CATALOG OF LITERATURE
FOR ADVISERS OF YOUNG
WOMEN AND GIRLS

An annotated list of about two thousand titles of the most representative and useful books and periodical articles for the use of Deans and Advisers of women and girls; Heads of women's schools; Instructors of young women; Women principals of mixed schools; Household Economics teachers; Young Women's Christian Association secretaries and workers; Deaconesses and other similar religious workers; Settlement workers; National and local sorority officers; Social directors and workers; Physical directors and supervisors of athletics; Leaders of Girl Scouts and Campfire Girls; Women's clubs; Directors of industrial relations in charge of women workers; Parents of adolescent girls.

PREFACE

The Deans of Women at their National Council meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, in February, 1920, discussed the question of the scarcity of available literature directly applicable to the work of advisers of girls and young women. The consensus of opinion was that for certain phases of their work the material is inadequate. It was proposed that deans and advisers of women and others interested in work on behalf of girls and young women should unite in an effort to build up a body of literature commensurate with the importance of their work. No comprehensive catalog of literature could be found showing what material now exists in this field and no intelligent effort could be made without such a catalog.

The compiler has undertaken this work in the hope that with this catalog in hand at least three results will follow. First, all those engaged in work with girls and young women will secure information concerning material already in existence with which they were not familiar and which will be of immediate help in their efforts to raise the standard of their work. There is hardly a group of workers in any field which needs a working catalog more than women advisers of the various types. As a class they are so engrossed in the details of their work and so often overworked that there is little or no time for extended systematic research such as is required to gather from the many sources the best literature of their calling. This loss falls not only upon the advisers themselves, but to an even greater extent upon the oncoming generation of maturing young women.

Second, those interested in these problems will be in a position either to accumulate personal libraries of choice, helpful books at hand for immediate daily use, or to induce the libraries of the institutions with which they are connected to build up such a library. The necessary data for this purpose has been incorporated in the catalog.

Third, it will be made plain where there is a dearth of literature and effective means will be taken to relieve this need.

Approximately two thousand items out of more than three thousand examined have been considered of enough importance to be listed and arranged under the class numbers of the Dewey decimal classification, with descriptive and evaluative notes. Author and subject indexes are appended.

The literature of related subjects is too extended for all to be included in such a catalog as this, but an effort has been made to list the books, pamphlets and periodical articles from all related fields which have a direct bearing upon any phase of advisers' work.

In some instances, as in the field, the health of women, including recreations, athletics, etc., which was made the special subject of study by the Summer Advisers' Club of Teachers College, Columbia University, in 1920, numerous entries have been made.

Women's share in the civic, economic, industrial and religious life of the community, and their prospective homemaking and motherhood should be so vital a part in the training of young women that references are included covering these fields.

Many books are included which are intended to be read not only by the advisers themselves, but, from the nature and style of the contents, may be placed directly in the hands of young women to supplement personal advice and so make more certain and permanent the advisers' effort to insure a sound physical mental or moral condition of the young women.

Considerable material is listed which the advisers would find useful to place in the hands of their associates or subordinates, as for example, books suggesting games, programs, decorations, costumes, etc., for those in charge of social events.

Literature is also included on dormitory arrangement and equipment, cafeteria management, etc., for the use of those having the management of residence halls or where student or other housing movements are being considered or are in progress.

Deans and Advisers of Women and other users of the catalog who are called upon to address young women frequently will find many books and periodical articles listed for this special purpose, some of which are included because of their richness in effective illustrations and some because of the author's reputation for expressing things incisively and effectively.

Although great pains have been taken to include all the desirable material in this collection, the compiler feels reasonably certain that some excellent material has not been discovered. Users of the catalog are therefore urged to forward to her suggestions of other pertinent material which can be incorporated in a later edition.

The following sources among others have been consulted—the catalogs of the Library of Congress, of the New York Public Library, of the New York State Library, of the American Library Association, and of many publishers; the Cumulative Book Index, the Book Review Digest, the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature; and wherever available, special bibliographies bearing upon the subjects treated.

The prices have been taken in the main from the Publisher's Trade List Annual of 1920. A few out-of-print books have been listed and those have been marked o. p. Under present conditions prices of books fluctuate in common with the prices of other commodities.

Acknowledgment is made for the help rendered by the members of the 1919 and the 1920 Advisers Club of Teachers College, Columbia University, Summer Sessions, who sent in book lists and otherwise assisted in the preparation of the catalog; also for the cooperation and help of Miss Grace A. England, Chief of Civics Division, Public Library, Detroit, Michigan, who compiled a classified list of excellent references; of Mrs. Katherine Sisson McLean Phillips, formerly President of the National Council of Deans of Women, and of Miss Mina Kerr, Dean of Milwaukee-Downer College and President of the National Council of Deans of Women, both of whom read the entire proof, making many practical suggestions from the standpoint of experienced Deans of Women; of Dr. Anna L. Brown, Director of the Bureau of Social Education, National Board of the Y. W. C. A., Dr. Josephine Hemmenway Kenyon, Associate Director, Bureau of Social Education, National Board of the Y. W. C. A., Lecturer, Teachers College, Columbia University, and Miss Marguerite P. Williams, of the Recreation Department of the Russell Sage Foundation, the three having shared the work of checking up the sections of health, recreations, etc.; of Dr. Willystine Goodsell, Associate Professor of Education, Teachers College, Columbia University, who read the section on Education making many helpful suggestions; of Miss Corinne Bacon, former librarian of Drexel Institute and Director of its library school, now lecturer on book selection in various library schools and compiler of the Standard Catalog, published by The H. W. Wilson Co., who made some valuable suggestions; of Miss Alice L. Jewett, Editor of the Public Affairs Information Service, who assisted in classifying and indexing the material; of Miss Mertice James, Associate Editor of the Agricultural Index, who assisted in preparing the material for printing and to whose technical knowledge and experience is largely due the uniformity and consistency in matters of form and arrangement; of Miss Helen Tompkins, Classifier of the New York State Library, who gave helpful corrections on the classification of material. To all these and the many others who in one way or another gave encouragement and assistance, any excellence which the catalog possesses is largely due and the compiler is grateful to them. Since the final decision on the inclusion or exclusion of items and as to the form and content of them has been made by the compiler, none of the cooperators should be held responsible for the result.

"Peg along,' by Dr. George Walton, is a companion book to 'Why worry?' written for the purpose of driving home the point that our little defects of character, which make life one unpleasant round of petty grievances and irritations, can be cured by a course in mental training. . . . The most interesting and valuable contribution of the book to a man's mental property is the number of trite maxims which Dr. Walton has found useful in his own experiences with patients. Some of these slogans he has invented himself, others he has derived from essays and life. . . . The book itself derives its name from one of these maxims, as the habit of 'pegging along' despite the upsets of the day is the most likely to lead to happiness and character, the aims of both philosophy and religion." Some suggestions in ethics. '18 Mac-

"The ten essays which make up this volume are by a distinguished English philosopher, and the author intended them 'to be of service to ordinarily thoughtful persons who are interested in reflecting upon morality.' The first essay, 'Living for others,' furnishes in a way the foundation for all the others. The conclusion in that essay is that it is not enough to say that a man should 'live for others.' He must indicate more positively what he is to do for others. This led to the consideration of the social unity, and ultimately the great values which seem to be its quintessence. The volume contains essays on doubting the reality of evil, how one is to know what to do, on the growing repugnance to punishment, and on stupidity." Boston Transcript

"That happiness is possible for all and that it is to be attained through a science of happiness, are the fundamental contentions of this book. . . . The author's chief points are that happiness cannot be found without us—it is within us. Then he insists that happiness is for all. Otherwise it could not be a science. A number of chapters are given to the development of this proposition. The last chapter endeavors to answer the question, what is happiness? The author develops his treatment of this problem by inquiring first: What is it to be a person? distinguishing the person from the animal, and emphasizing those qualities which raise the former above the latter. He then proceeds to his conclusions through a scientific discussion of the following topics: The centre of personality; Coming to one's self; The development of personality; The person as rational; The person as moral; The person as a lover of beauty; The person as religious; The goal of personal life; Faith as an hypothesis." "At the present time, this is the best book available for a high-school life-career class. It is entertainingly written, arranged in logical order for use in a course, and has practical exercises and a bibliography at the end of each chapter.

Part I, "Introduction to the Study of Vocations", stresses the importance of being well informed before making a vocational choice, describes the characteristics of a good vocation, and outlines a method for the study of occupations.

Part II, "Detailed Study of the Most Important Life Vocations", first sketches in bold outlines the prominent features of the more important divisions, and then proceeds in each case to summarize in short paragraphs the numerous minor positions and fields of work.
Slight inaccuracies and one-sided or misleading statements occur occasionally due to the effort to discuss so many different callings, but on the whole this part of the book is well done, and if properly supplemented by local investigations and the reading of technical journals and other books, cannot fail to prove an illuminating study for any high school class. It is to be regretted that women's work is very much neglected, but the larger essential facts and the outline of study are there.

Part III, "Vocational Adjustment", offers advice on the choice of a life-work, preparing one's self and applying for a position, and the best means of growth and advancement.
Schneider's unproved classifications are used in the "self-analysis" blank, but in the hands of a teacher who recognizes the limitations of that method, this need not be a serious fault."

Choosing a vocation. '09 Houghton $1.65 174
"As a pioneer in the field of vocational guidance, Professor Parsons did a great deal of useful work and his book is valuable for the historical background which it furnishes.
The book has three parts: The personal investigation; the industrial investigation; and the organization of the work. The long personal analysis which every applicant was expected to fill out has been appropriately criticised on the ground that any one who could answer the questions intelligently was in no need of guidance. Doubtless the questionnaire did serve as a stimulus to thought along lines which Professor Parsons found neglected by many of his applicants. Both the personal analysis forms and the outlines for the study of vocations have been highly suggestive to many investigators. The outlines of the qualities desirable in persons proposing to enter the different industries are out of date in many cases and in others the terms are too vague and Curriculum as a means of revealing vocational aptitudes. Educ 37:145-59 N '16 174

"This is one of the clearest and most systematic statements of the duty of the school to make its program of studies furnish effective vocational guidance. Trial and failure in industry is too costly and psychological tests are too undeveloped to furnish trustworthy data; hence the school studies must be used to reveal occupational possibilities. In order to do this the school program must be broad enough to offer experiences in many kinds of activities similar to those carried on outside the school. 'Pure science' and 'pure mathematics', innocent of social, civic, or occupational utility, will not serve the purpose. Vocational implications must be discovered and utilized, if the school is to be of real service to the individual and society." Har bul

17:585-88 Ap '16 174

"Professor Bonser maintains that the junior high school is the logical place for prevocational work, and that neither a separate course of study nor a separate institution is necessary. This contention seems sound; in fact the continuation school, too, is or should be a junior high school, and the junior high school should do what is now done by these two other types of organizations. Besides, one's college training is frequently 'prevocational'; the term is too broad to serve as the name of a school." Har bul

Chapter 5 on 'Pseudo-guidance' cautions in a timely way against the many questionable practices in attempted vocational guidance. The study begins with one hundred and fifty-nine eighth grade pupils and follows them through three years of the secondary school. Mr. Gayler concludes: (1) that a large percentage do not decide upon a life-work until late in the high school course or until college has begun; (2) there is a large amount of vacillation as to choice; (3) those who remain most constant in choice usually expect to stay in school for a long period.

1. Better methods of getting standards are necessary in order to obviate errors arising from taking chance samplings.

2. The single test system does not take into account the subject's ability to improve.

3. The volitional factors are almost entirely neglected.

4. Guidance founded on interests fails because of (a) the volatile character of the interests of most young persons; (b) entire lack of vocational interests; (c) conflicting interest of unmeasurable strength; (d) objective methods of determining interests are undeveloped and subjective methods are unreliable.

5. The true relation of the person to his proposed vocation can only be determined through a thoroughgoing sociological, economic, physiological, and psychological study.

6. After the individual's strength and weakness are known, the counselor's advice should be merely monitory in nature." Har bul

Almost all the problems a girl would have to face from the time she began to think of entering college until she said good bye at the close of the Commencement are discussed; and that very wisely, from the standpoint of a father as well as that of a college president. He begins with choosing a college, takes up the matter of location, of co-education and of peculiarities of particular colleges. It was written after a reading and re-reading of a book vindicating rationalism, which appeared in 1906 under the title 'The churches and modern thought.' Donald Hankey's object was not to write a general Christian apologetic, but to put down for the plain man, in a simple way, some thoughts and arguments which the reader of such a book should have before him.  Since women possess this emotion in a higher

"Miss Marot, author of "American labor unions," and herself a trade unionist, devotes this book to the industrial problem that must be faced after the war. There is a very real danger that, in the attempt to stimulate production, the Prussian system of trade training and continuation schools may be resorted to. The author points the way to a system of training thru which real efficiency may be attained, together with a restoration of the joy of workmanship which the machine age has destroyed. The one indeed is dependent on the other. Real efficiency results only from the creative impulse, which must now be utilized socially. "Industry must become a socially creative enterprise." The book is the result of a survey made for the Bureau of educational experiments, and the final chapter describes a plan for education in cooperative production which is now being tried out." Household management. (Social work ser.) '18 Russell Sage foundation 75c 361
"This book draws aside the veil from the homes of many of our working people, showing us their women,—on whom so largely depends the moral, physical, mental, and spiritual calibre of our next generation—shrouded by ignorance, prejudice, unwholesome surroundings, overwork, ill health, and usually less than enough money to make ends meet even approximately. How the social visitor with knowledge, tact, sympathy, and persistent effort, can help, with the cooperation of the women themselves, to raise the conditions in their homes to standards conducive to health, decency, and enjoyment is the concentrated message of the half dozen essays in the volume." Vocational psychology. '16 Appleton $3 371.9

"This volume is a summary of the efforts to discover suitable tests, psychological and otherwise, of the individual's fitness for a particular vocation. It is the outgrowth of a course on "Psychological Tests in Vocational Guidance" conducted by the author in Teachers' College, Columbia University.

Under the title, "The Search for Phrenological and Physiognomic Principles," Professor Hollingworth offers arguments and evidence to prove that the claims of both phrenology and physiognomy "are so unsupported, contradictory and extravagant that the vocational psychologist cannot afford to trifle with them. With regard to some psychological studies the author is quite as caustic in his criticism as he is of the "futile attempts to diagnose mental constitution on the basis of bodily structure," but with the important difference that he looks upon the general trend in his own field as very hopeful.

The chapter on "Self-Analysis and the Judgment of Associates" offers some interesting studies on the value of oral and written recommendations and other testimonials of character. Correlation studies of the judgments of several groups lead to the tentative conclusion that persons of average intelligence will agree fairly closely in their opinions of an individual's rank in such traits as efficiency, originality, quickness, and perseverance, but that they will be apt to disagree on such traits as reasonableness, refinement, cheerfulness, and kindness.

"The Curriculum as a Vocational Test" contains a number of studies which attempt to correlate marks or grades in elementary and high schools with success in college or in occupations, and interest in school subjects with interests and values in later life.

Suggestions are made as to the sort of psychological tests which appear to be most helpful in selecting employees or in choosing a vocation. The strongest objection to extended use of such tests at present is summed up in a statement referring to the incompleteness of the correlation between tests and more direct measures of ability. "From the point of view of the individual who is seeking guidance, or who is accepted or rejected on the basis of his performance in psychological tests, any correlation which is imperfect may lead to occasional injustice and misdirection."

The appendix gives a classified bibliography for vocational psychology, and a number of tests, blanks, standards, and forms.

Professor Hollingworth's book is valuable as a summary of what has been attempted and should prove a stimulus to better directed effort as well as a safeguard against certain forms of pseudo-guidance offered by commercial counselors." Har bul

The opening talk gives some good advice to girls on the subject of self culture—self culture acquired thru reading. Whether a teacher of stubborn and stupid children; whether a letter writer for vulgar men; whether a saleswoman passing hairpins over a counter all day; or whether an eyelet maker in a shoe factory, if she has trained herself to find pleasure and recreation in good books, the moment the time comes that is her own she steps into a life from which no drudgery can divorce her—a life the breath of which, inspires her daily work, however mean, with a kind of glory." "Seven speeches by President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot—five to successive classes of newcomers at Harvard between 1904 and 1912, one at Hotchkiss school, and one to the associated Harvard clubs of St. Louis—make up this slender little volume. The titles are 'The solid satisfactions of life,' 'Looking ahead in life,' 'The character of a gentleman,' 'The freedom to choose,' 'Foresight and capacity for strenuous effort,' 'Preparation for an effective life' and 'The service of universities to a democracy.' One notes in these little papers the insistent recurrence of the idea of the satisfaction to be derived from work; it is the veritable key to Dr. Eliot's philosophy for freshmen—and for older persons." "A contribution to the history of the movement for the higher education of women in America which began in 1819 and, evolving thru the seminary, proceeded towards the college idea. Little headway was made up to the time of the civil war. From that date there became apparent a demand for larger activities, larger public responsibilities and a more generous education for women. It was a little earlier than this date that Matthew Vassar turned his attention to the education of women. His interest was awakened by a niece; but it was fostered, encouraged and focused by Dr. Milo P. Jewett until it led to the founding of one of the foremost colleges for women in America. The volume is the first history of its kind and is full of information and inspiration." Bk rev dig

 "For a number of years Professor Sharp has been trying a certain method of leading pupils to reflect upon the moral problems of their daily lives, and to solve these problems in view of certain principles of right and wrong behavior. He has had extraordinary success in arousing interest on the part of high school and university students in problems of conduct; and with his method he has also developed in his pupils an unusual keenness in thinking straight thru a moral situation, and reaching a sane conclusion regarding right conduct in reference to it.
 In the present volume he presents his meth-

Fear and conventionality. '15 Putnam $1.50 395

"Fear of change is a part of the state of fear man has ever lived in but out of which he has begun to escape. What he now calls conventionality is that part of his system of protection against change he has begun to examine and, his fear lessening, even to forego." This is the sociological theory that the author presents, dwelling in general upon conventionalities that are based upon fear—the fear of the unlike for the unlike. Some of them are wariness of strangers, apprehensiveness of the unknown that besets travel, giving rise to elaborate good byes and ceremonious welcomes, the inflexibility of the caste system, and of rules governing hospitality, introductions, acquaintances, calling and entertaining. Mrs. Parsons further analyzes the conventionalities regulating sex, marriage and family relations. In closing she pictures a state of society after social barriers have been broken down in which 'the gentleness we bestow on little children shall outlast their infancy and the pity for the dead spend itself on the pitiful among the living.'"  "A discussion of the laws of heredity. Its purpose is to present to the younger generation those unalterable scientific facts and laws vitally significant to the health, utility and happiness of their offspring. Sex in plants and animals; fertilization and cross-fertilization; heredity's fixed laws; man as a creator of the particular type of plant or animal he needs or desires; the visible basis of heredity; the heritability of acquired characteristics; the inheritance of human characters, physical and mental; the practical problems of human heredity are discussed by the author in clear, simple, convincing language. The final chapters voice an appeal to the younger generation to awaken to their responsibility and their opportunity for promoting the physical and mental quality of the people of the future. At the close of each chapter several questions review its contents. There is added an appendix giving a list of books for reference or further reading." Bk rev dig

Triangle of health. il '18 Knopf $1.25 613
"Dr Arnold, the author of this little guide to health, was formerly physician to Clara Barton, and in this work has embodied the results of her practice for fifteen years of a system of drugless medicine. The 'triangle' of health consists of an adjustment of the relations of soul, mind and body which will bring them into harmony. Drugs she taboos. She claims that every man must become his own physician and that doctors should be only consulting health engineers; that a body that is structurally wrong must be righted, and can be righted in most cases by correction of spinal lesions, physical culture and hygiene. She believes that the human body builds itself continually, and that this building is influenced by the thoughts one thinks and the food one consumes. The nervous system is held responsible for the functioning of the body and wrongs must be righted by natural means." Boston Transcript.

"Dr Fisher is connected with the International committee of the Y.M.C.A. and Professor Berry is professor of physiology in the International Y.M.C.A. college at Springfield, Mass. Professor Berry states that 'the material here brought together represents an effort to secure definite experimental data regarding the effects of smoking,' that the work, covering researches conducted 1914-16, has been done as graduation theses under his direction, and that it is presented as 'entirely preliminary and tentative.' The subjects were 'normal, healthy, athletic fellows between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-five.' The experimenters returned results remarkable for their uniformity and general consistency, showing that smoking raises the heart rate and and blood pressure, that it markedly delays the return of the heart rate to normal after exercise, and that it impairs the neuro-muscular control as indicated by delicate finger exercises and gross muscular coordinations. Personal hygiene and physical training for women. '11 Saunders $2.50 613
"In this volume 'the woman who desires to have a sound mind in a sound body will find a valuable aid to that end. Nor does the author disdain, while insisting on health as the indispensable condition of beauty, to give some serious attention to the cosmetic arts, also, believing, as she says, that 'to be indifferent to the personal appearance is an indication of some abnormal condition in the individual or her environment.' Most of the subjects dealt with are treated in an original and illuminative manner; and hygienic rules are accompanied, when necessary to their perfect understanding, by minute explanatory details, as well as by convincing reasons for their observance. Much importance is given to the virtues of water, scientifically used, both for the preservation of health and for the cure of disease. The hygiene of the mind in its relation to health is considered both from a practical and scientific standpoint." N Y Times

Physical beauty, how to keep it. il '18 Doran $2.50 613

"This is not the usual 'beauty book.' It is rather a key to harmonious health. Miss Kellermann expounds here 'the new and true gospel of a woman's right to remain beautiful.' She places strong emphasis on the relation between the passing of a woman's bloom and the waning of happiness in marriage. In this book she tells the woman how to prevent the loss of charm and physical beauty. She explains each body process, and how to aid it. She gives full instructions how to care for or develop each part of the body to its maximum possibility. Health is beauty's first requirement, and a body whose parts are all in harmony is a second. Some of the chapter headings are as follows: The elements of woman's beauty; Muscular activity the source of grace; Food and the beautiful body; Proper development of the lower limbs; The care of the skin; Nerves and how to control them; The beautiful body and the art of dress. There are numerous full-page photographs of Miss Kellermann in the book, illustrating for the most part the various exercises she recommends." Bk rev dig

"This volume comes introduced by an appreciation of the author by Dr Ramon Guiteras. When Dr Guiteras first met Dr Kelly, in 1883, the latter was himself in the poorest of health. In his determination to get well he devised his own system of physical culture and the book is the outcome of these efforts, plus his experiences with his patients during a long practice. The composition of the book, the author says, occupied more than thirty years. In his system of physical culture, swimming and open air exercises occupy an important place and appropriate cuts illustrate the manner of application. The contents are: The six essentials—Perseverance, air, water, exercise, diet, sleep; Appearance; Toilet; Habit; Social and personal poisons; Constipation; Obesity; Self-massage; Training. Effect of diet on endurance. 2d ed '18 Yale univ. press $1 613.2
"This little book is a slightly abbreviated reprint of the original essay by that title, and has been published to satisfy war-time demands for economy in food. Although many studies have been made since the appearance of the original edition, says the author, none have, as yet, discredited the latter's conclusions. These are that the ordinary dietary contains too much protein food, and that the needed reduction in proteins can be almost instinctively accomplished thru thoro mastication.
The book shows how these conclusions have been reached thru a series of tests and experiments. The original essay was published in the Transactions of the Connecticut Academy of Sciences, v 13, pp. 1-46, May, 1907." Bk rev

"Designed for use in elementary schools, and seems to be of the 'supplementary reading type.' Where there is no opportunity for regular instruction and laboratory work in foods, and the teachers is not trained along that line, this book might fit nicely. But where any amount of time could be given to foods-instruction, this seems to be too popularly written—too much story—for practical use.
The general plan of lessons, following the var-a reading circle of girls' club, rather than to elementary school instruction." C. C. Creamer

"A series of investigations carried out in the Harvard physiological laboratory furnishes the basis for this work. The purpose of these experiments was to determine the nature and extent of the alterations in bodily economy that occur in conjunction with the major emotions. The work opens with a discussion of The effect of the emotions on digestion. Later chapters take up: The utility of the bodily changes in pain and great emotion; The energizing influence of emotional excitement; The nature of hunger; The interrelations of the emotions; Alternative satisfactions for the fighting emotions. In the first Miss Kellermann tells the story of her swim to fame and fortune, how, as a little girl, she was a cripple and afraid of the water, and how through her girlhood ambitions and her father's help she developed into a world-famed swimmer and diver. She adds a chapter in this section upon swimming as essentially a woman's sport, conducive to feminine grace and health. The remaining three parts, each sub-divided into chapters are as follows: Easy lessons for beginners; How expert swimmers are made; Fancy swimming and diving. Numerous full-page photographs of Miss Kellermann illustrate the text, several from 'A daughter of the gods,' and others in swimming and diving attitudes. Good stories for great holidays. il '14 Houghton $3 817

"A collection of stories selected and arranged for story-telling and reading aloud and for the children's own reading. The preface says: 'There are here collected one hundred and twenty stories for seventeen holidays—stories grave, gay, humorous, or fanciful; also some that are spiritual in feeling, and others that give the delicious thrill of horror so craved by boys and girls at Halloween time. . . . As far as possible the stories are presented in their original form. When, however, they are too long for inclusion, or too loose in structure for story-telling purposes, they are adapted.' In addition to the major holidays, the special days for which stories are provided are St. Valentine's day, May day, Mother's day, Labor day, Arbor day, and Bird day. Wit, wisdom and foibles of the great; together with numerous anecdotes illustrative of the characters of people and their rulers. '19 Funk $5 817

"The object of this compilation," says Mr Shriner, "is to present in a convenient form such entertaining incidents in history as are to be found in publications having neither the importance nor the morocco to admit them to the average library. Arranged in alphabetical order, generally under the names of the characters introduced, enshrined in a huge volume of 696 pages in double columns, we have a storehouse of more or less authentic anecdotes. To Lincoln are assigned fifty-four columns, to Naoleon Bonaparte, 106, to Tennyson, fourteen, to Peter the Great, thirty, to Ben Franklin thirteen, to Bismarck a little more than fifty, to Gladstone, twenty-one, about the same to General Grant, and so in varying proportions to nearly four hundred personages of distinction." Bk rev dig

Four hundred good stories. '10 Baker 817

"In making this collection of old and new anecdotes the editor has sought to exclude all stories of purely local appeal as well as those that depend for their humor upon ridicule of any nation, or creed. He has culled his material from the whole field of print and tradition and the result is a well chosen collection of good stories. An index of the subjects they illustrate is appended that the speech maker and all who like to tell or read anecdotes may more readily find something to satisfy the need of the moment." Bk rev dig
