PREFACE

“DES communications et des rencontres, voilà ce qui arrive à tout lexicographe en quête de matériaux,” wrote Littré by way of introduction to the third supplement to his great dictionary. With the substitution of a word the observation will apply with equal force to one in quest of material for the bibliography of an author so prolific as Dr. Holmes in “occasional” prose as well as verse. The compiler of this volume early abandoned all hope of achieving completeness, even before he was warned by one who knew whereof he spoke that he had undertaken a “supernatural” task. He has finally become convinced that, no matter how long the book may be withheld from the press, there will be no end to the “communications and discoveries;” the Appendix contains those which have come to hand since the pages were made up, and which it was impossible to incorporate in the text.

The general arrangement of the bibliography is substantially the same as that adopted by Mr. Cooke in his Bibliography of Lowell.

I. A Chronological List of Titles, accompanied by page references. This list is extended to include the more important volumes in which some of Dr. Holmes's works are printed in conjunction with the work of other writers.

II. An Alphabetical List of Single Works. This list has been extended by the necessity of introducing a large number of cross-references. So many poems written for special occasions have never received any distinguishing titles, and are printed in the collections simply as “Songs,” “Poems,” or “Hymns,” that it is not easy to find any particular one without the aid of a cross-reference. Again, a number of the poems, especially the earlier ones, were originally published under different titles from those which they now bear, and a complete list must necessarily include both.

In searching for unpublished matter in the periodicals and "Annuals" of the years between Dr. Holmes's graduation and the publication of his first volume of poems (1836), the compiler remembered a passage in a letter to Phineas Barnes, quoted by Mr. Morse, in his biography of Dr. Holmes: ¹ "By the way, if you find any floating scraps with O. W. H. to the tail of them, set them down to the owner and, I believe, the only one, of those preposterous initials." In this way he was able to fix the original appearance of some, even of the acknowledged poems, which the careful editor of the Cambridge Edition had failed to place. The purpose has been to give, so far as possible, in connection with each item:—

1. Particulars as to its first appearance in print.
2. If it first appeared elsewhere than in a bound volume, the title and date of publication of such volume in which it was first printed, if at all.
3. Its first appearance in a volume of Dr. Holmes's collected works.

In some special cases further details are given; and when it has come to the compiler's knowledge that a poem was printed in the form of a leaflet, or broadside, for distribution on the "occasion" for which it was written, or for any other purpose, that fact also is noted. Such printings are, in the eye of the collector, first editions, and are prized accordingly.

Unfortunately, for the purposes of the bibliographer, at least, there is no possibility of identifying Dr. Holmes's earliest original works. His own statements on the subject are not illuminating. In the "Autobiographical Notes" printed by Mr. Morse,² he says, "I have often been asked what were the first verses I printed. I can't be quite certain on this point; but of one thing I am quite certain, that, so far as I know, no vestige of talent is found in any one of them." And in the letter to Mr. John O. Sargent of Feb. 19, 1878, accompanying the famous sonnets written for the anniversary of the Harvard Club of New York: "May I venture to remind you, Mr. President, that it is nearly fifty years since you, as Editor of a College Magazine, gave a kindly welcome to the earliest printed verses known as coming from my pen?" The reference is, of course, to the Collegian, and perhaps the qualifying phrase, "known as coming from my pen," may reconcile it with the following passage of a letter to Phineas Barnes, written in March, 1828, fifty years earlier, while Holmes was still an undergraduate at Harvard: "I smoke most devoutly, and sing most unmusically, have written poetry for an Annual, and seen my literary bantlings swathed in green silk and reposing in the drawing-room."¹ Thus far no one has succeeded in discovering an "Annual" bound in green silk, of a sufficiently early date to meet the requirements of this allusion, although some of those who have been interested enough to follow it up, have thought that they detected Dr. Holmes's hand in different poems in the Token for 1828 and 1829.

² Vol. i, p. 47.

It is certain, however, that he was the author of two poems which were composed and delivered during the year 1829, but of which neither, in all likelihood, was ever printed. On July 14, Class Day, Holmes "delivered a humorous and characteristic poem, the chief objection to which was its brevity." Such is the record of the Secretary of the Class of 1829;² and Mr. Lowell, in his article on Class Day for the Harvard Book,³ quotes the diary of the Rev. George Whitney of Roxbury with respect to this Class Day of 1829 as follows:—

³ Cambridge, 1875, vol. ii, p. 165.

“His [Holmes’s] poem was very happy and abounded in wit. Instead of a spiritual muse he invoked for his goddesses the ladies present, and in so doing he sang very amusingly of his ‘hapless amour with too tall a maid.’”

Again, at Commencement, we have, in addition to the Class records, the testimony of Rev. John Pierce of the Class of 1793, in his diary, that “Holmes gave much delight in a poem without a subject.”¹

It is probable that the poem printed, under the title “Banditti,” in the New England Galaxy early in 1830, and reprinted under the same title, in the same year, in the Gleaner, is the earliest production of Dr. Holmes’s of which we can be absolutely sure. It is familiar to all readers under the title “The Music-Grinders.”

III. A Chronological List of Single Publications.

Beginning with the Harbinger, in which seventeen of Dr. Holmes’s poems, all of which save one² had been previously printed, in various periodicals and annuals, were “collected,” an attempt has been made to include all the important editions, at least, of each successive publication of Dr. Holmes. Recourse has been had to the Library of Harvard College, the Boston Public Library, the Boston Athenæum, and the Boston Medical Library; also to the Library of Congress, and, lastly, to the Catalogue of Printed Books in the British Museum. As to the last-named authority, the compiler feels bound to say that he is not altogether satisfied as to the extraordinary number of editions of various works said to have been issued by Messrs. Routledge, most of which are given in the Appendix.

In this list only those separate issues of individual poems

² “The Dying Seneca.” It probably had been printed elsewhere, but has not been discovered.

are included which seem to have been printed with some idea of permanence.

IV. Selections and Compilations.

This list has been extended somewhat beyond its natural intent, in order to give, in conjunction with that immediately preceding, prominent position to every book (not including periodicals, or reports of proceedings on special occasions) in which any work of Dr. Holmes was first printed.

V. Letters.

VI. Contributions to the Atlantic Monthly.

The foregoing lists are intended to include, in some form, mention of everything written by Dr. Holmes. Those which follow represent the compiler's endeavors to collect what has been written about him and his work.

I. Biographies, including a list of bibliographies, of which only those of Mr. Foley, Mr. Arnold, and Mr. Kennedy¹ deserve special mention. None of these were published separately.

II. List of books and articles of which the authors are known, arranged alphabetically by the authors' names.

III. Chronological List of anonymous articles.

As to the last two lists, the compiler regrets that it was impracticable, without extending them beyond measure, to indicate, except in rare instances, the comparative importance of the works enumerated. Many would have been omitted except for his reluctance to attempt to discriminate.

IV. Poems.

The volume closes with a list of sales at auction. Even a cursory examination will show how unreliable such sales are in fixing the value of any particular volume; for the prices obtained are not only influenced by considerations of sentiment and association, but vary mysteriously according to the dates of the various sales, and, to some extent, according to the names of the owners of the volumes sold.

If he has fallen far short of completeness, the compiler ventures to hope that his work will, at least, be found to be free from serious errors, although there may be occasional inconsistencies in the arrangement of material. To remedy this defect so far as possible, and to direct attention to the miscellaneous items of information which are scattered through the various lists and to which neither alphabetical nor chronological arrangement gives a clue, an index has been added. It does not pretend to be exhaustive, or to be arranged on any scientific plan, but it is hoped that it may measurably serve the purpose indicated.

The compiler is glad to acknowledge his indebtedness to Mr. Charles Albert Read, of the Harvard Library, for valuable assistance in collecting material, especially data of magazine articles and other works concerning Dr. Holmes; to Miss Annie L. Sinclair, of the Library of Congress at Washington, for descriptions of editions of Dr. Holmes's works other than those issued by his authorized publishers; and to Mr. James F. Ballard, of the Boston Medical Library, for courteous and willing coöperation in his investigations there. He is also under great obligation to Mr. Justice Holmes for memoranda relating to certain editions in his library, of which he has obtained no information from any other source. Mr. Luther S. Livingston, in addition to his generous assistance, acknowledged elsewhere, in connection with the record of auction sales for 1905-06, has very kindly furnished bibliographical material which has made it possible to add considerably to the list of volumes containing letters of Dr. Holmes; and Mr. Patrick Kevin Foley, with the most unselfish and hearty good-will, has supplied valuable information and suggestions which are gratefully acknowledged. Thanks are due also to Mr. George Blatchford, of Pittsfield, and to the family of the late Mr. J. E. A. Smith, for their generous permission to print those of the “Berkshire poems” of Dr. Holmes, which were first published in Mr. Smith’s “The Poet among the Hills;” also to Dr. James Jackson Putnam for permission to print the verses to Dr. James Jackson on his eightieth birthday.

Mrs. J. Chester Chamberlain, of New York, has, with the utmost courtesy and kindness, supplied descriptions of two very rare works, — “New England’s Master-Key” and a Lecture of 1863, — the only known copies of which are in the great collection of the late Mr. Chamberlain, whose untimely death in the prime of life and in the midst of a career of great usefulness and promise is lamented not by collectors alone. The value of this work to those persons to whom, if to anybody, it can have value is greatly increased by the inclusion of such material.

Mr. Stephen H. Wakeman, of New York, whose collection of works by and concerning the New England group of authors is very extensive and complete, kindly allowed the compiler to inspect his valuable Holmes collection; the most notable result of that permission is the description of the unique “Lecture on the Poetry of the War,” of which only two copies are known to have been printed. In addition to this, however, the compiler is indebted to Mr. Wakeman for his knowledge of the existence of a number of poems in the shape of separate leaflets, and of the reprint of the Atlantic article on Hawthorne in that author’s “Pansie;” also for the opportunity to inspect the “Verses from the Island Book,” for copies of the “Prelude” to that volume, and of the curious versions of the passage from “The Old Player,” printed in the Recreations of the Rabelais Club; and for much other information which was unobtainable elsewhere, all of which is gratefully acknowledged.

In conclusion the compiler takes the opportunity to say that his investigations have satisfied him that collectors outside of New England are rapidly acquiring all that is most valuable from their standpoint in the way of editions and manuscripts of the group of authors to whom that section of the country owes its literary prestige.

* Camilla

The Poet among the Hills (J. E. A. Smith), 1895, pp. 153-154.

Written in 1855. A zealous parishioner of St. Stephen's, Pittsfield, called upon Dr. Holmes to ask him to contribute two poems for the "post-office" at a fair to be given by the parish. Having promised the poems, "Dr. Holmes, of course, escorted his fair besieger to the door; and in assisting her to remount her horse, being perhaps poetically nervous, he did not calculate with precise accuracy the amount of force necessary to place her gracefully in her seat. The saddle was, however, gained without a fall. But the poet, busy as he was, did not forget the incident, and when the fair postmistress received the two poems promised for her mail, there came also one for Miss M—— which described it with his never-failing grace, wit, and accuracy." — Smith, pp. 151-153.

The gray robe trailing round her feet,
 She smiled and took the slippered stirrup
 (A smile as sparkling, rosy, sweet,
 As soda, drawn with strawberry syrup); —
 Now, gallant, now! be strong and calm, —
 The graceful toilet is completed, —
 Her foot is in thy hollowed palm —
 One little spring, and she is seated!
 No foot-print on the grass was seen,
 The clover hardly bent beneath her,
 I knew not if she pressed the green,
 Or floated over it in ether;
 Why, such an airy, fairy thing
 Should carry ballast in her pocket, —
 God bless me! If I help her spring
 She'll shoot up heavenward like a rocket.
 Ah, fatal doubt! The sleepless power
 That chains the orbs of light together,

Bends on its stem the slenderest flower
 That lifts its plume from turf or heather;
 Clasp, lady, clasp the bridle rein!
 The filly stands — hold hard upon her!
 Twine fast those fingers in her mane,
 Or all is lost — excepting honor!

Earth stretched his arms to snatch his prize.
 The fairies shouted "Stand from under!"
 The violets shut their purple eyes,
 The naked daisies stared in wonder;
 One moment. — Seated in her pride,
 Those arms shall try in vain to win her;
 "Earth claims her not," the fairies cried,
 "She has so little of it in her!"

Clouds, forests, hills and waters! — and they sleep
 As if a spirit pressed their pulses down, —
 From the calm bosom of the waveless deep
 Up to the mountain with the sunlit crown,
 Still as the moss-grown cities of the dead,
 Save the dull plashing of the horse's tread.

And who are they that stir the slumbering stream?

Nay, curious reader, I can only say
 That, to my eyes of ignorance, they seem Like honest rustics on their homeward way;
 There is a village; doubtless thence they came;
 There was a christening; and they have a name.

They are to us, like many a living form,
 The image of a moment, and they pass
 Like the last cloud that vanished on the storm,
 Like the last shape upon the faithless glass;
 By lake, or stream, by valley, field, or hill,
 They must have lived; perchance are living still.

* "Dear little Dorothy, Dorothy Q"

Life and Letters of Oliver Wendell Holmes (Morse), 1896, vol. i, p. 231.

When Dr. Holmes heard of the birth of a daughter to his nephew and namesake, O. W. H. Upham, and that she was named Dorothy Q., "he wrote and sent to his little grand-niece a couple of stanzas, which make a pretty pendant to the original poem [Dorothy Q]." The ms. of the poem is still in the possession of the young lady to whom it was addressed. It was written in 1882.

"Dear little Dorothy, Dorothy Q.,
 What can I find to write to you?
 You have two U's in your name, it's true,
 And mine is adorned with a double-u;
 But there's this difference in the U's,
 That one you will stand a chance to lose
 When a happy man of the bearded sex
 Shall make it Dorothy Q. + X.

"May Heaven smile bright on the blissful day
 That teaches this lesson in Algebra!
 When the orange blossoms crown your head,
 Then read what your old great-uncle said,
 And remember how in your baby-time
 He scribbled a scrap of idle rhyme, —
 Idle, it may be — but kindly, too,
 For the little lady, Dorothy Q."

 Each Heart has its own Secret

In the Mercantile Library Reporter ("conducted by the Literary Committees of the Mercantile Library Association") for January, 1856, vol. 2,¹ pp. 36-40, is a report of the opening of the fifteenth annual course of public lectures before the Association, on Wednesday [Thursday], Nov. 15, 1855, when an address was delivered by Prof. F. D. Huntington of Cambridge, and a poem by Dr. Holmes. After a sketch of Prof. Huntington's remarks the report continues (p. 38):—

"The new poem by Dr. Holmes, 'Each heart has its own Secret,' was the next grand feature of the evening. Although not written in the Doctor's most humorous vein, it nevertheless abounded in many sly hits and jocose allusions, and, when published (as it soon will be, with Mr. Huntington's address, under the auspices of the Association), we are confident that it will be eagerly sought for and read with intense pleasure, and will prove to be the happiest of the genial author's many happy efforts. . . .

"The unity of the poem consisted in the fact that all its parts illustrated the truth that 'Each Heart has its own Secret.' The illustrations were five in number, each of them a distinct, independent narrative or picture.

¹ Only three volumes of this periodical were published.

“The first may be called ‘The Island Ruin.’ Such a ruin as is described is still to be seen in Boston Harbor. The life of its former occupant was a mystery [sic]. His secret perished with him.

“The second narrative, or picture, is ‘The Banker’s Dinner.’ The supposed rich man gives a great banquet, which is described. His secret comes out at the end of the feast.

“The third story is that of a young Roman, who was sick, and nobody could tell what was the matter with him. A Greek physician came and found out his secret. This story is a variation on the old stories of Erasistratus and Galen.

“The fourth picture is that of a statesman who is unhappy in the midst of his triumphs. His secret, which all the world guesses, is a devouring ambition to reach a certain high office which really great men ought not to expect in these times.

“The fifth picture is that of Mary, the Virgin Mother, who kept the secret of her wonderful child in her own heart.

“The concluding lines relate to the secrets of the earth, of the stars, and of their Creator.

“In an introduction of about a hundred lines, a veteran actor is brought before the curtain, and his feelings and recollections traced in a few sketches.

“We subjoin some passages from different parts of the poem.

The compiler has been unable to discover any direct evidence that the address and poem were ever published “under the auspices of the Association;” inquiry at the rooms of the Association, which is still in existence, in its 86th year, failed to disclose any trace of such publication. But the following passages of a letter from J. L. Motley, to Dr. Holmes, dated May 3, 1857, prove conclusively that this same poem was sent — it may have been in print, or in manuscript, but as a single poem — to the historian; the last sentence, it will be noticed, identifies the place where it was delivered.

“I have read your poem a great many times, and have admired it more at each successive reading. Each of the episodes has freshness, strength and beauty, and the whole fabric is simple and noble. . . . The episode of the young Roman is handled with much classic elegance, as well as with great tenderness and truth. The best portion, however, is that which embodies the mother’s secret. . . . The Webster photograph is bold, shadowy and imposing, but would probably elicit more hearty applause from a public audience than from some of us who have perhaps pondered too much the unheroic and the unpoetical elements which constituted so much of that golden-hearted and clay-footed image.

"The same remark I should be inclined to make upon the fraudulent banker. I suppose that you will not agree with me, and very likely it is some narrowness on my part, or oversqueamishness, but the particulars of a modern dinner-party will refuse to make poetry to my imagination. . . . The description of the ruined home on Apple Island is almost the best thing in the poem. . . .

"But you cannot do what I wish you to do except upon two conditions: one, devotion of your faculties and of your time to the one great object; the other, cotton-wooling your ears absolutely to all hand-clapping and greasy mob-applause of mercantile lecture-rooms."¹

When Dr. Holmes published the collection called "Songs in Many Keys," in 1862, he included therein, under the sub-heading, "Pictures from Occasional Poems, 1850-1856," certain portions of the Yale Phi Beta Kappa poem of 1850: "Astræa" (see supra, p. 7), and the following seven poems, viz., "The Old Player," "The Island Ruin," "The Banker's Dinner," "The Mysterious Illness," "A Mother's Secret," "The Disappointed Statesman," and "The Secret of the Stars." These poems were published under the same sub-heading, and with the same titles, in all subsequent collections prior to the Riverside Edition in 1895,² when all of them save the first were arranged in a new setting, with a prelude and interludes, and under different titles, with the exception of "The Secret of the Stars." "The Old Player" was left by itself among the Songs in Many Keys.

Now, it appears from the passages of "Each Heart has its own Secret" printed in the Mercantile Library Reporter that these

¹ The morning papers of Thursday, Nov. 15, report this meeting of the Association, and the Advertiser gives an outline of the poem at some length. "The general theme was 'The Heart's Secret.'" — The Post says: "The poem was a mystery. It abounded in the humor with which the Doctor is surcharged, revealing itself in flashes of jetty light . . . all woven in a mystical braid, that like a strain of wild music, puzzled the mind to understand it, but made the heart feel better as it listened."

² And are still so printed in the Household Edition.

seven poems were originally embodied in the long poem of that title read before the Mercantile Library Association. The "introduction of about a hundred lines" is "The Old Player," which has 120. "The Island Ruin" retains its name, as does "The Banker's Dinner;" "the story of the young Roman" (named Lucius) is "The Mysterious Illness;" "The Disappointed Statesman" retains its name, while the "picture of Mary, the Virgin Mother," becomes "A Mother's Secret."¹

The Riverside Edition of the Poems was prepared under the personal supervision of Dr. Holmes, so that the separation of "The Old Player" from its fellows was presumably intentional; but the editor of the Cambridge Edition was evidently not aware of the history of these poems, as he gives 1850-1856 as the date of composition of those included in "Readings over the Teacups;" whereas it is clear enough that those dates, 1850-1856, meant that the extracts from "Astræa" belonged in 1850, and the others in 1856 (1855). Furthermore, in the Cambridge Edition 1859 is suggested as the probable date of "The Old Player."

Almost all of the passages given in the Reporter show some variations from the present text of the corresponding passages of the separate poems, and a number of lines are omitted altogether. For instance, at the close of the introduction, the subject of the poem is announced thus:

"The Heart's own Secret! How a single word
 Would tell our history, and we die unheard!
 When Love's dear witchery makes us more than kind;
 When Friendship lifts the flood-gates of the mind;
 When the red wine-cup brings its half-eclipse,
 And the heart's night-birds flutter round the lips;
 That single word the faithful traitors shun:
 Tell follies, sins and secrets — all but ONE.
 Behold the simple thread that intertwines
 Its sober strand along my pictured lines."

And from the conclusion (The Secret of the Stars), these lines are quoted, referring to the national flag:

"One hue it borrows from the tropic rose,
 And one comes glistening from the polar snows;

¹ It had already appeared under that title in "The Professor at the Breakfast-Table," in the Atlantic Monthly for June, 1859.

Forever braided, till the crownless Queen
Sweeps with its folds the mighty world between!"

Neither of these passages is to be found in any edition of Dr. Holmes's poems.

In rearranging the titles for resetting these poems, Dr. Holmes recurred to the original idea suggested in the title "Each Heart has its own Secret:" "The Island Ruin" becomes "The Exile's Secret;" "The Banker's Dinner," "The Banker's Secret;" "The Mysterious Illness," "The Lover's Secret;" and "The Disappointed Statesman," "The Statesman's Secret."

* "Fair lady, whosoe'er thou art"

The Poet among the Hills (J. E. A. Smith), 1895, pp. 155-156.

This is one of the two poems written by Dr. Holmes in 1855 for the "post-office" in connection with the entertainment given by St. Stephen's Parish, Pittsfield. (See "Camilla.") "The poem was inclosed in an envelope upon which was written this motto:

"Faith is the conquering Angel's crown;
Who hopes for grace must ask it;
Look shrewdly ere you lay me down,
I'm Portia's leaden casket."

Within the envelope was the poem:

"Fair lady, whosoe'er thou art,
Turn this poor leaf with tenderest care,
And — hush, O hush thy beating heart —
The One thou lovest will be there!

"Alas! not loved by thee alone,
Thine idol, ever prone to range;
To-day, all thine, to-morrow flown,
Frail thing that every hour may change.

"Yet, when that truant course is done,
If thy lost wanderer reappear,
Press to thy heart thy only One
That nought can make more truly dear!"

Within this sheet was a slip of paper, with the following verses, inclosing a one dollar bill:

“Fair lady, lift thine eyes and tell
 If this is not a truthful letter;
 This is the one (1) thou lovest well,
 And nought (0) can make thee love it better (10).

“Though fickle, do not think it strange
 That such a friend is worth possessing,
 For one that gold can never change
 Is Heaven’s own dearest earthly blessing.”

For the Meeting of the Burns Club, 1856

Celebration of the Hundredth Anniversary of the Birth of Robert Burns, by the Boston Burns Club, 1859, pp. 19-21.

In "Record of Transactions" of the Burns Club, under date of Jan. 25, 1856 (97th anniversary). The poem as printed in Songs in Many Keys, and since, is thus introduced:

"The following witty introduction, and beautiful poem, were read by Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, one of the guests on the occasion, and always a cherished friend of the Club:

"I have come with the rest, I can hardly tell why,
With a line I will read you before it is dry.
I know I've no business among you, full well,
But I'm here, notwithstanding, and how, I will tell.

"It was not a billet beginning 'Dear Sir;'
No missive like that would have coaxed me to stir;
Nor a ticket, announcing the 'on' and the 'at,'
And 'requesting the honor,' — 't was better than that.

"It was done by a visit, from one that you know,
Whose smile is unchilled by life's season of snow,
Whose voice is so winning, resist as you may,
You must do what it says, for it will have its way.

"It is true that at first I began to suggest
I should sit like a stranger apart from the rest;

But he said: 'To no clan is our banquet confined,
For the heart of the poet belongs to mankind.'

"Then I timidly asked, 'Can I run, at a pinch,
If our friends from the old world have learned how to lynch?'
For I thought with dismay of the Know-Nothing Crew,
And I fancied a yell — 'He's a Know-Nothing too!'

"I thought of old Porteous, of Hare and of Burke;
I remembered the witches of Alloway Kirk; —
'Why bless you,' he said with a smile, 'if you're cotched,
You will never be killed, you will only be Scotched!'

"So I came, and I'm here, with a line as I said;
I don't mean the verses that just have been read,
But the ones in my pocket, and so, if you please,
You shall hear them at once if you'll pardon me these."

¹ In the Harvard Advocate, May 26, 1876, vol. 16, p. 88, is an account of the decennial dinner, on May 11, by Charles H. Barrows, in which we find the following reference to this poem:—

"Dr. Holmes, . . . to the surprise and gratification of all, finished his speech by producing a poem, prepared for the occasion, which he read in the happiest way, interrupted at various points by applause. The subject was 'The Old Horse,' a sequel to the 'Wonderful One-Hoss Shay,' the leading character being the horse instead of the 'shay.' The author's native humor was well-sustained throughout his verses, and one or two local hits were especially appreciated."

thank the Doctor for this, and for much besides. The Doctor is the dear and ever-young colleague of all Harvard editors. With them, perennially,

‘He steps a five-year-old again.’

Our founders, the Class of 1867, have a closer bond with Dr. Holmes, in the common memory of one whom it will be always of good cheer to remember.”

The last reference is to Dr. Holmes’s younger son, Edward Jackson Holmes, of the Class of 1867, who died in 1884.

In the Harvard Graduates’ Magazine for June, 1906, vol. 14, p. 600, Mr. T. T. Baldwin says (“Forty Years of the Harvard Advocate”): “It is related that a few days after the dinner two of the editors waited upon the genial doctor and asked permission to print the verses in the Advocate, to which request he replied: ‘Young gentlemen, that poem might do to read before your board, but I hardly think it worthy a place in your columns.’ It appeared two months later in the Atlantic.”

How sweet to boyhood's glowing pulse
 The sleep that languid summer yields,
 In the still bosom of the wild,
 Or in the flowery fields!

So art thou slumbering, lonely boy —
 But ah! how little deemest thou
 The hungry felon of the wood
 Is glaring on thee now!

He crept along the tangled glen,
 He panted up the rocky steep,
 He stands and howls above thy head,
 And thou art still asleep!

No trouble mars thy peaceful dream;
 And though the arrow, winged with death,
 Goes glancing near thy thoughtless heart,
 Thou heedest not its breath.

Sleep on! the danger all is past,
 The watch-dog, roused, defends thy breast,
 And well the savage prowler knows
 He may not break thy rest!

¹ This poem was read at the dinner in Memorial Hall, following the formal exercises, at which Mr. Lowell read his "Under the Old Elm." When Mr. Lowell was called upon to respond to the toast, "The Poet of the Day," he introduced Dr. Holmes, to "respond to the spirit of the toast." Dr. H. prefaced the reading of the poem with the following remarks:

"Ladies and Gentlemen, — I know you will not accuse me of lightly or wantonly taking the compliment to myself, when you have sat to-day and listened to my friend's inspiring poem; and I should hesitate to read the few verses I have here, were it not that one was before and the other after dinner. I have addressed the gray heads and bald heads of this assembly more particularly, asking if they can tell where some of the old familiar places in this immediate vicinity are."

Old Ironsides

Boston Daily Advertiser, Sept. 16, 1830.

"One genuine lyric outburst, done in this year of the law, almost made him in a way actually famous. The frigate Constitution, historic indeed, but old and unseaworthy, then lying in the navy yard at Charlestown, was condemned by the Navy Department to be destroyed. Holmes read this in a newspaper paragraph, and it stirred him. On a scrap of paper, with a lead pencil, he rapidly shaped the impetuous stanzas of 'Old Ironsides,' and sent them to the Daily Advertiser, of Boston. Fast and far they travelled through the newspaper press of the country; they were even printed in hand-bills and circulated about the streets of Washington. An occurrence, which otherwise would probably have passed unnoticed, now stirred a national indignation. The astonished Secretary made haste to retrace a step which he had taken quite innocently in the way of business. The Constitution's tattered ensign was not torn down. The ringing spirited verses gave the gallant ship a reprieve, which satisfied sentimentality, and a large part of the people of the United States had heard of O. W. Holmes, law student at Cambridge, who had only come of age a month ago." — Life and Letters of O. W. Holmes, by J. T. Morse, Jr., vol. i, pp. 79-80.¹

Stanza 2, line 4, ms., has glories for trophies; stanza 4, line 2, smiling calmly for calmly smiling; stanza 6 reads in the ms.:

"Nay—since you call it to my mind,

One thing in manhood's life

I should not care to leave behind,

I think I'll take — my wife."

Stanza 7, line 3, ms., has youth for boy; stanza 8, line 1, ms., has still for yet; line 3, ms., has thy past has, for these gifts have; last stanza reads in the ms.:

"And so I laughed, and, laughing, woke

From dreams of fancied joys;

And came to tell the Angel's joke

Among us gray-haired boys."

In this latter compilation the poem is printed as in the copy spread on the Class records. But as printed in the "Poet," and in the collected editions, it shows the following variations from its original form: the 3d and 9th stanzas are omitted, and that which stands 6th in the revised form — "The cheering smile, the voice of mirth," etc. — does not appear in the ms. In the 5th stanza the ms. has second childhood's instead of love and friendship's.

The 3d stanza in the ms. reads:

"Clear as the lark at morning's blush
It filled the springtide bowers;
Sweet as the vesper-trilling thrush
It charmed the autumn hours."

And the 9th:

"And if, in some great anthem's pause,
That voice should once begin —
May Heaven forgive its slighted laws!
The Boys would all strike in!"

Line 12 of the 4th stanza:

"Round the fresh clasp of thine embracing arms."

Lines 3-6 of the last stanza:

Our Daily Fare, Philadelphia, June 9, 1864, no. 2, p. 13.

Why in these breathless sleepless times,
When every hour is like an age,
Should poets pair the rusted rhymes
That climb in every school-boy's page?
Are these the days for idle songs?
Are these the nights to doze and dream,

When all our fiery manhood throngs
A perilled nation to redeem?

Yet blame not him whose slender tone
Blends with the stirring battle-call;
'T was but a crooked ram's horn blown, —
Down crushed the Godless heathen's wall!
A word of cheer may nerve the blow
That turns the conflict's trembling scale,
And he that never saw his foe
May pierce him through his triple mail.

Poetry: a Metrical Essay (Read before the Phi Beta Kappa Society, Harvard University, Aug., 1836)

Poems, 1836, pp. 3-39.

Dr. John Pierce, of the Harvard Class of 1793, for many years a regular attendant at Commencement and at Phi Beta Kappa meetings, left a diary from which copious extracts have been published from time to time in the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society. He had this to say of the meeting of 1836: "After a suitable interlude by the band, Oliver Wendell Holmes, M. D., of the class of 1829, delivered a beautiful poem of 1 hour and 10 minutes, committed to memory, and uttered with charming ease and propriety. It was exceedingly miscellaneous. In it he paid a feeling tribute to this as the place of his nativity, to some of the most striking objects in his vicinity, and to his sister, who in the bloom and beauty of youth was consigned to the adjoining cemetery. He took an affectionate notice of Dr. James Jackson, Jr.,¹ with whom he had studied in Paris, and whose early death he deeply deplored. He was often interrupted by the spontaneous and long continued applauses of the Society and of the audience in general." (Mass. Hist. Soc. Proceedings, 2d series, vol. 9, p. 127.) See "Lines recited at the Cambridge Phi Beta Kappa Dinner" and "The Pilgrim's Vision."

"A few lines, perhaps deficient in dignity," have been, from the beginning, omitted from the poem as published, but printed among the "notes."

Questions and Answers

Poems of 1849, 2d issue.

Songs of the Class of 1829, 1854, pp. 10-11.

In his Life and Letters of Oliver Wendell Holmes, Mr. Morse quotes letters of Rev. Samuel May, Secretary of the Class of 1829, to Dr. Holmes, as follows: "You regularly began to furnish us a poem in 1851, — 'The summer dawn is breaking' [A Song of Twenty-Nine]." — "From that day to this no class meeting of 1829 has been without a poem from you — not one." It is true, none the less, that there was no contribution from Dr. Holmes in 1852. "Questions and Answers," which had been printed in 1849, was sung by him at the meeting in 1850; it was printed among the Class songs in 1854, and in the second edition (1859) was relegated to the Appendix, with the words "From Dr. Holmes's Poems." In the third edition (1868), it took its place as of 1852, although with a slightly different designation from the other poems ("For the Class, 1852"), and has been so printed in all collected editions since 1877, although it was originally written much earlier than 1852, and not for the Class.

My name declares my date to be

 Though motherless, as all agree,
 I am a mother, it is clear;
 A father, too, without dispute,

 'T was I gave Holland to the Dutch.

 Runaway Ballads I and II

The Collegian, Feb., 1830, no. 1, pp. 11-12.

As these are the earliest in date of those poems of Dr. Holmes which it has been found possible to trace (except the translation from the Æneid, "First Verses"), they are here given at length.

I

Wake from thy slumbers, Isabel, the stars are in the sky,
 And night has hung her silver lamp, to light our altar by;
 The flowers have closed their fading leaves, and droop upon the plain,
 O wake thee, and their dying hues shall blush to life again.

In such a sacred hour as this, how beams the eye of love,
 When all is mellowed shade below, and all is light above;
 And oh, how soft a maiden's sigh melts on the midnight air,
 When scarce a wanton zephyr breathes, to wave her silken hair.

The rattle of the soldier's steel has left the silent hall,
 The mastiff slumbers at the gate, the sentry on the wall;
 And there, by many a stately barge, that rocks upon the tide,
 A bark is floating on the waves and dancing by their side.

And when before the flowing wind she spreads her eagle wings,
 And like a halcyon, from her breast the shivered billow flings;
 Though many a prouder pendant flies before the ocean breeze,
 No keel can track her foaming path, that sweeps the sparkling seas.

Then come to me, my lovely one, and haste we far away,
 And we will reach the distant isle before the break of day;
 Let not thy gentle eyes grow dim, thy rosy cheek grow pale,
 For thou shalt find a beating heart beneath a warrior's mail.

II

Get up! get up! Miss Polly Jones, the tandem's at the door;
 Get up, and shake your lovely bones, it's twelve o'clock and more,

The chaises they have rattled by, and nothing stirs around,
 And all the world, but you and I, are moving safe and sound.

I broke a drunken watchman's nap, and he began to mutter,
 I gave him just a gentle tap, that helped him to the gutter;
 The cur-dog growled an ugly growl, and grinned a bitter grin;
 I tipped the beast a rat's-bane pill, to keep his music in.

When Squaretoes stumps about the house, and does n't find you there,

And all the folks are in a touse, my eyes! how dad will stare!
 He locked and double-locked the door, and saw you safe abed,
 And never dreamed a jailor's paw could scratch a booby's head.

Come hurry! hurry! Polly Jones, it is no time to snooze;
 Don't stop for t'other petticoat, nor fidget for your shoes;
 I have a quilted wrapper here, your tender limbs to fold,
 It's growing mighty chilly, dear, and I shall catch a cold.

I've got my gouty uncle's bay, and trotting Peggy too,
 I've lined their trips with oats and hay, and now for love and you;

The lash is curling in the air, and I am at your side,
 To-morrow you are Mrs. Snaggs, my bold and blooming bride.

THE TASK

Twelve well-crammed lines, firm, juicy, marrowy, sweet,
No bone or trimmings, nothing here but meat,
With rhyme run through them like a golden skewer,
Taste might approve and patience may endure.

THE EXECUTION

Long live old Harvard! Lo, her rushing train
Greets a new sign-board stretched across the plain;
While the bell rings — (and that the bell shall do Till Charles shall drop his worn-out channel through,) —
It gently hints to every cur that barks,
Here comes the engine, — don't you see the Sparks?

How changed the scene! The forest path is clear;
 That mighty engine finds no Indian here!
 The world's great teachers quit their native Alps
 To fill the skulls once trembling for their scalps,
 When the red neighbors of our ancient school
 Left their own wigwams others' wigs to cool!

"This song, which I had the temerity to sing myself (felix audacia, Mr. Franklin Dexter had the goodness to call it), was sent in a little too late to be printed with the official account of the celebration. It was written at the suggestion of Dr. Jacob Bigelow, who thought the popular tune 'The Poacher's Song' would be a good model for a lively ballad or ditty." — Note of Dr. Holmes in Riverside Edition of Poems.

Sea-birds of Muscovy, rest in our waters,
 Fold your white wings by our rock-girded shore;
 While with glad voices its sons and its daughters
 Welcome the friends ye have wafted us o'er.

Sea-kings of Neva, our hearts throb your greeting!
 Deep as the anchors your frigates let fall;
 Down to the fount where our life-pulse is beating,
 Sink the kind accents you bear to us all.

Fires of the North, in eternal communion,
 Blend your broad flashes with evening's bright star!
 God bless the Empire that loves the great Union;
 Strength to her people! Long life to the Czar!

When our land is illum'd with liberty's smile,
 If a foe from within strike a blow at her glory,
 Down, down, with the traitor that dares to defile
 The flag of her stars and the page of her story.
 By the millions unchain'd who our birthright have gained,
 We will keep her bright blazon forever unstained.
 And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
 While the land of the free is the home of the brave.

* Tail-Piece, The

The Collegian, July, 1830, no. 6, pp. 289-290.

This poem closed the sixth and last number of the Collegian. It is introduced by these words: "We subjoin the following poetical finale, written by our most valued correspondent at the request of the Club."

Kind world, sweet world, on every earthly shore,
From Boston's dome to China's porcelain tower,
We bend our knee in lowly guise once more,
To ask a blessing on our parting hour.
Our bud was nursed in Winter's tempest roar,
The dews of spring fell on the opened flower;
The stem is snapped, and blue-eyed Summer sees
Our lilac leaflets scattered to the breeze.

No more we float upon the tide of time,
That fills the chalice of the star-girt moon;
The sober essay and the sounding rhyme
Are as the echoes of a ceasing tune;
From neighboring village and from distant clime,
From bare-walled study and from gay saloon,
We softly sink to dark oblivion's shade,
Unwept, unblest, unhonored, and unpaid.

The vagrant printer may resume his quill,
To scribble school-boy on the nameless tomb;
The hard-eyed pedant call us, if he will,
Precocious children, nursed to fruitless bloom;
The sad subscriber eye his tardy bill,
And knit his brows in unavailing gloom —
The printer's satire and the pedant's frown,
The debtor's sigh, we swallow boldly down.

But thou, sweet maiden, as thy fingers turn
The last poor leaf that claims thine idle glance,
If there was aught to feel or aught to learn
In ode or treatise, vision, dream, or trance, —
If the cold dust of the neglected urn
Has ever warmed thee, by some happy chance,

Should aunts look grim, or fathers shake the head,
Plead for the harmless ashes of the dead.

Ethereal being, thou whose melting eye
Looks down like heaven where'er its glances fall,
On noiseless slipper, gliding softly by,
So sweetly drest, so proper, and so tall,
The dew-fed offspring of the summer sky,
Beau, critic, poet, soldier, each and all,
From the dormeuse, where thy soft limbs recline,
Sigh out a requiem o'er our broken shrine.

The fire is out — the incense all has fled;
And will thy gentle heart refuse to grieve?
Forget the horrors of the cap-crowned head,
The fatal symbol on a student's sleeve,
Think that a boy may grow if he is fed,
And stroke us softly as we take our leave;
Say we were clever, knowing, smart, or wise,
But do say something, if you d—n our eyes.

Ye who have shrunk not, dangerous though it seem,
To lay your hands on yet unlaureled brows,
If e'er we meet — and frown not if we deem Fame yet may smile on boyhood's burning vows —
Bound in the garlands that we fondly dream
May yet be gathered from Parnassian boughs;
Yours be the praise, who led our doubtful way,
Till harmless Hatred threw his brick away.

Perchance we greet you, not as late we came,
In meagre pamphlet, bound in flimsy fold,
But from a page that bears a prouder name,
With silken covers and with edge of gold;
Look then in kindness on our higher claim
And bid us welcome as ye did of old;
So may your lives in pleasure glide along,
Rich as our prose, and sweeter than our song.

Peace with you all — the summer sun will rise
Not less resplendent that we are no more;
The evening stars will gird the arching skies,
The winds will murmur, and the waters roar —

Our faded way is lost to mortal eyes,
 Our wave has broken on the silent shore —
 One whisper rises from the weeping spray —
 Farewell, dear readers — and be sure to pay.

Boston, Sept. 1st, 1843.

MY DEAR SIR:

I read a Poem at the dinner table of the Phi Beta Kappa at Cambridge the other day which I should like to publish in Graham's Magazine, if the editors want it and are willing to pay for it.

It consists at present of 166 lines in the heroic measure — but I should be inclined to make it about two hundred, or very nearly that, by certain additions. I believe that for me it was remarkably happy, but you may think it no great thing. At any rate it has more point in it than most of the things of the kind I have done lately.

Two or three weeks ago Mr. Frost, on the part of Godey's Lady's Book, made me some liberal offers for anything I would give him. I answered that I felt bound to offer them to you first, but without the least idea that I should so soon have anything to publish. I therefore mention it to you and end my proposals with these questions:

1. Do you want such a poem?
2. What will you give me for it?
3. Are you afraid of a hint at repudiation in it?
4. Can it be published in your Magazine word for word, letter for letter, comma for comma?
5. Do you want to see it before you meddle with it?

This is a very straight-forward business letter, and does not require any answer unless you want the Poem. If so I shall hear from you. Believe me very truly

Your Friend,

O. W. HOLMES.

P. S. No tender feelings are concerned which might interfere with Editorial interests.

Pamphlet, 16mo, pp. 8.

Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, Oct. 11, 1894, vol. 131,
pp. 377-379.

A footnote in the Journal informs us that this poem, some lines of which are omitted, "was read at a medical supper-party about forty-eight years ago;" and on the first page of the pamphlet is the following note: "These verses were read at a medical supper-party about the year 1845."

There is nothing to indicate when the pamphlet was printed. Copies have been sold at auction as follows: Libbie's, 1890, $12.00; Arnold Sale, 1901, $14.00; Drury Sale, 1906, $15.50. The Boston Medical Library Association owns a pamphlet copy of the poem; also a manuscript copy, formerly owned by the late Dr. James R. Chadwick.

* This shrine a precious gift enfolds

Memoir of Dr. James Jackson, by Dr. James J. Putnam, 1905, pp. 414-415.

These verses accompanied the gift of a set of silver salt-cellars to Dr. Jackson on his eightieth birthday, Oct. 3, 1857.

This shrine a precious gift enfolds;
Look, when its lids unclose,
Not on the shining cross it holds,
But on the love it shows.

What though the silvered brow may seem
Amid the youthful throng
A little farther down the stream
That bears us all along;

Those murmuring waves are mute to-day,
The stream forgets to run,
The brown locks mingle with the gray,
And all our hearts are one.

Ah, could we bring earth's sweetest song
And bear its brightest gold,
The gift our grateful hearts would wrong,
Our love were still untold.

"It was this most genial of poets who wrote the verses given below, for the Saturday that fell next after my father's eightieth birthday, when they dined together at the [Saturday] club."

I know thee well. From olden time
Thou hadst a weakness for a rhyme,
And wilt with gracious smile excuse
The languor of a laggard muse,
Whose gait betrays in every line
The weight of years outnumbering thine.

And who will care for blame or praise,
When love each syllable betrays?

The seven-barred gate has long been past,
The eighth tall decade cleared at last;
But when its topmost bar is crossed
Think not that life its charm hath lost;
Ginger will still be hot in mouth,
And winter winds blow sometimes south,
And youth might almost long to take
A slice of fourscore's frosted cake.

Thrice welcome to the chosen band,
Culled from the crowd by Nature's hand:
No warmer heart for us shall beat,
No freer hand in friendship meet.
Long may he breathe our mortal air,
For heaven has souls enough to spare.
Lay at his feet the fairest flowers —
Thank God he still is Earth's and ours.

While through the land the strains resound,

What added fame can love impart

To him who touched the string that found

Its echoes in a nation's heart?

No stormy ode, no fiery march,

His gentle memory shall prolong;

But on fair Freedom's climbing arch,

He shed the light of hallowed song.

Full many a poet's labored lines

A country's creeping waves will hide;

The verse a people's love enshrines

Stands like the rock that breasts the tide.

Time wrecks the proudest piles we raise;
 The towers, the domes, the temples fall;
 The fortress ever crumbles and decays, —
 One breath of song outlasts them all.

* Vision of Life, A (Read at the graduating exercises of the Pittsfield Young Ladies’ Institute in 1849)

The Poet among the Hills (J. E. A. Smith), 1895, pp. 111-113.

Dr. Holmes made a short speech (given on pp. 110 and 111), after which he said:

“I will read you a few lines from a scrap of paper which, as you see, I have kept artfully concealed about my person.”

A VISION OF LIFE

The well-known weakness of the rhyming race
Is to be ready in and out of place;
No bashful glow, no timid begging off,
No sudden hoarseness, no discordant cough
(Those coy excuses which your singers plead,
When faintly uttering: “No, I can’t, indeed”)
Impedes your rhymster in his prompt career.
Give him but hint; and won’t the muse appear?

So, without blushing, when they asked, I came —
 I whom the plough-share, not the quill, should claim —
 The rural nymphs that on my labors smile
 May mend my fence, but cannot mend my style.
 The wingèd horse disdains my steady team,
 And teeming fancy must forget to dream.
 I harrow fields and not the hearts of men;
 Pigs, and not poems, claim my humble pen.
 And then to enter on so new a stage,
 With the fair critics of this captious age,
 Might lead a sceptic to the rude surmise
 That cits, turned rustics, are not overwise;
 Or the bright verdure of the pastoral scene
 Had changed my hue, and made me very green.

A few brief words that, fading as they fall,
 Like the green garlands of a festal hall,
 May lend one glow, one breath of fragrance pour,
 Ere swept ungathered from the silent floor.
 Such is my offering for your festal day:
 These sprigs of rhyme; this metrical bouquet.

O my sweet sisters — let me steal the name
 Nearest to love and most remote from blame —
 How brief an hour of fellowship ensures
 The heart's best homage at a shrine like yours.
 As o'er your band our kindling glances fall,
 It seems a life-time since I've known you all!
 Yet on each face, where youthful graces blend,
 Our partial memory still revives a friend;
 The forms once loved, the features once adored,
 In her new picture nature has restored.

Those golden ringlets, rippling as they flow,
 We wreathed with blossoms many years ago.
 Seasons have wasted; but, remembered yet,
 There gleams the lily through those braids of jet.
 Cheeks that have faded, worn by slow decay,
 Have caught new blushes from the morning's ray.
 That simple ribbon, crossed upon the breast,
 Wakes a poor heart that sobbed itself to rest;
 Aye, thus she wore it; tell me not she died,
 With that fair phantom floating by my side.

"T is as of old: why ask the vision's name?
 All, to the white robe's folding, is the same;
 And there, unconscious of a hundred snows,
 On that white bosom burns the self-same rose.

Oh, dear illusion, how thy magic power
 Works with two charms — a maiden and a flower!
 Then blame me not if, lost in memory's dream,
 I cheat your hopes of some expansive theme.
 When the pale starlight fills the evening dim,
 A misty mantle folds our river's brim.
 In those white wreaths, how oft the wanderer sees
 Half real shapes, the playthings of the breeze.
 While every image in the darkening tide
 Fades from its breast, unformed and undescried.
 Thus, while I stand among your starry train,
 My gathering fancies turn to mist again.
 O'er time's dark wave aerial shadows play,
 But all the living landscape melts away.

Life and Letters of Oliver Wendell Holmes (Morse), 1896, vol. i, p. 202.

“In 1870 Miss Harriet Putnam (now Mrs. H. J. Hayden, of New York) sent him an apple ‘stolen’ from a tree which overhung the road in front of his old house, and he replied thus:”

We owe, alas! to woman’s sin
The woes with which we grapple;—
To think that all our plagues came in
For one poor stolen apple!

And still we love the darling thief
 Whose rosy fingers stole it;—
 Her weakness brought the world to grief,
 Her smiles alone console it!
 — I take the “stolen” fruit you leave, —
 (Forgive me, Maid and Madam,)
 It makes me dream that you are Eve,
 And wish that I were Adam!

* "Who that can pluck the flower will choose the weed"

Life and Letters of Oliver Wendell Holmes (Morse), 1896,
vol. i, p. 232.

"A gentleman, famous for a generation as 'Tom Appleton,' . . . in a lottery at a fair drew an album, of which the alternate sheets bore prettily painted flowers and foliage. He passed it about to Longfellow, Emerson, Holmes, and the rest, asking each to select his page and write something upon it. . . .
Holmes took a page bearing a cluster of wild autumnal leaves, and wrote:—

"Who that can pluck the flower will choose the weed,
Leave the sweet rose and gather blooms less fair?
And who my homely verse will stay to read,
Straying enchanted through this bright parterre,
When morning's herald lifts his purple bell
And spring's young violet woos the wanderer's eye?
Nay! let me seek the fallen leaves that tell
Of beggared winter's footstep drawing nigh;
There shall my shred of song enshrouded lie,
A leaf that dropped in memory's flowery dell;
The breath of friendship stirred it, and it fell,
Tinged with the loving hue of Autumn's fond farewell.

* "Yes, home is sweet! and yet we needs must sigh" (Read by Prof. H. P. Bowditch at the annual dinner of the Harvard Club of New York, Feb. 21, 1882)

Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, Feb. 23, 1882, vol. 106, p. 187; also Dec. 13, 1894 vol. 131, p. 586.

The sonnet was printed on slips for distribution at the dinner.

The second reference is to the account of the Holmes Memorial meeting of the Boston Medical Library Association, at which Dr. Bowditch again read the sonnet, having first told the circumstances under which it was written; he spoke of it as having never before been printed. It there has the title "Alma Mater."

Yes, home is sweet! and yet we needs must sigh,
 Restless until our longing souls have found
 Some realm beyond the fireside's narrow bound
 Where slippered ease and sleepy comfort lie, —
 Some fair ideal form that cannot die
 By age dismantled and by change uncrowned,
 Else life creeps circling in the self-same round,
 And the low ceiling hides the lofty sky.
 Ah, then to thee our truant hearts return,
 Dear Mother, Alma, Casta — spotless, kind!
 Thy sacred walls a larger home we find,
 And still for thee thy wandering children yearn,
 While with undying fires thine altars burn
 Where all our holiest memories rest enshrined.

 "In respectfully proposing the health of his great-great-grandmother, I am speaking of one whom few, if any, of you can remember. Yet her face is as familiar to me as that of any member of my own household. She looks upon me as I sit at my writing-table; she does not smile; she does not speak; even the green parrot on her hand has never opened his beak; but there she is, calm, unchanging, in her immortal youth, as when the untutored artist fixed her features on the canvas. To think that one little word from the lips of Dorothy Quincy, your great-great-grandmother, my great-great-grandmother, decided the question whether you and I should be here to-night, in fact whether we should be anywhere at all, or remain two bodiless dreams of nature! But it was Dorothy Quincy's yes or no to Edward Jackson which was to settle that important matter — important to both of us, certainly — yes, your Honor; and I can say truly, as I look to you and remember your career, important to this and the whole American community. . . .”

Dr. H. then recited portions of “Dorothy Q.,” changing “I” to “we,” “my” to “our,” and, in one place, “me” to “we.”

In this volume the oration is introduced by the following note :
 "This year the society returned to its early custom, and a poem formed a part of the program. . . . The verses of Dr. Pierpont, though he was then over seventy years of age, would have been quoted with enthusiasm by the youngest and wildest abolitionist, while Dr. Holmes, his junior by thirty years, stood frankly for the most conservative element of the North. One sentiment of the orator in regard to slavery was met with a hiss, to which incident Dr. Pierpont referred at the dinner the following evening. 'I have prepared,' he said, 'some lines, should it ever occur again, which would run somewhat in the following fashion:

“ ‘ Our brother Holmes’s gadfly was a thing
 To Io known by its tormenting sting.
 The noisome insect still is known by this,
 But geese and serpents by their harmless hiss.’

“ Dr. Holmes, rising, instantly replied :

“ ‘ Well said, my trusty brother, bravely done;
 Sit down, good neighbor, now I owe you one!’ ”

Speeches at the First Dinner, etc., 1886, pp. 21-26. "Bill and Joe" is introduced on pp. 23-24.

"BRETHREN OF THE ALUMNI: I had a call this morning from that most formidable of visitors, the reporter, who asked me for the poem I was going to read to-night, which poem was a fiction of his own powerful imagination. It is sixty-one years since I read my first verses at Phillips Academy. It is eight years since I read a long poem on the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the institution. . . .

"I am going to read you a poem, written for another occasion, but surely it never could be read more appropriately than it is now. As the gray heads come together the young ones will sympathize with them, but the gray heads as they meet their old companions feel that all their differences of situation, of history, of condition, are abolished, and this poem embodies that feeling. Will you listen to 'Bill and Joe,' to two gray-headed old men who meet, one, perhaps, high in position, the other humble, struggling to forget all their differences, and strip off everything, and call each other by the old names, the old short names? There are not more than half a dozen people now living, out of my own family, that call me by my first name. Queen Victoria said, 'There is nobody left to call me "Vic."' It is a dreadful loss when you lose your 'Bill,' and become the Honorable So-and-So. . . .

"I was subjected to the severest castigation known, I believe, in the annals of punishment in the institution, such as made a sensation among all the delicate females of the vicinity, and caused young men to utter violent threats, and was, in fact, almost the occasion of a riot. It was an unfortunate display of temper on the part of one of the instructors. [Laughter and applause.] Forty years afterward I heard a knock at my study door, and an old, bending man came in and looked me in the eyes, and I in his. I knew what he came for. [Laughter.] He knew, too well, what he came for. [Renewed laughter.] But we made the usual meteorological remarks [great laughter] and we sat down, I with a cold and calm hospitality; he, evidently, laboring under some inward embarrassment. Presently it came out, the confession and the pardon came out, and after that we were, though separated — and he is now dead or I would not mention it — we were good friends, so far as friendship could base itself upon such a foundation." [Great laughter.]

CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF SINGLE PUBLICATIONS

I

POETRY

THE first entry in this list is placed here, although it contains poems by other hands than Dr. Holmes's, because it may properly be regarded as the first collected edition of his poems. In like manner the various issues of the Songs of the Class of '29 are included in this division; although they contain the work of several other members of the Class, they are generally, and not unnaturally, regarded as special collections of Dr. Holmes's poems. The magazines in which his earliest productions were printed are placed, for convenience, if not most appropriately, under the heading Selections and Compilations.

POEMS, 1836

POEMS. | By | Oliver Wendell Holmes. | Boston: |
Otis, Broaders, and Company. | M DCCC XXXVI.

8vo, pp. xvi, 164. The collation is as follows: i, half-title; ii, blank; iii, title; iv, copyright, and imprint (Cambridge: Printed by Folsom, Wells, and Thurston); v–xii, preface; xiii–xiv, contents; xv, half-title (“Poetry: a Metrical Essay”); xvi, blank; 1, dedication (To Charles Wentworth Upham the following Metrical Essay is affectionately inscribed); 2, blank; 3–39, “Poetry;” 40, blank; 41–44, notes to “Poetry;” 45, half-title (Lyrics); 46, blank; 47–163, lyrics; 164, colophon (Cambridge: Folsom, Wells, and Thurston).

On pp. 16–20 is printed (without separate title) “The Cambridge Churchyard,” and on pp. 24–25 (likewise without title), "Old Ironsides." In the contents, these familiar titles appear as sub-titles under "Poetry."

The Preface is as follows:—

As the poem which stands at the head of this collection was received kindly enough to warrant its publication, I have availed myself of this occasion as an apology for offering a little book to the public. Among the poems which it contains are several, which the wishes of others rather than my own have led me to admit. Besides, having written comparatively little, and nothing of late years, until within a few months, I could ill afford to be over nice in my selection, unless I were willing to reduce my volume to dimensions odious alike to the self-love of authors and the cupidity of booksellers. If the good-natured reader, then, should find some pages a little overdull, or over-extravagant, let him take it for granted, that they were reluctantly admitted by the author in consideration of the exigencies of the publisher.

The first poem in the collection being somewhat discursive, I will point out, in a few words, its scope and connexion. Its object is to express some general truths on the sources and the machinery of Poetry; to sketch some changes which may be supposed to have taken place in its history, constituting four grand eras; and to point out some less obvious manifestations of the poetic principle. The stages assigned to the progress of poetry are as follow:—

I. The period of Pastoral and Descriptive Poetry; which allowed a digression upon Rome, and the introduction of a descriptive lyric.¹

II. The period of Martial Poetry. At the close of this division are some remarks on our want of a national song, and an attempt is made to enliven the poem by introducing a lyric² which deals in martial images and language, although written only for an occasional purpose.

III. The Epic or Historic period of Poetry. Under this division of the subject, the supposed necessity of an American "Iliad" was naturally enough touched upon.

IV. The period of Dramatic Poetry, or that which analyzes, and traces from their origin, the passions excited by certain combinations of circumstances. As this seemed the highest reach of poetical art, so it constitutes the last of my supposed epochs.

The remarks contained in the last division relate to some of the different forms in which poetry has manifested itself, and to a pseudo-poetical race of invalids, whose melancholic notions are due, much oftener than is supposed, to the existence of pulmonary disease, frequently attributed to the morbid state of mind of which it is principally the cause. The allusions introduced at the close will carry their own explanation to all for whom they were intended. I have thus given a general analysis of a poem which, being written for public delivery, required more variety than is commonly demanded in metrical essays.

The shorter pieces are arranged mainly with reference to the dignity of their subjects. A few remarks with regard to a species of writing in which the author has occasionally indulged, are offered to the consideration of those who are disposed to criticise rigorously; without the intention, however, of justifying all or any of the attempts at comic poetry, if they are bad specimens of their kind.

The extravagant is often condemned as unnatural; as if a tendency of the mind, shown in all ages and forms, had not its foundation in nature. A series of hyperbolic images is considered beneath criticism by the same judges who would write treatises upon the sculptured satyrs and painted arabesques of antiquity, which are only hyperbole in stone and colors. As material objects in different lights repeat themselves in shadows variously elongated, contracted, or exaggerated, so our solid and sober thoughts caricature themselves in fantastic shapes inseparable from their originals, and having a unity in their extravagance, which proves them to have retained their proportion in certain respects, however differing in outline from their prototypes. To illustrate this by an example. Our idea of a certain great nation, an idea founded in substantial notions of its geography, its statistics, its history, in one aspect of the mind stretches into the sublime in the image of Britannia and in another dilates into the sub-ridiculous in the person of John Bull. Both these personifications partially represent their object; both are useful and philosophical. And I am not afraid to say to the declaimers upon dignity of composition, that a metrical arabesque of a storm or a summer, if its images, though hyperbolic, are conceivable, and consistent with each other, is a perfectly healthy and natural exercise of the imagination, and not, as some might think, a voluntary degradation of its office. I argue, as I said before, for a principle, and not for my own attempt at its illustration.

I had the intention of pointing out some accidental plagiarisms, or coincidences as they might be more mildly called, discovered principally by myself after the composition of the passages where they occur; but as they are, so far as I know, both innocent and insignificant, and as I have sometimes had literary pickpockets at my own skirts, I will leave them, like the apples of Atalanta, as an encouragement to sagacious critics, should any such follow my footsteps.

I have come before the public like an actor who returns to fold his robes and make his bow to the audience. Already engaged in other duties, it has been with some effort, that I have found time to adjust my own mantle; and I now willingly retire to more quiet labors, which, if less exciting, are more certain to be acknowledged as useful and received with gratitude; thankful that, not having staked all my hopes upon a single throw, I can sleep quietly after closing the last leaf of my little volume.

The first English edition of the Poems, although the title-page of the Routledge edition of 1852 tells a different story, which Dr. Holmes’s remarks regarding the present edition in his preface to that of 1849 (infra, p. 126) may partly explain. The poems contained in the edition of 1836 are reprinted without change, except that “To my Companions” precedes “To a Caged Lion.” The volume contains these additional poems:—

Lines recited at the Cambridge Phi Beta Kappa Society’s Dinner [1844].

Terpsichore.

The Parting Word.

Lines recited at the Berkshire Festival.

Song, written for the Annual Dinner of the New York

URANIA: A RHYMED LESSON

[Ornament] URANIA: | A RHYMED LESSON. |
 By Oliver Wendell Holmes. | Pronounced before the Mercantile Library Association, |
 October 14, 1846. | Boston: | William D. Tick-
nor & Company. | MDCCCXLVI.

Pamphlet, 8vo, pp. 32, viz.: 1, title; 2, copyright, and imprint (Boston: Printed by Freeman and Bolles, Devonshire Street); 3-31, poem; 32, notes.

A second edition was published in the same year, identical with the above, except that the words "Second Edition" are added on the title-page, below the date.

In a letter to J. R. Lowell, dated Nov. 29, 1846, printed in Morse's Life and Letters, vol. i, 295-303, Dr.
 Holmes answers certain strictures of Lowell, and discusses the poem and his own views as reflected therein.

POEMS, 1849

POEMS. | By | Oliver Wendell Holmes. | New and
 Enlarged Edition. | [Cut] Boston: | William D.
Ticknor & Company. | MDCCC XLIX. | [c. 1848.]

8vo, pp. xii, 272; numerous vignettes and tail-pieces. The collation is as follows: i, half-title; ii, blank; iii, title; iv, copyright, and imprint (Boston: Thurston, Torry and Emerson, 31 Devonshire Street); v-vi, From a Letter of the Author to the Publishers; vii-x, contents; xi, dedication of "Poetry;" xii,
 blank; 1-35, "Poetry;" 36, blank; 37-40,
 notes on "Poetry;" 41, half-title (Lyrics); 42, cut; 43-160, lyrics; 161, half-title (Poems added since the First Edition); 162, cut;

163-192, poems; 193-226, "Urania, a Rhymed Lesson;" 227-228, notes on "Urania;" 229-272, poems.

The extract "from a letter of the Author," printed as preface to this somewhat rare volume, reads as follows:

As these productions are to be given to the public again at your particular request, I must trust that you will make all proper explanations. I need hardly remind you that a part of them appeared in a volume published about a dozen years ago; that when this volume had been some time out of print, another edition was printed, at your suggestion, in London, but I suppose sold principally in this country; and that the present edition is published to please you rather than to gratify myself. You will, therefore, take the entire responsibility of the second and third appearances, except so far as my consent involved me in the transaction.

Let me remark, also, that it was only to suit your wishes that several copies of verses, which sound very much like school exercises, were allowed to remain unexpunged. If any body takes the trouble to attack them, you may say that they belong to the department of "Early" or "Juvenile" Poems, and should be so ticketed. But stand up for the new verses, especially those added in this edition. Say that those two names, "Terpsichore" and "Urania," may perhaps sound a little fantastic, but were merely intended as suggestive titles, and fall back upon Herodotus. Say that many of the lesser poems were written for meetings more or less convivial, and must of course show something like the fire-work frames on the morning of July 5th. If any objection is made to that bacchanalian song, say that the author entirely recedes from several of the sentiments contained in it, especially that about strong drink being a national want. But ask, if a few classical reminiscences at a banquet may not be quite as like to keep out something worse, as to stand in the way of something better.

If any thing pleasant should be said about the "new edition," you may snip it out of the paper and save it for me. If contrary opinions are expressed, be so good as not to mark with brackets, carefully envelop, and send to me, as is the custom with many friends.

I have looked over the proof-sheets pretty accurately, and arranged the poems in something like order. The first one hundred and fifty-eight pages contain all that were printed in the edition of 1837 [1836]; the next thirty-two pages were added in that of 1846; the remaining ones are now added.

You can take this note of mine as the basis of some kind of programme or advertisement; but that "Preface" and "Biography"¹ made rather too heavy a portico for so slight a structure as the volume they introduced, and had better be abstracted.

The "Poems added since the First Edition" include all of those added in the edition of 1846 except "The Only Daughter," but arranged in a different order; also the following, which had not previously been collected:

Urania: a Rhymed Lesson (which had already appeared as a separate publication).

The Pilgrim's Vision.

A Modest Request.

Nux Postcœnatica.

On Lending a Punch-Bowl.

The Stethoscope Song.

Extracts from a Medical Poem.

A Song of Other Days.

A Sentiment ("The Pledge of Friendship," etc.).

THE SAME. Boston: | Ticknor, Reed & Fields. |
MDCCCXLIX. | [c. 1848.]

8vo, pp. xii, 286.

This second issue of the Poems of 1849 differs from that bearing the imprint of W. D. Ticknor & Co. in the following respects:—

The imprint on p. iv (back of title) is, "Stereotyped by George A. Curtis; New England Type and Stereotype Foundry [sic], Boston. Printed by Thurston, Torrey & Co., 31 Devonshire Street." The prefatory matter on pp. v-vi is headed "The Author to the Publisher," and is entirely different from the corresponding matter in the earlier issue. It reads as follows:—

¹ [Referring to the London edition of 1846.]

I thank you for the pains you have taken to bring together the poems now added to this collection; one of them having been accidentally omitted, and the existence of the others forgotten. So many productions which bear the plain marks of immaturity and inexperience have been allowed to remain, because they were in the earlier editions, that a few occasional and careless stanzas may be added to their company without any apology. I have no doubt you are right in thinking that there is no harm in allowing a few crudities to keep their place among the rest; for, as you suggest, the readers of a book are of various ages and tastes, and what sounds altogether schoolboy-like to the author may be very author-like to the schoolboy. Some of the more questionable extravagances to be found in the earlier portion of the volume, have, as I learn, pleased a good many young people; let us call these, and all the others that we have outgrown, Juvenile Poems, but keep them, lest some of the smaller sort that were, or are, or are to be, should lament their absence. I thought of mentioning the date at which the several poems were written, which would explain some of their differences; but the reader can judge them nearly enough, perhaps, without this assistance.

To save a question that is sometimes put, it is proper to say, that in naming two of the poems after two of the Muses, nothing more was intended than a suggestion of their general character and aim. In a former note of mine (which you printed as a kind of preface to the last edition), I made certain explanations which I thought might be needed; but as nobody seems to have misinterpreted any thing, we will trust our book hereafter to itself, not doubting that whatever is good in it will redeem and justify the rest.

Boston, January 13th, 1849.

The poems referred to in the first sentence of the above are five in number, to wit: "The Only Daughter" (the one accidentally omitted), "Lexington," "The Island Hunting-Song," "Questions and Answers," and "A Song for the Centennial Celebration of Harvard College, 1836." They are not added at the end of those printed in the earlier issue, but are inserted at pp. 182-195, between the "Song for a Temperance Dinner" and “Terpsichore,” so that the pagination in the two issues corresponds only to p. 181. “Terpsichore” begins on p. 196, instead of on p. 182, as in the earlier issue, and the fourteen additional pages are thus accounted for.

This edition, in its final form, was reprinted many times, — nearly every year until 1861. In the reprint of 1851, a frontispiece portrait of Dr. Holmes was first added to the other embellishments of the volume.

12mo, pp. 39; viz.: 1, title; 2, copyright, and imprint (Boston: Thurston, Torry & Company, Printers, Devonshire Street); 3–39, poem.

There are copies in boards, others in cloth.

This poem has never again been printed as written, except in the collection published in London (Routledge) in 1852. In Songs in Many Keys (1862) certain excerpts from it were printed in the group called Pictures from Occasional Poems, under these titles: “Spring,” “The Study,” “The Bells,” “Non-Resistance,” “The Moral Bully,” and “The Mind’s Diet,” and they have continued to be so printed in the Household and all other collected editions.

In the Cambridge (1895) and Cabinet (1899) editions, the balance of the poem is printed in the Appendix, with indication of the original position of the above-named passages.

The following lines from that portion of “Astræa” which is now published under the title “Spring,” were printed in Silhouettes and Songs, Illustrative of the Months, E. E. Hale, editor, 1876. "April" is the title there given to them.

At last young April, ever fresh and fair,
 Wooed by her playmate with the golden hair,
 Chased to the margin of receding floods
 O'er the soft meadows starred with opening buds,
 In tears and blushes sighs herself away,
 And hides her cheek beneath the flowers of May.

The Class records do not disclose the date of publication of this concluding volume of the poems written by its members for their annual meetings, but it was undoubtedly published during the year 1890, as it contains an extract from the Atlantic for January of that year, and as the Rev. Mr. May's letter to the librarian of Harvard College, accompanying a copy, is dated January 9, 1891.

He had sixteen proofs and doubled the length of the poem, besides giving it a more serious tone.

one can readily grasp. At this time (1862) Dr. Holmes had long since acquired the habit of reading an annual poem to the Class of '29, but his contributions of 1851, 1853, and 1855 are omitted from this collection. They had already been printed in the Songs of the Class, but so had "The Old Man Dreams" (1854), "Our Indian Summer" (1856), "Mare Rubrum" (1858), and "The Boys" (1859), which are included in this volume.

Apparently reprinted several times.

POEMS, HOUSEHOLD EDITION

THE | POETICAL WORKS | OF | OLIVER WENDELL
 HOLMES. | Household Edition. | [Device] |
 Boston: | Houghton, Osgood and Company. |
 The Riverside Press, Cambridge. | 1877.

8vo, pp. xii, 322. The collation is as follows: i, half-title; ii, blank; iii, title; iv, copy-right; v-x, contents; xi, "To my Readers" [verse]; xii, blank; 1-320, poems; 321-322, notes.

The Household was the first collected edition of Dr. Holmes's poems after the Blue and Gold Edition of 1862. It included all of those contained in the edition of 1836, except "A Souvenir," "The Dying Seneca," "The Last Prophecy of Cassandra," and "To my Companions;" all of the edition of 1849; all of the Songs in Many Keys; "The Voyage of the Good Ship Union" (which was the only "uncollected" poem in the Blue and Gold Edition); all of the Songs of Many Seasons; and some additional poems, a list of which will be given a little later. The contents of the volume were arranged thus:—

EARLIER POEMS (1830-1836).

This group contained eighteen of the Poems of 1836, "Poetry: a Metrical Essay," coming last. "Old Ironsides" and "The Cambridge Churchyard" are again printed separately.

ADDITIONAL POEMS (1837-1848).

This group contained twenty-one of the poems added in the edition of 1849, 2d issue.

MISCELLANEOUS POEMS (1830, etc.).

This group contained all the rest of the poems printed in 1836 and 1849, except the four named above, and except also "Questions and Answers," which was here placed among the Poems of the Class of '29.

SONGS IN MANY KEYS (1849-1861).

This group was divided into I, 1849-1856, and II, 1857-1861. The two divisions embraced the poems contained in the volume of this title, with the exception of most of those originally published in the "Autocrat" and "Professor," and those written for the Class of '29, which were printed in separate groups.

POEMS FROM THE AUTOCRAT OF THE BREAKFAST-TABLE (1857-1858).

"The Living Temple" and "The Voiceless" were omitted from this group, for some unfathomable reason, and left in the second division of Songs in Many Keys; while "The Old Man Dreams" and "Mare Rubrum," which were originally written for meetings of the Class of '29, were placed in that group. "Album Verses" had not previously been collected.

POEMS FROM THE PROFESSOR AT THE BREAKFAST-TABLE (1858-1859).

"A Mother's Secret" was printed among the Pictures from Occasional Poems in the first division of Songs in Many Keys; "The Two Streams" and "At a Birthday Festival," in the second division of the same group; and "The Boys," among the Class poems.

POEMS FROM THE POET AT THE BREAKFAST-TABLE (1871-1872).

"J[oseph] A[ngier]" was printed in the next following group under the title "Our Sweet Singer — J. A." "Wind-Clouds and Star-Drifts" here first collected.

POEMS OF THE CLASS OF '29 (1851-1877).

This group includes all the songs and poems found in the third edition of the Class publication (1868), together with "Bill and Joe" (placed at the head of the group), and the following additional pieces:—

The Old Cruiser (1869).

Hymn for the Class-Meeting (1869).

Even-Song (1870).

The Smiling Listener (1871).

Our Sweet Singer — J. A. (1872).

H. C. M. H. S. J. K. W. (1873).

What I have Come For (1873).

Our Banker (1874).

For Class Meeting (1875).

Ad Amicos (1876).

How Not to Settle It (1877).

Of these Class poems the following had not previously appeared in any collection of Dr. Holmes's works, except the privately printed Class publications: "A Song of '29," "An Impromptu — Not Premeditated," "Remember — Forget," "For Class Meeting" (1875), "Ad Amicos" (1876), and "How Not to Settle It" (1877).

SONGS OF MANY SEASONS (1862-1874).

The poems contained in the volume of this title are here reprinted under the same subdivisions and in the same order, with these omissions: "Homesick in Heaven," "Fantasia," "Aunt Tabitha," and the "Epilogue to the Breakfast-Table Series," which are printed under the separate heading of "Poems from the Poet at the Breakfast-Table;" "Bill and Joe," "Choose You this Day," "The Last Charge," "Sherman's in Savannah," and the whole subdivision "For Meetings of the Class of '29," all of which appear in the preceding group.

8vo, pp. xviii, 426. Collation of front matter is as follows: i, title; ii, copyright; iii, Publishers' Note;¹ iv, blank; v-vi, Biographical Sketch; vii-xiv, contents; xv, list of illustrations; xvi, blank; xvii, "To my Readers;" xviii, "From the first gleams of morning," etc.

This edition is printed from the old plates to p. 351; pp. 352-409 contain, under the general heading Before the Curfew, and Other Poems, the poems printed in the volume of that title (1888), in the same order there adopted, together with others of later date; and pp. 410-416, a group of Poems from Over the Teacups. The notes are on pp. 417-418, and there are indexes of first lines (419-422), and titles (423-426).

As the plates of the earlier impressions of the Household were used, it was impossible to adopt the more logical arrangement followed in the Riverside Edition, and still further improved in the Cambridge Edition.

The contents of the present Household Edition are substantially the same as those of the three volumes in the Riverside Edition devoted to poems, though the order of arrangement varies slightly."

Collation of vol. ii: i, title; ii, copyright and, imprint; iii-vii, contents; viii, blank; 1-413, poems; 414, blank; 415-418, notes; 419-427, index of first lines. Vol. ii has a frontispiece portrait.

The contents are divided into the same groups as in the Household Edition, each group having a separate half-title, and the order of the poems is unchanged from that edition, except that "Vestigia Quinque Retrorsum," "The Last Survivor," "The Archbishop and Gil Blas," and "The Shadows" are taken from The Iron Gate collection and placed at the end of the Poems of the Class of '29. Under the heading The Iron Gate, and Other Poems," at the end of vol. ii, are printed the contents of the volume of that title, less the four poems named above, and plus these four, now first collected, viz.: "Boston to Florence," "Post-Prandial," "Our Home—

Our Country," and "Poem for the Centennial Anniversary Dinner of the Massachusetts Medical Society."

Issued in England with imprint of Sampson Low & Co.

The catalogue of the British Museum contains an entry of a "revised edition" of Dr. Holmes's "Poems," published by Routledge & Sons (pp. xii, 324), in 1881; and of his "Poetical Works," published by the same firm in its "Excelsior Series," in 1883.

THE LAST LEAF

THE LAST LEAF | Poem | by | Oliver Wendell
Holmes | Illustrated by | George Wharton Edwards & F. Hopkinson Smith | [Device] |
Houghton, Mifflin & Co. | The Riverside
Press, Cambridge, | M DCCCLXXXV.

In the "history" Dr. Holmes says: "Just when it was written I cannot exactly say, nor in what paper or periodical it was first published. It must have been written before April, 1833; probably in 1831 or 1832. It was republished in the first edition of my poems, in the year 1836." The fact is that the poem was first published in the Amateur for March 26, 1831, no. 17. See p. 205, infra.

The "history" is given almost in full in the Cambridge Edition, 1895, pp. 4-5. The false rhyme in the 3d stanza, there referred to, was corrected in 1836, "sad and wan" being substituted for "so forlorn," in the 3d line.

THE SAME. Boston; Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894.

8vo, pp. 55, with the decorative borders and illustrations of the quarto edition reproduced in smaller format.

Issued in England, with imprint of Sampson Low & Co.

The two editions correspond exactly, page for page, except in these respects: between the title-page and list of illustrations is a two-page letter from Dr. Holmes to the publishers, in facsimile, dated Beverly Farms, July 12, 1894;¹ on pp. 6-8, the poem is printed in ordinary type; the text and illustrations are printed on alternate right-hand pages; and the "history of the poem," at the end, fills four pages, 52-55.

Dr. Holmes's letter is printed in the Cambridge Edition, p. 5. It reads thus: "I have read the proof you sent me and find nothing in it which I feel called upon to alter or explain.

"I have lasted long enough to serve as an illustration of my own poem. I am one of the very last of the leaves which still cling to the bough of life that budded in the spring of the nineteenth century. The days of my years are threescore and twenty, and I am almost halfway up the steep incline which leads me toward the base of the new century so near to which I have already climbed.

"I am pleased to find that this poem, carrying with it the marks of having been written in the jocund morning of life, is still read and cared for. It was with a smile on my lips that I wrote it; I cannot read it without a sigh of tender remembrance. I hope it will not sadden my older readers, while it may amuse some of the younger ones to whom its experiences are as yet only floating fancies."

Portrait in vol. i. Pp. ix-x of vol. i: "To my Readers."

The rearrangement of the poems which was made, under Dr. Holmes's supervision, for this edition, was sadly needed; there had been no collected edition approaching completeness except the Household and the Handy Volume, and the successive reissues of the Household had been made by simply adding new plates for such poems as had been published since the last preceding issue. Thus, for instance, some of the Poems of the Class of '29 were printed under that heading, some under Songs of Many Seasons, some under Before the Curfew, and Other Poems, some under The Iron Gate, and Other Poems; while some other unclassified poems were unaccountably omitted altogether.

In the Riverside the following new categories were made up, viz.: Medical Poems, and Readings over the Teacups; while the Miscellaneous Poems (1830, etc.) of the Household, including those of his earlier productions to which Dr. Holmes was least partial, were placed at the end of the third volume, under the heading, Verses from the Oldest Portfolio.

In making up this edition some poems were accidentally omitted, and the omission is noted in each case in the first part of this bibliography.

Issued in England with imprint of Sampson Low & Co.

The arrangement of the poems follows in the main that adopted in the Riverside Edition; but the poems printed at the end of the third volume of that edition are here relegated to the Appendix, and printed in smaller type, together with four poems, which had been omitted altogether in both Riverside and Household Editions, namely: “A Souvenir,” “The Dying Seneca,” “The Last Prophecy of Cassandra,” and “To my Companions.” The Appendix also contains (pp. 333-337) the long poem, “Astræa,” except those portions which have always been printed under separate titles (see p. 129). Also (pp. 337-341) Notes and Addenda, the latter category including the Report of the Committee on the Ploughing Match (at the Anniversary of the Berkshire Agricultural Society, 1849), and a list of the Members of the Class of '29. Also a Chronological List of Dr. Holmes's poems, in which, “whenever the first appearance of a poem has been not precisely determined, the title is printed in italic under the year when the volume first including it was published.”

In this edition are collected for the first time: (1) a number of poems which, for some reason not explained, were omitted from all previous issues of the Household as well as from the Riverside Edition, — “An Impromptu at the Walcker Dinner,” etc. (1863), “Hymn for the Great Central Fair in Philadelphia” (1864), “Harvard” (1880), “Youth” (1882), “Poem read at the Dinner given to the Author by the Medical Profession of New York City” (1883),¹ and “But One Talent” (1890); (2) those poems which were written after the publication of the Riverside Edition, — “In Memory of John Greenleaf Whittier,”

¹ Added to the group of Medical Poems.

“To the Teachers of America,” “Hymn for the 25th Anniversary of the Reorganization of the Boston Y. M. C. U.,” and “Francis Parkman;” and (3) a hitherto neglected bit from the “Autocrat,” namely, the “Prelude” to “Parson Turell’s Legacy,” which, it will be remembered, was the only part of that poem which the Professor was allowed to read.

The introductory note is as follows:—

"The reader has before him the first draft of the Author's Address, turned into large, legible type, for the sole purpose of rendering easier its public delivery.

"It represents, therefore, a rough manuscript, without those additions, omissions and emendations, by which the text is commonly more or less changed between the earliest copy and the last revised proof.

"By the liberality of the City Authorities, twelve copies, of which this is one, were printed, and placed at the author's disposal. No others were struck off, with the exception of those which the printers were allowed to preserve as typographical specimens."

It is impossible to say how many copies were struck off for preservation by the printers. There are copies in existence which omit all reference to the number printed, and which show some variations in the text of the oration, although the same large type is used. In these copies there is a half-title, "Printed by order of the Common Council," the introductory note is omitted, and the oration is printed on pp. 5-75.

Issued also on large paper. The introductory note is as follows:—

“The Memoir here given to the public is based on a biographical sketch prepared by the writer at the request of the Massachusetts Historical Society, for its Proceedings. The questions involving controversies into which the Society could not feel called to enter are treated at considerable length in the following pages. Many details are also given which would have carried the paper written for the Society beyond the customary limits of such tributes to the memory of its deceased members. It is still but an outline which may serve a present need, and perhaps be of some assistance to a future biographer.”

The appendices include: (a) An account of the Saturday Club, with Dr. Holmes’s poem, “A Parting Health” (pp. 226–228); and (e) Proceedings of the Mass. Hist. Soc., June 14, 1877, including Dr. Holmes’s remarks (pp. 257–269).

LETTER TO RABELAIS CLUB

LETTER TO THE HONORARY SECRETARIES OF THE RABELAIS CLUB.

Broadside, pp. 4, on tinted paper; pp. 1 and 4, blank.

“For Private Circulation only.”

BOSTON, March 21st, 1880.

GENTLEMEN:

It gives me great pleasure to accept the honour you have conferred upon me in choosing me as a member of the Rabelais Club.

I assure you it is very pleasant to receive such a kindly token of recognition from a Society of gentlemen whose names are so distinguished in the lists of artists and men of letters. When we get the Sub-Atlantic Telephone I hope to exchange a few words with you all. I ought to say to the Club that I have a special professional interest in its patron-Saint.

In the year 1835, coming from Marseilles to Paris, I was delayed a short time in Lyons, and strayed into a little mouse-hole of an old book shop. There I picked up two or three bouquins, one of which was a pudgy little volume just exactly as tall as the breadth of this paper.

The title was

APHORISMO.

The bookbinder, probably a teetotaller, left out the RUM in lettering the back. The title page runs thus:

RUM HIPPOCRATES
SEPTEM.
EX FRANC. RABELESII
RECOGNITIONE
* * * *
APUD SEB. GRY-
PHIUM LU-GDINI
1545.

I will borrow from the dedicatory epistle prefixed by my learned professional brother, Dr. Francis Rabelais, to this edition of the Aphorisms of the Father of Medicine, a few words expressing my good wishes for the Club.

Utinam ita floreat hæc Societas ut in ea nostrates episcopi et omnes alii absolutissimum probitatis, modestiæ, humanitatis exemplar, veramque illum virtutis ideam habeant, in quam contuentes aut ad propositum sibi speculum se moresque suos componant aut (quod ait Persius) virtutem videant, intabescantque relicta.

I am, Gentlemen,
Faithfully yours,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

OUR HUNDRED DAYS IN EUROPE

OUR HUNDRED DAYS | IN EUROPE | by | Oliver
Wendell Holmes | [Device] | Boston and New

¹ In his Memoir of Emerson read before the Massachusetts Historical Society, June 11, 1885 (Proceedings, 2d series, vol. 2, p. 107), Rev. J. F. Clarke says of this work of Dr. Holmes: "It will, I think, be always regarded as one of the best biographies in the language."

York | Houghton, Mifflin and Company | The
Riverside Press, Cambridge | 1887.

8vo, pp. vi, 329, and 14 of advertisements.
On p. iii is this dedication: "To my Daughter
Amelia (Mrs. Turner Sargent), my Faithful and Devoted Companion, this Outline of our Summer Excursion is affectionately dedicated."
Index, pp. 321-329.

The index is preceded by the following note: "There are various ways of reading a book. A few diligent persons read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest every page, sentence, word, syllable. Quick-witted students glance through a volume, and find in a few moments what it has which is likely to be of interest for them. Some run their eyes rapidly over the Index, when there is one, which is no more than every book worth printing is entitled to. Some are satisfied with the Table of Contents. Others find the Title-page as much as they want, and there are many books, the wall-flowers of book-shops and libraries, which we are content to read by the lettering on their backs, without calling them out from their places.

"The following Index, made for me under the direction of my publishers, frightened me, when I first looked at it, by its exhaustiveness and its extent. I struck out a few headings, altered a few others, and concluded to let it stand as a monument of industry and fidelity. But I must say that so long a tail to so small a kite is almost without a precedent in my literary experience."

Originally appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, July, 1886, March to Oct., 1887. The first, detached, installment, printed under the title "The New Portfolio—A Prospective Visit," fills 16 pages of the magazine, — only a small fraction being used for the introductory chapter — "A Prospective Visit" — of the volume.

The early issues of the first edition may readily be identified, as they contain an extraordinary error. In one of the paragraphs of "A Prospective Visit" reprinted in the published book, Dr. Holmes says (p. 14 of vol. 58 of the Atlantic): "Among the monuments [in Westminster Abbey], one to my namesake Rear Admiral C. H., a handsome young man standing by a cannon. He accompanied Wolfe in his expedition which resulted in the capture of Quebec. Dryden has immortalized him, in the Annus Mirabilis, as

"the Achates of the General's fight."

In a paper entitled "After Our Hundred Days," printed in the Atlantic for January, 1888 (vol. 61, pp. 127-130), we find the following:—

"After the 'Hundred Days,' the story of which has been published in this magazine during the past year, the natural sequel would seem to be—Waterloo. I thought I had experienced that catastrophe when my attention was called to an anachronism of unusual dimensions in one of the early numbers. It is made all right in the more recent copies of the collected papers, but stands uncorrected in many of those first printed. . . .

"How was it possible for a writer with some half dozen academic gowns on his back, a member of the Historical Society and contributor to its annals, to have spoken of the companion of Wolfe in his victory at Quebec, in 1759, as having been commemorated in Dryden's Annus Mirabilis, which was published in 1667, nearly a century earlier? It could hardly be ignorance, — the pons asinorum is not long enough to stretch over such an interval."

As revised, the passage reads (p. 4): "Among the monuments, one to Rear Admiral Charles Holmes, a descendant, perhaps, of another namesake, immortalized by Dryden in the 'Annus Mirabilis' as

"the Achates of the general's fight."

“He accompanied Wolfe in his expedition which resulted in the capture of Quebec.”

Thus is afforded a certain means of identifying the first issue of “Our Hundred Days.” The same article explains one or two other matters in this volume, but the explanations do not involve changes in the text.

OVER THE TEACUPS

OVER THE TEACUPS | by | Oliver Wendell Holmes
| Author of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast-
Table" | [Vignette] | Boston and New York |
Houghton, Mifflin and Company | The Riverside Press, Cambridge | 1891. [c. 1890.]

8vo, pp. 319.

On p. 3 is a prefatory note, giving the history of the Henry Flynt teapot, of which there is a representation on that page.

The text begins on p. 5, with some introductory matter explaining the fact that, while the first installment was published in the Atlantic Monthly in March, 1888, the second did not appear until Jan., 1890. The paragraph on p. 6, which begins, "The readers who take up this volume," is the true beginning of the book, but there are some changes in the text as it appeared in the magazine. The first words in the latter are: "The readers of this magazine may recollect," etc., and several lines at the end of the first paragraph are omitted in the published volume. Passing over some slight changes in the way of revision of the text, the passage on pp. 18-20 of the volume, beginning, "I referred, when first reporting," etc., and ending with the italicized phrase, "but it did," does not occur in the magazine, where its place is taken by this brief paragraph only:—

"I have had a whole chapter of curious coincidences, some of which, strange as they were, it was impossible to believe were in any causal relation. The Grenville-Tudor case was the most picturesque among them; the Mary Salter case the most unlikely to happen. But I am afraid I have told them already, somewhere or other, and I will say nothing about them at this time."

The first lines of the next paragraph read in the Atlantic: "I could not keep my own personality out of this paper;" and the concluding paragraph of the chapter does not appear there.

At the beginning of the second chapter the Atlantic (Jan., 1890) reads: "I know that it is a hazardous experiment to return to these pages where in days long past I have found a generous welcome."

This first edition of Over the Teacups was issued in London in the same year, with the imprint of Sampson Low & Co.

SELECTIONS AND COMPILATIONS

THE COLLEGIAN | in Six Numbers | Cambridge: |
Published by Hilliard and Brown. | M DCCC XXX.

The poems which Dr. Holmes contributed to this publication are given in the list printed below. Those preceded by an asterisk have never been printed in any of the collections of his poems; those preceded by a dagger were printed in the collections of 1836 and 1849, in the Blue and Gold Edition of 1862, and in the Handy Volume Edition, 1881, but were omitted from the Household Edition, and from all subsequent collections prior to the Cambridge Edition of 1895.

The Collegian is almost invariably found in the shape of a bound volume; the compiler has been unable to place a set of the original numbers, although he is informed that such sets are in existence.

In a note to the Proceedings of the Harvard Club of New York City at the dinner of February 21, 1878, to which Dr. Holmes contributed the two sonnets, "Christo et Ecclesiæ" and "Veritas," we find the following: "After the reading of Dr. Holmes's explanatory letter, the printed copies of the sonnets were distributed among the guests. The magazine referred to in the letter was the Collegian, a journal published by the undergraduates of the Classes of 1830 and 1831. It was edited by a Club consisting of William H. Simmons ('Luke Lockfast'), Robert Habersham ('Frank Airy'), Frederick W. Brune ('Arthur Templeton'), of the Class of 1831; and of Theodore W. Snow ('Geoffrey La Touche') and John O. Sargent ('Charles Sherry' and 'Francis Hock') of the Class of 1830. Oliver Wendell Holmes, of the Class of 1829, an honorary member of the Club, was then a law-student at Cambridge, and contributed one or more poems to every number of the magazine; beginning with his 'Runaway Ballads,' and concluding with a 'L'Envoi' [sic] that is among the most charming productions of his pen, though it has never, we think, appeared among his collected poems.¹ We should not omit to mention that in the Collegian is to be found the first printed composition of John Lothrop Motley, of the Class of 1832."

None of Dr. Holmes's poems are signed, but a note to the table of contents says that all the titles marked with an asterisk are by the same contributor, so that the identification is not difficult. Dr. Holmes tells of his connection with this "little monthly concern" in a letter to Phineas Barnes, printed in Mr. Morse's Life and Letters, on pp. 67-69 of vol. i.

In the Harvard Magazine for Jan., 1858 (vol. 4, pp. 6-8), there is an interesting history of the Collegian, in an article on "College Magazines."

Prelude, p. iii.

Song [“Island Hunting-Song”].

¹ Oration delivered before the City Authorities of Boston, July 4, 1863.

and "The Last Look," in Songs in Many Keys, 1862. The "Prelude" was written for this very rare volume, which contains many other poems written on or concerning Naushon Island; it has never been reprinted and is given in full herewith.

For Dr. Holmes's sentiments touching Naushon and its owners, see the Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, Riverside Edition, pp. 39-41.

O Thou who lovest best the song
Of bird that never sang in cage,
Such are the wood-notes that belong
To this, our Island song-book's page!

O'er its fair field the fancy flits
That never bounden book confined,
And on its perch the warbler sits
Whom leaden chains could never bind.

As when the birds in copse and glen,
From oaken bough and birchen spray, —
Thrush, robin, sparrow, bobolink, wren,
Blackbird and bluebird, finch and jay, —

With joyous clamor wake the morn
And startle all the leafy woods,
To thrill these poet-voices, born
In Nature's seagirt solitudes!

Ah, happy seasons, lapsing sweet
Amid those bowers of peace and rest,
When all the songsters loved to meet
And carol round the King-bird's nest,

Your flowers are dust, your suns have set,
Yet here they still shall bloom and shine,
Till Love and Friendship both forget
They knelt before the Island shrine!

LETTERS

MR. MORSE'S biography of Dr. Holmes contains a large collection of his letters, including many to Mr. Motley, and a large proportion of those to Mr. Lowell, the originals of which have been deposited in the Harvard Library by Professor Norton as a part of his valuable collection of Lowell manuscripts. Mr. Morse has this to say in his preface on the general subject of Dr. Holmes's correspondence:—

“The fact is that letter-writing was to Dr. Holmes an irksome task. Except to Motley and to Lowell, during their absences in Europe, he very rarely wrote spontaneously and in the way of friendship. His letters, it will be observed, were almost always written because some correspondent could not be left unanswered, or under the more or less mild compulsion of some special occasion. Therefore his letters are few. Every effort has been made to collect them, and the result is spread very fully before the reader. Nothing has been omitted which, by any liberality of judgment, could be supposed to have any interest; on the contrary, notes and letters are printed, which would hardly have been selected had there been an embarras de richesses.”

In chapter xii of the first volume of the Life and Letters (“The Victim of Correspondents”), Mr. Morse deals with the same subject at considerable length.

In connection with this chapter it is interesting to read what Dr. Holmes has to say in his own behalf. In an article in the Atlantic Monthly for January, 1886, called “A Cry from the Study,” he writes somewhat bitterly concerning the correspondents who “could not be left unanswered.”

“I am overburdened with a correspondence which I find almost unmanageable. It has reached such a point that I feel as if it would not be unreasonable for me to put out a sign bearing my name with the following additions:— * * * Professional Correspondent, attends to letters on all subjects, from all persons and all quarters. Autographs in quantity at short notice. The Correspondent will furnish stationery without charge to all applicants, in the form of envelopes addressed to himself, and stamped, containing a blank sheet of paper for the letter or message he is to receive. All communications, long or short, all manuscripts, legible or illegible, all books and pamphlets, readable or unreadable, thankfully received and immediately read and criticised. The Correspondent expects no pecuniary return for the few daily hours consumed in this labor of love. It is more than enough to be told that his well-known kindness and universally recognized genial nature have emboldened the writer to venture on what he (with superfluous modesty) calls his 'unauthorized intrusion.' The Correspondent would add that, if any sentence or any fragment of a sentence can be found in any letter of his which can be made use of so as to add commercial value to any publication, it cannot be expected that the word Private prefixed to that letter should be considered as preventing the recipient from giving it publicity in such form as may best promote his interests."

The details that he proceeds to give concerning the different varieties of letter to which he was subjected, and concerning his habit of replying to an enormously large proportion of them, leave little room for doubt that there must be an exceedingly large number of his letters in existence, and, at the same time, that, in many cases, they are not likely to be published.

On November 1, 1887, Dr. Holmes addressed to his correspondents a circular letter in these words:—

"Dr. Holmes regrets that impaired eyesight and the large demands made upon his time by distant and unknown friends oblige him to contract his hitherto extended correspondence, and to avail himself of the services of an assistant in writing."

Copies of this document, printed on a sheet of note paper, are rare and much sought after by collectors, especially when one of the blank pages bears, as is sometimes the case, an autograph letter from Dr. Holmes.

Letters on matters of public or quasi-public interest may be found in the following works. The list is of course very, very far from complete, and is offered simply for what it is worth. On a later page will be found some information concerning manuscript copies of certain letters which have found their way to the auction room.

SOME ACCOUNT OF THE LETHEON, or Who is the Discoverer, 1847, pp. 84-85.

A letter to Dr. W. T. G. Morton, suggesting "Anæsthesia" as a name to be applied to the state produced by his new discovery, and to the agent thereof. In a second edition of the same year Dr. Holmes's letter is on p. 79. In this edition the subtitle is changed to "Who was the Discoverer."

AN ACCOUNT OF THE PILGRIM CELEBRATION AT PLYMOUTH, Aug. 1, 1853, p. 136.

Dr. Holmes's letter, dated Pittsfield, July 5, 1853, concludes thus:—

Letter written by Dr. Holmes in reply to a request of the Autograph Committee of the Great Western Fair at Cincinnati, in Dec., 1863, that he should be "funny over his own signature."

BOSTON, Dec. 14, 1863.

DEAR SIR: — You ask me for a list of questions in Natural History, with answers subjoined, for the use of the instructor. I submit a few which, I think, will serve your purpose for the proposed examination of the Scientific Class:

1. What animal produces one of its own parents?

Answer. The beaver, which is well known to construct its own dam.

2. Is the Dodo extinct?

Ans. It is not, as shown by the following bill in my possession.

Mr. — to X —,	Dr.
One mongrel goose	$3.00
One do do	3.00
	<hr style="width: 50px; margin: 0 auto;"/> $6.00

3. What is the largest quadruped?

Ans. The mole of Adrian.

4. What is the lightest quadruped?

Ans. The lynx. The lynx weighs less than an ounce.

5. When does a horse stand on six legs?

Ans. When he stands on his fore legs and his two hind legs also.

6. What other insect is the bee afraid of?

Ans. The beetle — (scare-a-bee-us).

7. Is the otter of roses obtained from that animal when fed on other vegetables — cabbages for instance?

Ans. Probably. The musk deer furnishes his perfume when fed on water melons.

8. What instance can you give of the cunning of serpents?

Ans. The simple fact that they secrete their venom where they can find it when wanted.

9. Why do the above questions amuse you more than the answers?

Ans. Because the person who asks the questions is the querist.

As to the other questions about which you ask my opinion, my answer must be brief.

Eighteen hours' study out of twenty-four is too much, I think, for delicate young persons. It does not allow sufficient time for sleep, recreation and meals.

I doubt about the introduction of capital punishment as a part of the ordinary college discipline. It will have a good effect on the survivors, no doubt.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

"The Society must remember that even speaking animals have a right sometimes to plead for protection. Especially should the poets, or those who are commonly spoken of as such, be spared. The ascent of Parnassus is notoriously very difficult, and I venture to recommend to the Society that it cause to be placed at the door of every building occupied by any association whatsoever, but more especially of every benevolent association, — inasmuch as all such feel that they have a right to call on everybody for everything, — a board with the following inscription:

"PLEASE SPARE YOUR POETS WHEN GOING UP HILL."

DR. HOLMES'S CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

THE following list includes all of Dr. Holmes's contributions to the magazine with which he was, perhaps, more closely identified than any other person, although he was never its editor. The poems which were printed as parts of serials and of other prose articles are not listed.

It will be noted that of the first sixty volumes of the Atlantic, the only ones which contain nothing from his pen are volumes xviii, xxvi, xl, and xliii; and that, of the remaining thirteen volumes which appeared during his life (volume lxxiii ended in June, 1894, and Dr. Holmes died in October), he was a contributor to seven. Surely a most exceptional record. The last three contributions were called forth by the deaths of three of his contemporaries, one of whom, at least (the first editor of the Atlantic), was his very dear friend.

The story of the founding of the Atlantic has been told many times, and is sure to be told again, authoritatively, during the celebration of its fiftieth anniversary, in 1907. It is well known that Dr. Holmes christened the magazine.¹ His connection with its founding was told by himself in the paper ("Dr. Holmes's Reminiscence") read by Mr. H. O. Houghton at the Holmes Breakfast in Dec., 1879 (vol. 45, supp.); also by Mr. Scudder in his James Russell Lowell, vol. i, p. 413, and by Mr. Morse in the Life and Letters of O. W. Holmes, vol. i, pp. 204 ff.

BIOGRAPHY AND CRITICISM

BIOGRAPHIES

BALL, JAMES. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes and His Works: Being a Brief Biography and Critical Review. London, Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster Row, 1878.

16mo, pp. 199.

BROWN, EMMA ELIZABETH. Life of Oliver Wendell Holmes. Boston, D. Lothrop & Co. [c. 1884.]

12mo, pp. 302; portrait.

On p. 302 (unnumbered) is a brief and valueless bibliography. The portrait is shocking and the whole book is atrocious from a mechanical standpoint.

JERROLD, WALTER. Oliver Wendell Holmes. London, Swan Sonnenschein & Co.; New York, Macmillan & Co., 1893.

24mo, pp. vi, 144.

"The Iron Gate" is printed on pp. 139-142. On pp. 143-144 is a so-called bibliography, which is simply a list of the volumes of the Riverside Edition, with the contents of each. Throughout the volume Dr. Holmes's father is called Abdiel instead of Abiel.

KENNEDY, WILLIAM SLOANE. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Poet, Littérateur, Scientist. Boston, S. E. Cassino & Co., 1883.

12mo, pp. 356; portrait.

This volume contains a valuable, although incomplete, bibliography of Dr. Holmes's writings: Appendix II, pp. 334-350.

MORSE, JOHN TORREY, JR. Life and Letters of Oliver Wendell Holmes. Boston and New York, Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1896.

2 vols., crown 8vo, pp. viii, 356, and vi, 335; portraits, facsimiles, and cuts. Many letters are included in these volumes; also a number of bits of verse not previously printed; see, in addition to those reprinted in the present compilation, pp. 66, 249, 297, and 353 of vol. i.

SMITH, J. E. A.

The Poet among the Hills. Oliver Wendell Holmes in Berkshire. His Berkshire Poems; some of them now first published, with Historic and Descriptive Incidents concerning the Poems, the Poet, and his Literary Neighbors. His Poetic, Personal and Ancestral Relations to the County. Pittsfield, G. Blatchford, 1895.

12mo, pp. 182; portraits of Holmes and Longfellow, and 5 full-page plates.

This volume contains, inter alia, Dr. Holmes's speech at the "Jubilee Dinner" at Pittsfield, August 23, 1844 (pp. 65-66); his poem on the same occasion (pp. 67-68); his poem, "The Vision" (pp. 104-105); his speech at the Pittsfield Young Ladies' Institute graduating exercises, in 1849 (pp. 110-111); his poem on the same occasion, "A Vision of Life" (pp. 111-113); his "Report of the Committee on the Plowing-Match" at the Cattle-show of the Berkshire Agricultural Society, in 1849, closing with the poem, "The Plowman," written for that occasion (pp. 129-133); the Dedicatory Poem of Pittsfield Cemetery, September 9, 1850 (pp. 140-144); his poem, "The New Eden," read at the anniversary dinner of the Berkshire Horticultural Society, September 13, 1854 (pp. 146-150); his poem, "Camilla," pp. 153-154; other poems, without titles (pp. 155-157); and letters (pp. 47, 90-93, 94). Of the poems mentioned, "A Vision of Life," "Camilla," and those without titles seem never to have been published in any collection of Dr. Holmes's poems. They are reprinted in the first part of this bibliography, under their respective titles; see supra, pp. 14, 19, 25, 87. "The Vision," said by the author to have been written and used as an epilogue to a lecture on Wordsworth in his Lowell Institute Course on the English Poets of the Nineteenth Century, was first printed in the Knickerbocker Gallery, 1855, pp. 23-26, under the title, "A Vision of the Housatonic;" in Songs in Many Keys, 1862, it appears under the title it has since retained, "After a Lecture on Wordsworth."

VOSSION, LOUIS. Un Poète Américain. Oliver Wendell Holmes. Paris, E. Dentu. [1896.]

Pamphlet, 8vo, pp. 26. Signed L. V., and dated at the end, "Philadelphie, 15 Août, 1895."

Such bibliographies of Holmes as have hitherto been published are hardly of a nature to call for listing in a separate category. In addition to those which are noted in the preceding biographies, the following may be mentioned.

ARNOLD, WILLIAM HARRIS. First Editions of Bryant, Emerson, Hawthorne, Holmes, Longfellow, Lowell, Thoreau, Whittier. Collected by William Harris Arnold, 1901.

"JEHU JUNIOR." Men of the Day. No. CCCLXII. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. With burlesque portrait.

Vanity Fair (London), June 19, 1886.

"Born seven and seventy years ago at Cambridge, Massachusetts, he took his degree at the age of twenty from Harvard University, and devoted himself to the study of the Law. But after a few months he found that the Law bored him, and he determined to follow Medicine. He accordingly came to Europe, walked the Paris Hospitals, took various medical degrees, and on his return to his native land, married, became the fashionable Boston doctor, and took to Literature; and, although he has filled for five and thirty years, to the great delight of the students and the amazement of his brother Professors, the Chair of Anatomy at Harvard, it is to Literature that he belongs.

"He has written a great many books. His poems are quite harmless and full of common sense and flippancy. They range from Commemoration Odes to Valentines, and are excellent examples of what poetry ought not to be. His novels are an artistic combination of romance and physiology. They are very fantastic, very imaginative, and read like the conversation of a medical student in love. His essays are a sort of Montaigne for families, and can be highly recommended. He is the last of the laughing philosophers, and the author of the wise maxim, 'Give me the luxuries of life, and I will do without its necessities.' His style scintillates with wit, and, when it is at its best, has all the charm of an exploding cracker. His chief quality is his wonderful versatility. When he writes poetry, he is a professor. When he lectures on anatomy, he is a poet. His novels are the notebooks of a physician; and his philosophy is the kindly observation of a man of the world, the wisdom of one who has dined well.

"Personally, he is a brisk, dapper little man, very brilliant and very bright-eyed; a Puck without malice, an Ariel with a sense of humour. He is very much loved by all who know him, for he has a wholesome dread of people who impart useful information, and thinks that serious conversation is a form of solemn trifling. Attic wit, Yankee humour, a very large supply of human nature, and an absence of any ambition to be president, have made him the most popular man in America. He has been made much of recently in London Society, and has delighted the Duchesses, for, unlike many Society lions, he has the most genial manners and no mane. On the whole, he is a great success. Though a Bostonian, he is not a prig; though a brilliant conversationalist, he can listen; and though seventy-seven years of age, he is still a very young man."

According to Mr. Morse nobody appreciated the very clever caricature, which this text accompanied, more thoroughly than Dr. Holmes himself.

The article concludes thus: "On the whole, here we have, in the words of a French critic, 'un poète d'élite, et qui conte: c'est une nature individuelle très-fine et très-marquée' — one to whom we owe 'des vers gracieux et aimables, vifs et légers, d'une gaieté nuancée de sentiment.' And one that we hope to meet again and again."

SONGS IN MANY KEYS.

Harvard Magazine, Dec., 1861, vol. 8, pp. 151-160.

The writer of this article, presumably an undergraduate, deals very severely with Dr. Holmes's poetical talent. He says, among other things, "The present volume is significantly entitled 'Songs in Many Keys,'—indeed in almost every key but the right one, which it would be hard to find anywhere in the book. . . .

"If a young man has a right to speak critically of an older man, we should say that Mr. Holmes writes too much and writes too hastily, and that the greedy lust after the newspaper reputation of to-day is but too dearly gratified in the utter wreck of all literary hopes for the future."

VERSE, POETRY AND O. W. HOLMES.

Knickerbocker, March, 1863, vol. 61, pp. 189-193.

This is rather a severe review of the Blue and Gold Edition of the poems. The reviewer's text is: "his so-called poems are only verses."

"Your kind womanly words affect me more gratefully perhaps on account of the stinging phrases which have been made for me by a writer in the Nation, whose aim from the first seems to have been to wound if possible, to injure at any rate. I suppose I know who he is, and only wonder how he came to take me for his souffre-douleur."—O. W. H. to Harriet Beecher Stowe, Nov. 17, 1867, quoted in Morse's Life, vol. ii, p. 223.

In this third series of the "Recreations," 10 lines from "The Old Player" are printed, followed by a translation into Latin by S[amuel] L[ee]; the Latin version is then put into Greek by A. S., and that into English by A[ndrew] L[ang]. Mr. Lang's English version is then done into French by W[alter] H[erries] P[ollock]; the French version into Italian by S. G. C. M[iddlemere], and that back into English once more by Mr. Pollock.

Mr. Lang's and Mr. Pollock's English versions are given below, together with the original passage.

DR. HOLMES

Call him not old, whose visionary brain
Holds o'er the past its undivided reign.
For him in vain the envious seasons roll
Who bears eternal summer in his soul.
If yet the minstrel's song, the poet's lay,
Spring with her birds, or children at their play,
Or maiden's smile, or heavenly dream of art,
Stir the few life-drops creeping round his heart,
Turn to the record where his years are told, —
Count his gray hairs, — they cannot make him old.

MR. LANG

Call him not old whose kindly breast
 Retains the glow of seasons dead,
 Within whose heart is summer blest
 Despite the cruel winters fled;
 While yet the minstrel brings delight
 To such a soul with piercing song,
 While laughing girls and all things bright
 Of mortal art can please him long —
 Ah, though the warm heart-drops be rare,
 He yet is young, as he hath been,
 Beneath whose crown of silver hair
 Life and the love of life are green.

MR. POLLOCK

Say not that he is old. His heart
 Is lord of bygone time.
 Winter in vain with envious smart
 Puts rime against his rhyme.
 His soul is summer. While the laugh of birds,
 Or happy girls, or children, makes him young,
 While he can think such thoughts, can write such words,
 Can sing again such songs as he has sung,
 "Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage,"
 Nor whitening hairs do not reveal his age.

ALDRICH, THOMAS BAILEY. The Sailing of the Autocrat.
On Board the S. S. Cephalonia, April 26, 1886.

The Sisters' Tragedy, with Other Poems, 1891.

The last line reads

“His absence will be shadow here.”

After the death of Dr. Holmes the following lines were added to the poem, beneath the words “October 7, 1894,” and have always since been printed with them:—

“‘His absence will be shadow here’—
A deeper shadow than I meant
Has fallen on the waning year
And with my lightsome verses blent.
Another voyage was to be!—
The ship that bears him now from shore,
To plough an unknown, chartless sea,
Shall bring him back to us no more!”

Your health, dear “Autocrat!” All England owns
Your instrument’s the lyre, and not “the Bones.”
Yet hear our wishes—trust us they’re not cold ones!
That though you give up bones, you may make old ones.

ANONYMOUS. Lyrics in a Library, II. Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Punch, April 10, 1886, vol. 89, p. 178.

O Thou, whose wisdom and whose wit,
Whose fancy and whose fable,

Have won two hemispheres to sit
 Around thy breakfast table,
 Our old-world notions never find
 A more indulgent critic,
 Though your sharp scalpel lurks behind
 Your verdicts analytic.

In Elia's hand the essay writ
 With admirable fancy
 A thousand prosy subjects lit
 With potent necromancy.
 So now across the Western seas,
 Atlantic billows tost on,
 There comes, in precious books like these,
 A LAMB "designed of Boston."

I never crossed from this old shore
 Atlantic ocean ridges,
 I never heard the Charles downpour
 Through all the Boston bridges;
 And yet, I seem to know your home,
 The "Hub," the Boston people;
 To see the State House with its dome,
 Hear chimes from Christchurch steeple.

For I have pondered o'er each page,
 Till half by heart I know it,
 Of keen "Professor," kind and sage,
 Of tender-hearted "Poet;"
 Before the "Autocrat" I see
 In vain his foemen flounder,
 Like DON DIEGO PEREZ, he,
 A veritable "pounder."

One idyl to my heart of hearts,
 Professor, you have granted,
 Though scarce susceptible to darts
 By Aphrodite planted.
 In Dreamland Iris still I woo;
 It raises up my dander,
 To think she married even you,
 A happy Marylander!

So trust me, Doctor, writing here,
 Afar 'mid English daisies,
 Howe'er unkempt my rhymes appear,
 That honest are my praises.
 I cry "Peccavi!" if you care
 With my poor verse to quarrel,
 Yet Punch may ask you'll deign to wear
 This leaf of English Laurel.

The Last Leaf! Can it be true,
 We have turned it, and on you,
 Friend of all?
 That the years at last have power?
 That life's foliage and its flower
 Fade and fall?

Was there ever one who took
 From its shelf, by chance, a book,
 Penned by you,
 But was fast your friend for life,
 With one refuge from its strife
 Safe and true?

Even gentle Elia's self
 Might be proud to share that shelf,
 Leaf to leaf,
 With a soul of kindred sort,
 Who could bind strong sense and sport
 In one sheaf.

From that Boston breakfast-table,
 Wit and wisdom, fun and fable,
 Radiated
 Through all English-speaking places.
 When were Science and the Graces
 So well mated?

Of sweet singers the most sane,
 Of keen wits the most humane,
 Wide, yet clear,
 Like the blue, above us bent,
 Giving sense and sentiment
 Each its sphere;

With a manly breadth of soul,
 And a fancy quaint and droll,
 Ripe and mellow;
 With a virile power of "hit,"
 Finished scholar, poet, wit,
 And good fellow!

Sturdy patriot, and yet
 True world's citizen! Regret
 Dims our eyes
 As we turn each well-thumbed leaf;
 Yet a glory 'midst our grief
 Will arise.

Years your spirit could not tame,
 And they will not dim your fame;
 England joys
 In your songs, all strength and ease,
 And the "dreams" you "wrote to please
 Gray-haired boys."

And of such were you not one?
 Age chilled not your fire of fun.
 Heart alive
 Makes a boy of a gray bard,
 Though his years be, "by the card,"
 Eighty-five!

Eolopesis: American Rejected Addresses, now first published from the original manuscripts, 1855.

The poems in this volume, which was published anonymously, are parodies, not uniformly successful, of the work of various contemporary poets. The relations between the author and Dr.

Holmes were exceedingly intimate. The first two and last three of the thirty-nine stanzas of "To a Tadpole" are here reproduced.

Thou nimble, polymorphous thing,
 With limbs within thee bound,
 Depending on thy caudal fin
 To scull thy body round,

I fain thy character would read,
 From signs that thus prevail,
 And swear thou hast a waggish head
 On such a waggish tail.

 And though my hairs are getting thin
 And thy short tail is shorter,
 We 'll struggle yet a while to keep
 Our heads above the water.

And we will sing a brave duet
 On life's eventful dream,
 And I will make the poetry
 And thou shalt make the theme.

And when this planet shall explode,
 And send us through the air,
 They 'll find our bones in future rocks,
 And wonder what they were.

CLARKE, JAMES FREEMAN.

Life and Letters of Oliver Wendell Holmes (Morse), 1896, vol. ii, pp. 104-105.

These stanzas were addressed to Dr. Holmes on the eve of his departure for Europe in April, 1886, and were acknowledged by him in a note (printed by Mr. Morse) in which he asks Mr. Clarke to "print these dear lines as my envoi."

May all good thoughts go with thee from this shore,
 All kindly greetings meet thee on the other;
 Bring all they can they will not give thee more
 Than we send with thee, Poet, Friend, and Brother.

While thou art absent we will say "How often
The gloom from off our hearts his smile has lifted;
How well he knew our harder mood to soften,
With gleams of sunlight where the storm clouds drifted!

"And how, when that o'erwhelming weight of duty
Pressed upon Lincoln's weary hand and brain,
Our Holmes's song of tenderness and beauty
Gave that worn heart a moment's rest again!

"Go, then, dear friend, by all good hopes attended;
To mother-England go, our carrier-dove,
Saying that this great race, from hers descended,
Sends in its Holmes an Easter-gift of love."

Ariel and Caliban, with Other Poems, 1887, p. 169.

A fountain in our green New England hills
Sent forth a brook, whose music as I stood
To listen, laughed and sang through field and wood,
With mingled melodies of joyous rills.
Now, following where they led, a river fills
Its channels with a wide, calm, shining flood,
Still murmuring on its banks, with changeful mood.
So, Poet, sound thy stops of various quills,
Where waves of song, wit, wisdom, charm our ears
As in thy youth, and thoughts and smiles by turns
Are ours, grave, gay, or tender. Time forgets
To freeze thy deepening stream. The stealthy years
But bribe the Muse to bring thee amulets
That guard the soul whose fire of youth still burns.

EVERETT, WILLIAM.

Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society, Oct. 11, 1894, 2d series, vol. 9, pp. 161-162.

One poet more, transferred to Homer's train;
 One healer more, removed to Galen's side;
 One more gold link upon our heroes' chain, —
 One friend the less, who never should have died.

Friend, patriot, healer, poet, wit, and sage, —
 How hard, how strange, to count him with the past!
 We heard his gentle jests on time and age,
 Nor dreamed such foes could win the fight at last.

Who for that grave may twine a fitting crown,
 Where memory's pansy blends with glory's bay?
 Whose pen like his, for ever now laid down,
 Tender to feel, and lively to portray?

Yet, while from yonder tower he loved so long
 Still chime the echoes of his funeral psalm,
 Let not the master lack one modest song,
 Till bolder hands shall plant some statelier palm.

No single flower that garland can supply,
 Such vast and varied springs his genius held,
 Whence through a score of channels, never dry,
 Fresh, deep, and pure, their shining currents welled.

Sprung from New England's chiefs and saints of yore,
 His heart was rooted to her soil alone,
 Nor siren charms from lands the ocean o'er
 E'er shook his proud allegiance to his own.

Born where our ancient college throws her shade,
 He served, he loved her, student to the last;
 While o'er her sons in festive ranks arrayed
 His genial Muse unfailing fragrance cast.

In love he practised, and in patience taught,
 The sacred art that battles with disease;
 Nor stained, by one disloyal act or thought,
 The holy symbol of Hippocrates.

His lyre through every mood of music rang,
 The banquet's carol, and the battle's hymn;
 Now warbling like a child at play, it sang,
 Now soared to echoes of the seraphim.

Lustrous and leaping, like the Boreal dawn,
 His wit o'er every theme ranged unconfined;
 Flashed like a rapier's point in combat drawn,
 But drew no blood, and left no sore behind.

Wide as our country, wide as England's tongue,
 Flew his bright name, itself a household word;
 How frankly proud to all those wreaths he clung,
 How kindly caught each breath of praise he heard!

Dear were those plaudit notes; but dearer far
 One treasure, prized o'er all that high renown,
 Friendship's gemmed circlet, every friend a star,
 Outshining victor's helm or empire's crown.

So lived, so sang, so talked he; youth's gay beam,
 Manhood's hot splendor, age's milder glow,
 Each in its turn might fairest radiance seem,
 As year by year we watched them shine and go.

Threescore and ten with gentle footstep came,
 Nor labor pressed, nor sorrow, at fourscore;
 One lustre more; then rang his summoned name
 In softest music through Elysium's door.

His bright task wrought, his meed of glory won,
 His country honored, and his kind improved:
 Room there is none for tears; yet tears will run,
 For bard, for master, and for friend removed.

God bless the day! But he hath blest
 (And all the grateful world doth know it),
 That happy day, when, in the West,
 Was born the wise and witty poet —

The poet who first to Science sought,
 And to the merry muses after;
 Who learned what in no school is taught —
 The secret of men's tears and laughter.

Be it, O Time, a weary while,
 Ere, in the land where spirits meet us,
 A shade shall say (with Shakespeare's smile),
 "There comes the Autocrat to greet us."

One day, from groves of pine and palm,
 The poets of the sky and cover
 Had come to greet with song and psalm
 The whip-poor-will, — their woodland lover.
 All sang their best, but one clear note
 That fairly voiced their admiration
 Was his — who only sang by rote —
 The mock-bird's modest imitation.

So we, who 'd praise the bard who most
 Is poet of each high occasion,
 Who 'd laud our laureate, and toast
 The blithe Toast-Master of the Nation, —

To celebrate his fête to-day,
 In vain each bard his praise rehearses.
 The best that we can sing or say
 Is but an echo of his verses.

RECORD OF SALES AT AUCTION

THE following records are taken, necessarily, from the publication called Book-Prices Current, which Mr. Luther S. Livingston has compiled for the past twelve or thirteen years. The volumes included in the record are arranged as in the second division of the bibliography—chronologically. At the end will be found some few memoranda of sales of manuscripts, taken from the same source, and arranged according to the dates of sale. Sales of single works included in the first section of the bibliography are noted in connection with those works. The compiler is much indebted to Mr. Livingston for supplying him with notes of sales for the year 1905-06, before the volume of Book-Prices Current for that year had appeared. The word "sale" after a name indicates that the name is that of the owner of the volume sold; names standing alone are those of the auctioneers, and indicate that the owner's name was not disclosed.

MANUSCRIPTS

DR. HOLMES said more than once that his autographs were likely to be so common that they would have little value. The following list seems to prove that he was mistaken; but it should be said that, for lack of space, the compiler has been compelled to omit the record of sales of many letters at prices ranging from $1.00 to $3.00. They were, in most cases, letters which derived no added value from their subjects or from the eminence of the persons to whom they were addressed. Such notes as the compiler has been able to collect concerning the original mss. of any of Dr. Holmes's works will be found in connection with such works respectively.

APPENDIX

THE following pages contain such notes and memoranda as came to the compiler's knowledge only when it was too late to place them where they belong. In one or two instances, place has been made for an important item in the body of the book, by relegating one of less importance to the Appendix.

The "Address for the Opening of the Fifth Avenue Theatre" was spoken by Miss Fanny Morant, down to the passage beginning

"Behold the offspring of the Thespian Cart;" the remainder by Mr. Frank Hardenberg. It has been printed twice in the publications of the Dunlap Society, viz: —

No. III. Opening Addresses, Laurence Hutton, editor, 1887, pp. 128-133.

No. XII. Occasional Addresses, 1773-1890, L. Hutton and W. Carey, editors, 1890, pp. 102-107.

Boston Common

In the "Boston Common" leaflet, the poem is printed on the inside pages, in facsimile of Dr. Holmes's original ms., signed by him, and dated Nov. 14, 1859. There is a notice of copyright by F. H. Underwood, 1859.

"'How Came I here?' The Portrait thus might speak"

The following lines were printed in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, May 5, 1892, vol. 126, pp. 451-452. They were read by Dr. Holmes in reply to the poem with which Dr. S. Weir Mitchell accompanied the presentation of Mrs. Whitman's portrait of Holmes to the Philadelphia College of Physicians.

"How came I here?" The portrait thus might speak,
 The crimson mantling in its canvas cheek;
 "Here in this concourse of the grave and wise
 Who look upon me with inquiring eyes,
 As on some homeless wanderer, caught astray?
 An error loci, Boerhaave would say.
 Is this great hive of industry my home?
 Where is the Common? Where my gilded dome?
 Where the Old South? The frog pond? Most of all,
 My sacred temple, Freedom's Faneuil Hall?"

No answer comes; no trick of human art
 Can force those fixed, unmoving lips apart.
 He whom the picture shadows must explain
 This lawless inroad on a strange domain.
 Were it my votive offering, meant to show
 My grateful sense of all the debts I owe
 To your fair city, its unlooked-for face
 Might find no caviller to dispute its place.
 Yet though the friendly offering is not mine
 It bears my benediction to the shrine
 Where, if it meets a welcome, longer yet
 Will stretch the column which displays my debt.

Friends of my earlier manhood, ever dear,
 Whose lives, whose labors all were centred here,
 How bright each figure stands before me now
 With eyes undimmed and fair unwrinkled brow,
 As when, with life before us yet untried,
 We walked the "Latin Quarter" side by side,
 Through halls of death, through palaces of pain
 That cast their shadows on the turbid Seine.

When o'er our coffee, at the old "Procope,"
 Smiling, we cast each other's horoscope,
 Daring the future's dubious path to scan,
Gerhard, your Gerhard was the coming man.

Strong-brained, strong-willed, inquiring, patient, wise,
 He looked on truth through achromatic eyes:
 Sure to succeed, for Nature, like a maid,
 Loves best the lovers who are not afraid,
 Lends them her hand to lead them where they please,
 And trusts them boldly with her master-keys.
 Behold, unfading on the rolls of fame
Typhus and Typhoid stamped with Gerhard's name.

Look on the stately form at Gerhard's side.
 He, too, shall live to be his city's pride.
 Tall, manly, quiet, grave, but not austere,
 Not slow of wit, a little dull of ear,
 Him we predestined to the place he won, —
Norris, the Quaker City's noble son.
 Armed with the skill that science renders sure,
 His look, his touch, were half his patient's cure;
 What need his merits I should further tell?
 His record stands; your pages know it well.

Still wandering, lonely, mid the funeral urns,
 To one loved name my saddening thought returns,
 Less to the many known, but to the few,
 A precious memory, — Stewardson, to you.
 Through many a league we two together fared,
 The traveller's comforts and discomforts shared.
 When hills and valleys parted distant towns,
 Long ere the railway smoothed their ups and downs.
 In all the trials wearing days could bring
 No fretful utterance ever left its sting:
 Pity it was that, chased by pallid fears,
 He walked in shadow through his morning years,
 Talked of his early doom, and then, and then
 Lived on, and on, past three score years and ten.
 Too shy, perhaps too timid, for success,
 He fought life's battle bravely not the less.
 Others left prouder memories, none more dear;
 For those a sigh, for Stewardson a tear!

Well, years rolled on, we went our several ways
 Not unrewarded with our meed of praise;
 Time took the weight and measure of our brains

Set us our tasks and paid us for our pains.
 At length (our side-locks fast were turning gray)
 He brought our art that all-important day
 When here our Æsculapian Congress met
 (Its second gathering, you will not forget).
 I with the crowd your far-famed city sought,
 Pleased to behold the schools where Rush had taught,
 Where Wister labored and where Homer led
 His thirsting flock to Surgery's fountain-head.

What kindly welcome with the rest I shared;
 A little pleased — perhaps a little scared,
 When Chapman hugged me in his huge embrace
 With praise that lit a bonfire in my face —
 When Francis, guest at Mitchell's generous board,
 My humble name across the table roared,
 Coupled with one which figures on the roll
 Of England's poets — bless his worthy soul!
Garth — good Sir Samuel, whose poetic spark
 Scarce seen by day, still glimmers in the dark.
 These flitting phantoms of the past survive,
 While grateful Memory keeps her fires alive.
 Friends of the days that fear and anguish knew
 My heart records a deeper debt to you.

To this kind refuge hallowed evermore,
 Her shattered sufferers fond affection bore.
 Full many a father tracked his bleeding son
 Fresh from the murderous conflict, lost or won,
 Strayed through some quiet ward, and looking round,
 In pity's sheltering arms the lost was found.

Enough! Enough! these eyes will overflow
 In sweet remembrance of the debt I owe —
 A debt 't would bankrupt gratitude to pay —
 But Heaven perhaps will hear me when I pray:
 Peace to your borders! Long may Science reign
 Supreme, unchallenged o'er her old domain!
 While sons as worthy as their sires of old
 Her borrowed sceptre still unbroken hold,
 Till a new RUSH arise who dares to think —
 An unborn LEIDY finds the missing link.

Poem at the Dedication of the Halleck Monument

The pamphlet of 1869 is rare. It was used as copy for a portion of a later pamphlet, printed in 1877, at the time of the dedication of a memorial to Halleck in Central Park, N. Y.

*A Rhymed Riddle

Fair Words (published in aid of the St. Luke's Home for Convalescents, Florence Street, Boston, at Horticultural Hall, Boston, Feb. 14, 1876), p. 12 (4to, double column).

"I'm going to blank," with failing breath,
 The fallen gladiator said;
 Unconquered, he "consents to death;"
 One gasp — the hero soul has fled.
 "I'm going to blank," the school-boy cried;
 Two sugared sweets his hands display, —
 Like snow-flakes in the ocean-tide
 They vanish, melted both away.
 Tell with one verb, or I'll tell you,
 What each was just about to do.

On the copy in the Boston Athenæum is pasted a tiny slip from the Daily Advertiser, bearing these lines:—

"Succumb," the gladiator groans,
 And breathes away his life with moans;
 "Suck 'em," the schoolboy cries in glee —
 You need n't, Doctor Holmes, tell me. — SUCKER.

*Sceptres and thrones the morning realms have tried

The Washington Centenary, celebrated in New York, April 29, 30–May 1, 1889. (Library of Tribune Extras, vol. i, no. 5, May, 1889.)

In the account of the banquet, the thirteenth toast — The President of the United States — to which President Harrison responded, has these lines printed below, motto-wise. They were presumably written for the occasion, but have not been reprinted.

Sceptres and thrones the morning realms have tried;
 Earth for the people kept her sunset side.
 Arts, manners, creeds the teeming Orient gave;
 Freedom, the gift that freights the reflux wave,
 Pays with one priceless pearl the guerdon due,
 And leaves the Old World debtor to the New.

Long as the watch-towers of our crownless Queen
 Front the broad oceans that she sits between,
 May her proud sons their plighted faith maintain,
 And guard unbroken Union's lengthening chain, —
 Union, our peaceful sovereign, she alone
 Can make or keep the western world our own!

Song of Welcome

In the pamphlet described, Dr. Holmes's name is not mentioned as the author of the poem. His authorship was first publicly announced in the Annual Report of the Boston School Committee for 1864, p. 202, where the poem is reprinted.

The ms. of this address is owned by Mr. S. H. Wakeiman.

The Poem for the Dedication of Pittsfield Cemetery was printed with the Address delivered by Rev. Henry Neill on the same occasion. The publication containing them is found in the following forms.

1. An Address by Rev. Henry Neill, and A Poem by Oliver Wendell Holmes: Delivered at the Dedication of the Pittsfield (Rural) Cemetery, September 9th, 1850, with other matter, and a Map of the Grounds. By the Committee of Publication. Pittsfield, Mass.: Axtel, Bull and Marsh. . . . Printers. 1850.

In this form the historical summary and proceedings fill pp. 1-22, followed by "Memorials for the Dead" (the Address and Poem), on pp. 23-60; then come 4 pages of miscellaneous verse and a plan of the cemetery. A lithographed plan precedes title.

2. The title-page is the same as in number one, except that the words "with other matter, and a Map of the Grounds" are omitted. The contents consist of the Address and Poem only, on pp. 1-35, the first 3 pages being unnumbered.

Mr. P. K. Foley, to whom I am indebted for the description of number two, advises me that he has a copy (a "presentation copy" from Mr. Neill), handsomely bound, and containing only the Address and Poem, with the pagination of number one, the preliminary matter and the pages beyond 60 having been removed. This would, as Mr. Foley suggests, seem to prove that the longer pamphlet was issued before the other, as Mr. Neill would naturally have chosen for presentation an unmutated copy if there had been such an one in existence.

LECTURE — 1863. Private Copy. Boston, 1863.

There is no indication of the occasion on which, or of the place where, this lecture was delivered. It is historical in its nature, and opens thus:—

"A great change has taken place within the last two or three years, in the relations of our people and nation to the dynasties of the old world, especially to the predominant power of England. The change is the last of four stages." These stages are — First, Religious Independence; Second, Political Independence; Third, Movement towards Industrial Independence; Fourth, Rapid Growth of Intellectual Independence.

For his knowledge of this and the following item the compiler is indebted to Mrs. J. C. Chamberlain of New York. The copy in the collection of the late Mr. Chamberlain (bound in half-morocco, original wrappers bound in) has on the first page, in Dr. Holmes's hand: "One of six Copies printed." It brought $15.50 at the sale of the library of George Livermore, Esq., in 1894, and was resold by the purchaser, Mr. Chubbuck, at the French-Chubbuck sale in 1904, for $112.00.

NEW ENGLAND'S MASTER-KEY. Boston, 1864.

4to, blank paper covers; 6 copies printed.

Again, there is no indication of the place of delivery of the lecture; but it has at the end a date, Nov. 8, 1864. The theme is the advantage of specialization in making a success of life, and "New England's Master-Key" is defined as the specialization of intellectual labor. After citing examples of persons who devoted their lives to doing one thing thoroughly, — Prescott, Motley, Allibone, Worcester, Webster, Audubon, etc., — Dr. Holmes closes thus: "Nothing has been done in New England that may not be done elsewhere. Take our key, then, brothers and sisters of Kansas, of Florida, of Arizona, and open the gates of progress for yourselves. . . . But this mighty nation can never forget its own peculiar task. There is one question in religion; there is one great question in government. The old world has failed to answer either; the new world must try to answer both!"

The late Mr. Chamberlain's copy (half morocco, original covers bound in) bears this inscription on the first page: "One of six copies printed. O. W. Holmes." It brought $16.00 at the Livermore sale, and $110.00 at the French-Chubbuck sale.

A MORTAL ANTIPATHY

In the opening paper of The New Portfolio, Dr. Holmes said, referring to the founding of the Atlantic: "I . . . wondered somewhat when Mr. Lowell urged me with such earnestness to become a contributor," etc. Whereupon Lowell wrote from London: "The first number of your New Portfolio whets my appetite. Let me make one historical correction. When I accepted the editorship of the Atlantic, I made it a condition precedent that you were the first contributor to be engaged." As a consequence of this "historical correction," when The New Portfolio was issued in book form, as A Mortal Antipathy, the passage quoted was so changed as to read: "I wondered somewhat when Mr. Lowell insisted upon my becoming a contributor." See Scudder's James Russell Lowell, vol. i, p. 413.

CHARLES D. MEIGS, M. D.

The passage on page 113 of Dr. Meigs's book reads thus: —

"Or shall we rather disregard the jejune and fizenless dreamings of sophomore writers, who thunder forth denunciations, and would mark, if they might, with a black and ineffaceable spot, the hard won reputation of every physician, who, in the Providence of God, is called upon to contend with the rage of one of the most destructive of epidemics, and pay an ungrateful service, indispensable to the victims it is allowed to attack, and with the propagation of which they have no more to do than with the propagation of cholera from Jessore to San Francisco, and from Mauritius to St. Petersburg."

See also Copland's Medical Dictionary, 1845, pp. 558-560; and the Fifth Annual Report of the Registrar General of Births, Deaths, and Marriages in England, 1843, pp. 187-189.

In the Memoirs of "Malakoff," Extracts from the Correspondence and Papers of the late William Edward Johnston, edited by R. M. Johnston (London, Hutchinson & Co., 1907), there is printed a poem called "A Battle-Hymn in Honour of Sir John Heenan," which was printed, soon after the famous Heenan-Sayers prize-fight in 1860, in the New York Times, over the initial "W." This poem is attributed by Mr. Johnston to Dr. Holmes; but the compiler is informed by the editor of the Times that it was written by Mr. Charles Henry Webb, author of Vagrom Verse, etc.
