Third District—TRASIMOND LANDRY.
Fourth District—ALEXANDER MOUTON.

☞ PLACIDE BOISBLANC, having declined the nomination of elector of president and vice president, on account of his indisposition, the central republican committee have substituted general WALTER H. OVERTON in his place.

GOVERNOR.
J. B. DAWSON.

The prevailing epidemic, fatal to negroes, and plaguing to low fever, is still carrying on its work of destruction among us. Hitherto it appears to have been confined to that portion of the white population which is of irregular and intemperate habits and to the blacks. In no instance, we believe, has a white person of regular habits fallen a victim to it. Every case that could be traced to some imprudence of diet. There is, therefore, no occasion for alarm: a proper degree of prudence, as to clothing and diet, and a well placed trust in an all-wise providence, are the best preventives. Courage friends! Courage.

The interments yesterday, so far as we can ascertain them, were as follows:

Catholic cemetery	56
Protestant do.	44
	100
Dead, not buried, in the Charity Hospital,	13
	113

We cannot make room for the third letter of "ONE OF THE SCHOOL OF COLBERT," in this side of our paper to-day, without burdening our columns beyond what prudence would suggest, in such times as the present. It will be found in the French part to-day.

To morrow it will appear in the English. These letters come from a source that always commands attention.

The papers brought by yesterday's northern mail are from New York of the evening of the 26th instant; from Philadelphia of the 17th from Baltimore, and Washington of the 18th; and from Charleston of the 22d. They are quite barren of news.

FIRST WARD REPUBLICAN MEETING.

A meeting of the republican electors of the first ward of the city of New Orleans was held in pursuance of notice on Monday evening the 29th instant, at Chandon's House. Denis Prieur, esquire, was called to the chair; Sanuel Blanc and William Christy, esquires, were appointed vice presidents; and Janet R. Stewart, and Gaston Bayole, esquires, secretaries.

The object of the meeting having been stated from the chair, on motion of H. B. Cenas, esquire, it was resolved, that a committee of five be appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the meeting. The chair named Messrs. H. B. Cenas, Randal Carell, Henry Hattier, B. Z. Cavaroc and F. Durive, as members of that committee; who, after having retired for a short time, reported, through Mr. Cenas, as follows:

The republican electors of the first ward of the city of New Orleans, having attentively watched the measures of the national government since it was committed to the administration of Andrew Jackson, have observed no measure that was justly deserving of condemnation; on the contrary, they deem each and all to be worthy of approbation and they are, therefore, unable to discover the reasons that have induced the opposition of the most heterogeneous elements, into a combined opposition, embracing latitudinarians, and latitudinarists—masons, and anti-masons—close construction of the constitution, and latitudinarians—disunionists and free trade, and restrictionists—nullifiers, and anti-disunionists—the object of which is to wrest the reins of government from a president who is the choice of the people for the purpose of handing them to those of the needy tyro of ambition.

The republican electors of this ward cannot but feel that not the republican party, at the election of 1828, was in the prosperous condition than it ever was at that period? We see at peace with all the world, our commerce whitening every shore, and reaches every sea, and untied nations—our laws and our [illegible] are alive with the busy hum of successful industry—the useful and elegant arts flourishing—and the foreign articles and specialties of other nations rare to us—the true principles of republicanism are encouraged and exercised throughout our whole domain—and our domestic condition is one of peace and happiness, that excites at once the gratulation admiration of the inhabitants of the civilized world.

The republican electors, unable to discover any reasons that should induce or prompt the citizens of this republic to desire a change of the national administration, do

Resolve, That we have undiminished confidence in the wisdom and patriotism of Andrew Jackson; that we heartily approve the measures of his administration; and pledge our utmost exertions to secure the election of the republican electoral ticket.

Resolved, That we cordially approve of the nomination of Martin Van Buren to the vice presidency, by the Baltimore convention.

Resolved, That the best qualified politicians of the most opposite creeds for the purpose of defeating, a second time, the wishes of the people, by another election of Andrew Jackson to the national honors as representative of our principles as republicans, and adherent to our teachings as men.

Resolved, That to secure the success of our electoral ticket Messrs. [illegible] be added to the committee of vigilance for this ward, appointed at the general republican meeting held at Davis on the 6th instant.

The above preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted. It was then, on motion,

Resolved, That we return our thanks to the [illegible] vice presidents and secretaries, for their [illegible] ordered on this occasion, and to Mr. Richardson for [illegible] room.

Resolved, That these proceedings be published.

The meeting then adjourned.

D. PRIEUR, president.
WM. CHRISTY,
S. BLANC, vice presidents.
J. E. Stewart,
G. Bayole, secretaries.

At length that most perplexing of all riddles, the result of the Pennsylvania election is solved, beyond the possibility of doubt. Even the opposition presses "give signs of grief that all is lost". The Philadelphia United States Gazette, the ravier of Jackson, in former times, as it is now of Jackson—of the 16th instant, contains returns from all the counties of the state—not official, but received through private channels, and believed to be correct—according to which governor Wolf has received a majority of about 30,000. The list of official returns, of all those counties from which they have been obtained, and of the majorities reported in each third, which we copy, is from the Philadelphia Gazette, which carries the eagle and dragon flag at its mast-head. By those returns it will be seen, that governor Wolf, the democratic candidate, has been re-elected by a majority of 2,897. This should put even credulity itself to rest.

While on this subject, we cannot refrain from noticing one of the most impudent and unprincipled attempts to deceive the unwary, that has ever been played off by the party to whose interests the Argus is devoted. That paper of yesterday morning contains the "official returns" of the Pennsylvania election of 1832, compared with those of 1829. Its object to have been the shrewdy work" of the editor himself, since it is wholly unacknowledged: he, is therefore entitled to the honor of making "official returns" of an election in a distant state, for the miserable purpose of bamboozling up the desponding hopes of disparty, which he well knew the very next week must depress still lower than they were before. What [illegible] tricks last thou in store, Centocracy? Any more "Expresses"? Any more "official returns" of the Pennsylvania election in New Orleans, before they are known in Philadelphia? Go mend. Go mend!—Give us no more of your scurvey tricks upon travellers.

Of the result of the presidential election in that state, which floats rapidly upon the heels of the state election we have no fears. The democratic party there is well organized, and mustered by a fresh victory. Besides it should be remembered that in 1829, when gov Wolf received a majority of 30,000, general Jackson's was 51,000. Wolf's popularity has been diminished by local causes, while that of Jackson has increased among the yeomany of Pennsylvania. At all events, Wolf's election now by 2,000 or 3,000 majority assures a majority of 20,000 for the electoral ticket in November.

M. Rives, our minister in France, was to embark in the Sully on the first of October. He has done his country good service abroad, and will be cordially welcomed home again.

COMMUNICATED.

The seed heaped by one hood, is scattered by another—which only will remain in its place.

Dr. Johnson.

After four years of a wise and prudent administration, the ghost of elections wakes up again from his slumber, and attended by intrigue and party spirit, [illegible] makes his way through popular tempests, and a thousand impediments. Who is he who can command his progress, but our political Hercules, before whom the colossus has already bowed in obedience? Alcides is already ready for the contest, and relying on his well tried patriotism, and the equanimity of his character, without any weapon but the consciousness of his merit, nobly awaits the issue; but the feige upon which he would delight to appear with success, and already that of his glory is Orleans, the city of his soul. It is there that his impatient solicitude for his country, has burst in the bands of the 8th of January, this being but a preface to a more important work; that has been accomplished during four years of his administration. Is there an American who can be calls backwards, and throws aside prejudices, whose heart does not throb with gratitude for the spotless statesman, whose sole ambition is the welfare of his country? Nobe will that magnanimous people answer; despite of intrigues and factions, General Jackson will ever be the man of our choice—the day is still present to our hearts, when Britain, blinded by her spirit of conquest, poured on our shores her battalions on our shores—was there any who offered to guide our steps, and stifle in the hands of our enemies the flaming torch of war, but general Jackson? Jackson! the son of the forest, described by his enemies as a wild savage, a rash and quixotic soldier, but indeed a Roman as a Fabius in the field, looking [illegible] for the pomp of war and glory than the salvation of his country, and humanely triumphing over his foes, when a laurel drenched in blood would have been reluctant to his brow. Did he not this for his country? yet this is the man pursued by calumny as a cruel and sanguinary tyrant, to borrow the language of the immortal Montesquieu, "those that are always in quest of evil instead of good, and endeavouring to cast a bad fame on the actions of others, are like vultures that fly from living bodies to corpses and carcasses."

Is it not evident to the world that at the first signal of the blazing star of that hero, the bold children of the South, trapped in their lines, would have rushed like a torrent and swept the barriers that had only been erected by prudence against an enemy, our superior in number and discipline? Blood and destruction, must have then followed; ambition would have been glutted, but tears and repentance would have dampt the triumph of the victor—yet how shameful to tell! there are in this city men so blinded by hatred as not to allow any praise to that chief; and whose minds are so narrow, and hearts so debased as to charge him with the deficiency and wickedness that are only peculiar to themselves—but the hero smiles at, such calumnies: retired in Washington amidst that brilliant constellation of talents, the pride of America, he shines like the rainbow after the tempest, and chases a few dispelling clouds still roll ng over his head. Amongst the many ridiculous charges made against general Jackson, we must notice the bombastic exclamation of aman possessed of more vanity than talent, who spontaneously exclaims in the most laughable strain, that on his scutcheon appears not the sword of power, but the hewing axe, before which down the trees of the forest, the chisel, the plane, and other instruments by which they are wrought into the shape of civilized man; the trowel that cements the [illegible] hearth, the vessel that bears from clime to clime the produce of the land and of industry, &c. &c. What pomp of words! as it arts and sciences, commerce, and all the blessings that spring from civilisation, were not flourishing under the administration of general Jackson. We Jacksonians, also, bear these ensigns on our shield, and to protect them, we have the sword, "powerful only to our enemies in the field, talents and wisdom in council."

Fellow citizens, the time is now approaching when the debt of gratitude must be paid to the well tried statesman we support. Let us crowd to the polls, for his re-election may prove our best answer to his enemies, and teach them that in our fair republic, there is a long distance from the capitol to the Tarpean rock.

A CREOLE.

FROM THE NEW ORLEANS BEE

OUR LIGHT AND OUR PROSPECT.

NEW-ORLEANS, Oct. 29, 1832.

LETTER—NO. XIII.

To the right trusty friend, Mr. President Biddle:—

Where be your gibes now? Your [illegible] Your songs? Your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table in order?—Hamlet's reflections on a brick in earth.

I [illegible] am in a thood of condolence with the great of my fellow mortals, as much disposed as the prince Hamlet to exclaim "Alas poor Yorick!" One half of our civil constitution consists in sympathy. I "rejoice with those that do rejoice, and weep with those that weep." I commiserate those who are depressed with sorrow anywhere, but especially with those around me. Death is every where. The black-plumed hearse unceasingly rolls along our saddened streets, as it were (as it is) the leader in the triumph procession of death. But I turn from the scene of sadness, not from cowardice, but from principle.

We are, as I hinted, in Pharaoh case. Another enemy "like that among the mechanical and mercantile vermin in Philadelphia, will leave our vaults without [illegible] capacity and [illegible] about [illegible] at large, we are ruined. We cannot be [illegible]. The report of tendered [illegible] will blacken us every where worse than colliers, [illegible] spots.

I sympathise with the sufferers in Louisiana by our inordinate contraction of discounts at the office here. Slaves are mainly ruled by terror; freemen revolt at it. Complaisance, equity, accommodation, and justice, preponderate with them. They complain, that they are screwed up in our vice, like those persecuted beings, who were subjected to the "moral-mending" application of the horrid [illegible] in England during the reigns both of Elizabeth and Mary, those sanguinary "she-bears," the genuine daughters, of a brutal sire, Henry the VIII. They inflicted torments for opinion's sake: and we are impeached for doing the same thing. You cannot hardly conceive how this new species of proscription operates against the bank party here. Those on the hateful list of curtailment say, "if all the planters and merchants of Louisiana have committed high treason against their liege lords of the United States Bank, it would be better to decimate them at once,—make scapegoats of the tithe of us, put the decimated to death, and then let the nine tenths abide unmolested."

Note well the bitterness, in these oppressions, of men abhorrent of compulsion, and raging for revenge, like the lion for his prey. Who, before, ever scanned a gaining votes by putting the voters in ill humour? Persuasion and blandness alone can conciliate these proud, touchy and Frenchified spirits. They look on themselves as the lawful lords of the soil; because they are the descendants of the original French settlers of the colony. They naturally hold in veneration the names of the unfortunate La Salle, the fortunate Bienville, Iberville, and even Galvez, who led their progenitors to battle and to glory. This blood has a spice of chivalry in it. You may encounter a scoundrel among them here and there, but very rarely. The population in general hate not imbibed the sordid principle that governs wholly to a narrow self interest. I fear their whole weight will be cast into the anti-bank scale on Monday next.

Those who do not dislike Clay, admire Jackson, because they regard him as their old comrade in the campaign that covered them with honor, and saved the city and the state.

Another thing I must repeat; they contemn anti-masonry, and are alarmed at the false and shocking reports of bank-bribery. One of these yesterday, drew a noble answer from a friend who advised him to cross the lake to avoid the cholera, and leave elections to those who made a trade of politics! "No!" said he, nobly; "the whole of government must step if citizens were so degenerate as not to vote. A man can die but once, and it is the sweetest of all deaths to enter the next world in performing our duty in this." If such sentiments are infectious, you may learn the return of the Louisiana election before-hand!

Q.

Walter Scott has not described the horrors of the [illegible] in one of his novels.

DIED—This evening, at 5 o'clock, Mrs. Elizabeth Kuntz, consort of Mr. Le Coutour, of Charleston. Her friends and acquaintances are invited to attend her funeral, which will take place to-day, at 11 o'clock, from No. 7, Gravier street. By the invitation of her son-in-law Pre. Guidard. Mias Languette.

We have been authorized to offer the following bets;—to wit:

$1000 that JACKSON will have the majority in the state.
$200 that he will have 100 votes majority.
$200 " " 200 " "
$200 " " 300 " "
$200 " " 400 " "
$200 " " 500 " "
$200 " " 600 " "
$200 " " 700 " "

AND AGAIN $5500 That he will have the majority in the Parish of Orleans.

To the Editor of the Bee.

SIR,—Notwithstanding the loud and lengthy paeans of triumph sung forth over the wealth, talents and respectability, id est, the whiggery, Col. Boyd, &c. on a recent local [illegible] as they call it in Pennsylvania, I propose to any of the faction to bet ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS that the vote of that State will be given to the OLD HERO.

CASH DOWN.

N. B. The money will be forthcoming on application to the Editor of the Bee.

To the Editor of the New-Orleans Bee.

The Anti-Masonic Clay men have exulted and crowed without bounds on the result of the ward elections in the city of Philadelphia. All the Greeks don't live in Corinth. Philadelphia is not Pennsylvania—and to back this my opinion, I offer to bet SIX HUNDRED DOLLARS that the electoral votes of Pennsylvania will be given to ANDREW JACKSON. The money to be deposited in the hands of any gentleman who is agreeable to both parties.

A YANKEE.

P. S. The money will be forth coming on application at the office of the Bee.

TO THE PUBLIC.

DOCTOR BINAGHI, who was on the point of departure for Mexico, having been solicited by several of his friends, both in private and professional life, to defer his departure in order to devote his services to those who may be attacked by the ASIATIC CHOLERA, which is said to have found its way into Louisiana, informs the public that he may be consulted on the subject of that or any other disease, at No. 120 Bourbon street. The destitution of patients, when inability shall have been made evident by the certificates of his honor the Mayor, or the Aldermen of the city, will be taken into consideration.

N. B. Dr. Binaghi offers to the public the anti-cholerie potion, known under the name of "Kyela Kyroda," from the name of an old Lithuanian lady, who was its first inventor, and which has since been improved. It is a mere preservative, though has never failed in efficacity, in Poland, France and New York, whenever the diet which is prescribed in the directions, has been strictly observed. Dr. B. would advise keeping indoors as much as possible, especially before sunrise and after sunset—when northerly and north-easterly winds prevail. But as a specific, the KIELSKYWODA has never failed to check, and has frequently destroyed the first symptoms of the disease, such as vomiting, diarrhœa, cramps &c. A patient suddenly taken with the cholera in a spot, or at an hour, when immediate medical assistance could not be procured, may take a double dose, that is two spoonfuls of the potion, every half hour, until a perspiration takes place. The whole surface of the body, must, at the same time, be powerfully embrocated with dry flannel, together with the application of hot ashes on the soles of the feet—an immersion of the hands in warm water, as high up as [illegible] from time to time, hot tea. The best is continually carry about ourself a phial of this preservative, in case of an attack from home, has saved many a person's life. No purgatives or letting of blood. The inferior treatment of the disease will depend on the notions which the physician may have acquired of science in general, combined with a practical knowledge of the disease, and the remedies, the efficacity of which shall have been proven by experience, on the score of the years, constitution, sex and habits of the patient, and still more of the violence, which the cholera may have displayed in its first attacks.

Dr. B. having frequently been called during the nigh, to see, not the patients, but the dying and the dead, takes the liberty of informing the public, that he will not interfere where other professors shall have been called before him.

☞ The bottles containing the anti cholerie, drink, and bearing his seal and signature, the directions for use, as a mere preservative, and the diet necessary to be kept, in order to ensure success, may be had at his lodgings, at $8 for the large bottles, and $4 for the small ones. All communication, on this subject, which may be forwarded from the country, must be post paid.
