A CONJUROR'S FEATS.
 BY BRANDER MATTHEWS

The French have had as much trouble with the Arabs of Algeria as we have had with the Indians in the far west. There are frequent insurrections and revolts, and there is a constant skirmishing and long truces, and there is a constant alternation of peace and war. Every year, in the fall, there are feasts and entertainments at Algiers, to which all the leading Arab chiefs are invited. Among the Arabs the marabout, or native magician, has great influence—greater than that exercised by the medicine-men of our Indians. It was to dispel the influence of the marabouts that the French authorities invited Robert-Houdin to go over to Algiers and to perform his marvellous feats, the pretty tricks of the marabout being too inferior to the French magician's. He was to go to Algiers and to perform his marvellous feats, the pretty tricks of the marabout being too inferior to the French magician's.

TO LET.
 A few desirable tenements at reasonable rates.

LADIES DEPARTMENT.
 There are many styles of hosiery... One of the most novel is a Philadelphia idea. A spherical cushion was put, perforated with openings, and filled with chopped moss, and is the basis of the new hosiery.

Can We Have Them?
 The latest fancy of young ladies in New York is to carry a cat along. I say carry, for no self-respecting cat will permit itself to be led. Common tables are not much sought after, and black cats are occasionally seen.

A Watch in a Ring.
 A seal ring is the latest thing in room of the seal is the latest thing in jewelry. The timekeeper is a marvel of delicate workmanship, and really a triumph of the jeweler's art.

Another Slam on the Boarder.
 Barter to landlady!—Yes, Mr. Phipps, I like you, have lived on your farm. In fact I owned a stock farm some years ago and the hogs I raised are still talked of as the best.

The Reason Why.
 Jones—Fish are spoken of as the farmer's herald, and the fisherman as the fisherman's herald.

It is said that cannibals will not eat a man who has used tobacco.

HARDWARE.
I would call attention of the public and mechanics to the fact that I have just added to my stock a line of Hardware for which I would solicit a share of your patronage.

WOODEN-WARE.
Rolling Pins, Trays, Flour and Coal Sieves, Wash Boards and Benches, Ironing and Cake Boards, Saws, Saw Horses and Clothes Horses, Brooms, with most beautiful brooms, Brushes, Window and Floor Brushes, Carpet Sweepers, Indurated, Paper and Stable Pails, Tubs, Baskets, Window and Door Screens, &c.

SEEDS.
They say that it is the early bird that catches the worm, and so it is he who gets the best early vegetables who takes the cream of the market, and sets the best table at home. Such being the case, see to it that you procure the Best and Freshest Seeds, of which I have just received a great variety.

GUANOS.
STANDARD,
FLAMINGO,
BAY STATE and CUMBERLAND.

These I have always kept, have given universal satisfaction, therefore make no change.

Farming Tools.
In which I am continually increasing my assortment, including the following, which are job lots, bought and sold for no fault, but are bona fide bargains:
1 lot of Full Polished 7-13 inch Hoes, at 10 cents each.
1 lot Full Polished, Four Tined Manure Forks at 50 cents each.
1 lot All Steel Shovels at 45 cents each, 1 lot No. 1, Two Bowled, Bent Handle, Hay Hoes, at 20 cents each.

Also the celebrated India Steel Scythe, which has no equal, Philadelphia Lawn Mowers, Lawn Sprinklers, Hoes and Reels, Wheelbarrows, &c.

FURNITURE.
I am better prepared this season than ever to control this increasing branch of my business and shall keep every assortment, and be ready at any time to meet the wants of my customers.
My stock comprises Chairs (Kitchen and Dining), Rockers in Wood and Rattan, Children's Chairs and Office Stools, Lounges, Tables, Bedsteads, Chamber Sets, Springs, Pillows, Commodities, Looking Glasses, Bureaus, Mattresses, &c.
A good Excelsior Mattress for $2. Feathers, Husk and Excelsior, constantly on hand.

The Crosby Invalid Bedstead.
The simplest and best constructed bed for comfort and ease in the market.
For sale or to rent. Call and see it.

We would not lead the public to think that we have a C. D. Cobb Grocery, a Paine's Furniture establishment, or a large Agricultural warehouse; but what advantages we have we propose to make the best of, and anyone who chooses to call will be given an entire satisfaction in pleasure taken in showing our stock.

The Lost Child.
I've lost a child—O, tell me, did you meet My little darling in the sunny street,
With wild blue hair, bright eyes and flying feet?

Libs swift winged bird!
"How large was she? Why, just a tiny thing."
"A mere short time since I used to sing,
Low, sleepy songs, and feel her soft arms cling."

About my neck.
"How old is she? Why, really I forgot;
Just old enough to love and kiss and pet,
Only a merry little maid, and yet,
Not quite a child."

It seems but yesterday I saw her go,
Leading her playmates in a laughing row;
If you had met her you would surely know
Her smiling face.

You thought her older, more than twelve,
You say!
That cannot be until another May
Opens the buds and brings the happy day
That gave her life.

"Is that the child? Almost a woman grown
She holds her girlish head high as you crown,
Some one will find her though she goes alone;
You need not fear."

I know she's tall and care no more for toys—
That's Harry with her making all this noise;
Why don't you go and play with other boys,
I'd like to know!

'Tis five years since her twelfth birthday
Was given,
With tender lessons, and all the month before,
Have slipped away till she is seventeen—
The child is lost!

—(Louis Hill in Wide Awake.)

His Chance Acquaintance.
"Please let me assist you!"
There was no response to my request,
But I know that in this case silence gave consent.

The words were addressed to a prepossessing young woman as I was about to get aboard a west bound train at Binghamton one morning. Her satchel had slipped from her hand while she was waiting to be helped up the car steps by the attending porter. His overcrowded condition caused its clasp to give way and out rolled a half dozen articles, combs, brush, drinking cup and such things as ladies invariably carry with them when traveling, and which no unmarried man will attempt to remember.

She scrambled after the things herself, and I did my share in a race after a round box of tooth powder that rolled along the platform like a steam unicycle. It did not get away, however, and I got back with it in time to pick up a gilt-edged volume of Whittier, which, with the somewhat soiled book of toilet polishes, I presented to the fair lady with my most graceful bow. Of course she said, "Thank you." I can see her now—a handsome brunette, in plain but tasteful attire. She did not shoot me with that cold, heartless, abbreviated and expressionless expression, "Thanks!" Her reward was a modest look of the eyes, a faint blush on the cheeks, and in a sweet voice, "Thank you."

She packed the riotous articles back into her satchel, and I relieved the small hands that endeavored to bring the two sides together, grappling the bag with sufficient muscle to close it and fasten the clasps firmly.

"Won't you let me carry it into the car for you? It is very heavy."
There was another modest look, bluish "Thank you." When does a man feel happier than when contributing to the comfort of an appreciative woman! If it is right in his way to be of assistance, and the woman is young and more than ordinarily attractive, so much the happier is he. Have you not seen a man carry a woman's weighty satchel a half dozen times, and then, when he has his own expressman would have received a quarter for the service? There is a deal of importance in the ownership of a satchel. The bag in my hand seemed as light as a toy balloon, but now in my thoughtful moments I am sure that there were in it several changes of attire in addition to the traveling outfit already mentioned.

I confess that I was pleased to find the car well occupied and only one seat entirely vacant. The experiences had made acquaintance easy, and after giving her the place next to the window and depositing the bulky satchel at her feet, I made inquiry if I would be intruding if I took the remainder of the seat.

"Oh, no, sir. I am all alone. I shall not need it at all. My husband has been very kind."
"How beautiful the September mornings are!" I said by way of opening a conversation.

"Aren't they lovely! After the sun has swept away the fog the Susquehanna valley is as picturesque as any I could wish to find. I do dislike fog, I think when I have a place where there are no fogs I shall engage a building lot. How far is it from Elmira to Buffalo?" she asked.

"A hundred and forty-six miles," I replied with the celerity of a schoolboy who had learned it in his lesson. "Are you going so far?"
"Yes," she replied, "I am going to visit a friend. And you?"
"To Buffalo also. Do you think you can endure my company for so long a distance?"
"Oh, yes, but do you not think young ladies are stupid traveling companions?" I expressed myself much hurt by the insinuation that such a thought had ever entered my mind. I talked till my throat became dry, then rested and repeated the experience. In the course of the conversation she had gathered the names of my ancestors as far back as the third and fourth generations undoubtably, and I had not been wanting in respectful inquisitiveness concerning her own home and family. I learned from her modest and fascinating lips that her home was in Middletown, and that she was the daughter of an old resident of the place who had been a banker. Having amassed a satisfactory fortune, he had retired from active business life, living with his family in a spacious old-fashioned house on one of the principal streets of the village.

We ate together with the familiarity of brother and sister the luncheon I had procured during the five-minute stop at Bath. The refined manners and unusual knowledge of the country possessed by the young lady impressed me. I had looked many times into her dark and lovely eyes, and if any one had told me they were not honest ones I should have laughed at his idiosyncrasy. We are all physiognomists, but there are people whom we meet closely and forget to study or criticize. The refined physiognomist would have been baffled in this case, I think. If anything in her appearance had mystified me, her ready conversation and frank manners dispelled unfavorable thoughts. Sometimes she had spoken with slight hesitation, but seemingly it was for a choice of words rather than of thought. A young woman, with a taste for the refined Whittier, who talked knowingly of poetry and poets, and was familiar with the events of the day—who would have suspected that there were two sides to her life!

A sheep that hid his head fast in the fence and a boy whose laboring with the hoe of heavy stone were objects of sympathy as the train whirled by them, and her heart went out toward the poor people that were compelled to live in the mud-surrounded and uncomfortable looking dwellings in the eastern suburbs of Buffalo. Her name she gave me on a delicate card—Ella Thorpe. Of course I reciprocated and presented her both my name and address.

In the city after a six-hour ride, I helped her to a street car, and at Niagara street reluctantly left her to walk to the next office, promising to call on her the next day if time would possibly allow.

"Hello, Sam," shouted my friend, Detective Langstaff, next morning as he came across the street to walk down town with me. "Have you got your watch with you yet?"
"I guess so (feeling for left vest pocket). Why?"
"Well, you ran a rather big risk yesterday with that pretty girl I saw get off the train with you?"

"How so?"
"What didn't you know her? I thought perhaps she was a client of yours. That was Sally Fitz Williams, the shopkeeper and jewelry thief of Baltimore. I'll bet that the satchel you carried for her contained some of her 'earnings.'"

"Aren't you mistaken about that?"
"I may be mistaken about the satchel's contents, but not about the girl. Come over to my office and I'll show you her photograph. She knows better than to try to fool Buffalo, but she keeps an eye on her white skin is here. She usually works large villages in the country."

I was thunderstruck, but concluded to keep my counsel. I was positive that she was another modest look, bluish "Thank you." When does a man feel happier than when contributing to the comfort of an appreciative woman! If it is right in his way to be of assistance, and the woman is young and more than ordinarily attractive, so much the happier is he. FOR FARM AND GARDEN.

Crops for an Orchard.
As a rule, an orchard should not be cropped, but if it is in vigorous condition and making such wood, it may be benefited to it to be cropped occasionally. The best crops are those that are cultivated, potatoes being the best; peas, beans and clover are desirable, but grain crops are not. Care is to be taken not to break the surface roots by deep plowing near the trees, by which the growth of suckers is encouraged. When an orchard is not thrifty manuring and plowing and seeding with clover, leaving the clover to fall on the ground, are very beneficial.—[New York Times.

Corn Meal For Cattle.
In his experiment in feeding cattle, at the Kansas college farm, Prof. Shelton says: "A considerable general experience in the use of corn and cob meal, in fact, no good, sometimes gives of neat cattle has greatly strengthened, not only the writer, but those having the practical management of the herd, in the conviction of the superior value of corn and cob meal. The corn and cob meal was, apparently at least, better digested than was clear corn alone when given; the cattle were 'off their feed' less often; while cases of diarrhoea caused by over-feeding—all too common when corn meal was used—were practically unknown when the grain feed was the ground ear corn."

Caring Balking Horses.
Balky horses are as obstinate as a mule. In fact where mules are bred large numbers of horses not related to them take considerably of the mule's temper. It is no good to whip them for balking. Whipping may cure other faults, but never that. Distract the attention of the horse as much as possible from what you are doing. There are many ways of doing this. If the horse can be made to forget that you and he are in a contest he will do your will. Putting dirt in his mouth or fine gravel in his ears will sometimes get the horse to thinking about his own discomfort so that he will start. We believe there is no permanent cure for balking. A man used to such a horse can get some work out of him by never overloading him and always avoiding places or work where balking has previously occurred.—[Cultivator.

Salt for Cattle.
This is a rule that is generally observed, but the reason for it is not so well understood, except that it makes stock healthy, writes Mr. C. F. Clark. But why does it make them healthy? Rich food, especially that of a succulent character, when taken in small or large quantities, by the warmth of the stomach is frequently caused to ferment before digestion takes place. This fermentation causes derangements, sour the food, generates gas, blood, acids, etc. A proper amount of salt prevents the food from fermenting, and acting with the saliva or pepsin, aids in rapid digestion. While too much salt acts as a poison and inflames the stomach and bowels, especially if too much water is not allowed, a proper amount given frequently checks a tendency to acidity and fermentation in the stomach, and allows the digestive organs full, free, and early action. Salt also divests the animals of worms, and the infinitesimal animalcules which scientists now claim to be the cause of nearly all diseases, and referred to the young of man. I did not tell him that I had lost three $10 bills that were folded together in my left vest pocket, and which I supposed, I had pulled out accidentally with my watch on the day that I rode from Binghamton to Buffalo with the coy damsel. I walked with the detective to his office, and there, sure enough, in the toughest possible company, was the very fact that I had been so enchanted with.

What did you say about studying physiology? I have never seen my fair friend since, nor am I anxious to meet her.—[Inter-Ocean.

Child's Victory.
A child was more fond of candy than her mother thought good for her. What was thought a proper share was doted out to her one day, and the rest put away on the high shelf of a cupboard beyond the child's reach. Her mother cautioned her not to attempt reaching it, then left the room.

Returning after a while, she looked into the room, standing where the child could not see her, and surveyed the scene. There stood the child, her feet on the first shelf, to which she had climbed by aid of a chair, and her hand grasping the candy, which she had reached as her mother's back was turned for a moment, the little face bent in earnest thought. Suddenly the candy fell from her lips and into the bag again as the child leaped from the shelf on to the chair and thence to the floor, where she struck an attitude and shouted exultantly: "There, God! I didn't eat it after all!"—[Boston Record.

Bearing Calves Without Milk.
It is not a difficult matter to rear calves without milk, as it is easy to prepare an equally nutritious and digestible substitute. The difficulty in rearing calves in this way is that the animals are overfed, and instead of having three or four parts of food, of which nine-tenths is water and only one-tenth solids, they are given two or three times as much solids as they can digest. An excellent food is made as follows: A few pounds of flour are wrapped in a cloth and put in and then boiled several hours. This long boiling changes the starch to some extent to gum and sugar. When the mass is cooled it is grated and four ounces of it is boiled to a gruel with two quarts of water, adding one quart of well-bolus infusion of old-process linseed meal or fine pea meal. A tablespoonful of molasses is added to the mixture and a half a teaspoonful of salt; when it is cooled to 80 deg. it is fed to the calf instead of milk. This ration is given twice a day to a calf four weeks old. If the calf is secured the ration is reduced. The food may be prepared in the shape of meal ready for boiling by mixing fifty pounds of corn-meal, fifty pounds of shorts, 100 pounds of process linseed meal, half pound of salt, and twenty pounds of brown sugar; one quart of this boiled in three quarts of water two or three hours, and then strained, and the liquid is cooled to 80 deg. before it is fed.—[New York Times.

Form and Garden Notes.
Secure pure water for home use. Plant both useful and ornamental trees, and do it early. Trim out the dead wood in currant and gooseberry bushes.

The vitality of old seeds should be tested before planting or sowing. The richest clover hay is the second growth, made when the weather is hot, and the plant is obliged to reach down into the subsoil for moisture.

Stagnant water on the farm is the hobnob of disease, and annually will cause ten times the loss equal to an amount appropriated for draining it off.

As a rule those crops pay best that require the most care and attention. The brains and the labor are what sell in the market in the shape of the crop.

The most economical mode of using the butter milk is to give it to the young pigs and also to the laying hens, as it promotes growth of both and assists in the production of eggs.

The best soil for the strawberry is a deep, strong loam, with an impervious, hard pan subsoil. This land should be an old field that will grow three-fourths of a ton of hay to the acre and should be planted to corn the first year.

When the udder of the cow becomes hard a prolonged bathing with warm water is the best remedy. The cow should be treated daily until relief be given.

Tar paper is one of the best materials known for lining poultry houses, as the fumes will prevent the entrance of lice as well as the cold air in winter. A granary lined with tar paper will not be infested with grain weevils, and one lined with felt may be considered as rat and mice proof.

By tying a small cork to one leg, allowing it to dangle at a distance of about six inches, a Maine poultry fancier is said to succeed in keeping her chickens at home. "The fowl can scratch and get about with ease, but will not attempt to fly over palings or squeeze through a crack."

There is no fixed ratio of grain in stock; in all experiments that have been made it has been demonstrated that when fed with animals of the same age and breed, fed alike, and given equal advantages, each individual differed from the others in the weight gained during the same period of time.

Rotation of crops baffles, in a measure, the root enemies, both insect and fungus, that prey upon them. Each plant has its own peculiar enemies, and changing the plants removes them to fields unoccupied by such enemies. This is true of the enemies of the above-ground growth of plants to an important degree.

It is best to feed cows all the corn meal and wheat bran they will bear? was one of the many questions found in the question box at the Connecticut State board meeting. Mr. Secretary Gold replied, "Yes, up to the point where the cow begins to be injured by the food offered. He once tried to feed a cow by increasing her allowance of corn meal, but found that particular cow was a milk machine, rather than a beef producer, and the more meal she ate the more milk she gave. Animals can never be fed by set rules, except such rules as the intelligent and watchful attendant makes for each animal from day to day.

Crows and Ants of India.
Crows in India are as gentle as sparrows with us, writes ex-Major Harrison to the Chicago Mail. Indeed, much more so. I saw one in Calcutta taking its meal from a quarter of beef which a butcher had on his head, and several times I have seen them steal food from a man's hand when he was eating before his door. They come within five or six feet of the natives at every railway station, but eye very suspiciously a foreigner, and can hardly be tempted with crumbs nearer than ten feet or so. There are vast numbers of them in every part of the land. In Burmah they are black; here they have a mouse-colored neck, and look as if they were a crow. A native burts nothing if he can help it. Ants are the terrible pest of the land. The white ant eats up the houses and destroys the trees, yet I have seen more than one native carefully step soiling to crush these little workers traveling from their nests to a neighboring tree. The Hindus, like the Buddhists, believe in transmigration of souls. From all I can learn I am convinced that though Buddhism exists to only a small extent at the present time in India proper, yet when it did exist it made its teaching take a large hold upon the Brahminical religion, and has left its traces throughout the land, and has very greatly softened the cruel nature of the older and more dominant religion.

The Old Clock.
"Oh! the old, old clock, of the household stock,
Was the brightest thing and mostest;
Its hands, though old, had a touch of gold,
And its chime rang still the sweetest."
'Twas a monitor, too, though its words were few,
Yet they live, though nations altered;
And its voice, still strong, warmed old and young
When the voice of friendship faltered;
'Tick! tick!' it said—'quick, quick to bed,
For ten I've given a warning;
Up! up! and go, or else you know
You'll never rise soon in the morning!'"

"A friendly voice was that old, old clock,
As it stood in the corner smiling,
And blessed the time with a merry chime,
The wintry hours beguiling;
But a cross old voice was that tireless clock,
As it called at daybreak loudly,
When the dawn looked gray over the misty way.

And the early air blew coldly:
'Tick! tick!' it said—'quick out of bed,
For five I've given warning;
You'll never have health, you'll never have wealth,
Unless you're up soon in the morning!'"

"Still hourly the sound goes round and round
With a tone that ceases never;
While hours are about for bright days fled,
And the old friends lost forever!
Its heart beats on—though hearts are gone,
Its hands still move—though hands we love
Are clasped on earth no longer!
'Tick! tick!' it said—'to the churchyard bed,
The grave hath given warning;
Up! up! and rise, or look at the skies,
And prepare for a heavenly morning!'"

The reason why Englishmen are red-faced is due to the fact that the sun never sets on the British empire, and the Briton never gets a chance to remove the tan.

Indians of British Columbia.
The stranger who first visits Victoria, the capital of British Columbia, is struck by the great number of Indians who live in the city. They wear the dress of the European style. The men work on the wharves and steamers, as fish and skins, or are occupied in different trades, particularly as carpenters. The suburbs of Victoria are almost exclusively inhabited by Indians. There they live in miserable, filthy shanties and sheds, or even in this canvas tents. The city has about thirteen thousand inhabitants, and of these about two thousand are Indians who stay there over summer. Besides these, about three thousand Chinese, many Sandwich Islanders, a few negroes, and a white population coming from all parts of Europe and America, live in the city. The internationality of the population and its easy going ways give it a peculiar character.—[Popular Science Monthly.

Iron and Stone Houses.
There is nothing so marked in the most elegant quarters during the past year as the prominence given to stone and iron, says the Philadelphia Times. The use of wrought iron for doors, showing the vestibule through glass windows, has become so general that hundreds of householders have either had new doors made introducing it, or had panels taken out of their front doors, and iron work inserted. So with windows. Not only are ornamental iron grilles upon cellar windows a feature in new houses, but regular barred upper windows, such as seen in old Spanish houses, have begun to make their appearance, and are quite in keeping with the present material tendencies of domestic architecture.

Something the Public Should Know.

The articles, anonymous and otherwise, appearing from time to time in the newspapers, making unfavorable reference to Cleveland's baking powder, are from a rival baking powder company.

These articles are intended to confer, if possible, the letter to the public from General Horst, late Ohio's fair and Food Commissioner, in which he states that the Ohio Commission's investigation of the baking powder, based upon the State chemist's analyses of thirty different brands, proves that Cleveland's is strictly pure cream of tartar baking powder, entirely free from alum, ammonia, lime, etc., and that it is also entirely the best and most desirable baking powder manufactured.

It is quite true that the public is made aware of the deceptive character of the advertising of the baking powder company in question.

 10 FEDERAL STREET, BOSTON.

Medical Students at Work.
 However revolting the idea of dissecting a human body, it is a necessary part of the study of medicine. The law provides for the medical institutions a sufficient number of bodies to be used for dissection. In this city fully 1000 bodies are utilized for dissecting purposes each year. The Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons require about 240 of them. It has the finest dissecting room in the world, well ventilated and supplied with all the apparatus necessary for the purpose. Five students are assigned to each table, so that with the forty tables now in use, the work is done in the same time as in a room adjoining the dissecting room there are several tables intended to be used for lectures on anatomy. This branch of instruction is designed to teach students to operate upon dead subjects before experimenting upon the living. Proceeding from these anatomical studies to the study of the human body, the student is introduced to the study of the human body, the student is introduced to the study of the human body, the student is introduced to the study of the human body.

RECLAIMED.
 We once were vicious, fierce, and wild, And now we're civil, kind and good. To peaceful arts unrecanted, And keep the laws as people should. Our blankets smeared with grease and stains, We wear our linen, lawn and lace, And now we take wher'er we go, This cake of Ivory Soap to show. Through summer's dust and heat content, From moon to moon unwashed we went; But Ivory Soap came like a ray Of light across our darkened way.

A WORD OF WARNING.
 There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the Ivory!" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the GENUINE. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.
