, and not doubting but he must continue to be acceptable to you, from the affection to the Church of Scotland, and the zeal for the interests of religion, which he has manifested on so many former occasions. Firmly trusting that the Divine Providence will bless your endeavours, in bringing this meeting to a happy conclusion, we feel the highest satisfaction in continuing to countenance your meetings with our royal authority, and to assure you of our fixed determination to maintain the Church of Scotland in the perfect enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Sess. 3, May 17, 1794.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We received with the utmost respect and gratitude the gracious letter with which your Majesty hath been pleased to honour this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. It affords us the highest satisfaction to be assured that our unalterable attachment to your person and government, and our attention to the important objects of our meeting, have, on former occasions, made so favourable an impression on your royal mind. We regard your Majesty's commendation as a most pleasing recompence for our past services, and a most animating inducement to persevere in that faithful discharge of our duty, which your Majesty has graciously declared will ensure to us the continuance of your undiminished confidence and affection.

Anxious to justify that firm reliance on our wisdom and discretion which your Majesty hath been pleased to express, we feel ourselves powerfully called upon to obey your Majesty's paternal admonition, by redoubling our common efforts to check that prevalent spirit of licentious innovation by which the present times are so unhappily distinguished, and which threaten to fill the whole Christian world with violence and confusion. By so doing, we are sensible that we shall most effectually contribute to promote the important ends for which we are assembled, the maintenance of true religion and virtue, the prosperity of our Established Church, and the security of those invaluable blessings which we have derived from our happy constitution.

The choice which your Majesty has been pleased to make of the Earl of Leven to represent your royal person in this Assembly, we consider as an additional instance of your Majesty's favour. The approved fidelity and loyalty of this noble Lord, that sincere attachment to the Church of Scotland by which he and his ancestors have so long been distinguished, his amiable character in private life, and the happy experience of former Assemblies, render your Majesty's nomination of him most acceptable to us.

We beg leave to offer our humble and grateful acknowledgments to your Majesty for your attention to the propagation of the Protestant religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland; and it shall be our care, by a proper application of the sum with which your Majesty hath entrusted us for that purpose, to promote the pious design for which it is bestowed.

Permit us to assure your Majesty that we shall endeavour to proceed in the business before us with that unanimity, charity, and brotherly love, which become us, as the servants of the Prince of Peace, and without which, we are convinced, that no real dignity or utility can attend our deliberations. Such conduct, we hope, will induce your Majesty to continue to us that countenance with which you have hitherto been pleased to honour our meetings, and we rely with entire confidence on your gracious determination to maintain the Church of Scotland in the perfect enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may direct your Majesty's councils, and prosper the administration of your government;—that He may bless our gracious Queen, his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, and all your Royal Family;—that He may preserve you long to reign in wisdom and felicity over a free, a loyal, and a virtuous people, and bestow on you hereafter that crown of righteousness which fadeth not away, are the prayers of,

Sess. 3, May 17, 1794.—The General Assembly's dutiful Address to his Majesty, on the subject of the present War.

Most gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach your Majesty with sincere sentiments of attachment to your person and government.

In the interesting situation of the affairs of Europe at the present juncture, we are thankful to Divine Providence for those pledges of security to the British nation which we enjoy in your Majesty's paternal care, and in the wisdom and vigour of your councils.

When the rulers of the people of France avowed their hostility to all existing governments, and, by an unprovoked declaration of war against this country, obliged your Majesty to draw the sword in defence of the constitution, we, your faithful subjects, with full approbation of this necessary exertion of the public force, offered up our prayers to Heaven for the protection of our country, and have since, without ceasing, continued to implore success to your Majesty's arms.

Fully convinced that our religion, our liberty, our laws, and all that is dear to us, as men and as Christians, are now at stake, we consider the war with France as the most important contest in which this nation has ever been engaged. Happy in the experience of those high blessings we have long enjoyed, we look up with gratitude to our Sovereign, when he adopts the most effective measures to repel any force which threatens to endanger or overthrow our unequalled constitution.

Under these impressions, we beg leave to congratulate your Majesty on the success which has attended your arms, and those of your allies in Europe, and on the conquests which have been achieved by your Majesty's forces in the East and West Indies; and we look forward with good hope to such further advantages as may enable your Majesty to bring the war to a termination, which shall ensure safety to Britain, and protection from anarchy to other nations.

We cannot without sorrow reflect, that any instances of disaffection should have occurred among our people, to deserve the just reprehension of the laws. But, from what we know of the general spirit of the country, it affords us the greatest satisfaction to be able to assure your Majesty, that the sound principles of loyalty, and of attachment to the constitution in Church and State, are fixed in the hearts of the great body of your Majesty's subjects in Scotland. These principles it shall be our most zealous care to cherish and to promote.

Our prayers and intercessions are offered up to God for our King and country. May He who rules among the nations give success to the means which are employed for resisting the progress of disorder and the spirit of impiety and anarchy, which has gone forth in a neighbouring country. May the Divine blessing attend your fleets and your armies, and lead them to victory in every quarter. May your Majesty be long preserved to reign over this nation, and may your descendants to latest posterity fill the British throne, and ever prove the faithful guardians of religion, of liberty, of law, and of the constitution. These are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. ult., May 26, 1794.—Act and Resolution respecting the Religious Education of Youth.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, taking into their serious consideration the growth of licentiousness, both in principle and practice, and being fully persuaded that this evil, wherever it prevails, is in a great measure to be ascribed to the neglect of the religious education of youth ; and the Assembly being well informed that the ancient and laudable practice of instructing youth in the principles of religion, by means of the Holy Scriptures, and the Catechisms received and acknowledged by this Church, has been much neglected in many parochial and other English and Latin schools, particularly in the cities and towns of this kingdom ; wherefore, the General Assembly being resolved, as far as in them lies, to provide a remedy for this evil, did, and hereby do, strictly require and enjoin that all parochial schoolmasters, and other teachers of schools within this Church, shall cause the Holy Bible to be read, as a regular exercise in their several schools, by the children under their care. The General Assembly do moreover require and enjoin, that the Shorter Catechism agreed upon by the Assembly of Divines at Westminster, and approved of by this Church, shall be taught in all parochial and other schools; and that the children be required to commit this Catechism to memory, and by frequent repetition to fix it deep in their minds. And in order that the above regulations may be carried into effect, the General Assembly, in conformity to many preceding Acts of Assembly, enjoin all the ministers of this Church to visit and examine, from time to time, the schools within their respective parishes, and take care that the teachers do their duty in those respects. And for a farther security in matters of such important concern, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, ordain all Presbyteries to make inquiry concerning the obedience given by their several members to this Act; and farther, the General Assembly ordain all the Presbyteries of this Church to appoint presbyterial visitations of the schools within their respective bounds, at least once in every year, and exercise that authority which, by the law of the land, as well as of the Church, is vested in them for obtaining the important end in view. The General Assembly moreover ordains that this Act shall be printed separately; and a copy thereof transmitted to every minister and every parochial schoolmaster within the bounds of this Church. And finally, that every Presbytery shall report their diligence, in compliance with the terms thereof, upon the back of their commission to their representatives in the ensuing General Assembly.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1795.—Address to his Majesty on the Nuptials of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales with her most Serene Highness Caroline Princess of Brunswick.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, beg leave humbly to approach the throne, with our warmest congratulations on the marriage of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales with an amiable Princess of the illustrious House of Brunswick,—an House from which has sprung a race of kings, under whose auspicious government our national liberty and prosperity have been secured and increased.

This important event must, at any time, have been interesting to us, as it flatters us with the pleasing hope of having your Majesty's royal line extended down to the latest posterity, and as it contributes to your domestic happiness; but especially, in the present period, have we seen, with the most unfeigned joy, your Majesty's paternal wishes so happily fulfilled by this auspicious union, which, having diffused such universal satisfaction through the whole empire, gives your Majesty at once the amplest proof, that you possess unimpaired the warmest affection of your subjects, and the strongest security that your Royal Family shall ever retain it.

But while we contemplate with pleasure the increased stability of your Majesty's throne, and the internal happiness of your people, we cannot turn our eyes on the present distracted state of Europe without the most anxious solicitude; nor behold the vigorous exertions of this nation under your Majesty's direction, without praying fervently, as servants of the God of peace, that he may be pleased to bless, with full and speedy success, the energy of your Majesty's councils and arms, for the restoration of public tranquillity, entertaining full confidence in your Majesty's wisdom, that no favourable opportunity shall be lost in procuring the blessing of a safe, honourable, and lasting peace.

That Almighty God may ever have your Majesty under his peculiar care; that you may reign long and happily over a free and loyal people; that he may bless our gracious Queen, and all the Royal Family; that he may bless their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, with all domestic felicity, and preserve them in the paths of religion and virtue, and that a race of kings descended from them may sway the sceptre of these lands to the latest ages, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1795.—Address to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales on the event of his Marriage.

May it please your Royal Highness,
We, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly, beg leave, respectfully, to approach your Royal Highness with our warmest congratulations on your marriage with an amiable Princess of the illustrious House of Brunswick.

Zealously attached to our free and happy constitution in Church and State, we most cordially rejoice in an event which, while it brings to your Highness so great an accession of domestic happiness, affords to the British empire an additional security for the continuance of the many and important blessings it has so long enjoyed, under the mild and auspicious government of the august House of Hanover.

That your Royal Highness and your amiable Consort may be adorned with all those virtues which give true dignity and lustre to your exalted station; that Divine Providence may bestow upon you a large portion of prosperity and glory, and bless you with a race of princes to sway the sceptre of these realms over a free, loyal, and happy people, to latest posterity; and that, after a long enjoyment of earthly blessings, you may be received into the mansions of eternal felicity, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, your Royal Highness's most devoted servants, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

JAMES MEEK, Moderator.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1796.—Address on his Majesty's late Preservation.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal, dutiful, and affectionate subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly of this National Church, beg leave to take this earliest opportunity which our annual meeting affords us, of presenting our most sincere and heartfelt congratulations upon your Majesty's late Providential deliverance from the attack made by wicked and daring assassins,—an attack the more peculiarly disgraceful to the times in which we live, in having been made upon your sacred person when in the discharge of one of the most important duties entrusted to your Majesty by the constitution. Impressed, as we have ever been, with the strongest and most unalterable sentiments of respect and attachment to your Majesty's person and government, we have seen, with the deepest concern and astonishment, the views of the seditious and disaffected manifestly displayed in an act of such daring atrocity.

We have, however, observed with the highest satisfaction, that the several branches of the legislature, the constitutional guardians of the public interest, have concurred in the adoption of such laws as, we trust, will, under the influence of Divine Providence, have the effect of ensuring the safety of your Majesty's person, repressing the machinations of seditious and disaffected men, and of securing the true liberty, happiness, and tranquillity of these kingdoms.

That the manifold advantages which we and our forefathers have long enjoyed under that form of government administered by your Majesty and the other Princes of your Illustrious House, may be transmitted entire to the latest posterity, and that your Majesty may long continue to reign over a free, loyal, and affectionate people, are the most earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

V.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1796.—Address to his Majesty on the Birth of a Princess, the Daughter of the Prince and Princess of Wales.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met together in the General Assembly, take this first opportunity of congratulating your Majesty on the late increase of the Royal Family, by the birth of a Princess, the daughter of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales.

As our sentiments of duty and affection to your Majesty lead us to take part in whatever may add to your domestic felicity, we cannot fail to rejoice in an event which gives farther security to the permanent continuance of the crown of these realms in your Majesty's illustrious family, under whose mild and equitable government our happy constitution has been so much strengthened and confirmed, and our national prosperity so greatly increased.

That Almighty God may bless and long preserve your Majesty to reign over a happy and affectionate people;—that he may bless your Royal Consort the Queen, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, Princess Caroline, and all the Royal Family, and that, after reigning long with increasing felicity, you may at last be rewarded with that crown of glory that fadeth not away, through the merits of our Lord Jesus Christ, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 6, May 24, 1797.—Address to his Majesty on the Marriage of her Royal Highness the Princess-Royal with his Serene Highness the Hereditary Prince of Wirtemberg.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most faithful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach your throne with our most respectful congratulations on the marriage of her Royal Highness the Princess-Royal of Great Britain, your Majesty's eldest daughter, with his Serene Highness the Hereditary Prince of Wirtemberg Stutgard.

While we sincerely rejoice in every event that may increase your Majesty's domestic comfort, and enlarge the sphere of your paternal affections, we regard every extension of your Royal Family as an additional security to our religion and liberties.

Note.—The Assembly of 1796 had under their consideration certain Overtures relative to the diffusion of the Gospel. The following notice of the subject appears in the Abridgment of the Assembly's Proceedings for that year:—"The Assembly proceeded to consider the Overtures from the Synods of Fife and Moray, relative to the diffusion of the Gospel. After reasoning, a motion was made and seconded, 'That the General Assembly are of opinion, that the object proposed in the Overtures is of the highest importance; but in respect the facts and circumstances, which are necessary for the General Assembly to come to any resolution upon this subject at present, are not sufficiently explained and instructed; therefore, the Assembly appoint a committee to take the subject of them into consideration, and report the result of their inquiries to the next General Assembly.' And, after farther reasoning, another motion was made and seconded, 'That the General Assembly, having considered the Overtures, and judging it highly inexpedient, at this time, to appoint a collection over Scotland, by the authority of the General Assembly; and not considering the circumstances of the times as favourable for the General Assembly's adopting any particular measure, in relation to the object of the Overtures, dismiss the same. At the same time, recommend to all the members of the Church of Scotland, in their different stations, to take every competent method of promoting, within the sphere of their influence, the knowledge of the Gospel, a just sense of the inestimable benefits which it conveys to all who embrace it, and the practice of those virtues, by which Christians make their light to shine before others. And while they offer their fervent prayers to Almighty God for the fulfilment of his promise, in giving his Son the Heathen for an inheritance, they resolve that they will embrace, with zeal and with thankfulness, any favourable opportunity of contributing, by their exertions, to the propagation of the Gospel of Christ, which Divine Providence may hereafter open.' The Assembly agreed to the following state of a vote,—Appoint or Dismiss,—and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried Dismiss. Therefore, the Assembly dismissed the Overtures in terms of, and with the recommendation contained in, the second motion accordingly."—Ed. 1843.

In the present situation of public affairs, so deeply interesting to the British empire, we feel it to be our duty to renew the warmest expressions of our steady and zealous attachment to your Majesty's sacred person, and to that constitution which was established by the wisdom and virtue of our forefathers, has been improved under your royal ancestors, and is so happily administered by your Majesty, for the security of those laws which give equal protection to all your subjects, and for the advancement of national prosperity. We have the satisfaction of assuring your Majesty, that the great body of the people under our care concur with us in the same sentiments of loyalty, and in the same reverence for the laws and institutions of our country; and that there is no abatement of that spirit which has produced so many voluntary and generous exertions for the preservation of internal order, for the defence of those realms against the secret machinations and open violence of foreign enemies, and for the support of national honour. They continue to feel and to act as becomes Britons, ready to sacrifice every private consideration in behalf of their beloved Sovereign, of the independence of their country, and of their religion and liberties.

While our people patiently and cheerfully endure the inevitable toils and burdens of a war, they join with us in cherishing the pleasing hope of peace, when peace can be obtained on terms fair and honourable, such as will give full security for the many blessings by which your Majesty's subjects are distinguished. For the attainment of which most desirable object, we rely, under God, with the most entire confidence on the wisdom and vigour of your Majesty's councils.

That Almighty God, whose Providence rules the nations, and determines the issues of war, may, by the means which he hath chosen, and at his appointed time, turn the hearts of our enemies; that he may diffuse a spirit of union and loyalty among all your Majesty's subjects; that he may prosper the measures of government, and may continue to bless the British empire under the light of his countenance; and that your Majesty may long reign over a free, happy, and affectionate people, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

The committee on the overture from the Synod of Aberdeen, respecting the attendance of Students on the Divinity Halls, having maturely deliberated on the said overture, report to the venerable Assembly, that, in their opinion, it ought to be expressed in the following terms, viz. :—“ It is overtured, that Students in Divinity who purpose to prosecute their studies for six sessions, should be required to give as much partial attendance, during the currency of those sessions, in the Divinity Halls which they respectively attend, as shall, in the whole, amount to six months.”

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The experience of many years authorises us to repose the fullest confidence in the wisdom of your counsels and measures, and the temper of your minds, and calls upon us to repeat those assurances of our paternal affection towards you so justly due to your venerable body.

We are firmly persuaded, that our entire kingdom will derive the greatest advantages from the deliberations of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. At the same time, we trust that your proceedings will continue to be distinguished by that gravity and calmness, by that loyal attachment to our person, by that love for the people committed to your charge, and that spirit of Christian charity, one towards another, which cannot fail to confer dignity on yourselves, and to give authority to your decisions.

We recommend it to you, most earnestly, to persevere in your attention to the advancement of piety, and the practice of all Christian duties, both moral and positive; to the preservation of sound doctrine, and the checking those loose notions, both in faith and morality, which are the disgrace of these times, and which, unless timely counteracted, must operate to the destroying of all good principles in the hearts of men, to the dissolving all the bands of society, and to the provoking of the displeasure of Almighty God.

We have again constituted and appointed our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, David Earl of Leven and Melville, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our royal person in this Assembly. We know his ardent zeal for the great cause of religion, and the steady regard which has ever filled his mind for the peace and prosperity of the Church of Scotland, and, therefore, we do, with the greater satisfaction, repose in his faithful hands the execution of this important trust.

We avail ourselves of this fresh opportunity of assuring you of our full determination to maintain and preserve the Church of Scotland in the complete enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges; and we do solemnly adjure you to reflect upon and fulfil, conjointly and individually, all those various duties which the well-being of the establishment, the interests of civil society, and religion itself, so forcibly, at this awful moment, demand. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 11th day of May 1798, in the thirty-eighth year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

PORTLAND.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1798.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most gracious letter to this meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was received with the highest respect.

The full confidence which your Majesty is pleased to repose in the wisdom of our proceedings, and the renewed assurances of your paternal affection, are most endearing testimonies of your royal favour, and fill our minds with the warmest gratitude to our beloved Sovereign.

The persuasion your Majesty has condescended to express of the great advantages which will result to your entire kingdom from the deliberations of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, is a most powerful incitement to us, in all our proceedings, to conduct ourselves with that gravity and calmness, and that loyal attachment to your sacred person; and to cultivate that love for the people committed to our charge, and that spirit of Christian charity, one towards another, which will best secure the dignity of our order, and give authority to our decisions.

Feeling, as we do, the utmost abhorrence of those loose notions, both in faith and morality, which are the disgrace of these times; and animated by an ardent zeal to counteract their pernicious influence, we listen, with profound reverence, to your royal recommendation; and shall steadily persevere in our exertions for the preservation of sound doctrine, and for the advancement of genuine piety, and the practice of all Christian duties, both moral and positive; in the humble hope that we may thus prove the means of averting the displeasure of Almighty God, and of promoting the happiness of your Majesty's subjects, by contributing to the maintenance of pure religion, of good government, and of social order.

Your Majesty's knowledge of the ardent zeal of the Earl of Leven and Melville in the great cause of religion, and of his steady regard for the peace and prosperity of the Church of Scotland, and the long and pleasing experience we have had of his fidelity in the discharge of the duties of that high and important trust with which he is now invested, render the re-appointment of him to represent your royal person peculiarly acceptable to this Assembly.

Your royal donation for propagating Christian Knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, we receive as a continued proof of your Majesty's paternal concern for the spiritual as well as temporal interests of your subjects; and we shall study, by a wise and faithful application of it, to promote the pious and benevolent purpose for which it is granted.

We rely, with perfect confidence, on the fresh assurance of your Majesty's determination to maintain and preserve the Church of Scotland in the complete enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges. Deeply affected with the impressive charge of our Sovereign, who, with paternal affection, solemnly adjures us to reflect upon our sacred obligations, we pledge ourselves to your Majesty, that, through the help of God, we will, both conjointly and individually, fulfil all those various duties which the well-being of the establishment, and the interests of civil society and of religion do, at this awful moment, so forcibly demand.

That the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ may long preserve your sacred person, direct your councils, and crown your undertakings with abundant success; that He may bless our most gracious Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; that there may never be wanting one of your royal house to sit on the throne of these kingdoms to latest ages; and that, after a long, useful, and happy reign, you may exchange an earthly for a heavenly crown, are, and shall be, the sincere prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 5, May 22, 1798.—Address to his Majesty on the present Situation of Public Affairs.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, beg leave to embrace this opportunity of approaching your throne, in order to express the sentiments which we feel on occasion of the arduous contest in which this nation is engaged with a neighbouring hostile power.

During former times of tranquillity and peace, the ministers of this Church had always studied to confirm the people under their charge in principles of loyalty to your Majesty's person and government, and to inspire them with veneration for that happy constitution, civil and sacred, with which we have long been blessed. Now, when the day of trial is come, it is with the utmost satisfaction we behold the happy effects of those sentiments which we have long endeavoured to instil. We behold the great body of the people, in this country, united in zealous attachment to your Majesty's government, and in resolute endeavours to defend their ancient rights against every invader. We have the happiness of expressing to your Majesty our firm persuasion, that the spirit of the country is now fully roused among all ranks of men. They are sensible that all that is sacred to them as Christians, and dear to them as men, is at stake; and that, in resisting their impious and outrageous foes, they are not only defending a Sovereign whom they love and revere, and supporting a constitution under which they have long been happy, but defending, at the same time, their own families, their persons, and property. We can assure your Majesty that, on our part, nothing shall be wanting to cherish these patriotic dispositions, to stimulate the general ardour in the public cause, and to promote every measure which the wisdom of your councils shall deem necessary for the security of the realm.

We beg leave to congratulate your Majesty on the brilliant successes with which it has pleased the Almighty already to bless your arms in various quarters. Trusting to that gracious aid of Heaven, which has so often signally supported the British throne, and defeated the attempts of unjust and violent enemies, we entertain the firmest hopes that the insolent menaces of our present foes shall be completely baffled, and that an honourable and lasting peace shall terminate the contest in which your Majesty and the nation are now engaged.

That the God of battles may continue to bless your Majesty's fleets and armies; that He may speedily give a check to the ambition and anarchy of those tyrannical rulers who have disturbed the peace of so many surrounding nations; that He may long preserve your Majesty's precious and important life, and still increase the lustre and prosperity of your reign over a loyal and grateful people, shall ever be the fervent prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 6, May 23, 1798.—Act and Regulations respecting the Erection of Chapels of Ease.

The General Assembly, judging it expedient that no Chapel of Ease should be erected without the knowledge and approbation of the General Assembly, unanimously did, and hereby do, ordain, that in future, if any petition shall be laid before any Presbytery of this Church for the erection of a Chapel of Ease, the said Presbytery shall strictly observe the following regulations:—

“That in future, when a petition shall be laid before any Presbytery of this Church for the erection of a Chapel of Ease, it shall lie upon the table till their next ordinary meeting; and at that meeting, unless it shall appear to the Presbytery, from the circumstances in which the petition is offered, that the erection of the said Chapel of Ease is unnecessary and inexpedient, they shall cite the minister and kirk-session of the parish within which the chapel is intended; and shall summon, by edictal citation, the heritors of the parish; and if there is a burgh in the parish, the magistrates of that burgh, to attend the next meeting of Presbytery, and to appear for their interest in the subject of the petition, if they shall see cause: That such Presbytery, after having heard the parties, shall sufficiently ascertain the circumstances on which the petition is founded,—the facts stated as reasons for the necessity or expediency of the chapel intended,—the general plan of the chapel itself,— the estimate of the expense to be incurred in completing it,—the scheme laid down for discharging the debts which it may be necessary to contract,—the plan on which it is proposed to dispose of the collections to be made at the chapel,—the names and designations of the persons in whom the property is to be vested,—the mode proposed for the election of the minister,—the stipend to be provided to him,—and the security offered for the regular payment of the stipend. That such Presbytery shall thereafter report the whole above mentioned circumstances of the case, from their minutes, to the next meeting of the General Assembly, and shall not pronounce any final judgment on the petition, till they shall have received the special directions of the Assembly thereon;—and that it shall be competent for the petitioners, and for all parties having interest, to be heard on the subject at the bar of the Assembly.”

*Sess. 8, May 25, 1798.—Overture respecting the course of University Education to be observed by Students, previous to their entering the Divinity Hall.

Whereas it has been represented, that students intended for the holy ministry do sometimes hurry over their course of philosophy in two sessions of the university, it is overtured, that it be recommended to students, previous to their entering a Divinity Hall, to study literature and philosophy at a university during a course of five complete sessions, in the following order, viz. :—

Session 1st, Humanity or Latin, with the elements of Greek, in the first Humanity and Greek classes.

Session 2d, Latin and Greek, in the higher Humanity and Greek classes, with the elements of Mathematics.

Session 3d, Logic, with Greek and Mathematics in the higher classes.

Session 4th, } Natural and Moral Philosophy, but not both in the same session ;

Session 5th, } together with Latin again, or Greek, or Mathematics, in one or more of the higher classes.

But that it shall be expressly enacted, that no Professor of Divinity shall admit any student into the Divinity Hall, until he produce certificates of his having studied at a university during three complete sessions, in the following classes, viz. :—Logic, together with Greek in the higher Greek class, and Natural and Moral Philosophy ; it being, in this case, understood that such students are well grounded in Latin and the elements of Greek, previous to their entering the University.

Sess. 7, May 24, 1798.—Regulations adopted by the General Assembly, 1798, for a new Gaelic Chapel in the City of Glasgow.

I. That the property of the house shall, for behoof of the congregation, be vested in Donald Munro, merchant, John Macintosh, manufacturer, and the other petitioners, trustees and managers of said chapel, and their successors in office.

II. That the house shall be used only as a Chapel of Ease, and that it shall not be competent to elect any minister or preacher to officiate therein but a licentiate of the Church of Scotland, or a person who is an ordained minister according to the rules of this Church; and who, before his ordination or admission, shall produce a certificate of his having taken the oaths to government, according to law; and that the minister of the Chapel of Ease shall be under the jurisdiction of the Presbytery within whose bounds the chapel lies, subject to censure or deposition by the Presbytery, and not removeable but according to the rules of the Church relating to ministers on the Establishment; and that the congregation which meets in said chapel shall remain subject to the jurisdiction of the Church of Scotland, and her different judicatories.

III. That the funds arising from the seat-rents shall be under the management of the said Donald Munro, John Macintosh, and the other trustees and managers of the said chapel, and their successors in office, and shall be applied, in the first place, to the payment of the minister's stipend, precentor, and church-officer; and that, if there is any overplus, it shall be converted into a sinking fund, out of which, as soon as the present debt of the chapel shall be paid, the stipend of the minister may, from time to time, be augmented.

IV. That the conduct of the managers, in the administration of the funds of the chapel, shall be under the inspection and control of the Presbytery of Glasgow; and, if the Presbytery shall see cause to summon them, the managers shall attend the Presbytery, upon a citation of ten free days.

V. That the present managers shall supply any vacancy that may happen in their number during the space of five years; that at the end of every five years there shall be a new election of managers, by the same persons, and in the same manner, as shall hereafter be directed in the case of the election of a minister.

VI. That the managers shall be liable and give security for the minister's stipend, which shall be payable half-yearly or quarterly, as may be most convenient for the managers.

VII. That the minister's stipend shall not be under seventy pounds sterling yearly.

VIII. That collections be made regularly at the chapel-doors, or in the chapel, and that the sum arising therefrom shall be, bona fide, paid into the hands of the treasurer of the General Sessions of Glasgow, and applied by them for the support of the poor of the said city.

IX. That the minister first chosen is to be elected by a majority of the managers, and all future elections shall be made only by those who possess seats in the chapel; and to prevent all confusion and faction, those of each pew shall name one of their number, on the day preceding the election, who shall vote for the minister; and the name of the person so nominated, with the number who occupy the pew, shall be immediately given in to the managers; provided always, that where a whole seat is set to one sitter, for himself, or his family, or others, he alone shall have the vote for such pew; that previous to any election the managers shall cause intimation to be made to the congregation in the chapel of the time fixed for the election, at least ten days previous to the time so fixed, that, in the meantime, the vote for each pew, where there are more sitters than one, shall be vested in one person. That the preses of the managers for the time being shall preside at such election, and the candidate having the majority of votes shall be preferred, and certified by the said preses; in consequence of which, the reverend Presbytery shall be requested to proceed to his trials and ordination or admission, according to the rules of the Church. That in any future vacancy, if no day of election shall be fixed by the managers within the space of six months, then it shall be in the power of the Presbytery to fix a day of election, by giving due previous intimation to the congregation of the said chapel.

X. That previous to the election a list of candidates, not exceeding five in number, shall be laid before the Presbytery of Glasgow.

XI. That when a vacancy happens in the Chapel of Ease, it shall be reported to the Presbytery by the minister of the parish. That during the vacancy the managers shall apply to the Presbytery of Glasgow, and shall have power, with consent of the Presbytery, to employ any minister or preacher of the Established Church to supply the chapel.

XII. That no candidate who is a probationer shall preach in said chapel before having laid his licence and other certificates before the Presbytery of Glasgow, and obtained their approbation; and no ordained minister, before he has produced to the Presbytery a certificate of his ordination from the Presbytery to which he belongs.

XIII. That the election of a new minister, when reported to the Presbytery, shall be accompanied with a letter of acceptance from the person elected, with a renewal of the security for payment of the stipend.

XIV. That after the candidate preferred is admitted and ordained a minister, it shall be lawful for him to perform all ministerial services for the members of his own congregation; particularly, to perform every part of public worship in his own pulpit, to which he shall have an exclusive right under the authority of the reverend Presbytery; to marry after legal proclamation of banns, and to baptize after legal registration.

XV. That upon a certificate of the moral character of the persons applying to be admitted to the Sacraments from members of the parochial sessions to which they belong, the minister may dispense the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper to the people who shall attend his ministry in the chapel, according to the Word of God, and the Standards and practice of this National Church.

XVI. That as often as the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper shall be dispensed in said chapel, a sum not exceeding one hundred pounds Scots shall be allowed, from the collections made on these occasions, for communion-elements, &c.

XVII. That the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper shall be administered in the chapel on the same day in which that ordinance is dispensed in the parish churches of Glasgow; and that, during a vacancy, the minister to preside on that occasion shall be appointed with the consent of the minister of the parish in whose bounds the chapel lies.

XVIII. That as this chapel is intended for the accommodation of those who speak Gaelic only, or chiefly, seats shall be set to persons of this description only. That for the same reason, the service shall be performed in Gaelic in the forenoon of every Lord's Day; and that on occasion of dispensing the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the sermons shall all be in Gaelic.

II.

Sess. 1, May 23, 1799.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. We have thought fit again to constitute and appoint our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, David Earl of Leven and Melville, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our royal person in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

The manner in which he has heretofore executed this high office, his attachment to ourself, and his affection for the Church, fill us with assurance that he will adequately answer every purpose of the trust with which he is invested.

We do most solemnly repeat our determination to maintain and preserve the Church of Scotland in the complete enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges; and we are firmly persuaded that the conduct of the Church, and the proceedings of the General Assembly, will continue such as to merit our approbation, and to increase more and more that paternal love with which we unceasingly regard you.

At a time when the very principles of religion and morality are denied by some, and confounded by others; in these perilous days, when wicked men have derided every thing which is grave, just, and holy, we esteem it a duty to express our satisfaction at the unabating zeal and exemplary piety which distinguish the Church of Scotland; and also to exhort you to undeviating perseverance in the same.

We charge you to be instant at all seasons in seeking after truth, in defending, teaching, and spreading it; remembering that the eyes of the whole Church and nation are upon you, and that your brethren look to the decisions of the General Assembly as rules to guide them in all matters of doctrine and discipline.

More particularly, we call upon you to aid, by precept and example, the cause of religion and virtue in the world, to dispel the dangerous delusions of an arrogant and vain philosophy, and of science, falsely so called, and to direct the minds of the people

Note.—There is bound up with the original edition of the Acts of 1798 a "Warning and Admonition to the People of Scotland by the Commission of the General Assembly, March 1, 1798," issued on the occasion of the French Revolution. It will appear in the Appendix.—Ed. 1843.

over whom you individually exercise the pastoral care, to the revealed will of Almighty God.

Finally, we desire your prayers to the Supreme Disposer of all events, that he will be pleased to prosper all our designs for the good of the Church of Scotland, and the advancement of the Christian religion, to avert from these kingdoms those errors which have brought ruin and desolation upon those who have embraced them. To his Almighty protection we commend you; and so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 17th day of May 1799, in the thirty-ninth year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

PORTLAND.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 25, 1799.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

The letter which it hath pleased your Majesty to address to this meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was received with the most profound respect and gratitude.

We account ourselves highly honoured by the representation of the royal person in our General Assemblies, as the gracious symbol of the connection between the Church and the State. We have beheld with much satisfaction, in many preceding years, this high office committed to a nobleman, whose warm attachment to your Majesty, whose hereditary affection for the Church of Scotland, whose steady regard to religion, and whose many amiable virtues, render him eminently qualified to answer every purpose of the trust with which he is invested: And we receive your Majesty's renewed appointment of the Earl of Leven and Melville as a pledge of the paternal love with which you have unceasingly regarded us.

We rely, with entire confidence, upon the solemn assurance of your Majesty's determination to maintain and preserve the Church of Scotland in the complete enjoyment of all its just rights and privileges; and we shall study, upon all occasions, to conduct ourselves in such a manner as may entitle us to hope for the continuance of your royal approbation.

Your Majesty's donation of L.1000, for the propagation of Christian knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, was received with the sincerest gratitude, as a renewed instance of your persevering attention to the religious interests of the people committed to our care; and it shall be our endeavour to apply it with fidelity to the pious purpose for which it is bestowed.

Placed in the perilous days so well described in your Majesty's most gracious letter, when the very principles of religion and morality are denied by some, and confounded by others; and when wicked men have derided every thing which is grave, and just, and holy, we have unspeakable consolation in thinking that we live under the reign of a Prince, whose exemplary piety adorns the throne; who condescends to mention, with approbation, the zeal of the Church of Scotland, who calls us by his authority to an undeviating perseverance in the discharge of our duty, and assures us of all the encouragement and support which the circumstances of the times require.

We listen, with the most profound respect, to the solemn charge which we receive from your Majesty. And it is our determined resolution, that, in compliance with that charge, and in fulfilment of the duties of our sacred office, we will, through the strength of the Lord Jesus, be instant at all seasons in seeking after truth, in defending, teaching, and spreading it; that we will labour, by precept and by example, to aid the cause of religion and virtue in the world; that we will endeavour to dispel the dangerous delusions of an arrogant and vain philosophy, and of science, falsely so called; and, in all our ministrations, will direct the minds of the people over whom we exercise the pastoral care to the revealed will of Almighty God, as the only infallible standard of truth, and perfect rule of manners. We feel the sacred obligations of which your Majesty is graciously pleased to remind us, that arise from our being, in the words of our great Master, "a city set upon an hill;" and we look up to Him for those influences of his Spirit, which may enable us so to frame our decisions, that they may secure the respect of our brethren, and may guide them in all matters of doctrine and discipline.

Conscious that our exertions, however unremitting and well directed, are of none avail without the blessing of Heaven, we cease not to offer our fervent prayers to the Supreme Disposer of all events, beseeching him to avert from these kingdoms those errors which have brought ruin and desolation upon all who have embraced them. We bless the Lord our God, who, because he loved us, hath raised up a succession of princes in the illustrious House of Hanover, to be the nursing-fathers of his Church. We pray that it may please Him to prosper all your Majesty's designs for the good of the Church of Scotland, and the advancement of the Christian religion. And, relying upon His Almighty protection, we trust, that, under the wise and vigorous administration of your Majesty's government, our ecclesiastical establishment, which has been cherished with warm affection by the people of Scotland, and which has been the means of diffusing amongst all ranks the knowledge and the principles of pure and undefiled religion, shall be preserved from being shaken by external violence, or undermined by the machinations of secret foes.

That the best blessings of Heaven may descend upon your Majesty, upon our gracious Queen Charlotte, upon the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; that your Majesty may long continue to reign in the hearts of a pious, loyal, free, and happy people; and that, after swaying the British sceptre for many years with felicity and renown, you may be received into those regions where an unfading crown awaits the faithful, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

WILLIAM MOODIE, Moderator.

Sess. 3, May 25, 1799.—Address to his Majesty on the present Situation of Public Affairs.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne with sentiments of the most affectionate attachment to your Majesty's person and government.

Beholding with reverence the conduct of Providence, in the permission of those calamitous events which, for years past, have afflicted and desolated so many of the neighbouring nations, we feel the most lively gratitude to Almighty God, when we contemplate the prosperous condition of Great Britain. Preserved by the wisdom of your Majesty's councils from the traitorous attempts made to disturb its internal tranquillity, this happy country flourishes even in the midst of war, and communicating to its allies a portion of its own vigour, it has been justly regarded as the great bulwark raised by Divine Providence, for resisting the progress of those destructive principles which threatened the total subversion of religion and good government in every quarter of the world.

We are sincerely grieved to learn that there are still among us men insensible to the inestimable blessings we enjoy; but we trust that their numbers are daily decreasing; and your Majesty may be assured that the Church of Scotland, faithful to her duty, will, in her proper sphere, co-operate zealously with the civil power in counteracting their insidious designs. We have reason to think that the blessings of your Majesty's paternal government, aided by the salutary restraints imposed on the licentious, have already produced a favourable impression on the minds of many of our fellow-subjects, who were formerly discontented. And we are persuaded that the great body of the people under our charge, notwithstanding the artful endeavours employed to agitate and divide them, continue firmly attached to the religious and civil constitution of their country, and deeply interested in whatever may have any tendency to strengthen its security, and to transmit it unimpaired to the latest posterity.

Amidst the general satisfaction with which we contemplate the state of the country, we embrace, with peculiar pleasure, this first opportunity which our meeting affords us of congratulating your Majesty on the splendid naval victories gained in the course of last year by your Majesty's arms at the mouth of the Nile, and on the coast of Ireland, under the conduct of Lord Nelson and Sir John Borlase Warren—victories honourable in the highest degree to the good and gallant men by whom they were achieved, highly conducive to the national security, and most important in their consequences to the general issue of the war. And while our devout acknowledgments rise to the Lord of Hosts, from whom alone cometh wisdom and strength, on account of the brilliant events, which, under your Majesty's more immediate administration, have contributed so much to the advantage of the common cause; we have beheld also, with the most grateful satisfaction, the rapid tide of victory which has followed of late the arms of your Majesty's allies on the Continent. And we cherish the hope, that, by a continuation of success, your Majesty will be soon enabled, in concert with your allies, to bring this arduous contest to a termination, glorious to our country, and salutary to the general interests of Europe.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty's person, direct your councils, and prosper your administration; that He may bless our Gracious Queen, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and that, after reigning long with wisdom and felicity, over a free, happy, and grateful people, you may receive that crown of righteousness which fadeth not away, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

WILLIAM MOODIE, Moderator.

Sess. 5, May 28, 1799.—Declaratory Act of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, respecting Unqualified Ministers and Preachers.

The General Assembly, having received overtures from many Synods, which propose that some effectual regulations shall be made in order to prevent persons not duly qualified from being employed to preach the Word, and to dispense the other ordinances of the Gospel in the congregations under the care of the Church; considering that the rules laid down by the Apostles of our Lord require from all who are invested with the solemn trust of committing the ministry of the Word to others, prudence and strictness in the trial and judgment of those whom, in the exercise of that trust, they pronounce faithful and apt to teach; considering that the laws of this Church, in conformity to the rules of Scripture, have prescribed a certain previous course of education, as necessary for all the probationers thereof, and have directed the Presbyteries of this Church to employ inquiries and trials of various kinds, in order that they may be fully satisfied concerning the literature, sound doctrine, and steady attachment to our constitution in Church and State, of those who apply to them for a licence to preach the Gospel; and considering further, that the judicial proceedings of the General Assembly, in particular cases, have interpreted and enforced those laws; do hereby enact and declare, that it is agreeable to the constitution, the laws, and the decisions of this Church, that no probationer, who has obtained a licence without the bounds of this Church, or who has not obtained a licence from some Presbytery of this Church; and no ordained person, who did not obtain his licence from a Presbytery of this Church, or who, either by going without the bounds of the Church to obtain ordination, although he was not called to a particular congregation in another country, or by any other part of his conduct, has forfeited the licence which he had obtained, shall be held qualified to accept of a presentation or a call to any parish in this Church, or to any Chapel of Ease connected therewith. And the General Assembly do hereby enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church, if a presentation or a call to any such probationer or ordained person, as is described in this Act, shall at any time be given in to them, instantly to pronounce a sentence refusing to sustain such presentation or call, and declaring it null and void.

And further, the General Assembly, considering that it is of the greatest importance to the interests of true religion, to the sound instruction of the people, to the quiet of their minds, and the peace of the Church and State, that unqualified persons, who intrude themselves into the ministry of the Word, shall not receive any countenance from the ministers of this Church; more especially in the present times, when men, who avow their hostility to our ecclesiastical establishment, and their contempt of all the rules which the wisdom of our ancestors framed upon the model of Scripture, for the orderly dispensation of the word and sacraments, are traversing all the districts within the bounds of this Church, and attempting to alienate the minds of the people from their established teachers; considering also, that it is essential to the unity and good order of the Church, and implied in the fundamental principles of Presbyterian government, that no minister shall presume to set up his individual judgment in opposition to the judgment of those to whom, at his ordination, he promised subjection in the Lord; and that every minister shall consider himself as answerable to his Presbytery for the manner in which all the parts of Divine service are performed during his incumbency, within the stated place of worship provided by law for that congregation which is committed to his care; do hereby discharge and prohibit, under pain of such censures as the judicatories of this Church may see cause to inflict, all the ministers of this Church, and the ministers of all Chapels of Ease connected therewith, from employing to preach upon any occasion, or to dispense any of the other ordinances of the Gospel, within any congregation under the jurisdiction of this Church, persons who are not qualified, according to the laws of this Church, to accept of a presentation, and from holding ministerial communion in any other manner with such persons. And the General Assembly do hereby enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church to attend to any transgression of this prohibition which may occur within their bounds, and to summon the minister who is reported as being guilty of such transgression to answer for his conduct.

And the Assembly ordain their clerk to transmit a copy of this Act, separately printed, to each of the moderators of the Presbyteries of this Church, with an injunction to them to cause the same to be engrossed in the records of their respective Presbyteries.

Sess. ult., June 3, 1799.—Pastoral Admonition, addressed by the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, met at Edinburgh, May 23, 1799, to all the People under their Charge.

Dearly Beloved Brethren,

You well know that it has been prophesied in Scripture, that in the last days perilous times were to come, when many false teachers should arise, scoffers walking after their own lusts, and when men should turn away their ears from the truth. The prophecy has been brought to our recollection by the subjects which, in the course of the business of this Assembly, have come under our review. We have contemplated, with devout reverence, events in the conduct of the Divine government, which appear to us to be a fulfilment of this prophecy; and, from a sense of the dangers to which you are exposed by those events, we feel ourselves bound in duty, and engaged by affection, to issue this fatherly admonition, which your ministers, in the name and by authority of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, will read to you from their pulpits.

It is too well known, that in a neighbouring country an evil and pernicious spirit has arisen, which, like a pestilential vapour, has spread its malignant influence over several surrounding States. The unhappy nation of the French, not content with having first slaughtered their Sovereign, and overturned their own Government; not content with endeavouring, by acts of violence, to subvert the established governments of other nations, and to introduce amongst them their own principles of rebellion and anarchy; have also impiously attempted to wage open war against the Christian faith. They have shut up their churches, studied to abolish the memory of the Lord's Day, declared the belief of a future state to be an empty dream; and by their emissaries, and their numerous publications, have sought to spread everywhere abroad their Atheistical tenets, and to render every nation dissatisfied with their own rulers, and with their own governments, both ecclesiastical and civil.

Hence has arisen that variety of books and pamphlets, containing the most impious opinions, and propagating the spirit of sedition and rebellion, which have been disseminated with much care amongst all ranks of men in this land. While such doctrines are abroad, and many, through ignorance or inadvertence, are in hazard of being poisoned by them, the solicitude which we entertain for your welfare, in time and in eternity, has led us to warn you against the seduction of false teachers. Now is the time, dear brethren, to show that you are not ashamed of your blessed Saviour, and of his words, "earnestly to contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints;" and to reject with contempt and indignation that false philosophy, pregnant with lies, which has wrought so much mischief amongst mankind. Listen not to any insinuations from those who seek to pervert you from the sound and good principles you early imbibed; and beware, particularly, that they instil not into your minds sentiments of disaffection to that wise and mild government under which you live. Remember, with gratitude, that goodness of the Almighty, which, when so many other nations have been distracted with civil commotions, and laid waste by hostile devastations, has preserved you in tranquillity and peace, "every man under his own vine, and his own fig-tree," enjoying with safety the fruit of his labours, under the protection of laws which afford equal justice to the poor and to the rich. Instead of being captivated by that empty sound of liberty, which has proved to be only another name for anarchy or tyranny, let zeal for true religion ever remain in your minds, united with attachment to our happy constitution, and with loyalty to that gracious Sovereign with whom Providence has blessed us.

It is much to be lamented, that, while we are assaulted by false principles imported to us from abroad, there should of late have arisen among ourselves a set of men, whose proceedings threaten no small disorder to the country. We mean those who, assuming the name of missionaries from what they call the Society for Propagating the Gospel at Home, as if they had some special commission from Heaven, are at present going through the land, not confining themselves to particular stations, but acting as universal itinerant teachers, and as superintendents of those who are established the teachers of religion by the Church; intruding themselves into their parishes without any call; erecting in several places Sunday schools, without any countenance from the Presbytery of the bounds, the minister or heritors of the parish; committing in those schools the religious instruction of youth to ignorant persons, altogether unfit for such an important charge, who presume not only to catechise, but also to expound the Scriptures; or to persons notoriously disaffected to the civil constitution of the country; and connecting those schools with certain secret meetings, in which, as we are informed, every person is bound not to spread abroad any thing that is said or done in the meeting, to the prejudice of any of the members; into which no person is admitted without the consent of the whole of the members; and which keep a correspondence with other societies in the neighbourhood. You see the men, who by themselves, or their associates, conduct those Sunday schools and secret meetings, bringing together assemblies of people in the fields, or in places not intended for public worship; where, pouring forth their loose harangues, they frequently take the liberty of censuring the doctrine or the character of the minister of the parish; studying to alienate the affections of the people from their own pastors; and engaging them to join this new sect, as if they alone were possessed of some secret and novel method of bringing men to heaven.

Hitherto, brethren, you have regarded a regular standing ministry as a Divine institution. You have been taught that the Lord Jesus Christ himself did not act in a public character, without producing and proving a heavenly commission; that the extraordinary endowments which he conferred upon his Apostles were their warrant for appearing as the preachers of his religion; and that the evident connection between those endowments and the appointment of the first ministers of the word, is a direction to Christians in all succeeding ages, to consider the office of public teachers as a Divine ordinance, the exercise of which requires talents corresponding to the importance and difficulty of the charge. You know that the Church of Scotland, in conformity to these principles, prescribes a long course of education to those who are trained for the holy ministry; and, in order to prevent the misapplication of literary studies and talents, requires from all whom she licenses to preach the Gospel, the most solemn engagements, that they will adhere to the Standards which she has published of her doctrine, worship, discipline, and government. But all this care and solicitude concerning the ministry of the Word, which we and our fathers learned from Scripture, is now ridiculed as unnecessary. The men who assume the character of missionaries declare that every man has a right to preach the Gospel; and they are now traversing the whole country as evangelists, without any sort of authority, without giving any public pledge for the soundness of their faith, or the correctness of their morals, and without those advantages of regular education, and of preparatory knowledge, which, under every form of a Christian Church, ever since the age of miraculous gifts, have been held as indispensably necessary for the useful and successful discharge of a Gospel ministry.

We wish to judge charitably of all men. We are willing to hope that amongst these missionaries there are several worthy, well-meaning people, who have been led astray by men more artful and designing than themselves. But it is impossible not to perceive that the whole scheme, and the manner in which it is conducted, discover more of a spirit of ambition and vanity, and of a desire to claim a lordly dominion over your faith, than of the spirit of the Gospel, which is a meek, an humble, and a peaceable spirit, and a spirit of order, not of confusion; and whatever may be the intentions of some who have engaged in this scheme, the manifest tendency of their proceedings is to foster the violence of a blind intemperate zeal; to unsettle the minds of many; to throw their principles loose, by distracting them with novelties, and to make them become like "clouds without water, carried about of winds."

You may have been led by curiosity to listen for a little to what these strange and self-authorised teachers of religion have to say. But that any of you will give them lasting countenance, or adhere to them as guides, forsaking, upon that account, the Established Church, in whose principles you were baptized, and under whose wings you have been bred up, we are persuaded better things of you than to believe or suspect. For, is it to be imagined, that any well-disposed and sober-minded Christians could think of deserting those houses of God, in which their fathers have so often worshipped, and which have so often resounded with their own songs of praise, in order to follow up and down a sect of men, whom you know not whence they be? Is not the Church of Scotland, which has been distinguished by the testimony of many generations for the purity of its doctrines, and the character of its ministers, worthy of your most steady and zealous attachment; that Church, in defence of which your forefathers fought and bled, and which has produced so many confessors and martyrs in the cause of our common faith? Much reason there is to suspect, that those who openly profess their enmity to our ecclesiastical establishment are no friends to our civil constitution; and that the name of liberty is abused by them, as it has been by others, into a cover for secret democracy and anarchy. Persevere, therefore, in those principles in which you have been bred, and which you have hitherto honourably manifested. Beware, beloved brethren, of all who would shake your attachment to the Established Church of Scotland. By diligently improving those stated means of instruction which she provides for you, and always consulting the sacred Scriptures as your supreme rule, the path of duty will be clearly pointed out to you. But those who "heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears," those who are continually seeking new guides, wander into many unknown paths, which lead them into dangerous snares and errors.

In these giddy times, when the love of innovation so much prevails, and when the spirit of innovation has broken forth in so many forms, listen “to the words of truth and soberness. We speak as to wise men; judge ye what we say.” Recollect the counsels and the practice of your fathers; recollect your own experience of instruction and edification, under a well educated and regularly ordained ministry. “Stand, brethren, in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls.” And may God enlighten and fortify your minds by his good Spirit, and, amidst all dangers, enable you to “behave yourselves wisely in a perfect way!”

*Sess. ult., June 3, 1799.—Report concerning Vagrant Teachers and Sunday Schools.

The General Assembly, upon considering that part of an overture from the Synod of Aberdeen which respects Vagrant Teachers and Sunday Schools, having directed a committee of their number to inquire into the existing laws which place schoolmasters and teachers of youth under the inspection and control of the Established Church, and to report to the Assembly a statement of those laws, together with their opinion concerning the most effectual method of preventing unqualified persons from being employed in the important office of instructing youth: The committee accordingly gave in their report this day; and the same being read and considered, was unanimously approved of, and adopted by the Assembly, of which report the tenor follows:—

Your committee do not judge it necessary to enter into a minute detail of the more ancient laws with respect to the power of the Church over all schools and teachers of youth. The General Assembly of this Church, as early as the year 1565, claimed it as their right that none should be permitted to teach publicly or privately, but such as were tried by the superintendents or visitors of the Kirk, and found qualified. This claim was confirmed by an Act of Parliament, which was passed in the year 1567, in the following words:—“Forasmeikleas, be all laws and constitutionis, it is provided, That the zouth be brocht up and instructed in the fear of God and gude manncris; and gif it be urtherwise, it is tinsel baith of their bodies and saules, gif God’s Word be not ruted in them. Quheirfore, our Sovereign Lorde, with advice of my Lorde Regent, and the three estates of this present Parliament, has statute and ordained, that all schules to burgh and land, and all universities and colledges, be reformed; and that nane be permitted nor admitted to have charge and cure thereof in time coming, nor to instruct the zouth privatelie or openlie, bot sic as sall be tryed be the superintendentes or visitouris of the kirk.”

* The following is the notice in the Abridgment of the Assembly’s Proceedings of the committee to draw up this report, as well as to prepare the preceding Pastoral Admonition; “The Overtures from the Synods of Aberdeen, and Angus and Mearns, respecting vagrant teachers and Sunday schools, and respecting irreligion and anarchy, heard. The General Assembly having deliberated on the subject of these Overtures; upon a motion made, unanimously resolved, that a Pastoral Admonition be addressed by the General Assembly to the People of Scotland, warning them of the danger of encouraging, or listening to the addresses of those men, who, under the name of missionary or itinerant preachers, from a Society styling themselves the Society for Propagating the Gospel at Home, have, of late, been travelling over all the districts within the bounds of this Church; and that a committee be appointed to prepare this Admonition, and to report on Monday. That the same committee be appointed to inquire into the existing laws which place schoolmasters and teachers of youth under the inspection and control of the Established Church, to report to the Assembly on Monday a statement of those laws, together with their opinion concerning the most effectual method of preventing unqualified persons from being employed in the important office of instructing youth.”—Ed. 1843.

After the abolition of the office of superintendent, in the General Assembly, held in the month of April 1581, certain articles were remitted by the Synod of Lothian to that General Assembly, the fifth of which is, "That the trial and admission of all masters of schools be now committed to the Presbyteries." The Act, 1565, already noticed, is ratified and confirmed by the Act, 1581; and this Act, 1581, is again confirmed by the Act, 1592, which is the great charter of the Church, and which is confirmed by the Act of Security, 1707, cap. 6, and thereby declared to be an essential and fundamental article in the Treaty of Union, into which it is accordingly engrossed, so that the superintending power of the Church over all schoolmasters and teachers of youth is clearly established by the most solemn acts of the legislature, and even by the Treaty of Union itself.

It is well known that the Church has been in the constant exercise of those powers, by visiting and examining schools, and taking cognizance of the sufficiency and qualifications of teachers. See the Acts of Assembly, 1638, 1642, 1649, 1699.

When Episcopacy was re-established, on the restoration of Charles II., an Act was passed, 1662, c. 4, by which it is, inter alia, enacted, "That none be permitted, hereafter, to preach in public, or in families, within any diocese, or to teach any public school, or to be pedagogues to the children of persons of quality, without the licence of the ordinary of the diocese."

Soon after the Revolution, the Act, 1693, c. 22, was passed, which declares, "That all schoolmasters, and teachers of youth in schools, are and shall be liable to the trial, judgment, and censure of the Presbyteries of the bounds, for their sufficiency, qualifications, and deportment in the said office." This Act is declaratory of a right which constitutionally belongs to the Church; and, accordingly, the various Presbyteries of the Church have been in use of exercising that power, not merely with regard to parochial schoolmasters, but to teachers of youth of all denominations and descriptions. And the General Assembly, 1700, appoints all Presbyteries to take special, particular, and exact notice of all schoolmasters, chaplains, governors, and pedagogues of youth within their respective bounds.

By the Act, 1707, cap. 6, which is declared a fundamental and essential condition of the Union, it is provided, "That no Professors, &c., or others bearing office in any university or school within Scotland, be capable, or be admitted, or allowed to continue in the exercise of their functions, but such as shall own and acknowledge the civil government, and shall subscribe the Confession of Faith, and that they will conform themselves to the worship in use in this Church, and submit themselves to the government and discipline thereof, and never endeavour the prejudice or subversion of the same, and that before the respective Presbyteries of their bounds, by whatsoever gift, presentation, or provision, they may be thereto provided."

By the Act 19th Geo. II. cap. 39, sect. 21, it is enacted, "That it shall not be lawful for any person in Scotland to keep a private school, or to officiate as master or teacher in any school, until the situation and description of such school is registered, together with a certificate of the teacher being properly qualified according to law, by taking the oaths to government; and any person who acts without such register and certificate shall, for the first offence, suffer six months' imprisonment; and for any subsequent offence, upon the conviction before the Court of Justiciary or Circuit, shall be transported for life." Severe penalties are also imposed upon any parent or guardian, &c., who shall employ any such unqualified teacher. The same Act also requires, that chaplains in families, and governors, tutors, and teachers of children, shall take the oaths to government; and Sheriffs, &c., are required, from time to time, to make diligent inquiry concerning any offences that shall be committed against this Act, and to cause the same to be prosecuted, for the first offence, before themselves; and in case of any subsequent offence, to give notice of the same to his Majesty's Advocate, who is required to prosecute the same before the Court of Justiciary or Circuit Courts.

Schools in the universities and in royal burghs are excepted; also parochial schools, and those established by the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and by the General Assembly, or committees thereof.

To this statement of the laws, the committee beg leave to subjoin their opinion,—

That the General Assembly shall enjoin all Presbyteries of this Church to be diligent in exercising those powers which the laws of the land, and of the Church, have committed to them, with respect to the education of youth within their bounds; and particularly to call before them all teachers of youth, whether in parochial schools, or schools of another description, and to take trial of their sufficiency and qualifications in those branches of education which they profess to teach. And that the Assembly shall recommend to the Procurator of the Church to give his advice and assistance to all Presbyteries of the Church relative to this matter, and authorise him to carry on, at the public expense, such processes as may appear to be necessary for enforcing the sentences, or ascertaining the powers, of the judicatories of the Church relative to schools; and that the Assembly shall request his Majesty's Advocate and Solicitor-General to concur with the Procurator in supporting the jurisdiction of the Church. And farther, that the General Assembly shall enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church to report to the next Assembly a list of all the schools within their bounds, specifying what is taught in each school; whether the schools be held on the Lord's Day, or on other days of the week; in what way the schoolmasters are supported or maintained; whether they act for themselves, or are employed by or under the direction of others; what number of scholars attend each school at the time of making the report; and, in general, whatever else shall appear to the Presbytery of importance respecting the schools within their bounds.

Sess. 1, May 22, 1800.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The uniform experience we have had for so long a course of years of your attachment to our person, of your zeal for the interests of religion, and of the wisdom and prudence of your proceedings, cannot fail to enhance the satisfaction we have always felt in giving the sanction of our royal authority to the meetings of your venerable body.

The objects of your deliberations are among the most important that can engage the attention of men. The propagation of Christian knowledge, the maintenance of the reformed religion, the discouragement of vice and immorality, and the diffusion of a spirit of charity and benevolence, and of submission to the laws, are ends which must excite in you the most ardent zeal for their attainment.

You will, doubtless, have felt, that your labours are become doubly important, and, in the same proportion, more painful and difficult, from the opposition of factious men, enemies of our religion, and of all social order and legal government. The success with which you have hitherto withstood their pernicious designs, affords the surest ground of confidence, that the continuance of your exertions, united with those of our other good and loyal subjects, will ultimately prove effectual, and that we shall be enabled, with the aid of Divine Providence, to transmit to posterity the unimpaired enjoyment of all the blessings, civil and religious, of our free and happy constitution.

The distress under which a large portion of your fellow-creatures must inevitably labour, during these times of scarcity with which it has pleased Almighty God to visit us, will not escape your attention; and will call upon you individually, in the discharge of your sacred functions, to inculcate with additional ardour the indispensable obligation of relieving, according to the abilities of each, the necessities of the poor.

We have again thought fit to appoint our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, David Earl of Leven and Melville, to be our Commissioner, to represent our person and royal authority in this present Assembly; not doubting but that the same eminent qualifications which have recommended him to our repeated choice will continue to make him acceptable to you, in the execution of the high and important trust committed to his care. And we have charged him, in a most especial manner, to assure you of our great sense of your steady and firm zeal for our service, and of our resolution to preserve and maintain the Church of Scotland, as by law established, in the full and free enjoyment of all its rights and privileges.

Trusting in the goodness of Almighty God, that He will bless your pious labours with his especial favour, we commend you to his gracious protection. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court of St James's, the 6th day of May 1800, in the 40th year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

PORTLAND.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 2, May 23, 1800.—Address to his Majesty, on his late Providential Escape from Assassination.

May it please your Majesty,

We, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach your Majesty's throne with trembling yet joyful hearts, on your late Providential escape from the hand of a traitorous assassin.

That even treason itself should dare to attempt a life so precious to your faithful subjects, which has been endeared to them by the exercise of every virtue that can adorn the character of a patriot King, excites our utmost horror and indignation; while, at the same time, the guardian care of Divine Providence, in preserving the father of his country to his grateful and affectionate people, raises in our breast every sentiment of piety and thankfulness to the God of heaven.

When we convey to your Majesty our warmest congratulations on this awful event, we cannot fail to observe how much the most imminent dangers illustrate your Majesty's Christian fortitude and magnanimity; endear you still more and more to your admiring subjects; and call forth our most fervent prayers for the prolongation of a life so important at this juncture to them and to all the nations of Europe, till your Majesty shall have completed the glories of your reign, in the accomplishment of all your exalted plans for the security of Great Britain, and the peace of the world.

That Almighty God may ever keep your Majesty under His Divine protection; that He may bless you in your person, family, and government; that He may bless your royal consort the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and that, after a long and prosperous reign, you may exchange an earthly for a celestial crown, through the merits of our Lord Jesus Christ, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

IV.

Sess. 3, May 24, 1800.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour this meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, was received with the utmost respect and gratitude.

The approbation of the spirit and proceedings of former Assemblies, which your Majesty's benignity has condescended to express with so much paternal affection, is peculiarly grateful to us as a body, and operates on our feelings as an encouragement to follow, in attachment to your Majesty's person, in zeal for the interests of religion, and in charity towards one another, the example of those enlightened and virtuous men who have gone before us; and to deserve, like them, that sanction of royal authority which gives solemnity and effect to the decisions of our National Church.

Impressed with a just sense of the important nature of those objects which claim our consideration, we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that the propagation of Christian knowledge, the maintenance of the reformed religion, the discouragement of vice and immorality, and the diffusion of a spirit of charity and benevolence, and of submission to the laws, are ends which shall continue to excite in our minds the most ardent zeal for their attainment.

In the trying and eventful period in which we live, we have felt that our labours have become doubly important, both to private happiness and the public safety; while we have also had the mortification to discover, that, in the same proportion, they have been rendered more painful and difficult by the opposition of factious men, enemies of our religion, and of all social order and legal government. We rejoice, that our honest and unremitting exertions, in union with those of your Majesty's other good and loyal subjects, have hitherto been successful in frustrating their pernicious designs; and in full assurance of the continued favour of Providence to a righteous cause, we look forward with confidence to the termination of this great conflict, when your Majesty shall be enabled to transmit to posterity the unimpaired enjoyment of all the blessings, civil and religious, of our free and happy constitution.

The distress under which a large portion of our fellow-creatures has inevitably laboured, during these times of scarcity with which it has pleased Almighty God to visit us, has repeatedly claimed our serious attention; and amidst the hardships to which our people must still submit, it gives us the most sincere satisfaction to assure your Majesty, that in no period known to us have the good sense, the patriotism, and the charity of the country, been more conspicuously displayed. The care employed by the opulent and well-informed to point out the nature and extent of the visitation, and to provide the means of alleviating its pressure, has been most meritorious. Of this the poor themselves are not insensible; and the patience and resignation which they have very generally exercised under difficulties seldom known in our land, give us room to hope, that, in the honest pursuits of industry, and in dutiful submission to lawful authority, they will quietly wait for the return of a more favourable harvest. Meanwhile, we beg leave to assure your Majesty, that, in the individual discharge of the duties of our function, we shall not fail to inculcate, with additional ardour, the indispensable obligation of relieving, according to the abilities of each, the necessities of the poor.

Your Majesty's donation of L.1000 for propagating Christian knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland was received with much gratitude, as a fresh instance of your paternal solieitude for the best interests of your people, as well as of the confidence which you are pleased to repose in the wisdom and fidelity of this Assembly; and it shall be our endeavour, by a prudent and just application of it, to promote the pious purposes for which it is bestowed.

The appointment of the Earl of Leven and Melville to represent your Majesty's sacred person and royal authority in this present Assembly, we regard as a pleasing testimony of your affection to our Church. The attachment of this noble Lord to your Majesty's person, his zeal for the interests of the Church of Scotland, and the virtues of his private life; the eminent qualifications which have recommended him to your Majesty's repeated choice, endear him to us in the execution of the high and important trust committed to his care. The flattering manner in which he has communicated the graeious assurance of the sense which your Majesty is pleased to entertain of our steady and firm zeal for your service, has given us the truest pleasure. And we rely with entire confidence in your Majesty's resolution 'to preserve and maintain the Church of Scotland, as by law established, in the full and free enjoyment of all its rights and privileges.

That Almighty God may continue to preserve your sacred life, to guide your councils, and prosper your administration; that He may bless our most graeious Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and that, after a long life of eminent and exemplary virtue upon earth, you may, through the merits of Jesus Christ our Lord, receive in heaven the recompence of reward, are the sincere prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assenbly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 6, May 28, 1800.—Address to his Majesty on the present Situation of Public Affairs.

Most Graeious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne with sentiments of the sincerest attachment to your person and government.

Grateful to Providence for that happy constitution under which Britons have so long enjoyed every blessing that can sweeten and adorn social life, we reflect with the deepest regret on those groundless complaints and murmurings which were heard at no distant period in every corner of our land, and which furnished a just subject of alarm to the friends of order and peace. But we rejoice to think, that the exertions of the virtuous, the writings of the wise, and the seasonable interposition of public authority, have served, by the blessing of Heaven, to counteract the insidious arts of the disaffected; and it affords us the sincerest satisfaction to be able to assure your Majesty, that among the great body of the people committed to our care, there prevails an unshaken attachment to our excellent constitution in Church and State, and a just abhorrence of that system of impiety and anarchy which hath spread misery and desolation through many parts of the earth.

In reviewing the events of a war, on the success of which depends the preservation of all that is dear to a virtuous mind, we admire the wisdom and the steadiness of your Majesty's councils, which have kept alive the hopes, and animated the exertions of the other States of Europe; and while our devout acknowledgments ascend to the Lord of Hosts, who hath supported our righteous cause, with heartfelt pleasure we congratulate your Majesty on the many important advantages which have been obtained in the course of last year, by the arms of our country and our allies. We recollect, with joy, that during this period, Italy hath been delivered from the tyranny of lawless force; that to the kingdom of Naples its ancient constitution hath been restored; that in Egypt a desperate plan hath been frustrated, by which our enemies hoped to spread sedition and tumult through the remotest regions of the earth; and that the defeat of a formidable rival, whom their restless hostility had excited against us, hath placed the British possessions in India in a state of permanent tranquillity; and that, on the coast of Holland, a fleet, equipped for the very purpose of conveying invaders to our shores, hath surrendered to us without a battle, adding a new and glorious trophy to the many signal victories which the valour of our seamen hath obtained.

In this rapid succession of events, which contribute so much to the security of our native country, and the general interests of mankind, we adore the Providence of that Almighty Being, to whom "the glory and the victory belong;" and we would improve them as a ground of hope, that the cause of religion and good order will triumph over all opposition; and that the efforts of Britain and her allies will be crowned with such further success as may ensure a happy termination of the important contest in which they are engaged.

That Almighty God may protect your Majesty's person, direct your councils, and prosper your administration: that He may bless our gracious Queen Charlotte, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and that, after swaying the sceptre for many years, with wisdom and felicity, over a loyal, a virtuous, and a happy people, you may, through Jesus Christ our Lord, receive that unfading crown which awaits the righteous, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1800.—Order and Injunction of the General Assembly to the Presbyteries of the Church, concerning Teachers and Schoolmasters.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on Vagrant Teachers and Sunday Schools; and the same was given in and read. The General Assembly having considered this report of the committee, who had been directed to class the reports of Presbyteries concerning schoolmasters, whether of parochial schools, or schools of any other description; and it appearing that not a fourth part of the Presbyteries of the Church have made any report, the Assembly peremptorily enjoin all the other Presbyteries of the Church to send up to next General Assembly particular reports of their obedience to the order of last Assembly. The General Assembly trust, that those Presbyteries which have sent up particular reports, will continue the same laudable and vigilant attention to the important object specially committed to their inspection; and that they will not fail to transmit to next Assembly any new facts which may fall within their observation. The General Assembly recommend to all Presbyteries to take the method which appears to them most expedient of examining the teachers on the branch of knowledge which they profess to teach, to require all parochial and established schoolmasters to subscribe the Confession of Faith and Formula, if they have not already done so, and to ask all teachers of youth, without exception, to produce to the Presbytery attestations of their having taken the oaths to government; and they order a particular report of obedience to this recommendation to be made to next Assembly. And further, the General Assembly enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church to transmit, without delay, attested copies of their reports to the Assembly, to the Sheriffs within whose jurisdiction they are situated. And they instruct the clerks to keep the reports sent up to this Assembly, and the report of the committee on this subject, in safe custody. And the General Assembly appoint their clerks to cause separate copies of this order to be printed, together with the injunction of last Assembly relative to this matter, and to transmit copies thereof to the moderator of each Presbytery of the Church, to be laid by him before the Presbytery at their first ordinary meeting after receiving the same.

The Injunction of the General Assembly, 1799, is then repeated:—

The General Assembly enjoin all Presbyteries of this Church to be diligent in exercising those powers which the laws of the land and of the Church have committed to them, with respect to the education of youth within their bounds, &c.

XII.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1800.—Recommendation by the General Assembly, for promoting a Subscription towards Defraying the Expense of the Appeal in the Cause relating to the Schoolmaster of Bothwell; and Order for Printing the Appeal Case prepared by the Procurator.

The committee appointed to take the necessary steps in the cause relating to the schoolmaster of Bothwell, having reported to the Assembly that the appeal from the two last interlocutors of the Court of Session in that cause has been heard and determined by the House of Peers; and that the interlocutors complained of have been finally reversed: That though the committee had received L.118, 14s. 10d. from the voluntary contribution of the Presbyteries, and L.80 from the funds of the Church, the expense incurred has, notwithstanding, considerably exceeded the funds with which the committee were entrusted, and that the deficiency amounts to upwards of L.196. The General Assembly, considering that the judgment which has been ultimately pronounced in this cause is of general importance, as it has effectually established the exclusive jurisdiction of the Church, with regard to the qualifications and the trial of parochial schoolmasters: and considering, at the same time, that the state of the funds of the Church does not allow the Assembly at present to make good the whole of the expense incurred, did, and hereby do, earnestly recommend it to the several Presbyteries within the bounds of this Church, and especially to those who have not hitherto contributed, to promote a subscription among their members, in order to assist the funds of the Church, in extinguishing a debt which the final decision of this cause, so important in its consequences to the whole country, has occasioned. And the General Assembly appoint the clerks of Assembly to cause this minute to be immediately printed at the public expense, and to transmit a copy thereof, without delay, to the moderators of the several Presbyteries, which they hereby enjoin them to lay before the said Presbyteries respectively, at their first ordinary meeting after it shall come to their hands. And further, the General Assembly appoint the said moderators to remit to Mr William Murray, Agent for the Church, whatever sums shall be subscribed within their respective Presbyteries, and, if possible, to do this on or before the 1st day of October next. And the General Assembly renew the appointment of the committee, with instructions to attend to the progress of the subscription, and to the application of the sums which shall be received by the Agent; and to report the result to next General Assembly.

The General Assembly, considering, at the same time, that the appeal case prepared by the Procurator in this cause contains a statement of facts, which it would be extremely useful to render generally known through the Church, they appoint the clerks to cause such a number of copies thereof to be printed as the committee shall think expedient, to circulate them among the several Presbyteries, and to apply to the cashier of the Church for the sum necessary to defray the expense, which the Assembly hereby authorise him to advance.

Sess. 1, May 21, 1801.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. It is your peculiar duty to provide for the preservation of pure religion, both in faith and morals, and to remember that the advancement of piety, and the practice of every Christian duty, at all times demand from you the greatest assiduity and care. But if these considerations are at any time entitled to more than ordinary attention, it is when notions and principles, equally destructive of the temporal and eternal welfare of those who entertain them, have been industriously propagated amongst all orders and degrees of men.

It is to the credit of those to whom the interests of Christianity are more peculiarly consigned, that the evil tendency of these notions and principles has been exposed, and that their progress has in a great degree been checked; but the experience of every day still serves to convince us that the slightest relaxation of those exertions (which Divine Providence has hitherto crowned with success) may be productive of the most fatal and ruinous effects; that the enemies of the Christian religion (like the enemies of social order) are always on the watch, and will not fail to profit by every advantage which lukewarmness or inadvertence may afford them, and that, therefore, the friends of piety and good morals still look up to you for that protection which they can most effectually receive from your unremitting vigilance and attention.

That these expectations will not be disappointed, your past conduct affords us a sufficient pledge; and we feel the fullest assurance, that that gravity and devotion of mind, that loyal attachment to our person, that tender concern for the welfare of the people committed to your charge, and that spirit of Christian love and charity towards each other, which have hitherto characterized your proceedings, will not be withdrawn from them, at a time when they are calculated to produce the best effects, and to avert the most disastrous evils.

The just rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland are objects of our especial care; and when we repeat the assurance of our firm resolution to maintain them unimpaired, we adjure you duly to consider the various important duties which it is incumbent upon you faithfully to discharge, and to reflect that not only the welfare of the establishment, and the interests of civil society, claim from every individual the strictest attention to his conduct, but that the very existence of religion itself may depend upon the precepts and example of its appointed ministers.

We have again constituted and appointed our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, David Earl of Leven and Melville, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our royal person in this Assembly; and it affords us the greatest satisfaction to reflect, that the sentiments, which we formerly expressed, of confidence in his zeal for the cause of religion, and for the peace and prosperity of the Church of Scotland, have been confirmed by the experience of another year; and that you will consequently continue to receive from his faithful services the most effectual co-operation and support in promoting the two great ends of religion, the glory of God and the welfare of mankind. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court of St James's, the 12th day of May 1801, in the forty-first year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

PORTLAND.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1801.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We have received, with the most sincere respect and gratitude, the very gracious letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour this meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sensible that it is our peculiar duty to provide for the preservation of pure religion, and remembering that the advancement of piety, and the practice of every Christian duty, at all times demand from us the greatest assiduity and care, we feel that these considerations are entitled to more than ordinary attention, when notions and principles equally destructive of the temporal and eternal welfare of those who entertain them, have been industriously propagated amongst all orders and degrees of men. These notions and principles, we beg leave to assure your Majesty, it is our firm purpose steadily and uniformly to oppose; and we hope that our endeavours, combining with the efforts of all to whom the interests of Christianity are sacred, and aided by the blessing of the Most High, may still be effectual to expose their evil tendency, and check their progress.

In times like the present, when the enemies of religion (like the enemies of social order) are always on the watch, and will not fail to profit by every advantage which lukewarmness or inadvertence may afford them, we feel that the duties incumbent on us are unusually difficult and momentous. We are convinced that any relaxation of these exertions, which Divine Providence has hitherto crowned with success, may be productive of the most fatal and ruinous effects; and acting under the influence of this conviction, we shall study to afford to the friends of piety and good morals, every protection which can result from the vigilant discharge of the important duties which your Majesty has so earnestly recommended to our attention.

We are encouraged to apply ourselves, with the most unwearied zeal and assiduity, to the accomplishment of this great object, by the confidence which your Majesty is pleased to repose in us; and while we have a proper sense of the difficulties with which the friends of religion and good order have to contend, we are grateful to Almighty God, that we are blessed with a Sovereign whose example and authority are uniformly employed to enforce the sanctions of religion, and give weight to the admonitions of its teachers. We trust that, both as individuals, watching over the people under our care, and as an Assembly, consulting for the general interest of the Church of Scotland, we shall ever maintain that sacred sense of religious obligation; that loyal attachment to your Majesty's person and government; that tender concern for the welfare of the people committed to our charge; and that spirit of Christian love and charity towards each other, which have hitherto recommended us to your royal protection, and which your Majesty has condescended to mention with approbation.

We rely, with entire confidence, on your Majesty's gracious assurance, that the just rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland are objects of your especial care, and that it is your resolution to maintain them unimpaired. That your Majesty has deigned to admonish us with such affectionate zeal, of the various and important duties incumbent on us, we consider as a renewed proof of that warm concern for the interests of religion, and the prosperity of your people, which has rendered your Majesty so justly dear to all good men. We are sensible that in the manner in which these duties are discharged, the welfare of the establishment, the interests of civil society, and the influence of religion, must, in a great measure, depend; and we take the liberty to assure your Majesty that, both by our precepts and our example, we shall ever study to promote the interests of religion and virtue, and to diffuse among the people under our care sentiments of attachment to our happy constitution, loyalty to your Majesty's person and government, and zeal for the public good.

The representation of your royal person in our General Assemblies we regard with the highest respect, as the symbol of that union between Church and State which tends to give stability to both. We receive as a testimony of your paternal regard for the interests of the Church of Scotland, the appointment of the Earl of Leven and Melville as your Majesty's Commissioner in this Assembly. His approved loyalty to your Majesty; his warm zeal for the cause of religion; his hereditary attachment to the Church of Scotland, and his tried fidelity in the high office with which your Majesty has again been pleased to invest him, give us the fullest confidence that we shall continue to receive from his faithful services the most effectual co-operation and support, in promoting the two great ends of religion, the glory of God and the welfare of mankind.

Your Majesty's donation of L.1000, for the propagation of Christian Knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, we have received with the most sincere gratitude; and it shall be our care to employ this mark of your royal munificence for promoting, in the most efficacious manner, the pious purpose for which it is bestowed.

That Almighty God, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty's person and prolong your reign;—that He may bless the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family;—that He may direct your councils, and prosper your administration;—that He may continue with us the inestimable advantages which we enjoy under your Majesty's mild and equitable government, and transmit them as an inheritance to future generations; and that, after a long and happy reign over a free, a loyal, and a religious people, He may receive you into those mansions where the just inherit an unfading crown, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1801.—Address to his Majesty on the present Situation of Public Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met together in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach your throne with the warmest sentiments of thankfulness to God, and of affection to your Majesty, which your recovery from a late dangerous sickness can raise in the minds of dutiful subjects, who have so long enjoyed the blessings of your mild and auspicious administration.

It is with much satisfaction, that we can assure your Majesty of the steady loyalty and attachment of the great body of your Majesty's subjects in this part of the United Kingdom to your Majesty's person and government, of the strong sensation of alarm which they felt on your Majesty's late illness, and their unfeigned joy on your restoration to health. At the same time, we gladly bear testimony to their patient endurance of all the hardships of the late uncommon scarcity, which could be equalled only by the generous exertions of the superior ranks for their relief.

When we consider the unprecedented state of war and desolation, of fear and alarm, into which Europe has been thrown, by the daring ambition and unjust usurpations of France; the repeated and audacious attempts she has made to corrupt the minds of your Majesty's subjects in their principles of religion and loyalty, and the implacable rage with which she has persisted in her enmity to the British Empire, we contemplate with the highest admiration the steadiness and magnanimity of your Majesty's councils and conduct amidst the wreck of so many states; and we return thanks to Almighty God, for having inspired your Majesty with such unshaken fortitude and persevering wisdom.

Amidst the splendid achievements of your Majesty's reign, permit us to say, that we admire and rejoice in none more than in your most fortunate completion of a legislative union between Great Britain and Ireland, a measure of state so long wished for with anxiety by the wise, and which, whether we consider its magnitude, the difficulty of its accomplishment, or the great and important effects it is likely to produce, must stand recorded in the annals of the world as a masterpiece of human policy, and a lasting monument of your Majesty's paternal wisdom. The experience which your Majesty's subjects, in this part of the United Kingdom, have had, for nearly a century past, of the happy consequences of a similar measure, entitles them to look forward with joyful expectation to no distant period, when the United Empire in general, and the neighbouring Island in particular, shall reap the full fruits of your Majesty's wise and magnanimous councils.

While we congratulate your Majesty on having so happily increased the energy and security of your dominions by this memorable act of union, we rejoice in having, at the same time, an opportunity of expressing our fervent gratitude to Almighty God for the success with which he has crowned your Majesty's arms. We consider those victories achieved in the Baltic and Egypt, as having added new splendour to the conduct and valour of your Majesty's naval and military forces; and we trust that, by the blessing of Heaven, they may be the means of opening the eyes of those nations, who, deluded or overawed, have tamely yielded to the haughty mandates of an ambitious and arrogant power, of terminating speedily the horrors of war, and of leading to a general peace, which may secure the just rights of contending nations, and restore to the world concord and tranquillity.

Your Majesty, we humbly hope, will not consider it as unbecoming or unseasonable, if we mingle with our joy for the victory in Egypt, our regret for the death of the good and gallant hero, Sir Ralph Abercromby, under whom it was achieved. We unite with the rest of our fellow-subjects in feeling that, by his death, your Majesty's service and kingdom have sustained a signal loss. But this General Assembly has, at the same time, peculiar motives to indulge a tender interest in his fate, as one who was a member of our Church, and whose name stands on the roll of our present Assembly. The nation will raise a monument to his valour—it is our melancholy duty to record and attest to posterity his virtue.

That Almighty God, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty's person, direct your councils, and render your administration prosperous;—that He may bless our gracious Queen, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and that, after you have reigned long with felicity and wisdom over a free, grateful, and happy people, He may bestow on you that crown of righteousness that fadeth not away, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 9, May 30, 1801.—Order and Injunction of the General Assembly to the Presbyteries of the Church, concerning Teachers and Schoolmasters.

The General Assembly find, from the report of their committee, that fifty Presbyteries of this Church have sent up reports of their obedience, to the order of last Assembly, concerning teachers and schoolmasters; that many of those Presbyteries, probably from the circumstance of not having received in due time a printed copy of the order, have not complied with all the injunctions contained in it; and, in particular, have failed in taking trial of the qualification of private teachers, and in transmitting a copy of their report to the sheriff of the county; and that twenty-eight Presbyteries have not yet reported their obedience.

The General Assembly being satisfied from the report of their committee, that the order of last Assembly has produced the most beneficial and important effects in various districts of this Church, unanimously agree to renew the order of last Assembly in all its parts; peremptorily enjoin those Presbyteries who have not yet obeyed the order to send up reports to next Assembly; enjoin those Presbyteries whose reports do not come up to the terms of the order, to cause it to be read at their first ordinary meeting, to proceed without delay to supply the deficiencies of their former procedure, and to report their obedience to next Assembly: And recommend to those Presbyteries whose reports are complete to continue their laudable attention to this important object; and to report to next Assembly any new facts relative to teachers and schoolmasters that may arise within their bounds during the ensuing year. And the General Assembly appoint their clerks to cause separate copies of this resolution to be printed, together with copies of the order of Assemblies, 1799 and 1800, relative to this matter; and to transmit copies thereof to the moderator of each Presbytery of this Church, to be laid by him before the Presbytery at their first ordinary meeting after receiving the same.

Sess. 1, May 20, 1802.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The uniform experience we have had, for so many years, of the happy effects resulting to my good people of Scotland from the General Assembly of your Church, has induced us to countenance your present meeting by our royal authority; and, for this purpose, we have made choice of our right trusty and well-beloved Francis Lord Napier to be our Commissioner, and to represent our person in this Assembly, being fully persuaded that his zeal for our service, his affection for the Church of Scotland, and his firm attachment to the true interests of his country, will make this our choice highly acceptable to you.

We gladly embrace this opportunity of renewing to you our fixed purpose and resolution to support the Church you represent in the full possession and enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, as by law established. Convinced, at the same time, that its prosperity will ever essentially depend upon the due discharge of their duties by all the members of it, in their several ranks and stations, we cannot too earnestly recommend to your most serious consideration the means you possess of accomplishing so desirable an object, by a zealous and prudent exertion of the influence belonging to your sacred function.

At this moment, in particular, whilst you endeavour to impress upon the minds of the people committed to your charge a due sense of gratitude to that Divine Providence which has enabled me to put an end to a long and arduous war, and to restore to them the blessings of peace, you will not fail to remind them that nothing but a strict obedience to the will of God, a firm adherence to our reformed faith, a disinterested love of their country, and submission to its laws, can give these blessings permanence and stability.

We shall receive the highest satisfaction on being informed of your having applied yourselves, with your accustomed piety and prudence, to matters so well deserving our recommendation and all your care. You may at all times depend upon our most ready concurrence in whatever may conduce to the advancement of purposes so essential to the welfare of my people; and so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 14th day of May 1802, in the forty-second year of our reign.

Sess. 1, May 20, 1802.—Act respecting the Arrangement of the Assembly-House for the proper Accommodation of the Members.

Upon the report of the committee appointed by last Assembly, respecting the better arrangement of the Assembly-House for the accommodation of the members, the General Assembly unanimously adopted the following regulations, viz. :—

1st, That the upper galleries shall, as formerly, be set apart for strangers.

2d, That the under galleries shall, as usual, be reserved for preachers and students in Divinity, and that the said preachers and students shall be required to produce tickets, authorising their admission, from the Professors of Divinity.

3d, That one bench, contiguous to each of the under galleries, shall be separated from the middle part of the house by a proper rail, for the accommodation of those ministers who are not members of the Assembly.

4th, That no person shall be admitted into the remaining part of the house except members of the Assembly, the magistrates of the city of Edinburgh for the time being, the Lord Commissioner's attendants, and parties with their counsel and agents.

5th, That the members shall, when they deliver their commissions to the clerks of the Assembly, receive tickets, containing their respective names, from the said clerks; and that the beadles shall be strictly enjoined to refuse them admittance into the house unless they shall produce their tickets, or shall, upon a motion for that purpose, be admitted by the authority of the Assembly.

6th, That a beadle shall be appointed to superintend the other beadles, and be made responsible for their conduct.

Sess. 3, May 22, 1802.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter with which your Majesty hath honoured this meeting of our National Assembly, hath been received by us with all the respect and gratitude due for such a mark of royal favour.

The approbation which your Majesty is pleased to express of the General Assemblies of the Church of Scotland we feel as an animating motive to persevere in the conduct which procures for us the sanction of your royal authority.

The appointment of the Right Honourable Francis Lord Napier to represent your royal person in this General Assembly, we regard as a fresh proof of your Majesty's favour. His zeal for your Majesty's service, his affection for the Church of Scotland, and his firm attachment to the true interests of his country, ensure to him the most respectful and cordial reception.

We rely, with gratitude and confidence, upon the assurance that it is your Majesty's fixed purpose and resolution to support the Church which we represent, in the full possession and enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, as by law established.

We feel most deeply the importance of your Majesty's paternal warning, that the prosperity of our Church will ever essentially depend upon the due discharge of the duties incumbent upon all the members of it, in their several ranks and stations; and we shall not cease to pray that we may be enabled, through the Divine blessing, by a zealous and prudent exertion of the influence belonging to our sacred functions, to promote the accomplishment of an object so desirable. At this moment, in particular, whilst we endeavour to impress upon the minds of the people committed to our charge a due sense of gratitude to that Divine Providence which has enabled your Majesty to put an end to a long and arduous war, and to restore to them the blessings of peace, we shall not fail to remind them, that nothing but a strict obedience to the will of God, a firm adherence to our reformed faith, a disinterested love of their country, and submission to its laws, can give these blessings permanence and stability. We bless the King of kings, that we live under the government of a Prince who recommends to our attention objects so worthy of all our care; whose ready concurrence will support, and whose high approbation will reward, every exertion to promote them.

We receive with much gratitude the royal donation of L.1000, for promoting the knowledge of the Protestant religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. We shall apply it, with fidelity and diligence, to the pious and important purpose for which it is given.

That Almighty God, by whom Kings reign, may preserve your Majesty's person, and direct your councils;—that He may bless the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family;—that He may continue to us the many national blessings in which your subjects now rejoice; and that, after enjoying long the affection of a loyal and grateful people, you may receive a heavenly crown, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 22, 1802.—Address to his Majesty on the Present Situation of Public Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne of our gracious Sovereign, with every sentiment of warm affection and profound respect, to congratulate your Majesty on the happy issue which God, in his Providence, hath given to a bloody, extended, and expensive war, by restoring to Europe the blessings of peace.

When we consider the singular nature of the late war, which threatened in its progress the subversion of social order, and of every political establishment in the civilized world, we offer up the devout homage of grateful hearts to the Sovereign of the universe, who, by his blessing on the wisdom of your Majesty's councils, on the splendid achievements of your fleets and armies, on the steady, affectionate, and zealous loyalty of your people, not only hath maintained our independence as a nation, but, from the furnace of war, hath brought us forth a people increasing in our numbers, united in our strength, growing in prosperity, attached with warmer affection to your Majesty's person and government, and animated by a steadier zeal in support of our unrivalled constitution, both in Church and State.

The Church which we represent has uniformly experienced, and we gratefully acknowledge, the benign influence of your Majesty's auspicious reign. We bless the God of heaven for having given us a King whose public and private virtues adorn the most exalted state of human greatness. We renew the declarations of former Assemblies, that, in the faithful discharge of our duty, we will continue to cultivate in the minds of the people that reverence of God, and zeal for revealed religion; that loyalty to our Sovereign, and attachment to the constitution; those habits of persevering industry, and of domestic virtue, which have stamped upon Britons a national character, that is the glory of our country, and the admiration of the world. As the servants of the God of peace we have, with deep commiseration of afflicted humanity, contemplated the workings of that spirit of insubordination, which has convulsed the world; and in review of the late eventful contest we find, highly endeared to our affectionate veneration, a Sovereign, who is the father of his subjects, and the watchful guardian of a constitution which, built upon the permanent foundation of religion and liberty, shall, we trust, be preserved, through ages, a sacred pledge of the protecting care of Heaven—a majestic monument of the wisdom of our ancestors, by whose enlightened patriotism it was reared,—an illustrious trophy to the valour of our contemporaries, by whom it has been so bravely defended,—and a blessing to the succeeding race of Britons, who, we hope, shall receive it unimpaired as the rich inheritance of their fathers.

That Almighty God, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may prolong your Majesty's life, and prosper your administration; that He may bless the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all your Royal Family; and that, after a useful and happy reign on earth, you may obtain a crown of glory, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 7, May 27, 1802.—Order and Injunction of the General Assembly to the Presbyteries of the Church, concerning Teachers and Schoolmasters, renewed.

(The Injunctions of 1799, 1800, and 1801, are first repeated in the original edition.)

The General Assembly find, from the report of their Committee respecting the examination of Schools, That sixty Presbyteries have made returns of their obedience to the injunctions of the General Assembly; and that eighteen have hitherto made none: That of the additional returns this year, six Presbyteries report that they have completely fulfilled the instructions of the Assembly; four that they have made considerable progress, and will proceed in their diligence; and three state that they have met with considerable difficulties: That in one Presbytery there is a united parish where there is no parochial schoolmaster, nor any school-room, nor schoolmaster's house; and that, though a large district, it has been deprived of a public teacher for these six years past. That in another Presbytery there are missionaries, who have evaded the order of the sheriff, to cease from teaching till they had complied with the laws of the country respecting teachers. And that, in a third, a certain student has become a missionary preacher; and that, under his direction, and that of others, various schools are taught, and irregular teachings and preachings persisted in; and that the said student refuses either to sign the Formula, or to qualify to government: That several Presbyteries who had formerly sent reports, have again made returns of a satisfactory nature.

The General Assembly, having taken the above circumstances into their serious consideration, did, and hereby do, renew their former injunctions to Presbyteries, and expressly require reports from such Presbyteries as have hitherto made none; recommending it to all Presbyteries to send lists of refractory teachers to the sheriffs of counties, that they may proceed against them according to law.

VII.

Sess. 7, May 27, 1802.—Declaration and Instruction of the General Assembly in favour of the Parochial Schoolmasters in Scotland.

The General Assembly, having taken into their serious consideration Overtures from the Presbyteries of Lochmaben and Annan, concerning the present state of the parish schools of Scotland, feel themselves called upon, as the constitutional superintendents of all teachers of youth within the bounds of this Church, to declare, that the parochial schoolmasters of Scotland being entrusted, in a considerable degree, with the important charge of instilling into the minds of the rising generation the principles of religion and morality, are well entitled to public encouragement; that they are a most useful body of men, whose exertions, by disseminating amongst all ranks of the community solid and practical instruction, have contributed very much to the improvement, the good order, and the success of the people of Scotland; that, by the depreciation of the value of money, their salaries and emoluments, which, with a very few exceptions, are paid entirely in money, are not equal to the gains of a day-labourer; that in many parts of the country it has of late been found impossible to fill the parish schools with persons properly qualified, and that the whole order is sinking to a state of depression most hurtful to their usefulness; that it is extremely desirable that means should be devised for holding forth to men of sound principles and good capacity sufficient inducement to undertake the office of parochial schoolmasters; and that such men, when properly encouraged, having an interest in the prosperity of the country, would prove the most effectual instruments of counteracting the operations of those who, at present, or in any future time, may attempt to poison the minds of the rising generation with principles inimical to religion, subversive of order, and destructive of our happy constitution in Church and State.

The General Assembly instruct their Moderator, and the Procurator for the Church, to embrace every favourable opportunity of expressing, in the name of the Church, the sentiments contained in this Declaration; to correspond upon this important subject with his Majesty's Officers of State for Scotland, and to co-operate in every way that may appear to them most prudent and effectual, for giving to any plan that may be formed for the relief of the parochial schoolmasters all the weight which it can derive from the countenance of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 8, May 28, 1802.—Act concerning the Extent and Marches of Glebes.

The General Assembly, having taken into their consideration the 8th Act of Assembly, 1762, entitled, "Act against Dilapidation of Stipends, and for ascertaining the Extent of Glebes," did, and hereby do, enjoin the Synods of this Church to take care that Presbyteries strictly obey the same, particularly respecting the extent and marches of glebes, and other emoluments, as expressed in the said Act, whereof the tenor follows:—&c.

Sess. 9, May 29, 1802.—Overture and Recommendation respecting the Promoting of Theological Learning.

It was overtured to the General Assembly, That, for the important purpose of promoting Theological Learning, the Assembly recommend in the following terms:—

Whereas there is nothing more essentially connected with the best interests of the Church, than the improvement of those who are in a course of preparation for becoming ministers of it; and that it is of the utmost importance they should make theological literature not a secondary, but the first and chief subject of their study; and considering that the law respecting the licensing of probationers shortens the period of study, when regular attendance is given; the General Assembly, with the design of following out the meaning of this provision, and making students of divinity embrace every opportunity of improvement which the Universities afford where they give such attendance, hereby most earnestly recommend to all Presbyteries, that when students apply to be taken on trials, as having given regular attendance, they shall require from them certificates of their having attended all the Professors of Divinity who regularly deliver lectures in the Universities where they have studied, whether these lectures be delivered by those Professors usually denominated Professors of Divinity, or of Church History; and likewise of their having attended the Professor of Hebrew at least for one session.

The General Assembly, having taken this overture into their serious consideration, unanimously approved thereof, and did, and hereby do, most earnestly recommend the same to all the Presbyteries of this Church accordingly. And, with the design of making this their recommendation completely known, the Assembly ordain, that it be printed in a commodious form, and transmitted to the several Presbyteries; and also, that a copy be sent to every Theological Professor in the different universities of Scotland, to be read by him at some convenient time towards the beginning of each session.

Sess. 9, May 28, 1803.—Address to his Majesty, on the Providential Discovery and Defeat of a most Atrocious and Daring Conspiracy.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, humbly approach the throne, to express our sincere and heartfelt congratulations on the Providential discovery and defeat of the late most atrocious and daring conspiracy against your Majesty's person and government. Enjoying the blessings of your mild and equitable administration, witnessing in your conduct the unceasing exercise of every public and private virtue, and convinced, by long experience, of your affectionate concern for the happiness of all your people, we look back with astonishment and indignation on the desperate plans of the disaffected; and with grateful hearts we bless the God of our fathers, who, in his great goodness, disappointed their counsels, and averted from us the projected horrors of insurrection and rebellion.

While we thus rejoice in the preservation of our Gracious Sovereign, and of the domestic tranquillity of our country, we cannot, at this interesting crisis, reflect without anxiety on the renewal of hostilities with France. As servants of the Prince of peace, lovers of our country, and of mankind, we feel all the sentiments of concern and regret which become us on the commencement of war. But when we consider the spirit of ambition and encroachment which actuates the present governors of the French nation; their violation of the rights of independent states, especially their undisguised determination to leave no expedient untried for diminishing the power and influence of Great Britain; their repeated and insulting attempts to interfere with the internal arrangements of this kingdom, and to procure, by menaces, an infringement of our free constitution; together with the arrogance or the neglect with which they have persisted to treat the remonstrances made in behalf of the just rights of your Majesty's crown and subjects—we cannot fail to be persuaded that the hostile measures to which your Majesty has at last so reluctantly resorted, had become indispensably necessary for maintaining the honour and security of the nation. Deeply impressed with these considerations, we shall omit no means becoming our station of cherishing in the people committed to our charge, that loyalty to the King, that submission to the laws, that zeal for the defence of their religion, of their liberties and independence, which the circumstances of the times so imperiously demand. Proud of the privileges which Britons enjoy, the people of this happy land feel, as one man, the inestimable value of the great interests that are now at stake; they see with due solicitude, but without dejection or fear, the dangers that threaten them. And we are persuaded, that, at this moment, we can do nothing which will be more acceptable to them, than to convey to the throne their fixed and unalterable resolution to defend, at all hazards, and against every aggressor, the honour and independence of their country.

We are thankful to Providence, that the seditious spirit which a few years ago had infected some of your Majesty's subjects in this part of the United Kingdom has now ceased to show itself. And we trust that the unanimity of the people, under the guidance of your Majesty's paternal wisdom, will, through the blessing of Heaven, be effectual for the protection of our national security, and for restoring to us, at no distant period, the blessings of a safe, honourable, and lasting peace.

That Almighty God may bless your Majesty's fleets and armies with success; that He may direct your councils, and make your reign long and prosperous; and that a race of kings of your royal line, friends of religion, liberty, and their country, may always sway the sceptre of these lands, are, through Christ, the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. It is with the highest satisfaction that we have again thought fit to sanction with our royal authority this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. Assured by the experience of a long course of years, we look forward with perfect confidence to the continuance of that zeal, wisdom, and moderation, which have uniformly marked your proceedings, and to a steady perseverance in those sentiments of loyalty and affection towards us and our government for which you have ever been distinguished. On our part, you may firmly rely upon our effectual co-operation and support, and upon our unalterable resolution to maintain the Church you represent in the full possession and enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, as by law established. The objects of your care are both arduous and important. To your charge are committed the most essential interests of my people, their morals and their religion; the indispensable means of their happiness here, and the only ground of their hopes hereafter. Like faithful shepherds of the flock, you will watch over them with unceasing vigilance; and if this be at all times your bounden duty, and the effectual discharge of it so essentially necessary to the public welfare, I need not remind you what a peculiar degree of importance is at present attached to it, and how nearly we are concerned to secure, by our unremitting and best endeavours, in these awful times of difficulty and danger, that Divine protection with which we have been hitherto so signally favoured. We have again thought fit to constitute and appoint our right trusty and well-beloved Francis Lord Napier to be our Commissioner, and to represent our person in this General Assembly, not doubting but that he will continue to be acceptable to you, as well from his zeal and affection for our person and government, as for the knowledge and uprightness with which he will fulfil the duties of this high and important office. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 9th day of May 1804, in the forty-fourth year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

C. YORKE.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1804.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour the present General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was received with the most lively sentiments of respect and gratitude.

The entire approbation which, from the experience of a long course of years, your Majesty has condescended to express of former General Assemblies, is to us a most valuable recompence for our past labours in the discharge of duty. And it forcibly reminds us of the many signal blessings which, by the favour of Divine Providence, our Church and nation have enjoyed under the auspices of a King, to whose heart nothing is dearer than the happiness of his people, and to whose regard nothing is a more effectual recommendation than a sincere desire to promote that object.

The confidence which your Majesty is pleased to repose in this General Assembly we are anxious to justify and confirm, as well by persevering attention to the great interests of religion and order, as by that moderation in our proceedings, and that mutual charity which are so congenial to the spirit of the Gospel, and so conducive to the dignity and usefulness of our deliberations.

We receive with the utmost satisfaction the renewed assurance of your Majesty's unalterable resolution to maintain the Church we represent in the full possession and enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, as by law established; and in the exercise of our functions we firmly rely upon your Majesty's effectual co-operation and support.

We are deeply sensible of the importance of the objects of our care. We know and feel that to our charge are committed the most essential interests of your Majesty's people in this part of the United Kingdom, their morals and their religion; the indispensable means of their happiness here, and the only ground of their hopes hereafter.

Animated in the work of our ministry by your Majesty's affectionate recommendations, we will watch over the flock with unceasing vigilance, and be careful to lead them in those paths of righteousness, in which we may hope to obtain the continuance of that Divine protection with which we have hitherto been so signally favoured. We feel that this is at all times our bounden duty, and that a peculiar degree of importance is attached to the effectual discharge of it in the present times of difficulty and danger. We should be wanting, however, in the duty we owe to those over whom we preside in the offices of religion, if we did not assure your Majesty that their good dispositions in the present trying circumstances at once encourage and assist our exertions.

The re-appointment of the Right Honourable Francis Lord Napier to represent your Majesty's royal person in this General Assembly is to us most acceptable. The experience we have had of the affection of that Noble Lord for your Majesty's person and government; of the knowledge and uprightness with which he has formerly fulfilled the duties of that high office; and of his zeal for the interest of the Church of Scotland, entitles him to our highest honour and regard.

We receive your Majesty's royal donation for the propagation of Christian knowledge, and the principles of the Reformed religion, in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, as a pleasing expression of your Majesty's unremitting attention to the best interests of your people. It shall be our care to secure, by a faithful and considerate application of this bounty, the valuable objects for which it has been bestowed.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty's person, and prosper the administration of your government; that He may bless the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and that, after a long and happy reign over a loyal and affectionate people, you may at length be received to the glories of the heavenly kingdom, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

JOHN INGLIS, Moderator.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1804.—Address to his Majesty on the present Arduous Situation of Public Affairs.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne, in the present alarming situation of the affairs of Europe, with sentiments of the most sincere and affectionate attachment to your Majesty's person and government.

Persuaded that your Majesty's paternal care preserved to us the blessings of peace, so long as they could be retained with safety and honour, we beheld with indignation that spirit of aggression and aggrandisement in the ruler of France, which obliged your Majesty to draw the sword in defence of every thing we regard as dear. His lawless ambition, not satisfied with the overthrow of several independent governments, with the extinction of some of the most free and prosperous states, and with the subjugation of France itself to a most odious tyranny, seems to aim at nothing less than universal domination.

Regarding the prosperity and power of Britain as the chief obstacles to the progress of his despotism, he directs all his force, and that of his allies, to the invasion of our country, and, by a mighty and unprecedented armament, in the fierceness of his rage, threatens us with desolation.

Although we consider the present war as the most arduous and important contest in which our country has ever been engaged; although we feel that our religion, our liberties, our laws, and our existence as a nation, are at stake; yet, trusting in the justice of our cause, and looking up with humble confidence for the continuance of that Divine protection which has hitherto supported us, we behold the immense preparations of the enemy without dismay.

We rejoice in that ardour and enthusiasm in the cause of their country which animate all classes of your Majesty's subjects; and we have peculiar satisfaction in being able to assure your Majesty that this generous and patriotic spirit glows in the hearts of the people of Scotland.

We beg leave to congratulate your Majesty on the success which has attended your arms, in confining within their ports formidable armaments, intended to carry war, in all its horrors, into the heart of our country, and on the important conquests achieved by your forces in the East and West Indies.

Happy in the inestimable privileges we enjoy under your Majesty's mild and paternal rule, we trust that the united efforts of a brave nation will, by the blessing of the Almighty, defend and maintain our free constitution, against the hostile enterprises of a haughty enemy, and convince him that he shall never be able to wrest from us and from our children the prosperity at which he may repine.

That the God of armies, the Arbitrer of battles, may give success to the means employed for the protection and security of our country; that He may shield your Majesty's fleets and armies, and lead them to victory; that He may speedily restore to us the blessings of an honourable, an advantageous, and a lasting peace; that, happy in your family and government, your Majesty may long reign in the hearts of your subjects; and that descendants of your illustrious house, steadily maintaining the civil and religious rights of a free people, may sway the British sceptre to the latest posterity, are the fervent prayers of,

Most Gracious Sovereign, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 18, 1805.—Address to his Majesty on the present Arduous Situation of Public Affairs.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in our General Assembly, desire to approach the throne in the present circumstances of national danger, for the purpose of expressing our affectionate and zealous attachment to your Majesty's person and government.

Deeply impressed with a sense of the invaluable blessings which our country has so long enjoyed, under the operation of equal laws, and under your Majesty's mild and auspicious reign, we cannot look, without much anxiety, to the progress of a war in which the avowed design of our inveterate foe is the subversion of our liberty and independence. And we lament that the conduct of another nation, under the influence of the enemy with whom we chiefly contend, has, at length, rendered it indispensable for your Majesty to extend still more widely the scene of this arduous contest. Yet it is impossible not to perceive, in the present condition of that nation, and of other states that have yielded to the same domineering foe, the most decisive evidence that our safety, under God, depends upon a spirit of vigorous and determined resistance, proportioned to whatever shall be the difficulties, and the necessary duration of the war in which we are engaged.

As servants of the God of peace, we rejoice to hear that a pacific overture had been received by your Majesty. But while we repose entire confidence in your Majesty's councils, for acceding at any time to such terms of peace as may be consistent with the permanent safety and interests of the British empire, we cannot forget that these objects are intimately connected with the general security and independence of Europe, and that the maintenance of our national honour is indispensable to our national safety. We, therefore, congratulate your Majesty on the patriotic zeal, so universally manifested by your subjects, as the best pledge of our ultimately rising superior to the power of our enemies. And feeling ourselves, in some measure, responsible for those under our own charge, we have much satisfaction in assuring your Majesty of the confirmed loyalty and ardent patriotism of the people of Scotland.

We are proud to think, that, notwithstanding the extensive preparations that were early made for the invasion of our coasts, the enemy has been hitherto deterred from the attempt by the well known state of our national defence, and the unexampled ardour that has been manifested in our country's cause; and, if the perseverance of our countrymen shall be equal to their ardour, we are confident that, under God, we shall remain a free and independent people.

While we look, therefore, to the great Arbiter of nations for his continued protection, we feel that no other worldly object is, in such circumstances, entitled to stand in competition with an unremitting discharge of our duty to our country. We pledge ourselves to our King, in the presence of God, that we shall be unceasing in our own endeavours to impress upon the people under our charge an indelible sense of what they owe to our national cause. And we hope, that to whatever period the destructive machinations of our enemies may be protracted, it will be found that Britons are not unprepared to defend an inheritance derived from men who thought it worthy to be purchased with their blood, and who have left it to us, but in trust, for the generations that are yet to come.

That Almighty God may continue to bless the means employed for our national defence;—that He may guide your Majesty's councils, and give success to your fleets and armies; that He may soon restore to us the blessings of an honourable and permanent peace;—that your Majesty may long reign over a free and loyal people; and that you may at length exchange an earthly for a heavenly crown, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 1, May 22, 1806.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The season of your annual meeting being arrived, we have thought fit to constitute and appoint our right trusty and well-beloved Francis Lord Napier to represent our royal person in your General Assembly. This appointment, we are confident, will be received by you as the best proof we can give, both of our firm attachment to the Christian religion, and of our tender regard for the particular rights and privileges of our Church of Scotland; inasmuch as we are firmly persuaded, that the well-known zeal of this our Commissioner in the cause of revealed religion, as well as his long experience in the ecclesiastical affairs of this part of our United Kingdom, will render him an active supporter of all good measures, and an able adviser in all difficulties. That you are met together in times of extraordinary pressure and evident danger, both to Church and State, is a remark which cannot fail forcibly to strike every member of your learned and venerable body, and that your duties, as pastors of the Church of Scotland, are, in consequence, greatly multiplied, and your responsibility much increased, is an observation too plain to require illustration. At no former period of our history have we stood more in need of the aid and support of religion; at no time have sound principles and virtuous practice been more necessary to our preservation as a Church and nation. To you, therefore, to whom are entrusted the oracles of God, and to whose lot it has fallen to instruct our subjects, and lead them in the paths of righteousness, to you we naturally look, in the hour of trial, for a conscientious and vigorous discharge of your pastoral duties. We expect from your tried wisdom and approved virtue, that your flocks will be fed with the wholesome doctrines of the Gospel; that the morality you inculcate, and the rules of good conduct which you prescribe, will be constantly referred to, and regulated by the pure standard of God's holy Word; and that faith in our Lord Jesus Christ will be so preached by you, as to become a motive to newness of life, and an obligation to reformation of manners. You cannot fail to have noticed that some have lately attempted to build on other foundations, vainly relying on false philosophy and worldly wisdom; but their principles have been made manifest of what sort they are; that they are not principles of purity and excellence, but of refinement and subtilty. But we are assured of better things concerning you; that as heretofore you have proved yourselves discreet and diligent dispensers of God's holy Word, so now, that your best endeavours will not be wanting to the good of our Church, and the welfare of our people, and that you will so adorn the one by your life and doctrine, and so zealously and faithfully watch over the other, that both, by your guidance, may continually advance in happiness and prosperity. Wherefore, most earnestly recommending you to the Divine blessing and protection, we heartily bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 12th day of May 1806, in the 46th year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

SPENCER.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 24, 1806.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter with which your Majesty hath been pleased to honour this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was received with the warmest feelings of respect and gratitude.

The renewed appointment of Lord Napier to represent your royal person in this Assembly is to us a most gratifying pledge of your Majesty's firm attachment to the Christian religion, and tender regard for the particular rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland. His well-known zeal in the cause of revealed religion, and his long experience in the ecclesiastical affairs of Scotland, teach us to look to him with confidence and respectful affection, as the steady friend of our National Church.

Met, as we now are, in times of extraordinary pressure and evident danger, both to Church and State, we feel that our duties, as pastors of the Church of Scotland, are, in consequence, greatly multiplied, and our responsibility much increased. Sensible that at no period of our history have we stood more in need of the aid and support of religion; that at no time have sound principles and virtuous practice been more necessary to our preservation as a Church and nation; entrusted with the oracles of God, that we may instruct our people, and lead them in the paths of righteousness, we feel the strength of the obligations which bind us, in this hour of trial, to a conscientious and vigorous discharge of our pastoral duty.

Impressed with these sentiments, and deeply affected with your Majesty's paternal admonitions, we do most solemnly pledge ourselves, through the assistance of Divine grace, to feed our flocks with the wholesome doctrines of the Gospel; to regulate, by the pure standard of God's holy Word, the morality which we teach, and so to preach faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, as that it may become a motive to newness of life. We pledge ourselves especially to lay to heart the warning, so impressively and seasonably given by your Majesty, concerning the attempts which some have lately made to build on other foundations, vainly relying on false philosophy and worldly wisdom. Knowing the principles of such men to be as impure in their source as debasing in their tendency, we trust that we shall never forget the sacred duty of keeping the Church of Scotland free from their stain.

The approbation which your Majesty is pleased to bestow on our former labours shall animate our future exertions to promote the good of this Church, and the welfare of the people under our charge. We pray that the God whom we serve may enable us so to adorn the one by our life and doctrines, and so zealously and faithfully to watch over the other, that, by his blessing on our humble endeavours, the happiness and prosperity of both may be advanced.

We entreat your Majesty to accept our humble acknowledgments for your attention to the advancement of religious knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. Your royal donation for this purpose we shall faithfully endeavour to apply, so as most effectually to promote the design for which it is bestowed.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, may direct your Majesty's councils, and prosper your government; that He may bless our gracious Queen, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all your Royal Family; that He may long preserve your Majesty to reign over a free, a loyal, and a virtuous people; and that He may, through Christ, bestow upon you hereafter an eternal crown, are the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 24, 1806.—Address to his Majesty on the present Arduous Situation of Public Affairs.

Most gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne of our gracious Sovereign, with the unanimous expression of our affectionate and zealous attachment to your person and government.

The present circumstances of national danger unite the exertions of all your Majesty's faithful subjects; and the immense accessions of strength acquired by our enemy on the Continent of Europe, although they increase the difficulties of the arduous contest in which the nation is engaged, invigorate in our hearts every sentiment of loyalty and public spirit. In the whole course of his unexampled career, the present ruler of France has never obtained any triumph over Britain, and he has not hitherto been able even to attempt the execution of his threats of invasion. The protecting arm of Divine Providence has been extended over a nation which has persevered in opposing its influence to the wild progress of inordinate ambition. A succession of the most brilliant naval victories, clouded, alas! by the death of Lord Viscount Nelson, but illumined by the glory of many heroes who emulate his fame, has given security to our shores, our colonies, and our commerce; and the magnanimity and patriotism with which all orders of men combine their efforts in maintaining the independence of Britain, have been rewarded by its remaining, amidst the wreck of nations, a great and powerful state, with all its institutions entire, with its spirit unbroken, and its dominions enlarged by the most valuable conquests.

As servants of the Prince of Peace, we pray for a termination of the present commotions of Europe. But beholding with just indignation the growing iniquity of a system which shakes the stability of all regular governments, and reading in the fate of many states on the Continent, an awful warning against that unwise policy which would seek to escape present danger by grasping at a delusive peace, inconsistent with the principles of justice and honour, we recognize your Majesty's paternal care for your people, in calling forth the resources of this flourishing country to resist the repeated aggressions of our foe. Far from murmuring at the sacrifices and burdens which the duration of the contest may require, we join the unanimous voice of our fellow-subjects in applauding the promptitude and energy of the measures lately taken for vindicating our just rights in the north of Europe. And we trust in God, that the wisdom and vigour of your Majesty's councils, the valour and good conduct of your fleets and armies, and the firmness, fortitude, and good sense of a loyal people, will enable your Majesty to conduct the operations of a vigorous and successful war to an honourable conclusion.

Deeply impressed with a sense of the sacred duty which, at such a time as this, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland owe to their country, we pledge ourselves to your Majesty that we will continue, in our several stations, to exert our influence with alacrity and zeal in cherishing those sentiments of public spirit which become a people who know the value of their unrivalled constitution, and in promoting that righteousness which exalteth a nation, which is the best expression of gratitude to the God of our fathers, and the best encouragement to hope that he will continue to bless our land.

That Almighty God may give success to your Majesty's arms by sea and land; that the means employed for the national defence may effectually defeat the designs of our enemy; that peace and truth may meet in our days; that the administration of your Majesty's government may continue to establish your throne in the hearts of your subjects, and that descendants of your illustrious house, forming themselves upon your example, may sway the British sceptre with justice and renown to the latest posterity, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

*Sess. 7, May 29, 1806.—Overture anent Ordained Assistants and Successors.

Whereas doubts have been entertained, and different practices have prevailed in the Church, respecting the situation of ordained assistants and successors, it is humbly overtured, that the General Assembly shall enact and ordain, that a person who has been ordained assistant and successor to the minister of a parish, cannot sit as an elder in the kirk-session of the parish, and that neither his character as assistant, nor the powers conveyed to him by ordination, do, of themselves, entitle him to summon meetings of session, or to preside there. That the right to sit and vote in the judicatories of the Church, which constitutionally belongs to the minister of the parish, remains entire in his person, it can neither be assumed by the assistant, nor communicated to him by the minister, without the authority of the Church. That when the minister of the parish is incapable of exercising this right, the Presbytery may grant authority to the ordained assistant and successor to summon meetings of session, to preside there, and may also, if they see cause, grant him authority to sit in the Presbytery and Synod, and a title to be elected a member of the General Assembly; but that the authority and title thus conferred on the assistant and successor shall cease whensoever the Presbytery find that the minister of the parish is restored to the capacity of exercising his constitutional right.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. Having had full and continued proof of the sufficiency and fidelity of our right trusty and well-beloved Francis Lord Napier, that he is a person every way qualified for rightly managing and discharging the duties of our Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, we have thought fit again to nominate and appoint him to represent our royal person at the approaching meeting of your venerable body. We doubt not that this our choice will be acceptable to you, and that it will be considered by you as affording an undeniable proof of the sense which we entertain of that attachment to us which you have not ceased to manifest, and of the laudable exertions with which you have constantly promoted the accomplishment of those objects which, through a faithful and approved Commissioner, we have heretofore thought it our duty to recommend to your special care. We rest assured, that the same attachment and the same exertions will still prevail among you, and that the happiness which has been experienced by all ranks of people, under the blessings of an invaluable constitution, may still continue to be felt. We are confident you will inculcate among those committed to your care the indispensable necessity of a due submission to the laws, and a just veneration for all constituted establishments and authorities. And that we may not be wanting in that encouragement which we have not failed to afford to those who labour to establish, upon a firm and sure basis, those blessings which, under Divine Providence, we are now permitted to enjoy, we repeat to you our unalterable attachment to the Christian religion, and the unceasing regard which we entertain for the peculiar privileges of our Church of Scotland; and we are persuaded, that by the zealous endeavours of our representative to support its rights, and by the continual care and watchfulness of you its appointed pastors, those principles of true religion and piety will grow up and be established among you, upon which alone the welfare and the happiness of them can be surely founded. If there be other principles, which some have not feared to trust to and to teach, be assured that such men have been blinded by the delusive novelties of false philosophy; and that although the enemies of God's Holy Word should increase your labours, and multiply the difficulties with which you have to contend, the doctrines of true religion, inculcated by your precepts, and sanctioned by your exemplary practice, will confound and put them to shame. To you we commit, with confidence, the great and sacred trust of watching over the morals of our people throughout an extensive and important part of our United Kingdom. To your guidance we still anxiously look to lead them in the paths of righteousness. We have seen, with increasing joy, the example afforded by your own wisdom and virtue, constantly teaching them to bear up against all the dangers and difficulties which have surrounded them; and we remain in the full persuasion, that the wholesome doctrines of the Gospel, which you will not fail to recommend, will again support them in the hour of trial. Well-beloved, we recommend you most earnestly to God's holy blessing and protection, and heartily bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 14th day of May 1807, in the forty-seventh year of our reign.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1807.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most gracious letter to this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland hath been received with the strongest feelings of respect and gratitude.

The renewed appointment of Francis Lord Napier to represent your royal person in this Assembly we regard as a most acceptable proof of your Majesty's approbation and favour. Our experience of the ability with which he executes the duties of his high trust, and of his zeal for maintaining the privileges of the Church of Scotland, have secured to him our respectful and cordial attachment.

The approbation which your Majesty is pleased to express of our exertions in promoting the objects which, on former occasions, your paternal wisdom has recommended to our care, while it excites our gratitude, and strengthens our affection towards your Majesty, will animate our endeavours to perpetuate the happiness which hath long been experienced by all ranks of people under the blessings of an invaluable constitution. We will inculcate among those committed to our care the indispensable necessity of a due submission to the laws, and a just veneration for all constituted establishments and authorities. We acknowledge, with thankfulness and joy, the encouragement afforded by your Majesty to all who labour to establish, upon a firm and sure basis, those blessings which, under Divine Providence, are enjoyed in this happy land. And we rely with the fullest confidence on the assurance which your Majesty is pleased to renew, of your unalterable attachment to the Christian religion, and of your unceasing regard for the peculiar privileges of the Church of Scotland. Under the sanction of your royal authority, and the blessing of that Divine Master whom we serve, we trust that success will crown our exertions to disseminate those principles of true religion and piety on which alone our national welfare can securely rest. If there be other principles which some have not feared to trust to and to teach, we are well assured that such men have been blinded by the delusive novelties of a false philosophy; and although the enemies of God's Holy Word may increase our labour, and multiply the difficulties with which we have to contend, we trust that, through the influence of Divine grace, we shall be enabled to prevail against them, by showing, out of a good conversation, our works with meekness of wisdom.

We feel all the importance of the trust reposed in us by your Majesty, and all the value of that praise with which your Majesty is graciously pleased to honour us; and we pray earnestly to Almighty God, that he would fit us to lead our people in the ways of righteousness, and to support them by the wholesome doctrines of the Gospel in the hour of trial.

We entreat your Majesty to accept our humble acknowledgments for your continued attention to the religious interests of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. It shall be our endeavour to apply your royal bounty, so as most effectually to promote the object for which it is bestowed.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty's person, and prosper your government;—that He may bless abundantly our gracious Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the members of your Illustrious House;—that He may long continue to us the blessings which we enjoy under your Majesty's auspicious reign; and that He may bestow upon you hereafter a crown of glory, are the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

*Sess. 3, May 23, 1807.—Address to his Majesty on the present arduous Situation of Public Affairs.

Most gracious Sovereign,

May it please your Majesty to accept the humble expression of the dutiful and loyal sentiments with which the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland presume to approach their gracious Sovereign.

It is the happiness of your people that, during an auspicious reign of forty-seven years, the conduct of your Majesty has been uniformly governed by the principles

* The following notice of this Address appears in the Abridgment of the Proceedings of 1807:—

“The draught of a loyal Address to his Majesty on the present situation of Public Affairs, being brought in and read, a motion was made and seconded, to approve of the Address. An objection was stated to the following clause standing part of the Address, viz. :—‘ We have lately seen the fences of that establishment upheld by the firm and dignified exercise of the constitutional prerogative of the Crown; and feeling the security which all our rights and privileges derive from the solicitude with which your Majesty discharges the duties of the Sovereign of a free people, we unite with our fellow-subjects in offering the affectionate tribute justly due to the royal cares for the public welfare.’ And, after reasoning, it was moved, that the above clause remaining part of the Address, the following addition should be made to it, viz., ‘ We venerate the concern which his Majesty manifests in all his conduct, at all times, for the religious interests of his people; yet, consistently with our principles as Presbyterians, and as members of a National Church which has the same legal establishment with the Church of England, we cannot but contemplate with regret the continuance of those circumstances which exclude Presbyterians from civil and military offices, without a public profession of Episcopacy; and we trust that the time will soon come, when the members of the Presbyterian and Episcopal Churches will be placed on an equal footing in all parts of his Majesty's dominions.’ After long reasoning, the vote was put, Approve or Amend; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried, by a great majority, Approve; and, therefore, the Assembly approved of the first paragraph of the Address as it stands. Against which sentence Sir Henry Moncreiff Wellwood entered his dissent, and those who should adhere to him were allowed to dissent at any after diet. It was afterwards moved and agreed to, to insert an additional paragraph to the Address. And which Address his Grace the Lord High Commissioner, at the Assembly's desire, undertook to transmit to his Majesty, along with the Answer to his Majesty's Letter.”—Ed. 1843.

which placed the House of Brunswick upon the throne of these realms; and the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, attached to those principles from conviction, as well as by their habits and institutions, recollect with peculiar satisfaction, that your Majesty has exhibited the brightest example of a sacred regard to the Protestant reformed religion. While, in the series of indulgences to Roman Catholic subjects, which have marked your Majesty's reign, we recognize the enlightened operation of a mild and tolerant spirit, we have always found your Majesty the faithful guardian of the Protestant establishment. We have lately seen the fences of that establishment upheld by the firm and dignified exercise of the constitutional prerogative of the crown, and feeling the security which all our rights and privileges derive from the solicitude with which your Majesty discharges the duties of the Sovereign of a free people, we unite with our fellow-subjects in offering the affectionate tribute justly due to the royal cares for the public welfare.

In recollecting your Majesty's uniform zeal for the interest of religion, justice, and humanity; the many public measures for the promotion of these great interests by which your Majesty's reign has been distinguished, and the exalted character which, under your Majesty's government, the British nation has acquired; it is with heartfelt satisfaction that we congratulate your Majesty on the final abolition of the African Slave Trade, which had so long polluted the commerce, and tarnished the honour of the British name. We feel, in common with the great body of our fellow-subjects, that the Act of the last Session of Parliament, which prohibited the further importation of slaves into the West India Colonies, will ever be regarded as one of the most splendid events of your Majesty's reign; and while it proclaims to the world the justice of the British character, will send the tidings of peace and benevolence to the injured natives of Africa.

We watch with anxiety, but without dismay, the progress of the interesting events that distinguish the times in which we live. We lament the calamities of war, but we have the consolation of thinking, that although the inordinate ambition of our enemy renders the prolongation of the arduous contest indispensably necessary for the security and honour of the British empire, the resources of the country are not exhausted, and the spirit of the people is unbroken. While we hear with admiration and gratitude of the gallant achievements of your Majesty's forces by sea and land, we behold all around us submitting patiently to the burdens and sacrifices to which the voice of their country calls them; and we account it our bounden duty to exert all our influence in cherishing that true patriotism which unites all orders of men in the national defence.

That the God of battles may bless your Majesty's arms;—that the wisdom and vigour of your Majesty's councils may continue to establish your throne in the hearts of your subjects; and that the British sceptre may, till the latest posterity, be swayed by Princes of your Illustrious House, formed by your example to maintain the liberties, and to possess the confidence of a grateful people, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

[The General Assembly, upon report of their Committee appointed to prepare an enactment for printing Commissions, approve of the following enactment for printing the Commissions from Presbyteries and Burghs. But in regard that the Forms of Commissions from the several Universities differ in some respects from one another, judged it best to continue them on their present footing.]

Whereas various inconveniences have been found to arise from the present usage of the Church, with respect to the mode of making out commissions to the members of Assembly;

The General Assembly enact and appoint, that in future all commissions from Presbyteries and Burghs shall be printed by the printer to the Church, under the superintendence of the clerks of Assembly, agreeably to the forms now authorised by the General Assembly, with necessary blanks for names, designations, dates, and qualifications—[Here must be narrated in a note the qualifications of Elders of Burghs;]—and the expense of the same defrayed out of the funds of the Church.

That a sufficient number of said blank commissions shall be forwarded by the clerks of Assembly to all clerks of Presbyteries and Burghs, as soon as said commissions can be printed; and that they shall be supplied by the clerks of Assembly with copies of the same from time to time, as occasion may require, upon making a demand to that effect.

That although every commission from a Presbytery must contain the names of all the persons chosen to represent that Presbytery, the Assembly nevertheless enact, that it shall be competent for each of said delegates to require from the Presbytery a regularly attested copy of the commission, which the said Presbytery must furnish, upon the same being demanded in due time. It being understood, that only one copy of the attested commission, from each Presbytery, shall be required by the Assembly in making up the roll of its members; provided always, that if a commission shall have been given in to the clerk for that purpose, in any respect defective or erroneous, it shall be competent for any other of the delegates from that Presbytery to give in another commission from his Presbytery, if he any has, which, if accurate, shall be sustained.

And as it may sometimes happen, that the clerks of Presbyteries, more especially of such Presbyteries as are situated in remote parts of the country, may not be in possession of such printed commissions as may be wanted, the Assembly appoint, that in all such cases the commission shall be written out according to the forms and usage of the Church previous to the date of this enactment.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. We are pleased again to appoint our right trusty and well-beloved Francis Lord Napier to be our Commissioner at the approaching General Assembly of your venerable body. We doubt not that this our choice will be acceptable to you, and that it will be an additional proof of our care and attention to the general interests of religion, and more particularly of our attachment and regard to the Church of Scotland, to whose care so considerable a portion of our subjects is entrusted, to be by them instructed in the great and awful truths of religion, and to learn from them those unerring rules of morality, which are in vain sought to be grounded on the speculative reasonings, or the unsatisfactory hypotheses of philosophy. Convinced, as we are, of the qualifications of your venerable body, to preserve, in their original purity, those doctrines which have so long flourished in your Church, we still think it more particularly our duty to call forth your zeal, at a time when menaced by so gigantic a power, and nearly surrounded by the instruments of his unprincipled devastation. We feel confident in the loyal endeavours and persevering efforts of our subjects, from a conviction of the justice with which these efforts have been directed uniformly in the cause of virtue and morality; and trusting, that however ill we may have deserved of that Almighty power, by whose command alone nations and empires rise and fall, flourish and decay, that still his mercy is infinite, and that he will not rigorously visit the sins of his people, or send the avenging angel to destroy this country, where alone religion, virtue, morality, and honour, are still respected: But, that these our hopes and expectations may be realized, it behoves us more particularly to exhort you to activity in the duties imposed upon your offices, most carefully to repress every irregularity and abuse, which time, accident, or evil-designing persons may have introduced in the Church government; and, lastly, most earnestly do we entreat your spiritual aid and assistance, by your exhortations, to prepare the persons committed to your charge for the many hardships which this arduous contest may impose upon them. Convinced, therefore, well-beloved, of your attachment to us, we commend you most earnestly to God's holy keeping and protection, and heartily bid you farewell.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1808.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter with which your Majesty hath been pleased to honour this meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland hath been received with equal respect and gratitude.

The renewed appointment of Francis Lord Napier to be your Majesty's High Commissioner in this Assembly is in the highest degree acceptable to the Church of Scotland. We regard it as a proof of your Majesty's care and attention to the general interests of religion, and more particularly of your gracious attachment and regard to our National Church, that your royal person is represented among us by one whom we so highly and so justly value.

We are deeply impressed with the importance of the trust committed to us, of instructing so considerable a portion of your Majesty's subjects in the great and awful truths of religion, and in those unerring rules of morality, of which the foundation is sought in vain in mere speculative reasoning, or in the unsatisfying hypotheses of philosophy.

It is our anxious wish and hope, that those doctrines which have so long flourished in our Church may still be preserved in their original purity. And we are most sincerely grateful for the paternal solicitude with which your Majesty calls forth our zeal in their defence, at a time when we are menaced by so gigantic a power, and nearly surrounded by the instruments of his unprincipled devastation. It shall be our earnest study that the loyal endeavours and persevering efforts of your Majesty's subjects may never be wanting in the cause of virtue and morality, that religion and honour may still be respected in our land; and we trust, in the infinite mercy of God, that however ill we have deserved of that Almighty power, by whose command alone empires rise or fall, he will not rigorously visit the sins of his people, nor send forth the avenging angel to destroy. We shall endeavour to guard, with the most vigilant care, against every irregularity or abuse, which time, accident, or the attempts of evil-designed persons, may have a tendency to introduce into our Church government. And we entreat your Majesty to believe, that every exhortation which it is in our power to employ shall be used in preparing the people under our charge for the many hardships which they may be called to endure in the arduous contest in which we are at present involved.

We have received, with respectful gratitude, and shall endeavour faithfully and zealously to employ, your Majesty's royal donation of L.1000, for propagating the knowledge of the Gospel in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

We entreat your Majesty to be at all times assured of our affectionate attachment to your person and government; and that Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty and prosper your councils;—that He may bless abundantly our gracious Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the members of your Illustrious House;—that He may long continue to us the inestimable benefits which we enjoy under your Majesty's reign; and that He may bestow upon you hereafter a crown of glory, are the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 4, May 21, 1808.—Address to his Majesty on the present Arduous Situation of Public Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in the General Assembly, embrace the earliest opportunity of approaching your throne at this interesting juncture, to express our sincere and inviolable attachment to your royal person and government.

We join most cordially with our fellow-subjects, in every affectionate testimony of loyalty to our most gracious Sovereign, and of zeal for the honour and happiness of our country.

As servants of the God of peace, we deplore the continuance of war, and its attendant miseries. We behold, with astonishment and concern, the alarming progress of the arms of France on the Continent of Europe; and while we see our implacable enemy overturning the thrones of princes, and trampling upon the rights of nations, we are sensible of the danger to which our dearest interests, as a nation, are exposed. But we derive much encouragement from reflecting, that the vigilance, wisdom, and vigour of your Majesty's councils, have hitherto, by the blessing of Heaven, frustrated the hostile designs of the unnatural combination formed against us; and we trust, that your Majesty, supported by the wise and generous patriotism of your faithful subjects, will be enabled, under God, to bring this arduous contest to an issue, successful and glorious for Britain.

We regard it as our immediate duty, in such a time of national exertion, to be indefatigably diligent in the functions of our sacred office, that we may lead those entrusted to our care to a due consideration of the awful judgments which are in the earth, impress them with a deep sense of their manifold transgressions, and incite them to such a reformation in their hearts and lives as may, through the merits of our Lord Jesus Christ, avert from our country the calamities which our iniquities justly deserve.

That the God of battles may crown with victory your Majesty's fleets and armies;—that the present war may speedily terminate in an honourable and lasting peace;—and that your Majesty may long reign the beloved Sovereign of a free and happy people, are the sincere and earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, most faithful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 20, 1809.—Address to his Majesty on the present Arduous Situation of Public Affairs.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne with sentiments of the warmest attachment to your person, family, and government.

In the present alarming situation of the affairs of Europe we rejoice in the pledges of national safety which, under Heaven, we enjoy in your Majesty's paternal solicitude, and in the wisdom and vigour of your councils. From a view of the subversion of ancient governments, and the wreck of nations, we frequently turn our eyes, with heart-felt joy and exultation, to our unimpaired constitution in Church and State, the best which human wisdom ever devised, and administered by a Sovereign who is at once a pattern of religion, the guardian of liberty, and the father of his people.

While we have beheld your Majesty employed in promoting national happiness, and in extending equal protection to all your subjects, we have lately contemplated, with the deepest interest and anxiety, your magnanimous and humane interposition in favour of the injured and oppressed nations of Spain and Portugal. To resist the shock of that power, before which almost all others have been swept away, as by a torrent, and to interpose between suffering nations and universal subjugation, was a measure worthy of a generous people, under the government of a wise and patriotic King. We observed, therefore, with delight, that your Majesty's liberal offers of assistance to these oppressed States were unanimously approved of, and warmly seconded by your people, and that admiration and affection mingled with their loyalty to the best of Sovereigns.

We beg leave to congratulate your Majesty on the various enterprises, both by sea and land, in which the admirable discipline and steady courage of the British forces have lately triumphed over superior numbers; achievements which reflect signal honour on those who were more immediately concerned, and glory on the British name. Whatever effect they may have on the fate of our allies, they give us ground to trust that, under the protection of Heaven, we shall be able to resist the fiercest attacks of our enemies, and to transmit unimpaired to posterity those invaluable blessings which, as a nation, we have so long enjoyed.

As subjects of the Prince of Peace, we pray for the termination of that destructive war in which we are involved; but, in the meantime, we submit, without murmur or complaint, to those burdens and privations which it necessarily imposes. Sensible that not only our safety, but our existence as a nation, depends on our firm and persevering exertions against the common enemy; and looking for success to the Ruler of nations, we will not cease to cherish in our people that unanimity and public spirit which become those who are contending for their most valuable and dearest rights. We will teach them to make a wise improvement of those judgments which are abroad in the earth, and to cultivate that righteousness which exalteth a nation, that God may avert from our country those calamities which our iniquities have deserved.

That the Lord of Hosts may crown the heads of our brave countrymen, by sea and land, with victory and honour;—that their success may be the means of securing to us a lasting and an honourable peace;—that your Majesty may long reign over a free, a loyal, and happy people:—and that you may hereafter receive a heavenly crown, are the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. Being desirous, and deeming it good for the propagation of reformed religion, that the ministers and elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland should hold their annual meeting at the appointed period, which is now at hand, we have sanctioned the same accordingly with our royal authority. And seeing that, by reason of other weighty affairs, we cannot ourselves be present, we have commissioned our right trusty and well-beloved Lord Napier to represent us on this solemn occasion.

We are confident in thus delegating our authority, that the zeal and fidelity which have heretofore marked the character of this our Commissioner, and secured to him the attention and approbation of the members of your venerable body, will again become conspicuous in him; and that the important and holy exhortations which, on this occasion, we find it more especially necessary to charge him with, will be received by you with all earnestness.

We confide to him, above all things, the renewed assurances which he has uniformly conveyed to you, of our firm and unalterable attachment to the doctrines of the Christian religion, and of our constant and tender regard for the peculiar privileges of the Church of Scotland; and we cherish the hope, that, seeing by past experience the beneficial influence of these doctrines, and the sincerity with which we protect you in the promulgation of them, you will still continue to prefer the precepts which they recommend, and to practise, with all constancy, the conduct which they approve.

To the neglect of these salutary principles and holy laws we attribute the adoption of wild and speculative notions, entertained by misguided men, and the manifold errors which prevail among us in these times. We have witnessed, with concern, their extending influence, and have marked, with regret, their baneful effects. To correct these errors, and to expose the fallacious prospects which are held out to captivate the weak, and seduce the unwary, we call upon you to lend yourselves with all assiduity and vigilance.

If the specious theories of modern philosophy, and the persevering energies of her advocates, are offered for their admiration, you will teach them to avoid the counsels of hypocrisy, and to follow rather the example of those that do well. You will guard them against the violent and intemperate followers of pretended patriotism, showing what manner of men they are; and you will set before them the sober demeanour and honest endeavours of the true disciples of the Gospel, labouring thereby to convince all men of the advantages which are derived from a due and proper obedience to the laws and ordinances which wisdom has established, and discouraging, by the sobriety of your own lives, the principles which tend only to the subversion of all good government and social order.

The great experience of our faithful representative, in these and other matters, which concern the grave deliberations of your solemn Assembly, will aid and assist you in the discharge of those difficult duties which we now impose upon you. He will satisfy you of our determination to support you under every discouraging embarrassment, and of our conviction, that, by timely caution, and the firm, but prudent conduct on your part, which we unceasingly recommend, the virtuous and upright will become more steadfast—and those who for a time have wandered in search of novelty will be reclaimed, and hereafter follow the paths of righteousness.

We further recommend that you admonish those whom we place under your pastoral care, of the intimate connection which never fails to subsist between their more sacred duties and their temporal welfare; and that as they value the immediate benefits of the latter, in the enjoyment of the privileges of an excellent and admired constitution, so they will be mindful to cultivate and extend the observance of those spiritual obligations which alone can render their blessings permanent, or themselves happy.

Well-beloved! These are the sentiments by which we are animated at this momentous crisis. We feel that your duties as pastors of the Church of Scotland are multiplied, and that your responsibility is increased. But we know how much your tried wisdom has been able to accomplish, and how effectual is your approved virtue for the purposes of your delicate and important charge.

The good of our Church, and the welfare of our people, demand and receive our constant and most anxious care. And we rest satisfied, that the particular interests of the Church of Scotland, and the prosperity of that portion of our subjects who have been accustomed to receive from it, through you, the wholesome precepts of the Gospel, are objects which will be effectually promoted by your approaching deliberations.

Well-beloved! We earnestly recommend you to the care and protection of Divine Providence, and heartily bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 10th day of May 1810, in the fiftieth year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

R. RYDER.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1810.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour the present General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was received with the most lively sentiments of respect and gratitude.

We regard, with no common satisfaction, the assurance which your Majesty has thought fit to give us, that you deem it good for the propagation of reformed religion that the General Assembly of our National Church should hold their annual meeting at the appointed period; at the same time, we feel this high expression of your confidence, as a most powerful incitement to us to conduct our proceedings with that gravity and calmness which may best promote an object of such great importance. Considering the representation of your royal person in our General Assembly, as the symbol of that union between Church and State which tends to give vigour and stability to both, we receive, as a pleasing testimony of your paternal affection for the Church of Scotland, the appointment of Lord Napier to be your Majesty's Commissioner; and are prepared, by the experience of the zeal and fidelity which have heretofore marked his character, in the execution of his important trust, and secured to him the attention and approbation of the members of our body, to receive with all earnestness the important and holy exhortations with which, on this occasion, your Majesty has found it more especially necessary to charge him.

The renewed assurance which he has most impressively conveyed to us of your Majesty's firm and unalterable attachment to the doctrines of the Christian religion, and of your constant and tender regard for the peculiar privileges of the Church of Scotland, reminds us of the inestimable blessings which we enjoy under the just and beneficent administration of a King, who through a long reign has been the nursing father of the Church, and no less solicitous for the spiritual than the temporal interest of his people. We are anxious to justify the hope which your Majesty is pleased to entertain of this General Assembly, by continuing still to prefer, to all objects that can solicit our attention, the precepts which our holy faith recommends, and to practise, with unshaken constancy, the conduct which it approves, the beneficial influence of which we have long seen, under the secure and effectual protection which your Majesty has afforded to us in the promulgation of them.

We are deeply convinced that the adoption of wild and speculative notions, entertained by misguided men, and the manifest errors which prevail among us in these times, are justly ascribed to the neglect of the salutary principles and holy laws of our Divine religion; and in obedience to your paternal call, and in fulfilment of the duties of our sacred office, we solemnly pledge ourselves to your Majesty, that, through the grace of the Lord Jesus, we will lend ourselves, with all assiduity and vigilance, to correct those errors, and to expose the fallacious prospects which are held out to captivate the weak, and seduce the unwary.

It is our determined resolution, that if the specious theories of false philosophy, and the persevering efforts of her advocates, are offered to the admiration of the people entrusted to our charge, we will most affectionately teach them to avoid the counsels of hypocrisy, and to follow rather the example of those that do well. We shall not fail to guard them against the violent and intemperate followers of pretended patriotism, showing them what manner of men they are, and setting before them the sober demeanour and earnest endeavours of the true friends of the Gospel, striving, by sound principles and pure morals, to continue and increase that public happiness which we have derived from our envied constitution. By an appeal to the history of past ages, and the experience of the present times, we shall labour to convince all men of the advantages which result from a due and proper obedience to the laws and ordinances which wisdom has established; happy, if, by the sobriety of our lives, we shall be favoured, like the faithful men who have gone before us, as the instruments of Divine Providence, in discouraging the principles which tend only to the subversion of all good government and social order.

From the great experience of your Majesty's faithful representative in these and other matters which concern the interests of our Church, we confidently expect high encouragement in the discharge of the difficult duties recommended to us by your Majesty. He has fully satisfied us of your Majesty's determination to support us under every discouraging embarrassment, and of your royal conviction that, by timely caution, and the firm and prudent conduct recommended to us by your Majesty, our public ministrations may be blessed of God, to make the virtuous and upright more steadfast, and to reclaim those who may for a time have wandered in search of pernicious novelties.

Firmly convinced of the indissoluble connection which must ever subsist between the temporal welfare of a people and the faithful discharge of their more sacred duties, we shall exert our most strenuous endeavours to maintain and improve that happy union, by impressing a just sense of the blessed effects of it upon the minds of all those that are committed to our care; admonishing them, as they value the distinguished privileges of an excellent and admired constitution, to cultivate and extend the observance of those spiritual obligations which alone can render these blessings permanent, or themselves happy.

The condescending and indulgent communication of the pious and benevolent sentiments by which your Majesty is animated at this momentous crisis, has made a deep impression on our hearts; binding us by new ties of affection to your Majesty's person, and calling forth a more ardent zeal in behalf of your government. While we feel, that, from the general aspect of the times, our duties, as pastors of the Church of Scotland, are multiplied, and that our responsibility is increased, we feel also that our minds are invigorated by the firm reliance which your Majesty is pleased to repose in our wisdom and fidelity.

We rejoice in the renewed assurance, that the good of the Church and the welfare of your people are the objects of your Majesty's constant and most anxious care; and we have learned from long experience, that no services are more acceptable to your royal mind than those which are conducive to these great ends of your government. Under this impression, we shall labour with united effort to promote, by our deliberations, the particular interests of the Church of Scotland, and the prosperity and happiness of that portion of your subjects who have been accustomed to receive from it, through us, the wholesome precepts of the Gospel.

We receive your Majesty's royal donation for the propagation of Christian knowledge, and the principles of the Reformed religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, as a pleasing expression of your Majesty's unremitting attention to the best interests of your people. It shall be our care to secure, by a faithful application of this bounty, the valuable objects for which it has been bestowed.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty's person, and prosper the administration of your government;—that He may bless abundantly our gracious Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the members of your Illustrious House;—and that, after a long and happy reign over a loyal and affectionate people, you may at length be received to the glory of the heavenly kingdom, are the united and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

HUGH MEIKLEJOHN, Moderator.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1810.—Address to his Majesty upon the Fiftieth Anniversary of his Majesty's Accession to the Throne.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in General Assembly, embrace the first opportunity of approaching our gracious Sovereign, to join in those heartfelt congratulations which were lately so universally expressed by an attached and loyal people, on the fiftieth anniversary of your Majesty's accession to the throne of these kingdoms.

Satisfied that a virtuous and religious king is one of the greatest blessings which the Almighty can bestow upon a nation, we regard your Majesty's lengthened reign as a peculiar mark of the favour of Heaven, for which we are grateful to God, who has added this to the many distinguishing advantages conferred upon us as a people. During nearly half a century, your Majesty's subjects have had displayed to them from the throne an example of every public and private virtue; an example which has excited their respect and veneration, and by its powerful influence, has been of incalculable benefit in promoting their happiness.

Your Majesty has been called to discharge the duties of a highly important station, in one of the most eventful periods to be found in history; a period during which ancient institutions have been destroyed, thrones levelled with the ground, and all the relations which had for ages connected the great commonwealth of Europe torn asunder. In the midst of this general convulsion, Britain, under the auspicious rule of a wise and just monarch, has remained secure. Her unrivalled constitution has been preserved; her territory enlarged; her commerce, under the shelter of a triumphant navy, spread to the most distant regions; her agriculture and manufactures carried to an unexampled degree of perfection; whilst the peaceful pursuits of literature and science have been fostered, the pure administration of justice secured, and the temples of religion, where our fathers worshipped, untouched by the hand of sacrilege, have remained open to their posterity, to offer up their adorations to the Author of these varied gifts. This envied situation, Sire, in which Providence has been pleased to place our country, cannot fail of being truly gratifying to a Sovereign, who, as the father of his people, rejoices in their happiness; and this gratification must be greatly increased by the reflection, that your Majesty's conscientious and faithful discharge of your high duties has contributed so largely to preserve to your subjects the enjoyment of so many blessings.

Among the various circumstances which have marked an eventful reign, there is not one more honourable to your Majesty's feelings, or which reflects a brighter lustre on the British character, than the assistance which has been so liberally afforded to suffering nations, struggling to rescue themselves from the grasp of lawless ambition. The exertions made by your Majesty for this purpose have proved to the world that Britain is ready to expend her blood, as well as her treasure, in succouring her allies; whilst the successful valour of your troops, opposed to such superior numbers, has confirmed the expectations of the most sanguine—inspired the timid with confidence—and taught a vaunting foe how hopeless would be the attempt to combat freemen on their native soil. Whatever, under Divine Providence, may be the fate of the other nations of Europe, your subjects will have the consolation to think, that, following your Majesty's illustrious example, they acted the part which became a great and generous nation; and no page in history will be read by posterity with greater exultation, than that which records that Britons were the only people who dared, in defiance of a powerful usurper, to extend their arm for the protection of the oppressed; whilst their country remained the only asylum where the unfortunate exile found a refuge from the effects of his sanguinary vengeance.

Amidst the general benefits in which we participate with our fellow-subjects, we recollect, with the liveliest emotions, the peculiar marks of royal favour which this National Church has experienced during your Majesty's reign; and knowing that the faithful discharge of our sacred duties is the expression of gratitude most acceptable to your Majesty, we renew the pledge often given, to be zealous in our endeavours to cherish and strengthen those principles of loyalty to the King, and attachment to the constitution, by which the people under our care have long been animated; and to impress deeply upon their minds those sentiments of religion and virtue, which are the true source of private happiness and national greatness.

That Almighty God, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may prolong your Majesty's life, and prosper your administration; that He may bless the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and all your Royal Family; and that, after a prosperous reign upon earth, you may obtain a crown of glory, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

HUGH MEIKLEJOHN, Moderator.

Sess. ult., May 28, 1810.—Injunction respecting the Visitation of Schools.

The Committee appointed to consider the Reports from Presbyteries concerning Schools beg leave to report respectfully to the General Assembly as follows:—

1. That reports from Presbyteries anent the schools within their respective bounds are required by an Act of the Assembly, passed in 1799.

2. That the words of this Act are,—“The General Assembly enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church to report to the Assembly a list of all the schools within their bounds, specifying what is taught in each school;—whether the schools be held on the Lord’s Day, or on other days of the week;—in what way the schoolmasters are supported or maintained;—whether they act for themselves, or are employed by or under the direction of others;—what number of scholars attend each school at the time of making the report;—and, in general, whatever else shall appear to the Presbytery of importance respecting the schools within their bounds.”

3. That in consequence of this Act, (now recited,) there have been transmitted to the present Assembly reports from fifteen Presbyteries, viz.:—from Langholm, Annan, Chirnside, Jedburgh, Peebles, Lanark, Linlithgow, Dalkeith, Haddington, Dunbar, Dundee, Cupar, Aberdeen, Strathbogie, and Turriff.

4. That all these reports afford satisfactory evidence that the Presbyteries which have transmitted them have respectively either examined, or were in the course of examining, since the last meeting of the Assembly, the different schools under their superintendence.

But, lastly, in respect that so large a proportion of the Presbyteries of the Church have not transmitted reports concerning schools at all, and that some of those reports which have been transmitted do not contain informations as to several facts to which the Act of Assembly above mentioned directs attention to be paid, the committee humbly suggest that the Assembly should, on the present occasion, again enjoin, in terms of a similar resolution passed last year, “That Presbyteries be more attentive and particular in reporting their obedience to the Act of Assembly, 1799, respecting schools; that the clerks be instructed to see this injunction printed along with the Acts of Assembly; and that it be recommended to Presbyteries to take this injunction under consideration on the day they meet to elect their representatives to the General Assembly.”

Signed in name of the Committee, by

The General Assembly unanimously approve of this report, and enjoin accordingly.

X.

Sess. ult., May 28, 1810.—Preamble to the Subscription Paper in Aid of the Funds of the Church.

Of the thousand pounds sterling allowed annually by government for defraying the expenses of the Church, it is specified in the warrant, that L.750 shall be applied in paying the salaries of the officers of the Church; L.100 for incidental expenses; and L.150 for law proceedings; and intimation has been given by government that no addition will be made to the allowance of L.150.

But the General Assembly have ascertained that the allowance of L.150 is wholly insufficient for defending the general rights of the Church in questions that often occur, where no individual has any patrimonial interest; and for assisting clergymen in defending their rights, in those cases where the Church has been in use to grant aid.

The General Assembly, therefore, judging it essential to the public interest of the Church, and the relief of individual clergymen, that there should be an increase of the fund for these purposes, and seeing no other method of obtaining such increase but by a voluntary subscription, do hereby earnestly recommend that a general contribution shall immediately be made in the several Presbyteries by the ministers and elders of the Church; and do hereby direct, that the sums received be remitted without delay by the Moderator or Clerks of Presbyteries to the Procurator for the Church, to be by him reported to the next General Assembly.

XI.

Sess. ult., May 29, 1810.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

In the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty.

GEORGE, P. R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. The annual meeting of your venerable Assembly being again at hand, we are anxious to remind you, as heretofore, of the interest which we feel in your deliberations, and to express to you our confident hope, that the satisfaction which we have hitherto derived from the happy result of your annual labours will, on the present occasion, remain undiminished.

We have witnessed, with peculiar approbation, the zeal and fidelity with which our right trusty and well-beloved Lord Napier has uniformly discharged the trust we have reposed in him, as our Commissioner to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland; and having observed the salutary effects which have been produced among you, by the admonitions we have heretofore charged him with, and which he has so faithfully conveyed to you, we doubt not that he will again be acceptable to you, as our representative at your approaching meeting.

We have not failed to repeat to him, on this occasion, the sense which we entertain of the zeal which you have constantly manifested for our service; and we have commissioned him, on the opening of your Assembly, to satisfy you of the inflexible resolution which your steady attachment has created in us, to maintain inviolate the rights and privileges of our Church of Scotland; and that due and ample means may not be wanting for the Propagation of Christian Knowledge, and the principles of Reformed religion, you will learn from our faithful Representative, that we have thought fit to order our usual gift of one thousand pounds yearly to be continued; and have also granted you an addition thereto of one thousand pounds, to be applied to these holy and important ends.

We trust that the additional proof which we thus afford of our tender regard for your interests and welfare, will lead to new and vigorous exertions on your parts in the discharge of your sacred duties; and that being enabled to extend the beneficial influence which your labours have already created, you will the more effectually promote the happiness of all those whom we have placed under your special care. You will teach them to believe that our protection of them is inseparable from the attachment which they bear towards us and our establishments; and that the principles of the admirable constitution under which we live, if duly cherished, cannot fail to lead to our mutual and general welfare.

Well-beloved! By inculcating these precepts among our faithful subjects, by an uniform determination on your own parts to support our authority and maintain our prerogative, and by an unremitting attention to those matters, which more especially fall under the care of your ecclesiastical deliberations, you will contribute the most effectually to the accomplishment of those great and important objects for which you are about to be assembled. And we have no doubt but that this meeting will be concluded with that unanimity and harmony which have distinguished former Assemblies. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 10th day of May 1811, in the fifty-first year of our reign.

By the Command of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty,

R. RYDER.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 18, 1811.—The General Assembly's Answer to the Prince Regent's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We have received, with the most profound respect and gratitude, the gracious letter with which it has pleased your Royal Highness to honour this meeting of the Assembly of our National Church.

The approbation which your Royal Highness has condescended to bestow upon the former General Assemblies of this Church, we feel as a powerful motive, animating us so to persevere in the discharge of our duty, that the satisfaction which you have hitherto derived from the happy result of our annual labours may, on the present occasion, remain undiminished.

The renewed appointment of the Right Honourable Francis Lord Napier, to represent the royal person in this Assembly, we consider as a signal proof of your Royal Highness's favour. The zeal and fidelity with which he has uniformly discharged the trust reposed in him, the principles of piety and true patriotism which distinguish his character, and his affection for the Church of Scotland, render him peculiarly acceptable to this Assembly.

With gratitude and confidence we rely on the assurance which your Royal Highness has vouchsafed to give us of the interest which you take in us and our deliberations, of your attachment to the Church of Scotland, and of your inflexible resolution to maintain inviolate her rights and privileges, as by law established.

We have received, with due thankfulness, your Royal Highness's warrant, not only for the usual gift of L.1000, but also for the additional sum of L.1000, to be in like manner employed for the propagation of Christian knowledge, and the principles of Reformed religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. This farther proof which your Royal Highness has afforded of your tender regard for the most valuable interests of your subjects in the remoter districts of this country, will lead us, on our part, to new and vigorous exertions in the discharge of our sacred duties, as well as enable us more extensively and more effectually to promote the improvement and happiness of all those committed to our special care. We will teach them to believe that their loyalty and attachment to the principles of the admirable constitution under which they live, if duly cherished, cannot fail to lead to the mutual welfare of the Sovereign and of the people.

With the most profound respect, we observe the solicitude with which your Royal Highness reminds us of our duty. We listen with cheerfulness to your paternal admonitions, and will earnestly apply ourselves to the functions of our ministry. We will instruct our people in the knowledge of those principles, and lead them to the practice of all those duties and virtues by which they may be rendered good men and good citizens; nor shall we fail to inculcate upon them submission to the lawful authority of the Sovereign, and zeal for the maintenance of his royal prerogative, which we regard as an essential part of our happy constitution; so that, by the blessing of God on our endeavours, we may see righteousness and order, union and energy, comfort and peace, prevail universally in this part of the kingdom. With unremitting attention to those matters which more immediately fall within the province of our ecclesiastical deliberations, we will study, as far as in us lies, to accomplish, with unanimity and harmony, those great and important ends for which we have assembled.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may direct and prosper the administration of the government which your Royal Highness exercises in the name and on the behalf of his Majesty;—that He may preserve your Royal Highness long for a blessing to this nation and to the world, and may finally bestow upon you a crown of unfading glory, is the sincere and fervent prayer of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 18, 1811.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, eagerly embrace this opportunity of our having met in General Assembly to approach your Royal Highness with the warmest expressions of our dutiful and affectionate attachment.

We have felt the most anxious and painful interest in the affliction with which it hath pleased Divine Providence to visit the Illustrious House of our Sovereign.

We lament the loss of a Princess, whose virtues endeared her to her family, and whose fortitude and resignation in severe and protracted suffering, are a new proof of the value and efficacy of that religion by which she was sustained.

Revering the virtues of our most gracious Sovereign, and having long experienced the mildness and justice of his government, we deeply participate with your Royal Highness, and all his faithful subjects, in deploring the heavy calamity which has deprived us of his paternal care and direction. We have not ceased to present our fervent supplications, and those of the people entrusted to our care, before the throne of Divine grace; earnestly beseeching the Father of mercies to regard the affliction of our beloved King; and our souls are filled with joy and thankfulness, in the humble hope that our national prayers have been graciously heard, and that presages are afforded us of his restoration to health, to his family, and to the exercise of his royal functions.

We acknowledge with gratitude the mercy of the Almighty Disposer of events, who has alleviated the national calamity, by blessing us with a Prince eminently qualified, by his talents and virtues, and by his attachment to the principles of the constitution, for discharging the high duties committed to him as Regent of the United Kingdom. We have contemplated with delight the wisdom and prudence with which your Royal Highness has exerted the powers of government. These qualities, so eminently displayed by your Royal Highness, cannot fail to constitute a lasting claim on the gratitude and confidence of a loyal and affectionate people.

Grateful to the Almighty Ruler in the kingdoms of men, we congratulate your Royal Highness on the security of our native land, and on the distinguished blessings which its inhabitants have enjoyed, amidst all the dangers of that protracted war in which we are engaged with a malignant and inveterate foe. We rejoice that the new species of warfare with which the oppressor of the Continent hath assailed us, by the hostile measures in which he obstinately persists against the commerce of the world, have so little affected the revenue of the United Kingdom, and we trust that, under Divine Providence, our resources will prove equal to every public exigency, till the arduous contest in which we are engaged is brought to a happy termination.

We participate warmly in the national feeling, when we contemplate those recent events which inspire the heart of every patriotic Briton with exultation and triumph. The splendid achievements of our countrymen have, in various regions of the world, been crowned with the most brilliant success. We have seen them long opposed to the ablest generals and best disciplined troops of France. The eyes of the world have been anxiously directed to the field of conflict, and the result has fully displayed the skill of our commanders, and the invincible bravery of our countrymen; decisively proving, that a British army, like a British fleet, is the first in the world. These successful exertions in the cause of our suffering allies have increased our national glory, and exalted us among the kingdoms of the world. It shall be our anxious care to cherish in the people of Scotland patience under the pressure of those burdens which the circumstances of the times render it necessary to impose,—attachment to our unequalled constitution, and that high spirit of patriotism which, we trust, will ever rise superior to the dangers that may assail us.

As servants of the Prince of Peace, we deplore the lengthened calamities of war, and most earnestly supplicate the Supreme Disposer of all events to make the successes which have crowned the arms of our country the means of restoring the blessings of a safe, an honourable, and a permanent peace.

That the Almighty, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may continue to guard the United Kingdom in all its interests; that He may abundantly bless and long preserve your Royal Highness; and that Princes of your august House may long reign in the hearts of an affectionate and loyal people, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 23, 1812.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne with expressions of the most sincere affection and respect for your Royal Highness.

We sincerely sympathise with your Royal Highness on account of the continued and severe malady with which it has pleased God to visit your Royal Father, our most gracious Sovereign. We were justly attached to his person, revered his virtues, and were happy under his government. The more afflicting now is our grief for the severity of his indisposition, and the loss which we sustain. On this occasion, as in other calamities, this is our consolation, that the Great Ruler of the world arranges and conducts all events with infinite wisdom, rectitude, and goodness.

It has been no small alleviation of this great calamity, that your Royal Highness came forward, at the desire of the nation, to preside in the empire, and administer its affairs. The promptitude and energy, the prudence and the mildness, with which you have hitherto acted, the warm interest which you have taken in the welfare of the State, and the uniform regard which you have shown to its admirable constitution and laws, all assure us of the continued maintenance of our invaluable rights and privileges, civil and sacred.

We deeply lament the calamities of war, and that inordinate and insatiable ambition of the enemy, which precludes the near prospect of a safe and honourable peace. Yet, amidst all the dangers which have threatened us, and the hardships under which we have laboured, we will remember with gratitude, that Providence has continued to protect and prosper us. Our resources for maintaining the arduous and protracted conflict have never failed. The arms of our country, by sea and land, have been so successful, as to deprive the enemy of all his colonies and foreign commerce. Brilliant achievements in the Peninsula have thrown an additional lustre on the British name. Neighbouring nations have already caught a portion of our spirit, and we trust that this may diffuse itself over other kingdoms, now unhappily subjected to the enemy. They may yet rally around us, assert their own independence, and aid us in humbling the common foe, and in securing for ourselves, and for the world, the invaluable blessings of peace.

We deplore those acts of insubordination and licentiousness, of riot and outrage, which have lately disgraced some parts of the United Kingdom; and we particularly lament the fall, by assassination, of a statesman, distinguished no less for his virtues than for his talents. We mourn the loss which his family and his country sustain by his untimely death; and deeply regret that a crime so atrocious could have been perpetrated by any individual in this favoured and enlightened country. Aggravated, however, as it is, we have some consolation in thinking, that the criminal was instigated, not by any connection with other men, but by personal malice only.

We beg leave to assure your Royal Highness, that no spirit of insubordination has appeared in this part of the empire; and that, as far as in us lies, we will exert ourselves in maintaining loyalty and subjection to the laws. For this purpose, we will employ all our personal influence, as well as the faithful and assiduous discharge of our ministerial duties. We will inculcate on our people, old and young, the doctrines of our holy religion, and endeavour, with the aid of Divine grace, to fix deeply in their hearts those principles of morality, derived from the Gospel, which are powerful to regulate the conduct of men, to bring them under due subjection, and to preserve order and peace.

That the God of all power and grace may bless your Royal Highness, and establish the dominion of his Majesty, under your direction, in the affection and loyalty of his subjects; that Princes of your illustrious house, to the latest posterity, may sway the British sceptre; and that, after a long and happy life on earth, you may obtain at last eternal salvation and happiness, through Jesus Christ our Lord. These are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. ult., June 1, 1812.—Recommendation anent the Public Reading of the Scriptures.

The General Assembly proceeded to consider the overture from the Presbytery of Aberdeen respecting the public reading of the Scriptures, and the General Assembly approving of the spirit of the overture, and learning from thence, with much satisfaction, that the practice of reading the Word in the congregation, which is recognised by the Directory as part of the public worship of God, was revived by the recommendation of the Synod of Aberdeen, and is now generally adopted within the bounds of that Synod, (being convinced that it would conduce to the edification of the people, and to their better acquaintance with the Scriptures, if this practice were more generally followed,) do hereby recommend to all the ministers of this Church, according to their discretion, to read at one of the meetings for public worship such portion of the Old or New Testament, or of both, as they may judge expedient. The Assembly at the same time declare, that they do not mean that this recommendation shall in any degree supersede the exercise of lecturing, which they enjoin to be observed throughout this Church, in conformity to the Acts of Assembly, 1694 and 1704, as a most important branch of the public ministrations of pastors and teachers.

The Assembly appoint this deliverance to be inserted amongst the printed Acts of the Assembly.

Sess. 3, May 22, 1813.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's most faithful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in General Assembly, gladly embrace this opportunity of approaching the throne with sentiments of sincere affection and attachment to your Royal Highness and his Majesty's government.

We deeply regret the continuance of that malady with which our venerable Sovereign has been visited, so painful to the feelings of your Royal Highness, and all those who recollect the wisdom, rectitude, and benignity of his Majesty's character and reign. It is, however, our consolation, under this afflicting dispensation of Providence, that the reins of empire are held by a Prince, whose matured wisdom and experience have prepared him for the duties of his high station, and that under the regency of your Royal Highness we continue to enjoy the same just, mild, and paternal rule.

We congratulate your Royal Highness on that success and glory which have been obtained by his Majesty's armies, and those of his allies, in the Peninsula. We hope the time is not far distant, when the brave and high-minded inhabitants of Spain, rescued from the tyrant's grasp, shall reap, in the establishment of their independence, the fruit of all their heroic sacrifices and exertions.

In those important and memorable events which have taken place in the north of Europe, in the defeat and destruction of the best appointed and most numerous armies which were ever led forth to overwhelm a nation, we recognise the hand of that good Providence which has interposed to disappoint the designs of cruel ambition, and “restrain the wrath of man.” We rejoice to behold nations, who had been dazzled by the false glory, and dispirited by the great success of their presumptuous oppressor, roused and encouraged by his discomfiture and disgrace, and, having experienced his odious and intolerable despotism, that they have risen, with one heart, to shake off the galling yoke.

We trust that the great and generous efforts which are now making in behalf of suffering humanity will, by the blessing of Almighty God, be crowned with complete success, and that general liberty and national independence being secured, our country, and harassed Europe, shall at length be permitted to enjoy a safe, honourable, and lasting peace.

That Almighty God may protect and bless your Royal Highness; that He may direct and prosper his Majesty’s government under your auspices; that the justice, wisdom, and moderation of your administration may secure to you the affection and loyalty of all the subjects of the British empire; that Princes of the same illustrious House, formed after the example of our Sovereign, may, to the latest posterity, sway the sceptre of the United Kingdom; and that, after a long and prosperous reign on earth, you may obtain a more glorious and permanent crown in Heaven, are the sincere and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty’s most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 7, May 27, 1813.—Petition to both Houses of Parliament respecting the Political Privileges of the Roman Catholics.

To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled, the humble Petition of the Ministers and Elders of the Church of Scotland, met in General Assembly,

Sheweth,

That observing that there was lately under the revision of the legislature, and may again come under their revision, that part of the public law of the state which subjects Roman Catholics to certain disabilities; your petitioners are deeply impressed with the conviction, that they should be wanting in duty to that great and loyal body of his Majesty’s subjects which compose the National Church of Scotland, of which they are the representatives, did they fail to express to your honourable House the deep interest and concern they must ever take in all discussions and measures which have for their object to innovate upon the laws which our forefathers in their time deemed necessary for securing to the people of these realms the blessings of civil liberty and of the Protestant religion.

That your petitioners have at all times felt the utmost anxiety that religious toleration should be preserved inviolate; and at a period so full of peril to the security and independence of the empire, are aware of the peculiar importance of removing every ground of disaffection, of diffusing universally sentiments of genuine patriotism, by opening to all classes of his Majesty’s subjects the paths of honourable ambition, and affording them all the consequence which property, talent, or successful industry, bestow.

But your petitioners cannot be insensible to this peculiarity in the situation of the Roman Catholics, that they maintain a certain intercourse with a foreign hierarchy, and observe a certain submission to a foreign Pontiff, which may prove hostile to our ecclesiastical constitution, and is generally involved in political connections unfriendly to British prosperity. They know also full well, how prone human nature is to corruption and superstition; and how powerfully the Roman Catholic creed, and the confidential intercourse with the priesthood by auricular confession, tend to subjugate the worthiest characters, and to discipline and mould them into instruments for promoting the purposes of their sect.

If, therefore, your honourable House, and the other branches of the legislature, deem, in your wisdom, that the exigency of the times is such, as to authorise any change in the system of securities adopted at the Revolution, that glorious era from which these nations date the blessings of freedom, order, religious toleration, and political prosperity; your petitioners trust and pray that the utmost caution and prudence will be exercised; that none of the bulwarks of the constitution, ecclesiastical or civil, be on any account exposed to hazard; and that effectual precautions be adopted, to exclude foreign influence from the councils of the state, and the administration of the government, and to maintain this happy land impregnable, as heretofore, to foreign innovation, foreign intrigue, and foreign corruption.

While your petitioners cordially express their reliance on the wisdom of Parliament, and their full conviction that the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland will continue to enjoy the protection of Parliament, they presume to annex to their petition a solemn declaration, in which they pledge themselves before God, to your honourable House and to their country, that they will discharge, with fidelity and vigilance, the duties incumbent upon them, as office-bearers in that Protestant Church which was established in Scotland at the blessed reformation from Popery; and will continue to cherish in the minds of the people committed to their care those principles of religious liberty which are incorporated with the British constitution, and which are the glory of this Protestant land.

VIII.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1813.—Act respecting the Licensing of Probationers.

The General Assembly having taken under their serious consideration the great danger to which the interests of religion and of this Church may be exposed, by licensing any to preach the Gospel who are not duly qualified for that important trust, do hereby enact and ordain, that in all time coming the following regulations shall be strictly observed:—

I. It is hereby enacted, that no student shall be entered upon the roll of any Professor of Divinity, unless he shall produce to the said Professor a certificate from the minister of the parish in which he has his usual residence; or, in his absence, or during a vacancy in said parish, from some neighbouring minister, bearing that his character is suitable to his views; together with a diploma of Master of Arts, or certificates from the several Professors of Philosophy under whom he had studied, from which it may be clearly ascertained, that in some University or Universities he had gone through a full course of philosophy, in some winter sessions of College preceding that in which the certificates are produced.

II. The General Assembly do likewise hereby ordain, that all students who have been enrolled by Professors of Divinity, in the manner prescribed by this Act, shall continue to prosecute the study of Divinity for the term of six sessions. Provided always, that if any student hath given regular attendance in the Divinity Hall during three sessions, his course shall be considered as completed in four sessions; and that if he hath given regular attendance in the Hall during two sessions, his course shall be considered as completed in five sessions. And the Assembly do further ordain, that in each of these cases students shall be enrolled by the Professors during the several sessions of their respective courses, and deliver in the Divinity Hall, in the manner herein afterwards provided, an exegesis in Latin on some controverted head in Divinity, a homily in English, an exercise and addition, a lecture on some large portion of Scripture, and a popular sermon, together with such other exercises as the Professors shall think proper to prescribe. And the Assembly further enact and declare, that a student is entitled to apply to the Professor for his certificates that he may be proposed for trials, and that the preliminary steps may be taken by the Presbytery, during the currency of the last session of his course, as above described; with this limitation, that if the said last session is to be claimed as a session of regular attendance, he shall, towards the conclusion thereof, obtain a new certificate of his attendance during its currency, and produce the same to the Presbytery or Synod.

III. Professors of Divinity are required to attend, as much as circumstances may permit, to the conduct of such students as are under their care; and, as far as they find it practicable, to insist that every student shall deliver his first discourse sometime during his second session at the latest, and the remainder of his discourses at such periods as may enable him to deliver the whole of them before the end of January of the last session of his course.

IV. When a student is proposed to any Presbytery, in order to be taken upon trials, the Presbytery shall be alone, and the motion for that purpose shall lie upon the table till their next ordinary meeting. In the meantime, the Presbytery shall appoint the member, by whom the student has been proposed, to lay before the said meeting the certificate or certificates in favour of the student that are specified in the third paragraph of the fifth section of this Act; to desire him to attend the same, and to inform him that, previously to the meeting, he ought, as far as circumstances may permit, to wait on such ministers of the Presbytery as have not formerly had an opportunity of conversing with him in private.

V. When the time appointed for considering the motion is arrived, the Presbytery shall strictly observe the following regulations:—

1st, The Presbytery shall be alone, while they are employed in discussing the several preliminaries respecting students who are proposed for trials.

2d, They shall require satisfying evidence that every student who is proposed for that purpose has completed the twenty-first year of his age.

3d, No student shall be admitted to trial, unless he produces to the Presbytery a certificate or certificates from the Professor or Professors of Divinity, under whose tuition he hath studied, bearing that he hath prosecuted his studies, and delivered his discourses in the manner prescribed by this Act; and that his conduct, as far as it consists with the knowledge of the said Professor or Professors, has been in every respect suitable to his views in life. And the General Assembly do likewise hereby enact, that the Presbytery shall record at full length the said certificate or certificates in their minutes. And it is hereby enacted and declared, that the student, having lodged such certificate or certificates, shall be entitled to obtain extracts of the same if demanded.

4th, No Presbytery shall receive any student upon trials, unless they are satisfied that he is of good report; sound in his principles: pious, sober, grave, and prudent in his behaviour; of a peaceable disposition; and well affected to the happy establishment in this kingdom both in Church and State. And that the Presbytery may proceed with all due caution, in a matter of such peculiar importance, they shall not agree to the motion in behalf of the student, unless his residence, during the year preceding, has been chiefly within their bounds, or he shall produce sufficient testimonials from the Presbytery, in whose bounds his residence has chiefly been during that term, bearing that his character is such as is described in the immediately preceding sentence of this paragraph, and recommending him in those respects to the Presbytery before whom the proposal is made, as a proper person to be entered upon trials.

5th, The Presbytery shall not agree to the motion in favour of the student, unless they are satisfied that he has made a competent degree of proficiency in those several branches of knowledge, which are necessary to enable him to be an useful preacher of the Gospel. And the General Assembly ordain, that the Presbytery, in order to procure full information in this respect, shall examine the student strictly and privately on his knowledge of the Greek and Latin languages, and of philosophy and theology.

6th, If, after these preliminary steps have been taken, the Presbytery shall be of opinion that the student is duly qualified in these several particulars, they shall record this opinion in their minutes, and order their clerk to write letters to the several Presbyteries within the bounds of the Provincial Synod, two kalendar months at least before the meeting of the same, informing them of the Presbytery's intention to take the student upon public trials; and bearing that the certificate or certificates in his favour, which are required by this Act, have been regularly laid before them. But it is hereby provided, that within the bounds of such Synods as meet only once a year, a student may be entitled to have these circular letters written half a year sooner than would be otherwise competent.

VI. The General Assembly do likewise hereby enact and declare, that at the request of the student, it shall be competent to any Presbytery to transfer the receiving of the public trials, or any parts thereof, certifying to the Presbytery to which the transference is to be made, that the various preliminary steps have been taken according to the directions of this Act; and that such parts of the public and private trials as have been already gone through have been received with approbation.

VII. If a student have studied, either in whole or in part, in Protestant Universities, which are not within the bounds of this Church, he shall, when he is proposed to any Presbytery for trials, be required to produce satisfying testimonials from the Professors of Divinity in said Universities; and the time which these Professors shall certify to have been employed by him in studying Divinity under their tuition, shall be computed in the same manner as if he had prosecuted his studies in any of the Universities within the bounds of this Church. But it is hereby provided, that no student, in such circumstances, shall be admitted even to those private trials, which are appointed to be taken before the writing of the circular letters, sooner than six kalendar months after his arrival in Scotland.

VIII. The General Assembly ordain, that if a Presbytery propose to take a student upon public trials, and have, with that view, written the circular letters, as is herein required, public intimation thereof shall be made at some diet of the next meeting of the Provincial Synod, which shall not be the last diet thereof. And the Presbytery-clerk is hereby required to transmit to the Synod-clerk an extract of the certificate or certificates laid before the Presbytery in favour of the student, in order that the same may be produced at this diet of the Synod. And it is likewise hereby ordained, that at some subsequent diet of the Synod, particular inquiry shall be made whether any of the members of the court has any objection to offer against the student being entered upon public trials; and that the Synod then, taking into consideration the extract produced, and the whole of the case, shall judge of the expediency of allowing the Presbytery to admit the student on trials; or if, in any case, the Presbytery-clerk shall fail to transmit the extract of the certificates above mentioned, the student may produce to the Synod, by himself, or by any member of the court, the extract of the same, which by this Act he is entitled to obtain.

IX. If the Synod shall allow the student to be taken upon public trials, the Presbytery shall proceed therein with all convenient speed; and the Assembly appoint the following trials to be taken of the student, and in the order herein mentioned:—1st, Catechetical trials on Divinity, Chronology, and Church History; 2d, A trial on the Hebrew and Greek languages; 3d, An exegesis in Latin, on some controverted head in Divinity; 4th, A Homily in English; 5th, An exercise and addition; 6th, A Lecture on some large portion of Scripture; 7th, A popular Sermon; it being understood, that if the Presbytery see cause, they may examine the student upon the subject of these several discourses.

X. The student having gone through the several trials which are mentioned in the immediately preceding section of this Act, the Presbytery are ordained to proceed in the following order:—

1st, They shall deliberately and seriously take a conjunct view of the whole trials, and if they shall be of opinion that the student is not properly qualified to perform the duties incumbent upon a preacher of the Gospel, they shall by no means grant him a licence in his present circumstances.

2d, If, upon this review of the trials, the Presbytery are fully satisfied therewith, they shall record this opinion in their minutes.

3d, The Presbytery shall then propose to the student the questions that are appointed to be put to all who pass trials by Act 10th, Assembly, 1711, and require him to subscribe the Formula which is prescribed by the said Act. And the General Assembly strictly prohibit all Presbyteries from licensing any student to preach the Gospel who shall not give explicit and satisfying answers to these questions, and subscribe the said Formula.

4th, The Presbytery shall order the Act of Assembly, 1759, against Simoniacal Practices, to be read to the student in their presence.

Lastly, The Presbytery shall appoint their Moderator to license the student to preach the Gospel, and order their Clerk to furnish him with an extract of his licence.

XI For the better observance of this Act, the General Assembly ordain, 1st, That it shall be printed among their other printed Acts; 2d, That it shall be printed by itself in some convenient form; 3d, That a copy of this separate edition shall be transmitted to each Professor of Divinity in the Universities of Scotland; and that the said Professors shall read the same in their respective Halls, once, at least, during every session, and at such times as they have reason to expect the attendance of the greatest number of students for that session; and, lastly, That a copy of the same edition shall likewise be transmitted to the Clerks of each Synod and Presbytery within the bounds of this Church; and that the said Clerks shall keep the same along with their minutes, and bring it up to each meeting of their respective courts for the use of their members.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1813.—Recommendation, Injunction, and Queries, respecting Schools.

The Report of the Committee, upon the returns from Presbyteries respecting the Examination of Schools within their bounds, was produced and read, as follows:—

“That only fourteen Presbyteries have sent up reports to this Assembly, viz. :—Aberdeen, Breechin, Chirnside, Dalkeith, Dunfermline, Garioch, Haddington, Lanark, Langholm, Linlithgow, Lochmaben, Peebles, Strathbogie, and Turriff.

“In some of these reports very particular information is given; but this is not their general character, as there are others which do nothing more than mention the names of the parishes, the schools of which have been examined since last Assembly. There are no facts stated in any of them which require to be brought under the particular consideration of the Assembly. The committee have only further to remark, that several Presbyteries state their experience of the great and increasing advantage which results from the regular examination of schools, according to the instructions of the General Assembly.”

The General Assembly agree to renew and re-transmit the injunction of the General Assembly, 1799, to Presbyteries respecting this business, which is in the following words:—“The General Assembly enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church to report to the Assembly a list of all the schools within their bounds, specifying what is taught in each school, whether the schools be held on the Lord’s Day, or on other days of the week; in what way the schoolmasters are supported or maintained; whether they act for themselves, or are employed by or under the direction of others; what number of scholars attend each school at the time of making the report; and, in general, whatever else shall appear to the Presbytery of importance respecting the schools within their bounds.” The Assembly request that Presbyteries will pay particular attention to the above injunction.

At the same time, the Assembly took up the consideration of the overture from the Synod of Aberdeen anent parochial and other schools, which was read. And the Assembly appointed the queries contained in the said overture to be transmitted to Presbyteries along with the above recommendation and injunction. The queries are as follow:—

“1st, Is there a parochial school established in your parish, with sufficient salary and accommodation for the schoolmaster, in terms of Act, 1803? and if not, what are the reasons which have prevented compliance with the enactments of that statute?”

“2d, Are there more than one parochial school established in your parish under the authority of the aforementioned Act? and if not, would it be eligible, and why, that there should be more schools in your parish?”

“3d, What schools, other than parochial, are there in your parish? Of what description, and by whom kept and supported?”

And the Assembly direct the Presbyteries of this Church to take the said queries into their consideration at their first meeting after they shall come to their hand, and send up answers to the same to next Assembly.

Sess. 1, May 19, 1814.—The Prince Regent's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

In the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty,

GEORGE, P. R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved,—It is with peculiar satisfaction that we look forward to the approaching Assembly of the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland.

Their deliberations have at all times been regarded by us with the deepest interest, and the support of the Establishment towards which their labours have been directed, has been the object of our unceasing care.

We have annually endeavoured to satisfy its members of our fixed determination to support it, and we have carefully admonished all its disciples, through you, to be steady in its defence. Happily, our admonitions have not been offered in vain—they were made in the spirit of benevolence and affection—they have been received with thankfulness, and regarded with sincerity.

You have united with our faithful subjects in working out the good work of peace, and the fruits of your labours have become apparent to all the world. A new era is arrived; our constitution and independence are no longer assailed by the domineering usurpation of tyrannical ambition; our Establishments are unimpaired; our laws remain entire; and our religion is preserved. These are the happy consequences, well-beloved, of our steadfastness in the cause of virtue and of truth. These are the welcome triumphs which the Wise Dispenser of human events has permitted us, in His good time, to enjoy.

We rejoice with you in these things; and that you may be assured of the particular interest which we have felt in the restoration of the establishment of your holy Church to its peaceful labours, we again charge our right trusty Commissioner, Francis Lord Napier, to convey to you our congratulations and our love. He has inculcated with assiduity the precepts we have constantly directed him to recommend in the hour of trial, and he will teach you to cherish, in the more auspicious moments of peace, the doctrines that have hitherto enabled you to withstand the enemies of those principles which are the foundation of the strength and true happiness of nations.

Perservere, well-beloved, in the discharge of your moral duties. Continue to teach our subjects the great and awful truths of religion. Encourage them in the conviction that your ecclesiastical establishment is an object of our esteem and favour. Endeavour to preserve among them a due obedience to our laws; and persuade them that they will thereby promote the cause of religious liberty and perfect freedom.

Recommending you, brethren, to strengthen yourselves in the principles of virtue, and to direct those whom we again commit to your care, so that they follow the paths of peace, we heartily bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 13th day of May 1814, in the 54th year of our reign.

By the Command of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty,

SIDMOUTH.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1814.—The General Assembly's Answer to the Prince Regent's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Royal Highness,

The gracious letter with which, in the name and on the behalf of his Majesty, your Royal Highness has been pleased to honour this General Assembly, has been received by us with the greatest respect.

We acknowledge, with heartfelt gratitude, the interest which our Sovereign has at all times condescended to take in our deliberations, and the paternal care with which he has watched over the interests of our Establishment. The repeated expressions of his fixed determination to support our National Church, and his fatherly admonitions, given in the spirit of benevolence and affection, have animated our people in its defence.

We rejoice in having been permitted to unite our humble exertions with those of his Majesty's other faithful subjects in working out the good work of peace.

We rejoice in the arrival of a new era. Our constitution and independence are no longer assailed by the domineering usurpation of tyrannical ambition; our establishments are unimpaired; our laws remain entire; and our religion is preserved. We adore the Wise Dispenser of all human things, who, by his blessing upon the stedfastness of our national councils, hath given these welcome triumphs to the cause of virtue and of truth.

It is peculiarly gratifying to us that the congratulations with which your Royal Highness is pleased to honour us upon these great events, are conveyed to us by Francis Lord Napier; a nobleman, whom long experience of his virtues, and of his kindness, endears to us. As he inculcated on us with assiduity those precepts which the wisdom of our Sovereign recommended in the hour of trial, we are well assured that he will perform, with equal faithfulness, the pleasing task of cherishing in us those sentiments which become the more auspicious moments of peace.

It shall be our study, in conformity with the paternal admonitions of your Royal Highness, to maintain the doctrines of the Gospel; that as we have been protected from the enemies of our faith, we may cultivate unceasingly those principles which are the foundation of the true strength and happiness of nations.

It will be at once an incentive to exertions, and a powerful aid to us in the discharge of our pastoral duties, in teaching our people the great and awful truths of religion, that we are permitted by your Royal Highness to encourage in them a conviction that our ecclesiastical establishment is honoured with the royal favour. We will endeavour to preserve among them a due obedience to the laws, and to persuade them that they will thereby promote the cause of religious liberty and perfect freedom.

It shall be our earnest prayer, that, through the Divine blessing, we may be enabled to strengthen ourselves in the principles of virtue, and to direct those who are committed to our care, so that they may follow the paths of peace.

We have received with gratitude, and shall endeavour to apply with faithfulness, his Majesty's gracious donation of L.2000, for the propagation of Christian knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may bless, console, and restore his Majesty the King; that He may bless abundantly the Queen, your Royal Highness, and all the members of the Royal Family; that He may direct and prosper the measures of his Majesty's government; and that He may maintain to the latest ages the national blessings which he hath bestowed upon our country, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1814.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, eagerly embrace the opportunity of our meeting in this General Assembly to approach the throne, that we may express to your Royal Highness our sentiments on the events of a period, auspicious beyond our utmost hopes to the glory of Britain, and the general interests of the civilized world.

Amidst the variety, however, of the subjects of heartfelt congratulation which press upon our thoughts, we would pause till we offer to your Royal Highness the homage of our tenderest sympathy on the continuance of that malady, with which it has pleased the Almighty to afflict your Royal Father, our beloved and venerable Sovereign. We feel, that to your Royal Highness, to the United Kingdom, and to our illustrious Allies, the participation of his Majesty in the downfall of that "throne, which framed mischief by a law," in the re-establishment of the legitimate governments of those countries which had been overpowered by a military despotism, and in the return of all the friendly relations which formerly cemented the commonwealth of Europe, would have completed the happiness of this great jubilee of the human race. But, even in this case, it is both our consolation and our joy to remember, that your Royal Highness, consulting the true principles of the constitution, and accepting the direction of those arduous duties which the perplexity and distress of nations had devolved on the British Empire, has maintained the spirit of his Majesty's policy, increased the glory of his Majesty's reign, and purchased new titles to the confidence and the gratitude of his Majesty's subjects and allies.

When we look back to the magnitude and the duration of the exertions which our country has made in behalf of social order, national independence and public law, amidst the perpetual vicissitudes of a contest so bloody, portentous, and long protracted, our eyes are filled with the tears of exulting patriotism. We have seen the magnanimity and fortitude of a truly British King, supported by the wisdom and constancy of approved counsellors, abundantly supplied with resources by the generosity of a people, who regarded no sacrifice as too costly to be offered on the altar of liberty, and rendered triumphant by the courage, science, and devotion of fleets and armies, which, in every quarter of the globe, sought only the presence of the enemy and the heat of the battle. We have beheld our beloved country thus girded about with might, and reposing her confidence in the Rock of Ages, undaunted when alone; staying by her single efforts the wasting progress of anarchy; opening her fostering bosom as a common asylum for the exiled worth of every shattered state; interposing the impenetrable shield of her protection between the honest struggles of reviving valour, and the wretchedness of universal subjugation; and everywhere palsyng the strength, rebuking the pride, and quelling the violence of the frenzied oppressor. As the recompence of such magnanimous perseverance, and of so many generous labours, we have had the satisfaction of seeing the energies and resources of our government, ultimately combined with the operations of a commander, unequalled in abilities for war; and have beheld with exultation the success of our firm battalions, and those of our imperial and royal Allies, in accomplishing the repose of Europe, by toils, and achievements, and triumphs, to which the admiration of the most distant times will not cease to pay a just tribute of applause.

Amidst the peace which we now enjoy, and the hopes by which we are animated, we desire to remember the days of darkness, so far only as may be necessary to perpetuate among men the lessons of instruction which they engraved on our hearts, in characters too deep to be erased. With great willingness we turn to the mild and dignified spirit of conciliation, seldom equalled, and never surpassed, even in the solitary exertions of human goodness, which has recently, on the broadest scale, rescued our nature from reproach, and shown that the legitimate rulers of the earth labour only for the benefit of the people. We rejoice that the genuine stamp of that government and magistracy, which are the ordinance of God, has been impressed on all the proceedings of the Allied Sovereigns, to bind more firmly the cords of loyalty among the subjects of every land, and to unite them in the vigorous support of those well-balanced constitutional powers which repay any surrender of personal right they require, by the permanent security which they impart to liberty and religion, to private and to public happiness. We rejoice not less, that in this better temper of mankind, Princes, consoled and supported, and aided by our country, remount the thrones of their ancestors, enlightened by the misfortunes of the nations which they are unanimously invited to govern; filled with sentiments of benignity and peace, corresponding to the happier condition of human affairs; and anxious to restore, through the wide extent of their influence, the ancient relations of national amity and useful commerce.

In the just attention paid by the Continental nations to the true principles of civil liberty and representative government, we find the strongest encouragement to hope, that, as the fathers have been summoned in a period of distress to contend with the powers of evil, so the children will be quickened, by the occupations of peace, to engage in a better emulation for the palm of industry and science, of political wisdom, and of moral worth. We hail with delight every public indication of so honourable a disposition, and cannot refrain, as an Assembly of Christian ministers and elders, from adverting to the anxious and unwearied labours of his Majesty's government, for the universal abolition of the African Slave-Trade. We rejoice in witnessing this disinterested employment of British counsel and British influence, in the promotion of a cause so deeply interesting to the human race.

Considering the shame and contempt which Divine Providence has openly poured on all visionary theories in religion and politics, the offspring of a false, hypocritical, and corrupting philosophy, we cannot suffer ourselves to entertain a doubt, that the pure and unsophisticated doctrines of our holy faith, and the great laws of piety and righteousness, delivered and taught by its Author, from which has visibly proceeded the main strength exerted in this arduous conflict, will henceforth command both increasing reverence and additional authority among the rulers and people of the earth. We know, that before the end come, this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached for a witness to every creature under Heaven. And it remains for us to assure your Royal Highness, that our ministry, unceasingly directed, as it has been, to the interest and advancement of this great cause when the times were troubled, will not be less steadily directed to its interest and advancement in the day of prosperity.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may direct and prosper the Government, which your Royal Highness administers in the name and on behalf of his Majesty;—that He may long preserve your Royal Highness as a blessing to the nation and to the world;—and that descendants of your illustrious house, steadily maintaining the civil and religious rights of a free people, may sway the British sceptre to the latest posterity, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 1, May 18, 1815.—The Prince Regent's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

In the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty,

GEORGE, P. R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well. Having taken into our consideration that the annual meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland was appointed to take place on the 18th day of this instant May, and deeming it advantageous to the interests of our said Church, that the ministers and elders thereof should again resume their deliberations, we have thought fit, in the exercise of his Majesty's paternal care, to sanction the approaching meeting of your venerable body. And seeing that, by reason of other weighty affairs, we cannot be present ourselves on this solemn occasion, we have thought fit again to appoint our right trusty and well-beloved Francis Lord Napier to represent us and hold our place amongst you, nominating him our Commissioner to your holy meeting, to do all things lawful and necessary in our royal name. We, accordingly, require that you, and all other his Majesty's good subjects, do honour and obey him as our Representative, and listen to those things which we have commanded him to declare to you. We have more especially charged him to make known to you our high sense of your steady and firm zeal for our service, and our determination to encourage the same, by maintaining the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland pure and unimpaired. We have, at the same time, cautioned him, that he suffer nothing to be done in your holy Assembly to the prejudice of our authority or our prerogative.

The repeated proofs which you have given us of your attachment have created in us the utmost confidence in this respect; and we are persuaded, that the same temperance and moderation, which have heretofore marked your counsels and proceedings, will prevent your treating of any matter which is not a fit object for the deliberations of an ecclesiastical meeting.

We are anxious that, in ecclesiastical affairs, your wisdom should be exercised without restraint, seeing that it has been invariably directed to the important purposes of religion and of virtue. The advantages which have resulted from a steady perseverance in the promotion of these great objects of our laws and all our establishments, will encourage you to keep them at all times in view; and for the advancement of true piety in that part of the kingdom committed to your pastoral care, we endeavour to animate your labours by our unceasing countenance and support.

Well-beloved, we have commanded our High Commissioner to assure you of our solicitude for your welfare in all matters respecting your peculiar establishment. And, recommending in the strongest manner, that you be not deterred from a firm perseverance in the important duties which you have undertaken, we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 11th day of May 1815, in the fifty-fifth year of our reign.

By the Command of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty,

SIDMOUTH.

Sess. 3, May 20, 1815.—The General Assembly's Answer to the Prince Regent's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, the members of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, have received, with sentiments of the profoundest respect, the gracious letter with which your Royal Highness, in name and on behalf of his Majesty, has condescended to honour us on this occasion.

It is peculiarly gratifying to us to be assured, that while, in the exercise of our constitutional rights, we are again assembled to deliberate on the affairs submitted to our judgment and review, your Royal Highness has thought fit, in the exercise of his Majesty's paternal care, to sanction our meeting. And we esteem it a fresh token of royal favour that this assurance is communicated to us by a nobleman so eminently qualified to perform the duties of the royal representative, as Francis Lord Napier. The long experience which the General Assembly has had of his piety, virtue, and regard to the interests of true religion, disposes us to listen with the most respectful deference to his admonitions, in declaring to us what your Royal Highness has commanded; and will render his name not less distinguished in the records of our National Church, than that of his illustrious ancestor in the annals of science. We are satisfied that the same fidelity in the discharge of his important functions, which has already so often merited and obtained the royal approbation, will, on this occasion, be still evinced in a manner equally honourable to himself and beneficial to us.

We are grateful to your Royal Highness for the high sense you are pleased to express of our loyalty, and for the assurance which has been given at the same time, of your determination to maintain the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland pure and unimpaired. Your Royal Highness has also permitted us to believe that the proofs we have given of attachment to the supreme authority of the land, have inspired you with confidence that nothing will be done in our Ecclesiastical Assembly prejudicial to the royal authority or prerogative. These favourable sentiments it will ever be our study to confirm in the mind of your Royal Highness. And, strongly influenced by the gracious terms in which they are conveyed, we will anxiously endeavour to maintain, in all our proceedings and subjects of discussion, the temperance, moderation, and propriety, which have thus been honoured by your approbation, and which your Royal Highness has now so earnestly recommended.

While we conduct our deliberations in the spirit of freedom, under the protection of royal favour, our first object will be to promote the great interests of religion and virtue in the sphere of our influence. We shall also cherish among our people, by all the means we possess, the spirit of loyalty, of submission to the laws and establishments of our country, and of attachment to our happy constitution, under which we enjoy such invaluable blessings, civil and religious—blessings unparalleled in the history of man. In all our exertions for these highly important purposes, it will be a powerful encouragement, that our labours for the advancement of true piety, in that part of the United Kingdom which is committed to our pastoral care, are animated by the unceasing countenance and support of your Royal Highness. And assured of your solicitude for all that respects the welfare and prosperity of our Ecclesiastical Establishment, we shall firmly persevere in the discharge of the important duties which we have undertaken.

The royal donation of L.2000, for the propagation of Christian knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, we accept with the warmest gratitude, as a pledge of the anxiety of your Royal Highness to fulfil the pious and benevolent intentions of his Majesty, and we shall endeavour to apply it with all fidelity.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may bless, console, and restore our gracious Sovereign; that He may bless the Queen, your Royal Highness, the Princess of Wales, and all the members of the Royal Family; that He may direct and prosper the measures of his Majesty's government, and maintain to the latest ages the national blessings we enjoy, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 20, 1815.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in our General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne, to present to your Royal Highness the respectful expression of our loyalty to our venerable Sovereign, and of our attachment to your Royal Highness, by whom the government is administered in his name, and on his behalf.

While we condole with your Royal Highness on the continued indisposition of your august Father, our most gracious Sovereign, and earnestly pray that the Father of Mercies would visit him with his tender mercy; we regard it as a mark of the goodness of Providence to this realm, that we have, in your Royal Highness, a Prince who, by the wisdom and firmness of his administration, so well sustains the honour, and promotes the interests of the United Kingdom.

Since we last had it in our power to lay the dutiful expression of our attachment before the throne, many events have occurred deeply interesting to this country, and to the civilized world. We have seen brought to a happy termination the war which had been declared against us by America, after the ostensible cause of it had been removed by your Royal Highness. It is gratifying to think, that, although this country has to deplore the loss of many gallant men who have fallen in the contest, yet the measures adopted by your Royal Highness, joined to the unrivalled skill and intrepidity of our soldiers and sailors, have effectually sustained the honour of the country, and enabled you to conclude peace without the smallest diminution of the territory, or the least infringement of the maritime rights of the empire.

To the great public events which have happened in Europe, we look back with feelings of satisfaction, though, unhappily, mingled of late with deep regret. After a war the most extensive, protracted, and calamitous, that ever afflicted the world, the man, whose arrogant ambition, checked by no principle of justice, or feeling of humanity, had so long oppressed and insulted the nations of Continental Europe, was driven from a throne supported by violence, and stained with blood. The ancient race of sovereigns was restored to France; and peace, in the spirit of peace, concluded with that nation.

It is with peculiar pleasure that we remark the honourable principles which have invariably guided the councils of your Royal Highness in the management of these great transactions. It is with high satisfaction we observe, not only that you have made no attempt to encroach on the rights of other nations, but that the interests of humanity in distant lands have not escaped your benevolent regard. By your active, unremitting, and judicious endeavours, so much in consonance with the declared sentiments of the British nation, to put a stop to the African Slave Trade, that stain on the civilized world, your Royal Highness has procured its condemnation as unjust, by the great Congress of European Sovereigns; and we doubt not, that, by a continuation of the same enlightened endeavours, you will, at no distant period, obtain its final suppression.

While the adjustment of the interests of the different nations of Europe was gradually approaching to its completion, we beheld, with the deepest sorrow and indignation, that man whom the French nation had so lately abjured as their sovereign, return to France; and, supported by the soldiery, advance without opposition to the capital, and seize the reins of government. This event, by raising a military government in the heart of Europe, and throwing the whole power of the French empire into the hands of an individual, with whom (in as far as the future may be anticipated, from experience of the past) the relations of peace can be expected to subsist no longer than till he finds himself in a condition to declare war, threatens to frustrate the generous endeavours of your Royal Highness, and your august allies, for securing the future repose of Europe; and to bring back the calamities and the crimes which have so long afflicted and dishonoured the nations of the Continent.

But we trust, that by this unlooked for occurrence, Divine Providence is preparing the way for making the final overthrow of the tyrant more conspicuous and impressive. And while, as the servants of the Prince of Peace, we deplore any event which is likely to renew the calamities of war, and hope that means may still be found of preserving peace, yet we trust, that should war be inevitable, the wisdom, promptitude, and vigour of the councils of your Royal Highness, and your august allies—the pre-eminent skill of the great captains who lead the allied armies—and the intrepidity of the forces arrayed in defence of the independence of Europe, will, by the blessing of Heaven on a righteous cause, speedily bring the contest to a happy conclusion, and establish the peace of the civilized world on a secure basis.

Sensible that the singular and unexpected circumstances of the times require of this country to submit to many sacrifices for the common welfare, as well as for our own individual security, we shall not fail to promote, by our influence and example, a cheerful acquiescence in the exertions that may be necessary for bringing the great cause in which your Royal Highness is engaged to a fortunate termination; and we have peculiar satisfaction in being able to assure your Royal Highness, that the people of this part of the united empire, aware of the urgency of the case, and relying confidently on the protection of Heaven, and on the wisdom and integrity of your Royal Highness's government, are prepared cordially to concur in the measures which it may be deemed necessary to adopt for the general good.

That Almighty God, by whom kings reign, may console, support, and restore to health our venerable Sovereign; that He may bless her Majesty the Queen, protect and bless your Royal Highness, the Princess of Wales, and all the members of the Royal Family; and that He may crown with success the measures of your administration, and render them the means of speedily conveying the blessings of peace and security to this nation and to Europe, is the fervent prayer of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 18, 1816.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in our General Assembly, beg leave to approach the throne, to express our warm attachment to your Royal Highness's person and government, and our earnest desire to forward, by such means as lie within our sphere, the measures adopted by your Royal Highness for the public good.

While we feel the most sincere sorrow for the continued indisposition of our beloved and venerable Sovereign, and earnestly beseech the Almighty to look upon him in mercy, we are thankful to the Supreme Disposer of all events, that he has given us, in your Royal Highness, a Prince so well fitted to conduct the government with the prudence, equity, and firmness, which are necessary for maintaining the honour and the prosperity of the empire.

Since we last had an opportunity of laying the dutiful expression of our homage before the throne, we reflect, with profound gratitude to Him whose kingdom ruleth over all, on the signal favour which he hath manifested to our country and to Europe, in shortening the calamities of war. And we regard with admiration the vigour and promptitude with which your Royal Highness, in conjunction with the Allied Sovereigns, interposed to stop the career of the tyrant, who had again possessed himself of the government of France, and brought Europe into the hazard of encountering those difficulties a second time, which had already been so severely and extensively experienced. We offer our most respectful congratulations to your Royal Highness, on the pre-eminent skill and bravery displayed by his Majesty's troops in the late short war, and on the fortunate and brilliant results in which it has terminated. In the sanguinary conflict which closed the contest, the high talents of the British general, and the invincible courage and perseverance of the army under his command, by one vast effort, have raised the character of British soldiers to the highest pre-eminence, crushed the power of the tyrant, annihilated his hopes, obliged him to abdicate the throne, and, finally, compelled him to an unconditional surrender. We trust that the situation in which he is now placed will render it impossible for him again to disturb the repose of the world.

As servants of the Prince of Peace, we gladly indulge the hope that the pacification which has been concluded will secure to the exhausted nations of Europe a long respite from the horrors and burdens of war; and that that people, whose turbulence has so long proved the scourge of the civilized world, experiencing the advantages of order and tranquillity, will acquire a desire of cultivating the habits and virtues of peace, and of promoting that general improvement of human society, which peace and industry, and regular government, are calculated to advance.

We humbly beg leave to lay before your Royal Highness the dutiful expression of our high satisfaction, on account of that domestic event which has proved so gratifying to the British nation, the marriage of your august daughter, the Princess Charlotte Augusta, with his Serene Highness Leopold George Frederick Duke of Saxe, and Prince of Cobourg of Saalfeld. We congratulate your Royal Highness on this auspicious union; and we trust that it will prove a public blessing, by increasing the prospect which, in the good Providence of God, we enjoy, of having transmitted to latest times the advantages which this favoured nation has derived from the mild and paternal government of the illustrious House of Brunswick.

That Almighty God, by whom kings reign, may support, console, and relieve our venerable Sovereign, and bless her Majesty the Queen;—that He may pour down his choicest blessings on your Royal Highness, and prosper your government;—that He may bless the Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family; and that Princes of your

Royal Highness's House may, to latest posterity, sway the sceptre over this realm, are the fervent prayers f,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

*Sess. 9, May 25, 1816.—Overture and Interim Act anent the Union of Offices.

(See Act 6th, 1817.)

VI.

Sess. 9, May 25, 1816.—Resolution of the General Assembly respecting the Gaelic Translation of the Scriptures.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland called for the report of the Committee upon the Gaelic Translation of the Scriptures, which was produced, and read as follows:—"Your Committee beg leave to report, that after considering the Memorial and Petition from the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, with all the attention due to the important object to which it relates, they find cause to approve of the diligence and zeal of the Society in furnishing, by a Translation of the Holy Scriptures into Gaelic, which has already passed through different impressions, the best means of religious instruction to our countrymen in those districts where the Gaelic language is spoken.

"Your Committee particularly approve of the present communication, as manifesting, on the part of the Society, a becoming respect for the General Assembly, to whom it properly belongs to judge of and to sanction such versions of the Sacred Scriptures as shall be used within the bounds of this Church.

* The following notice of the discussion on this subject appears in the Abridgment of the Assembly's Proceedings:—

"The Assembly proceeded to consider the Overtures respecting the enactment of the Assembly, 1814, anent the Residence of Ministers, and the Union of Offices in the person of Ministers. After long reasoning, it was moved and seconded, That the new enactments contained in the Declaration of Assembly, 1814, not having been transmitted to Presbyteries in the manner prescribed by Act 9, 1697, are not to be regarded as Standing Laws, and are not binding upon this Church; and the General Assembly remit to the Committee of Overtures to prepare an Overture for preventing the improper Union of Offices, to be reported to this Assembly to-morrow; and if the said Overture shall be approved, it shall be transmitted to Presbyteries, and, in the meantime, it shall be passed into an Interim Act. Another motion was moved and seconded, That the Assembly declare, that the Act of Assembly, commonly called the Barrier Act, is a law of essential importance to the general interests of the Church, and ought at all times to be acknowledged as of indispensable and permanent authority. But the General Assembly, considering that the enactment of Assembly, 1814, complained of in the Overtures, does merely declare and enforce that which has been the established law of the Church ever since the Reformation, that the said enactment, as declaratory of the existing laws, is strictly constitutional, and in precise conformity to the principle and letter of the Barrier Act; and, farther, considering that the enactment of 1814 was not merely sanctioned by the Assembly of that year, but was thereafter, on a discussion of the precise question of power alone, solemnly adjudged by the Assembly, 1815, to be within the powers and jurisdiction of the Assembly; and, therefore, dismiss all the Overtures. And the vote being called for, it was agreed that the state of the vote shall be, Approve or Dismiss; it being understood, that if it carry Approve, the first motion shall become the judgment of the Assembly; and if it carry Dismiss, the second motion shall be their judgment; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried, by a considerable majority, Approve; therefore, the Assembly find and remit in terms of the first motion; and appoint the Committee of Overtures to meet at twelve o'clock to-morrow, to prepare an Overture for preventing the improper Union of Offices, to be reported to the Assembly."—Ed. 1843.

“Your Committee are further of opinion, that a final revision of the translation now in use, by means of the acknowledged skill and matured experience of the Rev. Dr Stuart of Luss, and the Rev. Mr Stewart of Dingwall, in order to improve the translation, and render it as complete as possible, and the publication of a new edition thereof in quarto, the work in which the Society are now engaged, is of great importance, and should receive the countenance, support, and encouragement of the General Assembly.

“Your Committee, therefore, beg leave to propose, that a Standing Committee be appointed, whose duty it shall be to consider the means which have been employed for procuring the best version which could be obtained of the Sacred Scriptures in Gaelic, and whether any further means can be used for rendering it more perfect; to receive communications on the subject from such respectable persons as may be willing to offer them; and, particularly, to attend to the progress of the new edition at present projected, with the alterations of the version that may be therein made; to signify to the Society their opinion of it as it comes from the press; and that the said Committee shall report their proceedings on this business to the next General Assembly.

“Your Committee beg leave also to suggest, that it may be proper that the General Assembly prohibit the use of any other Gaelic version of the Scriptures in the churches, chapels, missions, and schools, within the Established Church, other than any of the editions now in use published by the Society, until the work be completed.

“And, lastly, that extracts of the Assembly’s resolution on this business be sent to every Presbytery within whose bounds parishes are situated in which the Gaelic language is spoken.”

The General Assembly approve of this report, and enjoin and ordain, in terms thereof; and they appoint the committee upon this business a standing committee, to carry the orders of the Assembly into execution. The names of the committee are, the Moderator, Dr Gordon, Sir Henry Moncreiff, Dr Hill, Dr Inglis, Dr Macdougall, Dr Fleming, Mr Macdonnell of Forres, Mr Macgibbon of Inverary, Mr Campbell of Dunoon, Dr Macleod, Dr Maclea, Mr Dougal Campbell of Kilmichael, Mr Hugh Fraser of Kilmoran, Dr Irvine, Little Dunkeld, Dr Robert Anderson, Edinburgh, Dr Stewart, Strachur, Mr Fraser, Boleskine, Mr Ross, Kilmanivaig, Mr Macleod, Morven, Mr Mackay, Reay, Mr Mackinnon, Slate, Mr Munro, Uig, Mr Dougal Campbell, Kilfinichan, and Dr Campbell, Edinburgh; Dr Campbell to be convener, and any three to be a quorum.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1816.—Deliverance of the General Assembly on the Communication from the Synod of Ulster in Ireland.

The Report of the Committee upon the Communication from Ulster was called for, and being produced was read, of the following tenor:—"The Committee on the Communication from the Moderator of the Synod of Ulster, having deliberately considered said communication, report to the Venerable Assembly the following opinion:—That from the respectable situation in which the Synod of Ulster is now placed by its connection with the civil government, it may be expedient to declare, that notwithstanding what is contained in the Act of Assembly, 1799, ministerial communion might be allowed between the ministers and licentiates of that Synod and those of the Church of Scotland. But as information respecting the education of their candidates for licence and other particulars must be obtained, before any resolution on this subject be finally adopted, that, therefore, the matter should be delayed; and, in the meantime, a committee be appointed to make the proper inquiries, to correspond with the Moderator of the Synod of Ulster, and to report to next Assembly. In testimony of the respect which this Church entertains for the Established Presbyterian Church of Ireland, the Assembly should request of their Moderator, that he, in their name, would convey, by letter, notice of their present resolution to the Moderator of the Synod of Ulster." The General Assembly unanimously approve of said report, and appoint the committee to draw up the letter therein proposed. The committee are,—the Moderator, Dr Gordon, Dr Hill, Dr Brown, Dr Taylor, Dr Ritchie, Professor Jardine, Professor Young, and Dr Stevenson Macgill; Dr Taylor to be convener.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1816.—Act anent the Ordination of Elders.

Whereas irregularities have crept into the Church with respect to the ordination of elders, the General Assembly, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, did, and hereby do, enact and ordain,—

That, hereafter, no person shall be set apart to the office of an elder, unless he hath attained the age of twenty-one years complete, and produce a certificate to that effect, to remain in retentis; and unless he is a communicant.

That no person be ordained an elder who is not an inhabitant of the parish, or who does not reside therein at least six weeks annually, or who is not an heritor in that parish, liable to pay stipend and other parochial burdens, or who is not the apparent heir of an heritor of that description in the parish.

That when any person who does not generally reside, but only occasionally, as aforesaid, shall be proposed to the kirk-session to be ordained an elder, there shall be produced a certificate, under the hands of the minister and kirk-session of the parish where he generally resides, that he is of unblemished character, and regular in giving attendance on the public ordinances of religion.

And further, it is enacted, That if any elder be ordained in future, without being qualified as above, he shall not be held as entitled to any of the privileges of that office.

But in any city or town where there are more congregations than one, that they shall be held as one parish, in as far as this Act is concerned.

XI.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1816.—Recommendation by the General Assembly to Presbyteries in Aid of the Funds of the Church.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee appointed to draw up a Recommendation to Presbyteries anent the Funds of the Church, which was produced and read, the tenor whereof follows:—"In 1810, the General Assembly submitted to the consideration of the Church the Proposal of a subscription in aid of the fund for defending the rights of the Church. It was stated in this Proposal, that of the L.1000 allowed annually by government for defraying the expenses of the Church, only L.150 is left by the grant to be applied for law proceedings; and intimation has been given by government that no addition will be made to this allowance of L.150. The General Assembly further stated in 1810, that they had ascertained that this allowance was wholly insufficient for defending the general rights of the Church, in questions that often occur where no individual has any patrimonial interest, and for assisting clergymen in defending their right, in those cases where the Church has been in use to grant aid. And, therefore, the General Assembly, judging it essential to the public interest of the Church, and the relief of individual clergymen, that there should be an increase of the fund for these purposes, earnestly recommended a general contribution by the ministers and elders of the Church in the several Presbyteries, to be remitted to the Procurator for the Church, and by him reported to the General Assembly. The General Assembly, upon the report of the Procurator, have now to state to the Church, that although this recommendation has been frequently repeated, contributions have been received from very few Presbyteries, in consequence of which both the evils which were apprehended have arrived. A large debt has been contracted to support those cases which were already upon the funds, and it has become necessary to refuse all new applications for aid, however urgent the cases may be.

“The present debt to the Agents of the Church appears, upon the report of the Procurator, to be L.593, 3s. 4d., and the total sum contributed, with the interest arising thereon, amounts only to the sum of L.276.

“Although it is both unreasonable and inexpedient that the Church should continue indebted in so large a sum as L.593, 3s. 4d. to their Agents the General Assembly have refrained from applying any part of the sum of L.276, already contributed, in extinction of that debt; because the contributions were made in the faith that the total sum subscribed was to be accumulated into a capital, and the interest only to be applied to the purposes in view; and also, because the General Assembly does not despair, that, when the circumstances of the case are placed fully in the view of the Church, this sum may receive an annual increase.

“They have, therefore, directed Sir Henry Moncreiff Wellwood, and the Procurator, to invest the sum of L.276 contributed, in the most advantageous manner possible; and they do again earnestly recommend to the ministers of all the Presbyteries of this Church the annual contribution of 5s., suggested as the only remedy which occurs for relieving the funds of the Church from their present difficulties. They believe that, by small subscriptions, the deficiency in each contribution will be compensated by the number of contributors; and they remind their brethren, that if every clergyman were to contribute 5s., it would raise in a twelvemonth the sum of L.225, and in five years L.1125.” The General Assembly approve of this recommendation; and enjoin the clerks to transmit printed copies thereof to the moderators of all the Presbyteries of this Church, (along with the Overture anent the Union of Offices,) accompanied with a letter from the Moderator of this Assembly, enforcing the said recommendation; and the Assembly enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church to take up the consideration of this subject, not later than the day on which they meet to elect their members to the Assembly.

REVEREND SIR,—Agreeably to the resolution of the General Assembly, I hereby transmit to the Presbyteries of the Church of Scotland the above recommendation of annual contributions, in aid of the funds of the Church; the importance of observing which, I am confident, that no words of mine can enforce. I am, Reverend Sir, your most obedient servant,

To be communicated.

XII.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1816.—Recommendation by the General Assembly concerning Parochial Registers.

The General Assembly having taken the overture anent parochial registers under their serious consideration, unanimously approve of the same; and therefore earnestly recommend to all the Presbyteries and Kirk-Sessions within the bounds of the Church, "That whereas great inconvenience and loss has been experienced in many parts of the country, either from no parochial registers being kept, or from the inaccuracy with which it is done, the Assembly enjoins the several Presbyteries of this Church to take the steps necessary to secure the keeping of three separate registers in every parish: In one of which, the names of all children and of their parents shall be recorded, with the dates of their birth, whether their parents belong to the Church, or are Dissenters: In another, the names of all persons married, with the dates of their marriages, whether legally solemnized or not, with the specialties of any particular cases which may occur: And, in the third, the names of all persons who have died, with the particular dates of their deaths, whether they have been buried in the parish burying-ground, or elsewhere; and that these three registers shall be brought up to the Presbytery of the bounds at the first meeting after the conclusion of each year respectively, in each of which the Presbytery shall enter their remarks on the manner in which it is kept, signed by the moderator for the time."

The General Assembly farther appoint the following committee, viz., Principal Baird, Dr William Ritchie, Dr Fleming, Dr Inglis, Dr Meiklejohn, Mr Watson, and the Procurator,—Dr Meiklejohn to be convener; to communicate with the Officers of the Crown, in the view of obtaining the authority of the legislature to secure the faithful observance of this arrangement.

The General Assembly enjoin their clerks to send printed copies of this recommendation to all the Presbyteries of this Church, who are hereby required to communicate the same to all the Kirk-Sessions within their bounds.

XIII.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1816.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

II.

Sess. 1, May 22, 1817.—The Prince Regent's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

In the name and on the behalf of his Majesty,

GEORGE, P. R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well.—Impressed with the same lively interest which we have at all times felt for the prosperity of the Church of Scotland, and sensible of the advantages which so large a portion of our subjects has derived from the counsels of the General Assembly of that Church, we always contemplate with satisfaction the period appointed for the renewal of your deliberations; and we rest assured that your proceedings upon the present occasion will entitle you to a continuance of our countenance and protection.

We have thought fit to constitute and appoint our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, William Earl of Errol, to be our Commissioner in the present Assembly. The experience we have had of his loyalty and attachment to us, and the conviction which we feel that he is in every respect eminently qualified to discharge this great trust, are considerations which have recommended him to our choice, as a fit person to be our representative amongst you; and, we doubt not, these reasons will render him acceptable to you, and will ensure to him that respect and reverence which, in his high and important office, he is entitled to receive. We feel confident that you may rely upon his cordial support and co-operation in all your efforts to promote the cause of true religion and piety, and therein the welfare and happiness of our people.

Although the wisdom and discretion which, upon former occasions, have characterised your proceedings, entitle you to our confidence and affection, yet we feel ourselves called upon at this time, in a particular manner, to impress upon you the necessity of redoubling your zeal in the administering of useful instruction, and in the due discharge of every public and private duty.

At a time when a spirit inimical to the established constitution, and the existing form of government of these realms, unhappily prevails amongst certain descriptions of our people, too much pains cannot be taken to counteract the efforts of those wicked and designing persons who labour to increase so mischievous a spirit, and to promote general discontent.

We exhort you, therefore, in the strongest manner, at this moment, to be vigilant, and to expose the designs of those who, under the specious semblance of Reform, inculcate doctrines the most extravagant and dangerous; and who, by constant misrepresentations and wicked means, endeavour to bring into contempt all the civil and religious establishments and institutions of the United Kingdom.

Well-beloved, nothing can be more effectual to repress these evils, than a thorough and sincere belief in the doctrines of Christianity; we charge you, therefore, to use your unremitting exertions to establish the salutary influence of the Gospel in the minds of those committed to your charge, and to enforce a due obedience to the laws, upon Christian principles, and from Christian motives. We depend upon your zealous endeavours to promote the growth of true piety, and a due reverence for the sacred Word of Almighty God; and trust you will not fail to impress upon the minds of our subjects, that a strict and conscientious discharge of their duties, both civil and religious, affords the only sure means by which individual happiness and national prosperity can be secured. Thus will you execute worthily the sacred duties which are assigned to you; for thus your exertions will promote the glory of God and the happiness of your fellow-creatures. On our part, be assured that we are always anxious to secure and continue to all our subjects the invaluable possession of their laws, their liberties, and their excellent constitution; and we repeat to you our full determination to maintain and support the Church of Scotland in the complete enjoyment of all her rights and privileges. Commending you, therefore, in all your counsels and deliberations, to the Divine guidance and protection, we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 15th day of May 1817, in the fifty-seventh year of our reign.

By the Command of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in the name and on the behalf of his Majesty,

SIDMOUTH.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 24, 1817.—The General Assembly's Answer to the Prince Regent's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Royal Highness,

The gracious letter with which your Royal Highness, in the name and on the behalf of his Majesty, has condescended to honour this General Assembly, has been received with the most profound respect and gratitude.

We are peculiarly gratified by the lively interest which your Royal Highness continues to feel in the prosperity of the Church of Scotland, and by the notice taken of the advantages which a large portion of his Majesty's subjects have derived from the counsels of her General Assemblies. It is a pledge of the happy union which subsists between our religious and civil establishments, that the annual meetings of the General Assembly of our National Church take place under royal countenance and protection; and we trust that our proceedings, upon the present occasion, will secure to us a continuance of that favour which we have experienced through so long and uninterrupted a series of years.

The appointment of William Earl of Errol to represent the sacred person of our beloved Sovereign among us, we regard as an additional pledge of the royal favour. The eminent qualifications which he possesses for discharging the duties of this great trust cannot fail to render him acceptable to us, and command the respect and reverence which, in his high and important office, he is entitled to receive. We rely with full assurance on his countenance and cordial support in all our efforts to promote the cause of true religion and piety, and thus secure the welfare and happiness of the people committed to our care.

The confidence and affection, inspired by the wisdom and discretion of former Assemblies, with which your Royal Highness is graciously pleased to regard us, fill our minds with sentiments of the warmest gratitude, and encourage us to redouble our zeal in administering useful instruction, and in the discharge of every public and private duty.

We lament, with unfeigned sorrow, that a spirit inimical to the established constitution and the existing form of government of these realms, exists in any description of his Majesty's subjects. Though well assured that the principles of unshaken loyalty, and a just sense of the blessings of our inestimable constitution, generally prevail in this part of the United Kingdom, we shall guard, with anxious solicitude, against the beginnings of evil, and employ our most strenuous exertions to counteract the efforts of any wicked and designing persons, who may labour to increase so mischievous a spirit, and to promote general discontent.

Receiving with all respect the intimations of danger, we shall exert the vigilance which the pressure of the time demands, and be diligent in exposing the designs of those who, under the specious semblance of Reform, inculcate doctrines the most extravagant and dangerous, and who, by constant misrepresentations and wicked means, endeavour to bring into contempt all the civil and religious establishments and institutions of the United Kingdom.

Fully satisfied of the powerful efficacy of religious principle, and that nothing can be more effectual to repress those evils than a thorough and sincere belief in the doctrines of Christianity, we listen with reverence to the call upon us, and will not fail to use our unremitting exertions to establish the salutary influence of the Gospel in the minds of those committed to our charge, and to enforce a due obedience to the laws upon Christian principles, and from Christian motives.

Contemplating steadily the great objects of our holy vocation, we humbly trust, that entire dependence may be placed on our zealous endeavours to promote the growth of true piety and a due reverence for the sacred Word of Almighty God; and we are convinced, that while we impress upon the minds of our people a strict and conscientious discharge of their duties, both civil and religious, we are directing them to the only means by which individual happiness and national prosperity can be secured. We feel the unspeakably strong obligations which we are under, to perform worthily the sacred duties assigned to us; for it is only by so doing that we can promote the glory of God, and the happiness of our fellow-creatures.

We rejoice in the assurance, that it is the great object of your Royal Highness to secure and continue to all his Majesty's subjects the invaluable possession of their laws, their liberties, and their excellent constitution; and we receive, with the most sincere gratitude, the renewed expression of your full determination to maintain and support the Church of Scotland in the complete enjoyment of all her rights and privileges, as by law established.

We receive, with all thankfulness, the royal donation of L.2000, for the propagation of Christian knowledge, and the principles of the Reformed religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. We shall be anxiously studious, by a faithful application of this bounty, to accomplish the pious and benevolent purposes for which it has been bestowed.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may bless, sustain, and console his Majesty the King;—that He may bless abundantly the Queen, your Royal Highness, the Princess of Wales, and all the members of the Royal Family;—that He may direct and prosper the measures of his Majesty's government;—and that princes of your Illustrious House may be the guardians of our national blessings, and reign over a free and a happy people to the latest posterity, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

GAVIN GIBB, Moderator.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 24, 1817.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to lay before the throne this humble expression of our dutiful and affectionate respect for his Majesty's person and family, and of devoted attachment to that constitution of government under which the goodness of Divine Providence has placed us.

We offer to your Royal Highness, during the continuance of our beloved Sovereign's lamented indisposition, the sympathy which we feel in common with a people to whom, from his paternal reign and private virtues, he has been so long and so deservedly endeared.

We shared the general horror of the nation, at the recent atrocious assault upon your Royal Highness' sacred person, returning from Parliament in the exercise of a solemn function of the British Sovereign; and the general joy and gratitude for the Divine protection which rendered that nefarious attempt abortive; and we devoutly implore the Everlasting King to encompass your Royal Highness with his omnipotent shield, and to defend from every open and secret enemy a life so precious to the State.

With sentiments becoming Britons, we contemplate the happy effects of that splendidly-conceived, and brilliantly-executed, enterprise against the city of Algiers, which, in adding a new wreath to our crown of naval glory, broke down, we trust for ever, a system of piracy, at war with the rights of human nature, and formed a becoming sequel to the arduous struggle strenuously maintained, and triumphantly terminated by Great Britain, for the independence of Europe.

The exultation with which we reflect on these exertions of our country in the great cause of legitimate government and of real liberty, and the hopes with which we anticipate the long continuance of that peace which they have brought to the world, have not made us insensible to the severe sufferings now widely diffused among our countrymen, partly by the necessary expenditure in a war of unexampled difficulties, partly by the consequent sudden change and diminution in the demands of commerce, and partly by the scarcity of food with which it has pleased the Great Disposer of all to visit us, as if to remind us amidst human triumphs, that we ought to rejoice with trembling. While we sincerely sympathise in their sufferings, and deeply deplore the attempts of unprincipled men, during this season of general distress, to incite the unhappy sufferers to rebellious deeds, and to propagate the licentious opinions which prepare for the subversion alike of the altar and the throne, we are cheered by the admirable display which has thus been called forth throughout our country, on the one hand, of patience, and fortitude, and resignation to the will of Heaven, under inevitable privations, and on the other, of generous self-denial and active beneficence, bringing alleviations to the pressure. Knowing that reverence for his righteous law is the foundation on which the Moral Governor of the universe has determined that the strength of empires shall repose, we congratulate your Royal Highness that the British Sovereign rules in the hearts of a people who have shown so general a sense of their sacred obligations, whom neither the sacrifices of a long and arduous war, nor the sufferings of unexpected want, nor the corrupting inflammatory language of impiety and sedition, have as yet been able, nor will they, we hope in God, be ever able, to seduce from their allegiance.

We are happy to embrace this opportunity of informing your Royal Highness, that we believe the people of Scotland to have had a conspicuous share in this interesting display of national worth; and in whatever degree this may be ascribed to the services of the Established Church, and to the co-operation of the justly valued institution of parochial schools, we hesitate not to assure your Royal Highness, that we shall give all the encouragement in our power, to every prudent measure for disseminating throughout the community a spirit of consideration and economy favourable at once to the interest of religion and of civil government. In these, and in all our ministerial labours, we will continue to imitate the example left to us by our venerated fathers, grateful for the distinguished advantage which the Church of Scotland derives from its connection with the British constitution, and under the serious conviction that the religious and moral effect of a Gospel ministry is essential to human happiness, in all the various conditions and relations of the present life, as well as throughout the endless progress of man's immortal destiny.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, may shower down His consolations upon our beloved Sovereign, bless the Queen and Royal Family, and continue to prosper the Government which your Royal Highness exercises in his Majesty's name and behalf; and that descendants of your illustrious House may, to the latest posterity, sway the British sceptre over a free, great, loyal, and virtuous people, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 4. May 26, 1817.—Judgment of the General Assembly on the reference from the Presbytery of Brechin, respecting the Examination of the Schools of Montrose.

The General Assembly, after due deliberation, approve of the firmness and propriety with which the Presbytery of Brechin have asserted their undubitable right to examine schools of every description within their bounds; but, in respect it has been stated by the elder from the burgh of Montrose, in name of the magistrates and council, that they were sensible of their past error, and will give no opposition in future to the exercise of this right, the Assembly judge it unnecessary to take any farther steps in this matter; at the same time, they recommend it to the members of that, and of all the other Presbyteries of this Church, to continue their vigilance in attending to the different schools within their bounds. The Assembly enjoin their clerks to see that this judgment be inserted among the printed Acts of the Assembly.

VI.

Sess. 6, May 28, 1817.—Act anent the Union of Offices.

Whereas apprehensions have been generally entertained, that the permission given in a few recent instances to clergymen holding a Professorship in an University, to hold at the same time a parochial charge in the country, may introduce abuses hurtful to the interests of religion and literature: The General Assembly, conceiving that it is their duty to watch over both those interests, and feeling a becoming solicitude to maintain inviolate the residence of ministers in their respective parishes, which the fundamental laws of this Church require, and by which the people of Scotland enjoy in full measure the comfort and edification of a Gospel ministry, direct all the Presbyteries of this Church to employ the means competent for them, in order to prevent the same person from holding at the same time a Professorship in an University and a parochial charge, which is not situated in the city which is the seat of that University, or in the suburbs thereof; and, that this direction may be uniformly carried into effect, the General Assembly do, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, enact and ordain, that if a Professor in an University be hereafter presented to a parochial charge, which is not situated in the city that is the seat of that University, or in the suburbs thereof, he shall, within nine months after his being admitted to the said charge, resign his Professorship, and at the next ordinary meeting of Presbytery thereafter shall produce to the Presbytery a certificate that his resignation has been accepted. And that if the minister of a parish, which is not situated in the city that is the seat of a University, or the suburbs thereof, be hereafter presented or elected to a Professorship in any University, he shall, at the first ordinary meeting of Presbytery which shall take place after the lapse of six months from the date of his induction into the Professorship, resign into the hands of the Presbytery his parochial charge. And in the event of this injunction not being complied with by the persons holding such offices, the General Assembly, with the like consent of the Presbyteries of this Church, ordain the Presbytery of the bounds to serve him in his character of parish minister with a libel for the breach of this statute, and to proceed therein according to the rules of the Church. And it is provided, that ministers of Chapels of Ease shall, in all respects, be subject to the provisions of this Act, in the same manner as parochial ministers. And it is further provided, that the Old and New Towns of Aberdeen shall be held as forming one city, so far as respects the provisions of this overture.

Sess. 1, May 21, 1818.—The Prince Regent's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

In the name and on the behalf of his Majesty,

GEORGE, P. R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well.—We embrace with satisfaction the opportunity afforded us by the present meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, to renew the assurance of our regard and paternal affection, and to encourage you, by the declaration of our countenance and support, in the diligent discharge of the high and important duties committed to your trust. The wisdom of your counsels and measures has, at all times, ensured to you our unbounded confidence, and we are fully satisfied that your proceedings will continue to be characterised by temper and calmness; that you will be actuated, in all your deliberations, by a feeling of steady loyalty and attachment to ourself, and by an earnest desire of promoting, to the utmost of your power, the happiness and best interests of our people. In repeating to you the assurance of our full determination to maintain the Church of Scotland in the complete enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, we cannot omit to announce to you our resolution to evince more strongly our fatherly solicitude for the prosperity of that Church, by extending, at no distant day, pecuniary succour to those parishes which, either from their redundant population, or from their expanded dimensions, are at present incapable of supplying adequate places of worship for their religiously-disposed inhabitants.

We have thought fit again to appoint our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, William Earl of Errol, to be our Commissioner, and to represent our royal person in the present Assembly, well knowing the lively interest he will take in all your deliberations, and how ready he will be to co-operate with you in your endeavours for the advancement of the cause of true religion and of virtue, and for the furtherance of the spiritual benefit and advantage of the people entrusted to your care.

Since the last meeting of your venerable body, it has pleased Almighty God, in the inscrutable wisdom of his counsels, to visit our Royal House and this nation with one of the heaviest and most afflicting dispensations of his Divine Providence.

In the general sorrow upon this melancholy occasion, we are fully assured that you participate, and that you, and the rest of our faithful and loving subjects, will join with us in imploring the Great Disposer of events, that it may please Him to administer to all our minds the consolation of which we stand so greatly in need, and which He alone can impart. Nor will you neglect, under this severe national calamity, to remind those whom it is your office to instruct, that it is their duty to receive, with implicit submission, the present visitation, and to place their reliance upon that Being who has given us the consoling assurance, that all, even His most afflictive dispensations, work together for the general good.

Well-beloved, we exhort you to reflect how materially the welfare and prosperity of a nation are affected by the conduct of the ministers of its religion. It is in their power, by the due and assiduous discharge of their pastoral duties, by the soundness of their precepts, and the blameless purity of their lives, to produce the most salutary effects upon the general feelings and character of the people. And they must remember, that in proportion as their opportunities of usefulness are extensive, so will they be responsible for the neglect or abuse of them. It is the great object of all human law and government, by regulating and adjusting the various rights and interests of individuals, to promote the well-being, and constitute the stability and good order of society. But vain and insufficient must ever be the most enlightened institutions, unless regarded as deriving their weight and authority from the precepts of the Divine Law; and the wisest human ordinances will be found ineffectual for the maintenance of peace and social order when the restraints of the Gospel are disregarded. The experience of modern times has shown that no light of science—no progress in the arts—no advantages of commerce—no success in arms, can secure the internal quiet and prosperity of a nation which throws off the authority of Divine Revelation, the rejection of which infallibly leads to all the mischiefs of private injustice and public anarchy. And even in these days, and in this island, attempts have not been wanting to bring into ridicule and disrespect the most sacred commandments of God, and the Prayer which was taught to his Apostles by Our Blessed Saviour himself.

It is your province, as the guardians of religion, and the expounders of the Divine Law, to warn the people against falling into any of these most dangerous errors; and, by impressing upon all ranks of our subjects their solemn obligation to observe the precepts and fulfil the duties inculcated by the Gospel, to give effect to our endeavours for the promotion of their moral happiness and improvement. With this view, we most earnestly repeat to you our recommendation to pay continued and increased attention to the advancement of godliness, and the discouragement of all loose notions, whether in faith or morality. Such notions, unless timely counteracted, must tend to the destruction of all good principles in the hearts of men, and the provoking of the displeasure of Almighty God. Be diligent, be circumspect. More encouraging dispositions will arise: profit by them; and your labour shall not be in vain.

We have beheld with the highest satisfaction the gradual restoration of tranquillity and good order in those parts of Great Britain where the efforts of wicked and designing men were, for a time, but too successful in deluding some of our subjects, and in disseminating doctrines which aimed at the subversion of the existing form of government established in this realm.

And we look with confidence to the loyalty of the great body of our people, and their firm attachment to the constitution, as the surest means of maintaining the peace and quiet of our kingdom, and eradicating what may still remain of that spirit of disaffection which unhappily existed in the minds of some of our deluded subjects.

Be assured that no exertion shall be wanting on our part to further this great object, by a firm, temperate, and impartial administration of the laws, intended alike for the protection of the innocent, and for the dread and punishment of the wicked.

Fully assured that your attachment to our royal person, your love for your country, and zeal for the glory of Almighty God, will prompt you to the due and faithful discharge of all your duties, we commend your deliberations to the Divine guidance; and so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 9th day of May 1818, in the 58th year of our reign.

By the Command of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty,

SIDMOUTH.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1818.—The General Assembly's Answer to the Prince Regent's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Royal Highness,

The gracious letter with which your Royal Highness, in the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty, has been pleased to honour this meeting of the General Assembly of our National Church, has been received with every sentiment of loyalty and respect.

It is with unfeigned gratitude that we have received the renewed assurance of your Royal Highness's regard and paternal affection; and we are encouraged, by the declaration of your countenance and support, to persevere in the diligent discharge of the high and important duties with which we are entrusted.

The approbation which your Royal Highness has been pleased to express of our past councils and measures, and the unbounded confidence which you have condescended to repose in us, have afforded us the most lively and heartfelt satisfaction; and we trust that we shall be enabled to show ourselves worthy of these distinguished marks of your Royal Highness's regard, by conducting our deliberations at this time with becoming temper and calmness, by cherishing a steady loyalty and attachment to our beloved Sovereign and your Royal Highness, and by doing every thing in our power for promoting the happiness and best interests of his Majesty's subjects in this part of the United Kingdom.

We feel that well grounded confidence, which long experience has taught us to cherish, in the repeated assurance of your Royal Highness's full determination to maintain the Church of Scotland in the complete enjoyment of all its rights and privileges.

We learn with peculiar thankfulness and joy the resolution of your Royal Highness to extend, at no distant day, pecuniary succour for increasing the number of our places of worship in those parishes of Scotland which, either from their redundant population or great extent, stand in need of such an addition. This wise and pious measure we consider as a fresh proof of your Royal Highness's fatherly solicitude for the prosperity of our National Church. And we confidently anticipate from it the most salutary effects, both in a religious and moral view, to a large proportion of our population that are at present destitute, in a great measure, of the means and opportunities of spiritual instruction.

We are gratified by the appointment of the Earl of Errol to represent his Majesty's person in this General Assembly, because he possesses our sincere and affectionate respect, and because we are assured of the lively interest which he will take in all our deliberations, and of his readiness to co-operate with us in our endeavours for the advancement of the cause of true religion and virtue.

In the feelings expressed by your Royal Highness respecting that awful and unexpected dispensation with which it has pleased Almighty God to afflict your Royal House and this nation, we most cordially and deeply participate. In common with all our fellow-subjects, we shared in unfeigned sympathy with the royal persons more immediately affected by the event which we deplore. It becomes us to bow with reverence before the Sovereign of the universe, who, in His unsearchable wisdom, has removed from our eye and our expectation one who was so justly dear to our hearts. Our most sincere and fervent prayers have often ascended to His Throne, for that strong consolation to your Royal Highness and your afflicted House, which even the sympathies of a loyal and affectionate people are unable to yield. Nor have we failed to remind those whom it is our office to instruct, that it is their duty to receive with implicit submission the present visitation, and to place their reliance on that Being who rules in the exercise of infinite perfection, and has promised to make all things work together for good to them that love Him.

We receive your Royal Highness's paternal counsels with becoming thankfulness. And, aware of the vast importance of pastoral diligence, and fidelity to the welfare and prosperity of the nation, it shall be our unceasing concern, depending upon the Divine aid, to teach sound doctrine and pure morality to the people committed to our care—to inculcate upon them that practical regard to the Gospel, without which the wisest human institutions are of no avail, and to employ every means in our power to make them good and loyal subjects, by making them true and zealous Christians. While we learn with profound regret, that there are persons in these days, and in this island, who have attempted to bring into ridicule and disrespect some of the commandments and institutions of religion, we trust that a better spirit will soon become universal, and that all ranks of our fellow-subjects will be persuaded to fear God, and to work righteousness. We beg leave to assure your Royal Highness that no efforts shall be wanting on our part to discourage any symptoms of profaneness which may appear among the people of Scotland, and to cherish in them that reverence for every thing sacred, without which they can neither be virtuous nor happy.

We participate in the high satisfaction expressed by your Royal Highness at the restoration of tranquillity and good order in those parts of the Island where wicked and designing men had succeeded in seducing some of his Majesty's subjects from their allegiance and duty. We pray to God that the inhabitants of every part of this highly favoured empire may be duly sensible of the blessings they enjoy under our happy constitution, and be ready at all times to guard it from internal disaffection, as well as from foreign aggression. And it is with no ordinary feelings of gratitude and joy that we communicate to your Royal Highness our full conviction, that the people with whom we are more immediately connected are sensible of their privileges, sacred and civil, as a nation, and most cordial in their attachment to the government of their country, and to your Illustrious House.

We receive, with all thankfulness, the royal donation of L.2000, for the propagation of Christian knowledge, and the principles of the Reformed religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. We shall be anxiously studious, by a faithful application of this bounty, to accomplish the pious and benevolent purposes for which it has been bestowed.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may impart to his Majesty the King all that support and consolation which his case requires;—that He may bless the Queen, your Royal Highness, the Princess of Wales, and all the members of the Royal Family;—that He may direct the councils, and prosper the measures of his Majesty's government;—and that princes of your Illustrious House may reign, to the latest posterity, over a free, loyal, and happy people, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1818.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave humbly to approach your Royal Highness with the sincere expression of our affection and respect for his Majesty's person and family; of the satisfaction and happiness which we experience under the administration of your Royal Highness, and of our devoted attachment to the happy constitution of government under which Divine Providence has placed us.

We deeply lament his Majesty's indisposition. Under the continuance of it we offer your Royal Highness the tribute of our sympathy. We pray that Almighty God may impart to his Majesty all the consolation of which his condition is susceptible, and speedily restore him to the consoling enjoyment of every blessing which may crown the evening of his days with felicity.

It is with heartfelt sorrow we turn our thoughts, on this occasion, to the severe calamity with which the United Kingdom has been visited, by the death of your amiable and beloved daughter, her Royal Highness the Princess Charlotte Augusta. We take a tender interest in the paternal feelings of your Royal Highness, which have been so deeply wounded by this mournful event. We commiserate the agonizing sufferings of a widowed husband, thus bereaved of all that was most dear to him in life; and we sympathize with the whole Royal Family, under a stroke which has deprived them of so bright an ornament.

The reverence for religion with which the mind of her Royal Highness was impressed, her attentive observance of its ordinances, and her many eminent virtues, both princely and domestic, render her memory peculiarly venerable in our estimation, and have embalmed it in the affections of a disconsolate people.

The fair promise of future blessings to the United Kingdom, which the early life of her Royal Highness held forth, and the interesting circumstances in which her precious life was cut off, render our grief for the event doubly poignant. When the hopes of the nation had been wound up to the highest pitch, when we already anticipated that pledge which would have transmitted to posterity, in the line of your Royal Highness, a succession of princes to the throne, she in whom these hopes were centered was suddenly snatched from the world, and our fond expectations humbled in the dust.

Under this dire calamity we bow in pious submission to the will of God. We pray that His divine consolations may abound to your Royal Highness, and we trust that your heavy affliction may find some alleviation in the universal tribute of condolence voluntarily poured forth throughout the wide extent of the British Empire.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, may shed Divine consolations upon our beloved Sovereign, bless the Queen and Royal Family, and continue to prosper the government which your Royal Highness exercises with so much success and glory, in the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty, and that descendants of the Illustrious House of Brunswick may, to the latest posterity, sway the British sceptre over a free, great, loyal, and virtuous people, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 1, May 20, 1819.—The Prince Regent's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

In the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty,

GEORGE, P. R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well.—We have always contemplated with the most lively interest the return of the period appointed for the meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland; and it is with sentiments of peculiar satisfaction that we now hasten to renew to you the assurance of our paternal regard, and of our disposition to co-operate with you in all such measures as may tend to the moral and religious improvement of our people. When we call to mind the constant and laudable zeal which you have ever shown for the promotion of learning and true religion, we cannot doubt that the same advantages which have heretofore resulted from your deliberations will continue to flow from them. Your venerable body will sympathise with us in the severe affliction with which, since we last addressed you, it has pleased the Divine Providence to visit the members of the Royal Family, and the whole British nation, in the death of her Most Excellent Majesty. You will feel with us, that in the discharge of the duties, whether public or private, of her high station, she displayed a brilliant example of all those qualities which, while they dignify and add lustre to a throne, constitute the most becoming ornament of the female character in domestic life.

We have thought fit to appoint our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, George Earl of Morton, to be the representative of our royal person upon the present occasion, well assured that your counsels will derive every advantage from his wisdom and sound judgment, and that he will faithfully and zealously discharge the weighty and important trust confided to his care. We cannot doubt that he will experience at your hands all the respect and consideration due to the high office with which we have judged it proper to invest him, and that you will manifest, in the reception which you give to the bearer of our delegated authority, your dutiful submission to ourself.

We assure you that we have not abandoned the intention which we expressed to you at your last Assembly, of affording aid for the supply of adequate places of worship for the religiously-disposed inhabitants of those parishes which, from their extent or population, stand in need of such assistance. Temporary circumstances have impeded the fulfilment of our intention; but we trust that every impediment will be speedily surmounted. It is with deep-felt grief that we call your attention to the increase which has recently taken place in the number of crimes. This-increase, we trust, as in former instances of the otherwise happy transition from war to peace, will be but temporary. We purpose (assisted by the wisdom of our Parliament) to direct proper measurers to be taken for ameliorating the discipline of our prisons. At the same time, we exhort you to charge those ministers of the Church of Scotland whose peculiar province it is to watch over the religious instruction of the unhappy persons confined in the gaols of that part of our United Kingdom, to be vigilant and unremitting in the performance of their sacred functions. The mischief we deplore may be materially abated by the judicious and zealous exertions of those ministers of the Gospel, to whom it more particularly belongs, in these receptacles of crime, to awaken the consciences of the obdurate, to enlighten the understandings of the ignorant, and to bring back the lost sheep into the fold of the True Shepherd. You will not fail to instruct your hearers in general how much their temporal, as well as their eternal welfare, will be promoted by a strict adherence to the precepts of the religion which you preach, and that even human institutions are to be respected as conducing to the same end. You will teach them, that by maintaining a vigilant control over all their selfish passions, which seek their gratification at the expense and to the injury of their neighbours; and by being always in strict and peaceable obedience to the laws and ordinances of the community of which they are members, they will best consult not only the happiness of their fellow-creatures, but their own.

As a powerful means of procuring the ready dissemination of these sentiments, we recommend to you a watchful superintendence over the education of the rising generation. It has been found (and no where more than in Scotland) that the general instruction of the children of the poorer classes has been attended with the happiest effects. A visible improvement has taken place in the morals of the people, and those who might otherwise have passed their days in ignorance and vice have been qualified to become useful members of society.

It only remains for us to renew to you the assurance of our steadfast purpose and determination to maintain inviolate the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland, as by law established; and, commending your deliberations to the guidance of the Almighty, we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 7th day of May 1819, in the fifty-ninth year of our reign.

By the Command of his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in the name,
and on the behalf of his Majesty,

Sess. 3, May 22, 1819.—The General Assembly's Answer to the Prince Regent's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Royal Highness,

The very gracious letter with which your Royal Highness, in the name, and on the behalf of his Majesty, has been pleased to honour this meeting of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, has been received with the respect and gratitude due to such a renewed proof of your royal favour.

The assurance of your Royal Highness's paternal regard, and disposition to support us in those measures by which we strive to promote the religious and moral improvement of the people under our charge, is a most powerful encouragement to persevere in the faithful discharge of our duty. We receive your gracious approbation of our zeal for the advancement of religion and literature, as a gratifying recompence of our past labours, and feel your confidence in the success of our future exertions a motive for redoubling our diligence in time to come.

Bending in profound veneration to the will of that Great Being whose counsels are unsearchable, we sympathise deeply in the successive afflictions of your Royal House. In tendering the expression of our unfeigned condolence to your Royal Highness on the lamented death of her Majesty, the late Queen, we desire to remember, with gratitude to Heaven, how long she was spared for a blessing to these lands; and earnestly pray that the excellent example which she set of genuine piety, domestic virtue, and enlightened zeal for the moral interests of the community, may never be forgotten.

The appointment of the Earl of Morton to represent his Majesty's person in this Assembly, is to us a fresh token of your fatherly care and regard. The attachment of his noble ancestors to the liberties of their country and principles of the Church of Scotland, his own high and exemplary character, the dignified situations which he has filled, and his well-known zeal for the maintenance of the British constitution, render the choice which your Royal Highness has made most acceptable to us, and induce us, from esteem, as well as a sense of duty, to receive him with all the respect and consideration due to the important office with which he is invested.

The assurance that your Royal Highness has not abandoned your wise and benevolent intention of affording aid for the supply of adequate places of worship for the religiously-disposed inhabitants of those parishes which, from their extent and population, stand in need of such assistance, confirms our reliance on the affectionate interest which your Royal Highness takes in the prosperity of our Church; and from the fulfilment of that intention (which we trust will not be long delayed) we anticipate the happiest consequences to a large proportion of our fellow-subjects.

The increase in the number of crimes, to which your Royal Highness calls our attention, has not by any means escaped our notice. We trust and pray that the prevalence of this evil may be of short duration, and that the measures which your Royal Highness proposes to take for arresting its progress may be crowned, by Divine Providence, with complete success. And we pledge ourselves to your Royal Highness, that before we separate we shall adopt every means in our power to cooperate with these measures.

We thankfully acknowledge the wisdom and watchful care of your Royal Highness, in exhorting us to that most sacred and important branch of our duty, which consists in instructing the ignorant, and reclaiming the obdurate, especially when suffering under the consequences of their crimes. Permit us to assure your Royal Highness, that our best exertions as a body, and as individuals, shall not be wanting to impress on every mind to which our influence extends the necessity of religious principle as the foundation, and of respectful submission to the laws and institutions of their country as the means, of personal and social happiness.

It affords us the most lively pleasure that your Royal Highness has been pleased to recommend our continuing the watchful superintendance which we have been accustomed to exercise over the education of youth. The general diffusion of useful knowledge among the inferior orders of society has been long the pride and honour of Scotland, and our experience of its beneficial effects determines us to employ every means in our power to extend the benefits of instruction to all classes of persons under our care; and we rejoice in the prospect of these benefits being more generally extended, not only throughout the British Empire, but over the whole world.

We are animated in the discharge of these and all our other duties, by the repeated assurance which your Royal Highness has condescended to give of your stedfast purpose and determination to maintain inviolate the rights and privileges of our Established Church. Attached by every principle of loyalty and feeling of gratitude to the Royal House of Brunswick, we rely, in perfect security, on the protection and countenance of a Prince of that illustrious line, who, in exciting us to our duty, shows that the faithful discharge of it is the surest recommendation to his favour.

That the Father of Mercies may vouchsafe to bless his Majesty the King with that Heavenly support and consolation which He alone can bestow;—that He may watch over the person, prolong the days, and bless the administration of your Royal Highness;—that you may behold the increasing prosperity of a loyal and affectionate people, and be honoured as the instrument of Divine Providence for their good;—and that, after long ruling in righteousness and judgment, you may receive the recompence of a heavenly crown, are the prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 22, 1819.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Royal Highness George Prince of Wales, Regent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, his Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders, met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, embrace the opportunity, afforded by the return of our annual meeting, of conveying to your Royal Highness the renewed assurances of our respect and affection to his Majesty's person and family.

While we deeply deplore his Majesty's long seclusion, by a severe and protracted malady, from the personal exercise of the functions appropriate to that high station which he constitutionally holds in the government of these realms, we offer to your Royal Highness the expressions of our respectful condolence on the great loss which your Royal Highness, the Royal Family, and the empire at large, have sustained in the lamented death of her late Majesty the Queen, who continued to share the affections of our beloved Sovereign, and to form the principal solace of his life for a long series of years. The amiable manner in which she discharged the various conjugal and maternal duties rendered her Majesty's character a shining example to her sex throughout the empire; while her diffusive but unostentatious beneficence—a beneficence discovered to its full extent, chiefly by the regrets and tears of those who had been accustomed to partake of it, cannot fail to give to the memory of our late excellent Queen an endearing interest. That decided and conspicuous regard to the interests of religion and virtue, manifested both by her example and support, not only gave to the British Court a peculiar and dignified pre-eminence, but diffused its salutary influence in a widely extended sphere. These recollections must render it difficult to appreciate the full extent of the loss sustained by her Majesty's death, and will dispose the wise and good long to cherish her memory with affectionate veneration. We are called, by this dispensation of Providence, to bow with submission before the throne of the Almighty. It is our sincere and earnest prayer, that, in the recollection and imitation of the various excellencies that adorned the character of the late Queen, her illustrious descendants, and all ranks in the community, may express their respect for her memory, and find consolation under the irreparable loss occasioned by her death.

That it may please Almighty God, the Father of Mercies, to bless his Majesty, and impart to him all that consolation and relief of which his condition is susceptible;—that the King of Kings may vouchsafe to your Royal Highness every blessing, temporal and spiritual, and render your administration effectual, according to your Royal Highness's benevolent wishes, for promoting the virtue and happiness of your people, and the general prosperity of the empire;—that He may distinguish, by his favour, all the members of the Royal Family;—and that the Crown of these realms may be transmitted in a succession of Princes of your royal house to latest generations, are the sincere and earnest prayers of,

May it please your Royal Highness, his Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 4, May 24, 1819.—Act for the better Dispatching the Business of Assemblies reprinted.

May 26, 1718.

The General Assembly, finding that their business is much retarded by parties having references, appeals, and complaints, to lay before the Assembly, their not giving them timeously into the Committee for Bills, and that, by such delays, the Assembly is often necessarily obliged to commit several of their weighty affairs to their Commission, which were more proper to be judged by themselves: Therefore, they do hereby appoint and ordain all references, appeals, and complaints, that shall be made in time coming to the General Assemblies of this Church, to be lodged in the clerk's hands on or before the second or third days of the Assembly's meetings; that thereby they may timeously have a full view of all their work, and may be able to judge what things are of the greatest weight, and are necessary to be dispatched by themselves, if they cannot overtake the whole: With certification, that all appeals or complaints, not lodged in the clerk's hands within the time foresaid, shall be held as deserted and fallen from, and shall not thereafter be received; unless, upon the first opportunity, the parties concerned make it appear to the Assembly that insuperable difficulties did withhold them from lodging the same in manner above set down. And the General Assembly enjoins the clerks of the several judicatures to transmit to the clerk of Assembly, within the time foresaid, all references made by the respective judicatures to the General Assembly.

Additional Act for the Dispatch of Business of Assemblies.

The General Assembly, considering that parties are often negligent in bringing their causes in due time before the Assembly, by which the business of the Assembly is unnecessarily delayed, appointed a committee to take under their consideration the Act, 1718, respecting the dispatch of business before the Assembly; and to consider what additional orders and regulations may be necessary to be made in order to bring before the Assembly, on the first Saturday of their meeting, a view of all the business which may afterwards come under their consideration, and to report. The committee accordingly made the following report:—"The committee report as their opinion, that the Assembly ought to make such an order, for the dispatch of their business, as will ensure to them the advantage of having the papers connected with every private cause, on their table, at their meeting on the first Saturday of the Assembly; and that, with a view to the accomplishment of this object, in the way least inconvenient for all parties concerned, the first meeting of the Committee of Bills ought to be held on the evening of the preceding Thursday; a second meeting of the same committee on the evening of Friday; and a third on the morning of Saturday before the meeting of Assembly: And, farther, that all appeals, complaints, or references, not presented to the Committee of Bills at or before their third meeting on the morning of the first Saturday of the Assembly, shall be held as deserted and fallen from." The General Assembly having considered the above report, unanimously approve thereof, and enact and enjoin in terms thereof. And the Assembly direct their clerks to send printed copies of this enactment to all the Presbyteries of the Church. And the Assembly farther direct and appoint, that this enactment shall, in time coming, be read on the first day of the meeting of every future Assembly, together with the Act, 1718, anent the dispatch of business, which they appoint to be printed in the Acts of this Assembly, along with this present Act, for the greater conveniency.

Sess. 9, May 29, 1819.—Order and Injunction of the General Assembly to the Presbyteries of the Church concerning the Examination of Schools.

The General Assembly called for the report of the Committee upon the Examination of Schools, which was produced and read as follows:—"The Committee upon the Returns from Presbyteries respecting the Examination of Schools report, that only twenty-nine Presbyteries have sent up returns to the Assembly, viz., Paisley, Dalkeith, Irvine, Cupar, Forfar, Turriff, Biggar, Jedburgh, Chirnside, Peebles, Ellon, Aberdeen, Penpont, Dunbar, Annan, Perth, Brechin, Haddington, Dunfermline, Alford, Aberlour, Strathbogie, Lanark, St Andrews, Aberbrothock, Kirkaldy, Lintlithgow, Lochmaben, and Langholm.

"Most of these returns are in very general terms, and in several of them no other information is given than that the schools of certain parishes, named in the return, have been examined since last Assembly, or that reports have been given in to the Presbytery by committees appointed to visit schools; which reports have been sustained. The returns made by certain Presbyteries, among which the committee think it proper to particularise those of Irvine, Cupar, Forfar, Dalkeith, and Paisley, are very full and minute, and exhibit a laudable attention on the part of those Presbyteries to the important duties belonging to them as superintendents of public education within their bounds. Several Presbyteries state their experience of the great and increasing advantages which result from the regular examination of schools, according to the instructions of the General Assembly.—The committee would recommend the renewal and re-transmission of the injunction of Assembly, 1799, to Presbyteries regarding the state of schools.

"The committee further suggest, that it might tend to draw the attention of Presbyteries more particularly to this important subject, and also to facilitate the making up of Presbyterial reports upon the points contained in the injunction above mentioned, were printed schedules, corresponding to the several subjects of inquiry, to be prepared by a committee of Assembly, and transmitted to Presbyteries, to be filled up by them in their future reports." The General Assembly approve of this report, and enjoin the clerks to see that the recommendation of the Assembly upon this subject be inserted in the printed Acts of this Assembly. The schedule proposed in the above report having been prepared by the committee, the Assembly direct the clerks to get printed a sufficient number of copies of the schedule, and transmitted to the different Presbyteries of the Church. The Assembly enjoin all the Presbyteries to make their reports of the examination of the schools within their bounds, conformably to the said schedule.

Follows the Injunction of the General Assembly, 1799.

The General Assembly enjoin all the Presbyteries of this Church to report to the Assembly a list of all the schools within their bounds, specifying what is taught in each school; whether the schools be held on the Lord's Day, or on other days of the week; in what way the schoolmasters are supported or maintained; whether they act for themselves, or are employed by or under the direction of others; what number of scholars attend each school at the time of making the report; and, in general, whatever else shall appear to the Presbytery of importance respecting the schools within their bounds.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1819.—Recommendation of the General Assembly to all the Ministers of this Church to promote Subscriptions and Contributions for the Monumental Church.

The General Assembly considering, that at a numerous meeting of noblemen and gentlemen in this city, in the month of February last, it had been proposed, and unanimously agreed to, that a general subscription should be opened for erecting a monumental edifice, comprehending a church destined for the purposes of Divine worship, in commemoration of the unparalleled victories with which the Great Disposer of events had been pleased to crown the British arms, by sea and land, in the late glorious and eventful war, in which the valour of Scotsmen was so conspicuously displayed in every quarter of the globe; and considering that this measure appears to the General Assembly to be a most suitable and appropriate expression of national gratitude to the Lord of Hosts, and, under Him, to our brethren in arms, who had been the instruments in His hands of our national deliverance from impending dangers of incalculable extent: The General Assembly earnestly recommend to all the parish ministers of this Church to give their countenance and aid to the measure, by promoting subscriptions and contributions for its accomplishment, within their respective parishes; and the General Assembly appoint and ordain that this deliverance of the Assembly be printed, and copies thereof transmitted, without delay, to every parish minister of the Church of Scotland.

II.

Sess. 1, May 18, 1820.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well.—The numerous proofs which your former meetings have afforded of their constant and unshaken adherence to the succession of the crown of this realm in our family, and to the general interests of the Protestant faith, and of the wisdom, prudence, and moderation which characterize your National Church, have induced us most cheerfully to countenance with our royal authority your approaching Assembly. And it is with the utmost sincerity and good-will that we take this first opportunity of renewing to you, in our own person, the assurance which we have heretofore given to you, in our vicarious character, of our fixed purpose and unalterable resolution to continue to the Presbyterian Church of Scotland, the same countenance and support which it has received from our royal ancestors, and to maintain it in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges as by law established. Not only the general tenor of the councils of your Church, but the recent address of the Commission of the last General Assembly, inspire us with the most entire confidence in your loyalty, and in your attachment to our person and government; and we enjoy the most firm belief that you meet together with the best disposition to co-operate, with all the means you can command, for the happiness of our reign, and to further the true interests of the Church whose ministers you are. In whatever may tend to those important and laudable ends, you may be assured of our free and ready concurrence. On your part we are well persuaded that no pains have been or will be spared to inculcate on your respective flocks the duty of subordination to their temporal rulers, and the necessity of obedience to the lawful magistrates. Equally contrary to the ordinances of God, and to the laws of man, are the treasonable attempts to subvert the happy constitution of our kingdom, by which some parts of this favoured Island have been recently disgraced; and we are convinced, that while we, through our civil magistrates, administer justice in mercy for the suppression of these disorders, you will no less strive to counteract them, by enforcing their utter inconsistency with the precepts of the Gospel. Being well satisfied of the loyalty, integrity, and zeal for our service of our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, George Earl of Morton, we have appointed him to represent our royal person in this Assembly. You have already had experience of his ability for the discharge of this important trust, and we are persuaded that the affection and concern for the Church of Scotland which you have observed in him, cannot fail to render our choice of him most acceptable to you. Not doubting that charity, brotherly love, and unanimity, will characterize your resolves, and will bring your proceedings to as happy a conclusion as those of any former Assembly, we commend your deliberation to the guidance of Almighty God, and so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 29th day of April 1820, in the first year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

SIDMOUTH.

Addressed thus—To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved, the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 20, 1820.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter which your Majesty has been pleased to address to this Assembly has been received by us with all due honour and respect.

Maintaining that unshaken adherence to the succession of the British Crown in your Majesty's Illustrious House, and that regard to the interests of the Protestant faith, which your Majesty vouchsafes to approve in former Assemblies, we rejoice that our meeting is countenanced by your royal authority. We receive, with entire confidence and gratitude, the renewed assurance of your Majesty's fixed purpose and unalterable resolution to continue to our National Church the same support with which it hath been honoured by your royal ancestors, and to maintain it in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, as by law established. The paternal kindness which our Church has already experienced from your Majesty, while administering the government, in the name and on the behalf of your revered and beloved father, is the surest pledge to us of the advantages which we hope to enjoy under your Majesty's reign.

For securing the happiness of that reign, and for furthering the true interests of the Church whose ministers we are, we shall eagerly avail ourselves of all the means which we can command; we shall inculcate on our flocks the duty of subordination, and of obedience to lawful magistrates, and shall anxiously and affectionately warn them, how contrary alike to the laws of God and of man are those treasonable attempts against our happy constitution, by which some parts of this favoured Island have been recently disgraced. While your Majesty, through the civil magistrates, administers justice in mercy for the suppression of these disorders, it shall be our earnest endeavour to counteract them, by enforcing their utter inconsistency with the precepts of the Gospel.

The re-appointment of the Earl of Morton to represent your royal person in this Assembly is rendered most acceptable to us, by the experience which we have had of his ability for the discharge of that important trust, and of his affectionate concern for the welfare of our Church. We humbly hope that the Lord High Commissioner will be able to make a favourable report to your Majesty of the spirit by which our deliberations are guided.

We receive with gratitude, and shall employ with fidelity and zeal, your Majesty's royal donation of L.2000, for the promotion of religious knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

That Almighty God, by whom kings reign, may abundantly bless your Majesty, that He may make your reign long and prosperous, and may, at the last, bestow upon your Majesty a crown of glory, are the prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 20, 1820.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most faithful and affectionate subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, while we participate cordially in the expressions of duty and respect which have been tendered to your Majesty by the Commission of last Assembly, are eager to embrace this opportunity of our first meeting, to offer our condolence to your Majesty on the lamented death of our late beloved Monarch,—to congratulate your Majesty on your auspicious accession to the throne of your ancestors, and to express our attachment and loyalty to your Majesty's person and government.

In reviewing the reign of our late venerable Sovereign, we delight to dwell on the pre-eminent excellence of his character. We offer our fervent thanks to Heaven for the manifold blessings which we enjoyed under his beneficent sway, and feel the remembrance of his virtues an additional tie of affection and duty to the Prince who now inherits his throne.

In the solemn constitutional pledge which your Majesty has so early given of maintaining our rights and privileges, and the assurance of your royal countenance and protection to our Church, which your Majesty has been graciously pleased to renew repeatedly to its representatives, we recognise the kind and paternal spirit of that Illustrious House which has been so long the ornament and safeguard of our country, and find encouragement to anticipate confidently every benefit which our National Establishment can derive from the reign of a patriotic Monarch.

We sympathize deeply in the universal grief which has been excited by the death of his Royal Highness the late Duke of Kent, immediately preceding the demise of his revered father; and we beg leave to offer to your Majesty the tribute of our heartfelt condolence on that mournful event. Our prayer is, that, under every deprivation, your Majesty and all the Royal Family may be visited with the consolations of Heaven, and supported by the assured hope of that blessed immortality, in which separation and sorrow shall be unknown.

The scenes of tumult, disorder, and outrage, by which the commencement of your Majesty's reign has been disturbed, have afflicted us with deep mortification and regret. Those insidious arts which, by disseminating impiety, discontent, and treason, have undermined the faith of the ignorant, aggravated the sufferings of the poor, and disturbed the peace of society in various parts of the kingdom, are regarded by us with unmixed abhorrence. We trust in the blessing of the Most High, on your Majesty's wise and vigorous counsels for repressing every instance of conspiracy, rebellion, and blasphemy, and guarding against their recurrence. We observe with awe and affliction the working of that spirit of impiety and unbelief, which, spurning the authority of the Almighty, and denying the truths of the Gospel, has led to insubordination, to the deliberate contrivance and perpetration of most atrocious crimes, and to appalling obduracy of heart, even in the last moments of life. It is our consolation to be assured, that the spirit which we deplore is confined to a small portion of the people of Scotland, and that the great body of those under our charge have continued stedfast in their faith and loyalty; and we pledge ourselves to your Majesty, that no exertion shall be wanting on our part to preserve and cherish in their hearts piety towards God, submission to the laws, and attachment to the unrivalled constitution under which they have the happiness to live.

That the God by whom kings reign, and in whose hand is the breath of all mankind, may confirm your Majesty's health and preserve your life;—that He may establish your throne, and crown your measures with success;—that He may scatter all your foes, and baffle every attempt to disturb your government;—and that, after long blessing a free and happy people in your reign, He may at last exalt your Majesty to an incorruptible crown, are the sincere and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most loyal, most dutiful, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 9, May 27, 1820.—Report of the Committee appointed to class the Returns from Presbyteries of the Examination of Schools.

The Report of the Committee to class the Returns from Presbyteries of the Examination of Schools was called for, and being produced, was read as follows:—

“The Committee appointed to consider the Returns of Presbyteries, relative to the Schools within their respective bounds, have to report to the General Assembly, “1st, That the following Presbyteries have transmitted reports from the schedules prepared by order of the last Assembly, viz., Aberbrothock, Aberdeen, Dunbar, Dunfermline, Fordoun, Jedburgh, Kirkaldy, Lanark, Langholm, Lauder, Meikle, Paisley, St Andrews. And that the uniformity and fulness of the returns from these thirteen Presbyteries is highly satisfactory.

“2d, That returns in the same, or in some similar form, have been transmitted from the following Presbyteries, viz., Biggar, Dalkeith, Dundee, Dunoon, Dumbarton, Ellon, Garioch, Forfar, Haddington, Irvine, Lorn, Penpont, Perth, Selkirk, Strathbogie. And that these fifteen reports being drawn up on the same or a similar plan with that of the printed schedule of last Assembly, are satisfactory, in respect of the information which they present, though less uniform in size, and less easy for the purpose of reference.

“3d, That short reports, or notices of examination, have been transmitted from the following Presbyteries, viz., Aberlour, Ayr, Brechin, Fordyce, Lochmaben, Peebles, Turriff, stating generally on the backs of the commissions that the schools within these Presbyteries were examined. These reports are, indeed, more or less satisfactory, and some of them detail the names of the schools, the number of scholars, and the branches taught; others give only the names of the schools. One Presbytery merely sends a note, stating that several of the schools have been visited.

“4th, That the separate reports of the parishes have been transmitted by the Presbyteries of Abertarff and Stranraer, in place of the respective abstracts which ought to have been prepared and sent up from these two Presbyteries; but that, as parish reports, most of these are carefully drawn up according to or near the general plan; though it is obvious that a committee of Assembly could not examine and do justice to so many, if all the separate parishes were to report; and also, that it is of importance for Presbyteries to examine them, and to make up their own returns to the Assembly.

“5th, That except the above thirty-seven Presbyteries, all the others have omitted to send up reports, or, if sent, they have not been delivered to the Assembly and their committee, which, after all the orders on that subject sent out from year to year by the Assembly, after the preparing of regular schedules for this purpose, and while the great importance of regular examinations and returns is apparent to, and confessed by every one in any degree acquainted with the subject, appears to furnish matter equally of regret and surprise.

“6th, That an extra column on the left of the printed schedules, to contain the population of the respective parish, and the insertion of the Presbytery's designation at the top, would be of use in case of any new impression of the schedules; and that for the purposes of uniformity and facility of reference, they should all be of the same dimensions, or nearly so.

“Lastly, The committee are perfectly satisfied, that not only will there be more attention given to the important duties of examination of schools, in order to the construction of the Assembly reports now required, from one meeting of this Supreme Court to another, but that, by means of these uniform returns, as soon as they are generally made up and received, the most satisfactory means will be at the command of the Assembly for constructing a national report on a subject of the highest interest and consequence.

“The committee beg leave to report further, that as the continuance of the high superintendence of this Court appears to have already produced very happy effects, and the faithful attention of Presbyteries and ministers is essential to their continuance; and as it seems to be necessary for the success of these measures that a strict inquiry be made into the nature and extent of the returns, it may contribute to ensure correct returns, if the General Assembly shall be pleased to recommend and enjoin:—

“1st, That every Presbytery of this Church give precise instructions to the respective ministers to have schedules prepared for these returns, according to the form approved and transmitted by the General Assembly, inserting the name of the parish at the top, and the population, according to the last return thereof, in a column at the left hand of the schedule: And that returns be made from every parish to the respective Presbytery, on or before the day of election of their representatives to the Assembly.

“2d, That from these parish returns the Presbytery shall cause to be duly made up and revised by themselves, a general return from the Presbytery, to comprehend the substance of what is contained in the reports from parishes.

“3d, That every Presbytery of this Church take care to have such returns made up and transmitted to the Agents for the Church on or before the first week of the sitting of the General Assembly, to whom they will be answerable.

“4th, That these recommendations and injunctions be inserted in the printed Acts of Assembly for this year, or communicated in any other way the Assembly may be pleased to order; and that authority be given for the purpose of transmitting a sufficient supply of printed schedules for the respective Presbyteries, on which, or according to the forms of which, these returns may be made.

(Signed) "WILLIAM SINGER.
"GEORGE COOK.
"JAMES HARE."

The Assembly approve of this report, and of the additional recommendations which the committee propose to be given by the Assembly upon this subject; and, in pursuance thereof, the Assembly enjoin their clerks to see that the said recommendations be inserted in the printed Acts of this Assembly; together with a recommendation that the Presbyteries be particularly careful to see that in all the schools within their bounds the children be duly instructed in the principles of religion; and that in the schedule there be an additional column, to certify whether or not the teachers have qualified to government.

VIII.

Sess. 9, May 27, 1820.—Report of the Committee on the Reference from the Presbytery of Fordoun.

The committee of the General Assembly appointed to consider the reference from the Presbytery of Fordoun, and the case of the vacant parish of Arbuthnot, humbly report to this Assembly:

That many highly important interests are involved in this reference, and that it well deserves the most serious consideration, that while the patronage of Arbuthnot, or any other parish, continues during a vacancy to be the subject of litigation in civil courts, and the parish remains without a settled minister, there must be many difficulties and interruptions in the preaching of the Word, the administration of the sacraments, the management and support of the poor, the inspection of schools, the visiting and examining the parishioners in general, and the administering of consolation to the afflicted and the dying; besides the general neglect of the civil interests connected with the parish and the cure of it, especially those which relate to the church, the manse and offices, the school-houses, and the glebe: And as other cases of the same description with that of the parish of Arbuthnot are known to exist, and some have already been of long continuance, it appears the more necessary to submit some general and effective measures.

The committee, therefore, beg leave to suggest,

1st, That the General Assembly authorise the Procurator and Agents for the Church to look into the case of this parish of Arbuthnot, and into such other cases as may exist at present, or occur hereafter, involving circumstances of protracted vacancy, occasioned by litigation betwixt contending patrons; that they watch over the progress of the respective processes, and endeavour to prevent improper or unnecessary delays.

2dly, That the Assembly recommend to the several Presbyteries within whose bounds there is or may be a long vacancy in any parish, occasioned by contested claims of patronage, to endeavour, as far as possible, to furnish regular supplies of preaching at suitable intervals; and for this purpose, to employ licentiates of this Church, according as these Presbyteries may see proper and find convenient; to authorise the several ministers in their bounds to administer the ordinance of baptism within the vacant parish respectively, and to perform the other functions of an ordained minister therein, as the circumstances of the parish may require; and in case the heritors, elders, or parishioners, apply to the Presbytery for this purpose, that the Assembly recommend to them to exercise their constitutional power in dispensing the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper within such vacant parish, at such times, and under such arrangements, as the Presbytery shall find most proper.

3dly, That the Assembly authorise and recommend to the respective Presbytery, in which any case of long vacancy of the above, or any other description may occur, to take proper measures, as far as they can, for securing and preserving the civil interests of the vacant cure, especially in respect of the church, the manse and offices, and the glebe, and for attending to the poor, and to the schools of the vacant parish.

4thly, That if this report meet the approbation of the General Assembly, it be inserted in the printed Acts, or communicated in such a manner as may appear most proper for the information and satisfaction of all concerned.

WILLIAM SINGER, Convener.

(The Assembly approved of the above Report, and of the Suggestions subjoined to it; and they authorised and enjoined in terms of the said Report and Suggestions.)—Ed. 1843.

ANDREW DUNCAN, Cl. Eccl. Scot.

Note.—In the Abridgment of the Assembly's Proceedings of this year, the following notice appears of a discussion which took place on the production of an Order of his Majesty in Council, respecting the public offering of Prayers for the King and Royal Family:—

“Upon a motion made and seconded, the Assembly called for the Order of his Majesty in Council, transmitted by Government to the Moderator of the last General Assembly, and communicated by the said Moderator to the members of the Church of Scotland, through the medium of the newspapers, respecting the prayers to be publicly offered up for the King and Royal Family. Dr Macfarlane accordingly laid before the Assembly the said Order in Council, together with a letter which accompanied the said Order from the Clerk of Council, which Order was read, together with the said letter. The deliberations of the Assembly upon this subject were opened by the following motion, viz. :—‘That it be declared by the General Assembly, that no civil authority can constitutionally prescribe either forms or heads of prayer to the ministers and preachers of this Church; and that the Orders in Council, which have been issued from time to time, respecting prayers for the Royal Family, are inconsistent with the rights and privileges secured by law to our Ecclesiastical Establishment; but that as these Orders appear to have originated in mistake or inadvertence, and not in any intention to interfere with our modes of worship, the General Assembly do not consider it to be necessary to proceed farther in this matter at present. And the General Assembly embrace this opportunity of declaring the cordial and steady attachment of the Church of Scotland to their most gracious Sovereign, and to all the Royal Family; and of farther expressing their unqualified confidence, that, actuated by the same principles of loyalty and religion which have hitherto guided them, her ministers and preachers will never cease to offer up, along with their people, their fervent supplications to Almighty God, in behalf of a family to whom, under Providence, we are indebted for so many distinguished blessings, both sacred and civil.’ In the course of the debate, another motion was made and seconded, ‘That whereas the independence of the Church of Scotland, in all matters of faith, worship, and discipline, is fully established by law, the General Assembly finds it unnecessary and inexpedient to adopt any declaration, with regard to the late or any former Orders in Council, relative to prayers for his Majesty and the Royal Family.’ And the vote being called for, it was agreed the state of the vote should be First or Second Motion; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried, by a great majority, Second Motion. And, therefore, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, adopt the said second motion as the judgment of the House. Against which judgment several members dissented.”—Ed. 1843.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1821.—Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland to his Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and affectionate subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, eagerly embrace this opportunity of approaching the throne, to renew the assurance of our cordial attachment and unshaken fidelity to your Majesty's person and government.

In common with all the well-disposed and loyal parts of your Majesty's subjects throughout the realm, we have beheld with sentiments of the deepest concern and unfeigned abhorrence, the criminal attempts to undermine the religious principles of the people, and to create a spirit of disaffection and hostility to our invaluable institutions, sacred and civil, so frequently made by unprincipled men, taking advantage of the temporary distresses of the public, and abusing the liberty of the press, by the circulation of the most pernicious writings; but we rejoice in the mercy of Providence, that indications everywhere appear of returning prosperity in the manufactures and commerce of the country; and it affords us no ordinary degree of satisfaction, that the restless spirit to which we allude, so eager to catch at every passing event, as the means of exciting agitation, has already received what, we earnestly hope, will prove an effectual and lasting check.

With reference to this, we are happy again to bear our testimony to the steady faith and unshaken loyalty of the great body of your Majesty's subjects in this part of the United Kingdom. Even in districts where the worst symptoms of disaffection and disorder had been manifested, so great is the change which has taken place, that it is with the most heartfelt satisfaction we can now congratulate your Majesty on the evident return, in the minds of the people, to sounder principle and better feeling, and even a sense of the grievous delusions under which they had laboured. And, deploring the infatuation of those who have endeavoured so nefariously to create disrespect for the constituted authorities of the land, we solemnly pledge ourselves to your Majesty, that we will exert, with zeal and diligence, all the means in our power to counteract the progress of those principles of infidelity and irreligion, which tend to incite to the perpetration of the most atrocious crimes, amidst confusion and every evil work, and which, indeed, are so intimately connected with disloyalty, insubordination, and licentiousness, in all their forms. We will earnestly strive to cherish and maintain among the people under our pastoral charge a due spirit of veneration and love for that system of religion and government, of whose inestimable advantages we have had so long, not only the personal, but the recorded experience, which has been matured by the wisdom of ages, and which challenges the admiration of the world.

We could not fail to contemplate with much interest those occurrences on the Continent, which lately threatened the peace of Europe. It is fortunate for this island, that no intention exists on the part of its Sovereign to interpose in the dissensions of Foreign States, except in cases of urgent necessity. As servants of the Prince of Peace, we trust that the same pacific maxims will ever actuate the executive councils of the nation.

Remembering, with the liveliest sentiments of gratitude, the paternal regard to the National Establishment of which we are members, uniformly evinced by your Majesty's Illustrious Predecessor, who, during a long and eventful life, approved himself a patriot King and a true Christian, the Father of his people, and the great pillar of the Constitution in Church and State, we feel it truly gratifying to see your Majesty, in the exercise of your high constitutional functions, following the example of a Sovereign, whose memory will never be recalled without admiration and delight, while the noblest qualities of human nature are esteemed and respected amongst men. Under the government of a Monarch animated by the same paternal feelings, and ruling by principles so truly laudable and patriotic as those of your Majesty, we fondly anticipate the perpetuity of the honour, the glory, and the prosperity of the British empire. We are inspired with the firmest confidence in the permanent security of our rights and liberties, sacred and civil. We trust in the strength of the Most High, that no event will occur to endanger the existence or privileges of that Church which was established by the zeal, energy, and blood of our fathers, and which, we hope, will, under God, continue to form the consolation and blessing of future generations in this land, through many succeeding ages.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may bless your Majesty, direct your councils, and establish your throne in righteousness and peace; that your Majesty may be the instrument of Divine Providence to maintain inviolate our glorious and happy constitution of government; that, after a long and prosperous reign over a free, a loyal, and a happy people, your Majesty may be exalted to a crown that endureth for ever; and that the descendants of your Illustrious House, which has so long been the ornament and blessing of these kingdoms, may continue to sway the British sceptre till the latest posterity, are the sincere and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 1, May 16, 1822.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

GEORGE, R.

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well.—The great advantages which the Church of Scotland has derived from the wisdom of your annual deliberations, cannot but render the period of your meeting one of peculiar interest and satisfaction to us; and we are convinced that the result of your approaching labours will not be less conducive to the maintenance and extension of the pure principles of the Gospel, and consequently to the real happiness of our people, than upon any former occasion.

We have again thought fit to appoint our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin, George Earl of Morton, to be our Commissioner, and the Representative of our Royal Person in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, being well assured that his merits will continue to recommend him to your confidence, and that you will pay him that reverence and respectful attention which are due to his high office. We have charged him to assure you of the continuance of that favour and protection which you have ever received from us, and of our stedfast purpose and resolution to preserve inviolably the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland, as well as the religious and civil liberties of all classes and descriptions of our subjects.

Well-beloved, you cannot fail to have witnessed, with deep concern, the wicked and persevering efforts which have recently been made to subvert the religious faith of our people, especially in the humbler and more numerous classes of society, by means of publications replete with scepticism and blasphemy. It will require the most active exertions of every friend of religion, of every lover of his country, and, above all, of the ministers of the Gospel, to combat and counteract so great and alarming an evil. We are assured that you will spare neither pains nor diligence in the religious instruction of that portion of our subjects, whose spiritual welfare is committed to your charge, by enforcing upon them the full extent of their duty, both to God and man. You will teach them the true value of the blessings they enjoy under our happy and envied constitution, and that these blessings can only be preserved by a firm and zealous attachment to that constitution, and a ready obedience to, and support of, the laws and ordinances of the State.

In all your exertions to promote the great cause of religion, you may rely on our zealous co-operation and support, and we are satisfied that your proceedings will now, as upon all former occasions, be characterized by temper and calmness, and that you will be actuated by a spirit of loyalty and attachment to us, of love for your country, and zeal for the service of Almighty God; and so, commending your deliberations to His Divine guidance, we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 8th day of May 1822, in the third year of our reign.

Sess. 3, May 18, 1822.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The very gracious letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour this General Assembly of our National Church has been received by us with the most profound respect and gratitude.

We receive, with heartfelt satisfaction, the assurance which your Majesty has been pleased to express, that the great advantages which the Church of Scotland has derived from the wisdom of our annual deliberations, renders the period of our meeting one of peculiar interest and satisfaction to your Majesty; and it shall be our study that the result of our approaching labours may not prove less conducive to the maintenance and extension of the pure principles of the Gospel, and consequently to the real happiness of your Majesty's people, than upon any former occasion.

The appointment of the Right Honourable the Earl of Morton to be your Majesty's Commissioner, and the Representative of your royal person in our General Assembly, we regard as a new proof of your Majesty's favour, the experience we have had on former occasions of his meritorious services having secured to him our fullest confidence; and your Majesty may be assured, that we shall gratefully pay to him that reverence and respectful attention which are due to his high office. We have received from him, with the highest satisfaction and gratitude, the assurance of your Majesty's favour and protection, and of your stedfast purpose and resolution to preserve inviolably the rights and privileges of the Church of Scotland, as well as the religious and civil liberties of all classes and descriptions of your Majesty's subjects.

We have witnessed, with deep concern, the wicked and persevering efforts which, in certain parts of the kingdom, have recently been made to subvert the religious faith of your Majesty's people, especially in the humbler and more numerous classes of society, by means of publications replete with scepticism and blasphemy. We are sensible that it will require the most active exertions of every friend of religion, of every lover of his country, and, above all, of the ministers of the Gospel, who are specially called upon to exert themselves in such a cause, to combat and counteract so great and alarming an evil. Your Majesty may be assured that we will spare neither pains nor diligence in the religious instructions of that portion of our fellow-subjects, whose spiritual welfare is committed to our charge, by enforcing upon them the full extent of their duty, both to God and man. We will not fail to teach them the true value of the blessings they enjoy under our happy and envied constitution, and that these blessings can only be preserved by a firm and zealous attachment to that constitution, and a ready obedience to, and support of, the laws and ordinances of the State.

While it is our earnest desire that our proceedings may now, as on former occasions, be found characterized by temper and calmness, and dictated by a spirit of loyalty and attachment to your Majesty's person, of love for our country, and zeal for the service of Almighty God; we rejoice in the assurance communicated to us, that we may rely on your Majesty's zealous co-operation and support in all our exertions to promote the great cause of religion.

We receive, with sincere gratitude, your Majesty's donation of L.2000, for promoting religious knowledge in the Highlands and Island of Scotland; and we shall endeavour to apply this mark of your royal munificence in the manner best calculated for promoting the pious purpose for which it is bestowed.

That Almighty God may bless your Majesty, and all the members of the Royal Family; that He may guide and prosper all the measures of your Majesty's government; and that He may maintain, to latest ages, the national blessings we enjoy, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in the General Assembly, beg leave to approach your Majesty with the strongest assurances of loyalty and attachment to your Majesty's person and government.

We regard, with sentiments of peculiar joy, that paternal affection which induced your Majesty, in the course of the last year, to visit your Scottish dominions; and we cordially unite in expressing our warmest gratitude for the very gracious and auspicious countenance which your Majesty was then pleased to give to both the civil and religious institutions in this part of the United Kingdom.

We have been highly gratified with the gracious and condescending terms in which your Majesty, at the opening of Parliament, was pleased to express the satisfaction which your Majesty had derived from your visit to Scotland.

We gladly avail ourselves of this opportunity to assure your Majesty, that that visit has, in a high degree, strengthened and confirmed the principles of loyalty and attachment to your Majesty; and we are confident that, by the blessing of God, it will have a happy and permanent effect on all classes of your Majesty's subjects in this part of the British empire.

That your Majesty may long reign over a pious, free, loyal, and happy people, and may at length wear a crown of glory that fadeth not away, are the sincere and fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most loyal, dutiful, and devoted subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 4, May 26, 1823.—Address of the General Assembly to his Majesty, on the Abolition of Negro Slavery in the West Indies.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to embrace the opportunity which our meeting in the General Assembly affords us, of approaching your Majesty's throne, for the purpose of expressing the lively satisfaction with which we have observed the recent resolutions on the subject of Negro Slavery in the West Indies, unanimously adopted by the Honourable the Commons House of Parliament, upon the proposition of a member of your Majesty's government; and the pledge which has been publicly given, that decisive measures shall be taken for ameliorating the condition of the slave population in the colonies, so as to prepare them, at as early a period as is consistent with the interests of all parties, for a full participation in those civil rights and religious privileges which are enjoyed by every other class of British subjects.

As an Assembly of Christian ministers and elders, we cannot but lament the unfavourable circumstances in which this large and interesting portion of our fellow-subjects has so long been placed, in regard to the means of that moral and religious instruction, which we consider as the most effectual instrument, under the countenance of an Almighty and overruling Providence, for qualifying them to participate in the inestimable blessings of freedom.

But we contemplate with delight the prospect which has now arisen, that these disadvantages shall, with the least possible delay, be removed. And we would humbly express to your Majesty the confidence with which we look forward through a determined and vigorous, but, at the same time, temperate and judicious execution of the measures of your Majesty's government, to the final fulfilment of our hopes upon a subject which we must always regard with the greatest interest.

We cannot refrain from availing ourselves of the present occasion of renewing to your Majesty the expressions of our heartfelt gratitude for the continued exertions which have been made by your Majesty's government to accomplish the universal extinction of the African Slave Trade.

That your Majesty's disinterested efforts may speedily be crowned with success, in wiping out for ever this deepest stain on European humanity, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the General Assembly of the National Church of Scotland.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1823.—Overtures as to the Course of Study to be pursued by Students of Divinity.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee upon the course of study to be pursued by Students in Divinity, which was produced and read. The Assembly, without a vote, agree to transmit the Overtures contained in said report to the different Presbyteries of the Church.*

IX.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1823.—Abstract Report of the Committee on the Examination of Schools.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee upon the Examination of Schools, which was made by Dr Singer, convener of the committee. The Assembly approve of this report, and appoint an abstract thereof to be inserted in the printed Acts of Assembly.

ABSTRACT.

I. Full and satisfactory reports in the tabular form prescribed by the Assembly have been received from the following twenty-eight Presbyteries:—Aberbrothock, Aberdeen, Abernethy, Aberdour, Alford, Brechin, Cupar, Dalkeith, Dunfermline, Dumbarton, Dundee, Elgin, Fordyce, Garioch, Haddington, Irvine, Kincardine-O'Neil, Kirkaldy, Kirkcudbright, Lanark, Lewis, Linlithgow, Lochmaben, Penpont, Selkirk, Stranraer, St Andrews, and Uist.

II. Short and imperfect notifications, not according to form, have been received from the seven Presbyteries of Chirnside, Hamilton, Jedburgh, Peebles, Strathbogie, Turriff, and Paisley.

* The first of these Overtures was enacted in 1826, and the second in 1827. See Act 8th, 1826, and Act 7th, 1827.—Ed. 1843.

III. All the other Presbyteries have omitted to send reports; and though the committee do not suppose that these Presbyteries have neglected the visiting and examining the schools, the committee are of opinion that they ought to be reminded of the duty of making up and sending in their annual reports, according to the established form.

The result of the returns of this year shows, that the increasing number of scholars in the several Presbyteries of this Church appear to derive more and more benefit from the regular superintendence of the General Assemblies.

The committee observe with regret, in returns of several Presbyteries, some particular schools are less efficient than others; that various teachers have not qualified, by taking the Oaths of Allegiance, and signing the Formula; that in the parishes of Paisley, Greenock, Port-Glasgow, and Renfrew, there are no parochial schools, though all these are landward parishes, Port-Glasgow excepted.

The attention of Presbyteries ought to be directed to these points:—To the improvement of those schools which are not so efficient as they ought to be; to obliging all the teachers to qualify, by taking the Oath of Allegiance before a magistrate, and all who belong to this Church, by signing the proper Formula; and in those parishes where schools are still wanting, to make application for their establishment under the Act, 1803, in so far as these parishes are landward, and come under the provisions of that statute.

The committee are particularly sorry to learn, that in the school of New Lanark maintained by Mr Owen, the reading of the Scriptures was prohibited by that gentleman, and also the use of the Catechisms of the Church; that although the Scriptures are now allowed to be read there, it is under the restriction of this being done only two hours a-week; and that the prohibition remains as to the Catechisms. On this subject, the committee beg leave to submit two minutes of the Presbytery of Lanark, from which it appears that the very commendable and constitutional exertions of that Presbytery to introduce the Scriptures without restriction, and the Catechisms of this Church, for the moral and religious improvement of the children at that school, have not yet been attended with the desired success.

The committee have only to submit farther on this important subject, that the prudent and constitutional exertions of the Presbytery of Lanark ought to be highly approved of; and that it be recommended to continue their exertions, and to report to next Assembly.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1823.—Opinion of the late Lord President Blair, as to the Profanation of the Sabbath.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee upon the Profanation of the Lord's Day, which was made by Mr Dickson, convener of the committee. The Assembly approve of this report, and appoint the opinion of the late President Blair upon this subject to be inserted in the printed Acts of Assembly.*

Right Reverend and well-beloved, we greet you well.—The constant proofs we have annually received of your affectionate loyalty to our person and government, and of your unremitting zeal in the great cause of religion, produce in our mind the most entire confidence that you will persevere in the same cause of piety and loyalty; and it is, therefore, with unqualified satisfaction, that we now renew to you the assurances of our unalterable determination to uphold the Presbyterian Church of Scotland in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, and to countenance the General

Note.—The following is the notice in the Abridgment of this year's Proceedings of the Overtures respecting the Propagation of the Gospel Abroad, and relative to the State of Religious Instruction and Education in Scotland, and in the adoption of which the India Mission and Education Schemes originated:—

“Sess. 7, Thursday, May 27, 1824.

“The Assembly proceeded to take up the Overtures relative to the Propagation of the Gospel among the Heathen, and also the memorial and petition of the Rev. Dr Bryce, first minister of the Presbyterian Church in Calcutta, on the same subject. After mature deliberation, the following motion was made, seconded, and unanimously and cordially agreed to: ‘That the Assembly approve of the general purpose and object of these overtures; appoint a committee to devise and report to the next Assembly a specific plan for the accomplishment of that object, and reserve for the consideration of the next Assembly the means of providing the requisite funds, by appointing an extraordinary collection at all the Parish Churches and Chapels of Ease throughout Scotland, as well as by opening a general subscription for the accomplishing this pious and benevolent object.’

“The Assembly then proceeded to take up the Overture relative to the State of Religious Instruction, and of Education in the Highlands and Islands, and in the great towns in Scotland. After hearing the wants of the inhabitants of the Highlands and Islands, and their claims upon the public most ably and feelingly stated, the General Assembly most cordially gave their approbation to the object proposed in these overtures, and unanimously agreed that a committee be appointed to inquire, and to report to next Assembly, as to an advisable plan for the Church to adopt for increasing the means of education and of religious instruction throughout Scotland in general, where it may be needed, but particularly in the Highlands and Islands, and in large and populous cities and towns; and that the committee be instructed, after collecting and digesting the relative facts, to take what proper and prudent measures may be in their power to learn, for the information and direction of the ensuing Assembly, what degree of co-operation may reasonably be expected from heritors and others in the different districts of the country; and whether, also, and in what manner, Government may be disposed to give public aid for carrying into effect the important measure in contemplation.”—Ed. 1843.

Assemblies of that Church with the same favour and authority which they have enjoyed from us and our royal ancestors. We are convinced that you will bring with you to this present Assembly an ardent and sincere desire for the advancement of true religion and pure morality, and will direct all your counsels to the general good of that part of our empire which is committed to your pastoral care; and we are satisfied that your zeal for these laudable purposes will be tempered with the candour and moderation calculated to ensure the success of your endeavours, towards which end you may rely on our firm and hearty co-operation.

Having understood that in some parts of Scotland there is great deficiency of accommodation for our good and religiously-disposed subjects, we shall recommend that subject to the early attention of our Parliament, nothing doubting that, by their deliberative wisdom, a remedy will be provided for so serious an evil.

Having experienced in other branches of our service the fidelity, firmness, and prudence of our right trusty and well-beloved James Ochohear Lord Forbes, and being well assured of his zealous attachment to the Church of Scotland, we have selected him to be our Commissioner, and to represent our Royal Person in this Assembly; and we are persuaded that this choice will be acceptable to you.

We earnestly recommend you, well-beloved, to the care of Divine Providence, and heartily bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the 2d day of May 1825, in the sixth year of our reign.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1825.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour us we have received as a mark of royal condescension and good-will, which demands the strongest expressions of respectful and grateful attachment from this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

We are deeply sensible of the invaluable advantages which we enjoy under your Majesty's government, and we earnestly pray that our future conduct may be so directed by the wisdom which is from above, as to justify the entire confidence which your Majesty has hitherto reposed in our affectionate loyalty to your person and government, and our unremitting zeal in the great cause of religion, as the tie which connects the interests of time with the hopes of eternity, and as yielding at once the best security for the honour and stability of the throne, and the good order and happiness of the people.

We return our warmest thanks for the renewed assurances of your Majesty's unalterable determination to uphold the Church of Scotland in the full enjoyment of all its rights and privileges; and we venture to hope that we shall never forfeit the claims which our predecessors have established to the favour and authority with which the General Assemblies of this Church have been countenanced by your Majesty and your Royal Ancestors.

In humble dependence on the aid of Divine grace to guide us in judgment, and to bestow on us the spirit of meekness and brotherly love, we are fully resolved to avail ourselves of your Majesty's paternal admonition, conveyed in terms so encouraging, by bringing with us to this present Assembly an ardent and sincere desire for the advancement of true religion and pure morality, and by tempering our zeal with candour and moderation; thus feeling ourselves warranted to rely on your Majesty's firm and hearty co-operation, in promoting the success of the counsels and endeavours which it shall be our invariable object to direct to the general good of that portion of the empire which is committed to our pastoral care.

We rejoice in the intelligence of your Majesty's pious resolution to recommend to the early attention of Parliament the great deficiency of accommodation felt by your Majesty's religiously disposed subjects in some parts of Scotland; and it is our fervent prayer, that the deliberative wisdom of the legislature may speedily provide an effectual remedy for so serious an evil, which, in common with your Majesty, we have long deplored.

The appointment of the Right Honourable Lord Forbes to represent your Royal Person in this General Assembly is received by us as a distinguished proof of your Majesty's regard for the honour and interest of this National Church. The fidelity, firmness, and prudence which he has displayed in other parts of your Majesty's service, as well as the private worth and amiable qualities which endear him to his countrymen, well entitle him to a most cordial and respectful welcome from us.

We receive with much gratitude the royal donation of L.2000, for propagating the Christian religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and we shall study to apply with strict fidelity the sum which has thus been confided to our management.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty's person and guide your counsels, and that, after a long and happy reign on earth, you may inherit a kingdom which cannot be moved, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. ult., May 30, 1825.—Report as to Schools.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee anent the Returns upon the subject of the Examination of Schools, which was made by Dr Singer, the convener.

The Assembly direct their clerks to have this report inserted in the printed Acts of the Assembly.

At Edinburgh, 28th May 1825.

The Committee of the General Assembly, on the Returns of Presbyteries relative to the regular Examination and State of the Schools, have to report,—

That regular printed or written forms, duly filled up in the prescribed order, have been sent in from the following Presbyteries, viz.—

Aberdeen,	Dunfermline,	Lochmaben,
Aberbrothock,	Elgiu,	Meigle,
Abernethy,	Forfar,	25 Paisley,
Alford,	15 Haddington,	Peebles,
5 Aberlour,	Jedburgh,	Penpont,
Annan,	Irvine,	Perth,
Ayr,	Kincardine-O'Neil,	St Andrews,
Brechin,	Kirkealdy,	30 Selkirk,
Cupar,	20 Lanark,	Stranraer,
10 Dumbarton,	Lauder,	Tongue.
Dundee,	Lewis,

These returns being only 32, in due order and regular form.

But that parochial, in place of Presbyterial statements, have been sent in as follows, viz., from 11 parishes in the Presbytery of Dumfries; from the several parishes in the Presbytery of Dalkeith; from 11 parishes in the Presbytery of Edinburgh; and from 6 parishes of the Presbytery of Chirnside; and that short notifications of examinations of the schools, and of the satisfaction which was derived from the performance of this duty, have been put in from the Presbyteries of Hamilton, Fordoun, Linlithgow, and Strathgogie; the returns in all being sent in from 40 Presbyteries.

That no report whatever appears for last year from any of the remaining 33 Presbyteries of this Church; and that several of these have neglected to make returns in the prescribed form for more than one year, and some of them for many years; so that a full view of the schools in their respective bounds cannot be obtained until the orders of the Assembly be more generally observed, or more effectually enforced, according to the prescribed form; and returns made from every Presbytery, embracing all the parishes in one view.

That, besides the stimulus which the regular annual reports must give to the several Presbyteries in the discharge of a most important duty, it must be useful also as a stimulus to the several teachers, to know that such reports are made, and satisfactory to the Assembly and to the public, that they are obtained and preserved.

The committee feel it their duty to report, that some of the teachers have not yet qualified, by taking the Oath of Allegiance, and subscribing the proper Formula of the Church, dated in 1694; and that it may be proper to ordain a greater and more exact attention to the orders of the Assembly, that the teachers may qualify, and may be so reported.

Also, that no parish school appears to have been established in the parish of Lochs and Presbytery of Lewis, and that an explanation of the reason of this ought to be required, and measures taken for erecting one in that parish, and in every other where a parish school is wanting.

That some of the returns from Presbyteries contain very full and satisfactory statements, not only of the schools and number of scholars, but that a column has been added for the population, as formerly recommended by the Assembly; which it is evidently proper to possess, in order to an easy comparison, and which has been done in the very perfect reports from Aberdeen and Aberbrothock; and that the numbers of schools, of the scholars attending them, and of the population, should be in separate columns, each to be summed up; the designation of the Presbytery to be at the top of the return, and the attestation not to be omitted.

That full and accurate returns from Presbyteries, relative to schools, are now more than ever important, with a view to facilitate the great objects of the Assembly's Standing Committee for increasing the means of education; and that, in so far as the reports of last year extend, they furnish continued evidence of the incalculable value of the regular and accurate inspection of Presbyteries, under the high authority of the General Assembly of this Church.

WM. SINGER, Convener.

Sess. 1, May 18, 1826.—The King's Commission to James Ochoincar Lord Forbes produced, and ordered to be recorded.

The General Assembly, &c.

Note.—There were laid on the table of the Assembly of 1825 numerous Overtures respecting the Union of Offices. The following is the notice of this subject given in the Abridgment :—

“ Sess. 6, May 25, 1825.

“ The Assembly called for the Overtures respecting the Union of Offices in the Church, which were produced and laid on the table. The Overtures from the Synods of Glasgow and Ayr, the Synod of Angus and Mearns, the Synod of Fife, and the Presbytery of Glasgow, were read. The Assembly dispensed with the reading of the other Overtures upon this subject. After long reasoning, it was moved and seconded, That a committee be appointed to prepare an Overture, to be converted into an Interim Act, anent the Union of Offices, which shall be transmitted to Presbyteries, and by which the holding of a Principality or a Professorship in a University, now incompatible, by the Act of Assembly, 1817, with the holding of a parochial charge in the country, shall be farther declared incompatible with the holding of a parochial charge, or the charge of a Chapel of Ease, in the city that is the seat of that University, or in the suburbs thereof; but, in respect that it appears that certain of the offices of Principals and Professors of Divinity, Church History, and Oriental Languages, are not at present adequately provided, it is hereby declared, that until it shall appear to the General Assembly that such adequate provision has been secured, the operation of the said Act and Overture shall be suspended in regard to the offices of Principals and Professors of Divinity, Church History, and Oriental Languages, in any of the said Universities. Another motion was made and seconded, That the Assembly, considering that the Overtures recommend, in every case, the exclusion of a minister holding a parochial charge from a Principality or Professorship in a University, judge it inexpedient to transmit them to Presbyteries of the Church. A third motion was made and seconded, That the House do now adjourn till to-morrow; and the vote being called for upon this motion, it was agreed the state of the vote should be, Adjourn or Not. The roll being called, and votes marked, it carried, by a considerable majority, Not; and, therefore, the General Assembly agreed to proceed in the debate upon the two other motions which had been made and seconded; but his Grace the Lord High Commissioner having expressed a wish to retire, the Assembly agreed to resolve themselves into a committee of the whole House.

“ Sess. 7, May 26, 1825.

“ The Assembly called for the report of the Committee of the whole House, which was produced and read, the tenor whereof follows: ‘ Edinburgh, 25th May 1825.—The Committee of the whole House being met and constituted, they resumed the consideration of the subject which had been before the Assembly. After farther reasoning, the committee agree, on account of the lateness of the hour, to adjourn the debate. The committee closed with prayer.’

“ The Assembly resumed the consideration of the Overtures anent the Union of Offices in the Church. After farther reasoning, the vote was called for upon the two motions submitted to the House at yesterday's diet; and it was agreed that the state of the vote should be, First or Second Motion; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried, by a considerable majority, Second Motion; and, therefore, the General Assembly determined in terms of said second motion. Which judgment being intimated, Dr Andrew Thomson, in his own name, and that of all who should adhere to him, entered his dissent from the same, and asked and took instruments in the clerk's hands.”—Ed. 1843.

The General Assembly receiving, with the warmest satisfaction, the intelligence that the Quarto edition of the Gaelic Bible is at last completed, unanimously approve of the Report; authorise and ordain this version of the Scriptures in Gaelic, with the version of the Psalms and Paraphrases now attached to it, and no other version, to be used in the churches and chapels within the bounds of this Church where public worship is conducted in the Gaelic language, and appoint this enactment to be inserted in their printed Acts.

REPORT.

Assembly House, 26th May 1826.

The Committee of the General Assembly appointed for Classing the Returns in regard to Schools beg leave to report—

1. That regular printed or written schedules of the prescribed form have been received from the following Presbyteries, viz. :—

Aberbrothock,	Dundee,	Lewis,
Aberdeen,	Dunfermline,	25 Linlithgow,
Aberlour,	15 Fordoun,	Lochmaben,
Abernethy,	Fordyce,	Penpont,
5 Alford,	Forfar,	Perth,
Annan,	Irvine,	Selkirk,
Ayr,	Kelso,	30 St Andrews,
Brechin,	20 Kincardine-O'Neil,	Stranraer,
Cupar,	Kirkcaldy,	Tongue,
10 Dalkeith,	Lanark,	Elgin, and
Dumbarton,	Lauder,	34 Meikle.
Dunbar,

2. That reports, either less complete or less regular than the above, have been made by the following Presbyteries, viz.—

Chirnside,	Haddington,	Strathbogie,
Edinburgh,	Paisley,	42 Turriff.
Garioch,	40 Peebles,

3. That no return whatever has been received from the remaining thirty-six Presbyteries of this Church; and that thus the important purposes for which the General Assembly requires such returns are, in a great measure, defeated.

4. That, in the case of the Parish of Lochs, in the Presbytery of Lewis, mentioned in the report made upon this subject to the last General Assembly, the reason now assigned why there is no parochial school there is, that there “is not a school-house;” but that no assurance is given that the proper means are employed for the remedy of this evil.

5. That the suggestions made in the report upon this subject, laid before the last General Assembly, have not been sufficiently attended to in the preparation of the printed schedules transmitted to Presbyteries; and,

6. That all the returns received this year continue to bear testimony to the great and growing benefits which arise from habitual inspection, exercised by Presbyteries over the schools within their respective bounds.

Respectfully reported, in name, and by appointment, of the committee, by

Sess. 9, May 27, 1826.—Act as to the Course of Study to be pursued by Students of Divinity.

The General Assembly, having called for the Report of the Committee for Classing Returns to Overtures, and having learned from the said report, that a majority of Presbyteries had now given their consent to the first overture, respecting the course of study to be pursued by students of divinity, did, and hereby do, convert the said overture into a Standing Law of the Church, and enact and ordain, that, in all time coming, it shall be held and acted upon as such by all the Presbyteries of this Church, with respect to all students of divinity entering upon the said study, from and after this date.

It is therefore enacted, that, in future, all students of divinity shall give at least one year of regular attendance at the Divinity Hall; and that such year of regular attendance shall be the first, the second, or the third year of the course; the present law regulating the attendance remaining in other respects without alteration.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1827.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The dutiful and loyal Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, the ministers and elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, embrace the opportunity of this our first meeting, since the lamented death of his Royal Highness the Duke of York and Albany, to approach the throne with the expression of our heartfelt sympathy and condolence on account of that afflictive dispensation of Providence.

We take a deep interest in whatever affects the happiness of a King so endeared to us, and we contemplate the death of your Majesty's illustrious Brother as a great calamity, both to your Majesty's Royal House and to the nation at large.

To affections and manners which gave a charm to the intercourse of social life, there was added, in the Duke of York, the nobler adorning of the most eminent official merit, the merit of an enlightened, and benevolent, and indefatigable zeal, in the discharge of the duties of his high appointment—the merit of having thus improved the condition, and exalted the character of the British army, to a degree of excellence which had never before been realized. If, in the late eventful contest, our countrymen achieved the most splendid victories which our history records,—if, when the mighty strife was over, the men, who had been accustomed to scenes of devastation and blood, returned readily, and at once, to all the quiet and orderly habits of civil life,—if, while thus triumphant in war, they have also shown themselves exemplary in peace,—to the Duke of York's military administration, and to his solicitude for their religious instruction, it is owing, under Providence, that Britain has to boast of an army deserving such a praise.

While, in common with your Majesty, we mourn over the death of a Prince thus privately amiable, and thus publicly useful, we trust that it may be some consolation to your Majesty to know, that the sorrow with which your Majesty has been visited is participated unaffectedly by the whole empire.

That your Majesty may long reign over a loyal and affectionate people, and may at length exchange an earthly crown for one more glorious in the heavens, is the fervent prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and by our appointment,

ROBERT HALDANE, Moderator.

Sess. 9, May 26, 1827.—Act as to the Course of Study to be pursued by Students of Divinity.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee for Classing Returns to Overtures, which was produced and read, as follows:

“Returns have been received from four Presbyteries, as to the overture respecting the course of study to be pursued by students of divinity, re-transmitted by last Assembly, viz. from the Presbyteries of Caithness, Kirkeudbright, and Dumfries, approving simpliciter of the same; and from the Presbytery of Kintyre, approving of the general principle and spirit of the overture, but objecting to it, ‘in respect that it does not give Presbyteries any powers in connection with the examinations proposed therein.’

“As it appears from the Report given in by the committee of Assembly last year, that, exclusively of the returns from the Presbytery of Wigton, the import of which was ambiguous, thirty-eight Presbyteries had then approved of this overture, there are now forty-one Presbyteries who have sent up returns in favour of it, constituting a decided majority of Presbyteries approving of its being enacted into a Standing Law of the Church.

“DAVID DICKSON.”

Whereas it appears from the above report, that a majority of Presbyteries have now given their consent to the second overture, respecting the course of study to be pursued by students of divinity, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, convert the said overture into a Standing Law of the Church, and enact and ordain, that, in all time coming, it shall be held and acted upon as such by all the Presbyteries of this Church, with respect to all students of divinity entering upon the said study from and after this date.

It is therefore enacted, that, previously to the enrolment of any student as a student of divinity, he shall be examined by the Presbytery within the bounds of which he resides, upon literature, science, and philosophy, particularly upon Greek and Latin; that when students shall not give regular attendance at the Divinity Hall, excepting for one year of their course, they shall, during the currency of the fourth year of that course, be examined by their respective Presbyteries upon their attainments in Divinity, Church History, Greek, and Hebrew; and that, in both cases, they shall present to the Professors of Divinity under whom their studies are conducted, the certificates of examination granted by Presbyteries.

VIII.

Sess. ult., May 28, 1827.—Report concerning Schools.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee appointed to Class the Returns upon the subject of the Examination of Schools, which was produced by Dr Dickson, the convener. The Assembly approved of said Report, and directed their clerks to have the same inserted in the printed Acts of this Assembly.

REPORT.

Edinburgh, 28th May 1827.

The Committee of the General Assembly for Classing Returns from Presbyteries, in regard to the Examination and State of Schools, beg leave to report:—

1. That regular printed or written schedules of the prescribed form, containing reports as to almost every parish within their respective bounds, have been received from the following Presbyteries, viz.:—

Aberbrothock,	10 Dalkeith,	Jedburgh,
Aberdeen,	Dumbarton,	20 Lanark,
Aberlour,	Dumfries,	Lauder,
Abernethy,	Dundee,	Lochmaben,
5 Alford,	Dunfermline,	Penpont,
Annau,	15 Fordyce,	Selkirk,
Ayr,	Forfar,	25 St Andrews,
Brechin,	Garioch,	Stranraer.
Cupar,	Haddington,

2. That reports, either less regular or less complete than the above, have been returned by the following Presbyteries, viz.:—

Biggar,	Kirkealdy,	Peebles,
Chirnside,	Lewis,	Perth,
Edinburgh,	Linlithgow,	Strathbogie,
Irvine,	Meigle,	Turriff.
5 Kincardine-O'Neil,	10 Paisley,

3. That no returns whatever have been made by the other thirty-eight Presbyteries, so that there is this year a still greater deficiency in the number of returns than was reported to last Assembly.

4. That, on comparing the returns in 1825 and 1826 with those sent up to the present Assembly, it appears that these returns have, during that period, been made almost entirely by the very same Presbyteries; a circumstance which will deserve the special attention of the committees of future Assemblies, as it may otherwise be supposed, in the course of two or three years, that returns have been received from every Presbytery in the Church, while the fact may really be, that not many more than a half of the Presbyteries have actually made such returns.

5. That the practice of making merely general reports on the back of commissions, or of sending up separate reports from particular parishes, instead of the prescribed abstract that should be drawn up by Presbyteries, still prevails, and ought to be distinctly discountenanced, as rendering the reports necessarily most imperfect, and making it almost impossible for any committee of Assembly sufficiently to examine them.

6. That, notwithstanding the statements in the two former reports of the committee, there is still nothing said in the returns from the Presbytery of Lewis, as to the actual erection of a parochial school-house in the parish of Lochs.

7. That the returns of this year continue to furnish the most satisfactory evidence of the great advantages resulting from the stated presbyterial visitation of schools, and should be felt by the Assembly as a powerful inducement to the renewed enforcement of their regulations in so important a subject.

8. That it is of the utmost consequence that the third recommendation and injunction of the Assembly, 1820, ament the Examination of Schools, be more strictly observed in future, viz. "That every Presbytery take care to have their returns made up and transmitted to the Agent for the Church, on or before the first week of the sitting of the General Assembly, to whom they will be answerable."

All which is, in name and by appointment of the committee, respectfully submitted to the Assembly,

DAVID DICKSON, Convener.

Note.—Overtures respecting the Union of Offices in the Church were again laid on the Assembly's table:—"After reasoning, it was moved and seconded, 'That the General Assembly, considering that there is at the present time a Royal Commission holding sittings in this country, for remedy of all evils or inconveniences alleged to exist in the Universities of Scotland, deem it inexpedient to enter upon the consideration of the subject of the Overtures on the table of the Assembly; and, therefore, resolve that the consideration of the said Overtures shall be postponed until the meeting of the next General Assembly, and that the said Overtures shall, in the meantime, lie on the table.' Another motion was made and seconded, 'That the General Assembly, considering that there is at the present time a Royal Commission holding sittings in this country, for remedy of all evils or inconveniences alleged to exist in the Universities of Scotland, deem it inexpedient to enter upon the consideration of the subject of the Overtures on the table of this Assembly; and the vote being called for, it was agreed the state of the vote should be, First or Second Motion; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried Second Motion; and, therefore, the Assembly, considering that there is at the present time a Royal Commission holding sittings in this country, for remedy of all evils or inconveniences alleged to exist in the Universities of Scotland, deem it inexpedient to enter upon the consideration of the said Overtures.'"—Ed. 1843.

VII.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1828.—Report of the Committee of Assembly on the Returns of Presbyteries as to Schools.

The General Assembly, having heard this report, approve thereof, direct the clerks to insert the same in the printed Acts ; and instruct Presbyteries to send returns, taking for their model the schedules formerly printed and circulated.

1. That returns appear from forty Presbyteries, a list of which will be found appended. That thirty-eight Presbyteries having omitted to send up returns, and this neglect having become habitual with many of them, it is for the Assembly to consider in what manner the repeated and salutary orders of the Supreme Ecclesiastical Court ought to be enforced. Your committee think it would be necessary to send copies of the printed form to each of these Presbyteries, which, if accompanied by a renewed order specially sent to them, it is humbly thought would have the effect.

2. As no less than seventeen out of the forty returns of this year are on common paper, and this mode of preparing them causes much trouble to the clerks, and is also less uniform and satisfactory, your committee hope that the Assembly will be pleased to authorise printed forms to be issued to the members of Presbyteries who may call for them, or to the clerks who may send an application for this purpose ; and that in the event of any more being printed, a column be left, as formerly ordered, for the population, to be compared with the numbers of scholars. One printed report to be made up for each Presbytery, duly attested.

3. That regular and most interesting reports have come up from Aberdeen, Arbroath, Ayr, Brechin, Cupar, Mull, St Andrews, and various other Presbyteries, and that, in general, these embrace not only the parish, but also the other schools in their bounds, which are supported by the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the Gaelic School Society, the Committee of the General Assembly, the Inverness Education Society and its auxiliaries, the Society in Glasgow, the funds mortgaged for that purpose, and the sums contributed by the benevolence and patriotism of individuals.

4. That, from the aspect of these returns, compared with the extent and population of nearly as many Presbyteries, who have omitted to send in reports, it appears to your committee that there are at present under the superintendence of the General Assembly, and the inspection of Presbyteries in their committees, above 5000 schools in all, containing above 250,000 scholars ; and that hardly any thing can be more salutary than the moral and religious influence of an engine so extensive, and so well directed, which, with an energy even more increased of late than the augmenting population of Scotland, has been directed to the promoting of literature and science, with sound principles and habits, and all the best interests of the kingdom.

5. That your committee think it their duty to observe, that, in the remote and desolate parish of Lochs, in the Presbytery of Lewis, the report bears, that still there is no parish school erected, a circumstance which must now also deprive the people of any school from the Assembly's committee. That, in many Presbyteries, a number of the teachers have not yet qualified to Government, by taking the Oath of Allegiance before any magistrate. That the teachers ought also to qualify, by subscribing the Confession of Faith before the Presbytery, and signing the Formula, 1694. That a number of the parish teachers have been allowed only the minimum salary, and that others possess too little, and far too mean accommodation in school-houses and dwelling-houses ; and that now when, by the Act, 1803, an augmentation falls to be made to the salaries of parish teachers, if landholders are pleased to give liberal attention to these objects, it may raise the character of that useful order of men, instead of depressing it, and withering the salutary influence of their labours, by leaving them so meanly endowed and accommodated as many now are.

6. Your committee are bound in duty to notice the fact, that no scholars attend the parish school of Balmerino, which, to a parish containing 965 souls, must be very highly injurious ; and, in thus noticing it, your committee hope that their doing so may tend, in some degree, to correct an evil, for which, in the report, no reason is assigned.

7. That though the Episcopal teachers in Montrose made opposition to the Presbytery's committees of examination some years ago, for which an apology was made at the bar of this House, the schools there are now regularly visited and reported from year to year ; and even the schools at New Lanark are not only open for examination, but the Scriptures are daily read in them, through the Christian prudence and attention of the minister of Lanark. That the report from Aberdeen bears, that religious instruction is given in the ancient and flourishing High School of the New City, where 204 scholars are learning Latin, and 80 are learning Greek, and that your countenance and influence, it is humbly hoped, may induce other classical schools to follow so good an example. That, in general, the number of scholars are increasing in the numerous seminaries; an instance being reported from the academy at Ayr, as containing 578 scholars, and being also an excellent and thriving institution.

VI.

Sess. 9, May 30, 1829.—Report and Injunction concerning Schools.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee appointed to Class the Returns upon the subject of the Examinations of Schools, which was produced and read. The Assembly approved of the Report, and directed the Clerk to have it inserted in the Printed Acts, and also to write letters to all the Clerks of Presbyteries, requiring them peremptorily to send up by their Commissioners to the next General Assembly, returns of the Examination of the Schools in their several bounds, in the form of the printed Schedules, containing the names not only of all the Schools examined, but of every School which has not been examined in the course of the year, with the cause of such omission; which Schedules must be delivered to the Clerks not later than the first week of the sitting of the General Assembly.

Your committee beg leave first to advert to two particulars in last year's Report,—the schools of Montrose, and the school of Balmerino, in the Presbytery of Cupar.

In last year's Report it was stated, by mistake, that the Episcopal teachers in Montrose had, some years ago, refused to allow the Presbytery of Brechin to examine their schools; whereas it was from the magistrates of that place that the opposition arose. While your committee deem it right, in consequence of the information they have received, to bear their testimony to the submission, the diligence, and success of those teachers, they are, at the same time, bound to state, on authentic intelligence, that the magistrates of that burgh are now in the regular practice of cordially giving their countenance to the Presbytery in the examination of the different schools of that place.

By a letter just received from the clerk of the Presbytery of Cupar, it appears that an arrangement has happily been at length completed, by which a schoolmaster is about to be appointed at Balmerino, and the youth of that parish, it is to be hoped, in future to enjoy the benefit arising from an active teacher.

With regard to this year, returns have been received from the following Presbyteries, viz. :—

Aberdeen,	Dunfermline,	Lanark,
Aberlour,	15 Edinburgh,	Lauder,
Abernethy,	Elgin,	Lewis,
Alford,	Ellon,	30 Linlithgow,
5 Annan,	Fordyce,	Lochmaben,
Arbroath,	Garioch,	Meikle,
Ayr,	20 Haddington,	Mull,
Brechin,	Jedburgh,	Peebles,
Cupar,	Irvine,	35 Penpont,
10 Dalkeith,	Kirkcaldy,	St Andrews,
Dunbar,	Kirkcudbright,	Strathbogie,
Dumbarton,	25 Kincardine-O'Neil,	Tongue.
Dundee,	Kintyre,

It thus appears, that not so many returns have this year been laid before the Assembly as there were twelve months ago.

By comparing these returns with those of last and some former years, it will be observed, that while about the half of the Presbyteries of the Church have been in the practice of complying with the injunction of the Assembly, by the other half the order so frequently issued by the Assembly is totally disregarded.

Many of the returns received are both drawn up with great accuracy, and give evidence of strict attention paid by the different members of these Presbyteries to the moral and religious instruction of the youth under their care. Still, in some of the returns, it appears that several members of Presbyteries either neglect to examine the schools in their parishes, or, if that be done, to make a return to that effect.

One instance has been stated of a teacher, more anxious to disseminate opinions hostile to the Established Church, than to instruct the youth under his care; and in another Presbytery, two teachers, it appears, who have not qualified, would not say, when asked, whether they were or not willing to do so. But as there is no doubt that what is here pointed out will speedily be corrected, it is not deemed to be necessary to direct the attention of the Assembly more particularly to this subject.

Your committee are of opinion, that attention to the instruction of the rising generation is one of the first objects to which the attention of the Church can be turned; and though it cannot be doubted that the Presbyteries who persist in declining to make returns are nevertheless mindful of this most essential part of their duty, yet, as no evidence to this effect is laid before the Assembly, your committee would humbly suggest that some step ought to be taken by which this might be ascertained. Perhaps this might be, to direct the Clerk of Assembly to address, without delay, a letter to the Clerk of each Presbytery, ordering him peremptorily to send up a return to next Assembly, on one of the printed schedules, of the schools examined within the respective Presbyteries during the twelve months, and to state where any school has not been examined, the name of that school, and the cause of the delay.

Were such an order issued, and compliance yielded to it, a pleasing view would then be exhibited of the diligence and zeal with which ministers in Scotland attend to the useful, but especially to the pious, interests of the rising generation, spread over the various parts of the Church.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1830.—Act appointing the Presbyteries of Lerwick and Burravoe, and Synod of Shetland.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on the Petition from the Presbytery of Shetland, which was given in by Dr Baird, the Convener, and read, the tenor whereof follows:—

The Committee respectfully reports,

1. That on mature consideration of the details stated in the petition of the Presbytery of Shetland, they are of opinion that it would be expedient to divide the present Presbytery, not into three Presbyteries as petitioned for, but into two; the one of these two to be called the Lerwick Presbytery, to hold its ordinary meetings at Lerwick; and the other to be called the Burravoe Presbytery, to hold its ordinary meetings at Burravoe, in the parish of Yell.

2. That the committee have come to the above opinion from the authentic information obtained by them, that the purposed arrangement would be acceptable to all the members of the present Presbytery; that it is required by the physical localities of the Shetland Isles, and that it will tend to relieve the ministers, agents, and parties having business in connection with that court, from many of the perils and difficulties to which they would otherwise be exposed in travelling over hills and moors, without roads, or along rocky shores, through rapid and boisterous tides, to any one fixed place of meeting.

3. That the committee recommend, if the subdivision humbly suggested above is approved and authorised by the Assembly, that the Presbytery of Lerwick shall consist of the following parishes, viz.:—Dunrossness, Walls, Sandsting, Tingwall, Lerwick, and Bressay; and that the Presbytery of Burravoe shall consist of the following parishes, viz.:—Nesting, Delting, Northmavine, Yell, Fetlar, and Unst; thus comprising six parishes in each of the two Presbyteries.

4. That the committee are of opinion, that the said two Presbyteries should be appointed to form a Synod with full synodical powers; that Lerwick should be appointed as the fixed place of the meetings of the Synod of Shetland, where its records should be kept, and where the records of the present Presbytery should be deposited and kept in retentis.

5. That the Presbytery of Lerwick should be appointed to meet at Lerwick on the second Wednesday of July next, and proceed to business; that the Presbytery of Burravoe should be appointed to meet at Burravoe on the third Wednesday of July next, and proceed to business; and that the Synod of Shetland should be appointed to meet at Lerwick on the last Wednesday of April 1831, and proceed to business.

(Signed) GEO. H. BAIRD, Convener.

The General Assembly approve of the report, and enact in terms thereof, and order the same to be inserted in the printed Acts of the General Assembly.

IX.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1830.—Report concerning Schools.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee for classing Returns of the Examination of Schools, which was given in by Dr Stirling, the Convener, and read. The General Assembly approve of the Report, and appoint it to be inserted among the printed Acts.

The committee of the General Assembly for classing Returns from Presbyteries, respecting the Examination of Schools, reports as follows:—

1st, That regular returns of all the schools within their bounds have been transmitted to your committee by the following Presbyteries, viz.:—

Aberbrothock,	15	Dunoon,	Lauder,
Aberlour,		Elgin,	30
Abernethy,		Ellon,
Alford,		Fordoun,
5	St Andrews,	Fordyce,
	Biggar,	20	Garioch,
	Brechin,		Haddington,
	Chirnside,		Inverness,
	Cupar,		Jedburgh,
10	Dalkeith,		Kincardine-O'Neil,
	Dumbarton,	25	Kintyre,
	Dunfermline,		Kirkealdy,
	Dundee,		Kirkcudbright,
	Dunse,		Langholm,
			42
			Skye.

2d, That returns, more or less regular and complete, have been sent from the following Presbyteries, viz.:—

Aberdeen,	Dunblane,	Hamilton,
Annan,	Dumfries,	Kirkwall,
Auchterarder,	Edinburgh,	Peebles,
Ayr,	Forfar,	Perth,
5	Dornoch,	10	Irvine,
		15	Turriff.

3d, That a letter has been received from the Moderator of the Presbytery of North Isles, praying to be excused for not sending up any return to this Assembly, as, before he and his co-presbyters received the Assembly's order of 30th May 1829, the unfavourable season had set in, and they were unable, in their insular situations, to accomplish presbyterially the examination of their schools, but promising implicit obedience to the Assembly's injunctions on this subject in all time coming.

4th, That from the remaining nineteen Presbyteries of the Church, no returns of any kind have been received.

5th, That in the Abbey parish of Paisley, and West parish of Greenock, though landward parishes, there are no schoolhouses, and that, notwithstanding the attention of the Assembly has been drawn by your committee on some former years to the situation of the parish of Lochs, in the Presbytery of Lewis, yet no steps seem yet to have been taken to get a schoolhouse built in that parish.

6th, That a complaint, which accompanies this report, has been made by the Presbytery of Mull, of the conduct of certain teachers of the Gaelic School Society within their bounds; but your committee are fully persuaded that, when the justice of this complaint is made known to that society, by which the interests of education have been so greatly promoted, immediate steps will be taken for its redress.

7th, That in several returns which have been made, due care has not been taken to have them authenticated by the signatures of the moderator and clerk of Presbytery, or even by the minister of the parish in which the school is situated. Nor do some of the Presbyteries, from which the most complete returns have come, seem to be aware of the obligations under which they lie, to see that the teachers within their bounds take the oaths to government; a striking example of this is afforded in the towns of Paisley and Greenock, for, out of fifty-nine schools in the former of these towns, forty-five of the teachers have not qualified to government; and out of thirty-four schools in the latter, twenty-nine of the teachers are in the same state.

8th, That your committee have great satisfaction in perceiving, that where the duty of Presbyterial examination of schools has regularly taken place, the very best effects have resulted from it,—that the methods of teaching have been improved,—that the zeal and diligence both of the teachers and taught have been powerfully excited. And your committee cannot conclude this report without expressing their earnest desire that the venerable Assembly would continue to enforce upon all the Presbyteries of this Church, and especially upon those from which no returns have come, the faithful performance of a duty so eminently calculated to promote the best interests of the rising generation.

(Signed)

JOHN STIRLING, Convener.

*Sess. ult., May 31, 1830.—Overture as to printing Extracts from the Records of the Inferior Church Courts.

The General Assembly called for the Overture from the Presbytery of Ellon on the printing of Extracts from the Records of the Inferior Church Courts, which was produced and read as follows:—

“Unto the venerable the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, it is humbly overtured by the Presbytery of Ellon, that, for enabling the members of Assembly more fully to understand all matters coming before them, it be enacted, that the 16th Act of the General Assembly, 1700, discharging the printing of any part of ecclesiastical processes without allowance, be repealed, and that, in future, all overtures be printed and laid on the Assembly's table, in sufficient numbers, for the use of members, on the first Monday of its sitting, unless in the case of matters coming to the knowledge of the Court during its sitting, and which may require immediate attention; but that, in every such case, the overture to be proposed shall be printed and laid on the Assembly's table at least three days before it shall be discussed; and that it be farther enacted, that in all references, complaints, or appeals, the record of the Inferior Court shall be printed, and a sufficient number of copies for the use of members, in all causes coming before the Court before the Wednesday, be laid on the Assembly's table the first Saturday of its sitting, and of all others on the first Monday of the Assembly."

* This Overture was next year referred to the Committee on the Form of Process.—Ed. 1843.

The General Assembly agree to transmit the overture for the consideration of Presbyteries.

II.

Sess. 1, May 19, 1831.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly, presented to them by his Majesty's Commissioner.

WILLIAM, R.

Right Reverend and Well-beloved, we greet you well.—Highly sensible of the firm adherence which your former meetings have uniformly shown to the succession of the Crown of this realm in our Family, and knowing their attachment to the Protestant faith, and to the general interests of religion and sound morality, we most willingly sanction with our royal authority your present Assembly; and we gladly avail ourselves of this first opportunity of giving you the assurance of our fixed purpose to continue to the Presbyterian Church of Scotland the same countenance and support which it has received from our royal ancestors, and to maintain it in the full possession of all its rights and privileges, as by law established.

We are persuaded that you will manifest, in the whole course of your proceedings, during the present Assembly, an enlightened and well-tempered zeal in the cause of true religion and good morals, and that your conduct will be distinguished by that moderation, candour, and wisdom, which are essentially necessary for giving effect to your counsels.

We commit with confidence to your pastoral care the interests of the Church of Scotland, earnestly hoping that you will be enabled to promote the great object which we have always at heart—the happiness and welfare of our people.

We have thought fit to appoint our right trusty and well-beloved Robert Montgomery Lord Belhaven to be the Representative of our royal person in this Assembly, being well assured of his zealous attachment to the Church of Scotland, and of his ability and earnest wish to discharge faithfully the high and important duties with which he is entrusted. And we are persuaded that this choice will be acceptable to you.

We earnestly recommend you, Well-beloved, to the care of Divine Providence, and heartily bid you farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 9th day of May 1831, in the first year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

MELBOURNE.

*Addressed thus—*To the Right Reverend and Well-beloved the Moderator, Ministers, and Elders, of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

III.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1831.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, the members of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, have received with sentiments of the profoundest respect and warmest gratitude, the gracious letter with which your Majesty has condescended to honour us on this occasion.

Nothing can yield us greater satisfaction than the assurance so graciously conveyed, that your Majesty—highly sensible of the firm adherence which former Assemblies have uniformly shown to the succession of the Crown of this realm in your Majesty's illustrious Family, and knowing our attachment to the Protestant faith, and to the general interests of religion and sound morality—most willingly sanctions, with your royal authority, our present Assembly. It is also peculiarly gratifying to us, that your Majesty has been pleased to give us the assurance of your fixed purpose to continue to the Church of Scotland the same countenance and support which it has received from your royal ancestors, and to maintain it in the full possession of all its rights and privileges, as by law established.

It will be our most earnest endeavour to manifest, in the whole course of our proceedings during this Assembly, an enlightened and well tempered zeal in the cause of true religion and good morals; and we trust that, by the blessing of God, our conduct will evince that moderation, candour, and wisdom, which are essentially necessary for giving effect to our counsels.

Entrusted as we are with the religious interests of the Church of Scotland, we will anxiously labour, under Providence, to assist in promoting the great objects which we know your Majesty has always at heart—the happiness and welfare of your people.

The appointment of a Commissioner so well recommended as Lord Belhaven, by his loyalty, by his hereditary attachment to the Church of Scotland, and by the interest he has personally taken in the proceedings of former Assemblies, is most acceptable to us; and we are confident that, from his ability and earnest wish to discharge faithfully the high and important duties committed to him, we shall receive the most effectual co-operation and support.

The royal donation of L.2000, for the propagation of Christian knowledge in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, we accept with the liveliest gratitude, as a pledge of your Majesty's anxiety to promote the extension of pure religion; and we shall apply it with all fidelity to the pious purpose for which it is bestowed.

That Almighty God may bless your Majesty, your Royal Consort, and all the members of the Royal Family;—that He may ever direct and prosper your Majesty's government;—and that He may maintain, till the latest ages, the national blessings we now enjoy, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and by our appointment,

JAMES WALLACE, Moderator.

IV.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1831.—The General Assembly's Address to the King on his Accession to the Throne of these Realms.

TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The Loyal and Dutiful Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's faithful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in this General Assembly, cordially approving of the conduct of the Commission of the last General Assembly, in having conveyed to the throne those sentiments of respect and attachment which are so justly due to your Majesty's person and government, and which are universally felt by the members of this National Church, embrace with alacrity the earliest opportunity which our annual meeting affords, of expressing our condolence on the death of our late illustrious King, and our congratulations on your Majesty's auspicious elevation to the sovereignty of the United Kingdom.

The retrospect of the many signal advantages which we enjoyed under the government of your Majesty's royal brother, during a series of the most eventful years in the history of our land, while it excites our gratitude to the Supreme Governor among the nations, cannot fail to revive the sorrowful impressions with which all of us contemplated an event most afflicting to your Majesty and the Royal Family, and deplored as a heavy public calamity throughout the whole extent of the British Empire.

It is with no common emotions of delight that we recognize in your Majesty the son of a venerable Monarch, who, in the course of a reign of almost unprecedented duration, was eminently distinguished by his pure faith and fervent charity—by his vigilance and firmness in the most difficult times—by the mild lustre of his domestic virtues—by his reverence for the laws and constitution of this happy country—and by the bright combination of virtuous qualities which engaged the veneration and love of his subjects;—and we gladly anticipate from your Majesty the same fidelity and zeal in fulfilling the arduous duties of your elevated station—the same resolute adherence to every honourable purpose—the same generous encouragement of every pious and beneficent undertaking—and the same countenance, protection, and favour to the Church of Scotland, for the defence of whose rights and privileges the most solemn pledge was given in the first act of your Majesty's administration.

We beg leave most earnestly to express the high value which we attach to the assurances of your Majesty's determination to preserve inviolate our ecclesiastical establishment, which, under the fostering care of Divine Providence, has had the felicity of enjoying complete security, ever since the period when the British Crown was transferred to your Majesty's Illustrious Family—a family to which the members of this Church have uninterruptedly maintained the most steadfast fidelity. Highly as we estimate the benefits derived from the constitution, under which it is our happiness to live, we feel the sacred obligation of exemplifying and inculcating, along with that fear of the Lord, which is the beginning of wisdom, the duty of honouring the King, and submitting to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, "as free, and not using liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God."

That the Lord God Almighty, whose kingdom ruleth over all, may give your Majesty length of days, riches, and honour;—that He may establish your throne in righteousness;—that He may eminently bless our gracious Queen, and all the Royal Family;—that He may impart to you in rich abundance the consolations and hopes of the Gospel;—and that, after a long and prosperous reign, He may receive you to the glories and felicities of the heavenly kingdom, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1831.—The General Assembly's Address to the Queen on his Majesty's Accession to the Throne.

TO HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

May it please your Majesty,

We, his Majesty's loyal and faithful subjects, the ministers and elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, gladly seize the first occasion which our meeting has afforded us, of congratulating your Majesty on the auspicious accession of our beloved Sovereign; and on the unmingled satisfaction felt by every loyal and patriotic heart, in hailing your Majesty as the partaker of his throne.

While we rejoice in believing that your Majesty, though not insensible of the value of the distinction of sharing the dignity and soothing the cares of a great Monarch, and commanding the deference of an admiring nation, is still more earnest in seeking the honour which cometh from God only, we render thanks to the Supreme Disposer of events, who has been pleased to exalt to a station so conspicuous, a Princess who has already been distinguished as a pattern of personal and conjugal excellence, and who is acknowledged to be most happily qualified to adorn the lofty circle in which she moves, and to diffuse amongst all classes of his Majesty's subjects the influence of a conversation becoming the Gospel.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may ever guide and guard your Majesty;—that He may enrich your soul with the fruits of the Spirit, and make you exceeding glad with his salvation;—and that, when the fashion of the world shall have passed away, your Majesty may receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most devoted servants, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Sess. 9, May 30, 1831.—Report concerning Schools.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee for classing Returns of the Examination of Schools, which was given in by Dr Dickson, the Convener, and read. The General Assembly approve of the Report, and authorise the insertion thereof among the printed Acts.

Your Committee beg leave to report,

I. That regular returns concerning all the public or parochial, and in many instances also the private schools within their bounds, have been received from the following Presbyteries :—

Aberdeen,	Dumbarton,	Lewis,
Aberlour,	Elgin,	Linlithgow,
Abernethy,	Ellon,	Lochmaben,
Abertarff,	Fordoun,	Lorn,
5 Alford,	20 Fordyce,	35 Meikle,
Annan,	Forfar,	Mull,
Arbroath,	Garioch,	Nairn,
Auchterarder,	Haddington,	North Isles,
Ayr,	Jedburgh,	Paisley,
10 Brechin,	25 Kincardine-O'Neil,	40 Peebles,
Chirnside,	Kintyre,	Penpont,
Cupar,	Kirkcudbright,	Selkirk,
Dalkeith,	Lanark,	Strathbogie,
Dingwall,	Langholm,	44 Turriff.
15 Dunfermline,	30 Lauder,

II. That returns, of which some are very nearly, but others very far from complete, have been received from the following Presbyteries :—

Biggar,	5 Hamilton,	St Andrews,
Dunblane,	Kelso,	10 Stranraer,
Dundee,	Irvine,	Uist.
Edinburgh,	Lochcarron,

III. That to the equal surprise and regret of your committee, they find, from examining the returns of the former years, that none whatever have been received during the last four years from the following Presbyteries, who, in the opinion of your committee, ought to be peremptorily enjoined to send up returns to next General Assembly :—

Cairston,	5 Dunkeld,	Inverary,
Caithness,	Forres,	Stirling,
Chanonry,	Glasgow,	10 Tain.
Deer,

IV. That, in regard to the returns which your committee have reported as being complete, except as to the examination of private schools, while they are aware that it may be difficult for Presbyteries within whose bounds large towns, such as Kilmarnock, Greenock, Paisley, &c., are situated, to examine all such schools every year, they would suggest the propriety of at least the number of such schools, and of the children attending them, with the kind of instruction received in them, being annually reported ; it being most desirable that as full a view as possible of the whole provision for education throughout Scotland be annually laid before the Assembly ; and not only should female and charity and Sunday schools be included in such returns, but those of the General Assembly's Committee, the Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge, the Gaelic School Society, and other similar institutions ; with the number and state of which, though they may be reported separately to the committees or societies to which they more particularly belong, it is of no small importance that the Church also be made acquainted.

V. That in a considerable number of instances, even the returns that may be regarded as complete in one view, are often extremely defective in another ; some of them, though reporting the number and kind of schools, giving no statement whatever as to the manner in which they are taught, or whether the Scriptures and Church Catechisms are regularly used in them ; others omitting to report whether the teachers have qualified to Government or not, and some stating merely, in the most general terms, that the schools within the bounds have been examined during the year, without saying a single word more respecting them.

These defects should be carefully avoided in future, and with this view, your committee would especially recommend that all the Presbyteries be strictly enjoined to employ the last printed schedules prepared by the Assembly for the very purpose of securing complete as well as regular returns ; instead of continuing to use the older schedules, and still less of being satisfied, as some of them most improperly are, with making their returns on the back of the Commissions of their representatives to the Assembly. In every case, too, the returns should be attested by the Moderator or Clerk of the Presbytery.

VI. That school-houses appear to be still wanting in the Abbey Parish of Paisley, and the West Parish of Greenock, though these are landward parishes ; and that there is still no report from the Presbytery of Lewis, as to a school-house being provided for the parish of Lochs.

VII. That your committee regret to find the complaint made to last Assembly by the Presbytery of Mull, respecting the irregular conduct of some of the Gaelic School Society teachers, renewed this year.

VIII. That in all cases, and these are not a few, in which teachers who have not yet qualified to Government, but who have expressed their willingness to do so, your committee would suggest that the Presbyteries be instructed to direct them to apply without delay for that purpose to the proper authorities.

IX. That as the number of returns this year is still by no means so great as, in consequence of the special injunction of Assembly, 1829, on the subject, might reasonably have been expected, and as many of them were so late of being sent up or delivered to the clerks, that the committee have found the due examination of them to be attended with much difficulty and inconvenience, from want of sufficient time, they consider it of essential importance, that that injunction be renewed by the present Assembly, with the view of securing a greater number of returns next year, and of putting it into the power of the committee who may then be appointed to class them, to make out a fuller digested statement of the interesting and useful information, which, there can be little doubt, will be contained in them.

Sess. 1, May 17, 1832.—The King's most gracious Letter to the General Assembly.

WILLIAM, R.

Right Reverend and Well-beloved, we greet you well.—Having received from you on all occasions the most satisfactory proofs of your zeal for the maintenance and advancement of the Protestant religion, and of your loyalty and affection to our person and government, we most cheerfully sanction this your meeting with our full approval.

We feel confident that you will persevere to act upon the same enlightened principles which have hitherto marked your conduct, and that you will endeavour to the utmost to maintain, in all your proceedings, a spirit of moderation, wisdom, and Christian charity. On your part, you may rest assured that the Church of Scotland, as by law established, shall enjoy our undiminished protection for securing to it all its rights and privileges.

We have again thought fit to appoint our right trusty and well-beloved Robert Montgomery Lord Belhaven to be our Commissioner, and to represent our person in this General Assembly; not doubting that the same qualifications which have recommended him to our choice, will continue to make him acceptable to you in the execution of the important trust committed to his care; and so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 10th day of May 1832, in the second year of our reign.

By his Majesty's Command,

MELBOURNE.

III.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1832.—The General Assembly's Answer to the King's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

The gracious letter with which your Majesty has been pleased to honour the present General Assembly of the Church of Scotland has been received by us with the most lively sentiments of respect and gratitude.

We offer our most sincere and humble acknowledgments for the approbation which your Majesty has been pleased to express of our zeal for the maintenance and advancement of the Protestant religion, and of our loyalty and affection to your person and government.

Permit us to assure your Majesty that it shall be our great endeavour to act upon the same enlightened principles, which your Majesty condescends to say have hitherto marked our conduct, and to carry on all our proceedings in that spirit of moderation and Christian charity which become us as the servants of the Prince of Peace.

That your Majesty continues to countenance our Assembly with your royal authority is to us a gratifying proof of your paternal goodness; and we repose with confidence on the pledge which your Majesty has given us, that the Church of Scotland, as by law established, shall enjoy your undiminished protection for securing to it all its rights and privileges.

The hereditary attachment of Lord Belhaven to the cause of civil and religious liberty, his undoubted regard for the Church of Scotland, his exemplary conduct in private life, as well as the wisdom and urbanity with which, on a former occasion, he discharged the duties of his high office, render the re-appointment of him to represent your Majesty's royal person an acceptable mark of attention to our National Church.

We rejoice in the renewed expression of your Majesty's zeal for the propagation of the reformed Protestant religion in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland; and it shall be our care, by a faithful application of the sum your Majesty has graciously bestowed, to fulfil the pious and benevolent intentions of the royal donor.

That Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, may protect your Majesty's person, prolong your days, and prosper your government; that He may bless the Queen and all the Royal Family; that He may continue with us the many national privileges which we enjoy under your Majesty's mild administration, and transmit them as a precious inheritance to our children, and our children's children; and that, after a long reign over a free, a loyal, and a happy people, you may receive from him the recompense of a heavenly crown, are the fervent prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and by our appointment,

THOMAS CHALMERS, Moderator.

Sess. 9, May 26, 1832.—Standing Orders to be observed as to Procedure in the General Assembly.

1. That the Committee of Overtures shall be appointed to meet on the evening of the first Thursday of the Assembly, immediately after the rising of the committee for revising commissions, and again on the following morning at ten o'clock.

2. That there shall be two sessions held on the first Friday of the Assembly, the one thereof at twelve o'clock noon, to be spent in prayer, as at present; the other as soon thereafter as the Assembly may choose to appoint, for the purpose of hearing the reports of the committees on bills and overtures, and for the arrangement and dispatch of business generally.

3. That the practice of reading the Answer to the King's Letter, or any address, paragraph by paragraph, in the Assembly itself, be dispensed with in future, reserving the right of members to make such observations as may occur to them thereon as at present.

4. That on the second Thursday of its sitting, the Assembly shall determine when reports of committees, not previously lodged and disposed of by special order, shall be taken up.

5. That rolls of the order of causes, overtures, reports, and other matters of business, shall be printed for the use of the members of Assembly.

7. That when a Presbytery acquiesces in the sentence of a Synod, it shall not be entitled to appear as a separate party at the bar of the Assembly; but the members of Presbytery shall nevertheless be heard as members of Synod.

8. That in no case shall there be more than two speeches for each party at the bar, besides the reply, to which the appellant or complainer shall be entitled. And when there are more than two parties, there shall only be one speaker, and one speech for each, besides the reply. It being understood that where there is more than one complainer, each shall be considered as a different party only in case of its appearing to the Assembly that the complaints rest upon distinctly separate grounds.

X.

Sess. ult., May 28, 1832.—Report of the Committee appointed by the General Assembly for Classing Returns as to Schools.

The Committee beg leave to report to the venerable Assembly :—

1. That the following Presbyteries have made returns, including every parish within their respective bounds, and specifying, with more or less minuteness, the state of the parochial schools, and in the greater number of instances the state of private schools also, viz. :—

Aberbrothock,	Dunse,	Lauder,
Aberdeen,	Ellon,	Lewis,
Aberlour,	Fordoun,	Linlithgow,
Alford,	Fordyce,	Lochmaben,
Annan,	Forfar,	Meigle,
Brechin,	Garioch,	Mull,
Chirnside,	Inverness,	Penpont,
Cupar,	Kincardine-O'Neil,	Selkirk,
Dalkeith,	Kelso,	Strathbogie,
Dumbarton,	Lanark,	Tongue.
Dundee,

2. That the following Presbyteries have made returns, which include nearly all the parishes within their respective bounds, viz. :—

Abernethy,	Dumfries,	Lochcarron,
Auchterarder,	Elgin,	Lorn,
Ayr,	Haddington,	North Isles,
Biggar,	Jedburgh,	Peebles,
Deer,	Kirkeudbright,	Perth,
Dunbar,	Kirkcaldy,	St Andrews,
Dunfermline,	Lerwick,	Stranraer.

3. That only a few parishes are noticed in the returns from the Presbyteries of Edinburgh and Irvine, and but one in that from the Presbytery of Hamilton; while the report sent by the Presbytery of Turriff is in the form of a general certificate written on the back of the commission paper; and the report from Paisley is also very brief.

4. That the following Presbyteries have made no returns, viz. :—

Abertarff,	Cairston,	Dunkeld,
Burravoe,	Dingwall,	Dunoon,
Chanonry,	Dornoch,	Forres,
Caithness,	Dunblane,	Glasgow,

Inverary,
Kintyre,
Kirkwall,
Langholm,

Nairn,
Skye,
Stirling,

Tain,
Uist, Wigton.

5. That several of the returns, such as those from the Presbytery of Aberdeen, including very minute details of the state of education in the West Parish of Aberdeen, and from the Presbyteries of St Andrews, Cupar, Kirkcaldy, Dunfermline, Dumfries, Ayr, Linlithgow, and some others, appear to be made with most commendable attention.

6. That the Presbyteries of Mull and Lewis complain again of the irregular conduct of certain teachers within their bounds, who have been publicly preaching on the Lord's Day, and at other times. But this irregularity, in so far as the Presbytery of Mull is concerned, being now under the consideration of a committee of the General Assembly, is in the way of being prevented in future.

7. That two of the school-houses in Glenorchy and Inishail, in the Presbytery of Lorn, are represented as being very much out of repair, and even dangerous to the health of the scholars, and that the schoolmasters of Kilchrennan and Dalavich, in the same Presbytery, have no dwelling-house assigned to them.

8. That all the Presbyteries of the Church ought to have a supply of printed schedules on which to make their returns. Owing to the want of these, it is apprehended, the reports are, in several instances, not regular as to form, and defective.

9. That it is with great pleasure the committee observe, that the plan of instruction which is so successfully followed in the Sessional School of Edinburgh is adopted, and also that infant schools are opened in several parishes.

10. That while the committee entertain no doubt that, in teaching the principles of religion, the Church Catechism, along with the Bible, is universally employed in the parochial schools, they would like to see the daily use of it recognised by a formal statement in all, as it is in many, of the returns.

11. That in the following parishes, viz. the West Parish of Greenock, the Abbey of Paisley, and Lady Parish, in the Presbytery of North Isles, it appears that there is no parochial school.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal and dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to avail ourselves of our annual meeting in General Assembly, to approach the throne with the assurance of our most cordial and affectionate attachment to your Majesty's person and family; and to express to your Majesty our most sincere and heartfelt congratulations on your providential escape from the daring and treasonable attack which was made upon your Majesty's sacred person since the last Assembly of this National Church. We have felt, in common with all other classes of your Majesty's faithful subjects, the utmost abhorrence of that most audacious act; and we now embrace the earliest opportunity that the constitution of this Assembly has afforded, of recording our unanimous sentiments, along with those of the nation at large.

That Almighty God may long preserve your Majesty to reign over a loyal, happy, and religious people, and that the royal sceptre may descend in your Illustrious House, with undiminished splendour, to the latest posterity, are,

V.

Sess. 9, May 24, 1833.—Declaratory Enactment and Recommendation as to Colonial Churches.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland did, and hereby do, enact and declare, That it is proper and expedient for ordained ministers of the Church of Scotland connected with fixed congregations in any of the British Colonies, to form themselves, where circumstances permit, into Presbyteries and Synods, adhering to the Standards of this Church, and maintaining her form of worship and government.

That no minister should be received as a member of any such Presbytery or Synod, when first formed, who has not been ordained by a Presbytery of this Church; that no minister of this Church should be afterwards received as a member who does not come specially recommended from the Presbytery by which he was ordained, or in which he has last resided ; and that no probationer of this Church should receive ordination from any such Presbytery, except on his producing extract of licence, with a testimonial of his good character, from the Presbytery or Presbyteries within whose bounds he has resided, down to the time of his leaving Scotland.

That it is not expedient for such Presbyteries, in the present state of education in the Colonies, to exercise the power of licensing Probationers ; but that licentiates of the Church of Scotland, who shall be ordained by any such Presbytery to particular charges in the manner above described, shall remain in full communion with the Church of Scotland, and retain all the rights and privileges which belong to licentiates or ministers of this Church ; and that members of congregations, under the charge of ministers so ordained, shall, on coming to Scotland, be admitted to Church privileges, on the production of satisfactory certificates of their religious and moral character, from the minister and session of the congregation to which they have severally belonged.

And the Assembly earnestly recommend to all ministers and probationers of this Church, who remove to those Colonies in which such Presbyteries are constituted, to put themselves under the inspection of the Presbytery of the bounds within which they may reside ; and, in the event of their returning to this country, to produce testimonials from such Presbytery or Presbyteries of their character and conduct during their absence.

The General Assembly further named a standing committee to correspond with such Churches in the Colonies, for the purpose of giving advice on any question with regard to which they may choose to consult the Church of Scotland, and affording them such aid as it may be in the power of the committee to give in all matters affecting their rights and interests.

VI.

Sess. 10, May 25, 1833.—Declaratory Enactment as to Parliamentary Churches.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland did, and hereby do, enact and declare, That the whole districts in Scotland, now or to be hereafter provided with places of worship and ministers, in terms of the Acts 4th Geo. IV. c. 79, and 5th Geo. IV. c. 90, shall be, and are hereby, from and after this date, erected into separate parishes quoad sacra, and to that effect are hereby declared to be disjoined and separated from the parishes of which they at present constitute a part. And the General Assembly further enact and declare, that all ministers, already inducted or settled as ministers within the said districts, or who shall hereafter be inducted and settled in the same, shall be and are hereby authorised to exercise and enjoy, within their respective districts, the whole powers and privileges now competent to parish ministers of this Church, and that as fully and freely in every respect, and without molestation or interference, as if their respective districts had been ordinary parishes, and they had been regularly inducted as ministers thereof. Moreover, the General Assembly hereby declares, that the said ministers are and shall be constituent members of all Presbyteries, Synods, Church Courts, and Judicatories whatsoever, and shall enjoy every privilege, as fully and freely, and with equal powers, as parish ministers of this Church ; hereby enjoining and requiring all Presbyteries, Synods, Church Courts, and Judicatories, within whose bounds the said churches are or shall be situated, to receive and enrol the said ministers as members thereof, and put them, in all respects, on a footing of Presbyterian equality with the parish ministers of this Church, giving, granting, and committing to the said ministers the like powers and authority, and privileges, now pertaining by law to parochial ministers of this Church, within their respective bounds.

IX.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1833.—Acts relative to the Attendance of Students of Divinity on the Classes of Church History and Hebrew.

The General Assembly, with consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, hereby enact and ordain,

I. That every student of divinity shall, on application to be taken on trials before any Presbytery, produce a certificate or certificates of having regularly attended the class of Church History, during two of the sessions which he claims to be considered as sessions of regular attendance at the Divinity Hall, if such a class exist in the University or Universities at which he has prosecuted his theological studies.

II. That every student of divinity shall henceforth attend the Hebrew class, in one or other of the Universities during two of the sessions which he claims to be considered as sessions of regular attendance at the Divinity Hall; and that the certificate or certificates of such attendance shall in every case be required by Presbyteries before receiving students of divinity on trials: it being understood, that a senior and junior class are taught by every Professor of Hebrew at separate hours.

XII.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1833.—Report of the Committee appointed by the General Assembly for Classing Returns relative to Schools.

The Committee appointed to examine the Returns as to the Examination of Schools beg leave to report,

I. That returns have been received from thirty-two Presbyteries, bearing that the schools in all the parishes within their bounds have been examined during the past years, viz. :—

Aberlour,
Alford,
Annan,
Arbroath,
Auchterarder,
Biggar,

Brechin,
Burravoe,
Cupar,
Dalkeith,
Deer,
Dundee,

Ellon,
Fordoun,
Fordyce,
Forfar,
Garioch,
Inverness,

Kincardine-O'Neil,	Lewis,	Selkirk,
Kintyre,	Meigle,	St Andrews,
Kirkcudbright,	Mull,	Tongue,
Lanark,	North Isles,	Turriff.
Langholm,	Penpont,

II. That returns have been received from twenty-five Presbyteries, bearing that the schools, in a greater or less proportion, of the parishes in their bounds have been examined, viz. :—

Aberdeen,	Dunse,	Lander,
Ayr,	Edinburgh,	Lochcarron,
Chirnside,	Elgin,	Lochmaben,
Dornoch,	Haddington,	Peebles,
Dumfries,	Hamilton,	Perth,
Dumbarton,	Irvine,	Stranraer,
Dunbar,	Kelso,	Strathbogie,
Dunblane,	Kirkcaldy,	Uist.
Dunfermline,

And that in some of these returns, reasons are assigned for there being no reports as to some of the schools, which appear satisfactory to the committee.

III. That it appears that there are twenty-two Presbyteries who have sent no returns this year, and that of these, Kirkwall and Wigton have sent none for the last five years, and Cairston, Caithness, Chanonry, Dunkeld, Forres, Glasgow, Inverary, Stirling, and Tain, none for the last six. It seems, therefore, extremely desirable that measures should be adopted by the Assembly to obtain compliance with their instructions from all the Presbyteries of the Church, and especially from those which have of late habitually neglected them.

IV. That considerable irregularity still exists in the manner in which these reports are made up, which might in a great measure be obviated by the use of the schedules printed by order of the Assembly. These schedules have not been used in twenty-five of the returns this year transmitted, and of these, returns from Langholm and Turriff are simply marked on the back of the commission to their representatives, and that from Hamilton consists of lengthened separate reports from the various parishes; a mode which, if in any degree generally practised, would vastly increase the labours of the committee appointed to examine the annual returns, and which, besides, does not afford so clear a view of the state of education in the district. It may be added, that in no fewer than fourteen of the returns, either date or signature, or both, are wanting.

V. That great care and attention seem to have been bestowed on the preparation of many of these returns, of which those from Brechin, Cupar, Mull, St Andrews, Aberdeen, Ayr, Kirkcaldy, and the Tron Church and St Stephen's parishes in Edinburgh, may be particularly noticed; and that a gratifying indication is abundantly exhibited of the advantages that result from a faithful discharge of the duties of Presbyteries in examining the seminaries of education within their respective bounds. In many of the reports it is stated, that religious instruction is well attended to in the schools, and, particularly, that the Scriptures are daily read, the Church Catechisms regularly taught, and the schools opened with prayer; and while these circumstances are not adverted to in the other reports, the committee have, at the same time, no reason to believe that any Presbytery is unmindful of these most important points, in its inquiry into the manner in which the schools under its superintendence are conducted.

VI. In reference to the complaints which were in former years made by the Presbytery of Mull, regarding the conduct of some of the teachers employed in their bounds, by the Edinburgh Gaelic School Society, the committee are happy to observe, that the proceedings adopted by last Assembly have had the effect of removing, in a great degree, the grounds of complaint on the part of the Presbytery. At the same time, it is stated in the report, that two of the teachers, while they abstain from publicly exhorting as before, “still refuse to attend the stated ministration of ordinances,” and that the Society have “intimated, that they have no rule prescribing to their teachers an attendance on ordinances.”

VII. That in Irvine, in consequence of the school having been recently attached to a chartered academy, there is now no parochial school, a want which seems likely to be in some degree supplied in Cupar, by the munificent bequest of the late Dr Andrew Bell for the foundation of a school in that place. A copy of that part of Dr Bell’s will which contains the bequest has been transmitted, along with the report, from the Presbytery of Cupar. In Largs, Presbytery of Irvine, the parish school has been shut up, without any reason being assigned to the Presbytery, except that the scholars had disappeared.

VIII. That the only other circumstances mentioned in the returns, which it appears to the committee necessary to notice in their report, are, that in Glenshiel, Presbytery of Lochcarron, there is no school-house; that in Cupar Presbytery a teacher in the parish of Kettle declined to submit to the examination of the Presbytery; that in the Presbytery of Irvine, and parish of Kilbirnie, there are two teachers whose characters and conduct are described as in various respects objectionable; that in Nesting, Presbytery of Burrae, the station of the parochial school has been most injudiciously altered last year, so as to reduce the scholars from 68 to 19; and that in the Presbytery of North Isles, Lady Parish, and the united parishes of Cross, Burness, and North Ronaldshay, have only one central school supported by the heritors, instead of separate parochial schools, an arrangement manifestly defective, and at variance with the law, while the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, not very consistently with its rules, (but probably from a desire to supply a glaring defect,) has established a school in Lady Parish, and two in North Ronaldshay. In regard to some of these objectionable facts, it may, perhaps, only be necessary for the Assembly to recommend to the different Presbyteries, to exercise the prudence and zeal which have formerly, in similar circumstances, happily conduced to the great end of affording moral and religious instruction to the rising generation.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1833.—Act appointing the Diet of the next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is to be holden at Edinburgh, on Thursday, the 22d day of May 1834.

Collected and extracted from the Records of the General Assembly, by

Note 1.—The General Assembly of 1833 had under their consideration certain Overtures on the system of National Education in Ireland. The following appears in the Abridgment on this subject:—

“The General Assembly called for the Overtures on the system of National Education lately introduced in Ireland. The Overtures from the Synod of Aberdeen, the Presbytery of Haddington, the Synod of Moray, the Presbytery of Dingwall, and the Presbytery of Alford, were then read. The following motion was made and seconded:—That the General Assembly, being convinced that the only sure foundation of sound morality and useful knowledge is to be found in the revealed Word of God, are of opinion that no countenance from the government of this realm ought to be bestowed on any system of National Education, of which instruction in the Holy Scriptures does not form an essential part: That they have observed with much regret and disappointment, that a system of National Education is still maintained in Ireland, in which no adequate provision is made for the daily reading of the entire Word of God, in the authorised version, without note or comment; and that they feel it incumbent upon them, as representing a branch of the Protestant Church, to petition Parliament against any further countenance being given to such a system. Another motion was made and seconded, That as the petitions of the last General Assembly expressed the decided and unanimous opinion of the Church of Scotland, that any scheme for the education of the people of Ireland ought to secure the daily use of the Scriptures in the authorised Protestant version, without note or comment, as part of the regular instruction of the scholars in a daily Bible class, for all Protestant children, and all others desirous to avail themselves of that privilege, in order that they may thus become acquainted with the whole truths and doctrines of our holy religion, the General Assembly, retaining the same opinion, and earnestly and fervently trusting that full effect will be given to it by the Legislature, do not, however, feel themselves called upon at present again to petition Parliament on the subject. It was agreed that the state of the vote should be, First or Second Motion; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried First Motion, by a majority of 162 to 59. The General Assembly accordingly appointed a committee to prepare a petition to both Houses of Parliament, and to report."—Ed. 1843.

Note 2.—Overtures on the Settlement of Parishes were also this year discussed.—“The General Assembly called for the Overtures relating to the Settlement of Parishes, including the Overtures on Calls and the Overtures on Patronage. The Overture from the Synod of Moray anent the Settlement of Ministers in Vacant Parishes, and several other Overtures, having been read, the General Assembly proceeded to the consideration of the Overtures on Calls. It was moved and seconded, That the General Assembly, having maturely weighed and considered the various Overtures now before them, do find and declare, that it is, and has been ever since the Reformation, a fixed principle in the law of this Church, that no minister shall be intruded into any pastoral charge contrary to the will of the congregation; and considering that doubts and misapprehensions have existed on this important subject, whereby the just and salutary operation of the said principle has been impeded, and in many cases defeated, the General Assembly further declare it to be their opinion, that the dissent of a majority of the male heads of families resident within the parish, being members of the congregation, and in communion with the Church at least two years previous to the day of moderation, whether such dissent shall be expressed with or without the assignment of reasons, ought to be of conclusive effect in setting aside the presentee, (under the patron's nomination,) save and except where it is clearly established by the patron, presentee, or any of the minority, that the said dissent is founded in corrupt and malicious combination, or not truly founded on any objection personal to the presentee, in regard to his ministerial gifts or qualifications, either in general, or with reference to that particular parish; and in order that this declaration may be carried into full effect, that a committee shall be appointed to prepare the best measure for carrying it into effect accordingly, and to report to the next General Assembly. Another motion was made and seconded, That the General Assembly declare, that in all cases in which a person is presented to a vacant parish, it is, by the law of the Church, sanctioned by the law of the land, competent for the heads of families in full and regular communion with the Church to give in to the Presbytery within the bounds of which the vacant parish lies, objections of whatever nature against the presentee, or against the settlement taking place; that the Presbytery shall deliberately consider these objections; that if they find them unfounded, or originating from causeless prejudices, they shall proceed to the settlement; but if they find that they are well founded, that they reject the presentation, the presentee being unqualified to receive it; it being competent to the parties to appeal from the sentence if they see cause. The Assembly further appoint a committee to prepare regulations, in conformity to this deliverance, for the guidance of Presbyteries in the settlement of parishes, and report to the next General Assembly. After long reasoning, the motions were put to the vote, and it was agreed that the state of the vote should be, First or Second Motion; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried Second Motion, by a majority of 149 to 137. Therefore, the General Assembly declare and find in terms of the Second Motion. From this judgment Mr Samuel Martin dissented in his own name, and in name of all who should adhere to him.”—Ed. 1843.

Note 3.—A discussion also took place on Patronage. The following is the notice of it:—

“The General Assembly called for the Overtures on Patronage, which were read, and several members heard on the subject. It was moved and seconded, That the General Assembly do now empower and direct the Commission to make due application to the King and Parliament for redress of the grievance of Patronage, in case a favourable opportunity for so doing shall occur during the subsistence of the present Commission. Another motion was made and seconded, That it is the opinion of this Assembly, that after the proceedings which have already taken place in regard to the question of Calls, it is unnecessary and inexpedient to adopt at present any further proceeding in reference to Patronage. And the vote being called for, it was agreed that the state of the vote shall be, First or Second Motion; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried Second Motion, by a majority of 134 to 33. And, therefore, the General Assembly find in terms of the Second Motion. From this judgment the following members entered their dissent:—Mr Alexander Clark, James Bridges, Esq., Dr Welsh, Mr Macnaughton, W. Howison Crawford, Esq., Mr W. Ross Taylor, W. F. Hunter Lawrie, Esq., and A. Johnston, Esq.”—Ed. 1843.

IV.

Sess. 5, May 26, 1834.—The General Assembly's Address of Thanks to the King.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's faithful and dutiful subjects, the ministers and elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to approach your Majesty with the renewed assurance of our steady and unaltered attachment to your person and government.

While, as Scotsmen, we feel gratified in viewing the ancient abode of your Majesty's royal predecessors adorned and enlivened by the temporary residence of your representative, we desire, as members of the Church of Scotland, to recognise in this arrangement a new proof of your Majesty's considerate regard for the honour of our National Establishment, and an additional pledge of your adherence to that sacred compact which unites the Church to the State.

We entreat permission to acknowledge most gratefully the readiness with which your Majesty's Commissioner, acting, as we are well assured, by your Royal instructions, has complied with the wishes of the Church and people of Scotland, in removing all pretence for abusing his Grace's presence amongst us, as an excuse for the neglect or violation of the duties of the Sabbath; and we regard this compliance as affording a confirmation of our confidence in your Majesty's solicitude for the best interests of our ecclesiastical institutions, and a fresh testimony of the judgment displayed in selecting a nobleman who is a member and elder of our National Church, and who is so well entitled to our esteem and gratitude, to represent your person in this Assembly.

That the Providence of Almighty God may grant your Majesty long to reign in the hearts of a free, loyal, and affectionate people, is the prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Church of Scotland met in General Assembly.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1834.—The General Assembly's Address to the King on the Abolition of Slavery.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to embrace the opportunity which our meeting in the General Assembly affords us of approaching your Majesty's throne, for the purpose of expressing the lively satisfaction with which we have observed that an act has recently been passed by the legislature, in consequence of which the system of slavery, so long contemplated by ourselves and our brethren with feelings of regret and anxiety, will, before the termination of the present year, stand abolished for ever throughout the British dominions. We humbly beg to congratulate your Majesty on this event, as one which cannot fail to bestow eminent distinction on your Majesty's reign, and to afford so great facilities for the spread of the Gospel throughout your Majesty's colonies. That, by the blessing of God resting on your Majesty's efforts for giving effect to the act referred to, these efforts may be crowned with an abundant measure of success, is the fervent prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders met in the General Assembly of the National Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and by our appointment,

*Sess. 10, May 31, 1834.—Declaratory Enactment as to Chapels of Ease.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, without a vote, approve of the report of their committee, and did, and hereby do, enact and declare, that all ministers already inducted and settled, or who shall hereafter be inducted and settled, as ministers of Chapels of Ease, presently erected and established, or which shall be hereafter erected and established, in terms of the act anent Chapels of Ease, of 1798, or prior thereto, by authority of the General Assembly, or by the Presbyteries of the bounds, are, and shall be, constituent members of the Presbyteries and Synods within whose bounds the said chapels are, or shall be respectively situated, and eligible to sit in the General Assembly; and shall enjoy every privilege as fully and freely, and with equal powers, with parish ministers of this Church; hereby enjoining and requiring all Presbyteries, Synods, Church Courts, and Judicatories, within whose bounds the said chapels are or shall be situated, to receive and enrol the said ministers as members thereof, and put them in all respects on a footing of Presbyterian equality with the parish ministers of this Church; giving, granting, and committing, to the said ministers the like powers and authority and privileges now pertaining to ministers of this Church, within their

* The following is the notice given in the Abridgment of the Assembly Proceedings, respecting the discussion on the Overtures relative to Chapels of Ease:—

“The General Assembly called for the Overtures relating to Chapels of Ease, with the Petitions on that subject, and the Reference from the Presbytery of Edinburgh, relating to the Chapels in the parish of St Cuthbert. Mr Clason, Mr Gray, and Mr Brown, were heard in support of the views of the several petitioners. It was moved and seconded, That the General Assembly, having maturely considered the Report of the Committee of last Assembly on the subject of Chapels of Ease, and the Overtures and Petitions on the same subject, approve of the principles and recommendation of this Report, and appoint a Committee to prepare a Declaratory Enactment, to give effect to those principles and recommendation, and to report to a future diet of this Assembly. Another motion was made and seconded, That the General Assembly, having considered the various Overtures relative to Chapels of Ease, and also the Report of the Committee of last Assembly in respect thereto, highly approve the purpose of these Overtures and of that Report; and, with a view of most effectually and permanently securing it, appoint a Committee to correspond with Government, or with the Officers of the Crown, for obtaining a legislative enactment, through which, with the consent of all parties interested, parishes may be divided, or the districts now attached to Chapels of Ease quoad spiritualia, may be assigned to them as parishes, when the Church is satisfied that this is proper or necessary for the instruction of the people. The General Assembly further instruct the Committee to take the measures which to them may seem best calculated to procure permanent endowments to such Chapels as it may be deemed expedient to erect into Parish Churches, and to make all arrangements relative to carrying the scheme into effect; and, in the mean time, the General Assembly instruct Presbyteries to report to next Assembly, whether, in their estimation, such a change as to Chapels of Ease should take place, and the present law with regard to them be, upon the adoption of the new system, rescinded. The vote having been called for, it was agreed that the state of the vote should be First or Second Motion; and the roll having been called, and votes marked, it carried First Motion, by 153 to 103; and, therefore, the General Assembly find in terms of the First Motion. From which resolution Dr Mearns dissented, and thereto adhered 33 other members, and took instruments. A Committee appointed to prepare a Declaratory Enactment in terms of the resolution. respective bounds: And, further, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, remit to the Presbyteries within whose bounds the said chapels now established are situated, to allot and assign to each of the said chapels a territorial district, and to erect such districts into separate parishes quoad sacra, and to disjoin the same quoad sacra from the parishes whereof they at present form parts; and also to take the necessary measures for selecting and ordaining, according to the rules of the Church, for each of the said districts so to be erected, a body of elders, who, with the said ministers respectively, may exercise sessional jurisdiction within the same: And the Assembly instruct Presbyteries to be cautious not to assign a more populous district than it seems possible to attend to; provided always, that it shall be understood that the chapels to be erected into parishes shall first have been constituted according to the laws of this Church, for which purpose it will be open to chapels to apply, if not so constituted already.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1834.—Standing Orders appointed by the General Assembly to be observed in future.

1. That all papers, whether forming part of the record, or produced in evidence in any of the Inferior Courts, shall, at the time when they are lodged, be dated and numbered by the clerk of such court, and marked with his initials; and no paper not so authenticated shall be received in the Courts of Review unless upon special cause shown.

2. That, in future, all overtures transmitted through the committee, and all petitions or other applications to the Assembly, transmitted through the Committee of Bills, shall be printed and laid on the Assembly's table, in sufficient numbers for the use of members, on or before the first Monday of its sitting; excepting in the case of matters which may come to the knowledge of the Assembly during its sitting; in which case the overtures, petitions, &c., shall be printed and laid on the table at least one day before they are discussed.

3. That the libel and defences,—or when the case commences without a libel,—the petition or other initiatory step, and the answers thereto, with the sentences of the Inferior Courts, shall be considered as the record.

4. That in all references, complaints, and appeals, under the exception mentioned in Article 8th, the same, together with the evidence adduced, shall be printed in sufficient numbers to afford a copy to every member of Assembly; which copies shall be laid on the table of the Assembly in sufficient time to admit of the cause being taken up on one of the days during its sitting, otherwise the appeal or other application shall be held to have been fallen from.

5. That when the appeal, complaint, or reference, is made merely on a point of law or relevancy, it shall only be necessary to print such parts of the evidence, if any, as the party may think requisite for the determination of such point of law or relevancy; but in such cases the papers shall be printed in such time as to enable the respondent to print any other parts of the evidence which he may deem material for the right understanding of the case.

6. That reasons of dissent or appeal, and the answers thereto, when made, as well as all other papers not included in the record, shall be produced to the Assembly as heretofore, but shall not be held as included in the regulation as to printing.

7. That, in causes, the expense of printing shall be borne by the appellant, when there is one. When the Inferior Court shall refer a cause to the Assembly, without pronouncing judgment, the expense shall be borne by the parties mutually, under the certification that the party refusing to pay his share thereof, before the time appointed for laying the same on the table, shall be considered as having deserted the cause, and shall not be entitled to be heard.

8. That when there is no appeal or reference, it shall be optional to individual members of Inferior Courts, who may find it their duty to bring the proceedings of these Courts under the review of the Assembly by complaint, either to comply with the regulations as to printing, or to furnish a complete written copy of the whole papers and proceedings to the Clerk of the Assembly.

9. That in all other cases, such as petitions, &c., the expence shall be borne by the party bringing the matter under the notice of the Assembly.

10. That causes arising out of trials for licence or ordination, and matters relating to Church ordinances; as also references on matters which do not affect the interests of the parties in the cause, shall be excepted from this rule, excepting when the parties may think proper to print of their own accord.

11. That a copy of every printed paper shall be kept by the Clerk of Assembly, to be bound up and kept in the Records of Assembly, with a copy of the judgment annexed.

*Sess. 10, May 31, 1834.—Overtures and Interim Acts on the Calling of Ministers.

I. OVERTURE AND INTERIM ACT ON CALLS.

The General Assembly declare, that it is a fundamental law of this Church, that no pastor shall be intruded on any congregation contrary to the will of the people; and, in order that this principle may be carried into full effect, the General Assembly, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, do declare, enact, and ordain, that it shall be an instruction to Presbyteries, that if, at the moderating in a call to a vacant pastoral charge, the major part of the male heads of families, members of the vacant congregation, and in full communion with the Church, shall disapprove of the person in whose favour the call is proposed to be moderated in, such disapproval shall be deemed sufficient ground for the Presbytery rejecting such

* The following is the notice given in the Abridgment of the discussion on the Overtures relative to this subject:—

“The General Assembly called for the Overtures relating to the Calling of Ministers. The Overtures from the Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, from the Synod of Aberdeen, and the Presbytery of Inverness, were read. After reasoning, the following motion was made and seconded, That the General Assembly, having maturely considered the Overtures, do declare, that it is a fundamental law of the Church, that no pastor shall be intruded on any congregation contrary to the will of the people; and that, in order to carry this principle into full effect, the Presbyteries of this Church shall be instructed, that if, at the moderating in a call to a vacant pastoral charge, the major part of the male heads of families, members of the vacant congregation, and in full communion with the Church, shall disapprove of the person in whose favour the call is proposed to be moderated in, such disapproval shall be deemed sufficient ground for the Presbytery rejecting such person, and that he shall be rejected accordingly, and due notice thereof forthwith given to all concerned; but that if the major part of the heads of families shall not disapprove of such person to be their pastor, the Presbytery shall proceed with the settlement according to the rules of the Church: And farther declare, that no person shall be held to be entitled to disapprove as aforesaid, who shall refuse, if required, solemnly to declare, in presence of the Presbytery, that he is actuated by no factious or malicious motive, but solely by a conscientious regard to the spiritual interest of himself or the congregation; and resolve, that a committee be appointed to report to a future diet of this Assembly in which manner, and by what particular measures, this declaration and instruction may be best carried into full operation. It was also moved and seconded, That the General Assembly adhere to the Declaratory Law of last Assembly, approve of the report of the committee of last Assembly for preparing regulations, and direct Presbyteries to proceed in terms thereof. The vote being called for, it was agreed that the state of the vote should be First or Second Motion; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried First Motion, by 184 to 139. And, therefore, the General Assembly declare in terms of the First Motion. Against this resolution Dr Mearns dissented, and to his dissent 105 other members gave in their adherence, subscribed by their names.’—Ed. 1843.

person, and that he shall be rejected accordingly, and due notice thereof forthwith given to all concerned; but that, if the major part of the said heads of families shall not disapprove of such person to be their pastor, the Presbytery shall proceed with the settlement according to the rules of the Church: And farther declare, that no person shall be held to be entitled to disapprove as aforesaid, who shall refuse, if required, solemnly to declare, in presence of the Presbytery, that he is actuated by no factious or malicious motive, but solely by a conscientious regard to the spiritual interests of himself or the congregation.

The General Assembly agree to transmit the above Overture to Presbyteries for their opinion, and, without a vote, convert the same into an Interim Act.

II. OVERTURE, WITH REGULATIONS FOR CARRYING THE ABOVE ACT INTO EFFECT.

Edinburgh, June 2, 1834.

Whereas the General Assembly have declared, enacted, and ordained, in terms of their Act, passed in the sederunt of 31st May ult., on the subject of the moderating in of calls; and whereas it is necessary, for the better regulating the forms of proceeding under that Act, that some precise and definite rules should be laid down, the General Assembly do, therefore, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, declare, enact, and ordain, that the following directions and regulations shall be observed:—

1. That when any Presbytery shall have so far sustained a presentation to a parish, as to be prepared to appoint a day for moderating in a call to the person presented, they shall appoint one of their own number to preach in the church of the parish on a day not later than the second Sunday thereafter; that he shall, on that day, intimate from the pulpit that the person presented will preach in that church on the first convenient Sunday, so as it be not later than the third Sunday after such intimation; and that he shall, at the same time, intimate that on another day, to be fixed, not less than eight, nor more than ten, days after that appointed for the presentee to preach, the Presbytery will proceed, within the said church, to moderate in a call to such person to be minister of the said parish in the usual way; but that the Presbytery, if they deem it expedient, may appoint the presentee to preach oftener than once, provided that the day for moderating in the call be not more than six weeks after that on which the presentation has been sustained.

2. That, on the day appointed for moderating in the call, the Presbytery shall, in the first instance, proceed in the same manner in which they are in use at present to proceed.

3. That if no special objections, and no dissents, by a major part of the male heads of families, being members of the congregation, and in full communion with the Church, according to a list or roll to be made up and regulated in manner hereinafter directed, shall be given in, the Presbytery shall proceed to the trials and settlement of the presentee, according to the rules of the Church.

4. That it shall be competent to any one or more of the heads of families in the parish, in full communion with the Church, by themselves, or by an agent duly authorised, to state any special objections to the settlement of the person presented, of whatever nature such objections may be; and that, if the objections appear to be deserving of deliberate consideration or investigation, the Presbytery shall delay the farther proceedings in the settlement till another meeting, to be then appointed, and give notice to all parties concerned then to attend, that they may be heard.

5. That if the special objections so stated affect the moral character or the doctrine of the presentee, so that, if they were established, he would be deprived of his licence, or of his situation in the Church, the objectors shall proceed by libel, and the Presbytery shall take the steps usual in such cases.

6. That if the special objections relate to the insufficiency or unfitness of the presentee for the particular charge to which he has been appointed, the objectors shall not be required to become libellers, but shall simply deliver, in writing, their specific grounds for objecting to the settlement, and shall have full liberty to substantiate the same; upon all which the presentee shall have an opportunity to be fully heard, and shall have all competent means of defence. That the Presbytery shall then consider these special objections, and if it shall appear that they are not sufficient, or not well-founded, they shall proceed to the settlement of the presentee, according to the rules of the Church. But if the Presbytery shall be satisfied that the objector or objectors have established that the presentee is not fitted usefully and sufficiently to discharge the pastoral duties in that parish, then they shall find that he is not qualified, and shall intimate the same to the patron, that he may forthwith present another person; it being always in the power of the different parties to appeal from the sentence pronounced by the Presbytery, if they shall see cause.

7. That if it shall happen, that, at the meeting for moderating in the call, dissents are tendered by any of the male heads of families, being members of the congregation, and in full communion with the Church, their names standing on the roll above referred to, without the assignment of any special objections, such dissents shall either be personally delivered in writing by the person dissenting, or taken down from his oral statement by the moderator or clerk of the Presbytery.

8. That if the dissents so lodged do not amount in number to the major part of the persons standing on the roll, and if there be no special objections remaining to be considered, the Presbytery shall proceed to the trials and settlement, according to the rules of the Church.

9. That if it shall appear that dissents have been lodged by an apparent majority of the persons on the said roll, the Presbytery shall adjourn the proceedings to another meeting, to be held not less than ten days, nor more than fourteen days thereafter.

10. That if the Presbytery deem it expedient, and the person presented be willing, or if he shall desire so to do, the Presbytery shall appoint him to preach to the congregation in the interval.

11. That it shall not be competent to receive any dissents without cause assigned, except such as shall be duly given in at the meeting for moderating in the call, as above provided; but it shall be competent to any person, who may have lodged a dissent at that meeting, to withdraw such dissent at any time before the Presbytery shall have given judgment on the effect of the dissents.

12. That in case the Presbytery shall, at the second meeting appointed, find that the major part of the persons entitled to dissent do not adhere to their dissents, or that there is not truly a majority of such persons on the roll dissenting, they shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement.

13. That in case the Presbytery shall, at that meeting, find that there is a majority of the persons on the roll still dissenting, it shall be competent to the patron or the presentee, or to any member of the Presbytery, to require all or any of the persons so dissenting to appear before the Presbytery, or a committee of their number, at a meeting to be appointed to take place within ten days at farthest, at some place within the parish, and there and then to declare in terms of the resolution of the General Assembly; and if any such person shall fail to appear after notice shall have been duly given to him, or shall refuse to declare in the terms required, the name of such person shall be struck off the list of persons dissenting, and the Presbytery shall determine whether there is still a major part dissenting or not, and proceed accordingly.

14. That if the Presbytery shall find that there is at last a major part of the persons on the roll dissenting, they shall reject the person presented, so far as regards the particular presentation, and the occasion of that vacancy in the parish; and shall forthwith direct notice of this their determination to be given to the patron, the presentee, and the elders of the parish.

15. That if the patron shall give a presentation to another person within the time limited by law, the proceedings shall again take place in the same manner as above laid down, and so on, in regard to successive presentations within the time.

16. That if no presentation shall be given within the limited time to a person from whose settlement a majority on the roll do not dissent, the Presbytery shall then present jure devoluto.

17. That cases of presentation by the Presbytery jure devoluto, shall not fall under the operation of the regulations in this and the relative Act of Assembly, but shall be proceeded in according to the general laws of the Church applicable to such cases.

But every person who shall have been previously rejected, shall be considered as disqualified to be presented to that parish on the occasion of that vacancy.

18. That in order to ascertain definitely the persons entitled, at any particular time, to give in dissents, every kirk-session of the Church shall be required, within two months after the rising of the present Assembly, to make out a list or roll of the male heads of families, who are, at the date thereof, members of the congregation, and also regular communicants, either in that parish, or some other parish of the Church; of which, in the latter case, proper evidence shall be produced to the kirk-session.

19. That the roll so made up shall be inserted in the kirk-session record, and shall be transmitted to the Presbytery; and after being inspected by the Presbytery, and countersigned on each page by the moderator, shall be returned to the kirk-session, and form part of its records for the foresaid purposes.

20. That the said roll shall be revised and re-adjusted immediately after the occasion of dispensing the Sacrament in the parish which shall have last preceded the 22d of November in each year, and shall be re-transmitted to the Presbytery within the first week of December.

21. That the said list or roll, as last revised immediately before the vacancy in the parish, shall be the only roll for determining the persons entitled to be reckoned in any dissents to be offered in the manner above set forth, against the admission of any presentee to be minister, in the moderating in a call, provided that it shall not be made to appear that they, or any of them, have ceased to be members of the congregation.

22. That the Presbyteries of the Church shall use their utmost endeavours to bring about harmony and unanimity in congregations, and be at pains to avoid every thing which may excite or encourage unreasonable exceptions in people against a worthy person that may be proposed to be their minister.

The General Assembly agree to transmit the above Overture and Regulations to Presbyteries for their opinion; and, in the mean time, without a vote, they convert the same into an Interim Act.

The General Assembly farther declare, that cases in which the vacancies have taken place before the rising of the present Assembly, shall not fall under the operation of the regulations in this and the relative Act of Assembly, but shall be proceeded in according to the general laws of the Church.

XIII.

Sess. 10, May 31, 1834.—Report of the Committee appointed by the General Assembly for Classing Returns relative to Schools:

The Committee appointed to examine the Returns as to the Examination of Schools beg leave to report to the Venerable Assembly,—

I. That returns have been received from forty Presbyteries, bearing that the schools in all the parishes within their bounds have been examined during the past year, viz. :—

Abertarff,
Abernethy, Aberlour,
Alford,
Auchterarder,
Ayr, Breachin,
Chirnside,
Cupar,

Dalkeith,
Deer,
Dumbarton,
Dunfermline,
Dunblane,
Dunbar,
Dundee,
Dunoon,
Dunse,

Ellon,
Fordyce,
Forres,
Irvine,
Inverary,
Kelso,
Kincardine-O'Neil,
Kirkeudbright,
Kirkcaldy,

Lanark, Lauder,
Lewis,
Linlithgow,
Lorn,

Mull,
North Isles,
Paisley,
Stirling,

Stranraer,
Strathbogie,
St Andrews,
Tain.

II. That returns, more or less regular and complete, have been received from twenty-five Presbyteries of the Church, viz. :—

Aberdeen,
Annan,
Biggar,
Burravoe,
Caithness,
Dornoch,
Dumfries,
Dunkeld,
Edinburgh,

Elgin,
Fordoun,
Garioch,
Haddington, Hamilton,
Jedburgh,
Lochcarron,
Lochmaben,

Kirkwall,
Meikle,
Nairn, -
Peebles,
Penpont,
Pertb,
Selkirk,
Uist.

The returns from Edinburgh are peculiarly defective, including only the parishes of New Greyfriars, Tron Church, and St Stephen's.

III. That the other Presbyteries have sent no returns of any kind this year, and that of these, Wigton has sent none for these last six years; and Cairston, Chanonry, and Glasgow, none for seven years. It is, therefore, the opinion of your committee, that a more general compliance with the instructions of the Assembly should be enforced upon all the Presbyteries of the Church; but especially upon those who, notwithstanding the reiterated animadversions of former committees, still continue to neglect to send up reports.

IV. That to remedy the irregularity which exists in the manner of making up the reports, and which tends to increase greatly the labours of your committee annually appointed to class the Returns of the Examination of Schools, your committee now submit that the printed schedules should be transmitted and uniformly used, and that when regularly filled up, they should be dated and duly attested by the Clerk of Court.

V. That a very laudable attention has been bestowed upon the preparation of these returns by several Presbyteries in the Church, but particularly those of Dundee, Paisley, Selkirk, Stirling, and St Andrews.

VI. That there is appended to the report from the Presbytery of Stirling a very important suggestion for the consideration of the Assembly, as to the use of such books in schools as tend to promote the moral and religious instruction of the rising generation, and to the securing uniformity in this respect throughout the Church. Your committee perceive with regret, that in two of the burgh schools of Stirling the teachers have peremptorily refused to allow their schools to be examined, on the pretence that burgh schools are not subject to the jurisdiction of the Presbytery. On a similar pretence some Presbyteries have been refused access to schools taught by Dissenters.

VII. That the Abbey Parish of Paisley, which is a landward parish, and contains a population of upwards of 31,000 souls, has neither a parochial nor an endowed school, and that there is not a thirteenth part of its population now in the enjoyment of the means of education; and, further, that it is evident from the remarks annexed to the Presbytery's report, that, while they approve generally of the schools existing within their bounds, they deplore the want of parochial schools in this densely peopled district of the country.

VIII. That the parish school of Largs, in the Presbytery of Irvine, is at present totally lost to the community, there being but one scholar in attendance throughout the year; but your committee have to observe, with satisfaction, that measures have been taken by the Presbytery in order to remedy this defect.

IX. That there appears to be no return as to any school in the parish of Barra, in the Presbytery of Uist, where there is a population of 3000 souls. From the parish of Harris, in the same Presbytery, there is no return.

X. That a great number of the teachers of the schools in the Church (fully one half) are stated in the reports as not having qualified to government.

XI. That it is highly gratifying to your committee to observe, that in the schools, generally, the Holy Scriptures are regularly read, the Catechisms of our Church used, and, in many instances, the schools are opened and closed with prayer.

In conclusion, your committee are happy to observe the increased attention of the several Presbyteries of the Church to the state and condition of the schools within their bounds, which is so eminently calculated to encourage and stimulate the exertions of the teachers in the discharge of their important office, and thus to raise the moral and religious character of our country's population.

Note.—A Committee on Church Accommodation or Extension had existed for several years prior to 1834; but it was now only that the Committee was placed on a permanent footing, and its object adopted as one of the Schemes of the Church. The following notice respecting this appears in the Abridgment of the Proceedings of 1834:—

“The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on Church Accommodation, which was given in and read by Dr Brunton, the Convener. It was moved, seconded, and agreed to, that the Assembly approve of the Report of the Committee on Church Accommodation, and resolve, in terms of the recommendation embodied in that Report, that a permanent Committee be formed, on the model of the Committee for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts; and that the Assembly enjoin all ministers of Parishes, and all ministers of Chapels of Ease throughout the Church, to recommend the subject from the pulpit, and take measures for collecting at the church doors, and furthering subscriptions for carrying the wishes of the Assembly into effect, and instruct the Committee to act on this injunction, to ascertain precisely, by communicating with the different Presbyteries, the state of Church Accommodation throughout the country, and to mature a plan for the most beneficial distribution of the funds which may be so collected, to be reported to next General Assembly. The General Assembly re-appoint the Committee, with additional members. The Assembly returned thanks to the Convener, and through him to the Committee, and at his request, appointed Dr Chalmers to be Convener.”—Ed. 1843.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's faithful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, beg leave to approach your Majesty with the renewed assurance of our attachment to your person and government.

The rapid increase of population, especially in the manufacturing and commercial districts of Scotland, having rendered essentially necessary the increase of the means of religious instruction and parochial superintendence, we have observed, with the most lively gratitude, that this very important subject has engaged your Majesty's paternal regard, and that, in the speech from the throne, at the opening of the present Parliament, your Majesty has commended it to the attention of the House of Commons.

We beg leave to express to your Majesty our deep-felt conviction of the urgent necessity of adopting some efficient measure for extending the means of spiritual improvement, and our earnest desire and hope that your Majesty's government may continue to have this subject under their serious consideration, and may devise such plans as shall, under the Divine blessing, issue in the religious and moral improvement of the people under our care.

That your Majesty's paternal desire to afford to your subjects more extended access to the ordinances of Divine worship may be speedily realized, and that you may be blessed abundantly with all spiritual and heavenly blessings, is the earnest desire of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most dutiful, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and by our appointment.

WILLIAM AIRD THOMSON, Moderator.

Sess. 7, May 27, 1835.—Act and Order as to Synod Books.

The General Assembly, on calling for the different Synod Books of this Church, find that many Synods are not in the practice of sending up their books to the Assembly, as, by many former Acts, they are required to do. The General Assembly hereby do enact and ordain, that Synods shall in future be careful to cause their books to be regularly transmitted to every Assembly.

Sess. 10, May 30, 1835.—Act in favour of the India Missions.

The General Assembly did, and hereby do, nominate and appoint the Committee for the Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Managing his Majesty's Royal Bounty, to be a committee of this Assembly for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts, and for managing the funds subscribed and given for that purpose, with the whole powers conferred by former Acts of Assembly, and with power also to appoint a sub-committee of their number, consisting of nine, for more effectually furthering the great end in view;—of the general committee, fourteen are hereby declared to be a quorum, whereof nine are to be ministers; and of the sub-committee to be appointed, five are hereby declared to be a quorum. That the committee shall hold stated monthly meetings for dispatch of business, in the Trustees' Hall, on the first Tuesday of every month, at three o'clock, with power always to adjourn, as shall be needful; and to meet on all occasions when urgent business shall demand. And the said general committee are hereby enjoined and required, through their sub-committee, to attend to the instructions and regulations formerly approved by the General Assembly for the propagation of the Gospel abroad; with power to make and carry into effect such further regulations as to them may seem most beneficial, such further regulations to be submitted to next Assembly. And the said general committee are hereby appointed to report their diligence, and that of their sub-committee, in calling forth the benevolence and support of the Christian public of Scotland,—their prudence in the expenditure of the funds obtained;—and, generally, their management, and the success of their operations in foreign parts. Farther, the General Assembly recommend to the favourable consideration of the committee the subject of the Memorial from the Missionaries at Bombay, leaving to the committee the time and manner of extending their countenance and pecuniary support to that object, and warmly recommend their efforts to the prayers and pecuniary assistance of the people of Scotland.

*Sess. 9, May 29, 1835.—Act on the Calling of Ministers.

The General Assembly declare, That it is a fundamental law of this Church, that no pastor shall be intruded on any congregation contrary to the will of the people;

* The following appears in the Abridgment regarding this Act:—

“ The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee for classing Returns to Overtures, in so far as they relate to Calls, which having been read on Wednesday, and having been printed and circulated among the members, was now taken into consideration without being again read. After reasoning, it was moved and seconded, That the General Assembly, having considered the Report of their Committee for classing the Returns to Overtures, find that a majority of Presbyteries have given their consent to the ‘ Overture on Calls,’ transmitted by the last Assembly; and, therefore, the Assembly did, and hereby do, enact and ordain, that the said Overture shall be held and acted upon in all time coming as a Standing Law of this Church: And the General Assembly farther find, That the ‘ Overture, with regulations for carrying the above Act into effect,’ also transmitted by last Assembly, has not received the

and, in order that this principle may be carried into full effect, the General Assembly, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, do declare, enact, and ordain, That it shall be an instruction to Presbyteries, that if, at the moderating in a call to a vacant pastoral charge, the major part of the male heads of families, members of the vacant congregation, and in full communion with the Church, shall disapprove of the person in whose favour the call is proposed to be moderated in, such disapproval shall be deemed sufficient ground for the Presbytery rejecting such person, and that he shall be rejected accordingly, and due notice thereof forthwith given to all concerned; but that, if the major part of the said heads of families shall not disapprove of such person to be their pastor, the Presbytery shall proceed with the settlement according to the rules of the Church: And farther declare, that no person shall be held to be entitled to disapprove as aforesaid, who shall refuse, if required, solemnly to declare, in presence of the Presbytery, that he is actuated by no factious or malicious motive, but solely by a conscientious regard to the spiritual interests of himself or the congregation.

*Sess. ult., June 1, 1835.—Overture and Interim Act, with Regulations for carrying into effect the Act of Assembly on the Calling of Ministers.

Whereas the General Assembly have declared, enacted, and ordained, in terms of their Act, passed into a law of the Church on the 29th May 1835, on the subject consent of a majority of Presbyteries, but that various important suggestions on the subject of it have been sent up by Presbyteries who do not approve thereof as it stands; and the Assembly do, therefore, remit to a committee to consider the said Act, with regulations, and the returns thereon, and to report on Monday, in order that the said Act, or an amended Act for the same end and effect, may, if approved of, be again transmitted and passed as an Interim Act. Another motion was made and seconded, That the General Assembly, being satisfied that this Overture is, in its declaratory statement of the law, ambiguous and liable to be misinterpreted; that it contains a provision limiting improperly the privileges of members of congregations, and virtually setting aside the authority of the Church in judging of the qualifications of ministers; and that no means have been devised by which it can be carried into practical operation, did, and hereby do, find, that though approved of by a majority of Presbyteries, it ought not to be converted into a Standing Law of this Church; but being desirous to employ all the means in their power for promoting the comfortable settlement of parishes, giving due weight to the wishes of congregations, and maintaining the lawful authority of the Ecclesiastical Courts, appoint a committee to prepare the draft of a measure founded on those principles, and to report the same to a future diet of this Assembly. The vote being called for, it was agreed that the state of the vote should be First or Second Motion; and the roll being called and votes marked, it carried First Motion, by a majority of 178 to 124. Against which judgment Principal Macfarlan and several other members entered their dissent. A committee was then appointed in terms of the said judgment; to whose consideration were referred all the Overtures on the regulations as to Calls.—Ed. 1843.

* The following is the notice in the Abridgment respecting the transmission of this Overture:—

“The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee for revising and amending the regulations for carrying into effect the Act on Calls, which was given in by Lord Moncreiff, the convener. Various amendments were moved, but not insisted on; and, particularly, it was moved and seconded, That persons proved to have combined for the purpose of obtaining the appointment of a particular candidate shall be considered as actuated by factious motives, and shall not be permitted to make the declaration prescribed in the general Overture; and if that declaration be required by the Presbytery, or by any of the parties in the case, shall have their names struck off from the list of dissents. This motion was negatived without a division. It was also moved and seconded, That the 14th Article stand thus, That in case the Presbytery shall, at the second meeting appointed, find that there is not truly a majority of such persons on the roll dissenting, they shall proceed to the settlement according to the rules of the Church. It was agreed that the state of the vote should be Motion or Not; and the roll being called, and votes marked, it carried Not, by a majority of 96 to 82. It was moved and seconded, That if it be proved that any canvassing take place in favour of a presentee, or influence be used with the parishioners to give a call, or be used to prevent their dissenting; in any of these cases the presentee shall be held to be disqualified, and the presentation shall not be sustained by the Presbytery. This motion was negatived without a division. It was then moved and agreed to without a vote, That the regulations shall be transmitted to Presbyteries for their opinion, and converted into an Interim Act. From this resolution Dr Mearns dissented, for reasons given to; to which dissent Dr Lee, Mr Whigham, Mr Smith, Mr Paul, Mr Aiton, and Mr James Robertson, adhered. Mr Gibbon also dissented, for reasons given in.—Ed. 1843.

of the moderating in of calls; and whereas it is necessary, for regulating the forms of proceeding under that Act, that some precise and definite rules should be laid down, it is overtured, That the General Assembly do, therefore, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, declare, enact, and ordain, that the following directions and regulations shall be observed:—

1. That when a presentation shall be received by the Moderator of a Presbytery, he shall, within two days after it comes to his hand, call a meeting of Presbytery, to take place not less than eight, nor more than twelve, days from the date of such intimation; provided that no meeting of Presbytery shall have been already fixed to take place within three weeks; and that, if such meeting has been appointed, he shall merely give notice that the presentation has been received, and will be laid on the table at that meeting.

2. That when the presentation is so laid on the table of the Presbytery, they shall, in the first place, ascertain that in the vacant parish a roll of the male heads of families, being members of the congregation and communicants in the church, has been regularly completed, in the manner herein after directed; and that having done so, they shall proceed in terms of the 4th Regulation, after expressed.

3. That in case a roll has not been so completed, they shall, at that meeting, appoint one of their number to act as moderator, with the elders of the parish, to constitute a kirk-session, or where there are no elders, two or more of their own number to act as a kirk-session, in making up a roll, in terms of the Regulations hereby enacted; and in such a case, they shall not then appoint a day for moderating in a call, but shall adjourn to another day of meeting, not more than fourteen days thereafter, ordaining a roll, duly attested, to be then produced to them; at which meeting, if the roll shall be completed, approved of, and countersigned, it shall be competent to fix a day for moderating in a call: it being hereby farther provided, that in no case shall the day for moderating in the call be fixed until the roll shall have been completed to the satisfaction of the Presbytery.

4. That when any Presbytery shall be prepared to appoint a day for moderating in a call to the person presented, they shall appoint one of their own number to preach in the church of the parish on a day not later than the second Sabbath thereafter; that he shall, on that day, intimate from the pulpit that the person presented will preach in that church on the first convenient Sabbath, so as it be not later than the third Sabbath after such intimation, and also on some other Sabbath; and that he shall, at the same time, intimate, that on another day to be fixed, not later than the next Friday after the day last appointed for the presentee to preach, the Presbytery will proceed, within the said church, to moderate in a call to such person to be minister of the said parish, in the usual way; but that the Presbytery, if they deem it expedient, may appoint the presentee to preach oftener than twice, provided that the day for moderating in the call be not more than six weeks after that on which it was appointed.

5. That on the day appointed for moderating in the call, the Presbytery shall, in the first instance, proceed in the same manner in which they are in use at present to proceed.

6. That if no special objections be stated, and if there shall not be dissents by a major part of the male heads of families, being members of the congregation, and in full communion with the church, according to a list or roll to be made up, and regulated in manner herein after directed, the Presbytery shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement of the presentee, according to the rules of the Church.

7. That if any special objections to the settlement of the person presented, of whatever nature such objections may be, shall be stated to the Presbytery; and if such objections appear to be deserving of deliberate consideration or investigation, the Presbytery shall delay the farther proceedings in the settlement till another meeting, to be then appointed, not later than eight days thereafter, and give notice to all parties concerned then to attend, that they may be heard.

8. That if the special objections so stated affect the moral character or the doctrine of the presentee, so that, if they were established, he would be deprived of his licence, or of his situation in the Church, the objectors shall proceed by libel, and the Presbytery shall take the steps usual in such cases.

9. That if the special objections relate to the insufficiency or unfitness of the presentee for the particular charge to which he has been appointed, the objectors shall not require to become libellers, but shall simply deliver in writing their specific grounds for objecting to the settlement, and shall have full liberty to substantiate the same; upon all which the presentee shall have an opportunity to be fully heard, and shall have all competent means of defence: That the Presbytery shall then consider these special objections, and, if it shall appear that they are not sufficient, or not well-founded, they shall proceed to the settlement of the presentee, according to the rules of the Church ; but if the Presbytery shall be satisfied that the objector or objectors have established that the presentee is not fitted, usefully and sufficiently to discharge the pastoral duties in that parish, then they shall find that he is not qualified, and shall, within two days thereafter, intimate the same to the patron ; it being always in the power of the different parties to appeal from the sentence pronounced by the Presbytery, if they shall see cause.

10. That if, at the meeting for moderating in the call, dissents are tendered by any of the male heads of families, whose names stand on the roll above referred to, without the assignment of any special objections, such dissents shall either be personally delivered in writing by the person dissenting, or taken down from his oral statement by the moderator or clerk of the Presbytery.

11. That if the dissents so lodged do not amount in number to the major part of the persons standing on the roll, and if there be no special objections remaining to be considered, the Presbytery shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement, according to the rules of the Church.

12. That if it shall appear that dissents have been lodged by an apparent majority of the persons on the said roll, the Presbytery shall adjourn the proceedings to another meeting, to be held not less than ten free days, nor more than fourteen, thereafter.

13. That it shall not be competent to receive any dissents without cause assigned, except such as shall be duly given in at the meeting for moderating in the call, as above provided ; but it shall be competent to any person who may have lodged a dissent at that meeting to withdraw such dissent at any time before the Presbytery shall have given judgment on the effect of the dissents.

14. That in case the Presbytery shall, at the second meeting appointed, find that there is not truly a majority of such persons on the roll dissenting, they shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement, according to the rules of the Church.

15. That in case the Presbytery shall, at that meeting, find that there is a majority of the persons on the roll dissenting, it shall be competent to the patron or the presentee, or to any member of the Presbytery, to require all or any of the persons so dissenting to appear before the Presbytery, at a meeting to be appointed to take place within ten days at farthest, at some place within the parish, and there and then to declare in terms of the Resolution of the General Assembly ; and if any such person shall fail to appear after notice shall have been duly given to him, or shall refuse to declare in the terms required, the name of such person shall be struck off the list of persons dissenting, and the Presbytery shall determine whether there is still a major part dissenting or not, and proceed accordingly.

16. That if the Presbytery shall find that there is at last a major part of the persons on the roll dissenting, they shall reject the person presented, so far as regards the particular presentation, and the occasion of that vacancy in the parish ; and shall, within two days thereafter, intimate this their determination to the patron, the presentee, and the elders of the parish.

17. That if the patron shall give a presentation to another person within the time limited by law, the proceedings shall again take place in the same manner as above laid down ; and so on, in regard to successive presentations within the time.

18. That if no presentation shall be given, within the limited time, to a person from whose settlement a majority on the roll do not dissent, or who shall not be excluded in consequence of special objections, the Presbytery shall then supply the vacancy, tanquam jure devoluto.

19. That cases of settlement by the Presbytery jure devoluto shall not fall under the operation of the regulations in this and the relative Act of Assembly, but shall be proceeded in according to the general laws of the Church applicable to such cases. But every person who shall have been previously rejected, shall be considered as disqualified to be inducted into that parish on the occasion of that vacancy.

20. That in order to ascertain definitively the persons entitled, at any particular time, to give in dissents, every kirk-session which has not already made up a roll of the male heads of families, in conformity to the enactment of last General Assembly, shall, within three months of the rising of this present General Assembly, make up a roll of the male heads of families who are members of the congregation, and who are, at the date thereof, and have been for at least twelve months previous thereto, in full communion with the Church. And, lest any doubt should arise as to who are heads of families, it is hereby declared, that the term includes unmarried men and widowers, as well as married men, provided they occupy houses of which they are proprietors or tenants, and eldest sons when their fathers are deceased, provided they are of the age of 21 years or upwards, and reside in the same house with their mothers.

21. That the roll so made up shall be open to inspection by any parishioner or member of the congregation, for the space of one week, and thereafter shall be authenticated by the moderator and session-clerk, and then transmitted to the Presbytery; and after being inspected by the Presbytery, and countersigned on each page by the moderator, shall be returned to the kirk-session, and form part of its record for the foresaid purposes.

22. That the said roll shall be revised and re-adjusted immediately after the occasion of dispensing the sacrament in the parish which shall have last preceded the 22d of November in each year, and shall be re-transmitted to the Presbytery before the expiry of the first week of December.

23. That the said list or roll, as last revised before the vacancy in the parish, where a roll has been duly made up, revised, and authenticated, shall be the only roll for determining the persons entitled to be reckoned in any dissents to be offered, in the manner above set forth, against the admission of any presentee to be minister, in the moderating in a call, provided that it shall not be made to appear that they, or any of them, have ceased to be members of the congregation.

24. That in all cases in which the roll has been regularly made up, revised, and authenticated, before the vacancy, such roll shall be held to be conclusive as to the parties entitled to dissent in the moderation of a call for supplying that vacancy; and it shall not be competent to state any objections against it.

25. That in case any appeal shall be taken against any judgment or proceeding of the Presbytery, previous to the time when they are prepared either to proceed to the settlement, or to declare the presentee to be disqualified, and reject the presentation, such appeal shall not sist procedure; but the Presbytery, if they resolve to proceed to the settlement, shall delay doing so till the appeal be discussed; and, if they reject the presentee, it shall be still competent to him to discuss the merits of any appeal which may have been duly entered.

26. That in the districts of Orkney and Zetland, the Synod of Glenelg, and the Synod of Argyle, the number of days appointed by this Act, with regard to meetings and for other purposes, shall be double the number above provided.

27. That the regulations in this Act shall be applied to all cases of vacancies in which the Presbytery has not already appointed a day for moderating in the call; but the General Assembly hereby renew and continue the Interim Act, with regulations, enacted and transmitted by last Assembly, in regard to all cases in which the day for moderating in the call may have been already appointed; declaring it to be still in force as to all such cases, but no others.

28. That the Presbyteries of the Church are hereby enjoined to use all diligence to see that the regulations hereby laid down are duly observed and followed out; and also to use their utmost endeavours to bring about harmony and unanimity in congregations, and be at pains to avoid every thing which may excite or encourage unreasonable exceptions in people against a worthy person, who may be proposed to be their minister,

The General Assembly agree, without a vote, to transmit the above overture and regulations to Presbyteries for their opinion; and, in the mean time, they convert the same into an Interim Act.

The General Assembly, in transmitting this revised and amended overture for regulating the due execution of the Act of Assembly on the Calling of Ministers, now passed into a Standing Law of the Church, think it of importance that the people of the parishes in Scotland should not be misled as to the nature and effect of that Act. It gives to them a negative voice against the intrusion of any minister into the parish whom they are compelled, under the solemn sanction of their conscientious belief as Christians, uninfluenced by any extraneous consideration, to declare to be unfit for the ministry in that parish. But the Act is not intended to confer any rights of a different nature; and any attempt to wrest it to other purposes must defeat its object, and injure the fair interests of the people, which it is meant to protect. All canvassing and caballing, therefore, for obtaining the appointment of a particular person to be minister, and all combination beforehand for that purpose, are inconsistent with the principle of the Act, and ought to disable every man who acts with a due regard to his Christian character, whatever may be his opinion on the law of patronage, from conscientiously declaring in the terms which may be required of him. The Act has been proposed, and after much deliberation passed by the whole Church, for the benefit of the people, according to the view taken by the movers of it, of their rights under the existing law. But, in order that it may have any chance of producing such benefit, it must be fairly acted on by the patrons, the Presbyteries, and the people—each party using the rights, and discharging the duties belonging to each, with the honest and single purpose of obtaining a good and faithful minister for the parish. It is only when this spirit shall duly influence all the parties, that any measure devised by the General Assembly of the Church can be expected to accomplish the great ends for which it is intended—the spiritual edification of the people, their peace, happiness, and prosperity, and the strength and stability of the Church of Scotland.

XI.

Sess. ult., June 1, 1835.—Act on the Form of Process.

The General Assembly, on the Report of the Committee on the Returns to Overtures, that a majority of Presbyteries have approved of the Overture on the Form of Process, pass the same into a Standing Law of the Church.

The General Assembly therefore did, and hereby do, resolve, enact, and ordain, that when a Presbytery shall resolve to libel a minister or probationer, a complaint or appeal may be taken against such resolution; but neither that complaint or appeal, nor any other, either when the Presbytery or any other party shall be libeller, shall prevent the cause from going on till the relevancy shall be determined, so that all such complaints and appeals, and the judgments on the relevancy, if appealed from, may be disposed of at the same time.

XII.

*Sess. ult., June 1, 1835.—Overture on the Form of Process.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on the Form of Process, which was given in by the Procurator. The General Assembly agree to transmit as an Overture to Presbyteries the first Thirteen Resolutions for their consideration.

29th May 1835.

The Committee on the Form of Process, having taken into their consideration the subject of the mode in which trials of causes may be most advantageously conducted, with a view to the due administration of justice, are humbly of opinion, that this important end would be far more effectually, correctly, and expeditiously attained, by having the questions of fact arising in certain classes of cases tried by Commissions of Assembly, specially appointed for the purpose; instead of being left to be decided by the ordinary judicatures of the Church. Without entering into detail, the committee may observe, that they have been led to this conclusion chiefly by the following considerations: 1st, That the time of the Assembly no longer admits of their deciding all the questions which come before them under the present system of procedure; and are every year under the necessity of remitting many of those causes to the ordinary Commission of Assembly, which is well known to be a very uncertain and undefined body; 2d, That a small committee, chosen by the Assembly, (every member of which must act under the feeling of individual responsibility,) will, from hearing the evidence delivered in their own presence, and from the opportunity thereby afforded them of judging of the demeanour of the witnesses, be much better qualified to judge of the weight and importance which should be attached to their depositions, than courts of review, who have the evidence presented to them only in a written shape, can ever be; 3d, That Presbyteries will, to a considerable extent, be relieved from the necessity of acting as prosecutors and judges in the same cases; and, 4th, That much vexation and delay will be saved by the change now recommended.

The committee, therefore, respectfully recommend to the Assembly to transmit the following regulations to Presbyteries, with a view to their being enacted into a law of the Church :

1. That all cases relative to the settlement of ministers, licensing probationers, or involving in any way questions of heresy or false doctrine ; as also, all cases with regard to schools, or other matters in which the Presbyteries have a civil jurisdiction, should be excepted from the proposed regulations, and shall be determined as at present by the Presbyteries of the Church, and be subject to the usual rules with regard to appeals to the Superior Courts.

2. That in all cases of scandal, whether for censure or deprivation, the preliminary steps, as to resolving to libel, serving the libel, and fixing the relevancy, shall remain as at present.

3. That where both parties shall acquiesce in the determination of those matters by the Inferior Courts, the proceedings before those courts shall be transmitted to the clerk of Assembly, for the purpose of abiding the directions of the House as to further procedure.

4. That after all the preliminary matters before mentioned shall have been finally determined by the judicatories of the Church, the trial of any points of fact necessary for the decision of the cause shall be by special Commission of the General Assembly.

5. That such trials shall be held at Edinburgh, reserving, however, to the Assembly, whenever it sees cause, power to appoint the same to be held at Glasgow, Aberdeen, Perth, Inverness, or Dumfries.

6. That the Assembly shall first fix the time and place of trial, and shall then proceed to the appointment of the Commission ; for which purpose the names of thirty-six members, who may not be objected to, or excused on account of health, business, inconvenience, or otherwise, at the discretion of the Assembly, shall be taken by ballot ; there being always two ministers for one lay elder ; from which number each party shall be entitled to strike off one name alternately, the libeller or pursuer beginning, till the whole number is reduced to sixteen, it being always understood that the number of ministers retained on the roll shall never be less than eight ; and the sixteen members so chosen, with one clergyman, to be named by the Moderator of the Assembly, as preses or moderator, shall form the Commission for the trial of the case.

7. When the place of trial is fixed at any other place than Edinburgh, the ballot shall be taken from the members of Assembly from such adjacent Synods as may be fixed by the Assembly, with the exclusion of the Presbytery in which the case may have originated.

8. In the event of the unavoidable absence of any of the members, thirteen shall be a quorum ; but no other excuse for absence shall be sustained than a medical certificate, on soul and conscience, of incapacity to attend on account of ill health.

9. When the trial is held in Edinburgh, the Procurator shall be bound to attend as assessor to the Commission ; and when it is held at any other place, the Commission may, if they please, have power to appoint an assessor for themselves at the expense of the parties, when it is not convenient for the Procurator to attend.

10. At the trial the Commission shall appoint a clerk, and an officer or officers, also at the expense of the parties, to assist in the conduct of the case. The evidence shall be given viva voce, and shall not be taken down at length in writing ; but the preses or moderator, or the assessor, shall take notes of the same, and of any points of law which may occur during the trial. Presbyteries, when they are the prosecutors, shall be entitled to act by a counsel and agent, or one or more of their own body, appointed by them as a committee for the purpose. The accused shall have the privilege of reply. The moderator, or, if the committee shall require it, the assessor, shall sum up ; and the majority of the Commission shall decide ; the moderator having no vote excepting in case of equality.

11. It shall not be competent to appeal against the finding of the Commission, excepting on the ground of misdirection in point of law. Such appeal shall only be competent to the next General Assembly ; and the party desiring to appeal shall intimate his intention to that effect, according to the present practice of the Church, and shall lodge his reasons of appeal with the clerk of Assembly within one month after the date of the judgment. If he fails to do so, he shall be held to have fallen from his appeal, and the case shall be disposed of accordingly.

12. The facts having been determined by the Commission ; and the appeal, if any, on questions of law having been disposed of, or fallen from, the moderator of the Commission shall forthwith intimate the judgment to the Presbytery in which the cause originated, by causing the clerk to send an extract of it to the moderator and clerk of Presbytery, whereupon the Presbytery shall proceed, according to the rules of the Church, to summon the party accused, and pronounce sentence in terms of said judgment.

13. That an act of Parliament shall be obtained to enforce the attendance of witnesses.

XIII.

Sess. ult., June 1, 1835.—Standing Orders to be observed as to the Business of the General Assembly.

The Procurator, as Convener of the Committee on the Form of Process, then submitted a series of Resolutions on the subject of making Motions and putting the Vote, and also on the Printing of Papers; and the Assembly agreed to convert these into Standing Orders of the House.

I.—ON MOTIONS AND VOTES.

1. A motion, whether original or amended, shall be given in to the Clerk in writing, as soon as it shall have been made to the House, and immediately read to the House by the Moderator.

2. When a motion is duly seconded, and in possession of the House, it shall not be competent to make any alteration upon it, excepting in the shape of an amendment, or second or third motion, as the case may be, regularly proposed to the House, unless it shall be consented to by the mover and seconder of any other motion or amendment then before the House.

3. The person who makes the first motion shall have a right to reply; after which the debate shall be held to be definitively closed; and no other person shall be entitled to speak, excepting with regard to the manner of putting the vote.

4. All motions, except the first, shall be considered as amendments on the first, and disposed of accordingly.

5. When there are only two motions before the House, the question put to the vote shall be, Motion or Amendment.

6. When there are three motions, the first question shall be, whether the second or third motion shall be put as the amendment against the first; and the second question shall be, whether the first motion or the amendment so fixed shall be the determination of the House.

7. When there are more than three motions, the first question shall be, whether that last proposed shall be put as the amendment, and so on till only three remain, when the procedure shall be as prescribed in Article 6.

8. In causes, it shall not be competent to move an amendment to the motion, unless it be of such a nature as to decide the case, or to forward it in its progress.

II.—ON THE PRINTING OF PAPERS.

1. That all papers laid on the table of the Assembly shall be printed in the quarto form used in the Court of Session.

2. That it shall not be necessary to print petitions for the opinion of the Procurator, or for aid; or any other merely formal applications, which do not contain any statement on their merits.

3. That the extracts from the minutes of the Inferior Courts shall always be printed entire.

The General Assembly appoint the meeting of the Synod of Glenelg to be changed from the third Wednesday of July to the Wednesday preceeding the opening of the General Assembly by one calendar month.

*Sess. ult., June 1, 1835.—Overture on New Churches.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on New Churches, which was given in by Dr M'Farlan, and read. The Assembly approve thereof, and agree to transmit the same to the Presbyteries for their consideration, with a view of its being converted into a Standing Law of the Church.

1. That the Act of Assembly, 1798, anent the Erection of Chapels of Ease, be rescinded.
2. That Presbyteries shall have the power of granting constitutions to new churches, under the control, and liable to the review, of the General Assembly.
3. That when a petition shall be presented to them for a new erection, they shall strictly observe the following rules:—

1st, They shall cause to be cited, in the usual form, all parties having interest,—namely, the minister and kirk-session of the parish in which the new church is to be built, the heritors of the parish, and in royal burghs the magistrates, allowing an interval of at least ten free days between the date of the citation and the day for entering on the consideration of the petition.

2dly, In every petition for a new erection, the petitioners shall be required to state explicitly and minutely the number of persons who may be accommodated in the intended church, the sum subscribed for its erection, the persons or corporate body in whom it is proposed to invest the property, the wished-for mode of electing the minister and other office-bearers, the provision made for keeping the church in repair, for defraying the expense of communion elements, and all the other circumstances with which the Presbytery may deem it necessary for them to be acquainted; and the constitution shall contain regulations as to these matters, and shall prescribe the bounds of the parish to be erected, the Presbytery abstaining carefully from giving decree for a new erection when there is not a reasonable prospect of the church being permanent.

3dly, The Presbytery shall make such arrangements as may appear to them to be adapted to each particular case. They shall, however, in all cases, require that, by the title-deeds, the church shall be inalienably mortgaged as a church in connection with the Church of Scotland, and that the building and ground shall not be subject to be made liable for the debts of the church or chapel.

4thly, Good and sufficient security shall be given for the regular annual payment of the minister's stipend, which shall not be under L.80.

5thly, In every constitution it shall be expressly provided, that no profit shall be drawn by contributors from the church, in the shape of interest, seat-rents, or otherwise.

6thly, No constitution shall be granted till two-thirds of the expense incurred in purchasing ground and building the church shall have been liquidated.

8thly, When the terms of the constitution shall have been settled, and the requisites above mentioned complied with, the Presbytery shall pronounce a deliverance erecting the church into a parish church, and the district into a parish ecclesiastical, in which the minister shall exercise all the functions of a parish minister, agreeably to the Act of Assembly, 1834, and sanctioning the constitution agreed on; provided always, that where the Gaelic language is to be used in the church, the Presbytery shall not assign to it any exclusive parochial district to the whole of the inhabitants of which the minister shall be pastor, but shall assign certain limits to all the Gaelic inhabitants, in which it shall be his peculiar duty to minister, and of such of whom as join his congregation, he and his session shall have the exclusive spiritual jurisdiction, subject to the review of the superior judicatories of this Church.

4. That it shall be competent for all parties to appeal, if they see cause, against the actings of the Presbytery; and appeals shall be taken directly to the General Assembly; but appeals on points not affecting the proposal for a new erection shall not sist procedure.

5. That it shall be competent for the trustees or managers, or the minister and session, to apply to the Presbytery for alteration in the constitution of all such churches already erected and constituted, or hereafter to be erected and constituted; and the Presbytery shall thereupon cause all parties interested to be cited, and after inquiring into the circumstances and grounds of the application, shall report the same to the General Assembly, who may sanction such alterations as are not inconsistent with the regulations hereby enacted.

6. That Presbyteries shall report all new erections and constitutions to the General Assembly which shall be holden next after such erection shall have been made.

7. That this act shall not be construed to extend to the case of rebuilding, or re-erecting on another site the churches of such parishes as are or may be established by decree of the Court of Teinds.

8. That nothing in this overture shall be construed as affecting the right of Presbyteries and parish ministers to sanction the establishment of preaching stations within their bounds.

Sess. ult., June 1, 1835.—Act appointing a Day of Humiliation.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, having taken into serious consideration the prevailing sins of this land, did, and hereby do, in conformity with the frequent practice of this National Church, especially in its earliest times, appoint a day of humiliation, fasting, and prayer, to be universally observed throughout the bounds of the Church, on Thursday, the 23d day of July next to come, earnestly exhorting all ranks of men to unite together in confession, supplication, and intercession to the Almighty God, that, in fulfilment of his gracious promises to the contrite, he may be pleased to forgive us our multiplied and aggravated transgressions, and to turn away from us his threatened judgments. And the several Presbyteries of this Church are hereby enjoined to take care that the said day of humiliation shall be reverently kept; and all parents and masters are admonished to warn the members of their families, and especially the young, to beware of converting the time set apart for this devout and solemn exercise into a day of idleness and relaxation, lest, by neglecting to consider their ways, and to turn to Him who hath smitten, and who alone can heal, they provoke the vengeance of Heaven, and bring down on themselves swift destruction.

The General Assembly further ordains all ministers to read this Act from their pulpits on the Lord's Day immediately preceding the said 23d day of July, or on some other convenient day, with the Address hereunto subjoined.

ADDRESS TO THE MINISTERS, ELDERS, AND PEOPLE, OF THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

DEARLY BELOVED BROTHERS,

We have appointed a day of humiliation, fasting, and prayer, to be solemnly observed throughout the Church of Scotland; and in virtue of that authority with which we are invested, we call upon you to suffer the word of exhortation.

We need not inquire in what respects, and to what extent, the former times were better than these. We have ground for believing that there have been periods when this portion of the United Kingdom was more distinguished than it is now for the attention of the inhabitants to the religious instruction of children, the careful reading of the Holy Scriptures, the duty of family devotion, and attendance on public ordinances, as well as the prudent, temperate, industrious, and peaceable habits, which are nourished and strengthened by the knowledge and love of the truth. But, without attempting to estimate the comparative demerits of this our day, and the ages which are past, it is sufficient cause of humiliation, that with us, even with us, are sins against the Lord our God, and that iniquity must prove our ruin, if, after having been weighed in the balances, and found wanting, we continue hardened and insensible, while God, by the voice of his Providence, is loudly calling us to turn to Him with all our heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning.

Let us, then, search and try our ways; and let us all, in our several stations, make confession of the innumerable and grievous trespasses by which we have augmented the fierce anger of the Lord.

Far be it from us to lead away your thoughts from the manifest occasions of humiliation which exist within the Church to any of those which prevail without. Ill would it become a people laden with iniquities to fast for strife and debate, and to foster a spirit of variance, emulation, envying, and vain-glory, instead of the penitential exercises of self-denial and self-abasement. Let us seriously reflect, whether, as ministers, and elders, and members of the Church, we have, in any respect, left our first love, and let us remember whence we have fallen, and repent and do the first works, in which our fathers excelled, lest our offended Judge come quickly, and remove the candlestick out of its place.

If among us who bear the vessels of the Lord, and who have been allowed to keep the charge of his sanctuary, there has been any decline in the exercise of vigilant superintendence, and salutary discipline, and rightly dividing the word of truth,—if there has been any undue relaxation of labour, either in public teaching, or in the attentions which require to be paid from house to house,—if there has been less devoted ardour, or less persevering diligence, in feeding the flock of the Chief Shepherd, than was worthy of our vocation,—if we have not sufficiently commended the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, and the pleasantness and profitableness of a holy life,—if we have failed to make full proof of our ministry, by pureness, by knowledge, by long-suffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armour of righteousness on the right hand and on the left,—it is now high time to awake out of sleep, and to cast the beam out of our own eyes, that we may see clearly to cast the mote out of the eyes of our brethren.

And if among you, brethren, for whose souls we are bound to watch, there be any root of bitterness, any forgetfulness of God, any hatred of the light, any disrelish for the doctrine of grace, any preference of the things of time to the interest of the eternal world, any indulged disposition to dishonour the name of God, to profane his Sabbaths, to counteract the free course of his Word, to resist the operation of his Spirit, to yield to the influence of the ungodly and worldly lusts, which the grace of God teaches us to deny,—and thus, by carnality of mind, to live in a state of enmity against God,—be admonished even now, while it is called to-day, to consider your ways, to cast off all the unfruitful works of darkness, to loathe and renounce all the forms of intemperance which degrade the nature of man below that of the beasts that perish, to live soberly, righteously, and godly in the world, and to walk circumspectly before God, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil.

In the course of this Assembly our attention has been drawn to many painful facts, all of which must, in a great measure, be traced to neglect or remissness in the discharge of the great duties of our Christian stewardship. The result of all our inquiries impresses on us more and more the appalling consideration, that in all the most populous districts of the kingdom multitudes are passing onward to eternity, in utter ignorance of the only way of salvation, and many thousands of children are growing up to manhood, without being brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; and we dare not acquit ourselves of the guilt of having failed to provide the means which it might have been in the power of our hand to employ, for averting or removing these growing evils. We have cause to blush and be ashamed when we reflect on the supineness which has too long and too extensively prevailed in the bosom of a Church which, even in its infant state, was so strenuous and so successful in lifting up the standard against all the varieties of error and ungodliness; and we desire to apply to ourselves, as well as to you, the exhortation to be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain and are ready to die. We have reason to fear that the example of indifference to the value of spiritual blessings has not originated with the lower orders; and if among them there be less now than formerly of the regular observance of the offices of a religious life, and less firm and ardent attachment to the principles of the Reformation, for which our fathers struggled and bled, we are constrained to own, that far less diligence and zeal have been exercised than the pastors and teachers of former generations were wont to manifest, in stirring up both the high and the low, without respect of persons, to the faithful performance of these sacred duties.

It is also a subject of serious lamentation that in our various colonies, peopled, as some of them are, to a great extent, with natives of Scotland, who were in their youth trained up in attachment to the doctrines and worship of this Church, there is so great a destitution of the opportunities of religious instruction, that many have become reconciled to the habit of living in a state of estrangement from all Christian fellowship, and have yielded to the temptation of casting off the restraints of piety, and foregoing the precious consolations of God,—while many others, holding fast the profession of their faith, and hungering for the bread of life, have been, year after year, imploring from us that brotherly aid which our hands have been too slack in rendering. And though we have not turned away our ear from their reiterated cry, we have neither pleaded so perseveringly as we ought with the Government, nor sufficiently stimulated the bounty of the wealthy, many of whom might have been willing to communicate to so good a work as that of providing instruction in righteousness to souls pining under the famine of the Word of the Lord.

Not less humbling is the reflection that in the vast regions of the East, whence wealth, with a train of luxuries, has flowed profusely into this land, so slow has been the progress of Christian truth, that even at this hour an hundred and thirty millions of human beings are said to bow the knee at the altars of idolatry; while no effort, except on a most minute scale, and during a very brief period, has been made by our Church to rescue these bond-slaves of superstition from the power of darkness, and to translate them to the glorious liberty of the children of God. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, that there is hope in Israel concerning this thing; and that, though it be but as yesterday, the sons of the stranger have now begun to be taught to do the work of evangelists in their native land, and thus have we the gladdening prospect of seeing a seed raised up to serve the Lord, and to be accounted to him for a generation who shall come and declare his righteousness to a people who shall be born.

That our exertions have hitherto been so languid and inefficacious, may be regarded as a mortifying symptom of the littleness, if not the lack, of the faith which purifieth the heart to the unfeigned love of the brethren; and if it be so with us, we cannot too earnestly pray that God may be pleased to forgive our past omissions of duty, and to animate us by his grace, that we may henceforth abound more and more, both in the cultivation of personal piety, and in the labour of bringing others to the knowledge of that truth by which alone they can be sanctified and saved.

It may be also too justly laid to our charge, that in dealing with such as fellow not with us, we have occasionally been less patient and peaceable, less gentle and conciliating, than becomes the followers of Him, who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; and if in this or in any other respect we have been verily guilty concerning our brethren, rather provoking one another than overcoming evil with good, let us resolve more strictly to judge ourselves, and more tenderly to exercise forbearance towards others, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves, that, following after charity and peace with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart, and avoiding questions and contentions which are unprofitable and vain, we may all come, in the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.

In recommending such healing courses, we would by no means countenance any surrender of sound and steadfast principle. The wisdom that is from above, being first pure and then peaceable, constrains all who are under its influence to contend earnestly for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints; but they who are most valiant for the truth know well that it is more efficaciously conveyed from soul to soul when it is spoken in love, than when the unbridled tongue proclaims the vanity of its professions of religion by indulging in bitterness, and wrath, and clamour, and uncharitableness. These are not the fruits of the Spirit; nor is it to be expected that while such effusions of worldly-minded animosity are poured forth, truth will spring out of the earth, or righteousness look down from heaven. For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God.

Humbling ourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, and endeavouring every man to understand his errors, and to know the plague of his own heart, let us lay aside the sin that doth so easily beset us, and come to the Throne of Grace with the sacrifice of a broken spirit, which God will not despise;—let us pray the Lord of the harvest that he may return and look down from heaven, and visit this vine, and the vineyard which his right hand hath planted, causing it to take deep root, and fill the land, and to send out its boughs to the sea, and its branches to the ends of the earth;—and let such of us as are keepers of the vineyard, watching on the walls of Zion, and seeing eye to eye, lift up the voice together, and continue instant in supplication, until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest; and the work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever.

Sess. 7, May 25, 1836.—Act in favour of India Missions.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland did, and hereby do, nominate and appoint the ministers of the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and the following elders, who are members of Assembly, viz., Charles Fergusson, Esq., &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts, and for managing the funds subscribed and given for that purpose, with the whole powers conferred by former Acts of Assembly, and with power also to appoint sub-committees; and particularly, a sub-committee of their number, consisting of nine, for more effectually furthering the great end in view. Of the general committee, nine are hereby declared to be a quorum; and of the sub-committee to be appointed, three are hereby declared to be a quorum. The committee shall hold stated monthly meetings, for dispatch of business, in the Presbytery Hall, or other suitable place, on the first Monday of every month, at two o'clock, with power always to adjourn as shall be needful, and to meet on all occasions when urgent business shall demand. And the said general committee are hereby enjoined and required, by themselves, and through their sub-committee, to attend to the instructions and regulations formerly approved by the General Assembly, for the propagation of the Gospel abroad; with power to make and carry into effect such farther regulations, and to adopt such measures as to them may seem most beneficial, such farther regulations and the measures adopted to be submitted to next Assembly; and the said general committee are hereby appointed to report their diligence, and that of their sub-committee, in calling forth the benevolence and support of the Christian public of Scotland, their prudence in the expenditure of the funds obtained, and generally their management, and the success and extent of their operations in foreign parts. The General Assembly renew their former recommendations to the ministers throughout the Church, that they continue their exertions in aid of the funds of the Mission, and earnestly recommend that in every parish there be a collection yearly, on behalf of this important cause; and that one minister in every Presbytery be appointed to receive contributions, and transmit them to the Treasurer.

*Sess. ult., May 30, 1836.—Act in favour of Colonial Churches.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on Colonial Churches, which was given in and read by Principal Macfarlan, the convener, who was farther heard on the subject. The General Assembly approve of the report, and appoint the following ministers and elders, viz., the Moderator, &c.; a special committee for carrying the measures suggested by said report into effect, to be called, "The General Assembly's Committee for promoting the Religious Interest of Scottish Presbyterians in the British Colonies." Appoint this committee to meet in Edinburgh on the Wednesday after the rising of the Assembly, at eleven o'clock, A. M., and thereafter stately on the Tuesdays before the stated meetings of the Commission, with power at their first said meeting to choose their own clerk, and, if necessary, their treasurer; and with power to appoint sub-committees to meet in Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, and elsewhere, for the purpose of collecting funds, and furthering the objects of their appointment. The Assembly recommend to the Presbyteries of the Church to make public collections within their respective bounds, so as to enable the committee to send ministers and other teachers to stations in the Colonies, where their services are required, and to assist those already employed there, whose circumstances call, in a peculiar manner, for sympathy and assistance; and the committee is empowered to apply the funds put under their management to the purposes above mentioned, and instructed to continue in correspondence with the several Synods, Presbyteries, and, where these have not been formed, individual clergymen in said Colonies. This committee is farther instructed to correspond and co-operate with the Colonial and other societies having the same benevolent objects in view; and it is a special instruction to them to renew, in the name of the Assembly, the application made by the last General Assembly to his Majesty's government, in support of the Memorial presented by the clergy of Upper Canada respecting the Clergy Reserve Fund. It is also made a special instruction to this committee, that they act in terms of the report in matters respecting the churches in Van Diemen's Land. And the committee is instructed and empowered to embrace every proper opportunity of asserting and practically maintaining the rights of members of the Church of Scotland resident in the British Colonies, to all the privileges and emoluments secured by the Treaty of Union to the Established Churches of the United Kingdom. The Assembly appoint the report, with their deliverance thereon, to be printed, with such documents as the committee may think proper to add in an appendix, and to be circulated throughout the Church and in the Colonies.

X.

Sess. ult., May 30, 1836.—Act anent a Hebrew Exercise.

The Committee on Returns to Overtures, having reported that a majority of Presbyteries had approved of the Overture on a Hebrew Exercise, the General Assembly pass the same into a Standing Law of the Church.

The General Assembly, therefore, with the view of more effectually promoting the great end of the Christian ministry in our National Established Church, did, and hereby do, resolve, enact, and declare, that as nothing can be more important to the interests of the Christian Church, than the adequate preparation of those who are to sustain the office of the sacred ministry, for the discharge of the duties of that office; and as an exact and critical acquaintance with the Scriptures in the original languages is an attainment that is indispensable for enabling them, by the Divine blessing, to convey to the minds of the people a just and accurate knowledge of the revealed will of God; a critical Hebrew Exercise on some portion of the original text of the Old Testament shall henceforth be appointed to be prepared and delivered by every theological student in the course of his attendance at the Divinity Hall, in addition to those exercises which are already prescribed by the Church.

*Sess. ult., May 30, 1836.—Overture and Interim Act, with Regulations for carrying into effect the Act of Assembly, May 29, 1835, on the Calling of Ministers.

Whereas the General Assembly have declared, enacted, and ordained, in terms of their Act, passed into a law of the Church on the 29th May 1835, on the subject of the Calling of Ministers; and whereas it is necessary, for regulating the forms of proceeding under that Act, that some precise and definite rules should be laid down, the General Assembly do, therefore, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, declare, enact, and ordain, that the following directions and regulations shall be observed:—

1. That, at the first meeting of any Presbytery, after a vacancy occurring in any parish, or on any application regularly brought before the Presbytery, for the appointment of an assistant and successor, the Presbytery shall ascertain that a roll of the male heads of families, being members of the congregation, and communicants in the church, has been completed in the manner herein after directed; and that, if such a roll has been made, they shall proceed to purge the same, by striking off the names of all persons who may have died, ceased to be members of the congregation, or fallen under church censures, since such roll was so made up.

2. That, in case a roll has not been so completed, they shall at that meeting appoint one of their number to act as moderator, with the elders of the parish, to constitute a kirk-session, or, where there are no elders, two or more of their own number to act as a kirk-session, in making up a roll, in terms of the regulations hereby enacted, and shall ordain the said roll, duly attested, to be produced to them at their next meeting, or any special meeting to be appointed for that purpose.

3. That in no case shall the day for moderating in the call be appointed until the roll shall have been completed and purged, to the satisfaction of the Presbytery.

4. That, in order to ascertain definitively the persons entitled, at any particular time, to give in dissents, every kirk-session which has not already made up a roll of the male heads of families, in conformity to the enactment of last General Assembly, shall, within three months of the rising of this present General Assembly, make up a roll of the male heads of families, who are members of the congregation, and in country parishes resident within the same, and who are, at the date thereof, and have been for at least twelve months previous thereto, in full communion with the Church. And, lest any doubt should arise as to who are heads of families, it is hereby declared that the term includes unmarried men and widowers, as well as married men, provided they occupy houses of which they are proprietors or tenants, and eldest sons when their fathers are deceased, provided they are of the age of

* The following is the notice of the transmission of this Overture in the Proceedings of Assembly, 1836:—

“The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on the Regulations as to the Calling of Ministers, which was given in by Lord Moncreiff, the convener, and read. The General Assembly approve of the Report, and order the Overture and Regulations to be transmitted to Presbyteries for their consideration, and converted the same into an Interim Act. Mr Clark of Inverness dissented in his own name, and in the name of those who may adhere to him, from the resolution to convert the Overture and Regulations into an Interim Act, in so far as these regulations enjoin Presbyteries to sustain the Call, in every case where there is not a majority of dissents by male heads of families in full Communion with the Church. Mr Mackenzie dissented from the resolution to transmit the Overture and Regulations, and convert them into an Interim Act. A Committee named with power to receive any new or additional returns which may be sent to them on or before the first of March next, with instructions to consider these and the returns already received, and to report to next Assembly.”—Ed. 1843 twenty-one years or upwards, and reside in the same house with their mothers, they being always in full communion with the Church.

5. That the roll so made up shall be open to inspection by any parishioner or member of the congregation, for the space of one week, of which notice shall be given from the pulpit, and thereafter shall be authenticated by the moderator and session-clerk, and then transmitted to the Presbytery; and after being inspected by the Presbytery, and countersigned on each page by the moderator, shall be returned to the kirk-session, and form part of its record for the foresaid purposes.

6. That the said roll shall be revised and re-adjusted immediately after the occasion of dispensing the sacrament in the parish which shall have last preceded the 22d of November in each year, and shall be open for inspection in the same manner as before, and shall be re-transmitted to the Presbytery before the expiry of the first week of December.

7. That the said list or roll, as last revised before the vacancy in the parish, or before any application, as aforesaid, for the appointment of an assistant and successor, where a roll has been duly made up, revised, and authenticated, after being examined and purged, as provided under the first regulation, or the roll made up immediately after such vacancy or application, where none had been made before, shall be the only roll for determining the persons entitled to be reckoned in any dissents to be offered against the admission of any presentee to be minister, in the moderating in a call; but it shall still be the duty of the Presbytery to remove from the said roll the names of all persons who may have died, removed from the parish, or become otherwise disqualified, previous to the time appointed for moderating in the call.

8. That when a presentation shall be received by the moderator of a Presbytery, he shall, within two days after it comes to his hand, call a meeting of Presbytery, to take place not less than eight, nor more than twelve, days from the date of such intimation; provided that no meeting of Presbytery shall have been already fixed to take place within three weeks; and that, if such meeting has been appointed, he shall merely give notice that the presentation has been received, and will be laid on the table at that meeting.

9. That when any Presbytery shall be prepared to appoint a day for moderating in a call to the person presented, they shall appoint one of their own number to preach in the church of the parish on a day not later than the second Sabbath thereafter; that he shall, on that day, intimate from the pulpit that the person presented will preach in that church on the first convenient Sabbath, so as it be not later than the third Sabbath after such intimation, and also on some other Sabbath; and that he shall, at the same time, intimate, that on another day to be fixed, not later than the next Friday after the day last appointed for the presentee to preach, the Presbytery will proceed, within the said church, to moderate in a call to such person to be minister of the said parish in the usual way; but that the Presbytery, if they deem it expedient, may appoint the presentee to preach oftener than twice, provided that the day for moderating in the call be not more than six weeks after that on which it was appointed.

10. That on the day appointed for moderating in the call, the Presbytery shall, in the first instance, proceed in the same manner in which they were in use to proceed before the passing of the Act of Assembly, 1835, anent Calls.

11. That if there shall not be dissents by a major part of the persons standing on the roll, made up and regulated in manner herein before directed, and if no special objections be made, the Presbytery shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement of the presentee, according to the rules of the Church.

12. That if dissents are tendered by any of the male heads of families, whose names stand on the roll above referred to, such dissents shall either be personally delivered in writing by each of the persons dissenting separately, or taken down from his oral statement by the moderator or clerk of the Presbytery; but that no person shall be entitled so to dissent who shall have previously petitioned the patron for the appointment of the person presented; it being always open to him to state special objections at the proper time.

13. That if dissents so lodged do not amount in number to the major part of the persons standing on the roll, and if there be no special objection requiring consideration stated, the Presbytery shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement, according to the rules of the Church.

14. That if it shall appear that dissents have been lodged by an apparent majority of the persons on the said roll, the Presbytery shall adjourn the proceedings to another meeting, to be held not less than ten free days, nor more than fourteen, thereafter.

15. That it shall not be competent to receive any dissents, except such as shall be duly given in at the meeting for moderating in the call, as above provided; but it shall be competent to any person, who may have lodged a dissent at that meeting, to withdraw such dissent at any time before the Presbytery shall have given judgment on the effect of the dissents.

16. That in case the Presbytery shall, at the second meeting appointed, find that there is not truly a majority of such persons on the roll dissenting, and no special objections be stated, they shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement according to the rules of the Church.

17. That in case the Presbytery shall, at that meeting, find that there is a majority of the persons on the roll dissenting, it shall be competent to the patron or the presentee, or to any member of the Presbytery, to require all or any of the persons so dissenting to appear before the Presbytery, at a meeting to be appointed, to take place within ten days at farthest, at some place within the parish, and there and then to declare in terms of the Act of Assembly, 1835; and if any such person shall fail to appear, after notice in writing, either personally or at his dwelling-house, shall have been duly given to him, or shall refuse to declare in the terms required, the name of such person shall be struck off the list of persons dissenting, and the Presbytery shall determine whether there is still a major part dissenting or not, and proceed accordingly.

18. That if the Presbytery shall find that there is at last a major part of the persons on the roll dissenting, they shall reject the person presented, so far as regards the particular presentation, and the occasion of that vacancy in the parish; and shall, within two days thereafter, intimate this their determination to the patron, the presentee, and the elders of the parish.

19. That if, at the meeting for moderating in the call, dissents by a majority on the roll shall not be stated, and if any special objections to the settlement of the person presented, of whatever nature such objections may be, shall then be stated to the Presbytery by any person entitled to object by the general laws of the Church; and if such objections appear to be deserving of deliberate consideration or investigation, the Presbytery shall delay the farther proceedings in the settlement till another meeting, to be then appointed, not later than eight days thereafter, and give notice apud acta to all parties concerned then to attend, that they may be heard.

20. That if the special objections so stated affect the moral character or the doctrine of the presentee, so that, if they were established, he would be deprived of his licence, or of his situation in the Church, the objectors shall proceed by libel, and the Presbytery shall take the steps usual in such cases.

21. That if the special objections relate to the insufficiency or unfitness of the presentee for the particular charge to which he has been appointed, the objectors shall not be required to become libellers, but shall simply deliver, in writing, their specific grounds for objecting to the settlement, and shall have full liberty to substantiate the same; upon all which the presentee shall have an opportunity to be fully heard, and shall have all competent means of defence: That the Presbytery shall then consider these special objections, and, if it shall appear that they are not sufficient, or not well-founded, they shall proceed to the settlement of the presentee, according to the rules of the Church; but if the Presbytery shall be satisfied that the objector or objectors have established that the presentee is not fitted usefully and sufficiently to discharge the pastoral duties in that parish, then they shall find that he is not qualified, and shall, within two days thereafter, intimate the same to the patron, it being always in the power of the different parties to appeal from the sentence pronounced by the Presbytery, if they shall see cause.

22. That the Presbytery shall not receive such special objections in any case, until after it has been finally ascertained whether there are dissents by a majority of the persons on the roll; but it shall always be competent, as soon as this is ascertained, to state special objections.

23. That if the Presbytery shall have rejected the presentee, and if the patron shall give a presentation to another person within the time limited by law, the proceedings shall again take place in the same manner as above laid down, and so on, in regard to successive presentations within the time.

24. That if no presentation shall be given within the limited time, to a person from whose settlement a majority on the roll do not dissent, or who shall not be excluded in consequence of special objections, the Presbytery shall then supply the vacancy, tanquam jure devoluto.

25. That cases of settlement by the Presbytery jure devoluto shall not fall under the operation of the regulations in this and the relative Act of Assembly, but shall be proceeded in according to the general laws of the Church applicable to such cases. But every person who shall have been previously rejected in that parish shall be considered as disqualified to be inducted into that parish on the occasion of that vacancy.

26. That in case any appeal shall be taken against any judgment or proceeding of the Presbytery, previous to the time when they are prepared either to proceed to the settlement, or to declare the presentee to be disqualified, and reject the presentation, such appeal shall not sist procedure; but the Presbytery, if they resolve to proceed to the settlement, shall delay doing so till the appeal be disposed of; and, if they reject the presentee, it shall be still competent to him to discuss the merits of any appeal which may have been duly entered.

27. That, in the districts of Orkney and Zetland, the Synod of Glenelg, and the Synod of Argyle, the number of days appointed by this Act with regard to meetings and for other purposes, shall be double the number above provided.

28. That the regulations in this Act shall be applied to all cases of vacancies in which the Presbytery has not already appointed a day for moderating in the call; but the General Assembly hereby renew and continue the Interim Act with regulations, enacted and transmitted by last Assembly, in regard to all cases in which the day for moderating in the call may have been already appointed; declaring it to be still in force as to all such cases, but no others.

29. That the Presbyteries of the Church are hereby enjoined to use all diligence to see that the regulations hereby laid down are duly observed and followed out; and also to use their utmost endeavours to bring about harmony and unanimity in congregations, and be at pains to avoid every thing which may excite or encourage unreasonable exceptions in people against a worthy person, who may be proposed to be their minister.

The General Assembly agree, without a vote, to transmit the above Overture and Regulations to Presbyteries for their opinion; and, in the mean time, they convert the same into an Interim Act.

The General Assembly, in transmitting this revised and amended overture for regulating the due execution of the Act of Assembly on Calls, now passed into a Standing Law of the Church, think it of importance that the people of the parishes in Scotland should not be misled as to the nature and effect of that Act. It gives to them a negative voice against the intrusion of any minister into the parish, whom they are compelled, under the solemn sanction of their conscientious belief, as Christians, uninfluenced by any extraneous consideration, to declare to be unfit for the ministry in that parish. But the Act is not intended to confer any rights of a different nature; and any attempt to wrest it to other purposes must defeat its object, and injure the fair interests of the people which it is meant to protect. All canvassing and cabaling, therefore, for obtaining the appointment of a particular person to be minister, and all combination beforehand for that purpose, are inconsistent with the principle of the Act, and ought to disable every man who acts with a due regard to his Christian character, whatever may be his opinion on the law of patronage, from conscientiously declaring in the terms which may be required of him. The Act has been proposed, and after much deliberation, passed by the whole Church, for the benefit of the people, according to the view taken by the movers of it, of their rights under the existing law. But, in order that it may have any chance of producing such benefit, it must be fairly acted on by the patrons, the Presbyteries, and the people,—each party using the rights, and discharging the duties belonging to each, with the honest and single purpose of obtaining a good and faithful minister for the parish. It is only when this spirit shall duly influence all the parties, that any measure devised by the General Assembly of the Church can be expected to accomplish the great ends for which it is intended,—the spiritual edification of the people, their peace, happiness, and prosperity, and the strength and stability of the Church of Scotland.

PASTORAL LETTER TO THE PEOPLE OF SCOTLAND ON FAMILY WORSHIP.

The General Assembly, having considered and approved the Overtures recommending a renewed Admonition for the purpose of stirring up the people of this land to the faithful and regular observance of the worship of God in their families, did, and hereby do, require the following Pastoral Letter to be read by all the ministers of this Church from their several pulpits, on the first convenient Lord's Day after it shall come into their hands.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND, To our dearly beloved people :
Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and Christ Jesus our Lord.

On your behalf, brethren, we thank God, whom we serve with our spirit in the Gospel of his Son, that your faith and devotion have long been spoken of throughout the world ; and we are bound always to have remembrance of you in our prayers night and day, greatly desiring that, like your forefathers in times of clearest light, you may continue stedfastly in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, abounding in the exercises of that unfeigned godliness, which is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

In compliance with the solicitations of many who watch for your souls, and are jealous over you with godly jealousy, we have resolved to issue this brotherly exhortation on the sacred and indispensable duty of family worship,—not as if we had any recent ground for apprehending that it is likely to fall into more extensive neglect, but because we know too well that it is by no means universally practised, and because even the purest minds require to be stirred up by way of remembrance, that, while they hold fast the profession of their own faith without wavering, they may consider one another to provoke and encourage, by good counsel and good example, to the love of truth and holiness, and to the habitual and serious observance of those offices of piety, whereby, as surely as the body is nourished and refreshed by its daily bread and its nightly rest, the soul of man, through the nurture and admouition of the Lord, is progressively matured in excellence and strength, till it is advanced to the perfection and glory of its immortal existence.

In calling your attention to this momentous topic, we think it superfluous to enlarge on the high obligations by which the duty is enforced—obligations which are involved in the very constitution of our frail and dependent being, and impressed on the understanding and the heart by the persuasive voice of Scriptural authority, opening the ears of men and sealing the instruction, by which God speaketh, not once or twice, but at sundry times, and in divers manners, adding line upon line, precept upon precept, promise upon promise, and threatening upon threatening, so as to bring perpetually to remembrance both the blessings which are multiplied to them that fear the Lord, and the fury which is poured out on the families which call not on his name. The appointment of the reasonable service of bowing down at the domestic altar before the Lord our Maker, that, in waiting for the promised effusion of the Spirit of grace and supplications, we may be filled with the fruits of righteousness, has ever been regarded by all men of sound mind and Christian experience, not as the imposition of an irksome yoke, but as the conveyance of an inestimable privilege ; for as often as we mark the tokens of God's power and presence in making the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice, must every enlightened and purified heart, lifting up its affections to the Father of spirits, acknowledge, with triumphant satisfaction, that it is a good thing to show forth his loving-kindness in the morning, and his faithfulness every night.

To those only who have tasted and seen it, can we speak intelligibly of the tranquil delight which is awakened and sustained by such periodical acts of household worship, as are not a mere formal ceremony in which the members join with reluctant or cold compliance, but the fervent utterance of lips, which, out of the abundance of the heart in which the love of God is shed abroad, are, by the influence of that unquenchable affection, most pleasingly constrained to celebrate the mercies which are new every morning, and to offer up the spiritual incense of prayer, with as unceasing regularity as from the sanctuary of Israel the smoke of the evening sacrifice arose, or as the early dew of Hermon descended on the mountains of Sion, when there the Lord commanded the blessing—even life for evermore.

Without all controversy, the benefits produced by this hallowed exercise are ineffably precious. It is not enough to say that thus are devout and grateful emotions awakened,—thus is faith in the superintending Providence and holy promises of God confirmed,—thus are the graces of humility, resignation, and patience, nourished and increased,—while, with the contemplation of the infinite excellence, the unwearied beneficence, and the everlasting strength of the Lord Jehovah, we contrast the instability, deceitfulness, and desperate wickedness of the heart of man! By the infallible testimony of Heaven we are authorised to affirm constantly that there is an efficacy in the prayer of faith, which, though inexplicable by our feeble understandings, must, through all ages, continue to avail as much as it did in the days of those patriarchs, prophets, and righteous men, who, as princes, had power with God, when receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, they had grace to serve him acceptably, with reverence and godly fear. The Lord is ever nigh unto them that are of a broken heart, and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit, when, taking with them the words which inspired wisdom has taught them to utter, they lift up their desires at his footstool, not seeking great things for themselves, or panting after the dust of the earth, or sighing for the vain delights of the sons of men, but thirsting and longing for the blessedness of the man whose transgression is forgiven, and who, being justified by faith, has peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. We have no encouragement to hope that, by taking thought for temporal satisfactions, we shall find grace in the sight of the Lord; but if we aspire after the best gifts which are the heritage of the faithful, seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, we believe and are sure that his divine power will give us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of Him that hath called us to glory and virtue. Though our Father in the heavens knoweth what things we have need of before we ask them, and though the purposes of his everlasting kindness are often fulfilled more substantially by withholding than by granting the desires which we naturally cherish, it is only to them who worship him in spirit and in truth that he has promised to do exceeding abundantly above all that they ask or think; and we have no more solid ground to expect that we shall receive without asking, or that we shall find without seeking, than the husbandman has to look for an abundant harvest springing up in the fields which he has neither planted nor watered, or than the merchant has to calculate on receiving his own with usury for the talent which has been tied up in a napkin or buried in the earth.

It is not for us to unfold the laws of the spiritual world, so as to demonstrate why and how it is that the communications of heavenly influence and favour are in any degree suspended on the frequency and fervency of our supplications. But this we know, that, as in old time the father of the faithful commanded his children, and his household after him, to unite with him in the exercises of a holy life, that the Lord might bring upon Abraham that which he had spoken of him,—even so, in all generations, may the willing and obedient hope, that, while seeking unto God, and committing their cause to him who doeth great things and unsearchable, they place their confidence not in their own importunity or their own efforts, but in the exalted merit and prevalent intercession of the Mediator of the New Covenant, they cannot fail to be made partakers of that abundant grace which ought to be the chief object of all our prayers, and which is never denied to the humble. We know assuredly that our heavenly Father giveth his Holy Spirit to them who ask him; and if, for the sake of his beloved Son, he is pleased to bestow this unspeakable gift, in answer to the prayer of the believing soul, why should we hesitate to admit that it is of the Lord's mercies that, by the eternal ordination of divine wisdom, prayer has been rendered one of the sure and sufficient means of transmitting to the faithful every other good and perfect gift which cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning?

To the duties of social prayer and thanksgiving, accompanied with that instruction in righteousness which the reading of the Scriptures is calculated to impart, let the benefits thus conferred on your several domestic circles operate as a strong incitement. It is not, indeed, within the compass of human ability to infuse grace into the souls which are most tenderly beloved. But great will probably be the influence of a pious example on those who confide in your affection, and have cause to revere your worth. If your children and dependants perceive that, while you are not slothful in the business of time, you are also fervent in spirit, serving the Lord, and that, while you provide for your own the food and the raiment, which are obtained by the blessing of God on the hand of the diligent, you ask for them that bread of heaven which strengtheneth the heart, may you not hope that they will be stirred up both to pray and to labour for the meat which endureth to life everlasting, and that they will learn to regard the favour of God as a better portion than the abundance of corn and wine? May you not hope that, while your own minds are elevated, by contemplating the works of creation, providence, and redemption, and by reflecting on the dignified and endearing relation to which you have been raised, in having "received the spirit of adoption, whereby you cry, Abba, Father," they who look up to you for guidance and protection will take pleasure in approaching to God, and, through the experience of the peace of walking with the wise, will be taught to abhor the enticements of sinners, and to hold fast that which is good? And even in the case of those who, through perversity of heart, and the snares of an evil world, have forsaken the path of integrity and truth, may it not be hoped that the wise counsels which they have for a season forgotten, and the devotional habits which they have long failed to imitate, will, like the bread cast upon the waters, be found after many days? Small must have been your experience of the discipline of Providence, if you have never known so much as one who had wandered so far from the way of peace as to disappoint the earnest expectations of his father, and to turn the joy of her who bare him into bitterness, but who, after his own wickedness had corrected him, and his backslidings reproved him, has been awakened to new obedience, by recalling to his agonized mind, with reverential awe, the solemn image of the parental guide, in whose quiet habitation the daily exercises of prayer and praise hallowed every pursuit, lightened every care, soothed every sorrow, and seasoned every enjoyment, so as to render the voice of rejoicing and salvation in the tabernacles of the righteous a lively type of the blessed conversation of heaven, and a delicious foretaste of the fellowship of the saints in light.

If ye know these things by your own experience, or by the incontrovertible testimony of them who have tasted that the Lord is gracious, happy are ye if ye do them. Nor can you have peace and safety if, knowing what is good, you leave it undone.

And while you present your supplications for yourselves and your families, forget not the eternal concerns of the families which call not on the name of God. If it be, as it ought to be, your hearts' desire that they may be brought to the obedience of the Gospel, brethren, pray for us, and for all the ministers of the truth, that the word of the Lord may have free course and be glorified, even as it is with you. Such an intercession as this will assuredly prove efficacious towards the enlargement of the household of faith, if all of you, both small and great, not only in the congregations of the upright, who, in heaviness of heart, sigh for the abounding of iniquity and the failing of truth, but in your families apart, and in your unseen retirements, prostrate yourselves at the footstool of your Father in heaven, who seeth in secret, and pour out your desires before him in that effectual fervent importunity which, like the long and patient waiting of the husbandman for the precious fruit of the earth, will, according to the sure word of promise, issue in plenteous showers of blessings, not confined to any favoured spot, or any privileged community, but dropping down fertility far and wide, over fields co-extensive with the inhabited world, filled as it shall be in that evening-time of light with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea; and thus the God of the whole earth, in remembrance of his holy covenant, and in fulfilment of the good pleasure of his goodness, will arise and have mercy, not only on the mountain of holiness, in which he had his dwelling in time past, but on all in every place who call on the name of Jesus Christ our Lord; so that, while he clothes his priests with salvation, and makes his people shout for joy, the ways of Zion, which have mourned, because few came to the solemn feasts, shall be thronged with the multitudes who keep the holy day with thanksgiving in their hearts, and the high praises of God in their mouths,—wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of those times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, when his work shall appear before the face of his servants, and his glory to their children; and they that fear the Lord, being all replenished with the riches of grace, shall take that sweet counsel together which revives the inward part, and knits the brotherhood of Christians in the unity of the faith and the holy bond of perfectness. “Then shall the offering of his people be pleasant unto the Lord as in the days of old, and as in former years.” “And the Lord will create upon every dwelling-place of Mount Zion, and upon her assemblies, a cloud and smoke by day, and the shining of a flaming fire by night; for upon all the glory shall be a defence.”

Sess. ult., May 30, 1836.—Act recommending Collections for the Four Schemes of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly, considering the obligation which lies on this Church to promote to the utmost extent of the means wherewith God hath entrusted them, the progress of the Gospel of Christ among our own people, our brethren in the colonies, and the heathen throughout the world; and considering farther, how greatly our efforts have been impeded from a want of due arrangements for properly collecting the contributions of our several congregations, and confiding in the liberality and Christian zeal, were fit occasions regularly presented to them for contributing to the advancement of the four great Schemes now prosecuted by the Church, and recited in the Overtures above mentioned, earnestly recommend to all the ministers of this Church to make collections on behalf of each of these objects, viz. (1.) The Church Extension Scheme; (2.) Colonial Churches; (3.) Education; (4.) Foreign Missions. And the Assembly direct, that within eight days after each collection every minister shall transmit to the clerk of his Presbytery a return of the amount of the collection in his parish; and the said clerk shall communicate to the committee of Assembly for the Scheme for which the collection is made a statement of the whole returns within his Presbytery; and that the committees for the several Schemes shall annually re port jointly to the Assembly the collections of the several Presbyteries for each of the said objects, with the names of the ministers who have failed to make the collections as recommended. Farther, the General Assembly appoint every minister, on the Sabbath immediately preceding that on which each collection is to be made, to give due intimation thereof from the pulpit, accompanied with such information on the object of the collection as he may deem fitting; and they earnestly urge on their faithful people seriously to consider the duty under which they lie liberally to contribute towards the advancement of Christ's cause, according to the means wherewith God has blessed them. And, finally, the General Assembly appoint this Act to be read on every Sabbath when intimation of a collection is given as aforesaid.

Sess. 6, May 24, 1837.—Act in favour of India Missions.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland did, and hereby do, nominate and appoint the ministers of the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and the following elders, who are members of Assembly, viz., James Stark, Esq., &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts, and for managing the funds subscribed and given for that purpose, with the whole powers conferred by former Acts of Assembly, and with power also to appoint sub-committees; and particularly, a sub-committee of their number, consisting of nine, for more effectually furthering the great end in view. Of the general committee, nine are hereby declared to be a quorum; and of the sub-committee to be appointed, three are hereby declared to be a quorum. The committee shall hold stated monthly meetings for dispatch of business in the Presbytery Hall, or other suitable place, on the first Monday of every month, at two o'clock, with power always to adjourn as shall be needful; and to meet on all occasions when urgent business shall demand. And the said general committee are hereby enjoined and required, by themselves, and through their sub-committee, to attend to the instructions and regulations formerly approved by the General Assembly for the propagation of the Gospel abroad; with power to make and carry into effect such farther regulations, and to adopt such measures as to them may seem most beneficial, such farther regulations, and the measures adopted, to be submitted to next Assembly; and the said general committee are hereby appointed to report their diligence, and that of their sub-committee, in calling forth the benevolence and support of the Christian public of Scotland, their prudence in the expenditure of the funds obtained, and generally their management, and the success and extent of their operations in foreign parts. The General Assembly renew their former recommendations to the ministers throughout the Church, that they continue their exertions in aid of the funds of the mission, and earnestly recommend that in every parish there be a collection yearly on behalf of this important cause; and that one minister in every Presbytery be appointed to receive contributions, and transmit them to the treasurer.

*Sess. ult., May 29, 1837.—Overture and Interim Act, with Regulations for carrying into effect the Act of Assembly, May 29, 1835, on the Calling of Ministers.

Whereas the General Assembly have declared, enacted, and ordained, in terms of their Act, passed into a Law of the Church on the 29th May 1835, on the subject of

* The following is the notice respecting the transmission of this Overture and Interim Act:—

“The Report on the Regulations in reference to the Overtures and Interim Acts relating to the Calling of Ministers was given in by Lord Moncreiff and read. It was moved and seconded, That the words after ‘provided,’ in the 8th regulation, under the second head, shall be omitted. It was also moved and seconded, That the Assembly approve of the report of the Committee as amended, and transmit the regulations to the Presbyteries, convert them into an Interim Act, renew the Committee on these regulations, and enjoin Presbyteries to transmit their suggestions as to these regulations to that Committee, on or before the 1st of March, that the whole may be deliberately considered, and a report made to the next Assembly. A vote being taken, the second motion was carried by a majority of 115 to 76.”—Ed. 1843.

the Calling of Ministers; and whereas it is necessary, for regulating the forms of proceeding under that Act, that some precise and definite rules should be laid down, the General Assembly do, therefore, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, declare, enact, and ordain, that the following directions and regulations shall be observed:—

I. RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN MAKING UP AND ADJUSTING THE ROLL TO BE USED IN THE MODERATION OF CALLS.

1. That at the first meeting of any Presbytery after a vacancy occurring in any parish, or on any application regularly brought before the Presbytery for the appointment of an assistant and successor, the Presbytery shall ascertain that a roll of the members of the kirk-session and male heads of families, being members of the congregation, and communicants in the church, has been completed in the manner herein after directed; and that, if such a roll has been made, they shall proceed to purge the same, by striking off the names of all persons who shall be ascertained to be dead, or to have ceased to be members of the congregation, or to be under Church censures.

2. That in case a roll has not been so completed, they shall, at that meeting, appoint one of their number to act as moderator, with the elders of the parish, to constitute a kirk-session, or, where there are no elders, two or more of their own number, to act as a kirk-session, in making up a roll in terms of the regulations hereby enacted, and shall ordain the said roll, duly attested, to be produced to them at their next meeting, or any special meeting to be appointed for that purpose.

3. That in no case shall the day for moderating in the call be appointed until the roll shall have been completed, and purged to the satisfaction of the Presbytery.

4. That in order to ascertain definitively the persons entitled, at any particular time, to give in dissents, every kirk-session which has not already made up a roll, in conformity with the enactment of last General Assembly, shall, within three months of the rising of this present General Assembly, make up a roll of the members of the kirk-session, and of the male heads of families who are members of the congregation, and in country parishes resident within the same, and who are, at the date thereof, and have been for at least twelve months previous thereto, in full communion with the church; but declaring, that, in the special case where new churches have been erected ecclesiastically, persons who are heritors or tenants, having a legal right to sittings in the original parish church, and who continue to be members of that congregation, shall be entered on the roll of the said original church, though resident in that part of the parish which has been disjoined from it. And, lest any doubts should arise as to who are heads of families, it is hereby declared, that the term includes unmarried men and widowers, as well as married men, provided they occupy houses of which they are proprietors or tenants, and eldest sons when their fathers are deceased, provided they are of the age of twenty-one years or upwards, and reside in the same house with their mothers, they being always in full communion with the Church.

5. That the roll so made up shall be open to inspection, in the hands of the session-clerk, by any parishioner or member of the congregation, for the space of one week, of which notice shall be given from the pulpit, and thereafter shall be authenticated by the moderator and session-clerk, and then transmitted to the Presbytery; and after being inspected by the Presbytery, and countersigned on each page by the moderator, shall be returned to the kirk-session, and form part of its record for the foresaid purposes.

6. That the said roll shall be revised and re-adjusted, in conformity with rule fourth, immediately after the occasion of dispensing the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in the parish, which shall have last preceded the 22d of November in each year, and shall be open for inspection in the same manner as before, and shall be re-transmitted to the Presbytery before the expiry of the second week of December.

7. That the said list or roll, as last revised before the vacancy in the parish, or before any application, as aforesaid, for the appointment of an assistant and successor, where a roll has been duly made up, revised, and authenticated, after being examined and purged, as above provided, or the roll made up immediately after such vacancy or application, where none had been made before, shall be the only roll for determining the persons entitled to be reckoned in any dissents to be offered against the admission of any presentee to be minister, in the moderating in a call; but it shall still be the duty of the Presbytery to remove from the said roll the names of all persons who may have died, removed from the parish, or who are under Church censures, previous to the time appointed for moderating in the call.

II. RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN MODERATING IN THE CALL.

For Admitting Dissents.

1. That when a presentation shall be received by the moderator of a Presbytery, he shall, within two days after it comes to his hand, call a meeting of Presbytery, to take place not less than eight, nor more than twelve, days from the date of such intimation; provided that no meeting of Presbytery shall have been already fixed to take place within three weeks; and that if such meeting has been appointed, he shall merely give notice that the presentation has been received, and will be laid on the table at that meeting.

2. That when any Presbytery shall be prepared to appoint a day for moderating in a call to the person presented, they shall appoint one of their own number to preach in the church of the parish on a day not later than the second Sabbath thereafter; that he shall on that day intimate, from the pulpit, that the person presented will preach in that church on the first convenient Sabbath, so as it be not later than the third Sabbath after such intimation, and also on some other Sabbath; and that he shall, at the same time, intimate, that on another day to be fixed, not later than the next Friday after the day last appointed for the presentee to preach, the Presbytery will proceed, within the said church, to moderate in a call to such person to be minister of the said parish in the usual way; but that the Presbytery, if they deem it expedient, may appoint the presentee to preach oftener than twice, provided that the day for moderating in the call be not more than six weeks after that on which it was appointed.

3. That on the day appointed for moderating in the call the Presbytery shall, in the first instance, proceed in the same manner in which they were in use to proceed before the passing of the Act of Assembly, 1835, anent Calls.

4. That if there shall not be dissents by a major part of the persons standing on the roll, made up and regulated in manner herein before directed, and if no special objections be made, the Presbytery shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement of the presentee according to the rules of the Church.

5. That if dissents are tendered by any of the persons whose names stand on the roll above referred to, such dissents shall either be personally delivered in writing by each of the persons dissenting separately, or taken down from his oral statement by the Moderator or Clerk of the Presbytery; but that no person shall be entitled so to dissent who shall have previously petitioned the patron for the appointment of the person presented, it being always open to him to state special objections at the proper time.

6. That if the dissents so lodged do not amount in number to the major part of the persons standing on the roll, and if there be no special objection requiring consideration stated, the Presbytery shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement according to the rules of the Church.

7. That if it shall be found that dissents have been lodged by an apparent majority of the persons on the said roll, the Presbytery shall adjourn the proceedings to another meeting, to be held at some place within the vacant parish, not less than ten free days, nor more than fourteen, thereafter; and that it shall be competent to the patron or presentee, or any person duly authorised to act in their behalf, or to any member of Presbytery, as soon as the day of the said adjourned meeting shall be appointed, to require, by a notice given apud acta, all or any of the persons dissenting, to appear at the meeting so appointed, and then and there to declare, in terms of the Act of Assembly, 1835, viz. :—“ That he is actuated by no factious or malicious motives, but solely by a conscientious regard to the spiritual interest of himself or the congregation;” and that if any person having so dissented shall fail to attend at the said meeting, or shall refuse to declare in the terms required, the name of such person shall be struck off the list of persons dissenting: And, in order that the notice thus appointed to be given apud acta may be effectual, the Presbytery shall, in the commencement of the proceedings, give intimation that all persons who may intend to dissent must remain till the termination of the proceedings of the day; and that, whether they remain or not, the notice, if ultimately given, shall be held as having been duly given apud acta. Provided also, that if, from any cause, the proceedings of the said first meeting for moderating the call shall not be completed on that day, the notice apud acta shall still be competent and effectual as soon as the Presbytery shall appoint the second day of meeting.

8. That it shall not be competent to receive any dissents, except such as shall be duly given in at the meeting for moderating in the call, as above provided; but it shall be competent to any person who may have lodged a dissent at that meeting, to withdraw such dissent at any time before the Presbytery shall have given judgment on the effect of the dissents.

9. That in case the Presbytery shall, at the said second meeting, at last find that there is not a majority of persons on the roll dissenting, and if no special objections be stated, they shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement according to the rules of the Church: But if the Presbytery shall find that there is a major part of the persons on the roll dissenting, they shall reject the person presented, so far as regards the particular presentation, and the occasion of that vacancy in the parish; and shall, within two days thereafter, intimate this their determination to the patron, the presentee, and the elders of the parish.

For receiving Special Objections.

10. That if, at the meeting for moderating in the call, dissents by a majority on the roll shall not be stated, and if any special objections to the settlement of the person presented, of whatever nature such objections may be, shall then be stated to the Presbytery by any person entitled to object by the general laws of the Church; and if such objections appear to be deserving of deliberate consideration or investigation, the Presbytery shall delay the farther proceedings in the settlement till another meeting, to be then appointed, not later than eight days thereafter, and give notice apud acta to all parties concerned then to attend, that they may be heard.

11. That if the special objections so stated affect the moral character or the doctrine of the presentee, so that, if they were established, he would be deprived of his licence, or of his situation in the Church, the objectors shall proceed by libel, and the Presbytery shall take the steps usual in such cases.

12. That if the special objections relate to the insufficiency or unfitness of the presentee for the particular charge to which he has been appointed, the objectors shall not be required to become libellers, but shall simply deliver, in writing, their specific grounds for objecting to the settlement, and shall have full liberty to substantiate the same; upon all which the presentee shall have an opportunity to be fully heard, and shall have all competent means of defence. That the Presbytery shall then consider these special objections, and if it shall appear that they are not sufficient, or not well-founded, they shall proceed to the settlement of the presentee according to the rules of the Church: But if the Presbytery shall be satisfied that the objector or objectors have established that the presentee is not fitted, usefully and sufficiently, to discharge the pastoral duties in that parish, then they shall find that he is not qualified, and shall, within two days thereafter, intimate the same to the patron; it being always in the power of the different parties to appeal from the sentence pronounced by the Presbytery, if they shall see cause.

13. That the Presbytery shall not receive such special objections in any case until after it has been finally ascertained whether there are dissents by a majority of the persons on the roll; but it shall always be competent, as soon as this is ascertained, to state special objections.

III. RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN THE ULTIMATE PROCEEDINGS.

1. That if the Presbytery shall have rejected the presentee, and if the patron shall give a presentation to another person within the time limited by law, the proceedings shall again take place in the same manner as above laid down, and so on, in regard to successive presentations within the time.

2. That if no presentation shall be given within the limited time to a person from whose settlement a majority on the roll do not dissent, or who shall not be excluded in consequence of special objections, the Presbytery shall then supply the vacancy, tanquam jure devoluto.

3. That cases of settlement by the Presbytery jure devoluto shall not fall under the operation of the regulations in this and the relative Act of Assembly, but shall be proceeded in according to the general laws of the Church applicable to such cases. But every person who shall have been previously rejected in that parish, shall be considered as disqualified to be inducted into that parish on the occasion of that vacancy.

4. That, in case any appeal shall be taken against any judgment or proceeding of the Presbytery, previous to the time when they are prepared either to proceed to the settlement, or to declare the presentee to be disqualified and reject the presentation, such appeal shall not sist procedure; but the Presbytery, if they resolve to proceed to the settlement, shall delay doing so till the appeal be disposed of; and if they reject the presentee, it shall be still competent to him to discuss the merits of any appeal which may have been duly entered.

IV. TIME EXTENDED IN DISTANT SYNODS, &c.

Application of this Act, and renewal of former Acts.

1. That in the districts of Orkney and Zetland, the Synod of Glenelg, and the Synod of Argyle, the number of days appointed by this Act with regard to meetings, and for other purposes, may, if it be thought expedient by the Presbytery, be made double the number above provided, or any other number not less than that prescribed in the above regulations.

2. That the regulations in this Act shall be applied to all cases of vacancies in which the Presbytery has not already appointed a day for moderating in the call; but the General Assembly hereby renew and continue the Interim Act with regulations, enacted and transmitted by last Assembly, in regard to all cases in which the day for moderating in the call may have been already appointed, and also the Interim Act of Assembly, 1835, as to all cases previously falling under it; declaring these Acts to be still in force as to all such cases respectively, but no others.

3. That the Presbyteries of the Church are hereby enjoined to use all diligence to see that the regulations hereby laid down are duly observed and followed out; and also to use their utmost endeavours to bring about harmony and unanimity in congregations, and be at pains to avoid every thing which may excite or encourage unreasonable exceptions in people against a worthy person, who may be proposed to be their minister.

The General Assembly transmit the above Overture and Regulations to Presbyteries for their consideration; and, in the mean time, they convert the same into an Interim Act.

The General Assembly, in transmitting this revised and amended Overture, &c. (Same as last year.)

VIII.

Sess. ult., May 29, 1837.—Act anent the Annual Examination of Students of Divinity.

The General Assembly, on the report of the Committee for classing Returns to Overtures, pass into a Standing Law the Overture anent the Annual Examination of Students of Divinity, which has received the approbation of a majority of the Presbyteries.

Whereas it is of primary importance to the interest of religion in the Church, that those who are preparing for the office of the ministry should be in every respect well qualified for that office, and that the Church should have every possible evidence of their being so, before they are licensed to preach the Gospel as probationers; and whereas it would evidently tend to promote these important objects to place them, as much as possible, during the whole period of their theological studies, under the superintendence of the Presbyteries at whose hands they have the prospect of receiving licence; the General Assembly enact and ordain, that every Student of Divinity be examined by the Presbytery within whose bounds he resides, not only previous to his being first enrolled as a Student of Divinity, and again, in certain cases, in the third year of his attendance at the Hall, but that he be examined every year; and that he be required to produce to the Professor of Divinity every session of his attendance at the Hall, a certificate from the Presbytery of his having been examined by them on the progress made by him in his studies, and of the Presbytery's satisfaction with the same, as well as a certificate of his good moral character from the minister of the parish, before he can be enrolled.

IX.

Sess. ult., May 29, 1837.—Act for the Examination of Students on the Catechetical Standards of the Church.

The General Assembly, with the consent of the Presbyteries of the Church, as reported by the Committee for classing Returns to Overtures, enacts and ordains as follows:—

Whereas it is of great importance that all who are about to enter upon a course of study, with a view to the exercise of the holy ministry, should possess a good general knowledge of the truths of Scripture; and whereas the Act of Assembly, 1827, by which students are appointed to be examined by their respective Presbyteries, previous to their enrolment as Students of Divinity, merely specifies “literature, science, and philosophy, particularly Greek and Latin,” as the subjects of examination; it is enacted and ordained by the General Assembly, that all students, previous to their first enrolment at the Divinity Hall, shall likewise be examined by their respective Presbyteries upon their knowledge of the Christian religion, as it is exhibited in the Catechetical Standards of the Church; and shall produce to the Professors of Divinity under whom their studies are to be conducted, certificates from their Presbyteries, bearing that they have passed such examination in a satisfactory manner.

XII.

Sess. ult., May 29, 1837.—Act requiring Synod Clerks to send up their Books.

The General Assembly enjoin the clerks of the several Synods, whose books have not been produced to this Assembly, to send them up to the Commission in August; and the Assembly give power to the Commission to revise and attest the said books.

XIII.

Sess. ult., May 29, 1837.—Act recommending Collections for the Four Schemes of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, considering the obligation which lies on this Church to promote, to the utmost extent of the means wherewith God hath entrusted them, the progress of the Gospel of Christ among their own people, their brethren in the colonies, and the heathen throughout the world; and considering farther, how greatly their efforts have been impeded from a want of due arrangements for properly collecting the contributions of their several congregations, and confiding in their liberality and Christian zeal, were fit occasions regularly presented to them for contributing to the advancement of the four great Schemes now prosecuted by the Church, earnestly recommend to all the ministers of this Church to make collections on behalf of each of these objects, viz., (1.) The Church Extension Scheme; (2.) Colonial Churches; (3.) Education; (4.) Foreign Missions. And the Assembly direct, that, within eight days after each collection, every minister shall transmit to the clerk of his Presbytery a return of the amount of the collection in his parish, specifying whether it is the fruit of a collection for one of the said objects alone, or for two or more, and which of the said objects; and that the said clerk shall communicate to the committees of Assembly for the several Schemes a statement of the whole returns within his Presbytery; and that the said committees shall annually report, jointly to the Assembly, the collections of the several Presbyteries for each of the said objects: And the Assembly appoint every minister, on the Sabbath immediately preceding that on which each collection is to be made, to give due intimation thereof from the pulpit, accompanied with such information on the object of the collection as he may deem fitting: Farther, the General Assembly strongly recommend, that in all parishes, but especially in those in which circumstances may render a separate collection for each of the four objects inexpedient, parochial subscriptions, by means of parochial associations or otherwise, be promoted and encouraged, the funds collected to be appropriated to the several objects, in such proportions as the contributors shall appoint, and failing any appointment by them, as shall be directed by the minister and session; and that all Presbyteries of the Church adopt the measure already beneficially carried into execution in several parts of the country, and of which the Assembly highly approve, of appointing a yearly meeting of Presbytery, of which due intimation shall be given in all the parish churches within its bounds, and which the public shall be invited to attend, in order to afford to every minister of the Presbytery an opportunity of stating what has been done within his parish in furtherance of the said objects, and to give to the persons present, by means of addresses, by one or two of the members specially appointed for that purpose, such information as to the progress of Christianity, at home and abroad, as may be best calculated to arouse the benevolence of the Christian public, and to maintain their interest in the prosperity of the said objects. And the Assembly earnestly urge on their faithful people seriously to consider the duty of contributing liberally towards the advancement of Christ's cause, according to the ability wherewith God has blessed them: And, finally, the General Assembly appoint the minister of every parish within the bounds of this Church to read this Act from the pulpit on the first Sabbath of July next to come, or where there is no service on that day, or where it is the communion Sabbath, on the first Sabbath thereafter.

VICTORIA, &c.

II.

Sess. 1, May 17, 1838.—Her Majesty's Letter to the General Assembly.

VICTORIA, R.

Right Reverend and Well-beloved, we greet you well.—Relying on the numerous proofs which you have already exhibited of your adherence to the succession of the Crown in our family, and the general interests and advancement of the Presbyterian religion, we most willingly renew to you the solemn obligations by which we bound ourselves, on our succession to our throne, to maintain the Presbyterian Church of Scotland in all its rights and privileges, as by law established.

Questions of deep importance will probably engage the attention of your venerable body at your ensuing meeting, and we would earnestly remind you, that the diffusion of religious peace will be best promoted, and the respect of our Scottish people most firmly secured to your proceedings, by their discussion in that tone of calmness and moderation which befits the members of a religious assembly.

We entrust into your hands with confidence, arising from past experience, the care of the moral and religious instruction of our people, which we are always anxious to promote; and we feel assured that neither in your deliberations in Assembly, nor in your separate localities, will this great duty ever be lost sight of.

We are likewise persuaded that no pains will be spared to inculcate on your respective flocks the duty of subordination to their temporal rulers, and the necessity of obedience to their lawful magistrates.

Being well satisfied with the loyalty, integrity, and zeal for our service, of our right trusty and well-beloved Robert Montgomery Lord Belhaven, we have appointed him to represent our Royal person in this Assembly.

You have already experienced his ability to discharge the important trust, and we are persuaded that the anxiety to promote the interests of the Church of Scotland which you have observed in him, cannot fail to render the choice of him most acceptable to you.

Not doubting that charity and brotherly love will pervade your deliberations, we commend you to the guidance of Almighty God; and so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 7th day of May 1838, in the first year of our reign.

By her Majesty's Command,

J. RUSSELL.

III.

Sess. 3, May 19, 1838.—The General Assembly's Answer to the Queen's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most gracious letter has been received by us with sentiments of lively satisfaction and gratitude. Firmly attached to the Protestant faith, we have ever adhered to your Illustrious Family; and we rejoice to know that your Majesty recognises the attachment which your loyal subjects feel towards your Royal House, as intimately connected with their attachment to the Protestant faith; and that your Majesty has willingly renewed the solemn obligation to maintain the Church of Scotland in all its rights and privileges, as by law established.

The questions which will engage our attention in this Assembly are of deep importance to the people of Scotland, and we trust that, in our discussions, our calmness and moderation shall be known and manifest to all men, and that our decisions may thereby promote the peace of society, and secure the respect of the people committed to our charge.

Having been entrusted with the spiritual interests of the people of Scotland, we receive with heartfelt joy the expression of your Majesty's anxiety to promote their moral and religious instruction, and of your confidence, from past experience, in the manner in which we shall acquit ourselves of that sacred trust, which we are bound by our ordination vows to fulfil; and it is our earnest prayer that we may never, either in our public deliberations, or in the discharge of our duties in our separate localities, lose sight of that great object in the attainment of which, every inhabitant in this part of your Majesty's dominions may know and believe the truth as it is in Jesus.

Your Majesty may rest assured that no pains will be spared by us to inculcate on our respective flocks submission to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, and to recommend to them, under the happy form of government with which they have been blessed, to lead quiet and peaceable lives, in all godliness and honesty.

The appointment of Lord Belhaven to represent your Royal person in this Assembly is most acceptable to us. Our knowledge of the purity of his character, and our past experience of the ability, and of the kindness and urbanity with which he has discharged the duties of his high office, have gained for him the respect and the attachment of the members of our Church.

We have received with sincere gratitude your Majesty's donation of £.2000 in aid of the education of the inhabitants of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland; and it shall be our anxious desire to apply this sum in such a manner as may best promote the religious and moral ends for which it has been bestowed.

In all our deliberations, it is our fervent prayer, that Almighty God may guide us, and that He may give us that wisdom which cometh from above, so that brotherly love may continue among us.

That He, by whom Kings reign, and who in His mercy has raised your Majesty to rule over this great people, may long preserve you to be a blessing to this nation;—that He may give you to enjoy all comfort in the duties of your exalted station;—and that He may endue you with grace to be found faithful in the high trust which He has committed to you;—and that, being found faithful, you may be blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, and may finally receive a crown of life in the kingdom of our Lord and Saviour, is the earnest and devout prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most dutiful, and most loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and by our appointment,

WILLIAM MUIR, Moderator.

IV.

Sess. 6, May 23, 1838.—The General Assembly's Address to the Queen on her Accession to the Throne of these Realms.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY,

The loyal and dutiful Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, representing the several Presbyteries, Universities, and Royal Burghs, in this first General Assembly since your Majesty's accession, eagerly seize this occasion now presented to us, of expressing our condolence with your Majesty, and the Royal Family, on the death of our late beloved Sovereign, and offering our cordial congratulations on your Majesty's elevation to the throne of your ancestors.

Approving of the promptitude with which the Commission of the last General Assembly instructed a deputation of their number to convey to your Majesty their assurances of devoted attachment, and concurring entirely in the sentiments expressed by them, we have felt highly gratified by their report of your Majesty's favourable reception of that act of homage performed by the representatives of this National Church.

In looking back to the peaceful reign which was closed last year, we feel ourselves bound to express our thankfulness to the Supreme Ruler, in whose hand are the hearts of kings, and by whose power our late illustrious Monarch was enabled to fulfil the duties of his lofty station with such fidelity and mildness, as to secure the affections of all classes of his subjects, whose unfeigned grief at his departure was a strong testimony of the respectful feelings with which they had contemplated his amiable character and tranquil administration.

It has afforded us most sincere gratification to perceive how cordially the inhabitants of the United Kingdom have hailed your Majesty's assumption of the regal power, and how universal has been the admiration of the mature dignity and gracefulness with which, in early youth, the functions of government have been sustained by a sovereign Princess, who possesses so many hereditary as well as personal claims on their fealty.

It is our earnest hope that, through the Divine grace, your Majesty will be so guided and strengthened, under the solitudes of greatness, that the fulfilment of the most arduous duties may prove a source of unfailling satisfaction to your own heart, and of the most substantial benefits to your subjects.

It has been most pleasing to us to learn how cheerfully the constitutional pledge, required by the Act of Union, was proffered by your Majesty, to maintain and preserve inviolably the settlement of the true Protestant religion, with the government, worship, discipline, rights, and privileges, of the Church of Scotland, as established by the laws of the land; laws which were framed for the purpose of securing to this National Establishment the same privileges which are enjoyed by any other branch of the Protestant Church in the British dominions. The attachment of the people of Scotland to the Family from which your Majesty is descended was founded originally on their known zeal for the cause of the Reformation; and they have ever regarded the stability of this august House as, under Providence, one of the bulwarks of the Protestant faith, and of the inestimable benefits of civil and religious freedom.

Actuated by these views and principles, we account it a sacred duty to encourage and exhort the people under our charge to maintain their loyalty to your Majesty unshaken, and to render that willing obedience to the laws which the precepts of the Gospel require, not only for wrath but for conscience sake.

That the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ may multiply to your Majesty all temporal blessings, and enrich you with the treasures of grace;—that He may establish your throne in righteousness, and teach your senators wisdom;—that there may be peace and truth in your days;—and that, when our posterity shall walk about Sion, remembering her towers and considering her palaces, they may have cause to speak of the wisdom and knowledge which were the stability of the times, when a Protestant Queen, who had been taught to fear the Lord from her youth, was a nursing mother to the Churches, which putting on charity, the bond of perfectness, and keeping the unity of the Spirit, had rest and were multiplied; and above all, that when the lustre of temporal power shall have faded away, you may receive an inheritance with those that are sanctified, in that kingdom which shall not be moved, is the hearts' desire and prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and by our appointment,

WILLIAM MUIR, Moderator.

V.

Sess. 6, May 23, 1838.—The General Assembly's Address to the Queen Dowager on the Death of his late Majesty.

To her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen Dowager,

We, the ministers and elders of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, calling to mind the cordiality with which a former Assembly congratulated your Majesty on the occasion of your being raised to the eminent distinction of sharing the honours of the British throne, cannot now refrain from the expression of our heartfelt sympathy and condolence, on the afflicting reverse which has deprived your Majesty of an affectionate husband, and the nation of a patriotic Monarch, whose heart was devoted to the welfare of his people.

We trust that your Majesty, under the pressure of the heavy bereavement with which you have been visited, has experienced, in abundant measure, the efficacy of the consolations of our holy faith; and that, while mourning over a loss which time cannot supply, your heart has been taught to rejoice in the victory over the grave, secured to all the faithful by that Divine Prince and Saviour, who, by taking away sin, the sting of death, has abolished and destroyed the power of the last enemy, and brought life and immortality to light.

That it may please the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of Glory, who is the Prince of the kings of the earth, and the Judge of the widow, from his holy habitation to pour out on your Majesty the choicest gifts of his Holy Spirit, and shed abroad in your heart that love which passeth knowledge, enabling you, amid the trials of life, to rejoice in the hope of the glory which is yet to be revealed, in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, where all who have died in faith shall be kings and priests unto God, and shall reign for ever and ever, are the earnest prayers of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most obedient, and most devoted servants, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and by our appointment,

WILLIAM MUIR, Modcrator.

*Sess. 9, May 26, 1838.—Act on the Conversion of the Jews.

The General Assembly, having heard the Report of the Committee on the Conversion of the Jews to the faith of Christ, approve of the same, acknowledge the high importance of using means for the conversion of God's ancient people, and recommend the object to the attention of the Church; and that the ministers, in their preaching and public prayers, more frequently avail themselves of opportunities of noticing the claims of the Jews; and without recommending a general collection, appoint the following ministers and elders, viz.. the Moderator, &c.; to be a committee, of which Dr Macgill shall be convener, with power to appoint sub-committees; the said committee to receive, and prudently expend, any contributions which may voluntarily be made by individuals, associations, or parishes, towards this object. Appoint the committee to collect information respecting the Jews, their numbers, condition, and character,—what means have hitherto been employed by the Christian Church for their spiritual good, and with what success,—whether there are any openings for a mission to their nation, and where these are most promising,—and, generally, with full power to take all prudent measures, both at home and abroad, for the advancement of the cause, and report to next General Assembly.

IX.

Sess. 7, May 24, 1838.—Act in favour of India Missions.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland did, and hereby do, nominate and appoint the ministers of the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and the following elders, who are members of Assembly, viz., James Stark, Esq., &c.; to be a committee for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts, and for managing the funds subscribed and given for that purpose, in any manner of way, with the whole powers conferred by former Acts of Assembly; with power also to appoint a sub-committee of their number in Edinburgh, consisting of nine, for more effectually furthering the grand end in view. Of the general committee nine shall be a quorum, and of the sub-committee three are hereby declared a quorum. The general committee shall hold stated monthly meetings, for dispatch of business, on the first Monday of every month, at two o'clock, with power always to adjourn, as shall be needful, and to meet on all occasions when needful business shall demand. And the said general committee are hereby enjoined and required, by themselves, and through their sub-committees, to attend to the instructions and regulations formerly approved by the General Assembly for the propagation of the Gospel abroad, with power to make and carry into effect such farther regulations, and to adopt such measures as to them may seem most beneficial; such farther regulations, and the measures adopted, to be submitted to next Assembly. And the said general committee are hereby appointed to report their diligence, and that of their sub-committees, in calling forth the benevolence and support of the Christian public in Scotland, their prudence in the expenditure of the funds obtained, and generally their management, and the success and extent of their operations in foreign parts. The General Assembly renew their former recommendations to the ministers throughout the Church, that they continue their exertions, and put forth farther exertions, in aid of the funds of the mission, and earnestly recommend that in every parish there be a collection yearly on behalf of this most important cause.

X.

Sess. ult., May 28, 1838.—Act recommending Collections for the Four Schemes of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, considering the obligation which lies on this Church to promote, to the utmost extent of the means with which God hath entrusted them, the progress of the Gospel of Christ among their own people, their brethren in the colonies, and the heathen throughout the world; and considering farther, how greatly their efforts have been impeded from a want of due arrangements for properly collecting the contributions of their several congregations, and confiding in their liberality and Christian zeal, were fit occasions regularly presented to them for contributing to the advancement of the four great Schemes now prosecuted by the Church, earnestly recommend to all the ministers of this Church to make collections on behalf of each of these objects, viz. ; (1.) Colonial Churches ; (2.) Education ; (3.) Foreign Missions ; (4.) The Church Extension Scheme ; and the Assembly direct, that the committees of Assembly for the several Schemes shall make up a joint state of the whole collections of the several Presbyteries for each of the said objects, up to the first day of June in each year, and that each committee shall publish the same in an appendix to their annual reports. And the Assembly appoint every minister, on the Sabbath immediately preceding that on which each collection is to be made, to give due intimation thereof from the pulpit, accompanied with such information on the object of the collection as he may deem fitting : Farther, the General Assembly strongly recommend that in all parishes, but especially in those in which circumstances may render a separate collection for each of the four objects inexpedient, parochial subscriptions, by means of parochial associations or otherwise, be promoted and encouraged, the funds collected to be appropriated to the several objects, in such proportions as the contributors shall appoint, and failing any appointment by them, as shall be directed by the minister and session ; and that all Presbyteries of the Church adopt the measure already beneficially carried into execution in several parts of the country, and of which the Assembly highly approve, of appointing a yearly meeting of Presbytery, of which due intimation shall be given in all the parish churches within its bounds, and which the public shall be invited to attend, in order to afford to every minister of the Presbytery an opportunity of stating what has been done within his parish in furtherance of the said objects, and to give to the persons present, by means of addresses by one or two of the members specially appointed for that purpose, such information as to the progress of Christianity at home and abroad, as may be best calculated to arouse the benevolence of the Christian public, and to maintain their interest in the prosperity of the said objects ; and, particularly, the General Assembly appoint the several Presbyteries to require an account of the diligence of all the ministers within their bounds in this matter, and to record the report of every minister in their Presbytery-books ; and likewise ordain the several Synods to take a particular account of the diligence of their respective Presbyteries, and to record it in their Synod-books. And the Assembly earnestly urge on their faithful people seriously to consider the duty of contributing liberally towards the advancement of Christ's cause, according to the ability wherewith God has blessed them.

The General Assembly appoint the minister of every parish within the bounds of this Church to read this Act from the pulpit on the first Sabbath of July next to come, or where there is no service on that day, or where it is the communion Sabbath, on the first Sabbath thereafter.

XI.

Sess. ult., May 28, 1838.—Act anent the Election of Commissioners to the General Assembly from the Presbyteries of the Northern and Western Islands of Scotland.

The General Assembly enacts and ordains, That, in respect of the situation of the Northern and Western Islands frequently rendering it difficult or impossible for the Presbyteries in these Islands to assemble on particular days during the months of winter and spring, it shall be competent for these Presbyteries to elect their Commissioners to the General Assembly at any time before the first day of May in each year, due notice of the intention to elect having been given fifteen days preceding.

XII.

Sess. ult., May 28, 1838.—Act anent the Appointment and Ordination of Professors of Theology.

The General Assembly, on the Report of the Committee for classing Returns to Overtures, having found that the Overture anent the appointment and ordination of Professors of Theology has received the approbation of a majority of the Presbyteries of the Church, did, and hereby do, enact the said Overture into a Standing Law of the Church, as follows:—

Whereas, by the law and practice of this National Church, Professors of Theology are declared to be ordinary officers in the Church, and have hitherto been constituent members of the ecclesiastical judicatories of the bounds within which the universities of which they are members are severally included; and whereas it is manifestly expedient, as well as conformable to the principles of this Church, as expressed in the form of Church government approved by the General Assembly in 1645, that every one who has the charge of giving instructions in any of the branches of theological learning to students of divinity, should himself have passed through a complete course of theological study, and have been not only licensed to preach, but actually ordained as a minister of the Word; and whereas ordination must be the act of the Presbytery; the General Assembly enact and ordain, That if at any time hereafter a preacher of the Gospel shall be nominated a Professor of Divinity, or Ecclesiastical History, or Biblical Criticism, or Hebrew, in any of the Universities of Scotland, who has not been previously ordained as a minister of a charge in communion with the Church of Scotland, the Presbytery within the bounds of which the University lies shall be bound to take him on trials, for the purpose of ascertaining the proportion of his gifts to the station which he is to occupy, in the same manner as if he had been appointed to the charge of a congregation within their bounds, in order that, after being found qualified for the particular office, he may be ordained as a minister of the Gospel, previously to his induction to his office in the university,

XIII.

Sess. ult., May 28, 1838.—Act anent the Standing Orders of the Church.

On the Report of the Committee on Standing Orders, the General Assembly agree to the following Standing Orders; and appoint them to be printed among the public Acts of the Church, along with all other Standing Orders now in force:—

1. The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland direct and ordain, That, hereafter, all applications for the erection of New Churches, and the relative documents, after passing through the respective Presbyteries, shall, along with the feudal titles of the site, or drafts thereof, be transmitted one month before the meeting of each Assembly to the Standing Committee for Church Extension, or such other committee as the preceding Assembly may have specially appointed for receiving the same; and that such committee shall revise the proposed constitutions and titles, and report to the Assembly their opinion as to any alterations they may recommend to be made therein,—the said committee giving to all parties who may have appeared before the respective Presbyteries eight days' notice of the day fixed for the consideration of their case, in order that they may attend for their interest; certifying all parties applying for the erection of new churches, that if they fail so to transmit for revision the documents aforesaid, their applications will not be entertained by the Assembly: Provided always, that where the said documents have been transmitted, they must also be thereafter regularly passed to the Assembly, through their Committee of Bills, in common form; and that all parties who have made compareance in the Presbytery shall be entitled, as at present, to be heard before the Assembly to which the application is so passed, or any committee to be appointed by them, on their objections to the erection of the proposed church, or to the report of the Church Extension or other specially appointed committee, as aforesaid.

2. That all papers appointed by former Standing Orders to be printed shall be lodged with the agent four days before the meeting of the Assembly, excepting when they relate to matters arising after that date; otherwise they shall not be received nor founded on in the Assembly.

3. That no report of any committee shall be read to the Assembly till the principal copy of the same shall have been lodged with the clerk.

4. That the clerk shall not give back or lend out the principal copy of any report to any person whatever.

5. That all reports to the Assembly shall be written upon foolscap paper, so as to admit of their being bound up in volumes; after which it shall not be necessary to engross them in the record.

STANDING ORDERS FORMERLY AGREED TO.

Sess. 9, May 26, 1832.

The General Assembly called for the report of the commission on the Form of Process, which was given in by the Procurator. The General Assembly agree to convert the first eight resolutions in page 3 of the Report into Standing Orders of this House.

1. That the Committee of Overtures shall be appointed to meet on the evening of the first Thursday of the Assembly, immediately after the rising of the Committee for Revising Commissions, and again on the following morning at ten o'clock.

2. That there shall be two sessions held on the first Friday of the Assembly, the one thereof at twelve o'clock noon, to be spent in prayer, as at present; the other as soon thereafter as the Assembly may choose to appoint, for the purpose of hearing the reports of the Committees on Bills and Overtures, and for the arrangement and dispatch of business generally. (These two articles have since been rescinded.)

3. That the practice of reading the Answer to the King's Letter, or any address, paragraph by paragraph, in the Assembly itself, be dispensed with in future, reserving the right of members to make such observations as may occur to them thereon as at present.

4. That on the second Thursday of its sitting, the Assembly shall determine when reports of committees not previously lodged and disposed of by special order, shall be taken up.

5. That rolls of the order of Causes, Overtures, Reports, and other matters of business, shall be printed for the use of the members of Assembly.

6. That in as far as may be possible, separate days shall be set apart for the hearing of causes, and consideration of overtures.

7. That when a Presbytery acquiesces in the sentence of a Synod, it shall not be entitled to appear as a separate party at the bar of the Assembly; but the members of Presbytery shall nevertheless be heard as members of Synod.

8. That in no case shall there be more than two speeches for each party at the bar, besides the reply to which the appellant or complainer shall be entitled. And when there are more than two parties, there shall only be one speaker, and one speech for each, besides the reply. It being understood, that where there is more than one complainer, each shall be considered as a different party, only in case of its appearing to the Assembly that the complaints rest upon distinctly separate grounds.

Sess. ult., June 2, 1834.

The General Assembly, having heard the report of the Procurator on the following Resolutions, which, in terms of the appointment of last Assembly, (May 27, 1833,) had been transmitted to the several Presbyteries of this Church, did, and hereby do, convert the same into Standing Orders of this House.

1. That all papers, whether forming part of the Record, or produced in evidence in any of the inferior courts, shall, at the time when they are lodged, be dated and numbered by the clerk of such court, and marked with his initials ; and no paper not so authenticated shall be received in the Courts of Review, unless upon special cause shown.

2. That, in future, all overtures transmitted through the committee, and all petitions or other applications to the Assembly, transmitted through the Committee of Bills, shall be printed and laid on the Assembly's table in sufficient numbers for the use of members, on or before the first Monday of its sitting ; excepting in the case of matters which may come to the knowledge of the Assembly during its sitting,—in which case, the overtures, petitions, &c., shall be printed and laid on the table at least one day before they are discussed. (See, as to this, No. 2, par. 1, page 1083, supra.)

3. That the libel and defences, or, when the case commences without a libel, the petition or other initiatory step, and the answers thereto, with the sentences of the inferior courts, shall be considered as the record.

4. That in all references, complaints, and appeals, under the exception mentioned in article 8th, (infra,) the same, together with the evidence adduced, shall be printed in sufficient numbers to afford a copy to every member of Assembly ; which copies shall be laid on the table of the Assembly in sufficient time to admit of the cause being taken up on one of the days during its sitting, otherwise the appeal or other application shall be held to have been fallen from. (See, as to this, No. 2, par. 1, page 1083, supra.)

5. That when the appeal, complaint, or reference, is made merely on a point of law or relevancy, it shall only be necessary to print such parts of the evidence, if any, as the party may think requisite for the determination of such point of law or relevancy ; but in such cases the papers shall be printed in such time as to enable the respondent to print any other parts of the evidence which he may deem material for the right understanding of the case. (See, as to this, No. 2, par. 1, page 1083, supra.)

6. That reasons of dissent or appeal, and the answers thereto, when made, as well as all other papers not included in the record, shall be produced to the Assembly, as heretofore, but shall not be held as included in the regulation as to printing.

7. That in causes, the expense of printing shall be borne by the appelland, when there is one. When the inferior court shall refer a cause to the Assembly, without pronouncing judgment, the expense shall be borne by the parties mutually, under the certification that the party refusing to pay his share thereof, before the time appointed for laying the same on the table, shall be considered as having deserted the cause, and shall not be entitled to be heard.

8. That when there is no appeal or reference, it shall be optional to individual members of inferior courts, who may find it their duty to bring the proceedings of these courts under the review of the Assembly by complaint, either to comply with the regulations as to printing, or to furnish a complete written copy of the whole papers and proceedings to the Clerk of the Assembly.

9. That in all other cases, such as petitions, &c., the expense shall be borne by the party bringing the matter under the notice of the Assembly.

10. That causes arising out of trials for licence or ordination, and matters relating to church ordinances, as also references on matters which do not affect the interests of the parties in the cause, shall be excepted from this rule, excepting when the parties may think proper to print of their own accord.

11. That a copy of every printed paper shall be kept by the Clerk of Assembly, to be bound up and kept in the Records of Assembly, with a copy of the judgment annexed.

Scss. ult., June 1, 1835.

The Procurator, as Convener of the Committee on the Form of Process, submitted a series of Resolutions on the subject of making motions and putting the vote, and also on the printing of papers ; and the Assembly agreed to convert these into Standing Orders of the House.

1. On Motions and Votes.

1. A motion, whether original or amended, shall be given in to the Clerk in writing, as soon as it shall have been made to the House, and immediately read to the House by the Moderator.

2. When a motion is duly seconded, and in possession of the House, it shall not be competent to make any alteration upon it, excepting in the shape of an amendment, or second or third motion, as the case may be regularly proposed to the House, unless it shall be consented to by the mover and seconder of any other motion or amendment then before the House.

3. The person who makes the first motion shall have a right to reply ; after which the debate shall be held to be definitively closed ; and no other person shall be entitled to speak, excepting with regard to the manner of putting the vote.

4. All motions except the first shall be considered as amendments on the first, and disposed of accordingly.

5. When there are only two motions before the House, the question put to the vote shall be, Motion or Amendment.

6. When there are three motions, the first question shall be, whether the second or third motion shall be put as the amendment against the first ; and the second question shall be, whether the first motion, or the amendment so fixed, shall be the determination of the House.

7. When there are more than three motions, the first question shall be, whether that last proposed shall be put as the amendment, and so on till only three remain, when the procedure shall be as prescribed in Article 6.

8. In causes, it shall not be competent to move an amendment to the motion, unless it be of such a nature as to decide the case, or to forward it in its progress.

2. On the Printing of Papers.

1. That all papers laid on the table of the Assembly shall be printed in the quarto form used in the Court of Session.

2. That it shall not be necessary to print petitions for the opinion of the Procurator, or for aid ; or any other merely formal applications, which do not contain any statement on their merits.

3. That the extracts from the minutes of the inferior courts shall always be printed entire.

Sess. 6, May 23, 1838.—Resolution anent the Independent Jurisdiction of the Church of Scotland.

The General Assembly, having heard and considered the Overtures on the Independent Jurisdiction of the Church of Scotland, agreed, by a majority, to the following resolution :—

“ That the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, while they unqualifiedly acknowledge the exclusive jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in regard to the civil rights and emoluments secured by law to the Church, and ministers thereof, and will ever give and inculcate implicit obedience to their decisions thereanent, do resolve, That, as is declared in the Confession of Faith of this National Established Church, ‘ The Lord Jesus, as King and Head of his Church, hath therein appointed a government in the hand of church officers, distinct from the civil magistrate ;’ and that in all matters touching the doctrine, government, and discipline of this Church, her judicatories possess an exclusive jurisdiction, founded on the Word of God, ‘ which power ecclesiastical’ (in the words of the Second Book of Discipline) ‘ flows immediately from God and the Mediator Jesus Christ, and is spiritual, not having a temporal head on earth, but only Christ, the only spiritual King and Governor of his Kirk ;’ and they do farther resolve, that this spiritual jurisdiction, and the supremacy and sole Headship of the Lord Jesus Christ, on which it depends, they will assert and at all hazards defend, by the help and blessing of that Great God, who, in the days of old, enabled their fathers, amid manifold persecutions, to maintain a testimony, even to the death, for Christ’s kingdom and crown ; and, finally, that they will firmly enforce submission to the same upon the office-bearers and members of this Church, by the execution of her laws, in the exercise of the ecclesiastical authority wherewith they are invested.”

*Sess. ult., May 28, 1838.—Overture and Interim Act, with Regulations for carrying into effect the Act of Assembly, May 29, 1835, on the Calling of Ministers.

The General Assembly, without a vote, re-transmit the following Overture and Regulations to Presbyteries for their consideration; and, in the mean time, they convert the same into an Interim Act,—and direct the suggestions of Presbyteries to be transmitted to the committee on or before the 1st day of March 1839.

Whereas the General Assembly have declared, enacted, and ordained, in terms of their Act, passed into a law of the Church on the 29th May 1835, on the subject of the moderating in of calls; and whereas it is necessary, for regulating the forms of proceeding under that Act, that some precise and definite rules should be laid down, the General Assembly do, therefore, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries

• The following is the notice in the Abridgment of the transmission of this Overture :—

“ Mr Shaw Stewart gave in a Report on the Overture and Regulations on the Calling of Ministers. It was moved and seconded, That the Overture and Regulations be re-transmitted as amended, and that they be converted into an Interim Act. It was also moved, as an amendment, That the appendix, or appended declaratory admonition, shall be, in all future cases, taken and held by Presbyteries as a regulation, in so far as it relates to canvassing and caballing, to the effect that charges of this nature shall be held relevant to infer disqualification for the exercise of the privilege of dissenting without cause shown, that charges of opposing by dissent the admission of a presentee, for the purpose of obtaining the settlement of another, shall infer disqualification. This amendment was not pressed to a division. Mr Forbes dissented. It was moved, That the word ‘not’ shall be inserted before the word ‘fall,’ in third section of the third head of the Regulations. This motion having been seconded, was negatived without a vote. The Procurator, Dr George D. C. Buchanan, and Donald Horne, Esq., dissented. It was moved and seconded, That as it has been decided by the Court of Session, that the Act anent Calls is ultra vires of the General Assembly; the General Assembly shall not transmit anew to the Presbyteries of the Church the Regulations connected with it, nor re-appoint the Committee upon these regulations. This motion was negatived without a division. Whereupon, Dr Cook and Dr Bryce dissented in their own names, and in name of all those who might adhere to them; adhered Dr Brunton, Mr Paull, Tullynessle, Dr Bryce, Mr Vary, Mr William Martin, Dr Murray, Mr Gibbon, R. Smyth, Esq., Mr Andrew Bell, Mr William Allardice, Captain Dalrymple, Mr William Logie, R. Whigham, Esq., James Hope, jun., Esq., Mr John Cook, Mr Forbes, Boharm, Mr Z. M. Hamilton, Norman Lockhart, Esq., Mr John Wilson, Mr Angus Barton, Donald Horne, Esq., Mr William Dunbar, Mr William Paul, Sir David Maxwell, Mr William Pirie, R. Anstruther Taylor, Esq., Mr Richmond, Dr Aiton, Mr J. Little, Mr Archibald Browne, Mr Christopher Nicolson, Mr M’Tavish, William Murray, Esq., and Mr Andrew Murray. The motion for the re-transmission of the Overture as amended being then put, was agreed to by the Assembly without a vote. The Committee was then re-appointed, with additional members, to whom the suggestions of Presbyteries are to be transmitted on or before 1st March 1839.”—Ed. 1843.

of this Church, declare, enact, and ordain, that the following directions and regulations shall be observed :—

I. RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN MAKING UP AND ADJUSTING THE ROLL TO BE USED IN THE MODERATION OF CALLS.

1. That at the first meeting of any Presbytery, after a vacancy occurring in any parish, or on any application regularly brought before the Presbytery for the appointment of an assistant and successor, the Presbytery shall ascertain that a roll of the members of the kirk-session and male heads of families, being members of the congregation, and communicants in the church, has been completed in the manner herein after directed ; and that, if such a roll has been made, they shall proceed to purge the same, by striking off the names of all persons who shall be ascertained to be dead, or to have ceased to be members of the congregation, or to be under church censures.

2. That in case a roll has not been so completed, they shall, at that meeting, appoint one of their number to act as moderator, with the elders of the parish, to constitute a kirk-session, or, where there are no elders, two or more of their own number to act as a kirk-session, in making up a roll, in terms of the regulations hereby enacted, and shall ordain the said roll, duly attested, to be produced to them at their next meeting, or any special meeting to be appointed for that purpose.

3. That in no case shall the day for moderating in the call be appointed until the roll shall have been completed and purged, to the satisfaction of the Presbytery.

4. That in order to ascertain definitively the persons entitled, at any particular time, to give in dissents, every kirk session which has not already made up a roll, in conformity to the enactment of last General Assembly, shall, within three months of the rising of this present General Assembly, prepare a roll of the members of the kirk-session, and of the male heads of families who are members of the congregation, and, in country parishes, resident within the parish, and who are, at the date thereof, and have been for at least twelve months previous thereto, in full communion with the church ; but declaring, that, in the special case where new churches have been erected ecclesiastically, persons who are heritors or tenants, having a legal right to sittings in the original parish church, and who continue to be members of that congregation, shall be entered on the roll of the said original church, though resident in that part of the parish which has been disjoined from it. And, lest any doubt should arise as to who are heads of families, it is hereby declared, that the term includes unmarried men and widowers, as well as married men, provided they occupy houses of which they are proprietors or tenants, and the eldest of the sons who reside in the same house with their mothers, when their fathers are deceased, provided they are of the age of twenty-one years or upwards, they being always in full communion with the church.

5. That the roll so prepared shall be open to inspection, in the hands of the session-clerk, by any parishioner or member of the congregation, for the space of one week, of which notice shall be given from the pulpit, and thereafter, with any corrections or additions which may have been made upon it by the kirk-session, it shall be authenticated by the moderator and session-clerk, and then transmitted to the Presbytery ; and after being inspected by the Presbytery, and countersigned on each page by the moderator, shall be returned to the kirk-session, and form part of its record for the foresaid purposes.

6. That the said roll shall be revised and re-adjusted, in conformity to rule fourth, immediately after the occasion of dispensing the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in the parish which shall have last preceded the 22^d of November in each year, and shall be open for inspection in the same manner as before, and shall be re-transmitted to the Presbytery before the expiry of the second week of December.

7. That the said list or roll, as last revised before the vacancy in the parish, or before any application, as aforesaid, for the appointment of an assistant and successor, where a roll has been duly made up, revised, and authenticated, after being examined and purged as above provided, or the roll made up immediately after such vacancy or application, where none had been made before, shall be the only roll for determining the persons entitled to be reckoned in any dissents to be offered against the admission of any presentee to be minister, in the moderating in a call ; but it shall still be the duty of the Presbytery to remove from the said roll the names of all persons who may have died, removed from the parish, or who are under church censures, previous to the time appointed for moderating in the call.

II. RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN MODERATING IN THE CALL.

1. That when a presentation shall be received by the moderator of a Presbytery, he shall, within two days after it comes to his hand, call a meeting of Presbytery, to take place not less than eight, nor more than twelve, days from the date of such intimation; provided that no meeting of Presbytery shall have been already fixed to take place within three weeks; and he shall lay the presentation on the table at that meeting.

2. That when any Presbytery shall be prepared to appoint a day for moderating in a call to the person presented, they shall appoint one of their own number to preach in the church of the parish, on a day not later than the second Sabbath thereafter; that he shall, on that day, intimate from the pulpit that the person presented will preach in that church on the first convenient Sabbath, so as it be not later than the third Sabbath after such intimation, and also on some other Sabbath; and that he shall further, at the same time, intimate, that on another day to be fixed, not less than three, or more than six, days after the last day appointed for the presentee to preach, the Presbytery will proceed, within the said church, to moderate in a call to such person to be minister of the said parish in the usual way; but the Presbytery, if they deem it expedient, may appoint the presentee to preach oftener than twice, provided that the day for moderating in the call be not more than six weeks after that on which it was appointed.

3. That on the day appointed for moderating in the call, the Presbytery shall, in the first instance, proceed in the same manner in which they were in use to proceed before the passing of the Act of Assembly, 1835, anent Calls.

4. That if dissents are tendered by any of the male heads of families, whose names stand on the roll above referred to, such dissents shall either be personally delivered in writing by each of the persons dissenting separately, or taken down from his oral statement by the moderator or clerk of the Presbytery; but that no person shall be entitled so to dissent who shall have previously petitioned the patron for the appointment of the person presented, it being always open to him to state special objections at the proper time.

5. That if the Presbytery shall find that dissents have been lodged by an apparent majority of the persons on the said roll, it shall be competent to the patron or presentee, or any person duly authorised to act in their behalf, or to any member of Presbytery, to require all or any of the persons dissenting then and there to declare, in terms of the Act of Assembly, 1835, viz., "That he is actuated by no factious or malicious motives, but solely by a conscientious regard to the spiritual interest of himself or the congregation;" and that, if any person having so dissented shall refuse to declare in the terms required, the name of such person shall be struck off the list of persons dissenting; And the Presbytery shall, in the commencement of the proceedings, give intimation that all persons who may intend to dissent must remain till the termination of the proceedings of the day. That it shall not be competent to receive any dissents, except such as shall be duly given in at the meeting for moderating in the call, as above provided.

6. That if the Presbytery shall find that there is not a majority of persons on the roll dissenting, and if no special objections be stated, they shall sustain the call, and proceed to the trials and settlement according to the rules of the Church: But if the Presbytery shall find that there is a major part of the persons on the roll dissenting, they shall reject the person presented, so far as regards the particular presentation, and the occasion of that vacancy in the parish; and shall, within two days thereafter, intimate this their determination to the patron, the presentee, and the elders of the parish.

7. That if, at the meeting for moderating in the call, dissents by a majority on the roll shall not be stated, and if any special objections to the settlement of the person presented, of whatever nature such objections may be, shall then be stated to the Presbytery by any person entitled to object by the general laws of the Church; and if such objections appear to be deserving of deliberate consideration or investigation, the Presbytery shall delay the farther proceedings in the settlement till another meeting, to be then appointed, not later than eight days thereafter, and give notice apud acta to all parties concerned then to attend, that they may be heard.

8. That if the special objections so stated affect the moral character or the doctrine of the presentee, so that, if they were established, he would be deprived of his licence or of his situation in the Church, the objectors shall proceed by libel, and the Presbytery shall take the steps usual in such cases.

9. That if the special objections relate to the insufficiency or unfitness of the presentee for the particular charge to which he has been appointed, the objectors shall not be required to become libellers, but shall simply deliver, in writing, their specific grounds for objecting to the settlement, and shall have full liberty to substantiate the same; upon all which the presentee shall have an opportunity to be fully heard, and shall have all competent means of defence: That the Presbytery shall then consider these special objections, and, if it shall appear that they are not sufficient, or not well-founded, they shall proceed to the settlement of the presentee, according to the rules of the Church: But if the Presbytery shall be satisfied that the objector or objectors have established that the presentee is not fitted usefully and sufficiently to discharge the pastoral duties in that parish, then they shall find that he is not qualified, and shall, within two days thereafter, intimate the same to the patron; it being always in the power of the different parties to appeal from the sentence pronounced by the Presbytery, if they shall see cause.

10. That the Presbytery shall not receive such special objections in any case, until after it has been finally ascertained whether there are dissents by a majority of the persons on the roll; but it shall always be competent, as soon as this is ascertained, to state special objections.

III. RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN THE ULTIMATE PROCEEDINGS.

1. That if the Presbytery shall have rejected the presentee, and if the patron shall give a presentation to another person within the time limited by law, the proceedings shall again take place in the same manner as above laid down, and so on in regard to successive presentations within the time.

2. That if no presentation shall be given within the limited time, to a person from whose settlement a majority on the roll do not dissent, or who shall not be excluded in consequence of special objections, the Presbytery shall then supply the vacancy, tanquam jure devoluto.

3. That cases of settlement by the Presbytery jure devoluto shall fall under the operation of the regulations in this and the relative Act of Assembly. But every person who shall have been previously rejected in that parish, shall be considered as disqualified to be inducted into that parish on the occasion of that vacancy.

4. That in case any appeal shall be taken against any judgment or proceeding of the Presbytery, previous to the time when they are prepared either to proceed to the settlement, or to declare the presentee to be disqualified, and reject the presentation, such appeal shall not sist procedure; but the Presbytery, if they resolve to proceed to the settlement, shall delay doing so till the appeal be disposed of; and if they reject the presentee, it shall be still competent to him to discuss the merits of any appeal which may have been duly entered.

IV. TIME EXTENDED IN DISTANT SYNODS, &c.

1. That in the districts of Orkney and Zetland, the Synod of Glenelg, and the Synod of Argyle, the number of days appointed by this Act, with regard to meetings, and for other purposes, shall be double the number above provided.

2. That the regulations in this Act shall be applied to all cases of vacancies in which the Presbytery has not already appointed a day for moderating in the call: But the General Assembly hereby renew and continue the Interim Act with regulations, enacted and transmitted by last Assembly, in regard to all cases in which the day for moderating in the call may have been already appointed, and also the Interim Act of Assembly, 1835, as to all cases previously falling under it, and also the Interim Act of Assembly, 1836, as to all cases previously falling under it; declaring these Acts to be still in force as to all such cases respectively, but no others.

3. That the Presbyteries of the Church are hereby enjoined to use all diligence to see that the regulations hereby laid down are duly observed and followed out; and also to use their utmost endeavours to bring about harmony and unanimity in congregations, and be it pains to avoid every thing which may excite or encourage unreasonable exceptions in people against a worthy person, who may be proposed to be their minister.

The General Assembly, in transmitting this revised and amended Overture, &c. Same as last year.)

Sess. ult., May 28, 1838.—Act appointing the Diet of next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be holden at Edinburgh, on Thursday, the 16th of May 1839.

Extracted from the Records of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, by

The following Pastoral Letter was issued by the Commission of 1838 :—

PASTORAL LETTER TO THE PEOPLE OF THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

Edinburgh, June 1, 1838.

The Commission of the General Assembly unanimously agree, that, in terms of various Overtures transmitted to the Assembly, a Pastoral Address shall be framed in the name of the Commission, and transmitted to all the ministers of this Church, to be read to their several congregations :—

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN,—We account it a high privilege, and we trust you will not otherwise regard it, that an opportunity is granted us of communicating with you by a Pastoral Address. In this we follow an example, which, to the comforting of the Church, has recently, as well as during former times, been set before us. And, desirous of following that example, and in the same spirit, we would earnestly seize on the occasion for directing your thoughts to some things which we are persuaded nearly concern your own peace, the welfare of your families, the prosperity of the nation, and the good of our beloved Zion. What we state to you, indeed, may be well known by you already. Yet, “to write the same things to you to us is not grievous, but for you it is safe.” We that are “put into the ministry of the Word” are engaged to declare such things, “in season and out of season,” and “here a little and there a little.” And we must consider ourselves as “watchmen unto the house of Israel, who are to warn them from the Lord, by the word of his mouth.” This, even the Word of the Lord, is our authority. Unto this we would bring whatever message we give for trying the soundness and utility of our own teaching—and unto this you are to bring whatever directions you receive for ascertaining their truth and obligation. We ask no blind submission to our counsels. We make our appeal “to the law and to the testimony.” And it is only when we speak “the word from the Lord” that we hold up the solemn responsibility by which you are constrained to hear.

Let us, first of all, remind you of the signal mercies which God has bestowed on our land in bestowing on it the Protestant Faith. He chose our land out of heathenism. He formed in it the vineyard of his own planting. And, when the vine that had borne much pleasant fruit was overwhelmed with noxious weeds, “he looked down from heaven, and beheld, and visited this vine.” He took away the miserable corruptions of the Papacy from our land. He caused true religion to flourish in it with exceeding beauty and richness; and he graciously settled the Protestant faith in Scotland, by the institutions of our own Church—a Church, in her government, “founded on, and agreeable to, the Divine Word” in her discipline, fitted to guard the purity of communion—in her worship, simple and edifying—in her Confession and Catechisms, prepared both to defend and spread the truth—and in her salutary union with the State, receiving aid, without sacrificing one of her religious principles or ecclesiastical distinctions.

Let us next remind you, however, that while the impression made on us by these signal mercies of the Lord is grateful and pleasing, it still suggests what is humbling to us. Our religious privileges have not been improved, have not even been valued as they ought to have been. Neither public virtue in our land, nor family religion, nor personal godliness, have corresponded with the means and opportunities for promoting them. The charge of unprofitableness and aggravated sin, even under the highest incentives and occasions of improvement and righteousness, is a charge that must be laid against us. Truly, these words of confession, employed by the prophet Daniel, for himself and his people, may suitably be uttered by ourselves: “We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments; neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land. O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto thee; but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day.”

Let us remind you, farther, that while, for our personal salvation, “the long-suffering and mercy of God should lead to repentance,” the hope, too, of perpetuating our blessed privileges forms another motive to an immediate and universal turning unto the Lord. It is our devotedness, in a life of piety, to “the Author and Finisher of our faith,” that raises the best of human guards over the ordinances of our faith. It is fidelity of private and official duty in the members of the Church that best ensures protection from the Head of the Church, amid all occasions of anxiety for her safety. Occasions of anxiety, indeed, for her safety, may now be gathered from many of the circumstances of the times. Enemies to revealed truth are not inactive. Associations of unbelievers are publicly formed. Sceptical and blasphemous works and pamphlets are circulated. Encroachments on the sanctity of the Lord's Day are, in many places, increasing. Men, whose opinions on religious subjects are professedly very different, are leagued in enmity against the Church. Lukewarmness in the service of Christ, and worldliness, are prevalent. And where "iniquity abounds, the love of many waxeth cold." But amid these causes of alarm for the safety of our Zion, be assured, brethren, that it is in the spreading of vital godliness among ourselves that her safety is chiefly to be found. Be assured, that whatever our Church were to possess, either of learning and eloquence in her ministers, or of countenance and support from statesmen, or of zeal and wealth among her people, for rearing places of worship within her bounds, or whatever besides, for "building up the walls of Zion, and strengthening the bars of her gates;" yet all would be vain, unless the privileges given by the Divine mercy were employed for promoting the Divine glory. Be assured that it is in an increase of family and personal religion, in the prevalence of Sabbath sanctification,—in the deepening of the stamp of holiness on the Church, so as to mark out her people for a "peculiar people, zealous of good works,"—it is in these, be assured, that our safety in the day of trial shall chiefly be found. These are earnest and also means by which we may expect that, whatever be the flames that surround it, "the burning bush is not to be consumed."

For such reasons, brethren, we request you, along with us, to give thanks unto God for what signs have appeared among us that these things are on the increase. We request you to give thanks, too, for all such provisions for their spread, as the stated privileges of our Church supply. And we request you, moreover, to join with us in gratefully acknowledging those additional excitements to the spread of vital godliness among ourselves, which our Church is affording by her calls on us to forward the grand interests of the Saviour's kingdom. She calls on us to aid her in diffusing Scriptural education over our own country, and in sending Christianity to the heathen, and in extending ordinances of grace among parishes at home, where the population has outgrown the spiritual provision, and in transplanting to the Colonies, for the benefit of our emigrants, the religion and worship of their fathers. She calls on us, besides, to give our prayers, and, as opportunity arises, to exert zeal on behalf of the once favoured people of Israel, with whose name and ancient privileges, with whose outcast state and after restoration the final triumphs of the Gospel are themselves so mysteriously united. These, though pointing to foreign objects, are yet incentives to personal good; and while we counsel you to regard them as the precious occasions of furthering the welfare of others, we counsel you, at the same time, to regard them as the precious occasions of furthering the improvement of your own souls, and the stability of all your own Christian advantages. Remember what is written in Scripture, "The liberal deviseth liberal things, and by liberal things shall he stand." And in these you prepare a blessing for your country and your Church, as well as for yourselves and your families.

But now, turning to yourselves, we exhort you, dearly beloved brethren, to employ with diligence the means of personal religion; and, by the daily reading and studying of the Word of God, and by the daily prayer and self-examination of a devout retirement, let increase of Christian seriousness in your hearts, and of Christian righteousness in your lives, be the chief objects at which you aim.

And, turning also to your families, we exhort you to employ with diligence the means of domestic religion; and by maintaining the daily worship of God,—by hallowing the Lord's Day, and showing, to the inmates of your home, that you "esteem the Sabbath a delight, holy, and honourable,"—by setting a godly example before the eyes of all around you,—by asserting and keeping up, in your whole circle, the purity and order, and very decorums of the Christian habits,—let this be your desire and endeavour, that your house be rendered "a Bethel," a dwelling-place of Jehovah, and thus a fit preparative both for the sanctuary on earth, and for the heavenly temple.

And ye, who are parents, be entreated by us, on behalf of the religious and holy upbringing of your children. Follow no plan of educating them, in which the Word of God is either forbidden, or employed for historical instruction merely, to an omission of the peculiar doctrines of its salvation. Consider that, even where a direct assailing of the Gospel is abstained from, irreligion is produced where a direct communicating of the Gospel is not made. While you are to desire for your children the acquisitions of secular knowledge, let none of these, however valuable, form a substitute for the attainments of Divine knowledge;—and never forget that the supreme object in a Christian education is the training of souls as the offspring of God, as the purchase of the Saviour's blood, and the heirs of eternal life.

Be it your care, then, to "bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Introduce them early to the knowledge of the Bible. Endeavour to impress them with reverence for it. Secure their attendance on the House of God, that they may hear the faithful exposition of it. Teach them prayer for the Holy Spirit, that He may cause them to feel the power of Scripture truth. And thus, praying with them, as well as on their behalf, it shall come to pass that their supplications at the throne of grace being united with yours, the blessing promised to “the families that call on the name of the Lord” shall descend richly on you and on them.

Nor can we here omit to remind you, that, along with the Bible, your supreme guide in the religious training of your children, you are favoured, as a subordinate guide, with the Shorter Catechism of the Church. And we most earnestly beseech you to value it highly, and to use it diligently for that purpose. Great is the benefit which, under the blessing of God, has been derived from employing this Catechism, in the religious instruction of youth. Much of the sound religious knowledge that prevails in our native land may be traced to it. Never was a summary of Christian doctrine and duty compiled, that, for correct, and clear, and impressive statement of divine truth, equals it, or comes near it. Arranged with exactest method,—expressed in a style peculiarly definite,—comprehensive in its bearings, however brief in its details,—stating the Scripture mysteries, without any vain attempts to solve them,—illustrating the Scripture precepts, by concise and forcible views of moral obligation,—and enriched throughout with Bible proofs of every answer,—the Shorter Catechism is an incomparable religious manual, and well worthy of being used, constantly and prayerfully used, in your families. By your explaining those terms in it, which comprise so much of important meaning within so small a compass,—by breaking down the answers into their portions, and opening up the scope and tendency of each,—by putting questions of your own on them, and raising new inquiries, according to the replies that are given you,—by showing the connection that subsists between the several parts of the Catechism,—and especially by impressing the Scripture proofs, in their suitableness for confirming its statement of doctrines and duties, you will find that, as subordinate to the Bible, this offers you a “form of sound words,” the use of which, through the blessing of the Holy Spirit, shall render your children wise unto salvation.

But, dearly beloved brethren, the time should fail us, did we try to say all that, in the fulness of hearts, earnest for your welfare, we would think of addressing to you. We just entreat you, therefore, out of concern, not only for yourselves and families, but also for your country and your Church, that you give serious attention to the things, such as have now been spoken. And let us assure you, that if, in answer to prayer, the influences of “pure and undefiled religion” be more and more widely spread, through the personal experience of the several flocks under our charge, we shall then anticipate, with joy, the stability, even to remotest generations, of our endeared privileges. Such were, indeed, a token from God that “He is in the midst of our Zion:” such were an earnest from Him that our Zion “is not to be moved;” such were, as the light and glory over the ark of the covenant, at once a sign of Jehovah’s presence, and the proof that his covenant shall not be broken.

And, in desiring this earnestly for you and for yours, “we now commend you unto God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified.”

Sess. 8, May 23, 1839.—Act in favour of India Missions.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland did, and hereby do, nominate and appoint the ministers of the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and the following elders, who are members of Assembly, viz., James Stark, Esq., &c.; to be a committee for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts, and for managing the funds subscribed and given for that purpose, in any manner of way; with power also to appoint a sub-committee of their number in Edinburgh, consisting of nine, for more effectually furthering the grand object in view. Of the general committee nine shall be a quorum, and of the sub-committee three are hereby declared a quorum. The general committee shall hold stated monthly meetings for dispatch of business, with power to meet on all occasions when business shall demand. And the said general committee are hereby enjoined and required, by themselves, and through their sub-committees, to attend to the instructions and regulations formerly approved of by the General Assembly for the propagation of the Gospel abroad, with power to make and carry into effect such farther regulations, and to adopt such measures as to them may seem most beneficial; such farther regulations, and the measures adopted, to be submitted to next Assembly. And the said general committee are hereby appointed to report their diligence and that of their sub-committees, in calling forth the benevolence and support of the Christian public, their prudence in the expenditure of the funds obtained, and generally their management, and the success and extent of their operations in foreign parts. The General Assembly renew their former recommendations to the ministers throughout the Church, that they continue their exertions, and put forth farther exertions in aid of the funds of the mission, and earnestly recommend that in every parish there be a collection yearly on behalf of this most important cause.

VII.

Sess. 10, May 24, 1839.—Act anent the Representation of Presbyteries.

The General Assembly, having taken into consideration the Overture from the Presbytery of Glasgow, on the Representation of Presbyteries in the General Assembly, and having heard an application from the Commissioners of the Presbytery of Edinburgh to the same effect, did, and hereby do, enact and declare as follows:—

“Whereas, by the 5th Act of Assembly, 1694, and the 6th Act of Assembly, 1712, and the 19th Act of Assembly, 1835, appointing the number of representatives for Presbyteries, a proportion is observed between the number of ministerial charges in each Presbytery and the number of its representatives, yet the regulations contained in the said Acts are no farther expressed than to allow eight ministers and four ruling elders as the representatives of each Presbytery whose members exceed forty-two; the General Assembly, according to the design of said Acts, enact and declare, that in future every Presbytery, the ministerial charges in which shall exceed forty-eight, shall send to the Assembly nine ministers and four ruling elders; and every Presbytery whose ministerial charges shall exceed fifty-four, shall send ten ministers and five ruling elders: And further, that in every case in which a Principal or a Professor of Divinity in a University shall be entitled, in virtue of his office in such University, to a seat in the Presbytery of the bounds, (the said Principal or Professor not holding at the same time a cure of souls within the Presbytery,) the office of such Principal or Professor shall be held, as far as regards the number of representatives to be elected by the Presbytery, to be a ministerial charge. The General Assembly, at the same time, instruct the Presbyteries of Edinburgh and Glasgow to take into their early consideration the propriety of adopting measures for their speedy division respectively into Presbyteries, of an extent fitted for the most effectual execution of the peculiar duties of these Courts.”

VIII.

Sess. 11, May 25, 1839.—Act anent Re-union with Seceders.

The General Assembly, on the Report of the Committee for classing Returns to Overtures, having found that the Overture anent Re-union with Seceders has received the approbation of a majority of the Presbyteries of the Church, did, and hereby do, enact the said Overture into a Standing Law of the Church, as follows:—

Whereas proposals have been made by the Associate Synod for a re-union with the Church of Scotland, and a considerable number of overtures have been sent at the same time to the General Assembly from the Synods and Presbyteries of the Church favourable to that object; and it has been ascertained by a Committee of the General Assembly, that the course of study required for a long time past of students in divinity in connection with said Synod is quite satisfactory, and that their ministers and elders do firmly adhere to the Westminster Confession of Faith, the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, and other Standards of our Church; and whereas the members of the Associate Synod do heartily concur with us in holding the great principle of an Ecclesiastical Establishment, and the duty of acknowledging God in our national as well as our individual capacity; and we, on the other hand, do heartily concur with the members of the Associate Synod in confessing the great obligations under which we lie to our forefathers in the year 1638, and several years of that century immediately following, and the duty, in particular circumstances, of uniting together in public solemn engagement in defence of the Church, and its doctrine, discipline, and form of worship and government; and whereas our brethren of the Associate Synod have declared their willingness, in the event of a re-union, to submit to all the laws and judicatories of this Church, reserving only to themselves the right which the members of the Established Church enjoy of endeavouring to correct in a lawful manner what may appear to them to be faulty in its constitution and government.

The General Assembly, with the consent of the Presbyteries of this Church, enact and ordain, that all the ministers of the Associate Synod, and their congregations, in Scotland, desirous of being admitted into connection and full communion with the Church of Scotland, be received accordingly, and that the following rules be strictly observed by the Presbyteries of this Church relative to this subject:—

1. Ministers of the Associate Synod and their congregations shall be received into connection with the Presbyteries in whose bounds their churches are situated, on their laying before the said Presbyteries respectively a representation or memorial, subscribed in name of the kirk-sessions of said congregations, by their moderator, or other person appointed by them ; and if there be managers of said congregations, by the preses of said managers, or other person in their name and by their authority, as also by the preses of a meeting of the members of the congregation, setting forth the desire of said ministers and congregations to be received into connection with the Church of Scotland. On such representation or memorial being presented, the Presbytery shall, subject to the condition after specified, receive and admit the memorialists ; and in the event of the Presbytery's refusing to do so, it shall be competent to the memorialists to appeal to the General Assembly.

2. On the reception of a minister and congregation of the Associate Synod into connection with a Presbytery of this Church, the managers of said congregation, or the kirk-session and deacons, if managers, shall forthwith take the steps necessary for procuring a constitution for the newly admitted church, and having a territorial district assigned thereto.

3. Every minister of the Associate Synod, at his admission as a member of Presbytery, and every ruling elder of said Synod, before taking his seat as a member of Presbytery, or Synod, or General Assembly, shall subscribe the Westminster Confession of Faith, and the Formula of the Church of Scotland, and shall enjoy all the rights and privileges of ordained ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland.

4. The integrity of the kirk-sessions and existing congregations of the Associate Synod admitted into the Church of Scotland, and the right of said kirk-sessions to grant sealing ordinances to the present members of their said congregations, though not residing within the bounds of the parish which may be allotted to them, shall be distinctly and practically recognised by the other kirk-sessions and the Presbyteries of this Church ;—provided always, that this provision shall in no respect apply to non-residents who are not at the date of this Act members of the existing congregations as aforesaid.

5. Presbyteries shall not, at or after the admission of ministers of the Associate Synod and their congregations into connection with the Church of Scotland, require any provision to be made for the said ministers by the managers of said congregations different from existing arrangements ; but the laws now in force in this Church or hereafter to be enacted, shall be observed with regard to all future intrants.

6. The licentiates or probationers of the Associate Synod shall be received and treated as other probationers within the bounds of the Presbytery, on their making application to the Presbytery to that effect, and on their subscribing the Westminster Confession of Faith, and Formula of the Church of Scotland, and shall be held equally capable with them of receiving a presentation, or of being elected and called to a vacant congregation within the bounds of this Church.

7. The students of divinity of the Associate Synod at the time of the passing of this Act shall, on producing certificates of their having finished their theological course, under the Professor of the Associate Synod, be taken on trials for licence by the Presbytery of the bounds. Those of the existing students of said Synod who have commenced, but have not finished their theological studies, shall complete their curriculum with him or in the Divinity Halls of the Scottish Universities ; and their sessions of regular attendance on the lectures of the Professor of Theology of the Associate Synod shall be counted as sessions of regular attendance in the Divinity Hall.

8. Ministers and their congregations out of Scotland, belonging to the Associate Synod, and expressing their desire of being recognised by the Church of Scotland as connected with her, shall be held as standing in the same relative position as ministers and congregations in England, Ireland, and the Colonies, whose connection with this Church has been acknowledged.

IX.

Sess. 11, May 25, 1839.—Act anent the Establishment and Endowment of a Professorship of Biblical Criticism.

The General Assembly, on the Report of the Committee for classing Returns to Overtures, having found that the Overture anent the Establishment and Endowment of a Professorship of Biblical Criticism has received the approbation of a majority of the Presbyteries of the Church, did, and hereby do, enact the said overture into a Standing Law of the Church, as follows :—

“Whereas it is of the highest consequence to the character, influence, and efficiency of the ministers of this Church, that no branch of theological study shall be neglected or superficially cultivated; and whereas there is not at present any sufficient security or provision for having the study of Biblical Criticism conducted as an essential part of the theological course in any of our universities, the General Assembly direct that all practicable efforts shall be made for establishing a Professorship of that department of sacred learning in every one of the Universities of Scotland, and for having such professorship so adequately endowed, and the course of study generally so adjusted and arranged, that no increased expense shall be occasioned to students; and, farther, the General Assembly enact and ordain, that, after the institution and endowment of such additional chair for giving instructions in Biblical Criticism, all students of divinity in every university shall be required to give regular attendance on the lectures and other exercises during two years of their attendance at the Divinity Hall.”

X.

Sess. 11, May 25, 1839.—Act recommending Collections for the Four Schemes of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, considering the obligation which lies on this Church to promote, to the utmost extent of the means with which God hath entrusted them, the progress of the Gospel of Christ among their own people, their brethren in the Colonies, and the heathen throughout the world; and considering, farther, how greatly their efforts have been impeded from a want of due arrangements for properly collecting the contributions of their several congregations, and confiding in their liberality and Christian zeal, were fit occasions regularly presented to them for contributing to the advancement of the four great Schemes now prosecuted by the Church, earnestly recommend to all the ministers of this Church, to make collections every year on behalf of each of these objects, viz., (1.) Education; (2.) Foreign Missions; (3.) Church Extension; (4.) Colonial Churches; upon the following Sabbaths, viz., upon the second Sabbath of July, the second Sabbath of October, the second Sabbath of January, and the second Sabbath of April, commencing this present year with the collection for the Education Committee on the second Sabbath of July; the collections for the other Schemes following in the order above written, viz., for Foreign Missions, on the second Sabbath of October; for Church Extension, on the second Sabbath of January; and for Colonial Churches, on the second Sabbath of April; and in future years in the same order, but commencing on the second Sabbath of July in each year with the Scheme next in order to that for which the collection had been made in the year preceding; as, for instance, in the year 1840, with Foreign Missions, and so on, through the year, and from year to year; provided always, that whenever the celebration of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper happens to fall on any of the said Sabbaths, the collection shall be made on the Sabbath immediately preceding. And the Assembly direct that the Committees of Assembly for the several Schemes shall make up a joint state, &c. (The Act then proceeds in similar terms to that of last year.)

XI.

Sess. 11, May 25, 1839.—Act on the Conversion of the Jews.

The General Assembly, having heard the Report of the Committee for Promoting Christianity among the Jews, approve of the same, and appoint the following ministers and elders, viz.; the ministers of the Presbyteries of Edinburgh and Glasgow, the Moderator, &c.; to be a committee for the above-mentioned object, of which Dr Macgill shall be convener, with former powers, and with power to adopt such measures as to them may seem necessary; and especially with power to take steps for sending a missionary or missionaries to the stations most promising: And the General Assembly recommend that collections be made throughout the Church for this very interesting object; and renew their recommendation to ministers to remember the cause of God's ancient people in the services of the sanctuary, and that special prayer be made for the Divine blessing on the steps now taken by the Church of Scotland.

XII.

Sess. ult., May 27, 1839.—Act anent the Qualification of Representative Elders.

The General Assembly, on the Report of the Committee for classing Returns to Overtures, having found that the Overture anent the Qualification of Representative Elders has received the approbation of a majority of Presbyteries of the Church, did, and hereby do, enact the said Overture into a Standing Law of the Church, as follows:—

“The General Assembly, with consent of the Presbyteries of the Church, did, and hereby do, enact and ordain, That no ruling elder shall be deemed qualified to be chosen, or to sit as a commissioner in any Presbytery, Synod, or General Assembly, of this Church, who is not bona fide an acting elder in the congregation in which he holds office; and that in all commissions in favour of ruling elders, as commissioners to Presbyteries and Synods, it shall be certified by the kirk-session that the commissioner is bona fide an acting elder of their congregation; and that along with every commission in favour of a ruling elder as commissioner to the General Assembly, there be produced a certificate to the said effect by the kirk-session of which he is a member, otherwise the commission to be rejected: Declaring always, that the provisions of this Act shall not be construed to extend to the case of teaching elders, or theological professors in universities, inasmuch as their proper and peculiar function consists not in ruling in a particular congregation, but in teaching.”

Sess. 11, May 25, 1839.—Injunction to Synods for visiting Presbytery Books.

The General Assembly did, and hereby do, call the attention of Synods to the injunctions contained in the Acts of Assembly, 1713, 1723, and 1838, (regarding the

* This Overture and Interim Act is in the same terms as that of last year, and the following notice respecting its re-transmission appears in the Abridgment:—

“The General Assembly called for the Report on the Regulations as to Calls, which was given in by Mr Shaw Stewart, and read. It was moved, That the Report of the Committee be approved of, and that the Regulations be transmitted to Presbyteries for their consideration, and again passed into an Interim Act. It was also moved, That the General Assembly disapprove of the Report, refuse to re-transmit the Regulations anent Calls, and to re-enact them as an Interim Act. The first motion having been withdrawn, it was also moved and seconded, That the General Assembly having declared, by its resolution on Wednesday last, that it is deeply impressed with the unhappy consequences which must arise from any collision between the civil and ecclesiastical authorities, and holding it to be their duty to use every means in their power, not involving any dereliction of the principles and fundamental laws of their constitution, to prevent such results, and having appointed a Committee for the purpose of considering in what way the privileges of the National Establishment, and the harmony between Church and State may remain unimpaired, with instructions to confer with the government of the country if they should see cause; and now feeling that it is inexpedient to take any step which may tend to embarrass the proceeding of the Committee then appointed, while they re-transmit the Regulations, and re-enact them into an Interim Act, direct the Presbyteries to report all disputed cases to the next General Assembly. The vote being taken, it carried Second Motion, by a majority of 137 to 89. This deliverance having been intimated, Dr Bryce, Dr Cook, and other members, dissented, for reasons to be given in.”—Ed. 1843.

Collections for the Four Schemes,) as of great importance to the superintendence exercised by the superior over the inferior courts of this Church; and they further enjoin all Synods to be very particular in visiting the records of all the Presbyteries within their bounds, and in seeing that each Presbytery discharge its duties to its members and its parishes, by a strict enforcement of the provisions of these Acts.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in this General Assembly, gladly avail ourselves of this first opportunity of congratulating your Majesty on the auspicious occasion of your nuptials with a Prince adorned by eminent personal qualities, and recommended to the confidence of this Protestant nation, by his descent from a family signalized in the history of Europe by early and stedfast attachment to the cause of the Reformation.

We humbly and heartily assure your Majesty of the affectionate interest with which we and the people of whom we have the spiritual oversight, contemplate an event, which is calculated to lighten the multiplied cares of royalty by the soothing influence of domestic kindness, and which, at the same time, affords us the pleasing prospect of the blessings which, through the favour of Divine Providence, we hope will continue to be enjoyed by this nation, in living under the mild sway of a race of princes descended from your Majesty, who, inheriting all the excellencies which have endeared their illustrious ancestors to our fathers and to us, will find their own happiness and honour identified with the wisdom and worth, the peace and safety of their subjects.

That it may please the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ to guide and to guard your Majesty—to prolong and to increase the felicities of the conjugal relation—to establish your throne in righteousness, and to uphold it by mercy—to satisfy your heart with the treasures of his grace, and the joy of his salvation—to confer on you the high privilege of being indeed the minister of God for good to the Church, and at last to make you and your Royal Consort partakers of a crown of life in the heavens, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in this General Assembly, approving of the conduct of the Commission of the last Assembly, in the early and cordial welcome which they offered to your Royal Highness, avail ourselves gladly of this opportunity of adding our heartfelt expressions of respectful attachment to a Prince descended from a family signalized by zeal for truth and liberty, personally distinguished by high endowments, and most honourable character, and now peculiarly endeared to us as the husband of the august and gracious Queen who wears the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom.

We devoutly pray to the Supreme Governor among the nations that the conjugal alliance which, to the universal joy of the nation, has been so felicitously formed, may continue to yield pure and permanent comfort to her Majesty and your Royal Highness;—that from this happy union may spring a line of princes trained up in the fear of God, in the love of righteousness, peace, and truth, and in every excellence which can give lustre to greatness, so that, through the favour of God, they may enjoy the distinguished happiness of transmitting the blessings of our unrivalled constitution to many future generations; and, finally, that you may, at the close of this temporal life, be admitted to immortal felicity and glory in the world to come.

May it please your Royal Highness,

We, her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, approving of the sentiments expressed by the Commission of the last General Assembly, in addressing your Royal Highness on her Majesty's nuptials, beg leave to add our warm congratulations on the same happy occasion, so interesting to your maternal heart, and so universally gratifying to the people throughout the whole extent of the British Empire.

We feel grateful to your Royal Highness for the assiduity and fidelity with which you devoted your attention to the tuition of our youthful Sovereign during the years of her minority, and it is our earnest hope that you will long live to enjoy the abundant fulfilment of your heart's desire and prayers, while you have the satisfaction of witnessing the growing graces, and the domestic felicity of a beloved daughter, sustaining the high functions of government with such dignity and wisdom as to advance the national honour, and to conciliate and secure the devoted allegiance of a confiding people.

That Almighty God, the Father of mercies, may communicate to your Royal Highness the choicest gifts of Providence and grace;—that you may long observe the happy results of your tender and skilful guardianship of our gracious Queen, in the not less wise and affectionate care extended by her to the offspring which we hope will be granted to her, as the heritage of the Lord;—and that, through the merits of the Redeemer, you, and those who are dearest to you, may at last be gathered at the right hand of the throne of the great Judge of heaven and earth, is the earnest prayer of,

Sess. 2, May 22, 1840.—Act on the Conversion of the Jews.

The General Assembly, having heard the Report of the Committee for Promoting Christianity among the Jews, approve of the same; and having also heard two members of the deputation with reference to their Report, the Assembly unanimously express their gratitude to all the members of the deputation, through the Moderator, and their sympathy in the present circumstances of Dr Black. The General Assembly appoint the following ministers and elders, viz., the ministers of the Presbyteries of Edinburgh and Glasgow, &c.; to be a committee for the above mentioned object, of which Dr Macgill shall be convener, with former powers, and especially with power to adopt such measures as to them may seem necessary; and, particularly, with power to take steps for preparing and sending missionaries to the stations most promising; and the General Assembly recommend that collections be made throughout the Church for this object, in the same way as for the other Schemes of the Church; and renew their recommendation to ministers to remember the cause of God's ancient people in the services of the sanctuary.

X.

Sess. 4, May 25, 1840.—Act in favour of India Missions.

After hearing the Report, the General Assembly did, and hereby do, nominate and appoint the ministers of the Presbytery of Edinburgh, and of the Presbytery of Glasgow, and the following members of Assembly, viz.:—Dr Mackay, &c.; to be a committee for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, and for raising and managing the funds contributed for that purpose; with power to appoint sub-committees for furthering the objects in view. The general committee shall hold stated monthly meetings for dispatch of business, with power to meet on all necessary occasions. And the committee are enjoined to attend to the instructions approved of by former Assemblies, with power to adopt and carry into effect such farther measures as to them may seem beneficial. The General Assembly, deeply anxious that the funds placed at the disposal of the committee should be increased in amount, to meet the increasing expenditure, earnestly recommend the formation of parochial and district associations, for the raising of funds and the dissemination of missionary intelligence. And the Assembly renew their recommendation, that in every parish there may be made an yearly public collection in the parish church on behalf of this cause, on the day to be fixed by the Assembly in its arrangement regarding collections for the different Schemes of the Church. And the General Assembly earnestly recommend that each minister, in his public prayers, implore the blessing of God on the exertions of the committee, on the labours of the missionaries, and also on those who, through their instrumentality, may be brought to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus.

XI.

Sess. ult., June 1, 1840.—Act Recommending Collections for the Five Schemes of the General Assembly.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, considering the obligation which lies on this Church to promote, to the utmost extent of the means with which God hath entrusted them, the progress of the Gospel of Christ among their own people, their brethren in the Colonies, and the heathen throughout the world; and considering farther, how greatly their efforts have been impeded from a want of due arrangements for properly collecting the contributions of their several congregations, and confiding in their liberality and Christian zeal, were fit occasions regularly presented to them for contributing to the advancement of the five great Schemes now prosecuted by the Church, earnestly recommend to all the ministers of this Church to make collections every year on behalf of each of these objects, viz.—(1.) Foreign Missions; (2.) Church Extension; (3.) Colonial Churches; (4.) Conversion of the Jews; (5.) Education; upon the following Sabbaths, viz.—upon the second Sabbath of July, the second Sabbath of October, the second Sabbath of January, the second Sabbath of March, and the second Sabbath of May, commencing this present year with the collection for Foreign Missions on the second Sabbath of July; the collections for the other Schemes following in the order above written, viz.—for Church Extension on the second Sabbath of October; for Colonial Churches, on the second Sabbath of January; for Conversion of the Jews, on the second Sabbath of March; and for Education, on the second Sabbath of May; and in future years in the same order, but commencing on the second Sabbath of July in each year, with the Scheme next in order to that for which the collection had been made in the year preceding; as, for instance, in the year 1841, with Church Extension, and so on through the year, and from year to year; provided always, that whenever the celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper happens to fall on any of the said Sabbaths, the collection shall be made on the Sabbath immediately preceding: And the Assembly direct that the committees of Asscmbly for the several Schemes shall make up a joint state, &c. (The Act then proceeds in similar terms to that of last year.)

XII.

Sess. ult., June 1, 1840.—Act appointing a Special Commission to co-operate with the Presbytery of Strathbogie in providing for the Preaching of the Gospel, and the Administration of the Ordinances of Religion, and the Exercise of Discipline in the Parishes of the Seven Suspended Ministers of that Presbytery.

The General Assembly, having taken into consideration the state of the Parishes of the ministers of the Presbytery of Strathbogie, suspended by sentence of this date, and the necessity of providing for the preaching of the Gospel, and the administration of the ordinances of religion, and the exercise of discipline therein, resolve to appoint a Special Commission to co-operate with the Presbytery of Strathbogie in providing the same; and they accordingly did, and hereby do, appoint the Moderator, Dr Dickson, Mr John Paul, Mr James Thomson, Mr Bannerman, Mr Scott, (Dalmeny,) Dr Welsh, Dr Chalmers, Principal Dewar, Mr M'Lagan, Dr Paterson, Dr Henderson, Mr Thorburn, Dr M'Farlan, Mr L. Balfour, Mr Grierson, R. Bruce, Esq. of Kennet, the Procurator, George Buchan, Esq. of Kelloe, A. E. Monteith, Esq., A. Dunlop, Esq., J. G. Wood, Esq., P. Dalmahoy, Esq., W. H. Craufurd, Esq., Mr Duncan M'Farlane,—seven, of whom five shall be ministers, to be a quorum,—commissioners for the purpose aforesaid; and they empower and instruct the Presbytery of Strathbogie, with advice and consent of the said Special Commission, to appoint ministers or probationers to preach and administer the ordinances of religion in the parishes of the said ministers during their suspension, and to give special directions thereanent. And in the event of any circumstances occurring which may appear to the said Special Commission to render it necessary, the General Assembly empower them, of themselves, to do and perform what the Presbytery is hereby authorised to perform, with their advice and consent; Dr Dickson to be convener.

XIV.

Sess. ult., June 1, 1840.—Act appointing the Diet of next General Assembly.

The next General Assembly of this National Church is appointed to be holden at Edinburgh, on Thursday, the 20th of May 1841.

Extracted from the Records of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, by

* This Overture and Interim Act is the same as that of last year. The following notice respecting its re-transmission appears in the Abridgment of the Proceedings:—

“The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on the Overtures and Regulations as to Calls, which, in the absence of the Convener, Mr Shaw Stewart, was given in by Mr Dunlop. It was moved and seconded, That the General Assembly re-transmit the Regulations relative to the Act on Calls, again enact them as an Interim Act, and renew the instruction of last year to Presbyteries to report to next Assembly all cases in which an apparent majority of dissents shall be tendered, unless the dissent shall be acquiesced in by the parties; the General Assembly, in thus suspending all disputed cases, being earnestly desirous to avoid, as far as possible, all further collision with the Civil Courts, and to reserve to the Church the power of finally deciding all such cases, in harmony with any law regarding the temporalities which may pass the Legislature during the current year, and which shall, at the same time, be in accordance with the fundamental principles of this Church. Under the above instruction to Presbyteries, the settlement of ministers will continue to be conducted according to the existing Act on Calls, and those cases in which all parties acquiesce in its operation will be carried out to a final conclusion under the same; but the General Assembly find themselves precluded, in present circumstances, from adopting any other permanent rule upon the subject, when there appears no other arrangement consistent with the fundamental principles of the Church, which the Assembly can substitute in its room, that may not be found equally open to challenge by the Civil Courts. It was also moved and seconded, that as the Act anent Calls, called the Veto Act, has been declared illegal by the Supreme Civil Judicatory, the General Assembly declare that the said Act is null and void, with the Regulations accessory to, and dependent upon it, and refuse to re-enact and re-transmit the same. A third motion was made and seconded, That the General Assembly, taking into consideration the difficulties to which not only the Presbyteries of the Church, but the individual members thereof, may be subjected through the attempt to carry into operation the Regulations, and being desirous to remove every impediment in the way of an adjustment of the present difficulties, in accordance with the repeatedly expressed mind of the Church, suspend the Act on Calls till the next General Assembly and, in the mean time, instruct Presbyteries to proceed to the settlement of ministers according to the rules of the Church; it being distinctly enjoined, that the communicants shall, on the day fixed for the moderation of the call, have full opportunity afforded them to express their dissent; that the dissentients be required to assign, for the information and consideration of the Presbytery, the grounds of their objections to the presentee; and that the Presbytery shall, on a review of the whole circumstances of the case, decide on the fitness or unfitness of the presentee for the particular parish. The second and third motions were negatived without a division,—whereupon the General Assembly found in terms of the first motion.”—Ed. 1843.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders met in the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, gladly avail ourselves of this earliest opportunity of expressing to your Majesty our cordial congratulations on the birth of the Princess-Royal—an event which has diffused universal joy throughout the nation, as tending at once to increase your Majesty's domestic comfort, to maintain the stability of the British throne, and to secure the great interests, civil and sacred, which, by the favour of Divine Providence, have been long incorporated with our happy constitution.

It is our earnest prayer that your Majesty, with your Royal Consort and the infant Princess, may be enriched with the grace of God which bringeth salvation, that peace and truth may be multiplied to your souls, and that, after many years of felicity and honour, you may be exalted to an inheritance of glory and blessedness in heaven.

Sess. 2, May 21, 1841.—Act on the Conversion of the Jews.

The General Assembly having heard the Report of the Committee for the Conversion of the Jews, approve of the same; agree to the appointment of Dr Keith, convener of the committee, and sanction the address proposed to be sent to the Jewish people. The General Assembly farther appoint the following ministers and elders, viz. the ministers of the Presbyteries of Edinburgh and Glasgow, &c.; to be a committee, of which Dr Keith shall be convener, with former powers, and with power to appoint sub-committees; and, particularly, with power to take all necessary steps for preparing and sending missionaries to the stations most promising; and the Assembly, considering the acceptance with which this Scheme has been received, and the blessing which has hitherto attended it, record their gratitude to Almighty God, and renew their recommendation, that collections be made throughout the Church for this very interesting object, and that all ministers remember the cause of God's ancient people in the services of the sanctuary; and that special prayer be made for the Divine blessing on the steps now taken by the Church of Scotland.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1841.—Overture anent Attendance on the Latin Class.

The General Assembly, considering the importance of classical learning, agree to transmit the following overture for the consideration of Presbyteries:—

Whereas the Church of Scotland has, ever since the Reformation, considered the learned languages as an essential part of the education of those intended for the ministry, but has hitherto required evidence only as to attainments in Greek and Hebrew, although it is of much moment that a thorough acquaintance with Latin should also be obtained, the General Assembly enact, that no student shall be admitted into any of the Divinity Halls unless he shall produce to the Professor or Professors of Divinity, and to the Presbytery within whose bounds he resides, a certificate of having attended the Latin class in some University for at least one session, and made satisfactory proficiency as a Latin scholar.

IX.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1841.—Act Appointing a Day of Humiliation, Thanksgiving, and Prayer.

The General Assembly, having considered the overtures for a day of humiliation in connection with the present circumstances of the Church, and also of thanksgiving for mercies received, did, and hereby do, appoint Thursday, the 22d day of July next, to be set apart for a day of fasting and humiliation, on account of the sins and shortcomings of the people and Church,—thanksgivings for mercies vouchsafed,—and prayer and supplication for the Divine blessing on the ordinances of grace, and for restoration of peace in the Church; and did, and hereby do, nominate the Moderator, Principal Lee, Dr Hill, Dr Makellar, and Mr Candlish, a committee to prepare a Pastoral Address relative to this matter; Mr Candlish to be convener.

(The following is the Pastoral Address prepared and issued by the Committee:)

PASTORAL ADDRESS.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN,—Grace be unto you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. It hath seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, to invite and call all the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made us overseers, to join with us in devoting to the solemn exercises of humiliation, of thanksgiving, and of prayer, a convenient day, which, in virtue of the authority committed to us by our King and Head, we have set apart for that holy end. And in the near prospect of that day, we do earnestly and affectionately exhort you all to give yourselves much to meditation, to the searching of your own hearts, and the consideration of the ways of the Lord; that by the working of his good Spirit in you, you may be humbled under His mighty hand,—acknowledging, at the same time, with all thankfulness, that, in the midst of deserved wrath, he hath remembered mercy,—and that you may be moved to cry unto the Lord, when the fast is sanctified, and the solemn assembly called; when the elders and all the people are gathered into the house of the Lord your God.

That the Lord hath a controversy with us on account of our sins, even those who are least accustomed to discern the signs of the times must plainly see; and it becometh us to confess that he is righteous, while we, with our fathers, have done iniquity. We may not be able to detect, with infallible certainty, the immediate causes of the Lord's controversy with us, having no express revelation regarding it, such as, in the days of the prophets, was wont to be vouchsafed by their mouth to the ancient Church, when suffering under the just anger of the Lord. Nevertheless, by the help of the unchanging Word of God—meeting with the testimony of conscience, and the course of Providence—we may obtain a measure of light sufficient to guide us amid manifold perplexities, and, in the day of our trial, to teach us heavenly wisdom.

In this inquiry we must judge, not according to the flesh, but according to the Spirit. The troubles and perils of an external nature in which our beloved Church is involved, being connected, in respect of time, and partly also in the way of natural consequence, with particular measures adopted, or with a particular line of conduct followed,—this might seem to be the mark and token of God's disapprobation of what has been done, and of his holy displeasure against his Church on account of it. Mere human and earthly wisdom might so interpret the ways of the Lord. But not such is the interpretation warranted by his Word, and by the recorded experience of his Church in all former ages. On the contrary, we are taught to believe that severe chastisements may fall on God's people, not in the day of their backsliding and death, but in the day of their revival; and that while, undoubtedly, as to the purpose of God, they suffer for their sins, in so far as second causes are concerned, they may suffer for well-doing. There may be a false peace, and a respite from suffering more ominous than the heaviest blow. "Why should ye be stricken any more?" is God's terrible word to a people revolting more and more. To what purpose should the rod be applied, when there is no sound part on which it may take effect? But if any, having once departed from their first love, are now repenting and doing their first works, it may be good for them to be afflicted; and with returning grace, fatherly discipline may be joined, that former sins may be remembered, and the renewed soul may be humbled and purged. We presume not to say how far this may be so, in reference to our beloved Church and her present trials. We judge not her recent actings by their apparent consequences; nor can we determine, by that test, how far the things which have been done have been pleasing to her great Head. To the law and to the testimony is the only appeal. But thus far we may venture to affirm, that if at any time the Church of God, or any branch of it, be found in the attitude of redressing tolerated wrong, and discharging neglected duty, repairing the breaches of former generations, and girding the loins for earnest labour in the Lord's cause; and if, in the very doing of this good work, and even in consequence of its being done, trouble and danger come,—so far from thinking that any strange thing has befallen them, they who thus suffer are still called upon to testify that the Lord is righteous, and that all his ways are just and true. Especially may this testimony be borne by the Church of our fathers, which once and again has been taught to know that a time of reformation and revival may very shortly go before a time of trial, and that, in the providence of Him whose ways are not as our ways, this may tend the more, in the end, to His own glory, and the peace and prosperity of His believing people.

At the same time, while thus we are fully persuaded that as we may not pronounce others, when they suffer, to be sinners more than ourselves, so neither are we to regard our own suffering as a conclusive proof that in any particular point we have been doing wrong ; we would ever bear in mind, that it should, at all events, move us to a diligent search after sin. That the steps recently taken by the Church, seeking, in all good faith, to be guided by the will of the Lord Jesus, should have issued in results so distressing, and, in many instances, so little to be expected, is not an evidence of what has been done being sinful. But assuredly it is a demonstration that the Lord sees much sin in us. Why is there not more agreement of mind and heart in the Church herself, in reference to the measures which are occasioning so much alarm,—more seeing eye to eye,—more of the consent and concord of brethren dwelling together in unity? Why, instead of conciliating, as might have been anticipated, have these measures estranged and alienated the more our brethren, whose forefathers left us on this very quarrel, and handed down a solemn testimony against the opposite actings of the Church, which they ever denounced as her most grievous sins and defections? And why, instead of increased stability and security imparted to our possession of our temporal privileges and advantages, do we find them all put in imminent jeopardy, many great and powerful foes ranged against us, and new difficulties from day to day arising, amid which we are more and more every day shut up to the necessity of crying, “ Help. Lord ; for vain is the help of man ? ”

These things are manifest evidences of there being some accursed thing in the midst of us,—some root of bitterness,—some blot cleaving to our hands,—some unstedfastness in the covenant of the Lord,—on account of which he is prolonging his controversy with us. And they loudly call for the searching of our ways, and the humbling of our hearts before him.

Especially, and above all, is this seen to be required, when we consider, not the outward estate of our Church merely, but her inward, spiritual condition, and how it fares with the cause and the work of the Lord throughout our favoured land.

We have reason, indeed, to bless God, who hath given us not a few tokens for good,—in the increase of the faithful and lively preaching of the Gospel among us, and in the awakening of a more zealous interest and concern for the glory of God and the conversion of souls. We thankfully acknowledge the sovereign grace of our Lord, who has enabled so many of his servants, in our day, to declare fully and affectionately the whole counsel of his peace, and who has put it into our hearts to care for the multitudes at home and abroad, whether our brethren or strangers, whether Jews or Gentiles, who are far from God, and perishing for lack of knowledge.

But, alas, for the result of this love and of these labours! In a certain measure, we doubt not, the Spirit has been poured out from on high. There have been portions of the vineyard refreshed and gladdened by the heavenly rain, and souls have been won to Christ. Far be it from us to despise the day of small things. But who among us can shut his eyes to the sad truth, that the Spirit of the Lord is straitened—that even where the means of grace are most abundant and most pure, the fruit of righteousness and peace is but scanty and precarious? Even among the people who know the joyful sound, it cannot be said that the signs of spiritual life are such as ought to satisfy the spiritual mind. Amid many serious professions, many salutary convictions and impressions, many works of faith and labours of love, we cannot but confess and mourn over a lamentable want of sound and enlightened views—of accurate and extensive knowledge respecting the system of divine truth, and the interpretation of the Word of God. And still more we deplore the absence of that uncompromising decision of character, and that high-toned and heavenly elevation of principle and of aim, which ought to distinguish the followers of Jesus, and by which the world might be rebuked and reclaimed. The low standard by which devotedness to God, and separation from the world, are too generally measured and estimated ; the facility with which the name of true godliness is given and assumed ; the wide prevalence of formality and lukewarmness ; the rare examples among us of remarkable attainments in self-denial, in humility, in zeal, and love, and the extent to which these have almost ceased to be expected ; the manifold inconsistencies of those who seem to be walking with God, their partaking in other men’s sins, and the frequent instances of their conformity to an evil world ;—all combine to impress the sad conviction, that if there be really spiritual life in the Church at all, it is but as the bruised reed and the smoking flax ;—and that a new infusion of vital heat and of power from above is greatly needed, to brace and nerve anew the Christianity of our day, and fit it for the final struggle with the mustering hosts of the Prince of Darkness.

And turning our eye from the professing Church of Christ in our land, to the state of society at large, we cannot but be moved to sigh and to cry for all the abominations that are done in the midst thereof. How many thousands of our countrymen are beyond the reach of all the ordinary means and influences of grace, and how few care for their souls ! Multitudes everywhere forsake the assembling of themselves together, and never hear the glad tidings of salvation. The Sabbath is profaned, in too many instances, by ordinary labour ; in other cases, by idleness, the neglect of ordinances, and the haunting of scenes of dissipation and riot. Need we dwell on the melancholy progress of intemperance—checked, indeed, as we would hope, in some measure, by the efforts of late made against it—but still, it is to be feared, maintaining its ground, and likely to defy all the plans and exertions of men, unless the Lord himself, by his Word and Spirit, interpose ? The relaxation of morals—the loose ideas too commonly entertained on the subject of offences against the law of chastity—the vitiating and corrupting influences to which the young are exposed, in the crowded state of our manufacturing population—the increase of profanity, and profligacy, and crime ; these are evils which it may well make the heart sick to contemplate. And the alarm is greatly heightened by the bold avowal, in many quarters, of principles striking at the root of all religious faith, and all social decency and order, and the industrious dissemination of these principles in every insidious form, fitted to leaven the minds of the uninstructed and unsettled among the people. The condition of the poor, also, suffering too frequently under privations such as it could scarcely be conceived possible that a Christian country could tolerate, or that human nature could endure—exposed to the ravages of disease, the contamination of vice, and temptations to crime, hard, in their circumstances, to be resisted—is forcing itself on the notice of the community, and cannot but draw the eye of Him who makes their cause peculiarly his own. That means have been partially adopted for the remedy of these social grievances, in accordance with the will of God, is a cause of thankfulness to him. That these means have been so inadequate, is matter of reproach and blame to the Church and to the country.

If, now, God is visiting us for such things as these, it cannot be thought strange. Nor need we wonder when we see old institutions shaken, and threatening signs gathering all around upon the earth—distress of nations, with perplexity, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth. Nay, when these things begin to come to pass, the Lord's people may look up and lift up their heads ; for their redemption draweth nigh. But the land is called to mourn. And we, especially, who are set to be witnesses for God, whether as united in one body under Christ our Head, or as individuals occupying the several stations in which God has placed us, should be constrained to search and try our ways, and to turn with our whole hearts unto the Lord.

As a Church, we desire that with one accord we should bow before our God, and reverently inquire what there may be in our conduct, or in our state, justly offensive to him. If we have been seeking to do His will in our public actings, has there been enough of prayer for His guidance, and consultation of His holy Word ? Has there been entire singleness of eye ? Has there been a due measure of humiliation and repentance ?—sufficient searching after the old paths, and sufficient recognition of old pledges and obligations ? May not carnal wisdom have mixed itself too much in our proceedings ? And whereas we are not all at one in the measures taken, may not this want of unanimity be in part ascribed to the absence of that spirit of meekness and of self-distrust which should have brought us all far nearer to Him who alone can lead us in the way of righteousness and of peace ? If, again, we have been moved and enabled to set on foot various schemes of Christian benevolence, for extending the blessings of education and the means of grace at home ; for supplying the spiritual wants of our countrymen in the Colonies ; and for sending forth missionaries to teach the heathen, and to testify to the Jews ;—have we duly given God the glory, and taken shame and guilt to ourselves ? Have we not been puffed up ? Has there not been boasting and self-confidence ? And have we not been tempted, forgetting our neglect in time past, and greatly over-rating our services now, to look upon the little we have done—little in comparison with what we might, with what we ought to have done—with what other churches have done, and are doing—as if it gave us some claim on the favour of God, or some security against the visitation of his wrath ? And, once more, if God, in some blessed instances, has been pleased to pour out his Spirit, and to give signal testimony to the Word of his grace, how have such dispensations been improved ? Has not the unbelief of some dishonoured the work of the Lord ? and the passing wonder of others appeared to limit his power ? What serious expectation of similar awakenings has been generally called forth ? What earnest longings after them ? Has it not been regarded as a strange thing that the preaching of the Gospel should, at any time, simultaneously prick the consciences of hundreds and of thousands, making them, with one accord, cry out in agony, What must we do to be saved ? Have not such scenes been found to minister, not to godly edifying, but to vain excitement? And while God has been giving us specimens, here and there, of what he is still able and willing to do, for converting sinners and quickening his own people, have we, in any corresponding measure, enlarged our hearts in seeking his blessing? Have we not, on the contrary, grieved his Holy Spirit, so that he is straitened still?

Let us, as a Church, submit to be searched by God as to these things.

And in our several spheres of duty and relations of life, let us look to ourselves, as if each of us feared lest the lot which detected Achan might fall on him.

We entreat pastors and elders to inquire if the Gospel has been faithfully preached, and the fruit of preaching duly waited for and gathered in? How is discipline administered, for warning the unruly, winning back the erring, rebuking the profane, and guarding the purity of the house and ordinances of God? What care is taken of the young? What sympathy shown to the poor and the sick? What pains taken to instruct the ignorant, to edify and comfort believers, to deal affectionately with those who are forsaking their own mercies? What consultation is there of the pastor with the elders, respecting the condition of the flock, and the means by which the Lord's cause may be advanced, and souls may prosper more? What prayer together? What wrestling with God apart? Does the keeper of the vineyards of others keep his own? What are the labours of his study? What the exercises of his closet?

You who are the parents and heads of families, we exhort to consider well the trust committed to you, as having the care of the lambs of the flock, and what the Church has a right to expect from you, through whose instrumentality she should be daily receiving new sons and daughters, to be as plants for the garden of the Lord, and corner-stones polished for his palace. The things which you have heard and known, and your fathers have told you, are you not hiding from your children? Are you showing to the generation to come the praises of the Lord, and his strength, and the wonderful works which he hath done? Do you speak in your households of God's favour to our Church in days gone by, and of the worthies whom he raised up—names once familiar to our very babes—and of the holy cause in which they testified, and suffered, and died? Is parental discipline more relaxed, and the master's rule in his household less cheerfully acknowledged than of old? What prayer is made in your dwellings? what praises ascend on high? what catechising is there of your children and domestics? what care to imbue their minds with the form of sound words, and to interest their hearts in the love of Jesus? what tender dealing with the conscience? what anxious longing for the conversion of their souls? If in these things there be neglect and sin, can it be matter of wonder that so many of our youth, as they grow up, should enter into life with little attachment to the Church of their fathers, and little interest in her well-being?—ignorant of her value, careless of her institutions, unacquainted with all that she has been honoured to do for the Lord in this land, and all that the Lord has been pleased to do for her.

To those who hold a more private station in the Church, we would address a word of counsel and of persuasion. Let every one of you look to himself, and to his own case. The Lord is manifestly sifting his people. He will separate the precious from the vile. This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke and blasphemy. Temptations and trials abound; and as it is the last time, when antichrist is to come,—and even now already there are many antichrists,—so may it be expected that principles and professions are to be severely tested, and put to a searching proof. Are you prepared,—are you preparing,—for the evil to come? Have you an unction from the Holy One, and do you know the truth? Is your religion such as will not merely shine in the summer's sun, but stand the winter's blast? Amid causes of offence abounding on every side, amid the external troubles and the internal disorders and contentions of the Church, your faith may be apt to fail, and the world may seize its advantage for regaining its hold over you. You are urgently called to examine yourselves, whether you have received, or are seeking, grace sufficient for the crisis in which you are to act. And see if there be not,—in your unstedfast walk with God,—in your occasional weariness of his service,—in the restraining of private prayer, and the withholding of an open testimony for God,—something which may in part bring home personally to you the sin and suffering of the Church at large, and constrain you, above all, to fear lest your own souls be not in health.

Finally, brethren, we beseech you all, with one accord, to pray for the Church and the land, that the Lord may arise and give deliverance. And let your chief anxiety be, not that deliverance come speedily, but that, when we are delivered, it may be the doing of the Lord alone, that His may be all the glory. And, meanwhile, let us wait patiently upon him. Let us turn unto the Lord with our whole hearts. Let us adore his justice in visiting us for our sins. Let us gratefully acknowledge his goodness in turning away from us deserved judgments, and overruling evil for good. In his recent dealings with us he has not unfrequently disappointed our fears,—so that, amid things which might have occasioned bitterness, and wrath, and schism in our Assemblies, unlooked-for tokens of conciliation have appeared. Let us earnestly return and seek the Lord,—that He who has the hearts of all men in his hands, and who ordereth all our ways, may cause unity and peace to prevail, and may give help in the time of need. Let us pray for the outpouring of his Holy Spirit, and the revival of his gracious work. Let our desire be, that while he chastens, he may greatly quicken us; and that, in the end, it may be manifest to all, that our safety cometh from the Lord. Now may God himself, even the Father, bless us; and may the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be upon us all.—Amen.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1841.—Standing Order on the Forms of Commissions.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee on the Forms of Commissions, which was given in by Mr Dunlop, the convener, and read. The General Assembly approve of the Report, and did, and hereby do, declare and order in terms thereof, and direct the same to be inserted among the public Acts of this Church, the tenor whereof follows:—

1. Your committee would recommend that a copy of the Act, 1839, anent representative elders, together with a copy of the form of certificate approved by the General Assembly, 1840, and also of this report, if approved of by the Assembly, be transmitted to every minister of this Church, and that the Assembly declare that no certificates will henceforth be received, or held a fulfilment of the Act above mentioned, unless exactly agreeing with the form aforesaid; it being specially attended to, that it is the certificate itself, and not an extract from the minutes of Session, that must be lodged along with the commission.

2. In regard to the attestation by Presbyteries of the commissions of representatives from burghs, the committee, considering that the requiring of the attestation of the Presbytery is additional to, and corroborative of, that of the Session, would recommend the Assembly to declare, that, on the one hand, Presbyteries are entitled to attest such commissions, although there be no certificate produced to them from the Session to which the commissioner belongs, that he is bona fide an acting elder, provided they have other sufficient grounds of information as to his truly being so; and, on the other hand, that such certificate, when produced to them, while it ought not to be disregarded except on the strongest grounds, it is not to be holden as necessarily conclusive as to the qualification of the party in this respect.

3. Your committee would suggest, that all commissions should be desired to be transmitted to the Agent for the Church at least one week before the meeting of the Assembly, and that those so transmitted should be revised, so far as regards the regularity of the commission in point of form, by a meeting of the Procurator, Clerks, and Agent of the Church, and that their report as to the commissions being correct, should supersede the passing the same under the review of the usual revising committee; while as to commissions which these parties may find to be objectionable in form, that they should at once be remitted to the Committee on disputed and objected Commissions.

Sess. ult., May 31, 1841.—Standing Order anent the Visiting of Synod-Books.

The General Assembly called for the Report of the Committee for Visiting the Synod-Books, which was given in and read. The Assembly approve of the report, and observing, in a few instances, that no notice is taken of inquiry having been made by the Synods at the several Presbyteries of collections having been made within their bounds for the different Schemes of the Church, did, and hereby do, direct that, in future, all such omissions, with other remarks of the visitors, shall be printed in the Acts of the Assembly.

The General Assembly, having taken into their consideration the state of the parishes herein after mentioned, and the necessity of making some special provision for the settlement and superintendence thereof, and for the ordering of certain other matters after mentioned, resolve, for this purpose, to appoint a Special Commission, to the effect and with the powers herein after set forth; and they accordingly did, and hereby do, appoint Dr Robert Gordon, their Moderator, &c.; to be commissioners to co-operate with the several Presbyteries within whose bounds are situated the following parishes, viz.:—Huntly, Keith, Glass, Mortlach, Rhynie, Cairnie, Botriphnie, and Marnoch, in the Presbytery of Strathbogie; Auchterarder, in the Presbytery of Auchterarder; Lethendy and Kinloch, in the Presbytery of Dunkeld; Muckairn, in the Presbytery of Lorn; and the new parish of Stewarton, in the Presbytery of Irvine,—in the settlement and superintendence of the said parishes, and the making provision for the supply of the ordinances of religion, and the exercise of discipline, and the ordering of all ecclesiastical matters therein; empowering and instructing the said commissioners to advise and direct the said respective Presbyteries in all their proceedings thereanent, and enjoining the said Presbyteries, as they are hereby enjoined, to conform themselves to such advice and directions; and with full power to the said commissioners, in the event of their deeming it necessary, of themselves, to do and perform, in relation to the premises, every act which the respective Presbyteries might have done and performed; and the said commissioners are farther empowered, in the event of any interference by the Civil Courts with the exercise of the spiritual jurisdiction and discipline of the Church by these or any other Presbyteries of the Church, and of their being applied to by such Presbyteries, to advise and direct such Presbyteries in regard to their proceedings; or if the said commissioners shall deem it necessary, of themselves, to do and perform whatever it might have been competent for the said Presbyteries to have done and performed. And they are also instructed and empowered to advise with the Procurator in regard to legal processes in dependence, touching the questions connected with the matters regarding the parishes herein before mentioned, or any others that may be similarly situated; and the said commissioners are hereby empowered to choose their moderator and clerk: And the General Assembly appoint the said commissioners to hold their first meeting at Edinburgh, in the Presbytery Hall, on the 2d of June, at twelve o'clock, with power to hold meetings thereafter at such times and places as they shall see fit, and with power to their moderator at any time to summon meetings of the said commissioners, pro re nata, on five days' notice to each of the commissioners.

Sess. 1, May 19, 1842.—Her Majesty's Letter to the General Assembly.

VICTORIA, R.

Right Reverend and Well-beloved, we greet you well.—The security and welfare of the Church of Scotland, so intimately connected with the peace and eternal interest of a large portion of our people, demand our constant care, and are regarded by us with affectionate anxiety.

On our accession to our throne, we gladly renewed the solemn obligation which binds us to maintain the Presbyterian Church of Scotland inviolate in all its rights and privileges as by law established.

We rely on your loyalty, and we contemplate with satisfaction the approach of your meeting, in the confident expectation that your deliberations will be directed to the advancement of piety and virtue; and that in all your proceedings you will be guided by the love of religious peace, and by the temper of Christian charity and forbearance.

We would earnestly remind you, that the happiness of our people in Scotland will be promoted by your concord; and we pray that Almighty God may so knit your hearts and rule your decisions, that unity in the Church may be preserved, and that the harmony indispensable in councils adapted for the furtherance of religion may prevail among you.

It grieves us to know, that in some districts of Scotland many of the working-classes have suffered, and still continue to suffer, severe distress.

We affectionately commend the poor and the destitute to your pastoral care; and we exhort you to inculcate on your respective flocks the duty of freely contributing charitable aid to the relief of the necessities of their brethren.

We have thought fit to appoint our right trusty and entirely beloved cousin, John Marquis of Bute, to be the representative of our royal person in this Assembly. We are well assured of his tried ability and sincere wish faithfully to discharge the high and important duties with which he is entrusted. His prudence and attachment to the Church of Scotland are well known, and we are persuaded that our choice will be acceptable to you. And so we bid you heartily farewell.

Given at our Court at St James's, the 11th day of May 1842, in the fifth year of our reign.

By her Majesty's Command,

JAMES GRAHAM.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1842.—The General Assembly's Answer to the Queen's most gracious Letter.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, convened in this General Assembly, have received with deep gratitude the gracious Letter conveying your Majesty's assurance, that the security and welfare of the Church of Scotland, so intimately connected with the peace and eternal interests of a large portion of your Majesty's subjects, engage your Majesty's constant care and affectionate anxiety.

We remember with heartfelt satisfaction that your Majesty, on your accession to the throne, recognised the solemn obligation which binds the Sovereigns of this country to maintain the Church of Scotland inviolate in all its rights and privileges, as by law established.

We feel grateful for your Majesty's confidence in our loyalty, and for the expression of your Majesty's satisfaction in the prospect of our meeting; and we humbly trust that, through Divine grace, our deliberations will be directed to the advancement of piety and virtue, and that in all our proceedings we will be guided by the love of religious peace, and by the spirit of Christian charity.

We assure your Majesty of our being fully aware that the happiness of your Majesty's subjects in Scotland will be promoted by our concord; and we earnestly pray that Almighty God may so guide our hearts, and rule our decisions, that unity in the Church may be preserved, and that the harmony which is so conducive to the furtherance of religion may prevail among us.

We participate most fully in your Majesty's sympathy with the sufferings of many of the working-classes in some districts of Scotland, and we have accordingly appointed collections to be made in all the churches in which your Majesty's benevolent wishes for their relief have not been already anticipated.

As office-bearers of this Church, it will ever be our study to watch over the interests of the poor and destitute; and we shall not fail to inculcate on our respective flocks the duty of freely contributing to the relief of their poor brethren.

We hail with satisfaction the appointment of the Most Noble the Marquis of Bute as the representative of your Majesty's person in this General Assembly, a nobleman who, from his tried ability, prudence, and courtesy, and from his well-known attachment, and large liberality to the Church of Scotland, cannot fail to be acceptable to us in the execution of the important trust committed to his care.

We acknowledge with the warmest gratitude your Majesty's renewed grant of L.2000 for the reformation of the Highlands and Islands; and it will be the object of our anxiety to apply this liberal donation in such a way as may most effectually promote your Majesty's pious and benevolent intentions.

That the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort, may ever gladden your Majesty's heart with a sense of his favour;—that He may abundantly bless you with domestic happiness and public honour;—and that, after a long and prosperous reign, you may receive the crown of glory that fadeth not away, is the earnest prayer of,

May it please your Majesty, your Majesty's most faithful, most loyal, and most obedient subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

Signed in our name, in our presence, and at our appointment, by

D. WELSH, Moderator.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1842.—The General Assembly's Address of Congratulation to the Queen on the Birth of a Royal Prince.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland met in General Assembly, beg leave to offer our most cordial congratulations on the birth of a Royal Prince, who, we trust, has been raised up by Divine Providence to inherit, at a period yet far distant, the throne of his illustrious progenitors. We feel ourselves bound to express our gratitude to the Governor among the nations, who has hitherto watched over your Majesty's health and safety, and we earnestly hope and pray that your life may be long preserved as a blessing to the British empire, and to the other kingdoms of the earth; and that the Prince, whose birth has been the signal for universal rejoicing throughout the land, may be so wisely trained under your Majesty's parental inspection, and so beneficially influenced by your Majesty's example, as to become, in due season, the faithful guardian of the sacred interests and privileges of the people, and the enlightened patron of all the great national institutions, which in times past have contributed so essentially to the power of the British nation.

It is our devout prayer that your Majesty, with your Royal Consort, and the objects of your maternal affection, may long enjoy domestic felicity;—that your reign may be signalised by the advancement of sound learning, by the flourishing of commerce and the arts of peace, and especially by the prevalence of pure religion;—and that your Majesty, and those who are most endeared to you, may be heirs of everlasting blessedness and glory in heaven.

Given at Edinburgh, this 21st day of May 1842, by your Majesty's most faithful, obedient, and loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland,

And it is hereby appointed that no private processes be determined, except at the four stated diets; and what shall be determined at one diet of the commission, with relation to private causes, shall be unalterable by any other diet thereof, and shall stand and continue in force till disapproved of by the General Assembly. And the Assembly renews the instructions given by the General Assembly in the year 1717 to their commission, and appoints the same to stand in full force, as instructions to the commissioners before named, and to be observed by them in all points, as if the same were specially here inserted; and that they inquire into the publishing and spreading of books and pamphlets tending towards the promoting of opinions of whatever kind, inconsistent with our Confession of Faith; and that the recommenders of such books and pamphlets, or of the errors therein contained, whether by word, writ, or print, be called before the said Commission to answer for the same; and, further, the said Commission is hereby empowered to receive any references and appeals that shall be made to them from Synods in matters of doctrine, and ripen such affairs for next General Assembly; and to contribute what they can to the suppression of vice and immorality, and to give all needful advice and assistance to Synods and Presbyteries, upon application to them for that end: Likewise, to take care that the impressions of the Holy Scriptures, the Confession of Faith, and Catechisms, and such books as are authorised by this Church, relating to the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government thereof, be correct; and to give directions about printing the same. And the commissioners are appointed and empowered to keep a correspondence with the Committee for Reformation of the Highlands and Islands, for suppressing Popery and Superstition, and for promoting the knowledge of true religion, and carrying on a reformation in those parts, and to give assistance and concurrence therein; and, if need be, to apply to the government for a proper remedy and speedy redress. And the said commissioners are hereby strictly prohibited and discharged to meddle in any other matters than what are committed and referred to them as above mentioned: And, in all their actings, they are to proceed according to the acts and constitution of this Church, and to do nothing contrary thereto, or to the prejudice of the same; declaring, that in and for all their actings they shall be accountable to, and censurable by, next General Assembly, as they shall see cause. And the General Assembly appoints the said commissioners particularly to observe the Acts of the General Assembly 1712 and 1719, respecting the Application of the Public Money; which two Acts are printed among the Acts of the Assembly, 1761. And this Commission is to continue and endure until another Commission be appointed; and members are required to attend the diets of the said Commission; and absentees therefrom are ordered to be noticed, according to the 17th Act of the General Assembly, held in the year 1706: And for the better securing a quorum and attendance of members on the Commission, the General Assembly prohibits the Presbytery of Edinburgh, or any other Presbytery within twelve miles thereof, to meet on any of the days or weeks appointed for the meeting of this Commission; and such of the members of these Presbyteries as are on the Commission are required, all of them, to give attendance on the diets thereof; and the Presbyteries, at a greater distance, who have four or more members on the Commission, are to take care that at least two of them attend each diet of the same; and the General Assembly appoint their Commission, at the first meeting, to discuss as many of the causes and questions relative to the settlement of vacant churches, which are or shall be referred to them by the Assembly, as they can undertake; and it is further provided, that when any Presbytery or Synod of this Church shall decline to comply with the sentence of the Commission, or to give the same a full execution, in that case, the Commission is hereby prohibited to execute the same, by appointing any such correspondent meeting, as has been sometimes the practice, but shall allow the same to lie over to the ensuing Assembly, to which such Presbyteries or Synods shall be answerable for such their conduct, and are hereby appointed to send up with their commissioners their reasons for the same. And that in passing their sentences, and in ordering the execution of the same, they strictly observe the 12th Act of the Assembly, 1736.

VI.

Sess. 17, May 30, 1842.—Commission to some Ministers and Ruling Elders for the Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, and for Managing her Majesty's Royal Bounty.

The General Assembly did, and hereby do, nominate and appoint the Rev. Dr David Welsh, Professor of Church History in the University of Edinburgh, Moderator, all the ministers who are members of the Presbytery of Edinburgh; Mr Peter Davidson, &c.; to be a committee of this Assembly for the Reformation of the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, for promoting the knowledge of true religion, suppressing Popery and profaneness, and for managing the Royal Bounty for these ends, according to, and in terms of, her Majesty's grant to this Assembly. In prosecution of which purposes, the committee are to appoint preachers and catechists to go to such places as they shall find, upon due information, to be the most proper, according to her Majesty's design, expressed in her warrant; and in so doing, that they have particular regard to such parishes in South Uist, Small Isles, Glencoe, Harris, the countries of Moidart, Glengarry, and Lochaber, and the other parishes of the Synods of Glenelg and Argyle, which the committee shall find, by reason of their vast extent, by the prevalence of Popery and ignorance, and other unhappy circumstances, to be in the greatest distress: And they shall take care that the persons they employ be certified, and found, upon due trial, to be properly qualified for their respective offices; of good abilities for the same; of a pious life and conversation; prudent, of undoubted loyalty to her Majesty, and of competent skill in the principles of divinity, and particularly in Popish controversies; such preachers and catechists being hereby appointed to be subject to, and under the inspection of, the Presbyteries of the bounds to which they are sent, who are to take care that the orders of the committee be duly observed by them. And the preachers are also appointed to catechise, and both they and the catechists to instruct the people from house to house, and to visit the sick; and, in all their labours among the people to be careful to teach them the principles and duties of the true Christian Protestant religion, and the obligations they are under to duty and loyalty to our Sovereign Queen Victoria, and obedience to the laws: And the committee are empowered to give them such instructions as to their work and behaviour, as they shall judge meet; which instructions the preachers and catechists are hereby ordered to obey. The General Assembly do farther appoint the said committee to have a particular regard in their proceedings to the regulations agreed upon by the committee of the Assembly for managing the Royal Bounty on the 30th September 1730, approved by frequent Assemblies; and to take care that Presbyteries, and others concerned, observe the same, which they are hereby ordered to do; particularly, the Assembly ordains the several Presbyteries to insert in their registers the committee's appointments of the designations, salaries, and stations of the several missionaries, and to have an exact regard thereto, in all the letters they shall write about the said missionaries, and in giving of certificates to them; and to direct all their letters concerning missionaries in their bounds only to the moderator of the committee; which letters shall be signed at the appointment of the Presbytery by the moderator or clerk thereof: And the Assembly does discharge any payment to be made of the salaries of the missionaries, except upon receipts from the missionaries themselves, and upon certificates from the Presbyteries, bearing that they have served for the time mentioned in the receipts; and that every catechist who receives a salary from the Royal Bounty, on condition that the parishioners or gentlemen of the district shall pay a certain sum in aid of such salary, shall insert in the body of his receipt to the cashier a declaration that he has received the particular sum specified; and that the attestation of the Presbytery shall, in like manner, bear that the catechist has received the stipulated sum which the committee make the condition of his appointment; that a journal of the itinerant's labours in the ministry of the mission committed to him be written on the back of the Presbytery's certificate, and signed by him, as the ground on which the Presbytery have granted him said certificate. The General Assembly do also empower the said committee to apply, for the purposes above mentioned, what may remain of the last year's Royal Bounty, not disposed of by reason of any of the missionaries not fulfilling the appointments laid upon them; and that they are to keep a register of their proceedings, and likewise distinct books of accounts, how the foresaid money is bestowed, which shall be patent to any concerned, or who may be pleased to inspect the same. Of the persons above named as members of this committee, five are declared to be a quorum, whereof three are to be ministers. But it is hereby appointed, That at the quarterly meeting of the committee in which the scheme or establishment of missionaries for the ensuing year is to be approved and determined, not less than fourteen shall be a quorum, whereof nine shall be ministers: And the said committee are appointed to have their first general meeting at Edinburgh the first lawful day after the adjournment of the first stated diets of the Commission of the General Assembly; their second meeting (which is for fixing the annual scheme) upon the first Thursday of July, with power to those members who shall then be present to adjourn; and their other two general meetings the first lawful days after the stated meetings of the Commission of the General Assembly in November and March, within the Assembly Aisle, at twelve o'clock noon, except that day shall fall to be Saturday, and then the meeting shall be upon Monday next thereafter, at the said hour; with power to the said committee to adjourn themselves to such times and places as they shall find most needful and convenient. And they are to keep a correspondence with the Commission of the General Assembly, and the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, and their committee, and to take their advice and assistance; and also to correspond with the Synods and Presbyteries concerned. They are likewise instructed and empowered, as they shall see cause, to apply to the government, or any magistrate, for assistance and support in carrying on the design of the commission now given to them. And the General Assembly do grant full power to the said committee to make such regulations as to the administration of the foresaid Royal Bounty, as to them may seem most beneficial. And the said committee are appointed to examine the accounts of the distribution of the Royal Bounty, and to lay the same before the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, or the Barons of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, and to report their diligence to the General Assembly, to whom they are to be accountable. And it is agreed, that no person once employed, and inserted in the scheme, shall be struck out thereof for that year, but by a quorum of at least fourteen, whereof nine to be ministers; and in case any complaint shall be made against any of those on the scheme, it shall not be determined the first ordinary meeting that the same is offered, but it shall lie on the table till another meeting; and, in the mean time, the person complained of, and the Presbytery of the bounds wherein he officiates, shall be acquainted with such complaint, and those concerned be required to send to the said committee a just account of the matter against the next meeting. And it is further appointed, That after the yearly scheme of missionaries on the Royal Bounty is settled in the manner above directed, and notice thereof given by letters to the Presbyteries concerned, such Presbyteries shall send up to the said committee their answers to these letters, at farthest with their commissioners to the General Assembly, if the same be not done sooner; and that the committee, at their first meeting after the General Assembly, shall endeavour to complete the next year's scheme themselves, and if they cannot complete it, they shall name a sub-committee of their number for that purpose, who are to lay their draught thereof before a subsequent meeting, which is appointed to meet as soon after the rising of the Assembly as possible: And empower the committee, at their first meeting, to reject any petition for a new station, in case they shall find sufficient objections against it: And that the said committee, in making up the scheme of missionaries, &c., do not exceed the sum in the grant.

VII.

Sess. 2, May 20, 1842.—Act on the Conversion of the Jews.

The General Assembly having heard the report of the Committee for promoting Christianity among the Jews, approve of the same, and appoint the following ministers and elders, viz., the ministers of the Presbyteries of Edinburgh and Glasgow, &c.; to be a committee, of which Dr Keith shall be convener, with all the powers conferred by former Acts of Assembly, appointing committees for the same object; and, in particular, with full power to appoint an acting sub-committee in Edinburgh, and corresponding and co-operating sub-committees in other places, as well as to nominate missionaries and agents, and take all other needful steps for forwarding this work, in those stations which shall appear to be most promising: Further, The General Assembly having considered the recommendation of the Committee relative to the Establishment of an Institution or Mission for the Conversion of the Jews in London, together with the application to that effect, of certain ministers and elders connected with this Church and resident there, reported to the Assembly by the committee, do hereby request and authorise the said ministers and elders, together with such others in communion with this Church as they may associate with themselves, to act as a committee on behalf of this Church, and in subordination to the acting committee before referred to, for the purpose of collecting funds, as well as of managing and superintending such missionary operations among the Jews in London, as it may be found desirable to institute, with instructions to the said committee in London to avail themselves as far as possible of the concurrence and co-operation of the Christians of other denominations, who may be willing to give their aid in this good work of the Lord. And the General Assembly, with reference to that part of the report of the committee, which brings before them the case of Mr Allan, and that of Mr Wingate, being sensible, as well of the urgency of the call for additional labourers among the Jews, as of the high qualifications of these two candidates for the office, and the peculiar circumstances in which they have been placed, approve of the arrangements adopted and contemplated by the committee; and, in particular, as to Mr Allan, the Assembly agree to dispense with one session of his attendance on Divinity and Church History, he having pursued his studies during the past year under Dr Duncan's superintendence at Pesth, and having submitted all his discourses to the Professor of Theology in Glasgow, under whom he formerly studied; and they authorise the Presbytery of Glasgow, or any other Presbytery of this Church, without waiting for the usual sanction of the Synod, to take Mr Allan on trial for licence, and thereafter, on his being licensed as a probationer, to proceed with his ordination as a missionary to the Jews, according to the laws of the Church; while, again, as to Mr Wingate, the General Assembly, dispensing, in his case, with the usual preliminary of licensing him as a probationer to preach the Gospel, which is indispensable to his being eligible to a charge in this country, and with a view exclusively to his appointment as a missionary to the Jews, authorise the Presbytery of Edinburgh, or any other Presbytery of this Church, to take trial of his gifts and qualifications in the usual manner, after his completion of the next session of college, being the second session of his attendance on the Professor of Theology; and thereafter, on being satisfied, to ordain him to the office of the ministry as a missionary to the Jews as aforesaid; it being expressly understood and hereby provided, that he shall not, in respect of such ordination, be considered eligible for a charge in Scotland, until he shall have completed the curriculum prescribed by the laws of this Church, as essential to the receiving of a licence as a probationer as aforesaid. And the Assembly renews its recommendation to the ministers of the Church to remember the cause of God's ancient people in the services of the sanctuary.

Sess. 3, May 21, 1842.—Standing Order as to Dissents.

The General Assembly did, and hereby do, appoint, that no dissents against any deliverance of the Assembly shall be given in until the matter in which it is pronounced shall, for that sederunt, be disposed of, the minutes completed and adjusted, and the House ready to proceed to other business; before doing which, it shall be intimated by the Moderator, that dissents from any deliverance in the course of the proceeding then brought to a close may now be tendered, and that the clerks shall not receive or record any dissents before such intimation shall have been made.

Sess. 4, May 21, 1842.—Act rescinding the Act, 1799, anent Ministerial Communion.

The General Assembly, having considered the Overture for rescinding the 5th Act of the General Assembly, 1799, did, and hereby do, rescind that part of the 5th Act of the Assembly of 1799, which discharges and prohibits, under pain of such censures as the judicatories of the Church may see cause to inflict, all the ministers of the Church, and the ministers of all Chapels of Ease connected therewith, from employing to preach, upon any occasion, or to dispense any of the other ordinances of the Gospel, within any congregation under the jurisdiction of this Church, persons who are not qualified, according to the laws of the Church, to accept of a presentation, and from holding ministerial communion in any other manner with such persons; while, at the same time, the Assembly enjoins upon all ministers of this Church to guard against holding ministerial communion with men who are not duly ordained and sound in the faith.

X.

Sess. 5, May 23, 1842.—Act anent the Election of Elders.

The General Assembly, on the Report of the Committee for classing Returns to Overtures, having found that the Overture anent the Eldership has received the approbation of a majority of the Presbyteries of the Church, did, and hereby do, enact the said Overture into a Standing Law of the Church, as follows:—

1. That when a kirk-session shall have resolved upon an addition to the number of elders in the same, the minister shall publicly intimate from the pulpit, after divine service on the Lord's Day, that an appointment of additional elders has been resolved upon, and shall also intimate the number which is to be added; and he shall certify the whole male communicants of the congregation, that, on the third Lord's Day thereafter, they shall give in lists of such members of the congregation, being communicants and of full age, as they would choose for the office of the eldership, the number of names in each list being required to be as near as may be one-half more than the number of elders proposed, as, for instance, six when four elders are to be appointed; the session being at liberty, if they see fit, to suggest the names of such persons as they may deem meet for the office, for the consideration of the communicants; and the minister shall repeat the intimation on the two following Lord's Days, giving such exhortation as he shall deem necessary.

2. That on the Lord's Day fixed for giving in the lists aforesaid, the said male communicants shall respectively give to the elder or elders of the congregation appointed to receive them their said lists, which shall be signed by the parties lodging them, and shall have been sealed up by them before being given in.

3. That if the number of elders proposed to be appointed be not an even number, that to be contained in the lists shall be equal to it and one-half of the next immediate larger number, as, for instance, if the elders proposed to be appointed shall be five, the names to be given in shall be eight in each list.

4. That on the following Monday, the session shall meet in the Church with open doors, so that all members of the congregation who choose to attend may be present, and shall then and there open the sealed lists, and the names in each list shall be read aloud and recorded, with the number of votes given for each, and those having most votes, to the number required to be contained in the lists, shall be taken as the parties chosen, from among whom the elders are to be appointed.

5. That the session shall thereupon select, from among the parties chosen as aforesaid, the number resolved to be added to the session; being, however, always entitled, according to the laws of the Church, to judge of the qualifications and fitness for the office of the parties so chosen, and to reject such as they shall judge to be unqualified; and being also entitled, if they shall see cause, in the particular circumstances of any special case, to appoint to be elders the whole of the parties so chosen.

6. That when the parties so chosen and appointed shall have declared their willingness to accept the office of elder, their edict shall be served, and the other steps followed out towards their ordination, agreeably to the forms now in use, and according to the laws of the Church.

7. That in parishes which, by the intervention of lochs, ridges of hills, or the like, are separated into totally distinct districts; or when, from other circumstances, a division is considered necessary and proper, the session may, with consent and authority of the Presbytery, divide the parish into districts, and require a certain number of elders to be appointed for each district; and the choosing of the elders of each district shall be by the male communicants residing in each district respectively, in the same manner as is herein before provided as to parishes.

The General Assembly appoint a copy of this Act to be transmitted to every kirk-session within the bounds of the Church, and direct the kirk-sessions to insert the same in their respective records; enjoin Presbyteries at their visitation of the session-books, to see that this direction has been complied with; and farther, to take order, either at their parochial visitations, or on application of members of congregations, that, so far as the means exist for it, an adequate number of elders be established in every congregation; and farther, appoint all ministers and session-clerks to make a return of the names of the elders in their several sessions, with the dates of their ordination, or of their admission, (if previously ordained,) and their usual places of residence; and for facilitating the making of these returns, appoint the following committee to prepare and transmit schedules, to be filled up and re-transmitted to the committee before the first day of April next to come, and to report to the next General Assembly the results, pointing out also the alteration in regard to the number of elders in the respective sessions, as compared with the corresponding returns obtained in 1828, viz., Rev. James Buchanan, Thomas Guthrie, R. Jameson, J. Adamson, W. Bruce Cunningham, James Balfour, Esq., W. Brown, Esq., Carlyle Bell, Esq., Captain Ramsay, John Tait, Esq., James Bonar, Esq., Macduff Rhind, Esq., James Crawford, jun., Esq., and Alexander Dunlop, Esq.—Mr Dunlop to be convener.

Sess. 6, May 23, 1842.—Resolution as to Patronage.

The General Assembly, having considered the Overtures and Petitions anent Patronage, did, and hereby do, resolve and declare, That patronage is a grievance, has been attended with much injury to the cause of true religion in this Church and kingdom, is the main cause of the difficulties in which the Church is at present involved, and that it ought to be abolished; and appoint the following committee to prepare petitions to the two Houses of Parliament, and an address to the Queen, on the subject, viz.—The Moderator, Dr Gordon, Dr Makellar, Dr Dewar, Dr Buchanan, Mr Cunningham, Dr Candlish, Mr Buchanan, Mr Gray, (Perth,) Mr Buchan, Mr Makgill Crichton, Mr Earle Monteith, Mr Dunlop, Mr Bridges;—Mr Cunningham to be convener.

XIII.

Sess. 7, May 24, 1842.—Act on India Missions.

The General Assembly, having heard the Report of the Committee for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts, approve thereof, and authorise the same to be printed and circulated; and the General Assembly requested the Moderator to present to Dr Brunton, and through him to the committee, the grateful thanks of this Assembly, for their intelligent, zealous, and devoted labours in the conduct of the important missionary scheme committed to their care; re-appoint the committee, with former powers and instructions, and enjoin them to continue their best exertions to procure additional funds for the promotion of this cause, which is again earnestly recommended to the support of the Presbyteries and ministers, and of all the members of the Church, and of all Christians, whether at home or abroad, who take an interest in the extension of Gospel truth among the heathen.

XIV.

Sess. 16, May 28, 1842.—Act for Parochial Collections throughout the Church.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland appoint the following days for general collections throughout all the churches within their bounds, viz. :—(1.) The third Sabbath of June for relief of the Labouring Classes in Distress; (2.) The fourth Sabbath of August for the Scheme for Conversion of the Jews; (3.) The fourth Sabbath of October for Education; (4.) The fourth Sabbath of December for Foreign Missions; (5.) The fourth Sabbath of February for the Home Mission—the collection for Colonial Churches for the current year having already taken place;—and they appoint the collections for the next year to commence in the ordinary order of rotation, with the Scheme for Conversion of the Jews on the fourth Sabbath of April; provided always, that whenever the celebration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper happens to fall on any of the said Sabbaths, the collection shall be made on the Sabbath immediately preceding. And the Assembly appoint every minister, on the Sabbath preceding that on which each collection is to be made, to give due intimation thereof from the pulpit, accompanied with such information on the object of the collection as he may deem fitting. The General Assembly, while rejoicing at the increased fruits of the Christian zeal of the people of this Church, during a year of peculiar depression and distress, would earnestly urge on them the duty of still farther augmenting the means provided by them for promoting the cause of the Redeemer, so inadequate to the extent of the field daily opening up to the operations of the Church, and so far within what might be expected from the gratitude and love due to a crucified Saviour. They would, particularly, press upon all ministers of the Church, the duty incumbent on them, of at least affording to their parishioners an opportunity of contributing towards the spread of the Gospel of Christ. The General Assembly hail with the highest gratification the information they have received of the increased number of Parochial Associations for Raising Funds in support of the Schemes of the Church, and renew their earnest recommendation to institute such associations where these have not already been established; and they would specially press on the members of these associations the great importance of accompanying all their efforts with frequent meetings for prayer and supplication, in especial connection with the objects in support of which they are associated. Farther, the General Assembly enjoin all the Presbyteries of the Church to hold a yearly meeting, of which due intimation shall be given in all the parish churches within its bounds, and which the public shall be invited to attend; in order to afford to every minister of the Presbytery an opportunity of stating what has been done within his parish in furtherance of the said objects, and to give to the persons present, by means of addresses by one or two of the members specially appointed for that purpose, such information as to the progress of Christianity at home and abroad, as may be best calculated to arouse the benevolence of the Christian public, and to maintain their interest in the prosperity of the said objects. And, particularly, the General Assembly appoint the several Presbyteries to require an account of the diligence of all the ministers within their bounds in this matter, and to record the report of every minister in their Presbytery-books; and likewise ordain the several Synods to take a particular account of the diligence of their respective Presbyteries, and to record it in their Synod-books. And the Assembly earnestly urge on their faithful people seriously to consider the duty of contributing liberally towards the advancement of Christ's cause, according to the ability wherewith God has blessed them.

The General Assembly appoint the minister of every parish within the bounds of this Church to read this Act from the pulpit, on the second Sabbath of June next to come, or where there is no service on that day, or where it is the Communion Sabbath, on the first Sabbath thereafter.

XV.

Sess. 17, May 30, 1842.—Order as to the Titles of New Churches.

The General Assembly, finding there is a general misapprehension on the subject, did, and hereby do, direct, that the drafts of the titles of the new churches lodged, or to be produced by the respective parties, be remitted to the revising committee on the constitutions of new churches, that they may be satisfied that they are framed in terms of the constitutions; and instruct the Agent of the Church to give out extracts of the constitutions to the parties, only on the production of a certificate from the committee, to the effect that the feudal titles are framed, or sufficient security given that the titles shall be framed, in terms of the constitutions; and such committee shall, for that purpose, have access to the constitutions and relative papers before extract. And the substance of this order shall be communicated by the revising committee to all parties bringing up constitutions to the General Assembly.

XVI.

Sess. 17, May 30, 1842.—Act Amending the First Article of the Standing Orders passed in the year 1838.

The General Assembly, on the Report of the Revising Committee for New Churches, did, and hereby do, amend the first article of the standing orders passed in 1838, and enact, that instead of the words "alongst with the feudal titles of the site, or drafts thereof," there be substituted the words "alongst with the drafts of the feudal titles of the church and ground."

XVII.

Sess. 17, May 30, 1842.—Overture and Interim Act, with Regulations for carrying into effect the Act of Assembly, May 29, 1835, on the Calling of Ministers.

The General Assembly agree, without a vote, to authorise the omission of the words "sustain the call and," in the sixth section of the second head; also unanimously agree to omit those portions of the seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth sections, which relate to special objections; and, with these amendments, re-transmit the following Overture and Regulations to Presbyteries for their consideration; and, in the mean time, convert them into an Interim Act.

Whereas the General Assembly have declared, &c.

XVIII.

Sess. 17, May 30, 1842.—Act on Home Missions.

The General Assembly, upon the recommendation of their Committee on the Home Missionary objects of the Church, did, and hereby do, appoint the following committee, to be called the Home Mission Committee, of which Dr Makellar is to be convener; the Moderator, &c.; which General Committee is hereby empowered to take charge of the objects formerly carried on by separate Committees appointed by this Church, called—the Church Extension Committee—the Committee for Aiding Congregations already Established—the Committee for the Employment of Probationers—and the Committee for the Encouragement of Young Men to the Office of the Ministry; and the Assembly empower this General Committee, annually, at its first meeting after the rising of the Assembly, to appoint four separate standing committees, one for each of the special objects above mentioned, the conveners whereof to be Dr Simpson, for Church Extension; Dr Candlish, for Aiding Congregations; Dr Clason, for the Employment of Probationers; and Mr C. J. Brown, for the Encouragement of Young Men; and the General Committee is hereby appointed, from time to time, to allocate to each separate Standing Committee, out of the general fund which may be contributed to this Scheme, such sum as they may deem proper for the object under its charge; and they shall, at the same time, receive such special contributions for each of the objects as any parties may appropriate thereto, applying the same according to the specific destination of the donor. Farther, the Assembly direct that, in the mean time, the expenditure in the erection of the new fabrics shall be limited to the produce of the supplementary fund, and, so far as regards the general fund, to meeting the subsisting engagements thereon; but that the Standing Committee in charge of this branch of the Scheme shall direct their attention to obtaining the removal of the obstacles to the erection of the quoad sacra parishes into parishes quoad civilia, using all prudent means for obtaining endowments to the ministers of these churches, and opening up communications with the heritors of the various parishes, with a view to the attainment of the improvements and benefits pointed out in the report of the sub-committee, given in to the Assembly of 1836 by the Marquis of Tweeddale. The Assembly also instruct the Standing Committee for Aiding Congregations to turn their attention to those cases where, from peculiar circumstances, sufficient or secure provision cannot be obtained, and must be guided in their conduct by the relative conditions of the respective congregations; with reference to the Committee for the Employment of Probationers, the Committee are appointed to apply the fund allocated to the object under their charge, either in adding to the provision made locally for missionaries in particular parishes or districts, according to the rules hitherto acted on by the former committee, provided always, the missionary to be employed be examined and approved of by the committee, or in the employment of missionaries after the manner of the missionaries on the Royal Bounty; and in regard to the encouragement of young men for the ministry, the attention of the committee in charge of that object shall be very much directed to seeking out and encouraging those having the Gaelic language, and the committee shall bestow particular attention in framing a system of regulations for conducting the object entrusted to them, in such a way as to secure all the advantages and avoid the evils incident to a scheme of this nature.

*Sess. 17, May 30, 1842.—Claim, Declaration, and Protest, anent the Encroachments of the Court of Session.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, taking into consideration the solemn circumstances in which, in the inscrutable providence of God, this Church is now placed; and that, notwithstanding the securities for the government thereof by General Assemblies, Synods, Presbyteries, and Kirk-Sessions, and for the liberties, government, jurisdiction, discipline, rights, and privileges of the same, provided by the statutes of the realm, by the constitution of this country, as unalterably settled by the Treaty of Union, and by the oath “inviolably to maintain and preserve” the same, required to be taken by each Sovereign at accession, as a condition precedent to the exercise of the royal authority; which securities might well seem, and had long been thought to place the said liberties, government, jurisdiction, discipline, rights, and privileges of this Church beyond the reach of danger or invasion;—these have been of late assailed by the very Court to which the Church was authorised to look for assistance and protection, to an extent that threatens their entire subversion, with all the grievous calamities to this Church and nation which would inevitably flow therefrom;—did, and hereby do, solemnly, and in reliance on the grace and power of the Most High, resolve and agree on the following Claim, Declaration, and Protest: that is to say:—

Whereas, it is an essential doctrine of this Church, and a fundamental principle in

* The following is the notice of the discussion in the House on the adoption of this Declaration and Claim:—

Tuesday, May 24, 1842. Sess. 7.

The General Assembly called for the Overture for a Declaration against the unconstitutional encroachments of the Civil Courts, which was read. It was moved and seconded, that the General Assembly approve of the tenor of the Declaration and Claim proposed in the said Overture, and declare in general in terms thereof; and remit to a committee to report to the House any verbal emendations or alterations that may appear necessary to render it fit to be given forth as the declaration of this House. It was also moved and seconded, that the General Assembly, having seriously considered the present state of the Church, has, with the view and in the earnest desire of restoring its tranquillity, adopted the following resolutions:—

1. That as the Act on Calls, commonly denominated the Veto Act, infringes on civil and patrimonial rights, with which, as the Church has often declared, it is not competent for its judicatories to intermeddle, the said Act is hereby declared to be null and void, and the penal judicial procedure in the Church Courts, which has been founded on it, or occasioned by it, is cancelled or set aside.

2. That whilst the members of this Church believe and maintain that the Lord Jesus Christ is the Head of the Church; that there is a spiritual government committed by him to the office-bearers of the Church, independent of the civil power, and that the intrusion of unqualified or unsuitable ministers is decidedly at variance with the principles of this Church—the application of these doctrines to particular points and cases may occasion conscientious diversity of opinion, such diversity, however, affording no ground for those who may so differ separating from each other, or not continuing members of the same Ecclesiastical Body.

3. That such being the case, it is of unspeakable moment to the welfare of the Church and the best interests of religion, that the agitation which has of late prevailed, distracting the minds of men, and fatal to the prevalence and power of vital godliness, should cease, and that ministers should devote themselves chiefly to the regular and assiduous discharge of their pastoral and parochial duties.

4. That the law of the Church, as recognised and sanctioned by the law of the State, being, that, in the case of a vacancy in a parish, the members of the congregation in full communion with the Church, may state objections of whatever kind to a presentee; that the Church Courts can judicate and decide on these objections, and can determine whether, under all the circumstances of each case, these circumstances being minutely stated in the record, the presentee should, according to their solemn conviction of duty, and on their moral and religious responsibility, be inducted; there exists at present great security against the settlement of unqualified and unsuitable ministers, whilst ample opportunities are afforded to the office-bearers of the Church, as members of the different ecclesiastical judicatories, to propose, in a legal and constitutional manner, any measures which may appear to them calculated to increase that security.

Tuesday, May 24, 1842. Sess. 8.

The General Assembly resumed the consideration of the Overture for a declaration against the unconstitutional encroachments of the Civil Courts; and, after long reasoning, the vote was taken on the two motions moved at the former diet, when it carried first motion by a majority of 241 to 111. Whereupon the Assembly found in terms of the first motion. From which finding Dr Cook dissented in his own name, and in name of all who might adhere to him; to which dissent adhered Dr Haldane and several others. The Assembly appointed a committee to revise the Declaration and Claim.

its constitution, as set forth in the Confession of Faith thereof, in accordance with the Word and Law of the most holy God, that “there is no other Head of the Church but the Lord Jesus Christ;” and that, while “God, the supreme Lord and King of all the world, hath ordained civil magistrates to be, under him, over the people, for his own glory, and the public good, and to this end hath armed them with the power of the sword;” and while “it is the duty of people to pray for magistrates, to honour their persons, to pay them tribute and other dues, to obey their lawful commands, and to be subject to their authority for conscience sake,” “from which ecclesiastical persons are not exempted;” and while the magistrate hath authority, and it is his duty, in the exercise of that power, which alone is committed to him, namely, “the power of the sword,” or civil rule, as distinct from the “power of the keys,” or spiritual authority, expressly denied to him, to take order for the preservation of purity, peace, and unity in the Church, yet “the Lord Jesus, as King and Head of his Church, hath therein appointed a government in the hand of Church officers distinct from the civil magistrate;” which government is ministerial, not lordly, and to be exercised in consonance with the laws of Christ, and with the liberties of his people:

And whereas, according to the said Confession, and to the other Standards of the Church, and agreeably to the Word of God, this government of the Church, thus appointed by the Lord Jesus, in the hand of Church officers, distinct from the civil magistrate or supreme power of the State, and flowing directly from the Head of the Church to the office-bearers thereof, to the exclusion of the civil magistrate, comprehends, as the objects of it, the preaching of the Word, administration of the sacraments, correction of manners, the admission of the office-bearers of the Church to their offices, their suspension and deprivation therefrom, the infliction and removal of Church censures, and, generally, the whole “power of the keys,” which, by the said Confession, is declared, in conformity with Scripture, to have been “committed” to Church officers, and which, as well as the preaching of the Word and the administration of the sacraments, it is likewise thereby declared, that “the civil magistrate may not assume to himself:”

And whereas this jurisdiction and government, since it regards only spiritual condition, rights, and privileges, doth not interfere with the jurisdiction of secular tribunals, whose determinations as to all temporalities conferred by the State upon the Church, and as to all civil consequences attached by law to the decisions of Church Courts in matters spiritual, this Church hath ever admitted, and doth admit, to be exclusive and ultimate, as she hath ever given and inculcated implicit obedience thereto:

And whereas the above mentioned essential doctrine and fundamental principle in the constitution of the Church, and the government and exclusive jurisdiction flowing therefrom, founded on God’s Word, and set forth in the Confession of Faith and other Standards of this Church, have been, by divers and repeated Acts of Parliament, recognised, ratified, and confirmed—inasmuch as,—

First, The said Confession itself, containing the doctrine and principles above set forth, was “ratified and established, and voted and approved as the public and avowed Confession of this Church,” by the fifth Act of the second Session of the first Parliament of King William and Queen Mary, entitled, “Act ratifying the Confession of Faith, and settling Presbyterian Church government;”—to which Act the said Confession is annexed, and with it incorporated in the statute law of this kingdom.

Second, By an Act passed in the first Parliament of King James VI., entitled, “Of admission of ministers; of laic patronages,” it is enacted and declared, “That the examination and admission of ministers within this realm be only in the power of the Kirk, now openly and publicly professed within the same;” and, while the “presentation of laic patronages” was thereby “reserved to the just and ancient patrons,” it was provided, that, if the presentee of a patron should be refused to be admitted by the inferior ecclesiastical authorities, it should be lawful for the patron “to appeal to the General Assembly of the whole realm, by whom the cause being decided, shall take end as they decern and declare.”

Third, By an Act passed in the same first Parliament, and renewed in the sixth Parliament of the said King James VI., entitled, “Anent the jurisdiction of the Kirk,” the said Kirk is declared to have jurisdiction “in the preaching of the true Word of Jesus Christ, correction of manners, and administration of the holy sacraments;” and it is farther declared, “That there be no other jurisdiction ecclesiastical acknowledged within this realm, other than that which is and shall be within the same Kirk, or that flows therefrom, concerning the premises ;” which Act, and that last before mentioned, were ratified and approved by another Act passed in the year 1581, entitled, “Ratification of the liberty of the true Kirk of God and religion, with confirmation of the Laws and Acts made to that effect of before ;” which other Act, and all the separate Acts therein recited, were again revived, ratified, and confirmed by an Act of the twelfth Parliament of the said King James VI., entitled, “Ratification of the Liberty of the true Kirk,” &c. ; which said Act (having been repealed in 1662) was revived, renewed, and confirmed by the before mentioned statute of King William and Queen Mary.

Fourth, The said Act of the twelfth Parliament of King James VI. ratified and approved the General Assemblies, Provincial Synods, Presbyteries, and Kirk-Sessions “appointed by the Kirk,” and “the whole jurisdiction and discipline of the same Kirk ;” cessed and annulled “all and whatsoever acts, laws, and statutes, made at any time before the day and date thereof, against the liberty of the true Kirk, jurisdiction and discipline thereof, as the same is used and exercised within this realm ;” appointed presentations to benefices to be directed to Presbyteries, “with full power to give collation thereupon, and to put order to all matters and causes ecclesiastical within their bounds, according to the discipline of the Kirk, providing the foresaid Presbyteries be bound and astricted to receive and admit whatsoever qualified minister, presented by his Majesty or laic patrons ;” (the effect of which proviso, and of the reservation in the Act of the first Parliament of King James VI., above mentioned, is hereinafter more fully adverted to ;) and farther declared, that the jurisdiction of the Sovereign and his Courts, as set forth in a previous Act, to extend over all persons his subjects, and “in all matters,” should “noways be prejudicial nor derogate any thing to the privilege that God has given to the spiritual office-bearers of the Kirk, concerning heads of religion, matters of heresy, excommunication, collation, or deprivation of ministers, or any such like essential censures, grounded and having warrant of the Word of God ;” by which enactment, declaration, and acknowledgment, the State recognised and established as a fundamental principle of the constitution of the kingdom, that the jurisdiction of the Church in these matters was “given by God” to the office-bearers thereof, and was exclusive, and free from coercion by any tribunals holding power or authority from the State or supreme civil magistrate.

Fifth, The Parliament holden by King Charles II., immediately on his restoration to the throne, while it repealed the above recited act of the twelfth Parliament of King James and other relative acts, at the same time acknowledged the supreme and exclusive nature of the jurisdiction thereby recognised to be in the Church, describing the said Acts, as Acts “by which the sole and only power and jurisdiction within this Church doth stand in the Church, and in the General, Provincial, and Presbyterial Assemblies and Kirk-Sessions,” and as Acts “which may be interpreted to have given any Church power, jurisdiction, or government, to the office-bearers of the Church, their respective meetings, other than that which acknowledgeth a dependence upon, and subordination to, the sovereign power of the King, as supreme.”

Sixth, The aforesaid Act of King William and Queen Mary,—on the narrative that their Majesties and the Estates of Parliament conceived “it to be their bounden duty, after the great deliverance that God hath lately wrought for this Church and kingdom, in the first place, to settle and secure therein the true Protestant religion, according to the truth of God’s Word, as it hath of a long time been professed within this land ; as also the government of Christ’s Church within this nation, agreeable to the Word of God, and most conducive to true piety and godliness, and the establishing of peace and tranquillity within this realm,”—besides ratifying and establishing as aforesaid the Confession of Faith, did also “establish, ratify, and confirm the Presbyterian Church government and discipline ; that is to say, the government of the Church by Kirk-Sessions, Presbyteries, Provincial Synods, and General Assemblies, ratified and established by the 116th Act of James VI., Parliament 12, anno 1592, entitled, ‘Ratification of the Liberty of the true Kirk,’ &c., and thereafter received by the general consent of this nation, to be the only government of Christ’s Church within this kingdom ;” and revived and confirmed the said Act of King James VI.

And whereas, not only was the exclusive and ultimate jurisdiction of the Church Courts, in the government of the Church, and especially in the particular matters spiritual and ecclesiastical, above mentioned, recognised, ratified, and confirmed,—thus necessarily implying the denial of power on the part of any secular tribunal, holding its authority from the Sovereign, to review the sentences of the Church Courts in regard to such matters, or coerce them in the exercise of such jurisdiction :

out all such power, and all claim on the part of the Sovereign to be considered supreme governor over the subjects of this kingdom in causes ecclesiastical and spiritual, as he is in causes civil and temporal, was, after a long continued struggle, finally and expressly repudiated and cast out of the constitution of Scotland, as inconsistent with the Presbyterian Church government established at the Revolution, and hereafter unalterably secured by the Treaty of Union with England; by the constitution of which latter kingdom, differing in this respect from that of Scotland, the Sovereign is recognised to be supreme governor, "as well in all spiritual and ecclesiastical things and causes as temporal." Thus:—

First, The General Assembly having, in the year 1582, proceeded to inflict the censures of the Church upon Robert Montgomery, minister of Stirling, for seeking to force himself, under a presentation from the king, into the archbishopric of Glasgow, contrary to an act of the General Assembly discharging the office of Prelatic bishop in the Church, and for appealing to the secular tribunals against the infliction of Church censures by the Church courts, and seeking to have these suspended and interdicted,—and having deposed and excommunicated him, notwithstanding of an interdict pronounced by the Privy Council of Scotland, the then supreme secular court of the kingdom,—and having at the same time declared it to be part of the subsisting discipline of the Church, that any ministers thereof who "should seek any way by the civil power to exempt and withdraw themselves from the jurisdiction of the Kirk, or procure, obtain, or use any letters or charges, &c., to impair, hurt, or stay the said jurisdiction, discipline, &c., or to make any appellation from the General Assembly to stop the discipline or order of the ecclesiastical policy or jurisdiction granted by God's Word to the office-bearers within the said Kirk," were liable to the highest censures of the Church;—although their sentence of excommunication was declared by one of the acts of Parliament of the year 1584, commonly called the "Black Acts," to be void, yet ultimately the king and privy council abandoned their interference, Montgomery submitted to the Church courts, and the statute of the twelfth Parliament of King James VI., already mentioned, cased and annulled "all and whatsoever acts, laws, and statutes made at any time before the day and date thereof, against the liberty of the true Kirk, jurisdiction and discipline thereof, as the same is used and exercised within this realm;" since which enactment, no similar interference with the discipline and censures of the Church was ever attempted till the year 1841. 1592, c. 116.

Second, It having been declared by another of the "Black Acts" aforesaid, entitled, "An act confirming the king's majesty's royal power over all the estates and subjects within this realm," that "his highness, his heirs and successors, by themselves and their councils, are, and in time to come shall be, judges competent to all persons his highness' subjects, of whatsoever estate, degree, function, or condition that ever they be of, spiritual or temporal, in all matters wherein they or any of them shall be apprehended, summoned, or charged to answer to such things as shall be inquired of them by our sovereign lord and his council," it was, by the said before mentioned act of the twelfth Parliament of King James VI., declared that the said act last above mentioned "shall noways be prejudicial, nor derogate any thing to the privilege that God has given to the spiritual office-bearers of the Kirk, concerning heads of religion, matters of heresy, excommunication, collation or deprivation of ministers, or any such like essential censures, specially grounded and having warrant of the Word of God." 1584, c. 129.

Third, It having been enacted, on the establishment of Prelacy in 1612, that every minister, at his admission, should swear obedience to the Sovereign, as "the only lawful supreme governor of this realm, as well in matters spiritual and ecclesiastical as in things temporal," the enactment to this effect was repealed on the restoration of Presbyterian Church government. 1592, c. 116.

Fourth, A like acknowledgment, that the Sovereign was "the only supreme governor of this kingdom, over all persons, and in all causes," having been, on the second establishment of Prelacy consequent on the restoration of King Charles II., required as part of the ordinary oath of allegiance, and having been also inserted into the "Test Oath," so tyrannically attempted to be forced on the subjects of this realm during the reigns of Charles II. and James II., and the same doctrine of the king's supremacy in all causes, spiritual and ecclesiastical, as well as temporal and civil, having farther been separately and specially declared by the first act of the second Parliament of the said King Charles II., (1669,) entitled, "Act asserting his majesty's supremacy over all persons and in all causes ecclesiastical," whereby it was "enacted, asserted, and declared, that his majesty hath the supreme authority and supremacy over all persons, and in all causes ecclesiastical." 1612, c. 1.

Estates, 1689, c. 18. within this kingdom,"— the Estates of this kingdom, at the era of the Revolution, did set forth, as the second article of the "Grievances" of which they demanded redress under their "Claim of Right," "That the first act of Parliament, 1669, is inconsistent with the establishment of Church government now desired, and ought to be abrogated."

1689, c. 1. Fifth, In compliance with this claim, an act was immediately thereafter passed, of which the tenor follows: "Our sovereign lord and lady, the king and queen's majesties, taking into their consideration, that by the second article of the Grievances presented to their majesties by the estates of this kingdom, it is declared, that the first act of the second Parliament of King Charles the Second, entitled, 'Act asserting his majesty's supremacy over all persons and in all causes ecclesiastical,' is inconsistent with the establishment of the church government now desired, and ought to be abrogate: Therefore, their majesties, with advice and consent of the estates of Parliament, do hereby abrogate, rescind, and annul the foresaid act, and declares the same in the whole heads, articles, and clauses thereof, to be of no force or effect in all time coming." In accordance also therewith, the oath of allegiance above mentioned, requiring an acknowledgment of the king's sovereignty "in all causes," was done away, and that substituted which is now in use, simply requiring a promise to be "faithful, and bear true allegiance" to the sovereign; and all preceding laws and acts of Parliament were rescinded, "in so far as they impose any other oaths of allegiance and supremacy, declarations and tests, excepting the oath de fidei." By the which enactments, any claim on the part of the Sovereigns of Scotland to be supreme rulers in spiritual and ecclesiastical, as well as in temporal and civil causes, or to possess any power, by themselves or their judges holding commission from them, to exercise jurisdiction in matters or causes, spiritual and ecclesiastical, was repudiated and excluded from the constitution, as inconsistent with the Presbyterian Church government then established, and secured under the statutes then and subsequently passed, "to continue, without any alteration, to the people of this land, in all succeeding generations."

And whereas divers civil rights and privileges were, by various statutes of the Parliament of Scotland, prior to the Union with England, secured to this Church, and certain civil consequences attached to the sentences of the courts thereof, which were farther directed to be aided and made effectual by all magistrates, judges, and officers of the law; and in particular:—

1592, c. 117. It was, by an act of the twelfth Parliament of King James VI., enacted, "That all and whatsoever sentences of deprivation, either pronounced already, or that happens to be pronounced hereafter by any Presbytery, Synodal or General Assemblies, against any parson or vicar within their jurisdiction, provided since his Highness' coronation, is, and shall be reputed in all judgments, a just cause to seclude the person before provided, and then deprived, from all profits, commodities, rents, and duties of the said parsonage and vicarage, or benefice of cure; and that, either by way of action, exception, or reply; and that the said sentence of deprivation shall be a sufficient cause to make the said benefice to vaik thereby:"

1690, c. 5. As also, by the fifth act of the first Parliament of King William and Queen Mary, it was enacted, "That whatsoever minister, being convened before the said general meeting, and representatives of the Presbyterian ministers or elders, or the visitors to be appointed by them, shall either prove contumacious for not appearing, or be found guilty, and shall be therefor censured, whether by suspension or deposition, they shall, ipso facto, be suspended from, or deprived of their stipends and benefices:"

1695, c. 22. As also, by an act passed in the fourth session of the first Parliament of King William and Queen Mary, entitled, an "Act for settling the peace and quiet of the Church," it was provided, that no minister should be admitted, unless he owned the Presbyterian Church government, as settled by the last recited act, "to be the only government of this Church;" "and that he will submit thereto, and concur therewith, and never endeavour, directly or indirectly, the prejudice or subversion thereof;" and it was statute or ordained, "that the Lords of their Majesties' Privy Council, and all other magistrates, judges, and officers of justice, give all due assistance for making the sentences and censures of the Church, and judicatories thereof, to be obeyed, or otherwise effectual, as accords:"

1695, c. 22. As also, by an act passed in the fifth session of the foresaid Parliament, entitled, an "Act against intruding into Churches without a legal call and admission thereto," on the narrative, "that ministers and preachers, their intruding themselves into vacant churches, possessing of manses and benefices, and exercising any part of the ministerial function in parishes, without a legal call and admission to the said churches, is an high contempt of the law, and of a dangerous consequence, tending to perpetual schism;" such intrusion, without an orderly call from the heritors and elders—the right of presentation by patrons

ing at this time abolished,—and “legal admission from the Presbytery,” was prohibited under certain penalties; and the Lords of the Privy Council were recommended to remove all who had so intruded, and “to take some effectual course for stopping and hindering those ministers who are, or shall be hereafter deposed by the judicatories of the present Established Church, from preaching or exercising any act of their ministerial unction, which” (the said statute declares) “they cannot do after they are deposed, without high contempt of the authority of the Church, and of the laws of the kingdom establishing the same.”

And whereas, at the Union between the two kingdoms, the Parliament of Scotland, being determined that the “true Protestant religion,” as then professed, “with the worship, discipline, and government of this Church, should be effectually and malterably secured,” did, in their Act appointing commissioners to treat with commissioners from the Parliament of England, as to an union of the kingdoms, provide, ^{1705, c. 4.} “That the said commissioners shall not treat of or concerning any alteration of the worship, discipline, and government of the Church of this kingdom, as now by law established;” and did, by another Act, commonly called the Act of Security, and entitled, “Act for securing the Protestant Religion and Presbyterian Church Government,” ^{1706, c. 6.} “establish and confirm the said true Protestant religion, and the worship, discipline, and government of this Church, to continue without any alteration to the people of this land in all succeeding generations;” and did “for ever confirm the 5th Act of the first Parliament of King William and Queen Mary,” entitled, “Act ^{1690, c. 5.} ratifying the Confession of Faith, and settling Presbyterian Church Government, and the whole other Acts of Parliament relating thereto;” and did “expressly provide and declare, That the foresaid true Protestant religion, contained in the above mentioned Confession of Faith, with the form and purity of worship presently in use within this Church, and its Presbyterian Church government and discipline; that is to say, the government of the Church by Kirk-Sessions, Presbyteries, Provincial Synods, and General Assemblies, all established by the foresaid Acts of Parliament, pursuant to the Claim of Right, shall remain and continue unalterable: and that the said Presbyterian government shall be the only government of the Church within the kingdom of Scotland:” And farther, “for the greater security of the same,” did, inter alia, enact, “That, after the decease of her present Majesty, the Sovereign succeeding to her in the Royal Government of the Kingdom of Great Britain shall, in all time coming, at his or her accession to the Crown, swear and subscribe, that they shall inviolably maintain and preserve the foresaid settlement of the true Protestant religion, with the government, worship, discipline, right, and privileges of this Church, as above established by the laws of this kingdom, in prosecution of the Claim of Right;” which said Act of Security, “with the establishment therein contained,” it was specially thereby enacted, “should be held and observed in all time coming, as a fundamental and essential condition of any treaty or union to be concluded betwixt the two kingdoms, without any alteration thereof, or derogation thereto, in any sort, for ever:” It being farther thereby provided, that “the said Act and settlement therein contained shall be insert and repeated in any Act of Parliament that shall pass, for agreeing and concluding the foresaid treaty or union betwixt the two kingdoms; and that the same shall be therein expressly declared to be a fundamental and essential condition of the said treaty or union in all time coming.” In terms of which enactment, this Act of Security was inserted in the Treaty of Union between ^{1706, c. 7.} the two kingdoms, as a fundamental condition thereof, and was also inserted in the Act of the Parliament of Scotland ratifying and approving of the said Treaty, and likewise in the corresponding Act of the Parliament of England, entitled, “An Act ^{5 Anne, c. 5.} for a Union of the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland.”

And whereas, at the date of the said Treaty of Union, the right of patrons to present to churches stood abolished by statute, after the following manner, viz.:—By ^{1690, c. 5.} the Act of King William and Queen Mary, herein before mentioned, the Act of ^{1592, c. 116.} James VI., also herein before mentioned, then standing totally repealed, was only revived, subject to the express exception of “that part of it relating to Patronages,” which consequently remained repealed and unrestored, and “which,” the Act 1690, c. 5, farther bore, “is hereafter to be taken into consideration.” The part of the said Act, thus left repealed and unrevived, was the provision, that Presbyteries “be bound and astricted to receive whatsoever qualified minister presented by his Majesty or laic patrons,”—a provision which, while it subsisted, was held to leave the Church free to proceed in the collation of ministers “according to the discipline of the Kirk;” and non-compliance with which implied only a forfeiture of the fruits of the particular benefice, which it did by virtue of the immediately succeeding statute 1592, c. 117, whereby it was enacted, that “in case the Presbytery refuses to admit any qualified minister presented to them by the patron, it shall be lawful to the patron to retain the whole fruits of the benefice in his own hands.” This subject having, accordingly, been thereafter taken into consideration in the same session of Parliament, was definitively settled by an Act, entitled, “Act concerning Patronages,” whereby the right of presentation by patrons was “annulled and made void,” and a right was vested in the heritors and elders of the respective parishes “to name and propose the person to the whole congregation, to be approven or disapproven by them,” the disapprovers giving in their reasons “to the effect the affair may be cognosed upon by the Presbytery of the bounds, at whose judgment, and by whose determination,” (as is declared by the said Act,) “the calling and entry of a particular minister is to be ordered and concluded.”

And whereas the said Act last mentioned formed part of the settlement of the Presbyterian Church government effected at the Revolution, and was one of the “Acts relating thereto,” and to the statute 1690, c. 5, specially confirmed and secured by the Act of Security and Treaty of Union; yet, notwithstanding thereof, and of the said treaty, the Parliament of Great Britain, by an Act passed in the 10th of Queen Anne, repealed the said Act, “in so far as relates to the presentation of ministers by heritors and others therein mentioned,” and restored to patrons the right of presentation, and enacted that Presbyteries should be “obliged to receive and admit in the same manner, such qualified person or persons, minister or ministers, as shall be presented by the respective patrons, as the persons or ministers presented before the making of this Act ought to have been admitted:”

And whereas, while this Church protested against the passing of the above mentioned Act of Queen Anne, as “contrary to the constitution of the Church, so well secured by the late Treaty of Union, and solemnly ratified by Acts of Parliament in both kingdoms,” and for more than seventy years thereafter uninterruptedly sought for its repeal, she at the same time maintained, and practically exercised, without question or challenge from any quarter, the jurisdiction of her courts to determine ultimately and exclusively, under what circumstances they would admit candidates into the office of the holy ministry, or constitute the pastoral relationship between minister and people, and, generally, “to order and conclude the entry of particular ministers:”

And whereas, in particular, this Church required, as necessary to the admission of a minister to the charge of souls, that he should have received a call from the people over whom he was to be appointed, and did not authorise or permit any one so to be admitted till such call had been sustained by the Church Courts, and did, before and subsequent to the passing of the said Act of Queen Anne, declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Church, as set forth in her authorised Standards, and particularly in the Second Book of Discipline, repeated by Act of Assembly in 1638, that no pastor be intruded upon any congregation contrary to the will of the people :

And whereas, in especial, this fundamental principle was, by the 14th Act of the General Assembly, 1736, re-declared, and directed to be attended to in the settlement of vacant parishes, but having been, after some time, disregarded in the administration of the Church, it was once more re-declared by the General Assembly, 1834, who established certain specific provisions and regulations for carrying it into effect in time to come :

And whereas, by a judgment pronounced by the House of Lords, in 1839, it was, for the first time, declared to be illegal to refuse to take on trial, and to reject the presentee of a patron, (although a layman, and merely a candidate for admission to the office of the ministry,) in consideration of this fundamental principle of the Church, and in respect of the dissent of the congregation; to the authority of which judgment, so far as disposing of civil interests, this Church implicitly bowed, by at once abandoning all claim to the jus devolutum,—to the benefice, for any pastor to be settled by her,—and to all other civil right or privilege which might otherwise have been competent to the Church or her Courts; and anxiously desirous, at the same time, of avoiding collision with the Civil Courts, she so far suspended the operation of the above mentioned Act of Assembly, as to direct all cases, in which dissents should be lodged by a majority of the congregation, to be reported to the General Assembly, in the hope that a way might be opened up to her for reconciling with the civil rights declared by the House of Lords, adherence to the above mentioned fundamental principle, which she could not violate or abandon by admitting to the holy office of the ministry a party not having, in her conscientious judgment, a legitimate call thereto, or by intruding a pastor on a reclaiming congregation contrary to their will; and farther, addressed herself to the Government and the Legislature for such an alteration of the law, (as for the first time now interpreted,) touching the temporalities belonging to the Church, (which alone she held the decision of the House of Lords to be capable of affecting or regulating,) as might prevent a separation between the cure of souls and the benefice thereto attached.

And whereas, although during the century which elapsed after the passing of the said Act of Queen Anne, Presbyteries repeatedly rejected the presentees of patrons on grounds undoubtedly ultra vires of the Presbyteries, as having reference to the title of the patron or the validity of competing presentations, and which were held by the Court of Session to be contrary to law, and admitted others to the pastoral office in the parishes presented to, who had no presentation or legal title to the benefice, the said Court, even in such cases, never attempted or pretended to direct or coerce the Church Courts, in the exercise of their functions in regard to the collation of ministers or other matters acknowledged by the State to have been conferred on the Church, not by the State, but by God himself. On the contrary, they limited their decrees to the regulation and disposal of the temporalities which were derived from the State, and which, as the proper subjects of “actions civil,” were within the province assigned to the Court of Session by the Constitution, refusing to interfere with the peculiar functions and exclusive jurisdiction of the Courts of the Church. Thus,—

In the case of Auchtermuchty, where the Presbytery had wrongfully admitted another than the patron’s presentee, the Court found, “That the right to a stipend is a civil right; and, therefore, that the Court have power to cognosce and determine upon the legality of the admission of ministers, in hunc effectum, whether the person admitted shall have right to the stipend or not;” and simply decided, that the patron was entitled to retain the stipend in his own hands.

Moncrieff v. Maxton, Feb. 15, 1735.

So also, the same course was followed in the cases of Culross, Lanark, and Forbes; in reference to one of which (that of Lanark) the Government of the country, on behalf of the Crown, in which the patronage was vested, recognised the retention of stipend by the patron, as the only competent remedy for a wrongful refusal to admit his presentee;—the Secretary of State having, in a letter to the Lord Advocate of Scotland, (January 17, 1752,) signified the pleasure of his Majesty, “Directing and ordering his Lordship to do every thing necessary and competent by law, for asserting and taking benefit, in the present case, of the said right and privilege of patrons by the law of Scotland, to retain the fruits of the benefice in their own hands till their presentee be admitted.”

Cochran v. Stoddart, June 26, 1751.
Dick v. Carmichael, Mar. 2, 1753.
Forbes v. McWilliam, Feb. 1762

So farther, in the before mentioned case of Culross, the Court refused, “as incompetent,” a bill of advocacy presented to them by the patron, for the purpose of staying the admission by the Presbytery of another than his presentee.

Cochran, Nov. 19, 1748.

So likewise, in the case of Dunse, the Court would not interfere in regard to a conclusion to prohibit the Presbytery “to moderate in a call at large, or settle any other man,” because “that was interfering with the power of ordination or internal policy of the Church, with which the Lords thought they had nothing to do.”

Hay v. Presbytery of Dunse, Feb. 26, 1749.

And so, in the same manner, in the case of Unst, where the party concluded to have the Presbytery ordained to proceed to the presentee’s settlement, as well as to have the validity of the presentation and the right to the stipend declared, the Court limited their decree to the civil matters of the presentation and stipend.

Lord Dundas v. Presbytery of Shetland, May 15, 1755.

And whereas, pending the efforts of the Church to accomplish the desired alteration of the law, the Court of Session,—a tribunal instituted by special Act of Parlia-

1537, c. 26. ment for the specific and limited purpose of "doing and administration of justice in all civil actions," with Judges appointed simply "to sit and decide upon all actions civil,"—not confining themselves to the determination of "civil actions,"—to the withholding of civil consequences from sentences of the Church Courts, which, in their judgment, were not warranted by the statutes recognising the jurisdiction of these courts,—to the enforcing of the provision of the Act 1592, c. 117, for retention of the fruits of the benefice in case of wrongful refusal to admit a presentee, or the giving of other civil redress for any civil injury held by them to have been wrongfully sustained in consequence thereof,—have, in numerous and repeated instances, stepped beyond the province allotted to them by the Constitution, and within which alone their decisions can be held to declare the law, or to have the force of law, deciding not only "actions civil," but "causes spiritual and ecclesiastical,"—and that, too, even where these had no connection with the exercise of the right of patronage,—and have invaded the jurisdiction, and encroached upon the spiritual privileges of the Courts of this Church, in violation of the Constitution of the country,—in defiance of the statutes above mentioned, and in contempt of the laws of this kingdom; as for instance—

1st Lethendy Case.

By interdicting Presbyteries of the Church from admitting to a pastoral charge, when about to be done irrespective of the civil benefice attached thereto, or even where there was no benefice—no right of patronage—no stipend—no manse or glebe, and no place of worship, or any patrimonial right connected therewith.

Stewarton Case.

By issuing a decree requiring and ordaining a Church Court to take on trial and admit to the office of the holy ministry, in a particular charge, a probationer or unordained candidate for the ministry, and to intrude him also on the congregation, contrary to the will of the people: both in this and in the cases first mentioned, invading the Church's exclusive jurisdiction in the admission of ministers, the preaching of the Word, and administration of sacraments—recognised by statute to have been "given by God" directly to the Church, and to be beyond the limits of the secular jurisdiction.

Daviot Case.

By prohibiting the communicants of the Church from intimating their dissent from a call proposed to be given to a candidate for the ministry to become their pastor.

Stewarton Case.

By granting interdict against the establishment of additional ministers to meet the wants of an increasing population, as uninterruptedly practised from the Reformation to this day;—against constituting a new Kirk-Session in a parish, to exercise discipline;—and against innovating on its existing state, "as regards pastoral superintendence, its Kirk-Session, and jurisdiction, and discipline thereto belonging."

Strathbogie Case.

By interdicting the preaching of the Gospel, and administration of ordinances throughout a whole district, by any minister of the Church under authority of the Church Courts, thus assuming to themselves the regulation of the "preaching of the Word" and "administration of the sacraments," and at the same time invading the privilege, common to all the subjects of the realm, of having freedom to worship God according to their consciences, and under the guidance of the ministers of the communion to which they belong.

2d Auchterarder Case.

By holding the members of inferior Church judicatories liable in damages for refusing to break their ordination vows and oaths, (sworn by them, in compliance with the requirements of the statutes of the realm, and, in particular, of the Act of Security embodied in the Treaty of Union,) by disobeying and setting at defiance the sentences, in matters spiritual and ecclesiastical, of their superior Church judicatories, to which, by the Constitution of the Church and country, they are, in such matters, subordinate and subject, and which, by their said vows and oaths, they stand pledged to obey.

Culhamond Case.

By interdicting the execution of the sentence of a Church judicatory prohibiting a minister from preaching or administering ordinances within a particular parish, pending the discussion of a cause in the Church Courts as to the validity of his settlement therein.

Carnburnethan Case.

By interdicting the General Assembly and inferior Church judicatories from inflicting Church censures; as in one case, where interdict was granted against the pronouncing of sentence of deposition upon a minister found guilty of theft by a judgment acquiesced in by himself; in another, where a Presbytery was interdicted from proceeding in the trial of a minister accused of fraud and swindling; and in a third, where a Presbytery was interdicted from proceeding with a libel against a licentiate for drunkenness, obscenity, and profane swearing.

4th Lethendy Case.

1st and 2d Strathbogie Cases.

By suspending Church censures, inflicted by the Church judicatories in the exercise of discipline. (which, by special statute, all "Judges and officers of justice" are ordered “to give due assistance” for making “to be obeyed or otherwise effectual,”) and so reposing ministers suspended from their office, to the power of preaching and administering ordinances; thus assuming to themselves the “power of the keys.”

By interdicting the execution of a sentence of deposition from the office of the holy ministry, pronounced by the General Assembly of the Church; thereby also usurping the “power of the keys,” and supporting deposed ministers in the exercise of ministerial functions, which is declared by special statute to be a “high contempt of the authority of the Church and of the laws of the kingdom establishing the same.”

By assuming to judge of the right of individuals elected members of the General Assembly to sit therein, and interdicting them from taking their seats; thus interfering with the constitution of the Supreme Court of the Church, and violating her freedom in the holding of General Assemblies secured to her by statute.

By, in the greater number of the instances above referred to, requiring the inferior judicatories of the Church to disobey the sentences, in matters spiritual and ecclesiastical, of the superior judicatories, to which, by the constitution in Church and State, they are subordinate and subject, and which, in compliance with the provisions of the statutes of the realm, their members have solemnly sworn to obey;—thus subverting “the government of the Church by Kirk-Sessions, Presbyteries, Provincial Synods, and General Assemblies,” settled by statute and the Treaty of Union, as “the only government of the Church within the kingdom of Scotland.”

By all which Acts, the said Court of Session, apparently not adverting to the oath taken by the Sovereign from whom they hold their commissions, have exercised powers not conferred upon them by the Constitution, but by it excluded from the province of any secular tribunal,—have invaded the jurisdiction of the Courts of the Church—have subverted its government—have illegally attempted to coerce Church Courts in the exercise of their purely spiritual functions—have usurped the “power of the keys”—have wrongfully acclaimed, as the subjects of their civil jurisdiction, to be regulated by their decrees, ordination of laymen to the office of the holy ministry, admission to the cure of souls, Church censures, the preaching of the Word, and the administration of the sacraments—and have employed the means entrusted to them for enforcing submission to their lawful authority, in compelling submission to that which they have usurped—in opposition to the doctrines of God’s Word set forth in the Confession of Faith, as ratified by statute—in violation of the Constitution—in breach of the Treaty of Union, and in disregard of divers express enactments of the Legislature.

And whereas, farther encroachments are threatened on the government and discipline of the Church as by law established, in actions now depending before the said Court, in which it is sought to have sentences of deposition from the office of the holy ministry reduced and set aside, and minorities of inferior judicatories authorised to take on trial and admit to the office of the holy ministry, in disregard of, and in opposition to, the authority of the judicatories of which they are members, and of the superior judicatories to which they are subordinate and subject.

And whereas, the government and discipline of Christ’s Church cannot be carried on according to His laws and the constitution of His Church, subject to the exercise, by any secular tribunal, of such powers as have been assumed by the said Court of Session.

And whereas this Church, highly valuing, as she has ever done, her connection, on the terms contained in the statutes herein before recited, with the State, and her possession of the temporal benefits thereby secured to her for the advantage of the people, must, nevertheless, even at the risk and hazard of the loss of that connection and of these public benefits,—deply as she would deplore and deprecate such a result for herself and the nation,—persevere in maintaining her liberties as a Church of Christ, and in carrying on the government thereof on her own constitutional principles, and must refuse to intrude ministers on her congregations, to obey the unlawful coercion attempted to be enforced against her in the exercise of her spiritual functions and jurisdiction, or to consent that her people be deprived of their rightful liberties.

THEREFORE, the General Assembly, while, as above set forth, they fully recognise the absolute jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in relation to all matters whatsoever of a civil nature, and especially in relation to all the temporalities conferred by the State upon the Church, and the civil consequences attached by law to the decisions, in matters spiritual, of the Church Courts, do, in name and on behalf of this Church, and of the nation and people of Scotland, and under the sanction of the several statutes, and the Treaty of Union herein before recited, CLAIM, as of RIGHT, that she shall freely possess and enjoy her liberties, government, discipline, rights, and privileges, according to law, especially for the defence of the spiritual liberties of her people, and that she shall be protected therein from the foresaid unconstitutional and illegal encroachments of the said Court of Session, and her people secured in their Christian and constitutional rights and liberties.

And they DECLARE, that they cannot, in accordance with the Word of God, the intruded and ratified Standards of this Church, and the dictates of their consciences, intrude ministers on reclaiming congregations, or carry on the government of Christ's Church, subject to the coercion attempted by the Court of Session as above set forth; and that, at the risk and hazard of suffering the loss of the secular benefits conferred by the State, and the public advantages of an establishment, they must, as by God's grace they will, refuse so to do; for, highly as they estimate these, they cannot put them in competition with the inalienable liberties of a Church of Christ, which, alike by their duty and allegiance to their Head and King, and by their ordination vows, they are bound to maintain, "notwithstanding of whatsoever trouble or persecution may arise."

And they PROTEST, that all and whatsoever acts of the Parliament of Great Britain, passed without the consent of this Church and nation, in alteration of, or derogation to the aforesaid government, discipline, right, and privileges of this Church, (which were not allowed to be treated of by the Commissioners for settling the terms of the Union between the two kingdoms, but were secured by antecedent stipulation, provided to be inserted, and inserted in the Treaty of Union, as an unalterable and fundamental condition thereof, and so reserved from the cognizance and power of the federal legislature created by the said Treaty,)—as also, all and whatsoever sentences of courts in contravention of the same government, discipline, right, and privileges, are and shall be, in themselves, void and null, and of no legal force or effect; and that, while they will accord full submission to all such acts and sentences, in so far—though in so far only—as these may regard civil rights and privileges, whatever may be their opinion of the justice or legality of the same, their said submission shall not be deemed an acquiescence therein, but that it shall be free to the members of this Church, or their successors, at any time hereafter, when there shall be a prospect of obtaining justice, to claim the restitution of all such civil rights and privileges, and temporal benefits and endowments, as for the present they may be compelled to yield up, in order to preserve to their office-bearers the free exercise of their spiritual government and discipline, and to their people the liberties, of which respectively it has been attempted, so contrary to law and justice, to deprive them.

And, finally, the General Assembly call the Christian people of this kingdom, and all the Churches of the Reformation throughout the world, who hold the great doctrine of the sole Headship of the Lord Jesus over his Church, to witness, that it is for their adherence to that doctrine, as set forth in their Confession of Faith, and ratified by the laws of this kingdom, and for the maintenance by them of the jurisdiction of the office-bearers, and the freedom and privileges of the members of the Church from that doctrine flowing, that this Church is subjected to hardship, and that the rights so sacredly pledged and secured to her are put in peril; and they especially invite all the office-bearers and members of this Church, who are willing to suffer for their allegiance to their adorable King and Head, to stand by the Church, and by each other, in defence of the doctrine aforesaid, and of the liberties and privileges, whether of office-bearers or people, which rest upon it; and to unite in supplication to Almighty God, that He would be pleased to turn the hearts of the rulers of this kingdom, to keep unbroken the faith pledged to this Church, in former days, by statutes and solemn treaty, and the obligations, come under to God himself, to preserve and maintain the government and discipline of this Church in accordance with His Word: or otherwise, that he would give strength to this Church—office-bearers and people—to endure resignedly the loss of the temporal benefits of an establishment, and the personal sufferings and sacrifices to which they may be called, and would also inspire them with zeal and energy to promote the advancement of His Son's kingdom, in whatever condition it may be His will to place them; and that, in His own good time, He would restore to them these benefits, the fruits of the struggles and sufferings of their fathers in times past in the same cause; and, thereafter, give them grace to employ them more effectually than hitherto they have done, for the manifestation of His glory.

Sess. 17, May 30, 1842.—Address to the Queen on the subject of the foregoing Claim of Right.

May it please your Majesty,

We, your Majesty's most loyal, dutiful, and devoted subjects, the ministers and elders of the Church of Scotland, met in General Assembly, relying with undoubted confidence on the gracious assurance repeatedly vouchsafed to us, of your Majesty's determination to maintain inviolate the government, worship, discipline, rights, and privileges of this Church, humbly approach your Majesty, in order to lay before your Majesty a statement of the invasions which have recently been made on the said government, discipline, rights, and privileges of this Church.

We deeply lament that the invasions of which we complain have proceeded from the Court of Session, to whose determinations, in their own province, we have ever yielded and inculcated implicit obedience.

We most respectfully submit to your Majesty's favourable consideration the Claim, Declaration, and Protest, which we have adopted with reference to this matter, wherein are fully set forth the legal and constitutional securities for the rights and privileges of this Church, and the encroachments thereon, from which we desire to be protected.

We fully rely on your Majesty's determination to uphold and maintain the government, discipline, rights, and privileges of this Church; and while we cannot, in accordance with the dictates of our conscience, and our views of the Word of God, submit to the coercion attempted over us in the exercise of our spiritual functions by the said Court, and must refuse to do so, even at the hazard of the loss of the temporal advantages we at present enjoy, we earnestly trust that such measures may be directed by your Majesty as will preserve to us the peaceable possession of those rights and privileges secured to us by statute and solemn treaty.

Given at Edinburgh, this 30th day of May 1842, by your Majesty's most faithful, obedient, and loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of this National Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

D. WELSH, Moderator.

The General Assembly, having considered the Overture anent Union of Offices, agreed to transmit the same to Presbyteries for their consideration.

The General Assembly, being desirous to promote the interests of religion and literature, direct all the Presbyteries of this Church to employ all means competent to them in order to prevent the same person from holding at the same time a Principality or Professorship in any University and a parochial or pastoral charge; and that this direction may be uniformly carried into effect, the General Assembly do, with the consent of a majority of the Presbyteries of this Church, enact and ordain, that if a Principal or Professor in any University be hereafter presented to a parochial or pastoral charge, he shall, on his admission thereto, forthwith resign his Principality or Professorship, and at the next ordinary meeting of Presbytery thereafter produce to the Presbytery a certificate that his resignation has been accepted; and that if any minister of a parish, or any pastor of a congregation, be hereafter presented or elected to any Principality or Professorship in any University, he shall, at the first ordinary meeting of Presbytery, which shall take place after his induction into the Principality or Professorship, resign into the hands of the Presbytery his parochial or pastoral charge; and in the event of this injunction not being complied with by the persons holding such offices, the General Assembly, with the like consent of the Presbyteries of this Church, ordain the Presbytery of the bounds to serve him, in his character of minister, with a libel for the breach of this statute, and to proceed therein according to the rules of this Church.

XXX.

Sess. ult., May 30, 1842.—Act appointing a Day of Humiliation and Prayer.

The General Assembly, having considered the Overtures for a Day of Humiliation, and being deeply impressed with the continued tokens of the Divine displeasure still resting on the Church, and on this highly favoured and guilty land, did, and hereby do, appoint Thursday, the 21st day of July, to be set apart as a day of solemn humiliation and prayer, with especial reference to the distressed condition of the country; and the General Assembly earnestly invite the co-operation and concurrence of other denominations of Christians in the observance of that day; and appoint their Moderator to prepare a suitable pastoral address.

(The Address is appended to the Acts in the original edition, and is as follows:—)

PASTORAL ADDRESS.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN,—The alarming indications of the Divine displeasure against our native country, manifested in the divisions and distractions that continue to afflict our Church, and in the current of events by which vast multitudes of our brethren around us are subjected to all the ills of poverty and want, have moved us, met together in solemn Assembly, to proclaim a fast throughout all the land; and while we call upon the individuals, and families and flocks over which the Lord has made us overseers, we would invite others also to join together in humiliation of soul before the Lord, under His threatening judgments, and in earnest supplication that He would turn away His wrath, and cause His face to shine upon us.

The wretchedness endured by increasing numbers of our brethren in the humbler classes of society from actual destitution, the less palpable, but not less real sufferings of those whose hearts are brought low under the silent decay of their worldly substance, and the acknowledged inability of the wisdom of man to devise adequate means for the removal of these evils, or even to determine the period of their continuance, or the limits of their operation, are calculated to awaken the most thoughtless to serious reflection. Afflictive providences, in whatever circumstances they are exhibited, should ever inspire sentiments of reverential awe, leading each individual beholder to be still, and know that God is the Lord. Wherever there is suffering there must have been sin; and when we see the outstretched arm of the Lord descending upon the devoted head, we are reminded of our own sinful state, and of our fearful deservings. But when we behold multitudes, and these our fellow-countrymen, singled out as the objects of the Divine chastisements,—their comforts blasted, their prospects darkened, their minds amazed through fear, and when no one can say when or where the evil may be stayed,—a more impressive lesson is set before us. National judgments betoken national sin. And in considering the appalling scenes of human misery existing in the midst of us, we are called upon to stand forth before the Lord, with our little ones, our wives, and our children, and to cry unto Him in our affliction, adoring his awful sovereignty, acknowledging our individual share in the guilt that has drawn down his chastisements, and submitting ourselves wholly to his righteous disposal, while deprecating the inflictions of his deserved displeasure.

In preparing for this solemnity our first duty must be, to endeavour to ascertain wherefore the Lord has a controversy with us. And here we must not confine our inquiries to the special occasions or more obvious and immediate causes of the distresses which prevail. It is the part of wisdom, indeed, to attend to these, and to seek, by every proper means, for their removal. But our search must extend farther, even to the sins of the people that cause the land to mourn. We are ever ready to limit our views to what is present and outward; and in witnessing the calamities of others, we are prone to conceive that they are sufficiently accounted for by the operation of temporary causes, in which we have no farther concern than as they afford prudential rules for the guidance of human conduct. In acting thus, however, we misinterpret altogether the true character of events, and neglect intimations conveyed in the course of Divine Providence. Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not be afraid? Shall there be evil in the city, and the Lord hath not done it? The Scriptures teach us, that the Almighty, in his dispensations, has purposes beyond the special occasions of them; that the ills which come upon one class of individuals have often a reference to the transgressions of others; while they hold out a general warning, that unless we repent, we shall all likewise perish.

Every individual, therefore, should be much employed in searching and bewailing the transgressions of his heart and of his life; and with this exercise of soul respecting our individual condition, we should connect a serious consideration of the iniquities that prevail in the land, that we may unite in mourning over the sins with which, as a nation, we are chargeable. And here the abuse we have made of our special privileges cannot fail to arise before our view. It was the voice of the Almighty to the children of Israel of old,—You only have I known of all the nations of the earth; therefore will I punish you for all your iniquities. And the distinguishing manifestations of the Divine goodness which have been displayed to our highly favoured land, as they aggravate our guilt, so they mark out the character of our national suffering as a Divine infliction. In the free preaching of the glorious Gospel,—in the general diffusion of the benefits of education,—in the Scriptural purity of the institutions of religion, there has been no people on the face of the earth more signally blessed. And it affords matter of the deepest sorrow and shame to all, that we have so little profited by these inestimable advantages.

The Word of God has had free course in our land, and the Gospel has been freely preached to us. But can it be said that the privilege has been fully improved? Have all diligently waited upon God in his ordinances? It has, indeed, pleased God, by the foolishness of preaching, to save multitudes who have believed. But is not the number of those increasing who forsake the assembling of themselves together? And even of those who seem to seek after God, and delight to know his ways as a nation, that did righteousness, and forsook not the ordinances of their God, how much of self-pleasing, and formality, and hypocrisy, have mingled with their service? Have the professors of religion lived up to their privileges, or shown their efficacy in their lives? Have they made it their holy aim to exhibit in the temper of their minds, and the tenor of their conduct, the blessed power of the Gospel of our salvation? Has it been their object to give full proof of the energy which God imparts to his Word in delivering men from the love of a present evil world, and from the principles of our evil nature? Or, while even the best must acknowledge that they fall short in all these respects, do not many seek how they may make their religious professions harmonize with the pursuit of all those objects upon which the men of this world are most strongly bent, and the indulgence of the sinful passions that reign undisguised among the children of disobedience?

We have experienced the great national blessing of a wide-spread education. We have been indebted to the enlightened zeal of our early Reformers from the errors of Popery, for advantages connected with the instruction of the young of all classes, such as no other country has enjoyed, and to which the high name of Scotland among the nations of the earth, and the success of so many of her sons in our own and in other lands, must be mainly ascribed. As our nation owes these advantages to religion, have we made a due return to religion? Has sufficient care been exercised that the schools of elementary instruction should, agreeably to the intention of their founders, be chiefly consecrated to the godly upbringing of the young? Or has there not been great neglect in this respect? Has not that which was intended as a spiritual ordinance been too much regarded as a secular institution, so that the opportunities of early education have been too often employed with no higher aim than as a means for promoting the worldly advantages of ourselves and our children?

And having experienced the advantages of the religious ordinances and institutions handed down to us by the holy men who have gone before us, have we been sufficiently careful that their benefits should be enjoyed by our brethren around us according to the necessities of an increasing population? Have we been mindful, as a nation, of teaching diligently to our children the truths which we learned from our fathers, that they might declare them to the generation to come? Or, are we not leaving thousands, and tens of thousands of the little children whom Jesus loves, to rise around us without any effectual endeavour to bring them to Jesus? And are there not multitudes among us, of whom, in the degradation of their penury, it must be said that no one careth for their souls, even in this land that names the name of Him who gave it as a characteristic of his appearing, that the Gospel was preached to the poor?

From the necessities of our earthly condition, and from the enterprising character of our countrymen, there is scarcely any land into which our brethren and children have not penetrated. In almost all our Colonies, vast numbers of Scotsmen are to be found, and new kingdoms are rising from our loins. An opportunity is thus presented to us for extending the knowledge of the Lord over the earth. But have we laid out this talent to usury? Or are we not allowing our fellow-countrymen to leave our shores without any adequate efforts for their spiritual interests; and, instead of seeking that they may prove heralds of the Gospel in the new regions whither they are going, or be themselves the founders of new Christian kingdoms, neglecting them altogether, or thinking merely of their temporal state, and continuing our intercourse with them for no higher end than the promotion of our individual advantage, or adding to the national resources?

In no respect has our country been more distinguished than by the high Scriptural principles professed by almost all denominations of Christians among us respecting the sanctification of the Sabbath, and in regard to the outward observance of it there is certainly less to condemn than in any other land; and there is no particular as to which it could be more clearly proved that godliness is profitable unto all things. And yet how much have we to answer for in the desecration of that holy day? How far does our practice fall short of our principles? And while multitudes are openly profaning, in every varied form, the day that God has declared to be holy, how many of those by whom it is outwardly observed satisfy themselves with the form instead of the substance? How melancholy are the inconsistencies exhibited in regard to it? And how few display such unequivocal tokens of its sanctifying influences upon their whole deportment, as, without the Word, might win the thoughtless and profane to external decency, and it may be, to inward holiness?

In regard to these and all other sins, our duty is to abase ourselves in the dust because of the dishonour we have done to His name and cause who has so highly favoured us, and, in the strength of the Lord, to turn away from our iniquities,—praying that a spirit of repentance and reformation may be shed abroad, that we all may be led to a better improvement of our mercies,—that we may seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, trusting that all needful things will be added unto us, so that our sufferings may be removed, or, if continued, may tend to perfect that righteousness which alone exalteth a nation.

In calling you to the exercises of fasting and humiliation, we would never have you forget that sympathy and relief must be extended to those who suffer, as the first and as the abiding effect of genuine contrition of soul. We have already called upon you to this duty—affording you an opportunity to contribute of your substance as the Lord hath prospered you; and so long as there is distress among us, your liberality must be exercised for its mitigation. This is the unfailing consequence, or rather, it is the essential element, of godly penitence. Is not this the fast that I have chosen, saith the Lord, to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house? When thou seest the naked, that thou cover him; and hide not thyself from thine own flesh.

If such a spirit were generally to prevail; if even those professing godliness were to walk worthy of their vocation, there would be reason to hope for the fulfilment of the promise, that our light would break forth as the morning;—that the sad calamities which are at present exciting the apprehensions of all would wholly overpass, and that a barrier would be reared against their recurrence. If there were less of the love of gain, and more of the love of God, a spirit of greater moderation would be diffused; and if the condition of the poor were more wisely considered, and if more care were exercised for the elevation of their character and habits, they would less readily yield themselves as instruments of the cupidity of those who, hastening to be rich, fall into a snare, and pierce themselves, and pierce their country, through with many sorrows.

It is in Religion alone that the permanent security and happiness of any people is to be found; and though the chastisements of the Lord may be withdrawn without the spirit of repentance being exhibited, their removal can be in such cases only temporary, and the last state of such a land will be worse than its first. It is impossible, therefore, not to think with sorrow of those who limit their views to inferior causes, and who refuse to own the work of the Lord. With reference to our brethren in affliction, while we cannot but see cause of thankfulness in the patience with which their trials have been borne, and while we trust that, in many instances, this has arisen from a spirit of submission to the Divine will, we would remind those with whom it is otherwise, that the benefit of their Fatherly discipline is not received till they see who appointed the rod, and that till then all their temporal deprivations are but typical of a worse famine that may bring death to their souls. And in regard to those who, while they may pity and aid the destitute, make a mock at every appeal to the duty of recognising a higher power in this national visitation, and who are prepared to make our day of fasting a day of folly and sin, our souls would weep in secret places for their pride, and our eyes would weep sore, when we consider the denunciation against those who regard not the doings of the Lord. Behold, ye despisers, and wonder and perish; for I work a work in your days which ye shall not believe, though a man declare it unto you.

Still more solemnly would we warn those who neither fear God nor regard man,—who in the day of their fast find pleasure, and exact all their labours; or those who, without the form, as well as without the power of godliness, have despised the poor, and oppressed them. Behold, the hire of the labourers, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth, and the cries of them which have reaped have entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth.

But it is not only in the distresses and deprivations of many of our fellow-countrymen that we have matter of humiliation. The unhappy dissensions which prevail in the Church, with the sad consequences which they have brought in their train, of estrangements, and contentions, and collisions, interrupting the harmony of families and friends, embittering the intercourse of social life, disturbing the peace of society, and threatening even the stability of the institutions of the country, cannot be contemplated without anxiety and alarm. In this unhappy state of our affairs, all the members of our Church may well humble themselves before the Most High. There may be a difference of opinion as to the character of the principles contended for, and as to the nature of the proceedings to which our divisions may be traced as their immediate cause. But, differing in other particulars, we may agree in this, that none of us are without sin,—that it is the duty of all to pray that our sins may be pardoned, and that God, by his Holy Spirit, would so teach us to improve under His afflicting hand, that we may be prepared for enjoying the peace which Christ promised to all his true followers. And here, we have hoped for the sympathy and prayers of other branches of the Church of Christ. Where one member of the body of Christ suffers, all the other members suffer along with it. And while those who endure are more especially called upon to exercises of self-examination and acts of self-abasement, we would seek for an interest in the prayers of the faithful, that this our purging may be blessed towards our bringing forth more fruit. Those who have built upon the true foundation, but who differ in what is not essential, may perhaps even unite with us in inquiring whether we have not allowed earthly feelings to mingle too much with our differences,—whether we have not thought more of what is peculiar to Paul or to Apollos, than of what belongs to Christ—whether we have not omitted opportunities of doing good by co-operating together against the common enemies of the Lord, and sought rather who should be greatest in the kingdom of heaven, than remembered all that is involved in the declaration, that he who is not against us is for us.

The dissensions which have existed among different denominations of Christians, however they may have originated, have tended greatly to the injury of religion; and we cannot but look upon them, not less than the divisions in our own Church, as holding a place among the causes of the Divine displeasure against our land. We know not even to what extent the distresses among us might have been prevented or mitigated, had all who name the name of Christ united, in so far as their principles would allow, in making common cause against prevailing ignorance and infidelity, and endeavoured to give the impress of a higher Christian character to the inhabitants of our land. It may not yet be too late. Let us pray, then, that Ephraim may no longer vex Judah, nor Judah Ephraim. If we cannot be one in opinion, we may be one in Christian love, and in joint efforts for adding to the numbers of the true followers of Christ.—“Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee! Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our God, shall bless us!”

By order of the Assembly,

APPENDIX.

No. I.

THREE ACTS OF THE GENERALL ASSEMBLY, FOR PROMOVING THE KNOWLEDG OF THE GROUNDS OF SALVATION, AND OBSERVING THE RULES OF DISCIPLINE.

Sess. 17, August 2, 1652, ante meridiem.—Overture for ordering of Lecturing and Catechising, to be observed whill the next Generall Assembly.

THE Generall Assembly, after consideration of the great controversie the Lord hath against the land, for the manifold transgressions of his known commands, and continued despising of grace and reconciliation offered through Jesus Christ, whereby transgressions might have been, and yet may be pardoned and amended; and after acknowledgment of the just quarrell he hath against us all his ministers, for the sins of our persons and calling, for which he hath so shaken the Judicatories and Assemblies of this Kirk amongst us, and doth threaten to cast down altogether the hedge of discipline, and to thrust all his ministers for a time from their places; do seriously exhort and charge all and every one intrusted with the holy ministry, to stir up themselves to seek the Lord more carefully, and settle their own peace with him, and to make full proof of their ministry, so long as the day of his patience continueth; and, in particular, to bee more diligent in the means of acquainting the people with the Scripture, and grounds of religion held forth in the Catechism, and to this end does recommend,

1. That every minister do so dispose of the time appointed for the reading of Scripture, as both the order of the Directory, and Act of Uniformity, in the point of lecture, may be observed; that two chapters being read, one of the Old Testament, and the other of the New, after reading of the first, some few observations of the chief doctrines being held forth, and propounded briefly and plainly to the people, time may be left to read the second chapter, and to give some brief observations on it also, as the time allowed will suffer.

2. For promoting the work of catechising, the Assembly, besides that they renew the act for catechising weekly, 1. Recommends that also every Lord's Day, when the people do most frequently convene, some competent portion of the Catechism be explained before the whole congregation, (without prejudice of the preaching;) and recommendeth that in this publike catechetick instruction, the points that are handled be propounded by question, to be answered by some called up for that purpose. 2. And because many being bashfull to speak in publike audience, do either altogether absent themselves, or, if they must compare, are so distempered with fear, that their edification is marred; the Assembly recommendeth this overture, that the minister, in the publike catechetick instruction, call up some that are more able in knowledge, and prepared before, to answer the points that are to be interrogat and explained, that all the congregation may the more freely drink in knowledge, and more frequently attend such exercises; and that others, that are not so fit to speak in publike, be tryed in their knowledge, at the more private dyets of examination, or in their families. 3. That ministers, beside publike teaching and instructing, be carefull, and make conscience to teach and instruct from house to house, and frequently visite the families within their charge, on purpose for this very work; and try what pains parents and heads of families take to instruct such as are under them, according to their station ; and, if they find them negligent herein, to admonish them ; and if, after oftner admonition, they continue in that sinfull negligence, to bring them to more publicke admonition before the Session. 4. That the ministers and sessions of every congregation see that such as have schools in their bounds exercise the young ones under their charge in getting the Catechism by heart, which will much serve to further the publicke catechetick doctrine. 5. And that the minister, with some of the session appointed for that effect, do, every quarter of a year, or so often as they can conveniently, visit the schools in their bounds, to try what diligence is used in this. And if these that teach schools shall be found negligent herein, and after admonition shall continue so, that course be taken to get them removed, and others put in their place.

The Assembly recommends to Presbyteries to be seriously thinking upon further overtures, which may be conduceable for making catechizing further usefull, and may serve for promoting the knowledge of God in the land ; and to bring their thoughts to the next Generall Assembly.

Sess. 19, August 3, 1652, ante meridiem.—Act concerning Admitting Expectants to their Trials, and Ruling Elders to act in Presbyteries and Synods.

The General Assembly having, out of their earnest desire of the peace and unity of this Kirk, condescended upon an Overture of Peace, and not onely propounded it to some brethren who were here, opposite to the publick judicatories of this Kirk, but also in pursuance of that end, ordained the said overture to be presented and offered by the severall Presbyteries or Synods, to all in their respective bounds, who hes protested against, and declined, or consented, or adhered unto the protestations and declinatours made against this and the preceding Generall Assemblies, and the conditions therein contained, to be required of them ; and, considering the great prejudice like to arise to this Kirk, by increasing of our unhappie differences and distractions, if young men shall be admitted into the ministry, which shall still blow the fire of contention, and continue in avowed opposition to, and contempt of, the publick judicatories ; therefore, ordaines Presbyteries to take speciall care, that upon the calling of any expectant to a particular charge of the ministry, before they admit him to his trialls, they require him, under his hand, to passe from the protestations and declinatours against this and the preceding Generall Assemblies, if he hath been accessory to the same, and to promise and give assurance that he shall abstain from holding up debates and controversies about matters of differences in this Kirk, since the Assembly, 1650, in preaching, writing, or other wayes. Upon the performance whereof, the Presbyterie shall proceed to his trialls, if not, in that case, the Presbyterie shall forbear to proceed untill the next Generall Assembly, leaving liberty to the Presbyterie and congregation for planting of the place otherwise. And the Assembly ordaines and requires that Presbyteries be not sudden to lay by such young men as at first refuses or scruples to perform these conditions mentioned, but that pains be taken upon them to convince them of the reasonableness thereof, and to perswade them to embrace them, and to give them a competent time for that effect.

Likeas the Assembly, considering the prejudice of elders comming to Presbyteries for strengthening a faction in opposition to the publick judicatories, ordaines, that Presbyteries shall require the same things forementioned of every ruling elder that comes to sit and act in Presbyteries, and in case of his refusall, shall not admit him to act as an elder in the Presbyterie, but require the Kirk-session from which he is sent to make choice of, and send another, who, for the peace of this Church, shall agree to perform the conditions required.

Sess. 20, August 3, 1652, post meridiem.—Act for putting in execution former Acts and Constitutions of Generall Assemblies, anent Trying, Admitting, Removing, and Depositing of Church Officers, Censuring of Scandalous Persons, Receiving of Penitents, and Debarring of Persons from the Lord's Table.

The Generall Assembly, considering the obligations that lyes upon all ecclesiastick judicatories, and ministers within this land, by the commandement of God, and our Covenants and engagements taken upon us before God and the world, (whereunto they resolve, in the power of the Lord's might, constantly to adhere,) and to shew themselves faithfull and zealous in all their administrations for the Lord, and for advancing the work of reformation ; and, particularly, considering that the condition of this time doth require in speciall wayes, that in trying, admitting, removing, and deposing of church officers, censuring of scandalous persons, dispensing of ordinances, receiving of penitents, the rules of the Word of God, and constitutions of this Kirk, be diligently put in execution, and acuratly observed.

Therefore, the Assembly ordaines, that Presbyteries and Synods, in admitting of persons to the ministry, be accurate in their trials, according to the order prescribed in this Church, that none be admitted to the holy and high function but such as are qualified according as is required in the Word of God and constitutions of this Kirk, both for knowledge in the mysterie of godlinesse, and abilities to teach and convince the gainsayers, as also in conversation and godlinesse, that they lay hands suddenly on no man, nor be partaker of other men's sin; and for this end, that every Presbyterie be carefull to have gathered together such Acts of Assemblies as concerneth the triall of ministers, and have them before them, whensoever any person is called to any place of the ministry, and is upon his trialls.

2. Ordaines that Presbyteries and Synods, in their respective bounds, make conscience that such ministers as are found either ignorant, and not apt to feed the people of God with knowledge and understanding, or erroneous in their judgement in matters of religion, or are scandalous in their life and conversation, and are not examples unto their flocks in godly and holy walking, or disaffected to the work of reformation, be censured according to the degree of their offence and Acts of Assemblies. And for this end, that they be frequent and accurate in visitation of kirks, and therein make conscientious use of the rules prescribed for visitations, and of such Acts of former Assemblies, as holds forth the duties of ministers, and the grounds and causes of censure.

3. Ordaines that where ministers lawfully deposed are unlawfully admitted, and not according to the order prescribed in the Acts of Generall Assemblies, or intrudes themselves into places, Presbyteries and Synods make use of that power and authority which Christ hes put in their hands, to remedie the same, and to censure such disorders and enormities as they deserve; and that people be not accessory unto, or concurring with any ministers that are deposed, in intruding themselves into places, nor give them any countenance that does so, as they would not draw upon themselves the wrath of God, by contemning and despising Christ's ordinance of discipline; and that no Presbyteries nor Synods proceed to open the mouths of, or re-admit unto the ministry, any deposed ministers, but according to the order prescribed in the Acts of Generall Assemblies, as they will be answerable unto the Generall Assemblies.

4. Ordaines that sessions be carefull that none be admitted to be elders in congregations but such as are in some competent measure able and qualified, with knowledge of religion, and understanding of the duties of their calling, for discharging the duties of that office, and of a blamelesse Christian and godly conversation. And that before any be admitted to be an elder, the person's name that is designed be publickly intimate to the congregation the Lord's Day before, that if any have any thing to object against him, they may come and present the same to the session or to the minister. And that if any elder be found negligent in the duties of his charge, and continue so after admonition, or scandalous in his life and conversation, or to be a neglecter of the worship of God in his family, he be removed from, and purged out of the session.

5. Ordaines that Sessions and Presbyteries be carefull, and make conscience by all means to censure impartially all persons of whatsoever rank or condition that are scandalous, either in things of the First, or in things of the Second Table, according to the rules and order which Christ hath prescribed in his Word, and to proceed to the highest censures with such as are grossely and obstinately scandalous, or are ignorant, and contemn and continuedly neglect the means of knowledge, as publicke and private catechizing, &c., after they are made inexcusable by sufficient means used to reclaim and gain them.

6. Ordaines that ministers and sessions in congregations be carefull, as they will be answerable to Christ Jesus, to debar from the Lord's Table all such persons as are found not to walk suitably to the Gospel, and being convinced and admonished thereof, do not reform; as also all such as have not knowledge to examine themselves, and to discern the Lord's body. And that for the more orderly performing of this, the minister, in examination of the people, have some of the elders alwayes with him, and represent unto the session such as are found grossely ignorant, that by order of the session they may be debarred.

7. That Presbyteries and Sessions make conscience that such persons as are found scandalous, and are under censure for that cause, be not received nor absolved from their censure, unlesse they give such satisfaction and evidences of their repentance as are expressed in the Acts of the Assemblies concerning the receiving of penitents.

ADMONITION AND INFORMATION RESPECTING THE PROFANATION OF THE LORD'S DAY.

At Edinburgh, the 26th day of May, 1794 years. Which day, the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland having called for the Report of their Committee appointed to consider the Overtures from the Presbytery of St Andrews, and Synod of Perth and Stirling, respecting the Profanation of the Lord's Day, the same was given in and read; together with the Opinion of his Majesty's Solicitor-General, given at the request of the said committee, in the absence of the Procurator of the Church, who was confined by severe illness. Which Report and Opinion having been considered by the Assembly, the said Opinion, together with extracts from the different Acts of Parliament therein referred to, are, in name and by authority of the General Assembly, hereunto subjoined; and the whole is ordered to be printed, that copies may be distributed by the special committee appointed for that purpose among the several Presbyteries of this Church: And, at the same time, Presbyteries are enjoined to circulate the copies herof transmitted to them throughout their several bounds, for the information of all concerned; and to act in other respects conformably to the power vested in them, in such a prudent manner as shall seem best calculated for checking the further profanation of the holy Sabbath. And the Assembly, thinking it expedient to confine the prosecutions which it may be necessary to carry on, to those cases which shall be judged to be proper subjects of prosecution by the several Presbyteries, it is particularly recommended to the inferior judicatories of the Church, that no prosecution shall be raised, at the instance of any minister or kirk-session, or of any person appointed by them, without the special advice and consent of the Presbytery of the bounds, after the said Presbytery shall have deliberately considered the case. And the General Assembly, impressed with the warmest sense of gratitude to the Divine Author of our faith, for the appointment of that day which was made for man, and reflecting with much satisfaction upon the advantages which the people of this country have derived from that devout observance of the Lord's Day by which they have long been distinguished, do earnestly beseech and admonish all ranks to resist, by their example and their influence, every violation of that day, and every attempt to diminish the veneration in which it is held: in particular, they admonish parents, as they value the most essential interests of those who are dearest to them; and masters and heads of families, as they desire to preserve their servants from those habits and practices which are most destructive of the good order of society, to employ every method which appears to them most winning and effectual for rendering the stated returns of the Lord's Day subservient to the instruction and improvement of the children, apprentices, and servants, over whom they have influence.

OPINION of his Majesty's Solicitor-General respecting the Observance of the Sabbath Day.

The statutes now in force, with respect to the observance of the Sabbath Day, appear to me to be sufficient for checking the evil complained of. The statutes which I mean are the following:—Act 1661, c. 18; 1672, c. 22; 1693, c. 40; 1695, c. 13; and Act 1701, c. 11.

By these statutes, every person guilty of profaning the Sabbath Day, in any manner whatever, is made liable in a pecuniary penalty, toties quoties, to be recovered by prosecution before sheriffs, justices of peace, or any other judge ordinary. And the minister of every parish, the kirk-session, or the presbytery, or a person named by them, is entitled to prosecute.

There appears, therefore, to be no defect in the law as it stands, if duly executed. And the power of enforcing execution is lodged with the Church judicatories themselves. Perhaps it might be proper to cause print the above statutes, and transmit copies thereof to the different presbyteries, so that due notification may be given to all concerned.

(Signed) ROBERT BLAIR.

Edinburgh, 24th May 1794.

The following are the Acts of Parliament, and part of Acts, referred to in the above Opinion :—

Anno 1661, c. 18.—Act for the Due Observation of the Sabbath Day.

The King's Majesty, considering how much it concerns the honour of God that the Sabbath Day be duly observed, and all abuses thereof restrained ; and that, notwithstanding of several Acts of Parliament made in that behalf, particularly the third Act of the sixth Parliament of King James the Sixth, of blessed memory, the said day hath been much profaned by salmond-fishing, going of salt-pans, milnes, and killes, hiring of shearers, and using of merchandise on that day, and otherways : Therefore, our Sovereign Lord, with the advice and consent of his Estates of Parliament, ratifies and approves all former Acts of Parliament, made for observation of the Sabbath Day, and against the breakers thereof ; and, by these presents, inhibits and discharges all salmond-fishing, going of salt-pans, milns, or killes ; all hiring of shearers, carrying of loads, keeping of mercats, or using any sorts of merchandise on the said day, and all other profanation thereof whatsoever, under the pains and penalties following, viz., the sum of twenty pounds Scots for the going of ilk salt-pan, miln, or kill, on the said day, to be paid by the heritors and possessors thereof ; and the sum of ten pounds for ilk shearer and fisher of salmond on the said day—the one half thereof to be paid by the hirers and conductors, and the other half by the persons hired ; and the said sum of ten pounds for every other profanation of the said day ; and which fines and penalties are to be uplifted and disposed of in manner contained in the Act and Instructions anent the Justices of Peace.

Anno 1672, c. 22.—Act against Profaneness.

Our Sovereign Lord, considering the many and great violations of the law of God, and of the laws of this kingdom, established by his Majesty and his royal predecessors, against cursing, swearing, &c., profanation of the Lord's Day, mocking or reproaching of religion, and the exercises thereof ;—it is hereby statute and ordained, that besides the exercise of Church discipline, according to the laws and practice used in this Chureh, in every paroch within royal burgh, or wherein any of his Majesty's Privy Council or Lords of Session, Sheriff, Lord, or Bailiff of Regality, or their deutes or commissaries, have their residence, or keep courts, that the saids Counsellors or Lords of Session, Magistrates of such burghs, the Sheriffs, and the Lords and Bailiffs of Regalities, or their deutes, the Commissaries, or any Justice of Peace, they, or any one or more of them, execute or cause execute the saids laws, against such delinquents in the several paroches where they reside, as shall be dilated to them by the kirk-sessions, or other Church judicatories. Providing always, likeas it is hereby provided, that the minister and kirk-session, with the heritors of each parish, or such of them as, upon public intimation by the minister from the pulpit, upon eight days' warning, shall meet with the minister, and his assistants in discipline, have the nomination of a collector, who is to receive and compt for the fines so imposed ; excepting to the royal burghs the nomination of their collectors, who have been accustomed so to nominate, they always being accomptable, as other collectors, for the uses after specified : And where there be any paroches in which there is none of the saids above-named persons in authority resident, the minister and kirk-session, and heritors of the parish, or major part of them, who shall convene, upon public intimation by the minister, upon eight days' warning, shall nominate, so often as they see cause, a person resident within the paroch, whom they find most fit for executing of the saids statutes, and shall, under their hand, offer the person so chosen to the Sheriffs, Lords, and Bailiffs of Regalities, Stewarts, Commissaries, having the ordinary jurisdiction of that place, who are hereby authorised to give commission and deputation to the persons so chosen for convening the persons transgressors of the foresaids statutes, and to judge them according to law. And it is hereby declared, that all execution shall pass upon the decreets and sentences of the saids judges and commissioners, as do er may pass upon the decreets or sentences of Sheriffs, Bailiffs of Royalty or Regality, for executing of the saids statutes, conform to the tenor thereof in all points. With power to the said minister, kirk session, and heretors of each paroch, convened in manner aforesaid, to modifie and appoint such part and portion of the sums arising by the saids decreets to the collectors nominat by them for their services, as they shall find just, according to their pains and diligence. And it is hereby declared, that the remainder of the saids sums shall belong to, and be made use of for, the poor of each paroch respec-

tivè, in manner following, viz., the one-half thereof for the use of the poor of each paroch, to be sent to the correction-houses, for being bred to lawful trades, conform to an Act of Parliament made in this session of Parliament; and for which the collector shall be comptable to the heretors of each paroch, and shall deliver to them receipts from the masters of the correction-houses of the one-half of the saids sums, towards the allowance of the said poor people, appointed to be payed out of each paroch by the said Act; and the other half of the saids fines shall belong to the poor of each paroch respectivè, who, by the said Act, by reason of their age or infirmity, are appointed to be entertained within each paroch by the contributions at the paroch kirk, and for which the saids collectors are to be comptable to the minister and kirk-session of each paroch, or to the elders during the vacancy; and to be applied by them for the use of the poor, as they shall see cause.

Anno 1693, c. 40.—Act against Profaneness.

Our Sovereign Lord and Lady, taking to their serious consideration the profanity and immoralities that so much at present abound, and how much it concerns the glory of God, the honour of the Protestant religion, and the good and peace of the kingdom, that they be repressed and restrained; do, therefore, with advice and consent of the Estates of Parliament, hereby ratify and revive all Acts of Parliament formerly made against Sabbath-breaking, prophane and idle swearing, drunkenness, or other immoralities whatsoever, ordaining the same to be put to strict execution with all diligence. And for the better effectuating thereof, do hereby empower and ordain every Presbytery within this kingdom to appoint one or more within their respective bounds, whom they shall think fit to choise, to take notice of the foresaid vices and immoralities, and to dilate and prosecute the persons guilty thereof before the magistrates of the bounds, conform to the tenors of the saids Acts; and allowing to them, out of the fines and penalties that shall be incurred, not only their whole charges and expences of the said prosecutions, but also such further rewards as the Lords of their Majesty's Privy Council shall think fit.

Anno 1695, c. 13.—Act against Profaneness.

Our Sovereign Lord and Estates of Parliament, considering that the twenty-fifth Act of the second session of this current Parliament, intituled, Act against Profaneness, and the Acts generally and particularly therein ratified, has not taken the wished effect, through the negligence of the magistrates, officers, and others concerned to put the same in execution; do hereby authorise, and strictly require and enjoin all Sheriffs and their deputes, Stewarts and their deputes, Bailies of bailiaries and regalities, and their deputes, Magistrates of burghs royal, and Justices of Peace, within whose bounds any of the sins forbidden by the said laws shall happen to be committed, to put the saids Acts to exact and punctual execution at all times, without necessity of any dispensation, and against all persons, whether officers, soldiers, or others, without exception; with this certification, that such of the saids judges as shall refuse, neglect, or delay, to put the saids laws in execution, upon application of any minister or kirk-session, or any person in their name, giving information, and offering sufficient probation against the offender, that every one of the saids judges so refusing, neglecting, or delaying, shall, toties quoties, be subject and liable to a fine of one hundred pound Scots, to be applied for behoof of the poor of the parish where the scandal complained on was committed: declaring hereby that the agent for the Kirk, the minister of the parish, or any other person having warrant from him, or from the kirk-session within the parish whereof the scandal complained on was committed, shall have good interest to pursue, before the Lords of Session, any of the foresaid judges who shall happen to refuse, neglect, or delay, to put the saids laws against profaneness to exact and punctual execution, who are hereby ordained to proceed summarily without the order of the roll: and that it shall be a sufficient probation of their refusal, neglect, or delay, if the pursuer instruct, by an instrument under a nottar's hand, and witnesses thereto subscribing, and deponing thereupon, that he did inform the saids judges of the saids scandal, and offered a sufficient probation thereof, unless the judge so pursued condescend and instruct that, within the space of ten days after the said application, he gave order to cite the party complained on to compare before him within the space of ten days; and that, at the day of compareance, he was ready and willing to have taken cognition and trial of the scandal complained on, and instruct and condescend on a relevant reason why the saids laws were not put in execution against the person complained on.

Anno 1701, c. 11.—Act against Profaneness.

— Ratifies and approves the Acts following, viz., the Act of Parliament, 1672, intituled, Act against Profaneness, whereby all members of his Majesty's Privy Council, or Lords of Session, with all judges ordinary, having their residence, or keeping courts in any paroch, are ordained to execute, or cause execute, the said laws against any such delinquents therein as shall be dilated to them by the kirk-sessions or other Church judicatories, with power to the kirk-session and heritors to name a collector of the fines; as also, where none of the foresaid persons in authority reside, to nominate a person resident within the paroch, whom they shall offer to the judge ordinary of the bounds, to the end he may grant them a deputation to the effect foresaid: As likewise to modify and appoint such fees to the said collectors out of the saids fines as they shall find just, and that the remainder of the saids fines be applied for the use of the poor, in manner specified in the said Act. The Act of Parliament, 1693, also intituled, Act against Profaneness, whereby every Presbytery within this kingdom is empowered and ordained to appoint one or more within their respective bounds to take notice of all vices and immoralities, and to dilate and prosecute the persons guilty, conform to the tenor of the former Acts; and allowing to them, out of the fines, not only their whole expenses, but such rewards as the Lords of Privy Council shall think fit. The Act 1595, likewise intituled, Against Profaneness, whereby all the judges ordinary and their deputies, and all Justices of Peace, within whose bounds any of the said offences shall happen, are authorised and enjoyned to put the said Acts against Profaneness to exact and punctual execution at all times, without necessity of any dispensation; and against all persons, whether officers, soldiers, or others, without exception; with certification, that any of the said judges that shall refuse or neglect to put the said laws in execution, upon the application of any minister, kirk-session, or any person in their name, informing and offering sufficient probation, he shall be liable and subject, toties quoties, to a fine of one hundred pound Scots for the poor of the paroch where the scandal happened; declaring that the agent for the Kirk, the minister or kirk-session of the paroch, or any having their warrant, shall have good interest to pursue, before the Lords of Session, any of the said judges refusing or neglecting as said is; and that the said refusal or neglect shall be sufficiently proven by an instrument under a nottar's hand, and witnesses subscribing, and deponing that the said information was given, and probation offered; as the said Act more fully bears. And, lastly, the Act 1696, also intituled, Act against Profaneness, in the hail heads, articles, and clauses thereof, all which laws and Acts of Parliament generally and particularly above narrated, his Majesty, with advice and consent foresaid, ordains to be put to strict and punctual execution in all points; and farther, all ministers, and kirk-sessions, and heritors concerned, are hereby required and ordained to do and act their parts faithfully in the premises, as they will be answerable; and in case any person shall be excommunicate for not answering, or for not obeying and satisfying the Church, when processed before them for profaneness and immorality, or in case that any person, cited on the account foresaid, shall be declared by the Church to be contumacious, then, and in either of these cases, his Majesty, with advice and consent foresaid, statutes and ordains, that, upon application made by a Presbytery, Provincial Synod, or General Assembly, to his Majesty's Privy Council, representing the same, the Lords of Privy Council shall represent the said matter to his Majesty, that he may be duly informed aent the foresaid person found guilty or contumacious, as said is, as a person not fit to be employed or continued in any place of public trust, civil or military.

The above printed under the inspection of the Special Committee appointed for that purpose, and ordered to be transmitted to the several Presbyteries.

No. III.

WARNING AND ADMONITION TO THE PEOPLE OF SCOTLAND, BY THE COMMISSION OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY, MET AT EDINBURGH, MARCH 1, 1798.

The Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, in conformity to the instructions which they received, "to advert to the interest of the Church upon every occasion," have met at a season which summons all the friends of every civil and religious establishment around their standards; and while other orders of men, roused by the dangers which threaten their country, are making every exertion to diffuse the public spirit which their own conduct displays, the Commission judge it their indispensable duty to issue this Warning and Admonition to the people under their charge in the different parishes of Scotland.

In the arduous contest in which we are at present engaged, we have not as yet met with any national disaster; but, while the other states of Europe, intimidated by the progress of the French arms, are bending under the yoke, we have hitherto been able to protect our commerce, and to ward off the hostilities which have been directed against our shores. While, brethren, you celebrate the gallantry of our seamen, the vigilance and activity of our naval administration, the skill and alertness of our commanders; while you honour, with daily expressions of your good will, the illustrious heroes who led to victory, and pay every tribute to the memory of the brave and faithful men who fell in the cause of their country;—amidst the acknowledgments due to human exertions, look up to Him whom the wind and the seas obey. Recollect the circumstances which render the time and the measure of a naval victory completely dependent upon the will of Heaven. In the train of success which has attended us round the globe, mark the continued interposition of Providence for our defence; and, after the example of the noble admirals who, in the presence of their Sovereign, presented upon the altar of God the colours which have been won in the great naval engagements of this war, let all ranks of men unite in saying, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy name be the glory!"

The succession of naval victories, which we trust, brethren, you recollect with pious gratitude, has filled our enemies with rage. They are indignant that there is one nation in Europe over which, in the unexampled career of their fortune, they have never gained any advantage; which has persevered in opposing its influence to the wild progress of their ambition, and has had the magnanimity to extend its views to the independence of Europe, and the liberties of mankind. They are indignant that there is one free government which repudiates their false maxims; one established constitution which exposes the chimerical nature of their system; one happy country, where the complete security which the subject derives from the legal administration of justice, forms a striking contrast to the precarious tenure by which every man holds his life, his property, and his place in society, under the unlimited despotism which has been engrafted upon their doctrines of liberty and equality. They have declared that the French Republic and the British Government cannot subsist together. They are collecting on their coasts a great army, which, with a view both to insult and to intimidate us, they call "The Army of England;" and, having rejected the equitable terms which we offered, without proposing, in their turn, any plan of pacification, they boast that they will send this army to dictate in London the terms upon which they will condescend to give us peace.

After these declarations of the enemy, the war is not, on our part, a matter of choice: it is a war which the first law of nature, the great duty of self-preservation, renders just and necessary: it is a war not for wealth, for distant possessions, for commercial advantages: it is a war in defence of all the blessings which we have received from heaven—in defence of the honour, the independence, the existence of the nation. Imagine not, brethren, that it is only a temporary interruption of your tranquillity which you have reason to dread. The enemies with whom you now contend come to seize your property, to lay waste your lands, and to repay the armies which invade you with the spoil. In the fury of their rapine, they will make no distinction; but the houses of the peasant and the landlord, of the farmer and the cottager, will be consumed in one flame. They come to wrest out of our hands the dominion of the sea, to annihilate our commerce, to render us completely subject to their power, and to reduce Great Britain to the condition of Venice, which, after pretending to make free, they sold to the Emperor ; of Holland, which their friendship has ruined ; of the combination of States, called the Cisalpine Republic, which hold a precarious existence under the protection of a victorious French General. They wage war against your form of government ; and, if they accomplish their designs, you will be no longer a free people. Instead of that security which every man enjoys, by knowing that he cannot be condemned till his conduct has been fully investigated, and the sentence of a jury has pronounced him guilty, there will be substituted the mandates of a government which, under the pretext of liberty, sets no bounds to its despotism ; which, without even the form of a trial, sends the suspected to public or to secret death, to prison or to banishment ; which confiscates their effects, and extends its persecution to all their connections. Instead of a subordination of ranks, which we know to be the best guard of liberty, by which no man is excluded from rising to riches and honour, and the different orders of the state minister to the subsistence, the protection, and the enjoyments of one another, there will be an equality of wretchedness, in which the rich are stripped of their property ; the poor, without being permitted to share in the spoil, are deprived of their comforts ; and all are alike subjected to arbitrary requisition, to insult, and oppression. Your enemies come, brethren, not only to dethrone your King, and to dismiss your Parliament, but they come to overthrow that religion which you and your fathers have professed, and the free exercise of which is one of the rights of a British subject. They wage war against the Scriptures which you revere ; against the God in whom you trust. They have effaced from their calendar that day upon which Christians have, from the beginning, celebrated the resurrection of the Lord Jesus ; and they are endeavouring to obliterate every memorial of the Christian religion. All religious establishment of every kind, all Christian belief and worship, they ridicule and proscribe. Were their impious threatenings to prevail, in those churches where you are now met, you would assemble no more ; the voice of your pastors would never again be heard there. Instead of the cheering, consoling, elevating doctrines of the Gospel of Christ, there would be publicly inculcated in this land that gloomy, degrading system, which banishes mind from the universe, which declares that death is an eternal sleep, and that beyond the grave there is no punishment to the wicked, no reward to the righteous, no recompence for the troubles of life. The sound instruction of the Scriptures would yield to the delusive doctrines of a false philosophy, which shakes the security of government, destroys the innocence and tranquillity of private life, and gives licence to a multitude of crimes : and the dereliction of every religious principle would, in this country, be accompanied with the same brutality of rage, and the same flagitiousness of conduct, which have appeared in the atrocious deeds that have marked the progress of the French Revolution. Nor would it be in your power, brethren, to fly, as many inhabitants of France have fled, from these horrors ; for whither could you go ? If this island become a province of France, there will be no longer an asylum for the wretched ; no other habitation of religion, truth, and justice ; but one sound of tumult and uproar will be heard around the globe.

We beseech you, brethren, seriously to consider the dangers of which we have given you a faithful picture. And we earnestly recommend it to all the ministers of this National Church to endeavour, by public and private instruction, to impress your minds with a sense of the duty which, in such circumstances, you owe to your country ; and to encourage people of all ranks to resolve, like our King and his two Houses of Parliament, that they will stand or fall with our religion, our laws, and liberties. Is there a Briton whose heart will not accord with such admonitions ? Is this a time to contend about political differences, when we are struggling for the very existence of the nation ? Shall speculative improvements of the best constitution in the world, shall attachment to a party, or private dissatisfaction, unnerve the British arm, and lay our side open to the dagger of the foe ? We have seen, with much satisfaction, the voluntary associations for the defence of the country, in which persons of rank and property, mingling with merchants, manufacturers, and mechanics, form a body of men trained to the use of arms, who, without forsaking the occupations of peace, are ready to repress internal tumult, and to guard our shores against the approach of the foe. We behold, with equal delight, another expression of the same patriotic spirit, in the alacrity with which money is furnished for the public service. While the taxes that have been lately imposed do not, in the smallest degree, affect the lower orders of the community, those who pay the largest share of them are so far from complaining of the burden created by the demands of the State, that we see them pressing forward to testify their zeal in the common cause, by the voluntary contribution of a large portion of their income. It is wise to think, that wealth cannot be so profitably expended as in preserving all that renders existence desirable : it is virtuous to learn private frugality from the extent of the national expenditure : it is magnanimous to relinquish every paltry scheme of hoarding up superfluities and savings when all is at stake, and to trust that every sacrifice will be abundantly recompensed by the gratitude of the country, and a share in the national prosperity. Let those who are restrained by the narrowness of their income, or the demands of their families, from emulating the liberality of their brethren, be the more solicitous to exhibit every display of public spirit which their situation admits. A season of danger, of alarm, and national exertion, is a time when the laws should reign supreme ; when every man should be found at his post, waiting in silence to receive the orders which may be given him ; prompt in yielding obedience, and ready to lend to the community all his talents and all his vigour. At such a time, all who love their country, forgetting former quarrels, should, without recrimination, encourage one another under every hardship, and bear, without murmuring, every burden. Let every sinner think, that he adds to the sum of national guilt, and conspires, in his place, to draw down the vengeance of Heaven upon the land which nourishes him. Let the frivolous manners, the languid, careless, selfish spirit, and that corruption of the whole character, which the continuance of peace and national prosperity tends to foster, yield the place which they have usurped in this country to those manly virtues which the pressure of the times demands. Maintain, brethren, a secret regard to all the rights of your neighbours : abandon every vicious pursuit ; and centre, in love to your country, those affections which, at other times, follow after vanity. By this union of sentiment and of effort you will expose the falsehood of that insidious distinction which our enemies affect to draw between the government and the people of Britain ; and you will exhibit to their view a nation whom their emissaries were not able to corrupt, whom their boasting has not intimidated, and whom the history of their eventful Revolution is daily confirming in attachment to that unrivalled constitution, of which, with an envious eye and an usurping hand, they attempt to rob us.

Let a firm faith in the superintending Providence of God establish your minds, brethren, in perfect tranquillity, with regard to the issue of the present contest. To resist the rude attack of the spoiler, to set bounds to lawless ambition, and to prolong the reign of order and justice, is a duty which God hath imposed, a service which accords with the whole plan of His righteous administration, a work which He approves, and which He will bless. The combination of His enemies cannot shake the pillars of His everlasting throne. The Church of Christ is founded upon a " rock, against which the gates of hell shall not prevail ;" and, notwithstanding the assertions and efforts of infidelity, the public establishment of Christianity shall continue to be the barrier erected by the God of truth against the return of idolatry and superstition. " He that is higher than the highest regardeth, and there be higher than they."—" He beholdeth mischief and spite to requite them with His hand."—" He hath bent His bow ;" and when His time is come, " He will make ready His arrows upon the strings," and " will find out them that hate Him." By continuing our successes at sea, He may still turn the battle from our gates : or, if He has destined that upon our own land we are to contend, whether Great Britain shall retain its rank amongst the nations of the earth, or become an appendage of the French Republic, He may employ the confusion and destruction which await the invader as an instrument of accelerating the return of peace. Be not afraid, brethren, of the threats of the foe ; but " sanctify the Lord of Hosts himself, and let Him be your fear, and let Him be your dread." Recollect the glorious struggle by which your ancestors purchased the blessings of a free government ; and, proving yourselves worthy of the precious inheritance which they have transmitted to you, trust in that arm which made them strong. " Remember the Lord which is great and terrible ; and fight for your brethren, your sons and your daughters, your wives and your houses." Set up your banners in His name, and He will spread over you His impenetrable shield. " The right hand of the Lord, which doth valiantly," shall again overthrow those who rise up against you ; and your children's children shall, in this land, worship the God of their fathers. Amen.

The above Warning and Admonition having been read and fully considered, was unanimously approved by the Commission of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland ; and they appoint the same to be forthwith printed, and copies thereof sent to all the Ministers of this Church ; who are hereby appointed to read the same from their respective pulpits, on Thursday next, the 8th of this present month, the day appointed for a National Fast, or on the first Lord's Day after it comes to their hands. REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY ANENT
THE GAELIC BIBLE.Edinburgh, May 18, 1826.

Which day the General Assembly's Committee on the Gaelic Scriptures met in the Society's Hall, according to appointment. Present, Rev. Dr Campbell of Edinburgh, Convener; Rev. Principal Macfarlan of Glasgow; Rev. Dr Anderson of Edinburgh; Rev. John Stewart of Blair-Athole; Rev. John Macdonald of Urquhart; Rev. Colin Macvean of Kenmore; and the Rev. Mr Macarthur of Dairsie; and having appointed Principal Macfarlan Preses, there was laid before them a Report of the Directors of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, announcing the completion of the Quarto Edition of the Gaelic Bible, with an Octavo Edition of the New Testament in the same type, and a revised metrical version of the Psalms and Paraphrases.

REPORT of the Directors of the Society in Scotland for Propagating Christian Knowledge, to the Committee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, on the Quarto Gaelic Bible.

It affords the Directors great satisfaction to report to the Committee, that the printing of the whole of the Scriptures in Quarto, and also of the New Testament in Octavo, has lately been completed.

On this work being finished, it was suggested to the Directors by a member of the Committee, that, to render the work still more complete and useful, it would be very desirable to have the metrical version of the Psalms and Paraphrases revised and printed along with it. This measure appeared to be indispensably necessary, as there were in circulation two editions of the Psalms, which differed materially from each other, and which, on this account, produced much inconvenience. In order to remove this inconvenience, the Directors, with the unanimous consent and advice of the Committee, resolved to publish a version of the Psalter, which should unite the merits of both editions already referred to, and which, if approved and sanctioned by the General Assembly, might be adopted as the standard version.

This has been accordingly executed. And as great care has been taken to correct the errors of former editions,—to improve the harmony of the verse,—and to restore the literal rendering of passages that had been paraphrased, as well as to expunge, so far as was possible, obsolete and Irish words, the Directors confidently hope that this edition of the Psalter will meet the views of all parties, and that, under the sanction of the General Assembly, it may be adopted in public worship in all the Churches and Chapels of Ease in the Highlands of Scotland.

Two copies of the whole Scriptures in Quarto, and two copies of the New Testament in Octavo, each accompanied with a version of the Psalms and Paraphrases, thus revised and corrected, are ready to be laid upon the table of the General Assembly.

In closing their final report, the Directors believe that a brief statement of a few facts, illustrating the progress of this undertaking, may not be unacceptable to the Committee, and may afford some information to those who had not an opportunity of being much acquainted with the various steps which led to its present termination.

The version of the New Testament, by the Rev. James Stuart of Killin, was published in 1767; and the Old Testament was published at different times in four parts, and concluded in 1801.

The Directors found it necessary to yield to the sentiments and wishes strongly expressed by many respectable individuals conversant with Gaelic literature, for an improved edition of the fourth part of the Old Testament, containing the prophetic books, which should be more literal, and more conformable to the original Hebrew text. This service having been declined by the Rev. John Stuart of Luss, by whom the third part had been translated, and the two preceding carefully revised, the Directors then applied to the Rev. A. Stewart, minister of Dingwall, who cheerfully undertook the work proposed; and, accordingly, a new edition of the Old Testament, including the fourth part revised and corrected, was published in 1807.

After the publication of the second edition of the Old Testament, it was suggested by the learned and pious translator, that a new edition, carefully revised, and receiving all the improvements of which the version was still susceptible, would be a work of great importance, and highly beneficial to our countrymen in the Highlands. In this measure, Dr Stuart was warmly encouraged by the Society, and every facility afforded him for its execution. The assistance of his friend, the Rev. A. Stewart of Dingwall, whose qualifications for the service were well understood, and highly appreciated by all conversant with Oriental and Celtic literature, was requested and obtained; and in him he found an able and willing coadjutor. The plan of a new and improved edition of the Gaelic Scriptures was then submitted to the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland in May 1815. The Assembly approved of the plan, and appointed a committee to superintend the progress of the work.

In May 1821, a portion of the revised and improved translation, containing the Pentateuch, and extending to the third chapter of First Samuel, was laid on the table of the General Assembly. At this period, the unexpected and deeply lamented death of the two gentlemen who had been engaged in the undertaking, within a few days of each other, involved the whole business in great confusion. By all who were best acquainted with its nature, the loss thus sustained was considered as irreparable. Though different gentlemen were known as distinguished by their acquirements in Oriental and Celtic literature, yet there was none whose qualifications were universally acknowledged to be so pre-eminent as to procure from him that confidence from Gaelic scholars, which had been enjoyed by Dr Stuart, Luss, and by his friend, Mr Stewart of Dingwall. In these circumstances, the members of the Assembly's Committee unanimously recommended, that the plan of a revised and improved version should be relinquished, and that a reprint of the last edition, without any alteration on the text, should be undertaken with as little delay as possible. It was proposed, however, that the few instances of Irish phrases or idioms, occurring chiefly in the prophetic books, should be altered, and that the whole orthography should be conformed to that of the Pentateuch; which had been superintended by Dr Stuart himself. In this view, the Directors and the Society judged it their duty to acquiesce, and the plan was afterwards sanctioned by the General Assembly in May 1822.

This resolution was the more easily adopted, as the specimen of the corrected version published by Dr Stuart himself, although certainly improved, did not contain corrections which were either so numerous or of such importance as materially to affect the sense; and by this means a perfect uniformity in the Gaelic text was happily preserved.

In entering on this work, the Directors felt themselves peculiarly happy in being able to secure the services of Mr John Macdonald, preacher of the Gospel, who had been for several years employed by Dr Stuart in correcting the press for the Quarto Gaelic Bible, and whose intimate acquaintance with Dr Stuart's principles of translation, and the rules which he prescribed to himself in printing the Bible, rendered him peculiarly well qualified for the undertaking. Mr Macdonald has been enabled to bring this important work to a conclusion, with the entire and cordial approbation of all the members of the Committee; and to his minute accuracy and indefatigable attention, it is indebted for that high degree of excellence which it is acknowledged to possess.

It was found that the Irish phrases and idioms abounded much more in the New Testament than in the Old. Dr Stuart, in his revised Translation, had uniformly expunged them, wheresoever they occurred; inasmuch, that not a single instance of the kind is to be found in the Pentateuch. This was a decisive proof of his own judgment in the case: And the Committee of the General Assembly unanimously judged it proper that the same alterations should be made in the New Testament; and that phrases and idioms purely Gaelic should be exclusively used, in order that a perfect uniformity might be maintained through the whole of the Scriptures.

Thus the Directors have endeavoured, to the utmost of their power, to avail themselves of the means within their reach, for rendering the present edition of the Gaelic Scriptures as perfect as possible. Though this work may not possess all the advantages it would have derived from the gentlemen originally employed in conducting it, had it pleased God to prolong their lives; yet the Directors are assured, by gentlemen well qualified to judge of its merits, that it is marked by such superior excellence, as will render it a precious and acceptable gift to their Highland countrymen, and secure for it lasting and extensive usefulness. To the members of the Assembly's Committee, they beg leave to express peculiar gratitude, sensible as they are how much the work is indebted to their minute attention and indefatigable diligence, in superintending its progress. The unanimity, alacrity, and zeal, with which they co-operated in furthering the revised edition of the Psalter, the Directors are willing to consider as a proof of the fidelity with which the whole work has been conducted, and as affording a favourable presage of the approbation of the venerable Assembly, and of its usefulness and acceptableness to our countrymen at large.

The Directors look up with unfeigned gratitude and thanksgiving to that Divine Providence who has so graciously delivered them from the apprehensions with which, at one time, they were ready to be overwhelmed, and has permitted them to see the work now brought to so happy a termination. May He crown its circulation with His effectual blessing, and render His Holy Word the means of eternal life to generations long to come.

J. CAMPBELL, Convener.

The Committee, on receiving this report, feel themselves called on to express their high gratification in the information which it contains, and their gratitude to Him by whose blessing this important work has at length been completed. They beg leave to state to the General Assembly their approbation of the report, with their sense of the singular zeal, energy, and perseverance, which the Directors of the Society have shown, during the progress of this undertaking, and the accuracy and fidelity with which Mr Macdonald has discharged the important duty entrusted to him.

The Committee further beg leave to recommend, that the General Assembly, if they see proper, authorise this version of the Scriptures, with that of the Psalter, to be used exclusively in all the churches and chapels within their bounds in which public worship is conducted in the Gaelic language.

PASTORAL ADMONITION ON THE SANCTIFICATION OF THE SABBATH.

The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland having taken into consideration the evil of Sabbath Profanation, as described in the Report of their Committee on that subject, resolved to issue the following Pastoral Admonition, which is hereby required to be publicly read by all the ministers of this Church, from their respective pulpits, on the first Lord's Day after receiving printed copies of the same.

Edinburgh, June 2, 1834.

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN,—Knowing well that there are many among you who are zealously exercised in having consciences void of offence towards God and man, whose hearts' desire and prayer it is, that pure and undefiled religion may flourish, and that iniquity may stop its mouth, we cannot conceal from ourselves that there are multitudes who bring reproach on our land, by disregarding the form and denying the power of godliness; and who, instead of humbly endeavouring to walk in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless, make light of that holy commandment which was first promulgated when the heavens and the earth were finished, “and God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it;” and which will continue to be binding on all the generations of men till the heavens and the earth shall pass away.

We solemnly entreat you, brethren, to bear in mind that this precept rests on an authority not to be challenged or explained away by human reason,—that, though the Sabbath was made for man, man is not entitled to frustrate the beneficent purpose of God, by renouncing or foregoing the inestimable blessings which the institution was intended to secure; and that, though the evil heart of unbelief, and the prevalence of corrupt example, may tempt many to make a mock at this presumptuous sin, and to act as if their time were their own, and not included among the talents for which an account must be rendered in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ; yet the faithfulness of the Sovereign Judge will be vindicated by shutting out from his presence all who have wilfully departed from him, despising the riches of his goodness and forbearance, and setting at nought the threatened vengeance which will assuredly be executed against them who obey not the truth, but obey unrighteousness.

We call upon all, in every rank, to consider seriously in how many ways the command to sanctify the Sabbath is disobeyed in thought, in word, and in deed. Even among those who have prepared their hearts to seek God, it must be confessed that there is no small danger of suffering the mind to be unduly occupied on this holy day with vain imaginations and worldly cares; and that though idle and foolish talking may not be deliberately indulged, the conversation is not always with grace, seasoned with holiness, and many things are inconsiderately done, whereby the profane may be countenanced and encouraged in their worldly-minded pursuits, and weak brethren offended or made to stumble. But whatever may be the estimation in which you are held, and whatever the stations which you occupy, we cannot forbear to remind you, that all violations of the Fourth Commandment are utterly inconsistent with the principles of the doctrine of Christ, which you are bound to adorn, and, with the example of Christ, which it is your highest honour and interest to follow; and that those gross acts of profanation are especially perilous, which, while they betray contempt of the Divine Lawgiver, have a manifest tendency not only to grieve and wound every serious spirit, but to ensnare and mislead the giddy and careless, and thus ultimately involve them in everlasting ruin. Though we trust that some transgressions of the law of the Sabbath are less frequent than at former periods, we have too great cause to fear, that there has been, upon the whole, an increased abounding of this flagrant iniquity, and that many things are done, without hesitation or scruple, of which it is a shame even to speak. With deep concern we have learned, that in various parts of the country there has been, for a number of years past, a great increase of unnecessary travelling on the Lord's Day, both for purposes of business and amusement; that shops have been kept open on that day for the sale of provisions and other articles of traffic; that multitudes, forgetful of their most sacred duties and their immortal interests, have become accustomed to wander in the fields, to frequent scenes of recreation, or to spend their time in riot and drunkenness, and other immoralities. We do not attempt to enumerate the multiplied and aggravated offences of this description, of which we have received most unwelcome information; but we have ground for apprehending that many of these offences may be traced to the neglect of the religious instruction of children,—to the inattention of masters to the spiritual welfare of their servants,—to the inadequate provision for accommodating the population in places of public worship,—to the consequent deficiency of pastoral superintendence,—and, above all, to the temptation presented by the almost unlimited number of public-houses, which, in many places, are so inconsiderately licensed from year to year, with too little regard to the characters and habits of the landlords.

As we cannot shut our eyes to the alarming extent and enormity of these evils, the progress of which it is our duty to counteract by all the means within our reach, we earnestly warn you to beware of outraging the sanctity of the Sabbath, by engaging in any ordinary employment, or in any occasional labour which you cannot in your consciences, and in the near prospect of eternal judgment, regard as a work of necessity or mercy. As the Lord God has appropriated the Sabbath to himself, it is an impious encroachment on his inalienable prerogative to attempt to convert it either into a day of business or a day of idleness and pastime. In the entire cessation from secular pursuits, in the strict exclusion of all worldly cares, in turning away the eyes from vanity, in avoiding all corrupt communication, and in endeavouring to unite the heart to fear the Lord, and to attend on his service without distraction, a spiritually-minded man, far from accounting the Sabbath a weariness, finds it to be a delight; and has the satisfaction of knowing that, by the light of a good example, he is employing the most likely means of encouraging others to serve the Lord with gladness.

We exhort those who possess power and wealth, not only to set an example of the regular observance of the offices of divine worship, in public and in private, and to abstain from making any unnecessary demands on the time and the services of their dependants, that none may, on their account, be detained from the house of God; but diligently to exert themselves in discouraging and repressing the ensnaring haunts of guilty excess, and liberally to devise and promote more ample means of attending on the solemnities of religion, for those who have too good grounds for alleging that no space has been reserved for them in the churches of the Establishment. If, during the personal ministry of the Lord Jesus, it was matter of just commendation to a man of rank, who was an alien from the commonwealth of Israel, that from the love of that nation he had built a synagogue; much more must it become every Christian patriot, according to his ability, to provide access for men of all conditions to the house of prayer, that the small and the great meeting together may, with one accord, pour out their common supplications, intercessions, and thanksgivings, before the throne of the Universal Father, who hath made of one blood all the families of men to dwell on the face of the earth, and who, in proclaiming it to be his pleasure that to the poor the Gospel shall be preached, has emphatically admonished the rich, that, in proportion as they know and value the truth, they ought to do with all their might whatsoever their hand findeth to do, for the free and copious communication of this inestimable privilege.

We exhort parents and masters that they be faithful and earnest in commanding their children and their households after them, to walk in the ways of the Lord, restraining them from the pernicious liberty of finding their own pleasure, imparting to them instruction in righteousness, and setting before them such an edifying pattern as may be expected to convince them that the duties of devotion are not only reasonable, but in the highest degree beneficial and pleasing to all who exercise themselves unto that vital godliness which is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

We exhort the humble in station to remember, that to them the Sabbath of the Lord ought to be peculiarly precious, as it provides for them not only a periodical relaxation from toil, but frequent opportunities of calmly considering the things which belong to their peace, and making preparation for entering on the rest which remaineth for the people of God. We beseech them to call to mind the honourable distinction which their fathers possessed in times past, when almost every household, poorly provided as it might be with the accommodations and comforts of life, offered up the morning and evening sacrifice of prayer and praise, day by day continually, and when more especially the mornings and the evenings of the day of holy repose were passed either in sweet meditation on the power and glory of God, or in taking sweet counsel with brethren and companions in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ. How unlike to such days of refreshing fellowship are the polluted Sabbaths to which many lost souls will forever look back as to the wide gate and the broad way which swiftly and surely led them to endless destruction! Let it no longer be the reproach of this land, once so renowned for purity of faith and decorum of Christian practice, that there are many of its degenerate inhabitants who have broken down the domestic altars, and profaned the sanctuaries, and on whom the weekly Sabbath opens and closes with no other distinction except that of being more exclusively than any other day devoted to folly, dissipation, and vice. Encompassed as you are with light, how great will be your condemnation, if of you it can be said, that in the tabernacles of grace neither your prayers nor your alms ascend in memorial before God; that the words of truth and soberness are seldom heard in your families; that not one thought of yours is bestowed on the care of the precious souls for whose good you are bound to watch; but that every expression, every action, and every relaxation, is as carnal, earthly, and devilish, as if man had been created for the purpose of dishonouring his Maker, degrading his own nature, and multiplying injuries and sorrows to his fellow-creatures;—that clamour, strife, sensuality, violence, and worse than brutal intoxication, with other kindred offences, fill up the measure of that day which God, in his mercy, appointed for the refreshment of man and beast, but which is so far from yielding refreshment to infatuated myriads of human beings, that, more than the most laborious of their other days, it exhausts their strength, and wastes their substance, and impairs their present comfort, while it fails to awaken any solid hope of future happiness.

Knowing the terrors of the Lord, we would persuade and adjure the hardened, by all that is bitter in remorse, by all that is intolerable in an awakened and unpurified conscience, by all that is fearful on the deathbed of impenitence, by all that is searching in the frown of an unreconciled Judge, by all that is repulsive in the fellowship of accursed spirits, by all that is woefully agonising in the gnawing of the worm that dieth not, and in the fire that is not quenched, to awaken from the dream of guilty insensibility, and to flee from the wrath to come to the hope set before them in the Gospel. Most tenderly do we beseech them, by the mercies of God, by that forgiveness which is with him, that he may be feared, by the love and the pity, the blood and the agony of the Lord Jesus, whom they have crucified afresh, and by the ineffable consolations of the Spirit of Grace, to whom they have done despite, that they seek the Lord while he may be found, and call upon him while he is near. It is presumptuous to expect that the Spirit will always strive with the rebellious sinners who do always resist and grieve him; but while the door of hope is not shut, we pray you, in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.

We need scarcely admonish those who have experience of the holy satisfactions of a religious life, to continue to walk in the ways which they have found to be pleasantness and peace. But we entreat them to suffer this word of exhortation. Let no one say, am I my brother's keeper?—when he sees a fellow-creature walking in the way which leadeth to destruction. It is the office of brotherly kindness to warn and rebuke, and restore to counsel, erring souls, and not to suffer sin upon them,—“of some having compassion, making a difference, and others saving with fear, pulling them out of the fire.” To such labours of Christian love, applied to the godlike object of gathering the outcasts, and regaining the lost, the highest rewards have been promised and secured. The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life, and he that winneth souls is wise. They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever.

Now, unto Him who is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.
