

PRICE 15 CENTS

PS 3513
.R692
H4
1918
Copy 1

Her Service Flag

Helen Sherman Griffith

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY

Successful Rural Plays

A Strong List From Which to Select Your Next Play

FARM FOLKS. A Rural Play in Four Acts, by ARTHUR LEWIS TUBBS. For five male and six female characters. Time of playing, two hours and a half. One simple exterior, two easy interior scenes. Costumes, modern. Flora Goodwin, a farmer's daughter, is engaged to Philip Burleigh, a young New Yorker. Philip's mother wants him to marry a society woman, and by falsehoods makes Flora believe Philip does not love her. Dave Weston, who wants Flora himself, helps the deception by intercepting a letter from Philip to Flora. She agrees to marry Dave, but on the eve of their marriage Dave confesses, Philip learns the truth, and he and Flora are reunited. It is a simple plot, but full of speeches and situations that sway an audience alternately to tears and to laughter. Price, 25 cents.

HOME TIES. A Rural Play in Four Acts, by ARTHUR LEWIS TUBBS. Characters, four male, five female. Plays two hours and a half. Scene, a simple interior—same for all four acts. Costumes, modern. One of the strongest plays Mr. Tubbs has written. Martin Winn's wife left him when his daughter Ruth was a baby. Harold Vincent, the nephew and adopted son of the man who has wronged Martin, makes love to Ruth Winn. She is also loved by Len Everett, a prosperous young farmer. When Martin discovers who Harold is, he orders him to leave Ruth. Harold, who does not love sincerely, yields. Ruth discovers she loves Len, but thinks she has lost him also. Then he comes back, and Ruth finds her happiness. Price 25 cents.

THE OLD NEW HAMPSHIRE HOME. A New England Drama in Three Acts, by FRANK DUMONT. For seven males and four females. Time, two hours and a half. Costumes, modern. A play with a strong heart interest and pathos, yet rich in humor. Easy to act and very effective. A rural drama of the "Old Homestead" and "Way Down East" type. Two exterior scenes, one interior, all easy to set. Full of strong situations and delightfully humorous passages. The kind of a play everybody understands and likes. Price, 25 cents.

THE OLD DAIRY HOMESTEAD. A Rural Comedy in Three Acts, by FRANK DUMONT. For five males and four females. Time, two hours. Rural costumes. Scenes rural exterior and interior. An adventurer obtains a large sum of money from a farm house through the intimidation of the farmer's niece, whose husband he claims to be. Her escapes from the wiles of the villain and his female accomplice are both starting and novel. Price, 15 cents.

A WHITE MOUNTAIN BOY. A Strong Melodrama in Five Acts, by CHARLES TOWNSEND. For seven males and four females, and three supers. Time, two hours and twenty minutes. One exterior, three interiors. Costumes easy. The hero, a country lad, twice saves the life of a banker's daughter, which results in their betrothal. A scoundrelly clerk has the banker in his power, but the White Mountain boy finds a way to checkmate his schemes, saves the banker, and wins the girl. Price 15 cents.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY
PHILADELPHIA

Her Service Flag

A Play in One Act

By

HELEN SHERMAN GRIFFITH

PHILADELPHIA
THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY

1918

PS3513
R692 H4
1918

---

COPYRIGHT 1918 BY THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY

---

JAN 10 1919

© J. D. 50974

Her Service Flag

Her Service Flag

---

CHARACTERS

MRS. REYNOLDS - - whose stepson has left town under a cloud three years before.

MRS. KEITH }
MRS. TAYLOR } - - her neighbors and intimate friends.

SUSIE - - - - - the maid, an old family retainer.

TIME OF PLAYING.—Forty-five minutes.

---

STORY OF THE PLAY

Mrs. Reynolds, whose stepson has disappeared three years ago, grieves that she has no son to give to her country. Mrs. Keith and Mrs. Taylor, both of whom have dear ones "doing their bit," call and sympathize with Mrs. Reynolds. She has secretly bought a one-star service flag, in a vague way feeling that it will help her to feel as do the women who have sons in the service, and is very confused when it is discovered. "I—I bought it to—to—give to you, Susie." Susie's postman goes to war and Susie is broken-hearted. And then comes Mrs. Reynolds' big moment, for a letter arrives telling her that the errant stepson has died in France a hero—fighting for his country. And so she is entitled to her service flag, and Susie caps the climax—"Glory be to Heaven, ma'am, we're in it at last!"

COSTUMES, ETC.

MRS. REYNOLDS. About forty. On her entrance she wears a dark suit and hat and carries a shopping bag and a small parcel. She changes to a simple house dress.

MRS. KEITH AND MRS. TAYLOR. About forty and forty-two, respectively. They wear street costumes and carry knitting bags.

SUSIE. About thirty. She wears a plain dark dress and a white apron.

---

PROPERTIES

FOR SUSIE: An unopened letter. A number of unopened letters and a small package, containing a gold watch, a photograph case, a few letters and another small packet. This contains a medal supposed to be the Croix de Guerre. Handkerchief. Tea tray, with tea, cups, corn bread, sugar, etc.

FOR MRS. REYNOLDS: Shopping bag. Small parcel. Half knitted sock. Service flag with one star. Two parcels.

FOR MRS. KEITH: Knitting. Handkerchief. Letter (opened).

FOR MRS. TAYLOR: Knitting. Two opened letters.

OTHER PROPERTIES: Clock. Victrola to play a lively march off stage. Bell to ring off stage. Large bundle containing knitted sweaters and socks.

SCENE PLOT

SCENE.—Parlor in Mrs. Reynolds' home. Door up c. to hall, which is supposed to lead r. to front door, and l. to kitchen. Door l. to bedrooms, etc. Window at r. Chair against wall of hallway, opposite door, up c. Table against wall up r. Mantel or bookcase with mirror and clock, up l. Table at c. with two easy chairs to r. of it, and another at l. Tabouret l.

Her Service Flag

---

SCENE.—MRS. REYNOLDS' parlor, comfortably but old-fashionedly furnished. If possible have open doorway at back so that a glimpse may be had of hall behind.

(Curtain rises disclosing empty stage. Bell rings. SUSIE passes from L. to R. through hall, by the parlor door; presumably opens front door.)

SUSIE (heard at door). Oh, it's you, is it? I thought it didn't sound like the postman's ring. And where is our regular postman? What? Oh, takin' a day off? He's a lucky man. Wait a moment till I bring you a letter to mail. I'd have had it with me, if you'd rung twice. (SUSIE passes and repasses through hall, carrying a letter in her hand on her return. Heard at door.) Oh, stop complainin'. I didn't keep you waitin' at all. You'd ought to be glad to do somethin' fer the ladies. Yer young enough. Why aren't ye at a trainin' camp the day? Well, if ye haven't found any other uniform to wear between now an' the postman's next day off, mind ye give two sharp, short rings. Then I'll be after knowin' who 'tis. What? Oh, none of yer sauce, ye young slacker! (Sound of door closing. Enter SUSIE up c., with a bundle of letters and smallish package, which she looks over before placing on table c.) Nothin' fer me, as usual. Several furrin ones fer the madam, but I reckon they're from her furrin soldiers. Nothin' at all like the handwritin' of Master Jack—bad cess to 'im. With a mother like her—even if she is a “step”—it passes my understandin' how a son could go to the dogs like him. There's a bad streak in him somewhere. Him as ought to be home, fightin' fer his mother an' his country, stid o' huntin' gold in Alaska or some other place off the globe, an' never writin' home these three years anything to speak of — (Bell rings. SUSIE listens.) There's the madam now. That's her ring.

(Exit SUSIE, c. Door heard to open.)

MRS. R. (heard without). Thanks, Susie. I am later than I meant to be. I don't suppose any one has come yet?

(She enters as she speaks and comes down R., SUSIE following.)

SUSIE (affecting surprise). Oh, is somebody comin', ma'am?

MRS. R. (vexed). You know that Mrs. Keith and Mrs. Taylor are coming over for tea. I told you, the first thing this morning.

SUSIE (severely). I know you mentioned it, ma'am, but as you hadn't ordered anything special for tea —

MRS. R. (sighing). We can't have anything "special," Susie, for a long, long time. We are at war, you know, and must conserve food.

SUSIE (with a sniff, moving toward door). It don't help the soldiers in the trenches to starve ourselves out o' usefulness, if you'll excuse my sayin' so. Cook was sayin' only yesterday that she was quite gettin' her hand out—havin' no cakes 'r parrty dishes to cook.

MRS. R. Well, let her exercise her talents on some of the new recipes for corn-meal, then, Susie.

SUSIE (contemptuously). Corn-meal, is it? 'Tis the stuff they feed to the hogs in Ireland.

(SUSIE goes up c.)

MRS. R. (calling after her). Remember, Susie, hot buttered corn bread and war cake for tea. Serve it about half an hour after the ladies come.

SUSIE (who has paused in hall to take the order). Yes, ma'am—poor ladies. And I know they're both fond of good cookin'.

(Exit SUSIE, through door c. and toward L. grumbling. MRS. REYNOLDS, with a sigh, goes to table c. She is dressed in street costume, and carries a shopping bag and small package.)

MRS. R. (pushing aside things on table c., and incidentally covering the bundle of letters, to open her package there). I suppose I am an old fool, but I just couldn't get by that shop window without going in. (She opens the package and holds up a small service flag, with one star.) I have looked into that window every time I've gone down-town, and this afternoon—well, I just went in and bought one. I don't want any one to know. (Glances apprehensively at the clock.) They would think me gone clean dotty, having no one in the service. (Pause.) But I might have had the right to it—if only I had brought up Jack differently—I tried so hard! Oh, if only I knew where he is now! (She brushes away a tear and wraps up flag.) I did not know it was so late. I must change my dress before they come. Let me see—oh, I'll leave my knitting down here.

(She takes a half knitted sock from her shopping bag, lays it on table c., and goes out L., carrying package with her. Slight pause. Bell heard. After slight interval SUSIE goes through hall, L. to R. Door is heard to open.)

SUSIE (heard without). Come right in, ladies. Yes'm, Mrs. Reynolds is expectin' you. (Enter SUSIE up c., escorting MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR.) Shall I take your wraps, or will you step up-stairs?

MRS. K. No, thank you, Susie. I don't believe it is formal enough for that.

MRS. T. Just ourselves, Susie, to knit and gossip over news from the front.

MRS. K. (taking off her coat). I am going to take off my hat, too, it is so much more comfortable.

MRS. T. (following example). So shall I, though I don't know what my hair looks like.

(They give their coats and hats to SUSIE, who lays them on a chair, and exits. MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR enter parlor carrying large, handsome knitting bags. They both go to mirror over mantel-piece and arrange their hair.)

MRS. K. (seating herself in comfortable easy chair down R.). This room is always so comfortable and homelike. (Takes out her knitting.)

MRS. T. (seating herself in another large easy chair at R. of table, producing her knitting). Isn't it? And I could never understand what induced Jack to leave such a comfortable home, where his mother did everything for him.

MRS. K. (glancing toward door L. to make sure MRS. REYNOLDS is not coming). That is just the trouble. His mother did too much for him. Effie Reynolds spoiled that boy until he believed nothing on earth was good enough for him.

MRS. T. (also glancing toward door L. and pushing her chair a little closer to MRS. KEITH'S). I wonder if her "mothering" him so much did not have a good deal to do with it? He felt tied to her apron string—and so made a bolt.

MRS. K. May be so, but there must be something inherently bad in a boy to treat a mother as he has done his.

MRS. T. But only a stepmother, after all.

MRS. K. (hitching her chair a bit closer). Then he ought to have felt his obligations the more. They do say (confidentially) that he had taken to drink, and gambled——

MRS. T. (hitching her chair still closer and speaking softly). And worse! They tell dreadful tales about his doings in Alaska——

MRS. K. And his mother here at home, grieving her heart out because he has not volunteered. What were some of the things you heard? Were they as dreadful as Anne Pierson's story ——?

MRS. T. I was up at Mary Horton's yesterday, and Louise Abbot was there.

MRS. K. A genuine gossip, if ever there was one. A story never loses at her hands. What did she have to say?

MRS. T. Why, it seems that Henry Abbot had just got back from a Western trip and they told him in Denver that about a year ago Jack was ——

(Enter MRS. REYNOLDS, L., a little breathless and still carrying her package. She is wearing a simple house dress.)

MRS. R. How do you do, girls? I'm so sorry to have kept you waiting. I went down-town to do an errand and it took me longer than I expected. I —— (She shakes hands with each in turn, and discovers her package.) Oh, I did not mean to bring that down. I caught it up, thinking it was my knitting, but I remember I left that down here.

MRS. K. Yes, I saw it there on the table. How fast you knit, Effie.

MRS. T. (admiringly). You hold the record in town, you know.

MRS. R. (tucking the package away hastily in the centre table drawer and taking up her sock). I want to do my bit. (Seats herself L. of table.) It is not much, I know, at best, but I give all I have to give. (There is an awkward little pause. MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR glance consciously toward each other. MRS. REYNOLDS drops her knitting and falls into short reverie. As if to herself.) Have I given all I had to give? Was my bringing up entirely wrong, that he turned so away from love and duty? Ah me! (Comes to herself with a start, and turns to her guests, knitting rapidly, and speaking as if following her own line of thought.) After all, those lines of Tennyson's are rather selfish, don't you think? I mean!

“Of all sad words of tongue or pen
The saddest are these, ‘it might have been.’”

No cause was ever won by thinking of the might-have-beens, and I hope I shan't be that kind of a slacker. But there, I am growing dreadfully preachy. What is the news? Have you had any letters?

(Looks from one to the other.)

MRS. K. (eagerly). Yes, a letter from Will. I got it from the postman on our way here, and read it aloud to Harriet as we walked along. Would you like to read it?

(She rummages in her bag for a letter.)

MRS. T. And I had one from Irene. She finds her canteen work more absorbing every day. I think I have the letter with me. The postman gets to our house very early, you know, but I intended to put it in my bag.

(Searches in her knitting bag for letter.)

MRS. R. Then the foreign mail is in? I had hoped for a letter or two myself. I am “fairy godmother” to several “Tommies” and Belgians, you know. They write very amusingly—and very sadly too, sometimes.

MRS. K. I dare say their letters give a truer state of affairs than those from our own boys. They would write more frankly.

(Takes letter from her bag and hands it to MRS. REYNOLDS.)

MRS. R. (wistfully). Ah, but yours are from your own! (Takes letter and reads.)

MRS. T. (at last finding two letters in her bag). Here is Irene's letter—and one from Teddy at Camp Meade. I—— Hark, what is that?

(A faint sound of music is heard. SUSIE appears at the door up c., flushed and excited.)

SUSIE. Oh, ma'am, some of the boys is marching away! Go to the window, quick! You'll see 'em.

(MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR spring to their feet, dropping their knitting, and hurry to window R., MRS. REYNOLDS last.)

MRS. R. Open the front door, Susie, so we can hear the music better.

(Exit SUSIE; sound of music becomes louder, gradually dying away as band presumably passes. MRS. REYNOLDS joins MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR at window, R.)

MRS. K. (waving her handkerchief excitedly). There they go! Why, nobody said they were leaving to-day!

MRS. T. (waving hers). Nobody knows now when anybody's going until they go. (Peering out window.) There goes the butcher's boy. Mercy, who'll deliver our meat?

MRS. K. (peering out). And Tim Mark, the blacksmith's son —

MRS. T. And Swansen's head clerk —

MRS. K. And his bookkeeper —

MRS. T. And there goes —

(SUSIE appears at the door, sobbing.)

MRS. R. Why, Susie, what's the matter?

(She goes up c. to SUSIE. While they speak MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR listen partly to what she says, and partly devote their attention to waving out the window, now and then surreptitiously wiping away a tear.)

SUSIE (dramatically.) Oh, ma'am, the postman's gone! He's been an' gone an' enlisted, the black-guard, an' him over age! Whatever'll I do without 'im?

MRS. R. (coming away from window). Why,

Susie, I didn't know you were interested in the postman.

SUSIE. It wasn't fer me to be showin' my feelin's, ma'am, on my sleeve. But I always went to the door prompt when he rang. It was myself that twitted him about not enlistin' fer the ould counthry, and now he's gone an' done it. Oh, lack-a-me!

MRS. R. But you ought to feel proud, Susie, if you have been the means of pointing out his duty to him.

SUSIE. Proud, would ye call it—to send me dearie to his death? Oh, boo-hoo! But I was mistrustin' somethin' of the kind had happened when the other imperdent feller come this afternoon. Oh me, oh me! (Weeps.)

MRS. R. I am sorry for you, Susan, but it is the right thing, you know. You say the other postman came. Were there no letters for me?

SUSIE (drying her eyes). Sure, ma'am, lots, there on the table, ma'am. I thought I mentioned it when ye come in.

(MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR return to their chairs and pick up knitting, murmuring words of sympathy to SUSIE.)

MRS. R. (reseating herself L. of table). Bring us our tea now, Susie.

SUSIE. Yes, ma'am. The world must be goin' on, I s'pose.

(Exit SUSIE up c., blowing her nose.)

MRS. R. I am sure we shall all be glad of a cup of tea after that emotional scene. It must have brought back the day Will marched away, Alberta. Thank you for letting me see his letter.

(She hands back letter to MRS. KEITH and they exchange a smile of sympathy.)

MRS. T. (anxiously). I wonder when my Teddy will have to go? It seems only a couple of years since he was toddling around with me. Oh, dear!

MRS. K. (after slight pause). Did not Susie say you had some mail, Effie? Perhaps you have some interesting letters from abroad, after all.

MRS. R. Perhaps. But first we'll have tea and then I want to show you the socks and sweaters I have made for the Red Cross. They are to come for the package to-night. (Rising, MRS. REYNOLDS fetches a large package from a table at the back of the room, and opens it on table c., disclosing a goodly array of sweaters and socks. She takes two small packages from the heap and hands one to each MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR. Handing package to MRS. KEITH.) For Will. (Handing package to MRS. TAYLOR.) And for Teddy, Harriet. I love to do them, and hope they will each have their pair a month from me until they march home from Berlin.

(Enter SUSIE up c., red-eyed and catching her breath, after sobbing. She carries a laden tea tray which she sets on a low table or tabouret L. at MRS. REYNOLDS' side.)

SUSIE (severely, surveying tray). It appears to me there's a great sight of luxuries there, considerin' our boys that are starvin' in the trenches.

MRS. R. (smiling patiently, after scrutinizing tray). Only the "war dishes" I ordered, Susie. One can't let one's guests starve. (They all smile but SUSIE.) By the way, Susie, do you remember where you put my letters?

SUSIE. Right here, ma'am, on the big table. (She goes c. and looks.) Why, they're gone.

MRS. R. (pouring tea and passing cups). I may have pushed them back when I opened the package. Look under the sweaters, Susie.

(MRS. REYNOLDS pours tea, asks "How many lumps?" and "Won't you have corn bread?" and so forth, the others helping themselves, while SUSIE searches table, puzzled.)

SUSIE (at length). They was here. Mebbe you put 'em in the drawer, ma'am?

(She opens the table drawer. The parcel containing the service flag falls out and unrolls.)

MRS. K. } (together). Why, what is that? Whose
MRS. T. } is it?

(SUSIE picks up the flag and holds it out. MRS. REYNOLDS has had her back to table. She looks over her shoulder and catches sight of flag.)

MRS. R. Oh—why—I—the truth is I bought it—this afternoon, to—to give—to give to you, Susie, for the postman.

SUSIE. Sure, an' I've no right to it, ma'am. Yer just bein' charitable like, to make me feel better.

MRS. R. (insistently, taking the flag from SUSIE and holding it out to her again). But I want you to have it, Susie.

SUSIE (backing away, her hands behind her back). But ye couldn't 'a' meant it fer me, ma'am. Why, ye wasn't after knowin' until——

MRS. R. I must have had a psychological inspiration.

SUSIE (staring). A what, ma'am? No'm, I'm sure not—the postman never did anything of the sort, either in secret or public. Besides, ye see, I never accepted 'im. Thank ye kindly, just the same, ma'am. I'm sorry I can't find the letters. They was here.

(She turns again to the table.)

MRS. R. (hastily folding up the flag and thrusting it into her work-bag). Never mind the letters, Susie. I'll find them presently.

SUSIE. Very well, ma'am.

(Exit SUSIE. Ladies all drink tea.)

MRS. K. I think it very fine of the postman to volunteer, for he is over age.

MRS. T. But he is a bachelor, with nobody dependent on him.

MRS. K. Except—perhaps Susie?

MRS. R. I don't know why Susie never accepted him if he proposed. She is old enough to know her own mind. I think I shall give her a sweater and pair of socks to send to him. I can soon make others for the Red Cross. (She sets down her cup, rises and selects a sweater and pair of socks from the pile on table. Laying these aside she wraps up the package and in so doing, pushes aside the papers that hid her letters. Taking them up.) Why, here are my letters; quite a bunch of them. And a package. I wonder whom this can be from?

(She returns to her seat with the packet.)

MRS. T. It is from abroad. Perhaps one of your "god children" has sent you a souvenir.

MRS. K. Wouldn't that be interesting! The package is too big to be one of those rings they carve out of pieces of shell.

MRS. R. (studying package). It might be a souvenir. I have a letter from each of my soldiers. (Looks at packet more closely.) But the handwriting is different. Ah, here is another foreign letter, addressed in the same hand. I wonder whom it can be from?

MRS. K. Perhaps a friend of one of your protégés is writing?

MRS. T. But he would not be likely to send a present with the first letter. Suppose you open it, Effie.

MRS. R. Suppose I do. You are a regular "lady from Philadelphia," Harriet. (Laying the package on her knee, MRS. REYNOLDS slowly opens the letter, MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR looking on interestedly. MRS. REYNOLDS stares at letter, then turns it over to signature.) Why, it is from a perfect stranger—a Major Scott. Does either of you know him?

MRS. K. Never heard of him that I can remember.

MRS. T. Unless he was one of the men at the Tip-Top Inn last summer? You remember what a number of military people there were.

MRS. R. I don't remember meeting any one of that name. Anyhow, why should he write to me?

MRS. K. Perhaps he has something to do with the Red Cross, or Y. M. C. A., and is writing to thank you for all the wonderful knitting you have done.

MRS. R. (smiling and shaking her head). I am afraid such local fame as mine has never reached the high places. Let me see what he says. (She reads the letter aloud, and although her voice falters, and she pauses now and then, she never stops until the end. But during the reading her face takes on a change—becomes, as it were, glorified. Reading.)

"Mrs. John Reynolds:—Dear Madam,—Two nights ago I was sent for by an officer of the Foreign Legion. It seems that a man in his company—an American, bearing the name of Jack Reynolds, no address—had died from wounds received while performing an act of particular bravery. Before his death this man had sent for his officer, and asked him to communicate with you, at the address I use, and to forward to you a small packet that was in his kit, inscribed 'for mother.' I promised to give his last message, which the French officer had scribbled down at his dictation. It strikes me as a bit peculiar, and was naturally Greek to the Frenchman, but it may convey a meaning to you—unless the officer entirely misunderstood. The message, verbatim, reads:—'Tell her I may not have lived according to Hoyle, but I have died as she would have me.' Of course we know no mother would have her son die—but I dare say you understand and can supply such words as the Frenchman may have failed to put down. I can only add that the officers of the Legion were most enthusiastic in their praise of the valor and daring of Private Jack Reynolds, and the regiment mourns the loss of a beloved comrade. Trusting that the accompanying packet reaches you safely and in good condition, believe me, Sincerely and sympathetically yours, Francis Scott, Major 253rd Infantry A. E. F., France."

(She folds the letter and sits gazing in a rapt silence.)

MRS. T. (softly, putting away her knitting). How beautiful!

MRS. K. (following her example). How wonderful!

MRS. T. (rising). How happy you must be, Effie.

MRS. K. (rising). And how proud! He died a hero! (They both move toward door, up c.)

MRS. R. (solemnly). My poor boy is dead! (Pause.) But he died—fighting for his country! (MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR tiptoe into hall and put on their wraps. MRS. REYNOLDS does not seem to realize that they have gone. Repeating.) Fighting for his country! He knew that was how I would have him die, when the end had to come. (She sits motionless a moment longer. MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR, their wraps on, watch from doorway. SUSIE appears; they whisper to her and point to MRS. REYNOLDS. MRS. REYNOLDS slowly unwraps the packet and discloses a gold watch, a photograph case, a few letters, and another small packet, the three women watching her from the hall. MRS. REYNOLDS opens this packet and holds up a medal.) The Croix de Guerre! Oh, my boy, my precious boy!

(Reverently she lifts the medal to her lips. The three watchers furtively brush away tears. Then rising, still holding the medal, MRS. REYNOLDS takes the service flag out of her bag, and crossing to the window, she fastens it there. MRS. KEITH and MRS. TAYLOR exeunt, on tiptoe.)

SUSIE (fervently, dropping to her knees in doorway). Glory be to Heaven, ma'am, we're in it at last!

CURTAIN

Unusually Good Entertainments

Read One or More of These Before Deciding on
Your Next Program

GRADUATION DAY AT WOOD HILL SCHOOL.

An Entertainment in Two Acts, by WARD MACAULEY. For six males and four females, with several minor parts. Time of playing, two hours. Modern costumes. Simple interior scenes; may be presented in a hall without scenery. The unusual combination of a real "entertainment," including music, recitations, etc., with an interesting love story. The graduation exercises include short speeches, recitations, songs, funny interruptions, and a comical speech by a country school trustee. Price, 15 cents.

EXAMINATION DAY AT WOOD HILL SCHOOL.

An Entertainment in One Act, by WARD MACAULEY. Eight male and six female characters, with minor parts. Plays one hour. Scene, an easy interior, or may be given without scenery. Costumes, modern. Miss Marks, the teacher, refuses to marry a trustee, who threatens to discharge her. The examination includes recitations and songs, and brings out many funny answers to questions. At the close Robert Coleman, an old lover, claims the teacher. Very easy and very effective. Price, 15 cents.

BACK TO THE COUNTRY STORE.

A Rural Entertainment in Three Acts, by WARD MACAULEY. For four male and five female characters, with some supers. Time, two hours. Two scenes, both easy interiors. Can be played effectively without scenery. Costumes, modern. All the principal parts are sure hits. Quigley Higginbotham, known as "Quig," a clerk in a country store, aspires to be a great author or singer and decides to try his fortunes in New York. The last scene is in Quig's home. He returns a failure but is offered a partnership in the country store. He pops the question in the midst of a surprise party given in his honor. Easy to do and very funny. Price, 15 cents.

THE DISTRICT CONVENTION.

A Farcical Sketch in One Act, by FRANK DUMONT. For eleven males and one female, or twelve males. Any number of other parts or supernumeraries may be added. Plays forty-five minutes. No special scenery is required, and the costumes and properties are all easy. The play shows an uproarious political nominating convention. The climax comes when a woman's rights champion, captures the convention. There is a great chance to burlesque modern politics and to work in local gags. Every part will make a hit. Price, 15 cents.

SI SLOCUM'S COUNTRY STORE.

An Entertainment in One Act, by FRANK DUMONT. Eleven male and five female characters with supernumeraries. Several parts may be doubled. Plays one hour. Interior scene, or may be played without set scenery. Costumes, modern. The rehearsal for an entertainment in the village church gives plenty of opportunity for specialty work. A very jolly entertainment of the sort adapted to almost any place or occasion. Price, 15 cents.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY
PHILADELPHIA

Unusually Good Entertainments

Read One or More of These Before Deciding on
Your Next Program

A SURPRISE PARTY AT BRINKLEY'S. An Entertainment in One Scene, by WARD MACAULEY. Seven male and seven female characters. Interior scene, or may be given without scenery. Costumes, modern. Time, one hour. By the author of the popular successes, "Graduation Day at Wood Hill School," "Back to the Country Store," etc. The villagers have planned a birthday surprise party for Mary Brinkley, recently graduated from college. They all join in jolly games, songs, conundrums, etc., and Mary becomes engaged, which surprises the surprisers. The entertainment is a sure success. Price, 15 cents.

JONES VS. JINKS. A Mock Trial in One Act, by EDWARD MUMFORD. Fifteen male and six female characters, with supernumeraries if desired. May be played all male. Many of the parts (members of the jury, etc.) are small. Scene, a simple interior; may be played without scenery. Costumes, modern. Time of playing, one hour. This mock trial has many novel features, unusual characters and quick action. Nearly every character has a funny entrance and laughable lines. There are many rich parts, and fast fun throughout. Price, 15 cents.

THE SIGHT-SEEING CAR. A Comedy Sketch in One Act, by ERNEST M. GOULD. For seven males, two females, or may be all male. Parts may be doubled, with quick changes, so that four persons may play the sketch. Time, forty-five minutes. Simple street scene. Costumes, modern. The superintendent of a sight-seeing automobile engages two men to run the machine. A Jew, a farmer, a fat lady and other humorous characters give them all kinds of trouble. This is a regular gatling-gun stream of rollicking repartee. Price, 15 cents.

THE CASE OF SMYTHE VS. SMITH. An Original Mock Trial in One Act, by FRANK DUMONT. Eighteen males and two females, or may be all male. Plays about one hour. Scene, a county courtroom; requires no scenery; may be played in an ordinary hall. Costumes, modern. This entertainment is nearly perfect of its kind, and a sure success. It can be easily produced in any place or on any occasion, and provides almost any number of good parts. Price, 15 cents.

THE OLD MAIDS' ASSOCIATION. A Farcical Entertainment in One Act, by LOUISE LATHAM WILSON. For thirteen females and one male. The male part may be played by a female, and the number of characters increased to twenty or more. Time, forty minutes. The play requires neither scenery nor properties, and very little in the way of costumes. Can easily be prepared in one or two rehearsals. Price, 25 cents.

BARGAIN DAY AT BLOOMSTEIN'S. A Farcical Entertainment in One Act, by EDWARD MUMFORD. For five males and ten females, with supers. Interior scene. Costumes, modern. Time, thirty minutes. The characters and the situations which arise from their endeavors to buy and sell make rapid-fire fun from start to finish. Price, 15 cents.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY
PHILADELPHIA

Successful Plays for All Girls

In Selecting Your Next Play Do Not Overlook This List

YOUNG DOCTOR DEVINE. A Farce in Two Acts, by MRS. E. J. H. GOODFELLOW. One of the most popular plays for girls. For nine female characters. Time in playing, thirty minutes. Scenery, ordinary interior. Modern costumes. Girls in a boarding-school, learning that a young doctor is coming to vaccinate all the pupils, eagerly consult each other as to the manner of fascinating the physician. When the doctor appears upon the scene the pupils discover that the physician is a female practitioner. Price, 15 cents.

SISTER MASONS. A Burlesque in One Act, by FRANK DUMONT. For eleven females. Time, thirty minutes. Costumes, fantastic gowns, or dominoes. Scene, interior. A grand expose of Masonry. Some women profess to learn the secrets of a Masonic lodge by hearing their husbands talk in their sleep, and they institute a similar organization. Price, 15 cents.

A COMMANDING POSITION. A Farcical Entertainment, by AMELIA SANFORD. For seven female characters and ten or more other ladies and children. Time, one hour. Costumes, modern. Scenes, easy interiors and one street scene. Marian Young gets tired living with her aunt, Miss Skinflint. She decides to "attain a commanding position." Marian tries hospital nursing, college settlement work and school teaching, but decides to go back to housework. Price, 15 cents.

HOW A WOMAN KEEPS A SECRET. A Comedy in One Act, by FRANK DUMONT. For ten female characters. Time, half an hour. Scene, an easy interior. Costumes, modern. Mabel Sweetly has just become engaged to Harold, but it's "the deepest kind of a secret." Before announcing it they must win the approval of Harold's uncle, now in Europe, or lose a possible ten thousand a year. At a tea Mabel meets her dearest friend. Maude sees Mabel has a secret, she coaxes and Mabel tells her. But Maude lets out the secret in a few minutes to another friend and so the secret travels. Price, 15 cents.

THE OXFORD AFFAIR. A Comedy in Three Acts, by JOSEPHINE H. COBB and JENNIE E. PAINE. For eight female characters. Plays one hour and three-quarters. Scenes, interiors at a seaside hotel. Costumes, modern. The action of the play is located at a summer resort. Alice Graham, in order to chaperon herself, poses as a widow, and Miss Oxford first claims her as a sister-in-law, then denounces her. The onerous duties of Miss Oxford, who attempts to serve as chaperon to Miss Howe and Miss Ashton in the face of many obstacles, furnish an evening of rare enjoyment. Price 15 cents.

THE PENN PUBLISHING COMPANY
PHILADELPHIA

The Power of E

Expression and efficiency go hand in hand.

The power of clear and forceful expression brings confidence and poise at all times—in private gatherings, in public discussion, in society, in business.

It is an invaluable asset to any man or woman. It can often be turned into money, but it is always a real joy.

In learning to express thought, we learn to command thought itself, and thought is power. You can have this power if you will.

Whoever has the power of clear expression is always sure of himself.

The power of expression leads to:

- The ability to think "on your feet"
- Successful public speaking
- Effective recitals
- The mastery over other minds
- Social prominence
- Business success
- Efficiency in any undertaking

Are these things worth while?

They are all successfully taught at The National School of Elocution and Oratory, which during many years has developed this power in hundreds of men and women.

A catalogue giving full information as to how any of these accomplishments may be attained will be sent free on request.

THE NATIONAL SCHOOL OF ELOCUTION AND ORATORY

1714 De Lancey Street

Philadelphia