NRW-ORLEANS:
SATURDAY MORNING, OCT. 8, 1942.

There is, beyond all doubt, in one city a gang of atrocious miscreants, who are nightly employed in attempts to commit the foul crime of mean. Every circumstange goes to prove this assertion. The frequency of fires—the unusual places where they have to the direct discovery, in some cases, of numbers to the materials purposely packed in places distilly insigned—all combine to strengthen public susplicing. Within the last three or four weeks, there has been on a verage one fire or more every night. The occur too in situations where it may reasonably be appointed, plunder can be readily obtained, such as boarding houses and other public establishments. The extreme depression of the times appears to have driven amongst us a band of reckless accoundreds who may be perpetrated with greater security from delection. Any man may take an hour's stroid, through the most frequented thoroughfares at ten transpace on a number of means a ten procession. Any man may take an hour's stroid through the most frequented thoroughfares at ten transpace on a number of means a ten procession. At the New Bailey, sentence was persone to a number of means was presented as the number of means and the procession of the factory, and, there is no city in the union where incendiarism may be perpetrated with greater security from delection. Any man may take an hour's strolt through the most frequented thoroughfares at ten of clock at night, and not encounter more than two or three drowsy watchmen—and these, instead of being regaged in constantly perambulating their beats, are quietly stationed under some friendly shed, or smooring it delightfully on the invaing couch of the nearest door sill. It is just about the easiest matter in the world for the incendiary, whose vision and hearing are sharpened by apprehension, to watch his chance and accomplish his flendish task without the remotest are sharpened by apprehension, to watch his chance and accomplish his fiendish task without the remotest danger of detection. Hence it is that while we continually hear of the crime of aroun, it is seldom that any opportunity occurs of lodging an accusation, and still more rare that conviction follows trial.

The only remedy for this evil is to stimulate the vigilance and augment the numbers of our police. In vain will the less texertions be made to capture the wretches who ply this secret and dessable employment, while the night watch throughout the city is absolutely too feeble, and more especially in those dark designs. If the municipal authorities are unaide to incur the expense of an enlarged police, it behaves the citizens,—those who being properly holders are deely in and directly interested in the safety of the city—in adopt fitting measures to meet the emergency.

The Commodere was awaiting precise orders from his government to commence hostilities with the naval forces under his command.

SPAIN

Senor Arguelle, the goardian of the Queen, was said to be dangerously ill.

The Barcelona journals, which have reached us down to the 30th ult, continue to be filled with distressing accounts of the ravages occasioned by inundations in Catalonia. It appears that the rain fell in terrents during several days, but particularly on the 34th, when the Libotregat and Newa cereflowed their banks, and soon formed but one immense sheet of water. The districts of gualided, La Pobla de Charamunt, Capellades, Valibona, San Quintin, San Pedro de Riu de Vitelles, Monistrol, and others, were entirely laid waste; many of the inhabitants, surprised by the Soods, were drowned, and the damages caused in that quarter only, were calculated to amount to 4,000,000 passitres. The waters of the Liobregat had not rised to so great height since the year 1740.

A new bank is proposed by British capitalists to be established in Spain. The proposal is for the establishment of an Anglo-Spanish Bank, capital £2,000, 000 stering, (200,000,000 reals.) The bank is to be under the jumerdiate protection of the Spanish nation, to be endowed with particular and serclesive privileges, and to form a corporation with complete liberty of action under all circumstances; so that whatever may the the political relations of Spain and Great Britain, the funds, the privileges, and the acts be secured and continued, even in case of war between the two countries.
