1. Generally.*

1. A registered ship or any share therein may be made a security for a loan or other valuable consideration; and the mortgage creating such security shall be in Form I. in the schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances permit. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 66.

2. A mortgagee shall not by reason of his mortgage be deemed to be the owner of a ship or any share therein, nor shall the mortgagor be deemed to have ceased to be owner of such mortgaged ship or share, except in so far as may be necessary for making such ship or share available as a security for the mortgage debt. Ibid. s. 70.

3. Under sect. 69 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), the only effect of an omission to register a mortgage of a ship is to postpone the mortgagee's claim to that of a subsequent mortgagee or transferee whose mortgage or transfer is registered before it. Therefore the non-registration of the mortgage affords no answer to the claim of the first mortgagee to freight earned by the ship as against a purchaser of the cargo, without notice of the mortgagee's title. Keith v. Burrows, 1 C. P. D. 722; (overruled, 2 C. P. D. 163; 2 App. Cas. 636, on other grounds).

4. Under the 66th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, and the 3rd section of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, the court will look behind the register to the real character of transactions between co-owners, and treat as a mortgage that which is on the face of it an absolute transfer, if it should appear that such was the intention of the parties. The Innisfallen, 1 A. & E. 72; 35 L. J. Adm. 110; 2 Asp. 470.

5. Semble, the Court would in some cases recognize an agreement by which a person might be for some purposes an absolute owner, and for others a mort-

(2) Foreigners are allowed to be mortgagees of a ship. See Instructions to Registrars.

(3) A bond had as a bottomry bond may be good as a mortgage of the vessel, but if the laws of the state where it is made require a P.

mortgage to be put on record and the mortgaged property to be passed to the mortgagee, these provisions must be complied with, or such a bond is bad as a mortgage. Greely v. Smith, 3 W. & M. 236. [AMERICAN.]

(4) Where a tender of the debt was made to the mortgagee, in pursuance of an agreement, it was held that interest should not be cast on the debt after the tender. McNiel v. Call, 19 N. H. 403. [AMERICAN.]

gagee, if such an agreement were clearly proved and definite. The Innisfallen, 1 A. & E. 72; 35 L. J. Adm. 110; 2 Asp. 470.

6. Under the 70th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, a mortgagee not in possession cannot maintain an action of restraint. Ibid.

7. A bill of sale of a ship, though in form absolute, may operate at law only as a mortgage. Gardner v. Cazenove, 1 H. & N. 423; 26 L. J. Exch. 17. See also Whitfield v. Parfitt, 4 De Gex & Sm. 240; 17 L. T. 161; Myers v. Willis, 17 C. B. 77; Langton v. Barton, 5 Beav. 9.

8. Evidence as to the meaning of the expression "legal mortgage," when applied with reference to ships, whether implying "a first mortgage," or "a registered mortgage executed with all legal formalities" considered. Thompson v. Clerk, Q. B. Nov. 7, 1862; 1 Asp. 256.

9. Under the circumstances, held, upon the construction of certain instruments, that, taken together, they did not operate as a mortgage, but as an absolute sale, to which was attached a conditional right of repurchase, to be exercised on the happening of a given event. Shaw v. Jeffery, 13 Moore, P. C. C. 432.

10. A bottomry bondholder is under no obligation to communicate the existence of the bond to the mortgagees of the ship, and is not affected by the owner concealing it from them. The Helgoland, Swabey, 491.

11. A mortgagee cannot set up as a defence to a bottomry bond the laches of the bondholder enforcing it, unless the mortgagee's position has been thereby prejudiced. Ibid.

12. A bottomry bond when due must be enforced within a reasonable time, and a voluntary agreement by the holder and the owner of the ship to postpone payment destroys the lien on the ship as against a mortgagee. The Royal Arch, Swabey, 282.

13. The title of mortgagees is, in questions of bottomry and similar cases, equivalent to that of the owners. The Mary Ann, 10 Jur. 255; L. R. 1 Adm. & Ecc. 10. See also The Feronia, 2 ibid. 65; 37 L. J. Adm. 60; 3 Asp. 54; and No. 21.

14. A mortgagee is not entitled to arrest a vessel for the purpose of enforcing bail for her safe return to this country. Motion on behalf of a mortgagee for such purpose rejected. The Highlander, 2 W. Rob. 109.

15. A master, who was also co-mortgagee, brought an action for his wages in the Admiralty Court under the provisions of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112 (repealed by M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), s. 4); the original owner being a bankrupt, the other mortgagee, who was in possession of the vessel, was allowed to appear in the action, and, besides the wages, the whole accounts between the mortgagees were investigated and settled. The Westmoreland, 4 Notes of Cases, 172; The Repulse, 5 Ibid. 348.

16. A master was not debarred from suing for his wages under the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112 (repealed by the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), s. 4), upon the ground that he was a co-mortgagee of the vessel at the time. The Repulse, 2 W. Rob. 40.

17. Semble, in the Court of Admiralty, prior to the Judicature Acts, in cases of account between master, also mortgagee, and his co-mortgagee, a question of unliquidated damages could not be investigated by the registrar and merchants, but must be assessed by a jury. Ibid. 5 Notes of Cases, 362.

18. In an action against ship and freight by a master for his wages, the mortgagee in possession, on appearing to the action and giving bail in the amount of the action, is entitled to a release of the ship, notwithstanding that the master has become liable in respect of bills of exchange drawn by him upon the charterers for ship's use, and that the charterers have become bankrupt. The Ringdove, Swabey, 310. But see No. 19, and tit. MASTERS, c. 7, s. 3, p. 1126.

19. In his accounts against the mortgagee, the master is entitled to security for the amount for which he is personally liable in respect of necessaries. The Limerick, 34 L. T. 708.

20. The mortgagee having a prima facie right to the freight is not required to bring it into court, as in the case of an ordinary holder of freight. The Ringdove, Swabey, 310.

21. A master's claim for wages and disbursements, whenever earned or made, takes priority over the claims of the mortgagees. The Hope, 28 L. T. Adm. 287; see also tit. LIENS, p. 831.

22. Where the owner of a ship, which is mortgaged, charters her before the mortgagee takes possession, the mortgagee cannot interfere to prevent the execution of the charter-party unless it will materially injure or impair the value of his security, and if the vessel be arrested in an action of mortgage by the mortgagee, the court will release her on the application of the charterer, unless such injury is shown by the mortgagee. The Fanchon, 4 Asp. N.S. 272.

23. Where shares in a ship are mortgaged, possession being retained by the mortgagors, and the managing owner, duly appointed by all the co-owners, including the mortgagors, charters the ship for a foreign voyage, and she loads and is about to proceed on the voyage, the mortgagee, even though he takes possession of his shares before the sailing of the ship but after the making of the charter-party, cannot arrest the ship or demand bail in an action brought by him to compel payment of his mortgage debt, provided the performance of the charter-party is not prejudicial to the security; and the court will, upon the application of the co-owners, release a ship so arrested, and will condemn the mortgagee arresting in costs. The Maxima, 4 Asp. N.S. 21.

24. A mortgagee, though entitled to intervene in an action by material men, is not entitled to the release of the vessel on merely giving bail for the payment of the claim of the material men in case such claim should be found to take priority of the mortgage. The Acacia, 4 Asp. 226. [IRISH.]

25. A. sold shares in a vessel to B., and then mortgaged the vessel to C. for an amount exceeding the value of the vessel. C. had no notice of B.'s purchase and duly registered the mortgage. B. then registered his purchase, and instituted a suit in rem claiming an account and sale against his co-owner A. C. intervened and claimed a release of the vessel: held, that he was entitled thereto, and to costs from the time B. became aware of his claim. The Eastern Belle, 3 Asp. N.S. 19.

26. Application of the mortgagee of a vessel, to be allowed to bid as a purchaser on the sale of the vessel and part of the cargo under the decree of the court, granted. The Wilsons, 1 W. Rob. 173.

27. Ship mortgaged, and subsequently sent to obtain a cargo of guano. Held, that the expenses of outfit, and of the voyage, had priority over the claim of the mortgagee. Alexander v. Simms, 18 Beav. 80.

28. In the absence of any special agreement the mortgagee of the ship has not as such a right to any portion of the cargo. Ibid.

29. A ship was mortgaged for payment of a sum, with interest at £10 per cent., in six months; the principal not having been paid at that time, held, that interest continued payable at the same rate. Morgan v. Jones, 8 Exch. 621; 22 L. J. Exch. 232. See Price v. Great Western Railway Company, 16 M. & W. 244.

30. A mortgagor of a ship, who remains in the ostensible ownership, has an implied authority to confer a right of lien for repairs necessary to keep her seaworthy. Williams v. Allsup, 10 C. B. N.S. 417; 30 L. J. C. P. 353. See for facts, No. 125.

31. Notwithstanding an undertaking as to damages the Court of Chancery is exceedingly guarded in granting injunctions in cases affecting the property in ships. De Mattos v. Gibson, 1 Johns. & H. 83; 3 L. T. N.S. 121; 30 L. J. Ch. 145; 7 Jur. 282.

32. A man may give a valid security on merchandise at sea belonging to him, although at the time he is ignorant of the particulars of which it consists. Ex parte Kelsall, De Gex, Cases in Bankruptcy, 352.

33. A power of sale is not essential to a mortgage. Dickinson v. Kitchen, 8 El. & Bl. 789.

34. A mortgage made while the ship is at sea of cargo to be after acquired is valid. Langton v. Horton, 1 Hare, 549.

35. It is not necessary to send notice of a mortgage to the master if possession be taken on the earliest opportunity. Feltham v. Clark, 1 De G. & Sm. 307. See for facts, No. 148.

36. Mortgages and other securities in contravention of 5 Geo. 4, c. 113 (the Act for the Abolition of the Slave Trade) are void. See sect. 39.

37. In August, 1874, a shipbuilder having overdrawn his account with his bankers offered to give them a security over a ship which he was then building. This offer was declined in the first instance, with the intimation, however, that circumstances might arise which might render it desirable for the bank to have the security offered, whereupon he promised that whenever he was required to give it he would do so. Two months later his account being still largely overdrawn, the bankers requested him to give them the promised security. Accordingly he deposited with them the builder's certificate of the ship, which was still unfinished, and the following day they put a man in possession. At the same time, in consideration of £770 then advanced to him, he assigned to the bankers a trade debt of £2,384:2s. 8d. as a further security for the general balance of his account. Two days afterwards he filed a petition for liquidation. Held, that the transaction between him and his bankers was neither a fraudulent preference nor an act of bankruptcy. Winter, Ex parte, Softley, In re, L. R. 20 Eq. 746; 44 L. J. Bank. 107; 33 L. T. 62; 24 W. R. 68.

38. Held, also, that the deposit of the builder's certificate was a good equitable mortgage of all his property and interest in the ship, and that, although unfinished, it did not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. Ibid.

39. Whether a ship not yet finished, and therefore incapable of registration under the M. S. Acts, is properly called a ship or not, it is a thing capable of assignment by certificate in the usual way. Ibid.

40. For cases as to what property passes under a mortgage, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. c. 8, s. 6.

2. Jurisdiction of Admiralty Division.

41. See tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. c. 6, p. 638.

42. The arrest necessary to found the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Division of the High Court over claims by mortgagees of foreign ships under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, must be in a cause over which the court has jurisdiction: a mere de facto arrest is not sufficient. The Evangelistria, 46 L. J. Adm. 1; 3 Asp. N.S. 264; 35 L. T. 410; 25 W. R. 255.

43. The Admiralty Division has jurisdiction independently of the Judicature Acts to, and will, on the intervention of the representative of a foreign state or by consent of the parties, entertain a cause of possession or mortgage of a foreign ship belonging to such state, so far as to ascertain the true position of the claimants and the nature of their title, and will, where it is for the advantage of all parties, order a sale of the ship. Ibid.

3. Jurisdiction of Admiralty Court before the Judicature Acts.*

44. Whenever any vessel was under arrest of the High Court of Admiralty, or the proceeds of any vessel were in the registry of that court, that court had jurisdiction to take cognizance of and decide all claims of any person in respect of any mortgage of such vessel. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 3; and see No. 52, infra.

45. This section was not intended to confer on the Court of Admiralty a jurisdiction (with respect to the claims of mortgagees) different from what it before exercised, but to be remedial in enabling the court to exercise its ordinary jurisdiction for the benefit of the suitors, to the full extent which justice required. The Fortitude, 2 W. Rob. 217; 8 Jur. 24; 2 Notes of Cases, 515.

46. The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 3, does not extend to all questions arising out of a deed of mortgage, but is confined to the ship itself being mortgaged. A vessel only, and not the freight, having been arrested in a suit for wages, the mortgagees of 48-64ths of the ship obtained a warrant, purporting to arrest the ship and freight. An appearance, under protest to the jurisdiction of the court, as far as regards the freight, having been given for the master, the owner of the remaining shares of the ship, the protest sustained. Ibid.

47. The mortgagees of 48-64ths of a ship claimed the balance of proceeds thereof in the registry. The claim was opposed by material men (over whose claims the court, in the then state of the law, had no jurisdiction). The court directed the proceeds to be paid to the mortgagees on the production of their deed, with costs out of the proceeds. The payment of the proceeds as decreed was subsequently opposed by a party alleging himself to be the sole owner and imputing misconduct to the mortgagees. The court, without hearing counsel, stated that it could not enter into the question of the conduct of the mortgagees, and directed the proceeds to be paid out to them as before decreed. The New Eagle, 10 Jur. 623; 4 Notes of Cases, 462.

48. Every registered mortgagee has power absolutely to dispose of the ship or share in respect of which he is registered, and to give receipts for the purchase-money; but if there are more persons than one registered as mortgagees of the same ship or share, no subsequent mortgagee, except under the order of some court capable of taking cognizance of such matters can sell the ship or share without the concurrence of every prior mortgagee. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 71.

49. In an action for an account brought by a second against the first mortgagee of a vessel, held, that the first mortgagee who had sold the vessel under the 71st section of the M. S. Act, 1854, was not an express trustee of any part of the proceeds for the second mortgagee, so as to prevent the Statute of Limitations enuring. Banner v. Berridge, 18 Ch. D. 254; 50 L. J. Ch. D. 630; 4 Asp. 420.

50. Held, further, that though the first mortgagee might be a constructive trustee of any surplus proceeds, evidence could not be given to show a surplus after six years from the time of the first mortgagee receiving the proceeds without acknowledgment of a surplus. Ibid.

51. Held, however, that the statute would be avoided—(1) by an acknowledgment that there was a pending account which would imply a promise to pay; (2) by an express promise to pay anything found due. Ibid.

52. The Court of Admiralty had jurisdiction over any claim in respect of any duly registered mortgage, whether the ship or the proceeds thereof were under arrest of the court or not. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 11.

53. Where an action had been brought to enforce a mortgage under the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, and the ship had been arrested, the court would, where no prejudice to third parties could arise, enforce the equities against the mortgagees, under the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862. The Cathcart, 2 Asp. p. 500.

4. Registration.

1. Generally.*

54. A registered ship or any share therein may be made a security for a loan or other valuable consideration, and the mortgage creating such security shall be in the Form I. in the schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances permit. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 66.

55. On the production of such instrument the registrar of the port where the ship is registered shall record it in the register book. Ibid.

56. Every such mortgage shall be recorded by the registrar in the order of time in which it is produced to him for that purpose; and the registrar shall, by memorandum under his hand, notify on the mortgage that it has been recorded by him, and the date and hour of such record. Ibid. s. 67.

57. No registered mortgage of any ship or of any share therein shall be affected by any act of bankruptcy committed by the mortgagor after the date of the record of such mortgage, notwithstanding the mortgagor at the time of his becoming bankrupt may have in his possession and disposition, and be reputed owner of such ship or share; and such mortgage

* (6) When a registered ship or share therein was mortgaged under previous acts (before 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89), the instrument of mortgage was in the form of an absolute bill of sale, indorsed with a conditional defeasance, and took effect, inter partes, from the time it was registered, but depended, for priority over other incumbrances, upon the order in which it appeared, if at all, on the certificate of registry. Under the existing statute a special form of instrument is appropriated to this purpose. This instrument, when duly executed by the registered owner, passes the property to the mortgagee, in the meantime as against the mortgagor, and when registered as against third parties. See Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping, 3rd ed. p. 39.

(7) As to the duties of English consuls in respect of mortgages under certificates of mortgage, see Instructions to Consuls from the Board of Trade, anno 1856, p. 16.

(8) In the state of the law prior to the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, it was doubted whether a distinction did not exist between mortgages for the security of an antecedent debt and other mortgages. See Douglas v. Russell, 4 Sim. 524; 1 Myl. & K. 468; Lester v. Payne, 11 Sim. 348, 2nd ed. p. 58.

(9) Quere, whether a mortgage of a ship executed exclusively for the benefit of parties interested under a prior mortgage, and confined wholly to the proceeds of sale to arise under the prior mortgage, would require registration? Parr v. Applebee, 7 De G. M. & G. 591 et seq.

shall be preferred to any right, claim or interest of the assignees of such bankrupt to such ship or share. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 72.

58. A claimant of a ship, as against an execution creditor, proved a previous mortgage of the ship to him by the owner for a loan, with a proviso in the mortgage postponing until a date subsequently to the seizure of the ship the power of sale vested in the mortgagee by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 71, and that such mortgage was duly recorded in the register book, but there was no indorsement on the certificate of registry, according to the requirements of 4 Geo. 4, c. 41, ss. 35, 43, and of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 55, ss. 34, 42, since repealed. Held, that the mortgage was not invalid, either as a fraud against creditors, or as not being in accordance with the M. S. Act, 1854, on the ground of the postponement of the power of sale. Dickinson v. Kitchen, 8 El. & Bl. 789.

59. A mortgagee claimed under a special contract which did not contemplate a sale by him until two months had elapsed after a demand of payment. Held, that in such a case the circumstance of the mortgagee being registered as absolute owner is not conclusive as to the rights of the parties. European and Australian Royal Mail Company v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, 4 Kay & J. 676; 5 Jur. N.S. 310.

60. A vessel registered by the owner as The City of Bruxelles was registered by the mortgagee as The City of Brussels. The identity being established, held that the misdescription did not affect the validity of the registration by the mortgagee. Bell v. Bank of London, 3 H. & N. 730; 28 L. J. Exch. 116.

61. Held, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, s. 34, and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 88, ss. 13, 14 (since repealed, but containing provisions similar to those of the 19th section of the M. S. Act, 1854), that a boat under fifteen tons burthen may be transferred without bill of sale, even though it had been registered, the registration being unnecessary. Benyon v. Cresswell, 12 Q. B. 899; 12 Jur. 1086; 18 L. J. Q. B. 1.

62. The mortgagee of a vessel duly sold the vessel under a power of sale contained in the mortgage deed. By mistake a discharge of the original mortgage was indorsed on the mortgage deed and registered. On the vendor of the vessel subsequently presenting his bill of sale for registration, registration was refused, on the ground that the property in the vessel had passed to the mortgagor. The mortgagee and the vendee of the vessel having instituted a suit praying that the vendee might be pronounced the sole owner of the vessel, held, that the court had jurisdiction under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, ss. 3 and 4, and the 11th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, to entertain the suit, and decree made in the terms of the prayer. The Rose, 4 A. & E. 6; 42 L. J. Adm. 11; 1 Asp. N.S. 567.

63. A mortgagee of a ship, with notice of a prior equitable mortgage, registered his mortgage. Held, that the prior mortgagee was postponed to him. Coombs v. Mansfield, 3 Drew. 193.

63a. The defendant executed in Spain a mortgage of the M., a Spanish vessel, of which he was master. The mortgage was not registered under the Merchant Shipping Acts. The vessel having come to Queenstown, the transferee of the mortgage commenced an action in the Chancery Division, Ireland, for an account of foreclosure and sale, and an injunction to restrain the defendant from removing the M. out of the jurisdiction, and duly served the defendant with a copy of the writ. The court granted an interlocutory injunction until the hearing. Clavering v. Aguire, L. R. 5 Ch. D. 97. [IRISH.]

64. As to how far equitable claims unregistered will now be enforced, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. c. 4.

2. Elsewhere than at the Home Port.

(a) Certificate of Mortgage.*

65. Any registered owner, if desirous of disposing, by way of mortgage of the ship or share in respect of which he is registered, at any place out of the country or possession in which her port of registry is situate, may apply to the registrar, who shall thereupon enable him to do so by granting a certificate of mortgage. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 76.

Japan Maritime Order in Council, 6th Aug. 1874.

(11) And as to consular fees for registration, see Order in Council, 1st May, 1865.

66. Previously to any certificate of mortgage being granted, the applicant must state to the registrar, to be by him entered in the register book :—

- (1) The names of the persons by whom the power mentioned in such certificate is to be exercised, and the maximum amount of charge to be created, if it is intended to fix any such maximum :
- (2) The specific place or places where the power is to be exercised, or, if no place be specified, then that it may be exercised anywhere, subject to the provisions thereinafter contained :
- (3) The limit of time within which such power may be exercised.

Ibid. s. 77.

67. No certificate of mortgage shall be granted so as to authorize any mortgage to be made at any place within the United Kingdom if the port of registry of the ship be situate in the United Kingdom, or at any place within the same British possession if the port of registry is situate within a British possession, or by any person not named in the certificate. Ibid. s. 78.

68. Certificates of mortgage shall be in the form marked M. in the schedule, and contain a statement of the several particulars directed to be entered in the register book, and also an enumeration of any registered mortgages, or certificates of mortgage affecting the ship or shares in respect of which the certificates are given. Ibid. s. 79.

69. Powers of certificates of mortgage shall be exercised in conformity with the directions contained therein. Ibid. s. 80, sub-s. 1.

70. A record of every mortgage made thereunder shall be endorsed thereon by a registrar or British consular officer. Ibid. sub-s. 2.

71. No mortgage bond fide made thereunder shall be impeached by reason of the person by whom the power was given dying before the making of such mortgage. Ibid. sub-s. 3.

72. Whenever the certificate contains a specification of the place or places at which, and a limit of time not exceeding twelve months within which, the power is to be exercised, no mortgage bond fide made to a mortgagee without notice shall be impeached by reason of the bankruptcy or insolvency of the person by whom the power was given. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

73. Every mortgage which is so registered on the certificate shall have priority over all mortgages of the same ship or share created subsequently to the date of the entry of the certificate in the register book ; and if there be more mortgages than one so endorsed, the respective mortgagees claiming thereunder shall, notwithstanding any express or constructive notice, be entitled one before the other according to the date at which a record of each instrument is endorsed on the certificate, and not according to the date of the instrument creating the mortgage. Ibid. sub-s. 5.

74. Subject to the foregoing rules every mortgagee whose mortgage is registered on the certificate shall have the same rights and powers, and be subject to the same liabilities, as he would have had and been subject to if his mortgage had been registered in the register book instead of on the certificate. Ibid. sub-s. 6.

75. The discharge of any mortgage so registered on the certificate may be endorsed thereon by any registrar or British consular officer, upon the production of such evidence as is hereby required to be produced to the registrar on the entry of the discharge of a mortgage in the register book ; and upon such indorsement being made the estate, if any, which passed to the mortgagee, shall vest in the same person in whom it would, having regard to intervening acts and circumstances, if any, have vested, if no such mortgage had been made. Ibid. sub-s. 7.

76. Upon the delivery of any certificate of mortgage to the registrar by whom it was granted he shall, after recording in the register book, so as to preserve its priority, any unsatisfied mortgage registered thereon, cancel such certificate, and enter the fact of such cancellation in the register book ; and every certificate so cancelled shall be void. Ibid. sub-s. 8.

77. Upon proof at any time to the satisfaction of the commissioners of customs that any certificate of mortgage is lost, or so obliterated as to be useless, and that the powers thereby given have never been exercised, or if exercised, upon proof of the several matters done thereunder, the registrar may, with the sanction of the commissioners, either issue a new certificate or direct such entries to be made in the register book, or such other matter to be done as might have been made or done if no such loss or obliteration had taken place. Ibid. s. 82.

78. The registered owner for the time being of any ship or share therein, in respect of which a certificate of mortgage has been granted, specifying the place or places where the power thereby given is to be exercised, may, by an instrument under his hand in form O. in the schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances permit, authorize the registrar by whom such certificate was granted to give notice to the registrar or consular officer, registrars or consular officers, at such place or places, that such certificate is revoked, and notice shall be given accordingly, and all registrars or consular officers receiving such notice shall record the same, and exhibit the same to all persons applying to them for the purpose of effecting or obtaining a mortgage under the certificate, and after such notice has been so recorded the certificate shall, so far as concerns any mortgage to be thereafter made at such place, be deemed to be revoked and of no effect, and every registrar or consular officer recording any such notice shall thereupon state to the registrar by whom the certificate was granted whether any previous exercise of the power to which such certificate refers has taken place. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 83.

79. By the 81st section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (which contains, with reference to a sale abroad, the same directions as the 80th section with reference to mortgages abroad), it having been enacted that "the power" shall be exercised in conformity with the directions contained in the certificate, it follows that any attempt to exercise the power in a manner not in conformity with the directions contained in the certificate would be ultra vires, and pass no interest. Orr v. Dickenson, 1 Johnson, 9; 5 Jur. N.S. 672; 28 L. J. Ch. 516. See also Ex parte Matthews, 2 Ves. 272; Thompson v. Smith, 1 Mad. 395.

80. O., the registered owner of a ship registered at Prince Edward Island, executed in compliance with the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854, a certificate of sale authorizing the defendant M., at Liverpool, to sell the ship for not less than £1,300. On receipt of the certificate, and before the arrival of the ship, M. sold her to the defendant D. for £900. The registrar at Liverpool having refused to register the bill of sale as not corresponding with the power mentioned in the certificate, the sum of £900 was struck out of the bill of sale, and the sum of £1,300 substituted. The plaintiff, O., subsequently revoked the certificate, but the defendant D. nevertheless, afterwards, caused the bill of sale to be registered. Held, that the power had not been duly executed, that therefore D. had acquired no legal title to the ship, that therefore the registry was void, and, the ship having been sold by arrangement pending suit, that the plaintiff was entitled to the proceeds of the sale. Orr v. Dickenson, supra.

81. Shipbuilders in America mortgaged a ship, and then, with the consent of the mortgagee, sent her to England for sale. The mortgage was duly registered in America, but by agreement with the mortgagee was not indorsed on the certificate of registry, and the purchaser had no notice of such mortgage. Held, by the Court of Appeal, that the right to the ship acquired under American law must be recognized, but that the purchase, having taken place in this country, must be governed by English law. Held, further, that in this case the mortgagee had so acted as to suppress the mortgage, and to make the shipbuilders his agents for sale, and that his legal title must be postponed to that of the purchaser. Hooper v. Gumm, McLellan v. Gumm, 2 Asp. 258, 481; 13 L. T. N.S. 187; L. R. 2 Ch. 282; 36 L. J. Ch. 605.

3. Transfer.

84. A registered mortgage of any ship or share in a ship may be transferred to any person. The transfer shall be in form K. in the schedule. On the production of such instrument the registrar shall enter in the register book the name of the transferee as mortgagee of the ship or shares therein mentioned, and shall, by memorandum under his hand, record on the transfer that the same has been recorded by him, and the day and hour of such record. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 73.

85. The plaintiffs were the registered transferees of a mortgage on the defendant's vessel, expressed to be given as security for payment of a sum of money on a given day. At the time of such transfer, and on a subsequent occasion, other arrangements were made postponing the date of payment. Subsequent to the date expressed in the mortgage, but before the money became due under the above-mentioned arrangements, the plaintiffs instituted a suit under the 11th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, and arrested the vessel. Held, that the court under the 3rd section of the M. S. Act

Amendment Act, 1862, must take into account the equities subsisting between the parties, and that the registered transfer must be read in connection with the subsequent agreements, and be modified thereby; that accordingly no default had been made by the owner, and the plaintiffs were not entitled to arrest the vessel, which must be released, and the plaintiffs condemned in costs and damages. The Cathcart, L. R. 1 A. & E. 314; 2 Asp. 500.

86. A British ship was transferred by the registered owner in England to the plaintiffs by mortgage duly registered. The ship sailed to N. O. in L. By the law of that state transfers of chattels, without delivery of possession, are not recognized. The defendants (who were British subjects, with a branch firm at N. O., and were aware of the mortgage) commenced actions against the owner for moneys due, and obtained a writ of attachment, under which the ship was seized. The mortgagees intervened, and gave bonds to the defendants, who thereupon released the ship. To a bill praying that defendants might be restrained from taking proceedings on the bonds, a demurrer was allowed. Liverpool Marine Credit Company v. Hunter, 2 Asp. 508; L. R. 4 Eq. 62.

87. Held, prior to the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3 (see No. 96), that a contract to assign by way of equitable mortgage the mortgagor's interest in a ship, if not made in the form prescribed by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), was not valid, the M. S. Act, 1854, not giving the court power to enforce against the owner of a ship the same equities it could enforce against the owner of any other property. The Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 1 Asp. 21; 1 J. & H. 159; 29 L. J. Ch. 287; 7 Jur. N.S. 150; 2 De G. F. & J. 502; 3 L. T. N.S. 84; 6 Jur. N.S. 84; 29 L. T. 827.

88. As to the mortgagee's power of sale of the ship, see cap. 5.

4. Transmission.

89. If the interest of any mortgagee in any ship or share becomes transmitted in consequence of death, bankruptcy or insolvency, or of the marriage of any female mortgagee, or by any lawful means other than by a transfer according to the provisions of this act, such transmission shall be authenticated by a declaration of the person to whom such interest has been transmitted, made in the form L. in the schedule, and containing a statement describing the manner in which, and the party to whom, such property has been transmitted; and such declaration shall be made and subscribed, if the declarant resides at or within five miles of the custom-house of the port of registry, in the presence of the registrar, but if beyond that distance, in the presence of any registrar, or justice of the peace, and shall be accompanied by such evidence as is herein required to authenticate a corresponding transmission of property from one registered owner to another. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 74.

90. The registrar, upon the receipt of such declaration, and the production of such evidence, shall enter the name of the person entitled under such transmission in the register book as mortgagee of such ship or share. Ibid. s. 75.

5. Discharge.

91. Whenever any registered mortgage has been discharged, the registrar shall, on the production of the mortgage deed, with a receipt for the mortgage money indorsed thereon, duly signed and attested, make an entry in the register book to the effect that such mortgage has been discharged; and upon such entry being made the estate, if any, which passed to the mortgagee, shall vest in the same person or persons in whom the same would, having regard to intervening acts and circumstances, if any, have vested if no such mortgage had ever been made. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 68.

92. There is no provision in the M. S. Acts which authorizes the registrar to erase entries of mortgages on their being discharged; but an entry to this effect may be made under sect. 68 of the Act of 1854. Chasteauneuf v. Capeyron, 7 App. Cas. 127.

93. The discharge of any mortgage so registered on the certificate (elsewhere than at the home port) may be indorsed thereon by any registrar or British consular officer, upon the production of such evidence as is thereby required to be produced to the registrar on the entry of the discharge of a mortgage in the register book; and upon such indorsement being made the estate, if any, which passed to the mortgagee, shall vest in the same person or persons in whom the same would, having regard to intervening acts and circumstances, if any, have vested if no such mortgage had been made. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 80, div. (7).

94. A mortgage of a vessel was made to G., who transferred it to B., and the mortgage and transfer were duly registered. Subsequently G. paid off B., and B. endorsed on the mortgage a receipt "in discharge of the within written security," and the registrar at the request of B., with the consent of G., entered the discharge of the mortgage. Afterwards it being explained to the registrar that a re-transfer had been intended he made a marginal note that the receipt was signed in error, a re-transfer being intended. Held, that whatever might be the equities between G. and the mortgagor, the original mortgage was at an end under sect. 68 of the M. S. Act, 1854, when the entry of discharge was made, and was not revived by the marginal note. Bell v. Blyth, L. R. 6 Eq. 201; L. R. 4 Ch. 136; 37 L. J. Ch. 526; 38 L. J. Ch. App. 178; 3 Asp. 182.

95. Where an entry on the register has been made by mistake, the proper course is to apply to the Admiralty Division of the High Court for an order to rectify the mistake. The Rose, L. R. 4 A. & E. 6.

6. Effect of Non-registration.

96. See tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. c. 4.

7. Equitable Claims unregistered.*

97. The expression "beneficial interest" whenever used in the second part of the principal act (the M. S. Act, 1854), includes interests arising under contracts and other equitable interests, and the intention of that act is declared to be that, without prejudice to the provisions contained in the said act for preventing notice of trusts from being entered in the register book, or received by the registrar, and without prejudice to the powers of disposition, and of giving receipts, conferred by the said act on registered owners and mortgagees, and without prejudice to the provisions contained in the said act relating to the exclusion of unqualified persons from the ownership of British ships, equities may be enforced against owners and mortgagees of ships in respect of their interest therein, in the same manner as equities may be enforced against them in respect of any other personal property. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3.

98. The law as to the effect of a transfer of a ship which is in form absolute, but is in reality only intended as a security for an advance, is not altered by the M. S. Act, 1854, and the provisions of s. 66 of that act do not prevent the owner who has executed a bill of sale absolute in its terms from showing, as before, that it was intended to operate as a security only. The M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3, is a statutory declaration that this is the true interpretation of the act. Ward v. Beck, 32 L. J. C. P. 113.

99. Held, prior to the amending act, that an equitable title of a mortgagee would not prevail against the legal title of registered owners. McLarty v. Middleton, 1 Asp. 114.

100. A registered mortgagee of a ship deposited with a creditor the instrument of mortgage thereof, and subsequently became bankrupt. Held, that such deposit took the ship out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and constituted the creditor an equitable mortgagee of the ship. Lacon v. Liffen, 32 L. J. Ch. 25.

101. A., the guardian of an infant the registered owner of a vessel, procured advances from F. for the repair of the vessel. Subsequently A. mortgaged the vessel to F. in a manner that amounted to a sale. F. at the time had notice that A. was acting as guardian of the infant. In a suit instituted by the infant for an account, held, that A. had no power under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 99, to sell or mortgage the ship on behalf of the infant, and that F. was not entitled to any other lien upon the vessel than the outlay for necessary repairs. Michael v. Fripp, L. R. 7 Eq. 95; 38 L. J. Ch. 29; 3 Asp. 162.

102. See No. 81. See also tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. c. 4.

the year 1862. Maude & Pollock, 4th ed. p. 55.

5. Sale of Ship.*

103. Every registered mortgagee shall have power absolutely to dispose of the ship or share in respect of which he is registered, and to give effectual receipts for the purchase-money; but if there are more persons than one registered as mortgagees of the same ship or share, no subsequent mortgagee shall, except under the order of some court capable of taking cognizance of such matters, sell such ship or share without the concurrence of every prior mortgagee. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 71.

104. A power of sale is not essential to a mortgage. Dickinson v. Kitchen, 8 El. & Bl. 789.

105. On the application of the respondents, mortgagees of a vessel, in a pending appeal, the Privy Council ordered the unlivery of the cargo and the sale of the vessel, such unlivery and sale having been decreed by the Court of Admiralty. The Jeff Davis, L. R. 2 P. C. 19; 5 Moore, P. C. N.S. 25.

106. The court ordered, at the suit of a mortgagee of three-fourths of the shares of a vessel, that a decree of sale should issue on notice being given to the owner of the one-fourth share. The Fairlie, 37 L. J. Adm. 66.

107. An interdict having been obtained before a Scotch court, to restrain a mortgagee from selling a ship, and the mortgagee objecting to the ship, then at L., being chartered for a voyage, order granted to have an account taken of the amount due to the mortgagee, including cost of suit due to him, and an allowance to be estimated for the custody and management of the ship; and in default of payment, the ship to be sold, and the proceeds applied in extinction of the debt due to him. Samuel v. Jones, 1 Asp. 282; 7 L. T. N.S. 760. [SCOTCH.]

108. A ship was mortgaged for a nominal sum, to secure an unascertained balance, with power to sell by auction, and in case of not being sold, the mortgagee to have the control and benefit until his claims were satisfied. A sale by the mortgagee by private contract before balance ascertained, and while an investigation before arbitrators as to the amount was pending, held, an unauthorized and wrongful sale (reversing the judgment below), and an account of the value of the ship at the time of such sale ordered to be taken, and the amount thereof paid to the mortgagor. Brouard v. Dumaresque, 3 Moore, P. C. C. 457.

109. When a mortgagee enters into possession of the mortgaged property with a view to a sale, he is bound to act with the same care and prudence, and to make the same efforts which a prudent proprietor would make in order to have the sale conducted to the greatest advantage. Marriott v. The Anchor Reversionary Company (Limited), 2 Giff. 457; 3 L. T. N.S. 538; 7 Jur. N.S. 155; 30 L. J. Ch. 122.

110. The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, s. 45 (now repealed, but which contained provisions similar to those of the 70th sect. of the M. S. Act, 1854), does not apply to the case of a mortgagee in possession. L., the owner in possession, mortgaged the ship to A., who afterwards took possession, and sold to W. Held, that A., by taking possession, became the legal owner of the ship. Woods v. Read, 15 L. T. 90.

111. Upon such sale W. took possession, and then mortgaged the ship to A. again, but A. did not appear to have taken possession under the mortgage. Held, that W. was the legal owner by virtue of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, s. 45. Ibid.

112. The plaintiff, as third mortgagee, instituted a suit against a ship of which the defendant was first mortgagee in possession, and caused her to be arrested. The defendant, to obtain the release of the ship, paid into court the sum of £500 in lieu of bail. The defendant then sold the ship for an amount insufficient to satisfy the sum secured by his mortgage. The plaintiff, when the cause was ripe for hearing, abandoned the suit, and the £500 was paid out to the defendant. The court condemned the plaintiff in costs, and ordered him to pay to the defendant interest on the £500 paid into court. The Western Ocean, L. R. 3 Adm. & Ecc. 38.

113. See also Cap. 6, infra, and No. 99.

* (13) Upon an entry of a discharge of a mortgage in the register book the property reverts without any reconveyance. Instructions to Registrars of Ships.

6. User of Ship.

114. Semble, a mortgagee of a ship under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 70, has power to use as well as sell the ship. European and Australian Royal Mail Co. v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 4 Kay & J. 676; 5 Jur. N.S. 310; De Mattos v. Gibson, 1 Johns. & H. 85; 3 L. T. N.S. 121; 30 L. J. Ch. 145; 7 Jur. N.S. 282.

115. A second mortgagee, although he cannot take possession as against a first mortgagee, has against all other persons the right to do so. Keith v. Burrows, 1 C. P. D. 722; 45 L. J. C. L. 876; 3 Asp. N.S. 280.

116. A mortgagee claimed under a special contract which did not contemplate a sale by him until two months had elapsed after a demand of payment. Held, upon construction of the agreement, and having regard to the circumstance that the ship would otherwise remain useless in that interval, that he was at liberty to use the ship. European and Australian Royal Mail Co. v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 4 Kay & J. 676; 5 Jur. N.S. 310.

117. In such a case the circumstance of the mortgagee being registered as absolute owner is not conclusive as to the rights of the parties. Ibid.

118. A mortgagee who uses a mortgaged vessel in an adventure or speculation, which turns out to be a losing one, is not only not entitled to charge the loss against the mortgagor, but must himself be charged with the value of the property at the time of his taking possession. Marriott v. The Anchor Reversionary Co. Limited, 2 Giff. 457; 3 L. T. N.S. 539; 7 Jur. N.S. 155; 30 L. J. Ch. 122.

119. A mortgagee of a steamer took possession of her, and used her for the purposes of a speculation which resulted in a loss, and he subsequently sold her disadvantageously. Held (affirming Stuart, V.-C.), that he must himself bear such loss, and be charged with the value of the vessel at the time he took possession of her. Ibid. 7 Jur. N.S. 713; 30 L. J. Ch. 571; 9 W. R. 726; 4 L. T. N.S. 590.

120. In assessing damages due to a mortgagee (the ship being an insufficient security) for wrongfully depriving him of the vessel, the principle upon which the damages are to be measured is, that the mortgagee is entitled to have the ship delivered to him in the exact condition in which it was on the day when he claimed possession, with every expense reimbursed to him, and interest in the meantime.

De Mattos v. Gibson, 1 Johns. & H. 79; 3 L. T. N.S. 121; 30 L. J. Ch. 145; 7 Jur. N.S. 282.

121. He is not, if he has announced no intention of using the ship, but a determination to sell, entitled to be reimbursed the probable profits arising from a charter-party, which he would otherwise have concluded. Ibid.

122. In estimating damages due to a mortgagee wrongfully kept out of possession of a vessel, the mortgagor is not entitled to any benefit which may have accrued during such time, owing to the increased value of the ship by reason of any rise in the current rates of freight. Ibid.

123. When a mortgagee of a ship is improperly restrained by injunction from using the vessel, the plaintiff giving the usual undertaking as to damages, the court, in dealing with the undertaking, will take into consideration the loss of profit arising from non-user. Ibid.

124. But such an injunction having been granted against a mortgagee who had not suggested loss by non-user as part of his case against the injunction, the court limited the amount of damage to the expense of keeping the ship, and, the security being insufficient, the deterioration she had consequently sustained. Ibid.

125. A mortgagor of a ship being allowed to remain in possession and to use her, placed her, on her being condemned as unseaworthy, in the hands of a shipwright to be repaired, who, not being able to obtain his money for the repairs which he had done, retained possession of her, claiming a right of lien upon her. In trover brought against him by the mortgagee, held, that the mortgagee having allowed the mortgagor to remain in possession and use the vessel, amounted, in the absence of an express authority, to an implied one that he was to use the vessel in the ordinary way, and have repairs done when necessary, and consequently that he, having such authority to have her repaired, the shipwright was entitled to hold her as against the mortgagee until his debt was paid. Williams v. Allsup, 10 C. B. N.S. 417; 4 L. T. N.S. 550; 8 Jur. N.S. 57; 30 L. J. C. P. 353.

126. Held, also, that the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 70, which enacts, "that the mortgagor shall not be deemed to have ceased to be owner of the mortgaged ship, except in so far as may be necessary for making such ship available as a security for the mortgage debt," did not conflict with this view. Ibid.

127. The owner of a steamer, under circumstances which were held to show acquiescence by the plaintiffs, mortgagees of the vessel, entered into an agreement with the defendants under which the defendants were to work the steamer until further notice. The defendants at the time had no notice of the mortgage. Subsequently the plaintiffs gave notice, and required the delivery of the vessel at S. The defendants were running the vessels under agreement between T. and S., and at the time of such notice the vessel was at T. On its arrival at S. it was handed over to the plaintiffs, but was shortly after seized in a suit instituted by the crew for wages due from the defendants. To obtain the release of the vessel the plaintiffs paid the wages due. Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any remuneration for the use and occupation of the vessel from the time of the notice till the delivery at S.; but that as they had paid the wages of the crew under compulsion of law, they were entitled to recover the amount so paid. Johnson v. The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., L. R. 3 C. P. 38; 37 L. J. C. P. 38; 3 Asp. 21.

128. The plaintiffs also claimed damages for the detention of the vessel in the suit for wages, on the ground that the delivery of the ship to them, subject to the lien for wages, was not a delivery of it in law. Held, that there had been no act of conversion or detention by the defendants, and that the plaintiffs could not recover this portion of their claim. Ibid.

129. Where a mortgagor of a ship does some act which prejudices or injures the security of the mortgagee, the declaration in the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, ss. 70, 71, that the mortgagor is to be deemed the owner, ceases to have any binding effect against the mortgagee, and he may exercise the powers given to him by the mortgage, subject to this qualification: every contract entered into by the mortgagor in possession is a contract which derives validity from the declaration contained in the statute of his continuing to be the owner. Such contract would, however, enure for the benefit of the mortgagee, on his giving notice to the party who is to pay the mortgage under that contract.

130. R., the registered owner of a vessel, mortgaged it to L., and subsequently entered into a charterparty with C. to load a cargo for P. After part of the cargo had been taken on board, R. became bankrupt, whereupon L. took possession of the vessel, and refused to permit further cargo to be taken on board, or the intended voyage to be commenced. C. moved for an injunction to restrain L. from dealing with the ship, so as to interfere with the charterparty. Held, that as long as the mortgagor's dealings with the ship were consistent with the mortgagee's security, and as long as the mortgagees were not in possession, the mortgagor had authority to act as owner, and to execute any contracts to enable him to obtain the full benefit of his property. Injunction granted accordingly. Ibid.

131. Where a beneficial charterparty has been entered into by a mortgagor in possession of a ship, the mortgagee cannot object to the charterparty being carried out upon the ground simply that the effect of carrying out the charterparty will be to remove the ship out of the jurisdiction of the court, and to render it difficult for him to enforce his mortgage security. The Fanchon, 5 P. D. 173; 4 Asp. 272.

132. The mortgagees of a ship having seized and advertised it for sale, the mortgagors brought an action against them for redemption, and moved for an injunction to restrain the sale, whereupon, the mortgagees undertaking not to proceed with the sale, a decree was taken by consent in the action directing an account of what was due on the mortgage for principal and interest, and for redemption on payment by the mortgagors of the amount certified. Held, that the mortgagees were justified in seizing the ship, and that in taking the account directed they were entitled to be allowed expenses incurred by them in taking and holding possession of the ship, advertising it for sale, and effecting insurances on the head of "just allowances." Wilkes v. Saunton, 7 Ch. D. 188; 47 L. J. Ch. 150.

7. Bankrupt Mortgagors.*

133. No registered mortgage of any ship or of any share therein shall be affected by any act of bankruptcy committed by the mortgagor after the date of the record of such mortgage, notwithstanding such mortgagor at the time of his becoming bankrupt may have in his possession and disposition and be reputed owner of such ship or share thereof; and such mortgage shall be preferred to any right, claim, or interest in such ship or any share thereof which may belong to the assignees of such bankrupt. M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 72.

134. London sub-mortgagees of shipments at C. and H. K. sent thither notices by the next direct mail, there being another and earlier mail by a different route by which the notices might possibly have reached their destination sooner. Before this could take place by either mode of transmission the sub-mortgagees became bankrupt. Held, that the notice was sufficient to take the goods out of their reputed ownership. Ex parte Kellsall, De Gex, Cas. in Bank. 352.

135. G., by deed dated Nov. 11, 1857, assigned the cargo with which the E. was then laden, and which thereafter should be placed on board. On Jan. 3, 1858, notice of the deed was sent to the master, but it never reached him. From the 1st to 12th Feb., the E. received part of the cargo of another ship belonging to the same shipowner (G.) On the 12th Feb. the vessel sailed, and on March 1st G. was declared bankrupt. On the arrival of the E. the master was served with a copy of the notice. Held, that there was no distinction between the part of the cargo put on board before the assignment and the part put on board afterwards. Acraman v. Bates, 6 Jur. N.S. 294.

135a. Held, further, that there was no default in not giving notice of the deed of Nov. 11, 1857, and that therefore the property passed under that deed. Ibid.

136. A debtor mortgaged without any present consideration a ship to one of his creditors, leaving himself scarcely any assets, and at the time of the mortgage both the mortgagor and creditor knew that the former was practically bankrupt, although he did not actually become so until shortly afterwards. In a suit instituted by the mortgagee against the ship, the assignee in bankruptcy intervening: Held, that the mortgage was executed in contemplation of bankruptcy, and was void as being a fraudulent preference. The Heart of Oak, 39 L. J. Adm. 15; 3 Asp. 317.

137. The plaintiffs advanced £5,000 to W. & Co., M.'s agents in England, to be secured by "the proceeds of ships and deals coming" to W. & Co. from M. On the arrival of the vessel S., W. & Co. collusively sold it to L., in order that L. might mortgage it to Y. L. and Y.'s names were entered on the register as owner and mortgagee respectively. W. & Co. having stopped payment, the plaintiffs claimed a charge on the S. and obtained an injunction restraining W. & Co., L. and Y. from selling or otherwise dealing with the vessel. Held, by the Lord Chancellor, that (assuming the S. formed part of the plaintiffs' security), as Y. had no notice of the plaintiffs' equitable title, and had acted bona fide, the injunction must be dissolved. Baring v. Harris, 2 Asp. 194.

138. A., a merchant at G., acted as agent for L., a merchant in L., and also for M., another merchant in the same place, L. and M. having also dealings together. A. was accustomed to send to L. monthly accounts of sales of coal which L. had sent to G., giving him credit for the proceeds, and debiting him with commission and other expenses. In 1854 L. applied to M. to make him advances, which he agreed to do, provided L. would give orders to A. to remit him out of the proceeds of the sale of L.'s coals the sum he might advance. A., having a general account with M., instead of actually remitting these advances to him, entered to his credit the amount which he was instructed from time to time by L. to remit, and in the course of his business remitted bills to M. for collection, including some drawn on L. In March, 1856, M. requiring further security for any future advances he might make, L. gave him a mortgage on a ship for them, he having previously given him security on the ship for two sums which had been advanced the reputed ownership clauses contained in the Bankrupt Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, and the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 125, continued the exception. The Bankruptcy Act, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, contained no express provisions on the subject, nor does the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 to him. In August, 1856, L. assigned the equity of redemption in the ship to the plaintiff, and on the 2nd September he became bankrupt. On the 4th Sept. the plaintiff sent to G. to take possession of the ship, tendering to M. £900, being the amount he thought due to him. The ship, which had previously been advertised for sale, was sold by M. to the defendants, who were registered as owners. Some of the bills drawn by A. on L. and remitted to M. were dishonoured, but the amounts credited to M. by A. remained undiminished and undisturbed. Upon the plaintiff filing a bill to have the sale of the ship set aside, and for an account, held, that as M. had consented to substitute for the remittance a credit in the general monthly account, and as the bills remitted were not in respect of those particular items, but indiscriminately for collection, he had no right to select any particular item of credit, and attribute the dishonoured bill to that item, so as to prejudice third parties. M'Larty v. Middleton, 9 W. R. 861; 4 L. T. N.S. 852.

(c. 52).

(14a) By sect. 4 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, the expression "bill of sale" is not to include transfers or assignments of any ship or vessel, or any share thereof. See also sect. 3 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1881.

139. Held, that M. was not justified in selling the ship on the 19th September, as nothing was due to him at that time beyond the £900; he was, therefore, liable to pay the plaintiff the value of the ship beyond that sum. Ibid.

140. Mortgages of ships having been deposited with bankers in security of an overdrawn account ten days before the mortgagors were adjudged bankrupts, held that the bankers had a lien on the proceeds of the ships. As by the M. S. Act no valid assignment could be made without the production of the mortgages, they were not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Bill of sale executed as a security for the debt eight days before bankruptcy held invalid, being an act of bankruptcy, upon the authority of Bittlestone v. Cooke, 6 Ell. & B. 307; Hutton v. Crutwell, 1 Ell. & Bl. 15, distinguished; Lacon v. Liffen, 1 Asp. 262.

141. By the law of Jersey the hypothec of moveables, unattended with possession, is not recognized, and registration of a debt is material only as it affects immoveable property. Successive mortgages were made to two different persons for advances to build a ship. The instruments were registered on the same day, the mortgagor having become bankrupt.

Held, that (after the claim of the shipwrights) the mortgagee's claims ranked together as liens on the vessel, and not according to date. Hayley v. Bartlett, 1 Asp. 90.

See also No. 151, infra.

8. Bankrupt Mortgagees.

142. A registered mortgagee of a ship deposited with a creditor the instrument of mortgage thereof, and subsequently became bankrupt. Held, that such deposit took the ship out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and constituted the creditor equitable mortgagee of the ship. Lacon v. Liffen, V.-C. S. Affirmed on appeal by the Lord Chancellor, 32 L. J. Ch. 25; 11 W. R. 135; 7 L. T. N.S. 411.

9. Priority.

1. Mortgages inter se.*

143. If there is more than one mortgage registered of the same ship or share, the mortgagees shall, notwithstanding any express or constructive notice, be entitled in priority according to the date at which each instrument is recorded in the register books, and not according to the date of the instrument. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 69.

144. Whenever the certificate for mortgages elsewhere than at the home port contains a specification of the place at which, and a limit of time not exceeding twelve months within which, the power is to be exercised, no mortgage bond fide made to a mortgagee without notice shall be impeached by reason of the bankruptcy or insolvency of the person by whom the power was given. Ibid. s. 80, sub-s. (4).

145. Every mortgage which is duly registered on the certificate shall have priority over all mortgages of the same ship or share created subsequently to the date of the entry of the certificate in the registry book; and if there be more mortgages than one so endorsed, the respective mortgagees claiming thereunder shall, notwithstanding any express or constructive notice, be entitled according to the date at which a record of each mortgage is endorsed on the certificate, and not according to the date of the

146. Subject to the foregoing rules every mortgagee whose mortgage is registered on the certificate shall have the same rights and powers, and be subject to the same liabilities, as he would have had and been subject to if his mortgage had been registered in the register book instead of on the certificate. Ibid. sub-s. (6).

147. No registered mortgage of any ship or share shall be affected by any act of bankruptcy committed by the mortgagor after the date of the record of such mortgage, notwithstanding such mortgagor at the time of his becoming bankrupt may have in his possession and disposition, and be reputed owner of, such ship or share; and such mortgage shall be preferred to any right or interest in such ship, or share, which may belong to the assignees of such bankrupt. Ibid. s. 72.

148. The owner of a vessel made a mortgage of it and of the cargo in London to A., whilst the vessel was on a whaling voyage to the South Seas, subject to two prior mortgages thereof, and the third mortgagee forthwith gave notice of his mortgage to the prior incumbrancers. The master of the vessel afterwards putting into Sydney transhipped the oil taken on the voyage to another vessel consigned to consignees in London, who honoured his bill of exchange on them upon having a lien on the consignment. The mortgagor induced B. to advance him £1,000 on a mortgage of the cargo so transhipped and consigned without notice of any other charge thereon, except the lien of the consignee. B. gave notice of his mortgage to the consignee. A., as soon as he knew of the consignment (but subsequent to B.'s notice), gave notice to the consignee of the mortgage to him; and after such notice the consignee, after satisfying his own lien, paid over the balance of the proceeds of the oil to B. Held, that A. having done all he could towards possession, was entitled to priority over B. Feltham v. Clark, 1 De G. & Sm. 307.

149. Registered first mortgagees of a ship, with power of sale, took from the mortgagor, by an unregistered document, a declaration that the mortgage should be a security, not only for the mortgage debt, but for such sums as might, for the time being, be due from the mortgagor. Subsequently another incumbrancer took a registered mortgage, expressed to be subject to the first mortgage, but not referring to the unregistered charge, of which, however, the last mortgagee did not deny having had notice when he took his security: Held, that the unregistered document was not merely a further charge but a new security, and that the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, s. 34 (since repealed), excluded it from priority over the last mortgage. Parr v. Applebee, 7 De G. M. & G. 585.

150. A mortgagee of a ship, with notice of a prior unregistered equitable mortgage, registered. Held, that the prior mortgage was postponed to him. Coombs v. Mansfield, 3 Drew. 193.

151. On the 15th July, A., owner of an unfinished ship, mortgaged it to B. On the 5th August, A. registered, on the 6th B. registered. Held, that A.'s assignees could not maintain trover for the ship. Bell v. The Bank of London, 3 H. & N. 730; 28 L. J. Exch. 116.

152. Although the M. S. Act, 1854, contains no provision negating the validity of a mortgage made otherwise than according to the terms of the act, the whole scope of the act is to that effect, and an equitable mortgage is still invalid. Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 1 Johns. & H. 159; 1 Asp. 21; 29 L. J. Ch. 287; 7 Jur. N.S. 150; 2 De G. F. & J. 502; 3 L. T. N.S. 84; 6 Jur. N.S. 84; 29 L. T. 827.

153. See also No. 94, p. 1138.

2. Other Liens.

154. Held, that the equity of redemption in a vessel mortgaged under the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89 (since repealed), was not saleable, and therefore, where the mortgagee was in possession before the seizure of the vessel by the sheriff at the suit of a creditor, that the verdict in an interpleader issue had been rightly entered for the mortgagee against the creditor. Wood v. Reed, 40 Legal Observer, C. B. 17.

155. A., owner of forty-eight shares in a ship, gave a power of attorney to B., the other part owner, empowering him to sell A.'s shares. The ship sailed under the command of B. A. afterwards mortgaged his shares in the ship when at sea to the plaintiffs, who had no notice of the power of attorney, and the mortgage was entered on the register. Subsequently B. sold the ship abroad to C., who had no notice of the mortgage by A. The ship was registered de novo abroad, and arrived in London. The plaintiffs took possession of the ship. The defendants afterwards also took possession. Held, that the plaintiffs (the mortgagees) had the better title to A.'s shares. Cato v. Irving, 16 Jur. 161; 18 L. T. 345; 5 De G. & Sm. 210; 21 L. J. Ch. 675.

156. A. was owner of seven-eighths of a ship, and B. was owner of the other one-eighth. A. mortgaged his share. A. and B. sent out the ship for a cargo at their joint risk in the same proportions as they had in the ship. The ship brought home a cargo, and then the mortgagee took possession and claimed to be entitled to seven-eighths of the cargo, without making any deduction for the expenses of the outfit and voyage. A. had assigned all his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors. Held (affirming a decree of the Master of the Rolls), that the expenses of the voyage were to be paid out of the proceeds of the cargo before any division took place, and that B., the joint owner, was entitled to one-eighth of the residue of the proceeds, the remaining seven-eighths of the residue being payable to the trustee of A., to whom he had assigned his property, there being no contract between A. and his mortgagee respecting the cargo. Alexander v. Simms, 18 Beav. 80; 23 L. J. Ch. 721.

157. An instrument under seal executed by the master (who was also owner) for the repayment of money borrowed for repairing the vessel, and thereby stipulating that the vessel should be and remain a security by way of bottomry for the repayment thereof, and that as well his executors, &c., as the said vessel, should be bound in the penal sum of so much, operates as a mortgage of the vessel, so that the party takes possession, after which his right is not defeasible by a subsequent execution at the suit of another creditor. Ladbroke v. Crickett, 2 T. R. 649.

158. Assignee of freight for a particular voyage, held entitled to preference over the mortgagee of ship and freight generally, who had not taken possession. Brown v. Tanner, 2 Asp. 381; L. R. 2 Eq. 806.

159. Mortgagees having commenced an action against a vessel, material men with a possessory lien intervened, and the vessel was sold. The claim of the material men exceeded the amount of the proceeds. Held, that the mortgagees were entitled to their costs up to date of sale out of such proceeds. The Sherbro, 5 Asp. 88.

160. See also, as to the priority of mortgages over other liens, tit. LIENS, p. 822 et seq.

10. Liability.*

161. A mortgagee shall not by reason of his mortgage be deemed to be the owner of a ship or any share therein, nor shall the mortgagor be deemed to have ceased to be owner of such mortgaged ship or share, except in so far as may be necessary for making such ship or share available as a security for the mortgage debt. See the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 70. See also No. 97.

162. The Act 6 Geo. 4, c. 110, s. 45 (providing that no mortgagee should be deemed owner, &c., substantially re-enacted by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, s. 70) was intended for the protection of the mortgagee, and not in restriction of his rights. Dean v. McGlire, 4 Bing. 45, cited with approval in European, &c. Co. v. Royal Mail, &c. Co., 4 K. & J. 685; 5 Jur. N.S. 310. See also The Fruit Preserver, 2 Hagg. 182.

* (16) In the case of a transfer by way of mortgage under the law (8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, since repealed), prior to the M. S. Act, 1854, the collector and comptroller were required to state on the entry in the book of registry, and also on the certificate of registry, that such transfer was made only as a security for the payment of debts, or by way of mortgage, and in that case the mortgagee would not be deemed the owner (s. 45), nor would his rights be affected by any act of bankruptcy on the part of the mortgagor (s. 46).

(17) A mortgagee who is in possession of a ship, and holds himself out as absolute owner, is liable for repairs. Tucker v. Buffington, 15 Mass. 477; Miles v. Spinola, 6 Hill. 218; 4 Hill. 177. [AMERICAN.]

(18) Aliter, if he is out of possession. M'Intyre v. Scott, 8 Johns. 159; Phillips v. Ledley, 1 Wash. C. C. 226. [AMERICAN.]

(19) Unless the repairs were made on his credit or by special contract with him. Ring v. Franklin, 2 Hall, 1; Birkbeck v. Tucker, ibid. 121; Tucker v. Buffington, 15 Mass. 477; Star v. Knox, 2 Conn. 215. [AMERICAN.]

(20) A mortgagee of a ship in possession is liable to the master for his wages, if the voyage be performed for the benefit of the mortgagee. Champlin v. Butler, 18 Johns. 169. [AMERICAN.]

(21) See also, as to the liability of mortgagees, 3 Kent's Commentaries, 134—136.

163. The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89, s. 45 (now repealed, but which contained provisions similar to those of the 70th section of the M. S. Act, 1854), does not apply to the case of a mortgagee in possession. Woods v. Read, 15 L. T. 90.

164. When the transfer is not expressed to be by way of mortgage, the protection which the Ship Registry Act intended to afford the mortgagee against the creditors of a bankrupt shipowner is not obtained, and the vendee, appearing on the registry to be owner, may be subject to all the liabilities which belong to him in that character. Langton v. Horton, 5 Beav. 19.

165. Semble, the owner of a vessel abroad may lawfully hypothecate, or authorize the hypothecation of his vessel, for charges relating to the outward cargo; and if he do so before bankruptcy, and before the mortgagees of the ship have taken possession, the assignees and mortgagees would be bound. The Edmond, 1 Lushington, 58; 2 L. T. N.S. 195; 29 L. J. Adm. 76. See further as to bot-tomry, tit. BORTOMRY, p. 100.

166. In a cause of necessities the trans-feree of a mortgage, though in possession of a ship when the necessities are sup-plied, is not liable for them unless the master in ordering them was acting as his agent. The Troubadour, 2 Asp. 475.

167. A subsequent mortgagee is liable for repairs previously done to the mort-gaged vessel. The institution of a suit as a cause of necessities does not estop the plaintiff from pleading and proving subsequently that his claim is in respect of repairs; but the title of the cause must be amended. The Skipwith, 2 Asp. 20.

168. A mortgagee of four sixty-fourth shares of a vessel condemned in the costs, but not damages occasioned by a wrong-ful arrest of the vessel. The Egerateia, 38 L. J. Adm. 40; 3 Asp. 241.

169. Funds were advanced by the pur-suers in a foreign port to the attorney and agent of mortgagees in possession, to be disbursed for the service of the vessel. In an action against the mortgagees for the advances and disbursements, held, that they were liable to the pursuers for the funds so supplied, although it was not proved that the whole advances had been actually applied for the service of the vessel. Havilland v. Thomson, 3rd Series, vol. 8, p. 313. [SCOTCH.]

170. Semble, mortgagees are constituted mortgagees in possession, and as such are liable as owners, if the voyage was for their behoof, and if they selected and ap-pointed the master. Ibid.

171. Mortgagees of a ship are not, as owners, liable for her repairs. The re-ceipt of money, the proceeds of the sale of shares in a ship by mortgagees, does not deprive them of their character of mortgagees. Harries v. Handy and others, 3 Ir. Jur. Exch. 290.

172. A mere mortgagee of a ship, who does not take possession, is not liable for supplies for the use of the ship previous to a re-transfer. Twentyman v. Hart, 1 Stark. 366; Irving v. Richardson, 2 B. & Ad. 193; 1 M. & Rob. 153; Chinnery v. Blackburne, 1 H. Bl. 117, n. Nor for wages and disbursements of the master. Jackson v. Vernon, ibid. 114; Annett v. Carstairs, 3 Camp. 354.

173. Unless a contract, express or im-plied, can be proved against him. See Castle v. Duke, 5 C. & P. 359; Baker v. Buckle, 7 Moore, 349.

174. Until a mortgagee takes posses-sion he is protected from all the statutory consequences of being on the register; but when he does take possession and make use of the vessel for the purpose of rendering his security available, he is an owner within the meaning of the statute, and becomes subject to the liability at-tached to that character. De Mattos v. Gibson, 1 Johns. & H. 84; 3 L. T. N.S. 121; 30 L. J. Ch. 145; 7 Jur. N.S. 282.

175. The mortgagee of a ship held liable for furnishings in a home port made on the authority of the master or owner, the mortgagee having taken the possession and management of the vessel. Russell v. Baird, 1 D. 931. [SCOTCH.]

176. B. accepted two bills of exchange, drawn upon him by A., and the latter executed in favour of the former a bill of sale of a ship, it being agreed between the parties that if A. neglected to provide for the bills when due, B. should be at liberty to indemnify himself by sale of the vessel. The bills were not paid by A., but by B., who thereupon took upon himself the management of the vessel by directing the master as to subsequent freight, voyages, &c. Held, that from the time when B. took upon him such direction he was owner, and not mort-gagee. Ex parte Howden, 2 Mont. D. & D. 574.

178. As to the mortgagee's liability for user of ship, see cap. 6, p. 1140.

11. Right to Freight.

179. The first registered mortgagee of a ship, by taking possession of her before the freight is completely earned, obtains a legal right to receive the freight, and to retain thereout not only what is due on his first mortgage, but also the amount of any subsequent mortgage which he may have acquired on the freight in priority to every equitable charge of which he had no notice; and it makes no difference that a subsequent incumbrancer was the first to give notice to the charterers of his charge on the freight. Liverpool Marine Credit Co. v. Wilson, 7 Ch. 507; 41 L. J. Ch. 798; 26 L. T. 717; 20 W. R. 665.

180. The mortgage of a ship carries with it the right to receive the freight earned by the ship; and although the mortgagee cannot recover back from the mortgagor freight which he has allowed the mortgagor to receive, he may at any time intercept the freight by giving notice to the mortgagor, consignee or charterer that he intends to exercise his right of property and to require the freight to be paid to him. Wilson v. Wilson, L. R. 14 Eq. 32; 41 L. J. Ch. 423; 26 L. T. 348; 20 W. R. 436.

181. A mortgagee of a ship does not, ordinarily speaking, obtain by the mortgage alone, a transfer by way of contract or assignment of the right to freight. The mortgagor remains the dominus of the ship with regard to everything relating to its employment or non-employment, or to any rate of freight to be earned by its employment, until the mortgagee takes possession. The mortgagee, on taking possession, becomes the owner, and it is by virtue of that ownership and not by virtue of any antecedent contract or right that he is entitled to receive the freight, which by contract or otherwise is lawfully payable. Keith v. Burrows, 9

182. Where an entire ship is in mortgage, in order to defeat the right of the mortgagor to receive the freight, the mortgagee must take possession of her before the completion of the voyage; but where the mortgagor of certain shares is ship's husband, if the mortgagee join with the owners of the other shares in the ship in the appointment of a new ship's husband before the completion of the voyage, the mortgagor loses all right as ship's husband to receive the freight. Beynon v. Godden, C. A. 3 Ex. D. 268; 39 L. T. 82; 26 W. R. 672.

183. The plaintiff, or first mortgagee of a British ship and her freight under a mortgage executed in England, commenced an action against the owners and second mortgagees, claiming an account. Finding that the freight was in the hands of a firm of foreign merchants, who claimed to retain it on account of a debt due from the second mortgagee, the plaintiff obtained leave to join the foreign merchants as defendants, on the ground that the plaintiff's claim was based upon an English contract. McStephens v. Carnegie, 4 Asp. 215.

15. French Law.*

* (22) By a law of 10th Dec. 1874, French ships are made subject to mortgage (hypothèque), it adds a fresh paragraph to Art. 191, and amends Art. 233 of the Code of Commerce. See also as to mortgage by French law, tit. BOTTOMRY, notes 169, 238, 248, 282, pp. 151—159.

formity with the law of the ship's flag. Barbaressos v. Nicolaidides & Co., Cas. Cir. 25th Nov. 1879; Grenoble, 11th May, 1881; Journ. de Droit Inter. Privé, 1880, p. 580; ibid. 1881, p. 428.

(24) The French courts will not recognize an unregistered sale (or semble, mortgage) of a ship, or shares in a ship, as against creditors of the apparent owner. L. L. 1878, II. 101.

1. Generally.*

1. Those are commonly called material men whose trade it is to build, repair, or equip ships, or to furnish them with tackle and provision necessary in any kind. The Neptune, 3 Hagg. 142.

2. By the law of England the master of a ship has no power to bind the ship or owner, except within special limits for repairs and supplies becoming necessary from the exigencies of the voyage.† This is an essential principle of bottomry. The

† (2) The decisions of the United States courts fully support this view, and even go further, for it has been held in more than one case that the person who supplies goods or money cannot recover against the ship, and consequently not against the owners, if it appears that the master had no necessity to pledge the ship's credit by reason of his having funds in hand to supply the ship's wants; there is a duty on the material man to make inquiries as to the master's authority before making advances. Thomas v. Osborn, 19 Wallace, U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep. 22; Pratt v. Read, ibid. 359; The Eledona, 2 Benedict, U. S. Dist. Ct. 2nd Dist. Rep. 31; Gager v. Babcock, 48 N. Y. Rep. 154. [AMERICAN.]

(3) The general rule of law to be deduced from the various American cases seems to be that even in a foreign port a master cannot pledge his owner's credit if the owner himself, or his agent, be present. See Parsons on Shipping, vol. 2, pp. 8, 9, 10 and 17, and the cases there cited.

(4) The general rule never seems to have been really disputed. Several cases have been decided which have been distinguished on the ground that the owner has ratified the master's authority. See Provost v. Patchin, 9 N. Y. Rep. 235, and the cases there cited.

(5) The master of a ship has authority, in a foreign port, to procure all supplies and repairs reasonably fit and proper for the safety of the ship and the due performance of the voyage. The Ship Fortitude, 3 Sumner, 228. [AMERICAN.]

(6) Material men have a lien for repairs to a ship in a foreign port, whenever those repairs are apparently reasonable and proper, although not absolutely necessary. Ibid.

(7) All that is required on their part is good faith, and reasonable ground for action. Ibid.

(8) A master acting with reasonable diligence, discretion and skill, upon the advice of competent persons at a foreign port, in making repairs, will be protected, even though a more judicious course might possibly have been adopted in the judgment of other more skillful persons. Ibid.

(9) The plaintiffs should exhibit an account of the items of expenses for repairs, supplies, &c., that the court may judge whether they were necessary for effectuating the objects of the voyage. The Bridgewater, Olcott, Adm. 35. [AMERICAN.]

Boddingtons, 2 Hagg. 425. See also tit. BOTTOMRY, cap. 6; and as to the master's authority generally to contract for his owners, tit. MASTERS, c. 5, p. 1120, and tit. OWNERS, Pt. II.

3. In law both the owner and the

(10) The authority of the master to procure supplies and repairs to his ship when in a foreign port is not confined to such supplies and repairs as are absolutely or indispensably necessary, but includes all such as are reasonably fit and proper for the ship and the voyage. The Ship Fortitude, 3 Sumner, 228. [AMERICAN.]

(11) A master may charge the owner for the necessary supplies for the usual employment of the vessel, but not for superfluities or luxuries. Pratt v. Tunno, 2 Brevard, 449. [AMERICAN.]

(12) Primâ facie the supplies of material men to a foreign ship are to be deemed to be furnished on the credit of the ship and the owners. The Brig Nestor, 1 Sumner, 75. [AMERICAN.]

(13) Workmen and material men having a lien on a vessel may enforce it before the vessel is finished or sold. Davies v. A New Brig, Gilpin, 473; Harper v. The New Brig, ibid. 536; Read v. The Hull of a New Brig, 1 Story, 244. [AMERICAN.]

(14) A suit against the owners of a ship for supplies furnished to the master in a foreign port cannot be maintained without proof that the supplies were necessary. Whitten v. Tisdale, 43 Maine, 451. [AMERICAN.]

(15) The owner of a vessel is liable for necessary supplies furnished by order of the master, and if he seeks to escape such liability he must show by satisfactory proof that the credit was given to others; he may show that credit was given to the master alone for such supplies, or that there was a special promise taken from him and relied on, and thus exempt himself from liability. Abbott v. Baltimore and Rappahannock Steam Packet Co., 1 Maryland Ch. Decis. 552. [AMERICAN.]

(16) A painter was in the habit of painting the ships built by a builder, and kept a general account against him. Held, that he trusted the builder, and had no lien for the painting of one particular vessel. Scott v. Propeller Plymouth, 6 McLean, 463. [AMERICAN.]

(17) Work done upon a vessel in the dry dock, in scraping her bottom preparatory to coppering her, is not of a maritime character, and compensation for such labour cannot be recovered in a Court of Admiralty. Bradley v. Bolles, 1 Abb. Adm. 569. [AMERICAN.]

(18) There is no remedy in a Court of Admiralty, either in rem or in personam, for the breach of an executory contract for personal services to be rendered to a vessel in port, in loading or unloading her cargo. Cox v. Murray, ibid. 340. [AMERICAN.]

(19) Neither costs of advertising a vessel for sea, nor portage, nor commissions for procuring freight, wages of stevedores or lightermen, are liens on the ship, suable in rem. The Joseph Cunard, Olcott, Adm. 120. [AMERICAN.]

(20) A person employed to visit a vessel at anchor from time to time, to see to her safety, ventilate her, try her pumps, and the like, cannot maintain a suit in Admiralty to recover his compensation for such services. Gurney v. Crockett, ibid. 490. [AMERICAN.]

(21) But if, in the course of such employment, a necessity arises that such keeper should get the ship under way, and navigate her from one anchorage to another, this is a maritime service for which he may recover in a Court of Admiralty. Ibid.

(21a) A person who lends money to be employed in the repairs of a vessel, or to furnish her with supplies, has the same privilege against the vessel that material men have. He is considered as giving credit both to the ship and to the owners. The ship is hypothecated to him for his security, and he may maintain in the Admiralty Court either a libel in rem against the vessel, or a libel in personam against the owners. See Davis v. Child, Davies, 71. [AMERICAN.]

(21b) Whether this principle be supposed to have been borrowed from the Roman law, or to have had an independent origin in the commercial usages of the middle ages, it appears to be equally unquestionable in one case as in the other. Ibid.

(21c) As to claims and proceedings by material men in the American courts, see 2 Parsons on Maritime Law, 548; 1 Conkling's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) 73; Dunlap's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) 70; and for forms of libel and answer on such a claim, see ibid. pp. 503—507. [AMERICAN.]

(22) Where the master of a vessel, in a port of a state to which she does not belong, had taken her on shares, agreeing to victual and man her, he was held to have no right, as between himself and his owner, to obtain provisions upon the credit of his owners. Webb v. Pierce, Sprague, 192. [AMERICAN.]

(23) But third persons ignorant of any special agreement had a right to trust to the apparent authority of the master; and if they did so in good faith, the owner would be bound personally for necessary supplies and provisions. Ibid.

(24) Provisions and groceries furnished for the use of a steamboat create a lien on the boat under statute 1833, though the boat was let by charterparty, and the articles were furnished the lessee for use on the boat. But some one, if not all of the owners, must be made a party to the proceedings. Greenlaw v. Potter, 5 Sneed. (Term.) 390. [AMERICAN.]

(25) The lien given by statute on ships attaches from service in the suit, not from the master may be responsible, not jointly, but separately, to the material man, who may bring his action against either of them. The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 357.

4. When goods are furnished for the use and benefit of a foreign ship the presumption is that the ship is liable, and to rebut this presumption it must be distinctly proved that credit was given to the individual only. The Perla, Swabey, 354; 4 Jur. N.S. 742.

5. Where no special contract as to the article purchased is proved, the purchaser takes at his own risk. The Flecha, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 444.

6. The master of a Belgian passenger vessel employed an engineer in London to supply his vessel with a new screw propeller, which did not produce the increased speed in the vessel, nor the decreased consumption of fuel represented by the plaintiff. Held, that in the absence of a special contract the ship was liable. Ibid.

7. It is contrary to all principle that a master could legally execute a bottomry bond on one vessel for debts arising from supplies and necessaries furnished to other ships. The Osmanli, 3 W. Rob. 212.

8. A ship cannot be made liable to arrest for a general balance of account by merely appropriating the receipts and payments in such a manner as to show a balance for which the ship would be liable. The West Friesland, Swabey, 454; S. C. on appeal, ibid. 456; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 186; 5 Jur. N.S. 658; 8 W. R. 423; 2 L. T. N.S. 613; and see, as to the appropriation of payments, Devaynes v. Noble (Clayton's case), Tudor's Leading Cases in Maritime Law, p. 1.

9. In the case of a sale of a ship abroad by the master, held, that the purchasers, if they had acquired no legal title by the purchase, had no claim or lien in respect of the moneys laid out by them in the repairs. Ridgway v. Roberts, 4 Hare, 106.

10. When a ship is arrested for a specific demand, the amount cannot be referred to the registrar, unless it appears that something in any event is due. The West Friesland, 5 Jur. N.S. 658; Swabey, 454; S. C. on appeal, ibid. 456; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 186; 8 W. R. 423; 2 L. T. N.S. 613.

11. A claim for advances pronounced against with costs upon the ground that the demand was fictitious and fraudulent, and the result of a conspiracy between the master and the party pretending to have made the advances. The Helena Sophia, 3 W. Rob. 277; 7 Notes of Cases, 492.

12. A shipwright is not entitled to be paid for the use of his dock while he detains a ship under a lien against the will of the owner. Somes v. British Empire Shipping Company, 31 L. T. 196; 4 Jur. N.S. 893; 27 L. J. Q. B. 397; El. Bl. & El. 353; affirmed by House of Lords, 6 Jur. N.S. 761; 8 W. R. 707; 30 L. J. Q. B. 229.

13. The Act of 7 Geo. 1, c. 21, s. 2, making void all contracts with reference to ships in the service of foreigners trading to the East Indies after being repealed by implication (see The India, 33 L. J. Adm. 193; 2 Asp. 193; 12 L. T. N.S.) was expressly repealed by the Stat. Law Rev. Act, 1867, c. 59.

14. In relation to the rights and remedies of persons having claims for repairs done, or supplies furnished to or for ships, every port within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the Islands of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney and Sark, and the islands adjacent to any of them, being part of the dominions of her Majesty, shall be deemed a home port. See the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 8.

14a. The 8th sect. of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, is to be construed as a remedial enactment, intended to enlarge and not restrict the rights and remedies therein referred to. The Isabella, 2 Asp. 416. [IRISH.]

15. A mortgagee in possession is not time when the debt was incurred. Fisher v. White, 8 Cal. 418. [AMERICAN.]

(26) A party claiming a lien on a vessel for the value of materials furnished by him towards the building of the vessel, on the request of the person building the vessel, must prove that the materials were actually incorporated into the vessel. The mere fact that the materials were ordered and actually delivered at the yard where the vessel was building is not enough to cause the lien to attach. Hiscox v. Harbeck, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 506. [AMERICAN.]

(27) The Admiralty has jurisdiction to enforce against the ship the lien of a shipwright having the ship still in his custody. Dunlap's American Admiralty Practice (2nd ed.), 70.

(28) The lien of material men attaches also to the freight as well as the ship. Drinkwater v. The Freight and Cargo of the Spartan, Ware, 149. [AMERICAN.]

liable for necessities supplied to the ship unless the master in ordering the necessities is acting as the agent of such mortgagee. An allegation that the defendant was in possession of the vessel at the date of the supplies, and was personally liable for them, is not a good reply to an answer of the defendant claiming to be a mortgagee prior to the date of the supply. The Troubadour, L. R. 1 A. & E. 302; 2 Asp. 475. See also tit. MORTGAGE, pp. 1145, 1146.

16. Bill for payment of necessities, drawn by the master while abroad upon the owner, and dishonoured. Subsequent sale by the owner. Semble, the vessel cannot be arrested in respect of the claim for necessities. Castrique v. Imrie, 8 C. B. N.S. 1.

17. A ship, after an absence of four years and a-half engaged in the transport service, arrived at the port of P., where she received orders from the Transport Board to proceed to D., upon which the master borrowed money to pay seamen's wages (P. being a port of discharge), and to pay for articles supplied for the ship's use there. In an action against the owner for the money so advanced, the plaintiff was nonsuited, but, finally, the Court of Exchequer set aside the nonsuit, and ordered a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff, but for such sum as should, on a reference, be found due for the seamen's wages, it appearing that the seamen refused to proceed on the further voyage without being paid their wages to P. Robinson v. Lyall, 7 Price, 592.

18. A claim by a person having paid wages to the ship's crew at the request of the master on account of the ship, is in the nature of a wages claim, and entitled to the same priority. The William F. Safford, 2 L. T. N.S. 301; 29 L. J. Adm. 110; 1 Lushington, 69.

19. The registered owner of a ship handed her over to his sons to enable them to get a living, he retaining the bare ownership, but not receiving any of the earnings nor interfering with the management. Held, that he was not liable for repairs to the ship not ordered by him. Fuller v. Grand, Mitch. Mar. Reg. April 1, 1865.

20. An advance of freight to enable a master to pay his ship's disbursements, does not give the charterer a claim against the ship, which will take precedence of a claim of a mortgagee; nor does an advance for a similar purpose made by an insurance company. The Turlianis, 32 L. T. Adm. 841.

21. In his accounts against the mortgagee, the master is entitled to security for the amount for which he is personally liable in respect of necessities. The Limerick, 1 P. D. 292, 411.

21a. But held, by the Court of Appeal, that the master was not entitled to have retained in court the amount of the penalty under a bond which he had given for payment of damages arising from a collision by his default, although by giving such bond he had obtained the release of the vessel. Ibid.

2. As affecting Cargo.*

22. If the master of a ship orders repairs for such ship, or borrows money on a bottomry bond in order to execute the repairs, he is the agent alone of the owner of the ship and not of the owners of cargo, in ordering such repairs and borrowing money. Benson v. Duncan, 14 Jur. 218.

23. A ship being in need of repairs, part of the cargo was sold, and three bottomry bonds were granted by the master. Held, that a claim made by the consignees of that part of the cargo which was sold to be repaid out of the funds in court could not be sustained. The Constancia, 10 Jur. 845; 4 Notes of Cases, 677.

24. Cargo was sold at I. to pay the expense of repairs there to a foreign ship bound from L. to S. On the vessel's return to L., the shippers arrested her. Held, that they were not entitled to do so, nor to be considered in the light of material men, but must seek their remedy from the foreign shipowner abroad. The Bravo, June 27th, 1853.

25. As to the right of the owners of cargo sold to deduct such amounts from the freight in their hands, see tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, p. 588.

* (29) If the owner of the cargo is on board of a vessel at the time of a disaster requiring that money shall be obtained by the master to enable the vessel to prosecute the voyage, he is bound to advance funds; and if he does so, he is entitled to satisfactory security, and an extra and adequate compensation for the advance. Ross v. The Ship Active, 2 Wash. C. C. 226. [AMERICAN.]

3. Jurisdiction.*

1. Of the Admiralty Branch of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice.

26. For provisions transferring to the Admiralty branch of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice the jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty, see tit. JURISDICTION, p. 638.

2. Of the High Court of Admiralty before the Judicature Acts.†

(a) Generally.

27. The High Court of Admiralty shall have jurisdiction over any claim for the

* (30) The Court of Admiralty had, as will be seen from this chapter, no jurisdiction since the time of Charles II. in regard to necessaries, repairs or supplies, until the passing of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, which gave it jurisdiction over foreign ships only, and in respect of necessaries only, and those furnished only on the high seas or in British ports. This jurisdiction was subsequently extended under the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, s. 5, to any British ship elsewhere than in the port to which she belonged when no part owner was domiciled in England or Wales. By the 4th section of this last act, however, jurisdiction was given to the court over other matters than necessaries, i. e., over any claim for the building, equipping, or repairing of any ship, which, or the proceeds of which, were under arrest of the court at the time the action was brought, so that this last kind of action extended to all claims for repairs or supplies to ships, but could only be brought when the court already had the ship under arrest or had sold the ship and was holding the proceeds. Vide supra, Nos. 27, 39, 50, and 58. The Admiralty Division now has the same jurisdiction as the Court of Admiralty had as above.

† (31) Before the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), material men had not, according to the common law of England, which was binding on the Admiralty Court, any lien upon an English ship in specie in respect of such repairs or supplies, though in most of the continental countries governed by the civil law such a lien was recognized. The Neptune, 3 Hagg. 136, 139; The Vrow Mina, 1 Dodson, 235; The Alexander, ibid. 280; The Zodiac, 1 Hagg. 325; The Vibia, 1 W. Rob. 6.

(31a) In England the same law was for a long time recognized in its maritime courts, until after a long contest it was finally overthrown by the courts of common law and the House of Lords in the reign of Charles II. See 1 Rol. Abr. 533; Cro. Car. 296, 1 Hagg. 320, 325; The Pacific, 2 Asp. 22, and cap. 5, p. 1166, Nos. 189 and 190. The practice, however, of the Court of Admiralty, of paying material men out of proceeds of sale of a ship continued until the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council affirmed such a practice to be illegal. See The Neptune, 3 Knapp, P. C. Rep. 94, and The New Eagle, 10 Jur. 623; 4 Notes of Cases, 426; overruling ibid. 3 Hagg. 129; The John, 3 C. Rob. 288; and The Maitland, 2 Hagg. 254.

(32) As to the jurisdiction of the Irish Court of Admiralty under this head, see tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. c. 24, p. 684.

(33) Qui in navem extruendam vel instruendam credit vel etiam emendam privilegium habet. Dig. lib. 42, 5, 26. Quod quis navis fabricandæ vel emendæ vel armandæ vel instruendæ causâ vel quoquo modo crediderit vel ob navem venditam pstat, habet privilegium post fiscum. Dig. lib. 42, 5, 34.

(34) The material man who supplies a foreign ship with necessaries has, by the general maritime law, on the specific ship a lien, which may be enforced in Admiralty by a proceeding in rem. The Brig Nestor, 1 Sumner, 73; The General Smith, 4 Wheaton, 443; Gardner v. The Ship New Jersey, 1 Peters, 223; Johnson v. The Schooner McDonough, Gilpin, 101; Ex parte Lewis, etc., 2 Gall. 483; 1 Conkling's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), p. 302. [AMERICAN.]

(35) He also has the personal security of the owners and master, unless the master takes care by express terms to confine the credit to the ship and owners. Ibid.

(36) Every ship is considered foreign when she does not belong to the same state where the repairs or necessaries are furnished. Peyroux v. Howard, 7 Peters, S. C. Rep. 351. [AMERICAN.]

(37) When repairs or necessaries are furnished in the port or state to which the ship belongs, no lien on the ship is implied unless it is recognized by the local or municipal law of that state, in which case it may be enforced in Admiralty. Ibid.

(38) Workmen, and material men, and persons building a vessel, or furnishing it with repairs or necessaries, in a port or state to which she belongs, have no implied lien on the vessel, and cannot enforce one by suit in rem in the Admiralty unless such lien be given by a state law. Davis v. Brig, Gilpin, 479; Peyroux v. Howard, 7 Pet. 324; The General Smith, 4 Wheat. 438; Phillips v. The Scattergood, Gilpin, 1; Boon v. The Hornet, Crabbe, 426; Tree v. The Indiana, ibid. 479; Harper v. A New Brig, Gilpin, 536; The Calisto, Daves, 29; Davis v. Child, ibid. 71; Bark Chusan, 2 Story, 455; Perkins v. Pike, 42 Maine, 141. [AMERICAN.]

building, equipping, or repairing of any ship if at the time of the institution of the cause the ship, or the proceeds thereof, are under arrest of the court. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 4.

28. The jurisdiction conferred by this act on the High Court of Admiralty may be exercised either by proceedings in rem or by proceedings in personam. Ibid. s. 35.

29. In the interpretation and for the purposes of this act (if not inconsistent with the context or subject) the following terms shall have the respective meanings hereinafter assigned to them; that is to say, "ship" shall include any description of vessel used in navigation not propelled by oars. Ibid. s. 2.

30. The Court of Admiralty has no jurisdiction under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, nor under the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), to entertain a claim for repairs done in a foreign port. The India, 9 Jur. N.S. 418; 2 N. R. 42; 32 L. J. Adm. 185.

31. Sects. 4 and 5 apply only to British ships. Ibid.

32. The Court of Admiralty has no jurisdiction under the 4th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, to adjudicate upon a mate's claim for wages paid by him to the crew, nor for necessary disbursements in foreign parts. The Victoria, 37 L. J. Adm. 12.

33. An action for necessaries against a Spanish barque in which the claim was for £110, was instituted in the Admiralty Court. On motion by the plaintiffs for leave to proceed, so as to free themselves from liability for costs, on the plea that it was necessary to institute the action in the higher court in order to arrest without delay, the court held that it had no power to grant the application after the suit had been instituted, but intimated that the plaintiffs should make an application to the court at the hearing of the cause for a certificate for costs. The Lloreta, 40 L. J. Adm. 50; 20 L. T. 447; 1 Asp. N.S. 19.

34. A material man has not by supplying necessaries a maritime lien, but only a statutory lien, against the ship. (The Skipwith, 10 L. T. N.S. 43, not followed.) The Pacific, 2 Asp. 21; The Two Ellens, L. R. 3 A. & E. 345; L. R. 4 P. C. 161; and see tit. LIENS, p. 826, No. 153.

35. To obtain that lien he must have arrested the ship. The Pacific, supra.

36. In the months of November and December, 1861, and January and February, 1862, the plaintiffs furnished a vessel with necessaries. On the 12th December the defendants became mortgagees of the vessel, and duly registered the mortgage. On the 4th February, 1862, the plaintiff arrested the vessel in a suit in respect of the necessaries. Held, that the plaintiff's claim in the Admiralty Court accrued at the date of the

(40) The statute of Maine conferred on mechanics and material men such a lien on domestic vessels as the general Admiralty law had previously allowed to them on foreign vessels. The Young Mechanic, 2 Curtis, C. C. 404. [AMERICAN.]

(41) The local law of Maine does not give to material men a lien on one vessel for the price of materials furnished for it and another vessel, though both are of the same size and model, but only in such case for what was used in the vessel proceeded against. The Kiersage, ibid. 421. [AMERICAN.]

(42) The courts of the United States have not jurisdiction in Admiralty to enforce liens for labour and materials furnished in constructing vessels. People's Ferry Company of Boston v. Beers, 20 How. (U. S.) 393. [AMERICAN.]

(43) A Court of Admiralty has no jurisdiction to admit against principals, owners of a vessel, a libel filed by their agent, alleging an expenditure of money by him on or about the vessel, and praying for an account and payment of the money due to him. Mintwin v. Maynard, 17 How. (U. S.) 477. [AMERICAN.]

(44) The court has no jurisdiction over a claim for repairs made on a canal boat not built for use, nor used, in tide water, though the repairs were made where the tide ebbed and flowed. Boon v. The Hornet, Crabbe, 426. [AMERICAN.]

(45) Although the giving of credit for materials furnished to a foreign vessel may so far discharge the lien as to exclude the material man from bringing a suit in rem to enforce it, or from his being a privileged creditor, still he is entitled, upon petition, to be paid out of remnants and surplus remaining in the registry. Lane v. Brig President, 4 Wash. C. C. 453 (American); but see as to proceedings against remnants and surplus proceeds, 2 Parsons on Maritime Law, 548. [AMERICAN.]

arrest of the vessel, and must therefore be postponed to that of the mortgagee. The Pacific, 2 Asp. 21.

36a. A foreign vessel was in an English port, and the owner, being temporarily in England and in want of funds for the purchase of necessaries, made an agreement with the plaintiffs, by which, in consideration of their advancing him by cash or acceptance £600 for necessaries supplied to the vessel, he undertook to return the amount with interest and charges, on the vessel's return from her voyage, and authorized the plaintiffs to cover the amount so advanced by insurance on ship, &c., at owner's cost. The owner subsequently became bankrupt, and his assignees sold the vessel to N. and others. In an action in rem for such necessaries, brought after the sale of the ship, held, by the Court of Appeal, that this agreement was not a bottomry bond; and that the plaintiffs had no lien on the ship for the necessaries so supplied; for that before 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, English law gave no maritime lien on a foreign ship for necessaries supplied to her, that that section did not give any maritime lien, but only a right to seize the ship on the institution of an action, and there being no lien, and the ship having changed owners since the supply of the necessaries, the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover against the vessel. The Ella A. Clark, Br. & L. 32, overruled; The Two Ellens, L. R. 4 P. C. 161, explained; The Heinrich Bjorn, 10 P. D. 44; 52 L. T. N.S. 560.

37. The powers of material men to enforce their lien differ under the English and Irish Admiralty Court Acts. Hamilton v. Harland, 41 L. T. 741 [IRISH]. The Acacia, 4 Asp. 254.

38. See, as to powers of Commissioners of Admiralty to institute actions as to naval stores, &c., the Admiralty Suits Act, 1868, c. 78.

(b) As to Necessaries.

(aa) Under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65.

39. The High Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction to decide all claims and demands whatsoever . . . for necessaries supplied to any foreign ship or sea-going vessel, and to enforce the payment thereof, whether such ship or vessel may have been within the body of a county or upon the high seas at the time when the . . . necessaries were furnished, in respect of which such claim is made. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6.

40. Before this act foreign ships could not be subjected to actions in rem under any circumstances for necessaries supplied. It therefore happened that great inconvenience, and sometimes danger, to ships took place, by the want of anchors, cables, or provisions. It was to remedy those evils that the statute was passed—to remove, on the one hand, the pressure of immediate want, and on the other, to give the British merchant or broker his remedy for such advances. The Comtesse de Frégeville, 1 Lushington, 332; 4 L. T. N.S. 714; The Ocean, 2 W. Rob. 371; The Wataga, Swabey, 166.

41. One of the reasons for the jurisdiction conferred on the Court of Admiralty as to necessaries by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, is, that the law of this country might in that respect be assimilated to the general law of the maritime states of Europe, which gives a lien to persons who furnish necessaries to a vessel in port, or on the high seas. The Flecha, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 441.

42. The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, is remedial, and is therefore to be construed liberally. The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 296; 1 Notes of Cases, 188; The Wataga, Swabey, 167.

43. The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, which revives the ancient jurisdiction of the court with regard to necessaries supplied to a foreign ship, was never intended to alter the law, but merely to give a new remedy, rendered necessary in the peculiar cases of foreign ships, and confined to that necessity. The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 360; 6 Jur. 241; 1 Notes of Cases, 380.

44. The master of a foreign vessel lying in the port of Q., being without funds or credit, by means of a bill of exchange drawn upon a firm of ship-brokers in L., procured the advance of a sum of money for necessaries for the ship. The bill of exchange was accepted and paid, but the acceptors, not having received the amount of the bill from the shipowners, instituted an action against the ship for the amount of the bill. Held, that the court had jurisdiction to entertain the action. (The Wataga, Swabey, 165, and The Onni, Lushington, 154, followed.) The Anna, 1 P. D. 253.

45. The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, applies to foreign ships in colonial as well as in British ports. The Wataga, Swabey, 166; 28 L. T. 192; 5 W. R. 155; The Onni, 1 Lushington, 154; The Anna, 1 P. D. (C. A.) 253; 46 L. J. P. D. & A. 15; 3 Asp. N.S. 237.

46. Semble, Simon's Bay is on the high seas within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The Wataga, Swabey, 168.

47. Claimants for necessaries have not the same rights of suit in the Admiralty Court as those possessed of a maritime lien. See The Heinrich Bjorn, supra, No. 36a, overruling The Ella A. Clark, otherwise Golden Age, 8 L. T. N.S. 119; and The Skipwith, 10 L. T. N.S. 43.

48. Moneys for necessaries had been advanced partly when the ship was lying in a foreign port, and partly when she was in a port in England. The court ordered payment of both sums out of the proceeds of the ship, the suit being undefended and the owners not opposing the motion. Semble, otherwise the court would have had considerable difficulty in making the order. The Afina Van Linge, Swabey, 514; 1 L. T. N.S. 339.

49. The right to sue under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, for necessaries supplied to a foreign ship, is not affected by the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, s. 5 (semble, as to the jurisdiction of the court). The Ella A. Clark, otherwise The Golden Age, 8 L. T. N.S. 119. As to the relative priority of such claims, see tit. LIENS, p. 826, and ibid. in Addenda.

50. The Court of Admiralty has no jurisdiction under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, to entertain a claim for necessaries supplied in a foreign port. The India, 9 Jur. N.S. 418; 2 N. R. 42.

51. A vessel built and registered at New Brunswick in Nova Scotia, held not to be a foreign vessel within the meaning of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, and therefore that the Court of Admiralty had no jurisdiction under this act over a claim in respect of necessaries supplied to her. The Ocean Queen, 1 W. Rob. 457; 1 Notes of Cases, 271.

52. Necessaries were supplied to a foreign ship prior to the passing of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65. Subsequently proceedings were taken against her under the 6th section of that act. Held, that the court had jurisdiction to entertain the claim. The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 288; 1 Notes of Cases, 188; 5 Jur. 1067. See also tit. JURISDICTION.

53. This act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 65) confers on the court a jurisdiction as to necessaries supplied to a foreign ship, to be employed in every lawful mode which the court has the power to exercise for enforcing payment, viz. by proceedings in rem or in personam. Ibid.

54. The jurisdiction conferred on the Court of Admiralty by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, is not affected by the fact that the necessaries were furnished on personal credit. Ibid.

55. Money advanced to discharge a debt incurred for necessaries does not found a claim for necessaries under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The N. R. Gosfabrick, Swabey, 345; 31 L. T. 345; 6 W. R. 871; Beldon v. Campbell, 17 L. T. 257; Frost v. Oliver, 1 E. & B. 301; 2 L. J. Q. B. 353.

56. A foreign ship having been arrested at the suit of a bondholder, money was advanced to the master to enable him to pay seamen's wages. Held, upon an unopposed motion, that such money was recoverable against the ship as necessaries under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65. The Henry Reed, 32 L. T. 166; 7 W. R. Adm. 180.

57. But quere, if the motion had been opposed. Ibid.

58. The High Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction over any claim for necessaries supplied to any ship elsewhere than in the port to which the ship belongs, unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that at the time of the institution of the cause any owner or part owner of the ship is domiciled in England or Wales. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 5; see The Masonic, 5 L. T. N.S. 460.

59. But if in any such cause the plaintiff do not recover £20, he shall not be entitled to any costs, charges, or expenses incurred by him therein, unless the judge shall certify that the cause was a fit one to be tried in the said court. Ibid.

60. The jurisdiction conferred by this act on the High Court of Admiralty may be exercised either by proceedings in rem or by proceedings in personam. Ibid. s. 35.

61. Sects. 4 and 5 apply only to British ships. The India, supra, No. 50.

62. In the interpretation, and for the purposes of this act (if not inconsistent with the context or subject) the following terms shall have the respective meanings hereinafter assigned to them; that is to say, "ship" shall include any description of vessel used in navigation not propelled by oars. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 2.

63. In order to oust the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty over a claim for necessaries, the objection that the owner of the ship is domiciled in England or Wales must be taken before judgment pronounced. Ex parte Michael, L. R. 7 Q. B. 658.

64. Where it is not so taken prohibition will not be granted. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 65.

65. In an Admiralty cause, instituted in the Court of Passage to recover a claim for necessaries supplied to a vessel in the Port of Liverpool, the defendants in their answer alleged that at the time the necessaries were supplied the vessel belonged to the Port of Liverpool, and that at the time of the institution of the suit a part owner of the vessel was domiciled in England or Wales. These allegations were objected to by the plaintiffs as irrelevant, and the assessor of the Court of Passage ordered them to be struck out. On appeal to the Court of Admiralty the decision of the assessor was reversed, on the ground that the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, does not confer upon the Court of Passage a more extensive jurisdiction as to any claim for necessaries, than that exercised by the Court of Admiralty. The Dowse, L. R. 3 A. & E. 135.

66. The 5th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, applies to British and Colonial ships exclusively. The Ella A. Clark, 9 Jur. N.S. 312; 8 L. T. N.S. 119; 1 N. R. 525.

67. Semble, the words "owner" or "part owner," domiciled in England or Wales (in the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, s. 5), refer to owner at the time when the necessaries were furnished, and not to owner at the time of the institution of the cause. Ibid.

68. The term "domiciled" in the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, s. 5, is used in the ordinary legal sense, and if the owner of a ship is only temporarily absent from this country, an action for necessaries cannot be maintained against his ship.

The Pacific, 10 L. T. N.S. 541; 10 Jur. N.S. 1110; 33 L. J. Adm. 120; B. & L. 243.

69. The jurisdiction conferred on the High Court of Admiralty by sect. 5 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 "over any claim for necessaries supplied to any ship elsewhere than in the port to which the ship belongs," does create a statutory but not a maritime lien. The Two Ellens, L. R. 3 A. & E. 345; L. R. 4 P. C. 161; The Pacific, 2 Asp. 21; The Heinrich Bjorn, supra, No. 36a; and see tit. LIENS, p. 826; and ibid. in Addenda.

6. Of Vice-Admiralty Courts.

73. Sub-sect. 10 of sect. 10 of the Vice-Admiralty Court Act, 1863, does not confer on Vice-Admiralty Courts any jurisdiction to enforce claims for necessaries by way of maritime lien, and Vice-Admiralty Courts have no such jurisdiction. The Rio Tinto, 9 App. Cas. 356; 53 L. J. P. C. 54; 5 Asp. 224.

73a. Material men supplying necessaries to a British ship in a possession in which a Vice-Admiralty Court is established, do not acquire a maritime lien. Ibid. 9 App. Cas. 356; 5 Asp. 224.

73b. See tit. JURISDICTION, p. 688.

4. Necessaries.

1. Generally.*

74. The principle upon which the owner of a ship is made responsible for

* (47) The master's power to borrow money for the use of the ship, and make the owner liable, is now grounded on reasonable, and not on absolute, necessity. Edwards v. Havell, C. P. Nov. 4, 1854; 2 C. L. R. 1343; 2 W. R. C. P. 12; Abbott on Shipping, 12th ed. p. 103.

(48) Held, by a majority of the judges, that if a seaman, in consideration of an advance note, is supplied with clothes on account and receives the balance in cash, the advance note may be enforced against the shipowner by the person so obtaining it. McKane v. Joynson, C. P. May 22, 1858; W. R. 658; and see C. B. N.S. 218.

(49) Advances made at B. by an agent to the master of a vessel owned at S. Verdict against shipowner for amount claimed. Cresswell, J., in directing the jury, said that, as regarded borrowing money in such a case for the use of the vessel, the only question was, whether the circumstances were such as to constitute him the agent of the owner in order to procure the advances. Williamson v. Page, Northern Circuit, Liverpool, Aug. 27, 1844; see 1 Car. & K. 581; Harrison's Digest, 3381; Shess's Tenterden, 104.

(50) Held, that advances made to a master for necessary repairs of a ship could not be recovered from a party in whose favour a bill of sale had been executed in consideration of money lent to the shipowner, but which bill of sale, although entered in the necessaries furnished to him by order of the master is this, that in the employment of the ship the master is the agent of the owner, and his character and situation furnish a presumption that he has authority from the owner to take all measures that may be necessary for rendering the employment of the vessel efficient and beneficial to his employer. The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 356; 6 Jur. 241; 1 Notes of Cases, 380.

75. The court would not make the owners of a foreign ship liable for the supply of any articles for which, under similar circumstances, if resident here, they would not be responsible in a court of common law. Ibid. 1 W. Rob. 360; The Sophie, ibid. 369.

76. In all cases in which the owners of a ship are sought to be made liable in contract for necessaries supplied on the order of the master, or in tort for the negligence of the crew, the question of liability does not depend on the title to the ship. The real question is, whether the owners who are sought to be charged were the employers of the master who made the contract, or the masters of the persons who were guilty of the negligence. Per the majority of the court in Hibbs v. Ross, L. R. 1 Q. B. 534; 35 L. J. Q. B. 193; 2 Asp. 397; 7 B. & S. 655.

77. A further question sometimes arises whether the owners may not have clothed the master with apparent authority so as to be precluded from disputing his authority. Ibid.

78. The liability of an owner to pay for repairs and equipments ordered by the master, depends not upon the ground of ownership but upon the ground of a contract made with the vendor by a person who was the owner's agent, for the purpose of ordering such repairs and equipments. No contract of a master can bind the owner, unless such authority has been actually given to him, or unless the owner has by word or deed held out the master as his master, and thereby induced the vendor to supply the articles upon the credit of the owner. The Great Eastern, L. R. 2 A. & E. 88; 3 Asp. 58.

79. A vessel was chartered by the owners to one D. By the terms of the charter-party the master, officers and crew were to be appointed by the owners (subject to the approval of the charterer), to be under the control of the owners, and to be dismissed by them. An action was brought against the owners for necessaries supplied to the ship by the master's orders. Held, that the owners were liable, on the ground that they had held out the master to third parties as their agent for the ship. Ibid.

80. In order to constitute a demand against the owners it is necessary that the supplies furnished by the master's orders should be reasonably fit and proper for the occasion. The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 363; 6 Jur. 241; 1 Notes of Cases, 380; and Abb. Sh., 12th ed. p. 92, therein cited.

81. In a claim for necessaries the onus of proof rests with the material man. The principle of law in casting this onus on him is founded on great and important principles of justice. Ibid.

82. It is not sufficient to aver that the goods supplied were necessary. They must be necessary at the time and under the then existing circumstances, in the sense the law requires. Ibid.; The Sophie, 1 W. Rob. 369; 1 Notes of Cases, 393; The Helena Sophia, 3 W. Rob. 270; 7 Notes of Cases, 492. See also Carey v. White, 1 Bro. Par. Cases, 284.

83. The rule is to inquire what a prudent owner would do if he were present. Webster v. Seekamp, 4 B. & Ald. 354; The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 361; 6 Jur. 241; 1 Notes of Cases, 380.

84. In an action against a shipowner for goods supplied and money lent to the master at a foreign port, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that the goods and money supplied were necessaries. Mackintosh v. Mitcheson, 4 Exch. 175; 18 L. J. Exch. 385; Carey v. White, 1 Bro. Par. Cases, 284; Rocher v. Busher, 1 Stark. 27.

85. Where, on a claim by material men, it appears that they had agreed to look to the agent of the owners of the ship for payment, they have no claim on the vessel. The Isabella, 2 Asp. 416.

86. In an action for necessaries where registry as an absolute one, was understood to have been granted merely as collateral security for the loan, a memorandum to that effect having been signed. Myers v. Willis, 17 C. B. 85; affirmed 18 C. B. 836.

(51) The court must look to see what was the intention of parties when they executed the bill of sale, and it was clearly not intended that the defendant should become absolute owner, that he should have a vessel worth several thousand pounds in consideration of £1,000, and take upon himself liability for the acts of the master. Formerly the registration of ownership was conclusive of liability, but it is now settled that contracts in such cases must depend upon the ordinary law of principal and agent. Ibid.

the defendants denied liability on the ground that the sum sued for was in respect of matters covered by a contract to repair the vessel, the court, before judgment, directed an inquiry, under Ord. xxxiii., as to what sum, if any, was due. The Sully, 48 L. J. P. D. 56.

87. The defendants, as agents for a Colonial Navigation Company, ordered a vessel in Scotland, and advanced considerable sums on her account. The defendants appointed the master, with instructions to take her to New Zealand, and there receive the instructions of the company. The vessel was originally registered in the name of the defendants, but before sailing was transferred to that of S. to secure advances. During the voyage the master, to pay for necessary repairs, granted bills on the defendants. Subsequently the vessel was again transferred into the name of the defendants, and by them sold on their own account. In an action by the holder of the bills against the defendants, held, that the defendants, at the date of the repairs, were employers of the master and responsible for his legal contractions for the ship, and were, therefore, liable for the amount of the bills. Miller v. Potter, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th Series, Vol. 3, p. 105. [SCOTCH.]

88. The plaintiffs supplied necessaries to a vessel in a foreign port, in ignorance that agents for the ship were at the port with funds; they had, however, the means of knowing, and the master was aware of it. Held, that they could not recover against the shipowners. Gunn v. Roberts, L. R. 9 C. P. 331; 43 L. J. C. P. 233; 2 Asp. N.S. 250; 30 L. T. 424; 22 W. R. 652.

89. A master obtained clothes for his crew from the plaintiff, and gave them an undertaking in his own name for the price. The seamen were paid their wages less the deductions for clothes, and the master, in his account of disbursements, took credit for the sums against the men's names for the clothes. In an action against the owners for the price of the clothes, plaintiff nonsuited. Curran v. Wood, 2 Asp. 441.

90. In a claim for necessaries, the defendants assuozied, the pursuers having failed to prove that the supplies were necessaries. Drain & Co. v. Scott, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, Vol. 3, p. 114. [SCOTCH.]

91. A creditor claimed to prove against the estate of an arranging trader in respect of necessaries supplied to a vessel alleged to be the trader's property. Held, that the claim could not be sustained, as at the time when the necessaries were supplied the trader had no beneficial interest in the vessel. Re An arranging Trader, L. R. 1 Eq. 216; 2 Asp. 520. [IRISH.]

92. The master of a ship has authority to bind the owner as to all repairs that are necessary for the purpose of bringing the ship to the port of destination, but in all cases where practicable he must first communicate with the owner. Beldon v. Campbell, 17 L. T. 257; 6 Exch. 886.

93. A shipowner is not only liable for necessary repairs done to a ship by the master's order, but for such as are fit and proper for the vessel on her voyage, and such as a prudent owner, if present himself, would order. Webster v. Seekamp, 4 B. & A. 352.

94. In an action against the registered owner of a vessel for necessary repairs ordered by the master, it must be proved that the master acted as the owner's master, or with his knowledge. Pearson v. Nell, 2 Asp. 213.

95. Whether or not the owner is liable in an action for necessary repairs ordered by the master is a question of contract, not of ownership. If the repairs were done on the master's credit alone, the owner is not liable. Ibid.

96. The declaration stated an agreement by defendants to repair plaintiff's ship for a reasonable price to be charged by them to plaintiff, and upon completion to re-deliver the ship to the plaintiff upon payment of such price so to be charged. Averments, that the repairs were completed, and plaintiff was ready and willing to pay defendants such price as aforesaid, whereof defendants had notice. Breach, that defendants did not charge a reasonable price, but demanded an exorbitant sum as the price of the repairs, and gave notice to plaintiff that they would not re-deliver the ship until payment thereof, and detained the ship after she was completed until payment of the exorbitant sum. Plea, no tender of a reasonable price, or of any sum in respect thereof. Replication, waiver of the tender. Held, on demurrer; that the declaration was good, and the plea bad, for by the terms of the agreement, as stated in the declaration, the defendants were bound to deliver their bill of reasonable charges, and plaintiff was relieved from the necessity of making a tender. Held, also, that the replication was good, and not a departure from substance. Watson v. Pearson, 1 Asp. 335.

97. Quare, might it not have been otherwise in the case of an implied contract only? Ibid.

98. The master of a vessel waiting in a river, wind-bound, at a place two days' post from the owner, may borrow money on the credit of the owner, in order to procure provisions necessary for keeping the vessel well found, so as to be able to take advantage of the first fair wind. Edwards v. Havill, 22 L. T. 87; 14 C. B. 107; 17 Jur. 1103.

99. The master ordered provisions for the ship, but sailed without paying for them, though having money from the owners for the purpose. The owners held liable. Speerman v. Degrave Gallway, 2 Vern. 643.

100. The master has authority to provide necessaries. If, therefore, a person trusts him for things not necessaries, he trusts him for that which it is not within the scope of his authority to provide, and has, consequently, no right to call on his principal for payment. Carey v. White, 1 Bro. Parl. Cases, 284.

101. Sailors injured in weighing anchor were taken ashore by the master, who engaged the plaintiff to supply them with board, lodging, and medicines, and then proceeded on his voyage with fresh hands. Held, that such supplies were not necessary for the due prosecution of the voyage, and that therefore the owner was not liable. Organ v. Brodie, 10 Exch. 449; 24 L. J. Exch. 70.

2. Meaning of the Term.*

(a) Generally.

102. The term "necessaries" is not to receive the same liberal construction as is given to supplies furnished in cases of bottomry. The Comtesse de Frégeville, 4 L. T. N.S. 714; 1 Lushington, 332; 1 Asp. 106.

103. The term "necessaries" does not include things required for the voyage as contra-distinguished from necessaries for the ship. Ibid.

104. In this respect there is a distinction between the ship and the voyage, and "necessaries" mean repairs primarily indispensable, such as anchors, cables, sails. Provisions also may be included. Ibid.

105. The statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, does not apply to ordinary mercantile accounts between owner and agent. Ibid.

106. The term "necessaries," where used in the statutes giving the Admiralty Court jurisdiction over such claims, has the same meaning as is given to it by the Common Law Courts, and signifies whatever the owner of a vessel as a prudent man, if present under circumstances in which his agent in his absence is called upon to act, would have ordered. The Riga, 3 L. R. Adm. 516; 41 L. J. Adm. 39; 26 L. T. 202; 20 W. R. 927.

107. Premiums paid by a shipbroker at the owner's request to procure insurance on freight are necessaries. Ibid.

108. Charges paid by a shipbroker at the owner's request for entering, reporting, and piloting a ship, and for tonnage and light dues, and for noting protest, are within the term. Ibid.

109. Advances at the owner's request for travelling expenses of the master, and goods supplied for the ship's use, are necessaries. Ibid.

110. Brokerage charges made by a ship's broker for acting as ship's agent, and for negotiating a charter-party, may be necessaries within the meaning of the statutes, but must be proved to come within the definition. Ibid.

111. Premiums for insurance are not necessaries within the meaning of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The Heinrich Bjorn, 8 P. D. 151; 52 L. J. P. D. 83; 5 Asp. 145.

112. The technical meaning of the term

* (52) These cases were determined under sect. 6 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, and not under the 4th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, which relates to the building, equipping or repairing of any ship, and is not limited to necessaries only.

(53) The owner is responsible only for necessaries furnished for his ship, and it is for a jury to decide what are necessaries. Burquin v. Flinn, 1 M' Cord, 316. [AMERICAN.]

(54) A barge may be necessary to a steamer, and as such its hire to the boat will be regarded as a material furnished for the equipment of the boat. Gleim v. Steam- boat Belmont, 11 Miss. 112. [AMERICAN.]

(55) Neither costs of advertising a vessel for sea, portage nor commissions for procuring freight, wages of stevedores or lightermen, are liens on the ship, suable in rem. The Joseph Cunard, Olcott, Adm. 120. [AMERICAN.]

(56) In supplying coals to a steamer at the order of the master, who was also sole owner, held, that to confer a maritime lien it must be proved that a supply of coals was necessary to the vessel at the time. The Sultana, 19 Howard, 359; The Barque Laura, ibid. 22. [AMERICAN.]

“necessaries” strictly applies to anchors, cables, rigging, and matters of that description. The Sophie, 1 W. Rob. 368; 1 Notes of Cases, 393.

113. The term “necessaries” includes necessary work and labour. Ship arrested by stevedore, and claim sustained by Admiralty Court. The Waban, May 24, 1855.

114. It is absolutely necessary, except when the order is given by the owner, to prove not only that the articles supplied were necessaries, but that they were actually wanting for the service of the ship at the time when they were supplied. The Sophie, 1 W. Rob. 369; 1 Notes of Cases, 393; The Helena Sophia, 3 W. Rob. 270; 7 Notes of Cases, 492; Mackintosh v. Mitcheson, 4 Exch. 175; 18 L. T. 385; The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 361; 6 Jur. 241; 1 Notes of Cases, 380; The Ocean, 2 W. Rob. 368; 4 Notes of Cases, 31.

115. The court will not put a restricted meaning on the term necessaries in 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, so as to confine it to things absolutely and unconditionally necessary for a ship in order to put to sea. The Perla, Swabey, 354; 4 Jur. N.S. 742.

116. Semble, whatever is necessary in a passenger steamer to put the machinery in perfect working order is a necessary within the meaning of that act. The Flecha, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 441.

117. A new screw propeller for a passenger steamer is a necessary within the meaning of that act. Ibid.

118. In one sense an anchor and cable are necessary, for a ship cannot in safety sail without them; but it does not therefore follow that at all times, or at any particular time, a new anchor and cable, or several, are necessary for the use of the ship. The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 361; 6 Jur. 241; 1 Notes of Cases, 380; 1 W. R. 360.

119. It is not sufficient to aver that they were necessaries, they must be necessary at the time and under the then existing circumstances. Ibid.

120. In the case of an anchor and cable supplied to a vessel a less degree of evidence might suffice to prove the existence of a necessity than would be required in the case of a loan of money. Ibid.

121. The rule for estimating what are “necessaries” is, to inquire what a prudent owner would have ordered if he had been present. Webster v. Seekamp, 4 B. & Ald. 354; The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 346.

122. An anchor and chain cable were supplied to a foreign ship, and she was arrested in an action for necessaries. The plaintiff failed in proving that the anchor and cable were necessary under the circumstances, and it was proved the ship was furnished with proper anchors and cables, and that the articles supplied were never used. Plaintiff held not entitled to recover against the ship. Ibid. 366.

123. Articles supplied for the equipment of a vessel building in a foreign port are not necessaries within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 69. The Ocean, 2 W. Rob. 368; 4 Notes of Cases, 31.

124. Coals supplied at intervals to a foreign steamer for several voyages held to be necessaries, and the amount due for the same to be recoverable under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The Twentje, otherwise The West Friesland, Swabey, 454; 5 Jur. N.S. 658; ibid. on appeal, Swabey, 456; 8 W. R. 423; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 186; 2 L. T. N.S. 613; The Comtesse de Frégeville, 1 Lushington, 333; 4 L. T. N.S. 714; 1 Asp. 106.

125. Butcher's meat is a necessary, within the meaning of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The N. R. Gosfabrick, Swabey, 345; 31 L. T. 345.

126. A claim for money advanced to a master to pay averages, dismissed with costs, such advances not being “necessaries” within the meaning of the 6th section of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65. The Aaltje Willelmina, L. R. 1 A. & E. 107.

127. Copper sheathing is a necessary. The Perla, Swabey, 353; 4 Jur. N.S. 472. See also Webster v. Seekamp, 4 B. & Ald. 352; and The Turliani, 2 Asp. N.S. 603.

128. The guarantee of a party to bring home a medical man who sails in charge of emigrants is binding, and the expense of his return passage will be allowed as a set-off in a suit for materials instituted by him. The Thorny Close, 5 Jur. 251. [IRISH.]

129. The expenses of an agent coming to London to assist the master in his defence of a damage suit are not necessaries. The Bonne Amelie, L. R. 1 A. & E. 19; 35 L. J. Adm. 115; 2 Asp. 32.

130. But the French owners having executed an act of abandonment of the vessel, the court decreed payment of those expenses out of the proceeds of the sale of the vessel. Ibid.

(b) *Money.

131. The meaning of the term "necessaries" may be enlarged so as to include money expended on necessaries, but in such a case satisfactory proof must be adduced that the necessaries were wanting, and that the money was bond fide advanced for the purpose of procuring them. The Sophie, 1 W. Rob. 368; 1 Notes of Cases, 398; The Masonic, 1 Asp. 169.

132. In an action for necessaries, part of which consisted of money supplied to the master, who was also part owner, proof required that the money was applied in the purchase of necessaries. Ibid.

133. A party advancing money to procure necessaries, held, entitled to the same rights as a claimant in respect of necessaries supplied by him. Ibid.; see also The Masonic, 5 L. T. N.S. 460; The Asta Van Linge, Swabey, 515.

134. Money advanced for purchase of butcher's meat for the crew comes within the description of necessaries. The Bonne Amelie, L. R. 1 A. & E. 19; 35 L. J. Adm. 115; 2 Asp. 321.

135. The defendant, master and sole owner, borrowed money to enable him to procure the release of his vessel, which was detained by the shipwright under his possessory lien for certain necessary repairs executed upon her. Held, that the amount of the loan could be recovered in a suit for necessaries. The Albert Crosby, L. R. 3 A. & E. 37.

136. Sums of money paid for insurance on freight, for harbour dues, and for travelling expenses of master, held, recoverable as necessaries. The Riga, L. R. 3 A. & E. 516; 41 L. J. Adm. 39; 1 Asp. N.S. 246; but as to the insurance see The Heinrich Bjorn, 8 P. D. 151; 52 L. J. P. D. 83; 5 Asp. 145.

137. A vessel was chartered for a voyage to two named ports to be consigned to charterer's agents. On arrival at the first port it was arranged between the master and the agents that the vessel should not proceed to the second port, but the cargo should be forwarded in other vessels. The agents disbursed sums for this purpose, and the master drew on the owners in favour of the agents for the sums disbursed. The owners refusing to accept, held, that the agents had no authority to allow the deviation; that the master had no authority to allow it, as necessity was not proved; and that therefore the owners were not liable for the expenses incurred. Strickland v. Neilson, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, Vol. 7, 400. [SCOTCH.]

138. A claim for re-exchange does not lie against a drawee of a bill for refusal to accept. But, quære, where a master as agent for the shipowners draws on them in a foreign port for necessary disbursements, and the owners refuse to accept, does a claim for re-exchange then lie against them quod drawers? Ibid.

139. A charterparty made in Great Britain provided that £1,000 should be advanced at Calcutta on account of freight. £800 was advanced at Calcutta by the charterers' agents, to whom the cargo was consigned and delivered, and the master drew a bill for that amount on the charterers in favour of the agents. This bill was indorsed to the pursuers, who, on the nonpayment of the bill, brought an action against the shipowners, alleging that the advance of £800 was a necessary advance to the ship made on the bill, without which it would not have been made. Held, that the advance was not made on the bill, but was made under the terms of the charterparty, and that the shipowners were not liable. North Western Bank v. Bjornstrom, Ibid. Vol. 4, 24. [SCOTCH.]

140. Quære, if necessary advances are made to a master in a foreign port upon a bill drawn by him on strangers, and the person making such advances indorses the bill away, will the indorsee have a right of action against the shipowner? Ibid.

* (57) A person who lends money to be employed in the repairs of a vessel, or to furnish her with supplies, has the same privilege against the vessel that material men have. See Davis v. Child, Daveis, 71. [AMERICAN.]

(58) The plaintiff must show that it was necessary to borrow the money, and must prove the actual application of it. Bogle v. Atty. Gow, 50. [AMERICAN.]

(59) The Admiralty Court has jurisdiction where the master of a vessel borrows money to repair damages done to it on the high seas. The Rainbow, Bee, 116. [AMERICAN.]

(60) The relation between the master of a vessel and his owners is not such that they thereby become liable as acceptors of a bill of exchange drawn on them by him in a foreign port, for supplies furnished to the vessel. Bowen v. Stoddard, 10 Met. 375. [AMERICAN.]

141. Semble, if persons furnish necessaries or make disbursements for a vessel in a foreign port, on condition that they be repaid before the departure of the vessel, and third parties supply the master with funds to make such repayment, and take a bill drawn by the master on the owners in their favour to secure their advance, such third parties have a right of action against the owners for the money so advanced. Drain & Co. v. Scott, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, Vol. 3, 114. [SCOTCH.]

142. Where funds have been advanced in a foreign port to the attorney and agent of the owners, to be disbursed for the service of the vessel, the owners will be liable, although it may not be proved that the whole advances were actually applied for the service of the vessel. Havilland v. Thomson, Ibid. Vol. 3, 313. [SCOTCH.]

143. The master of a ship has authority to borrow money, but only in a case where a ready-money payment is absolutely necessary, as for port or light dues, &c.; and in all cases where practicable he must first communicate with the owner, and in no case can he bind the owner for money lent for the purpose of paying a debt already incurred. Beldon v. Campbell, 17 L. T. 257; 6 Exch. 886.

144. The master hired a steam tug to tow his vessel into port, and after the services were completed borrowed money to pay for the towage. Held, that the owner was not liable to repay the sum so borrowed. Ibid.

145. Money advanced to discharge a debt incurred for necessaries does not found a claim for necessaries under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The N. R. Gosfabrick, Swabey, 345; 31 L. T. 345; 6 W. R. 871.

146. A claim in respect of money advanced to the master to procure his release from gaol, where he had been imprisoned for a debt incurred for necessaries supplied to the ship: held, not recoverable as necessaries. Semble, the master is not necessary to the ship. Ibid. 344.

147. It appeared by the pleadings that a Monte-Videan vessel, on her arrival at Malaga, was placed by the master, according to the law of Monte-Video, under the control of his consul, who appointed as consignee P., who furnished necessary disbursements under an agreement with the consul and master that the amount thereof was to be repaid to P. before the ship was allowed to sail, and, by the law of Malaga, P. had a maritime lien against the ship for such disbursements. The master obtained from H. funds to pay off P. Held, that such payment by H. did not found a claim as for necessaries or supplies within the meaning of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, nor the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, s. 4. The India, 32 L. J. P. D. & A. 185; 2 N. R. 42.

148. Disbursements on account of wages made to crew while in a foreign port, money to pay which, inter alia, was raised on bottomry, disallowed on reference of account of such bond to registrar and merchants. Objection to such report overruled, on the ground that it was a premature payment that might never become due, and, if so paid, might (as in this case it did) fall on the owners of cargo, who were not properly liable for it. The Cognac, 2 Hagg. 393.

148a. The master of a vessel has power, incidental to his appointment, to borrow money, but only in cases where ready money is absolutely necessary, that is to say, where certain payments must be made in the course of the voyage, such as the payment of port dues, or lights, or any dues which require immediate cash settlement. The Hemisphere Borealis, 5 Jur. N.S. 377. [IRISH.]

149. The master of a vessel has no authority to borrow money after work has been done for the purpose of paying the debt due for it, unless a very strong case of necessity exists which may justify him in doing so. Ibid.

150. A claim in respect of money advanced to the master to pay averages, held, not recoverable as necessaries under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The Aaltje Willemina, L. R. 1 A. & E. 107.

151. A firm in England, having accepted and paid a bill of exchange drawn on them by the master abroad to procure necessaries, may sue the ship in the Admiralty Court as for necessaries. The Onni, 3 L. T. N.S. 447; 1 Lushington, 154.

152. Money advanced to the master of a foreign vessel on bills upon the owner, and afterwards covered by an assignment of freight, held not recoverable under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The Armadillo, 1 Notes of Cases, 75.

153. Moneys obtained by means of a bill of exchange to procure necessaries, are necessaries within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The Anna, 45 L. J. Adm. 98; affirmed on appeal, 1 P. D. 253; 46 L. J. P. D. 15; 34 L. T. 895.

154. An advance of money to pay a bottomry bond, for which the ship was arrested, such advance being made under a contract to pay off claims outstanding on the ship, and outfit her for a new voyage, in consideration of receiving brokerage and the prepaid freight for the new voyage, is not within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, and cannot be recovered in the Admiralty Court. The Onni, 1 Lushington, 154.

155. A foreign ship having been arrested at the suit of a bondholder, money was advanced to the master to enable him to pay seamen's wages. Held, upon an unopposed motion, that such money was recoverable against the ship as necessaries under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65. But quere, if the motion had been opposed. The Henry Reed, 32 L. T. 166; 7 W. R. Adm. 180.

156. Owners are personally responsible for money advanced, though without their authority, to the master abroad in the course of a foreign voyage; but the lender, to entitle him to recover, must prove the actual existence of the necessity for such advances. Carey v. White, 1 Bro. Par. Cases, 284; Rocher v. Busher, 1 Stark. 27; Evans v. Williams, Abb. Sh. (12th ed.), 93.

157. A loan to the master of money constitutes a debt for which an action lies against the owner. The Salacia, 32 L. J. Adm. 43.

158. The money must be advanced to the master expressly for the use of the ship, otherwise, although expended for that purpose, the owner will not be responsible for it to the lender. Thacker v. Moates, 1 M. & Rob. 79.

159. The money so supplied to a master must not be understood to be an indefinite supply of cash, which the master may dissipate, but only such as is warranted by the exigency of the case, as for the payment of duties or other necessary purposes. Rocher v. Busher, 1 Stark. 27; Boyce v. Attorney-General, Abb. Sh. (12th ed.), 96; Robinson v. Lyall, 7 Price, 592.

160. It is not sufficient to prove the advance of a much larger sum than was necessary for the use of the ship and an application of part of that sum to such uses, and that the residue was placed to the private account of the master. Palmer v. Gooch, 2 Stark. 428.

161. A less degree of evidence might suffice to prove the existence of a necessity in the case of the supply of an anchor and cable than would be required in the case of a loan of money. Webster v. Seekamp, 4 B. & Ald. 354; The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 361; 6 Jur. 241; 1 Notes of Cases, 380.

162. A part owner of a vessel is liable for money lent to the master in order to pay harbour dues. Snowdon v. Chadwick, 15 L. T. 92.

163. A charter-party contained a clause "that sufficient money should be advanced to the master for disbursements, not exceeding £200." The party to whom it was addressed having advanced to the master, when abroad, a larger sum for the use of the ship, held, that he was entitled to recover the full amount against the owners. Vaughan v. Fitzhugh, 3 Jur. 1002.

164. Disbursements for victualling the crew, to discharge which, inter alia, money was raised on bottomry, allowed, on reference of accounts to the registrar and merchants, and confirmed by the court. The Cognac, 2 Hagg. 385.

164a. The insurance of a ship is not a necessary within 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 3. A foreign vessel was in an English port, and the plaintiffs made advances for necessaries to the owner, who was temporarily in England, he undertaking to return the advances with interest on the return of the vessel from her voyage. The plaintiffs were authorized to cover the amount advanced by insurance on ship, &c., out and home at owner's costs. In an action in rem for the advances, held, by the Court of Appeal, that this agreement was not equivalent to a bottomry bond; that 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, did not give a maritime lien for necessaries, but only a right to seize the ship on the institution of an action, and that, therefore, the plaintiffs could not recover against the vessel. Judgment below (8 P. D. 151; 52 L. J. P. 83; 49 L. T. 405; 32 W. R. 279; 5 Asp. 145) reversed. The Ella A. Clark, Br. & L. 32; The Heinrich Bjorn, 10 P. D. 44.

3. Claims by Agents.*

165. It might be a question whether an

* (61) A Court of Admiralty has no jurisdiction over a claim against the owners of a vessel made by their agent for money paid by him for or about the vessel, and praying for an account and payment of the money due to him. Mintwin v. Maynard, 17 How. (U. S.) 477. [AMERICAN.]

(62) A special agent of the charterer of a agent accepting an agency, on condition of being repaid his advances out of the freight and average apportionments, could proceed against the ship for disbursements and advances. The Helena Sophia, 3 W. Rob. 272; 7 Notes of Cases, 492.

166. If it be proved that there was an agent of the ship ready to make all necessary payments on the personal credit of the owners, and to repay whatever might have been previously disbursed, it is doubtful whether an action, under the act of parliament, could be maintained against the ship on account of advances made for her service, and on the credit of the vessel. Ibid.

167. An agreement between the agent of a ship and a broker, whereby, on certain terms, the latter undertook thoroughly to refit the ship, held, not to affect a third party who had supplied necessaries to the ship without any knowledge of this agreement. The Perla, 4 Jur. N.S. 741; Swabey, 353.

168. The agent, also part owner, may recover against the ship for necessaries supplied. The Tventje, otherwise The West Friesland, 8 W. R. 423; Swabey, 454, 456; 5 Jur. N.S. 658; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 186; 2 L. T. N.S. 613.

169. A ship cannot be made liable to arrest for a general balance of account merely by appropriating the receipts and payments in such a manner as to show a balance due for necessaries. Ibid.

170. An agent appropriating in his accounts with his principal, sums received to the payment of specific items, is estopped from disputing the payment of those items. Ibid.

171. The agents of a foreign vessel received freights payable in London, and out of the proceeds paid expenses incurred there, and from time to time made out accounts, in which they placed the sums so paid and received respectively to the debit and credit of each successive voyage. Coals had, on six occasions, been supplied to the ship upon orders given by the agents, and they debited each voyage with the price of the coals so supplied. In the result of the six accounts for coals £1:4s. 6d. was due to the agents. In taking an account of all the agents' dealings with the ship there appeared to be a balance in their favour of £195:8s. 7d.

Held, on appeal, that in order to obtain a charge on the ship, the agents were not entitled to select from the accounts the items which consisted of charges for coals, and to attribute the balance specifically to those items. Ibid. See also, as to the appropriation of payments, Devaynes v. Noble, Tudor's Leading Cases in Maritime Law, p. 1.

172. The 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, looks to an immediate necessity, not to the liquidation of a mercantile account, where credit is given by the agent in the ordinary course of business. Therefore where the agents and brokers of a French ship received the freights and paid the dock dues, pilotage, and clearance charges, together with £186:3s. for coals supplied to enable the vessel to leave London, and the balance of their account amounted to £81:15s. 6d., held, that they were not entitled, in respect of the balance, to arrest the ship in a suit for necessaries. The Comtesse de Frégevill, 4 L. T. N.S. 713; 1 Lushington, 329; 1 Asp. 106.

173. An advance of money to pay a bottomry bond, for which the ship is arrested, such advance being made under a contract to pay off claims outstanding on the ship, and outfit her for a new voyage, in consideration of receiving brokerage and the prepaid freight for the new voyage, cannot be recovered in the Admiralty Court under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6. The Onni, 3 L. T. N.S. 447; 1 Lushington, 154.

174. A charter-party contained a clause "that sufficient money should be advanced to the master for disbursements, not exceeding £200." The party to whom it was addressed having advanced to the master, when abroad, a larger sum for the use of the ship, held, that he was entitled to recover the full amount against the owners. Vaughan v. Fitzhugh, 3 Jur. 1002.

175. The following persons shall be liable to pay light dues for any ship in respect of which light dues are payable; (that is to say,) the owner or master, or such consignees or agents thereof as have paid or made themselves liable to pay any other charge on account of such ship in the port of her arrival or discharge, and in default of payment such light dues may be recovered in the same manship cannot charge expenses, advances or liabilities incurred for the ship by him in that capacity, against the owners or the ship, on any implied obligation of the owners to him. The Joseph Cunard, Olcott, Adm. 120. [AMERICAN.]

ner as penalties of the like amount may be recovered by virtue of the principal act. The Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 45.

176. Every consignee and agent (not being the owner or master) hereby made liable for the payment of light dues in respect of any ship may, out of any monies in his hands received on account of such ship, or belonging to the owner thereof, retain the amount of all dues so paid by him, together with any reasonable expenses he may have incurred by reason of such payment or liability. Ibid. s. 44.

177. Cargo having been sold, and the proceeds paid into court, the court ordered that out of such proceeds pro ratâ freight should be paid to the shipowners. On an application by the ship agents, held, that they were entitled to be paid out of such pro ratâ freight their charges for necessaries. The Soblomstein, L. R. 1 A. & E. 293; 36 L. J. Adm. 5.

178. The master has a possessory lien on the cargo for its share of general average expenses, but a ship agent has no such lien upon ship, freight or cargo, nor a right of action in rem against any of them. Ibid. 2 Asp. 436.

179. Although the agent of a foreign ship who pays money for necessaries, or incurs liability for them, can sue the ship, he cannot sue the ship to recover the balance of an account. The Underwriter, 1 Asp. N.S. 127.

180. Quere, although the fact of an agent being also a part owner, does not prevent his recovering against the ship for necessaries supplied, can he so recover when he is concerned in the particular voyage for which the necessaries have been supplied? Ibid.

181. It was stipulated by charter-party that cash for disbursements not exceeding £250 should be advanced by charterers' agents out of freight. The agents who had no funds of the charterers in hand, refused to advance the money until the master engaged to reimburse them at the port of discharge out of freight earned. Held (Lord Cowan dissenting), that the agents having no funds were not, under the circumstances, bound to advance the money, that therefore it was not advanced under the charter-party, but under the agreement entered into with the master, which agreement was not ultra vires, and that the owners and master were liable to the charterers' agents for the sum advanced. Benn v. Porret, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, Vol. 6, 577. [SCOTCH.]

182. A ship's agent was appointed by the master on his arrival at Bristol. He had no previous knowledge of either master or owner, but made no inquiries as to how he was to be repaid his advances for necessaries. He allowed the vessel to be placed in the hands of a shipwright to be repaired, and when her value was by this means increased, caused her to be arrested. Held, that he was not entitled to be paid his claim in priority to the shipwright. The Panthea, 25 L. T. Adm. 983.

183. As to advances by agents on bottomry, see tit. BOTOMRY, p. 133.

4. Claims by Part Owners.

184. An agent, also part owner, may recover against the ship for necessaries supplied. The West Friesland, Swabey, 456; 5 Jur. N.S. 658; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 186; 2 L. T. N.S. 613; 8 W. R. 423.

185. One of several co-owners of a ship, who acts as ship's husband, is only entitled to charge the cost price of supplies to the ship furnished by him in the course of his business. Ritchie v. Cowper, 28 Beav. 344.

186. A part owner, W., was registered as managing owner, without the knowledge of C., another part owner. W., without the knowledge or consent of C., obtained from the plaintiff necessaries for a voyage not authorized by C. Held, that C. was not liable for such necessaries. Frazer v. Cuthbertson, 6 Q. B. D. 93; 50 L. J. C. L. 277.

187. A co-partner in the ship may sue the ship for such advances made by him, but not if he is interested in the particular voyage for which the ship is supplied. Ibid. The Underwriter, 1 Asp. N.S. 127; 25 L. T. N.S. 279.

188. See, as to accounts between part owners, tit. OWNERS, Pt. VIII. c. 5.

5. Lien.

1. Generally.*

189. The general maritime law of Europe does not require a bond of hypothe-

* (63) The material man who supplies a foreign ship with necessaries has, by the general maritime law, a lien on the specific ship, which may be enforced in Admiralty by a proceeding in rem, and he also has the personal security of the owners and master, cation to give a maritime lien on the ship for advances. But by the law of this country, since the reign of Charles II., such an instrument is absolutely necessary for such purpose. The Vrow Mina, 1 Dodson, 235; The Alexander, ibid. 280; The Zodiac, 1 Hagg. 325; The Vibilia, 1 W. Rob. 6; Watkinson v. Bernardiston, 2 P. Wms. 367; The Neptune, 3 Knapp, P. C. C. 94; Ex parte Shank, 1 Atkins, 234; Justin v. Ballam, Salk. 34; The Maitland, 3 Hagg. 254; Life of Sir Leo-line Jenkins, Vol. 1, p. 76.

190. Similarly as to ordinary repairs, Buxton v. Snee, 1 Vesey, 154; Hoare v. Clement, 2 Show. 338; Abb. Sh. 143; Cradock's case, 2 Brownlow, 37; Leigh v. Burleigh, Ow. 122; Wilkins v. Carmichael, 3 Dougl. 101; Smith v. Plummer, 1 B. & A. 575; Wood v. Hamilton, decided in Dom. Proc. June 15, 1789; Ruitt v. Mitchell, 4 Camp. 146; and Wood v. Meir's Crs., Jan. 31, 1810; 1 Bell, 527, n. 3; 2 ibid. 98, n. 1. [SCOTCH.]

191. A statutory lien, however, is now given in respect of such claims. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), ss. 4 and 5, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6.

192. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861, s. 5, does not create a maritime lien for necessities at the time the necessities are supplied, and a ship does not become chargeable with a debt for necessities until a suit is actually instituted. Johnson v. Black; The Two Ellens, 41 L. J. P. C. 33; 40 L. J. Adm. 11; L. R. 4 P. C. 161;

L. R. 3 A. & E. 345; 1 Asp. N.S. 208; 8 Moo. P. C. N.S. 398; and see Nos. 35, 36, and 36a, pp. 1153, 1154.

193. No maritime lien attaches to a British ship in respect of coals or other necessities supplied to it in a possession in which a Vice-Admiralty Court is established. Laws v. Smith, or The Rio Tinto, 9 App. Cas. 356; 50 L. T. 461; 5 Asp. 224.

194. Vice-Admiralty Courts have not (apart from the statute) more than the ordinary Admiralty jurisdiction, i. e., as it existed before 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, enlarged it. The Vice-Admiralty Act, 1863 (c. 24), s. 10, does not create a maritime lien with respect to necessities supplied within the possession. Ibid.

195. A material man who supplies stores and materials for the equipment of a British ship has no maritime lien thereon, and cannot therefore enforce his claim against the ship in the hands of a subsequent purchaser, even though such purchaser had notice at the time of the purchase that the claim was still unpaid. The Aneroid, 2 P. D. 189; 47 L. J. Adm. 15; 36 L. T. 448.

196. Claimants for necessities have the same rights of suit in the Admiralty Court as those possessed of a maritime lien. The Ella A. Clark, otherwise Golden Age, 8 L. T. N.S. 119; Br. & L. 32; overruling The Gustaf, 6 ibid. 660; The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 294.

unless the master takes care by express terms to confine the credit to the ship and owners. The Brig Nestor, 1 Sumner, 73; The General Smith, 4 Wheaton, 443. [AMERICAN.]

(64) A right to proceed in rem may exist, although there may be no maritime lien upon the res against which the claim is made. There is no maritime lien for necessities supplied to a ship in her home port, and yet, by the United States rules of practice for Courts of Admiralty, the material men may proceed in rem against the ship. Wolf v. The Scow Selt, 2 Asp. N.S. 107. [AMERICAN.]

(65) Semble, that the lien of material men for necessities supplied to a ship in her home port—that is, their right to be paid out of the res—attaches only on the seizure of the ship under Admiralty process. Ibid.

(66) Shipwrights have a lien on ships for repairs if actual possession be retained, and the money for the repairs be due, but the debt must be due before the lien can be claimed, and a usage to give credit is equivalent to an express contract. In the case, however, of an agreement to put the ship in thorough repair, the shipwright is not prevented from claiming for the work partly done. Where the possession is parted with the lien is lost, though the mere giving up the ship's register would not be a delivery of possession. Cross on Liens, p. 311 et seq.

(67) A wharfinger has a lien on a vessel for wharfage, but if a vessel is under arrest on legal process, and in custody of the law, he cannot enforce his lien by a detention of the vessel, he must apply to the court for its allowance, and it will be ordered to be paid in concurrence with other liens standing in the same rank of privilege. The Phebe, Ware, 354; 1 Conkling's Adm. Prac. 2nd ed. p. 304. [AMERICAN.]

(67a) Semble, a wharfinger's lien is to be regarded as a common law lien, depending on possession, and not as an Admiralty lien, conferred by the maritime law, and existing independently of possession, though likened to a material man's lien. See 1 Conkling's Adm. Prac. 2nd ed. pp. 79, 305; Ex parte Lewis, &c., 2 Gall. 483; Johnson v. The Schooner McDonough, Gilpin, 101. [AMERICAN.] See also notes 41, 46, p. 1153.

Ella A. Clark), that necessities supplied to a foreign ship in an English port do not create a maritime lien. The Heinrich Bjorn, 10 P. D. 44.

197. A person had repaired a ship, and on the owners becoming bankrupt obtained possession of the proceeds. Held, that he must account to the assignees for such proceeds, and come in under the commission for the debt due to him for the repairs. Ex parte Shank, 1 Atkins, 234; Abb. Sh. (12th ed.), 147.

198. A shipwright who has taken a ship into his own possession is not bound to part with the possession until he is paid for the repairs, any more than a tailor, smith, or artificer in regard to the object of his particular trade. Ex parte Bland, 2 Rose, 91; The Vibilia, 1 W. Rob. 6; The Neptune, 3 Hagg. 139; Franklin v. Hosier, 4 B. & A. 341.

199. So, also, as to an engineer who has supplied machinery to a vessel while in his possession, even though he has agreed to take bills in payment, and discounted one of them. Ex parte Willoughby, In re Westlake, L. R. 16 Ch. D. 604.

200. Unless there be a special agreement to give credit for a certain period or such an usage in the trade as is equivalent to a special agreement. Raitt v. Mitchell, 4 Camp. 146.

201. A shipwright in the river Thames has no lien on a ship taken into his dock to be repaired without an express agreement for that purpose, because by the usage of the trade the credit is always given to the owner. Ibid.

202. It is otherwise where the shipwright deals for ready money. Ibid.

203. As to the effect of agreeing to take bills in payment, see Ex parte Willoughby, In re Westlake, 16 Ch. D. 604; Gunn v. Bolckow, L. R. 10 Ch. 491.

204. But a shipwright who has once parted with the possession of the ship, or has worked upon it without taking possession, and a tradesman who has provided ropes, sails, provisions, or other necessities for a ship, are not by the law of England preferred to other creditors, nor have any particular claim or lien upon the ship itself for the recovery of their demands. 1 Maddock, 61; 14 Petersdorff's Abr. 652.

205. A shipbuilder, who gave to a person for whom he was building a ship, shortly before the actual completion thereof, the builder's certificate required by the Register Act, in order that his customer might obtain a certificate of registry in his own name (which was accordingly done), held, to have thereby declared that the general property of the ship was vested in his customer, but not to have thereby lost his right to retain the possession until the residue of the stipulated price was paid. Woods v. Russell, 5 B. & A. 942.

206. A shipwright is not entitled to be paid for the use of his dock while he detains a ship under a lien against the will of the owner, notwithstanding his having given previous notice of his intention to make such a charge. Somes v. British Empire Shipping Co., 31 L. T. 196; 4 Jur. N.S. 893; 27 L. J. Q. B. 397; El. Bl. & El. 353; aff. by House of Lords, 6 Jur. N.S. 761; 8 W. R. 707; 30 L. J. Q. B. 229.

207. A mortgagor of a ship being allowed to remain in possession and to use her, placed her, on her being condemned as unseaworthy, in the hands of a shipwright to be repaired, who, not being able to obtain his money for the repairs which he had done, retained possession of her, claiming a right of lien upon her. In trover brought against him by the mortgagee, held, that as the mortgagee had allowed the mortgagor to remain in possession and use the vessel, this amounted, in the absence of an express authority, to an implied one that he was to use the vessel in the ordinary way, and have repairs done when necessary; and consequently that, he having such authority to have her repaired, the shipwright was entitled to hold her as against the mortgagee until his debt was paid. Williams v. Allsup, 4 L. T. N.S. 550.

208. A vessel was placed in a slip, belonging to a firm of shipbuilders, for repairs. The shipbuilders afterwards moved her into the public wet dock adjoining their slip and there completed the repairs. While in the wet dock the vessel was under the control of the harbour master, who directed her movements, but the master was on board of her the greater part of the time, as he had been while she was in the slip, and at night there was a ship-keeper. During the time she was in the dock the vessel was moored by hawsers to pawls, which were inside the premises of the shipbuilders. Held (reversing the judgment of the Court of Session), that the removal of the vessel from the slip into the wet dock was no abandonment by the shipbuilders of their possession, and that their lien was not lost. Barr v. Cooper, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th Series, Vol. 2 (H. L.), 14; 3rd Series, Vol. 11, 651. [SCORCH.]

209. A sailmaker being, prior to the vessel's arrest under a decree of the Court of Admiralty, in possession of the sails of a ship for the purpose of repairing them, has a lien on the sails to the amount of repairs he has effected, and under the general law he would be justified in retaining possession of them till his debt is paid, as against the owners or others seeking to dispossess him. As against the authority of the court, however, he has no right to detain them when the ship is in possession of its officer under a warrant from the court. The court can protect the just rights of the sailmaker. Monition against the sailmaker to deliver up the sails to the officer decreed accordingly. The Harmonie, 1 W. Rob. 178.

210. A foreign ship, being at the time on a slip in the building yard of C., was arrested for necessaries supplied by D. On affidavit from D. that the amounts claimed would exceed the present value of the ship, and that the vessel was rapidly deteriorating, the judge ordered her removal from the building yard, and appraisal and sale without prejudice to the claim or lien of C. for rent and other charges on the proceeds of the sale. The Nordstjernen, Swabey, 260.

211. By an agreement made in 1861, but not executed till the 11th April, 1862, shipbuilders agreed to build a schooner for F. On the 12th April the agreement was assigned to the plaintiff to secure £500, then already advanced to the shipbuilders to complete her and to secure future advances to a certain stated amount, and the vessel herself was assigned to the plaintiff, as a lien for such advances and interest. On the 19th May the agreement between the builders and F. was put an end to, and on the 20th they entered into a new contract with the plaintiff to complete and sell the vessel to him for £1,160, of which the advanced £500 was to be taken as part payment. No registration of the vessel took place; but on the 20th May the builders certified, according to the provisions of the M. S. Act, that they had built the schooner for the plaintiff. The advances did not appear to have been laid out exclusively upon the vessel. The vessel was unfinished on the 2nd June, when the builders were adjudicated bankrupts, and the defendants chosen their assignees. On a bill to enforce the lien under the agreement of the 12th April, held, that the lien under it was discharged, if not by the cancellation of the agreement with F., yet by the fact that the £500 thereby secured was merged into and taken as part payment of the purchase-money under the agreement of 20th May, but that, under the memorandum of the 20th May, the plaintiff was entitled to a lien on the unfinished ship for the £500. Swainston v. Clay, 1 Asp. 343; 32 L. J. Ch. 338, 503; 9 Jur. N.S. 401; 4 Giff. 187.

212. A mercantile house at N. directed a house at Q. to contract for the building of a ship, for which they (the N. house) would send out the rigging. The Q. house entered into a contract with some shipbuilders accordingly. The N. house then directed their correspondent at L. to send out the rigging. He accordingly purchased the same, and delivered it to the master appointed by the N. house to the new ship, who, it was held on the balance of evidence, delivered it to the Q. house. Held, that the Q. house were entitled to retain such rigging as against the L. correspondent, on account of their lien on it for advances to the builders, and payment of custom-house expenses, although, previously to the delivery, they had obtained an assignment of the ship to themselves from the builders, and had registered it in the name of one of the partners in their house; and that even if such delivery to the Q. house were questionable, the delivery by the L. correspondent to the master, the agent of the N. house, vested the property in the N. house, and ousted the L. correspondent's claim. Rogerson v. Reid, 1 Knapp, P. C. C. 363.

213. The builder of a vessel has a lien thereon for the price of it, but that lien does not involve a power of sale. The Thames Iron Works Co. v. The Patent Derriek Co., 29 L. J. Ch. 714.

214. For cases of lien as affecting jurisdiction, see p. 1153.

215. For cases as to lien generally, see tit. LIENS, p. 808.

216. As to claims in respect of money paid to discharge a claim for necessaries, see p. 1161.

2. Transfer.

217. In an action for building and equipping a vessel, the defendants pleaded that the alleged causes of action became vested in a trustee for the plaintiffs' creditors, under a composition deed. The plaintiffs in reply alleged that they assigned the causes of action prior to the execution of the deed, and that they were suing as trustees for their assignees. Held, that they might sue as trustees, although subsequent to the assignment they had executed the composition deed. Held, also, that though the assignment of the causes of action was prior to the arrest of the vessel and the institution of the suit, it carried with it the inchoate right to proceed against the vessel. The Wasp, L. R. 1 A. & E. 367; 2 Asp. 552.

218. A ship was transferred when at sea to a vendee resident in the port where she was registered, and money was paid by the vendee's agents, under the sentence of a foreign court, for salvage, wages, provisions, and sundry ship's disbursements. Held, that the salvage and mariners' wages were a lien on the ship, but not the sums paid for disbursements. Richardson v. Campbell, 5 B. & A. 203, n.

219. A party advancing sums of money to salvors in respect of their claim for salvage has no claim in the Admiralty Court against the sum awarded to them in respect of such salvage. The Louisa, 6 Notes of Cases, 531, 532; and see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 182, 233.

220. In a cause of bottomry no appearance was given for the owners, and actions for wages, &c. were entered against the ship. The court allowed the bondholder to pay the claims, which were the subject of those actions, on giving security for the protection of the owner's interests. The John Fehrman, 16 Jur. 1122.

See also No. 147, and tit. LIENS, c. 2, p. 811.

3. Discharge.*

221. The lien on ship for necessaries supplied continues, notwithstanding the

(69) The lien of seamen for wages, and of material men for repairs, &c., cannot be divested by any casualty. It attaches to different parts of a wreck as well as to the entire vessel. Where parts of a wreck are saved by the owners, they may be proceeded against in rem, and the proceeds of the sale will be applied to discharge the liens—1, of seamen; 2, of material men. The Tackle, &c. of The America, 1 Newb. Adm. 195. [AMERICAN.]

(70) The taking by the material man of a negotiable promissory note, payable at four months, for the amount of his debt, as conditional payment, would be prima facie a presumptive extinguishment sub modo of the debt, and if it had been actually negotiated, whether paid or not, the creditor could have had no right to recover his debt, as the debtor would still be responsible to the holder of the note, and he ought not to be twice liable for the same debt. The receiving of such a note is direct proof that credit is given to the personal responsibility of the owner, and presumptive proof that no credit is given to the ship, or, in other words, that there is a waiver of any lien on the ship. The Brig Nestor, 1 Sumner, 86; see also Leyland v. Ship Medora, 2 Woodbury and Minot, 92; The Chusan, 2 Story, 456. [AMERICAN.]

(71) Where such a note had been given to the material man, and had not been paid, but was still outstanding, and had never been surrendered, and it did not appear that it had not in fact been negotiated, held, that the material man could not enforce his claim in Admiralty. Ramsay v. Allegre, 12 Wheaton, 611. [AMERICAN.]

(72) A material man does not lose his statutory lien on a vessel engaged in our internal commerce by taking a promissory note on time, which he offers to deliver up at the hearing. Raymond v. Schooner Ellen Stewart, 5 McLean, 269. [AMERICAN.]

(73) The lien is not extinguished by giving credit for a fixed time, nor by allowing the ship to depart on her voyage without payment. The Nestor, 1 Sumner, 73. [AMERICAN.]

(74) Nor by the fact that the master and owners are personally liable for the supplies, as the party may trust to the credit of the ship, the master, and the owner. Lane v. Brig President, 4 Wash. C. C. 453. [AMERICAN.]

(75) A ship was libelled in a Court of Admiralty on a bottomry bond while lying at a wharfinger's wharf, and sold by the authority of the court. It appeared that there had been a personal contract between the wharfinger and the shipowner for the payment of a specific rate of dockage of the ship, and an order drawn on the ship's agent for payment thereof quarterly. Held (in accordance with a series of authorities to the effect that when the parties enter into a personal contract for a specific sum, it is a discharge of the implied lien, resulting by operation of law, but questioning the principle), that such a contract amounted to a waiver of the lien. 1 Conkling's Adm. Prac. 2nd ed. p. 303. [AMERICAN.]

(76) A person supplied stores to a ship on sale of the ship, if there has been no laches in enforcing the lien. The West Friesland, 5 Jur. N.S. 658; Swabey, 454; S. C. on appeal, ibid. 456; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 186; 8 W. R. 423; 2 L. T. N.S. 613; The Ella A. Clark, otherwise Golden Age, 8 L. T. N.S. 119.

222. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, does not give a maritime lien on a foreign ship for necessaries. The Ella A. Clark overruled The Heinrich Bjorn, 10 P. D. 44. See also The Two Ellens, L. R. 4 P. C. 161.

223. If in the exercise of its jurisdiction facts should be disclosed to the court showing that other persons have equitable claims on the vessel, which would be prejudiced by the demand set up, it will administer the law in equity, and decide between them, whether or not such circumstances should operate to prevent the material men from recovering against the ship. Quere, whether a ship having bond fide passed into other hands would be liable to such a demand? The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 288, 295, 297; 5 Jur. 1067; 1 Notes of Cases, 185. But see The Rio Tinto, No. 193, p. 1166, and tit. LIENS, p. 826.

224. A. supplied necessaries to a foreign ship, and took in payment from the master a bill of exchange, which was dishonoured. He then sued the master on the bill of exchange, and caused him to be arrested. Semble, A. was not thereby deprived of his remedy against the ship, the necessaries still remaining unpaid for. The N. R. Gosfabrick, Swabey, 345; 31 L. T. 345.

225. A Greenock ship having been repaired at Hull by order of the agents of the owner, at the instance and under the direction of the master, the account for such repairs was made out to "Captain Coward (the master) and owners of ship Jeanie," attested by Coward, and addressed to the agents for payment, which was not, however, demanded for some months. In the meantime the owner paid the agents for the repairs. The agents became embarrassed in their circumstances, upon which the shipwright applied for payment to the owner. Held, that the owner was still liable, for he could be discharged only by positive agreement, or by necessary inference that the shipwright had abandoned that security. Stewart v. Hall, 2 Dowl. 29; 1 Bell, 525, note 5.

4. Priority.*

228. A mortgagee brought an action to realize his security, and a shipwright with a common law possessory lien on the ship intervened. The ship was sold, and the proceeds were only sufficient to satisfy the claim of the shipwright. Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to his costs up to the date of sale out of the proceeds in priority to the material men. The Sherbro, 52 L. J. P. 28; 48 L. T. 767; 5 Asp. 88.

the order of one of several owners, who acted as ship's husband, and took such part owner's note in payment, and gave a receipt in full. Held, that all the owners were liable, the note not having been paid. Schemerhorn v. Loines, 7 Johns. 311. [AMERICAN.]

(77) When labour is performed upon a ship there is a legal presumption that it was done for the benefit and at the request of the owner, and an implied promise to pay arises; but where there is a special promise by the master, and credit is given to him alone, and he has been paid, the owner is not liable. *James v. Part I.—TITLE AND REGISTRATION.

1. Title generally.*

1. As against a wrongdoer, the owner of a ship is prima facie owner of the goods on board. Brancker v. Molyneux, 3 Scott, N. R. 332; 3 M. & G. 84.

2. Possession of a ship, under a transfer void for non-compliance with the Register Acts, is a sufficient title in trover against a stranger for parts of the ship wrecked. Sutton v. Buck, 2 Taunt. 302.

3. Until the title is impeached it is not necessary in the first instance to examine the title of a person in actual bond fide possession and ownership of a vessel. A party proceeding to disturb possession must succeed by the strength of his own title. The John, 2 Hagg. 308.

4. The receipt from the underwriter of payments as for a total loss on capture, in which, however, restitution had been afterwards obtained upon terms, held, not to preclude the assured from suing and endeavouring to obtain restitution on a subsequent capture of the same vessel. Robertson v. Hamilton (1811), 14 East, 522.

5. Certain shipbuilders in America built several ships, mortgaged them there, sent them to England for sale, sold them there, and paid the mortgagees in America. The mortgages were duly registered in America; but notice of the mortgage having been indorsed on the certificate of registry in one case, and having impeded the sale, it was agreed that no such notice should be indorsed in future. Another ship was accordingly sent over and sold; the shipbuilders received the purchase-money and failed, leaving the mortgagee unpaid. Held, that the rights to the ship acquired under American law must be recognized; but that the purchase having taken place in this country must be governed by English law: that a ship is not an ordinary chattel, which passes by delivery, and that there is no market overt for ships: that the purchaser of a foreign ship is bound to make

* (1) A ship built in the United States for alien residents abroad becomes their property without any documentary title. It

inquiries as to title: that in this case the mortgagee had so acted as to suppress the mortgage, and to make the ship-builders his agents for sale, and that he could not maintain his claim against the purchaser. Hooper v. Gumm, McLellan v. Gumm, L. R. 2 Ch. 282; overruling V.-C. W., 13 L. T. N.S. 187.

6. Semble, the court would in some cases recognize an agreement by which a person might be for some purposes an absolute owner, and for others a mortgagee, if such an agreement were clearly proved and definite. The Innisfallen, L. R. 1 A. & E. 72.

See also Nos. 202, 202a, infra.

2. Jurisdiction.

1. Admiralty Branch of P., D. and A. Division.

(a) Generally.

7. See tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. c. 1, p. 638.

2. High Court of Admiralty before Judicature Acts.*

(a) Generally.

8. The Court of Admiralty had (prior to its abolition by the Judicature Acts) jurisdiction to decide all questions as to the title to or ownership of any ship or vessel, or the proceeds thereof remaining in the registry, arising in any cause of possession, salvage, damage, wages, or bottomry. See 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 4.

9. By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 4, the Court of Admiralty had ample authority and jurisdiction to determine which of the parties litigant is entitled not only to the possession of a ship, but to the full right of property in her. The Segredo, otherwise Eliza Cornish, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 42.

10. In all cases of bottomry, salvage, and wages, the Court of Admiralty possessed an undoubted power to decree a sale of the vessel proceeded against, unless the demand of the successful suitor were satisfied. The jurisdiction of the court therein was confirmed by the municipal law of this country, and by the general principles of the maritime law, and the title conferred by the court in the exercise of this authority was a valid title against the whole world, and was so recognized by the courts of this and of all other countries. The Tremont, 1 W. Rob. 164.

11. The mortgagee of a vessel duly sold the vessel under a power of sale contained in the mortgage deed. By mistake a discharge of the original mortgage was indorsed on the mortgage deed and registered. On the vendee of the vessel subsequently presenting for registration his bill of sale, registration thereof was refused, on the ground that the property in the vessel had passed to the mortgagor. The mortgagee, the vendee of the vessel, instituted a suit praying that the vendee might be pronounced the sole owner of the vessel. Held, that the court had jurisdiction under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, ss. 3 and 4, and sect. 11 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, to entertain the suit, and decree made in the terms of the prayer. The Rose, L. R. 4 A. & E. 6; 42 L. J. Adm. 11; 1 Asp. N.S. 567.

12. The Court of Admiralty has refused to entertain a cause of possession impeaching the sentence of a foreign Court of Admiralty. The Martin of Norfolk, 4 C. Rob. 293.

13. The Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction to entertain an action by the majority of shipowners against an individual owner, to restore possession of the ship's register, in order that the vessel

* (2) It was anciently held to be within the jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty to examine and pronounce for the title of ships on questions of ownership. It was not till some time after the Restoration that the court was informed by other courts that the jurisdiction belonged exclusively to them. After that time the court was very cautious not to interfere at all in questions of disputed title, until its jurisdiction was restored to it by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, and subsequent statutes. The Aurora, 3 C. Rob. 133; The Warrior, 2 Dods. 289.

(3) Though it entertained jurisdiction in causes of possession when the title was not disputed, or where a mere cobweb title was set up. The Warrior, 2 Dods. 288; The Guardian, 3 C. Rob. 93; The Fruit Preserver, 2 Hagg. 181. See also In re Blanchard, 2 B. & C. 244; Baxter v. Blanchard, 3 D. & R. 177; The Sisters, 4 C. Rob. 275; The Pitt, 1 Hagg. 243; The John, 2 Hagg. 305.

may sail on her voyage. Anon., 2 Chit. 359; 3 D. & R. 178, n. See also p. 1212.

14. As to the jurisdiction of the court in reference to forfeiture of ships for concealment of British character, illegal assumption of British character, unqualified ownership, false declaration of qualification, and use of improper certificate, see Pt. II. c. 18, p. 1172.

15. As to the jurisdiction of the court as between part-owners, see Pt. VIII. p. 1180.

16. As to the jurisdiction of this and other courts to issue an order prohibiting the dealing with any ship or share, see cap. 3, s. 25, p. 1205.

17. As to the jurisdiction of the court—To decree sale of a ship or share in case of an unqualified owner becoming entitled, see cap. 3, s. 26, p. 1205. To decree, in cases of damage, a sale of the vessel and distribution of the proceeds among the several claimants, see Pt. II. p. 1218. To transfer possession of the ship to the major interest, ibid. p. 1415. To take bail for the safe return of the ship on the application of minor interests, ibid. p. 1418. Over mortgages of ships, see tit. MORTGAGE, p. 1129.

(b) *Foreigners.

18. The Court of Admiralty had power to inquire into title in cases in which British subjects laid claim to a ship coming to this country in the possession and as the property of foreigners. The Experimento, 2 Dodson, 38, 42.

19. When foreigners were alone concerned, it was with the greatest reluctance that the court entertained causes of possession, as being questions not properly belonging to the jus gentium, but depending on the municipal regulations of different countries with which the court could be but imperfectly acquainted. The See Reuter, 1 Dodson, 23; The Martin of Norfolk, 4 C. Rob. 297.

20. It was the practice of the court not to entertain causes of possession between foreigners unless the cases were referred to its decision by the consent of parties, or by the intervention of the representative of the foreign state devolving the jurisdiction of his own country on the court. The See Reuter, 1 Dodson, 24.

21. In a cause of possession between foreigners, an official decree, duly authenticated, of the authorities of their country, decreeing possession of the ship to be given up by the master, one of the parties in the suit, to the agent of the principal owners, the other party, held sufficient to authorize the court to interfere, and possession ordered in furtherance of such decree, on bail being given to answer the master's interest. Ibid.

22. The Court of Admiralty would not interfere in the disputes of foreigners, particularly in a case of possession, without the consent of both parties, and an application for that purpose from the foreign minister; and even then it did so with reluctance, and merely to prevent further inconvenience and loss by resort to the decisions of other courts in other countries. The Martin of Norfolk, 4 C. Rob. 297.

23. In a cause of possession between foreigners, entertained at the request of the parties and of the consul of their country, the court declined to investigate a decision of a foreign Court of Admiralty, under which the present possessor claimed, and dismissed the parties. Ibid. 293. But see The Evangelistria, 46 L. J. Adm. 1; 35 L. T. 410; 25 W. R. 255; 3 Asp. 264, and Nos. 45 and 46 in tit. MORTGAGE, p. 1132.

23a. The plaintiff, a foreigner, purchased of the defendant one fourth share of a ship. At the time of the purchase she was a British ship, but the defendant, a foreigner, subsequently procured a register for her as a foreign ship. In a suit by the plaintiff for possession, the court, upon the foreign consul refusing to interfere, declined to entertain the suit, which was dismissed with costs, but not damages. The Agincourt, 2 P. D. 239; 47 L. J. Adm. 37. See also The Cosmopolite, 3 C. Rob. 533; The Thomas, 1 ibid. 322; The Fanny and Elmira, Edwards, 117, 120; The Countess of Lauderdale, 4 C. Black*, 18 Court of Session Cases, 1225. [SCOTCH.]

* (5) A proprietary suit will be entertained in case of a claim by British subjects, as the owners of a vessel found in England in the hands of foreigners. Dunlap's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) 47. [AMERICAN.]

24. The Court of Admiralty would not, even with the consent of the parties and of the accredited agent resident here of the country to which they belonged, entertain a cause of possession of a foreign ship between foreigners, as not being a case arising on the jus gentium, the municipal regulations of different countries having modified and altered the general rule under the old civil law. Such a suit dismissed accordingly. The Johan and Siegmund, Edwards, 242.

25. Motion founded on an ex parte affidavit of the owners for an order against an agent to bring in the ship's papers belonging to a foreign vessel rejected, the case not being an original cause of possession, in which the court would have the power to make an order for the production of the ship's papers as incidental to the cause. The Lusitano, 1 W. Rob. 166.

26. In a court of the law of nations (i. e., a Prize Court), the 26 Geo. 3, c. 60, requiring the name of every owner to appear in the ship's register, and the established rule confining the claims of third parties, if British subjects, to registered owners, held binding on British subjects only, and not to bar foreigners from preferring a claim against a bond fide owner whose name was not inserted in the ship's register. The Nostra Signora de los Dolores, 1 Dodson, 296.

27. A party actively and directly concerned in the purchase and outfit of the vessel, in the appointment of the master, and in the subsequent management of the vessel, whose name, however, was not inserted in the ship's register, bill of sale, or letters of marque, held to have been a bond fide owner, and responsible as such to a foreigner. The representative of such owner accordingly held responsible for costs and damages decreed to the foreigner. Ibid.

28. The government formed during a revolution in Sicily, but not recognized in this country, seized upon the king's treasure, and remitted part of it to persons in this country, to purchase steam ships, and they applied the remittance accordingly. Held, that the king, who had re-established his authority, was entitled to sue for one of the ships, which remained in the port of London, and that the persons who made the remittance were not necessary parties to the suit. Two Sicilies (King) v. Willcox, 1 Sim. N.S. 332; 14 Jur. 163; 19 L. J. Ch. 202.

(c) As affected by Courts of Chancery.

29. Two part owners of a vessel having been appointed ship's husbands, and the other part owners wishing to dismiss them, the ship's husbands denied the right of the others so to do, and possessed themselves of some of the machinery of the ship, which was at an engineer's for repairs. The other part owners filed a bill, and moved for an injunction to restrain the ship's husbands from interfering by detention of the machinery, and for a receiver of the machinery. On it appearing that a decree of possession could not be obtained in the Court of Admiralty by reason of the plaintiffs being in possession of the hull, or, at all events, could not be obtained in time to enable the vessel to fulfil her engagement; held, that the Court of Chancery had jurisdiction, upon motion, to appoint a receiver of the machinery, and to direct possession of it to be delivered to him. Brenan v Preston, 2 De G. M. & G. 813.

30. A vessel, the property of a bankrupt, had been purchased by a person, who paid his deposit. By an agreement he was to pay over the residue on a certain day to P., the solicitor to the assignees of the bankrupt. On that day the greater portion of the money was paid over to P., and the vessel was delivered to the purchaser; but the bill of sale not being handed over to him, a small portion of the purchase-money was, at his request, left unpaid. The vessel having been arrested in the Admiralty Court by the assignees, who refused to recognize the transaction; held, upon bill filed and motion by the purchaser for injunction and specific performance, that it was a proper case for the interference of the Court of Chancery. Hughes v. Morris, 14 L. T. 306.

31. Upon motion for decree, held, that the Court of Chancery could not interfere to put the purchaser into possession of the ship. Bill dismissed without costs. Ibid.; 9 Hare, 636; 16 Jur. 603; 26 L. J. Ch. 761; 2 De G. M. & G. 349. See The Virtue, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 77.

32. A person applying under the 65th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, for an order prohibiting any dealing with a vessel, stands in the position of a plaintiff in a suit for specific performance, and must show that he is ready to carry out his part of the contract. Re Ship Isis, Ex parte Baker, 3 Asp. N.S. 52.

33. The petitioner agreed to purchase a barge from A., and had paid some instalments of the purchase-money, when A. gave him notice that he had sold the barge to another person, to whom it must be given up. Order made to prohibit A. from dealing with the barge until a given day, upon the terms of the petitioner paying into court the instalments due, and giving security for the completion of the contract. Re Ship Isis, Ex parte Baker, 3 Asp. N.S. 52.

34. The plaintiff, an English subject, entered into an agreement abroad with the defendant, a foreigner, for the purchase of a ship. The defendant being out of the jurisdiction, but the ship being within it, and substituted service having been made on the master, the court decreed specific performance, and restrained the removal of the vessel from England. Hart v. Herwig, L. R. 8 Ch. 860; 42 L. J. Ch. App. 457; 1 Asp. N.S. 572; 2 ib. 63.

35. As to the jurisdiction of Courts of Equity, in reference to unregistered titles, see cap. 4, p. 1207.

36. To take bail for the safe return of the ship on the application of part owners, see Pt. VIII. p. 1418.

37. As to bottomry, see tit. BOTTOMRY, p. 105.

3. Vice-Admiralty Courts.

38. The matters in respect of which Vice-Admiralty Courts shall have jurisdiction, are as follows . . . (9) claims between the owners of any ship registered in the possession in which the court is established, touching the ownership, possession, employment, or earnings of such ship. Vice-Admiralty Court Act, 1863 (c. 24), s. 10.

39. Vice-Admiralty Courts abroad had prior to this act only the ordinary jurisdiction exercised by the Court of Admiralty before the passing of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65. The Australia, Swabey, 480; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 132; The John, 2 Hagg. 305.

40. Proceeds of a ship and cargo sold abroad and transmitted from a Vice-Admiralty Court to the registry of the High Court of Admiralty, decreed on motion to be paid out to the respective consignees of the cargo, on the consent of the purchaser of the cargo. The Lady Banks, 1 Hagg. 306.

41. As to the jurisdiction of Vice-Admiralty Courts generally, see tit. JURISDICTION, p. 686.

3. Registration of British Vessels.

1. Generally.*

42. The ownership, measurement, and registry of British vessels are regulated by Part II. of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 17—108; the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), ss. 9—15; ibid. 1862 (c. 63), ss. 3 and 4; the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 9; the M. S. (Colonial), Act, 1869 (c. 11); the M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), ss. 5 and 6; ibid. 1872 (c. 73), ss. 3 and 4; ibid. 1873 (c. 85), ss. 3—6; and ibid. 1876 (c. 80), ss. 25—28, and 36—44.

43. The second part of the M. S. Act, 1854, applies to the whole of her Majesty's dominions. See the act, s. 17. But it does not affect 3 & 4 Vict. c. 56, which relates to East India ships. Ibid. s. 108; nor does it affect her Majesty's ships. Ibid. s. 4.

* (6) The registration of British ships appears to have been first introduced into this country by the Navigation Act, 12 Car. 2, c. 18.

(7) The following were the Registry Acts prior to the M. S. Act, 1854:—7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 22; 26 Geo. 3, c. 60; 27 Geo. 3, c. 19; 34 Geo. 3, c. 68; 4 Geo. 4, c. 41; 6 Geo. 4, c. 110; 7 Geo. 4, c. 48; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 55; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 29; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 131. They are all now repealed.

(8) As to the registration of ships belonging to British subjects within the jurisdiction of her Majesty in China and Japan, see the China and Japan Maritime Order in Council, 1874, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), 89.

(9) As to the registration of United States vessels, mode of measurement, and the record of bills of sale, mortgages, &c., see Revised Statutes of U. S. ss. 4131—4196.

(10) As to granting clearances and entry of clearance of vessels, form of manifest, &c., Ibid. ss. 4197—4218.

(11) As to tonnage duties, Ibid. ss. 4219—4227.

(12) As to discriminating duties, Ibid. ss. 4228—4232.

(13) For provisions as to the inspection of the boilers of steamers, licences of officers, &c., and carriage of merchandize, Ibid. ss. 4399—4500.

(14) For provisions as to the appointment and duties of shipping commissioners, Ibid. ss. 4501—4508.

(15) As to the fees of shipping commissioners, Ibid. ss. 4592—4595.

44. As to the construction of the following terms of the act, "her Majesty's dominions," "British dominions," "British possession," "the United Kingdom," "Consular officer," and "Ship," see Ibid. s. 2.

45. Every application for the registry of a ship shall in the case of individuals be made by the person requiring to be registered as owner, or one or more of them, or his or their duly-authorized agent, and in the case of bodies corporate by their duly-authorized agent; the authority of such agent, of individuals, to be testified by writing under the hands of the appointers, and of a body corporate under its corporate seal. Ibid. s. 35.

46. Before registry, the ship shall be surveyed by a person duly appointed; and such surveyor shall grant a certificate in the form marked A. in the schedule; the certificate shall be delivered to the registrar before registry. Ibid. s. 36.

47. The following rules shall be observed with respect to entries in the register book:—

- (1) The property in a ship shall be divided into sixty-four shares. See M. S. Act, 1854, s. 37.
- (2) Subject to the provisions with respect to joint owners or owners by transmission, not more than sixty-four individuals shall be entitled to be registered at the same time as owners of any one ship; but this rule shall not affect the beneficial title of any number of persons or of any company represented by or claiming under or through any registered owner or joint owner. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1880 (c. 18), s. 2, repealing sub-s. 2 of s. 37 of the M. S. Act, 1854.
- (3) No person shall be entitled to be registered as owner of any fractional part of a share in a ship; but any number of persons, not exceeding five, may be registered as joint owners of a ship or of a share therein. See M. S. Act, 1854, s. 37.
- (4) Joint owners shall be considered as constituting one person only as regards the last rule, and shall not be entitled to dispose in severalty of any interest in any ship or in any share therein in respect of which they are registered. Ibid.
- (5) A body corporate may be registered as owner by its corporate name. Ibid.

48. As soon as the requisites to the due registry of a ship have been complied with, the registrar shall enter in the register book the following particulars: (1) the name of the ship and of the port to which she belongs; (2) the details as to her tonnage, build, and description comprised in the certificate hereinbefore directed to be given by the surveyor; (3) the several particulars as to her origin stated in the declaration or declarations of ownership; (4) the names and descriptions of her registered owner or owners, and if there is more than one such owner, the proportions in which they are interested in such ship. Ibid. s. 42.

49. Of the documents required to be produced to the registrar, he retains in his possession the surveyor's and builder's certificates, the copy of the condemnation, and all declarations of ownership. Ibid. s. 61.

50. Shares in ships registered under the M. S. Act, 1854, are deemed to be included in the word "stock," as defined by the Trustee Act, 1850, which is applicable to such shares accordingly. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 10.

51. No notice of any trust, express, implied, or constructive, shall be entered in the register book, or receivable by the registrar; and, subject to any rights and powers appearing by the register book to be vested in any other party, the registered owner of any ship or share therein shall have power absolutely to dispose in manner therein mentioned of such ship or share, and to give effectual receipts for any money paid or advanced by way of consideration. See M. S. Act, 1854, s. 43.

52. A vessel registered by the owner as The City of Bruxelles, was registered by the mortgagee as The City of Brussels. The identity being established, held, that the misdescription did not affect the validity of the registration by the mortgagee. Bell v. Bank of London, 3 H. & N. 730; 28 L. J. Exch. 116.

53. The Court of Chancery cannot entertain the question whether a ship was properly registered, but must take the registration as conclusive. Coombs v. Mansfield, 3 Drew. 193; 1 Jur. N.S. 270.

54. Any document required by this act to be executed in the presence of or to be attested by any witness or witnesses, may be proved by the evidence of any person able to bear witness to the requisite facts, without calling any one of the attesting witnesses. See M. S. Act, 1854, s. 526.

55. A ship built to be sold to a foreigner, and delivered at a foreign port, was assigned by the builder to the plaintiff for valuable consideration, under an agreement not in the form of a M. S. Act bill of sale. The assignment was not registered, either under the M. S. Act, 1854, or the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. At the time of the assignment the ship had been completely built and tried. Held, that the ship was not a British ship within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854, and that an assignment of her need not be by bill of sale, nor registered under that statute. Held, also, that an assignment of her fell within the proviso in the Bills of Sale Act, 1854, s. 7, which exempts assignments of a ship from the operation of that statute. Union Bank of London v. Lenanton, 3 C. P. D. 243.

56. A vessel being launched must be registered as a British ship at the time of such launch, in order to enjoy the privileges of a British ship in an action of damage by collision arising therefrom. The Andalusian, 3 P. D. 182.

56a. Section 2 of the M. S. Act, 1854, does not limit the meaning of the word "ship," but enlarges it. The Mac, 7 P. D. (C. A.) 126; 51 L. J. P. D. 81; 4 Asp. 555; Ex parte Ferguson, L. R. 6 Q. B. 280.

56b. A hopper barge used for dredging, with no means of propulsion within itself, held, to be a "ship" within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854. The Mac, supra.

56c. A fishing coble of ten tons burden and decked forward only, but which went twenty or thirty miles to sea almost entirely with sails, although she was capable of being propelled by oars, held, to be a "ship" within the meaning of the M. S. Acts, 1854 and 1862. Ex parte Ferguson, supra.

57. Semble, where a ship is owned by an English limited company, which, for the purpose of carrying on business in a foreign country, is registered in that country as a foreign company, and the ship is also registered there, the ship is nevertheless a British ship, and although not having a British registry, is subject to all the liabilities of a British ship. Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, &c. v. Netherlands India Steam Navigation Co. Limited, 9 Q. B. D. 118; 10 Q. B. D. 521; 4 Asp. 523; 5 Asp. 65; 46 L. T. N.S. 530; 48 L. T. N.S. 546.

58. An Order in Council purporting to be made in pursuance of sect. 60 of the M. S. Act, 1862, is valid, notwithstanding that it recites that the British rules as to measurement have been adopted "with the exception of a slight difference in the mode of estimating the allowance of engine-room." The Franconia, 3 P. D. (C. A.) 164; 4 Asp. 1.

59. As to evidence of registers and certificates of registry, see tit. EVIDENCE, c. 16, s. 12, p. 440, and ibid. in Addenda.

2. Forms.*

60. For provisions requiring the Commissioners of Customs to cause the several forms required by the second part of this act, and contained in the schedule thereto, to be supplied to all registrars for distribution to the persons requiring the same, free or at such prices as they may direct, and with the consent of the Board of Trade to make alterations therein after public notice; and to give instructions as to anything to be done in pursuance of this part of the act; see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 96.

61. If any bill of sale, mortgage, or other instrument for the disposal or transfer of any ship or share or interest therein is made in any form or contains particulars other than the form and particulars prescribed in pursuance of the M. S. Act, 1854, no registrar can be required to record the same without the direction of the Commissioners of Customs. Ibid. 1855 (c. 91), s. 11.

3. Fees.†

(a) Generally.

62. For provisions as to the application of the fees taken under the second part of this act (i. e., as to British ships, their ownership, measurement, and registry), see Ibid. 1854 (c. 104), s. 95.

(b) Of Surveyors.

See cap. 6.

4. Under Indian Registry Acts.

63. The acts relating to the registry of Indian ships are the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 56, repealed as to ss. 1 to 7 by Statute Law Revision Act, 1874, No. 2, and the Indian Act, No. X. of 1841; Act XI. of 1850; and Act IV. of 1875, s. 30.

64. Nothing in the M. S. Act, 1854, is to repeal or affect the act of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 56, regulating the trade of ships built and trading within the limits of the East India Company's charter. See M. S. Act, 1854, s. 108.

65. No ships shall be deemed British after the passing of the act, unless registered in accordance therewith, and a certificate of registry granted, and on the back of such certificate shall be specified the names of the owners and the amount of shares held by them. See Indian Act X. of 1841, s. 1.

66. The ports at which such registration shall be made shall be the ports of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Singapore, and such ports as the local governments shall declare to be registering ports within the act. Ibid. s. 2.

67. Rangoon and Akyab have been declared under this section. See Calcutta Gazette for 1854, p. 848; for 1856, p. 1549.

67a. So Kyook Phyoo, Bassien, Tavoy and Mergin. See Gazette of India, Feb. 11, 1871, Pt. I. p. 75.

68. But ships, not built at any of such ports, shall be allowed one voyage thereto for the purpose of being registered. Indian Act of 1841, s. 2.

69. A book of registry is to be kept, and a declaration made before registration. Ibid. ss. 4 and 5.

70. And a measurement of the vessel made upon inspection before registration. Ibid. s. 7.

71. For the rules of measurement, Ibid. ss. 8, 9 and 10.

72. For the rules of measurement of laden vessels, Ibid. s. 11.

73. The amount of the registered tonnage is to be cut on the main beam of the vessel. Ibid. s. 12.

74. Sect. 15 prescribes penalties for the fraudulent use of the certificate of registry. A change of master, whenever such occurs, shall be indorsed on the certificate. Ibid. s. 16.

75. As to painting the name of the ship on the stern, Ibid. s. 17.

76. A certificate of the builder is to be produced to the registrar before he grants a certificate of registration. Ibid. s. 18.

77. Sect. 19 provides for the loss of the certificate, or its being mislaid. Sect. 20 provides for the recovery of the certificate when unlawfully detained by any person contrary to the purpose for which it was granted; i. e. the navigation of the ship. Upon any alteration in the ship, she is to be registered de novo. Ibid. s. 21.

78. The oath or declaration of the registrar is to be admitted as evidence. Ibid. s. 22.

79. For provisions for the acquisition of a British registry by ships owned by a native prince or state, or any subject of a native prince or state, when commanded by British officers, Ibid. s. 24. As to measurement for the purpose of ascertaining port dues, see Act XII. of 1875, ss. 50, 51, 61. See also 4 Geo. 4, c. 50.

80. A ship built in a foreign port in India in 1817, within the limits of the company's charter, by foreigners, and which sailed under foreign flags until 1838, when it was owned by, and had ever since belonged to, British subjects resident at Bombay, held, entitled under acts done in pursuance of the powers granted by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 56, to be registered at Bombay as a British ship, for the purposes of trade, within the limits of the charter. Crauford v. Spooner, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 1.

5. *In British Possessions.

81. As to the powers given to the legislative authority of any British possession, by act or ordinance, confirmed by her Majesty in Council, to repeal any provisions of this act relating to ships registered in such possession, see the M. S. Act, 1854, s. 547.

82. Canada is to be deemed a British the act. Pt. I. containing the tables of fees (2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 160), amended pursuant to the act by the scale of fees sanctioned by the Board of Trade, for which see 2 Maude & Pollock, pp. 391, 393, and pp. 484-486.

6. Measurement.

(a) Generally.*

84. The duties imposed upon the Commissioners of Customs with respect to the

* (17) See, for an examination of the existing law and for suggested improvements therein, the Report of the Royal Commission on Tonnage, Sess. Papers, Ho. Co. 1881, No. 1188.

(17a) The following deductions or allowances are to be made in measuring tonnage:

- (a) Any closed-in space or spaces solely appropriated to or fitted with machinery, and the wheel-house for sheltering the man or men at the wheel, if not larger than required for such purposes. See Board of Trade Instructions to Measuring Surveyors under the M. S. Acts, M. 16845—1883, s. 3, p. 6.
- (b) Any erection on the upper-decks of vessels fitted for the shelter of deck passengers on short voyages to protect them from the weather. This exception, however, is only permissible by special directions from the Board of Trade.
- (c) The cook-house and condenser space, if of no greater extent than is required for the cook, and for the engineer when employed in condensing water.
- (d) Water-closets or privies to a reasonable extent for the officers and crew, and an additional one in the case of passenger ships for every 50 persons: not more than 12, however, in all to be allowed.
- (f) Crew spaces.
- (g) In the case of steam vessels the space occupied, and occupied solely by the propelling power—the gross tonnage of the hold having been previously ascertained. Ibid. s. 4, p. 7.

(18) See further as to mode of measuring engine-room, Ibid. ss. 5—7, pp. 8, 9.

(19) The circumstances under which Rules I. and II. for determining tonnage are to be respectively applied are as follows:

All ships requiring measurement, whether for the purpose of registry or for payment of dues, or for any purpose whatever, are to be measured by Rule I. except under the following circumstances—

- (a) New ships requiring registry under circumstances rendering the application of Rule I. inapplicable, may be measured by Rule II. But the measuring surveyors are in all such cases to obtain direct authority from the Board of Trade.

(b) Foreign ships having cargo on board, or whose holds are so lumbered with stores, dunnage, or ballast, or so fitted with bulkheads or cabins as to prevent the required measurements being taken, may be measured under Rule II.

(c) Ships whose tonnage is already registered according to any former act, but whose owners desire to have them re-measured under the Act of 1854, may, if the holds are so obstructed by bulkheads or cabins or other features as to render Rule I. inapplicable, be measured by Rule II., if the owners so desire.

Ships measured by Rule II. may at any subsequent period be measured by Rule I. on the application of the owner and payment of the proper fees. See Board of Trade Instructions to Measuring Surveyors under the M. S. Acts, M. 16845—1883, s. 2, p. 5.

(20) For practical directions to the surveyors to be observed in the operation of measuring under Rule I., see Ibid. ss. 7—22, pp. 9—23.

(21) And under Rule II. see Ibid. ss. 23—24, pp. 24—26; calculation under Rule II. and for table of, see Ibid. ss. 27—29.

(22) As to International tonnage: By Orders in Council ships of the undermentioned countries having certificates of registry or other national papers, dated on and after the dates following, are no longer required to be re-measured in any port or place in her Majesty's dominions, but are deemed to be of the tonnage denoted in such certificates of registry or other national papers:—

* The amount of deduction for propelling power being different in these countries in respect of steamers, option is granted to the masters of steamships of such countries whereby measurement of ships, by sects. 23, 27, 28 and 29 of the M. S. Act, 1854, are transferred to the Board of Trade by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 3.

85. The Board of Trade may make modifications and alterations from time to time in the rules for measurement of tonnage. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 29, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 3.

86. In the rules for measurement of tonnage, the tonnage deck is to be taken to be the upper deck in ships which have less than three decks, and to be the second deck from below in other ships. All measurements are taken in feet and fractions of feet, fractions of feet being expressed in decimals. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 20.

87. The tonnage of every ship to be registered, with the exceptions mentioned in the next section; and the tonnage of every ship to which such rule can be applied, whether about to be registered or not, is to be ascertained according to the measurements, deductions and divisions in rule 1 and the table therein set forth as to transverse areas, computation from areas, poop and other closed-in space, and cases of two or more decks. Ibid. s. 21.

88. For provisions for the measurement of ships having two or more decks, Ibid. s. 21, sub-s. 5.

89. As to the measurement, under rule 2, of ships which require to be measured for any purpose other than registry, and have cargo on board; and of ships which require to be measured for registry and cannot be measured under rule 1, Ibid. s. 22.

90. As to the measurement, under rule 2, by length, breadth and girth, and the mode of measurement thereunder of poop and other closed-in spaces on upper deck, Ibid. sub-ss. 1 and 2.

91. For provisions as to the measurement of a break, poop or other permanent closed-in space on the upper deck available for cargo or stores, or for the berthing or accommodation of passengers under rules 1 and 2, Ibid. s. 21, sub-s. 4; and s. 22, sub-s. 2.

92. For the mode of measurement to ascertain the tonnage of open ships, Ibid. s. 24.

93. In every steamer or ship requiring engine-room an allowance is to be made for the space occupied by the propelling power, and the amount so allowed deducted from the gross tonnage of the ship, and the remainder is to be deemed her registered tonnage. For the mode of estimating and measuring the allowance of such space generally, and of the shaft trunk of screw steamers, and when there are separate compartments, see the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 23, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 3.

94. For the calculation of the deduction from tonnage of the space necessary for the proper working of the boilers and machinery in paddle and screw steamers, and the mode of measurement thereof generally, and when the space is unusually large or small, Ibid.

95. For the measurement of steamers in which the engines and boilers are fitted in a separate compartment, and for the measurement of the shaft trunks of screw steamers, Ibid. s. 23, sub-ss. 2 and 3.

96. If any alteration is made in the length or capacity of the space allowed for the propelling power, or any cabins are fitted up in such space, the ship is to be deemed a ship not registered until re-measured. Ibid. s. 23, sub-s. 4.

97. If in any ship in which this space is measured any goods or stores are stowed or carried, penalty against master and owner not exceeding £100. Ibid. s. 23, sub-s. 5.

98. When the tonnage of a ship has been ascertained, and registered in accordance with this act, the same is thenceforth to be deemed her tonnage, and to be repeated in every subsequent registry, unless any alteration is made in the form or capacity of the ship, or unless it is discovered that the tonnage has been erroneously computed, in either of which cases she must be re-measured. Ibid. s. 26.

99. Semble, it is immaterial, if the provisions of sect. 9 of the M. S. Act, 1867, are complied with, whether the space in question is in "a break or poop, or any other permanent closed-in space on the upper deck available for the such masters may elect to have the engine-room re-measured under the rules of allowance for engine-room relating to British ships, and deduction made accordingly. A copy of the certificate of tonnage furnished to the master in such cases is to be sent to the principal surveyor for tonnage, with a note thereon of the measurement of engine-room and the amount of deduction under the foreign rules. See Board of Trade Instructions to Measuring Surveyors under the M. S. Acts, M. 16845—1883, s. 34, p. 37.

berthing of the crew" (see sect. 21 (4) M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104)), or is a portion of the space between the spar deck and tonnage deck (see sect. 21 (5) of the same Act, 1854). The Franconia, 3 P. D. (C. A.): 164; 4 Asp. 1.

100. A "spar deck" within the meaning of sub-div. 5 of sect. 21 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, is a continuous deck from stem to stern, fastened down and water-tight, and making the space beneath fit for the stowage of cargo like a hold. Per Cairns, C., Leith, Hull & Hamburg Steam Packet Co. v. Lord Advocate, Court of Sess. Cas. 3rd Series, vol. 2, p. 597. [SCOTCH.]

101. Over the main deck of a ship there was a covering or awning, open at the sides, and unfit for the carriage of cargo, passengers or crew. Held (affirming the decision appealed from), that tonnage was not chargeable thereon as a third deck. Lord Advocate v. The Clyde Steam Navigation Co., 2 H. L. 409. [SCOTCH.]

102. Per Lord O'Hagan: The measurement of the ship's tonnage should be in accordance with her carrying capacity. Ibid.

(b) Allowance for Crew Spaces.

(aa) Generally.*

103. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the provisions, health, and accommodation of seamen applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad, when out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

103a. For provisions as to the measurement for tonnage under rules 1 and 2 of a break, a poop, or other permanent closed-in space on the upper deck, available for cargo or stores, or further berthing or accommodation of passengers or crew, and providing that nothing shall be added for a closed-in space solely appropriated to the berthing of the crew, unless such space exceeds one-twentieth of the tonnage of the ship ascertained as therein mentioned, and then only the excess beyond that proportion, Ibid. s. 21, sub-s. 4; and s. 22, sub-s. 2. But see M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 9.

104. Every place in any ship occupied by seamen or apprentices, and appropriated to their use, shall have for every seaman or apprentice a space of not less than seventy-two cubic feet, and twelve superficial feet, measured on the deck or floor. M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 9, sub-s. 1.

* (23) As the M. S. Act, 1867, s. 9, makes no mention of the one-twentieth reduction referred to in sub-s. 4 of s. 21 of the M. S. Act, 1854, but directs a deduction from the registered tonnage for crew spaces, meeting the requirements of s. 9, this restriction of the M. S. Act, 1854, no longer applies. See Board of Trade Instructions, 1884, as to survey of passenger accommodation, crew spaces, &c., par. 32.

(24) Provided that the surveyor certifies that the provisions of the latter act in regard to such places are complied with. Ibid.

(25) For the practical instructions to surveyors as to the measurement of crew spaces, on board merchant ships under M. S. Act, 1867, the meaning of the expressions "ship" and "seamen," "entire contents," "height" and "floor area of crew spaces," the deduction thereof from the tonnage, see Ibid. pars. 30, 31, 43, 49, 52, 54—56, 64, and 66.

(26) All crew spaces situated above the upper deck of vessels measured under the Act of 1854, and registered before the Act of 1867 came into operation, were (to the extent of one-twentieth of the vessel's remaining tonnage) excluded from the registered tonnage, and surveyors will, therefore, not now give the certificate headed "Surveys 61," authorizing an allowance to be granted for such spaces, which have been already allowed. In order to prevent such allowances from being obtained, instructions have been given to the Registrar of Shipping that, before any deduction on account of crew space situate above the upper deck is made from the vessel's tonnage, such crew spaces are to be measured by the surveyor, and included in or added to the existing tonnage. Ibid. par. 64.

(27) As to the mode of calculation of the tonnage allowance on account of crew spaces and of the amount of deduction, see Ibid. pars. 66 and 67.

(28) As to the rules for computing the superficial area of the deck or floor, the exclusion from "crew space" of spaces not available for the proper accommodation of the crew who are to occupy them, the rule for computing the cubic capacity, the allowance of spaces for petty officers, apprentices, firemen and coal trimmers' berths, see Ibid. pars. 54—58.

(29) As to the allowance as crew space of parts used by master and officers, and the proper apportioning of the same, see Ibid. pars. 43 f. and g. and 57.

tively. These gaps were able to be enclosed by planks and side doors, which, however, were not water-tight. Held (affirming the judgment of the Court of Session), that the vessel had not a permanent closed-in space on the upper deck available for cargo or stores, or for the berthing or accommodation of passengers or crew within the meaning of sub-division 4 of that section. Lord Advocate v. Clyde Steam Navigation Co., Court of Sess. Cas. 3rd Series, vol. 2, 440; 4th Series, vol. 2, 23; 2 L. R. H. L. (Sc.) 409; 2 Asp. N.S. 502; 32 L. T. 287.

104b. A space between the main deck and an upper deck, which latter deck extended from the fore-castle to the bridge, was partly closed in aft by a round house, on either side of which, however, there were open passages, and through these passages the water could always flow. Water-ports, mooring-bits, scuppers, and a pump, were all within this space. Held, that this space was not a "permanent closed-in space" within the meaning of sub-division 4 of sect. 21 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104. Leith, Hull and Hamburg Steam Packet Co. v. Lord Advocate, Court of Sess. Cas. 3rd Series, vol. 2, p. 597. [SCOTCH.]

105. The governor of any British possession abroad may from time to time appoint fit and proper persons to be surveyors, who shall have and exercise within such possession all the powers with respect to the inspection of crew spaces conferred upon the Board of Trade surveyors in the United Kingdom, by sect. 9 of the M. S. Act, 1867. See the Colonial Shipping Act, 1868 (c. 129), s. 3.

(cc) *Foreign Ships.

(dd) Construction and Lighting.

106. Every such place shall be such as to make space available for the proper accommodation of the men, securely constructed, properly lighted, ventilated, protected from weather and sea, and as far as practicable properly shut off and protected from effluvia of cargo or bilge water. Ibid. s. 9, sub-s. 2. And see Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, Crew, Space, Lights, &c. 1884, pp. 31—35, pars. 45—52.

(ee) Free from Cargo.

106a. Every such place shall be kept free from stores or goods of any kind, not being the personal property of the crew in use during the voyage. See M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 9, sub-s. 6.

106b. If any such place is not kept free from goods and stores, the master shall be deemed to be in fault, and shall, for every such failure, pay to each seaman lodged there one shilling a day for each day after complaint made to him by any two or more of the seamen. Ibid. sub-s. 8, and Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, Lights, &c. 1884, par. 24.

107. No crew space shall be deemed such as to authorize a deduction from

* (29a) When surveyors are called in to inspect the crew spaces of foreign ships, they proceed in the same manner as with British ships. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, Crew Spaces, Lights, &c. 1884, par. 44.

† (29b) Galleys, wherever situated are not deducted as crew space, but if the crew space and galley are contiguous, the bulkhead must be doubled, with felt between the doubling and the bulkhead. Ibid. par. 43 (g).

‡ (30) If the owner of a ship wishes to claim a deduction from the registered tonnage of his ship, on account of any places provided for the berthing and accommodation of seamen and apprentices, and solely appropriated to their use, he must, besides proving that the provisions of the act as to cubic and superficial space, fitting, lighting, and ventilating, therein referred to, are complied with, provide one or more permanently fixed privy or privies for the use of the crew, of such construction as may be approved by the surveyor. Ibid. par. 37, and par. 41. See as to the proper construction and number of privies, Ibid. par. 52.

(30a) Deductions for crew space are not to be allowed in the case of vessels having an iron deck over this space, unless a wooden deck is laid on top of it, or unless the underside of the deck over the sleeping berths in the fore-castle or crew space is sheathed or ceiled with wood. In the case of vessels in which deductions for crew space have already been allowed, the crew space must be inspected as opportunity arises, and the deduction disallowed if this instruction be not complied with. Ibid. par. 37A.

registered tonnage, unless there are one or more properly-constructed privies for the use of the crew, of such number and of such construction as may be approved by the surveyor. See M. S. Act, 1867, s. 9, sub-s. 3.

(hh) *Marking.

108. No such deduction from tonnage shall be authorized unless there is permanently cut in a beam, and cut in or painted on or over the doorway or hatchway of every such place, the number of men it is constructed to accommodate. Ibid. s. 9, sub-s. 5.

(ii) Inspection.†

109. Every such place occupied by seamen shall, whenever the ship is regis-

* (31) He must also, to entitle him to the allowance, have the number of seamen the place is certified to accommodate cut in a beam, and cut in or painted on or over the doorway or hatchway of the place. See Board of Trade Instructions, &c., 1883, par. 37.

(32) In case of deck-house with cased beams, the cutting may be on the beam casing instead of the beam itself. Ibid. par. 68.

† (34) Whenever a ship, not being employed exclusively in fishing on the coasts of the United Kingdom, a pleasure yacht, or a barge employed upon a river, is to be registered or re-registered in the United Kingdom, the crew spaces must be inspected, and if the inspection is in all respects satisfactory, the surveyor will grant a certificate authorizing the proper deduction for crew space, and the ship will be registered with that deduction. Ibid. par. 43.

(34a) Even though an owner does not desire to claim any deduction from the registered tonnage of his ship on account of crew spaces, the crew spaces must nevertheless be of the size and construction required by the 9th section of the M. S. Act, 1867. Ibid. par. 33.

(34b) The M. S. Act, 1867, is not, however, an enactment intended to regulate or interfere with the manning of merchant ships; therefore it is not for the surveyor to say how many men ought to be accommodated on board any particular ship or any particular classes of ships. That is a matter to be arranged entirely between the owner as an employer, and the crew as the persons he employs to navigate and work his ship. Ibid. par. 39.

(34c) On the one hand it is incumbent on the shipowner to man his ship properly, and on the other it is left to any seaman to refuse to engage to serve on board a ship if he thinks that the number of hands proposed to be engaged by the owner or master to form the crew is not sufficient for the ship or service. The proper complement to form the crew, and therefore the proper amount of accommodation to be provided for the crew are matters that must rest between, and be settled by, the owner and his servants. With these points the Legislature has not interfered and the surveyors have nothing to do, and no surveyor should give any opinion thereon. Ibid. par. 40.

(34d) If the inspection is not satisfactory, the surveyor will not give his certificate that the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1867, have been complied with in that respect, but the ship can be registered without any allowance on account of crew space, provided the surveyor gives his certificate that he has inspected the crew spaces; but whether the allowance is or is not certified for and granted, the provisions of the act as regards crew spaces must be complied with (except pars. 3 and 5 of sect. 9, as to privies and marking, when the deductions are not allowed for), and the owners and master are liable to penalties for default. Ibid. par. 43.

(34e) After inspection of crew spaces, whether expenses have been incurred or not, the proper form, stating in what respects the act has not been complied with, must be forwarded by the surveyor to the Board of Trade immediately on its receipt from the Superintendent of the Mercantile Marine Office. Ibid. par. 60.

(35) The surveyor records his measurement and calculations on the inspection inspected by one of the surveyors appointed by the Board of Trade, who shall, if satisfied therewith, give the collector of customs a certificate to that effect, and thereupon such space shall be deducted from the register tonnage. Ibid. s. 9, sub-s. 4.

(kk) Liabilities of Owner or Master in fault.

110. If in any other respect the provisions of this section are not observed with respect to any such place occupied by seamen, the owner shall be deemed to be in fault. Penalty for every breach not exceeding £20. Ibid. s. 9, sub-s. 9.

(c) *Disallowance of Crew Spaces.

111. Upon any complaint concerning any such place occupied by seamen, one of the Board of Trade surveyors may inspect such place, and if he finds that any of these provisions are not complied with, he reports the same to the collector of customs at the port where the ship is registered; and thereupon the registered tonnage shall be altered, and the deduction in respect of space disallowed until it is certified by such or some other Board of Trade surveyor that the provisions of the act in respect of such place are fully complied with. Ibid. s. 9, sub-s. 7.

(d) Tonnage Rules and Dues.

111a. The Board of Trade may make such modifications or alterations as may form headed "Surveys 64," retaining his own note of measurement and calculations, he forwards a summary of these on the form headed "Surveys 63," to the Principal Surveyor of Tonnage, 13, Downing Street, London. Ibid. par. 59.

(36) The memorandum forms of inspection headed "Surveys 64," and other survey forms, may be obtained from the Superintendent of the Mercantile Marine Office of a port. Ibid. par. 69.

(37) All the forms headed "Surveys 63" are sent to the office of the Principal Surveyor of Tonnage for the calculations to be checked, and in order that any practical question as to construction, fitting, ventilation, &c., may be attended to. A copy of these documents is kept in the office-book, and any information the Principal Surveyor of Tonnage requires is immediately supplied to him by the surveyor. Ibid. par. 60.

(38) In case of a difference between the surveyor and the owner, agent, master or builder, the surveyor forwards to one of the assistant secretaries of the Board of Trade a statement of the facts, and takes the directions of the Board thereon. Ibid. par. 41.

(39) After the surveyor has inspected the crew space, and made a note of any defects or additions requiring to be remedied or made, he sends a list of the same to the owner, agent, master or builder, on the form headed "Surveys 70." On receiving back this form in the regular manner, he again inspects the vessel, and if all defects are made good proceeds to measure the space according to the rules. Ibid. par. 53.

(40) When the surveyor is satisfied that the crew spaces are in all respects such as are required by the M. S. Act, 1867, s. 9, including proper privies and the cutting in the beam, and the cutting or painting on or over the doorway of the number of men who can be accommodated in such crew spaces, he gives to the collector of customs at the port where the vessel is registered a certificate to that effect, and thereupon the aggregate tonnage of such spaces, being the quotient obtained by dividing the total entire capacity by 100, is deducted by the registrar from the registered tonnage. Ibid. par. 63.

(41) The tonnage allowance on account of crew space is returned by the surveyor to the collector of customs on a form headed "Surveys 61." Ibid. par. 66.

(42) Crew spaces inspected for the purpose of registry or re-registry need not be reported to the Board of Trade on the form headed "Surveys 63." Ibid. par. 60.

(43) Surveyors are to send into the applicants for crew space inspection of any vessel a report after each survey, stating their requirements, and giving their expenses in detail, on the proper form. Ibid. par. 42.

(44) The duty of surveying the crew space under the M. S. Act, 1867, s. 9, is to be fulfilled, if necessary, in equal proportion by all the surveyors in the port or district qualified for the duty, unless special directions are given to the contrary. Ibid. par. 29.

(45) Surveyors cannot be required to enter any crew space for the purpose of inspection unless it is in a sufficiently clean and clear state. Ibid.

(46) As to the fees and expenses to be charged for surveys of crew spaces, see Pt. I. c. 3, s. 3, p. 1186.

* (47) Upon such complaint one of the surveyors appointed under Part IV. of the principal act is required to make the required inspection, and report to the collector of customs of the port. See Board of Trade Instructions, &c., 1883, par. 36.

(48) It will then be for the collector to take such steps as are required of him by this section. Ibid.

(49) The form of the report used by the surveyor in this case is headed "Surveys 62." Ibid.

from time to time become necessary in the tonnage rules prescribed by this act in order to the more accurate and uniform application thereof, and the effectual carrying out of the principle of the measurement therein adopted. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 29, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 3.

112. Sect. 29 of the M. S. Act, 1854, and s. 3 of the M. S. Act, 1872, enabled the Board of Trade, with the sanction of the Treasury, to make alterations in the "tonnage rules" prescribed in the act. Held, that they could not, under this section, abolish the distinctions between different classes of vessels or the allowances directed to be made to each class in estimating the registered tonnage under the 23rd section, but only to alter the mode of measuring. The City of Dublin Steam Packet Co. v. Thompson, L. R. 1 C. P. (Exch.) 355; 34 L. J. C. P. 316; 35 ibid. (Exch.) 198; 2 Asp. 247; ibid. (Exch.) 412; 19 C. B. N.S. 553; H. & R. 369; 11 L. T. N.S. 849.

113. Any body corporate or persons having power to levy tonnage rates on ships may, with the consent of the Board of Trade, levy such rates on the registered tonnage as determined by the M. S. Acts, notwithstanding any local act providing a different system of measurement. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 4.

114. As to the tonnage dues to be paid by ships carrying deck cargo in any uncovered space upon deck, or in any covered space not included in the cubical contents forming the ship's registered tonnage, see M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 23.

115. As to the abolition of exemption of ships from paying dues when engaged in certain local trades, see the Shipping Dues Exemption Act, 1867 (c. 15), amended by the Shipping Dues Exemption Act Amendment Act, 1869 (c. 52).

(e) Deck Cargoes.

116. If any ship, British or foreign, other than home trade ships as defined by the M. S. Act, 1854, carries timber, stores, or other goods as deck cargo, i. e. in any uncovered space upon deck, or in any covered space not included in the cubical contents forming the ship's registered tonnage, all dues payable on the ship's tonnage shall be payable as if there were added to the ship's registered tonnage the tonnage of the space occupied by such goods at the time at which such dues become payable. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 23.

117. The space so occupied shall be deemed to be the space limited by the area occupied by the goods and by straight lines inclosing a rectangular space sufficient to include the goods. Ibid.

118. The tonnage of such space shall be ascertained by the officer in manner directed by the M. S. Act, 1854, s. 21, sub-s. 4, and shall be entered by him in the ship's official log-book and in a memorandum he shall deliver to the master, who shall, when the dues are demanded, produce the memorandum as if it were the certificate of registry, or, if a foreign ship, the document equivalent thereto. Penalty for default against the master the same as for non-production of certificate of registry (i. e. £100, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 50) or analogous document. Ibid.

119. These provisions as to deck cargo do not apply to any ship whilst engaged in the coasting trade of any British possession. Ibid. s. 44.

119a. As to deck cargoes generally, see this tit. Pt. V. c. 1.

7. Re-measurement.

120. The owner of any ship which is measured under Rule II. in sect. 22 of the M. S. Act, 1854, may at any time afterwards apply to the Board of Trade to have the ship re-measured under Rule I. of that act. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 14, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 3. See also note 19, p. 1188.

121. For provisions for the re-measurement of ships registered before this act came into operation, and for re-measurement subsequently to that time of steamers of which the engine-room compartment has been extended, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 27 and 28, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 3; and see No. 112.

122. When the tonnage of a ship has been duly ascertained and registered, if any alteration is made in the form or capacity of the ship, or it is discovered that the tonnage has been erroneously computed, the ship must be re-measured, and her tonnage determined and registered as before. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 26.

8. Naming and Marking.*

(a) Generally.

123. A British ship shall not be described by any other name than that by which she is registered. Penalty for breach not exceeding £100; and any principal officer of customs may detain the ship until the provisions of this section are complied with. See the M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), s. 6.

124. As to the marking before registry, according to directions of the Board of Trade, of every British ship's name on her stern and both bows, her port of registry on her stern, and her official number, and number denoting her registered tonnage on her main beam, and as to the size and colour of the letters, see Ibid. 1873 (c. 85), s. 3.

125. These marks are to be permanently continued unless altered as provided by the M. S. Acts. Penalty for breach against owner or master not exceeding £100; and any officer of customs on receipt of a certificate that the ship is inaccurately marked, may detain her until properly marked. Ibid.

(b) Changes.†

126. No change shall be made in the name of a British ship without the previous permission of the Board of Trade under seal or under the hand of one of its secretaries or assistant-secretaries. Application for such change is to be made in writing to the Board. If the Board entertains the application it will require such notice thereof to be published as it may think fit. On such permission being granted, the ship's name shall forthwith be altered in the register book, in the certificate of registry, and on her bows and stern. If it is shown to the satisfaction of the Board that the name of any ship has been changed without such permission, it shall direct her name to be altered into the name she bore before such change, and the name shall be altered in the register book, certificate of registry, and on her bows and stern accordingly. Penalty for change of name without permission, not exceeding £100; and any principal officer of customs may detain the ship until the provisions of this section are complied with. Ibid. 1871 (c. 110), s. 6.

127. When a ship having once been registered has ceased to be so registered, no person shall apply to register, and no registrar shall register, such ship except by the name by which she was previously registered, unless by permission of the Board of Trade, to be granted as therein mentioned. Penalty for breach (unless from ignorance) not exceeding £100; and any principal officer of customs may detain the ship until the provisions of this section are complied with. Ibid.

(c) Foreign Ship becoming British.

128. When a foreign ship which has not previously been registered as a British ship becomes a British ship, no person shall apply to register, and no registrar shall register, such ship except by the name she bore as a foreign ship just before becoming a British ship, unless by permission of the Board of Trade. Penalty for breach not exceeding £100. Ibid. 1873 (c. 85), s. 5.

(d) Exemptions.

129. The Board of Trade may exempt any class of ships from the requirements of sect. 3. Ibid. 1873 (c. 80), s. 3.

130. No fishing vessel duly registered, lettered and numbered, pursuant to the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, is required to have her name and port of registry marked under this section. Ibid.

131. As to yachts, barges, pilot vessels, and others exempt from the requirements of having their names marked on their bows, and the scale of feet on the stem and stern posts, see Board of Trade Instructions as to marking of ships, 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. cccxx.

9. Deck and Load Lines.‡

(a) Generally.

132. Every British ship (except ships

* (50) As to the fees and expenses to be charged in respect of inspection prior to marking, see c. 3, s. 3, p. 1186.

† (50a) As to the fees and expenses to be charged in respect of survey for change of name, see c. 3, s. 3, p. 1186.

Sir E. J. Reed, with sets of tables annexed, defining the free board, and showing the system of loading recommended for flush deck, open deck, and awning deck steamers, and for sailing vessels. They are based upon the tables of Lloyd's Register Committee. See further reference thereto in this title, part and chapter, in Addenda.

under eighty tons register employed solely in the coasting trade, ships employed solely in fishing, and pleasure yachts) is to be marked with lines of the length, breadth, and colour herein indicated, painted longitudinally amidships, and indicating the position of each deck above water. The upper edge of each of these lines is to be level with the upper side of the deck plank next the waterway at the place of marking. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 25.

133. The owner of every such ship before entering her outwards from any port in the United Kingdom is to mark upon each of her sides amidships, or as near thereto as practicable, in white or yellow on a dark ground, or in black on a light ground, a circular disc twelve inches in diameter, with a horizontal line eighteen inches in length drawn through its centre. Ibid. s. 26, sub-s. 1.

134. The centre of this disc must indicate the maximum load line in salt water to which the owner intends to load the ship for that voyage. Ibid. sub-s. 2.

135. He must also, upon so entering her, insert in the form of entry to the collector or principal officer of customs a statement in writing of the distance in feet and inches between the centre of this disc and the upper edge of each of the lines indicating the position of the ship's decks above that centre. Ibid. sub-s. 3.

136. In default of his delivering this statement, any officer of customs may refuse to enter the ship outwards. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

137. The master of the ship is to enter a copy of this statement in the agreement with the crew before it is signed by any of the crew, and no superintendent of any mercantile marine office is to proceed with the engagement of the crew until this entry is made. Ibid. sub-s. 5.

138. The master is also to enter a copy of this statement in the official log-book. Ibid. sub-s. 6.

139. All entries made in the official log in the manner directed by the Act of 1854 (c. 104), ss. 280—284, are to be received as evidence subject to all just exceptions. Ibid. 1854 (c. 104), s. 285.

140. The ship is to be kept so marked until her return to a port of discharge in the United Kingdom. Ibid. 1876 (c. 80), s. 25, sub-s. 7.

141. Penalty for neglecting to have ship marked, as required by this act, or to keep her so marked, against owner or master, not exceeding £100. Ibid. s. 28.

142. Penalty, if any one of these marks is inaccurate and likely to mislead, against owner, not exceeding £100. Ibid.

(b) Ships in Coasting Trade.

144. The owner of every British ship employed in the coasting trade on the coasts of the United Kingdom (except ships under eighty tons register employed solely in that trade) must, before she proceeds to sea from any port, mark upon her the circular disc, in the position and of the size and colour required for other ships (vide supra, Nos. 133, 134). See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 27, sub-s. 1.

145. The owner must also, once in every twelve months, before the ship proceeds to sea, send to the collector or principal officer of customs of her port of registry a statement in writing of the distance in feet and inches between the centre of the disc and the upper edge of each of the lines indicating the position of the ship's decks above that centre. Ibid. sub-s. 3.

146. The owner must also, before the ship proceeds to sea after any renewal or alteration of the disc, send this officer notice in writing of such renewal or alteration, together with the statement in writing of the distance between the centre of the disc and the upper edge of each of the deck-lines. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

147. Penalty for default in sending this statement, or notice of alteration or renewal, against the owner, not exceeding £100. Ibid. sub-s. 5.

148. When a ship has been marked as by this section required, she shall be kept so marked until notice is given of an alteration. Ibid. sub-s. 6.

149. Penalty against master or owner for default, not exceeding £100. Ibid. s. 28.

149a. Penalty against master or owner for allowing the ship to be so loaded as to submerge, in salt water, the centre of the disc, and against any person who conceals, alters, or obliterates, or suffers any person under his control to do so, any of the marks, except to escape capture by an enemy, not exceeding £100. Ibid.

150. Penalty, if any one of the marks required is inaccurate, and likely to mislead, against owner, not exceeding £100. Ibid.

10. Draught of Water.*

151. The Board of Trade may, in cases in which they think it expedient, direct any person appointed by them for the purpose, to record in such manner and with such particulars as the Board may direct, the draught of water of any sea-going ship as shown on the scale on her stem and stern post, upon leaving any dock, wharf or harbour, for sea; and such person shall thereupon keep such record, and from time to time forward it or a copy to the Board, and such record or copy produced out of the custody of the Board shall be admissible in evidence of the draught of water of the ship at the time specified. See the M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), s. 5.

152. The master of every British sea-going ship, on proceeding to sea, shall record her draught of water in the official log, and produce the same to any principal officer of customs when required. Penalty for breach not exceeding £20. Ibid.

153. As to the marking on the stern post, and each side of the stem, of every British ship before registry, of a scale of feet denoting her draught of water; and as to the cutting in, painting and colouring of such letters or figures according to the directions of the Board of Trade, see the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 3. Penalty for inaccuracy of scale against owner, not exceeding £100. Ibid.

154. These marks are to be permanently continued, unless altered, as provided by the M. S. Act. Penalty for breach against owner or master not exceeding £100; and any officer of customs on receipt of a certificate that the ship is inaccurately marked may detain her until properly marked. See M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 3.

154a. Penalty against master or other person interested in a ship who makes or is privy to the making of any fraudulent alteration in such marks, not exceeding £500. Ibid. 1854 (c. 104), s. 359.

155. This record shall also specify the extent of the clear side in feet and inches, the term "clear side" meaning the height from the water to the upper side of the plank of the deck from which the depth of hold, as stated in the register, is measured, and the measurement of the clear side is to be taken at the lowest part of the side. Ibid. 1873 (c. 85), s. 4.

156. The master of any sea-going ship is to permit the inspection and measurements required for such record. Penalty for breach not exceeding £5. Ibid.

157. The Board of Trade may exempt any class of ships from the requirements of sect. 3. Ibid. s. 3.

11. Registrars.

158. The persons required to register British ships as registrars for the purposes of this act, at any port or place in the United Kingdom or Isle of Man approved by the Commissioners of Customs for the registry of ships, are the collector, comptroller, or other principal officer of customs there. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 30.

159. As to the registrars of British vessels abroad, see Ibid. ss. 30, 31.

160. Every registrar keeps a book called "The Register Book," and enters therein the particulars required to be registered. It may be inspected by any person on payment of a fee not exceeding one shilling. See Ibid. ss. 32 and 92.

161. As to the person authorized to fix the fee, see Ibid. s. 92, and M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 4.

162. As to the responsibilities of registrars, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 93.

163. Periodical returns are to be made

* (52) The duties of an officer appointed to record the draught of water extend only to sea-going ships. The officer does not record the draught of water of steamers in ballast or carrying passengers, and not cargo, but he records the draught of all other sea-going steamers. As regards sailing ships, he records the draught of water of those wholly or partially laden with coal, iron or metallic ores; and as regards any other sea-going ships he uses his discretion, and is guided by circumstances. The record is made on the spot in a pocket book. See Board of Trade Instructions to officers in recording the draught of water of ships, headed Draught of Water Circulars, M. 6144 (1879), p. 1.

(53) As to the measurement for clearside, see Circular, No. 623, May, 1873; and Board of Trade Instructions, &c., Ibid. p. 2.

(54) No ship on the point of sailing is to be detained to obtain the depth of hold for recording the draught of water. Ibid. p. 4.

by every registrar in the United Kingdom and elsewhere to the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen in London of all registries, transfers, transmissions, mortgages, and other dealings with ships, and of such other particulars as may be directed by him. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 94, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 4.

164. For provisions enabling her Majesty by Order in Council to declare with respect to British possessions mentioned in the order the description of persons who are to be registrars of British ships in that possession, see the Merchant Shipping Colonial Act, 1869 (c. 11), s. 6.

12. Surveyors.

See cap. 6, p. 1208.

13. Evidence of Ownership.

165. No person shall be entitled to be registered as owner of a ship or any share therein until he has made a declaration in the form marked B. in the schedule. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 38.

166. The declaration shall be made and subscribed in the presence of the registrar if the declarant reside within five miles of the custom house of the port of registry, but if beyond that distance, in the presence of any registrar or of any justice of the peace. Ibid.

167. No body corporate shall be entitled to be registered as owner of a ship or share therein until the secretary or duly appointed public officer thereof has made in the presence of the registrar of the port of registry a declaration in the form marked C. in the schedule. Ibid. s. 39.

168. Upon the first registry of a ship there shall, in addition to the declaration of ownership, be produced the following evidence:—(1.) In the case of a British-built ship, a certificate (which the builder is required to grant under his hand) containing a true account of the proper denomination and of the tonnage of such ship as estimated by him, and of the time when, and place where, such ship was built, together with the name of the party (if any) on whose account he has built the same; and, if any sale or sales have taken place, the bill or bills of sale under which the ship or share therein has become vested in the party requiring to be registered as owner. (2.) In the case of a foreign-built ship, the same evidence as in the case of a British-built ship, unless the person requiring to be registered as owner, or, in the case of a body corporate, the duly appointed officer, declares that the time or place of her building is unknown, or that the builder's certificate cannot be procured, in which case there shall be required only the bill or bills of sale under which the ship or share therein became vested in the party requiring to be registered as owner thereof. (3.) In the case of a ship condemned by any competent court, an official copy of the condemnation of such ship. Penalty for false statement against builder not exceeding £100. Ibid. ss. 40 and 41.

169. Whenever, under the second part of this act, any person is required to make a declaration on behalf of himself, or of any body corporate, or any evidence is required to be produced to the registrar, and it is shown that such person is unable to make the declaration, or that such evidence cannot be produced, the registrar may, with the sanction of the Commissioners of Customs, and subject to such terms as they may think fit, dispense with such declaration or evidence. Ibid. s. 97.

170. If any person interested in any ship or share therein is, by reason of infancy, lunacy, or other inability, incapable of making any declaration or doing anything required in respect of registry, then his guardian or committee, if any, or if none, any person appointed by any court or judge possessing jurisdiction in respect of the property of incapable persons, upon the petition of any person on his behalf, or of any other person interested therein, may make a declaration as nearly corresponding thereto as circumstances permit, and do such thing in the name and on behalf of such incapable person. Ibid. s. 99.

171. False statements in the evidence produced on the registry of a British vessel are made a misdemeanor, and instruments not in the required form may be refused registration by the registrar. See the M. S. Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 9.

172. All instruments used in carrying into effect the second part of this act (i.e. as to the ownership, measurement and registry of British ships), if not already exempted from stamp duty, and all instruments used by or under the direction of the Board of Trade in carrying such part of this act into effect, are exempt from stamp duty. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 9.

14. Managing Owner or Ship's Husband's Name and Address.

173. The name and address of the managing owner of every British ship registered in the United Kingdom shall be registered at the custom house of the ship's port of registry. When there is no managing owner there shall be so registered the name of the ship's husband or other person to whom the management of the ship is entrusted for the owner. Any person whose name is so registered shall, for the purposes of the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876, be under the same obligations, and subject to the same liabilities, as if he were the managing owner. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 36.

174. Penalty for breach against the owner, or if more than one against each owner in proportion to his interest, not exceeding in the whole £100 each time the ship leaves any port in the United Kingdom. Ibid.

175. The provisions of this act do not apply to any vessel employed exclusively in going from place to place in any river or inland water of which the whole or part is in any British possession. Ibid. s. 44.

15. Who may be Owners.

176. No ship shall be deemed to be a British ship unless she belongs wholly to owners of the following description:—(1.) Natural-born British subjects; but no natural-born subject who has taken the oath of allegiance to any foreign sovereign shall be entitled to be such owner unless he has, subsequently thereto, taken the oath of allegiance to her Majesty,* and is and continues to be, while such owner, resident in her Majesty's dominions, or a member of a British factory, or partner in a house carrying on business in her Majesty's dominions. (2.) Persons made denizens by letters of denization, or naturalized by any act of the imperial legislature, or any act or ordinance of any British possession; but such persons are to continue to be while such owners resident in her Majesty's dominions, or members of a British factory, or house of business in her Majesty's dominions, and must have taken the oath of allegiance to her Majesty subsequently to their being so made denizens or naturalized. (3.) Bodies corporate established under, subject to the laws of, and having their principal place of business in, the United Kingdom, or some British possession. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 18.

177. The rules with respect to entries in the register book are as follows (see Ibid. s. 37):—The property in a ship shall be divided into sixty-four shares: sub-s. 1. Subject to the provisions with respect to joint owners or owners by transmission contained in the act, not more than sixty-four individuals shall be entitled to be registered at the same time as owners of any one ship; but this rule shall not affect the beneficial title of any number of persons of any company represented by or claiming under or through any registered owner or joint owner: sub-s. 2, as amended by M. S. Act, 1854, Amendment Act, 1880, c. 18, s. 2. No person shall be entitled to be registered as owner of any fractional part of a share in a ship; but any number of persons not exceeding five may be registered as joint owners of a ship, or of a share or shares therein: sub-s. 3. Joint owners shall be considered as constituting one person only as regards the foregoing rule relating to the number of persons entitled to be registered as owners, and shall not be entitled to dispose in severalty of any interest in any ship, or in any share or shares therein in respect of which they are registered: sub-s. 4. A body corporate may be registered as owner by its corporate name: sub-s. 5.

16. Of what Vessels.

178. Every British ship must be registered, except ships not exceeding fifteen tons burden, employed solely on the rivers or coasts of the United Kingdom, or of some British possession, within which the managing owners are resident, and ships not exceeding thirty tons burden, and not having a whole or fixed deck, and employed solely in fishing or trading coastwise on the shores of Newfoundland or parts adjacent, or in the gulf of St. Lawrence, or on the coasts of Canada, Nova Scotia or New Brunswick, bordering on

* (54a) This provision is not to be affected by anything contained in the Promissory Oaths Act, 1868 (c. 72), except that the form of the oath of allegiance as prescribed by that such gulf. No ship hereby required to be registered can, unless registered, be recognized as a British ship. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 19.

179. See Nos. 55, 56a, 56b, 56c, and 57, p. 1186.

17. Port of Registry.

(a) Generally.

180. The port or place at which any British ship is registered for the time being is her port of registry, or the port to which she belongs. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 33.

(b) Change of—

181. The registry of any ship may be transferred from one port to another on the application of all parties on the register interested as owners or mortgagees. Such application is to be by declaration in writing made, if the party resides at or within five miles of the custom house of the port from which the ship is to be transferred, in the presence of the registrar of such port, but if beyond that distance in the presence of any registrar or justice of the peace. On such application, and on the delivery to him of the certificate of registry, the registrar of the port at which the ship is already registered transmits to the registrar of the port at which she is intended to be registered notice of the application, a true copy of all particulars relating to the ship, and the names of all the parties appearing by his book to be interested as owners or mortgagees; and this registrar then enters all such particulars and names in his book of registry, and grants a fresh certificate of registry, and thenceforth the ship is to be considered as registered there, and the name of such port is to be substituted on her stern in lieu of the name of the previous port. This transfer of registry does not in any way affect the rights of the persons interested as owners or mortgagees therein. Ibid. ss. 89—91.

18. Foreign Ports of Registry.

182. For provisions enabling her Majesty by order in council to declare certain foreign ports to be foreign ports of registry, and the persons who are to be registrars of British ships there, and to make regulations for the registry of British ships there. See the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 29.

19. Alteration of Ship.

183. Whenever any registered ship is so altered as not to correspond with the particulars in the register book, then, if such alteration is made at a port where there is a registrar, that registrar, but if made elsewhere, the registrar of the first port having a registrar at which the ship arrives after her alteration, shall, on application made to him, and on receipt of a certificate from the proper surveyor specifying the nature of such alteration, either retain the old certificate of registry and grant a new one with a description of the ship as altered, or indorse and sign on the old certificate a memorandum of such alteration; and if he is the registrar of the port of registry of the ship, enter in his register book the particulars of the alteration, and the fact of such new certificate having been granted, or indorsement made on the old certificate; but if not such registrar forthwith reports such particulars and facts with the old certificate when a new one has been granted, to the registrar of the port of registry of the ship, who shall retain the old certificate, and enter such particulars and facts in his register book accordingly. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 84.

184. The registrar to whom such application is made may, instead of registering such alteration, require the ship to be registered anew, but if he is not the registrar of her port of registry, he shall grant a provisional certificate, or make the provisional indorsement of the alteration as before directed in cases where no registry anew is required, adding to such certificate or indorsement a statement that the same is made provisionally, and reporting accordingly to the registrar of the port of registry of the ship. Ibid. s. 85.

185. Every such provisional certificate, or certificate provisionally indorsed, shall, within ten days after the first subsequent arrival of the ship at her port of discharge in the United Kingdom, if registered there, or at her port of discharge in the British possession within which her port of registry is situate, be delivered up to the registrar thereof, who shall thereupon cause such ship to be registered anew as on the first registry of a ship. Ibid. s. 86.

186. On failure of such registry anew, or registry of alteration of any ship so altered, such ship shall be deemed not duly registered, and shall no longer be recognized as a British ship. Ibid. s. 87.

As to disabilities of non-recognized British ship, see Pt. II. c. 19, p. 1244.

20. Bill of Sale.*

187. A registered ship or any share therein, when disposed of to persons qualified to be owners of British ships, shall be transferred by bill of sale, which shall be according to the form marked E in the schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances permit, and shall be executed in the presence of and attested by one or more witnesses. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 55.

188. A mere literal deviation from the prescribed form will not render it void. Taylor v. Kinlock, 1 Stark. N. P. C. 175. Nor a mere clerical error. Rolleston v. Smith, 4 T. R. 161.

189. No individual shall be entitled to be registered as such transferee until he has made a declaration in the form marked F in the schedule, and no body corporate until its secretary or other duly appointed public officer has made a declaration in the form marked G in the schedule. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 56.

190. Every such bill of sale, when duly executed, shall be produced to the registrar of the port at which the ship is registered, with the declaration required to be made by the transferee; and the registrar shall thereupon enter in the register book the name of the transferee as owner, and indorse on the bill of sale the fact of such entry having been made, with the date and hour thereof; and all bills of sale shall be entered in the register book in the order of their production to the registrar. Ibid. s. 57.

191. Shares in a vessel were transferred for value by a bill of sale which was never registered. The transferee from time to time received his share of the profits. Held, that the transferee's title was not affected by the subsequent bankruptcy of the transferor while still registered as owner. Watson v. Duncan, Cases in Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 6, p. 1247. [SCOTCH.]

192. The registration of an assignment of an agreement for the purchase of a ship is not required under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854, c. 36. Swainston v. Clay (C. A.) 1 Asp. 343; 8 L. T. N.S. 563; 9 Jur. N.S. 401; 32 L. J. 338, 503; 4 Giff. 187.

193. The court is entitled to look behind a registered bill of sale, although absolute in its terms, and to have regard to all the concomitant circumstances in order to determine the real nature of the transaction. The Jane, 3 Asp. 527. [IRISH.] See also The Innisfallen, L. R. 1 A. & E. 72; 35 L. J. Adm. 110; 2 Asp. 470; and M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3.

194. A transfer of a vessel by a bill of sale, under the M. S. Act, 1854, s. 55, to a bond fide purchaser for value, vests the property in such vessel in the transferee from the time of its execution, although, until registration of the transfer the transferee cannot transfer the vessel to a purchaser from himself. Stapleton v. Haymen, 2 H. & C. 918; 10 Jur. N.S. 497; 33 L. J. Exch. 170; 12 W. R. 317; 9 L. T. N.S. 655.

195. When a bill of sale of a ship has been executed in the form prescribed by sect. 55 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), the provisions of sect. 66 do not prevent the owners from showing that the transfer, though absolute in its terms, was intended as a security only. Ward v. Beck, 13 C. B. N.S. 668; 9 Jur. N.S. 912; 32 L. J. C. P. 113.

196. The M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3, is a declaratory enactment that this is the true interpretation. Ibid.

197. An infant son of the bankrupt having been registered as owner of a ship, the conveyance under which the infant claimed from his father was subsequently set aside as fraudulent, but his name still continued on the register. Held, that the ship was properly arrested as the property of the father. Bell v. Gow, 1 Macph. 183; 35 Jur. 157. [SCOTCH.]

198. A ship registered under the M. S. Act, 1854, was dismantled and used for several years as a coal hulk. Her owners then sold her as a coal hulk under a written agreement, and delivery was made to the purchasers. Held, that she had ceased to be a ship within the meaning of the act, and was transferable otherwise than by bill of sale under the 55th section of the act. The European and Australian Royal Mail Co. Limited v. The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co., 2 Asp. 351.

199. Per Martin, B.—At any rate the original owners who had sold her as a "coal hulk" were estopped from denying that she was one. The European and Australian Royal Mail Co. Limited v. The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co., 2 Asp. 351.

200. A vessel built by a British subject for a foreign purchaser, to be delivered to such purchaser at a foreign port, was, when completed, assigned by the builder for valuable consideration to the plaintiff. The assignment was not registered under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854 (c. 36), nor under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 57, nor was the vessel registered as a British ship under sect. 19 of the latter statute. Held, by the Court of Appeal, affirming the decision of Pollock, B., (1) that the assignment did not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854; (2) that the ship was not a British ship within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854, and that an assignment of her need not be by bill of sale under the 55th section, and did not require registration under the 57th section of that statute. The Union Bank of London v. Lenanton, L. R. 3 C. P. D. (C. A.) 243; 47 L. J. C. L. (C. A.) 409; 3 Asp. N.S. 600.

201. Held, per Bramwell and Brett, L.JJ., that a vessel which has not been registered under sect. 19 of the M. S. Act, 1854, can be validly assigned, although such assignment is not by bill of sale under the act. Ibid.

202. A ship that has been duly sold by public auction to a bona fide and innocent purchaser cannot subsequently be proceeded against and condemned to the Crown on account of former piratical acts. The Telegrapho or Restauracion, L. R. 3 P. C. 673; 40 L. J. Adm. P. C. 18; 8 Moore P. C. N.S. 43; 1 Asp. N.S. 63.

202a. The court cannot look behind a ship's register for the purpose of disposing an innocent purchaser for value, whose name is on the register, and who purchased from a person who was on the register as owner. The Horlock, 2 P. D. 243; 47 L. J. P. D. 5.

21. Transfers.

203. The delivery of a vessel by a vendor to a purchaser means, that the purchaser is to have the control of the vessel, but not necessarily that he is to be put into the manual possession of it. To complete the delivery he must be able to direct where the vessel shall go, what it shall do, what performances it shall be required to undertake; in fact, to have exactly the same power over it as exists with respect to any other chattel which is sold and delivered to a purchaser. Burke v. Rogerson, 13 L. T. N.S. 415; 2 Asp. 266, 375.

204. The duty to register a transfer of ownership rests with the vendee. The Spirit of the Ocean, 34 L. J. Adm. 74; 12 L. T. N.S. 239.

22. Agreement to transfer Ship.

205. An agreement in writing to transfer a ship does not require to be registered under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 55, nor need the special description of the ship sold, required by that section to be inserted in a bill of sale transferring the ship, be contained in such an agreement. Batthyany v. Bouch, 50 L. J. Q. B. 421; 44 L. T. 177; 29 W. R. 665—Grove, J.

206. The plaintiff agreed in writing with the defendant to sell, and the defendant agreed to purchase, a yacht belonging to the plaintiff for the sum of £2,600, whereof the plaintiff was the registered owner, on condition that the defendant should be at liberty to rescind the said agreement should the yacht prove unsound. The defendant refused to carry out his part of the agreement, and the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant for specific performance, or in the alternative £2,600, and for damages for breach of agreement. The defendant pleaded that the agreement, if any was made, was not a bill of sale, nor was it registered, nor did it contain a sufficient description of the yacht, as required by the M. S. Act, 1854. The plaintiff demurred. Held, that sect. 55 of the M. S. Act, 1854, applies to the actual instrument by which the ship is to be transferred, and not to an agreement to transfer. Ibid.

23. Certificates of Sale.

207. Any registered owner desirous of selling his ship or share at any place not being her port of registry, may obtain from the registrar a certificate of sale. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 76.

208. Previously to any such certificate being granted, the applicant must state to the registrar, to be entered in the register book, the names of the persons by whom the power mentioned in such certificate is to be exercised, and the minimum price if it is intended to fix a minimum; the place or places where the power is to be exercised, or that it may be exercised anywhere, subject to the other provisions of the act, and the limit of time within which the power may be exercised. Ibid. s. 77.

209. No certificate of sale is to be granted to authorize a sale in the United Kingdom if the port of registry of the ship is situate there, nor at any place in the same British possession if the port of registry is situate there, nor by any person not named in the certificate. Ibid. s. 78.

210. Certificates of sale are to be in the form marked N. in the schedule. Ibid. s. 79.

211. No such certificate shall be granted except for the sale of an entire ship. Ibid. s. 81.

212. The power shall be exercised in conformity with the directions contained in the certificate. Ibid.

213. No sale bonâ fide made to a purchaser for valuable consideration shall be impeached by reason of the person by whom the power was given dying before the making of such sale. Ibid.

214. Whenever the certificate contains a specification of the place or places at which, and a limit of time not exceeding twelve months within which, the power is to be exercised, no sale bonâ fide made to a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice shall be impeached by reason of the bankruptcy or insolvency of the person by whom the power was given. Ibid.

215. Any transfer made to a person qualified to be the owner of British ships shall be by bill of sale in the form mentioned in the act, or as near thereto as circumstances permit. Ibid.

216. If the ship is sold to a party qualified to hold British ships, the ship shall be registered anew; but notice of all mortgages enumerated on the certificate of sale shall be entered in the register book. Ibid.

217. Previously to such registry anew there shall be produced to the registrar required to make the same the bill of sale by which the ship is transferred, the certificate of sale, and the certificate of registry. Ibid.

218. Such registrar shall retain the certificates of sale and registry, and after having indorsed on both an entry of the fact of sale, shall forward them to the registrar of the ship's port of registry, who shall make a memorandum of the sale in his register book, and the registry of the ship in such book shall be considered as closed, except as far as relates to any unsatisfied mortgages or existing certificates of mortgage entered therein. Ibid.

219. On such registry anew the description of the ship contained in her original certificate of registry may be transferred to the new register book, without her being re-surveyed, and the declaration to be made by the purchaser shall be the same as would be required to be made by an ordinary transferee. Ibid.

220. If the ship is sold to a party not qualified to be the owner of a British ship, the bill of sale, certificate of sale, and certificate of registry shall be produced to some registrar or consular officer, who, after having indorsed thereon the fact of such ship having been sold to persons not qualified to be owners of British ships, shall forward them to the registrar of the ship's port of registry, who shall thereupon make a memorandum of the sale in his registry book, and the registry of the ship in such book shall be considered as closed, except so far as relates to any unsatisfied mortgages or existing certificates of mortgage entered therein. Ibid.

221. If upon a sale being made to an unqualified person, default is made in the production of the certificates, such person shall be considered as having acquired no title to, or interest in, the ship. Penalty against the persons who obtained the certificate and exercised the power not exceeding £100. Ibid.

222. If no sale is made in conformity with the certificate of sale, such certificate shall be delivered to and cancelled by the registrar who granted it, the fact of cancellation being entered in the register book. Ibid.

223. Upon proof at any time to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Customs that any certificate of mortgage or sale is lost, or so obliterated as to be useless, and has never been used, or if used, upon proof of the matters done thereunder, the registrar may, with the sanction of the Commissioners, issue a new certificate, or direct such entries to be made in the register book, or do such other act as he might have done if no such loss or obliteration had taken place. Ibid. s. 82.

224. The registered owner of any ship or share, in respect of which a certificate of sale has been granted, specifying the place where the power is to be exercised, may, by an instrument under his hand in the Form O. in the schedule, or as near thereto as circumstances permit, authorize the registrar who granted such certificate, to give notice to the registrar or consular officer, at such place, that such certificate is revoked, and notice shall be given accordingly, and all registrars or consular officers receiving such notice shall record the same, and exhibit the same to all persons applying for a transfer under such certificate; and after such notice has been so recorded such certificate shall, as to any sale at such place, be revoked; and the registrar or consular officer recording such notice shall state to the registrar who granted the certificate whether any previous exercise of the power to which such certificate refers has taken place. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 83.

24. Transmission by Death, Bankruptcy, or Marriage.

224a. If the property in any ship, or share therein, becomes transmitted in consequence of the death, bankruptcy, or insolvency of any registered owner, or of the marriage of any female registered owner, or by any lawful means other than by a transfer according to the provisions of this act, such transmission shall be authenticated by a declaration of the person to whom such property has been transmitted, made in the form marked H. in the schedule. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 58.

224b. If such transmission has taken place by the bankruptcy or insolvency of the owner, the declaration shall be accompanied by evidence receivable in courts of justice of the title of parties claiming under the bankruptcy or insolvency; if by the marriage of a female owner, by a copy of the register of the marriage or other legal evidence of the celebration thereof, and by proof of identity; and if by any testamentary instrument or by intestacy, then in England, Wales, and Ireland, by probate of the will or letters of administration or an official extract therefrom, and in Scotland or any British possession by the will or any copy thereof, being evidence by the laws of Scotland or of such possession, or by letters of administration or any copy thereof, or by such other document as may, by the laws of Scotland or of such possession be receivable in the Courts of Judicature thereof, as proof of the person entitled upon an intestacy. Ibid. s. 59.

225. The registrar, upon the receipt of such declaration, so accompanied, enters the name of the person or persons entitled under such transmission in the register book as owner or owners of the ship or share, but such persons, if more than one, shall be considered as one person only as regards the number of persons entitled to be registered as owners. Ibid. s. 60.

226. The words, "by any lawful means other than by a transfer according to the provisions of this act," in sect. 58 of the M. S. Act, 1854, comprehend only transmissions of the same nature as those previously enumerated, viz., transmissions by operation of law unconnected with any direct act of the party to whom the property is transmitted. Chasteauneuf v. Capeyron, L. R. 7 App. C. 127.

227. Held, on appeal from the Mauritius, that a sale by licitation of a British ship without a bill of sale, did not create such an interest in the purchasers as to entitle them to be registered as owners. Ibid.

25. Order prohibiting dealing with Ship or Share.

228. In England or Ireland the High Court of Admiralty and the Court of Chancery, in Scotland the Court of Session, in any British possession any court possessing the principal civil jurisdiction there, may, without prejudice to its other powers, upon the summary application of any interested person, either ex parte or upon service of notice on any other person, as the court may direct, issue an order prohibiting, for a time to be therein named, any dealing with such ship or share; and such court may make or refuse such order, and annex thereto any terms, and discharge such order with or without costs, and act in the premises as justice requires; and every registrar, without being made a party to the proceedings, upon being served with such order, or an official copy thereof, shall obey the same. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 65, as amended by the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 12.

229. The Court of Probate, as a division of the High Court of Justice, has vested in it the jurisdiction exercised by the High Court of Chancery, and therefore may, under the 65th sect. of the M. S. Act, 1854, c. 104, direct an order to issue prohibiting the dealing in any share of a ship for a time, and on conditions to be named therein, and the Registrar of Shipping on being served with such order, or an official copy thereof, must obey the same. Nicholas v. Dracachi, 1 P. D. 72.

230. The expression "any interested person" in the above section refers only to a person possessing that kind of interest which may be affected by proceedings under sections 62, 63 and 64 of that act. Sect. 65 is limited by the sections last mentioned. Roy v. Hamiltons, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, vol. 5, p. 573. [SCOTCH.]

231. The section is inapplicable to the case of a personal creditor seeking to prevent his debtor, a British shipowner, from dealing with a ship, or share of a ship, out of the jurisdiction, belonging to the debtor. Ibid.

232. Applications under the 65th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, to prohibit any dealing with a ship, can only be made in cases occurring under the 62nd, 63rd and 64th sections (diss. Lord Shand). M'Phail v. Hamilton, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 5, p. 1017. [SCOTCH.]

233. A part owner cannot apply under the 65th section to restrain his co-owners from dealing with his joint interest. Ibid.

234. This section does not deprive the Court of Chancery of its ordinary jurisdiction to protect property during litigation. Orr v. Dickinson, 1 Johnson, 1; 5 Jur. N.S. 672; 28 L. J. Ch. 516.

26. Non-qualified Owner becoming entitled. Order of Sale.

235. Whenever any property in a ship or share becomes vested by transmission on the death of any owner, or marriage of any female owner, in any person not qualified to be the owner of British ships, it shall be lawful, if such ship is registered in England or Ireland for the Court of Chancery, and if in Scotland for the Court of Session, or if in any British possession for any court possessing the principal civil jurisdiction there, upon an application on behalf of such unqualified person, to order a sale of the property so transmitted, and direct the proceeds, after deducting expenses, to be paid to the person entitled under such transmission or otherwise as the court may direct. It is in the discretion of the court to make such order, to annex thereto any terms, and to require any evidence it may think fit. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 62.

236. The High Court of Admiralty shall have the same powers over any British ship or any share therein as are conferred upon the High Court of Chancery in England by ss. 62—66 of the M. S. Act, 1854. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 12.

237. Every such order for sale shall contain a declaration vesting the right to transfer the ship or share in some person or persons named by the court, and such nominee shall be entitled to transfer such ship or share as if he were the registered owner. Every registrar shall obey the requisition of such nominee as to any transfer to the same extent as if he were the registered owner. See the M. S. Act, 1851 (c. 104), s. 63.

238. Every such application shall be made within four weeks after the occurrence of the event on which such transmission has taken place, or within such further time as the court may allow, not exceeding one year, and in the event of no such application being made within such period, or of such court refusing to accede thereto, the ship or share shall be forfeited, as in cases of interests acquired by unqualified owners in ships using a British flag and assuming the British character. Ibid. s. 64.

27. *Of Sea-Fishing Boats under Convention with France.

239. Subject to any exemptions allowed by Order in Council, every British sea-

* (56) For provisions empowering any British consul in France to take any statement on oath from any British subject charged with any offence against the Articles of the Convention of the 2nd August, 1839, between this country and France, as to the fisheries between the two countries, and rendering the same admissible in evidence, see 18 & 19 Vict. c. 101, s. 5.

(57) For provisions for taking the offending fishing boat into the nearest port; for detaining her there for a period not exceeding four days; for obtaining there evidence on both sides as to the alleged breach; for transmitting the depositions, minutes of proceedings and other documents relating thereto, duly authenticated, to the consular agent in the port where the trial is to take fishing boat shall, as required by Articles four, five, six, seven and eight of the Convention, be lettered and numbered and have official papers, and shall for that purpose be entered or registered in a register for sea-fishing boats. See the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), s. 22.

240. A British sea-fishing boat which is required to be, but is not, entered or registered in pursuance of this act, shall not be entitled to any of the privileges of a British sea-fishing boat, but all obligations and penalties as to such boat, the punishment of offences committed on board her, or by any persons belonging to her, and the jurisdiction of officers and courts, shall be the same as if such boat were so entered or registered. Ibid.

241. If any British sea-fishing boat required to be, but not, entered or registered in pursuance of this act, is used as a sea-fishing boat in the seas to which this act applies, penalty against the owner and master not exceeding twenty pounds; and any sea-fishery officer may seize and detain such boat and prevent it from going to sea and from sea-fishing until entered or registered, and may, if it is at sea, take it back to the nearest or most convenient British port. Ibid.

242. The 207th section of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1853, shall not apply to any British sea-fishing boat entered or registered in pursuance of this act. Ibid. s. 25.

243. Subject to any exemptions allowed by Order in Council, the master of every sea-fishing boat within the exclusive fishery limits of the British Islands, and of every British sea-fishing boat outside those limits, shall have on board, if it is a British sea-fishing boat required by this act to be entered or registered, the certificate of registry or official papers issued to the boat in pursuance of any act relating to the registry of British ships, or of this act, and if it is not British, then official papers evidencing the nationality of such boat. Ibid. s. 26.

244. Penalty against the master, unless reasonable cause shown (proof of which shall lie on him), with his boat and crew, not exceeding £20, and he may be taken by any sea-fishery officer into the nearest or most convenient port. If such penalty is not paid, and the boat is not British, such boat may be detained in port not exceeding three months from the date of the sentence. Ibid.

245. No fishing vessel duly registered, lettered and numbered, under the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, is required to have her name and port of registry marked under this section. See M. S. Act, 1873, s. 3.

250. See further as to the conventions with France and Sea Fishery Acts, Pt. II. c. 14, p. 1238.

4. Effect of Registration.

1. Generally.

251. The registry of a ship is conclusive as to its being in a fit state to be registered, although there may be evidence to show that the ship was not completed at the time of the registry. Coombes v. Mansfield, 3 Drew. 193.

252. No notice of any trust, express or implied, shall be entered in the register book, and subject to any rights appearing by the register book to be vested in any other party, the registered owner of place; for the communication thereof to the collector of customs or minister of marine, and for his proceeding, if necessary, with the trial, see 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, ss. 11, 12; and Arts. 65—69 of the Convention.

(58) The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, is repealed by the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45) (see s. 71 and the second schedule thereto), but is revived by the Fisheries (Oysters, Crabs and Lobsters) Act, 1877 (c. 42), s. 15, until the day when the Convention of the 11th Nov. 1867, set out in the schedule to the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, comes into operation. The Convention has not yet (July, 1885), come into operation.

any ship or share therein shall have power absolutely to dispose thereof. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 43.

253. Semble, that the 43rd section of the M. S. Act, 1854, was enacted to obviate the question how far purchasers fixed with notice that the registered owner was a trustee as executor, or for a firm or corporation, would be affected by that fact. Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 1 Johns. & H. 171; 3 L. T. N.S. 84, 494; 2 De G. F. & J. 502; 7 Jur. N.S. 150; 30 L. J. Ch. 379; 8 W. R. 292.

254. Shares in ships registered under the M. S. Act, 1854, shall be deemed included in the word "stock," as defined by the Trustee Act, 1850, and the provisions of that act are applicable to such shares. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 10.

255. As to the effect of the registered title as concluding the vendor and vendee, as well as third persons, both at law and in equity, under the M. S. Act, 1854, and prior acts before the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, s. 3, see Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 1 Johns. & H. 159, 165, 171; 2 De G. F. & J. 502; 3 L. T. N.S. 84, 494; 7 Jur. N.S. 150; 30 L. J. Ch. 379; 8 W. 260. As to the effect of non-registration of mortgage, see tit. MORTGAGE, c. 4, s. 7, p. 1138.

2. Equities.

261. Without prejudice to the provisions for preventing notice of trusts from being entered in the register book, to the powers of disposition, and giving receipts, conferred by the act on registered owners and mortgagees, and to the provisions contained in the act for excluding unqualified persons, equities may be enforced against owners and mortgagees of ships in respect of their interest therein, in the same manner as equities may be enforced against them in respect of any other personal property, see the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3, and Ward v. Beck, 32 L. J. C. P. 113.

262. A person who had paid a deposit for purchase of a share, but was not a registered owner, was held to be an owner within the meaning of sect. 147 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). Hughes v. Sutherland, L. R. 7 Q. B. D. 160; 50 L. J. Q. B. 567; and in reference to unregistered mortgages, see tit. MORTGAGE, c. 4, p. 1138.

See also c. 8, s. 4, p. 1216.

3. Beneficial Interests.

263. The expression "beneficial interests," whenever used in the second part of the M. S. Act, 1854, includes interests arising under contract and other equitable interests. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3.

264. The "beneficial interests" contemplated by the 38th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, are the equitable rights provided for by sects. 62, 63 and 64 of the same act, which enable an unqualified owner entitled by transmission to apply to the Court of Admiralty and other courts therein mentioned for an order of sale of the ship. The Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 1 Johns. & H. 172; 3 L. T. N.S. 84, 494; 6 Jur. N.S. 935; 29 L. J. Ch. 827; 8 W. R. 730; 2 Ds G. F. & J. 502. See also Ex parte Yallop, 15 Ves. 60.

265. The words "by any lawful means other than a transfer according to the provisions of this act" in the M. S. Act, 1854, s. 58, do not apply to a contract for the sale of a ship, and therefore do not furnish a sufficient argument that the legislature intended to permit any transfers others than such as are in accordance with the provisions of that act. Ibid. 1 Johns. & H. 174; Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, supra.

5. Registration anew.

266. When a ship has ceased to be registered as a British ship by reason of her having been wrecked or abandoned, or for any reason other than capture by the enemy or transfer to a person not qualified to own a British ship, such ship is not to be re-registered till she has been duly surveyed by the Board of Trade surveyors, and certified to be seaworthy. See the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 6.

267. If, upon any change of ownership in any ship, the owners desire to have her registered anew, the registrar of her port of registry, on such requisites to registry as he thinks material, being complied with, may make such registry anew, and grant a certificate thereof. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 88.

268. When a ship, once registered, has ceased to be so registered, no person, unless ignorant of such previous registry, proof of which shall lie on him, shall apply to the registrar to register; and no registrar shall register such ship except by the name by which she was previously registered, unless with the permission of the Board of Trade. Penalty for breach not exceeding £100; and any principal officer of customs may detain the ship until the provisions of this section are complied with. See the M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), s. 6.

269. When a registered ship is so altered as not to correspond with the entry in the register book, on failure to register such alterations or register the ship anew, as may be required, the ship is deemed not duly registered, and no longer recognized as a British ship. Ibid. s. 87.

270. When a ship is sold by a certificate of sale to a party qualified to hold British ships, the ship shall be registered anew; but notice of all mortgages on the certificate of sale shall be entered in the register book. Previously to such registry anew there shall be produced to the registrar the bill of sale by which the ship is transferred, the certificate of sale, and the certificate of registry. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 81, sub-ss. 6 and 7.

271. On such registry anew the description of the ship (sold by a certificate of sale) contained in her original certificate of registry may be transferred to the new register book, without her being re-surveyed, and the declaration by the purchaser shall be the same as would be required to be made by an ordinary transferee. Ibid. sub-s. 9.

272. As to registration anew on alteration of ship, see c. 3, s. 19, p. 1200.

6. Surveyors.

1. Generally.

273. The Board of Trade, with the sanction of the Treasury, may appoint surveyors for the survey and measurement of ships, and make the requisite regulations for such purpose. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 29, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 3.

274. All duties as to the survey and measurement of ships under the M. S. Act, 1872, and the acts amended thereby, are to be performed by the surveyors appointed under the fourth part of the M. S. Act, 1854, in accordance with regulations of the Board of Trade. Ibid. (c. 73), s. 13.

275. The surveyors are to execute their duties under the direction of the Board of Trade, and the Board are to make regulations as to the surveys, the notice to be given to the surveyors when surveys are required, &c. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 307.

276. As to shipwright and engineer surveyors, their appointment, powers, duties and remuneration in reference to the survey of passenger steamers, see Pt. IV. c. 12.

2. Powers.

277. The surveyors may, in the execution of their duties, go on board any steamer at all reasonable times, and inspect any part thereof, or any of the machinery, boats, equipments or articles on board, or any certificates of the master or mate under this act, not unnecessarily detaining or delaying the ship; and, if for any reason they consider it necessary so to do, may require the ship to be taken into dock to survey her hull. Penalty against any person impeding the surveyor in the execution of his duty not exceeding £5. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 306.

3. Impeding—

278. See above, No. 277.

4. Withholding Information from—

279. Penalty not exceeding £5 against every owner, master and engineer of any ship to be surveyed, wilfully refusing or neglecting to give, on demand, to the surveyors such information and assistance, within his power, as they require for the purpose of making returns to the Board of Trade. Ibid. s. 321.

5. Fees and Expenses.*

280. As to the payment by the Treasury of the salaries and expenses of all surveyors appointed under the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876, and persons employed under the Passengers Act, 1855, out of moneys provided by parliament, and the control by the Treasury over such salaries and

* (59) As to the fees and expenses to be charged in respect of surveys of ships for measurement of tonnage, for inspection of crew spaces, for inspection of lights and fog signals, for inspection prior to marking, for survey for change of name, for survey of a vessel alleged to be unseaworthy, for survey of a vessel prior to re-registry where the British registry has been previously closed, for survey of a vessel before transfer to a foreign flag, for passenger certificates, for inspection of drawings of boilers, for surveys under the Passenger Acts, and for medical inspection of passengers and crew under the Passenger Acts, see Board of Trade Instructions of October, 1879, Circular 756 C.

(60) As to the travelling and personal expenses and overtime fees of medical inspectors and the different classes of surveyors, and the charges for tapeholders and messengers, see Ibid. p. 12.

(61) Personal expenses are only to be claimed in cases where surveyors have to proceed to some place out of the limits of their port (as defined by the Customs regulations), and are absent for the time stated. Ibid. p. 13.

(62) Whenever surveyors are called upon to perform services out of office hours, application should be made by the owners or their agents to the principal officer of the Board of Trade for the district, or the senior surveyor of the port, on the form headed "Surveys 22." The necessary fee, according to the scale, should then be paid to the superintendent of the Mercantile Marine Office. See as to such fees, Ibid.

(63) As to overtime fees of a medical inspector, see Ibid.

(64) If the usual three clear days' notice has been given of a survey or inspection, and the official arrangements have not allowed of the work being done within office hours, no overtime fee is chargeable. Ibid. p. 14.

(65) Except in the case of a survey of a vessel alleged to be unseaworthy, all fees must invariably be paid to the superintendent of the Mercantile Marine Office before the survey and prior to proceeding with the duty in respect of which they are charged. Payments are in no case to be made to the surveyor himself. Ibid.

(66) When, upon inspection, a vessel alleged to be unseaworthy is found to be seaworthy, no fee is chargeable. Ibid. p. 10.

(66a) When a survey is made by direction of a magistrate or magistrates, in any case of alleged unseaworthiness or otherwise, under the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1871, upon the complaint of the crew of the vessel, the charge is regulated by the Board of Trade. Ibid. p. 11.

expenses heretofore vested in the Board of Trade, see M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 39.

281. For the fees to be paid in respect of measurement, survey and inspection of merchant vessels, and of lights and fog signals, see the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 30, and Schedule 3 thereto.

282. The costs, if any, of the survey of a ship (in consequence of a charge made by seamen in defence that the ship is unseaworthy, or that her accommodation is insufficient) shall be determined by the Board of Trade, according to the scale of fees to be fixed by them, and shall be paid, in the first instance, out of the Mercantile Marine Fund. See M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), s. 7.

283. If the charge is not proved the costs of the survey shall be paid by the person in consequence of whose allegation the survey was made, and may be deducted out of the wages due or to become due to him, and paid over to the Board of Trade. If the charge is proved, the costs of the survey shall be paid to the Board of Trade by the master or owner. Ibid.

284. The Board of Trade are to make regulations as to the amount and payment of the surveyor's travelling or other expenses, and the persons by whom, and the conditions under which, such payment shall be made. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 307.

285. Against every surveyor who demands from the owner or master of any ship surveyed by him, under this act, any remuneration other than as directed by the Board of Trade, a penalty not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 308.

286. For provisions that no surveyor or person employed under the authority of the Passengers Act, 1855, shall receive any fee or remuneration in respect of his duties, otherwise than by direction of the Board of Trade, and penalty for breach not exceeding £50, see M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 15.

287. All fees payable in respect of the survey and measurement of ships under the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876, and in respect of any services performed by any person employed under the authority of the Passengers Act, 1855, are payable to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office, according to the directions of the Board of Trade, and carried to the Consolidated Fund. See M. S. Act, 1876, s. 39.

7. Certificate of Registry.

1. Generally.*

288. Upon the completion of the registry of any ship the registrar is to grant a certificate of registry in the form marked D. in the schedule. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 44.

289. The copy or transcript of the register of any British ship, kept by the registrar-general of shipping and seamen, has the same effect to all intents and purposes as the original register. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 15, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 4.

290. The register, flag and pass of a vessel carry with them a presumption that they are true and correct, and the owner is not at liberty to aver against them. The Laura, 2 Asp. M. C. 225; 3 Moore, P. C. N.S. 181; 12 L. T. N.S. 685; and No. 304a.

291. A certified copy of a ship's register was put in evidence in a criminal trial to prove that the ship, which sailed under the British flag, was British. Held, by the Court for Crown Cases Reserved that the register was prima facie evidence that the ship was British, but that this presumption was rebutted by the negative proof that the owner was alien born, and that it could not be presumed without evidence that letters of denizenship or naturalization had been granted to the owner. Reg. v. Bjornsen, 34 L. J. M. C. 180; 2 Asp. 210; 1 L. & C. 545.

292. A register is not a document required by the law of nations, as expressive of a ship's national character. Le Cheminant v. Pearson, 4 Taunt. 367.

293. Although it was the intention of the legislature, in passing the Registry Acts, to form a public record of the property in British ships, yet it is a clear proposition that persons who are merely named as owners in the ship's register are not liable as such, for these documents are not recognized as conclusive evidence of ownership, unless shown to have been made by the concurrence of, or recognized by, the owners. Cooper v. South, 4 Taunt. 802; 2 ibid. 5, 302; 14

* (67) It is now no longer necessary, for any purpose of title, to indorse upon the certi-ificate of registry the particulars of the transfer by bill of sale.

East, 226; 2 Camp. 176; 3 ibid. 456; 2 Park on Ins. 861.

2. New Certificate.

294. The registrar may, with the sanction of the Commissioners of Customs, upon the delivery to him of the former certificate of registry, grant a new certificate in its stead. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 47.

3. Alteration of Ship.

295. See c. 3, s. 19, p. 1200.

4. Indorsement of Change of Owners.

296. Whenever a change takes place in the registered ownership of any ship, if it occurs at a time when the ship is at her port of registry, the master shall forthwith deliver the certificate of registry to the registrar, who shall indorse thereon a memorandum of such change; but if it occurs during the absence of the ship from her port of registry, then upon her first return thereto the master shall deliver the certificate to the registrar, who shall indorse thereon a like memorandum of the change; or if she previously arrives at any port where there is a British registrar, such registrar shall, upon being advised by the registrar of her port of registry of the change, indorse a like memorandum thereof on the certificate of registry, and may for that purpose require the certificate to be delivered to him, so that the ship be not thereby detained. Penalty for breach against master not exceeding £100. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 45.

5. Indorsement of Change of Master.

297. Whenever the master of any British registered ship is changed, if the change is made in consequence of the sentence of any Naval Court, the presiding officer of such court, but if the change takes place from any other cause, the registrar, or, if no registrar, the British consular officer resident at the port, shall indorse and sign on the certificate of registry a memorandum of such change, and forthwith report the change of master to the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen in London; and the officers of customs at any port situate within her Majesty's dominions may refuse to admit any person to do any act at such port as master of any British ship, unless his name is inserted in or indorsed upon the certificate of registry as the last appointed master. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 46, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 4.

6. Provisional Certificates or Passes.

(a) Generally.

298. In the event of the certificate of registry of any ship being mislaid or destroyed, if such event occurs at any port in the United Kingdom, the ship being registered there, or at any port in any British possession, the ship being registered there, then the registrar of her port of registry shall grant a new certificate of registry in lieu of the original; but if such event occurs elsewhere, the master or other person having knowledge of the circumstances shall make a declaration before the registrar of any port having a British registrar at which such ship is at the time or first arrives after such mislaying or destruction; and such declaration shall state the facts of the case, and the names and descriptions of the registered owners of such ship, to the best of the declarant's knowledge and belief; and the registrar shall thereupon grant a provisional certificate as near to the form appointed by this act as circumstances permit, and shall insert therein a statement of the circumstances under which such provisional certificate is granted. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 48.

299. Every such provisional certificate shall, within ten days after the first subsequent arrival of the ship at her port of discharge in the United Kingdom, if registered there, or if registered elsewhere, at her port of discharge in the British possession within which her port of registry is situate, be delivered up to the registrar thereof, who shall thereupon grant a new one, as near to the form appointed by this act as circumstances permit. Penalty for breach against master not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 49.

300. If any ship becomes the property of persons qualified to be owners of British ships at any foreign port, the British consular officer resident there may grant the master a provisional certificate, stating—

- The name of the ship;
- The time and place of her purchase, and the names of her purchasers;
- The name of her master;

The best particulars as to her tonnage, build and description, that he is able to obtain.

And he shall forward a copy of such certificate, at the first convenient opportunity, to the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen in London; the certificate so granted shall possess the same force as a certificate of registry until the expiration of six months, or until such earlier time as the ship arrives at some port where there is a British registrar, but shall then be void. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 54, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 4.

301. In cases where it appears to the Commissioners of Customs, or to the governor or other person administering the government of any British possession, that by reason of special circumstances it would be desirable that permission should be granted to any British ship to pass, without being previously registered from one port in her Majesty's dominions to another, they may grant a pass, which shall for the time and within the limits therein mentioned have the same effect as a certificate of registry. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 98.

(b) In British Possessions.

302. The governor or officer administering the government of any British possession may, with the approval of one of her Majesty's Secretaries of State, make regulations providing that on an application for registration under the M. S. Act, 1854, in that possession, of any ship not exceeding sixty tons burden, the registrar may grant, in lieu of a certificate of registry, as required by that act, a certificate of registry terminable at the end of six months or a longer period. All such certificates shall be in such form and on such conditions as the regulations prescribe. See the Colonial Shipping Act, 1868 (c. 129), s. 1.

303. This act is to be read as one act with the M. S. Act, 1854, and the acts amending it. Ibid. s. 4.

304. Any ship to which a certificate is granted under any such regulations shall, while such certificate is in force, and in relation to all things done or omitted during that period, be deemed a registered British ship. Ibid. s. 2.

304a. The appellant, a native of the Ionian Islands, purchased an American ship, and, upon a declaration that he was a British subject, obtained from a British consul at Cuba a provisional registry of the ship as British. The ship was afterwards seized and condemned for a breach of the Slave Trade Acts. Upon a preliminary objection taken on appeal to the jurisdiction of the court below, on the ground of the national character of the owner of the ship and cargo, held, first, that the registry flag and pass of a ship carry with them the presumption that they are true and correct, and that the owner was estopped from proving that he was not a British subject; and, secondly, that even if he could have established that the registry was void, and the ship not entitled to claim the protection of any flag or nation, yet that the ship was, by the statute 2 & 3 Vict. c. 73, liable to be adjudicated upon by a Vice-Admiralty Court for a violation of the Slave Trade Acts. The Laura, 3 Moo. P. C. C. N.S. 181.

7. *Custody.

305. The certificate of registry is to

* (68) The earlier acts, now repealed, containing similar provisions, are 34 Geo. 3, c. 68; 6 Geo. 4, c. 110; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 55; and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 89. The following are cases under these acts:—

1. The 34 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 18, which contained a similar clause to that of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 50, but in which the expression used is "shall wilfully detain," held, not to authorize a conviction of a master who did not comply with the requisition of the owner (though the sole owner) to deliver up such certificate to him, though expressed to be for the purpose of procuring the necessary indorsement to be made on it at the custom-house upon the transfer of the ship to him. Rea v. Patey, 13 East, 91.

2. Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 110, s. 27, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 55, s. 27, a conviction for detaining the certificate of a ship's registry was bad, unless it stated the purpose for which the certificate was wanted, and that the person who demanded it was the proper officer. Rea v. Walsh, 1 A. & E. 481; 3 N. & M. 632.

3. A. commissioned B. to sell a ship for him, and having deposited her register with him for that purpose, became bankrupt. Held, that B. had a lien on the register against the assignees of A. for the amount of his demand against A., consisting partly of charges incurred on the ship's account, and partly of other charges, and that this was not such a transfer of the property as to be used only for the lawful navigation of the ship, and is not subject to detention by reason of any title, lien, charge, or interest which any owner, mortgagee, or other person may claim to have in the ship, and if any person refuses on request to deliver up the certificate when under his control to the person entitled to the custody thereof, or to any registrar, officer of the customs, or other person entitled to require such delivery, any justice or court capable of taking cognizance of such matter may cause the person so refusing to appear before him; and unless it is proved that there was reasonable cause for such refusal, the offender shall incur a penalty not exceeding £100; but if it appears that the certificate is lost, the party complained of shall be discharged, and the justice or court shall certify that the certificate of registry is lost. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 50.

306. If the person charged with such detainer or refusal is proved to have absconded, so that the warrant or process cannot be served upon him, or if he persists in his refusal, the justice or court is to certify the fact, and the same proceedings may then be taken as in the case of a certificate of registry mislaid or destroyed, or as near thereto as circumstances permit. Ibid. s. 51.

307. For provisions, on the sale of a ship abroad under a certificate of sale, for the certificate of registry to be delivered to the registrar registering such sale, and forwarded by him to the registrar of the former port of registry of the ship (penalty for default not exceeding £100), Ibid. s. 81.

308. For provisions, if any registered ship is taken as prize, burnt, broken up, or lost, or ceases to be a British ship, for notice thereof to be given by the owner to the registrar at her port of registry, and the certificate of registry, unless lost or destroyed, to be given up by the master to the registrar at the first port at which he arrives (penalty not exceeding

309. For provisions for delivery up of the certificate of registry to the registrar of either port on change of port of registry, see Ibid. s. 88, and the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 12.

310. Under sect. 50 of the M. S. Act, 1854, a pledge by a master and sole owner of a ship of the certificate of registry, though for a good and sufficient consideration, is illegal and void; and therefore an action will lie by the master and sole owner against the person detaining it after a demand made upon him to return it for the purposes of navigation. Wiley v. Crawford, 1 El. B. & S. 253, 265; 6 Jur. N.S. 296; 7 Ibid. 943; 2 L. T. N.S. 297; 4 Ibid. 653; 8 W. R. 662; 9 Ibid. 741; 1 Asp. 101; 29 L. J. Q. B. 244; 30 Ibid. 319; 6 Jur. N.S. 1290; 7 Ibid. 943.

311. The Court of Admiralty will grant a monition, at the suit of an owner having the majority of interest, to show cause why the ship's register should not be delivered to him. The Frances, 2 Dodson, 422. See also Anon. 2 Chit. 359; 3 D. & R. 178, n.

312. Motion, at the suit of a bottomry bondholder for an order against A. (the purchaser of the ship under a sale from the original owner since her arrival in port, and which sale was asserted to be a collusive one to defraud the bondholder), to deliver up the ship's register, granted. A. made a return that he had deposited the register with B. Order to the same effect decreed against B., who thereupon delivered up the register. The Barbara, 4 C. Rob. 2.

313. An American vessel having been sold under a decree of the court in a cause of bottomry, motion for an order against the American consul to bring in the ship's register, which had been delivered to him by the master subsequently to the arrest of the ship, rejected as unnecessary to perfect the purchaser's title. The Tremont, 1 W. Rob. 163.

314. The owner of a ship consigned her

4. Where the certificate of a ship's register has been deposited as a security for advances for the use of the ship, held, that this gives the holder a sufficient lien to defeat an action of trover for the certificate. Bowen v. Fox, 10 B. & C. 41; 5 M. & R. 5; 4 Car. & P. 452.

5. Where a factor for the owner of a ship at an English port had, by a request to the master, obtained the certificate of registry for the alleged purpose of paying the tonnage duties at the custom-house, held, that he had no lien on the certificate so obtained for the general balance due to him in respect of the ship. Burn v. Brown, 2 Stark. 272.

to persons abroad, who hypothecated her, and directed the master to sign a bottomry bond. On her arrival in London he, by their direction, delivered the register to the defendant (the agent of the consignees), who gave it to their solicitor to institute proceedings in the Court of Admiralty on the bottomry bond. The ship was sold by order of that court, and the register decreed to be given up to the purchaser. The owner became bankrupt, and his assignees brought an action of trover for the register. Held, that they could not recover, as they might have appeared in the Admiralty Court and prevented the sale of the vessel, and as the delivery of the register to the purchaser under the decree of that court was not a conversion. Hassack v. Masson, 4 Moore, 361.

315. After a ship had arrived at the port of discharge, but before it was discharged, the owner demanded the certificate of registry from the master, intending to dismiss him, but not communicating that intention to him. Held, that the master was not liable to be convicted, under sect. 50 of the M. S. Act, 1854, for refusing to deliver up the certificate. Arkle v. Hensell, 8 El. & Bl. 828; 4 Jur. N.S. 306; 27 L. J. M. C. 110.

316. A vendor of a ship, with a covenant for title, retains, after the sale (in order that he may fulfil his contract, and defend himself against an action brought upon his covenant), such an interest in the certificate of registry as enables him to sustain a suit for its delivery against a party unlawfully detaining it. Gibson v. Ingo, 6 Hare, 112.

317. A master has no lien on the certificate of registry, either for his wages or for moneys disbursed by him for the use of the ship, nor have shipbrokers any lien on the certificate of registry for advances made by them to the owner for the use of the ship. Ibid.

318. A master, who was also part owner, having been dismissed by the managing owner, refused to surrender the certificate of registry and other papers and keys of the vessel. On security being given for any damages that might accrue from the order, the court ordered the master to deliver up to his co-owners the register and other articles. The St. Olaf, 3 Asp. N.S. 268.

319. A master, whether co-owner or not, has no lien on the ship's papers, in case of wrongful dismissal by the managing owner. Ibid.

8. Use of improper Certificate.

See Pt. II. c. 18, s. 9, p. 1244.

9. Evidence.

319a. As to evidence of certificates of registry, see tit. EVIDENCE, c. 16, s. 12, p. 440, and ibid. in Addenda.

8. Sale of Ship.

1. Generally.*

320. A bill of sale is the proper title to which the maritime courts of all countries look. It is the universal instrument of transfer of ships in the usage of all maritime countries, and in no degree a peculiar title deed or conveyance known only to the law of England. It is what the maritime law expects, what the Court of Admiralty would in its ordinary practice always require, and what the legislature has made absolutely necessary by statute. The Sisters, 5 C. Rob. 155.

321. A bill of sale of a ship, though in form absolute, may operate at law only as a mortgage. Gardner v. Cazenove, 1 H. & N. 423; 26 L. J. Exch. 17.

322. The bill of sale entirely divests the title of the vendor. Immediately on the execution of the bill of sale, the vendee becomes entitled to all the benefits of ownership, and he takes with them all the concurrent liabilities. The Spirit of the Ocean, 34 L. J. Adm. 74; 12 L. T. N.S. 239.

323. To complete the delivery of a vessel to a purchaser, he must have the control of the vessel given him, but he need not be put into the manual possession of it; though he must be able to direct where the vessel shall go, what it shall do, what performances it shall be required to undertake, in fact, to have exactly the same control over it as exists with respect to any other chattel which is sold and delivered to a purchaser. Burke v. Rogerson, 2 Asp. 266. And see this case on appeal, 2 Asp. 375.

324. A defendant in execution, being a registered proprietor of shares in a ship, a fi. fa. was delivered to the sheriff; and the solicitor for the creditor, by the direction of the sheriff, procured the certificate of registry from the ship, and delivered it to the sheriff, who retained it. The sheriff was registered at the custom house, under the M. S. Act, as the owner of the shares, which were afterwards sold by him and transferred to the purchaser by a bill of sale, which was also registered. Held, that the seizure was effectual, although the sheriff did not go on board the ship, and that the property in the shares was regularly transferred by the bill of sale. Harley v. Harley, 11 Ir. Ch. Rep. 451.

325. Proceeds of a cargo sold abroad and transmitted from a Vice-Admiralty Court to the registry of the High Court of Admiralty, decreed on motion to be paid out to the respective consignees of the cargo, on the consent of the purchaser of the cargo. The Lady Banks, 1 Hagg. 306.

326. On the 7th November, a foreigner purchased a British vessel, receiving possession thereof, and paying a deposit. It was stipulated that the balance was to be paid on receipt of transfer. On the 11th November, the vessel was detained by the Board of Trade, under the 12th section of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85). On the 20th November, the balance of the purchase-money was paid, and a bill of sale (dated the 8th November) was delivered. On the 5th December, the British register was closed. Held, that the transfer was not completed until the 20th November, and that the vessel was a British ship at the date of its detention on the 11th November. Granfelt v. Lord Advocate, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th Series, vol. 1, p. 782. [SCOTCH.]

327. Whatever equitable rights may be raised between an owner and a purchaser, there is nothing but an actual transfer by bill of sale, entered on the register, which can effect a change in the nationality of a ship.—Per Lord Ardmillan. Ibid.

328. An order of detention, under sect. 12 of the M. S. Act, 1873, does not prevent a British vessel being transferable by sale to a foreign purchaser, it only prevents the closing of the British register effecting the release of the ship.—Per Lord President Inglis. Ibid.

329. A stranded ship was sold by auction, certain conditions of sale being annexed to the catalogue. A purchaser bought under these conditions, but subsequently signed a memorandum inconsistent with them. A deposit was accepted by the auctioneers in accordance with the conditions which were read from the catalogue in the auction room. A dispute having arisen, the auctioneers again put the vessel up for sale under the memorandum. It was held that, upon a libel properly framed, the plaintiff owner would have been entitled to recover the price of the vessel, less the deposit; but that, on the other hand, the defendant would be entitled to recover damages in an action of tort founded on the retaking of possession and resale of the vessel. The Judicial Committee directed a nonsuit to be entered. Paget v. Cowasjee Eduljee, L. R. 1 P. C. 127. See also Nos. 202, 202a, and 215, pp. 1202, 1203.

330. An unfinished ship becomes by assignment, and continues afterwards to be when perfected, although at the assignor's expense, the property of the assignee, and no further act is necessary to secure him against the assignor's creditors if the assignor and builder is the same person, but if he is not, then notice of the assignment to the builder is indispensable. Holderness v. Rankin, 29 L. J. Ch. 753.

332. Assignment by bill of sale of a ship while building, including all materials then provided, or to be provided and made as a security for past and future advances. Held, that a subsequent transfer of the ship by the shipbuilder to third parties was a conversion, and that these parties were liable to the holder of the first assignment for the value of the ship when completed, less the cost they had incurred in completing it. Reid v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B. 692; 17 Jur. 918; 22 L. J. C. P. 206; 21 L. T. 166.

332a. A contract for building a ship, provided that in the event of cesser of work, delay in delivery, bankruptcy or insolvency of the builder, the buyer might complete and employ such materials belonging to the builder as should be then on his premises. Held, that so far as this clause applied to the bankruptcy of the builder, it was void as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Ex parte Barter, Ex parte Black, In re Walker, 26 Ch. D. (C. A.) 510; 53 L. J. Ch. 802.

3. Defective Title.

333. The general rule is that whoever purchases under an illegal title does so at his own peril, and must take the consequences both in purchase and in his own subsequent expenditure upon it of his inattention to his own security. The Perseverance, 2 C. Rob. 239.

334. When a person, having no title to a ship, procures it to be registered in his name, the court will compel him to re-transfer it to the rightful owner, and account for the earnings, even though there has been no fraud, and notwithstanding the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). Holderness v. Lamport, 29 Beav. 129; 7 Jur. N.S. 564; 30 L. J. Ch. 489; 9 W. R. 327. See also Orr v. Dickinson, 1 Johns. & H. 1; 5 Jur. N.S. 672; 28 L. J. Ch. 516.

335. If a party has taken a title from the original owner and registered his ship accordingly, and has denied the title of a purchaser, alleging it to be no title at all, and has put the validity of that title in issue, it is very doubtful whether it is competent to him to turn round and claim under a conveyance from that very purchaser whose title he has denied. The Margaret Mitchell, 4 Jur. N.S. 1194; Swabey, 385.

336. Several acts of transfer bona fide, and for valuable consideration, cure antecedent defects of title. The Helena, 4 C. Rob. 4. See also The Australia, 13 Moore, P. C. C. 132; Swabey, 480; The Molly, 1 Dodson, 395; The Horlock, 2 F. D. 243; 47 L. J. P. D. 5.

337. Semble, the purchaser of a foreign ship ought not to rely merely upon what the ship's papers may show, but is bound to make further inquiry into the title of the ship. Per Turner, L. J., Hooper v. Gumm and others, McLellan v. Gumm and others, L. R. 2 Ch. 282; 36 L. J. Ch. App. 605; 2 Asp. 481.

4. Equities.

338. On a purchase of a vessel by a person under twenty-one, the vendor becomes a trustee in equity for the purchaser, until the latter, on coming of age, is enabled to make the declaration of ownership required by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 38, previously to registering the vessel in his own name; and sect. 3 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, expressly recognizes and gives effect to such equitable rights. Stapleton v. Haymen, 2 H. & C. 918; 9 L. T. N.S. 655; 10 Jur. N.S. 497; 33 L. J. Ex. 170; 12 W. R. 317.

339. The owner of a ship at sea, in possession of information that in consequence of her leaky condition she had put into a port for repair, sold his vessel without disclosing this information to the buyer. Held, that the sale was void, although afterwards the ship proceeded on her outward voyage safely, and was lost by being stranded on her return home. Duthie v. Carnegie, 18 F. C. 162; Brown, 408. [SCOTCH.]

6. What Property passes.*

341. If a shipbuilder make a rudder,

* (75) As to what is included under the term furniture of a ship, see 1 Park on Ins.

123, 126; Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping, 3rd ed. p. 17.

intending it to form part of a ship when completed, and the purchaser of the ship considers and treats it as the ship's rudder, though it was never attached to the ship, and remains unfinished in the builder's possession at his bankruptcy, this is evidence for the jury that the rudder is that of the ship, and the property of the purchaser. Goss v. Quinton, 4 Scott, N. R. 471; 3 M. & G. 825; 12 L. J. C. P. 173.

342. Rudder and cordage bought by the builder specifically for a ship complete or nearly so, though not actually attached to it at the time of delivery to the purchaser held to pass with the ship. Woods v. Russell, 5 B. & Ald. 942; Abb. Sh. 6.

343. A bill of sale of a whaler then absent on a fishing adventure, "together with all masts, &c., boats, oars, and appurtenances," held not to pass the cargo of oil, &c. acquired during the adventure. Langton v. Horton, 5 Beav. 9; 1 Hare, 549; 6 Jur. 357, 910.

344. A chronometer on board a ship passes by assignment of the ship, her tackle and appurtenances. Ibid.

345. It seems the chronometer does not ordinarily pass with the ship. The Velox or Belox, No. 1809, 1 August, 1863.

346. A vessel was sold with all belonging to her on board and on shore. A chronometer, previously used in the vessel, but, at the date of sale, in the hands of an optician for the purposes of repair, held to pass with the vessel. Armstrong v. M'Gregor, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th Series, vol. 2, p. 339. [SCOTCH.]

347. In an action on a policy of insurance on ship and furniture, the ship being employed in the Greenland fishery, held, that boats, rigging and stores belonging to the ship were included; but whether or not the fishing stores were included depended on the usage of trade, which, semble, inclined to the negative. Hoskins v. Pickersgill, cited in The Dundee, 1 Hagg. 123; Marshall on Ins. (4th ed.), 568; 1 Park on Ins. 97.

348. Fishing stores of a vessel engaged in the Greenland fisheries, held to be "appurtenances" within the meaning of 53 Geo. 3, c. 159 (now repealed), and liable thereunder in an action for damage against the vessel, her tackle, apparel and furniture. The Dundee, 1 Hagg. 109.

349. The word "appurtenances" is not to be construed with reference to the abstract naked idea of a ship; but regard must be had to the relation borne by the articles in question to the actual service of the ship. Some things are universally appurtenances to a ship, quod ship, be its occupation what it may; particular things may become so from their immediate and indispensable connexion with a ship in the particular occupation to which she is destined and in which she is engaged. Ibid.

350. The meaning of the word "appurtenances" of a ship, and what would and would not be construed to amount thereto, considered, with reference more particularly to the 53 Geo. 3, c. 159. Ibid. 122—127.

351. Whatever property of the owner may be on board a ship for the accomplishment of the objects of the voyage and adventure in which she is engaged, constitutes part of the ship and her appurtenances, under 5 Geo. 3, c. 159, and is liable for damage to another ship. Gale v. Laurie, 7 D. & R. 711; 5 B. & C. 156.

352. The fittings of a packet and the guns of a privateer, held to be included under the word "appurtenances." Ibid.

353. Ballast does not pass under the term "furniture." Kinter's case, Leon. 46.

354. Permanent ballast, called "kettle," does not pass under the words "tackle, apparel, stores, &c." Lane v. Neale, 2 Starkie, 105.

355. A plaintiff sought to recover for articles supplied by him in fitting out a ship for active service in time of war, beyond what would be required for classification at Lloyds. Articles supplied after the completion and delivery of the ship, and requiring a written order for performance, held to be "extras," although the order was written before the completion of the ship. Scott Russell v. The Viscount Sa da Bandeira, 1 Asp. 289.

(78) A bill of sale of the hull of a vessel, with all and singular her tackle, apparel and furniture, does not include a chronometer on board at the time, when no agreement of the parties or custom of merchants in relation to it is made to appear. Richardson v. Clark, 3 Shep. 44. [AMERICAN.]

7. *By Decree of the Admiralty Division.

356. In all cases of bottomry, salvage and wages, the Court of Admiralty possessed an undoubted power to decree a sale of the vessel proceeded against, unless the demand of the successful suitor be satisfied. The jurisdiction of the court therein held to be confirmed by the municipal law of this country, and by the general principles of the maritime law, and the title conferred by the court in the exercise of this authority a valid title against the whole world, and so recognized by the courts of this and of all other countries. The Tremont, 1 W. Rob. 164.

357. A vessel found at sea and brought into port as derelict, having been sold under an order of the Instance Court of Admiralty at the instance of the salvors and claimant (without fraud), held, that such sale was available against the Crown's right of seizure for a previous forfeiture incurred by the ship having been guilty of a forfeitable offence against the revenue laws, although the Crown was not a party to the proceedings in the Admiralty Court other than by the King's procurator-general claiming the vessel as an admiralty droit, and although no decision of droit or no droit was awarded, and the sale took place pendente lite under an interlocutory order. Att.-Gen. v. Norstedt, 3 Price, 97. See also No. 202, p. 1202.

358. For the mode of proceeding in cases of sale of ship by the High Court of Admiralty, see tit. PRACTICE, Pt. II.

8. By Decree of Foreign Court.†

359. In the case of the sale of a ship in a foreign port the court naturally looks for the bill of sale, it being the ordinary title by which any and every ship is sold that is sold. Segredo, otherwise Eliza Cornish, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 44; 17 Jur. 738; see also The Sisters, 5 C. Rob. 155.

360. The authority of a Court of Admiralty for the sale of a damaged ship is in some parts of the world deemed conclusive as to the legality of the sale, but it is otherwise held by the courts possessing the controlling power in this country. The Warrior, 2 Dodson, 293.†

361. In the case of the sale of a vessel after survey, report and condemnation, by official persons abroad, held, that such a proceeding was in the nature of an inquisition of a sheriff for the purpose of information to those having the power of selling the ship, and not conclusive on the party whose property was in question. Andrews v. Glover, Abb. Sh. (12th ed.) p. 16.

362. The sale of a vessel by a foreign Court of Admiralty for the payment of expenses held valid, and the title of a party claiming thereunder pronounced for against the former owner, but without costs. The Experimento, 2 Dodson, 47.

363. The order of a foreign commercial court for the sale of a British ship within twenty-four hours of the application by the master, held not to be a judicial proceeding. The Bonita, otherwise The Charlotte, 1 Lushington, 252; 30 L. J. Adm. 141; 5 L. T. N.S. 141.

364. A defective title by reason of an invalid sentence of condemnation may be cured by a subsequent sentence, though given after the property had passed into other hands, and when the vessel herself was no longer amenable to the jurisdiction of the court, such valid sentence being held to operate retroactively, so as to rehabilitate the former title. If, however, the title be impeached before the second sentence takes place it may be vitiated. The Falcon, 6 C. Rob. 200.

† (80) It seems that, by the law of France, if the sale of a French ship is made by the master, under the decree of a French court, or under the authority of a French consul in a foreign country, before whom the innavigabilit  of the ship has been proved, all further question as to the authority for the sale is for ever quieted, even though the court or consul may have been imposed upon. 3

365. Ship abandoned at the Mauritius by her master and afterwards sold under the authority of the Vice-Admiralty Court there. Owners of cargo brought an action against the owners of ship, and also sent an agent to the Mauritius to procure the proceeds of sale, which, however, had been previously transmitted to the High Court of Admiralty in England. Held, that the sale, though under the order of the Vice-Admiralty Court, was illegal, that a verdict against the owners of ship to the extent of the value of ship and freight was no answer to the present action, and that the proceeds of sale at the Mauritius not having been paid when demanded, the plaintiffs were in the same situation as if no such demand had been made, and therefore entitled to recover the value of the goods from the defendant. Morris v. Robinson, 3 B. & C. 196. See also as to decrees of Courts of Vice-Admiralty and of foreign Courts of Admiralty, tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. c. 10, pp. 661—666.

9. Under Power of Attorney.

366. A power of attorney to sell a ship imports that the grantee of the power shall sell the ship for its full value, and he has no authority to negotiate a sale upon any other terms. The Margaret Mitchell, 4 Jur. N.S. 1193; Swabey, 382.

367. Seemle, a power of attorney to sell a ship, given to the master (among other reasons) by way of security to cover his advances, does not, except in case of necessity, justify him in selling against his owner's consent. Ibid.

368. If the grantee of a power of attorney to sell a ship sells fraudulently or so as to commit a breach of trust, the fraud of the attorney vitiates the title of the purchaser if the fraud was known to him or could have been known by reasonable inquiry. Ibid.

369. If an agent for the sale of ship has acted improperly or dishonestly towards his principal, the purchaser cannot be affected by such conduct if he were ignorant of the same, and not called upon by circumstances to make inquiry. Ibid.

370. There are many circumstances which may invalidate a sale made by an attorney, though his authority to sell may not be impeachable. For instance, great inadequacy of price, collusion by the agent with the purchaser, &c. Ibid.

371. Seemle, a power of attorney to sell a ship is not so revoked by a decree of the grantor's insolvency in a colonial possession as to invalidate a bond fide exercise of the power before notice of insolvency. Ibid.

372. A power of attorney to sell a ship may be substantially revoked by parol, and the attorney selling thereafter is guilty of a breach of trust. Ibid.

373. The owner of a vessel gave the master a power of attorney to sell the ship. The power was given in case of the master obtaining an advantageous offer, and he had instructions not to sell for less than £10,000 to £13,000. The master had made advances to the amount of £3,000 in respect of the ship on its arrival in England, and offered to resign the ship to the agent on payment of these advances. This offer was refused. The master received a letter from the owner informing him that he was to be dismissed, that the owner was coming to England and intended to sell the ship. The master meanwhile sold the ship for £4,000. Held, that the power of sale was substantially though not expressly revoked, that the master's own representations to the purchaser showed it to be invalid, and that there was no such necessity for sale as to invest the master with an implied authority for that purpose. Ibid.

374. A power of attorney authorizing the sale of a vessel is revoked by the death of the owner. Watson v. King, 1 Stark. 121; 4 Camp. 272.

375. A., owner of forty-eight shares in a ship, gave a power of attorney to B., the other part owner, empowering him to sell A.'s shares. The ship sailed under the command of B. A. afterwards mortgaged his shares in the ship, then at sea, to the plaintiffs, who had no notice of the power of attorney, and the mortgage was entered on the register. Subsequently B. sold the ship abroad to the defendants, who had no notice of the mortgage by A. The ship was registered de novo abroad, and arrived in London. The plaintiffs took possession of the ship; the defendants afterwards also took possession. Held, that the plaintiffs had the better title to A.'s shares. Cato v. Irving, 16 Jur. 161; 18 L. T. 345; 5 De G. & S. 210; 21 L. J. Ch. 675.

10. Fraud.

376. Seemle, that if vendors fraudulently or only wilfully prevent the purchaser from complying with the provisions of the Ship Registry Acts, a court of equity would interfere in aid of the vendee's title, even before the M. S. Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3. Mestaer v. Gillespie, 11 Ves. 628. See also Speldt v. Lechmere, 13 Ves. 589; Coombes v. Mansfield, 3 Drewry, 200; 1 Jur. N.S. 270; 24 L. J. Ch. 513.

377. If the grantee of a power of attorney to sell a ship sells fraudulently, or so as to commit a breach of trust, the fraud of the attorney vitiates the title of the purchaser if the fraud was known to him, or could have been known by reasonable inquiry. The Margaret Mitchell, 4 Jur. N.S. 1194; Swabey, 393.

378. If an agent for the sale of a ship has acted improperly or dishonestly towards his principal, the purchaser cannot be affected by such conduct if he were ignorant of the same, and not called upon by circumstances to make inquiry. Ibid.

379. R. N., sole owner and first master of the Empress, after some intermediate appointments, made his son R. N. master, who, in Australia, without authority, sold the vessel, asserting himself to be the sole owner and master, the certificate of registry and indorsement bearing out on the face of it such assertion. R. N., the son, received the purchase-money, but never transmitted it to the father. Held, that the sale was effected by the fraud and forgery of the son, that the misleading description of him on the certificate of registry was not proved to arise from any culpable neglect in the instructions given by the father to the Custom House, and that the sale was null and void. Possession decreed to R. N., the father, but without costs. The Empress, Swabey, 160; 3 Jur. N.S. 119; 28 L. T. 204; 5 W. R. 165; see also Ekins v. E. I. Insurance Co., 1 P. Wms. 395; 2 Bro. Par. Cases, 72.

380. Vendors sold a vessel "to be classed nine years A 1 at Lloyd's." The vessel was so classed, but on her first voyage was found to be, as the purchasers alleged, so unseaworthy and rotten as not to be worth repairing. In an action by the purchasers to recover the purchase-money and damages, held, that they were not entitled to issues as to the seaworthiness of the vessel or as to whether Lloyd's properly classed her as A 1, but that they were entitled to an issue whether the vessel had been classed A 1, owing to the fraudulent representations of the vendors as to her condition. Gourlay v. Watt, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, vol. 9, p. 107. [SCOTCH.] See also French v. Newgass, 3 C. P. D. (C. A.) 163; 47 L. J. ibid. 361; 3 Asp. N.S. 574.

381. Seemle, a fictitious sale of a British vessel, in order that it may procure a foreign registry for the purpose of avoiding the inspection provided by the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), is fraudulent. Hutchinson v. Aberdeen Sea Insurance Co., Cases in the Court of Session, 4th Series, vol. 3, p. 682. [SCOTCH.]

382. Seemle, fraud committed by the owner of a vessel would not affect an innocent purchaser from him. The Europa, 8 L. T. N.S. 368; 2 N. R. 194; B. & L. 89; 2 Moore, P. C. N.S. 1.

383. When an instrument has been entered into between two parties for a purpose which may be considered fraudulent as against a third party, it may yet be binding as between themselves. A supposed fraudulent intention as to third parties cannot be interpolated in construing an instrument in reference to the rights of the contracting parties. Shaw v. Jeffery, 13 Moore, P. C. C. 432.

384. Under the 43rd section of the M. S. Act, 1854, a registered purchaser, who purchases for value and without notice of fraud, shares in a vessel, from the registered owner thereof, has a good title against a former owner from whom the registered owner obtained such shares by a bill of sale executed and registered fraudulently. The Horlock, 2 P. D. 243; 47 L. J. P. D. & A. 5; 3 Asp. N.S. 421.

11. By Master.(a) *Generally.

385. In some of the older cases it was

* (84) The master cannot sell the ship abroad, or, in cases of disaster there, without the authority of his owners. Laws of Oleron, cited in Godolphin's Adm. Jur. ext. 1, 3; 1

Sid. 453.

(85) The master of a ship may in some cases sell the ship, although it does not belong to him, as in the case of famine, &c.

held, that the master had no authority to sell any part of the ship, and that a sale by him transferred no property, but that he might hypothecate. See Johnson v. Shippen, 2 Ld. Raym. 984; S. P. Ekins v. East India Company, 1 P. Wms. 392; 2 Bro. Parl. Cases, 72.

386. The sale of a ship by the master, though made in a foreign country in a case of inevitable danger, the ship and tackle being beaten and broken, and there being no hope of saving any part of them, partly on account of the tempest, and partly on account of the barbarity of the inhabitants of the country, who carried off everything cast on shore, held not to convey the property to the purchaser. Tremenhere v. Tressilian, 1 Sid. 452.

387. If a vessel, pending an insurance on freight and cargo shipped, suffers damage, the master is bound to sell or repair the ship according as a prudent owner would have acted if wholly uninsured. Green v. The Royal Exchange Insurance Co., 6 Taunt. 66.

388. When a ship has been sold in a foreign port by the master, it is the owner's duty, if he disapproves of that act and considers his property to have been sacrificed, to act with the greatest possible promptitude in demanding that justice should be done to him. The Australia, Swabey, 486; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 132.

389. The legality of the sale of a ship by the master mainly depends upon his conduct, and he should therefore be examined as a witness. The Bonita, 30 L. J. N.S. Adm. 153; 1 Lushington, 252; 5 L. T. N.S. 141.

390. It is the duty of the master of a British ship, before selling her in a foreign port, to consult the British consular officer there resident. Ibid.

391. In the case of the sale of a British vessel by its master to a foreigner in a foreign port, the lex loci contractus does not apply, save in one case only where the title is derived from the decree of a competent court administering the law in its own jurisdiction, and by its decree conferring a title. Segredo, otherwise Eliza Cornish, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 57, 58; 22 L. T. 36; 17 Jur. 738;

but see Cammell v. Sewell, 3 H. & N. 617; 4 Jur. N.S. 978; 27 L. J. Exch. 447. See also as to decrees of foreign courts, tit. JURISDICTION, pp. 663—666.

392. In deciding whether the sale of a ship by its master in a foreign port to a foreigner be legal, the court must be governed, not by the law in force in the foreign port, but by the law maritime and by the law of England, so far as it is consistent with the law maritime, unless indeed the court be restrained by particular statutes. Segredo, otherwise Eliza Cornish, supra. As to the law maritime generally, see tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. c. 8, s. 1, p. 649.

393. On the question whether the master had exercised a sound judgment in selling, evidence of his being addicted to drunkenness is admissible. Alcock v. Royal Exchange Ass. Co., 13 Q. B. 301.

394. The master, in consequence of damage sustained, and of the ship becoming unseaworthy, and of no advances on loan or bottomry being obtainable to repair her, sold her to the plaintiffs, who repaired and sent her with a cargo to her registered port in England. The owners refusing to ratify the sale, or consent to the registry of the ship in the plaintiffs' names, put men on board to take possession of her and the cargo. Held, that if the plaintiffs had acquired no legal title by the purchase they had no lien in respect of the moneys laid out by them in the repairs. Ridgway v. Roberts, 4 Hare, 106.

395. On recapture of a neutral (American) ship from the enemy, restitution on salvage decreed to the former owner, and refused to a party claiming under an asserted purchase from the master in Ireland, but without prejudice to the rights of such party to be prosecuted in the American Courts. The Fanny and Elmira, Edwards, 117, 120.

395a. As to the authority of the master to sell the ship, see The Gratitude, Tudor's Leading Cases on Mercantile Law (2nd ed.), pp. 72, 77.

(86) As to the sale of a ship abroad by the master, see Ibid. pp. 159—169; Abb. Sh. 12th ed. 5 et seq.

* (88) By the American law the master is justified in selling his ship abroad in cases ship, and he is bound to try every other expedient to raise money before disposing of the ship or any part of the cargo. Underwood v. Robertson, 4 Camp. 138; Hayman v. Moulton, 5 Esp. 68.

397. The master has, by virtue of his employment, not merely those powers which are necessary for the navigation of the ship and the conduct of the adventure to a safe termination, but also a power, where such termination becomes hopeless, and no prospect remains of bringing the vessel home, to do the best for all concerned, and therefore to dispose of her for their benefit. It is a case of necessity, when nothing better can be done for the master's employers. Hunter v. Parker, 7 M. & W. 322; The Lord Cochrane, 2 W. Rob. 335.

398. The existence of a necessity sufficient to justify the master in the sale of the ship abroad depends upon the circumstances of the case. It certainly does not arise where a ship is capable of repair, and where means exist by hypothecation or otherwise of paying for those repairs. Segredo, otherwise Eliza Cornish, 1 Spinks' Ecl. and Adm. Rep. 46, 48, 56; 22 L. T. 36; 17 Jur. 738; The Crowdale, 15 Jur. 232; The Fanny and Elmira, Edwards, 117; The Lord Cochrane, 8 Jur. 716; The Bonita, 1 Lushington, 252; 5 L. T. N.S. 141; 30 L. J. Adm. 145.

399. A ship, having suffered considerable damage, put into the island of Fayal, and the master petitioned the director of the customs for an official survey. Three were made. The report was to the effect that the ship could be repaired for about £300. The master, being dissatisfied, obtained a private survey, which resulted in a report that the ship was unseaworthy, and should be condemned. The director of the customs then, on the petition of the master, decreed the sale of the ship by public auction, and gave official notice thereof according to the custom of the place. She was purchased by a Portu-of urgent necessity, and in such cases only. See The Sarah Ann, 13 Peters, 387; 13 Curtis, D. S. C. 215; 2 Sumner, 206; The Triton, 5 Mason, 465; The Petapscot Ins. Co. v. Southgate, 5 Peters, 604; 9 Curtis, D. S. C. 490; Robinson v. The Commonwealth Ins. Co., 3 Sumner, 220; 3 Kent's Comm. 3rd ed. 132. [AMERICAN.]

(89) The master has a right to sell the ship in cases of urgent necessity, acting bonâ fide for the interest of all concerned. The Tilton, 5 Mason's Rep. 465. [AMERICAN.]

(90) It is not sufficient to a valid sale by the master that he acted with good faith and in the exercise of his best discretion. There must be a moral necessity for the sale, so as to make it an urgent duty upon the master to sell for the preservation of the interest of all concerned. The Sarah Ann, 2 Sumner's Rep. 206. See also Scully v. Briddle, 2 Wash. C. C. 150. [AMERICAN.]

(91) The purchaser of a wrecked vessel from the master is not bound, in order to maintain his title, to furnish direct and positive evidence of the honesty of the master's conduct and of the necessity of the sale, but presumptive proof of those facts is sufficient. The Lucinda Snow, 1 Abb. Adm. 305. [AMERICAN.]

(92) The degree of necessity which justifies the sale of a wrecked vessel by the master defined. Ibid.; Prince v. Ocean Ins. Co., 40 Maine, 481. [AMERICAN.]

(93) It is well settled in this country, that the master, as such, has authority to sell a wrecked vessel, when he proceeds in good faith, exercising his best discretion for the benefit of all concerned, and this, whether the sale is made in view of a peril then involving the vessel, or of one likely to ensue, from which, in the opinion of persons competent to judge, she cannot be rescued. The Lucinda Snow, ibid. [AMERICAN.]

(94) The circumstance that the master, who has sold a stranded vessel, believed at the time that he could get her off, would be pertinent to show bad faith avoiding the sale, but proof that the purchaser believed himself able to rescue the vessel can have no such effect. Ibid.

(95) The master has authority to sell the ship only in case of extreme necessity; but this necessity is not physical, but moral, amounting to a strong and vehement exigency. Peirce v. Ocean Ins. Co., 18 Pick. 83; Woods v. Clark, 24 Pick. 35; The Schooner Tilton, 5 Mason, 465; Skrine v. Sloop Hope, Bee, 2; Scully v. Briddle, 2 Wash. C. [AMERICAN.]

(96) Where a vessel abroad is so injured that it becomes questionable whether it will not cost more to repair her than she would be worth when repaired, and the master calls a survey in good faith, there is a moral necessity that he should act on the opinion of the survey, as the agent both of owners and insurers, and he will be supported, unless it appear that the facts or inferences on which the result of the survey was based were false. The burden of proof will lie on those who impugn the master's conduct to show this falsity. Gordon v. Massachusetts Ins. Co., 2 Pick. 249. [AMERICAN.]

guese merchant, who immediately repaired her, and sent her with a cargo to Bristol, where she was arrested by the original owner in a cause of possession. Held, that the circumstances of the case did not show an urgent necessity for the sale, and that the sale was invalid. Possession decreed to the original owner with costs. Segredo, otherwise Eliza Cornish, supra.

400. An English-owned vessel came into collision in a foreign port within telegraphic communication of England, at which port a British consul and agent of Lloyd's resided, and the master, believing the vessel would not again be fit for sea, sold her, against the advice of the agent of Lloyd's, and without first fully communicating with the owner and waiting for his reply. It subsequently turned out that the vessel was but slightly injured, and was at a small expense fitted for sea. The court set aside the sale. The Bonita, 1 Lushington, 252; 30 L. J. Adm. 145; 5 L. T. N.S. 141.

401. A master has generally no authority to sell his vessel. Necessity alone will justify a sale, and that necessity must arise, e.g. from some of the following circumstances: 1st. The state and condition of the vessel. 2nd. The consequences of not proceeding to sell. 3rd. Want of facility of communication with the owners. 4th. The resources of the master, or the total absence of all resources. 5th. To some extent the power of the master to avert a sale. The Glasgow, otherwise The Ya Macrao, 2 Jur. 1147; 28 L. T. 13; 5 W. R. 10; Swabey, 145.

402. A British vessel in a foreign port was, after proper surveys had, and after having been pronounced unseaworthy, and not worth repair, sold without authority from her owner. Held, that such sale was justified by necessity, and therefore valid. Ibid.

403. It is not enough to show that the sale of a ship by the master was bond fide for the benefit of all concerned, it must also be shown that there was an urgent necessity for its being resorted to. Robertson v. Clarke, 1 Bing. 445; Cambridge v. Anderton, 2 B. & C. 691; 4 D. & R. 203; 1 C. & P. 213; R. & M. 60; Allen v. Sugrue, 8 B. & C. 565; Doyle v. Dallas, 1 M. & Rob. 48; Gardner v. Salvador, 1 M. & R. 116; Miller v. Fletcher, 1 Dougl. 231; Maeburn v. Leckie, Abb. Sh. (10th ed.), 8; 1 Bing. 243; Morris v. Robinson, 3 B. & C. 196; 5 D. & R. 34; Reid v. Darby, 10 East, 143; Hayman v. Moulton, Maeburn*, 1 Bing. 243; 8 Moore, 127; Plantamour v. Staples, 1 M. & R. 117; Robertson v. Carruthers, 2 Stark. 571; Mount v. Harrison, 4 Bing. 388; 1 M. & P. 14; Dommett v. Young, 1 C. & M. 465.

404. The want of repairs, and the degree of want, the possibility of procuring the repairs at the port where the ship lies, the expense of repairs, the expense of remaining in port, the want of funds or credit, the impracticability of communicating with the owner, these and other circumstances may in combination constitute the necessity the law requires. The Margaret Mitchell, Swabey, 386; 4 Jur. N.S. 1194.

405. A ship was in a foreign port (Shanghai) and in need of repairs. The owner had no agent, and the master was not provided with any credit at that place; the master advertised in vain for money on bottomry, and communicated with and acted upon the advice of Lloyd's agent there. The vessel, if repaired, must have been kept on the beach for many months at a great loss and expense. The master therefore bond fide sold the vessel. Held, that the necessity was such as gave the master an implied authority to sell, and that the sale was valid. Ibid.

406. If a ship is sold in a foreign port by the master, the burthen of proof as to the necessity of such sale lies upon the purchaser from the master. The Australia, Swabey, 484; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 132; 7 W. R. 718.

407. The necessity which the law contemplates, as justifying the sale of a ship in a foreign port by the master, is not an absolute impossibility of getting the vessel repaired; but if the ship cannot be sent upon her voyage without repairs, and if the repairs cannot be done except at so great and so certain a loss that no prudent man would venture to encounter it, that constitutes a case of necessity. Ibid.

408. The first purchaser of the master is bound to prove such necessity; but whether such onus probandi attaches to a second purchaser depends on all the circumstances of the case. Ibid.

409. The master of an insured ship which has been injured by perils of the seas is not justified in selling the ship instead of repairing her, unless he has not the means of getting the repairs done at the place where the vessel is obliged to be put in, or cannot get them done except at such an expense as would render it undoubtedly improper to repair if the ship were not insured, or has not money in his possession sufficient to pay for the repairs, and is not in a situation to raise it by loan or otherwise, except at such an extravagant rate as would prevent a prudent man, in the exercise of a sound and vigorous judgment, from undertaking the repairs under such circumstances. Soames v. Sugrue, 4 C. & P. 276, 284.

410. If a ship is so injured by perils of the seas that she is rendered wholly unfit for sea, and cannot be repaired except at a greater expense than the building of a new ship, the owner may recover for a total loss, though the ship in the state to which she is reduced is sold with her register. Cambridge v. Anderdon, 1 C. & P. 213; 2 B. & C. 691; and see Irving v. Manning, 6 C. B. 391.

411. In a case of justifiable sale of ship abroad by the master, the person employed by him to sell may lawfully pay over the proceeds to the master, or to his order. Ireland v. Thomson, 4 C. B. 199; 17 L. J. C. P. 241.

412. After three several surveys of the ship in a foreign port by competent persons, at two of which the surveyor for the agents attended, it was found that the expense of repairing her would be from £4,000 to £5,000. The master, having ineffectually attempted to raise money by hypothecation of the ship, and having no funds to repair her himself, sold her for £1,200. The jury found that what had been done by him was for the benefit of all concerned, and gave a verdict for the assured as for a total loss. Held, by the Court of Common Pleas, that under the circumstances the sale was justifiable. New trial refused. Reid v. Bonham, 6 Moore, 397; 3 B. & B. 147.

413. A ship with a cargo of timber bound from Q. to L., on her voyage down the river St. L. sprung a leak, and it became necessary for the preservation of the lives of the master and crew to run her on shore, where she took the ground on the outside of a reef of rocks, and was there fixed and exposed to the full force of the stream, and in the way of the drift ice then forming and floating down the river. One of the part owners and agent for the others resided at Q., and after two surveys, in which the surveyors stated as their opinion that it would be prudent to sell the ship and cargo, the master, under the direction of such part owner, sold the same. The ship, however, survived, was repaired by the purchasers, and afterwards brought a full cargo to L. In an action against the underwriters, held, by the Court of Common Pleas, that, under the circumstances, the master was warranted in selling the ship and cargo. Idle v. Royal Exchange Insurance Co.; 3 Moore, 115; 3 B. & B. 151; 8 Taunt. 755; but semble, overruled on writ of error to the Court of Queen's Bench, 3 B. & B. 151.

414. To constitute a valid sale at a port of distress, there must be the consent of the master (except under the most peculiar circumstances), an impossibility of repairs, except at a ruinous cost, or an equally ruinous delay, and an in expediency, arising from imminent risk, of awaiting communication with the owners. The Uniao Vencedora, otherwise The Gipsy, 33 L. J. Adm. 195; 11 L. T. N.S. 351.

415. Semble, if an extreme necessity existed for the sale of a British ship at a foreign port, the British vice-consul at the port might, if the master neglected to sell, sanction the sale, which would then be valid, notwithstanding the absence of the master's consent. Ibid.

416. The necessity which gives the master an implied authority to sell his vessel abroad must be created by, and depend upon, the particular circumstances of each case. The Victor, 13 L. T. N.S. Adm. 21; 2 Asp. 261.

417. A vessel was at the Cape of Good Hope, and in need of extensive repairs. The master had no credit, and the ship's agents there had a claim of £300 against her and threatened arrest. The master was unable to repair the ship even temporarily, so as to bring her to England; and the necessary delay of three months to enable the master to communicate with the owner in England would have been prejudicial to the vessel; the master, therefore, sold her at the Cape. Held that, under the circumstances, an adequate necessity existed for the sale, and that therefore the transfer was valid. Ibid.

418. It is only under circumstances of stringent necessity that a master can effect a sale of his vessel so as to affect the insurers; but what a prudent owner would have done under the circumstances may illustrate the question as to how far there was a stringent necessity. Cobequid Marine Insurance Co. v. Barteaux, L. R. 6 P. C. 319; 2 Asp. N.S. 536.

419. A vessel ran on a reef close to land, about noon. A survey having been made, she was reported to be very seriously damaged, and to be in a dangerous condition; and, as recommended by the surveyors, was sold the next day. In an action by the owners against the insurers as for a total loss, it was proved that the vessel at the time of the report was practically uninjured, and was got off by her purchasers a few hours after their purchase, by means that the master might have made available for the same purpose. A verdict having been returned for the owners; held, by the Privy Council (reversing the decision of the Supreme Court of Halifax, Nova Scotia), that the verdict was against the weight of evidence as to the necessity for sale. Ibid.

419a. As to sale or bottomry of cargo by master, see tit. BOTTOMRY, Pt. I. c. 13, pp. 136—140, and GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, Pt. V. c. 5, p. 553.

(c) *Purchasers.

420. A person surveying a ship with a view to its sale by the master, held justified under the circumstances in becoming the purchaser. The Australia, Swabey, 480, 485; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 132; 7 W. R. 718.

421. Persons should make their election either to be surveyors or purchasers, but they should not be both. By being purchasers they are in a position to avail themselves of information they have obtained as surveyors. Hayman v. Moulton, 5 Esp. 68.

422. A ship being in a foreign port out of repair, the master being unable to raise money for such repairs, was ordered to be sold by the Vice-Admiralty Court of the place, and was afterwards sold by the agent of the owner for a larger sum than was offered on the attempted sale by the Vice-Admiralty Court; possession refused to the former owner on the ground that the transaction was not shown to be clearly fraudulent, though the master had bought a one-third share from the purchaser. The Warrior, 2 Dodson, 298.

423. A bottomry bond originally valid is not affected by any agreement by the bondholder for the purchase of the ship. The Helgoland, Swabey, 497.

424. The plaintiff, in trover for the ship, by bidding at the sale of it under the process of a foreign court, did not give validity to such sale, the defendant not appearing to have known of, or been misled by, the fact of such bidding. Cas-trique v. Imrie, 6 Jur. N.S. 1058; 8 C. B. N.S. 1, 405; 7 Jur. N.S. 1076; 30 L. J. C. P. 177; 9 W. R. 455; 4 L. T. N.S. 143.

425. A party who repaired at a remote port, with the sanction of the owner, a vessel disabled at sea, arrested it for the price, and brought it to judicial sale. Held, that he possessed a fiduciary character, which rendered the purchase by him illegal and reducible at the instance of the owner, to whose loss and damage the jury had found the sale had been effected. Elias v. Black, 18 Court of Session Cases, 1225. [SCOTCH.]

(d) Notice to Owners and Lloyd's Agent.

426. The distress of the vessel may be so urgent as to leave the master no alternative but an immediate sale, and delay may be destructive of the interests of the owners, but where there is a possibility of communicating with them without such consequences, it is the first duty of the master to do so and await their reply. Any sale by the master without communicating with the owners, where practicable, would be void. The Bonita, 1 Lushington, 252; 30 L. J. N.S. Adm. 145; 5 L. T. N.S. 141; and see the cases there cited.

427. Seemle, it is the duty of the master before selling his vessel to consult with Lloyd's agent, or the British consul, if there be one at or near the port where the vessel lies. Ibid.

428. An English-owned vessel came into collision in a foreign port which was within telegraphic communication of England, and at which port a British consul and agent of Lloyd's resided, and the master, believing the vessel would not again be fit for sea, sold her against the advice of Lloyd's agent, and without first fully communicating with the owner, and it subsequently turned out that the vessel was but slightly injured and was at a small expense fitted for sea. The court set aside the sale. Ibid.

429. As to notice to owners in cases of bottomry, see tit. BOTTOMRY, p. 129.

* (97) A master of a ship cannot become a purchaser at a sale of the property which is sold by his authority as agent of the owners.

Barker v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Mason, 369. [AMERICAN.]

(e) Confirmation by Owners.

430. Confirmation of a sale by an owner will not be inferred from vague expressions of approval, if the owner at the time was not aware of the true state of the facts relating to the sale. The Bonita, otherwise The Charlotte, 1 Lush. 252; 30 L. J. Adm. 145; 5 L. T. N.S. 141.

431. Acceptance of purchase-money generally operates as a ratification of the sale, but not so if the money was received without the intention of appropriating it, or if received in ignorance of the facts relating to the sale. Ibid.

432. An owner of a ship, being ignorant of the true state of facts relating to the sale of his ship abroad by the master, received as proceeds of the sale bills of exchange at sixty days. Before the bills became due he became aware of the true circumstances, and his ship having arrived, he arrested her. When the bills fell due he obtained payment of them, and paid the money into court. Held, that such receipt of the purchase-money by him did not amount to a ratification of the sale. Ibid.

433. Acquiescence by the owner, however unauthorized the sale might have been at the commencement, amounts to a ratification by the owner. Lapraick v. Burrows (The Australia), 13 Moore, P. C. C. 132; Swabey, 480.

434. Unnecessary delay on the part of the owner, dissatisfied with the sale of the ship by the master, may import acquiescence in the sale. Ibid.

See also No. 424, p. 1225:

12. Ameliorations.*

435. The general rule is, that whoever purchases under an illegal title does so at his own peril, and must take the consequences, both in the purchase and in his own subsequent expenditure upon it, of his inattention to his own security. The Perseverance, 2 C. Rob. 239.

436. A prize was purchased by a neutral under a sentence of condemnation found to be illegal. It appearing to the court that the purchase had not been made under circumstances requiring the strict application of the rule, the purchaser was reimbursed the money laid out in ameliorations, some deduction having been made for wear and tear and the use of the vessel while in possession of the party making the repairs. Ibid.

437. A purchaser of a vessel which, having been condemned in a neutral port, had been restored to the former owner on the ground of the illegality of such condemnation, decreed to be reimbursed for his actual amelioration of the ship, there being some circumstances in the case indicating a probability that the purchaser might have been deceived as to the legality of the title, but the court indicated that such an allowance would not be continued to be permitted after the illegality of such titles should be more generally made known. The Nostra de Conceicao, 5 C. Rob. 294.

438. On recapture of a neutral (American) ship from the enemy, restitution on salvage decreed to the former owners, and refused to a party claiming under an asserted purchase from the master in Ireland, but without prejudice to the rights of the purchaser to be prosecuted in the American courts. Claim of the purchaser for amelioration refused. The Fanny and Elmira, Edwards, 117, 120.

439. Assignment by bill of sale of a ship while building, including all materials then provided, or to be provided, and made as a security for past and future advances. Held, that a subsequent transfer of the ship by the shipbuilder to third parties was a conversion, and that these parties were liable to the holder of the first assignment for the value of the ship when completed, less the expenses they had incurred in completing it. Reid v. Fairbanks, 13 C. B. 692; 17 Jur. 918; 22 L. J. C. P. 206; 21 L. T. 166.

440. The master, in consequence of damage sustained, and of the ship becoming unseaworthy, and of no advances

(99) If the court should decree a sale by the master invalid, it would, where the transaction was free from fraud, compel a proper allowance for the expenditure of the original purchasers in getting off and repairing the vessel. The Brig Sarah Ann, 2 Sumner's Rep. 206. [AMERICAN.]

(100) The purchaser of property in good faith from one who is not the owner is only liable for the fruits from judicial demand. Dyson v. Phelps, 14 La. An. 722. [AMERICAN.]

on loan or bottomry being obtainable to repair her, sold her to the plaintiffs, who repaired and sent her with a cargo to her registered port in England. The owners, refusing to ratify the sale, or consent to the registry of the ship in the plaintiffs' names, put men on board to take possession of her, and the cargo. Held, that if the plaintiffs had acquired no legal title by the purchase, they had no lien in respect of the moneys laid out by them in the repairs. Ridgway v. Roberts, 4 Hare, 106.

441. A successful suitor in a cause of damage is entitled, in case of a deficiency of proceeds, to subsequent accretions in the value of the ship arising from repairs effected at the expense of the owner. The Aline, 1 W. Rob. 111.

442. A. had contracted to buy a share of a ship in July, but did not execute a bill of sale till the 14th September. By a memorandum of agreement dated September 30, he transferred his share, with all his liabilities as owner, to B., and he then sued B. for expenses incurred by himself with respect to the ship after the contract for the purchase of the ship in July, but before the execution of the bill of sale in September. The memorandum, it was held, showed nothing which made the defendant liable for expenses not incurred by plaintiff as owner, therefore the action was not sustainable. Chapman v. Callis, 1 Asp. 37.

13. *Proceeds of Sale.

443. The court cannot, as regards the proceeds of property, give any relief which could not be given as against the property itself. Prouting v. Hammond, 8 Taunt. 688; M'Calmont v. Rankin, 2 De G. M. & G. 424; Hare, 1; The Liverpool Borough Bank v. Turner, 1 Johns. & H. 159, 179; 3 L. T. N.S. 84, 494; 2 De G. F. & J. 502; but see Armstrong v. Armstrong, 21 Beav. 78.

9. Actions of Possession.

Generally.

444. G., sole owner, mortgaged a ship to B., and died intestate and insolvent. B., under the power of sale, sold to W., but by mistake endorsed upon the original mortgage a discharge, which was recorded at the custom house. Subsequently the registrar refused to register W.'s bill of sale, as the property in the ship appeared by the papers to be in G.'s representatives. The court ordered possession of the ship to be given to W. without requiring administration to G. The Rose, 42 L. J. N.S. Adm. 11; L. R. 4 A. & E. 6; 1 Asp. N.S. 567.

445. The court inclines against dis-possession, and requires the plaintiff's claim to be clearly proved. The Victoria, Swabey, 408; 5 Jur. N.S. 204.

446. See also as to the court's jurisdiction in such actions, c. 2, ss. 1 and 2; and as to the court's power of sale, c. 8, s. 7, p. 1218.

Part II.—GENERAL AND SUNDRY RESPONSIBILITIES OF OWNERS AND THEIR REPRESENTATIVES.

1. Generally.

448. In all causes of action which may arise from circumstances occurring during the ownership of the persons whose ship is proceeded against, no action can be maintained against the ship where the owners are not personally liable, or where their personal liability has not been given up, as in bottomry bonds, by taking a lien on the vessel. The liability of the ship, and the responsibility of the owners in such cases, are convertible terms. The ship is not liable if the owners are not responsible, and vice versa. The Druid, 1 W. Rob. 399.

449. It is the duty of a person using a navigable river with the vessel of which he is possessed, and has the control and management, to use reasonable skill and care to prevent mischief to others. The liability is the same whether the vessel be in motion or stationary, floating or aground, under water or above it. The liability may be transferred with the transfer of the possession and control to another person; yet, on the abandonment of such possession, control, and management, the liability may cease. White v. Crisp, 23 L. T. 300; 23 L. J. Exch. 317; 10 Exch. 312. See also Rex v. Watts, 2 Esp. N. P. C. 675.

450. A vessel by her improper navigation caused a second vessel to run into and damage a third vessel. Held, that the first vessel was alone responsible for the damage. The Sisters, L. R. 1 P. D. (C. A.) 117; 45 L. J. P. D. & A. 23; ibid. (C. A.) 39; 3 Asp. N.S. (C. A.) 122. See also The Thames, 44 L. J. Adm. 23; 2 Asp. N.S. 513; The Annapolis and Golden Light, 5 L. T. 451. The representative of an owner is responsible (to the extent of the property inherited from him) for the acts of the owner. The Nostra Signora de los Dolores, 1 Dodson, 296.

452. In a court of the law of nations the 26 Geo. 3, c. 60, requiring the name of every owner to appear in the ship's register, and the rule confining the claims of third parties, if British subjects, to registered owners, held, not to bar foreigners from preferring a claim against a bond fide owner whose name was not inserted in the ship's register. Ibid.

453. A party actively and directly concerned in the purchase and outfit of the vessel, in the appointment of the master, and in the subsequent management of the vessel, whose name, however, was not inserted in the ship's register, bill of sale, or letters of marque, held to have been a bond fide owner, and responsible as such to a foreigner. The representative of such owner accordingly held responsible for costs and damages decreed to the foreigner. Ibid.

454. Semble, owners are not deprived of the benefit of compulsory pilotage because, after a collision, their vessel did not render the assistance required by sect. 33 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63). The Queen, The Lord John Russell, L. R. 2 A. & E. 354; 38 L. J. N.S. Adm. 39; 3 Asp. 242. See also tit. COLLISION, Pt. I. c. 5, s. 2, p. 188.

455. The master of a steam-tug, who had contracted to tow a fishing smack out of the harbour of G. Y. to sea on the terms that his owners should not be liable for damage arising from negligence or default of themselves or their servants, after the towage had been in part performed took in tow, in addition to the smack, six other vessels, and in consequence was unable to keep the fishing smack in her course, so that she went aground and was lost. By having more than six vessels in tow at once, the master of the tug disobeyed a regulation made by the harbour master of G. Y. under statutory authority. Held, that the loss of the smack was occasioned by the negligence of the master of the tug, but that the owners were protected from liability by the terms of the towage contract. The United Service, 9 P. D. 3; 53 L. J. P. 1; 47 L. T. 701; 32 W. R. 565; 5 Asp. 170, C. A.

456. The defendants' vessel being driven upon a sea-wall became a wreck, and could not be removed otherwise than by breaking her up. Valuable property was on board, which would have been lost if she had been immediately broken up. The defendants removed the property with reasonable speed, and then broke up the vessel. During the period which elapsed between the time when she could have been first broken up and the time she was broken up, in fact, damage was done by the vessel to the sea-wall on which she lay. Held, that the defendants, assuming them not to have been guilty of any negligence, although remaining in possession, were only bound to use reasonable care and diligence in preventing the ship from damaging the sea-wall, and were entitled to remove the property on board before breaking her up, and that having done so with reasonable speed they were not liable. Bailiffs of Romney Marsh v. Corporation of the Trinity House, 5 Ex. 204; L. R. 7 Ex. Ch. 247; 39 L. J. Ex. 163; 41 ibid. Ex. Ch. 106; 3 Asp. 396.

456a. The defendants' vessel, owing to the negligence of their servants, struck on a sand-bank, and becoming from that cause unmanageable, was driven by the wind and tide upon a sea-wall of the plaintiffs, which it damaged. Held, that the defendants were liable for the damage so caused. Ibid.

457. As to owner's liability for the result of latent and patent defects in their vessels, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. III. cc. 2 and 3, pp. 200—203, and ibid. in Addenda.

457a. As to owner's liability for acts of stevedore, see Murray v. Currie, L. R. 6 C. P. 24; 40 L. J. C. P. 26; 23 L. T. 557; 19 W. R. 104; and Burns v. Poulson or Poulson, L. R. 8 C. P. 563; 42 L. J. C. P. 302; 29 L. T. 329; 22 W. R. 20. See also tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, pp. 499, 550, 563.

2. M. S. Acts.

1. Generally.*

458. The M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is divided into eleven parts:—

Part I.—The Board of Trade and its general functions (sects. 1—16). No precise application stated.

Part II.—British ships, their ownership, measurement and registry (sects. 17—108). To the whole of H. M.'s dominions (see sect. 17).

* (103) The principal acts relating to merchant shipping prior to the year 1854 are repealed by the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), on the M. S. Act, 1854, coming into force.

(104) The M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is extended and amended by the following acts, viz.:—The M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120); the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91); the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63); the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124); the Colonial Shipping Act, 1868 (c. 129); the M. S. (Colonial) Act, 1869 (c. 11); the M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110); the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73); the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85); the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80); the Shipping Casualties Investigation Act, 1879 (c. 72); the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16); the M. S. Act, 1854, Amendment Act, 1880 (c. 18); the M. S. (Fees and Expenses) Act, 1880 (c. 22); the M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (c. 43); the M. S. (Expenses) Act, 1882 (c. 55); the M. S. (Colonial Inquiries) Act, 1882 (c. 76); and the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41).

(105) For an account of the origin and progress of the navigation laws of England from King Richard 2nd to Queen Victoria, see Pritchard's Admiralty Digest, 2nd ed. p. 424, n.

(106) The original jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty in most cases of breaches of the navigation laws was apparently taken away by the 74th section of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 108, re-enacted in succeeding statutes, and in the Customs Consolidation Act, 1853 (c. 107), s. 263. Its appellate jurisdiction thereon from Vice-Admiralty Courts was taken away by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41, transferring appeals from those courts to the Privy Council direct.

To all ships registered in H. M.'s dominions abroad, when such ships are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to owners, masters and crews of such ships :

The whole of this part—

To all sea-going ships registered in the United Kingdom (except those exclusively employed in fishing on its coasts, and those belonging to the Trinity House, the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses, or the port of Dublin corporation, and except pleasure yachts), and also to all ships registered in any British possession and employed in trading between United Kingdom and any place not in the possession in which such ships are registered, and to owners, masters and crews of such ships, wherever they may be (see sect. 109).

Part IV.—Safety and prevention of accidents (sects. 291—329). To all British ships, and to all foreign steamers carrying passengers between places in the United Kingdom (see sect. 291).

Part V.—Pilotage (sects. 330—388). To the United Kingdom only (see sect. 330).

Part VI.—Lighthouses (sects. 389—416). No precise applications stated.

Part VII.—Mercantile marine fund (sects. 417—431). No precise application stated.

Part IX.—Liability of shipowners (sects. 502—516). To the whole of H. M.'s dominions (see sect. 502).

Part X.—Legal procedure (sects. 517—543). To the whole of H. M.'s dominions, except as therein excepted (see sect. 517).

Part XI.—Miscellaneous matters (sects. 544—548). No precise application stated.

459. Every officer of the Board of Trade, every commissioned officer of any of her Majesty's ships on full pay, every British consular officer, the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen and his assistant, every chief officer of customs in her Majesty's dominions, and every superintendent of a mercantile marine office, may, in cases where he has reason to suspect that the provisions of this act or the laws as to merchant seamen and navigation are not complied with, require the owner, master, or any of the crew of any British ship to produce any official log-books or other documents relating to such crew or any member thereof in their respective possession or control, and the master to produce a list of all persons on board, and take copies of all or part of such official log-books or documents, and summon the master to give any explanation concerning such ship or her crew, or the official log-books or documents. (Penalty for breach not exceeding £20.) See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 13.

2. Application of their Provisions to Foreign Ships.

460. Whenever it has been made to appear to her Majesty that the government of any foreign state is desirous that any of the provisions of the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876, or of any act hereafter to be passed amending the same, shall apply to the ships of such state, her Majesty may by Order in Council apply such provisions to the ships of such state, and to the owners, masters, seamen, and apprentices thereof, as if such ships were British ships. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 37.

461. Where her Majesty has power to make an Order in Council under the M. S. Act, 1854, or any act amending the same, such Order in Council may be revoked, altered or added to by Order in Council. Ibid. s. 38.

462. Every such Order in Council is to be published in the Gazette, and laid before Parliament. Upon such publication, the Order takes effect as if enacted by Parliament. Ibid.

463. No foreign ship proceeding in ballast or with cargo or passengers between any ports of the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands or Isle of Man, nor any goods carried therein, is while so employed subject to any higher or other rate of dues than British ships so employed. See Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 141.*

464. Every foreign ship proceeding in ballast, or with cargo or passengers between any ports of the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or Isle of Man, is subject, as to stores for the use of the crew, and in all other respects, to the same regulations as British ships. Ibid.

465. As to the jurisdiction of British courts over ships belonging to foreign governments, see tit. JURISDICTION, c. 13, p. 671.

3. Application of Laws of India and Colonies to British Ships throughout the Empire.

466. If the governor-general of India in council, or the legislative authorities in any British possession abroad, by appropriate legal means, apply or adapt any of the provisions in the third part of this act to any British ships registered at, trading with, or being within their respective jurisdictions, and to the owners, masters, mates, and crews thereof, such provisions when so applied, and so long as they remain in force, shall in respect of the ships and persons to which they are applied be enforced, and penalties and punishments for the breach thereof recovered and inflicted throughout her Majesty's dominions, as if such provisions had been hereby so adopted and applied. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 288.

467. Every act, ordinance, or other form of law to be passed by the governor-general of India in council, or other legislative authority, in pursuance of this act, shall require the same sanction or other formalities, and be subject to the same conditions as are required in order to the validity of any other act, ordinance, or other form of law passed by such legislative authorities. Ibid. s. 289.

468. See also tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. II. c. 13, p. 704; and as to Indian and Colonial legislation, ibid. pp. 691—775, and ibid. in Addenda.

4. Conflict of Laws.

469. If in any matter relating to any ship or to any person belonging to any ship there appears to be a conflict of laws, then, if there is in the third part of this act (as to masters and seamen) any provision on the subject which is hereby expressly made to extend to such ship, the case shall be governed by such provision, and if there is no such provision the case shall be governed by the law of the place in which such ship is registered. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 290.

471. The act of the master binds the owner with respect to the conduct of the ship as much as if it were committed by the owner himself. The Vrouw Judith, 1 C. Rob. 151; The Columba, Ibid. 156.

472. Owners are responsible for damage generally when occasioned by the negligence or unskillfulness of the master in performing a lawful service, but not when occasioned by an illegal act maliciously or wilfully done without the privity or approbation of the owners. In a suit preferred against the owners of a steam-tug in respect of damage occasioned by the wilful and illegal acts of the master thereof in their employ, held, that the owners were not responsible, those acts not being within the scope of the master's ordinary duties, nor directed or subsequently sanctioned by his owners. The Druid, 1 W. Rob. 391.

473. If before a suit is commenced a master, being cognizant of an injury done by his servant, negotiates for the compensation of that injury by the payment of a sum of money out of court, quere, would he be so far concluded by such negotiation that he could not avail himself of any legal defence to the action? Ibid.

474. The master of a Danish schooner, lying alongside the quay at the port of Ibrailla in the Danube, got on board an English barque lying outside him, and, in order to get the schooner out, wilfully cut the barque adrift, whereby she swung to the stream and capsized a barge, into which the barque had discharged some of her cargo. Held, inter alia, that the master was acting out of the scope of his duty, that the Danish schooner proceeded against had nothing to do with the damage, and that her owners were therefore not liable. The Ida, 1 Lushington, 6; 1 L. T. N.S. 417.

475. Civilly the owners are responsible for every deviation from that line of conduct which it becomes a master to perform not simply and alone in the navigation of the vessel, but in the care of his own seamen and of those who may be thrown overboard by accident, and for the performance of every other office of humanity. The St. Lawrence, 14 Jur. 534.

476. The master is the agent of the owner of the vessel, and can bind him by his contract or his misconduct; but he is not the agent of the owners of the cargo unless expressly so constituted by them. The Mercurius, 1 C. Rob. 82.

477. The incidental powers of a master are restricted to those which belong to the usual employment of the ship; if its ordinary employment has been to carry cargo on the sole account of the owner, he has no authority to let the ship on freight; or if its ordinary employment has been to take goods on freight as a common carrier he will not be presumed to have authority to let the ship on a charter-party for a special agreement. The Thomas Worthington, 3 W. Rob. 135.

478. Whenever a master is on shore and a ship is left in charge of the mate, or anyone else, the latter stands in the same position with respect to the law, and in all other respects, as if he had been the master himself. The Northampton, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 157.

479. A master in the royal navy placed, for the purpose of bringing it to England, in charge of a vessel retaken from pirates, is invested with all the authority of an ordinary master, but no more. The Segredo, otherwise Eliza Cornish, Ibid. 49.

480. If the master of a vessel exceeds his authority as agent for the owner by signing a charter-party to pay a commission to a ship broker, the owner is not liable to the ship broker, and a suit to recover the amount of commission claimed will be dismissed with costs. The Phoenix, 5 Jur. N.S. 77. [IRISH.]

481. In all cases in which the owners of a ship are sought to be made liable, either in contract for necessaries supplied on the order of the master, or in cases of collision for the negligence of the crew, or (as in the case before the court) in a case of injury to the person, from the negligence of the ship keeper, the question of liability does not depend on the title to the ship. The real question is, whether the owners who are sought to be charged were the employers of the master who made the contract, or the masters of the persons who were guilty of the negligence. Per the majority of the court in Hibbs v. Ross, L. R. 1 Q. B. 534; 35 L. J. Q. B. 193; 2 Asp. 397; 7 B. & S. 655.

482. In cases of contract, a further question sometimes arises, as to whether the owner may not have clothed the master with apparent authority, so as to be precluded from disputing his authority, but in cases of tort the question can only be, whether he in fact employed those actually guilty of negligence. Ibid.

483. The owner of a vessel agreed with the master that he should take the vessel wherever he chose, on condition that he (the owner) should have a third of the net profits. The owner registered himself as managing owner. Held, that the owner was liable to third parties for the negligent management of the vessel by the master. Steel v. Lester, 3 C. P. D. 121; 47 L. J. C. L. 43; 3 Asp. N.S. 537.

484. The master's contracts cannot bind the owner, unless authority to bind the owner has been actually given to him or unless the owner has, by word or deed, held out the master as his master. The Great Eastern, L. R. 2 A. & E. 88.

485. The liability of the owner of a vessel to pay for repairs and equipments ordered by the master depends, not upon the ground of ownership of the vessel, but upon the ground of a contract made with the vendor by a person who was the owner's agent for the purpose of ordering such necessaries. Ibid. See also tit. NECESSARIES, REPAIRS AND SUPPLIES, p. 1148.

486. The steamer T., while on a voyage from M. to L. fell in with the S. disabled. The master of the T. agreed to tow the S. to port for an agreed sum. In endeavouring to do so, the T. negligently came into collision with the S. and sunk her. The policy of insurance upon the T. and her bills of lading provided that she might assist and tow vessels in all situations; but the master of the T. had never received any instructions from the owners as to performing salvage services. Held, that the master of the T. was acting within the scope of his authority in endeavouring to tow the S. to port, and that the owners of the T. were liable for the damage caused by his negligence while so doing. Semble, even if there had been no such clause in the policy of insurance or bills of lading, the master would nevertheless have been acting within his authority in rendering salvage services to the S. The Thetis, L. R. 2 A. & E. 365.

487. The master of a ship whose anchor had got foul of a submarine cable, caused the cable to be cut, although by the exercise of ordinary nautical skill the anchor might have been freed from the cable. Held, that the owners of the cable were entitled to recover from the ship-owners for the damage. The Clara Kilham, L. R. 3 A. & E. 161.

488. Owners are not liable for an abuse by the master of the powers conferred on him by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 246, of apprehending deserters without a warrant. O'Neil v. Rankin, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, vol. 11, p. 538. [SCOTCH.]

489. As to the general responsibility of the owners for the acts of the master, see tit. MASTERS, pp. 1120 and 1122.

490. As to their responsibility for the performance of his duties to the cargo, see tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, p. 465.

490a. As to collision, see tit. COLLISION, p. 188.

6. Acts of Harbour and Dock Masters.*

491. If any harbour master or any of his assistants without reasonable cause or in an unreasonable or unfair manner exercises any of the powers or authorities vested in the harbour master by this or the special act, the person so offending shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding £5. See the Harbours, Docks and Piers Clauses Act 1847 (c. 27), s. 54.

492. The harbour master may give directions for all or any of the following purposes, that is to say: For regulating the time at which, and the manner in which, any vessel shall enter into, go out of, or lie in or at the harbour, dock or pier, and within the prescribed limits, if any, and its position mooring or unmooring, placing and removing whilst therein. For regulating the position in which any vessel shall take in or discharge its cargo, or any part thereof, or shall take in or land its passengers, or shall take in or deliver ballast within, or on the harbour, dock or pier. For regulating the manner in which any vessel entering the harbour or dock shall be dismantled as well for the safety of such vessel as for preventing injury to other vessels, and to the harbour, dock, or pier, and the moorings thereof. For removing unserviceable vessels and other obstructions from the harbour, dock or pier, and keeping the same clear. For regulating the quantity of ballast or dead weight in the hold which each vessel in or at the harbour, dock or pier shall have during the delivery of her cargo, or after having discharged

cc. 19, 69, 81; 29 & 30 Vict. c. 30; 38 & 39 Vict. c. 89, and 45 & 46 Vict. c. 62.

the same. See the Harbours, Docks and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 52.

493. The harbour master may remove any wreck or other obstruction to the harbour, dock or pier or their approaches, and the expenses of removal shall be paid by the owner of the wreck or obstruction, and the harbour master may detain and, on non-payment on demand of such expense, sell such wreck or obstruction. Ibid. s. 56.

494. A vessel, without any negligence on the part of the owner, N., became a wreck and obstructed a harbour. The harbour master removed it pursuant to the 56th section of the Harbours Act, 1847, and brought an action to recover the costs of such removal against N. N. joined E. as a defendant, with whom the vessel had been insured, and who had paid as on a total loss. No notice of abandonment was given to E. Held, by the Court of Appeal, affirming the decision of the Queen's Bench Division, that N. was liable under the statute, and that he was not entitled to recover over against E. Eglinton v. Norman, 46 L. J. (C. A.) 557; 3 Asp. N.S. 471. See also tit. WRECK.

494a. Quære, are the powers conferred by section 4 of the Removal of Wrecks Act, 1877, on conservancy authorities for the removal of vessels sunk, &c., permissive or obligatory? The Douglas, 7 P. D. (C. A.) 151; 51 L. J. (P. D.) 89; 5 Asp. 15.

494b. Semble, per Kay, J., such powers are permissive, and not obligatory. Dormont v. The Furness Railway Company, 11 Q. B. D. 496; 52 L. J. Q. B. D. 331; 5 Asp. 127.

494c. A local act vested B. harbour in the defendants, and gave them jurisdiction over P. harbour and P. channel (which also led to B. harbour), for the purpose of maintaining, improving, regulating and buoying the said harbour and channel, and a subsequent local act gave the defendants one half of certain light duties leviable upon ships entering or leaving P. harbour and channel to be applied by the defendants in maintaining, buoying, lighting, regulating and improving P. harbour and channel. A vessel was sunk in P. channel, and the defendants partially removed the wreck, but left the part unremoved insufficiently buoyed. The plaintiff's vessel having struck on the wreck, held, that the defendants were liable for the damage occasioned. Ibid.

494d. Vessels were required by act of parliament to be berthed in a harbour under the directions and control of the harbour master, who had authority to regulate their position, mooring, and placing whilst therein, and damage was occasioned to a vessel by the alleged negligence of the harbour master, who, having fixed the place where the vessel was to be beached, gave an order, on the vessel nearing the spot selected, to let go the anchor, on which the vessel immediately settled and was damaged. In an action by the owners of the vessel against the harbour commissioners (whose servant the harbour master was), held (affirming the decision of the President of the P. D. & A. Division), that the order was, under the circumstances, a negligent order; that the harbour master in so ordering was acting in the capacity of and within the scope of his authority as harbour master, and that therefore the Harbour Commissioners were liable, and this, although the ship was at the time, in order to reach the place of beaching so selected, passing through waters outside the limits of the authority of the Harbour Commissioners, and the damage occurred outside such limits. Edwards v. The Falmouth Harbour Commissioners, 79 L. T. (C. A.) 135.

494e. In a proceeding under the Crown Suits Act, 1861, it appeared that a harbour was under the management of the Executive Government of the Colony, which appointed the harbour officials and received rates for the use of staiths and wharves, but no harbour dues. Held, that such executive government was liable for negligence in permitting an obstruction to remain in the harbour by which the plaintiffs' ship was injured. The Queen v. Williams, 53 L. J. P. C. 64.

494f. The owners of a vessel damaging the New Brighton Pier are not precluded by the terms of the New Brighton Pier Act, 1864, from setting up the defence of compulsory pilotage. The Clan Gordon, 7 P. D. 190; 4 Asp. 513.

495. The harbour master has power to enter any vessel in harbour burning lights or fires contrary to the provisions of the act or any special act, or any bye-law under such act, and to extinguish them. See the Harbours, Docks and Piers Clauses Acts, 1847 (c. 27), s. 72.

496. The owner of any vessel or float of timber doing damage to the harbour, dock or pier, or the quays or works connected therewith, and the master of any such vessel, shall be responsible for such damage, whether caused by such vessel itself or by any person on board. Ibid. s. 74.

496*a.* As to the manner in which such damages are to be recovered, Ibid. s. 75.

497. If the owner is compelled to pay for damage wilfully done under s. 74, by his servants, he may recover it from them. Ibid. s. 76.

498. The principal powers and duties of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty over harbours and navigation are transferred to the Board of Trade, by the Harbours Transfer Act, 1862 (c. 69). See also tit. TRADE, BOARD OF—.

499. Provisional orders may be made by the Board of Trade, empowering the undertakers (among other things) to make and alter bye-laws for the management of their works, subject to approval as therein mentioned. See the General Pier and Harbour Act, 1861 (c. 45), s. 15.

500. The undertaking authorized by any provisional order is subject to the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854, and of every general act relating to harbours or dues on shipping, or on goods carried in ships, now or hereafter in force. See the General Pier and Harbour Act, 1861, Amendment Act (c. 19), s. 21.

501. By 10 & 11 Vict. c. 27, s. 83, the undertakers authorized by any special act to construct a dock may from time to time make such bye-laws as they shall think fit for (amongst other purposes), regulating the shipping, unshipping, and removing of all goods within the limits of the dock, and for regulating the duties and conduct of all persons, as well the servants of the undertakers as others, employed in the dock. A dock company, who were the undertakers under a special act, made bye-laws that no lumpers should be allowed to work on board any vessel in the dock but such as were authorized by the company, unless permission in writing had been previously obtained from the superintendent of the dock, and that servants of the company only should be allowed to work within the dock premises, whether on ship, lighter or shore. Held, that the bye-laws were in excess of the power conferred upon the dock company by sect. 83, and were therefore invalid. Dick v. Badart, 10 Q. B. D. 387; 5 Asp. 49.

502. For powers and regulations of harbour trustees, and harbour and dock masters, and Queen's harbour masters, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. VIII. cc. 2, 3, pp. 277, 281—286.

11. Sea-going Fishing Ships.

1. Generally.

504. Registered sea-going ships exclusively employed in fishing on the coasts of the United Kingdom are exempt from the following clauses of the M. S. Act, 1854, viz. :—

Sect. 136. As to being required to have certificated masters and mates.

Sect. 145. As to the production of the apprentices before the Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices before each voyage, with the indentures, and the entering of the apprentices' names on the agreement with the crew.

Sect. 147. As to the penalties for supplying seamen without a licence, for employing unlicensed persons to engage seamen, and for receiving seamen illegally supplied.

Sect. 157. As to the penalty for shipping seamen without such an agreement.

Sect. 158. As to the reporting of changes in the crew.

Sects. 161, 162. As to the production of agreements with the men, and of the certificates of the master and mates.

Sect. 170. As to the discharge and payment of wages before a superintendent of a mercantile marine office in the United Kingdom.

Sect. 256. As to the entry of fines in the official log book, and the deduction and payment thereof.

Sect. 279. As to the deposit of agreements, indentures and assignments on arrival at a foreign port with the consul or officer of customs there.

Sects. 280—287. As to the keeping of official log books, the entries to be made therein, the signatures thereto, the penalties for irregular keeping thereof, the reception thereof in evidence, and the delivery up or transmission of such logs, see M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 13.

505. In all other respects the third part of the M. S. Act, 1854, applies to such vessels. Ibid.

506. Sects. 141, 142—144, 149, 163, 164, 166, 167, 171—174, 243 and 269 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104); part of sect. 13 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63); sect. 8 of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85); and sect. 9 and part of sect. 10 of the M. S. (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), are repealed by the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41).

506a. 2. Lights.

513. Open boats and fishing vessels of less than twenty tons registered tonnage, when under way, and when not having their nets, trawls, dredges or lines in the water, shall not be obliged to carry the coloured side lights, but every such boat or vessel shall in lieu thereof have ready at hand a lantern with a green glass on one side and a red glass on the other side, and on approaching to, or being approached by, another vessel such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side. International Steering and Sailing Rules, Art. 10, under Order in Council of 10th Aug. 1884.

514. The following portion of this article applies only to fishing vessels and boats when in the sea off the coast of Europe, lying N. of Cape Finisterre:—

- (a) All fishing vessels and fishing boats of twenty tons registered tonnage or upwards, when under way, and when not required by the following regulations in this article to carry and show the lights therein named, shall carry and show the same lights as other vessels under way.
- (b) All vessels when engaged in fishing with drift nets shall exhibit two white lights from any part of the vessel where they can best be seen. Such lights shall be placed so that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than six feet and not more than ten feet, and so that the horizontal distance between them, measured in a straight line with the keel of the vessel, shall not be less than five feet and not more than ten feet. The lower of these two lights shall be the more forward, and both of them shall be of such a character, and contained in lanterns of such construction, as to show all round the horizon on a dark night with a clear atmosphere for a distance of not less than three miles.
- (c) A vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out shall carry the same lights as a vessel when engaged in fishing with drift nets.

- (d) If a vessel when fishing becomes stationary in consequence of her gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, she shall show the light and make the fog signal for a vessel at anchor.
- (e) Fishing boats and open boats may at any time use a flare-up in addition to the lights which they are by this article required to carry and show. All flare-up lights, when exhibited by a vessel trawling, dredging or fishing with any kind of drag net, shall be shown at the after part of the vessel, excepting that if the vessel is hanging by her stern to her trawl, dredge or drag net they shall be exhibited from her bow.
- (f) Every fishing vessel and every open boat, when at anchor between sunset and sunrise, shall exhibit a white light visible all round the horizon at a distance of at least one mile.
- (g) In fog, mist or falling snow, a drift net vessel attached to her nets, and a vessel when trawling, dredging or fishing with any kind of drag net, and a vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out, shall at intervals of not more than two minutes make a blast with her fog-horn and ring her bell alternately.
- (h) A ship which is being overtaken by another shall show from her stern to such last-mentioned ship a white light or a flare-up light. International Steering and Sailing Rules, under Order in Council of 11th August, 1884, Art. 11.*

515. A smack with her trawl down had a globular white light exhibited from her weather cross-tree partially hidden from overtaking vessels by her sails, and did not exhibit any other white light or flare-up to an overtaking steamer. Held, that this was an infringement of Art. 11 of Rules of 1879. The Pacific, 9 P. D. 124. For the rules, see 4 P. D. 244.†

* (114a) These rules came into force 1st September, 1884.

† (114b) Where trawlers and other sailing vessels whose gross registered tonnage does not exceed eighty tons cannot with safety and convenience of working carry their side lights on stanchions they may be carried in the rigging, provided the surveyors are satisfied that they are so fitted as to show the lights for the distance and in the direction required by the regulations. This is not to be allowed in the case of steamers. Board 516. For the international regulations in regard to lights and fog signals generally, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. V. pp. 240—251, and Ibid. in Addenda.

12. Sea-going Ships of General Lighthouse Boards.

517. Sea-going ships belonging to any of the three Lighthouse Boards are like registered sea-going fishing ships exempted from the operation of certain sections of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, though otherwise subject to that act. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, s. 13.

13. Sea-going Pleasure Yachts.

518. Sea-going ships, being pleasure yachts, are similarly exempted. Ibid.

14. British and French Fishing Vessels under the Sea Fisheries Acts.

1. Generally.*

519. For the provisions of the Convention of 2nd August, 1839, between Great Britain and France, concerning the sea fisheries between the British Islands and France, and the act of parliament confirming the same, see 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, and the Convention thereto annexed.

520. As to the confirmation of the rules of 23rd June, 1843, made in pursuance of that Convention, see the Schedule to the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), Art. 41.

521. For the provisions of the Convention of 11th November, 1867, between England and France, concerning the same sea fisheries, and the act of parliament confirming the same, and amending the laws relating to British sea fisheries generally, see the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), s. 6, and the Convention thereto annexed; and 2 Maude & Pollock on Merc. Ship. 4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce, p. cclxxix. and notes thereto.

522. The Convention of the 2nd August, 1839, and rules of 23rd June, 1843, are to continue in force until the Convention of 11th November, 1867, comes into operation. See Art. 41 of that Convention annexed to the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, c. 45. The Convention of 11th November, 1867, has not yet come into operation, and no act of parliament has been passed in pursuance of Art. 39 thereof.

523. Although the act of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, is repealed, by the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, c. 45, sched. 2, it has been temporarily revived, see the Fisheries (Oyster, Crab and Lobster) Act, 1877 (c. 42), s. 15, which enacts that notwithstanding anything in the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, so far as regards French fishermen and French sea-fishing boats, shall be in force as if it had not been repealed, and shall continue in force until the day when the Convention of 11th November, 1867, shall come into operation.

524. See for various other acts relating to British sea fisheries generally, repealed by the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, Ibid. Sched. 2.

525. The term "sea-fishing boat" includes every vessel of whatever size, and in whatever way propelled, which is used by any person in sea-fishing, or in carrying on the business of a sea-fisherman. Ibid. s. 5.

526. See as to the interpretation of terms in this act, Ibid.

527. Her Majesty may from time to time make and alter regulations for carrying this act into effect, and impose penalties for breach not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 7.

528. As to British officers of the navy and coast guard, consular officers, and officers of customs, and French officers of the navy, and other French officers duly of Trade Instructions as to the Survey of Passenger Accommodation, Crew, Spaces, Lights and Fog Signals, 1884, § 82 a, p. 51.

* (115) The Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), came into operation on 1st February, 1869, but the convention referred to therein has not yet come into operation; and the Convention of 2nd Aug. 1839, the Rules of 23rd June, 1843, made under it, and the act of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, confirming them, are temporarily revived (see No. 523 in the text), but semble only as far as regards French fishermen and French sea-fishing boats. In other respects that act stands repealed, and the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), is in force.

(115a) But quære, are not the provisions of the Act of 1868 binding on British subjects? See sect. 5 of that act, and note to 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. cclxxix.

(116) For the French notification of 26th January, 1869, respecting the delay in carrying into effect the Fishery Convention of November 11, 1867, see 14 Hertslet, p. 1200.

appointed, authorized to enforce the provisions of this act, the powers of such officers, the enactments for their protection, and the penalties for disobeying or obstructing them, Ibid. ss. 8, 9, 10 and 11.

529. For the Convention with France and other powers relating to the fisheries in the North Sea, see the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22).

530. All fishing boats, all rigging gear or other appurtenances of fishing boats, all nets, buoys, floats, or other fishing implements whatsoever, found or picked up at sea, shall, as soon as possible, be delivered to the receiver of wreck if the article saved be taken into the United Kingdom, and to the commissary of marine if the article saved be taken into France. The receiver of wreck or the commissary of marine, as the case may be, shall restore the articles saved to the owners thereof, or to their representatives. These functionaries shall fix the amount which the owners shall pay to the salvors. See the Convention in the 1st Sched. to the act, Art. 22.

531. No boat shall anchor between sunset and sunrise on grounds where drift-net fishing is actually going on. This prohibition shall not apply to anchorings which may take place in consequence of accidents, or any other compulsory circumstances. The Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), s. 13, and 1st Sched. Art. 12. See also pp. 1205, 1206.

2. Lights.

532. Vessels fishing with drift nets shall carry on one of their masts two lights, one over the other, 3 feet (1 metre, French) apart. These lights shall be kept up during all the time their nets shall be in the sea between sunset and sunrise. See the Convention in 1st Sched. Art. 13.

533. The act of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, contains similar provisions. See same, reciting Art. 53 of the Convention of 2nd August, 1839. Penalty for breach, see Art. 73.

534. Subject to the exceptions or additions mentioned in the two preceding articles, the fishing boats of the two countries shall conform to the general rules respecting lights which have been adopted by the two countries. See the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), 1st Sched. Art. 14.

535. Arts. 13 and 14 of the first schedule to this act shall, as to all sea-fishing boats within the exclusive fishery limits of the British Islands, and as to British sea-fishing boats outside of these limits, have the same force as if they were regulations respecting lights within the meaning of the acts relating to merchant shipping, with this addition, that any sea-fishery officer shall have the same powers of enforcing such regulations as are given to any officer by such acts, and any infringement of the regulations contained in Arts. 13 and 14 shall be deemed an offence within the meaning of the portion of this act which gives power to sea-fishery officers. Ibid. s. 20.

536. It is forbidden to all boats to anchor between sunset and sunrise on grounds where herring or mackerel drift net fishing is going on. This prohibition does not apply to anchorages which may take place in consequence of accidents, or any other compulsory circumstances, but in such case the master of the boat thus obliged to anchor shall hoist, so that they shall be seen from a distance, two lights placed horizontally, about three feet (one metre, French) apart, and shall keep these lights up all the time the boat shall remain at anchor. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, reciting Art. 52 of Convention of 2nd August, 1839. Penalty for breach, see Art. 73.

537. As to the lights to be carried by fishing vessels generally when at anchor, see c. 11, s. 2.

538. As to lights mentioned in Art. 10 of the Rules of 1879, see 4 P. D. 246.

539. All fishermen are forbidden, except in cases of absolute necessity, to show lights under any other circumstances than those mentioned in the present regulations. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, reciting Art. 54 of Convention of 2nd August, 1839. Penalty for breach, see Art. 73.

3. Trawling.

540. Trawl boats shall not commence fishing at a less distance than three miles from any boat fishing with drift nets. If trawl boats have already shot their nets, they must not come nearer to boats fishing with drift nets than the distance above mentioned. The Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), s. 13, and 1st Sched. Art. 15.

541. As to the lights to be carried by vessels trawling, see c. 11, s. 2.

4. *Drift-net Fishing.

542. No boat fishing with drift nets shall shoot its nets so near to any other boat which has already shot its nets on the fishing ground as to interfere with its operations. The Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), s. 13, and 1st Sched. Art. 16.

543. No decked boat fishing with drift nets shall shoot its nets at a less distance than a quarter of a mile from any undecked boat which is already engaged in fishing. Ibid. Art. 17.

544. Nets shall not be set or anchored in any place where drift-net fishing is actually going on. Ibid. Art. 19.

545. If the spot where fishing is going on should be so near to the fishery limits of one of the two countries that the boats of the other country would, by observing the regulations prescribed by Arts. 15, 16 and 17 preceding, be prevented from taking part in the fishery, such boats shall be at liberty to shoot their nets at a less distance than that so prescribed; but in such case the fishermen shall be responsible for any damage or losses which may be caused by the drifting of their boats. Ibid. Art. 18.

546. No one shall make fast or hold on his boat to the nets, buoys, floats, or any part of the fishing tackle belonging to another boat. Ibid. Art. 20.

546a. No person shall hook or lift up the nets, lines, or other fishing implements belonging to another person. Ibid.

547. When nets of different boats get foul of each other, the master of one boat shall not cut the nets of another boat except by mutual consent, and unless it be found impossible to clear them by other means. Ibid. Art. 21.

548. As to the lights to be carried by vessels drift-net fishing, see cap. 11, s. 2, p. 1237.

549. As to the distance from each other at which decked and undecked herring boats shall shoot their nets, see 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, Arts. 29 to 33. Penalty for breach, see Art. 73.

550. Boats going to fish for mackerel with drift nets are required, when they shall arrive on the fishing ground, to lower

* (117) The Act of 6 & 7 Vict., though repealed, being temporarily revived, as explained supra, No. 523, it is expedient to refer to some of its leading provisions, which are as follows:—

(118) In all cases where the breach of any of the articles, rules or bye-laws, by any French subject within the limits of fishery exclusively reserved to British subjects, or by British subjects whether or not within those limits, shall have caused any loss or damage, any magistrate or justice of the peace may take evidence, award compensation to the injured party, and enforce payment thereof, like a penalty for any offence against the articles may be enforced. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, s. 14.

(119) The words "British vessel" mean every fishing vessel or fishing boat, being Irish or British, or belonging to Guernsey, Jersey, Sark, Alderney, or Man, or island thereunto belonging; and the words "British port" mean any port of Great Britain or Ireland, or of any of the said islands. Ibid. s. 18.

(120) For provisions as to the trial and judgment in a summary manner, and at as little expense as possible, of all differences between fishing vessels, before a British magistrate or French tribunal, as directed by the act, and the fines which may be imposed, see Ibid. ss. 11, 12, and Arts. 69 to 73.

(121) For provisions as to arbitration between fishing vessels on complaint of breaches of the regulations, and as to circumstances likely to cause damage, by the commanders of cruisers, consular agents, collectors of customs, or commissaries of marine of both countries, see Ibid. Arts. 63 to 69, and 98.

(122) For provisions for taking the offending fishing boat into the nearest port, for detaining her there for a period not exceeding four days, for obtaining there evidence on both sides as to the alleged breach, for transmitting the depositions, minutes of proceedings, and other documents relating thereto, duly authenticated, to the consular agent in the port where the trial is to take place, for the communication thereof to the collector of customs, or minister of marine, and for his proceeding, if necessary, with the trial, see Ibid. Arts. 65 to 69.

(123) For provisions empowering any British consul in France to take any statement on oath from any British subject charged with any offence against the Articles of the Convention of the 2nd August, 1839, between this country and France, as to the fisheries between the two countries, and rendering the same admissible in evidence, see 18 & 19 Vict. c. 101, s. 5.

(124) As to the limits of the fishery districts to be observed by the subjects of either nation, see 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, reciting the Convention, Arts. 1 to 5, 34, and 76 to 88.

(125) As to the distance trawl boats shall keep from boats fishing with drift nets, see Ibid. Arts. 24, 25, 26; and drift-net boats from each other, see Ibid. Art. 40. Penalty for breach, see Art. 73.

OWNERS. Pt. II. General Responsibilities of Owners, &c. 1241

all sails, to show that they have taken their berths. Ibid. Art. 39. Penalty for breach, ibid.

551. Fishermen using bratt nets, trammels, and other set or anchored nets, shall place buoys on such nets, in order that vessels sailing in those places may avoid them. Ibid. Art. 43. Penalty for breach, ibid.

552. Such bratt nets, trammels, or other set or anchored nets, shall not, except in unavoidable cases, remain more than twenty-four hours in the sea without being taken up. Ibid. Art. 44. Penalty for breach, ibid.

553. It is forbidden to set or anchor nets or any other fishing implement, in any place where herring or mackerel drift net fishing is going on. Ibid. Art. 57, and see Art. 35. Penalty for breach, ibid.

554. For the purpose of distinguishing by day drift net fishing boats from trawl boats, both shall carry at the masthead vanes, which shall be at least eight inches (twenty centimetres, French) in height, and two feet (sixty-one centimetres) in length. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79 (reciting the convention concerning the fisheries between this country and France), Art. 50.

554a. The colours of these vanes shall be, for—

British trawl boats, red.

French trawl boats, blue.

British drift boats, white and red.

French drift boats, white and blue.

Ibid.

554b. The vanes of drift boats are to be divided vertically into two equal parts, of which the white is to be nearest to the mast. Penalty for breach, ibid.

555. No other fishing boats are to carry vanes similar to those mentioned in the preceding article. Ibid. Art. 51. Penalty for breach, ibid.

556. See for other portions of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, revived by the Fisheries (Oyster, Crab and Lobster) Act, 1877 (c. 42), s. 15, 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), pp. 354—366, where they are set out.*

15. For Cargo.

557. As to the shipowners' responsibilities in reference to damage to cargo, see tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, Pt. VI. p. 588 et seq.

16. Of Cargo.

558. A cargo of blubber became affected by decomposition owing to the unusual duration of the voyage through stress of weather. The master then put into an intermediate port, where the owner of the cargo resided, who however refused to give any directions as to its treatment or otherwise. The master then, acting under advice, treated the cargo and carried it to its destination. The treatment to which the cargo was subjected was necessary to its transport, and it benefited by it. Held, that the owner of the cargo was liable for the expenses incurred by the master in treating the cargo, and for demurrage while the cargo was being so treated. Garriock v. Walker, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 1, p. 100. [SCOTCH.]

559. Per Lord Benholme. It was only the necessity of operating on the cargo to render it capable of transport, and not the fact that it had been increased in value that made its owner liable. Ibid.

* (126) For provisions empowering the Board of Trade to make bye-laws for the more effectual performance of the convention between this country and France, concerning the fisheries between those countries, and the publication and proof of such bye-laws, see 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, ss. 4, 5, 7.

(127) No such bye-laws have been made, but only certain directions issued by H. M. Commissioners of Customs as to the marking and numbering of fishing vessels, as to which, see Order of Feb. 17, 1844, of H. M. Commissioners of Customs, London, No. 14, 1844.

(128) The terms "boats" and "vessels" in the convention are to be considered as synonymous. Ibid.

(129) British and French fishermen fishing in any portion of the seas lying between the coasts of Great Britain and France are subject to the provisions in the act and regulations. See Letter of Board of Trade of April 29, 1846, No. 59, 1846.

562. As to the rights and responsibilities of owners of ship and owners of cargo, in reference to damage to cargo, see tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, pp. 558 et seq.

563. As to carriage of deck cargo, see this tit. Pt. V. c. 1.

17. British Coasting Trade.

1. Of the United Kingdom.

565. The coasting trade of the United Kingdom opened to foreign ships. See 17 & 18 Vict. c. 5, the Harbours and Passing Tolls Act, 1861 (c. 47), s. 10, and the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 141.

566. For the regulations for the engagement and discharge of seamen in home-trade ships; and as to the employment of certificated masters and mates, see tit. SEAMEN.

567. "Home-trade ship" includes every ship employed in trading within the United Kingdom, the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Sark, Alderney, and Man, and the continent of Europe between the river Elbe and Brest inclusive. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 2.

568. "Home-trade passenger ship" means every home-trade ship employed in carrying passengers. Ibid.

2. *Of British Possessions.

569. As to the regulation of the coasting trade of British possessions by the legislatures thereof, subject to certain conditions, see the M. S. (Colonial) Act, 1869 (c. 11), ss. 4, 5.

570. "British possession" means any colony, plantation, island, territory or settlement within her Majesty's dominions, and not within the "United Kingdom." See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 2.

571. Canada is a British possession within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854; and the acts amending the same. See the M. S. (Colonial) Act, 1869 (c. 11), s. 7.

18. Forfeitures.

1. Generally.

572. Offences under s. 103 of the M. S. Act, 1854, punishable with forfeiture, vest the property in the vessel in the Crown immediately upon the commission of any of such offences; and a bond fide purchaser for value, without notice, who becomes such after the commission of the offence, but before seizure, is not protected. The Annandale, 2 P. D. 179, 218; 46 L. J. P. D. & A. 68; 47 ibid. (C. A.) 3; 3 Asp. N.S. 383, 489.

573. As to the forfeiture of steamers under the Passenger Acts and under the Chinese Passenger Act, see this tit. Pt. IV. cc. 5 and 51.

2. Jurisdiction of Courts of Admiralty.

(a) Generally.

574. Any ship which has, either wholly or as to any share therein, become subject to forfeiture, for use of a certificate of registry not legally granted, for assuming or concealing British character, or by reason of false declaration as to qualifiis or may be imposed upon national vessels. (Treaty of Commerce and Extradition between Great Britain and Portugal, with reference to their Indian Possessions, signed at Lisbon, Dec. 26, 1878.) 14 ibid. p. 1121.

(133b) Foreign vessels may continue freely to carry on the coasting trade between the ports of the empire in which there may be a custom-house or a customs' revenue department. cation, or of unqualified persons becoming entitled, may be brought for adjudication before the High Court of Admiralty in England or Ireland, or any court having Admiralty jurisdiction in her Majesty's dominions; and such court may make such order in the case as it may think fit. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), es. 52, 103.

575. As to the forfeiture of ships, boats, &c. for breach of customs regulations, see the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 202; as to the course of procedure for recovering penalties, enforcing forfeitures, and punishing offenders under the Customs Acts, Ibid. ss. 218—274; and as to the application of penalties in the Channel Islands, Ibid. s. 160; and see the Customs Consolidation Act, 1853 (c. 107), s. 183, so far as not repealed by the former act.

(b) To award Share to Seizor.

576. The court in which a ship or share is proceeded against, for forfeiture, for using a certificate of registry not legally granted, for assuming or concealing a British character, or by reason of false declaration as to qualification, or of unqualified person becoming entitled, may award to the seizor such portion of the proceeds of sale of the forfeited ship or share as it may think right. Ibid. ss. 52, 103.

3. Seizors.

(a) Who may be—

577. Any commissioned officer on full pay in the military or naval service of her Majesty, any British officer of customs, or British consular officer, may seize and detain any ship which has, either wholly or as to any share therein, become subject to forfeiture as therein mentioned, and bring her for adjudication before the courts therein mentioned. Ibid.

4. *Costs and Damages.

578. No such officer shall be responsible in respect of any such seizure or detention, notwithstanding the ship is not brought in for adjudication, or is declared not liable to forfeiture, if it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that there were reasonable grounds for seizure or detention; but if no such grounds are shown, the court may award costs and damages to any party aggrieved, and make such other order as it thinks just. Ibid. s. 104.

579. Undoubtedly there may be cases in which there is either mala fides, or that crassa negligentia, which implies malice, which would justify a Court of Admiralty in giving damages, as in an action brought at common law damages may be obtained. Xenos v. Aldersley, 12 Moo. P. C. C. 359.

580. The criterion in Xenos v. Aldersley, supra, applied in considering whether there was probable cause for the seizure of goods for breach of customs ordinances. The real question in that case, following the principle laid down with regard to actions of this description, comes to this, Is there, or is there not, reason to say that the action was so unwarrantably brought, or brought with so little colour, or so little foundation, that it rather implies malice on the part of the plaintiff, or that gross negligence, which is equivalent to it? Wilson v. The Queen, L. R. 1 P. C. 405.

580a. In the Court of Admiralty the proceedings are more convenient, because, in the action in which the main question is disposed of, damages may be awarded. Ibid.

581. An officer of one of H.M.'s ships seizing and detaining a ship under the bona fide belief that there is reasonable cause for suspecting that an offence under the Pacific Islanders Protection Act, 1875 (c. 51), has been committed by that ship is not liable in damages even where the ship is not in fact employed in the commission of any such offence, as where she has taken labourers on board before the act came into operation. Burns v. Nowell, 4 Asp. 323.

581a. See also tit. COSTS, c. 20, s. 12, p. 372.

* (134) Probable cause in all cases of seizure has a fixed and well-known meaning, and imports circumstances which warrant suspicion, though not sufficient to justify condemnation. Locke v. United States, 7 Cranch, 339; The George, 1 Mason, 24. [AMERICAN.]

Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 115. [LOWER CANADA.]

(135) As to what would and would not amount to probable cause of seizure in the American Courts, see Dunlap's Adm. Prac. 2nd ed. 266.

5. Assumption of British Character.(a) Generally.

582. If any person uses the British flag and assumes the British national character on board any ship owned in whole or in part by any persons not entitled by law to own British ships, for the purpose of making such ship appear to be a British ship, the ship shall be forfeited to her Majesty, unless such assumption has been made for the purpose of escaping capture by an enemy or by a foreign ship of war in exercise of some belligerent right. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 103, sub-s. 1.

(b) Evidence.

583. In any proceeding for enforcing forfeiture for use of the British flag and assumption of the British national character against a vessel as not entitled to do so, the burden of proving a title to do so lies upon the owners so acting. Ibid. s. 103.

6. Concealment of British Character.

584. If the master or owner of any British ship does or permits to be done any thing, or carries or permits to be carried any documents, with intent to conceal the British character of such ship from any person entitled by British law to inquire into the same, or to assume a foreign character, or with intent to deceive any such person, such ship shall be forfeited to her Majesty; and the master, if he is privy to the commission of the offence, is guilty of a misdemeanour. Ibid. sub-s. 2.

585. A British subject, to prevent the seizure of his vessel as unseaworthy, falsely represented to the collector of customs at the port of registry that he had sold her to foreigners, and so procured the closing of the registry, and sailed her under a foreign certificate. Held, that the vessel was liable to forfeiture under the 103rd section of the M. S. Act, 1854. The Sceptre, 3 Asp. N.S. 269.

See also No. 573.

7. Unqualified Person entitled.

586. If any unqualified person, except in the case of such transmitted interests as therein mentioned, acquires as owner any interest, legal or beneficial, in a ship using a British flag and assuming the British character, such interest shall be forfeited to her Majesty. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 103, sub-s. 3.

587. For provisions for forfeiture of ship or share belonging to unqualified owner, if application for a sale thereof is not made within the time therein limited, to the proper court therein mentioned, or if the application is refused by the court, see Ibid. s. 64; and Pt. I. c. 3, s. 26, p. 1205.

8. False Declaration of Qualification.

588. If any person, on behalf of himself or any other person or body of persons, wilfully makes a false declaration touching his or their qualification to own British ships or shares therein, he is guilty of a misdemeanour; and the ship or share in respect of which such declaration is made, if not forfeited under a foregoing provision, shall, to the extent of the interest therein of the declarant, and, unless it is shown that he had no authority to make the same for the parties interested, be forfeited to her Majesty. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 103, sub-s. 4.

9. Use of Illegal Certificate of Registry.

589. If the master or owner of any ship attempts to use for her navigation a certificate of registry not legally granted, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and any commissioned officer on full pay in the military or naval service of her Majesty, any British officer of customs, or any British consular officer, may seize and detain her, and bring her for adjudication before the High Court of Admiralty in England or Ireland or any court having Admiralty jurisdiction in her Majesty's dominions; and if such court is of opinion that such use or attempt at use has taken place, it shall pronounce the ship, her tackle, apparel, and furniture, forfeited to her Majesty, and may award such portion of the proceeds of sale of such ship as it may think just to the officer so bringing her in for adjudication. Ibid. s. 52.

19. Non-recognized British Ship.

590. Whenever it is declared by this act that a ship belonging to any person or body corporate qualified according to this act to be owners of British ships shall not be recognized as a British ship, such ship shall not be entitled to any benefits or protection enjoyed by British ships, nor to use the British flag or assume the British national character; but, as regards payment of dues, liability to pains and penalties, and punishment of offences on board her, shall be dealt with as if she were a recognized British ship. Ibid. s. 106.

591. The provisions contained in the ninth part of the M. S. Act, 1854, for the limitation of liability of owners are not to extend to any British ship not being a recognized British ship within the meaning of the act. Ibid. s. 516.

592. If any alteration is made in the length or capacity of the space allowed for the propelling power, or any cabins are fitted up in such space, the ship is to be deemed a ship not registered until re-measured. Ibid. s. 23, sub-s. 4.

593. Whenever any registered ship is so altered as not to correspond with the particulars in the register-book, such alterations must be registered, or the ship registered anew, and, in default, the ship is to be deemed not duly registered and not to be recognized as a British ship. Ibid. ss. 84—87.

20. Non-registered Owner.

594. Whenever any person is beneficially interested, otherwise than by mortgage, in any ship or share registered in the name of another person as owner, both such persons shall be subject to all pecuniary penalties imposed by this or by any other act on owners of ships or shares therein, and proceedings may be taken for the enforcement of any such penalties against both or either of them, with or without joining the other. Ibid. s. 100.

21. Colours.

1. Generally.

595. The colours which may be worn by merchant ships are the red ensign and the union jack, with a white border. Ibid. s. 105.

2. Improper.

(a) Generally.*

596. If any other colours, or those usually worn by her Majesty's ships, or resembling them, or the pendant carried by her Majesty's ships, are hoisted on board any British merchant ship or boat without warrant from her Majesty or the Admiralty, penalty against the master, or owner if on board, and every person hoisting or assisting in hoisting the same, not exceeding £500. Ibid.

(b) Seizors.

597. Any officer on full pay in the Queen's military or naval service, any British officer of customs, or any British consular officer, may board any such ship or boat, and take away such jack, colours, or pendant. Ibid.

(c) Forfeiture.

598. The jack, colours, or pendant so seized are forfeited to her Majesty. Ibid.

* (136) Cases of wearing illegal colours were formerly within the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty, but they were not of frequent occurrence. It generally happened that when a complaint was made against the master of a vessel for wearing illegal colours, the complaint was forwarded* to the Lords of the Admiralty, who sent instructions to their proctor to proceed against him. This generally produced a memorial to the Lords of the Admiralty, and where fair grounds were stated as an excuse or in palliation of the offence, the penalty was not sued for, but in other cases which called for punishment they were proceeded with and the penalty exacted. See Evidence of Sir Herbert Jenner before the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Admiralty Courts (August 15, 1833), p. 35.

(137) For the cases in the Court of Admiralty thereon, see The Minerva, 3 C. Rob. 34; The King in his Office of Admiralty v. Miller, 1 Hagg. 197; The King v. Benson, 3 Hagg. 96; The Queen in her Office of Admiralty v. Ewen, 2 Jur. N.S. 454.

(138) The provisions in 8 & 9 Vict. c. 87, s. 10, as to the mode of procedure in the Admiralty Court and elsewhere against persons for hoisting illegal colours, are repealed by the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), and are not re-enacted in sect. 105 of the M. S. Act, 1854, or elsewhere. It would seem, therefore, that in default of express provision the Admiralty Court had no longer any jurisdiction in this matter, but that the course of procedure to enforce the penalty must be by penal action in the Court of Queen's Bench by her Majesty's Attorney-General, ex officio.

22. Lights and Fog Signals.

1. Generally.

599. The acts relating to the manufacturing, keeping, and carrying of gunpowder, nitro-glycerine, and other explosive substances include fog signals, where these are of an explosive nature, are the Explosives Act, 1875 (c. 17), s. 3, and the Explosive Substances Act, 1883 (c. 3), s. 8. See as to dangerous goods, Pt. V.

600. As to the lights and fog signals to be used by ships under weigh or at anchor, see tit. COLLISION, Pts. V. and VI., p. 178.

2. Inspection and Certificate.*

601. The surveyors under the third part of the M. S. Act, 1854, or such other persons as the Board of Trade may appoint, may inspect any ships for the purpose of seeing they are properly provided with lights and fog signals, and shall for that purpose have the powers given to inspectors by sect. 14 of the M. S. Act, 1854. If any such officer finds any ship is not so provided, he shall give the master or owner notice in writing, pointing out the deficiency, and what is, in his opinion, requisite in order to remedy it. Every notice so given shall be communicated as directed by the Board of Trade to the collector or collectors of customs at any port from which such ship may seek to clear or at which her transire is to be obtained; and no collector to whom such communication is made shall clear such ship outwards, grant her a transire, or allow her to proceed to sea, without a certificate under the hand of one of such officers that the ship is properly provided with lights and fog signals. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 30.

602. When the survey of a ship is made for the purpose of a declaration or certificate under this act, the person appointed to make the survey shall, if so required by the owner, be accompanied on the survey by some person appointed by the owner, and if the two persons agree, there shall be no appeal to the Court of Survey. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 14.

3. Appeal from Refusal of Certificate.

603. If a shipowner feels aggrieved by the refusal of the above required certificate as to lights and fog signals, he may appeal in the prescribed manner to the Court of Survey for the port or district where the ship then is. Ibid.

604. On such appeal the judge shall report on the question raised by the appeal to the Board of Trade, which, when satisfied that the requirements of the report and the other provisions of the enactments have been complied with, may give or direct a surveyor or person duly appointed, to give the required certificate. Ibid.

605. Subject as therein mentioned the provisions of this act as to the Court of Survey and appeals thereto apply to the Court of Survey when acting under this section. Ibid.

606. As to Courts of Survey and the procedure therein, see Pt. III. c. 2, p. 1265.

4. Costs of Appeal.†

See tit. Costs, c. 30, s. 6, p. 398.

* (139) As to the fees and expenses to be charged in respect of the inspection of lights and fog signals, see note 59, p. 1209.

(140) For form of surveyor of Board of Trade's certificate of inspection of lights and fog signals, see 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. eccliii.

† (141) As to the inspection by Board of Trade officers of lights and fog signals generally, see Board of Trade Instructions as to survey of passenger accommodation, lights, &c., 1884, pp. 41—53, pars. 70—90.

(142) Outdoor officers of customs are authorized to report to surveyors any cases of infringements of the rules which may come under their notice, and surveyors are authorized to take every opportunity of inspecting the lights of vessels within their districts, especially where they have reason to believe the regulations are wholly or partially evaded. The surveyors always inspect lights and fog signals whenever called upon to inspect crew spaces or otherwise. Ibid. par. 71.

(143) On surveying lights and fog signals, the surveyor requires from the master the last certificate of inspection, and compares the entries therein with the description and position of the lanthorns and screens on board, and, if he finds any variation, is authorized and required to withdraw the certificate; but when the regulations have been complied with, he makes an indorsement to that effect on the certificate, and returns it to the master or owner. A new certificate is not to be issued in such a case. Ibid.

(144) A surveyor, on surveying lanthorns for the first time, impresses part of the lanthorn with a mark fixed by the Board of Trade, and the description of the mark is inserted in the certificate. He takes care, however, not to impair the efficiency of the lanthorn in impressing the mark. Ibid. par. 72.

23. Signals of Distress.

607. The following are signals of distress, whether used together or separately:—

In the daytime—

1. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute.
2. The international code signal of distress indicated by N C.
3. The distant signal, consisting of a square flag having either above or below it a ball, or anything resembling a ball.

At night—

1. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute.

2. Flames on the ship (as from a burning tar barrel, oil barrel, &c.).

3. Rockets or shells, of any colour or description, fired one at a time, at short intervals. See M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 18, and first schedule.

608. Any master who uses or causes or permits to be used any of these signals of distress, except in case of distress, is liable to pay compensation for any labour, risk or loss in consequence thereof, and such compensation may, without prejudice to any other remedy, be recovered like salvage. Ibid.

(145) When the lights or fog signals are not fitted and provided in accordance with the regulations, the inspecting surveyor fills up a form specifying the additions or alterations required, and gives or sends it by post to the owner, master or agent. A report on the proper form is then to be sent at once to the collector of customs, who will either refuse to grant the vessel a clearance, or to permit her to proceed to sea until he receives from the surveyor a report on the proper form that the regulations have been complied with. Ibid. par. 73.

(146) A surveyor exercises his discretion in cases involving the detention of a ship under such circumstances, and in some cases abstains from detaining her, as, for instance, when the ship is not about to leave the United Kingdom, and when she is supplied with lights, but there is a question as to their complying with the regulations with respect to fittings, power, condition, &c., and when there is no reason to apprehend delay or the good faith of the owner or master in carrying the regulations into effect; but he should forward a notice to the owner, master, or agent. Ibid. pars. 73, 74.

(147) If a ship leaves one port for another port in the United Kingdom before the surveyor is satisfied that the requirements have been complied with, he communicates with the port or district to which the ship is proceeding. Ibid. par. 74.

(148) When the required alterations have been made and are satisfactory to the surveyor, he fills up and sends to the owner or master a notification thereof on the proper form, specifying his fees and expenses; and when these have been paid the surveyor sends to the collector a certificate thereof on the proper form and a certificate of inspection to the owner, master, or agent, and a copy thereof to the Board of Trade. This certificate is also entered in the office light book with the surveyor's rotation number for light certificates. The rotation number is also entered on the original certificate and on the copy sent to the Board of Trade. Ibid. par. 75.

(149) Surveyors are not required to grant the usual declaration unless the lights will, in all conditions of the ship and her sails, be clearly seen in the direction and for the distance required. Ibid. par. 83.

(150) Surveyors are not to advise owners how to arrange or modify sails, &c., interfering with the lights, but are to decline giving declarations if the regulations are not complied with. The surveyor, if he thinks it necessary, sees the sails set, and always goes aloft to the masthead to inspect the lights from there, or gets a colleague to do so in his presence. Ibid.

(151) If the master or owner neglects or refuses to alter the position of the lanterns, or to cut away the required portions of the lower courses as the surveyor directs, the surveyor reports the fact to the collector of customs, in order that he may stop the ship; and the collector refuses a clearance until he receives a report from the surveyor to the effect that these requirements have been complied with. Ibid. par. 84.

(152) If after a ship has been passed by the surveyor as carrying proper lights, properly constructed, the master fixes them in such a position that they are or may be obscured by the square-sail, and are not visible, as required by the regulations, he is guilty of a misdemeanour under s. 27 of the M. S. Act, 1872. Ibid. par. 85.

(153) Surveyors are entitled to inspect the lights, &c. of foreign ships within British jurisdiction; and when a surveyor has reason to believe that the lights of a foreign ship are imperfect or the screen is improperly placed, he inspects them, and points out to the master or agent, if on board the vessel, where they are not in accordance with the regulations, and reports to the Board of Trade to the same effect. Ibid. par. 90. See also par. 78 as to the construction and range of lights.

24. Signals for Pilots.

609. The following are the signals which may be used together or separately by ships wanting a pilot:—

In the daytime—

1. To be hoisted at the fore, the jack or other national colour usually worn by merchant ships, having round it a white border, one-fifth of the breadth of the flag; or
2. The international code pilotage signal indicated by P T.

At night—

1. The pyrotechnic or blue light every fifteen minutes; or
2. A bright white light, flashed or shown at short intervals just above the bulwarks, for about a minute at a time. See M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 19, and second schedule.

610. Penalty against any master who uses, causes or permits to be used, any of these signals for any other purpose than that of summoning a pilot, or any other signal for a pilot, not exceeding £20. Ibid. s. 19.

25. Private Signals.*

611. Any shipowner desirous of using, for purposes of a private code, any rockets, lights, or other similar signals, may register them with the Board of Trade, which shall give public notice of the signals so registered; but the Board may refuse to register any signals which in their opinion cannot easily be distinguished from signals of distress or signals for pilots. Ibid. s. 21.

26. Other Signals.

612. Her Majesty may, from time to time, by Order in Council, repeal or alter the rules as to signals in the schedules to this act, or make new rules. Ibid. s. 20.

27. Ship's Boats, Rafts and Buoys.†

613. (1) No decked ship (except ships used solely as steam tugs and ships engaged in the whale fishery) shall proceed to sea from any place in the United Kingdom unless provided, according to her tonnage and class, with boats duly supplied with all requisites for use, and not fewer in number nor less in their cubic contents than those specified in table S. in the schedule: (2) no ship carrying more than ten passengers shall proceed to sea from any place in the United Kingdom unless, in addition to the above, she is provided with a lifeboat furnished with all requisites for use, or unless one of her boats is rendered buoyant after the manner of a lifeboat, and unless she is also provided with two life-buoys: such boats and life-buoys shall be kept so as to be at all times fit and ready for use. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 292.

614. Penalty for breach or for loss or injury thereto through the wilful fault or negligence of the owner or master; or, if the master wilfully neglects to replace or repair them on the first opportunity; against owner appearing to be in fault, not exceeding £100, and against the master appearing to be in fault, not exceeding £50. Ibid. ss. 292, 293.

615. Officers of customs are not to grant a clearance or transire unless the ship is so provided; and if the ship attempts to go to sea without, the officer may detain her until she is so provided. Ibid. s. 294.

616. Sections 292 to 294 apply to all British ships and to all foreign steam ships carrying passengers between places in the United Kingdom. Ibid. s. 291.

617. In the case of any ship surveyed under the fourth part of the M. S. Act, 1854, the Board of Trade may, at the request of the owners, authorize a reduction in the number and dimensions of her boats, and the substitution for them of rafts or other appliances for saving life, so that they are sufficient for the number of persons on board. The provisions of sect. 293 of the principal act are extended to such rafts and appliances. See M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 15.

618. As to such appliances on board "passenger ships," see this tit. Pt. IV. cap. 26, p. 1295.

28. Steamers' Safety Valves.

619. If any person places an undue weight on the safety valve of any steam buoys, see Instructions as to the survey of the hulls, equipment and machinery of steamships carrying passengers, 1884, pars. 23—34.

ship, penalty not exceeding £100, in addition to any other liability. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 302.*

29. Fire-hose to Steamers.

620. Every seagoing steam ship (unless used solely as a steam tug) shall be provided with a hose for extinguishing fire, and capable of being connected with the engines. Penalty for default against the owner appearing in fault not exceeding £100, and against the master appearing in fault, not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 301, sub-s. 3.

30. Official Logs.

621. See tit. EVIDENCE, pp. 434—437; and for their form, see 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. ccccxlii.

31. Duty to declare National Character of Ship.

622. No officer of customs shall grant a clearance or transire for any ship until the master has declared to him the name of the nation to which she belongs, and such officer shall thereupon inscribe such name on the clearance or transire; if the ship attempts to proceed to sea without such clearance or transire, the officer may detain her until such declaration is made. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 102.

32. Duty to assist colliding Ship.

623. See tit. COLLISION, Pt. I. c. 5, p. 188.

33. Effect of Breach of Regulations for preventing Collisions.

623a. See tit. COLLISION, Pt. IV. c. 2, s. 5, p. 215.

34. Wrecks and Removal of Wrecks.

624. As to wrecks and removal of wrecks, see tit. WRECK.

35. Deposit of Documents on arrival at Foreign Port.

1. Generally.

625.—(1.) Whenever any ship in whatever part of her Majesty's dominions she is registered (except ships whose business for the time being is to carry passengers), arrives at any foreign port where there is a British consular officer, or at any port in any British possession abroad, and remains thereat for forty-eight hours, the master shall, within forty-eight hours of the ship's arrival, deliver to such consular officer, or to the chief officer of customs (as the case may be), the agreement with the crew, and all indentures and assignments of apprenticeships; or in the case of a ship belonging to a British possession, such of the documents as such ship is provided with: (2.) Such officer shall keep such documents during the ship's stay in such port, and, in cases where any indorsements upon the agreement are hereby required, shall duly make the same, and return the documents to the master a reasonable time before his departure, with a certificate indorsed on the agreement, stating when the same were delivered and returned: (3.) If it appears that the required forms have been neglected, or that the existing laws have been transgressed, such officer shall make an indorsement to that effect on the agreement, and forthwith transmit a copy of such indorsement, with the fullest information he can collect regarding such neglect or transgression, to the Registrar-general of Shipping and Seamen. Penalty against any master for default not exceeding £20; and in the prosecution it lies on the master to produce the certificate, or prove that he duly obtained it, or that it was impracticable for him so to do. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 279.

2. Exemptions.

626. All registered seagoing ships exclusively employed in fishing on the coasts of the United Kingdom are exempted from the operation of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 279, as to the deposit of agreements, indentures, and assignments on arrival at a foreign port with the consul or officer of customs there. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 13.

627. Seagoing ships belonging to any of the three General Lighthouse Boards are similarly exempted. Ibid.

628. Seagoing ships being pleasure yachts are similarly exempted. Ibid.

36. Lists of Crew, Marriages, &c.

1. Foreign-going Ships.

629. Every master of every foreign-going ship of which the crew is discharged in the United Kingdom, in whatever part of her Majesty's dominions it is registered, and of every home-trade ship, shall make out and sign a list in a form sanctioned by the Board of Trade, containing:—

- (1.) The number and date of the ship's register and her registered tonnage:
- (2.) The length and general nature of the voyage or employment:
- (3.) The christian names, surnames, ages, and places of birth of all the crew, including the master and apprentices; their qualities on board, their last ships or other employments, and the dates and places of their joining the ship:
- (4.) The names of any members of the crew who have died or otherwise ceased to belong to the ship, with the times, places, causes, and circumstances thereof:
- (5.) The names of any members of the crew who have been maimed or hurt, with the times, places, causes, and circumstances thereof:
- (6.) The wages due to any of the crew who have died, and the times of their respective deaths:
- (7.) The clothes and other effects belonging to any of the crew who have died, with a statement of the manner in which they have been dealt with, and the money for which any of them have been sold:
- (8.) Every marriage which takes place on board, with the date thereof, and the names and ages of the parties.

See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 273, as amended by the Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1874 (c. 88), s. 37.

630. In the case of foreign-going ships, the master shall, within forty-eight hours after the ship's arrival at her port of destination in the United Kingdom, or upon the discharge of the crew, which ever first happens, deliver to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office before whom the crew is discharged such list: penalty for default not exceeding five pounds; such superintendent shall thereupon give to the master a certificate of such delivery; no officer of customs shall clear inwards any foreign-going ship without the production of such certificate, and any such officer may detain the ship until the same is produced. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 274.

2. Home-trade Ships.

631. The master or owner of every home-trade ship shall, within twenty-one days after the 30th of June and 31st of December in every year, transmit or deliver to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office in the United Kingdom such list for the preceding half-year: penalty for default not exceeding £5; and such superintendent shall give to the master or owner a certificate of such transmission or delivery; and no officer of customs shall grant a clearance or transire for any home-trade ship without the production of such certificate, and any such officer may detain any such ship until the same is produced. Ibid. s. 275.

632. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the delivery or transmission of lists of crews to the Registrar-general of Seamen shall apply to all fishing vessels belonging to the United Kingdom, whether employed exclusively on the coasts of the United Kingdom or not; to all ships belonging to the Trinity House, or the commissioners of northern lighthouses constituted as hereinafter mentioned, or the port of Dublin corporation; and to all pleasure yachts, and to the owners, masters, and crews of such ships. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the delivery and transmission of lists of crews, shall apply to all seagoing British ships, wherever registered, of which the crews are discharged, or whose final port of destination is in the United Kingdom, and to the owners, masters, and crews of such ships. Ibid. s. 109.

3. Ships ceasing to be Foreign-going or Home-trade Ships.

633. If any ship ceases by reason of transfer of ownership or change of employment to fall within the definition of a foreign-going or of a home-trade ship, the master or owner thereof shall, if such ship is then in the United Kingdom, within one month, and if she is elsewhere within six months, deliver or transmit to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office at the port to which the ship has belonged, such list, duly made out to the time at which she ceased to be a foreign-going or home-trade ship, penalty for default not exceeding £10; and if any ship is lost or abandoned, the master or owner thereof shall, if practicable, and, as soon as possible, deliver or transmit to the superintendent of the mercantile marine office at the port to which the ship belonged such list, duly made out to the time of such loss or abandonment, penalty for default not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 276.

37. Lists of Changes in Crew.

634. The master of every foreign-going ship of which the crew has been engaged before a superintendent of a mercantile marine office shall before leaving the United Kingdom sign and send to the nearest superintendent a statement on a Board of Trade form of every change in his crew before leaving the United Kingdom, penalty for default not exceeding £5; such statement shall be admissible in evidence, subject to all just exceptions. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 158, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 15.

38. Registration of Births and Deaths.

635. The general provisions of this act do not apply to the registration of births and deaths on board a vessel at sea. See the Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1874 (c. 88), s. 37.

636. The captain or master or other person in charge of a British ship shall as soon as may be after the birth of a child or death of a person on board, record in his log book, or otherwise, the fact of such birth or death, and the particulars required by this act, or such of them as may be known to him, and shall (unless a Queen's ship), upon her arrival at any port of the United Kingdom, or, as the Board of Trade may direct, deliver or send as that Board may direct, a return of such record to the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen. Ibid. sub-s. 1.

637. Where a ship which is not a

British ship carries passengers to or from any port of the United Kingdom as her port of destination or departure, the provisions of this section apply to the master or other person in charge like a British ship. Ibid. sub-s. 2.

638. Where the return is directed by the Board of Trade (whether the ship is British or foreign) to be delivered upon the arrival of the ship or the discharge of the crew, or otherwise, at any place out of the United Kingdom, that Board may direct the return to be delivered, if within British dominions, to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office, or collector of customs there, and if in a foreign place to the principal British consular officer there, and such functionary shall promptly send the same to the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen. Ibid. sub-s. 3.

638a. For provisions when it appears from the return that the father of the child so born, or, if a bastard, the mother, or that the person dead was a Scotch or Irish British subject, for the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen to send a certified copy of so much of the return to the Registrar-General of Births and Deaths in Scotland or Ireland accordingly. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

639. For provisions for the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen sending to the Registrar-General of Births and Deaths in England a certified copy of every other such return, or that part of it which is not so sent to the Registrar-General of Births and Deaths in Scotland and Ireland. Ibid. sub-s. 5.

639a. The captain or other person in charge of a Queen's ship shall, upon her arrival in any port of the United Kingdom, or at such times and in such manner as the Commissioners of the Admiralty may direct, send a return of the facts recorded in pursuance of this section to the Registrar-General of Births and Deaths, to whom, if a merchant ship, the copy return would be sent by the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen. Ibid. sub-s. 6.

640. For provisions as to every Registrar-General of Births and Deaths receiving any return or copy, recording the same in the Marine Register Book, and as to such book being deemed a certified copy of a register book within the meaning of the Registration of Births and Deaths Acts. Ibid. sub-s. 7.

641. Penalty for breach against every captain, master, or person in charge not exceeding £5, recoverable like a penalty under the M. S. Act, 1854. Ibid. sub-s. 8.

642. This section extends to all places and persons in British jurisdiction. See the Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1874 (c. 88), s. 37, sub-s. 8.

642a. Terms in this section have the same meaning as in the M. S. Act, 1854. Ibid.

643. The particulars to be registered by the captain of a ship concerning a birth or death at sea, are, for a birth—Date of birth—. Name and sex of child—. Name, surname, and rank, profession, or occupation of father. Name, surname, and maiden surname of mother. Nationality and last place of abode of father and mother. And for a death—Date of death—. Name and surname—. Sex—. Age—. Rank, profession, or occupation—. Nationality, and last place of abode—. Cause of death—. See the Fourth Schedule to the Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1874.

39. Notice of Loss of Ship.

644. If any registered ship is actually or constructively lost, taken by the enemy, burnt or broken up, or by reason of a transfer to unqualified persons or otherwise, ceases to be a British ship, every person who at that time owns such ship or any share therein shall, immediately upon knowledge of any such occurrence, if no notice thereof has already been given to the registrar at her port of registry, give such notice to him, and he shall make an entry thereof in his register book; and, except in cases where the certificate of registry is lost or destroyed, the master of every such ship shall immediately, if such event occurs in port, but if elsewhere, then within ten days after his arrival in port, deliver the certificate of registry to the registrar, or, if there be no registrar, to the British consular officer at such port, and such registrar if he is not himself the registrar of her port of registry, or such British consular officer, shall forthwith forward the certificate so delivered to him to the registrar of the port of registry of the ship. Penalty for breach against owner and master, not exceeding £100. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 53.

40. Notice of Ship having ceased to be British.

645. In case of a ship, by reason of her transfer to an unqualified person or otherwise, ceasing to be British, the like notifications of the fact and delivery up of the certificate of registry are to be made under the like penalty to the same authority by every person who at that time owned the ship or any share therein immediately on his obtaining knowledge of the occurrence. Ibid.

41. Notice of apprehended Loss of Ship.

646. If the managing owner, or, if none such, the ship's husband of any British ship has reason to apprehend it has been lost, he shall, as soon as conveniently may be, send to the Board of Trade notice in writing of such loss and of the probable occasion thereof, stating the name of the ship, her official number (if any), and the port to which she belongs. Penalty for breach, not exceeding £50. Ibid. 1873 (c. 85), s. 22.

42. Notice of Ship having caused or sustained Injury or Loss of Life.

647. Whenever any steamship has sustained or caused any loss of life or serious injury to any person, or has received any material damage affecting her seaworthiness or her efficiency in hull or machinery, the owner or master shall, within twenty-four hours afterwards, or as soon thereafter as possible, send to the Board of Trade, by letter signed by such owner or master, a report of such accident or damage, and of the probable occasion thereof, stating the name of the ship, the port to which she belongs, and the place where she is. Penalty against the owner or master neglecting so to do, not exceeding £50. Ibid. 1854 (c. 104), s. 326.

43. Notice of Explosives having caused Loss of Life or Personal Injury.

648. When there occurs any accident, causing loss of life or personal injury in the carriage by any ship or boat of any explosive, the owner or master thereof, and the owner of the explosive, must forthwith cause notice of such accident, and of loss of life or personal injury to be sent to the Secretary of State. See the Explosives Act, 1875 (c. 17), s. 63.

44. Proof of Execution of Documents.

649. Any document required by this act to be executed in the presence of or to be attested by any witness or witnesses, may be proved by the evidence of any person who is able to bear witness to the requisite facts, without calling the attesting witness or witnesses or any of them. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 526.

45. Service of Documents.

650. Service of any summons or other matter in any legal proceeding under this act shall be good service, if made personally on the person to be served, or at his last place of abode, or if made by leaving such summons for him on board any ship to which he may belong, with the person being or appearing to be in command or charge of such ship. Ibid. s. 522.

651. Any document required, for the purpose of this act, to be served on the master, shall be served, where there is no master, and the ship is in the United Kingdom, on the managing owner, or if none, on some agent of the owner residing in the United Kingdom, or where he is not known or cannot be found, by affixing a copy to the ship's mast. See the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 35.

652. Any such document may be served by delivering a copy personally to the person to be served, or leaving the same at his last place of abode, or in the case of a master by leaving it for him on board the ship with the person appearing to be in charge. Ibid.

652a. Penalty for obstructing service on the master not exceeding ten pounds, and if the owner or master is privy to it he is guilty of a misdemeanor. Ibid.

653. This act is to be construed as one with the M. S. Act, 1854, and the acts amending the same. Ibid. s. 2.

46. Sea Apprentices.

654. As to the execution of indentures of sea apprentices generally and in duplicate; as to the duty, in the United Kingdom, of the master of the apprentice, within seven days after execution of the indentures, to transmit them to the Registrar-general of Shipping and Seamen, or some superintendent, who is to record one part and endorse on the other that it has been recorded, and re-deliver it to the master; as to the duty of the master of every foreign-going ship, before carrying any apprentice to sea from any place in the United Kingdom, to produce the apprentice, his indenture, and the assignments thereof, if any, to the superintendent before whom the crew is engaged; and the dates of the indenture and assignments, and where registered, and the name of the apprentice are to be entered on the shipping agreement, penalty for breach not exceeding £5; as to the duty of the master of the apprentice whenever the indenture is assigned or cancelled, or the apprentice deserts or dies, to give notice thereof within seven days afterwards if it happens in the United Kingdom, or, if elsewhere, so soon afterwards as circumstances permit, to the registrar or some superintendent, to be recorded; and as to the penalty for breach not exceeding £10; and, generally, as to sea apprentices, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. I.

48. Dealers in Marine Stores.*

655. For the regulations to be observed under penalties by persons dealing in anchors, cables, sails, old iron or other marine stores, and providing that they shall keep books, and enter therein an account of all such marine stores, and when, where and from whom purchased or received; a description of the vendor and his business and place of abode; that they shall not purchase marine stores from any person under the age of sixteen; and that they shall not cut up any cable or similar article, exceeding five fathoms in length, or unlay it into twine or paper stuff, without obtaining a permit and publishing notice thereof, and providing the mode of proceeding for obtaining such a permit from a justice of the peace having jurisdiction where the dealer resides, and the publication thereof in the newspapers, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 480—482.

* (154) As to prosecutions of marine store dealers, see Stone's Justices Manual, 21st ed. by Kennett, 1882, p. 520.

49. Powers of enforcing Payment of Orders.

656. When any court, justice or magistrate has power to order payment of any seamen's wages, penalties, or other sums of money, if the party directed to pay is the master or owner, and it is not paid as prescribed in the order, the functionary making the order may, in addition to any other powers of compelling payment, direct the amount unpaid to be levied by distress or poinding and sale of the ship, her tackle, furniture and apparel. M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 523.

50. Detention of Ship.

1. Generally.

657. As to the detention of foreign-going ships proceeding to sea without producing agreements and certificates of masters, mates and engineers, see tit. TRADE, BOARD OF—.

658. As to the detention of home-trade ships under similar circumstances, ibid.

659. As to the detention of British ships when medical inspector certifies provisions deficient, and the ship proceeds to sea without the deficiency being made good, see tit. SEAMEN.

660. As to the detention of ship on master's refusal to declare her national character, see this Part, c. 31, p. 1249.

661. As to the detention of ship not proceeding with proper boats, rafts and life-buoys, see this Part, c. 27, p. 1248.

662. As to the detention of home-trade and foreign-going ships proceeding to sea without delivering lists of crew, with marriages, deaths, &c. on board, see c. 36, ss. 1 and 2, p. 1250.

663. As to the detention by the Board of Trade of unsafe or unseaworthy ships, see Pt. III. c. 1, p. 1258.

2. Who may detain.

664. When under the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876, or any of them, a ship is authorized or ordered to be detained, any commissioned officer on full pay in the naval or military service of her Majesty, or any officer of the Board of Trade or Customs, or any British consular officer may detain the ship. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 34.

3. Escape.

665. If the ship after such detention, or after service on the master of any notice of or order for such detention, proceeds to sea before it is released by competent authority: penalty against the master, the owner, and any person sending the ship to sea, if privy to the offence, not exceeding £100. Ibid.

4. Carrying off of Officers.

666. Penalty when a ship takes to sea on board thereof and in the execution of his duty any officer authorized to detain her, or any surveyor or officer of the Board of Trade or Customs, against the owner and master, besides all expenses of and incidental to the officer being so taken to sea, not exceeding £100, or ten pounds a day until the officer returns, or until such time as would enable him to return. Ibid.

51. Persons improperly boarding Ship.

667. Penalty against every person who, not being in her Majesty's service, and duly authorized by law, goes on board any ship before her actual arrival in dock or at the place of her discharge, without the permission of the master, not exceeding £20; and the master or person in charge may take any such person into custody, and deliver him up forthwith to any peace officer, to be taken before a justice, or, in Scotland, the sheriff of the county. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 237.

52. Persons injuring Steamer or molesting Crew.

668. Penalty for injuring steamer or molesting crew not exceeding £20. Ibid. 1862 (c. 63), s. 36.

53. Prosecution of Offenders under M. S. Acts, 1854 and 1876.

1. Generally.*

669. As to the punishment of offences and recovery of penalties before justices

* (155) Although justices of the peace exercising summary jurisdiction are the sole judges of the weight of the evidence given before them, and no other Queen's court will examine whether or not they have formed the right conclusion from it, yet other courts under this act, see M. S. Act. 1854 (c. 104), s. 518; and notes in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. cliii.

669a. A stipendiary magistrate has the same power as two justices of the peace under this act. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 519.

670. The tenth part of this act (ss. 517—543), relating to legal procedure under the act, where no particular country is mentioned, applies to the whole British dominions. Ibid. s. 517.

671. All criminal proceedings under the Seamen's Fund Winding-up Act, 1851, the Pilotage Law Amendment Act, 1853, the Merchant Shipping Law Amendment Act, 1853, or this act, are to be carried on like similar proceedings under the M. S. Act, 1854; and all rules of law, practice, and evidence applicable to such proceedings apply to criminal proceedings under this act. See the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), s. 15.

672. For the purpose of punishment, jurisdiction, and legal proceedings, an offence under this act is an offence under the M. S. Act, 1854. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 40.

673. See further as to jurisdiction over offences, tit. SEAMEN, Pt. V.

674. For provisions as to the trial of offences committed on the sea within a certain distance of the coasts of her Majesty's dominions, defining the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England and Ireland for that purpose, and directing modes of, and restrictions on, procedure, see The Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878 (c. 73).

2. In Scotland.

675. As to the prosecution in Scotland by indictment, criminal letters or criminal libel, for every offence described in this act as a felony or misdemeanour and the punishment thereof; and as to the procedure there on all other prosecutions, complaints, actions, or proceedings in a summary way before the sheriff or two justices, with powers of making arrestments, compelling the attendance of witnesses, and of adjournment; as to the requirements that the proceedings shall be vivâ voce and the sentence in writing; as to the powers of imprisonment in default of payment, of proceeding by default and giving sentence after citation served, of warrant to apprehend in default of appearance, and of backing sentences or decrees; and as to provisions that orders shall be final and not quashed for want of form, and that the general rules in sections 518 to 529 shall as far as applicable extend to Scotland, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 530—543.

676. In the application of this act to Scotland, the provisions as to a prosecution not being instituted except by or with the consent of the Board of Trade do not apply; and as to the analogous legal functionaries there, Ibid. 1876 (c. 80), s. 41.

3. In Ireland.

677. As to the application of this act to Ireland, and the analogous legal functionaries there, Ibid. s. 42.

4. In the Isle of Man.

678. As to the application of this act to the Isle of Man, and the analogous legal functionaries there, Ibid.

5. In British Possessions.

679. All offences under this act shall in any British possession be punishable in any court or by any justice or magistrate in which, or by whom, offences of a like character are at the time ordinarily punishable. Ibid. 1854 (c. 104), s. 518, sub-s. 5.

6. As dependent on Locality.

(a) Generally.

680. For the purpose of jurisdiction under this act, every offence shall be deemed to have been committed, and every cause of complaint to have arisen, in the place where it was committed or arose, or where the offender or person complained against may be. Ibid. s. 520.

(b) Ships off the Coasts.

681. In all cases where any district within which any court, justice, or magistrate has jurisdiction under this or any other act, or at common law, is situate on the coast of any sea, or abutting on or may and ought to examine whether the premises stated by the justices are such as will, in point of law, warrant the conclusion. The Scotia, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 160. [LOWER CANADA.]

projecting into any bay, channel, lake, river, or other navigable water, every such functionary shall have jurisdiction over any ship or boat being on or lying or passing off such coast, or in or near such bay, channel, lake, river, or navigable water, and over all persons on board such ship or boat, or belonging thereto, as if such ship, boat, or persons were within the limits of his original jurisdiction. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 521.

7. Forgery of Documents.

682. Any person forging, or procuring, or assisting, to forge, or fraudulently alter documents required by the second part of this act, is guilty of felony. Ibid. s. 101.

8. Misdemeanours.

683. As to the punishment of misdemeanours under this act in all places in her Majesty's dominions, except Scotland, Ibid. s. 518, and 7 Geo. 4, c. 64.

9. Offences punishable by Imprisonment under Six Months, or Penalty under £100.

684. In all places in her Majesty's dominions, except Scotland, every offence by this act made punishable by imprisonment for any period not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour, or by any penalty not exceeding £100, shall in England and Ireland be prosecuted summarily before any two or more justices, as to England in the manner directed by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and as to Ireland as directed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93, or by any act or acts passed for like purposes. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 518, sub-s. 3, except proceedings under the direction of the Board of Trade. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 65.

685. For provisions that any offence declared by this act to be a misdemeanour may in all places in her Majesty's dominions, except Scotland, be punished by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or penalty not exceeding £100. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 518, sub-s. 2.

10. Appeal from Summary Convictions in Sums above £5, or Imprisonment above One Month.

686. In all cases of summary convictions in England, where the sum adjudged to be paid exceeds £5, or the period of imprisonment one month, any person aggrieved may appeal to the next court of general or quarter sessions holden not less than twelve days after such conviction; but such person must give to the complainant notice in writing of such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, within three days after such conviction, and seven clear days at least before such sessions, and either remain in custody until the sessions, or enter into a recognizance, with two sufficient sureties, to appear at the sessions, try such appeal, abide judgment, and pay costs; and after such notice and recognizance he shall be liberated, if in custody; and the court shall hear and determine the appeal, and make such order therein and as to costs as to it shall seem meet. Ibid. s. 518.

11. Stipendiary Magistrates.

687. Any stipendiary magistrate shall have full power to do alone whatever two justices of the peace are by this act authorized to do. Ibid. s. 519.

688. The harbour master for the time being of Holyhead may be granted H.M.'s commission, and in that case shall have, within the limits of his jurisdiction as harbour master, all the powers of a stipendiary magistrate. See the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 12.

12. Application of Penalties.

689. Any court, justice, or magistrate imposing any penalty under this act, for which no specific application is herein provided, may, if he thinks fit, direct the whole or part thereof to be applied in compensating any person for any wrong or damage he may have sustained by the act or default for which the penalty is imposed, or to be applied in or towards payment of the expenses of the proceedings; and, subject thereto, all penalties recovered in the United Kingdom shall be paid into her Majesty's exchequer as the Treasury may direct, and form part of the consolidated fund, and all penalties recovered in any British possession shall be paid over into the public treasury. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 524.

13. Limitation of Time for Proceedings.

690. No conviction for any offence shall be made under this act in any summary proceeding instituted in the United Kingdom, unless such proceeding is commenced within six months after the offence; or if both or either of the parties are during such time out of the United Kingdom, unless the same is commenced within two months after they both first arrive or are at one time within the same. No conviction for any offence shall be made under this act in any proceeding instituted in any British possession, unless such proceeding is commenced within a similar time. No order for the payment of money shall be made under this act in any summary proceeding instituted in the United Kingdom, unless such proceeding is commenced within six months after the cause of complaint arises; or, if both or either of the parties are during such time out of the United Kingdom, unless the same is commenced within six months after they both first arrive or are at one time within the same. No order for the payment of money shall be made under this act in any summary proceeding instituted in any British possession, unless such proceeding is commenced within a similar time. And no other provision for limiting the time within which summary proceedings may be instituted shall affect any summary proceeding under this act. Ibid. s. 525.

54. Mode of apprehending Offenders on Passenger Ships.

691. It shall be lawful for the master or other officer of any duly-surveyed passenger ship, and for all persons called by him to his assistance, to detain any person who has committed an offence against any one of the provisions of the two last preceding sections of this act (imposing penalties on drunken or disorderly passengers, on persons molesting passengers or crew, forcing their way into the ship and refusing to quit on being ordered, inflicting injury on the ship, and for avoiding payment of fares) whose name and address are unknown to such officer, and to convey such offender before some justice without any warrant or other authority. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 37.

55. As to Surveyors, their Salaries, Expenses and Fees.

See Pt. I. c. 6, p. 1208.

56. For Costs and Damages.

Part III. UNSAFE AND UNSEAWORTHY SHIPS.1. Unsafe Ships (British).1. Detention for Survey.(a) Generally.

692. When a British ship, in any port of the United Kingdom, is, by reason of the defective condition of her hull, equipments, or machinery, or by reason of overloading or improper loading, unfit to proceed to sea without serious danger to human life, having regard to the nature of the service for which she is intended, such ship (hereinafter referred to as "unsafe"), may be detained for survey. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 6.

693. As to who may detain, see Pt. II. c. 50, p. 1254; and as to the overloading or improper loading of deck and grain cargoes, see Pt. V.

(b) On Complaint of Seamen.

694. The Board of Trade, or its detaining officer, on the complaint of one-fourth (being not less than three seamen) of any British ship, that the ship is unsafe, if the complaint is made in sufficient time before sailing, and provided that the Board is satisfied that the complaint is not frivolous or vexatious, shall take proper steps for ascertaining whether the ship ought to be detained under this act, and shall not require security for costs from such seamen complaining. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 11.

See also c. 6, p. 1272.

(c) Exemptions.

695. These provisions do not apply to any vessel employed exclusively in going from place to place in any river or inland water of which the whole or part is in any British possession. Ibid. s. 44.

(d) By Board of Trade.†

696. The Board of Trade, if they have reason to believe on complaint, or otherwise, that a British ship is unsafe, may order her detention for survey. Ibid. s. 6, sub-s. 1.

(e) By Detaining Officer of Board of Trade.‡

697. Any detaining officer appointed

* (156) The powers given to the Board of Trade and their detaining officers under the M. S. Act, 1876, in regard to detaining unsafe ships, do not extend to ships which are not about to proceed to sea, so that any interference with such ships is not justified by the act. See Board of Trade Circular, Sept. 1879, Consecutive Off. No. 153, p. 2.

† (157) When the application is made by one of the public, and direct to the Board of Trade, the mode of procedure is as follows:—An "information" or complaint on a Board of Trade form, headed Surveys 82, which can be obtained free of charge at any Mercantile Marine Office, and at the office of any of the Board's surveyors, is to be sent by the complainant to an assistant-secretary of the Marine Department of the Board of Trade, S.W., containing particulars under five heads, viz.: A., as to the ship; B., as to her usual employment; C., as to the cargo; D., as to the grounds on which the ship is deemed to be unsafe, i. e. of overloading, improper loading, bad stowage, deck cargo, defects in hull, insufficiency of or defects in equipment, or defects in machinery or boilers; and E., as to her equipments; concluding with a general outline of defects, &c., rendering the ship unsafe. It is not necessary that all these particulars should be filled up; but it is better to give as much of the information required as is practicable, and sufficient information should always be given to enable the Board of Trade to identify and find the ship. Ibid. p. 2, and Form Surveys 82.

(158) The information should conclude with a statement of the opinion of the complainant that the ship "is unfit to proceed to sea without serious danger to human life, having regard to the service for which she is intended," and that the facts are reported in order that she may be provisionally detained for survey. The information must be dated, and signed by the complainant, whose signature must be attested by a witness, whose signature is to be appended. Ibid.

‡ (159) The application for detention of a by the Board of Trade has the same power as the Board of Trade of provisionally ordering the detention of a ship for survey. Ibid. sub-s. 9.

2. Detaining Officers.

698. The Board of Trade, with the consent of the Treasury, may from time to time appoint detaining officers. Ibid. sub-s. 8.

699. Any detaining officer so appointed has the same power as the Board of Trade under this section of provisionally ordering the detention of a ship for survey, and of appointing a person or persons to survey her; and if he thinks that a ship so detained by him is not unsafe he may order her to be released. Ibid. sub-s. 9.

700. A detaining officer shall forthwith report to the Board of Trade any order made by him for the detention or release of a ship. Ibid. sub-s. 10.

701. A detaining officer shall have for the purpose of his duties under this act the same powers as an inspector appointed by the Board of Trade under the M. S. Act, 1854. Ibid. s. 12, sub-s. 1.

702. The provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854, with respect to persons wilfully impeding an inspector, or disobeying his orders, apply to persons so impeding any officer having, under this act, the powers of an inspector or surveyor. Ibid. sub-s. 5.

703. As to the powers of such inspectors, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. IV.

3. *Provisional Order of Detention.

704. An order for the provisional detention of the ship, and any order vary-ship as unsafe under this act may be made to the Board of Trade direct, or to one of the Board's detaining officers, and by a Board of Trade officer, or one of the public. A Board of Trade detaining officer may also make the order of his own accord. See Board of Trade Instructions to Detaining Officers, Sept. 1876, Cons. Off. No. 78, p. 2.

(160) When the "information" or complaint is made by one of the public to a detaining officer of the Board of Trade, it must be on form headed Surveys 82A, which may also be obtained free of charge at any Mercantile Marine Office, and at the offices of any of the Board's surveyors. The contents of this form are similar to those in Form Surveys 82, except that it is to be addressed to the detaining officer of the district. Ibid.

(161) Forms 82 and 82A should always be used as required when practicable; but the Board of Trade and a detaining officer will not ignore complaints made by letter, and containing the name and address of the writer. Ibid. p. 3.

(162) When the information or complaint is made by a Board of Trade officer, or an officer of the customs, or coastguard, or a receiver of wreck, to the detaining officer, the application is on form Surveys 82A; but the signature of the complainant need not be witnessed. Ibid. p. 2.

(162a) In case information is sent straight to the Board of Trade, without going through the officer, the Form 82 is used instead of the Form 82A.

(163) When, from circumstances coming under the observation of the detaining officer himself, he orders the provisional detention of a ship, he also fills up form headed Surveys 82A as far as practicable, and sends it to the Board of Trade with the report hereinafter referred to. Ibid. p. 2, par. 5.

(165) One of the assistant-secretaries of the Board then despatches to an officer of customs, or of the Board of Trade in that locality, a document headed Surveys 84, notifying to the officer that an order for provisional detention has been made, instructing him to detain the ship accordingly; to serve at once the notification or statement accompanying it, and which is in the form headed Surveys 85, of the grounds of the detention; to forward to the principal officer of the Board of Trade for that district the instructions also accompanying it, and which are in the form headed Surveys 86; and to report to the Board at once. Ibid.

ing same, shall be served as soon as may be on the master. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 12, sub-s. 2.

705. The plaintiff was the owner of a British ship named the L., which was at the British port of S., and was intended to be employed in the foreign cattle trade. Certain surveyors of the Board of Trade reported, in doubtful terms, that owing to her unusual proportions the L. was an unsafe ship. The Board of Trade thereupon ordered the L. to be provisionally detained. A court of survey was held as to the condition of the L., and the members thereof reported that the L. was not unsafe, and that she ought not to have been detained. The L. was accordingly released. The plaintiff then brought an action against the secretary of the Board of Trade, to recover compensation for the loss to him by reason of the provisional detention. At the trial it was admitted that the L. was a safe ship. The judge, in substance, directed the jury to consider whether it was reasonable in the Board of Trade to detain the L. for sur-her; that the survey will commence within forty-eight hours, unless the principal officer of the Board therein named hears from him (the master of the ship) within that time; that if he, the master, wishes to avail himself of the provisions of sect. 6, sub-sect. 5, of the M. S. Act, 1876, as to selecting an assessor to assist in the survey, he, the master, should inform the principal officer therein named of the Board of Trade of the name of the assessor selected, and that a copy of the surveyor's report and of the further order of the Board will be sent to him, the master, on the completion of the survey, and warning him, the master, against coating the ship with tar or any substance until the survey has been completed. See Board of Trade Instructions to Detaining Officers, Sept. 1876, Cons. Off. No. 78, p. 2, par. 5.

(167) If the detaining officer orders the ship to be provisionally detained, he makes, signs, and dates the report at the foot of the "information" to the effect that he has issued an order accordingly and sent it to the collector of customs in the locality to be served on the parties, and forwards the "information" and report to an assistant-secretary of the Marine Department of the Board of Trade. Ibid.; and see Form 82A.

(168) If the officer does not order provisional detention he forwards the information to the assistant-secretary with a separate letter giving his reasons for not interfering. Ibid.

(169) Every order by a detaining officer for provisional detention of a ship is made on form headed Surveys 84A, and the officer keeps a correct duplicate of it. Ibid. p. 3, and see Form 84A, Cons. Off. No. 78, September, 1876.

(170) This order he sends to the principal officer of customs of the port. It notifies that the detaining officer, having reason to believe the ship to be unsafe, thereby orders her to be provisionally detained for the purpose of survey, and requests the officer to take the necessary steps for detaining her forthwith, taking care that the accompanying notice, headed Surveys 85A, and containing a written statement of the grounds for the ship's detention, is served at once; and it further requires him to return this form 84A, after filling in at the back of it a notification that the form Surveys 85A has been duly served according to the requirements of sect. 35 of M. S. Act, 1876, and stating therein how and on whom it was so served. Ibid. See Forms 84A and 85A.

(170a) If in any case with a view to save time the officer thinks it advisable to depart from this rule, and does not send the order for detention to the customs officer to be served, he may send forms 84A and 85A to one of his own staff, or to any officer of coast guard for the purpose. But he should inform the collector of customs in due course. He should then, immediately on completing form 85A, fill up the report on form 84B, and send it to the Board of Trade. Ibid. p. 3.

(170b) The form Surveys 85A, above referred to, is the notice referred to in form 84A from the officer having authority to detain the ship, to the master of the ship, intimating that he (the officer) has ordered the ship named, and lying as therein mentioned, to be provisionally detained on the grounds therein mentioned, and has given instructions for her survey, that the survey will commence within forty-eight hours, unless he (the officer) hears from him (the master) within that time, and that if he (the master) wishes to avail himself of the provisions of s. 6, sub-s. 5 of M. S. Act, 1876, he (the master) should communicate with him (the officer), and inform him (the officer) of the name of the assessor selected to accompany the appointed surveyor, and that a copy of the surveyor's report and of the further order to be made thereon by the Board of Trade will be sent to him (the master) on the completion of the survey, and warning the master against coating the ship with tar or any substance until the survey is completed. This notice is served by the collector of customs, or his officer, in accordance with s. 35 of M. S. Act, 1876. Ibid. p. 3.

(170c) The Board of Trade have also powers of provisional detention; and where they exercise those powers they instruct the officer as to the steps they require to be taken in each case. Where the Board of Trade order provisional detention they use forms very similar to those above mentioned. Ibid.

vey without a direct affirmation by their surveyors that in their opinion she was unsafe. Held a misdirection: for the proper question to be left to the jury was whether the facts with regard to the L., as she lay at S., which would have been apparent to a person of ordinary skill in examining her and inquiring about her, would have given him reasonable and probable cause to suspect her safety, and to detain her for survey and inquiry. Thompson v. Farrer, 8 Q. B. D. 372; 51 L. J. Q. B. 534; 47 L. T. 117; 4 Asp. 562—C. A.

706. A man was tried and convicted under the M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), s. 11, for sending a ship to sea in an unseaworthy state, upon an indictment which did not aver either that he knew of her being unseaworthy, or that he had not used reasonable means to make her seaworthy. Held, first, that the indictment need not aver that the accused knew the ship to be in an unseaworthy state. Held, secondly, that the indictment need not contain averments negating the use of reasonable means to make and keep the ship seaworthy. Reg. v. Freeman, 9 W. R. C. L. 527—C. C. R.

707. As to service of order, see Pt. II. c. 45, p. 1253.

4. Notice of Grounds of Detention.

708. When a ship has been so provisionally detained there shall be forthwith served on the master a written statement of the grounds of her detention. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 6, sub-s. 2.

709. As to the service of such notice, see this tit. Pt. II. c. 45, p. 1253.

5. Security for Costs.

710. See tit. COSTS, c. 19, p. 366.

6. Surveyors.

711. The Board of Trade may appoint competent persons to survey unsafe ships, and report thereon to the Board. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 6, sub-s. 2.

712. Any detaining officer appointed by the Board of Trade may appoint a person or persons to survey any unsafe ship. Ibid. sub-s. 9.

713. The provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854, with respect to persons wilfully impeding an inspector, or disobeying his orders, apply to persons so impeding any officer having under this act the powers of a surveyor. Ibid. s. 12, sub-s. 5.

714. As to the powers of such inspectors, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. IV.

7. Survey.

715. Any person authorized to make the survey may go on board and inspect

* (171) The instructions headed Surveys 86, above referred to, as accompanying the notification headed Surveys 85, are instructions directed to the principal officer of the Board of Trade for the district in which the ship is lying, informing him that the Board of Trade has ordered the ship to be provisionally detained for survey, and directing him, unless he hears from the owner, agent or master within forty-eight hours after the receipt of these instructions, to the effect that he (the master) wishes to avail himself of the provisions of s. 6, sub-s. 5 of the M. S. Act, 1876, to proceed with the survey; and if there is any delay or difficulty in doing so to report to the Board from day to day, so long as the delay is caused or the difficulty exists, and further directing him, when the survey has been made, to forward a report of the result to the Board on the form headed Surveys 87, and also to forward at the same time a statement containing the particulars and the amount of expenses incurred by him, and further directing him or the surveyor or surveyors appointed to make the survey to communicate, before acting, with the collector of customs at the port therein named, to whom the instructions have been sent. The principal officer, on the receipt of this document, reports to the assistant-secretary of the Board that he has duly noted and will act upon such instructions. The form of this report to the Board is on the back of these instructions. Ibid.

(172) The Board of Trade find it necessary in some cases to appoint one of the members of their consultative staff to make the survey. In such cases they send full information to the local officer, so that facilities for such survey may be afforded. Ibid. p. 5, par. 24.

(173) A list of assessors appointed under s. 6, sub-s. 5 of the M. S. Act, 1876, can be obtained from the superintendent of any Mercantile Marine Office, or from any of the Board of Trade surveyors. See Surveys 85.

(174) When the detaining officer makes the order for provisional detention, he, at the same time that he issues his order headed Surveys 84A for that purpose, reports to the assistant-secretary of the Marine Department of the Board of Trade in a form headed Surveys 84B, the name, port of registry, and official number of the ship detained, where and within what port (if any) she is lying, every part of the ship, machinery, equipments, and cargo, and may require the unloading or removal of any cargo, ballast, or tackle. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 12, sub-s. 4.

(b) With Assessor.

716. The owner or master, before the person appointed to survey the ship makes the survey, may require that he shall be accompanied by such person as the owner or master may select out of the list of assessors for the court of survey. Ibid. s. 6, sub-s. 5.

(c) *Second Survey.

(d) Surveyors' Fees.†

717. All fees payable in respect of the survey of ships under the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876, are to be paid to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office, according to the directions of the Board of Trade, and carried to the Consolidated Fund. Ibid. s. 39.

that he has made provisional detention, and adding the grounds on which he has done so, and making a reference to former papers in the case (if any), and stating that he has on that day given directions to the collector of the port where the ship is lying for the detention of the ship for survey. See Board of Trade Instructions to Detaining Officers, Sept. 1876, Cons. Off. No. 78, p. 2, par. 24.

(175) The detaining officer on ordering provisional detention selects from among his staff a competent person, or in grave cases two persons, to make the survey (Ibid. p. 3, par. 10), and ascertains at once if the owner intends to appoint a surveyor or assessor. Ibid. par. 11.

(176) He also sees that the surveyor or surveyors, with or without a person appointed by the owner, as the case may be, proceeds with the survey as quickly as possible. Ibid. par. 12.

(177) A detaining officer, in lieu of appointing a surveyor or surveyors, may himself, at his own discretion, survey the ship if he thinks proper, when from the nature of the case and his special qualifications he is competent to do so. Ibid. p. 6, par. 27.

(178) In cases in which the detaining officer thinks it desirable that assistance should be obtained from the Board in making the survey of a ship he may have ordered to be provisionally detained, he at once applies to the Board for assistance, stating the nature of the questions or difficulties involved. The engineer-in-chief or his assistant, or the principal surveyor of iron and wooden ships or his assistants, or such other persons as the case may require, will be instructed to take charge of the survey. Ibid. par. 25.

(179) Detaining officers should never hesitate to apply for assistance from London in any case likely to involve any important question as to principle in regard to the strength or construction of the hull, machinery and boilers of ships. Ibid. par. 26.

179b. Upon the detention of a wooden ship the following rules are to be observed in her examination:—the condition of the vessel generally, any irregularity in the shear or other signs of straining, started planks, wasted or slack bolts, started treenails, or bad caulking, are to be noted: the instruments to be used in making these and other examinations are a five-eighth auger, a small hooker, a spike gimlet, or a three-eighth auger. The instrument called a prickler is not to be used, either in examining hull or spars. Ibid.

* (180) If the Board of Trade are not satisfied with the first survey, a further order may be issued for detention for further survey. Ibid. and see form Surveys 87B.

(181) Any recommendations or suggestions as to preparations for further survey or other matters which the Board's officers may have to make are not made on this form, but are written on a separate sheet. Ibid.

(182) If all the parts of the ship have not been seen at the first survey, and the Board of Trade has issued an order for detention for further survey, this form is to be subsequently supplemented by a fresh copy of this form fully filled up, that is to say, a further supplemental report on this form is made and forwarded by the Board of Trade surveyors, with their report of the further survey. Ibid.

182a. When a further survey is ordered, and it is required to open out the vessel to ascertain what repairs are necessary for her intended service, shipwrights should be employed, to be engaged, if possible, by the owner or master. Ibid.

† (183) When, upon inspection, a vessel alleged to be unseaworthy is found to be seaworthy, no fee is chargeable. See Board of Trade Instructions of October, 1879, Circular 756 C. p. 10.

(184) See further as to the fees and expenses to be charged in respect of survey of a vessel alleged to be unsafe or unseaworthy, the travelling and personal expenses and overtime of the different classes of surveyors, charges for tapeholders and messengers, and that no fees are to be paid to the surveyor himself, Ibid. pp. 10—12, 13, 14; and this title, Pt. I. c. 6, p. 1208.

8. Report.*

718. The surveyor reports the result of his survey to the Board of Trade. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 6, sub-ss. 2, 3.

719. When the surveyor and the assessor selected by the owner or master from the list of assessors for the court of survey to accompany the surveyor agree in their report, the Board of Trade shall cause the ship to be detained or released accordingly. When they differ, the Board of Trade may act as if the requisition had not been made, but the owner and master are entitled to an appeal to a court of survey. Ibid. sub-s. 5. See, as to such appeal, c. 2, infra.

9. Release.†

720. The Board of Trade on receiving the report may order the ship to be released. Ibid. sub-s. 3.

* (185) The surveyors' report of their survey of the ship is in the form headed Surveys 87. It contains particulars as to the ship, her port of registry, official number and rig, gross and net registered tonnage, when and where she was built, whether of hard or soft wood, and where then lying, and the names and addresses of the managing owners and master. It specifies whether the ship was surveyed by one or two surveyors of the board only, or whether he or they were accompanied on the survey by an assessor under sect. 6, sub-sect. 5 of M. S. Act, 1876, and if so mentions that assessor's name, and whether the assessor does or does not agree with the Board of Trade surveyors' report. The report then sets out that the ship has been surveyed, and that the surveyors are or are not, as the case may be, of opinion, having regard to the nature of the service for which she is intended, that she is unsafe, and if unsafe, that she is so by reason of the defects therein mentioned. The report is signed by both surveyors who surveyed the ship, i. e., by the surveyors appointed by the Board or the Board's principal officer for the district, as the case may be, and the assessor chosen by or on behalf of the owner, if he concurs in their report. If the assessor chosen by or on behalf of the owner does not concur in the report, he should fill up, date, and sign a separate report in the form headed Surveys 87A. See Board of Trade Instructions to Detaining Officers, Sept. 1876, Consecutive Office No. 78.

(186) Besides the report already alluded to of the Board of Trade surveyor or surveyors, a further report, headed "Surveys 87B, Notes of General Information from Surveyor," and marked "confidential," is made at the same time by the Board of Trade surveyor or surveyors. This confidential survey states the name, port of registry, official number and rig, gross and net registered tonnage of the ship, when, where, and how built, and where then lying, the names and addresses of her managing owner and master, the condition of the ship and her equipments outboard, on deck, and below the deck, and detailing the condition of the various parts under those heads, and closing with a summary, stating what defect or defects collectively in their or his opinion render the ship unfit to proceed to sea without serious danger to human life, and reporting accordingly. The report is dated and signed by the surveyors or surveyor. Ibid.

(187) The reports both of the Board of Trade surveyor or surveyors and of the assessor are sent to the Board of Trade when the Board detains the ship and orders the survey, and to the Board's detaining officer when he detains the ship and orders the survey. Ibid. p. 4, pars. 14, 15.

(188) If the surveyor or surveyors, as the case may be, report that the ship is unsafe and requires repairs, the detaining officer, in forwarding the report or reports to the Board of Trade, adds his own observations and recommendations, and his previous order for the provisional detention of the ship continues in force. This, or the officer's release of the ship, or the surveyors' report that she is not unsafe, constitutes his last independent action in the matter, future stages of the case being conducted by the Board of Trade, which communicates with the parties and sends such instructions to the detaining officer by minute or letter, as circumstances appear to the Board to require. See Ibid. p. 4, pars. 13 to 16.

(189) Whenever a ship is detained for survey on account of unseaworthiness, there accompanies the report headed Surveys 87 a memorandum on a printed form issued for that purpose, and dated and signed by the principal officer of the Board of Trade, ordering the survey, and directed to the assistant-secretary, giving information under the following heads:—1. What led to the detention of the ship? 2. Had there been any attempt at the time to send or take her to sea? 3. Had she been cleared outwards or inwards? 4. Had she any, and if so what, cargo on board? 5. Were her crew engaged, and if so, were they on board, and had they signed articles? 6. What was the nature of the contemplated voyage? 7. The names of any of her crew who can speak to her unseaworthiness. 8. Had she recently been repaired, and if so, when? See the form in Ibid.

† (190) If the surveyor or surveyors, as the case may be, report that the ship is not unsafe, the detaining officer at once orders her release, and sends the reports and papers to the assistant-secretary of the Board of Trade,

721. The Board of Trade may at any time, if satisfied that a ship detained under this act is not unsafe, order her to be released upon or without any conditions. M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 6, sub-s. 7.

722. Any detaining officer appointed by the Board may also, if he thinks that a ship detained by him is not unsafe, order her to be released. Ibid. sub-s. 9.

723. When a ship has been detained under this act she shall not be released by reason of her British register being subsequently closed. Ibid. s. 12, sub-s. 3.

724. On the 7th November a foreigner purchased a British vessel, receiving possession thereof and paying a deposit. It was stipulated that the balance was to be paid on receipt of transfer. On the 11th November the vessel was detained by the Board of Trade under the 12th section of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85). On the 20th November the balance of the purchase-money was paid, and a bill of sale (dated the 8th November) was delivered. On the 5th December the British register was closed. Held, that the transfer was not completed until the 20th November, and that the vessel was a British ship at the date of its detention on the 11th November. Granfelt v. Lord Advocate, Cases in Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 1, p. 782. [SCORCH.]

725. Whatever equitable rights may be raised between an owner and a purchaser, there is nothing but an actual transfer by bill of sale entered on the register which can effect a change in the nationality of a ship. Per Lord Ardmillan, Ibid.

726. An order of detention under sect. 12 of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), does not prevent a British vessel being transferable by sale to a foreign purchaser; it only prevents the closing of the British register effecting the release of the ship. Per the Lord President Inglis, Ibid.

10. Final Order for Detention.*

727. The Board of Trade on receiving the report may, if in their opinion the ship is unsafe, order her to be finally detained, absolutely, or until so repaired, altered, unloaded, or reloaded, as the Board may think necessary for the protection of human life, and may vary or add to any such order. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 6, sub-s. 3.

stating that he has done so, and his grounds for having done so. See Board of Trade Instructions to Detaining Officers, Sept. 1876, Cons. Off. No. 78, p. 4, par. 14, and Form 84b.

(191) When the ship has been provisionally detained by an order of the Board of Trade, the Board in like cases makes a similar order of release. Ibid.

(192) The detaining officer, however, cannot order the release of a ship which has been provisionally detained under an order of the Board of Trade. Ibid. p. 5, par. 22.

(193) The collector of customs has no power to release a ship detained for survey, even if sold to foreigners. See note on form Survey 85.

* (194) When the surveyor or surveyors report that the ship is unsafe, one of the assistant-secretaries of the Board of Trade, on the receipt of such report, addresses a communication to the master of the ship in the form headed Surveys 88 (report of survey to be served on master), enclosing a copy of the report of the survey on the ship, stating that in the surveyor's opinion the ship is unsafe, and intimating that if he desires to appeal, under s. 6, sub-s. 4 of the M. S. Act, 1876, to a court of survey constituted by that act, the appeal must be made within seven days after the service upon him of the accompanying report, and that unless he appeals within that time the Board of Trade will make a final order for the detention of the ship; and further informing him that if he does not intend to appeal, but wishes to make the ship seaworthy, and to give every facility for further survey, he will save time and expense by replying at once to that effect, and intimating that any further communication on the subject should be addressed to the Assistant-Secretary, Marine Department, Board of Trade, Whitehall Gardens, S.W. See Ibid. and form Surveys 88.

(195) If the Board of Trade decides that the ship shall be "finally detained absolutely," or "finally detained until the performance of certain conditions," it makes an order accordingly in the form headed Surveys 89. If the ship is ordered to be detained until the performance of certain conditions, the conditions are specified in this order. This order is signed by one of the assistant-secretaries of the Board. The Board has power to vary or add to this order. Ibid. and Form 89.

(196) The Board's detaining officer can never make a final order for the detention of any ship, whether he has provisionally detained her or not. Ibid. p. 5, par. 22.

(196a) The stages of the case subsequent to detention are conducted by the Board of Trade, who communicate with the parties and the officer, by minute or letter, as the circumstances require. Ibid. p. 4, par. 16.

728. An order for the final detention of a ship, and any order varying the same, shall be served as soon as may be on the master. Ibid. sub-s. 2.

2. Courts of Survey (References or Appeals to—).

1. Generally.

734. When a ship has been provisionally detained, the Board of Trade may at any time refer the matter to the court of survey for the port or district where the ship is detained. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 6, sub-s. 6.

735. Before the order for final detention is made a copy of the report is to be served upon the master, and within seven days after service the owner or master may appeal to the court of survey for the port or district where the ship is detained. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

736. As to the mode of service, see this tit. Pt. II. c. 45, p. 1253.

737. As to the right of appeal from the report of a surveyor accompanied by an assessor, Ibid. s. 5, and No. 719.

For provisions enabling the Lord Chancellor from time to time (with the consent of the Treasury as to fees) to make, revoke, or alter general rules as to courts of survey, and the summoning of and procedure before the court, the requiring on an appeal security for costs and damages, the amount and application of fees, and the publication of the rules, Ibid. s. 9.

739. The rules made under this act relating to the court of survey shall be published as such rules direct. Ibid. ss. 7 and 9.

740. In the construction of these rules, words importing the singular number shall include the plural, and words importing the plural number shall include the singular number. R. C. S. 1876, No. 3.

741. These rules are published by her Majesty's stationery office through its agents, and a copy is kept at the office of the registrar of every court of survey and at every custom house and mercantile marine office in the United Kingdom, and may be perused thereat by the master or owner of any ship provisionally detained under the M. S. Act, 1876, and by any one deputed by him. Ibid. No. 5.

IV. c. 12, s. 6 (c), p. 1284; from refusal of certificate of clearance for emigrant ships, ibid. c. 11, s. 4, p. 1282; from refusal of certificate as to lights and fog signals, see Pt. II. c. 22, s. 3, p. 1246; from detention of unsafe ships (foreign) overladen or improperly laden, see c. 4, p. 1271. As to costs, see tit. COSTS, c. 20, ss. 11 and 13, pp. 372, 373; and c. 42, p. 415.

2. Courts and Judges.

743. Where a ship has been provisionally detained, the Board of Trade may at any time refer the matter to the court of survey for the port or district where the ship is detained. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 6, sub-s. 6.

744. The judge shall be the person summoned for the case in accordance with the rules under this act out of a list, approved for the port or district by a Secretary of State, of wreck commissioners, police magistrates, judges of county courts, and other fit persons; or in any special case a wreck commissioner appointed by the Board of Trade. Ibid. s. 7.

745. The courts of survey, with the districts assigned to each, and the persons authorized to act as judges and registrars thereof, and which have been approved by one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, as set forth in Appendix A., shall be the courts of survey, and the districts, judges, and registrars of such courts, for the purposes of the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876. R. C. S. 1876, No. 4. See these rules, and list of courts of survey, their judges and registrars, set out in 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), pp. cccclxxi—cccclxxx.

746. The following is a list of the courts of survey in England with the districts assigned to each, and the persons authorized to act as judges thereof. See Appendix A. to R. C. S. Sept. 1876.

747. For lists of courts of survey in Scotland and Ireland, see lists 2 and 3. Ibid.

748. The district of the court of survey for London includes the City of London, and the districts of all the Metropolitan county courts, the districts of the county court of Kent holden at Gravesend, Dartford, Greenwich and Woolwich, the districts of the county court of Essex holden at Brentwood and Romford, and the district of the county court of Surrey holden at Wandsworth. The district of any other court of survey in England is the district of the county court of the place at which the court of survey is held. Ibid.

749. The wreck commissioner is judge of every court of survey in the United Kingdom, and the other judges are those described in the second column, Ibid.

750. A court of survey for a port or district shall consist of a judge sitting with two assessors. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 7.

751. The courts are held at the places whose names they bear, or at any place within their respective districts, and may, by the permission of the judge, be adjourned to any place out of those districts. See App. A. to R. C. S., September, 1876.

752. As to the powers for payment by the Treasury of salaries to the judges of courts of survey, assessors, registrars, and other officers appointed by M. S. Act, 1876, see M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 39.

3. Assessors.

753. A court of survey for a port or district shall consist of a judge sitting with two assessors. Ibid. s. 7.

754. The assessors shall be persons of nautical engineering or other special skill and experience; one shall be appointed by the Board of Trade, and the other summoned according to the rules under this act by the registrar, out of a list of persons periodically nominated by the local marine board of the port, or, if there is no such board, by a body of local shipowners or merchants approved by a secretary of state, or, if there is no such list, shall be appointed by the judge. If a secretary of state thinks fit, on the recommendation of the government of any British possession or foreign state, to add any persons to such list, they shall, until otherwise directed by the secretary of state, be so added, and if there is no such list they shall form such list. Ibid.

4. Registrars.

755. The county court registrar or such other fit person as a secretary of state may from time to time appoint shall be the registrar of the court, and shall, on receiving notice of an appeal or a reference from the Board of Trade, immediately summon the court in the prescribed manner to meet forthwith. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 7.

756. The name of the registrar and his office shall be published in the prescribed manner. Ibid.

757. The registrar of the court of survey for London is Mr. William Edward Stanley Thomson, and his office is at Room, No. 725, the Royal Courts of Justice, Strand, in the county of Middlesex. See Appendix A. to R. C. S. Sept. 1876.

758. The registrar of any other court of survey in England is the registrar of the county court of the place at which the court of survey is held, and his office is the office of the registrar of that county court. Ibid.

759. The registrar of a court of survey in Scotland is the sheriff clerk of the county in which the court is held, and his office is the office of the sheriff clerk. Ibid.

760. The registrar of a court of survey in Ireland is the clerk of the peace, registrar, or other person discharging the duties of registrar of the court of the chairman of the county in which the court is held, and his office is the office of such clerk of the peace, registrar, or other person. Ibid.

761. A notice shall be put up in some conspicuous place in every custom house and mercantile marine office in the United Kingdom, containing the name of the registrar of the court of survey for that district, and the name of the street or place in which such registrar's office is situated. R. C. S, 1876, No. 6.

5. Notice of Appeal.

762. Where the owner or master of a ship, hereinafter called the appellant, desires to appeal to a court of survey, he shall file at the office of the registrar of the court of survey for the London district, or for the district in which the ship is, hereinafter called the court, a notice in the form No. 1 in Appendix B. R. C. S. 1876, No. 7.

6. Transmission of Notice.

763. Immediately upon the filing of the notice of appeal, the registrar shall communicate the fact, by telegraph and letter, to the Board of Trade, who shall thereupon inform him whether the Board intends to have the appeal heard by a wreck commissioner, and, if so, on what day. Ibid. No. 8.

7. Arrangements for Hearing.

764. If the Board of Trade inform him they do not intend the appeal to be heard by a wreck commissioner, the registrar forthwith ascertains which of the other judges of the court will hear the appeal, and on what day. Ibid. No. 9.

765. The court shall, if practicable, be summoned to hear the appeal on a day not later than fourteen days from the filing of the notice of appeal. Ibid. No. 16.

766. As soon as the registrar has ascertained by whom the appeal will be heard, he summons the court in the form No. 2 in Appendix B. And at the same time sends notice thereof to the Board of Trade and to the appellant, in the form No. 3 in Appendix B. Ibid. No. 13.

767. If the survey has been made on the complaint of the complainant, the Board of Trade sends him notice of the time and place appointed for the hearing. Ibid. No. 14.

8. Selection of Assessors.

768. On ascertaining when the hearing will take place, the registrar shall, if there is a list of assessors for the court, select therefrom the person who is, in his opinion, the best qualified to act as assessor on the appeal; or if there is no such list, he will take the instructions of the judge as to the assessor to be appointed. Ibid. No. 10.

769. The Board of Trade shall appoint the other assessor, and shall forthwith send the name and address of such assessor to the registrar. Ibid. No. 11.

770. If the ship is a foreign ship, the registrar shall give notice to the consular officer for the state to which the ship belongs, residing at or nearest to the place where the ship is detained, that, at the request of the appellant, some competent person may be selected by the consular officer to act as assessor. Ibid. No. 12; and as to the proceedings on provisional detention, see Nos. 807, 812, infra.

9. Parties.

771. The Board of Trade and the appellant shall be parties to the proceedings. Ibid. No. 17.

772. Any other person, on entering an appearance, may, by permission of the judge, be made a party to the proceedings. Ibid. No. 18.

10. Survey.

773. The judge and each assessor may survey the ship, and shall have for the purposes of this act all the powers of an inspector appointed by the Board of Trade under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 15, 16. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 8, sub-s. 2.

774. The judge may appoint any competent person or persons to survey the ship and report thereon to the court. Ibid. sub-s. 3; and as to survey of foreign ship, see No. 808, infra.

775. The owner and master of the ship, and any person appointed by either of them, or by the Board of Trade, may attend the survey. Ibid. sub-s. 5.

776. The provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, as to persons wilfully impeding an inspector, or disobeying his orders, apply to persons so impeding any judge or assessor under this act. Ibid. s. 12, sub-s. 5.

777. As to such powers, see the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 15, 16, and tit. SEAMEN, Pt. IV.

11. Evidence.(a) Report of Survey.

778. Previous to the hearing the Board of Trade shall forward to the registrar, to be produced as evidence at the hearing, an official copy of the report of the surveyor. R. C. S. 1876, No. 15.

779. Affidavits may, by permission of the judge, be used at the hearing, when sworn in the United Kingdom, before any judge or registrar of a court of survey, or before a person authorized to administer oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature, or before a commissioner empowered to take or receive affidavits, or before a justice of the peace for the county or place where they are sworn or made: in any place in the British dominions out of the United Kingdom, before any court, judge, or justice of the peace, or any person authorized to administer oaths there in any court: in any place out of the British dominions, before a British minister, consul, vice-consul, or notary public, or before a judge or magistrate, his signature being authenticated by the official seal of the court to which such judge or magistrate is attached. Ibid. No. 22.

(c) Notice to produce.

780. Either party may give to the other a notice in writing to produce such documents (saving all just exceptions) as relate to any matters in difference, and which are in the possession or control of such other party; and if such notice be not complied with, secondary evidence of the contents of the documents may be given by or on behalf of the party who gave such notice. Ibid. No. 19.

780a. See as to such notices generally, tit. EVIDENCE, c. 8, p. 427, and tit. PRACTICE, Pt. II.

781. Either party may give to the other party a notice in writing to admit any documents (saving all just exceptions); and in case of neglect or refusal to admit after such notice, the party so neglecting or refusing shall be liable for all the costs of proving such documents, whatever the result may be, unless the court is of opinion that the refusal to admit was reasonable; and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice be given, except where the omission to give the notice is, in the opinion of the officer by whom the costs are taxed, a saving of expense. Ibid. No. 20.

781a. See as to such notices generally, tit. EVIDENCE, c. 9, ss. 1, 2, p. 429, and tit. PRACTICE, Pt. II.

12. Subpœnas.

782. The wreck commissioner shall have power to issue subpœnas as nearly as may be in the form used in the High Court of Justice, and such subpœnas shall have effect, and may be served in any part of the United Kingdom. R. C. S. 1876, No. 21.

782a. As to subpœnas generally, see tit. PRACTICE, Pt. II.

13. Place of Hearing.

783. Appeals are heard before the Courts of Survey at the places appointed by their respective judges.

14. Hearing.

784. Causes shall be heard in open court. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 8, sub-s. 1.

785. At the hearing, the Board of Trade shall first call their witnesses, and having done so shall state in writing what order they require the court to make. R. C. S. 1876, No. 23.

786. The complainant, if he has appeared, shall then call his witnesses, and, having done so, shall state in writing what order he requires the court to make. Ibid. No. 24.

787. The appellant shall then call his witnesses, and, having done so, shall state in writing what order he requires the court to make. Ibid. No. 25.

788. After the appellant has examined all his witnesses, the Board of Trade and the complainant may, on cause shown to the satisfaction of the judge, call further witnesses in reply. Ibid. No. 26.

789. After all the witnesses have been examined, the court shall first hear the appellant, then the complainant, if any, and afterwards the Board of Trade. Ibid. No. 27.

15. Adjournment.

790. The judge may adjourn the court from time to time and from place to place, as may be most convenient. Ibid. No. 28.

16. Judgment.

791. The judge may deliver the decision of the court either vidâ voce or in writing; and, if in writing, it may be sent or delivered to the respective parties, and it shall not be necessary to hold a court merely for the purpose of giving the decision. Ibid. No. 29.

17. Report.

792. The judge shall report to the Board of Trade in the form No. 5 in Appendix B. Ibid. No. 31.

793. The judge shall send to the Board of Trade the prescribed report, and each assessor shall either sign the report, or report to the Board of Trade the reasons for his dissent. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 8, sub-s. 6.

18. Order for Release or Detention.

794. The judge shall have the same power as the Board of Trade to order the ship to be released or finally detained, but unless one of the assessors concurs in an order for the detention of the ship, the ship shall be released. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

795. As soon as possible after the court has come to its decision, the judge shall issue an order for the release or detention (either finally or on conditions) of the vessel in the form No. 4 in Appendix B. R. C. S. 1876, No. 30.

19. Costs.

795a. Subject to the order of the judge of the Court of Survey, the costs of appeal follow the event. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 14, and tit. Costs, c. 42, p. 415.

20. Service of Documents.

796. Any notice, summons, or other document issuing out of the court may be served by post. R. S. C. 1876, No. 36.

797. The service of any notice, summons, or other document may be proved by the oath or affidavit of the person by whom it was served. Ibid. No. 37.

798. As to the service of documents under the M. S. Acts, 1854 and 1876, see p. 1253.

21. Computation of Time.

799. In computing the number of days within which any act is to be done, the same shall be reckoned exclusive of the first day and inclusive of the last day, unless the last day shall happen to fall on a Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday, or on a day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, in which case the time shall be reckoned exclusive of that day also. Ibid. No. 34.

800. The days between Thursday next before and the Wednesday next after Easter Day and Christmas Day, and the three following days, shall not be reckoned or included in the computation. Ibid. No. 35.

22. Fees.

801. The fees, a table whereof is in Appendix C., shall be demanded and taken in any proceedings before a court of survey. Ibid. No. 38.

801a. And shall be taken in stamps. Ibid. 11th January, 1877, No. 1.

23. Deposit of Papers at Wreck Commissioners Office, London.

802. Immediately on the termination of an appeal before a court of survey elsewhere than in London, the registrar of the court shall forward to the registry of the court of survey for London, The Wreck Commissioners Office, Royal Courts of Justice, Strand, for deposit therein all the papers stamped and unstamped belonging to the appeal. Ibid. No. 2.

3. Appeal to Scientific Referees.

803. If the Board of Trade are of opinion that an appeal under this act involves a question of construction, design, scientific difficulty or important principle, they may refer the matter to such one or more out of a list of scientific referees approved by a secretary of state, as may appear to possess the special qualifications necessary, and may be selected by agreement between the Board of Trade and the appellant, or in default of agreement by the secretary of state, and thereupon the appeal shall be determined by the referee or referees, instead of by the court of survey. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 15.

804. The Board of Trade, if the appellant in any appeal so requires and gives security to the satisfaction of the Board to pay the costs of and incidental to the reference, shall refer that appeal to a referee or referees so selected. Ibid.

804a. The referee or referees shall have the same powers as a judge of the court of survey. Ibid.

4. Unsafe Ships (Foreign) Overladen or Improperly Laden.

1. Power of Detention.

(a) Generally.*

805. When a foreign ship has taken on board all or any part of her cargo at

* (197) The power of a Board of Trade detaining officer to detain a foreign ship under this section is confined to cases of overloading, or improper loading, when all or any a port in the United Kingdom, and is, whilst there, unsafe by reason of overloading or improper loading, the provisions of this act as to detention of ships apply to that foreign ship as if she were a British ship. Ibid. s. 13.

806. These provisions do not apply to any vessel employed exclusively in going from place to place in any river or inland water of which the whole or part is in any British possession. Ibid. s. 44.

806a. As to which provisions, see c. 1, p. 1258.

(b) *Notice to Consul.

807. A copy of the order for the provisional detention of the ship shall be forthwith served on the consular officer for the state to which the ship belongs at or nearest to the place where the ship is detained. "Consular officer" means any consul-general, vice-consul, consular agent, or other officer recognized by a secretary of state as a consular officer of a foreign state. Ibid. s. 13.

2. Survey.†

808. When the ship has been provisionally detained, the consular officer, on request of the owner or master of the ship, may require that the person appointed by the Board of Trade to survey the ship shall be accompanied by such other person as the consular officer may select as in the case of detention of a foreign ship. Ibid. sub-s. 2, see No. 770.

3. Order for Detention or Release.‡

809. When the ship has been surveyed by a surveyor, accompanied by a person selected by the consul, if the surveyor and such person agree, the Board of Trade shall cause the ship to be detained or released accordingly, but if they differ, the Board of Trade may act as if the requisition for such person to accompany the surveyor had not been made. Ibid.

4. Appeal.

(a) Generally.

810. When the ship has been surveyed by a surveyor, accompanied by a person selected by the consul, and such surveyor and person differ, the owner and master shall have the appeal to the court of survey touching the report of the surveyor provided by this act. Ibid.

811. As to such appeal to the court of survey, vide c. 1, No. 719, c. 2, No. 762.

(b) Assessors.

812. When the owner or master appeals to the court of survey, the consular officer, at his request may appoint any competent person assessor in such case in lieu of the assessor who, if the ship were a British ship, would be appointed otherwise than by the Board of Trade. Ibid. s. 13, sub-s. 3.

812a. See as to assessors in courts of survey in cases of British ships, c. 1, s. 7 (b), p. 1262.

5. Sending Unseaworthy Ships to Sea.

813. Every person who sends, attempts to send, or is a party to sending, any British ship to sea in such unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be endangered, is made guilty of a misdemeanor, unless he proves that he part of the cargo is taken on board at a port in the United Kingdom, and is, whilst at that port, unsafe by reason of overloading or of improper loading. See Board of Trade Instructions to Detaining Officers, September, 1876, Cons. Off. No. 78, p. 4, par. 17.

(198) The Board of Trade has, and exercises, similar powers of detention of foreign ships, and in exercising those powers uses forms very similar to those used by the detaining officer. Ibid. p. 5, par. 23.

* (199) The detaining officer so detaining a foreign ship uses the same forms as in the case of British ships, but, in addition thereto, he serves on the nearest consular officer of the state to which the ship belongs a copy of his order for her provisional detention. This copy is made on form Surveys 82A, the first part of which he fills in for the purpose, enclosing it in a letter to the consular officer. Ibid. p. 4, par. 18.

† (200) The detaining officer makes the best arrangements he can to facilitate the survey of the ship, and if the surveyor or surveyors he appoints, and the person (if any) appointed by the consular officer, agree that she is not unsafe, the detaining officer immediately orders her release. Ibid. p. 5, par. 19.

‡ (201) If, however, the surveyor or surveyors appointed by the detaining officer report to him that the ship is unsafe, his order of provisional detention remains in force, and he at once reports the facts, with full particulars, to the Board of Trade for instructions from the Board. Ibid. p. 5, par. 20.

used all reasonable means to insure her being sent to sea in a seaworthy state, or that her going to sea in such unseaworthy state was, under the circumstances, reasonable and justifiable; and every master of a British ship who knowingly takes the same to sea in such unseaworthy state is made guilty of a misdemeanor, unless he proves that her going to sea in such state was, under the circumstances, reasonable and justifiable. Any of such parties, for the purpose of giving such proof, may give evidence like any other witness. A prosecution under this section shall not be instituted except by or with the consent of the Board of Trade, or of the governor of the British possession in which such prosecution takes place. A misdemeanor under this section is not punishable upon summary conviction. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 4.

814*a*. As to the form of the indictment under this act, see No. 706, p. 1261.

815. By s. 12 of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), it is enacted that where the Board of Trade have received a complaint or have reason to believe that any British ship is, by reason of the defective condition of her hull, &c., or by reason of overloading, &c., unfit to proceed to sea without serious danger to human life, they may appoint some competent person or persons to survey her and to report to them, and may, if they think fit, order her to be detained for survey; and thereupon any officer of customs may detain such ship until her release be ordered either by the Board or by any court to which an appeal is given under s. 14 of the act; and upon receipt of the report of the surveyor the Board may, if in their opinion the ship cannot proceed to sea without serious danger to human life, make such further order as they may think requisite as to the detention of the ship or as to her release, either absolutely or upon the performance of such conditions with respect to repairs, &c., as the Board may impose.

Held, that neither the original information or complaint nor the report of the surveyor need state in terms that the "vessel cannot proceed to sea without serious danger to human life": it is enough if the facts reported to the Board are such as ought reasonably to satisfy them that the condition of the ship is such that she is unfit to proceed to sea without serious danger to human life. Lewis v. Gray, 1 C. P. D. 452.

816. As to survey of passenger steamers for seaworthiness before clearance, see this tit. Pt. IV. c. 13, p. 1285.

6. Unseaworthiness or insufficient Accommodation of Ship.

1. When charged by Seamen in Defence.

(a) Generally.

817. Whenever in any proceeding against any seaman or apprentice for desertion, or neglecting or refusing to join or to proceed to sea, or for being absent from or quitting his ship without leave, it is alleged by one-fourth of the seamen, or, if the seamen exceed twenty, by not less than five, that the ship is for any reason not fit to proceed to sea, or that her accommodation is insufficient, the court having cognizance of the case shall satisfy itself as to the truth thereof, and receive the evidence of the persons making that complaint, and may summon other witnesses, and if satisfied that the allegation is groundless proceed to adjudicate. See M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), s. 7.

818. No seaman or apprentice charged with desertion, or quitting his ship without leave, shall have any such right of complaint unless previously to quitting his ship he complained to the master of the circumstances so alleged in justification. Ibid.

(b) Survey Report and Order.*

819. The court after hearing the witnesses shall, if not satisfied that the allegation is groundless, cause the ship to be surveyed. Ibid.

* (202) When a ship is, under the provisions of this act, directed by a magistrate to be surveyed, the surveyor's report of the result of the survey is made to the assistant-secretary of the Board of Trade in the form headed Surveys 81. See Board of Trade Instructions to Detaining Officers, September, 1876, Cons. Off. No. 78.

820. The court shall require any of the surveyors appointed by the Board of Trade, under the M. S. Act, 1854, or any person appointed for the purpose by that Board, or, under special circumstances, any other impartial surveyor appointed by the court, and having no interest in the ship, freight or cargo, to survey the ship, and answer questions concerning her from the court. Such person shall survey the ship, and make his report in writing to the court, including answers to such questions. The court shall cause such report to be communicated to the parties, and unless proved erroneous the court shall determine the questions before it in accordance therewith. Ibid.

821. For the purposes of such survey, a surveyor shall have all the powers of an inspector appointed by the Board of Trade, under the M. S. Act, 1854. Ibid.

822. As to the powers of such inspectors, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 15, 16, and tit. SEAMEN.

See tit. COSTS, c. 20, s. 13, sub-s. (d), p. 373.

2. On Investigations by Naval Courts.

823. As to the power of any naval court when any ship is the subject of an investigation before it, to order a survey and proceed therein as if directed by a competent court in the course of proceedings against a seaman or apprentice for desertion or a kindred offence, see M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), s. 8; and Wreck Inquiries, by Murton, anno 1884, p. 163.

824. As to the powers of naval courts to direct surveys to ascertain the seaworthiness or sufficient accommodation of ships in other investigations before them, and as to naval courts generally, see tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. II. c. 2, p. 690; and Murton's Wreck Inquiries, pp. 158—179.

824a. As to costs in naval courts, see tit. COSTS, c. 44, p. 415.

7. Implied Obligation of Seaworthiness in Contracts with Seamen.

825. In every contract of service, express or implied, between the owner of a ship and the master or any seaman, and in every instrument of marine apprenticeship, there shall be implied, notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary, an obligation on the owner, that he, the master, and the agent charged with the loading, preparing, or sending her to sea, shall use all reasonable means to insure the seaworthiness of the ship for the voyage at the time when it commences, and during the same; but nothing shall subject the owner to any liability by reason of the ship being sent to sea in an unseaworthy state where, owing to special circumstances, the so sending her is reasonable and justifiable. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 5.

826. When a seaman signs ship's articles of agreement, there is an implied warranty that the ship is seaworthy. Turner v. Owen, 3 F. & F. 176—Cockburn, C. J.

827. As to similar implied obligation in other contracts, see tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, Pt. II. c. 13, p. 491, and The Glenfruin, 10 P. D. 103, in Ibid. in Addenda.

Part IV.—PASSENGER SHIPS.

1. Generally.*

829. In citing this act it is sufficient to use the expression "The Passengers

* (203) The Passengers Acts now in force are—The Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (c. 51), and the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1870 (c. 95). There are also various provisions relating to passenger ships in the M. S. Act, 1854, the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, the M. S. Acts, 1872 and 1876, and the Stat. Law Revision Act, 1875 (c. 66).

(204) The former Passengers Acts, now repealed, are—43 Geo. 3, c. 56; 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 55; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 107; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 14;

10 & 11 Vict. c. 103; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 6; the Passengers Act, 1849 (c. 33); 14 & 15 Vict. c. 1; and the Passengers Act, 1852 (c. 44).

(205) The Passengers Acts are to be carried into execution in the United Kingdom by the Board of Trade and by emigration officers under the direction of the Board, and in their absence, or at ports where there are no officers, by the chief officer of customs. These officers are exempt from liability for their official acts. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 3, No. 1.

Act, 1855." See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 2.

830. In any process for enforcing the remedies or penalties under the act, it is sufficient to refer by number to the section under which the proceeding is taken. Ibid.

831. The schedules to this act are part of the act. Penalty for breach of directions therein not exceeding ten pounds. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 103.

832. The Passengers Acts, 1855, 1863, and 1870, are to be construed together. Ibid. 1863 (c. 51), s. 18; ibid. 1870 (c. 95), s. 1.

833. The term "master" in the Passengers Act, 1855, signifies the person borne on the ship's articles as master, or in charge, or command of the ship (other than the pilot). See the act, s. 3.

834. In the absence of any agreement to the contrary, the owner is the party ultimately responsible, as between himself and other persons made liable for any default in complying with the requirements of this act; and if any such person pays moneys made payable to or on behalf of any such passengers, he is entitled, in the absence of such agreement, to recover from the owner the amount so paid, with costs of suit. Ibid. 1855 (c. 119), s. 65.

835. The Board of Trade may, if satisfied that the food, space accommodation, or other particulars provided in an emigrant ship for any class of passengers, is superior to the requirements, in those respects, of the Passengers Acts, exempt such ship from any of the requirements of those acts with respect thereto upon

(206) Appendix 26 contains a list of the ports in the United Kingdom at which there are custom-house officers. Those with asterisks prefixed are also stations for emigration officers. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 3, No. 1.

(207) It is to be borne in mind that British passenger ships, except where specially exempted therefrom, are, in addition to their liabilities as "passenger ships," under the same responsibilities as British ships generally. As to such responsibilities generally, see this tit. Pt. II. and tit. SEAMEN.

(208) The act is in force not only in the United Kingdom, but also in the Channel Islands. It extends partially to all the colonies; it applies equally to foreign and to British vessels. But the rules prescribed by the Order in Council of the 7th of January, 1864, passed in virtue of the 59th section of the Act of 1855, or to be prescribed by any other Order hereafter to be passed for promoting health, cleanliness, and order on board [see cap. 40], are not applicable to ships proceeding to foreign countries, but are binding only on "passenger ships" proceeding to the British colonies. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 7, No. 7.

(208a) In order, however, to place masters of foreign ships bound to the British colonies on the same footing as British masters, the former are required to give bond to the Crown (sect. 63) to submit themselves in like manner as British subjects to the jurisdiction of the colonial tribunals in case of any violation of the law, and where neither the owner nor charterer reside in the United Kingdom, the bond is to be increased from £2,000 to £5,000, and the obligors are made liable to repay any expenses incurred by the Crown in rescuing, and forwarding to their destination, shipwrecked passengers (sect. 17 of Act of 1863). Ibid. No. 8.

(209) For the various forms under the Passengers Acts relating to passenger ships, see

2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), pp. cccxv—cccxxxiv.

(210) An abstract of the last Congressional Act of the United States, relating to passengers, passed in 1855, is in the Appendix, No. 27, to Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 5, n.

(211) Besides this general Congressional Passengers Act of 1855, which extends over the whole Union, each seaboard state has a local law applicable to the immigration into its own ports. One important provision in these local laws, as regards passengers, is that the owner or consignee of any ship bringing in any lunatic, idiot, deaf, dumb, blind, maimed, or infirm persons, or any one above the age of sixty, or any widow or woman without her husband and with a child or children, or any person likely from any cause to become a public charge, must give a bond of indemnity with two sureties that such persons will not become burthenome to the state within a certain period. See Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 5, n.

(212) In the state of New York this bond is for 500 dollars for each such impotent person, and is in force for five years. But if the owner or consignee has given a bond of indemnity in the sum of 300 dollars for each passenger landed, able as well as impotent, and has not commuted it (as he has the option of doing by an immediate payment of 1½ dollars for each person), then the 500 dollars bond is not required in respect of the impotent passengers. (Act passed 11 July, 1851, cap. 1523, s. 4.) Practically, however, the commutation money is paid on all the passengers, and the 500 dollars bond is given in respect of those who are deemed likely to become chargeable. Ibid.

(213) The Supreme Court of the United States have decided that these local enactments are illegal. Ibid.

such conditions as it may think fit. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 20.

836. As to the meaning of the following terms in the Passengers Act, 1855:—"Her Majesty"—"United Kingdom"—"North America"—"West Indies"—"governor"—"statute adult"—"passage"—"passengers"—"cabin passengers"—"upper passenger deck"—"lower passenger deck"—and "emigrant runner"—see the act, c. 119, s. 3.

837. Words of one number import numbers, and one gender all genders. See the act, s. 3.

838. Under sects. 3 and 71 of the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), a sailing-ship is not a passenger ship because she carries more than thirty passengers, or more than one statute adult passenger to every fifty tons, if that number or proportion is not made up without reckoning cabin passengers. Ellis v. Pearce, 1 E. B. & E. 431.

839. And where persons are cabin passengers in all respects, except that of having received contract tickets in the form in Schedule K., which, in its terms, applies to passenger ships only, such persons, for the purpose of estimating the number or proportion, are to be reckoned as cabin passengers; and unless, without including them, the number or proportion is not made up, the ship is not a passenger ship. Ibid.

2. The Ship.*

840. The fourth part of this act applies to all British ships and to all foreign steamships carrying passengers between places in the United Kingdom. The provisions with respect to the certificates of the masters and mates thereof to which British steamships are subject apply also to such foreign steamships. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 291.

841. As to surveys and certificates under this act, the expression "passenger steamer" includes every British steam-

* (214) A marked distinction is made between "passenger ships" and ships not carrying a sufficient number of passengers to bring them within that definition, and which may be called "short ships." To the former, all the provisions of the act apply; to the latter only six clauses, viz. 10, 16, 17, 48, 49, and 56, which respectively require that facilities of inspection shall be afforded to the emigration officers; that lists of passengers, however few, and including cabin passengers (Act of 1863), shall be delivered to the custom-house officers; that passage-money shall be returned, with compensation, if passages are not provided according to contract; that subsistence money shall be paid to passengers in case of delay in sailing; and that passengers shall not be landed at the wrong place. Ibid. p. 7, No. 6.

(215) Vessels carrying not more than fifty passengers in all, or if sailing vessels not more than one statute adult to every thirty-three tons, or if steamers not more than one to every twenty tons registered tonnage, are partially exempt, and vessels of war, transports, whether in the royal or East Indian service, and vessels trading in the Mediterranean, are wholly exempt from the operation of the act. Ibid. p. 8.

(216) So it has been held are vessels engaged in the Newfoundland and Labrador fisheries, although they have on board persons not borne on the ship's articles as seamen, provided such persons are for the purposes of the fishery; the case being analogous to that of the indentured labourers of the Hudson's Bay Company, who are not to be deemed passengers in the company's ships under the 3rd section of the Act of 1855.

Ibid. p. 8, No. 9.

(217) The exemption which mail steamers enjoyed under the Act of 1855 has been taken away by the Act of 1863, the 4th section of which brings them within the provisions of the law "in like manner as any passenger ship not carrying a mail." Ibid. p. 8, No. 10.

(218) The spirit and main object of the Passengers Acts contemplate the protection of those passengers only who are taken out of the United Kingdom, and not of those who merely touch at British ports on their way from one foreign port to another. Ibid. p. 8, No. 11.

(219) Foreign passenger ships, therefore, bound for foreign ports, which put into ports of the United Kingdom in transitu, or to land passengers (although they may subsequently be re-embarked), or to embark foreign passengers who come here to join the ship, or to take in bonâ fide first-class cabin passengers, or cargo, do not come within the scope of the law. But if any British subjects or persons resident in the United Kingdom, other than first-class cabin passengers, be embarked in a number sufficient with the foreign passengers already on board to bring the ship within the definition of a "passenger ship," the law becomes applicable in all its provisions and as regards all the passengers, and the allotment of a separate compartment and a separate dietary exclusively for the use of the British passengers would not affect the case, as the health and comfort of the British passengers can only be sufficiently secured, in the purview of the law, by ensuring the health and comfort of their fellow passengers. Ibid. p. 8, No. 12.

ship carrying passengers to, from or between any places in the United Kingdom, excepting steam bridges. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 303.

842. For the purposes of the Passengers Acts, 1855 and 1863, the term "passenger ship" signifies every description of sea-going vessel, British or foreign, carrying, upon any voyage to which the Passengers Act, 1855, extends, more than fifty passengers, or more passengers than in the proportion of one statute adult to every thirty-three tons registered, if propelled by sails, or to every twenty tons, if propelled by steam. See Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 3.

843. Every steam vessel, whether British, foreign, or colonial, and whether carrying a mail or otherwise, carrying passengers other than cabin passengers in sufficient number to bring her within the definition of a passenger ship, is subject to the provisions of the Passengers Act, 1855, and of this act. Ibid. s. 4, as amended by the Stat. Law Rev. Act, 1875 (c. 66).

844. This act does not extend to any of her Majesty's ships of war, nor to ships in the service of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, nor of the East India Company. Ibid. 1855 (c. 119), s. 4, as amended by the Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 4.

845. As to exemption from the provisions of the act in cases of ships approved by the Board of Trade, see M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 20.

846. Any steamship may carry not exceeding twelve passengers although not surveyed by the Board of Trade as a passenger steamer, nor carrying a Board of Trade certificate, as provided by the M. S. Act, 1854, as to passenger steamers. Ibid. s. 16.

847. "Ship" signifies any description of seagoing vessel, whether British or foreign. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 3.

3. The Voyage.*

848. This act extends to every "passenger ship" proceeding on any voyage from the United Kingdom to any place out of Europe, and not in the Mediterranean Sea, and on every colonial voyage as therein described, and as to ss. 101 and 102 (imposing penalties on the master for having more passengers than the prescribed number, and for not issuing to his passengers proper provisions and water), to every ship bringing passengers into the United Kingdom from any place out of Europe not in the Mediterranean Sea. Ibid. s. 4, as amended by the Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 4.

4. India, Asia, and Africa.

849. This act does not apply to any of the territories of the East India Company. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 99.

850. For provisions empowering the Governor-General of India in Council by act to adopt this act for India, and to make rules respecting food, passengers, medical practitioners, space for passengers; and to declare in what manner penalties may be sued for and recovered, and enabling the Indian Act to be enforced in the colonies in like manner as this act, Ibid. †

851. The Passengers Act, 1855, does not affect the act of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 84, as to the passages of natives of Asia or Africa, and passages between Ceylon and parts of India. Ibid. s. 15.

5. China.

1. Generally.

852. The term "Chinese passenger ship" includes every ship carrying from any port in Hong Kong, and every British ship carrying from any port in China,

* (220) Vessels going through the Suez Canal, if carrying sufficient passengers to bring them under the act, must conform to the law. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 8, n.

(221) Vessels bound to ports out of Europe, but intending to call at a port in Europe, if they start with a sufficient number of passengers on board to bring them within the act must comply with all the requirements of the act, although a portion of the passengers are to be landed at a port in Europe. Ibid. p. 9, No. 13.

(222) British ships embarking foreign passengers at a British port must clear under the Passengers Acts. Ibid. p. 9, n.

† (223) The following Acts, No. 2 of 1860 and Act No. 8 of 1876 (the Native Passenger Ships Act, 1876), have been passed by the Governor-General in pursuance of this power. See 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. ccix.

or within 100 miles of the coast thereof, more than twenty passengers being natives of Asia. See the Chinese Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 104), s. 1.

853. It shall be lawful for the legislature of Hong Kong, by any ordinances by it enacted, to make regulations respecting Chinese passenger ships. Ibid. s. 2.

854. It shall be lawful for the governor of Hong Kong, for the purposes of the act, to declare by proclamation what shall be the duration of the voyage, and alter the scale of dietary and medicine contained in the schedule to the act. Ibid. s. 3.

855. No Chinese passenger ship shall clear out or proceed to sea on a voyage of more than seven days' duration without an emigration officer's certificate and copy of the regulations so made. Ibid. s. 4.

856. Nor until he shall have given a bond in the sum of £1,000, in the forms contained in Schedule C. to the act, to the crown. Ibid. s. 4.

857. A commander of any of her Majesty's ships of war, or any emigration officer, custom house officer, or British consul, may search any Chinese passenger ship (being a British ship or within British jurisdiction) for the production of the above papers. Ibid. s. 6.

2. Forfeitures.

858. If any Chinese passenger ship clears out, or proceeds to sea on any voyage exceeding seven days in duration, without her emigration papers or with fraudulently altered papers she shall, if a British ship, or if, not being a British ship, the offence is committed and the ship is seized in British dominions, or in the territories of the East India Company, be forfeited to her Majesty. Ibid. s. 8.

859. Any commissioned officer on full pay, in the British military or naval service, or any British officer of customs, or consul, may seize and detain any such ship, and bring her for adjudication before the High Court of Admiralty in England or Ireland, or any court having Admiralty jurisdiction in British dominions, and such court may make such order as it thinks fit, and may award a portion of the proceeds of the sale of the ship to the officer bringing her in for adjudication, or to any persons damaged by the act or default which has rendered the ship liable to forfeiture. Ibid. s. 10.

860. No such officer shall be responsible to any person in respect of the seizure or detention of any such ship, notwithstanding the ship is not brought in for adjudication, or, if so brought in, is declared not liable to forfeiture, if it is shown to the satisfaction of the judge or court that there are reasonable grounds for such seizure or detention; but if no such grounds are shown costs and damages may be awarded to any party aggrieved. Ibid. s. 11.

861. Penalty against every person who commits, or abets in committing, any act or default by which any Chinese passenger ship may become liable to forfeiture not exceeding £100. Ibid. s. 9.

862. The court may impose a penalty in lieu of condemnation of the ship, and apply the same like the proceeds of sale of the ship, if condemned, might have been applied. Ibid. s. 12.

863. Any court, justice, or magistrate imposing any penalty under this act, for which no specific application is herein provided, may, if it or he thinks fit, direct the whole or any part thereof to be applied in compensating any person for any wrong or damage which he may have sustained by the act or default in respect of which such penalty is imposed, or in or towards payment of the expenses of the proceedings; and, subject to such directions or specific application as aforesaid, all penalties recovered in the United Kingdom shall be paid into the receipt of her Majesty's exchequer in such manner as the Treasury may direct. Ibid. s. 14.

864. In any legal proceeding under this act, or in respect of the bond therein required, any document purporting to be the written declaration of any British consul, or commander of any British ship of war, or to be a copy of the proceedings of any court, shall, without any proof of signature, be received in evidence, if it shall appear that such copy or declaration, if produced in the United Kingdom, was officially transmitted to one of the secretaries of state, or if produced in any colony was officially transmitted to the governor. But no person making such written declaration shall be capable of receiving a share of any penalty or forfeiture procured by such written declaration. Ibid. s. 15.

865. As to forfeiture of passenger steamers generally, see Pt. IV. c. 51, p. 1320.

866. As to forfeitures generally, see Pt. II. c. 18, p. 1242.

6. The Colonies.

1. Australasia.*

867. For provisions enabling governors of Australasian colonies by proclamation to regulate the number of passengers, and on what decks they may be carried in ships plying between Australasian ports, and under what penalties. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 52, s. 1.

868. The rules prescribed by such proclamations, are to apply as to such inter-colonial voyages in lieu of those on the same subject in the Passengers Act, 1855. Ibid. s. 2.

869. Such rules in such proclamations may be enforced in all British possessions as if part of the Passengers Act, 1855, or of any act incorporated with it. Ibid. s. 3.

870. A copy of any such proclamation purporting to be under the hand of the governor, and public seal of the colony, shall be received as good evidence in all the Queen's dominions. Ibid.

871. Australasia includes Australia proper, New Zealand, Tasmania, parts of New Guinea, and the islands. Ibid. s. 4.

2. Canada.†

872. In the construction of the M. S. Act, 1854, and of the acts amending the same, Canada is deemed one British possession. See the M. S. (Colonial) Act, 1869 (c. 11), s. 7.

3. Colonial Voyages.

(a) Generally.

873. For the purposes of this act, the term "colonial voyage" signifies any voyage from any place within any of the British possessions (except those of the East India Company and the island of Hong Kong) to any place whatever, where the distance exceeds 400 miles, or the duration of the voyage exceeds three days. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 95.

(b) Exemptions.

874. The provisions in this act as to passenger steamers and emigrant ships do not apply to any vessel employed exclusively in going from place to place in any river or inland water of which the whole or part is in any British possession. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 44.

875. This act applies to all ships carrying passengers on any such colonial voyage, except as to such parts of the act as relate—1. To passage brokers and their licences. 2. To passengers' contract tickets. 3. To emigrant runners. 4. To the giving bond to her Majesty. 5. To the keeping on board a copy of this act. 6. To Orders in Council regulating emigration from the United Kingdom, or prescribing rules for promoting health, cleanliness, order and ventilation. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 96.

876. If the prescribed duration of the colonial voyage is less than three weeks, then, in addition to the matters above excepted, the act does not apply to the construction or thickness of the decks; the berths and berthing; the height between decks; privies; hospitals; light and ventilation; manning; passengers' stewards; passengers' cooks and cooking apparatus; and the surgeon and medicine chest; nor to the maintenance of passengers for forty-eight hours after arrival; and, in the case of such colonial voyages, the prescribed duration of which is less than three weeks, the requirements of this act as to the issue of provisions, except as to the issue of water, do not apply

* (224) Several of our own colonies in North America and Australia have passed Passenger Acts chiefly affecting points to be attended to after the arrival of the ship. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 6, n.

(224a) There is no tax on emigrants arriving in the Australian colonies. In Canada and Victoria bonds of indemnity are required in respect of each passenger likely, from bodily or mental infirmity, to become permanently a charge on the colony. In Canada the bond is for 300 dollars, and for three years; in Victoria it is for £100 for five years. Ibid.

† (225) By the Canadian Immigration Act, 1872, a capitation tax of two dollars in respect of each passenger is levied on the master of the ship in any of the following cases:—(1) If the vessel has not been cleared under the Imperial Passenger Act. (2) If she does not carry a surgeon. (3) If proper measures for the preservation of the health of the passengers and crews have not been observed on the voyage. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 6, n.

to any passenger who has contracted to furnish his own provisions. Ibid.

(c) Proclamation as to Requirements.

877. The governor of each of her Majesty's possessions abroad, by proclamation for that purpose, may declare what shall be deemed for the purposes of this act the length of the voyage of any ship carrying passengers from such possession to any other place, and may prescribe the scale of diet for passengers during the voyage, and declare what medicines, medical comforts, medical instruments, and other matters shall be deemed necessary for the medical treatment of the passengers during such colonial voyage. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 97.

878. The governors of any crown possessions may authorize persons to make the like survey and examination of passenger ships sailing from such possessions as are required to be made by two or more competent surveyors in respect of passenger ships sailing from the United Kingdom, and may also authorize any competent person to act as medical practitioner on board any passenger ship proceeding on a colonial voyage. Ibid. s. 98.

879. The provisions and requirements of every such proclamation shall be enforced in all her Majesty's dominions as if incorporated in this act. Ibid. s. 97.

(cc) Proof of Proclamations.

880. A copy of any such proclamation, purporting to be under the hand of the governor and public seal of such colony, shall, in any part of her Majesty's dominions, be received as sufficient evidence of the issuing and contents thereof, unless it is proved not to be genuine. Ibid.

4. Colonial Certificates.

881. When the legislature of any British possession provides for the survey of and grant of certificates for passenger steamers, and the Board of Trade reports to her Majesty that they are satisfied those colonial certificates are equally efficient with those granted in the United Kingdom, her Majesty may, by Order in Council, declare that those colonial certificates are of the same force as if granted in the United Kingdom, and that any of the provisions of the M. S. Acts relating to such certificates, with or without modifications, apply to the colonial certificates; and may impose conditions, make regulations with respect to those colonial certificates, and impose penalties not exceeding £50 for breach thereof. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 17.

5. Application of Penalties.

882. As to the application of penalties under this act, when recovered in the colonies, see No. 689, p. 1256.

7. Orders in Council.

883. Her Majesty, by Order in Council, may prescribe rules and regulations as to passenger ships proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place in her Majesty's possessions abroad.

884. Also for preserving order, health, and cleanliness; also for ventilation (see c. 19, p. 1291); also for the use of an apparatus for distilling water, and defining in such case the quantity of water to be carried for passengers (see c. 35, p. 1300).

885. Also for prohibiting emigration from any ports affected with disease, for reducing the number of passengers to be carried, and also for requiring duly-qualified medical practitioners to be carried (see c. 33, p. 1298). See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 59; and see such Orders in Council in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), pp. 60—64.

886. Any such Order in Council may be altered or revoked. Any copy of such Order in Council in the London Gazette, or purporting to be printed by the Queen's printer, is to be received in all legal proceedings as sufficient evidence of the making and contents thereof. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 59; and the Documentary Evidence Act, 1858 (c. 37), s. 2.

887. In every "passenger ship" proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place in her Majesty's possessions abroad, the medical practitioner on board, aided by the master, or, in the absence of such medical practitioner, the master may exact obedience to all rules and regulations prescribed by any such Order in Council. Penalty against any person neglecting or refusing to obey, or obstructing the medical practitioner or master in the execution of such duty, or offending against any of the provisions of this act, or guilty of riotous or insubordinate conduct, not exceeding £2, besides imprisonment not exceeding one month, at the discretion of the justices adjudicating on the complaint. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 60.

8. Abstracts of Acts and Orders in Council.

1. Generally.

888. The Board of Trade are to prepare abstracts of this act and of Orders in Council made under it. Ibid. s. 61, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

2. Copies to Masters.

889. Four copies of such abstracts, with a copy of this act, are, on demand, to be supplied by the principal officer of customs at the port of clearance to the master of every "passenger ship" proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place in her Majesty's possessions abroad. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 61.

3. Production and posting up by Masters.

890. The master shall, on request made to him, produce a copy of this act to any passenger on board for his perusal, and, further, shall post, previous to the embarkation of the passengers, and shall keep posted so long as any passenger shall be entitled to remain in the ship, in at least two conspicuous places between the decks on which passengers may be carried, copies of such abstracts. Penalty for breach against master, not exceeding 40s. a day during any part of which by his act or default such abstracts shall fail to be so posted. Ibid.

891. Penalty against any person displacing or defacing such abstracts so posted, not exceeding 40s. Ibid.

1. Generally.

892. Before any "passenger ship" shall clear out or proceed to sea, the master and owner or charterer, or, in his absence, or if the master be owner or charterer, or other person, approved by the chief officer of customs at the port of clearance, shall enter into a bond, in £2,000, to the crown, in the form in Schedule (C.). The bond is not liable to stamp duty, and is to be executed in duplicate. Ibid. s. 63.

893. In the case of a passenger ship, of which neither owners nor charterers reside in the United Kingdom, the bond to the crown shall be for £5,000, with an additional condition that the obligors shall, subject as therein contained, pay, as a crown debt, all expenses incurred under this act and the Passengers Act, 1855, in rescuing, maintaining, and forwarding to their destination any of the passengers who, without their own neglect or default, are not conveyed to their intended destination by or on behalf of the owner, charterer or master. Ibid. 1863 (c. 51), s. 17.

894. As to the forfeiture of any passenger ship clearing out or proceeding to sea without the master having joined in executing the required bond, see No. 1179, p. 1320.

895. If any "passenger ship" is intended to call at any intermediate port or place during the voyage, for the purpose of taking in water, an engagement to that effect must be inserted in the bond. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 34.

2. Certificate of Execution.

896. The chief officer of customs at the port of clearance of any "passenger ship" bound to any of her Majesty's possessions abroad, is to certify on one part of the bond that it has been duly executed by the master and the other obligor. Ibid. s. 64.

897. Such certificate shall, in any colonial court of judicature in which the bond may be put in suit, be conclusive

* (226) If a vessel takes in passengers at two different ports, although she will require to be cleared under the act at each port, yet no second bond to the crown will be requisite. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 52, No. 108.

(226a) As to the supervising inspectors appointed in America pursuant to Act of Congress, and the rules passed by them for the survey and inspection of American ships in American ports, see Rules of Supervising Inspectors, New York, circa anno 1876. [AMERICAN.] evidence of the due execution of the bond, and it is not necessary to prove the officer's handwriting, nor that he was chief officer of customs at the port of clearance at the time. Ibid.

3. Transmission.

898. The officer so certifying is to transmit that part of the bond to the colonial secretary of the colony to which the ship is bound. Ibid.

4. Limitation of Actions on—

899. No such bond shall be put in suit in any of her Majesty's possessions abroad after three months from the ship's arrival there, nor in the United Kingdom after twelve months from the return of the ship and master there. Ibid.

10. Surveyor-General.

900. The Board of Trade may appoint a surveyor-general for the United Kingdom, and fix his remuneration. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 305.

11. Emigration Officers.

1. Generally.

901. In the United Kingdom the Board of Trade, and in British possessions the respective governors thereof, may appoint emigration officers and assistant emigration officers for carrying this act into execution. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 8, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

902. All powers and duties exercised by an emigration officer may be exercised by his assistant, or at a port where there is none such, or in their absence, by the chief officer of customs at such port. Ibid. s. 9.

903. Neither emigration officers nor their estates or effects are liable for payment of moneys, costs, or otherwise, in respect of any contract made by any of them, nor in respect of any proceedings taken against any of them, nor for any act or matter done by any of them in their official capacity. Ibid. s. 7.

904. An emigration officer, appointed under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 44, was justified in refusing to certify that the requirements of the statute had been complied with, if he, acting bond fide, deemed that the quantity of cargo on board a passenger ship was such as to endanger the safety of the ship, although none of the articles expressly prohibited by s. 26 were on board, and although his objection was not to any specific article on board, but solely because the ship was too deep in the water; and if an action was brought against him for refusing his certificate under such circumstances, he was by s. 81 entitled to have the verdict entered for him. Steel v. Schomberg, 3 C. L. R. 302; 4 Ell. & Bl. 620; 24 L. J. Q. B. 87; 1 Jur. N.S. 679.

2. Inspection by—

905. The master of every passenger ship or ship intended for carrying passengers on any voyage to which this act extends, shall afford to the emigration officer at any port or place in her Majesty's dominions, and, in the case of British ships, to her Majesty's consular officer at any foreign port or place at which such ship shall be or arrive, every facility for inspecting her, communicating with her passengers, and ascertaining that the provisions of this act, so far as applicable, have been complied with. Penalty for breach against the master, not exceeding £50. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 10.

3. Certificate of Clearance.

(a) *Before Clearance.

906. No passenger ship shall clear out or proceed to sea until the master has

* (227) The emigration officer is to certify that all the requirements of the act, so far as is practicable before sailing, have been carried out; that the ship is seaworthy and in safe trim, and in all respects fit for her intended voyage, and that the passengers and crew are in a fit state to proceed. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 53, No. 110.

(227a) It will be the duty of the emigration officer, when the clearing certificate is applied for, to muster the passengers to see that no more are on board than the law allows,—to have them inspected by the medical officer,—to ascertain whether any of them have any unsatisfied claims as to detention money or otherwise,—to see that the master and first and second mates possess certificates, either of competency or service,—to muster and inspect the crew, and to see that the ship is in all respects in a fit state to proceed to sea. Until he has satisfied himself on these points, he is not to grant his certificate; and he will make known his instructions in this respect obtained from the emigration officer at the port of clearance a certificate of clearance, that the requirements of this act have been duly complied with, that the ship is in all respects fit for her voyage, and that her passengers and crew are in a fit state to proceed, nor until the master has joined in executing the required bond to the Crown. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 11.

907. As to forfeiture of the ship for breach, see No. 1179, p. 1320.

(b) After touching at or putting back to the United Kingdom damaged or otherwise.

908. If any passenger ship after clearance is detained in port more than seven days, or touches at any place in the United Kingdom, she shall not put to sea again until she has taken on board, at the expense of the owner, charterer, or master, a further supply of pure water and wholesome provisions, medical comforts and stores, to make up the prescribed quantities, nor until any damage she may have sustained has been effectually repaired, nor until the master has obtained from the emigration officer or his assistant, or, in his absence, from the officer of customs there, a certificate to the same effect as the certificate for clearance. Penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £100 nor less than £50; and if the master shall not within twelve hours thereafter report, in writing, his arrival, the cause of his putting back, the condition of his ship, stores and provisions, to the emigration officer, or officer of customs at the port, and produce master's list of passengers, not exceeding £20 nor less than £2. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 50; and as to forfeiture of the ship for breach, see No. 1179, p. 1320.

4. Appeal from Refusal of Certificate.

909. If the emigration officer refuses to grant such certificate, the owner or charterer may appeal in writing to the Board of Trade, which shall appoint any two other emigration officers, or two competent persons, at the expense of the appellant, to examine into the matter; and if the persons so appointed grant a certificate to the purport before required, the certificate shall have the same effect as if granted by the emigration officer of the port of clearance. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 11.

12. Shipwright and Engineer Surveyors.

1. Appointment.

910. The Board of Trade may appoint shipwrights' surveyors and engineers' surveyors for the purposes of this act at the ports or places it thinks proper. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 305.

2. Powers.

911. The surveyors may, in the execution of their duties, go on board any steamer at all reasonable times, and inspect any part thereof, or any of the machinery, boats, equipments, or articles on board, or any certificates of the master or mate, under this act, not unnecessarily detaining or delaying the ship; and if for any reason they consider it necessary so to do, may require the ship to be taken into dock to survey her hull. Penalty against any person impeding the surveyor in the execution of his duty, not exceeding £5. Ibid. s. 306.

3. Duties.

912. The surveyors are to execute their duties under the direction of the Board of Trade, and the Board are to make regulations as to the surveys, and the notice to be given to the surveyors when surveys are required. Ibid. s. 307.

4. Remuneration.

913. The Board of Trade are to make regulations as to the amount and payment of the surveyor's travelling or other expenses, and the persons by whom and the conditions under which such payment shall be made. Ibid.

914. From every surveyor who demands from the owner or master of any ship surveyed by him under this act any remuneration other than as directed by the Board of Trade, penalty not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 308.

915. For provisions that no surveyor or person employed under the authority of as widely as possible, in order that the masters and charterers of ships may be warned that their vessels will not be cleared until they are in a complete state. Any delay which may accrue from the neglect on their part of this warning will not be chargeable on the emigration officer. A form of clearing certificate is annexed. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 53, No. 110.

the Passengers Act, 1855, shall receive any fee or remuneration in respect of his duties otherwise than by direction of the Board of Trade, penalty for breach not exceeding £50, see the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 15.

916. All fees payable in respect of any services performed by any person employed under the authority of the Passengers Act, 1855, are payable to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office, according to the directions of the Board of Trade, and carried to the consolidated fund. Ibid. 1876 (c. 80), s. 39.

917. As to the fees and expenses to be charged for surveys of ships, for passengers' certificates, for surveys under the Passengers Acts, and for medical inspection of passengers and crew under those acts, see Pt. I. c. 6, s. 5, p. 1205.

918. See also tables, sanctioned by Board of Trade, set out in 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. cccclxxxiv.

5. Surveys.*

919. The owner of every passenger steamer shall cause her to be surveyed at the times directed by one of the duly-appointed shipwright surveyors and engineer surveyors, such shipwright surveyor being, in the case of iron steamers, a person in the judgment of the Board of Trade properly qualified. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 309.

920. In reference to surveys of passenger steam ships under this act, the word "passengers" includes any persons carried in a steamer other than the master, crew, and the owner, his family and servants. Ibid. s. 303.

921. When the survey of a ship is made for the purpose of a declaration or certificate under the above enactment, the person appointed to make the survey shall, if so required by the owner, be accompanied on the survey by some person appointed by the owner, and if the two persons agree, there shall be no appeal to the court of survey. Ibid. 1876 (c. 80), s. 14.

922. Every passenger steamer shall be surveyed once at the least in every year in the manner mentioned in the fourth part of the M. S. Act, 1854. Ibid. 1872 (c. 73), s. 8, repealing the provisions of s. 304 of the former act requiring such steamers to be surveyed every six months.

6. Declarations of Result of Survey.

(a) Shipwright's Surveyor.

923. The shipwright's surveyor shall, if satisfied with the result of his survey, give the owner a declaration on a Board of Trade form containing statements—(1) that the hull of the ship is sufficient for the service intended, and in good condition: (2) that the boats, life buoys, lights, signals, compasses, and shelter for deck passengers, and the certificates of the master, mates or mate, are such and in such condition as required by the acts: (3) the time (if less than six months) for which the hull and equipments will be sufficient: (4) the limits (if any) beyond which, as regards the hull and equipments, the ship is in the surveyor's judgment not fit to ply: (5) the number of passengers which the ship is in the judgment of the surveyor fit to carry, distinguishing, if necessary, between the respective numbers to be carried on the deck and in the cabins, and in different parts of the deck and cabins; such numbers to be subject to such conditions and variations, according to the time of year, the nature of the voyage, the cargo carried, or other circumstances, as the case requires. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 309; and Board of Trade Instructions as to Passenger Ships, 1884, p. 1.

924. The forging or fraudulent altering of any declaration as to any passenger steamer is a misdemeanour. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 320.

(b) Engineer's Surveyor.

925. The engineer's surveyor, if satisfied with the result of his survey, shall give the owner a declaration on a Board of Trade form containing statements—

* (228) If the surveyor requires any defects remedied, or any alterations or additions made, he gives to the owner, agent, master or builder, from whom he received the application, a written statement on a form headed Surveys 70, setting forth the nature and extent of his requirements, and will not certify the number of passengers to be carried until such alterations are made. When they are made, he sends another report on the form Surveys 70, stating the numbers to be cut in the beam and cut in or painted over the entrance to each place. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, Crew Spaces, 1884, p. 38, par. 61.

(1) that the machinery of the ship is sufficient for the service intended, and in good condition: (2) the time (if less than six months) for which such machinery will be sufficient: (3) that the safety valves and fire hose are such and in such condition as are required: (4) the limits of the weight to be placed on the safety valves: (5) the limits (if any) beyond which, as regards the machinery, the ship is in the surveyor's judgment not fit to ply. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 309; and Board of Trade Instructions, 1884, p. 1.

926. The declaration by the engineer's surveyor shall, in the case of a ship by this act required to have a certificated engineer, contain, in addition, a statement that the certificate or certificates of the engineer or engineers are such and in such condition as is required by this act. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 12.

927. The forging or fraudulent altering of any declaration as to any passenger steamer is a misdemeanour. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 320.

(c) Appeal from—

928. If a shipowner feels aggrieved by the declaration of a shipwright surveyor or engineer surveyor respecting a passenger steamer, or his refusal to give the declaration; or the refusal of a certificate of clearance for an emigrant ship, he may appeal in the prescribed manner to the court of survey for the port or district where the ship then is. Ibid. 1876 (c. 80), s. 14.

929. But when the owner appoints a surveyor, who agrees with the Board of Trade surveyor in his report, no appeal lies. Ibid.

930. On the appeal the judge shall report on the question raised by the appeal to the Board of Trade, which, when satisfied that the requirements of the report and the other provisions of the enactments have been complied with, may—(1) in the case of a passenger steamer give their certificate under s. 312 of the M. S. Act, 1854; and (2) in the case of an emigrant ship give, or direct the emigration or other officer to give, a certificate of clearance; and (3) in the case of a refusal of a certificate as to lights or fog signals, give or direct a surveyor or person appointed by them to give a certificate under s. 30 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63). Ibid.

931. Subject as therein mentioned, the provisions of this act with respect to the court of survey and appeals thereto, apply to the court of survey when acting under this section. Ibid.

932. As to the courts of survey and the procedure therein, see Pt. III. c. 2, p. 1265.

(d) Costs of Appeal.

933. Subject to any order made by the judge of the court of survey, the costs of and incident to the appeal follow the event. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 14.

934. In all cases where it is possible the half-yearly surveys shall be made in the months of April and October, and the declarations shall be transmitted on or before the 30th of April and the 31st of October; but if the owner of any passenger steamer is unable to have her surveyed in April or October, by reason of her being absent from the United Kingdom during the whole period, or of her being under construction or repair, or laid up in dock, or other reason satisfactory to the Board of Trade, then he shall have the same so surveyed as soon after as possible, and shall transmit such declarations to the Board within fourteen days after receipt, with a statement of the reasons which prevented the survey at the time prescribed. In case of delay in transmitting the declarations, penalty for default not exceeding 10s. a day. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 311, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 34, below, and M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 8.

935. It is not necessary for such surveys to be made in April and October; but no declaration shall be given by any such surveyor for a period exceeding six months, and no certificate by the Board of Trade shall remain in force more than six months. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 34.

936. Every passenger steamer shall be surveyed once at the least in every year in the manner mentioned in the fourth part of the M. S. Act, 1854. See M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 8, repealing the provision in sect. 304 of the former act, requiring such steamer to be surveyed every six months.

937. The owner shall transmit the declarations of the shipwright surveyor, and engineer surveyor, to the Board of Trade within fourteen days after receipt. Penalty for default not exceeding 10s. per day to be paid upon the delivery of the certificate therein mentioned in addition to the fee for the same, and to be applied like such fees. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 310.

* (229) This survey has reference to seaworthiness as regards the hull, machinery, and equipment of the ship, and not as regards the quantity, quality, or stowage of the cargo, which is left exclusively to the decision of the emigration officer himself. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 16, No. 32.

(230) The survey should extend in all cases to the masts, yards, pumps, and machinery, as well as to the hull of the vessel, and to her boats, ground tackle, and equipments. Ibid. No. 34.

(231) The survey must be made before any part of the cargo is taken on board, except so much as may be necessary for ballasting the ship, and any portion of such cargo or any ballast on board must be shifted if required by the emigration officer or surveyors. Ibid. p. 17, No. 35.

(232) Vessels, therefore, intending to take cargo at one port and to proceed to another to embark passengers should be surveyed at the port of lading, and the certificate of such survey, signed by the surveyors and the emigration officer of that port, must be produced to the emigration officer at the port of embarkation; but the production of such certificate will not exempt the vessel from a second survey at the latter port, nor from the necessity of unloading for the performance of such survey, should the emigration officer at that port consider that such second survey is necessary. Ibid. p. 18, No. 36.

(233) Such second survey should not, however, be required unnecessarily or vexatiously, as it will of course entail expense on the shipowner. But, before dispensing with a second survey, it will be the duty of the emigration officer to satisfy himself that the vessel has suffered no damage or injury since the date of the first survey. Ibid.

(234) As regards iron passenger ships, not being steamers, one of the surveyors should be a person properly qualified to survey iron ships. Ibid. No. 37.

(235) His certificate should state—(1) that the hull and water-tight partitions, if any, of the ship are sufficient for the intended service, and are in good condition; (2) that the compasses are in good order and properly adjusted, or that the deviation from local attraction has been properly ascertained; (3) the time, if less than six months, for which the hull and equipments will be sufficient; and (4) the limits, if any, beyond which, as regards the hull and equipments, the ship is, in the surveyor's judgment, not fit to ply. Ibid.

(236) As British passenger steamers,

13. Survey for Seaworthiness before Clearance.

1. Generally.*

938. No passenger ship shall clear out or proceed to sea unless surveyed, under whether wooden or iron, were, prior to 1872, required to be surveyed under the M. S. Acts of 1854 and 1862, twice at least in each year by competent officers appointed by the Board of Trade, it is undesirable to put the owners to the expense of a double survey by two sets of government officers where it can be avoided. If, therefore, the emigration officer shall be satisfied that there are no grounds for doubting the seaworthiness of a British steamer which has obtained a passenger certificate from the Board of Trade, he will be at liberty to accept that certificate as sufficient on all matters included in it, if dated within six months preceding the clearance of the ship, and he will accept it if the steamer has not left port since the survey was made. Ibid. No. 38.

(237) The following is the machinery which must be surveyed in passenger ships, viz.: the engines and boilers used for propelling the vessel and all machinery connected therewith; the boilers of donkey engines are to be surveyed with the boilers and machinery of the vessel, when they are in any way connected with them. Boilers and machinery used for loading or unloading the vessel, or used exclusively for purposes unconnected with the motive power of the vessel, do not come within the machinery to be surveyed under the M. S. Act, 1854. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Hull and Machinery of Passenger Ships, 1884, par. 84, p. 49.

(238) Before granting declarations for any period exceeding six months, surveyors in examining machinery should (1) have the upper brasses of all bearings taken off; (2) the shaft turned round and carefully examined; (3) the cylinder covers and junk rings lifted for examination of the piston and cylinders; (4) the slide covers or bonnets removed for the examination of the slides, and, if necessary, the slides taken out; (5) the air and circulating pump covers lifted for examination of the pump bucket and wells; (6) the covers of all feed and bilge pump valves removed for the examination of the valves; (7) all discharge valves and sea-cocks taken out for examination; (8) the propeller shaft to be drawn when necessary, and it and the screw examined and properly replaced; (9) bridges and fire bars removed for a thorough examination of the boilers and furnaces; (10) all cocks and valves on the boilers taken out and examined. It will rest with the owners whether or not they will have a certificate for any period exceeding six months; but if they do so determine, the above instructions are to be complied with before a the direction of the emigration officer at the port of clearance, but at the expense of the owner or charterer, by two or more competent surveyors appointed by the Board of Trade for each port at which there is an emigration officer, and for other ports by the Commissioners of Customs, nor unless it is reported by such surveyors that she is in their opinion seaworthy, and fit for her voyage. The survey shall be made before any part of the cargo is taken on board, except what is necessary for ballast, and such portion shall be shifted, if required. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 19, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

939. Penalty for breach against owner, charterer, or master, not exceeding £100 nor less than £5. Ibid.

2. Appeal and Survey anew.

940. In case any passenger ship shall be reported by the surveyors not to be seaworthy, or not fit for her voyage, the owner or charterer, may in writing require the emigration officer, or in his absence the chief officer of customs, to appoint three other competent surveyors, of whom two at least shall be shipwrights, to survey her, at the expense of the owner or charterer; and if they, by an unanimous report under their hands (but not otherwise), declare her seaworthy, and fit for her voyage, she shall be deemed seaworthy for the voyage. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 19.

14. Board of Trade Certificates.

1. Generally.*

941. Upon the receipt of such declarations (i. e., those mentioned in No. 937), the Board of Trade shall, if satisfied declaration is granted. The above instructions are to apply at least once a year to the survey of all passenger steamers, with the exception named in the next paragraph, whatever the period for which these declarations are given; and to carry out the whole as above, it must be done when the vessel is in dry dock. After the examination of the parts as above, the machinery must be tried under steam at full pressure. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Hull and Machinery of Passenger Ships, 1884, par. 85, p. 50.

(238*a*) In cases in which steamers are surveyed under the Passengers Acts at the commencement of every voyage and in which they are absent for periods of less than six months at a time, the above instructions (in pars. 84 and 85) do not apply to every survey, the usual examination each voyage is sufficient. One complete survey at least, as indicated above, should, however, be made each year. Foreign-going ships are not to have a declaration given them for less than three months, nor home-trade ships for less than one month, unless limited by docking time, with permission of Board of Trade. Ibid. par. 86, p. 50.

* (239) See Order in Council of October 28th, 1879, providing that certificates granted by legislature of Bombay for passenger steamers, &c. shall be equally efficient with certificates granted in the United Kingdom.

(239*a*) Passenger certificates for steamships are sent in duplicate to the Mercantile Marine Office mentioned on the back of the declaration, and the master, owner, or agent will be duly advised of the transmission. They will be under the following separate forms:—

1. For foreign-going steamers or those plying beyond the limits of the home trade (Form 1, Sea-going Steamers).
2. For home-trade passenger steamers or those plying at sea within the limits of the home trade (Form 2, Sea-going Steamers).
3. For steamers plying along the coast during daylight, and within defined limits (Form 3, Excursion Steamers).
4. For steamers plying in waters which are partially smooth (Form 4, River Steamers).
5. For steamers plying in smooth water (Form 5, River and Lake Steamers).

See Board of Trade Instructions as to passenger accommodation, &c., crew spaces, lights, and fog-signals, 1884, p. 7, No. 1.

(240) In the case of foreign-going ships which carry more than one mate, the master and first and second mates must have appropriate certificates, but persons acting as mates of a lower grade are not required to have certificates. Ibid. p. 8, No. 5.

(241) All certificates of competency granted to masters and mates of foreign-going ships entitle the holders to go to sea in corresponding grades, or in any lower grade, in home-trade passenger ships; but certificates of service for foreign-going ships do not entitle the holders to go to sea as masters or mates in home-trade passenger ships. Ibid.

(243) The superintendent of the Mercantile that the provisions of the act have been complied with, cause a certificate in duplicate to be issued that the law as to the survey and declarations has been complied with. Such certificate shall state the limits (if any) beyond which, according to the declaration of the surveyor, such ship is not fit to ply, and the number of passengers which, according to the declaration of the shipwright surveyor, such ship is fit to carry, distinguishing (if necessary) between the numbers to be carried on deck, in the cabins, and in different parts of the deck and cabins, subject to such conditions and variations according to the time of year, the nature of the voyage, the cargo carried, and other circumstances, as the case requires. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 312.

942. As to certificates of passenger steamers under this act, the word "passengers" includes any persons carried in a steamer other than the master, crew, and the owner, his family and servants. Ibid. s. 303.

943. The forging or fraudulent altering of any certificate as to any passenger steamer is a misdemeanour. Ibid. s. 320.

Marine Office delivers the certificate to the owner, agent, or master, on his applying for same, and paying the expenses, if any. If the certificate is not taken up within fourteen days the fact is reported by the superintendent to the Board of Trade. See Board of Trade Instructions for Survey of Passenger Accommodation, 1884, p. 7, No. 2.

(244) The survey of steamers for passenger certificates, other than Steam 1 (foreign-going) or Steam 2 (home-trade), must be made in the district for which the certificate is required and in which the vessel is intended to ply, and a survey for such certificates made out of the district is not sufficient for dispensing with another survey when the vessel arrives within the district, but this does not apply to surveys of vessels in dry dock, or inspected during construction, and the like. Ibid. p. 17, No. 22.

(245) As to the measurement of passenger accommodation of seagoing steamers making short voyages, in which the time occupied in leaving one port and arriving at the next does not exceed ten hours, see Ibid. p. 16, No. 20.

(246) Excursion steamers are to have all the equipments and requirements of home-trade steamers, and are to be of such a substantial character as to be capable of sustaining bad weather in the event of being caught in it. Ibid. p. 23, No. 24.

(247) Declarations for excursion steamers carrying passengers are to be given on form headed Surveys 3. Ibid. p. 24, No. 24.

(248) Declarations for steamers carrying passengers and plying within limits parts of which only are smooth water, are to be given on form headed Surveys 4. Ibid. No. 26.

(249) Declarations for steamers conveying passengers and plying exclusively in smooth water limits are to be given on form Surveys 5. Ibid. p. 25, No. 26.

(250) As to the gear, lifeboat, life-buoys and safety-valves with which river steamers are to be provided, see Ibid. p. 24, No. 25, and p. 25, No. 26.

(251) The upper weather deck and the upper surface of the poop, fore-castle and spar deck, being exposed to the weather, are never to be included in the measurements for passengers in foreign-going steamers; nor are poop, round-house or deck-house to be measured for passengers, unless they form part of the permanent structure of the vessel, but they should in all cases be railed round at the top to prevent children from falling overboard. Ibid. p. 9, No. 7.

(252) No reduction in boat accommodation is allowed until the owner has previously, by special application, obtained the sanction of the Board of Trade. See form Surveys 18; and Board of Trade Instructions as to Passenger Accommodation, &c., 1884, p. 10, No. 9.

(253) As to the plying limits for excursion and river certificates, see Ibid. p. 17, No. 23, and the table annexed thereto.

(254) In cases in which the passenger accommodation in foreign-going steamers is under a different act from the Passengers Act, 1855, the surveyor is guided by the act in question regarding the number of passengers to be carried and the boat capacity. If one act allows more than another, the smaller allowance is that to be followed. Ibid. p. 10, No. 9.

(255) Declarations for foreign-going steamers carrying passengers are to be given on form headed Surveys 1. Ibid. No. 8.

(256) As to the mode of measurement of foreign-going steamers carrying passengers, and not coming within the operation of the Passengers Act, 1855, see Ibid. p. 9, No. 7.

(257) As regards the passenger certificates of steamers when the passenger accommodation is increased whilst the certificate is in force, and the owners wish the number of passengers such increased space will accommodate inserted in their certificate before the next survey, the vessel should be remeasured and a fresh declaration issued, see Board of Trade Instructions, as to fees and expenses of surveys, of October, 1879, Circular 756c, p. 4.

(258) If passenger accommodation is known to have been decreased while a certificate is in force, the fact will be reported to the Board of Trade by any officer, when the certificate in force will be cancelled; and if the owners wish the ship to carry passengers again, she must be remeasured and a fresh declaration issued. Ibid.

944. When a passenger certificate has been granted to any steamer by the Board of Trade under the M. S. Act, 1854, it is not requisite to her employment under the Passengers Acts that she shall be again surveyed, and so long as a steamship is an emigrant or passenger ship within the meaning of the Passengers Acts, and the provisions of those acts as to survey of her hull, machinery, and equipments have been complied with, she is not subject to the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854, as to survey of and certificate for passenger steamers, or to the enactments amending the same. See the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 18.

945. In an action on a marine policy, a plea that the ship was sent by the owners with passengers on board on the voyage on which she was lost, without the owners having done what was necessary to enable them to receive, and without having received, a passenger's certificate from the Board of Trade, all which the owner well knew, is good. Dudgeon v. Pembroke, L. R. 9 Q. B. 581; 43 L. J. Q. B. 220; 31 L. T. 31; 22 W. R. 914.

946. As to the accommodation for passengers in home-trade seagoing steamers, see Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, 1884, pp. 10—16, Nos. 10—21.

947. As to the particulars to be shown in the marking of such ships, Ibid. pp. 13—15, Nos. 17—19.*

948. As to the mode of determining the number of passengers to be carried on deck, on the quarter-deck, poop, &c., and the number of passengers to be carried below the deck, Ibid.

2. Transmission and Notice of Transmission.

949. The Board of Trade shall transmit such duplicate certificate (i. e., that mentioned in No. 941) to the mercantile marine superintendent or other public officer at such port as the owner may mention for the purpose, or at the port where the owner or his agent resides, or where the ship was surveyed and is lying, and shall cause notice of such transmission to be given by post or otherwise to the master, or owner, or his agent; and such superintendent or officer shall deliver such duplicate certificate to the owner, master, or agent on his applying and paying the fees and other sums (if any) payable. In proving the due issue and transmission to the owner, agent, or master of such certificate, it shall be sufficient to show that it has been duly received by such superintendent or officer, and that due notice of the transmission thereof to such officer has been given to such owner, master, or agent. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 313.

950. No passenger steamer is to proceed to sea or upon any voyage or excursion with any passengers, unless the owner has received the Board of Trade certificate applicable to the voyage or excursion. Ibid. s. 318.

3. Production of—

951. No officer of customs shall grant any clearance or transire for any passenger steamer, unless upon the production of the Board of Trade certificate. Ibid.

952. If any passenger steamer attempts to ply or go to sea without such production of her Board of Trade certificate, any such officer may detain her until it is produced. Ibid.

4. Posting up of—

953. The owner or master of every passenger steamer shall forthwith on the transmission of any certificate to him or his agent, cause one of the duplicates so transmitted to be put up in some conspicuous part of the ship, so as to be visible to all persons on board, to be kept there so long as such certificate remains in force and such ship is in use. Penalty

* (259) As to the measurement of deck shelter and deck space for passenger accommodation in home-trade passenger steamers, see Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, &c., 1884, pp. 11 and 12, Nos. 14, 15, and 16.

(260) For the table of limits to be inserted in the declarations of surveyors of home-trade passenger ships, see Ibid. pp. 18 to 23.

(261) The application for survey of home-trade passenger steamers should be in the form headed Surveys 6A. Each section or part of the ship intended for passengers, whether on deck or below, is to be described shortly in that application, and the number and class of passengers each section or part is intended to accommodate when free from cattle, animals, cargo, or other incumbrance, is to be stated. Ibid. p. 10, No. 11.

(261a) Whenever emigration surveys or surveys for passenger certificates are made, the surveyor carefully looks to the efficiency of the fog-horns. Ibid. p. 52, No. 87.

for default against the owner or master not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 317.

954. Penalty for breach if the steamer plies or goes to sea with any passengers on board, against the owner not exceeding £100, and against the master not exceeding £20. Ibid. s. 318.

5. Cancellation or Revocation.

955. The Board of Trade may revoke and cancel such certificates in any case in which it has reason to believe—(1) That the declarations of the sufficiency and good condition of the hull, equipments and machinery of any passenger steamer, or either of them, have been fraudulently or erroneously made; or, (2) That such certificate has otherwise been issued upon false or erroneous information; or, (3) That since the making of such declarations the hull, equipments or machinery of such ship have sustained any injury, or are otherwise insufficient. Ibid. s. 316.

6. Re-issue or Re-grant after Cancellation.

956. When the Board has cancelled or revoked a certificate it may require the owner to have the hull, equipments or machinery again surveyed, and to transmit a further declaration or declarations of the sufficiency thereof, before re-issuing any certificate or granting a fresh one. Ibid.

7. Expiration.*

957. No certificate shall be in force for the purposes of the fourth part of this act beyond the date fixed by the Board of Trade, nor after notice by the Board of Trade to the owner, agent or master that the Board has cancelled or revoked it. But if any passenger steamer is absent from the United Kingdom when her certificate expires, no penalty shall be

* (262) In any case in which the surveyor has reason to believe that the hull, machinery, boilers or equipments are not fit for so long a time as the owner has applied for, he is to grant his certificate for such shorter period as he may deem expedient, informing the owners, if necessary, of his reasons for so doing. Unless it is the docking time only that limits his declaration, or the latest date for which an excursion certificate can be granted in accordance with the regulations, he is not to grant a certificate for a home-trade, excursion, river, or smooth-water steamer for a shorter period than one month, nor for a foreign-going steamer for less than a period of three months, without the written authority of the Board of Trade. In such cases, and also in cases in which the surveyor refuses the certificate altogether, he is to give a statement in writing of the repairs he considers necessary to enable him to grant a certificate for the time asked. By this paragraph the surveyor is to understand that a foreign-going steamer that is not fit for a declaration for three months is not to be deemed by him as fit for a certificate at all. The same rule is to apply to other steamers that are not fit for a month's certificate. Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Hull, Equipments and Machinery of Passenger Steamships, 1884, par. 7, p. 4.

incurred for the want of a certificate until she first begins to ply with passengers after her return. Ibid. s. 315.

958. The Board of Trade may require any certificate which has expired, or been revoked or cancelled, to be delivered up as it directs. Penalty against any owner or master who, without reasonable cause, neglects or refuses to comply with such requirement, not exceeding £10. Ibid.

959. Every passenger steamer is to be surveyed once at least in every year. Ibid. 1872 (c. 73), s. 8.

8. Fees.

960. The owner of every passenger steamer shall pay for every certificate so granted by the Board of Trade such fees as such Board directs, not exceeding those in Table T. in the schedule. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 314.

961. The fees to be charged for certificates in respect of survey shall not exceed for a yearly certificate twice the amount in Table T. Ibid. 1872 (c. 73), s. 8.

9. On Foreign Surveys.

962. When a foreign ship is a passenger steamer or emigrant ship under the M. S. Acts or the Passengers Acts, and the Board of Trade are satisfied with the foreign certificate of survey attested by a British consular officer at that port, and that the requirements of the acts have been substantially complied with, the Board may dispense with any further survey as to the requirements so complied with, and give or direct to be given a certificate having the same effect as if given upon survey under these acts. But her Majesty may, by Order in Council, direct this section shall not apply to a survey at any foreign port at which corresponding provisions are not extended to British ships. Ibid. 1876 (c. 80), s. 19.

15. Consular Officer.

963. The master of every British passenger ship, or ship intended for or carrying passengers under this act, must afford to her Majesty's consular officer at any foreign port every facility for inspecting the ship, communicating with the passengers, and ascertaining that the provisions of this act have been duly complied with. Penalty for breach against master not exceeding £50. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 10.

964. The term "consular officer" includes her Majesty's consul-general, consul, and vice-consul. Ibid.

1. Bond.*

965. No person shall directly or indirectly act as a passage broker in respect of passages from the United Kingdom to any place out of Europe, and not in the Mediterranean Sea, in any passenger ship, or otherwise, unless he shall, with two sureties approved by the nearest emigration officer, have previously entered into a bond in £1,000 in the form in Schedule (D). The bond is to be renewed on each occasion of obtaining his licence, and to be in duplicate, and to be deposited as therein mentioned. Ibid. s. 66.

966. The bond is exempt from stamp duty, but must be renewed annually with the licence. Ibid. Schedule (D).

967. Each member of a firm acting as a passage broker must give a separate bond with sureties. Ibid.

968. Such bond is not required of any sworn broker of the city of London. Ibid. s. 66.

969. The Board of Trade, persons contracting with them or acting under their authority, and any person acting as agent of any passage broker under an appointment in the form in Schedule (I), are excepted. Ibid.

970. The emigration officer may accept the bond of a guarantee society, approved by the Board of Trade, in lieu of the bond of two securities. Ibid.

2. Licence.

(a) In England.†

971. No person shall act as such passage broker unless he has obtained a licence for the purpose, then in force. Penalty for breach not exceeding £50 nor less than £20. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 66.

972. As to the mode of obtaining an annual licence as passage broker from the justices in petty sessions for the district; the grant thereof in the form in Schedule (E) and the notice thereof in the form in Schedule (F), to be transmitted to the Board of Trade, Ibid. s. 67, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

973. Each member of a firm acting as a passage broker must have a separate licence. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), Schedule (E).

974. Fourteen clear days' notice of the intention to apply for such a licence must be given by post to the Board of Trade in London, in the form in Schedule (G). Ibid. s. 67, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

* (263) As to brokers of the City of London, see the London Brokers Relief Act, 1870, c. 60.

(264) It devolves on the emigration officer stationed nearest to the place of business of the passage broker, to satisfy himself as to the solvency and sufficiency of the sureties to the bond. He will, therefore, when their names are submitted to him, call on the broker to furnish also the names and addresses of at least two respectable references for each surety, of whom the usual inquiries can be made. The present law authorizes the acceptance of the bond of any guarantee society which may have been approved by the Lords of the Treasury, in lieu of the bonds of two ordinary sureties. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 57, No. 116.

(265) The sum for which passage brokers are to give bond to the crown is £1,000; but they are allowed the privilege of appointing any number of persons to act as their agents, without the necessity of such agents taking out licences or entering into bonds, the passage brokers being held responsible for their acts and defaults. Ibid. p. 58, No. 119.

(266) There is, therefore, no reason for allowing a clerk in the office of a passage broker to act in the matter of passages for his principal, unless he holds the required appointment, and the wording of the 69th section of the Act of 1855 forbids it under a penalty not exceeding £50, nor less than £20. Ibid. p. 58, No. 120.

† (267) All licences, whenever granted, expire on the 31st January in each year. The licence, as well as the bond to the Crown, must be renewed annually. The licence enables the passage broker to act throughout the United Kingdom. Ibid. p. 57, No. 115.

(b) In Scotland.

975. As to the application for such licence in Scotland, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 67.

(c) Forfeiture.

976. Any justices of the peace adjudicating on any offence against this act, or on any breach or non-performance of its requirements, may order the licence to be forfeited; and shall forthwith cause notice of such forfeiture, in the form in Schedule (H), to be transmitted by post to the Board of Trade in London. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 67, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

3. *Agents.

977. Passage brokers' agents must be appointed in the form prescribed in Schedule I. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 66.

978. The acts and defaults of any person acting as agent of any passage broker are, for the purposes of this act, deemed the acts and defaults of such passage broker. Ibid.

979. No passage broker shall employ as his agent any person not holding from him the appointment of agent as therein mentioned. Ibid. s. 69.

980. Every person holding such appointment shall produce the same, on the demand of any emigration officer, or of any person treating for a passage under this act. Penalty for breach not exceeding £50 nor less than £20. Ibid.

981. Every passage broker shall keep exhibited in a conspicuous place in his office, a list of every person acting as his agent or emigrant runner, and shall on or before the fifth of every month, transmit a true copy of such list, signed by him, to the nearest emigration officer, and report within twenty-four hours every discharge or fresh engagement. Penalty for non-compliance not exceeding £5 nor less than £2. Ibid. s. 81.

17. Emigration Runners.†

982. As to the mode of licensing and registering emigrant runners by the justices of the peace at petty sessions, and supplying them with a badge, Ibid. ss. 76, 77 and 79.

983. For penalties against persons acting as emigrant runners without being licensed and registered, or omitting to wear their badge, or persons employing as emigrant runner a person not licensed and registered, or other misconduct of emigrant runners, or persons representing them, Ibid. ss. 75, 78.

984. No emigrant runner is entitled to any fee or reward for his services from any passage broker, unless acting under his written authority. Ibid. s. 80.

984a. Penalty not exceeding £5 for taking or demanding from any person about to emigrate any fee or reward in reference to his passage. Ibid.

985. For form of emigrant runners' annual licence, Ibid. Sched. (M).

18. Construction of Decks and Beams.

986. For provisions as to the construction of beams and decks on board passenger ships, and penalty for non-compliance against owner, charterer, or master, not exceeding £50, nor less than £5, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 20.

19. Light and Ventilation.‡

987. No passenger ship shall clear out or proceed to sea without such provision

* (268) The act does not, in express terms, limit the duration of the agent's appointment, but as the licence of his principal is made to expire at a fixed date, the authority of such licence would naturally expire at the same time. Ibid. p. 58, No. 122.

† (269) The emigration officer will take care that that portion of the 81st sect. of the Act of 1855 is duly observed which requires that passage brokers at or near his station shall keep conspicuously exhibited in their office a correct list of the names and addresses of the persons authorized in writing to act as their agents or runners, and also that they furnish him with a true copy of such list on or before the 5th of each month. Ibid. p. 59, No. 124.

‡ (270) Care should be taken that the means provided for ventilation are sufficient to allow of a good supply of air in the event for light and air to the passenger decks as the emigration officer at the port of clearance may require; nor, if there are one hundred passengers on board, without adequate ventilating apparatus approved by him; the passengers shall have the unimpeded use of the whole of each hatchway situated over the space appropriated to their use, and there shall be erected over the same such a booby-hatch or other substantial covering as the emigration officer shall judge to afford the greatest amount of light and air, and protection from wet, as the case will admit. Penalty for breach against owner, charterer, or master, or any of them, not exceeding £50, nor less than £20. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 26.

988. Her Majesty, by Order in Council, may prescribe rules and regulations as to passenger ships proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place in her Majesty's possessions abroad for securing their ventilation. Ibid. s. 59.

989. As to such Orders in Council generally, the alteration and proof thereof, see c. 7, p. 1279.

of the hatches being closed in bad weather. Places ventilated by hatches only, or in which provision is not made for a sufficient supply of air and light under all circumstances, should not be measured for passengers. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Passenger Accommodation, &c., 1884, p. 9, No. 7.

(271) The emigration officer will therefore pay particular attention to the supply of light and ventilation between decks, and see that the law is efficiently carried out. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 26, No. 56.

(272) At some of the ports this duty is performed by the medical inspectors under the supervision of the emigration officer. Ibid. p. 27, n.

(273) It is very advisable that the hold, especially when the cargo consists of coal or grain, should also be ventilated in such a manner as not to open into or affect in any way the passenger compartments. Ibid. p. 26, No. 56.

(274) The plan for light and ventilation usually adopted in Liverpool at present is as follows:—For ships going through the tropics a shaft is required with skylight through the top-gallant fore-castle, another of a large size through the house, and generally three shafts between the mainmast and the stern post. In addition to these shafts, ventilating tubes with bonnet heads are placed forward and aft, varying in size from 12 to 20 inches diameter, according to the size of the ship. Side lights are not always insisted on. For ships crossing the Atlantic or going to Canada,

20. Safety-valves.*

990. Every steamer of which a survey is required shall be provided with a safety-valve upon each boiler, so constructed as to be out of the control of the engineer when the steam is up, and, if such valve is in addition to the ordinary valve, it shall be so constructed as to have an area not less, and a pressure not greater, than the area of, and pressure on, that valve. Penalty for default against the owner appearing in fault not exceeding £100, and against the master appearing in fault not exceeding £50. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 301, sub-s. 1.

991. Penalty against any person placing an undue weight on the safety-valve of any steamer, surveyed as therein mentioned, increasing such weight beyond the limits fixed by the engineer surveyor, not exceeding £100 in addition to other liability. Ibid. s. 302.

21. Fire Engine and Apparatus.†

992. For provisions as to the description and power of the fire engine and appa-

two tubes forward and aft and through the house are generally found sufficient. The large American ships in the passenger trade have many hatchways covered with skylights, also ladder-ways through the houses on deck, so that shafting is not required, two tubes forward and two aft generally being sufficient. Ibid. No. 56.

(275) Where there are as many as 100 statute adults on board, a proper ventilating apparatus, to be approved by the emigration officer and fitted to his satisfaction, must be insisted on, in addition to the ordinary means of ventilation supplied by the ship. The commissioners do not prescribe any particular kind of apparatus, as improvements are constantly in progress; but for the present they are not aware of any mode which combines economy, simplicity and efficiency in an equal degree to that of iron air funnels inserted into the deck with revolving heads. Ibid. p. 28, No. 56.

(276) Over each of the passengers' hatchways there must be such a booby hatch or other substantial covering as shall, in the opinion of the emigration officer, afford the greatest amount of light and air, and of protection from the wet, as the case will admit. Ibid. p. 28, No. 57.

* (277) For instructions to surveyors as to the area, weighting, position, &c., of safety-valves, see Board of Trade Instructions as to the Survey of Hull, Equipment and Machinery of Passenger Ships, 1884, pars. 31, 58, 66—68, 77—83, 92.

† (278) The officer has the power of re-ratus for extinguishing fire to be carried on board every "passenger ship," and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50 nor less than £5 sterling, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 27.

22. Anchors and Cables.*

993. For provisions as to anchors and cables, their weight, size and materials to be carried by "passenger ships," and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50 nor less than £5, Ibid.

23. Chronometers and Com- passes.†

994. For provisions as to the chronometers and compasses to be carried on quiring, if he thinks fit, that, in addition to a fire-engine, some other apparatus for extinguishing fire shall be carried. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 32, No. 64.

(279) The commissioners are not at present aware of anything more suitable than a proper supply of fire-buckets with long lanyards. In order to assist their officers in the exercise of the discretion vested in them on this point, and to promote a uniform practice at the various outports, the commissioners have prepared a scale (placed in Appendix No. 19), showing the dimensions and power of the fire-engines and number of buckets which should be required. Ibid.

(280) See Appendix, No. 21, for suggestions to masters of emigrant ships respecting boats and fire at sea. Ibid. No. 65.

(281) It is advisable that the donkey engine for pumping water through the condenser be so fitted that it can be made available in case of emergency for extinguishing fire in any part of the ship; a leather hose, with suitable bends and conductors, is to be supplied for this purpose. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Hull, Machinery, &c. of Passenger Ships, 1884, par. 92, p. 56.

(282) It shall be the duty of the master or of the mate, or officer next in command, once at least in each week to call all hands to quarters and exercise them in the discipline and use of the pumps and all other apparatus for the safety of life on board of such vessel, and to see that all the equipments required by law are in complete working order for immediate use; and the fact of the exercise of the crew as herein contemplated, shall be entered upon the steamer's log-book, stating the day of the month and hour when so exercised; and any neglect or omission on the part of the officer in command of such steamer to strictly enforce this rule shall be deemed cause for the revocation of the licence of such officer. See Regulations of Supervising Inspectors, r. 57, circa anno 1876. [AMERICA.]

at Lloyd's. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 31, No. 60.

(284) There should be a proper locker set apart for the chain cables, and the emigration officer should see that the ends of the cables are securely clinched before the ship proceeds to sea. This last is a very important point. Ibid.

(285) Surveyors must be careful to see that each steamer they survey is provided with chain cables and anchors duly certified under the Chain Cable Acts. When the stream and kedge anchors exceed 168 lbs. in weight they also must be tested in accordance with the act. The surveyors should, upon each occasion, require the production of the test certificates of all the chain cables and anchors. They must also see that the chain cables and anchors on board are sufficient for service and in good condition. The cables must be removed from the chain lockers at least once in twelve months, cleaned if necessary, and the pins knocked out of the shackles. The shackle-pins should also be secured by small pins of hard wood. The spare anchors should not be stowed below, but kept where they will be ready if required. Proper hawsers and warps must also be supplied. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Hull Equipments, &c. of Passenger Ships, 1884, par. 48, p. 21.

† (286) Every "passenger ship" must carry, if proceeding to any place south of the Equator, at least two chronometers; and if to the north of the Equator, one chronometer; and whatever be the destination, at least three steering and one azimuth compass. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, No. 60.

(287) As the employment of iron ships is now common in the passenger trade, the adjustment of the compasses in such ships has become a matter of primary importance. The emigration officer, therefore, should take particular pains to see that the ship has been effectively swung and her compasses correctly adjusted and properly arranged before he grants his clearing certificate. Ibid. p. 31, No. 62.

(288) In the Appendix is placed an extract of a recent report made by Captain Evans, the superintendent of compasses attached to the Admiralty, on the arrangement of the board "passenger ships," and penalty for breach against master not exceeding £50, nor less than £5, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 27.

995. Every seagoing steamer employed to carry passengers shall have her compasses properly adjusted from time to time; such adjustment, in the case of ships surveyed, to be made to the satisfaction of the shipwright surveyor, and according to regulations of the Board of Trade. Penalty for default against the owner appearing in fault not exceeding £100, and against the master appearing in fault, not exceeding £50. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 301, sub-s. 2.

24. Hospital and Fittings.*

996. For provisions as to the space in every "passenger ship," to be used excompasses in an iron ship chartered for the transport service and their bearing on her safe navigation. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 31, No. 62.

(289) As to the Instructions of the Board of Trade in reference to the adjustment of compasses on passenger ships and the production of an adjuster, or, in the case of a wooden ship, the furnishing of a table of errors, see Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Hull, Equipments, and Machinery of Passenger Ships, 1884, pars. 36, 37, 38, p. 17.

(290) The act is silent as to charts. The emigration officer should, however, see that the vessel is provided with proper and accurate charts, otherwise she could hardly be said to be "in all respects fit for her intended voyage." Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 31, No. 61.

(291) But he could not legally insist on any particular description of charts, as, for example, the Admiralty charts, unless he is satisfied that they are the only correct charts to be had, and that those with which the ship is provided are not sufficient to ensure her safety. Ibid.

* (292) In every "passenger ship" there must, to the satisfaction of the emigration officer, be a sufficient space divided off for one or more hospitals, and properly fitted with bed places, bedding utensils, &c. for the exclusive use of the sick passengers. Ibid. p. 23, No. 52.

(293) Whenever the emigration officer has a voice in the matter, it would, on sanitary grounds, be advisable that the hospitals, or at least one of them, should be placed in a poop or deck-house if practicable, rather than on the upper passenger deck. Ibid.

(294) To assist the judgment of the emigration officer in deciding upon the supply of beds to be shipped for hospital use, a scale is placed in the Appendix. The space must not be less than at the rate of 18 clear superficial feet for every fifty passengers (not statute adults). The hospitals can be placed only on the upper passenger deck, or in the poop, or any deck-house which shall be properly built and secured to the satisfaction of the emigration officer. Where a vessel takes passengers on more than one deck, the owner or charterer may choose whether the hospitals should be placed on the upper passenger deck, or in the poop or deck-house, or divided between them, unless the poop or deck-house, from the number of cabin and other passengers carried therein, should become an upper passenger deck under the terms of the 3rd section of the Act of 1855, when the hospitals must be placed in the poop or deck-house, and not elsewhere. Ibid.

(295) The United States law prohibits more than two tiers of berths, and requires the berths to be 6 feet long by 2 feet wide, and the bottom berth to be not less than 9 inches from the deck. Only a single passenger is to be placed in each berth, but double berths may be constructed and occupied by two women, or by a husband and wife, or a woman and two children under eight, or by a man and two of his own children under eight, or by two men, members of the same family. Ibid. p. 23, n.

(296) The space occupied by the hospitals is not to be deducted from the superficial contents of the deck, which regulate the total number of passengers to be carried thereon. Ibid. p. 24, No. 53.

(297) There arises, therefore, at first sight some doubt as to the way in which the passengers displaced by the hospitals should be distributed between the deck on which the hospitals are constructed and the other passenger deck. The question is not free from legal difficulty; but after considering the several sections which bear upon it, and the whole spirit of the act, the commissioners are of opinion that the proper course is the following:—(1) to calculate the whole number of passengers which the ship is legally capable of carrying; (2) to calculate the number which each deck would be capable of carrying, after deducting the space which it is proposed to reserve in each for hospitals; and (3) to distribute the whole legal complement of passengers between the different decks in proportion to the number which each deck, taken by itself and exclusive of the room actually occupied as hospitals, would be capable of carrying. Ibid.

(298) This is also the American law, but it restricts the hospital to 100 superficial feet. Ibid. p. 24, n.

clusively as a hospital for the passengers, and as to the fittings and furniture thereof to the satisfaction of the emigration officer, and penalty for breach against the owner, charterer, or master not exceeding £50, nor less than £5, Ibid. s. 24.

25. Privies.*

997. For provisions as to the construction of privies in "passenger ships" to the satisfaction of the emigration officer at the port of clearance, and the maintenance thereof in a serviceable and cleanly condition throughout the voyage, and until after forty-eight hours from the arrival of the ship at the port of final discharge, unless all the passengers sooner quit the ship; and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50 nor less than £5, Ibid. s. 25.

26. Ship's Boats, Rafts, and Life Buoys.†

998. For provisions as to the boats and life buoys, and the number thereof to be carried and kept in order by every "passenger ship" according to her tonnage, one being a long boat and one a life boat, and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50 nor less than £5, Ibid. s. 27.

27. Signals of Distress and Lights.‡

999. Every seagoing passenger steamer and emigrant ship must be provided to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade with means for making the signals of distress at night specified in the M. S. Act, 1873, or in any rules substituted therefor, including means of making on the ship flames inextinguishable in water, or such other means as the Board of Trade may previously approve; and with a proper supply of lights inextinguishable in water and fitted for attachment to life buoys. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 21.

1000. Penalty for breach against owner not exceeding £100, and against master not exceeding £50. Ibid.

1001. As to such signals, see Pt. II. c. 23, p. 1247.

1002. For provisions as to adequate means to be approved by the emigration officer at the port of clearance of making signals by night and in fogs, to be carried by every "passenger ship," and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50 nor less than £5, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 27.

28. Crew.

1. Sufficiency.||

1003. For provision for the carrying

* (299) See for regulations of Board of Trade in reference to water-closets in home-trade passenger ships, Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, &c., 1884, par. 12, p. 11.

(300) The act under this head requires that where there are as many as fifty female passengers, two at least of the required privies must be water-closets, placed under the poop or elsewhere on the upper deck, to the satisfaction of the emigration officer, for the exclusive use of the women and young children. If any water-closets are placed in the between decks, there must be an interval between them and the nearest berths of at least nine inches, and these would not supersede the necessity of having water-closets under the poop or on the upper deck. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 26, No. 54.

(301) While the act distinguishes between privies and water-closets, it abstains from specifying any particular description of closet, leaving that point to be settled between the master and the emigration officer. Ibid. No. 55.

(302) Any closet fitted with water would meet the words of the act; but a control is lodged in the hands of the emigration officer by the proviso that the privies and water-closets are to be fitted to his satisfaction. Ibid.

(303) It will be his duty, therefore, to see that the water-closets are so fitted as to be serviceable and safe both for the passengers and the ship, but he need not insist on valves and pipes for this purpose, if satisfactory provision can, in his opinion, be made for it in any other way. Ibid.

(304) The American law requires one safe and convenient privy for every 100 passengers. Ibid. p. 26, n.

† (305) For the regulations given to the Board of Trade surveyors as to the boats and life buoys to be carried on passenger ships, see Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Hull, Equipments, &c. of Passenger Ships, 1884, pars. 23—34, pp. 11—17.

‡ (306) See, for Board of Trade instructions, in respect of statutory distress signals, their examination, guns and rocket apparatus, Ibid. pars. 49—54, p. 22.

|| (307) This section requires generally that passenger ships shall be manned with "an efficient crew;" but it does not prescribe any ratio of men to tonnage. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 32, No. 66.

of an efficient crew on board every "passenger ship" to the satisfaction of the emigration officer, and that the men are not to be changed without his consent, and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 28.

1004. As to survey of crew spaces by surveyors of Board of Trade, see Pt. I. c. 36, p. 1190.

2. Appeal from Emigration Officer's Decision.

1005. If the emigration officer considers the crew inefficient, the owner or charterer may appeal in writing to the Board of Trade, which shall, at the expense of the appellant, appoint two other emigration officers or competent persons to examine into the matter, and the unanimous opinion of the persons so appointed, expressed under their hands,

(308) The emigration officer must on this point be influenced by the usage of the port at which he is stationed; but he must bear in mind that a sufficient crew for a passenger ship includes efficient crews for all the boats, and also that a cargo ship may very well be navigated with a less crew than would be safe if the same ship full of passengers had to carry sail with the hatches open. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 33, No. 66.

(309) To assist the judgment of the emigration officer and promote a uniform practice, the commissioners have, after consulting their most experienced naval officers, prepared the crew scale placed in the Appendix No. 20, as applicable to sailing vessels. Ibid.

(311) It sometimes occurs that sailors are engaged for an Australian voyage at a nominal rate of wages, e.g., 1s. a month, their object being to get a free passage out. In these cases the emigration officer would not be justified in objecting to them on the ground of the bargain they had made with the owner, if he had no reason to doubt that they were engaged in good faith, and were to work the ship on the voyage. He would, however, be justified in objecting to them if he had reason to conclude that the insertion of their names in the ship's articles was colourable—that they were not really seamen—that they were not to proceed on the voyage—or, if they proceeded, that they were not to work the ship. Ibid.

3. Medical Inspection.

1006. See as to medical inspection of stores for the crew, c. 42, s. 9, p. 1313.

29. Cooks and Cooking Apparatus.*

1007. As to the cook or cooks and the cooking apparatus and fuel for the same to be carried on board "passenger ships" to the satisfaction of the emigration officer, and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50 nor less than £5, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 39.

30. Stewards.

1008. For provisions for every "passenger ship" with 100 passengers carrying a steward, who is to be approved by

however, be justified in objecting to them if he had reason to conclude that the insertion of their names in the ship's articles was colourable—that they were not really seamen—that they were not to proceed on the voyage—or, if they proceeded, that they were not to work the ship. Ibid.

(312) By the 136th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, Part 3 (c. 104)—which, however, applies only to British ships—no foreign-going ship shall go to sea unless the master and the first and second mates, or only mate, as the case may be, have obtained and possess valid certificates, either "of competency" or "of service," appropriate to their several stations in the ship, or of a higher grade. Ibid. p. 34, No. 66.

(313) The penalty for an infraction of this enactment is a sum not exceeding £50 on the master or mate, and on the person employing them. The act does not fix the number of mates to be carried in a ship. The emigration officer could not, therefore, object to clear a ship carrying only one mate, unless he considers, from the circumstances of the case, that an additional officer of that class is indispensable to her safety. In short, he must in every case satisfy himself, before he clears the ship, that the crew on board is efficient, both in numbers and in character, and that the master and first and second mates, if more than one is carried, possess certificates either "of competency" or "of service." Ibid.

the emigration officer, and not to assist in navigating the ship, and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50 nor less than £5, Ibid. s. 38.

1. Horses, Cattle, and Dangerous or Injurious Goods.*

1009. No "passenger ship" shall clear out or proceed to sea if there shall be on board as cargo, horses, cattle, gunpowder, vitriol, lucifer matches, guano, or green hides, nor if there shall be on board any article as cargo or ballast, which by reason of its nature, quantity or mode of stowage shall, singly or collectively, be deemed by the emigration officer at the port of clearance likely to endanger the health or lives of the passengers or the safety of the ship. Penalty for breach against owner, charterer or master not exceeding £300 nor less than £5. Ibid. s. 29.

1010. As to the conditions under which horses, dogs, pigs, goats and cattle may be carried in passenger ships, see the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 8.

1011. One of the secretaries of state may by order under his hand, according to the conditions and directions therein specified, authorize the carriage as cargo in any passenger ship of naval and military stores for the public service. Ibid. 1870 (c. 95), s. 3.

1012. As to the delivery of the order to and by the master, and the penalty for breach being the same as that for carrying such articles or cattle without such order, see Ibid.

* (315) As to the prohibition of the conveyance of gunpowder, &c. see the Explosive Substances Act, 1875 (c. 17), s. 42, and the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), ss. 23—28; 2 P. & B. 4th ed. p. 186.

(316) The mate of every passenger steamer shall also carefully examine all packages of freight delivered on board for shipment, with a view to detect and prevent any combustible or dangerous articles being delivered on board without his knowledge. Regulations of Supervising Inspectors, rule 58, circa anno 1876. [AMERICAN.]

(317) As to foreign-going steamers, when cargo or stores are carried in the space measured for passengers, one passenger is to be deducted for every 12 superficial feet of deck space so occupied. See Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, &c. 1884, p. 10, No. 8.

(318) As to the arrangements to be made when cattle are carried, see Ibid. p. 11, No. 13; p. 23, No. 24; p. 24, No. 25; p. 25, No. 26.

(319) The Act of 1855 altogether prohibited horses and cattle as cargo in passenger ships. But as a rigid application of this rule to passenger ships carrying but comparatively few passengers was found seriously to interfere with the exportation of animals needed for the improvement of stock in the colonies, the Act of 1863 has so far relaxed the prohibition as to allow horned cattle, deer, horses, asses, dogs, sheep, and female goats (but not male goats or pigs) to be taken as cargo in numbers proportioned (within narrow limits) to the tonnage of the vessel, provided the passengers on board do not exceed the proportion of fifteen to each 100 tons register, and that for their use and exercise at least 10 superficial feet per statute adult be kept clear on the weather deck. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 35, No. 69.

(320) Besides gunpowder, vitriol, lucifer matches, guano and green hides, which are absolutely prohibited, there is a general prohibition against taking as cargo or ballast any article or number of articles which, by reason of their nature or quantity or mode of stowage, shall either singly or collectively be deemed by the emigration officer likely to endanger the health or lives of the passengers or the safety of the ship. Ibid.

(321) It is on this latter part of the clause that questions frequently arise, such as whether salted hides, packed or unpacked salt, iron in an unusual quantity, coal, &c., come within the meaning of the prohibition. The determination of these and similar questions rests with the emigration officer. Ibid. pp. 35, 36, No. 69.

(322) In the appeals that have been made to the commissioners on this part of the law, they have declined to sanction the shipment of salted hides unless packed in tight casks, or flour of sulphur; but they have not objected to salt in moderate quantities, and properly packed; nor to the description of coal or of patent fuel, such as Warlich's, Wylam's, and the national patent steam fuel, which on chemical analysis have been found not liable to spontaneous combustion. Ibid. p. 36, No. 69.

(323) With regard to iron, they have instructed their officers not to allow the shipment of such a quantity (taken in ordinary cases at two-thirds the registered or British tonnage) as would be likely from its weight to strain or endanger the ship; and, as much must depend on the manner of its stowage, they have further directed them to watch the stowage of ships carrying iron, so as to ascertain that it is properly distributed fore and aft, and raised by chequering or otherwise. Ibid.

2. Stowage.(a) *Interference with Passenger Accommodation.

1013. In every "passenger ship" no part of the cargo, passengers' luggage, provisions, water or stores, whether for the use of passengers or crew, shall be carried on the upper deck or on the "passenger decks," unless in the opinion of the emigration officer it shall be so placed as not to impede light or ventilation, nor interfere with the comfort of the passengers, nor unless stowed to his satisfaction, and the space occupied thereby, or in his opinion unavailable for the accommodation of the passengers, shall (unless occupied by passengers' luggage) be deducted in calculating the space by which, under the provisions of this act, the number of passengers is regulated. Penalty for breach against owner, charterer, or master, not exceeding £300 nor less than £5. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 29.

(b) Storage of Water.

1014. As to the tanks or casks in which water is to be carried being approved by the emigration officer, and being of a requisite strength, &c., see Ibid. s. 33, and the specifications of water casks sanctioned by the Board of Trade, set out in 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. ccccxxx.

* 32. Interpreters.

1015. In every foreign "passenger ship" in which half of the passengers are British subjects, unless the master and officers or not less than three of them understand and speak English, there shall be carried, according to the number of passengers, one or two persons who understand and speak the language of the master and crew and the English language, and they shall act as interpreters, and be employed exclusively in attendance on the passengers, and no such ship shall clear out or proceed to sea without having such interpreter or interpreters on board. Penalty for breach against the master, not exceeding £50 nor less than £5. Ibid. s. 40.

33. Medical Man.†

1016. Every passenger ship shall carry a duly qualified medical practitioner, rated

* (324) As a general rule, no part of the cargo, passengers' luggage, provisions, water or stores should be carried on the upper or passengers' decks. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 36, No. 70.

(325) But as the stowage of very heavy cargo, such as iron, at the bottom of the ship, makes her laboursome, and in some cases unseaworthy, the law permits the stowage of a portion of the cargo on deck, with the consent of the emigration officer, provided that it be stowed to his satisfaction, and so as not to impede light or ventilation, or interfere with the comfort of the passengers. Ibid.

(326) The room occupied by any cargo on the passengers' decks is to be deducted from the space by which the number of passengers is regulated. Ibid.

(327) See also instructions to surveyors as to carriage of coal in passenger ships. Ibid. p. 36, n.

† (328) The Order in Council of August 9th, 1866, orders every passenger ship carrying more than fifty passengers to carry a duly-qualified medical practitioner. See same in 12 Hertslet, p. 1100.

(329) The only definition given of the term "duly qualified," is, that the medical man shall be authorized by law to practise in some part of her Majesty's dominions (or in the case of a foreign ship, in the country to which the ship may belong), as a physician, surgeon or apothecary. Any difficulty, however, as regards medical practitioners in the United Kingdom may be considered as removed by the Medical Act of 1858, c. 90, (amended in minor points by the 22 Vict. c. 21, and 23 Vict. c. 7.) By that act (s. 15) all persons possessing the qualifications specified in Schedule A. to the act, are entitled to be registered by one of the three branch medical councils for England, Scotland and Ireland respectively, and unless so registered they cannot recover at law their charges (s. 32), nor hold any appointment in the military or naval service, or in emigrant or other vessels, nor in any hospital, parish, union, friendly society or other public establishment, body or institution (s. 36). See Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, pp. 43, 44, No. 90.

(330) The emigration officers, therefore, will be guided by the Medical Act as regards British practitioners, and require them to produce in proof of their qualifications either a copy of the "Medical Register" containing the name of the candidate, or a certificate under the hand of the registrar of the general council, or of any branch council, that he is duly registered. Ibid. p. 44, No. 90.

(331) Medical men authorized to practise in the colonies may, however, without being registered, take charge of passenger ships on the ship's articles when the duration of the voyage, as therein computed, exceeds eighty days for sailing ships and forty-five days for steamers and the number of passengers exceeds fifty, or when the number of persons on board (including cabin passengers, officers, and crew) exceeds 300. Penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £100 nor less than £20. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 41.

1017. As to the proper qualifications of such a medical man, the notification of his name to, and his approval by, the emigration officer at the port of clearance, and the requirement that he shall be provided with proper surgical instruments to the satisfaction of such officer, Ibid. s. 42.

1018. Penalty against any unqualified person attempting to proceed as medical practitioner, and against all persons aiding therein, not exceeding £100 nor less than £10. Ibid.

1019. For provisions enabling governors of colonies to appoint medical practitioners to passenger ships on colonial voyages, Ibid. s. 98.

1020. Every foreign-going ship having 100 persons or upwards on board shall carry on board as part of her complement some person duly authorized to practise as physician, surgeon, or apothecary. Penalty for default against owner for every voyage, not exceeding £100. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 230.

1021. Her Majesty, by Order in Council, may prescribe rules and regulations as to passenger ships proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place in her Majesty's possessions abroad, for requiring duly-qualified medical practitioners to be carried in passenger ships in cases where they would not be required to be carried under the provisions of this act. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 59.

1022. As to such Orders in Council generally and the alteration and proof thereof, see this Part, c. 7, p. 1279.

1023. In every passenger ship proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place in her Majesty's possessions abroad, the medical practitioner on board, aided by the master, or, in the absence of such medical practitioner, the master, may exact obedience to all rules and regulations prescribed by any such Order in Council. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 60.

1024. Penalty against any person neglecting or refusing to obey, or obstructing the medical practitioner or master in the execution of such duty, not exceeding £2, besides imprisonment not exceeding one month, at the discretion of the justices adjudicating on the complaint. Ibid.

34. Medical Stores.

1. Generally.

1025. For provisions for the supply by the owner or charterer of every "passenger ship," for the use of the passengers, of medicines, medical comforts, instruments, and other things proper for diseases and accidents incident to sea voyages, and for the medical treatment of the passengers, including an adequate supply of a disinfecting fluid or agent, and printed or written directions for use, in the judgment of the emigration officer at the port of clearance good and sufficient for the voyage, and properly packed and placed under charge of the medical practitioner, when there is one on board, to be used at his discretion, and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50, nor less than £5, see Ibid. s. 43.

1026. As to the taking on board of further medical stores and comforts to make up the prescribed quantities on the ship putting back to or touching at any port or place in the United Kingdom, see Ibid. s. 50.

1026a. As to lime juice, see c. 35, s. 2, p. 1034.

2. Inspection.*

1027. As to the medical inspection of such medicines, medical comforts, and from the United Kingdom, which they could not have done under the Act of 1852; and when the majority of the passengers in the ship, or as many as 300 of them, are foreigners, any medical man may be carried (whatever his professional qualification), provided only that he is approved by the emigration officer. Ibid. No. 91.

* (332) The emigration officer is constituted the judge of the sufficiency, both as regards quality and quantity, of the medicines and medical comforts for passenger ships. Ibid. p. 45, No. 94.

(333) With a view to a uniform practice in this matter at the several ports, the commissioners [Board of Trade] have, with profes-other articles, by some medical practitioner appointed by the emigration officer at the port of clearance, and his certificate to the officer that the ship contains a sufficient supply thereof, and of disinfecting agents, instruments, and other things requisite for the medical treatment of the passengers, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 44.*

1028. Penalty in case of any passenger ship clearing out or proceeding to sea without complying with all such requirements, against the master not exceeding £100, nor less than £5. Ibid.

1030. Any local marine board may, on the requirement of the Board of Trade, appoint and remove a medical inspector of ships for the port, and fix his remuneration, subject to the control of the Board of Trade; and at ports where there are no local marine boards the Board of Trade may appoint and remove such inspectors, and fix their remuneration; such inspectors are to inspect the medicines, medical stores, sugar, vinegar, lime, lemon juice, or other articles, required to be kept on board any such ships; and such inspection, if at places where there are local marine boards, shall be made under their direction, and in any special cases under the direction of the Board of Trade, and if made at places where there are no local marine boards, shall be made under the direction of the Board of Trade. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 226.

1031. Such medical inspectors shall for the purposes of such inspection have the same powers as the inspectors appointed by the Board of Trade under the first part of this act (for such powers see ss. 14 and 15 of the act, and tit. SEAMEN); but every such inspector, if required by timely notice in writing from the master, owner, or consignee, shall make his inspection three days at least before the ship proceeds to sea, and if the result of the inspection is satisfactory shall not again make inspection before the commencement of the voyage, unless he has reason to suspect that some of the articles inspected have been subsequently removed, injured, or destroyed. Ibid.

1032. Whenever any such medical inspector is of opinion that in any ship hereby required to carry them such articles or any of them are deficient in quantity or quality, or placed in improper vessels, he shall signify the same in writing to the chief officer of customs of the port, and to the master, owner, or consignee, and the master of such ship, before proceeding to sea, shall produce to such chief officer of customs a certificate under the hand of such or some other medical inspector, that such deficiency has been supplied or remedied, or that such improper vessels have been replaced by proper vessels; and such chief officer of customs shall not grant a clearance for such ship without the production of such certificate, and if such ship attempts to go to sea without a clearance, he may detain her until such certificate is produced; penalty against the owner, master, or consignee, if such ship proceeds to sea without the production of such certificate, not exceeding £20. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 226.

1033. For provisions enabling governors of colonies by proclamation to declare what shall be deemed for the purpose of this act the scale of medicines, and medical comforts, and enabling such proclamations to be received as evidence, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 97.

35. Provisions and Water.

1034. There was in an agreement under seal for the use of cabins and accommosional assistance, prepared and placed in the Appendix, for the use of the emigration officers, two scales of medicines, medical stores, and instruments, one applicable to Australian and other distant voyages, and the other to North American voyages. See Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 45, No. 94.

* (334) But to assist him in this part of his duty, the law requires (sect. 44 of Act of 1855) that the medical examiner of passengers shall inspect the medicines, medical comforts, &c.

and certify to the emigration officer that they are sufficient for the voyage. Without this certificate the emigration officer should not grant his clearing certificate. Ibid.

† (335) By notice in London Gazette of 29th April, 1856, another dietary scale, instead of Scale B in the 35th section of the Passengers Act, 1855, was authorized. See the scale set out in 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. cxcii. See also sect. 20 of the M. S. Act, 1876, giving power to the Board of Trade to modify requirements as to dition for passengers in a ship, a covenant on the part of the captain to permit and suffer the hirer to stow away the baggage of the passengers in a part of the hold.

food, &c. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 37, n.

(336) The present scale of provisions, though diminishing the quantity of oatmeal formerly required, includes meat, and makes a difference between voyages to North America and those to more distant destinations, the latter containing more flour and the additional articles of preserved meat, suet, raisins, and butter. Ibid. pp. 37 and 38, No. 74.

(337) It is necessary that the emigration officer should, in the case of each ship, inform himself what scale is intended to be used on the voyage. Ibid. p. 39, No. 75.

(338) This can readily be done by an inspection of the contract ticket issued to the passengers. He will then ascertain that the provisions laid in are of the proper kind and qualities. Ibid.

(339) A careful survey of the water and provisions in an emigrant ship is one of the most important of the emigration officer's duties. He will therefore give his special attention to this point; and as attempts have occasionally been made to pass inferior articles by overlaying them with a small portion unobjectionable in quality, he will always select indiscriminately a certain proportion of the packages of each sort of provisions, and have all their contents thoroughly exposed to view. For this purpose one in ten at least of the packages of articles which do not spoil by opening should be selected; but while in ordinary cases this mode of examination will suffice, yet if there is any reason to suspect an attempt to evade the law, a strict general search should be made with a view of detecting the fraud. Ibid. No. 76.

(340) Should the emigration officer discover any provisions or stores which are not of good and wholesome quality, or which are not in a sweet or good condition, he will at once reject, mark, and have them landed, and such provisions cannot afterwards be re-shipped either in the same or any other "passenger ship" under a penalty not exceeding £100. Ibid. No. 77.

(341) The emigration officer having ascertained the quality of the passengers' provisions, will next satisfy himself as to their quantity, with reference to the length of the voyage, and the issues prescribed in sect. 35. Ibid. No. 78.

(342) The Act of 1855 does not alter the length of the different voyages prescribed by the Act of 1852. Ibid. p. 37, No. 71.

(343) An error has crept into the rule regulating the length of voyage to North America, which, however, affects only vessels clearing out on the 16th or 17th day of January. The first limb of the rule declares the length of the voyage to be seventy days for sailing vessels and forty days for steamers that clear out between the 15th day of January and the 14th day of October, both days inclusive; whilst the second limb declares eighty and forty-five days respectively as the length of the voyage if the vessel clears between the 15th day of October and the 17th (it ought to be the 15th) day of January, both days inclusive, thus overlapping by two days in January the rule in the first limb. Should it happen that a vessel clears out on the 16th or 17th of January, the commissioners consider that the law would be satisfied if she be provisioned for the shorter and not the longer period. The emigration officer will guide himself accordingly whenever the case arises. Ibid. No. 72.

(344) The declared length of voyage to North America for certain passenger steamers has, by notice in the London Gazette, dated 7th June, 1864, been reduced from forty and forty-five days to thirty-two and thirty-seven days respectively. See Appendix (C) to Passengers Acts, Ibid. p. 37, n.

(345) The emigration officer will bear in mind that what the passengers themselves may bring is not to be reckoned, but is irrespective of what the owner, charterer, or master is bound to provide. Ibid. p. 39, No. 78.

(346) The exact mode of ascertaining the quantity of provisions must depend very much on the facilities for counting and weighing packages afforded by each port. Ibid. pp. 39, 40, No. 78.

(347) At some of the ports this duty is performed by the medical inspectors. Ibid. p. 39, n.

(348) The commissioners do not, therefore, lay down any precise rule on this point, but leave each officer to adopt the course which he may consider most effectual. Ibid. p. 40, No. 78.

(349) He will, moreover, see that there is an ample supply of wholesome food for victualling the crew, and all other persons on board besides the ordinary passengers. Ibid.

(350) A scale of provisions for the crew must, however, by the 149th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, be inserted in the ship's articles, the form of which is to be sanctioned by the Board of Trade. Ibid.

(351) The emigration officer will enforce the requisite issues, before two o'clock on the day of embarkation, to such passengers as may then be on board, and he will warn masters that they will render themselves liable to heavy penalties, and entail on their sureties in the bond to the crown, a forfeiture of the bond, if the issues are not in like manner continued daily throughout the voyage, and if the articles which require cooking are issued in an uncooked state. Ibid. No. 79.

(352) There is no offence against the act

Held, that this, in connexion with a covenant to promote the comfort and convenience of the hirer and his passengers, fairly imported that there should be some demand or request by the hirer for the clearing of the space agreed on. Corbin v. Leader, 6 C. & P. 32.

1035. A covenant to keep up a supply of the necessary and usual quantity of water is not broken by a deficiency for a short time occasioned by the unusual length of the voyages. Ibid.

1036. In an action against a captain for not furnishing good and fresh provisions to a passenger on a voyage, the jury must be satisfied that there was a real grievance sustained by the plaintiff, and there is no right of action unless he has really been a sufferer; for it is not because a man does not get such a good dinner as he might have had that he is therefore to have a right of action against the captain who does not provide all that he ought. Young v. Fewson, 8 C. & P. 55.

which will be more rigorously prosecuted whenever it can be proved. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 40, No. 79.

(353) The officer will cause a printed notice to this effect to be kept posted up in places where it would be likely to meet the attention of parties concerned in the passenger trade. Ibid.

(354) A form of such notice is given in the Appendix. Ibid.

(355) In the case of ships not laying in water for the full voyage, but touching at an intermediate port to fill up, the emigration officer is empowered by sect. 34 to declare the length of voyage to and from the intermediate ports. Ibid. p. 37, No. 73.

(356) By Order in Council, dated 28th June, 1875, "passenger" vessels may clear with only half the quantity of water required by the Passengers Acts, provided they carry an efficient distilling apparatus. See Appendix 39. At some of the ports the inspection of water is made by the medical inspectors. Ibid. p. 40, n.

(357) The emigration officer will be particular to see that when water casks are used, they are properly charred inside, are sweet, tight, and of sufficient strength, and that they are not of greater capacity than 300 gallons. Ibid. pp. 40, 41, No. 80.

(358) The law requires that the staves should not be of fir, pine, or soft wood, but is silent as regards the heads. Ibid. p. 41, No. 80.

(359) The emigration officer will be at liberty, therefore, to pass casks of which the staves are made of hard wood, and the heads of yellow pine, pitch pine, or oak; if of pine, the sap-wood should be taken off, and oak cantes be used. Ibid.

(360) A scale for casks is placed in the Appendix for the guidance of the emigration officers. Ibid. No. 81.

(361) The mode of examining the water-casks, which should be followed when practicable, is to have the casks ranged on the wharf, and filled with fresh water; and after they have been inspected and marked by the emigration officer, to have them emptied and stowed away in the vessel and refilled. The commissioners are aware that this method is not practicable at all ports, and the emigration officer must be left to adopt the best means that the circumstances at his station will allow for ensuring an efficient test as to the sweetness, tightness, and strength of the casks. Cases of fraud have been alleged where, after the water-casks have been passed, some of them have been withdrawn. The emigration officer will, therefore, take measures for assuring himself that all the casks he may have passed are duly shipped and filled with the proper quantity of good water. Ibid. No. 82.

(362) Nothing can be more important for the health and comfort of emigrants than that the water should be pure, sweet, and likely to keep well. It will be incumbent, therefore, on the emigration officer to pay particular attention to this point, and to insist on the supply being obtained from the best sources within reach. When it can be obtained only from a tidal river, it should not be taken before the last quarter ebb, and should, where means exist for the purpose, be filtered before it is filled in. Ibid. No. 83.

(363) The water required for cooking the provisions of the passengers is not to be deducted from the daily issue to them of three quarts per statute adult. To provide, however, for cooking purposes, the 31st section enacts "that an additional supply of water shall be shipped after the rate of at least ten gallons for every day of the prescribed length of voyage, for every 100 statute adults on board;" and the emigration officer should see that this additional quantity is accordingly supplied. Ibid. p. 42, No. 84.

(364) Besides the water for the passengers and for cooking purposes, the law requires an additional quantity to be shipped for the crew and (under the expression "all other persons on board") cabin passengers. But it does not define, as in the case of ordinary passages, what that quantity should be. It, however, expressly requires that the "supply" should be "ample." The emigration officer must therefore ascertain that an "ample supply" of pure water is shipped for the use of the crew and all other persons on board, as well as for the ordinary passengers, and in determining the quantity he must be guided by the usage of the port and his own judgment. Ibid. No. 85.

1037. For enactments as to the quantity and quality of provisions and water on board "passenger ships," and that those for the crew shall not be inferior in quality to those for the passengers, and for the stowage thereof; and penalty if a clearance is obtained for any "passenger ship" not so provided, against the owner, charterer, or master not exceeding £300, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 31, and the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 20.

1038. As to the stowage of provisions and water, see c. 31, s. 2, p. 1298.

1040. As to such Orders in Council generally, and the alteration and proof thereof, see this Part, c. 7, p. 1279.

1041. For permitting the use on board of an apparatus for distilling water, and for defining in such case the quantity of fresh water to be carried for the passengers, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 59, and Order in Council of 28th June, 1875, set out in 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 64.

1042. Every foreign ship carrying goods or passengers between ports of the United Kingdom, or between ports of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, or any of them and the United Kingdom, is subject, as to stores and otherwise, to the same laws, rules, and regulations to which British ships so employed are subject. See 17 Vict. c. 5, s. 2; the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 141.

1043. For enactments as to "passenger ships" enabling the emigration officer to reject and mark as bad any provisions, stores, or water not of a good and wholesome quality, and to direct the same to be landed, and against re-shiping the same in that or any other passengership, and penalty for breach against owner, charterer, or master, or person re-shiping them not exceeding £100, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 32.

1044. For provisions as to the carriage of water in passenger ships in proper tanks or casks approved by the emigration officer, and penalty for breach against owner, charterer, or master, not exceeding £50, Ibid. s. 33.

1045. For provisions as to passenger ships intended to touch at intermediate ports to fill up water, as to the engagement to that effect to be inserted in the bond to the crown in such cases, as to the emigration officer's certificate of approval thereof, to be obtained, carried, and delivered up as therein mentioned, and as to the supply of water to be taken on board at the port of clearance in such circumstances, Ibid. s. 34.

1046. For enactments as to the dietary scales of provisions and water for passenger ships exclusive of the water for cooking, according to the length of the voyage, and as to the substitutions of some of such articles for others at the option of the master, provided the substituted articles are set forth in the contract tickets of the passengers, and penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50, Ibid. s. 35.

1047. For similar provisions under similar penalty against the master as to passengers coming in passenger ships into the United Kingdom from any place out of Europe, Ibid. s. 102.

1048. For provisions on board passenger ships as to messes, the arrangement thereof, and the time of issuing provisions to head messmen, and the issue in a cooked state of those requiring to be cooked, and penalty for breach against master not exceeding £50, Ibid. s. 36.

1049. For enactments enabling the Board of Trade by notice in the London Gazette to authorize the issue of provisions in any passenger ship, according to any other dietary scale containing an equivalent amount of nutriment; and for the issue of provisions to passengers according to either scale set forth in the contract tickets of the passengers, Ibid. s. 37, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5, and note 335, supra.

1050. For provisions as to passenger ships, in case of detention after clearance, or putting back into any port in the United Kingdom, taking on board such further supply of provisions, water, and medical stores as are necessary to make up the prescribed quantities, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 50.

1051. As to complaints by seamen of British ships of bad or deficient provisions or water, the proceedings thereon, and the penalty for the same, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. IV.

1052. As to prohibition of the reduction in the allowance to any seaman of the provisions stipulated for, except by way of punishment, and under the conditions prescribed and the compensation for the same, Ibid.

1053. For provisions enabling governors of colonies by proclamation to declare what shall be deemed for the purpose of this act the scale of diet, and enabling such proclamations to be received as evidence, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 97.

2. Lime Juice.

1054. As to the quantity of lime juice to be issued on board "passenger ships" according to the length of the voyage and the locality, and during portions of the voyage, at the discretion of the medical practitioner, or, in his absence, of the master, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 35, and Ibid. 1863 (c. 51), s. 9.

1055. For regulations as to the providing of lime juice or such other anti-scorbutics as her Majesty may, by Order in Council, from time to time direct, for the certificate of the Board of Trade that it has been obtained from a proper source, for its mode of carriage, and for the times at which the master is to serve out such lime juice or anti-scorbutics, see the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 4.

3. Soft Bread.

1056. As to the issue on board "passenger ships" in addition to the substitutions in the dietary scales therein specified of soft bread, baked at the option of the master, in lieu of other articles and in certain proportions, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 35, and Ibid. 1863 (c. 51), s. 10.

36. Computation of Lengths of Voyages.

1057. For the scales for computation of the lengths of voyages for the purposes of this act, of "passenger ships" proceeding from the United Kingdom to the places therein mentioned, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 30; see also notes 342—344, p. 1301.

1058. For provisions enabling the Board of Trade to fix different scales of length of voyage, see Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 30, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

1059. For provisions enabling governors of colonies by proclamation to declare what shall be deemed for the purpose of this act the length of time for voyages, and enabling such proclamations to be received as evidence, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 97.

37. Passengers Lists.

1. Outward-bound Ships.

(a) Generally.*

1060. The master of every ship, whether a "passenger ship" or otherwise, carrying passengers on any voyage to which this act extends, shall, before demanding a clearance, sign two lists, in the form in Schedule (B), setting forth the name and other particulars of the ship, and of every passenger on board, including cabin passengers, and specifying whether such cabin passengers are under or over twelve years, and at what place the passengers and cabin passengers are to be landed. These lists, when countersigned by the emigration officer, where there is one at the port, shall be delivered by the master to the officer of the customs from whom a clearance of the ship is demanded, who shall thereupon countersign and return to the master one of such lists, to be called "the master's list." See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 16, as amended by the Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 6.

1061. Penalty for breach against master not exceeding £100 nor less than £5. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 16.

1062. If after such lists have been signed and delivered any additional passenger is taken on board, the master shall, according to the same form, add to "the master's list" the names and other particulars of every such additional passenger or cabin passenger, and sign a separate list, made out according to the same form, containing the names and other particulars of every such additional passenger, and such last-mentioned list, when countersigned by the emigration officer, where there is one at the port, shall, with "the master's list" to which such addition shall have been made, be delivered to the chief officer of customs, and thereupon such officer shall countersign "the master's list," and return the same to the master, and retain the separate list, and tion officer from undertaking their voyage on account of sickness. See Board of Trade Mem. on Passenger Act, 1880, p. 5, No. 3.

so on in like manner whenever any additional passenger is taken on board. If no officer of customs shall be stationed at the place where such additional passenger is taken on board, the lists shall be delivered to the officer of customs at the next place at which the vessel shall touch, to be so dealt with: when any additional passengers are taken on board the master shall obtain a fresh certificate from the emigration officer of the port that all the requirements of this act have been complied with before the ship shall proceed to sea. Penalty for breach of any of these requirements against the master not exceeding £50 nor less than £5. Ibid. s. 17.

(c) Production.

1064. For provisions requiring the master of any "passenger ship" on putting into or touching at any port or place in the United Kingdom to produce to the emigration officer or officer of customs there, his "master's list" of passengers, and penalty for breach against master not exceeding £20 nor less than £2, see Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 50.

2. Homeward-bound Ships.

(a) Generally.

1065. The master of every ship bringing passengers into the United Kingdom from any place out of Europe, and not within the Mediterranean Sea, shall, within twenty-four hours after arrival, deliver to the emigration officer or his assistant, or in their absence to the chief officer of customs at the port of arrival, a correct list, signed by the master, and specifying the names, ages, and callings of all the passengers embarked, and the ports at which they embarked, and showing which, if any, died, and the supposed cause of death, and which, if any, were born on the voyage. Penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 100.

38. Trustees of Docks or Basins.

1. Byelaws.

1066. Trustees or others charged with the management of any docks or basins in the United Kingdom from which "passenger ships" are despatched, may make and alter byelaws for prescribing the docks, basins, or other places at which emigrants shall be landed and embarked, and the mode thereof, for licensing porters to carry their luggage and otherwise to attend upon them, for the storing and safe custody of their luggage, for admitting persons to, and excluding persons from, such docks or basins. Ibid. s. 82.

1067. No such byelaws take effect until approved by one of the secretaries of state, and published in the London Gazette, which is to be conclusive evidence thereof. Ibid.

1067a. For provisions for passenger steamers to have their scuttles, hatchways, and other openings properly closed, or sufficiently railed, and the paddle-box fenders properly secured, see the Tyne Bye-laws, sanctioned 9th May, 1868, cl. 41.

1067b. For provisions in regard to the embarkation and disembarkation of passengers, ibid. cls. 43—47.

1068. Such trustees may, in such byelaws, attach a penalty not exceeding £5 for any breach thereof, to be recovered as other penalties under this act, except that instead of an emigration officer the trustees or others may recover the same. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 82.

1069. Such trustees, by their officers or servants, or by any police officer, may arrest and detain any person charged with the breach of any such byelaw until brought before a justice of the peace, who is hereby authorized to adjudicate on the offence in a summary way. Ibid.

39. Regulations for Order, Health and Cleanliness.

1070. Her Majesty, by Order in Council, may prescribe rules and regulations for passenger ships proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place in her Majesty's possessions abroad, for preserving order, health, and cleanliness. And as to the proof of such Orders in Council, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 59.

1071. As to such Orders in Council generally, and the alteration and proof thereof, see this Part, c. 7, p. 1279.

40. Regulations for preventing Spread of Disease.

1072. For provisions for preserving order, promoting health and securing health and ventilation on board passenger ships, and revoking the Order in Council of February 25, 1836, see Order in Council of January 7, 1864, in 13 Hertslet, p. 1065.

1073. For provisions prohibiting emigration from any port or ports at any time when choleraic or any epidemic disease may be generally prevalent in the United Kingdom or any part thereof, see Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 59.

1075. As to such Orders in Council generally, and the alteration and proof thereof, see this Part, c. 7, p. 1279.

41. Quarantine.*

1076. The several laws relating to the performance of quarantine are repealed, and other provisions made in lieu thereof. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 78, and 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 87, note.

1077. As to the performance of quarantine by all vessels coming from the Mediterranean, or West Coast of Barbary on the Atlantic Ocean with or without clean bills of health, see Order in Council of 19th July, 1825, in 2 Maude & Pollock, ibid. p. 84.

1078. From the 1st February, 1877, no person on board any ship coming to any port in the United Kingdom, the Channel

Ielands, or the Isle of Man, from Cuba or any port or place between longitude 35 and 60 degrees west of Greenwich, and between 4 and 40 degrees south latitude, shall quit such vessel before its state of health shall be ascertained on examination by the proper officer of customs, and permission given by him to land. See Order in Council of 29th January, 1877, 2 Maude & Pollock, ibid. p. 87.

1079. The signal to be hoisted by vessels having cholera on board is a yellow flag. See Order in Council of 15th March, 1832, in 2 Maude & Pollock, ibid.

1080. As to the temporary performance of quarantine by vessels coming from the Black Sea, Baltic, or Sea of Marmora, see Order in Council of 22nd March, 1879, in 2 Maude & Pollock, ibid.

42. Passengers.

1. Generally.†

1086. Nothing in this act shall take away or abridge any right of action which may accrue to any passenger in

* (366) The only quarantine establishment now maintained in England is at the Motherbank, and vessels other than Queen's ships perform quarantine when so necessary in such places as may be directed by the Privy Council. See 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 85, note.

† (367) The words "passenger" and "persons" are used throughout the act in their ordinary significations of individuals, as contradistinguished from "statute adults." Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 7, No. 5.

(368) The acts do not apply to "cabin passages," or "cabin passengers," unless they are expressly named, as the latter are, in any ship, or other person, in respect of the breach or non-performance of any contract made between or on behalf of any such passenger or person, and the master, charterer, or owner of any such ship, his agent, or passage broker. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 58.

1087. In this act "statute adult" signifies a person of the age of twelve years or upwards, or two persons between the ages of one and twelve. "Passengers" include all passengers except cabin passengers, and except labourers under indenture to the Hudson's Bay Company, and their families conveyed in ships belonging to or chartered by that company. "Passage" includes all passages except cabin passages. Ibid. s. 3.

1088. No persons shall be deemed "cabin passengers" unless the spaces allotted to their exclusive use are in the proportion of at least thirty-six clear superficial feet to each statute adult, nor unless they are messed throughout the voyage at the same table with the master or chief officer, and their fare is in the proportion of at least 30s. for every week of the length of the voyage as computed under this act for sailing vessels proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place south of the Equator, and of 20s. for such vessels proceeding to any place north of the Equator, nor unless they are furnished with a duly-signed contract ticket in the form in Schedule (K). Ibid.

1089. Words of one number or gender import both numbers and all genders. Ibid.

2. Number.*

1090. For the rules for determining the number of passengers to be carried in sects. 3, 13, 41, 52, 53, 54, 71, 72, 73 and 74 of the Act of 1855, and in sects. 4, 6, 11 and 15 of the Act of 1863; or are included under the general term "persons," as they are in sects. 27, 31, 45, 58 and 62 of the Act of 1855. Ibid. p. 9, No. 14.

(369) Cabin passengers are also brought under the operation of the 16th and 17th sects. of that act by the 6th and 11th sects. of the Act of 1863, and are, in strictness, subject to a muster by the emigration officer, to verify that they are in reality cabin passengers, though it will not be desirable to insist unnecessarily or vexatiously on this liability. Ibid.

(370) Except for the purposes of sect. 3 of the Act of 1855 (the definition clause), cabin passengers are to be counted as individuals, and not as statute adults. Ibid. p. 10, No. 15.

(371) To constitute a cabin passenger four requisites must be combined—1st, that each statute adult be allowed a space of not less than thirty-six clear square feet (not in the berthing place alone) for his exclusive use; 2nd, that he be messed at the table with the master or the first officer; 3rd, that the fare contracted to be paid be not less than at the rate of 30s. for each week of the prescribed length of the voyage for sailing vessels bound to places south of the Equator, and 20s. for those bound to the north of the Equator; and 4th, that he be furnished with a contract ticket in the form prescribed by the act. Ibid. No. 16.

(372) It is not easy to reconcile with this last requisite the provision in the 71st section of the Act of 1855, which makes the issue of contract tickets to cabin passengers imperative only in case they proceed in a "passenger ship." Ibid.

(373) The decision of the Queen's Bench in the case of Ellis v. Pearce, reported in the Jurist, New Series, No. 208, p. 1275 (see No. 838, p. 1275, supra), has, however, settled the point, and passengers who possess the first three requisites are not to be counted for the purpose of making the ship a "passenger ship," although they may not possess contract tickets. Ibid.

(374) A body of passengers cannot, by purchasing or chartering and victualling a ship for themselves, exempt her from the provisions of the act, if she would otherwise have come under its operation; but in such a case, the third and fourth requisites to constitute a "cabin passenger," under the 3rd section, viz. the payment of a certain rate of passage money, and the contract ticket, would become inapplicable, and the question, should it arise, as to whether the passengers, or any of them, are "cabin passengers," would have to be decided by the other two tests. Ibid. No. 17.

* (375) When the passenger accommodation is increased whilst a certificate is in force, and the owners wish the number of passengers such increased space will accommodate inserted in the certificate before the next survey, the vessel should be remeasured and a fresh declaration issued. In no case can a surveyor alter the number of passengers in a vessel's passenger certificate. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, Lights, Fog Signals, &c. 1883, p. 19, par. 28.

(375a) The clear area of the deck in square feet is divided by nine, the quotient is the number allowed to be carried on deck in summer. Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, Crew Spaces, &c., 1884, par. 18, p. 14. The spon-any passenger ship, and under the poop, or in the round-house or deck-house, or on the upper and lower passenger deck, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 14.

1091. Penalty against the master for breach (except by births at sea) not exceeding £20 nor less than £5 for each passenger constituting such excess. Ibid. ss. 14 and 29.

1092. If the owner, master, or person in charge of any passenger steamer receives or she has on board any number of passengers which, having regard to the time, occasion and circumstances is greater than the number allowed by the certificate; penalty against owner or master not exceeding £20, and an additional penalty not exceeding 5s. a passenger above the number allowed, or if the fare of any passenger exceeds 5s., not exceeding double the amount of all the passengers' fares above the number allowed. Such fares are to be estimated at the highest rate of fare payable by any passenger. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 319.

1093. Any steamer may carry not exceeding twelve passengers, although not surveyed by the Board of Trade as a passenger steamer, nor carrying a Board of Trade certificate as provided by the M. S. Act, 1854, as to passenger steamers. Ibid. 1876 (c. 80), s. 16.

1094. Her Majesty, by Order in Council, may prescribe rules and regulations as to passenger ships proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place in her soons in paddle-wheel steamers are not to be included in the measurement of vessels for passengers. Ibid.

(375d) The number of passengers to be carried in the after-cabins or saloons is determined by the number of the berths or sofas constructed for sleeping berths, to which add the number due on the space on deck (i. e. the main or weather-deck poop, or quarter-deck, as the case may be, which is measured for saloon passengers) appropriated to the saloon passengers, and the sum will be the total number of after-cabin passengers allowed to be carried. Ibid., par. 19, p. 15.

(375e) One passenger is to be allowed for every nine square feet. As to what is to be measured, see Ibid.

(376) As to the mode of determining the number of passengers for river steamers, whether plying entirely in smooth water or in water parts of which only are smooth, see Ibid. No. 25.

(377) As to the deduction by one-third in winter time of the number of passengers in river steamers, plying in water parts of which only are smooth, allowed to be carried on deck during summer, see Ibid.

(377a) As to river steamers plying in exclusively smooth waters no such deduction is made, see Ibid. p. 25, No. 26.

(378) As to the mode of ascertaining the maximum number of passengers to be carried under different certificates, see Ibid. pp. 9—11.

(379) As to the mode of determining the number of passengers allowed to be carried under the different classes of passenger certificates, see Ibid. Appendix (A), p. 55.

(380) The 13th and 14th sections of the Act of 1855, in conjunction with that part of the third which defines what is an "upper passenger deck" (see s. 5), regulate the number of passengers that may be carried, and in what parts of the ship they may be berthed. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 11, No. 18.

(381) The whole number of passengers is also further limited by the requirement that there shall be an allowance for each statute adult of at least five superficial feet (or if cattle are carried under the provisions of the 8th section of the Act of 1863, ten superficial feet) clear for exercise on the upper or weather deck, including poop, round-house, or deck-house, if the top of these latter is properly and securely fitted with a railing. Ibid. No. 21.

(382) The United States Passengers Act of 1855 limits the number to be carried by the twofold check of tonnage and space. Their tonnage check is one passenger to every two tons. Two children between one and eight years (instead of between one and twelve, as in our law), are counted as one passenger. Ibid. p. 12, n.

(383) Their space check is regulated by the height between decks. Thus, if the height be not less than 7½ feet, the allowance to each passenger is 14 superficial feet; if less than 7½ feet, but not less than 6 feet, the allowance is 16 superficial feet on the main deck, and in the poop and deck-houses, and 18 feet on the lower deck, not being an orlop deck; and if less than 6 feet, no passengers can be carried on that deck. Ibid.

Majesty's possessions abroad, for reducing the number of passengers allowed to be carried in passenger ships generally, or from any particular ports under the provisions of this act. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 59.

1095. As to such Orders in Council generally, and the alteration and proof thereof, see this Part, c. 7, p. 1279.

1096. If any ship bringing passengers into the United Kingdom from any place out of Europe shall have on board a greater number of passengers or persons than is prescribed for ships carrying passengers from the United Kingdom; penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £10 nor less than £5 for each extra person or statute adult. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 101.

3. False Representations to—

1097. Penalty against any person by any false representation or pretence, or by any fraud, inducing any person to engage a passage in any ship, not exceeding £20 nor less than £5. Ibid. s. 70.

4. Contract Tickets.

1098. Every person, except the Board of Trade and persons acting for them and under their direct authority, who shall receive money from any person for or in respect of a passage in any ship, or of a cabin passage in any "passenger ship" proceeding from the United Kingdom to any place out of Europe, and not within the Mediterranean Sea, shall give him a contract ticket, signed by the owner, charterer or master of the ship or "passenger ship" (as the case may be), or on his behalf. Such contract ticket shall be in plain and legible characters on a printed form, which in the case of cabin passengers shall be according to the form in Schedule (K), and in the case of all other passengers in the form in Schedule (L), or according to such other form as may be prescribed by the Board of Trade in any notice published in the London Gazette; and any directions contained on such contract ticket shall be obeyed as if herein set forth. Penalty for breach against the person so offending, not exceeding £50, nor less than £5. Such contract tickets shall not be liable to stamp duty. Ibid. s. 71, as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

1099. Penalty against any person altering or inducing any person to part with or destroy any contract ticket, during the continuance of the contract (except in the case of cabin passengers consenting thereto), not exceeding £20. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 72.

1100. Any question which may arise respecting the breach or non-performance of any of the stipulations in any contract ticket, may, at the option of any passenger interested, be determined in a summary way by the justices of the peace, magistrates, sheriffs or officers authorized to adjudicate on offences and complaints under the act. If they find a breach of contract has been committed, they may award to the complainant such damages and costs as they think fit, not exceeding the amount of the passage-money specified in the contract ticket and £20; if such damages and costs are not at once paid, payment shall be enforced, like payment of subsistence money, or return of passage-money, under this act. But if any passenger has obtained compensation under other provisions of this act, he is not entitled to sue under this section for damages for the same matter. Ibid. s. 73.

1101. Unless the passengers are to have a free table, the victualling for the voyage must be appended to the contract ticket. Ibid. Sched. (K).

1102. As to passengers' contract tickets,

* (384) Passengers' contract tickets are exempt from stamp duty, notwithstanding that the Stamp Act, 1870 (c. 59), imposes a duty on all receipts for money of £2 and upwards. Ibid. p. 63, No. 132.

(385) It is conceived (1) that where no money passes here, it is not obligatory to issue a contract ticket; (2) that if any portion of the passage money is paid here, a contract ticket must be issued; (3) that in that case the amount paid abroad should be included in it; and (4) that the non-issue of a contract ticket, or the issue of an imperfect one, would be no ground for the emigration officer withholding his clearing certificate. The remedy in these cases would be a prosecution for penalties under the act against the person who received the money here for the passage. Ibid. p. 62, No. 131.

(386) Passengers in home-trade steamers are allowed to be carried on the main and lower decks only. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Survey of Passenger Accommodation, Crew Spaces, &c., 1884, par. 18, p. 14.

and the counterparts thereof, the quantities of provisions and water to be therein specified, Pass. Act, 1855, Sched. (L).

1103. A passenger on paying his fare received a ticket from the clerk of the steam company, on the back of which ticket was printed a notice exonerating the company from liability for all loss, injury or delay to the passenger or his luggage, however caused. During the voyage the steamer was lost by the negligence of the servants of the company, and the passenger lost his luggage and suffered other damage and inconvenience. Held, that, in the absence of proof that the passenger had assented to be bound by the condition indorsed on the ticket, it was no defence to an action by him to recover the loss he had sustained. Henderson v. Stevenson, 2 H. L. Sc. App. 470; 32 L. T. 709.

1104. A passenger by steamer from A. paid for and received a passenger ticket from the agent of the owners, containing a condition exempting the owners from liability in case of loss or detention of the ship by accidents of navigation or perils of the sea and from responsibility for the loss of his luggage, goods, or other description of property, unless bills of lading had been signed therefor. Held, that the latter condition not having been observed by the passenger, he could not recover for loss of his luggage, though the loss was caused by the ship having been wrecked owing to the negligence of the captain. Wilton v. Royal Atlantic Mail Steam Navigation Company, 10 C. B. N.S. 453; 30 L. J. C. P. 369; 8 Jur. N.S. 232; 4 L. T. 706; 9 W. R. 748.

1105. A contract entered into between a shipowner and a passenger contained a provision that the shipowner would not be answerable for loss of baggage "under any circumstances whatsoever." Held, that such a stipulation covered the case of wilful default and misfeasance by the shipowners' servant. Taubman v. Pacific Steam Navigation Company, 26 L. T. 704.

(b) Production to Emigration Officer.

1106. If, on demand of any emigration officer, any cabin or other passenger refuses or omits to produce his contract ticket, or any owner, charterer, or master of a ship to produce the counterpart of any contract ticket issued on their behalf for inspection and for the purposes of this act: penalty not exceeding £10. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 74.

5. *On what Decks to be carried.

1107. No ship shall carry passengers or cabin passengers on more than two

* (386a) When there are only narrow spaces between the sides of deck-houses and the bulwarks, these spaces are not to be measured for passengers. When there is a deck-house amidships for the accommodation of after or first class passengers, and the second class accommodation is either below, aft or in a deck-house aft, the whole of the clear space on deck should be appropriated for the use of second class passengers. Ibid.

(387) It shall be the duty of the mate of every steamer carrying passengers to assign to deck or steerage passengers the space they may occupy on board during the voyage; and to supervise the stowage of the freight or cargo, and see that the space so set apart for passengers is not encroached upon. See Regulations of Supervising Inspectors, circa anno, 1876, r. 58. [AMERICAN.]

(388) No ship, whether sailing vessel or steamer, is, except as below, to carry passengers (including cabin passengers) on more than two decks, namely, the upper and the lower passenger deck. See Board of Trade Memorandum on Passengers Act, 1880, p. 11, No. 19.

(389) But cabin passengers may be carried in the poop or deck-house, notwithstanding that passengers are carried on two other decks, provided that they do not exceed one to every hundred tons of the ship's register. Ibid.

(390) A poop round-house, or deck-house, becomes an "upper passenger deck," when the number of all classes of passengers carried therein exceeds one-third of the total number which the vessel can legally carry on the deck next below the poop, &c. Ibid.

(391) Where passengers are carried in a poop, round-house, or deck-house, the emigration officer must satisfy himself that these structures are properly built and secured. Ibid. p. 11, No. 20.

(392) The least space to be assigned to each statute adult on the "upper passenger deck" is fifteen feet, and on the "lower passenger deck" eighteen feet. Ibid. No. 21.

(393) But if the height on the lower deck is less than seven feet, or the apertures for admitting light and air (exclusive of side scuttles) be less than three square feet for every hundred superficial feet of that deck, then twenty-five feet must be allowed. Ibid.

(394) The result of the law on this head is shown in the three following cases, supposing that the weather-deck check does not come decks; but cabin passengers in a proportion not exceeding one for every one hundred registered tons, or sick persons in a hospital, as therein provided, may be carried in a poop or deck-house, notwithstanding passengers are carried on two other decks. If passengers are carried under the poop or in any round-house or deck-house, it shall be properly built and secured to the satisfaction of the emigration officer at the port of clearance. Penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £500, nor less than £20. Ibid. s. 83. See also notes 375—383, p. 1308.

1108. In the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), "upper passenger deck" includes the deck immediately beneath the upper deck, poop, or round-house, and deck-house, when the number of passengers and cabin passengers carried in such last-mentioned places exceeds one-third of the total number which the ship can lawfully carry on the deck next below. "Lower passenger deck" includes the deck next beneath the upper passenger deck not being an orlop deck. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119).

6. Shelter for Deck-carried Passengers.*

1109. Every home-trade steamer carrying passengers by sea shall be provided with such shelter for the protection of deck passengers (if any) as the Board of Trade may require. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 301, sub-s. 5.

into play:—If a ship carries in the poop or deck-house not more than one cabin passenger to every hundred tons register, she may carry passengers on two other decks. See Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 12, No. 23.

(395) If she carries in the poop or deck-house more than that proportion of cabin passengers, or any steerage passengers at all, she cannot carry passengers on more than one other deck. Ibid.

(396) If she carries in the poop or deck-house more passengers, whether cabin or steerage, or both, than one-third the legal complement of the deck next below, then the passengers on that deck will be entitled to eighteen clear superficial feet per statute adult, otherwise only to fifteen feet. Ibid.

(397) The rule formerly in use for ascertaining the area of the "passengers' deck" was to take three transverse measurements of the deck and multiply the mean of them into its length, but the introduction of a 1110. Penalty for default against the owner appearing in fault not exceeding £100, and against the master appearing in fault not exceeding £50. Ibid.

7. Berths.

(a) Construction and Arrangement.

1111. For provisions as to the construction, arrangement, and size of berths in passenger ships, and penalty for breach against owner, charterer, or master not exceeding £50, nor less than £5, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 21.

(b) Separation of Sexes.

1112. For provisions as to the berthing on board passenger ships of single men in a separate compartment, and penalty for breach against owner, charterer, or master not exceeding £50, nor less than £5, Ibid. s. 22.

1113. Not more than one passenger, unless husband and wife, or females or children under twelve years of age, shall occupy the same berth. Penalty for breach against owner, charterer, or master not exceeding £50, nor less than £5. Ibid.

(c) Removal.

1114. For provisions that berths of passengers in "passenger ships" shall not be removed until the passengers are landed, or until forty-eight hours after arrival at port of destination, and penalty sharper built class of vessels has rendered this rule inapplicable. The commissioners have accordingly remodelled it as follows. Ibid. p. 13, No. 26.

(398) The length of the "passengers' deck" multiplied into the mean breadth is to be taken as the superficial area. Ibid.

(398a) As to the longitudinal, transverse, and stringer measurements and deductions from superficial contents, see Ibid.

(399) Any curtailment of the prescribed space for passengers, on the ground that their luggage is stowed elsewhere, or otherwise, must not be allowed. Ibid. p. 15, No. 27.

* (400) If the ship has a hurricane-deck or poop or deck-house guarded only by a rail running round it, the emigration officer should insist that the space between the rail and floor of the deck be fitted with netting or other protection sufficiently strong to prevent the possibility of children slipping overboard. Ibid. p. 12, No. 22.

for breach against master not exceeding £50, nor less than £5, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 23.

1115. In an action in which one of the questions between the parties was whether the defendant was justified in expelling the plaintiff from a berth in a steamer, it was proved that the plaintiff placed his coat on a berth while it was vacant, afterwards applied at the office of the company to engage a berth, and caused the company's clerk then in attendance at the office to enter the plaintiff's name on the way-bill opposite the number of the berth; but that the defendant having also applied for the same berth, another clerk of the company altered the way-bill, by inserting the defendant's name opposite the berth, and allotting another one to the plaintiff; and that the plaintiff, upon returning to the berth in dispute after the steamer had started, found the defendant's servants at the door, who refused to allow him to enter. The plaintiff afterwards entered the berth, and was removed by the defendant. Evidence was also given that, according to the usage on board the steamer, the rights of passengers inter se to berths during the voyage were to be determined by the way-bill as finally settled, and sent abroad, and that disputes during the voyage, with respect to passengers' accommodation, should be decided by the captain or steward. Held, first, that the plaintiff was not entitled to a direction that he was in possession of the berth in dispute. Dysart v. Montgomery, 8 Ir. R. C. L. 245.

1116. Held, secondly, that the way-bill, as finally settled and delivered to the officers on board, determined the right to the berth as between the plaintiff and the defendant. Ibid.

1117. Held, thirdly, that as the jury found that the way-bill as finally settled for the purpose of the voyage allotted the berth to the defendant, and as he was in possession at the time of the alleged assault, he was justified in removing the plaintiff, without using unnecessary violence, upon his refusal to leave the berth. Ibid.

8. *Sick or Unfit Persons.

1118. For provisions for relanding or prohibiting the embarkation of all or any passengers or persons in any passenger ship on account of sickness or danger to the health of others, or for purifying the ship, or otherwise, and enabling the emigration officer to require the master to reland all such persons, and requiring the master thereupon to reland them, with so much of their effects, and with such members of their families as cannot in the judgment of such officer be properly separated from them, see the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 45.

1119. Penalty for breach against the master, owner, or charterer not exceeding £200, nor less than £10; and against any passenger or person embarking after such prohibition, or refusing or neglecting to leave the ship when so directed, besides being liable to be summarily removed, not exceeding 40s. for each day he remains on board afterwards. Ibid.

1120. Any passenger or cabin passenger so relanded on account of the sickness of himself or of any member of his family, and not re-embarking and finally sailing

* (401) The emigration officer may require to be relanded, or prohibit the embarkation of any person, whether amongst the passengers or crew, whom he may think, for any sanitary reason, unfit to proceed. He may also cause passengers to be relanded for the purification of the ship or otherwise, if necessary. Under the law of 1852 only those persons who were actually ill, and their immediate relations, could be legally relanded, a measure obviously inadequate when disease has taken hold of a ship. See Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, 1880, p. 46, No. 96.

(402) The ordinary passengers so relanded are entitled to subsistence-money until they are re-embarked or decline to proceed, and those who are not permitted to re-embark are entitled also to a return of their passage-money. If, however, holders of "passage warrants," "passage certificates," or "bounty tickets," granted by colonial governments, are relanded on account of sickness, no passage-money, it is apprehended, is returnable, because none was paid by the passengers, and none can be said to have been paid on their account in the sense contemplated by the act, that is, to the shipper or to any person who could be presumed in any way to be connected with the ship. Nor would detention-money, it is also apprehended, be recoverable in these cases. Ibid. No. 97.

(403) Cabin passengers relanded on account of sickness are not entitled to subsistence-money; but by the 11th section of the Act of 1863, if they are not re-embarked they are entitled to a return of half their passage-money. Ibid.

in such ship, or any emigration officer on his behalf, is entitled to recover, by summary process, and notwithstanding the ship may not have sailed—the passenger the whole, and the cabin passenger the half—of his or their passage money from the party to whom it was paid, or from the owner, charterer, or master at the option of such passenger, cabin passenger, or emigration officer, upon the delivery up of their contract tickets. Ibid. s. 46, as amended by Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 11.

1121. Each passenger so relanded shall be paid by the master subsistence-money at the rate of 1s. 6d. a day for each statute adult until he is re-embarked or declines or neglects to proceed, or until his passage money, if he is so entitled to it, is returned to him. If he is maintained in any hulk or establishment under the superintendence of the Board of Trade, the emigration officer at the port is entitled to recover this money. Ibid. s. 47.

9. Medical Inspection.*

1122. No passenger ship shall clear out or proceed to sea until all the passengers and crew have been inspected by a medical practitioner appointed by the emigration officer at the port of clearance, and he has certified to the emigration officer, and the emigration officer is satisfied that none of the passengers or crew appear unfit to proceed, or likely to endanger the health or safety of the others. Ibid. s. 44.

1122a. As to the place of inspection and the fees for it, see Ibid.

1123. Penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £100, nor less than £5. Ibid.

1123a. But if the emigration officer shall be unable to obtain the attendance of a medical practitioner, the master may clear out and proceed to sea on receiving from the emigration officer written permission for the purpose. Ibid.

1123b. As to the medical inspection of stores, see this Part, cc. 34 and 35, p. 1299.

10. Delay in Sailing.

1124. If any ship, whether a "passenger ship" or otherwise, shall not actually put to sea and proceed on her voyage before three o'clock in the afternoon of the day after the day of embarkation, the owner, charterer or master, or his agent, at the option of the passenger or emigration officer, shall pay to every passenger entitled to a passage (or if the passenger is lodged in any establishment under the superintendence of the Board of Trade, then to the emigration officer at the port of embarkation) subsistence-money after the rate of 1s. 6d. for each statute adult in respect of each day's delay for the first ten days, and afterwards 3s. a day for each statute adult, until the final departure of such ship on such voyage, to be recovered as therein mentioned. But if the passengers are maintained on board in the same manner as if the voyage had commenced, no such subsistence-money shall be payable for the first two days, nor if the ship is unavoidably detained by wind or weather, or by any cause not attributable, in the opinion of the emigration officer, to the act or default of the owner, charterer or master. Ibid. s. 49.

1125. Where a vessel bound for the East Indies is advertised to sail by a certain day and does not, the shipowner will be entitled to recover half the passage-money of a person who refused to go, after having engaged a passage, unless either the time was of the essence of the contract or the delay in sailing was unreasonable. Yates v. Duff, 5 C. & P. 369.

1126. C., who resided in Ireland, having applied to certain emigration agents in London respecting a passage for himself and his family on board their ships to Australia, received in answer a letter in which they agreed to convey him and his family for a sum of money. This letter was written on the fly-sheet of a printed circular, headed "Emigration to Australia," and which stated that "ships will be despatched on the appointed days (wind and weather permitting), for which written guarantees will be given." Then followed a list of ships, among which the Asiatic was named as to sail from London on the 15th August, and from Plymouth on the 25th. In another part of the circular it was stated "Passengers from to suppose, from sickness in the ship or otherwise, that such a precaution is called for. Fresh passengers must, of course, be duly examined before the vessel is allowed to proceed. Ibid. p. 47, No. 99.

Ireland can readily join at Plymouth; a deposit of one-half of their passage-money to be paid at the time their berths are engaged, the balance to be paid prior to granting the emigration order." C. engaged a berth on board the Asiatic, and paid the agents a deposit, but no written guarantee was given. The Asiatic did not arrive at Plymouth until the 3rd of September, although not prevented by wind or weather. The berth was kept vacant from London to Plymouth. Held, that the statement in the circular was not a mere representation, but a warranty that the Asiatic would sail on the days appointed, and that as she did not, C. was justified in taking a passage on board another vessel, and was entitled to recover from the emigration agents the amount of the deposit and the expenses he had been put to by the delay at Plymouth. Cranston v. Marshall, 5 Ex. 395; 19 L. J. Ex. 340.

11. Relanding for purifying Ship.

1127. If any passenger in any ship, whether a passenger ship or otherwise, is landed at any port or place other than that at which he contracted to land, unless with his previous consent, or such landing is rendered necessary by unavoidable accident, penalty against the master not exceeding £50, nor less than £10. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 56.

1128. The captain of a ship covenanted to promote the comfort of passengers engaged by the plaintiff: the plaintiff covenanted not to interfere with the navigation of the ship and to defray the expense of putting into port if it should be necessary for the convenience and at the request of the plaintiff. Held, that the captain was bound to put into port for the convenience and at the request and expense of the plaintiff, unless he could show that putting in would be dangerous. Corbin v. Leader, 10 Bingh. 275; 3 M. & Scott, 751; 6 C. & P. 32.

13. Maintenance on Board for Forty-eight Hours after Arrival at Port of Destination.

1129. Every passenger in a passenger ship is entitled for at least forty-eight hours after the end of his voyage, to sleep in the ship and be maintained on board as during the voyage, unless within that period the ship shall quit such place in further prosecution of her voyage. Penalty for breach against the master not exceeding £5. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 57.

14. Forwarding of— to their Destination.

1130. If any passenger in any ship on any voyage to which this act extends, shall be at the place of embarkation before six o'clock in the afternoon of the day of embarkation appointed in the contract, and pay the passage-money, and if from any cause not being his own refusal, neglect, or default, or the prohibition of an emigration officer, or the requirements of any Order in Council, such passenger shall not be received on board, or shall not obtain a passage in such ship to the port contracted for, with the members of his family included in such contract, or a passage thereto in some equally eligible ship, to sail within ten days, and in the meantime is paid subsistence-money from the time and at the rate therein mentioned, such passenger, or any emigration officer on his behalf, is entitled to recover from the party to whom he paid his passage-money, or (if such contract was made with the owner, charterer, or master, or any person on their behalf) from such owner, charterer, or master, at the option of such passenger or emigration officer, all passage-moneys paid for such passage, and such further sum, not exceeding £10, in respect of such passage as, in the opinion of the justices of the peace adjudicating on the complaint, is a reasonable compensation for the passenger's loss or inconvenience. Ibid. s. 48.

1131. If any passenger or cabin passenger of any passenger ship shall, without his neglect or default, be landed in any colonial or foreign port or place other than that for which the ship was originally bound, or at which he or the Board of Trade, or any public officer or other person on his behalf may have contracted that he should land, the governor of such colony, or person authorized by him, or her Majesty's consular officer there, may forward such passenger to his destination, unless the master within forty-eight hours of the passenger's arrival gives to such functionary a written undertaking to forward or carry on, within six weeks, such passenger to his original destination, and does so. See the Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 15.

1132. If the passengers or cabin passengers of any "passenger ship" are taken off from her, or picked up at sea, if the port or place to which they shall be conveyed is in the United Kingdom, one of her Majesty's principal secretaries of state, or if in any of her Majesty's colonial possessions, the governor of such colony, or any person authorized by him, or if in any foreign country, her Majesty's consular officer at such place, may defray all or part of the expenses thereby incurred. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 52.

1133. All expenses incurred under the 15th section of this act or the 52nd section of "The Passengers Act, 1855," by or by the authority of such functionary, including the cost of maintaining the passengers until forwarded to their destination, and of all necessary bedding, provisions, and stores, shall become a debt to her Majesty and her successors from the owner, charterer, and master, and be recoverable from any one or more of them, at the suit of her Majesty, like other crown debts. A certificate in the form in Schedule (A), or as near thereto as the case admits, purporting to be under the hand of any such functionary, stating the amount of such expenses, shall in any proceeding for the recovery of such debt be deemed sufficient evidence of such amount, and that the same were duly incurred, without other evidence, and judgment shall pass for the crown with costs of suit, unless the defendant shall specially plead and duly prove that such certificate is false or fraudulent, or plead and prove facts showing such expenses were not duly incurred under this or the "Passengers Act, 1855." See Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 16.

1134. But no larger sum shall be recovered than twice the amount of passage-money, which amount of passage-money shall be proved by the defendant, if he seeks the advantage of this limitation. If any such passengers are forwarded or conveyed to their intended destination under the provisions of sect. 16, they are not entitled to the return of their passage-money nor to compensation for loss of passage. Ibid.

1135. As to bond to the crown and obligation to pay such expenses when neither owners nor charterers reside in the United Kingdom, see this Part, c. 9, p. 1280. See also No. 1173, p. 1319.

(b) *Ship Wrecked or unfit to proceed.

1136. If any passenger ship shall be wrecked, or rendered unfit to proceed on her voyage, while in any port of the United Kingdom, or after the commencement of the voyage, and if the passengers, or any of them, shall be brought back to the United Kingdom, or if any passenger ship shall put into any port or place in the United Kingdom in a damaged state, the master, charterer, or owner shall, within forty-eight hours thereafter, give to the nearest emigration officer, or in his absence to the chief officer of customs, a written undertaking: if the ship has been wrecked, or rendered unfit to proceed on her voyage, to convey the passengers in some other eligible ship, to sail within six weeks to their port of destination; and if the ship shall have put into port in a damaged state, that she shall be made seaworthy and fit for her voyage, and shall, within six weeks, sail with her passengers; and in either of these cases shall, until the passengers proceed on their voyage, maintain them on board as if they were at sea, or pay them subsistence-money at the rate of one shilling and sixpence a day for each statute adult, unless the passengers are maintained in any hulk or establishment under the superintendence of the Board of Trade as mentioned in the Passengers Act, 1855, in which case the subsistence-money shall be paid to the emigration officer there. If the substituted or damaged ship, as the case may be, shall not sail within the time prescribed, or if default be made in any of these requirements, such passengers, or any emigration officer on their behalf, shall be entitled to recover, by summary process, as in the Passengers Act, 1855, mentioned, all their passage-money from the party to whom it was paid, or from the owner, charterer, or master at the option of such passenger or emigration officer. See Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 14.

* (405) In case of wreck or damage to the ship the regulations applicable under the Act of 1855 to passengers who have contracted for their own passages extend to passengers whose passages have been provided by others. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, p. 5, No. 3.

1136a. The emigration officer may direct the passengers to be removed from the damaged ship at the expense of the master. Penalty against any passenger after such direction refusing to leave, not exceeding 40s. or imprisonment not exceeding one month. See the Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 14.

1137. In an action for negligently steering a ship whereby she was wrecked, and the plaintiff lost his passage in her, no evidence can be given of a specific act of negligence, which is not the foundation of the action. Evidence may be given that the captain had often expressed his conviction that the officer to whom he gave charge of the ship was incompetent for that situation. Experienced nautical men may be called and asked whether in their judgment particular facts which have been proved amount to gross negligence. Malton v. Nesbit, 1 C. & P. 70. See also as to the expenses of forwarding, Nos. 1132, 1133.

15. Molestation of—.

1138. Any person on board any duly-surveyed passenger steamer who, after warning by the master or other officer, molests any passenger is liable to a penalty not exceeding 40s. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 35.

1139. As to the apprehension without warrant and trial of such offenders, see Ibid. s. 37.

16. Misconduct of—.

See cc. 43, 44, p. 1317.

(b) Attempting to enter, or refusing to leave, Steamer.

1140. The master of any home-trade passenger steamer may refuse to receive on board any person who from drunkenness or otherwise is in such a state, or so misconducts himself as to cause annoyance to other passengers on board, or if such person is on board, may put him on shore at any convenient place; and no person so refused admittance or put on shore shall be entitled to the return of any fare he may have paid. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 325.

1141. Any person drunk or disorderly, and on that account refused admission into any duly-surveyed passenger steamer by the owner, or any person in his employ, after his fare (if paid) has been returned, or tendered to him, and persisting in attempting to enter such steamer, is liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings, and such liability is not to prejudice the recovery of any fare payable by him. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 35.

1142. For the like penalty and proviso as to any such person on board any such steamer, and so requested to leave the same at a convenient place in the United Kingdom, after his fare (if paid) has been returned or tendered to him, and refusing to comply with such request, Ibid.

1143. For the like penalty and proviso as to any person persisting in attempting to enter such steamer after having been refused admission by the owner, or person in his employ, on account of her being full, and after having had his fare (if paid) returned or tendered to him, Ibid.

1143a. For the like penalty and proviso as to any person having got on board, and being so requested on the like account to leave such steamer before she has quitted the place where he got on board, and after his fare (if paid) has been returned or tendered to him, and he refuses to comply with such request, Ibid.

1144. For the like penalty and proviso as to any person who knowingly and wilfully refuses or neglects, on arriving at the point to which he has paid his fare, to quit such steamer, Ibid.

1145. As to the apprehension without warrant and trial of such offenders, see No. 1153.

(c) Non-payment or short Payment of Fare.

1146. For the like penalty and proviso as to any person travelling, or attempting to travel, in any such steamer without having previously paid his fare, and with intent to avoid payment, see M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 35.

1147. For the like penalty and proviso as to any person who, having paid his fare for a certain distance, knowingly and wilfully proceeds in any such steamer beyond such distance without previously paying the additional fare, and with intent to avoid payment, Ibid.

1148. For the like penalty and proviso as to any person on board any such steamer who does not, when required by the master, or other officer, pay his fare, Ibid.

1149. As to the apprehension without warrant, and trial of such offenders, see No. 1153.

1150. The like penalty and proviso as to any person on board who does not when required by the master or other officer exhibit his ticket or usual receipt for payment of his fare. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 35.

(e) Refusing Name or giving False Name.

1151. Penalty against any person who refuses on application of the master, or any other person in the employ of the owner, to give his name and address, or gives a false name or address, not exceeding £20, to be paid to the owner. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 324.

(f) Apprehension and Trial.

1152. The master or officer of any duly-surveyed passenger steamer, and all persons called by him to his assistance, may detain any person who has committed any offence within the above 35th section of this act, and whose name and address are unknown to him, and convey him with all convenient despatch before some justice without any warrant or other authority than this act. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 37.

1153. The justice shall have jurisdiction to try the case, and shall proceed with all convenient despatch to the hearing and determining of the complaint. Ibid.

43. Misconduct generally.

1154. Penalty against any person offending against any of the provisions of this act not exceeding £2, besides imprisonment not exceeding one month, at the discretion of the justices adjudicating on the complaint. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 60.

44. Misconduct of Persons on Board.*

1155. Any person on board any duly-surveyed passenger steamer who wilfully

(407) A passenger assaulted and beaten by the master may recover damages in respect thereof from the owner of the ship, but actual damages only, not punitive, should be allowed. M'Guire v. Steamship Golden Gate, 1 M'All. C. C. (Cal.) 104. [AMERICAN.]

(408) A suit was sustained in the Admiralty, in Massachusetts, by a foreigner, brought tortiously from his own country to the United States, against the master of the vessel in which he was brought. Dunlap's American Admiralty Practice, 68.

(409) And against a master of a vessel for immoderate and harsh deportment and improper language toward passengers, in disregard of his duties in relation to them. Ibid. 65.

(410) The law invests the master with a necessary control over his passengers. He may make proper regulations for their government, such as may ensure their safety, promote the general comfort, and preserve decent order; and these regulations he may enforce by all temperate and needful exercise of power. But here his authority over his passengers finds its limit, and he is a trespasser if he goes beyond it. Conkling's United States Admiralty Practice (2nd ed.), p. 439. [AMERICAN.]

(411) He must show not only a breach of regulation before venturing to use force towards any one of them, but also that there was a clear necessity for the exercise of force. . . . Courteous request, patience, and renewed remonstrance or reprimand, and at last just so much restraint, and if that be unavailing just so much force, and no more, as the exigency may call for: these are the legitimate rights of the master over his passengers. Ibid.

(412) The Admiralty has jurisdiction of personal wrongs committed on a passenger on the high seas by the master of a vessel, whether those wrongs be by direct force or consequential injuries. Chamberlain v. Chandler, 3 Mason, 242. [AMERICAN.]

(413) A suit may be instituted in the Admiralty, not only by a sailor, or other officer or person employed on board a ship during a voyage, against the captain, or master, or other person on board the same ship, or against a person on board another ship, for an assault and battery, but even by does or causes to be done anything to obstruct or injure any part of the machinery or tackle, or any of the crew, or to molest any of them in the execution of their duty; penalty not exceeding £20. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 36.

1156. As to the apprehension without warrant and trial of such offenders, Ibid. s. 37.

1157. Penalty against any person guilty of riotous or insubordinate conduct not exceeding £2, besides imprisonment not exceeding one month, at the discretion of the justices adjudicating on the complaint. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 60.

1158. For provisions empowering the medical practitioner on board a passenger ship aided by the master or, in the absence of such practitioner, the master to exact obedience to the rules and regulations to be observed on board; penalty for disobedience or obstructing the medical practitioner or the master, not exceeding £2, and imprisonment not exceeding one month, Ibid.

1159. The master has absolute control over the passengers in all that is necessary to the safe and proper conduct of the vessel, but the exercise of such power in each instance is defined and limited by the necessity of the case. King v. Franklin, 1 F. & F. 360. See also Noden v. Johnson, 16 Q. B. 218; 20 L. J. Q. B. 95; 15 Jur. 424.

1160. The master has authority to exercise so much force as is necessary for the safety of the ship. Aldworth v. Stewart, 14 L. T. 862; 4 F. & F. 957.

1161. To imprison a passenger in his cabin for seven days for alleged insolence to the master personally is an excess of such power, and an action for false imprisonment will lie. Ibid.

1162. Conduct unbecoming a gentleman in the strict sense of the word will, it seems, justify a master of a ship in excluding a passenger from the cuddy table, whom he has engaged by contract to provide for there; but it is difficult to say in what degree want of polish would, in point of law, warrant such an exclusion; but it is clear that if a passenger use threats of personal violence towards the master, the master may exclude him from the table, and require him to take his meals in his own private apartment. Prendergast v. Compton, 8 C. & P. 454.

1163. A declaration on an agreement to carry the plaintiff in a ship to a particular place alleged as a breach that the defendants by their agent caused him to be disembarked at an intermediate point, and, by their agent, caused the disembarkation to be conducted in a scandalous, disgraceful and improper manner, whereby, and also by contemptuous usage and insulting language addressed to the plaintiff by their agent in effecting the disembarkation, the plaintiff sustained damage. Held, a good declaration. Coppin v. Braithwaite, 8 Jur. 875.

1164. Held, secondly, that the judge rightly received evidence of the language of the master in putting the plaintiff on shore, in which he described him as being a pickpocket, and belonging to the swell mob. Ibid.

1166. A passenger may sue the master of a vessel in the Admiralty for personal damage. The Ruckers, 4 C. Rob. 73. See further, as to the misconduct of passengers, c. 42, s. 16, p. 1316.

45. Stowaways.

1167. Penalty against any person secreting himself and going to sea in any ship without the consent of the owner, consignee, master, mate, or other person entitled to give such consent, not exceeding twenty pounds, or imprisonment not exceeding four weeks. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 258.

1168. Any person travelling or at-a passenger against the master, when the injury was committed during a voyage, or on the high seas. Dunlap's Adm. Prac. 512. [AMERICAN.]

(414) The Admiralty has jurisdiction of personal torts committed on a passenger on the high seas by the master of the ship. The Friends, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. (Lower Canada), 118; The Toronto, ibid. 170.

tempting to travel in any duly-surveyed passenger steamer without having previously paid his fare, and with intent to avoid payment, penalty not exceeding forty shillings, by s. 7 of Act of 1863 extended to any sum not exceeding £20; and such liability is not to prejudice the recovery of the fare payable by him. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 35.

1169. As to the power of the master or officer and those called by him to his assistance to detain any person who has committed such an offence, and whose name and address are unknown to him, and to convey him without warrant before a justice for trial, see Ibid. s. 37.

1170. Penalty against any person found on board any passenger ship with intent to obtain a passage without the consent of the owner, charterer, or master, and against every person aiding and abetting him, not exceeding £20, and in default of payment imprisonment, with or without hard labour, not exceeding three months; such person so found on board may without warrant be taken before any justice of the peace, who may summarily hear the case, and on proof convict such offender. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 18, as amended by the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 7.

46. Sale of Spirits.

1171. Penalty against any person in any passenger ship during the voyage, directly or indirectly, selling or causing to be sold any spirits or strong waters to any passenger, not exceeding £20, nor less than £5. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 62.

47. Insurance of Passage-money.

1172. No policy of assurance effected in respect of any passages, passage, or compensation moneys, by any person by this act liable to provide such passages or pay such moneys, or in respect of any other risk under this act, shall be deemed invalid by reason of the nature of the risk or interest. Ibid. s. 55.

1173. Policy of insurance on passage-money "against all costs, charges and liabilities which the owner or charterer might be subject to under sects. 46, 47, 48, 49, 50 and 51 of the Passengers Act, 1852" (c. 44). The ship was lost by perils of the sea: the passengers were saved in a British colony not being their place of destination: the master within six weeks forwarded them to their place of destination. Held, that the expenses so incurred were charges to which the owner was subject under sects. 49 and 50, and might be recovered under the policy. Sect. 49 does not merely provide that if the master does not forward the passengers within six weeks the governor may do so, but makes it the duty of the master to forward them. Gibson v. Bradford, 4 Ell. & Bl. 586.

1174. A policy of insurance was made at and from Liverpool to Boston on passage money valued at £700. The policy was in the usual printed form with this memorandum: "On passage-money of emigrants, subject to pay a loss pro rata, and subject to the clauses and conditions made under sects. 47 to 51 of the Passengers Act, 1852, compensation clause excepted, and against these risks only." The ship, being a passenger ship within the act, sailed, and by a peril of the sea was driven into F. a foreign port, where she necessarily remained repairing damage for more than six weeks, after which she proceeded with passengers to Boston and arrived there. During the detention at F. the passengers were maintained by the insured at a cost exceeding the passage-money. Held, on demurrer, that this was not a loss incurred under the enumerated sections, and that the underwriters were not liable to make it good. Willis v. Cooke, 5 Ell. & Bl. 641.

48. Registration of Births and Deaths.

49. Forms, &c.

1175. If any person falsely represents himself or assumes to act as the agent of the Board of Trade or sells any form of application or other paper for the use of persons desirous of emigrating with the assistance of the Board of Trade, or wilfully makes any false representation therein, or forges or fraudulently alters any signature or statement therein; or in any certificate of birth, baptism, marriage or other document, or personates any person named therein, or abets any person in so doing, penalty for breach not exceeding £50 nor less than £2. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 84.

1176. These provisions extend to any forms of application or other papers issued under the authority of a secretary of state for the use of persons desirous of emigrating with his assistance, and to any certificate or document adduced in support thereof. See M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 6.

50. Service of Documents.

See Pt. II. c. 45, p. 1253.

51. Forfeitures.

1. Generally.

1177. As to forfeitures generally, see this tit. Pt. II. c. 18, p. 1242; and as to forfeiture of ships under the Chinese Passenger Act, see this Part, c. 5, s. 2, p. 1277.

1178. As to the concurrent jurisdiction of the Admiralty division with courts of Vice-admiralty as to forfeiture of any ships, goods, or effects, or the award of damages for seizure thereof, or of any person on board, see tit. JURISDICTION, Nos. 482, 483, p. 689; and the Pacific Islanders Protection Acts, 1872 and 1875, cc. 19, 51.

2. Sailing without Clearance.

(a) From Port of Departure.

1179. If any passenger ship shall clear out or proceed to sea without the master having first obtained the certificate of clearance required for her, or without having joined in executing the required bond to the Crown, or after having put to sea, shall put into any port or place in the United Kingdom in a damaged state, and shall leave or attempt to leave with passengers without the master having first obtained the certificate of clearance required for her, such ship shall be forfeited to her Majesty. See the Passengers Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 13.

(b) After putting in damaged.

1180. See No. 1179.

3. Sailing without Bond to the Crown.

1181. See No. 1179.

4. Seizure and Proceedings thereon.

1182. Any ship liable to forfeiture as above may be seized by any officer of customs, if found within two years from the commission of the offence, in any port or place in her Majesty's dominions; and shall thereupon be dealt with as if seized for an offence incurring forfeiture under any law relating to the customs. See the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (c. 51), s. 13.

1183. The Board of Trade may release her from forfeiture, on payment, by the owner, charterer, or master, to her Majesty, of such sum not exceeding £2,000 as the Board of Trade may in writing specify. Ibid., as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 7.

1184. As to the procedure on seizure for forfeiture under the Customs Acts, see the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36).

52. Passage or Subsistence Moneys, Damages or Compensation.

1. Who may sue.*

1185. All moneys made recoverable by this act as return of passage money, subsistence money, damages, or compensation may be recovered by and for the use of any passenger entitled thereto, or by any emigration officer for and on behalf of any such passenger or passengers. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 84.

1186. Where an agreement was made to carry a passenger on board a ship from London to the West Indies, the passage money to be paid in London before the commencement of the voyage, and the passenger put his baggage on 1880, p. 47, No. 101.

(417) To entitle a passenger, however, to take advantage of the act, he must have done all that is required by it. Ibid. pp. 47, 48, No. 101.

(418) A new provision was inserted in the Act of 1855, entitling the charterer or master of a ship, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, to recover from the owners the amount of any monies, with costs of suit which he may have to pay, for any default in complying with the requirements of the act. Ibid. p. 49, No. 102.

* (416) If a passenger fails to obtain, within ten days of the stipulated date, a passage from any cause other than his own default or a legal prohibition, he can proceed for the recovery of his passage-money and compensation against either the person to whom he paid the money, or (in case the contract was made with the owner, master or charterer of the ship, or any agent of theirs) against such owner, charterer or master, or any of them, at the option of the passenger, or of the emigration officer acting on his behalf. Board of Trade Mem. on Pass. Act, board in the Thames, meaning himself to embark at Portsmouth, and the ship was lost going round to that place, held, that the passage money could not be recovered back. Gillan v. Simpkin, 4 Camp. 241.

1186a. Aliter, if the agreement had been to carry the passenger from Portsmouth to the West Indies. Ibid.

1187. If a master of an East Indiaman dies at the outward port after having contracted to bring home certain passengers, and laid in a certain quantity of stores for the homeward voyage: and the chief mate succeeding to the command brings home these and other passengers, and provides further stores for their subsistence during the voyage; the master's representatives are entitled to the passage money of the passengers with whom he had contracted, and the mate to that of the others, the representatives being liable to him for the portion of the stores laid in by him consumed by the former class of passengers, and he being liable to the representatives for the portion of the master's stores consumed by the latter class of passengers. Siordet v. Brodic, 3 Camp. 253.

2. How and before whom recoverable.

1188. Such passage or subsistence moneys, damages, or compensation, may be recovered by one or several informations or complaints. See Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 84.

1189. As to the mode of proceeding to enforce such claims, see next cap.

53. Penalties.

1. Who may sue.

1190. All penalties and forfeitures under this act are to be sued for in the United Kingdom by any emigration officer or his assistant, or any person so authorized by the Board of Trade, or by any collector or comptroller of customs, or other officer of customs authorized by the commissioners of customs, and in any of her Majesty's possessions abroad by any government emigration officer or agent, or any such officer of customs, or by any officer authorized by the governor of such possession, and the Board of Trade. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 84.

2. Before whom recoverable.

(a) In England.

1191. All penalties and moneys made recoverable under this act as passage money, subsistence money, compensation or damages in any contract ticket, may be recovered before any two or more justices of the peace, acting in any part of her Majesty's dominions or possessions in which the offence was committed or the cause of complaint arose, or in which the offender or party complained against happens to be, or acting in any county or borough, or place adjacent to any navigable river or inlet of the sea on which the offence committed or cause of complaint arose. Ibid. s. 85.

1192. Every police or stipendiary magistrate has the same powers and jurisdiction as the justice, two justices or justices at petty sessions under this act. Ibid. s. 86.

(b) In Scotland.

1193. In Scotland every sheriff, steward and sheriff substitute or steward substitute of a county or stewartry, within his own county or stewartry, has the like powers and jurisdiction as any justice, or two justices or justices at petty sessions under this act. Ibid.

3. Summons.

(a) Generally.

1194. Upon complaint made before any justice of the peace so acting, he shall issue a summons in the form in Sched. (N), requiring the party to appear at a time and place named therein. Ibid. s. 85.

1195. For form of summons for a defendant or witness, see Ibid. Sched. (N).

(b) Service.

1196. Every such summons shall be served on the party, or left at his last known place of abode or business, or on board any ship to which he may belong. Ibid.

4. Warrant without Summons.

1197. The justice before whom the charge is made, if he suspects, from information on oath, that the party is likely to abscond, may issue such warrant in the first instance, without summons. Ibid.

5. Proceedings by Default.

(a) Generally.

1198. If such party shall not appear accordingly, then (upon proof of the service of the summons) any such two justices may hear and determine the case in the absence of the party. See the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), s. 85.

(b) Warrant.

1199. One of the justices may issue his warrant for bringing such party, served with summons and not appearing, before the two justices. Ibid.

6. Hearing.

1200. Upon the appearance of the party, or in his absence, any two of such justices may hear and determine the case with or without any written complaint. Ibid.

(b) Adjournment.

See Ibid. s. 87.

7. Proof of Exemption.

1201. If in any action or other proceeding under this act any question arises whether any ship was or was not exempted from the provisions of this act, the burden of proving such exemption lies on the party claiming it, and failing such proof it shall be adjudged that the ship came within the provisions of this act; and it is not necessary to negative any exemption, proviso, or condition under this act, nor for the complainant to prove the negative, but the defendant may prove the affirmative thereof, if he seeks advantage of it. Ibid. s. 89.

8. Proof of Officer's Authority.

1202. If in any proceeding before any such justice or justices, or upon any action or other proceeding, against any person for anything done contrary to or in pursuance of this act, a question arises whether any person is an emigration officer or assistant emigration officer, or an officer of customs, videlicet evidence may be given of such fact by the officer, and is to be deemed sufficient evidence. Ibid. s. 90.

9. Witnesses.

1203. The justices are authorized to summon and swear witnesses. Ibid. s. 85.

1204. Any passenger suing under this act for any moneys made recoverable as passage or subsistence money, compensation, or damages, shall not be deemed an incompetent witness, notwithstanding, if recovered, it is applicable to his own benefit. Ibid. s. 91.

10. Conviction or Adjudication.

1205. Such justices may convict the offender, or adjudicate upon the complaint. Ibid. s. 85.

1206. The conviction or adjudication is to be drawn up according to one of the forms in Schedule (O). Ibid.

1207. For form of conviction and order for adjudication when the defendant does not appear, see Ibid. Schedule (P).

11. Order.

1208. Upon every such conviction the justices may order the offender to pay the penalty, and upon every such adjudication may order the party complained against to pay all or part of the money or damages sued for, with costs. Ibid. s. 85.

(b) Service of—

1209. The warrant may issue, although no order of conviction or adjudication or any minute thereof has been served. Ibid.

(c) Enforcement of—

1210. The justices may, by warrant, cause the party offending to be committed to gaol, with or without hard labour, according to their discretion, for any term not exceeding three months, unless such moneys and costs are sooner paid. Ibid.

12. Want of form in Proceedings.

1211. No conviction, order, adjudication, or other proceeding under this act shall be quashed for want of form. Ibid.

13. Defect or Variance in Proceedings.

1212. No objection shall be taken or allowed to any complaint, information, summons, or warrant under this act, for any alleged defect therein, in substance or form, or for any variance between such complaint or information and the evidence on the hearing; but if there is any such variance that the party so summoned and appearing has been thereby misled, such justice or justices, upon such terms as he or they think fit, may adjourn the hearing, and in the meantime commit the defendant to such safe custody as they may think fit, or discharge him upon his recognizance, with or without sureties, to appear as may be appointed. Ibid. s. 87.

14. Limitation of Actions.

1213. When no time is limited for any complaint or information under this act, it must be made or laid within twelve months from the time when the matter thereof arose, or, if the master of the ship is the person proceeded against, within twelve months after his return to the country in which the matter arose. Ibid. s. 94.

15. Application.

(a) Generally.

1214. All penalties under this act shall, notwithstanding any local act to the contrary, be paid to the officer of emigration or customs at whose suit they have been recovered, for the use of the crown; and if recovered in the colonies shall be paid into the colonial treasury; and if recovered in the United Kingdom shall be paid over to the Board of Trade if recovered by an emigration officer or his assistant; and to the commissioners of customs if recovered by an officer of customs. Ibid. s. 88.

(b) As Compensation.

1215. But the justices may direct that a part, not exceeding a moiety, may be applied to compensate any passenger for any wrong or damage sustained by the act or default in respect of which the penalty or forfeiture has been imposed. Ibid.

16. Forms.

1216. In all proceedings under this act for which no form is provided, forms similar to those contained in the schedule to 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43 are to be used. Ibid. s. 85.

54. Actions against Officers.

1. Limitation.

1217. No action shall be commenced against any emigration officer or other person for anything done under this act, until ten clear days' notice in writing, specifying the cause of action, has been given to the person against whom such action is intended to be brought, nor after three months after the act committed and mentioned in such notice. Every such action shall be brought, and tried where the cause of action arose. Ibid. s. 93.

2. Tender of Amends.

1218. No plaintiff shall recover in any action against any emigration officer or other person for anything done in pursuance of this act, if tender of sufficient amends has been made before action brought, or if, after action brought, a sufficient sum has been paid into court on behalf of the defendant. Ibid. s. 92.

3. Pleadings and Proofs.

1219. The defendant may plead the general issue and give this act and any special matter in evidence at the trial. Ibid. s. 93.

4. Costs.

See tit. Costs, c. 46, p. 416.

55. Pilotage.

1220. As to the obligation upon passenger steamers to employ a duly-licensed pilot when in pilotage waters, see this tit. Pt. VII. c. 5, p. 1355.

Part V.—DECK AND GRAIN CARGOES, AND DANGEROUS GOODS.

1. Deck Cargoes.*

1. Generally.

1221. If any ship, British or foreign, other than home-trade ships as defined by the M. S. Act, 1854, carries timber, stores, or other goods, as deck cargo, i. e. in any uncovered space upon deck, or in any covered space not included in the cubical contents forming the ship's registered tonnage, all dues payable on the ship's tonnage shall be payable as if there were added to the ship's registered tonnage the tonnage of the space occupied by such goods at the time at which such dues become payable. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 23.

(418a) For an instance of wreck inquiry in a case of improperly-laden deck cargo, see Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, p. 256; and for other instances of wreck inquiries into vessels which perished by reason of neglect, overloading, bad stowage, imperfect ventilation, see the Board of Trade Official Caution, set out Ibid. pp. 251—280.

1222. The space so occupied shall be deemed to be the space limited by the area occupied by the goods and by straight lines inclosing a rectangular space sufficient to include the goods. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 23.

1223. The tonnage of such space shall be ascertained by the officer in manner directed by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 21, sub-s. 4, and shall be entered by him in the ship's official log book, and in a memorandum he shall deliver to the master, who shall, when the dues are demanded, produce the memorandum as if it were the certificate of registry, or if a foreign ship, the document equivalent thereto. Penalty for default, against the master, the same as for nonproduction of certificate of registry or analogous document. Ibid.

1224. These provisions as to deck cargo do not apply to any ship whilst engaged in the coasting trade of any British possession. Ibid. s. 44.

2. During Winter.

1225. Penalty for carrying in any ship, whether British or foreign, arriving between the last day of October and the 16th day of April at any port in the United Kingdom from any port out of the United Kingdom, as deck cargo, i. e. in any uncovered space upon deck, or in any covered space not included in the cubical contents forming the ship's registered tonnage (a) any square, round, waney, or other timber, or any pitch pine, mahogany, oak, teak, or other heavy wood goods whatever; or (b) any more than five spare spars or store spars, whether or not made, dressed, and finally prepared for use; or (c) any deals, battens or other light wood goods of any description to a height exceeding three feet above the deck; against the master of the ship, and also against the owner, if he is privy to the offence, not exceeding £5 for every hundred cubic feet of wood goods so carried, or to an amount not exceeding £100. Ibid. s. 24.

1226. But the master or owner shall not be liable to any penalty (1) in respect of any wood goods considered necessary to be on deck on account of any damage to the ship received or apprehended; or (2) if he proves that the ship sailed from the port at which the wood goods were loaded as deck cargo at such time before the last day of October as allowed a sufficient interval, according to the ordinary duration of the voyage, for the ship to arrive before that day at the port in the United Kingdom, but was prevented from so arriving by stress of weather or circumstances beyond his control; or (3) if he proves that the ship sailed from the port at which the wood goods were loaded as deck cargo at such time before the 16th day of April as allowed a reasonable interval according to the ordinary duration of the voyage for the ship to arrive at the port in the United Kingdom, and by reason of an exceptionally favourable voyage arrived before that day. Ibid. s. 24.

1227. Nothing in this section shall affect any ship not bound for but coming into a port of the United Kingdom under stress of weather, or for any other purpose than the delivery of her cargo. Ibid.

3. Exemptions.

1228. The provisions of this act do not apply to any vessel employed exclusively in going from place to place in any river or inland water of which the whole or part is in any British possession. Ibid. s. 44.

See also No. 1224, supra.

4. Additions to Registered Tonnage.

1229. As to the addition of the space occupied by deck cargo to the registered tonnage, for the calculation of tonnage dues, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. p. 1194, and Nos. 1221—1224, supra.

5. Detention of Overladen or Improperly-laden Ships.*

overladen or improperly-laden ships, see Pt. III. c. 1, p. 1258.

2. Grain Cargoes in British Ships generally.

1. Interpretation of Terms.

1231. "Grain" means any corn, rice, paddy, pulse, seeds, nuts, or nut kernels. "Ship laden with a grain cargo" means a ship carrying a cargo of which the grain portion is more than one-third of the ship's registered tonnage; to be computed, when the grain is reckoned in measures of capacity, at one hundred cubic feet for each registered ton, and when reckoned in measures of weight, at two tons weight for each registered ton. See M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (c. 43), s. 10.

2. Obligation of proper Precautions.*

1232. Where a grain cargo is laden on any British ship all necessary and reasonable precautions (whether prescribed by this act or not) shall be taken to prevent the cargo from shifting. Penalty for breach against the master and agent of the owner charged with the loading or sending her to sea, not exceeding £300, and against the owner to the same amount, unless he shows he took all reasonable means to enforce the observance of this section, and was not privy to the breach. Ibid. s. 3.

3. Authority of Inspectors.

1233. Towards securing the observance of this act, any officer, duly authorized by the Board of Trade, has the same power as an inspector appointed under the M. S. Act, 1854 (as to which see that Act, ss. 15 and 16, and Pt. I. c. 6, p. 1208), and power to inspect any grain cargo, and the mode in which it is stowed. Ibid. s. 8.

4. Prosecution of Offenders and Recovery of Penalties.

1234. Every offence under this act may be prosecuted summarily and every penalty recovered and enforced summarily, like offences and penalties under the M. S. Act, 1854, and the acts amending the same (see as to same, Pt. II. c. 53, p. 1255). Ibid. s. 9.

5. Exemptions.

See No. 1228, supra.

3. Grain Cargoes in British Ships from particular Ports.

1. Generally.

1235. The M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (c. 43), makes the following regulations, to be observed in all British ships laden with a grain cargo at any port in the Mediterranean or Black Seas and bound to any port outside the Straits of Gibraltar, or laden with a grain cargo on the coast of North America. See M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (c. 43).

2. On what Decks to be carried in Bulk.

1236. There shall not be carried between the decks, or, if the ship has more than two decks, between the main and upper decks, any grain in bulk, except what may be necessary for feeding the cargo in the hold, and is carried in properly-constructed feeders. Ibid. s. 4.

3. Proportion to be carried in Bags.

(a) Generally.

1237. When grain laden in British ships at such ports (except what is carried in properly-constructed feeders) is carried in bulk in any hold or compartment, and proper provision for filling it up by feeders is not made, not less than one-fourth of the grain carried in the hold or compartment (as the case may be) shall be in bags supported on suitable platforms laid upon the grain in bulk. Ibid.

(b) Exceptions.

(aa) Oats or Cotton Seed.

1238. The following exceptions are allowed to this regulation:—

As to bags of oats or cotton seed. Ibid.

* (420) Sect. 22 of M. S. Act, 1876, is repealed by M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880, from 1st July, 1881, when this latter act came into operation.

1239. Sailing ships of less than 400 tons register, and not engaged in the Atlantic trade. See M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (c. 43), s. 4.

1240. Ships laden at ports in the Mediterranean or Black Sea, if the ship is divided into compartments formed by substantial transverse partitions, and fitted with longitudinal bulkheads or such shifting boards as are mentioned in this section (see No. 1242), and if the ship does not carry more than one-fourth grain cargo, nor more than 1,500 quarters, in any one compartment, bin, or division, and provided each division of the lower hold is fitted with properly-constructed feeders from the between decks. Ibid.

1241. Ships in which the grain cargo does not exceed one-half of the whole cargo, and the rest consists of cotton, wool, flax, barrels or sacks of flour, or other suitable cargo so stowed as to prevent the grain in any compartment, bin, or division from shifting. Ibid.

4. Longitudinal Bulkhead or sufficient shifting Boards:

1242. When grain is carried in the hold or between decks, in bags or bulk, the hold or space between the decks shall be divided by a longitudinal bulkhead or by sufficient shifting boards extending from deck to deck or from deck to keelson and properly secured, and if the grain is in bulk, fitted grain-tight with proper fillings between the beams. Ibid.

5. Stowing, Trimming and Securing.

1243. In loading, the grain shall be properly stowed, trimmed and secured. Ibid.

6. Effect of Breach of Regulations.

1244. In the event of contravention of any of these regulations, reasonable precautions within the meaning of sect. 3 (for which see No. 1232) to prevent the grain cargo of that ship from shifting shall be deemed not to have been taken, and the owner, master, and any agent of the ship charged with loading or sending her to sea shall be liable to penalties accordingly, besides any liability, civil or criminal, to which he would otherwise be subject for failing to adopt any precautions reasonably required to prevent grain cargo from shifting. Ibid.

7. Exemption of Ships loaded under Board of Trade Rules.

(a) Generally.

1245. The precautions required to be adopted by ships within this category do not apply to ships loaded, or constructed and loaded, in accordance with Board of Trade rules or plans. Ibid. s. 5.

(b) Board of Trade Rules.

1246. The precautions required by the act to be adopted by ships laden with a grain cargo shall not apply to ships laden at a port on the coast of N. America, in accordance with the regulations numbered 1 to 5, of which the titles and dates are set forth in the first schedule hereto, so far as they relate to the stowage of grain cargoes; and in accordance with the additional regulations set forth in the second schedule hereto, in the case of Rules 1 and 5 of the first schedule. Board of Trade Official Notice, 8th May, 1882, M. 22,361—1880.*

spector; (4) rules and regulations of the marine surveyors at San Francisco for ships carrying grain in bags, dated 20th Dec. 1877, and signed by Amos Noyes, chairman, and C. Davidson, secretary; (5) acts and rules relating to the loading of grain in ships at the ports of Montreal and Quebec; rules and bye-laws of the office of port warden, harbour of Montreal, signed D. R. Kerr, port warden, 1879, Montreal, John Dick, port warden, June, 1871, Quebec. Copies of a pamphlet containing the rules and regulations included in the first schedule above can be obtained through any bookseller or chart-

1247. In the case of single-decked ships loading a grain cargo at a port in the Mediterranean or Black Sea, where no provision is made for feeding the hold, and where, according to the requirements of s. 4 of the act, one-fourth of the grain is carried in any one compartment, the Board of Trade have approved a regulation that the whole fourth or any part of the fourth of the compartment, bin or division which would according to the requirements thereof be stowed with grain in bags, may in lieu thereof be stowed with bales of cotton, bales of grass or bags of flour, or other suitable cargo; provided always, that the substituted cargo can be supported on suitable platforms laid on the grain in bulk, and be so stowed as to prevent the grain from shifting. Ibid. 29th Jan. 1881, M. 2,352—1881.

1248. In the case of vessels having two or more decks, loading a cargo of oats or cotton seed at a port in the Mediterranean or Black Sea, and bound to ports outside the straits of Gibraltar, the Board of Trade have approved the following regulation, viz., that oats or cotton seed may be carried in bulk between decks, provided (1) that the 'tween deck hatches shall not at any time be put on; and (2) that strakes of the deck shall be lifted, or if the deck is an iron deck, sufficient openings be provided to admit of the cargo in the 'tween decks feeding the lower hold; and (3) that the precautions specified in sects. 4 (c) and 4 (d) of the act be adopted. Ibid. 20th February, 1881—M. 3,904—1881.

1249. A similar exemption, viz., that oats may be carried in bulk between decks is made in favour of two-decked ships loading oats at any Canadian ports on complying with the same conditions. Ibid. 3rd June, 1881—M. 14,062—1881.

1250. Shipowners desirous of obtaining the approval (under sect. 5 of the act) of plans of single-decked ships employed in the grain trade, should forward plans showing the particulars of the arrangements for feeding the hold, and the mode to prevent the cargo shifting, to the Board of Trade: also the following particulars, viz., the date of the building of the ship; (2) the period she has been employed in the grain trade since; (3) whether she has been a single-decked ship during that time; (4) whether she has carried her cargoes safely, whether they have shifted or not; and (5) whether she is now a single-decked ship. The Board of Trade do not intend to sanction (under s. 5) any ships which at any time have had more than one deck. Ibid. 19th March, 1881, M. 6,749—1881.

1251. The Board of Trade have approved of the following regulations, Nos. 1 to 5, in the case of ships loading barley at ports in the Mediterranean or Black Sea. Ibid. Aug. 1881, M. 19,928—1881; M. 22,011—1881; M. 12,257—1883; M. 12,629—1884.

- (1) In the case of single-decked ships, loaded in accordance with plans submitted to and approved by the Board of Trade, and whose names are included in the lists of ships issued by the Board of Trade and for the information of consular officers at ports in the Mediterranean and Black Seas, the precaution as to carrying a fourth of the grain cargo in bags shall not apply:
- (2) In the case of ships having two decks and loading a grain cargo at a port in the Mediterranean or Black Sea, barley may be carried in bulk in the 'tween decks, provided that—
 - (a) grain-tight feeders be fitted from the lower hold through the hatches to the uppermost deck, such feeders to contain not more than six per cent. and not less than three per cent. of the quantity carried in the hold or compartment they feed:

seller; or of T. D. Potter, 31, Poultry, London; or E. Stanford, 55, Charing Cross, S.W.

(422) The second schedule to this official notice is as follows:—"N.B. In all cases in which the regulations as to the stowage of grain cargo set forth in the first schedule do not contain the express provisions contained in this second schedule, then such of the following regulations, if any, as are not included in the regulations set forth in the first schedule must also be complied with. If such of these regulations as may not be included in the regulations set forth in the first schedule are not also complied with, the precautions required by the act must be taken—

- (1) shifting boards must extend to the keelson; (2) there shall not be carried between the decks, or if the ship has more than two decks, between the main and upper decks, any grain in bulk, except such as may be necessary for feeding the cargo in the hold, and is carried in properly-constructed feeders; (3) grain carried in bulk must be supplied by proper feeders, or else secured by bags of grain or other cargo.

(3) Or (in lieu of the regulation in paragraph 2 (a)), barley shipped at a port in the Mediterranean or Black Sea may be carried in bulk in the 'tween decks, provided—(a) that the 'tween deck hatches shall not at any time be put on; and (b) that strakes of the deck be lifted, or if the deck be an iron deck, sufficient openings be made through the deck in the wings, which, with the open hatches shall admit of the cargo in the 'tween decks feeding the lower hold:

(4) The regulations contained in this paragraph (No. 4) shall also be observed, whether the ship is loaded under the regulation contained in paragraph No. 2 above or that contained in No. 3 above; that is to say, (a) there shall be longitudinal grain-tight shifting boards in accordance with sub-s. (c) of s. 4 of the Act, and the grain shall be properly stowed, trimmed, and secured, as registered by sub-s. (d) of the said s. 4; (b) feeders shall be fitted to feed the grain carried in the 'tween decks, such feeders to contain not less than two per cent. of the compartments they feed; (c) the space in the 'tween decks in which barley in bulk is carried, shall be bounded at each end by grain-tight transverse bulk-heads or partitions extending from deck to deck; (d) the ship shall not be overloaded:

(5) If at any time it shall appear to the Board of Trade that the above regulations or any of them insufficiently provide for the safety of the ship, and should therefore in their opinion be revoked and withdrawn, or that they need alteration, the Board of Trade will revoke, withdraw, or alter them accordingly.

8. Notices at Loading and Delivery Ports.

(a) At Loading Port.

1252. Before a British ship laden with grain cargo at any port in the Mediterranean or Black Sea, bound to ports outside the Straits of Gibraltar, or laden with grain cargo on the coast of N. America, leaves her final port of loading, or within forty-eight hours afterwards, the master shall cause to be delivered to the British consular officer, or, if in her Majesty's dominions, to the principal officer of customs at that port, a notice stating—the draught of water and clear side (as defined by s. 5 of the M. S. Act, 1871, c. 110, and s. 4 of the M. S. Act, 1873, c. 85), of the ship after the completion of the loading of her cargo there; the kind of grain and the quantity thereof loaded in her and described as in cubic feet, quarters, bushels, or tons weight; the mode in which the grain cargo is stowed; and the precautions taken against shifting. See M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (c. 43), s. 6.

(b) At Delivery Port.

(aa) Generally.

1253. The master of a British ship laden with grain cargo at any of such ports (see No. 1252) is to deliver a notice (similar to that required to be delivered by him to a British consular officer, or principal officer of customs, within forty-eight hours after leaving his final port of loading (for which see No. 1252, supra), to the principal collector or other proper officer of customs in the United Kingdom, with the report required to be made by the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, on the ship's arrival there. Ibid.

1254. The master of every ship, whether laden or in ballast, shall within twenty-four hours after arrival from parts beyond the seas at any port in the United Kingdom make due report of such ship to the collector or other proper officer in the form No. I. in Sched. (B) to this act, (as to which see note (423) *infra), and containing the several particulars indicated in or required thereby, or in such other form or manner as the commissioners of customs may direct, and such

* (423) Sched. B, Form No. 1, contains the form of report giving the following information as to cargo, viz.: the name or names of places where laden, in order of time; the marks and Nos. of the packages; the packages, and description of goods, particulars of goods stowed loose, and general denomination of contents of each package of tobacco, cigars or snuff intended to be imported at the port, the particulars of packages and goods (if any) intended for any other port in the United Kingdom, the goods (if any) to be transhipped or to remain on board for exportation, the name of the consignee, and whether the ship is in ballast or not. Sched. B, Form No. 1, to the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, c. 36.

report, except where otherwise specially allowed or provided for by their order, or at ports where goods may be landed into transit sheds, shall be made before bulk is broken. See the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 50.

1255. Penalty for breach against the master £100, and the goods may be detained by the officer of customs in the Queen's warehouse. Ibid. s. 51.

1256. Every such notice shall be sent to the Board of Trade as soon as practicable by the officer receiving it. See M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (c. 43), s. 6.

(c) Effect of Breach or False Statement.

1257. Penalty against master for failing to deliver any such notice, not exceeding £100. Ibid.

1258. Penalty against any master who in any such notice wilfully makes any false statement, or wilfully omits any material particular, not exceeding £100. Ibid. s. 7.

(d) Exemptions by Board of Trade.

(aa) Generally.

1259. The Board of Trade may, by notice published in the London Gazette, or otherwise, exempt ships laden at any particular ports or any class of such ships from having to give these notices. Ibid. s. 6.

See Pt. II. c. 53, p. 1254.

4. Explosive Substances and Dangerous Goods.

1. Generally.

1260. The law with respect to manufacturing, keeping, selling, carrying, and importing gunpowder, nitro-glycerine, and other explosive substances is amended by the Explosives Substances Act, 1875, (c. 17).

1261. The act includes fog signals, where these are of an explosive nature. Ibid. s. 3.

1262. For the general rules to be observed with respect to the packing of gunpowder for conveyance (penalty for breach against the person guilty of such breach not exceeding £20, and the gunpowder may be forfeited), see ibid. s. 33.

1263. For provisions enabling every harbour authority, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, to make bye-laws for regulating the conveyance, loading, unloading and stowage of gunpowder, the navigation and mooring of ships and boats conveying the same, their construction, fitting up, and licensing and lights and fires therein, Ibid. s. 34.

1263a. For similar provisions as to petrolum, see the Petroleum Act, 1871 (c. 105), s. 4.

1264. On breach of bye-law the harbour-master or his subordinate may cause the ship, boat, carriage or gunpowder, at the expense of the owner, to be removed to a proper place, and the expense of the removal is to be recovered like a penalty. See the Explosives Substances Act, 1875 (c. 17), s. 34.

1265. Where there is no harbour authority the Board of Trade may make bye-laws for such purposes. Ibid.

1266. The occupier of every wharf or dock on or in which gunpowder is loaded or unloaded (if such loading or unloading is not otherwise subject to any bye-laws under the act) may, and if so required by the secretary of state shall, with his sanction, make bye-laws for regulating the loading and unloading of gunpowder on such wharf or dock. Ibid. s. 36.

1266a. The regulations as to gunpowder apply to every other explosive. Ibid. s. 39.

1267. Sect. 29 of the Passengers Act, 1855, c. 119, (for which see No. 1009, p. 1297), and sects. 23 to 27, both inclusive, of the M. S. Act, 1873, c. 85 (for which see Nos. 1304—1308, infra, apply to every explosive within the meaning of this act as they apply to gunpowder. Ibid. s. 42.

the carriage of military or naval stores in passenger ships, see the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1870 (c. 95), s. 3.

1268*a*. As to the right of prohibition, by proclamation or Order in Council, of the exportation, or carrying coastwise, of ammunition, gunpowder, or military or naval stores, see the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1879 (c. 21), s. 8.

1269. For particulars of substances which are included in and defined by the term "explosives" in the Explosives Act, 1875 (c. 17), see that act, s. 3.

1269*a*. For provisions as to the entry outward or coastwise of explosives, and for the proper description of the explosive in the entry, see the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 139.

1270. For provisions that all explosive substances within the meaning of the Explosives Act, 1875 (c. 17), on the unloading or landing of which any restriction is imposed, and all explosive substances within the meaning of the Explosives Substances Act, 1883 (c. 3), which are forfeited under that act, are to be deemed restricted goods within the meaning of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), see the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1883 (c. 10), s. 3.

1271. Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, prohibit absolutely or in part, or subject to conditions or restrictions, the manufacture, keeping or importation of explosives. See the Explosives Act, 1875 (c. 17), s. 43.

1272. The secretary of state may appoint inspectors for the purposes of this act, and assign them their duties. Ibid. s. 53.

1272*a*. See as to the powers of government inspectors, Ibid. s. 55.

1273. The Board of Trade may from time to time by order direct—(a) Any person acting under the Board as an inspector of railways to act generally with respect to any railway or canal as an inspector under this act. (b) Any person acting as an inspector, or otherwise for the purposes of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), or the amending acts, to act generally in harbours and with respect to ships as an inspector under this act. Ibid. s. 58.

1274. When there occurs any accident causing loss of life or personal injury in the carriage, by any ship or boat, of any explosive, the owner or master thereof, and the owner of the explosive, must forthwith cause notice of such accident, and of the loss of life or personal injury, to be sent to the secretary of state. Ibid. s. 63.

1275. Every harbour authority and canal authority has power to provide carriages, ships and boats for the conveyance, loading and unloading of explosives within its jurisdiction. Ibid. s. 71.

1276. Powers are given to any government inspector or officer of the local authority or specially authorized by warrant of a justice to search for explosives, and to seize and detain them if any offence has been committed. Ibid. ss. 73 and 75.

1276*a*. See as to the publication of bye-laws, Ibid. s. 84.

1277. As to the punishment of offences, Ibid. ss. 87—89.

1278. As to the punishment of persons for carrying explosives likely to endanger life or property, see the Explosives Substances Act, 1883 (c. 3).

1279. Where the owner or master of a ship or boat is prevented from complying with the act by the wilful act, neglect or default of the consignor or consignee of the explosive, or other person, or by the improper refusal of the consignee or other person, to accept delivery of the explosive, such person on such default, neglect or wilful act, shall be liable to the same penalty as the owner or master, and his conviction shall exempt the owner or master. See the Explosives Act, 1875 (c. 17), s. 88.

1280. As to the jurisdiction on tidal water or on boundaries, Ibid. ss. 89—96.

1281. The owner or master of any ship or boat, or any carrier or warehouseman, or person having charge of any carriage is not to be liable for any breach of this act if he proves that by reason of stress of weather, inevitable accident or other emergency, the doing of such act was necessary and proper under the circumstances. Ibid. s. 100.

1282. It shall be lawful for her Majesty, from time to time, by Order in Council, to define for the purposes of this act, the composition, quality and character of any explosive, and to classify explosives. Ibid. s. 106.

1283. See, for such classification and definition, Order in Council of 5th August, 1875.

1284. As to the powers of the Board of Trade to make bye-laws for the lower estuary of the Clyde, see the Explosives Act, 1875 (c. 17), s. 115.

1285. For provisions for the safe keeping of petroleum and other substances of a like nature, see the Petroleum Act, 1871 (c. 105).

1286. As to the manufacture of nitro-glycerine and the prohibition of its exportation and importation without licence, see the Nitro-Glycerine Act, 1869 (c. 113).

1287. As to the notice to the harbour authority to be given by the shipowner carrying petroleum, and penalty for breach not exceeding £500, see the Petroleum Act, 1871 (c. 105), s. 5.

1289. The Queen's harbour master, or any person authorized in writing from the Admiralty, may, with proper assistants, enter any vessel in a dockyard port, and there search for gunpowder, shotted or loaded guns, fires, or lights or combustible substances had or suspected to be had on board in contravention of any Order in Council under this Act, and extinguish such fire or light. Penalty for obstructing him in the execution of this duty not exceeding £10. See the Dockyard Ports Regulation Act, 1865 (c. 125), s. 12.

1290. Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, make regulations in regard to gunpowder, loaded or shotted guns, tar, oil, or other combustible substances on board any vessel, in any dockyard port. Ibid. s. 5.

1291. The provisions of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), as to the carriage of dangerous goods (for which provisions see Nos. 1304—1309), are to be deemed to be in addition to any other enactment for the like object. See the act, s. 28.

1292. As to the carriage and discharge of gunpowder in the Gloucester and Berkeley Canal, see Bye-laws of the Company, confirmed 27th Jan. 1871, Nos. 29, 30, 31, 32, 34.

1295. For provisions in regard to the discharge of gunpowder in the Tyne, see Bye-laws of the Tyne Improvement Commissioners, sanctioned 9th May, 1868, Clause 71.

1296. For provisions as to not shipping gunpowder within 250 yards of any of her Majesty's docks, magazines, wharves, &c. see Order in Council as to Chatham and Sheerness Dockyard Ports, of 29th Feb. 1868, No. 9.

1297. For provisions against any private vessel having loaded guns within the distance therein described from her Majesty's docks or dockyard property, or discharging them before sunrise, see Ibid. 28th Feb. 1868, No. 13.

1298. For provisions limiting the quantity of gunpowder which may be brought into Pembroke Harbour, and the place of deposit for the same, and the flags such vessels are to carry, see Order in Council for the regulation of the Dockyard Port of Pembroke, of 29th Feb. 1868, Nos. 8 and 9.

1299. For provisions limiting the quantity of gunpowder which may be brought into the harbour of Hamoaze by private vessels, and its place of deposit, see Order in Council for the regulation of the Dockyard Port of Plymouth, of 28th Feb. 1868, No. 15.

1300. For provisions with regard to vessels laden with gunpowder, and the discharge thereof, and as to shotted guns and the discharge thereof, see Order in Council for regulating the Dockyard Port of Portsmouth, of 29th Feb. 1868, Nos. 21 and 22.

1301. Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, declare that any of the provisions of the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876, or any amending act thereafter to be passed, shall apply to the ships of such foreign countries as shall have signified their desire to adopt such provisions. See the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), ss. 37 and 38.

See Board of Trade Circular as to Carriage of Explosives in Ships, No. 100—867—36, Feb. 1877, p. 12.

(438) If, also, in any case the principal officer is specially applied to to detain provisionally, under s. 6 of the M. S. Act, 1876, a ship as unsafe on account of improper loading of her cargo, and that ship has on board as cargo any gunpowder or other explosives, he should be guided by the following general instructions:—He need not detain any such ship provided the explosives, being packed as required by s. 33 of the Explosives Substances Act, 1875 (c. 17), and by the order of the secretary of state, are enclosed in a substantial compartment of double boards with an intermediate lining of felt, and free from all exposed iron in the interior thereof, and exclusively appropriated to the stowage of explosives—if such compartment is not provided the officer must satisfy himself that the explosives are “otherwise,” and by careful stowage, secured from contact with or danger from any other article or substance carried as cargo on board the ship. It is understood throughout that explosives are not to be placed in the same part of the ship as coals, combustibles, spirits, or other inflammable goods. Ibid.

Where any dangerous goods have been attempted to be sent or carried on board any vessel, British or foreign, without having been marked or without the notice as before mentioned, and where any such goods have been attempted to be sent or carried, under a false description, or the sender or carrier has been falsely described, any court having Admimeans of a bulkhead or partition, or otherwise, and by careful stowing to secure the explosive carried from being brought into contact with, or endangered by, any other article or substance conveyed in such ship or boat which is liable to cause fire or explosion. Bye-laws of Thames Conservancy Board of the 20th Nov. 1876, sanctioned by the Board of Trade, 22nd Nov. 1876, and set out in 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), pp. 455—460, par. 38.

(441) Ships shall not carry more than 1,000 lbs. of any explosive (other than explosives of the first division of the sixth (ammunition) class, prescribed in Order in Council of 5th Aug. 1875), at the same time with any naphtha, paraffin, petroleum, or other volatile oil, and such naphtha, paraffin, petroleum, or other volatile oil shall not be used for any purpose, or on any pretence whatever, in a ship carrying more than 1,000 lbs. of any explosive, other than explosives of the first division of the sixth (ammunition) class, whilst such ship is in the river Thames within the jurisdiction of the conservators. Ibid. par. 49.

(442) Appendix (A) to the Circular No. 100 contains the order of the secretary of state made under the Explosives Act, 1875. The order contains instructions as to the mode of packing the various classes of explosives enumerated in the Order in Council of 5th Aug. 1875.

(443) Surveyors, before granting clearances for emigrant ships or declarations for passenger steamers, should, in all cases, see that a separate, detached and completely-enclosed receptacle is provided for each of the following descriptions of explosives:—(1) Gunpowder and cannon cartridges made with gunpowder; (2) rockets; (3) rocket signals; (4) blue lights; (5) Holmes' lights. These separate receptacles should not be made merely by divisions or partitions in a cupboard or locker or chest, but must be separate magazines exclusively appropriated to the keeping of the explosives. They should, where possible, be kept, in a house on deck. No article of an explosive or inflammable character shall be carried in any room or place in which any receptacle containing explosives is deposited. The attention of masters of vessels should be called to this instruction. See Board of Trade Instructions to Surveyors, Stowage of Signals of Distress, Dec. 1884, M. 18,055—1884.

rally jurisdiction may declare the goods, and the package containing them, forfeited, and when forfeited they shall be disposed of as the court directs. See M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 27.

1309. See No. 1308, supra.

1310. The court may exercise these powers notwithstanding the owner has not committed any offence under the provisions of this act, and is not before the court, and has not notice of the proceedings, and notwithstanding there is no evidence to show to whom the goods belong. The court may, in its discretion, require such notice as it may direct to be given to the owner or shipper of the goods before the same are forfeited. Ibid.

1311. See Pt. IV. c. 31, p. 1297.

7. In the Thames.

1312. As to the bye-laws for the regulation of the carriage of explosive substances on the river Thames and its tributaries, made under the authority of the Explosives Act, 1875 (c. 17), see the Thames Conservancy Bye-laws of the 24th January and 20th November, 1876, sanctioned by the Board of Trade 26th January and 22nd November, 1876. See for these Bye-laws, 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), pp. cccliv—ccclx, and the Bye-laws of the 22nd October, 1880, and 7th November, 1881.

8. In the Mersey.

1313. For provisions in regard to gunpowder and other dangerous goods in the Mersey, see the Mersey Dock Acts Consolidation Act, 1858, c. 92, (L. & P.) sects. 215 to 220, and the Bye-laws made thereunder.

1314. For provisions as to the conveyance, loading, and unloading of explosive substances, see bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board made under the Explosives Act, 1875, c. 17, and approved by the Board of Trade 12th and 26th July, 1877, and 10th May, 1878.

1315. For provisions as to petroleum made under the Petroleum Act, 1871, see bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, approved by the Board of Trade the 19th June, 1878, and resolutions of the Mersey Board of the 3rd October, 1878.

Part VI.—EXEMPTIONS FROM AND LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS.

1. Exemptions.

1. *Fire.

1317. No owner of any seagoing ship or share therein shall be liable to make good any loss or damage happening without his actual fault or privity to any goods, merchandise, or other things on board any ship, by reason of fire happening on

* (445) It would seem that this exemption is confined to British ships, the provisions of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), ss. 54—64, not being applicable thereto.

(446) The former statutes on this head are 7 Geo. 2, c. 15; 26 Geo. 3, c. 86; 53 Geo. 3, c. 159. They are repealed by the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120).

(447) See also the exemption from responsibility in case of fire usually inserted in bills of lading.

(448) The immunity from loss by fire does not protect against losses arising from a fire on board a lighter engaged in transporting cargo from a vessel, which would itself be within the statute. Mayne on Damages (4th ed.), p. 291.

(449) The 26 Geo. 3, c. 86, s. 2 (now repealed), which exempted shipowners from liability for loss or damages to goods on board ship by fire, did not apply to goods on board a lighter employed in carrying goods from the shore to be loaded on board ship. Morewood v. Pollok, 1 El. & Bl. 743; 17 Jur. 881; 22 L. J. Q. B. 250; 21 L. T. 87. See also Hunter v. McGowan, 1 Bligh, 573.

(450) When a loss by embezzlement, collision, or otherwise is suffered by several freighters, and the value of the vessel and freight is not sufficient to satisfy all claims, a general average contribution is to be made. See Revised Statutes of U. S. s. 4284. [AMERICAN.]

board. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 503.

1318. A carrier by sea under a bill of lading of goods "to be delivered in the like good order, &c., at the port of, &c., unto A. or his assigns, on paying for the goods, freight, and charges, as per margin, with primage and average accustomed," is not entitled, immediately on the arrival of the vessel, and without notice to the owner, to land the goods. Bourne v. Gatliff (in error), 11 Cl. & Fin. 45; 8 Scott, N. R. 604; 7 M. & G. 850.

1319. If he should land them, and they should be destroyed by fire, he will be answerable to the owner for the loss. Ibid.

1320. Carriers for hire of goods in Scotland are liable for losses from accidental fire. See Mercantile Law Amendment Act (Scotland), 1856 (c. 60), s. 17.

2. Robbery or Embezzlement of Gold, Silver or Jewels.

1321. No owner of any seagoing ship or share therein shall be liable to make good any loss or damage happening without his actual fault or privity to any gold, silver, diamonds, watches, jewels, or precious stones on board any such ship, by reason of any robbery, embezzlement, making away with or secreting of them, unless the owner or shipper has, at the time of shipping them, inserted in his bills of lading or otherwise declared in writing to the master or owner of the ship the true nature and value of such articles. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 503.

1323. The word "robbers" implies violence, and "dangers of roads" means danger caused directly by the bad condition of roads. Ibid.

1324. The word "thieves," when amongst the excepted perils of a bill of lading, applies, as in policies of insurance, to thieves outside the vessel, and not to passengers or the crew. Taylor v. Liverpool and Great Western Rail. Co., L. R. 9 Q. B. 546; 43 L. J. Q. B. 205; 2 Asp. N.S. 275.

1325. Where goods have been stolen on board it lies upon the shipowner to prove that the loss comes within the exception. Ibid.

1327. The master of a general ship, on board of which goods have been laden in the Thames for a foreign port, is liable for the loss of the goods occasioned by a forcible robbery while the ship is lying in the river. Barclay v. Y'Gana, 3 Dougl. 389.

1328. Robbery by strangers in concert with one of the crew, held within the provisions of 7 Geo. 2, c. 15, now repealed. Sutton v. Mitchell, 1 T. R. 18.

1329. The "nature and value" held (under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854) not sufficiently declared by the description, "one box containing about 244 ounces of gold dust." Williams v. The African Steam Ship Co., 1 H. & N. 300; 2 Jur. N.S. 693; 26 L. J. 69.

1330. Nor (under 26 Geo. 3, c. 86, now repealed) by the description "1338 hard dollars." Gibbs v. Potter, 10 M. & W. 70.

1331. Quare, would the 26 Geo. 3, c. 86, apply to a shipment at a foreign port not made for a port of this country? Ibid.

1332. As to what is sufficient notice of special terms limiting the common law liability of carriers, see Stevenson v. Henderson, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 1, p. 215; ibid. vol. 2 (H. L.), p. 71. [SCOTCH.]

3. Barratry.

1333. See tit. MARINE INSURANCE, p. 1038.

4. Acts of Harbour Masters.

1334. As to exemptions from liability in respect of acts of harbour masters under their local acts and generally, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. c. 6, p. 1233.

5. Compulsory Pilotage.

1335. As to exemptions from liability for acts of pilot taken by compulsion of law, see Ibid. Pt. VII. p. 1349.

2. Limitation under Merchant Shipping Acts.

1. Generally.*

1336. The ninth part of this act (as to the liability of shipowners) applies to the whole of her Majesty's dominions. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 502.

1337. The owners of any ship, whether British or foreign, shall not, in cases where all or any of the following events occur without their actual fault or privity, that is to say:—

- (1) Where any loss of life or personal injury is caused to any person being carried in such ship :
- (2) Where any damage or loss is caused to any goods, merchandise, or other things whatsoever on board any such ship :
- (3) Where any loss of life or personal injury is by reason of the improper navigation of such ship as aforesaid caused to any person carried in any other ship or boat :

* (452) At common law (independently of statute law) owners are answerable for damage occasioned by the negligence of the master or crew in the course of their lawful employment, to the full extent of the injury sustained in ship, goods or person; and if the injured person die by the accident, his family and relations are entitled by statute (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93) to maintain an action for the loss suffered by them in consequence. Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping, 3rd ed. p. 117.

(453) In cases of collision the ancient general maritime law enacted a full compensation out of all the property of the owners of the guilty ship, upon the common principle, applying to persons undertaking the conveyance of goods, that they were answerable for the conduct of the persons whom they employed, and of whom the other parties, who suffered damage, knew nothing, and over whom they had no control. The Dundee, 1 Hagg. 109; The Girolamo, 3 Hagg. 186; The Clara, 2 Jur. N.S. 46; Swabey, 1; 26 L. T. 165; The Wild Ranger, 7 L. T. N.S. 725; 32 L. J. Adm. 56; 1 N. R. 32; 11 W. R. 255.

(454) But Holland first introduced a limitation of the responsibility of owners to the value of the property of their own which they placed at hazard. England followed in successive statutes, and by the 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, subjected the ship, tackle, apparel and furniture, and its appurtenances and freight, to contribution in cases of collision. The Dundee, 1 Hagg. 109.

(455) As to similar provisions of European codes for the limitation of owners' responsibility to the value of the ship, or their shares therein, see The Consolato del Mare, the Hanseatic, French, Rotterdam and Hamburgh Ordinances, cited in Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping, 3rd ed. p. 118.

(456) By these ordinances, the surrender of ship and freight enures to the relief of the owner from all liabilities in respect thereof. The French law of 14th June, 1841, is particularly explicit in this respect. Ibid. pp. 119, 120.

(457) By the American Act of 3rd March, 1851 (c. 43), ss. 3 and 4 of 9 Statutes at Large, 635, the liability of the shipowner for loss or damage occasioned by collision, &c., "without the privity or knowledge of such owner," is limited to "the amount or value of the interest of such owner in such ship or vessel, and her freight then pending." The language of this act, and of the English Act of 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, seems to be essentially equivalent in import. 1 Conkling's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) pp. 245, 372. [AMERICAN.]

(458) By the general maritime law of Europe the liability of the owners for the master's obligations ex delicto is limited to the amount of their interest in the ship and cargo, and by abandoning these they are discharged from all personal responsibility. Stinson v. Wyman, Davis, 172. [AMERICAN.]

(459) By the laws of Spain and of Massachusetts, the liability of the owners for the acts of the master is limited to the value of the vessel and her freight. Pope v. Nickerson, 3 Story, 465. [AMERICAN.]

1339. If any of the events mentioned in sub-ss. 1, 2, 3 and 4 of s. 54 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (for which see No. 1337, supra), should occur in relation to any passenger ferry steamer of the corporation whilst plying to or from Woodside and Liverpool during fog, such event shall for the purposes of that section or any other statutory modification thereof for the time being in force, so far only as regards the plying of any such passenger ferry steamers during fog be deemed to have occurred without the actual fault or privity of the corporation. See the Birkenhead Corporation Act, 1881 (c. clix.), s. 231.

1340. If defendants in an action of collision desire to claim limitation of liability they must claim it by their pleadings. Walberg v. Young, 45 L. J. C. L. 783; 4 Asp. 27, n; 24 W. R. 847.

1341. A railway company, carrying passengers and goods partly by railway and partly by their own ships, is entitled to the limitation of liability of shipowners imposed by the M. S. Acts. A railway company, known to be also shipowners, contracted to carry passengers from L. to G. The passengers and goods were taken by rail from L. to S., and were there put on board a ship which belonged to the company. The ship, on her way to G. came into collision with another ship, and sank with several of the passengers and all the goods. Actions were brought against the company by surviving passengers for loss of luggage and delay, by shippers of goods for loss of goods, and by the administrators of lost passengers for damages. Held, on appeal, that as to all the damages, except those as to delay, the liability of the company was, by the

M. S. Acts, limited to the amount of £15 a ton on the tonnage of the ship; that the amount so payable should be distributed by the Court of Chancery, and that all the actions against the railway company (except those for delay), should be restrained. L. & S. W. R. Co. v. James, L. R. 8 Eq. 241; 42 L. J. Ch. App. 337; 1 Asp. N.S. 526.

1343. Where the owner of a vessel, which has wrongfully occasioned the loss of some of the crew of another vessel, institutes proceedings for limiting his liability, the damages sustained by the families of the deceased seamen are to be ascertained as if the liability were unlimited; and, if they exceed the statutory liability, then the whole amount of that liability is to be distributed rateably among them. Ibid.

1345. Actions at law were brought under Lord Campbell's Act, 1846 (c. 93), against shipowners to obtain compensation for the deaths of certain seamen in a collision. The shipowners filed a bill praying an injunction to restrain the actions and a direction that the amount of their liability might be ascertained. It was contended on behalf of the shipowners that, under the M. S. Acts, 1854 and 1862, they were not liable to any action, or that their liability was limited to £8 per ton. Held, that the actions must be allowed to omitted in s. 54 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862. The latter act will, therefore, apply to river vessels as well as to seagoing vessels.

(461) The benefit of the American Act of 1851 extends to foreigners. Levinson v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., 17 Alb. L. J. 285. [AMERICAN.]

(461a) Parties to obtain such limitation must take the proceedings provided for by that act for having the amount of their liability determined, or must transfer their interest in the vessel and freight, so long as there is anything left to transfer, as required by the act. Dyer v. The National Steamship Co., 4 Asp. 26. [AMERICAN.]

(462) As to the limitation of liability of the owner for loss by collision or otherwise, to the value of his interest in such vessel and her freight then pending, see Revised Stat. of U. S. s. 4283. [AMERICAN.]

proceed, and that the liability of the shipowners was limited to £15 per ton. Glaholm v. Barker, L. R. 2 Eq. 598; 1 Ch. 223; 11 Jur. N.S. 434; 34 L. J. Ch. 533; 13 W. R. 671; 12 L. T. N.S. 317; 2 Asp. 200; Ibid. on appeal, 298; 34 Beav. 305.

1346. The owner of every seagoing ship or share therein is liable in respect of every such loss of life, personal injury, loss or damage to goods on distinct occasions to the same extent as if no other loss, injury, or damage had arisen. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 506.

1348. A collision occurred between the vessels E. and G., through the improper navigation of the G. The E. was severely damaged by the collision, and shortly afterwards her fore and mainmasts went by the board. The wind also increased, and the next day she was driven on shore and several of the crew were lost. Held, in an action for limitation of liability by the owners of the G., that the loss of life was the natural and proximate consequence of the collision, and that the owners of the G. were liable to the extent of £15 for each ton of the vessel's tonnage. The George and Richard, L. R. 3 A. & E. 466; 1 Asp. N.S. 50.

1349. The words "improper navigation" in the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54, sub-s. 4, are not to be restricted to the negligent navigation of a vessel by her master and crew, for the statute includes all damage wrongfully done by a ship to another whilst it is being navigated, where the wrongful act is due to the negligence of a person for whom the owner is responsible. Therefore, where a vessel, owing to the negligence of a person on shore in overlooking the machinery, steered so badly that she came into collision with another vessel, held, that her owners were entitled to bring an action for limitation of liability. Decision affirmed on appeal. The Warkworth, 9 P. D. 145.

1350. If by reason of the improper navigation of a tug, whilst towing another vessel, damage is done to such other vessel, the owners of the tug are entitled to claim a limitation of their liability, although such damage occurred through a breach of the towing contract. Walberg v. Young, 45 L. J. C. L. 783; 4 Asp. 127, n.

1351. If the damage resulted from a mere breach of the towing contract, the owners of the tug would not be entitled to claim a limitation of liability. Per Brett, L. J. Ibid.

1352. Where a tug is employed to tow a ship which is in charge of a pilot by compulsion of law, the exemption from liability given to the owners of the ship for damage arising in consequence of obedience to the pilot's orders by s. 388 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), does not extend to the owners of the tug for damage done by the tug, whether from acting in obedience to the pilot's orders or in the absence of any orders. (The Ticonderoga, followed). The Mary, 4 Asp. 183.

1356. In any proceeding under the 506th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, against the owner of any ship or share therein in respect of loss of life, the master's list or the duplicate list of passengers delivered to the proper officer of customs under the 16th section of "the Passengers Act, 1855," shall, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be sufficient proof that the persons in respect of whose death any such proceeding is instituted were passengers on board at the time of their deaths. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 56.

1356a. As to the limitation of liability under repealed statutes, see c. 3, s. 1, p. 1347.

2. The Crown.*

3. Foreign Ships.†

1357. The limitation of liability granted to British ships by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is extended to foreign ships. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54.

1358. The benefit of limited liability conferred by the 54th section of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, can be claimed by any vessel, whether British or foreign, and whether the place of the collision is within or without British jurisdiction. The Amalia, 2 N. R. 462; 1 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 471; 1 Lush. 191; Br. & L. P. C. 151; 1 Asp. 259; 8 L. T. N.S. 805; 32 L. J. N.S. Adm. 191; 12 W. R. 24; 9 Jur. N.S. 1111. See also The Albert, 3 N. R. 217.

1359. The cases suggested in Cope v. Doherty, 4 K. & J. 381, and General Iron Screw Collier Company v. Schurmanns, 1 J. & H. 180, are expressly provided for by this act. Ibid.

1360. As to the calculation of tonnage of foreign ships, see s. 9, p. 1345; and Pt. I. c. 3, p. 1188.

1361. As to proceedings for limiting liability of foreign ships, see s. 9, p. 1342.

4. As affected by Bail.

1362. Semble, in cases of collision when the ship is bailed any number of actions may be commenced and prosecuted in the Court of Admiralty, unless recourse is had to the foregoing provisions for limiting liability. The Clara, Swabey, 7; 2 Jur. 5. Board of Trade Enquiries.‡

1364. Whenever any such liability is alleged to have been incurred in respect of loss of life or personal injury, the Board entered for the crown against the shipowner. The Lords of the Admiralty v. Temperley, 21 Jan. 1881.

† (465) The repealed statutes were held not to apply to foreign ships; but these have now the same benefit of limited liability as British ships. See Nos. 1357—1360, supra.

of Trade may, after giving not less than three days' notice, by post or otherwise, to the party to be made defendant or defender, by warrant under seal of the Board or signed by one of its secretaries or assistant-secretaries, require the sheriff having jurisdiction over any place in the United Kingdom to summon a jury at a time and place to be specified in the warrant for determining the number, names, and descriptions of all persons so killed or injured; and on the receipt of the warrant the sheriff shall summon a jury of twenty-four indifferent persons, duly qualified to act as common jurymen in the superior courts, to meet at such time and place. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 507.

1365. If either party to the inquiry desire such question to be tried before a special jury, it shall be so tried, provided that notice of such desire, if coming from the other party, is given to the Board of Trade before it has issued its warrant to the sheriff; and for that purpose the Board of Trade shall, by its warrant to the sheriff, require him to nominate a special jury for such trial; and thereupon the sheriff shall, as soon as conveniently may be after the receipt by him of such warrant, summon both the parties to appear before him by themselves or their attorneys or agents at some convenient time and place appointed by him for the purpose of nominating a special jury; and at the time and place so appointed the sheriff shall proceed to nominate and strike a special jury in the manner in which such juries are required by the laws for the time being in force to be nominated or struck by the proper officers of the superior courts; and the sheriff shall appoint a day, and shall on the day so appointed proceed to reduce the special jury to the number of twenty, in the manner used by the proper officers of the superior courts. Ibid. s. 508.

1366. The sheriff shall preside at the inquiry, and the Board of Trade shall be deemed in England and Ireland to be the plaintiff, and in Scotland the pursuer, hereinafter called plaintiff, with power to appoint any agent to act on his behalf, and shall have all such rights and privileges as the plaintiff is entitled to in actions at law; and the owner or owners of the ship or ships by whom such liability is alleged to have been incurred shall be deemed in England and Ireland to be the defendant, and in Scotland the defender, hereinafter called defendant. Ibid. s. 509.

1367. Not less than ten days' notice of the time and place of the inquiry shall be served by the Board of Trade on the defendant. Ibid.

1368. Service on the master of any ship shall be deemed good service on the owner thereof, and the master shall, in respect of the proceedings on such inquiry, be deemed the agent and representative of the owner, with power to appear for him on such inquiry, and to do all things he might himself have done. Ibid.

1369. If the defendant does not appear on the inquiry, it shall be proceeded with as if he had appeared, on due proof of service of notice on him in pursuance of this act. Ibid.

1370. The empannelling of the jury and the summoning and attendance of witnesses shall be conducted and enforced in England and Ireland as provided by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), in cases of disputed compensation as to land, and in Scotland as provided by the Lands Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845 (c. 16), in like cases, or as near thereto as circumstances permit; and all provisions in those acts having reference to cases where any question of disputed compensation requires to be determined by the verdict of a jury shall, with the requisite alterations, be considered as incorporated with this act, and to have reference to cases where the question of the liability of any owner in respect of any such accident is required to be determined by the verdict of a jury. Ibid.

1371. In England and Ireland the sheriff shall, if the Board of Trade so requires, or if the defendant so requires and the Board of Trade consents thereto, appoint as assessor a barrister-at-law of competent knowledge and standing. Ibid.

1372. The costs incurred by all parties in and incidental to any such inquiry shall in England and Ireland be taxed by the master of one of the superior courts of common law as between attorney and client, and in Scotland by the auditor of the Court of Session as between agent and client; and shall, if the verdict in any inquiry is in favour of the plaintiff, be paid by the defendant, but if in favour of the defendant, be paid by the Board of Trade out of the Mercantile Marine Fund. Ibid.

1373. The payment of all damages and costs in any such inquiry shall, upon application to such superior court by the party entitled thereto, be enforced by rule or order of such court or judge, or otherwise as he thinks fit. Ibid.

1374. The Board of Trade may make any compromise as to the damages in respect of personal injury, or of the death of any person; and any damages received in pursuance of such compromise shall, so far as they extend, be applied in the same manner, and be subject to the same rules, as if they were damages recovered on an inquiry instituted by the Board of Trade. Ibid.

1375. In any such inquiry the damages payable in each case of death or injury shall be assessed at £30. Ibid. s. 510.

1376. The damages found due on any such inquiry shall be the first charge on the aggregate amount for which the owner is liable, and shall be paid thereout in priority to all other claims. Ibid.

1377. All such damages shall be paid to her Majesty's paymaster-general, and be distributed by him in such manner as the Board of Trade directs. Ibid.

1378. In directing such distribution the Board of Trade may first deduct and retain any costs incidental thereto; and shall then, as regards sums paid in respect of injuries, direct payment to each person injured, of such compensation, not exceeding the statutory amount, as the Board thinks fit. Ibid.

1379. As regards sums paid in respect of deaths, the Board of Trade shall direct payment thereof for the benefit of the husband, wife, parent and child of the deceased, or any of them, in such shares, upon such evidence, and in such manner as the Board thinks fit. Ibid.

1380. The Board of Trade shall refund to the owner any surplus remaining under its control after such distribution, and the sum so refunded shall form part of the residue hereinafter mentioned. Ibid.

1381. The Board of Trade shall not, nor shall any person acting under it, be liable to any action, account or demand for or in respect of any act or matter done, or omitted to be done, in the distribution of such damages. Ibid.

1382. If the amount paid to her Majesty's paymaster-general is insufficient to meet the demands upon it, the several claims thereon shall abate proportionally. Ibid.

See also No. 1344, p. 1337.

6. Actions after Board of Trade Inquiries.

1383. After the completion of such inquiry, if any person injured, or the executor or administrator of any deceased person estimates the damages at a greater sum than such statutory amount—i. e., £30—or in case of a compromise made by the Board of Trade, at a greater sum than the amount accepted by the Board as compensation for such injury or death, such person shall, on repaying or obtaining the repayment by the Board of Trade to the owner of the amount paid by him to the Board of Trade in respect of such injury or death, be at liberty to bring an action for the recovery of damages in the same manner as if no power of instituting an inquiry had hereinbefore been given to the Board of Trade, but any damages recoverable by such person shall be payable only out of the residue, if any, of the aggregate amount for which the owner is liable, after deducting all sums paid to her Majesty's paymaster-general; and if the damages recovered in such action do not exceed double the statutory amount, such person shall pay to the defendant in such action all the costs thereof, to be taxed in England and Ireland as between attorney and client, and in Scotland as between agent and client. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 511.

7. Notice to Board of Trade before Action.

1384. In cases where loss of life or personal injury has occurred by any accident in respect of which the owner of any such ship is or is alleged to be liable in damages, no person shall be entitled to bring any action, or other legal proceeding in the United Kingdom, until the completion of the inquiry (if any) instituted by the Board of Trade, or until the Board of Trade has refused to institute the same; and the Board of Trade shall, for the purpose of entitling any person to bring an action or institute a suit or other legal proceeding, be deemed to have refused to institute such inquiry whenever notice has been served on it by any person of his desire to bring such action or other legal proceeding, and no inquiry is instituted by the Board of Trade in respect of the subject-matter of such intended action or proceeding for one month after service of such notice. Ibid. s. 512.

8. Board of Trade Inquiry after Action brought.

1385. Whenever the Board of Trade, having so refused to institute any inquiry, afterwards determines to institute the same, the damages and costs (if any) recovered on such inquiry shall be payable rateably with and not in priority to the costs and damages recovered in any other action or legal proceeding. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 513.

9. Proceedings for limiting Liability.
(a) Generally.

1386. In cases where any liability is alleged to have been incurred by any owner in respect of loss of life, personal injury, or loss of or damage to ships, boats, or goods, and several claims are made or apprehended in respect of such liability, then, subject to the right before given to the Board of Trade of recovering damages in the United Kingdom in respect of loss of life or personal injury, in England or Ireland the High Court of Chancery, in Scotland the Court of Session, and in any British possession any competent court, may entertain proceedings at the suit of any owner for the purpose of determining the amount of such liability, and for the distribution of such amount rateably amongst the several claimants, with power for any such court to stop all actions and suits pending in any other court in relation to the same subject-matter; and any proceeding entertained by such Court of Chancery or Court of Session, or other competent court, may be conducted in such manner and subject to such regulations as to making any persons interested parties to the same, and as to the exclusion of any claimants who do not come in within a certain time, and as to requiring security from the owner, and as to payment of costs, as the court thinks just. Ibid. s. 514.

1387. The superior courts or any judge thereof may, upon summary application, by rule or order, exercise the like jurisdiction. See the Common Law Procedure Act, 1860 (c. 126), s. 35.

1388. When any ship or the proceeds thereof are under arrest of the High Court of Admiralty, that court has the same powers. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 13.

1389. Prior to the Judicature Acts cross actions of damage from collision between the ships M. and N, were instituted in the Admiralty Court, and actions at law were commenced against the owners of the N. in respect of damage to goods on board the N. Subsequently an action of limitation of liability was instituted by the owners of the N. in the Court of Admiralty. Held, that as the court had jurisdiction in the original cause, it had jurisdiction to entertain the cause of limitation of liability, and to order all actions pending in any other court to be stopped. The Normandy, L. R. 3 A. & E. 152; 39 L. J. Adm. 48; 3 Asp. 519.

1390. But held, by the Exchequer Chamber, affirming the judgment of the Court of Exchequer, that the Admiralty Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the suit, inasmuch as neither "the ship" nor "the proceeds thereof" were at the time under arrest. James v. The London and South Western Railway Co., L. R. 7 Ex. 187; L. R. 7 Ex. (Ex. Ch.) 287.*

1391. A cause of damage having been instituted against the N., the owners of the N. prevented the arrest of their vessel by giving bail, and instituted a suit for limitation of liability under the 54th section of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862. Held, that the court had jurisdiction under the 13th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, to entertain the suit, although the vessel was not actually under arrest of the Court of Admiralty. The Northumbria, L. R. 3 A. & E. 24; 39 L. J. Adm. 24; 3 Asp. 316.

1392. Prior to the Judicature Acts, the defendants in an action in the Court of Exchequer for damage to cargo by collision instituted proceedings in the Admiralty Court for a limitation of liability, and obtained an order from the Court of Admiralty staying, amongst other actions, the one in the Exchequer. The Court of Exchequer, however, upon an application by the defendants, refused to stay such action (1) because it was not obliged to stay it under s. 226 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, inasmuch as the Admiralty Court was not a superior court within the meaning of that section; (2) because there was no reason to induce the court to exercise its discretionary power at common law of staying proceedings. Milburn v. The London and South Western Railway Co., L. R. 6 Ex. 4; 40 L. J. Ex. 1; 3 Asp. 491.*

1393. Although an action in rem against a foreign ship under Lord Campbell's Act (c. 93), s. 2, is not within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 7, and therefore the Admiralty Division has not jurisdiction over such an action. (The Franconia, 2 P. D. 163, dissented from.) Per Brett, M. R., the Chancery and Admiralty Divisions may entertain such a claim in an action for limitation of liability under their general statutory jurisdiction as to limitation of liability. The Vera Cruz, 9 P. D. 96.

1394. In a suit of limitation of liability instituted on behalf of the owners of a brig which had negligently run down a bark, thereby causing loss of life of those on board the bark, an appearance was entered on behalf of a child of one of the drowned men en ventre sa mère. The court reserved leave to the child, if born within due time, to prefer its claim for damages sustained by the loss of its father. The George and Richard, 3 Adm. & Ecc. 466.

1395. The statutory provisions limiting liability held applicable, notwithstanding that the adverse claimant had obtained a definitive judgment of the Court of Admiralty condemning the ship. Leycester v. Logan, 3 K. & J. 446; 26 L. J. Ch. 306; The General Iron Screw Steam Company v. Schurmanns, 1 Johns. & H. 180; 4 L. T. N.S. 138.

1396. The utmost to which the claimant in such a case is entitled under such a judgment, in respect of the loss he has sustained, is to share rateably with the other claimants in the value of the ship and freight. Leycester v. Logan, supra.

1397. A court of equity has no control over the ship itself, and cannot prevent the party who has obtained such a judgment from proceeding to a sale of the ship, and retaining out of the proceeds such costs as he may be entitled to retain under the order of the Admiralty Court. Ibid.

1398. Subject to this, however, the shipowner is entitled to an injunction, under the 514th section, restraining the party who has obtained such a judgment from proceeding further in the Court of Admiralty. Ibid.

1399. Inasmuch as the ship was under the sentence of the Admiralty Court, and therefore neither under the control of the plaintiff nor of the Court of Chancery, held, that the plaintiff could not be interfered with in his right to sell the ship, but that the Court would interfere by injunction to prevent him from realizing more than his proper share, together with his costs, having regard to apportionment between himself and the other defendants. Ibid.

1401. In a cause of damage the defendants admitted liability in respect of damage to property and loss of life, but no claim had been asserted in respect of loss of life. On motion by the defendants the court ordered all proceedings against the ship to be stayed upon the defendants paying £8 per ton into court, and giving bail for the rest up to £15 per ton. The Clutha, 45 L. J. P. D. 108; 3 Asp. N.S. 225.

1402. A steamer ran into and sank another vessel belonging to the same owner. The sunken vessel was abandoned to the underwriters. The owner admitted his liability, and petitioned to have it limited. He also lodged—(1) a claim for loss of freight or cargo in the sunken vessel; and (2) a claim for certain expenses for the crew of the sunken vessel. Held, that neither claim could be made under the 54th section of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63). Burrell v. Simpson & Co., Cases in the Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 4, 177. [SCOTCH.]

1403. Sect. 9 of the M. S. Act, 1867, c. 124 (i. e. as to deduction from registered tonnage of spaces allotted to crew), applies to foreign ships seeking to limit the extent of their liability in an English court. The Franconia, 3 P. D. (C. A.) 164; 4 Asp. 1.

1404. Where owners of cargo have recovered judgment in a collision action brought by them, and the owners of the ship carrying the cargo subsequently bring an action against the same ship to recover damages in respect of the same collision, and the damages in both actions would exceed the value of the defendants' ship at £8 per ton, and the damage in the cargo action alone would not exceed that amount, the court will not stay proceedings in the cargo's action until after judgment in the ship's action, on the ground that without such stay the defendants have to institute a limitation of liability action, which would be unnecessary if the defendants obtained judgment in the ship's action. The Alne Holme (No. 2), 47 L. T. 309; 4 Asp. 593.

1405. A shipowner paid under an award a sum of money in respect of damage caused to another vessel by collision. Subsequently the owners of cargo on board the damaged vessel having claimed in respect of damage thereto, the shipowner petitioned to have his liability limited under s. 54 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63). This liability having been ascertained, held, that the amount to which the owners of cargo were entitled must be ascertained by ranking their claim, and the satisfied claim of the owners of the damaged vessel pari passu against the limited amount. Rankine v. Raschen, Ibid. Cases in the Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 4, 725. [SCOTCH.]

1405a. The Bell and the B. came into collision, in consequence of which the B. sank. The owners of the B. brought an action against the Bell in respect of the collision, and the Bell counter-claimed against the B. At the trial a verdict was taken by consent, dismissing both the claim and counter-claim. The owners of the cargo of the B. subsequently brought an action against the Bell and obtained judgment in their favour. The owners of the Bell then brought an action for limitation of liability, and paid into court the amount of their statutory liability. A summons was then taken out by the owners of the B. against the owners of the Bell, and an order made by consent (the owners of the cargo of the B. not being parties thereto) setting aside the judgment, dismissing the claim and counter-claim. The owners of the B. then appeared in the limitation action and claimed damages for the loss of the B. out of the fund in court, the owners of the cargo of the B. objecting thereto. The registrar, in his report, disallowed the claim of the owners of the B. against the fund. On motion by the owners of the cargo of the B., opposed by the owners of the B., the court confirmed the report, refusing to allow the owners of the B. to participate in the fund, and holding that the order setting aside the judgment was void. The Belcairn, 11th August, 1885. Decision affirmed on appeal, 6th November, 1885.

1406. In an action in the Admiralty Division for damage by collision in which both ships were injured, and held to blame, and were accordingly condemned to pay a moiety of each other's damage, and one of the parties applied to limit his liability under the act, no set-off is allowed between the two amounts for which they are liable in damages, until the limitation of liability imposed by the statute has been applied. Under the judgment in such an action the moiety of damages to the V. was £14,000, and that to the S. was £2,000. The owners of the S. then brought an action in the Chancery Division for limitation of their liability, and paid into court £5,212, the aggregate amount of £8 a ton on her registered tonnage. Held (Brett, L. J., dissenting), overruling the judgment of the Master of the Rolls, that the owners of the V. must prove for £14,000 against the fund in court, and must pay the £2,000 in full to the owners of the S. Chapman v. Royal Netherlands Steam Navigation Co., 4 P. D. 157—C. A. But semble, in effect overruled by The Khedive, infra.

1406a. Held, also, by Jessel, M. R., that the owners of the V., and the owners of the cargo, or the underwriters in their place, and the master and crew of the same ship, must prove pari passu against the fund in court in respect of the moiety of their respective losses. Ibid.

1407. The ships V. and K. having come into collision, the owners of the V. brought an action in rem in the Admiralty Division against the owners of the K., who counterclaimed, and both ships were held to blame; the owners of the K. brought an action in the Admiralty Division to limit their liability under the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54, and paid the amount of their liability into court. The damage to the V. was greater than that to the K., and the fund in court was not sufficient to satisfy all the claims for which the owners of the K. were answerable in damages. Held (Lord Bramwell doubting), that the owners of the V. were entitled to prove against the fund for a moiety of their damage, less a moiety of the damage sustained by the K., and to be paid in respect of the balance due to them after such deduction pari passu with the other claimants, out of such fund. The Khedive, 7 App. Cas.

1408. Where freight is pledged by an instrument in the nature of a bottomry bond, and the ship is totally lost, whilst the freight is at risk, by a collision with another ship which admits and limits her liability under the M. S. Acts, paying the amount of her liability into court, the holders of the bottomry bond are entitled to rank against the fund paid into court for the freight so pledged to them. The Empusa, 4 Asp. 185.

1409. Semble, the bondholders are entitled to recover out of the fund in court applicable to the payment of damages for loss of freight the same proportion of the sum secured by the bond as the total sum apportioned in respect of loss of freight bears to the whole freight of the ship lost. Ibid.

1410. Sect. 54 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, limiting liability, does not apply to a case where two ships are to blame for a collision, and the owners of one are relieved from liability on the ground of compulsory pilotage; but as both ships are to blame, the owners of the ship, so relieved from liability, are only entitled to be paid by the owners of the other ship a moiety of the damage caused to their ship. The Hector (No. 2), 8 P. D. 218; 52 L. J. P. 51; 48 L. T. 890; 31 W. R. 881—C. A.

See also No. 1342, p. 1337.

(b) Admission of Liability.

1411. It is not necessary for the owner of a vessel arrested in the High Court of Admiralty on account of a collision, to admit his vessel to have been to blame for the collision, in order to found an application to the court under s. 13 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, and s. 54 of the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862, to determine the amount of his liability, and to protect him from a multiplicity of suits. (Hill v. Audus, 1 Kay & Johns. 263, not followed.) The Amalia, 2 N. R. 462; 8 L. T. N.S. 806; 32 L. J. N.S. Adm. 191.

1412. Prior to the Judicature Acts held that the power given to the Court of Chancery was simply to determine the amount of the shipowner's liability, and to distribute that amount among the several claimants, and not to decide the question of liability or non-liability. Hill v. Audus, 1 Kay & Johns. 263; 3 Eq. Rep. 422; 24 L. J. Ch. 229.

1413. A shipowner, therefore, seeking to have the amount of his liability determined by the court, and to have an injunction to restrain proceedings in the other courts, would not be relieved if he denied his liability altogether. Ibid.

1414. Defendants in a collision suit having instituted a suit for limitation of liability, the court ordered the release of the vessel on payment into court in such last suit of the amount limited, together with a sum for interest and costs, without requiring an admission of liability. The Sisters, 2 Asp. N.S. 589. See also Miller v. Powell, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 2, 976. [SCOTCH.]
See also No. 1404, p. 1343.

(c) Calculation of Tonnage.

1415. The limitation as to tonnage is to be the registered tonnage in the case of sailing ships, and the gross tonnage without deduction on account of engine-room in the case of steamships. See M. S. Act Amend. Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54.

1416. In the case of any foreign ship which has been or can be measured according to British law, the tonnage as ascertained by such measurement shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be the tonnage of such ship. In the case of any foreign ship which cannot be so measured, the surveyor-general of tonnage in the United Kingdom, and the chief measuring officer in any British possession abroad, shall, on directions from the court hearing the case, with such evidence of the dimensions of the ship as it may be practicable to furnish, give a certificate stating his opinion as to the tonnage of the ship if measured according to British law, and the tonnage in such certificate shall be deemed to be the tonnage of the ship. Ibid.

1417. Where the space appropriated on board a steamer to the berthing of the crew did not exceed one-twentieth of the remaining tonnage of the steamer, held, that in estimating the "gross tonnage" of such steamer for the purpose of limiting liability under sect. 54 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), the berthage space must be deducted. Burrel v. Simpson & Co., 4th series, vol. 4, p. 177. [SCOTCH.]

1418. But the 21st section of sub-sect. 4 of the M. S. Act, 1854, only enables such space to be deducted when it is on the upper deck, and not when it is between the spar deck and the tonnage deck. The Franconia, 3 P. D. (C. A.) 164; 4 Asp. 1.

1419. The English certificate of registry showing the tonnage is not conclusive evidence of such tonnage, and consequently the Order in Council of the 26th June, 1873, made under sect. 60 of the M. S. Act, 1862, directing that German steamships measured after the 1st Jan., 1873, should be deemed to be of the tonnage denoted in their registers in the same manner and to the same extent as and to which the tonnage denoted in the certificate of registry of British ships, is deemed to be the tonnage of such ships, does not make the registers of such German steamships conclusive evidence of their tonnage. Ibid.

1420. The space appropriated to the crew cannot in the case of a foreign, any more than of a British, vessel, be deducted from the registered tonnage under the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 9, unless the conditions imposed by that section have been complied with. Ibid.

1421. The tonnage on which a limitation of liability is to be calculated is that taken from the certificate of registry in force at the time of the collision, and no deduction in respect of crew space, under the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 9, can be made unless such deduction appears on such certificate. The John McIntyre, 6 P. D. 200; sub nom. The John Ormston, 50 L. J. P. D. 76.

1421a. See also No. 1403, p. 1343; and as to measurement of tonnage, Pt. I. p. 1188.

See tit. Costs, c. 34, p. 403.

10. Owner in fault or privy to Damage.

1422. The ninth part of this act does not lessen or take away any liability to which any master or seaman, being also owner or part owner of the ship to which he belongs, is subject in his capacity of master or seaman. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 516.

1422a. The ancient law of unlimited liability in cases of damage is still binding upon the Court of Admiralty, except where modified by statute. The Wild Ranger, 32 L. J. Adm. 49; and see notes (452), (453), p. 1336.

1423. The owners of a ship who are entitled to the privilege of limited liability, are not necessarily those whose names appear upon the ship's register. The master, also part owner of a ship, sold his shares, but before the transfer had been registered, the ship, through the master's default, came into collision with and damaged another vessel. Held, that the master was not an owner so as to affect the privilege of limited liability. Part owners are not partners, and therefore, semble, the error or misconduct of one part owner would not forfeit the right of his co-owners to limited liability. The Spirit of the Ocean, Br. & L. 336; 2 Asp. 192.

1423a. In an action by shipowners to limit their liability in respect of a collision with their vessel, and where it appeared that the master, who was on board at the time of the collision was a part owner, and the collision occurred without the negligence or privy of the remainder of the owners, they have a right to have their liability limited, with a reservation of any right of action there may be against the master personally in respect of his negligence. The Cricket, The Endeavour, 48 L. T. 585; 5 Asp. 53.

1424. In a cause of limitation of liability under the 54th section of the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862, arising out of a collision, the plaintiffs alleged that the collision occurred without their fault or privy. It was proved that the master, who was also part owner of the vessel sued, was on board at the time of the collision, but not on deck, the vessel being then in charge of the second mate and a coasting pilot. Held, that under these circumstances there was no obligation upon the master to be on deck; that the fact of his being part owner was no reason for charging the other owners with blame; and the fact of his being on board at the time of the collision was not in itself sufficient to show that it occurred "with his fault or privy." The Obey, L. R. 1 A. & E. 103.

1425. A steamer got stranded in the Clyde so as to obstruct a considerable portion of the fairway, the owner, who was not a seafaring man, went to the vessel to arrange about getting her lightened. At night the master failed to exhibit lights, whereby a vessel ran into the steamer and sustained damage. Held, that the collision did not occur with the "actual fault or privity" of the owner. Kidston v. M'Arthur, 4th series, vol. 5, 936. [SCOTCH.]

1426. As to cases under repealed statutes containing like provision where the owner was in fault or privy to the damage, see c. 3, p. 1348.

11. Interest and Costs.

See tit. COSTS, c. 34, p. 403.

12. Owner of British Ship not recognized as British.

1427. The ninth part of this act does not extend to any British ship not being a recognized British ship within the meaning of this act. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 516.

1428. A newly-built ship exceeding fifteen tons burden, on being launched, ran into and damaged a passing ship. The owners of the damaged ship thereupon instituted an action in the Admiralty Court against the newly-built vessel to recover for the damage done to their ship, and the court pronounced the vessel proceeded against solely to blame for the collision. Afterwards an action for limitation of liability was instituted by the owner of the newly-built vessel, a natural-born English subject, who therein claimed a declaration that he was entitled to a limitation of liability in respect of damage occasioned by the collision. At the hearing of the action it appeared that the newly-built vessel, though registered as a British ship at the time of the institution of the action was not so registered at the time of the collision. Held, that as the vessel was not a recognized British ship when the collision occurred, her owner was not entitled to have his liability limited. The Andalusian, 3 P. D. 183; 47 L. J. Adm. 165.

13. Accounting for Damages between Part Owners.

1429. All sums of money paid for or on account of any loss or damage in respect whereof the liability of the owners of any ship is limited by the ninth part of this act, and all costs incurred in relation thereto may be brought into account among part owners of the same ship, like money disbursed for the use thereof. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 515.

14. Practice.

See tit. PRACTICE, Pt. III. c. 10.

3. Limitation under repealed Statutes.

1. Generally.*

1430. The liability of a shipowner for damage done by the collision of his ship with another vessel was limited by 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, s. 1, to the value of his ship at the time of, that is immediately before, the collision. He was not therefore exempted from liability where, by the same collision, his own ship instantly foundered. Brown v. Wilkinson, 15 M. & W. 391; 15 L. J. Exch. 34; Dobree v. Schroeder, 6 Sim. 291; 2 My. & Cr. 489; Wilson v. Dickson, 2 B. & A. 2; The Mary Caroline, 3 W. Rob. 101; 6 Notes of Cases, 539; 12 Jur. 945.

1431. The same construction put upon sect. 504 of the M. S. Act, 1854. African Steamship Co. v. Swanzy, 2 K. & J. 660; 25 L. J. Ch. 870; Leycester v. Logan, 4 K. & J. 725.

1432. The 53 Geo. 3, c. 159 (which first afforded such limited liability) never applied to foreign vessels. The Wild Ranger, 7 L. T. N.S. 752; 32 L. J. Adm. 49; 1 Lushington. See also Cope v. Doherty, 4 Kay & J. 367; 4 Jur. N.S. 451; 2 De Gex & J. 614; 27 L. J. Ch. 600.

1433. The provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854, c. 104, limiting liability, apply to a case of damage done by a British ship to a foreign vessel, when such damage occurs within three miles of the coast of this country. General Iron Screw Collier Company v. Schurmanns, 1 Johns. & H. 180; 6 Jur. N.S. 883; 8 W. R. 732; 29 L. J. Ch. 880.

2. Value of Ship.†

1434. The V. came in collision with

* (469) Under the repealed statutes of 7 Geo. 2, c. 15; 26 Geo. 3, c. 86; 53 Geo. 3, c. 159; and ss. 504 and 505 of the M. S. Act, 1854, the responsibility of shipowners was limited to the value of ship and freight.

(470) The repealed acts limiting the responsibility of shipowners were held not to extend to lighters and gabbets. See Hunter & Co. v. M'Gowan and others, 1 Bligh, 573; Morewood v. Pollok, 1 El. & Bl. 743; 21 L. T. 87; 17 Jur. 881; 22 L. J. Q. B. 250.

† (471) For other cases under repealed statutes, see Potts v. Pollock, March 15, 1837; 15 S. 879. [SCOTCH.]

the E., which was lost; a passenger on board the E. being drowned. An action was entered in the Admiralty Court in the sum of £1,500 by the owners of the E. The ship was appraised by the officers of the Court at £450. Held, under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 504, now repealed, that notwithstanding there had been loss of life, the value of the E. must be assessed at the sum named in the appraisal. Nixon v. Roberts, 1 Johns. & H. 739; 7 Jur. N.S. 820; 30 L. J. Ch. 844; 9 W. R. 890; 4 L. T. N.S. 679.

1435. When claimants of both kinds appear, the owners of property damaged are entitled to have the compensation for loss of life and personal injury marshalled, so as to throw it primarily on the excess (if any) of the value at £15 per ton over the actual value of the ship. Ibid.

1437. The 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, s. 1 (containing similar provisions to those of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 504) is to be construed as if the words "with all her appurtenances" had been inserted after "ship or vessel." Gale v. Laurie, 7 D. & R. 711; 5 B. & C. 156; The Dundee, 1 Hagg. 109.

1438. As to the meaning of the term "appurtenances," see Pt. I. p. 1216.

1439. The ship of the defendants, who were foreigners, remained under arrest and was subsequently sold in satisfaction of the plaintiffs' claim for damage, to discharge which the gross proceeds were insufficient. Held, that as against the plaintiffs' claim the expenses of sale and possession fees formed a proper deduction from the gross proceeds, and that the defendants could not be called upon to repay them. The Europa, 9 L. T. N.S. 781.

1440. A ship had run down another, and was sold in the damage action in the Admiralty. Held, in proceedings under the M. S. Act, 1854, in the Court of Chancery, that her owners were accountable for the gross proceeds of the sale, without deduction in respect of disbursements and fees retained by the Admiralty. Leycester v. Logan, 4 Kay & J. 725.

1441. For further cases under repealed statutes as to the value of the ship doing the damage, see Dobree v. Schroeder, 6 Sim. 291; 2 Mylne & C. 489; African Steamship Co. v. Swanzy, 2 K. & J. 660; 25 L. J. Ch. 870; Leycester v. Logan, 4 Kay & J. 725.

3. Freight.

1442. For cases as to the calculation of freight liable for loss or damage under the repealed statutes, see Cannan and others v. Meaburn, 1 Bing. 465; The Benares, 14 Jur. 580; 7 Notes of Cases, Supp. li.; The Tribune, 3 Hagg. 114; The Linda Flor, 4 Jur. N.S. 172; Wilson v. Dickson, 2 B. & Ald. 2; The Leo, 6 L. T. N.S. 58; 31 L. J. Adm. 78.

1443. It is every-day practice to require the owners of a vessel which has committed damage to bring in the amount of freight she has earned in the course of the voyage in which she was engaged when the damage was done. This is on the principle that the owners are responsible to the amount of the property in their possession. The Mellona, 3 W. Rob. 25; 12 Jur. 271; The Jersey Tar, 8 (IRISH) Jur. 317.

1444. The owners of cargo on board a vessel proceeded against are liable only for the net freight for which they would be liable to the shipowner. The Leo, 31 L. J. Adm. 78; 6 L. T. N.S. 58.

1445. When a vessel which has committed damage has changed owners between the cause of action and the arrest, it is difficult to make the person to whom the property in the ship has passed responsible, beyond the value of the ship, for the amount of freight which the former owner may have received, who may have gone to a distant part of the world. In such a case the court would be very cautious in enforcing the bringing in of the freight, and on proof that there had been a change of owners declined to do so. The Mellona, 3 W. Rob. 25, 26; 12 Jur. 271.

4. Interest and Costs.

See tit. Costs, c. 34, p. 403.

5. Owner in fault or privy to Damage.

1446. The 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, limiting the responsibility of shipowners to the value of their vessel, does not affect the case of a master, also part owner, having charge of the vessel, and occasioning a collision. The Triune, 3 Hagg. 114.

1447. In a cause of collision in which an appearance had been given for the master and principal owner of the vessel proceeded against, motion ex parte before the hearing, founded on affidavit of the insufficiency of ship and freight to cover the alleged damage, for warrant of arrest against the master, rejected. A further motion for a monition against him to pay the surplus reported by registrar and merchants to be due for damage and costs, made after the damage had been pronounced for, also rejected, the ship, which was in possession of the court, not having been sold. A subsequent motion for such a monition, after sale of the ship and the amount of the deficiency had been thereby ascertained, granted, and the monition not having been obeyed an attachment decreed and issued, under which he was imprisoned. Ibid. 115, 117.

1448. In a cause of collision in which the damaging vessel had been arrested and an appearance given for the master, who was also a part owner, and the damage was pronounced for, application to condemn the master, as such part owner, in the excess of damage beyond the proceeds of the ship, under the 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, rejected, the court holding that it was not competent to it to engraft a personal action against the master as part owner upon a proceeding in rem. The Hope, 1 W. Rob. 154.

1449. To render a master, being also a part owner and guilty of neglect, responsible beyond the value of the ship and freight, he must be sued as master in the first instance. The proceeding must be by charging him with being the cause of the damage by his misconduct; and that cannot be done, directly or indirectly, in another suit. In an action of collision in which the damage had been pronounced for, motion to condemn a part owner, who was on board and in command of the damaging vessel at the time of the collision, in the excess of the damage beyond the proceeds of the ship, rejected. The Volant, 1 W. Rob. 385, 390.

1450. In an action on the case against several defendants as shipowners, one of whom was also the master by whose fault the loss had arisen, held, that the true construction of the 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, s. 1, founded on 7 Geo. 2, c. 15, was that if a sole owner be sued, and the fault or privity be in him, he would be excluded from the protection of the statute; but that where several owners are sued, there must be the fault or privity in each so to exclude them. Wilson v. Dickson, 2 B. & A. 2.

1451. There had been improper treatment and a wrongful sale of cargo at an intermediate port. The shipowners received the proceeds, and retained them with a view to deduct freight. Held, that they were privy to the sale, having adopted the acts of the master, and were therefore liable beyond the value of ship and freight. Heydorn v. Bibby, Court of Exchequer, 1st March, 1855.

1451a. For cases under the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, now in force, see p. 1346.

Part VII.—COMPULSORY PILOTAGE.

1. Liability by Common Law.

1452. The common law of the Admiralty, before any statute law on the subject, was that the taking on board of a pilot (but not by compulsion of law), though he was duly authorized to act as a pilot, did not exempt the owners from responsibility for his acts. The Eden, 10 Jur. 297; 4 Notes of Cases, 460; The Neptune the Second, 1 Dodson, 467.

1453. Upon general principles, a party compellable to take a pilot is not responsible for his acts. The Maria, 1 W. Rob. 102; The Protector, ibid. 54; The Agricola, 2 W. Rob. 19; The Gipsy King, 5 Notes of Cases, 287; The Christiana, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 171, overruling The Neptune the Second, 1 Dodson, 467; The Transit, 1838, 1 Monthly Law Mag. Notes of Cases, 582; The Girolamo, 3 Hagg. 169; Bennett v. Moita, 7 Taunt. 258; Fletcher v. Braddick, 2 N. R. 182; Bowcher v. Noidstrom, 1 Taunt. 568; The Attorney-General v. Case, Exch. 3 Price, 302; Carruthers v. Sidebottom, Q. B. 4 Maule & Sel. 77; Mackintosh v. Slade, 6 B. & C. 657.

1454. Apart from the M. S. Act, 1854, the owner of a ship is not responsible for damage done by his ship when such damage is occasioned solely by default of a licensed pilot employed by compulsion of law. The Annapolis and Johanna Stoll, 4 L. T. N.S. 423; 1 Lush. 311; 30 L. J. Adm. 201.

1455. In a case of loss sustained in the navigation of a prize, held that the taking a pilot released the captor from responsibility for the navigation of the vessel, unless it could be shown that the loss arose from want of obedience in the crew to the orders of the pilot, or from any cause assignable to the want of that control which the captor is bound to exercise over the crew. Demand for damage pronounced against accordingly. The Portsmouth, note to William Hastie, 6 C. Rob. 317.

2. Liability by Statute.

1. Before the M. S. Acts.*

1456. Before the General Pilot Act, 1812 (c. 39), a master was not discharged from his responsibility for the acts of his crew, although done under the direction of a pilot, who, by the regulations of a statute, superseded the master for the time in the government of his ship. Bowcher v. Nordstrom, 1 Taunt. 568; but see Aldrich v. Simmons, 1 Stark. 210.

1457. Owners are not responsible for the acts of a pilot taken on board by compulsion of law. The Eden, 10 Jur. 296; 4 Notes of Cases, 460.

1458. Nor where they are expressly absolved from the responsibility by statute. Ibid.

1459. But in all other cases they are responsible for the acts of the pilot. Ibid.

1460. In a cause of collision the mischief was found to have arisen from the fault of a duly-licensed pilot in charge of the vessel doing the damage. The pilot had been in the permanent employment of the owners, and engaged in navigating the ship for many years. Held, that the owners were exonerated from responsibility under 6 Geo. 4, c. 125. The Batavier, 10 Jur. 19; 4 Notes of Cases, 456; 2 W. Rob. 407.

1461. A pilot appointed under the Cork Pilot Act was solely to blame for the collision. Held, that the owners were responsible, the employment of the pilot not being compulsory by that act, and the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, not extending to the local act. The Eden, 2 W. Rob. 442; 10 Jur. 296; 4 Notes of Cases, 460.

1462. Owners were, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, exempt from responsibility for damage arising from the default of the pilot, whether the pilot was taken on board in obedience to the compulsory enactment of the statute, or under certain other clauses thereof. The Duke of Sussex, 1 W. Rob. 273; The Christiana, 2 Hagg. 188; The Protector, 1 W. Rob. 45; Lucey v. Ingram, 6 M. & W. 302.

2. Since the M. S. Acts.

1463. The fifth part of this act relating to pilotage applies to the United Kingdom only. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 330.†

1464. In the construction of this act "the United Kingdom" means Great Britain and Ireland. "The Trinity House" means the Corporation of the Trinity House of Deptford Strond. "Pilotage authority" includes all bodies and persons authorized to license pilots, to fix rates of pilotage, or to exercise jurisdiction in respect of pilotage. "Pilot" means any person not belonging to a ship who has the conduct thereof. "Qualified pilot" means any person duly licensed by any pilotage authority to conduct ships to which he does not belong. Ibid. s. 2.

1465. No owner or master of any ship shall be answerable to any person whatever for any loss or damage occasioned by the fault or incapacity of any qualified pilot acting in charge of such ship, within any district where the employment of such pilot is compulsory by law. Ibid. s. 388.

1466. The 388th section of the M. S. Act must, as it takes away a remedy from persons who have received an injury, be construed strictly. The General de Caen, Swabey, 10.

1467. The exoneration conferred on shipowners by the 388th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, is more limited than that which was conferred by the 55th

* (472) Owners having voluntarily taken a pilot (under the provisions of 6 Geo. 4, c. 125), held absolved from responsibility, the accident having been entirely caused by the misconduct of the pilot alone, and having occurred within the waters for which he was licensed. The Fama, 2 W. Rob. 184; and Lucey v. Ingram, therein cited.

† (473) This is in effect an extension beyond former statutes, the General Pilotage Act (6 Geo. 4, c. 125), having been held to apply to England only. The Eden, 2 W. Rob. 443, 448.

section of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125. The Lion, L. R. 2 P. C. 525; 38 L. J. Adm. 51; 3 Asp. 266; 6 Moore, P. C. N.S. 163.

1468. If a master who is not under any compulsion to take a pilot does take a pilot (even assuming that such pilot is bound to act), this does not exonerate the owners from responsibility for the errors committed by such pilot. Ibid.

1469. The construction of the 388th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, held not to be affected by the case of Lucey v. Ingram (6 M. & W. 302), decided on the 55th section of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125. *Ibid.

1470. The enjoining by statute the taking a pilot, and enacting in case of refusal payment notwithstanding of pilotage dues, held to amount to a compulsion to take a pilot. The Maria, 1 W. Rob. 102. But if a pilot be taken merely in pursuance of the provisions of an act of parliament, quare, how far is the liability of the owners on general principle thereby discharged? The Agricola, 2 W. Rob. 19; 7 Jur. 157.

1471. The learned judge of the Admiralty Court must in the case of The Maria be understood as assuming that the master was bound to take the first licensed pilot who offered himself. Martin v. Temperley, 4 Q. B. 298; 3 G. & D. 497; 7 Jur. 15; 12 L. J. Q. B. 122—Denman, C. J.

1472. If there be a power of selection, the servant hired is the servant of the person hiring. Ibid.; but see No. 1460, p. 1350.

1473. The fact that the master has the power of selecting a pilot from a particular qualified class is not sufficient to render the owner responsible for the acts of the pilot. The Hibernian, L. R. 4 P. C. 511; 42 L. J. Adm. 8; 9 Moore, P. C. N.S. 340; 1 Asp. N.S. P. C. 491. Semble, overruling Martin v. Temperley, supra.

1474. Where a ship is under the compulsory charge of a licensed pilot, the owners are not responsible for damage occasioned by his fault or incapacity, although they must meet and rebut any relevant allegation of negligence on their own part. Per Lord Chelmsford, under the M. S. Act, 1854, where the shipowners have proved fault on the part of the pilot sufficient to cause and in fact causing the calamity, they must be held to have satisfied the condition on which their exemption from liability depends; and they are not to be called upon to adduce proof of a negative character to exclude the mere possibility of contributory fault. But if in the course of the evidence certain acts or omissions on the part of the crew come out, it will then be incumbent on the owners to show satisfactorily that these acts or omissions in no degree contributed to the damage. Per Lord Selborne, when it is proved that a qualified pilot was acting in charge of the ship, that such charge was compulsory, and that it was the pilot's fault or incapacity which caused the damage, the burden of proving the defenders' contribution to the loss is cast upon the pursuers. The defenders are not obliged to travel into the indefinite region of negatives, or to anticipate by denial that for which no foundation is laid, to call upon them to deal with it. They are, however, bound to rebut evidence actually brought against them of contributory negligence. Clyde Navigation Co. v. Barclay, L. R. 1 App. Cas. 790.

1475. When the employment of a pilot is within the provision of s. 139 of the Mersey Docks Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), such employment is compulsory. The object of the master when the vessel left dock was to get to sea as soon as he could, and he arranged with the pilot that the vessel should anchor in the Mersey for the night, but should go so far on the way as would enable her to cross the bar on the next morning's tide. Held, that the ship was proceeding to sea within the meaning of sect. 139 at the time she left the dock, and that the anchoring was not a discontinuance of her progress to the sea, but an act proper and reasonable to be done in the course of it. (The doctrine laid down in The Christiana, 7 Moo. P. C. C. 171, and The Lochlibo, ibid. 430, concerning the relative duties of pilot and crew recognized and approved.) Wood v. Smith, L. R. 5 P. C. 451.

1476. In a case of collision occasioned by a vessel under compulsory pilotage, where no contributory negligence on the part of the master and crew is proved, the pilot in charge is solely responsible, and the owners are exempt from the consequences of his neglect or default. The Calabar, L. R. 2 P. C. 238; see also The Ocean Wave, 3 ibid. 205.

1477. The 388th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), does not require that the pilot should be compulsorily employed where the accident happened, but only that he should have been compulsorily employed within the district where it happened. The General Steam Navigation Co. v. British Colonial Steamship Co., Limited, L. R. 3 Ex. 330, and 4 ibid. (Ex. Ch.) 238; 27 L. J. Ex. 194; 38 ibid. (Ex. Ch.) 97; 3 Asp. 168 and 237.

1478. A collision happened between Yantlett Creek and Gravesend through the fault of a pilot taken on board the defendant's vessel, coming up channel at Dungeness. The vessel belonged to the port of London, and was exempt from compulsory pilotage within such port. The court found that for pilotage purposes the port of London ended at Gravesend, and not at Yantlett Creek. But held, affirming the judgment of the court below, that even assuming that the port of London extended to Yantlett Creek, the effect of sects. 333, 378, and Schedule U. of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), was such as to prevent the relation of master and servant existing between the owners of the defendant's vessel and the pilot, during any portion of the transit from Dungeness to Gravesend, and that sect. 388 was not inconsistent with this, and that, therefore, the defendant's vessel was not liable. Ibid.

1479. Sect. 96 of the Thames Conservancy Act, 1857, enacting that the owner of every vessel navigating the Thames shall be answerable for damages done by such vessel, "or by any of the boatmen or other persons belonging to or employed in or about the same, by any means whatsoever," to the property of the conservators, does not apply where the damage is occasioned through the fault of a pilot compulsorily employed. The Conservators of the River Thames v. Hall, L. R. 3 C. P. 415; 3 Asp. 73.

1480. The power to license pilots does not, per se, render the pilotage compulsory. The Killarney, 6 L. T. N.S. 908; 1 Lushington, 427.

1481. A French vessel coming up the Thames took on board a pilot, and, as none of her crew understood English, a waterman to take the wheel. The waterman put her helm up instead of luffing as the pilot ordered, whereby a barge was run into and damaged. The French owner claimed exemption under the 388th section of the M. S. Act. Held, that the pilot was not answerable for the waterman's incapacity or fault, and that the owners were liable. General de Caen, Swabey, 9.

1482. Semble, owners are not deprived of the benefit of compulsory pilotage by the fact that, after a collision, their vessel did not render the assistance required by sect. 33 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63). The Queen, The Lord John Russell, L. R. 2 A. & E. 354; 38 L. J. Adm. 39; 3 Asp. 242.

1483. The Canadian Statutes (27 & 28 Vict. c. 58, s. 10, and 27 & 28 Vict. c. 13, s. 14) are to be read and construed together as being in pari materid, constituting a compulsory pilotage, and exonerating the owner from liability for damage occasioned by his vessel when in charge of a pilot by compulsion of law. The Hibernian, L. R. 4 P. C. 511; 42 L. J. Adm. 8; 9 Moo. P. C. N.S. 340; 1 Asp. N.S. 491.

1484. No owner of any vessel, in charge of a duly-licensed pilot taken by compulsion of law, is answerable to the undertakers of the harbours and piers, within the act, for any damage done by such vessel to the harbour, dock, pier, or the quays or works connected therewith, when such damage has been caused solely by such pilot. See the General Pier and Harbour Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 74; and see also Pt. II. c. 6, p. 1233.*

* (476) The master being an intermediate agent is not liable to his owner for the wrongful acts of the pilot, and the better opinion appears to be that he would not be liable to 1485. The General Pilot Act (52 Geo. 3, o. 39), now repealed, did not confine the exemption to loss or damage happening to the piloted ship and cargo, but extended to damage done by that ship to others. Ritchie v. Bousfield, 7 Taunt. 309.

3. Crown Ships.*

1486. This act, except as therein specially provided, does not apply to ships belonging to her Majesty. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 4.

a stranger. See 1 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 281, and the cases therein referred to.

(477) The compulsion to take a pilot has generally been considered to consist in the liability to a penalty for refusal to employ a duly-qualified pilot in a district for which he is duly licensed. The penalty, therefore, in such cases would seem to be the gist of the compulsion. It may, however, be questioned whether this be not too rigid a statement of the law, and whether if an act of parliament provided that duly-qualified pilots should be licensed for a district, and, without prescribing a penalty in case of refusal, directed that owners of vessels should employ them, the direction by statute would not of itself amount to a legal compulsion sufficient to exempt an owner from responsibility for the acts of a pilot so employed. See The Maria, 1 W. Rob. 102; The Fama, 2 W. Rob. 184; The Agricola, 2 Ibid. 19; The Duke of Sussex, 1 Ibid. 273; The George, 4 Notes of Cases, 161. Sed contra The Killarney, Lushington, 427.

(478) In America a collision was caused solely by the negligent conduct of the pilot in charge, taken by compulsion of law, but the owners were notwithstanding condemned in the damages caused by the collision. (Supreme Court of the United States.) The China, 7 Wallace, p. 61. See also a report thereof in Appendix to Report of Select Committee on Pilotage Bill (Parliamentary Return 343 of 1870, p. 521). See also The Carolus, 2 Curtis, C. C. 269; The Hallock, 1 Sprague, 539; Yates v. Brown, 8 Pickering, 23; Williamson v. Price, 4 Martin, N.S. 399; Flanigan v. Washington Insurance Co., 7 Barr. 31; Dennison v. Seymour, 9 Wendell, 1; Smith v. Condrety, 1 Howard, 28; The Lotty, Olcott, Adm. 329; The Creole, 2 Wallace, jun. 511; The Rescue, 2 Sprague, 16; 3 Kent's Commentaries, p. 135; Reeves v. The Constitution, Gilpin, 579. [AMERICAN.]

(479) The principle appears to be that the pilot is substituted in the place of the master, and the master ceases therefore to be liable as master, but the owners remain answerable for the conduct of the new temporary master, the pilot, in the same way and to the same extent that, so far as the navigation of the ship was concerned, the owners were liable for the conduct of the master himself. Bussey v. Donaldson, 4 Dallas, 206. [AMERICAN.]

(480) The Pennsylvania Pilot Act of 29th March, 1803, which obliges vessels going out of or coming into the port of Philadelphia to receive a pilot under a "penalty" and "forfeiture" of half pilotage which the act makes a lien upon the ship, and recoverable in the Admiralty, not being, as is decided, compulsory but optional, the master of the ship need not take a pilot if he prefers to pay the penalty or forfeiture. Smith v. The Creole and The Sampson, 2 Wallace, jun. 485. [AMERICAN.]

(481) Hence, there being a direct privity between the pilot and the ship, the latter is liable in Admiralty for damage caused by his acts. Ibid.

(482) See the policy of the law in this respect vindicated, and all the authorities on the subject reviewed. Ibid.; and Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. (Lower Canada), p. 199.

(483) Prior to the Canadian Statutes (27 & 28 Vict. c. 58, s. 10, and Ibid. c. 13, s. 14), held, in the Vice-Admiralty Court of Lower Canada, that the owners were liable notwithstanding pilot in charge. The Cumberland, ibid. 85; The Lord John Russell, ibid. 190.

(484) But held, that the master is not answerable to the owners or other persons for the acts of the pilot. The Sophia, ibid. 97; Molloy, B. 2, c. 9, 1 & 2; 3 Kent's Com. 135; Snell v. Rich, 1 Johns. 305. [AMERICAN.]

(485) Under the old Pilot Acts, held, that an action could not be maintained against the master of a vessel for running down a ship in the river Thames while, in pursuance of the Pilot Act, he had a pilot on board, no positive default in the master being proved. Bennet v. Moita (1815), 7 Taunt. 258; 1 Moore, 4; Holt, 359; S. P. Ritchie v. Bousfield (1816), 7 Taunt. 309; and see Coatts v. Herbert, 3 Stark. 12; and Fletcher v. Braddick, 2 N. R. 182; Stort v. Clements, N. P. 107.

(486) The 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, is repealed by the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), but see note (475).

* (487) The provisions of the old Pilot Acts, now repealed, were held to apply to the Crown as well as to the subject. See Att.-Gen. v. Case, 3 Price, 302.

(488) But by 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 86, now also repealed, but in force up to the time of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), coming into operation, it was enacted that nothing therein contained should extend to any ships or vessels belonging to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, as to their being compelled to take pilots on board. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 86.

4. Ships one or both Foreign.

1. Generally.

1487. The British legislature has no authority over foreign vessels on the high seas out of British jurisdiction, but may impose any conditions on foreign vessels entering a British port, and consequently an obligation on foreign ships inward bound to take a pilot at a convenient station beyond three miles from the British shore. The Annapolis and Johanna Stoll, 1 Lush. 295; 30 L. J. Adm. 201; 1 Asp. 69; 4 L. T. N.S. 417.

1488. A statute, imposing in general terms on all inward-bound vessels the obligation to take a pilot at a convenient station beyond three miles from the British shore, is binding on foreign vessels, such construction being justified on grounds of public policy. Ibid. 1 Lush. 295.

1489. National jurisdiction in pilotage matters, by custom and general policy, extends beyond the three miles limit. Ibid. 306.

1490. The British legislature may appoint a pilot station more than three miles from the British shore, for vessels inward bound to a British port, and an enactment general in terms, requiring inward-bound vessels there to take pilots, is binding on foreign vessels entering the port. Ibid.

1491. Many sections of Part V. of the M. S. Act, 1854, apply to foreigners in British waters. Ibid. 311.

1492. Held, that the 388th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), applies to foreign vessels sued for damage done in British waters. Ibid.

1493. The provisions of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, now repealed, exempting owners from responsibility for damage arising from the default of a duly-licensed pilot, extended to cases where the damage was done by a British ship to the property of foreigners as well as to cases entirely between British subjects, on the general principle of international law, that the party seeking a remedy must take it according to the law of the country in which it is to be enforced. The Vernon, 1 W. Rob. 317, 319.

1494. Held, that the above provisions of 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, were applicable to foreign ships. The Atlas, 5 Notes of Cases, 54; The Eolides, 3 Hagg. 367; The Vernon, 1 W. Rob. 317; The Christiana, 2 Hagg. 188; The Maria, 1 W. Rob. 95; The Protector, ibid. 45; over-ruling The Girolamo, 3 Hagg. 169; and The Carolus, note to The Gladiator, ibid. 343.

1496. A collision took place in foreign waters between an English and a foreign ship, and it appeared from the pleadings that, by Belgian or Dutch law, pilotage was compulsory, but that by that law the owner was not relieved from his responsibility by having given the sole charge of the vessel to a duly-licensed pilot. Held (overruling the decision of the Court of Admiralty in L. R. 2 A. & E. 3; 2 Asp. 556), that the defendant (the English ship) was not liable for the damage. The Halley, L. R. 2 P. C. 193.

1497. No foreign ship, whether in ballast or with cargo or passengers, navigating between any port of the United Kingdom or the Channel Islands or Isle of Man, is subject to any other rule for the employment of pilots or other restriction than British ships so employed. See the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 141.

1497*a*. Charges for compulsory pilotage on foreign vessels are not differential dues within the meaning of the Harbour and Passing Tolls Act, 1861. The Vesta, 7 P. D. 240; 51 L. J. P. D. 25; 4 Asp. 515.

1498. For powers enabling her Majesty in Council to authorize vessels belonging to countries having treaties of reciprocity with the United Kingdom to be piloted in certain cases without having a licensed pilot on board, see 3 & 4 Vict. c. 68; and for similar powers enabling the crown, with the advice of the Privy Council, to permit vessels not exceeding sixty tons and not having British registers, to be navigated without pilots on the same terms as British ships of like burthen, see 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 60.

1499. By laws of April 14th, 1865, and April 17th, 1868, the coasting trade of Denmark, Iceland, and the Faro Islands, is thrown open to foreign vessels under conditions of reciprocity. See same in 14 Hertslet, p. 1022.

2. In the Mersey.

See c. 26, s. 2, p. 1384.

5. Ships carrying Passengers.

1500. The master of every ship carrying passengers between places in the United Kingdom, Guernsey, Jersey, Sark, Alderney, and Man, when navigating upon any waters within the limits of any pilotage district, or any part thereof, must, unless he or his mate has a pilotage certificate for such district, employ a qualified pilot. Penalty for breach not exceeding £100. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 354.

1501. Held, that this section applied to a steamer carrying passengers within the limits of the port of Dublin. The Dublin Port and Harbour Board v. Shannon, L. R. 7 C. P. 116. [IRISH.]

1502. Subject to any alteration to be made by any pilotage authority, all exemptions from compulsory pilotage existing at the time when this act came into operation continue in force. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 353.

1503. The 354th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), making pilotage compulsory upon certain vessels, is not to be restricted by the provision of the 353rd section, that all existing exemptions from compulsory pilotage should continue in force. The Temora, 1 Lushington, 17; 1 L. T. N.S. 418.

1505. To constitute a passenger within the meaning of the 354th or 379th sections of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), the payment of a fare is necessary. The Lion, L. R. 2 A. & E. 102; 2 P. C. 325; 37 L. J. Adm. 39; 38 L. J. P. C. Adm. 51; 3 Asp. 133; and P. C. 266; 6 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 163.

1506. The wife and father-in-law of the master were, by invitation from the master, without the privity of the owners, on board a vessel usually carrying passengers, but not on a passage voyage at the time. They had neither paid, nor agreed to pay, any fare before a collision took place, but their passage-money was paid by the master, as sworn to by him, after the collision, although no receipt was produced. Held, that such persons were not passengers within the meaning of the

1507. A vessel having on board a man who did not pay anything for his passage, but messed with the captain and performed some work on board, held, under the 379th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), exempt from compulsory pilotage. The Hanna, L. R. 1 A. & E. 283; 36 L. J. Adm. 1; 2 Asp. 434.

1508. The following ships, when not carrying passengers, are exempted from compulsory pilotage in the Trinity House, London and outport districts:—Ships employed in the coasting trade of the United Kingdom. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 379; and Bye-law of the Trinity House, Deptford Strond, confirmed by Order in Council of 16th July, 1857.*

1509. Also ships of not more than 60 tons burden. Ibid.

1510. Also ships trading to Boulogne, or to any place in Europe north of Boulogne. Ibid.

1511. Also ships from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark or Man, which are wholly laden with stone, being the produce of those islands. Ibid.

1512. Also ships navigating within the limits of the port to which they belong. Ibid.

1513. Also ships passing through the limits of any pilotage district on their voyage between two places, both situate out of such limits, and not being bound to any place within such limits nor anchoring therein. Ibid.

1514. All ships mentioned in the above 379th section are exempted from compulsory pilotage, as well when carrying passengers as when not carrying passengers, if the master or mate of any such ship has a proper pilotage certificate. See Bye-law of Trinity House, confirmed by Order in Council of 16th July, 1857, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 72.

1515. This Order in Council can only extend, it cannot abridge, an exemption. The Earl of Auckland, 1 Lushington, 164, 387; 30 L. J. Adm. 121; 3 L. T. N.S. 786; 5 Ibid. 558; 10 W. R. 124; 1 Asp. 27, 177.

1516. And so far as it restricts any previously-existing exemption it is ultra vires. Ibid.

* (489) The result of the construction put by the decided cases upon the two statutes is to render the words "when not carrying passengers" contained in the 379th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, of no effect. Possibly the cases may some day be reconsidered by an appellate tribunal. 1 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 279.

1517. And the Order in Council, being based on a construction of the law held erroneous by the Court of Queen's Bench, imposes no new pilotage obligation, and adds no new exemption from compulsory pilotage. The Earl of Auckland, 1 Lushington, 164, 387; 30 L. J. Adm. 121; 3 L. T. N.S. 786; 5 Ibid. 558; 10 W. R. 124; 1 Asp. 27, 177.

1518. A British ship trading between Boulogne and the Baltic, whether carrying passengers or not, is not bound to employ a licensed pilot in the Thames. Ibid.; Reg. v. Stanton, 8 E. & B. 445; 4 Jur. N.S. 10, 332; 27 L. J. M. C. 105. As to foreign ships, see The Vesta, in Nos. 1589—1591, p. 1362.

1519. In the 379th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), the description "ships trading to any place in Europe north of Boulogne," extends to vessels coming from a place north of Boulogne to the port of London. A vessel not carrying passengers on a voyage from Cronstadt to London, is exempted from compulsory pilotage in the river Thames. The Wesley, Lushington, 268.

1520. The master of a vessel belonging to the port of London and bound up the Thames, on a voyage from Australia to London with passengers on board, is required by law to employ a licensed pilot within the limits of the port of London. The Hankow, 4 P. D. 197; 4 Asp. 97.

1521. A certain number of persons, freemen of the Watermen's Company, are licensed by the Corporation (of the Trinity House, London), as pilots to pilot home-trade passenger steamers and no others up and down the Thames, between London Bridge and Gravesend. They are designated "Watermen Pilots for home-trade passenger ships." See Bye-Laws of the Corporation of Trinity House. Approved by Order in Council of May 1, 1855, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 69.

1521a. For exemption when master or mate has a pilotage certificate, see c. 6; and when passing through pilotage districts, see c. 9, p. 1363.

6. Pilotage Certificates.

1. Generally.*

1522. A master possessing a proper pilotage certificate, enabling him to do so, may pilot his ship without employing a licensed pilot. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 353—355.

1523. A master of a steam vessel trading between Hull and Rotterdam passed an examination as to his qualification to pilot such vessel into and out of the port of Goole. On the next day, he having then sailed for Rotterdam, a certificate, enabling him to pilot his vessel into and out of the port, was completed, sealed, and dated, but remained in the office of the Commissioners until after the collision. Held, that such certificate had not been granted, and was not possessed by the master so as to exempt his ship from compulsory pilotage. The Killarney, 30 L. J. Adm. 41; 5 L. T. N.S. 21; 1 Lushington, 202.

1523a. Semble, when the master or mate of a vessel is duly licensed under the 5th part of the M. S. Act, 1854, so as to render it unnecessary for him to take a pilot on board, the employment of such pilot does not bring his owners within the immunity of the 388th section. Ibid.

1524. A pilotage certificate issued to a master under sect. 355, describing the ship as the property of a person who was not the owner either at the time of the granting of the certificate, or at the time of a collision subsequently occurring, is invalid at the time of that collision. The Earl of Auckland, supra, No. 1515.

2. By Board of Trade.

1525. As to the grant of pilotage certificates by the Board of Trade to any master or mate of any ship carrying passengers between any places in the United Kingdom or Channel Islands, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 342, 355, and tit. PILOTS.

3. By Pilotage Authorities in General.

1526. As to the grant of pilotage certificates by pilotage authorities generally, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 340, 341, and tit. PILOTS.

* (490) Whenever a master desires to act as pilot, and furnishes the necessary evidence of his ability, the local inspectors for the district where the licence is issued shall endorse the route on the master's certificate; and, in like manner, when a first-class pilot desires to act as mate, if the inspectors are satisfied of his ability, they shall endorse the fact on the pilot's certificate. See Regulations of Supervising Inspectors, circa anno 1876, rule 53. [AMERICAN.]

(491) But a mate's licence cannot be endorsed as first pilot. Ibid.

4. By Trinity House, London.

1527. As to the conditions upon which pilotage certificates are granted by the Trinity House, London, to masters and mates of ships, and the duties which holding such certificates entail, see Trinity House Bye-laws, confirmed by Order in Council of 1st May, 1855, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 71.

1528. Any master or mate who holds a pilotage certificate, granted by the Trinity House, London, under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is qualified to pilot any other ship or ships belonging to the same owner or owners, within the limits described in such certificate, without being compelled to employ a pilot, but under the conditions that the ship which he is so qualified to pilot is of no greater draught of water than the ship in respect of which his certificate was granted, and that the name and description of every such ship is added to his certificate. See Ibid. No. 6, in Ibid. p. 72.

1529. All ships employed in the coasting trade of the United Kingdom: or of not more than sixty tons burthen: or trading to Boulogne or to any place in Europe north of Boulogne: or from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, which are wholly laden with stone, being the produce of those islands: or navigating within the limits of the port to which they belong: or passing through the limits of any pilotage district on their voyages between two places, both situate out of such limits, and not being bound to any place within such limits, nor anchoring therein, are, even when carrying passengers, exempted from compulsory pilotage if the master or his mate has a pilotage certificate, enabling him to pilot the ship within the district. Ibid. No. 7, in Ibid. p. 73.

5. By Trinity House, Hull.

1530. No certificate granted by the Corporation of the Trinity House, Hull, will authorize the person therein named to pilot any other ship than the ship or ships therein specified, and of which he may be actually master or mate at the time. See Bye-laws of the Trinity House, Hull, No. 9, confirmed by Order in Council of July 31, 1858.

7. Board of Trade.

1. Generally.

1531. As to the powers of the Board of Trade by provisional order to create, transfer and re-arrange pilotage authorities, see tit. PILOTS, c. 5, s. 1.

2. Exemptions.

1532. The Board of Trade has power by provisional order to constitute a pilotage authority and fix its limits in any place in the United Kingdom where there is no such authority, but there is to be no compulsory pilotage in such new district. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, sub-s. 3.

1533. The Board of Trade has the like power to exempt the masters and owners of all ships or classes of ships from being obliged to employ or pay pilots in any pilotage district or part thereof, and to annex any conditions to such exemptions. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

8. Pilotage Authorities in General.

1. Powers and Jurisdiction.

1534. As to the powers and jurisdiction of pilotage authorities in general, see tit. PILOTS, c. 5.

1535. Every qualified pilot on his appointment receives a licence, which must be duly registered, and he is not entitled to act as such until his licence is so registered; and any qualified pilot acting beyond the limits in his licence is to be considered as an unqualified pilot. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 349.

2. Compulsion.

1536. Subject to alteration by any pilotage authority, the employment of pilots shall continue to be compulsory in all districts in which the same was by law compulsory immediately before this act. Ibid. s. 353.

1537. Penalty against every master of any unexempted ship navigating within any such district, after a qualified pilot has offered or made a signal to take charge, piloting such ship without a proper pilotage certificate, or continuing to employ an unqualified person to do so, double pilotage. Ibid.

ington, 164; 30 L. J. Adm. 121; 3 L. T. N.S. 786; 10 W. R. 124; Reg. v. Stanton, 8 E. & B. 445; 4 Jur. N.S. 10, 332; 27 L. J. M. C. 105.

3. Exemption.

(a) Generally.

1539. Subject to alteration by any pilotage authority, all exemptions from compulsory pilotage existing before this act, are to continue in force. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 353.

1540. As to new districts, the Board of Trade has power by provisional order to constitute a pilotage authority and to fix the limits of its district in any place in the United Kingdom where there is no such authority; so, however, that in the new pilotage district so constituted there shall be no compulsory pilotage, and no restriction on the part of duly-qualified persons to obtain licences as pilots. See M. S. Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, sub-s. 3, and The Stettin, 6 L. T. N.S. 613; 31 L. J. Adm. 208.

1541. The exemptions from compulsory pilotage given by 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, are continued by sect. 353 of the M. S. Act, 1854, and qualify sects. 376—379 of that act. The Earl of Auckland, 1 Lushington, 164; 30 L. J. Adm. 121; 3 L. T. N.S. 786; 10 W. R. 124; Reg. v. Stanton, 8 E. & B. 445; 4 Jur. N.S. 10, 332; 27 L. J. M. C. 105; The Stettin, 6 L. T. N.S. 613; 31 L. J. Adm. 208; The Moselle, 2 Asp. N.S. 586.

1542. As to the exemptions from compulsory pilotage in the London and Outport districts, see Nos. 1574—1642, pp. 1361—1366.

1543. The effect of sect. 353 of the M. S. Act, 1854, is not to take away any of the express exemptions of sect. 379 of that act. Hadgraft v. Hewith, L. R. 10 Q. B. 350; 44 L. J. M. C. 140; 2 Asp. N.S. 573.

1544. Every pilotage authority has power by bye-law, approved by Order in Council, to exempt the masters of any ships, or classes of ships, from being compelled to employ qualified pilots, to annex any conditions thereto, and to revise and extend any exemptions now existing on such conditions as may appear desirable. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 332.

1545. As to the powers of the Board of Trade to grant exemptions, see Nos. 1532, 1533, supra.

1546. As to the grant of pilotage certificates enabling the masters or mates of certain ships to pilot them in lieu of their being compelled to take a licensed pilot, see c. 6, p. 1356.

1547. Compulsory pilotage is not a "charge" upon vessels under the 2nd section of the Convention of Commerce and Navigation between Great Britain and Sweden, dated 18th of March, 1826 (for which see 3 Hertlet's Commercial Treaties, p. 433). The Hanna, L. R. 1 A. & E. 283; 36 L. J. Adm. 1; 2 Asp. 434.

(b) Vessels under Sixty Tons.

1548. For provisions exempting British vessels under sixty tons from compulsory pilotage, see p. 1365.

1549. As regards the ports of Kingston-upon-Hull and Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and the ports and places respectively members thereof, and all other ports and places in respect of which the power vested in her Majesty by virtue of 4 Geo. 4, c. 77, is still subsisting, all vessels belonging to France, Sardinia, Portugal and Texas, bound from or to ports of the countries to which they respectively belong, or if in ballast any other places, and being of less than sixty tons burthen, are exempted from compulsory pilotage in all cases where British vessels of less burthen than sixty tons are so exempted. See Order in Council of 13th December, 1843, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 67.

1550. As regards all other ports and places in the United Kingdom, vessels belonging to Sweden and Norway, Russia, Denmark, Hanover, Prussia, the Free Hanseatic cities of Bremen, Lübeck, Hamburg and Frankfort, the Netherlands, Greece, the United States, Mexico, Columbia, Venezuela, Brazil, Bolivia, Peru, the united provinces of Rio de la Plata and Uruguay, being of less than sixty tons burthen, entering or clearing out of any such ports and places, are exempted from compulsory pilotage upon the same terms and conditions as British vessels, not exceeding the like burthen, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 125. Ibid.

1551. For similar provisions as to ships belonging to Austria, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and Oldenburg, irrespective of the places from or to which they are bound, see Order in Council of 3rd September, 1844, gazetted 14th September.

1551a. For similar provisions as to the Two Sicilies, see Order in Council of 8th August, 1845.

9. Trinity House London District.

1. Generally.*

1552. See as to the powers and authority of the Trinity House, London, generally, and within the London District, tit. Pilots, c. 6.

1552a. The Cinque Ports district and the pilotage authority thereof have been included in and transferred to the Trinity House, London. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 129.

1553. Rochester is included in this district. See Parliamentary Returns as to Pilotage, Sessions Paper, No. 325 of 1882, p. 230; and for rates and regulations of pilots between Rochester and the Nore, Ibid. p. 186.

1553a. Maldon forms part of this district; and as to its limits, Ibid. p. 219, and Trinity House Regulations of July, 1874.

1554. The Trinity House London District comprises the waters of the Thames and Medway as high as London Bridge and Rochester Bridge respectively, and also the seas and channels leading thereto or therefrom as far as Orfordness to the north and Dungeness to the south. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370.

2. Compulsion.

1555. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, and to the exemptions in this act, the pilotage districts of the Trinity House within which the employment of pilots is compulsory are the London, Outport and English Channel Districts (as therein defined). The master of every ship navigating within any part of such districts, who, after a qualified pilot has offered to take charge, or has made a signal for that purpose, either himself pilots such ship without possessing a pilotage certificate, or employs an unqualified person to pilot her, shall (in addition to the penalty of double pilotage), if the Trinity House certify under their seal that the prosecutor may proceed for the recovery of such additional penalty, incur an additional penalty not exceeding £5 for every fifty tons burden of such ship. Ibid. s. 376.

1556. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House every master of any ship coming from the westward, and bound to any place in the Thames and Medway (unless exempted), shall, on the arrival of such ship off Dungeness, and thenceforth until she has passed the south buoy of the Brake, or a line to be drawn from Sandown Castle to that buoy, or until a qualified pilot has come on board, display and keep flying the usual signal for a pilot. If any qualified pilot is within hail, the master shall give charge of his ship to such pilot. Penalty for breach not exceeding double pilotage. Ibid. s. 378.

1557. Every pilot who shall have taken charge of any ship from the Thames to the Downs or elsewhere, shall, without additional compensation, wait on board for three complete days while such ship may be detained at Gravesend or elsewhere by any casualty, nor shall he at the end of three complete days be at liberty to quit such ship, or receive additional compensation, if she shall be further detained by winds, weather, or tides. See Bye-Law, No. 6, of Trinity House, Deptford Strond, confirmed by the King's Bench, 16th April, 1826, pursuant to 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 11.

1558. Should the ship be detained beyond three complete days on any other account, except winds, weather, or tides, the pilot shall nevertheless (if required) remain in charge if a compensation of six shillings per day is offered to him by the master or owner. Ibid.

1559. When a vessel comes to anchor the duty of the pilot is at an end, but if he continues on board she is still under his charge. The Christiana, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 170; 7 Notes of Cases, 6; ibid. Supp. xlv.

1560. Pilot might have left the ship when she anchored in the Downs, but he did not. Held still in charge. Ibid.

1561. See also Nos. 1839—1842, p. 1383.

1562a. For customs purposes it may extend to a line drawn from the Naze to the North Foreland. Ibid.

1563. For conservancy purposes it may

* (492) See as to the legal status of the London District of the Trinity House, 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 110; and Orders in Council in Ibid. pp. 68—81.

extend from Staines Bridge to Yantlett Creek. The General Steam Navigation Co. v. The British and Colonial Steam Navigation Co., Limited, L. R. 4 Ex. (Ex. Ch.) 238; 38 L. J. ib. 97; 3 Asp. 237.

1564. The limits of a port may also from time to time vary, and increase with the increase of population and of buildings. Ibid.

1565. For pilotage purposes the port of London extends down the river to Gravesend and no further. Ibid. 4 Exch. 238.

1566. But even assuming that the port of London extends for pilotage purposes to Yantlett Creek, and that therefore a vessel belonging to the port of London would be exempt from compulsory pilotage above Yantlett Creek, yet the effect of sects. 378, 383 and Schedule U. of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is such as to prevent the relation of master and servant existing between the owners of such vessel and a pilot taken on board off Dungeness, during any portion of the transit from Dungeness to Gravesend. Ibid. L. R. 3 Exch. 330; 37 L. J. Ex. 194; 3 Asp. 168.

1567. Held, also, that the exemption contained in sect. 388 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), does not require that the pilot should be compulsorily employed where the accident happens, but only that he should have been compulsorily employed within the district where it happens. Ibid. 4 Exch. 238.

1568. The effect of 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59, and the 353rd section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is that pilotage is compulsory upon a vessel belonging to the port of London in the river Thames above Gravesend, inasmuch as the Trinity House charter makes provision for the appointment of pilots in those ports. (The Killarney, Lush. 427; 30 L. J. Adm. 41 followed; and The Stettin, Br. & L. 199, 202; 31 L. J. Adm. 208 doubted.) The Hankow, 4 P. D. 197; 48 L. J. P. D. 29; 4 Asp. 97.

1569. The 354th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), making pilotage compulsory upon certain vessels, is not to be restricted by the provision of the 353rd section, that all existing exemptions from pilotage should continue in force. An Irish trader (as described by 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 159) therefore carrying passengers is compelled to employ a licensed pilot in the river Thames. (R. v. Stanton, 8 E. & B. 445, distinguished.) The Temora, Lush. 17.

1570. The 374th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), provides that no licence granted by the Trinity House shall "continue in force beyond the 31st day of January next ensuing the date of such licence; but the same may, upon the application of the pilot holding such licence, be renewed on the 31st day of January in every year, or any subsequent day, by indorsement under the hand of the secretary of the Trinity House, or such other person as may be appointed by them for that purpose." Held, that a pilot's licence renewed by indorsement made on the 22nd of January operated as a renewal from the 31st January, and was therefore effective on the 6th May following. The Beta, Br. & Lush. 328.

1571. A vessel ordinarily occupied in the foreign trade going from Liverpool to London in order to sail from London under advertisement for foreign parts, not carrying passengers but having a cargo shipped at Liverpool and deliverable at London, is not a "ship employed in the coasting trade of the U. K." within the meaning of the 379th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and is compellable by the 376th section to take a pilot in the London district of the Trinity House. The Lloyd's or Sea Queen, Br. & Lush. 359; 2 N. R. 497; 9 L. T. N.S. 236; 32 L. J. N.S. Adm. 97.

1572. A duly-qualified pilot being intrusted with the navigation of a foreign vessel, the owner is exonerated under stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 55, which applies equally to foreign ships as to British ships. Foreign owner and bail dismissed. The Christiana, 2 Hagg. 183.

1573. As to compulsion in regard to ships carrying passengers and what constitutes a passenger, see c. 5, p. 1355.

3. Exemption.

(a) Generally.

1574. The master of any collier, or of any ship or vessel trading to Norway, or to the Cattegat or Baltic, or round the North Cape, or into the White Sea, on their inward or outward voyages, or of any constant trader inwards, from the ports between Boulogne inclusive and the Baltic, all such ships and vessels having British registers, and coming up either by the North Channel (or South Channel, see No. 1582, infra), or of any Irish trader using the navigation of the rivers Thames and Medway, or of any ship or vessel employed in the regular coasting trade of the kingdom, or of any ship or vessel wholly laden with stone from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, and being the production thereof, or of any ship or vessel not exceeding the burthen of sixty tons, and having a British register, except as hereinafter provided, or of any other vessel whatever, whilst the same is within the limits of the port or place to which she belongs, the same not being a port or place in relation to which particular provision hath heretofore been made by any act of parliament, or charter for the appointment of pilots, may, without being subject to any of the penalties in this act, pilot his own vessel so long as he shall pilot the same without the aid of any other person than the ordinary crew of the vessel. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59.*

1576. The exemptions from compulsory pilotage given by 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59 (supplemented by Order in Council, 18th February, 1854), are maintained by sect. 353 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and qualify sects. 376, 379 of that act. (R. v. Stanton, 8 E. & B. 445, followed.) The Earl of Auckland, supra, No. 1515; The Hankow, supra, No. 1520.

1577. By sect. 353 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), all exemptions from compulsory pilotage which existed at the time when that act came into operation continue in force. The Stettin, 6 L. T. N.S. 613; 31 L. J. Adm. 208; B. & L. P. C. 199.

1578. A foreign ship not having a British register is not exempted from compulsory pilotage by the 59th section of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125. The Hanna, L. R. 1 A. & E. 283; 36 L. J. Adm. 1; 2 Asp. 434.

1579. The following ships, "when not carrying passengers,"* are exempted from compulsory pilotage in the London District, and in the Trinity House Outport Districts: (1) Ships employed in the coasting trade of the United Kingdom; (2) Ships of not more than sixty tons burden; (3) Ships trading to Boulogne or to any place in Europe north of Boulogne; (4) Ships from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, which are wholly laden with stone, being the produce of those islands; (5) Ships navigating within the limits of the port to which they belong; (6) Ships passing through the limits of any pilotage district on their voyages between two places, both situate out of such limits, and not being bound to any place within such limits, nor anchoring therein. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 379; and Bye-Law of the Trinity House, Deptford Strond, confirmed by Order in Council, 16th July, 1857.

1580. As to exemptions in regard to ships carrying passengers, and what constitutes a passenger, see c. 5, p. 1355.

(b) Ships trading to Norway, &c.

1581. The master of any vessel trading to Norway, or to the Cattegat, or Baltic, or round the North Cape, or into the White Sea, on their inward or outward voyages, all such ships and vessels having British registers, and coming up by the North Channel (or South Channel, see No. 1582, infra), may, without being subject to penalties, pilot his own ship, so long as he does so without the aid of any other person than his ordinary crew. 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59.

1582. Ships trading to Norway, or to the Cattegat or Baltic, or round the North Cape, or into the White Sea, when coming up by the South Channels, are similarly exempted from compulsory pilotage. See Regulations of Trinity House, confirmed by Order in Council of Feb. 18, 1854, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 68.

1583. The exemptions contained in the Order in Council of Feb. 18, 1854, do not apply to a vessel coming up by the North Channel. The Hanna, L. R. 1 A. & E. 283; 36 L. J. Adm. 1; 2 Asp. 434.

1584. A person to whom the master, without the owner's consent, gives a passage gratuitously, and who messes with him, but who, having had some experience at sea undertakes in return to help in the working of the ship, is neither a passenger nor a seaman. Ibid.

(c) Ships trading to Boulogne or North of Europe.

1585. Ships trading to Boulogne or to any place in Europe north of Boulogne, are, when not carrying passengers, exempted from compulsory pilotage in the Trinity House, London, and outport districts. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 379.

1586. The Order in Council of 16th July, 1857 (purporting to approve a bye-law of the Trinity House, purporting to restrict the exemptions then existing within the London District, being based on a construction of the law held erroneous by the Court of Queen's Bench, imposes no new pilotage obligation, and adds no new exemption from compulsory pilotage. The Earl of Auckland, 1 Lushington, 164, 387; 30 L. J. Adm. 121; 3 L. T. N.S. 786; 5 ibid. 558; 10 W. R. 124; 1 Asp. 27, 177.

1587. A British ship, trading between Boulogne and the Baltic, and carrying passengers, is not bound to employ a licensed pilot in the river Thames. Ibid.

1588. Under the 32nd section of the M. S. Act a pilotage authority, with the consent of her Majesty in Council, has no authority to create a new penal obligation to employ a licensed pilot, but only authority to create or extend an exemption from compulsory pilotage with or without condition. Ibid.

1589. The exemptions from compulsory pilotage created by the Order in Council of the 18th February, 1854, for vessels navigating the Thames, apply only to British ships. The Vesta, 7 P. D. 240; 51 L. J. P. D. 25; 4 Asp. 515.

1590. Sects. 353 and 376 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), render foreign vessels trading with cargo and passengers from the port of London to ports between Boulogne and the Baltic subject to compulsory pilotage on their outward passage between London and Gravesend, unless their masters or mates have certificates from the London Trinity House; and the operation of these sections, so far as such vessels are concerned, is not affected either by the Order in Council of February 18, 1854, or by provisions contained in the Harbour and Passing Tolls Act, 1861. Ibid.

1591. Charges for compulsory pilotage on such foreign vessels are not differential dues within the meaning of the Harbours and Passing Tolls Act, 1861, and are not abolished by that act. Ibid.

1592. The master of any constant trader inwards, from the ports between Boulogne inclusive and the Baltic, all such vessels having British registers, and coming up either by the North Channel or South Channel (see No. 1593, infra), may pilot his own vessel so long as he navigates her without the aid of any other person than his ordinary crew. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59.

1593. The masters of vessels trading to ports between Boulogne inclusive, on their outward passages, and when coming up by the South Channels are similarly exempted from compulsory pilotage. See Regulations of Trinity House, confirmed by Order in Council of 18th Feb. 1854, in 2 Maude & Pollock (2nd ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 68.*

1594. A vessel, not carrying passengers, on a voyage from Cronstadt to London, is exempted from compulsory pilotage in the Thames. The Wesley, 1 Lushington, 268.

(e) Ships trading between Great Britain and Ports North and East of Brest.

1595. All ships trading within the Trinity House, London, or Outport Districts, between the port of Brest, in France, or any port or place in Europe north and east of Brest, and any port or place in Great Britain, when not carrying passengers, are exempted from compulsory pilotage within such districts. See By-law of Trinity House, London, approved by Order in Council of 21st December, 1871, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 78.

(f) Ships in Coasting Trade.

1596. The master of any vessel employed in the regular coasting trade of the kingdom may pilot his own vessel so long as he navigates her without the assistance of any other person than his ordinary crew. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59.

1597. As to the continuance of this

* (493) As to the construction put on these words, see The Earl of Auckland, No. 1576.

(494) A vessel trading to and from London and Belfast, and proceeding down the Thames on her voyage to Belfast, and not laden with corn, grain, meal, flour, bread, or biscuits, held, not within sect. 2 of 52 Geo. 3, c. 29 (now repealed), which exempted from the obligation of taking a pilot all coasting vessels and all Irish traders using the navigation of the Thames as coasters. Davison v. McKibben, 3 Brod. & Bing. 112.

exemption, notwithstanding the act is repealed, see Nos. 1575—1579, supra.

1598. Ships employed in the coasting trade of the United Kingdom, when not carrying passengers, are exempted from compulsory pilotage in the Trinity House, London, and Outport Districts. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 379.

1599. The reason why coasting vessels are exempted from the obligation of taking a pilot is, that from their frequent egress and ingress to the particular port, their masters must be presumed to be perfectly acquainted with the locality. The Agricola, 2 W. Rob. 10; 7 Jur. 157.

1600. As to such exemptions in regard to vessels in the coasting trade running in and out of Liverpool, see No. 1847, p. 1384.

1601. A vessel ordinarily occupied in the foreign trade going from Liverpool to London in order to sail from London on such foreign trade, without passengers, but having on board a cargo shipped at Liverpool, and deliverable at London, is not "a ship employed in the coasting trade of the United Kingdom" within the meaning of the 379th section of the M. S. Act, and is compellable to take a pilot. The John Mowlem v. The Lloyd's or Sea Queen, 2 N. R. 497; 9 L. T. N.S. 236; 32 L. J. N.S. Adm. 97.

See also No. 1497, p. 1354; and No. 1777, p. 1378.

(g) Ships navigating between Ports of the United Kingdom in Ballast.

1602. All ships navigating in ballast from any port or place to any other port or place both in the United Kingdom are, when not carrying passengers, exempt from compulsory pilotage within the pilotage jurisdiction of the Trinity House, London. See Bye-law of the Trinity House, approved by Order in Council, July 25, 1861,* in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 73.

(h) Ships navigating between Ports of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands.

1603. All ships trading within the Trinity House, London, or Outport Districts, or either of them, between any port or place in Great Britain, and the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, when not carrying passengers, shall be exempted from compulsory pilotage within such districts. See Bye-law of Trinity House, London, approved by Order in Council of 21st December, 1871, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 78.

(i) Ships passing through Pilotage Districts.†

1604. Ships passing through the limits of any pilotage district on their voyages between two places, both situate out of such limits, and not being bound to any place within such limits, nor anchoring therein, are, when not carrying passengers, exempted from compulsory pilotage

* (495) This bye-law in effect supersedes a bye-law of 21st Nov. 1855, of the same corporation, granting to vessels coming from foreign ports in ballast to the United Kingdom exemption, under certain limitations, from compulsory pilotage.

† (496) The Trinity House, London, construes the 41st section of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), as follows:—1st. That a ship passing through the limits of a pilotage district, on a voyage between two places, both situate out of such district, may enter into a port within such district, and remain there for a time, and sail again to her destination, without being liable to compulsory pilotage, provided she does not load or discharge within the district. 2ndly. That a ship, in the circumstances before mentioned, does not incur liability to compulsory pilotage by reason of her entering a port within the district to repair or to receive orders (not being bound to such port for orders), or for any temporary purpose, other than loading or discharging. 3rdly. That a ship bound to a port within a pilotage district for orders, her ultimate destination being indefinite, is not exempt from compulsory pilotage, although the place from which she has come may be without the district, and the port to which she may be ultimately directed may be also out of the district, such ship having in fact at the moment of her calling for orders no port of final destination, and therefore no actual destination beyond the limits of the pilotage district. 4thly. That a ship discharging her cargo at a port within a pilotage district to which she is not bound, and reloading the same cargo under casual circumstances (such as having shifted her cargo at sea, or requiring repairs), is not exempted from compulsory pilotage, the terms "loading or discharging" used in the 41st section of the act appearing to counsel to signify loading or discharging under any circumstances, or for any purpose.

in the London District, and in the Trinity House Outport Districts. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 379.

1605. The masters and owners of ships passing through the limits of any pilotage district in the United Kingdom on their voyages between two places both situate out of such districts, are exempted from any obligation to employ a pilot, or to pay pilotage rates, within such district; unless such ships are loading or discharging at any place within or above such district on the same river or its tributaries. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 41.

1606. The masters of vessels passing through the limits of any pilotage district on their voyage from one port to another, and not bound to any port or place within such limits, nor anchoring therein, are similarly exempted from compulsory pilotage. See Regulations of Trinity House, confirmed by Order in Council of 18th Feb. 1854, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 68.

1607. The word "loading," in the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 41, is not confined to taking on board cargo, but also includes taking on board coals for the purpose of the voyage. Therefore where a steamer anchored in Dartmouth Harbour, and took on board twenty tons of coal for the purposes of the voyage, and was bound from a place out of the outport district to a destination also out of it; held, that she was not exempt from the obligation to employ a pilot. The Winston, 8 P. D. 176; 52 L. J. P. D. 72; 53 Ibid. 69; 9 P. D. C. A. 85; 5 Asp. 143.

(j) Ships within their own Ports.

1608. The master of any vessel, whilst the same is within the limits of the port or place to which she belongs, the same not being a port or place as to which particular provision has been made for pilots, may pilot his own vessel so long as he navigates her without the aid of any other person than his ordinary crew. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59.

1609. As to the continuance of this exemption notwithstanding this act is repealed, see No. 1576, supra.

1610. The provisions of the Pilotage Act, 1825 (c. 125), as to compulsory pilotage and exemptions therefrom, are preserved by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 353; The Hankow, 4 Asp. 97.

1611. A vessel within the limits of her own port at a place where, previous to the passing of the Pilotage Act, 1825, there were provisions in force for the appointment of pilots, is not exempt from compulsory pilotage. Ibid.

1612. The provisions of the Trinity House charter granted by James II., and of the acts of parliament relating to the pilotage of the rivers Thames and Medway, and the approaches thereto, are "particular provisions" relating to the port of London, within the meaning of sect. 59 of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, so far as that port is contained in the pilotage district. Ibid.

1613. Ships navigating within the limits of the port to which they belong, when not carrying passengers, are exempted from compulsory pilotage in the Trinity House, London, and Outport Districts. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 379.

1614. Held, overruling the decision in the court below (see 6 L. T. 613), that the words "navigating within" in the 379th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), mean "being within," and that therefore a vessel belonging to the port of London and coming from a foreign port is exempt from compulsory pilotage in the Thames. The Stettin, B. & L. P. C. 199; 31 L. J. Adm. 208; 6 L. T. N.S. 613.

1615. A steam vessel belonging to the port of London on a voyage from Bordeaux to London, whilst off the Regent's Canal in the river Thames, came into collision with a brig at anchor, solely by the fault of the pilot of the steamer. Held, that the collision having taken place when the steamer was within the limits of the port to which she belonged, her owners were at such time not compelled to take a pilot, and were therefore answerable for his misconduct. Ibid.

1616. Seemle, that but for 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59, the taking of the pilot would, notwithstanding the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 379, have been under the circumstances compulsory upon the owners. Ibid.

1617. By 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59, vessels within the limits of the port to which they belong, the same not being a port or place in relation to which particular provision hath heretofore been made by any act of parliament, or by any charter or charters for the employment of pilots, are exempted from compulsory pilotage. The Killarney, 6 L. T. N.S. 908; 1 Lushington, 427.

1618. Held, that the 6 Geo. 3, c. 39, having before this enactment made particular provision for the employment of pilots by the masters of inward-bound vessels from Kingston-upon-Hull to Goole, the exemption is inapplicable to such a vessel. Ibid.

1619. A ship belonging to the port of London, and bound to London from Australia with passengers, is obliged to employ a pilot by compulsion of law, under the provisions of sect. 59 of the Pilotage Act, 1825 (c. 125), when within the limits of the port of London, by reason of there being at that time "particular provisions" for the appointment of pilots for the rivers Thames and Medway below bridge. (The Stettin, Br. & Lush. 199; 6 L. T. N.S. 613; 1 Asp. 229, not followed. The Kil-larney, Lush. 427; 6 L. T. N.S. 908; 1 Asp. 238, approved.) The Hankow, 4 P. D. 197; 4 Asp. 97.

(k) Irish Traders in Thames and Medway.

1620. The master of any Irish trader navigating the Thames and Medway may pilot his own ship so long as he navigates her without the aid of any one but his ordinary crew. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59, and note (494) supra.

1621. As to the continuance of this exemption, notwithstanding the act is repealed, see Nos. 1575—1579, p. 1361.

1622. The master of any collier may, without being subject to any penalties, pilot his own ship so long as he pilots her without the assistance of any person than the ordinary crew of the ship. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59.

1623. As to the continuance of this exemption, notwithstanding the act is repealed, see Nos. 1575—1579, p. 1361.

(m) Ships with Stone from the Channel Islands.

1624. The master of any ship or vessel wholly laden with stone from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, and being the production thereof, may pilot his own vessel so long as he navigates her without the aid of any other person than his ordinary crew. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59.

1625. As to the continuance of this exemption, notwithstanding the act is repealed, see Nos. 1575—1579, p. 1361.

1626. Ships from Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, wholly laden with stone, the produce of those islands, are, when not carrying passengers,* exempted from compulsory pilotage in the Trinity House London Outport Districts. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 379.

1627. See also as to the exemption of ships trading between the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands; No. 1603, p. 1363.

(n) Ships not exceeding Sixty Tons Burthen.

1628. Ships of not more than sixty tons burthen, when not carrying passengers,† shall be exempted from compulsory pilotage in the London District, and in the Trinity House Outport Districts. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 379.

1629. The master of any vessel not exceeding the burthen of sixty tons, and having a British register, may pilot his own vessel so long as he navigates her without the aid of any other person than his ordinary crew. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59.

1630. His Majesty may, by any Order in Council, authorize vessels not exceeding the burthen of sixty tons, and not having a British register, to be piloted without having a duly-licensed pilot on board upon the same conditions as are by this act imposed on British vessels not exceeding the like burthen. Ibid. s. 60.

1631. As to the continuance of these exemptions, notwithstanding the act of 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, is repealed, see Nos. 1575—1579, p. 1361.

(o) Ships carrying Provisions.

1632. The Trinity House of Deptford Strond may make regulations as to the piloting of ships not having British registers bringing fish, corn, or other provisions into the port of London, and which ought to be piloted by their licensed pilots. For the exemption of such ships from any regulations as to pilotage, see 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 51.

1633. As to the continuance of this exemption, notwithstanding the act is repealed, see Nos. 1575—1579, p. 1361.

* (497) See as to the construction put on these words, c. 5, p. 1355.

† (498) See as to the construction put on these words, ibid.

1634. Nothing in this act extends to subject to any penalty the master or mate of any ship being the owner or part-owner thereof, and residing at Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet, for piloting his own ship from any of the places therein mentioned up or down the Thames or Medway, or into or out of any port or place within the jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 62.

1635. As to the continuance of this exemption, notwithstanding the act is repealed, see Nos. 1575—1579, p. 1361.

1636. Held, that the above exemption was limited to vessels navigated from Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet. Peake v. Screech, 7 Q. B. 603; 9 Jur. 797; 14 L. J. Q. B. 133; S. P. Williams v. Newton, 14 M. & W. 747; 15 L. J. Exch. 11.

1637. The 2nd section of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, enacts that all vessels sailing as well up and down or upon the rivers Thames or Medway between Orfordness and London Bridge to the Downs, &c. (except as thereafter provided) shall be piloted by pilots licensed by the Trinity House. The 58th section imposes penalties on masters acting as pilots after a licensed pilot has offered to take charge of the vessel. Section 62 provides that "nothing in that act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to subject to any penalty the master or mate of any ship or vessel, being the owner or part-owner of such ship or vessel, and residing at Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet, for conducting or piloting such his own ship or vessel from any of the places aforesaid up and down the rivers Thames or Medway, or into or out of any port or place within the jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports." Held, that the "places aforesaid" in this section mean Dover, Deal, and the Isle of Thanet; that therefore the clause exempts from penalties such masters only as navigate their vessels from Dover, Deal, or the Isle of Thanet; and consequently that the penalties in sect. 58 were recoverable from a master piloting his own vessel on a foreign voyage commencing in the port of London, although he was a part-owner and resident in the Isle of Thanet. Williams v. Newton, 14 M. & W. 747.

(q) Removal of Ships in Port.

1639. When any vessel has been brought into any port in England by any duly-licensed pilot, the master or other person in command thereof, or if in ballast, any person appointed by the owner, master, or owner's agent, may afterwards remove the vessel in such port for the purpose of her entering or leaving any dock, or changing her moorings. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 63.

1640. As to the continuance of this exemption, notwithstanding the act is repealed, see Nos. 1575—1579, p. 1361.

1641. Prior to the collision the vessel had, on completing a voyage from India, been brought by a licensed pilot into the St. Katharine's Dock, and having there discharged her cargo, was at the time of such collision in the course of removal, for the purpose of going out of that dock to a dry dock in the port of London to be repaired, and was not at such time otherwise navigating or passing upon the Thames. Held, that the circumstance brought the case within the exception in the 63rd section of 6 Geo. 4, c. 125. Lucey v. Ingram, 6 M. & W. 302.

1642. As to its being unnecessary to employ a licensed pilot to change a ship's moorings, see Rex v. Lambe, 5 T. R. 76; Rex v. Neale, 8 T. R. 241.

10. Trinity House Outport Districts.

1. Generally.

1643. The Trinity House Outport Districts comprise any pilotage district for the appointment of pilots within which no particular provision is made by any act of parliament or charter. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370.

1644.* An act of parliament adopting

* (499) On the case of Hadgraft v. Hewith (2 Asp. N.S. 573), the learned editor makes the following note:—"It would appear to follow, from this decision, that wherever the appointment of pilots is by the Trinity House, all exemptions and compulsions existing before the M. S. Act, 1854, are continued, and that the existence of an act of parliament or charter under which the Trinity House appoint, is not a 'particular provision' within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854, or the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59, so as to continue the exemption or compulsion."

the general provisions of 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 5, for the appointment of pilots is not a "particular provision" within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370. Hadgraft v. Hewith, L. R. 10 Q. B. 350; 44 L. J. M. C. 140; 2 Asp. N.S. 573.

1645. The Ipswich Dock Act, 1852 (c. cxvi), does not therefore prevent the Ipswich District from being a Trinity Outport District. Ibid.

1646. The Trinity House Outport Districts include the ports of Aberdovey, Beaumaris, Bridgwater, Bridport, Caernarvon, Carlisle, Colchester, Cowes, Dartmouth, Exeter, Falmouth, Fleetwood-on-Wyre and Barrow, Fowey, Harwich, Holyhead, Ipswich, Isle of Wight, Lowestoft, Milford, Neath, Newhaven, Padstow, Penzance, Plymouth, Poole, Portmadoc, Portsmouth, Rye, St. Ives (Hayle), Scilly, Shoreham, Southampton, Teignmouth, Wells, Weymouth, Woodbridge, Yarmouth. Ibid. s. 371; and 2 Maude & Pollock on Merc. Sh. (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), pp. 111—116.

1647. As to the legal status of the Trinity House Outport Districts, see 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 111; and for bye-laws, regulations and rates, see Parliamentary Returns as to Pilotage, No. 325 of 1882, pp. 186—244; and for regulations and rates of pilotage for exempted ships between the Nore and Rochester, Ibid. p. 186.

2. Compulsion.

1648. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, and to exemptions in this act, the pilotage districts of the Trinity House within which the employment of pilots is compulsory are the London and Outport Districts, as therein before defined. The master of every ship navigating within any part of such districts, who, after a qualified pilot has offered to take charge of such ship, or signalled for that purpose, either pilots such ship without a pilotage certificate, or employs an unqualified person to pilot her, shall, in addition to the penalty of double pilotage, if the Trinity House certify under their common seal that the prosecutor may proceed for the recovery of such additional penalty, incur an additional penalty, not exceeding £5 for every fifty tons burden of such ship. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 376.

1649. Pilotage is compulsory in the Falmouth district. The Juno, 1 P. D. 135; 45 L. J. P. D. & A. 105; 3 Asp. N.S. 217.

3. Exemptions.

1651. The masters and owners of vessels passing through the limits of any pilotage district in the United Kingdom on their voyages between two places, both situate out of such districts, shall be exempted from any obligation to employ a pilot within such district, or to pay pilotage rates when not employing a pilot within such district. Provided that the exemption contained in this section shall not apply to ships loading or discharging at any place within such district, or at any place situate above such district on the same river or its tributaries. See the M. S. Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 41.

1652. All ships navigating in ballast between any ports or places in the United Kingdom, when not carrying passengers,

* (500) This bye-law in effect supersedes a bye-law of 21st Nov. 1855, of the same corporation, granting to vessels coming from foreign ports in ballast to the United Kingdom exemption from compulsory pilotage under certain limitations.

† (501) See as to these separately, Nos. 1574—1579, pp. 1361—1366.

are exempt from compulsory pilotage within the pilotage jurisdiction of the London Trinity House. See their Bye-law, confirmed by Order in Council, July 25, 1861.

1654. All ships trading from any port or place in Great Britain, within the London District or any of the Trinity House Outport Districts to the port of Brest, in France, or any port or place in Europe north and east of Brest, or to the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark or Man, or from Brest or any port or place in Europe north and east of Brest, or from the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark or Man to any port or place in Great Britain within either of the said districts, when not carrying passengers, shall be exempted from compulsory pilotage within such districts. See Order in Council of the 21st December, 1871; 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 78.

1655. No master of a vessel is compellable to take a pilot within the Beaumaris District when not coming in or going out of port. See Parliamentary Return as to Pilotage, No. 516 of 1855, p. 23.

1656. No master of a vessel is compellable to take a pilot for Mount's Bay and Penzance within the Penzance District until he comes within a line drawn from St. Clement's Isle to Trewavas Head. Ibid. p. 61.

1657. Pilotage is not compulsory for vessels proceeding to Tor Bay, but should the master of any vessel choose to employ a pilot to the anchorage therein, the pilotage shall be two-thirds less than that chargeable to vessels proceeding to the harbour of Brixham and Torquay. Ibid. No. 276 of 1874, p. 16.

1658. See as to exemptions in the London District applicable to these districts also, Nos. 1574—1642, p. 1361—1366.

4. Aberdovey.

1659. Definition of limits: from two miles beyond the outside of the bar, off the entrance of the river Dovey, up the river to Aberdovey, and vice versa. See Parliamentary Return as to Pilotage, No. 325 of 1882, p. 195; and No. 264 of 1863; and see Trinity House Regulations of November, 1862.

5. Beaumaris.

1660. Definition of limits: from Port Dinorwic or Moel-y-Don through the Swellies to a line drawn from Great Orme's Head to Point Linas, and vice versa, and into and out of all ports and places within those places. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 196; No. 206 of 1870; and Trinity House Regulations of December, 1869.

See also No. 1655, supra.

6. Bridgwater.

1661. The corporation of Bristol and the pilotage authorities of Cardiff, Newport, and Gloucester having agreed that the limits of the Trinity House Outport District for the port of Bridgwater should be altered and extended, the limits of the Trinity House Outport District for the port of Bridgwater are all such parts of the Bristol Channel and adjacent rivers and creeks as lie on the south side of, and are comprised within an imaginary straight line drawn from Anchor Head on the east to Watchet on the west, both in Somersetshire. See Bye-laws of these Pilotage Authorities, approved by Order in Council of 17th May, 1867, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 82; Trinity House Regulations of April, 1875; P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 197; and No. 1766 and note (527), p. 1377.

1662. Sub-commissioners of pilotage are appointed for the port of Bridgwater by the Trinity House under 8 & 9 Vict. c. lxxxix. ss. 70—76.

7. Bridport.

14. Falmouth.

1671. Definition of limits: from the Dodman to the Lizard and vice versd, and to and from, and into and out of, all ports and places within those limits. Ibid. p. 207.

1672. Pilotage is compulsory within this district. See The Juno, No. 1649, p. 1367.

15. Fleetwood-on-Wyre and Barrow.

1673. Definition of limits: from sea (that is, Morecambe Bay Light Ship) into and out of the harbour of Fleetwood-on-Wyre, and along the coast from Formby Point to Havering Point of Dudden.¶ P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 208.

1674. No pilot shall lay a vessel aground in the harbour of Barrow, without a written order from the officer in charge of such vessel. Ibid. p. 209, reg. 9.

16. Fowey.

1675. Definition of limits: from Looe (inclusive) to the Dodman, and into and out of all ports and places within those limits. Ibid. p. 210.

17. Harwich.

1676. Definition of limits: to and from the Wallet, Hoseley Bay, or the Sunk Light, into and out of Harwich harbour, and up the river Stour to Manningtree, and vice versd, and to and from all ports and places within those limits. Ibid. p. 211.

18. Holyhead.

1677. Definition of limits: to and from the anchorages at Great Orme's Head, along the coast of the Isle of Anglesea and Wales, as far as Bardsey Island, and to and from, and into and out of, all ports and places within those limits, except the bar and harbour of Caernarvon, and the Swellies.¶ Ibid. p. 212.

19. Ipswich.

1678. Definition of limits: from Ipswich quays to Harwich harbour, and vice versd. Ibid. p. 213.

12. Trinity House, Hull.

1. Generally.

1712. The Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull is required to license pilots for conducting vessels into and out of the port of Great Grimsby and upon any part of the river Humber below the port of Kingston-upon-Hull, and so far out at sea as to bring the North Ness of Dimlington, on the coast of Holderness, to bear or be seen clear of the land to the southward of it, so as to pass clear of the New Land, and also so far along the coast to the northward as the North Ness of Dimlington and to the southward as the headland called Donna Nook. See the Hull Pilot Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv.), s. 89.

1713. The Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull is the authority to license Humber pilots: but pilotage commissioners are appointed for the port of Kingston-upon-Hull and the Humber. Ibid. s. 22.

1714. The Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull is the pilotage authority to license pilots for the port of Grimsby. See 12 & 13 Vict. c. lxxxi. s. 251.

1715. For the general bye-laws made by the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull for the port and all its members, see P. R. No. 325 of 1882, pp. 36—37.

1716. And see for rates of pilotage charged in this port and its members, ibid. pp. 44—58.

See also tit. PILOTS, c. 7.

2. Compulsion.

1717. Every master of any ship outward bound from the port of Kingston-upon-Hull, required by this act to take a pilot, must apply at the pilot office, whereupon the commodore of pilots must appoint a pilot to take charge of the ship; and any master of any such ship, or of any ship outward bound required to take a pilot, who himself acts as pilot, or employs as a pilot any unlicensed person within the limits for which pilots are licensed under this act, or being inward bound himself acts as pilot, or employs as a pilot within those limits any unlicensed person, after any Humber pilot has offered to take charge, or made a signal for that purpose; penalty, double pilotage, and £5 for every fifty tons burthen of the ship if the commissioners proceed for the further penalty. See 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv. s. 34.

1718. For provisions requiring masters of vessels inward bound and liable to pilotage on coming within pilot limits, to display a signal for pilot, and facilitate his coming on board (penalty for default, double pilotage). Ibid. s. 36.

1719. An unlicensed pilot, after a duly licensed pilot had offered his services,

* (519) It seems, therefore, that pilotage is not compulsory in the English Channel district.

(520) The pilotage is voluntary except for home-trade ships carrying passengers (see The Temora, Lush. 17; No. 1503, p. 1355; The General Steam Navigation Co. v. The London and Edinburgh Steam Co., 2 Ex. Div. 467); and not having on board a master or mate with a pilotage certificate, nor exempted under the M. S. Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 41, for which see No. 1605, p. 1364. See 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), pp. 110, 111.

took charge in the river Ouse of the A., bound from Goole to Hamburg. Held, in a qui tam action for penalties against the unlicensed pilot, under the charters of the Trinity House, Hull, of 23 Eliz., and 13 Car. 2, and 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, that the Trinity House, Hull, had authority under those charters to license pilots from Goole, and that the defendant was properly convicted. Beilby v. Raper, 3 B. & A. 284.

1720. Held, that by 52 Geo. 3, c. 39; 6 Geo. 4, c. 125; 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv, s. 52, and the M. S. Act, 1854, together, pilotage is compulsory upon masters of inward-bound vessels from Kingston-upon-Hull to Goole, provided that neither such master nor mate possesses a pilotage certificate. The Killarney, 6 L. T. N.S. 908; 1 Lushington, 427.

1721. By 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59, vessels within the limits of the port to which they belong, the same not being a port or place in relation to which particular provision hath heretofore been made by any act of parliament, or by any charter or charters for the employment of pilots, are exempted from compulsory pilotage. Ibid.

1722. Held, that the 6 Geo. 3, c. 39, having before this enactment made particular provision for the employment of pilots by the masters of inward-bound vessels from Kingston-upon-Hull to Goole, the exemption is inapplicable to such a vessel. Ibid.

1723. Under sect. 22 of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv, pilotage is not compulsory where a vessel is being towed from one dock to another, both being within the port of Kingston-upon-Hull. The Maria, L. R. 1 A. & E. 358; 2 Asp. 528.

1724. A collision occurred in the Humber Dock, Hull, between a fly-boat and a Danish schooner bound for the Princes Dock. The schooner was in charge of a licensed Humber pilot, who had taken the charge of her at the Island pier from another licensed pilot, who had brought her in from sea. One sum was paid for the whole pilotage service. Held, that on the construction of the Hull Pilot Act, 1833 (c. cv), pilotage was compulsory, and that the change of pilots did not determine the compulsory pilotage. The Rigborgs Minde, 8 P. D. 132; 52 L. J. P. D. 74; 5 Asp. 123.

3. Exemption.

1725. Nothing in this act obliges the master or person in command of any ship employed in the coasting trade of Great Britain or Ireland, whether laden or in ballast, or of any ship or vessel of less than six feet draught of water, and the property of British subjects; or of any ship putting into the Humber for shelter, or for obtaining stores or provisions only, to employ a pilot, nor to prevent any owner, master, mate, or other person belonging to any ship inward bound from piloting her into and up the Humber in case no Humber pilot shall be ready, and offer to pilot her, nor to prevent any person from assisting any ship in distress. See 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv, s. 24.

1726. Ships not exceeding sixty tons burden are exempt from pilotage between the port of Goole and Hull Roads, and this exemption is extended to ships not exceeding 150 tons register, and to ships not exceeding ten feet draught of water. See Bye-Law of Trinity House, Hull, approved by Order in Council of 20 Nov. 1873, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 83. See also Order in Council, 3 Sept. 1845, exempting small foreign vessels.

1727. Upon the construction of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv, held, that pilotage of inward-bound vessels from Kingston-upon-Hull to Goole is not rendered compulsory by that act. Seemle, the charters granted by Queen Elizabeth and Charles 2nd to the Corporation of Kingston-upon-Hull do not apply to inward-bound vessels from that place to Goole, so as to render compulsory the pilotage of such vessels. The case of Beilby v. Raper (3 B. & A. 284) is applicable only to such vessels when outward-bound. But held, that by 52 Geo. 3, c. 39; 6 Geo. 4, c. 125; 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv, s. 52; and the M. S. Act, 1854, together, pilotage is compulsory upon masters of inward-bound vessels from Kingston-upon-Hull to Goole, provided that neither such master nor mate possesses a pilotage certificate. The Killarney, 1 Asp. 238.

1728. By 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 59, vessels within the limits of the port to which they belong, the same not being a port or place in relation to which particular provision hath heretofore been made by any act of parliament, or by any charter or charters for the employment of pilots, are exempted from compulsory pilotage. Held, that the 6 Geo. 3, c. 39, having before the enactment made particular provision for the employment of pilots by the masters of inward-bound vessels from Kingston-upon-Hull to Goole, the exemption is inapplicable to such a vessel. The power to license pilots does not per se render the pilotage compulsory. The Killarney, 1 Asp. 328.

1729. The employment of a Humber pilot is not compulsory upon a vessel which is being towed from one dock to another in the port of Hull, as a vessel is not, in such circumstances, either passing "into or out of" the port of Hull within the terms of sect. 22 of the Hull Pilot Act, or "bound to or from the port" within the terms of sect. 89 of the act. The Maria, L. R. 1 Adm. & E. 358.

S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 387.

5. Port of Goole.

1732. The pilots shall take charge of ships and vessels inwards from Hull Roads, and outwards from the port of Goole to Hull Roads. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 72, Bye-law 3.

1733. See for the bye-laws of the Trinity House, Hull, for this port, ibid. pp. 31, 32.

1734. For provisions as to the appointment by the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull of sub-commissioners of pilotage for this port, and for the bye-laws issued by the Trinity House for the guidance of such sub-commissioners, ibid.; and 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv, s. 52; and the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 387.

1735. Goole was first constituted a port in the year 1828. See The Hull Dock Co. v. Brown, 2 B. & Ad. 52.

1736. Held, that the description of the port of Hull, in the charters of 23 Eliz. and 13 Car. 2, includes the port of Goole. Beilby v. Raper, 3 B. & Ad. 286.

6. The Humber.

1737. For the bye-laws as to pilotage in the River Humber, see P. R. No. 325 of 1882, pp. 30, 31.

7. Port of Spalding.

1738. The pilots shall take charge of vessels inwards from the Welland Setway at sea to Spalding High Bridge, and outwards from that high bridge to the Setway; and each ship or vessel shall be brought up from the Setway, if required by the pilots, in their regular turns. Ibid. p. 35, Bye-law 3.

S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 387.

8. Port of Wisbech.

1741. The pilots shall take charge of vessels into and out of the port and harbour of Wisbech and the waters thereof, and from the town of Wisbech through the Cross Keys Bridge to the lower roads at sea outwards, and from the said lower roads at sea through the Cross Keys Bridge to the town of Wisbech inwards, and from and to all intermediate places between the said town and the said lower roads; and each ship or vessel shall be brought up from the Eye or from the said lower roads, if required by the pilots, in regular turns. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 33.

1742. See for the bye-laws of the Trinity House, Hull, for this port, ibid. pp. 33, 34.

1743. For provisions as to the appointment by the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull of sub-commissioners of pilotage for this port, and for their bye-laws for the guidance of such sub-commissioners, ibid.; and 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 6; and the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 387.

9. East Coast Pilotage District.

1744. The charters of the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull give that corporation power to license pilots to conduct ships and vessels "from the Humber to cross the seas." The licences held by some of the younger brethren of the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull enable their holders to act as pilots from the Humber north to Flamborough Head, &c., up to Leith Roads; east to the Naze of Norway, through the Cattegat, the Sound and Baltic to Stockholm, Cronstadt, Dantzic, Riga, to the Elbe and Heligoland; and south through Yarmouth Roads into the Downs, and through Yarmouth Roads and the Swin and up to the Nore. See P. R. No. 269 of 1877; for rates, see P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 46.

10. Exemption.

1744a. Pilotage is voluntary outside the Humber district. Ibid.

13. Trinity House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.*

1. Generally.

1745. The Corporation of the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne are authorized to licence pilots for the port. See 41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi. Foreign ships are obliged to employ a licensed pilot there, but British ships are not obliged to do so. Ibid. s. 6.†

1746. The pilotage jurisdiction of the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne formerly extended over the River Tyne, and into and out the port of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and the creeks and members belonging thereto. The Hartlepool Pilotage Order, 1864, the Tyne Pilotage Order, 1865, and the Sunderland Pilotage Order, 1865, have, however, transferred the pilotage jurisdiction of the Trinity House of Newcastle over the several ports and areas mentioned in such orders respectively to Pilotage Commissioners appointed under their provisions; and the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne consequently now only retains pilotage jurisdiction over such ports and places within its ancient jurisdiction as are not comprehended in the operation of such orders. See Hartlepool Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1864 (c. 58), s. 11; Sunderland Order Confirmation Act, 1865 (c. 59), s. 9; Tyne Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1865 (c. 44), s. 11; and the Tyne Pilotage Amendment Act, 1867 (c. 78); and 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 118. The transfer took place in January, 1883. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 82.

1747. The bye-laws made by the corporation of the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne for the regulation of the sea and river pilots of the ports within their jurisdiction, namely, Whitby, Seaham Harbour, Blyth, Amble, Alnmouth, North Sunderland, and Holy Island, approved. See Order in Council of 9th February, 1883, gazetted 14th February. For the bye-laws, see the Schedule to that Order in Council.

1747a. The bye-laws are the same as those made by the Tyne Pilotage Commissioners for the Tyne. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 82.

2. Compulsion.

1748. The owners or masters of any foreign ships coming into or departing from the port of Newcastle, or any of the creeks or members thereto, are required to receive and employ in the piloting of their ships pilots licensed by the Newcastle Trinity House; and if they neglect or refuse to do so, they are nevertheless bound to pay pilotage. See 41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi, s. 6.†

1749. All differential dues cease on and after the first day of January, 1862. See the Harbours and Passing Tolls, &c. Act, 1861 (c. 47), s. 10.

1750. The expression "differential dues" includes any dues, rates, or taxes levied on foreign ships, or on goods carried in foreign ships, which are not levied in like circumstances on British ships, or on goods carried in British ships; and also any excess of dues, rates, or taxes levied on foreign ships, or on goods carried in foreign ships, over those levied under like circumstances on British ships,

* (521) The members of the port of Newcastle-upon-Tyne are Middleborough and the Tees, Blyth, Seaham, Holy Island, Whitby, Warkworth, Amble, Alnmouth, and North Sunderland. See 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 118.

† (522) Held, that the provisions of sect. 6 of the local act (41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi) relating to pilotage remain in force, and are unaffected by any of the general acts of parliament, viz. the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, ss. 58, 59, 89;

the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 332, 353, 388; the Harbour and Passing Tolls Act, 1861 (c. 47), ss. 2, 10; the M. S. Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39; Huskisson's Act, 4 Geo. 4 (c. lxxxvii), s. 5; the Tyne Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1865 (c. 44), or by the Convention between this country and Sweden and Norway of March, 1826. The Johan Sverdrup, Newcastle-upon-Tyne County Court, L. or goods carried in British ships, excepting such duties as the Commissioners of Customs may be empowered to levy for the use of her Majesty under any act of parliament, in the events therein mentioned. See the Harbours and Passing Tolls, &c. Act, 1861 (c. 47), s. 1. But see The Vesta, Nos. 1589—1591, p. 1362.

1751. The master of a vessel having on board a licensed pilot, appointed by the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, under the local act, 41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi, s. 6, held, not entitled to the protection of the 55th section of the General Pilot Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 125. Dodds v. Embleton, 9 D. & R. 27.

1752. Prior to the Harbours and Passing Tolls, &c. Act, 1861, the owners of a foreign vessel which while proceeding up the river Tyne with a duly-licensed pilot on board, under the provisions of the Newcastle Pilot Act (41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi), came into collision with another vessel, held, but without costs, not responsible for damage in consequence of that collision, the collision being held to be occasioned by the default of the pilot, and the employment of him to be compulsory on the owners. The Maria, 1 W. Rob. 95.

3. Exemption.

1753. The owners or masters of British ships or other vessels coming into or departing from the port of Newcastle, or any of the creeks or members thereof, are not obliged to employ a pilot if not amended to do so. See 41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi, s. 6.*

1753a. Section 58 of 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, the effect of which is preserved by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 353, does not make it compulsory on the owners or masters of British vessels to employ pilots while navigating the Tyne. And their exemption under the local act of 41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi, s. 6, remains in force, and the owner is not protected by s. 38 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). (Dodds v. Embleton, 9 D. & R. 27, affirmed.) The Tyne Improvement Commissioners v. The General Steam Navigation Company, L.R. 2 Q. B. (Ex. Ch.) 65; 36 L. J. Q. B. (Ex. Ch.) 22; 2 Asp. 431; 8 B. & S. 66.

14. Port of Arundel.

1. Generally.

1754. See 6 Geo. 2, c. 12; 33 Geo. 3, c. 100; and 6 Geo. 4, c. clxx; and Bye-Laws. See Parliamentary Returns as to Pilotage, No. 516 of 1855, p. 84; No. 174 of 1858, p. 70; No. 243 of 1861, p. 63; and No. 269 of 1877; also Bye-laws and Regulations of 6th October, 1864, set out in P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 1.

1755. The master of any vessel of thirty tons register or upwards, whether inward or outward bound into the harbour of Littlehampton, must employ a pilot, unless her master or mate holds a pilotage certificate. Penalty, £5. See P. R. as to Pilotage, No. 269 of 1877.

2. Compulsion and Exemption.

1755a. The pilotage for this port is compulsory, except for vessels under 30 tons burthen. Ibid. No. 325 of 1882, p. 1.†

15. Port of Berwick-upon-Tweed.

1. Generally.

1756. See 48 Geo. 3, c. 104, repealed; 57 Geo. 3, c. lxx, s. 45; 25 Vict. c. xxxi, ss. 46—65; and Bye-laws. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 2; and Regulations of January, 1833.

1757. Definition of limits:—from the sea at the mouth of the river Tweed up the river on both sides thereof, partly in the parochial chapelry of Tweedmouth, partly in the borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and partly in the county of Northumberland, up to the mouth of the river Whittader where that river flows into the Tweed, and also from the east end of the existing pier, two miles in a straight line in every direction along the coast and into the sea. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 2.

2. Compulsion and Exemption.

1757a. Pilotage within this district is not compulsory except for home-trade passenger ships not exempted under the

16. Port of Boston.

1. Generally.

1758. See 16 Geo. 3, c. 23; and 32 Geo. 3, c. 79, ss. 9 and 10; 5 Vict. sess. 2, c. lx.; Trinity House Regulations of 5th September, 1856; and Bye-laws. See also P. R. No. 516 of 1855, p. 88; No. 264 of 1877; No. 266 of 1878; No. 268 of 1879; and No. 325 of 1882.

1759. Definition of limits:—So much of the river Witham as runs from the grand sluice in Boston towards and into a certain place called the Scalp, and also the roads and all and singular the deeps commonly called the Norman Deepes, and also all manner of places and parts and watercourses and the streams of the washes near and in the parts of Holland extending to the haven or place called Wainfleet Haven, and to a certain place called Pullye Heads, and to another place or sand called the Knock, and to another place called the Dog's Head-in-the-Pot, and to the uttermost limits of the flowing and ebbing of those waters, and every of them, and adjoining to the sea and floods and streams of the borders and confines of the county of Norfolk. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 4; and Orders, Rules, and Bye-laws therein set out.

2. Compulsion and Exemption.

1759a. Pilotage is compulsory in this port on all vessels or barges conducted or piloted into and out of the port other than barges not exceeding the burthen of thirty chaldrons of coals, and vessels or barges in distress. See 16 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 7.*

17. Port of Bristol.

1. Generally.

1760. See 47 Geo. 3, c. xxxiii.; 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, ss. 59—61, 62; and the Bristol Dock Act, 1848 (c. xliii.).†

1760a. Definition of limits:—the limits of the port of Bristol are defined by the Wharfage Act of 1st August, 1807 (c. xxxiii.), to be the east of Lundy Island; and by the Justices of the Common Pleas Division, in the case of Hall v. Cardiff Pilotage Board, 18th November, 1879, that is defined to be "eastward of the meridional line from N. to S. through Lundy," which line is 4°40' W. longitude. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 6, and Bye-laws and Rates therein.

1761. The jurisdiction of the corporation of Bristol is extended to the appointment of pilots for conducting ships into, out of, and upon the whole of the Bristol Channel, and the several ports, harbours, and creeks belonging to and running from the same. See 47 Geo. 3, c. xxxiii. s. 1.

1762. The corporation of Bristol appoints, and licences and controls pilots within the port of Bristol. See the Bristol Dock Act, 1848 (c. xliii.), s. 66.

1763. For powers to the corporation to make and alter bye-laws to enforce the execution of the provisions of the act of 47 Geo. 3, c. xxxiii. see ibid. ss. 18 and 20. For similar powers as to the Bristol Dock Act, 1848 (c. xliii.), see ibid. ss. 13 and 67.

1764. A separate system of pilotage is established in the Bristol Channel in connection with the ports of Cardiff, Newport, and Gloucester, with boards for each of such ports, each of such boards being a "pilotage authority" within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854. See the Bristol Channel Pilotage Act, 1861 (c. ccxxxvi.) s. 17.

1765. A separate system of pilotage is similarly established for Penarth Harbour. Ibid. s. 18, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. cxxii. s. 72.

1766. The ports of Bridgwater and Neath, in the Bristol Channel, are not within the pilotage jurisdiction of the corporation of Bristol, but are included in the Outport District of the Trinity House, London. See, as to Bridgwater, 24 Vict. c. ccxxxvi. s. 11; 8 & 9 Vict. c. lxxxix. s. 76; and No. 1661, p. 1368; as to Neath, 6 & 7 Vict. c. lxxi. s. 187; and Nos. 1681, 1682, p. 1370; and as to Swansea, 17 & 18 Vict. c. cxxvi. s. 162; and c. 31, p. 1386.

* (525) For the bye-laws of 1st Jan. 1853, see Parliamentary Return as to Pilotage, No. 516 of 1855.

† (526) See also, as to this port, Parliamentary Return, No. 408 of 1867, and No. 325 of 1882, p. 6.

(527) As to the concurrent power of the Trinity House, London, to license pilots for the Bridgwater district, see Order in Council of 17th May, 1867, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 82.

1767. All Bristol Channel pilots licensed before July, 1861, to pilot vessels in that channel are authorized to pilot the like vessels within the same limits, i.e. as before the passing of this act, in the ports of Cardiff, Gloucester and Newport, without license from any of their boards. See the Bristol Channel Pilotage Act, 1861 (c. ccxxxvi.) s. 24.

1768. The Bristol Channel pilots, with respect to their pilotage of all ships bound to or from the ports of Newport, Cardiff, and Gloucester, are subject to the government and regulations of the board of the port to or from which any such vessel is bound, and to all bye-laws and regulations issued by it, and to the penalties annexed to the breach thereof, like pilots licensed by such board. Ibid. s. 25.

1769. Pilots licensed before July, 1861, for the several ports of Cardiff, Newport and Gloucester continue pilots for the ports for which they are licensed. Ibid. s. 26.

1770. For provisions requiring the pilotage authorities of Cardiff, Newport and Gloucester, by supplemental licence to authorize any such thenceforth Bristol Channel pilots to pilot any vessels within the ports under the control of those boards on their applying within a certain period, and passing the necessary examination, see ibid. s. 24.

1771. For similar provisions as to the thenceforth pilots of Cardiff, Newport or Gloucester, to act as pilots in those ports, see ibid. s. 26.

See also as to Penarth Harbour, c. 28, p. 1385.

2. Compulsion.

1772. All vessels navigating the Bristol Channel to the eastward of Lundy Island, except coasting vessels and Irish traders, must be piloted by pilots duly licensed by the corporation of the city of Bristol, by warrant under their corporate seal. Penalty for default, double pilotage, and £5 per ton on the vessel's burthen. See 47 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. xxxiii. s. 9.

1773. Any licensed pilot may supersede any unlicensed pilot in the charge of any ship within the limits before mentioned; and every master within those limits, who continues any person not licensed after a licensed pilot has offered to take charge, incurs a penalty not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 14.

1774. If any person having charge or pilotage of any vessel within the port of Bristol, not being a pilot licensed by the corporation of Bristol, does not, upon the approach of any licensed pilot, shorten sail for and take on board such pilot, and resign to him the charge of such vessel, penalty, not exceeding £10. See 11 & 12 Vict. c. xliii. s. 66.

1775. Pilotage is also compulsory (subject to the exemption in the next section) on all vessels navigating up and down the Bristol Channel to the E. of Lundy Island, in all cases where the provisions of 47 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. xxxiii. as modified by the following acts and any other similar acts, still apply: 25 & 26 Vict. c. ccxxxvi. ss. 4, 31 (see ports of Cardiff, Gloucester, and Newport. c. 18, infra); 6 & 7 Vict. c. lxxi. s. 187 (see Neath Trinity Outport District, c. 10, s. 23, p. 1370); 8 & 9 Vict. c. lxxxix. s. 76 (see Bridgwater Trinity Outport District, c. 10, s. 6, p. 1368); 17 & 18 Vict. c. cxxvi. s. 162 (see Swansea Pilotage District, c. 31, p. 1386); 19 & 20 Vict. c. cxxii. s. 72 (see port of Cardiff, c. 18, infra).

1776. Pilotage is payable by all vessels using the port, but those under 80 tons burthen pay a moiety only of the rates chargeable to those of 80 tons burthen, unless a pilot be required, when full rates are chargeable. See P. R. as to Pilotage, No. 408 of 1867, pp. 72, 73.

3. Exemption.*

1777. Nothing in this act extends to subject to any penalty any owner or master of any coasting vessel or Irish trader using the navigation of the Bristol Channel, or the rivers Severn or Avon, upwards or downwards, nor any owner or master of any other ship who employs any person or acts himself as pilot of his ship when a licensed pilot cannot be procured. See 47 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. xxxiii. s. 10.

1777a. Foreign vessels in the coasting trade are subject to the same rates as British vessels. See the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 141.

* (528) It would seem that pilotage in this district is not compulsory as regards vessels under 80 tons. See P. R. No. 516 of 1853, p. 96.

(529) But they must pay a moiety of the rates chargeable to vessels of 80 tons even if no pilot be employed. Ibid. No. 408 of 1867, p. 72.

18. Ports of Cardiff, Gloucester, and Newport, including Penarth.*

1. Generally.

1778. Definition of limits: The port of Cardiff and that portion of the Bristol Channel which lies E. of Lundy Island up to and including King Road, and the river Rhymney to Rhymney Bridge. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 10.

1779. That portion of the Bristol Channel which lies E. of Lundy Island, including the river Severn to the city of Gloucester, and the river Wye to Chepstow Bridge. Ibid. p. 16.

1780. That portion of the Bristol Channel which lies to the E. of Lundy Island up to and including King Road and the river Usk, as far as Caerleon Bridge. Ibid. p. 86.

1781. For bye-laws, rates, and regulations of these ports, see as to Cardiff, P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 10, and No. 222 of 1884, p. 5; as to Gloucester, P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 16; and as to Newport, Ibid. p. 86; and as to all of them, P. R. No. 276 of 1875, pp. 43, 67 and 72.

1782. A separate system of pilotage is established in the Bristol Channel for the ports of Cardiff, Newport, and Gloucester, with boards for each of such ports, each of such boards being a "pilotage authority" within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). See the Bristol Channel Pilotage Act, 1861 (c. ccxxxvi.).

2. Exemption.

1783. It is not obligatory on the master of any vessel bound to or from any of the ports of Cardiff, Newport, or Gloucester, other than a ship carrying passengers, to employ a pilot, so long as such vessel is navigated by the master or any officer thereof. Ibid. s. 31.

1784. No person, except the master of the vessel, shall act as pilot in navigating any vessel upon the canal who has not received a licence to do so from the directors of the company, and no master of any vessel shall employ any person, other than a pilot licensed by the directors of the company, to navigate or direct the movements of any vessel upon the canal. See Bye-laws of the Gloucester and Berkeley Canal Co., confirmed 27 January, 1871, No. 23.

1785. Masters of vessels are not compelled to employ a pilot on the canal; but if any person be employed in that capacity it must be one of the licensed pilots. The company will not be responsible for any damage done to or by any vessel whilst in the charge of a licensed pilot. Ibid.

1785a. The 10s. 6d. per day to which a licensed pilot taken without his consent to sea, or beyond the limits of his pilotage district in any ship, is entitled by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 357, are not "pilotage dues" for which the ship brokers are liable under s. 363. Mortco v. Julian, 4 C. P. D. 216.

19. Port of Chester.

1786. Definition of limits of pilotage district: From Great Orme's Head to Chester. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 15; and for bye-laws, rules, and regulations, Ibid. No. 222 of 1884, p. 9; and as to the constitution of the port the Point of Ayr Lighthouse Act, 16 Geo. 3, c. 61.

1787. Pilotage is made compulsory on all inward-bound vessels boarded to the West of Chester Bar, except coasting vessels, Irish vessels, and vessels in distress. See 16 Geo. 3, c. 61, s. 44. As to outward-bound vessels, Ibid. ss. 24, 37; the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 354, 362; the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 141; and 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 122.

20. Port of Clay, or Blakeney (Norfolk).

1788. Definition of limits: From harbour to sea, see P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 3.

1788a. For constitution, bye-laws, and regulations, see 57 Geo. 3, c. lxx. ss. 25, 45—50; and P. R. No. 266 of 1878 and No. 325 of 1882.

1788b. The pilotage in this port is compulsory except for exempted ships. An exemption is made in favour of ships under fifty tons, or in distress. See 53 Geo. 3, c. lxx. s. 46; and 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 120.

* (530) Penarth is now included in the Cardiff pilotage district, and two of the members of the Cardiff Pilotage Board are now appointed by the Penarth Harbour Dock and Railway Co. P. R. No. 276 of 1875; 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 121, note; and see c. 28, p. 1385.

21. Port of Douglas, Isle of Man.*

1789. For the constitution of this port, see 54 Geo. 3, c. 143; and the Isle of Man Harbour Act, 1872 (c. 23), s. 12.

1790. For the bye-laws as to pilotage for this port, see P. R. as to pilotage, No. 408 of 1867, p. 79.

1791. Pilotage is not compulsory in this port. Ibid.

22. Port of Hartlepool.

1792. Definition of limits: The Bay of Hartlepool inside an imaginary line drawn from Black Hall Rocks, about three miles north of Hartlepool, to a point about two miles south of the river Tees. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 25.

1793. Separate pilotage commissioners are constituted for this port. See the Hartlepool Pilotage Order, 1864 (c. 58), Sched.

1794. Nothing in this order obliges the owner or master of any vessel to employ any pilot in piloting such vessel within the Hartlepool pilotage district, if he is not desirous so to do. Ibid. s. 16.†

1795. See, also, as to the bye-laws and regulations of this port, P. R. No. 269 of 1877, and No. 325 of 1882.

See also No. 1746, p. 1375.

23. Port of Hastings.

1796. Hastings is one of the Cinque Ports, which are a pilotage authority and a local authority, within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), with all the powers by that act conferred on pilotage authorities and on local authorities. See Provisional Order of the Board of Trade as to the Hastings Pier and Harbour Company, cited in the Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Act, 1862 (c. 51), s. 26.

1797. As to the limits of this harbour, see the Hastings Harbour (Alexandra Pier) Order, 1866 (s. 31).

1798. All pilotage in this port is voluntary. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39.

24. Port of King's Lynn.

1. Generally.

1799. Definition of limits: Into and out of the port of King's Lynn, or between St. Edmund's Ness, otherwise Gore End, and a certain place called Staple Ware, being the utmost bounds southwards of the jurisdiction of the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of King's Lynn. In practice the pilots conduct between Lynn Harbour southwards and the Bell Buoy in Lynn Lower Roads northwards. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 20.

1800. For constitution, bye-laws and regulations, see 13 Geo. 3, c. 30; 4 & 5 Vict. c. xlvii; Bye-Laws of 4th Feb. 1831; and P. R. No. 516 of 1855, p. 138; No. 204 of 1874, p. 12; No. 325 of 1882, p. 20; and No. 222 of 1884, p. 17.

2. Compulsion.

1801. The pilotage is compulsory for all vessels above thirty tons, builder's measurement, lighters or barges in ballast, and vessels or barges in distress. See 13 Geo. 3, c. 30; 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 122.

1802. All vessels shall be piloted as far down as the Bell Buoy. See P. R. No. 243 of 1865, p. 62.‡

1803. Inward-bound vessels must, if practicable, be boarded by pilots at the Bell Buoy. Ibid. p. 13.

1804. Semble, therefore inward pilotage commences and outward pilotage ceases at the Bell Buoy. Ibid.

* (531) So much of any general act for the time being in force as relates to pilotage shall extend to the Isle of Man. See the Isle of Man Harbour Act, 1872 (c. 23), s. 12.

(532) The pilotage, therefore, on the Harbour Commissioners exercising their powers under the above act, c. 23, s. 12, will apparently become compulsory for home-trade ships carrying passengers, and not having a certificated master or mate. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 354; and 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 122.

† (533) There has been no decision as to the construction of this provision with the 41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi. s. 6, and the 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 141, or with the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 354. See 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 119; and note (d) thereto.

‡ (534) This provision, however, is not repeated in terms in the later bye-laws, but No. 23 provides that pilots appointed to pilot vessels down the channel shall not, unless by permission of the masters, leave them before arriving at the Bell Buoy. See P. R. as to Pilotage, No. 204 of 1874, p. 12.

3. Exemption.

1805. The pilotage is optional for inward-bound vessels having arrived "without a pilot" within the Marsh Cut Banks. Note to 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 122.

1806. All vessels, whether inward or outward bound, to or from Lynn, are exempt from the payment of pilotage if unable to procure a pilot, and if any vessel arrives within the Marsh Cut Banks without a pilot, the employment of a pilot is optional. See P. R. No. 204 of 1874, p. 13.

1807. See also such exemptions as are applicable in Nos. 1574—1642, pp. 1361—1366.

25. Port of Lancaster.

1. Generally.

1808. Definition of limits: Inwards—within imaginary lines from Morecambe Bay Light vessel to Formby Point and Haverrigg Point respectively. Outwards—Glasson Dock to No. 1 Buoy or Danger Patch Buoy as required by masters of vessels. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 59; and for Bye-Laws and Regulations, Ibid.

1809. For the constitution, bye-laws and regulations of the port, see 47 Geo. 3, c. xxxvii; Bye-Laws of 24th Jan. 1809; and P. R. No. 516 of 1855, p. 142; No. 408 of 1865, p. 86; No. 266 of 1878; and No. 325 of 1882, p. 59.

2. Compulsion.

1810. Pilotage is compulsory on vessels sailing into, out of, or within the port of Lancaster or the River Lune. Penalty, full pilotage. See P. R. No. 408 of 1865, p. 86.

3. Exemption.

1811. Vessels in ballast and coasting vessels under 100 tons burthen are exempt. Ibid. See also such exemptions as are applicable in c. 9, Nos. 1574—1642, pp. 1361—1366; and M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 41, in c. 9, p. 1363.

26. Port of Liverpool.

1. *Generally.

1812. Definition of limits of pilotage district: Compulsory inward pilotage extends from the Middle Mouse on the coast of Anglesey to the River Mersey; and compulsory outward pilotage from the Mersey to the Fairway buoys of the sea channels of the Mersey. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 61.

1813. For provisions as to pilotage in relation to the Liverpool and Birkenhead Docks, and the port and harbour of Liverpool, see the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), Pt. VI. ss. 118—164.

1814. As to the terms master, owner, pilot, and vessel, Ibid. s. 3.

1815. Every pilot taking charge of any vessel must, if so required by the master, pilot such vessel, if sailing out of the port of Liverpool, through the Queen's Channel, so far to the westward as the Formby north-west buoy, or Fairway buoy of the Queen's Channel; and if sailing through the Rock Channel, so far to the westward as the north-west buoy of Hoyle. Ibid. s. 127.

1816. If the master of any vessel requires the attendance of a pilot on board during her riding at anchor, or being at Hoylake, or in the Mersey, the pilot so employed is to be paid five shillings, and no more, for every day or portion of a day he so attends; but the pilot who shall have the charge of any vessel shall be paid for every day of his attendance whilst in the river. No such charge shall be made for the day on which the vessel, being outward bound, leaves the Mersey to commence her voyage, or being inward bound, enters the Mersey. Ibid. s. 138.

1817. If any vessel is in want of and unable to obtain a pilot, the pilot on board any other vessel going into or coming out of the port of Liverpool, may lead the way for, and conduct the vessel into or out of the port, and the master of any vessel so piloted shall pay the same rates of pilotage as if the pilot had actually been on board his own vessel. Ibid. s. 126.

1818. The Mersey Docks Act, 1881 (c. xlix), makes further provision as to the pilotage service of the port of Liverpool, and for controlling the working, &c. of pilots and pilot vessels and boats.

* (535) The following acts of Parliament relate to pilotage of the port of Liverpool:—37 Geo. 3, c. 78; 5 Geo. 4, c. lxxiii; The Mersey Docks and Harbour Act, 1857 (c. clxii);

The Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii); the Mersey Docks Act, 1864 (c. ccxiii); and the Mersey Docks Act, 1881 (c. xlix).

1819. The pilot in charge of any inward-bound vessel must cause the same (if need be) to be properly moored at anchor in the Mersey, and pilot her into some one of the wet docks within the port of Liverpool, whether belonging to the Board or not, without making any additional charge for so doing, unless his attendance is required on board the vessel while at anchor in the river Mersey and before going into dock, in which case he is entitled to five shillings per day for such attendance. See the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), s. 128; P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 69; and Bye-law 128.

1820. The 138th section of the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii.), which provides in certain cases of extra attendance for additional remuneration to pilots, does not relate only to pilots who are voluntarily engaged, but a pilot who is compulsorily engaged under the 139th section of the act, may, by the ship's detention in the river, become entitled to extra remuneration under the 138th section. The City of Cambridge, L. R. 5 P. C. 451; L. R. 4 A. & E. 161; 43 L. J. Adm. 11; Ibid. P. C. 72; 2 Asp. N.S. 193, 239.

1821. Semble, the channel near the Bell buoy, outside the Queen's Channel leading into the port of Liverpool, is not a narrow channel within the meaning of the 297th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), repealed by M. S. Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 2, but re-enacted in the Sea Collision Rules of 1879, for which see tit. COLLISION, Pt. VIII. p. 273; and in the Mersey Channels Act, 37 & 38 Vict. c. 52, s. 1. The Meander and The Florence Nightingale, 1 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 63.

1822. The bye-laws and regulations now regulating pilotage in this port are those contained in P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 61, and those contained in No. 207 of 1883, p. 34. The latter came into force on the 1st of June, 1882, and repeal all previous bye-laws made under the authority of the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Acts, 1858.

2. Compulsion.

(a) Generally.

1823. The provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 353, are extended to the Liverpool Pilotage District, but without prejudice to the exemption conferred by the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), s. 130, on inward-bound coasting vessels under the burden of 100 tons. See the Mersey Docks Act, 1864 (c. ccxiii), s. 7.

1824. If the master of any vessel, outward bound and not being a coasting vessel in ballast, nor under the burthen of 100 tons, proceeds to sea and refuses to employ a pilot; penalty full pilotage and expenses. See the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), s. 139.

1825. If the master of any inward-bound vessel, other than a coasting vessel in ballast or under the burthen of 100 tons, refuses to employ a pilot who has offered his services; penalty full pilotage. Ibid. s. 130.

1826. The master of every inward-bound vessel liable to pilotage must, on coming within the pilot stations fixed by the bye-laws, display and keep flying the usual signal for a pilot to come on board; penalty for default not exceeding £5. Ibid. s. 129.

1827. And if any pilot comes within a reasonable distance of such vessel, the master must render all necessary assistance (so far as consistent with the safety of such vessel), to enable such pilot to come on board. Ibid.

1828. The compulsion to employ a pilot is till the completion of the voyage, or so long as the pilot is bound to perform services. The Annapolis and Johanna Stoll, 30 L. J. Adm. 201; 4 L. T. N.S. 423; 1 Lushington, 295; 1 Asp. 69.

1829. A foreign vessel inward bound for Liverpool is required by 21 & 22 Vict. c. xcii. ss. 129, 130, to make a signal for a licensed pilot on coming to the usual pilot station, and to employ the first pilot offering his services. Ibid.

1830. An inward-bound vessel conducted by a pilot into the port of Liverpool, and anchoring in the Mersey, is required by 21 & 22 Vict. c. xcii. s. 128, to employ the pilot in removing from the river into dock. Ibid.

1831. A foreign vessel, bound for Liverpool, took a pilot off Point Lynas, was brought to anchor in the Mersey and there lay two or three days, waiting for want of water to dock. She was then conducted by the same pilot into dock. In proceeding towards the dock, a collision was occasioned by the pilot's default. Held, that the pilotage was compulsory, and that the vessel was therefore not liable for the damage. Ibid.

1832. The pilot had been taken on board to pilot the vessel to the Queen's Docks at Liverpool, and the ship having arrived in the Mersey too late by reason of the tide to enter the Queen's Docks, she was anchored off the Albert Docks till next tide. She then proceeded to the Queen's Docks, and on her way the collision occurred. Held, that she was bound to have a pilot on board, and that the engagement with him did not terminate on the ship's anchoring off the Albert Dock. The Montreal, 17 Jur. 538; 1 Spinks' Ecll. & Adm. Rep. 154.

1833. In the 128th section of the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii.), the words "unless," &c. do not restrict the meaning of the 129th and 130th sections, so as to render it less compulsory upon the owner to employ a pilot to dock the ship, or upon the pilot to perform such service. The Annapolis and Johanna Stoll, 4 L. T. N.S. 423; 1 Lushington, 295; 30 L. J. Adm. 201.

1834. By the Liverpool Act, 37 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 24 (since repealed), the master of a vessel inward bound was liable to pay pilotage if he refused to take a pilot. Held, that such a vessel was, upon general principles, and under that act, and the 55th section of the General Pilot Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, compellable to take a pilot, and that her owners were therefore not responsible for his acts. Carruthers v. Sidebottom, 4 Maule & Selwyn, 77.

1835. See the apparent contradiction between this case and The Att-Gen. v. Chase, explained in The Maria, 1 W. Rob. 102.

1836. A vessel sailed from Calcutta and arrived in London, where she discharged her cargo, and thence proceeded in ballast to Liverpool. Held, that the original voyage was not so completed by her arrival and delivery of cargo in London as to admit of the voyage from London to Liverpool being considered as a coasting voyage within the meaning of the Liverpool Pilot Act (5 Geo. 4, c. lxxiii), s. 25; that, therefore, under that act the master of such a ship, though in ballast, was compellable to take a pilot on entering the port of Liverpool; and that the owners were, therefore, exempted from responsibility for a collision occasioned by the default of the pilot only. The Agricola, 2 W. Rob. 10; 7 Jur. 157.

1837. A vessel ordinarily occupied in the foreign trade going from Liverpool to London in order to sail from London on such foreign trade, without passengers, but having on board a cargo shipped at Liverpool, and deliverable at London, is not "a ship employed in the coasting trade of the United Kingdom" within the meaning of the 379th section of the M. S. Act, and is compellable to take a pilot. The John Mowlem v. The Lloyd's or Sea Queen, 2 N. R. 497; 9 L. T. N.S. 236; 32 L. J. Adm. 97.

1838. A vessel, in order that she might be ready to cross the bar of the Mersey on the morning tide, was brought out of dock over-night in charge of a pilot, and was anchored in the river. During the night she drifted, and came into collision with another vessel. Held, by the Privy Council, affirming the decision of the Court of Admiralty, that the vessel was "proceeding to sea" within the meaning of sect. 139 of the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), and that, therefore, the employment of the pilot at the time of the collision was compulsory by law. The City of Cambridge, No. 1820, supra.

1839. A barque came out of dock into the Mersey with a pilot on board, and anchored ready to be towed to sea the next morning. While the barque was still at anchor, an accident happened to her mainyard, which would have taken two days to repair. The tug was accordingly sent away. A collision having occurred shortly afterwards, held, that the barque was not proceeding to sea within the meaning of the Mersey Docks Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), s. 139, and was not under compulsory pilotage. The Cachapool, 7 P. D. 217; 4 Asp. 502.

1840. An inward-bound vessel in charge of a pilot coming to anchor in the Mersey, and remaining at anchor several days, does not continue during that time to be in charge of a pilot by compulsion of law. The Woburn Abbey, 38 L. J. Adm. 28; 3 Asp. 240.

1841. The W. A., an inward-bound vessel in charge of a pilot, came to anchor in the Mersey, and gave the B. T. a foul berth. The master of the W. A. knew that his vessel was improperly anchored, and after several days the vessels, in swinging to the tide, came into collision. Held, that the W. A. was not, at the time of the collision, in charge of a pilot by compulsion of law. Ibid.

1842. A pilot was compulsorily employed to take a vessel into dock. Owing to the weather the vessel was anchored outside the dock in the Mersey. While she was so anchored a collision took place. Held, that the pilot was, at the time, in charge by compulsion of law. The Prince-ton, 3 P. D. 90; 3 Asp. N.S. 562; 47 L. J. P. D. & A. 33.

See also No. 1475, p. 1351, and No. 1812, supra.

(b) Ships, one or both Foreign.

1843. Objection that the 129th and 130th sections of the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), do not apply to a foreign ship so as to render the taking of a pilot off Point Lynas compulsory upon her owners, overruled. The Annapolis and Johanna Stoll, 4 L. T. N.S. 421; 30 L. J. Adm. 201; 1 Lushington, 295.

1844. A foreign vessel inward bound for Liverpool is required by the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), ss. 129, 130, to make a signal for a licensed pilot on coming to the usual pilot station, and to employ the first pilot offering his services. Ibid.

1845. Every vessel, whether British or foreign, lying in the Mersey inward bound, is required by the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), s. 128, to employ a pilot in removing from the river into dock. Ibid.

1846. A foreign vessel bound for Liverpool took a pilot off Point Lynas, was brought to anchor in the Mersey, and there lay two or three days waiting, for want of water, to dock. She was then conducted by the same pilot into dock. In proceeding towards the dock a collision was occasioned solely by the pilot's default. Held, that the ship and her owners were not liable for the damage. Ibid.

3. Exemption.

1847. The master of any coasting vessel in ballast, or under the burthen of 100 tons, may pilot his vessel into or out of the port of Liverpool. See the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. xcii), s. 141.

1848. See as to the exemption of vessels in distress, 21 & 22 Vict. c. xiii; and also the exemptions contained in M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 353, 354, 362; the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 41, and 39 & 40 Vict. c. 63, s. 141, in c. 9, Nos. 1574—1642, pp. 1361—1366.

1849. Such of the exemptions from compulsory pilotage under 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, as may be applicable, together with such other exemptions, if any, as existed before the 10th August, 1854 (and for which see c. 9, s. 3, p. 1360), are also in force within this district. See the Mersey Docks Act, 1864 (c. cxxiii), s. 7.

1850. The Liverpool Pilot Act, 5 Geo. 4 (c. lxxiii), s. 35 (now repealed), enacted, that in case the master of any ship outward bound should proceed to sea, and refuse to employ a licensed pilot, such master should pay the pilot, who first offered his services, and was so refused, the same pilotage as if the pilot had been employed in piloting the vessel out of the port, and all expenses incurred in the recovery of the same. A ship left the Liverpool Docks with a pilot on the 2nd December. On the 3rd the plaintiff was engaged to raise an anchor of the ship, lost in the river, and in doing so, by some mismanagement of those on board, the plaintiff's boat alongside was sunk. At the time of the accident the ship was at anchor in the Mersey; was in the service of the Post-office, and was under contract to sail on the following day, but the master was not on board, and the riggers were engaged in completing her rigging. Held (assuming that under the act an outward-bound vessel, when proceeding to sea, is bound to take a pilot), that under the circumstances this ship was not at the time proceeding to sea. Rodrigues v. Melhuish, 10 Exch. 110; 24 L. J. Exch. 26; 23 L. T. 177.

1851. By the 31st and 34th sections of the Liverpool Act (37 Geo. 3, c. 78, since repealed), it was provided that any vessel, whilst lying at anchor in the Mersey, might require a pilot to remain on board on payment of five shillings a day for his services. Held, that the so taking a pilot was optional, and that the owners were therefore responsible for his acts. Att.-Gen. v. Case, 3 Price, 302.*

1851a. See also such exemptions as are applicable in c. 9, s. 3, Nos. 1574—1642, pp. 1361—1366.

See also Nos. 1839, 1840 and 1841, supra.

27. Port of Llanelly.1. Generally.

1852. Definition of limits of pilotage district: All vessels bound in over Burry Bar shall hoist a pilot signal immediately they pass a line drawn from the Helwick Lightship to Caldly Light. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 78; Bye-Law 3.

1853. As to the constitution, &c. of this port, see the Burry Navigation and Llanelly Harbour Act, 1858 (c. lxxii.); 27 & 28 Vict. c. cciii.; and 41 & 42 Vict. c. lxxxiii.

1854. For the bye-laws regulating pilotage in this port, see P. R. No. 516 of 1855, p. 160; No. 244 of 1859, p. 82; No. 287 of 1860, p. 81; No. 243 of 1861, p. 76; No. 408 of 1867; and No. 325 of 1882.

1855. Pilots must remain in charge until the vessels are properly moored. Ibid. Bye-Law 23.

2. Compulsion.

1856. (1) All vessels with cargoes, and all vessels above 40 tons register in ballast, bound over the bar of Burry inwards; and (2) all vessels of 30 tons register and upwards in ballast, shall employ the first licensed pilot that offers. Ibid. No. 325 of 1882, p. 78; Bye-Law 1.

1857. Vessels requiring assistance in moving within the port must employ a licensed pilot, if one offers his services. Ibid. Bye-Law 5.

3. Exemption.

1858. Vessels in ballast under 50 tons register, being inward bound, and vessels with cargoes under 30 tons, or in ballast under 50 tons, are exempt. Ibid. Bye-Law 1; and P. R. No. 408 of 1867, p. 98.

1859. Any master unable to procure a pilot to take his vessel out is entitled to repayment of the outward pilotage paid in advance. Ibid. Bye-Law 7.

1860. See also such exemptions as are applicable in c. 9, s. 3, Nos. 1574—1642, pp. 1361—1366; and the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 41, No. 1605, p. 1364.

28. Penarth Harbour.1. Generally.*

1861. The harbour means that part of the river Ely (lying between a point 46 chains or thereabouts below Cogan Pill and a point 144 chains or thereabouts above the Pill, measured in both cases along the centre of the river) which is by this act authorized to be improved for the purpose of a tidal harbour. The limits of this act mean the harbour, and that portion of the river which lies between Cardiff Roads and the harbour, and also the entrance thereto. See the Ely Tidal Harbour and Railway Act, 1856 (c. cxxii.), s. 2, repealed by the Bristol Channel Pilotage Act, 1861 (c. ccxxxvi.), s. 21.

1862. The Penarth Harbour Company is, as a pilotage board, amalgamated with the Cardiff Pilotage Board, and the district of Penarth Harbour is therefore included by that act in the port of Cardiff. See the Bristol Channel Pilotage Act, 1861 (c. ccxxxvi.), ss. 3, 5, and 21, and note 530, p. 1379.

2. Exemption.

1863. Pilotage is not compulsory within the districts created by this act, and which include the port of Cardiff, and therefore, notwithstanding sect. 9 of 47 Geo. 3, c. xxxiii. pilotage is not compulsory in the district of Penarth Harbour. See the British Channel Pilotage Act, 1881 (c. ccxxxvi.), s. 31; and c. 18, p. 1379.

29. Port of Porthcawl.†

1864. The limits of the Porthcawl pilotage district seawards are the Sker

* (537) No returns are furnished, nor information given as to bye-laws and regulations by this pilotage authority under the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 337.

† (538) The bye-laws contain no express provisions for compulsory pilotage. See P. R. No. 268 of 1879, p. 44.

(538a) But a saving clause to one of the bye-laws declares that "nothing therein contained shall affect the provisions of 47 p.

Geo. 3, c. 33, which relate to the exemption from compulsory pilotage of coasting vessels and Irish traders." Ibid.

and Nash Points and inside sands to the harbour. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 90.

1865. See for the bye-laws regulating pilotage in this district, Ibid.; and No. 268 of 1879, p. 44.

1866. See also for constitution and bye-laws of this port, 6 Geo. 4, c. civ.; 18 Vict. c. 1.; and Bye-laws of 27th Feb. 1857, approved by Order in Council of 6th May, 1857; also Order in Council, 27th Nov. 1878; P. R. No. 174 of 1858, p. 88; No. 268 of 1879; and No. 325 of 1882.

30. Port of Southwold.

1. Generally.

1866*a*. Definition of limits of pilotage district: In and out of Southwold Harbour; and for constitution and bye-laws of this port, see 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. xlviii. ss. 63—68; and for rates, P. R. No. 204 of 1874, Appendix; and No. 222 of 1884, p. 54.

2. Compulsion and Exemption.

1866*b*. The pilotage is compulsory for all vessels above forty tons register tonnage (see the act, s. 64), subject to such exemptions as are applicable in Nos. 1574—1642, pp. 1361—1366; and 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 141. See 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 124.

31. Port of Sunderland.

1. Generally.

1867. Separate pilotage commissioners are constituted for the port of Sunderland. See the Sunderland Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1865 (c. 59).

1868. The pilotage district of the port for the purposes of this order extends from the promontory or point called Souter Point, about two miles on the north side, to Ryhope Dene, about two miles on the south side of the harbour of Sunderland. Ibid. s. 8.

1869. For the bye-laws regulating pilotage in this district, see P. R. No. 260 of 1872, pp. 21 et seq.; No. 276 of 1875 and No. 325 of 1882, p. 92 (repealing previous bye-laws). See also Orders in Council, 29th June, 1871; 26th June, 1873; 20th Oct. 1874; and c. 13, p. 1375.

1870. See also Order in Council of June 29th, 1882, approving Bye-laws of Sunderland Pilotage Commissioners.

2. Exemption.

1871. Nothing in this act obliges the owner or master of any vessel to employ any pilot in piloting such vessel into or out of the port, if he is not desirous so to do, or to pay any pilotage dues when not employing a pilot. See the Sunderland Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1865 (c. 59), s. 14.*

32. Port of Swansea.

1. Generally.†

1872. Definition of limits:—Swansea harbour and so much of the Bristol Channel as is included within the following limits, viz.: “north of the line of the Nash Lights in one,” and east of an imaginary line running north and south of a point four miles west of Helwick Light, near Worms Head. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 98.

1873. As to the constitution and bye-laws of this port, see the Swansea Harbour Act, 1854 (c. cxxvi.) ss. 154—162, 166, 175; Bye-laws of Swansea Harbour Trustees; P. R. No. 5, Sess. 2 of 1857, p. 89; No. 288 of 1860, p. 83; No. 243 of 1861, p. 81; No. 416 of 1864, p. 73; No. 178 of 1871; No. 325 of 1882, p. 98; and No. 222 of 1884, p. 57.

1874. The Swansea Harbour Trustees are the pilotage authority for this port under the provisions of the Swansea Harbour Act, 1854 (c. cxxvi.)

1875. For the regulations as to pilotage made by this authority, see P. R. as to Pilotage, No. 178 of 1871, p. 27; No. 325 of 1882, p. 98; and No. 222 of 1884, p. 57.

* (540) There has been no decision as to the construction of this provision with 41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi. s. 6, and 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 141, or the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 354. See 2 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 119.

† (541) For bye-laws providing for and regulating the granting of pilotage certificates for this district to masters and mates, see P. R. as to Pilotage, No. 178 of 1871, p. 29.

2. Compulsion.

1876. Pilotage is compulsory for all vessels exceeding sixty tons register, inward or outward bound. See P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 57, Bye-law 3.

1877. Masters requiring to move their vessels within the limits of the port (except from one part of the float to another) must employ a pilot. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 98, Bye-law 21.

3. *Exemption.

1878. Vessels in ballast inward bound, not exceeding 100 tons burthen, are exempt, subject to the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 97, note to Bye-law 3.

33. The Tyne.

1. Generally.

1879. Separate pilotage commissioners are constituted for the pilotage district of the Tyne (exercising the jurisdiction therein formerly possessed by the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne). See the Tyne Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1865 (c. 44); and the Tyne Pilotage Amendment Act, 1867 (c. 78).

1880. The pilotage district of the Tyne, for the purposes of the above order, includes the whole River Tyne, and extends seaward over a radius of seven miles. Ibid. s. 10.

1881. For the bye-laws and rates regulating pilotage in this district, see P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 102 (rescinding all previous bye-laws as from the 1st Oct. 1880).

1882. From and after 1st Oct. 1880, the distinction between sea and river pilots is abolished. Ibid. Bye-law 3.

1883. Thenceforth there shall be only one class of pilots, who may conduct ships of any tonnage. Ibid.

1884. Penalty against any pilot for breach of any of the bye-laws not exceeding £5. Ibid. Bye-law 23.

1885. For bye-laws as to apprenticeship and examination of pilots, see Ibid. Bye-laws 9—14. See also c. 13, p. 1375.

2. Exemption.

1886. Nothing in this act extends to oblige the owner or master of any vessel to employ any pilot in piloting his vessel into or out of the district, or within any part thereof, if he is not desirous so to do, or to pay any pilotage dues when not employing a pilot. Ibid. s. 16.†

34. The Tees.

1. Generally.

1887. The Tees Pilotage Commissioners are incorporated by the Tees Pilotage Order, 1881, as a pilotage authority. See the Tees Pilotage Order, 1881, confirmed by the Tees Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1882 (c. 1); and P. R. No. 207 of 1883, p. 53.

1888. The pilotage district of the Tees includes the whole of the river Tees, and the ports of Stockton and Middlesborough, and extends from the southernmost end of the village of Seaton Carew to Huntcliffe, in Yorkshire. See s. 9 of the Order in the Schedule to the Act.

1889. All the bye-laws and rules previously in force within the district are repealed. See Bye-laws of 26th June, 1882, approved by Order in Council of December 16th, 1882.

1890. There shall be two classes of pilots, viz., first and second class. First-class pilots may conduct vessels of any tonnage; second-class pilots may only (except in cases of necessity) conduct vessels not exceeding 400 tons register. Ibid. Bye-law 3.

1891. Every pilot shall, within three years from the passing of the bye-laws, qualify himself to pilot vessels up to Stockton Bridge. Ibid.

1891a. For the rates of pilotage to be taken by both classes of pilots, see ibid. p. 56.

2. Exemption.

1892. Pilotage in the Tees is not compulsory. See the Tees Pilotage Order, 1881, supra, s. 15.

* (542) See also such exemptions as are applicable in c. 9, s. 3, Nos. 1574—1642, pp. 1361—1366.

35. Scotch Ports.

1. Aberdeen.(a) Generally.

1893. Limits of pilotage district:—

The harbour of Aberdeen and so far as not within the limits thereof as therein-before defined, the rivers Dee and Don upon both sides thereof, the coast between these rivers, and the coast south from the mouth of the river Dee to the extremity of the city's precincts or boundary on the Torry or south side of the river Dee: provided that on the river Dee being diverted, as authorized by the Aberdeen Harbour Act, 1868 (c. cxxxviii.), this enactment shall extend and apply to the river so diverted. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 111.

1894. For the constitution, bye-laws, and rates of this port, see 31 & 32 Vict. c. cxxxvii. ss. 153—143; and P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 111, and No. 222 of 1884, p. 65.

1895. All inward-bound vessels must employ the first pilot who offers his services. Penalty, full pilotage. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 111; Bye-law 17.

1896. The pilot who first offers himself to a vessel in want of a pilot is entitled to the pilotage dues whether his services be accepted or not, unless another arrangement has been entered into with the sanction of the captain pilot. Ibid.

(c) Exemption.

1897. Semble, pilotage is optional for outward-bound vessels. Ibid.

2. Arbroath or Aberbrothwick.(a) Generally.

1898. Limits of district:—The pilots are licensed for the harbour only. Ibid. p. 109.

1899. For constitution, regulations and rates of this port, see 2 & 3 Vict. c. xvi. s. 67; 27 & 28 Vict. c. xxxiii.; and P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 109.

1900. For provisions relieving vessels which from stress of weather have entered this port without a pilot, but have received a pilot in the fairway, from warping or pilot's charges other than the pilotage dues. Ibid. p. 32; Rule 7.

1901. A pilot so received on board any such vessel must remain on board until she is safely moored. Ibid.

(b) Compulsion.

1902. Pilotage is levied on all vessels using the harbour whether inward or outward bound. Ibid. p. 109; Rule 1.

1902a. Limits of district: The harbour of Ayr and the bed and channel of the river Ayr, and from the harbour to the bay of Ayr. See 18 & 19 Vict. c. cxix. s. 13.

3. Ayr.(a) Generally.

1903. For the constitution, bye-laws, and rates of this port, see 18 & 19 Vict. c. cxix. ss. 47, 48, 51, 82; 36 Vict. c. li.; and P. R. No. 189 of 1880, p. 53; No. 325 of 1882, p. 115.

1904. For provisions as to the granting and renewal of pilotage certificates to masters of vessels, see P. R. No. 189 of 1880, p. 53.

1905. Pilots not engaged in navigating vessels over the bar must assist in moving vessels and in transporting them from one berth to another. Ibid. No. 325 of 1882, p. 115; Bye-law 46.

(b) Compulsion.

1906. All vessels of forty tons burthen or upwards must pay pilotage, if pilotage assistance has been duly offered, whether the pilots be employed or not. Ibid. No. 189 of 1880, p. 53.

(c) Exemption.

1907. Vessels under forty tons register are exempt. Ibid.

1908. Vessels whose masters have obtained and held pilotage certificates in accordance with the regulations are also exempt. Ibid.

3a. Port of Burntisland.

1909. The limits of the district are defined as including the harbour and extending to a distance of one mile and a half W. of the harbour, and to the island of Inchkeith E. thereof, and for a distance from the land of one mile N. of those limits. The Burntisland Harbour Act, 1881 (c. clix.), s. 82.

1910. The Burntisland Harbour Commissioners are incorporated as a pilotage authority by the Burntisland Harbour Act, 1881 (c. clix.). See P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 67.

1910a. No shipmaster or other person shall be bound to employ a pilot, either inwards or outwards. Ibid. Regulation 2.

1911. No harbour pilot already licensed shall (unless he holds a Leith Trinity House Firth pilot's licence) proceed in search of vessels or go on board thereof at any place beyond one mile and a half W. of the harbour, and to the island of Inchkeith E. thereof, and for a distance from the land of one mile S. of those limits; and no Firth pilot shall be entitled to go on board any vessel within those limits unless for the purpose of pilotage in the Firth and at full Firth pilotage fees. Ibid. Regulation 7.

1912. See for qualifications for pilots, Ibid. Supplementary Bye-Laws.

1913. See also Order in Council of 3rd Nov. 1882, approving bye-laws relating to pilotage in the harbour of Burntisland.

4. The Clyde (including Glasgow and Greenock).

(a) Generally.

1914. Limits of pilotage district: The harbour of Glasgow includes, for the purposes of the Clyde Navigation Acts, the channel or waterway, docks, and works of the river Clyde to the east of the river Kelvin and to the west of Huncheson-town Bridge; and the river Clyde includes for the same purposes the channel of the river as far down as to a straight line drawn from the east end of Newark Castle on the south shore of the river to the mouth of Cardross Burn on the north shore of the river. See the Clyde Navigation Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. cxlix.), ss. 74, 75.

1915. See for provisions generally as to pilots in the Clyde, ibid. ss. 128 to 144.

1916. The principal acts regulating the navigation of the Clyde are the Clyde Navigation Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. cxlix.); the Clyde Navigation (Glasgow Harbour Tramways) Act, 1864 (c. ccxlviii.); the Clyde Navigation Amendment Act, 1868 (c. cxxiv.); the Clyde Navigation (Stobcross Dock) Act, 1870 (c. liv.), with which are incorporated the Lands Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845 (c. 19); the Railway Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 92); and the Harbours, Docks and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27).

1917. By the bye-laws of the Clyde Pilot Board, all steam vessels must be supplied with a captain or sailing master, who shall be an experienced seaman; and must also be manned with a sufficient number of able-bodied and experienced seamen for the safe navigation of the vessel. Held, that even if this bye-law applied to a vessel on her trial trip, and still in the ship-builder's hands, it was sufficiently complied with by the vessel being in charge of a licensed pilot who was assisted by a sufficient crew to obey his orders. Clyde Navigation Co. v. Barclay, L. R. 1 App. Cas. H. L. 790; Cases in the Court of Session, 4th series, vol. 2, H. L. 842; 4th series, vol. 3, H. L. 44; 3 Asp. N.S. 390.

(b) Compulsion and Exemption.

1917a. It is unlawful for any person to navigate without a pilot, licensed by the existing pilotage authorities, any vessel exceeding sixty tons burden in any part of the River Clyde as defined by this Act. Penalty for breach, not exceeding £5. The Clyde Navigation Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. cxlix.), s. 136.

1917b. See further as to Glasgow and Greenock, ss. 9 and 10, infra.

5. Dingwall Harbour.

1918. As to the pilotage authority of this harbour and the limits of the harbour, see the Dingwall Harbour Order, 1867 (c. 33). The harbour is under the same rules and management as Leith, for which see ss. 13 and 14, infra.

6. Dundee.

(a) Generally.

1919. Definition of limits: Six miles outside of the Fairway Buoy at the entrance of the River Tay, up the river as far as Invergowrie on the north, and Balmernocho on the south side of the Tay. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 117.

1920. For statutory provisions regarding pilotage in the river and harbour, and constituting the trustees of the harbour the pilotage authority, see the Dundee Harbour Act, 1843 (c. lxxxiii.), ss. 125—148; and 38 & 39 Vict. c. cl. ss. 102—126.

1921. The master of any vessel who signals or asks for a pilot, must accept the services of the first who, being duly qualified, offers himself. Penalty, not exceeding £10. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 117; Reg. 7.

1922. Pilots are required upon a signal from any vessel coming into or going out the River Tay to proceed at once to take charge of such vessel, if outward bound, from the place of mooring in dock or elsewhere within the precincts of the harbour until one mile east of the Fairway Buoy, or (if required by the master) to any distance not exceeding six miles to the east of the said buoy; or, if inward bound, until the vessel arrives at Dundee or Carolina Roads, or is moored in the harbour, as may be directed by the master, subject to the directions of the harbour-master. Penalty for breach, not exceeding £5, nor under £2 for each offence. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 117; Reg. 7.

1923. The master of any vessel outward or inward bound who, being unable to obtain the services of a duly-licensed pilot, has placed his vessel under the charge of an unlicensed person, shall, upon being boarded by any qualified pilot in any part of the River Tay below the docks of Dundee, surrender the charge of his vessel to such pilot. Penalty, full pilotage. Ibid. p. 118; Reg. 16.

1924. Pilots must attend vessels in the roadstead if required to do so by the masters. Ibid. Reg. 7.

1925. Penalty against any master or owner of a vessel who agrees to pilotage at a less rate than those authorized, not less than £5 nor more than £10, and balance of authorized pilotage. Ibid. Reg. 17.

(b) Compulsion and Exemption.

1925a. Pilotage appears to be compulsory. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, pp. 117—119.

7. Fraserburgh.

(a) Generally.

1926. Limits: From Cairnburg Point, about two and a quarter miles south-east of the harbour, to Pitullie Point, about two miles west from the harbour and two miles seaward. Ibid. p. 122.

1927. For constitution, regulations, rates, &c. of this port, see the Fraserburgh Harbour Acts, 2 & 3 Vict. c. lxxv.; 20 & 21 Vict. c. xxxiii.; and 41 Vict. c. cii. ss. 42—120; and P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 117.

1928. The pilot who first offers himself to a vessel in want of a pilot is entitled to the dues of pilotage, whether his services be accepted or not. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 123; Reg. 13.

1929. Pilots must remain in charge of vessels employing them until they are safely moored. Ibid. Reg. 8.

(b) Compulsion.

1930. The master of every inward-bound vessel must employ the first duly-qualified pilot who offers his services. Penalty, full pilotage and costs of recovering the same. Ibid.

1931. Semble, all vessels pay pilot master's fees. Quære, does this amount to compulsory pilotage on outward-bound vessels? Ibid. Regs. 13 and 19.

(c) Exemption.

1932. Quære, is pilotage optional for outward-bound vessels? Ibid.

8. Girvan Harbour.

1933. As to the pilotage authority of this harbour, and the limits of the harbour, see the Harbour of Girvan Improvement Order, 1865, confirmed by the Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Act, 1865 (No. 3), c. 76.

9. Glasgow.

1934. Limits of pilotage district—between Glasgow and Greenock. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 125.

1935. The pilots who are licensed by the Clyde Pilot Board consist of two classes, viz., river pilots licensed to pilot vessels between Glasgow and Greenock, and deep-sea pilots licensed to pilot vessels between Greenock and the Island of Little Cumbrae, including vessels proceeding outwards from Port Glasgow or inwards to Port Glasgow. Ibid. By-law 1.

1936. See for regulations and rates of pilotage in this port, Ibid. No. 408 of 1867, pp. 126—128; No. 189 of 1880, p. 58; No. 325 of 1882, p. 125.

See as to the Clyde, s. 4, supra.

(b) Exemption.

1937. Pilotage is not compulsory in this port. Ibid. No. 189 of 1880, p. 58.

10. Greenock.

1938. Limits of pilotage district—between Greenock and the Island of Little Cumbrae, including vessels proceeding outwards from and inwards to port Glasgow. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 129.

1938*a*. The bye-laws and rates are the same as those in force at the port of Glasgow. Ibid.

See as to the Clyde, s. 4, supra.

(b) Exemption.

1939. Pilotage is not compulsory in this port. Ibid. No. 189 of 1880, p. 58.

11. Irvine.

(a) Generally.

1940. Limits of pilotage district—from harbour to two miles from bar at entrance of harbour. Ibid. p. 130.

1941. As to the pilotage authority of this harbour, see the Irvine Harbour Improvement Order, 1867, confirmed by the Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Act, 1867, No. 2 (c. 73); and see 36 & 37 Vict. c. cxxiv. s. 47.

1942. Pilotage inward is not complete until the vessel is safely moored. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 130.

1943. See for regulations, bye-laws and rates of this port, ibid.

(b) Compulsion.

1944. Pilotage is compulsory on all vessels of 25 tons register or upwards. Penalty, full pilotage. Ibid. No. 408 of 1867, p. 131.*

(c) Exemption.

1945. Vessels under twenty-five tons register are exempt. Ibid.

12. Kirkcaldy.

(a) Generally.

1946. The limits of the district are:—From harbour to roadstead. See 12 & 13 Vict. c. xxx.; 39 & 40 Vict. c. clxxix. ss. 64—71; and P. R. No. 516 of 1855, pp. 201, 202; and No. 325 of 1882, p. 131.

1947. See for the constitution, regulations and rates of this port, Ibid.

(b) Compulsion and Exemption.

1948. No vessel employed in the coasting trade shall be obliged to employ a pilot; and no vessel under sixty tons burden shall be obliged to pay pilotage, unless she employs a pilot; and the masters or commanders of ships belonging to the port of Kirkcaldy shall not be liable to pay any fees for pilots or pilotage, except where they make a signal for a pilot, or employ one to navigate their ships or vessels (semble pilotage is compulsory on other vessels). Ibid. Reg. 6.

13. Leith Trinity House.

(a) Generally.

1949. Definition of limits: The Firth of Forth from Fife Ness on the N. of St. Abbs' Head. On the S. the corporation also have power to license pilots "for seas and firths and along the coasts and islands of the Northern and German Oceans." See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 132.

1950. The jurisdiction of the Trinity House of Leith under their charter of incorporation of the 27th of July, 1797, and under 1 Geo. 4, c. xxxvii.,† and 5 Geo. 4, c. xxxix., does not extend to the district between Orfordness and the mouth of the Thames, which district is subject to the jurisdiction of the London Trinity House. Hossack v. Gray, The Ship Oscar, 34 L. J. M. C. 209; 2 Asp. 229; 6 Best & S. 598.

1950*a*. The jurisdiction of the Trinity House of Leith is confined to the coasts of Scotland. Ibid.

1951. For the bye-laws issued by this Trinity House, see P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 132.

1952. The Commissioners for the Harbour and Docks of Leith having made a bye-law to the effect that no person shall in future be licensed, nor after being licensed shall continue to act as harbour pilot, unless he holds a Firth of Forth licence (excepting masters or mates licensed for their own vessels), it is enacted (as arranged with the commissioners) that the limits of the harbour pilots shall be extended from a line to be drawn from Granton to Burntisland on the W., and from Pettycur to Portobello on the E., beyond which the harbour pilots are not to proceed in quest of vessels, nor go on board with a view to harbour pilotage. Ibid. Bye-law 10.

1953. Firth of Forth pilots in charge of vessels are only to continue in charge when within the limits of Leith Harbour,

* (544) This regulation, however, is not repeated in the bye-laws for this port printed at p. 62 of the P. R. No. 232 of 1873, nor in those of 1882.

† (544*a*) The act 1 Geo. 4, c. xxxvii. is declared to be a public act, and notice is to be taken of it without its being specially pleaded. See the act, s. 69.

in case a harbour pilot should not be forthcoming. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 132; Bye-law 11.

(b) Compulsion and Exemption.

1954. The rates, charges, and prices, therein enumerated, may and shall be lawfully demanded, exacted, and received by every pilot licensed by the Trinity House. (Quere, is pilotage compulsory under this bye-law?) Ibid. Bye-law 15.

1954a. Pilotage is compulsory except for Queen's ships. See 1 Geo. 4, c. xxxvii. ss. 34, 35, 44.

14. Leith Harbour and Docks.

(a) Generally.

1955. Definition of limits: The limits of the port and harbour of Leith extend from a point at a bridge beyond or E. of Seafield Toll Bar; on the E. of Leith to Wardie Brow or Brae, to the W. of Newhaven and halfway across the Firth of Forth. See 38 & 39 Vict. c. clx. ss. 7 and 74, but these limits have been extended for pilotage purposes (see Bye-law 10 of Leith Trinity House, supra). See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 138.

1956. No person shall in future be licensed, nor after being licensed continue to act as a harbour pilot, unless he holds a Firth of Forth pilot's licence (excepting masters and mates of vessels licensed for their own vessels only). Ibid. Bye-law 4.

1957. For constitution, bye-laws, and rates of this port, see Order in Council, 28th July, 1856; Ibid. 30th July, 1860; 38 & 39 Vict. c. clx. ss. 69—71; and P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 138.

(b) Exemption.

1958. There is no compulsory pilotage. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 138; Bye-law 2.

15. Lossiemouth.

1959. Limits of pilotage district: To and from the harbour. See P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 81.

1960. An inward and outward pilotage rate of 3*d.* per ton appears to be levied on all vessels. Ibid.

1961. There are no bye-laws, orders, or regulations beyond the provisions of the local act, for which see 19 & 20 Vict. c. lxxiii. ss. 57, 58.

16. Port of Macduff.

1962. Limits of district: There is no district, any work that is done beyond a reasonable distance is a matter of agreement between the pilots and shipmaster. Vessels often pick up pilots at the fishery grounds 10 or 12 miles from the harbour, and are piloted in from there without any extra charge. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 141.

1963. Pilotage appears to be levied on all vessels inward or outward bound. For the rates, see Ibid.

1964. There are no bye-laws for this port. Ibid.

1965. For the constitution of the port, see 10 & 11 Vict. c. cxxvii., and for rates, see Schedule D. to the act.

(b) Compulsion and Exemption.

1965a. The pilotage is compulsory, but vessels under twenty tons are exempt. Ibid. s. 13.

17. Port of Peterhead.

(a) Generally.

1966. No additional allowance (beyond those specified in the bye-laws) shall be made to a pilot taking charge within the limits defined by the following bearings:—if a vessel making signals for a pilot, viz. within a line passing through the eastern extremities of the rock of Dunbuy and the promontory of Buchanness, and projected northwards until it intersects a line projecting eastwards, passing through the southern extremity of Mormond Hill and the farmhouse of Kinloch. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 142, Bye-law 12.

1967. For constitution, bye-laws and rates of this port, see 36 & 37 Vict. c. clvii. ss. 67—74; 39 & 40 Vict. c. clxxiv.; and P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 142.

(b) Compulsion.

1968. Pilotage is compulsory upon all vessels either entering or leaving this port. Penalty £5 and full pilotage. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 142. Bye-law 8.

(c) Exemption.

1969. Masters of vessels are exempt from availing themselves of the services of any pilots who, being required so to do, fail to produce the badges, licences or copies of the regulations with which they are furnished. Ibid. Bye-law 19.

18. Roseheartly.(a) Generally.

1970. Definition of limits: The port extends $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles from the harbour, within a line projected northwards from the spire of the parish church of Fraserburgh, passing through the position of the Kinnaird Head Lighthouse till it meets a line projected eastwards from Troup's Dovecot, passing through the position of the Tamhead or the seaward extremity of the old pier of Roseheartly. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 144, and No. 222 of 1884, p. 85, Bye-law 12.

1971. There appears to be a rate of $3\frac{1}{2}d.$ per registered ton for every vessel piloted into and out of the harbour with a boat and four men. Ibid.

1972. As to the constitution of this port, see Provisional Order of the Board of Trade relating to Roseheartly, confirmed by the Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Act, 1863, c. 104.

19. Sandhaven.(a) Generally.

1973. The port of Sandhaven is incorporated as a pilotage authority. See the Sandhaven Harbour Order, 1873, c. lxxiii.

1974. Pilots for landing passengers shall be entitled to be paid, if they are taken on board within the limits of the port, for one passenger 6s., and for each additional passenger in the same boat 2s. 6d., and if not as may be agreed upon. No. 14 of Bye-laws, gazetted 27th March, 1877.

1975. Pilots shall remain in charge till vessel is duly moored. Ibid. Bye-law 6.

(b) Compulsion and Exemption.

1976. Pilotage appears to be compulsory. See P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 85.

1977. But tug steamers duly licensed while employed only in towing vessels into and out of the harbour are exempt. Ibid.

20. Wick.

1978. Definition of limits: Within a line drawn from the North Head to the South Head of Wick Bay. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 145.

1979. See, as to the constitution of the port, 25 & 26 Vict. c. clxxx. ss. 22—24.

1980. A pilotage rate of 4d. per registered ton is levied on all vessels above twenty tons entering or leaving the harbour. Ibid.

1981. In the event of any vessel carrying a pilot outside the limits and landing him on any part of the coast, his travelling expenses shall be paid. Ibid.

1982. Vessels which have sailed from the harbour and put back by stress of weather, or from any other cause, without having accomplished their voyage, are not liable to additional pilot rates. Ibid.

36. *Irish Ports.*1. Ardglass Harbour.

1983. As to the pilotage authority of Ardglass Harbour, see the Ardglass Harbour Order, 1866 (c. 58). See also 39 & 40 Vict. c. cccxxxvi.

2. Ballina.

1984. Limits of pilotage district: Outside—Kilcammin Head, Enniscrone and Pollacheeny; inside—from quay to bar. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 147.

1985. See, as to constitution of the port, 23 & 24 Vict. c. clxv. ss. 39—44.

1985a. There are no bye-laws as to pilotage for this port. See P. R. No. 189 of 1880, p. 70.

1986. For every ship or vessel coming into or departing from the River Moy and harbour of Ballina, from any port or ports other than a port in the United Kingdom or the British colonies, a sum not exceeding the sum of 3s. per foot of admeasurement for each entry or departure, at the discretion of the Harbour Commissioners, is payable for pilotage. Ibid. No. 325 of 1882, p. 147.

1987. And for every ship or vessel from any port or ports in Great Britain or Ireland or the British colonies, a sum not exceeding the sum of 2s. per foot of admeasurement, at the discretion of the Commissioners. Ibid.

3. Belfast.(a) Generally.

1988. Limits of pilotage district: From Larne Harbour, County Antrim, to Ballyhalbert Bay, County Down. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 148.

1989. See for constitution, regulations and rates of this port, ibid. and 10 & 11 Vict. c. lii.

1990. A pilot when on board a vessel is not permitted to take the helm, which must be in charge of one of the crew, to whom he shall give his orders. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 148, Reg. 3.

1991. Vessels of a greater draft of water than 16 feet are not to be brought into the mouth of a dock, without the previous consent of the harbour master in charge. Ibid. Reg. 12.

1992. It is the duty of the pilot, master, and everyone on board a pilot boat or at the lighthouse, to prevent any breach of the Revenue laws. Ibid. Reg. 14.

1993. Pilots employed by outward-bound vessels must not leave them until they are in a safe part of the Whitehouse Roads; but when they are required to take such vessels below Carrickfergus from the Whitehaven Roads, such vessels are to pay an additional rate. Ibid. Reg. 23.

1994. For bye-laws giving the regulations to prevent collisions to be observed by pilots who are navigating steamers in this port, ibid. Reg. 8.

(b) Compulsion.

1995. Pilotage is compulsory in the port and harbour of Belfast under the provisions of the Belfast Harbour Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. lii). The De Brus, L. R. 1 Eq. 72; The Arbutus, 2 Asp. 136. [IRISH.]

1996. Every vessel, whether inward or outward bound, must employ the first pilot who, being duly qualified, offers his services in accordance with the bye-laws. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, pp. 150, 151.

(c) Exemption.

1997. Masters of inward-bound vessels are exempt from accepting the services of pilots who are not supplied from the pilot smack, one of the pilot boats, or the lighthouse at Holywood Bank. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 148, Reg. 1.

3a. Carlingford Bar.

1998. Limits of pilotage district: The bar of Carlingford Lough to Warrenpoint Roads. Ibid. p. 173.

1998a. The Harbour of Carlingford Lough Improvement Commissioners are constituted the pilotage authority of this port. See the Harbour of Carlingford Lough Improvement Order, s. 23, confirmed by the Pier and Harbour Orders Confirmation Act, 1864 (c. 93).

1999. A pilot, when in charge, is not permitted to take the helm, but must give his orders to one of the crew. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 173, Bye-law 4.

2000. Pilots are not permitted to anchor vessels in their charge either in the Cut on the Bar, or between the Frazer Buoy to the south and the Watson Buoy to the north, except under circumstances of great emergency. Penalty not exceeding £5. Ibid. Bye-law 5.

2001. Pilots, when in charge, are not to quit vessels till the service is complete. Penalty not exceeding 40s. Ibid. Bye-law 6.

2002. It is the duty of pilots to prevent any breach of the Revenue laws. Ibid. Bye-law 7.

2003. As to pilotage rates, see P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 90.

4. Coleraine.

2004. Limits of pilotage district: The River Bann, from the Salmon Leap above the town of Coleraine to an imaginary boundary line at sea, running through a point northward of the mouth of the river, and distant 500 yards from low-water mark at mouth of river. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 153.

2005. The Coleraine Harbour Trustees are constituted a pilotage authority. See the River Bann Navigation Act, 1879 (c. clxxv.), s. 83; and P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 90.

2006. No new bye-laws as to pilotage for this port have as yet been issued by this authority, the bye-laws adopted being those of the Coleraine Town Commission, acting as a harbour authority under the River Bann Navigation Act, 1863 (cap. c.), which has been repealed by sect. 7 of the above-named act. See P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 90.

2007. No printed return exists. Owing to the expense incurred by vessels entering the port, the Harbour Commissioners exempt from pilotage rates all vessels towed into the river. The Harbour Commissioners have agreed with a tug-owner that he shall receive all the towage paid by sailing vessels which are supplied with pilots without charge. They are 1s. per register ton in and out if in ballast; 1s. 2d. in and out if in cargo. Ibid.

2008. Steamers are charged the ordinary pilot rate, viz.: 1s. 6d. per foot inwards, and 9d. per foot outwards. Ibid.

5. Cork.

(a) Generally.

2009. Limits of pilotage district: The river, harbour, and port of Cork, the S.

or seaward boundary of which is a straight line extending from Poor Head on the E. to Cork Head on the W. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 154.

2010. As to the constitution, bye-laws, and rates of this port, Ibid.; and see 1 Geo. 4, c. lii.

2011. Pilots before leaving a vessel are to moor her, in accordance with the bye-laws. Ibid. Bye-law 5.

2012. No pilots are allowed to go as coasting pilots. Ibid. Bye-law 8.

2013. When any vessel or lighter in charge of a pilot does or receives any damage, the pilot shall not continue to act as a pilot, but shall deposit his licence with the commissioners until the case is investigated. Ibid. Bye-law 12.

(b) Exemption.

2014. Pilotage is not compulsory in this port. Ibid. p. 154.

2015. Semble, the General Pilot Act (c. 125) is confined to England, and was never intended to apply to Ireland at all. Owners of a damaging vessel running into another vessel in Cork Harbour condemned in the damage, the pilot in charge not being taken under compulsion. The Eden, 2 W. Rob. 442.

6. Drogheda.

2016. Limits of pilotage district: From that part of the open sea between Clogher Head and the Skerries to quays of Drogheda, and from quays to bay. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 156.

2017. See for constitution, bye-laws and rates of this port, ibid. and 5 Vict. sess. 2, c. lvi. ss. 200—205.

2018. If no pilot offers his services to the master of a vessel before such vessel shall arrive between Clogher Head and the Skerries, or whilst the vessel lies between those points, such vessel having had for at least fifteen minutes previous the usual signal or flag for a pilot flying, then it shall be competent for such master to appoint as pilot thereof any person whom he deems qualified. Ibid.

(b) Compulsion.

2019. Pilotage is compulsory upon all sailing vessels, whether inward or outward bound. Penalty, full pilotage. Ibid.

(c) Exemption.

2020. Steamships are exempt from pilotage. Ibid.

7. Dublin.

(a) Generally.

2021. The limits of the Dublin pilotage district are: On the north, an imaginary straight line drawn from a point on the coast of Ireland, between Balbriggan and Skerries, in the same latitude as the Rock-a-bill Lighthouse, and through Rock-a-bill Lighthouse to a point at sea three leagues distant from the nearest land on that part of the Irish coast. On the south, an imaginary straight line drawn from a point on the east coast of Ireland, situated in the same latitude as South Arklow lightship, and through the lightship on the south end of the Arklow Bank, and thence to a point at sea three leagues distant from the nearest land on that part of the Irish coast. On the east, by an imaginary line drawn from the seaward extremity of the northern boundary line of a point at sea three leagues eastward of the headland called the Nose of Howth, thence to a point at sea three leagues eastward of the headland called Wicklow Head, and thence until it joins the seaward extremity of the southern boundary line. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 158.

2022. See for the constitution, bye-laws and rates of this port, ibid. p. 158; and the Dublin Port and Docks Act, 1869 (cap. c.) ss. 20—39.

2023. Pilots in charge of vessels must keep a good look-out, and must not take the helm. They must give directions as to the navigation, and must observe the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions. They must also see that the lead is kept going. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, Bye-law 3.

2024. Pilots in charge of inward-bound vessels other than coasters, must take soundings before berthing to ensure an even keel in case of grounding, and must remain in charge until the vessels are safely moored. Ibid. p. 72. Bye-law 4.

2025. Pilots must report to the pilot superintendent any accidents occurring to vessels under their charge. Ibid. Bye-law 5.

(b) Compulsion.

2026. Vessels entering or leaving the port of Dublin or harbour of Kingstown must employ licensed pilots within the Dublin Pilotage District. Ibid. No. 292 of 1876, p. 74.

2027. At the port of Dublin the pilotage is compulsory—per the Lord Chancellor. The Meteor, 9 Eq. 573. [IRISH.]

2028. A steam-tug, carrying passengers between Kingstown Harbour and the North Wall, Dublin (both of which places are, under the provisions of the Dublin Port and Docks Act, 1869, cap. c., within the limits of the port of Dublin), is within the meaning of sect. 354 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and obliged to carry a pilot. Dublin Port and Docks Board v. Shannon, 7 C. L. 117. [IRISH.]

(c) *Exemption.

2029. Vessels in ballast and coasting vessels not exceeding fifty tons burden, or being laden with fish in bulk or potatoes, are exempt. See P. R. No. 292 of 1876, p. 74.

8. Dundalk.

2030. Definition of limits: From an imaginary line drawn straight from seaward end of Dunany Point to seaward end of Cooley Point, to Dundalk Quays (for inward pilots). Quay to Bar or Lighthouse (for outward pilots). Ibid. No. 325 of 1882, p. 163.

2031. See for constitution, bye-laws, and rates, ibid. and 18 & 19 Vict. (c. clxxxix), ss. 89—99.

2032. Vessels in ballast taking a tug-boat out, pay no pilotage. See P. R. No. 408 of 1867, p. 151.

9. Galway.(a) Generally.

2033. Limits of pilotage district: Divided into two districts. The outer extends from a line from Gulin Head in the county of Galway to the west point of the Arran Islands in that county, and from thence to Hags Head in the county of Clare and to the roadstead of Galway in the county of the town of Galway. The inner extends from the roadstead to the docks and quays. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 165.

2034. See for constitution, bye-laws, and rates, ibid. and 16 & 17 Vict. c. ccvii. ss. 62—73; 23 & 24 Vict. c. ccii. ss. 53, 54.

(b) Compulsion.

2035. Pilotage is compulsory for vessels proceeding from Galway roadstead to dock, and vice versa. P. R. No. 178 of 1871, p. 66.

(c) Exemption.

2036. Vessels proceeding from Arran Island to Galway roadstead, or vice versa, are exempt. Ibid.

10. Limerick.†(a) Generally.

2037. Definition of limits: From quays and docks of Limerick to Loop Head and Kerry Head at the mouth of the river Shannon. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 167.

2038. See for constitution, bye-laws, and rates, ibid. and 4 Geo. 4, c. xciv. ss. 72, 73; 10 & 11 Vict. c. cxcviii.

(b) Exemption.

2039. Pilotage does not appear to be compulsory. See P. R. No. 266 of 1878, p. 82.

11. Londonderry.(a) Generally.

2040. Definition of limits: From one mile outside or seaward of the north-east buoy on the Tuns Bank to bridge at Londonderry. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 169.

2041. See for constitution, bye-laws, and rates, ibid. and 19 & 20 Vict. c. lxvii. ss. 57, 58.

2042. Pilots are not to be paid by the commissioners, till they produce a certificate signed by the master of the vessel of which they have been in charge to the effect that they have done their duty. P. R. Ibid.

(b) Compulsion and Exemption.

2043. Pilotage appears to be compulsory on all vessels except vessels of forty tons register and under, when sailing in ballast. Ibid.

12. New Ross.(a) Generally.

2044. Definition of limits: From the junction of the river Barrow with the river Suir, to the entrance of the canal

* (545) The term "coasting vessel" or "coaster" means a vessel trading from any part of the United Kingdom and coming into the port. See P. R. as to Pilotage, No. 292 of 1876, p. 74.

† (546) Pilots at this port are not incorporated, but merely licensed by the Harbour Commissioners, who have no knowledge of their receipts. Ibid. No. 325 of 1882.

at St. Mullins, on the river Barrow, and to the Lock Quay of Inistioge, on the river Suir. Ibid. p. 171.

2045. For constitution, bye-laws, and rates, Ibid. and 24 & 25 Vict. c. cxl. ss. 59—65; 37 & 38 Vict. c. cxvi.; and see s. 16, infra.

(b) Compulsion.

2046. All vessels bound to this port must take pilots of the Port of Waterford from the entrance of that harbour to the junction of the rivers Suir and Barrow, where this port commences. See P. R. No. 408 of 1867, p. 154.

13. Newry.

2047. Definition of limits: From Lough Carlingford to the entrance of the Newry Canal, or, in strictness, the river of Newry. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 174.

2048. See for constitution, bye-laws, and rates, Ibid.; see also 10 Geo. 4, c. cxxvi. ss. 67—74; and Order in Council of 16th May, 1878.

(b) Exemption.

2049. Pilotage is not compulsory in this port. P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 174.

13a. Portrush.

2050. A vessel is to be considered piloted to Portrush when safely moored within the harbour, and to be considered piloted out when safely at sea. See P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 100.

14. Sligo.

2051. Definition of limits: From Wheaton Rock to Quays. Ibid. No. 325 of 1882, p. 176.

2052. See for constitution, bye-laws and rates, Ibid. No. 222 of 1884, p. 101, and 40 Vict. c. xxxv. ss. 86—106.

2053. In case of steamers or other vessels refusing pilots inward, the men so offering and refused shall immediately report the case to the pilot master, and by letter to the secretary, that day. See P. R. No. 222 of 1884, p. 101, Bye-law 20.

15. Tralee.

2054. No returns are furnished for this port. Ibid. p. 103.

2055. For constitution, see 9 Geo. 4, c. xcvi. ss. 70—75.

16. Waterford.

2057. Definition of limits: On the E., an imaginary straight line drawn from a point on the coast of Ireland, at or near the headland called Crossfurnoge Point, in the county of Wexford, to a point at sea, three leagues S. of Crossfurnoge Point. On the W., an imaginary straight line drawn from a point on the coast of Ireland, at or near the headland called Great Newtown Head, in the county of Waterford, to a point at sea one league S. of Great Newtown Head. On the S., an imaginary straight line drawn from the seaward extremity of such eastern boundary line to the seaward extremity of such western boundary line. On the N., an imaginary line drawn from Granagh Castle to Bilberry Rock, about one mile above Waterford Bridge. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 178.

2058. For constitution, bye-laws, and rates of this port, see the Waterford Harbour Act, 9 & 10 Vict. c. cxcii.; and P. R. No. 178 of 1871, p. 71; and No. 325 of 1882, p. 178.

2059. Pilotage is compulsory in this port. See the Waterford Harbour Act, 1846 (c. cxcii.).

(c) Exemption.

2060. Although pilotage is compulsory in the port of Waterford under the Waterford Harbour Act, 9 & 10 Vict. c. cxcii. it is not necessary to employ a pilot to remove a vessel from one berth to another within the port, and if while a vessel is being so moored a collision occurs, her owners cannot as a defence set up compulsory pilotage. The Victoria, T. R. 1 Eq. 336. [IRISH.]

2061. Coasting vessels not exceeding twenty tons register are exempt. See P. R. No. 178 of 1869, p. 99.

17. Westport.

2062. Definition of limits: From Harbour to Inishgort Lighthouse. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 180.

2063. As to constitution, see 16 & 17 Vict. c. clxxxv. ss. 24—28.

2064. There are no bye-laws as to pilotage, which appears to be optional. See P. R. No. 189 of 1880, p. 84; and No. 222 of 1884, p. 105.

18. Wexford.

(a) Generally.

2065. Definition of limits: The harbour extends to and comprehends the area lying within an imaginary line drawn straight from Blackwater Head to the N. end of the Long Bank, and thence along the western edge of that bank to the southern end thereof, and thence straight to Greenore Point. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 181.

2066. See as to constitution, bye-laws, and rates, the Wexford Harbour Act, 1874 (c. xl.), ss. 72—85; Order in Council, 26th Oct. 1875; and P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 181, and No. 222 of 1884, p. 106.

(b) Compulsion.

2067. Pilotage is levied on all vessels entering or leaving this port. Ibid. No. 325 of 1882, p. 182.

37. Foreign Ports.*

1. Bilbao and Santander in Spain.

2068. Pilotage is compulsory in the port of Santander, in Spain, for vessels exceeding 50 tons. See Royal Order of 17th March, 1855.

2069. Also in the port of Bilbao.

2. Colombo.

2070. All vessels above 200 tons burthen, arriving within this port, and vessels taking pilots, shall pay pilotage at the rate of fifteen shillings inwards and outwards. See Governor's Order of 6th January, 1866.

2071. Pilots detained on board longer than forty-eight hours are entitled to claim eight shillings for every day's detention after that time. Ibid.

3. River Hooghly, Calcutta.

2072. A collision took place in the Cowcolly Roads, one of the channels in the Hooghly river, near Calcutta. By an act of the Indian Legislature, it is made compulsory upon the master to take a pilot on board in every port subject to the provisions of that act. Held, that the Cowcolly Roads, the place of the collision, was not a port within the meaning of the act, and that the owners were therefore responsible for the damage, though the fault of the pilot only. The Peerless, 1 Lushington, 30, 103; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 484; 30 L. J. Adm. 89.

4. St. Peter Port, Guernsey.

2073. Steamers held not bound to take a pilot in entering the harbour of Saint Peter Port (Sir W. Collings dissenting). Hughes v. Manger, Royal Court, Guernsey; Guernsey Star, 6 L. T. N.S. 915.

5. Australia.

2074. After 1st December, 1884, the employment of a pilot at Port Pirie, and Port Augusta, will not be compulsory, and Port Adelaide will be the only port in South Australia where pilotage is compulsory. See Nautical Magazine for January, 1885, p. 96.

6. Canada.

2075. In Canadian waters the Canadian Act, 27 & 28 Vict. c. 58, s. 9, exonerates the owner and master, as in England, from liability for damage inflicted on another vessel, while employing a pilot compulsorily. The Hibernian, L. R. 4 P. C. 511; 1 Asp. N.S. 491.

2076. Pilotage is compulsory between Quebec and Montreal for all vessels over 125 tons. Ibid.; see also 27 & 28 Vict. c. 58, s. 9.

7. The Bahamas.

2077. For provisions as to pilotage in the Bahamas, see the Bahamas Acts, 33 Vict. c. 16; 43 Vict. c. 6; Prov. Act, 45 Vict. c. 7; and Prov. Acts, 26 Vict. c. 10; 27 Vict. c. 26; and 29 Vict. c. 12.

38. Pilot in charge.

2080. The pilot had left the deck for a few minutes, having given directions to the mate for the sailing of the vessel in his absence. The mate negligently brought the vessel into a critical position with regard to another vessel. The pilot then returned, and improperly hard-a-ported. The Privy Council found that both the mate and the pilot were to blame for the collision, and held that the owners were liable. 10 Moore, P. C. C. 471; The Mobile, Swabey, 71, 128.

2081. Semble, owners are not deprived of the benefit of compulsory pilotage by the fact that after a collision their vessel did not render the assistance required by sect. 33, now repealed, of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63). The Queen, The Lord John Russell, L. R. 2 A. & E. 354; 38 L. T. N.S. Adm. 39; 3 Asp. 242.

2082. (548) In Germany (Art. 740), the owners are relieved when the fault is that of the pilot.

(548a) In Portugal (Art. 1583), though the liability of the captain, and through him of the ship, is not removed, yet he has a remedy over against the pilot and the board who appoints him.

(548b) In France a captain remains responsible for the manœuvres of his ship, even when he has a pilot on board by compulsion of law. D. P. 1875, III. 97.

* (549) As to the relative duties and obligations of captains and pilots in the Suez Canal—Art. 1. If the employment of the pilot is voluntary, the captain's responsibility to third parties remains intact. 2. If the employment is compulsory, and the captain is bound to give up the conduct and command of his ship to him, the responsibility of the captain and owner is suspended, and that of the person who has imposed the pilot substituted (say his remedy over against the pilot himself). 3. If the employment of the pilot is compulsory, but only as an expert counsellor, the captain who has not been ousted from his command preserves his liability towards third parties. But the pilot-counsellor and the person who has compelled his employment, are responsible to the captain for erroneous direction as to the route, and faulty intelligence as to the condition of any places given by the pilot. The person who has compelled the employment of the pilot is responsible to third parties for the bad judgment (mauvais avis) of the pilot in respect of his local knowledge, whilst in this case the pilot is not responsible to third parties. In short, as to third parties, the full responsibility of the captain in command avers that of the pilot-counsellor, whilst he who ap-

2083. A British steamer in Belgian waters, and by Belgian law compulsorily in charge of a pilot, damaged a Norwegian barque. The owners of the steamer claimed exemption from liability for the collision on the plea of compulsory pilotage. By Belgian law the compulsory employment of a pilot does not exempt owners from liability for damage caused solely by his negligence or want of skill. Held, by the Judicial Committee (reversing the decision of the Admiralty Court) that the case was ruled by the provisions of English statute law and by the practice of the Admiralty Court, under which the owners of the steamer were exempt from liability. The Halley, L. R. 2 A. & E. 3; 2 P. C. 193.

2085. A general enactment in a later statute does not repeal a particular enactment in an earlier statute, unless the intention to do so is manifest, or the implication irresistible. Sect. 388 of the

M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), enacts that, no owner or master of any ship shall be answerable for any damage occasioned by the fault or incapacity of any qualified pilot acting in charge of such ship within any district where the employment of such pilot is compulsory. Sect. 96 of the Thames Conservancy Act, 1857 (c. cxlvii.), enacts that the owner of every vessel navigating the Thames shall be answerable for "all trespasses, damages, spoil, or mischief that shall be done by such vessel, or by any of the boatmen or other persons belonging to or employed in or about the same, by any means whatsoever, to any of the property or effects of the conservators," &c.; and that the owner of every such vessel shall, for every such trespass, &c., upon conviction before a justice, pay such compensation as shall be fixed by him not exceeding £20, besides costs; but that, in case the damage shall exceed £20, the owner may be sued. Sect. 97 provides that the boatmen or other persons so offending shall be answerable for and shall repay all such damages, &c., to his master or owner. Held, that the owner of a vessel navigating the Thames is not responsible for damage done by her to property belonging to the conservators through the fault of a pilot compulsorily in charge of her; for that, though the words of sect. 96 of the Thames Conservancy Act are general, they are not to be read as including pilots, and do not by implication repeal the provisions as to pilotage in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854. Conservators of the River Thames v. Hall, L. R. 3 C. P. 415.

2086. As to owners of vessels or floats of timber not being responsible to the points the pilot gives reason to believe that he will give, and undertakes to give, skilful and faithful pilots, an engagement which he makes with all ships navigating his waters, not only with respect to their own pilots, but also with respect to the pilots of all the other vessels so navigating. But in the meanwhile this is a presumption against the captain, and he is bound to prove rigorously against the person appointing the pilot that the collision was caused by default of right information on the pilot's part. Art. 4 of the Regulations nowhere says that the pilot is to take the place of the master. Arts. 8, 9, sects. 8 and 11 (2) do not alter the position of the pilot as stated in Art. 4, because the first does not compel obedience to the pilot, and the two latter only do so when they are considered as based on his special and local knowledge.

Hence it results that the master is responsible—1. For all grounding and other accidents resulting from the conducting and manœuvring of his ship, which are distinguished by Art. 10, sect. 2, from a grounding caused by an erroneous direction given by the pilot. 2. That the responsibility for the manœuvring of the ship remains entirely with the master; and that the company, as manager of the Canal, and by its regulations, is now the less unable to diminish its responsibility in respect to the pilots, and to furnish every security for the navigation, which depends not less on the proper information of the pilots than on the preservation in good condition of the Canal itself. Philippe v. C. & Canal de Suez, J. de D. I. P. 1878, p. 168. See also The Guy Mannering, No. 1153, p. 326.

undertakers for any damage done thereby to harbours, docks, piers, or works when caused by the fault of a pilot taken by compulsion of law, see the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 74, and as to actions by dock proprietors, tit. COLLISION, Pt. VIII. p. 282.

2090. If a vessel in charge of a pilot is out of ordinary trim, so that she is carried by force of the tide more than a ship in ordinary safe trim would have been, and this helped to bring about the collision, the owners are responsible for the damage, the trim of the ship being within the province of the master. The Argo, Swabey, 462.

2091. But if she is in ordinary safe trim, then, although she might be in handier trim, and although the trim of the ship in part contributed to the collision, they are not responsible. Ibid.

2093. Quere, whether knowledge of a duly-licensed pilot taken by compulsion of law as to the state of a dock is to be considered knowledge which affects the shipowners. Thompson and others v. North Eastern Railway Co., 1 Asp. 17, 207; 6 L. T. N.S. 127; 2 B. & S. 106; and, in error, 119.

2094. The pilot in charge of a ship is solely responsible for getting the ship under weigh in improper circumstances, e. g. without employing her steam-tug, which was in attendance. The Peerless, supra, No. 2092.

2095. It is a want of due caution to move, by means of a steam-tug, a ship from one dock to another at night-time. The Borussia, Swabey, 94.

2096. Under such circumstances, a pilot on board the ship being towed has no such charge or control over her movements as to exculpate the owners. Ibid.

2098. See also as to the relative duties of crew and pilot, ss. 3, 4, and 5, infra.

2099. A collision occurred in the day-time between the steamer W. C. at anchor below Dartmouth, at the mouth of the Dart, and the steamer W. coming down the river. The collision was principally owing to error in judgment of the pilot. The master had shortly previously left the deck on ship's business, and the pilot was alone on the bridge. The W. was steered from the bridge, and the engine-room telegraph was on the bridge. Held, that the master was to blame for leaving the bridge without putting any officer in his place to assist the pilot; but whether his neglect in this respect did or did not contribute to the casualty so as to make the owners responsible for the collision, the court considered it was not required to decide. Wreck Commissioner and Assessors, No. 1534, 18th October, 1882.

2100. A French vessel coming up the Thames took on board a pilot, and, as none of her crew understood English, a waterman to take the wheel. The waterman put her helm up instead of luffing as the pilot ordered, whereby a barge was run into and damaged. The French owner claimed exemption under the 388th section of the M. S. Act, 1854. Held, that the pilot was not answerable for the waterman's incapacity or fault, and that the owners were liable. General de Caen, Swabey, 9.

2101. See the same rule applied to hoblors appointed by a pilotage authority in Holman v. Irvine Harbour Trustees, 4 Court of Sess. Cases, 4th series, p. 406 (Scotch), and tit. COLLISION, No. 844, p. 284.

2102. Salvors having brought the vessel salvaged into pilotage waters, gave up charge of her to a duly-licensed pilot who boarded her, and by whose negligence the ship sustained damage. Held, that the salvors rightly gave up charge to the pilot, and ought not to suffer in their claim of salvage on account of the pilot's negligence. The Bomarsund, Swabey, 77.

2. Burthen of Proof.

2103. See tit. EVIDENCE, c. 19, s. 8, p. 450.

3. Master and Crew generally.*

2104. Although the pilot has charge of the ship the owners are responsible to third persons for the competency of the master and crew. The Christiana, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 171; 7 Notes of Cases, 6, and Supp. xiv.

2105. Although the directions of the pilot may be imperative as to the course the vessel is to pursue, the management of the ship itself is still under the control of the master. It is his duty to secure the safe conduct of his vessel by issuing the necessary orders, and that of the crew to carry those orders into execution, and for the due performance of their relative duties the master and crew are still respectively responsible, and through them the owners. The Diana, 10 Jur. 135.

2106. When there is a local usage as to navigation depending on local circumstances it is the exclusive duty of the pilot to take care that such usage is complied with. Ibid.

2107. A vessel is only under the direction of the pilot for the purpose of navigation. In a case of collision the master is the proper party to give directions for the cutting away a lanyard, where such a course may be necessary to prevent further damage. He is not to wait for the pilot's directions, which would tend to create great confusion and delay. The Massachusetts, 10 Jur. 373.

2110. The A. and J. S. came into collision in the river Mersey, and the steam-tug towing the A. was compelled to cut adrift and leave her. The A. and J. S. then drifted up the river, and after some time cleared each other, when the J. S. brought up, and the A. continued drifting until she came into collision with the G. L. While the A. was drifting she had let go her starboard anchor and the chain of the port anchor, the port anchor itself having been broken in the first collision. A.'s steam-tug had also thrown a line on board, which was not attended to. Held, that the master and crew were to blame for not having veered out more cable to the starboard anchor, for not having bent on a hawser to the line thrown from the steam-tug, and for not having squared the foreyard and set sail upon it, and that the neglect in these respects occasioned the second collision. The owners of the A. held responsible accordingly for the damage to the G. L. The Annapolis and Golden Light, 5 L. T. N.S. Adm. 692.

2111. See also Nos. 2092—2098, supra.

* (550) The pilot is an officer of the ship when on board in the exercise of his duty, but when the captain is on board he is master, and the orders of the pilot are considered the master's. The United States v. Forbes, Crabbe, 558. [AMERICAN.] And see note 547, p.

(551) If the collision was caused by the negligence or fault of the pilot, and the owners had the means of knowing that he was careless and reckless, they are responsible for the injury. Cook v. Parham, 24 Ala. 21. [AMERICAN.]

(552) For provisions of the American law rendering the master and owners liable for accidents when the ship is allowed to proceed through darkness or fog, after the pilot has reported it unsafe to do so, see Act of Congress, Aug. 30, 1852; and 1 Conkling's U. S. Adm. Prac. 413. [AMERICAN.]

2112. Semble, where a collision is brought about solely through the default of a pilot, by compulsion of law, in charge of the wrong-doing vessel, a failure on the part of her master to render assistance will not deprive the owners of exemption from liability in respect of the compulsory employment of a pilot. The Queen, The Lord John Russell, L. R. 2 A. & E. 354.

2113. In order to entitle the owner of a ship having, by compulsion of law, a pilot on board, to the benefit of the exemption contained in the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 388, from liability for damage by default of the pilot, it is not enough to prove that there was fault or negligence on the pilot's part, but the owner must show that there was no default on the part of the master and crew which might have in any degree been conducive to the damage. The Iona, L. R. 1 P. C. 426.

2114. See also Nos. 2088—2091, p. 1401, and No. 2115, infra.

4. Obedience to Pilot's Orders.

2115. When a collision is caused by a vessel in charge of a licensed pilot, the owners, in order to exonerate themselves from liability, must prove not merely that the crew were under the pilot's orders at the time, but that the order which caused the damage was actually given by the pilot, the onus probandi being on them. The Schwalbe, 4 L. T. N.S. 160; and see No. 2113, supra.

2116. Although the pilot has charge of the ship the owners are responsible to third persons for the obedience of the master and crew to the orders of the pilot in everything that concerns his duty. The Christiana, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 171.

2117. Imperfect obedience is disobedience. The Christina, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 380.

2118. If the orders of the pilot are disobeyed, or the duties which belong to the master and crew are not properly performed, and an accident under these circumstances occurs, the owners remain liable. The Lochlibo, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 429; 14 Jur. 1074; 3 W. Rob. 317; The Diana, 10 Jur. 135; 4 Moore, P. C. C. 11.

2119. A hail from any of the crew on the look-out to alter the helm, if such advice be adopted by the pilot as in his judgment a proper measure, will exonerate the owners; otherwise if the advice be adopted by the pilot unthinkingly and on the mere report of the look-out. The Lochlibo, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 427.

2120. As a general rule it is the master's duty to repeat, if necessary, the pilot's orders, and for any manœuvre so carried out the pilot remains solely responsible. The Admiral Boxer, Swabey, 193.

2121. See also s. 3, supra, and s. 5, infra.

5. Interference with Pilot.

2122. Under ordinary circumstances the orders of the pilot are to be obeyed. If from sudden illness or intoxication he becomes incompetent to command, the supreme authority would revert to the master during the period of the pilot's incapacity. The Christiana, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 172; 7 Notes of Cases, Supp. xiv.

2123. It would be a most dangerous doctrine to hold, except under extraordinary circumstances, that the master could be justified in interfering with the pilot in his proper vocation. The Maria, 1 W. Rob. 110; The Admiral Boxer, Swabey, 196; The Argo, ibid. 464.

2124. But it is his duty to look after the pilot, and in the case of the pilot's palpable incompetency, intoxication, or loss of faculties, to interpose his authority for the preservation of the property of his employers. The Duke of Manchester, 2 W. Rob. 480; 4 Notes of Cases, 582; 10 Jur. 865.

2125. In cases of obvious danger the master is bound to interfere in the management of the vessel, although a licensed pilot be in charge of her. The Girolamo, 3 Hagg. 169, 176.

2126. Held, that it would be the duty of the master of a steamer navigating the Thames with a licensed pilot on board when a thick fog came on to insist on anchoring, and to overrule the pilot on this head if necessary. Ibid.; and see the observations of Dr. Lushington on this decision in The North American and The Wild Rose; 2 Asp. 320.

2127. There may be cases in which the master of a ship is justified in interfering with the pilot in charge, but they are very rare. If the pilot is intoxicated, or is steering a course to the certain destruction of the vessel, the master ought to interfere, but only in urgent cases. The Peerless, 1 L. T. N.S. 125; 1 Lushington, 30; 2 L. T. N.S. 25; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 484.

2128. Considering the duties imposed on pilots, their experience and local knowledge, it would be most dangerous to sanction the interference of the master in any way in the performance of those duties. The Lochlibo, 3 W. Rob. 321; 14 Jur. 1074; 7 Moo. P. C. C. 427.

2129. If the pilot was utterly incompetent to the proper discharge of his duties, it would clearly be incumbent upon the master to interfere for the protection of the lives and property on board his vessel. Ibid. 3 W. Rob. 321.

2130. Interference with the pilot, as distinguished from suggestion, is the doing of that which the pilot alone ought to have done. Ibid.

2131. It would be very dangerous to hold that there can be any divided authority in the ship between the master and the pilot with reference to the same subject. Ibid. 7 Moo. P. C. C. 430.

2132. To consult the pilot or suggest the propriety of his adopting or not adopting any particular measure, would not amount to illegal interference with him. Ibid. 3 W. Rob. 321.

2133. There may be circumstances in which the measures to be adopted are so obvious, that though the pilot ought to have ordered them and did not do so, his neglect will be no excuse for the master and crew omitting to adopt them. The Diana, 4 Moo. P. C. C. 11; The Christiana, 7 Moo. P. C. C. 160; The Lochlibo, Ibid. 430.

2135. The doctrine laid down in The Christiana (2122, supra) and The Lochlibo (2128, supra) concerning the relative duties of pilot and crew recognized and approved. The City of Cambridge, L. R. 5 P. C. 451; 43 L. J. Adm. P. C. 11; 2 Asp. N.S. P. C. 239.

2136. A vessel is only under the direction of the pilot for the purpose of navigation. In a case of collision the master is the proper party to give directions for the cutting away a lanyard, where such a course may be necessary to prevent further damage. He is not to wait for the pilot's directions, which would tend to create great confusion and delay. The Massachusetts, 10 Jur. 373.

2137. In criminal proceedings against a master of a vessel who has a compulsory pilot on board, such master is not bound to prove that at the time of the act or omission, the subject of such proceedings, he was not interfering with the navigation of his vessel, and he cannot be convicted unless it is shown against him that he was so interfering. Oakley v. Speedy, 4 Asp. 134.

2138. The R. in charge of a tug was dropping stern foremost up the Humber with the tide, and was eventually brought athwart the tide to go into dock. The R. was exhibiting, in addition to the masthead and side lights, a white light from the main peak showing astern, and placed there by order of the pilot, who was by compulsion of law in charge of the R. The rules for the navigation of the river Humber made by Order in Council in pursuance of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 32, incorporate the regulations for preventing collisions at sea. The E. coming down the Humber came into collision with the R. At the hearing of an action between them it was admitted that the E. was to blame. Held, that the R. was also to blame, for that, as the Humber rules were within the purview of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 17 (as to which see tit. COLLISION, Pt. IV. c. 2, s. 3, p. 215), there had been, by the exhibition of a stern light, a breach of a statutory regulation, viz., of Art. 2, which it was impossible to say might not have contributed to the collision, and there were no circumstances to make a departure from the regulation necessary. Held, also, that the fact of the light having been exhibited by order of the pilot, did not exempt the owner of the R. from liability, as the master should not have permitted an infringement of the regulations. The Ripon, 10 P. D. 65.

See also ss. 3 and 4, supra.

6. Look-out.

2140. The owners, not the pilot, are responsible for the insufficiency of the look-out. The Batavier, 1 Spinks' Ecl. and Adm. Rep. 378; 10 Jur. 19; Netherlands Steamboat Co. v. Styles, 9 Moore,

P. C. C. 286; Stuart v. Isemonger (The Diana), 4 ibid. 11; 1 W. Rob. 136; 6 Jur. 157; The Lochlibo, 2 W. Rob. 319; 14 Jur. 1074; 7 Moore, P. C. C. 430. The Iona, L. R. 1 P. C. 426; 4 Moore, P. C. N.S. 336; 2 Asp. 479; The Velasquez, L. R. 1 P. C. 494; 36 L. J. Adm. 19; 4 Moore, P. C. N.S. 426; 2 Asp. 544.

2142. Owners held liable for collision with a barge, as sufficient notice of the approach of the barge had not been given to the pilot. The Minna, L. R. 2 A. & E. 97. See also The Queen, The Lord John Russell, L. R. 2 A. & E. 354; 38 L. J. Adm. 39; 3 Asp. 242.

2143. A steamer in charge of a pilot by compulsion of law, came into collision with a sailing barge off Blackwall Point. The pilot did not see the barge, nor was it reported to him until it was too late to avoid the collision, but both the pilot and a man on the look-out forward might have seen the barge much earlier. Held, that there was neglect of duty on the part of the look-out man; that this neglect of duty conduced to the collision, and that it was such default on the part of the crew of the steamer as to disentitle the owners to set up the defence of compulsory pilotage. The Iona, L. R. 1 P. C. 426; 4 ibid. N.S. 336; 2 Asp. 479; 4 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 336.

2144. As to the duties generally in regard to the look-out, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. IV. c. 5, p. 219.

See also No. 2145, infra.

7. Speed.

(a) Generally.

2145. A steamer in charge of a duly-licensed pilot, proceeding up the river caused such a swell that a barge laden with coals was thereby sunk. Held, that the owners of the steamer were to blame for a bad look-out, and that the pilot was to blame for not stopping the speed of the steamer. The Batavier, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 378; 10 Jur. 19; 9 Moore, P. C. C. 286.

2146. A barge was moored in the Thames in a place where she was particularly exposed to the action of the wind and tide. A steamer passing by her in charge of a pilot and navigated at a proper rate of speed, caused a swell, and the barge sank. Held, that the sinking of the barge was occasioned partly from the exposed locality in which she was moored, and partly from the swell of the steamer. Action by the barge against the steamer dismissed with costs. The Duke of Cornwall, April 16, 1862.

2147. The L. sailed through the Downs at a time and with a speed which made it hardly possible that she should pass without danger to other vessels. Held (affirming the judgment of the court below), that such sailing was improper; but that her so sailing was exclusively the fault of the pilot. The Lochlibo, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 429.

2148. It is the duty of a pilot, in giving directions for the navigation of a vessel to determine the rate of speed at which she should proceed. The Calabar, L. R. 2 P. C. 238; 3 Asp. 195; 5 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 291.

(b) Stopping and reversing of Engines.

2151. A brig moored in the Thames was in midday run into by a steamer having a duly-licensed pilot on board, who ordered the engines to be stopped and reversed. Held, that the engines were not reversed so promptly as they might have been, and as the evidence of the engineers was not produced that the pilot was not solely and exclusively to blame, the owners therefore were not exonerated. The Ripon, 6 Notes of Cases, 245.

2152. As to the duty generally of stopping and reversing engines on risk of collision, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. IV. c. 7, ss. 4 and 5, p. 230.

8. Steering.

pilot to take care that that usage is complied with; but where the mode of sailing is such as every master, according to the ordinary course of navigation, ought to adopt in every open roadstead where many vessels are lying and in blowing weather, it is as much the master's as the pilot's duty to see that the proper course is taken. If, however, the pilot gives express orders to the contrary, the owners might be excused from responsibility for the consequences of the pilot's orders. The Christiana, 7 Moore, P. C. C. 173; 7 Notes of Cases, Supp. xiv.

2154. The pilot has the sole direction of a vessel in those respects where his local knowledge is presumably required; the direction, the course, and the manœuvres of the vessel when sailing, belong to him. Ibid. 172.

2156. It is the duty of the pilot to decide whether and when to shorten sail. Ibid.

2158. The steering and amount of sail to be carried are matters to be regulated by the pilot. The Julia, 14 Moore, P. C. C. 233.

2160. A steamer in charge of a pilot proceeding down the Thames on her port side of the river, came into collision with a barge. In an action for damage against the pilot, held, that it was his duty to have kept the steamer on the starboard side, but within the fair-way, and when he saw risk of collision to have ported her helm, and therefore it was properly left to the jury to say whether, at the time of the collision, the steamer was so on the starboard side, and, whatever her position, whether the collision was caused by the negligence of the pilot or not. Smith v. Voss, 29 L. T. 97; 2 H. & N. 97; 26 L. J. Exch. 233.

2162. As to the duties generally as to steering, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. VII. c. 1, p. 254.

9. Actions between Tugs and Tows.*

2163. A ship in charge of a pilot, and also in tow, is to be considered, under

* (553) By analogy to the common law relation in which a pilot stands to the owners, and to the master and crew of the ship in his charge, it would seem that the master and crew of the tug are agents of the owners of the ship, and that for damage done to a stranger solely through the fault or incapacity of the crew of the tug, both parties are answerable, and that if the master and crew of the ship have, through fault or incapacity on their part, contributed to the damage, there is no right of action between the ship and the tug to recover over. It would seem also that the same analogy to the case of a pilot would place the master and crew of the ship under the orders of the tug in all things proper to the due and safe fulfilment of the contract, subject only to analogous exceptions as to the right of the master of the ship, under extraordinary circumstances, to interfere and refuse to execute the orders from the tug, and this opinion appears to be justified by the presumed local knowledge and experience of those who have been by the contract entrusted with the command of the moving power, and the selection of the course. Mac-lachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 287.

(554) When a pilot is taken on board a ship which is being towed by a steam-tug, the pilot's control of the conduct of the ship extends also to that of the tug which has her in tow; and without exempting the master and crew of either vessel from the duty of exercising diligence, care, and skill in the working of their own vessel, such exercise must be in strict subordination to the orders of the pilot, subject to exceptions under extraordinary circumstances. Ibid. p. 288.

(555) The absolute rights and liabilities of each of the three parties are not changed, the legal relation of either pair of them is not ordinary circumstances, as still in the charge of the pilot. If the course pursued by the tug is in conformity with the directions of the pilot, or not against his directions, and a collision takes place, the pilot is responsible, and not the owners nor the tug, which ought to obey the pilot. If, however, the tug disregards the directions of the pilot, then the owners of the tow would be responsible, as for the acts of their servant, and the owners of the tug might be responsible over to them in another form of action. The Gipsy King, 5 Notes of Cases, 288.

2165. Steam-tugs employed in an ordinary towage service, are bound to be subservient to the orders of the pilot on board the vessel in tow. The Christina, 3 W. Rob. 27; 6 Moore, P. C. C. 371; 6 Notes of Cases, 4.

2166. The master of the tug must implicitly obey the orders of the pilot, except in the case of wilful misconduct or gross mismanagement on his part. Ibid.

2167. Imperfect obedience is disobedience. Ibid., 6 Moore, P. C. C. 380.

2169. Quare, whether prior to the Judiciary Acts, notwithstanding such misconduct, the tug could recover towage from the owners of the vessel under the contract, and leave the vessel towed to a cross action for the damage. Ibid.

2170. A ship with a duly-licensed pilot on board was in tow of a tug. The tug having become detached, the master of the tow against the advice of and unknown to his pilot ordered the tug to be re-attached, and in consequence a collision occurred between tug and tow. Held, that the tow was responsible for the damage. The Julia, 14 Moore, P. C. C. 210; 1 Lushington, 233.

2172. The A. and J. S. came into collision in the river Mersey, for which the pilot of the A. was solely to blame. The steam-tug towing the A. was compelled to cut adrift and leave her. The A. and J. S. then drifted up the river, and after some time cleared each other, when the J. S. brought up, and the A. continued drifting until she came into collision with the G. L. While the A. was drifting she had let go her starboard anchor and the chain of the port anchor, the port anchor itself having been broken in the first collision. A.'s steam-tug had also thrown a line on board, which was not attended to. Held, that the master and crew were to blame for not having veered out more cable to the starboard anchor, for not having bent on a hawser to the line thrown from the steam-tug, and for not having squared the foreyard, and set sail upon it, and that the neglect in these respects occasioned the collision. The owners of the A. accordingly held responsible for the damage to the G. L. The Annapolis and Golden Light, 5 L. T. N.S. 692.

2173. A tug is not relieved from the altered by their co-relation when it becomes triple. The tug is the agent of the ship in tow, and liable over to her owners for any damage due to fault in it alone. The pilot is at common law the agent of the same owners, when appointed by them, and liable over in like manner for the consequences of his own fault, inclusive of immediate damage by the tug when that is the result of his orders. Ibid. p. 289.

(556) In respect of tug and of pilot at common law the owners of the ship in tow are primarily liable to third persons suffering damage by the acts of either. Ibid.

(557) Any disobedience of tug or ship in tow disentitles the owners of the latter to the statutory protection. Ibid. p. 290.

(558) If the damage done by a ship in tow while a qualified pilot is compulsorily on board is, at least partly, due to the fault of those in the tug, the owners of the ship in tow are in the first instance liable, with a right to recover over in case their own master and crew are clear of blame. Ibid.

(559) A steamboat was hired for the purpose of towing a vessel, to which she was fastened, and both were under the direction of a licensed pilot. The owner of the steamboat held not entitled to damages on account of injury sustained in the course of the navigation, and not caused by undue negligence of the pilot. Reeves v. The Constitution, Gilpin, 579. [AMERICAN.]

responsibility of watching the course ordered by the pilot on board the tow. The Duke of Manchester, 2 W. Rob. 470; 4 Notes of Cases, 582.

2180. Held, further, that the pilot's not adopting at the last the doubtful manœuvre of casting off the tow rope did not amount to contributory negligence, and that the tug was alone in fault. Ibid.

2181. Quare, would contributory negligence on the part of the pilot, who was taken by compulsion of law, have affected the owners of the R.? Ibid.

2182. Great injustice might be done if in applying the doctrine of contributory negligence to a case of this kind, the maxim causa proxima non remota spectatur were lost sight of. Ibid.

2183a. The Julia (14 Moore, P. C. C. 210) commented on and approved. Ibid.

2184. Quare, whether in an action between tug and tow, owners of the tow are answerable for the contributory negligence of their pilot employed by compulsion of law. Ibid.

2186. A steam-tug employed in towing a barque attempted to cross the bows of the M., and a collision ensued between the M. and the barque. The owners of the M. having recovered damages against the barque, the owners of the barque instituted a suit to recover from the tug the amount of the damage done both to the M. and to the barque. Held, that the steam-tug was to blame, but that the pilot in charge of the barque by compulsion of law was also to blame, as he might have avoided the collision had he ordered the tug to cast off the tow rope. Action dismissed without costs. The Energy, L. R. 3 A. & E. 48; 39 L. J. Adm. 25; 3 Asp. 503.

2187. The pilot in charge of a ship in tow is not bound to direct every movement of the towing vessel, but may allow the tug a discretion as to the way in which to tow past other vessels, without by such conduct delegating his authority to the master of the tug. The Singuasi, 4 Asp. 383.

See also next section.

2187*a*. As to the duties generally between steamers and ships in tow, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. IV. c. 8, p. 231.

10. *Actions between Tug or Tow and Third Ship.

2188. A steam-tug employed in towing a vessel, held not responsible for damage occasioned by the vessel in tow coming in contact with another vessel, the vessel in tow having had a licensed pilot on board at the time, under whose orders the steam-tug acted, and there having been no default on the part of the steam-tug. The Duke of Sussex, 1 W. Rob. 270.

2189. Where a tug, whilst towing a vessel, which is under compulsory pilotage, comes into collision with another vessel, the tug is not entitled to set up the defence of compulsory pilotage. (Ibid. distinguished.) The Mary, 5 P. D. 14; 48 L. J. P. D. 66; 4 Asp. 183.

2190. Because, semble, there is no obligation upon the tug to obey the orders of the pilot. Ibid.

2193. A steam-tug employed in towing a barque attempted to cross the bows of the M., and a collision ensued between the M. and the barque. The owners of the M. having recovered damages against the barque, the owners of the barque instituted a suit to recover from the tug the amount of the damage done, both to the M. and to the barque. Held, that the steam-tug was to blame, but that the pilot in charge of the barque by compulsion of law might have avoided the collision had he ordered the tug to cast off the tow-rope, and that, therefore, the suit must be dismissed, but without costs. The Energy, L. R. 3 A. & E. 48; 39 L. J. Adm. 25; 3 Asp. 503.

2194. In a cause of damage by collision occasioned by a vessel while being towed, and while in charge of a pilot by compulsion of law, no blame attaching to the crew, held, that the owners were protected from liability. The Ocean Wave, L. R. 3 P. C. 205; 3 Asp. 482; 6 Moore, P. C. N.S. 492.

11. Ship anchoring and weighing Anchor.

(a) Generally.†

2195. It is the duty of the pilot, and not that of the master, to determine where, and whether or not, the ship shall be brought up. The Lochlibo, 3 W. Rob. 310; 14 Jur. 1074; 7 Moore, P. C. C. 430; but see The Girolamo, 3 Hagg. 169, No. 2109, supra.

2197. The time and manner of dropping the anchor are exclusively within the province of the pilot. Ibid.

2198. In the case of a vessel taking up her berth in dock, the time and manner of dropping the anchor is exclusively within the province of the pilot. The Agricola, 2 W. Rob. 10.

* (560) See notes 553—558, pp. 1406—1407.

(561) Where a steam-tug with a ship in tow, both vessels being in charge of a pilot appointed by the owners of the ship, negligently caused the ship to collide with another vessel, it was held that the tug was liable. The Rescue, 2 Sprague, 16. [AMERICAN.]

† (562) The authority of a licensed pilot in securing a vessel in her berth is not paramount to that of her master; the latter is deemed in full command, and the acts of the pilot are regarded as done with the direction or approval of the master. The Lotty, Olcott, Adm. 329. [AMERICAN.]

2200. When a vessel comes to anchor the duty of the pilot is at an end, but if he continues on board she is still under his charge. Ibid.

2201. A ship, having a licensed pilot on board, whilst at anchor in the Downs in bad weather, was run into by another vessel and made to start from her anchorage, and was driven into a vessel at anchor. Held (affirming the judgment of the court below), that her owners were responsible for the damage, because, 1st, the ship, notwithstanding the bad weather, and a large number of vessels lying wind-bound in the Downs, had neglected to send down her topgallant and main royal yards, and her short fore and mizen topgallant masts; and because, 2ndly, she did not set her staysail and jib, so as to drag her anchor off shore. Held, further, that though the latter was the fault of the pilot alone, the former was the joint fault of the pilot and master, that step being one which every master, according to the ordinary course of navigation, ought to have taken in blowing weather in every open roadstead where many vessels were lying. Ibid.

2202. Had the pilot given express orders to the contrary, semble, the owners might have been exempted from responsibility. Ibid.

2203. The pilot in charge of a ship is solely responsible for getting the ship under weigh in improper circumstances, e.g. without employing her steam-tug, which was in attendance. The Peerless, 1 L. T. N.S. 125; 1 Lushington, 30; 2 L. T. N.S. 25; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 484.

2204. The catching of the cable on the windlass in running out held not to be a fault on the part of the master and crew, so as to render the owners liable, the collision being, in other respects, attributable to the pilot. Ibid.

2205. It is the pilot's duty to see that the anchor is properly catted, and to take care that everything is properly done to bring the vessel to anchor in the port to which he is conducting her. The Gipsy King, 2 W. Rob. 538; 5 Notes of Cases, 292; 11 Jur. 357.

2206. The manner in which a ship should be brought into a roadstead is entirely within the province of the pilot in charge, by whose judgment the master of the ship must be guided. Collision in consequence of the pilot's error in this respect. Held, that the owners were not responsible. The George, 9 Jur. 670; 4 Notes of Cases, 161.

2207. The pilot held solely responsible for a foul berth. The Northampton, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 152, 160.

2208. A vessel dragging her anchor and coming into collision with another, held to blame for not letting go another anchor. Held, also, that this was the fault of the pilot alone, and that the owners were therefore not liable. Ibid.

2209. The C. held liable for a collision caused by the neglect of her crew in not having the anchor clear and ready to let go, in consequence of which, when the pilot ordered it to be dropped, it got foul of the head-rails. The Centurion, Oct. 27, 1854.

2210. If the collision is partly the fault of the pilot (in not coming to an anchor in sufficient time), and partly the fault of the owners (the weight of the anchors being defective), the owners will be held responsible. The Massachusetts, 1 W. Rob. 371.

2211. A vessel, whilst under the command of a duly-licensed pilot, and doing everything which was right and incumbent upon her to do, came into collision with another vessel, solely from her anchors not holding, the weight of the anchors being defective. Held, that the owners were responsible for the damage. Ibid.

2212. A foreign ship was moored in Falmouth harbour, and a British ship, having a licensed pilot on board, in anchoring near ran foul of her and caused damage. Held, that some blame being imputable to the pilot, and there not being sufficient evidence to fix any blame on the crew of the British ship, her owners were exonerated and the suit dismissed accordingly, but without costs. The Atlas, 5 Notes of Cases, 52.

2214. As to the duties generally in regard to vessels anchoring and weighing anchor, and as to vessels anchored or moored, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. VIII. cc. 4, 5, 6, pp. 287—291.

2215. As to the duties generally in regard to vessels mooring or docking, Ibid. p. 288.

(b) In the Mersey.

2216. Every pilot and apprentice shall execute and obey all orders given by the Board or the superintendent of pilotage, the master or the acting shoremaster, for the time being on shore, of the boat to which he is attached, and shall also obey all orders given by the water bailiff, harbour masters or dock and pierhead masters, relative to the docking, towing, transporting, or removing of vessels under their charge. Bye-law No. 1, of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board; P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 61.

2217. He (the pilot) shall duly keep the lead going when in charge of any ship or vessel while under weigh. Ibid. Bye-law 9.

2218. A pilot in charge of a vessel shall not leave her until she is safely anchored in the river, and then only with the written permission of the officer in command, or on being relieved by a qualified pilot by order of the acting shoremaster of such boat for the time being on shore. Ibid. Bye-law 10.

2220. If a pilot does anchor a vessel within such limits he shall send to the superintendent of pilotage a written report of his reasons for so doing. Ibid.

2221. When leaving the dock in charge of a vessel, the pilot shall see that the cables are bent and that the anchors are got over the bows and ready for letting go immediately after clearing the pier-head. Ibid. p. 62, Bye-law 25.

2222. A screw steamship, in charge of a pilot, having been brought up by her port anchor in the Mersey with an improperly short length of cable, parted the cable about 12 o'clock at night. Although her fires were banked and her steam was up at the time she was allowed to drift down the river for a mile and a half, when she came into collision with a vessel at anchor. Held, that the pilot in charge of the steamship was solely to blame for the collision. The City of Cambridge, L. R. 5 P. C. 451; L. R. 4 A. & E. 161; 43 L. J. Adm. 11; ibid. P. C. 72; 2 Asp. N.S. 193; ibid. 239.

12. Sufficiency of Ship and Equipment.

(a) Generally.

2225. All vessels are more or less unwieldy, and it is the duty of a pilot on board an unwieldy vessel, so to handle her as to prevent collision as far as practicable. The Presto, Nov. 17, 1853.

2227. A vessel, whilst under the command of a duly-licensed pilot, and doing everything which was right and incumbent upon her to do, came into collision with another vessel, solely from her anchor not holding, the weight of the anchor being defective. Held, that the owners were responsible. The Massachusetts, 1 W. Rob. 371.

2228. Held to be a want of caution to move by means of a steam-tug a ship from one dock to another at night-time. Under such circumstances a pilot on board a ship being towed has no such charge or control over her movements as to exculpate the owners. The Borussia, Swabey, 94.

2229. It is the duty of a pilot going down a river to make allowance for the effect of the tide, and if he does so, and a collision occurs from an inherent defect in the ship, occasioning her not answering her helm with the same facility as an ordinary ship, no blame will attach to the pilot, and the owners will be liable for the damage. Held, that the owners were responsible by reason of such a defect. The Peru, July 16, 1857.

2230. The position in which the anchor is placed is a matter under the control of the pilot. The Rigborgs Minde, 8 P. D. C. A. 132; 52 L. J. P. D. 74; 5 Asp. 123.

2231. A master, if he knows of anything whatever in the state of his vessel or her crew which would, or might, injuriously affect her behaviour at a moment of emergency, must disclose it to the pilot, or he will be prevented from establishing the defence of compulsory pilotage. Per Christian, L. J., in the Court of Appeal in Chancery. The Meteor, I. R. 9 Eq. 567. [IRISH.]

2232. The master informed the pilot that his vessel was drawing twelve feet of water aft and nine forward, whereas, in fact, it was drawing fourteen feet of water aft and nine forward. Held, by the Court of Appeal in Chancery, that there was contributory negligence on the part of the master, and that the owners had failed to prove their defence of compulsory pilotage. Ibid.

(b) Trim.

2233. If a vessel in charge of a pilot is out of ordinary trim, so that she is carried by force of the tide more than a ship in ordinary safe trim would have been, and this helped to bring about the collision, the owners are responsible for the damage, the trim of the ship being within the province of the master. The Argo, Swabey, 462.

2234. But if she is in ordinary safe trim, then, although she might be in handier trim, and although the trim of the ship in part contributed to the collision, they are not responsible. Ibid.

Part VIII.—PART OWNERS.

1. Generally.

2235. As to the division of the property in a ship into sixty-four shares, and the provision that not more than sixty-four individuals shall be entitled to be registered as owners of any one ship; as to no person being entitled to be registered as owner of a fractional part of a share in a ship; as to the registration of joint owners of a ship or share; and as to a body corporate being registered as owner by its corporate name, see Pt. I. p. 1185, No. 47.

2236. As to shares in ships being deemed stock under the Trustee Act, 1850, Ibid. No. 50.

2238. As to who may be owners, and of what vessels, and as to evidence of ownership, Ibid. Nos. 165—178, p. 1198.

2239. As to beneficial interests in ships, Ibid. No. 47, p. 1185; and Nos. 261—265, pp. 1207, 1208.*

2240. As to persons beneficially interested in any ships or shares, but not registered as owners, see No. 594, p. 1245.

2241. As to the forfeiture of interests of unqualified persons, Ibid. Nos. 586, 587, p. 1244.

2242. All sums of money paid for or on account of any loss or damage in respect whereof the liability of the owners of any ship is limited by the ninth part of this act, and all costs incurred in relation thereto, may be brought into account among part owners of the same ship in the same manner as money disbursed for the use thereof. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 515.

2243. A part owner of a ship is not necessarily a partner. Helme v. Smith, 7 Bing. 709; 5 M. & P. 744. See Ex parte Harrison, 2 Rose, 76; Ex parte Young, 2 V. & B. 242; Green v. Briggs, 6 Hare, 402, overruling the dictum of Lord Hardwicke in Doddington v. Hallett, 1 Vesey, sen. 496.

2244. The owners of a ship are not interested in it as joint-tenants, but as tenants in common. Ex parte Harrison, 2 Rose, 76; Ex parte Young, 2 Ves. & B. 242.

2245. Part owners are tenants in common of a ship, but jointly interested in her use and employment; and the law as to the earnings of a ship, whether as

* (563) See the observations on section 3 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, c. 63, in MacLachlan's Supplement, p. 3 (anno 1862), to his treatise on the law of shipping. For the law prior to this act, see notes to Pt. I. c. 4, pp. 1206, 1207.

freight, cargo, or otherwise, follows the general law of partnership. Green v. Briggs, 6 Hare, 395, 632; 12 Jur. 326; 17 L. J. Chanc. 323.

2246. One who is interested in the freight alone, held liable to contribute his proportion of the expenses incurred by the ship in earning the freight. Lindsay v. Gibbs, 22 Beav. 522; 2 Jur. N.S. 1039.

2247. A purchaser of shares in a ship is entitled to share in the ship's earnings only after deduction of the expenses incurred in making those earnings. Green v. Briggs, supra; Lindsay v. Gibbs, supra.

2248. The possession of one owner is the possession of all. Ex parte Machel, 1 Rose, 447; 2 V. & B. 216.

2249. Held, prior to the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 3, that one shipowner could not bind another unless the names of both appeared together as owners in the same registry, Lord Eldon being of opinion, under the circumstances, that the two persons were not co-owners. Campbell v. Stein, 6 Dow. 135. And see No. 2264.

2250. One part owner cannot recover damages against another by an action at law on a charge of wilfully and deceitfully sending the ship to foreign parts, where she was lost. Graves v. Sawcer, Sir T. Raym. 15; 1 Keb. 38; 1 Lev. 29.

2252. If a ship be chartered for the purpose of trade and warfare, and afterwards be sent on a voyage of discovery against the consent of the owners, whereby the ship is lost, the owners may sue for the value of their property. Aliter, if one of the owners consent to the voyage. Lewin v. The East India Co., Peake, 318.

2253. A vessel belonging to a number of part owners was forcibly taken by the minority out of the possession of the majority, and sent by the former upon foreign voyages, on one of which it was ultimately lost. Held, that trover could not be maintained. One tenant in common of a chattel, cannot maintain trover for it against his co-tenants while the right of recaption remains; but when that right has been put an end to by the act of the co-tenant, an action of trover lies. Knight v. Coates, 1 L. R. Exch. 53. [IRISH.]

2254. A part owner of a ship is entitled to sue for recovery of his share of the damage occasioned by her having been destroyed. Lawson v. Leith and Newcastle Packet Co., 13 D. 175; 23 Jur. 51. [SCOTCH.]

2255. If part owners of a ship are connected together so as to be considered partners, a payment made by one will revive a joint debt as against the other, and will prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations, though the payment is made for the express purpose of so reviving the debt. Griffiths v. Hicks, 15 L. T. 349.

2257. A partner may arrest the ship (the property of himself and co-partner) in a suit for necessaries. Ibid.

2258. Covenant by the master of a vessel with the several part owners and their several executors, administrators, and assigns, to pay certain moneys to them in such proportions as were set against their several names. Held, a several covenant, that each covenantee must therefore sue separately, and not all jointly. Servante v. James, 10 B. & C. 411.

2259. No question arises as to the jurisdiction of the court in enforcing the rights of some against the other part owners of a ship with regard to the management of the ship, and the possession of the certificate of registry, when those rights are regulated by an agreement entered into between all the owners of the ship. Darby v. Baines, 9 Hare, 369; 21 L. J. Chanc. 801.

2260. Semble, the master, though the original hypothecator of the ship and a part owner, is not precluded by the practice of the Court of Admiralty from joining his co-owners in impugning the bond. Soares v. Rahn (The Prince of Saxe Cobourg), 3 Moore, P. C. C. 1.

2261. Restitution had passed, in solidum, of three-fourths of the property claimed, to an American house of trade. Afterwards, on petition, it appeared that one of the partners was an English merchant, and a bankrupt. His assignees prayed a severance of his particular share, to be paid to them as his representatives, for the benefit of his creditors. The court refused it, as no part of the duty of the Prize Court of Admiralty, saying, the petitioners must resort to some other authority to make the discrimination between this American partnership stock, for the purpose of subjecting a particular share to a British bankruptcy. The Jefferson, 1 C. Rob. 325.

2263. A. and B. were joint owners of a ship; A. working the ship, defraying all the expenses, and taking the uncontrolled management of her, and paying himself by taking two-thirds of the gross earnings; B. taking the remaining one-third as his portion. Held, that A. was a hirer of the share of B., and not the servant or agent of B., so as to render B. liable in any action for damages caused by the negligence of A. Bernard v. Aaron, 9 Jur. N.S. 470.

2264. A managing owner of a vessel has power to bind his co-owner as his agent, to release the vessel from an arrest in the Admiralty Court in a suit for collision, by procuring bail for damages and costs in such suit. Barker v. Highley, 32 L. J. C. P. 270; 11 W. R. 968; 9 L. T. N.S. 228.

2264a. Where, therefore, such managing owner has obtained the release of the vessel by procuring such bail, and the suit in the Admiralty Court has terminated against the vessel, the bail is entitled to recover from the other owner the amount which such bail has had to pay under the bail-bond. Ibid.

2266. For provisions protecting the rights of persons acquiring title to goods before they have been seized or attached under a writ against the vendor, see ibid. s. 1.

2267. A part owner acting as master may be guilty of barratry as against his co-owners. Jones v. Nicholson, 10 Ex. 28; 23 L. J. Ex. 330.

2270. The other part owners are liable in respect of their shares as well as the master, also a part owner, for short delivery of cargo. The Emilien Marie, 44 L. J. N.S. Adm. 9.

2272. The agents of a foreign ship in a British port who have paid for necessaries supplied to her, or who have rendered themselves liable to pay for such necessaries, may sue the ship for such advances as were made on the ship's account, but not for the balance of a general account against her owners. A co-owner in a ship may sue the ship for such advances made by him, but semble, not if the co-owner is interested in the particular voyage for which the ship is supplied.* (The West Friedland, Swabey, 455, followed). The Underwriter, 1 Asp. N.S. 127.

2. Possession.

1. Generally.*

2273. The court inclines against disposition, and requires the plaintiff's claim to be clearly proved. The Victoria, Swabey, 408; 5 Jur. N.S. 204.

2274. The party holding the bill of sale has the legal title, and is entitled to the possession against the asserted equitable interest in others. Sentence accordingly in a cause of possession. The Sisters, 5 C. Rob. 155.

2275. In a cause of possession, held, that the interest of a shareholder who had died since the commencement of the proceedings, and whose personal representative had not given the practitioner any authority to proceed in the cause, is to be deducted from the estimate of the quantum of interest claiming a transfer of possession. Ibid.

2276. In a cause of possession the court will not, at the hearing, listen to the suggestion that certain of the owners had not authorized the proceedings taken on their behalf, the defendant's remedy being to call for a proxy in an early stage of the cause. The New Draper, 4 C. Rob. 290. As to proxies, see tit. PRACTICE, Pt. II. c. 10.

2277. In causes of possession it is to be presumed that all those shareholders who do not apply are satisfied that the possession of the vessel should not be altered. The Valiant, 1 W. Rob. 67.

ed.), p. 124; and 1 Maude & Pollock on Merchant Shipping (4th ed.), by Pollock & Bruce, pp. 109, 110.

(567) If one tenant in common deprives the other of possession of the common chattel, and carries it away, no action lies against him, but if he destroys it he is liable to be sued by his companion. Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 100; and 1 Maude & Pollock on ditto, p. 101 (4th ed.).

(568) The owners, whatever be their mutual relation in respect of the ship as property, become, by the joint employment of her, partners in respect of the adventure, and the adjustment of their mutual claims and disputes in connection therewith is a question of partnership that can seldom be dealt with at common law. Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 103.

(569) For the specific cases in which an action will lie, see Ibid. (3rd ed.), pp. 103, 104.

(570) In respect of the obligations incurred by the owners upon contracts with strangers, it is clear if they hold the ship as partners that all are jointly liable on the contract of each made in the name and for the purposes of the partnership. Ibid. p. 107.

(571) If they are part owners and not partners, as is much more commonly the case, the law is that they are severally liable, each upon his own contract, made by himself, or by a duly-authorized agent on his behalf. Between partners the relation of principal and agent is implied by law; between part owners it remains to be proved in fact. Ibid.

(572) Part owners are not liable on contracts for the ship made by the master, merely because they are owners, or appear on the register as such, or hold themselves out as owners, and are in possession of the ship at the time of the contract, or because the contract is made by the registered master, acting as master with the privity and consent of the owners, and making the contract with their privity, and the goods and work are supplied and done on the credit of the owners, being fit, proper, and necessary for the ship under the circumstances existing at the time of the contract, unless the master is also held out by the defendants as their master of the particular ship acting on their behalf in the conduct, management, and direction of the vessel, and in ordering the goods and repairs. Ibid. p. 111.

(573) When part owners are liable to third parties their liability is not limited by the extent of their separate shares. 1 Maude & Pollock on Merchant Shipping (4th ed.), p. 95.

(574) The American law is the same. See French v. Price, 24 Pick. 13; Williams v. Sheppard, 1 Green, 76; Milburn v. Guylther, 8 Gill. 92. [AMERICAN.]

* (575) The majority of owners in amount of interest have a right to the general control of the vessel, to direct repairs, supplies, &c. Revens v. Lewis, 2 Paine, C. C. 202. [AMERICAN.]

(576) A part owner may sustain a petitory suit against a merely fraudulent possessor, without joining the other part owners; and if they do not appear, or object, and the libellant establishes his title, the court will decree the possession to him. The Friendship, 2 Curtis, C. C. 426. [AMERICAN.]

(577) In America Courts of Admiralty have no jurisdiction to try questions of equitable title, and can only give possession to the owner of the legal title. The W. D. Rice, 20 L. R. 501; Kellum v. Emerson, 2 Curtis, C. C. 79. See also Bogart v. The John Jay, 17 How. 399; Kynoch v. The S. C. Ives, 1 Newb. Adm. 205; The Taranto, 12 L. R. 5. [AMERICAN.]

(578) A Court of Admiralty cannot hold an equitable title sufficient to justify its interposition against a legal title to obtain possession, though it may consider such title as sufficient to prevent any interference with an existing possession under it. The S. C. Ives, 1 Newb. Adm. 205. [AMERICAN.]

2278. In a cause of possession promoted by the original owner against a purchaser under a sale by the master abroad, possession decreed (on motion, and semble, by consent) to the original owner, on giving bail to answer the other party's interest, and to cover freight, &c., while in his possession. Application of the purchaser to release the ship to him on bail, refused. The Partridge, 1 Hagg. 81.

2279. In consequence of the representations which have been made in numerous instances of the damages sustained by ships arrested in causes of possession lying for a length of time in harbour, the court has recently been induced to release them on bail. The Peggy, 4 C. Rob. 306.

2280. Ship released on bail in this case. Ibid.

2281. Ibid. In a cause of possession bail is taken as a substitute for the substance of the ship, but does not include a stipulation for any earnings that may be made. Application for bail to cover intermediate earnings refused. Ibid.

2282. In a cause of possession brought by the owner of 43 sixty-fourth shares against the master, owning the remaining shares, held, that the latter was not entitled to retain possession of the vessel upon an offer of security to the amount of his co-owner's interest. The Kent, 1 Lushington, 495.*

2283. Possession of a ship, time having been allowed for an appearance by the defendant, decreed to the plaintiffs, on affidavits and motion ex parte. The Lagan, otherwise Mimax, 3 Hagg. 418.

2284. In a cause of possession, motion in proceedings by default, to decree possession to the executor of a moiety owner, refused; but a monition against the parties having the remaining interest, to appear and show cause, granted. The Egyptienne, 1 Hagg. 346, n.

2285. In the Prize Court of Admiralty restitution had passed in solidum of three-fourths of the property claimed to an American house of trade. Afterwards it appeared that one of the parties was an English merchant and a bankrupt. His assignees prayed a severance of his particular share to be paid to them as his representatives for the benefit of his creditors; application refused. The Jefferson, 1 C. Rob. 325.

2287. It was agreed among the purchasers of a ship that two of them should be the ship's husbands, and not be removed except on certain specified grounds. In May, they obtained a charter-party for her, and privately stipulated for a weekly payment in addition to the sum payable by the terms of the charter-party. In consequence of this, upon the other owners obtaining full information of their dealings, notice was given to the ship's husbands of their dismissal in the following October. The ship's husbands denied the right to dismiss them, and possessed themselves of the machinery of the ship, which was then being repaired; held, on its appearing that a decree for possession could not be obtained in the Admiralty Court in time to enable the vessel to fulfil her engagement, that the Court of Chancery had power to appoint a receiver of the machinery and direct the possession of it to be delivered to him. Brenan v. Preston, 2 De Gex, M. & G. 813.

2288. The plaintiff alleged that by bill of sale duly registered the defendant, as sole owner of the vessel, transferred for valuable consideration a moiety of his interest to T. W., who, by a subsequent bill of sale duly registered, transferred that moiety to the plaintiff for value. The defendant denied that he had at any time signed any such bill of sale to T. W., and alleged that if any such bill of sale had been registered, it was registered fraudulently. The execution and registration of the bills of sale were proved, and the court directed the question whether the fraud alleged could affect the rights of the plaintiff to be raised on demurrer. The plaintiff thereupon demurred to so much of the defence as alleged fraud. Demurrer sustained on the ground that the legal ownership in the moiety of the vessel having passed to

* (579) According to the present practice the court will not, in a cause of possession, release the ship on bail, except when both parties consent to that course.

(580) In the American courts it is the practice, though not of very ancient date, to release the ship on bail in causes of possession. Dunlap's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), 165; The Alligator, 1 Gall. 145. [AMERICAN.]

(581) Bail in such cases is given for the value of ship, and her intermediate earnings. Ibid.

the plaintiff for valuable consideration by execution and registration of a bill of sale without notice of fraud, the plaintiff had thereby acquired a title thereto against the defendant. The Horlock, 2 P. D. 243; 36 L. T. 622.

2289. The United States Government having instituted a cause of possession, the defendant pleaded that the late Government of the Confederate States, through whom the plaintiff claimed, having contracted to purchase the vessel fraudulently dispossessed him of it without paying the purchase-money, and prayed that possession might not be decreed to the United States Government until it had satisfied his lien for unpaid purchase-money. On motion by the plaintiff to reject the plea, held, that the plea was good, and that if substantiated the court would grant the prayer. The Beatrice, otherwise The Rappahannock, 36 L. J. Adm. 9.

3. Jurisdiction of the Admiralty Division.

See tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. p. 638.

4. Jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty before the Judicature Acts.*

2293. The Court of Admiralty (prior to its abolition by the Judicature Acts), had jurisdiction to decide all questions as to the title to or ownership of any ship or vessel, or the proceeds thereof remaining in the registry, arising in any cause of possession instituted in the court. See 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 4.

2294. The Court of Admiralty had jurisdiction to decide all questions arising between co-owners, or any of them, touching the ownership or possession, employment and earnings of any ship registered at any port in England or Wales, or any share thereof, and might settle all accounts outstanding and unsettled between the parties in relation thereto, and might direct the said ship or any share thereof to be sold, and might make such order in the premises as to it should seem fit. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8.

2295. This section held to be retrospective. The Idas, Br. & Lush. 65; 2 N. R. 45.

2296. In a cause of possession when the Court of Admiralty was applied to at the instance of a legal owner it would not enforce his claim in disregard of equitable rights. A. was legal owner of thirty-six shares of a vessel, the master B. was legal owner of the other twenty-eight shares, and equitable owner as to four of A.'s shares, so that their beneficial interests were equal. Held, that A. had not such a title to the ship as entitled him to the aid of the court to take the possession out of the hands of the master. The Victoria, Swabey, 408; 5 Jur. N.S. 204; 7 W. R. 330.

2297. In a cause instituted between co-owners under sect. 8 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, an order granted against a dock company to bring in freight detained by them under a stop order of the defendants. The Meggie, L. R. 1 A. & E. 77.

2298. The mortgagee of a vessel duly sold the vessel under a power of sale contained in the mortgage deed. By mistake a discharge of the original mortgage was indorsed on the mortgage deed and registered. On the vendee of the vessel subsequently presenting his bill of sale for registration, registration was refused, on the ground that the property in the vessel had passed to the mortgagor. The mortgagee and the vendee of the vessel having instituted a suit praying that the vendee might be pronounced the sole owner of the vessel, held, that the court had jurisdiction under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, ss. 3 and 4, and the 11th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, to entertain the suit, and order made in terms of the prayer. The Rose, L. R. 4 A. & E. 6; 42 L. J. Adm. 11; 1 Asp. 567.

3. Actions of Restraint.*

1. Generally.

2302. Where there are several part owners of a ship, the minority may arrest the ship in the Admiralty Court, and compel a security to be given by the others before they shall be permitted to navigate out of port. Ouston v. Hebden, 1 Wils. 101.

2303. The court has authority to arrest a ship upon the application of a part owner who dissents from her intended employment, to compel the other part owners to give security to him, to the value of his share, for her safe return, and to enforce the same on the vessel being lost. The Apollo, 1 Hagg. 306, 311; The Margaret, 2 Hagg. 278; King v. Perry, 3 Salk. 23; More v. Rowbotham, 6 Mod. 162; Dimmock v. Chandler, 2 Stra. 890; Blacket v. Ansley, 1 Ld. Raym. 235; Lambert v. Acretree, ibid. 223; Ouston v. Hebden, 1 Wils. 101; Degrave v. Hedges, 2 Ld. Raym. 1285;

(overruling Justice v. Brown, Hardres, 473; and Knight v. Berry, Rep. temp. Holt, 647; 1 Show. 13; Comb. 109; Carth. 26).

2304. The Court of Admiralty is open all the year round to applications by part owners to restrain the sailing of ships without their consent, until security be given to the amount of their respective shares. Haly v. Goodson, 2 Mer. 77; 2 Dod. 420.

2305. A mortgagee not in possession of a share of a ship is not entitled to arrest a vessel for the purpose of enforcing bail for her safe return to this country. Motion on behalf of a mortgagee for such purpose rejected. The Highlander, 2 W. Rob. 109.

2306. If a British merchant embark his property in shares of a foreign vessel, he becomes, as regards her government and management, subject to the law of the foreign state to which she belongs. The Graff Arthur Burnstorff, 2 Spinks' Ecl. and Adm. Rep. 30.

2307. The court has no power, at the suit of a British part owner of a foreign ship, to arrest her until bail is given for her safe return to her own port abroad. Ibid.

2308. Application, at the instance of British part owners, for warrant to arrest a foreign vessel until she gave bail for her return, refused, it not being shown that such was the law of the country to which she belonged. Ibid.

2309. Security having been decreed and given by part owners to another part owner

* (583) The ordinances upon this subject of the several commercial nations of continental Europe are different, and all of them differ from the law of England, which possesses this important advantage over them, that while, in common with them, it authorizes the majority in value to employ the ship "upon any probable design," it takes care at the same time to secure the interest of the dissentient minority from being lost in the employment of which they disapprove, by exacting security for her safe return. See Conkling's American Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), 321, 322; Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 99.

(584) By the major part is meant value, not number. 2 Brown, Civil and Adm. Law (2nd ed.), 131.

(585) The law of America is the same in these respects as that of England, except that when the minority are in favour of employing the ship it has been held that their opinion ought to prevail. The Steamboat New Orleans v. The Phœbus, 11 Peters, 175; 12

(587) The owner of one-eighth of a vessel, and known to be such by the other owners, omitted, without fraudulent intent, to comply with the requisitions of the revenue laws, and the other owners projected a voyage of which he disapproved, and prayed for the usual security. for the safe return of the ship from a voyage of which he disapproved, the vessel having been lost thereon, and the amount of bail, in consequence, brought into court, application of the major part owners for a reference to the registrar and merchants to inquire and report as to losses, demurrage, &c., incurred by them in consequence of certain alleged vexatious proceedings in Chancery, which had been taken by the part owner, and had delayed the vessel; and that such amount might be deducted from the amount of bail brought in and paid over to them, refused, with costs, on the ground that the proceedings were not vexatious, nor such as to subject the party to the claim set up. The Apollo, 1 Hag. 306.

2310. The court has jurisdiction to arrest a vessel in an action of restraint at the suit of a part owner holding a minority of shares, notwithstanding that the vessel is about to proceed on a voyage approved of by a majority of the part owners, and is being employed under a charter entered into by the ship's husband, appointed to act on behalf of all the owners. The Talca, 5 P. D. 169; 4 Asp. N.S. 226.

2311. It is not a bar to the claim that the manager or ship's husband who arranged the employment of the ship was appointed with their acquiescence if they give reasonable notice of their objection to the employment of the ship. Ibid.

2312. Bill by one part owner against the master and other part owners, prayed an account of past earnings of the ship. Held, that the plaintiff's right to that relief was no ground for granting an injunction to restrain the sailing of the ship until bail had been given for her safe return. Ibid.

2. Employment and Earnings.*

2315. Security having been given in the Court of Admiralty by the majority of the owners of a ship for the share of an owner dissenting from the proposed voyage, and the ship having earned freight on that voyage, held (after reference to Sir Leoline Jenkins, who certified the Law Marine and course of the Admiralty so to be), that the dissentient part owner was not entitled to any share of the freight earned on that voyage. Anon. (32 Car. 2), 2 Chan. Cases, 36; 6 Vin. Abr. 514; Boyon v. Sandforth, Carth. 63; Wynne's Life of Jenkins, vol. 2, p. 792.

2316. A part owner of a ship, which had been let to the East India Company for a voyage to India, after the other part owner had expended a large sum in repairing and fitting her out for the voyage, arrested the ship by process out of the Admiralty Court, and compelled the other part owner to give security for his share. The ship afterwards sailed to India and

* (588) The owners of the minority of shares who have obtained bail for the safe return of the ship from a voyage of which they disapprove, cannot derive the slightest advantage from the employment of the ship, and are not entitled to any compensation for her diminished value occasioned by the natural wear and tear of the voyage. The dissentients bear no portion of the expenses of the outfit, and are not entitled to share in the profits of the undertaking, but the ship sails wholly at the charge and risk, and for the profit of, the other owners. See Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 99; and Conking's Amer. Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), pp. 321, 322.

(589) On the refusal of one part owner of a vessel to give bond to dissolve an attachment on his share, the other part owners gave such bond, and took possession of the vessel, and agreed with the master to sail her on shares. Held, that the first part owner could not maintain an action against the master for any portion of the subsequent earnings of the vessel, especially while the suit in which the attachment was made was still pending. Taylor v. Richard, 3 Gray (Mass.) 326. [AMERICAN.]

(590) The owner of a minor part of a vessel having refused to consent to a proposed voyage, his share was appraised, and a bond given to him by the other owners, conditioned that, at the end of the voyage, which was to the West Indies and back, they would restore him his share in the vessel unimpaired, or, if she should be lost, would pay him the appraised value. Instead of returning her directly from the West Indies, they employed her several months in trade from thence to southern ports and back, and thence home. Held, that the obligee might maintain an action on the bond for the detention of the vessel. Rodick v. Hinckley, 8 Greene, 274. [AMERICAN.]

(591) Held, also, that the rate for which she might have been chartered was a reasonable rule for the estimation of damages. Ibid.

returned home. Held, that the part owner who had taken the security was not entitled to any share of the profits of the voyage, but was bound to pay his proportion of the repairs and outfit, he having been cognizant of the negotiations for the voyage, and having assented to the outfit prior to his arrest of the vessel. Davis v. Johnston, 4 Sim. 539.

2317. Where one part owner of a ship freighted her expressly against the consent of the other, and the ship and cargo were lost, held, that the loss fell wholly on the partner who freighted. Horn v. Gilpin, Amb. 255.

2317a. A vessel chartered for a foreign voyage was arrested in execution of a decree obtained against a part owner for a debt, not the debt of the vessel. A bill for special loosing of arrestments having been presented by the other owners, held, that the vessel be allowed to proceed on her voyage, upon caution being found by the owners to make the vessel forthcoming to abide the result of the diligence by placing her within the jurisdiction of the court on her return in as good a condition as at the date of the arrestment; or otherwise, that they should pay the value of the interest validly attached by the arrestment; their rights and interests, and pleas in the matter, being reserved generally to all parties. Malcolm v. Cook, 16 Court of Session Cases, 262. [SCOTCH.]

4. Actions for Accounts.

2318. The Court of Admiralty, prior to its abolition by the Judicature Acts, had jurisdiction to decide all questions arising between the co-owners, or any of them, touching the ownership, possession, employment, and earnings of any ship registered at any port in England or Wales, or any share thereof. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8.*

2319. It might settle all accounts outstanding and unsettled between the parties in relation thereto. Ibid.

2320. It might direct the ship or any share thereof to be sold. Ibid.

2321. And it might make such order in the premises as to it shall seem fit. Ibid.

2322. By the 8th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), the Admiralty Court had jurisdiction, on a petition being filed by a part owner of a British ship, alleging that his co-owner, the ship's husband, had rendered false accounts, to order an account to be taken of the earnings and disbursements of the ship and of moneys received upon insurances of ship and freight. The Idas, Br. & Lush. 65; 2 N. R. 45.

2323. Under the 8th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), the court had jurisdiction over matters that had occurred between co-owners in relation to the employment of the ship, notwithstanding that the plaintiff might have parted with his shares in the ship prior to the institution of the suit. The Lady of the Lake, L. R. 3 A. & E. 29; 39 L. J. Adm. 40; 3 Asp. 317.

2324. The court will appoint a receiver in a co-ownership suit where circumstances exist which, in the opinion of the court, render such a course just and convenient. The Amphyll, 5 P. D. 224.

2325. All sums of money paid in respect of any loss or damage, as to which the liability of the owners of any ship is limited by the ninth part of this act, and all costs incurred in relation thereto, may be brought into account among part owners of the ship as money disbursed for the use thereof. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 515.

2326. A part owner of a vessel, shortly after her return from a voyage, sold his shares in the vessel and her appurtenances to his co-owner, who was also ship's husband. Prior to the sale the ship's husband had made certain disbursements for stores for the next voyage. Held, that the ship's husband could not make the disbursements a charge against the vendor in the account between them of the profits of the previous voyage, but must bear them himself. Robertson v. Dennistoun, Court of Sessions Cases, 3rd series, vol. 3, p. 829. [SCOTCH.]

* (592) To give the court jurisdiction under this act, the ship concerned must be one registered in England or Wales, the parties to the suit must be co-owners, and the questions between them such as touch ownership, possession, employment, or earnings, the power of settling accounts and of sale being subordinate and simply administrative to the principal questions. MacLachlan on Merc. Shipping, Supplement to 3rd ed. p. 60.

(593) To settle accounts means to discharge them by payment, see the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 191. To assume that it means here to take the accounts, and then to institute a suit for that purpose principally, would be a construction of the language contrary to usage, and an assignment of equity jurisdiction to this court in its largest sense; a construction not justified by the terms employed, and quite contrary to the caution manifested throughout the act against unnecessarily creating concurrent jurisdictions. Ibid.

2327. A ship's husband, part owner, in his account of earnings and disbursements, must allow his co-owners the benefit of a deduction allowed by the broker on the commission for the charter-party. Ibid.

2327a. When a co-owner acts as ship's agent (not managing owner) for a coasting steamer at one of her ports of call, he cannot in a co-ownership action for the settlement of ship's accounts recover amounts due to him as agent. The Eider, 4 Asp. 104.

2328. In an action by one co-owner of a ship against the other co-owners under the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, for a settlement of accounts between the co-owners, the plaintiff is entitled to a settlement of such accounts only as have been or ought to have been rendered to the co-owners prior to the date of the writ in the action, and cannot recover any sum due upon accounts, which in the due course of the ship's business could not be rendered to the co-owners until after such date. Ibid.

2329. The plaintiff was owner of eight shares, and the defendant was owner of twenty-eight shares of the schooner Albion. The plaintiff having filed his petition under the provisions of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, an ex parte motion on behalf of the plaintiff, and upon the consent of James Willshire, owner of eight shares, and Elizabeth Hellier, who claimed to be equally entitled to four shares of the schooner, was made for an account of the earnings of the vessel since November, 1853, and for a sale. The court (the defendant having had notice of the motion and not having appeared) granted the application. The Albion, 1 Asp. 206.

2330. Ship lost; suit by one against the other part owner in the High Court of Admiralty for account. Account ordered to be taken of the earnings and disbursements of the ship, and of moneys received upon insurances of ship and freight. The Idas, Br. & Lush. 65; 2 N. R. 45.

2331. A vessel was chartered for twelve months, and during the currency of the charter the charterers made default in certain payments, and the charter lapsed. The vessel was re-chartered by a voyage charter from K. to E. During the performance of this voyage the defendant purchased a share in the vessel. Held, on objection to the registrar's report in a co-ownership action, that the defendant was not liable to bear any of the losses occasioned by the time charter. The Meredith, 10 P. D. 69.

2332. All the part owners must be made parties to a bill filed for an account of the profits of the ship. Moffat v. Farquharson, 2 Brown, C. C. 338; Collyer on Partnership, 683.

2333. Before a voyage it is the duty of each owner to contribute his share of capital for the expenses of the outfit. A ship's husband (part owner) may therefore at once sue his co-owners for their shares of these expenses, and need not wait till the accounts are stated. Helme v. Smith, 7 Bing. 715.

2334. Construction of an agreement entered into by the part owners of a ship, with regard to the management of the ship and allowances for brokerage and commission. Ibid. See also Ouston v. Ogle, 13 East, 538.

2335. Part owners being jointly interested in the use and employment of the ship, the law as to earnings follows the law in partnership cases. Green v. Briggs, 6 Hare, 402; 12 Jur. 326; 17 L. J. Ch. 323.

2336. Freight is not in this respect distinguished from other earnings. Ibid.

2337. The gross earnings of a ship are liable as between co-owners, and before division amongst them, to the expenses incurred in the fittings up, outfit, and repairs of the vessel, necessarily made to enable her to proceed on the voyage in which the earnings have been gained. Ibid.

2338. Semble, for this purpose the repairs need not have been exhausted by the voyage. Ibid.

2339. Before division of profits among the part owners, a part owner of a ship has a right to require the gross freight to be applied in payment of the expenses of repairs to the hull of the ship, when such repairs were done with a view to the particular adventure in which the earnings were made and without which that adventure could not have been undertaken. Ibid.; 6 Hare, 395.

2340. It would seem that the circumstance that the repairs are not exhausted in the adventure does not create any exception to the rule. Ibid.

2341. As between mortgagee of a ship and owners, held, that before any division of profits the proceeds of the cargo must be applied in payment of the expenses of the outfit of the ship and of the voyage. Alexander v. Simms, 18 Beav. 80; 23 L. J. Ch. 721.

2342. As to the mortgagor's right to the gross profits of a voyage without deducting the expenses, held, that the rights between a mortgagor and mortgagee of a ship are distinct from the rights between the mortgagee and the other part owners. Alexander v. Simms, 18 Beav. 81.

2343. A mortgagor cannot give a mortgagee higher rights against the part owners than he, the mortgagor, himself had. Ibid.

2344. Nor can the mortgagee by taking possession acquire any such right. Ibid. 82.

2345. Part owners are not partners. Ex parte Young, 2 V. & B. 242; Ex parte Harrison, 2 Rose, 76.

2346. The share of one therefore is not liable for debts constituting a lien on the share of the others. Ibid.

2347. One part owner has upon the profits of another part owner a claim for the latter's share of the disbursements. Holderness v. Shackles, 8 B. & C. 612.

2348. The separation of the share and the placing of it in casks marked by his name, held, not under the circumstances to operate to divest his co-owners of such claim. Ibid.

2349. A ship was abandoned to the underwriters by the assured, and was afterwards liberated, and earned freight, and returned home. Held, that the charges of provisions, wages, &c., before the abandonment, were charges on the owner. Thompson v. Rowcroft, 4 East, 34, 52.

2350. And that those, after abandonment, were charges on the underwriter. Ibid.

2351. A ship owner has no power to insure the interests of his co-owners, unless they specially direct him so to do. French v. Blackhouse, 5 Burr. 2728, 2730.

2352. A direction to insure given by one part owner only would not bind the rest. Ibid.

2353. As between the owners of a ship and the assignee of the freight the payment of wages and the expense of insuring the ship are proper deductions to be made from gross freight. Lindsay v. Gibbs, 4 Jur. N.S. 776; 28 L. J. Ch. 692.

2354. A ship having been arrested in the Court of Admiralty, the plaintiff, at the request of P., the owner of 62-64ths, entered into a bond for her release. This took place in the absence of the defendant, who was owner of the remaining two 64ths. Judgment was given against P., who became insolvent, and the plaintiff therefore had to pay the amount for which he was bound. Held, that he was entitled to recover the sum he had so paid from the defendant. Barker v. Highley, 2 N. R. 489.

2355. An account of the profits of a voyage settled by the major part of the owners shall conclude the rest. Robinson v. Thompson, 1 Vern. 465.

2356. Accounts certified by one of the partners, held, under the circumstances, to be binding on the executors of the deceased partner. Seemle, an authority to a member of a dissolved partnership to wind up the concern, close the books, and collect the debts, authorizes the party to state and settle the accounts. Luckie v. Forsyth, 3 J. & L. 388.

2357. An account current stated by one partner while temporarily in Scotland, held to be binding on another who was partner in the firm at the time the account was stated but who was then in India. Fergusson v. Fyffe, 8 Cl. & F. 121.

2358. Managing owners of a privateer having neglected to render accounts and delayed the distribution of proceeds, charged with interest on the balances, and condemned in the costs of a suit for an account. Pearse v. Green, 1 J. & W. 135.

2359. As to the part owners who disapprove of the voyage, and exact bail for the ship's safe return, being disentitled to any share of the profits, see cap. 3, s. 2, p. 1419.

* (594) The outfit of the ship, and all other expenses requisite to carry her through the voyage, being in the nature of capital in the adventure, of which each owner is bound to advance his proportion, the amount may be recovered in an action against him by the ship's husband without waiting the end of the adventure; and when it has terminated, he is entitled to deduct from the gross earnings of the ship all expenses necessarily in-

5. Sale by Court.*

2363. The Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction to decide all questions arising between the co-owners, or any of them, touching the ownership, possession, employment, and earnings of any ship registered at any port in England or Wales, and may direct the ship or any share thereof to be sold, and make such order in the premises as to it shall seem fit. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8.

2365. Motion on behalf of the owner of 16-64th shares for decree of sale of ship under sect. 8 of Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), granted, notice of application having been given to the owners of the other shares, and no appearance having been given for them. The Albion, 6 L. T. N.S. 164.

2366. In a suit instituted by part owners for a sale, the defendants, the co-owners of the vessel, claimed damages alleged to have been occasioned by the plaintiffs negligently refusing to sell the vessel when desired to do so by the defendants, whereby the value of the vessel was depreciated. Held, that the court had jurisdiction under the 8th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), to entertain the defendants' claim. The Ceylon, 3 Asp. 96.

2367. Under the 8th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), the court has a discretionary power to direct the sale of a vessel, though opposed by a majority of the owners. The Nelly Schneider, 3 P. D. 152; 4 Asp. 54.

2368. The court granted an injunction ex parte, restraining the defendant in an action of co-ownership from dealing, and curring for it on the same adventure before distributing the profits among the owners. Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 104.

(595) An insurance effected on the ship, or the ship and freight, as it is no part necessarily of the joint adventure, cannot be charged upon the joint proceeds without the common consent of the owners. Ibid. p. 105.

(596) A prior settlement of accounts by the majority of the owners is binding on the others, and in the absence of fraud or gross error a suit by one owner to re-open the accounts after such a settlement will not be entertained. Ibid. p. 104, and the cases there cited.

(599) On the refusal of one part owner of a vessel to give bond to dissolve an attachment on his share, the other part owners gave such bond, and took possession of the vessel, and agreed with the master to sail her on shares. Held, that the first part owner could not maintain an action against the master for any portion of the subsequent earnings of the vessel, especially while the suit in which the attachment was made was still pending. Taylor v. Richard, 3 Gray (Mass.) 326. [AMERICAN.]

The court will not exercise the power of sale conferred on it by the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, by ordering the sale of a ship, unless a part owner—whether he be the owner of a minority or majority of shares—makes out a very strong case. 6. Managing Owner or Ship's Husband.*

1. Generally.

2373. The name and address of the managing owner for the time being of

* (607) The ship's husband is either a part owner or a stranger, and may be appointed by writing or parol. His duties are to see to the proper outfit of the vessel, to have a proper master, mate, and crew, to see to the furnishing of provisions and stores, and to the regularity of all the clearances from the custom house, to settle the contracts, to enter into proper charter-parties, or engage the vessel for general freight, to settle for freight, to preserve proper certificates and documents in case of future disputes with insurers and freighters, and to keep regular books of the ship. But without special powers he cannot borrow money generally for the use of the ship, though he may settle accounts, and grant bills for them, which will form debts against the concern. Collyer on Partnership (2nd ed.), B. 5, ch. 4, s. 4; and see MacLachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 182 et seq.

(608) The ship's husband is the accredited agent of the owners, and they are bound by all contracts made on their behalf within the scope of his authority for the purposes of the ship, in connection with her employment, if they are proper and necessary for her at the time; but repairs, it seems, are not improper if necessary to make the ship seaworthy and fit for the voyage, merely because they are too substantial to be exhausted by the intended voyage. He has no implied authority, however, to bind them by a contract of insurance on the ship, for he is the agent of the part owners, not as proprietors, in which respect they are divided and several, but as joint adventurers in her employment, and partners in the trafficker profit or loss. MacLachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 185.

(609) A ship's husband is prima facie the agent of all the owners for the management of the ship, with the requisite authority for that purpose, and any defence in derogation of such implied authority, either that the agent was not to deal on credit, or only to pledge his own name, must, it seems, be proved by the owners as being known to the creditor. Ibid. p. 113.

(610) See further as to the function, authority, and duties of ship's husband or managing owner, Ibid. pp. 182, 186.

(611) As to the appointment and remuneration of ship's husband, see Maude & Pollock on Merchant Shipping (4th ed.), p. 106.

(612) The managing owner of a vessel represents the interest of all, and has the same power which the major part in interest have, with respect to the change of employment, and the preparation and outfit of the vessel in a manner suited to the profitable employment in the business to which he is destined. Hall v. King, 10 Shep. 461. [AMERICAN.]

(613) The ship's husband or managing owner may bind the other owners for the outfit, care, and employment of the vessel, but he has no power to purchase a cargo on their credit without authority from them. Hewitt v. Buck, 5 Ibid. 147. [AMERICAN.]

(614) The ship's husband, in the absence of all special agreement, is presumed to have authority to do everything necessary to be done for the employment of the vessel, and has authority to make repairs and bind the vessel for the same; but as between the owners, he cannot subject them to expenses when forbidden so to do, and such expenses may be charged to his own share. Revens v. Lewis, 2 Paine, C. C. 202. [AMERICAN.]

(614a) In France, the managing owners (armateurs) are responsible to their co-owners for negligence in the discharge of their functions, and even a ratification of the acts of the managing owner by his co-owners, whilst ignorant of the nature of his conduct, is no bar to their claim; but in estimating the loss they have sustained, it will be taken into account whether or not they have imprudently embarked in a speculation under the direction of a person well known to be inexperienced. D. L. 1879, II. 125.

every British ship, registered at any port or place in the United Kingdom, shall be registered at the custom house of the ship's port of registry. Where there is not a managing owner, there shall be so registered the name of the ship's husband or other person to whom the management of the ship is entrusted by or on behalf of the owner; and any person whose name is so registered shall, for the purpose of the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876, be under the same obligations, and subject to the same liabilities, as if he were the managing owner. Penalty for breach against the owner, or if more than one owner, against each owner in proportion to his interest in the ship, £100 each time the ship leaves any port in the United Kingdom. The M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 36.

2374. A managing owner registered pursuant to the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 36, is no more and no less than a managing owner before the act. He binds the owners, whose agent he is, but not the other owners. Frazer v. Cuthbertson, 6 Q. B. D. 93; 50 L. J. C. L. 277.

2376. Agreement between ship's husband (part owner) and each and every of the others that a full account should be made of the ship's earnings on the voyage, and the nett profits divided. Held, that for not making out the accounts and dividing the profits within a reasonable time after the ship's return an action lies against the ship's husband, though it be not averred in the declaration that the charges were or could have been ascertained before suit brought, for that is matter of defence. Owston v. Ogle, 13 East, 538.

2377. An express authority is necessary from a part owner of a ship to the ship's husband to order works not necessary as repairs, such as lengthening a ship; but such authority once given cannot be revoked after it has been acted upon, and it is for the part owner when sued for contribution to prove that it was revoked before the works were commenced, or a contract for them entered into. Chappell v. Bray, 30 L. J. Exch. 24.

2378. In an action against one of the owners for work done to one of his vessels by order of the ship's husband (himself a part owner as to some of them) such owner will be liable, unless it be shown that the dealing was that the person who directed the work to be done should be looked to exclusively. Thompson v. Fin-den, 4 C. & P. 158; but see next case.

2379. Necessaries were supplied to a ship on the order of A., the ship's husband (himself a part owner), by whom alone the ship was managed. The defendant, a co-owner, knew that A. was the ship's husband, and had received a share of the profits. Held, to be evidence against the defendant in an action for necessaries, notwithstanding that the plaintiff had accepted in payment the brokers' bills, and the brokers having become bankrupt, had proved against their estate for the amount. Whitwell v. Perrin, 4 C. B. N.S. 412.

2380. H. agreed with his co-owners that they should be ship's husbands, and that for £900 they should have the earnings of the vessel for six months. Repairs being necessary during this period, held, that the co-owners had power to pledge H.'s credit for the repairs. Preston v. Tamplin, 2 H. & N. 363, 684.

2381. Ship's husband kept at his banker's a separate account as to the ship's disbursements and profits. Held that the other part owners could not sue the bankers in respect of sums carried to that separate account. Sims v. Brittain, 4 B. & Ad. 375; Ex parte Gribble, 3 D. & Ch. 339.

2382. A ship's husband, although he has authority to enter into a charterparty, has no authority to cancel the same and to pay the charterers a sum for the cancellation, although such compromise is for the benefit of the owners. Thomas v. Lewis, 4 Ex. D. 18; 48 L. J. C. L. 7.

2383. A part owner of a vessel, shortly after her return from a voyage, sold his shares in the vessel and her appurtenances to his co-owner, who was also ship's husband. Prior to the sale, the ship's husband had made certain disbursements for stores for the next voyage. Held, that the ship's husband could not make these disbursements a charge against the vendor in the account between them of the profits of the previous voyage, but must bear them himself. Robertson v. Dennistoun, 3rd series, vol. 3, 829. [SCOTCH.]

2384. A ship's husband (part owner) in his account of earnings and disbursements must allow his co-owners the benefit of a deduction allowed by the broker on the commission for the charter-party. Ibid.

2385. Semble, he must also allow them the benefit, although he is not a part owner. Ibid.

2386. A broker who had received money for freight on account of the owners of the ship, offered to pay it by cheque to the master, who was also managing owner. This the master declined, preferring that the broker should open a credit for him at a bank in New Brunswick in favour of H., which the broker did. The bank accordingly paid H. £250, for which H. gave a bill drawn by him in favour of the bank upon the broker, who accepted and paid it when due. The broker having sued the co-owners for the balance of his account, held, that this was a good payment of £250 by the broker, and binding on the co-owners. Anderson v. Hillies, 21 L. J. C. P. 150.

2387. The ship's husband has authority to do whatever is necessary to enable the ship to prosecute her voyage and earn freight; and where, in order to release his ship, a ship's husband, who was also managing owner, induced a person to become bail in the Admiralty Court, it was held that he was acting within his authority, and that his co-owner was liable to the bail. Barker v. Heighley, 1 Asp. 353.

2388. As to accounts between part owners generally, see p. 1420, and notes 594—599, pp. 1422, 1423.

2. Remuneration.

2389. A part owner, the manager of a ship, is entitled to remuneration for his services, but there is no commission or fixed rate applicable. The Meredith, 10 P. D. 69.

2390. See also Nos. 2384 and 2385, supra.

7. Assignees of Bankrupt Owners.*

2391. No registered mortgage of any ship or share shall be affected by any act of bankruptcy committed by the mortgagor after the date of the record of the mortgage, notwithstanding the mortgagor at the time of his becoming bankrupt may have, in his disposition, and be reputed owner of, such ship or share; and such mortgage shall be preferred to any right, claim, or interest of the assignee of such bankrupt to such ship or share. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 72.

2392. In an action brought under the 4th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), for building and equipping a vessel, the defendants pleaded that the alleged causes of action became vested in a trustee for the plaintiffs' creditors under a composition deed. The plaintiffs, in reply, alleged that they assigned the causes of action prior to the execution of the deed, and that they were suing as trustees for their assignees. Held, that they might sue as trustees, although, subsequent to the assignment, they had executed a composition deed. Held, also, that, although the assignment of the causes of action was prior to the arrest of the vessel and the commencement of the action, it carried with it the inchoate

* (615) If any bankrupt, at the time he becomes bankrupt, has, by the consent and permission of the true owner, in his possession, order, or disposition, any goods or chattels whereof he was reputed owner, or whereof he had taken upon him the sale, alteration, or disposition as owner, the court has power to order them to be sold for the benefit of the creditors under the bankruptcy; but this shall not affect any transfer or assignment of any ship, or share, made as a security for any debt by way of mortgage or assignment duly registered. The Bankruptcy Law Consolidation Act, 1849 (c. 106), s. 125. This act is repealed by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 38, s. 20. The Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (c. 71) (also repealed), contained no similar exception on this subject, nor does the Bankruptcy Act, 1882 (c. 52) (now in force), probably because the 72nd section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), was considered to render any such provision unnecessary.

(616) A bill of sale of a ship, though not registered, will now be good as against the trustee of the vendor, if the ship is in the possession of the vendee at the time of bankruptcy, the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), having required equitable interests in ships to be recognized (Stapleton v. Hayman, 2 H. & C. 318; 10 Jur. N.S. 497; 33 L. J. Exch. 170.) It is apprehended, however, that where the interest and the ship are in a third party, notice of the transaction ought to be given to him. (See Bank of Liverpool v. Turner, 1 J. & H. 159; 2 D. F. & J. 502). Robson's Law of Bankruptcy (4th ed.), p. 494.

right to proceed against the vessel. The Wasp, L. R. 1 A. & E. 367; 2 Asp. 552.

2393. A shipbuilder sold a ship which he was building, and agreed to complete it. It remained in his possession down to his bankruptcy. Held, that it was not within his order and disposition. Holderness v. Rankin, 28 Beav. 180; 29 L. J. Ch. 753.

2394. Assignees are not bound to act with the same degree of liberality as the owner himself. As trustees for creditors, they are not at liberty to submit to demands which may appear at all questionable, but must take the best means in their power to render the estate of the bankrupt as beneficial as possible to the persons with the care of whose interests they are intrusted. The Alexander, 1 Dodson, 278.

2397. In a question as to the appropriation of the proceeds of ship and freight in satisfaction of outstanding judgments against them for bottomry, wages, pilotage, &c., where a part owner had become a bankrupt, but had previously assigned to one party his interest in the ship, and to another party his interest in the freight, of whom the assignees under his bankruptcy and the assignees of the freight were before the court, and the other part owner, who was alleged also to have become a bankrupt, was not before the court, the court entered into an investigation of the relative claims of the parties, and apportioned the proceeds among them accordingly. Ibid. 73, 86.

2398. Semble, a power of attorney to sell a ship is not so revoked by a decree of the grantor's insolvency in a colonial possession as to invalidate a bond fide exercise of the power before notice of insolvency. The Margaret Mitchell, Swabey, 382; 4 Jur. N.S. 1194.

2399. The owners of a ship are not interested in it as joint tenants, but as tenants in common. Upon a bankruptcy, therefore, the bankrupt's share passes to the creditors under the bankruptcy without being liable specifically to the claims of the other part owners in respect of their disbursements and liabilities for the ship. Ex parte Harrison, 2 Rose, 76; Ex parte Young, 2 Ves. & B. 242.

2400. One of three partners in a ship and cargo paid only a proportion of his share and then became bankrupt. The remainder of his share was, after the commencement of the adventure, paid by his co-owners. Held, that as between the co-owners and the bankrupt's assignees, the co-owners did not, by their payment of the remainder of the bankrupt's share, become preferentially entitled to such share. Smith v. De Silva, 2 Cowper, 469.

2401. When the transfer is not expressed to be by way of mortgage, the protection which the Ship Registry Act intended to afford the mortgagee against the creditors of a bankrupt shipowner is not obtained, and the vendee, appearing on the registry to be owner, may be subject to all the liabilities which belong to him in that character. Langton v. Horton, 5 Beav. 19.

2402. By the provisions of the Act 1696, a disposition otherwise perfect, valid, and unimpeachable, shall not stand against a trustee in a sequestration, if granted voluntarily within sixty days of bankruptcy in favour of one creditor in preference to others in satisfaction or security of a prior debt. Held, that the provisions of this act are not repealed by the provisions of the Registry Act, declaring that a registered mortgage of a ship shall confer an indefeasible right on the mortgagees. In a reduction of a transfer of ships executed within sixty days of bankruptcy, though registered before bankruptcy at the instance of the trustee, a defence founded on the registry act repelled. Anderson v. Western Bank, 21 Court of Sess. Cases, 230. [SCOTCH.]

2403. Three partners who carried on a joint trade of shipping goods were registered as part owners of the vessels belonging to the concern, each in the proportion of a third share of each vessel. One of the partners having become bankrupt and his estates being sequestrated; held, in a question between his trustee and the other partners, that as the vessels had not been registered in the name of the company as partnership property, his co-partners were not entitled to claim them as company property to be dealt with according to the provisions of a contract which had been entered into between the partners, and as the shares of the bankrupt stood in the register in his name individually, the shares passed to his trustee. McArthurs v. McBriar and Johnstone's Tr., June 20, 1844; 6 D. 1174; 16 Jur. 513. [SCOTCH.]

(618) As to the effect, on the vendee's title, of bankruptcy of, or execution against, the vendor, see Maude & Pollock on Merchant Shipping (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 51.

(619) If the vendor becomes bankrupt between the execution and the registration of the bill of sale, and there be laches on the part of the vendee, the shares pass to the assignees, because they were at the time in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Mac-lachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.),

p. 37, citing Boyson v. Gibson, 4 C. B. 21, and Campbell v. Thompson, 2 Hare, 140.

(620) The interest of part owners in ship and adventure is not affected by the bankruptcy of one of them after the commencement of the voyage, although he has not paid his full share of the outfit. In such a case, if the other part owners have in that character paid the expense of the outfit, or made themselves responsible for it, they will have a right to deduct his share from the portion of the profits to be paid to his assignees. Mac-lachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 106; see Ex parte Harrison, 2 Rose, 76; Ex parte Young, 2 Ves. & B. 242.

2. The General Pilotage Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, was held to apply to England only. The Eden, 2 W. Rob. 443.

3. "Pilot" in this act means any person not belonging to a ship who has the conduct thereof. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 2.

4. There is no implied contract between the owners of a ship and a pilot whom they are compelled to employ that the pilot shall take upon himself the risk of injury from the negligence of the shipowners' servants, and an action will lie by the pilot against the shipowners for injuries caused to him whilst acting as pilot on board their vessel by the negli-

5. And where a pilot went on board a vessel in the course of his duty, in a district in which pilotage is compulsory, and while he was on board a boat which had been negligently slung by servants of the shipowners fell on and killed him; held, that his widow could recover in an action brought by her as executrix under Lord Campbell's Act. Ibid.

5a. It is a settled doctrine of the Admiralty Court, that no pilot is bound to go on board a vessel in distress to render pilot service for mere pilotage reward. His refusal, under such circumstances, would subject him to no censure; and, if he did take charge of a vessel so circumstanced, he would be entitled to a salvage remuneration. The Frederick, 1 W. Rob. 17.

* (1) The prior statutes relating to pilots were repealed by 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, and that act and 9 Geo. 4, c. 86; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 68; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 88, and the Pilotage Law Amendment Act, 1853, c. 129, comprised the law in regard to them until the passing of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104) (except as to compulsory pilotage, as to which see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. p. 1349). The M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), repealed the above acts to the following extent, viz. 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, except as to rates of pilotage then existing; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 88, altogether; and the Pilotage Amendment Act, 1853 (c. 129), except as to sects. 3, 4, 5, 8, 10, 11, 12, 13, and part of sect. 9, being sections relating to the Cinque Ports.

(2) Sect. 331 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), having enacted that all pilotage authorities shall retain the powers and jurisdiction they possessed at the time of the passing of that act, so far as they are consistent with the provisions of that act; and sect. 353 having enacted that all compulsions and exemptions as to the employment of pilots existing when this act came into operation should continue until altered, some of the provisions of the General Pilot Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, notwithstanding the act is repealed by the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), are still in force. As to the extent thereof see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. pp. 1360—1366.

7. A pilot is a mariner, and as such might sue for his wages in the Court of Admiralty, unless the work was done within the body of a county, in which case he could not sue there. Ross v. Walker, 2 Wils. 264.

8. By the ancient maritime law, the Court of Admiralty had an equity to moderate or supersede extortionate contracts made under the pressure of necessity arising out of the situation of a vessel at sea. This jurisdiction might embrace a case of extortionate contract for pilotage services. The Nelson, 6 C. Rob. 231.

9. The Court of Admiralty had no jurisdiction generally, nor under the provisions of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 7, to enforce a claim against a pilot for damage by collision caused by him while employed as a pilot. The Urania, 5 L. T. N.S. 402; 10 W. R. 97.

10. The Court of Passage, and semble, an Admiralty County Court, in the exercise of its Admiralty jurisdiction, could not entertain a suit by the owner of a ship injured by collision against the pilot in charge by compulsion of law of the wrongdoing vessel. The Alexandria, L. R. 3 A. & E. 574; 41 L. J. Adm. 94; 27 L. T. 565; 1 Asp. N.S. 464.

(b) Bond to Trinity House.†

11. The Court of Admiralty had no jurisdiction to pronounce for the forfeiture of a bond in the sum of £100 given by the pilot to the Trinity House for the faithful discharge of his duties as pilot. The Urania, 5 L. T. N.S. 402.

12. The remedy is by proceedings against the pilot in the Queen's Bench Division or in the County Court. Ibid. and see Stort v. Clements, Peake, 107; Lawson and another v. Dumlin, 14 L. T. 350.

* (6) A pilot may sue in the Admiralty in personam as well as in rem for his services in piloting vessels on the high seas, and into and from port. The Nelson, 6 Rob. 227; The Anne, 1 Mason, 508; and see Conkling's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), 298. [AMERICAN.]

(7) The pilot on board a steamboat is entitled to sue for his wages in Admiralty. The Steamboat Ohio, Gilpin, 505. [AMERICAN.]

† (8) It seems, however, that such a claim might be entertained in Admiralty by way of set-off. See The Sophia, Stuart, 98, and cases therein cited (Lower Canada); and see tit. PRACTICE.

‡ (9) A curious question may arise in consequence of this decision. The whole of the coast line of England has now been placed for the purposes of the act within the jurisdiction of certain county courts, and considering the restrictions placed upon instituting suits in Chancery courts, every "Admiralty cause" must arise within a district framed under the act. If, then, these county courts alone have jurisdiction in Admiralty causes, is there any way whatever in which a proceeding can be taken against a pilot in a county court? This decision holds that the county courts have no jurisdiction on their Admiralty side, and the 5th section seems to say that no county courts can try a cause of "damage by collision" against a pilot on their common law side, as such a cause is an Admiralty cause within the meaning of those words as used in sect. 3 of the act. Sect. 3, it should be noticed, gives jurisdiction "in the following causes (in this act referred to as Admiralty causes);" it does not expressly say that the county courts are to have an Admiralty jurisdiction, and it therefore would seem reasonable to suppose that "damage by collision" did not refer only to such damage as is cognizable by the High Court of Admiralty. The only way out of the difficulty, however, would seem to be to take the words "Admiralty cause" as meaning such a cause as the High Court has jurisdiction over, and considering all other causes, although of an exactly similar nature, as common law causes. Such a cause as this would then be cognizable by any county court. 1 Asp. 464, n.

lision may be sued in respect thereof under his bond, in a County Court to the extent of the bond, but not in an Admiralty action in an Admiralty County Court. Flower v. Bradley, 44 L. J. Exch. 1; 2 Asp. N.S. 489; The Alexandria, L. R. 3 A. & E. 574; 41 L. J. Adm. 94; 1 Asp. N.S. 464.

4. County Courts.

See Nos. 12 and 13, supra.

3. Board of Trade.

14. The Board of Trade has power by provisional order to exempt the masters and owners of all ships or classes of ships from being obliged to employ or pay pilots in any pilotage district or part thereof, and to annex any conditions to such exemptions. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, sub-s. 4.

14a. As to its powers to constitute transfer and re-arrange pilotage authorities, see Nos. 17—19, infra.

14b. As to its powers to grant pilotage certificates, see p. 1443.

4. Pilotage Authorities in general.

1. Powers up to 1854.*

15. Every pilotage authority retains all the powers and jurisdiction it lawfully possessed at the time of the passing of this act, and consistent therewith, but no further. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 331.

16. "Pilotage authority" in this act includes all bodies and persons authorized to appoint or licence pilots, or to fix or alter rates of pilotage, or to exercise any jurisdiction in respect of pilotage. Ibid. s. 2.

2. Powers of Board of Trade.

(a) To create.

17. The Board of Trade has power by provisional order to constitute a pilotage authority, and to fix the limits of its district in any place in the United Kingdom where there is no such authority; so, however, that in the new pilotage districts so constituted there shall be no compulsory pilotage, and no restriction on the power of duly-qualified persons to obtain licences as pilots. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, sub-s. 3.

(b) To transfer and re-arrange—.*

18. The Board of Trade, by provisional order, has power whenever any pilotage authority residing or having its place of business at one port has jurisdiction in matters of pilotage in any other port:

To transfer so much of the jurisdiction as concerns such last port to any harbour trust or other body exercising jurisdiction in maritime matters at that port, or to any body to be constituted for the purpose by the provisional order, or to the Trinity House of Deptford Strond, or to a new body corporate or body of persons to be constituted for the purpose by the provisional order:

To make the body corporate or persons to whom the transfer is made a pilotage authority within the meaning of the principal act, with such powers for the purpose as may be in the provisional order mentioned:

To determine the limits of the district of the pilotage authority to which the transfer of jurisdiction is made:

To sanction a scale of pilotage rates for the pilots licensed by that pilotage authority:

To determine to what extent and under what conditions pilots shall continue to act under the new pilotage authority:

To sanction arrangements for the apportionment of pilotage funds between the

* (10) The Board of Trade has exercised the powers conferred by these sections by the transfer of the jurisdiction of the port of Newcastle-upon-Tyne to the Tyne, the creation of independent pilotage jurisdiction at the Tyne, Hartlepool, and Sunderland. See tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. sub nomine.

(11) Also by the transfer of the pilotage jurisdiction previously possessed by the port of Bristol over the various ports of Cardiff, Newport, Gloucester, Penarth, and Swansea, by the creation of a quasi-independent pilotage jurisdiction at each of such ports, and the creation of pilotage jurisdiction at the ports of Burntisland, Sandhaven, Carlingford Bar and Portrush. Ibid.

pilots under the jurisdiction of the old and new authorities :

To provide for compensation or superannuation to officers not continued by the new authority. Ibid. sub-ss. 1, 2.

19. As to the mode of proceeding for obtaining such provisional orders from the Board of Trade, see Ibid. s. 40.

3. Powers to License for Parts of Seas.

20. Any pilotage authority, if authorized by Order in Council, may grant special licences qualifying grantees to act as pilots for any part of the sea or channels beyond the limits of any pilotage authority, but so, that no pilot so licensed is entitled to supersede an unlicensed pilot outside the limits of the authority by which he is licensed. See M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 11.

4. Bye-Laws.

(a) Power to make and alter—

21. Subject to this act every pilotage authority, by bye-law made with the consent of her Majesty in Council, may determine the qualifications of pilots; make regulations as to pilot boats and ships, and for the government of pilots generally; and as to their licences; and also as to the granting of pilotage certificates; fix, under certain limitations, penalties for breach of such regulations by pilots, apprentices, masters and mates; also may alter and reduce the rates of pilotage; arrange the limits of pilotage districts; establish funds for the relief of superannuated or infirm pilots or of their wives, widows, or children; make regulations with respect to such funds, and repeal or alter any such bye-laws. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 333.

22. Every such bye-law before submitted to her Majesty in Council must be published as prescribed by the Board of Trade, and every such Order in Council is to be laid before both Houses of Parliament. Ibid. ss. 334, 335.

22a. As to the remuneration of pilots, see p. 1447.

(b) Power of Appeal.

23. If the majority of the qualified pilots of any port, or the local marine board, where there is one, or where there is none, being not less than six masters, owners, or insurers of ships, consider themselves aggrieved by any regulation or bye-law in force when this act came into operation, or thereafter made under some authority other than of this act, or by any defect or omission therein, they may appeal to the Board of Trade, which may thereupon revoke, alter, or amend the same; and every order so made is conclusive. M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 336.

(5) Pilotage Returns.

24. Every pilotage authority is to deliver periodically to the Board of Trade in such form and at such times as such Board requires, returns with regard to pilotage within their port or district of all bye-laws or regulations in force, the names and ages of all their pilots or apprentices, and their services, and the rates of pilotage, and the rates and descriptions of all charges upon shipping in respect thereof; the total amount received for pilotage, distinguishing the amounts received from British and foreign ships, and in respect of different classes of ships paying different rates of pilotage, and for the several classes of service rendered by pilots; and the amount paid by ships taking two or more pilots, and the numbers of all such ships; and the receipt and expenditure of all monies received in respect of pilots or pilotage, and allow the Board of Trade, or their appointees, to inspect books or documents relating thereto. Ibid. s. 337.

25. The Board of Trade is without delay to cause these returns to be laid before both Houses of Parliament. Ibid. s. 339.

26. If any of such pilotage authorities, except the Trinity House, or sub-commissioners of pilotage appointed by it, fail to deliver to the Board of Trade these periodical returns within a year their jurisdiction may be transferred to the Trinity House. Ibid. s. 338.

5. Trinity House, London.

1. *Generally.

for the promotion of commerce and navigation by licensing and regulating pilots, and ordering and erecting beacons, lighthouses, of the corporation of the Trinity House of Deptford Strond. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 2.

28. The Trinity House, like every other pilotage authority, retains all its powers and jurisdiction so far as consistent with this act, but no further. Ibid. s. 331.

29. The Trinity House may alter such of the provisions of this act as are expressed to be subject to alteration by them, as they might if such provisions had been contained in any previous act instead of this act. Ibid. s. 368.

30. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, a sufficient number of qualified pilots are to be always ready to take charge of ships coming from the westward past Dungeness; and the Trinity House are, by bye-law, to make such regulations as to the pilots under their control as may be necessary to provide an uninterrupted supply of qualified pilots for such ships, and for their constant attendance upon and due performance of their duty by night and day by cruising between the South Foreland and Dungeness, or by going off from shore upon signals for the purpose, or by both, or other means. Ibid. s. 377.

31. The Trinity House, London, are empowered from time to time, at their buoys, &c. McCulloch's Commercial Dictionary, tit. TRINITY HOUSE.

(13) A similar society, for the like purposes, was afterwards established at Hull, and also another at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, in 1537. Ibid.

(14) These three establishments, says Hakluyt, were in imitation of that founded by the Emperor Charles V. at Seville, in Spain. Henry VIII., by his charter, confirmed to the Deptford Trinity House Society all the ancient rights, privileges, &c. of the shipmen and mariners of England, and their several possessions at Deptford, from which it appears that the society had existed long previously. Ibid.

(15) Besides the power of erecting lighthouses and other sea-marks on the several coasts of the kingdom for the security of navigation, the Master, Wardens, Assistants, and Elder Brethren are invested by charter with various other powers, the principal of which are, the erection of lighthouses and beaconage of channels, the examination of masters and mates for pilotage certificates, and dockmasters, the appointment of pilots to conduct ships into and out of the Thames, settling the several rates of pilotage, &c. Ibid.

(16) A Royal Charter of Confirmation was granted to the Trinity House by King James II., on July 8, 1685, and printed in the year 1763, and a supplementary charter was granted in Nov. 1870. See 1 Maude & Poll. (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 250.

(17) See as to the legal status of the London District of the Trinity House, 2 Maude and Pollock (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 110; and Orders in Council in Ibid. pp. 68—81.

(18) The jurisdiction of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, the constable of Dover Castle or his lieutenant, as to the licensing, remuneration and regulation of pilots, is transferred to the Trinity House, London. See No. 35, supra.

(19) The pilotage districts under the jurisdiction of the Trinity House, London, are, the London District, the Outports District, and the English Channel District.

(20) For provisions enabling the Trinity House, London, to make bye-laws to be sanctioned by the Chief Justice of the King's Bench or Common Pleas for the regulation of pilots, and imposing penalties for breach thereof, see 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 11, now repealed.

(22) All bye-laws of the Trinity House, London, in force at the date of this act were directed to continue in force until altered. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 28, now repealed.

(22a) The 52 Geo. 3, c. 39, is repealed by 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 1.

(23) The following acts of Parliament relate to the Trinity House, London: 5 Geo. 2, c. 21; 48 Geo. 3, c. 104; 52 Geo. 3, c. 39; 6 Geo. 4, c. 125; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 129; the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), Pt. V.; the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), ss. 39—42; and the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73).

(24) The 48 Geo. 3, c. 104, seems to be still in force, except in so far as it is repealed by 52 Geo. 3, c. 39, s. 1.

discretion, to make regulations as to the piloting of ships or vessels not having British registers, bringing fish, corn, or other provisions into the port of London, and which ought to be piloted by pilots licensed by the Trinity House; for the relief of such ships in respect of the rates of pilotage or for the exemption of such ships from any rules or regulations as to pilotage under this or any other act or law or usage. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 51; semble, revived by sect. 331 of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104).

31a. Ships licensed to pilot ships from any place to the westward up to London Bridge, are to be examined as to their qualifications to conduct ships into and out of Ramsgate, Dover, Sandwich and Margate Harbours, and are obliged to pilot any ships into and out of those harbours. Penalty for breach, the pilotage due, and any other fines established by bye-law. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 39. Semble, revived by sect. 331 of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104).

32. Such a number of the persons employed in piloting passenger steamships up and down the Thames, being freemen of the Watermen's Company, as the Trinity House see fit, shall be licensed as pilots by the Trinity House, for piloting home-trade passenger ships up and down the Thames, between London Bridge and Gravesend. Such licence shall authorize the pilot to act as pilot only on board steam passenger ships being "home-trade ships;" all pilots so licensed are to be designated "Watermen Pilots for home-trade passenger ships." See Bye-laws of the Trinity House, approved by Order in Council, May 1, 1855. See also this bye-law as to the regulations applicable to such pilots.

33. As to the control of the Trinity House, London, over lighthouses, buoys, and beacons, in England and Wales, in the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Sark, and Alderney, and the adjacent seas and islands, and in Heligoland and Gibraltar, see the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), Pt. VI., and the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), ss. 43—48. As to lighthouses, &c. generally, see tit. TRADE, BOARD or—.

34. The Regulations of the Trinity House under 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, approved by Chief Justice Abbott on the 19th April, 1826, in reference to pilots licensed by them, are for the most part still in force. See 2 Kay's Shipmaster and Seamen (anno 1875), p. 65.

2. *Within the Cinque Ports.

35. The jurisdiction as to the licensing, employment, and remuneration of pilots within the Cinque Ports is transferred to the Trinity House, London. See the Pilotage Law Amendment Act, 1853 (c. 129), and the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370.

3. Seas or Channels beyond Pilotage Districts.

36. As to the examination and licensing by the Trinity House, London, of pilots for any part of the sea or channels beyond the limits of any pilotage authority, see M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 11; Order in Council of 24th Nov. 1873; and Bye-law of Trinity House, therein set forth, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 81.

4. London District.

37. The Trinity House London district comprises the waters of the Thames and Medway as high as London Bridge and Rochester Bridge respectively, and also the seas and channels leading thereto or therefrom as far as Orfordness to the north, and Dungeness to the south. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370.

37a. As to the Cinque Ports District being included in the Trinity House, London District, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. p. 1359.

37b. The port of London for pilotage purposes extends to Gravesend. The General Steam Navigation Co. v. The British and Colonial Steam Navigation Co., L. R. 4 Ex. 238; see also tit. OWNERS, p. 1359, Nos. 1562—1567.

38. Rochester is included in this district. See Parliamentary Returns as to Pilotage, Sessions Paper, No. 325 of 1882, p. 230; and for rates and regulations of pilots between Rochester and the Nore, Ibid. p. 186. Maldon also forms part of this district; and as to its limits, Ibid. p. 219, and Trinity House Regulations of July, 1874, and tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. p. 1359.

p. 676; but that district is now included in the Trinity House, London District, vide supra, p. 1359.

38a. The jurisdiction of the Trinity House at Leith is restricted exclusively to Scotland, and the words in the Leith Trinity House charter, giving that body power to grant pilotage licences "through the seas and along the coasts and islands of the Northern and German Oceans," are mere surplusage, as against any right of the London Trinity House, and confer no right whatever to license pilots in respect of any part of the London Trinity House. The Oscar, 2 Asp. 229.

39. As to the rates of pilotage for exempted ships in the London district and the licensing of pilots for such ships, see two Orders in Council of 5th February, 1873, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), pp. 78, 79.

5. *Outports District.

40. The Trinity House outport districts comprise any pilotage district for the appointment of pilots within which no particular provision is made by act of parliament or charter. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370.

41. As to the different ports of which this district is composed, and the limits thereof, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. c. 10, pp. 1366—1372.

41a. As to the regulations and rates for pilotage in this district, Ibid.

42. The Trinity House may establish and alter from time to time rates of pilotage for pilotage performed in any river, port or place, or upon any coast, by any pilots licensed by them; such rates to be regulated as therein mentioned. Notice thereof to be given by hanging up the tables at the several custom-houses of those ports, and no greater or less rates are to be given or taken; penalty for breach, £10. Ships returning through stress of weather or accident into ports in the district of the Isle of Wight, Plymouth and Falmouth are subject to one-half pilotage only. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 8. Semble, revived by s. 331 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104).

6. English Channel District.

43. The Trinity House English Channel district comprises the seas between Dungeness and the Isle of Wight. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370.

44. As to there being no compulsory pilotage within this district, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. c. 11, p. 1372.

45. As to the rates of pilotage for the English Channel District, see Order in Council of 1st November, 1862, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 74.

7. Licences.

(a) Generally.†

46. The London Trinity House are required, after due examination, to license, under their common seal, competent persons to act as pilots for conducting all ships navigating the rivers Thames and Medway, and the channels, creeks and docks thereof, or leading or adjoining, between Orfordness and London Bridge, and from London Bridge to the Downs, and from the Downs westward as far as the Isle of Wight, and in the English Channel from the Isle of Wight to London Bridge; and all ships so navigating (except as therein provided) are to be piloted, within such limits, by such pilots, and no other. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 2, repealed; but semble, revived by M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 331.

47. The Trinity House is to continue, after due examination, to appoint and license under their common seal pilots for the purpose of conducting ships within the limits of the London district, the English Channel district, the Trinity House Outport districts, but no pilot is to be hereafter licensed to conduct ships both above and below Gravesend. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 370.

48. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, the names of all pilots licensed by their authority are to be published by the fixing up at their house in London of a notice thereof, and transmitting a copy of such notice to the Commissioners of Customs in London, and to the principal officers of customs resident at all ports within the limits for which such pilots are licensed; such notices are to be posted up by the Commissioners at the Custom House in London, and by such officers at the custom houses of the ports at which they are respectively resident. Ibid. s. 371; and see similar provisions in 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 7.

49. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, no licence granted by them shall continue in force beyond the 31st day of January following, but it may, upon application of the pilot, be renewed on such or any subsequent day in every year, by indorsement under the hand of the secretary of the Trinity House, or other person appointed for that purpose. Ibid. s. 374.

50. Held, by the Judicial Committee (affirming the decree of the court below), that a pilot's licence renewed on the 20th of January was within the meaning of sect. 374 of the M. S. Act, 1854, so as to be in operation and effect on the 6th of May following. Mann v. Malcomson; The Beta, 3 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. p. 85.

(b) Home-trade Passenger Ships.

51. The Trinity House have directed that a certain number of freemen of the Watermen's Company shall be licensed as pilots for piloting home-trade passenger ships between London Bridge and Gravesend, and have issued regulations as to the qualification and conditions for licensing such persons, who are designated "watermen pilots for home-trade steam passenger ships." See such Regulations confirmed by Order in Council of 1st May, 1855, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 69.

(c) Sub-Commissioners.

52. The Trinity House is to continue to appoint sub-commissioners (not more than five nor less than three), for the purpose of examining pilots in all districts in which they have been used to make such appointments, and may, with the consent of her Majesty in Council, appoint like sub-commissioners for any other district in which no particular provision is made by any act of parliament or charter for the appointment of pilots; but no pilotage district already under the authority of any sub-commissioners appointed by the Trinity House shall be extended, except with such consent, and no sub-commissioners so appointed shall be deemed to be pilotage authorities within the meaning of this act. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 369, and similar provisions in 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 5.

53. As to the qualifications for, and appointments and duties of pilots of ships exempted from compulsory pilotage on the Thames between London Bridge and Gravesend, and called "pilots for exempted ships," see Bye-law of Trinity House, approved by Order in Council of 5th February, 1873, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 79.

54. As to the qualifications, licensing, and duties of persons appointed for piloting ships exempted from compulsory pilotage between the Nore and Rochester, and called "pilots for exempted ships," see Bye-law of Trinity House, London, approved by Order in Council of 6th September, 1880, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 189.

(e) Bond on granting—

55. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, every Trinity House pilot on his appointment is to execute a bond for £100 for the due observance on his part of the Regulations and Bye-laws of the Trinity House, such bond is free from stamp duty, and from any other charge, except the actual expense for preparing it. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 372.

(f) *Suspension or Revocation.

56. The Trinity House may revoke or suspend the licence of any pilot appointed by them, as they think fit. Ibid. s. 375.

8. Pilot Fund.

57. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, there shall continue to be paid to them, and carried over to the Trinity House Pilot Fund, a poundage of six-pence in the pound, upon the pilotage earnings of all pilots licensed by them; and three pounds three shillings on the first day of January in every year, by every person licensed by them as pilot in any district or port thereof, not under the superintendence of sub-commissioners. Ibid. s. 385.

57a. Every qualified pilot giving a false account of his earnings, or making default in payment of any sum so due from him; penalty, double the amount, and he is further liable to suspension or dismissal. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 385.

58. Subject to prior charges subsisting thereon, the Trinity House Pilot Fund is chargeable in the first instance with such expenses as the Trinity House may duly incur in performance of their duties in respect of pilots and pilotage, and afterwards subject to alteration by the Trinity House, is to be administered by the Trinity House for the benefit of such pilots, licensed by them after October, 1853, as are incapacitated for the performance of their duty, or of the widows and children of pilots so licensed and incapacitated. Ibid. s. 386.

59. The Trinity House, London, may make an equitable arrangement in the administration of the Trinity House Pilot Fund mentioned in the principal act, with reference to the interests of pilots of the ports of Newport and Gloucester, ceasing to be licensed by the Trinity House under the Bristol Channel Pilotage Act, 1861. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 42.

60. By the Pilotage Law Amendment Act, 1853, now repealed, the funds belonging to the Cinque Ports pilots were merged in the Trinity House Pilotage Fund, and power was given to the Trinity House, London, with the approval of the Board of Trade, to make regulations as to the contributions to the fund by Cinque Port pilots. These payments proving larger than was expected, provision is made for repayment by the Trinity House, London, out of the fund to certain of the Cinque Ports pilots or their representatives of certain sums, and for reducing the annual sum to be paid to the fund by those pilots. See M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 10.

60a. Pilots having special licences from the Trinity House, London, for parts of the seas or channels beyond the limits of any pilotage authority, are not required to pay poundage to nor are they entitled to the benefits of the pilot fund. See Bye-law of the Trinity House, approved by Order in Council, dated 20th November, 1873, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 81.

61. Pilots for exempted ships are not required to pay poundage to, nor are they, or their widows and children, entitled to benefit from the pilot fund. See Bye-law of the Trinity House, London, approved by Order in Council of 5th February, 1873, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 79.

62. For provisions that pilots for exempted ships between the Nore and Rochester shall not be liable to contribute to nor entitled to the benefits of the pilot fund, Ibid. 6th September, 1880, in ibid. p. 189.

9. Pilotage where compulsory.

63. With what ships and under what circumstances the taking of a pilot is compulsory or optional, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. p. 1178.

63a. As to foreign ships, Ibid. p. 1354; as to ships carrying passengers, p. 1355; in pilotage authorities districts generally, p. 1357; in the Trinity House, London District, p. 1359; in the Outports District of the same Trinity House, p. 1366; in the Trinity House, Hull District, p. 1372; in the Trinity House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne District, p. 1375; in various other ports in England, p. 1376; in Scotch ports, p. 1388; and in Irish ports, p. 1393.

10. Pilotage Dues.

*Generally.

64. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, there shall continue to be paid to all Trinity House pilots, in respect of their pilotage services, such dues as were immediately before the time when this act came into operation payable to them in respect thereof. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 380.

65. For provisions enabling the Trinity House, London, by bye-law approved by Order in Council to fix and alter rates of pilotage to be received by their pilots, but not to exceed those specified in Table (M). to this act, Ibid. s. 333, sub-s. 5.

66. For the rates of pilotage to be taken by the pilots of the Trinity House, London, for the London and English Channel districts, see their Bye-law and Schedule, approved by Order in Council of 1st November, 1862, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 74; and Parliamentary Returns, Nos. 325 of 1882, p. 186; and 222 of 1884, p. 17.

* (30) For provisions enabling the Trinity House, London, to establish and alter rates of pilotage for their districts, to be regulated as therein mentioned, and for giving notice of the establishment or alteration thereof, see 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 8.

11. Pilotage Dues on Foreign Ships.

(a) Generally.

67. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, there shall be paid in respect of all foreign ships trading to and from the port of London, and not exempted from pilotage, the following pilotage dues: as to ships inwards, the full amount of dues for the distance piloted, and as to ships outwards, the full amount of dues for the distance required by law. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 381.

68. No foreign ship, whether in ballast or with cargo, or passengers, navigating between any port of the United Kingdom or the Channel Islands, or Isle of Man, is subject to any other rate of pilotage dues than British ships so employed. See the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 141.

(b) Interpreter's Fees.

69. As to the rates to be charged for an interpreter to a pilot taking charge of a foreign vessel, see 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 77.

(c) Persons liable.

70. Payment of pilotage dues on foreign ships trading to and from the port of London, shall be made to the collector of customs in the port of London by one or more of the following persons: the master or other person in charge of the ship, or the consignees or agents thereof who have paid or made themselves liable to pay any other charge for the ship in the port of London. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 381, and similar provisions in 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 44.

(d) Receipt for Payment.

71. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, the collector of customs shall, on receiving pilotage dues in respect of foreign ships, give to the person paying them a receipt in writing. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 382.

(e) Refusal of Clearance or Transire until Payment.

72. No officer of customs in the port of London shall grant a clearance or transire for any such foreign ship without production of such receipt. Ibid.

(f) Power of Detention until Payment.

73. If any such ship attempts to go to sea without such clearance or transire, any such officer may detain her until the receipt is produced. Ibid.

(g) Recovery.

74. Such pilotage may be recovered like other pilotage dues recoverable under this act. Ibid. 381.

(h) Payment over to Trinity House.

75. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, the collector shall pay over to the Trinity House the pilotage dues received by him in respect of any foreign ship. Ibid. s. 383.

(i) Application of Payment by Trinity House.

76. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House it is to apply the pilotage dues received in respect of any foreign ship in paying the pilot who had charge of such ship such dues for such service as if the ship had been British, after deducting the poundage due to the Trinity House; and in paying to any unlicensed person who, in the absence of a licensed pilot had charge, such amount as it may think proper, not exceeding the amount so payable to a licensed pilot; and to pay the residue to the Trinity House Pilot Fund. Ibid.

6. Trinity House, Hull.

1. *Generally.

77. The Society of the Trinity House of Hull was established by letters patent of Henry VIII. of 7th November, 1541. By charter of 23 Elizabeth, 1st February, 1581, its rights, privileges, and possessions acquired under the letters patent of Henry VIII. were confirmed, and the society were empowered to make rules and regulations for the safe guiding and conducting of vessels in the port of Kingston-upon-Hull; to enforce penalties for the infringement of its regulations; to examine and licence pilots to conduct vessels sailing and navigating into and out of the port of Kingston-upon-Hull and the limits and liberties thereof, and into and out of and upon the Humber, and from the Humber out to sea, and between Flamborough Head, northward, and Winterton Ness, southward, and into and out of the several ports, creeks, harbours and places situate between those headlands; to prevent unlicensed persons from taking charge of vessels, and to punish such as might do so. By charters of 7 Charles I. and of Charles II. these rights and privileges were further confirmed and extended; and they are also ratified, confirmed and extended by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv.; and the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 387.

* (31) The following acts of Parliament relate to the Trinity House, Hull:—6 Geo. 3, c. 39; 52 Geo. 3, c. 39; 6 Geo. 4, c. 125;

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 105; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 81; The M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), Pt. V.

77a. The jurisdiction as to pilotage of the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull, includes the port of Hull, river Humber, and New Holland, the ports of Gainsborough, Goole, Grimsby, Spalding, and Wisbech, and the East Coast, with the North and Baltic Seas, and the Catte-gat. See P. R. as to Pilotage, No. 264 of 1863.

78. Full powers are granted to the warden, elder brothers and assistants of the Trinity House of Hull, to prevent any mariner of the port of Hull, or the limits thereof therein specified, from taking charge as master or pilot of any ship to cross the seas, or pass from Humber beyond Flamborough Head northward, or Winterton Ness southward, other than duly-licensed pilots of that Trinity House, and to punish by fine or imprisonment persons offending in that respect. See the charters of 23 Eliz. and 13 Car. 2, to the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull, cited in The Killarney, 1 Lush. 436.

79. The limits and liberties of the port of Kingston-upon-Hull are "all havens, creeks and other places where our customer of Hull, by virtue of his office, hath any authority to take any custom by the name of primage, as in times heretofore." Ibid.

80. The guild or brotherhood of masters and pilots, seamen of the Trinity House in Kingston-upon-Hull, commonly called "The Corporation of the Trinity House in Kingston-upon-Hull," have, by usage for a long period of years and by virtue of letters patent or charters granted to them by the crown, been empowered to appoint pilots to conduct ships navigating into and out of the port of Kingston-upon-Hull, and the limits and liberties thereof, and into and out of and upon the river Humber, and from that river out to sea, and between Flamborough Head northward and Winterton Ness southward, and into and out of the several ports, creeks, harbours and places situate between those two headlands or places. See 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv. s. 22.

81. The Trinity House in Kingston-upon-Hull are authorized to license pilots for conducting ships into and out of the port of Kingston-upon-Hull, and of the port of Great Grimsby in the county of Lincoln, and upon any part of the river Humber below the port of Kingston-upon-Hull, and so far out at sea as to bring the North Ness of Dimlington on the coast of Holderness to bear or be seen a sufficient distance clear or open of the land to the southward thereof, so as to pass clear of the New Sand, and also so far along the coast to the northward thereof as the North Ness of Dimlington, and to the southward thereof as headland on the coast of Lincolnshire, known as Donna Nook, and the pilots so licensed are for the purposes of this act called "Humber pilots," and all ships so sailing, navigating and passing, except as thereinafter provided, are to be piloted within those limits by such pilots and no others. Ibid. s. 89.

82. For provisions when no pilot can be taken on board for a pilot in another vessel or pilot boat leading the way being paid pilotage as if on board, see Ibid. ss. 37, 38.

83. Every such Humber pilot taking charge of any ship about to sail out of the port, or from any of the roadsteads of the Humber, is hereby required to take charge of such ship at her moorings in any of the wet docks, or basins, or elsewhere in the port, or in any of the roadsteads where the ship may then be, and to pilot her so far out to sea as to bring the North Ness of Dimlington to bear a sufficient distance clear of the land to the southward thereof, so as to pass clear of the New Sand; and whenever the pilot is required by the master of the ship, whether outward or inward bound, to attend the ship at anchor in any of the roadsteads in the Humber for any purpose, the pilot must attend accordingly, and for such services the pilot is to be paid as therein mentioned. Ibid. s. 40.

84. Every such pilot employed to pilot any ship into the port of Kingston-upon-Hull, is required to take her to such place or delivery in the haven or old harbour, or any of the wet docks of the port, as the master shall require, or so near thereto as he can safely get, and there moor her in some proper situation, without any other payment than that directed for piloting the ship into the port. Ibid. s. 41.

85. If the attendance of the pilot is required to take care of the ship from such first mooring, and to conduct her higher up the haven or old harbour, or into any of the wet docks or other places of delivery, the pilot who has brought the ship to such mooring, or some other of the said Humber pilots to be by the commodore of pilots appointed for that purpose, on the application of the master, must attend and be paid for unmooring and removing the ship or vessel to such her place of delivery such pilotage as is therein mentioned. Ibid.

86. The corporation of the Trinity House of the port of Hull is to continue to appoint not more than seven nor less than three sub-commissioners, for examining pilots in all districts in which it has been used to make such appointments, and may, with the consent of her Majesty in Council, appoint like sub-commissioners for any other district within its jurisdiction; but no pilotage district under the authority of any sub-commissioners appointed by this corporation is to be extended, except with such consent; and no such sub-commissioners are pilotage authorities within the meaning of this act. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 387, and similar provisions in 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 6; and 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. cv. ss. 52, 53.

87. For provisions for the Trinity House, Hull, on the certificate of such commissioners, to license such persons as pilots, see 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 105, ss. 52, 53.

88. For provisions enabling the commissioners appointed under the act to make and alter bye-laws for the regulation of pilots, &c., Ibid. ss. 65—68.

89. For provisions defining for the purposes of the act the entrance of the River Humber, and the words "pilots," and "inward bound" and "outward bound," and the port of Kingston-upon-Hull, Ibid. s. 89.

90. For provisions as to vessels at Hull carrying ballast for hire being registered, measured, inspected, &c., Ibid. ss. 57—64.

92. For the bye-laws of the Trinity House, Hull, from 1854 to 1863, see Parliamentary Returns, No. 516 of 1855, p. 107; No. 244 of 1859, p. 44; and No. 325 of 1882, pp. 36, 37.

2. Pilotage where compulsory.

93. With what ships and under what circumstances pilotage is compulsory or optional within this district, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. p. 1372.

3. Pilotage Certificates.

94. For bye-laws and regulations relating to the granting of pilotage certificates to masters and mates of vessels in this port and its members—Goole, Wisbech, Spalding, and generally. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, pp. 30—37.

4. Pilotage Dues.

95. As to the rates of pilotage of steam vessels and vessels towed by steam vessels in charge of pilots within the district of the Trinity House, Hull, see bye-law of that pilotage authority, approved by Order in Council of 20th November, 1873, in 2 Maudo & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 83.

96. For provisions as to the payment of pilotage inwards, and as to the payment beforehand of pilotage outwards, see 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 45.

97. For provisions as to pilotage payable to pilots detained on board ships performing quarantine, Ibid. s. 42.

7. *Trinity House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

Generally.

98. The jurisdiction of this Trinity House is now transferred to the Pilotage

* (32) The master, pilots, and seamen of the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, have been for a long series of years a corporation, and by long usage, and by virtue of various letters patent granted to them by the Crown, have possessed and enjoyed various powers, privileges, and franchises, and particularly the power of licensing pilots for conducting ships up and down the river Tyne, and into and out of the port of Newcastle, and the creeks and members belonging thereto, and of erecting and maintaining lights, buoys, and beacons in that port and river. See 41 Geo. 3, c. 86, s. 24.

Commissioners of the Tyne. See further thereon, tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. c. 13, p. 1375.

99. The former pilotage jurisdiction of the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne over the ports of Hartlepool, Sunderland, and the Tyne, is transferred to separate Pilotage Commissioners for such ports. Ibid.

99a. See as to the port of Hartlepool, ibid. p. 1380; the port of Sunderland, ibid. 1386; and the Tyne, ibid. p. 1387.

8. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board.

100. All pilots shall obey the bye-laws of the Board. See P. R. No. 325 of 1882, p. 61.

101. Every pilot shall use his utmost care and diligence to conduct the vessels under his charge safely and without damage or injury to others. Ibid.

102. Pilots in charge of vessels at anchor in the river or channel shall cause white lights to be constantly exhibited at night, one on the forestay, and the other at the gaff end, to be not less than eight feet above the upper top rail of the bulwarks so long as at anchor in pilot water. Ibid.

103. All pilots shall obey all orders and directions that may be given to them by the water-hailiff, harbour, dock and pier-head masters, relative to the docking, towing, transporting or removing vessels under their charge. Ibid.

104. Every pilot shall duly keep the lead going when in charge of any ship or vessel while under way. Ibid.

105. He shall not leave his vessel until she is safely anchored in the river, nor then leave her without a written permission from the officer in command or on being relieved by a qualified pilot by order of the master of the boat. Ibid.

106. He shall not lay any vessel aground without a written order from the owner or commander. Ibid.

107. When received on board a pilot boat from an outward-bound ship, or otherwise, he shall submit to the authority and direction of the master while he remains on board such boat in all respects as if he were one of her crew. Ibid.

108. During the night the boat on turn for boarding shall exhibit lights in accordance with Art. 8 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63). Ibid.

109. For provisions in regard to pilotage certificates to be granted to masters and mates of ships within the port of Liverpool, see Ibid.

110. For Mersey Bye-laws as to pilots, and pilot boats and pilotage annuity fund, see Ibid.

111. Every pilot shall report to the Superintendent of Pilotage, within twenty-four hours after leaving the vessel, all accidents which may have happened to or been caused by the vessel while in his charge. See Regulations of 20th July, 1882, as to pilots and apprentices in pursuance of Bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, No. 8.

112. See for the limits of this port and for further provisions as to pilotage thereon, tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. c. 26, pp. 1381—1384.

9. Other Pilotage Authorities.

113. For the several other pilotage authorities, their powers, jurisdiction, limits, and rates of pilotage, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. for England and Wales, pp. 1376—1387; for Scotland, pp. 1388—1393; and for Ireland, pp. 1393—1398.

(33) These powers and authorities of the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne were ratified and extended by 41 Geo. 3, c. 86, and were further ratified by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 331—333, 387.

(34) The jurisdiction of the Trinity House of Newcastle-upon-Tyne formerly included the ports of Shields, North Sunderland, Seaham, West Hartlepool, Stockton, Whitby, Blyth, Warkworth, Middlesbro', Alnmouth, Hartley, Camboise Harbour, and Seaton Sluice, and the North Sea, East Coast, and Holy Island. See P. R. No. 264 of 1863, p. 63.

(35) Its jurisdiction as to Holy Island confirmed. See 41 Geo. 3, c. 86, s. 24.

(36) As to the appointment by the Trinity House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, of sub-commissioners and their authority, see Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 387.

10. Pilotage Certificates.

1. By Pilotage Authorities generally.

114. The master or mate of any ship may apply to any pilotage authority to be examined as to his capacity to pilot the ship of which he is master or mate, or any one or more ships belonging to the same owner, within any part of the district of such pilotage authority; and if found competent a pilotage certificate is to be granted to him, enabling him to pilot the ship or ships therein specified, of which he is acting as master or mate at the time, but no other, within the limits therein described, without incurring any penalties for the non-employment of a qualified pilot. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 340.

114a. A pilotage certificate so granted is only in force for a year unless renewed, which it may be from time to time by indorsement under the hand of the secretary or other proper officer of the pilotage authority by which it was granted. Ibid. s. 341; see also tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. p. 1356.

115. A master possessing a proper pilotage certificate, enabling him to do so, may pilot his ship without employing a licensed pilot. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 353—355.

115a. Semble, when the master or mate of a vessel is duly licensed under the 5th part of the M. S. Act, 1854, so as to render it unnecessary for him to take a pilot on board, the employment of such pilot does not bring his owners within the immunity of the 388th section. Ibid.

116. A master of a steam vessel trading between Hull and Rotterdam passed an examination as to his qualification to pilot such vessel into and out of the port of Goole. On the next day, he having then sailed for Rotterdam, a certificate, enabling him to pilot his vessel into and out of the port, was completed, sealed, and dated, but remained in the office of the Commissioners until after the collision. Held, that such certificate had not been granted, and was not possessed by the master so as to exempt his ship from compulsory pilotage. The Killarney, 30 L. J. Adm. 41; 5 L. T. N.S. 21; 1 Lushington, 202.

116a. A misdescription of the ownership of a vessel will invalidate a pilotage certificate granted under sect. 355 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). The Earl of Auckland, supra.

117. A pilotage certificate issued to a master under sect. 355, describing the ship as the property of a person who was not the owner either at the time of the granting of the certificate, or at the time of a collision subsequently occurring, is invalid at the time of that collision. Ibid.

2. By Board of Trade.(a) Generally.

118. If upon complaint it appears to the Board of Trade that any such pilotage authority has without reasonable cause refused or neglected to examine any master or mate, and to grant him a pilotage certificate, or that the examination has been improperly conducted, or improper terms imposed, or that the certificate has been improperly withdrawn, the Board may appoint persons to examine such master or mate, and if found competent, grant him a certificate, upon such terms as such Board may think fit. It shall be in force for one year, and may be renewed from year to year. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 342.

(b) As to Passenger Ships.

119. The Board of Trade may, on proof or after examination as therein mentioned, grant a pilotage certificate to any master or mate of any ship carrying passengers between any places in the United Kingdom or Channel Islands, or endorse on his certificate of competency or service a certificate authorizing him to pilot any ship or ships belonging to the same owner, and of a draught of water not greater than that specified in the certificate, within the limits of any pilotage district. The certificate remains in force for such time as the Board of Trade directs, and enables the master or mate therein named to conduct the ship or ships therein specified within the limits therein described. Ibid. s. 355.

119a. Under sect. 355 the Board of Trade can only issue certificates to masters or mates for ships described in sect. 354, i.e. passenger ships navigating between ports in the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands. Ibid.; The Earl of Auckland, 1 Lushington, 164; 30 L. J. Adm. 121; 3 L. T. N.S. 786.

120. The master of every ship carrying passengers between ports in the United Kingdom or the Channel Islands, navigating within any district for which pilots are licensed, or any part thereof, is compelled to employ a pilot within any such district unless he or his mate has a pilotage certificate for such district. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 354.

3. By Trinity House, London.

121. As to the conditions upon which pilotage certificates are granted by the Trinity House, London, to masters and mates of ships, and the duties which holding such certificates entails, see Trinity House Bye-laws, confirmed by Order in Council of 1st May, 1855, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Poll. & Bruce), p. 71.

121a. Any master or mate who holds a pilotage certificate, granted by the Trinity House, London, under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is qualified to pilot any other ship or ships belonging to the same owner or owners, within the limits described in such certificate, without being compelled to employ a pilot, but under the conditions that the ship which he is so qualified to pilot is of no greater draught of water than the ship in respect of which his certificate was granted, and that the name and description of every such ship is added to his certificate. Ibid. No. 6, in Ibid. p. 72.

4. By Trinity House, Hull.

122. No certificate granted by the Corporation of the Trinity House, Hull, will authorize the person therein named to pilot any other ship than the ship or ships therein specified, and of which he may be actually master or mate at the time. See Bye-laws of the Trinity House, Hull, No. 9, confirmed by Order in Council of July 31, 1858.

5. Withdrawal.

123. If at any time it appears to the Board of Trade, or to any pilotage authority, that any master or mate to whom a pilotage certificate has been granted by such Board or authority has been guilty of misconduct, or has shown himself incompetent to pilot his ship, such Board or authority (as the case may be) may withdraw his certificate. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 344.

6. Fees.

124. As to the fees payable on the grant and renewal of such pilotage certificates, Ibid. s. 343.

11. Pilot Ships and Boats.

1. Generally.

125. All boats and ships regularly employed in the pilotage service of any district are to be approved and licensed by the pilotage authority of such district, who may, at their discretion, appoint and remove the masters thereof. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 345.

2. Flags and other Characteristics.

126. As to the distinguishing flags, lettering, and other characteristics of every such pilot boat or ship, and the duty of the master thereof to attend thereto; penalty for default not exceeding £20. Ibid. s. 346.

126a. Whenever any qualified pilot is carried off in a boat or ship not in the pilotage service, he shall exhibit a flag of the above description, to show that there is a qualified pilot on board; penalty, for breach without reasonable cause, not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 347.

127. If any such boat or ship, not having a licensed pilot on board, displays such a flag; penalty against the owner or master not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 348.

127a. Any pilot, master, or person in charge of any ship coming to any port in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or Isle of Man from or touching at any place abroad where he has reason to apprehend that yellow fever or other highly-infectious distemper prevails, must on arrival hoist and continue the proper signal until the proper officer has given permission to haul it down. Penalty for breach, not exceeding £100, recoverable by information and summons before a stipendiary master or two justices, and in default of payment, imprisonment, not exceeding six months. See the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s. 234.

12. Signals for—

128. The signals for a pilot are to be those specified in the second schedule to this act. See the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 19, and tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1248.

128a. Penalty against any master of a vessel who uses, or permits any person under his authority to use, any of such signals for any other purpose than that of summoning a pilot, or any other signal for a pilot, not exceeding £20. Ibid.

13. Draught of Water.1. False Declaration.

129. If any master, on being requested by any qualified pilot in charge to declare her draught of water, refuses to do so, or makes, or is privy to the making of, a false declaration to such pilot as to such draught; penalty, not exceeding double pilotage. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 359.

130. Whenever a difference arises between the master and the qualified pilot of any ship trading to or from the port of London as to her draught of water, the Trinity House shall upon application by either party, made, in case of a ship inward-bound, within twelve hours after her arrival or before she begins to discharge her cargo, and in the case of a ship outward-bound before she quits her moorings, appoint some proper officer who shall measure the ship, and settle the difference accordingly; and there shall be paid to the officer measuring such ship, by the party against whom he decides, one guinea if the ship is below, and half a guinea if above, the entrance of the London Docks at Wapping. Ibid. s. 384.

130a. As to the recording of the draught of water on ships generally, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. p. 1197.

2. Fraudulent Alteration of Marks.

130b. If any master or person interested in a ship makes, or is privy to the making of, any fraudulent alteration in the marks on the stern or stem post of such ship, denoting her draught of water, penalty not exceeding £500. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 359.

14. Qualified—.1. Generally.

131. "Qualified pilot," in this act, means any person duly licensed by any pilotage authority to conduct ships to which he does not belong. Ibid. s. 2.

132. Any qualified pilot acting beyond the limits for which he is qualified by his licence is to be considered as an unqualified pilot. Ibid. s. 349.

2. Licences.(a) Generally.

132a. Every qualified pilot on his appointment is to receive a licence specifying therein his name, place of abode and description, and the limits within which he is qualified to act. The licence must be duly registered, and he is not qualified to act until it is so registered. Ibid.

133. The Board of Trade by provisional order has power in cases where pilotage is not compulsory, and there is no restriction on the power of duly-qualified persons to obtain licences as pilots, to enable any pilotage authority to license pilots for any part of the district for which no such licences exist. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, sub-s. 5.

134. It has also power by provisional order to give facilities for enabling duly-qualified persons, after proper examination, to obtain licences as pilots. Ibid. sub-s. 8.

(b) Documents with—.

135. Every qualified pilot, upon receiving his licence, is to be furnished with a copy of such part of this act as relates to pilotage, and a copy of the rates, bye-laws, and regulations established within the district for which he is licensed. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 350.

(c) Registration.

136. The principal officer of customs at or nearest to which any qualified pilot resides is to register the licence; and the pilot must not act as such until his licence is so registered. Ibid. s. 349.

(d) Production.

137. Every qualified pilot while so acting is to be provided with his licence, and to produce it to every person by whom he is employed, or to whom he tenders his services as pilot; penalty for breach not exceeding £10, and liability to suspension or dismissal. Ibid. s. 357.

(e) Delivery up.

138. Every qualified pilot when required must produce and deliver up his licence to the pilotage authority who appointed him. On his death the person in possession of his licence must without delay transmit it to that pilotage authority. Penalty for breach not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 352.

138a. The pilot cannot aver as an excuse for his non-delivery up of his licence that the pilotage authority has acted capriciously or in an arbitrary manner. Henry v. Newcastle Trinity House Board, 8 E. & B. 723.

15. Employment of Qualified—.1. Generally.

139. No qualified pilot is entitled to act as such until his licence is registered. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 349.

2. Pilotage where compulsory.

140. With what ships and under what circumstances the taking of a pilot is compulsory or optional; see tit. OWNERS, pp. 1178, 1179.

3. By Possessors of Pilotage Certificates.

141. Under the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 88, held, that if a master or mate possessing a pilotage certificate employed any pilot to assist him, it must be a duly-licensed, and not an unlicensed, pilot. Beilby v. Scott, 7 M. & W. 101.

4. *Right to supersede Unqualified—.

142. A qualified pilot may supersede an unqualified pilot. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 360.

142a. Subject to alteration by any pilotage authority, penalty double pilotage against every master of any ship who, though not compellable to take a pilot, employs an unqualified pilot to pilot him within any pilotage district after a qualified pilot has offered or made a signal to take charge. Ibid. s. 353.

143. Penalty against an unqualified pilot assuming or continuing in the charge of any ship after a qualified pilot has offered to take charge of her not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 361.

143a. Against the master of every ship compellable to take a licensed pilot in any part of the Trinity House, London, and out-port districts who, after a qualified pilot has offered to take charge or made a signal for that purpose, pilots such ship without a proper pilotage certificate, or employs or continues to employ an unqualified person to pilot her, penalty for breach, double pilotage; and, in addition, if the Trinity House certify in writing under their common seal that the prosecutor is to be at liberty to proceed for it, an additional penalty not exceeding £5 for every fifty tons burthen of such ship. Ibid. s. 376.

144. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, every master of any ship coming from the westward, and bound to any place in the rivers Thames and Medway (unless having a qualified pilot or exempted from compulsory pilotage), must, on the arrival of the ship off Dungeness, and thenceforth until she has passed the south buoy of the brake, or a line to be drawn from Sandown Castle to the buoy, display and keep flying the usual signal for a pilot; and if any qualified pilot is within hail, or is approaching and within half a mile, and has the proper distinguishing flag flying in his boat, such master shall, by heaving to or shortening sail, or other practicable means, facilitate such pilot getting on board, and give him charge of his ship; or if there are two or more pilots offering at the same time, to such one of them as may, according to the regulations, be entitled to take such charge. Penalty for breach not exceeding double pilotage, to be paid to the Trinity House, and carried to the Trinity House Pilot Fund. Ibid. s. 378, and similar provisions in 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 19.

145. Any licensed pilot within the limits of his licence, and qualification, may supersede any unlicensed pilot, or pilot not licensed within such limits, or acting beyond his qualification; penalty against every person continuing in charge without being so duly licensed, after any duly-licensed and qualified pilot has offered to take charge, not exceeding £50, nor less than £20. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 70.

146. Under this 70th section, too, it was held, that the prohibition did not preclude the master from applying to his vessel any moving power he might select. Thus, he was entitled to use another vessel, or boats, or a steam-tug for this purpose, and if this could not be done without necessarily devolving upon those who applied the power the selection of the course, and a certain portion or indeed all the charge and conduct of the vessel in that course, still, if the bonâ fide object of the employment was the motive power, the person so employed was not a pilot, and was not within the meaning of the act. See 1 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 259, n.; and Beilby v. Scott, 1 P. & B. 259; 7 M. & W. 93, therein cited.

147. Against every master of any ship

* (37) See an interesting note on these sections and on analogous sections in prior acts as opposed to the decisions in The Kil- larney and The Hankow, in 1 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 259, note.

who acts as a pilot, or employs any unlicensed pilot, or any licensed pilot acting out of the limits for which he is qualified, or beyond the extent of his qualification, after any licensed and qualified pilot has offered to take charge, or made a signal for that purpose; penalty, double pilotage, and an additional penalty of five pounds for every fifty tons burthen of the ship, if the Trinity House, London, certifies in writing that the prosecutor is at liberty to recover such additional penalty. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 58. Semble, still in force, see The Killarney, 1 Lush. 426.

148. Held, under this 58th section, that the master of a ship who navigated her himself, though liable to double the amount of pilotage, was not liable to the penalty imposed by s. 70 of the same act. Beilby v. Shepherd, 3 Exch. 40.

149. Held, also, that the master was not liable for refusing to employ a pilot unless he produced his licence, even though the licence was not asked for. Hammond v. Blake, 10 B. & C. 424. See, also, as to cases thereon decided under earlier statutes, Usher v. Lyon, 2 Price, 118; Peake v. Carrington, 2 B. & B. 399; 5 B. Moore, 176; Reg. v. Chaney, 6 Dowl. 281; and Chaney v. Payne, 1 Q. B. 712.

150. As to the mode of reckoning the pilotage penalty under a similar provision in sect. 11 of 52 Geo. 3, c. 59, see Mackie v. Landon, 6 Taunt. 256.

5. Pilot in Charge.

Respective Duties of Pilot, Master, and Crew.

151. See tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. pp. 1398—1411.

6. Detention in the Thames.

152. Every pilot in charge of any ship from the Thames to the Downs or elsewhere, must, without additional compensation, wait on board for three complete days while such ship may be detained at Gravesend or elsewhere, by any casualty, nor shall he at the end of those days quit the ship, or receive additional compensation, if she is further detained by weather, but if the ship is longer detained there on any other account, the pilot must still (if required) remain in charge, if a compensation of six shillings per day is offered to him. See Bye-law, No. 6, of Trinity House, confirmed by the Chief Justice of the King's Bench, 16th April, 1826, pursuant to 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 11.

152a. As to the charges for a pilot's detention in the Thames during quarantine, see No. 166, infra.

16. Remuneration of Qualified—.

1. Generally.

153. Pilots held not entitled, under 52 Geo. 3, c. 39, now repealed, to charge as lay days the days on which they enter and on which they leave a place of quarantine. The Bee, 2 Dodson, 498.

154. The docking of a ship is to be considered as equivalent to bringing her to ordinary moorings. The Adah, 2 Hagg. 330.

155. Claim of a pilot for an extra charge for taking a ship, which arrived before the West India Docks, her place of destination, too late, owing to the state of the tide, to be docked that day, into dock on the following day, pronounced against, on the ground that those services were included in the duty of pilots as set forth in the act of 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, and that the remuneration for such services was also included in the table of charges annexed to the act, the duty of docking, admitted under the act to attach on the day of a ship's arrival, being held to extend to the next working tide after her arrival. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 326.

156. Held, that the tables A. and B., fixing the rates of remuneration to pilots, in the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, now repealed, were to be considered together, and the allowances in one to be held as permitted in the other. Ibid. s. 328.

2. When leading Ships.

157. If any boat or ship with a qualified pilot on board leads any ship without such a pilot, and which, from particular circumstances, cannot be boarded, the pilot so leading is entitled to the full pilotage for the distance run as if actually on board such ship. Ibid. s. 356.

3. When superseding Unqualified—.

158. When a qualified pilot supersedes an unqualified pilot, the master may pay the unqualified pilot a proportionate sum for his services, and deduct the same from the charge of the qualified pilot. In case of dispute the pilotage authority by whom the qualified pilot is licensed shall determine the sums to which each party is entitled. Ibid. s. 360.

4. When taken beyond Limits.

159. No pilot, except under circumstances of unavoidable necessity, shall without his consent be taken to sea or beyond the limits for which he is licensed in any ship whatever. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 357.

159a. Every pilot so taken is entitled, above his pilotage, to 10s. 6d. a day, inclusive of the day on which such ship passes the limit to which he was engaged to pilot her, and of the day of his being returned in the ship to the place where he was taken on board, or of such day as will allow him, if discharged from the ship, time to return thereto; and in such latter case he is entitled to his reasonable travelling expenses. Ibid.

160. The money due for detention to a pilot carried to sea, under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 357, is not a pilotage due within s. 363, so as to make the amount recoverable by the pilot from the ship's broker under that section. Morteo v. Julian, 4 C. P. D. 216; 48 L. J. M. C. 126; 4 Asp. 166.

5. Beyond Legal Rate.

161. Any qualified pilot demanding or receiving, and any master offering or paying him any other rate in respect of pilotage services, whether greater or less, than the rate demandable by law; penalty not exceeding £10. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 358.

162. But the Trinity House may by bye-law, with the sanction of her Majesty in Council, repeal or relax these provisions within the whole or any part of their district, so as to allow any pilot or class of pilots under their jurisdiction to receive, and any master to pay, a less rate. See ibid., as amended by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 9.

163. Licensed pilots for the Thames between Gravesend and London Bridge may, without incurring any penalty, take within those limits pilotage dues less than the legal rate from any ship exempted from compulsory pilotage, and no master incurs any penalty for paying any such lower rate, notwithstanding the 358th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). See Bye-law of the Trinity House, approved by Order in Council of 5th Feb. 1873, in 2 Maude & Pollock (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 78.

164. No pilot licensed for exempted ships for the district between the Nore and Rochester incurs any penalty for taking within those limits pilotage from any exempted ship at a rate less than the legal rate, and no master of any such ship incurs any penalty for paying such lower pilotage. Ibid. 6th Sept. 1880, in Ibid. p. 190.

164a. It is a settled doctrine of the Admiralty Court, that no pilot is bound to go on board a vessel in distress, to render pilot service for mere pilotage reward. His refusal, under such circumstances, would subject him to no censure; and if he did take charge of a vessel so circumstanced, he would be entitled to a salvage remuneration. The Frederick, 1 W. Rob. 17. See also tit. SALVAGE.

6. Detention in the Thames.(a) Generally.

165. As to the remuneration of a pilot detained in the Thames, see No. 152, supra.

(b) During Quarantine.

166. The master or person commanding any ship bound to the Thames, and repairing to the place appointed for quarantine, is to pay the full charges of pilotage up to Stangate Creek, or the place so appointed, and the pilot in charge is entitled to a further sum of 8s. a day for the days he is obliged to remain in quarantine. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 41. Semble, revived by sect. 331 of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104).

7. Pilotage Rates and Dues.(a) *Generally.

167. The Board of Trade has power by provisional order in cases where pilot-

(38a) See also for the rates of pilotage in force, the returns of the different pilotage authorities to the Board of Trade, pursuant to

s. 337 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), in Parliamentary Returns as to Pilotage, No. 516 of the year 1855, No. 354 of 1856, No. 5, Sess. 2, of 1857, No. 174 of 1858, No. 244 of 1859, No. 287 of 1860, No. 243 of 1861, No. 270 of 1862, No. 264 of 1863, No. 408 of 1867, No. 178 of 1871, No. 260 of 1872, No. 204 of 1874, No. 276 of 1875, No. 292 of 1876, No. 269 of age is not compulsory, and there is no restriction on the power of duly-qualified persons to obtain licences to enable any pilotage authority to fix pilotage rates for any part of the district for which no such rates exist, and to enable that pilotage authority to raise all or any of the pilotage rates in force in that district, or any part thereof. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, sub-ss. 5 and 6.

(b) Persons liable.

168. The owner or master of any ship obtaining the services of a qualified pilot, or such consignees or agents thereof as have paid or made themselves liable to pay any other charge on account of such ship in the port of her arrival or discharge as to pilotage inwards, and in the port from which she clears out as to pilotage outwards, are liable to pay pilotage dues under this act; but such recovery shall not take place until a previous demand in writing, and seven days afterwards. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 363.

169. Every consignee and agent (not being the owner or master) hereby made liable for the payment of pilotage dues in respect of any ship may, out of monies in his hands received on account of such ship, or belonging to the owner, retain the amount of all dues so paid by him, with reasonable expenses incurred by reason of such payment or liability. Ibid. s. 364.

170. The master's agreement for pilotage services, not affected by collusion or fraud, would be as binding on the owner as if made in his own person. The Nelson, 6 C. Rob. 227.

171. The report by the master of the ship to the owner that certain additional charges were due to the pilot (such charges not being allowable under the table of remuneration for pilot services annexed to the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125), held not to bar or conclude the owner from objecting to such charges. The Adah, 2 Hagg. 332.

172. The 10s. 6d. a day to which a pilot is entitled by sect. 357 of the M. S. Act, 1854, if he is taken without his consent to sea or beyond the limits for which he is licensed, are not pilotage dues for which the shipbrokers are liable under sect. 363. Morteo v. Julian, 4 C. P. D. 216; 48 L. J. M. C. 126; 4 Asp. 166.

(c) *Recovery.

173. Pilotage dues may be recovered like penalties of the like amount under this act; such recovery shall not take place until a previous demand has been made in writing, and seven days afterwards. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 363.

174. A pilot cannot sue for his wages earned in navigating a vessel into an enemy's port. It is tantamount to a trading with the enemy. The Benjamin Franklin, 6 C. Rob. 350.

175. The Board of Trade has power, by provisional order, in cases where the pilotage is not compulsory, and there is no restriction on the number of pilots, or on the power of duly-qualified persons to obtain licences as pilots, to give additional facilities for the recovery of pilotage rates. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, sub-s. 7.

17. Responsibility of Qualified—.

1. Generally.

176. If any qualified pilot commits any of the following offences:—(1) Keeps or is interested in keeping any public-house or place of public entertainment, or sells or is interested in selling any wine, spirituous liquors, tobacco, or tea; (2) Commits any fraud or other offence against the revenues of customs or excise, or the laws relating thereto; (3) Is directly or indirectly concerned in any corrupt practices relating 1877, No. 266 of 1878, No. 279 of 1881, No. 325 of 1882, No. 207 of 1883, No. 222 of 1884.

(38b) As to the different pilotage authorities and the pilotage returns applicable thereto, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. pp. 1178, 1179.

(38c) For powers to lower, modify, and raise those rates, see the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), and the annual Pilotage Returns to Parliament.

* (39) To constitute pilotage a lien on the ship the contract must have been made by some person in the employment of the owner, duly authorized to make the contract, such as the master or quasi-master. But mere wrongdoers or mutineers have no authority to bind the ship. The Anne, 1 Mason, 508. [AMERICAN.]

to ships, their tackle, furniture, cargoes, crews or passengers, or to persons in distress at sea or by shipwreck, or to their monies, goods or chattels; (4) Lends his licence; (5) Acts as pilot whilst suspended; (6) Acts as pilot when in a state of intoxication; (7) Employs or causes to be employed on board any ship of which he has the charge any boat, anchor, cable, or other store, matter or thing beyond what is necessary for the service of such ship, with the intent to enhance the expenses of pilotage for his own gain or for the gain of another; (8) Refuses or wilfully delays, when not prevented by illness or other reasonable cause, to take charge of any ship within the limits of his licence upon the signal for a pilot being made by such ship, or upon being required to do so by the master, owner, agent or consignee, or by any officer of the pilotage authority by whom such pilots is licensed, or by any principal officer of customs; (9) Unnecessarily cuts or slips or causes to be cut or slipped any cable belonging to any ship; (10) Refuses, on the request of the master, to conduct the ship in his charge into any port or place into which he is qualified to conduct the same, except on reasonable ground of danger to the ship; (11) Quits the ship of which he has the charge, without the consent of the master, before the service for which he was hired has been performed; penalty for breach (in addition to any liability for damages at the suit of the person aggrieved) not exceeding £100, and he is liable to suspension or dismissal. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 365.

177. Penalty for breach against every person who procures, abets or connives at the commission of any such offence (in addition to any liability for damages at the suit of the person aggrieved) not exceeding £100, and, if a qualified pilot, he is liable to suspension or dismissal. Ibid.

178. If a pilot, under known circumstances of danger, acts with reasonable care and prudence, he is not liable for damage that occurs notwithstanding. See Thompson v. The North Eastern Railway Co., 30 L. J. Q. B. 67; 6 L. T. N.S. 127.

179. It is an act of misconduct, and one which the court will take measures to punish, for a pilot to refuse to make an affidavit for a party to a salvage suit. The Prince of Wales, 6 Notes of Cases, 43.*

2. False Representations affecting Safety of Ship.

180. If any person, by wilful misrepresentation of circumstances upon which the safety of a ship may depend, obtains or endeavours to obtain the charge of such ship, and every other person procuring, abetting, or conniving at the commission of such offence: penalty against him (in addition to any liabilities for damages at the suit of the party aggrieved), not exceeding £100; if the offender is a qualified pilot, he is also liable to suspension or dismissal. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 367.

3. Causing Damage to Ship or Person.

181. If any pilot in charge by wilful breach, or neglect of duty, or drunkenness, does any act tending to the immediate loss, destruction, or serious damage of a ship of which he is in charge, or tending immediately to endanger the life or limb of any person on board; or if any pilot by wilful breach of duty, or drunkenness, refuses or omits to do any lawful act, proper and requisite, to be done by him for preserving such ship

* (40) At this time, affidavits were the usual mode of proof in salvage actions in the Court of Admiralty.

(41) If a pilot undertakes the conduct of a vessel to bring her to St. Malo, or any other port, and fail of his duty therein, so as the vessel miscarry by reason of his ignorance in what he undertook, and the merchants sustain damage thereby, he shall be obliged to make full satisfaction for the same if he hath wherewithal, and if not, lose his head. Laws of Oleron, ch. 23.

(42) For provisions that pilots quitting their ships in the Thames or Medway, without the consent of the officer in charge, before arrival at the place to which they are bound, are to forfeit their pilotage and imposing penalty for breach, see 6 Geo. 4, c. 125, s. 42.

(43) In France, a law of August, 1790, and a decree of December, 1806, which condemned a pilot guilty of having lost a ship by negligence or ignorance to three years at the galleys has not been repealed, but as the punishment of the galleys has been abolished, and in this particular case no alternative enacted, the fault of the pilot does not at the present time give rise to criminal proceedings. D. P. 1875, I. 178.

from loss, destruction, or serious damage, or for preserving any person belonging to or on board such ship from danger to life or limb, the pilot so offending shall for such offence be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and if a qualified pilot shall also be liable to suspension and dismissal by the authority by which he is licensed. Ibid. s. 366.

4. To produce Copy, Rates, Bye-laws, &c.

182. Every qualified pilot must, when required, produce to the master of any ship, or other person employing him, the copies furnished him on receiving his licence, of such part of this act as relates to pilotage, and of the rates, bye-laws, and regulations established within the district for which he is licensed; penalty for breach not exceeding £5. Ibid. s. 350.

5. Bond to Trinity House.

182a. Subject to alteration by the Trinity House, every Trinity House pilot on his appointment shall execute a bond for £100 conditioned for the due observance on his part of the regulations and bye-laws of the Trinity House. Such bond is to be free from stamp duty, and from any other charge except the expense of preparing it. Ibid. s. 372.

6. Limitation.

182b. No qualified pilot who has executed the bond required to be given by him to the Trinity House, London, in £100 is liable for neglect or want of skill beyond its penalty, and the amount of pilotage payable to him in respect of the voyage on which he is engaged. Ibid. s. 373.

7. Collision.

182c. As to the respective duties of a pilot and the crew in order to avoid collision, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. pp. 1398—1411.

8. To report Loss of Anchors or Chains.

183. When anchors or cables are lost from any vessel, the pilot in charge is at once to report the occurrence in writing to the secretary of the Trinity House, London, specifying the place and time of the occurrence, the state of the weather, the direction of the wind, time of tide, quantity of cable riding by, whether the cable was slipped or parted, and the quantity lost; see Regulations of the Trinity House, London, of November, 1853, and July, 1862.

9. To report Collisions.

184. Where a ship in charge of a Trinity House, London, pilot comes into collision with another vessel he is to report the circumstances in writing to the Trinity House in the form prescribed. See the Regulations of that House of 28th October, 1853; see also No. 111, p. 1442.

10. To report a touching of the Ground.

185. For similar directions when a vessel in his charge touches the ground, see Ibid.

18. Unqualified—

Generally.

186. Any qualified pilot acting beyond the limits of his licence is to be considered as an unqualified pilot. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 349.

19. Employment of Unqualified—

1. Generally.

187. An unqualified pilot may, in any pilotage district, without subjecting himself or his employer to any penalty, take charge of a ship as pilot (1) when no qualified pilot has offered to take charge of her, or made a signal for that purpose; (2) when a ship is in distress, or in circumstances making it necessary for the master to avail himself of the best assistance which can be found at the time; or, (3) for the purpose of changing the moorings of any ship in port or of taking her into or out of any dock, in cases where such acts can be done by an unqualified pilot without infringing the regulations of the port, or the orders the harbour master is legally empowered to give. Ibid. s. 362.

2. Prevention.

188. The Board of Trade has power, by provisional order, in cases where the pilotage is not compulsory and there is no restriction on the number of pilots, or on the power of duly-qualified persons to obtain licences as pilots, to give additional facilities for the prevention of the employment of unqualified pilots. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 39, sub-s. 7.

3. By Possessors of Pilotage Certificates.

See c. 15, p. 1446.

4. Supercession by qualified Pilots.

See c. 16, p. 1447.

20. Remuneration of Unqualified—

1. Generally.

189. The act 3 Geo. 1, c. 13, fixing rates of pilotage, was limited to the particular society of pilots, viz. Trinity pilots, therein described, who had the benefit of a monopoly under the provisions of that act, and the restrictions thereof were held to be taken as corresponding with the privileges conferred. Other pilots, therefore, engaged in the same navigation only casually, when the privileged pilots were out of the way, held to be at liberty to make special agreements for higher compensation. Such an agreement pronounced for. The Nelson, 6 C. Rob. 227.

2. When superseded by Qualified—.

See No. 158, p. 1447.

21. Responsibility of Unqualified—

Improper Use of Licence.

190. An unqualified pilot using a licence which he is not entitled to use for the purpose of making himself appear to be a qualified pilot; penalty not exceeding £50. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 361; see also Nos. 177, 180, 181, supra.

22. Recovery of Penalties.

191. As to the mode of recovering the penalties, referred to in this title, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. pp. 1254 and 1321.

Part I.—COURTS, JUDGES, OFFICERS AND OFFICES.

1. Courts and Judges.

1. *Generally.

1. As to the constitution and jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice, the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division thereof, and the Admiralty branch of that division, see tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. p. 636.

2. As to the tenure of office and oaths of office of the judges of the High Court, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 5.

3. As to their order of precedence, ibid. s. 6.

4. All the judges of the High Court have, except as therein mentioned, equal power, authority and jurisdiction. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 5.

5. As to the rank, title, patronage, and powers of appointment or dismissal of the judges of the High Court, ibid. ss. 8, 86.

6. As to the transfer of a judge from one division to another, ibid. s. 31.

7. As to the mode of vacating the office, as to vacancies therein, and as to the court being deemed duly constituted notwithstanding any such vacancy, ibid. ss. 7, 31, 51.

8. As to the salaries and retiring pensions of the judges, ibid. ss. 13, 14, 15.

9. As to the secretaries and clerks of the judges and their duties, fees and emoluments, ibid. s. 79.

10. The Admiralty branch of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division is presided over either by the President of the division, or the judge of the Admiralty Court, who is, however, styled a judge of her Majesty's High Court of Justice. Ibid. ss. 3, 5, 31.

11. These two judges sit together as a divisional Court of Appeal. Ibid. ss. 40, 44.

12. But the ordinary business of the Admiralty branch is transacted and disposed of in the first instance by one judge only. Ibid. s. 42; and the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (c. 59), s. 17.

13. Any cause or matter in the Admiralty branch may, at the request of the President of the division, and with the concurrence of the President of the High Court, be heard by any other judge of the High Court. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 44.

14. Where, from death, vacancy in the office, or other reason, it is impossible or inconvenient for the judge to act, the President of the division may, by special or general order, nominate some other judge to exercise such jurisdiction. See the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (c. 59), s. 17, and Ord. LIX. r. 2, No. 885.

15. As to the duties of the judge in reference to his assessors, see c. 2, infra.

2. Sittings.

(a) Generally.

16. As to the sittings of the High Court, see Ord. LXIII. Nos. 945—960, and Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, pp. 189 et seq.

17. As to the abolition of terms, and the times of sitting of the High Court of Justice in the divisions thereof, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 26.

(b) In Vacation.†

18. See as to vacations and sittings in vacations, ibid. ss. 27, 28, and Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, p. 192.

19. As to the vacation judges and their sittings as a divisional court in vacation, see Ord. LXIII. rr. 11, 12, Nos. 955, 956.

20. As to the four vacations and the commencement and termination thereof, see ibid. r. 4, No. 948.

* (1) The Dean of the Arches (the judge of the highest ecclesiastical court of the Archbishop of Canterbury) was authorized to sit for, or with, the judge of the Court of Admiralty, and during a vacancy in the office of judge of that court. See 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 1.

(2) As to the surrogates or deputies of the judge of the late Court of Admiralty for the despatch of formal business under the old practice anterior to 1859, see Ibid. s. 2 (now repealed); 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38, s. 3; the Admiralty Court Act, 1854 (c. 78), s. 12; Ibid. 1861 (c. 10), s. 25; The Victor, 1 Lushington, 73; and Pritchards' Adm. Digest, 2nd ed. Vol. 2, p. 619.

† (3) Urgent Admiralty motions are heard in vacation by the Vacation Judge of the High Court.

21. It is not necessary for the Court of Appeal or the High Court of Justice to sit on the day kept as the Queen's birthday. Ord. LXIII. r. 2, No. 946.

22. Any interval between the sittings of the High Court or any division thereof, not included in a vacation, shall, so far as the disposal of business by the vacation judges is concerned, be deemed to be a portion of the vacation. Ibid. r. 15, No. 959.

2. Trinity Masters.*

23. The High Court may in any cause or matter in which it may think it expedient to do so call in the aid of one or more assessors specially qualified, and hear the same wholly or partially with the assistance of such assessors. The remuneration to be paid to such assessors shall be determined by the court. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 56.

24. If the judge of the court below differs from his assessors he is bound to decide in accordance with his own opinion. Per Brett, M. R., The Beryl, 9 P. D. 137.

25. It is the duty of the judge sitting with assessors to draw his own deductions from the evidence, the assessors have merely to give him their aid and advice in those matters in which they are skilled. The Magna Charta, 25 L. T. N.S. 512; 1 Asp. N.S. 153; The Philotaxe, 37 L. T. N.S. 540.

26. Nautical assessors summoned to attend the hearing of an action in an Admiralty county court are present merely to advise the judge on questions of nautical science and practice. But it is for the judge to decide the case in accordance with his own opinion as to the law and merits of the case. The Aid, 6 P. D. 84; 4 Asp. 432; 50 L. J. Adm. 40.

27. Trinity masters are merely assessors of the judge, and assist him with their advice. The sentence is entirely his, and neither the opinion of the Trinity masters nor the decision of the judge is analogous to the verdict of a jury on a question of fact at common law, which is altogether conclusive. Williams v. Chapman (The Iron Duke), 4 Notes of Cases, 586; 9 Jur. 476.

28. The office of assessor, as distinguished from that of a jury, is that the

* (4) The Court of Admiralty has power to convene and have the assistance of two or more naval and other personages to assist its judgment. See 2 Chitty's Gen. Prac. 510, 514.

(5) Semble, on trial of nautical cases at nisi prius it was formerly the custom for the judge to obtain one of the masters of the Trinity House as an assessor. The Perseverance, 2 Browne's Civ. and Adm. Law App. 2nd ed. 539.

(6) A rota of the elder brethren is made and kept at the Trinity House, and they attend the court of the Admiralty Division according to it.

(7) The plaintiff's or the defendant's solicitor may obtain the attendance of Trinity masters at the hearing of collision or salvage causes, by filing a præcipe for that purpose in the registry, with a court stamp of 10s. thereon. In other actions the court must be applied to by motion or summons to allow their attendance. See Roscoe's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) p. 223. If the præcipe is signed by the solicitors on both sides, each places a 5s. court stamp on the præcipe; but usually one solicitor bespeaks the attendance of the Trinity masters, and pays the whole court stamp of 10s.

(8) The registrar thereupon writes a letter to the secretary of the Trinity Corporation, requesting the attendance of two of the elder brethren at the hearing of the cause.

(9) He at the same time transmits for the perusal of the Trinity masters prints of the pleadings, and of such evidence, if any, as may have been taken in the cause before the hearing.

(9a) The attendance of Trinity masters should be bespoken on the setting down of the cause for hearing, or some days before the hearing.

(10) If in the course of the taking of the evidence before an examiner or commissioner, any irrelevant matter has been taken down calculated to prejudice the opinion of the Trinity masters against either party in the cause, the judge will, on the application of that party, by motion direct such irrelevant matter to be expunged from the printed papers to be sent to the Trinity masters, and from those to be used at the hearing.

(11) The fees to the Trinity masters are two guineas per diem in each cause. In cases of action and counter-claim double fees are payable to each Trinity master.

(12) The fees to the Trinity masters in each cause are paid by the respective solicitors in whose favour the decree or decrees are made. Where in an action for damage by collision both parties are held to blame, each solicitor pays a moiety of the fees.

(13) Notice from the Admiralty registry of the amount of fees payable in each cause is sent to the solicitor, whose duty it is to pay them. The solicitor then transmits the amount with the notice to the secretary of the Trinity House, who returns the notice with a receipt thereon for the amount paid.

verdict of a jury is imperatively binding on the court, whilst the opinion of an assessor is in the nature of advice only, and the court, in the exercise of its discretion, is at full liberty to act upon it or reject it as it may think proper. The American Union, 5 Jur. N.S. 380.

[IRISH.]

29. It is erroneous to suppose that Trinity masters give their opinion on their own view of a case. It is the uniform practice of the court to acquaint itself as well as it can with the grounds on which the Trinity masters proceed, and to understand them to the best of its ability; and if unfortunately the court should think that they were proceeding on erroneous data, it would pronounce a judgment differing from them. The Speed, 2 W. Rob. 280; 7 Jur. 1070; The Alfred, 3 W. Rob. 234; 7 Notes of Cases, 354; 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 27, n.; The Swanland, 2 ibid. 108.

30. In a cause of damage by collision the Trinity masters differed in opinion as to whether one of the vessels was or was not to blame. The opinion of the judge coincided with that of one of the Trinity masters, and he gave judgment accordingly. The Immaganda Sara Classina, 7 Notes of Cases, 583.

31. The sentence of the judge with reference to the facts and the law, and the opinion of the Trinity masters, may be reviewed by the Court of Appeal, though in performing that duty the greatest attention and respect would be paid to the opinion of persons of experience and skill whose advice had been solicited by the judge. Williams v. Chapman (The Iron Duke), 4 Notes of Cases, 586; 9 Jur. 476; The Christiana, 7 Notes of Cases, Supp. xli.; The Friends, 4 Moore, P. C. C. 321.

32. If the Trinity masters seemed to form their opinion on parts of the evidence which were inadmissible, the court would not adopt their advice. The Actaon, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 178.

33. The decision in a cause must be strictly founded on the evidence of the facts, but the judgment of Trinity masters is not to be controlled by evidence with respect to matters of mere nautical practice and experience: upon such points they are to be guided by their own science and knowledge, and not by the opinion of other nautical persons, however numerous or respectable. The Gazelle, 1 W. Rob. 474; 2 Notes of Cases, 41.

34. Semble, in the case of the two nautical assessors disagreeing the court has power to call in a third. The Philotaxe, 3 Asp. N.S. 512; 37 L. T. N.S. 540.

35. Prior to the Judicature Acts the court would not put a question to the Trinity masters as to a fact not pleaded. The Ebenezer, 2 W. Rob. 209; The Speed, ibid. 227.

36. Appeal remitted to the court below, with leave to both parties to plead further, and give further evidence, the Trinity masters having given advice to the judge on a point not mentioned in the pleadings. The Lady Anne, 15 Jur. 18.

37. In salvage causes the court, when it has the assistance of Trinity masters, will not be guided by the opinions of witnesses skilled in nautical matters. The Magdalen, 5 L. T. N.S. 807.

38. In a cause of damage by collision heard before the judge and Trinity masters, application for leave to give in evidence affidavits of two of the elder brethren of the Trinity House, who had been examined on a trial at common law in reference to the same collision, as to their opinions on the case arising from what they had heard at the trial, rejected, the court observing that it could receive no evidence of what had occurred at the trial but the judge's notes, and that scientific evidence was inadmissible when the court was assisted by Trinity masters. The Ann and Mary, 2 W. Rob. 196; 7 Jur. 1001.

39. The judge of the Court of Admiralty in summing up the evidence to the Trinity masters did not do so with the same minuteness as a judge at nisi prius would sum up evidence to a jury, because the Trinity masters have greater experience in nautical matters. The Swanland, 2 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 108.

40. On appeal in a case of joint-capture, the opinion of the Trinity masters as to the courses, &c. of the ships, deduced from the examination of their log-books, having been impeached; held, that it was necessary to point out obvious neglect on their part to sustain such impeachment, since they must be considered the best judges of such evidence. Further reference to other parties thereon refused. Le Bon Aventure, 1 Acton, 237.

41. On motion to expunge written evidence beyond the scope of the pleadings, on the ground that the opinions of the Trinity masters might be biased thereby, the court intimated it would reject the motion as to merely irrelevant matter, which should be objected to at the hearing and not before, but would grant it as to irrelevant matter of so extraordinary a character that the Trinity masters might have such an undue impression made on their minds as it would be out of the power of the court to efface at the hearing. The Speed, 7 Jur. 1068; 2 W. Rob. 230.

42. In a cause of damage by collision the question as to the propriety of the abandonment of the injured vessel by her crew is for the consideration of the court and not of the Trinity masters. The Blenheim, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 287.

43. In damage causes the attendance of Trinity masters will be directed as a matter of course on the application of either party. The Minnehaha, May 3, 1861.*

44. It is not so much a matter of course in salvage causes as in damage causes to direct the attendance of Trinity masters at the application of either party, but the application if made in due time will generally be granted. Ibid. and The Princess Alice, 3 W. Rob. 139.*

45. In cases of salvage involving questions of nautical knowledge, e. g. the effect of the tides and winds, and the dangers of the locus in quo and its neighbourhood, application should be made for the assistance of Trinity masters. The James Dixon, 2 L. T. N.S. 696; The Balsamas, 2 Hagg. 270, n.*

46. The judge will sometimes ex mero motu direct the attendance of Trinity masters, and even postpone the hearing of the cause for that purpose. The Sirena, May, 1846.

47. Application for the attendance of Trinity masters upon a proceeding in the nature of a demurrer to a pleading giving an account of the collision averred to be nautically impossible. Application refused. The Vargas, 15 Jur. 710.

48. A cause of damage by collision was tried before the judge and Trinity masters and judgment given. Subsequently a cross action was brought in reference to the same collision. The court, on the application of one of the parties, directed the cross cause to be heard before Trinity masters who had not been present at the trial of the first cause. The North American and Tecla Carmen, Lushington, 81.

49. The Trinity masters differed in opinion. The judge, with the consent of the parties, allowed the Trinity masters to consult a third Trinity master. Dale v. Hall, Marsden's Rep. Cas. temp. Salubury, p. 323.

49a. The P. held, in the Court of Admiralty, solely to blame for a collision. On appeal to the delegates they referred the matter to two Trinity masters present at the hearing to examine into and report upon, taking to their assistance a third Trinity master. Upon their report the delegates reversed the decree appealed from, holding both vessels to blame. Stoker v. Hutton, ibid. p. 329.

50. As to inspection or view by Trinity masters, see tit. EVIDENCE, c. 6, p. 424, and ibid. in Addenda.

3. Counsel.

1. Generally.†

51. All serjeants and barristers-at-law might practise in the High Court of Admi-

* (14) By the old practice, if both parties asked for Trinity masters, the court at once assented to the request. If one party only asked for them, the court read the papers, and exercised its judgment as to whether Trinity masters should attend, but if neither party applied for them the court rarely called them in. The Houthandel, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 27.

† (15) The Queen's advocate was one of the advocates of the court appointed standing counsel for the Crown in all suits in the Court of Admiralty in which the interests of the Crown were concerned, including droits of the Crown, and all prize proceedings on behalf of or against the Crown, and by all commissioned captors claiming under the Crown, in virtue of the prize proclamation in all prize actions before the court. He also advised the ministers of the Crown in all questions of international law on which his opinion was desired. He formerly took precedence of the whole bar, but on the last appointment his rank was fixed next after the attorney and solicitor-general. The appointment was in the gift of the ministers of the Crown for the time being. No Queen's advocate has been appointed since Sir Robert Phillimore vacated the office.

(16) The Admiralty advocate is one of the advocates of the court appointed, by the com-

rality, with the same rights and privileges as advocates of the court, and have the same rank and precedence in that court as before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. See 22 & 23 Vict. c. 6, s. 1.

52. The practitioners in the Ecclesiastical Courts, of the degree of doctors of canon and civil law, have precedence of all barristers, Queen's serjeants, Queen's counsel, and serjeants-at-law excepted. With regard, however, to serjeants-at-law, this precedence has been frequently denied. Rogers, Burn's Eccl. Law, 3; Swabey's Law of Divorce and Matrimonial Causes, p. 47.

53. Although, as a general rule, the court will not hear a suitor personally and also by counsel, yet (semble) if a suitor, being a barrister, addresses the court as counsel only, the court will not refuse to hear other counsel with him. Newton v. Ricketts, 12 Jur. 238.

54. A party to a suit conducting his own cause at the trial, has a right to address the jury as an advocate, without waiving his right to give evidence as a witness in his own behalf. Cobbett v. Hudson, 1 Ell. & Bl. 11; 17 Jur. 488; 22 L. J. Q. B. 11.

55. A plaintiff who was a barrister was not allowed to be heard on his own case, after counsel had addressed the court. A barrister, party in an action, civil or criminal, is in the same position as any other party. Newton v. Chaplin, 19 L. J. C. P. 374; 10 C. B. 356; 14 Jur. 1121.

56. There is no rule of law requiring that counsel appearing in court for a party who pleads in person should be instructed by a solicitor. Doe d. Bennett v. Hale, 15 Q. B. 171; 14 Jur. 830; 19 L. J. Q. B. 353.

57. But the usage which has prevailed at the bar that counsel, unless in some exceptional cases, should take their instructions from solicitors only, is beneficial, and ought to be maintained. Ibid.

2. Employment of—

(a) Generally.

58. As to the employment of counsel on summonses and to settle pleadings, see tit. Costs, c. 28, s. 4, p. 385; and on references to the registrar and merchants, ibid. p. 358.

(b) Number.

59. See tit. Costs, p. 385, Nos. 465, 466.

3. Right to begin and Reply.

See Pt. II. c. 38, s. 17.

4. Fees.

See tit. Costs, c. 28, s. 4, p. 384.

4. Officers.

1. Generally.*

60. All registrars, chief and other clerks, commissioners to take oaths or affidavits, messengers, and other officers and assistants, at the commencement of this act attached to any court or judge whose jurisdiction is transferred to the High Court, shall be attached to the High Court, and have the same rank and hold their offices for the same tenure and upon the same terms, receive the same salaries, and be entitled to the same pensions, as if this act had not passed. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 77. As to the powers for abolishing or altering the designation or duties of such officers, and reducing their salaries, ibid. and the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 34; the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (c. 59), s. 21; and the Supreme Court of Judicature (Officers) Act, 1879 (c. 78).

61. As to the duties, appointment and removal of officers of the High Court of missioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of England, standing counsel for them in all suits in the Court of Admiralty in which the interests of that office are concerned, including droits or perquisites of the Lord High Admiral and prizes made by non-commissioned captors, causes of salvage to vessels of the Royal Navy, or to vessels in the employment at the time of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and causes of damage by collision to or by vessels of the Royal Navy.

(17) A waiver of all informalities and irregularities made by a counsel who has the sole charge of a cause is binding upon his clients. Hanson v. Hoitt, 14 N. H. 56. [AMERICAN.]

* (18) As to the officers of the High Court of Justice, see 1 Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty); pp. 23 et seq.

Justice, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 84.

62. As to their salaries and pensions, ibid. s. 85.

63. For provisions as to patronage not otherwise provided for, ibid. s. 86.

64. For provisions as to officers of the Supreme Court, see Supreme Court of Judicature (Officers) Act, 1879 (c. 78).

65. All officers who at the time when these rules come into operation are attached to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division shall remain attached to that division. See R. S. C. Ord. LX. r. 1, No. 890.

66. Officers attached to any division shall follow the appeals from the same division, and shall perform in the Court of Appeal analogous duties in reference to such appeals as the registrars and officers of the Court of Chancery usually performed as to rehearings in the Court of Appeal in Chancery, and as the masters and officers of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer respectively performed as to appeals heard by the Court of Exchequer Chamber. Ibid. r. 2, No. 891.

67. As to the meaning of the term "proper officer" in the R. S. C. of 1883, see Ord. LXXI. r. 1, No. 1041.

68. The Treasury may, by order made with the concurrence of the lord chancellor and of the judge of the Court of Admiralty, increase or diminish the number of officers in the Court of Admiralty, and the amounts of their salaries, and determine the conditions on which they are to hold their offices, and regulate the expenses incurred in respect of such court and officers. See the Courts of Justice (Salaries and Funds) Act, 1869 (c. 91), s. 14.

69. As to the powers of the lord chancellor to abolish the office, reduce the salary, or vary the designation or duties of any officer within the provisions of this section, see the Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 77.

2. Registrar and Assistant Registrar.*

70. In the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division a registrar may transact all such business and exercise all such authority and jurisdiction in respect of the same, as under the acts or these rules may be transacted or exercised by a judge at chambers, except in respect of the following proceedings and matters; that is to say—(a) All matters relating to criminal proceedings or to the liberty of the subject; (b) granting leave for service out of the jurisdiction of a writ, or notice of a writ, of summons; (c) the removal of actions from one division or judge to another division or judge; (d) the settlement of issues, except by consent; (e) inspection and other orders under Ord. L. rr. 1—5; (f) appeals from district registrars; (g) prohibitions; (h) injunctions and other orders under sub-s. 8 of s. 25 of the principal act; (i) awarding of costs, other than the costs of or relating to any proceeding before a master, or registrar, and other than any costs which by these rules, or by the order of the court or a judge, he is authorized to award; (k) reviewing taxation of costs; (l) orders absolute for charging stocks, funds, annuities, or shares of dividends, or annual proceeds thereof; (m) acknowledgments of married women. Ord. LIV. r. 12, No. 745.

71. Every witness summoned (by inspectors appointed by the Board of Trade)

* (19) Any advocate, barrister-at-law, or solicitor of ten years' standing, may be appointed registrar, or assistant, or deputy registrar, of the High Court of Admiralty. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 27.

(19a) The registrar has hitherto been selected from the proctors.

(20) As to the office and duties of the registrar of the Court of Admiralty, and the ancient fees receivable by him, see the Report of the Commissioners on the Duties, &c. in Courts of Justice. Parliamentary Return, No. 240, anno 1824, pp. 9—53.

(21) The registrar of the Court of Admiralty attended the sittings of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on the hearing of all causes and appeals from the Court of Admiralty before such appeals were transferred to the Court of Appeal. See 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41, s. 29; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38, ss. 5, 13, 14.

(22) He still attends all such sittings on appeals from Vice-Admiralty Courts.

(23) For powers as to the appointment of a deputy or assistant registrar, see 3 & 4 Vict. c. 66.

(24) The registrar of the Court of Admiralty had power to administer oaths in any Admiralty proceedings, and could exercise the same powers as any surrogate of the judge sitting in chambers; and all powers conferred on the registrar might be exercised by any deputy or assistant registrar. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), ss. 25, 26. As to the powers of the Registrar of the Admiralty Division, see No. 70, supra.

shall be allowed such expenses as would be allowed to a witness before any court of record, or if in Scotland before the Court of Justiciary; and in case of dispute as to the amount of such expenses, the same shall be referred to (among others) the registrar of the Court of Admiralty, who, on a request made to him for that purpose, under the hand of the inspector, shall ascertain and certify the proper amount of such expenses. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 15, as amended by the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 24.

3. District Registrars.

72. As to the appointment and qualification of district registrars, their position as officers of the Supreme Court, and their liability to the jurisdiction of that court and of the divisions thereof, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 13, and Order in Council of 12 Aug. 1875, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed., pp. 813, 814.

73. For provisions admitting of two persons being appointed to perform the duties of district registrar as joint district registrars, and for the appointment of the registrar of any inferior court of record as district registrar, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 13.

74. As to the appointment of solicitors of five years' standing as district registrars, ibid. 1881 (c. 68), s. 22.

75. As to the persons appointed district registrars, their names, and the places over which they are so appointed, see Order in Council of Aug. 12, 1875, gazetted 24 Aug., p. 4236.

76. As to the appointment by district registrars of deputy registrars, see the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (c. 59), s. 22.

77. All such district registrars have power to administer oaths and perform such other duties in respect of any proceedings pending in the High Court of Justice or in the Court of Appeal as may be assigned to them from time to time by Rules of Court, or by any special order of the court. See the Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 62.

78. Where a cause or matter is proceeding in a district registry the district registrar may exercise all such authority and jurisdiction in respect thereof as may be exercised by a judge at chambers, except such as by these rules a master is precluded from exercising. Ord. XXXV. r. 6, No. 406.

79. Every district registrar and other officer of a district registry shall be subject to the orders and directions of the court or a judge, as fully as any other officer of the court; and every proceeding in a district registry shall be subject to the control of the court or a judge, as fully as a like proceeding in London. Ibid. r. 11, No. 411.

80. Every district registrar shall account for and pay over to the Treasury all moneys paid into court at the registry of which he is registrar, in such manner and at such times as may be from time to time directed by the Treasury. Ord. XXXV. r. 23, No. 423.

81. As to proceedings in district registries, see Pt. II. c. 23.

4. Examiners.*

82. The office of the examiner of the court is not a public coat, and if the presence of the public is objected to, the examiner has no discretion to admit them. In re Western of Canada Oil, Lands and Works Company, 6 Ch. D. 109.

83. Any examiner appointed by any order of the Court of Admiralty has the like power of administering oaths as commissioners under commissions for the examination of witnesses. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1854 (c. 78), s. 6.

84. The examiners of the Court of Admiralty are examiners of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in all causes of appeal from any Vice-Admiralty Court. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38, s. 3.

84a. As to the duties of examiners in the examination of witnesses out of court, see Pt. II. c. 35, s. 28.

* (25) Any advocate, barrister-at-law, or solicitor may be appointed an examiner of the High Court of Admiralty. Ibid. s. 28.

(26) The examiners have hitherto been selected from proctors and solicitors.

(27) The present examiners in the Admiralty Division are:—W. T. Pritchard, E. C. Curry, G. H. Brooks, A. Heales, J. C. Traill, Charles Ford, James Rob Greening, H. D. Pritchard, C. Waddilove, A. J. Pritchard, C. Chabot, R. S. Jackson, and J. R. L. Walmisley, Esquires. They are all solicitors except Mr. Traill, who is an equity draughtsman and conveyancer.

(28) The solicitor whose witnesses are to be examined selects the examiner.

(29) For the fees receivable by the examiners and their duties, see c. 35, s. 28.

5. *Marshal.

85. As to the office, duties and fees of the marshal, see The Rendsberg, 6 C. Rob. 142.

86. The marshal is not liable for property legally in his possession, though not so in fact, being under the king's locks. The Buena Ventura, cited in The Rendsberg, ibid. 157, 174.

87. Motion against the marshal (for whom no appearance was given) for reparation of a loss by pillage sustained while the ship was under his care, granted. The Hoop, 4 C. Rob. 145; but see The Three Friends, 4 C. Rob. 268, and No. 647, infra.

87a. Semble, that if an appearance had been given by the marshal, denying negligent custody, the court would have thrown the proof thereof on the other party. The Rendsberg, 6 C. Rob. 157.

88. All fees due to the marshal are paid in stamps. See Order as to Supreme Court Fees, 1884, No. 1.

88a. As to the fees receivable by the marshal, ibid. Sched. "Fees in the Marshal's Office, &c."

6. Commissioners to administer Oaths.†

89. Every person at the commencement of this act authorized to administer oaths in any of the courts whose jurisdiction is hereby transferred to the High Court of Justice, or Court of Appeal, is a commissioner to administer oaths in all causes and matters depending in the High Court

* (30) The marshal is the executive officer of the court, and performs duties analogous to those of the sheriff at common law. He is charged with the execution of all process of the court, except writs and subpoenas. The marshal is appointed by patent from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and the duties of the office were formerly performed by deputy, but they are now performed by the marshal himself, or by his substitutes, officers, or clerks, under his immediate supervision and control. The marshal's substitutes in the execution of warrants are the collectors of customs at the different ports. The marshal was formerly remunerated by fees, but by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 66, ss. 5—18 (now repealed), a yearly salary was substituted for them, and he was prohibited from taking any fees for his own use. He attends the sittings of the court, and carries a silver oar, as the emblem of the maritime jurisdiction of the court.

(31) As to the office, duties, and ancient emoluments of the marshal of the Court of Admiralty, see Report of the Commissioners as to the duties, &c. in Courts of Justice. Sees. Paper, Ho. Co. No. 240, anno 1824, pp. 53—65.

(32) By the old practice in force until the Rules and Orders of Court, of Nov. 1854, came into operation, the marshal, except under special circumstances, only executed the process of the court within the port of London, and the practitioners of the court by their agents executed all process at the outports.

† (33) The principal statutes on the subject of commissioners to take oaths and affidavits are the 29 Car. 2, c. 5; 55 Geo. 3, c. 15; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42; 22 Vict. c. 16; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 78; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127.

(34) The lord chancellor will not appoint any solicitor a commissioner to administer oaths unless he has complied with the following conditions:—(1) Two months prior to the application to the lord chancellor he must have given notice to the registrar of solicitors, at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, of his intention to apply under the present section. (2) He must obtain a certificate from two practising barristers and two practising solicitors as to his fitness for the office of commissioner. (3) He must obtain a certificate from two householders residing in his district, that an additional commissioner is required in the district, and that he is qualified to fill the office. (4) He must have taken out a practising certificate for six years prior to the date to which he gives notice to the registrar of solicitors. (5) He must be in actual practice as a solicitor at the time at which he is appointed commissioner, and the appointment only lasts "so long as he shall continue to practise as a solicitor." (6) He must present a petition to the lord chancellor, stating the length of time for which, and the place where, he has practised, and praying to be appointed a commissioner. (7) The petition must be accompanied by a certificate from the deputy-registrar of solicitors, stating the day on which notice was given to the registrar of solicitors. (8) The petition and certificate must be left at the office of the lord chancellor's principal secretary, or with the lord chancellor's purse-bearer, at the office in Quality Court. (9) A fee of £5 must be paid on the issuing of the commission. (10) The commission must be left for registration at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery Lane, and a further fee of 1s. must then be paid. See Charley's Practice and Pleading under the Judoicature Acts, 3rd ed. p. 198.

(35) See the form of petition to the lord chancellor in C. Ford's Oaths in the Supreme Court, p. 44.

(36) Forms of commission, with the impressed stamp, are sold at the Inland Revenue Office.

and in the Court of Appeal. See the Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), ss. 77, 82.

90. All commissioners to take oaths or affidavits in the Supreme Court shall be appointed by the lord chancellor. Ibid. s. 84.

91. Every master, and every first and second-class clerk in the Filing and Record Department, shall, by virtue of his office, have authority to take oaths and affidavits in the Supreme Court. Ord. LXI. r. 5, No. 898.

92. No commissioner shall take bail on behalf of any person for whom he or any person in partnership with him is acting as solicitor or agent. Ord. XII. r. 21, No. 91.

92a. No affidavit is sufficient if sworn before the solicitor for the party on whose behalf the affidavit is to be used, or before any agent, correspondent, partner, or clerk of such solicitor, or before the party himself. See Ord. XXXVIII. rr. 16 and 17, Nos. 536, 537.

7. Court Shorthand Writers.*

93. As to the procedure for taking evidence in shorthand, see Pt. II. c. 35, s. 28.

93a. As to the taking of such evidence being confined to the court shorthand writers, see The Marbella, 25 April, 1883.

8. Solicitors.

(a) Generally.†

94. From the commencement of this act all solicitors, attorneys or proctors in any court whose jurisdiction is transferred to the High Court or Court of Appeal are to be called "solicitors of the Supreme Court," and are entitled to the same privileges and subject to the same obligations, so far as circumstances will permit, as if this act had not passed. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 87.

95. All such solicitors, attorneys or proctors shall be deemed officers of the Supreme Court, and subject to the same jurisdiction as any of her Majesty's superior courts of law or equity might previously to the passing of this act have exercised in respect of them. Ibid.

96. For powers for adapting previous provisions as to attorneys to the solicitors of the Supreme Court, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 14.

* (37) The authorized reporters of the court now are Messrs. Carruthers and Barnett, of No. 203, Strand.

† (38) As to solicitors of the High Court of Justice, their rights, duties, and responsibilities, and their articulated clerks, see Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, pp. 39 et seq.

(39) As to the preliminary, intermediate, and final examination of persons intending to become solicitors of the Supreme Court, and exemptions from parts thereof and the fees thereon, see the Regulations made by the Incorporated Law Society (under the Solicitors' Acts, 1843, 1860, and 1877), dated 5th December, 1877, in Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules (2nd ed.), p. 549, and for the fees thereon, ibid. p. 564.

(40) The Queen's proctor is standing proctor for the Crown, and charged with the conduct on its behalf of the actions or proceedings in the Court of Admiralty in which the interests of the Crown are concerned, including droits of the Crown, and all prize proceedings on behalf of or against the Crown, and on behalf of all commissioned captors claiming under it in virtue of the prize proclamation in all prize actions before the court.

(41) The Queen's proctor held his office by patent. The appointment is in the gift of the ministers of the Crown for the time being, when a vacancy occurs. The office is now merged in the Solicitor's department of the Treasury.

(42) The Admiralty proctor is appointed by the Lords Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, as standing proctor for them in the same suits or proceedings in the Court of Admiralty, as those in which the Admiralty advocate appears, viz. all suits in the Court of Admiralty in which the interests of the office of Lord High Admiral are concerned, including droits or perquisites of the Lord High Admiral and prizes made by non-commissioned captors, causes of salvage to or by vessels of the Royal Navy, or to vessels in the employment at the time of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and causes of damage by collision to or by vessels of the Royal Navy. The office is now merged in the Solicitor's department of the Treasury.

(43) All solicitors might practise in the late Court of Admiralty. See 22 & 23 Vict. c. 6, s. 1.

(44) Proctors were forbidden to allow any person not duly qualified to act for them or participate in their fees except as therein mentioned under pain of being struck off the rolls. See 55 Geo. 3, c. 160, ss. 31, 76.

(45) But any proctor of the Court of Admiralty might act as agent of any solicitor, notwithstanding 55 Geo. 3, c. 160. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 30.

(46) As to proctors in the American Admiralty Courts, see 2 Parsons on Maritime Law, 660. [AMERICAN.]

97. A solicitor not entering an appearance or putting in bail, or paying money into court in lieu of bail, in an Admiralty action in rem, in pursuance of his written undertaking so to do, shall be liable to an attachment. Ord. XII. r. 18, No. 88.

98. A solicitor, upon whom an order against any party for interrogatories or discovery or inspection is served under the last preceding rule, who neglects without reasonable excuse to give notice thereof to his client, shall be liable to attachment. Ord. XXXI. r. 23, No. 365.

99. In cases of wages prosecuted on behalf of mariners, the practitioner in the Court of Admiralty has a public as well as private duty to discharge in seeing that the interests propounded for them are in his apprehension just, or at least doubtful. He is justified in submitting to the decision of the court a doubt which it is not his province to decide. Such interests are not to be pursued per fas et nefas, but they are so pursued if endeavours are used to stifle the fair circumstances of the case, and knowingly to impose a false case. The Frederick, 1 Hagg. 223.

5. Offices.

1. Hours of Attendance and Holidays.

104. The office hours in the several offices of the Supreme Court, other than the Summons and Order, Crown Office, and Associates Departments of the Central Office, shall be from ten in the forenoon to four in the afternoon, except on Saturday and in vacation, when the offices shall close at two in the afternoon. In the excepted departments the hours shall be from eleven in the forenoon to five in the afternoon, except on Saturday and in vacation, when the hours shall be from eleven in the forenoon to three in the afternoon. Ord. LXIII. r. 9, No. 953.

105. The offices of the Supreme Court, except as therein mentioned, close on Saturdays at two o'clock. Ibid. r. 8, No. 952.

106. The offices of the Supreme Court are not open on Sundays, Good Friday, Easter Eve, Monday and Tuesday in Easter week, Whit Monday, Christmas Day, and the next following working day, and all days appointed by proclamation to be observed as days of general fast, humiliation or thanksgiving. Ibid. r. 6, No. 950.

107. As to the days on which the offices of a district registrar are open, ibid. r. 7, No. 951.

2. Central Office.

(a) Generally.

108. As to the departments into which the Central Office is divided, and the performance of the duties thereof by the several officers and clerks in the office, see Ord. LXI. r. 1, No. 894.

118. As to the filing in the Central Office of submissions to arbitration, see tit. ARBITRATIONS, Pt. II. c. 42.

(c) Office Copies.†

119. Office copies of all writs and documents filed in the High Court of Justice shall be admissible in evidence in all causes and matters, and between all persons or parties, to the same extent as the original would be admissible. See Ord. XXXVII. r. 4, No. 486.

119*a*. An office copy of an affidavit may in all cases be used, the original affidavit having been previously filed, and the copy duly authenticated with the seal of the office. Ord. XXXVIII. r. 15, No. 535.

119*b*. In cases in which an original affidavit can be used, and to which Ord. XXXVIII. r. 15 applies, it shall not be necessary to take an office copy. 'Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 53, No. 1002.

119*c*. It shall not be necessary to take an office copy of an affidavit of discovery of documents, and the copy delivered by the party filing it may be used as against such party. Ibid. sub-r. 54.

120. All copies, certificates, and other documents appearing to be sealed with a seal of the Central Office shall be presumed to be office copies or certificates or other documents issued from the Central Office, and if duly stamped may be received in evidence, and no signature or other formality, except the sealing with a seal of the Central Office, shall be required for the authentication of any such copy, certificate or other document. Ord. LXI. r. 7, No. 900.

120*a*. Except as provided by Ord. LV. r. 48 (as to claimants filing affidavits in Chancery), the party by or on whose behalf any deposition, affidavit or certificate is filed shall leave a copy with the officer with whom the same is filed, who shall examine it with the original and mark it as an office copy; such copy shall be a copy printed as above provided where such deposition or affidavit is to be printed. Ord. LXVI. r. 7, sub-r. (f), No. 1009.

121. The party or solicitor who has taken any printed or written office copy of any deposition or affidavit is to produce the same upon every proceeding to which the same relates. Ibid. sub-r. (g).

122. The folios of all printed and written office copies, and copies delivered or furnished to a party, shall be numbered consecutively in the margin thereof, and such written copies shall be written in a neat and legible manner on the same paper as in the case of printed copies. Ibid. sub-r. (m).

123. It shall be stated in a note at the foot of every affidavit filed on whose behalf it is so filed, and such note shall be printed on every printed copy of an affidavit or set of affidavits, and copied on

124. A folio comprises 72 words. Every figure comprised in a column or authorized to be used is counted as one word. See Ord. LXV. r. 27, No. 1002 (14).*

124a. No alteration, interlineation, or erasure shall on any account be made in any office copy which has been issued from this office. See Central Office Notice (as to affidavits) of July, 1880, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules (4th ed.), p. 377.

125. For general directions as to bespeaking office copies, and as to the marking, stamping, examining and endorsing thereof, at the Central Office, see Ibid. p. 376; and as to stamps, ibid., and tit. EVIDENCE, c. 16, p. 442.

(d) Registry of Admiralty Division.

See next chapter.

6. Registry of Admiralty Division.†

1. Generally.

126. Every instrument under seal of the court and prepared in the Admiralty registry shall bear date on the day on which it is issued. See Ord. LXVII. r. 10, No. 1021.

* (49) In the calculation of folios the endorsement of the papers is to be included.

(49a) All office copies of, or of any part of, the documents therein mentioned (i. e., certificates, petitions, written admissions of evidence, and submissions to arbitration made orders of the court), are to be ready for delivery within forty-eight hours after being bespoken. See Ord. LXI. r. 31, No. 924.

† (50) All process in Admiralty proceedings (except writs, which are issued from the central office), including warrants, commissions for bail, and releases from arrest, is issued from the registry of the Admiralty division.

‡ (50a) Under ordinary circumstances, all documents in Admiralty proceedings required to be filed (except writs, appearances, and orders for payment, all which are filed in the central office) are filed in the registry of the Admiralty division.

§ (51) Forms of minutes may be obtained in the registry. The minute is entitled with the usual name and description of the cause, and states that the solicitor for the plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be, setting out his name, files the following documents, a list of them properly described, being sub-

2. Filing of Documents.‡

127. It shall be stated in a note at the foot of every affidavit filed on whose behalf it is so filed, and such note shall be printed on every printed copy of an affidavit or set of affidavits, and copied on every office copy and copy furnished to a party. See Ord. LXVI. r. 7, No. 1009, sub-div. (k).

3. Minutes and Minute Book.§

128. On filing any instrument or document in Admiralty actions, the solicitor shall state, in writing, on a printed form called a minute, to be obtained in the Admiralty registry, the nature of the instrument or document filed, and the date of the filing thereof. Ibid. r. 8, No. 1010.

129. In Admiralty actions a record of all such minutes as in the last preceding rule mentioned, and of all actions commenced and appearances entered, and of all orders of the court, shall be entered in a book to be kept in the Admiralty registry, called the "Minute Book." Ibid. r. 9, No. 1011.

4. Caveats.

(a) Generally.||

130. In Admiralty actions a caveat, whether against the issue of a warrant, joined: The minute is dated and duly signed by the solicitor, or by his clerk for him.

(52) The stamps (which are adhesive, and not impressed), payable on the documents filed are placed on the minute and not on the documents themselves. There is no stamp required on the minute itself for the minute.

(53) A copy of the minute book or books was formerly kept in the registry for the use of the practitioners and the public (besides the original minute books, also accessible to them), but this practice is no longer in force, and the minute book is now kept for the use of the officials only, and can no longer be inspected by the practitioners or parties as of right. See Judges' Order of 12th May, 1859.

(54) When the minutes of the proceedings were taken down in court by the registrar, the court would uphold the registrar's entry in the minute book, and not permit it to be questioned. The Monarch, 1 W. Rob. 22, 35.

|| (55) Held, prior to the Judicature Acts, that a caveat was of no avail in the Court of Admiralty further than as a notice to the other solicitor. The Soegutten, 3 Notes of Cases, 270.

the release of property, or the payment of money out of the Admiralty registry, shall not remain in force for more than six months from the date thereof. Ord. LXIV. r. 15, No. 975.

(b) Against Warrant.

(aa) Generally.

131. A party, desiring to prevent the arrest of any property, may cause a caveat against the issue of a warrant for the arrest thereof to be entered in the principal registry. Ord. XXIX. r. 11, No. 332.

132. For this purpose the party shall cause to be filed in the registry a notice, signed by himself or his solicitor, undertaking to enter an appearance in any action that may be commenced against the property, and to give bail in such action in a sum not exceeding an amount to be stated in the notice, or pay such sum into the registry; and a caveat against the issue of a warrant for the arrest of the property shall thereupon be entered in a book to be kept in the registry, called the "Caveat Warrant Book." Ibid. r. 12, No. 333.

133. Where an action is proceeding in a district registry, the district registrar (unless required to act under Rule 18 of this Order) shall, before issuing a warrant for the arrest of the property, ascertain by telegraph, or otherwise, from the principal registry, whether or not any caveat has been entered against the issue of a warrant for the arrest thereof. Ibid. r. 13, No. 334.

134. For form of præcipe for caveat warrant, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A. Pt. 2, No. 18.

135. A solicitor, commencing an action against any property in respect of which a caveat has been entered in the "Caveat Warrant Book," shall forthwith serve a copy of the writ upon the party on whose behalf the caveat has been entered, or upon his solicitor. Ord. XXIX. r. 14, No. 335.

136. Within three days from the service of the writ or copy thereof, the party on whose behalf the caveat has been entered shall, if the sum in respect of which the action is commenced does not exceed the amount for which he has undertaken, give bail in such sum, or pay the same into the registry. Ibid. r. 15, No. 336.

(cc) Proceedings in Default of Appearance.

137. After the expiration of twelve days from the filing of the notice in Rule 12 mentioned, if the party on whose behalf the caveat has been entered shall not have given bail in such sum, or paid the same into the registry, the plaintiff's solicitor may proceed with the action by default, and on filing his proofs in the registry may have the action placed on the list for hearing. Ibid. r. 16, No. 337.

138. If, when the action comes before the judge, he is satisfied that the claim is well founded, he may pronounce for the amount which appears to him to be due, and may enforce the payment thereof by attachment against the party on whose behalf the caveat has been entered, and by the arrest of the property, if it then be or thereafter come within the jurisdiction of the court. Ibid. r. 17, No. 338.

139. Nothing in this order shall prevent a solicitor from taking out a warrant for the arrest of any property, notwithstanding the entry of a caveat in the "Caveat Warrant Book;" but the party at whose instance any property in respect of which a caveat is entered shall be arrested, shall be liable to have the warrant discharged and to be condemned in costs and damages, unless he shall show, to the satisfaction of the judge, good and sufficient reason for having so done. Ibid. r. 18, No. 339.

(o) Against Release.

(aa) *Generally.

140. A solicitor in an action, desiring to prevent the release of any property

* (56) It is unnecessary to issue a warrant in a second action when the property is already under arrest. The issue and service of a writ, and the entry of a caveat release, will suffice, and the expense of possession fees will be thereby saved.

(57) When, as in most cases, the amount of the proposed action cannot be ascertained, it is convenient to insert in the præcipe, as the amount of bail offered, in damage actions, "any sum not exceeding the statutory liability of the owners" of the vessel whose arrest it is desired to avoid; in salvage causes, "any sum not exceeding the value of the ship, cargo, and freight whose arrest it is desired to avoid," and to add in salvage cases an undertaking to prove values. The stamp on the præcipe is adhesive, not impressed, and the amount five shillings.

under arrest, shall file in the registry a notice, and thereupon a caveat against the release of the property shall be entered in a book, to be kept in the principal registry, called the "Caveat Release Book." Ord. XXIX. r. 8, No. 329.

141. Where an action is proceeding in a district registry, the district registrar shall, before authorizing a release, ascertain by telegraph, or otherwise, from the principal registry, whether or not any caveat has been entered there. Ibid. r. 9, No. 330.

142. Where an action is instituted against a vessel already under the arrest of the court, a caveat may be issued in the latter action, to prevent her release in case the other action should be withdrawn. The Rio Lima, 2 Asp. N.S. 34; 28 L. T. N.S. 774.

143. For form of præcipe for caveat release, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A. Pt. 2, No. 17.*

(bb) Responsibility for—

144. A party, delaying the release of any property by the entry of a caveat, shall be liable to be condemned in costs and damages, unless he shall show to the satisfaction of the judge good and sufficient reason for having so done. Ord. XXIX. r. 10, No. 331.

145. The omission of the plaintiff's country solicitor to order by electric telegraph a caveat release to be withdrawn, held, under the circumstances, not to amount to negligence. The Corner, 3 N. R. 94; 12 L. T. N.S. 62.

146. As to costs and damages in such cases, see tit. Costs, c. 20, p. 370.

(d) Against Payment out of Moneys in Court.

147. A solicitor desiring to prevent the payment of money out of court in an Admiralty action shall file a notice, and thereupon a caveat shall be entered in the "Caveat Payment Book" in the Admiralty Registry. Ord. XXII. r. 21, No. 275.*

(e) Withdrawal.

148. For form of præcipe to withdraw caveat, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A. Part 2, No. 19.*

7. Court Fees, Percentages, and Stamps.†

As to the payment of dividends on such investments, and deduction of income tax, as to investment of dividends, as to the transfer of securities, as to payments to married women and representatives of deceased persons entitled, and as to certificates of funds in court, and other information thereon, by paymaster, see S. C. F. R. 1884, c. 6, pp. 24 et seq.

155. Money shall not be placed on deposit in the Admiralty Division. Ibid. No. 77.

156. Cash under the control of or subject to the order of the court may be invested in bank stock, East India stock, exchequer bills, and £2:10s. per cent. annuities, and upon mortgage of freehold and copyhold estates respectively in England and Wales, as well as in Consolidated, Reduced, and New £3 per cent. annuities. Ord. XXII. r. 17, No. 271.

157. Every application for the purpose of the conversion of any stocks, funds or securities into any other stocks, funds or securities authorized by the last preceding rule, shall be served upon the trustees thereof, if any, and upon such other persons, if any, as the court or judge shall think fit. Ibid. r. 18, No. 272.

158. In any case in which an affidavit is required, an office copy must be produced at the bank. R. S. C. 1883, App. M. No. 18.

159. An office copy of every order in the Admiralty Division to be left with and acted on by the paymaster shall be transmitted by the proper officer to the Audit Office, and in case of any amendment in any such order such office copy shall be likewise amended. See S. C. F. R. 1884, No. 97.

160. The Supreme Court Funds Rules, 1884, do not apply in district registries to funds in court, or thereafter lodged in court, ibid. No. 111.

161. The plaintiff, as third mortgagee, instituted a suit against a ship of which the defendant was first mortgagee in possession, and caused her to be arrested. The defendant, to obtain the release of the ship, paid into court the sum of £500 in lieu of bail. The defendant then sold the ship for an amount insufficient to satisfy the sum secured by his mortgage. The plaintiff, when the cause was ripe for hearing, abandoned the suit, and the £500 was paid out to the defendant.

Held, that the defendant was entitled to interest at the rate of £4 per cent. per annum on the £500 for the time that it remained in court. The Western Ocean, L. R. 3 A. & E. 38.

161a. A damage cause was instituted in the Court of Admiralty against a vessel, bail given, and the ship released. The claim of the plaintiff, afterwards proved to be beyond the amount of bail, and the defendants were foreigners. The same vessel was arrested in another cause in the same court, and therein the ship was sold, and the proceeds paid into court. A large surplus remained in court after satisfying the claim of the plaintiff in the second cause. On application by the plaintiffs in the first cause, opposed by the foreign owners, to be paid the balance due to them beyond the amount of bail out of the surplus proceeds; held, that such proceeds were as free from the lien of the plaintiffs in the first cause as the vessel itself was after bail and release, and that the court had no authority under the 15th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), to direct such proceeds to be paid to the plaintiff in the first cause as a judgment creditor. The Wild Ranger, 2 N. R. 402.

9. Payment into Court.

1. Generally.

162. In the Admiralty Division a lodgment of funds to the account of the paymaster shall be made upon presentation at the Bank (Law Courts Branch) of an authority signed by or on behalf of a registrar. Such authority shall be issued upon a request signed by or on behalf of the person desiring to make such lodgment. The request shall specify the title of the cause or matter (which in Admiralty actions shall include the name of the ship), and any particulars of the lodgment which may be necessary, and may be in the Form, No. 9,* in the appendix to these rules. See S. C. F. R. 1884, No. 34.

163. All money and securities to be paid into or deposited in court shall be paid or deposited at the Bank of England (Law Courts Branch) and placed in the books of the bank to the account of the paymaster-general for the time being for and on behalf of the Supreme Court of Judicature; and the bank shall cause a receipt to be given to the person making the payment or deposit. Ibid. No. 29.

164. Any party who intends to pay money into court will, on request at the Bank of England (Law Courts Branch), hereinafter called the bank, be furnished with a form of request, which must be filled up as hereinafter provided, and signed by such party or his solicitor. The money will then be received by the bank, and an official receipt for the

(64) This form may be obtained at the Royal Courts of Justice Form Office, Room No. 420. A charge of one penny is made for it.

(65) The form, when Part 1 thereof has been filled up for use, must bear a one shilling impressed stamp. The form may be bought, with the stamp affixed, for the price of the stamp in addition; or the practitioner may get the stamp affixed at the stamp office in the Royal Courts, if he prefers to do so.

(66) Part 1 of the form is signed by the practitioner, or his clerk for him.

(67) Part 1, when duly filled up and signed, is taken by the practitioner or his clerk to the Admiralty registry, which is in the Royal Courts of Justice, and to the office of the chief clerk there (Room No. 734), who signs for the registrar Part 2 of the form, and hands it back to the practitioner or his clerk, who takes it to the Law Courts branch of the Bank of England at the Royal Courts of Justice, Room No. 47, with the money to be paid, or a cheque on a banker's for the amount, crossed "Bank of England, Law Courts Branch." An ordinary paying-in slip from those lying on the counter is at the same time filled up, and the same, and the form so filled up, and the money or cheque, are handed over the counter.

(68) If the amount is paid in money, the clerk thereupon signs Part 3, acknowledging the receipt of the money, and hands back the form.

(69) If the money is paid by a crossed cheque, the clerk receiving it gives in exchange an informal memorandum of the amount paid in, and of the day on which the printed receipt is to be called for, with his initials thereto, and on the practitioner or his clerk calling accordingly, if the cheque has been paid, the form, with Part 3 duly filled up and signed, is handed to him.

(70) The object of this delay is to give time for the payment of the cheque before the receipt for the money is given.

(71) The practitioner or his clerk then prepares a notice to the adverse solicitor, headed with the proper title of the action, and setting forth the amount paid in, the date of payment, and the purpose for which it was paid in.

(72) This notice is signed by the practitioner, or by his clerk for him.

(73) A copy of this notice and of Form No. 9, are served on the adverse solicitor.

(74) The practitioner or his clerk should annex to the notice Form No. 9 so filled up and signed, and endorse on the notice, and sign, a certificate that a copy of the notice and receipt have been served on the adverse solicitor.

(75) The notice, with form No. 9 annexed, should be filed in the registry with a minute recording the filing, and bearing a 5s. adhesive (not impressed) stamp thereon.

money will be given. Where the money is paid in upon a notice or pleading, such notice or pleading must be produced at the bank at the time the money is paid in, and the receipt will be given on the margin thereof. R. S. C. 1883, App. M. No. 1.

165. In filling up the request mentioned in the last preceding regulation, the party paying the money into court shall enter thereon the letter, number and short title of the action, and the name of the party by whom the payment is made, and also such one of the following statements as may be applicable to the circumstances under which the money is paid in, viz. :—

(a) Where the money is paid in under the provisions of r. 5 of Ord. XXII. —(i. e. (1) where payment into court is made before delivery of defence, (2) where the liability of the defendant is not denied in the defence, or (3) where the payment is made with a defence setting up a tender of the sum paid), an entry in the following form:—A. paid in in satisfaction of claim of above-named (name of party).

(b) Where the money is paid in under r. 6 of Ord. XXII. (i. e. where the liability of the defendant is denied in the defence) an entry in the following form:—B. paid in against claim of above-named (name of party) with defence denying liability.

(c) Where the money is paid in under the provisions of r. 26 of Ord. XXXI. (i. e. where discovery by interrogatories is sought and security is required accordingly) an entry in the following form:—C. paid in to “Security for Costs Account.”

(d) Where the money is paid in under an order* or certificate an entry in the following form:—D. paid in under order (or certificate) dated the day of , 18 . Ibid. No. 2.

166. As to the lodgment of money in actions of debt or damages, see S. C. F. R. 1884, No. 30.

167. Where money is paid into court in two or more actions which are consolidated, and the plaintiff proceeds to trial in one, and fails, the money paid in and the costs in all the actions shall be dealt with under this order in the same manner as in the action tried. Ord. XXII. r. 8, No. 262.

168. As to the deposit to be paid into court by the party seeking discovery by interrogatories, before applying for such discovery, see tit. EVIDENCE, p. 425.

169. As to the lodgment of funds in court in the other divisions, see S. C. F. R. 1884, Nos. 29—43; and Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 4, pp. 342 et seq.

170. A cause of damage was instituted in the name of a party not the registered owner. Claim of the defendants to be dismissed, after damage pronounced for and the accounts referred, was not admitted, but the court stated that if after the amount of damage had been ascertained any doubt arose as to who was entitled to receive the money, it would direct the amount to be paid into the registry, and throw on the claimant the onus of establishing his ownership by competent proof. The Ilos, Swabey, 100. See also The Minna, L. R. 2 A. & E. 97.

2. By Defendant.

171. Where any action is brought to recover a debt or damages, any defendant may, before or at the time of delivering his defence, or at any later time by leave of the court or a judge, pay into court a sum of money by way of satisfaction, which shall be taken to admit the claim or cause of action in respect of which the payment is made; or he may, with a defence denying liability (except in certain actions in the common law divisions), pay into court money, which shall be subject to the provisions of Rule 6. See Ord. XXII. r. 1, No. 255.

172. Payment into court shall be signified in the defence, and the claim or cause of action in satisfaction of which such payment is made shall be specified therein. Ibid. r. 2, No. 256.

173. If the defendant pays money into court before delivering his defence, he shall serve upon the plaintiff a notice specifying both the fact that he has paid in such money and also the claim or cause of action in respect of which such payment has been made. Such notice shall be in the Form No. 3, Appendix B., with such variations as circumstances may require. Ibid. r. 4, No. 258.

* (76) It is generally by this mode that money is paid into court in the Admiralty Division.

174. As to payment into court by a defendant desiring to appropriate the whole or part thereof to the whole or part of the plaintiff's claim, see R. S. C. 1883, App. M. No. 3.

175. Owners setting up an agreement in bar of a salvage claim are bound to pay into court the amount stipulated for under the agreement. The Catherine, 6 Notes of Cases, Supp. 1.

3. By Plaintiff.

176. A plaintiff may, in answer to a counter-claim, pay money into court in satisfaction thereof, subject to the like conditions as to costs and otherwise as upon payment into court by a defendant. Ord. XXII. r. 9, No. 263.

4. Tender before Action.

177. With a defence setting up a tender before action, the sum of money alleged to have been tendered must be brought into court. Ibid. r. 3, No. 257.

178. As to costs after tender, see tit. Costs, c. 16, pp. 354—358.

See also as to tenders, Pt. II. c. 32, p. 1586.

5. Freight.

179. Cargo arrested for the freight only, may be released by filing an affidavit as to the value of the freight, and by paying the amount of the freight into the registry, or by satisfying the judge that it has already been paid. Ord. XXIX. r. 4, No. 325; and see The Victor, 1 Lushington, 72; The Flora, 35 L. J. Adm. 15.

180. When a prima facie title to freight is shown, a ship arrested for freight will be released upon bail being given in the action. When cargo is arrested it is otherwise, and the court will order the owners of cargo to bring in the freight. The Ringdove, Swabey, 312.

181. The mortgagee having a prima facie right to the freight is not required to bring it into court, as in the case of an ordinary holder of freight. Ibid.

182. In a bottomry action the court must be satisfied that freight has actually been received from the owners of cargo before it will enforce its being brought in by the owner of the ship. The Aline, 1 W. Rob. 123.

183. The R. was arrested in a cause of collision. At the time of the collision the R. had a cargo on board. At the time of the arrest, a portion only of such cargo remained on board. The cargo and vessel belonged to the same owner. Held, on motion for release of the cargo remaining on board, that the value of freight on the whole cargo must first be paid into court. The Roecliff, L. R. 2 A. & E. 363; 38 L. J. Adm. 56; 3 Asp. 243.

184. Seem, a dock company is bound to bring into the Court of Admiralty a deposit to cover freight paid to them under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 57, s. 47 (repealed by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 84; but see 9 & 10 Vict. c. cccxcix, and tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, p. 620), in pursuance of a monition from that court, at the suit of a bottomry bondholder seeking to make it available, as in the nature of freight, in discharge of his bond. The Lord Auckland, 2 W. Rob. 301; 8 Jur. 478.

185. In a cause of damage instituted after the ship proceeded against had changed owners, the court refused to enforce the bringing in of the freight by the subsequent owners. The Mellona, 3 W. Rob. 25.

186. The owner of cargo on board a ship sued for collision is only compellable to pay into court the freight due from him to the shipowner. The Leo, 1 Lushington, 444; 31 L. J. Adm. 78; 6 L. T. N.S. 58. See also, as to the liability of freight and deductions therefrom in actions of bottomry, tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, pp. 593, 594; in actions of collision, ibid. p. 594; in actions of salvage, ibid. p. 595; and in actions of wages, ibid.

187. As to the deduction from freight of the costs of paying it in, see tit. Costs, p. 348.

6. To satisfy Lien.

188. Where an action is brought to recover, or a defendant in his defence seeks by way of counterclaim to recover, specific property other than land, and the party from whom such recovery is sought does not dispute the title of the party seeking to recover the same, but claims to retain the property by virtue of a lien or otherwise as security for any sum of money, the court or a judge may, at any time after such last-mentioned claim appears from the pleadings, or, if there be no pleadings, by affidavit or otherwise to the satisfaction of such court or judge, order that the party claiming to recover the property be at liberty to pay into court, to abide the event of the action, the amount of money in respect of which the lien or security is claimed, and such further sum (if any) for interest and costs as such court or judge may direct, and that, upon such payment into court being made, the property claimed be given up to the party claiming it. Ord. L. r. 8, No. 664.

7. Costs.

188a. As to costs of payment of money into court, see tit. COSTS, p. 347.

10. Payment out of Court.

1. Generally.*

189. When money in court is by an order directed to be paid to any persons described in the order, or in a certificate of a chief clerk, or of a taxing officer, or of a master in lunacy, as co-partners, such money may be paid to any one or

* (77) In the Admiralty Division, to obtain payment of money out of court, an order for that purpose must be made by the judge on summons by consent or otherwise.

(78) All orders for payment of money out of court are made by the judge, not the registrar.

(79) A written authority signed by the client, on whose behalf the money was paid in, or who is otherwise entitled to receive the amount, for payment of the money to his solicitor—the practitioner—must then be obtained, and this authority must be annexed to the summons. If the solicitor has paid in the money as for a particular client, it may be paid out to him as solicitor of that client without such authority.

(80) In cases of small amount, say £200 or £300, and when the order is made by consent, the authorities will sometimes waive the authority of the client for payment to the practitioner.

(81) On taking out the summons the practitioner procures a blank form of order from the registry, endorses it with the name of the cause, and with his name and address, for the purpose of identification, and places thereon an adhesive stamp of five shillings in addition to the stamp of three shillings on the summons. This order is handed in to the registry on obtaining the summons.

(82) When the order has been made by the judge it is drawn up in the registry on the stamped form previously left there, and it is handed to the practitioner or his clerk on his application for it. A copy of this order is served on the adverse solicitor.

(83) Stamps, either adhesive or impressed, for the proper poundage payable, are then placed by the practitioner on a form, No. 4, in the App. to S. C. F. R. 1884, and the form left in the registry, where it is duly filled up in accordance with the order signed by the registrar or assistant registrar, and retained in the registry, a duplicate being delivered to the practitioner, who takes it to the office of the Paymaster-General, Royal Courts, Room No. 65, when an appointment is made for payment.

(84) The practitioner himself, or if a firm, one member of the firm, must attend the appointment, when a cheque on the Bank of England for the amount is handed to him, and he signs a receipt for the amount.

(85) This duplicate, in Form No. 4, left at the pay office, which document is in effect a copy in columnar form of the order made by the judge, is considered in the registry and at the pay office as the "duly authenticated copy order" referred to in rule No. 46 of S. C. F. R. 1884, for which see No. 198, infra.

(86) The Court of Admiralty could not, prior to the Judicature Acts, enter into the contracts of general creditors, yet it might have been bound to take a judgment on record as a debt. The Flora, 1 Hagg. 303.

(87) Prior to the Judicature Acts creditors had no lien on the proceeds deposited in the registry of the Court of Admiralty of a ship sold under the authority of that court. The Neptune, 3 Hagg. 149; The Douthorpe, 2 W. Rob. 87; 3 Notes of Cases, 623; The John, 3 C. Rob. 290; The Exmouth, 2 Hagg. 88, n.

(88) So in a case prior to 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 3, of a vessel sold under decree of the court in a suit for wages, applications for the balance of the proceeds to be paid on the one hand to a mortgagee who had not obtained possession, and on the other to the executor of the sole owner, were respectively refused, and the proceeds directed to abide such order as might come to the court with regard to them. The Portsea, 2 Hagg. 84.

(89) Costs pronounced by a decree of the court to be due to a successful party, were, prior to the Judicature Acts, paid to a third party under a garnishee order. Such payment held to be a satisfaction of the decree, even as against that party's solicitor claiming his lien. A garnishee order could not be reviewed by the Admiralty Court. The Olive, 5 Jur. N.S. 445; Swabey, 423.

(90) A fund in the registry of the court could not, even before the Judicature Acts, be attached by process of foreign attachment out of the Court of the Lord Mayor of London. The Albert Crosby, 1 Lushington, 101; but see The John, 3 C. Rob. 290.

(91) As to the claims allowed in American Admiralty Courts against surplus proceeds in the custody of the court, see 1 Conkling's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) 149; 2 Parsons on Maritime Law, 548; Dunlap's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) 46, and cases there cited; Furniss v. Brig Magoun, Ibid. 55; The Panama, Olcott, Adm. 343; Remnants in Court, Ibid. 382; Harper v. The New Brig, Gilpin, 536; see Davis v. A New Brig, Gilpin, 473; Andrews v. Wall, 3 How. 568. [AMERICAN.] more of such co-partners, or to the survivor of them. See S. C. F. R. 1884, No. 63.

190. A duly-authenticated copy of every order in the Admiralty Division, which directs funds to be dealt with, shall be left at the pay office, and shall be the paymaster's authority for the issue of directions giving effect to such orders; such copy shall be left by or on behalf of the person entitled to payment or interested in any other dealings with such funds directed or authorized by the order. Ibid. No. 46.

191. Every authority for the payment of money out of court must be attested by a witness, whose residence and description must be added to his attestation. See R. S. C. 1883, App. M., No. 9.

192. Where money is to be paid out under an order or authority, on bespeaking the payment out the order or authority must be lodged at the bank, and after having been examined by the bank must be filed in the Filing Department of the Central Office; and a certificate of its having been so filed must be lodged at the bank on receiving the cheque. Ibid. No. 8.

193. All payments out shall be authorized by cheques upon the bank, filled in by the bank, and drawn in favour of the party claiming to receive the money. One clear day shall be allowed for the preparation of the cheque, and it shall be signed by one of the masters, and made payable to order, crossed specially or generally, and marked "not negotiable." Ibid. No. 11.

194. Whenever the cheque is required to be drawn in favour of any person, not a solicitor of the Supreme Court, the bank may require him to be identified by a solicitor. Ibid. No. 12.

195. If such person shall be represented in the cause or matter by a solicitor, the identifying solicitor must be such solicitor, and in case a solicitor on requiring the cheque to be made payable to himself, or on identifying any person receiving such cheque, shall not be known at the bank, the bank may, at their discretion, require, on delivery of the cheque, the production by such solicitor of his annual certificate. Ibid.

196. As to the payment of money out of court to the party mentioned in the certificate as entitled thereto, or to his solicitor on the written authority of the former under Rule 26 of Ord. XXXI. (i. e., where discovery by interrogatories is sought, and security is required accordingly), after the conclusion of the cause on a certificate of the taxing officer, Ibid. No. 6.

197. As to the payment of money out of court to the plaintiff, or to his solicitor on the written authority of the former, where paid in under Rule 6 of Ord. XXII. (i. e., with defence denying liability), Ibid. No. 5.

198. In the Admiralty Division an order for the payment of money by the paymaster must be in the Form No. 4 in the Appendix. See S. C. F. R. 1884, No. 28.

199. In the following cases of payment into court under this order, viz. :— (a) When payment into court is made before delivery of defence; (b) when the liability of the defendant, in respect of the claim or cause of action in satisfaction of which the payment into court is made, is not denied in the defence; (c) when payment into court is made with a defence setting up a tender of the sum paid; the money paid into court shall be paid out to the plaintiff on his request, or to his solicitor on the plaintiff's written authority, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order. Ord. XXII. r. 5, No. 259.*

200. When the liability of the defendant, in respect of the claim or cause of action in satisfaction of which the payment into court has been made, is denied in the defence, the following rules shall apply :—(a) The plaintiff may accept, in satisfaction of the claim or cause of action in respect of which the payment into court has been made, the sum so paid in, in which case he shall be entitled to have the money paid out to him as hereinafter provided, notwithstanding the defendant's denial of liability, whereupon all further proceedings, in respect of such claim or cause of action, except as to costs shall be stayed; or the plaintiff may refuse to accept the money in satisfaction and reply accordingly, in which case the money shall remain in court subject to the provisions hereinafter mentioned; (b) if the plaintiff accepts the money so paid in, he shall, after service of such notice in the Form No. 4 in Appendix B. as is in Rule 7 mentioned, or after delivery of a reply accepting the money, be entitled to have the money paid out to himself on request, or to his solicitor on his, the plaintiff's, written authority, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order; (c) if the plaintiff does not accept, in satisfaction of the claim or cause of action in respect of which the payment into court has been made, the sum so paid in, but proceeds with the action in respect of such claim or cause of action, or any part thereof, the money shall remain in court and be subject to the order of the court or a judge, and shall not be paid out of court except in pursuance of an order. If the plaintiff proceeds with the action in respect of such claim or cause of action, or any part thereof, and recovers less than the amount paid into court, the amount paid in shall be applied, so far as is necessary, in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim, and the balance (if any) shall, under such order, be repaid to the defendant. If the defendant succeeds in respect of such claim or cause of action, the whole amount shall, under such order, be repaid to him. Ibid. r. 6, No. 260.

* (92) In actions of salvage in the Admiralty Division the plaintiff cannot, as in actions in the other divisions, take out the sum tendered and proceed for what he con-

201. The plaintiff, when payment into court is made before delivery of defence, may within four days after the receipt of notice of such payment, or when such payment is first signified in a defence before reply, accept in satisfaction of the claim or cause of action in respect of which such payment has been made the sum so paid in, in which case he shall give notice to the defendant in the Form No. 4 in Appendix B., and shall be at liberty, in case the entire claim or cause of action is thereby satisfied, to tax his costs after the expiration of four days from the service of such notice, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order, and in case of nonpayment of the costs within forty-eight hours after such taxation, to sign judgment for his costs so taxed. Ibid. r. 7, No. 261.

202. As to payment out of money paid into court in the Queen's Bench and Chancery Divisions, Ibid. rr. 15, 16, Nos. 269, 270.

203. Money paid into court in an Admiralty action shall not be paid out of court except in pursuance of an order of the court or a judge. Ibid. r. 20, No. 274.

See also No. 167, supra.

204. In the Court of Admiralty, when money has been paid into court, the practice is not to pay it out to the party entitled until the conclusion of the cause. The Annie Childs, 1 Lushington, 509; and see No. 218, infra.

205. Until a decree has been actually made the court is bound to consider every claim against any funds in court, howsoever these funds may have been brought there. The Constanca, 10 Jur. 849.

206. In a cause of collision instituted by the bailees of a barge against a steamship, held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue in rem in the Admiralty Court; but the court directed that the money awarded as compensation for the damage should not be paid until it should be satisfactorily established that such payment would release the defendants from all claims by the owners of the barge. The Minna, L. R. 2 A. & E. 97. See also The Ilos, Swabey, 100.

207. An action in rem having been commenced for necessities in the Court of Admiralty before the Judicature Acts, the defendants, the official liquidators of the owners of the vessel, obtained an injunction from the Court of Chancery (England) restraining the plaintiffs from prosecuting the action "until further order." Held, that as the injunction was "until further order," the court would not order payment to the defendants of the money lodged in lieu of bail. The Lion, 1 Asp. N.S. 321. [IRISH.]

208. If a defendant brings money into court under a plea of tender, and the plaintiff does not take it out till the defendant establishes a cross demand for the costs of judgment in the action, the court will direct the money to be paid to him in liquidation of that demand. Dore v. —, 1 Jur. Exch. 271. [IRISH.]

209. Proceeds of a ship and cargo sold abroad and transmitted from a Vice-Admiralty Court to the registry of the High Court of Admiralty, decreed on motion to be paid out to the respective consignees of the cargo, on the consent of the purchaser of the cargo. The Lady Banks, 1 Hagg. 306.

210. As to caveats against payment of money out of court, see Nos. 147, 148, p. 1478.

211. As to the payment out of court of a deposit paid into court by the party seeking discovery by interrogatories, see Pt. II. c. 35, s. 11, p. 1616.

See also No. 791, p. 1544.

2. In Actions of Bottomry.

212. Semble, under ordinary circumstances freight paid into court in a bottomry action would be paid out to the bondholder as a matter of course, and the court would only be induced to hold its hand under circumstances of a strong and special character, as, for instance, that the party suing on the bond was resident abroad, and there was no possibility of compelling him to pay the costs of the suit should he be condemned in them. The Lord Cochrane, 1 W. Rob. 312; 1 Notes of Cases, 283.

213. A small balance of freight (£81) remained in the registry of the Court of Admiralty after satisfying all other demands upon it. This balance was claimed by the ship's broker under a deed of agreement with the master and part owner, which, it was contended, conveyed the freight to him, the broker. The application was opposed by the assignees of the part owner. Held, that neither as the ship's broker nor under the deed was the broker entitled to receive the freight in opposition to the part owner, and the balance decreed to be paid out to the assignees accordingly. The Dowthorpe, 2 W. Rob. 87; 3 Notes of Cases, 623.

3. In Actions of Collision.

214. In a cause of damage, in which the amount of damages claimed was £10,000, and the net proceeds only amounted to about £800, motion to pay out the balance of proceeds to the plaintiffs, granted, without a previous reference of the claim and accounts to the registrar and merchants. The Viscountess Canning, 15 March, 1860.

215. In a cause of damage, in which the proceedings were by default, the plaintiff's claim amounted to £600. The proceeds of sale amounted to £300. The court on motion for plaintiff decreed the balance of proceeds to be paid out to him without a reference of the accounts to the registrar and merchants. The Zaide Celine, No. 1909, 26 January, 1864.

4. In Actions of Salvage.

216. In a salvage action the owners paid into the registry and tendered £50. The tender was pronounced for, and the salvors were condemned in the sum of £50 nomine expensarum. The salvors being resident out of the jurisdiction, application by the owners for payment out to them on account of costs of the £50 tendered, granted. The Clifton, 3 Hagg. 124; The Johannes, 6 Notes of Cases, 290.

217. The amount of salvage had been paid into the registry, and application made for apportionment. Held, that the court had no power to decree from the fund in court payment of advances made to certain of the salvors by their agent. The Louisa, 3 W. Rob. 99. See, also, as to assignment of salvage, tit. SALVAGE, and as to assignment of wages, tit. WAGES.

5. In Actions of Wages.

218. In a cause of wages brought by foreign mariners, money was paid into court by the defendant as the amount admitted due by him. The plaintiffs claimed a larger sum. Motion to have the money paid out of court to them pending the suit, refused. The Annie Childs, Lushington, 509.

219. A cause of wages was brought in rem by the master, and proceedings were taken by default against the owners, but an appearance was given by mortgagees of a moiety of the vessel, and the court pronounced for the wages with costs of the master. Motion by the mortgagees, admitting the priority of the master's claim over theirs, that his wages and costs might be paid out of the unmortgaged moiety of the proceeds, leaving the other moiety available for the claim of the mortgagees, rejected, and the wages and costs decreed to be paid out of the proceeds generally, with liberty to the mortgagees and other parties to apply subsequently for payment of the balance of proceeds to them. The Calypso, No. 1627, 3 November, 1863.

6. Costs.

219a. As to costs of payment of money out of court, see tit. Costs, p. 347.

Part II.—IN THE HIGH COURT.

1. Generally.*

(a) Since the Judicature Act, 1873.

220. For provisions as to the making, altering and annulling of rules of court,

* (93) As to the practice of the Court of Admiralty, see 2 Browne's Civil and Admiralty Law, 2nd ed. cap. ix, p. 396; Clerke's Praxis Curiae Admiralitatis, and Coote's Admiralty Practice.

(94) As to the practice of the court prior and regulating the pleadings, practice and procedure of the High Court, see the Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), ss. 16, 17, as amended by the Supreme Court of Judicature (Officers) Act, 1879 (c. 78), s. 22, and the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1881 (c. 68), s. 19.

221. For provisions that all rules and orders of court in force at the commencement of this act in the Admiralty Court, except so far as varied by this act or by rules of court made by Order in Council before this act, shall remain in force in the High Court of Justice, until altered or annulled by rules of court, see the Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 18.

222. For provisions that, save as otherwise provided, all forms and methods of procedure in force at the commencement of this act in any of the courts whose jurisdiction is transferred to the High Court, by virtue of any law, customs general order, or rules whatsoever, and which are not inconsistent with the principal act, this act or rules of court, may continue to be used in the High Court of Justice, in such and the like cases and purposes as in the courts so transferred, Ibid. s. 21.

223. Where any provisions in respect to the practice or procedure of any court the jurisdiction of which is transferred to the High Court of Justice, are contained in any act of parliament, rules of court may be made to modify such provisions. Ibid. s. 24.

224. For provisions extending the powers conferred by the Judicature Acts as to the making of rules of court, see the Statute Law Revision and Civil Procedure Act, 1881 (c. 59), s. 6.

225. All acts of parliament relating to any court or judge whose jurisdiction is transferred to the High Court shall be construed as if the High Court and any judge thereof had been named therein instead of such court or judge. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 76.

226. As to the practice in the Central Office, see the Central Office Practice Rules in Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 844, though many of these are affected by the R. S. C. 1883. Ibid. Preface, p. vi.

227. For provisions for Orders in Council and Rules of Court being required to be laid before Parliament, and for annulling the same if need be, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 25.

228. All proceedings in and applications to the High Court, other than the commencement by action, may, subject to these rules, be taken and made in the same manner as they would have been taken and made in any court in which any proceeding or application of the like kind could have been taken or made if the acts had not been passed. See Ord. I. r. 2, No. 2.

229. As to the construction of the term "Rules of Court," as including forms; the term "matter," as including every proceeding in the court not in a cause; and as to the construction of various other terms in the act, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 100.

230. As to the interpretation of terms in the Rules of 1883, see Ord. LXXI. rr. 1, 2, Nos. 1041, 1042.

231. Where no other provision is made by the acts or these rules, the present procedure and practice remain in force. Ord. LXXII. r. 2, No. 1044.

232. No order or rule annulled by any former order shall be revived by any of these rules, unless expressly so declared. Ibid. r. 1, No. 1043.

233. The rules, orders and regulations of the High Court of Admiralty of England of 1859 and 1871 are annulled. See R. S. C. 1883, App. O. No. 22.

234. The full title of the fifth division of the High Court is "The Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division;" but the subject-matter before the court must be indicated by the addition of the word "Probate," "Divorce," or "Admiralty," as the case may be. Documents will not, however, be rejected or invalid on account of not having the full title, the expressions "Probate Division," "Divorce Division," or "Admiralty Division," being sanctioned both by the new acts and the

to its becoming a division of the High Court of Justice, see Fritchards' Admiralty Digest, 2nd ed. tit. PRACTICE.

new rules. Anon., 1 Charley's Cases (Court), 41.

235. A local act required one month's notice to be given before bringing an action in any of his Majesty's courts against the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company. Held, that such requirement applied to actions in personam only, and not to actions in rem, against the vessels of the company. The Mullingar, 1 Asp. N.S. 252. [IRISH.]

2. Time.*

236. Where by these rules, or by any judgment or order given or made after the commencement of the principal act, time for doing any act or taking any proceeding is limited by months, and where the word "month" occurs in any document which is part of any legal procedure under these rules, such time shall be computed by calendar months, unless otherwise expressed. Ord. LXIV. r. 1, No. 961.

237. Where any limited time less than six days from or after any date or event is appointed or allowed for doing any act or taking any proceeding, Sunday, Christmas Day, and Good Friday shall not be reckoned in the computation of such limited time. Ibid. r. 2, No. 962.

238. Where the time for doing any act or taking any proceeding expires on a Sunday, or other day on which the offices are closed, and by reason thereof such act or proceeding cannot be done or taken on that day, such act or proceeding shall, so far as regards the time of doing or taking the same, be held to be duly done or taken if done or taken on the day on which the offices shall next be open. Ibid. r. 3, No. 963.

239. The court or a judge shall have power to enlarge or abridge the time appointed by these rules, or fixed by any order enlarging time, for doing any act or taking any proceeding, upon such terms (if any) as the justice of the case may require, and any such enlargement may be ordered although the application for the same is not made until after the expiration of the time appointed or allowed. Ibid. r. 7, No. 967.

240. In any case in which any particular number of days, not expressed to be clear days, is prescribed by these rules, the same shall be reckoned exclusively of the first day and inclusively of the last day. Ibid. r. 12, No. 972.

241. As to time in reference to appearance, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A. Nos. 1—12.

242. As to time in reference to bail, see this Part, c. 19, s. 4, p. 1547.

244. As to time in reference to service of documents, ibid. c. 12, p. 1524.

245. As to time of sittings of the court generally, and in the long vacation, see Pt. I. c. 1, p. 1465.

246. As to time in reference to security for costs, see tit. Costs, Nos. 219, 220, p. 364.

247. As to orders for times of trial in Admiralty actions, see this Part, c. 38, ss. 3, 4, p. 1459.

248. As to proceedings after the lapse of a year, ibid. c. 31, p. 1583.

249. As to time of application to set aside award, ibid. c. 42, p. 1460.

250. As to the duration of caveats, see Pt. I. c. 6, p. 1476.

3. Effect of Non-compliance with Rules.

251. Non-compliance with any of these rules, or with any rule of practice for the time being in force, shall not render any proceedings void unless the court or a judge shall so direct, but such proceedings may be set aside either wholly or in part as irregular, or amended, or otherwise dealt with in such manner and upon such terms as the court or judge shall think fit. Ord. LXX. r. 1, No. 1037.

252. No application to set aside any proceeding for irregularity shall be allowed unless made within reasonable time, nor if the party applying has taken any fresh step after knowledge of the irregularity. Ibid. r. 2, No. 1038.

253. Where an application is made to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the several objections intended to be insisted upon shall be stated in the summons or notice of motion. Ibid. r. 3, No. 1039.

254. When a summons is taken out to set aside any process or proceeding for irregularity with costs, and the summons is dismissed generally without any special direction as to costs, it is to be understood as dismissed with costs. Ibid. r. 4, No. 1040.

4. Actions.

1. Generally.

255. Besides the institution of the cause by the proceeding called an action, all other proceedings in and applications to the High Court may, subject to these rules, be taken and made in the same manner as they would have been taken and made in any court in which any proceeding or application of the like kind could have been taken or made if the act had not been passed. See Ord. I. r. 2, No. 2.

256. As to the construction of the terms "cause," "suit," "action," and "matter" in this act, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 100.

257. Subject to the power of transfer, every person by whom any cause or matter may be commenced in the High Court of Justice, which would have been within the non-exclusive cognizance of the High Court of Admiralty if the principal act had not passed, shall assign such cause or matter to any one of the divisions of the said High Court, including the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, as he may think fit, by marking the document by which the same is commenced with the name of the division, and giving notice thereof to the proper officer of the court. Ord. V. r. 5, No. 27.

258. As to the present jurisdiction of the Admiralty Division, and of the jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty before the Judicature Acts, see tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. cc. 5, 6, pp. 638, 639.

259. As to notice of action, see c. 27, s. 3, p. 1578.

2. Precedence.

See c. 5, p. 1497.

3. In Personam.

(a) Generally.*

260. As to the commencement of personal actions in the Admiralty Division by writ of summons, see c. 8, p. 1508.

260a. The jurisdiction conferred on the Court of Admiralty by this act may be exercised by proceedings in personam or in rem. See the Admiralty County Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 35.

(b) Collision Actions.†

260b. Cases of actions for collision in personam against the master of the other vessel: Strong v. Teesdale, anno 1694, Marsden's Rep. p. 269; Cowton v. Cocke, and Pigg v. Goldsburg, anno 1712, ibid. pp. 298, 299; Taylor v. Thompson, anno 1714, ibid. p. 302; Ewcr v. Thirkettel, anno 1729, ibid. p. 310; Pillans v. Sherburne, anno 1754, ibid. p. 319; De Kromment v. Chevalier, anno 1758, ibid. p. 321.

260c. Collision action brought by master against pilot. Defendant dismissed, but ground of dismissal not stated. Russell v. Hays, anno 1724, ibid. p. 307. See also tit. PILOTS, Nos. 9 and 13, p. 1431.

See also No. 274, infra.

(101a) For a case of an action in the Admiralty for damage by the owner against the master, see Taylor v. Thompson, Marsden's Rep. 302.

† (102) Proceedings in personam may be taken against the owners of the wrong-doing ship, or any of them, if within the jurisdiction of the court, as tortfeasors are jointly and severally liable, and where their ship has been sunk. this is the only mode of proceeding by which to make them liable.

(e) Damage to Cargo Actions.

261. Action at common law by consignees of cargo damaged against the master, as representing either the owner or charterer. Held, that the action was rightly brought against the master. Denysen v. Macfie, 3 L. T. N.S. 25.

(d) Personal Injury Actions.

See Nos. 276, 277, infra.

(f) Wages Actions.

263. The master may be sued in the Admiralty by his mariners for their wages. Bayly v. Grant, 1 Salk. 33; 12 Mod. 444; 1 Ld. Raym. 632; Holt, 48; Anon. 2 Show. 86.

264. The master, the ship, and the owner, are severally liable to a mariner for his wages, and the mariner is entitled to his option as to which he will proceed against. The Jack Park, 4 C. Rob. 311.

265. A suit for wages against the master personally, entertained. Ibid.; Davis v. Rotch, Marsden's Rep. 20; Long v. Belson, ibid. 132; Swinney v. Tinker, ibid. 139.

266. The mate may sue the master in the Admiralty Court for his wages. Bayly v. Grant (1699), 1 Salk. 33; 12 Mod. 444; 1 Ld. Raym. 632; Holt, 48; Hook v. Moreton (1697), 1 Ld. Raym. 397; Ball v. Bright, Marsden's Rep. 303.

267. Part owners may be sued in the Admiralty by the mariners of their vessels for their wages. Alleson v. March (1689), 2 Vent. 181; Wheeler v. Thompson (1738), 1 Stra. 707; Ragg v. King (1729), 2 Stra. 858.

268. A seaman allowed to sue the owner for his wages. The Stephen Wright, 12 Jur. 732.

268a. Wages action by mate against master. Ball v. Bright, anno 1713, Marsden's Rep. p. 303.

268b. A part owner sued in the Admiralty for wages, and a decree made against him for a proportionate part of the wages sued for. Rawlinson v. Pagan, anno 1693, ibid. p. 269.

4. In Rem.(a) Generally.†

269. Actions in rem are commenced by writ of summons. See Ord. I. r. 1, No. 1, supra. As to the arrest of the ship, or res, see c. 11, p. 1515.

270. In a cause of collision, prior to the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), where the damaging vessel had been arrested and an appearance given for the master, who was also a part owner, and the damage was pronounced for, application to condemn the master, as such part owner, in the excess of damage beyond the proceeds of the ship, under the 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, rejected, the court holding that it was not competent to it to engraft a personal action against the master as part owner upon a proceeding in rem. The Hope, 1 W. Rob. 154. See also The Volant, 1 W. Rob. 385, 390. But see No. 316, p. 1496.

271. Semble, prior to the Judicature Acts, the Admiralty jurisdiction in rem did not extend to vessels not being sea-going vessels, except when such jurisdiction was given by statute. The Malvina, 6 L. T. N.S. 369; Raft of Timber, 2 W. Rob. 251; The Castor, 6 L. T. N.S. 106; The Bilbao, 3 ibid. 338.

272. Distinction between proceedings in rem in the Admiralty Court in England and foreign attachment in the city of London. Harmer v. Bell (The Bold Buccleugh), 7 Moore, P. C. C. 373.

* (103) Proceedings in personam may be taken in salvage as in other actions against the owners of property salvaged, and under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 468, the proceedings may be by the owners against the salvors, but the more usual mode of proceeding is in rem, as affording a more substantial security to the salvor for the payment of the salvage awarded.

† (104) Where the claim is a small one, the vessel to be arrested valuable, and other claims are not likely to be preferred against it, it will be sufficient to institute the cause against the vessel only; but under other circumstances, and where freight has been earned, and the plaintiff is entitled to proceed against it, and in most cases of salvage, it will be prudent to institute the cause against the freight as well as against the vessel. See also c. 11, p. 1519.

(104a) Proceedings against cargo can only be instituted in particular actions, and under particular circumstances, i.e. in bottomry and respondentia actions, where the cargo forms part of the property hypothecated, and in salvage suits, where it forms part of the property salvaged. See p. 1519.

(b) Bottomry Actions.

273. The hypothecation of the ship by the master does not render the owners personally liable. Johnson v. Shippen, 1 Salk. 35; 14 Viner's Abr. 300.

(c) Collision Actions.

274. Owners of vessels damaged have their choice of three modes of proceeding in the Court of Admiralty, viz., against the owners or the master personally, or against the ship itself. The Volant, 1 W. Rob. 387.

(d) Damage to Cargo Actions.

275. For provisions enabling any owner, consignee or assignee of any bill of lading, of goods carried into any port in England or Wales, in any ship, to make claim in the Admiralty Court for damage done to the goods, or any part thereof, by the negligence, misconduct, or breach of duty or contract of the owner, master or crew of the ship, unless at the time of the institution of the cause any owner or part owner of the ship is domiciled in England or Wales, subject to being deprived of costs if the plaintiff does not recover £20, unless the judge certifies the cause was a fit one to be tried in the court, see the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 6, and cases thereon in tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE or—, Pt. I. p. 471.

See also No. 303, p. 1494.

(e) Salvage Actions.

276. Proceedings for salvage may be either in rem or in personam. The Hope, 3 C. Rob. 215 and notes; The Meg Merrilies, 3 Hagg. 346; The Rapid, 3 Hagg. 419.

277. Held, prior to the Judicature Acts, that the real foundation of the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty in salvage cases was by proceedings in rem, though there might be some cases of special circumstances where salvors had been allowed to proceed in personam, but that generally the ship and freight were alone liable; and where they could be proceeded against the court was not disposed to regard salvors as having a right to follow cargo as prize goods might be followed, to abide the final adjudication. The Rapid, 3 Hagg. 422. (But semble, now overruled, see The Peace, Swabey, 115; and note 103, supra.)

(f) Wages Actions.

See Nos. 263—268, supra.

5. *In Personam and in Rem.

277a. See Nos. 260a and 270, supra, and Nos. 283, 287, 287a, 310—315, infra, and 346a, p. 1499.

6. Commencement.

278. All actions which, previously to the commencement of the principal act,

* (105) There is no abstract incompatibility between proceedings in rem and proceedings in personam, which forbids them to be joined in one action, where such joinder is calculated to advance the ends of substantial justice. The Zenobia, 1 Abb. Adm. 48. [AMERICAN.]

(106) Under rule 15 of Admiralty practice adopted by the Supreme Court for the Admiralty courts of the Union, the joinder of proceedings in personam and in rem in a libel for a collision is not admissible. The Atlantic v. The Ogdensburgh, 1 Nwb. Adm. 139. [AMERICAN.]

(107) The rules of the Supreme Court expressly authorize the joinder in the American Admiralty Courts of a suit in rem and a suit in personam, in suits for mariners' wages, for pilotage, and for damage by collision; but they discountenance it in suits by material men, suits for assault and beating, suits founded on a simple hypothecation by the master, or on bottomry bonds, and in suits for salvage. 2 Conkling's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) 41. [AMERICAN.]

(108) Prior to those rules the question of such joinder of suits was raised, but not determined by Mr. Justice Story, in the cases of The Ann, 1 Mason's Rep. 508 and 512; Arthur et al. v. The Cassius, 2 Story's R. 81, 99; and decided contra in The Nantucket Citizens Bank v. The Nantucket Steamboat Co. ibid. 16. [AMERICAN.]

(109) As to the different process in suits in the American Admiralty Courts in personam, see 2 Conkling's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), 130; in rem, see ibid. 150; and both in personam and in rem, ibid. 169. [AMERICAN.]

were commenced by a cause in rem or in personam in the High Court of Admiralty, shall be instituted in the High Court of Justice by a proceeding to be called an action. See Ord. I. r. 1, No. 1.

279. Subject to rules of court a person commencing any cause or matter shall not assign the same to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, unless he would have been entitled to commence the same in one or other of the branches of that division if that act had not passed. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77), s. 11, sub-a. 3.

280. Every document by which any cause or matter may be commenced in the High Court shall be marked with the name of the division, or with the name of the judge, to which or to whom the same is assigned. See ibid. 1873 (c. 66), s. 33.

281. The court or a judge may, at any stage of the proceedings, allow either party to alter or amend his endorsement. See Ord. XXVIII. r. 1, No. 309.

7. Amount.*

282. The practice by which the amount in which an action is instituted is laid to cover the probable claims for damages and costs is merely a matter of convenience; the court always discourages the institution of an action for an excessive amount. The Freedom, 1 Asp. N.S. 136.

282a. In a cause of damage by collision, the defendants' vessel having been released on bail, the defendants admitted their liability, and consented to a reference. Subsequently leave given to plaintiffs to amend the præcipe to institute by increasing the amount in which the suit was instituted. The Johannes, L. R. 3 A. & E. 127; 39 L. J. Adm. 41; 3 Asp. 462. Seemle, overruling The Kalamazoo, 18 L. T. 66; 15 Jur. 885.

283. If the amount in which bail had been given was not equal to the damages, the plaintiff might, after judgment, obtain an order against the defendant personally to satisfy the deficiency. The Zephyr, 11 L. T. N.S. 351; 12 W. R. 890.

283a. Or further bail before judgment on payment of costs. The Hero, 4 May, 1865.

284. In an action of salvage, Lord Stowell gave a larger sum than the amount, and directed a fresh action to be instituted. Silver Bullion, 2 Spinks' Ecl. & Adm. Rep. 74.

285. The court is not limited to the amount for which the salvor has entered their action in the first instance. The Jonge Bastiaam, 5 C. Rob. 322.

286. If the plaintiff has limited his own demand, it requires peculiar circumstances to induce the court to make the owner of the vessel proceeded against liable beyond that amount and the bail taken. The Temiscouata, 2 Spinks' Ecl. & Adm. Rep. 211; 1 Jur. N.S. 479.

287. The plaintiff entered his action for collision in £250. The damages alone were less, but with the costs more than that sum. The defendant tendered £250. Held, on motion, that the defendant was personally liable for the remainder. Ibid.

287a. The defendants having caused great delay and extra expense, so that the amount of the action was insufficient, order made that the ship should not be released until payment of the plaintiff's claim and costs. The Helen, 14 W. R. 502.

288. An action of damage having been entered in £2,500, it was subsequently discovered that that amount would not pay the expenses of repairing the plaintiff's vessel. No bail had been given in the cause, and the defendant's vessel had not been arrested. Motion, before the hearing of the cause, to increase the amount for which the action was entered, granted. The Maender, 1 Asp. 221; 6 L. T. N.S. 400. See also The Celt, 3 Hagg. 328, n.

289. The court disapproves of actions being entered in an amount disproportionate to any reasonable estimate of the service rendered. The Graces, 8 Jur. 501; The Eleonore, 1 Lushington, 19; 32 L. J. Adm. N.S. 19; The Charlotte, 12 Jur. 567.

8. Counter-claim or Set-off.†

290. The said courts respectively, and every judge thereof, shall also have power to grant to any defendant in respect of any equitable estate or right, or other matter of equity, and also in respect of any legal estate, right, or title claimed or asserted by him, all such relief against any plaintiff or petitioner as such defendant shall have properly claimed by his pleading, and as the said courts respectively, or any judge thereof, might have granted in any suit instituted for that purpose by the same defendant against the same plaintiff or petitioner; and also all such relief, relating to or connected with the original subject of the cause or matter, and in like manner claimed against any other person, whether already a party to the same cause or matter, or not, who shall have been duly served with notice in writing of such claim pursuant to any rule of court, or any order of the court, as might properly have been granted against such person if he had been made a defendant to a cause duly instituted by the same defendant for the like purpose; and every person served with any such notice shall thenceforth be deemed a party to such cause or matter, with the same rights in respect of his defence against such claim, as if he had been duly sued in the ordinary way by such defendant. The Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24, sub-s. 3.

291. A defendant in an action may set off, or set up by way of counter-claim against the claims of the plaintiff, any right or claim, whether such set-off or counter-claim sound in damages or not, and such set-off or counter-claim shall have the same effect as a cross action, so as to enable the court to pronounce a final judgment in the same action, both on the original and on the cross claim. But the court or a judge may, on the application of the plaintiff before trial, if in the opinion of the court or judge such set-off or counter-claim cannot be conveniently disposed of in the pending action, or ought not to be allowed, refuse permission to the defendant to avail himself thereof. Ord. XIX. r. 3, No. 199. See also as to objections to counter-claim as a proper subject for an independent action, Ord. XXI. r. 15, No. 248.

291a. A set-off for damages or costs between parties may be allowed notwithstanding the solicitor's lien for costs in the cause. See Ord. LXV. r. 14, No. 989.

292. If, in any case in which the defendant sets up a counter-claim, the action of the plaintiff is stayed, discontinued, or dismissed, the counter-claim may nevertheless be proceeded with. Ord. XXI. r. 16, No. 249.

292a. The defendant's counter-claim exceeded the amount of the plaintiff's claim, and the plaintiff, finding his claim was statute barred, discontinued his action. The defendant thereupon moved for judgment on his counter-claim. Held, on appeal, reversing the judgment of the divisional court, and overruling Vavasour v. Krupp (15 Ch. D. 474), that the counter-claim was to be treated as a cross-action, and was not affected by the plaintiff's notice of discontinuance. McGowan v. Middleton, 11 Q. B. D. 464.

9. Amendment.

(a) Generally.

301. As to the powers of a court or judge as to amendment, see Ord. XXVIII. rr. 11, 12, Nos. 319, 320.

302. The institution of an action as a cause of necessities does not estop the plaintiff from afterwards pleading and proving that his claim is in respect of repairs, but the title of the cause must be amended. Leave to amend given. The Shipwith, 10 Jur. N.S. Adm. 445; 10 L. T. N.S. 43.

303. On the institution of a cause in rem the cause of action was improperly stated to be "a cause of damage to cargo," but in the affidavit to lead the warrant it was properly stated to be a breach of duty and breach of contract on the part of the master and crew of the vessel proceeded against. The vessel was arrested, and an appearance entered on behalf of the owners. On motion leave given to amend on payment of costs. The Princess Royal, L. R. 3 A. & E. 27; 39 L. J. Adm. 29.

304. As to amendment of the amount of action, see s. 7, supra.

(b) Plaintiffs.

307. Where an action has been commenced in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff, or where it is doubtful whether it has been commenced in the name of the right plaintiff, the court or a judge may, if satisfied that it has been so commenced through a bond fide mistake, and that it is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute so to do, order any other person to be substituted or added as plaintiff upon such terms as may be just. Ord. XVI. r. 2, No. 124.

10. Cross Action.*

308. Semble, cross actions are still in

* (115) By the old practice as to cross causes, when one vessel had been proceeded against in a cause of collision, and the owners of the other thought they had a chance of obtaining a decree in their favour, they usually entered a cross cause, and it was agreed between the practitioners that the decision in the one case should govern the decision in the other. The Calypso, Swabey, force in the Admiralty Division. See The Leon, 6 P. D. 151.

29; 26 L. T. 206; 4 W. R. 203.

(116) But if the defendant in the first cause refrained from instituting a cross cause until after the first cause had been tried, that circumstance would not estop his right of action in the cross cause. Ibid.

(116a) The court, however, would discourage such proceedings, and withhold costs in such cases. Ibid.

309. See also Nos. 292, 293, p. 1491, and as to bail therein, notes 279—283, p. 1548.

11. Second Action.

310. Where there is a remedy both in personam and in rem a person who has resorted to one may, if he does not get thereby full satisfaction, resort to the other. Yeo v. Tatem; The Orient, L. R. 3 P. C. 696; 40 L. J. Adm. 29; 8 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 74.*

311. Plaintiff brought an action at common law and obtained judgment, but could not by reason of the defendant's bankruptcy recover the amount sued for.

Held, entitled to proceed in rem. The John and Mary, Swabey, 471; 5 Jur. N.S. 1085; The Bengal, ibid.; The Mary Caroline, 3 W. Rob. 106; The Griefswald, Swabey, 437.

312. Declaration for a collision at sea. Plea of judgment recovered in rem in the Admiralty Court, and execution levied by defendants' vessel being sold. Demurrer and replication that the damages exceeded the amount recovered in the Court of Admiralty by sale of the vessel there. Held, that the plea was bad, and that the plaintiff was entitled to proceed for the surplus. Nelson and Others v. Couch and Others, 2 N. R. 395.†

313. Where, in an action in rem the res is insufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, the plaintiff may institute another

(117) Sometimes the defendant in the cross action, if a foreigner, abstained from appearance in that action, and in that case the court considered it had no power to stay proceedings in the principal action in which the foreigner was plaintiff, until he had entered an appearance in the cross action. The Seringapatam, 3 W. Rob. 41, n.; 6 Notes of Cases, 164; 12 Jur. 281; The Heart of Oak, 29 L. J. Adm. 78; The Carlyle, 30 L. T. 278; 6 W. R. 197; The North American and The Tecla Carmen, 1 Lushington, 79; 5 Jur. N.S. 659; The Emily, 33 L. T. 80. [IRISH.] See also The North American, Swabey, 466.

(118) But in a case of that kind, after judgment, and when both vessels had been held to blame, the court directed the amount of damages due to the plaintiff to be paid into court, and not to be paid out till the foreigner consented to a deduction in respect of the damage done to the British ship. The Seringapatam, supra.

(119) To remedy these defects it was enacted that, if in the principal cause the ship of the defendant had been arrested or security given by him to answer judgment, and in the cross cause the ship of the plaintiff could not be arrested and security had not been given, the court might suspend the proceedings in the principal cause until security had been given to answer judgment in the cross cause. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34; and the Rules and Orders of Nov. 1859, No. 171, now annulled, allowed of service of process in the cross cause on the solicitor of the plaintiff in the principal action.

(120) The act above referred to further provided (see sect. 34) that the court might direct that the principal cause and the cross cause be heard at the same time and upon the same evidence.

(121) The effect of sub-sect. 3 of sect. 24 of the Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), and Ord. XIX. r. 3, No. 199, allowing counter-claims, and of the decision in McGowan v. Middleton, No. 292a, supra, is to render cross causes unnecessary.

(122) Since the Judicature Acts, but before the Rules and Orders of 1859 were annulled by R. S. C. of 1883, in a case in which two ships, the M. and P., came into collision, in consequence of which the P. sank, an action in rem was brought by the owners of the P. against the M., and bail given. A cross action by the owners of the M. against the owners of the P. was then commenced, and writ of summons therein served upon the solicitor of the owners of the P. in the action in rem. Seamble, this procedure would have been allowed had not the cross cause been instituted after notice of withdrawal of the action in rem. The Pomerania, 4 P. D. 195; 48 L. J. P. D. 55.

* (123) But it was formerly held that when bail had once been given in an action for damages, and the ship released, the party proceeding must be content to abide by the sum which such bail would cover, and that he could not enter a fresh action for any further sum. The Kalamazoo, 18 L. T. 66; 15 Jur. 885.

(124) An arrestment of a ship on the dependence of an action of reduction of a vendition, was loosed on caution for £300, and subsequently the same party raised another reduction of the vendition as trustee for the creditors of the grantor, and again arrested the ship, and the actions were conjoined. The court refused to pass a bill for loosing the second arrestment, unless caution should be found in addition to that found in the first loosing. Ballintin v. Cannon, Nov. 14, 1848; 11 D. 26; 20 Jur. 583. [SCOTCH.]

† (125) The vessel was much damaged by the collision, and her value in her damaged state only could be recovered in the Admiralty, whereas by the statute the parties were entitled to her value immediately before the collision.

action in the Admiralty Court in personam. The Pet, 3 Asp. 244.

314. Quare, whether a separate action is necessary? Ibid.*

315. To render a master, also part owner, responsible for damage by collision committed with his privity, he must be sued as master in the first instance, and such a proceeding cannot be grafted on an action for collision in rem. The Volant, 1 W. Rob. 385; The Hope, Ibid. 154; Wilson v. Dickson, 2 B. & A. 2, overruling The Triune, 3 Hagg. 115.

316. See also as to privity of master and owners as affecting their right to limit their liability, tit. OWNERS, Pt. VI. p. 1346.

317. A damage cause was instituted in the Court of Admiralty against a vessel and bail was given, and the ship released. The claim of the plaintiff, after investigation and judgment, proved to be beyond the amount of bail, and the defendants were foreigners. The same vessel was arrested in another cause in the same court, and therein the ship was sold, and the proceeds paid into court. A large surplus remained in court after satisfying the claim of the plaintiff in the second cause. On application by the plaintiffs in the first cause, opposed by the foreign owners, to be paid the balance due to them beyond the amount of bail out of the surplus proceeds, held, that such proceeds were as free from the lien of the plaintiffs in the first cause as the vessel itself was after bail and release, and that the court had no authority under the 15th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), to direct such proceeds to be paid to the plaintiff in the first cause as a judgment creditor. The Wild Ranger, 2 N. R. 402.

318. In a collision action a deposit of £200 to answer costs was made by the party subsequently found in fault. The proceeds of the sale of the ship were also brought into the registry, and these proved to be more than sufficient to pay the damages to the shipowner, with costs. Held, that the £200 must be returned to the wrong-doer, and could not be claimed by the owner of the cargo on board the damaged vessel. The Baldur, Nov. 4, 1853.

319. In an action for damage brought by the master and sole owner of a foreign vessel, motion for security for costs to be given by him granted, notwithstanding that his vessel had been arrested under a decree of the court in an action for necessities, the court holding that its power over the vessel in the second action would not enable it to apply its process to enforce payment of the costs of the first action if necessary. The Sophie, 1 W. Rob. 327.

12. Joinder of Causes of Action.†

320. Subject as therein mentioned, the plaintiff may unite in the same action several causes of action. See Ord. XVIII. rr. 1—5, 7, 9, Nos. 188—192, 194, 196.‡

* (126) It would seem that proceedings in the Admiralty might be at the same time both in rem and in personam. In Marriott's Formulary, 328, the precedent of a warrant of arrest in a cause of wages against the ship contains a further command to arrest the master also.

5. Precedence of Actions.*

331. Where a writ is issued by each party the action in which the practitioner is first in issuing the writ and first in telegraphing notice thereof to the defendant is generally held entitled to precedence, even though the second writ is that which is first actually served. The Mary and The Violet, 26 March, 1881, and The Fairy and The Fervent, 23 Nov. 1881.

See also No. 330b, supra.

* (133) The central office, when requested to do so, will mark on the writ the hour and minute at which it is issued.

(133a) Two writs were issued almost at the same time, the numbers being consecutive. There being nothing but the consecutive numbers to distinguish the priority, the registrar gave the precedence to the action in which the writ issued had the earlier number. The Newburn and The Glendale, Oct. 1885.

6. Parties.

1. Generally.*

332. As to the construction of the terms "plaintiff," "petitioner," "defendant," and "party," see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 100; and as to the construction of the term "person" in the Rules of 1883, see Ord. LXXI. r. 1, No. 1041.

2. Prior Petens.

333. When a bottomry bondholder has obtained in proceedings by default a decree of sale of a ship and cargo, the bond must be taken to be prima facie valid, and the bondholder is entitled to put any subsequent claimant on proof of his interest before he, the bondholder, can be called on to defend his own claim. The India, 1 Lushington, 185; 11 W. R. 536; 32 L. J. N.S. Adm. 185; 9 Jur. N.S. 417; 1 Asp. 390; 9 L. T. N.S. 234†; but see The Markland, L. R. 3 A. & E. 340; 24 L. T. 596.

See also tit. LIENS, c. 3, p. 812.

334. As to precedence of actions, see c. 5, supra.

3. Plaintiffs.

335. All persons may be joined as plaintiffs in whom the right to any relief claimed is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative. And judgment may be given for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to, without any amendment. But the defendant, though unsuccessful, shall be entitled to his costs occasioned by so joining any person who shall not be found entitled to relief, unless the court or a judge in disposing of the costs shall otherwise direct. Ord. XVI. r. 1, No. 123.

336. Any application to add or strike out or substitute a plaintiff or defendant may be made to the court or a judge at any time before trial by motion or summons, or at the trial of the action in a summary manner. Ibid. r. 12, No. 134.

337. In a cause of collision instituted by the bailees of a barge against a steamer, held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue in rem in the Admiralty Court; but the court directed that the money awarded as compensation for the damage should not be paid until it should be satisfactorily established that such payment would release the defendants from all claims by the owners of the barge.. The Minna, L. R. 2 A. & E. 97.

338. A cause of damage was instituted in the name of a party not the registered owner. Motion by the defendants to be dismissed, after damage pronounced for and the accounts referred, rejected. The Ilos, Swabey, 100.

339. But the court stated that if after the amount of the damage had been ascertained any doubt arose as to who was entitled to receive the money, it would direct the amount to be paid into the registry, and throw on the claimant the burthen of establishing his ownership by competent proof. Ibid.

340. As to plaintiffs when underwriters suing in owners' names, see s. 15, p. 1504.

340a. As to amendment of action as to plaintiff, see c. 4, s. 9 (b), p. 1494.

4. Defendants.†

341. All persons may be joined as defendants against whom the right to any relief is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative. And judgment may be given against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable, according to their respective liabilities, without any amendment. Ord. XVI. r. 4, No. 126.

342. In a cause of possession, where an account was also claimed against the managing owner, who failed to appear, the court directed that he should be joined as a defendant under Ord. XVI. r. 3 (now larly to join in one action for the recovery of damages; but this rule is made for the benefit of the wrongdoer, who must avail himself of it at the very beginning of the cause. In case of the death of any part owner after such injury received, the right of action survives to the surviving part owners, who must afterwards pay to the representatives of the deceased part owner the value of his share. *Abb. r. 4, No. 126), so that his accounts might be inquired into. The Native Pearl, 3 Asp. N.S. 514.

343. It shall not be necessary that every defendant shall be interested as to all the relief prayed for, or as to every cause of action included in any proceeding against him; but the court or a judge may make such order as may appear just to prevent any defendant from being embarrassed or put to expense by being required to attend any proceedings in which he may have no interest. Ord. XVI. r. 5, No. 127.

344. The plaintiff may, at his option, join as parties to the same action all or any of the persons severally, or jointly and severally, liable on any one contract, including parties to bills of exchange and promissory notes. Ibid. r. 6, No. 128.

345. When the plaintiff is in doubt as to the person from whom he is entitled to redress, he may, in such manner as hereinafter mentioned, or as may be prescribed by any special order, join two or more defendants, to the intent that the question as to which, if any, of the defendants is liable, and to what extent, may be determined as between all parties. Ibid. r. 7, No. 129.

346. Where a defendant is added or substituted, the plaintiff shall, unless otherwise ordered by the court or a judge, file an amended copy of and sue out a writ of summons, and serve such new defendant with such writ or notice in lieu of service thereof in the same manner as original defendants are served. Ibid. r. 13, No. 135.

346a. Plaintiffs commenced an action in rem, under Lord Campbell's Act, on 4th Jan. 1884, in respect of loss of life by collision at sea, occurring on 10th Jan. 1883. After 10th Jan. 1884 (it having been decided in the interim by the Court of Appeal that the Admiralty Court had no jurisdiction in such actions), the plaintiffs applied to add as defendants the owners of the wrong-doing ship. Application refused, because, under Ord. XVI. r. 11, No. 133, proceedings against the parties proposed to be added would be deemed to have commenced from the date of service upon them of the writ of summons, and hence the action would not have been commenced against them within the time provided by Lord Campbell's Act, and because the court had no power to add parties as defendants in personam in an action in rem, and because the order ought not to be made merely on the ground that the objection as to time was an objection which ought strictly to be taken at a later period. The Bowesfield, 5 Asp. 265.

5. Joinder of—

347. No cause or matter shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or non-joinder of parties, and the court may in every cause or matter deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it. The court or a judge may, at any stage of the proceedings, either upon or without the application of either party, and on such terms as may appear to the court or a judge to be just, order that the names of any parties improperly joined, whether as plaintiffs or as defendants, be struck out, and that the names of any parties, whether plaintiffs or defendants, who ought to have been joined, or whose presence before the court may be necessary in order to enable the court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the cause or matter, be added. No person shall be added as a plaintiff suing without a next friend, or as the next friend of a plaintiff under any disability, without his own consent in writing thereto. Every party whose name is so added as defendant shall be served with a writ of summons or notice in manner hereinafter mentioned, or in such manner as may be prescribed by any special order, and the proceedings, as against such party, shall be deemed to have begun only on the service of such writ or notice. Ord. XVI. r. 11, No. 133.

348. The consent which Ord. XVI. r. 13, of 1875 (now r. 11, No. 133), required from a person proposed to be added as plaintiff need not be in writing; it is sufficient if the solicitor for the existing plaintiff consents on behalf of the new plaintiff, the solicitor taking the usual responsibility of using a plaintiff's name. Cox v. James, 19 Ch. D. 55.

349. As to joinder of plaintiffs, see sect. 3, supra. As to joinder of defendants, see sect. 4, supra. As to joinder of third parties, see sect. 6 (a), infra. As to joinder of parties on marriage, death, bankruptcy, &c., see sect. 6 (c), infra.

350. As to joinder of causes of action, see c. 4, s. 12, p. 1496; and as to joinder of parties in an action in rem, see No. 346a, supra.

350a. As to costs in connection with joinder of parties, see tit. Cosrs, c. 10, p. 349.

6. Third Parties.*

(a) Generally.

351. Where a defendant claims to be entitled to contribution, or indemnity over against any person not a party to the action, he may, by leave of the court or a judge, issue a notice (hereinafter called the third-party notice) to that effect, stamped with the seal with which writs of summons are sealed. A copy of such notice shall be filed with the proper officer and served on such person according to the rules relating to the service of writs of summons. The notice shall state the nature and grounds of the claim, and shall, unless otherwise ordered by the court or a judge, be served within the time limited for delivering his defence. Such notice may be in the form or to the effect of the Form No. 1 in Appendix B., with such variations as circumstances may require, and therewith shall be served a copy of the statement of claim, or if there be no statement of claim, then a copy of the writ of summons in the action. Ord. XVI. r. 48, No. 170.

352. To be entitled to indemnity within the meaning of this rule there must be a contract to indemnify. Speller v. Bristol Steam Navigation Co., 13 Q. B. D. (C.A.) 96.

353. An application by the defendant in an action for leave to serve a third-party notice under Ord. XVI. r. 18 (now r. 48, No. 170), ought to be made on notice to the plaintiff, and not ex parte. Wye Valley Rail. Co. v. Hawes, 16 Ch. D. 489.

354. Where the defendant by his defence sets up any counter-claim which raises questions between himself and the plaintiff along with any other person not a party to the action, this person shall be summoned to appear by being served with a copy of the defence, and such service shall be regulated by the same rules as are therein contained with respect to the service of a writ of summons, and every defence so served shall be indorsed in the Form No. 2 in Appendix B., or to the like effect. See Ord. XXI. r. 12, No. 245.

355. As to the appearance of such third party, see c. 13, p. 1534.

356. The court or a judge may require any person to be made a party to any action or proceeding. See Ord. XVI. r. 39, No. 161.

357. The position of the defendant in the original action is the same whether a third party is cited or not. (C. A.) The Cartsburn, 4 Asp. 202.

358. In an action for damages by collision, brought by the owners of a vessel at anchor against a vessel in tow of a tug, the owners of the tug were made third parties under Ord. XVI. r. 18 (now r. 48, No. 170), as the defendants claimed to be indemnified by the owners of the tug against the plaintiffs' claim, on the ground that the improper navigation, if any, was that of the tug. The Bianca, 8 P. D. 91; 5 Asp. 60; The Cartsburn, 5 P. D. 35; 49 L. J. P. D. 14; 28 W. R. 378.

359. As to the joinder of parties, see s. 5, supra.

360. As to the joinder of plaintiffs, see s. 3, supra.

361. As to the joinder of defendants, see s. 4, supra.

362. As to the appearance of third parties, and the effect of their non-appearance, see c. 13, s. 7, p. 1534.

363. As to further proceedings by and against third parties, see c. 21, p. 1560.

(b) Interveners before the Judicature Acts and Rules.†

364. An interest to establish a persona standi in judicio is not an absolute right to a given sum of money; but if a person may be injured by a decree in a suit, he has a right to be heard as against the decree; although it may eventually turn out that he can derive no pecuniary benefit from the result of the suit itself. The Dowthorpe, 2 W. Rob. 77.

365. The practice of the court has been liberal in allowing parties to intervene

* (136) As to third parties to actions, see Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules (4th ed.), pp. 233 et seq.; and Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, p. 416.

† (137) Any person claiming an interest in a vessel libelled for a forfeiture may intervene, and make himself a party to the cause, and contest the forfeiture so far as the decree will be conclusive on his rights. The Mary Anne, Ware, 104. [AMERICAN.]

who can show any interest whatever in the result of a suit. The Two Ellens, L. R. 3 A. & E. 345; 40 L. J. Adm. 11; 1 Asp. N.S. 40; The Repulse, 5 Notes of Cases, 351.

366. Question of compulsory pilotage in a cause of damage arising out of a collision on the river Ouse within the pilotage jurisdiction of the Trinity House of Kingston-upon-Hull. Application on behalf of the corporation of the Hull Trinity House for leave to intervene in the cause refused, the court observing that there was no precedent for it, and that it would not make one except under pressing necessity, being very reluctant to multiply parties to a suit on account of the additional expense, and that it was probable that the interests of the corporation being similar to those of the defendant, they would be duly cared for by him. The Killarney, 1 Lushington, 435.

367. In a case of seizure for alleged traffic in slaves, the shippers of the cargo and a party claiming the cargo not cited admitted by the appellate court to intervene in the appeal promoted by the owners of the vessel against the sentence of condemnation. The Newport, 11 Moore, P. C. C. 516.

368. Bond on ship, freight, and cargo, ship and freight insufficient to pay it. Action by seamen against ship and freight for wages. The owners of the cargo were allowed to appear and defend, because they had an interest in the administration of the fund. The Union, 3 L. T. N.S. 280; 30 L. J. Adm. 17; 1 Lushington, 128.

369. Semble, in a cause of mortgage the assignee in bankruptcy of the registered owners of the vessel may intervene without first obtaining leave. The Heart of Oak, 39 L. J. Adm. 15; 3 Asp. 317.

370. An unregistered transferee of a mortgage of a ship might intervene in a suit against the ship for necessaries. The Two Ellens, 40 L. J. Adm. 11; L. R. 3 A. & E. 345.

371. Cause of necessaries brought by A. against a ship which, after the supply of necessaries, was sold by her then owner D. to Y. Application by D. to be allowed to appear in the suit instead of Y., who had appeared, Y. consenting, but A. objecting, refused, but D. allowed to appear and give bail, Y. remaining a party to the suit. The Princess Charlotte, No. 969, December 17, 1861.

372. Where a vessel had been found to blame in a cause of collision, her owners were allowed to intervene in a salvage suit instituted against the injured vessel, and the court gave them the conduct of the defence on their furnishing bail in lieu of that furnished by the vessel proceeded against. The Diana, 2 Asp. N.S. 366.

(c) On Marriage, Death, Bankruptcy, &c.

373. In case of the marriage, death or bankruptcy, or devolution of estate by operation of law, of any party to a cause or matter, the court or a judge may, if it be deemed necessary for the complete settlement of all the questions involved, order that the husband, personal representative, trustee, or other successor in interest, if any, of such party be made a party, or be served with notice in such manner and form as hereinafter prescribed, and on such terms as the court or judge shall think just, and shall make such order for the disposal of the cause or matter as may be just. Ord. XVII. r. 2, No. 179.

374. Where by reason of marriage, death, or bankruptcy, or any other event occurring after the commencement of a cause or matter, and causing a change or transmission of interest or liability, or by reason of any person interested coming into existence after the commencement of the cause or matter, it becomes necessary or desirable that any person not already a party should be made a party, or that any person already a party should be made a party in another capacity, an order that the proceedings shall be carried on between the continuing parties, and such new party or parties, may be obtained ex parte on application to the court or a judge, upon an allegation of such change or transmission of interest or liability, or of such person interested having come into existence. Ibid. r. 4, No. 181.

8. Corporations and Companies.*

9. Co-partners.†

376. Any two or more persons claiming or being liable as co-partners may sue or be sued in the name of the respective firms, if any, of which such persons were co-partners at the time of the accruing of the cause of action; and any party to an action may in such case apply by summons to a judge for a statement of the names of the persons who were, at the time of the accruing of the cause of action, co-partners in any such firm, to be furnished in such manner, and verified on oath or otherwise, as the judge may direct. Provided that, in the case of a co-partnership which has been dissolved, to the knowledge of the plaintiff, before the commencement of the action, the writ of summons shall be served upon every person sought to be made liable. Ord. XVI. r. 14, No. 136.

377. Any person carrying on business in the name of a firm apparently consisting of more than one person may be sued in the name of such firm. Ibid. r. 15, No. 137.

378. The objection that a partner cannot sue his co-partners is a technical objection, and in a case in which the proceedings are in rem, the rule does not apply that the rest of the partners cannot recover as against the ship, partly owned by one of them. The West Friesland, Swabey, 454; 5 Jur. N.S. 659.

379. A partner may arrest the ship (the property of himself and co-partner) in a suit for necessities. Ibid. Swabey, 495; 5 Jur. N.S. 658.

10. Several with one Interest.

380. Where there are numerous persons having the same interest in one cause or matter, one or more of such persons may sue or be sued, or may be authorized by the court or a judge to defend in such cause or matter, on behalf or for the benefit of all persons so interested. Ord. XVI. r. 9, No. 131.

11. Trustees, Executors and Administrators.‡

381. Trustees, executors, and administrators may sue and be sued on behalf of or as representing the property or estate of which they are trustees or representatives, without joining any of the persons beneficially interested in the trust or estate, and shall be considered as representing such persons; but the court or a judge may, at any stage of the proceedings, order any of such persons to be made parties either in addition to or in lieu of the previously-existing parties. Ibid. r. 8, No. 130.

12. Assignees.

382. For provisions that an assignment in writing by the assignor (not purporting to be by way of charge only) of any debt or other legal chose in action, of which express notice in writing has been given to the debtor, trustee, or other person from whom it is payable, shall be effectual in law (subject to all equities in priority) to transfer the legal right and remedies from the date of the notice, with power to the party to pay, to call on the assignor or any one claiming under him, to interplead, and with power to pay the amount into the High Court of Justice, under the provisions of the acts for the relief of trustees. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25, sub-s. 6.

383. Semble, in a cause of mortgage the assignee in bankruptcy of the registered owner of the vessel may intervene without first obtaining leave. The Heart of Oak, 39 L. J. Adm. 15; 3 Asp. 317.

384. Assignees of a bankrupt shipowner have a persona standi to appear for the benefit of the general estate, and contest the appropriation of the proceeds of the ship, against the assignees of the freight seeking to make the ship alone liable in the first instance, and this notwithstanding the shipowner had, prior to his bankruptcy, assigned his interest in the ship to other parties not before the court, as a security for money advanced. The Donothorpe, 2 W. Rob. 73.

385. Question as to the appropriation of the proceeds of ship and freight in satisfaction of outstanding judgments against them for bottomry, wages, pilotage, &c., where a part owner had become a bankrupt, but had previously assigned to one party his interest in the ship, and to another party his interest in the freight, of whom the assignees under his bankruptcy and the assignees of the freight were before the court, and the other part owner, who was alleged also to have become a bankrupt, was not before the court. The court entered into an investigation of the relative claims of the parties, and apportioned the proceeds among them accordingly, in lieu of compelling them to have recourse to a court of equity to define the relative proportions due to them. Ibid. 2 W. Rob. 73, 86.

386. Assignees are not bound to act with the same degree of liberality as the owner himself. As trustees for creditors, they are not at liberty to submit to demands which may appear at all questionable, but must take the best means in their power to render the estate of the bankrupt as beneficial as possible to the persons with the care of whose interests they are intrusted. The Alexander, 1 Dodson, 278.

387. Assignees are in no better situation in opposing a bottomry bond than owners where there is no bankruptcy. The St. Catherine, 3 Hagg. 253.

388. Semble, a power of attorney to sell a ship is not so revoked by a decree of the grantor's insolvency in a colonial possession as to invalidate a bonâ fide exercise of the power before notice of insolvency. The Margaret Mitchell, Swabey, 382; 4 Jur. N.S. 1194.

389. In the Prize Court restitution had passed in solidum of three-fourths of the property claimed to an American house of trade. Afterwards it appeared that one of the parties was an English merchant and a bankrupt. His assignees prayed a severance of his particular share to be paid to them as his representatives for the benefit of his creditors. Application refused. The Jefferson, 1 C. Rob. 325.

390. In a suit instituted under the 4th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, for building and equipping a vessel, the defendants pleaded that the alleged causes of action became vested in a trustee for the plaintiffs' creditors under a composition deed. The plaintiffs in reply alleged that they assigned the causes of action prior to the execution of the deed, and that they were suing as trustees for their assignees. Held, that they might sue as trustees, although they had, but subsequently to the assignment, executed the composition deed. Held, also, that though the assignment of the causes of action was prior to the arrest of the vessel and the institution of the suit, it carried with it the inchoate right to proceed against the vessel. The Wasp, L. R. 1 A. & E. 367; 2 Asp. 552.

13. Charterers.

391. See No. 432, p. 1507.

14. Mortgagees.

392. An unregistered transferee of a registered mortgage has sufficient interest to intervene in a suit instituted against the vessel mortgaged. The Tico Ellens, L. R. 3 A. & E. 345; 40 L. J. Adm. 11; 1 Asp. N.S. 40.

392a. Mortgagees in possession of a ship are in no better position than the owners with regard to the claims of the master. The Caledonia, Swabey, 17; 20 Jur. 48; 26 L. T. 177; 4 W. R. 183.

393. The court will investigate the master's account where a mortgagee is defendant, in the same manner as if the owner were defendant. The Julindur, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 75.

394. A master who was also co-mortgagee, brought an action for his wages in the Admiralty Court, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, the original owner being a bankrupt. The other mortgagee, who was in possession of the vessel, was allowed to appear in that action, and besides the wages the whole accounts between the mortgagees were investigated and settled. The Repulse, 4 Notes of Cases, 172; 5 Ibid. 348; 2 W. Rob. 40.

395. A party who repaired at a remote port, with the sanction of the owners, a vessel disabled at sea, arrested it for the price, and brought it to a judicial sale. Held, that mortgagees who had sustained no actual loss had no legal title or interest to challenge the proceedings. Elias v. Black, 18 Court of Session Cases, 1225. [SCOTCH.]

396. A foreign agent specially authorized, collected the gross freight, and thereout remitted a sum larger than the amount of the net freight. Expenses in respect of the outward voyage, e.g. discharging expenses and compensation to consignees for short delivery of cargo, then became payable. The agent advanced sums for these and other debts against the ship, and for repayment took a bottomry bond on ship and freight. Held, that the mortgagees, not in possession of the ship when the bond was given, had no right to object to such items in the bond. The Edmond, 1 Lushington, 63; 2 L. T. N.S. 129; 29 L. J. Adm. 76.

397. Quære, whether the ship having been sold, the proceeds being insufficient to pay the mortgages thereon, and the owner being a bankrupt, a principal mortgagee has a sufficient interest to oppose a mariner's claim for wages? The Prince George, 3 Hagg. 377, 380.

398. The title of mortgagees is, in questions of bottomry and similar cases, equivalent to that of the owners. The Mary Ann, 10 Jur. 255.

399. In an action against ship and freight for master's wages, the mortgagee in possession is entitled to a release of the ship upon giving bail, notwithstanding the master has become liable in respect of bills of exchange, drawn upon the charterers for the ship's use. The Ringdove, Swabey, 310; but see tit. MASTERS, p. 1126, Nos. 105—112.

400. A master is not debarred from suing for his wages under the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, upon the ground that he was a co-mortgagee of the vessel at the time. The Repulse, 2 W. Rob. 240.

401. Semble, that prior to 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, a mortgagee, though he could not have initiated a suit in the Court of Admiralty, might yet have intervened for the protection of his interest. The Douthorpe, 2 W. Rob. 83.

15. Underwriters.

402. An underwriter must, in a cause of damage, sue in the name of the owner. The John Bellamy, L. R. 3 A. & E. 129; 3 Asp. 360.*

403. A collision having occurred between the vessels B. and E., whereby the E.'s cargo was lost, a suit was instituted against the B. by the plaintiffs, who described themselves as the owners of the cargo ex E. The B. having been held to blame, a reference to the registrar was directed. At the reference it appeared that the plaintiffs were underwriters, who had paid the shippers as on a total loss. The plaintiffs produced the bills of lading and invoices of the cargo. Held, that the defendants were entitled to evidence of a discharge from the owners of the cargo before the registrar proceeded to make his report. Ibid.

404. Quære, is a shipper of goods acting within the ordinary scope of his authority as agent for the owner in insuring such goods? Ibid.

405. Underwriters can assert any right which the owner of the ship insured might have asserted against a wrongdoer for damages for the act which has caused the loss. But this right of action for damages they must assert, not in their own name, but in the name of the person insured; and if the person insured be the person who has caused the damage, the underwriters are unable to recover. Simpson v. Thomson, 3 App. Cas. H. L. 279; 3 Asp. N.S. 567. [SCOTCH.]

406. A steamer ran into and sank another vessel belonging to the same owner. The owner admitted his liability, and petitioned for limitation of liability. Claims having been lodged by the underwriters who had insured the lost vessel, and by the owners of cargo therein, against the fund to be distributed, held, by the House of Lords, reversing the judgment of the Court of Session, that inasmuch as the underwriters could have had no claim against the shipowner, they had no claim upon the fund to be distributed. Ibid.; 38 L. T. 1; sub nom. Burrell v. Simpson, Cases in the Court of Session, 4th Series, vol. 4, p. 177. [SCOTCH.]

407. In an action of damage by collision, it was proved that the underwriters on the vessel damaged had paid to the pursuers a sum in respect of the damage, but had also executed a deed of assignation to the pursuers of all their (the underwriters) rights against the defenders. The defenders being found in default, held, that they were liable to pay the pursuers the full amount of the damage. Morison v. Bartolomeo, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, vol. 5, p. 848. [SCOTCH.]

409. The result of abandonment is that all incidents to the thing abandoned pass with it. Thus, claims on account of collision pass to the underwriters, who may commence an action in the name of the assured. Yates v. Whyte, 4 Bing. N. C. 272; 5 Scott, 640.

410. As to the title of underwriters generally, see The Kennerley Castle, 3 Hagg. 6.

411. A ship was arrested in a cause of damage to cargo. The underwriters on the ship were willing to accept an abandonment, but the owners had not abandoned. The underwriters caused an appearance in the cause to be entered on behalf of the owners of the ship, who subsequently appeared by another proctor, and repudiated the underwriters' proceedings. The court refused to permit the underwriters to proceed further in the cause on behalf of the owners. The Bahia, No. 1661, 5th May, 1863.

412. A's ship damaged B's. B., after he had received a sum of money under a policy which he had effected on his ship, brought an action against A., and recovered damages for the injury done to his ship. Held, that the underwriter had a lien on the amount recovered for the sum paid on the policy. White v. Dobinson, 14 Sim. 273; and see Randal v. Cochran, 7 Ves. sen. 98.

413. There is no independent right in underwriters to maintain in their own name, and without reference to the person insured, an action for damage to the thing insured. Simpson v. Thomson, 3 App. Cas. 279.*

414. As to the priority of underwriters and other's liens, see tit. LIENS, p. 831.

16. Minors, Lunatics, and Married Women.†

415. Infants may sue as plaintiffs by their next friends, in the manner heretofore practised in the Chancery Division, and may, in like manner, defend by their guardians appointed for that purpose. Married women may sue and be sued as provided by the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), and Ord. XVI. r. 16, No. 138.

418. Where lunatics and persons of unsound mind not so found by inquisition might respectively before the passing of the principal act have sued as plaintiffs, or would have been liable to be sued as defendants in any action or suit, they conduct of the cause at any time except when the principal is guilty of fraud, or there is collusion between him and the adverse party, when the sureties are entitled to apply to the court, alleging such fraud or collusion. The Harriett, foreign ambassador on behalf of the subjects of his country, who afterwards make a similar application for themselves, are by such intervention substantiated; and any formal objections to the proceedings, on the ground of the authority of the ambassador, removed. The Hercules, 2 or matter it appears to the court that any deceased person who was interested in the matter has no legal personal representative, the court may proceed in the absence of any person representing his estate, or may appoint some person to represent his estate for the purposes of the cause or matter, on such notice as the court shall think fit, and that any order so made shall bind the estate, see vanced to them by persons who take as security an assignment of a policy of insurance on the freight and a bill of lading signed by the master and indorsed by him, with a receipt for a sum of money on account of freight named in the bill of lading, and the ship is run down and sunk by the negligence of another vessel,

Law Procedure Act, 1852, a foreign corporation could not have been sued unless it had a place of business in this country; but when an order for service out of the jurisdiction has been obtained, it may now be sued, although it has no place of business here. See Charley's Practice and Pleading under the Judicature Acts, 3rd ed. p. 417, and the cases therein cited.

429. In an action for damage by collision the jury found for the pursuers, and assessed the damages at £566. They also specially found that the pursuers had received from the underwriters the sum of £350 in respect of the damage sustained. On the pursuers producing a deed of assignation to them by the underwriters of all their rights against the defenders, held, that as the assignation enabled the defenders to get a good discharge from all claims against them they were liable to pay the whole £566 to the pursuers. Morison v. Bartolomco, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, vol. 5, p. 848. [SCOTCH.]

24. In Salvage Actions.

431. Every dispute with respect to salvage may be heard and adjudicated upon on the application either of the salvor or of the owner of the property salvaged, or of their respective agents. M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 460.

431a. If a part owner of a salvaging vessel has an interest in the vessel salvaged, his co-owners, master and crew of the salvaging vessel may sue for salvage, the sum to which they are entitled being computed by deducting from the value of the entire service the share which would have been due to such part owner if he could have joined. The Caroline, 5 L. T. N.S. 89; 1 Lushington, 334.

432. The owner of a salvaging vessel is not an unfit person to originate a suit for salvage. The Haidee, 1 Notes of Cases, 598.

432a. A charterer of a vessel upon such terms as to constitute him pro hac vice owner, is entitled to be plaintiff of the vessel in a salvage action and to the owner's share of the salvage award, to the exclusion of the general owner of the vessel. The Scout, L. R. 3 A. & E. 512; 41 L. J. Adm. 42.

433. In a suit for salvage, which had been instituted in the name of the owners and others of the asserted salvaging vessel, and in which suit the asserted salvors had been condemned in costs, a monition for payment of costs having been served on such owner, an application for an attachment against him for disobedience thereto, opposed by the owner, alleging that the suit had been instituted without his authority, acquiescence, or privity, rejected, and the owner dismissed. The Wilhelmine, 2 Notes of Cases, 19.

434. Whenever any articles belonging to or forming part of any foreign ship which has been wrecked on or near the coasts of the United Kingdom, or belonging to or forming part of the cargo thereof, are found on or near such coasts, or are brought into any port in the United Kingdom, the consul-general of the country to which such ship, or, in the case of cargo, to which the owners of such cargo may have belonged, or any consular officer of such country authorized in that behalf by any treaty or agreement with such country, shall in the absence of the owner of such ship or articles, and of the master or other agent of the owner, be deemed to be the agent of the owner, so far as relates to the custody and disposal of such articles. 438. No person shall be permitted to sue as a pauper unless the case laid before counsel for his opinion, and his opinion thereon, with an affidavit of the party, or his solicitor, that the case contains a full and true statement of all the material facts to the best of his knowledge and belief, shall be produced before the court or judge or proper officer to whom the application is made, and no fee shall be payable by a pauper to his counsel or solicitor. Ibid. r. 24, No. 146.

439. A person admitted to sue or defend as a pauper shall not be liable to any court fee. Ibid. r. 25, No. 147.

440. Where a person is admitted to sue or defend as a pauper the court or a judge may, if necessary, assign a counsel or solicitor, or both, to assist him, and a counsel or solicitor so assigned shall not be at liberty to refuse his assistance unless he satisfies the court or judge that he has some good reason for refusing. Ibid. r. 26, No. 148.

441. Whilst a person sues or defends as a pauper no person shall take, or agree to take, or seek to obtain from him any fee, profit, or reward, for the conduct of his business in the court, and any person who takes, or agrees to take, or seeks to obtain any such fee, profit, or reward shall be guilty of a contempt of court. Ibid. r. 27, No. 149.

442. If any person admitted to sue or defend as a pauper gives, or agrees to give, any such fee, profit, or reward, he shall be forthwith dispaupered, and shall not be afterwards admitted again in the same cause to sue or defend as a pauper. Ibid. r. 28, No. 150.

443. No notice of motion shall be served or summons issued, and no petition shall be presented, on behalf of any person admitted to sue or defend as a pauper, except for the discharge of his solicitor, unless it is signed by his solicitor. Ibid. r. 29, No. 151.

444. It shall be the duty of the solicitor assigned to a person admitted to sue or defend as a pauper to take care that no notice is served, or summons issued, or petition presented, without good cause. Ibid. r. 30, No. 152.

445. Costs ordered to be paid to a person admitted to sue or defend as a pauper shall, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise direct, be taxed as in other cases. Ibid. r. 31, No. 153.

446. See, as to costs of paupers, the observations of the Master of the Rolls in Carson v. Pickersgill, 14 Q. B. D. 859.

446a. A successful plaintiff suing in formâ pauperis, in an action tried before a judge and jury, is entitled, on taxation against the defendant, to costs out of pocket only, and cannot be allowed anything for remuneration to his solicitor, nor for fees to his counsel. Ibid.

447. The party proceeding in a cause of possession afterwards applied for and obtained leave to continue the suit in formâ pauperis, which was subsequently dismissed, and the party condemned in costs, for which he was afterwards taken on an attachment for nonpayment. An application to supersede the attachment, on the ground of its enforcing the costs whilst the party was suing in formâ pauperis, rejected. The Plym, 2 W. Rob. 345; 8 Jur. 990.

461. A shipowner, residing and carrying on business in Scotland, was described in the writ of summons for service within the jurisdiction as "of the City of London." He applied before service of the writ, and after a cross action of damage in respect of the same collision had been instituted on his behalf, that the writ should be set aside as irregular. The court refused the motion. The Helenslea The Catalonia, 7 P. D. 57; 4 Asp. 594.

465. The writ of summons shall be indorsed with a statement of the nature of the claim made, or of the relief or remedy required in the action. Ibid. r. 1, No. 3.

466. The indorsement of claim shall be made on every writ of summons before it is issued. Ord. III. r. 1, No. 11.

467. In the indorsement it is not essential to set forth the precise ground of complaint, or the precise remedy or relief to which the plaintiff considers himself entitled. Ibid. r. 2, No. 12.

468. The indorsement of claim shall be to the effect of such of the Forms in Appendix A., Part III. s. 6, as shall be applicable to the case, or, if none be found applicable, then such other similarly concise form as the nature of the case may require. Ibid. r. 3, No. 13.

469. If the plaintiff sues, or the defendant or any of the defendants is sued, in a representative capacity, the indorsement shall show, in manner appearing by such of the Forms in Appendix A., Part III. s. 7, as shall be applicable to the case, or by any other statement to the like effect, in what capacity the plaintiff or defendant sues or is sued. Ibid. r. 4, No. 14.

470. As to costs occasioned by the use of any forms of indorsements on writs, other or more prolix than the forms prescribed, see tit. Costs, c. 9, p. 349.

471. In all cases in which the plaintiff, in the first instance, desires to have an account taken, the writ of summons shall be indorsed with a claim that such account be taken. Ord. III. r. 8, No. 18.

(b) Special†

(c) Debt or Liquidated Demand.

472. Wherever the plaintiff's claim is for a debt or liquidated demand only, the indorsement, besides stating the nature of the claim, shall state the amount claimed for debt, or in respect of such demand, and for costs respectively, and shall further state, that upon payment thereof within four days after service, or in case of a writ not for service within the jurisdiction within the time allowed for appearance, further proceedings will be stayed. Such statement shall be in the form in Appendix A., Part III. s. 3. The defendant may, notwithstanding such payment, have the costs taxed, and if more than one-sixth shall be disallowed, the plaintiff's solicitor shall pay the costs of taxation. See Ord. III. r. 7, No. 17; and see Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 179.

(d) Name and Address of Plaintiff and his Solicitor.

473. In all cases where a writ of summons is issued out of the Central Office, the solicitor of a plaintiff suing by a solicitor shall indorse upon the writ and notice in lieu of service of a writ the address of the plaintiff, and also his own name or firm and place of business, and also, if his place of business shall be more than three miles from the principal entrance of the Central Hall at the Royal Courts of Justice, another proper place, to be called his address for service, which shall not be more than three miles from the principal entrance of the Central Hall at the Royal Courts of Justice, where writs, notices, pleadings, petitions, orders, summonses, warrants, and other docuin personam. For those in rem, see next section.

(164) For Admiralty writs in personam, Form No. 1, in App. A. to R. S. C. 1883, is generally used with a few slight alterations.

* (165) As to warrants for the arrest of the res, or ship to obtain bail, or the security of the ship pending the action, see cap. 11, p. 1515.

(166) It is not necessary to the proceedings that a warrant should be issued, as well as a writ; and this is so even in proceedings by default; but of course, before it becomes necessary to enforce process against the ship, it must be arrested if not already under arrest.

† (167) As to proceedings where the writ is specially indorsed, see Ord. III. r. 6, No. 16; Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 178; and Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, p. 221.

ments, proceedings, and written communications may be left for him. And where any such solicitor is only agent of another solicitor, he shall add to his own name or firm and place of business the name or firm and place of business of the principal solicitor. Ord. IV. r. 1, No. 19.

474. For similar appropriate indorsement, where the plaintiff in person obtains the writ, Ibid. r. 2, No. 20.

5. Out of Jurisdiction.*

(a) Generally.

475. A writ of summons to be served out of the jurisdiction, or of which notice is to be given out of the jurisdiction, shall be in one of the Forms Nos. 5, 6, 7 and 8 in Appendix A., Part I., with such variations as circumstances may require. Such notice shall be in one of the Forms Nos. 9 and 10 in the same Part, with such variations as circumstances may require. Ord. II. r. 5, No. 7.

476. No writ of summons for service out of the jurisdiction, or of which notice is to be given out of the jurisdiction, shall be issued without the leave of the court or a judge. Ibid. r. 4, No. 6.

477. The words "within the jurisdiction" in Ord. XI. of R. S. C. 1875, now Ord. XI. of R. S. C. 1883, mean "territorial jurisdiction." Therefore the Court of Admiralty will not issue a writ for service abroad in respect of a wrong done on the high seas. Re Smith, 1 P. D. 300; 3 Asp. N.S. 259; 45 L. J. P. D. 92; 35 L. T. 380; 24 W. R. 903; The Vivar, 2 P. D. 29; 35 L. T. 782; 25 W. R. 453.

478. A collision occurred on the high seas between an English vessel and a vessel belonging to a foreign company. An application for leave to issue a writ of summons, of which notice should be given to the company out of the jurisdiction, refused, as the collision had not occurred within the jurisdiction within the meaning of the before-mentioned order. Re Smith, ubi supra.

478a. A collision took place at sea, about ten miles from the South Stack Lighthouse, between an American and a Spanish vessel. Both vessels sank in consequence of the collision, and the owners of the American vessel applied in the registry for leave to issue a writ for service out of the jurisdiction in an action to recover compensation for the loss of their vessel against a British subject resident in Spain, who was alleged to be one of the owners of the Spanish vessel. The registrar having granted the necessary leave, the writ was issued and service was effected on the defendant in Spain. Thereupon an appearance under protest was entered on his behalf. Afterwards, on these facts being brought before the judge of the Admiralty Court, on motion, the court ordered the action to be dismissed. Held, on appeal, that the order was right. The Vivar, ubi supra.

479. The court will not issue a writ for service abroad in respect of a wrong done below low-water mark but within three miles of the shore. Harris v. Owners of the Franconia, L. R. 2 C. P. 173; 46 L. J. C. P. 363; and see Reg. v. Kehn, 2 Exch. D. 68.

480. For form of order for service out of jurisdiction, see R. S. C. 1883, Appendix K. No. 20.

481. As to concurrent writs out of the jurisdiction, see No. 495, infra.

482. As to the service of a writ of summons out of the jurisdiction, see c. 12, s. 5, p. 1525.

(b) Third Parties.†

6. From District Registry.

(a) Generally.

483. In any action (other than a Probate action), the plaintiff wherever resident may issue a writ of summons out of any district registry. Ord. V. r. 1, No. 23.

484. When an action is commenced in a district registry, the writ, besides being distinguished by the date of the year, a letter and a number, is to be further distinguished by the name of the district registry from which it is issued. Ibid. r. 13, No. 35.

* (168) As to the issue and service of writs of summons, when the defendant is out of the jurisdiction, see Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 198; and Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, p. 244.

† (169) In an action by a first mortgagee of a ship against a second mortgagee for an account, persons resident abroad and retaining the freight as against a debt due to them from the second mortgagee, may be added as defendants and served with notice of the writ out of the jurisdiction under Ord. XI. r. 1, provided the contract under which the freight is due is an English contract.—V.-C. B. McStephens & Co. v. Carnegie, 4 Asp. 215.

485. In all cases where the defendant resides or carries on business within the district, there shall be a statement on the face of the writ that the defendant do cause an appearance to be entered at the district registry. Ord. V. r. 4, No. 26.

486. In all cases where a defendant neither resides nor carries on business within the district, there shall be a statement on the face of the writ that the defendant may cause an appearance to be entered at his option either at the district registry or at the Central Office. Ibid. r. 3, No. 25.

(b) Indorsement of Name and Address of Plaintiff and his Solicitor.

487. In all cases where a writ of summons is issued out of a district registry the solicitor of a plaintiff suing by a solicitor shall indorse upon the writ, and notice in lieu of service of a writ, the address of the plaintiff, and his own name or firm and place of business, which shall, if his place of business be within the district of the registry, be an address for service, and if such place be not within the district, he shall add an address for service within the district, and, where the defendant does not reside within the district, he shall add a further address for service, which shall not be more than three miles from the principal entrance of the Central Hall at the Royal Courts of Justice; and where the solicitor issuing the writ is only agent of another solicitor, he shall add to his own name or firm and place of business the name or firm and place of business of the principal solicitor. Ord. IV. r. 3, No. 21.

488. For similar endorsement where the plaintiff in person obtains the writ from the district registry, Ibid.

488a. As to the amendment of endorsement, see next section.

7. *Amendment.

489. If a writ of summons has been lost, the filed copy may, for the purpose of amendment or otherwise, be used as a duplicate, but only by leave of a practice master, and on the party giving an underwriting to produce the original at the Central Office when found. See C. O. Prac. Rules, 1880-82, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 847.

490. As to amendment within fourteen days, when no time is mentioned in the order to amend, Ibid.

491. As to amendment of amount of claim in writ, see c. 4, Nos. 282—289, p. 1492.

492. As to service of amended writ, see c. 12, p. 1527.

493. In all the divisions an amendment of a writ of summons may be made by leave of a master (on payment of fee) before service. A plaintiff can be struck out only by special leave given in the order to amend; a defendant, by special leave, or on the written statement (to be filed) of the plaintiff's solicitors that a notice of discontinuance under Ord. XXIII. (now Ord. XXVI.) has been duly given. See C. O. Prac. Rules, 1880-82, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 846.

8. Concurrent.

(a) Generally.

494. The plaintiff in any action may, at the time of, or at any time during twelve months after the issuing of the original writ of summons, issue one or more concurrent writ or writs, each concurrent writ to bear teste of the same day as the original writ, and to be marked with a seal bearing the word "concurrent," and the date of issuing the concurrent writ; and such seal shall be impressed upon the writ by the proper officer: provided always, that such concurrent writ or writs shall only be in force for the period during which the original writ in such action shall be in force. Ord. VI. r. 1, No. 40.

(b) Within and without the Jurisdiction.

495. A writ for service within the jurisdiction may be issued and marked as a concurrent writ with one for service, or whereof notice in lieu of service is to be given, out of the jurisdiction; and a writ for service, or whereof notice in lieu of service is to be given, out of the juris-

* (170) The misdescription of the residence of a defendant, whereby he is alleged to be resident within the jurisdiction, whilst he is in fact resident out of the jurisdiction, is not a sufficient ground for setting aside a diction may be issued and marked as a concurrent writ with one for service within the jurisdiction. Ibid. r. 2, No. 41.

9. Renewed—.

496. No original writ of summons shall be in force for more than twelve months from the day of the date thereof, including the day of such date; but if any defendant therein named shall not have been served therewith, the plaintiff may, before the expiration of the twelve months, apply to the court or a judge for leave to renew the writ, and the court or judge, if satisfied that reasonable efforts have been made to serve such defendant, or for other good reason, may order that the original or concurrent writ of summons be renewed for six months from the date of such renewal inclusive, and so from time to time during the currency of the renewed writ. And the writ shall in such case be renewed by being marked with a seal bearing the date of the day, month, and year of such renewal; such seal to be provided and kept for that purpose at the proper office, and to be impressed upon the writ by the proper officer, upon delivery to him by the plaintiff or his solicitor of a memorandum in Form No. 18 in Appendix A., Part I., with such variations as circumstances may require; and a writ of summons so renewed shall remain in force and be available to prevent the operation of any statute whereby the time for the commencement of the action may be limited, and for all other purposes, from the date of the issuing of the original writ of summons. Ord. VIII. r. 1, No. 45.

497. The production of a writ of summons purporting to be marked with the seal of the court, showing the same to have been renewed in manner aforesaid, shall be sufficient evidence of its having been so renewed, and of the commencement of the action as of the first date of such renewed writ for all purposes. Ibid. r. 2, No. 46.

498. For form of order for renewal of writ, see R. S. C. 1883, Appendix K., No. 22.

10. Lost—.

499. Where a writ, of which the production is necessary, has been lost, the court or a judge, upon being satisfied of the loss, and of the correctness of a copy thereof, may order that such copy shall be sealed and served in lieu of the original writ. Ord. VIII. r. 3, No. 47.

500. As to amendment when required of lost writ, see No. 489, supra.

11. Service.

See c. 12, ss. 5, 6, pp. 1524—1527.

12. Motion to set aside Service.

(a) Generally.

501. A defendant, before appearing, shall be at liberty, without obtaining an order to enter, or entering, a conditional appearance, to serve notice of motion to set aside the service upon him of the writ or of notice of the writ, or to discharge the order authorizing such service. Ord. XII. r. 30, No. 100.*

(b) Previous Practice.

502. The practice in the Admiralty Court of entering an appearance under protest was not abolished by the Judicature Acts or Rules prior to those of 1883. The Vivar, 2 P. D. 29; 35 L. T. 782; 25 W. R. 453; 3 Asp. N.S. 308; The Caterina Chiazzare, 1 P. D. 368; 45 L. J. P. D. & A. 105; The Pieve Superiore, L. R. 5 P. C. 482; 43 L. J. Adm. 20.

503. Where a defendant objected to the jurisdiction of the court in a cause in rem by a petition or protest, the old practice of the court as to proceedings under protest was required to be followed. The Evangelistria, 3 Asp. N.S. 264.

504. Where a party objected to the jurisdiction of the court, the proper course was to appear under protest. Where the jurisdiction was not denied, but only its application to the case in question, the proper course was a plea in bar. The Sarah Jane, 7 Jur. 659; The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 293.

505. Held, that an appearance under protest, which was in the nature of a plea

* (171) This rule was probably made to provide a mode of procedure in lieu of appearance under protest. Mr. Wilson appears to think that appearance under protest in Admiralty actions is probably not abolished, and cites The Vivar (2 P. D. 29; 3 Asp. N.S. 308), where it was so held under R. S. C. 1875, but he refers to the above rule as an alternative proceeding. See Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. pp. 203, 208.

in bar, was the proper form of raising an objection to the jurisdiction of the court. The Alexander, 1 W. Rob. 293.

505a. But that such an appearance was only to be given where there was a real question as to the jurisdiction. The Protector, ibid. 62.

506. Held, that a question of jurisdiction should be raised by an appearance under protest. It was doubtful whether a party omitting to take the objection in the first instance could be permitted to raise it afterwards. The Helgoland, Swabey, 496; The Cargo ex Sultan, ibid. 509.

507. A question of jurisdiction ought always to be raised in the first instance, and if not, it was not properly raised before the court. The David (1840), 9 Monthly Law Mag. (Notes of Cases), 209.

508. An objection to the jurisdiction might be raised at any time pending the cause. The Mary Ann, 34 L. J. Adm. 73; 12 L. T. N.S. 238; The Empire Queen, L. R. 3 Eq. 71; 3 Asp. 221; The Lady Clermont, 3 Asp. 508. [IRISH.]

509. An objection to the jurisdiction should be taken in the first instance. An absolute appearance once given could not be recalled. A vessel was arrested in a suit for wages, and a practitioner appeared for the owner, undertook to give bail, and at his petition a supersedeas was decreed. Held, that this was an absolute appearance, and that it was too late for the owner afterwards to appear under protest. The Blakeney, 5 Jur. N.S. 418; Swabey, 428.

510. An objection to the jurisdiction of the court might be taken at any time; but it was more usual and convenient to do so at the commencement of proceedings. The Ida, 1 Lushington, 8.

511. When the court had no jurisdiction it would hold its hand at any stage of the proceedings whenever want of jurisdiction was shown. The Eleonore, 33 L. J. Adm. 19.

512. Objection to the jurisdiction of the court on the ground that the property salvaged is under £1,000, should be taken by appearance under protest. An absolute appearance was given, and the objection was taken in answer to the petition. The court sustained the objection but refused costs. The Louisa, 9 Jur. N.S. 676.

513. Mere formal objections to jurisdiction were not allowed to be taken after an absolute appearance given. The Bilbao, 1 Lushington, 149; 3 L. T. N.S. 338.

514. A foreign master sued in the Admiralty Court a foreign owner for wages. The owners appeared under protest, on the ground that the consul's consent had not been obtained to the institution of the suit. Semble, appearance under protest in such a case improper, as the court possessed jurisdiction if it thought proper to exercise it. The Franz and Elize, 5 L. T. N.S. 290.

515. In a cause of collision claim of exemption from responsibility for damage on the ground of a licensed pilot being on board is matter of defence, and not of protest to the jurisdiction. The Eliza Jane, 3 Hagg. 337; The Girolamo, ibid. 173; The Gladiator, ibid. 340; The Protector, 1 W. Rob. 62; The Evangelistria, 3 Asp. N.S. 264. See also The Lady Clermont, 3 Asp. 508; The Empire Queen, T. R. 3 Eq. 71; 3 Asp. 221. [IRISH.]

13. Costs of improper Forms.

516. See tit. Costs, p. 347.

9. Proceedings other than by Writ.

1. Generally.

517. The rules in Ord. IV. (as to the names and address of the plaintiff or his solicitor being required to appear on the writ) apply to all cases where proceedings are commenced otherwise than by writ of summons. See Ord. IV. r. 4, No. 22.*

518. In the R. S. C. of 1883, the term "originating summons" means a summons by which proceedings are commenced

* (173) This order appears to apply to Chancery proceedings. (See Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 181.) But it might be a convenient mode of procedure in the Admiralty Division in cases under sects. 50 and 65 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and sect. 12 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861

(c. 10), as to delivery up of a ship's certificate of registry, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. Nos. 305, 306, p. 1213, and Nos. 311—319, p. 1213; and as to orders prohibiting transfers of ships or shares thereof, and orders of sale on unqualified owner becoming entitled, Ibid. Nos. 228—238, p. 1204.

without writ. See Ord. LXXI. r. 1, No. 1041.

519. As to proceedings on originating summons in the Chancery Division, see Ord. LV. Nos. 782—786.

2. Against Third Parties.

See c. 6, s. 6, p. 1500, and c. 21, p. 1560.

10. Disclosure by Solicitors and Plaintiffs.*

520. Every solicitor whose name is indorsed on any writ of summons shall, on demand in writing by or on behalf of any defendant served therewith, or who has appeared thereto, declare forthwith in writing whether such writ has been issued by him or with his authority or privity; and if it has not been so issued, all proceedings upon the writ shall be stayed, and no further proceedings taken without leave of the court or a judge. See Ord. VII. r. 1, No. 42.

521. When a writ is sued out by partners in the name of their firm, the plaintiffs or their solicitors shall, on similar demand in writing of any defendant, forthwith declare in writing the names and places of residence of all the persons constituting the firm on whose behalf the action is brought. And in the event of failure to do so all proceedings in the action may be stayed upon such terms as the court or a judge may direct. When the names of the partners are so declared, the action shall proceed as if they had been named as plaintiffs in the writ. But all proceedings shall continue in the name of the firm. Ibid. r. 2, No. 43.

522. For form of order for such particulars, see R. S. C. 1883, Appendix K. No. 11.

523. An objection to an action on the ground of non-production or insufficient proof of a proxy is a preliminary objection to be taken on motion, and the proper course for a court of vice-admiralty in such circumstances is to stay the proceedings until sufficient evidence is produced, and not to allow the cause to proceed to a hearing, and then dismiss the action on the ground of no sufficient proof of the proxy. The Euxine, 8 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 190.

524. A practitioner of the Court of Admiralty, who appeared in a salvage action for the master, owners, and crew of a steamer, the asserted salvors, who were condemned in costs, having been ordered to set forth his client's names, brought in the register of the steamer, from which it appeared that Mr. R. was sole owner, against whom an order was thereupon made and served, on which he appeared and alleged that the original action had been instituted without his sanction or knowledge, and he was thereupon dismissed. On motion subsequently the practitioner condemned in the costs of the original action, of the order against the owner, and of the motion. The Wilhelmine, 1 W. Rob. 335; 2 Notes of Cases, 213.

See also No. 376, p. 1502.

11. Warrants of Arrest.

525. In Admiralty actions in rem a warrant for the arrest of property (in the Form No. 17 in Appendix A., Part I., with such variations as circumstances

* (174) By the practice of the Ecclesiastical Courts, proxies were and still are exhibited by the proctors.

(175) A proxy is a document in a specific form, signed by the party, and attested by two witnesses, authorizing the proctor to appear and prosecute, or defend the suit, as the case may be.

(176) Anciently the law appears to have been the same in the Admiralty Court. See Clerk's Prax. Adm. 13, 15; The Wilhelmine, 1 W. Rob. 337, 340; 2 Notes of Cases, 216; The Haidee, 1 Notes of Cases, 597; The Dumfriesshire, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 245. [LOWER CANADA.]

(177) But the practice fell into disuse, and it came to be held that a proctor in the Admiralty Court, if called upon for a proxy, satisfied the law by stating the name of the party for whom he was authorized to appear. Harvey v. The Owners of the Euxine, 41 L. J. Adm. 17; L. R. 4 P. C. 8; 8 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 190; 1 Asp. N.S. 155.

(178) In a cause of possession instituted by a majority of the owners to dispossess the master, the court refused at the hearing to listen to a suggestion that certain of the owners had not authorized the proceedings taken on their behalf, the defendant's remedy being to call for a proxy in an early stage of the cause. The New Draper, 4 C. Rob. 290.

† (179) The citation of the parties interested, which was formerly embodied in the warrant, is now contained in the writ of summons.

526. The mode of initiating an action by the arrest of a ship, "her tackle, apparel, and furniture," is the ancient formula of the court, and such words, notwithstanding the narrowness of their terms, affect all the property of every kind belonging to the owners, as far as the general law limited by statute extends. The Dundee, 1 Hagg. 124.

526*q*. The warrant of the court will extend to sails and rigging taken on shore for the purpose of safe custody as well as to the ship itself. The Alexander, 1 Dodson, 282.

527. The arrest of a ship in a cause of wages, after the company to which the ship belonged was ordered to be wound up, held, a sequestration within the meaning of the 163rd section of the Companies Act, 1862 (c. 89), and consequently void. In re The Australian Direct Steam Navigation Co., Ex parte Baker, 44 L. 527*a*. Semble, in such a case the claimant should take out a summons in the Chancery Division, asking that the property, subject to the lien, may be realized, or security given for the amount alleged to be due; or, if there are other parties interested over whom the Court of Chancery in the winding-up action has no jurisdiction, that the claimant may have leave to proceed in the Admiralty Division against the ship. In re The Rio Grande Do Sul Steamship Co., 5 C. D. 282; 46 L. J. Ch. 277.

528. T., the master of a ship belonging to a company, drew a bill on the company for necessaries supplied to the ship. The bill was duly accepted, but afterwards dishonoured. T. paid the bill, and claimed repayment from the mortgagees, who had taken possession of the ship. On the following day an order was made for winding-up the company. T. then applied in the winding-up for leave to take proceedings in the Admiralty Court, and obtained an order accordingly. The liquidator applied to discharge this order, and an order was made requiring him to pay into court £150 to meet T.'s claim, and, without prejudice to any application by T., to increase the amount, T. undertaking not to proceed further in the Admiralty Court. The money was paid in, and Orders of 1859, of detainers in lieu of warrants in certain cases, is now abolished.

(181) If, however, the property has already been arrested in one action, a writ in rem in a second action will suffice, even in proceedings by default; but the solicitor for the plaintiff in the second action should, however, take care at the time of taking out the writ in rem to cause a caveat against the release of the property to be entered in the registry, otherwise the property may, on being released in the first action, escape from the jurisdiction of the court.

(182) The old warrant of arrest from the Court of Admiralty, in force before the rules and orders under the Judicature Acts, was notice to all the world of the subsequent proceedings. Attorney-General v. Norstedt (1816), 3 Price, 109; The Dowthorpe, 2 W. Rob. 80.

(183) It called upon all persons who had an interest to appear and show cause, and a party in possession not having appeared, and the vessel having been sold by the court, the party was held to have acquiesced in being so dispossessed. The Neptune, 3 Hagg. 132.

(184) It seemed doubtful at one time whether, when cargo ceased to be waterborne, it was any longer amenable by arrest in the first instance to the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court. See The Two Friends,

1 C. Rob. 282; 2 Browne's Civil and Adm. Law, 2nd ed. 48; Godb. 260; Sir L. Jen. vol. i. 82.

(185) But the practice to arrest on land is now well established.

(186) As to cargo stored in the London and Liverpool docks, however, provision has been made by acts of parliament, that property stored in them shall be considered to be under the same liabilities as if on board ship. For such provisions, see, as to the Thames, 9 & 10 Vict. c. cccxcix, made perpetual by 10 & 11 Vict. c. 200; as to the Mersey, the Mersey Dock Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92), s. 193; and the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 78.

and T. then applied to increase the amount, to cover his costs of defending an action brought against him by the holder of the bill, and his costs by the application in the winding-up. Order made for payment of the amount of the bill to T. out of the £150, and for payment of the residue to the liquidator. On appeal, held, that though, if there had been no mortgagee in possession, the proper mode of enforcing T.'s lien would have been by application in the winding-up (as in In re Australian Direct Steam Navigation Co., supra), the order giving leave to proceed in the Admiralty Court was a proper order, the mortgagees not being parties to the winding-up, and that T. was entitled to all his costs in the winding-up, as costs properly incurred by a mortgagee in enforcing his security; and that the case was not within the rule that an appeal will not lie as to costs. Ibid.

529a. For form of præcipe for warrant, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A., Pt. I., No. 15.

2. Affidavit to lead—.

(a) Generally.

530. The affidavit to lead the warrant is to be made by the party or his agent, and shall state the name and description of the party at whose instance the warrant is to be issued, the nature of the claim or counter-claim, the name and nature of the property to be arrested, and that the claim or counter-claim has not been satisfied. See Ord. V. r. 16, No. 38.*

530a. The court or a judge may allow the warrant to issue, although the affidavit may not contain all the required particulars. Ibid. r. 17, No. 39.

(b) In Actions of Bottomry.

531. In an action of bottomry, the bottomry bond, and, if in a foreign language, also a notarial translation thereof, shall be produced for the inspection and perusal of the registrar, and a copy of the bond, or of the translation thereof, certified to be correct, shall be annexed to the affidavit; but the judge may waive the production of the bond. Ibid. r. 16 (c), No. 38, and r. 17, No. 39.

(c) In Actions of Possession.

532. In an action of possession, the affidavit shall state the national character of the vessel proceeded against; and if against a foreign vessel, that notice of the commencement of the action has been given to the consul of the state to which the vessel belongs, if there be one resident in London, and a copy of the notice shall be annexed to the affidavit. Ibid. r. 16 (b), No. 38.

533. For form of affidavit to lead warrant in a cause of possession, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A., Pt. I., No. 14.

(d) In Actions of Restraint.

534. See for form of affidavit to lead warrant in a cause of restraint, ibid. No. 13.

534a. As to such actions, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VIII., p. 1418.

(e) In Actions for Distribution of Salvage.

535. In an action of distribution of salvage the affidavit shall state the amount of salvage money awarded or agreed to be accepted, and the name, address and description of the party holding the same. See Ord. V. r. 16, No. 38.†

(f) In Actions of Wages.

536. In an action of wages the affidavit shall state the national character of the

* (190) The affidavit may be made by the plaintiff, or by his solicitor, or by a clerk of the practitioner, such latter parties speaking from information and belief. It is desirable that the facts should be stated very briefly therein, so as not to disclose prematurely the particulars of the plaintiff's case.

† (190a) It would seem doubtful, notwithstanding this rule, whether a warrant can be obtained in such an action. It would certainly not be issued by the registrar as of course. By the old practice, a monition issued against the person in possession of the amount of salvage awarded to bring in the amount and against the other parties interested to see it distributed, and probably the proper course at the present time would be to issue a writ against the other parties interested, and to apply on affidavit for an order against the person holding the funds to bring the amount into court, vessel proceeded against, and if against a foreign vessel that notice of the commencement of the action has been given to the consul of the state to which the vessel belongs, if there be one resident in London, and a copy of the notice shall be annexed to the affidavit. See Ord. V. r. 16, No. 38.

537. But the judge may waive the service of the notice. Ibid. No. 39.

3. After Caveat Warrant.

538. As to caveats against issue of warrants, see Pt. I. p. 1477.

539. A solicitor, commencing an action against any property in respect of which a caveat has been entered in the "Caveat Warrant Book," shall forthwith serve a copy of the writ upon the party on whose behalf the caveat has been entered, or upon his solicitor. Ord. XXIX. r. 14, No. 335.

540. Within three days from the service of the writ or copy thereof, the party on whose behalf the caveat has been entered shall, if the sum in respect of which the action is commenced does not exceed the amount for which he has undertaken, give bail in such sum, or pay the same into the registry. Ibid. r. 15, No. 336.

541. After the expiration of twelve days from the filing of the notice in Rule 12 mentioned, if the party on whose behalf the caveat has been entered shall not have given bail in such sum, or paid the same into the registry, the plaintiff's solicitor may proceed with the action by default, and on filing his proofs in the registry may have the action placed on the list for hearing. Ibid. r. 16, No. 337.

541a. If, when the action comes before the judge, he is satisfied that the claim is well founded, he may pronounce for the amount which appears to him to be due, and may enforce the payment thereof by attachment against the party on whose behalf the caveat has been entered, and by the arrest of the property, if it should then be or should thereafter come within the jurisdiction of the court. Ibid. r. 17, No. 338.

542. Nothing in this order shall prevent a solicitor from taking out a warrant for the arrest of any property, notwithstanding the entry of a caveat in the "Caveat Warrant Book;" but the party, at whose instance any property in respect of which a caveat is entered shall be arrested, shall be liable to have the warrant discharged and to be condemned in costs and damages, unless he shall show, to the satisfaction of the judge, good and sufficient reason for having so done. Ibid. r. 18, No. 339.

4. Mode of obtaining—.*

5. Property liable.†

(a) Generally.

543. The warrant against the ship extends to its sails and rigging, though detached from it and ashore. The Alexander, 1 Dodson, 282.

(b) Personal Baggage.‡

544. The wearing apparel and other personal articles of passengers are privileged from arrest in a salvage suit. The Willem III., L. R. 3 A. & E. 487; 25 L. T. N.S. 386.

* (191) Bespeak warrant by filing notice and blank form of warrant, with impressed stamps to the amount of 15s. on the notice. See R. S. C. Fees, 1884, No. 13. Forms of warrant and notice may be obtained at the Royal Courts, Room No. 420.

(192) The warrant is prepared and sealed in the registry immediately on the notice being filed.

(193) It is usual to insert, when practicable, in the notice and warrant, the name of the port to which the vessel proceeded against belongs, as, when the ship's name is a common one, the addition of the port serves to prevent any mistake in the identity of the vessel.

† (194) Parties may have in the Court of Admiralty the same remedies against the proceeds of property subject to its jurisdiction that they are entitled to against the property itself, in whose hands soever the proceeds may be found. Mutual Safety Insurance Co. v. Cargo of the Brig George, Olcott, Adm. 89, 157. [AMERICAN.]

‡ (195) It seems that personal baggage is not liable to arrest. If arrested, therefore, with cargo, the plaintiff's solicitor, on being applied to by the owner, and satisfied that the property is personal baggage and not merchandize, may direct the marshal by notice in writing to release it, which is done by him accordingly without any formal release being applied for or obtained through the registry. The Vulture, Oct. 1860.

(196) The wearing apparel of the master and seamen is excepted from the allowance of salvage. 1 Park on Ins. 327; Beaves' Lex Merc. 147.

(c) *Cargo.

545. In no case has the court arrested cargo for the purpose of making good the damage done by the ship in which it was conveyed. It makes no difference that the vessel doing the damage happens to be foreign. The Victor, 29 L. J. Adm. 110; 2 L. T. N.S. 331; 1 Lush. 72.

546. But see contra, Tomlinson v. Voguel, The Eleanor, and The Wilhelmina (anno 1733), Marsden's Rep. 313.

547. Release to the arrest of the cargo decreed, with costs and damages incurred by the detention. Ibid.†

548. When warrants of cargo have been passed by delivery prior to arrest of cargo, dock authorities or others holding cargo cannot after arrest thereof transfer it to the parties claiming it under warrants so purchased by them. Such purchasers take the cargo subject to all legal liens thereon. The Abeona, 17 June, 1859.

(d) Freight.

(aa) Generally.‡

549. The Court of Chancery appointed certain persons receivers of a freight, which, before they had obtained possession, was arrested in a suit in the Court of Admiralty. On motion in the latter court, on behalf of the receivers, release decreed, but without costs. The Bloomer, 2 Asp. 147.

550. The freight due to the owners of a ship doing damage by collision is, together with the ship itself, liable to arrest in respect of the damage. The Leo, 6 L. T. N.S. 58; 31 L. J. Adm. 78; The Orpheus, L. R. 3 A. & E. 348; 40 L. J. Adm. 24; The Roecliff, L. R. 2 A. & E. 363; 3 Asp. 243; 38 L. J. Adm. 56. But only freight due or to grow due, not freight earned on a previous voyage.

The Brodrene, 26 February, 1885; see also The Mellona, 3 W. Rob. 25.

551. A plaintiff in a cause of damage by collision may arrest the cargo in order to obtain payment of the freight due, but if no freight is actually due the cargo must be released. The Flora, L. R. 1 A. & E. 45; 35 L. J. Adm. 15; 2 Asp. 325. §

552. A vessel under charter-party as to both her outward and homeward cargo, whilst on the outward voyage came into collision with another vessel. Held, that the freight for the homeward voyage was liable to arrest for the damage. The Orpheus, 40 L. J. Adm. 24; L. R. 3 A. & E. 308.

See also Nos. 179—187, p. 1482.

(cc) In Wages Actions.

553. By the Admiralty law the mariners may arrest the ship, and semble the freight, for their wages. Neclanham v. Foljamb and another (12 Ann.), 6 Vin. Abr. 439.

554. Seamen may arrest the freight as well as the ship for their wages, and if the latter only is in the first instance arrested by them, and it appears that there are bottomry claims thereon, they may afterwards apply to have the freight arrested, and the court would be bound, ex debito justitiæ, to grant such a motion. The Mary Ann, 9 Jur. 94.

555. A mariner has no lien for wages on the cargo as cargo; his lien is upon the ship to the last plank, and upon the freight as appurtenant thereto; and so far as the cargo is subject to freight, he may attach it as security for the freight that may be due. Quære, whether on the loss of a ship if any cargo were saved, it could be held to represent the freight? The Lady Durham, 3 Hagg. 200, 201.

556. Against the cargo, quæd cargo, the seaman can have no claim for his wages, but quære, as to his claim against cargo where freight has been earned, though

* (197) Proceedings against cargo, quæd cargo, can only be instituted in particular actions, and under particular circumstances, i.e. in bottomry and respondentia actions, where the cargo forms part of the property hypothecated, and in salvage actions, where it forms part of the property salvaged.

† (198) After judgment cargo belonging to the shipowner would, of course, be liable in execution like any other part of his property.

‡ (199) The practice of arresting freight in actions of damage by collision grew out of the limitation in the earlier statutes of the liability of owners to the value of ship and freight, and the practice still continues.

§ (200) It seems to be considered that the plaintiff in a collision action has a maritime lien on it, and in cases where the ship is insufficient to realize £8 per ton, and still more so in such a case where the ship is foreign-owned, greater security is by the practice given to the plaintiff towards recovering as near £8 per ton as possible, but these reasons would not apply in cases of large steamers of a value greater than £8 per ton.

not paid, and where the owner of the ship is the owner of the cargo, and the ship is lost but the cargo saved. The Riby Grove, 2 Rob. 59.

6. *As against Sheriff.

557. Where a ship was seized by Admiralty process and decreed to be sold, but between the seizure and the decree a writ of execution issued against the owner at the suit of another creditor, held, that the sheriff could not take the vessel, nor maintain trover against the officer of the Admiralty. Ladbroke v. Crickett, 2 T. R. 649; and see Buggin v. Bennett, 4 Burr. 2035; S. P. Blacquiere v. Hawkins, 1 Dougl. 378. But aliter, where the sheriff was first in possession. Clarke v. The Fairfield, Marsden, Rep. 252.

558. A rule nisi for the marshal of the Admiralty or his deputy to pay over to the sheriff certain proceeds of sale of a ship sold under a decree of the High Court of Admiralty, whilst in possession of the sheriff under a fi. fa. for satisfaction of a judgment debt, discharged (semble, as improperly applied for against the officer instead of against the court). The Flora, 1 Hag. 300.

559. Upon the sale of a ship in a suit for wages by Admiralty process issuing after the seizure of the same vessel by the sheriff under a writ of feri facias, held, that the claim of the sheriff to the surplus proceeds in discharge of his execution was good as against the late owner of the ship. Ibid.

7. Service.

See c. 12, p. 1527.

8. Filing after Service.

other liens, see tit. LIENS, c. 3, s. 5, p. 814.

10. Removal of arrested Property.

564. When the application is opposed, or the proceedings are by default, the court will grant the application for sufficient cause. Ibid.

565. Ship arrested in Portland roads in a cause of salvage in the sum of £7,000. The owners appeared without giving bail. Motion on their behalf for a commission of removal of the ship from Portland roads to Southampton supported by affidavits that the ship was 797 tons register, was in a damaged state, that Portland roads were not a safe anchorage for a vessel of her size and in her condition, that it would be necessary to unload her cargo for the repairs, that there were no docks in the neighbourhood, and that she could be docked and unloaded with facility at Southampton. The motion was opposed by the salvors, but was granted by the court on a policy of insurance to the amount of the action, and to cover total and partial damage and loss being deposited in the registry. Ibid.

But semble, that had the proposed port of removal been unsuitable, or had the actual captor acquiesced distinctly in the bringing in of the prize to the then port, the court would not have refused such an application. The Sacra Familia, 5 C. 569. A breach of arrestment is not necessarily a contempt of court. A master having removed a vessel with the consent, as he merely supposed, of the arrester to another place within the jurisdiction, a petition to punish him as for contempt of court dismissed. Inglis v. Smith, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, vol. 4, 320. [SCOTCH.]

See also No. 574, infra.

11. *Rescue.

570. If a ship is arrested by process out of the Court of Admiralty, for a matter arising within its jurisdiction, though rescued at land, the consuance of the rescue belongs to the Admiralty. Rigden v. Hedges (1697), 1 Ld. Raym. 446; 1 Vent. 1; Sti. 171; 6 Viner's Abr. 536.

573. It is the duty of all parties who are in possession of a ship under the authority of the Court of Admiralty to give the earliest intimation to the court of any attempt at an infringement of its authority. The court will always hear a motion where its authority is attempted to be evaded. The Westmoreland, 4 Notes of Cases, 173.

574. Where the marshal sends by telegram to his substitute at an outport notice of the issue of a warrant, and such substitute communicates it to the master of the ship against which it is issued, it is a contempt of court to move the ship. The Seraglio, 10 P. D. 120; 54 L. J. Adm. 76; 52 L. T. 865.

574a. A vessel was under arrest in the Court of Admiralty in a cause of bottomry, and a distress was levied by magistrates at the suit of the seamen for wages, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 15, by authority of which, notwithstanding notice from the officer in possession, the tackle, apparel, and furniture were sold. The court made an order against the auctioneer, to show cause why an attachment should not issue against him for removing the same, and he thereupon restored them. Ibid.

575. Motion for attachment against a harbour-master, for seizing and carrying off, for non-payment of harbour dues, portions of the rigging and stores of a ship under arrest, in the custody of the officer of the court, granted, and attachment decreed accordingly. The Harmonie, 1 W. Rob. 179; 6 L. T. N.S. 915.

576. Order made to show cause why an attachment should not issue for a contempt in taking the cargo of a derelict from a warehouse in which it had been deposited by the agents of the Admiralty. Motion on a Ship unknown, 1 C. Rob. 331.

577. A vessel was arrested at suit of a part owner, and an appearance given for the master and owner of the other moiety. Shortly afterwards, the master, with the assistance of the mate and six others, took forcible possession of the ship, and carried her to Jersey, where she was arrested for a debt due from the master, and sold to A. B. The court, on motion, decreed an attachment against the master and mate, and made order against A. B., who had authority is by official persons, acting under some semblance of law, the court will first make an order against them to show cause why an attachment should not issue, but when the infringement is of a more flagrant character an attachment will be directed to issue in the first instance.

(206) When the infringement of the court's

assisted in such illegal seizure, and five others, to show cause why they should not be attached for joining in such seizure. A new warrant of arrest against the vessel was at the same time moved for, but no order was made by the court thereon. A. B., and C. D., his son, one of the parties, moved the court to dismiss them from the effect of the order, but the application being opposed, and an attachment moved for, the court decreed an attachment against A. B. as having possession of the vessel, but dismissed C. D., on the ground that the application should have been sooner followed up, and that he was not one of the principal offenders. The mate, after two months' imprisonment, petitioned the court to be released, on the ground that he acted in ignorance, under the master's orders, and had a sick wife and aged mother dependent on him, and acknowledging his misconduct. His petition was not opposed, and the court decreed his discharge. The Petrel, 3 Hagg. 299.

578. A warrant was served upon an American vessel (against which there was a claim for necessities) whilst she was within the jurisdiction of the court. The master, however, refused to surrender and sailed away. The court gave leave to the plaintiffs to file their proofs, and to set the cause down for hearing, and upon proof of the facts condemned the vessel in the claim and costs. The Lady Blessington, 34 L. J. Adm. 73.

12. Amendment.*

579. In the præcipe to institute a cause in rem the cause of action was improperly stated to be "a cause of damage to cargo," but in the affidavit to lead the warrant was properly stated to be a breach of duty and breach of contract on the part of the master and crew of the vessel proceeded against. The vessel was arrested and an appearance entered on behalf of the owners. On motion leave given to amend the præcipe accordingly upon payment of costs. The Princess Royal, L. R. 3 A. & E. 27; 39 L. J. Adm. 29.†

13. Re-arrest.

580. When a ship has been released on bail she may be re-arrested in other actions by different parties for damage arising out of the same collision. The Clara, Swabey, 7; 2 Jur. N.S. 46; 26 L. T. 165; The Tuscarora, 6 Feb. 1858; The William Hutt, 1 Lushington, 26; The Wild Ranger, 7 L. T. N.S. 725.

581. The court has jurisdiction to issue a second arrest in respect of the same cause of action, but it is a power which should be cautiously exercised, and generally only after an application to the court itself. The Flora, L. R. 1 A. & E. 45; 35 L. J. Adm. 14; 2 Asp. 324.

582. After property arrested had been released on bail the plaintiff re-arrested, the defendant having consented to the amount of the action being increased, the court made an order, allowing the re-arrest to stand, but cancelling the bail-bond, and directing that the value of the ship (which had been repaired since the release) should be estimated as from the time of the first arrest. Ibid. L. R. 1 A. & E. 45.

583. The judge of a county court having dismissed a suit in rem the vessel was released. The plaintiffs having appealed, held, that they were entitled to a warrant to re-arrest the vessel, but that before doing so they must give notice. The Miriam, 43 L. J. Adm. 35; 2 Asp. N.S. 259.

584. In cross causes of damage the judge of the county court found that one ship was not to blame, and ordered it to be released. An appeal was instituted, and on motion by the appellants it was ordered that the ship be re-arrested, and (being a foreign vessel) without notice to the owners. The Preir, The Albert, 44 L. J. Adm. 49; 2 Asp. N.S. 589.

585. In a cause of damage to cargo against a foreign vessel bail was given to the amount of £500, and the vessel was released. At the hearing the defendants were condemned in damages and costs, but it was found that the sum of £500 was insufficient to cover the plaintiffs' costs after payment of the damages. On motion by the plaintiffs the court, under the provisions contained in the 15th and 22nd sections of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, directed the re-arrest of the vessel for the balance of costs still due. The Freedom, L. R. 3 A. & E. 495; 41 L. J. Adm. 1; 1 Asp. N.S. 136; 25 L. T. N.S. 392.

586. For the form of warrant issued, see ibid. p. 136, n.

587. Semble, where a vessel is already under the arrest of the High Court of Admiralty it is not necessary to arrest her in suits instituted in an Admiralty county court. The Turliani, 2 Asp. N.S. 603.

588. It is a matter for the discretion of the court to order the re-arrest of a ship after bail has been given. The Southern Empire, 8 March, 1867.

589. An action of damage by collision was instituted in £20,000. The S. E. was not arrested, but bail was given by arrangement in £7,200. The S. E. then went a long voyage, during which her owners, and one of the sureties, suspended payment, and the court on the plaintiffs' application issued a warrant, and on her return the vessel was arrested. On motion by the defendants for release of the vessel, and for a condemnation of the plaintiffs in costs and damages, supported by affidavit that since the issue of the warrant the ship had changed owners, and that one of the bail was solvent and had large means, the court ordered a release of the vessel, and condemned the plaintiffs in the costs of the arrest. Ibid.

14. In Bottomry Actions.

590. The arrest of a ship by the holder of a bottomry bond before the bond was due, held to have been justifiable, on the ground that the ship was going to leave the kingdom. Aliter, had there been an unfounded apprehension only thereof. The Jane, 1 Dodson, 461, 464.

591. See also Pt. III. c. 1, s. 4, Nos. 2133 et seq.

15. In Collision Actions.*

592. Whenever any injury has in any part of the world been caused to any property belonging to her Majesty or to any of her subjects by any foreign ship, if at any time thereafter such ship is found in any port or river of the United Kingdom, or within three miles of the coast thereof, the judge of the High Court of Admiralty, upon its being shown to him by any person applying summarily that such injury was probably caused by the misconduct or want of skill of the master or mariners of such ship, may issue an order directed to any officer of customs or other officer named by such judge, requiring him to detain such ship until the owner, master, or consignee thereof has made satisfaction in respect of such injury, or has given security to be approved by the judge to abide the event of any action or other legal proceeding in respect of such injury, and to pay all costs and damages that may be awarded thereon, and any officer of customs, or other officer to whom such order is directed, shall detain such ship accordingly. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 527.

593. In any case where it appears that before any application can be made under the foregoing section such foreign ship will have departed beyond the limits therein mentioned, it shall be lawful for any commissioned officer on full pay in the military or naval service of her Majesty, or any British officer of customs, or any British consular officer, to detain such ship until such time as will allow such application to be made and the result thereof to be communicated to him; and no such officer shall be liable for any costs or damages in respect of such detention unless the same is proved to have been made without reasonable grounds. Ibid. s. 528.†

594. In any action, suit, or other legal proceeding in relation to such injury, the person so giving security shall be made defendant, and shall be stated to be the owner of the ship that has occasioned

* (209) The remedy under this and the immediately succeeding sections of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), is seldom resorted to in the Admiralty, that court having inherent jurisdiction, independently of the statute, over foreign vessels in cases of damage by collision. See tit. COLLISION, p. 193.

(209a) The powers given by sect. 528 may, however, be found useful in a case in which there is reason to fear the vessel may leave the country before formal process against her can be obtained.

such damage, and the production of the order of the judge made in relation to such security shall be conclusive evidence of the liability of such defendant to such action or proceeding. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 529.

595. For provisions authorizing any commissioned officer on full pay in the military or naval service of her Majesty, any British officer of customs, or any British consular officer, to detain, until application can be made to a competent court for its arrest, any such foreign ship, ibid. s. 528.

596. Quare, whether in suing a foreign ship under this section the arrest and action may be according to the ordinary process of the court. The Bilbao, 1 Lushington, 149; 3 L. T. N.S. 338; 1 Asp. 5.

597. Damage done by a foreign vessel to a barge in the river Thames; arrest according to ordinary process; absolute appearance and release of vessel thereon; petition filed; plea, that the barge was not a seagoing vessel within the meaning of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, s. 6, and that the court had no jurisdiction. Held, that the court had jurisdiction by sect. 527 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and that after absolute appearance the defendants could not object that the arrest had not strictly followed the course prescribed in that section. Ibid.

16. In Salvage Actions.

598. Salvors have a right to arrest the ship for salvage, at once, to refuse to negotiate, and to have the judgment of the Court of Admiralty as to the extent of remuneration they ought to receive. The Teutonia, 5 Notes of Cases, Supplement viii.

599. For provisions, in cases of salvage, authorizing receivers of wreck to detain the property salvaged until payment is made or process for its detention has been issued by some competent court, or security given to the receiver's satisfaction, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 468.

17. Costs and Damages for improper Arrest.

600. See tit. Costs, p. 369.

12. Service.

1. Generally.

601. An action does not become a lis pendens until after service of the writ. The Helenslea and The Catalonia, 7 P. D.

60; Ray v. Sherwood, 1 Curteis Eccl. Rep. 173, 193; 1 Moore, P. C. C. 353.

2. On what Days.

602. In Admiralty actions no instrument except a warrant shall be served on a Sunday, Good Friday, or Christmas Day. Ord. LXVII. r. 12, No. 1023.

3. Time of Day.

603. Service of pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings, shall be effected before the hour of six in the afternoon, except on Saturdays, when it shall be effected before the hour of two in the afternoon. Ord. LXIV. r. 11, No. 971.

604. Service effected after six in the afternoon on any week-day except Saturday shall, for the purpose of computing any period of time subsequent to such service, be deemed to have been effected on the following day. Service effected after two in the afternoon on Saturday shall for the like purpose be deemed to have been effected on the following Monday. Ibid.

4. Within what Period.

605. In Admiralty actions every instrument shall be served within twelve months from the day on which it bears date, otherwise the service thereof shall not be valid. Ord. LXVII. r. 11, No. 1022.

5. Writ of Summons.

(a) Generally.

606. Held, that service of a writ of summons in rem by a solicitor or his clerk, and not by the marshal or his substitute, was a valid service. The Solis, 10 P. D. 62; 54 L. J. Adm. 52; 5 Asp. 368.

607. When service is required, the writ shall, wherever it is practicable, be served in the manner in which personal service is now made. Ord. IX. r. 2, No. 49.

608. No original writ of summons shall be in force for more than twelve months from the day of its date, including that day. See Ord. VIII. r. 1, No. 45. As to the renewal thereof, see ibid. and c. 8, s. 9, p. 1513.

608a. In a second action in rem, where the ship has been sold and the proceeds paid into court, the writ in rem should be served on the registrar. The Cassiopeia, 4 P. D. 188; 48 L. J. Adm. 39.*

See also No. 770, p. 1542.

(b) On Partners.

609. Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, the writ shall be served either upon any one or more of the partners, or at the principal place within the jurisdiction of the business of the partnership upon any person having at the time of service the control or management of the partnership business there; and, subject to these rules, such service shall be deemed good service upon the firm. Ord. IX. r. 6, No. 53.

610. Where one person carrying on business in the name of a firm apparently consisting of more than one person shall be sued in the firm's name, the writ may be served at the principal place, within the jurisdiction, of the business so carried on, upon any person having at the time of service the control or management of the business there; and such service, if sufficient in other respects, shall be deemed good service on the person so sued. Ibid. r. 7, No. 54.

(c) On Corporations or Societies.†

611. As to service of writs of summonses against corporations, societies, or fellowships, corporate or unincorporate, Ibid. r. 8, No. 55.

(d) On Husband, Wife, Infants, and Lunatics.

612. As to service on husband and wife, when both are defendants, Ibid. r. 3, No. 50.

613. As to service on infants, Ibid. r. 4, No. 51.

614. As to service on lunatics or persons of unsound mind, Ibid. r. 5, No. 52.

(e) On Third Parties.

615. As to the service of third-party notices like writs of summonses, see Ord. XVI. r. 48, No. 170.

(f) Solicitors undertaking to accept—.

616. No service of writ shall be required when the defendant, by his solicitor, undertakes in writing to accept service and enters an appearance. Ord. IX. r. 1, Nos. 48 and 57.

(g) Substituted Service.‡

617. If it be made to appear to the court or a judge that the plaintiff is, from any cause, unable to effect prompt personal service of the writ of summonses, the court or judge may make such order for substituted or other service, or for the substitution for service of notice, by advertisement or otherwise, as may be just. Ibid. r. 2, No. 49.

617a. Every application to the court or a judge for an order for substituted or other service, or for the substitution of notice for service, shall be supported by an affidavit setting forth the grounds upon which the application is made. Ord. X. r. 1, No. 63.

618. Unless the order shall otherwise direct, a copy of the order and of the writ shall be deemed to have been served on the day following the day on which a prepaid letter containing such copy shall have been posted. See C. O. Practice Rules, 1880—1882, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 847.

619. In an action for the specific performance of an agreement to sell a ship, held, that, the defendant being a foreigner out of the jurisdiction, but the ship being within the jurisdiction, substituted service on the master was sufficient. Hart v. Herwig, L. R. 8 Eq. 860; 42 L. J. Ch. App. 457; 1 Asp. N.S. 572; 2 Ibid. Ch. App. 63.

§ (213) The distinction created by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852 (c. 76), ss. 18, 19, now repealed, between service on a British subject resident within the jurisdiction, notice of a writ of summons may be allowed by the court or a judge where any relief is sought against any person domiciled or ordinarily resident within the jurisdiction; or where the action is founded on any breach, or alleged breach, within the jurisdiction of any contract wherever made, which, according to the terms thereof, ought to be performed within the jurisdiction, unless the defendant is domiciled or ordinarily resident in Scotland or Ireland; or where any person out of the jurisdiction is a necessary or proper party to an action properly brought against some other person duly served within the jurisdiction. See Ord. XI. r. 1, No. 64.

622. Or on other grounds not connected with Admiralty proceedings. Ibid.

623. Every application for leave to serve such writ or notice on a defendant out of the jurisdiction shall be supported by affidavit, or other evidence, stating that, in the belief of the deponent, the plaintiff has a good cause of action, and showing in what place or country such defendant is or probably may be found, and whether such defendant is a British subject or not, and the grounds upon which the application is made. Ibid. r. 4, No. 67.*

624. No such leave shall be granted unless it shall be made sufficiently to appear to the court or judge that the case is a proper one for service out of the jurisdiction under this order. Ibid.

625. Any order giving leave to effect such service or give such notice shall limit a time after such service or notice within which such defendant is to enter an appearance, such time to depend on the place or country where or within which the writ is to be served or the notice given. Ibid. r. 5, No. 68.

626. Where the defendant is neither a British subject nor in British dominions, notice of the writ, and not the writ itself, is to be served upon him. Ibid. r. 6, No. 69.

627. Notice in lieu of service shall be given in the manner in which writs of summons are served. Ibid. r. 7, No. 70.

628. For form of notice of writ in lieu of service to be given out of the jurisdiction, see R. S. C. 1883, Appendix A. Part 1, Nos. 9 and 10.

628a. As to when a writ will be allowed to be served out of the jurisdiction, see c. 8, s. 5, p. 1511.

(i) In Scotland or Ireland.

629. For provisions guiding the court where leave is asked to serve a writ, under Rule, No. 64 (for which, see Nos. 621, 622, supra) in Scotland or in Ireland, see Ord. XI. r. 2, No. 65.

(j) Indorsement of Service.

630. The person serving a writ of summons shall, within three days at most after such service, indorse on the writ the day of the month and week of the service thereof, otherwise the plaintiff shall not be at liberty, in case of non-appearance, to proceed by default, and every affidavit of service of such writ shall mention the day on which such indorsement was made. This rule shall apply to substituted as well as other service. Ord. IX. r. 15, No. 62.

630a. It applies also to amended writs. The Cassiopeia, 4 P. D. 188; 48 L. J. Adm. 39.

(k) Affidavit of Service.

631. The service of any instrument by a solicitor, his clerk or agent, shall be verified by an affidavit. Ord. LXVII. r. 14, No. 1025.

632. Every affidavit of service of such writ shall mention the day on which the indorsement of service was made on the writ, and this applies to substituted as well as other service. See Ord. IX. r. 15, No. 62.

633. Affidavits of service shall state when, where, and how and by whom, such service was effected. Ord. LXVII. r. 9, No. 1020.

633a. A certificate made before a foreign notary, of service of notice of writ on a defendant out of the jurisdiction, and service on a foreigner resident out of the jurisdiction, is still in force (see Ord. XI. r. 6, No. 69); but probably, having regard to the terms of this rule, service of the writ would be required in the case of a British subject out of the jurisdiction.

and in Germany, but without any affidavit of service, refused to be received. Ford v. Meiske, 16 Nov. 1885.

6. Writs of Summons in rem.

(a) Generally.

634. In Admiralty actions in rem, service of a writ of summons against ship, freight, or cargo on board, is to be effected by nailing or affixing the original writ for a short time on the mainmast, or on the single mast of the vessel, and on taking off the process leaving a true copy of it nailed or fixed in its place. See Ord. IX. r. 12, No. 59.

635. The directions for serving a writ of summons in Ord. IX. r. 10 (now Ord. IX. r. 12, No. 59) must be strictly followed. It is not sufficient if served on the master even though on board the ship. The Marie Constance, 3 Asp. N.S. 505.

635a. As to service of writ after entry of caveat warrant, see Nos. 539—542, p. 1518.

See also No. 606, supra.

(b) Affidavit of Service.

636. A plaintiff in a bottomry action proceeding on default of appearance must annex the original writ to the affidavit of service. The Eppos, 5 Asp. 180; 49 L. T. N.S. 604; 32 W. R. 154.

(c) On Ship, Cargo and Freight.

637. If the cargo has been landed or transhipped, service of the writ of summons against the cargo and freight shall be effected by placing the writ or warrant for a short time on the cargo, and, on taking off the process, by leaving a true copy upon it. See Ord. IX. r. 13, No. 60.

(d) Against Proceeds in Registry.

638. After a vessel has been sold under an order of the judge of the Admiralty division, and the proceeds are in the registry, no owner having appeared, the writ in an action against those proceeds, whether original or amended subsequent to the sale, must be personally served on the registrar. The Cassiopeia, 4 P. D. (C. A.) 188; 48 L. J. P. D. (C. A.) 39; 4 Asp. 148.

(e) Amended Writs.

639. In Admiralty actions in rem an amended writ should be served in the same way as the original writ; but it will be sufficient if the solicitor of the defendants accepts service; and if the defendants have not appeared, and the vessel has been sold and the proceeds paid into court, the amended writ must be delivered to the registrar with an intimation that service is intended, and must be indorsed with the date of service. Ibid.

(f) Solicitors undertaking to accept Service and give Bail.

640. In Admiralty actions in rem no service of writ or warrant shall be required where the solicitor of the defendant agrees to accept service and to put in bail, or to pay money into court in lieu of bail. Ord. IX. r. 10, No. 57.

7. Warrants.*

(a) Generally.

641. In Admiralty actions in rem the

* (215) On obtaining the warrant make the required copy or copies of the warrant for service. If the ship only is arrested one copy for service will ordinarily suffice. If the ship is in dock the marshal gives notice of the arrest to the dock authorities, but they are not served with the warrant.

(216) If the cargo is to be arrested for itself or for freight, and is on board the vessel, one copy only of the warrant will be required for its arrest; but if the cargo has been partially discharged further copies will be required for service on the cargo where discharged, and on the person in whose custody the discharged cargo is.

(217) No stamp is required on any copy of the warrant.

(218) Take the warrant and copies to the marshal's office, in the Royal Courts of Justices, Room No. 739, with a document called Instructions for Arrest, forms of which may be obtained, as required, at the marshal's office. This document bears no stamp. In this document it should be stated in what port or dock the ship is lying, or in what port she may be expected, and when.

(219) If the property is at an outport, and an immediate arrest is required, fill up a form annexed to the Instructions for Arrest, requesting the marshal to forward instructions by telegraph to his substitute to effect immediate arrest, and undertaking to pay all charges and expenses that may be incurred in consequence.

(220) Pay the stamps for the fee on arrest, viz., £2. These stamps, which are obtainable at the Stamp Office of the Royal Courts of Justice, Room No. 420, should be im-warrant of arrest shall be served by the marshal or his substitutes, whether the property to be arrested be situate within the port of London or elsewhere within the jurisdiction of the court. Ord. IX. r. 11, No. 58.

641a. A warrant of arrest in an action in rem was issued from the City of London Court directed to the high bailiff, and others the bailiffs thereof, but was, without authority from the court, served by a clerk in the high bailiff's office. Held, affirming the decision of the judge of the City of London Court, that this was not a proper service of a warrant. Per Sir J. Hannen: The words "any officer" (31 & 32 Vict. c. 71, s. 23) mean any officer duly authorized by the court. Per Butt, J.: Those words mean any officer whose ordinary duty it is to serve process, or one duly authorized so to do. The Palomares, 10 P. D. 36; 54 L.J. Adm. 54; 5 Asp. 343.

642. Service of a warrant against ship, freight, or cargo on board, is to be effected by nailing or affixing the original writ or warrant for a short time on the mainmast, or on the single mast of the vessel, and on taking off the process leaving a true copy of it nailed or fixed in its place. See Ord. IX. r. 12, No. 59.

642a. If the cargo has been landed or transhipped, service of the warrant to arrest the cargo and freight shall be effected by placing the warrant for a short time on the cargo, and on taking off the process by leaving a true copy upon it. Ibid. r. 13, No. 60.

643. If the cargo be in the custody of a person who will not permit access to it, service of the warrant may be made upon the custodian. Ibid. r. 14, No. 61.

644. In Admiralty actions every warrant or other instrument required to be served by the marshal shall be left by the solicitor taking out the same with a notice in the Admiralty registry. Ord. LXVII. r. 13, No. 1024.

645. The service of any instrument by the marshal shall be verified by his certificate. Ibid. r. 14, No. 1025.

646. For form of præcipe for service by the marshal of any instrument in rem other than a warrant, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A., Part I.; No. 16.

646a. No service of warrant shall be required where the solicitor of the defendant agrees to accept service and to put in bail, or to pay money into court in lieu of bail. See Ord. IX. r. 10, No. 57.

647. Where the marshal sends by telegram to his substitute at an outport notice of the issue of a warrant, and such substitute communicates it to the master of the ship against which it is issued, it is a contempt of court to move the ship from the place where it is lying. The Seraglio, 10 P. D. 120.

647a. In a case of salvage on recapture, in which the ship and cargo had been restored to the proprietor on bail, to answer salvage, but were destroyed by fire before the appraisement of the cargo had been completed, held, as to the ship, that the appraisement having been executed, possession was restored to the owner, and that salvage was due thereon according to the appraised value; but as to the cargo, that the appraisement not having been completed that was in the custody of the court, and that, therefore, the loss must fall on both parties according to their several interests. The Three pressed on the form of the warrant before it is handed into the registry for sealing.

(221) The impressed stamp of £2 suffices for the arrest, whether the warrant be against ship, cargo, and freight, or against one or more of such properties. See R. S. C. Fees, 1884, No. 92.

(222) The warrant is executed, as against the ship, by affixing it temporarily to the mainmast, and leaving thereon affixed a true copy thereof; and, as against the freight, by affixing the warrant temporarily to one of the principal bales, &c. of cargo, and leaving thereon affixed a true copy thereof.

(223) The cargo is arrested in a similar manner to freight.

(224) The marshal's substitutes are usually the collectors of customs at the different out-ports.

(225) In the execution of Admiralty process, in rem, the officer should take and hold actual and manifest possession. The Hibernia, Sprague, 78. [AMERICAN.]

(226) If he do not, he is not entitled to charge custody fees, although he may have rendered himself liable for the safe keeping of the vessel. Ibid.

(227) As to the process of arrest by authority of American Admiralty Courts, see 2 Parsons on American Maritime Law, p. 684.

(228) The circumstance of having a warrant to arrest a vessel will not justify the handing her over to grossly ignorant and negligent persons, and if damage result therefrom the persons who so hand the vessel over will be liable. Petersen v. M'Lean, Cases in the Court of Session, 3rd Series, vol. 6, p. 218. [SCOTCH.]

Friends, 4 C. Rob. 268; but see The Hoop, Nos. 86—88, p. 1472.

648. In a case of salvage on recapture, in which the ship and cargo had been, by agreement between the re-captors and the proprietor, brought into the Thames under a joint speculation of advantage as to the most beneficial manner of disposing of it, and the cargo was there destroyed by fire: held, that the removal having taken place by agreement and for the benefit of both parties, the loss was to be borne pro ratâ. The Creighton, cited in The Three Friends, 4 C. Rob. 272.

649. The diligence of arrestment is inapplicable to a ship sailing on her voyage; and force must not be used to bring the vessel back to port. An arrestment ad fundandam jurisdictionem was used on a vessel lying in Glasgow Harbour. A second warrant of arrestment on dependence of the action was then given to the messenger-at-arms to execute; but he, finding that the vessel had sailed on her voyage, pursued her on board a steam-tug with thirty men, and overtaking her some way down the Clyde, within the jurisdiction of the Scotch courts, as she was approaching the high seas, seized her and brought her back to port, and dismantled her. Held, affirming the decision of the court below, that the execution of the arrestment was illegal, and therefore should be recalled. Borjesson v. Carlberg (First Appeal), 3 App. Cas. 1316.

650. A ship on her voyage having been arrested by a warrant on dependence of an action, and brought back by force into harbour, the arrestment was recalled as illegally executed. Other arrestments were then used against the vessels by parties acting in concert with the original arresters. Held, affirming the decision of the court below, that the second arrestments must also be recalled. Ibid. (Second Appeal), 1322.

See also No. 603, supra.

(b) Releases.

651. It is not necessary that a release should be served upon the agent of the salvors; it may be served on board the ship. The Cumberland, 9 Jur. 191.

651a. As to caveats against release, and the responsibility for so preventing release, see Pt. I. p. 1477.

8. Originating Summons.

652. An originating summons, where service is necessary, shall be served seven clear days before the return thereof. Ord. LIV. r. 4, No. 737.

9. Orders and Judgments.

653. An order obtained as in rule 4 mentioned (i. e., for continuing proceedings and adding new parties on change or transmission of interest), shall, unless the court or judge shall otherwise direct, be served upon the continuing party or parties, or their solicitors, and also upon each such new party, unless the person making the application be himself the only new party, and the order shall from the time of such service, subject nevertheless to rules 6 and 7 (as to persons free from, or under, disability other than coverture applying as therein mentioned to discharge the order), be binding on the persons served therewith, and every person served therewith who is not already a party to the cause or matter shall be bound to enter an appearance thereto within the same time and in the same manner as if he had been served with a writ of summons. Ord. XVII. r. 5, No. 182.

654. Except in the case of an order for attachment, it shall not be necessary to the regular service of an order that the original order be shown if an office copy of it be exhibited. Ord. LXVII. r. 1, No. 1012.

655. Where any person is by any judgment or order directed to pay any money, or to deliver up or transfer any property real or personal to another, it shall not be necessary to make any demand thereof, but the person so directed shall be bound to obey such judgment or order upon being duly served with the same without demand. Ord. XLII. r. 1, No. 579.

655a. See Nos. 660—663, infra, and No. 770, p. 1542.

10. Attachments.*

See No. 654, supra; and as to attachments generally, and of debts, see c. 43, ss. 24, 25.

* (229) As to service of attachment and notice of attachment, see Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 406.

11. Subpœnas.(a) *Generally.

656. The service of a subpœna shall be effected by delivering a copy of the writ, and of the indorsement thereon, and at the same time producing the original writ. Ord. XXXVII. r. 32, No. 514.

656a. As to subpœnas generally, see c. 35, s. 32.

(b) In Scotland or Ireland.

657. The service in any part of Great Britain or Ireland of any writ of subpœna ad testificandum or subpœna duces tecum, issued under seal of the High Court of Admiralty, shall be as effectual as if the same had been served in England or Wales. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 21.

(c) Within what Time.

658. The service of any subpœna shall be of no validity if not made within twelve weeks after the teste of the writ. Ord. XXXVII. r. 34, No. 516.

(d) Affidavit of Service.

659. Affidavits filed for the purpose of proving the service of a subpœna upon any defendant must state when, where, and how, and by whom, such service was effected. Ibid. r. 33, No. 515.

12. Of other Documents requiring Personal Service.(a) Generally.†

660. Where personal service of any writ, notice, pleading, order, summons, warrant, or other document, proceeding, or written communication is required by these rules or otherwise, the service shall be effected as nearly as may be in the manner prescribed for the personal service of a writ of summons. Ord. LXVII. r. 5, No. 1016.

(b) Substituted Service.

661. Where personal service of any writ, notice, pleading, summons, order, warrant, or other document, proceeding, or written communication is required by these rules or otherwise, and it is made to appear to the court or a judge that prompt personal service cannot be effected, the court or judge may make such order for substituted or other service, or for the substitution of notice for service by letter, public advertisement, or otherwise, as may be just. Ibid. r. 6, No. 1017.

13. Of Documents not requiring Personal Service.(a) Generally.

662. All writs, notices, pleadings, orders, summonses, warrants, and other documents, proceedings, and communications in respect of which personal service is not requisite, shall be sufficiently served if left within the prescribed hours at the address for service of the person to be served, as defined by Ords. IV. and XII., with any person resident at or belonging to such place. Ord. LXVII. r. 2, No. 1013.

662a. Where no appearance has been entered for a party, or where a party's solicitor, as the case may be, has omitted to give an address for service as required by Ords. IV. and XII., all writs, notices, pleadings, orders, summonses, warrants, and other documents, proceedings, and written communications in respect of which personal service is not requisite may be served by filing them with the proper officer. Ibid. r. 4, No. 1015.

663. As to service of notice of a judgment or order on an infant or person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition in the same manner as a writ of summons, see Ord. XVI. r. 44, No. 166.

(b) Third Parties.

664. Where a person who is not a party appears in any proceeding either before the court or in chambers, service upon the solicitor in London by whom such person appears, whether such solicitor act as principal or agent, shall be deemed good service except in matters requiring personal service. Ord. LXVII. r. 8, No. 1019.

* (229a) If the witness is served out of London, his reasonable expenses to and from London, and in London, must be tendered him at the same time. See as to such expenses, tit. COSTS, p. 417.

† (230) An originating summons, where service is necessary, shall be served seven clear days before the return thereof. Every other summons shall be served two clear days before the return thereof, unless in any case it shall be otherwise ordered. Ord. LIV. r. 4, No. 737.

(c) Appearance by Solicitor after Personal Appearance.

665. Where a party, after having sued or appeared in person, has given notice in writing to the opposite party or his solicitor, through a solicitor, that such solicitor is authorized to act in the cause or matter on his behalf, all writs, notices, pleadings, summonses, orders, warrants, and other documents, proceedings, and written communications which ought to be delivered to or served upon the party on whose behalf the notice is given shall thereafter be delivered to or served upon such solicitor. Ibid. r. 7, No. 1018.

14. Petitions.

666. The plaintiff shall, without any special leave, be at liberty to serve any petition, summons, notice of motion, or other notice, upon any defendant, who, having been duly served with a writ of summons to appear, has not appeared within the time limited for that purpose. Ord. LII. r. 8, No. 703.

666a. Unless the court or a judge gives leave to the contrary, there must be at least two clear days between the service and the day appointed for hearing a petition. Ibid. r. 17, No. 712.

See also c. 8, p. 1513, and No. 1222, p. 1591.

15. Summonses.

(a) *Generally.

667. Every summons, other than an originating summons, shall be served two clear days before the return thereof, unless in any case it shall be otherwise ordered. Ord. LIV. r. 4, No. 737.

667a. As to the service of summonses, notices, or other documents in Courts of Survey, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. p. 1270. See also Nos. 664, 665, supra.

(b) Affidavit of Service.

668. For form of affidavit of service of summons, see R. S. C. 1883, App. B. No. 23.

16. Pleadings.

669. Every pleading or other document required to be delivered to a party, or between parties, shall be delivered in the manner now in use to the solicitor of every party who appears by a solicitor, or to the party if he does not appear by a solicitor, but if no appearance has been entered for any party, then such pleading or document shall be delivered by being filed with the proper officer. Ord. XIX. r. 10, No. 206.

669a. As to the delivery of statements of claim, statements of defence and counter-claim, reply, and subsequent pleadings, and as to the time within which they are to be delivered, see c. 34, ss. 4, 6, 7, pp. 1592, 1593, 1595.

669b. As to the filing of them when no appearance has been entered, see Ord. XIX. r. 10, No. 206.

669c. The time for delivering, amending, or filing any pleading may be enlarged by consent in writing, without application to the court or a judge. Ord. LXIV. r. 8, No. 968.

669e. Every pleading shall be delivered between parties, and shall be marked on the face of it with the date of the day on which it is delivered. Ord. XIX. r. 11, No. 207.

669f. As to the power of the court in Admiralty actions to appoint a day for the trial, and for that purpose to abridge the time for delivery of pleadings, and for other purposes, see Ord. LXIV. r. 9, No. 969.

17. Notices.

(a) Generally.†

670. As to service of notice of application for appointment of guardian of the defendant when a minor, or of unsound mind, see Ord. XIII. r. 1, No. 101.

670a. As to filing affidavit of service, or of notice in lieu of service, as the case may be, on non-appearance to writ and applications to proceed by default, ibid. r. 2, No. 102.

671. As to service of notice on foreign consul in actions of possession, see Pt. III. c. 11, s. 2; and in actions of wages, ibid. c. 18, s. 2.

671a. As to the filing, with the proper officer, of notice served by a de-defendant claiming to be entitled to contribution, indemnity, or other remedy or relief against any person not a party to the action, see Ord. XVI. r. 48, No. 170.

671*b*. An affidavit of the solicitor, or his clerk, of the service of any notice to produce, and of the time when it was served, with a copy of the notice to produce, shall in all cases be sufficient evidence of the service of the notice, and of the time when it was served. Ord. XXXII. r. 8, No. 378.

See also Nos. 662*b*, 664, 665, 666, supra, and No. 770, p. 1542.

(b) Of Bail.

671*c*. As to the service, by the solicitor of the defendant giving bail, of a notice of bail on the adverse solicitor, see c. 19, p. 1547.

(c) Of Trial.

See c. 38, s. 4, Nos. 1699 et seq.

(d) From the Supreme Court.

671*d*. Notices sent from any office of the Supreme Court may be sent by post; and the time at which the notice so posted would be delivered in the ordinary course of post shall be considered as the time of service thereof, and the posting thereof shall be a sufficient service. Ord. LXVII. r. 3, No. 1014.

(e) Under the M. S. Acts, 1854 and 1876.

See tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1253.

18. Amended Documents.

672. Whenever any indorsement or pleading is amended, such amended document shall be delivered to the opposite party within the time allowed for amending the same. Ord. XXVIII. r. 10, No. 318.

19. Affidavits.

673. Within fourteen days after a consent for taking evidence by affidavit as between the parties has been given, or within such time as the parties may agree upon, or the court or a judge may allow, the plaintiff shall file his affidavits and deliver to the defendant or his solicitor a list thereof. Ord. XXXVIII. r. 25, No. 545.

673*a*. The defendant, within fourteen days after delivery of such list, or within such time as the parties may agree upon, or the court or a judge may allow, shall file his affidavits and deliver to the plaintiff or his solicitor a list thereof. Ibid. r. 26, No. 546.

673*b*. Within seven days after the expiration of the last-mentioned fourteen days, or such other time as aforesaid, the plaintiff shall file his affidavits in reply, which affidavits shall be confined to matters strictly in reply, and shall deliver to the defendant or his solicitor a list thereof. Ibid. r. 27, No. 547.

13. Appearance.

1. *Generally.

674. A defendant shall enter his appearance to a writ of summons by delivering to the proper officer a memorandum in writing dated on the day of its delivery, and containing the name of the defendant's solicitor, or stating that the defendant defends in person. He shall at the same time deliver to the officer a duplicate of the memorandum, which the officer shall seal with the official seal, showing the date on which it is sealed, and then return it to the person entering the appearance, and the duplicate memorandum so sealed shall be a certificate that the appearance was entered on the day indicated by the seal. Ord. XII. r. 8, No. 78.

675. Where persons are sued as partners in the name of their firm, they shall appear individually in their own names; but all subsequent proceedings shall, nevertheless, continue in the name of the firm. Ibid. r. 15, No. 85.

* (231*a*) As to appearances to writs of summons, see Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. pp. 203—208, and Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, p. 251.

(232) It is a common practice in actions in rem, and very convenient where it is desired to give bail and release the ship promptly, to appear for the owners of the ship proceeded against without specifying the names and addresses of the owners, which can be obtained on summons by the adverse solicitor if he desires them. See, as to procuring same, c. 10, p. 1515.

(233) In an action in rem the parties interested in the ship or property proceeded against may appear to the action by their solicitor, and allow the ship to remain under arrest, or they may give bail to answer the action and obtain a release of the ship.

675a. Where any person carrying on business in the name of a firm apparently consisting of more than one person shall be sued in the name of the firm, he shall appear in his own name; but all subsequent proceedings shall, nevertheless, continue in the name of the firm. Ibid. r. 16, No. 86.

676. If two or more defendants in the same action shall appear by the same solicitor and at the same time, the names of all the defendants so appearing shall be inserted in one memorandum. Ibid. r. 17, No. 87.

676a. Where in a suit for limitation of liability an appearance was entered on behalf of a child of a man drowned in a collision en ventre sa mère, the court reserved leave to the child, if born within due time, to prefer its claim for damages sustained by the death of its father. The George and Richard, L. R. 3 A. & E. 466.

677. As to appearance as regulating whether the proceedings shall be in the district registry, see Nos. 976—978, infra.

677a. For forms of entry and notice of entry of appearance, and notice of limiting defence, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A., Pt. II., Nos. 1—8.

677b. As to what parties may appear, see c. 6, p. 1498.

2. In Central Office.

678. Except in the cases otherwise provided for by these rules a defendant shall enter his appearance in London. Ord. XII. r. 1, No. 71.

679. Appearances entered in London shall be entered in the Central Office. Ibid. r. 2, No. 72.

680. In Admiralty actions notice of appearances entered shall forthwith be given by the Central Office to the Admiralty registry. Ibid. r. 3, No. 73; and see C. O. Prac. Rules, 1880—1882, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 847.

681. If any defendant resides or carries on business in the district, he must appear in the district registry, but if he does not reside or carry on business in any such registry he may appear either in the district registry or at the Central Office. See Ord. XII. rr. 4 and 5, Nos. 74 and 75.

682. Where a writ has been issued from a district registry, and the defendant enters an appearance in London, the memorandum of appearance should set forth that the action was begun in that registry, its title in that registry, and that the defendant is out of the jurisdiction of that registry. The General Birch, 33 L. T. N.S. 792.

683. A solicitor appearing for a defendant shall state in his memorandum of appearance his place of business, and, if the appearance is entered in the Central Office, a place, to be called his address for service, which shall not be more than three miles from the principal entrance of the Central Hall at the Royal Courts of Justice. Ord. XII. r. 10, No. 80.

684. A defendant appearing in person shall do the same, except that he shall give his address in lieu of the place of business required to be given by the solicitor. Ibid. r. 11, No. 81.

685. If the memorandum does not contain such address it shall not be received; and if any such address shall be illusory or fictitious, the appearance may be set aside by the court or a judge, on the application of the plaintiff. Ibid. r. 12, No. 82.

686. Where a defendant gives an address for service at which he is not to be found, and there is no person authorized to take in or forward documents, such address is illusory, and the appearance will be set aside. A. v. B., 17th Nov. 1883.

687. A defendant in person may change his address for service (without order to change address) by leave of the master, but must forthwith give notice to the other side. See C. O. Prac. Rules, 1880—1882, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 847.

688. Where any solicitor appearing for a defendant is only agent of another solicitor, he shall add to his own name or firm and place of business the name or firm and place of business of the principal solicitor. Ord. XII. r. 10, No. 80.

689. The memorandum of appearance shall be in the Form No. 1 in Appendix A., Part II., with such variations as circumstances may require. Ibid. r. 13, No. 83.

690. Upon receipt of a memorandum of appearance, the officer shall forthwith enter the appearance in the cause book. Ibid. r. 14, No. 84.

691. In entering appearances a note should be made in the cause books "Statement of claim required" or "Statement of claim not required." See C. O. Prac. Rules, 1880—1882, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 846.

692. If the defendant appears, or any of the defendants appear, in London the action shall proceed in London; provided that if the court or a judge shall be satisfied that the defendant appearing in London is a merely formal defendant, or has no substantial cause to interfere in the conduct of the action, such court or judge may order that the action may proceed in the district registry, notwithstanding such appearance in London. Ord. XII. r. 7, No. 77.

3. In District Registry.

693. If any defendant to a writ issued in a district registry resides or carries on business within the district, he shall appear in the district registry. Ord. XII. r. 4, No. 74.

694. If any defendant neither resides nor carries on business in the district, he may appear either in the district registry or at the Central Office. Ibid. r. 5, No. 75.

695. A defendant shall enter his appearance to a writ of summons by delivering to the proper officer a memorandum in writing dated on the day of its delivery, and containing the name of the defendant's solicitor, or stating that the defendant defends in person. Ibid. r. 8, No. 78.

696. He shall at the same time deliver to the officer a duplicate of the memorandum, which the officer shall seal with the official seal, showing the date on which it is sealed, and then return it to the person entering the appearance, and the duplicate memorandum so sealed shall be a certificate that the appearance was entered on the day indicated by the seal. Ibid.

697. A solicitor appearing for a defendant shall state in his memorandum of appearance his place of business, and if the appearance is entered in a district registry, a place, to be called his address for service, which shall be within the district. Ibid. r. 10, No. 80.

698. A defendant appearing in person shall do the same, except that he shall give his address in lieu of the place of business required to be given by a solicitor. Ibid. r. 11, No. 81.

699. As to the course to be adopted when no address is given, or it is illusory or fictitious, Ibid. r. 12, No. 82, and see Nos. 685, 686, supra.

700. And where any such solicitor is only agent of another solicitor, he shall add to his own name or firm and place of business the name or firm and place of business of the principal solicitor. Ibid. r. 10, No. 80.

4. Notice of—

701. A defendant shall, on the day on which he enters an appearance to a writ of summons, give notice of his appearance (Form No. 2 in Appendix A., Part II.) to the plaintiff's solicitor, or, if the plaintiff sues in person, to the plaintiff himself. The notice may be given either by notice in writing served in the ordinary way at the address for service (which, in the case of a writ issued out of a district registry, must be the address for service within the district), or by prepaid letter directed to that address, and posted on the day of entering appearance in due course of post, and shall in either case be accompanied by the sealed duplicate memorandum. Ibid. r. 9, No. 79.

5. Under Protest.

See c. 8, s. 12, p. 1513.

6. Out of Time.

702. A defendant may appear at any time before judgment. If he appear at any time after the time limited by the writ for appearance, he shall not, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order, be entitled to any further time for delivering his defence, or for any other purpose, than if he had appeared according to the writ. Ord. XII. r. 22, No. 92.

7. Third Parties or Interveners.

703. In an Admiralty action in rem any person not named in the writ may intervene and appear as heretofore, on filing an affidavit showing that he is interested in the res under arrest, or in the fund in the registry. Ibid. r. 24, No. 94.

704. Where a person (not a party to the action, but served with a notice at the instance of a defendant claiming to be entitled to contribution or indemnity against such third party) desires to dispute the plaintiff's claim in the action as against the defendant on whose behalf the notice has been given, or his own liability to the defendant, this third party must enter an appearance in the action within eight days from the service of the notice. See Ord. XVI. r. 49, No. 171.

705. Any person not a defendant to the action, who is served with a defence and counter-claim set up by a defendant on raising questions between himself, the plaintiff, and such third person, must appear thereto as if he had been served with a writ of summons to appear in an action. See Ord. XXI. r. 13, No. 246.

705a. As to third parties and interveners generally, see c. 6, s. 6, p. 1500.

8. Effect of Non-appearance.

(a) *Generally.

706. As to the effect of non-appearance in due time, see No. 702, supra.

(b) After Undertaking.

707. A solicitor not entering an appearance or putting in bail, or paying money into court in lieu of bail in an Admiralty action in rem, in pursuance of his written undertaking so to do, shall be liable to an attachment. Ord. XII. r. 18, No. 88.

(c) After Entry of Caveat Warrant.

708. As to the practice where a caveat warrant has been entered and no appearance has been given by the person who entered the caveat after he has been required to appear, see Nos. 540—542, p. 1518.

(d) Third Parties.

709. Where a person (not a party to the action, but served with a notice at the instance of a defendant claiming to be entitled to contribution or indemnity against such third party) makes default in appearing within the prescribed eight days, he shall be deemed to admit the validity of the judgment obtained against such defendant, whether obtained by consent or otherwise, and his own liability to contribute or indemnify, as the case may be, to the extent claimed in the third-party notice. Provided always, that a person so served and failing to appear within the said period of eight days may apply to the court or a judge for leave to appear, and such leave may be given upon such terms, if any, as the court or judge shall think fit. Ord. XVI. r. 49, No. 171.

710. Where a third party makes default in entering an appearance in the action, in case the defendant giving the notice suffers judgment by default, he shall be entitled at any time, after satisfaction of the judgment against himself, or before such satisfaction by leave of the court or a judge, to enter judgment against the third party to the extent of the contribution or indemnity claimed in the third-party notice: provided that it shall be lawful for the court or a judge to set aside or vary such judgment upon such terms as may seem just. Ibid. r. 50, No. 172.

711. Where a third party makes default in entering an appearance in the action, in case the action is tried and results in favour of the plaintiff, the judge who tries the action may, at or after the trial, enter such judgment as the nature of the case may require for the defendant giving the notice against the third party: provided that execution thereof be not issued without leave of the judge until after satisfaction by such defendant of the verdict or judgment against him. And if the action is finally decided in the plaintiff's favour, otherwise than by trial, the court or a judge may, on application by motion or summons, as the case may be, order such judgment as the nature of the case may require to be entered for the defendant giving the notice against the third party at any time after satisfaction by the defendant of the amount recovered by the plaintiff against him. Ibid. r. 51, No. 173.

(e) In Actions of Account.

712. For provisions that where a writ of summons has been indorsed for an account under Ord. III. r. 8, or where the indorsement thereon involves taking an account, if the defendant fails to appear, or does not after appearance, by affidavit or otherwise, satisfy the court or a judge that there is some preliminary question to be tried, an order for the proper accounts, with all necessary inquiries and directions now usual in the Chancery Division in similar cases, shall be forthwith made. See Ord. XV. r. 1, No. 121.

* (234) By the old practice the defendant neglecting to appear in due time was only admitted to appear and defend the cause on his paying the costs incurred in the proceedings by default in consequence of his non-appearance. These costs were technically termed contumacy costs, or contumacy fees.

See 2 Browne's Civil and Admiralty Law, 405; Clerke's Praxis Cur. Adm. tit. 37, 39; and the reference to such fees in bonds to answer latent demands, in The Saracen, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 66, n. See also as to the old practice, note 343, p. 1565.

713. The application for such order is to be by summons, and supported by an affidavit, when necessary, filed on behalf of the plaintiff, stating concisely the grounds of his claim to an account. The application may be made at any time after the time for entering an appearance has expired. Ord. XV. r. 2, No. 122.

14. Prior Petens.*

714. A bottomry bondholder who has obtained in proceedings by default a decree for sale of the ship acquires thereby a prima facie title to be paid out of the proceeds, and in order to dispute the bond an adverse claimant must first prove his own claim. The India, 1 Lush. 185; 11 W. R. 42; 32 L. J. Adm. 185.

714a. This rule, however, applies only as between claimants in pari condicione. The Markland, L. R. 3 A. & E. 340; 24 L. T. 596.

See also No. 800, p. 1546, and note 338, p. 1564, and tit. LIENS, c. 3, p. 812.

As to precedence of actions, see c. 5, p. 1497.

15. Transfer of Actions.

1. Generally.†

715. Any cause or matter may at any time, and at any stage thereof, and either with or without application from any of the parties thereto, be transferred by such authority, and in such manner as rules of court may direct, from one division or judge of the High Court of Justice to any other division or judge thereof, or may by the like authority be retained in the division in which the same was commenced, although such may not be the proper division to which the same cause or matter ought, in the first instance, to have been assigned. The Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 36.

716. Subject to rules of court, the Judicature Acts, 1873 and 1875, and the power of transfer, every person commencing a cause in the High Court of Justice shall assign it to one of the divisions. If, however, it is assigned to a wrong division, it may at any stage be transferred to the proper division, or retained in the division, and all proceedings and orders therein before such transfer shall be valid. Ibid. 1875 (c. 77), s. 11.

717. Causes or matters may be transferred from one division to another of the High Court, or from one judge to another of the Chancery Division, by an order of the lord chancellor: provided that no transfer shall be made from or to any division without the consent of the president of the division. Ord. XLIX. r. 1, No. 649.

718. Any cause or matter may, at any stage, be transferred from one division to another by an order made by the court or any judge of the division to which the cause or matter is assigned: provided that no such transfer shall be made without the consent of the president of the division to which the cause or matter is proposed to be transferred. Ibid. r. 3, No. 651.

719. When an order has been made by any judge of the Chancery Division for the winding up of any company, or for the administration of the assets of any testator or intestate, the judge in whose court such winding up or administration shall be pending shall have power, without any further consent, to order the transfer to such judge of any cause or matter pending in any other court or division brought or continued by or against such company, or by or against the executors or administrators of the testator or intestate whose assets are being so administered, as the case may be. Ibid. r. 5, No. 653.

720. Any cause or matter transferred from any other division to the Chancery Division shall, by the order directing the transfer, be assigned to one of the judges of that division to be named in the order. Ibid. r. 7, No. 655.

721. A particular application in any cause or matter may, by the direction of the lord chancellor, be heard and disposed of by any judge of the High Court who shall consent so to do, to whatever division or judge such cause or matter may have been assigned. Ibid. r. 4, No. 652.

722. The Court of Queen's Bench having refused to transfer an action, the defendant's appeal therefrom dismissed. Story v. Waddle, 4 Q. B. D. 289.

* (235) Under the practice then existing, the obtaining of a decree of sale was almost equivalent to a judgment.

† (235a) As to the transfer of actions, see Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, pp. 411 et seq.

723. Per James, L. J.: "We should be repealing a great part of the Judicature Act if we were to accede to this application. At any rate we should be acting contrary to the principle that each division of the court is to determine everything which arises in a matter which comes before it. I think we have no jurisdiction to make this order, or if we have, we ought not to interfere with the exercise of the discretion of the Queen's Bench Division." Lords Justices Bramwell and Brett concurring. Ibid.

724. The power to transfer an action is discretionary, to be exercised on all the facts to be ascertained by affidavits, and with a view to convenience and expediency. Coode v. Harrison, 2 Charley's Cases (Court), 101.

724a. In the following cases a transfer was granted, apparently on considerations of expediency:—Holloway v. York, 2 Exch. D. 333; Humphreys v. Edwards, 45 L. J. Ch. 112; W. N. 161; Doering v. Labouchere, 2 Charley's Cases (Court) 93; Hannen v. Hannen, ibid. 96; Bankart v. Haddon, ibid. 106; Holmes v. Harvey, 25 W. R. 80; 35 L. J. 600; Young v. King, 1 Charley's Cases (Chambers), 20; Padwick v. Scott, 2 ibid. 10; Johnson v. Moffat, ibid.

725. In the following cases a transfer of the action was refused:—Coode v. Harrison, 2 Charley's Cases (Court), 101; Warne v. Dell, 1 ibid. (Chambers), 19. See also 2 ibid. 10; and Re Hutley, Deards v. Putt, 1 Ch. D. 11; 45 L. J. Ch. 79; 33 L. J. 237; 1 Charley's Cases (Court), 151; In re Boyd's Trusts, 1 Ch. D. 12; 1 Charley's Cases (Court), 153; Cannat v. Morgan, 1 Ch. D. 1; 45 L. J. Ch. 50; 33 L. J. 402; 24 W. R. 90; 1 Charley's Cases (Court), 154.

726. Held, by the Master of the Rolls, that motions for the transfer of causes from one division to another should be made on notice. Humphreys v. Edwards, 45 L. J. Ch. 112; 1 Charley's Cases (Court), 81.

2. From London to District Registry.

727. If the defendant appears, or any of the defendants appear, in London the action shall proceed in London; provided that if the court or a judge shall be satisfied that the defendant appearing in London is a merely formal defendant, or has no substantial cause to interfere in the conduct of the action, such court or judge may order that the action may proceed in the district registry notwithstanding such appearance in London. Ord. XII. r. 7, No. 77.

728. Any party to a cause or matter proceeding in London may apply to the court or a judge for an order to remove the cause or matter from London to any district registry, and the court or judge may make an order accordingly, if satisfied that there is sufficient reason for doing so, upon such terms, if any, as shall be just. Ord. XXXV. r. 17, No. 417.

3. From District Registry to London.

729. In an Admiralty action in rem, any person who may have duly intervened and appeared may remove an action from a district registry as of right. Ibid. r. 13, No. 413.

730. For provisions as to other actions being removed from the district registry as of right in the cases and within the timetherein mentioned: i.e. (1) where the writ is specially indorsed under Ord. III. r. 6, No. 16, and the plaintiff does not within four days after appearance give notice of an application for an order against him under Ord. XIV.; (2) where the writ is specially indorsed, and the plaintiff has made such application, and the defendant has obtained leave to defend; and (3) where the writ is not specially indorsed under Ord. III. r. 6, No. 16, Ibid.

731. Any person desirous to remove an action as of right under the last preceding rule may do so by serving upon the other parties to the action, and delivering to the district registrar, a notice, signed by himself or his solicitor, to the effect that he desires the action to be removed to London, and the action shall be removed accordingly: provided that if the court or a judge shall be satisfied that the defendant giving such notice is a merely formal defendant, or has no substantial cause to interfere in the conduct of the action, or that there is other good cause for proceeding in the district registry, such court or judge may order that the action may proceed in the district registry notwithstanding such notice. Ord. XXXV. r. 14, No. 414.

732. Except in Admiralty actions in rem the notice for removal shall be accompanied by a certificate signed by the defendant or his solicitor that his defence has not been delivered, and that the time for delivering the same has not expired. Ibid. r. 15, No. 415.

733. In any case not provided for by Rules 13 and 14, any party to a cause or matter proceeding in a district registry may apply to the court or a judge, or to the district registrar, for an order to remove the cause or matter from the district registry to London, and an order may be made accordingly, for sufficient reason and on just terms. See Ord. XXXV. r. 16, No. 416.

734. Where, under the preceding rules, a cause or matter is removed from a district registry, the defendant shall, on such removal, give notice to the plaintiff of an address for service in London, as if the appearance had been originally entered in London. Ibid. r. 18, No. 418.

735. Whenever a defendant appears in London to a writ issued out of a district registry or any proceedings are removed from the district registry to London under Rule 14 of this Order, or by order of the court or a judge, the district registrar shall transmit to the Central Office all original documents, if any, filed in the district registry, and a copy of all entries of the proceedings in the books of that registry. Ibid. r. 20, No. 420.

736. On the removal by appearance to London of an action commenced in a district registry a fresh London distinctive mark is to be given. See C. O. Prac. Rules, 1880—82, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 848.

4. From another Division to Admiralty Division.

737. An application by the defendants for the transfer from a Common Law Division to the Admiralty Division of an action of negligence arising out of a collision in the Thames, refused; scus, if a question of seamanship had been involved. The General Steam Navigation Co., re The London and Edinburgh Shipping Co., 2 Charley's Cases (Chambers), 67.

737*a*. The owners of the A. brought an action in the Queen's Bench Division against the owners of the A.'s cargo for their share of general average, including their proportion of £3,000 paid for salvage of ship and cargo. Verdict for plaintiffs; but a new trial, ordered by the House of Lords, application of the defendants to transfer the action to the Admiralty Division as more conversant with salvage actions granted, and decision affirmed on appeal. The Ocean Steamship Co. v. Anderson & Co., 33 W. R. 536; see also Hawkins v. Morgan, 49 L. J. Q. B. 618.

738. The Master of the Rolls ordered the transfer of an action of salvage from the Chancery Division to the Admiralty Division. Humphreys v. Edwards, 45 L. J. Ch. 112; 1 Charley's Cases (Court), 81.

739. An order for the transfer of a cause is not effectual until the sanction of the president of the division to which it is proposed to transfer it has been obtained. Humphreys v. Edwards, 25 L. J. Ch. 112.

See also No. 762, infra.

5. From Admiralty Division to another Division.

740. An action in rem for damage to cargo brought in the Admiralty Division, the owners of the ship being British and domiciled in England, ordered on motion of the defendants to be transferred to the Queen's Bench Division, as improperly commenced in the Admiralty Division. The Seaham, 4 Asp. 58; 48 L. J. Adm. 28.

6. From High Court to County Court.*

741. For provisions in any action of

* (236) For provisions in any action of contract brought in any of the superior courts of common law, and not exceeding £50, or reduced by payment to that sum, enabling a defendant, contesting all or part of the demand, to apply to a judge at chambers for a summons to show cause why the action should not be tried in a county court, and authorizing the judge, unless good cause is shown to the contrary, to order accordingly; and as to the proceedings to be thereupon taken; see the County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 7; and for provisions applying this section to all actions in the High Court of Justice in which any relief is sought, which can be given in the county court, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 67.

(237) But this section is limited to actions on contract in a common law court in which the claim endorsed is not more than £50. The words "reduced by payment" mean reduced by payment before action brought, and the application can only be made by the defendant within eight days after the service of the writ. When an order is made the cause becomes for all purposes a county court cause, and the superior court has no further control over it. See Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules (4th ed.), p. 71.

(237*a*) The power given by this section is distinct from that given by the 19 & 20 contract brought in a superior court when the claim indorsed on the writ does not exceed £50, or is reduced by payment, or otherwise, to £50, enabling the judge, on the application of either party, after issue joined, to order, on such terms as he shall see fit, that the cause be tried in a county court, and for the registrar, after such trial, to certify the result to the master's office of the superior court, and for judgment being given therein in accordance with such certificate, see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, s. 26.*

742. The words county court in this act include the City of London Court. See The County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 35.

743. Any person against whom an action of tort is brought in a superior court, may make an affidavit that the plaintiff has no visible means of paying the costs of the defendant should a verdict be not found for the plaintiff, and thereupon a judge of the court in which the action is brought may order that, unless the plaintiff within a time to be therein mentioned, gives security for the defendant's costs to the satisfaction of a master of the court, or satisfies the judge that he has a cause of action fit to be prosecuted in the superior court, all proceedings in the action shall be stayed, or the cause remitted for trial before the county court named in the order, and thereupon the plaintiff shall lodge the original writ and the order with the registrar of such county court, who shall appoint a day for the hearing of the cause, notice whereof shall be sent by post or otherwise by the registrar to both parties or their attorneys, and the county court so named shall have all the same powers and jurisdiction with respect to the cause as if the cause had been commenced there, and both parties had agreed by a memorandum signed by them that the county court should try the action, and the costs subsequent to the order shall be allowed according to the county court scale of costs, and those in the superior court according to the scale in use there. See the County Courts Act, 1867 (c. 142), s. 10.

743a. For provisions applying this section to all actions in the High Court of Justice, in which any relief is sought which can be given in the county court, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 67.†

744. Where any action is remitted by order of the High Court of Justice to a county court, the plaintiff shall lodge with the registrar thereof the order and the writ, and also a statement of the names and addresses of the several parties to the action, and their solicitors, if any, and a concise statement of the particulars such as would be required upon entering a plaint, signed by the plaintiff or his solicitor, and the registrar shall thereupon enter the action for trial, and give notice to the parties of the day appointed for such trial, by post or otherwise, ten clear days before such day, and shall annex to the notice to the defendant a copy of the particulars. County Court Rules of 1875, Ord. XX. r. 1.

745. Upon being served with a notice of trial under the last preceding rule, a defendant may proceed in all things in the same way as if the action had been brought in the county court, and the notice so served upon him was an ordinary summons. Ibid. r. 2.

746. The registrar shall forthwith endorse on the order the date on which the same was lodged, and file the same, and the action shall proceed in all things as if it were an ordinary action in the county court. Ibid. r. 3.

747. For form of order to try action in county court, and for security, see R. S. C. 1883, Appendix K., Nos. 44, 45.

748. As to costs in such actions, see tit. Costs, c. 15, p. 350.

See also Pt. IV. c. 6.

Vict. c. 108, s. 26, on the application of either party after issue joined, to order a trial of an action on contract to take place in the county court, the action still remaining one in the superior court. Ibid. and the cases there cited.

* (238) For the cases and practice in the common law divisions, under this section, see Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 2, p. 1550, and Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules (4th ed.) pp. 68—72.

† (239) This section is limited to actions of tort. The application may be made at any time, but only by the defendant. The effect of the order is to transform the action into a county court cause. See Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules (4th ed.) p. 72.

(240) For the cases and practice in the common law divisions under this section, see Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 2, p. 1553.

7. From Admiralty County Courts to the Admiralty Division.*

749. The High Court of Admiralty of England, on motion by any party to an Admiralty cause pending in a county court, may, if it shall think fit, with previous notice to the other party, transfer the cause to the High Court of Admiralty, and may order security for costs, or impose such other terms as to the court may seem fit. The County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 6.

750. A cause over which a county court has jurisdiction by virtue of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Amendment Act, 1869, may be transferred to the Court of Admiralty under the 6th section of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), although the cause be one over which the Court of Admiralty has no original jurisdiction. The Swan, L. R. 3 A. & E. 314; 40 L. J. Adm. 8.

751. A cause instituted for the recovery of a claim in respect of demurrage so transferred. Ibid.

752. The Court of Admiralty has no jurisdiction over a cause transferred from a county court, if the cause be one over which the county court had no jurisdiction, such as a cause of bottomry. The Elpis, L. R. 4 A. & E. 1; 42 L. J. Adm. 43; 1 Asp. N.S. 472.

753. Claimants for necessaries procured judgment in the City of London Court, and the ship was ordered to be sold. Material men who had done repairs to the ship intervened, and entered an appearance in the City Court, and commenced an action in the Admiralty Division. An application by the plaintiffs (in the Admiralty Division) for the transfer of the action for necessaries to that division was allowed without prejudice to the rights of priority (if any) possessed by the plaintiffs in the action transferred. The Immacolata Convezione, 8 P. D. 34; 4 Asp. 593.

754. If during the progress of an Admiralty cause in a county court it appears to the court that the subject-matter exceeds the limit in respect of amount of the Admiralty jurisdiction of the court, the validity of any order or decree theretofore made by the court shall not be thereby affected, but (unless the parties agree, by a memorandum signed by them or by their attorneys or agents, that the court shall retain jurisdiction) the court shall by order transfer the cause to the High Court of Admiralty; but that court may, nevertheless, if the judge of that court in any case thinks fit, order that the cause shall be prosecuted in the county court in which it was commenced, and it shall be prosecuted accordingly. The County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 7.

755. If during the progress of an Admiralty cause in a county court it shall appear to the court that the cause could be more conveniently prosecuted in some other county court, or in the High Court of Admiralty of England, the court may by order transfer it to such other county court, or to the High Court of Admiralty of England, as the case may be, and the cause shall thenceforward be so prosecuted accordingly. Ibid. s. 8.

756. Where an Admiralty action is transferred to the High Court of Justice by order thereof, the registrar of the court, upon the service of the order of transfer, shall send by post the proceedings to the proper officer of such court. The County Court Rules, 1875, Ord. XXXIII. r. 19.

757. Where the vessel has been arrested or has been seized under a warrant of execution, and the sale of the vessel has been ordered to be transferred to the High Court of Justice, the vessel shall be retained by the high bailiff until the marshal shall, by order of the High Court of Justice, take possession thereof. Ibid. r. 29.

8. From Admiralty County Courts to other County Courts.

See No. 755, supra.

9. From Admiralty County Courts to the Cinque Ports Court of Admiralty.

758. In all cases which shall arise within the jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports, as defined by 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 18, causes may be transferred by the county court . . . to the Court of Admiralty of the Cinque Ports in lieu of the High Court of Admiralty. The County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 33.

758a. As to the Court of Admiralty of the Cinque Ports, see Pt. IV. c. 1, Nos. 2434 et seq.

* (241) As to removal of causes from inferior courts, see Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 2, pp. 1555—1574.

10. From County Court to the High Court.

759. Where in any proceeding before any inferior court having jurisdiction in equity or at law, and in equity and in Admiralty respectively, any defence or counter-claim of the defendant involves matter beyond the jurisdiction of the court, such defence or counter-claim shall not affect the competence or the duty of the court to dispose of the whole matter in controversy so far as relates to the demand of the plaintiff and the defence thereto, but no relief exceeding that which the court has jurisdiction to administer shall be given to the defendant upon any such counter-claim. But in such case the High Court, or any division or judge thereof, may, on the application of any party to the proceeding, order the whole proceeding to be transferred to the High Court, or any division thereof; and the record in such proceeding shall then be transmitted by the registrar, or proper officer, of the inferior court to the High Court, and the proceeding shall thenceforth be continued in the High Court as if originally commenced there. See Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 90; the County Courts Act, 1865 (c. 99), s. 3.

760. Where any order is made by the High Court, or any division or judge thereof, for the transfer of any proceedings from the county court to the High Court under the 90th section of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873, or under sect. 3 of the County Courts Act, 1865, then, subject to such order, the record in such proceeding shall be transmitted by the registrar in the following manner: The registrar shall make and certify under his hand office copies of all entries of record in the books of the court, and shall forthwith transmit by post or otherwise such copies, together with all such documents as shall have been filed in the action, to the proper officer of the High Court. Such copies and the cost of transmission shall be paid for by the party on whose application the transfer has been made, and the registrar may require a deposit of the costs of making such copies and transmission before making or transmitting the same. The County Court Rules, 1875, Ord. XX. r. 7.

761. Where a court orders the transfer of an action to the High Court of Justice or to another court, the registrar shall send by post the order, together with the proceedings, to the registrar of the High Court of Justice or to the court to which it is transferred. Ibid. Ord. XXXIII. r. 20.

See also Pt. IV. c. 6, Nos. 2500 et seq.

11. Re-transfer.

762. An action in the Exchequer Division, ostensibly founded on contract, but likely to prove an action of salvage, having been transferred to the Admiralty Division by a judge at chambers, the court refused to re-transfer it to the Exchequer Division. Nelson v. The Singapore Steamship Co., 2 Charley's Cases (Court), 88.

12. Precedence.

763. Where a county court action is transferred to the High Court, and consolidated with a cross-action in the High Court brought after the commencement of the county court action, the plaintiff in the transferred action will be given the conduct of the consolidated actions although the transfer has been made on his application. The Never Despair, 9 P. D. 34; 5 Asp. 211. See also The Cosmopolitan and The Bjorn, 9 P. D. 35, n. 1; 5 Asp. 212, n. (a).

1. Generally.

764. For the statutory provisions and cases thereon restricting the right of action in a superior court where the case was proper to be tried in the inferior court, see tit. Costs, c. 15, pp. 350—354.

764a. The power given to a defendant under the County Courts Act, 1867, to apply to have a case tried in a county court where the claim indorsed on the writ exceeds £50, but such claim has been reduced by payment to a sum not exceeding £50, does not apply where the payment is made after action. Osborne v. Homburg, 1 Ex. D. 48.

2. Costs and Damages.

See tit. Costs, p. 371.

3. Leave to proceed in the Admiralty Division.

(a) Generally.

765. Two causes of salvage having been consolidated at the request of all parties, the defendants moved that the suits might be dismissed by reason of the value of the property salvaged being under £1,000. Held, that the consolidation of the causes amounted to an agreement within the meaning of the 9th section of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, that the causes should be tried in the Admiralty Court. The Herman Wedel, 39 L. J. Adm. 30.

765a. Semble, under the 9th section of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, the Court of Admiralty may, in its discretion, take cognizance of salvage actions when the value of the property salvaged is under £1,000. Ibid.

766. As to the repeal of sect. 9 of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), by Ord. LXV. r. 1, No. 976, see Tenant v. Ellis, 6 Q. B. D. 46; 50 L. J. Q. B. 143.

766a. The A. ran into the I., and damaged her to the amount of £175. The owners of the I. applied to the registrar of the City of London Court for leave to institute a suit in rem against the I. under sect. 3 of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Amendment Act, 1869. The registrar decided that the limitation imposed on the arrest or detention of a vessel by sect. 22 of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, applied to proceedings under sect. 3 of the Act of 1869, and on the ground that there was no evidence that the A. was about to be removed out of the jurisdiction of the court, refused leave to institute a suit in rem in the City of London Court. Upon application to the Admiralty Court upon an affidavit which stated the foregoing facts, the court gave leave to institute a suit in the Court of Admiralty in pursuance of the provisions of sect. 9 of the Act of 1868. The Archimedes, 22 January, 1870.

767. Under the 9th section of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, application may be made to the Court of Admiralty for an order to institute in that court proceedings which might have been taken in a county court, and the Court of Admiralty will, if it sees fit, make such order. The Bengal, L. R. 3 A. & E. 14; 3 Asp. 316.

767a. Such an application, made on the ground that a question of law might arise whether a towage contract had been superseded by a right of salvage, granted. Ibid.

768. The Z. was under arrest of the Admiralty Court in a cause of collision. Upon the application of salvors whose services had been rendered after the collision, the court granted leave to institute a cause of salvage in the High Court of Admiralty, although it was admitted that the court might possibly award a less sum than £300. The Zingara, 5 March, 1870.

769. When an action has been already commenced in the High Court of Admiralty for an amount within the county court jurisdiction, the plaintiff cannot obtain an order for leave to proceed, so as to relieve him from liability for costs. The Loretta, 40 L. J. N.S. Adm. 50; 1 Asp. N.S. 19; 20 L. T. N.S. 447.

770. Leave given to proceed in the Admiralty Division in an action for damage to cargo, where there was a necessity for a commission abroad, though the amount claimed was within the limits of the county court jurisdiction, and the owners were domiciled in England. Ellis v. General Steam Navigation Co., 3 Asp. N.S. 581.*

770a. Notice of the order should be given on service of the writ. Ibid.

* (242) The learned Editor has questioned this decision, as proceeding upon the assumption that the county court has jurisdiction in all claims for damage to cargo, and suggested that the county court has jurisdiction in Admiralty only in cases in which the High Court of Admiralty before the Judicature Act had jurisdiction. Citing Simpson v. Blues, 1 Asp. N.S. 326; Gunstead v. Price, Fullmore v. Wait, 2 Asp. 543. He admits that the Privy Council in The Cargo ex Argos (1 Asp. N.S. 519), decided otherwise, but suggests that the other decisions are decisions of courts which now form part of the High Court of Justice, and would undoubtedly be followed in any case of prohibition to a county court. He observes that the General Steam Navigation Company, the defendants in this action, are a company carrying on business in London, and therefore domiciled in England within the meaning of the 6th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861. Hence the High Court of Admiralty would have had no jurisdiction to try any action against them, or any of their ships, for damage to cargo, and that consequently an Admiralty county court would have no such jurisdiction. See 3 Asp. N.S. 581. But as the Court of Appeal has since decided, following the decision in The Cargo ex

(b) Costs.

771. The court may, notwithstanding an order under the 9th section of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, to take proceedings in the High Court of Admiralty, condemn the plaintiff in costs at the hearing. The John Evans, 43 L. J. Adm. 9; 2 Asp. N.S. 234.

4. Rescinding of Leave.

771a. An order, under the 9th section of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, to take proceedings in the High Court of Admiralty may be made ex parte, though it is competent to the other parties to the cause to move afterwards that it be rescinded. Ibid.

See tit. Costs, pp. 352, 353.

17. Consolidation of Actions.

1. *Generally.

772. Causes or matters pending in the same division may be consolidated by order of the court or a judge in the manner in use before the commencement of the principal act in the superior courts of common law. Ord. XLIX. r. 8, No. 656.

773. The court has not power to consolidate actions after one of them has been heard and decided. The Demetrius, L. R. 3 A. & E. 523; 41 L. J. Adm. 69; 1 Asp. N.S. 250; 26 L. T. 324; 20 W. R. 761.

774. Two actions can only be consolidated after each has become a lis pendens, and an action in personam does not become a lis pendens until after service of the writ. The Helenslea and The Catalonia, 7 P. D. 60; Ray v. Sherwood, 1 Curteis, Ecl. Rep. 173, 193; 1 Moore, P. C. C. 353.

775. As to proceedings in consolidated actions, see c. 18, infra.

776. As to costs in consolidated actions, see tit. Costs, c. 11, p. 349.

777. As to severance of consolidation of actions, see c. 18, s. 3, infra.

2. In Bottomry Actions.

778. Three bottomry bonds of the same tenor having been put in suit by three separate actions, motion (not opposed) to consolidate the same, granted. The Albion, 1 Hagg. 333.

778a. Two separate bottomry bonds of different dates consolidated, semble erroneously. Mackenzie & Co. v. The St. Andrew, Marsden's Rep. 129.

3. In Collision Actions.

779. For a case of consolidation of several actions of damage by collision, where all the actions arose out of the same transaction, see The Vildosala and other Ships, 4 Asp. 228. [IRISH.]

Argos, that a county court has jurisdiction in Admiralty in such cases (see The Alina, 5 Exch. D. 227), the reasoning now fails.

* (243) An order for consolidation will be made by the registrar on summons, or if of a special nature it may be adjourned into court.

(244) As to the consolidation of actions in other divisions, see Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules (4th ed.) p. 424; and Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 1, pp. 407 et seq.

(245) For the practice of the civil law and Court of Admiralty as to cumulating actions, particularly in causes of wages, see 4 Browne's Civil and Adm. Law (2nd ed.) 145.

(246) The American Admiralty Courts are expressly empowered to direct the consolidation of causes of the like nature, or relative to the same question. See Act of Congress, 22nd July, 1813, c. 14, s. 3; 3 Stat. at Large, p. 19. [AMERICAN.]

(247) Held, prior to the Judicature Acts and Rules, that unless parties agreed to consolidate their causes, the court was bound to allow them to proceed separately, but it would order all the pleadings and evidence taken in the first action to be admitted in the cross action. The North American and The Tecla Carmen, 1 Lushington, 79; 5 Jur. N.S. 659.

4. In Marine Insurance Actions.

779a. As to consolidation of actions of marine insurance, see tit. MARINE INSURANCE, p. 1106.

5. In Salvage Actions.(a) Generally.

780. It has been the universal practice of the Court of Admiralty to consolidate the actions where the decision of each action depends on precisely the same facts, and in salvage actions the court has gone further, consolidating actions where there are several sets of salvors not rendering precisely the same services. The William Hutt, 1 Lushington, 27; 1 L. T. N.S. 448.

781. Separate actions for salvage of life and property were entered and afterwards consolidated. The court approved of the course pursued. The Coromandel, Swabey, 208.

782. The court is displeased when two actions are brought by two sets of salvors where it can be avoided, but there may be cases in which this course is justifiable, and this was one, the salvors having opposite interests, the first set, smacksmen, being the first salvors, and the second, a steamer, claiming to have rescued the vessel. The Charles Adolphe, ibid. 156.

783. Separate actions had been brought by two sets of salvors, and the interest of the one set was denied by the other. The court intimated that the actions ought to have been consolidated, and accordingly deducted £25 from the costs of one set of salvors. The Bartley, ibid. 198.

784. In a case of salvage of a derelict, separate actions having been entered by the actual salvors, and by the owners, master, and remainder of the crew of the salvaging vessel, the court awarded half costs only, expressing its regret that separate appearances had been given. The Nicolina, 2 W. Rob. 175.

785. Two actions for salvage by separate salvors, actions consolidated. The London Merchant, 3 Hagg. 395.

786. Two actions for salvage by two portions of salvors in respect of the same service, actions consolidated. The Hope, ibid. 423.

(b) One Party dissenting.

787. The practice of the court has been not to force consolidation where the parties object to it. But where the plaintiffs in two actions of salvage against the same vessel, in respect of services rendered on the same occasion, objected to consolidate, the court, while refusing to make a consolidation order, allowed the defendants to make one tender in respect of the claims in both actions. The Jacob Landstrom, 4 P. D. 191; 4 Asp. 58.

788. Semble, the court has the power of consolidating actions against the consent of the plaintiffs. The William Hutt, 1 Lushington, 27; 1 L. T. N.S. 448.

789. The consolidation of two salvage causes ordered against the consent of the defendants. The Melpomene, L. R. 4 A. & E. 129; 42 L. J. Adm. 45; 1 Asp. N.S. 515.

6. In Wages Actions.

790. Motion for consolidation of several actions for wages granted. The Adventure, 3 Hagg. 153.

7. Costs.

See tit. COSTS, p. 349.

18. *Proceedings in Consolidated Actions.*1. Generally.

791. Where money is paid into court in two or more actions which are consolidated, and the plaintiff proceeds to trial in one, and fails, the money paid in and the costs in all the actions shall be dealt with under this order in the same manner as in the action tried. See Ord. XXII. r. 8, No. 262.

792. As to consolidation of actions, see c. 17, p. 1543.

2. Order of Reference.

793. Where it is convenient to do so, the court will refer to the registrar separately one of several consolidated causes. The Helen R. Cooper, L. R. 3 A. & E. 339; 40 L. J. Adm. 46.

3. Severance of Consolidation.

794. Where several actions are brought against a ship in respect of one collision by different plaintiffs, and several bail bonds are given, and the actions consolidated by order of the court, and the damage is pronounced for in the usual course, the court has the power to open the order of consolidation and dis sever the actions. The William Hutt, 1 Lushington, 27; 1 L. T. N.S. 448.*

19. Bail.

1. Generally.†

795. Bail bonds are not mere personal securities given to individual captors, but are given in the Court of Admiralty to abide adjudication of all events at the time impending before it. Bail bonds are subject to more enlarged considerations in this court than at common law, where they are considered as mere personal securities for the benefit of parties to whom they are given. They are here regarded as pledges for the thing itself in all points fairly in adjudication before the court. The Nied Elwyn, 1 Dodson, 53.

796. An obligation taken in the Admiralty to appear and sue there, is suable in that court, for it is a stipulation in the nature of bail at common law. The King v. Perry (1688), 3 Salk. 23; S. P. Wick v. Strutt (1694), Comb. 320; Par v.

Evans (1663), T. Raym. 78; and see 2 Ld. Raym. 1286; Cro. El. 685.

797. The jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty over bonds was confined to bonds of bottomry, and bonds taken by the court itself. The Bagnall, 3 W. Rob. 112; 12 Jur. 1008; 6 Notes of Cases, 542.

798. So that if the bond were a voluntary transaction between the parties without any intervention of a receiver of wreck, it could not be enforced in that court. Ibid. 3 W. Rob. 112.

798a. In cross actions the plaintiff in the cross cause is entitled, under the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34, to a stay of proceedings in the first cause until bail has been given to answer his claim in the cross cause, though the cross cause is an action in personam. The Charkieh, 42 L. J. Adm. 70; 29 L. T. N.S. 404.

799. By the 14th section of 16 Geo. 3, c. 5 (made to prohibit all trade and intercourse with the then American colonies, and since repealed), it was provided that where ships, &c. had been

* (248) But when, according to the old practice, a cause was remitted from the Court of Appeal, with injunction "to proceed according to the tenor of former acts had and done," the court had no authority to relax an order made previously to the appeal. The William Hutt, No. 794, supra.

(248a) An application to dis sever consolidated actions, unless by consent, should be made on motion.

† (249) In any cause in the High Court of Admiralty bail may be taken to answer the judgment as well of that court as of the Court of Appeal, and the Court of Admiralty may withhold the release of any property under its arrest until such bail has been given; and in any appeal from any decree or order of the Court of Admiralty the Court of Appeal may make and enforce its order against the surety or sureties who may have signed any such bail bond in the same manner as if the bail had been given in the Court of Appeal. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 33.

(250) This enactment was only applicable when the terms of the bail bond included both courts; but now that an appeal is not a separate action, but only a rehearing of the original action, the enactment seems unnecessary.

(251) For provisions that a surety or co-debtor discharging his liability shall be entitled to an assignment of all the securities held by the creditor, and to all his rights and remedies against the debtor or co-surety, co-contractor, or co-debtor, see the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 5.

(252) After the execution of process the defendant shall give caution or security. Godb. 260. And the caution may bind the heirs, for by the civil law that comprehends his executors or administrators. Ibid. 261.

(253) The securities taken in the Court of Admiralty in the nature of bail were stipulations and fidejussory cautions, and so called. 1 Browne's Civil and Admiralty Law, p. 361.

(254) These stipulations had no priority over specialty debts, nor did they affect lands. Ibid.

taken from the Americans, condemned as lawful prize, and the sentence appealed from, the execution of the sentence should not be suspended by reason of the appeal, if sufficient security was given to restore the ship, or the full value thereof, in case the sentence appealed from was reversed. Held, that such security was not a strict recognizance, but operated as a stipulation to abide the decision of the Court of Appeals; which court was not bound to interpret the words "full value" by any definite measure, but had a discretionary power of declaring what was the full value, and of enforcing payment thereof accordingly. Brymer v. Atkins, 1 H. Black. 164; 2 Tidd's Prac. 983.

799a. In an action by a bottomry bondholder, the interests of a mortgage and of a part owner being distinct, the court was of opinion that in such a case separate bail should be given. The Royal Arch, Swabey, 274.

800. In an action of collision against the F., a foreign vessel, she was released on bail for £300. After judgment against her, and ascertainment of damages and costs at £350, the plaintiffs obtained leave to re-arrest her for the balance. The F.'s solicitors, to avoid the re-arrest, gave an undertaking for supplementary bail. Subsequently actions for wages and necessities were instituted against the F., and judgments obtained, and she was sold, and the proceeds paid into court. Held, that the plaintiffs in the collision action were not entitled to be paid out of the proceeds in court, to the prejudice of the other claimants. The Falk, 4 Asp. 592.

801. The effect of taking bail in an action is to release the ship altogether in that action. The bail represents the ship. The Kalamazoo, 15 Jur. 386.

802. A bail bond containing the names and descriptions of the sureties was merely signed by them without the addition of their descriptions and addresses. Held, sufficient. The Tamarac, 1 Lushington, 28.

803. Semble, the lien of a suitor in rem is not extinguished by the substitution of bail and the release of the vessel in another action. Harmer v. Bell (The Bold Buccleugh), 7 Moore, P. C. C. 274, 275, 279, 282; 14 Jur. 134; 19 L. T. 235; The Clara, Swabey, 7; 2 Jur. N.S. 46; The Wild Ranger, 7 L. T. N.S. 725.

804. In the Prize Court, when property is delivered on bail to the claimant, he is bound, on the one hand, by the appraised value, and cannot be called upon, on the other hand, to bring in more than the appraised value. The Jonge Bastiaan, 5 C. Rob. 322; The Betsey, Ibid. 295. So, too, he cannot be allowed expenses attending the property after it is delivered to him on bail. Ibid.

804a. As to whether a guarantee was, under certain circumstances, equivalent to bail, see The Christiansborg, 10 P. D. 141, C. A.; 54 L. J. Adm. 84.

805. In an action in rem for necessities, the defendants obtained an injunction from Chancery, restraining the plaintiffs from prosecuting the action "until further order." Held, that under such injunction the court would not order payment to the defendants of money lodged in lieu of bail. The Lion, 1 Asp. N.S. 321. [TRIST.]

806. A third mortgagee instituted a suit against a ship of which the defendant was first mortgagee in possession, and caused her to be arrested. The defendant, to obtain the release of the ship, paid into court £500 in lieu of bail, and then sold the ship for a sum less than his mortgage. The plaintiff, when the cause was ripe for hearing, abandoned the suit, and the £500 was paid out to the defendant. Held, that the defendant was entitled to interest at £4 per cent. per annum on the £500, for the time it remained in court. The Western Ocean, L. R. 3 A. & E. 38.

807. The proper address of a proposed surety is his business address, not his private address. The Ocean, 3 February, 1885.

807a. A ship having been arrested in the Court of Admiralty, the plaintiff, at the request of P., the owner of 62-64th, entered into a bond for her release. This took place in the absence of the defendant, who was owner of the remaining two 64ths. Judgment was given against P., who became insolvent, and the plaintiff therefore had to pay the amount for which he was bound. Held, that he was entitled to recover the sum he had so paid from the defendant. Barker v. Highley, 2 N. R. 489; 10 Jur. N.S. 391.

808. For form of bail bond, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A., Pt. 2, No. 13.

2. Justification.

(a) Generally.*

809. In every case of bail taken in

* (257) There must be a separate affidavit of justification for each surety.

Admiralty actions in rem the sureties shall justify. See Ord. XII. r. 19, No. 89.

810. For form of affidavit of justification, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A., Pt. 2, No. 14.

(b) Cross-examination.

811. A plaintiff has a right to require the attendance for cross-examination of sureties, who have justified as bail for a ship in a suit in rem; but he does so at his peril as to costs and damages occasioned by the delay of the ship under arrest pending such cross-examination. The Don Ricardo, 4 Asp. 225.

See also as to objections to bail, Nos. 824—831, infra.

3. *By more than Two Sureties.

4. Before whom taken.

812. In Admiralty actions in rem, bail may be taken before the Admiralty registrar, or before any district registrar or commissioner to administer oaths in the Supreme Court, and in every case the sureties shall justify. Ord. XII. r. 19, No. 89.

813. No commissioner shall take bail on behalf of any person for whom he or any person in partnership with him is acting as solicitor or agent. Ibid. r. 21, No. 91.

5. Before a Commissioner to administer Oaths.†

(a) Notice of Bail and Affidavit of Service.

814. The solicitor for the defendant giving bail is to serve on the adverse solicitor a notice containing the names and addresses of the sureties and of the commissioner before whom the bail was taken. See Ord. XII. r. 20, No. 90.

814a. A copy of this notice verified by affidavit is to be filed with the bail bond. Ibid.

(b) Filing of Bail Bond, Notice and Affidavit.‡

815. A bail bond shall not, unless by consent, be filed until after the expiration of twenty-four hours from the time when such a notice so verified shall have been served upon the adverse solicitor and filed with the bail bond. Ibid.

816. The delays required by these rules with respect to the taking of bail in

* (258) When an action in a large amount has been entered the court has, on application, allowed bail to be given by as many as four or five sureties, they being separately bound in amounts equalling together the amount of the action.

† (259) There were formerly three modes of proceeding in giving bail in Admiralty actions. 1. Before a standing commissioner. 2. By commission. 3. In the Admiralty registry. All these are now practically obsolete, and the practice now is to take bail before a commissioner to administer oaths in the Supreme Court in much the same way that bail was formerly taken before a standing commissioner. See as to bail by commission, sect. 8, infra, and as to bail in the Admiralty registry, sect. 9, infra.

(260) Bail is taken before a commissioner to administer oaths in the Supreme Court in the mode following:—Prepare bail bond and affidavits according to the forms prescribed in App. A. Pt. II. Nos. 13, 14. Procure the bond to be duly executed, and the affidavits of justification duly sworn to by the sureties before a commissioner, and file the same twenty-four hours (or less by consent) after notice of bail so taken.

‡ (261) No form of notice of bail is given by the R. S. C. of 1883. The notice, however, should be entitled in the cause, and intimate that the solicitors for the parties giving bail tender the persons whose names, addresses, and occupations in life are therein mentioned as bail on behalf of the parties giving bail in the sum in which the bail is taken to answer judgment in the action, and that the bail has been taken before the commissioner to administer oaths in the Supreme Court therein mentioned. It is dated and signed by such solicitor, and addressed to the opposite solicitor.

(261a) File in the registry bail bond, duly executed, affidavits of justification, and affidavit of service of notice. File them with a minute, which must bear a 5s. adhesive stamp for each of the documents filed. In salvage actions affidavits of the value of the salvaged property must also be filed.

(262) Bail in this form was heretofore taken before a standing commissioner, of whom only a few were appointed, and these are now generally commissioners to administer oaths in the Supreme Court, and have as such as much authority to take bail as they had formerly as standing commissioners.

(263) The practitioner is then entitled to the release.

(263a) The delay of twenty-four hours may be waived by the consent of the adverse solicitor, and it usually is so in cases in which a release is urgently required. This consent where given is indorsed on the bail bond.

Admiralty actions, may be dispensed with by consent of the solicitors in the action. Ord. LXIV. r. 10, No. 970.

6. By Commission.*

* (264) When bail was taken by commission, a commission issued in each case from the Admiralty registry addressed earlier to commissioners to administer oaths in Admiralty, or to other persons duly qualified to administer oaths, and later, "to all and singular commissioners to administer oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature in England." Before one of these the bail bond was, in virtue of the commission, executed by the sureties, who were also at the same time sworn to their affidavits of justification.

(264a) The commission was prepared in the registry from a præcipe for commission filed by the practitioner, and handed in with forms of commission, bail bond and affidavits of justification; and shortly afterwards the commission, under seal, with bail bond and affidavits of justification annexed to it, was handed to him.

(265) The commission was executed before any one of the parties to whom it was addressed.

(265a) On returning the commission and papers executed, and the affidavits of justification sworn to twenty-four hours after notice of bail so taken, and with affidavit of such service the practitioner was entitled to a release.

(266) This mode, involving the useless expense of a commission in every case, is now considered by the officials in the registry to be abolished, and they would not issue a commission for such purpose except by special order of the judge. It might possibly be obtained under special circumstances, as where no commissioner to administer oaths in the Supreme Court is resident within many miles of the place where the bail reside; but Ord. XII. r. 19, No. 89, defines the parties who may take bail, and inferentially therefore excludes bail being taken by commission.

† (267) When bail was given in the registry the solicitor for the defendant giving bail filed in the marshal's office a præcipe for notice of bail, and thereupon received a notice of bail, a copy of which he served on the adverse solicitor.

(268) The names and address of a referee as to the sufficiency of each of the parties proposed as bail, was required to be inserted in the præcipe for notice of bail filed in the marshal's office; references to bankers, though not indispensable, were preferred, and secured an earlier report.

(269) Upon receiving the præcipe for notice of bail, the marshal made inquiries of the parties given as referees and others, and if satisfied therefrom he, on the morning after receiving the notice, made his report as to the sufficiency of the bail.

7. In the Registry of the Admiralty Division.†

8. To Counter-claims or in Cross Actions.†

817. In Admiralty actions in rem a

(270) After the expiration of twenty-four hours from the time when the notice of bail had been so served, if the marshal had reported on the sufficiency of the sureties, the solicitor was entitled to take up the marshal's report.

(271) The marshal's fee for the report was 10s., which was paid in stamps at the time of obtaining the report. See S. C. Fees of 1884, No. 99.

(272) Upon receiving the marshal's report the solicitor deposited the same in the registry, with a præcipe for bail bond and the notice of bail. The solicitor was then informed at what hour the sureties might attend. The stamps required were on the præcipe, 5s.; on the bail bond, 7s. 6d.

(273) If the report was deposited in the registry before eleven o'clock in the morning, the bail bond was ready for execution the same day. If the report was not deposited until after eleven o'clock, the bail bond would ordinarily not be ready until the next day.

(274) At the hour named the solicitor attended in the registry with the sureties, who then signed the bond before the registrar, or by his directions, before one of the clerks in the registry.

(275) When the bail bond had been executed by the sureties it was filed with a minute. No notice of filing the bail bond was required to be given to the plaintiff's solicitor, and no notice was ordinarily given, the notice of bail previously served on him being presumed to be sufficient. The solicitor was then entitled to the release.

(276) The attendance of the sureties in the registry was productive of so much inconvenience, that this mode of taking bail has fallen into desuetude, and is never now adopted.

(277) The marshal's report was formerly accepted in lieu of justification of sureties, but it would seem to follow, from the terms of R. S. C. of 1883, No. 89 (No. 809, supra), that in these cases also the sureties would be required to justify, so that nothing would be gained by the marshal's report.

(278) There is also no provision in the R. S. C. of 1883, for this mode of procedure, except that forms are given in App. A., Pt. II., Nos. 10—13 thereto, for notice of bail by the marshal, for the marshal's report, for the præcipe for bail bond, and for the bail bond when executed in the registry, and in S. C. Fees of 1884, the fee before mentioned for the marshal's report (see note 271) is stated.

‡ (279) If in the principal cause security has been given by the defendant to answer judgment, and in the cross cause security has not been given to answer judgment warrant of arrest may be issued at the instance either of the plaintiff or the defendant. See Ord. V. r. 16, No. 38.

818. But prior to this rule the Admiralty Court could not in an action of damage, where the defendant had counter-claimed, order the plaintiff to find bail. It could only stay the plaintiff's proceedings until he gave bail. The Alexander, 5 Asp. 89.

819. And if in an action of collision the defendant's vessel was not arrested, and he was not required to give security, he could not, by voluntarily giving security, compel the plaintiff to give security to answer his, the defendant's, counter-claim under the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, s. 34. The Alne Holme, 4 Asp. 591.

820. But semble, the defendant counter-claiming could now require bail even though the plaintiff abandoned his action. See McGowan v. Middleton, 11 Q. B. D. 464.

9. Freight.*

821. When a prima facie title to freight is shown, a ship arrested for freight will be released upon bail being given in the action. When cargo is arrested for freight it is otherwise, and the court will order the owners of cargo to pay the freight into court. The Ringdove, Swabey, 312.

11. Sufficiency.‡

therein, the court may, if it think fit, suspend the proceedings in the principal cause until security has been given to answer judgment in the cross cause. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34. And under this act the court will order a plaintiff to give bail to a defendant counter-claiming when the plaintiff is a foreign sovereign whose ship cannot be arrested. The Newbattle, 10 P. D. 33; 54 L. J. Adm. 16; 52 L. T. 15; 33 W. R. 318; 5 Asp. 356.

(280) By the 34th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, when bail to answer judgment has been given by the defendant in the principal cause, the same party, when plaintiff in a cross cause, may obtain a similar security, notwithstanding that his opponent may be resident within the jurisdiction of the court. The Cameo, 1 Lushington, 409; 5 L. T. N.S. 773.

(281) This power to stay proceedings in the principal cause until bail has been given by the defendants in the cross cause may be exercised, even though the ship of the defendants in the cross cause has been lost, and the defendants themselves are foreigners. The Charkieh, L. R. 4 A. & E. 120; 42 L. J. Adm. 70; 2 Asp. N.S. 121; 22 W. R. 63.

(282) See as to cross actions, p. 1495.

(283) The procedure by counter-claim has superseded cross actions.

(284) The owners of the ship may give bail for freight as well as for the ship, as both belong to them, but owners of cargo cannot do so, as the freight does not belong to them.

(285) But in cases of freight pro rata itineris, they are allowed to give bail. See Coote's Adm. Prac. p. 25.

† (286) Security for costs is given in the same manner and on the same form as bail, the words "so far as regards costs" being substituted for the words "with costs" in the bail bond.

‡ (287) Residence out of the jurisdiction is a good ground of objection to bail.

(288) Two persons trading in partnership will only be accepted as one bail.

(289) On bail being filed or tendered, the adverse solicitor may enter a caveat against the release of the property, in order to admit of his communicating with his client as to the bail. (See Pt. I. c. 6, p. 1477.) If instructed to object to them, he should give notice thereof to the opposite solicitor and prosecute his objections with all dispatch. Ibid. p. 1478.

(290) The proctor of the plaintiff may object to the bail, but if he neglects to do so his party is excluded from demanding more substantial security at a future period. Clerke's Prax. Adm. 29. On the death or insolvency, however, of either of the bail, further security may be demanded. Ibid. 31, n. And also, if being sufficient at the time of their being tendered as bail, they afterwards become lapsi facultatibus. Ibid. 33.

§ (291) The party objecting may at any time waive his objections, but if so will of course, on the application of the adverse party, be condemned in the costs attendant on such objections up to the time of his waiving them, and it may be in damages as well as costs,

825. Semble, objections to the sufficiency of bail may be made by motion on affidavits. The Corner, 3 N. R. 94; 33 L. J. N.S. Adm. 16.

826. On such a motion the court referred the matter to the registrar to inquire summarily into the sufficiency of the bail, after hearing evidence thereon. Ibid.

827. Bail by two partners was taken before standing commissioners at Liverpool, and filed on Saturday in London. On Monday communications took place between the solicitors in Liverpool, admitting the insufficiency of the bail; a release was obtained in London on the same day. Instructions to object to the bail were sent up on Tuesday, motion for re-arrest on the ground of insufficiency of bail granted, reasonable diligence having been used in taking the objection. Ibid.

828. Semble, had the only ground for the motion been the fact of the bail having been given by two partners, the court would have held the parties estopped from taking that objection by the fact of a release having been issued. Ibid.

829. On objection to the sufficiency of sureties, it appearing that the sureties were good and sufficient, the court released the vessel, with costs and damages against the detainers from the day following the notice of bail. Ibid.

829a. As to the cross-examination of the bail as to their sufficiency, see No. 811, p. 1547.

13. Excessive.

830. See tit. Costs, c. 38, s. 10, p. 409, Ibid. in Addenda, and No. 289, p. 1492; also The Earl Grey, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 180.

830a. Plaintiff having obtained excessive bail, afterwards condemned in the costs of giving bail. The George Gordon, 9 P. D. 46; 53 L. J. Adm. 28; 50 L. T. 371; 32 W. R. 596; 5 Asp. 216.*

831. If the bail demanded is too large a sum, the defendants should move to reduce it. The Melissa, 6 Jur. 104. [IRISH.]

14. Reduction.

832. An action upon various claims was entered, and bail given in the sum of in consequence of the detention of the vessel. (See tit. Costs, c. 20, s. 3, p. 370.) So, also, the adverse party may withdraw the bail objected to, and give other bail, or leave the ship under arrest, and will be similarly condemned in the costs incurred by his opponent by reason of such insufficient bail. Pending

£1,500. The court having, upon motion, decided that it had no jurisdiction over some of the claims, the amount for which bail was necessary was reduced to £460, i. e., £260 to answer the remaining claims, and £200 for costs. The Chieftain, 8 L. T. N.S. 120; 32 L. J. Adm. 106; 9 Jur. N.S. 388.

832a. In two actions of salvage of a derelict steamship and cargo of large value, and in each of which the action was entered in the sum of £50,000, the court on motion for the defendants reduced the amount of bail to be given in each action to £25,000. The Amerique, 22 April, 1874.

833. If it subsequently appears that the amount of bail given is beyond the proved value of the property the court will, on motion, order the amount to be reduced. See The Duchesse de Brabant, Swabey, 264; The Chieftain, 32 L. J. Adm. 106; 8 L. T. N.S. 120; The Staffordshire, L. R. 4 P. C. 194; 41 L. J. Adm. 49.

See also No. 831, supra, and No. 835, infra.

15. Amendment.

834. In a cause of damage bail had been given on behalf of The Perseverance, of Swansea, John Tetherby, master. The vessel and bail were subsequently condemned in damages and costs. Application to amend the bail bond by altering the word "Swansea" to "Appledora," and "John" to "George" granted. The Perseverance, 2 Browne's Civ. and Adm. Law App. 543, 553.

16. Ameliorations.

835. A vessel arrested in a cause of collision had repairs effected on her, rendering her of greater value than at the time of her arrest. Held, on motion for release, that she ought to be released on bail being given for her value at the time she was arrested. The St. Olaf, L. R. 2 A. & E. 360; 38 L. J. Adm. 41; 3 Asp. 241.

See also as to ameliorations generally, tit. OWNERS, Pt. I., c. 8, p. 1226.

17. Rights and Liabilities.†

836. Sureties are no parties in the suit, the question of the sufficiency of bail the ship will remain under arrest.

* (292) Where the bail required is excessive, the court now usually condemns the party requiring the excessive bail in the costs of bail.

† (293) The fidejussor had the advantages nor can they interfere with the conduct of the cause at any time, except where the principal is guilty of fraud, or there is collusion between him and the adverse suitor, when the sureties are entitled to apply to the court, alleging such fraud or collusion. The Harriett, 1 W. Rob. 199, 203; 6 Jur. 197; 1 N. of C. 327.

837. For provisions entitling a surety who discharges his principal's liability to an assignment of all securities held by the creditor, and to stand in the place of the creditor and use his name in any action to obtain from the principal debtor or any co-surety indemnification for the advances made, see the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856 (c. 97), s. 5.

838. In determining the liability of bail the court will be governed by general principles, not by accidental circumstances accompanying the case. The Harriett, 1 W. Rob. 197; 6 Jur. 197; 1 N. of C. 327.

839. In investigating the liability of bail the principle of law which the Court of Admiralty would take for its guidance was the same as that which applies in cases of principal and surety; and in applying this principle the court would be governed by the same rules which prevail in the courts of law and equity, and if a court of equity would relieve, though a court of law could not, this court would consider it to be its duty to afford relief, as exercising a jurisdiction equitable as well as legal. Ibid.

840. Sureties are only bound to the extent of the obligation expressed in their bond, and not beyond its plain and obvious meaning. Ibid. 1 W. Rob. 192.

841. When bail has been given, the decree of the court cannot be extended as to the bail beyond what they, who are strangers to the cause, have voluntarily made themselves responsible for. The Volant, 1 W. Rob. 388.

842. The liability of the bail is founded on the personal responsibility of the owner, and restricted thereto. The John Dunn, 1 W. Rob. 161.

843. Claimants in subsequent actions can have no title to recover against bail in the first action, or to participate in any funds which such bail might bring into the registry in discharge of their liabilities as bail. The Saracen, 2 W. Rob. 457; 10 Jur. 398. See also The Wild Ranger, 2 N. R. 402; The Baldur, 4th Nov. 1853.

844. In a cause of damage the bail, having by the usual bond bound themselves to pay what should be adjudged by the court with the expenses, cannot (on the damage being pronounced for, with an order of reference to the registrar and merchants) be called upon to pay a sum fixed by private settlement and agreement between the parties, though in acts of court, as the amount of the damage in lieu of the reference to the registrar and merchants; nor can they either be called upon for the payment of the costs in such cause, separate and distinct from an adjudication for damages. Motion for attachment against the bail in both respects rejected. The Harriett, 1 W. Rob. 182; 6 Jur. 197; 1 N. of C. 327.

845. In a cause of damage the bail is only liable to the extent of the value of the ship and freight (then the extent of owner's liability), and not for the full amount of the damage done, even though, as in the present case, bail may have been given for a sum beyond the value of the ship and freight. The Duchesse de Brabant, Swabey, 264; 30 L. T. 22; 6 W. R. 329; The Richmond, 3 Hagg. 431; The Mary Caroline, 3 W. Rob. 105; 12 called beneficium ordinis, by which he could force the creditor first to sue the principal, and beneficium cedendarum actionum, that of obliging the creditor to assign to him on being paid, to enable him to sue a fellow-surety. Minors could not be sureties, nor soldiers, nor women. The surety might pay before action brought. If the surety were in peril, he might sue before term of payment to be indemnified or discharged; if no personal security could be had the creditor might have a juratory caution from his debtor. 1 Browns's Civil and Adm. Law, p. 362.

(294) In case of default the bail and principal might be imprisoned. 1 Rol. Abr. 531;

Godb. 193, 260; 2 Chitty's Gen. Prac. 536.

(295) As to proceedings at law or in equity by surety against his principal for indemnification or exoneration, see Smith's Mercantile Law (9th ed.), p. 472; Smith's Leading Cases (8th ed.), vol. 1. p. 164.

(296) The practices of Courts of Admiralty does not admit of a surrender of the principal in exoneration of bail. Care v. Bullus, 1 Abb. Adm. 555. [AMERICAN.]

(297) The obligation of a surety in a stipulation given on release from attachment in Admiralty is limited to the sum named in the stipulation, and as surety he cannot be compelled to pay more than that amount. Brown v. Burrows, 2 Blatch. Ct. Ct. 340.

Jur. 945; 6 N. of C. 539; The Mellona, 3 W. Rob. 16; 12 Jur. 271; 6 N. of C. 62.

846. The owners of a vessel doing damage are responsible to the full extent of their statutory liability, whether it be more or less than the amount of bail taken. The Mellona, 3 W. Rob. 22; 6 Notes of Cases, 72.

847. By the expressions in The Mellona, "supposing bail was given to an insufficient amount, the court would raise it to the proper amount," the court did not mean that it was possible to compel the individuals giving bail to exceed the amount for which they had made themselves voluntarily responsible, but that the court would have a right to require further security from those who owned the vessel. The Temiscouata, 2 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 211.

848. Quare, is it not necessary to proceed against the principal in the first instance, before proceedings can be instituted against the bail? No such necessity, however, can arise where the principal is a bankrupt. The Harriett, 1 W. Rob. 193.

849. In a cause of bottomry bail was given generally for the ship and freight. The bond having been declared valid as to the ship, but invalid as to the freight, held, by the Privy Council, on appeal from the Admiralty Court, Ireland, that the bail was only liable to the extent of the value of the ship. The Staffordshire, L. R. 4 P. C. 194; 41 L. J. Adm. 49; 1 Asp. N.S. 101, 365.

18. Discharge.*

850. If a man become surety for another for a sum of money to be paid at a stipulated period, and the person to whom the money is due extends the time of payment without the knowledge or consent of the surety, that is, in the legal sense, a giving time, and the consequence would be that the surety would be absolved from responsibility. Such a principle, however, cannot be applied to bonds given in the Court of Admiralty where no time is specified. Mere passive neglect or delay to move onward would not be such a giving time, for mere forbearance does not exonerate the bail, at least in the Court of Admiralty. Settling the amount of damage out of court is not a giving time in the strict legal acceptance of the term. The Harriett, 1 W. Rob. 195; 6 Jur. 197; 1 Notes of Cases, 327.

851. Acts of the adverse party, which might by possibility have prejudiced the bail, entitle the bail to be discharged. It is not necessary to inquire whether any prejudice has actually occurred. Quare, if any alteration whatever is made in the contract, or the mode of executing it, is not the responsibility of the bail discharged? Ibid. 1 W. Rob. 198; 6 Jur. 197; 1 Notes of Cases, 327.

852. In a cause of damage, in which a decree was obtained in favour of the party suing, and a reference to the registrar and merchants directed, the proctor of that party having agreed the amount of damage in acts of court with the adverse proctor without such reference, such acts held to estop both parties from further carrying out the decree of the court as regards the reference to the registrar and merchants, and the obligation of the bail being to pay what shall be adjudged by the court, and such agreement not being an adjudication by the court; held, further, that such acts enured to a release of the responsibility of the bail, and that such responsibility could not be again revived. Motion for attachment against bail rejected, and bail dismissed. Ibid.

853. A surety is not released from his bond by mere lapse of time, unless where payment was to have been made within

* (298) As after bail taken the res is released from the lien, the sureties cannot acquit themselves of their liability by surrendering the res ipsa. Coote's Eccl. and Adm. Prac. 90.

(299) As to the liability of sureties, and as to their discharge by giving time, or other circumstances, see Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 2, pp. 1506 et seq.

(300) It has not been the modern practice of the court to permit the bail bond to be cancelled or delivered out of the registry. The decree of the court dismissing the bail is deemed sufficient completely to discharge their liability.

(301) In order to be discharged from a bail bond or stipulation given in Admiralty, the party must establish fraud, deceit, duress, illegality of consideration, or other matter such as at law, or in equity, would avoid a common money bond, or would entitle a party to be relieved from it. Cure v. Bullus, 1 Abb. Adm. 555. [AMERICAN.]

(302) See also as to discharge of bail, Murphy v. Roberts, 30 Ala. 232. [AMERICAN.]

a limited time, and the time has been extended without his consent or knowledge. The Vreede, 1 Dodson, 7.

854. The mere passive inactivity of the person to whom a guarantee is given, his neglect to call the principal debtor to account in a reasonable time, and to enforce payment against him, does not discharge the surety; and the rule at law and in equity is the same, that there must be some positive act done by him to the prejudice of the surety, or such degree of negligence as to imply connivance and amount to fraud. Black v. Ottoman Bank, 8 Jur. N.S. 801; 10 W. R. 871; 6 L. T. N.S. 763.

855. To discharge a surety for the due performance of duties, there must be on the part of the obligee an act of connivance or gross negligence amounting to wilful shutting of the eyes to the fraud, or something approximating to it. Dawson v. Laves, 23 L. J. Chanc. 434.

856. A surety is bound only to the letter of his engagement; if that engagement is altered in a single line, no matter whether it be altered for the benefit of the surety, or whether the alteration be innocently made, the surety has a right to say the contract is no longer that for which he engaged to be the surety, and he is entitled to be relieved from the engagement. Blest v. Brown, 8 Jur. N.S. 602; 10 W. R. 569; 6 L. T. N.S. 620.

857. Liabilities of sureties once cancelled cannot be revived. The Harriett, 1 W. Rob. 204; 6 Jur. 197; 1 Notes of Cases, 327.

858. Held, in 1734, that bankruptcy did not discharge a surety in the Admiralty. Russen & Co. v. Colby, cited in The Vreede, 1 Dodson, 2.

859. The payment into court of the amount awarded and costs would enure to a discharge of the bail. The North American, May 10, 1860.

860. Bail given to answer adjudication as to portion of cargo being Danish property cannot, on the cargo being afterwards condemned to the Crown in consequence of war with Denmark, be compelled to make payment at the suit of the Crown under that condemnation; such condemnation having no connection with the question to answer which the bail was given. Bail dismissed. The Nied Elwin, 1 Dodson, 50.

861. Bail given to the actual captor to answer adjudication of property which was, from the locality of the capture, subsequently condemned to the King in his office of Admiralty; held, to be answerable to the Admiralty. Ibid. 53.

862. Bail given to answer adjudication as to cargo captured and which had been afterwards condemned, decreed to be enforced, on application to that effect nine years after condemnation. An attachment decreed against one of the sureties (the owner and the other surety having become bankrupt) at the suit of the captor, he having shown the laches not to have arisen with himself, but with the agent, who, under the circumstances, could not be rendered liable. The Vreede, Ibid. 8.

863. By the civil law, sureties are not discharged from their liability to satisfy the creditor, though the benefit of a hypothec of the debtor is lost by the laches of the creditor to enforce his demands. Macdonald v. Bell, 1 Moore, P. C. C. 15.

864. Motion to dismiss bail and cancel the bail bonds, in pursuance of an agreement between the litigant parties, granted. The Partridge, 1 Hagg. 82.

865. Defendants and their bail dismissed. Subsequent motion by plaintiffs for costs. Held, that the court had no power to grant the motion after such dismissal, though the case was one in which costs would have been decreed if asked for in due time. The Countess of Levin and Melville, 5 L. T. N.S. 290.

866. Bail given to answer judgment in a cause where the appearance is under protest will not be discharged on account of a change in the indorsement on the writ of summons, which renders the protest of no avail. The City of Mecca (C. A.), 4 Asp. 412; 44 L. T. 750.

867. Where two or more sureties contract severally, the creditor does not break the contract with one of them by releasing the other. The contract remaining entire, the surety, in order to escape liability, must show an existing right to contribution from his co-surety which has been taken away or injuriously affected by his release. Ward v. The National Bank of New Zealand, L. R. 8 App. Cas. 755.

868. As to the discharge of sureties in Equity, see Tudor's Leading Cases in Equity, 5th ed. vol. ii. pp. 992 et seq.

19. Commission paid to Sureties.

869. Commission paid for bail in a salvage action will not be allowed as part of the damages recoverable by the salvaged vessel in an action of damage. The British Commerce, 9 P. D. 128; 53 L. J. P. D. 72. Though, in certain circumstances, they may be recovered as damages in other actions. The Numida, The Colingrove, 10 P. D. 158; 54 L. J. Adm. 78; 34 W. R. 156; 5 Asp. 335.

20. By Mortgagee.

870. A mortgagee, though entitled to intervene in an action by material men, is not entitled to the release of the vessel on merely giving bail for payment of the claim if held to take priority of the mortgage. The Acacia, 4 Asp. 226. [IRISH.]

See also No. 806, p. 1546.

21. In Actions of Bottomry.*

871. Bottomry action against ship, cargo, and freight. The owners of cargo gave bail in £350. The proceedings were in pœnam. The bond was pronounced for, the ship sold, and the proceeds of sale, and the freight, were brought into the registry. The deficiency on the ship's account for the bond and proctor's costs amounted to £409: 9s. 2d., which the owners of the cargo were called upon to pay. They tendered £350, the amount of bail. Motion against them to pay the balance rejected. Held, that though the master may become ex necessitate agent of the owners of the cargo, he can render them liable only to the value of the cargo; and any liability beyond can arise only from the owners' conduct in contesting the bond; that the amount of their bail is the limit of their liability, as regards the bond; that the bail might have been taken to the full value of the cargo; and that its not having been so taken was the act of the bondholder himself, who must abide by the consequence. Nostra Senora Del Carmine, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 303; 18 Jur. 730.

22. In Actions of Collision.†

See Nos. 818—820, 835, 844—846, 862, supra.

23. In Actions of Possession.

872. In consequence of the representations which have been made in numerous instances of the damages sustained by ships arrested in causes of possession lying for a length of time in harbour, the court has recently been induced to release them on bail. The Peggy, anno 1809, 4 C. Rob. 306.

872*a*. In actions of possession ship ordered to be released on bail in double the value of the property. The St. John Baptist, alias The Dove, anno 1698, Marsden's Rep. p. 279; Oulton v. The Richard and William, anno 1713; Alstrom v. Maartens, 1727; Dinwiddie v. Bravo, 1730; The Peggy, 1802; Ibid. 280; *Alstrom v. 873. Ship released on ordinary bail in an action of possession. The Evangelistria, 46 L. J. Adm. 1; 25 W. R. 255.†

874. In a cause of possession, bail is taken as a substitute for the substance of the ship, but does not include a stipulation for any earnings that may be made. Application for bail to cover intermediate earnings refused. The Peggy, 4 C. Rob. 304.

875. In a cause of possession promoted giving bail in a larger sum. The Duchesse de Brabant, Swabey, 264; The Amalia, Br. & Lush. 157; 8 L. T. N.S. 805.

† (305) Prior to this case it was doubted whether by the modern practice bail could be substituted for the res in causes of possession, though this often occasioned a great loss on the successful party, arising from the deterioration of his ship from lying up so many months, as well as the expense of possession fees.

(306) In the American courts it is the practice, though not of very ancient date, to release the ship on bail in causes of possession. Dunlap's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), 165; The Alligator, 1 Gall. 145. [AMERICAN.]

(307) Bail in such cases is given for the value of the ship, and her intermediate earnings. Ibid.

* (303) In causes of bottomry when the action is brought against ship, freight, and cargo, and bail to the full amount of the action is given on behalf of ship and freight, and the ship and freight are ample to meet the amount of the bond and costs, and no prior liens on the ship appear, the cargo may be entitled to be released without bail; as, according to the law as to bottomry, cargo cannot be called to contribute until after ship and freight are exhausted, and as in such a case the ship and freight would be sufficient to meet the demand, and bail had been given for the full amount, there could be no claim on the cargo.

† (304) In actions of damage by collision bail may be given for the amount of the statutory liability of the defendant, and a sum to carry interest and costs, but the defendants do not increase their liability by

by the original owner against a purchaser under a sale by the master abroad, possession decreed (semble, by consent) to the original owner, on giving bail to answer the other party's interest, and to cover freight, &c., while in his possession. Application of the purchaser to release the ship to him on bail, refused. The Partridge, 1 Hagg. 81.

876. A mortgagee was in possession of a vessel which he had offered for sale. The vessel was arrested by the owner. The court ordered a release of the vessel to the mortgagee with leave to sell on his giving bail to bring in the proceeds of sale. The Plym, cited in Coote's Adm. Prac. 24.

877. In a cause of possession brought by the owner of 43 sixty-fourth shares against the master, owning the remaining shares, held, that the latter was not entitled to retain possession of the vessel upon an offer of security to the amount of his co-owner's interest. The Kent, 1 Lushington, 495.

24. *In Actions of Restraint.

878. The bail bond should be in the amount of the value of the shares of the dissentient owners, either as agreed between the parties or appraised by the court, for the safe return of the ship to a particular port. The Robert Dickinson, 10 P. D. 15.

878a. Additions proposed by the plaintiffs to a bond in this form rejected. Ibid.

878b. It has never been the practice to give bond in double the value. Ibid. †

879. Quare, whether prior to The Robert Dickinson, supra, such bonds should not be framed as for the vessel's return to any, not a particular, port of this country. The Margaret, 2 Hagg. 278; and see The Regalia, 5 Asp. 338; 51 L. T. 904, and No. 2249, infra.

879a. Prior to the practice as laid down in The Robert Dickinson, supra, if the vessel was lost, the court, before enforcing payment of the bond, would direct a reference to the registrar and merchants to inquire into, and report upon, the value of the plaintiff's share in the vessel. The Pactolus, 8th Dec. 1863.

880. As to actions of restraint, i. e., by minor part owners against major part owners to obtain security for the safe return of the vessel from a voyage of which the minor part owners disapprove, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VIII. c. 3, p. 1418.

880a. As to the effect of the taking of such bail on the right of the minority owners to share in the profits of the voyage, Ibid. p. 1419.

25. In Actions of Salvage.

(a) Generally.

881. Where a vessel had been found to blame in a cause of collision, her owners were allowed to intervene in a salvage suit instituted against the injured vessel, and the court gave them the conduct of the defence on their furnishing bail in lieu of that furnished by the vessel proceeded against. The Diana, 2 Asp. N.S. 366; 31 L. T. N.S. 203.

(b) Before Receivers of Wreck.

882. For provisions authorizing receivers of wreck detaining property for salvage to take security for salvage due, and in cases in England in which the salvage claim exceeds £200, for the High Court of Admiralty of England to determine any question that may arise as to the amount of the security to be given or the sufficiency of the sureties, and to enforce payment of the bond or security in the same manner as if bail had been given in that court, see the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 468.

882a. Prior to the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), a receiver of Admiralty droits, on notice from the agent of salvors, detained a ship, which he afterwards released, taking as security a bond from two persons as sureties for the master and owners of the ship and cargo, submitting themselves to the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty to answer such salvage as should be decreed by that court; and unless they should do so, consenting that execution should issue against them, their heirs, executors, and administrators, goods and chattels, whosoever the same should be found. Held, that the Court of Admiralty had no jurisdiction to enforce the bond. The Bagnall, 3 W. Rob. 118; 12 Jur. 1008; 6 Notes of Cases, 542.

26. By Plaintiff in Actions of Wages. †

883. A master instituted a suit in a

† (309) By the old practice the court, in cause of wages and became insolvent. Application to allow his assignee to proceed in the suit without giving the usual security, he being permanently resident within the jurisdiction of the court, granted. The John Cork, 17 Jur. 306.

27. Under Provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

884. Where a vessel is arrested under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, the court has power to admit her to bail with, and semble without the consent of the Crown. The Gauntlet, L. R. 3 A. & E. 319; 1 Asp. N.S. 45.

885. The Crown is not entitled to bail for a vessel arrested under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, to include costs. Ibid. 1 Asp. N.S. 45.

885a. Bail for a vessel arrested under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, extends to the value of the ship and her equipment. *Ibid.

28. To answer latent Demands.†

886. Monition granted against the obligors in a bond for latent demands at the suit of a seaman claiming the balance, after receiving a dividend on account of his wages out of the estate of the owner of the ship. The Tecumseh, 13 Jur. 68.

20. Release.

1. Generally.‡

887. Property arrested by warrant shall only be released under the authority of an instrument issued from the causes of wages, required the plaintiff to find bail in one surety to the amount of £30.

(310) If, as usually happened, the seaman plaintiff was unable to comply with this regulation, he might, on filing an affidavit that he was unable to provide security, or to deposit £30 in the registry, be admitted to his juratory caution, i. e., to become bail himself for the amount. The Franz and Elize, 5 L. T. N.S. 290; and see Cooke's Adm. Prac. p. 27; and The Edwin, 3 Hagg. 360.

(311) The usual bond by the master suing for wages having become inoperative by his death, the court directed that another bond be given by the administrator of the deceased master continuing the action. The Sylphide, 10th May, 1860.

(312) On a claim for a balance of wages amounting to £11:15s., the court intimated that the sum in dispute was so small that it was very desirable it should be settled out of court by the counsel on either side, and directed that if the action should proceed, the seaman should give not merely his juratory caution, but bail to answer costs. The Edwin, 3 Hagg. 366.

(313) As to the admission of parties to their juratory caution in the American Admiralty Courts, see Dunlap's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), 152, 160. [AMERICAN.]

(314) Now that the Court of Admiralty is a division of the Supreme Court, it is apprehended that, unless in exceptional cases, it will allow plaintiffs in wages actions to bring their actions like other plaintiffs without any such requisition, though subject, as in other cases, to security for costs when the plaintiff is out of the jurisdiction.

* (315) The bail bond in this case was conditioned that the defendants should restore the vessel, and her equipments, or the value thereof, as if ordered by the court to do so,

† (316) By the statutes of 13 Rich. 2, c. 5; 15 Rich. 2, c. 3; and 2 Hen. 4, c. 11, all now repealed, certain responsibilities attached to the judge and registrar personally in respect of Admiralty proceedings.

(317) Therefore, and as, according to the old practice, in proceedings by default a party might come in within a year and a day from the decree, and establish a better claim to the property, it seems to have been required of a plaintiff who had obtained a decree in default proceedings, to enable him to obtain the funds in court before the expiration of a year and a day, to give bond to the Queen, to restore the money pronounced to be due to him by the court and paid out to him in case any other person should come in for his interest therein, and establish a superior claim, and to save harmless the judge, registrar, marshal, and all officers of the court.

(318) This form of bond was commonly known as a bond to answer latent demands.

(319) By the Rules and Orders of 1859, now annulled, bail for latent demands was not to be required on payment of money out of the registry, unless the judge otherwise ordered, and now that the Admiralty Division is a branch of the Supreme Court, and possessed therefore of larger powers, the practice has been superseded altogether.

(320) See also as to such bonds, The Saracen, 10 Jur. 397; 2 W. Rob. 453; 4 Notes of Cases, 503; 11 Jur. 255; 6 Moore, P. C. C. 75; The Tecumseh, 6 Notes of Cases, 668; 13 Jur. 68; Clerke's Prax. tit. 35; Abb. Sh. (10th ed.), 542.

‡ (321) By the old practice the instrument of release was called a supersedeas when the warrant was executed by the plaintiff's proctor or agent, and a release when the warrant was executed by the marshal.

registry, to be called a release. Ord. XXIX. r. 1, No. 322.

888. A solicitor, at whose instance any property has been arrested, may, before an appearance has been entered, obtain the release thereof by filing a notice that he withdraws the warrant. Ibid. r. 2, No. 323.

889. A solicitor may obtain the release of any property by paying into the registry the sum in respect of which the action has been commenced. Ibid. r. 3, No. 324.

890. A solicitor, who shall have filed a bail bond in the sum in respect of which the action has been commenced, or paid such sum into the registry, and, if the action be one of salvage, shall have also filed an affidavit as to the value of the property arrested, shall be entitled to a release for the same, unless there be a caveat against the release thereof outstanding in the "Caveat Release Book." Ibid. r. 6, No. 327.

891. The Court of Chancery appointed certain persons receivers of a freight, which was subsequently, but before they had obtained possession, arrested in a suit in the Court of Admiralty. Upon motion, in the latter court, on behalf of the receivers, release decreed, but without costs. The Bloomer, 11 L. T. N.S. 46.

892. Two arrestments having been laid on a foreign vessel, one to found jurisdiction against the owner, the other proceeding on a summons raised against him, held, that a charter-party entered into by the master on the same day when the arrestment to found jurisdiction was used, did not entitle the charterer to obtain a recall of the arrestment to enable the vessel to proceed on her voyage. Thorburn v. De Wolf, Dec. 18, 1847; 10 D. 310; 20 Jur. 105. [SCOTCH.]

893. Ship arrested in a cause of damage and bail given to an amount equaling the value of ship and freight (before the limitation of liability was altered to a percentage on the tonnage). Subsequent actions and ship arrested therein. Motion for release without giving bail in those actions rejected. The William Hutt, 1 Lushington, 26; The Tuscarora, 6th Feb. 1858; and see The Clara, Swabey,

894. The ship G. having come into collision with the ship W., the owner of the ship W. caused the ship G. to be arrested, but, in consideration of the insurers agreeing to pay to the owners the amount of damage which the ship W. had received by the collision, her owners released the ship G. from arrest. Held, that the word damage included not only the damage to the ship itself, but consequential damage, such as loss of freight and costs in the Admiralty Court. Heard v. Holman, 11 Jur. N.S. 544; 34 L. J. C. P. 239.

2. Freight and Cargo.*

895. Cargo, arrested for freight only, may be released by filing an affidavit as to the value of the freight, and by paying the amount of the freight into the registry, or by satisfying the judge that it has already been paid. Ord. XXIX. r. 4, No. 325. And see The Victor, 1 Lushington, 72.

896. When a prima facie title to freight is shown by the defendant, a ship arrested for freight is entitled to be released on bail. When cargo is arrested for freight the owners of the cargo as debtors of freight can only obtain a release of the cargo by paying the freight into court. The Ringdove, Swabey, 311.

897. A vessel was arrested in a cause of collision. At the time of the collision she had a cargo on board; at the time of the arrest a portion only of such cargo remained on board. The vessel and cargo belonged to the same owner. Held, on motion for release of the cargo remaining on board, that the freight due upon the whole cargo must be paid into court before the portion on board at the time of arrest could be released. The Roecliff, L. R. 2 A. & E. 363.

3. Mode of obtaining—†

898. For form of release, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A., Pt. 2, No. 16.

* (322) Cargo cannot be arrested quâ cargo in actions for damage by collision, see c. 11, s. 5, p. 1519. When cargo is arrested in actions for salvage, it can only be released on bail being given to answer the action in such proportion of the amount of action as the value of the cargo bears to the values of ship and freight.

† (323) On filing in the Admiralty registry (after twenty-four hours' notice of bail), the bail papers, and also in salvage actions, the affidavit or affidavits of value of the salvaged property, file notice for release with a fifteen shillings stamp impressed on the notice, and

899. The release, when obtained, shall be left with a notice in the registry by the solicitor taking out the same, who shall also at the same time pay all costs, charges and expenses attending the care and custody of the property whilst under arrest; and the property shall thereupon be released. Ord. XXIX. r. 7, No. 328.

4. Possession Fees.

900. Where property has been seized by a commissioned ship-of-war, either public or private, it is de facto under the joint locks of the King and the captor, although in the legal possession of the marshal, according to the tenor of his writ. In the case of a droit, where the King in his office of Admiralty is the captor, it is under his locks alone. If an order come for the release of that property, either on bail or for restitution, it is to be released to the party claiming, at the expense of the party who releases. The King's ship, the private ship-of-war, and the Admiralty, are equally bound to execute such an order, which is performed in the two former cases by the agent of the captors, and in the case of the Admiralty by their officer, the marshal. The expense of the release is no charge on the cargo, unless the captor's expenses are decreed as a charge on the cargo. The Rendsborg, 6 C. Rob. 174.

901. Before the present practice was established of the marshal arresting the property in all cases, it was held that when the marshal arrested he had the security of the ship for his costs of arrest, including possession or detention fees, but that when the warrant was executed by the plaintiff's agent the plaintiff was responsible for possession fees. The North American, Swabey, 467.

902. Claim of asserted salvors pronounced against but without costs. Motion to condemn them in the expenses of possession of the vessel which had remained in the custody of the marshal during the cause, the parties not being able to agree the values, rejected. The court intimated that had the owners given in their affidavit of value, and applied for a release, and the vessel had then been detained by the asserted salvors, it would have granted the motion. The India, 1 W. Rob. 410.

902a. The court, having pronounced that it had no jurisdiction in a cause of damage to cargo, ordered, on motion, the marshal's fees of possession to be paid by the plaintiff. The Ironsides, 1 Lushington, 467. See also The Kate, 10 Jur. N.S. 444; The Louisa, 9 Jur. N.S. 676. See further as to possession fees.

See also tit. Costs, c. 50, p. 417.

5. Obedience to—

903. The court will issue an attachment against salvors seeking to retain possession of a vessel after the production to them of the release. When a release issues, instantaneous obedience must be paid to it. The Towan, 8 Jur. 222.

6. Caveat Release.

904. As to the entry of caveat release in lieu of issuing warrant in subsequent actions, or to give time for enquiries as to bail, and the consequences of unnecessarily delaying releases thereby, see Pt. I. p. 1477.

hand in at the same time a form of release, forms of which, as required, are obtainable at Room No. 420. Deliver the release (which is prepared while the clerk waits) at the marshal's office, and instruct him to release the property by filling up and leaving at his office a præcipe for such purpose. This præcipe is on a printed form which may be obtained at Room No. 420. The præcipe bears no stamp, but the release must have an impressed stamp of £1 thereon as the marshal's fee for executing the release. See R. S. C. Fees, 1884, No. 94.

(323a) The possession fees due to the marshal for the custody of the property must be paid at the same time by stamps impressed on the release, whether the plaintiff or defendant files the release.

(324) The marshal's charge, payable in stamps, for keeping possession of a ship, with or without cargo, or of cargo without ship, are 5s. a day, including the cost of a ship-keeper if required. See S. C. Fees, 1884, No. 98.

(324a) If a release be obtained by consent of the opposing party the consent must be filed.

(325) To obtain a release upon payment of money into the registry the bank receipt for the money must be filed.

(326) For form of notice or præcipe for release, see R. S. C. 1883, App. A., Part 2, No. 15. The notice should be duly headed in the cause, and intimate that the solicitor filing it applies for release. It must be dated and signed by the practitioner or his clerk for him.

7. Mortgagee's Right to—.

905. A mortgagee, although entitled to intervene in a cause in rem of equipment and repairs, is not entitled to claim a release of the vessel upon giving bail conditioned to pay the claim of the material men, in the event of its being held to have priority over the mortgage. The Aecia, 4 Asp. 226; 41 L. T. 564. (Adm. Ir.)

906. In an action against ship and freight for master's wages, the mortgagee in possession is entitled to a release of the ship upon giving bail, notwithstanding the master had become liable in respect of bills of exchange, drawn upon the charterers for the ship's use. The Ringdove, Swabey, 311. But see tit. MASTERS, Nos. 105—108a, p. 1126.

906a. So also in an action between part owners for an account and a sale of the ship, a mortgagee holding a mortgage which a sale of the ship would not satisfy, is entitled, on intervening, to a release of the ship and costs. The Eastern Belle, 33 L. T. 214.

8. In Actions of Possession.

See Nos. 872—877, p. 1554.

9. In Actions of Salvage.

907. In an action of salvage the value of the property under arrest shall be agreed, or an affidavit of value filed, before the property is released, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order. Ord. XXIX. r. 5, No. 326.*

907a. The owners filed an affidavit in the Admiralty Court as to the values of the ship and cargo salvaged, and the salvors did not impeach those values in that court. The Judicial Committee refused to allow affidavits impeaching the values to be brought in by the salvors on the hearing of the appeal. The Endeavour, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 338; 6 Notes of Cases, 56.

908. In a suit for salvage of derelict cargo the court, on motion, allowed a portion of the cargo to be released on a moiety of the value, and a sum to answer costs being paid in. R. M. Mills, No. 243, July 19, 1860.

908a. Salvors are entitled to have the value of ship, freight, and cargo stated. Where the freight is included in the cargo they have it de facto. The Charlotte, 5 Notes of Cases, 6.

909. The values are generally conclusive, even though the ship was afterwards sold by decree of the court for a larger sum, The Betsey, 5 C. Rob. 296; or for a smaller sum, The Hanna, 37 L. T. N.S. 364; 3 Asp. N.S. 503.

909a. The values as shown by the affidavit were erroneously stated, owing to a bond fide mistake, and were on application allowed to be altered after decree made, and the salvage reduced accordingly. The James Armstrong, L. R. 4 A. & E. 380; 33 L. T. N.S. 390.

910. Part of the cargo of a ship having been salvaged, the salvors delivered it into the custody of the receiver of wreck. The owners thereupon, in compliance with the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 468, gave bond to the receiver, who released the property, but upon the owners attempting to take possession of it the salvors forcibly prevented them, and brought a salvage action in the Court of Admiralty, in which the property was arrested. Release decreed, with costs against the salvors. The Lady Katherine Barham, 5 L. T. N.S. 693.

911. A vessel and cargo having been arrested in a suit for salvage and bail given, application of the owners to have the ship and cargo released, supported by affidavits that they were daily deteriorating in value, and opposed by the salvors, who prayed a commission of appraisal, granted by the court under the circumstances of there being an action for damage to the ship by collision also pending at the suit of the owners, and on the condition of the owners making statements of the value in acts of court, and undertaking to afford every facility to the salvors in another valuation, should the value be further impeached. The Glasgow Packet, 8 Jur. 67.

* (327) If the plaintiffs are dissatisfied with the values, as disclosed in the affidavit filed by the defendants, they may apply for an appraisal of the property by the marshal, but they will be condemned in the costs of the appraisal, unless the appraised value largely exceeds that stated in the affidavit. See as to such costs tit. COSTS, c. 38, s. 13, p. 411.

(328) As to appraisal by marshal or receiver of wreck, see c. 44, s. 7, Nos. 2079 et seq.

(329) The valuation of a re-captured ship, in order to ascertain the rate of salvage, may be determined by the policy of insurance, if there be no reason to suspect she has been undervalued, and the same rule may be observed as to goods where there are policies upon them; if that, however, should not be the case, the salvors have a right to insist upon proof of the real value, which may be given by the production of the merchant's invoices. 1 Park on Ins. 327; Beawes' Lex Merc. 147.

912. The security to be found under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 468, to satisfy the claim of the owner, master, and crew of a vessel for services rendered, along with another vessel, to a ship in distress, should be one-third of the sixth part of the value of the ship and cargo alleged to be saved. Otis v. Kidston, 24 Sess. Cas. 419. [SCOTCH.]

21. Proceedings by and against Third Parties.

913. The court or a judge may require any person to be made a party to any action or proceeding, and may give the conduct of the action or proceeding to such person as he may think fit, and may make such order in any particular case as he may think just for placing the defendant on the record on the same footing in regard to costs as other parties having a common interest with him in the matters in question. See Ord. XVI. r. 39, No. 161.

914. If a third party appears pursuant to the third-party notice, the defendant giving the notice may apply to the court or a judge for directions, and the court or judge, upon the hearing of such application, may, if satisfied that there is a question proper to be tried as to the liability of the third party to make the contribution or indemnity claimed, in whole or in part, order the question of such liability, as between the third party and the defendant giving the notice, to be tried in such manner, at or after the trial of the action, as the court or judge may direct; and, if not so satisfied, may order such judgment as the nature of the case may require to be entered in favour of the defendant giving the notice against the third party. Ibid. r. 52, No. 174.

915. The court or a judge upon the hearing of the application mentioned in Rule 52, No. 914, supra, may, if it shall appear desirable to do so, give the third party liberty to defend the action, upon such terms as may be just, or to appear at the trial and take such part therein as may be just, and generally may order such proceedings to be taken, documents to be delivered, or amendments to be made, and give such directions as to the court or judge shall appear proper for having the question most conveniently determined, and as to the mode and extent in or to which the third party shall be bound or made liable by the judgment in the action. Ibid. r. 53, No. 175.

916. The court or a judge may decide all questions of costs, as between a third party and the other parties to the action, and may order any one or more to pay the costs of any other, or others, or give such directions as to costs as the justice of the case may require. Ibid. r. 54, No. 176.

917. Where a defendant claims to be entitled to contribution or indemnity against any other defendant to the action, a notice may be issued and the same procedure shall be adopted, for the determination of such questions between the defendants, as would be issued and taken against such other defendant, if such last-mentioned defendant were a third party; but nothing herein contained shall prejudice the rights of the plaintiff against any defendant in the action. Ibid. r. 55, No. 177.

918. In an action of collision brought by a vessel at anchor against a vessel being towed the defendants served a third party notice on the owners of the tug claiming indemnity. On an application for directions under Ord. XVI. r. 21 (now r. 52, No. 174), the plaintiffs objected to the introduction of the third parties, and on its appearing probable that questions would arise between the defendants and the tug different from those between the plaintiffs and the defendants, and that the plaintiffs might be embarrassed, the court dismissed the third parties. The Bianca, 8 P. D. 91; 52 L. J. P. D. 56; 5 Asp. 60.

919. A collision took place between the vessels S. and C., the C. being at the time in tow of the steam-tug D. The owners of the S. commenced an action of damage against the C., alleging that the collision was caused by the negligence of the C. and her tug, or one of them. The owners of the C. obtained leave to issue a notice to D. claiming indemnity against her, and order made that the owners of the tug be at liberty to appear and defend and abide the decision of the court. At the hearing the owners of the D. appeared, but the owners of the C. did not. The court held, that the C. was alone to blame for the collision, and that her owners were not entitled to indemnity over against the owners of the D. The Cartsburn, 5 P. D. 35; 49 L. J. P. D. & A. 14; 28 W. R. 378. On appeal, held, that so much of the judgment of the court below as adjudged that the owners of the C. were not entitled to indemnity over against the owners of the D. must be reversed. Ibid. 5 P. D. 59.

919a. Where a defendant claims to be entitled to indemnity over against a person not a party to the action, leave will not be given under Ord. XVI. r. 48, to serve a third party notice unless the claim is on a contract of indemnity. Speller v. The Bristol Steam Navigation Co., 5 Asp. 228.

920. For form of order to discharge or vary an application by third party, see R. S. C. 1883, Appendix K., No. 14.

921. For provisions that, in case of the marriage, death, bankruptcy, or devolution of estate by operation of law of any party to a cause or matter, the court or a judge may order the husband, personal representative, trustee, or other successor in interest of such party to be made a party, see Ord. XVII. r. 2, No. 179.

922. And that after any similar or other event occurring after the commencement of any cause or matter and causing a change or transmission of interest or liability, an order may be obtained for making a new party, or making a present party a party in another capacity, and for continuing the proceedings against such other parties also, Ibid. r. 4, No. 181; and as to the service of such an order, Ibid. r. 5, No. 182.

923. For provisions that where any person under no disability, or none but coverture, or being under any disability other than coverture, but having a guardian ad litem in the cause or matter, is served with such order, he may apply to the court or a judge to discharge or vary it at any time within twelve days from the service thereof, Ibid. r. 6, No. 183.

924. And that where any such person being under any disability other than coverture, and not having a guardian ad litem in the cause or matter, is served with any such order, he may apply to the court or a judge to discharge or vary the order at any time within twelve days from the appointment of a guardian ad litem for such party, and that until such period of twelve days has expired, the order has no force against him, Ibid. r. 7, No. 184.

See also c. 6, s. 6, p. 1500.

22. Proceedings by Default.

1. Generally.*

925. Where any defendant fails to appear to a writ of summons, and the plaintiff is desirous of proceeding upon default of appearance under any of the following rules of this order, or under Ord. XV. r. 1, he shall, before taking such proceeding upon default, file an affidavit of service, or of notice in lieu of service, as the case may be. Ord. XIII. r. 2, No. 102.

926. For provisions, where the writ of summons is indorsed for a liquidated demand, and the defendant fails, or all the defendants, if more than one, fail to appear, that the plaintiff may enter final judgment for any sum not exceeding the sum indorsed on the writ, with interest at the rate specified (if any), or (if no rate be specified) at the rate of five per cent. per annum, to the date of the judgment, and costs, Ibid. r. 3, No. 103.

927. For provisions that where the writ of summons is indorsed for a liquidated demand, and there are several defendants, some of whom do and others do not appear to the writ, the plaintiff may enter final judgment against such as have not appeared, and issue execution against them without prejudice to his right to proceed against such as have appeared, Ibid. r. 4, No. 104.

928. So, also, where the writ is indorsed with a claim for detention of goods and pecuniary damages, or either of them, and as to a writ of inquiry to assess value or damages or the dispensing therewith, Ibid. rr. 5 and 6, Nos. 105—107.

929. Where judgment is entered pursuant to any of the preceding rules of this order, it shall be lawful for the court or a judge to set aside or vary such judgment upon such terms as may be just. Ibid. r. 10, No. 110.

930. Where a defendant fails to appear to a writ of summons issued out of a district registry, and the defendant had the option of entering an appearance either in the district registry or in the Central Office, judgment for want of appearance shall not be entered by the plaintiff until after such time as a letter posted in London on the previous evening, in due time for delivery to the defendant on the following morning, ought, in due course of post, to have reached him. Ord. XIII. r. 11, No. 111.

931. In all actions not by the rules of this order otherwise specially provided for, in case the party served with the writ, or in Admiralty actions in rem the defendant, does not appear within the time limited for appearance, upon the filing by the plaintiff of a proper affidavit of service, and, if the writ is not specially indorsed under Ord. III. r. 6, of a statement of claim, the action may proceed as if such party had appeared, subject, as to actions where an account is claimed, to the provisions of Ord. XV. Ibid. r. 12, No. 112.

932. When the proceedings are by default the court will view a doubtful point of jurisdiction less scrutinizingly than when the point is raised by a defendant. The Afina Van Linge, Swabey, 515.

2. Old Practice.*

3. Against Infants or Persons of Unsound Mind.

933. For provisions where no appearance has been entered to a writ of summons for a defendant who is an infant or a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition, for the plaintiff to apply for an order that a guardian be assigned to appear and defend the action, the application to be made after summons served, and six clear days' notice after the expiration of the time allowed for appearance, see Ord. XIII. r. 1, No. 101.

4. For want of Statement of Claim or Defence.†

934. If the plaintiff, being bound to deliver a statement of claim, does not deliver the same within the time allowed for that purpose, the defendant may, at the expiration of that time, apply to the court or a judge to dismiss the action with costs, for want of prosecution; and on the hearing of such application the court or judge may, if no statement of claim shall have been delivered, order the action to be dismissed accordingly, or may make such other order on such terms as the court or judge shall think just. Ord. XXVII. r. 1, No. 294.

935. If the plaintiff's claim be only for a debt or liquidated demand, and the defendant does not, within the time allowed for that purpose, deliver a defence, the plaintiff may, at the expiration of such time, enter final judgment for the amount claimed, with costs. Ibid. r. 2, No. 295.

936. And where there are several defendants, and one so makes default, the plaintiff may enter final judgment, and issue execution against him without prejudice to his right to proceed with his action against the other defendants. Ibid. r. 3, No. 296.

937. For provisions, where the plaintiff's claim is for detention of goods and pecuniary damages, or either, and the defendant or defendants make default as mentioned in Rule 2, that the plaintiff may enter an interlocutory judgment against him or them, and that a writ of inquiry shall issue to assess the value or damages, or both, as the case may be, or for otherwise ascertaining such value or damages, Ibid. r. 4, No. 297.

* (332) The old practice was to arrest the person and take bail for his appearing and answering in the suit, and pay what might be adjudged and the expenses. When this practice fell into disuse proceedings in rem were so generally adopted that the reports scarcely contain any mention of proceedings in personam by default.

(333) It seems, however, that when a monition issued against a party to appear, and he did not do so, he might be attached for contempt of court, or that proceedings might be prosecuted in his absence. See The North American, Swabey, 468; The Heart of Oak, 29 L. J. Adm. 78. Either course of procedure might be adopted in the Ecclesiastical Courts, whose practice, like that of the Admiralty, was based on the civil law.

(334) By the American practice, if the defendant makes default in appearance on the court-day on which the process against him is returnable, or on any other day assigned by the court, the pleadings are adjudged to be taken pro confesso against him, and the cause is proceeded with ex parte. See 2 Conkling's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), 178. [AMERICAN.]

(335) As to the old practice in rem, see notes 340—360, infra.

† (336) As to the proceedings under this order, see Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. pp. 287—292.

938. For provisions that where in any such action as in Rule 4 mentioned there are several defendants, if one or more so make default, the plaintiff may enter an interlocutory judgment against those so making default, and proceed with his action against the others; and for the value and amount of damages against the defendant making default being assessed at the same time with the trial of the action or issues therein against the other defendants, unless the court or a judge otherwise directs, Ibid. r. 5, No. 298.

939. For provisions that, where the plaintiff's claim is for a debt or liquidated demand, and also for detention of goods and pecuniary damages, or such damages only, and any defendant makes default as mentioned in Rule 2, the plaintiff may enter final judgment for the debt or liquidated demand, and also enter interlocutory judgment for the value of the goods and damages, or the damages only, and proceed as mentioned in Rules 4 and 5, Ibid. r. 6, No. 299.

940. For provisions that where the plaintiff's claim is for a debt or liquidated demand, the detention of goods and pecuniary damages, or for any of them, and the defendant delivers a defence, which purports to offer an answer to part only of the plaintiff's cause of action, the plaintiff may by leave enter judgment, final or interlocutory, as the case may be, for the part unanswered; if the unanswered part consists of a separate cause of action, or is severable from the rest: but where there is a counterclaim, execution on such judgment shall not issue without leave, Ibid. r. 9, No. 302.

941. In all other actions than those in the preceding rules of this order mentioned, if the defendant makes default in delivering a defence, the plaintiff may set down the action on motion for judgment, and such judgment shall be given as upon the statement of claim the court or a judge shall consider the plaintiff to be entitled to. Ibid. r. 11, No. 304.

942. For provisions that where in any such action as mentioned in Rule 11, supra, there are several defendants, and one so makes default, the plaintiff may either (if the cause of action is severable) set down the action at once on motion for judgment against the defendant so making default, or set it down against him when it is entered for trial, or set it down on motion for judgment against the other defendants, Ibid. r. 12, No. 305.

5. For want of Reply or subsequent Pleading.

943. If the plaintiff does not deliver a reply, or any party does not deliver any subsequent pleading within the period allowed for that purpose, the pleadings shall be deemed to be closed at the expiration of that period, and all the material statements of fact in the pleading last delivered shall be deemed to have been denied and put in issue. Ibid. r. 13, No. 306.

6. For want of Delivery of Pleading in Issues.

944. In any case in which issues arise in an action other than between plaintiff and defendant, if any party to any such issue makes default in delivering any pleading, the opposite party may apply to the court or a judge for such judgment, if any, as upon the pleadings he may appear to be entitled to; and the court or judge may order judgment to be entered accordingly, or may make such other order as may be necessary to do complete justice between the parties. Ibid. r. 14, No. 307.

7. Setting aside of Judgment.

945. Any judgment by default, whether under this order or under any other of these rules, may be set aside by the court or a judge upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as such court may think fit. Ibid. r. 15, No. 308.

946. See as to this rule Attwood v. Chichester, 3 Q. B. D. 722, and Watt v. Barnett, 3 Q. B. D. 363.

8. In rem.

(a) Generally.

947. In all actions not by the rules of this order otherwise specially provided for, in case the party served with the writ, or in Admiralty actions in rem the defendant, does not appear within the time limited for appearance, upon the filing by the plaintiff of a proper affidavit of service, and, if the writ is not specially indorsed under Ord. III. r. 6, of a statement of claim, the action may proceed as if such party had appeared, subject, as to actions where an account is claimed, to the provisions of Ord. XV. Ord. XIII. r. 12, No. 112.

948. A plaintiff in an undefended bottomry action in rem must, before he can obtain judgment by default, file an affidavit of service in the registry as provided by Ord. XIII. r. 2, No. 102, and annex thereto the original writ. The Eppos, 5 Asp. 180.

948a. If a defendant in an action in rem does not appear the proper course is to verify the allegations in the statement of claim by affidavit, and set the action down on motion for judgment. The Spero Expecto, 5 Asp. 197; 49 L. T. 749; 32 W. R. 524.

949. The time runs from the service of the writ of summons, and not of the warrant of arrest. The Marca, 4 Asp. 57.

949a. In an action in rem a plaintiff before moving for judgment upon default of appearance must wait the ten days allowed for delivery of defence. See Ord. XIII. r. 12, No. 112; and Ord. XXI. r. 6, No. 239. The Avenir, 9 P. D. 84; 53 L. J. P. D. 63; 5 Asp. 218; 32 W. R. 755.

(d) Notice of Trial.

952. In Admiralty actions in rem, by default, if the judge is satisfied the plaintiff's claim is well founded, he may pronounce for it with or without a reference, and order the property to be appraised and sold, with or without previous notice, and the proceeds paid into court, or otherwise as he thinks just. See Ord. XIII. r. 13, No. 113.

See also No. 949, supra.

(g) Old Practice.‡

* (337) In proceedings in rem by default the plaintiff's solicitor files a statement of claim in manuscript, and affidavits also in manuscript, in verification of his case, and moves the court by counsel for judgment, and, if need be, for an order of appraisal and sale of the property.

† (338) By the modern practice, in actions by default the registrar takes down the judgment as made without prejudice to other actions in which other plaintiffs may be entitled to precedence, by reason of the nature of their claims, so that it is no longer necessary for plaintiffs in other actions to appear and apply that such rights may be reserved, as the plaintiff gains no advantage in this respect as prior petens.

(338a) In proceedings in rem by default the order for a commission of appraisal and sale is made at the same time that judgment is given in favour of the claim. By the old practice the decree of sale was made before the judgment, but this rather incongruous course is now transposed.

‡ (339) By the old practice when the proceedings were in rem, and after service and return of the warrant, under which all persons in general, interested in the property proceeded against, were cited to appear and show cause, if no person appeared, the further proceedings taken to enforce the claim were styled as by default, or in pœnam contumacie, i. e. in pain of the contumacy of the parties interested in the property arrested, and cited by the service of warrant on the property, and making default in doing so.

(340) On the court day on which the warrant was made specially returnable, or on the first regular court day after the period allowed for the service had expired, the plaintiff's proctor returned it into court. The parties cited were then three times publicly called in court, and if no appearance were given by or for them, an order was obtained recording a default against them.

(340a) No step could be taken in proceedings in pœnam except upon one of the regularly-appointed sittings of the court for the despatch of general business.

(341) Four defaults in all upon four separate court days were obtained.

(341a) These four defaults were required in order to give parties interested in the res, and who might be resident at a distance, time to appear.

(342) On the same day that the fourth default was obtained, it was competent to the plaintiff to move the court, upon the proofs filed by him, to sign a primum decretum, or first decree. The effect of the first decree was to put the plaintiff in legal possession of the res, as security for the discharge of his claim, subject to other lawful demands not brought forward, but which might be entitled to take precedence of it, and also subject to the owner's right to redeem it by appearing within a year, and paying the claim and costs.

(h) *Sale.*See c. 44, Nos. 2053 et seq.(i) In District Registries.

See c. 23, p. 1568.

(343) The owner of the res might appear at any time in the course of the proceedings by default, but before doing so his proctor was required to pay or undertake for the payment of the costs of the proceedings by default incurred through his previous non-appearance, and styled contumacy fees. See 2 Browne's Civil & Adm. Law, 405; Clerke's Prax. Cur. Adm. tit. 37, 38, and the reference to such fees in bonds to answer latent demands. The Saracen, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 66, n.

(344) The first decree was prepared by the plaintiff's proctor, settled by the registrar, engrossed on parchment, signed by one counsel and by the judge, and filed in the registry.

(345) Failing the owner's appearance, after the expiration of a year and a day, it would seem that the nude possession conferred by the first decree operated, in the Admiralty, to give the claimant a full possessory right and enjoyment over the res without any second decree, though, by the civil law, a second decree was necessary for that purpose. (See 2 Browne's Civil and Adm. Law, pp. 352, 403.) An application, however, could, after the year and a day, be made to the court for a sale, upon which the res would be sold, the amount due paid, and the balance retained in the registry until claimed.

(346) In default of any claim for such balance it would become a droit of Admiralty, and be payable accordingly.

(347) As, however, it was generally inconvenient to the claimant to wait the expiration of the year and a day; and as the res was during such time lying idle and unused, and therefore deteriorating in condition, and as, according to the adage quoted by Lord Tenterden, "Ships were built to plough the seas, and not to lie by the wall," the following course of proceeding was usually adopted, and was of some antiquity:—The court decreed, on the application of the plaintiff, a monition, called a "perishable monition," against all persons having any interest in the property to show cause why it should not be sold, and also a commission for the appraisalment of the property.

(348) The perishable monition was required to be served by the marshal on the Royal Exchange, London, as a place where "merchants most do congregato." It was served and leaving by posting it up on the Exchange, and there by a copy affixed there.

(349) After the service and return of this monition, and the return of the commission of appraisalment, upon proof being furnished to the court by affidavit, that the res was deteriorating in value by remaining unused, a commission for the sale thereof was decreed. The commission was executed by the proctor, or his agent at the outports, who acted as commissioner, and engaged an auctioneer and sold the property. The proceeds of sale, less the expenses of sale, were paid into court, and an order of the judge obtained for payment of the amount found due, which was then paid to the plaintiff out of the proceeds of sale on his giving bail to return all or such part of the sum as might be necessary to answer any lawful demands which might, before the expiration of the year before mentioned, be brought forward, and found entitled to supersede his claim. This was called "Bail to answer latent demands."

(350) For the cases illustrating the old practice, see The Exeter, 1 C. Rob. 173; The Friends, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 73. (351) This practice was superseded by that established under the Rules and Orders of Nov. 1859, now annulled by R. S. C. 1883, App. O.

(352) Which established the following practice: After twelve days from the filing of the warrant, if an appearance had not been entered, the proctor might, on filing in the registry a præcipe, take out a notice of sale, to be advertised by him in two or more public journals, appointed by the judge.

(353) These journals were The Times, The Shipping and Mercantile Gazette, and a local newspaper having the largest circulation at the place where the property was situate.

(354) After six days from the advertisement of the notice of sale in the journals, if an appearance had not been entered, the proctor filed in the registry an affidavit to the effect that the notices had been duly advertised, with copies of the journals annexed, and such proofs as might be necessary to establish the claim, and a notice of motion to have the property sold.

(355) If, when the cause came before the judge, he was satisfied that the claim was well founded, he ordered the property to be appraised and sold, and the proceeds paid into the registry.

(357) Within six days from the time when the proceeds had been paid into the registry the proctor in each cause, if he had not previously done so, filed his proofs in the registry, and had the cause placed on the list for hearing.

Subject to rules of court, writs of summons for the commencement of actions in the High Court of Justice shall be issued by the district registrars when thereunto required; and unless any order to the contrary shall be made by the High Court of Justice, or by any judge thereof, all such further proceedings, including proceedings for the arrest or detention of a ship, her tackle, apparel, furniture, cargo, or freight, as may and ought to be taken by the respective parties to such action in the High Court down to and including entry for trial, or (if the plaintiff is entitled to sign final judgment or to obtain an order for an account by reason of the non-appearance of the defendant) down to and including final judgment, or an order for an account, may be taken before a district registrar, and recorded in the district registry, in such manner as may be prescribed by rules of court; and all such other proceedings in any such action as may be prescribed by rules of court shall be taken, and, if necessary, may be recorded in the same district registry. See the Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 64.

963. The court or judge of the division to which any cause or matter is assigned, may order that any books or documents may be produced, or any accounts taken or inquiries made, in the office of or by any district registrar, who shall then proceed to carry all such directions into effect in the manner prescribed; and where any such accounts or inquiries have been directed to be taken or made by any district registrar, his report in writing as to the result thereof may be acted upon by the court. Ibid. s. 66.

964. Where a cause or matter is proceeding in a district registry, all proceedings, except where by these rules it is otherwise provided, or the court or a judge shall otherwise order, shall be taken in the district registry, down to and including the entry of final judgment; and every final judgment and every order for an account, by reason of the default of the defendant, or by consent, shall be entered in the district registry in the proper book, in the same manner as a like judgment or order in an action proceeding in London would be entered in the Central Office. Ord. XXXV. r. 1, No. 401.

965. Where a cause or matter is proceeding in a district registry, all proceedings relating to the following matters, namely—(a) leave to enter judgments under Ord. XVI. rr. 50 and 51; (b) leave to issue or renew writs of execution; (c) examination of judgment debtors for garnishee purposes, or under Ord. XLII. r. 32; (d) garnishee orders; (e) charging orders nisi; shall, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order, be taken in the district registry. Ibid. r. 5, No. 405.

966. No affidavit or record of the court shall be taken out of a district registry (except upon removal of the proceedings to London) without the order of a judge or of the district registrar, and no subpoena for the production of any such document shall be issued. Ibid. r. 22, No. 422.

967. No order made on a petition shall be passed until the original petition shall have been filed in the Central Office, or where the proceedings are taken in a district registry, in the district registry, and a note thereof made on the judgment or order by the proper officer. Where an action is proceeding in a district registry, the district registrar (unless required to act under Rule 18 of this Order) shall, before issuing a warrant for the arrest of the property, ascertain by telegraph, or otherwise, from the principal registry, whether or not any caveat has been entered against the issue of a warrant for the arrest thereof. Ord. XXIX. r. 13, No. 334.

6. Amendment of Writs.

975. Writs of summons issued out of a district registry cannot be amended by order or fiat of a master, unless the action has been removed to London by appearance or otherwise. No writ issued out of a district registry can be amended in the Central Office, unless the duplicate filed in the district registry has been previously received in the Central Office. If it becomes necessary to send to London (for amendment or otherwise) the copy writ filed in the district registry, authority may be given to send the copy writ to the Central Office by sealing a duplicate of the præcipe for appearance, which shall be transmitted to the district registrar by the solicitors concerned. If a sole defendant appears, or all the defendants appear in the district registry, or if all the defendants who appear appear in the district registry and the others make default in appearance, then, subject to the power of removal in Ord. XXXV. rr. 13 to 16 provided, the action shall proceed in the district registry. Ord. XII. r. 6, No. 76.

9. Removal to London.

977. Whenever a defendant appears in London to a writ issued out of a district registry, or any proceedings are removed from the district registry to London, by notice under Rule 14 of this Order, or by order of the court or a judge, the district registrar shall transmit to the Central Office all original documents (if any) filed in the district registry, and a copy of all entries of the proceedings in the books of the district registry. Ord. XXXV. r. 20, No. 420.

See also c. 15, s. 3, p. 1537.

10. Removal from London.

978. If the defendant appears, or any of the defendants appear, in London the action shall proceed in London; provided that if the court or a judge shall be satisfied that the defendant appearing in London is a merely formal defendant, or has no substantial cause to interfere in the conduct of the action, such court or judge may order that the action may proceed in the district registry, notwithstanding the appearance in London. Ord. XII. r. 7, No. 77.

See also c. 15, s. 2, p. 1537.

11. By Default.*

12. Application to District Registrar.

979. Every application to a district registrar shall be made in the same manner in which applications at chambers are directed to be made by these rules. Ord. XXXV. r. 7, No. 407.

13. Appeal or Reference from District Registrar to Judge.

980. If any matter appears to the district registrar proper for the decision of a judge, the registrar may refer the same to a judge, and the judge may either dispose of the matter or refer the same back to the registrar with such directions as he may think fit. Ibid. r. 8, No. 408.

981. Any person affected by any order, finding, or decision of a district registrar may appeal to a judge. Such appeal may be made notwithstanding that the order or decision was in respect of a proceeding or matter as to which the district registrar had jurisdiction only by consent. Such appeal shall be by way of indorse-district registry like similar proceedings in London.

ment on the summons by the registrar at the request of any party, or by notice in writing to attend before the judge without a fresh summons within six days after the party complaining has notice of the order, finding, or decision complained of, or such further time as may be allowed by a judge or the registrar. Ibid. r. 9, No. 409.

982. An appeal from a district registrar shall be no stay of proceedings unless so ordered by a judge or the registrar. Ibid. r. 10, No. 410.

14. Filing of Documents.

983. Where a cause or matter is proceeding in a district registry all pleadings and other documents required to be filed shall be filed in the district registry. Ibid. r. 19, No. 419.

15. Entries of Judgments.

984. Where the writ of summons issues out of a district registry, and the plaintiff is entitled to enter interlocutory judgment under any of the Rules of Ord. XIII., or where the cause or matter is proceeding in the district registry and the plaintiff is entitled to enter interlocutory judgment under any of the rules of Ord. XXVII., in either case such interlocutory judgment, and when damages shall have been assessed final judgment, shall be entered in the district registry, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order. Ibid. r. 2, No. 402.

984a. Where a cause or matter is proceeding in a district registry, and the judgment or any other order therein is directed to be entered in the Central Office, the same shall be so entered, and an office copy of every such judgment or order shall be transmitted to the district registry to be filed with the proceedings in the action. Ibid. r. 3, No. 403.

16. References.

See c. 40, Nos. 1954 et seq.

17. Writs of Execution.

985. Where a cause or matter is proceeding in a district registry, all writs of execution for enforcing any judgment or order therein, and all summonses under the Debtors Act, 1869, shall issue from the district registry, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise direct. Ibid. r. 4, No. 404.

18. Taxation of Costs.

See tit. Costs, c. 27, s. 6, p. 382.

19. Funds in Court.

986. The Supreme Court Funds Rules, 1884, do not apply in district registries to funds in court. See R. S. C. F. R. 1884, No. 111.

20. Fees and Stamps.

987. As to the fees in the Liverpool and Manchester District Registries, including those on sales in the Admiralty Division, being taken in stamps, see Order of 24th October, 1877, in Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 788.

24. Interlocutory Proceedings.

1. Generally.

988. As to caveat warrants and caveat releases, see Pt. I. c. 6, p. 1477, and as to proceedings subsequent thereto, see Pt. II. c. 11, p. 1518; as to precedence of actions, see c. 5, p. 1497; as to third parties, see c. 6, s. 6, p. 1500; as to counter-claims, see c. 4, p. 1492; as to paupers, see c. 7, p. 1507; as to disclosure by plaintiff's solicitors, see c. 10, p. 1515; as to warrants, see c. 11, p. 1515; as to service of documents, see c. 12, p. 1524; as to appearance, see c. 13, p. 1532; as to transfer of actions, see c. 15, p. 1536; as to consolidation of actions, see c. 17, p. 1543; as to proceedings in such actions, see c. 18, p. 1544; as to bail, see c. 19, p. 1545; as to release, see c. 20, p. 1556; as to proceedings by and against third parties, see c. 21, p. 1560; as to proceedings by default, see c. 22, p. 1561; as to proceedings in district registry, see c. 23, p. 1566; as to abatement and revival, see c. 30, p. 1580; as to estoppel, see c. 31, p. 1581; as to tenders, see c. 32, p. 1586; as to preliminary acts, see c. 33, p. 1589; as to pleadings, see c. 34, p. 1590; as to proofs, see c. 35, p. 1616; as to view, see tit. EVIDENCE, p. 424; as to printing, see c. 37, p. 1459; as to references, see c. 40, p. 1460; as to arbitrations, see c. 42, ibid.; as to interpleaders, see c. 43, s. 32, p. 1461.

2. Amendment.

989. The court or a judge may at any time, and on such terms as to costs or otherwise as the court or judge may think just, amend any defect or error in any proceedings, and all necessary amendments shall be made for the purpose of determining the real question or issue raised by or depending on the proceedings. Ord. XXVIII. r. 12, No. 320.

990. Clerical mistakes in judgments or orders, or errors arising therein from any accidental slip or omission, may at any time be corrected by the court or a judge on motion or summons without an appeal. Ord. XXVIII. r. 11, No. 319.

990a. The costs of and occasioned by any amendment made pursuant to Rules 2 and 3 of this Order shall be borne by the party making the same, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order. Ibid. r. 13, No. 321.

991. The plaintiff in a cause of damage moved for leave to increase the amount in which the action was entered. The defendant opposed the motion, and the court rejected it in that form, but intimated that if the damages should be proved to exceed the amount of the action the court would, under the powers conferred on it by the 15th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), issue an order against the owners to pay the surplus. The Zephyr, 14 L. T. N.S. 351. See also c. 4, s. 7, p. 1492.

992. As to amendment of action, Ibid. s. 9, p. 1494.

992a. As to amendment of writ of summons, see c. 8, s. 7, p. 1512.

993. As to amendment of pleadings or indorsement, see c. 34, s. 16, p. 1603.

3. Particulars of Demand.*

994. The party at whose instance particulars have been delivered under a judge's order shall, unless the order otherwise provides, have the same length of time for pleading after the delivery of the particulars that he had at the return of the summons. Save as in this rule provided, an order for particulars shall not, unless the order otherwise provides, operate as a stay of proceedings, or give any extension of time. Ord. XIX. r. 8, No. 204.

994a. Further and better particulars of any matter stated in any pleading, notice, or written proceeding requiring particulars, may, in all cases, be ordered upon such terms as to costs and otherwise as may be just. Ibid. r. 7, No. 203.

994b. The rule as to giving particulars is the same in the Admiralty Division as in the Queen's Bench Division, and therefore, in an action of damage to cargo on board the defendant's vessel by reason of alleged defects in the vessel and negligence of the crew, the Court of Appeal ordered the plaintiff to give particulars of the defects and negligence alleged. The Rory, 7 P. D. C. A. 117; 51 L. J. P. D. 22; Ibid. C. A. 73; 4 Asp. 535; overruling The Freedom, L. R. 2 A. & E. 346; 38 L. J. Adm. 25; 3 Asp. 219, 261.

995. In an action for damage to cargo the defendants pleaded that the damage was occasioned by accidents and perils by the bill of lading excepted, and by causes for which the defendants by the terms thereof were not responsible. Held, that the defendants must give particulars of the accidents, perils, and causes which occasioned the damage. The Hakon Adelstein, 43 L. J. Adm. 9.

995a. Plaintiffs in a cause of damage to cargo ordered to furnish particulars as to certain portions of their claim, in order that the defendant might be put in a position to admit liability and pay into court. The Wetterhorn, 3 Asp. N.S. 168; 34 L. T. N.S. 587; 24 W. R. 324.

996. In a cause of damage by collision, where the plaintiff's vessel was totally lost, particulars of their claim ordered to be given. The N. P. Neilsen, 3 Asp. N.S. 169; 34 L. T. N.S. 588; 24 W. R. 324.

996a. For forms of orders for such particulars, see R. S. C. 1883, Appendix K, Nos. 12 and 13.

4. Security for Costs.†

997. The day on which an order for security for costs is served, and the time thenceforward until and including the day on which such security is given, shall not be reckoned in the computation of time allowed to plead, answer interrogatories, or take any other proceeding in the cause or matter. Ord. LXIV. r. 6, No. 966.

998. See also tit. Costrs, c. 19, pp. 363—369; and as to amount of such security, Ibid. p. 363.

999. As to security for costs on application to answer interrogatories, see tit. Costrs, c. 19, p. 363; and ibid. in Addenda.

999a. As to dismissal of causes for delay in giving security for costs, see Nos. 1091, 1092, infra; and tit. Costrs, p. 364.

5. Inquiries.

1000. The court or a judge may, at any stage of the proceedings in a cause or matter, direct any necessary inquiries to be made, notwithstanding that it may appear that there is some special or further relief sought for or some special issue to be tried, as to which it may be proper that the cause or matter should proceed in the ordinary manner. Ord. XXXIII. r. 2, No. 381.

1001. In an action for necessities, on motion for judgment, opposed on the ground that the sum sued for was in respect of matters covered by a contract, and applying that an enquiry might be directed under Ord. XXXIII., order for enquiry directed accordingly; semble to the registrar and merchants. The Sully, 48 L. J. Adm. 56.

6. Accounts under Directions.

(a) *Generally.

1002. The court or a judge may, at any stage of the proceedings in a cause or matter, direct any necessary accounts to be taken, notwithstanding that it may appear that there is some special or further relief sought for or some special issue to be tried, as to which it may be proper that the cause or matter should proceed in the ordinary manner. Ord. XXXIII. r. 2, No. 381.

1003. The court or a judge may, either by the judgment or order directing an account to be taken or by any subsequent order, give special directions with regard to the mode in which the account is to be taken or vouched, and in particular may direct that in taking the account, the books of account in which the accounts in question have been kept shall be taken as prima facie evidence of the truth of the matters therein contained, with liberty to the parties interested to take such objections thereto as they may be advised. Ibid. r. 3, No. 382.

1004. As to each direction being numbered so that each distinct account and inquiry may be designated by a number, and as to the form of such judgment or order for account, Ibid. r. 7, No. 386.

1005. In taking any account directed by any judgment or order, all just allowances shall be made without any direction for that purpose. Ibid. r. 8, No. 387.

1006. As to the provisions of Rules 14, 15, 19, 34, 35, 36 and 37 of this Order, applying to an inquiry under a writ of inquiry, see Ord. XXXVI. r. 56, No. 480.

1007. Where damages are to be assessed in respect of any continuing cause of action, they shall be assessed down to the time of the assessment. Ibid. r. 58, No. 482.

(b) The Account.

1008. Where any account is directed to be taken, the accounting party, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise direct, shall make out his account and verify the same by affidavit. The items on each side of the account shall be numbered consecutively, and the account shall be referred to by the affidavit as an exhibit and be left in the judge's chambers, or with the official or other referee, as the case may be. Ord. XXXIII. r. 4, No. 383.

1008a. But the judge may direct the vouchers to be produced at the offices of the solicitor of the accounting party, or at any other convenient place, and that only such items as may be contested or surcharged shall be brought before the judge in chambers. Ibid. r. 4a of 1885.

(c) The Surcharge.

1009. Any party seeking to charge any accounting party beyond what he has by his account admitted to have received shall give notice thereof to the accounting party, stating, so far as he is able, the amount sought to be charged, and the particulars thereof in a short and succinct manner. Ibid. r. 5, No. 384.

(d) Proceedings in Case of Delay.

1010. For provisions in the event of undue delay in the prosecution of any trict registry, except in pursuance of an order under this section. Ibid.

* (366) As to such accounts, see Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 321.

accounts or inquiries, or in any other proceedings under any judgment or order, that the court or judge may require the party to explain the delay, and thereupon make such order with regard to expediting the proceedings or the conduct, or stay thereof, and as to costs as the circumstances of the case require, see Ord. XXXIII. r. 9, No. 388.

7. Solicitors' Agreements.*

1011. Any agreement in writing between the solicitors in Admiralty actions dated and signed by the solicitors of both parties, may, if the Admiralty registrar think it reasonable and such as the judge would under the circumstances allow, be filed, and shall thereupon become an order of court, and have the same effect as if such order had been made by the judge in person. Ord. LII. r. 23, No. 718.

1012. The value of ship and freight may be settled by agreement between the proctors (semble duly filed), in which case both parties are bound by their own act and consent. The Mellona, 3 W. Rob. 23; 6 Notes of Cases, 69.

1013. A settlement of the cause by agreement will release the bail. The Harriet, 1 W. Rob. 195; 6 Jur. 197; 1 Notes of Cases, 327.

1014. The Court of Admiralty would not take judicial cognizance of agreements between practitioners when such agreements did not appear in orders of courts. The Saracen, 10 Jur. 398; 4 Notes of Cases, 511; and see The Manchester, 1 W. Rob. 94; The Mellona, 3 Rob. 25; 12 Jur. 274; 6 Notes of Cases, 72.

1015. An interview for the settlement of a claim is best conducted by the practitioners of the parties in person. Preliminary negotiations, especially in causes of wages, are entitled to the peculiar protection of the court. There is no necessity to state at such interviews that they are without prejudice, the res gesta sufficiently indicate it. The Frederick, 1 Hagg. 220.

1016. At a meeting for amicable arrangement of claims, where the parties are personally produced for the purpose of agreement and to prevent litigation, a disclosure of all facts tending to a just conclusion should be made, and facts, without which a knowledge of the real justice is unattainable, should not be suppressed. Parties should attend such a meeting in a spirit of equitable adjustment. Ibid. 223.

1017. A negotiation and settlement with a party for whom a proctor had appeared, without intimation to that proctor, is irregular and improper. The Haidee, 1 Notes of Cases, 599; see also The Araminta, Swabey, 81.

1018. In a cause of salvage a negotiation and settlement with certain of the salvors, unknown to their proctor, and certain offers in the nature of a tender to the others of them, in satisfaction of their claims, held to be no legal settlement or tender, and overruled accordingly with costs. The Haidee, 1 Notes of Cases, 600.

8. Special Case.

(a) Generally.†

1019. The parties to any cause or matter may concur in stating the questions of

* (367) The form of agreement is as follows [set out number and title of cause]: We, the undersigned, the solicitors for the plaintiffs and defendants in this cause, hereby agree that [set forth matter of agreement]. Dated this day of , 1886.

(367a) This agreement is signed by the solicitors on both sides, each describing himself as solicitor for plaintiff or defendant.

(368) It is then filed by one of the solicitors, and an adhesive stamp of 5s. is affixed by him on the usual minute on filing it. There is no settled practice as to which solicitor should prepare and file the agreement.

(368a) In causes of salvage, agreements as to values of the salvaged property are usually prepared and filed by the defendant's solicitor.

† (369) The application under Ord. XXXIV. r. 2, No. 190, should be by summons, to show cause why the facts should not be stated in a special case, and the applicant should have an affidavit showing that no facts are in dispute in the action. The order may be made any time after the defendant has appeared, and before the delivery of a statement of claim. See Roscoe's Admiralty Practice, 2nd ed. p. 216, and cases there cited.

law arising therein in the form of a special case for the opinion of the court. Ord. XXXIV. r. 1, No. 389.

1020. If it appear to the court or a judge that there is in any cause or matter a question of law, which it would be convenient to have decided before any evidence is given or any question or issue of fact is tried, or before any reference is made to a referee or an arbitrator, the court or judge may make an order accordingly, and may direct such question of law to be raised for the opinion of the court, either by special case or in such other manner as the court or judge may deem expedient, and all such further proceedings as the decision of such question of law may render unnecessary may thereupon be stayed. Ibid. r. 2, No. 390.

1021. Every such special case shall be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively, and shall concisely state such facts and documents as may be necessary to enable the court to decide the questions raised thereby. Ibid. r. 1, No. 389.

1021a. This order shall apply to every special case stated in a cause or matter, or in any proceeding incidental thereto. Ibid. r. 7, No. 395.

1022. For form of special case, see The Two Ellens, L. R. 3 A. & E. 345; 41 L. J. Adm. 33.

1022a. For a special case stated by the registrar on a reference, see The John Bellamy, L. R. 3 A. & E. 129; 39 L. J. Adm. 28.

(b) Entry for Argument.

1023. Either party may enter a special case for argument by delivering to the proper officer a memorandum of entry, in the Form No 25 in Appendix G. Ord. XXXIV. r. 5, No. 393.

1024. As to the setting down and entering for argument of a special case where a married woman, infant, or person of unsound mind is a party, Ibid. rr. 4 and 5, Nos. 392 and 393.

(c) Agreement for Payment of Money and Costs.

1025. The parties to a special case may, if they think fit, enter into an agreement in writing, which shall not be subject to any stamp duty, that, on the judgment of the court being given in the affirmative or negative of the questions of law raised by the special case, a sum of money, fixed by the parties, or to be ascertained by the court, or in such manner as the court may direct, shall be paid by one of the parties to the other of them, either with or without costs of the cause or matter; and the judgment of the court may be entered for the sum so agreed or ascertained, with or without costs, as the case may be, and execution may issue upon such judgment forthwith, unless otherwise agreed, or unless stayed on appeal. Ibid. r. 6, No. 394.

(d) Signatures and Filing.

1026. Every special case shall be signed by the several parties or their counsel or solicitors, and shall be filed by the plaintiff. Ibid. r. 3, No. 391.

(e) Printing.

1027. Every special case shall be printed by the plaintiff. Ibid.

(f) Copies for Judges.

1028. Three printed copies of the special case for the use of the judges shall be left therewith. Ibid. and r. 9 of 1885.

(g) Hearing.

1029. Upon the argument of such case the court and the parties shall be at liberty to refer to the whole contents of such documents, and the court shall be at liberty to draw from the facts and documents stated in any such special case any inference, whether of fact or law, which might have been drawn therefrom if proved at a trial. Ord. XXXIV. r. 1, No. 389.

9. Motions.

(a) *Generally.

1030. Where by these rules any application is authorized to be made to the court or a judge, such application, if made to a divisional court or to a judge in court, shall be made by motion. Ord. LII. r. 1, No. 696.

1031. In general no motion is to be made without previous notice to the parties affected thereby. But the court or a judge, if satisfied that the delay might entail serious mischief, may make an order ex parte upon terms, and the party affected may afterwards move to set it aside. Ord. LII. r. 3, No. 698.

1032. A party appearing and consenting to a motion, by which he would not be prejudiced, will not be allowed his costs of doing so. The Achilles, 1 Asp. N.S. 165; 25 L. T. N.S. 605; The Albion, 6 L. T. N.S. 166.*

1033. As to motions or applications for a rule nisi or order to show cause, see Ord. LII. rr. 2 and 3, Nos. 697, 698.

1033a. As to motions for transfer of actions, see c. 15, p. 1536.

See also Nos. 1058, 1060, 1061, p. 1576.

(b) Notice of—

1034. In Admiralty actions notice of motion together with the affidavits (if any) in support thereof, shall be filed in the registry three days at least before the hearing of the motion, unless leave shall be given to the contrary; and a copy of the notice of motion and of the affidavits (if any) shall be served on the adverse solicitor before the originals are filed. Ord. LII. r. 10, No. 705.

1035. Every notice of motion to set aside, remit, or enforce an award, or for attachment, shall state in general terms the grounds of the application; and, where any such motion is founded on evidence by affidavit, a copy of any affidavit intended to be used shall be served with the notice of motion. Ibid. r. 4, No. 699.

1036. The plaintiff shall, without any special leave, be at liberty to serve any notice of motion or other notice or any petition or summons upon any defendant, who, having been duly served with a writ of summons to appear, has not appeared within the time limited for that purpose. Ibid. r. 8, No. 703.

1037. The plaintiff may, by leave of the court or a judge to be obtained ex parte, serve any notice of motion upon any defendant along with the writ of summons, or at any time after service of the writ of summons and before the time limited for the appearance of such defendant. Ibid. r. 9, No. 704.

See also No. 1047, infra.

10. Summons for Directions.

1038. In every cause or matter one general summons for directions may be taken out at any time by any party with respect to the following matters and proceedings: particulars of claim, defence or reply, statement of special case, discovery (including interrogatories), commissions and examinations of witnesses, mode of trial (including proceedings in lieu of demurrer, trial on motion for judgment, and reference), place of trial, and any other matter or proceeding in the cause or matter previous to trial. Ord. XXX. r. 1, No. 340.

1039. Such summons for directions shall be a summons returnable in not less than four days, in the Form No. 3 in Appendix K., with such variations as circumstances may require, and shall be addressed to and served upon all such parties to the cause or matter as may be affected thereby. The applicant shall, so far as practicable, include in the summons all or as many of the above-mentioned matters and proceedings as, having regard to the nature of the cause or matter, can conveniently be dealt with by the order and directions of the court or judge. Upon the hearing of the summons, any party to whom the summons is addressed shall be at liberty to apply for any order or directions as to any of the above-mentioned matters or proceedings which he may desire, and thereupon, after giving notice to such parties (if any) as the court or judge may direct, any order may be made, and all necessary directions given, as to all or any of such matters and proceedings as may be just, whether applied for or not: such order shall be in the Form No. 4 in Appendix K., with such variations as circumstances may require. Ibid. r. 2, No. 341.

1040. If, upon any other application as to any of the above-mentioned matters or proceedings, it shall appear to the court or judge that the application is one that could and ought to have been included in or made upon the general summons for directions, such application shall be granted only at the costs of the party making the same. Ibid. r. 3, No. 342.

1040a. For forms of summons for directions and order thereon, see R. S. C. 1883, App. K. Nos. 3, 4.

order. It is an adhesive stamp. As to such summonses in the Queen's Bench Division, see Archbold's Practice, 14th ed. vol. 1, p. 335, and Chitty's Forms, 12th ed. p. 189.

11. Summons.

See next chapter.

12. Judgment under Ord. XIV.

1041. For provisions that where the defendant appears to a writ of summons specially indorsed under Ord. III. r. 6, the plaintiff may, on affidavit verifying the cause of action and the amount claimed (if any), and stating that in his belief there is no defence to the action, apply to a judge for liberty to enter final judgment for the amount so indorsed, with interest (if any) and costs; and that the judge may, unless he is satisfied that the defendants or defendant have a good defence to the action on the merits, or that the facts are sufficient to entitle them or him to defend the whole or part of the claim, make an order against all, some, or one of the defendants for all or part of the claim, empowering the plaintiff to enter judgment accordingly, unconditionally, or upon terms as to security, time, or mode of trial or otherwise, and for further provisions thereon, see Ord. XIV.

13. Costs.

See tit. Costs, c. 2, p. 347.

25. Summons.

1. *Generally.

1042. Every application at chambers not made ex parte shall be made by summons. Ord. LIV. r. 1, No. 734.

1043. Every application for payment or transfer out of court made ex parte, and every other application made ex parte in which the judge or proper officer shall think fit so to require, shall be made by summons. Ibid. r. 2, No. 735.

1044. A summons shall be addressed to all the persons on whom it is to be served. Ibid. r. 10, No. 743.

1045. In every cause or matter where any party thereto makes any application at chambers, either by way of summons or otherwise, he shall be at liberty to include in one and the same application all matters upon which he then desires the order or directions of the court or judge; and upon the hearing of such application it shall be lawful for the court or judge to make any order and give any directions relative to or consequential on the matter of such application as may be just; any such application may, if the judge thinks fit, be adjourned from chambers into court, or from court into chambers. Ibid. r. 9, No. 742.

1046. In all cases of applications originating in chambers, a summons shall be prepared by the applicant or his solicitor, and shall be sealed in Admiralty actions in the Admiralty registry, and when so sealed shall be deemed to be issued. The person obtaining a summons shall leave at the Admiralty registry a copy thereof, which shall be filed, and stamped in the manner required by law. Ibid. r. 11, No. 744.

1047. Where an application is made to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the several objections intended to be insisted upon shall be stated in the summons or notice of motion. Ord. LXX. r. 3, No. 1039.

2. Powers of Registrar.

1048. In the Admiralty Division a registrar may transact all such business and exercise all such authority and jurisdiction in respect of the same, as under the acts or these rules may be transacted or exercised by a judge at chambers, except in respect of the following proceedings and matters; that is to say,—(a) all matters relating to criminal proceedings, or to the liberty of the subject; (b) granting leave for service out of the jurisdiction of a writ, or notice of a writ of summons; (c) the removal of actions from one division or judge to another division or judge; (d) the settlement of issues, except by consent; (e) inspection and other orders under Ord. L. rr. 1 to 5; (f) appeals from district registrars; (g) prohibitions; (h) injunctions and other orders under sub-s. 8 of s. 25 of the principal act; (i) awarding of costs, other than the costs of or relating to any proceeding before the registrar, and other than any costs which by these rules, or by the order of the court or a judge, he is authorized to award; (k) reviewing taxation of costs; (l) orders absolute for charging stocks, funds, annuities, or share of dividends, or annual proceeds thereof; (m) acknowledgments of married women. See Ord. LIV. r. 12, No. 745.

3. Forms.

1049. For form of summons and order thereon (general forms), see R. S. C. 1883, App. K. Nos. 1 and 2.

1050. For form of order for time, Ibid. No. 5.

1051. For form of order dismissing summons (generally), Ibid. No. 57.

4. Originating Summons.

1052. See c. 9, s. 1, p. 1514.

5. For Directions.

1053. As to summons for directions, see c. 24, s. 10, p. 1574.

6. Service.

1054. See c. 12, s. 15, p. 1531.

7. Alteration.

1055. Summonses shall not be altered after they are sealed except upon application at chambers. Ord. LIV. r. 3, No. 736.

8. Proofs.

1056. All affidavits which have been previously made and read in court upon any proceeding in a cause or matter may be used before the judge in chambers. Ord. XXXVIII. r. 21, No. 541.

1057. All accounts, copies, and papers left at chambers, shall be written upon foolscap paper, bookwise, unless the nature of the document renders it impracticable. Ord. LXVI. r. 2, No. 1004.

9. Hearing.

1058. If on the hearing of a motion or other application the court or a judge shall be of opinion that any person to whom notice has not been given ought to have or to have had such notice, the court or judge may either dismiss the motion or application, or adjourn the hearing thereof, in order that such notice may be given, upon such terms, if any, as the court or judge may think fit to impose. Ord. LII. r. 6, No. 701.

1059. When a summons is taken out to set aside any process or proceeding for irregularity with costs, and the summons is dismissed generally without any special direction as to costs, it is to be understood as dismissed with costs. Ord. LXX. r. 4, No. 1040.

1060. Where any party appears upon any application or proceeding in court or at chambers in which he is not interested, or upon which, according to the practice of the court, he ought not to attend, he is not to be allowed any costs of such appearance unless the court or judge shall expressly direct such costs to be allowed. Ord. LXV. r. 27, No. 1002, sub-r. 23.

10. Adjournment of Hearing.

1061. The hearing of any motion or application may from time to time be adjourned upon such terms, if any, as the court or judge shall think fit. Ord. LII. r. 7, No. 702.

1062. Where matters in respect of which summonses have been issued are not disposed of upon the return of the summonses, the parties shall attend from time to time without further summons, at such time or times as may be appointed for the consideration or further consideration of the matter. Ord. LIV. r. 8, No. 741.

1063. Any application in chambers by summons or otherwise may be adjourned from chambers into court. Ibid. r. 9, No. 742.

11. Hearing in Default of Attendance.

1064. Where any of the parties to a summons fail to attend, whether upon the return of the summons, or at any time appointed for the consideration or further consideration of the matter, the judge may proceed ex parte, if, considering the nature of the case, he think it expedient so to do; no affidavit of non-attendance shall be required or allowed, but the judge may require such evidence of service as he may think just. Ibid. r. 5, No. 738.

1065. Where a proceeding in chambers fails by reason of the non-attendance of any party, and the judge does not think it expedient to proceed ex parte, the judge may order such an amount of costs (if any) as he shall think reasonable to be paid to the party attending by the absent party or by his solicitor personally. Ibid. r. 7, No. 740.

12. Rehearing of, after Order by Default.

1066. Where the judge has proceeded ex parte, such proceeding shall not in any manner be reconsidered in the judge's chambers, unless the judge shall be satisfied that the party failing to attend was not guilty of wilful delay or negligence; and in such case the costs occasioned by his non-attendance shall be in the discretion of the judge, who may fix the same at the time, and direct them to be paid by the party or his solicitor before he shall be permitted to have such proceeding reconsidered, or make such other order as to such costs as he may think just. Ibid. r. 6, No. 739.

13. Appeal from Judge in Chambers.

1067. Every order by a judge of the High Court in chambers, except orders by consent of parties or as to costs by law left to his discretion, may be set aside or discharged on notice, by any divisional court, or by the judge in court, according to the practice of the division to which the cause or matter in which the order is made is assigned. See the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 50.

14. Costs.

1068. As to costs of summons, see tit. Costs, c. 2, p. 347.

1068*a*. As to costs in connection with attendance at judges' chambers, see tit. Costs, c. 28, p. 385.

See c. 35, p. 1630.

27. Notices or Præcipes.

1. *Generally.

1069. All notices required by these rules shall be in writing, unless expressly authorized by the court or a judge to be given orally. Ord. LXVI. r. 1, No. 1003.

1069*a*. Every instrument under the seal of the court, and prepared in the Admiralty registry, shall be issued on a notice filed by the solicitor applying for the same, and shall bear date on the day on which it was issued. Ord. LXVII. r. 10, No. 1021.

3. *Of Action.

1072. Where a notice of action is required the notice should not be construed with extreme strictness. As to what is or is not a proper notice of action, see Union Steamship Co. of New Zealand v. Melbourne Harbour Commissioners, 5 Asp. 222; 53 L. J. P. C. 59.

1072a. A letter merely stating that damage had been sustained for which the defendants would be held liable, is not a notice of action. Ibid.

See also No. 235, p. 1488.

28. Discontinuance.†

1. Generally.

1073. The plaintiff may, at any time before receipt of the defendant's defence, or after the receipt thereof before taking any other proceeding in the action (save any interlocutory application), by notice in writing, wholly discontinue his action against all or any of the defendants or withdraw any part or parts of his alleged cause of complaint, and thereupon he shall pay such defendant's costs of the action, or, if the action be not wholly discontinued, the costs occasioned by this matter so withdrawn. Such costs shall be taxed, and such discontinuance or withdrawal as the case may be, shall not be a defence to any subsequent action. Save as in this rule otherwise provided, it shall not be competent for the plaintiff to withdraw the record or discontinue the action without leave of the court or a judge, but the court or a judge may before, or at, or after the hearing or trial, upon such terms as to costs, and as to any other action, and otherwise, as may be just, order the action to be discontinued, or any part of the alleged cause of complaint to be struck out. The court or a judge may, in like manner, and with the like discretion as to terms, upon the application of a defendant, order the whole or any part of his alleged grounds of defence or counter-claim to be withdrawn or struck out, but it shall not be competent to a defendant to withdraw his defence, or any part thereof, without such leave. Ord. XXVI. r. 1, No. 290.

1074. When a cause has been entered for trial, it may be withdrawn by either plaintiff or defendant, upon producing to the proper officer a consent in writing, signed by the parties. Ibid. r. 2, No. 291.

1075. Any defendant may enter judgment for the costs of the action, if it is wholly discontinued against him, or for the costs occasioned by the matter withdrawn, if the action be not wholly discontinued, in case such respective costs are not paid within four days after taxation. Ibid. r. 3, No. 292.

1076. If any subsequent action shall be brought before payment of the costs of a discontinued action, for the same, or substantially the same, cause of action, the court or a judge may, if they or he think fit, order a stay of such subsequent action, until such costs shall have been paid. Ibid. r. 4, No. 293.

1077. As to the effect on the counter-claim of notice of discontinuance of the principal action, see c. 4, s. 8, p. 1493.

1078. A letter from the plaintiff's solicitors to the defendant's solicitors in an action in rem, stating that they were instructed to proceed no further with the action, is a sufficient notice of discontinuance, under Ord. XXIII. r. 1, which is similar to Ord. XXVI. r. 1, No. 290. The Pommerania, 4 P. D. 195; 48 L. J. P. D. 55.

1079. Semble, the owner of a ship may be sued if an action has been brought against the master and discontinued. Priestly v. Fernie, 11 Jur. N.S. 813; 34 L. J. Exch. 173; 13 W. R. 1089; 13 L. T. N.S. 208.

1080. The owner and master stand on the same ground as any other principal and agent in respect to this question. Ibid.

1081. For form of notice of discontinuance, see R. S. C. 1883, App. B. No. 19.

1082. As to the right of the defendant to prosecute his counter-claim, notwithstanding the discontinuance of the action by the plaintiff, see c. 4, p. 1493.

2. Costs.

1083. As to costs on discontinuance of action, see Ord. XXVI. rr. 1 and 4, Nos. 290—293.

1083a. For form of judgment for defendant's costs on discontinuance, see R. S. C. 1883, App. F. No. 14.

1084. If a plaintiff discontinue an action the defendant is entitled to his costs under Ord. XXIII. r. 1, now Ord. XXVI. r. 1, No. 290; and Ord. LV. r. 1, now Ord. LXV. r. 1, No. 976, does not in such a case leave the costs in the discretion of the court. The St. Olaf, 2 P. D. 113; 46 L. J. P. D. & A. 74; 3 Asp. N.S. 341.

1085. A second mortgagee of 32-64th shares instituted a suit under the 11th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, and arrested the vessel. The mortgagee having discontinued, the court, on the application of the owner of the remaining shares (who was not mortgagor to the plaintiff), condemned the plaintiff in costs, but not in damages. The Volant, B. & L. 321.

1086. A salvaged vessel having been valued by the receiver of wreck under £1,000, the salvors instituted a suit in the sum of £2,500, and applied for an appraisal on the 18th December. On the 14th January following they formally declared that they proceeded no further in the suit. Held, that the salvors must be condemned in costs, and also in damages, from the 22nd December (by which time they might have ascertained that the valuation of the receiver was correct) to the 14th January. The Margaret Jane, L. R. 2 A. & E. 345; 38 L. J. Adm. 38; 3 Asp. 296.

1087. A ship was mortgaged to the defendant to secure a sum exceeding £1,400; the mortgage was duly registered, and the defendant took possession of the ship and advertised her for sale. Before the sale the plaintiff, who held a mortgage on the ship, registered after that of the defendant, instituted an action against the ship to enforce his mortgage, and caused the ship to be arrested. The defendant, to obtain the release of the ship, paid £500 into court in lieu of bail. The ship was sold by the defendant, and the proceeds were insufficient to satisfy his mortgage. The plaintiff, when the cause was ripe for hearing, abandoned the action. Plaintiff condemned in costs, and interest on the £500 paid into court. The Western Ocean, L. R. 3 A. & E. 28.

1088. A salvage service took place on the high seas, and the case was heard by consent before two justices of the peace, who awarded £53. The salvors subsequently entered an action in the High Court of Admiralty, and arrested the vessel. The owners tendered the £53, which, after the vessel had been for some time under arrest, was accepted, and the action discontinued. Held, that the owners were entitled to costs and damages. The Nautilus, Swabey, 105; see also The Gloria del Maria, ibid. 106.

29. Dismissal.

1089. If the plaintiff does not give notice of trial within the time prescribed the defendant may do so, or may apply to the court or judge to dismiss the action for want of prosecution; and on the hearing of such application the court or judge may order the action to be dismissed accordingly, or make such other order, and on such terms as may seem just. See Ord. XXXVI. r. 12, No. 436.

1090. An application to dismiss for want of prosecution may be made either in chambers or to the court. Evelyn v. Evelyn, 13 Ch. D. 138.

1091. Plaintiffs were ordered to give security for costs. They neglected to do so for three months. On application of defendants, cause dismissed with costs. The Peri, No. 1387, 13th January, 1862; The Dolphin, No. 1104, 27th March, 1862.

1092. Cause dismissed with costs after a similar delay of seven weeks. The Marquis of Lorne, No. 1958, 18th January, 1864.

1093. The dismissal of a suit for want of prosecution is analogous to a nonsuit. The Flecha, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 439, n.

1094. Tender pronounced sufficient, and defendants and their bail dismissed, but no order made as to costs. Held, that though the case was one in which the plaintiff would have been entitled to costs, the court had no power to grant them after the defendants and their bail had been dismissed. The Countess of Levis and Melville, 5 L. T. N.S. 290; 1 Asp. 154.

1095. For form of order to dismiss for want of prosecution, see R. S. C. 1883, App. K. No. 15.

30. Abatement and Revival.

1. Generally.*

1096. For provisions that no cause or matter shall become abated by reason of the marriage, death or bankruptcy of any of the parties, if the cause of action survive or continue, nor become defective by the assignment, creation or devolution of any estate or title pendente lite; and that, whether the cause of action survives or not, there shall be no abatement by reason of the death of either party between the verdict or finding of issues of fact and the judgment, but that judgment may be entered, notwithstanding the death, see Ord. XVII. r. 1, No. 178.

1097. For provisions that in such case of marriage, death, bankruptcy, or devolution of estate by operation of law, the court or judge may, if necessary for the complete settlement of all the questions involved, order that the husband, personal representative, trustee, or other successor in interest, if any, of such party be made a party, or be served with notice as therein prescribed, and make such order for the disposal of the case and on such terms as may be just, Ibid. r. 2, No. 179.

1098. For provisions that in case of an assignment, creation, or devolution of any estate or title pendente lite, the case may be continued by or against the person to or upon whom such estate has come or devolved, Ibid. r. 3, No. 180.

1099. For provision that where, by reason of marriage, death, bankruptcy, or any other event occurring after the commencement of a case, and causing a change or transmission of interest or liability; or by reason of any person interested coming into existence, it is desirable that any person not already a party should be made a party, or that any person already a party should be made a party in another capacity, an order that the proceedings shall be carried on between the continuing parties, and such new party or parties, may be obtained ex parte on application to the court or judge, upon an allegation of such change, transmission of interest or liability, or new interest, Ibid. r. 4, No. 181.

1100. For provisions that the order so obtained shall, unless otherwise directed, be served on the party or parties, or their solicitors, and on each such new party, unless the applicant be himself the only new party, and that the order shall from such service, but subject to the next two rules, be binding on the persons so served, and that the persons not previously parties shall be bound to enter an appearance thereto in the same time and manner as if served with a writ of summons, Ibid. r. 5, No. 182.

1101. For provisions that where any person who is under no disability other than coverture, or under disability not being coverture, but having a guardian ad litem in the cause or matter, is served with such order, he may apply to the court or judge within twelve days from service thereof to discharge or vary such order, Ibid. r. 6, No. 183.

* (375) As to change of parties by death or otherwise, see Wilson's Judicature Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 238; and in actions in the Queen's Bench Division, Archbold's Practice (14th ed. by Chitty), vol. 2, pp. 1025 et seq.

(376) In the American Admiralty Courts the death of a party does not necessarily abate the suit. Actions for injuries to the person do not survive to or against the representatives of either party, but actions respecting property survive. See Dunlap's Adm. Practice, 2nd ed. p. 97. [AMERICAN.]

(377) If a party to an action dies pending a suit in this court, and the cause of action survives, no disadvantage accrues therefrom to either party. A suggestion of the fact, apud acta, removes the technical difficulty. Newitt v. Clarke, Olcott, Adm. 316. [AMERICAN.]

1102. For provisions that where any person under disability other than cover- ture, and not having such a guardian, is so served, he may apply within twelve days from the appointment of a guardian ad litem to him to have the order dis- charged or varied, and that until such period has expired the order shall have no force against him, Ibid. r. 7, No. 184.

1103. For provisions that where the plaintiff or defendant dies and the cause of action survives, but the person entitled to proceed fails to do so, the defendant may apply by summons to compel the plaintiff to proceed within such time as may be ordered; and in default, that judgment may be entered for the de- fendant, and if the plaintiff has died exe- cution may issue as provided by Ord. XLII. r. 23, Ibid. r. 8, No. 185.

1104. For provisions that in case of the cause becoming abated or of a change of interest as by this order provided for, the solicitor for the plaintiff shall certify the fact to the proper officer, who shall cause an entry thereof to be made in the cause book, Ibid. r. 9, No. 186.

1105. Where any cause or matter shall have been standing for one year in the cause book marked as "abated," or stand- ing over generally, such cause or matter at the expiration of the year shall be struck out of the cause book. Ibid. r. 10, No. 187.

2. Pleading.

1106. No plea or defence shall be pleaded in abatement. See Ord. XXI. r. 20, No. 253.

3. In Bottomry Actions.

1107. A bottomry bond is a negotiable instrument, which may be transferred and put in issue by the person so acquiring it. But where such bond was put in suit originally on the part of a French mer- chant in 1792, suspended during a subse- quent war, not enforced on the recurrence of peace, and after an interval of twelve years attempted to be further prosecuted on the part of an English merchant, to whom it had been endorsed, the court would not allow it to be put in execution under the original proceedings. The Re-becca, 5 C. Rob. 102.

4. In Wages Actions.

1108. A decree for wages, with costs to a mariner when deceased, may be renewed to his administrator. The Prince George, 3 Hagg. 382.

1109. Suit for wages by master, who died pending suit. The court allowed the suit to be carried on by the adminis- trator of the deceased master. The Syl- phide, May 10, 1860.

1110. Master instituted a cause of wages and afterwards became insolvent. The cause was allowed to be proceeded with by and in the name of the assignee. The John Cock, 17 Jur. 306.

5. Costs.

See tit. Cosrs, p. 350.

31. Estoppel.

1. Generally.*

1111. See, as to estoppel generally, The Duchess of Kingston's case, and the notes thereto in Smith's Leading Cases, 8th ed. vol. 2, p. 784.

1112. A party may be estopped by his pleading as to a matter of fact, but quare as to a question of law. The Killarney, 1 Lushington, 431.

1113. Semble, admission by pleading extends to matters of fact, but not of law. The Peerless, 1 Lushington, 103; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 488; 30 L. J. Adm. 89; 3 L. T. N.S. 126.

1114. The institution of a suit as a cause of necessities does not estop the plaintiff from afterwards pleading and proving that his claim is in respect of repairs, but the title of the cause must be amended. Leave to amend given. The Skipwith, 10 Jur. N.S. Adm. 445; 10 L. T. N.S. 43.

1115. An agent appropriating, in his accounts with his principal, sums re- ceived to the payment of specific items, is estopped from disputing the payment of

* (377a) The statutory bar imposed by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 298, to the re- covery of damages by vessels infringing the rules as to steering and carrying lights im- posed by that statute, has been repealed by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), ss. 2 and 25. Section 29 of the last act contained similar provisions, but was repealed by s. 33 of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85). For cases under those repealed sections, see tit. COLLISION, p. 215, n.

those items. The Twentje, otherwise The West Friesland, 13 Moore, P. C. C. 186; Swabey, 454.

1116. Parties who had abandoned a former action instituted by them to compel the payment of two bottomry bonds, held, not to be at liberty, no strong grounds being shown, to bring a second action upon the same bonds. Such an action dismissed accordingly, with costs and demurrage. The Fortitude, 2 Dodson, 58.

1117. In the progress of a cause through a misapprehension of the plaintiff's proctor in not appearing on a specific occasion, the cause was dismissed without a hearing on the merits. Subsequently a second suit was instituted, and the ship again arrested in respect of the same cause of action. The defendant appeared under protest questioning the legality of the second arrest. Held, that it was legal, and that the dismissal of the first suit was analogous to a nonsuit. The Flecha, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 439.

1118. A claim by the owners of a damaged vessel for loss sustained, estimated moderately to avoid litigation, having been rejected, and the matter afterwards referred to the registrar and merchants, the owners held not bound by their original estimate, nor barred of their right to prove an actual loss greater than that estimate. The Two Sisters, 1 ibid. 99.

1119. Shipowners being under a contract to replace their ship immediately, if lost, insured her for £10,000, two years after which the ship was lost. Held, that they were not estopped from proving in a suit instituted by them under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), part 9, that the value of the ship at the time when she was lost did not exceed £5,900. African Steamship Co. v. Swanzy, 2 K. & J. 660; 25 L. J. Ch. 870.

See tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. pp. 646—649.

(b) To Inferior Courts and Officers.

1121. The Admiralty Division granted an injunction ex parte, restraining the defendant in an action of co-ownership, from dealing, and the registrar from registering any dealing in the shares of a ship, the subject of the action. The Horlock, 36 L. T. N.S. 622; 2 P. D. 243; 47 L. J. P. D. 5; 3 Asp. N.S. 421.

5. Stay of Proceedings.

(a) *Generally.

1122. For provision that no cause pending in the High Court or Court of Appeal shall be restrained by prohibition or injunction; but every matter of equity on which an injunction might before this act have been obtained may be relied on by way of defence; but that nothing in this act shall disable either court from directing a stay of proceedings; and that any person, whether a party or not, who would have been entitled before this act to apply to restrain the prosecution of proceedings or to enforce any judgment or order, as therein mentioned, shall be at liberty to apply by motion for a stay of proceedings, either generally or otherwise, see the Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 24, sub-s. 5.

1122a. It would seem from the terms of this sub-sect. that matters which would formerly have been grounds for an in-

* (379) This rule only applies to cases where a winding-up order or administration order has actually been made. See Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules, 4th ed. p. 423, and Nos. 527, 528, p. 1516.

(379a) It is now well settled that before that the application must be made to the division in which the action is pending. Ibid.

and cases there cited.

380. An action pending in one division will not be stayed by another division or judge unless the defence is on grounds unconnected with the cause of action. Affirming, Malins, V.-C., Garbutt v. Fawcus, 1 Ch. D. 155, junction restraining an action, must now be raised in the action itself either by way of defence or upon an application to stay proceedings. See Garbutt v. Fawcus, L. R. 1 Ch. D. 155. C. A.

1123. For provision that when an order has been made by the judge of any Chancery Division for the winding-up of any company, or the administration of assets of a testator or intestate, the same judge shall have power to order the transfer to his court of any cause or matter in any other court or division by or against such company, or the executors or administrators of such testator or intestate, see Ord. XLIX. r. 5, No. 653. And see Nos. 527, 528, p. 1516.

1123a. After a collision on the high seas between the C. and the I., two foreign vessels. The C. was arrested in Holland by the owners of the I., but released, with their consent, on a guarantee to answer judgment in that action, and cross-proceedings were instituted there by the owners of the C. An action was subsequently commenced in this country by the owners of the I. against the C., and the C. arrested in respect of the same collision. The plaintiffs offered to abandon the action in Holland. Held (dis-sentiente Brett, M. R.), that the proceedings in this country must be stayed and the ship released. The Christiansborg, 10 P. D. 141; 54 L. J. Adm. 84; 53 L. T. 612.

1124. Pending proceedings in a Vice-Admiralty Court by the owners of the P. against the G., an action subsequently brought in the Admiralty Division by the owners of the G., against the owners of the P., ordered to be stayed. The Peshawur, 8 P. D. 32; 52 L. J. Adm. 30; 48 L. T. 796; 5 Asp. 89; 31 W. R. 660.

(b) For want of Disclosure by Plaintiff's Solicitors.

1125. As to stay of proceedings in respect of non-disclosure by solicitor, after demand, whether a writ has been issued by him, or by his authority, see Ord. VII. r. 1, No. 42, and No. 520, p. 1515.

1125a. For provision that when a writ is sued out by partners in the name of their firm, and the plaintiffs or their solicitors, after demand in writing by or on behalf of any defendant, fail to declare forthwith the names and places of residence of all the persons constituting the firm, all proceedings in the action may be stayed upon such terms as may be directed. Ibid. r. 2, No. 43, and No. 521, p. 1515.

6. Delay.

(a) Generally.

1126. The court has no authority to refuse to entertain a suit brought by a party alleging himself to be aggrieved, provided it be commenced within the period limited by law. If, however, there was unreasonable or improper delay, the court would, in all cases where the proof was not sufficiently clear, consider that such delay raised a presumption against the party guilty of it. The Mellona, 3 W. Rob. 10. See also tit. LACHES, p. 800.

1127. In the case of a sale of a ship in a foreign port by the master, the owner's delay alone may not destroy his right to institute a suit, but when unnecessary delay arises, and when injury to others may arise from that delay, it may import acquiescence in the sale, and if there be acquiescence in the sale, however unauthorized, it may have been at its commencement, the sale is then ratified by the act of the owner himself. The Australia, Swabey, 486; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 132.

(b) Twelve Months' lapse.

1128. In any cause or matter in which there has been no proceeding for one year from the last proceeding had, the party who desires to proceed shall give a month's notice to the other party of his intention to proceed. A summons on which no order has been made shall not, but notice of trial although countermanded shall, be deemed a proceeding within this rule. Ord. LXIV. r. 13, No. 973.

1128a. As to motion for judgment after twelve months' lapse, see Ord. XL. r. 9, No. 567.

7. By want of Pleading.

1129. In a cause of salvage the owners appeared but did not answer the petition, and a conclusion was filed by the plaintiffs. The defendant, who appeared by counsel at the hearing, and claimed to be heard in depreciation of the services, although not denying the facts in the petition, held, not entitled to be heard. The Emerald (2300), 13th December, 1864.

8. After Discontinuance without Payment of Costs.

See No. 1076, p. 1578.

9. Effect of Discontinuance on Counter-claim.

See c. 4, s. 8, p. 1493.

10. After Submission to Arbitration.

1130. A plaintiff who has submitted to arbitration is not thereby debarred from proceeding in rem in the Admiralty Court. The Sylph, L. R. 2 A. & E. 24; 37 L. J. Adm. 14; 3 Asp. 37.

11. *In Salvage Actions.

1131. Where a fair salvage agreement has been made in a bonâ fide manner between the masters of the salving and salved vessels, the officers and seamen of the salving vessel, although not consulted as to the agreement, ought not to bring an action of salvage. In such a case the plaintiffs condemned in the costs of the action. The Nasmyth, 10 P. D. 41.

1132. Quære, whether the master of a salving vessel is agent for the owner to compromise a salvage claim if the owner is at hand, and gives no authority. The Elise, Swabey, 440.

1133. Semble, it would be no objection to a claim for salvage, for services rendered by one vessel to another, that both were, at the time of the salvage, in the service of a foreign government. The Alfen, Swabey, 189.

1134. A Queen's ship rendered salvage services, for which a bill was given by the master upon the owners, who had in the meantime sold the ship, which was lost on the homeward voyage, and the bill was refused payment. Motion for monition against the owners to show cause why salvage should not be paid, rejected. The Chieftain, 4 Notes of Cases, 459.

1135. Quære, if a steamer has been guilty of negligence in fulfilling a contract to tow the A., and has thereby occasioned danger to the G. and the H. from which the steamer subsequently rescued them, can the owners of the G. and the H.

set up the breach of contract to which they were strangers, as estopping the steamer's claim to salvage? The Annapolis, 1 Lushington, 355; 5 L. T. N.S. 39. See also Langridge v. Levy, 2 M. & W. 519; Winterbottom v. Wright, 10 M. & W. 109; Blackmore v. The Bristol and Exeter Railway Co., 8 E. & B. 1035.

1136. If a ship or cargo is not saved there can be no salvage, and if this result follows from the miscarriage or the misconduct of an agent employed by those who claim as salvors, however great or meritorious their exertions may have been, they are identified with their agent for this purpose, and their claim entirely fails. The Atlas, 1 Lushington, 518; 8 Jur. N.S. 753; 31 L. J. Adm. 210; 10 W. R. 850.

1137. When the service rendered by one ship to another in a distant part of the world partakes of the true description of salvage service, the claim for salvage cannot be resisted on the ground that both ships were British. The Portia, 9 Jur. 167.

1138. A claim for salvage preferred by a King's ship, after a delay of eight months, dismissed, the salvors being held (the salvage being very slight) to be barred by lapse of time. The Rapid, 3 Hagg. 419; but see The John, 8 Jur. 276.

1139. The owners, when present, are the only proper judges of the necessity for the continuance of salvors' services. Ibid.; The Glasgow Packet, 8 Jur. 675; 2 W. Rob. 306.

1140. Salvors having obtruded their services after notice for their discontinuance, compensation refused on account of such services, but salvage awarded for the services antecedently rendered, with a sum nomine expensarum. Ibid.

1141. The defendants in a cause of salvage entered an absolute appearance, and filed an affidavit of value, stating that the property saved was of greater value than £1,000. The receiver of wreck subse-

(382) Whenever the owners or consignees reside near the place where the court sits in which the salvage suit is pending, they must appear and claim the ship or goods, each for his own interest. The master, in this case, cannot as such claim for them. Marvin on

Wreck and Salvage, p. 177. [AMERICAN.]

(383) But where the owners or consignees of the cargo reside at a distance from the place where the court sits, the master is allowed, ex necessitate, to claim for them. Ibid.

(384) And as he very rarely or never in the case of a general cargo shipped by a large number of persons can know the amount of their respective interests, nor their names even, he is allowed to put in a general conjoint claim for the whole cargo as an entirety. Ibid.

quently made an affidavit stating that the property was of less value than £1,000. Held, that the defendants had estopped themselves from objecting to the jurisdiction. The Dart, 3 Asp. 327.

1142. Owners setting up an agreement in bar of a salvage claim are bound to pay into court the amount stipulated for under the agreement. The Catherine, 6 Notes of Cases, Supp. 2.

1143. Salvage services had been rendered to a vessel by several sets of salvors off Ramsgate. The owners of the vessel summoned a meeting of the Commissioners of Salvage for the Cinque Ports, to adjudicate on the matter. No notice of the intended meeting was given to any of the salvors, and it was proved that it was not usual to give any such notice. At the meeting of the commissioners one set of salvors was unrepresented, but it was proved that they were aware of the meeting, and were at hand. The commissioners made an award upon the whole matter. The salvors so unrepresented refused to accept their share of the money awarded, and brought their action in the Admiralty Court. Held, that the award was no bar to the action, the plaintiffs not having been parties to the first decision. The Elisc, Swabey, 436.

1144. On a claim for salvage preferred by the commander, officers and crew (130 men) of a Government steamer, the use of which for the purpose had been applied for by the owners of the vessel salvaged, and granted by the admiral, on the stipulation that the owners and underwriters would be answerable for the stores expended or damaged. Held, that such stipulation was no bar to their claim for reward for personal service, but only a reason for a less remuneration. The Lustre, 3 Hagg. 154.

1145. A foreign ship was driven by stress of weather into Bridlington, where W. B. undertook the management of the ship and her concerns, and subsequently sent in his accounts. These were disputed by the master, and an agreement was then made to refer them to arbitration. The master signed the agreement on the 17th March, 1848, W. B. on the 5th March; and the ship was arrested in a cause of salvage on behalf of W. B. on the 12th March. Held, that the agreement was no bar to the action. La Purissima Concepcion, 13 Jur. 545; 7 N. of Cas. 150.

1146. Unless all the parties negotiating are fully apprised of all the circumstances of the case, negotiation is no admission of salvage services or a negative of a defence to the claim. The Martha, Swabey, 490.

See also tit. SALVAGE.

1147. The court will not entertain the salvage claim of parties who have been convicted for misconduct in the same transaction for which they claim the salvage reward. The Wear Packet, 2 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 256, sed contra The Louisa, No. 1507, 17th February, 1863.

1148. Claim for towage services rendered under contract. Held, that the towage was forfeited by misconduct of the plaintiffs, and subsequent damage caused by them. Quære, whether, notwithstanding such misconduct, the plaintiffs could, prior to the Judicature Acts, recover towage under the contract, and leave the defendant to a cross action for the damage. This point not having been properly raised or discussed in the Court of Admiralty, the Court of Appeal refused to entertain it. The Christina, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 371.

1149. As to misconduct, negligence, or want of skill of salvors as entailing forfeiture of, or deductions from, salvage, see tit. SALVAGE.

12. In Wages Actions.

1150. A master of a vessel is not debarred from suing for his wages by the fact that he is a joint mortgagee of the ship. The Repulse, 2 W. Rob. 339.

1151. A mariner, who having been offered his wages in money, elected to take part thereof in a bill of exchange on the owner, who afterwards became a bankrupt, in consequence of which the bill was dishonoured; held, not to be entitled to arrest the ship for wages to the amount of such bill, on the ground that, having made his election, he must stand by the risk. The William Money, 2 Hagg. 136.

1152. A defence in a cause of wages relying on a special agreement as an estoppel by reason of want of jurisdiction should be brought forward as soon as practicable in order to avoid unnecessary expense, and where a defendant omits to adopt that course the court, although decreeing in his favour, will not give costs. The Shamrock, 5 Jur. N.S. 178, Adm. C. [IRISH.]

1153. During the voyage a ship was wrecked, and the master gave the mariners an order upon the owners for the amount of their wages to the date of the wreck, acknowledging at the same time that he had hired them by the month.

Held, that under these circumstances no action for wages could be maintained by the mariners against the master, at least without proving that they had first made a demand upon the owners. Forsboorn v. Krugor, 3 Camp. 197. (Ellenborough.)
See also tit. WAGES.

32. Tender.

1. Generally.*

1154. With a defence setting up a tender before action, the sum of money alleged to have been tendered must be brought into court. Ord. XXII. r. 3, No. 257.

1155. A plea of tender without payment into court of the amount tendered is bad. The Nasmÿth, 10 P. D. 41; 54 L. J. P. D. 63; 5 Asp. 364.

1156. Gold coin is the only legal tender, and no tender of silver coin is legal beyond forty shillings. See 56 Geo. 3, c. 68, s. 11.

1157. Bank notes are a legal tender so long as the Bank of England continues to pay on demand their notes in legal coin. See 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, s. 6.

1158. In making a tender it is not necessary, on the contrary it is an erroneous course, to offer to pay costs up to the time of tender. The William Symington, 10 P. D. 4; 5 Asp. 293; overruling The Hickman, The John, and The Thracian, infra; The Comte Nesselrood, No. 1179, infra; and The Scotia, 4 Ir. Jur. N.S. 156.

1159. In future when a tender is made it must either include an offer to pay costs up to the time of tender, or state that the tender is made in satisfaction of the cause of action only, and specify the ground upon which the costs are not tendered, and refer the question of costs to the consideration of the court. The Hick-

1160. Tender "with such costs, if any, as are due by law." Tender pronounced for with costs up to time of tender, but each party to pay his own costs from that time. The Hickman, supra.

1161. In ordinary cases a tender to be good must be absolute, and must include a tender of costs up to the time of tender, and if conditional and refused, the party making the tender can take no benefit from it. The John, 1 Lushington, 13.

1162. As to payment into and out of court of tenders, see Pt. I. cc. 9 and 10, pp. 1482 and 1485.

1163. A receipt signed simply for the money itself is all that can be legally demanded by a party making a tender. Any attempt to require a condition of any character or kind, such as excluding all other demands, has been held frequently by the courts of common law to be illegal; and although the Admiralty Court is not bound by such decisions of common law courts, it should adhere to that principle. The Albatross, Jan. 25, 1853.

1164. The acceptance of a tender, which is an act of court, is a "recovery in court." The John, 1 Lushington, 13.
