The faithful friends of the Breckinridge wing of the Democracy, who have been subscribing themselves with the belief that the adherents of Douglas in New Orleans were few and far between, must have been slightly surprised and decidedly displeased at the demonstration made by the National Democracy on Monday evening. We, who claim, from long experience and education of judgment, to know some little concerning the political sentiments of the good people of the Crescent City, have been all along telling the obstinate and prejudiced Breckinridgers that the Douglas boys were far more numerous than they imagined; and that all calculations giving the Little Giant but a slender proportion of the Democratic vote, were egregiously fallacious and absurd. We have ever contended that DOUGLAS was stronger in New Orleans than BRECKINRIDGE, although there is no doubt whatever that in the country the partisans of the Secession candidate outnumber those of DOUGLAS. The former, however, where expectations and bonds are so frequently in the inverse ratio of their prospects, have been ridiculing the projections of the Douglasites in New Orleans. We have heard them deny that DOUGLAS had a thousand votes in this city. If this blindness is not altogether assumed, but has been the result of ignorance, the friends of Mr. BRECKINRIDGE will henceforth have an opportunity of astounding the natives with the strength of their adversaries on every side. Our impression has always been, and that in New Orleans BELL will stand first, DOUGLAS second, and BRECKINRIDGE last. The votes for DOUGLAS and BELL will be very close, which is not deemed worth mentioning, which changes often perambulate the streets, and render brief conjectures, and whose power is chiefly felt on election days. It is a close which in times of peace, are the advent of Know Nothingism had deserved to fame the halls, can assist to equilibrate the bone and sinew of the united and generally invincible Democracy—a chasm which gave that party the ascendancy in New Orleans at least in one half of our political contests, despite the vigorous antagonism and determined efforts of the citizens of sense and influence. We refer, of course, to the untrustworthy character of the larger portion of the grand army of Democracy who long usually composed of the sons of Hibernia and Fatherland. Losing their support, Democracy in New Orleans has no back-bone left, and cannot stand erect. Now anybody disposed to see his eyes must have seen that the adopted citizens have for the most part transferred their allegiance to DOUGLAS. There are the men now, as we will before, are not laborers on the highways. They do not go about in the streets bragging of their numbers, and proffering wagers to every doubter. In fact, except on occasions like that on Monday night, they are rarely to be seen—but their votes tell. The dissolution of the American party dispels all expectation of violence; while the subsequent repeal of the Registry Law renders fraud excessively difficult, if not impracticable. The vote, therefore, on the 6th November will be full and legal, and our Breckinridge brethren may rest assured that they will suffer seriously by the desertion of their quondam allies.

The truth is former DOUGLAS is potent in the great element of availability. We hardly know of any other public man, including Breckinridge, who, placed in his position, opposed as he is by two Southern candidates, BELL and BRECKINRIDGE, would be able to muster a corporal's guard. But DOUGLAS has much of that character which pre-eminently attracts the multitude. He displays the intense individuality which of ANDREW JACKSON and HENRY CLAY. He has a good deal of their strongness, backbone, frankness, enormous moral courage, disdain of cliques, and recklessness of expediency. His bearing is ever bluff, gallant and manly. He is a thorough and devoted friend, and an avowed, fearless enemy. You know exactly where to find him. He never shelters or skulks behind, or shirks discussion. In short, DOUGLAS is endowed with the qualities which clench and rivet hosts of friends. But for these, whatever might be his strength in the North, his candidature would have fallen still-born in the South. It argues immense personal strength and influence when a Northern man can stand his ground in the South against a prejudice which, in the case of a majority of Southern representatives, DOUGLAS not only does this, but he contends with BRECKINRIDGE for the Democratic vote; he claims in various States of the South an equality or a superiority of numbers, and in every one, save South Carolina, he possesses an embodied and formidable army of adherents. The Breckinridgers may affect to scout, but in November they will be forced to concede the truth of these remarks.

We are almost tired of narrating the errors of the New Orleans Delta. Yesterday it asserted the belief that the Bee had never contradicted the reported election of CUSHMAN in Arkansas. It is to us a matter of indifference what the Delta believes; but we have a reputation for honesty which we shall not permit to be impeached. The Bee did announce the defeat of CUSHMAN and the election of HINDMAN weeks ago.

While on the subject we will say once for all that if we have rarely noticed the senile and discontentous manner in which the Delta goes daily stinks to the political articles in the Bee, it is simply in the conviction that the readers of our absence are an opportunity of judging for themselves in how equitable a spirit the Delta performs its daily task of hotting the public know the morning papers say. It is painful to us to be compelled to question as to the veracity or thought of our contemporary, and we would fain hope that it is only the abnormal excitement of the season which renders its humor wrapish, and clouds the wonted accuracy of its vision. But we have a right to defend ourselves from unjust aspersions, and to protest against being made responsible for statements we never uttered.

DAY OF ATONEMENT.—This is the most solemn holiday in the Jewish calendar. It is known as Yom Kipper, or the Day of Atonement, when the children of Israel throughout the world practice a rigorous fast from food and drink, commencing at six o'clock this evening, and continuing until six this evening. The ordinances is of Divine authority, and not like some of the Hebrew ceremonies and festivals, simply Rabbinical. There are three places of worship for the favorites of our city, viz: one on Rampart street, another on Circondelet street, near Julia, and a third in the University Buildings, at the corner of Common and Bercons streets. They will doubtless all be crowded.

CITY RAILROAD COMPANY.—We invite attention to the advertisement of Mr. James Kingmore and Superintendent of the City Railroads, for proposals until October 6th for a supply of red cypress. See the announcement for details.

CARONDELET CANAL AND NAVIGATION COMPANY.—It will be seen by reference to our advertising columns that a meeting of the stockholders of the Carondelet Canal and Navigation Company will be held at their office, No. 126 Bienville street, at 5 P. M., on the 6th November next, to take into consideration the propriety of leasing the revenues, &c., of the Canal.

THE PRINCE OF WALES INVITED SOUTH.—A member of Southern gentlemen, headed by W. H. RUSSELL, of Alabama, have tendered an invitation to the Prince of Wales, through Lord Lyons, to extend his tour through a part of the South. Lord Lyons replies in the thoroughly courteous terms, but declines the invitation, on the ground that the shortness of time which the Prince has at his disposal, will render the proposition of his transit to the extreme South impossible. The Prince hopes, however, to be able to visit the city of Richmond.

EVERETT GUARD.—The members of the Everett Guard of the Fourth District are requested to meet in their hall, at the corner of Bourbon and Conti streets, this evening, at 7 o'clock, to receive the banner to be presented by the young ladies of the District.

NEW MUSIC.—Our thanks are due P. F. Werlein, No. 5 Camp street, for the following new music:

Douglas Schottisch—A fine spirited composition from the prolific pen of Charles Grobe.

The Sunny South Galop, by Wm. G. Ewing, Jr. This is a measure of more than ordinary merit, and deserves a place on every pianist's music-stand. It is enriched with a beautiful colored engraving of the city of Savannah.

It is a matter of interest to all the South to sustain our educational institutions. We copy the following just tribute to one of our oldest institutions in this city:

Bellevue Commercial College—A catalogue of this college, in New Orleans, has been placed on our table, and exhibits the institution in a flourishing condition. The list of students in the various branches of business, book-keeping, penmanship and the different languages numbers three hundred and fifty, and the press of applicants compelled it to enter the field of advertising in respectable journals all over the country.

We heartily commend this college to the attention and patronage of our readers. Most admirable system of book-keeping is taught here, and the science of penmanship understood and practiced by the professors. Mr. DeBrueys is a thorough business man in his commercial relations, and is identified with us in every respect, as a resident in the city. Attend not long since, and witnessed a building up one of the institutions of learning.—Natchez Free Trader, September 21.
