This is one of a series of volumes presenting the findings of the 1933 Census of American Business. The statistics were collected in 1934 by a field canvass of wholesale establishments in every State, city, and county in the United States, with funds provided by the Federal Civil Works Administration. They cover the operations of wholesale establishments during the year 1933.

The volumes were prepared under the supervision of Fred A. Gosnell, Chief Statistician for the Census of American Business, by Theodore N. Beckman, in Charge of Wholesale Distribution, assisted by John Albright, Administrative Assistant.

WHOLESALE DISTRIBUTION: 1933

In this report are presented statistics on wholesale trade for the year 1933. Data are shown both by type of establishment and by kind of business so as to set forth the essential characteristics of the wholesale business of the area covered by this volume. For a description of the Wholesale Census, for definitions, explanations of terms, classifications, and United States Summary tables, and for an analysis of wholesale trade, see Volume I.

For census purposes a wholesale establishment is a place of business, the primary function of which is to sell or distribute goods on a wholesale basis. It may be in the form of a store, a wholesale warehouse, a sales or brokerage office, or part of an office as when the office is shared with other similar organizations. Sales at wholesale may be made to retailers, to institutions, to industrial consumers or to other wholesale organizations. No merchandising establishment has been classified as "wholesale" unless fifty percent or more of its sales were made in a wholesale manner or on a wholesale basis.

The Wholesale Census was taken on the basis of establishments rather than companies or firms in order to facilitate the canvass and to make it possible to present data by geographic areas. A separate report was required for each establishment regardless of whether or not it was owned or operated as a part of a large business organization. Wholesale peddlers and others who sell goods at wholesale but who maintain no regularly established places of business were not included in this census.

WHOLESALE TRADE, BY TYPE OF ORGANIZATION.--In presenting the data for the States and for the United States as a whole, wholesale establishments have been divided into six groups, some of which have been further subdivided, according to the type of establishment or the nature of the functions performed.

The first of the six functional type groups for which data are shown is called "wholesalers proper" and consists of more or less regular wholesalers in domestic and foreign trade who take title to the goods they buy and sell and are largely independent in ownership. The second division comprises "manufacturers' sales branches," consisting of wholesale outlets owned by manufacturers largely for the disposal of their own goods. The third type, "bulk tank stations," consists of establishments performing wholesale functions in the distribution of gasoline, oil and other petroleum products. While primarily distributing their products to retail stations, they also sell goods at wholesale to tank wagons and to industrial users. The fourth type, "chain store warehouses," are distribution stations maintained by retail chains to supply their stores with merchandise. They carry on wholesale operations in addition to warehousing in that they break bulk, deliver and bill merchandise, and in some cases exercise supervision over a chain of stores. Wholesale commissaries, prepared-food depots which serve their own restaurants, and distribution centers for bakery chains are also included in this group.

The fifth division is called "assemblers and country buyers." Their principal operation is the purchase and assembly of farm products such as grain, cotton, tobacco and other forms of farm produce. This group also includes cooperative marketing associations; packers and shippers; cream stations; and independent, line, and cooperative elevators as differentiated from terminal elevators. The sixth and last group is called "agents and brokers," and includes auction companies, brokers, commission merchants, export and import agents, manufacturers' agents, selling agents, resident buyers, etc.

For each of the six type groups of wholesale establishments and for some of the subdivisions thereof data are shown in Table 1 on the number of establishments, both for 1933 and 1929; net sales, for 1933 and 1929; total expenses, expressed both in amounts and as a percent of net sales; the average number of full-time employees, pay roll for all employees and for part-time employees; and stocks on hand at the end of the year. This information is presented for each of the States and for each of the cities of 100,000 population and over.

WHOLESALE TRADE, BY KIND OF BUSINESS.—In addition to being classified according to functional type, each establishment was also classified by kind of business, on the basis of the chief line or lines of merchandise in which it dealt. Following this basis of classification, wholesale establishments were divided into twenty-five major kind-of-business groups, which were further subdivided into 166 detailed kind of business classifications according to the degree of merchandise specialization. A complete explanation of this method of classification is given in Volume I.

Important as it is to have information for each kind of business or line of trade in detail, it is even more significant to have such data presented separately for each type of wholesaling organization. In that manner the accomplishments of a wholesaler in a given line of business may be compared with the accomplishments of all wholesalers operating therein, while the achievements of a manufacturer's sales branch can be compared with those of manufacturers' sales branches in the same line of trade. Such comparisons are of special interest to individual business enterprises and to the student of marketing.

Basic statistics on wholesale trade for types of establishments by kind of business are shown in two tables. Table 2A presents for each State and for a limited number of selected cities, the number of wholesale establishments by kind of business, in detail, for each of nineteen functional types of wholesale organizations. This table may be regarded as a supplement to Table 2B which shows for each of the States and for cities of 5,000 population and over, the number of establishments; net sales; total expenses, expressed in amounts and as a percent of net sales; the average number of full-time employees; pay roll, total and part-time; and stocks on hand. This information is shown for as many kinds of business, under each type, as possible without disclosing data for individual establishments. More complete information on the number of establishments by type and kind of business in detail is to be found in table 2A, described above.

SOURCES OF RECEIPTS.—In addition to dealing in merchandise, many wholesale establishments derive a certain amount of income from the sale of services and from other sources. Table 3 has been devised in order to measure quantitatively the volume of business secured through the sale of goods and that obtained from other sources. This table is presented for States only, by kind-of-business groups, and shows the number of establishments in a given group; total net sales, a term used throughout as interchangeable with receipts; total expenses, expressed in amounts and as a percent of sales; and receipts. The last item is broken down according to sources into sales of merchandise; receipts from parking, storage, cleaning, etc.; receipts from space rental; and receipts from other sources.

CREDIT BUSINESS OF WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS.—The extent to which wholesale establishments engaged in selling on a credit basis is shown in Table 4. This information is presented for States only, by kind-of-business groups, separately for wholesalers proper and for all other types combined. It indicates the degree to which wholesale establishments perform the functions of financing business by extending credit to retailers, industrial consumers, and to other wholesale organizations to which they sell. Since some of the wholesale establishments did not operate on a credit basis and others failed to report on this item, data related to credit sales are presented in Table 4 only for those establishments for which the credit information was available. It shows the number of establishments reporting credit and the percent which that number constituted of the total for the kind of business under consideration. The same procedure is followed in connection with net sales.

In the following columns credit sales are given in amounts and as a percent of sales of establishments reporting credit sales and as a percent of sales of all establishments in a given group. The table also shows total expenses incurred by establishments operating on a credit basis. These expenses are given in amounts and as a percent of sales so that comparison may be made between the costs of doing business of establishments selling on credit with the costs incurred by those establishments which presumably do not operate on a credit basis, if it can be assumed that all or most of the establishments not reporting credit sales sold for cash.

DISTRIBUTION OF SALES.—A common conception is that wholesalers sell only to retailers and that wholesalers are the only type of organization operating in the wholesale field. That this is far from the truth is indicated by the figures shown in Table 5. The statistics therein are presented for States only, by 25 kinds of business, separately for wholesalers proper and for all other types combined. It shows that wholesale establishments sell to retailers, to industrial consumers, to ultimate or home consumers, and to other wholesale organizations. Naturally, there is considerable variation in the extent to which different types of wholesale establishments make use of these outlets and the degree to which they are used in the different kinds of business.

Here, too, not all of the establishments reported the distribution of their sales, partly because of inadequate records at the time the census was taken. The table shows for each type and kind-of-business group the number, net sales, and total expenses of all establishments, and then presents statistics for those establishments that reported a distribution of sales by outlets. For these establishments it shows the number and the percent which such number constitutes of the total for the group under consideration. Similar treatment is given to the net sales of establishments which reported their sales by type of customers. This is followed by total expenses for such establishments, expressed both in amounts and as a percent of sales. Total sales are then distributed into the following groups: sales to retailers (for resale); sales to home consumers (at retail); sales to industrial users, including institutions; and sales to other wholesale organizations. From these data it should be possible, among other things, to determine the amount of duplication in the total wholesale sales figures, due to the fact that some wholesale establishments sell to other wholesale organizations.

EMPLOYMENT IN WHOLESALE TRADE.—The significance of wholesale trade as a source of employment is indicated in Table 6. In this table the number of proprietors and firm members and the number of paid employees, divided into male and female and into full-time and part-time, are shown for each of the 25 major kind-of-business groups. The estimate by sex is based on the sex distribution reported for the total number of employees as of December 30, 1933; the percent of women shown separately relates to the same date. The table also presents the number of full-time and part-time employees as of the 15th of each month for each kind-of-business group, and a monthly index of employment for wholesale trade as a whole. This information is presented for each of the States and for cities of 500,000 population and over.

Employment is the only item in the wholesale trade statistics which is presented on a monthly basis. It affords indirect indication of the extent of seasonal change in wholesale activity, quite marked in certain lines of trade. A comparison of monthly figures for 1933 with quarterly data for 1929 suggests the extent of non-seasonal improvement in employment conditions in the course of 1933. Part-time employment in wholesale trade, information on which was gathered for the first time for 1933, appears to be much less important in this field than in retail trade; it attains significant proportions in only a few kinds of business.

WHOLESALE TRADE BY SIZE OF BUSINESS UNIT.—Table 7 presents the number of establishments, the annual average number of full-time employees, and the operating expense ratio of wholesale merchants and of manufacturers' sales branches with stocks*, by size-of-establishment groups, based upon net sales. Establishments have been classified into 7 size groups, as follows:

| Group number | Net sales              |
|--------------|------------------------|
| I.....       | Under $10,000         |
| II.....      | $10,000 to $49,999   |
| III.....     | $50,000 to $99,999   |
| IV.....      | $100,000 to $199,999 |
| V.....       | $200,000 to $499,999 |
| VI.....      | $500,000 to $999,999 |
| VII.....     | $1,000,000 and over   |

*For definition of wholesale merchants and manufacturers' sales branches with stocks, see Volume I.

This information is given by States for each of the 25 kinds of business. The table permits a comparison by lines of trade of wholesale merchants (including importers) with manufacturers' sales branches with stocks, two types of wholesale operations which, for the most part, compete in the same market, warehouse goods and make deliveries from stocks. Comparison is also possible of small and large-sized establishments in a given trade as to operating costs. It shows to what extent each size group furnishes employment in wholesale trade. It further indicates the differences existing between trade groups and between wholesale merchants and manufacturers' sales branches with stocks as to average size of establishment, as to distribution of establishments by size, and as to operating costs.

A FEW SUGGESTED USES OF THE DATA IN THESE REPORTS.--The statistics presented in these reports on wholesale trade should prove of considerable value to individual business men, public authorities and independent students. The breakdown by type of operation, line of trade, and geographic areas should enable the wholesaler to compare his accomplishments with those of others operating on a similar basis in the same market area. For the manufacturer planning a sales campaign the figures should make possible an allocation of sales quotas and territories to salesmen. The formulation of policies by public authorities should be facilitated by information on the amount and nature of business done in each locality, the employment it furnishes, and the income it distributes. The quantitative description of the marketing wholesale structure and of the changes in it in the course of the memorable years, 1930 - 1933, found in the Census volume, should serve as basic material to the analytical student of American economic life.

1/ The increase in the number of bulk tank stations was due primarily to differences in method of reporting some large chain organizations.

2/ Cream stations were not included for the most part in 1929 data.

3/ These are revised figures for 1929. The figures previously issued include a number of grain elevators that were erroneously reported and classified in the Wholesale Census. Includes 5 cooperative elevators with sales amounting to $251,000.

This is one of a series of special reports presenting the findings of the 1933 Wholesale Census. The statistics were collected in 1934 by a field canvass of wholesale establishments in every State, city, and county in the United States, with funds provided by the Federal Civil Works Administration. They cover the operations of these establishments during the year 1933.

This report was prepared under the supervision of Fred A. Gosnell, Chief Statistician for the Census of American Business, by Theodore N. Beckman, in Charge of Wholesale Distribution. Considerable assistance in the preparation of the report was rendered by John Albright, Administrative Assistant of the Wholesale Division.

INTRODUCTION

This special report of the Wholesale Census, which is a part of the Census of American Business, presents an analysis of disappearances and accessions of wholesale establishments during the four-year period of 1930 to 1933, inclusive. It is a study of wholesale places of business which have been eliminated from the wholesale marketing structure and those which were added to it during the period under consideration. Special emphasis has been given to the new establishments which started operations subsequent to 1929, indicating their major characteristics as compared with those of the older establishments.

WHAT IS A WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENT?—For census purposes a wholesale establishment is a place of business, the primary function of which is to sell or distribute goods on a wholesale basis. It may be in the form of a store which does not generally sell to the public, a distributing warehouse, a brokerage or sales office, or part of an office as when the office is shared with other similar organizations. Sales at wholesale may be made to retailers, to institutions, to industrial consumers, or to other wholesale organizations. No merchandising establishment has been classified as "wholesale" unless fifty percent or more of its sales were made in a wholesale manner or on a wholesale basis; nor does the wholesale census include the sales made by manufacturers directly from their plants, without the use of a separate sales branch.

The Wholesale Census was taken on the basis of establishments rather than companies or firms in order to facilitate the canvass and to make it possible to present data by geographic areas. A separate report was required for each establishment regardless of whether or not it was owned or operated as part of a larger business organization. Wholesale peddlers and others who sell goods at wholesale but who maintain no regularly established places of business were not included in this census.

BASIS FOR THIS ANALYSIS.—Among the questions provided on the schedule which was used in collecting the data for the Wholesale Census was the inquiry: "Was this establishment in operation in 1929? (Yes or No)....." The schedule also required that the official of the company signing the report certify to the accuracy of the information and indicate whether the report covered the entire year 1933 or a specified part thereof during which the establishment was in operation.

Only those establishments are included in the main body of analysis in this study which reported that they were not in operation in 1929. If the person furnishing the information indicated that the establishment was not in operation in 1929 and the certificate part of the schedule showed that the information covered the full year of 1933, the establishment was classified as one which started operations subsequent to 1929 but prior to 1933. Establishments which started operations some time during the year 1933 were classified on the basis of the information contained in the certificate. If it was indicated in the certificate that the establishment was in existence only part of the year, the information was checked with the monthly employment data shown under Inquiry 4 (c) to make sure that the two items coincided. All wholesale establishments which started operations subsequent to 1929, including those which began business during 1933, are hereinafter referred to as new establishments or new concerns. It should be noted, however, that this report includes only those establishments which were operating at the close of 1933. No data are available for concerns which came into existence subsequent to 1929 but which ceased operations prior to January 1, 1934.

NEW ESTABLISHMENT DEFINED.—As a basis for determining the scope of this analysis it became necessary to ascertain the exact meaning attributed to the question: "Was this establishment in operation in 1929?" Several tests were applied. One consisted in checking the reply to the above question against the information contained in the certificate part of the schedule. Obviously, if the report covered but part of the year 1933, the establishment, barring exceptional circumstances, could not have been in operation in 1929. In the second place, a number of schedules submitted by firms reporting not to have been in existence in 1929 were checked against schedules submitted for the 1929 census, to make sure that no reports for such establishments were previously obtained.

Finally, a test was made for the city of Columbus, Ohio, selected for reasons of convenience and because of a more intimate knowledge on the part of the author of this report concerning the wholesale business of the city. Of the 82 wholesale establishments which reported in the negative to the question: "Was this establishment in operation in 1929?", it was found that 70 were not in existence in the city of Columbus in 1929. Of the remaining 12 establishments, 10 had changes in name connected with the incorporation of partnerships or single proprietorships or with the reorganization of corporations. Of these 10 establishments, 3 also changed location within the city and 1 changed even the line of merchandise handled. Only 2 of the 82 establishments involved merely a change in location within the city and were, therefore, erroneously reported as new. Thus, in Columbus, Ohio, 85 percent of all wholesale establishments reporting not to have been in operation in 1929 did not operate in the city as wholesale places of business during that year. Consequently, they were entirely new additions to the wholesaling structure of the community. The remaining 15 percent of the establishments existed in one form or another in 1929. If, however, a change in name, which is usually accompanied by a change in ownership, be regarded as a criterion of a new enterprise, then practically all of the establishments which reported to be new may rightfully be regarded as such.

In consequence of the above tests and on the basis of the general reliability of the schedules, it would appear that the term "new establishments" as used in this analysis covers largely places of business which started operations subsequent to 1929 in the communities in which they were located in 1933. To a much smaller degree, varying with the geographic area, the "new establishments" include also those which reorganized during the depression but remained in the same community.

PLAN OF PRESENTATION.—In order that the data presented in this study may be properly analyzed and correlated, statistics showing the disappearance of establishments over the four-year period from the end of 1929 to the end of 1933 are given first. The new establishments are then analyzed by date on which they started operations, by kind of business, and by type of organization.

The classification of a wholesale establishment by kind of business is governed by the principal line or lines of merchandise in which it deals. New wholesale establishments were distributed among the 25 major kind-of-business groups into which all wholesale places of business have been divided. In addition, separate data are shown for establishments specializing in the distribution of beer, and wines and spiritous liquors, respectively. These latter two kinds of business are new and grew most rapidly during 1933; hence they seem to justify separate treatment.

An analysis of wholesale establishments by type of organization involves classification into five major groups, according to the type of operation or the nature of the functions performed. These five type groups consist of wholesalers proper, manufacturers' sales branches, agents and brokers, assemblers and country buyers, and "all other types". The first of the five functional type groups for which data are shown consists of more or less regular wholesalers in domestic and foreign trade, who take title to the goods they buy and sell and are largely independent in ownership. Manufacturers' sales branches include wholesale outlets owned by manufacturers largely for the disposal of their own goods. In the classification designated as agents and brokers are included wholesale functionaries who do not take title to the goods involved, such as auction companies, brokers, commission merchants, export and import agents, manufacturers' agents, and selling agents. In the fourth functional type are assemblers and country buyers of farm products, most of them operating at local producing points or in the cities of producing regions. These comprise, among others, cooperative marketing associations, elevators, milk and cream stations, and packers and shippers. The fifth division which covers all other types of wholesale establishments consists, for the most part, of bulk tank stations and a few chain store warehouses.

LIMITATIONS OF THE MATERIAL.—This study is based entirely upon the material gathered in two censuses, the Census of Distribution covering the year 1929 and the Census of American Business for the year 1933. Obviously, the accuracy of the results is dependent, first, upon the thoroughness and completeness of the two canvasses and, second, upon their comparability.

Every effort has been made to have the classification between wholesale and retail and the classifications by kind of business and by type of establishment identical for both years. Nevertheless, due to lack of commodity information for 1933, the classifications by kind of business may not have been as accurate as for 1929; thus causing somewhat of a shift in classifications. Furthermore, some additional minor classifications were created for 1933 to cover wholesale establishments dealing in beer, wine, and spiritous liquors. A certain latitude must also be allowed for variations as between kind-of-business classifications which may have been caused by lack of uniformity in terminology throughout the country.

It is likewise possible that the two censuses are not exactly alike from the standpoint of coverage and thoroughness of canvass. In some sections of the country the canvass might have been more complete during one of those censuses than in others. There may have also been some difference of opinion among the respondents as to what constitutes a new wholesale establishment. Despite these limitations, it is believed that the data are probably as complete, comparable, and reliable as any data secured on such a large scale can be. Furthermore, attendant deficiencies tend to be minimized when data are presented for the United States as a whole or for any major kind-of-business or type-of-organization group.

DISAPPEARANCE OF WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS SINCE 1929

Reliable statistics on wholesale distribution are at a premium. Paucity of such data has long been lamented by students of marketing. While this gap has been partially filled by the First Census of Distribution and, since, by the Census of American Business, there are still many dark spots on which statistical light is most welcome. It is believed that one of those dark spots lies in the field of mortality or disappearance of wholesale enterprises and the appearance of others to take their places in the wholesaling structure. Practically nothing is now known concerning the rate at which wholesale establishments go out of business and others enter the field; nor is it known how different types of wholesaling react to economic conditions in this respect or how the various kinds of business are affected by such phenomena. It is hoped that the material presented in this study will contribute in some measure to an understanding of this problem.

The classification of wholesale establishments in operation in 1933 into new and old makes it possible to determine how many wholesale places of business in existence at the end of 1929 were out of business early in 1934. Census statistics, however, afford no clue to wholesale establishments which came into being and went out of business during the four-year period of 1930-1933, inclusive. The information summarized in this report presents, therefore, an incomplete record of disappearances among wholesale establishments. It is considered of value, nevertheless, particularly for purposes of comparison as between different types of organizations and as between different kinds of business.

When the number of new establishments reporting for 1933 is deducted from the total number in business at the close of 1933, the remainder will be found to represent the number of establishments which survived since 1929. The difference between the number which reported for 1929 and those which survived to the close of 1933 stands for the minimum number of establishments which went out of business during the four-year period. By this method it is computed that 43,399 wholesale establishments that were in existence in 1929 apparently went out of business during the four-year period. In addition, a number of wholesale establishments must have come and gone during the period under consideration, which cannot be accounted for by the Census for reasons indicated in the paragraph immediately preceding.

The grand total of new wholesale establishments or of establishments which have gone out of business between the end of 1929 and the end of 1933 represents a true measure of addition to or elimination from the wholesale structure of the country. But in classifying wholesale establishments as new or old, no account was taken of change in their methods of operation or in the composition of merchandise they handled. Therefore, in the analysis of old and new establishments by type-of-operation or by kind-of-business groups the concept of old and new establishments is subject to some modification, which may have a significant bearing on the nature of the figures purporting to measure loss in establishments since 1929.

In any type-of-operation or kind-of-business group old establishments comprise those which were in operation in 1929, whether classified at that time in this group or in any other group; conversely, they exclude those establishments which were classified in 1929 in this group but were classified differently in 1933 because of a change in their method of operation or kind of merchandise handled. On the other hand, new establishments include only those which came into existence after 1929, but exclude those which were established before the close of 1929, even though they were classified in another group in that year. For any type-of-operation or kind-of-business group, therefore, figures on loss of establishments measure the disappearance of establishments from the group, either because they ceased operations or changed the character of their business, as modified by the shifting of old establishments from some other classification to the group under discussion.

Another factor, the importance of which is more apparent in reference to group totals than to the grand total, is the lack of precise comparability between the 1933 and the 1929 censuses mentioned above. If the thoroughness of coverage in some sections of the country or for some branches of wholesaling differed in 1933 from what it was in 1929, it is apt to influence group totals more than it affects the grand total. The same holds for differences in methods of reporting by chain organizations between 1933 and 1929, which have occurred in a few instances.

The importance of these considerations is somewhat greater for kind-of-business groups, as compared with type-of-operation groups, since kinds of business comprise 25 classifications as against but 5 classifications on the basis of type of operation. However, even in the case of kind-of-business groups, the groups are so large and the shifting of business from one group to another is so infrequent because each group is so distinctive, that the importance of the factors discussed above is probably more theoretical than real.

LOSS IN WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS, BY TYPE OF ORGANIZATION.---For presentation of data in Table 1, the loss in the number of establishments between 1929 and 1934 has been calculated for each of the five functional types of organizations, as well as by 25 kind-of-business classifications. Of the 43,399 wholesale establishments which have apparently disappeared from the business map during the four-year period under consideration, 20,015 or 46 percent were accounted for by wholesalers proper, followed by assemblers and country buyers with a loss of 14,791 establishments, and agents and brokers with a loss of 8,519. Manufacturers' sales branches showed the smallest loss in actual numbers (2,283).

Losses in absolute numbers must not be confused with relative losses. For example, agents and brokers were third in importance from the standpoint of losses in the actual number of establishments. However, their losses were of first magnitude as compared with the total of such organizations existing in 1929. On the other hand, wholesalers proper, while leading in the number of establishments going out of business, occupied third position as far as relative losses were concerned and, in fact, their rate of disappearance was slightly less than the average for all wholesale establishments combined.

In 1929 the Census of Distribution secured reports for 79,784 establishments operated by wholesalers proper. Of this number, 20,015 were not in existence when the census for 1933 was taken. This represents a minimum loss in establishments, based on 1929 figures, of 25.1 percent, as compared with a 25.6 percent minimum loss for all wholesale establishments combined. Inasmuch as a period of four years is involved, the average minimum loss in establishments operated by wholesalers proper was 6.3 percent per annum, which would give, beginning January 1, 1934, an average maximum expectancy of life per such establishment of a little over 15½ years. Inasmuch, however, as the conditions prevailing during the four-year period, 1930-1933 inclusive, were not normal and there is no way of accurately determining the number of establishments operated by wholesalers proper which have come and gone during that period, nor the number of shifts as between classifications, this method of calculating the average life expectancy is somewhat hazardous. Nevertheless, it is of significance in comparing the results with those for other types of wholesale organizations for which similar data covering the same period are available.

1/ The data in this column were obtained by subtracting the figures for old establishments from those in business in 1929.

2/ The number of establishments in 1933 for these classifications exceeds the number in 1929 due in part to differences in methods of reporting and classifying a few large chains dealing in petroleum and its products.

As might be expected, agents and brokers, as well as assemblers and country buyers, both of which represent establishments which do not normally carry stocks and have no heavy fixed investments, were the most ephemeral. Of the 18,388 agents and brokers in existence in 1929, 8,519 or 46.3 percent disappeared from the picture by the end of 1933. This represents a minimum loss of 11.6 percent per annum and a maximum average life expectancy per such establishment of 8.6 years. Out of the 34,226 assemblers and country buyers operating in 1929, 14,791 had dropped out of business, or so changed their method of operation that they now appear under other classifications. Thus, the minimum loss for the four-year period among assemblers and country buyers was 43.2 percent or 10.8 percent per annum, with a maximum average life expectancy of 9.3 years. In the case of manufacturers' sales branches, only 2,283 disappeared out of 17,086 establishments in existence in 1929, the minimum mortality for the four-year period being 13.4 percent or 3.4 percent per annum, giving them a maximum average life expectancy of approximately 30 years.

To ascertain, at least in part, the accuracy of the method used in calculating the life expectancy of wholesale establishments, the following table was prepared. Data used in this table were originally compiled for special studies made by the Bureau of the Census in connection with its first Census of Distribution. It shows, for each of four lines of trade operated by wholesale merchants, or full-function wholesalers, the year or period in which the establishments in existence at the end of 1929 began operations.

From Table 2 it appears that 701 of the 12,576 establishments operated by wholesale merchants were not more than 1 year old in 1929, 778 or 6.2 percent of the total were 2 years old, 640 or 5.1 percent were 3 years old, 573 or 4.5 percent were 4 years old, and so on. Taking the mid-point of range in each of the periods prior to 1925 as the average age of the establishments in the respective periods and disregarding the establishments whose life was 80 years or over but indeterminate as well as those for which this information was not reported, it would appear that the average age of the establishments operated by wholesale merchants in the lines of trade indicated in the table was approximately 17 years.

This would seem to corroborate the conclusion reached concerning the life expectancy of wholesalers proper as computed in a preceding paragraph. When it is considered that wholesale merchants are probably a little more stable than some of the other types included under "wholesalers proper" and that the life expectancy computation of wholesalers proper is based on mortality data covering a period of unusually depressed conditions, the coincidence of the two sets of figures is indeed remarkable.

LOSS IN WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS, BY KIND OF BUSINESS.—An Analysis of the data in Table 1, by kind of business, shows that the greatest loss in establishments which existed at the end of 1929 was in the farm products—raw materials classification. The loss recorded for this kind of business consisted of 15,268 establishments. Other heavy losses were registered, in order of magnitude measured by absolute numbers, by farm products—consumer goods, with 3,767 establishments; groceries and foods, with a loss of 3,350 places of business; machinery, equipment and supplies (except electrical), with a loss of 2,691 establishments; and lumber and building materials, with a loss of 2,411 establishments. Kinds of business showing the smallest disappearance in absolute numbers were farm supplies, general merchandise, coal, and automotive products.

Expressed as a percent of the total number of establishments in existence at the end of 1929, the greatest proportionate loss in the number of establishments since 1929 and prior to 1934 is to be found in the general merchandise classification. Since, however, the total number of establishments in this classification is small and the classification was subject to error, particularly during 1933 when data on sales by commodities were not collected, the mortality figure for that classification is not of any significance. Barring this exception, establishments dealing in farm products of the raw material type appeared to be most vulnerable. At the end of four years, 51.2 percent of all such establishments were out of business, which is another way of stating that less than one-half of these establishments survived the ravages of the depression.

Wholesale firms dealing in clothing and furnishings were almost in as bad a condition, registering a loss of 45.3 percent during the four-year period, followed by establishments dealing in lumber and building materials with a loss of 43.7 percent. On the same basis, the smallest losses were registered by dealers in farm supplies and in the automotive field, where the losses were 1.7 and 5.4 percent, respectively. With few exceptions, losses in the number of establishments, existing in 1929, below the average for all kinds of business are to be found in lines of trade involving what may be termed as necessities of life, such as foods, coal, and tobacco products.

NEW WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS

SUMMARY OF NEW WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS.—At the close of 1933, there were in the United States 164,101 wholesale establishments, which reported a volume of business during the year of $32,030,504,000. Of these establishments, 37,846 or 23.1 percent of the total, had come into existence since 1929, the year for which the first wholesale census was taken in 1930. These 37,846 new establishments reported a volume of business amounting to $3,364,988,000, or 10.5 percent of all wholesale sales during 1933. The business was obtained at a cost of 11 percent, and the new establishments furnished 1,348,068 man-months of full-time employment for which $165,108,000 was paid in salaries and wages.

NEW ESTABLISHMENTS, BY DATE OF OPERATION.—The 37,846 establishments which came into existence since 1929 have been classified according to the period in which they began operations, as shown in the table below. It is significant to note that while 25,831 or 68.3 percent of the new wholesale units were established in the three-year period prior to 1933, the annual average for that period was only 8,610 as against 12,015 new establishments for the year 1933. Expressed in another way, the average number of establishments which began operations was 699 per month during the period from 1930 to March, 1933, inclusive, while for the last 9 months of 1933 the monthly average of new wholesale business units rose to 1,175. Obviously, the figures for the period preceding April, 1933, are somewhat understated, since a number of the new wholesale enterprises which began operations during that time were probably no longer in existence when the 1933 census was taken. Nevertheless, the comparison is significant.

If business optimism is measured by willingness to assume the obligations of new business ventures, its high point was reached in the second quarter of 1933 when an average of 1,371 new establishments appeared monthly and it remained high throughout the remainder of the year, each month showing more new units than the average for the three-year period, 1930-1932. During the first quarter of 1933, an average of only 478 new ventures appeared per month, due in a large measure probably to the adverse financial conditions which culminated in the "bank holiday" of March 4th to March 10th.

Measured by the number of persons employed on a full-time basis, the establishments which began operations during 1933 compared very favorably with those which commenced business activity in the preceding three-year period. In spite of the fact that little time was allowed for expansion, establishments starting in the first and second quarters of 1933 employed on a full-time basis 3.0 and 3.2 persons per establishment, respectively, as against 3.6 persons per establishment for those in business prior to 1933. The largest establishments, as shown in Table 3, came into existence during December with an average of 6.4 full-time employees per establishment. About 45 percent of the wholesalers proper starting in December engaged in the distribution of wines and spiritous liquors.

NEW WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS, BY TYPE OF ORGANIZATION.—As already indicated in a previous connection, the 37,846 new wholesale establishments have been divided into five major groups, according to type of functional organization. The number of such establishments by each of these types, compared with the total number of like establishments in operation during 1929, is shown in Table 4, below.

As many as 23,075 or 61.0 percent of the 37,846 new wholesale establishments were wholesalers proper, as against 2,039 manufacturers' sales branches and 4,259 "all other types" consisting largely of bulk tank stations. Agents and brokers accounted for 10.4 percent of the new establishments and assemblers and country buyers claimed the remaining 12.0 percent. Stated in another way, over 1 in every 4 (27.9%) of the establishments operated by wholesalers proper at the close of 1933 had come into existence since 1929, while only 1 in every 8 (12.1%) of the manufacturers' sales branches had come into being during the same period. The corresponding ratios and percentages for the other types were: more than 1 in every 4 (28.6%) for agents and brokers where a fast turnover is to be expected; slightly less than 1 in every 5 (18.9%) for assemblers and country buyers; and 1 in every 6 (16.0%) for "all other types."

At least a partial explanation for the fact that 61.0 percent of all the new establishments were among wholesalers proper, as against but 5.4 percent among manufacturers' sales branches, would appear to lie in the relatively greater stability of the latter type of organization. As shown in Table 5, the minimum mortality in establishments operated by wholesalers proper during the four-year period 1930--1933, inclusive, was 25.1 percent of all such establishments in existence in 1929. For the same period the minimum mortality for manufacturers' sales branches was 13.4 percent, showing a substantially smaller loss in establishments of the latter type as compared with wholesalers proper. Again, of the establishments operated by wholesalers proper during 1933, 27.9 percent have come into being since 1929 and are, therefore, regarded as new for purposes of this study. On the other hand, only 12.1 percent of the manufacturers' sales branches in existence in 1933 were new in the same sense, indicating that relatively fewer manufacturers' sales branches have gone out of business or have entered the field since 1929.

STABILITY OF WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS, BY TYPE OF ORGANIZATION.--An attempt has been made to measure quantitatively the relative stability of the different functional types of wholesale organizations, both during the four-year period under consideration, and on an annual basis. Table 5 shows the rate at which wholesale establishments disappeared during the four years, expressed as a percent of the number of establishments in existence in 1929. It also shows the extent to which new establishments came into being during the same period of time, expressed as a percent of the number of wholesale places of business in existence in 1933. The geometric mean of these two ratios of so-called mortality on the one hand and natality on the other, has been computed for the five wholesale type groups to show the relative stability of the groups or conversely the "turnover" in wholesale establishments.

On the basis of data in Table 5 it may be said that the turnover for all wholesale establishments in the United States during the four-year period was 24.3 percent, or a yearly average of 6.1 percent. Wholesalers proper showed an average yearly turnover of 6.6 percent, while manufacturers' sales branches had a yearly turnover of 3.2 percent. For agents and brokers the yearly turnover was 9.1 percent and for assemblers and country buyers, 7.2 percent. According to these figures, manufacturers' sales branches showed the highest degree of stability since they had the lowest turnover, while agents and brokers were the least stable and showed the highest turnover.

It is relatively easy to explain the rapid turnover or low degree of stability among agents and brokers whose fixed investments are distinctly limited and who carry practically no stocks on hand. It is also relatively easy to explain the rapid turnover and relative instability during the depression among assemblers and country buyers, partly for the same reasons as given for agents and brokers, and partly on account of the unusually depressed condition in agriculture during the four-year period under study, which was accentuated further by Government loans during 1933 on certain farm commodities when stored. The latter policy has reduced the volume of business of assemblers and country buyers to a minimum and has limited opportunities for new enterprises in those fields.

| Assemblers and country buyers ..... | 43.2  | 18.9   | 28.6  | 7.2    |

However, to explain the relative stability of manufacturers' sales branches as compared with wholesalers proper, is not a simple problem. Whether it was due to the greater financial strength of manufacturers having sales branches as outlets for their goods, or to the kinds of merchandise handled by them, is difficult to say. No doubt, both were significant factors in the struggle for survival. Nevertheless, the data in Table 1 reveal a tendency toward the conventional type of wholesale establishment, independent in ownership. For wholesalers proper the number of new establishments exceeded the number which went out of business by 3,060. At the same time, the data show a net decline in the number of manufacturers' sales branches. While relatively few of such branches went out of business, fewer still have come into the business picture since 1929, 2,283 having been lost to this classification as against 2,039 establishments gained.

NEW WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS, BY KIND OF BUSINESS.--Table 6 shows the number of new wholesale establishments for each of 27 kind-of-business classifications. It indicates the actual number of such establishments, which is then expressed, first, as a percent of the total number of new establishments for all kinds of business combined and, second, as a percentage of all establishments, old and new, operating in that line of business in 1933.

From the data presented in that table it appears that trades involving, for the most part, necessities such as foods, led in the number of new establishments. Farm products-consumer goods, consisting of fresh fruits and vegetables, dairy products, and poultry and poultry products, occupied first position with 6,526 new establishments, or 17.2 percent of all new concerns. Groceries and foods came second, with 5,177 new establishments, or 13.7 percent of all new firms. Petroleum products, which have also come to be generally regarded as necessities, were third in importance with 4,949 new establishments, or 13.1 percent of all new firms. These three kinds of business alone accounted for 44 percent of all wholesale establishments which started operations subsequent to 1929. Wholesale places of business dealing in machinery, equipment and supplies (except electrical) were next in importance, with 2,284 new establishments, or 6.0 percent of all new firms. Other kinds of business, representing 3.0 percent or more of the new establishments, were, in the order of importance, farm products--raw materials, beer, automotive, clothing and furnishings, and dry goods (see Table 6).

When the number of new wholesale establishments is expressed as a percentage of the total in business at the end of 1933 in a given business classification (except for beer, wines and spiritous liquors, most of which establishments being new for legal reasons), clothing and furnishings was first with 34.7 percent; drugs and drug sundries, second with 22.9 percent; and automotive, third with 30.9 percent. Farm products-consumer goods was fifth with 27.6 percent of the establishments at the end of 1933 classified as new, while only 21.7 percent of the groceries and food concerns had come into existence since 1929.

STABILITY OF WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS, BY KIND OF BUSINESS.--An attempt has been made to measure the relative stability of wholesale enterprises engaged in the various lines of trade shown in Table 7. The geometric mean of the mortality (or firms disappearing during the four-year period 1930-1933, inclusive), expressed as a percent of the 1929 total, and of the new establishments which have come into existence since 1929, expressed as a percent of the 1933 total, is shown for each of the 24 kinds of business, first, for the four-year period and, second, on an annual basis. The complement of this geometric mean naturally measures the degree of stability. According to Table 7 it would appear that the most stable kinds of business, in the order of their stability, were farm supplies, automotive, coal, chemicals, groceries and foods, hardware, metals (except scrap), and tobacco and its products.

The turnover in wholesale establishments for any given kind of business may be caused by one or more of several circumstances. A high turnover indicating a relatively low degree of stability may be due to both a high mortality and natality rate or to an unusually high rate of either of the two factors. For example, in the case of drugs and drug sundries the low stability was due to both factors. The same was true of electrical goods and of furniture and house furnishings. On the other hand, the relatively low stability in establishments dealing in lumber and building materials was caused principally by a high rate of disappearance of firms from the business picture during the depression and not so much by the number of new establishments which entered the field. Conversely, a low turnover may be caused by low mortality and natality rates, or by an exceedingly low rate in either, as illustrated by farm supplies, in which case the mortality rate was 1.7 for the four-year period, but the new establishments in that line of business constituted 20.8 percent of all in existence in 1933.

In partial explanation of the varying degree of stability as between different kinds of business, the following points may be suggestive. Wherever wholesale establishments are most numerous, greater opportunities for new ventures are afforded, as far as absolute numbers are concerned. Stability in any kind of business is also affected, to no small degree, by the types of wholesale organizations operating therein. For example, in the case of farm products--consumer goods, a large percentage of the change is due to the volatile character of such types as assemblers, country buyers, agents, and brokers.

In the third place, during periods of economic stress the consumption of necessities increases in relative importance, which is the same as saying that it suffers less than the consumption of other goods. Consequently, either fewer failures in proportion to the total may be expected in such lines of business, or a larger proportion of new establishments would enter the field. On the other hand, kinds of business involving mainly heavy goods or industrial goods of the raw material type, would tend to show the least activity in a period of depression as far as accessions are concerned. Thus, only 13.6 percent of all establishments dealing in farm products--raw materials had come into being since 1929, despite the fact that over one-half of all such establishments in existence at the end of 1929 have disappeared prior to 1934. A similar situation may be found in the case of establishments dealing in metals (except scrap), and in lumber and building materials. In all of these cases the number of new establishments, expressed as a percent of the 1933 total, was less than the average of 23.1 percent for all kinds of business.

Relative stability in some kinds of business may be explained in still another way. For example, in the case of machinery, equipment, and supplies (except electrical) the net loss in the number of establishments was relatively small because relatively few new installations were bought by industry during the depression; therefore, the demand for parts and supplies necessary to maintain the old machinery and equipment has been thereby enhanced, thus fortifying the position of the wholesale distributor of such goods. A similar reason may account for the increase in the number of wholesale establishments in the automotive trade. Many persons, instead of buying new automobiles during the depression, spent more for maintenance of the old cars, which caused a demand for replacement parts, automobile accessories, and supplies, as well as for additional shop equipment and supplies.

NUMBER OF NEW ESTABLISHMENTS FOR WHOLESALERS PROPER AND FOR MANUFACTURERS' SALES BRANCHES, BY KIND OF BUSINESS AND DATE OF OPERATION.--Up to this point data were presented in the form of totals by date of operation, by type of establishment, or by kind of business. No attempt has been made to present kind of business or date of operation statistics, separately for each type of wholesaling. In order to adhere to simplicity of treatment and at the same time throw light on the important points, Table 8 has been designed. It shows for each of the two principal types of wholesaling, namely for wholesalers proper and for manufacturers' sales branches, the number of new establishments, by kind of business, and by periods in which operations were begun.

Of the 23,075 establishments operated by wholesalers proper at the end of 1933 which began operations subsequent to 1929 and prior to 1934, 14,372 were established before 1933, at the rate of 4,791 per annum for the three-year period. However, during 1933 wholesalers proper started 8,703 establishments which were still in existence when the census was taken in 1934, which is 81.7 percent more new establishments than the average for the preceding three-year period. The pick-up in new establishments among wholesalers proper during 1933 began in the second quarter, when 3,114 places of business were opened as compared with but 957 during the first quarter of the year.

In spite of the fact that beer accounted for 1,033 of the establishments opened in the second quarter, each kind of business for that period showed an improvement over the first quarter. For many of the kinds of business the number of concerns coming into being during the month of July compared favorably with the number established during the entire first three months of the year. Each of the kinds of business showed a tapering off towards the end of the year and were it not for wines and spirituous liquors, the number of new establishments for December, normally a quiet month in wholesale trade, would have been low. Groceries and foods led all trades in the number of new concerns during each of the periods except in the second quarter of 1933. Farm products-consumer goods came second.

Approximately 38 percent of all establishments which were started by wholesalers proper subsequent to 1929 but prior to 1934 began operations in 1933, as compared with an average of 20.8 percent per year for the preceding three-year period. This appears to be indicative of a change in the attitude of wholesalers toward new ventures, despite the fact that the accessions prior to 1933 are probably somewhat underestimated because of new firms disappearing from business during the same period. Neither can such a change be entirely attributed to the legalization of beer, wines, and spirituous liquors, since these kinds of business accounted for but 25.5 percent of all new places of business opened by wholesalers during 1933. Even when the new establishments dealing in beer and wines are completely disregarded, the number of new establishments opened by wholesalers during 1933 exceeded the annual average for the preceding three-year period by a little over 35 percent.

As might be expected, new wholesalers proper dealing in beer started operations mainly during 1933 and the same was true of distributors of wines and spirituous liquors. Of all beer distributors who started operations subsequent to 1929, 89.6 percent commenced business activity during 1933, while 92.4 percent of the new distributors of wines and spirituous liquors began operations during that year. Obviously, not all of the wholesalers of these products have come into being since the legalization of traffic in such commodities. In fact, 52.8 percent of all beer distributors and 62.3 percent of all distributors of wines and spiritous liquors, in existence at the end of 1933, were in business in 1929 but have apparently changed from other lines of trade to the wholesaling of the commodities in question.

In the case of manufacturers' sales branches the situation appears to be quite different. The number of new units opened in 1933 was substantially below the average per year for the preceding three-year period, being 385 against 551. Exceptions to this general condition may be found only in the following three kinds of business: beer, with 46 new establishments in 1933 against an annual average of 2 during the preceding three-year period; wines and spiritous liquors with 21 new establishments in 1933 against none for the preceding period; and plumbing and heating equipment and supplies with 21 establishments opened in 1933 against an average of 13 per year. From these and other facts previously cited it would appear that manufacturers were reluctant to open new sales branches either because of lack of confidence or because they preferred to utilize the services of independent wholesalers instead.

SALES, EXPENSES, AND EMPLOYMENT OF NEW WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS

NET SALES OF NEW WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS.—On the average, the wholesale establishments which began business subsequent to 1929 operated on a relatively small scale, judged on the basis of business volume. While such establishments constituted 23.1 percent of the total in existence at the end of 1933, they accounted for only 10.5 percent of all net sales reported for the year. This situation obtained in the case of all types of wholesale organizations, although in varying degrees. For example, 27.9 percent of all wholesalers proper were new but they accounted for only 10.5 percent of the business reported by all establishments in that group. Similarly, the 12.1 percent of the manufacturers' sales branches which were established since 1929 cared for but 6.5 percent of the business transacted during the year by all sales branches. In the case of the remaining three functional types of wholesale organizations, however, the new establishments made a better showing than for wholesalers proper, although they, too, operated on a smaller scale than was true of the average for the respective types. Of all agents and brokers in operation when the census was taken, 28.6 percent were new with 13.3 percent of the business for the group. Assemblers and country buyers reported 18.9 percent of the establishments as new, with 14.4 percent of the business; while 16.0 percent of the establishments reported by "all other types" were new and accounted for 12.1 percent of the business (see Appendix A).

A comparison of the average sales per establishment of those concerns which came into being between 1929 and 1933 with the average for all establishments, by each of the functional types, reveals that the average sales of the new concerns were substantially less. The 14,372 wholesalers proper established in the three-year period prior to January 1, 1933 reported a volume of business aggregating $1,089,598,000 or an annual average of $76,000 per establishment as against an average of $156,000 for all wholesalers proper. Manufacturers' sales branches established during the three-year period averaged $239,000 for the year 1933 as against an average of $445,000 for all sales branches. The corresponding figures for agents and brokers were $219,000 sales for the new concerns against $471,000 for all agents and brokers; assemblers and country buyers, $56,000 against $73,000; and for "all other types," $94,000 compared with $124,000.

The average sales per establishment were even smaller for the new concerns which started operations during the year 1933. Inasmuch as such establishments operated less than a full year, comparisons must be made on a monthly basis. For all wholesalers proper, the average monthly sales for the year 1933 were $13,000. For concerns which started operations during the three-year period prior to 1933, average monthly sales were $6,318. Average monthly sales for wholesalers proper, starting during 1933 in the period indicated, were: first quarter, $5,435; second quarter, $5,228; July, $6,313; August, $4,524; September, $4,636; October, $6,169; November, $5,309; and December, $40,184. The high average for December was doubtless associated with the legalizing of wines and spirituous liquors.

From the foregoing, it would appear that new wholesale business enterprises are comparatively handicapped and that some time is required to build business volume. It may also mean that opportunities for large scale operation during 1933 were so limited that little attraction was afforded to those with ample financial means. A further explanation of the relatively small scale of operation on the part of new enterprises may lie in the kinds of business affected. It will be noted, for example, at least in the case of wholesalers proper, that a large proportion of the new establishments operated in the grocery and food trades and in farm products of the consumer type, as well as in other lines like waste materials, in which business volume per establishment is normally relatively small.

OPERATING EXPENSES OF NEW WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS.—Operating expenses incurred by newly established wholesale concerns were lower than those of older enterprises. The 37,846 wholesale establishments which started operations subsequent to 1929 reported a volume of business of $3,364,988,000. In obtaining this business, expenses were incurred to the extent of $370,713,000, which amounts to 11 percent of net sales. For all establishments in operation at the close of 1933, operating expenses approximated 11.5 percent of net sales. Thus, despite the smaller volume per establishment, the new firms had a lower cost of doing business.

When the matter of operating expenses is considered by functional types, it appears that for wholesalers proper, operating expenses were 14.6 percent of net sales for new concerns against 15 percent for all wholesalers proper. Manufacturers' sales branches reported the same ratio of expenses to sales, namely 12.5 percent, for old and new establishments alike. New assemblers and country buyers reported a cost of doing business of 7.9 percent against an average of 9.9 percent for all such organizations. Only in the case of agents and brokers did new establishments report a slightly higher cost of doing business, consisting of 3.4 percent of the volume of business against 3.2 percent for all establishments in that group.

A comparison of expense ratios of new establishments operated by wholesalers proper, by kind of business, shows that the costs incurred by the new concerns were less than for the total in the respective kinds of business in 16 lines of trade out of 25, into which all establishments have been classified. No comparisons are possible for two kinds of business, namely, beer, and wines and spirituous liquors, since no provision has been made for these classifications prior to 1933. For manufacturers' sales branches lower costs were registered by new establishments only in 13 of the 25 lines of trade.

Under normal circumstances one would expect new establishments to incur relatively higher operating costs partly because of their initial handicap in securing a reasonable volume of business and partly on account of certain organization expenses which are often absorbed within a relatively short time. This was not true for new wholesale enterprises which started operations after 1929, probably because such concerns commenced activity at a time when low wages and salaries prevailed, when premises could be obtained at reduced rentals, and when fixtures and equipment could be secured at advantageous prices. Moreover, these concerns were not burdened by the many fixed charges and other "hang-overs" to which many of the older establishments were no doubt subjected.

It is also probable that newly established enterprises called for the greater application of executives than is given in normal times. The difficulty in starting a new business in periods of economic stress would naturally prevent relatively inefficient managements from entering the field. In fact, a true comparison of operating expenses incurred by new establishments with those of older concerns would show even a greater disparity in favor of the new enterprises if those establishments which began activity during 1933 were eliminated from the comparison. It will be noted from an examination of the data in Appendix A that establishments which started operations during 1933 and therefore secured a relatively small volume of business during the period covered by the census, in general had higher relative costs than was true of those which started operations prior to January 1, 1933, and thus operated a full year.

To illustrate, total costs of doing business for all new establishments operated by wholesalers proper were 14.6 percent of net sales. However, such costs were but 14.5 percent of net sales for the wholesalers proper which operated the entire year of 1933. These costs advanced in proportion as the part of the year 1933 during which the establishments operated decreased. To this there appear to be two exceptions: one in the case of establishments which started operations in October and the other in the case of establishments which started operations in December, the operating expenses in these two cases being 14.4 percent and 11.5 percent, respectively, as compared with an average of 14.5 percent.

An examination of Table 8 discloses, however, the fact that a large number of the establishments which began operations in September were in the grocery trade or engaged in the distribution of farm products of the consumer type. In both of these cases costs of doing business are relatively low; certainly below the average of 14.6 percent. In the case of groceries and foods, particularly, the average costs for all new establishments were 12.3 percent of net sales and for farm products--consumer goods, such costs were 13.8 percent.

For manufacturers' sales branches it is impossible to make an analysis of operating expense ratios similar to the one made for wholesalers proper, since it is not known how many of the branches carried stocks and how many represented mere sales offices. Obviously, operating expenses vary considerably as between the two types of branches. That situation accounted, in part, for the wide fluctuations in the operating expenses of manufacturers' sales branches shown in Appendix A. Some of the differences in expense ratios are also accounted for by the kind of business involved. More services must be performed in the distribution of some goods than in the case of others. Relative investments also vary, as well as the amount and expense of actual handling required.

EMPLOYMENT AND PAY ROLL.--Wholesale establishments organized after 1929 furnished, during 1933, full-time employment of 1,348,068 man-months. A little over 60 percent of this employment was supplied by wholesalers proper, who operated 61 percent of the new establishments. On the other hand, manufacturers' sales branches supplied 11.8 percent of the employment, although they constituted but 5.4 percent of the new establishments. A partial explanation for this difference lies in the fact that many of the new establishments among wholesalers proper were relatively small and were operated by proprietors and partners whose employment was not included in the paid employee figures; whereas in the case of manufacturers' sales branches the entire personnel was generally included among employees.

Second in importance were "All other types," which absorbed approximately 15 percent of the employment. This group of wholesale organizations was dominated by bulk tank stations engaged in the distribution of petroleum and its products. These stations alone accounted for 90 percent of the employment afforded by "All other types." Relatively few employees were used by agents, brokers, assemblers, and country buyers. Most of these enterprises operated on a small scale and did not engage in the physical handling of goods; hence, they were operated largely by the owners of the respective enterprises.

For all new wholesale establishments combined, pay roll constituted 44.5 percent of operating expenses. The lowest ratio of pay roll to total expenses was reported by "All other types" which had a ratio of 42.2 percent in pay roll as against a ratio of 43.3 percent for manufacturers' sales branches, 43.9 percent for assemblers and country buyers, 45.5 percent for wholesalers proper, and 45.9 percent for agents and brokers. The reasons for these variations are quite obvious. Agents and brokers, with few fixed charges, would naturally be expected to have a higher ratio of pay roll to total expenses than bulk tank stations in which petroleum and its products are actually stored in specialized equipment. For the same reason wholesalers proper showed a higher ratio of pay roll to total expenses than was true of manufacturers' sales branches, many of which do not handle stocks, and hence incur little expense in rentals and other fixed items.

In the case of wholesalers proper the lowest ratio of pay roll to total expenses was reported by establishments handling farm products of the raw material type. They had a ratio of 31.5 percent, followed by wines and spiritous liquors with a ratio of 35.5 percent; beer, with a ratio of 37.5 percent; petroleum and its products, with a ratio of 37.7 percent; drugs and drug sundries, with a ratio of 37.8 percent; amusement and sporting goods, with a ratio of 38.8 percent; and general merchandise, with a ratio of 39.4 percent. In the remaining 20 kind-of-business groups the ratio of pay roll to total expenses was over 40 percent and in four of these the ratio was over 50 percent. The highest ratios were reported, in the order of magnitude, by establishments dealing in tobacco and its products, automotive products, chemicals, and lumber and building materials. It is also evident from the above figures and from the data shown in Appendix A that pay roll was a major item of expense to new wholesalers proper, regardless of kind of business in which they engaged. In all but one kind of business this ratio exceeded one-third of all costs of doing business.

In Table 9, below, pay roll is shown as a percent of total operating expenses, for each of the five types of establishments and for wholesalers proper by each of 27 kinds of business. This item is shown separately for new establishments and for all establishments combined.

It is interesting to note that in four of the five type groups pay roll was a somewhat smaller item of expense in the case of new establishments than was true for all wholesale places of business operated by the respective types. In comparing pay roll as a percent of total expenses, by kinds of business, it is found that of the 27 kind-of-business groups, 19 showed pay roll to be a smaller percentage of operating expenses for new establishments; 6 kind-of-business groups showed a somewhat larger percentage; and in two kinds of business the ratio of pay roll to total expenses was approximately the same. This fact substantiates the observation made in a preceding paragraph that new concerns starting during the depression apparently took advantage of the low prevailing salaries and wages; also, in the case of wholesalers proper, many more of the new establishments were operated by proprietors and partners whose compensation was not included in the reported pay roll figures.

NEW WHOLESALE ESTABLISHMENTS, BY GEOGRAPHIC AREAS.--Naturally, it is seldom that all sections of the United States react in the same way and in the same degree to a given set of economic conditions. Furthermore, the economic conditions themselves vary according to geographic areas and are highly colored by local factors. For these reasons, eight states have been selected for which data on new wholesale establishments are presented in Appendix B. These states are believed to be representative of every section of the United States; consequently a study by geographic areas, of the extent to which wholesale places of business started operations subsequent to 1929, by what types of organizations, and in what lines of trade, will reveal some interesting comparisons and contrasts.
