769. In March, the ship W. S., 2,239 tons, from Port Phillip to London with passengers and very valuable cargo, off Newhaven, engaged the steam-tug A., 120 tons, with disconnecting engines of 60 h.-p. nominal, 120 h.-p. actual, and worth £4,000, to tow her to Gravesend. After towing for three hours the N., 99 tons, with engine of 40 h.-p. nom., 90 h.-p. actual, and worth £3,000, was engaged to help the A. When the vessel got off Hastings, the tugs were cast off, and next day the ship wore and stood in for the land, took a pilot off Dungeness, and anchored off Folkestone in the evening, with both bower anchors down. In a heavy gale the day following, she dragged and slipped her anchors, and ran down past Dungeness. The owners alleged that on getting under way the sheet anchor, one of Trotman's patent 43 cwt., with 100 fathoms of 6¼-inch cable, which had frequently before held the ship alone, was got up. The easterly gale continued, she stood on and off, and about midnight, the weather moderating, commenced beating up channel for two days, a tug's assistance being meanwhile refused. Shortly afterwards the A. and the N. rejoined the ship and began towing her, she then being some ten miles from Dungeness. The steam-tug E., 120 tons, with engines of 70 h.-p. nom., 150 actual, worth £5,000, came up, and agreed to take the place of the A., and that the tug should take the master of the W. S. to Dover to get an anchor and chain of the required size, which he could not do. The pilot deeming a third tug necessary, the E. was engaged, and the three tugs towed the W. S. to the entrance to the Victoria Docks. The salvors alleged, and the owners denied, that the ship, her cargo and passengers were in considerable danger. The owners asserted that the Trotman's patent anchor was adequate to effect her safety, and that the service was towage, not salvage. £130 to the A., £100 to the N., £75 to the E. The White Star, M. M. R. May 19, 1866, p. 625. V. 218,000*l.*—A. £305

770. The schooner D. got on the Newcombe Sand. A number of boatmen went in a boat from Lowestoft and got her off the sand, but finding it impossible to take her into Lowestoft Harbour, they ran her on the shore. They then entered into an agreement to land and warehouse the stores and cargo, and get the schooner into harbour, for £300. It was afterwards found necessary to lay a false deck in order to float the schooner, which was done by the owners, the salvors refusing to pay for the same. A tender of £300 (less £98, the expense of the false deck). The court pronounced for the tender, but gave a further sum of £100 and costs for the services anterior to the agreement. The Dahlia, S. G. May 21, 1857.

Value 1,250*l.*—Award £302

771. The brig A. M., 285 tons, from Taganrog to Falmouth, laden with wheat, brought up during a hurricane off the Deadman. She was dismasted, and her master had broken both his legs. A pilot boat, the P., which was in search of vessels in distress, went to her assistance in answer to a signal, and the pilot boarded her. The pilot alleged that the master of the brig then gave up charge to him, that he made preparations for towing her into Fowey Harbour, but the tug D. coming up with the Mecklenburg consul, he gave up charge to the D., who towed her to Falmouth. The owners denied the pilot's title to reward, on the ground that his services were not engaged. The court held that the pilot's services were not accepted; but that as the pilot remained on board, and certain things, proper and necessary, were done, and done under the eyes of the mate without opposition, he was entitled to reward. The wind was blowing hard from W. by N. The Adolph Michels, M. M. R. May 26, 1866, p. 655.

V. 4,550*l.*—A. £300

772. In December, the barque A. F., 313 tons register, from Glasgow for Callao with a general cargo, when off Holyhead, near the South Stack Light, came into collision with the J. R., 847 tons register, from Liverpool for Calcutta with salt, and was considerably damaged. The steam-tug K. took her in tow about 8 a.m., and about 1 p.m. she was safely conducted to Holyhead, a distance of twenty-two miles. The Annie Fisher, M. M. R. February 5, 1870, p. 178.

V. 8,000*l.*—A. £300

773. The brigantine A., 150 tons, from Swansea to Lisbon, with coal, after heavy weather, in which she had made a good deal of water, was fallen in with by the barque R. W., 336 tons, from Shields to Demerara, with coal. The R. W. kept company with the A. from Nov. 3 to Nov. 8, as she wanted help in pumping; the mate of the R. W. and three of her crew boarding the A., which was ultimately taken to Vigo Harbour. When the R. W. came up, the master and crew of the A. were about to abandon the vessel, and had she been deserted she must have been destroyed. £70 of the award was apportioned to the mate of the R. W. The Acastas, M. M. R. June 23, 1866, p. 785.

V. 1,100*l.*—A. £300

774. In April, the smack A. was found by the smacks Z. and C., 290 miles off Spurn, and near the Schleswig coast, leaky and derelict. They pumped her and eventually got her into Grimsby. The Admiral (Hull Ad. Co.), M. M. R. Aug. 18, 1876, p. 1044.

V. 750*l.*—A. £300

775. In October, the A., from Africa to Liverpool, with her crew disabled, her sails split, shorthanded, and in great danger of total loss, whose master did not know where he was, was assisted off Carnarvon into safety by a pilot cutter with seven hands. The Aurora, S. G. March 4, 1842.

V. 3,000*l.*—A. £300

776. In November, the iron screw steamer B., 528 tons nett and 250 h.-p., was found by the iron screw steamer E. E., 524 tons nett and 99 h.-p., about eight miles from Lowestoft, with a broken crank-shaft and lying disabled, in the trough of the sea, during a severe gale. A hawser was got on board the B. with great difficulty and danger, and she was towed to Yarmouth Roads (fifteen miles) in a little under five hours. The Batavier, M. M. R. March 24, 1876, p. 364.

V. 20,000*l.*—A. £300

777. In January, the master and mate of the Italian barque S.—the only persons on board who knew anything of navigation—were washed overboard. The S., when in lat. 42 N., and long. 52°17 W., was fallen in with by the German ship L., on a voyage from Philadelphia to Hamburg, with a cargo of petroleum and a crew of eighteen hands, having encountered a hurricane, during which her cargo shifted and she sprung a leak, which necessitated pumping every hour until her arrival in Europe. The master of the L. sent one of his best hands, M., who knew something of navigation, on board the barque to navigate her to England, her port of destination being Liverpool. M. took charge of the S., and succeeded in very bad weather in navigating her into the English Channel, a distance of nearly 2,000 miles. A fisherman was then engaged to pilot her into Falmouth, where she arrived in safety about midnight on the 3rd of February. The L. also met with bad weather after M. left her, three of her crew were laid up, and on her arrival at Cuxhaven on the 8th of February she was prevented by ice from getting up to Hamburg. The Silvia, The Times, March 19, 1886. Value 6,200*l.*—Award £300

778. In December, the steamer B., 1,100 tons register, with a general cargo, 110 passengers, and the U. S. mail from New York, for Cowes and Hamburg, had her pinion-shaft broken, and could not work her screw propeller. She was met with in this condition in the Atlantic by the screw steamer L., 1,188 tons register, 120 h.-p., from Liverpool for Alexandria, with a general cargo, and was towed by her for nine hours, a distance of about sixty miles. It was then found necessary, owing to the tempestuous weather, to cut the hawsers, to avoid a collision between the two ships. The B. subsequently met the steamer G. Y., which conducted her to the Shambles Floating Light, thence she sailed under pilotage to Portland Harbour, and from there was towed to Southampton. The Borussia, M. M. R. July 31, 1869, p. 980.

V. not stated.—A. £300

779. In June, the iron sailing-ship B., from London for Liverpool, with 700 tons of cement, went on shore on the elbow of the West Girdler Sand. The wind was strong from the E., and the tide half-flood. The tug C., 209 tons, 100 h.-p., value £9,000, went to her assistance, and found that having got off the West Girdler she had struck on and was lying athwart the East Girdler Sand, with a heavy list to port, and bumping, the tide heading across the sand. The sails of the B. were taken in, and the wife of the master was taken on board the C. The B. was got off the sand, and taken stern foremost up the Alexandria Channel and into the Knob Channel. The Bruce, M. M. R. July 14, 1882, p. 377.

V. 12,600*l.*—A. £300

780. The ship C. was piloted by a wrecking vessel from the Washerwoman Shoal, where she lay at anchor in a perilous situation, to Key West, a distance of twenty miles. The Calcutta, 5 A. R. 215, cited in Marvin, 221. [American.]

V. 12,000*l.*—A. £300

781. In September, the screw steamer C., in want of assistance, was fallen in with, about 100 miles off Falmouth, by the Spanish screw steamer E., 417 tons register, 100 nom., and 360 eff. h.-p., from Taganrog for Falmouth for orders. The weather was fine, and the E. towed the C. into Falmouth, the towage taking sixteen or seventeen hours. The Calderon, M. M. R. May 21, 1870, p. 658.

V. not stated.—A. £300

782. The barque C., 400 tons, took the ground near the Cross Sand, about sixteen miles from Lowestoft, and remained striking heavily, the sea making a breach over her. She was much damaged, and hoisted a signal of distress. Three smacks, together of 187 tons, with twenty-three hands, took her into Yarmouth. The Caladonia, May 18, 1849.

V. 2,550*l.*—A. £300

783. The ship C. was in great distress, and on the point of perishing. The brig A. took off the master and crew, some indigo and coffee. A few days afterwards she again fell in with the wreck, and took off more property. The Cato, 1 Peters, Ad. Dec. 48, cited in Marvin, 192. [American.]

V. 750*l.*—A. £300

784. In May, the C., from Shields to Alexandria, got on the south end of Race Bank, off Norfolk, during fair weather, and lost her rudder. A steamer and a fishing boat got her safely to Hull. The Cerere, S. G. July 20, 1839.

V. 2,278*l.*—A. £300

785. The steamship C., 416 tons, when near the Spurn, fell short of fuel, and had to set sail, and was found to be leaking. Rockets were discharged, and the screw steamer I. E. came up and took her in tow, and finally conducted her to the Bull Sand Buoy in the Humber, where she left her. The Cumberland, S. G. March 3, 1863.

V. 12,000*l.*—A. £300

786. The C. was drifting leaky at the mouth of the Elbe with her rudder broken and unable to bring herself into safety. The Cuxhaven, after breaking the tow-ropes, made fast alongside, sustaining considerable damage, and after three hours' towing brought the C. safely to Cuxhaven. The Cuxhaven and Cowlitz, Assistance, Hamb. H. G. Z. 1871, pp. 29, 30. [German.]

V. 2,250*l.*—A. £300

787. The brig D. was off Bridlington with coal, considerably damaged and waterlogged, the sea running very high. Sixteen salvors, a yawl, and a coble, at considerable risk to their lives and property, got the brig on to the ground off Bridlington Pier. Services lasted fourteen hours. The Dawsons, S. G. June 12, 1858.

Value 800*l.*—Award £300

788. In October, the steamer E. C., 650 tons gross, from Middlesborough to Newport, with pig-iron, had, by the shifting of her cargo, started her beams and star-board bulwarks and stanchions. She was about mid-roadstead, but setting fast towards the S. Pier Head. She was discovered by some Gorleston boatmen, who unbattened the fore-hatch, and jettisoned some of the cargo, while ten of them baled her with buckets, the ship's crew turning in exhausted. After 180 tons of cargo had been jettisoned, the vessel was righted, hand pumps were got on board, her sides were plugged, and after twenty-four hours' work she was put into a state to enable her to steam northward for repairs. The Ella Constance, S. G. Dec. 24, 1885, p. 822.

V. 4,600*l.*—A. £300

789. The E. was in a state of imminent danger, fast drifting towards the shore in Robin Hood's Bay, the wind blowing a heavy gale, and there being a tremendous sea running. The steam-tug M. and J. went from Whitby, and discovered the E. quite unmanageable, not far from a dangerous reef of rocks. The master of the tug finding it impossible to tow her to Scarborough, resolved to run with her before the wind, and conduct her to a safe anchorage. When off Whitby the tug went into the harbour for a further supply of coals, and after having again taken the E. in tow her air-bucket burst, and she was unable to render further assistance. The master went on shore and procured another steamer, but before he could overtake the E. the wind shifted, and the E. ran before it safely into Scarborough. The Emmy, S. G. June 2, 1848.

V. 3,000*l.*—A. £300

790. In March, the brig, E. P., 353 tons, was fallen in with off Dover by the tug W. There was a strong gale from N.N.W. and a heavy sea. The E. P. had lost her anchors. The W. towed her at full speed towards Ramsgate, and in about eight hours took her into harbour there. The Erminia (P.) M. M. R. May 19, 1876, p. 620.

V. 12,500*l.*—A. £300

791. In October, the iron screw steamer E. R., 783 tons, from Cardiff for Tyber Savannah, struck on a reef called the Flats, in Crow Sound, having lost her rubber and shipped much water; and owing to boisterous wind and weather, was in danger of going to pieces, when she was discovered by the galley L., whose crew boarded her and found the men pumping. An anchor and chain were got on board and put out astern, and the cable was hove taut. The crews of the gigs P., C., and E. were engaged to pump. The weather was threatening, with rain and a very strong S.W. wind. About noon next day the screw steamer L. of the I., 45 h.-p., value £7,400, came up, and the tide being ebb and about half-flood, the E. R. began to float, and bumped heavily. The L. of the I. was lashed to the E. R., and began towing full speed astern, until the E. R. was got into deep water, and turned astern aground on Bar Point, when the lashings of the L. of the I. for the second time parted. When they were re-lashed, she kept on towing to keep the E. R. on the ground with the rising tide. The wind increasing, a kedge anchor was got out to keep the E. R. straight on the level sand, where she was, after some further difficulty, secured in four fathoms. At the following low water the moveable stores were taken by the gigs to St. Mary's, Scilly, the sails were unbent, and the vessel afterwards taken by a tug to Cardiff. The Ely Rosi, M. M. R. January 31, 1879, p. 147.

V. 13,000*l.*—A. £300

792. The E. U. struck on the Brake Sand, and was in a state of extreme peril. Twelve men, forming the crew of the Broadstairs lifeboat, and the lugger R., went to her assistance at great risk to their lives. On reaching her the salvors ascertained that the vessel could not be saved without an anchor and cable, and they took the master and crew to Margate, where they found that the O. had been engaged by the lifeboat to carry out an anchor and cable, and they thereupon went in search of the vessel, and found that she had been taken in tow by a steamer. The E. U., S. G. June 7, 1853.

V. 4,995*l.*—A. £300

793. The ship F. was driven on the Gunfleet Sand, and was in great danger. The smack A., at great risk, got her over the sand, and ran her on the main land. Three other smacks and the revenue cutter S. assisted in lightening the ship, and adopted other measures to get her off, when they were dispossessed by wreckers. The services lasted several days. The smacks engaged were together of 116 tons, with twenty-one hands, and the S. had twenty-three hands. The Fleece, S. G. April 24, 1850; 3 W. Rob. 278. Value 1,188*l.*—Award £300

794. H.M.S. D., on the 27th June, fell in with the F. M., derelict, and wholly destitute of rigging. The second master, three midshipmen, and eight seamen of the D. took charge, and on the 24th July got her to St. Mary's, and obtained assistance to tow her into port. The F. M. was fitted with pumps and a jury rudder, and removed to Terceira. On the 31st August the D. left Terceira, towing the F. M., and arrived with her at Pembroke Dockyard on the 26th September. The Frances Mary, 2 Hagg. 89. V. 600*l.*—A. £300

795. A vessel sailing in company with another rendered salvage services to her consort, consisting of a deviation for the purpose of accompanying the vessel to the nearest port in consequence of her having sprung a dangerous leak, of assistance of the ship's carpenter and others in repairing the leak, and of general advice and assistance. The Ganges, 1 Notes of Cases, 87. V. 16,000*l.*—A. £300

796. In September, during a strong gale, the ship G. B. began to drag her anchors in the Mersey, and was in great peril, close to several vessels, when the tug R. put a hawser on board, assisted in bringing her up, and enabled another tug to make fast and take her into dock. The night was dark and the weather stormy. The General Birch (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 29, 1875, p. 1390. V. 5,400*l.*—A. £300

797. The brig G. R. anchored off Margate, and in consequence of a violent gale from the north-east was in great danger of driving on shore. The lugger L. went to her, and at the request of her master brought off an anchor and chain, and afterwards procured the assistance of a steam-tug. The General Rego, S. G. Jan. 12, 1856. V. 6,185*l.*—A. £300

798. The brig G., of 162 tons, with a cargo of wheat, was discovered about three miles north of Brea Head, the western headland of Valentia Island, an iron-bound coast with a heavy sea always on, the wind being N.N.W. and squally. She had two anchors down, was labouring heavily, her masts were gone six feet from the deck, nothing was standing but her bowsprit, and her crew had left her. She was boarded by the master and a crew of eight hands of the smack A., of 20 tons. They sounded the pumps, &c., and were about rigging a jury-mast, when the steamer E., of 300 tons register and engines of 300 working h.-p., came up and towed the G. into Dingle Harbour, a distance of twelve miles, in four hours. The smack A. was settled with out of court by a payment of £160. The Gudrun, 5 Irish Jur. N.S. 360. V. 3,000*l.*—A. £300

799. The fishing smack H., when sixteen miles from Cromer, observed a light on board the barque G., and heard the report of a gun. The master of the H. bearded her, and was informed by her master that he merely required a pilot to take his vessel into port. The master of the H. was thereupon engaged to conduct her to Yarmouth for £20, but upon making further inquiries he found that the barque had been on the Leman and Ower Sand, and that the water was gaining fast upon the pumps, whereupon further aid was obtained from the smack. The lugger B. was subsequently engaged, and by their joint efforts the barque was taken to the Humber. The Gundela, S. G. May 25, 1857. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £300

800. The G. having been in collision near Lundy Island, was in great distress, and there was great danger to her and to the lives of her crew. Two sets of salvors in four boats put off, and rendered effectual assistance. The Glenlyon, S. G. August 7, 1850. V. 1,160*l.*—A. £300

801. The steamer H., 1,276 tons, grounded on the Beeson Sands, but was not in any immediate danger, the weather at the time being perfectly calm. The steamer E. E. towed her off the Sands. Service about two hours only. The Hammonia, S. G. July 6, 1860. V. 28,000*l.*—A. £300

802. In December, the H. was found derelict off the coast of Cromer. Thirteen salvors were employed for thirty-four days attending the ship and cargo. £50 allowed for expenses exclusive of award. The Hector, S. G. June 4, 1840. V. 582*l.*—A. £300

803. In April, the ship H., 729 tons, with 19 hands, 349 passengers, and a cargo of coals and sand, for Donna Francisco, Brazil, from Hamburg, got fast on shore, near a wrecked vessel off Winterton. There was a stiff breeze from S.E., and a nasty swell on. She was taken charge of by the crew of the yawl B. of H.; a kedge was laid out, and later on the crew of the lifeboat M. H. assisted them. After being twelve hours aground, the H. was got off into deep water, and a tug took her to Yarmouth for £20. The Humboldt, M. M. R. May 11, 1877, p. 596.

Value 8,950*l.*—Award £300

804. In November, the I., from the Gulf of Bothnia to Gibraltar, on Scroby Sand, abandoned, and in danger of going to pieces, was rescued by fourteen men from Gorleston, and with the aid of a steam-tug towed into Yarmouth Roads. The India, 30 Apr. 1842; 1 W. Rob. 406.

V. 1,140*l.*—A. £300

805. The schooner J. was off Southwold with a flag of distress flying. The fishing lugger E., 60 tons, with twelve hands, rendered her assistance, and while doing so lost one of her boats. The services were rendered during the herring season. The Jacinta, S. G. Jan. 21, 1861.

V. 1,300*l.*—A. £300

806. The barque J. P., from Taganrog to Falmouth, with linseed, had lost some masts and rigging in severe weather, and was partially disabled. The salvors, thirteen in number, in three boats, found her in a perilous position from her proximity to the Lizard, and without any danger to themselves towed her into Falmouth Harbour. Before they came up the barque had been towed some distance by the brig S. The John Paxton, M. M. R. May 26, 1866, p. 655.

V. 7,500*l.*—A. £300

807. The brig J., 141 tons, went aground on the North Sand Head, off Broadstairs. The steam-tug S. towed her off. The Juniatta, S. G. Nov. 21, 1855.

V. 12,000*l.*—A. £300

808. In November, the barkentine K., 673 tons register, which had been damaged in collision, was succoured by the yawls A. and the B. of H., manned by thirteen and seventeen hands respectively. She was lying utterly unmanageable on the sand off the Norfolk Coast, the tide being ebb and weather fine, and had signals of distress flying. One of the yawls fetched a tug from Yarmouth, and both crews were engaged by the master of the schooner to help get her into Harwich, which was ultimately done. The Kioto, M. M. R. Feb. 8, 1878, p. 179.

V. 5,287*l.*—A. £300

809. In January, the schooner-rigged screw steamer L., 476 tons register, 70 h.-p., eighteen hands and general cargo, from Bordeaux for Liverpool, broke the screw shaft of her propeller. The sea was then calm and the wind light. She was brought to anchor in twenty-eight fathoms. The screw steamer D., 645 tons register, seventeen hands, from Shields for Bordeaux, saw her signals when off Point Balemas, near La Rochelle, France, bore down on her, and took her in tow towards Pauillac. After about 7½ hours the rope parted, but she was eventually got safely to Pauillac, a second rope giving way during the towage. The service lasted about eighteen hours. The Lotus, M. M. R. May 5, 1882, p. 559.

V. 14,800*l.*—A. £300

810. In February, the French schooner L., from Cetta to St. Malo, with salt and wine, lost her foremast and bowsprit, and was towed by the French schooner I. and M. from forty miles N. of Ushant to Plymouth. The Lucie (Stonehouse Co. Co.) M. M. R. Feb. 14, 1873, p. 211; Feb. 28, 1873, p. 273.

V. 500*l.*—A. £300

811. In March, the steamer M. L., aground off the River Gambia, was observed by the barque A., which rendered her certain services. The services were denied beyond the loan of a hawser. Defendants alleged that the plaintiffs had been paid £27 for the use thereof, and that there was an agreement between the masters that £20 should be paid for the services rendered. The award included £27 paid into court. The Macgregor Laird, M. M. R. Dec. 21, 1867, p. 1619.

V. 2,500*l.*—A. £300

812. The ship M. of O., 897 tons register, with a general cargo, from London to Kurrachee, sprung a leak and was obliged to put into Falmouth. The port anchor was first let go in Carrick Road; but a strong E.S.E. breeze acting on the sails, she began to drive, and to avoid fouling other vessels at anchor, the port chain was slipped, and she was brought up near the White Buoy by her starboard anchor and forty-five fathoms of chain. A pilot was employed, and went in the steam-tug P. to take the ship to another anchorage lest there should not be sufficient water. Whilst this was being done, the tow-rope parted, and the ship fouled a Norwegian brig. The starboard anchor was let go and she was brought up, but they drifted on to an English brig. The P. then towed the M. of O. to a berth in the Cross Road. The Maid of Orleans, M. M. R. April 20, 1867, p. 497. Value 12,000*l.*—Award £300

813. The M., 390 tons, having nearly all her crew disabled from scurvy, and being deficient of fresh provisions and medicines, hoisted a signal of distress. The ship T., 800 tons, supplied these articles, and although short-manned herself, lent one of her most able men to the M., and both vessels in four days arrived at Plymouth. The Mary, S. G. July 21, 1847. V. 40,000*l.*—A. £300

814. The ship M. S., 588 tons, got upon the Red Sand, at the southernmost part of the Ooze Channel, and was got off by the steam-tug S. with much expedition and with slight damage to the tug. The Mary Scott, S. G. March 4, 1862; 7 L. T. N.S. 257. V. 21,000*l.*—A. £300

815. The M. W., off the Mumbles, having parted from two of her anchors, was lying to one anchor, and in great danger. Four seamen put off in a boat from Swansea, and notwithstanding a heavy gale, succeeded in reaching the vessel. By their assistance she was safely deposited on a mud bank, and the next morning she was towed into harbour. The Mary White, S. G. June 11, 1847. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £300

816. The M., 1,000 tons, when off Kingsdown in the English Channel, on the 2nd Dec., experienced a violent squall, which blew away the spanker, jib, and foretopsail, and shortly afterwards the maintopsail, and the M. was then anchored. On the next day the gale continued, and the M. dragging her anchors, her main and mizen masts were cut away. The lugger D. seeing a signal from the ship, went from Deal to her, carried a message by order of the master to Lloyd's agent at Deal for a tug, and returned to the ship with the answer in the afternoon of the next day, the weather being too severe for her to reach the M. the same night. No steam-tug arriving, the master of the M. went in the D. to Deal to get one, and the steam-tug R., which was employed for £105, with the D. in tow, then went to the ship. The D. then returned to Deal for a spare anchor and chain on the morning of the 5th, and employed the lugger R. to assist in taking them out, owing to their size and weight, and they having been conveyed to the M. and put on board her, the steam-tug R. towed her up to Gravesend, where she arrived on the 6th. The Maxwell, S. G. May 20, 1864. V. 26,899*l.*—A. £300

817. The M. Q., 417 tons, got on a bank in the Black Sea, but was in no great danger. The commander of H.M.S. H. despatched two boats with twenty-three men to her assistance, and unsuccessful efforts were made, by unshipping the cargo, and by carrying out and heaving on the M. Q.'s best bower anchor, to leave her off. The H. having then taken her in tow she was dragged off the bank, and the cargo was re-shipped. The May Queen, S. G. May 3, 1848. V. 9,100*l.*—A. £300

818. In November, during a very heavy gale, the schooner M. W., from the Baltic for London, with barley, was boarded by some Caistor fishermen, who were brought by a tug, with great difficulty and danger, alongside the ship. The tug's tow-rope was got on board and made fast, and the tug steamed ahead, towed the M. W. through a heavy sea and moored her safely in the harbour. Her bulwarks, sails, and rigging were much damaged, and when boarded she was dragging her anchors, but those were slipped. The Milky Way (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 13, 1878, p. 1589. V. 1,700*l.*—A. £300

819. In March, the steamer M., from New York to Liverpool, ran ashore in Church Bay, near Holyhead, and lay with a list to port and in danger when the tide rose of capsizing or swinging round on to the rocks. The steam-tug S. K. was made fast to the M., thereby incurring the danger of being crushed between the M. and the shore. The S. K. then took off some of the passengers, the mails, and the whole of the crew, except the officers. She landed the mails at Holyhead, where she also took in others of the passengers who had reached there in the boats of the M. She then returned to the M. and took the remainder of the passengers and crew and the baggage to Liverpool. The S. K. also claimed for loss of towage, having been engaged to tow a ship from Holyhead to Liverpool, which she missed. The Montana (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. July 16, 1880, p. 912. V. not stated.—A. £300

820. In February, the screw steamer N., 548 tons register, from Kustendje for Falmouth, with barley, which had her starboard boiler in a leaky condition, was towed by the Russian steamer L. from 9 a.m. to 9.30 p.m. towards Falmouth, when her three tow-ropes broke, the vessels parted company, and the N. found her way to Falmouth alone. The L. stayed by her for some time, but owing to the darkness of the night could not find her again. The Nellie, M. M. R. Nov. 21, 1873, p. 1488.

Value 13,500*l.*—Award £300

821. The ship N., 643 tons, was in ballast in the Downs. She had lost an anchor and chain, her rudder was injured, and she was otherwise considerably damaged. A heavy gale was blowing from the S.S.W. The Deal lugger D. was launched with great difficulty, and taken to her through a heavy sea and stormy weather. After several unsuccessful attempts four of the salvors succeeded in boarding the ship at great risk, and with some damage to the lugger. The N. was taken to and brought up in Margate Roads, and a heavy anchor and chain from the shore was, after about three hours and a-half hard labour, got on board the ship. The Neptune, S. G. April 29, 1858; The Times, April 30, 1858.

V. 3,000*l.*—A. £300

822. The N. S., with a general cargo and five passengers, was striking heavily on the Pole Sand, off Exmouth; her rudder was disabled, and the crew and passengers were much alarmed. Wind about E. The pilot boat K. G. landed the passengers at Exmouth, took out a large anchor, two hawsers, and a bower anchor, and after some difficulty succeeded in getting her off the sand, and took her to Exmouth with the aid of a steam-tug. The ship was in some danger on the sand, and might have been in considerable danger had the wind increased. No risk to salvors. The North Star, S. G. March 30, 1858.

V. 11,000*l.*—A. £300

823. The steamer P., 770 tons, grounded on the south side of Scroby Bank, and hoisted signals of distress; the weather and wind were fair. The yawl S. and the steam-tug E., with twenty-two men, got her off. The Pallas, S. G. Feb. 7, 1861.

V. 11,000*l.*—A. £300

824. The schooner P. grounded whilst crossing the outer bar at the entrance of Bonny River, Africa. She succeeded in getting off, but was in a dangerous situation between the outer and inner bars, surrounded by breakers, when Captain Johnson, of the barque M., courageously went to her assistance, and by his skill and local knowledge, and at great risk to his life, extricated her from her dangerous position, and brought her safely into Bonny Harbour. The Panope, S. G. May 24, 1845.

V. 4,200*l.*—A. £300

825. The barque P. was in Humphrey's Dock at the time of the great fire near London Bridge, on the night of the 22nd June, 1861, and was in a position of considerable peril, from which she was rescued at very great risk by the steam-tug U., taken beyond the reach of the fire, and anchored on the north side of the river. The Pentucket, S. G. Jan. 14, 1862; 1 Lush. 505; 7 L. T. N.S. 256.

V. 950*l.*—A. £300

826. The P. R. struck on the Nore Sand, where she bumped heavily, the wind at the time blowing hard off the shore. Three smacks, a lugger, and a barge lightened her, and with the assistance of two steamers conducted her to London. The steamers accepted £250. The Princess Royal, S. G. March 6, 1857.

V. 4,000*l.*—A. £300

827. In January, the barque R., 477 tons, from Havana for Queenstown, with sugar, whilst at anchor off Crookhaven, was found to be dragging and drifting towards the rocks on the north side of the harbour. There was a heavy gale blowing, and a very heavy sea. The crews of two whaleboats, the Lord C. and the A. U., by means of two warps, which were affixed to a perpendicular rock in the harbour and to the barque's capstan, and on which they hove, got her away from the north shore, and just as the rock gave way a tug brought by the L. M. came up and took her in tow. The K. also came up, and five hands from her were put aboard. The tug took the R. into a place of safety. £30 to the A. U., £20 to the Lord C., £50 to the L. M., £200 to the tug. The Rosalind (Dublin Adm. Co.), M. M. R. May 6, 1865, p. 562.

V. 8,700*l.*—A. £300

828. The R. S., a large ship, when off the North Foreland, having parted with two anchors, and while getting out the only one left, which threatened to be a matter of great difficulty and danger, was assisted from four o'clock on March 21 until the evening of March 24 by the W. The Royal Standard, M. M. R. July 31, 1869, p. 979. Value 200,000*l.*—Award £300

829. In November, the S., from Memel to Wishead, waterlogged and with her rudder lost, was on Burnham Flats. She was got off and beached at Brancaster, three or four miles off, by some boatmen. Thence she was towed to Lynn. The Sarah, S. G. May 12, 1837. V. 1,400*l.*—A. £300

830. The brig S., in a gale of wind, went on shore near Hurst Castle, and the crew got on board another ship. A pilot cutter with four men went to her assistance. The sea was at first so heavy that they could not board her, but after the tide turned the salvors, after some peril to their lives, succeeded in boarding her, and conducted her to the Motherbank. The Sedgefield, S. G. Nov. 3, 1859; The Times, Nov. 4, 1859. V. 1,380*l.*—A. £300

831. The barque S. had struck on a bank and encountered severe weather. Her rudder and stern-post were carried away, her inner stern-post started, her mainmast broken and cut away about eight feet from the deck, with part of it hanging over her port side, the sails with yards and rigging belonging thereto were washed away, her mizenmast head was broken off under the cap, her spanker and the gear thereto were all blown and washed away, her foretopsail yard was broken in two pieces and useless, her starboard bow timber port was driven out and hanging over the bow, and the round-house was broken to pieces. The water was about four feet above the cabin floor, and there was a large hole, not less than eighteen inches square, near the gudgeon iron where the rudder had been broken off. She was driving on the Leman Bank in the German Ocean, with a strong breeze from E.S.E., and a high sea running, and she was in imminent danger and had a signal of distress flying. Two trawling fishing smacks, the S. and A., proceeded to her, and some of their crews boarded the barque and persuaded her master and crew, who were about to leave her, to remain on board. The salvors worked the barque's pumps but could not reduce the water. The two smacks towed her five or six miles, when they met the smack J., which rendered further assistance. The three smacks towed and steered the barque until 5 p.m. of the 3rd October, when they reached the Humber, and tugs were engaged to tow her into dock. It was then found that her fore foot and eight feet of her stem were gone, her wooden ends were all started, her keel all knocked off, and her keelson raised aft, and the bolts partly drawn. The Soblomsten, M. M. R. March 10, 1866, p. 303. V. 867*l.*—A. £300

832. In October, the barque S. D., 336 tons register, from Newport for the Mauritius with coals, was riding in a good berth off Bendrich by one of her bower anchors and forty-five fathoms of chain, when the wind freshening to a heavy gale from the W.S.W., and after thirty fathoms of chain had been given to her anchor, her cable parted, and she began to drive towards the rocks. The master had just given orders to cut away the masts, and the order was on the point of being carried out, when the tug C. came up, was attached to her by a hawser, and towed her clear of the rocks to a place of safety, whence she proceeded under sail up the mouth of the River Usk. The Sparkling Dew, M. M. R. January 25, 1868, p. 46. V. 4,000*l.*—A. £300

833. The barque S., owing to hazy weather, got upon the Blackwater Bank. The weather was fine, but from the season of the year could not be relied upon to remain so; consequently the S. was in a position of some peril. The steam-tug C. went to her assistance, and, after nineteen hours' labour, succeeded in towing her off the bank and to Kingstown Harbour. The Sphynx, 4 Ir. Jur. N.S. 230. V. 6,000*l.*—A. £300

834. In January, on a dark night with rain, during a violent gale from the W.S.W., the schooner T. E., 121 tons, from London for Gloucester with linseed, was riding off Deal with only one anchor, and a large ship about her own length riding with two anchors down, and under her lee. The master of the lugger B. P., with some of his crew, boarded her, and tried to make sail on her, and after three hours' work got her anchor up; but being unable to do this without fouling, they made a stern board, and ran her clear astern of the ship; a manoeuvre repeated to avoid collision with a large steamer. She was then hove round, and the lugger, with the master of the T. E. on board, fetched an anchor and chain, weighing three tons, from Deal. The Two Emmas, M. M. R. July 29, 1865, p. 944.

Value 3,500*l.*—Award £300

835. The T. F. got upon a rock some distance from Havannah. Her crew went in their boats to Havannah for assistance. The J. B. got upon a reef, and was abandoned by her crew, who took to their boats with the intention of making for Cuba. Whilst doing so they fell in with the T. F. in her then abandoned state. They boarded her, and by lightening her she was eventually got off the rock, and brought to England in six weeks. The Two Friends, 2 W. Rob. 349.

836. The Swedish brig V. was on the Gunfleet Sand, whence she was taken off and towed into Harwich Harbour by the smack P. The Vesta (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. February 28, 1873, p. 273.

V. 1,000*l.*—A. £300

837. In February, the ship V. C., 1,262 tons register, at anchor in the Mersey, about half a mile to the N. and E. of the Rock Ferry Slip, the wind blowing strong from the N.W. with heavy squalls, drove close to H.M.S. D., an officer and men of which tried to get the V. C. into a clear berth. In doing this, the V. C. fouled the moorings of the Rock Ferry Buoy, by which she was brought up, and, her fore-topmast-staysail being hoisted, went off to the eastward. When she was abreast of the Cunard mooring buoy her anchors were let go, and chain paid out, but the star-board-chain parted, and she went over towards Pluckington Bank, whence she was towed by the tug R. The owners of the ship alleged an agreement to have been made to pay the R. £150 for the services. The Victoria Cross, M. M. R. May 15, 1869, p. 626.

V. 90,000*l.*—A. £300

838. The ship W. E., 993 tons, was anchored off Margate Sands. On the next day, the wind having increased, the ship slipped from her anchor in order to proceed for the Downs. Two luggers, with twenty-one men, went to Ramsgate, and brought off an anchor weighing about 37 cwt. and 120 fathoms of chain, which, after some difficulty, they succeeded in putting on board the W. E. The court awarded the price of the anchor and chain, besides the salvage. The White Eagle, S. G. June 1, 1860.

V. 23,800*l.*—A. £300

839. The steamer L., lying at anchor in twenty-eight fathoms off the west coast of France, sixteen miles from Point Balcines, with a broken shaft, was towed by the steamer D. some seventy-five to eighty miles in sixteen hours to a place of safety off Pauillac. The Lotus, L. R. 7 P. D. p. 199.

V. 20,000*l.*—A. £300

840. In November, the schooner A. en J., timber-laden and derelict, was boarded off the Dogger Bank, in the North Sea, by the crew of the smack J. and F., who found that three of the crew of the smack Y. Y. and a Yarmouth fisherman were on board. She had six feet of water in her. Though the night was very dirty, she was taken in tow eighty-five miles from Hull, and towed thither in considerable danger. £200 to Hull smacks, £95 to Grimsby smacks. The Anton en Jacob (Hull Adm. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 3, 1875, p. 1554.

V. 560*l.*—A. £295

841. In April, the barque M. was aground on the Hasborough Sands. The fishing cutter P., eighteen tons, came up, and shortly after the M. beat off the Sand, nearly full of water, but timber-laden, with her boats damaged, her rudder disabled, her mainmast, and all its tackling, hanging alongside, the running gear of her foremast all adrift, and altogether in a very unmanageable state. The P. took off the master and crew at their own request, and carried them to Yarmouth. The brig C. A., 187 tons register, from Sunderland to London, coal-laden, fell in with the barque, drifting rapidly to the W. The mate, with some difficulty, got aboard, and finding no one in her, hoisted a signal of distress. This attracted the attention of the master of the steamer S., 565 tons, from Rotterdam to Hull, with a general cargo and large number of passengers and emigrants; and he agreed to tow the barque to Lowestoft. The S. then towed the barque with great difficulty and much risk, owing to her waterlogged state, and the severity of the weather, the hawsers parting occasionally. When they were within one mile N. of the Cockle Light, the steam-tug M., seventy-seven tons, was engaged to tow ahead of the S., the steam-tug P., seventy-nine tons, which came up shortly afterwards, assisting. When a little to the N. of Yarmouth, the S. cast off, and proceeded on her voyage, leaving three of her hands in the M., which was afterwards brought abreast the monument in Yarmouth Roads. The R. O., seventy-seven tons, was also employed to assist in steering the M., which was ultimately brought into Lowestoft. £60 to the P., £100 to the S., £40 to the C. A., £90 to the tugs. The Mentor, M. M. R. Nov. 24, 1866, p. 1490. Value 1,200l.—Award £290

842. In November, the Dutch barque R., 620 tons, from Sundswak, Sweden, for Nieuwe Diep, Holland, with timber and deals, was in the North Sea, having, after severe gales, cut away her mainmast, and thrown over some of her deckload. She was towed by the smack F. between forty and fifty miles, when the warp parted. The wind was E.S.E., and the weather bad. The F. stayed by the R., and the master, mate, and crew of the R. went on board the F. The smack L. then came up, and helped to tow the R. for between four and five hours, two of her crew assisting to work the pumps, but during the night the warp parted, and the R. was lost sight of. Next morning the smack S. found her entirely deserted and waterlogged. The L. shortly afterwards came up, and the S. and the L. towed the R. to about 100 miles N. of Whitby, when the tug E. came up, and was engaged. The E. towed the R. towards the Tyne, the S. preceding, and the L. staying by the R. At the mouth of the Tyne, the tug A. took the L. into the river, and then returning assisted the E. in mooring the R. safely. The crew were landed by the F. at Grimsby. £100 to the steamer, £80 to the F., £55 each to two smacks. The Rientje, M. M. R. July 27, 1877, p. 948. V. 1,100l.—A. £290

843. The C., derelict, was fallen in with by a fishing smack, and on the crew boarding her, they discovered that she was making water rapidly, the water being then one foot above the cabin floor. They endeavoured to stop the leaks, rigged a pump, and took her in tow; but finding themselves unable to rescue her without further assistance they accepted the aid of another fishing smack, and by the joint efforts of the two smacks she was brought into Yarmouth Roads. The Chase, S. G. July 8, 1847. V. 719l.—A. £287

844. In January, the Dutch barque Æ., from Rotterdam for Batavia with a general cargo, which was anchored W.N.W. of and close to Deal Bank Buoy, and a mile from South Brake Buoy, during a gale from S. to S.S.W., commenced driving, and was in danger of getting on to the Brake Sand. In answer to signals, the lugger S. G. put off from Deal, and with great difficulty and much personal risk, one of the lugger's crew, named Caspell, by means of a rope, boarded the Æ. and took the wheel. The lugger went back to fetch an anchor, which was obtained and shipped on a larger lugger, the T., which brought the anchor and chains to the Æ. Owing to the stormy weather, it was a matter of great danger and difficulty to get on board the Æ., and it was a still greater risk and more arduous task to get the anchor and chains aboard. Eight of the crew of the T. boarded the Æ., and the anchor, after 1½ hour's work, was got on board. Two of the crew were injured severely in doing this. The anchor was then let go, and the ship brought up by both anchors, the wind continuing to blow violently all night. The tug and lugger stopped by the Æ. till next morning, when she left her. During the night some seven or eight ropes, by which the two ships were kept together, broke. £30 to Caspell, £70 to the S. G., £180 to the T. The Æolus, M. M. R. Jan. 24, 1873, p. 115. V. 45,000l.—A. £280

845. The ship E. B., waterlogged and derelict, was picked up off Portland by a pilot cutter, and a coastguard cruiser, and they, with a tug, hired for £25, brought the E. B. to anchor in Portland Roads, where she was temporarily repaired and her cargo discharged. She was then taken into Weymouth Harbour. Claim for salvage against cargo only. The Erik Baker, S. G. Jan. 12, 1859. V. 700l.—A. £280

846. The schooner F. was off the Leman and Ower Sand, damaged, leaky, and making water; her master and crew were exhausted and frost-bitten, and the weather was tempestuous. The smack A., with ten men, after ineffectual attempts to tow the schooner, took off the master and crew, and took them to Harwich. The smacks G. and V., fell in with the schooner, and with great difficulty towed her to Pakefield Gat, from whence she was taken by a steam-tug to Lowestoft. The G. and V. lost all their fish. Value of fish not stated. The Fidelity, S. G. Dec. 8, 1858. V. 623l.—A. £280

847. In November, the barque T., 386 tons, from Sunderland for Alexandria, with coals, struck lightly on the Holme Sands, got clear, and anchored in the Stanford Channel, weighed anchor, and struck again on the Holme Sands. The wind was freshening, and the sea began to break. The tug D. got a hawser aboard the T., and towed for half-an-hour, when the tug R. came up, and the two tugs got her off the sand, with the help of some boatmen who boarded the T., and got all sail on her. The tug then towed her into harbour, and safely grounded her there. £220 to the tugs, £60 to the boatmen. The Temo, M. M. R. March 31, 1876, p. 396.

Value 2,625*l.*—Award £280

848. In January, the O., from Bombay for Hull, with 1,900 tons of linseed, began to drag her anchors, drove to about one mile E. of the Gull Lightship, and was in danger of driving on the North Goodwin Sands. The tug N., 100 h.-p., was engaged for £100, and got her clear of the Goodwins. The tug B. A. was engaged for £100 to assist the N. in towing the O. into Margate Roads or the Downs. The two tugs took her to Margate Roads, near the North Foreland, and the B. A. held her, whilst anchors and chains were fetched; but it came on to blow, so that they could not be brought, and the O. was therefore taken to the Downs and held for seven hours, till the anchors and chains arrived, and were put out. The Oithona, M. M. R. March 16, 1877, p. 339.

V. 42,914*l.*—A. £275

849. The brig P., 257 tons, with coals, ran aground near Cromer. Two fishing smacks, with eighteen hands, got her to Yarmouth. The Persian, 1 W. Rob. 327.

V. 2,016*l.*—A. £270

850. In July, the J. O., from Marseilles to St. Petersburg, ran on the rocks at the back of the Isle of Wight, and bilged and sank before the coastguard could do more than save the crew, part of the cargo, the sails and part of the rigging. Le Jeune Olympic, S. G. Feb. 17, 1838.

V. not stated.—A. £267

851. The trow F., laden with flour, was discovered derelict, and with great difficulty and some risk towed by the steam-tug E. into port. The Florence (Newport Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 9, 1870, p. 1587.

V. 297*l.*—A. £265

852. In April, the ship S., on the Cross Sands, was found by 21 of the Standard Company of Beachmen, in their lifeboat. Her foremast and mainmast were cut away, having fallen across the boats, and she was 150 or 200 yards from the broken water, through which the lifeboat had to pass to get to her. Her crew and their clothes were got into the lifeboat, which stayed by her for about an hour and a-half. She then came off, and six of the salvors boarded her. The tug C. then came up, and beached her on the South Beach, where the salvors were engaged for a fortnight saving her cargo. The Suez (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. July 6, 1877, p. 851.

V. 838*l.*—A. £265

853. In September, the barque A., 437 tons, left the Mersey in tow of the tug L. L., when the hawser broke, and the A. was in danger of drifting on the Jordan Flats. The tug T. was engaged, as the L. L. could not further assist, and towed her back into the river. The Albion (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 15, 1875, p. 76.

V. 2,350*l.*—A. £260

854. The screw steamer B., 1,627 tons register, with 650 tons of iron, ballast and coals, was seen a little south of Bramley Moore Dock entrance, about one quarter of a mile out in the river Mersey, on the Lancashire side, heading about E.N.E., and signalling for assistance. The steam-tugs H. M. and R. A. went to her aid as she drifted, and, with the assistance of the tug G. C., towed her to the Huskisson Dock Basin, held her for fifteen or twenty minutes, and placed her near the wall, where she was moored about 12 noon. The tug H. M. was then dismissed, and the R. A. with the G. C., after great difficulty, got her into Huskisson Dock. The Batavia, M. M. R. June 18, 1870, p. 786.

V. 60,000*l.*—A. £260

855. The barque C., 503 tons, off Dungeness, in a thick fog, being unable to get a pilot, engaged a man from the lugger P. M. to conduct her to the Downs. The C., however, went on shore between Folkestone and Dover. The P. M. and some coast-guardsmen laid out an anchor, but were unable to get the vessel off that tide. A steam-tug having been engaged, the C. was ultimately got off. The Celestial, S. G. July 19, 1855.

856. The steamer D., which had met with a severe accident, and been repaired temporarily at Port Said, when about fifteen or eighteen miles from St. Vincent, homeward bound, broke her crank shaft and was in much danger. The screw steamer,

A., sailed with her to look after her, and by towing her for fifteen or sixteen miles got her safely into port. The Dhoolia, M. M. R. April 23, 1875, p. 517.

857. In January, the schooner G., 128 tons, from Truro for Neath with copper ore, was run into and damaged four miles off the Hangman, in the Bristol Channel. She was found by the pilot-boat V. between Scarweather Lightship and Oxwich Head, abandoned by her master and crew. The crew of the V. cleared away the wreckage, the pilot-boat J. W. J. fetched the tug P. G. from Swansea, and she was towed to Swansea. £150 to the P. G., £90 to the V., £20 to the J. W. J. The Glenfeadon, M. M. R. June 30, 1871, p. 816.

V. not stated.—A. £260

858. The brig H. got aground on the Hasborough Sand. The yawl D. went to her assistance and got her off. The Hendon, S. G. Feb. 7, 1854.

V. 3,970*l.*—A. £260

859. In December, the barque J. V. and the schooner S. R. were in collision in the Mersey, between Seacombe and Egremont. The jibboom of the barque was driven through the headgear of the schooner, and both vessels began to drift together. The tide was running four knots, and there were other vessels astern; the J. V. was in much danger of drifting on to them. A steam-tug, E., came up, a hawser was made fast to the schooner, and the E., with the assistance of the steam-tug G. C., succeeded in getting the vessels clear of each other and of those astern. £140 to the E. as against the S. R., £70 as against the J. V., £50 to the G. C. The Jonquina, The Sultana Reina (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 13, 1871, p. 49.

V. 2,510*l.*—A. £260

860. The S. B., in ballast, got upon the Hasborough Sand with the loss of her rudder, waterlogged, and in a very dangerous state, and was abandoned by her master and crew. Two yawls from the shore, with twenty-five men, with great difficulty and at some risk, got the vessel off the sand into Blakeney Harbour. The Sarah Bell, S. G. May 24, 1845; 4 Notes of Cases, 145.

V. 720*l.*—A. £260

861. In October, the barque M., which had suffered damage by collision with a drifting vessel off the tail of the bank, and had been abandoned by her crew, was boarded, at great personal risk, by the master of the tug S., and was eventually towed by the tug into Greenock. The Maranham (Greenock Sher. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 8, 1875, p. 47.

V. not stated.—A. £259

862. The ship L. D. lost her rudder, and with four feet of water in her hold, anchored, during bad weather, in 5½ fathoms water, to avoid drifting on a reef. The weather, which had been bad, moderated during the night, and in the morning a steam frigate of the East India Company towed her to an anchorage. The Lord Dufferin, 7 Notes of Cases, Supp. xxxiii.

V. 25,000*l.*—A. £250

863. In April, the A., 340 tons, from Liverpool to River Bonny, Africa, ashore on the Rough Point shoal, at the mouth of the Bonny, was got off after part of her cargo had been discharged by seventeen men in a boat from H.M.S. P. The Ann, S. G. Dec. 2, 1842.

V. not stated.—A. £250

864. In February, the barque A. was on the Sparrow Hawk Sand, at the entrance to the Tyne, in stormy weather. The steam-tug F. succeeded, with some risk, in getting the A. clear, and towing her into a place of safety. The services lasted twenty minutes. The Annie, M. M. R. May 21, 1870, p. 658.

V. 9,220*l.*—A. £250

865. The brig B. had sprung a leak, and hoisted a signal of distress. The brigantine T., in ballast under a charter-party, took the B. in tow, occasionally lent some of her crew to assist in pumping, and with the aid of a steamer took the B. into Shields. Owing to contrary winds setting in the T. was detained several days at Shields. The Betsey, December 19, 1849.

V. 977*l.*—A. £250

866. The ship B. had been in collision off Lundy Island, and sustained considerable damage. She was in a dangerous position, drifting towards Barnstaple Bay. Two pilots boarded her, and with great difficulty conducted her to Ilfracombe. The Bouanza, August 8, 1850.

V. 8,997*l.*—A. £250

867. The barque C., 388 tons register, from Alexandria for Hull, with beans in bulk, touched on the Goodwins, and signalled for assistance. She was, with some risk and difficulty, boarded by some of the crew of the lugger H. They navigated her to the North Sand Head, working the pumps for the greater part of the time. It took fourteen hours to get her there. The lugger then fetched a tug from Ramsgate, which towed the barque safely into Ramsgate Harbour. The Caledonia, M. M. R. June 12, 1869, p. 753. Value 6,550*l.*—Award £250

868. In November, the C. from London to Gothenburg in ballast, was in a very perilous position on the Maplin Sand. Twenty men belonging to four smacks threw the ballast overboard and got her off. A steamer which had lain by to assist then towed her to a place of safety. £150 to the four smacks, £100 to the steamer. The Caledonia, S. G. March 5, 1841. V. 3,800*l.*—A. £250

869. The brigantine C., 157 tons, being in a damaged state, and waterlogged, the master and crew were taken out of her by the Porthcawl lifeboat, and she was left riding between the Skerweather Sands and Sker Point, in that condition, and with her foremast carried away. Some of the crew of the steam-tug D., forty-seven tons, boarded the C., and the D. took her in tow, and ultimately conducted her to Swansea. The Champion, S. G. March 3, 1863. V. 1,300*l.*—A. £250

870. In March, the French steamer C., 1,763 tons gross, when trying to enter Penarth Dock in an easterly wind, missed the entrance, and was driven on to the Pitching to the south of the entrance. Directly she struck her stern slewed to the S., and she lay broadside on to the sea, but in no immediate danger. Three Cardiff tugs tried, without success, to get her off. A Liverpool tug and two of the Cardiff tugs got hold of her, but could not move her until after an hour and a-half's towing. The paddle-wheel steam-tug K. C., 2,176 tons gross, came up, made fast, and got the stern of the C. to windward, after which she came off in ten minutes. The hawser was damaged during the services, which, however, involved no risk to the K. C. The Clapeyron, M. M. R. July 13, 1883, p. 878. V. 1,800*l.*—A. £250

871. In November, the steam-tug R., 121 tons register, during a gale from the west, was employed to assist another tug in docking the Ca. in the Bramley Moore Dock. She brought her into the London Dock about an hour before high water. Shortly before this the screw steamer City of B., 1,469 tons register, attended by the tug F., on trying to pass from the London into the Huskisson Dock, was driven by the gale broadside on to the east wall of the quay, with her head to the north, her hawser having parted. The hawser of the Ca. parting about the same time, the Ca. was driven to the E., on to the City of B. It was alleged by the R. that she, with the tugs C. and F., placed the Ca. fair for the eastern entrance of the Wellington Half-Tide Dock, and that the R. was then discharged. That she, the City of B., was from insufficient water settling down by the side of the quay on to the bank, which is rough and uneven from the washing of the sluices, and a very dangerous bottom for vessels to proceed upon, and that she then hailed the R. for further assistance. That after an attempt to tow the City of B. from the wall, which was ineffectual, as the rope broke, a second rope was attached, and the R. drew the City of B.'s bow thirty feet from the pier, and the F. having left the Ca., made a hawser fast to the R.'s towing-gear aft, and went ahead, having her stern to the City of B.'s stem, but that her head was close to the west side of the basin, and she could not go far ahead till her bows were straight for the opening into the river. That the R. meanwhile had got the City of B.'s bows fifty to sixty feet from the quay. That the F. was obliged to slip, being landed by the ebb tide to the north, and that the R. towed the City of B. till her head was fair for the opening into the river, and the City of B. then went ahead at full speed and slipped the R.'s hawser. The owners denied these accounts, and alleged that the F. was doing the R.'s proper work, and that the R. was hailed to assist the F. That it was by the R. being backed astern, and the F. going ahead, and the men working at the capstans, that the City of B.'s head was ultimately canted clear for the opening into the river. Held, that a salvage service was performed by the R., but not of a very high order. The City of Boston, M. M. R. July 14, 1866, p. 880. V. 83,000*l.*—A. £250

872. In December, the steamer C. of H., 333 tons register, took the ground at the entrance to the Yarmouth Harbour. The wind was blowing strong from the S.S.W., the weather hazy, and the sea rough. When the steamer, lifted by the sea, struck the pier end, the salvors got the passengers off by means of a plank. They then attached hauling lines between the steamer and the pier, and succeeded in getting her off.

She was towed to Old Ferry and moored to the south of the harbour. The services lasted twenty-four hours. The City of Hamburg, M. M. R. June 12, 1869, p. 753.

Value 3,954*l.*—Award £250

873. The barque D., 350 tons, while proceeding from Kamiesch, grounded on a reef of rocks. The master sent for the steamer C., which came, and with some risk lightened the barque and got her off. The Deptford, S. G. May 4, 1857.

V. 3,000*l.*—A. £250

874. In November, the E. G. from Scotland to London, got into a dangerous position on the Maplin Sands. Thirty-seven men belonging to eight smacks discharged her cargo and got her off. The salvors lost a large quantity of sprats. The Earl Grey, S. G. April 25, 1842.

V. 2,983*l.*—A. £250

875. In June, the barque E. A. O., 619 tons register, from Sunderland for Beypoor with coals, grounded on the north end of the Goodwin Sands during a dense fog. Two luggers coming up shortly, by laying out two of the barque's anchors, and by the assistance of some of their crew at the sails and wheel on board the barque, succeeded in getting the vessel off the sand. The Elizabeth A. Oliver, M. M. R. December 14, 1867, p. 1587.

V. 10,000*l.*—A. £250

876. The schooner E. was greatly damaged in a collision, and was abandoned by her crew. The crews of the luggers M. S. and P. succeeded, with the aid of a steam-tug, for which they paid £15, in conducting the E. into Ramsgate Harbour. The Ellen, S. G. June 8, 1860.

V. 600*l.*—A. £250

877. The brig E., on the 2nd November, got upon Hasborough Sand. The crew of the Lightship in a few hours carried her into Yarmouth Harbour. No danger to lives of salvors. The vessel W. and J. rendered some assistance. The Emma, January 23, 1859.

V. 1,750*l.*—A. £250

878. In October, the steamer E., 201 tons register, 40 h.-p., bound for Harlingen, was disabled, her boiler having given way, beyond repair. In answer to signals, the trawling fishing smack C. came from the fishing grounds on the Well Bank, three or four miles distant, and her services were engaged to tow the ship to Vlie Roads. The smack crowded all sail and towed the ship by her trawl-line from 7.30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m., when they made Vlie Roads. The Ems, M. M. R. March 14, 1873, p. 336.

V. 2,300*l.*—A. £250

879. In March, the barque E., 387 tons register, laden with grain, having been twice deserted by her master and crew was driven into Falmouth Roads, owing to a severe gale from the E.S.E. There was a very heavy sea running at the time. The steam-tug D., 28 tons register, 60 h.-p. with two boatmen, succeeded in conducting her to a place of safety. The Euphrosyne, M. M. R. Nov. 23, 1867, p. 1497.

V. 7,000*l.*—A. £250

880. In February, the barque E., anchored in the Sloyne, in charge of a pilot, broke her sheer and drifted across the port bow and chain of the P., at anchor about two cables' length distant. The pilot and most of the crew jumped on board the P. After the vessels had been in contact three-quarters of an hour, the tide ebbed and the wind blowing from an opposite direction, caused a lumpy sea. The tug W. then came up, got hold of the E., and held her for an hour, without, however, getting her clear. Blue lights were burnt on board the P., and the tug N. came up in answer thereto, made fast to the E., and got her clear and to a safe anchorage. The Eva (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. April 14, 1871, p. 464.

V. 10,316*l.*—A. £250

881. The sloop E., 41 tons, in a hurricane off the Norfolk coast, was driving with her anchors down towards dangerous sands there; the vessel and crew were in imminent danger, and she had a signal of distress flying. A lugger with eleven hands, at the risk of their lives, towed the E. to Yarmouth. The Exchange, S. G. June 21, 1860.

V. 1,000*l.*—A. £250

882. In December, the yawl D., while cruising off Dover, in dark and heavy weather, observed signals of distress proceeding from the barque F. B., from Rotterdam to Cardiff, in ballast. The barque was much damaged, having been in collision with the steam-packet S., off Dover. Some of the yawl's men, with the consent of the master of the F. B., boarded her, pumped her, and assisted in repairing, pro tem., the damage received. The next morning the barque anchored in Sandgate Roads. She got under way again, and the yawl's master engaged some men from a boat called the R. to relieve his men, who were fatigued with pumping. When off Folkestone, the barque was taken in tow by the steam-tug P. to Dover Harbour. It appeared that the master of the F. B. was ill. The salvors alleged, and the owners denied, that the crew of the barque were mutinous, and refused to work. Held, that the ship was not in imminent danger, but that a certain salvage service had been performed by the D., and that the P. was entitled to more than ordinary towage. The men from the R. had been paid £2 2s. apiece. The Fanny Buck, M. M. R. July 28, 1866, p. 946. Value 1,400l.—Award £250

883. In October, the brigantine F. was caught in heavy gales, and anchored in a dangerous position off Harwich. The two smacks A. and P. went to her assistance, and brought her into Harwich Harbour. The Fortuna (Harwich Mag.) M. M. R. Dec. 2, 1865, p. 1523. V. not stated.—A. £250

884. In January, the barque F. was in Yarmouth Roads with a great deal of water in her. The salvors, thirty-one in number, the crew of the M. L. lifeboat, pumped her during the night, and next day, with the help of a tug, took her into Lowestoft. The Freyr, M. M. R. May 1, 1874, p. 560. V. 2,363l.—A. £250

885. In August, the transport G. P., from the West Indies for London, with troops and invalids, drove from her anchors off Port Royal, Jamaica, and got into a dangerous position, from which she was rescued in a few minutes by the steamer S., value £65,000. The General Palmer, S. G. July 5, 1849. V. 3,200l.—A. £250

886. In February, the brig G. R., from Larna for Demerara with 312 tons of limestone, moored in the outer Roads off Holyhead, about three cables length from Salt Island, near the schooner E., commenced to drive, and got into collision with the schooner in a sea so tremendous as to prevent any of the numerous tugs in the harbour getting under weigh. The tug B. K., returning from towing a vessel off Bardsey, came up, and, after breaking two hawsers and nearly getting her quarter smashed in by the giving way of the G. R.'s mainmast and rigging, succeeded, after four hours' work, in getting the G. R. into port. The George Reynolds (Bengore Ad. Co.), M. M. R. April 6, 1877, p. 435. V. 450l.—A. £250

887. In July, the G. H., 565 tons, from Quebec to London with timber, touched the sands at the mouth of the Thames, came off waterlogged and with the loss of her anchors, and was towed by the steam-tug V. into Margate Roads, and afterwards to London. The Good Hope, Jan. 22, 1842. V. 3,800l.—A. £250

888. The vessel H., when off the Scilly Islands, became leaky. She was boarded by twenty-three men from three pilot boats, who, in two hours, succeeded in grounding her at Crow Bar. The Hope, S. G. July 8, 1853. V. 6,584l.—A. £250

889. In February, the brig J. R. was about ten miles off Orfordness. She had been in collision, and was considerably damaged. The steam-tug I., of 30 tons, went out from Lowestoft, and towed her to London. The salvage services lasted nearly two days, and the tug had to return to Lowestoft. The Jurgen Rahlf, S. G. May 22, 1858. V. 2,324l.—A. £250

890. The ship J. M. was assisted off a reef in St. Ann's Bay by the barque W. The services were of short duration, and were not attended with danger. The John Mayall, S. G. Jan. 20, 1863. V. 16,000l.—A. £250

891. In February, the steamer L. B., 600 tons, from Sunderland to London with coal, took the ground on the Cross Sand, and signalled for assistance. Some beachmen manned the lifeboat J. P. and went to her aid. The lifeboat lost some sixty to seventy fathoms of cable and an anchor. The salvors alleged that it was through their advice that the L. B. was got off the Sands, and one of the plaintiffs took the steamer's wheel. The Lady Beatrix, M. M. R. Aug. 11, 1866, p. 1009. V. 10,600l.—A. £250

892. In April, forty miles from W. Capelle, in a strong wind with a heavy sea, the Swedish barque L., 422 tons register, from Gefle for Torreviga with salt, was in a collision, and hoisted signals of distress. She had lost her bowsprit and foremast, had six feet of water in her hold, and was drifting like a log on the water. She was abandoned by her master and all her crew but the mate, but for whose exertions she would have sunk. The iron screw steamer C., 318 tons register, 50 h.-p., from Ghent for Hull with general cargo, and the master of the C., with four hands, boarded the barque with much danger and difficulty. Two of the C.'s officers and four seamen of the C. were then put on board the barque. They cleared away the wreck, and pumped her. The C. took her in tow, and in thirty-three hours got her safely to Victoria Dock, Hull. The Lejonet, M. M. R. July 5, 1872, p. 848. Value 900*l.*—Award £250

893. The brig L., 253 tons, off the Dudgeon light, was struck by a heavy sea, and considerably damaged, and the master, the man at the wheel, and an apprentice were washed overboard and lost. The next day, the wind having changed to S.S.E., a signal for assistance was hoisted, and seen from several points on the coast, but in consequence of the bad weather it was impossible for any boats to go out to her assistance. When off Mundesley, fourteen men went in the lifeboat, and at considerable risk to their lives, reached the brig and conducted her to Yarmouth Roads. The London, S. G. June 18, 1849. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £250

894. The barque M. took shelter in Beaumaris Bay. While there she became becalmed, and touched on the spit of the Dutchman's Bank, but was got off again with the loss of an anchor. The steam-tug C. in two hours conducted her into Friars Roads, a distance of three miles. The Margaret, S. G. May 13, 1857. V. 3,565*l.*—A. £250

895. In June, the brig M. A., from Stockholm to Portugal, struck on the Ower Sand. A boat's crew got her into Yarmouth Roads, the boat being damaged during the service. £12 10*s.* was paid by the boat's crew for a steam-tug to take her into harbour. The Mary Ann, S. G. Nov. 14, 1843. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £250

896. In May, the M., 240 tons, from Demerara to London, having been damaged by collision and abandoned by all her crew except two seamen and three boys, was boarded by a master and his apprentice (passengers on board the A.), and by one of the crew of the A., who in nineteen days brought the M. to Dublin. The owners of the A. paid the master and apprentice £267 10*s.*, and the seamen £25. The court awarded to the two seamen and three boys £250. The Medora, S. G. Nov. 22, 1839. V. 11,500*l.*—A. £250

897. The brig M., 239 tons, in very tempestuous weather, shipped a great quantity of water, drove from two anchors, and was in great danger from the proximity of shoals and sands. A smack with nine hands came to her assistance, and the crew having boarded her, assisted in pumping her, and set the sails. By the means they adopted, the brig was brought in safety to Yarmouth Roads. The Melona, S. G. May 3, 1848. V. 1,834*l.*—A. £250

898. The brig M., off Sunderland, was anchored about thirty yards from the shore, in a position of great danger, the weather being very tempestuous; she made signals for assistance, and the steamer F., with great risk to the lives of her crew, went to her and towed her into deep water. The Miaza, S. G. May 14, 1856. V. 2,800*l.*—A. £250

899. In January, the ship M. L., 2,377 tons, from Liverpool for Bombay with 2,800 tons of coals, was heading to the eastward, without any sail set, with her port braces hauled in, and running across the Mersey to the Liverpool side, her tug the R. having got out of position and being unable to stop her way. The wind blowing a slight gale from S.S.W., and the tide ebb in shore. The M. L. had parted from both her anchors. The steam-tug E. in answer to signals came up and held her, and prevented her drifting on to the Pluckington Bank, slewing her head round to the S., and end on to the tide, then to the W. of S., and finally with the aid of two other tugs, the E. towed the M. L. to New Ferry, where the other two tugs held her during the night. The services of the E. lasted about fifteen minutes. The Morning Light, M. M. R. May 10, 1872, p. 593. V. 12,000*l.*—A. £250

900. A barque of 354 tons, having struck on the Tongue Sand and afterwards on the shingles off Margate, two luggers, of the joint burden of forty-nine tons, went to her assistance, and on the following morning, having brought out an anchor and cable, succeeded in conducting her in safety to the North Foreland. The Mountaineer, 2 W. Rob. 7. V. 12,000*l.*—A. £250

901. The brig N. C., 258 tons, in the North Sea, came in collision with another vessel, and remained foul of her, and in much danger. The smack A. disconnected the vessels, and took the brig to Yarmouth Roads, whence she was taken by a steamer into Lowestoft Harbour. The Norham Castle, May 30, 1850.

Value 1,600*l.*—Award £250

902. In January, the N., 826 tons, from Cardiff to Cape de Verde Islands with coals, was found derelict, and drifting towards the shore near Keel Bay, by the screw steamer R., which took her in tow and brought her safely to Inishlyne. The Nimrod (Dublin Adm. Co.), M. M. R. April 30, 1875, p. 551. V. 800*l.*—A. £250

903. In November, the barque O., damaged in a collision, was towed to Liverpool and placed in the Canada Dock by the G. B., from about eleven miles north of the Orme's Head. The Oskar (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. January 13, 1882.

V. 2,447*l.*—A. £250

904. In March, the brig P. C., with railway sleepers, was observed to take the ground on the Long Sand, off Ramsgate, the sea being heavy and the wind strong from W.N.W. The master of the smack I., from the East Swin, manned the lifeboat with four hands, crossed the Sunk Sand, and came through the Black Deep to the Long Sand, and boarded the brig. Shortly afterwards the smack E., belonging to the master of the I., also arrived, and both smacks were set on, and the brig was lightened by throwing about 2,000 sleepers overboard. The I. then came round the head of the Sunk Sand, and got as near to the P. C. as she could. Owing to the heavy sea, the P. C.'s bower anchor could not be got out; so two of the smack's anchors and two cables of 80 fathoms were fetched by the lifeboat, and let go to the W.S.W. of the P. C. About an hour after high water all hands hove on the anchors, and the P. C. floated off the sands, though she had previously been striking the ground very heavily, on the top of the tide. The two anchors were slipped, the P. C. was brought up for the night off Broadstairs, and the smack next morning fetched a steam-tug, which took the P. C. into Ramsgate. The Prince Consort (Cinque Ports Comm.), M. M. R. April 4, 1868, p. 435.

V. 1,600*l.*—A. £250

905. In March, the barque Queen of C. was ashore on the West Cap Rocks, and three luggers and three shore boats, with twenty-one hands in all, put off to her assistance. An anchor was carried out, and by heaving on it the barque was got off. The service was of no great duration, nor of any considerable risk. The Queen of Ceylon (Cinque Ports Comm.), M. M. R. June 28, 1878, p. 813.

V. 2,193*l.*—A. £250

906. H.M. gunboat R., of Wells, grounded on a sand bank whilst at anchor. A yawl with twenty-two hands assisted her off. The Ruby, S. G. April 5, 1859.

V. 7,246*l.*—A. £250

907. The brig S., laden with tallow and lathwood, was, on the 28th of November, on the outer bank off Horsey, on the Norfolk coast, 500 yards from high water mark. The wind and sea were so high that the life apparatus and rockets could not be used with success. Some beachmen, at the imminent risk of their lives, succeeded in launching a yawl, proceeded to the brig, landed the master and crew in safety, and secured the brig to the beach. Next day the agents for the ship engaged the salvors to discharge the cargo at the rate of 12s. per cask. They discharged 140 casks of tallow, and were paid at that rate. The brig then got off the bank, and, with the salvors on board pumping her, was towed by a steamer to the entrance of Yarmouth Harbour; but there was not sufficient water to carry her over the bar, and she remained outside during that night. The next morning she took the ground, and remained on the bar until the evening, when she broke up, and the rest of her cargo was washed out of her. The salvors were recalled by a signal, and on their return were prevented from completing their work by 400 other men, who saved the floating cargo. The court awarded £250 to the first set of salvors, and to the second set a proportion of the value, the amount of which is not ascertainable from the report. The Samuel, S. G. January 15, 1851; April 17, 1851.

V. 7,200*l.*—A. £250

908. In December, the steamer S. W., 435 tons gross, from the Tyne to Oporto with coals and chemicals, was in distress and signalling for aid. Her cylinder, cylinder cover, and the piston rod of her low pressure engine had given way. The screw steamer F. N., value £15,000, with sixteen hands, in ballast from London to Sutherland, when about E.S.E. of the Spurn Light, and heading N. by W., sighted her about a mile off, and two points on the port bow, and bore down on her. The weather was dull, with a freshening east breeze. The F. N. took her in tow, and after some difficulty, and with a good deal of skill, got her to Grimsby Roads, a distance of about twenty-eight miles. The Sir Walter, M. M. R. March 7, 1884, p. 150. Value 8,645*l.*—Award £250

909. In November, the schooner S. P., 200 tons, was found derelict seventy miles west of Scilly by the barque E., 311 tons, from Portsmouth to Cardiff. The mate and five hands were put on board the S. P., which was brought safely to Queens-town; £29 10*s.* was paid for damage to hawser, boat hire, and use of tug. The South Picton, S. G. Jan. 7, 1859. V. 750*l.*—A. £250

910. Off Margate the lugger Q. was engaged to fetch an anchor and chain for the brig T., but on her return the men could not board the brig, owing to the force of a gale that had sprung up from the E.N.E. The brig went ashore, and the lifeboat, in answer to a flare-up, came to her and saved the crew. The weather moderating, the lifeboatmen assisted in lightening her, and she was got off. The Theesalia (City of London Co.), M. M. R. March 17, 1871, p. 337. V. 950*l.*—A. £250

911. In May, the iron screw steamer T. W. was found by the screw steamer E., fast in the ice and making water, about eighteen miles north of Packerort Light-house. The wind was light, the weather thick with snow and rain, and there was much drifting block ice. The E. forced her way to her, and found her badly stove in about six feet under water. Her passengers were taken on board the E., and after great difficulty and no little danger, that vessel succeeded in taking the T. W. in tow to Cronstadt. The services lasted four days. The Thomas Wilson, M. M. R. June 23, 1876, p. 779. V. 22,000*l.*—A. £250

912. In February, the barque T., from South Shields to London, got ashore on Tynemouth Bar, and was in great danger. Three steamers rendered most effectual aid, and in a short time towed her off. The Tyne, S. G. July 9, 1841. V. 10,400*l.*—A. £250

913. The brig V. got on the Holm Sand, near Pakefield, in a situation of considerable peril. Two yawls, with seventy-two hands, went to her assistance, and found part of the crews of two vessels anchored in the neighbourhood trying to get the brig off by means of a kedge anchor, but without success. The two yawls were employed, and they succeeded in getting the brig off the sand. The Vivid, S. G. Dec. 13, 1853. V. 1,700*l.*—A. £250

914. The barque W. H., during a snow storm, got on shore in East Bay, Dungeness; the tide was ebbing, and she was in considerable peril. Lieutenant Combe, of the coastguard at Dungeness, went with four of his men to the assistance of the barque, which was about four cables lengths from the shore. The wind was blowing a strong gale, with a heavy sea. Before the boat could reach the barque it was capsized, and two of the coastguardsmen were drowned; Lieutenant Combe and the other two being saved on board the barque. Soon afterwards two Deal luggers, with twenty-three men, came up with the barque, and with their assistance she was got off and conveyed to Spithead. £150 to Lieutenant Combe, and £100 to the Deal boatmen. The William Hannington, S. G. June 12, 1845. V. 1,274*l.*—A. £250

915. The ship W. M., 447 tons, having been compelled to slip from her anchors, put into Yarmouth Roads, and hoisted a signal. The wind was blowing a hurricane from N.N.W. with a heavy snow storm. Ten salvors, at considerable risk, manned the yawl F., proceeded in her to the ship, boarded her and took her into Lowestoft Roads. Thirteen more men went off to the ship in the yawl S. F., taking out a North Sea pilot, and two anchors were procured and placed on board by the yawl assisted by a steamer. The William Metcalfe, S. G. May 28, 1850. V. 5,050*l.*—A. £250

916. In December, the steamer A., from Dublin for Genoa with sugar, was aground on the rocks near the North Foreland, her starboard side being broadside to the rocks, the sea breaking over her deck, and the tide ebb. The Broadstairs lifeboat came up and finding that a tug was wanted, sent two of her crew, who jumped ashore on to the rocks from the lifeboat, to fetch one, and they procured the tug Aid, which carried out an anchor and sixty fathoms of chain in a S.E. direction, and succeeded in getting her off. The Anglian, M. M. R. April 2, 1870, p. 433. V. 21,000*l.*—A. £240

917. In September, the French steamer A. came into collision with the steamer B., and was so damaged that her master put her ashore on the Roar Sand near Dungeness. The luggers G., F. N., T. S., and the smack General B., came to the assistance of the A., and the crews of the luggers with forty labourers lightened her of some of her cargo, part of which they took to Dover, and she was then got off. The Antelope (Cinque Ports Comm.), M. M. R. Nov. 29, 1872, p. 1524.

Value 4,500*l.*.—Award £240

918. The C., abandoned by her crew, drifted five miles out to sea from Sunderland Harbour. A steam-tug manned by ten pilots brought her back. £120 to tug, £120 to pilots. The Cato, S. G. June 17, 1841.

V. 700*l.*.—A. £240

919. The barque J., 251 tons, with coals, grounded on the Tongue Sand in a strong wind and high sea. She was in great danger, and rolled, and struck heavily. Two tugs towed her off with difficulty, the tow-rope breaking twice. One of the tugs towed her to Gravesend and afterwards to London. The services lasted two days, and the tugs were slightly damaged. Two luggers and a smack were also engaged in getting the barque off, and were settled with for £120. The Judith, S. G. Nov. 3, 1858.

V. 1,510*l.*.—A. £240

920. In October, the sloop E., in a very heavy sea, wind N. and blowing hard, was some fourteen and a-half miles, and bearing S.E. by E., from the Dudgeon in a helpless condition. The sloop's crew were exhausted with pumping, her pumps kept choking, her sails were blown away, and she had a list. The services of the lugger T. S. were engaged; and next day the sloop was brought up in Lowestoft Roads. The master of the lugger came ashore and engaged a steam-tug to tow the sloop into harbour, and extra men to pump. The expenses were £10. The Ebenezer (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 9, 1870, p. 1587.

V. 900*l.*.—A. £235

921. In April, the brig H. A., from Gothenburg to Southampton with wood, was on the Long Sand, in imminent danger, having lost her rudder, mainmast, foremast, and one anchor and chain. Thirty-five salvors, a steam-tug, a lifeboat, a lugger, and a smack, after services of no long duration, got her off, and towed her into Harwich. The Hedvig Amalie, S. G. July 10, 1857.

V. 700*l.*.—A. £233

922. In December, the brig A. P., 142 tons, from Helsingborg for London with oats, met with tempestuous weather, shipped much water, and sprung a slight leak. She was boarded by three men from a fishing smack, the L., who helped to pump and navigate her to the Bell Buoy in the Humber, where she anchored next day, and she was afterwards towed by a steam-tug to Grimsby. During the service the weather was bad, with showers of snow, and the men's boat was stove in just after they boarded the A. P. The Ann Peat, M. M. R. May 11, 1867, p. 593.

V. 2,800*l.*.—A. £230

923. In October, the iron steamer E., 1,351 tons register, from Liverpool to Madras, with coals, was discovered, after some days' cruise in search of her, by the screw steamer L. of the I., 74 tons register, 45 h.-p., in about lat. 48°50' N. and long. 9°20' W., dismantled, derelict, and unmanageable, with 6½ feet of water in her, and with a list of 16° to port, her lee side being under water and her steering-gear useless. A steel wire hawser was got on board, as well as a 9-inch coir hawser, and the L. of the I. commenced towing at full speed. There was a strong S.S.E. wind and heavy swell from N.W. The steam-tug W. was sighted, and as the rope broke and fouled the propeller of the L. of the I., the tug towed the E. away, leaving the L. of the I. disabled for twenty hours. The W. arrived at Liverpool with the E. in tow in three days. £200 to the L. of the I., £30 to the W. The Eblana, M. M. R. Jan. 24, 1879, p. 114.

V. 4,500*l.*.—A. £230

924. In September, the steamer D. struck on the rocks called the Ny Ground, in the Gulf of Finland, and became a total wreck. Her crew and three cases of platinum, which came from the boats of the D., were taken on board the steamer A., which came from some three miles off, in answer to signals. The A. steamed back to Port Baltic, and landed the crew of the D., and the platinum was taken on to Hull. The Delta (Hull Ad. Co.), M. M. R. March 20, 1874, p. 369.

V. 1,800*l.*.—A. £225

925. In April, the French brig M. L., from Hull for Boulogne, with coals, was fast on the Middle Cross Sand, and as the water rose began to bump. Thirty-five beachmen and the tug S. succeeded, after one and a-half hours' work, in getting her off, slipping her chains and anchors, which they afterwards salvaged. The Marie Leonie (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. June 4, 1875, p. 714. Value 1,500*l.*—Award £225

926. The schooner N., 93 tons, grounded on the Blacktail Sand, on the 20th December, the wind blowing hard from E.S.E. with a heavy sea. The ship and her boats were damaged; she was in great danger. Smacks with twenty-four hands got her off the Sand, and took her to the West India Docks on the 23rd December. The Nicoline, April 21, 1849. V. 1,500*l.*—A. £225

927. In February, the brig Q. E., of Liverpool, was after heavy weather in lat. 39° N., and long. 31° 15' W., with her ensign flying union down, and rolling heavily in the trough of the sea. She was on the port tack, under lower maintopsails, reefed upper maintopsails, lower foretopsail, and foresail clewed up, foretopmast-staystail and gib maintopsail aback, and with a tackle at her port yardarm. She was discovered on the 3rd of February, by the barque P., 600 tons, from Cardiff to Port Royal, Jamaica, laden with patent fuel, the P. having herself suffered great damage in the then recent severe weather. The mate and two men of the P. boarded her and found her derelict, her galley and cabin skylight smashed in, her boats missing, and ten and a-half inches of water in her hold. She had been stripped of all provisions. They put her before the wind on a course for Fayal, 120 miles distant. Fayal was sighted on the 5th, and she was safely anchored there about 6.30 p.m. The mate of the P. remained in charge of the Q. E. till the 13th February, and then gave up possession to a master and crew who were sent out to her from Liverpool. The Queen Emma, M. M. R. August 11, 1882, p. 1004. V. 450*l.*—A. £225

928. In February, the brig W. T., after she had been abandoned in the ice by her crew, was boarded by nineteen men, who put off with much difficulty in a brig, and brought her into port. The William Brig, S. G. March 26, 1856. V. 1,856*l.*—A. £225

929. The R. was ashore near Scharhorn, leaking badly, filled with water, and exposed to the danger of breaking up next tide. She was brought to Cuxhaven by the C., after the crew and the greater part of the cargo had been saved by other vessels. Cuxhaven v. Regina, Salvage, Hamb. H. G. Z. 1871, pp. 167, 168. [German.] V. 4,145*l.*—A. £225

930. The M. L., 237 tons, touched on the Brake Sand, but was got off and anchored. She hoisted signals of distress, and two luggers went out to her at some risk, but could not render assistance. One of the luggers remained by the ship, and the other went to Ramsgate with a letter to Lloyd's agent, who came off in a steam-tug, which towed the M. L. into Ramsgate Harbour. The Mary Lion, S. G. Aug. 4, 1859. V. 3,248*l.*—A. £222

931. The R. lost her foremast and gear near the Borkum Reef, was anchored foul, in eighteen fathoms water, with forty fathoms of chain out, and was drifting. She was found by the A., who towed her, after half-a-day's labour, without danger, to Cuxhaven. The A. expended £62 in repairs of damage sustained. Rencke and Alster, Assistance, Hamb. H. G. Z. 1879, pp. 177, 182. [German.] V. 1,640*l.*—A. £222

932. The A. had her foremast damaged and her rigging carried away by collision. A fishing smack in three days towed her to Grimsby. The Argo, S. G. Dec. 6, 1855. V. 1,038*l.*—A. £220

933. In November, the A., 931 tons register, from Quebec for Liverpool with timber, was run down by a schooner in the Mersey, and parted from her anchor by which she was then riding and had to let go another. The steam-tug Gt. C. towed the schooner off, and it was agreed that the tug should return after having towed the schooner to a safe anchor, and shift the A.'s berth for £8. The A. was lying about her own length from the Gt. E., and during the delay caused by getting up the A.'s anchor, she nearly fouled the Gt. E.; and the tug finally brought the A. to an anchorage off the Brunswick Dock. The owners of the A. insisted that the services were not of a salvage nature; or that, if so, they were included in the £8 agreed upon, though rendered more difficult and protracted from the tug having improperly let go the ropes between the A. and herself, and steamed away from her.

This the plaintiffs alleged was done to save collision with the Gt. E. The Australia, M. M. R. Feb. 23, 1867, p. 240. Value 5,585*l.*—Award £220

934. The Dutch barque B. was off Sunderland in tow of the steam-tug Bee, which was endeavouring, but was unable, to tow her into the south entrance of the Sunderland Docks. The wind E. by S. was blowing a fresh gale; and the weather showery with squalls, and a heavy sea. The steam-tug W. went to their assistance. Great exertions were made to get the barque's head towards the entrance of the dock, but before it could be effected the tow-rope of the Bee broke. The steam-tug G. K. was then also employed, and by the joint exertions of the three tugs the barque was prevented from driving on to the shelf of rocks to the south of the docks, where she would have gone to pieces. The W. and the G. K. only sued as salvors. The Brouwershaven, S. G. November 21, 1857. V. 6,000*l.*—A. £220

935. In January, the barque C., 384 tons register, anchored in ten fathoms water in Yarmouth Roads, for shelter from a gale from the N.E. with snow. After having veered out chain to sixty fathoms, she found herself in only five fathoms, and consequently took the ground and began striking. Signals of distress were made, and a surf boat, with eight men therein, boarded the C. Shortly afterwards the steam-tug S. came up, and took the barque in tow, first to Lowestoft Roads, and then on the flood tide into the harbour. The Chowdean, M. M. R. April 20, 1867, p. 497. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £220

936. In November, the Danish screw steamer D., from Hull for Copenhagen with coals, was discovered by the screw steamer E. about four miles from the Knole Lighthouse in the Cattegat, lying in the trough of the sea, rolling heavily, and with her engines quite disabled. The weather was thick and the wind strong from S., with a nasty cross sea. Hawsers were attached after some difficulty, and the E. towed the D. into Elsinore next day. The Dannemark, M. M. R. June 23, 1876, p. 779. V. not stated.—A. £220

937. In January, the D., from the Levant with fruit, got on the Maplin Sand. Twenty-eight men from a smack and a steamer discharged part of the cargo. She was then towed to Standgate Creek, where the cargo was re-shipped. The Denia, S. G. May 10, 1842. V. 4,000*l.*—A. £220

938. The barque E. L., 363 tons, having dragged her anchor, was close to the edge of Barber Sand. The steam-tug F. N. in an hour and a-half towed her to Yarmouth. The East London, S. G. April 19, 1860. V. 3,000*l.*—A. £220

939. The barque E. H., 324 tons, with her rudder damaged by stress of weather, hoisted a signal of distress when about fifteen miles from the Galloper Light. The fishing smack C., with five men, succeeded in bringing her to the Varne Shoal. A steamer, the B., was then engaged to conduct her to Ramsgate. The Elizabeth Holderness, S. G. April 29, 1846. V. 2,440*l.*—A. £220

940. The brig E. W. was labouring heavily, with both anchors down in the midst of broken water, about ninety fathoms from Hendore Rock, and in great peril of driving thereon. Weather thick and foggy, and sea running strongly. The steam-tug P., with eleven extra hands and a lifeboat, dragged her off the land and towed her into the South Dock at Sunderland. Great difficulty and danger to the tug and her crew. Services from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. The Elizabeth Wilthew, S. G. January 29, 1858. V. 1,800*l.*—A. £220

941. The E., timber-laden, was found derelict on the Dogger Bank, and was conducted by five salvors to Scarborough. The Emanuel, S. G. April 16, 1853. V. 620*l.*—A. £220

942. In January, the ship K. C., 1,421 tons register, from Calcutta for London with a general cargo, when off Portland, was found to have her cargo on fire. The hatches were battened down, all the vents stopped, and she was hove-to for the night. Next morning, the fire not increasing, she proceeded up Channel, and on the second day, when off Dungeness, a pilot was taken on board. The master of the tug P., in ignorance of the fire, agreed to tow the K. C. to Gravesend for £70, and to engage a second tug when met with. When near Dover, the tug W. was employed by the master of the P. to help tow. The harbour master refused to allow the ship to proceed beyond Higham Bight, and the tugs were then discharged. The W.

took the agents from Gravesend and put them on board the ship. The Knight Companion, M. M. R. May 4, 1867, p. 561. Value 39,000*l.*—Award £220

943. In February, the L., having touched on the Leman and Ower Sands, and put into Yarmouth Roads in a very leaky state, was pumped by twenty men, of whom sixteen with a yawl accompanied her to London. The London, S. G. July 13, 1843. V. 3,800*l.*—A. £220

944. In December, the Norwegian ship N. P., from Norway to London with deals, struck on the S. side of Hasborough Sand, and twelve men in the fishing-lugger S. got her to a place of comparative safety. Three tugs took her to Yarmouth. £100 to the tugs, £120 to the lugger. The Nord Polen, S. G. May 3, 1860. V. 2,100*l.*—A. £220

945. Services were rendered by some Suffolk boatmen to the brig R. off Yarmouth Harbour. There was some risk to the vessel and crew. The Ratcliff, M. M. R. Dec. 15, 1866, p. 1586. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £220

946. The barque T., off the South Foreland, slipped from her anchor to find a safer position. The lugger E. Z. was engaged to procure her an anchor and chain from Deal, and having obtained them the lugger A. was employed to take them to the barque, and they were placed on board her in Margate Roads, at very great danger to the lugger, owing to the tempestuous state of the weather. The Traveller, S. G. April 5, 1864. V. 4,800*l.*—A. £220

947. In November, the brig T., 421 tons, from St. Petersburg to London, on the Blythe Sand, was, after four days' attendance, towed off and up to the Commercial Docks. The Trusty, S. G. April 30, 1840. V. 2,650*l.*—A. £220

948. The brig T. B. was dismasted and sustained other damage. The fishing smack S. of R. observed her in the North Sea with a signal flying, and succeeded, with great danger to herself, in taking the brig in tow, and conducting her in thirty hours to Grimsby, a distance of sixty miles. The Two Brothers, S. G. Jan. 28, 1853. V. 1,800*l.*—A. £220

949. The W. was in a sinking condition, with an exhausted crew, about a mile from Sandy Hook Beach. A pilot boat, valued at £600, with a crew of seven men, went to her. The pilot took charge of her, unloaded part of her cargo, shifted other parts from forward to aft to raise her bow where the leak was, secured a tarpaulin over the bow to check the leak, and towed the vessel to New York. The Wave, 1 Blatch. & How. 235, cited in Marvin, 210. [American.] V. 2,167*l.*—A. £216

950. In December, the fishing-smack R. G., with fish, lying-to, under close-reefed storm canvas, about twenty miles S.E. of Spurn Head, in a heavy gale from W.N.W., and a high sea, descried the sloop A., forty-four tons register, from London to Goole with wheat, flying signals of distress about three to four miles distant. The A. was driving rapidly to leeward, the sea making a clean breach over her; her jibs had been blown away, her foresail cut away, and part of her bulwark knocked away, in order to right her. She had two or three streaks shift to leeward. Her starboard leeboard was broken, and the ironwork of her chain-plates had given way. The A. was towed up to abreast of the Bull Sand Light vessel, when the tow-rope broke. Next day she was towed by a tug into Grimsby. The two smacksmen helped to pump and steer the A. The Anne, M. M. R. June 1, 1867, p. 690. V. 1,300*l.*—A. £210

951. The C., 239 tons, from Cronstadt to London with tallow and lathwood, got aground on the Shoeburyness Sands during the prevalence of a heavy sea and a strong wind. The steamer T. came up, and an agreement was entered into between the master of the T. and the master of the C., that the former should tow the C. off the ground and up to Gravesend for £80. The T. was in attendance on the C. for three days trying to get her off the Sand; the ship was during that time lightened, and with the aid of the tug E., which was employed, the T. got the C. off the Sand, and up to Gravesend. The court held that the agreement was valid, that the E. gave great help in getting the cargo out, and was therefore entitled to £130. £130 to the E., £80 to the T. The Cato, M. M. R. Aug. 11, 1866, p. 1010. V. 12,000*l.*—A. £210

952. In December, the E. H. from North America to Hull with deals, with damaged rudder, was taken by a fishing smack with five hands from fifteen miles off the Galloper Light to within six miles of Dover. Thence a steamer towed her to Ramsgate. £110 to smacks, £100 to steamer. The Elizabeth Holdernen, S. G. April 29, 1846. Value 2,440*l.*—Award £210

953. In May, the steamer T. A. G. was driving bodily to leeward off the coast of Portugal, and powerless to help herself, her engines having broken down, when she was taken in tow after much difficulty by the screw steamer O. K., and brought into the fairway for Lisbon. The T. A. Gibb (City of London Co.), M. M. R. June 19, 1874, p. 784. V. 16,008*l.*—A. £210

954. The brig J. and M., from Sunderland to Hamburg with coals, was boarded about sixty miles from Heligoland, in a leaky state, in a heavy gale from the S.E., by the crews of two smacks, who pumped her and took her safely to Grimsby. The John and Mary, M. M. R. Oct. 21, 1865, p. 1330. V. not stated.—A. £210

955. The sloop M., 45 tons, having been damaged in a gale, was off Yarmouth Jetty. The yawl H. went to her, assisted in pumping, getting up anchors and chains, and conducting her to a place of safety. The Mary, S. G. Dec. 13, 1860. V. 1,062*l.*—A. £210

956. The American schooner N. R. was found by the tug M. riding near the Barber Sand, and disabled by a collision; and was taken by her into Yarmouth. The weather was bad, but moderated towards the end of the services. The Nancy Ross (Yarmouth Co. Co.) M. M. R. Dec. 28, 1877, p. 1651. V. 1,050*l.*—A. £210

957. In January, the French brig N., with 210 tons of iron ore, disabled in a collision with the barque B., and deserted by her crew, was taken in tow, after much difficulty, by the tug S., and brought to a mooring in the Tyne inside the bar, after nine hours' towing. The wind was fresh at first, and increased to a gale, and the sea got higher as the towage went on. The Noeme Petite (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 28, 1873, p. 275. V. 663*l.*—A. £200

958. Six men succeeded, after three days' services, rendered with the greatest despatch and with risk of life, in salving a vessel in so effective a manner that a cargo of large value was not damaged at all. Aulploon awarded. Trib. Middelburg, Nov. 30, 1859, M. C. L. II. 15 P. in voce hulp-en bergloon, No. 36. [Dutch.] V. 1,666*l.*—A. £208

959. In October, the L. C. had gone aground during a gale from the land on Whitburn Steel. The V. and B., steam-tugs, at the imminent risk of being driven on a lee-shore, succeeded in taking her off and towing her into the Tyne. The Lord Collingwood (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 14, 1867, p. 1593. V. not stated.—A. £205

960. The ship A. was on shore on the Blythe Sand, surrounded by ice. Several smacks, with forty hands in all, succeeded, after four hours' labour, in breaking through the ice, and by lightening the vessel and laying out anchors rescued her. Services occupied twenty-five hours. The Adelaide, S. G. April 21, 1855. V. 1,237*l.*—A. £200

961. In October, the weather being very rough, the schooner A., from London for Goole, got into distress in Pakefield Gats, where she lost her rudder in a dangerous spot, and was making water. The steam-tug R. came up, as also did the Pakefield lifeboat, some of whose crew boarded the A. and assisted in getting the tug's tow-rope fastened. She was eventually brought into harbour. £170 to the tug, £30 to the lifeboat. The Affigo (Lowestoff Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 10, 1880, p. 1583. V. not stated.—A. £200

962. The A., 648 tons, sustained so much damage by a collision that she was found to have ten feet of water in her hold, and the master and crew thinking her to be in very great danger, got into the longboat and left her. When about a mile and a-half from the vessel they fell in with a skiff with three boatmen in her, who, at their request, conducted them back to their vessel. The boatmen, with two of the crew, then boarded the A., and ascertained her exact state, on which the crew again took possession of her, and brought her in safety to Kingroad. The Amoy, S. G. July 18, 1856. V. 2,875*l.*—A. £200

963. The ship B. was disabled, in a leaky state, and laden with coals; she was towed by the Norwegian barque T. (on her voyage from Quebec to Hull) to St. Ives. The Brodrene, S. G. Feb. 26, 1858. V. 1,894*l.*—A. £200

964. In December, the barque C., 597 tons register, when aground and in imminent danger off Plymouth, was boarded at great risk by two pilots and two other persons, who, by slipping her chain and taking other steps, got her off and into a place of safety. The Cabot, M. M. R. April 24, 1869, p. 530.

Value 2,700*l.*—Award £200

965. In June, the iron screw steamer C., 880 tons nett, schooner rigged, twenty hands, with Indian corn, fourteen days out from Baltimore for Londonderry, broke the tail of her propeller shaft. She proceeded under sail for 126 miles, and on June 30 fell in with the screw steamer V., 3,989 tons gross, 4,449 tons nett, and 400 h.-p., and fifty-four hands, with live stock, dead meat, and general American produce, from Boston for Liverpool, total value £81,148. The C. was heading N. with a W. wind, and could have paid off to the E. without assistance. The V. took her in tow for eighty-five miles, which hastened the voyage of the C. about seventy hours, and she was also taken some ten to fourteen miles to the W. nearer her track, out of which she had drifted thirty miles S. There was no danger from the state of the weather at that time, and the master of the V., when the hawser broke, did not, as signalled by the C. to do, renew the towing, in consequence of the risk of damage to his own cargo and sheep in turning to windward to connect. The court held he was justified, and that by shortening the time in which the C. was exposed to the risk of bad weather whilst in a disabled state salvage services had been rendered. The Camellia, M. M. R. Jan. 18 and 25, 1884, pp. 42, 54.

V. 23,419*l.*—A. £200

966. The barque C., 400 tons, dropped her anchor in Lowestoft Roads; the wind blowing strong, and the anchor not holding, she struck on the north part of the Newcome Sand, but shortly afterwards floated off and drifted towards the Holm Sand, when she was taken in tow by the steam-tug E., which proceeded with her for Yarmouth, whither she might safely have been conducted, but when in the fairway, rather to the north of Lowestoft, some boatmen, who had boarded the barque when on the Newcome Sand, cut the tow-rope and forcibly took possession of her. Possession was, however, recovered the next day, and she was towed back to Yarmouth. There was no risk and no great labour to salvors. The Caroline, S. G. July 25, 1861; 7 L. T. N.S. 222.

V. 3,600*l.*—A. £200

967. In November, the screw steamer City of A., 3,273 tons register, from Glasgow for Calcutta with a general cargo, passengers and fifty-six hands, at anchor in the Mersey, off the Rock Lighthouse, was run into by the screw steamer N., 1,297 tons register, received a great wound, had one compartment filled with water, and was sinking. She hailed the steam-tug B. S., 380 tons register, to come alongside, and some of the passengers, and firemen, who were in a state of panic, jumped on board the B. S., which made fast to the City of A., and assisted her into the Alfred Dock at Birkenhead, where she was safely docked. The City of Agra, M. M. R. Dec. 3, 1880, p. 1551.

V. 90,060*l.*—A. £200

968. The ship C., 793 tons, in the Mersey, was riding to her port anchor with the starboard anchor catted. The wind increasing, a signal was hoisted, and the steam-tugs C. and S. K. assisted her while her port anchor was got in, and the starboard one let go. The Conception, S. G. January 22, 1860.

V. 122,226*l.*—A. £200

969. The C. got on the north end of the Arklow Bank, and lay there thumping heavily for some time. She made about four feet of water; but by throwing overboard part of her cargo she was got off without assistance and proceeded for Holyhead, on the way thither five pilots and ten men boarded her, and by their assistance she was conducted in safety to Holyhead. The Concordia, S. G. July 6, 1846.

V. 21,000*l.*—A. £200

970. The C. grounded on the West Barrow Sand in fine weather. Three fishing smacks in twelve hours got her off. The Courier, S. G. March 22, 1855.

V. 3,167*l.*—A. £200

971. In January, the full-rigged ship C., 2,211 tons gross, from Cardiff to San Francisco, with thirty-six hands and a cargo of railway iron, bricks, coal, and coke, whilst in tow of the steam-tug M. E., from Cardiff Docks for the Bristol Channel, came into collision with the steamer F., was driven ashore off Penarth Head upon a hard stone bottom, and was in great danger. The M. E., without difficulty or danger to herself, with the assistance of two other tugs, got the C. afloat, and towed her into dock. The Cressington, M. M. R. May 16, 1884, p. 310.

Value 17,500*l.*—Award £200

972. In April, the barque Dr. V. T. T., with grain, was riding in Margate Roads about half-a-mile from the Long Nose, in a heavy gale from the N.N.E., with the sea breaking over her. She had two anchors, but had fouled them. She signalled the lugger E., from which four hands with great difficulty got on board her, and the lugger stood by. The hands from the lugger asked £100 to get her to London, but the captain of the barque offered £5. Whilst they were disputing as to the sum to be paid, the steam-tug Enterprise came up, and was engaged to take the barque in tow, and having moved ahead, the anchors were got in and the barque was towed in safety to London. £175 to the Enterprise, £25 to the E. The Doctor Von Thunnen Tellow, M. M. R. May 1, 1869, p. 562; May 8, 1869, p. 595; July 13, 1869, p. 979.

V. 1,127*l.*—A. £200

973. The D., having struck on a bank, sprang a leak, made a considerable quantity of water, and was in great danger. The fishing smack B. entered into an agreement for £60 to conduct the D. to Harwich, and an additional £10 if the services lasted till the following morning. The water, however, continuing to increase, the services of the yawl Dart were engaged, and after considerable labour the D. was brought into Yarmouth. The B. and the Dart both sued. The Doncaster, S. G. May 18, 1847.

V. 1,555*l.*—A. £200

974. The E. E. was anchored in Simon's Bay at the Cape of Good Hope; a squall coming on she was driven on shore and struck heavily on the beach. H.M.S. P., together with a number of men from H.M.S. F., got her off. The Earl of Eglinton, S. G. Dec. 6, 1855.

V. 84,500*l.*—A. £200

975. In December, the brig E. J., from Sunderland for Middlesborough with coals, in lat. 55° 53' N., and long. 1° 39' E., about 120 miles E. by N.½N. of the Tees Bar Buoy, had lost her long-boat, had her jolly-boat laid on the deck, the main hatch tarpaulin split, three hatches off, and five and a-half feet of water in her. She was filling fast by the hatchways. Two boats from the screw steamer B. were sent with the means of rigging the pumps and battening down the hatches. The B. got a tow-line on board and commenced to tow her slowly for three and a-half hours, when, the water being reduced, the B. steamed ahead at full speed for twenty hours more. A tug was then procured, which brought her up safely in two hours to Middlesborough. The Eliza Jane, M. M. R. July 28, 1876, p. 947.

V. 750*l.*—A. £200

976. The E., 381 tons, was on the Maitland Sand, off the coast of Essex. A steam-tug of 35 h.-p., with eight men, lay by the vessel one night and then drew her off and towed her to London. The Enu, 1 W. Rob. 15.

V. 11,773*l.*—A. £200

977. The E., in ballast, got upon the Gunfleet Sand, and was abandoned by her master and crew. Eight smacks and thirty hands took possession and worked at her, refusing other assistance; ten other smacks came and obtruded their assistance. The vessel was got off and into the river Colue. The services of the first salvors lasted two days. The court dismissed the claim of the second salvors. The Eugene, 3 Hagg. 156.

V. 420*l.*—A. £200

978. In May, the F. was found lying broadside on the water, with her masts in the sea, by the smack J. and the lugger B., about thirty miles S.E. of Lowestoft. Finding they could not do anything without steam, the J. fetched the tug R., which was not strong enough. The tugs S. and U. S. were fetched, and after the mainmast and foremast had been dragged out of her, and she had righted herself, these towed her into Yarmouth Roads and beached her near the Wellington Pier; the tow-rope breaking three times on the way. The Flora (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Aug. 6, 1875, p. 1000.

V. 393*l.*—A. £200

979. In December, as the ship G. G., 1,245 tons, in ballast, was proceeding from Gravesend in tow of the steam-tug S., 235 tons, the tow-rope parted near the Tongue Lightship, in a gale of wind with snow and hail from N.E., and a very heavy sea. The G. G. just cleared the lightship, and let go her anchors, but dragged too close on the Tongue Sand. The S. got a rope on board and towed her up Prince's Channel to an anchorage off Shoeburyness, where she remained till next morning, when the storm having abated she was taken by the S. to Gravesend and anchored. The George Gordon, M. M. R. March 7, 1884, p. 150. Value 14,000*l.*—Award £200

980. The brig G. was driven on the Scroby Sand; the wind blew very hard from the S.S.W.; there was a heavy swell on, and the sea broke over the brig, which was in much danger. Twenty-three men in two yawls went to her aid, and by their exertions, in connection with a steam-tug and a number of men to lighten the vessel, conducted her to Yarmouth Roads. The yawl was in imminent danger of being capsized, and there was great danger to the lives of the crew. The Gleaner, June 29, 1852. V. 600*l.*—A. £200

981. In January, the schooner G., with several cases of gunpowder on board, was some thirteen miles S.W. of Sunderland, derelict, dismasted, and rolling heavily, during a gale, when she was discovered by the steam-tug J. P., twelve tons, 40 h.-p., which took her in tow towards Falmouth, but the hawser parted and the G. was lost sight of. After some difficulty she was found again and towed next day into Falmouth. The Glendower, M. M. R. June 1, 1883, p. 691. V. 431*l.*—A. £200

982. The H., 300 tons, laden with coals, was in the Mumbles Road off Swansea, in November, considerably damaged. She had dragged her anchor, and had eight feet of water in her. She hoisted a signal of distress, which was observed by six salvors who manned the pilot-boat and went to her assistance, and after considerable danger and difficulty five of them boarded the H., leaving one in the pilot-boat, which was in great danger from the state of the weather and sea. The salvors assisted in pumping the vessel, and saved her until a steamer came up, took her in tow, and beached her on the Mumbles flats, where part of her cargo was discharged, and her bottom temporarily repaired; and on the 30th November she was conducted by another steamer into Swansea Harbour. The Hampshire, S. G. March 12, 1851. V. 1,475*l.*—A. £200

983. In March, the H., damaged in collision, was got from twenty-five miles off Start Point into Dartmouth by a revenue cutter without much labour or any risk. The Harrow, S. G. July 20, 1843. V. 2,680*l.*—A. £200

984. The brigantine H., laden with flour, stranded in Brixham Bay. The plaintiffs, Messrs. Collier and Dewdney, were requested by the master of the H. to send down men to the breakwater to recover the cargo. There was some difficulty, and probably some little risk, in getting on board the vessel by means of a rope, and subsequently a staging was erected from the breakwater to the H., and the men were thus enabled to work with but little intermission for five days and nights, and were paid by the plaintiffs at the rate of 5*s.* per tide. At times the vessel rolled about a good deal, and eventually she became a wreck. The cargo was abandoned to the insurers, whose agents came down, and finally the cargo was sold by auction. The plaintiffs demanded £125 for commission, saving cargo, &c., as against the consignees and owners. The insurers' agents had already paid the plaintiffs £50 as a bonus, and the defendants paid £150 into court. The disbursements of the plaintiffs were £118 8*s.* 2*d.*, and the court held that the £200 paid by the defendants, being £80 in excess of the disbursements, was a sufficient remuneration considering the nature of the service and the absence of personal risk. Judgment for defendants. The Honor, M. M. R. August 11, 1860, p. 1009. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £200

985. In October, the French Chasse-marée H., 90 tons, from Bordeaux for Brussels, with wine, was found derelict and bottom upwards thirty miles S.E. of Portland, the wind being W., and was taken in tow by the Norwegian brigantine L. After towing twelve hours, the L. engaged the fishing-cutter A. to assist. The L. and the A. towed some way, but as the L. broke several ropes and hawsers, a steam-tug was fetched by the A., which took the H. into Weymouth Harbour. £100 to the A., £100 to the L. The Hortense, M. M. R. June 3, 1865, p. 688. V. 1,275*l.*—A. £200

986. The brig J. M'Q. grounded on the Long Sand at the entrance of the Thames, her rudder was unshipped, and she hoisted a signal of distress. A steam-tug took her in tow, and the lugger S. coming up she was made fast to her stern to assist in steering her. Some of the salvors were engaged in pumping, and in ten hours she was conducted into Harwich. The James M'Queen, S. G. November 14, 1855.

V. 1,478*l.*—A. £200

987. The ship J. W. was on the Goodwin Sands in a very difficult position. Three luggers laid out anchors, and the ship was hove off. She slipped from her anchors, which the luggers took to Ramsgate, and she went to Falmouth. The James Watt, S. G. November 3, 1858. Value 3,699*l.*—Award £200

988. In July, about 9.30 a.m., the brig R. E., with a crew of nine hands, fell in with the J. T. twenty miles S.S.W. of the Eddystone, abandoned by her crew, with her wheel-chains carried away, her hatches off, and her rigging partly disabled. Three of the brig's crew, under the command of one Franch, who could navigate, were put on board, and on the next day the vessel, with her cargo of corkwood, was safely moored in Weymouth Harbour. The Jane Tunes, M. M. R. May 30, 1868, p. 691. V. not stated.—A. £200

989. In November, the cutters A. and B. prevented the barque K. and E. being lost with her cargo on Corton Sands, and beached her, so that £1,700 worth of her cargo was saved. Some lives were also saved. The services lasted two days. The Kaga and Emily (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 14, 1873, p. 210. V. not stated.—A. £200

990. In October, the schooner L., 130 tons, from Middlesboro' for Newport, Monmouthshire, with pig-iron, took the ground on the N. ridge of the St. Margaret's Bay rocks, the wind blowing a gale from S.S.W., and the weather being thick. The lugger B. came up, and found the L. had eighteen inches of water in her hold. The B. took the crew of the L. ashore, and returning, pumped and lightened her. Next day some lumpers came up, and the tug P. towed her in safety into Dover harbour. The Louisa (Cinque Ports Comm.), M. M. R. March 3, 1876, p. 279. V. 1,000*l.*—A. £200

991. In November, the M., riding at anchor dismasted near the Long Bank, in Wexford Bay, and flying signals of distress in very tempestuous weather, was taken to a safer anchorage by a pilot boat, which also landed the crew. The Magnolia, S. G. Dec. 11, 1850. V. 10,000*l.*—A. £200

992. In December, the brig M., at anchor, sprung a leak, and made water fast, and the Mark Lane lifeboat was put out. Some of the men went on board the M., and their services were engaged for the sum of £200. Gangs of men having been set to work, after some hours the water was got under, and the vessel brought safely into harbour. Agreement upheld. The Maria (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 9, 1872, p. 179. V. 700*l.*—A. £200

993. In September, the screw steamer N., from New York to Liverpool, with twenty-five hands, passengers, and general cargo, broke her propeller shaft when about sixty miles E. of Cape Clear, and was taken in tow by the screw steamer W., 1,303 tons, to Queenstown, a distance of fifty-five miles. The Nasmyth, S. G. Feb. 27, 1885, p. 135. V. not stated.—A. £200

994. In September, the barque N., 347 tons, from Dantzic to London, having got on the Long Sand, was lightened of part of her cargo, and was towed into Harwich by six smacks. The Neptune, S. G. Jan. 19, 1842. V. 8,000*l.*—A. £200

995. In November, the barque N. S. was in the Downs in a disabled state after collision. She was sighted by the tug W., which brought her to Gravesend through a heavy gale. When taken in tow she was riding safely and securely to her anchors in a good berth, but it was necessary for her to put into port for repairs before proceeding on her journey. The Northern Star, M. M. R. Feb. 23, 1883, p. 240. V. 11,938*l.*—A. £200

996. The D., very leaky, was drifting about in the North Sea, with wood cargo. The O. and P. T. found her, and attempted, without success, to tow her, but brought her after four days under her own sails to Cuxhaven. £100 awarded to each boat. Dagny and Fishing vessels Orfriesland and Peepin Tom. Assistance, Hamb. H. G. Z. 1878, pp. 378, 382. [German.] V. 2,100*l.*—A. £200

997. In December, the ship P., from St. Petersburg to London, was off Harwich in distress, with a disabled windlass, and was assisted into Harwich by a sloop with seven hands. The Palamban, S. G. Feb. 13, 1837. V. 20,000*l.*—A. £200

998. In November, the schooner P., 98 tons, from Denis and Zabia to Bristol with dried fruits, lost her rudder in a heavy sea, and was brought to anchor, with two anchors down, off the Cornish coast. Next day a part of her cargo was thrown overboard, and five men coming up from Boscastle in a boat were engaged by the master of the P. to help, as also were five coastguardsmen. (The coastguardsmen were paid for their services, and therefore were not parties to the suit.) They found that her port anchor and the stock of the starboard anchor were gone, so a stream anchor was got out and a wooden stock lashed on. The schooner was then brought up, three miles from Hartland Quay. A boat into which three men had got for the purpose of baling was unable to return to her on account of the severity of the weather, but broke adrift, and was driven ashore near Ilfracombe. The master and crew subsequently left the vessel in search of assistance. During their absence five coastguardsmen, having seen signals of distress flying, came up and took possession. Finding no one on board, and that steam assistance was required, they left one man on board, went for a tug, and fell in with the steam-tug the Q. Another coastguardsman and other persons came up to the schooner in the skiff C., and boarded her. The Q. towed the P. towards Ilfracombe, with a hard gale from the W.S.W., and through a heavy sea. When two miles from Baggy Head both hawsers parted, and the steam-tug left and made for Ilfracombe. The salvors alleged that during the night all on board, under the direction of one of the coastguardsmen, managed the schooner as best they could, with storm sails, to keep her off the shore. They, with great difficulty and risk, kept her off the Mask and Keguries Sands, until the Q. returned (at 11 a.m. next day), and towed her into Bristol Port. The Pet, M. M. R. Aug. 11, 1866, p. 1010. Value 3,000*l.*—Award £200

999. The barque P. W., 273 tons, got on the Goodwin Sands in a thick fog, and was in imminent danger. Two luggers with nine men carried out two anchors and hove her off. Salvors encountered some danger. The Pride of the Wear, S. G. Aug. 4, 1859. V. 4,000*l.*—A. £200

1000. In May, the steam-tug R. found the steamer P. in the Lower St. Lawrence on fire and abandoned, her master and crew being in two boats, about a third of a mile off. The R. took the master and crew ashore to Rivière du Loup, and next day returned to the P., which had floated a mile higher up. The fire was then confined to her hold. The R. took her in tow and beached her after seven hours' labour. The wind and weather were favourable, and there was no danger to the R. But for such services the P. would have been a total loss. The Progress (Quebec V.-Ad. Co.), M. M. R. Sept. 29, 1882, p. 1228. V. $3,000.—A. £200 ($1,000)

1001. In April, the steamer Q., 1,975 tons, off the mouth of the Bug River, in the Black Sea, ran aground, and was refused assistance by another steamer. The steamer R., 1,121 tons, from Odessa to Nicolaieff, in ballast, came up and commenced to tow, but after some time the hawser parted. Another hawser was then made fast, and the towage recommenced, and the next day the Q. came off into deep water. The weather was fine. The Queen, M. M. R. 1886, p. 118. V. 18,000*l.*—A. £200

1002. The R. was in the Downs in December in a state of distress, but not of actual danger. A steamer went out and lay by her all night, and the next morning towed her into Ramsgate. The Raikes, 1 Hagg. 246. V. 12,500*l.*—A. £200

1003. In November, the brig R., 207 tons register, with coals and nails, was some 400 miles from the Azores, thrown on her beam-ends, had her decks swept, and lost her boats and masts in a heavy gale, and had to throw overboard about forty tons of her cargo. The jolly-boat of the brig R. G., 286 tons register, from Jamaica to London, with rum and sugar, came up with some spars and yards with which they rigged jury-masts. The R. G. then resumed her course, and the R., under jury-rigged masts, succeeded in getting to Falmouth. The Regulator, M. M. R. Feb. 27, 1869, p. 273. V. 2,600*l.*—A. £200

1004. The R., 1,465 tons, grounded on the Goodwin Sands. The steam-tug C. went to her assistance, and by helping to carry out an anchor prevented the head of the vessel from going further on the sand and ultimately got her off. The Result, S. G. Jan. 29, 1856. V. 6,000*l.*—A. £200

signalled for assistance. A fishing smack lay by her until two steamers came up, and towed her off into deep water. The Rifleman, S. G. June 2, 1848.

Value 16,000*l.*—Award £200

1006. The barque R., 326 tons, was fast aground on the Shipwash Sand, waterlogged and with her rudder useless; two yawls and a smack, at risk to life, towed her to Harwich. Agreement for pilotage set up by owners. The Robinsons, S. G. July 20, 1858.

V. 3,520*l.*—A. £200

1007. The Jersey sloop S., from Yarmouth for a port in Wales with wheat and flour, was found by two Yarmouth beachmen derelict on the sands just inside the Scroby, abreast of Caistor. The beachmen engaged the services of the tugs S. and C., and took the vessel in tow for the harbour, in trying to get into which the tow-rope of the C. broke, and the S. drifted on to the North Sand. As soon as the tide ebbed, beachmen were employed to land some of her cargo. The tug S. then towed her off the sand and into the harbour. The Seaflower (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. February 23, 1872, p. 244.

V. 424*l.*—A. £200

1008. The ship S. was in danger of being wrecked on a rocky coast, full of dangerous sand banks, near Swansea, and her crew were in a feeble condition. From this perilous predicament she was rescued without any risk by the tug D. G. The Socrates, M. M. R. December 18, 1874, p. 1618.

V. 2,354*l.*—A. £200

1009. In March, the steam-tug S., which had been in collision with the steamer C. of E., was found by the steam-tug R., in a sinking state off Dungeness, and taken in tow by her. After towing twelve hours with great difficulty, owing to a strong W. by S. wind, a heavy sea, and the waterlogged condition of the S., which caused a new 11-inch Manilla hawser to part, the S. was brought into Dover Harbour. The Spindrift, M. M. R. November 17, 1871, p. 1459.

V. 2,250*l.*—A. £200

1010. The barque T. B., 400 tons, got on the Roar Sand. The weather was calm, the wind blowing from S.S.W., but the barque was in some danger. The master and crew of a fishing smack assisted in getting her off. The services were of short duration. The lugger was accidentally lost during the service. The Thomas Blyth, S. G. January 26, 1860.

V. 18,000*l.*—A. £200

1011. The American ship T., 323 tons, got on the Cork Sand, and sustained great damage, but ultimately got off. Three smacks, together of 124 tons, manned by eighteen men, conducted her to Harwich in about six hours. The Trident, Jan. 22, 1850.

V. 4,800*l.*—A. £200

1012. The T., having received considerable damage by collision, was abandoned a few miles from Blakeney. Nineteen fishermen of Sherringham put off in a yawl, with some difficulty succeeded in boarding the T., and after services of seventy-two hours' duration took her to Blakeney. The Tritonia, S. G. May 26, 1847; 5 Notes of Cases, Supp. 4.

V. 1,367*l.*—A. £200

1013. In May, the screw steamer W. S., 2,025 tons, from Genoa to Cardiff in ballast, was in great danger about fifty miles N.N.E. of Corunna, from a fire burning furiously aft in her 'tween decks. The steamer X., 1,826 tons gross, from Odessa to Hull with grain, came up to her and took off the master, his wife and children. The vessels proceeded together for Corunna, the crew of the W. S. working at the pumps until the fire was put out. The master, with his wife and family, were then put aboard again, with some provisions, and the X. proceeded on her course. The William Symington, S. G. August 1, 1884, p. 486.

V. 26,000*l.*—A. £200

1014. In October, the Dutch schooner A. J. was found by the smack J. and F. on the Dogger Bank, without her crew, with three men from Grimsby and one from Yarmouth on board, and anchored by her starboard anchor only. She had parted from her port anchor, had lost her foremast; her cargo, deckboard, and bulwarks were washed away, and she had five or six feet of water in the fore-castle hatch. The J. and F. took her in tow, and brought her to Hull. The Anton Jacob, M. M. R. June 23, 1876, p. 779.

V. 560*l.*—A. £195

1015. In March, the brig H., 187 tons, was found by the coastguard and a pilot on the coast of Clare with no one on board, her crew having landed to get assistance from shore. She was taken into Galway. The Hercule, S. G. April 8, 1854.

V. 1,300*l.*—A. £195

1016. In March, the brig E. of S., for Shields with coals, and the T., of London, were in collision off Flamborough Head. The smacks J. and J. and L. fell in with her dismasted about twenty miles from Flamborough Head, with only a boy and a man, with both legs broken, and a man dead on board. They took her in tow, put hands on deck to pump, and, with the greatest difficulty, got her safely into Grimsby Docks by the next evening. The Earl of Sunderland (Grimsby Mag.), M. M. R. April 18, 1868, p. 501. Value 500*l.*—Award £190

1017. In January, the ship H., when heading for the harbour of Falmouth, was kept too much away to St. Maurs, and shortly afterwards got aground, with all sails loose. One of the crew of the cutter Z. boarded her, and advised her master to send for a tug. The cutter then left for a tug, an anchor was let go, but it dragged, and the H. fell foul of a brigantine close by. In about ten minutes a pilot came and took charge of her. The Hugueon (Falmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 24, 1879, p. 117. V. 11,000*l.*—A. £190

1018. The brig L., having lost her port anchor, was riding heavily by her starboard anchor and seventy-five fathoms of chain, in the Prince's Channel, and in considerable peril. The lugger E., at one a.m., put out to her assistance, left four of her crew on board the L., and proceeded to the shore for another anchor and chain, with which she returned. At half-past seven the steam-tug C. came up and offered her services, and an agreement was alleged to have been made to tow the L. to London for £28. The C. then towed the E. with the anchor and cable up to the L. While doing so, the remaining anchor of the L. parted, and the C. then cast off the E., and taking hold of the L. towed her to London with the assistance of the steam-tug P., with whom an agreement was made for £30. The owners of the ship settled with the salvors, by paying £30 to the C., £40 to the P., and £80 to the lugger, and these actions were brought against the owner of the cargo. The Lucia, S. G. December 17, 1861. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £190

1019. The brig C. took out of the M., which was disabled, and in a state of great distress, some cargo, and eight survivors of the crew, seven having perished. The Messenger, Marvin, 193. [American.] V. 572*l.*—A. £190

1020. In January, during a moderate gale from S.E., with a flood tide of two to three knots, the weather being dark and rainy, the iron screw steamer N., 2,367 tons register, was discovered by the tug T. in the Mersey, lying unmanageable and head upon tide, with her stern deeply embedded in the port side of the M. No. 4. The tug Lord L. came up, and the two tugs alongside each other made fast to the starboard side of the H., the N. steering astern, and after towing for twenty minutes, the N. was got clear with the loss of her stern. The M. was beached by the Lord L., and the N. proceeded down the river, anchored till evening, and was then docked. The Mudhopper (No. 4), M. M. R. April 10, 1879, p. 466. V. 7,000*l.*—A. £188

1021. In December, the Norwegian brig P., during a very heavy gale and in a high sea, was aground on Castle Point and had a distress signal hoisted at the gaff end. A pilot, with a volunteer crew of three hands, went to her assistance. The boat was one hour getting to the ship, owing to the tempestuous and dangerous state of the weather. The brig had taken the ground fore and aft, and was striking heavily. The pilot took charge of her, and with his men separated the chains, which were secured round her mainmast, and one of his men, at great personal risk, put the buoy over the bow to buoy the chains. The tug Da. came up and towed for three hours, partly alone and partly with the tug Do. During the towing the hawser of the tug Da. parted, but another was taken to the Da. from the brig by the pilot boat. The Do. was engaged about five hours, and took the brig to the docks with the aid of the tug W., which came up after she was got off. £70 to the pilot boat, £75 to the Da., £40 to the Do., and £3 to the W. The Pehr, M. M. R. Jan. 16, 1869, p. 87. V. not stated.—A. £188

1022. The brig L. was on fire and derelict, off the Lincolnshire coast. Two fishing smacks went to her assistance, and with some danger succeeded in subduing the fire, and at last, with the assistance of a steam-tug, towed the L. into Grimsby Docks. The Lyra, S. G. April 19, 1860. V. 372*l.*—A. £186

1023. The brig B. encountered a succession of gales and was near foundering. Her provisions were exhausted; one man died. In this situation she was fallen in with by another ship, the master of which supplied the brig with provisions and towed her twelve days, when the hawser parted in boisterous weather and the vessels separated. The crew got the brig into Charleston. The Brothers, Bee, 136, cited in Marvin, 201. [American.] Value 971*l.*—Award £183

1024. In October, the brig E. F., from London for Cronstadt with wheat, struck twice heavily on Hammond's Knowl off the Yarmouth coast, and then beat over the sand into deep water. She made water very fast, and when opposite Winterton, thirteen beachmen were engaged, who pumped incessantly for twenty-six hours, until she was brought to an anchor in Yarmouth Roads. The Elizabeth Ferguson (Yarmouth Mag.), M. M. R. Oct. 14, 1865, p. 1293. V. 5,300*l.*—A. £182

1025. In October, some of the crew of the ship M. Q. assisted the schooner T., from Cork for Plymouth with oats, in distress, damaged by heavy seas and gales, and abandoned by all but one hand, and brought her into Ilfracombe Harbour. The Tower, M. M. R. Oct. 28, 1865, p. 1361. V. 800*l.*—A. £182

1026. The A. was in broken water on the edge of Smithurst Sand with a signal of distress flying: there was a gale blowing and every appearance of bad weather from the N.E.; her mainmast and all her rigging had been cut away, and she was in great danger. The smack P., with great difficulty and at the risk of the lives of her crew, with the assistance of three other men who afterwards came on board, and to whom the captain agreed to give £60, got the A. into Bridlington Quay. The smack sustained damage to the amount of £45. The Anne, S. G. April 24, 1850. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £180

1027. The brig A. was piloted by a wrecking vessel from the Washerwoman Shoals, where she lay at anchor in a dangerous situation, in bad weather, to Key West, a distance of twenty miles. The Augusta, Marvin, 220. [American.] V. 2,400*l.*—A. £180

1028. The B. was driven by stress of weather on the Gunfleet Sand. About thirty men, the crews of a revenue cutter and of two boats, lightened her, got her off, and conducted her to Harwich. The Bagnal, S. G. May 19, 1848. V. 1,575*l.*—A. £180

1029. In May, the schooner E. V., which was run into by the ship G., six miles off the Lizard, and abandoned by her crew, was found by the trawler P. as she was proceeding to her fishing ground. The E. V. had only her mainmast standing, her foremast was cut away, and the wreck of the bowsprit hanging over the bows. She was boarded by two of the crew of the P., and an unsuccessful attempt was made to get a tow-rope from her to the P. The Cadgwith lifeboat then came up, and put one man on board the trawler and four on board the schooner. The sea during these operations was very heavy, and damage was caused thereby to the P.'s boat. A tow-rope was at length made fast, and the E. V. was towed to near Penzance. The Ellen Vair (Truro Co. Co.), M. M. R. July 22, 1881, p. 906. V. 750*l.*—A. £180

1030. In June, the French steamer E., 183 tons, from Havre for Guadaloupe, with a general cargo, took the ground on the Woollessinners, near Fort Eastney. There was a strong east wind and the tide was high. The tug V., 85 tons and 45 h.-p., tried to get her off, but the hawser parted. Later on, the V. engaged the steam-tug I., 57 tons and 30 h.-p., to aid her. By their united efforts the E. was towed into deep water, and eventually to Portsmouth Harbour. The services lasted from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. The Espérance, M. M. R. March 19, 1870, p. 369. V. 6,700*l.*—A. £180

1031. The O. was in the dangerous waters at the mouth of the Elbe, all sails lost, and only makeshift sails set. The pilot schooner H. brought her into safety after nine hours' labour. The Hamburg and Oernen, Assistance, Hamburg Mercantile Law Journal, 1869, pp. 71—73. [German.] V. 2,800*l.*—A. £180

1032. In October, the brig H., having sprung a leak about six miles from Corton lightship, was labouring heavily. She had a list to starboard, and that side of her deck was under water. One of her two boats was damaged. The smack J. and C. came up with her, put three men on board, and attended her to the back of the Holme Sand off Lowestoft, when the men not being able to reduce the water in her hold, they signalled to the lifeboat S. P., thirteen or fourteen of whose crew, at great risk, boarded the H., went to the pumps, and worked her towards Harwich, the smack running to Yarmouth, losing one boat and several days' fishing, besides having her boom broken. The brig was anchored near the Cork lightship at twelve at night, pumped during the night, and taken to Harwich Harbour next morning, with three feet of water in her. £105 to lifeboat, £75 to smack. The Hope (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 23, 1877, p. 1494. Value 930l.—Award £180

1033. The sloop J. was on the Breast Sand in a strong wind and heavy sea. Two smacks carried out anchor and chain, worked at the pumps, discharged part of her cargo, hove her off, and took her to Sutton. Services lasted eight days. The Juno, S. G. July 22, 1858. V. 620l.—A. £180

1034. The schooner O., considerably damaged by a storm, was off the Dogger Bank when the crew of the fishing smack E. boarded her with considerable difficulty, took her in tow, and conducted her to the Humber. The Orelio, S. G. March 23, 1854. V. 1,234l.—A. £180

1035. The steam-tug M. A., 178 tons, having been engaged to tow the ship A., of 811 tons, from the Formby lightship to the Mersey, proceeded to her, and commenced to tow her ahead to her anchor, but being unable to keep ahead of her the tug cast off and lay by the ship. The ship parted her chain, the tug got the hawser on board, and the ship's second anchor was let go, but the wind and sea being very heavy she drove toward Taylor's Bank, thereby incurring great danger. The tug ultimately held her, and conducted her to the Great Eastern's moorings. The Admiral, S. G. April 28, 1864. V. 5,000l.—A. £179

1036. In July, the steamer C. was being launched from the slip on which she was built, some little way up Bow Creek, when the rope broke, and she ran on until she took the ground aft on the opposite side of the creek, and her stern being aground she became fixed across it. As a portion of her cradle was fast to her, she was buried deeply in the mud. The tugs B. and U. S., which were waiting to take the C. to Victoria Docks, tried to tow her off the mud, and, failing in that, tried to click or jerk her off, but failed in that also. The tug T. then joined them, and all three managed to move her. Finally, with the aid of the tug V., she was got off, and straightened down the creek. The tide was falling. £120 to the U. S., B., and T., £25 to the V., and £33 for damage to the tugs. The Cyclops, M. M. R. May 17, 1872, p. 625. V. 80,000l.—A. £178

1037. The Norwegian barque A. was driven by stormy weather on a shoal in Lampsake Bay, in Asia. The steamer E. E. succeeded in getting her off. The Alfen, S. G. January 22, 1857. V. 1,634l.—A. £175

1038. In August, the Swedish vessel A., from Norway to London with ice, aground on the Middle Cross Sand, was found there derelict by some Caistor boatmen in the yawl G., and was eventually got off by them. The Avance (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 8, 1875, p. 1298. V. 525l.—A. £175

1039. The steamer B., from London for Rotterdam, when about thirty miles from the North Foreland, broke her mainshaft. The steamer R. towed her a short distance, but cast her off, it being found that the R.'s machinery was sustaining injury. The R. on reaching land despatched the steam-tug T. P., which towed the B. to the canal leading to Rotterdam. The Batavier, S. G. Nov. 25, 1853; 1 Spinks' Ecl. and Adm. Rep. 169. V. 2,930l.—A. £175

1040. The K., a Prussian vessel laden with grain, struck on the Leman and Ower Sand on the 9th of March, the wind blowing strong from N.N.W., with heavy squalls of rain and snow. She made water fast, and all hands were set to the pumps. She got off, hoisted a signal of distress, and made for Yarmouth Roads. While passing through the Cackle Gat in almost a sinking state, the steam-tug R. O. went to her and towed her to Yarmouth Harbour, but she could not clear the bar owing to the state of the tide. Twenty-two hands, the crews of two boats, assisted in taking in the canvas and pumping, and the ship was laid on the bar and lightened. It would seem from the judgment that the tug subsequently towed the ship into the harbour. £100 to the R. O., £75 to boats' crews. The Krone, S. G. July 19, 1849. V. 3,067l.—A. £175

1041. In July, the iron screw steamer N., from Newcastle to Hull with cargo and passengers, ran aground off Kettleless Point, Yorkshire, the tide being a quarter ebb, the weather calm, and the sea smooth. Next morning she was found by the tug E. hard and fast on the rocks, with a kedge and warp out, the wind blowing fresh from N., the sea rising, and the tide flood. The N.'s kedge warp broke, so the E. got a hawser on board, and after some considerable efforts towed her off the rocks. The N. then proceeded under steam on her voyage. The Newcastle, M. M. R. April 27, 1877, p. 534. Value 4,655*l.*—Award £175

1042. In March, the barque T., at anchor off Margate about a mile and a-half from shore, was rolling and labouring severely, with her mizentop and mainmasts gone, and signals of distress flying, a heavy gale blowing from N.N.E. The steam-tug G. P. was engaged to tow her into Ramsgate, and had to disconnect her engines to enable her to get hold of the barque, thereby damaging her machinery; but ultimately the barque was towed into Ramsgate in two days. The Triumph (City of London Co.), M. M. R. April 17, 1869, p. 499. V. 1,000*l.*—A. £175

1043. In June, the barque A., from China to London, was on a coral reef, near Samboangan, Philippine Islands, and leaky. She was got off by two whalers, the M. B. and the C., into Samboangan Roads, whence the M. B. and the A. P. (bound for Sydney) accompanied her, with eight of their crew on board her, to Malacca Straits. £120 to the M. B., £20 to the C., £30 to the A. P. The Ann, S. G. July 25, 1843. V. 30,300*l.*—A. £170

1044. In November, the brig C., 260 tons, grounded in the night on a dangerous part of the Nore Sand. She was got off by 126 men from five vessels who were on the look-out for vessels in distress. The Ceres, S. G. Feb. 8, 1839. V. 3,000*l.*—A. £170

1045. In November, the steamer D., 192 tons register, 145 h.-p., from Husum for London, with cattle, was taken into Yarmouth by the screw steamer Damietta, 402 tons register, from Sunderland for London, with coals. It appeared that the services involved neither danger nor deviation from her course to the Damietta, but that the cattle on board the D. having been without provender for two days, the arrival of the Damietta prevented a great mortality among them. The Dolphin, M. M. R. April 28, 1871, p. 529. V. 3,500*l.*—A. £170

1046. The schooner E. struck on a reef in the Vineyard Sound, and filled with water. Fourteen persons from the shore were employed by the master in landing the cargo and getting out anchors. The next day in a snowstorm the vessel was hove off by the master and his assistants and left at anchor. During the night she capsized. The next day the master employed the pilot boat S. and the sloop H., with their crews, to tow the E. across the sound to Edgarton, a distance of from twenty to twenty-five miles. After they had towed her a considerable way, she struck on a shoal and righted. With a good deal of exertion and perseverance and considerable risk, during that day, the following night, and part of the next day, they succeeded in bringing her safely into the harbour of Edgarton; the season was unfavourable, but the weather was not boisterous. £20 of the award was decreed to the fourteen shoremen. The Emulous, 1 Sum. 207, cited in Marvin, 201. [American.] V. 1,144*l.*—A. £170

1047. In December, the Norwegian brig F. H., with a cargo of deals, got ashore during a N.E. gale on the main, near Felixstowe, Suffolk. The crew had cut away both masts; she was waterlogged, and had lost her rudder. The crew of the smack V. were engaged and got her off, and to an anchorage in Felixstowe Road, whence with the help of a tug she was brought into Harwich. The Familiens Haab (Harwich Mag.) M. M. R. Dec. 25, 1874, p. 1650. V. 760*l.*—A. £170

1048. In August, the F., from Montrose to London, got on the Maplin Sand, and was towed off after six hours' work by a steamer. The Falcon, S. G. Dec. 17, 1814. V. 2,700*l.*—A. £170

1049. The G. got on the Dean Sand, near Portsmouth, and soon afterwards floated off in a disabled condition, having sprung a leak. Two pilots, with the crew of the A. cutter went to her assistance, and brought her into Portsmouth Harbour. The Giuseppe, S. G. July 11, 1846. V. 7,000*l.*—A. £170

1050. The H. went ashore on the Mixen Shoal in the Bristol Channel, and was abandoned by her crew. Three boatmen, and a revenue cutter, got the H. off the shoal, and took her into Swansea. The owners settled with the revenue cutter for £765. The Henrietta, S. G. Oct. 25, 1855. Value 10,000*l.*—Award £170

1051. In July, the screw steamer K., 1,053 tons, from Riga for London with sleepers and wainscot logs, had a broken propeller and shaft-end, and was riding by one anchor $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from a lee shore, ten miles E. by N. $\frac{1}{2}$ N. of the Hirtshals Light. She had lost the use of her steam power, and was drifting. A lifeboat from the steamer Kozo, from Shields to Stettin, with great difficulty and danger got a hawser on board, and the Kozo began to tow, but the hawser broke, as also did a second. A third hawser was attached, and the K. was towed into Gothenburg Harbour in sixteen hours. The weather and sea were heavy. The Kelso, M. M. R. Dec. 17, 1875, p. 1616. V. 17,000*l.*—A. £170

1052. The Dutch galliot M. M. T., in distress within the Redcar Rocks, during a strong gale with a heavy sea, was extricated by the tug A. and brought safely into port. The Margaretha Mathilda Thancina (Middlesboro' Mag.), M. M. R. Oct. 28, 1865, p. 1361. V. not stated.—A. £170

1053. The C. sustained considerable damage in a storm, and had three of her crew frost-bitten, and was in a state of considerable peril. The fishing smack J., while fishing on the Dogger Bank, was asked to assist the C., and accordingly conducted the C. to Lowestoft. The services lasted from the 14th to the 16th February. The Egir, S. G. July 19, 1853. V. 700*l.*—A. £170

1054. In December, the schooner P., 168 tons, with coals, which had lost her foremast off Hasborough, was brought into Lowestoft by the steamer C. of Gooles. The Primrose (Lowestoft Mag.), M. M. R. Jan. 18, 1868, p. 87. V. 789*l.*—A. £170

1055. In January, the schooner V., from Pau for Runcorn with china clay, came into collision, about eight miles from the Lizard, with another vessel; her decks were swept clean, and but six feet of the mainmast left standing. Some time afterwards the steamer B. A., in tow of the steamer S., came by, made fast a hawser, and took the V. to Falmouth. The Vanguard (Truro Mag.), M. M. R. Feb. 9, 1872, p. 179. V. not stated.—A. £170

1056. In March, the brig W., 174 tons register, from Sunderland for Dieppe, with 280 tons of coals, was fallen in with distressed, and, it was thought, in a sinking condition, about ten miles E. of the Leman Sand, by the smacks J., and A. and V., of Yarmouth. The weather was unsettled and the sea rough. At great risk the smacksmen, who had stood by her for some time, boarded her, and worked for many hours incessantly at the pumps, there being six feet of water in the hold. Four of the crew of the W. left her in a fright and went on board the smacks. Ultimately, with the aid of a tug, the brig was towed into Yarmouth. The Warrior (Yarmouth Mag.), M. M. R. April 4, 1868, p. 435. V. 375*l.*—A. £169

1057. In November, the A., from Hull to Sierra Leone, parted her cables and drove on Walmer Beach. Thirty-eight salvors landed her cargo in a Deal boat and got her afloat. The Ann, S. G. Feb. 27, 1839. V. 1,500*l.*—A. £160

1058. The A. having met with tempestuous weather in the Channel, and damaged her windlass, was compelled to slip from her anchors, and drove upon the Ridge Sand, where she signalled for assistance, which was with difficulty rendered by the lugger W., and she was ultimately brought into a place of safety. The American, S. G. April 24, 1846. V. 6,000*l.*—A. £160

1059. In October, the Greek brig C., and the Italian barque J., which were anchored in the Sloyne, were observed by the captain of the steam-tug W. to be dragging and already in collision. The weather was heavy. The tug put off to their assistance, a hawser was taken on board the C., and materially assisted her in the dangerous position she was in. The two vessels were, by the exertions of the W. and the K. E., prevented from drifting on to a Spanish barque moored close to them, and were put in a position of safety. £110 against the C., £50 against the J. The Calliope and The Junita (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 4, 1870, p. 1426. V. 6,800*l.*—A. £160

1060. In November, the steamer C. was boarded by the master of the smack J., off Spurn Head, who found that she was disabled, her engines being out of gear, and that her master wanted her towed into Hull. After towing the C. for two hours, the warp of the J. broke. The J., at the request of the master of the C., stayed by her all night, and one of the hands was put on board for the night, during which the engines were repaired, and the C. steamed away in the morning. The J. had a boat and a tow-ropes so damaged that they were condemned, and new ones cost £10 and £53 respectively. Her rail was also much injured. The Charente (City of London Co.), M. M. R. April 11, 1873, p. 464. Value not stated.—Award £160

1061. In November, the D. P., 239 tons, from Dantzic to London with flour, while in tow of a steamer whose boilers had burst, ran on Knock Sand, became leaky, and was in great danger. She was got off without personal risk by some boatmen, and towed by a steamer to Sheerness. The Dantzic Packet, S. G. May 10, 1837.

V. 3,080l.—A. £160

1062. The schooner E. lost her sails, rigging, and masts, except a gaff-topsail and the stump of her foremast. In this condition she had crossed the Gulf Stream, and was making her way, at the rate of about three knots an hour, to Key West, with a fair wind, when the steamer L., of 1,100 tons, came up, took the schooner in tow, and towed her about ten miles to Key West, breaking two hawsers in the service. The Entire, 5 A. R. 477, cited in Marviu, 207. [American.]

V. 2,400l.—A. £160

1063. In December, the master of the barque G., which was running back to the Downs, having slipped her anchor in a heavy gale from N.W. and a strong sea, engaged some Deal boatmen to get out an anchor and chain. The weather was very bad, but there was not more than ordinary risk incurred by the salvors. The Galatea, M. M. R. April 16, 1875, p. 486.

V. 6,500l.—A. £160

1064. In September, the barque G., bound for the Tyne, got on the rocks at Roker in a heavy sea, and was in danger of breaking her back, but was rescued from her peril by the trawler P. C. and the tugs D. and W. £70 to the P. C., £40 to the D., £50 to the W. The Gers, S. G. October 16, 1885, p. 663. V. not stated.—A. £160

1065. The schooner G. was off Dungeness, considerably damaged; a fishing smack took her to Ramsgate. A steam-tug, which was engaged by the salvors for £40, assisted, and was paid by them. The Grootzeewyk, S. G. December 8, 1858.

V. 6,000l.—A. £160

1066. In October, the schooner I. had been blown off the mouth of the Humber by a high wind, and was about fifty miles from shore, when she was discovered by two smacks, the O. and the P. Two men from each of their crews went on board, and the smacks took her in tow, and succeeded in getting her nearer to the land; but the tow-lines broke and they failed to get them attached again. They therefore left her, intending to return. In the meantime the screw steamer C., from London to Sunderland, fell in with her off Flamborough Head, and towed her into Sunderland Harbour. £40 to the O., £35 to the P., £85 to the C. The Isabel (Sunderland Pol. Co.), M. M. R. November 11, 1865, p. 1426.

V. 418l.—A. £160

1067. The steam-tug F. of all N., at the mouth of the Thames entered into an agreement with the brig K. to tow her to London for £40. After a short time the hawser broke, and the brig was in considerable danger of going on to the Shingle Sand, and being lost. The steam-tug, after making great exertion, succeeded in taking her in tow again, and then discovered that the brig had sustained prior damage. The master of the tug thereupon repudiated the agreement, and brought the brig to the London Docks. The Kingalock, S. G. February 28, 1854; 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 263.

V. 6,200l.—A. £160

1068. The schooner L., forty-seven tons, in Harwich Harbour, the wind blowing very hard, and it being dark and thick, with rain, struck the ground on the Andrew's Sand, beat over it, and got fixed between the sand and the Languard Fort Beach, where she was in imminent danger. Mr. Coulson, of the Revenue cruiser D., went with the crews of two smacks to her assistance, and by heaving upon a bower and kedge anchors, which they carried out, the vessel was got afloat and conducted to Harwich. The London, S. G. April 17, 1846.

V. 4,000l.—A. £160

1069. In March, the P., damaged in a collision, was towed by the tug D. from the North Foreland to Gravesend. The Propitious, M. M. R. July 28, 1871, p. 947.

1072. In December, the brig K., coal-laden, for London from Shields, owing to the master's insobriety, grounded on the Caistor Patch, and struck heavily several times, the wind being W.N.W., and very little sea running. In answer to a flare-up burnt on board the K., the salvors, Caistor beachmen, put off in their lifeboat, and, having been engaged, got out their kedge anchor, and by means of a warp and winch, and backing the sails, a flood tide helping, the vessel was hove off, after being some two hours on the sands, and having made some foot and a-half of water; and was anchored in the roadstead. In the morning she was towed in by a steam-tug. £7 allowed for steam-tug besides the salvage award. The Kelpie (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. June 5, 1867, p. 22.

1073. In March, the Russian barque S., when off Deal, got ashore, and the captain of the coastguard and his men, and a Captain R. and twelve men in two luggers and three boats got her off. There was some evidence of intention to make a wreck of her on the master's part. The coastguardsmen and their captain were paid £73 10*s.* The Sovinto, M. M. R. July 31, 1869, p. 979.

V. not stated.—A. £157

1074. In December, the smack B., with a cargo of timber, was found derelict, with seven feet of water in her, on the lower part of the Dogger Bank, by the smacks J. and Lady T., and the U. The three smacks towed her for twenty-four hours, and then the U. cast off, and the two other smacks continued towing, and got her, with the aid of a tug, to Hartlepool. The towing lasted six days and twenty hours. The wind, weather and sea were changeable. The Bertha, M. M. R. July 5, 1878, p. 845.

V. 287*l.*—A. £156

1075. The A. was considerably damaged by collision. On arriving at Dungeness she obtained the aid of a steamer to expedite her progress to London. The services lasted forty-eight hours. The Ada, S. G. July 14, 1848.

V. 11,287*l.*—A. £150

1076. In October, the three-masted schooner A. L., 270 tons register, with a cargo of 354 tons of coprolites, from London to Newcastle, was caught in a violent gale off Cromer, the sails were all split, and she began to make water. A N.N.W. course was steered, but she began to drift. Next morning she was off the Nore Light, making for Harwich. Early on the next day she struck on the Whiting Sand, and then had twelve feet of water in her. The boats were got out, and the crew left. The fishing cutter R. came up, and took the master and crew on board. The A. L. drifted off the sand, and was boarded by men from the R. and beached at Shotley Point, the water being then level with the decks. A tug was then employed, and she was put into a safe position on the mud. The Ann Lucy (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 10, 1880, p. 1583.

V. not stated.—A. £150

1077. In July, the iron vessel A., 1,215 tons, from Liverpool for Melbourne, with 1,600 tons of general cargo, thirty-two passengers, and twenty-eight hands, came into collision with the Andalusia, which was being launched in the Mersey, and damaged her plates so that she began to fill and was sinking. The tug R. A. made fast alongside fore and aft, took off her passengers and crew, and took her to the N. of Egremont Ferryship, where she sank in shallow water, after the R. A. had cast off. On the ebb tide she was patched and floated into dock. The Angerona, M. M. R. Aug. 10, 1877, p. 1016.

V. 23,235*l.*—A. £150

1078. The barque A., 302 tons, encountered a very heavy gale, so that her masts had to be cut away, and she was making a considerable quantity of water. When off the Spurn, her signal of distress was observed by the crew (five in number) of the fishing smack T. and A., and they made towards her: three of them went in a boat, at risk to their lives, and two of them boarded her. The smack then took the A. in tow, a very heavy sea running at the time, and arrived off Winterton, where they engaged a tug, which towed the A. to Yarmouth. The owners of the barque set up an agreement for £150, and tendered that sum. The Arthur, S. G. June 3, 1862; 7 L. T. N.S. 257. Value 1,850*l.*—Award £150

1079. The brig B., off the North Foreland, in a heavy gale of wind from the W.N.W., dragged her two anchors, which the captain then slipped, in order to avoid driving foul of several other vessels in the Roads. The T. lugger proceeded to Ramsgate, and procured two anchors and cables of great weight, with which she returned to the brig, and after great difficulty placed them on board. The service lasted about fourteen hours. The Breeze, April 24, 1851. V. 3,000*l.*—A. £150

1080. In November, the steamer B., in the Bay of Biscay off Ushant, sprang a leak, and signalled the steamer C., from Malaga to London with a perishable cargo, to stay by her. She was in great peril, and her crew were about to abandon her. The C. lay by her at considerable risk to herself all that night, was detained twenty hours, and burnt eight tons of coals in that time. The B. eventually rounded Ushant, and signalled the C. that she had no further need of her services. The Britannia (City of London Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 1, 1878, p. 1395. V. not stated.—A. £150

1081. The master and a seaman of the brig C. W. being seized with the African fever on the 14th November, 1844, while on their homeward voyage, a signal of distress was hoisted, which brought H.M. sloop C. to her assistance, the captain of which vessel boarded the brig and removed the master and sick seaman to H.M. sloop, sending a gunner and three seamen on board the brig to assist in navigating her. They proceeded together, the sloop occasionally towing the brig, till the 20th, when, on their arrival at Prince's Island, whither the C. was bound, her sailing master was sent on board the brig to conduct her to England, the gunner and one of the crew of the C. returning to her. The vessels then parted company, the C. W. proceeding to England, where she arrived on the 30th January, 1845. The Charlotte Wylie, S. G. Nov. 11, 1846; 2 W. Rob. 495. V. 1,300*l.*—A. £150

1082. The C. C., on the 1st October, grounded off the coast of Sumatra, where she lay until the 6th, when she was desried by two vessels, which, by means of hawsers, removed her from the bank on which she lay and conducted her into deep water. The Chartley Castle, S. G. June 11, 1847. V. 4,000*l.*—A. £150

1083. The brig C. O. (in ballast) was stranded on the East Knock Sand. Six smacks got her off. The Come On, S. G. April 12, 1859. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £150

1084. The schooner C., laden with a cargo of pig-iron, was on shore upon a dangerous reef of rocks called the Goldstone, lying E.S.E. of Holy Island, the wind blowing strong from W. by S., with a short sea. Fifty salvors, being the crews of a pilot coble, two yawls, and a coble, by great exertions, got out twenty-five tons of pig-iron, and the schooner was forced into deep water, and finally conducted to Holy Island Harbour. The services were of some duration. The Commerce, S. G. Feb. 26, 1858. V. 1,200*l.*—A. £150

1085. In December, the D., from Newcastle to Messina, having been on the rocks off Beachy Head, and lost her rudder in getting off, drifted towards the French coast, and was afterwards found signalling for assistance, ten miles off Worthing. A cutter towed her 100 miles in to the Downs, and a steamer took her afterwards to Ramsgate. The Dygden, 4 M. L. M. Notes of Cases, 153, Feb. 27, 1839. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £150

1086. In December, the ship E. B., 983 tons, the wind blowing fresh from the S.E., struck on the north-east end of Glassgorman Bank, to the southward of Arklow, on the coast of Ireland, and continued striking while beating over the bank. After efforts to get her off, by means of her sails, had failed, her masts were cut away, and she drifted off the bank. The starboard anchor was then let go, and the ship rode to it with sixty fathoms of chain. Two lifeboats came to her assistance, and while a portion of the crew of one assisted in working the ship, the second officer of the ship was sent on shore in the other, and telegraphed to Dublin for a steam-tug. Upon receipt of this message the L. was despatched from Kings-town, and after experiencing great difficulty in consequence of the badness of the weather, she reached the E. B. about 1.30 p.m. next day. About three o'clock she took her in tow, and finally reached Kingstown with her at nine o'clock on the following morning, but, owing to the mismanagement of those on board the tug, the ship struck on the Kish Bank, and thereby received further damage. The Eliza Bencke, S. G. March 13, 1863. Value 45,000*l.*—Award £150

1087. The brig F., 300 tons, in the Gull Stream, came into collision with the M. All the crew of the F. jumped on board the M., which continued her voyage, and the F. drifted towards the Goodwin Sands. Two luggers and a steam-tug towed her into Ramsgate Harbour. Services three hours. The Fenix, S. G. December 20, 1855. V. 800*l.*—A. £150

1088. The F., 282 tons, was about eight miles below the Winterton Ridge Sand, in imminent danger, with four feet of water in her, her crew exhausted, the rudder damaged, and the water gaining. The pilot-cutter P. conducted her into Harwich in three days. The Frederick, 1 W. Rob. 17. V. 600*l.*—A. £150

1089. In May, the F., drifting in a dismasted condition towards the West Girdler Sand, was discovered derelict by the steamer O., 271 tons nett register and 362 tons gross, with fourteen hands and a general cargo, from London to St. Nazaire. The mate and four hands boarded her, cut away her wreckage, and made fast a tow-line, which, however, broke, and fouled the propeller of the O., rendering her helpless for a time. Both vessels began to drive, and came into collision, port bow to port bow, within half a mile N.E. of Pan Sand Buoy. The F. continued to drive towards the North Tongue Sand. The O. was carried by the ebb tide on to the lee side of the sand, and remained fast. The anchor of the F., as she drifted, was let go; she was checked, and brought up a little to the east of the North Tongue Buoy. The tug V. came up and stayed by her all night. Next morning a rope was got on board the F., and towage began, the O., which had got clear, steering from the stern by means of a rope. After two ropes had successively parted, the steam-tug T. came up, and was lashed alongside the F. to steer her, and the F. was taken to Gravesend, and then to the Surrey Docks. The O. incurred £200 expenses, which were allowed by the court exclusive of the salvage. The Freyr, M. M. R. July 28, 1882, p. 941. V. 748*l.*—A. £150

1090. The barque G. was off Deal on the night of the 28th November. She was in a dangerous position, as the sea was rough, and she had lost her anchor and chain, and was driving fast to leeward towards another vessel. The luggers D. and R. conveyed an anchor and cable of considerable weight from Deal on board the brig. There were fourteen persons engaged in performing this service. The George, M. M. R. April 28, 1866, p. 529. V. 7,000*l.*—A. £150

1091. The Austrian ship G. was off the Lizard, in a leaky and dangerous state, with four feet of water in her hold, and the water gaining upon her. She was laden with railway iron. The crew of the pilot-cutter A. came up to her, and afterwards went back for further assistance, and returned to the G. and aided in pumping and baling, and subsequently took her to Falmouth. The Giovanna, S. G. Dec. 24, 1857. V. 12,000*l.*—A. £150

1092. The schooner G., making water, was drifting unmanageable, with crew exhausted, and a flag for assistance hoisted. There was a heavy gale from S.W. by S., and tremendous sea. The fishing smack R., with six hands, with difficulty put three men on board, and towed the G. to the River Orwell. One of the salvors was on board the schooner, and at her pump, from the 7th to the 13th October. The Goudie, S. G. March 2, 1859. V. 887*l.*—A. £150

1093. In September, the brig G. M., 216 tons register, from the coast of Africa for London with palm oil, grounded on the Ower Sands, outside Selsea Bill. The lifeboat F. took charge of the ship's papers, chronometers, timepieces, &c., helping the other salvors to cut away the foremast, carry out and get a hawser to a kedge anchor, and to tow the G. M. clear of the shoal. The Governor Maclean, M. M. R. Dec. 9, 1865, p. 1553. V. not stated.—A. £150

1094. The ship G., 800 tons, got on shore in the river Min, in China. The schooner M. succeeded in getting her off and running her into a safe anchorage. The Gravina, S. G. June 5, 1856. V. 37,692*l.*—A. £150

1095. In November, the schooner H. was boarded, during a heavy gale off Yarmouth, by three of the hands of the smack T., and her crew were taken off. Two hours were lost by the boat, both in going and returning. Next day the luggers P. and J. and W. found her derelict, and took her in tow, the P. towing nearest. After a considerable time, the J. and W. was cut adrift for fear of a collision, and the P., after twenty-four hours, brought the H. to St. Nicholas Gangway, whence a tug took her into harbour. The Haabet (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 13, 1878, p. 1589.

1096. In March, the brigantine H., from Marseilles to Yarmouth with oilcake, struck on the Cross Sand off Yarmouth. In answer to signals some beachmen in a yawl, accompanied by the tug V., went to her, crossing the Scroby and Cross Sands. An agreement was made for £450. After some six hours she came off with six feet of water in her hold, and was towed into harbour, being pumped all the way. The cargo being much damaged, the claim was reduced to £300. The Harriet (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. May 3, 1878, p. 558.

V. 988*l*.—A. £150

1097. In March, the steamer H. M., with coals for London from Cardiff, broke down about six miles from the Wolf Rock. The mate of the smack St. H. boarded her, and agreed, with the assistance of the smack P., to tow her into Falmouth for £150. She accordingly was taken in tow round the Lizard into smooth water, in the course of which towage the tow-ropes of the St. H. parted, and subsequently the H. M. broached to, girted the P., and the anchor stock of the steamer cut the rope of the P. A Falmouth pilot boarded her, and by his advice two tugs were engaged to take the H. M. into Falmouth, notwithstanding the protests of the two smacks. The wind was N.W. and off the land. The Henry Morton (City of London Co.), M. M. R. April 22, 1881, p. 495.

V. 10,800*l*.—A. £150

1098. The ship H. was at anchor under the lee of the Scroby, pitching heavily. She had been struck by a heavy sea, and had sustained considerable damage. The wind was N.N.E., with a very heavy sea. The Caistor lifeboat, and the fishing smack C., proceeded at considerable risk to her aid. The salvors set sail and slipped the anchor. The master of the smack took the helm, whilst the salvors pumped. A Yarmouth steam-tug was engaged, and the H. was taken to Lowestoft Harbour. The Hilda, S. G. May 19, 1858.

V. 3,580*l*.—A. £150

1099. The brig H., 252 tons, had experienced heavy weather; her crew were fatigued, and one of her men had been washed overboard. She signalled for assistance, and the lugger D. went to her in a heavy sea and found her hawser-pipe split, the gammoning of the bowsprit and her port chain plate carried away, her fore and maintopmasts damaged; she had only her foretopmast-staysail and mizen-staysail set. Two of the lugger's crew boarded the H. and loosed the maintopsail, while the H.'s crew loosed the forstopsail. The master of the H. sang out for the lugger's men to come down, and informed them that the mast was sprung, and that he feared the strain was too much for it. Two of the lugger's men then took the wheel from the master of the H., who was ill, and warped and steered her through the Downs for Ramsgate. The salvors alleged that it required all the care and skill of the lugger's two men to effect her entrance through the pier-heads safely; that the H., being a very long vessel, had they not succeeded in keeping her head straight for the harbour entrance, she would have been lost on the rocks to leeward, or by striking the east pier-head; that when she was safely got between the pier-heads she was hailed by the harbour or deputy harbour-master, ordered on to the West Bank, and told to let go an anchor; that the fore and maintopsails were ordered to be clewed up, but the hands on board were unable to do so; and the starboard anchor was let go, but that on account of a revenue cutter lying moored to the buoys on the top of the banks, the H. could not steer for the most shallow part of it, and was therefore steered close under the cutter's stern, hoping to take the ground on the West Bank as advised by the harbour-master; but the H.'s chain parted, and though her port anchor was instantly let go, it did not hold, and she drove over the bank and touched the cross wall inside the harbour, at the same time taking the ground, and there remained till next tide, when she was properly berthed. The owner denied that the H. was in any danger from her damaged state, or that the salvors incurred any risk. They alleged that the salvors were told to put the helm hard a-starboard, and run the barque on to the West Bank, which was a soft mud bank, that there was plenty of room to do so, and that she could not have driven and did not drive over it. That the barque's anchors should not have been let go, and that the salvors were not bidden to let them go; and that owing to the unseamanlike conduct of the salvors in letting go the anchors, and not putting the barque on the West Bank, the barque was considerably damaged and seriously endangered. The Hope, June 23, 1866, p. 784.

1102. The barque I., 263 tons, grounded on the Gunfleet Sand, but the crew, by lightening her deck cargo, succeeded in getting her into deep water. Six smacks put off to her assistance, and the crews, thirty-one in all, boarded her, at great risk of life, owing to the violence of the wind and the heavy sea, and conducted her to Ramsgate. The Iris, S. G. March 3, 1855. V. 3,541*l.*—A. £150

1103. The brig J., 215 tons, brought up in Yarmouth Roads, the wind blew from the E.N.E., and she commenced driving. The steam-tugs V. and E. went to her assistance, and after services of short duration, but of considerable difficulty and risk, succeeded in anchoring her in a place of safety. The Jane, S. G. Jan. 21, 1861. V. 800*l.*—A. £150

1104. The Dutch barque J., 620 tons, when twenty miles off the Needles, was very severely damaged by collision. She signalled the yawl-cutter S., then proceeding in ballast to Lisbon, and engaged her to tow her to Cowes. A pilot boat was afterwards engaged, and the two towed the barque into Cowes. The services lasted nine hours. Tender of £150 pronounced for without costs. The Jeanette, S. G. March 24, 1853. V. 1,734*l.*—A. £150

1105. In October, the timber-laden barque J., for Yarmouth, was taken in tow by a Scotch steamer from near Sizewell, through St. Nicholas Gat, into Yarmouth Roads, and there left. The tug R., which, in answer to a telegram to the harbour-master had gone out to the J. off Sizewell, accompanied her, and when the Scotch steamer left, the tug's services were engaged, as the J. had neither anchors nor chain, but only a small kedje with a broken stock. The wind was stiff, and there was a heavy sea. The tug took her to within half a mile of Gorleston Pier, but there being insufficient water there, she was towed to Lowestoft Harbour, which she reached in about nine hours. The Jenny (Lowestoft Co. 1106. A vessel having got on shore on the Gore Sand, in the Bristol Channel, a steam-tug proceeded to the spot, and the ship's jolly-boat having been put out with a rope, the tug was by such means connected with the ship, and in about a quarter of an hour drew her off. The vessel had lost her rudder, and had between four and five feet water in her hold. The Kara, Nov. 12, 1841, cited in 1 Park on Ins. 307. V. 3,000*l.*—A. £150

1107. In August, the brig K., 143 tons, from Newfoundland to London with oil and sealskins, was in danger near Shingles, having slipped both anchors at the mouth of the Thames. She was towed by a steamer to London. The Kingalock; S. G. Feb. 23, 1854. V. 6,200*l.*—A. £150

1108. The schooner L. having met with an accident, became very leaky, and her crew were exhausted by their exertions. In this situation she was boarded by nineteen hands from the yawl R., who took charge of her, and conducted her to Lowestoft. The Leo, S. G. May 27, 1854. V. 2,832*l.*—A. £150

1109. In October the steamer L. G. was discovered derelict between the north end of the Seacombe Stage and the river-wall in the Mersey, bumping heavily against the stage pontoons, after having been in collision. She was boarded by two men belonging to the Wallasey Ferries, who took her ultimately into Birkenhead Dock. The Lionel George, S. G. December 24, 1885, p. 823. V. not stated.—A. £150

1110. The Belgian galliot L., in consequence of missing stays, got on the Clypera Rocks, near Holyhead. The rocks being very dangerous, and a violent gale raging, her position was perilous. The steam-tug I. K. went to her and towed her into Holyhead Harbour. The Loochristy, S. G. Feb. 6, 1855.

1111. The brigantine M. ran upon the Arrow bank off the coast of Sussex. A galliot, with a crew of twenty-four men, after a proposal by the crew of the brigantine to abandon her, succeeded in towing her to a place of safety. The salvors incurred considerable risk. The Margaret, S. G. March 31, 1861. V. 448l.—A. £150

1112. The M. having sprung a leak when about fifty miles from Yarmouth, was rapidly making water, and the crew became too much fatigued to work at the pumps. A signal of distress was then hoisted, and two fishing smacks, containing sixteen men, put off to her assistance, conducted her to Yarmouth on the next day, and on the following morning into the harbour. The Mary, S. G. April 27, 1847.

V. 600l.—A. £150

1113. In December, the barque N. O. was in a dangerous position, about 140 miles from land and S.E. of the Dogger Bank, having lost her foremast in a gale. The smack E. C. towed her about seventy miles, when a screw steamer took charge of her, and she was got safely into Shields. The New Orleans (South Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. December 30, 1870, p. 1682.

V. not stated.—A £150

1114. The schooner N., 89 tons, from Caen to Liverpool laden with flour, was left by her master and crew at the mouth of the Amoor, off Plymouth, through apprehension of a collision between the N. and a vessel that was driving towards her, she having previously come into collision with other vessels. There was a tremendously heavy sea on, and the N. was lying with both anchors down. The master and crew of the N. endeavoured to clear her of the other vessels that were drifting, and succeeded in getting her clear of the rocks by means of a hawser. The Nive, M. M. R. May 12, 1866, p. 594.

V. 2,400l.—A. £150

1115. The steam-tug S., running down between the Mouse and Black Tail Sands, observed the Spanish brig N. lying at anchor. She went to her and tendered her services, which were refused, and the tug left her, but was shortly afterwards signalled to return, the brig having parted from her anchors. The steam-tug thereupon towed her to the St. Katharine's Docks. The No, S. G. Dec. 7, 1853.

V. 6,240l.—A. £150

1116. In November, the barque O., with timber, and waterlogged, went ashore twenty-four miles from King's Lynn on the South Sands. A tug was sent for, and stayed by her all night. Next morning she came off, and the tug accompanied her to King's Lynn. The Oscar (Lynn Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 21, 1876, p. 87.

V. 4,000l.—A. £150

1117. In November, the schooner P., eighty-six tons, six hands, from Glasgow to Buenos Ayres with coal, when off the Elwick Light was discovered flying signals of distress by the steamer V., 276 tons, from Swansea for Liverpool with tin ore and fourteen hands. The P. had lost her foremast with sails and gear attached, and was otherwise damaged, and almost unmanageable. The V. towed her to the Mumbles, whence she was taken by a tug to Swansea. The Parana, S. G. Feb. 6, 1885, p. 86.

V. 1,650l.—A. £150

1118. The sloop P., laden with copper, got on the Mussel Rocks, from which she drifted off and proceeded as far as Dunraven, when she hailed the steamer N. A., which was proceeding from Neath to Bristol. The sloop was in a very leaky state. The steamer took her in tow, lent her several men to work at the pumps, and ultimately got her to Bristol in safety. The Phanix, November 21, 1851.

V. 7,050l.—A. £150

1119. In October, the barque P., 347 tons, from Gêfle to Antwerp with coals and iron, was found by the pilot cutter G. about five miles from shore and seven miles east of the New Sand Floats, waterlogged, and abandoned by all but one of her crew. All but the master and two hands of the G., and two pilots of the Humber pilot-boat No. 4, were put on board the P., and navigated her to the Bull Lightship, where a tug was engaged, which towed her on to the mud near Grimsby. The Poussin, M. M. R. March 3, 1876, p. 277.

V. 2,800l.—A. £150

1120. The steam-tug P. F. W. was near the Prince's Channel when the fluke of an anchor pierced her bottom, her middle compartment was filled with water, and her fires were put out. Three luggers assisted her; one went to Down for a steamer, the other two remained for eighteen hours near the steamer, and assisted in keeping her head off the rocks. The steamer was ultimately beached without the salvors; the risk was slight. The Prince Frederick William, July 16, 1858.

Value 10,000*l.*—Award £150

1121. The brigantine R. and E., of 164 tons, encountered a heavy gale, and was struck by a heavy sea, causing her to ship much water, besides damage to her upper works. The crews of two fishing smacks assisted in pumping her, and after thirty-six hours brought her into Ramsgate Harbour. The Rebecca and Eliza, S. G. June 27, 1845.

V. 800*l.*—A. £150

1122. The R., on a voyage from Benin to Liverpool, lost several of her crew from scurvy. She hoisted a signal of distress. The A. bore down upon her, and two of her crew volunteered to go on board the R. and assist in working her home. The services lasted seventeen days. The Roe, March 14, 1856, and April 17, 1856; Swabey, 84.

V. 9,350*l.*—A. £150

1123. The master of the R., 78 tons, from Sierra Leone for London, died on the 17th September. On the same day the mate of the M. boarded the R. and conducted her to London. In the course of the voyage the vessel put into the Azores for provisions and some temporary repairs, and reached Cowes on the 13th or 14th November. The Rowena, S. G. March 15, 1848.

V. 1,100*l.*—A. £150

1124. In November, the Portuguese schooner S. J., in a stiff gale, drifted from her anchors in Torbay, and struck on the Queen's Quay Rocks. Three men manned a boat and with great difficulty, and the loss of two oars at starting, reached the vessel, got on board, and found that all but the master and mate had left her. They got out a hawser from her, put it in the boat, and took it to the pierhead, and so pulled her off, and got her safely into harbour. The San Jeronimo (Churston Ferrers Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 25, 1878, p. 117.

V. 3,000*l.*—A. £150

1125. The schooner S., while rounding the South Foreland, struck on the Long Nose Rock, and hoisted a signal for assistance. She was in great danger. The lugger N., with a crew of eight hands, went to her assistance, and succeeded in forcing her over the rock. The schooner was afterwards stranded, and it was necessary to discharge her cargo, at which the salvors assisted. The services in salving the vessel lasted eight or ten hours, but the salvors worked for six days at the cargo. The Sophia, July 25, 1849.

V. 1,500*l.*—A. £150

1126. In December, the smack S., which had been in collision, was in a sinking condition off the Dogger Bank, with her port bow partly stove in. She was discovered by the smack W., the master of which boarded her next morning, her crew having been taken on board the W. the night before. The master and two apprentices pumped her, and with an additional hand from the W. navigated her to Yarmouth, a distance of 150 miles, in two days. The Sovereign (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 5, 1875, p. 295.

V. 255*l.*—A. £150

1127. In December, the brigantine S., from Sunderland for Yarmouth with coals, was run into twenty-five miles E. of Hartlepool by a barque, and totally disabled; her masts and jibboom being carried away. Next morning she was found in this state by the tug S. B., which in from seven to eight hours towed her into the Tyne. The Susannah (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 27, 1872, p. 1651.

V. not stated.—A. £150

1128. In December, the brigantine V. was aground on the north part of the Cockle Sand, striking heavily and leaking. Nine men put off in a yawl, and got on board the V. Their services were engaged, and they succeeded in getting her off. They brought her up to the north of Yarmouth Jetty, and kept on working at the pumps. She was eventually taken to Lowestoft. Whilst going up Yarmouth Roads, the yawl astern of the V. was run into by another vessel and sunk. The Veritas (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 15, 1870, p. 86.

V. not stated.—A. £150

1129. The V., from London, was found twenty miles from Vera Cruz with an exhausted crew and damaged sails, and in want of water, by a pinnace, which took her into the harbour. The Victoria, S. G. Nov. 22, 1842.

V. 9,700*l.*—A. £150

1130. In October, the V. L., for Newfoundland, which was damaged by collision, and had lost two anchors and a chain, was assisted at some risk by a smack into Cowes. The Virgin Lass, S. G. Mar. 2, 1844. Value 1,818*l.*—Award £150

1131. In April, the steamer W., 333 tons register, from South Shields for Christiana, when off the Oxe lighthouse, bearing N. by E. twenty-five miles, and in a moderate breeze, broke her shaft, and, though her sails were immediately all set, owing to the slight wind, she could not make headway, and was perfectly helpless. The schooner M., 130 tons, agreed to tow her, and did so for eight hours, when a tug towed her to Christiana. The Warkworth, M. M. R. Jan. 18, 1878, p. 77. V. 10,280*l.*—A. £150

1132. In January, the barque W., 1,006 tons, with empty petroleum barrels and iron ore, was lying between the river Yealm and the Mewstone rock, labouring heavily, with both anchors out and signalling. The Plymouth lifeboat pulled to her from the government tug S., which had towed the lifeboat out to sea. The crew got a tow-rop from the W. to the tug, and she was towed into the Yealm, the lifeboat accompanying her, and remaining by her till the 30th, when she was brought into the Sound and moored in Jennycliffe. Next morning she broke away, and drifted to the outside pier of the Great Western Docks, where she bumped heavily, and was in serious danger of staving in her bows, slipping off the ledge on which she rested, and sinking in deep water. The steam-tug A. L. carried a hawser from the W. to a steam collier, but the two could not do more than keep her head off the pier. The Plymouth lifeboat then put a line from the W. on board the steamer R., and, with the aid of the tugs S. and A. L., the barque was taken into the Sound. £50 to the Plymouth lifeboat, £65 to the Yealm lifeboat, £35 to the tug A. L. The Wellington, S. G. May 8, 1885, p. 295. V. 1,400*l.*—A. £150

1133. The ship W., 1,400 tons, was off the Lizard, in imminent danger, having lost her rudder. The pilot cutter, W., put a pilot on board, who conducted her to Falmouth. The Weymouth, S. G. April 12, 1859. V. 20,000*l.*—A. £150

1133a. In January, the barque J. F. was in the middle of the Green Grounds, off the Mumbles, with her head to the W.S.W. The sea was washing clean over her, and the wind was blowing hard from S.W. The tug D. G. took her in tow for three quarters of a mile when her engines stopped, owing to the fouling of her paddle-wheel by the rope of the tug P., which was attached to the J. F. without the knowledge of the master of the D. G. The D. G. was so damaged that the P. was obliged to tow her and the J. F. into the Prince of Wales' Dock. The Jane Fairlie, M. M. R. Feb. 22, 1884, p. 121. V. not stated.—A. £150

1134. In December, the brigantine E. was found by the smack E. derelict, with four feet of water in her hold, in the fishing-grounds off Yarmouth. Her sails were set, the pumps got to work, and her course was made for Yarmouth, where, accompanied by the smack, she arrived the same day, and next morning, with the assistance of a tug, she was got into harbour. The Effort (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 12, 1875, p. 201. V. 429*l.*—A. £145

1135. In March, the E., in ballast after collision with a steamer, was so disabled that her crew had to take to the boats when off Whitby, and were drifted to Blythe. The E. was found by the T. thus abandoned. Some of the crew of the T. were put on board, and with the assistance of a tug brought her, with the T., into the Tees. The Ethel (Middlesboro' Pol. Co.), M. M. R. April 7, 1871, p. 433. V. not stated.—A. £144

1136. In January, the J. and S. was clean swept in a very heavy gale off Grimsby. A Dutch fishing vessel took off her crew, and the smacks C. and Cyclone with the smack W., after eight days, got the derelict into harbour. The Joseph and Sarah, M. M. R. February 29, 1884, p. 135. V. 285*l.*—A. £142

1137. In October, a flag of distress was observed by those on board the smack M. M. flying from the Dutch galliot A., during a gale from the S.S.W. The A. was then about three miles outside the Shipwash. They boarded the A., whose crew were pumping and made signs that they were sinking, and asked to be taken to Lowestoft. They sounded the pumps and found 2½ feet of water. The master of the smack took the wheel to Yarmouth Roads, and next day towed her into Yarmouth. The Alida (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. December 9, 1870, p. 1587. V. 650*l.*—A. £140

1138. The sloop B. I., in consequence of a violent gale, got on the edge of the Cockle Sand. Seventeen beachmen of Caistor proceeded in a lifeboat to her aid, and after considerable exertion boarded her and conducted her to Yarmouth Roads. The services occupied from six to seven hours. The Bottle Imp, S. G. April 25, 1855. Value 640*l.*—Award £140

1139. In December, a caisson 64 ft. long and 20 ft. wide, used to close the entrance of one of the Government dry docks at Southampton, was discovered by the tug B., in Gravesend Reach, being taken by the strong ebb tide very fast in the direction of the Kent shore of the Lower Hope. After great manœuvring, the caisson was taken into the Lower Hope and ultimately to Sheerness. The Owners of a Caisson, M. M. R. May 12, 1876, p. 589. V. 7,000*l.*—A. £140

1140. In December, the brig C., 270 tons, from Berbice for London with sugar, rum, cotton-seed, &c., was found by the pilot-cutter A. in distress, fourteen miles S.S.W. of Plymouth, having lost her mainmast by the board and her jibboom, the foretopmast also being sprung. The pilot of the cutter agreed to tow the brig to a port of safety for £140, and took her to Falmouth. The captain of the brig had died on the passage, and the mate, who held a master's certificate, signed an agreement for £140. The Contest (Truro Mag.), M. M. R. Feb. 10, 1871, p. 178. V. 10,000*l.*—A. £140

1141. The J., laden with cargo, having been in collision with another vessel, was run on the Blythe Sand, and was assisted by the coastguard, whose services were settled by arbitration. The barges R. G. and I. were engaged under an agreement for £20 to take part of her cargo on board, and accompany her to London, which they did. Their services lasted several days, and they claimed for services extraneous to the agreement. The Jupiter, Aug. 7, 1850. V. 618*l.*—A. £140

1142. In June, the brigantine L. R., which was aground and striking heavily on the Horse Shoal, was with much difficulty boarded by a pilot from the tug R. H. The wind was blowing a gale from S.W., and there was a very heavy sea. She had both anchors down, her foremast head was destroyed, the gear attached gone, and she was making water. The tug towed her to her anchors, which she slipped, and towards Portsmouth, but soon broke down. She was then run ashore N. of Eastney Fort, and her crew taken off. The Lord Rolle (Portsmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. July 13, 1877, p. 883. V. 432*l.*—A. £140

1143. The brigantine S., from Castle Hall for Newcastle, with paving stones, was sighted in dangerous proximity to the Barber Sand, in a heavy sea and rough weather, with snow. She had lost two anchors and cables, and had only one small anchor left, and she was leaking. Some Caistor beachmen, who went out in their lifeboat, took charge of her and navigated her safely through the Roads and into Yarmouth Harbour. The Sealark (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 16, 1877, p. 341. V. 600*l.*—A. £140

1144. The S., coal laden, meeting with a severe gale, sustained considerable damage, by which she became leaky, and the master endeavoured to make Blakeney Harbour. The crews of four smacks put off to her aid, and after throwing overboard fifty tons of coals, the S. was brought into a place of safety, and by means of a steam-tug, hired by the salvors, was ultimately conducted into the harbour. The Star, S. G. June 23, 1846. V. 686*l.*—A. £140

1145. The barque Y., leaky, was about forty miles from Flamborough Head, the wind blowing a strong gale. Two fishing smacks towed her to Scarborough. The Yorkshire, S. G. June 5, 1856. V. 1,200*l.*—A. £140

1146. The sloop G. D., 59 tons, laden with iron, on a voyage from Sunderland to London, met with a severe gale, and was dismasted. She rigged a jury mast, and ran before the wind until she arrived off Drimlington, where the smack F. took her in tow, and proceeded towards the Humber through a heavy sea. From the continued severity of the weather, the salvors were compelled to bring the sloop up. The next morning the smack procured the aid of a steamer, and with her assistance conducted the sloop to Hull. The salvors had paid the steamer £20 for towage, and had incurred a loss of £18 from damage to their own tow-rope. The Grace Darling, S. G. May 5, 1852. V. 850*l.*—A. £138

1147. In October, the M., from Cronstadt to London, with timber, ran aground on the Middle Barrow Sand at about high water, and though her engines were reversed and her forward ballast-tank pumped out, she remained fast, and as the tide fell took a strong list to starboard. The steam-tugs W. and T. came up and offered their services, and measures were taken to get the M. off. When the tide rose the tugs made fast to the M.'s stern, and commenced towing at half-speed, which, as the tide made, was increased to full speed, and about one hour and a half afterwards, the M. came gradually off the sand into deep water. The Milo, M. M. R. 1886, p. 102.

1148. In January, the brig Q., from Dublin to Rye, with oilcake, oats, and rags, got on the Great North Wall, Kingstown, damaged her keel, lost her rudder, and had several bilge planks nearly chafed through. Two steamers and a boat with five hands got her off. £60 to each steamer, £15 to the boat. The Queen, S. G. Feb. 13, 1854.

V. 1,700*l.*—A. £135

1149. The Q. M., in ballast, got upon the Barrow Sand, and lost her masts and rudder; the smack B. took off the master and crew, and landed them at Sheerness. The yawl U. and the smack R. found the Q. M., derelict, in the South Channel, and towed her to the Little Nore, and subsequently into a basin near Sheerness. A revenue cutter lent an anchor and chain for a few hours to the Q. M. when at the Nore. The Queen Mab, 3 Hagg. 212.

V. 250*l.*—A. £135

1150. In March, the brig P. C. while riding in the Gorleston Roads opposite the Monument, broke her chain and drifted to within half a mile of the shore, three cables within, and to the west of, the wreck buoy. In answer to signals, some Gorleston beachmen in a tug went out through a heavy sea on the bar, boarded her, and found her brought up with her only anchor and in danger, if that parted, of going ashore in ten minutes. In seven hours they moored her safely in Lowestoft Harbour. The Prince Consort (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. April 2, 1875, p. 424.

V. 2,697*l.*—A. £135

1151. In January, the schooner S., with coals, struck on the Doom Bar at the entrance to Padstow Harbour. Her captain and crew took to the boat, and were picked up by the pilot boat. At the request of the captain the salvors, pilots, went to the wreck, and after three unsuccessful attempts boarded her. They removed the sails and running rigging, and by cutting open the decks got out the captain's watch and clothes. The captain advertised her for sale. After this the salvors got four pumps to work, put twenty men on board, and with a tug's aid got her off the bar and towed her to the North Black Padstow. The Satyr (Bodmin Co. Co.), M. M. R. 1878, March 1, p. 276.

V. 400*l.*—A. £133

1152. The barque A. ran upon the Gunfleet Sand. Eight smacks, by laying out an anchor and lightening her, got her off. The service lasted twelve hours. The Adeline, S. G. Nov. 11, 1853.

V. 1,421*l.*—A. £130

1153. The schooner A. got on the Hasborough Sand, but her crew succeeded in getting her off. She was, however, waterlogged, and in considerable danger; she had lost one of her boats, and was about to be abandoned by her crew. The yawl D., with a crew of nineteen hands, with great difficulty, came to her assistance, and with the help of a tug employed by the yawl, succeeded in getting the schooner into Yarmouth Roads. The Alfred, S. G. May 15, 1860.

V. 1,700*l.*—A. £130

1154. In December, the steamer B. got adrift from her moorings, and drifted in the direction of H.M.S. D., anchored off Rock Ferry, from collision with which she was saved by the tug R. T., which made fast a rope and held her. The Birkenhead (Liverpool Passage Court), M. M. R. B., Jan. 13, 1882, p. 46.

V. not stated.—A. £130

1155. The schooner B. J., 134 tons, while in the Downs at anchor, the wind being fresh, and there being a short chopping sea, parted from her anchor, and was thereby placed in a position of danger. The pilot in charge made all sail for Dover Roads, when the lugger F. came to her assistance, and procured for her two anchors and a cable from Dover. The Blue Jacket, S. G. Nov. 24, 1863.

V. 1,765*l.*—A. £130

1156. In December, the barque B. struck on the Cross Sand, off Gorleston, but was got off. She was boarded when in close proximity to the Sand, by two of a crew of Gorleston beachmen, who were towed out in their yawl by the tug E., and who took her into the roadstead. The Bygdo (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 7, 1876, p. 21. Value 2,200*l.*—Award £130

1157. In December, the schooner C., making for the Tyne for refuge in stormy weather, was struck by a heavy sea, which carried away her steering gear; and she drifted first to the north, and afterwards to the south pier, at Shields. She was drifting on to the old screw steamer E., but her anchor was let go, and that brought her up. When so brought up, however, she was still in danger of swinging on to the E. and being dashed to pieces, or of going ashore. A tow-line was got on board her just in time to prevent this, from the tug F., which brought her out of her dangerous position, and she was ultimately taken into harbour. The Cecilia (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 10, 1873, p. 53. V. not stated.—A. £130

1158. The G., 214 tons, was anchored between Margate and Whitstable. She parted from one anchor and then let go her best bower anchor. The smack P., manned by six hands, fetched an anchor and cable, weighing three tons, from Whitstable. During the smack's absence the barque rode through a terrific gale, and was in great danger. The salvors incurred considerable peril in fetching the anchor and cable. The Gambia, May 18, 1849. V. 2,823*l.*—A. £130

1159. In November, the brig M., from Valparaiso to London, slipped her anchor and cable in the Downs. Several Deal boatmen in a large boat took off to her an anchor and cable in a very heavy gale. The boat was damaged. The Moyne, S. G. March 5, 1841. V. 45,000*l.*—A. £130

1160. The brig O., 239 tons, got on the Shipwash Sand. The weather and sea were rough, and the brig in great peril. Two smacks got her off the sand, and stayed by her till the 27th of January, when she arrived at Harwich. The smacks were of the joint burthen of sixty-seven tons, and were manned by ten or eleven hands. The Ohio, May 16, 1850. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £130

1161. In December, the Swedish barque P., 315 tons register, stranded on the Longsear. The crew landed at Hartlepool; the lifeboat agreed to put off to save as much property as possible. After several attempts, and at personal risk to the salvors, she was got off and taken into Hartlepool. The Patriot (Hartlepool Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 1, 1875, p. 22. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £130

1162. In December, the P. of W., from St. John's to London with timber, slipped her anchor and cable and drove through the Gulf Stream. A lugger, with eight hands, brought a heavy anchor and chain to her from Margate during a gale. The Prince of Wales, S. G. Feb. 8, 1848. V. 5,180*l.*—A. £130

1163. In January, the brig R. and W. was at anchor, off Dungeness, in rough weather, when the lugger L., with seven hands, came up and stayed by her during the night. Next day she took a message for an anchor and chain, returned, and assisted her till the arrival of a tug. The Richard and William (Cinque Ports Comm.), M. M. R. May 15, 1874, p. 624. V. 5,685*l.*—A. £130

1164. In December, the Whitby brig S., with seven hands, all canvas gone, was found by the smack S. from Grimsby, about twelve or fifteen miles off Dillington. Her crew were exhausted, and there was a strong wind blowing. The smack was asked to stay by the S. to save the crew. Through advice given by the smack's master, the brig was got before the wind to Mablethorpe, where she was boarded by the smack, and then taken in tow to the mouth of the Humber, whence a tug took her into Hull for £15. The salvors lost a fishing voyage valued at £100, and sustained damage to the amount of £10 to their trawl. The Sarah, M. M. R. Jan. 4, 1884, p. 9. V. 360*l.*—A. £130

1165. In December, the Yarmouth smack S., being disabled by loss of main and mizenmasts, was taken in tow by the C. M. N. On the 17th, the C. M. N. drove on to the Binks and stuck there, the S. also dragging on. The wind was blowing hard and the sea running high. Next morning the S. was found by the steam-tug M., 50 tons, value £3,000, on the look-out for an abandoned smack. She was aground, and the tug, which drew nine feet of water, was in danger of also striking the ground. The M. took the S. to Grimsby, and on her return found that the C. M. N. had broken up and her crew perished. The Sincerity, M. M. R. Jan. 11, 1884, p. 26. V. 300*l.*—A. £130

1166. In February, the schooner V. got on the shoal to the S.E. of the South Pier, at the entrance to Sunderland Harbour. Fifteen pilots launched a lifeboat in a heavy sea, went to the vessel, took off the captain and crew, but were unable to get back to the shore with them till ten o'clock next morning. The pilots then returned to the schooner, which was lying broadside on to the sea, with her head E., and the sea washing over her as high as the crosstrees. The pilots boarded her. One returned to the boat and drifted with her to the shore to get a steam-tug, while the others got in the sails, which were all set or loose, and carried the anchors further E. to prevent her holing herself. Two tugs, the H. B. and the C., then came up, and when the tide rose towed her into harbour. The Vixen (Sunderland Co. Co.), M. M. R. April 2, 1870, p. 435. Value 900*l.*—Award £130

1167. A pilot smack, of 40 tons, with five men, boarded the ship I. in distress in the English Channel, and towed her into Cowes in two days. The Industry, 3 Hagg. 203. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £126

1168. The ship A. R., 1,175 tons, in tow of a steam-tug for the purpose of being docked, touched with her heel on the Pluckington Bank in the Mersey; the steam-tug T. in about twenty minutes towed her off the bank and into the river. The Anne Royden, S. G. November 17, 1863. V. 50,000*l.*—A. £125

1169. In December, the C. from Tees to London was for twenty minutes on Whitby Rocks, and came off leaky; her draught was too great to allow of her crossing Whitby Bar. Two boats assisted her back to the Tees. The Conservative, S. G. May 11, 1839. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £125

1170. The brig D., 218 tons, in the North Sea, having encountered a very severe storm, was in imminent danger, making water, and with her crew very much exhausted. The fishing smack S. R. was engaged by the master of the D. to tow her to Grimsby, and towed her accordingly some distance with difficulty and risk, but the wind changing to a more favourable point, the master of the D. cast off the tow-rope, and she proceeded on her voyage. The Diana, S. G. May 13, 1862; 7 L. T. N.S. 257. V. 1,781*l.*—A. £125

1171. The ketch E., with oilcake, was in distress twenty-three miles off Lowestoft. She was towed into the harbour by the pilot cutter A., which sustained damage while rendering the service. The Era (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. December 22, 1882, p. 1618. V. 1,028*l.*—A. £125

1172. The Norwegian barque F., 400 tons, laden with timber, struck on the South Scroby Sand, received considerable damage, and was compelled to throw overboard her deck cargo. She was in great danger, and four yawls, manned by forty-four hands in all, went to her aid, and by laying out anchors got her off the sand, and she was ultimately taken to London by a steamer. The Frederickhe, March 18, 1852. V. not stated.—A. £125

1173. Owing to the master's ignorance of the locality the H. P. got on the Girdler Sand, but was in no danger. She was removed in a few hours by her crew, with the assistance of twenty-five other men. The Henry of Philadelphia, 1 Hagg. 264. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £125

1174. In February, the schooner J. E. whilst riding in Yarmouth Roads, in rough weather, in order to clear a barque which had come into collision with her, and caused her much damage, was forced to ship her port anchor and forty fathoms of chain; she was brought up by her starboard anchor alone. The tug U. S. took her in tow to Yarmouth Harbour. The John Ellis (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. March 23, 1877, p. 375. V. 1,200*l.*—A. £125

1175. In December, the smack M. B. was on her starboard broadside on the east side of the Barber Sand. In answer to flare-ups, sixteen Caistor beachmen in a lifeboat went to her. The sea was breaking heavily on the sand, there was much rain, and it was very dark. Six of the beachmen boarded her, and she was placed in safety under an agreement for £125. The Martin Bayly (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 28, 1877, p. 1651. V. not stated.—A. £125

1176. In January, the steamer N. was discovered by the tug M., in the Wold, with a broken propeller and part of her mainshaft gone. She was floating stern foremost towards the N., and the tide was running down. The master of the N. let go his anchor within half a mile of the shore north of Palling. There was then a dead calm, but the danger of the N. was increased shortly after, when a gale from E.N.E. came on. The M. took her in tow till night, when she brought up in the Roads. Next day there was too heavy a gale to admit of her being taken over the bar; the day after another tug specially engaged came up and took her in. The Nuphar (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 9, 1877, p. 309. Value 12,500*l.*—Award £125

1177. The brig O., damaged by a collision, was in some danger. The smack W. and M. went to her assistance, and the crew, having boarded the brig, assisted in pumping her, and brought her into Yarmouth Roads, where, when the tide flowed, four men in the smack J. boarded her, assisted in pumping till the brig was over the bar, and finally brought her to a quay. £100 to the W. and M., £25 to the J. The Oscar, S. G. Jan. 21, 1848. V. 2,067*l.*—A. £125

1178. The brig S., having sprung a leak when off Lowestoft, hoisted a signal of distress. The yawl R. went out to her assistance, and brought her in safety to South-end, and subsequently, with the assistance of a steamer, to London. The Susan, S. G. July 9, 1853. V. 1,120*l.*—A. £125

1179. In December, during a terrific gale, the schooner S. in distress was taken in tow by the tug M., whose hawser parted, but was made fast again. The Lowestoft lifeboat came up, and some of her crew boarded the S. The hawser parted a second time. The S. hoisted an ensign with the union downwards, and the tug D. took her in tow to a place of safety. £100 to M., £25 to tug and lifeboat. The Swift, M. M. R. Jan. 25, 1884, p. 55. V. 345*l.*—A. £125

1180. In January, the steamer H., which had run on a rock in a dense fog, was taken off by means of a kedge, and navigated by some boatmen to the bar of Holy Island Harbour, where her cargo was removed. The Hibernia (Newcastle Co. Co.), M. M. R. June 23, 1876, p. 781. V. not stated.—A. £120

1181. The iron sloop A. C., 159 tons, coal laden, after beating about for three days in a heavy gale and snow storm, was off Flamborough Head. Her deck had been swept by the sea; her boats carried away or stove; she was much damaged, and in great danger. The smack E. towed her to Scarborough. The smack sustained injury to her hawser to the extent of £12, and paid £3 for pilotage. The Admiral Codrington, S. G. May 14, 1852. V. 765*l.*—A. £120

1182. In October, the A. R. bound to Whitstable with a cargo of coals, which had struck on the Red Sand at the mouth of the Thames, and had been abandoned by her master and crew, was found adrift by the smack C., eleven of whose crew of seventeen hands boarded her, while the rest went to Gravesend to fetch a tug. The weather was so bad that the master of the tug would not go out till next morning, when he went to the A. R. and towed her to the west bank at the entrance to the harbour of Whitstable, where she lay till she was safely brought into the harbour. The Alice Richardson, M. M. R. August 12, 1865, p. 1008. V. 1,200*l.*—A. £120

1183. In December, the brig A. touched on the Long Sand. The tide was half flood and the wind was light from N.N.W. By the assistance of some smacksmen she was got off in about an hour and a half. The Antias (Harwich Pol. Co.), M. M. R. December 21, 1877, p. 1622. V. 674*l.*—A. £120

1184. The brig B., in the Downs, came in contact with the brig M., and they remained entangled about an hour, in considerable danger. The lugger B. P. succeeded in extricating the ships, and subsequently conducted the B. to Ramsgate Harbour; the wind blowing heavily from the S.W., and a heavy sea on, with occasional squalls of rain. The Boxer, S. G. January 26, 1859. V. 4,095*l.*—A. £120

1185. The schooner C., 145 tons, on a voyage from Dublin to Newcastle, when off the Lizard Point, lost her fore and mainmasts, and was in some danger. There was a strong east wind, and a heavy sea. The J. went to her assistance, and after two or three ineffectual attempts, succeeded in taking her in tow and conducting her to Penzance. The services lasted ten hours. The Commodore, S. G. February 15, 1853. V. 880*l.*—A. £120

1186. In December, the schooner D. with railway iron was in the Wold off Winterton in distress, her cargo having shifted in heavy weather, and she was making water fast, and her three hands were exhausted with pumping. She was discovered thus by the fishing lugger A. Three men from the A. boarded her, and kept the pumps going while she was being taken into Yarmouth Roads, where a berth was secured for both vessels. Six of the crew of the A. were then put on board the D. and managed her during the night. Next morning the services of a tug were secured, and the D. was towed into harbour and moored. There was a great deal of water in her. The A. lost two nights fishing, value about £48. The Dayspring (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. December 24, 1880, p. 1648. Value 710*l.*—Award £120

1187. The schooner E. M. A. came into collision with the brig F., and was damaged. Her master and crew got on board the F., while the mate of the F. jumped on board the schooner. In this condition the schooner S. fell in with her, about twenty-five miles westward of Almeria, in Spain, put two men and a boy in her, and conveyed her first to Almeria, and afterwards to Gibraltar. The Elizabeth Mary Ann, S. G. Nov. 22, 1848. V. 1,500*l.*—A. £120

1188. The brig E. Y. got on the outer edge of Barber Sand, off Caistor, and hoisted a signal for assistance. The wind was blowing on the shore. The weather was bad, and it was a dangerous period of the year. The yawl Z., manned with eleven hands, went to her aid, and was afterwards joined by the yawl S. Anchors were laid out by the yawls, and the brig was ultimately got off the sand and into a place of safety. The Elizabeth Young, S. G. April 17, 1851. V. 1,100*l.*—A. £120

1189. In November, the billy-boy schooner E. was riding just above Corton, about 100 fathoms from the shore, on a flood tide, with the sea breaking completely over her, and the wind and weather very rough, with snow squalls. She was taken to Lowestoft by the Gorleston lifeboat, manned by seven hands. The Elk (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 14, 1876, p. 45. V. 1,140*l.*—A. £120

1190. In February, the schooner E. J., from Leith for Middlesborough, with iron rails, in making the Tees, struck on the North Gave on a bank of sand. The weather was bad. The captain and crew left her to seek assistance, and engaged fourteen men, by whom, after several days' work, all the cargo and stores were brought off. The ship was ultimately got off and taken to Middlesborough. The Ellen Jane (Stockton Co. Co.), M. M. R. May 9, 1873, p. 595. V. 2,060*l.*—A. £120

1191. In November, the trawling smack F. was espied by the M. sailing before the wind, which was from the S.W., near the Long Sand in Boston Deep. In spite of the efforts of those on board, she ran aground near Wainfleet. Thereupon the crew of the M. boarded her, found an anchor missing, discovered it some 200 yards from her, and recovered it. The next day they got her off, and a steam-tug came to fetch the F. to Grimsby, the M.'s captain accompanying. The crew would not give her up, but took her to the Receiver of Wreck at Grimsby. Expenses of the M. £2 18*s.* 4*d.* The Foam (Grimsby Mag.), M. M. R. March 14, 1868, p. 339. V. not stated.—A. £120

1192. In January, the G. was driven out to sea without a crew from the River Wear by ice, and was brought back by six pilots in a tug. £190 was paid to the tug. The Gamma, S. G. July 9, 1841. V. 1,650*l.*—A. £120

1193. In August, the Dutch schooner G., from Amsterdam to Trieste, with sugar, sustained much damage in a collision with a screw steamship off Dungeness, and was conducted to Ramsgate by the O. G., with the assistance of a tug, for which £40 was paid. The Grootzwyk, S. G. December 8, 1858. V. 6,600*l.*—A. £120

1194. The H. was got off the Maplin Sand by two smacks and two yawls containing fifteen men. The Harvey, S. G. December 1, 1848. V. 1,350*l.*—A. £120

1195. The Dutch galliot H., 138 tons, met with a severe gale by which her rudder was damaged and other injury sustained. She hoisted a signal for assistance, and four smacks took her in tow, and conducted her to Lowestoft. The services lasted three days. The Houthandel, S. G. May 4, 1853. V. 700*l.*—A. £120

1196. The I., 290 tons, damaged by a violent storm in the English Channel, signalled for assistance, and was boarded off Dunnose, in the Isle of Wight, by a pilot of the smack A. (40 tons and five men), and taken in tow by the A. After anchoring at St. Helen's and Spithead, the I. was taken into Cowes. The services lasted two days. The Industry, 3 Hagg, 203. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £120

1197. In December, the brig J. was on the North Sand, and the sea was breaking over her. During the night twenty-six beachmen of Gorleston made three attempts to get to her at great personal risk, but failed, owing to the wind and tide and the stormy weather generally. The fourth attempt was successful, and the crew of the J. were rescued out of the rigging. The Johns (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 14, 1873, p. 336. Value 950*l.*—Award £120

1198. The schooner L. F., 130 tons, was damaged by collision. The cutter Q. V. took her to Great Grimsby. The services lasted twenty-nine hours. The Linda Flor, S. G. April 25, 1857. V. 4,384*l.*—A. £120

1199. Some boatmen of Dover landed the master of the L. G. from that vessel off Dover. He obtained two anchors (one of 17 cwt. and one of 15 cwt.), and the boatmen put them on board the L. G. off Hythe. The Lord Goderich, 10 Monthly Law Mag. (Notes of Cases), 217. V. 2,500*l.*—A. £120

1200. The barque L., 400 tons, grounded during a thick fog on Corton Sand. Three steam-tugs got her off the sand, and towed her to Lowestoft Roads. The Luigi, S. G. Jan. 22, 1862; 7 L. T. N.S. 257. V. 2,350*l.*—A. £120

1201. The ship N. P. struck on the south part of Hasborough Sand; the weather was not very bad, but it was an exposed position, and a bad time of the year. The lugger S., after services of thirty-six hours' duration, but of no peril, got the ship off, and assisted in taking her to Yarmouth. The Nord Polen, S. G. May 3, 1860. V. 2,100*l.*—A. £120

1202. The schooner O. H., 115 tons, while at anchor in Yarmouth Roads, was run into, and began to drive, whereupon she made sail for the Cockle Gat, and lay to until daylight, when, having hoisted a signal, the fishing-smack B. came up; the salvors assisted the schooner by repairing the anchor, and steering her until they brought her up near the Cockle Sand. On the next day they hove up the anchor, and steered the schooner clear of the sand, and then engaged the steam-tug S., which towed the schooner into Yarmouth Harbour. The Otto Herman, S. G. May 3, 1864. V. 1,300*l.*—A. £120

1203. In October, the steam lighter P., carrying only a single mast and no sails, disabled by the loss of all the blades of her propeller, was found at anchor by the iron paddle-wheel steamer L., value £30,000, 317 tons register, 400 h.-p., from Barrow to Belfast, with mails, forty passengers, twenty-seven hands, off the point of Ayr, and by her taken in about ten hours to Belfast. There was much risk and considerable difficulty in the service, as the P. steered badly; one hawser was broken, value £25, and others chafed and rendered of little value. The P. was in great peril of drifting on shore if her chain had parted. The Pixie, M. M. R. Feb. 23, 1883, p. 242. V. 2,300*l.*—A. £120

1204. In February, the steamer P., riding in Yarmouth Roads, was obliged during a heavy gale to slip her anchors to avoid collision with another vessel, and being without anchors or chains ran for Lowestoft Harbour, and took the ground from ten to fifteen feet from the south pier at the entrance. A very heavy sea was running across the harbour at the time, and she was therefore in much danger. The salvors—thirty-seven beachmen—assisted in getting a warp to the north pier, and setting the jib and staysail, by means of which her head was canted. She was got into a place of safety, and the harbour tug R. took her in tow, the salvors assisting at the warps. The Premies (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 12, 1870, p. 338. V. not stated.—A. £120

1205. In July, the brig S. went ashore on some rocks beneath St. Gowan's Head, near Milford Haven. The steam-yacht R., lying in the Haven, set out to her assistance, and, after three hours, reached the S. There was a dense fog, and the crew of the R. were only guided by the sound of the surf in getting round St. Gowan's Head. They were told by the coastguard that the crew of the S. had gone ashore, and found on boarding her that this was so; that they had carried off sails, compasses, and their clothes, and that the ship had 5½ feet of water in her hold. They got her into a creek close by, stayed by under steam all night, and next day she was taken into the Haven. The Soppho (Liverpool Co. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 18, 1870, p. 1490. V. 950*l.*—A. £120

1206. The barque S. P., 699 tons, grounded on the Kimmeridge Ledge, off the coast of Dorsetshire. She was in a perilous position, and was bumping heavily. A pilot and three men put off to her assistance, and by laying out anchors she was got off, and after a service of twenty-seven hours, was safely conducted to Cowes. The Sarah Park, S. G. Feb. 3, 1855. Value 12,000*l.*—Award £120

1207. In April, the S., 188 tons register, from Middlesboro' for London with coals, was in collision on the north end of the Blyth Sand with a tug, and sank. The captain and crew abandoned her. The salvors went with divers and two cutters to the Blyth Sand, and found the S. sunk down four feet in the sand. On the two next days, they succeeded in patching the hole in her port bow made by the collision, and moved her further in shore. In four days more, with thirty men and seven pumps, they got the water out of her, raised her, and engaging a tug, got her to London, pumping all the way, and thus saved all her cargo. The Schiedam (City of London Co.), M. M. R. May 29, 1869, p. 690. V. 375*l.*—A. £120

1208. In October, the brig S. was in a dangerous position off Harwich, during bad weather, and exhibited a signal of distress. In answer thereto the dandy E. went to her aid, and succeeded in rescuing the S. from her peril, and taking her to Harwich. The boat of the E. was stove in whilst she was assisting the S. The Sherlock (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 15, 1870, p. 86. V. not stated.—A. £120

1209. The S., when in Woolwich Reach, in the River Thames, was run into and was in danger of sinking. The crew thereupon quitted her, when the steam-tug Surprise towed her in to the shore to prevent her from sinking in deep water. The Silence, S. G. March 16, 1855. V. 1,600*l.*—A. £120

1210. In August, the brig S. was disabled by collision with a barque. She was afterwards fallen in with by the smack A. W., which offered her services but they were declined, as one smack was not enough to tow the brig; but the smack B. also coming up, the two agreed to tow the S. to Yarmouth Harbour for £120. The winds being contrary, the S. could not be towed into Yarmouth, but by consent of her captain was, after three days and three nights' towing, brought off Ramsgate, and the next morning got into the harbour. The Synia (Ramsgate Co. Co.), M. M. R. Sept. 18, 1869, p. 1203. V. 350*l.*—A. £120

1211. The schooner T. F. in entering Sunderland Harbour, grounded on the rocks to the south of the entrance. Fifty-two men unloaded part of her cargo and hove her off. The Thomas Ferguson, S. G. Nov. 29, 1860. V. 800*l.*—A. £120

1212. In October, the Norwegian yacht U., 63 tons, laden with coal and iron, from the Tees to Norway, was drifting about at the mercy of the waves, having lost some sails. The weather was heavy and the wind blowing very hard. Her master and crew were taken on board the smack O. She was then boarded by the mate and four hands of the O., who trimmed the sails, steered her after the O., and stayed on board till the next morning, when the O. took her in tow, and after the rope had parted twice during the towage, which lasted two nights, one whole day, and part of another day, she was got into Grimsby. The O. lost a boat value £18 during the services. The Urda (Grimsby Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 29, 1880, p. 1391. V. 200*l.*—A. £120

1213. The Norwegian brig V., aground on the Knock John Sand, off Essex, in the month of November. Fourteen Colchester smacks went to her assistance. Four were hired by the master for the sum of £40 to carry out a kedge anchor and heave upon it, which they endeavoured to do, but it came home. All the salvors were then engaged, and the lugger O. with great difficulty got over the Sand, and dropped the brig's bower anchor; some of the salvors hove upon it, and after about an hour and a half the brig was got off the sand. There were seventy-one salvors, and the ship was in a dangerous locality, looking to the time of the year; but there was no risk of life to the salvors. The Valkyrien, S. G. May 7, 1858. V. 2,020*l.*—A. £120

1214. The galliot V. G. in running for the Humber, struck on the inner Binks Sand, in the vicinity of Spurn Point. Three smacks—fourteen salvors—pumped the galliot, and conducted her to Grimsby. The smacks were at the time they saw the galliot engaged in cod-fishing. One boat was stove, and rendered unseaworthy. The Vier Gebruder, S. G. April 21, 1859. V. 1,250*l.*—A. £120

1215. The schooner W., of 53 tons, lost both her masts in a gale, and was taken in tow by the K. P., which could not efficiently tow her. The smack P., 73 tons, nine hands, fell in with them seven miles from the Dudgeon Light, and assisted in towing the W. The smack's cargo of codfish was deteriorated in value to the amount of £57. The William, S. G. June 18, 1849. Value 1,186*l.*—Award £120

1216. The W. L. got into Bigbury Bay, where she was driven between the rocks, and greatly damaged, and the master dismantled her. The owners requested a pilot named Hyde to go to her assistance. He hired ten men at Plymouth, including some pilots, and, accompanied by the steamer Sir F. D., proceeded to the Bay, and brought the W. L. into Plymouth in a waterlogged condition. The services lasted two or three days. The ten men hired by Mr. Hyde were the present claimants, the others had been settled with. The William Lushington, S. G. Jan. 29, 1850.

1217. In March, the steamer R. for Barcelona with coals, on the Sand of the Cemetery, part of the Long Sand, was boarded by the pilot of the cutter S., and, by his directions and advice, she was got off, after forty tons of water had been pumped out of her after-tank, and eighteen inches out of the fore-tank, and after forty tons of cargo had been thrown overboard. The cutter was damaged to the amount of £18. The Ringdove (City of London Co.), M. M. R. July 9, 1875, p. 872.

V. 1,800*l.*—A. £118

1218. The master of the C. E., from London to Sunderland, when nearing the latter port during a heavy storm, found that there was not enough water at the entrance of the Wear, and made for the Tyne. Taking some light near Whitburn to be the Tynemouth Light, he ran his vessel aground. The captain and crew were rescued by the Whitburn lifeboat. The crew (engaged by the run) were discharged by the master. The master engaged the plaintiffs, thirteen men, and twelve of the discharged crew, as salvors, on the agreement that they should have one-third of the value of the stores saved. The Caroline Elizabeth (South Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 29, 1866, p. 1657.

V. not stated.—A. £117

1219. In October, the sloop G. was picked up, off Spurn, by the smack A., dismantled and perfectly helpless, in a heavy sea; and with the aid of the smack S. was got into a place of safety. The Gills (Grimsby Co. Co.), M. M. R. November 26, 1875, p. 1520.

V. not stated.—A. £115

1220. In February, the schooner M. L., with sulphur ore from Pomaron for Ipswich, got hard and fast ashore, between the breakwater and Languard Point, near Harwich. The owner of the smack A. and four hands pulled in the smack's boat through broken water to the schooner, and one of the hands got on board and stayed there. Next morning the smacksmen returned, and got on board the schooner. At the captain's request they laid out the anchor, and helped to lighten the ship by throwing out twenty tons of cargo. The wind increasing, the smacksmen advised the captain to engage a tug. This was done, and on the ebb the tug got her clear. One of the smacksmen, a Trinity pilot, then took her into Harwich. Had she remained another day she would have been wrecked. The wind was blowing strong from S.S.E. The Martha Lloyd (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. March 12, 1870, p. 338.

V. not stated.—A. £115

1221. The barque A., greatly damaged, was in the North Sea, about 70 miles from the Spurn, the wind blowing a heavy gale from the W.S.W., with a high sea running. The fishing smack R. D. lay close to her all night, and the next day took her in tow, and in seventy hours towed her into Grimsby Roads. The tow-rope broke once, and the two vessels came in collision, by which the smack was considerably injured. A quantity of fish on board the smack was spoiled. The Anthracite, June 8, 1849.

V. 800*l.*—A. £110

1222. The brig B., 298 tons, coal laden, struck on the north end of the Corton Sand. The yawl Y. R., with a crew of twenty hands, laid out anchors, and, assisted by a shift of wind and a rise of the tide, got her into deep water, and finally to Yarmouth Roads. The salvors stayed by the brig till 6 p.m. of the following evening. The Bernard, S. G. June 14, 1851.

V. 1,100*l.*—A. £110

1223. The sloop G. on the 4th November was off the coast of Norfolk, with a signal of distress flying. The smack H., 64 tons, manned by a crew of eight hands, with a cargo of codfish, saw the sloop about six miles off, drifting out to sea quite unmanageable, with the sea running completely over her. The smack came up, and with difficulty took her in tow, and, with the assistance of the J., another smack which came up shortly afterwards, conducted her, after twenty-four hours' labour, to Yarmouth. The H. sustained damage to the extent of £15, and several of the fish died from the concussion of the vessels. The Geldstone, March 7, 1851.

1224 The sloop J. and A. was off the Lincolnshire coast disabled, and in great danger, her crew being worn out with fatigue. The fishing smack S. L. took her in tow, and conducted her to the Hull Docks. The services lasted two days. The Joseph and Ann, S. G. March 27, 1854.

V. 690*l.*—£110

1225. In March, the schooner J. W. T., laden with salt, was aground on the Barnard Sand, and bumping heavily in a gale of wind. The tide was rising, and she was got off, without much difficulty, by forty men in the Kessingland lifeboat, but when she was got off much care was required to keep her clear of the sands. The J. W. T. (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. May 19, 1882, p. 622.

V. 785*l.*—A. £110

1226. In November, the Norwegian barque O. fouled the Corton Sand Buoy, and stuck. From this position, which the court did not deem to be one of danger, she was extricated by the tug U. S. and the yawl W., which endeavoured to take her into Yarmouth, but, finding that impossible, took her to Harwich. The Ogir, M. M. R. March 14, 1873, p. 335.

V. 1,820*l.*—A £110

1227. In July, the brigantine V., from Gothenburg for Neath, in Glamorganshire, with laths and deals, struck on the sand near the Leman and Owers Lightship, and remained fast. The pumps were manned, but there being found to be eleven feet of water in her, the captain and crew took to the boats and rowed to the Lightship. Next morning they perceived that the V. had floated off the sand, and they returned to her, boarded her, and brought her near to the Lightship, between two sands, a very dangerous place. The master of the P., seeing the danger of the V., and in answer to signals from the Lightship, bore up to her, left two men on board, and then, at the request of the master of the V., set sail for Yarmouth, and brought from thence a tug, by the aid of which the V., though waterlogged, was safely brought into Yarmouth. The Violet (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Aug. 23, 1872, p. 1073.

V. 600*l.*—A. £110

1228. The luggers W. E. and J. J., of Yarmouth, observed the schooner F. H., of Tonsberg, from Frederickstadt to Yarmouth with timber, lying broadside on the Hasborough Sands, her small boat had sunk alongside, and the crew were busy throwing deck cargo overboard. The luggers were at the time engaged on a mackerel voyage, the weather was fine, and the schooner had made hardly any water. The master and three hands from the J. J., and the master and four hands from the W. E., boarded the F. H., and having been engaged by the master, succeeded in getting her off the sands in a few hours' time, by heaving on a small kedge anchor which they laid out. They afterwards got into the roads, and engaged a steam-tug for £5 to tow her in. The Familien Haat (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. July 14, 1866, p. 883.

V. 605*l.*—A. £105

1229. In December, the brig B., after collision, was riding at anchor off Yarmouth, near the North Buoy, in four fathoms. In answer to a flare-up, twelve beachmen put off in a yawl and boarded the B. Her anchor was hove up, and the B. was got into a safe position in the roadstead; and on the following morning she was towed by a tug into Lowestoft. £80 to the beachmen, £25 to a tug. The Byewater (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 15, 1870, p. 86.

V. 800*l.*—A. £105

1230. In March, the barque G., from Hull for Venice with coals, in very squally weather, with snow, parted from both her anchors, while riding under the North Foreland. When a little below Corton Lightship, she was boarded by one of eighteen Gorleston boatmen, by whose advice her captain engaged the tug W., the other boatmen being in attendance on her in their yawl. One tug was not sufficient, so the M. was engaged, and the two tugs held her, till there was water enough to admit of her going into harbour, and then took her in. The Giovanni (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. April 7, 1876, p. 437.

V. 952*l.*—A. £105

1231. In May, the schooner V., from Liverpool to Newcastle with salt, got on the Cross Sand, in a fog, the wind being E.S.E., and the tide falling, with a sunken wreck just under her bows, and another a short distance astern. After about an hour and a-half's towing, the tug V. got her off, and worked her clear of the sands. She was ultimately towed into the roadstead and brought up. The Venus (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. June 4, 1875, p. 714. Value 800*l.*—Award £105

1232. In January, the barque Y., on her voyage to Cuba, through an error on the part of her master, ran into the Pightle, between the Scroby and Cross Sands. The yawl P., with twenty-four hands, in answer to signals, put off from Gorleston, and reached the Y. simultaneously with the tug R., which was manned by twenty men of the Storm Company. The Y. had brought up in five fathoms of water only, and by one anchor, the chain of the other having broken. The tug's tow-rope was got on board the barque, and the tug towed her to her anchor, which the beachmen were in consequence able to weigh. She was then towed through the Pightle and round the south side of the Scroby, into the roads. The services lasted between five or six hours. The Yanikale (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 9, 1872.

V. 1,820*l.*—A. £104

1233. The barque A., when in the North Sea, having suffered severely from the weather, hoisted a signal of distress. The smack B. went to her assistance, and after twenty-two hours' labour, brought her to the Humber. The Actif, S. G. Feb. 27, 1857, and May 4, 1857.

V. 3,000*l.*—A. £100

1234. The A. struck on the Black Tail Sand. Thirty smacks were employed to take out a portion of the cargo and carry it to the Commercial Docks, and twenty smacks, with their crews, were engaged to take the other portion to Colchester, which they did. The services lasted two days. The crews of the thirty smacks were paid, but the other salvors applied to the magistrates, who awarded a moiety of the nett proceeds of the property salvaged, which the Admiralty Court reduced on appeal to one-third. The Allandale, S. G. May 8, 1858.

V. 301*l.*—A. £100

1235. In October, during a very high flood-tide and a gale, the brig A. was observed drifting with the tide off New Brighton. The tug L. went to her assistance, and making fast a hawser towed her into Birkenhead. The hawser broke once during the towage. The Alexandra (Liverpool Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 23, 1870, p. 1652.

V. not stated.—A. £100

1236. In December, the barque A. was in a dangerous position near the Black Deep, between the Sunk and South Sand heads, heading E., with the tide rounding into the N.W., running very sharp. Her captain thought he was fifty miles N.N.W. of where he actually was. The master of the smack A., generally employed in salvage services, with great skill, difficulty, and danger got close to the A., boarded her, and, at the captain's request, took command. He sailed her down the Black Deep in a N.E. direction, and afterwards E.N.E. to clear the Sunk Sand, then ran her near the Cork Light to an anchorage, and from thence took her to Harwich. The services lasted fifteen hours. The night was very dark, and the sea very heavy. The Amalie (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 2, 1877, p. 149.

V. not stated.—A. £100

1237. In February, the barge A. S., off Dungeness in a heavy gale, and holding on by a single anchor only, was fallen in with by the lugger M., which put two men on board at great risk, owing to the heavy sea, and lay by her all night. Next morning, with the aid of a tug, the A. S. was got into harbour. The Amy Seymour (Faversham Co. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 25, 1881, p. 369.

V. 1,000*l.*—A. £100

1238. The steam-tug S. K., under an agreement to dock the ship A., was towing her down the River Mersey towards the Waterloo Dock, when the barque J. S. came into collision with the A., and, to avoid being damaged, the S. K. cast off the A. The A. and the J. S. then drifted with the tide up the river, and came into collision with the brig Anne. After getting clear of her, the J. S. was brought up by her anchor, and the A. continued to drift alone until she came into collision with the G. L., which was at anchor, and her anchor chain parting, she and the A. drifted together in the direction of the ship H. M. H. Before the A. came into collision with the H. M. H., and while in collision with the G. L., the S. K. came up and got her hawser on board the A., and together with another steam-tug, the L., which had previously rendered assistance, towed away the A. till she was brought up by her anchor and placed in safety. The S. K. then sent another steamer to assist in docking the A., and herself went to the assistance of the G. L., and towed her away from the H. M. H., with which she had come in contact. The court awarded £100 for the services rendered to the G. L., but dismissed the claim for salvage against the A. and H. M. H. The Annapolis, Golden Light, and H. M. Hayes, S. G. July 31, 1861.

1239. The schooner A., while lying at anchor off Bridlington Bay, in a heavy snow storm, with a gale from the N.E., was run into and considerably damaged, and the crew abandoned her. The crew of the coble S. F. slipped the chain, and in six hours conducted her into Bridlington Harbour. The Ant, S. G. July 31, 1850. V. 1,035*l.*—A. £100

1240. The brig A., 157 tons, coal laden, lost an anchor and part of her cable, and ran for Yarmouth Roads to supply her loss. The master went on shore and despatched a boat with an anchor and cable, but was unable to return to his brig by reason of a severe gale which sprung up from the S.S.E. The brig made water, and the crew were exhausted and their lives in some danger. The mate caused a tar bucket to be lighted as a signal for assistance. A number of men with considerable difficulty and danger launched a yawl, but were unable to proceed to the brig, and the steam-tug R. O. then went out, taking some of the yawl's men with her. The tug struck the ground twice, and both paddle-boxes were stove in, and with great risk to life two of the yawl's men were got on board the brig to assist in pumping. The tug towed the brig into Lowestoft. The Ardwell, S. G. May 19, 1852.

V. 500*l.*—A. £100

1241. In February, the A., a small vessel, laden with wheat, manned only by a master and two boys, was in great peril off Filey Bay, by reason of stress of weather, the season of the year, the locality, and the small crew. The J. W., observing the signal of distress flying, put off, and conducted the A. into Bridlington Harbour. The services were promptly performed, although they did not last long. The Ariel, May 28, 1850.

V. 539*l.*—A. £100

1242. In December, during a severe gale, the brig A., from Newcastle for Erith, with coals, was found one and a-half cable's length off the Inner Scroby Sand, by the crew of the steam-tug R., which also had fifteen beachmen and their boat, the W., on board. The A. had lost her anchor, and a good deal of her canvas, and was unmanageable. The W. was launched and manned by eight beachmen, who, at great personal risk, went to the A., boarded her, and agreed to take her into harbour for £150. The court set aside the agreement, as being obtained under pressure, and excessive. The Azalea (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 27, 1872. p. 1650.

V. 1,100*l.*—A. £100

1243. In February, the Italian barque B. C. dragged her anchors, got upon the Cardiff Sand, and was in great danger. The tug M. R., after one and a-half hour's towing, took her into a place of safety. The Bianca Cassanova, S. G. April 24, 1885, p. 263.

V. not stated.—A. £100

1244. The brig B., off the North Foreland, lost an anchor and chain cable. The lugger L. procured another anchor and chain, for which the salvors made themselves liable, and put them on board the brig, a heavy sea and terrific gale prevailing at the time. The Blanche, S. G. March 2, 1862.

V. 1,562*l.*—A. £100

1245. In November, the schooner B., which broke from her anchorage and drifted on to the Maplin Sands, was boarded, during a heavy gale, by four boatmen; and in about a couple of minutes was got out of danger. The Brilliant (Colchester Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 21, 1877, p. 1623.

V. not stated.—A. £100

1246. The brig C. was reaching into Hartlepool Bay during a gale, with a signal for assistance. The lifeboat M. A., manned by eighteen hands, went to and boarded her. A steam-tug came up with some men, but owing to the sea they were unable to board the C.; the lifeboat then went to the tug and took the men to the brig; they were engaged for nine hours in pumping her, and she was afterwards towed by the tug into the Tees. Tender of £100 pronounced for, and salvors condemned in costs to the amount of £20. The Carlisle, S. G. Oct. 26, 1855.

V. 1,200*l.*—A. £100

1247. In November, during a heavy gale and in a heavy sea, the schooner C. with a cargo of oats, came into close and dangerous proximity to the Corton Sands, and signalled for aid. The tug L. S. with several members of the Gorleston Storm Company went out, and at considerable risk succeeded in bringing the vessel in. The Catherina (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. December 22, 1882, p. 1618.

Value 800l.—Award £100

1248. The C. W., having met with stormy weather, was driven back from the North Foreland into the North Sea as far as Lowestoft, where, having sprung a leak, it was found necessary to get her into that port. A fishing lugger, the C., with a crew of eleven men, tendered their aid, which was accepted, and in boarding the C. W., the C. came into collision with her, and received such damage that she was not able to prosecute her occupation for the remainder of the season. The crew of the C. assisted in pumping the C. W., and ultimately brought her into Yarmouth Roads. The Charles Williams, S. G. April 24, 1846.

V. 4,970l.—A. £100

1249. In April, the schooner C. got on the Scroby Sand to the south of Scroby Elbow buoy. The tug M. proceeded to her assistance, and was engaged by the master. Thirty beachmen were taken on board to lighten her, and threw forty tons of her cargo (coals) overboard. She came off next tide, and was taken into harbour in about ten hours. The Cicerone (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. June 9, 1879, p. 725.

V. 836l.—A. £100

1250. In December, the schooner C. F., 89 tons, from Portmadoc to Middleborough with slates, came into collision off the N. Foreland with a brigantine during a strong gale, and sustained damage. The schooner let go her anchor, and was found by the tug F., 90 h.-p., riding bows under. The tug took her in tow, and the C. F. then slipped her anchors, and was held by the tug till next morning, when the weather moderating she was taken into Ramsgate Harbour. The Clara Felicia (Cinque Ports Comm.), M. M. R. March 16, 1877, p. 340.

V. 1,474l. 16s.—A. £100

1251. In February, the C., 191 tons register, with coals from Sunderland for Fécamp, during a gale, with rain, made a good deal of water; she had her foretopsail split to pieces, and rounded to under double-reefed maintopsail and foresail, with her head to the S.E., the wind veering to the westward. The smack T. came up, and the master of the C. agreed to give the master of the T. £150 to put the C. in safety. Subsequently the E. came up and assisted, and the brig was brought to anchor in Yarmouth Roads. The owners contended that the services of the E. were included in the £150; but the salvors denied this. The Coldstream, April 20, 1867, p. 498.

V. not stated.—A. £100 to the E.

1252. The brig C. O. grounded on the Newcombe Sand. Some beachmen of Lowestoft laid out the stream anchor and hove her off. The salvors worked at the pumps, and the ship was ultimately laid on the mud near the Graving Dock at Lowestoft. The ship was in some peril. The Come On, S. G. May 12, 1859.

V. 2,098l.—A. £100

1253. The schooner C. N. stranded at the mouth of the Humber, and was abandoned by her master and crew. On the rising of the tide she floated off, drifted up the river, and on to the mud near Killingholme Lights. She was there boarded by three men who took charge of her. Shortly afterwards Partington, a master mariner, boarded her. A tug came up, put a pilot on board, and towed the schooner off and up to Hull. All were settled with except Partington. The Conte Nesselrode, 1 Lush. 454; S. G. January 21, 1862.

V. 5,000l.—A. £100

1254. The barque C., 195 tons, anchored in the Gull Stream, the wind blowing strong from the N.E. Finding it unsafe to remain there, she attempted on the next day to weigh anchor, but could not, and sent to Ramsgate for a steamer. The G., a powerful steamer, went out and towed her to London. The Commodore, March 10, 1852.

V. 5,064l.—A. £100

1255. In December, the schooner C., 155 tons, from Rotterdam to London with potatoes, went ashore on the shingles about four miles from Yarmouth, striking heavily. The weather had been extremely rough, and was threatening, with wind and sea rising. The tug F. D., with a Yarmouth lifeboat in tow, came up, and made two attempts to tow the C., but broke the tow-rope in doing so, and then left her, returning with the lifeboat next day. Another attempt was made, but unsuccessfully, to get her off, but she was finally got off, after having been lightened of her cargo and pumped. The F. D. then towed her into Cowes Roads in 4½ hours. The Corymbus, M. M. R. May 17, 1878, p. 629. Value 1,190*l.*—Award £100

1256. In June, the schooner D. from Dartmouth to Cadiz, in ballast, while entering Cadiz Harbour, got on Cochinoy Rocks, and lay in very great danger, with her bows high and dry, and without her rudder. Two boats from H.M.S. T. got her off. The Dewdrop, S. G. Jan. 21, 1841. V. 600*l.*—A. £100

1257. The brig D. off Credew Head, on her voyage from Cardiff to Waterford with coals, lost some spars in a squall, and in answer to signals the steamer C. came up and took her in tow to Waterford, the tow-rope breaking once during the voyage. The Downes, S. G. Nov. 1, 1858. V. 500*l.*—A. £100

1258. The brig E. E., 120 tons, anchored by both anchors, parted from one of them, and was in great danger, owing to the proximity of the Scroby Sand. The yawl S. saw the signal of distress made by the brig, and ran down to her; and afterwards got an anchor and cable from Yarmouth, and assisted in conveying the brig to Yarmouth Roads. The Earl of Errol, S. G. June 27, 1845. V. 800*l.*—A. £100

1259. The E. G. grounded on the bar off the harbour of Cochin. The vessel P. and fourteen Lascars from the brig H. got her off by lightening her, and laying out an anchor. The Earl Grey, S. G. Dec. 5, 1853. V. 13,000*l.*—A. £100

1260. The ship E. went ashore, while entering the harbour at Cork, after collision with the S., and it became necessary to dismantle her and unship the cargo. The salvors conducted the dismantling, part of the time, as agents of the vessel. The Engelbert (Dublin Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 23, 1874, p. 115. V. not stated.—A. £100

1261. The E. was ashore on the Newcombe Sand, off the coast of Suffolk. Two smacks, with eighteen men in each, ran out the E.'s best bower anchor and chain, and at high water hove her off to her anchor. They then ran out her kedge with two warps, and hove her further off the ground, where she rode by her kedge while they recovered her anchors. The Endeavour, 6 Moore, P. C. C. 334; S. 1262. The schooner F., approaching Lynn, the weather being hazy, got into a wrong channel, and hoisted a signal of distress. Observing a pilot boat approaching, she substituted a signal for a pilot, but before the boat reached her she ran upon a sand. Five pilots came on board, and by their assistance for seven days the schooner was got off and carried into Lynn. The services were not attended with risk or labour. The Fox, S. G. July 9, 1845. V. 1,050*l.*—A. £100

1263. The brigantine G., 104 tons register, from London to Hull with a cargo of rape-seed, struck on the Hook of the Scroby Sand in thick weather, the wind blowing from S.W., and the tide ebb. She sent up flare lights, and the Yarmouth lifeboat went to her aid, and took off the captain and crew, which, it was held, they were not justified in doing, there being no danger to render it expedient to do so. Soon afterwards the Caistor lifeboat, having seen the flares, came up, and her crew boarded the G., and endeavoured to move her, refusing the help of the crew of a steam-tug P., which also arrived. The Yarmouth lifeboat ultimately returned, forcibly ousted the Caistor men, and engaged the P. to take the G. into Yarmouth Harbour, whither she was accordingly towed. Costs were not allowed to the Yarmouth boatmen and the steam-tug. The George, M. M. R. June 9, 1866, p. 721. V. 1,660*l.*—A. £100

1264. The schooner G., 185 tons, got upon the Corton Sand, and was in great danger. The wind was E.S.E. and the weather boisterous. Some beachmen lightened her, carried out an anchor, got her off, and with the assistance of a steamer conveyed her to Lowestoft. The salvors violently prevented a steamer from towing the schooner off, by which misconduct they lost a decree for £300. The court awarded the salvors only two-thirds of their costs. The Glory, S. G. May 15, 1850; 14 Jur. 676. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £100

1265. In December, the screw steamer H. P. S. was in collision at the entrance of the Tyne with the screw steamer W. T. T., and sunk her. The H. P. S., the tide being ebb, was in danger of drifting on to the sunken steamer. The steam-tug S. made fast to her, got her clear, and proceeded to tow her up the river. She would not steer, had a hole in her bow, and when abreast the New Quay, sheered off to the north, and was in danger of running down the tugs at Smith's Tiers, North Shields, but was pulled straight by the S. The H. P. S. had to be run ashore at the Limekiln shore, and to be pumped to prevent her sinking. The H. P. Stephenson (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 6, 1880, p. 179. Value 7,000*l.*—Award £100

1266. The sloop H., 67 tons, having sustained damage, anchored on the edge of Hasborough Sand. The wind was W. by N., and a heavy sea was running close to the sand, and made a clean breach over the sloop. The fishing smack C., with a crew of nine hands, going to the Dogger Bank for cod fishing, agreed to take the sloop into Yarmouth for £100. The salvors took the sloop to Yarmouth, where they discovered that the property was more valuable than had been represented, and repudiated the agreement. The court held the agreement valid, and pronounced for the tender of £100 with costs. The Henry, S. G. Jan. 31, 1851. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £100

1267. In June, the H., from Newport to Altona, with iron, got on the rocks near the Skomar Island, Milford Haven, and was abandoned by all her crew, except the mate and one seaman, and in considerable danger. Three men in open boats boarded her, and got her off without any personal risk. The Hero, S. G. Feb. 8, 1839. V. 3,000*l.*—A. £100

1268. In December, the barque I., 589 tons, from Goole for Jamaica, in ballast, was discovered by the tug U. S., 20 tons, riding at anchor by two anchors, near the Newarp Lightship, in tempestuous weather, and requiring assistance. The U. S. tried to hold the I. whilst her windlass was manned and her starboard anchor got in, but failing in this, owing to the weather, she signalled to the tug M., and the two tugs held her while her anchors were got up, and then towed her into Yarmouth Harbour. The Ida, M. M. R. March 3, 1876, p. 278. V. 1,375*l.*—A. £100. No costs after tender.

1269. The brig I. O., 307 tons, was in the Gulf of Finland. She was near some dangerous rocks; her anchors were foul, and she was in great danger. Her master applied to the barque E. for assistance. A boat was manned, and a kedge anchor with two hawsers sent to her, by heaving upon which the I. O. was removed from her perilous position, and ultimately brought into a place of safety. The I. O., July 10, 1849. V. 2,526*l.*—A. £100

1270. The barque J. came into collision with a French vessel. The lugger E. G. was employed in assisting the vessels to release themselves, and she then proceeded to Deal and procured a cable and anchor for the J. The Jane, S. G. May 26, 1847. V. 12,804*l.*—A. £100

1271. In November, the schooner J. L., from Liverpool for Londonderry with coals, lost her sails during the night in a heavy gale, and had to put back to Holyhead. Next morning, the sea being heavy, and the wind blowing strongly from N.N.W., she became unmanageable, having only one sail left. The Holyhead lifeboat was towed by the tug G. E. round the breakwater, and allowed to drift alongside the J. L., whose crew they found exhausted. Six men from the lifeboat were put on board, and the J. L. was towed into Holyhead and beached. The Jane Louisa (Bangor Ad. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 14, 1881, p. 42. V. 155*l.*—A. £100

1272. In April, the screw steamer L. D., with pig-iron, from Whitehaven, when backing out of Warrington Dock, was jammed, and stuck fast against the dock wall; she was in danger of grounding and breaking her back on the rocks at the entrance to the harbour. The tug M. rescued her. The Lady Downshire (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. July 21, 1876, p. 911. V. not stated.—A. £100

1273. In February, the L. dropped anchor outside Holyhead Harbour, but in consequence of the strong gale blowing at the time and the heavy sea, was dragging broadside on towards a large steamer which was riding at anchor, head to sea and wind in an exposed position about two cables' length broadside on to the breakwater, and was pitching heavily and ranging about. The tug U. K., seeing the L.'s danger, came up to her, when she was only 300 feet from the steamer, and dragging rapidly towards her. A hawser was made fast, and the L. was towed away just in time to prevent her fouling the steamer and being wrecked. The Lily (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. March 25, 1881, p. 369. V. not stated.—A. £100 most fallen across the tiller, which was thereby rendered useless, and making a good deal of water. Four hands from the smack P. boarded her, two of whom returned for a hatchet to clear the wreckage, but in trying to fetch the P. the boat in which they were was upset against the P., and one man nearly drowned. The boat with the other man in her drifted towards the smack, in which were the crew of the L. He was taken on board, and the crew of the L. then returned to her, and with the assistance of the two hands left in the P., who joined in the pumping, got her safely to Yarmouth. The Livonia, S. G. Oct. 24, 1884, p. 678.

1274. In September, the smack L., after a collision, in which she was injured in her quarter, was about twenty-one miles west of Yarmouth, derelict, with her mizen-

Value not stated.—Award £100

1275. The schooner M., 132 tons, lost her maintopmast and foremast in a squall, and when off Pakefield signalled for assistance. The smack V. towed her into Harwich. The Mary, S. G. Nov. 8, 1860. V. 720*l*.—A. £100

1276. In March, the screw steamer M., 496 tons, which had lost her propeller and boats, was, with some difficulty, taken in tow, about thirty-eight miles from Yarmouth, by the steamer W. S., 458 tons. The wind was strong from N.N.W. and the sea running heavily. Soon afterwards the two tow-ropes parted, and the W. S. lay by the M. till next morning, when the M. was taken to Hull by the tug L. C. The Maude, M. M. R. June 2, 1876, p. 683. V. 10,600*l*.—A. £100

1277. In March, the schooner M. was boarded, when about a mile and a half outside the Sands, and about three miles from the shore, by some Yarmouth boatmen, who went out in a tug and a yawl. She was found to be making much water and to have all her canvas torn and her mainmast broken. The salvors towed her into the Roads and moored her alongside the Fish Wharf at Gorleston, pumping her all the time. The Mayflower (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. May 5, 1876, p. 557.

V. not stated.—A. £100

1278. The steamer M. Q., at the mouth of the Mersey, broke one of her paddle-wheels, and hoisted a signal for assistance; the steam-tug A. towed her to the Clarence Dock, Liverpool. The Mona's Queen, S. G. March 23, 1854.

V. 12,500*l*.—A. £100

1279. In February, the schooner N., which had lost her master on her voyage from Norway to Venice, and had been knocking about for 110 days, was, with great difficulty and danger, boarded, thirty miles E. of Yarmouth, by the master of the smack H., and finally conducted in safety to Yarmouth Roads. The Neutral (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. March 3, 1876, p. 280. V. 2,400*l*.—A. £100

1280. The Swedish barque N. H., 210 tons, got on to the Hasborough Sand, the weather being thick and hazy. The lugger P. observed her with signals of distress flying, went to her assistance, and after two days' labour, conducted her to Yarmouth Roads. The Nicolai Heinrich, S. G. March 22, 1853. V. 4,000*l*.—A. £100

1281. The fishing lugger P. C. observed the schooner N. about twenty miles from Bridlington, damaged by a gale. The lugger went to her, and after some difficulty took her in tow and conducted her to the Humber, whence by means of a steam-tug hired by the salvors she was taken to Hull. The Nimrod, S. G. Jan. 25, 1854.

V. 1,305*l*.—A. £100

1282. The schooner O. W., 136 tons, ran on the Gunfleet Sand; the wind was blowing a gale, and the schooner was in great danger. Several smacks were employed to lighten her. The steam-tug J. and W., fourteen hands, offered her assistance, which was refused. Upon being afterwards signalled, they returned to the schooner, and with some degree of danger towed her off the sand. The Ocean Witch, S. G. Feb. 23, 1853. V. 3,000*l*.—A. £100

1283. The schooner O., ninety-six tons, was driven on the Trinity Sand, off Spurn Head, and was in great danger. She lighted a tar kettle. The smack P., laden with a cargo of fish for the Hull market, made for the O., and, on reaching her, found the sea breaking over her. Four of the P.'s crew with considerable difficulty boarded her, and after laying out anchors succeeded, when the tide rose, in getting her off. She was then conducted to Grimsby. The services lasted twenty-four hours. The Orient, April 27, 1852. V. 350*l*.—A. £100

1284. The steamship O., 129 tons, loaded with sugar, encountered tempestuous weather, her engine was disabled, and she shipped large quantities of water on deck. Sail was set, and she bore up for Yarmouth. She was in a dangerous position between the Newcombe and Holm Sands, when the fishing smack B. went off to her with a pilot, who was put on board, and the O. was got clear of the sands and into Yarmouth Roads. The pilot had accepted payment as for pilotage, and the owners contended that a pilot only was wanted. The Orion, S. G. Nov. 14, 1850.

1285. In August, the barque O., off Madagascar, with her master ill and the mate disgraced for incompetence, was navigated to Table Bay and thence to England, by the mate of the barque M. C. The Ottercaps (City of London Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 17, 1876, p. 342; Dec. 1, 1876, p. 1523.

V. 7,000*l.*—A. £100

1286. The P., 503 tons burthen, laden with rice, had lost her jibboom and bowsprit, and was at anchor between the Fork and Spike Lights, alongside and to leeward of the brig C., which was also alongside and to leeward of the R., the cables of the P. and C. being under the forefoot of the R. The harbour was crowded with vessels in that quarter; the night was dark, the wind blowing strong from S.E., and the tide ebbing in an opposite direction. The steam-tug W. W. went to the assistance of the P., and after breaking one hawser, succeeded in clearing her from the ruck of vessels in which she had been entangled for twelve hours, and then towed her to Wheeler's Dock. The service involved some skill. The Phoenix, 5 (Irish) Jur. N.S. 77, Ad. C.

V. 5,800*l.*—A. £100

1287. The P., 111 tons, on the 24th April, struck on the Gunfleet Sand. Two smacks, with ten men, removed thirty tons of cargo, hove on her anchor, and removed her from her position, and on the 26th carried her safely into Harwich. The Primrose, June 18, 1849.

V. 2,385*l.*—A. £100

1288. The brig P., 270 tons, in October, met with a gale of wind, and was damaged. The gale moderated, and the smack F. in a few hours towed her into the Humber. The brig only wanted assistance into the river. The smack's hawser was damaged. The Polly, S. G. Jan. 31, 1850.

V. 1,150*l.*—A. £100

1289. In April, the schooner Q. was in a disabled condition, close to a very dangerous sand near Rosspit Buoy, on a lee-shore, in a strong gale, with a heavy sea running. The sea was too rough for any anchors to hold. The tug C. took the Q. in tow, and brought her, under an agreement for £100, to Lynn. The Queen (Lynn Co. Co.), M. M. R. May 30, 1873, p. 691.

V. not stated.—A. £100

1290. In October, the steamship R., 717 tons, with sixteen hands and iron ore from Bilbao, ran ashore on a bank outside the bar at the mouth of the River Nervion, in a rough sea with a heavy swell breaking over the bank, and the ship bumped heavily and was being lifted by the sea further on the bank, her engines being powerless to get her off. The wind was moderate from S.W. The steam-tug S., 36 tons, towing a French steamer, saw the peril of the R., and went to her aid. She was eventually towed off by the S., which broke one hawser in rescuing her. The Redbrook, S. G. March 20, 1885, p. 182.

V. 17,848*l.*—A. £100

1291. In March, the R., from Newcastle to Southampton, dismasted and damaged seriously by collision in Yarmouth Roads, was abandoned by her crew. She was boarded by hands from H.M. cutter B., and brought into harbour. The Rosa, S. G. July 15, 1842.

V. not stated.—A. £100

1292. In March, the barque R. A., 333 tons register, from Sunderland to West Africa with coals, was drifting in the Downs in a N.E. gale, the sea breaking heavily on the Deal shore. In answer to flare-ups the lifeboat V. C. went out to her, and after much difficulty reached her. Five of the lifeboat's crew jumped on board, and with great difficulty got her round the S. Foreland, and her head down channel to get her to Plymouth. The wind and sea increasing, it was thought advisable to take her inside the Isle of Wight and make for Cowes. A pilot was obtained off Yarmouth, and she was got into Cowes. The services lasted forty-eight hours. The Royal Arch, M. M. R. May 17, 1878, p. 628.

V. 1,800*l.*—A. £100

1293. In February, the wind blowing a fresh breeze from between S.W. and S.S.W., the weather being thick, with rain, and the night very dark, the S. K. went on the rocks off the mainland, a mile to the S. of Kingsdown, and was rescued from her perilous position and taken to a safe anchorage by salvors in two galley punts. The Sarah King (Portsmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 16, 1877, p. 341.

Value 621*l.*—Award £100

1294. In October, the schooner S. lost her foremast, her mast was split, her crew were exhausted, and she was in danger of sinking. Four smacks came up with her, and, by their exertions, towed her 250 miles, at great personal risk. The Sarah, M. M. R. Nov. 19, 1875, p. 1487.

V. 1,348*l.*—A. £100

1295. The schooner S., much damaged and in great danger, with some of her crew frost-bitten, was seen by the smack C., 55 tons, five hands, a few miles from Flamborough Head, with a signal of distress hoisted. The smack, in thirty-one hours, conducted her to the Humber. The Shaver, S. G. April 24, 1850.

V. 660*l.*—A. £100

1296. The S. V., 492 tons, much damaged, was off Dartmouth, in rough weather. Two luggers, after services of short duration, and involving no danger, towed her into Dartmouth Harbour. The St. Vincent, S. G. June 15, 1860.

V. 3,500*l.*—A. £100

1297. In October, the S. F., 562 tons, from Berdianski, in Southern Russia, to Cork with wheat, lost her rudder, two topsails, her spanker, and some bulwarks in a violent gale, 150 miles from Cape Clear, and rigged a temporary rudder. Forty-five miles from Cork the schooner P. with seven hands came up, put one man on board, made fast to the stern of the S. F., and so acting as a rudder got her with great skill and hazard in thirteen hours to the man-of-war roads in Cork Harbour. The Stephano Fori, S. G. March 8, 1858.

V. 12,000*l.*—A. £100

1298. The brig S. was considerably damaged by collision when on the inner side of the North Scroby Sand, a notoriously dangerous place, and the weather was stormy. Eighteen boatmen of Caistor put off in the yawl S., and after thirty-six hours' severs labour conducted the brig to Yarmouth. The Stokesley, S. G. May 14, 1852.

V. 1,100*l.*—A. £100

1299. The screw steamer T., 995 tons, and 98 h.-p., was boarded when in a sinking condition by the master of the tug L. W., who conducted her into Dover Bay. The Thales, M. M. R. December 3, 1875, p. 1550.

V. 96,000*l.*—A. £100

1300. In December, as the steamer T. was leaving the Sandon Basin, in the Mersey, fully loaded for her voyage, a check rope got entangled in her propeller. The engines were stopped, and she was in danger of being driven by the ebb tide, and a gale then blowing, upon the north pierhead. The tug V. was engaged to tow the T., and with the assistance of another tug got her to an anchorage in the river. The Thebes, S. G. July 18, 1884, p. 456.

V. not stated.—A. £100

1301. The schooner T., 126 tons, laden with coals, took the ground on the Cork Sand in a dangerous position, the wind blowing in squalls from the N.W., with hazy weather. The crews of four smacks, twelve in number, laid out two anchors and cables, and lightened the schooner, by which means she was got off the sand, and conducted to Harwich. The Tino, S. G. Jan. 20, 1851.

V. 606*l.*—A. £100

1302. In March, the weather being bad, with a heavy sea, and the wind from N.N.E., with hail, the T., with iron and coke, was riding at anchor 100 yards off the shore in Yarmouth Roads, and was driving. She was boarded by some Yarmouth boatmen, who pumped her continuously for about an hour, and afterwards at intervals. The tug P. then came up, and the anchor having been hove up, the T. was taken across the bar. The Triad (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. May 5, 1876, p. 557.

V. 850*l.*—A. £100

1303. In February, the T., for Poole, in distress, with a broken rudder, and driving to the south off Flamborough Head, was taken in tow by a steamer and towed into Bridlington Bay. The Trinity, S. G. May 11, 1839.

V. 1,200*l.*—A. £100

1304. The iron screw steamer V., 59 tons, arrived off Newhaven, and in consequence of there not being sufficient water for her to enter the harbour, took the ground under the East Pier, but was in little or no danger. She was towed off by a steam-tug without danger or difficulty. The Viborg, 7 L. T. N.S. 257; S. G. July 17, 1862.

V. 2,500*l.*—A. £100

1305. The schooner V., 144 tons, grounded on the Long Sand in fine weather. Six smacks laid out an anchor, and hove the schooner off the sand. The Viking, S. G. Dec. 19, 1856. Value 2,400*l.*—Award £100

1306. In February, the brig V., in a gale off Orfordness, shifted her cargo. The tug C., under an agreement for £100, towed her into Yarmouth Roads. £600 was claimed. The Vivid (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 14, 1873, p. 210. V. 1,750*l.*—A. £100

1307. The W., 282 tons, got upon the Scroby Sand, a strong flood tide setting to the S.E., and the wind blowing from the S.W. The yawl L., 12 tons, carried out a kedge anchor, and attempted to heave upon it, but it being too light, it came home. They then signalled for further assistance, and the yawl J. came up. A heavier anchor had in the meantime been carried out, and all hands heaving upon it, the vessel came off the sand, and proceeded to Yarmouth. The services were of two and a-half hours' duration. The William, S. G. Jan. 13, 1847. V. 3,820*l.*—A. £100

1308. In November, the Z., from London for Boness and Leven, Scotland, got on the Scroby Sand during a gale, and her stern post started. The Gorleston lifeboat M. found her next morning at anchor, about three miles to the southward, with the sea breaking over her, and towed her to Gorleston, pumping her all the way. The Zephyr (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 13, 1878, p. 1589. V. 700*l.*—A. £100

1309. In December, during a gale from E. by N., the steamer V. grounded close to the North Pier, Sunderland, and was bumping heavily. The plaintiffs—pilots and watermen—proceeded at some risk to the end of the North Pier, and succeeded in getting a rope, on which a hawser was bent, attached to the V. They then took it round the head of the pier, and by this means gradually headed the V. into the harbour. She was then taken on the flood tide into a position of safety, and moored at Smith's Tiers. The services lasted eight hours. The Viking (Sunderland Co. Co.), M. M. R. March 25, 1880, p. 394. V. 30,500*l.*—A. £100

1310. In March, the brig A., from London to Hartlepool in ballast, while attempting to work northwards through the Cockle Gat, missed stays, fell to leeward, and struck on the Barber Sands, where she remained for some time beating heavily. She was boarded by the crew of the C. lifeboat, who took off her crew. She subsequently drove over the sand, and was taken charge of and navigated into the roadstead by some Scratsby boatmen. The Ark (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. April 12, 1872, p. 467. V. not stated.—A. £97

1311. In February, the smack Lady E., having lost two of her crew, was towed during a heavy gale a considerable distance towards the Humber by the smack R., but the R. was then obliged to leave her. She took away all the survivors of her crew. The smack X. found the Lady E. derelict, on her beam ends, with her pumps broken, her hold half full of water, and her masts carried away. The crew of the X. tore up the cabin floor and baled out the water, and after three days' towage got her to the Albert Dock. The X. lost a boat and a tow-rope in the service. £40 to the R., £57 to the X. The Lady Elizabeth (Hull Co. Co.), M. M. R. Aug. 2, 1878, p. 981. V. 110*l.*—A. £97

1312. In March, the brigantine C., from Dublin for Liverpool with wood, was off the Anglesea Coast, about twenty-five miles from Holyhead, in a rough sea, and with six feet of water in her hold. She was taken in tow by the steamer B., 277 tons, from Liverpool for Santander, and taken to Holyhead, and pumped in Holyhead for two days, and £23 were incurred in expenses. The Colorado (Bangor Ad. Co.), M. M. R. May 11, 1878, p. 630. V. 266*l.*—A. £95

1313. In October, the barque J. A., laden with wheat, was stranded on Bull's Bank, on the coast of Wexford, and abandoned by her crew. She was got off by some coastguardsmen, a pilot, and the crew of a fishing boat. The Jeune Adolphe, S. G. March 7, 1849. V. 860*l.*—A. £95

1314. In December, the brig M. J., from Sunderland for Whitstable with coal, encountered a heavy gale off Lowestoft. She was forced to run for shelter into Yarmouth Roads, and brought up there, with the Scroby Sand under her lee, and within a cable's length of her. She was riding very heavily, the sea was breaking over her, and she was getting into greater danger. A signal was hoisted, and in answer thereto fifteen of the "Storm" Company of Beachmen at Gorleston put off, and, at great risk, owing to the heavy sea on the bar, made their way to and boarded her. The salvors worked for eleven hours, during which time they got out sixty fathoms more cable, and let go a second anchor. They stayed by her for three or four hours in their own craft, then boarded her again, pumped out two and a-half feet of water from her hold, and got up the port anchor. The M. J. was finally towed into harbour by the tug A. W., which, however, for many hours refused to take her in tow, for fear of danger to herself from the proximity of the rocks. £85 to the beachmen, £10 to the A. W. The Marie Josephine (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 9, 1872, p. 179. Value 750l.—Award £95

1315. The smack F., 60 tons, while engaged on a fishing voyage, about seventy-five miles from the Spurn, the wind blowing a gale from the N., with a heavy sea, fell in with the galliot A. C. in great distress, rolling in the trough of the sea, and having lost both her masts. The smack left one man on board the galliot to assist in pumping and steering her, and took her in tow, finally conducting her to the vicinity of Grimsby Docks, where a steamer was engaged to take her into the docks. The Anna Charlotte, 7 L. T. N.S. 257; S. G. January 29, 1862.

V. 93l.—A. £93

1316. The schooner C. found the schooner S., laden with lumber, adrift off the coast of Florida, with nearly two feet of water on her decks. The crew and passengers of the C. removed the deck load of lumber, when the vessel lifted out of the water, and by baling and pumping they so far reduced the water as to discover two auger holes bored through her bottom under the captain's berth. They plugged these up, pumped the vessel out, and brought her into Philadelphia. The Stewart, 2 Crabbe, 219, cited in Marvin, 191. [American.]

V. 185l.—A. £92

1317. In January, the schooner A., with Indian corn from Newry to Bayonne, when two days out, met with severe weather in the Channel, could not get into Carlingford Lough, and therefore ran for Dublin, with a south wind. The wind changing to S.W. before she could make Dublin Harbour, she ran for shelter to Howth Head, between the eastern pier and Ireland's Eye. Some coastguardsmen, who put off to her in the lifeboat, were instructed to telegraph for a steam-tug, which was accordingly done, and the steam-tug M. went to the schooner, and took her in tow, but could not bring her further than the Bailey Lighthouse, where the tug left her anchored. In the morning the tug went again to the schooner, which was rolling heavily and had dragged her anchor, and towed her into Dublin Bay. The Avenir (Dublin Ad. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 5, 1868, p. 308.

V. 1,700l.—A. £90

1318. In October, in boisterous weather, the C., from Frederickstadt to London, was in a damaged state off the Suffolk coast, but not in immediate danger. A fishing lugger left the herring fishing, and went to her assistance. The lugger was damaged in the course of the service. The Chelone, S. G. Mar. 2, 1843.

V. 1,844l.—A. £90

1319. In January, the Dutch fishing-smack I. C., was riding at anchor, with her mainmast gone and in a helpless condition, about 200 miles N.E. by N. of the Spurn, the wind being strong from S.E. by S., and a heavy cross-sea running. She was found there by the trawl fishing-vessel D., coming back from fishing. The crew of the D. with great difficulty and some danger, boarded the I. C., made fast a 7½-inch hawser, and towed her in about forty-eight hours to the New Sand, where a Hull tug took her in tow, and docked her at Grimsby. The Inspecteur Caland, S. G. Feb. 6, 1885, p. 86.

V. 560l.—A. £90

1320. In December, the ship C. of B., while heaving up her anchor in the Mersey, preparatory to docking, was run into by the barque M., while the latter was in collision with the ship J. M. The three vessels were extricated by the tugs W. and H. The M. had then no anchor, and the H. took her into dock. The sea was smooth, the weather foggy, and there was no wind. The W. was under a contract to tow the C. of B., but the court held that more than towage services had been performed. £70 to the H. from the M., £20 to the W. from the C. of B. The City of Brooklyn, The Maggalanes, M. M. R. Jan. 27, 1871, p. 112.

V. not stated.—A. £90

1321. In October, the brig M., from Shields to Marseilles, in a leaky state off

Yarmouth, was assisted into port in nineteen hours by a smack with fifteen hands. The Mary, S. G. Feb. 24, 1884. Value 1,500l.—Award £90

1322. The master of the sloop M. and J., when off Harwich, met with an accident, and shortly afterwards died. The weather at this time was thick, the wind blowing a gale. A fishing smack, the M., was signalled, but the weather was too boisterous to permit the crew to board; shortly afterwards, the weather having moderated, the master of the smack and three men boarded the sloop, carrying their trysail, which they hoisted, and conducted her into Grimsby Harbour. The Mary and Jane, S. G. May 9, 1845. V. 830l.—A. £90

1323. The brig N. C., of 200 tons, when off the Suffolk coast, met with tempestuous weather, and lost her masts. The yawl S., with thirty-three men, put off, assisted in cutting away her rigging, and preparing the pumps, and accompanied her into Harwich. The New Concord, S. G. December 5, 1845. V. 600l.—A. £90

1324. In October, the lugger S. was about fifty miles E. of the Leman and Ower Sands with signals of distress flying. Her sails were blown away, the wind was strong, and the sea heavy. She was unmanageable, and would have drifted on to the Dutch coast. The master of the smack G. H. came up, got a tow-rope on board, and after three days and three nights towed her into Yarmouth Harbour. The Stranger (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 1, 1872, p. 1393. V. 500l.—A. £90

1325. In July, the smack S., when about five miles off the Dutch coast, during a fresh N.W. wind, and in a heavy sea, was in a distressed condition, with her topmast carried away and otherwise damaged. The smack R. bore down on her, and after three attempts got alongside and took her in tow. The next day, the weather moderating, the master of the S. came on board the R., and entered into an agreement with the master of the R., for the S. to be taken into Yarmouth Roads for £100. This was done in four days from the commencement of the services. The Sybil (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. July 14, 1866, p. 883. V. 400l.—A. £85

1327. In December, the smack H. and E. had lost her bowsprit, mizenmast, and all her canvas, and was towed from the Swarte Bank, about 50 miles from the Norfolk Coast, by the smack N. D. to Yarmouth in two days, the tow-rope breaking twice during the service. £45 for towage, £32 eight days' fishing, £8 for tow-rope. The Henry and Elizabeth (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 7, 1873, p. 179. V. not stated.—A. £85

1328. In September, the Norwegian schooner M. was about ten or twelve miles off Staithes, in a disabled condition. Four of the crew of the W. A., at the risk of their lives, boarded the vessel, and made an agreement to take her into a place of safety for £60. Subsequently a steam-tug was engaged to take her to Newcastle for £90, but owing to the weather she could only take her to Whitby. £60 to the W. A., £25 to the M. The Magnetta (Whitby Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 3, 1873, p. 1265. V. not stated.—A. £85

1329. While the barque V. was lying moored off Blackwall Yard a steamer ran into her, and she sustained considerable damage. A waterman and sixteen others boarded her, and got her on to the mud on the north shore, where she was temporarily repaired, and whence she was taken to dry dock. The Vestalinden (City of London Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 16, 1872, p. 210. V. not stated.—A. £85

1330. The galliot W., having stranded, and been thereby damaged, was boarded by the crews of the smacks R. and P. off Grimsby; and by their exertions the water was prevented from gaining on her, and she was got to Grimsby in about two and a-half hours. The Wigoline (Grimsby Mag.), M. M. R. March 11, 1865, p. 299. V. 1,000l.—A. £85

1331. A pilot and six men went during a storm, at the risk of their lives, out of Portsmouth Harbour to a vessel in distress, dismasted, without anchors, and bumping on the shore, and piloted her into Portsmouth Harbour. The services (after reaching the vessel) were not of great difficulty or long duration. The Nicholas, 3 Hagg. 369. V. 3,000l.—A. £84

1332. In November, the ship N. E., after collision with a steamer in the Mersey, whilst in tow of two tugs, broke away from them, and began to drift towards the Pluckington Banks. The tug F. C., however, made fast her hawser, and towed her off and into the harbour. The Northern Empire (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 12, 1877, p. 52. Value 8,400*l.*—Award £83

1333. In March, the A., from Yarmouth for Shields in ballast, having three days previously lost her masts and bowsprit in a severe storm, was taken in tow by the smack D., and towed into Grimsby Dock in nine days. The Ariel (Lynn Co. Co.), M. M. R. April 21, 1876, p. 492. V. 160*l.*—A. £80

1334. In October, the schooner C. lost her anchors and chains in Margate Roads, and was drifting through the Downs with a flare-up light burning. Two hands from the lugger G. boarded her, and the G. returned to Walmer, and took an anchor and chain out to the C., which had then drifted to Folkestone. There was a strong N.N.W. gale and a heavy sea at the time. The Campage (City of London Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 2, 1870, p. 1554. V. not stated.—A. £80

1335. In October, the C. from Tobago to London, under jurymasts off Ram Head, Plymouth, was towed by a cutter into Ramsgate Harbour in fair weather. The Charles, S. G. July 6, 1839. V. 8,000*l.*—A. £80

1336. The C. was in a dangerous situation off the Needles in a gale; she was rescued by a pilot, and conducted into Southampton. The Codrington, S. G. Dec. 17, 1845. V. 11,000*l.*—A. £80

1337. In November, the vessel D., from Ystad to Lowestoft, with oats, was off Lowestoft riding with one anchor. The wind was S.S.W., with a heavy sea running. The D. had three feet of water in her hold, and was making water fast. Some Lowestoft beachmen, who had attempted in vain to launch the lifeboat, finally launched the yawl S., and proceeded to her assistance. After pumping for an hour and a-half they hove up the anchor. She had then four inches of water in her. They had to keep pumping for six or seven hours before the tide admitted of her being taken into the harbour, whither they eventually took her. The Diana (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 11, 1878, p. 50. V. 1,150*l.*—A. £80

1339. In July, the screw steamer E., 2,249 tons register, from Liverpool for New York, was being conducted to an anchorage in the Mersey by the steam-tug P., and had steamed out of the Bramley Moore Dock, through the Wellington Half-tide Dock, into the Sandon Basin, with two check-ropes out. One check-rope parted, the other was broken by the P. running against it, and the E. drifted into the N.E. corner of the Sandon Basin, where she would have taken the ground on the mud had not a steam-tug been signalled for. The steam-tugs K. T. and R. A. arrived, and extricated her from her perilous position. £60 to the K. T., £20 to the R. A. The England, M. M. R. May 2, 1868, p. 563. V. 122,800*l.*—A. £80

1340. The screw steamer C., when passing Lundy Island, observed a signal of distress flying on board the vessel E., coal laden, from South Wales for France, and on offering her assistance was told she was sinking. The crew afterwards boarded the steamer, the mate of which, with some of the seamen, went off to the E., and found a hole in her, from which it was inferred that she had been scuttled. They succeeded in stopping it, and conducted her into port. The Etienne, S. G. August 23, 1854. V. 252*l.*—A. £80

1341. In March, the ketch F. was about fifteen miles from Fowey, dismasted, and without steerage way. The schooner W. towed her through a heavy sea to Fowey, where the W. was detained four days, and had in consequence to change her place of destination from Wales to Charleston. The Faith (Stonehouse Co. Co.), M. M. R. May 2, 1873, p. 563. V. 1,000*l.*—A. £80

1342. The schooner F. B., coal laden, was in a sinking state about thirty miles from Flamborough Head, with a signal of distress flying. The smacks K. and B. went to her aid and took her in tow on the 7th February, and on the 9th they brought her up in Grimsby Roads. The salvors sustained a loss of £39 in aiding the schooner. The Frederick and Betsey, S. G. July 2, 1851. Value 240*l.*—Award £80

1343. In leaving Dover Harbour the schooner G. M. struck against the North Pier and drove the fluke of her anchor through her port bow. She hoisted a signal of distress, and the steam-tug L. towed her back into the harbour, and ran her on the mud. The Gloria de Maria, S. G. Aug. 9, 1861. V. 5,300*l.*—A. £80

1344. In June, the keel G. I. was driven on to the lightship, near Whitton, during a strong S.E. wind, with a tide of from six to seven knots running. In spite of the exertions of a "purchaseman," named M., who boldly put out in a boat from the keel G., the master and crew of the G. I., who had taken to their boat, were lost. M. then, after some difficulty and with much skill, boarded the G. I., got her before the wind and beached her at Flaxfleet Ness, saving both keel and cargo. £55 to M., £25 to the G. The Good Intent (Hull Ad. Co.), M. M. R. Aug. 16, 1872, p. 1041. V. 1,000*l.*—A. £80

1345. The barque H., 557 tons, laden with timber, and in great distress, was descried by the smack O., whilst fishing in the North Sea. Part of the crew in their boat reached the barque, and boarded her at great risk to their lives. The master of the smack was sent for at the request of the master of the barque, and went on board and took charge of the barque, which he conducted to Orfordness. The smack was forty-four tons, with a crew of six hands. The services lasted about sixteen hours, but the smack was detained from her employment for two or three days. The Haabet, S. G. Mar. 20, 1852. V. 2,400*l.*—A. £80

1346. In February, the H. and G. was riding at anchor in Bridlington Bay; she was close to the end of Smithwick Sand, and in a most dangerous locality; several ships at anchor were driving, and about 200 vessels had taken shelter in the bay. The weather was tempestuous; she had lost four handspikes, and the anchor could not be raised without them. Her master had broken his collar-bone. An agreement was entered into between the master and the crew of the lugger A. to take the schooner into Bridlington Harbour for £80, to which place she was taken. The agreement was disputed, as having been made under duress. The Helen and George, S. G. May 19, 1858. V. 559*l.*—A. £80

1347. The schooner H., laden with iron, was off the Great Orme's Head, in the Irish Channel. She had been considerably damaged by collision. There were only two men on board, the captain having been drowned, and the rest of the crew having gone on board the other vessel. There were four feet of water in her hold, and she was in great danger from the nature of her cargo. There was a strong gale and the sea was high. The smack H. and B. took the schooner in tow, and a steamer was engaged, and the schooner taken to Liverpool. The Hermoder, Feb. 4, 1851. V. 4,314*l.*—A. £80

1348. In July, the French brig J. H., from Middlesboro' to a port in France, with pig-iron, got on the Scroby Sand. There was a smart breeze from the east, and much sea. Some Scratby boatmen boarded the J. H., and by getting out a kedge and a warp and manœuvring with the sails, got her off into deeper water to the S.W., and sailed her through the roads into the harbour, keeping two pumps going until they got there, and for some time afterwards. The Jeune Hortense (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Sept. 3, 1875, p. 1138. V. 650*l.*—A. £80

1349. The J. B., 700 tons, in attempting to enter the London Docks, became fast on a raised causeway. Two steam-tugs got her off. The John Bunyan, S. G. Jan. 8, 1856. V. 12,000*l.*—A. £80

1350. The K. O., having encountered a severe storm in the Bay of Biscay, sustained considerable damage, and unsuccessfully tried to make Lisbon, and then Falmouth, and finally, running before the wind, she arrived near Cowes, where she was met by a pilot cutter, of thirty tons, and taken in charge, and on the following day, with the aid of a government steamer, she was taken into that harbour. The King Oscar, S. G. June 23, 1848. V. 1,840*l.*—A. £80

1351. The ship L. W., 1,000 tons burthen, with passengers and a valuable cargo, was on the Owers Sands, near Selsea Bill, and exposed to great danger; twenty-eight feet of her false keel gone, and the captain ignorant of where he was; the crew throwing the cargo overboard; signal of distress flying; wind from the west; morning calm and bright. She was assisted off the sands and directed out of danger by a Trinity House pilot-boat, with her captain and six hands. The Laughing Water, S. G. Jan. 21, 1858. Value 18,500*l.*—Award £80

1352. In February, the M. from Trinidad to Bremen, slipped both her large anchors in Aldborough Bay. Fifteen smackmen brought off anchors and gave other aid for nine or ten hours in very tempestuous weather. The Marie, S. G. April 16, 1841. V. 9,500*l.*—A. £80

1354. In February, the M., 233 tons, from Sunderland to London, lost her rudder in Bridlington Bay, at the south end of Smithwick Sand; a cable with six hands, unshipped her own rudder and attached it to the lower rudder-iron of the M. The Mayor, S. G. June 19, 1850. V. 1,550*l.*—A. £80

1355. In April, the brigantine N. drifted ashore on the rocks, near the Lugo Bay. The wind was E. and there was a heavy swell. The boat of the St. Mawes Coast-guard, after being twice thrown on her beam ends by the heavy sea, reached the N., and some of the crew boarded her. They found her crew at the pumps, her deck covered with water, and the N. herself striking heavily and getting deeper in the water. The steam-tug W., to whom notice had been sent by the coastguardsmen, came up, and after breaking a hawser and nearly drifting on to the rocks, got the N. to a place of safety in about seventeen hours. The Nina (Falmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. May 4, 1877, p. 568. V. not stated.—A. £80

1357. In January, the brig O., 260 tons, from Gothenburg to London with cargo and passengers, got on the Leman Sand in the North Sea, and lost her rudder. A pilot and two boats assisted her into Harwich. The Oscar, S. G. May 2, 1837. V. 1,800*l.*—A. £80

1358. The brig P., from Sunderland for London, laden with coals, got on shore on the Leigh Middle Sand, at the mouth of the Thames. Twenty yawls, manned with sixty hands, entered into an agreement to lighten the ship and carry out the working anchor for £20, and if they failed to get her afloat, the agreement was to be destroyed. After throwing overboard seventy tons of coals, the master desired them to desist, and lay out the best bower anchor, upon which the agreement was burnt. After laying out another anchor, and further lightening the brig, she was got off and conducted to London, six of the salvors remaining on board until her arrival. The Peggy, S. G. Jan. 28, 1853. V. 650*l.*—A. £80

1359. A steam-tug towed a vessel in a disabled state from the Maplin Sand to the West India Docks. The Reward, 1 W. Rob. 174. V. 8,000*l.*—A. £80

1360. The R. K., 180 tons, in attempting to put into Yarmouth Roads, on account of the tempestuous state of the weather, came upon a shoal between the Newcombe and Barnard Sands, and was in some peril, the wind blowing strong, with a heavy sea. A smack of fifty-four tons got her off without damage. The Railway King, S. G. May 3, 1848. V. 1,600*l.*—A. £80

1361. The Salacia and the S. having been in collision, and the court having pronounced the S. solely to blame, a salvage suit was brought by the Salacia, which rendered aid to the S. to keep her from sinking, and finally assisted her to a place of safety. The Sappho, Swabey, 242; S. G. June 3, 1857. Value 1,407*l.*—Award £80

1362. In February, the barque S. A., from Swansea Dock, with coal, which had put back to Mumbles Roads because of the intoxicated state of her crew, took the ground. The tug D. G. came up and took her into a place of safety, and she was brought into port without serious damage. The Sarah Ann (Swansea Co. Co.), M. M. R. March 14, 1879, p. 341. V. not stated.—A. £80

1363. The S., whilst waiting for some of her crew outside the harbour of Shields, got upon a sand, from which she was towed off by two steam-tugs in a short time. The Shannon, S. G. Dec. 1, 1847. V. 1,600*l.*—A. £80

1364. The barque S. R. P., having on board a large quantity of silver bullion, was stranded during a violent storm on the rocks off Tynemouth, and was in a position of considerable peril, both to herself and her crew. Lieut. Miller of the coastguard service, and three of his men, proceeded to the spot, with Manby's apparatus, by means of which the crew and cargo were saved. They were assisted by a mariner named Armstrong, who boarded the barque in the cradle during the storm and accelerated the landing of the crew and cargo. The S. R. P., S. G. Dec. 8, 1854. V. 4,497*l.*—A. £80

1365. In October, in a gale, during heavy weather, the smack Sir J. A., of 78 tons, when entering Gorleston Harbour, was struck by a heavy sea, and driven foul of the south pier. Four men jumped for the pier, of whom one fell into the sea and was drowned. The tide carried the smack out to sea again, with only the master and one hand, who brought her up about two and a half miles from the pier opposite Hopton, where she was in danger of going ashore during the ebb tide. The Gorleston life-boat, after an ineffectual attempt to warp it out from the south pier, was with great difficulty and danger got out from the north pier and reached the smack, which was slipped from the anchor, and got into harbour after several hours' service. The Sir John Astley, S. G. Oct. 30, 1885, p. 697. V. 700*l.*—A. £80

1366. The S., when drifting and in considerable danger of collision during a storm in the Bay of Valparaiso, was assisted by a boat from H.M.S. P., which brought an anchor and cable to her. The Southampton, S. G. July 5, 1842. V. 2,000*l.*—A. £80

1367. In June, the schooner T. was just south of the Newarp Lightship, her head-gear all adrift, only one man on board, and in danger of going on to the Cross Sand. Fifteen Winterton beachmen took her through the Hasborough and Cockle Gats and into the roads, where next day a tug was engaged, which took her into Yarmouth Harbour. The Tordenskjold (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. July 14, 1876, p. 884. V. not stated.—A. £80

1368. The schooner W. and E. struck on a dangerous shoal near Lowestoft, unshipped her rudder, lost her anchors and her windlass, and became useless. The wind was blowing a strong gale from S.W. by S., and a heavy sea was running. Two yawls, with thirty-five hands, got her off, and near to the entrance of the harbour, and a steam-tug towed her into the harbour. One of the yawls went for an anchor. The yawls' services lasted four hours, and the tug's six. The William and Ellen, S. G. May 1, 1849. V. 443*l.*—A. £80

1369. In February, the smack J., whilst on the fishing grounds off Yarmouth, lost her rudder. The smack S. C. came up, and was towed astern to steer her. The J., with the S. C. astern, was two days afterwards fallen in with by the smack M. A., off Lowestoft, making for Yarmouth by way of St. Nicholas Gat, and the master of the S. C. accepted the assistance of the M. A. until a steamer came up and took the J. in tow. £55 to the S. C., £22 to the M. A. The Jane (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. March 16, 1876, p. 341. V. 305*l.*—A. £77

1370. The schooner E. was between Cuba and Florida, dismasted and full of water; the master and five of the crew were lost. The C. M. took off the surviving passengers and crew, and two trunks were fished out of the cabin and carried to Maine. The Emblem, Daveis, 61, cited in Marvin, 193. [American.] V. 120*l.*—A. £76

1371. The A., of 250 tons, laden with wheat, having from stress of weather put into Yarmouth Roads, drove from her anchors. The weather was tempestuous, and the locality most dangerous. She hoisted a signal for assistance, and the salvors, with great difficulty and risk to life, launched their yawl, and succeeded in boarding the A. They cleared the anchors and proceeded towards Lowestoft, but being unable to enter the harbour, three of the salvors, by agreement, remained on board the A., which proceeded on her voyage to London in safety. An agreement for £50 was signed by three of the salvors. The Alpha, S. G. May 8, 1849.

Value 1,600*l.*—Award £75

1372. In March, the ship A., 1,046 tons register, in collision and entangled with the brig M. S., off Penarth Head, was drifting towards the shore, when she was disentangled by the tug H. The sea was rather strong, and the wind blowing rather hard from N. and E. The Americana, M. M. R. July 4, 1873, p. 848.

V. 6,700*l.*—A. £75

1373. In March, the schooner A., from Ipswich to Yarmouth, struck on a sunken vessel at the entrance of the harbour. She was warped into Fellowes Dock by thirty men. The Audacious, S. G. June 21, 1839.

V. 1,065*l.*—A. £75

1374. In September, the French brigantine B., was about a mile from Rodney Middle Buoy, off Lynn, heading south, and drifting with the ebb tide, the wind blowing hard from E. by N. with a heavy sea. She was waterlogged, but had a cargo of timber; her rudder was unshipped, and jammed hard-a-starboard by the deck-load, which had shifted. The gaff of her mainsail was broken, and her foresail split to ribbons. The master did not know where he was. The tug P., with the pilot-cutter G. L., came up, and two hawsers having been passed on board, the B. was towed into Lynn. The Benjamin (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 1, 1871, p. 1523.

V. 790*l.*—A. £75

1375. In November, the schooner B. from London to Kincardine, with a cargo of flour, after having sought shelter in Bridlington Bay, was run into by the brig W., and sustained damage. She remained in the company of other ships (the brig having left her) till next morning, her pumps being worked meanwhile. Three Scarborough coblemen then boarded her, and were, after some discussion, engaged to assist in bringing her into port. They, with the crew, who were much exhausted with pumping, brought her into Grimsby. The Bessie (Hull Mag.), M. M. R. Dec. 14, 1867, p. 1589.

V. 1,700*l.*—A. £75

1376. In January, the ship B. was in collision with the barque Belmont. The Belmont was the heavier of the two vessels, and her bow was in contact with the weakest part of the B. A steam-tug dragged the Belmont from the B., the master of which had previously refused the services of the tug. The court reserved the point whether the service rendered to the B., being a consequence of the service rendered to the Belmont, for which the tug was paid according to contract, the tug had any claim against the ship B., and made an award subject to the decision on that point. The Britannia (Liverpool Co. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 24, 1871, p. 241.

V. 1,500*l.*—A. £75

1377. In December, the schooner F. Q. got on the Platters Sand. With the assistance of eleven fishermen, she was got clear of the sand. The schooner was in considerable danger, and could not have got clear without the salvors' assistance. The Forest Queen (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 15, 1870, p. 86.

V. not stated.—A. £75

1378. The S. was aground on a sand bank at the mouth of the Elbe outside the channel, and made some water. The G. brought her off after two hours' labour. The Goliath and Superb, Assistance, Hamb. H. S. Z. 1873, pp. 136, 407, 408. [German.]

V. 10,875*l.*—A. £75

1379. The J., on the 25th March, got upon the Newcombe Sand, but shortly afterwards floated off with some damage, having made a considerable quantity of water. A boat with eight men was engaged, and an attempt made to conduct the vessel to Yarmouth, but there not being sufficient water to enable her to cross the bar, it was determined to bring her to London, where she arrived on the 29th. The James, S. G. June 17, 1847.

V. 750*l.*—A. £75

1380. The smack E. A. found the brig L. on the Sunk Sand just inside the River Humber, abandoned by her crew, and nearly full of water. With the assistance of two other smacks and the original crew of the brig, she was hove to her anchor, and got clear of the sand, and eventually, with the assistance of a steamer, carried into Grimsby Dock. The Livingstone, S. G. June 30, 1853.

V. 300*l.*—A. £75

1381. In April, the schooner M. was about twenty miles off Bardsey Island, derelict, with eight feet of water in her, and the sea washing over her. She was found thus by the tug U. S. Half the tug's crew boarded her by means of the lifeboat; a hawser was got on board, and the tug towed her in about twenty-eight hours to Holyhead. The Miriam (Bangor Ad. Co.), M. M. R. June 21, 1878, p. 787.

Value 150*l.*.—Award £75

1382. The N. C., 258 tons, got upon the fork of the South Scroby Sand. Fourteen men in the yawl R., and five men in the boat H., went to her, laid out anchors, and in two hours got the vessel off, and conducted her to Yarmouth. The weather was not severe, but the sand is a very dangerous one. The Norham Castle, S. G. Feb. 5, 1850.

V. 1,750*l.*.—A. £75

1383. The schooner P., fifty-eight tons, laden with iron, met with great stress of weather, and laboured heavily, making a great deal of water. She was brought to anchor; the wind increased to a gale, and she parted from her starboard anchor. The remaining part of the chain was shackled upon the inner part of the larboard chain, and veered out to the end. She then slipped from her anchor, and accepted the assistance of the P., of forty-six tons, with five or six hands, which took her to Whitstable. The schooner was in imminent danger, and it was indispensable for her safety that she should be taken to Whitstable, there being no other port near. The Primrose, S. G. May 1, 1849.

V. 1,000*l.*.—A. £75

1384. In November, the brigantine P., struck on the Middle Cross Sand, and made a good deal of water. She was taken in tow by a steam-tug, which signalled for further assistance, and in reply some boatmen went to her, and assisted in pumping her from St. Nicholas Gat to outside the harbour. The piermaster refused permission for her to enter in her then condition, so a second pump was got from the shore, and the water having been reduced, she was taken into the harbour. £15 to the boatmen, £60 to the tug. The Providence (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 13, 1878, p. 1591.

V. 454*l.*.—A. £75

1385. The schooner P. had lost her rudder and become unmanageable. She was found in that condition by the steamer V., which towed her to Penzance. The Providentia, S. G. July 21, 1847.

V. 441*l.*.—A. £75

1386. In December, the smack R., which had been in collision and had lost her port rigging, had her gear cut away, bulwarks and stanchions gone on the port side, the masthead lantern knocked out, and had only one man and a boy on board. She was boarded about forty miles E.N.E. of Yarmouth by four of the crew of the smack P., who rendered valuable services. The smacks sailed together to Yarmouth, which they reached on the 14th. The Rainbow (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 18, 1878, p. 78.

V. 400*l.*.—A. £75

1387. In February, the S. E., off Aberystwith, had dragged her anchors and was in danger of driving on the rocks or sinking. She was rescued by the steam-tug A. and taken by her over the harbour bar. The glass was falling, the wind blowing on shore, and the sea rising. The Sarah Ellen (Bangor Ad. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 16, 1877, p. 1461.

V. not stated.—A. £75

1388. In March, the barque C. was taken in tow off the Tuskar by the tug B. S., under an agreement to dock her, but had been left by the tug in the river and was dragging her anchors. She was rescued from imminent danger by the tug on its return. The Caldbeck (Liverpool Co. Co.), M. M. R. April 20, 1877, p. 501.

V. not stated.—A. £74

1389. In March, the smack N., about 45 miles S.E. of Yarmouth, was run into by a full-rigged ship and dismasted. The crew of the N. climbed up the sides of the ship. The smack H. being hard by, put off a boat with some of the crew, who boarded the N., and in two and a-half hours cleared the wreckage. The N. was then towed by the H. to Yarmouth, which they reached next day, but the H. was unable to regain her fishing ground for four days, and thus lost five nights' fishing, the average take being from 5*l.* to 6*l.* worth of fish per night. The Neptune (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. March 25, 1880, p. 395.

V. 340*l.*.—A. £72

1390. The brig A., whilst rendering help to the steamer A., which had got adrift in Brigsby Reach, was pricked by an anchor and in danger of sinking, but was rescued by the exertions of the crew of the tug T. and four of the crew of the briganttine D. The Amoret (City of London Co.), M. M. R. April 3, 1874, p. 433. £50 to the tug, £20 to the brigantine. Value not stated.—Award £70

1391. The schooner B., having lost her topmast, topgallantmast, and some sails, was off Flamborough Head, drifting to the south; there was a heavy sea on at the time, and she was quite unmanageable. A fishing smack succeeded, after twenty-four hours, in towing her into Grimsby Roads. The services were attended with little danger. The Babthorp, S. G. May 15, 1860. V. 933l.—A. £70

1392. The brig C., off Hasborough Light in a severe gale, parted from both her anchors and chains, and began drifting. The F. N. towed her to Lowestoft Harbour. The Clyde, S. G. March 2, 1861. V. 467l.—A. £70

1393. The French barque D. J. struck on Selsea Bank in thick weather, and was got off and to a place of safety, by the exertions of a pilot and several boatmen. Pilotage was awarded besides the salvage. The Deux Jules (City of London Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 26, 1875, p. 265. V. not stated.—A. £70

1394. The F., 200 tons, from Dantzic to London with coals, sprang a leak, her sails were damaged, and she was in a dangerous position off the Leman and Ower Sands, when five hands from a smack boarded her, and by their assistance at the pumps and otherwise she was brought to London. The Frederick, S. G. Dec. 17, 1844. V. 2,200l.—A. £70

1395. In February, the sloop F., from Hull for Woodbridge with oilcake, was lying off Woodbridge Haven, when the wind changed to a gale from the S.S.W., with thick rain. She struck on the Whitby Sand and sprang a leak, and her bowsprit was sprung, so that no head-sail could be set. In this condition the services of salvors were engaged, the crew being thoroughly exhausted, and the sloop was rescued. The Friends (Lowestoft Mag.), M. M. R. March 6, 1869, p. 307. V. not stated.—A. £70

1396. In March, the screw steamer G., which had a hole knocked in her port side below the water-line, was in a dangerous state. She was taken in tow by the tug H., which was afterwards joined by the tug T., and the two tugs, after some two hours' towage, conducted her safely into the Canada Basin. £45 to the H., £25 to the T. The Gladiator (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. April 18, 1873, p. 498. V. 80,000l.—A. £70

1397. In June, the cutter G., in a gale off Smith's Knowl, lost her mast, the wreck of which got entangled under her boat. The crew of the fishing lugger Y. J. assisted in getting it clear of the boat, and the Y. J. then took the G. in tow as far as the Cockle Buoy, where a tug was obtained, which took her into the Roads. The Glance (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Aug. 11, 1876, p. 1014. V. not stated.—A. £70

1398. In October, the ketch H. F. B., 62 tons, from Spain to London with fruit, was in distress with her sails split and her anchor lost. The steam-tug C. took her in tow off the North Flagship, and towed her from the Tongue Lightship to Nicholson's Wharf, London. It was blowing a gale all the time of the service. The H. F. Bolt (City of London Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 28, 1881, p. 112. V. 2,007l.—A. £70

1399. The H., 482 tons, met with a severe gale of wind in the neighbourhood of the Mouse Sand, and lost her larboard anchor and cable. The smack S., of 20 tons, with twelve hands, left Whitstable in the afternoon of the 24th to render assistance to vessels in distress. She was employed by the H. to proceed to Whitstable to procure an anchor and cable. She did so, and procured an anchor of 23 cwt. and a hundred fathoms of chain, with some exertion got it into her boat, and with some skill got it in safety to the H. The Hercules, S. G. March 7, 1851. V. 3,670l.—A. £70

1400. The sloop J. and J., having been in collision, was in great danger, from which she was rescued by the steam-tug E., which towed her into Yarmouth. £27 had been paid for the salvage of the vessel, valued at £100. The John and Jean, S. G. June 27, 1854. V. 330l.—A. £70

1401. In November, the French dandy M. was on the middle S.W. Scroby Sand, in a dangerous position and bumping. By the exertions of the crew of the yawl W., and the tug V., she was got in safety to Yarmouth. The wind was from the E., and there was a heavy swell. The Marqueriti (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 17, 1875, p. 1620. V. not stated.—A. £70

1402. The Spanish barque M. L. got on the Brake Sand, and coming off again was taken in tow by a steam-tug, but the steam-tug was utterly incapable of bringing her at once to Ramsgate; she was, therefore, obliged to come to anchor in an unsafe position. The lugger B. G., manned by seventeen hands, came to the M. L., and after assisting in pumping her, went to Ramsgate and brought her an anchor and another pump. The Maria Luisa, S. G. Feb. 28, 1856. Value 2,950*l.*—Award £70

1403. In October, the S., laden with coals, was damaged by collision and leaky, and her crew were exhausted with pumping. She was taken by a fishing smack, in very tempestuous weather, from three miles off the Dudgeon Light into Yarmouth Harbour. The Sybil, S. G. Feb. 11, 1841. V. 165*l.*—A. £70

1404. In June, the barque W., bound for Monte Video, was in lat. 34 N., and long. 38 W. Her captain was dead, her mate ill and unable to navigate her, and her crew were all negroes. She was boarded by the master and first mate of the barque N., bound for Jamaica, who undertook to navigate her into port. The mate took charge of her, and brought her into port, leaving the captain of the N. to navigate his ship without the assistance of any certificated officer. The Woodbine (City of London Co.), M. M. R. July 23, 1875, p. 936. V. not stated.—A. £70

1405. The brig C., with a crew of twenty hands, found the schooner M. deserted, and took out of her 140 barrels of flour and a small anchor. The Maria, 2 Story, 197, cited in Marvin, 191. [American.] V. 139*l.*—A. £69

1406. In September, the schooner L., with 174 tons of coal on board, from South Shields for Woolwich, about three or four miles off Hasborough, came into collision with a French barque, sustained great damage, and was abandoned by her crew, who got on board the barque. The L. was boarded by the crew of the lugger A., then making for Lowestoft with 5½ lasts of herrings. They took her in tow, and sighting the barque made for her, and took off the crew of the L., and then took the L. to Yarmouth Roads, after some hours of towage, in rough weather, pumping all the time. A tug was then hired for £10, and the L. was taken into Yarmouth Harbour. The Lively (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 13, 1871, p. 1298. V. 195*l.*—A. £68

1407. In July, the schooner U., from Grimsby for Gravesend with coals, brought up off Kessingland in a leaky state. Twenty-one boatmen of Kessingland got the water under, and subsequently she was taken into the harbour. The Union (Lowestoft Mag.), M. M. R. Aug. 26, 1865, p. 1074. V. 360*l.*—A. £66

1408. In May, the D. L., from Demerara to London, got on the Owers Sand, off Selsea Bill, and got off again with the loss of an anchor and chain. Off Dungeness, a Deal lugger was employed to fetch another, and an anchor and chain, weighing about 19 cwt., were procured at Deal, and put on board the D. L. in Margate Roads. Weather fine. The services lasted about eighteen hours, and ten men were employed. Cinque Ports Commissioners awarded £95, which the court considered very excessive, and accordingly reduced. The David Luckie, 9 Monthly Law Mag. (Notes of Cases), 209. V. not stated.—A. £65

1409. The schooner D. M. was discovered about eight miles from Scarborough by the smack T. B., 35 tons, and five hands. The master of the smack agreed to pilot the schooner to Hartlepool for £8, but he afterwards discovered that she was disabled by collision. The wind changed, but the smack towed the schooner into Hartlepool, being engaged three days. The smack suffered damage to the extent of £20. The Drowning Marie, S. G. May 1, 1850. V. 1,300*l.*—A. £65

1410. In December, the sloop F., trying to pass through a dangerous channel between the Barnard Sand and the shore, to save a few miles, got aground in a heavy sea. Some Kessingland beachmen, by manœuvring of sails and laying out her anchor, got her off the sand and brought her up off Gorton. Thence she was towed by a tug to Yarmouth. The Firmin (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 2, 1877, p. 276. V. not stated.—A. £65

1411. The brig H., from Guernsey for London, when near Margate Sands, was boarded by two men from a lugger, who subsequently went ashore to fetch an anchor and chain. Meantime the brig had taken a tug and proceeded to the Thames. The lugger followed. The Hannah (City of London Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 24, 1871, p. 241. V. not stated.—A. £65

1412. The H. was at anchor, with a signal flying, when a Yarmouth pilot cutter and crew went out to her and found her to be leaking. As they were getting her under weigh to bring her into the harbour the wind changed, and thereupon the master determined to proceed on his voyage to the River Colne, the pilots remaining on board, and assisting at the pumps until their arrival at that place, in thirty hours, their boat accompanying them. The Hebe, 2 W. Rob. 247; 7 Notes of Cases, Supp. 1. Value 870*l.*—Award £65

1413. In March, the Italian barque S. C. was fallen in with, in a disabled condition, by the tug S. off Whitby, in a strong sea, and it was arranged that the S. should tow the S. C. into the Tyne. In the course of the towage the rope broke twice, and the second time she drifted on to the rocks off the Herd Buoy and bumped twice. She was ultimately got off and brought into harbour. The Sarah Caine (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. March 28, 1879, p. 405. V. not stated.—A. £65

1414. In August, the smack U. in a storm off the Doggerbank was much damaged and disabled. In answer to signals the smack E. bore up, got a tow-line aboard after some difficulty, and took her to Yarmouth, which they reached in four days. On the way it was necessary to throw overboard from the E. twenty-four packages of fish, value £12. The Ulysses (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. August 28, 1874, p. 1106. V. 250*l.*—A. £65

1415. The brig Z., in ballast, was, in consequence of the state of the weather, being driven on to Bridlington Pier. A coble, manned by four hands, went to her assistance, and conducted her into the harbour. The Zealous, S. G. May 3, 1855. V. 600*l.*—A. £65

1416. In December, the smack E. when about sixty-five miles from Yarmouth, the wind blowing strong with a heavy swell, hoisted signals of distress. She was a mere hull, with her masts broken and her decks clean swept. The smack P. in answer to her signals went to her, and after two hours' labour made fast a rope and took her into Yarmouth Roads; whence she was towed by a tug into harbour. £55 to the P., £7 to the tug. The Excelsior (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. January 10, 1873, p. 53. V. 200*l.*—A. £62

1417. In March, the schooner T. P. from Garston to Kingston with coals, was drifting down the river Mersey dragging her anchor, and in danger of coming into collision with the landing-stage near St. George's Pier, when she was boarded by six boatmen, and, after some difficulty, brought to a safe anchorage. The Thomas Pearson (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. April 23, 1875, p. 520. V. not stated.—A. £62

1418. The steamer B. S., 425 tons, off Lowestoft, broke down in her machinery; the wind was E.N.E. blowing strong, with a heavy sea running; sail was made, and when off Aldborough Neaps a fishing smack fell in with her, and conducted her into Harwich. The Black Sea, S. G. April 3, 1855. V. 30,000*l.*—A. £60

1419. The barque B., 400 tons, got upon the Goodwin Sands. The sloop T., 20 tons, put some men on board, and the barque was soon got into deep water, and anchored off the North Foreland. The Borderer, S. G. November 4, 1847. V. 5,000*l.*—A. £60

1420. In December, the ship B. off the Durham Coast, with the wind N.N.E. and a heavy sea running, hoisted signals of distress. The captain of the B. told the captain of the steam-tug P. that the B. was in a distressed condition, and if not taken at once into Hartlepool would sink. The P. went immediately to her assistance. An agreement to take her to Hartlepool for £60 was made, and after twelve hours' towing she arrived there. The pumps were found to be choked, and there were five feet of water in the hold. The tug lent the ship a new hawser, value £20, which was damaged by the towing to the extent of £5. The Bolton (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. January 13, 1871, p. 50. V. 1,000*l.*—A. £60

1421. In November, the schooner C. came into collision with a steamer opposite one of the graving docks on the west side of the Mersey, and was in danger, her crew having left her. Two men on board the flat M. got a hawser attached to the C. from the tug B., which towed her into shallow water, where she sank. At low water when she was left dry, some of the cargo was taken out, and her damages repaired enough to enable her to float. £45 to the B., £15 to the M. The Caroline (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. January 15, 1875, p. 76. Value not stated.—Award £60 1422. The fishing smack S. R., when off the Ower Sand in the North Sea, fell in with the ship C., which had sustained some damage from the tempestuous weather. The smack conducted her to the Humber. The Codan, S. G. June 3, 1857.

V. 3,174l.—A. £60

1423. In January, during a heavy gale and at high tide, the brig C. was riding near the Corton Sand and in danger of drifting thereon. The lifeboat R. lay by her till the tide eased, having previously taken off the crew. The salvors then got up her anchors and sailed her near the harbour's mouth, where a tug was engaged for £5 and towed her into harbour. The Cyrus (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. February 23, 1877, p. 248.

V. 500l.—A. £60

1424. In February, the galliot D. G., from Harlingdon to London, got on the Nore Sand and lost her rudder, the wind being upon the shore. Two smacks towed her off and steered her to Gravesend. The Drie Gexusteis, S. G. May 8, 1839.

V. 1,800l.—A. £60

1425. A vessel on shore on a dangerous part of the coast, and in danger, was approached with some risk by eighteen salvors, who succeeded in getting her off the rocks, but were unable to render further assistance until she drifted to a place out of danger, from which she was ultimately carried into harbour. The services lasted about sixteen hours. The Ebenexer, 8 Jur. 385.

V. 850l.—A. £60

1426. The schooner E., off the Cape of Delaware, in a dismasted state, was towed to Philadelphia by the pilot boat L. in three days. The Elvira, Gilpin, 60, cited in Marvin, 210. [American.]

V. 540l.—A. £60

1427. The F. was off Dover, derelict; the steam-tug P., after services lasting about twenty-one hours, towed her into a place of safety. The Fairy, S. G. March 2, 1861.

V. 93l.—A. £60

1428. The schooner F. was aground on the north part of the Scroby Sand; the wind was S.S.W., and the tide about to ebb. The yawl Z., manned with a crew of thirteen hands, went to her aid; they found her beating heavily, the wind forcing her further on the sand. Their services were accepted, and at considerable risk they got the yawl under the schooner to receive the anchors, which were afterwards laid out, and the schooner got off the sands. The Flora, November 5, 1851.

V. 500l.—A. £60

1429. In November, the brig G. was about four or five miles off Souter Point. She had been in collision with another vessel, and was much damaged, part of her masts and rigging having been carried away. The steam-tug F. fell in with her, and offered her services, which were accepted for £60, and with much difficulty, owing to the heavy sea, the brig was towed into the Tyne and moored opposite the river police-station. The underwriter disputed the amount of the claim. The Griffin (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 12, 1868, p. 1588.

V. not stated—A. £60

1430. A lugger, with a crew of five men, was engaged by a vessel off Dungeness to bring out to her in the Small Downs an anchor (which her pilot swore to be necessary), from Dover. The vessel did not proceed to the Small Downs as she had arranged to do, but the lugger procured the anchor, having shipped a heavy sea in quitting the harbour, and after cruising about the Small Downs all night in search, the weather being dark and squally, on the following morning discovered the vessel, and took on board the anchor. The Heaton, 3 Hagg. 90.

V. 16,500l.—A. £60

1431. In September, the schooner H., in a collision off Southwold, had all her port rigging carried away, and her sails torn. Nineteen of the members of a beach company at Southwold went to her, and, being engaged to get her into Lowestoft Harbour, set a large sail of their own, took her in tow, and got her into harbour in about three or four hours, the salvors also pumping all the way. The Hunter (Lowestoft Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 10, 1873, p. 1296.

V. 700l.—A. £60

1432. In November, the brig J., from Labrador for Poole, mistaking a vessel at anchor in Steadland Bay for a pilot boat, ran on the Long Bull Sand. Part of her cargo was thrown overboard, and she was assisted off and into Poole by the crews of three sloops and a boat, sixteen men in all. The James, S. G. March 12, 1841.

Value 1,500*l.*—Award £60

1433. In October, a pilot-galley, manned by a pilot and six hands, rendered assistance to the French schooner J. M., but without danger to the salvors or their property. Some hobbler assisted, and the rope, which was one of the main agents in getting the vessel round into the harbour, was lent by the harbour master. The Jeune Mathilde, M. M. R. May 2, 1868, p. 563.

V. 1,605*l.*—A. £60

1434. In September, the French lugger, La M., was running under bare poles on a dead lee-shore, in Tenby Bay, and had a signal of distress flying. Four men from the lifeboat were put on board at great risk, and she was hauled in for Saundersfoot Bay; when under the land the anchor was let go, and ultimately she was taken into harbour. There was a strong gale blowing from S.W., with a heavy sea. La Marie (Tenby Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 16, 1874, p. 1330.

V. not stated—A. £60

1435. In November, the M., from Sierra Leone, lost an anchor and cable, and her crew, partly Africans, were exhausted. A steamer, 100 h.-p., with thirteen hands, towed her from Margate to London. The Margaret, S. G. March 4, 1842.

V. not stated.—A. £60

1436. In November, the smack M. A. M., shortly after being cast off by the tug taking her out of Yarmouth harbour, ran across the hawser of a schooner at anchor in the Roads, and continued to rub, being held by the bowsprit of the schooner, which had forced its way through her mainsail. Some yawlmen, with the help of a tug, got her clear. There was a nasty sea on. The Mary Ann Matilda (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 13, 1878, p. 1589.

V. 550*l.*—A. £60

1437. The brig M., when near the River Tees, received some damage to her sails and rigging, the wind at the time blowing a heavy gale, and there being a heavy sea running. The tug S. towed her into the Tees without any great difficulty. The Monkwearmouth, S. G. Jan. 14, 1845.

V. 1,100*l.*—A. £60

1438. In January, the schooner R., from Newcastle for Poole with coals, slipped her anchors during a storm in the Downs, and made for Dover Harbour; a strong wind was blowing from N.E. with snow. A pilot having been signalled for, a boat came alongside, and two men from a punt boarded her. She was then worked westward to avoid the tide, and when off the Admiralty pier her master signalled for a harbour tug, which with the men brought her safely into harbour. The Richard (Dover Comm.), M. M. R. Feb. 9, 1867, p. 181.

V. not stated.—A. £60

1439. In November, the schooner R., laden with wheat, was drifting in a fierce gale towards the Newcombe Sand. Her captain, seeing his danger, employed the plaintiffs, who were out in an open boat, to fetch a tug, and they hailed the tug D., which took her into Lowestoft Harbour in safety. The Rhodes (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 10, 1879, p. 45.

V. 1,200*l.*—A. £60

1440. The S., 70 tons, was driven on the Gunfleet Sand, where the sea made a complete breach over her. The sea was very heavy, and the tide falling. A gale from the southward was blowing, and continued to increase. She hoisted a signal of distress, and the smack P., of 25 tons, and subsequently three other smacks, went to her assistance. The Solanum, S. G. May 16, 1850.

V. 290*l.*—A. £60

1441. In April, the screw steamer St. O., 623 tons register, from Constantinople, with grain and thirty deck passengers, got aground near the lighthouse off Seraglio Point. The master tried to heave the vessel off by means of the donkey-engine and a kedge, but failed. The steam-tug J. M. S. took the master to Orta Keni, where he engaged hammals (porters) and tubs, and the tug B. B. to lie by the St. O. till she was afloat, and render any other assistance necessary. The J. M. S. conveyed the reliefs of hammals to and from the St. O.; and when the St. O. was sufficiently lightened, helped the B. B. to pull her off the ground. The J. M. S. then took in tow six lighters filled with the St. O.'s cargo, and all the vessels proceeded into the Golden Horn. The St. Oswin, M. M. R. Dec. 14, 1867, p. 1587.

V. not stated.—A. £60

1442. In November, the T., 382 tons, from Rotterdam to London, ran on Blacktail Sand. Two smacks with eighteen men, and a revenue cutter with eight men, got her off. The Tropic, S. G. Dec. 19, 1838. Value 5,499*l.*—Award £60

1443. In February, the French steamer V. d'A. got into collision with the schooner G. in the English Channel, and was in danger of being wrecked when the steamer B. went to her assistance, and succeeded in getting her free from danger. The Ville d'Aurillac (Swansea Co. Co.), M. M. R. May 1, 1874, p. 562. V. not stated.—A. £60

1444. The barque W., in ballast, while passing Torres Straits, struck upon a coral reef, and was in some peril. Some of the crew of a schooner, the R. M., assisted in lightening her and in laying out a kedge anchor, and she was eventually got off. The R. M. having come to an anchor during these services, her anchor and cable, valued at £30, were lost. The court awarded £30 for salvage, and £30 for the anchor and chain. The Westminster, S. G. Nov. 5, 1845. V. 4,000*l.*—A. £60

1445. The steam-tug C. agreed to tow the ship W. B. from Sea Reach to London for £16. Before the service commenced the W. B. missed stays, and got on the Blyth Sand. The tug endeavoured to get her off that tide, and could not. On the next tide she towed the ship off and up to Deptford. The William Brandt, Junior, 2 Notes of Cases, Supp. 67. V. 6,250*l.*—A. £60

1446. In June, the Z., 218 tons, from Newcastle for Yarmouth with goods and forty-five passengers, was 100 miles from Yarmouth. She had sustained injury to her machinery, and was unmanageable, heading N. instead of S. The steamer H. took her in tow, and when off the Dudgeon a strong breeze sprang up, which rendered the towage more arduous. After towing eleven hours, the Z. was got safely to Yarmouth Roads, from whence a tug took her into the harbour. The master of the H. risked his insurances by the service. The Z. was not in immediate, but only in probable, danger. The Zingari (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Sept. 1, 1871, p. 1106. V. 6,600*l.*—A. £60

1447. In January, the schooner J. N., from Newcastle to Hayle in Cornwall with coals, while off Hasborough, was struck by a brigantine, and her rigging much damaged. Three of the crew of the boat B. boarded her, and the rest went to fetch a tug. Those on board got the schooner to Cockle Gat, where they were met by the tug S., which brought her safely to the harbour, and moored her there. The Joseph Nicholson (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 12, 1875, p. 201. V. 964*l.*—A. £55

1448. In November, the fishing smack L. was dismasted and otherwise damaged in a collision. She was taken in tow by the smack M., near the Well Bank, about fifty miles from Yarmouth, and after sixty-six days' towage was brought to Yarmouth Roads. The M. sustained some damage by fouling the L. during the towage in the severe weather. While waiting in the roads for a tug, the M. lost an anchor and some fathoms of chain. The tug took the L. into the harbour. The Leader (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. March 14, 1873, p. 337. V. 200*l.*—A. £55

1449. In February, the brig L. was seen standing towards the Scilly Isles, in very rough weather, and flying signals of distress. She was boarded by the crew of the cutter Q., and found to be unmanageable. The cutter, with the help of a steamer, succeeded in getting her into harbour. The Liberty (St. Mary's (Scilly) Pol. Co.), M. M. R. March 14, 1873, p. 338. V. not stated.—A. £55

1450. In January, the mail steamer S. was ashore on some rocks near Cape Grisnez. She slipped off the rocks as the tide made, and anchored with her bottom damaged and her engine-room filled with water, but she was prevented from sinking by being built in compartments. Her master was incapacitated, her first mate drunk. In answer to signals the mail steamer P. F. W. came up and took her into Calais Harbour. The service lasted about nine hours. The weather was calm, and it was also clear, except at Calais, where there was a fog. The Scout, M. M. R. Feb. 23, 1872, p. 240. V. 1,200*l.*—A. £55

1451. In February, the brigantine S. ran on a flat-topped rock, twelve feet square, just outside Dartmouth Harbour. The tug L. came alongside, and made fast a warp, which at the third haul broke. A second and stronger hawser was then made fast, and she was brought off. The Swift, M. M. R. June 8, 1877, p. 725. V. 750*l.*—A. £55

1452. In April, the screw steamer G., in thick rainy weather, and during a heavy wind, got on the Goodwin Sands. The lugger F. N., having vainly tried to save the ship, took off the crew and saved two chronometers and four belts, the value of which was £140. She sustained some damage in the service. The Glendale (Newcastle Co. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 28, 1873, p. 1522. Value 140*l.*—Award £52

1453. In November, the brig P. H., while being brought to Penzance Pier, let go her anchor with too much way on her, and the anchor made a hole in her bottom. Some licensed pilots brought her into harbour during bad weather, and attended to her for some days. The Pierre Henri (Penzance Mag.), M. M. R. Dec. 9, 1865, p. 1555. V. 31,000*l.*—A. £52

1454. The schooner A., in ballast, in attempting to enter Bridlington Harbour, drove over the bar, struck against the South Pier, and was in a situation of considerable peril, the weather being very tempestuous. The coble B., manned by eight hands, went to the assistance of the A., succeeded, after great danger, in boarding her, and after three hours' labour placed her in a situation of safety. The Acheen, S. G. May 19, 1855. V. 350*l.*—A. £50

1455. In November, the schooner A., in a gale from the W., was in a leaky state about eight miles from and abreast of Yarmouth. She had only two men on board, who were exhausted with pumping for eighteen hours. The lugger H. came up and put on board four men, who stayed by her for three days, after which eight men from the H. worked her into Yarmouth in between eight and nine hours, the H. leading the way. The Adelaide (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 12, 1877, p. 54. V. 586*l.*—A. £50

1456. In November, the barque A., during a gale, was in a dangerous position off Yarmouth, about a quarter of a mile from the coast opposite the monument. She was towed into a safe berth by the tug S., one tow-rope being broken during the towage. The Adventure (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 10, 1875, p. 1586. V. 800*l.*—A. £50

1457. In December, 1870, the Portuguese schooner A. was in a heavy sea, about twenty miles from Lowestoft, the wind blowing hard from the S.E., and she was signalling for help. The master and three out of ten hands of the lugger M. S., with great risk to themselves, boarded the schooner, and at the request of the master, signified by gesture, took her into Lowestoft. The ship was in no danger, but the captain seemed not to know where he was. The Agnia (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 6, 1871, p. 14. V. 3,325*l.*—A. £50

1458. In January, the steamer A., from Bremen for London, was in dangerous proximity to the Newcombe Sands off Lowestoft. She was boarded by the master of the lugger J. and T., and by his directions got clear of the sands, and put on a safe course for London. The master of the lugger had buoyed his fishing lines, worth £20, to go to the A., and they were lost. The Albatros (City of London Co.), M. M. R. March 28, 1879, p. 405. V. not stated.—A. £50

1459. The schooner A. was N. of the Binks, and three-quarters of a mile from the broken water, with two flags of distress flying. The smack D., which came up to her, stayed by her till the ebb tide, and then towed her away, until a tug was met with and engaged by the smacksmen to tow her into Grimsby Docks for £8, and she was towed there accordingly. The Alerte (Grimsby Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 13, 1869, p. 1459. V. not stated.—A. £50

1460. The brig A., 161 tons, in a hurricane, drove on the Barber Patch Sand, and was in considerable danger. The Caistor lifeboat went to her, took some of her crew on board, and lay by her during the storm. After the storm was over the A. got off the sand, and was brought up in Yarmouth Roads, attended by the lifeboat. The Alpha, 1 Lush. 180; S. G. June 21, 1860. V. 600*l.*—A. £50

1461. In October, the French brig A. M., from Gêfle for St. Brienne laden with deals, was at anchor in dangerous proximity to the North Bank, off Gorleston, and with six or seven feet of water in her hold, her deck cargo having been thrown overboard. A tug with a pilot on board came up, the pilot boarded her, and with great difficulty and risk got a rope from the A. M. on board the tug, which towed her into

Gorleston Harbour through an increasing wind and sea. The Alphonse Marie (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 16, 1874, p. 1329. Value 950*l.*—Award £50

1462. The Spanish vessel A. encountered tempestuous weather, and sustained considerable damage. She was observed with a signal of distress flying by the fishing smack E., with a crew of ten hands, then lying at Scarborough. The E. went to her assistance, and after clearing away the wreck, took her in tow and conducted her to Bridlington Bay, and subsequently, with the assistance of a coble, into the harbour. Tender of £20 under an alleged agreement, which was denied by the salvors. The Armonia, S. G. April 5, 1853. V. 1,800*l.*—A. £50

1463. In November, the schooner A., 111 tons, from Laga to Liverpool with a cargo of manganese, was in Sutton Pool, Plymouth, and dragging her anchors. The weather was very heavy. The L. K. proceeded to her. They alleged that they tried to get her into Sutton Harbour, but finding it was impossible to do so, and in order to prevent her going on to the rocks, they ran her on to a mud bank. The owners denied this, and asserted that she grounded through an attempt to take her into the harbour when there was not sufficient water. She was finally warped into the harbour. The Arica, M. M. R. May 12, 1866, p. 594. V. 1,250*l.*—A. £50

1464. In December, the brig A., from Hartlepool for London with coals, was seen, between Britannia Pier and the Jetty, flying distress signals. She had lost two anchors and chains, and had been in collision with a steamer. The tug P. went to her, took her master off, brought him into the harbour and back again, and finally at high tide towed the A. into harbour. The Attabiah (Lowestoft Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 3, 1873, p. 23. V. not stated.—A. £50

1465. In December, the North German brig B., during a gale from S.S.W., off Whitby, was driving to leeward in a tremendous sea; her pumps were choked, she was otherwise disabled, and had two and a-half feet of water in her hold. At the request of the master of the B., the fishing catch D., which came near in answer to signal, stood by the B., and for twenty hours attended her (keeping her head W.) to within sight of the Tees Light, where the captain of the D. engaged a tug to take the B. to the Tyne for £12. The Blumenthal (North Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 17, 1873, p. 86. V. 800*l.*—A. £50

1466. In December, the crew of the smack G., when off the Dogger Bank, saw the smack B. in distress, with no canvas set except a piece of foresail, and flying a distress signal. She had lost all her running gear, her boom and gaff, and all her sails, and had broken her bowsprit. The weather was heavy and the gale strong. The salvors took her in tow, and she reached Yarmouth in four days. The Bravo (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 2, 1874, p. 23. V. 400*l.*—A. £50

1467. In September, the schooner B. was picked up in distress, sixty miles from the Haytian coast, and brought to Kingston, Jamaica, by the German barque J. R. The Brisk (Kingston (Jamaica) V. Ad. Co.), M. M. R. June 2, 1876, p. 693. V. not stated.—A. £50

1468. In December, during a gale, the schooner B., from Methel for London with coals, which had lost her anchor, had her sails split and was otherwise damaged, was towed into harbour by the steam-tug U. S. The Britannia (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 27, 1872, p. 1651. V. 527*l.*—A. £50

1469. In February, the barque C. C., 451 tons, from Shields for China, off Aldborough was struck by a sea which unshipped the wheel, broke the mainyard, and injured the master and three men. She was taken to Harwich by a yawl with twelve hands and two pilots. The Captain Cook, S. G. May 26, 1843. V. 4,000*l.*—A. £50

1470. The fishing smack C. was run into whilst riding in the roads off Lowestoft, during a heavy gale from the S.E. by S. Her master and crew deserted her, but shortly afterwards returned. The pilot boat A., with some difficulty, took the C. into the harbour. The Change, S. G. February 14, 1856. V. 800*l.*—A. £50

1471. In November, the barque C., 321 tons, with 2,500 quarters of wheat, was labouring and striking very heavily, during a strong breeze from the S.S.E., with a heavy sea, N.W. of the Black Rock, Portland. She was boarded and pumped by a pilot and his crew, until the tug D. came up and took her into the tidal harbour, where she soon sank. The Choice (Falmouth Mag.), M. M. R. March 18, 1865, p. 331. Value not stated.—Award £50

1472. In February, the barque C. C. was on the Kentish Knock, with her back broken and nine feet of water in her hold, and the wind blowing hard. The smack A. I. went to her, and the master, mate and two men boarded her, and agreed that the smack should lie by her; at night there were eleven feet of water in her. The master of the A. I. stayed on board up to four in the morning, and boarded her again at seven. He remained on board all the next night, and employed the smack R. to assist. The two smacks took off the master and all the crew of the C. of C. next day. The master of the A. I. made five or six journeys between the barque and his smack, and then, at the request of the master of the C. of C., made for Harwich, and landed there the master and crew of the C. of C. about six o'clock p.m. of that day. £32 to the A. I., £18 to the R. The City of Carlisle (Harwich Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Aug. 14, 1869, p. 1043. V. 102l.—A. £50

1473. The C. W. was damaged by collision. The steam-tug W. towed her to Grimsby. The services lasted two or three hours, and were attended with no risk. The Clara Wilsnach, S. G. May 10, 1861. V. 1,900l.—A. £50

1474. A lieutenant of the coastguard and four of his men boarded a vessel which had some of her crew sick, rendered some slight assistance on board, and landed the master in their boat. The Clifton, 3 Hagg. 117. V. 6,800l.—A. £50

1475. The C., of 400 tons, got thirty-five miles out of her track, and was found to be between the Sunk and Lone Sands, towards the latter of which she was proceeding. Some fishermen boarded her, and were engaged by the master, after he had been with much difficulty convinced of his danger, to conduct the vessel into Harwich. The Cumberland, S. G. Feb. 25, 1845. V. 2,278l.—A. £50

1476. In September, the screw steamer C., 940 tons, was drifting up the Mersey on a flood tide, with her bows to the westward and broadside to the tide. She came into collision with a steamer of 3,500 tons register, lying at anchor between Egremont and Seacombe Ferries. The tug S. made fast to her, towed her clear, and anchored her off the Huskisson Dock. The Cyprian, M. M. R. Jan. 21, 1876, p. 83. V. 28,000l.—A. £50

1477. The brig D. was struck by a tremendous sea and dismasted; juremasts were rigged, and fearing a lee shore, she bore up for the Scilly Islands, and the next day the crew of a pilot cutter put off to her aid, and she was taken in tow for about five minutes, and anchored in about twenty-two fathoms water. A hawser and additional spars and sails having been procured, she was conducted into the harbour of New Grimsby. The Dosseitei, 10 Jur. 865; S. G. July 18, 1846. V. 10,000l.—A. £50

1478. In January, the ship E., with guano, when entering Queenstown harbour came into collision with another ship and struck the bottom heavily. The tug L. E. got her off. The Eagle (Dublin Ad. Co.), M. M. R. May 7, 1875, p. 584. V. 50,000l.—A. £50

1480. The brig E., 193 tons, got upon the Cross Sand, the wind blowing strong, and there being a heavy sea. She then hoisted signals of distress for the pilot cutter T. B. (the crew of which had previously endeavoured to point out to her her danger by signals) which made towards her, but after some time she floated off, and was directed by the cutter how to steer clear of the Sand. One of the pilots then went on board, and inquired if they wished to employ him; the master wished to make an agreement for the pilot to take him to Lowestoft, which the pilot declined, owing to the darkness, but offered to take him to Harwich. The master of the E. would not be taken to Harwich; the pumps had been kept going during the whole of this time, and now sucked, and the vessel accordingly proceeded on her voyage without further assistance. The Eliza, 7 L. T. N.S. 257; S. G. July 24, 1862. V. 970l.—A. £50

1481. In August, the brig E. B., 194 tons, from the Tyne for Dordt in a leaky state, was boarded at the entrance to Lowestoft Harbour by some beachmen. Her crew were exhausted with pumping. The salvors set to work pumping, and got the ship ready for towing. A steam-tug was engaged by them, and took the E. B. into Lowestoft. The Emmanuel Brothers (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. September 10, 1875, p. 1160. Value 600*l.*—Award £50

1482. The schooner E., of 82 tons, laden with iron, was off Cromer, with a signal of distress flying. Nineteen men, in two boats, went out to her assistance, and on boarding her found that she was making a considerable quantity of water; they assisted in pumping her until she arrived at Yarmouth. The master wished six of the salvors only to stay on board, but the whole nineteen insisted in staying on board the schooner and assisting at the pumps after the master had dismissed all but six of them. The Equity, S. G. June 11, 1852. V. 800*l.*—A. £50

1483. In March, in a strong north wind with a cross sea, the trawling smack E., 32 tons, was derelict, with her trawl hanging over amidships, and causing her to cant over to windward. She was found thus by the cutter A. off Falmouth. After boarding her with some difficulty, the crew of the A. cut away the warp that held the trawl, and thus she righted. The A. then took her in tow to Plymouth. The Esmeralda (Plymouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. April 14, 1876, p. 470. V. not stated.—A. £50

1484. The ship F., 117 tons, sprang a leak; when off Bawdsey the master and crew of the yawl W. boarded her, rendered assistance by pumping, and accompanied her to Ipswich. The Favourite, 7 L. T. N.S. 257; S. G. Jan. 22, 1862. V. 470*l.*—A. £50

1485. In November, the brig F., damaged in a collision with another vessel, was taken by the tug F. C. into Yarmouth Harbour. The Friends (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 1, 1876, p. 1526. V. 775*l.*—A. £50

1486. The G. E. took the ground while proceeding out of the south outlet of the port of Sunderland. The G. K. came up, and a tow-rope was got on board, but almost as soon as the G. K. began to haul on it the G. E. reversed her engines and got off. The German Emperor (Sunderland Co. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 20, 1874, p. 1489. V. not stated.—A. £50

1487. The schooner H. B. F., 200 tons, in a severe storm dragged her anchors, the sea constantly broke over her, and her crew abandoned her. A steam-tug towed her to the quarantine ground. Time employed, five hours. The H. B. Foster, 1 Abbot, R. 224; cited in Marvin, 208. [American.] V. 2,450*l.*—A. £50

1488. The F. W. had lost her mainsail, and was thereby considerably limited in her ability to get about. She was taken in tow by a cutter in the open sea during stormy weather, and was brought safely to the Elbe after five hours' labour. The cutter lost a sail value £14. The Fishing Wherry, Assistance, Ham. S. Z. 1875, pp. 313, 314. [German.] V. 240*l.*—A. £50

1489. The H., having encountered severe weather and sprung her bowsprit and foremast, after having been thirteen days in a leaky state, ran into the Bristol Channel, where she was fallen in with off the Flat Holm, twenty miles from Bristol, by a steam-tug, which found the crew much exhausted with labour at the pumps, there being seven and a-half feet of water in her hold. The steam-tug remained by her during the night, and towed her into Bristol on the following day, when the water was found to have increased to ten feet. The Harvey, 1839, 4 Monthly Law Mag. (Notes of Cases), 153. V. 3,002*l.*—A. £50

1490. The schooner H. sustained considerable damage, and shipped large quantities of water, which rendered it necessary to keep the pumps constantly at work, and a signal for a pilot was hoisted. The fishing lugger R., while engaged in the herring fishery, about six miles from the Leman and Ower Sand, observed the schooner, went to her assistance, and conducted her towards Lowestoft, and on the next day, with the aid of a pilot and a steam-tug, she was taken into the harbour. The Hedwig, S. G. April 29, 1853. V. 860*l.*—A. £50

1491. The barge H. P. was found drifting, bottom upwards, with the flood tide in sea-reach in the Thames; and was secured by two warps and towed by a tug to a - place of safety. The Hepzibah Pearson (City of London Co.), M. M. R. July 7, 1876, p. 853. Value not stated.—Award £50

1492. In November, the schooner H., 62 tons, from Hull for Dover with oil, had been in collision, lost her mainmast, and had her sails damaged. The smack N., thirty-five tons, found her thus off Hollesley Bay, and towed her for eight hours into Harwich Harbour. The Hwain, M. M. R. March 21, 1868, p. 369. V. 2,119*l.*—A. £50
1493. The schooner I., 96 tons, had met with great stress of weather, received considerable damage, and shipped a quantity of water; her crew were injured and worn out. Some boatmen of Bridlington took her from Flamborough Head into Bridlington Bay, and pumped her out. Service of short duration. The Industry, June 19, 1850. V. 800*l.*—A. £50
1494. In February, the sloop J., with 130 tons of slate and manned by a mate and one boy, was seen to be dragging her anchor. The wind was blowing a gale, and the River Mersey was "in a fearful state." The sloop bumped against the Clarence Dock Pier, and a line from the flat T. was thrown on board, by which the mate and boy were drawn up. The master of the flat then boarded the sloop, and with great difficulty got her into dock. The James (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. Apr. 17, 1869, p. 500. V. not stated.—A. £50
1495. The fishing smack N., reaching in towards the Cockle Gat, in consequence of stress of weather, observed the barque J. to the south of the north buoy of the Scroby Sand. The barque signalled her to come to her aid, and on three of the smacksmen boarding her, they found five feet of water in the hold. They remained on board all night pumping, when some Gorleston men came out, and the J. was ultimately conducted to Yarmouth Roads. The John, S. G. February 26, 1854. V. 1,200*l.*—A. £50
1496. The galliot J. A., when about sixty miles from Southwold, agreed with the fishing smack I. to conduct or pilot her to a Dutch or English port for £50. The weather coming on bad, the smack had to tow the J. A., and claimed salvage. The Jonge Andries, Swabey, 226; S. G. April 7, 1857. V. 2,270*l.*—A. £50
1497. In October, the St. Ives pilots fell in with the smack L. abandoned off Cunard's Head, and ultimately got her into Hyde. The Lenora, (St. Ives Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Oct. 29, 1875, p. 1393. V. not stated.—A. £50
1498. In January, the schooner L. R., 99 tons, in a S. gale and a heavy sea, struck on the rocks by the Admiralty Pier, Dover, and bumped heavily. The Dover boat, W., went to her, followed by the tug F. M'I., and three times took a tow-rope on board the tug; eventually the L. R. was got off the rocks, and the tug held her till there was water enough for her to enter the harbour, when she was taken there. £33 to the F. M'I., £17 to the W. The Leon Raymunds, M. M. R. June 11, 1875, p. 743. V. 824*l.*—A. £50
1499. The brig L. W., from Rye for Sunderland, during a gale of wind, in thick weather, with snow, off Staithes, became unmanageable, would not answer her helm, and drove on to the rocks. The master and crew rowed ashore in the jolly boat to get assistance, and engaged ten men and two cobles, who got her off and brought her, with some seven feet of water in her hold, into Whitby Harbour. The Lord Warden (Whitby Mag.), M. M. R. March 14, 1868, p. 339. V. not stated.—A. £50
1500. In November, the schooner L. E. got ashore in Robin Hood's Bay, and was rescued by nine boatmen. The Louisa Elizabeth (Stockton Co. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 26, 1875, p. 266. V. not stated.—A. £50
1501. In January, the barque M. A., from Hamburg for Rio Janeiro with passengers and a valuable cargo, was in a damaged state with a shifted cargo. She was piloted into Grimsby, twenty-five miles distant, by a fisherman. The Mary Anne, S. G. June 15, 1837. V. 16,000*l.*—A. £50
1502. The steamboat P. having conducted the brig M. into the port of Sunderland during tempestuous weather, two magistrates for Sunderland awarded £15 for such services. The Court of Admiralty, on appeal, awarded £50. The Messenger, S. G. Jan. 22, 1859. V. 1,320*l.*—A. £50

1503. The barque M., having sustained considerable damage by collision, engaged the steam-tug R. O. to conduct her from the Scroby Sand to Lowestoft. A gale was blowing, and she was unable to effect it alone. A signal was hoisted, and the steam-tug E. came. The two tugs then conducted the barque to Lowestoft in two hours and a-half. The Metropolis, S. G. Aug. 7, 1850. Value 5,000*l.*—Award £50

1504. The fishing smack S. was proceeding from the Dogger Bank to Hull with a cargo of fish, and when distant about eighteen miles from Flamborough Head, saw the ship M. about seven miles to windward with two signals for assistance flying; she went to her, boarded her with some difficulty, and found her in a very leaky state, she having made at one time as much as thirty-four inches of water per hour. The salvors assisted in pumping, &c., and remained by her until she was brought safely up in Grimsby Roads. The services lasted eighteen or twenty-four hours, and the smackmen lost £23 by the spoiling of the fish. The M. set up an agreement for £16, but failed to establish it. The Minerva, S. G. July 2, 1851. V. 1,569*l.*—A. £50

1506. In July, the brig N., timber-laden, came into Hartlepool Roads in charge of a pilot. There was a heavy sea breaking on the bar. The steam-tug A. went out into the bay, and her captain told the pilot there was fifteen feet of water on the bar, and about two feet swell. The pilot asked for a line, and the N. was taken in tow. When she got to the bar the vessel struck heavily and "beached" up on the sands. With the aid of the steam-tugs L. and W. she was got off the bar. She proceeded to sea, where she remained three days, her return being prevented by the weather and tide. The A. was damaged to the amount of £9 by being dashed against the L. The pilot's licence was suspended for three months for trying to take the harbour when there was not enough water. The Naiad (Hartlepool Pol. Co.), M. M. R. September 29, 1866, p. 1233. V. not stated.—A. £50

1507. In December, several boatmen of Deal, in answer to a flare-up from a vessel in the Downs, put off in the lugger F., and found that the light was from the Norwegian barque N., which had taken the ground on the South Brake Sand. There was a gale from W.N.W. and a heavy sea. Several of the lugger's crew boarded the N., got the anchor up, set the mizensail, steered a course down between the Brake and the shore, and brought her up in about six hours close along the coast, whence she was towed to London. The Nordcap (City of London Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 26, 1872, p. 116. V. not stated.—A. £50

1508. The brig O. got on shore on a shoal called the Barber Patch. Her sails were aback, and she was in some danger. Two boats with twenty hands put off to her, and succeeded in removing her from the sand into deep water. The Olive, S. G. July 30, 1850. V. 816*l.*—A. £50

1509. In April, the Portuguese brig O., from South America for Bremen with tobacco, when off Beachy Head, fell in with the lugger E. of Z., and agreed with her that, for the sum of £1, she (the lugger) should proceed to Dungeness, and there make inquiry for a pilot for Bremen, that one hand from the lugger should remain on board, and that the O. should heave to off Dungeness and wait there for the lugger. The O. did not heave to as arranged, because it was discovered subsequently to the agreement that there were symptoms of fire on board her, and she therefore proceeded on to the Downs. The Ovarouse, M. M. R. May, 1867, p. 626. V. 6,700*l.*—A. £50

1510. In May, during a strong breeze, the yacht P., having broken from her moorings and drifted against the ferry bridge, was boarded by two servants of the Tranmere Ferry Company, from one of the company's boats, who succeeded in dropping her anchor and securing her. The Pastime (Liverpool Pass. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 18, 1878, p. 79. V. not stated.—A. £50

1511. In April, the schooner P., in a strong wind from N.E. with a heavy sea, whilst being towed by a tug into Gorleston Harbour, grounded outside the South Pier. The tug left her, and some Gorleston beachmen went to her assistance, and got her off and into port in three hours. The Parthenia (Yarmouth Co. Co.), M. M. R. June 3, 1861, p. 688. Value 700*l.*—Award £50

1512. In November, the salvors saw signals flying from the Dutch brig P., wheat laden, which was stranded near Berwick Harbour. They went to her and found her fast filling with water and nearly sinking. A North Sea pilot was on board. The salvors took charge of her, and brought her to Berwick, where a Berwick pilot went on board. Finding there was not enough water on the bar for her to enter the harbour, she was beached. The Pero (Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Dec. 9, 1870, p. 1588. V. not stated.—A. £50

1513. In September, the schooner P., having been in collision with the F. B., was brought up by her port anchor, about one mile from shore off Deal, inside the Goodwin Sands. The wind was S.W. and strong, and the sea heavy, and the P. sustained damages on her starboard quarter, and her main rigging and shrouds were carried away. She was boarded then by two of the crew of the lugger Y. P. They remained some time, and the wind changing to a stiff gale from N., the P. began to drift, and was in danger of coming into collision with a neighbouring barque. The men assisted the P. into Dover. The Pomona (Dover Ad. Co.), M. M. R. Jan. 19, 1872, p. 87. V. not stated.—A. £50

1514. The brig P., 167 tons, in entering the port of Marsala, in Sicily, grounded upon a bank. The master of a British vessel, the W. B., in his boat, went with other parties to her assistance, and through his advice, in about three-quarters of an hour, the vessel forged off, and was brought within the Mole. The Portia, 9 Jur. 167; S. G. February 20, 1845. V. 2,400*l.*—A. £50

1515. In July, the Dutch trawler P. No. 2, having lost her mast, was in danger of drifting on to the rocks off the Faroe Islands, but was towed by the smack G. into a place of safety. The Presto, No. 2 (Grimsby Co. Co.), M. M. R. January 21, 1876, p. 87. V. not stated.—A. £50

1516. In October, the barque P. grounded on the North Sand when leaving Yarmouth Harbour, and was got off by the exertion of six boatmen of Gorleston. The Pride (Yarmouth Pol. Co.), M. M. R. Nov. 7, 1873, p. 1427. V. 400*l.*—A. £50

1517. The brig Q. ran upon the Hasborough Sand. The yawl D., manned by eleven hands, went out to her assistance, and by laying out anchors succeeded in getting her off. The Queen, S. G. November 16, 1853; The Times, November 17, 1853. V. 1,500*l.*—A. £50

1518. The brig R., when off Portland, was run into by the steamship D., and was dismasted, and sustained other damage; she was thereupon taken in tow by the D., but breaking three hawsers, in consequence of bad weather, the steamer left her and ran for the Needles. The steam-tug R. left Portsmouth, went to the brig, and towed her into Cowes. The Redport, S. G. 11th June, 1857. V. 637*l.*—A. £50

1519. In January, the trawler R. got on the Holm Sand, and the yawls Y. P. and L. C., with fifty hands, went in answer to her signals, and, with the help of the harbour tug, got her off. The Renown (Lowestoft Co. Co.), M. M. R. Mar. 4, 1881, p. 271. V. not stated.—A. £50

1520. In January, the brigantine R., in thick weather, with the wind S.S.W. and a high sea, was in a perilous position to the E. of the Landguard Fort, in danger of being blown right on to the sands. She was boarded by the master of the smack V. and his crew, who got out a warp, and gradually shifted her head round, and then fetched a tug which towed her first into Harwich, and thence to Ipswich. The Roma (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. Feb. 23, 1877, p. 246. V. 665*l.*—A. £50

she fell over on her starboard beam ends and nearly capsized. She was accordingly taken back by a tug to the bank. By the directions of the plaintiff, who was employed by the ship's agents to get her off into a place of safety, the hawser was removed and the sluices closed, and in two days she was got safely to a dry dock at Constantinople. The Romulus, M. M. R. Feb. 15, 1882, p. 103. Value 22,000*l.*—Award £50

1522. In September, the barque S. D. came into collision off Deal with the Austrian barque E., and all her crew, except the mate, went on board the E., but four afterwards returned. The S. D. had her main and mizenmasts carried away, and was otherwise seriously damaged. The luggers W. B. and W. H. went to her aid. One of the luggers fetched the master of the S. D., who was on shore, and the two remained in attendance, two of the crew working on board, for two days, when the barque was taken to the West India Docks. The Sea Drift, M. M. R. Feb. 7, 1873, p. 178. V. 2,156*l.*—A. £50

1523. In July, the barque S. came into collision with another vessel in King's Road, off Portishead, and the two vessels were grating together and in considerable danger. The tug V. put off to their aid. The sea was very high, and the hatches of the tug had to be battened down. The tug towed them clear. The Seagull (Bristol Co. Co.), M. M. R. Sept. 1, 1876, p. 1102. V. 4,627*l.*—A. £50

1524. In December, the brigantine S. S., in very thick weather got on the West Rock, off Harwich. She was boarded by some of the hands of the smack A., and got off the rock, and to Harwich by their aid. The Star of the Sea (Ipswich Co. Co.), M. M. R. March 28, 1879, p. 405. V. 470*l.*—A. £50

1525. In March, in bad weather, with severe hailstorms, the Austrian barque T. R. was drifting in the Mumbles Roads, and would soon have been aground had not the tug F. C. come up, and, getting a line on board, with much difficulty towed her for 3½ hours into Swansea. The Tre Re (Swansea Pol. Co.), M. M. R. March 31, 1876, p. 399. V. 1,750*l.*—A. £50

1526. In February, the ship W., in very tempestuous weather off the Northumbrian coast, lost her tiller and her rudder head, drifted past the harbour beyond Cullercoats, and was fast drifting ashore near Whitley, when her anchor was let go, and signals of distress hoisted. The wind was strong from the S., and a heavy sea was running. A steam-tug put off, and in three hours towed her safely into the harbour. There was great risk of the W. drifting ashore if the tug's engines had failed. The Wigoline (S. Shields Pol. Co.), M. M. R. March 3, 1871, p. 274. V. 200*l.*—A. £50

(a) As to apportionment of salvage, see tit. SALVAGE, pp. 1889—1899.

In salvage actions the court does not apportion the salvage unless specially requested to do so. Hence in numerous salvage actions there is no record of the apportionment of the salvage. It is, of course, otherwise in actions of distribution of salvage.

Part I. GENERALLY.

1. Application of M. S. Acts.

1. *Generally.

1. The whole of the third part of this act applies to all seagoing ships registered in the United Kingdom (except such as are exclusively employed in fishing on the coasts of the United Kingdom, and such as belong to the Trinity House, the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses, or the port of Dublin Corporation, and except pleasure yachts, as to which this part of the act is only partially applicable, see sect. 2, infra), and also to all ships registered in any British possession, and employed between any place in the United Kingdom and any place not situate in the possession in which they are registered, and to their owners, masters and crews. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

2. If in any matter relating to any ship, or to any person belonging to any ship, there appears to be a conflict of laws, then if there is in the third part of this act any express provision on the subject, the case shall be governed by such provision; but if not, by the law of the place where the ship is registered, Ibid. s. 290.

3. As to the interpretation of the words "seamen," "master," "her Majesty's dominions," "United Kingdom," "British possession," "consular officer," "person," "ship," "foreign-going ship," "home-trade ship," Ibid. s. 1.

4. This act is to be construed with and as part of M. S. Act, 1854. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 1.

5. The following acts are to be taken to be part of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and construed accordingly. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 1, and M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 1.

6. The following acts are to be construed as one with the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and the acts amending it. See M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), s. 2; M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 2; and M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 2.

2. Ships partially exempted.

(a) Registered Sea-going Fishing Ships on British Coasts.

7. Registered sea-going ships exclusively employed in fishing on the coasts of the United Kingdom, sea-going ships belonging to any of the three general lighthouse boards, and sea-going pleasure yachts, are subject to the whole of the third part of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), except sects. 136, 143, 145, 147, 149, 150—155, 157, 158, 161, 162, 166, 170, 171, 256, 279 and 280—287. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 13.†

* (1) The title of shipping master is altered to that of superintendent of a mercantile marine office. See the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 15.

Sect. 256, as to the fines to be deducted from the seaman's wages and paid to a superintendent of mercantile marine office. Sect. 279, as to agreements, indentures and assignments on arrival at a foreign port being deposited with the consul, and at a colony with the officer of customs. Sects. 280—287, as to the keeping of official logs, the entries therein, the delivery thereof to superintendents of mercantile marine, and the sending of them home in the case of the loss or transfer of the ship.

* (3) If the mate acts so improperly as to justify the master in dismissing and degrading him from his office, he is not entitled to wages. But if he is improperly dismissed he is entitled to them. He is not bound to perform the duties of a common seaman. Thompson v. Busch, 4 Wash. C. C. 338. [AMERICAN.]

1. Rating.

(a) Generally.†

11. A seaman is not (since August 2, 1880), entitled to the rating of A. B., unless he has served at sea four years before the mast. Employment as fisherman in a registered decked fishing vessel does not count for more than three years' service. He must have served at least one year's sea service in a trading vessel. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 7.

(b) Certificate.

12. Such service may be proved by certificates of discharge, by a certificate of service from the registrar-general of shipping and seamen, or by other satisfactory proof. The registrar shall grant his certificate for a fee not exceeding sixpence, and in it shall specify whether the service was in whole or in part in a steamer or a sailing ship. Ibid.

6. Sea Apprentices.

1. Indentures.

(a) Generally.

13. All indentures of apprenticeship to the sea service are exempt from stamp duty, and must be executed in duplicate. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 143.

14. As to the implied obligation of seaworthiness in every instrument of marine apprenticeship, see Pt. II. p. 2148.

(b) Transmission.

15. Every person to whom a sea apprentice is bound in the United Kingdom must, within seven days after execution of the indenture in duplicate, transmit both parts to the registrar-general of shipping and seamen or some superintendent, who shall record one part and indorse on the other that it has been recorded, and re-deliver it to the master. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 143.

(c) Paupers.

16. As to the execution of parish indentures of sea apprenticeship by the boys and by the guardians or overseers before two justices, who are to ascertain that the boy has consented to be bound, has attained twelve years of age, and is of sufficient health and strength, and that the master is a proper person for the purpose, Ibid. s. 142.

(d) Production of—

17. For provisions requiring the master of every foreign-going ship before carrying any apprentice to sea from any place in the United Kingdom to bring him before the superintendent before whom the crew is engaged, and produce the indenture, and assignments thereof (if any); and the names of the apprentice, the date of the indenture and assignments, and the names of the ports at which they have been registered shall be entered on the agreement. Penalty for breach, not exceeding £5. Ibid. s. 145.

(e) Notice of Desertion, Death, Assignment or Cancellation.

18. Whenever any indenture of sea apprenticeship is assigned or cancelled, or the apprentice dies or deserts, the master of the apprentice shall within seven days, if the same happens in the United Kingdom, or if elsewhere, so soon afterwards as circumstances permit, notify the same to the registrar-general of shipping and seamen, or some superintendent, to be recorded. Penalty for breach, not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 143.

(f) M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883.

19. Such portions of the first part of this act as in any way relate to indentures of apprenticeship to the sea-fishing service, or agreements with boys under sixteen years of age with respect to such service, shall apply to all fishing vessels of twenty-five tons register tonnage and upwards. See the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41), s. 1.

20. All indentures with boys under this age to the sea-fishing service, and all indentures to that service, are to be entered into before a superintendent of mercantile marine, who is to satisfy himself that the requirements of the act have been complied with, that the boy is not under thirteen years of age, and is of sufficient health and strength, and that his nearest relatives assent to the apprenticeship and its stipulations, and he shall make an endorsement to that effect. All such indentures are to be in triplicate, one to be kept by the master, one by the boy, and one by the superintendent. Ibid. s. 4.

21. All such indentures are to be in the forms in the second schedule to the act, otherwise to be void. Her Majesty may by Order in Council annul, modify, or alter any of the provisions in the forms. Ibid. s. 5.

22. No boy under the age of thirteen years shall enter into any indenture of apprenticeship to the sea-fishing service; and any such indenture is void. Ibid. s. 6.

23. Any person who receives money or valuable consideration from any person for finding an apprentice, or in respect of a boy under sixteen years being bound by agreement with respect to the sea-fishing service, or from any one on his behalf, or from the boy or any one on his behalf in consideration of the boy being so bound; and every person who makes or causes to be made any such payment, is guilty of a misdemeanour. Ibid. s. 7.

24. All such indentures or agreements are void if not entered into before a superintendent of mercantile marine. Penalty against any person taking a boy to sea under a void indenture or agreement, £20. Ibid. s. 8.

25. For powers to superintendents to enforce the provisions of such agreements, whether void or otherwise, for the benefit of such boys, Ibid. ss. 9, 10 and 11.

7. Money Orders.*

26. For provisions enabling the Board of Trade to give facilities for remitting

* (6) The consul should point out to seamen that if they desire to send home any portion of their wages they can do so by money order, and he should do his best to promote thrift amongst them by this means. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 98, p. 30.

(7) To guard against diversity of practice among consular officers in the treatment of gains and losses by exchange arising on remittances to the Board of Trade, on account of foreign money orders issued to seamen, consuls are requested—

(a) As regards money deposited by seamen in sterling—To issue money orders for the sums so received (less the commission of 3*d.* in the £), and to convert such sums into currency at the rate of exchange actually ruling on the date of the issue of the money order.

(b) As regards money deposited by seamen in currency—To issue money orders for such sums (less the commission of 3*d.* in the £) at the rate of exchange actually ruling on the date of issue.

(c) As regards the schedule (F. M. O.¹)—To enter the amount in sterling, and the equivalent in currency of each money order issued, in the columns for “sterling” and “currency” respectively.

(d) As regards remittances to London—To remit, by means of short date bills or drafts payable in London, the actual equivalent in sterling of the total in currency of the orders issued, as shown in the schedule (F. M. O.¹), (together with the Board of Trade commission of 1*d.* in the £) on the amount of such orders. Ibid. par. 271, p. 77.

(8) For the list of ports at which seamen, by the system of seamen's foreign orders, are enabled to remit their wages home when they are paid abroad, Ibid. par. 271, pp. 77, 78.

(8a) In addition to the above the Indian Government authorize the issue of seamen's money orders at certain ports in India. Ibid. par. 272, p. 79.

(9) The system is to be confined to seamen only, and is not, under any circumstances, to be extended to masters of British merchant vessels. Ibid. par. 274.

(10) By means of these money orders, which may be issued in favour of the seamen themselves or their relatives or friends, seamen are enabled to remit the whole or any part of their earnings to the United Kingdom at a charge of 3*d.* in the £. Of this sum 2*d.* is to be retained by the consul as remuneration for his trouble, and 1*d.* is to be accounted for to the Board of Trade to cover variations of exchange. Ibid. par. 275.

(11) For the directions to be pursued by seamen and consuls in forwarding money orders, Ibid. par. 276—284, pp. 79—81.

(12) Money orders may be made payable at the following ports and creeks in the United Kingdom and Channel Islands, viz.: Aberdeen, Aberystwith, Alloa, Arbroath, Ardrossan, Ayr, Ballina, Banff, Barnstaple, Barrow, Beaumaris, Belfast, Berwick, Bideford, Blyth, Borrowstowness, Boston, Bridgewater, Bridport, Bristol, Carnarvon, Campbelltown, Cardiff, Cardigan, Carlisle, Castletown, Chepstow, Chester, Colchester, Cole-raine, Cork, Cowes, Dartmouth, Deal, Douglas, Dover, Drogheda, Dublin, Dumfries, Dundalk, Dundee, Exeter, Falmouth, Faversham, Fleetwood, Folkestone, Fowey, Fraserburgh, wages and other moneys of seamen and apprentices to their relatives or others by money orders issued by superintendents, and enabling the Board of Trade to cause the amount of any such money order to be paid though lost, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 177, 178.

27. Any public officer who grants or issues any money order with a fraudulent intent, is liable to be kept in penal servitude not exceeding four years. Ibid. s. 179.

8. Savings Banks.*

1. Generally.

28. For provisions for the establishment of savings banks for seamen at ports in the United Kingdom at mercantile marine offices or elsewhere, the appointment of treasurer, and the application to such banks of the acts now in force relating to savings banks, see 14 & 15 Vict. 1851 (c. 102), and M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 180; and further, as to same Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of August, 1879, pp. 61—77.

29. These provisions apply to all seamen and their wives and families, whether belonging to the royal navy, the merchant service, or other sea service. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 180, and M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 17.

30. For further provisions enabling the Board of Trade to establish in London a central bank for seamen, and branch savings banks at places in the United Kingdom, with powers to constitute mercantile marine offices, branches of such banks and superintendents of mercantile marine agents of the board in reference thereto, to make regulations for the conduct of savings banks, and providing that all criminal proceedings under the act shall be carried on like similar proceedings under the M. S. Act, 1854, see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 41.

2. Allotment Notes.

31. See Pt. II. p. 2149.

9. Arbitrations by Superintendent.

32. See tit. WAGES, Pt. I. c. 2, s. 3.

10. Measure of Liability when Part Owners.

33. The provisions contained in the ninth part of the M. S. Act, 1854, for the limitation of liability of owners, are not to lessen or take away any liability to which any master or seaman, being also owner or part owner of the ship to which he belongs, is subject in his capacity of master or seaman. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 516, and see generally thereon, tit. OWNERS, Pt. VI. p. 1334.

11. Liability when Families chargeable to Parish.

34. When during the absence of any seaman on a voyage his wife, children or stepchildren, or any of them, become chargeable to any union or parish in the United Kingdom, it shall be entitled to be reimbursed out of his wages earned during such voyage, sums expended during his absence in the maintenance of all or any of his relations, in the following proportions:—(1.) If only one, half of his wages; (2.) If two or more, two-thirds of his wages. Ibid. s. 192.

35. But if during his absence any sums have been paid by the owner to or for any such relation, under an allotment note, such claim for reimbursement shall be limited to the excess (if any) of the proportion of the wages before mentioned over the sums so paid. Ibid.

36. For the purpose of obtaining such reimbursement, the guardians or other parish officers in England, Ireland and Scotland, may give the owner notice in writing stating the proportion of the wages claimed, and requiring him to retain it for a period stated, not exceeding twenty-one days from the seaman's return to his port of discharge, and requiring such owner immediately on such return to give to such officers notice in writing thereof; such owner, after receiving such notice, shall be bound to retain the wages claimed, and give notice to them of the seaman's return, and to the seaman of the claim. The officers may upon the seaman's return apply in a summary way in England or Ireland to two justices having jurisdiction in such parish, and in Scotland to the sheriff of the county, for an order for such reimbursement; and such authority may make such order for reimbursement of the whole, or such less amount as they think fit; and the owner shall pay the amount so ordered and the remainder of the wages to the seaman. If no such order is obtained within the period mentioned in the notice to the owner the whole wages are payable to the seaman. Ibid. s. 193.

Gainsborough, Galway, Glasgow, Gloucester, Goole, Greenock, Grangemouth, Granton, Grimsby, Guernsey, Hartlepool, W., Hartlepool, E., Hayle, Harwich, Hull, Inverness, Ipswich, Jersey, Kircaldy, Kirkwall, Lancaster, Lilanelly, Leith, Lerwick, Littlehampton, Liverpool, London (Tower Hill), Londonderry, Lowestoft, Lyme, Lynn, Maldon, Maryport, Middlesbro', Milford, Newcastle, Newhaven, Newport (Monmouth), Newry, Padstow, Penzance, Perth, Peterhead, Plymouth, Poole, Portsmouth, Preston, Queenstown, Ramsgate, Rochester, Ross, Runcorn, Rye, Scarbro', Scilly, Shields, N., Shields, S., Shoreham, Skibbereen, Sligo, Southampton, Stockton, Stornoway, Stanraer, Sunderland, Swansea, Teignmouth, Tralee, Troon, Truro, Waterford, Wells (Norfolk), Westport, Wexford, Weymouth, Whitby, Whitehaven, Wick, Wisbeach, Wigtown, Woodbridge, Workington, Yarmouth, Youghal. Ibid. par. 285, pp. 81, 82.

12. Medical Inspectors.*

37. Any local marine board may, on request of the Board of Trade, appoint and remove a medical inspector of ships for the port, and fix his remuneration, subject to the control of the Board of Trade. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 226.

38. At ports where there are no local marine boards the Board of Trade may appoint and remove such inspectors, and fix their remuneration. Ibid.

39. It is the duty of such inspectors to inspect the medicines, medical stores, lime or lemon juice or other articles, sugar and vinegar, required to be kept on board any such ships (navigating between the United Kingdom and elsewhere, and every foreign-going ship except those mentioned in s. 224). Ibid.

40. Such inspection, if made at places where there are local marine boards, shall be made under their direction; and in special cases or at places where there are no local marine boards, under the direction of the Board of Trade. Ibid.

41. Such medical inspectors shall for the purposes of such inspection have the same powers as inspectors appointed by the Board of Trade (for which see tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. p. 1208. Ibid.

42. Every such inspector, if required by timely notice in writing from the master, owner, or consignee, shall make his inspection three days at least before

* (14) Applications for inspection of seamen should be made by masters or owners to the superintendent of the mercantile marine office at the outport on the form headed L. J. 10, and it, like other forms, may be obtained on application at the mercantile marine office. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Medical Inspection of Seamen, Circular of May, 1876, p. 2, and Instructions to Superintendents of August, 1879, p. 53.

(15) It contains a request that the officer will, as required by the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), examine the seamen whose christian and surnames are indorsed thereon, the number of seamen being inserted in the form. The form is then signed by the master or owner of the ship in the presence of the superintendent of the mercantile marine office of the locality, who, on his part of the form, certifies to its having been signed in his presence, and that the fees required (specifying them) have been received by him, and that the medical inspector is authorized to proceed with the examination as requested. This is dated and signed by the superintendent. Ibid.

(16) Two shillings a-head are to be paid by the master or owner for the seamen. The superintendent having brought his fees to account in schedule 9, forwards the document so filled up to the inspector for the port, who at once proceeds to examine the seamen. On completion of the examination he at once makes his report to the superintendent on form headed L. J. 11. This report is signed for each seaman inspected, and a duplicate is given to the owner or master. It contains the christian and surname of the man and the ship for which he was inspected, and further states that on a certain day the medical inspector examined the man and found he was fit for duty at sea, or not fit for duty at sea, for the reasons therein stated. It is signed and dated by the medical inspector and addressed to the superintendent of the mercantile marine office for the locality. The inspection is voluntary, and a seaman may decline to be inspected, and if he declines, the fact is noted in the form instead of the medical inspector's report as to the man's state. Ibid.

(16a) A list of the outports of the United Kingdom, giving the names and addresses of the medical inspectors upon it down to that time, is added to the Board of Trade Instructions as to the Medical Inspection of Seamen, Circular 322 A, May, 1876, No. 1324.

the ship proceeds to sea, and if the result is satisfactory shall not again make inspection before the commencement of the voyage, unless he has reason to suspect that some of the articles inspected have been subsequently removed, injured, or destroyed. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 226.

43. Whenever any such medical inspector is of opinion that in any such ship any of the articles are deficient in quantity or quality, or placed in improper vessels, he shall signify the same in writing to the chief officer of customs of the port, and also to the master, owner, or consignee; and thereupon the master, before proceeding to sea, shall produce to such chief officer of customs a certificate under the hand of the same or some other medical inspector, to the effect that such deficiency or impropriety has been remedied. Ibid.

44. Such chief officer of customs shall not grant a clearance without the production of such certificate, and if such ship attempts to go to sea without a clearance, may detain her until such certificate is produced. Ibid.

45. Penalty against owner, master or consignee, if such ship proceeds to sea without the production of such certificate, not exceeding £20. Ibid.

46. For provisions as to the medical inspection of seamen applying for employment, see the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 10.

13. Costs and Compensation for Frivolous Complaints.

See tit. Costs, c. 44, p. 415.

14. Stamp Duties and Forms.

47. All instruments which by the third part of this act (i. e. as to masters and seamen) are required to be made in forms sanctioned by the Board of Trade if made in such form; and all instruments used by or under the direction of the Board of Trade in carrying such part of this act into effect are exempt from stamp duty. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 9; see also Wilson v. Zulueta, No. 86, p. 2139.

15. Sea-going Fishing Vessels.

1. Generally.

48. See tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1235.

2. Under M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883.

(a) Generally.*

49. This act, and the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1880, the M. S. (Colonial) Act, 1869, and the M. S. (Colonial Inquiries) Act, 1882, may be cited collectively as the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1883, and shall be construed as though they formed one act. This act shall not apply to Scotland. See the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41), s. 1.

50. Such portions of the first part of this act as in any way relate to indentures of apprenticeship to the sea-fishing service, or agreements with boys under sixteen years of age with respect to such service, shall apply to all fishing vessels of twenty-five tons register tonnage and upwards. Such portions of the first part of this act as in any way relate to discipline, or the settlement of disputes between a skipper or owner and a seaman, or to deaths, injuries, punishments, ill-treatment and casualties, and sect. 25 (relating to the inspection by seamen of owners' books and accounts) shall apply to all fishing boats and to the whole fishing service. The remainder of the first part of the act shall apply to trawlers of twenty-five tons register tonnage and upwards, and to no other fishing boats. Ibid. s. 3.

51. In this act "fishing boat" means any vessel for the time being employed in the sea-fishing service, but shall not include a boat used by its navigators for catching fish otherwise than for profit. The onus of establishing any exemption or exception under this act shall be upon the person claiming such exemption. Ibid.

52. Vessels employed as tenders or carriers to fishing boats, or for the purposes of collecting and conveying to the land the catch of fishing boats, shall for the purposes of this act be deemed to be trawlers. Ibid. s. 52.

53. Ships engaged in the whale, seal, walrus or Newfoundland cod fisheries shall be deemed to be foreign-going ships within the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1883, and

* (17) As to the second hand being allowed in some circumstances to act as skipper in the skipper's absence, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of February, 1884.

not fishing vessels; provided, that the ships engaged in the Newfoundland cod fisheries do not belong to ports in Canada or Newfoundland. Ibid. s. 53.

54. The registered tonnage of a fishing boat registered under the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1883, and in the case of an unregistered fishing boat, a certificate stating her registered tonnage (ascertained according to the methods sanctioned by the said acts for the ascertainment of a ship's registered tonnage), and purporting to be given under the hand of a Board of Trade surveyor, shall be conclusive of the tonnage of such boat. Ibid. s. 3.

55. The Board of Trade may, by order under the hand of the President of the Board of Trade, to be published in the "London Gazette," exempt any class of such trawlers, or trawlers belonging to any port, from the whole or any portion of the first part of this act from the date in such order mentioned, and may in like manner extend all or any of the provisions of the first part of this act to any fishing boats in such order mentioned; and may in like manner from time to time alter, revoke or amend any order made by the Board as aforesaid. The Board may appoint inspectors, who shall have all the powers of inspectors under the M. S. Act, 1884, to make inquiries for the purposes of this section. Ibid.

55a. For provisions for the issue of certificates by the Board of Trade of competency and service of skippers, or as second hands of fishing boats, and that after the 1st of January, 1884, no fishing boat shall go to sea from any port in the United Kingdom unless the skipper thereof is holder of a certificate of competency or service entitling him to act as skipper, Ibid. ss. 37—42, and tit. TRADE, BOARD OF—, Pt. II. c. 3.

56. The Board of Trade may establish a register of skippers and second hands certificated as in this act referred to, and a copy or extract from the said register or the register of British shipping at any port, or of fishing boats at any port, purporting to be certified by the person having the custody thereof, or his deputy or assistant, shall be legal evidence of the matters therein stated. Ibid. s. 41.

57. When any seaman is, under the agreement, to be paid by a share in the catch, and any dispute arises as to his share, such seaman shall be entitled to inspect, at all reasonable times, the owner's accounts and books relating to such catch; and if any owner refuses or neglects to submit such accounts or books to such seaman's inspection upon demand made at a reasonable time, he shall, for each offence, incur a penalty not exceeding £20. Ibid. s. 25.

58. Every superintendent of a mercantile marine office shall inquire into and hear any dispute between a skipper or owner of a fishing boat and a seaman of a fishing boat as to a seaman's wages, or share of the profits of the voyage or trip, or share of a fishing catch or deductions therefrom, or concerning a seaman's engagement, service or discharge, which either the seaman, owner or skipper shall call upon him to decide; and his decision shall be final and binding on all parties, and shall at the request of either party be put in writing, and when so put in writing if it purports to be signed by him shall be receivable as evidence of the decision, and any facts therein stated in all legal proceedings whatever, and may be enforced by any justice of the peace who has jurisdiction. Ibid. s. 46.

59. As to the licensing of seamen's lodging-houses under the sanction of the Board of Trade by the sanitary authority, their inspection and other provisions relating thereto, Ibid. s. 48.

60. As to the records and reports to be made by the skipper of every fishing boat to the superintendents of mercantile marine offices of deaths, injuries, offences, punishments or ill-treatment occurring on board his boat while at sea in respect of any member of his crew, and the institution of inquiries, if necessary, by the superintendent of a mercantile marine office, Ibid. ss. 43—45.

61. For the offences of seamen and apprentices on board fishing vessels, and the punishments severally apportioned, Ibid. ss. 28—35.

62. For the purpose of jurisdiction, punishment, and legal proceedings and procedure, all offences under this act shall be deemed to be offences under the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1883, and every of them, Ibid. s. 51.

See c. 6, p. 2130.

(c) Shipping Agreements.

Part II.—ENGAGEMENT.

1. Shipping Agreement.

1. *Generally.

63. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the shipping of seamen in the United Kingdom applies to all seagoing British ships, wherever registered, and to their owners, masters and crews. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 119.

64. And so much thereof as relates to the shipping of seamen in foreign ports applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad when they are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters and crews. Ibid. s. 109.

65. "Seamen" in this act include every person (except masters, pilots, and apprentices duly indentured and registered), employed or engaged in any capacity on board any ship. Ibid. s. 2.

66. The master of every ship, except ships of less than eighty tons register, exclusively employed in trading between different ports on the coasts of the United Kingdom, shall, with every seaman he carries to sea from any port in the United Kingdom as one of his crew, enter into an agreement in a form sanctioned by the Board of Trade, dated at the time of the first signature thereof, and signed by the master before any seaman signs it. It is to contain the following particulars:— (1) The nature, and, as far as practicable, the duration of the intended voyage or engagement; (2) the number and description of the crew, specifying how many are engaged as sailors; (3) the time at which each seaman is to be on board or to begin work; (4) the capacity in which each seaman is to serve; (5) the amount of wages which each is to receive; (6) a scale of the provisions which are to be furnished to each seamen; (7) any regulations sanctioned by the Board of Trade as regulations proper to be adopted, and which the parties agree to adopt, as to conduct on board, and as to fines, short allowance of provisions, or other lawful punishments for misconduct. Every such agreement shall be so framed as to admit of stipulations, to be adopted at the will of the master and seaman in each case, as to advance and allotment of wages, and may contain any other stipulations which are not contrary to law. Ibid. s. 149.

67. If the master of any ship belonging to any British possession has an agreement with his crew made in due form according to the law of the possession to which such ship belongs or in which her crew were engaged, and engages single seamen in the United Kingdom, such seamen may sign only the agreement so made. Ibid.

68. Any agreement with a seaman made under the above sect. 149, may, instead of stating the nature and duration of the intended voyage or engagement, state the maximum period of the voyage or engagement, and the places or parts of the world (if any) to which the voyage or engagement is not to extend. See M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 7.

69. In home-trade ships, crews or single seamen may be engaged before a superintendent of a mercantile marine

* (18) Whenever a crew is engaged at a mercantile marine office for a long voyage, a copy of the notice to owners on this subject, and of the form Div. 3^a (referred to below), are to be inserted in the official log. See Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices of Sept. 1880, p. 6.

(19) For provisions as to apprentices, shipping seamen abroad, seamen's articles and penalties, see Revised Statutes of U. S. ss. 4509—4523. [AMERICAN.]

(20) Articles not signed by the master as required by the General Merchant Seamen's Act, 1844. (c. 112), s. 2, now repealed, cannot be enforced. The Lady Seaton, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 260. [LOWER CANADA.]

(21) The shipping articles must declare explicitly the ports at which the voyage is to commence and terminate. Mayes v. Moss, Gilpin, 219. [AMERICAN.]

(22) A seaman who contracts for a voyage is bound to a specific performance, and may not elect to pay damages for non-performance. Ex parte Pool, 2 Virg. Cas. 276. [AMERICAN.]

(23) As to shipping agreements by American law, see 1 Conkling's American Admiralty Law, p. 117 et seq., and Dunlap's American Admiralty Practice, pp. 219—240.

(24) If the further prosecution of the voyage becomes illegal by war, the original contract is dissolved. But if the mariners, with the consent of the master, remain on board and do duty, they are entitled to compensation in the nature of wages. The Saratoga, 2 Gallison's Rep. 178. [AMERICAN.]

office in the manner directed for foreign-going ships. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 155.

70. In cases where several home-trade ships belong to the same owner, the agreement with the seamen may be made by the owner instead of by the master, and the seamen may be engaged to serve in any two or more of such ships, provided the names of the ships and the nature of the service are specified in the agreement; but with this exception all the provisions relating to ordinary agreements for home-trade ships are applicable to agreements made in pursuance of this section. Ibid. s. 156.

71. Penalty if a master carries any seaman to sea without entering into an agreement with him in the form, manner, place, and time required, against the master in the case of a foreign-going ship, and against the master or owner in the case of a home-trade ship, not exceeding £5. Ibid. s. 157.

72. In the case of home-trade ships of more than eighty tons burden, no agreement shall extend beyond the next 30th of June, or 31st of December, or the first arrival of the ship at her final port of destination in the United Kingdom after such date, or the discharge of cargo consequent upon such arrival. Ibid. s. 162, sub-s. 1.

73. A mariner is entitled to know what is the precise voyage for which he undertakes. The Eliza, 1 Hagg. 186; The Minerva, Ibid. 350; The Countess of Harcourt, Ibid. 248; The George Home, Ibid. 375.

74. In a suit for wages an informality in the mode of hiring will not disqualify from remuneration if the work has been properly done. The Jane and Matilda, 1 Hagg. 193.

75. Independently of statute law, an agreement for wages may be made by word of mouth or in writing. The Prince George, 3 Hagg. 378.

76. The mariner's contract is for the mariner's protection. He incurs no forfeiture or penalty by not signing articles. It is only the master who does so. Ibid.

77. Ship's articles contained a printed clause (usual in the Baltic trade) to the effect that should the vessel winter abroad, on account of the ice, the officers and men agreed to accept half wages during such detention. The ship went out in search of a freight, when the ice prevented her from getting a cargo, but not from sailing without one, and she wintered abroad. Held, that there having been no negligence in endeavouring to procure a freight, the crew were entitled only to such half wages during such her detention. The Hoghton, 3 Hagg. 100.

2. Masters.

78. The law will presume that the terms of a master's engagement for one voyage extend, without a new agreement express or implied, to a succeeding voyage which has been performed. The Gananoque, 1 Lushington, 448.

3. Coasters under Eighty Tons Register.

79. The masters of ships of less than eighty tons register employed exclusively in trading between different ports on the coast of the United Kingdom are exempted from the necessity of entering into an agreement with their seamen, as provided by sect. 149 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104).

4. Home-trade Ships belonging to the same Owner.

80. In cases where several home-trade ships belong to the same owner, the agreement with the seamen may be made by the owner instead of by the master, and the seamen may be engaged to serve in any two or more of such ships, provided the names of the ships and the nature of the service are specified in the agreement; but with that exception all provisions therein contained which relate to ordinary agreements for home-trade ships are applicable to agreements under this section. Ibid. s. 156.

5. Construction.

81. Even prior to the power conferred by sect. 8 of the M. S. Act, 1880, c. 16, of

* (25) In the courts of law stricter principles of interpretation obtained, and the ignorance and improvidence of seamen, and their inability to appreciate the meaning and effect of a long multifarious instrument led to the frequent scandal of cases of great cruelty and injustice. See Mayne on Da-pages (4th ed.), p. 212.

(26) So, when the contract was to serve for a specified time for a specified sum, the plaintiff could not recover that sum upon the contract unless he had performed it, nor upon a quantum meruit, unless the non-performance arose from the defendant's act; therefore rescinding shipping agreements (see c. 2, p. 2148), seamen were, in the Court of where a seaman was hired for a certain sum, "provided he proceeds, continues, and does his duty on board for the voyage," and he died before the ship's arrival, it was held that no wages could be claimed, either upon the contract or upon a quantum meruit. Where the service had been determined before the natural time by the wrongful act of the defendant, some questions of nicety arose, both as to the amount that might be recoverable, and the mode in which it must be sued for. See Mayne on Damages, 106.

(27) Or if a sailor, hired for a voyage, took a promissory note from his employer for a certain sum, on condition that he did his duty on board for the voyage, and before the arrival of the ship, he died, no wages could be claimed. Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 320, and see same as to special contracts with seamen, 2 Smith's Leading Cases (8th ed. by Maude and Chitty), p. 1; and Jesse v. Roy, 1 C. M. & R. 316; 4 Tyr. 626; Hulle v. Heightman, 2 East, 145; 4 Esp. 75; M' Auliff v. Bicknell, 2 C. M. & R. 263; 1 Gale, 232; 5 Tyr. 1035; Melville v. De Wolfe, 4 El. & Bl. 844; 3 C. L. R. 960; 1 Jur. N.S. 758; 24 L. J. Q. B. 200.

(28) So, when a written agreement was made, it became the only evidence of the contract between the parties, and a mariner could not recover anything agreed to be given in reward for his service not specified in the articles. Thus, a promise to pay the mate of a ship, employed in the slave trade, the average price of a slave, if not in writing, could not be enforced (see White v. Wilson, 2 B. & P. 116; and The Isabella, 2 W. Rob. Adm. Rep. 241), and the same with respect to a promise to pay to a sailmaker, serving in a ship of the East India Company, a monthly sum beyond the wages in the ship's articles signed by him as sailmaker. Elsworth v. Woolmore, 5 Esp. N. P. C. 84.

(29) In the absence of a written agreement a claim will lie by way of "quantum meruit." A woman sued in the Court of Admiralty for wages for services as cook and steward, and as keeper of the ship and her stores in harbour and dock; she also acted as mariner. Payment was resisted, on the ground of her sex, but the court observed that if the work had been done and properly done, it entitled the performer to remuneration for such employment. The Jane and Matilda, 1 Hagg. Adm. Rep. 187. As to claims for wages on a quantum meruit, see further Ealcan v. Thom, 5 Esp. 6; Hillyard v. Mount, 3 C. & P. 93; White v. Mattison, 2 Stark, 325; Jesse v. Roy, 1 C. M. & R. 316; 4 Tyrw. 626.

(30) The M. S. Act, 1854 (o. 104), like its predecessor, does not render a verbal agreement for wages void, but imposes a penalty on the master, if the agreement is not in conformity with its provisions.

(31) A seaman of a fishing vessel made a special contract for wages, and afterwards was fraudulently induced to sign shipping articles, agreeing to go on shares. Held, that he might recover on the first contract. Baker v. Corey, 19 Pick. 496. [AMERICAN.]

(32) It is the duty of the master to see that the contract between him and the seamen is clear and explicit. If it be doubtful, the construction most favourable to the seamen will be adopted. Jansen v. Heinrich, Crabbe, 226. [AMERICAN.]

(33) Any stipulations in shipping articles, which derogate from the general rights and privileges of seamen, will be held void in Admiralty, unless both the nature and operation of the stipulation were fully explained to the seamen, and an additional compensation was allowed, entirely adequate to the new restrictions imposed thereby. Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumner, 443; Harden v. Gordon, 2 Mason, 541. [AMERICAN.]

(34) The right to wages is not founded on the articles, but on the service. Mahoon v. Brig Gloucester, Bee, 395. [AMERICAN.]

(35) If a seaman ships on a general trading or freighting voyage, without any limitation of time or any fixed terminus of the voyage, either party may put an end to the contract at pleasure, provided it is not done at a time or under circumstances particularly inconvenient or injurious to the other party. The Crusader, Ware, 437.

(35a) If the shipping articles do not sufficiently describe the voyage, the seaman may leave the vessel at any time; and if the master imprison him because he refuses to remain, this is a tort. Snow v. Wope, 2 Curtis, C. C. 201. [AMERICAN.]

(36) If the master of a ship after the commencement of the voyage be by sickness disabled from pursuing it, and a new master is appointed, the shipping contract with the seamen is not thereby dissolved. U. States v. Hamilton, 1 Mason, 443; U. States v. Haines, 5 Gilpin, 272. [AMERICAN.]

(36a) So of the death, removal, or resignation of the original master. U. States v. Cassidy, 2 Sumner, 582; Bray v. Ship Atalanta, Bee, 48, 49; Orne v. Townsend, 4 Mason, 541. [AMERICAN.] See also The Brunswick, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 139 (Lower Canada); 2 Boulay Paty, 182; Valin, 1532, Liv. 2, tit. 7, art. 2.

(37a) As to the use of the term "Continent of Europe between the river Elbe and Brest" for "Continent of Europe," see Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls of April, 1886.

(38) As to the engagement of crews of foreign-going ships, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices of August, 1879, pp. 7—21; as to home-trade ships and passenger ships, Id. pp. 32—35; and as to colonial ships, Id. p. 36.

Admiralty, considered as favourites of the law, and placed particularly under its protection against circumvention, and even misapprehension and error. The Hoghton, 3 Hagg. 112; The Minerva, 1 Hagg. 358; The Elizabeth, 2 Dodson, 407; The Jupiter, 2 Hagg. 221; The Madonna D'Idra, 1 Dodson, 39; The Juliana, Ibid. 463; Neave v. Pratt, 2 N. R. 408.

82. So the court would consider how far the clauses of the agreement were reasonable and consistent with justice; bearing in mind the ignorance and imprudence of seamen. The Prince Frederick, 2 Hagg. 396; The Luna, 3 Hagg. 359; The Test, Ibid. 306.

83. And give the mariner the benefit of any doubt. The Hoghton, 3 Hagg. 112.

84. Stipulation in ship's articles "to return to a port in Europe." Ship lost at the mouth of the Thames. A seaman who sued under the contract for wages for some years' service, held, not barred by the stipulation. The Minerva, 1 Hagg. 357.

85. By a clause in the ship's articles, the seamen serving on board were to lose their wages if they did not return with the ship to the port of London. After serving twenty-seven months, some of the seamen were, with the consent of the captain, exchanged into another ship. Held, that if these seamen had lost their wages under the articles, they were entitled to a reasonable compensation for their services under the count for work and labour. Hillyard v. Mount, 3 Car. & P. 93; Pennell v. McIntyre, July 19, 1845; 17 Jur. 567 [SCOTCH]; Dickman v. Benson, 3 Camp. 290.

86. By ship's articles it was agreed that seamen's wages should be so many dollars per month, payable in United States currency or its equivalent. At the time of discharge the equivalent of a dollar of the United States currency did not exceed the sum of 2s. 1d. of British money. It was proved to be customary in the ports of London and Liverpool to pay wages, payable in dollars, at the rate of 4s. 2d. per dollar. Held, that even supposing the stipulation in the articles was explained to the seamen before signing (which, semble, it was not) it was invalid, as an imposition on such a class of men as seamen, and wages pronounced for after the rate of 4s. 2d. per dollar. The Annie Sherwood, 2 Asp. 214; 12 L. T. N.S. 582; 13 W. R. 641, 695.

87. The amount of wages due to a seaman under his contract was greatly lessened by a depreciation of the currency at the date of his claim, and it did not appear at what rate his wages were to be calculated. The court allowed him wages at the fullest rate. The Nonpareil, 33 L. J. Adm. 201.

88. The plaintiff signed articles to serve as steward at £3 per month, upon a voyage from Liverpool to the West Coast of Africa and back, "the crew, if required, to be transferred to any other ship in the same employ." The plaintiff served on board, pursuant to these articles, for a portion of the voyage, when he was transferred to another vessel of the defendant, on a promise by the master that the rate of pay for the rest of the voyage should be increased to £4 per month; and for this fresh articles were accordingly signed. On the return of the plaintiff to England, the defendant refused to pay the increased rate. Held, that the plaintiff was bound to serve under the original articles, and that there was therefore no consideration for the master's promise to pay the increased wages. Fraser v. Hatton, 3 Jur. N.S. 694; 26 L. J. C. P. 226; 2 C. B. N.S. 512.

89. Held, that where the contract was left imperfect as to the amount of wages, it was open to both parties to supply the omission by parol evidence, notwithstanding that the 2 Geo. 2, c. 36 (now repealed), directed that such agreements should be conclusive and binding. The Harvey, 2 Hagg. 82; The Prince George, ibid. 378.

* (39) If seamen be shipped without signing articles, wages at the highest rate are recoverable. See Conkling's American Admiralty Law, 117; see also Parsons on American Admiralty Law, 574—576, and vol. i. p. 466.

(39a) For caution to seamen signing agreements for payment at a fixed rate of exchange, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of August, 1882, and Ibid. of April, 1884.

(40) A seaman disrated from a higher station by reason of incompetency, and afterwards duly performing the duties of a lower station, would, it would seem, be entitled to the wages due in respect of each station while he filled it. See Conkling, Ibid. 117.

(c) *Designation of Voyage.

90. In interpreting the second section of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 19 (since repealed) the words "nature of the voyage," which is thereby directed to be specified in the mariner's contract, must have such a rational construction as to answer the leading purpose for which that section was framed, that is, to afford to the mariner as much certainty as to the import of his contract as is consistent with the reasonable convenience of trade, viz. a fair intimation of the nature of the service in which he is about to engage himself by such contract. The Westmoreland, 1 W. Rob. 227.

91. The M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 149, clause 1, requires that the ship's articles should set forth the nature, and, as far as practicable, the duration of the intended voyage or engagement, and therefore the time specified in articles is only to be viewed as a particular of the intended voyage, and the substance of the articles being the performance of the voyage therein described, whether the assigned period fall short or exceed the actual time named, the voyage, if at all undertaken by the seamen, must be fully carried out and completed by them. The American Union, 5 (IRISH) Jur. N.S. 380.

92. Ship's articles specified the port of delivery thus: "until her return to a port of discharge in Great Britain or continent of Europe (in either case the voyage to end in Great Britain), and term of time not to exceed three years." Held, that on the arrival of the ship at Cowes the seamen were entitled to their discharge, and were not bound then to proceed to Holland. The Westmoreland, 1 W. Rob. 226.

93. Seamen executed articles for a period not exceeding two years, and back to a port of final discharge of cargo in the United Kingdom. Held, not justified in leaving their vessel and demanding payment of their wages at a port of call for orders only, even although the period of two years has expired. Action for wages dismissed. The Triumph, 5 (IRISH) Jur. N.S. 381; see also The Louisa Bertha, 14 Jur. 1007.

94. The voyage in the mariner's contract was described as "from London to Batavia, the East India Seas, or elsewhere, and until the final arrival at any port or ports in Europe." Held, not such a sufficient indication of the ulterior port of destination as was due to the mariner, or to satisfy the 2 Geo. 2, c. 36, and that on the arrival of the ship at Cowes for orders the seamen were not bound to proceed on a further voyage to Rotterdam. The George Home, 1 Hagg. 370; see also Minerva, ibid. 347, 361.

95. Under a mariner's contract to navigate the ship "to Van Diemen's Land, vid Cork and elsewhere, and back to London," the ship sailed to Sydney, thence to Batavia, and arrived in the Downs. Held, that the refusal of a mariner to work under such contract from the Downs to Rotterdam did not work a forfeiture of wages. The Countess of Harcourt, 1 Hagg. 248.

6. Execution.(a) Generally.

96. In the case of all foreign-going ships registered in her Majesty's dominions—(1.) Every agreement made in the United Kingdom (except in the cases of agreements with substitutes therein provided for) shall be signed by each seaman

* (41) A mariner shipped on a voyage "from Boston to the Pacific, Indian, and Chinese Oceans, or elsewhere, on a trading voyage, and from thence back to Boston," two months' wages to be paid on arrival at Canton. Held, that the outward voyage terminated at Canton, and that it was not a desertion in a mariner to leave the ship there, and refuse to return to the north-west coast. Brown v. Jones, 2 Gallis. 477. [AMERICAN.]

(42) Shipping articles declared the voyage to be "from Philadelphia to South America or any other port or ports backwards and forwards, when and where required, and back to Philadelphia." Held, no violation of the contract with the seamen for the master to proceed from South America to Europe, and no justification to them for leaving the vessel. Magee v. Moss, Gilpin, 219. [AMERICAN.]

(43) Shipping articles for a voyage "from Philadelphia to Gibraltar, other ports in Europe or South America, and back to Philadelphia," authorize a voyage directly from Gibraltar to South America, without proceeding to any intermediate European port, but not a return afterwards from South America to a European port. Douglas v. Eyre, Gilpin, 147. [AMERICAN.]

(43a) A description in shipping articles, of a voyage from New London to Oporto and elsewhere, means a voyage from New London to Oporto; and the words "and elsewhere" will be rejected for uncertainty. Ely v. Pectt, 7 Conn. 239. See Brown v. Jones, 2 Gallis. 477. [AMERICAN.]

in the presence of a superintendent of a mercantile marine office: (2.) Such superintendent shall cause the agreement to be read over and explained to each seaman, or otherwise ascertain that he understands it before he signs it, and shall attest each signature: (3.) When the crew is first engaged the agreement shall be signed in duplicate, and one part shall be retained by the superintendent, and the other part shall contain a special place or form for the descriptions and signatures of substitutes or persons engaged subsequently to the first departure of the ship, and shall be delivered to the master: (4.) In the case of substitutes of seamen who have duly signed the agreement, and whose services are lost within twenty-four hours of the ship's putting to sea by death, desertion, or other unforeseen cause, the engagement shall, when practicable, be made before a superintendent; and when it cannot be so made, the master shall, before the ship puts to sea, if practicable, and if not, as soon afterwards as possible, cause the agreement to be read over and explained to the seamen, who shall sign the same in the presence of a witness, who shall attest their signatures. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 150.

97. When crews or single seamen of home-trade ships are not engaged before a superintendent, the master shall, before the ship puts to sea, if practicable, and if not as soon afterwards as possible, cause the agreement to be read over and explained to each seaman, who shall sign it in the presence of a witness, who shall attest his signature. Ibid. s. 155.

(b) Alterations.

98. Every erasure or alteration in any agreement with seamen (except additions made as directed as to substitutes) is inoperative, unless proved to have been made with their consent, by the written attestation (if made in her Majesty's dominions) of some superintendent, justice, or other public functionary, or (if made out of such dominions) of a British consular officer, or, where there is no such officer, of two respectable British merchants. Ibid. s. 163.

7. Fraudulent Alteration.

99. The fraudulently altering or making any false entry in, or delivering a false copy of, any agreement, is a misdemeanour. Ibid. s. 164.

8. Stipulations.

(a) Generally.*

100. Every shipping agreement may be so framed as to contain any other stipulations which are not contrary to law. Ibid. s. 149.

101. Every stipulation in any agreement inconsistent with any provision of this act is wholly inoperative. Ibid. s. 182.

102. Semble, a regulation that "every seaman committed to custody for the preservation of good order shall forfeit his wages, together with everything belonging to him on board the ship," is, in point of law, a good and proper regulation. Rice v. Haylett, 3 Car. & P. 534.

(b) In bar or Limitation of Rights.

103. No seaman can by any agreement forfeit his lien upon the ship, or be deprived of any remedy for the recovery of his wages to which he is entitled; every stipulation in any agreement inconsistent with any provision of this act, and every stipulation by which any seaman consents to abandon his right to wages in the case of the loss of the ship is inoperative. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 182.†

104. All stipulations in any agreement whereby any seaman incurs any forfeiture or loss if he enters into her Majesty's naval service are void. Ibid. s. 214.

(c) Regulations for Discipline sanctioned by Board of Trade.‡

105. In the agreement with every seaman whom he carries to sea from the

* (44) As to the stipulations to be inserted in articles of agreement for steam and sailing ships in regard to the load-line, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices of January, 1886.

† (45) A similar enactment was contained in the preceding act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 5; and see the powers now given to the courts to rescind contracts, c. 2, p. 2148.

‡ (46) The following Regulations for maintaining discipline sanctioned by the Board of Trade, in pursuance of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), are distinct from and in addition to those contained in the act, and are sanctioned but not universally required by law. All or any of them may be adopted by agreement between a master and his crew, and thereupon the offences specified in such of them as are so adopted will be legally punishable by the appropriate fines or punishments. These Regulations are numbered, and the numbers of

United Kingdom to be entered into by | less than eighty tons registered tonnage,
 the master of every ship except ships of | exclusively employed in trading between such of them as are adopted must be inserted in the space left for that purpose in the agreement, and a copy of these Regulations must be made to correspond with the agreement by erasing such of the Regulations as are not adopted, and must then be attached to and kept with the agreement which the master of the ship takes to sea with him. If the agreement is made before a superintendent, his signature or initials must be placed opposite such of the Regulations as are adopted.

For the purpose of legally enforcing any of the following penalties the same steps must be adopted as in the case of other offences punishable under the act; that is to say, a statement of the offence must, immediately after its commission, be entered in the official log-book by the direction of the master, and must at the same time be attested to be true by the signatures of the master and the mate, or one of the crew, and a copy of such entry must be furnished, or the same must be read over, to the offender, before the ship reaches any port or departs from the port at which she is, and an entry that the same has been so furnished or read over, and of the reply, if any, of the offender, must be made and signed in the same manner as the entry of the offence. These entries must, upon discharge of the offender, be shown to the superintendent before whom the offender is discharged, or, in the case of a home-trade ship, to some superintendent at or near the place where the crew is discharged, and if he is satisfied that the offence is proved, and that the entries have been properly made, the fine must be deducted from the offender's wages, and paid over to the superintendent.

If, in consequence of subsequent good conduct, the master thinks fit to remit or reduce any fine upon any member of his crew which has been entered in the log, and signifies the same to the superintendent, the fine shall be remitted or reduced accordingly. If wages are contracted for by the voyage or by share, the amount of the fines is to be ascertained in the manner in which the amount of forfeiture is ascertained in similar cases under sect. 252.

	Offence.	Amount of Fine or Punishment.
1	Not being on board at the time fixed by the agreement . . .	Two days' pay.
2	Not returning on board at the expiration of leave . . .	One day's pay.
3	Insolence or contemptuous language or behaviour towards the master or any mate . . .	One day's pay.
4	Striking or assaulting any person on board or belonging to the ship . . .	Two days' pay.
5	Quarrelling or provoking to quarrel . . .	One day's pay.
6	Swearing or using improper language . . .	One day's pay.
7	Bringing or having on board spirituous liquors . . .	Three days' pay.
8	Carrying a sheath-knife . . .	One day's pay.
9	Drunkenness—First offence . . .	Two days' half allowance of provisions.
	Ditto Second offence . . .	Two days' pay.
10	Neglect on the part of the officer in charge of the watch to place the lock-out properly . . .	Two days' pay.
11	Sleeping or gross negligence while on the look-out . . .	Two days' pay.
12	Not extinguishing lights at the times ordered . . .	One day's pay.
13	Smoking below . . .	One day's pay.
14	Neglecting to bring up, open out, and air bedding, when ordered . . .	Half a day's pay.
15	(For the cook)—Not having any meal of the crew ready at the appointed time . . .	One day's pay.
16	Not attending Divine service on Sunday, unless prevented by sickness or duty of the ship . . .	One day's pay.
17	Interrupting Divine service by indecorous conduct . . .	One day's pay.
18	Not being cleaned, shaved, and washed on Sundays . . .	One day's pay.
19	Washing clothes on a Sunday . . .	One day's pay.
20	Secreting contraband goods on board with intent to smuggle . . .	One month's pay.
21	Destroying or defacing the copy of the agreement which is made accessible to the crew . . .	One day's pay.
22	If any officer is guilty of any act or default which is made subject to a fine, he shall be liable to a fine of twice the number of days' pay which would be exacted for a like act or default from a seaman, and such fine shall be paid and applied in the same manner as other fines,

See Pt. II. p. 2149.

(f) For Deductions from Wages.

See tit. WAGES, c. 17.

(g) Provisions and Regulations for Short Allowance.

106. The shipping agreement is to contain—A scale of the provisions to be furnished to each seaman; and any regulations as to short allowance of provisions sanctioned by the Board of Trade, and which the parties agree to adopt. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 149.

9. Special Agreement.

107. In the construction of special agreements between owners and mariners the Court of Admiralty will take into consideration the disparity of intelligence between the contracting parties, and lean to afford protection to the mariner. The Minerva, 1 Hagg. 355; The Elizabeth, 2 Dodson, 487; The Hoghton, 3 Hagg. 112; The Jupiter, 2 Hagg. 221; The Madonna D'Idra, 1 Dodson, 39; The Exeter, 2 C. Rob. 261; Buck v. Atwood (1726), Stra. 761.

108. The plaintiff signed articles to serve as steward in the defendant's vessel at £3 per month, upon a voyage "from Liverpool to the west coast of Africa, to trade in any ports, bays, or rivers therein, and back to a final port of discharge in the United Kingdom, or for a term not to exceed three years." The articles contained amongst other things the following provision: "The crew, if required, to be transferred to any other ship in the same employ, and not to trade on their own account." The plaintiff served on board for a portion of the voyage, when he was transferred to another vessel of the defendant in the same trade, on a promise by the captain that the rate of pay should be £4 per month, and fresh articles were accordingly signed. On the ship's return the defendant refused to pay the increased rate, but offered to pay at the rate of £3 per month for the whole service. Held, first, that the plaintiff's service was limited to three years, and therefore the articles were not invalid for being in the alternative. Fraser v. Hatton, 3 Jur. N.S. 694; 26 L. J. C. P. 226; 2 C. B. N.S. 512.

109. Secondly, that the provision for transferring the crew to another ship was not contrary to the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 93, s. 546. Ibid.

110. Thirdly, that the provision for transfer was not limited to a transfer of the whole crew collectively, but that the articles constituted an agreement between the owners and each of the crew for himself, and consequently that he was bound to serve under the original articles, and there was therefore no consideration for the master's promise to pay the increased wages. Ibid.

111. Held, fourthly, that there had been no neglect by the defendant, without sufficient cause, to pay the plaintiff at the rate of £3 per month, so as to entitle the plaintiff to double pay for such neglect under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 187. Ibid.

112. Held, lastly, that the circumstance of the fresh articles not having been executed in the presence of a consular agent, was not an objection to their validity, provided they could have been set up. Ibid.

113. The plaintiff and the defendant, a foreign agent resident in England, on behalf of P. at Havana, entered into a written agreement that the plaintiff would proceed as fireman and stoker on board a steamer, about to leave London for Havana, to be placed in the service of P., and should receive wages of £5 per month, payable monthly, and £2 per month for provisions. During the outward voyage, rations were to be served out to the plaintiff on account of P.; the contract was to be in force for one year; and if the plaintiff was discharged before that time, three months' wages were to be paid in advance, and a homeward passage. Held, first, that the agreement did not require a stamp, being within the exemption in the 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, sched. tit. AGREEMENT. Wilson v. Zulueta, 14 Q. B. 405; 14 Jur. 366; 19 L. J. Q. B. 49; 14 J. P. Q. B. 23; 14 L. T. 251.

114. Held, secondly, that the defendant was liable for breaches of this agreement by not serving rations during the outward passage, by the discharge of plaintiff before the steamer arrived at Havana, and by the non-payment of three months' wages in advance. Wilson v. Zulueta, 14 Q. B. 405; 14 Jur. 366; 19 L. J. Q. B. 49; 14 J. P. Q. B. 23; 14 L. T. 251.

115. A seaman engaging to receive a portion of the profits of the voyage in lieu of wages may maintain an action for wages against the master, and is not a partner. Wilkinson v. Frasier, 4 Esp. 182. And see Dry v. Boswell, 1 Camp. 329; Pott v. Eyton, 3 C. B. 32.

116. The defendant, in consideration of the plaintiff having interest at N., to procure a homeward cargo, engaged him as master. The plaintiff delivered the outward cargo, but being unable to obtain an advantageous cargo at N., obtained one elsewhere, and brought it and the vessel home. In an action for wages, held, that there was a sufficient consideration, as the contract had been executed, and there was only a partial failure of consideration. Mills v. Blackall, 11 Q. B. 358; 12 Jur. 93; 17 L. J. Q. B. 31.*

116a. As to agreements with fishermen to be paid by a share of the profits of the fishing voyage, see M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 8.

10. Time Agreements.

117. The owner of home-trade ships or his agent may enter into time agreements, in forms sanctioned by the Board of Trade, with individual seamen to serve in one or more ships belonging to him. These agreements need not expire on the 30th June or the 31st December, provided a duplicate of each agreement be forwarded to the registrar-general of shipping within forty-eight hours after it has been entered into. See the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 16.†

11. Fishing Vessels.

See No. 115, supra.

11a. Under M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883.

118. The skipper of every fishing boat shall enter into an agreement with every seaman (not being a boy under an agreement under the act) whom he carries to sea from any port of the United Kingdom as one of his crew; and every such agreement shall be in a form sanctioned by the Board of Trade, and shall be dated on the first day of signature thereof, and shall be signed by the skipper before any seaman signs the same, and shall contain, besides the particulars enjoined by s. 149 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104) (as to which, see No. 66, p. 2136), and instead of sub-s. 5 of s. 149, the remuneration which each seaman is to receive, whether in wages or by a share of the catch, or in both ways, and the time from which each seaman's remuneration is to commence. See M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41), s. 13.

119. The following rules shall be observed with respect to agreements, that is to say—

(1) The skipper shall cause the agreement to be read over and explained to each seaman, or otherwise ascertain that he understands it before he signs it, and shall attest each signature.

(2) The agreement is to be signed in duplicate; one part shall be sent by the skipper to the superintendent of the mercantile marine at the port of departure, and retained by him; and the other part, which is to contain a special place or form for the description or signatures of the substitutes or persons engaged subsequently to the first departure of the fishing boat, shall be retained by the skipper.

(3) In the case of substitutes engaged in the place of seamen who have duly signed, and whose services are lost by death, desertion, or other causes, the skipper shall, before the fishing boats put to sea, if practicable, and if not, as soon afterwards as possible, cause the agreement to be read over and explained to the seamen, who shall sign the same in the presence of the skipper, who shall attest their signatures. Ibid. s. 14.

* (47) If seamen bargain for a certain proportion of the ship's freight instead of wages in money, in case freight is not to be had for her when she arrives at the port for which she was bound, and she must go further in quest of it, the seamen must go with her. See Brown's Civ. and Adm. Law, 179.

120. The agreement may be made by the owner or managing owner instead of by the skipper, and the seamen may be engaged to serve in two or more vessels of the same owner if the names of the vessels and the length and nature of the service, and the rate, periods, and mode of payment are specified. Ibid. s. 15.

121. The owners of every fishing boat shall, within forty-eight hours of the boat's departure from port on any voyage, send or cause to be sent to the superintendent of the mercantile marine at the port of departure a true report in a form to be sanctioned by the Board of Trade stating the names of the skipper, seamen, and apprentices who have gone to sea in her, and such other particulars as the Board may require. Penalty for default not exceeding £5. Ibid. s. 19.

121*a*. If a skipper carries to sea any seaman with whom no agreement has been made in manner and from and at the time and place required by the act. Penalty not exceeding £5 for each seaman. Ibid. s. 20.

12. Running Agreements.

122. As regards foreign-going ships making voyages averaging less than six months in duration, running agreements with the crew may be made to extend over two or more voyages, but so that no such agreement shall extend beyond the next following 13th of June or 31st of December, or the first arrival of the ship at her port of destination in the United Kingdom after such date, or the discharge of cargo on such arrival; and every person entering into such agreement, shall enter into and sign the same as required for other foreign-going ships. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 151.

122*a*. In cases of running agreements, the duplicate agreement retained by the superintendent upon the first engagement of the crew shall be transmitted to the registrar-general of shipping and seamen immediately, or be kept by the superintendent until its expiration, as the Board of Trade directs. Ibid. s. 153.

(b) Engagement pending.

123. The master of every foreign-going ship for which a running agreement is made is upon every return to any port in the United Kingdom, before the termination of the agreement, to engage before the superintendent of a mercantile marine office at such port any seaman he is required by law so to engage, and is, upon every such return, to indorse on the agreement a statement that no such engagements have been made, or are intended to be made, before the ship again leaves port, or that all such engagements have been duly made as required, and is to deliver the agreement so endorsed to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office. Penalty against any master who willfully makes a false statement in such indorsement not exceeding twenty pounds. The superintendent of a mercantile marine office is also to sign an indorsement on the agreement to the effect that the provisions of this act relating thereto have been complied with, and to re-deliver the agreement to the master. Ibid. s. 152.

123*a*. As to similar duties of the master of such a ship in regard to the discharge of any seaman before the termination of the agreement, see No. 163, p. 2151.

(c) Transmission or Delivery.

124. In the case of home-trade ships of more than eighty tons burden, the master or owner shall within twenty-one days after the 30th June and 31st December in each year transmit or deliver to some superintendent in the United Kingdom every agreement made within the six calendar months preceding. Penalty for default against master or owner, not exceeding £5. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 162, as amended by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 15.

(d) Fees.

125. For determining the fees to be paid upon the engagement and discharge of seamen under running agreements, the crew shall be considered engaged when the agreement is first signed, and discharged when the agreement finally terminates, and all intermediate engagements and discharges shall be considered to be engagements and discharges of single seamen. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 154.

* (49) As to running agreements, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of August, 1879, pp. 30—32.

(e) *Under M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883.

126. In the case of fishing boats making voyages averaging less than six months in duration, running agreements with the crew may be made to extend over two or more voyages, or any number of weeks, but so that no such agreement shall extend beyond the next following 30th June or 31st December, or the first arrival of the fishing boat at her port of destination in the United Kingdom after such date, or the discharge of cargo consequent upon such arrival: but persons discharged from boats under such agreements shall be discharged in manner provided by this act. See the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41), s. 16.

126a. Upon every return to port the skipper is to endorse upon every running agreement all engagements and discharges of seamen which have been made, or the fact that none have been, or are intended to be, made before the boat leaves port. Penalty against any skipper who knowingly makes a false statement £5. Ibid. s. 17.

127. The skipper of every fishing boat before finally leaving any port for sea during the continuance of a running agreement after the first making of it, shall sign and send to the nearest mercantile marine office a full and accurate statement in a form sanctioned by the Board of Trade, of every change which has taken place in his crew. Penalty for breach, £5. Ibid. s. 21.

13. In British Possessions.

128. Every master of a ship registered in the United Kingdom who engages any seaman in any British possession, or if such ship belongs to any British possession, engages any seaman in any British possession other than that to which the ship belongs, shall, if there is where such seaman is engaged any official superintendent or other officer duly appointed for shipping seamen, engage such seamen before him, and if there is no such officer, then before some officer of customs; and the same rules, qualifications, and penalties as to the engagement of seamen before superintendents in the United Kingdom apply to such engagements in a British possession. Upon every such engagement such officer shall indorse on the agreement an attestation that the same was signed in his presence and otherwise made as required; and if such attestation is not made, the burden of proving that the seaman was duly engaged lies upon the master. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 159.

14. Out of Her Majesty's Dominions.†

129. Every master of a British ship who engages any seaman out of her

† (50a) Whenever a seaman is engaged in any British ship in any port where there is a consul, the sanction of the consul must be obtained; the consul must cause the agreement to be read over and explained to the seaman, or otherwise ascertain that the seaman understands it before he signs it. The seaman must then sign it in the consul's presence, or if he cannot write must make his mark. In no case is any other person to be allowed to sign or make a mark for him. The consul must attest the signature, and indorse on the agreement a statement in the form in Appendix G. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 50, p. 20.

(51) The consul, if he have any suspicion that a seaman is making a false statement as to his own name, or that of his last ship, should warn him that it will render him liable to a penalty of £5. The consul should ask each seaman to produce his discharge from his last ship. Ibid. par. 51, p. 20.

(52) In cases where an agreement has been made with seamen, and the parties to it desire to make an alteration in it while at a foreign port, all persons interested in the alteration must appear before the consul and signify their consent, and the consul must indorse upon the agreement an attestation that the alteration has been made with such consent in the form in Appendix H. Ibid. par. 52, p. 20.

(53) In certain countries the engagement of the subjects of those countries on foreign service is illegal, unless they are provided with certificates from the competent authorities to the effect that there is no objection to their accepting such service. The consul should, therefore, if such a law is in force in the country to which he is accredited, warn masters of British ships, and any natives wishing to ship on board a British ship, that if they do not comply with the laws of the country in this matter, they must bear the responsibility, as her Majesty's Government will not interfere to relieve them from any consequences that may ensue, and the consul should refuse his sanction to the engagement of such natives unless they be provided with the necessary certificate. Ibid. par. 53, p. 20.

(54) Agreements entered into at a foreign

Majesty's dominions where there is a British consular officer shall, before carrying the seaman to sea, procure the sanction of such officer, and engage the seaman before him; and the same rules as to the engagement of seamen before shipping masters in the United Kingdom apply to such engagements before consular officers. Upon every such engagement the consular officer shall indorse upon the agreement his sanction thereof, and an attestation that it was signed in his presence and otherwise made as required. Penalty for breach against master not exceeding £20. If this indorsement and attestation is not made upon the agreement, the burden of proving the engagement lies upon the master. Ibid. s. 160.

129a. So much of the third part of this act as relates to shipping of seamen in foreign ports applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad, when such ships are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. Ibid. s. 109.

15. Lascars or Asiatics.

130. Any master or owner of a ship, or his agent, may enter into agreements with Lascars or natives of the territories of the East India Company, binding them to proceed to any port or ports in the Australian colonies as seamen or passengers, and there to engage themselves as seamen in any ship there, and bound to the United Kingdom, or any other part of her Majesty's dominions; and any such master or owner, or his agent, may enter into agreements with such Asiatics, binding them to proceed to any port or ports in the United Kingdom, as seamen or passengers, and there to enter into a further agreement to serve as seamen in any ship there, and bound to any port in such territories. Ibid. s. 544, and M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 23.

131. But every such agreement must be made in such form, and under such conditions for securing the return of such Asiatics to their own country, and for other purposes, as the Governor-General of India in council, or the governors of the respective presidencies in which the agreement is made, may in council direct. If any such Asiatic so bound is, on arrival, required to enter into a further agreement to serve as a seaman in any ship bound for the United Kingdom, or other parts of her Majesty's dominions, or to any port in the territories of the East India Company, as the case may be, and it is certified by the properly appointed officer for that purpose that such further agreement is a proper one for him to enter into, and in accordance with the first agreement, that the ship is a proper ship for him to serve in, and that there is not, in the opinion of such officer, any objection to the performance of the first agreement, such Asiatic shall be port within home-trade limits for a run to a port or ports within such limits, must be on the form (Eng. 1) for foreign articles. Ibid. par. 54; p. 21.

(55) On the expiration of the original period stipulated an agreement cannot be extended, as the contract becomes void. Ibid. par. 55, p. 21.

(56) The master and crew being in attendance, the consul should see that the provisions of the act (ss. 44, 46) as to the master's name being on the ship's register, are complied with. The provisions of the M. S. Acts which require that masters, mates, or engineers shall possess certificates of competency or service, relate only to cases in which ships go to sea from ports in the United Kingdom, and the consul cannot enforce the engagement of certificated officers. When, however, a master, mate, or engineer holds a certificate of competency or service, it should be produced to the consul, and the number of it should be inserted opposite the name of the possessor in any form in which his name appears; and whenever he does not hold one he should be reminded of the provisions of s. 136 of the

M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and s. 5 of the M. S. Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), which would be enforced if the ship at any time in the course of the voyage should go to sea from the United Kingdom. Ibid. par. 61, p. 22.

(57) Certificates of competency of equal validity with those issued by the Board of Trade are issued in certain of the colonies. For particulars of these certificates, see pars. 45—48. Ibid. par. 62, p. 22.

(57a) A stipulation is sometimes inserted in agreements to the effect that the crew may be discharged at some port on the continent of Europe, and some misunderstanding has prevailed as to the effect of such stipulations. Masters should be made to understand that it does not enable them to discharge their crews in a foreign port without the sanction of the consul, or relieve them from the necessity of providing the men with a passage home. Seamen should be made to understand that in the event of their being discharged abroad under such a stipulation they will in all probability not be held entitled to wages for any time subsequent to their discharge. Ibid. par. 66, p. 23.

bound to execute, or deemed to be engaged under such further agreement, and to serve in the ship, and to be one of the crew: for every such Asiatic in respect of whom such certificate is applied for, the applicant shall pay to such officer such fee as may be appointed, not exceeding ten shillings. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 23.

16. Posting up.

132. The master shall at the commencement of every voyage or engagement cause a legible copy of the agreement (omitting signatures) to be put up in a part of the ship accessible to the crew, penalty for default not exceeding £5. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 166.

17. Evidence.

(a) Generally.

133. An abandonment of a ship relied upon as operating as a dissolution of the seamen's contract must be clearly proved. The Warrior, 1 Lushington, 476.

134. Any seaman may bring forward evidence to prove the contents of any agreement or otherwise to support his case, without producing or giving notice to produce the agreement or any copy thereof. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 165.

135. In an action by a seaman to recover wages, the defendant is compellable to produce the ship's articles. Johnson v. Llewellyn, 1 Taunt. 386; 6 Esp. 101.

136. For the old cases as to the production of the agreement, see The Lord Hobart, 2 Dodson, 103; Martin q. t. v. Greenleaf, 2 Esp. 729.

(b) As to Official Log-books.

137. See tit. EVIDENCE, c. 16, p. 434.

18. Fees.*

138. As to the fees to be fixed by the Board of Trade, and payable upon all engagements and discharges effected before superintendents of mercantile marine offices, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 125, 126.

2. Jurisdiction to rescind Agreements.

139. When a proceeding is instituted in any court as to any dispute between an owner or master and a seaman or apprentice, incidental to their relation as such, or for the purpose of this section, the court may rescind any contract between them, including that of apprenticeship, upon such terms as it may think just. This power is in addition to any other jurisdiction of the court. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 8.

141. As to the old cases in reference to the construction of shipping agreements, see pp. 2137, 2138.

3. Implied Obligation of Seaworthiness by Owners.

1. Generally.

142. In every contract of service, express or implied, between the owner of a ship and the master or any seaman, and in every instrument of marine apprenticeship, there shall be implied, notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary, an obligation on the owner, that he, the master, and the agent charged with the loading, preparing, or sending her to sea, shall use all reasonable means to insure the seaworthiness of the ship for the voyage at the time it commences, and during the same; but nothing shall subject the owner to any liability by reason of the ship being sent to sea in an unseaworthy state where, owing to special circumstances, the so sending her is reasonable and justifiable. See M. S. Act, 1876, (c. 80), s. 5.

* (58) For provisions abolishing all fees on the engagement and discharge of seamen before superintendents in the United Kingdom, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of August, 1882.

(58a) As to consular fees, see Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls of August, 1885, and table of fees issued therewith.

2. Coasters.

143. The provisions of this act do not apply to any vessel employed exclusively in going from place to place in any river or inland water of which all or part is in British possession. Ibid. s. 44.

4. List of Crew, Births, Marriages, Deaths, &c.

See tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1250.

5. List of Changes in Crew before Sailing.

6. Allotment Notes.*

1. Generally.

141. All allotment notes are to be on Board of Trade forms. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 168.

2. In whose Favour.

145. The wife, father or mother, grandfather or grandmother, child or grandchild, brother or sister of any seaman in whose favour an allotment note of part of his wages is made, may, unless the seaman is shown in manner therein mentioned to have forfeited or ceased to be entitled to his wages, and subject, as to the wife, to the provision therein contained, recover the sums allotted by the note, with costs, from the owner or any agent who has authorized the drawing of the note, either in the county court or in the summary manner in which seamen are by this act enabled to sue for and recover wages not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 169; and see No. 149, infra.

146. The word "owner" in the 169th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (c. 104), where certain remedies are given against an "owner" on an allotment note does not in all cases mean the registered owner. The meaning of the word must be restrained to such actual owner for the time being (e.g. a charterer in some cases) of the ship as either himself or his master or other authorized agent manages and controls her, and enters into the agreement for the wages of which the allotment note is part. Meiklereid v. West, 1 Q. B. D. 428; 45 L. J. M. C. 91; 3 Asp. N.S. 129.

147. The wife of any seaman who deserts her children, or so misconducts herself as to be undeserving of support from her husband, thereupon forfeits all right to further payments of any allotment of his wages made in her favour. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 169.

3. Stipulations as to—in Shipping Agreements.

148. All stipulations for the allotment of any part of the wages of a seaman during his absence made at the commencement of the voyage are to be inserted in the agreement. Ibid. s. 168.

149. Every agreement with a seaman required by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), to be made on a Board of Trade form shall, if the seaman so require, stipulate for the allotment of any part not exceeding one-half of the wages of the seaman in favour of one or more of the persons mentioned in sect. 169 (for which see No. 145, supra) of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), as amended by this section. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 3.

4. On Savings Banks.

150. The allotment may be made in favour of a savings bank, according to Board of Trade Regulations, and sect. 169 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), shall be construed as if those persons were named in the Regulations. Ibid. s. 3, sub-s. 2.

151. The sum received in pursuance of such allotment by a savings bank is to be paid out only on application, through a superintendent of a mercantile marine office or the Board of Trade, or by the seaman himself, or, in case of death, by some person to whom it might be paid under sect. 199 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). Ibid.

* (59) See also the arrangements as to allotment notes contained in the Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of September, 1880, and May, 1881.

(59a) Allotment notes in Form L. when altered in manuscript are not allotment notes in the form sanctioned by the Board of Trade, and are therefore liable to stamp duty. Ibid. of February, 1886.

5. Payment.

152. A payment under an allotment note begins at the expiration of one month, or, if the allotment is in favour of a savings bank, of three months, from the date of the agreement, or at such later date as may be fixed by the agreement, and is to be paid at the expiration of every subsequent month, or of such other periods as may be fixed by the agreement, and is paid only in respect of wages earned before the date of payment. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 3, sub-s. 4.

6. Recovery.

154. In any such proceeding it is sufficient for the claimant to prove that he or she is the person mentioned in the note, and that the note was given by the owner or master or other authorized agent; and the seaman shall be presumed to be duly earning his wages, unless the contrary is shown to the satisfaction of the court, either by the official statement of the change in the crew caused by his absence signed by the master, as by this act required, or by a duly certified copy of some entry in the official log-book to the effect that he has left the ship, or by a credible letter from the master of the ship to the same effect, or by such other evidence as the court considers sufficient. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 169.

See also Nos. 145—147, supra.

7. Evidence.

See tit. EVIDENCE, p. 463.

Part III.—DISCHARGE.

1. *Generally.

155. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the discharge of seamen in the United Kingdom applies to all seagoing British ships, wherever registered, and to their owners, masters, and crews. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

156. It is not necessary for a mariner to prove his own discharge; the onus of proof is thrown on the other party. The Baltic Merchant, Edwards, 89.

157. A mariner dismissed the ship without lawful cause is not to be deemed a deserter. Limland v. Stephens, 3 Esp. 269; Sigard v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 72.

158. The plaintiff signed ship's articles for a voyage from Liverpool to ports in America. The ship sailed on the 5th November, 1853. During the voyage the master shot one of the crew, and the ship was taken into Monte Video, and on the 5th May, 1854, the British consul

(61) For provisions as to the discharge of seamen, see Revised Statutes of U. S. ss. 4549—4553. [AMERICAN.]

(62) If the person substituted as master after the signing of articles is grossly incompetent to the duties of his station from want of due skill, or from grossly bad habits, or from profligate or cruel behaviour, the seamen may be justified in refusing to do duty, or to remain by the ship. U. States v. Cassidy, 2 Sumner, 582. [AMERICAN.]

(63) A Court of Admiralty will not discharge a seaman from his contract on account of a punishment by the master, unless in a clear case of an abuse of power. Turner's case, Ware, 83. [AMERICAN.]

(64) If seamen are induced to ship by a false representation as to the person who is to command, whether they are bound by the contract, quære? U. States v. Nye, 2 Curtis, C. C. [AMERICAN.]

(65) The master is not ordinarily justified in dissolving the contract with a seaman and discharging him for a single fault, unless it is of a highly aggravated character. Smith v. Treat, Daveis, 266. See also Hutchinson v. Combs, 7 Jur. 37; Ware, 65. [AMERICAN.]

(66) The causes for which a seaman may be discharged are ordinarily such as amount to a disqualification, and show him to be an unsafe or an unfit man to have on board the vessel. Smith v. Treat, Daveis, 266. [AMERICAN.]

(67) To justify seamen for leaving a vessel before the termination of the voyage, on account of the cruelty of the master, it must be apparent that they could not remain without extreme danger to their personal safety. Magee v. The Moss, Gilpin, 219. [AMERICAN.]

there, in pursuance of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, ss. 59, 60 (now repealed), sent the master to England for trial, with the witnesses, the plaintiff being one. In an action for wages, held, that the plaintiff having been separated from the ship at a foreign port by authority of the British legislature, and sent to England without any reasonable possibility of his ever being able to rejoin the ship during the voyage, the contract must be considered as dissolved by the supreme authority of the state, which was binding on both parties. Melville v. De Wolf, 1 Jur. N.S. 758; 3 C. L. R. 960; 24 L. J. Q. B. 200; 4 El. & Bl. 844.

2. Before Superintendent.

159. As to all British foreign-going ships registered in her Majesty's dominions, all seamen discharged in the United Kingdom shall be discharged and receive their wages in the presence of a superintendent, except where a competent court otherwise directs; penalty for breach against master or owner not exceeding £10. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 170, and see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices of August, 1879, pp. 21—30; as to passenger ships, Ibid. pp. 32—35, and as to colonial ships, Ibid. p. 36.

159a. And see as to home-trade ships, Ibid.

3. Delivery of Shipping Agreement to Superintendent.

160. The master of every foreign-going ship shall, within forty-eight hours after the ship's arrival at her final port of destination in the United Kingdom, or upon the discharge of the crew, whichever first happens, deliver the agreement with his crew to a superintendent at the place; and such superintendent shall then give to the master a certificate of such delivery; and no officer of customs shall clear any foreign-going ship inwards without the production of such certificate. Penalty for default against master not exceeding £5. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 161.

4. Delivery of List of Crew, and other Particulars, to Superintendent.

161. As to the lists to be made out on Board of Trade form by masters of British and foreign ships whose crews are discharged in the United Kingdom, and as to the delivery thereof to a superintendent, see tit. WAGES, c. 19, s. 3.

5. Under Running Agreements.

1. Generally.

162. In the case of foreign-going ships making voyages averaging less than six months every person engaged under a running agreement if discharged in the United Kingdom shall be discharged as required in the case of seamen belonging to other foreign-going ships. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 151.

162a. As to discharge under running agreements, under M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41), see No. 126, p. 2146.

2. Pending.

163. The master of every foreign-going ship for which such a running agreement is made shall, upon every return to any port in the United Kingdom before the termination of the agreement, discharge before the superintendent at such port any seaman he is required by law so to discharge, or shall upon every such return indorse on the agreement a statement that no such discharges have been made, or are intended to be made, before the ship again leaves port, or that all such discharges have been duly made as required, and shall deliver the agreement so indorsed to the superintendent. Penalty against any master who wilfully makes a false statement in such indorsement not exceeding £20. The superintendent shall also sign an indorsement on the agreement to the effect that the provisions of this act relating thereto have been complied with, and re-deliver it to the master. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 152.

163a. As to similar duties of the master of such a ship, as to the engagement of any seaman pending the running agreement, see Pt. II. p. 2145.

163b. As to running agreements, Ibid.

6. By Naval Court.

164. Every naval court may discharge any seaman from his ship, and all orders by such court are conclusive in any subsequent legal proceedings. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 263; see also 18 & 19 Vict. c. 91, s. 18.

165. As to the proper constitution of a naval court, see tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. II. p. 690.

7. Masters.

See tit. MASTERS, c. 3, p. 1118.

8. Certificated Mate.

166. Any mate whose certificate of competency or service has been retained by the master, shall on his discharge or on payment of his wages have his certificate returned to him by the master, besides receiving the requisite certificate of discharge (as to which see No. 172, infra, and No. 210, p. 2159). Penalty for breach against master not exceeding £20. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 172.

167. In the case of any British ship transferred or disposed of out of H. M.'s dominions, the certificate is to be similarly returned by the master to the mate. Ibid. s. 205.

9. Change of Owners or Master.*

168. If the master dies on the voyage and the chief mate succeeds him, the crew are bound by the ship's articles, though the chief mate may be a foreigner. Renno v. Bennett, 3 G. & D. 54; 3 Q. B. 768; 6 Jur. 902; 12 L. J. Q. B. 17.

*(68) The seaman, notwithstanding a change of owners or master, continues bound to complete his original engagement, the contract itself being considered as a contract with the ship. The Scotia, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 166 [LOWER CANADA]; and see United States v. Nye, 2 Curtis, C. C. 225. [AMERICAN.]

(71) Though the consul has no magisterial power, he has the right to withhold his sanction to the discharge of a seaman and authority to summon a naval court. These powers, if properly exercised (or if not exercised the possession of them), should be sufficient to enable a consul to exercise a very considerable influence in settling disputes between masters and their crews, and may practically afford a means of punishment of many minor offences by an arrangement between the parties that certain deductions should be made from wages or certain sums should be paid as compensation. It will be for the consul to decide whether it is fit and proper in the circumstances of each case that it should or should not be settled without reference to a naval court. He will be able to point out what fines and penalties provided by the M. S. Acts are applicable, and will also in many cases have an additional guide in the terms of the agreement, which specifies fines for certain offences. But he should always remember that the consent of both parties is necessary to such settlements, and that his position is not that of a magistrate but of an arbitrator. In grave cases, however, he will do well to avail himself of the assistance of a naval court. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 173, p. 51.

10. Before Commencement of Voyage or One Month's Wages earned.

169. Any seaman who has signed an agreement, and is afterwards discharged before the commencement of the voyage, or before one month's wages are earned, without fault on his part justifying such discharge, and without his consent, is entitled to receive from the master or owner, in addition to any wages earned, compensation not exceeding one month's wages, and may, on adducing satisfactory evidence thereof, recover such compensation as wages. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 167.

abroad, when such ships are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

172. Whenever any British ship is transferred or disposed of out of her Majesty's dominions, and any seaman or apprentice does not in the presence of some British consular officer or, if none there, of one or more respectable British merchants there not interested in the ship, signify his consent in writing to complete the voyage if continued, and whenever the service of any seaman or apprentice of any British ship terminates out of her Majesty's dominions, the master shall give to each of them a certificate of discharge on the proper Board of Trade form, and, besides paying his wages, provide him with adequate employment on board some other British ship bound to the port in her Majesty's dominions at which he was shipped, or to such other port there as is agreed upon, or furnish the means of sending him back there, or provide him with a passage home, or deposit with such consular officer or merchant a sum of money deemed by such officer or merchants sufficient to defray the expenses of his subsistence and passage home; and such consular officer or merchants shall indorse upon the shipping agreement particulars of such payment, provision, or deposit. Ibid. s. 205.

173. If the master of any British ship discharges any seaman or apprentice in any place in any British possession abroad without previously obtaining sanction in writing indorsed on the shipping agreement of some superintendent or similar officer appointed by the local government, or, in his absence, of the chief officer of customs at or near the place, he is guilty of a misdemeanour, and the functionary shall examine into the grounds of such proposed discharge in a summary way, and may administer oaths for the purpose, and grant or refuse such sanction as appears just. Ibid. s. 207. See also The Camilla, Swabey, 312; 6 W. R. 840; 31 L. T. 282.

174. Upon the trial of any proceeding for discharging any seaman or apprentice contrary to this act, it lies on the master to produce the sanction, or prove that he obtained it, or that it was impracticable for him to obtain it. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 208.

175. If any seaman or apprentice belonging to any British ship is discharged or left behind out of the United Kingdom, without the master's full compliance with all the provisions in this act, and becomes distressed and is relieved under this act, or if any subject of her Majesty, after having been engaged by any person (as principal or agent) to serve in any ship belonging to, or to the subject, of any foreign power, becomes distressed and is so relieved, the wages due to such seaman or apprentice, and all expenses for his subsistence, necessary clothing, conveyance home, and burial, in case he should die abroad before reaching home, shall be a charge upon the ship, whether British or foreign; and the Board of Trade may in the name of her Majesty (besides suing for the penalties incurred) recover the wages and expenses, with costs, from the master, the owner for the time being, or, in the case of such engagement for service in a foreign ship, from such master or owner, or person by whom the engagement was made. Ibid. s. 213.

176. Such sums shall be recoverable in the same manner as other debts due to her Majesty, or in the same manner and by the same form and process in which wages due to the seaman would be recoverable by him; and in any proceedings for that purpose, production of the account (if any) to be furnished as hereinbefore provided, together with proof of payment by the Board of Trade or the paymaster-general of the charges incurred, shall be sufficient evidence that the man was relieved, conveyed home, or buried (as the case may be) at her Majesty's expense. Ibid. s. 213.

177. The Court will not award conduct money in the case of a British registered ship. The Patriotto, 11 L. T. N.S. 149; 8 (IRISH) Jur. N.S. 317; 2 Asp. 129.

12. Deviation.*

178. A strict observance of the specified conditions of the mariner's contract as to the voyage is required from the owner. A spontaneous deviation of importance therefrom entitles mariners to their discharge by the law of England; but aliter as to deviations arising from unavoidable accident, necessity, or overruling authority. Where by some other codes such alterations are permitted, the mariners are held entitled to be compensated. Mariners should be compensated for all material deviations. The Cambridge, 2 Hagg. 247, 252.

179. If the master vary the voyage, the seaman can only demand payment for the time he served the ship in port if he do not choose to accompany her on her new destination. The seamen cannot compel the execution of the original contract. The Elizabeth, 2 Dodson, 408.

180. The master having set out on a further voyage, not specified in the mariner's contract, and having altered the contract accordingly without the consent of the seamen, they quitted the ship without permission. Claim for wages pronounced for, with half wages from the time of their quitting the ship. The Eliza, 1 Hagg. 182.

181. The voyage stated in the ship's articles to be from London to Madras and Calcutta, and back to the port of London, was deviated from under a new charter-party to the extent of going to the Prince of Wales' Island, and from thence to Calcutta, occasioning the delay of a month. The deviation was not notified, but was known at Madras to the crew, who were dissatisfied, but did not remonstrate. A mariner, on arriving at Calcutta, demanded his discharge, and refused to work in discharging the cargo, for which he was put in irons till the unloading was completed, when he quitted the vessel. Held, that such proposed deviation entitled the mariner to his discharge at Madras; that his remaining on board and doing duty on the altered voyage was not an implied consent, nor as the vessel was not, under such new charter-party, to return direct from Calcutta to England, a renewal of his engagement. Wages up to his quitting the ship pronounced for, with costs; though the court inclined to the opinion that the mariner had acted illegally in refusing to work in the discharge of the cargo. The Cambridge, 2 Hagg. 243.

13. Conclusion of Voyage generally.†

* (74) An alteration of the voyage excuses the mariners for leaving the vessel. Potter v. Allen, 2 Root, 63; Moran v. Baudin, 2 Pet. Ad. 415. [AMERICAN.]

(75) A change of voyage from that specified in the shipping articles must be actually resolved on and known to a seaman, to authorize him to leave a vessel without forfeiting his wages. Douglas v. Eyre, Gilpin, 147. [AMERICAN.]

(76) It is not such deviation as will discharge seamen from their articles, if a ship, through necessity of repairs, puts into a port to make them, and it is the duty of the seamen to remain by the vessel if the repairs can be made within a reasonable time. Botker v. Towner, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 132. [AMERICAN.]

(77) The shipping articles authorized the master to touch at certain intermediate ports, or as he might direct. Held, no violation of his contract with the seamen to stop at a place not named, and no justification to them for leaving the vessel. Wood v. The Nimrod (Magee v. Moss), Gilpin, 83. [AMERICAN.]

(78) Seamen shipped for "a voyage from the port of Liverpool to Constantinople, thence (if required) to any ports or places in the Mediterranean or Black Seas, or wherever freight may offer, with liberty to call at a port for orders, and until her return to a final port of destination in the United Kingdom, or for a term not to exceed twelve months." The ship went to Constantinople, then returned to Malta, whence, instead of going to a port of destination in the United Kingdom, she came direct to Quebec in search of freight. Held, that coming to Quebec could not be considered a prosecution of the voyage. The Varuna, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 357. [LOWER CANADA.]

† (79) In the absence of a written contract a seaman is bound by an implicit contract to remain with the ship till the voyage is ended and the cargo discharged. Jansen v. Heinrich, Crabbe, 226. [AMERICAN.]

(80) Generally the termination of a voyage is not completed by the unloading of the cargo at or coming to a port of delivery, but by arrival at the port whence the vessel set out, if the contract was for the whole voyage and not by the run or freight. See 2 Brown's Civ. and Adm. Law (2nd ed.), p. 185. tinuation or delivery. In a voyage from England to Newfoundland, and thence with fish to Spain, held, that Newfoundland was not a port of delivery. Herniman v. Bawden, 3 Burr. 1844.

183. The articles stipulated for a run to the port of Hull, and the port being too full for entry, the vessel anchored in the mouth of the river, and the seamen left. Held, that the vessel had not arrived at the port of Hull. Wages forfeited by reason of such desertion, though held not to be a malicious desertion. The Pearl, 5 C. Rob. 224.

184. The master having set out on a further voyage, not specified in the mariners' contract, and having altered the contract accordingly without the consent of the mariners, they quitted the ship without permission. Claim for wages pronounced for. The Eliza, 1 Hagg. 182.

14. Change of Adventure.*

185. The plaintiff was engaged by the defendant for a voyage not to exceed twelve months from London to any port or ports in North or South America and back to Europe. After sailing war was declared between Spain and Peru, and the vessel was then employed as a tender or store ship to two Peruvian vessels of war, and sailed under the orders of a Peruvian officer. The vessel having put into Rio, the plaintiff refused to proceed any further, and landed, when he was arrested by the Peruvian authorities as a deserter from a Peruvian vessel, and imprisoned for some days. On coming out of prison he found the vessel had sailed with his clothes, &c., on board. The plaintiff subsequently brought an action against the defendant for a breach of the contract under which he shipped. Held (Bramwell, B. dubitante), that the contract was to employ the plaintiff on an ordinary commercial voyage, and that the manner in which the vessel had been employed, if not absolutely illegal under the 59 Geo. 3, c. 69, at any rate amounted to a breach of such contract. Burton v. Pinkerton, L. R. 2 Ex. 340; 86 L. J. Ex. 137; 2 Asp. 494, 547.

186. Held, also, that he was entitled to damages for loss of wages, and that he was entitled to something under the head of general damage for some of the inconveniences he had suffered, but that (Kelly, C. B., dissenting) he was not entitled to anything for the loss of his clothes, or for the imprisonment, such damage being too remote. Ibid.

(81) When a seaman ships for a general trading voyage, with no limitation except as to time, the master has a right to his services for that time, between such ports as he may choose, and if he deserts before the expiration of the time, his wages, earned before such desertion, are forfeited. Noble v. Steele, 42 Maine, 518. [AMERICAN.]

(82) If the shipping articles do not sufficiently describe the voyage, a seaman may leave the vessel at any time, and if the master imprison him because he refuses to remain and do duty on board, this is a tort. Snow v. Wope, 2 Curtis, C. C. 301. [AMERICAN.]

(83) By the well-settled principles of maritime law, where seamen employed for a voyage, or by the month, voluntarily leave the vessel before the termination of the voyage, or the expiration of the time for which they hired, without good cause, or the consent of the master, they will thereby forfeit the wages previously earned. The Swallow, Olcott, Adm. 4. [AMERICAN.]

off, and comes to her moorings, the voyage is not ended, and consequently wages are not earned until she has arrived at her moorings. Taber v. Nye, 12 Pick. 105. [AMERICAN.]

* (85) The desertion of seamen during a second voyage substituted by parol agreement, for a series of voyages, for which a written contract had been made, and afterwards terminated by consent, cannot be made to enure to the master as a forfeiture of wages earned and due under the first one. Piehl v. 16. Sale or Transfer of Ship.

188. When a change of ownership in a British ship takes place, by sale in this country, whilst she is in a foreign port, the contract under which the crew shipped is (quoad the new owner) at an end; but if one of the crew continues to serve on board the vessel at the request of an agent of the new owner without entering into any fresh articles, and afterwards, and before the termination of the contemplated voyage, quits with the consent of the master appointed by the new owner, he may, in an action against such new owner, recover wages pro rata. Robins v. Power, 4 C. B. N.S. 778; 4 Jur. N.S. 810; 27 L. J. C. P. 257.

(94) A vessel was sold under a decree of the Admiralty at Providence, R. I., at the suit of others of the crew. The libellants had notice of the proceedings, but did not apply for their wages. Held, that their lien on the vessel was at an end. Trump v. The Ship Thomas, Bee, 86. [AMERICAN.]

(95) A vessel sailed with a cargo on a voyage from New York to New Orleans and back. She remained at New Orleans more than a year after her arrival, waiting for freight, when the master discharged the seamen, and persuaded them to return with him in another vessel to New York, and get their wages. Afterwards the vessel was sold while at New Orleans, and went a voyage to Liverpool, and thence to New York. Upon her arrival in New York, she was libelled by the seamen for their wages. Held, that the forbearance of the seamen to libel the vessel in the port of their discharge was no waiver of their lien, and that they were entitled to full wages to the time of their return to New York. The Mary, Paine, 180. (97) Unseaworthiness of a vessel releases the crew from obligation to sail with her, and on showing such condition of the vessel, and that they left her on that account, they may maintain an action in personam for wages here, although all parties are foreigners, and are under agreement not to sue while abroad. The Moslem, Olcott, Adm. 289, 378; *United States v. When a seaman signs articles at a foreign port there is an implied warranty of seamanship, and if the ship is unseaworthy, there is consideration for a new contract for extra reward to induce him to sail in her. Turner v. Owen, 3 F. & F. 176; see also Hartley v. Ponsonby, 7 El. & Bl. 872; 3 Jur. N.S. 746; 26 L. J. Q. B. 322; 5 W. Rob. 659.

19. Wreck, or Loss of Ship.

194. The seaman is bound to navigate the ship even in adverse weather inducing shipwreck, and to exert himself to save as much of the ship and cargo as he can. The Neptune, 1 Hagg. 236; The Warrior, 6 L. T. N.S. 133; 1 Lushington, 476.

195. The authority of the master does not merge in the misfortune of wreck, nor are the seamen at liberty, without staying a reasonable time for the recovery of parts of the ship and cargo (if there be any prospect in his judgment of such recovery), immediately to disperse themselves without some discharge from him. The Neptune, Ibid. 238.

196. When a merchant ship is abandoned at sea sine spe revertendi aut recuperandi in consequence of damage received and the state of the elements, such abandonment taking place bond fide and by order of the master for the purpose of saving life, the contract with the mariners is concluded. The Florence, 16 Jur. 572.

197. If upon a ship being wrecked the master, improperly disregarding the interests of the owners, discharges the seamen, the discharge is nevertheless valid, unless the seamen are proved to have fraudulently accepted their discharge. The Warrior, 1 Lushington, 476; 6 L. T. N.S. 133.

198. The master, also co-owner of a ship wrecked in a foreign port, finding it impossible to repair her to a profit, sold the wreck, and on intimation to the other co-owners in this country they did not elect to abandon, but took the benefit of the sale. The master returned home, and was engaged for a considerable period adjusting matters with the underwriters, who would not settle without certain explanations from the master. Held, in an action against his co-owners, that he was entitled to payment of his passage money home, and his wages as master from the period of the wreck down to the settlement with the underwriters, the wages being viewed as fixing the rate of charge quod agent of the co-owners. McLagan v. Chime, March 3rd, 1848; 10 D. 847; 20 Jur. 296. [SCOTCH.]

199. Every stipulation by which any seaman consents to abandon his right to wages in the case of the loss of the ship is wholly inoperative. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 182.

200. In all cases of wreck or loss of ship, proof that the seaman has not exerted himself to the utmost to save the ship, cargo, and stores, bars his claim to wages. Ibid. s. 183.

201. Where the service of a seaman terminates before the period contemplated in the agreement by reason of the wreck or loss of the ship, the seaman is entitled to wages for the time of service prior to such termination, but no further. Ibid. s. 185.*

* (98) For the old law prior to this enactment, see The Neptune, 1 Hagg. 239; 7 Jur. 542; Appleby v. Dodds, 8 East, 300; Dunkley v. Bulwer, 6 Esp. 86; 2 Camp. 320, n.; 1 Sid. 179; 7 Jur. 542; Anon., 2 Show. 283; Saunders v. Drew, 3 B. & A. 445; Brown v. Ives, Har. & W. 238; The Reliance, 2 W. Rob. 122.

(99) Under the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 17, now repealed, the seaman was required to produce the certificate of some officer of the ship that "he had exerted himself to the utmost to save the ship," and thus the payment of his wages was contingent on the master being found, and if found, on his consent to certify. Now, however, the onus of proof rests on those who impugn the conduct of the seaman, and who can more readily (if he failed in the performance of his duty) adduce evidence of the fact than he could for establishing the opposite proposition. Digby Seymour on the M. S. Act, 1854, p. 134.

(100) When a voyage is broken up by shipwreck, the master's wages cease from the time the ship and cargo pass out of his hands. For securing and remitting funds to the owners, he is entitled to a just remuneration. McGilvery v. Stackpole, 38 Maine (3 Heath), 283. [AMERICAN.]

(101) The duty of a master of a vessel is not discharged in case of disaster until the ship is in a place of safety, or in case of loss, until the proceeds which may be saved are placed at the disposal of the owners, and he is entitled to recover a quantum meruit for such services, and his expenses for board and medical attendance after the disaster. Duncan v. Reed, 39 Maine (4 Heath), 415. [AMERICAN.]

(102) A master employed by the owners of a vessel, though paid by the charterer, has no claim upon the charterer for his services after the wreck of the vessel, in superintending labourers employed by the owners and the underwriters in saving the vessel and cargo. McGilvery v. Capen, 7 Gray (Mass.), 523.

(103) The crew of a vessel are not authorized to make without the order of the master a jettison of any part of the cargo in case of a distress. The Nimrod, Ware, 9. [AMERICAN.]

(104) Seamen deserting a vessel, under circumstances of distress or danger, forfeit their wages, and are answerable for the damages which may be sustained in consequence of their dereliction of duty. The Woodrop Sims, 2 Pet. Adm. 393. [AMERICAN.]

(105) The contract of the seamen is not dissolved by shipwreck; but they are bound to labour to preserve the wreck of ship and cargo; and if they leave the ship without endeavouring to save them they desert their duty, and may forfeit wages antecedently due. The Two Catherines, 2 Mason, 319. [AMERICAN.]

(106) The crew of a vessel voluntarily stranded to avoid being driven on a rocky and dangerous part of the coast, are entitled to wages while employed in saving the cargo even after the sale of the vessel is determined upon. Barnard v. Adams, 10 How. (U. S.) 270. [AMERICAN.]

(107) It is the duty of mariners to use their utmost endeavours to save the ship, and if they preserve part thereof, the master is bound to allow them a reasonable consideration to enable them to reach their native country; but if they do not use such endeavours, they are not entitled to such provision, but wholly lose their wages on the loss of the ship. Laws of Oleron, cited in Godolphin's Adm. Jur. (2nd ed.), anno 1685, ext. 3.

(108) These "utmost exertions" on the part of a seaman were regarded at common law as his paramount duty, necessarily arising from the nature of his service, and therefore a promise made by the master, when a ship was in distress, to pay an extra sum to a mariner as an inducement to extraordinary exertion on his part, was held by Lord Kenyon to be wholly void. Harris v. Watson, Peake's N. P. C. 72.

(109) In cases of shipwreck the seamen are entitled to claim according to the merit of their services an extra reward beyond their wages against the property saved. The Dawn, Daveis, 121. [AMERICAN.]

(110) This ought not generally to be less than the expenses of their return home. Ibid.

(111) This being in the nature of a salvage reward may be allowed as well against the savings of the cargo as against the payment for the ship as a wreck. Ibid.

* (112) In an action for the wages of a seaman after a capture and ransom of the ship, held, that the seaman was entitled to nothing, he being unable to prove that by the custom of merchants he was entitled pro rata, as was insisted on his behalf. (See Chandler v. Meade, mentioned at the end of the case of Wiggins v. Ingleton, 2 Ld. Raym. 1211.) But it seems to be the better opinion that in the case of capture and recapture, if the ship perform her voyage a mariner who has not been separated from her is entitled to his wages on the footing of the original contract, subject perhaps to a proportionate salvage. Abb. Sh. (12th ed.), p. 467.

(113) It is the right and duty of the mariners of a neutral ship after capture to remain by the ship while there is any hope of recovering the property. Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumner's Rep. 443. [AMERICAN.]

(113a) This is generally gone when there is a sentence of condemnation, and a fortiori when there is a sale thereof pending the proceedings, or under the sentence of condemnation. Ibid.

(114) The capture of a neutral ship does not of itself operate as a dissolution of the contract for mariner's wages, but at most only as a suspension of it. Ibid.

(116) If the ship be condemned by a sentence of condemnation, then the contract is dissolved and the seamen are discharged from any further duty on board; and they lose their wages, unless there is a subsequent restitution of the property or of its equivalent value, upon an appeal, or by treaty, with an allowance of freight, in which event their claim for wages revives. Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumner's Rep. 443. [AMERICAN.]

(117) If the ship be restored and perform her voyage, the contract is revived, and the mariner becomes entitled to his wages; that is, to his full wages for the whole voyage, if he has remained on board and done his duty, or if, being taken out, he has been unable

23. Mutiny.

205. Mariners are not discharged from their duty to the owners of a ship in consequence of a mutiny. They are bound, if possible, to recover the ship by using their best endeavours whenever there is a reasonable prospect of success, but not to sacrifice their lives wantonly. The Governor Raffles, 2 Dodson, 18.

210. Upon the discharge of any seaman, or payment of his wages, the master shall sign and give him a certificate of discharge, on a Board of Trade form, specifying the period of service and time and place of discharge. Penalty for breach against master not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 172.

211. No action will lie against a master for refusing to give a seaman the certificate of discharge required by the 172nd section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). The only remedy is to proceed for the penalty. Vallance v. Falle, 13 Q. B. D. 109; 53 L. J. Q. B. 459; 51 L. T. 158; 48 J. P. 519; 32 W. R. 769; 5 Asp. 280.

without any fault of his own to rejoin the ship. Ibid.

(118) A seaman signed articles without reading them, for a voyage from New York to Archangel and back, as represented to him, but not in fact. The vessel went to Sicily, Sardinia, and Messina, at which places she disposed of her outward cargo, and at the latter place lay seven months, and took her return cargo. She left Messina for Gottenburg, and on her voyage thither was captured, carried in, and condemned. Held, that the seaman was entitled to wages to the arrival and during the stay at Messina, but not from Messina, that being a new voyage, and the capture put an end to the freight as well as the wages for that voyage. Murray v. Kellogg, 9 Johns. 227. [AMERICAN.]

28. Report of Character.

213. Upon every discharge before a superintendent the master shall make and sign on a Board of Trade form a report of the conduct, character, and qualifications of the persons discharged, or may state in a column in the form that he declines to give any opinion upon such particulars or any of them. The superintendent shall transmit the same to the registrar-general of shipping and seamen or other officer directed by the Board of Trade, to be recorded, and shall, if desired so to do by any seaman, give him or indorse on his certificate of discharge a copy of so much of such report as concerns him. Every person forging or fraudulently altering or using any false certificate or report, or copy, is guilty of a misdemeanour. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 176.

214. Every master required to keep an official log must enter therein (inter alia) a statement of the conduct, character, and qualifications of each of his crew, or a statement that he declines to give an opinion on such particulars. Ibid. s. 282.

215. As to entries in official log generally, see tit. EVIDENCE, p. 434.

29. Payment of Wages.

See tit. WAGES, c. 19.

30. Evidence.1. Generally.

216. It is not necessary for a mariner to prove his own discharge, the burthen of proof thereof is thrown on the other party. The Baltic Merchant, Edwards, 89.

2. Entries in Official Log.

217. Upon the trial of any information, indictment or other proceeding, against any person for discharging or leaving behind any seaman or apprentice contrary to the provisions of this act, it shall lie upon such person either to produce the sanction or certificate required by the act, or to prove that he obtained the same previously to having discharged or left behind such seaman or apprentice, or that it was impracticable to obtain such sanction or certificate. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 208.

(122) A libel may be maintained in the Admiralty by a father for the consequential damages resulting from an assault and battery of his minor child on the high seas; but to support the action he must show either actual damage, or what is held to be such by intendment of law. Plummer v. Webb, Ware R. 75; Dunlap's Adm. Prac. 65. [AMERICAN.]

(123) The action may be maintained after the death of the child, although the death was occasioned by the severity of the battery. Ibid.

(124) A seaman is entitled to recover damages for an assault and battery—1. When personal violence has been inflicted, if not excessively, yet wantonly and without provocation. 2. When there was provocation and cause, but the punishment was excessive.

3. When the punishment was inflicted with a deadly or dangerous weapon. A rope is the proper instrument. Forbes v. Parsons, Crabbe, 283; Johnson v. Dalton, 1 Cow. 543; Benton v. Whitney, Crabbe, 417; Carleton v. Davis, Daveis, 221; Fuller v. Colby, 3 W. & M. 1. [AMERICAN.]

(125) In a libel by the seaman against the master for assault and battery, a release of all complaints, required by the master before he would pay the wages due, will be disregarded. Whitney v. Eager, Crabbe, 422. [AMERICAN.]

(126) For form of libel, see Dunlap's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.), 452—459.

(127) In accordance with the indulgent principles which govern Courts of Admiralty in deciding upon the rights of seamen, a receipt by a seaman on receiving the sum due to him for wages, stating that it was in full for all services and demands for assaults,

2. *Jurisdiction.

218. As to the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty in such cases, see The Ruckers, 4 C. Rob. 73, and Nos. 133, 134, in tit. COLLISION, p. 197.

3. Defence.(a) Generally.

219. The defence to a charge of cruelty may be a total disapproval of cruelty having been practised, or a justification by proofs of misconduct provoking it, and that misconduct may be confined to an offence immediately preceding, or may likewise include similar antecedent offences. The Agincourt, 1 Hagg. 274.

219a. A recent act of misconduct, though of a lighter kind, might properly be punished with a severer correction than due to it if standing alone, if antecedent acts of the same kind had proved the existence of habits of such misconduct, but such antecedent acts should be allied in nature to the subsequent one, and not of a different character. Ibid. 280.

220. A justification set up as a defence to a charge of cruelty, referring to bygone acts, is the last which the court would be inclined to favour. Ibid. 275.

221. A defence pleading the misconduct in respect of which the punishment complained of was inflicted, may be extended to proof of anterior misconduct ejusdem generis. The Louther Castle, Ibid. 387.

222. On a charge of ill-treatment and undue correction, a justification partly on the ground of an offence recently committed, and partly on account of antecedent offences, held not sustained; complaint pronounced for, and £100 allowed, with costs. The Agincourt, Ibid. 271.

223. An intention to commit a desertion set up as defence to cruelty, the mariner, the ship's cook, having gone on shore (it being a question whether he was authorized to do so), and having in consequence of a disorderly frolic been locked up in prison as a disorderly person, but released on application of the master; held not proved, and such acts not to amount to a desertion. Ibid. 281.

224. In an action against the master of an East India Company's ship for personal damage, on the ground of excessive punishment, viz. thirty-six lashes after four or five days' imprisonment in irons, defence set up of negligence of duty and disrespectful conduct on the part of the mariner, accompanied with averments of habitual laziness, negligence, and disrespectful behaviour, held to be sufficiently proved, and a justification for the punishment. Suit dismissed accordingly. The Louther Castle, Ibid. 384.

225. In an action for damages brought by a mariner against the master on account of a violent assault, by which his ribs had been broken, and he had been otherwise grievously injured, there being no substantial defence, £120 and costs decreed. An account in full of all demands taken by the master on paying his wages, held not to bar the mariner's claim for damage. The Enchantress, Ibid. 395.

226. Charge of ill-treatment brought by the mate against the master, held not sustained, and the witnesses in support thereof to have perjured themselves. Complaint dismissed with costs. The Centurion, Ibid. 161.

227. A master is not justified in putting a steward in irons for mere disobedience of orders. Such a proceeding is only justifiable under some strong necessity, such as danger of mutiny. Carnaghan v. Davidson, Dec. 13, 1852 (Q. B.).

228. Circumstances in which the court found damages due to the mate of a vessel for an assault upon him by the master, and assessed the damages at £10. Reekie v. Norrie, Dec. 21, 1842; 5 D. 368; 15 Jur. 151. [SCOTCH.]

229. A master of a merchant ship has battery, and imprisonment against the owner and officers, has been held to be no bar to a suit for an assault, battery and imprisonment. 1 Conkling's U. S. Adm. Prac. 442. [AMERICAN.]

* (128) In cases of assault and battery during a voyage, or on the high seas, it may be preferable, when the party guilty of the battery is the owner or master of the vessel on board which the battery was committed, to proceed in the Court of Admiralty. The plaintiff may libel the defendant in that court, and the judge, after examining the evidence, may himself award damages, or, if he think fit, convene a jury to assist him, and the successful party is entitled to costs. A suit in this court, when the witnesses are staying in this country only a short time, is preferable to an action at common law. 2 Chitty's Gen. Prac. 513.

† (129) It is universally conceded that in case of disobedience of his reasonable commands, or of riotous, disorderly, or insolent conduct, the master of a merchant ship may subject the offender to corporal punishment. His authority in this respect has been likened to a right well established to inflict corporal punishment on a delinquent mariner in a case of gross misconduct. That right must be supported by the law of England, which is the proper authority for fixing the limits within which one subject of this realm has a right to inflict corporal suffering on another. The Agincourt, 1 Hagg. 272.

230. The law clearly recognizes the authority of inflicting bodily correction upon offending mariners, such punish-that of a parent over his child, and that of a master over his apprentice or scholar; but, unlike that of a parent, it extends only to the correction of such negligence and misconduct of mariners as relate strictly to their duties as such, or tend to the subversion of the discipline of the ship. Concerning this extraordinary power, so liable to abuse, some of the ancient maritime codes of continental Europe are studiously silent, leaving its existence to be inferred, and its exercise to be justified, from necessity and usage. By the Ordinance of Louis XIV., it is carefully limited and defined. In England, and in this country, there are no statutable regulations upon the subject. Conkling's United States Admiralty Practice (2nd ed.), p. 429.

(130) No punishment can be lawfully inflicted unless for reasonable provocation or cause, and it must be moderate and just, and proportionate to the nature and aggravation of the offence. . . . Unless the master is able to show, not only that there was sufficient cause for chastisement, but also that the chastisement was reasonable and moderate, the mariner may recover damages commensurate with the injury received. Ibid. p. 430.

(131) The master of a vessel has a right, in cases of necessity, to correct a negligent, disobedient, or mutinous seaman by corporal punishment or confinement, but the punishment must be reasonable, and not inflicted with unlawful instruments. Carleton v. Davis, Davis, 221; U. States v. Smith, 3 Wash. C. C. 525; Jarvis v. Sherwood, Bee, 248; Sampson v. Smith, 15 Mass. 365; Schelter v. York, Crabbe, 449; Pettinghill v. Dinsmore, Davis, 208; Dinsman v. Wilkes, 12 How. (U.S.) 390; Fuller v. Colby, 3 W. & M. 1; Forbes v. Parsons, Crabbe, 283; Michaelson v. Denison, 3 Day, 294; Brown v. The Maiden, Gilpin, 31; U. States v. Wickham, 1 Wash. C. C. 316; Wilson v. The Mary, Gilpin, 31. [AMERICAN.]

(132) The corporal punishment of minors only among seamen is recommended in view of the high character of modern seamen. Fuller v. Colby, 3 W. & M. 1. [AMERICAN.]

(133) If the master of a ship use an unlawful weapon, or the seaman is exposed to danger of his life or limbs, he may resort to any necessary species of defence to avoid this danger. U. States v. Smith, 3 Wash. C. C. 225; Fuller v. Colby, 3 W. & M. 1. [AMERICAN.]

(134) The master may use necessary violence to quell an affray. Jordan v. Williams, 1 Curtis, C. C. 69. As to the legality of confinement of seamen in foreign gaols, see U. States v. Ruggles, 5 Mason, 192; Brown v. The Maiden, Gilpin, 31; Magee v. Moss, Ibid.

219. [AMERICAN.]

(135) Confinement of the master is illegal. U. States v. Smith, 3 Wash. C. C. 78. As to what is a confinement, Ibid. 525. [AMERICAN.]

(136) As to the obligation on the master to observe sobriety and self-control, and set a good example, see Conkling's United States Admiralty Practice (2nd ed.), p. 433.

(137) The master may inflict moderate correction on a seaman for sufficient cause, but he must take care that it is not disproportionate to the offence. If he exceeds the bounds of moderation he is treated as a trespasser, and is liable in damages. In respect to the mode of correction it may be by personal chastisement, or by confinement on board ship, in irons or otherwise. There must not, however, be any cruelty or unnecessary severity. The mode, instruments, or extent of the punishment are not laid down by law, but must depend upon circumstances. In cases of urgent necessity, as of mutiny, weapons may be used which would be unlawful at other times; but even in these cases they must be used with the caution which the law requires in other cases of self-defence and vindication of rightful authority. Dana's Seaman's Manual, 194.

(138) A passenger must submit to the reasonable rules and usages of the ship; he has no right to interfere with its discipline and internal regulations; indeed, in a case of necessity, and for the order and safety of the ship, the master may restrain a passenger by force, but the cause must be urgent, and the manner reasonable and moderate. Ibid. 197.

(139) Masters must not, under colour of discipline, inflict unnecessary or wanton punishment upon those under their control. The Sarah, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 91, notis. [LOWER CANADA.]

(140) Damages decreed to a steward for assaults committed upon him by the master, and for compelling him to execute unnecessary and dangerous orders. Ibid. 89.

(141) Similar suit not sustained. The Coldstream, Ibid. 386.

(141a) Though the court will not call in question the official acts of a British consul in a foreign port respecting the crew of a British vessel, it does not follow that it will not investigate the conduct of the master, in procuring the intervention of the consul by which the seaman was imprisoned. If that amounts to a tort, so as to render the master liable for the imprisonment, it stands on the same ground as other torts. Patch v. Marshall, 1 Curtis, Ct. Ct. 452. [AMERICAN.]

ment being commensurate with the offence committed, being awarded by due authority, and administered with due moderation. The Lowther Castle, Ibid. 385.

231. Ill-usage is a very undefined term, depending much upon the opinion of the person who uses it, and taking its character out of the provocation given and the relation in which the parties stand to each other. The Lima, 3 Hag. 353.

232. Holding up fists to strike a master is so near an act of mutiny that the master may quell it by striking the first blow. Ibid.

(c) *Officers.

233. It may be matter of prudence, but is not matter of strict obligation, in East India ships engaged in private trade (though asserted to be so in ships belonging to the East India Company) that the master should communicate with other officers of the vessel prior to the infliction of punishment, nor is any particular mode or instrument of punishment particularly recognized. It must be left to the common usage in such cases, and to the humane discretion of the party in command. Ibid.

(d) Previous Inquiry.†

234. In all cases which will admit of the delay proper for inquiry, due inquiry should precede the act of punishment, and the party charged be heard in his own defence, though there are cases which will not admit of such delay. The Agincourt, 1 Hag. 274.

235. In cases of correction of seamen it is always desirable, and indeed the duty of the master, to institute an inquiry and have the result of it entered on the log. Murray v. Moutrie, 6 C. & P. 471.

See Pt. V. p. 2179.

4. In Service of Ship.‡

236. If the master or any seaman or apprentice receives any hurt or injury in

* (142) When the master is on board the right to inflict punishment pertains exclusively to him, and it cannot be lawfully exercised by any subordinate officer, even for improper behaviour to himself personally, without the authority or sanction of the master, expressed or implied. In the absence of the master, from the necessity of the case, the officer on board next in rank is clothed with his authority and rights, so far as they are necessary for the due performance of the ship's duties. Conkling's United States Admiralty Practice (2nd ed.), p. 431.

(143) No one but the master can authorize punishment. U. States v. Taylor, 2 Sumner, 584. If inflicted by officers, the master being present, and not interfering, he is responsible. Thomas v. Lane, Ibid. 1. [AMERICAN.]

(144) If delay be practicable, the officer must report to the master, and leave the duty of correction with him. Except in these cases the officer is liable as a trespasser for any force used with the seamen. If the officer act under the authority, express or implied, of the master, he will not be held liable, even though the punishment should be excessive and unjustifiable, for he is in such cases only the agent of the master, who is responsible for the act. Yet if the punishment be so excessive as to show malice in the officer, or there be anything in his conduct to imply the same, he will be liable in some measure himself. Dana's Seaman's Manual, 199.

† (145) As to due inquiry and hearing the accused, see also Conkling's United States Admiralty Practice (2nd ed.), p. 434.

‡ (146) Subject to sect. 8 of the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), where no difficulty is raised by the express terms of the contract, a seaman disabled by an accident happening in the course of his duty, is entitled to his wages for the whole voyage. See 1 Maude & Pollock on Merchant Shipping (4th ed. by Pollock & Bruce), p. 222, and cases there cited.

(147) Sick mariners are to be provided for at the expense of the ship, and their wages during illness to be paid to them, or on their death to their representatives. Laws of Oleron, cited in Godolphin's Adm. Jur. ext. 6, 7.

(148) For any expense the consul may incur at his port in respect of masters and seamen injured in the service of the ship, or for seamen discharged or left behind illegally, whether for medical advice, subsistence (including necessary clothing), or burial, the masters and owners are liable. If such expense is not repaid on the spot by the master, it is to be entered in the account and supported by separate vouchers, and an account in the Form C. 18, is to be transmitted to the Board of Trade in order that the account may be recovered from the owner. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 117, p. 36.

(149) In giving his opinion as to whether or not a case falls within the words, "hurt or injury in the service of the ship," the consul should be guided by what appears to be the intention of the act, viz., that a seaman shall not have to pay surgical or medical expenses incurred in consequence of hurt or injury received while in the service of the ship. In cases of accidents (wounds, bruises, the service of the ship to which he belongs, the expense of providing the necessary surgical and medical advice, with attendance and medicines, and of his subsistence until he is cured, or dies, or is brought back to some port in the United Kingdom, if shipped in the United Kingdom, or if shipped in some British possession to some port in such possession, and of his conveyance to such port, shall be defrayed by the owner without any deduction from his wages. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 228, sub-s. 1.

237. If any such expenses in respect of the illness, injury, or hurt of any seaman or apprentice, as are to be borne by the owner, are paid by any consular officer or other person on behalf of her Majesty, or if any other expenses in respect of the illness, injury, or hurt of any seaman or apprentice whose wages are not accounted for to such officer under these provisions are so paid, such expenses shall be repaid to him by the master; and if not, the account, with costs, shall be a charge upon the ship, and recoverable from the master or owner as a debt to her Majesty, and by ordinary process of law, or like wages; in any proceeding for the recovery thereof, the production of a certificate of the facts, signed by such officer or other person, with such vouchers (if any) as the case requires, shall be sufficient proof that the expenses were duly paid by such consular officer or other person. Ibid. s. 229.

238. Every master of every foreign-going ship whose crew is discharged in the United Kingdom, and of every home-trade ship, is to keep a list on a Board of Trade form of the names of any members of the crew who have been maimed or hurt, with the times, places, causes, and circumstances thereof. Ibid. s. 273.

239. As to lists of this and other matters, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. pp. 1250, 1251.

240. The same occurrence which converted the ship into a wreck injured several of the crew. Held, that their injuries were received "in the service of the ship" within the meaning of the above sub-section. Lord Advocate v. Grant, 4th Series, vol. i. 447. [SCOTCH.]

241. A sailor having become ill through eating diseased meat supplied to him on board his vessel, was put on shore in hospital, and was afterwards brought back to the United Kingdom as a distressed seaman, the expenses incurred being defrayed by the Board of Trade. Held, that the sailor had received a hurt or injury in the service of the ship within the meaning of the above sub-section, and that the Board of Trade, which had received his wages from the owners, were not entitled to deduct therefrom the expenses they had been put to. The Secretary of the Board of Trade v. Sundholm, 4 Asp. 196.

242. A seaman is entitled to his whole wages, though he has been unable to render his services, if his inability has proceeded either from a hurt received in the performance of his duty, or from natural sickness happening to him in the course of the voyage. Paul v. Eden, 6 T. R. 325, n.; Chandler v. Grieves, 2 H. Bl. 606, n. (a); 6 T. R. 325, n.

See c. 16, p. 2170.

burns, fractures, frost-bites, sunstroke, and the like), there can seldom be any difficulty. Generally speaking, any accident which befalls a seaman when on board ship, whether he be engaged in some specific duty or whether he be doing nothing, even if it occurs through his own fault, should be considered "hurt or injury in the service of the ship." If, however, a seaman be on shore, and not on ship's business when the accident happens, it should not be so considered. When very serious illness is directly traceable to the default of the owner or master in not supplying proper or sufficient food, water, accommodation, medicines, or anti-scorbutics, the consul should treat it as injury in the service of the ship. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 118, p. 37. And see, further, on this matter, Board of Trade Instructions to Officers in British Colonial Possessions, revised January, 1875, pp. 26—28.

(150) A seaman whose feet are frozen while in the service of the ship, before he is discharged from the ship, on the return voyage, at the home port, is entitled to be cured at the ship's expense, and it is a charge upon the ship. Reed v. Curwfield, 1 Sumner, 195. [AMERICAN.]

(151) A sailor must, in judgment of law, be deemed in the service of the ship while under the power and authority of its officers; and he is entitled to be cured at the expense of the ship of any injury received by him in executing an improper order, or inflicted upon him directly by the wrongful violence of an officer of the ship, in the exercise of his authority as officer to punish him. Ringold v. Crocker, 1 Abb. Adm. 344. [AMERICAN.]

4. Supply of Anti-Scorbutics and Medical Stores.*

1. Generally.

243. For provisions for the supply in foreign-going ships of lime, lemon juice, or other anti-scorbutics and medical stores, and for keeping a book containing instructions for dispensing the same, penalty for default not exceeding £20. See the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), ss. 4, 5; and see Nos. 284—287, p. 2170.

243a. For powers to governors of British possessions to make similar regulations, Ibid. s. 6.

244. As to the inspection of such stores by medical inspectors, see Pt. I. c. 12, p. 2133.

244a. As to medical stores and medical men on board passenger ships, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. IV. pp. 1298, 1299.

2. Entries in Official Log.

245. As to entry in the official log of seaman or apprentice's refusal or neglect to take anti-scorbutics, penalty for breach, £5. See M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 4.

246. Penalty not exceeding £20 for sale of medical stores of bad quality. Ibid. s. 5.

246a. As to entries generally in official logs, see tit. EVIDENCE, p. 434.

5. Forced Ashore.

247. The master or other person belonging to any British ship who wrongfully forces on shore or wilfully leaves behind any seaman or apprentice of such ship before the completion of the voyage or the return of the ship to the United Kingdom, is guilty of a misdemeanour. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 206.

6. Left behind Abroad.

1. Generally.

248. So much of the third part of this act as relates to leaving seamen abroad applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad when they are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters and crews. Ibid. s. 109.

249. Where the service of a seaman terminates before the period contemplated in the agreement by reason of his being left on shore at any place abroad under a certificate, of his unfitness or inability to proceed on the voyage, granted

* (152) For the scale of medicine and medical stores authorized by the Board of Trade, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices of August, 1879, p. 54, Ibid. revised June, 1885, Circular No. 696; and see further thereon, Ibid. Dietary Scales, January, 1886. The Board of Trade have also sanctioned the use of a book called "The Ship Captain's Medical Guide," by Harry Leach, M.D., and published by Simpkin, Marshall & Co., 4, Stationers' Hall Court, E.C. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 154, p. 44.

(153) Every ship (except those bound to European ports, or to ports in the Mediterranean Sea, and also except such ships and classes of ships bound to ports on the eastern coast of America, north of the 35th degree of N. latitude, and to any islands or places in the Atlantic Ocean W. of the same limit, as the Board of Trade may from time to time exempt from the enactment) must be provided with a sufficient quantity of lime or lemon juice, or of such other anti-scorbutics as may be directed by Order in Council, and these must be served out in accordance with the requirements of the act. Should the consul learn in any case that the provisions of the act have not been complied with, he should warn the offending master, and record the fact on the ship's articles. Lime juice of itself will not prevent scurvy, and the consul should therefore take every opportunity of urging upon masters of vessels sailing on long voyages the necessity of supplying their crews with fresh potatoes, molasses, &c., and a larger supply of fresh or preserved meats in lieu of salt beef and pork. Ibid. par. 155, p. 45.

(154) Under an Order in Council of the 5th August, 1871, ships, vessels, or boats on board of which any person has been attacked with cholera or choleraic diarrhoea during the voyage, may not enter any port or place in the United Kingdom until the clothes and bedding of such person have been destroyed. Care should be taken that superintendents understand this obligation, and the further obligation of disinfecting the berths of cholera patients, and all things besides clothes and bedding likely to carry infection. All cases of cholera should be entered in the official log, and a list of all articles destroyed. In the case of seamen dying of cholera at a foreign port, the consul will give directions for the destruction of the clothing, &c. of the deceased, which should never be sent to the United Kingdom. Any person offending against the above direction is liable under the Order in Council referred to, on summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding £20. Ibid. par. 156, p. 45. And see further thereon, and the transmission of reports thereof to the Board of Trade, see Instructions to Consuls of August, 1885, and Ibid. January, 1886.

as therein mentioned, such seaman is only entitled to wages for the time of service prior to such termination. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 185.

250. If the master of any British ship leaves behind any seaman or apprentice in any British possession abroad without previously obtaining a certificate in writing, endorsed on the shipping agreement, of some superintendent or similar officer appointed by the local government, or in his absence of the chief officer of customs at or near the place, stating the fact and the cause thereof, whether unfitness, inability to proceed to sea, desertion or disappearance; or if he leaves behind any seaman or apprentice at any place out of her Majesty's dominions, without previously obtaining the certificate so indorsed of the British consular officer there, or (in his absence) of two respectable merchants, if there are any such at or near there, he is guilty of a misdemeanour; and these functionaries shall, and the merchants may, examine into the grounds of such alleged unfitness, inability, desertion or disappearance in a summary way, and may for that purpose administer oaths, and may either grant or refuse such certificate as appears to them to be just. Ibid. s. 207.

251. Every master of any British ship who leaves any seaman or apprentice on shore at any place abroad in or out of her Majesty's dominions, under a certificate of his unfitness or inability to proceed on the voyage, shall deliver to one of the functionaries before mentioned, or (in the absence of such functionaries) to the merchants by whom such certificate is signed, or, if there be but one respectable merchant there, to him, a full and true account of the wages due to such seaman or apprentice (such account when delivered to a consular officer to be in duplicate), and shall pay the same in money and not by bill, whenever it is practicable to do so, but when it is not practicable to pay in money, he shall pay by a bill drawn upon the owner; and in the case of every bill, such functionary or merchant shall certify by indorsement thereon that it is drawn for money due on account of a seaman's wages, and shall also indorse the amount for which the bill is drawn, and such further particulars as the Board of Trade requires, upon the shipping agreement. Penalty for breach against every such master, not exceeding £10, in addition to the liability for payment of the wages. Penalty against every such master who delivers a false account, not exceeding £20, in addition to payment of the wages. Ibid. s. 209, as amended by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 19.

252. Sect. 209 is an additional provision in favour of seamen, and does not affect the right of a master. The Rajah of Cochin, 1 Swabeay, 478.

253. Every such payment by bill or in money shall, if in any British possession, be made to the seaman or apprentice, and, if out of her Majesty's dominions, be made to the consular officer, who shall, if satisfied with the account, indorse on one of the duplicates thereof a receipt for the amount paid or bill delivered, and return the same to the master; and the master shall, within forty-eight hours after his return to his port of destination in the United Kingdom, deliver it to the superintendent there. The consular officer shall retain the other duplicate, and shall, if the seaman or apprentice subsequently obtains employment at or otherwise quits the port, deduct out of the sum received by him any expenses incurred by him in respect of the subsistence of the seaman or apprentice under this act, except such as the master or owner of the ship is hereby required to pay, and shall pay the remainder to the seaman or apprentice, and deliver to him an account of the sums so received and expended on his behalf; and shall, if the seaman or apprentice dies before his ship quits the port, deal with the same as hereinafter specified in that behalf; and shall, if the seaman or apprentice is sent home at the public expense under this act, account for the amount received to the Board of Trade; and such amount shall, after deducting expenses incurred in respect of such seaman or apprentice, except such as the master or owner of the ship is hereby required to pay, be dealt with as wages to which he is entitled, and be paid accordingly. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 210.

254. If any seaman or apprentice belonging to any British ship is discharged or left behind out of the United Kingdom, without the master's full compliance with all the provisions in this act, and becomes distressed and is relieved under this act, or if any subject of her Majesty, after having been engaged by any person to serve in any ship belonging to, or to the subject of, any foreign power, becomes distressed and is so relieved, the wages due to such seaman or apprentice, and all expenses for his subsistence, necessary clothing, conveyance home, and burial, if he dies abroad, shall be a charge upon the ship, whether British or foreign, and the Board of Trade may, in the name of her Majesty (besides suing for penalties incurred), recover the wages and expenses, with costs, from the master, the owner for the time being, or, in the case of such engagement for service in a foreign ship, from such master or owner or person by whom the engagement was made. Such sums shall be recoverable like other debts to her Majesty, or as wages due to the seaman. Ibid. s. 213.

2. Evidence.

(a) Generally.

255. In any proceedings for that purpose production of the account (if any) to be furnished as before provided, with proof of payment by the Board of Trade or the paymaster-general of the charges incurred, shall be sufficient evidence that the man was relieved, conveyed home, or buried (as the case may be) at her Majesty's expense. Ibid.

256. Upon the trial in any proceeding for leaving behind any seaman or apprentice, contrary to this act, it lies upon the master to produce the certificate in any proceeding, or prove that he obtained it, or that it was impracticable for him to obtain it. Ibid. s. 208.

(b) Payment by Bill.

257. When payment is made by bill drawn by the master, the owner of the ship shall be liable to pay the amount to the holder or indorsee thereof; and it shall not be necessary in any proceeding against the owner upon such bill to prove that the master had authority to draw it; any bill purporting to be drawn, and indorsed as required, if produced out of the custody of the Board of Trade or of the registrar-general of shipping and seamen, or of any superintendent of any mercantile marine office; and any indorsement on any such bill purporting to be made as required, and to be signed by one of the functionaries mentioned, shall be received in evidence, and deemed prima facie evidence of the facts. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 19.

(c) Entries in Official Log.

258. Every master required to keep an official log must enter therein the name of every seaman or apprentice who ceases to be a member of the crew, otherwise than by death, with the place, time, manner, and cause thereof. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 282; and for entries therein generally, see tit. EVIDENCE, p. 434.

7. Permission to go Ashore to make Complaint.

259. If any seaman or apprentice whilst on board any ship states to the master that he desires to make complaint to a justice of the peace, or consular officer, or naval officer in command of any of her Majesty's ships, against the master or any of the crew, the master shall, if the ship is then at a place where there is a justice or any such officer, so soon as the service of the ship will permit, and if the ship is not then at such a place so soon after her arrival there as the service of the ship will permit, send or allow such seaman or apprentice to go ashore in proper custody to make such complaint. Penalty for default, not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 232.

260. As to the seaman or apprentice's responsibility for frivolous complaint, see tit. COSTS, p. 415.

8. On Ship's Arrival.

261. Penalty not exceeding £20 against every person not in her Majesty's service, nor duly authorized, who goes on board any ship about to arrive at the place of her destination, before her actual arrival in dock, or at the place of her discharge, without the permission of the master, and the master or person in charge may take the delinquent into custody, and deliver him to any constable or peace officer, to be taken before a justice or justices or the sheriff of the county in Scotland, to be dealt with according to the provisions of this act. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 237.

that the ship had not arrived "at her place of destination" by arriving in the port of Bristol, that she had not "actually arrived at her place of discharge," which was the quay where she discharged, but that she had "actually arrived in dock" within the meaning of the section, although the dock was not the dock in which she discharged; and that the justices' decision, dismissing the complaint, was therefore right. Attwood v. Case, 1 Q. B. D. 134.

263. When a ship is about to arrive, is arriving, or has arrived at the end of her voyage, every person, not in her Majesty's service or duly authorized for the purpose, who (a) goes on board the ship, without the permission of the master, before the seamen lawfully leave the ship at the end of their engagement, or are discharged (whichever last happens); or (b) being on board, remains there after being warned to leave by the master, or by a police officer, or by any officer of the Board of Trade or of the Customs, shall be liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding £20, or, at the discretion of the court, to imprisonment not exceeding six months; and the master, or any officer of the Board of Trade, may take him into custody, and deliver him up forthwith to a constable to be taken before a proper court or magistrate. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 5.

264. When the government of any foreign country makes similar regulations as to persons going on board British ships so arriving within its territorial jurisdiction, and is desirous that these provisions shall apply to such persons going on board ships belonging to that country in British jurisdiction; her Majesty may, by Order in Council, declare that these provisions shall apply to the ships of such country, and they shall have such effect. Ibid. s. 6.*

9. For Twenty-four Hours after Ship's Arrival.

1. Against Lodging-house Keepers or their Agents.

265. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the protection of seamen from imposition applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad when they are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

266. Penalty not exceeding £5 against any person then on board who, within twenty-four hours after a ship's arrival at any port in the United Kingdom, solicits any seaman to become a lodger at the house of any person letting lodgings. Ibid. s. 238.

2. Against Persons removing their Effects without Authority.

267. Penalty not exceeding £5 against any person then on board who, within twenty-four hours after a ship's arrival at any port in the United Kingdom, takes out of such ship any effects of any seaman without his personal direction and the permission of the master. Ibid.

10. Undue Claims for Board or Lodging.

268. Penalty not exceeding £10 against any person who demands or receives from any seaman or sea apprentice payment for his board or lodging for longer than the true period. Ibid. s. 235.

11. Persons detaining or absconding with their Effects.

269. Penalty not exceeding £10 against any person who takes under his control any monies, documents, or effects of any seaman or sea apprentice, and does not return the same or pay the value thereof, when required by him, subject to such deduction as may be justly due, or absconds therewith, and any two justices may, besides inflicting such penalty, by summary order direct the value of such monies, documents, or effects, subject to such deduction, to be forthwith paid to such seaman or apprentice. Ibid. s. 236.

12. Commencement of Right to Provisions.

270. A seaman's right to provisions commences at the time at which he commences work, or at the time specified in

* (154a) The above sect. 5 has been applied by Order in Council to ships of Italy, Sweden and Norway, Germany, the United States of America, and Austro-Hungary. See the agreement for his commencement of work or presence on board, whichever first happens. Ibid. s. 181.

Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls of January, 1885, and Order in Council of March 2, 1881, October 25, 1881, November 30, 1882, and May 22, 1883.

13. Bad or deficient Provisions.

1. Generally.*

271. Any three or more of the crew of any British ship may complain to any officer in command of any of her Majesty's ships, any British consular officer, any superintendent, or any chief officer of customs, that the provisions or water for the use of the crew are of bad quality, unfit for use, or deficient in quantity; such officer may thereupon examine, or cause to be examined, the provisions or water; and if they are found of bad quality and unfit for use, or deficient in quantity, the examiner shall signify this in writing to the master, who if he does not thereupon provide other proper provisions or water in lieu thereof, or does not procure the requisite quantity of any so signified insufficient, or uses any such bad provisions or water, shall incur a penalty not exceeding £20. Ibid. s. 221.

272. If the officer to whom such complaint is made certifies in his statement that there was no reasonable ground for such complaint, each of the parties complaining shall be liable to forfeit to the owner out of his wages a sum not exceeding one week's wages. Ibid. s. 222.

273. (1) If during a voyage the allowance of any of the provisions any seaman has by his agreement stipulated for, is reduced (except in accordance with regulations for reduction by way of punishment contained in the agreement, and except for any time during which such seaman wilfully and without sufficient cause refuses or neglects duty, or is lawfully under confinement for misconduct, on board or on shore); or (2) If it is shown that any of such provisions are or have been during the voyage bad in quality and unfit for use; the seaman shall receive, as compensation for such reduction or bad quality, according to the time of its continuance, the following sums, to be paid to him in addition to and to be recoverable as wages: (1) If his allowance is reduced by any quantity not exceeding one-third of the quantity specified in the agreement, a sum not exceeding 4*d.* a day; (2) If his allowance is reduced by more than one-third of such quantity, 8*d.* a day; (3) In respect of such bad quality a sum not exceeding 1*s.* a day. Ibid. s. 223.

274. If it is shown to the satisfaction of the court before which the case is tried that any provisions the allowance of which has been reduced could not be procured or supplied in proper quantities, and that proper and equivalent substitutes were supplied in lieu thereof, the court shall take such circumstances into consideration, and shall modify or refuse compensation as the justice of the case may require. Ibid.

275. A scale of the provisions which are to be furnished to each seaman is to be set forth in the agreement with the seamen. Ibid. s. 149.

276. As to the vessels to which these enactments apply, Ibid. s. 109.

277. Seamen, owing to the unexpected length of a voyage, had been put on short allowance. They were, on motion, allowed compensation, under the above section. The Josephine, Swabey, 152; 2 Jur. N.S. 1148; 28 L. T. 192. See also Conch v. Steel, 3 E. & B. 402; 23 L. J. Q. B. 121.

278. By the mercantile and naval service of Great Britain, it is clearly the rule that seamen must be found with provisions as long as they remain on board and are willing to do their duty. The Castilia, 1 Hagg. 60; The Eliza, Ibid. 186.

279. Seamen forced to provide themselves, the ship's provisions being exhausted, are entitled to board wages out of the proceeds of the ship. The San Jose Primeiro, 3 L. T. N.S. 513.

279*a.* As to provisions and water on board passenger ships, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. IV. p. 1300.

2. Weights and Measures.

280. Every master shall keep on board proper weights and measures for determining the quantities of the provisions and articles served out, and shall allow them to be used on serving out the same in the presence of a witness whenever any dispute arises about such quantities.

* (155) As to American cases thereon, see Ship Elizabeth v. Rickers, 2 Faine, C. C. 291; Piehl v. Balchen, Olcott, Adm. 24; Harden p.

v. Gordon, 2 Mason, 541; Ship Washington, 1 Pet. Ad. 219. [AMERICAN.]

Penalty for default, not exceeding £10. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 225.

3. Entries in Official Log.

281. The result of the examination as to the insufficiency or bad quality of any provisions or water of any British ship made on the complaint of any three or more of the crew, is to be entered in the official log. Ibid. s. 221.

14. Medical Practitioner.

1. On Board what Vessels.

282. As to what vessels are required to carry a medical practitioner, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. IV. p. 1298.

15. Proceedings for Debt pending Engagement.

283. No debt exceeding in amount 5s. incurred by any seaman after he has engaged to serve, shall be recoverable until the service agreed for is concluded. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 234.

16. Expenses of Illness and Burial.

1. Generally.*

284. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the provisions and health of seamen applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad when they are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters and crews. Ibid. s. 109.

285. (1) If the master or any seaman or apprentice receives any injury in the service of the ship to which he belongs, the expense of providing the necessary surgical and medical advice, with attendance and medicines, and of his subsistence until he is cured or dies, or is brought back to some port in the United Kingdom, if shipped in the United Kingdom, or if shipped in some British possession to some port in such possession, and of his conveyance to such port, and the expense (if any) of his burial, shall be defrayed by the owner without any deduction from his wages; (2) If he is on account of any illness temporarily removed from his ship to prevent infection, or for the convenience of the ship, and subsequently returns to his duty, the expense of such removal and of providing the necessary advice, with attendance and medicines, and of his subsistence whilst away, shall be defrayed in like manner; (3) The expense of all medicines and surgical or medical advice and attendance given to him whilst on board shall be defrayed in like manner; (4) In all other cases any reasonable expenses incurred by the owner for any seaman in

(157) Whether by specific money wages or by a share in the earnings of the vessel. The Atlantic, 1 Abb. Adm. 451. [AMERICAN.]

(158) But this privilege continues no longer than the seaman's right to wages, under the contract in the particular case. Nevitt v. Clarke, Olcott, Adm. 316. [AMERICAN.]

(159) As a general principle, the liability of the ship in this regard is limited to the conveyance of the disabled mariner to the United States, or to such period of time as may be reasonable, to enable him to return thither, but this rule is liable to variations. Ibid. [AMERICAN.]

(160) A seaman who has misrepresented his health at the time of the contract is liable to be disrated upon subsequent failure, and to be remunerated if at all upon a lower scale. See 3 Kent's Commentaries, 186; Atkyns v. Burrows, 1 Peters, 247; Mitchell v. The Orozimbo, ibid. 250; Sherwood v. M'Intosh, Ware, 109.

(161) When a seaman is taken on shore, in a foreign port, at his own solicitation, from a vessel properly provided with a chest of medicines, and there receives medical attendance and advice, the expenses thereof are to be deducted from his wages. Pierce v. Patten, Gilpin, 435. [AMERICAN.]

(162) The master is entitled to be cured at the expense of the ship, in the same manner as a seaman. Thompson v. Busch, 4 Wash. C. C. 338; Harden v. Gordon, 2 Mason, 541; Brig George, 1 Sumner, 151. [AMERICAN.]

(163) A seaman, shipped on board a vessel on a voyage from Philadelphia to Port au Prince, and while at the latter place, fell sick of yellow fever, and was asked by the captain if he would rather remain on board or go ashore to the "Maison de Santé." He chose the latter, and was removed to the hospital. Held, that the hospital bill was properly chargeable to the vessel and owner, and that the seaman was entitled to receive his whole wages without deduction. Johnson v. Doubly, 1 Ashmead, 165.

(164) Mariners wounded in the ship's service are to be healed at the ship's charge, but not those getting drunk and wounded on shore, and not in the ship's service. Law of Oleron, cited in Godolphin's Adm. Jur. Exch. 6, 7.

respect of illness, and in respect of the burial of any seaman or apprentice who dies whilst on service, shall, if duly proved, be deducted from his wages. Ibid. s. 228.

286. If any such expenses as are to be borne by the owner are paid by any consular officer or other person on behalf of her Majesty, or if any other expenses in that respect are so paid, and the man's wages are not accounted for to such functionary as required, such expenses shall be repaid to him by the master of the ship, and if not so repaid, the amount, with costs, shall be a charge upon the ship, and be recoverable from the master or owner as a debt due to her Majesty, and by ordinary process of law or in the same manner as wages. Ibid. s. 229.

287. Whenever it is shown that any seaman or apprentice who is ill has, through the neglect of the master or owner, not been provided with proper food and water according to his agreement, or with such accommodation, medicines, medical stores, or anti-scorbutics as are required by the M. S. Acts, then, unless it can be shown that the illness has been produced by other causes, the owner or master is liable to pay all expenses properly and necessarily incurred by reason of such illness (not exceeding in the whole three months' wages), either by the seaman himself, or by her Majesty's government, or any officer thereof, or by any parochial or other local authority on his behalf; such expenses may be recovered like wages earned. This shall not operate to effect any further liability of the owner or master for such neglect, nor any remedy any seaman already possesses. See M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 7.

288. Where a seaman is by reason of illness incapable of performing his duty, and it is proved that such illness has been caused by his own wilful act or default, he is not entitled to wages for the time during which he is by reason of such illness incapable of performing his duty. Ibid. s. 8.

289. As to illness as affecting the seaman's right to be discharged, see Pt. III. p. 2159.

290. As to illness as affecting the seaman's right to wages, see tit. WAGES, c. 12.

2. Evidence.

(a) Generally.

291. In any proceeding for the recovery of expenses abroad incurred by any consular officer or other person on behalf of her Majesty in respect of the illness, injury, or hurt of any seaman or apprentice, the production of a certificate of the facts signed by such functionary, and the vouchers, if any, shall be sufficient proof that the expenses were duly paid by such functionary. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 229.

(b) Entries in Official Log.

292. Every master required to keep an official log must enter therein (inter alia) every case of illness or injury happening to any member of the crew, with the nature thereof, and the medical treatment adopted (if any). Ibid. s. 282.

292a. As to official logs generally and entries therein, see tit. EVIDENCE, p. 424.

17. Incumbrance, Sale, or Attachment of Wages.

See tit. WAGES, c. 15.

18. Incumbrance or Sale of unaccrued Salvage.

293. No assignment or sale of salvage made prior to the accruing thereof binds the party making it. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 233.

293a. See, further, on this head, tit. SALVAGE, pp. 1891, 1892.

19. Irrevocable Powers of Attorney as to Wages or Salvage.

294. No power of attorney or authority for the receipt of any such wages or salvage due or accruing to any seaman or apprentice shall be irrevocable. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 233.

20. Extortionate Fees.

295. Penalty not exceeding £5 against any person demanding from any seaman or apprentice, seeking employment as such, any remuneration whatever, other than the authorized fees. Ibid. s. 148.

21. Volunteering from Merchant Ships into the Royal Navy.

1. Generally.

296. So much of the third part of this act as relates to seamen volunteering into the royal navy applies to all sea-going British ships, wherever registered, and to their owners, masters, and crews, wherever they may be. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.
6 z 2

297. Any seaman may leave his ship to enter the royal navy, and such leaving shall not be deemed a desertion, nor render him liable to any punishment or forfeiture, and all stipulations to the contrary are void. Penalty not exceeding £20 against any master or owner so stipulating. Ibid. s. 214.

298. Whenever any seaman, without having previously committed any act amounting to and treated by the master as desertion, leaves his ship to enter the naval service, and is received into it, the master shall deliver to him his clothes and effects on board, and pay his wages to that time, subject to just deductions. The master shall pay them to the officer authorized to receive the seaman into her Majesty's service, in money or by bill upon the owner, payable at sight to the order of the accountant-general of the navy; the receipt of the officer shall be a discharge for the same, and the bill shall be exempt from stamp duty. If the wages are paid in money, it shall be credited in the muster-book of the ship to the account of the seaman; and if by bill, the bill shall be noted in the muster-book and sent to the accountant-general, who shall have it presented for payment, and credit it to the seaman, but the money shall not be paid to the seaman until he would have been entitled to receive it if he had remained in the ship he quitted. If any such bill is not duly paid when presented, the accountant-general or the seaman may sue thereon or recover the wages as wages are recoverable. Penalty not exceeding £20 against master for breach of any of the above requirements on him upon any seaman so leaving his ship, in addition to his liability to pay and deliver the wages and effects. No officer who receives any such bill shall be subject to any liability in respect thereof, except for its safe custody until sent to the accountant-general. Ibid. s. 215.

299. If, upon any seaman leaving his ship for such purpose, the owner or master proves to the Admiralty that he has paid an advance of wages to or for such seaman, and that the seaman had not earned such advance, the Admiralty may pay the owner or master so much of such advance as has not been duly earned, and deduct it from the wages of the seaman earned or to be earned in the naval service. Ibid. s. 216.

300. As to the procedure by the owner for obtaining the allowance of such payments, see tit. PRACTICE, p. 1702.

301. Every master required to keep an official log must enter therein (inter alia) the amount of wages due to any seaman who enters her Majesty's service during the voyage. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 282.

302. As to official logs generally and the entries therein, see tit. EVIDENCE, p. 434.

303. A seaman impressed into the king's service out of a vessel on a voyage, held, not entitled to wages for the whole voyage, it not appearing that he had been pressed through the malicious acts of the master or of those under his authority. The Jack Park, 4 C. Rob. 308.

304. A seaman belonging to a privateer agreed to receive a certain share of prizes in lieu of wages, and to serve six months on pain of forfeiture of such share. Held, not to lose his share in consequence of his being afterwards impressed, and entering on board a king's ship before the six months expired. Paul v. Eden, Abb. Sh. (12th ed.), p. 463; S. P. Chandler v. Grieves, 2 H. Bl. 606, n.; 6 T. R. 325, n.

305. A mariner quitted his vessel in defiance of the master, with opprobrious language, and without any declaration at the time of his intention to enter a king's ship, which he did, however, within twenty-four hours afterwards. Held, that he was guilty of desertion, enuring to a forfeiture of his wages in the merchant vessel, notwithstanding that by the 2 Geo. 3, c. 36, s. 13, it was provided that entry on board a king's ship shall not be deemed a forfeiture of wages, and that the articles of the merchant vessel stipulated that mere absence for less than twenty-four hours should not be deemed desertion; that clause in the articles being held to relate to occasional absences, and not to such a wilful denial of authority and refusal of duty. The Amphitrite, 2 Hagg. 403, 405.

22. Seamen from Royal Navy sent Home in Merchant Ships.

1. Payment of their Effects and Wages.

306. The monies or effects of seamen invalidated or discharged from any of her Majesty's ships, and sent home in merchant ships, paid to the Board of Trade, or its agents, shall be paid as the accountant-general of her Majesty's navy directs. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 204.

23. Lien for Wages.

307. For provisions and authorities protecting seamen from forfeiting their right to or lien for wages, see tit. WAGES, c. 15.

24. Relief of distressed—.

1. Abroad.*

308. So much of the third part of this act as applies to the relief of seamen in distress in foreign ports applies to all

* (165) The following seafaring persons who are shipwrecked, discharged, or left behind, and are found in distress in foreign ports, are to be relieved under the direction of the Board of Trade:—

(1) British subjects who have been engaged in British merchant ships;

(2) British subjects who have been engaged in H.M.'s ships;

(3) British subjects who have been engaged in ships belonging to any foreign power which has not concluded an agreement with the British Government for the mutual relief of distressed seamen;

(4) British subjects who have been engaged in ships belonging to a foreign power which has concluded such an agreement, but who are excluded by the terms of the agreement from its operation. All British subjects who are in distress in a foreign country, after being engaged in a ship belonging to that country, are so excluded. For instance, a British subject left behind in Germany from a German ship should be relieved, if necessary, by the British consul, and not by the German authorities;

(5) Foreign subjects who have been engaged in British merchant ships or in H.M.'s ships, except those who are to be relieved by their own governments. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 111, p. 35.

(166) See Appendix J. for the countries with which the British Government have concluded international agreements for relief of distressed seamen; and for copies of such agreements. Those countries are Germany, by agreement dated May 27, 1879; France, Nov. 5, 1879; Italy, June 8, 1880; Austria-Hungary, Nov. 26, 1880; Sweden and Norway, July 12, 1881; Denmark, July 25, 1883. Ibid. Appendix J, pp. 96—101.

(167) British subjects, being seamen, requiring relief, whose service at sea was in a foreign vessel, should, if they have a right to relief under agreement from the government of the countries to which the vessels belong, be referred by the consul to the consuls or other official representatives of such governments, and in any case in which the consul may find it necessary to afford relief provisionally, application for the payment of expenses so incurred should be made to the foreign official who may subsequently take charge of the seaman. If no such reference to a foreign official be practicable, it will be the consul's duty to afford all necessary relief, and to forward a report of the case, together with a statement of the expenses incurred, to the Board of Trade. In affording relief under the terms of the international agreements, the consul must be careful to do so in strict conformity to the conditions contained therein. Ibid. par. 111, p. 35.

(168) If six months have elapsed since a seaman left his last ship, he ceases to be a distressed seaman within the meaning of these provisions, and is entitled to no relief whatever. Relief, however, may be extended to any seaman beyond this period, provided he came in charge either of the consul or of the local authorities within those six months, for such period as he remains continuously in the consul's charge beyond this limit. Ibid. par. 112, p. 36.

(169) Stowaways and other persons not on the articles of a ship are not entitled to relief as distressed seamen unless they have been employed or engaged in some capacity on board the ship leaving them behind. Ibid. par. 113.

(170) Seamen falling or being sick while their ships are in port, are not to be considered as on that account entitled to relief. If, however, a seaman is so ill when the vessel sails as to be unable or unfit to proceed on the voyage, the consul may sanction his discharge on the ground of inability to proceed on the voyage, but the consul should require the master to pay his expenses up to the date of the consul's certificate in his articles of his inability to proceed. Ibid. par. 116.

(171a) Relief may be extended to masters, and they may be sent home, in the following cases only:—(1) When injured in the service of the ship. In such cases the owners are liable to repay all expenses, and masters may be relieved and sent home, an account of the expenses being forwarded to the Board of Trade on Form C. 18. (2) When absolutely destitute, i. e., without private property, and unable to obtain credit or private assistance, masters may be sustained at a rate not exceeding twice that allowed to seamen. Clothing of a somewhat better description than that allowed to seamen may be supplied to masters, but no unnecessary articles are to be supplied, and the cost of such articles must never exceed twice the cost of the same article ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad when out of the jurisdiction of their respective Governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

309. For provisions enabling governors, consular officers, and other officers of her Majesty in foreign countries, and where there are no such governors or officers any two resident British merchants, to relieve distressed British seamen or apprentices found abroad, and send them home at the public expense in any British ship bound to the United Kingdom, or to the British possession to which they belong, endorsing on the ship's agreements their names and particulars of their cases, according to the regulations of the Board of Trade. Ibid. s. 211.

310. The master of every British ship so bound is to give a passage and subsistence to all seamen or apprentices whom he is so required to take on board his ship, not exceeding one for every fifty tons burden, and to provide each of them with a proper sleeping place protected against sea and weather; and on the production of the proofs therein required is entitled to be paid for the subsistence and passage of every seaman or apprentice so conveyed, and exceeding his complement, such sum per diem as the Board of Trade appoints. Penalty against any person having charge of any such ship failing or refusing to give a passage, and so to provide for any such seaman or apprentice, not exceeding one hundred pounds for each seaman or apprentice. Ibid. s. 212.

311. If any seaman or apprentice belonging to any British ship is discharged or left behind at any place out of the United Kingdom, without full compliance by the master with all the provisions in this act contained, and becomes distressed, and is relieved under this act, or if any subject of her Majesty, after having been engaged by any person to serve in any ship belonging to any foreign power, or to the subject of any foreign power, becomes distressed, and is so relieved, the wages (if any) due to such seaman or apprentice, and all expenses incurred for his subsistence, necessary clothing, conveyance home, and burial in case he should die abroad before reaching home, shall be a charge upon the ship, whether British or foreign, to which he belonged: and the Board of Trade may (besides suing for any penalties incurred) sue for and recover such wages and expenses, with costs, either from the master of the ship or the owner for the time being; and such sums shall be recoverable in the same way as crown debts or wages. Ibid. s. 213.

312. The claims of seamen to be so relieved or sent home are subject to such regulations and conditions as the Board of Trade impose. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 22.

313. The Board of Trade may issue instructions concerning the relief to be administered to distressed seamen and apprentices (under sects. 211 and 212 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104)), determining in what cases and under what circumstances relief is to be administered; all powers of recovering expenses incurred with respect to distressed seamen and apprentices, which by s. 213 of that act are given to the Board, extend to all expenses incurred by any foreign government for the purpose, and repaid to such government by her Majesty's government, and also to any expenses incurred by the conveying home of such seamen or apprentices in foreign as well as British ships; all provisions concerning the relief of distressed seamen and apprentices, subjects of her Majesty, which are contained in these sections of the act, and in this section, extend to seamen and apprentices, not subjects of her Majesty, supplied to seamen. It is expected that masters relieved in these circumstances will repay expenses incurred on their behalf, and they should be required to sign an undertaking to do so in the form given in the Appendix L. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, par. 153, p. 43.

(172) Whenever a distressed Canadian seaman, and who last served in a ship registered at a port of the Dominion, receives relief, an affidavit in the form set forth in Appendix K., which has been approved by the Canadian Government, should be laid before him for his signature. The object is to enable the Board of Trade to obtain repayment from the Canadian Government of the expenses incurred in respect of the seaman. The affidavits should be sent home with the quarterly accounts. In any case in which the seaman is unable to make the affidavit, the reason must be stated against his name in the column for remarks in the subsistence list. Ibid. par. 152, p. 43.

reduced to distress in foreign parts by reason of their having been shipwrecked, discharged, or left behind from any British ship; subject to such modifications as the Board of Trade may think fit. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 16.

314. For provisions for the relief and support of disabled seamen found abroad, see Seamen's Fund Winding-up Act, 1851 (c. 102), so far as the same is not repealed by sect. 25 of the M. S. Law Amendment Act, 1853 (c. 131), the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), and the Statute Law Revision Act, 1875 (c. 66).

2. In the United Kingdom.

(a) Generally.

316. Foreign seamen discharged in Great Britain, and who recover wages in a suit against a foreign ship in which they served, are not entitled as of course to their passage-money home, but will obtain it when their consul certifies that they have gone or are about to go home. The Raffaelluccia, 37 L. T. 365.

(b) *Lascars and Natives of India.

317. The East India Company is to take charge of and send home or otherwise provide for all persons, being Lascars or other natives of the territories under its government, who are found destitute in the United Kingdom; and if any such person is relieved by any guardians or other officers for the relief of the poor, such functionaries may, by letter by post or otherwise, give notice thereof in writing to the secretary of the Court of Directors, specifying, so far as is practicable, (1) The name of the person so relieved or maintained; (2) The part of the territories of the East India Company of which he professes to be a native; (3) The name of the ship in which he was brought to the United Kingdom; (4) The port or place abroad from which such ship sailed, and the port or place in the United Kingdom at which such ship arrived, when he was so brought to the United Kingdom, and the time of such arrival: the said East India Company is to repay to these functionaries out of its revenues all monies duly expended by them in relieving or maintaining such destitute person, after such notice. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 22.

25. Natives of Asia or other Countries having no Consul in the United Kingdom.

1. Return Passage or Means of Return.

318. If a native of any country in Asia, Africa, or of any of the islands in the South Sea or the Pacific Ocean, or of any other country not having any consul in the United Kingdom, is brought to the United Kingdom in any ship, as a seaman, and left there, and within six months of his being so left becomes chargeable upon the poor rate, or commits any act rendering him liable to be convicted as an idle and disorderly person, or any other act of vagrancy, penalty against the master or owner, or in case of a foreign ship the consignee at the time of the seaman being so left, not exceeding £30, unless he can show the person so left quitted the ship without the consent of the master, or that due means have been afforded by such master, owner, or consignee, or one of them, to such person, of returning to his native country, or to the country in which he was shipped. The court inflicting such penalty may order the whole or any part thereof to be applied towards the relief or sending home of such person. See the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), s. 16.†

26. Compensation for improper Discharge.

See tit. WAGES, c. 14.

27. Inquiry into Cause of Death.

319. As to the inquiry to be made into the cause of death of any seaman or apprentice dying on board on the voyage, see Pt. VI. p. 2191.

* (173) Expenses on account of Lascars being paid by the Indian Government when over a distressed seaman, being a native of British India, is relieved, attention should be called to the fact by writing against his name, in the column for remarks in the Form C. 20, the words "native of India." The birthplace of the seaman and port of shipment should also be given. Ibid. par. 151, p. 43.

† (174) The penalty in the above section is not to be recoverable in the same manner as wages, but according to the provision of Part X. of the principal act.

28. Extension of Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, to—.*

320. For provisions enlarging the powers of county courts as to disputes between employers and workmen, and giving other courts a limited jurisdiction in respect thereof, and for the adjustment and set-off between employer and workman of all claims incidental to the relation between them, whether liquidated or unliquidated, for damages or otherwise, see the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (c. 90).

321. As to the application of the act to Scotland and Ireland, Ibid. ss. 14 and 15.

322. The expression "workman" in this act does not include a domestic or menial servant, but means any person who, being a labourer, servant in husbandry, journeyman artificer, handicraftsman, miner, or otherwise engaged in manual labour, and whether under or above twenty-one years of age, has entered into or works under a contract with an employer, verbal or in writing. Ibid. s. 10.

323. For provisions extending and regulating the liability of employers to make compensation for personal injuries suffered by workmen in their service, see the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (c. 42).

324. The expression "workman" in this act means a railway servant, and any person to whom the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, applies. Ibid. s. 8.

325. The 13th sect. of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (c. 90), is repealed so far as it excludes therefrom seamen, and sea apprentices, and that act shall apply to them. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 11.

325a. The M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243, which enables a seaman who neglects, without reasonable cause, to join his ship to be punished upon proceedings before a court of summary jurisdiction with imprisonment and forfeiture of part of his wages, by implication takes away any other remedy against the seaman for breach of contract. The Great Northern Steamship Co. v. Edgehill, 11 Q. B. D. 225.

326. And the shipowner cannot, where the amount which he claims does not exceed £10, take proceedings for the recovery of damages under the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875 (c. 90), s. 4. Ibid.

326a. The 243rd section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (modified by sect. 10 of 43 & 44 Vict. c. 16), imposing upon seamen who neglect or refuse to join their ships certain punishments, was held impliedly to take away other remedies from the shipowner, who was therefore held not entitled to recover damages under the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, as extended by sect. 11 of 43 & 44 Vict. c. 16. Great Northern Fishing Co. v. Edgehill, 11 Q. B. D. 225.

327. But by section 54 of the Merchant Shipping (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883, it is enacted: Nothing in the 243rd section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, or in sect. 28 of this act, shall be deemed to have taken away or to limit any remedy by action, or by summary procedure before justices which an owner or master would have but for the said sections, for any breach of contract in respect of the matters constituting an offence under the said sections, but no owner or master shall be compensated more than once in respect of the same damage. Ibid.

327a. A mortgagee took possession of and placed a man on the mortgaged vessel, and gave notice to the master that he had taken possession. The master, by direction of the mortgagor, went to sea with the man in possession on board. In a suit in rem by the master for wages, and compensation for wrongful dismissal, held, that he had by his conduct forfeited any claim to wages or compensation, except wages earned before the mortgagee took possession. The Fairport, 10 P. D. 13; 54 L. J. P. D. 3; 5 Asp. 348.

29. Conditional Advance Notes Illegal.

328. After the 1st of August, 1881, any document authorizing or promising, or purporting to do so, the future payment of money on account of a seaman's wages conditionally on his going to sea

* (174a) Held, that a man who was engaged as a fireman on board a steamer, and who, through the negligence of the chief engineer, and while executing his orders, fell into the crank pit of the engine, which was left by the chief engineer not properly protected, was not a seaman within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, and damages awarded him accordingly. Grace v. Cawthorne, Southwark Co. Co. February 20, 1883.

from any port in the United Kingdom, and made before those wages have been earned, is void. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 2.

329. No money paid in satisfaction or in respect of any such document shall be deducted from a seaman's wages, and no person shall have any right of action, suit, or set-off against the seaman or his assignee in respect of any money so paid, or purporting to have been so paid. Ibid.

330. Nothing in this section shall affect any allotment note made under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854. Ibid. s. 2, sub-s. 3.

30. Right of Complaint of Unseaworthiness or Insufficient Accommodation.

331. The owner or master is also liable to pay to a seaman or apprentice such compensation for his detention under such circumstances as the court may award. See M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 9.

See tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. c. 6, p. 1272.

31. Right of Application for Detention of Ship for Survey as Unsafe.

See tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. c. 1, p. 1258.

32. Seamen's Licensed Lodging-houses.

332. The sanitary authority of any seaport town may pass byelaws for the licensing and periodical inspection of seamen's lodging-houses, for granting to persons so licensed authority to designate their houses as seamen's licensed lodging-houses, and for prescribing penalties for breach of these byelaws. But no such byelaws shall take effect till they have received the Board of Trade's approval. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 9.

33. Persons licensed to procure Seamen.

333. The Board of Trade may grant to such persons as it thinks fit licences to engage or supply seamen or apprentices for merchant ships in the United Kingdom, for such periods, upon such terms, and revocable upon such conditions, as it thinks proper. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 146.

334. For penalties against any person not licensed, except the owner, master or mate of the ship, or the bond fide servant and in the constant employ of the owner, or a superintendent duly appointed, supplying any seaman or apprentice for any ship in the United Kingdom, and against any person employing any unlicensed person, other than persons so excepted, for supplying any seaman or apprentice for any such ship, and against any person knowingly receiving on board any seaman or apprentice so illegally supplied, Ibid. s. 147.

335. The respondent having bond fide contracted to purchase 1-64th share in a British ship from P., who, though not registered as owner, had the full possession and control of the ship, under a contract to purchase the sixty-four shares, supplied an apprentice to P., who engaged the apprentice for the ship. Held, that the respondent was an "owner" within the meaning of the exemption contained in sect. 147 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), since, though not a registered owner, he had a contract enforceable in equity for the purchase of a share in the ship. Hughes v. Sutherland, 7 Q. B. D. 160; 50 L. J. C. L. 567; 4 Asp. 459.

34. Delay in Payment of Wages.

336. As to the right of masters and seamen to ten days' double pay when the payment of their wages has been improperly delayed, see tit. WAGES, c. 14.

35. Persons enticing to desert, or harbouring Deserters.

337. Penalty against every person who persuades or attempts to persuade any seaman or apprentice to neglect or refuse to join, proceed to sea in, or desert, his ship, or otherwise absent himself from his duty, in respect of each such seaman or apprentice, not exceeding £10; and against every person who wilfully harbours or secretes the seaman or apprentice, knowing or having reason to believe him to have so done, not exceeding £20. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 257.

338. Although all the formalities prescribed by sect. 150 of the M. S. Act, 1854, may not have been complied with in the engagement of a seaman, it is an offence under sect. 257 of the act to persuade or attempt to persuade such seaman from joining. Austin v. Olsen, L. R. 3 Q. B. 208; 37 L. J. M. C. 34; 3 Asp. 52; 9 B. & S. 46.

36. Sailors' Homes.*

339. As to the powers of corporations, associations, or trustees to appropriate lands for sailors' homes, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 546.

Part V. OFFENCES AND PUNISHMENTS.

1. Generally.†

340. So much of the third part of this act as relates to discipline applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad when they are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters and crews. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

341. Any master, seaman, or apprentice of any British ship who by wilful breach of duty, neglect of duty, or drunkenness, does any act tending to the immediate loss, or serious damage of the ship, or to endanger the life or limb of any person belonging thereto, or who by such conduct refuses or omits to do any lawful act proper to be done by him for preserving the ship from such loss or damage, or any person belonging to her from immediate danger to life or limb, is guilty of a misdemeanour. Ibid. s. 239.

341a. For provisions as to discipline, ill-treatment, punishments, injuries and casualties in relation to crews of British fishing vessels, see M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41), ss. 28—35, and 43—45; and Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices of September, 1883.

2. Persons liable to Discipline.

342. Every seafaring person whom the master of any ship is, by act of parliament, compelled to take on board and convey, and every person who goes to sea in any ship without the consent of the master or owner or other person entitled to give such consent, shall, so long as he

(177) See act of the Government of New Zealand for preventing desertion and other misconduct of seamen belonging to foreign ships, 13 Hertlet, 1045.

(178) Crimes committed on the high seas on board any British ship, and offences against property or person committed at any place in foreign countries by any person who at the time of the commission of the offence belongs to any British ship, or by any British subject who has within the previous three months belonged to any British ship, are subject to the same punishments and may be tried in the same manner as if they had been committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty in England, that is to say, according to the common law of England. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, par. 185, p. 55.

(179) The consul will, however, remember that, subject to any special provisions by treaty, offences against the municipal law of any country, committed within the limits of that country, although committed on board a British ship and by British subjects, whether they may be tried by British law or not, are certainly liable to be tried by the courts and according to the law of that country. The consul will also remember that persons committing offences on board a foreign ship, though British subjects, are liable to be tried by the law of the country to which the ship belongs. Ibid. p. 186.

(180) The master has the sole and exclusive command on board the vessel, and the inferior officers, as well as the common sailors, are bound to obey his lawful commands. Butler v. M'Leellan, Ware, 219. [AMERICAN.]

(181) The general authority of the master by the common law to correct the offences of his crew, provided such correction be exercised with patience and discretion, was expressly recognized by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 93, s. 78, but is not referred to in the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104).

(182) Though a master of a ship, in a foreign port, has a right in certain cases to imprison on shore a mariner under his command, yet he can exercise that right only in cases of flagrant offences, and where there is a positive necessity of removing the offender. Buddington v. Smith, 13 Conn. 334. [AMERICAN.]

remains in such ship, be subject to the same laws and regulations for preserving discipline, and to the same penalties and punishments for offences constituting or tending to a breach of discipline, to which he would be subject if he were a member of the crew and had signed the agreement. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 245.

(184) Arrangements by agreements, &c. have been entered into between Great Britain and foreign powers (as shown in Appendix P.) for the mutual surrender of seamen not being slaves, who desert from merchant ships of the contracting parties. On the desertion of a seaman or apprentice from a British ship at a port in such territories or colonies, or where the local authorities are willing to do so, the consul may apply to the authorities to assist in the apprehension and conveyance on board his ship of such deserter. The arrangements do not, however, apply to deserters from British ships who are subjects of the country where the desertion takes place. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 174, p. 51.

(185) Such arrangements have been made with the following countries:—Austria, dated April 30, 1868; Belgium, July 23, 1862; Brazil, April 22, 1873; Chili, Oct. 4, 1854; Colombia, Feb. 16, 1866; Denmark, June 21, 1881; France, June 23, 1854; Germany, Nov. 5, 1879; Greece, August, 1875; Italy, August 6, 1863; Madagascar, June 27, 1865; Morocco, Dec. 9, 1856; Netherlands, Feb. 14, 1854; Nicaragua, Feb. 11, 1860; Peru, April 10, 1850; Portugal, July 3, 1842; Russia, Jan. 12, 1859; Salvador, Oct. 24, 1862; Sandwich or Hawaiian Islands, July 10, 1851; Siam, April 18, 1855; Spain, April 19, 1860; Sweden and Norway, August 4, 1852; Tunis, July 19, 1875; Turkey, April 19, 1865. For the terms thereof, see Appendix P. Ibid. pp. 126—137.

(186) As to desertion generally, and that the wages of deserters are not to be treated as forfeited unless so decided by a competent court, or by a superintendent under a reference to him, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of August, 1885, p. 37.

(195) If seamen bargain for a certain proportion of the ship's freight instead of wages engaged, or any sea apprentice is guilty of desertion, he is liable to forfeit all or any of the clothes and effects he leaves on board, and all or any of the wages he has earned; and also, if such desertion takes place abroad, at the discretion of the court, to forfeit all or any of the wages he may earn in any other ship until his return to the United Kingdom, and to satisfy any excess of wages paid by the master or owner of the ship from which he deserts to any substitute engaged in his place at a higher rate of wages. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243, sub-sect. 1, as amended by M. S. (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), Sched.

344. Whenever any seaman lawfully engaged, or any sea apprentice is guilty of offences as follows: neglecting or refusing, without reasonable cause, to join or proceed to sea in his ship, or of absence without leave at any time within twenty-four hours of the ship's sailing from any port, or of absence at any time without leave and sufficient reason from his ship or his duty, not amounting to or treated as desertion by the master, he is liable, at the discretion of the court, to forfeit out of his wages a sum not exceeding two days' pay, and also for every twenty-four hours of absence a sum not exceeding six days' pay, or any expenses properly incurred in hiring a substitute. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243, sub-sect. 2.

345. Whenever any seaman or apprentice is brought before any court on the ground of his having neglected or refused to join or to proceed to sea in any ship in which he is engaged to serve, or of having deserted or otherwise absented himself therefrom without leave, such court may, if the master or owner, or his agent, so requires, cause him to be conveyed on board for the purpose of proceeding on the voyage, or deliver him to the master or mate of the ship, or the owner or his agent, to be by them so conveyed, and may order any costs and expenses properly incurred on behalf of the master or owner by reason of the offence to be paid by the offender, and, if necessary, to be deducted from his wages earned, or in course of earning. Ibid. s. 247.

346. Within the United Kingdom a seaman or sea apprentice is not liable to imprisonment for deserting or neglecting, or refusing without reasonable cause, to join his ship or to proceed to sea in her, nor for absence without leave within twenty-four hours of his ship's leaving port, or at any other time. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 10.

347. In the United Kingdom, when at the commencement, or during any voyage, any seaman or apprentice refuses or neglects to join, or deserts from, or refuses to proceed to sea in, any ship in which he is duly engaged to serve, or is found otherwise absenting himself therefrom without leave, the master, mate, owner, ship's husband, or consignee may, with or without the assistance of local police officers or constables, who are directed to give the same, if required, convey him on board. But if he so requires he shall first be taken before a proper court; and if it appears to that court that he has been conveyed on board, or taken before it on improper or insufficient grounds, penalty against the person so proceeding not exceeding £20, which, however, shall be a bar to any action for false imprisonment. Ibid.

348. In the United Kingdom, if a seaman, or apprentice to the sea service, intends to absent himself from his ship or his duty, he may give notice thereof to the owner or master, not less than forty-eight hours before the time he ought to be on board; and in that event, the court shall not exercise any of the powers conferred on it by sect. 247 of the M. S. Act, 1854. Ibid.

349. But subject thereto, the powers conferred by sect. 247 may still be exercised, notwithstanding the abolition of imprisonment for desertion and similar offences, and of apprehension without warrant. Ibid.

350. Nothing in this section shall affect sect. 239 of the M. S. Act, 1854, making misconduct endangering ship, life, or member, a misdemeanour. Ibid.

351. The ancient maritime law with reference to desertion has not been abrogated by statute law except in cases to which statute law exclusively applies. The Westmoreland, 1 W. Rob. 221; The Two Sisters, 2 W. Rob. 137.

352. Desertion to work a forfeiture of in money, in case freight is not to be had for her when she arrives at the port for which she was bound, and she must go further in quest of it, the seamen must go with her. See 2 Browne's Civ. and Adm. Law (2nd ed.), p. 179.

wages must be without any animus revertendi. The Roebuck, 2 Asp. N.S. 387.

353. As to what constitutes desertion, see The Agincourt, 1 Hagg. 281.

354. As to the sending of copies of entries and certificates of desertion abroad to the registrar-general, see No. 375, p. 2184.

2. Conduct amounting to—.*

355. Action for wages by a seaman who left the ship with the permission of the master for a short time, but refused to return when required by the master, dismissed with costs, wages being held forfeited by reason of desertion. The Bulmer, 1 Hagg. 163.

356. A mariner who quitted his ship on being ordered so to do by the mate, and on applying to the master on shore for his discharge was directed to return to the ship, which he refused and neglected to do, but engaged himself on board another ship. Held, to have forfeited his wages, such conduct amounting to desertion. The Jupiter, 2 Hagg. 221.

357. A sailor, under articles providing for a forfeiture of wages in case of breach of any of his engagements, among which is that of serving faithfully during the voyage, can recover nothing if he is left ashore in the course of it owing to his own fault in being absent, though he had no intention of deserting. Sherman v. Bennett, M. & M. 489.

3. Conduct not amounting to—.†

358. The seaman went on shore (it being a question whether or not he was authorized to do so), and, in consequence of a disorderly frolic, was locked up in prison as a disorderly person, but released on application of the master. Such acts held not to amount to desertion. The Agincourt, 1 Hagg. 281.

359. The conduct of seamen in quitting the ship in a foreign port in consequence of a quarrel with the master, it being questionable whether he did not during the quarrel give them permission to depart, held, though improper, not to amount to desertion. A tender of wages up to the time of their joining another vessel, made by the master before action, pronounced for, but without costs. The court likewise refused to pronounce for any allowance for the travelling expenses, &c. of the seamen to join the other ship. The Frederick, ibid. 211.

360. Articles of agreement for service in a privateer contained a clause imposing forfeiture of wages for twenty-four hours' absence without leave, and also the following memorandum in the margin, viz., "to leave at the end of three months if the ship be in port and in perfect safety." The ship belonged to London. The master's cook, who had signed these articles, brought an action against the master for wages. It appeared that the plaintiff had served ten months, and on his return from a cruise, while the ship was in Yarmouth Roads, and the master was on shore, he asked leave of the mate to go on shore and see his wife, but was told by the mate that he could not say whether he might have leave or not; the plaintiff, however, went on shore, and did not afterwards join the ship. Held, that, under such circumstances, the master could not have refused the plaintiff leave without a sufficient reason, and the jury having found that the ship was in a place of safety when the plaintiff quitted it, a verdict was given for the plaintiff, of which the Court of Common Pleas afterwards approved. Neave v. Pratt (1805), 2 N. R. 408.

361. If seamen go on shore on the ship's duty, and when the boat is about to return, request to be permitted to remain on shore to get some victuals, which is refused, and the boat goes without them, if they afterwards go and offer to return to their duty on board the ship, it is not a desertion. Sigard v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 71.

* (196) If a seaman sent on shore in the employment of the ship neglects to return to his duty, the ship continuing at the port a sufficient time to give him opportunity to do so, the master in the meantime making inquiry for him, such voluntary absence will be a desertion, and forfeit his wages. Piehl v. Balchen, Olcott, Adm. 24. [AMERICAN.]

† (197) A British seaman does not forfeit his wages merely by coming on shore to demand legally payment of his wages, but this must be done within forty-eight hours. Bab-

bel v. Gardner (The Brig Catherine), Bee, 87. [AMERICAN.]

(198) Seamen absent from a ship without any fault of their own are nevertheless entitled to full wages. Five Seamen v. Fair American, Bee, 134. [AMERICAN.]

(199) It is not desertion for a seaman to leave the vessel against orders to go before a consul to complain of his treatment, nor merely to threaten to desert. Hart v. The Otis, Crabbe, 52. [AMERICAN.]

362. A seaman dismissed the ship without lawful cause is not to be deemed a deserter. Limland v. Stephens, 3 Esp. 269.

363. A seaman quitted the vessel at Swansea, on her return voyage (her port of discharge being London), without leave, and remained absent two days, but under circumstances denoting an animus revertendi, he having afterwards offered to return to his duty. Such conduct held not to amount to a total desertion. Wages pronounced for accordingly, with costs, and, under the circumstances of the case, without any deduction on the ground of temporary desertion. The Two Sisters, 2 W. Rob. 125.

364. A master of a vessel was sent home by the British consul on a criminal charge, and the mate was sent home also by direction of the consul as a witness. The master was subsequently discharged. Held, that the mate, who acted under such order, was not guilty of desertion so as to forfeit his wages. Cross v. Hyne, 3 Asp. 80.

4. Justification.

(a) Generally.

365. If a seaman or apprentice belonging to any ship is detained on a charge of desertion or any kindred offence, and if upon a survey of the ship being made under sect. 7 of the M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), it is proved that she is not in a fit condition to proceed to sea, or that her accommodation is insufficient, the owner or master of the ship shall be liable to pay to such seaman or apprentice such compensation for his detention as the court, having cognizance of the proceedings may award. The M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 9.

366. If a master of a ship by inhuman treatment compel a sailor to quit a ship, it is not such a desertion as will amount to a forfeiture of his wages for the voyage performed. Limland v. Stephens, 3 Esp. 269.

367. To a plea of desertion, replication, that while the plaintiff was serving as seaman on board the C., the captain and officers flogged and punished him with great and unreasonable cruelty and severity, and that such flogging and punishment were not rendered necessary by his mutinous or improper conduct, but were unnecessary and unreasonable; that the plaintiff requested the captain and officers to desist, which they refused to do, whereupon the plaintiff, having reasonable grounds to believe that they would continue to flog and punish him with great and unreasonable cruelty and severity, in order to escape therefrom, deserted from the ship. Held, a good answer to the plea. Edward v. Trevellick, 4 El. & Bl. 59; 1 Jur. N.S. 110; 24 L. J. Q. B. 9.

368. The plaintiff to a plea of desertion replied, that he was a negro, and that negroes are bought and sold as slaves in divers States of the United States; that he was serving on board the C., and, before he deserted, the captain of the ship threatened to sell him, the plaintiff, as a slave to citizens of the United States; that San Francisco is situated in one of the United States, to wit, in California, and that the plaintiff had just and reasonable grounds for believing, and did believe, that, on the arrival of the ship at San Francisco, the captain was about and meant to carry his threat into execution; and that in order to prevent the captain from selling him as a slave, the plaintiff deserted. Held, no answer to the plea. Ibid.

(c) Imprisonment.

369. Seamen were refused by the captain permission to go on shore, under circumstances rendering the refusal a harsh and indiscreet act of authority. They went on shore to complain thereof, and at the complaint of the captain were confined for twenty-five days in the House of Correction. Held, that the seamen were justified by such mode of treatment in retiring from the ship, and that their having so done did not enure to a forfeiture of wages. The Minerva, 1 Hagg. 368.

* (200) Seamen who are obliged to leave the vessel during the voyage in consequence of the cruelty of the master and mate are entitled to their wages to the time of leaving. Rice v. The Polly and Kitty (Moran v. Baudin), 2 Pet. Ad. 420. Such seamen are entitled to the full wages of the voyage. Ward v. Arnes, 9 Johns. 138; Sherwood v. McIntosh, Ware, 109. [AMERICAN.]

(201) Repeated acts of cruelty and oppression on the part of the master will justify a seaman in deserting the vessel. Steele v. Thacker, Ware, 91. [AMERICAN.]

(202) But not a single act of assault and battery, although it may exceed the bounds of moderation, unless there be reasonable grounds for apprehending that such acts of oppression will be repeated. Ibid.

370. Seamen refused to work, went ashore without leave, to seek advice as to the ship's articles, which were obscure, were imprisoned for such conduct, and refused, under advice, to return. Wages pronounced for. The threat of illegal imprisonment, even to enforce a lawful obligation, is an important ingredient in the consideration of such a case. A fortiori is the imprisonment itself, as taking away all locus penitentiae by bodily duress, for had not the threat been used or the imprisonment inflicted, the seamen might have returned to their duty. The Westmoreland, 1 W. Rob. 216, 225.

See also Nos. 325—327, p. 2176, and No. 346, p. 2180.

(d) *Illness.

371. Illness held to be a reasonable cause for a mariner leaving the ship before delivery of cargo, or a legal discharge. The Test, 3 Hagg. 315.

(e) Bad Provisions.†

372. Action for wages by a seaman who had engaged to serve on board a collier from Shields to London and back, and quitted the vessel at the port of London in consequence of not being supplied with provisions. Held, that an abandonment of the ship under such circumstances did not work a forfeiture of wages. Wages pronounced for accordingly, with costs. The Castilia, 1 Hagg. 59.

(f) Delay in Unloading.‡

5. Evidence.

(a) Generally.§

373. If the master of any British ship leaves behind any seaman or apprentice at any place situate in any British possession abroad, on any ground whatever, without previously obtaining the sanction in writing indorsed on the agreement of the British consular officer there, or in his absence of two respectable merchants, stating the fact and the cause thereof, whether such cause be unfitness or inability to proceed to sea, or desertion or disappearance, he shall for each such default be guilty of a misdemeanour. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 207.

(b) Entries in Official Log.

374. Upon the desertion of any seaman an entry thereof shall be made in the official log-book, and shall be signed by the master and also by the mate or one of the crew, and in any subsequent proceeding such entry shall, if practicable, be produced or proved; and in default of

* (203) If a sick seaman be sent from a ship to a hospital in a foreign port, and the ship leaves the port without his rejoining her, he is not to be regarded as absent without leave, so as to stop the running of his wages. Nevitt v. Clarke, Olcott, Adm. 316. [AMERICAN.]

† (204) When a seaman justifies his leaving the ship in a foreign port on the ground that bad provisions were supplied, they must be really bad and unfit for the men's support. Ulary v. The Washington, Crabbe, 204. [AMERICAN.]

‡ (205) If the master or owner defers beyond a reasonable time to unload the vessel, such laches may be regarded as equivalent to a discharge of the seamen. The Eagle, Olcott, Adm. 232, 386, 387. [AMERICAN.]

§ (207) Whenever a seaman is left behind on account of desertion, an entry of the desertion must be made in the official log-book, and must be signed by the master, and also by the mate or one of the crew. This entry in the log-book must be shown to the consul, and he will then examine into the allegation of the desertion so made; and if, after full inquiry, he is satisfied it is correct, but not otherwise, he will endorse upon the agreement a certificate in accordance with the provisions of sect. 207 in the form in Appendix Q. The consul will then make copies of the entry in the official log-book, and of the certificates so endorsed by him upon the agreement, and will certify the same to be true copies, and seal them with his official seal, and will transmit them by the first opportunity to the Registrar-General of Seamen, 82, Basinghall-street, London, in order that they may be produced in evidence if required. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, par. 175, p. 52.

(208) The burthen of proving desertion lies upon him who sets it up in answer to a claim for wages, but when that has been proved as required by sect. 250, it lies on the seaman or apprentice so charged with desertion to show a proper certificate of discharge, or to justify on legal grounds the fact of his leaving the ship, unless he can show that no entry has been made in the official log, or effectually impeach the truth of it, or otherwise shake the credibility of the evidence adduced against him. Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 247.

such production or proof the court hearing the case may, at its discretion, refuse to receive evidence of the offence. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243.

375. In all cases of desertion from any ship abroad, the master shall produce the entry of the desertion in the official log-book to the person thereby required to indorse on the agreement a certificate of such desertion; and such person shall thereupon make and certify a copy of such entry, and also a copy of the certificate of desertion; and if he is a public functionary he shall, and in other cases the master shall, forthwith transmit such copies to the registrar-general of shipping and seamen in England, who shall, if required, cause the same to be produced in any legal proceeding; and such copies, purporting to be so made and certified, and to have come from the custody of the registrar, shall in any legal proceeding relating to such desertion be received as evidence of the entries therein appearing. Ibid. s. 249.

376. Whenever a question arises whether the wages of any seaman or apprentice are forfeited for desertion, it is sufficient to show that the seaman or apprentice was duly engaged in or belonged to the ship, and quitted it before the completion of the voyage or engagement, or if the voyage was to terminate in the United Kingdom and the ship has not returned, that he is absent from her, and that an entry of the desertion has been duly made in the official log-book, unless the seaman or apprentice produces a proper certificate of discharge, or otherwise shows to the satisfaction of the court that he had sufficient reasons for leaving his ship. Ibid. s. 250.

377. The certificate of a consul (given under the 207th section of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104)), that a seaman had deserted, held not to be conclusive evidence of the fact of desertion, in proceedings taken by the seaman for wages. Lewis v. Jewhurst, 2 Asp. 489.

378. To constitute a total desertion entailing a forfeiture of wages, the onus of proof lies upon the owner. The Two Sisters, 2 W. Rob. 138.

8. Misconduct endangering Ship, Life, or Member.

380. Any master, seaman, or apprentice belonging to any British ship who by wilful breach or neglect of duty, or by reason of drunkenness, does any act tending to the immediate loss, destruction, or serious damage of such ship, or tending immediately to endanger the life or limb of any person belonging to or on board such ship, or who by wilful breach or neglect of duty, or by reason of drunkenness, refuses or omits to do any lawful act proper and requisite to be done by him for preserving such ship from immediate loss, destruction, or serious damage, or for preserving any person belonging to or on board of such ship from immediate danger to life or limb, is guilty of a misdemeanor. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 239.

381. The above section is not affected by anything in this section which abolishes imprisonment for desertion, absence without leave, or neglect or refusal to join or proceed to sea, and makes other provisions in lieu thereof. See Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16).

9. Wilful Disobedience.

382. A seaman for wilful disobedience to any lawful command is liable to imprisonment not exceeding four weeks, with or without hard labour, and, at the discretion of the court, to forfeit out of his wages a sum not exceeding two days' pay. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243, sub-s. 4.

10. Mutinous Conduct.

See tit. WAGES, c. 16.

11. Continued Wilful Disobedience, or Neglect of Duty.

383. A seaman for continued wilful disobedience to lawful commands, or continued wilful neglect of duty, is liable to imprisonment not exceeding twelve weeks, with or without hard labour, and at the discretion of the court, to forfeit for every twenty-four hours' continuance thereof a sum not exceeding six days' pay, or any expenses properly incurred in hiring a substitute. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243, sub-s. 5.

12. Insubordination.

See tit. WAGES, c. 16.

13. Assaulting Officers.

384. A seaman assaulting any master or mate is liable to imprisonment not exceeding twelve weeks, with or without hard labour. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243, sub-s. 6.

14. Combining to disobey, Neglect Duty, or Impede Navigation.

385. Any seaman lawfully engaged, or any sea apprentice combining with any of the crew to disobey lawful commands, neglect duty, or impede navigation of the ship or the progress of the voyage, is liable to imprisonment not exceeding twelve weeks, with or without hard labour. Ibid. s. 243; sub-s. 7.

† (213) When an embezzlement has arisen from the fault, fraud, connivance, or negligence of the crew, they are bound to contribute to it in proportion to their wages; when the embezzlement is fixed on an individual, he is solely responsible. When it is clearly shown to have been made by the crew, but the particular offenders are unknown, and from the circumstances of the the ship, or embezzling or wilfully damaging any of her stores or cargo, is liable to forfeit out of wages a sum equal to the loss sustained, and, at the discretion of the court, to imprisonment not exceeding twelve weeks, with or without hard labour. Ibid. s. 243, sub-s. 8.

387. If the cargo be embezzled or injured by the fraud or negligence of the seamen, the owner has a right to deduct a compensation from the wages of those whose misconduct has produced the injury. Molloy, b. 2, c. 3, s. 9; 2 Show. 167; 1 Ld. Raym. 650.

388. An act of embezzling is a reason for withholding a proportionate part of the wages of a mariner, but does not work a forfeiture of the whole. The Malta, 2 Hagg. 172.

389. A seaman entered the master's cabin in his absence, with three or four others of the crew, and drank three bottles of wine from a locker left open, and afterwards, though rather tipsy, returned to his work. Held, that such conduct did not amount to a forfeiture of wages. The Gondolier, 3 Hagg. 191.

390. Amongst the most important of the duties of chief mate are a due vigilance, care, and attention to preserve the cargo from robbery, but he is not responsible for any embezzlement that may occur not arising from any neglect of duty on his part. The Duchess of Kent, 1 W. Rob. 285.

2. Evidence.†

391. If during the voyage part of the cargo be plundered, but by whom cannot case strong presumptions of guilt apply to the whole crew, all are liable; but where no fault, fraud, connivance, or negligence, is proved as against the crew, and no reasonable presumption is shown against their innocence, the loss must be borne exclusively by the owner or master. Speer v. Pearson, 1 Mason, 104. [AMERICAN.]

(214) In no case are the innocent part of the crew to contribute for the misdemeanors of the guilty; and in a case of uncertainty the burden of proof of innocence does not rest with the crew, but the guilt of the parties is to be established beyond all reasonable doubt before the contribution can be demanded. Ibid.

392. And semble, in such a case he is not even liable to a proportionate deduction from his wages, in common with the other sailors, on account of such embezzlement. Ibid.

393. In a claim for wages preferred by the steward, opposed on the ground of a deficiency in the linen, charged as embezzled or lost by the negligence of the steward, held, that proof of the loss was not sufficient, but that it must be shown that the articles had been delivered into his custody, and that the deficiency was imputable to him. Wages pronounced for. The Lady Campbell, 2 Hagg. 10.

394. Proof of a bottle of spirits being seen in the mariner's chest, held to be insufficient to sustain a charge of embezzlement working forfeiture of wages. The Test, 3 Hagg. 315.

16. Smuggling causing Loss.*

395. A seaman for any act of smuggling of which he is convicted, and whereby loss or damage is occasioned to the master or owner, is liable to pay to such master or owner a sum sufficient to reimburse him for such loss or damage; and the whole or a proportionate part of his wages may be retained in satisfaction or on account of such liability, without prejudice to any further remedy. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243, sub-s. 9.

396. By certain clauses in the ship's articles, it was provided that if contraband goods were found in the forecabin the seamen living therein should forfeit their wages and £10 penalty. Held, that the discovery of such goods there was not conclusive to work a forfeiture of wages against any of the seamen not alleged and proved to have been personally implicated in the offence. The Prince Frederick, 2 Hagg. 394.

17. Neglect or Refusal to work.

See tit. WAGES, c. 17.

18. False Statement of Name and Ship.

397. Penalty not exceeding £5 against any seaman who on or before being engaged wilfully and fraudulently makes a false statement of the name of his last ship or of his own name, and the penalty may be deducted from any wages he may earn by virtue of such engagement, and shall, subject to reimbursement for loss and expenses (if any) from any previous desertion, be paid like other penalties under this act. 399. In any legal proceeding in reference to the offences enumerated in s. 243,

* (216) Smuggling may be considered in diminution or in bar of the seaman's or master's wages, it being an offence in the nature of barratry, causing loss and delay to the vessel, for which he would justly be subject to make amends by forfeiture or subtraction of wages. Scott v. Russell, 1 Abb. Adm. 258. [AMERICAN.]

(for which see Nos. 343, 344, p. 2180), the entries as to the offence required to be made in the official log are, if practicable, to be produced or proved, and in default the court hearing the case may refuse to receive evidence of the offence. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 244.

See tit. EVIDENCE, c. 16, pp. 435, 436.

See c. 4, p. 2183.

24. Apprehension of Deserting or absenting Seamen.

400. Whenever any seaman or apprentice is brought before any court on the ground of his having neglected or refused to join or to proceed to sea in any ship in which he is engaged to serve, or of his having deserted or absented himself therefrom without leave, such court may, if the master, owner, or agent so requires, cause him to be conveyed on board or deliver him to the master, mate, or owner or his agent, to be by them so conveyed, and may order any costs and expenses properly incurred by the master or owner by reason of the offence to be paid by the offender, and, if necessary, to be deducted from any wages he has earned or may afterwards earn. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 247, as amended by Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), 2nd Sched.

401. Owners are not liable for an abuse by the master of the powers conferred on him by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 246 (now repealed), of apprehending deserters without a warrant. O'Neil v. Rankin, 3rd Series, vol. ii. p. 538. [SCOTCH.]

25. Costs of Conviction or Imprisonment.

402. Where in any proceeding as to seamen's wages it is shown that any seaman or apprentice has in the course of the voyage been convicted of any offence by any competent tribunal, and rightly punished for it, the court may direct a part of the wages due, not exceeding £3, to be applied in reimbursing any costs properly incurred by the master in procuring such conviction and punishment. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 251.

403. It may direct all or any of the costs of the master or owner in procuring the imprisonment of any seaman or apprentice in a foreign port, or in his maintenance whilst so imprisoned, to be paid out of his wages then or subsequently earned. Ibid. s. 263, sub-s. 5.

26. Forfeitures.

1. Generally.

See tit. WAGES, c. 16.

2. By Naval Courts.

See tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. II. p. 690.

3. Application.

404. All clothes, effects, wages, and emoluments which under these provisions are forfeited for desertion, shall be applied in the first instance towards the reimbursement of the expenses occasioned thereby to the master or owner of the ship; and may, if earned subsequently to the desertion, be recovered by such master, or owner, or his agent, as the deserter might have recovered the same if not forfeited; and in any legal proceeding relating to such wages the court may order the same to be paid accordingly; and subject to such reimbursement the same shall be paid into the Exchequer as the Treasury may direct; and in all other cases of forfeiture of wages under these provisions, the forfeiture shall, in the absence of specific directions, be for the benefit of the master or owner. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 253.

27. Fines.

1. Generally.

404a. See Pt. II. p. 2141, and as to deduction from wages, see tit. WAGES, c. 17.

2. Mode of Enforcing—.

405. Whenever any seaman commits an act of misconduct for which his agreement imposes a fine, which it is intended to enforce, an entry thereof shall be made in the official log-book, and a copy of such entry furnished or read over to the offender, and an entry of such reading over, and of the reply (if any) of the offender, shall be made, subject to the conditions before specified. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 256.

405a. Such fine shall be deducted and paid over as follows: if the offender is discharged in the United Kingdom, and the offence and such entries in respect thereof are proved, in the case of a foreign-going ship to the satisfaction of the superintendent before whom the offender is discharged, and in the case of a home-trade ship, to the satisfaction of the superintendent at or nearest to the place at which the crew is discharged, the master or owner shall deduct such fine from the wages of the offender, and pay the same over to such superintendent; and if before the final discharge of the crew in the United Kingdom any such offender enters any of her Majesty's ships, or is discharged abroad, and the offence and such entries are proved to the satisfaction of the officer in command of the ship he so enters, or of the consular officer, officer of customs, or other person by whose sanction he is so discharged, the fine shall be deducted, and an entry of such deduction shall then be made in the official log-book (if any) and signed by such officer or other person; and on the return of the ship to the United Kingdom the master or owner shall pay over such fine, in the case of foreign-going ships, to the superintendent before whom the crew is discharged, and in the case of home-trade ships to the superintendent at or nearest to the place at which the crew is discharged. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 256.

406. Penalty against any master or owner neglecting or refusing so to pay over such fine not exceeding six times the amount of the fine retained by him; no act of misconduct for which any such fine has been paid shall be otherwise punished under the provisions of this act. Ibid.

3. By Naval Court.

407. Every naval court may decide any questions as to fines arising between any of the parties to the proceedings before it; all such orders are conclusive in any subsequent legal proceedings. Ibid. s. 263, sub-s. 4.

4. Evidence.

(a) Entries in Official Log.

See tit. EVIDENCE, c. 16, p. 435.

28. Conveyance of Offenders and Witnesses to nearest British Court.*

408.—(1) Whenever any complaint is made to any British consular officer of any offence on the high seas committed by any master, seaman, or apprentice belonging to any British ship, such consular officer may inquire into the case on oath, and take steps for placing the offender under restraint and sending him to the

* (217) Upon a complaint being made to the consul of any offence against British law having been committed on the high seas, or if without complaint he becomes aware of any serious offence having been committed on board a British ship, he may inquire into the case upon oath, and may summon witnesses before him for that purpose, and if there is evidence which, in the opinion of the consul, is sufficient to substantiate the charge, he may send the offender to some place in the British dominions, at which he can be tried. As prosecutions in such cases have often failed for want of the observance of the proper formalities or for want of evidence, or for the want of a prosecutor, or of witnesses; and as sending home prisoners involves very serious expense, the consul will be careful to observe the following rules:—

(218) The consul will not send home the offender at the public expense unless the crime is murder, attempt to murder, piracy, slave trading, manslaughter, aggravated assault, wilful destruction of the ship, deliberate and concerted mutiny, or some other offence of a very serious nature involving risk to the life or welfare of others. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, par. 188.

(219) In cases of petty theft, and also in cases of insubordination and of other crimes of that description, the consul will in no case send the offender for trial, unless the master or agent of the ship, or some other person against whom the offence has been committed, undertakes to prosecute and to pay the expenses of sending home the offender and witnesses. This undertaking must be such as to be satisfactory to the consul, and must be forwarded by him to the Board of Trade. Ibid. par. 190, p. 96.

(220) The consul must in no case send the offender for trial unless he at the same time sends the necessary witnesses to give viu evidence at the trial, or is satisfied that they are about to proceed to the place where the trial is to be held. Ibid. par. 190.

(221) The consul should also send the original depositions. Ibid. par. 200, p. 58.

(222) See for other instructions to consuls in reference to sending offenders for trial, Ibid. paras. 191—200.

United Kingdom, or to any British possession where there is a court capable of taking cognizance of the offence, in any ship belonging to her Majesty or any of her subjects. (2) For this purpose such consular officer may order the master of any British ship bound to the United Kingdom or such British possession to give a passage and subsistence during the voyage to such offender, and the witnesses, but not more than one offender for every 100 tons register, or more than one witness for every fifty tons. Such consular officer shall endorse upon the agreement of the ship such particulars with respect to any offenders or witnesses sent in her as the Board of Trade requires. (3) Every such master shall on his ship's arrival in the United Kingdom, or British possession, give the offender into custody. Penalty for breach not exceeding £50; the expense of imprisoning the offender and of so conveying him and the witnesses in any other than the ship to which they belong, are part of the costs of the prosecution, or to be paid as costs incurred on account of seafaring subjects of her Majesty left in distress in foreign parts. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 268.

408a. Where a fugitive or prisoner is authorized to be returned to a port of her Majesty's dominions, in pursuance of Part I. and Part II. of this act, such person may be sent thither in any ship belonging to her Majesty, or any of her subjects. For this purpose the authority signing the warrant for return may order the master of any such ship to afford a passage and subsistence during the voyage to such person, his custodian, and the witnesses, but the master is not required to receive more than one such person for every 100 tons or more than one witness for every fifty tons. The authority shall endorse on the ship's agreement such particulars as to the person or witness sent as the Board of Trade may require. The master shall, on his arrival, cause such person, if not in custody, to be given into custody. Penalty for breach, after payment of a reasonable amount for expenses, £50. The Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (c. 69), s. 27.

409. The British consul sent home the master of a British ship on a criminal charge, and the mate as a witness. The master was subsequently discharged. Held, that the consul had authority to order the mate home. Cross v. Hyne, 3 Asp. 80.

29. Defence of Unseaworthiness or Insufficient Accommodation of Ship.

410. As to the right of any seaman or apprentice proceeded against for desertion, neglect, or refusing to join or proceed to sea in his ship, or being absent from or quitting the same without leave, when one-fourth of the seamen of the ship allege that she is, by reason of unseaworthiness, overloading, improper loading, defective equipment, or otherwise, not in a fit condition to proceed to sea, and that her accommodation is insufficient, to have such allegations inquired into by the court in which the proceedings are taken, provided the seaman or apprentice proceeded against complained to the master of such circumstances before leaving the ship, and as to the survey of the ship for that purpose, the costs of the survey, and the compensation to be made to the parties according to the result of the inquiry, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. p. 1272.

30. Persons liable to Discipline.

1. Seamen sent Home.

411. Seamen whom masters of ships are compelled to convey, and persons going in ships without leave, are to be subject to the same regulations for preserving discipline, and to the same penalties and punishments for offences, as the crew. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 245.

2. Stowaways.

See No. 411, supra.

31. Jurisdiction.

1. Generally.

412. All offences against property or person committed out of her Majesty's dominions by any master, seaman, or apprentice at the time, or within three months previously, employed in any British ship are to be deemed offences committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England; and the costs and expenses of prosecution thereof may be similarly paid. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 267.

413. If any British subject, charged with having committed any crime or offence on board any British ship on the high seas, or in any foreign port or harhour, or if any person, not a British subject, charged with having committed any crime or offence on board any British ship on the high seas, is found within the jurisdiction of any court of justice in her Majesty's dominions which would have had cognizance thereof if committed within its ordinary jurisdiction, such court shall have jurisdiction to try the offence as if such offence had been committed within such limits, but this shall not interfere with the act of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 96. See the M. S. Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 21.

414. When any court, justice, or magistrate has power to order payment of any seamen's wages, penalties, or other sums of money, if the party directed to pay is the master or owner, and it is not paid as prescribed in the order, the functionary making the order may, in addition to any other powers of compelling payment, direct the amount unpaid to be levied by distress, or pouncing and sale of the ship, her tackle, furniture, and apparel. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 523.

415. As to the prosecution of offenders under M. S. Acts, 1854 and 1876, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1254.

416. A foreigner, a ship's carpenter, belonging to a foreign merchant ship, was indicted for conspiring in this country, with the foreign owner and master, to destroy or cast away the vessel, with intent to prejudice the owners or insurers of ship or cargo (the counts charging an intent to defraud). It was admitted the prisoner was party to the scuttling the ship on the high seas, but the jury were directed to consider whether the prisoner was a party in this country to a previous plan or conspiracy to destroy the ship, not limited to its destination on the high seas, the principal offence not being triable in this country. As to a conspiracy so limited, quære. Reg. v. Kohn, 4 F. & F. 68.

2. Naval Courts.

See tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. II. p. 690.

3. Consular Officers.

See c. 28, p. 2188.

Part VI.—DECEASED.

1. Generally.*

417. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the wages and effects of deceased seamen and apprentices, applies to all sea-going British ships, wherever registered, of which the crews are discharged, or whose final port of destination is, in the United Kingdom, and to the owners, masters, and crews of such ships. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

418. The master of every foreign-going ship, whose crew is discharged in the United Kingdom, must keep a list on a Board of Trade form of the clothes and other effects belonging to any of the crew who have died, with a statement of the manner in which they have been dealt

421. If any seaman or apprentice to whom wages are due, notwithstanding that freight has not been earned, dies before they are paid, they shall be paid and applied like the wages of seamen who die during a voyage. Ibid. s. 184.

422. The 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 15 (since repealed, but similar to sect. 188 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104)) did not give any jurisdiction to a justice of the peace to adjudicate upon a claim for wages by the administrator of a deceased seaman, and such administrator was not deprived of his right of action by sect. 16. Hollingsworth v. Palmer, 4 Exch. 267; 18 L. J. Exch. 409.

423. On motion, at the instance of the master, for warrant of arrest against the proceeds of a ship for wages due to certain seamen who had died on the voyage, and which wages therefore he was (under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 52, since repealed) called upon to pay over to the Seamen's Hospital within three months, under a penalty of double the amount, the court, intimating a desire to protect the master, and a doubt whether the consent of the Seamen's Hospital should not first be ascertained, directed the case to stand over, the registrar having suggested that the payment could not be safely made without an appearance for the representative of the owner. The Dunvegan Castle, 3 Hagg. 329.

seaman hired by the month is entitled to a proportion of wages to the time of his death, if he can prove a usage to pay a proportionate sum in such cases. Cutter v. Powell (1795), 6 T. R. 320; 2 Smith's Leading Cases, 8th ed., p. 1. See also Armstrong v. Smith, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 299.

2. In the United Kingdom.

1. Payment of Effects and Wages.

(a) To Superintendent.

426. Whenever any seaman or apprentice dies in the United Kingdom, and is entitled to claim from the master or owner wages or effects, such master or owner shall pay and deliver or account for the same to the superintendent at the port where the seaman or apprentice was, or was to have been, discharged, or to the Board of Trade, or as it directs. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 198.

3. Abroad.

1. Inquiry into Cause of Death.*

427. When any death happens on board any foreign-going ship, the superintendent shall, on the arrival of such ship at the port where the crew is discharged, inquire into the cause of such death, and make on the list of the crew delivered to him an indorsement that the statement of the cause of death therein contained is, in his opinion, true or otherwise; and shall for the purpose have the powers given to Board of Trade inspectors (see as to same tit. TRADE, BOARD OF); if it appears to him that any such death has been caused by improper means, he shall report the matter to the Board of Trade, or if the emergency so requires, take immediate steps for bringing the offender to justice. Ibid. s. 269.

* (232) Whenever a death happens on board a British ship, whether in the case of a British subject or a foreigner, the consul should inquire into the cause of the death and the circumstances attending it, using, if necessary, the powers mentioned in s. 13 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and report the result to the registrar-general of seamen, or should any serious complaint be made by the master or any of the crew as to the manner in which the deceased lost his life, he should summon a naval court, when if it appears that the death has been caused by violence, ill-treatment, neglect, or other improper means, he should be guided by the instructions relating to naval courts, and also by para. 185—200, and par. 291. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, of 1883, par. 158, p. 47.

2. Payment of Wages and Charge, Sale, and Delivery of Effects.

(a) *Generally.

428. Whenever any seaman or apprentice belonging to or sent home in any British ship, whether a foreign-going or home-trade ship, employed on a voyage to terminate in the United Kingdom, dies during such voyage, the master shall take charge of all money, clothes, and effects which he leaves on board, and shall, if he thinks fit, cause all or any of them to be sold by auction at the mast or other public auction, and shall thereupon sign an entry in the official log-book containing—(1) A statement of the amount of money and a description of the effects; (2) In case of a sale, a description of each article sold, and the sum received for it; (3) A statement of the sum due to the deceased as wages, and the total amount of the deductions (if any) to be made therefrom; and cause such entry to be attested by a mate and one of the crew. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 194.

429.—(1) If the ship proceeds at once to any port in the United Kingdom without touching at any foreign port, the master shall within forty-eight hours after his arrival deliver the effects then unsold, and pay the money and proceeds of sale and balance of wages to the superintendent there: (2) If the ship touches and remains for forty-eight hours at some foreign or British port abroad, the master shall report the case to the British consular officer or officer of customs there, and give him any information he requires as to the destination of the ship and probable length of the voyage; and such officer may thereupon require the effects, money, and wages to be paid to him, and shall upon such payment give the master a receipt, and the master shall within forty-eight hours after his arrival at his port of destination in the United Kingdom produce the same to the superintendent there; and such consular officer or officer of customs shall indorse and certify upon the agreement with the crew such particulars as to such payment as the Board of Trade requires: (3) If such officer does not require such payment and delivery to be made to him, the master shall take charge of the property, and within forty-eight hours after his arrival at his port of destination in the United Kingdom

* (233) If ships touch and remain forty-eight hours at a foreign port, the consul will inquire whether any seaman has died during the voyage or at the port. In cases where such death has happened, and the consul finds after inquiry that the vessel is bound direct, or will shortly return to the United Kingdom, he will not demand the wages and effects unless special circumstances render it expedient; but when the consul finds that the settlement of the claims of relatives will be unduly retarded if delivery of the wages, &c. by the master is delayed until the arrival of the ship in the United Kingdom, he will require from the master the payment of the wages of the deceased either in cash or by bill on the owners, and the delivery of his effects or of the proceeds of sale of them. An account in the form C. 15 must be delivered by the master to the consul, who will compare it with the agreement and official log-book, and allow only such deductions from wages as are just and lawful, placing his initials against such deductions in the column set apart for that purpose in the form. He will also be careful not to allow any deductions in respect of any payment made in contravention of s. 2, sub-s. (1) and (2), and s. 3, sub-s. (4) of the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 160, p. 48.

(234) The British Government have agreed with the Governments of France, Germany, Sweden, and Norway to deliver to their respective consuls-general in London the wages and effects received by the Board of Trade under the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), of seamen belonging to those countries who have died on board British merchant vessels, and these Governments have on their part agreed to deliver to the nearest British consul the property of British seamen dying on board their merchant vessels or on shore in their territories. The consuls will, therefore, report to the Board of Trade the particulars of the deaths of such British seamen, receive their wages and effects, deal with them, and account for them to the Board of Trade as if the seamen had belonged to British ships. Copies of the notes exchanged between the British Government and the Governments of France, Germany, Sweden, and Norway will be found in the Appendix B. Ibid. par. 171, p. 50.

(235) Declarations have been made between the British Government and the Governments of Denmark, Italy, and Russia relative to the disposal of the estates of deceased seamen, of which copies will be found in Appendix O. The consul will hand over the property of deceased Danish, Italian, and Russian seamen (as provided for by the terms of the declarations) to their respective consuls, and will account for the property of British seamen received from the Governments of Denmark, Italy, and Russia as if the seamen had belonged to British ships. Ibid. par. 172, p. 50.

429a. The master shall in all cases in which any seaman or apprentice dies during the voyage give to the Board of Trade, or to such officer or superintendent an account in the form they require, of the effects, money, and wages, and no deductions claimed shall be allowed unless verified as therein mentioned. Upon due compliance with the provisions required, the superintendent shall grant to the master a certificate to that effect, and no officer of customs shall clear inwards any foreign-going ship without production of such certificate. Penalty for breach against the master, and failing him the owner, not exceeding treble the value, or £50. And he shall be accountable for the property to the Board of Trade; and the property shall be recoverable like wages. Ibid. ss. 195, 196.

430. If any such seaman or apprentice, or any seaman or apprentice who has within six months preceding his death belonged to a British ship, dies abroad, in or out of her Majesty's dominions, leaving any money or effects not on board his ship, the chief officer of customs or the British consular officer at or nearest to the place shall claim and take charge of the same; and if he thinks fit, sell all or any part thereof, and shall quarterly, or as the Board of Trade directs, remit to the paymaster-general all such money or proceeds of sale, and render such accounts thereof as the Board of Trade requires. Ibid. s. 197, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 20.

432. When the deceased seaman or apprentice has left a will the Board of Trade may refuse to pay any such wages or effects to any person claiming under a will made on board ship, unless in writing, and signed or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of and attested by the master or first or only mate of the ship; and may refuse to pay the same to any person not related to the testator by blood or marriage though claiming under a will not made on board ship, unless it is in writing, and is signed or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of and attested by two witnesses, one being a superintendent, minister, officiating minister, or curate of the place where it is made, or, in a place where there are no such persons, some justice of the peace, British consular officer, or officer of customs. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 200.

433. Whenever any claim made under a will is rejected by the Board of Trade on account of the will not being so made and attested, the wages and effects shall be dealt with as if no will had been made. Ibid.

(d) To Next of Kin or Legatees.

(aa) Probate or Administration, when required.

434. If the money and effects of any deceased seaman or apprentice in the hands of the Board of Trade or its agents, including moneys received for effects sold before delivery to the Board of Trade or by its direction, do not exceed fifty pounds, then, subject to other provisions, and to all such deductions for expenses incurred on his behalf and allowed by the Board, the Board may pay the same to any claimants who prove themselves to the satisfaction of the Board to be his widow or children, or to be entitled under his will, or under the statutes of distribution of intestates' effects, or to be entitled to procure probate or letters of administration or confirmation, although no such grant has been taken out, and shall be thereby discharged from all further liability in respect thereof, or the Board may require probate, letters of administration, or confirmation to be taken out, and then pay the legal representatives; and all claimants so paid shall apply the same in due course of administration. If such money and effects exceed fifty pounds, then, subject to other provisions and to deduction for expenses, the Board shall pay same to the legal representatives of the deceased. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 199.

4. Expenses of Burial.

1. If Injured in Ship's Service.

435. As to the right of any master, seaman, or apprentice, hurt or injured in the service of his ship, if he dies therefrom, to have the expense of his burial defrayed by the owner without any deduction from his wages, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 228, and Pt. IV. p. 2163.

2. If discharged or left behind Abroad.

See Pt. III. p. 2152.

3. In other Cases.

436. Any reasonable expenses duly incurred by the owner in respect of the burial of any seaman or apprentice who dies whilst on service, shall, if duly proved, be deducted from his wages. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 228, sub-s. 4, and Nos. 284, 285, p. 2170.

See tit. EVIDENCE, p. 435.

6. Notice of Death of Sea Apprentice.

See Pt. I. p. 2130.

7. Inquiry into Cause of Death.

See No. 427, p. 2191.

8. Creditors.

437. No creditor of a deceased seaman or apprentice shall be entitled to claim from the Board of Trade his wages or effects, or any part, by virtue of letters of administration, or of confirmation in Scotland, taken by him as creditor. No such creditor shall be entitled to payment of his debt out of such wages and effects, if the debt accrued more than three years before the death of the deceased, or if the demand is not made within two years after such death. Every person making a demand as creditor shall deliver to the Board an account in writing in such form as it requires, subscribed with his name, stating the particulars of his demand and his place of abode, and verified by declaration before a justice. If before such demand, any claim to the wages and effects made by his widow or child or next of kin, or under a will, or otherwise, has been allowed, the Board shall (semble, on the demand being made), give notice to the creditor of the claim allowed, and the creditor shall have the same rights against such person as if the person were the legal personal representative of the deceased. If no claim by any such person has been allowed, the Board shall proceed to investigate the creditor's account, and may for that purpose require him to prove it, and to produce all books and papers relating thereto; and if the creditor satisfies the Board of the justice of his demand, in whole or part, it shall be paid accordingly, so far as the assets in hand extend, and such payment shall discharge the Board from all further liability; but if the Board is not satisfied the demand shall be disallowed. The Board may delay the investigation of any such demand for one year, and if in the course of that time a claim to the wages and effects of the deceased is substantiated by anyone interested therein, as the widow, or other parties before mentioned, the Board may pay the same to such person, and the creditor shall have the rights before mentioned against such person. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 201.

9. Claims after Six Years.

438. When no claim to wages or effects of deceased seamen or apprentices received by the Board of Trade is substantiated within six years, it is in the discretion of the Board to allow or refuse the claim. As to the payment by the Board of such unclaimed sums into the Exchequer, Ibid. s. 202.

439. The punishment for forging or fraudulently altering any document to show a right to such wages or effects, and for using the same, knowing it to be false, is penal servitude, or imprisonment for the periods there stated. Ibid. s. 203.

1. Generally.*

1. This act shall be construed as one with the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and the acts amending the same. The M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 2.

2. It was the intention of the legislature that the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts, 1854 to 1856, should apply as well to cases in which the vessel had been merely stranded or damaged, as to cases in which it has been materially damaged. The Albert Edward, May 4, 1878.

3. Held, that the position of the Board of Trade is not that of a public prosecutor; at all events in the inception of the proceedings, but rather that of an inquirer in the public interest into the circumstances attending the casualty. Dimorah and Dorunda, October 30, 1876, 21 Sol. Jour. 9.

4. It is not the sole duty of this court to deal merely with the certificates of masters and mates, but one of its chief duties, and one for which the court was specially appointed, is to inquire into all circumstances attending the casualty. The Calenick, Jan. 22, 1878.

5. It is the duty of the court to report how the casualty occurred, and whether by the misconduct or otherwise of the officer in charge. The Board of Trade are bound to make a charge in circumstances requiring it, and the court is equally bound to give an opinion thereon, although from the vessel not having been materially damaged, the court cannot deal with the master's certificate. The Albert Edward, Report of May 4, 1878.*

6. Even when the court, from whatever cause, is prevented from dealing with the master or officer's certificate, it is not relieved from the necessity of stating its opinion as to his conduct, as it is a court of inquiry, and, therefore, it is its duty to say what in its opinion may have caused the loss or abandonment of the vessel, quite independently of whether a charge has or has not been preferred by the Board of Trade. The Damiatta, Report of Nov. 14, 1877.*

7. On an inquiry under the M. S. Acts into the conduct of a master in respect of a shipping casualty, the court may proceed with the inquiry, notwithstanding that no charge is made against him by the Board of Trade. Ex parte Minto, 35 L. T. 808; 25 W. R. 251.

8. Casualties happening on two separate voyages may be the subject of one inquiry. The Amcott, Report of Sept. 30, 1881.*

9. After an explosion of coal gas from insufficient ventilation, the vessel was loaded with another cargo of similar coal with the same ventilation, but was stopped by the Board of Trade, and was then fitted with proper ventilation. The Alne Holme, 9th May, 1881.

10. As to the detention of unsafe or unseaworthy ships, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. p. 1258.

11. As to unsafe or unseaworthy ships, Ibid. and same title, part, and chapter in Addenda.

12. As to deck and grain cargoes, and dangerous goods, Ibid. Pt. V. p. 132, and same title and part in Addenda.

2. Preliminary Inquiry.†

1. Generally.

13. Whenever any ship is lost, abandoned, or materially damaged, or causes loss or material damage to any other ship, on or near the coasts of the United Kingdom, or whenever by reason of any casualty to or on board of any ship on or near such coasts loss of life ensues; or whenever any one of these events happens elsewhere, and any competent witnesses thereof arrive or are found in the United Kingdom, the inspecting officer of the coastguard, or principal officer of customs residing near the place where such witnesses are, or any other person appointed by the Board of Trade, may make inquiry respecting such loss, damage, or casualty; and shall for that purpose have all the powers given by the first part of this act to Board of Trade inspectors. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 432. †

14. Every officer of the Board of Trade, every commissioned officer of any of her Majesty's ships on full pay, every British consular officer, the registrar-general of seamen and his assistant, every chief officer of customs in any place in her Majesty's dominions, and every superintendent of mercantile marine offices may, in cases where he has reason to suspect that the provisions of this act or the laws for the time being relating to merchant seamen and to navigation are not complied with, exercise the following powers:—He may require the owner, master, or any of the crew of any British ship to produce any official log-books or other documents relating to such crew or shall not be a formal inquiry.

(7a) As to the procedure on preliminary inquiries, the appointment of an interpreter, the oaths of the witnesses, the preliminary particulars, and the report to be made by the principal officer, see Board of Trade Instructions as to Wrecks, Casualties, and Salvage, 1886, pp. 11—21.

(8) The preliminary inquiry in reference to the misconduct of a master or officer, where there has been no shipping casualty, is usually made at the direction of the Board of Trade by the Registrar-General of Seamen, who is appointed an inspector for that purpose, under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), as to which, see No. 16, p. 2198.

† (8a) As to the extent to which this and the following sections apply to foreign ships, see the opinion of the law officers of the crown, cited in Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 81.

* (5a) The reports of shipping casualties are printed by the Board of Trade, and copies sent to Lloyd's, the Customs Houses, and all general shipping authorities.

† (6) For an account of these preliminary inquiries, see Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, pp. 30—40.

(6a) As to the preliminary inquiries with regard to shipping casualties to be made by receivers of wreck, inspecting officers of coastguard, principal officers of customs, and persons specially appointed thereto by the Board of Trade, Ibid. p. 31; and see Board of Trade Instructions as to Wrecks, Casualties, and Salvage, 1886, pp. 4—8.

(7) The inquiries by the receiver of wreck, and other functionaries above referred to, are made in the form of taking depositions from the witnesses, which depositions are forwarded to the Board of Trade, which decides therefrom, whether there shall or any member thereof in their respective possession or control; he may require any such master to produce a list of all persons on board his ship, and take copies of such official log-books, or documents, or of any part thereof; he may muster the crew of any such ship; he may summon the master to appear and give any explanation concerning such ship or her crew, or the said official log-books or documents. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 13.

15. Penalty not exceeding £20 against any person who, upon requisition by any person so authorized, refuses or neglects to produce any such official log-book or document, or to allow the same to be inspected or copied, or impedes any such muster of a crew, or refuses or neglects to give any explanation he is so to give, or knowingly misleads or deceives any person so authorized to demand any such explanation. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 13.

2. Inspectors.

16. The Board of Trade may from time to time, whenever it seems expedient to them so to do, appoint any person, as an inspector, to report to them: (1) upon the nature and causes of any accident or damage which any ship has sustained or caused, or is alleged to have sustained or caused; (2) whether the provisions of this act, or any regulations made under it have been complied with; (3) whether the hull and machinery of any steamship are sufficient and in good condition. Ibid. s. 14.

17. Every such inspector shall have the following powers: (1) he may go on board any ship, and may inspect the same or any part thereof, or any of the machinery, boats, equipments, or articles on board thereof to which the provisions of this act apply, not unnecessarily detaining or delaying her from proceeding on any voyage; (2) he may enter and inspect any premises the entry or inspection of which appears to him to be requisite for the purpose of the report which he is directed to make; (3) he may, by summons under his hand, require the attendance of all such persons as he thinks fit to call before him and examine for such purpose, and may require answers or returns to any inquiries he thinks fit to make; (4) he may require and enforce the production of all books, papers, or documents which he considers important for such purpose; (5) he may administer oaths, or may, in lieu of requiring or administering an oath, require every person examined by him to make and subscribe a declaration of the truth of the statements made by him in his examination. Ibid. s. 15.

18. As to witnesses so summoned being allowed such expenses as they would be allowed if attending on subpoena before any court of record, or in Scotland the Court of Justiciary; and as to the taxation of such expenses by the registrar and deputy-registrar of the Admiralty Division, or by one of the masters of the Queen's Bench Division in England or Ireland, or by the Queen's and lord treasurer's remembrancer in Scotland, Ibid.

19. Penalty not exceeding £10 against every person who refuses to attend as a witness before such inspector, after having been required so to do, and tender of his expenses, or who refuses or neglects to make answer, give any return, or produce any document in his possession, or to make any declarations. Ibid.

20. Penalty against any person who wilfully impedes any such inspector in the execution of his duty, whether on board any ship or elsewhere, not exceeding £10, and he may be seized and detained by such inspector or other person, or by any persons he may call to his assistance, until taken before a justice of the peace or proper officer having jurisdiction. Ibid. s. 16.

3. Jurisdiction.

1. Wreck Commissioner.*

21. The lord chancellor may appoint wreck commissioners for the United

* (9) The first wreck commissioner appointed is Henry Cadogan Rothery, Esq., M.A., formerly registrar of the Court of Admiralty. He is the only wreck commissioner yet appointed.

(10) As to the salary of or payment to the wreck commissioner, see M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 39.

(11) See for a full account of the jurisdiction and powers of courts of formal investigation in the United Kingdom, Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, pp. 56-100.

(12) The choice between the wreck commissioner, stipendiary magistrate, and justices for the tribunal is exercised by the Board of Trade. Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 55.

(13) Having regard to the purpose for which a wreck commissioner was appointed, as declared by the legislature, the Board

Kingdom, not exceeding three, and remove any of them. If a wreck commissioner is appointed for Ireland, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland has the appointment, with power of removal. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 29.

22. The wreck commissioner, at the request of the Board of Trade, holds formal investigations into any loss, abandonment, damage, or casualty under the eighth part of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and for that purpose has the jurisdiction and powers conferred on two justices, and all the provisions of the M. S. Acts, 1854 (c. 104) to 1876 (c. 80), with respect to investigations conducted under the eighth part of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), apply to investigations held by a wreck commissioner. Ibid.

23. (1) Whenever any ship on or near the coasts of the United Kingdom or any British ship elsewhere has been stranded or damaged, and any witness is found at any place in the United Kingdom; or (2) Whenever a British ship is or is supposed to have been lost, and any evidence can be obtained in the United Kingdom as to the circumstances under which she proceeded to sea or was last heard of, the Board of Trade (without prejudice to other powers) may cause an inquiry or investigation to be held, and all the provisions of the M. S. Acts, 1854 (c. 104) to 1876 (c. 80), apply thereto, as if it had been held under the eighth part of the M. S. Act, 1854. Ibid. s. 32; and see further as to locality of jurisdiction, s. 521.

24. For further powers see the M. S.

2. Stipendiary Magistrate.†

25. For powers to the Board of Trade to direct an inquiry before the wreck commissioner, a stipendiary magistrate, or two justices, who shall thereupon proceed to hear and try the case, and shall send a report to the Board of Trade, containing a full statement of the case and of their or his opinion thereon, and such report of or extracts from the evidence, and such observations (if any) as they or he may think fit, see the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 433; and the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 29.

26. If the Board of Trade so directs, the person bringing the charge to its notice shall be the party having the conduct of the case. See M. S. Act. 1854 (c. 104), s. 433.

27. As to the payments to the stipendiary magistrate for his services, Ibid., as amended by M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 39.

28. As to the power of the magistrate or two justices to make orders as to costs, and the discretion given to the Board of Trade to pay costs, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 436.

29. See, as to criminal proceedings, the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878, c. 73.

See also No. 74, p. 2205.

3. Two Justices.‡

4. Assessors.§

30. The wreck commissioner, or other authority holding a formal investigation of Trade always assigns as many inquiries as possible to be heard by him. He holds all investigations which take place in London, and also proceeds, at the request of the Board of Trade, when required to any part of Great Britain to hold an inquiry. Ibid.

(14) As to the extent of the wreck commissioner's jurisdiction over foreign vessels, see the opinion of the law officers of the crown cited, Ibid. p. 18, and pp. 81—83.

* (14a) In practice these powers are now only exercised by a receiver of wreck.

† (15) If the case cannot be heard by the wreck commissioner then in places where there is an experienced stipendiary magistrate the investigation is committed to the latter. Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 53.

(16) As to the tribunal of the stipendiary magistrate, see Evidence of the Wreck Commissioner before the Royal Commission, p. 100.

(17) The stipendiary magistrate or justices when they formerly investigated a casualty could not sit outside the local limits of their jurisdiction, nor could they take cognizance of casualties which occurred beyond those limits. See In re Peerless, Lush. 30; 1 Q. B. 143; Helier v. Hundred de Benhurst, 4 Cro. 211; Reg. v. Stainforth, 11 Q. B. 66; Ex parte Green, 7 Q. B. D. 273; Combe v. Delabere, 22 Ch. D. 316, in Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, p. 65.

(17a) Occasionally it is impossible or inexpedient, owing to the special circumstances of the case, or to the engagements of the wreck commissioner, to assign the inquiry either to him or to a stipendiary magistrate. It is then held before justices, but such occasions are comparatively infrequent. Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 53.

‡ (18) As to the objections to the tribunal of two local justices, see the Evidence of the Wreck Commissioner before the Royal Commission on Loss of Life at Sea, anno 1885, c. 4577, pp. 89, 100.

§ (19) See as to assessors generally, Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, pp. 47, 55; and as to their payment, M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 436, as amended by M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 39.

into a shipping casualty, holds the same with the assistance of assessors. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 30, as amended by the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 3, and S. C. R. 1879, No. 4.

31. The assessor or assessors for each investigation are appointed as prescribed by general rules. See the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 3, sub-s. 2.

32. The power of appointing assessors for these investigations is vested in the Secretary of State. See S. C. R. 1879, No. 4.

33. No appointment by the Secretary of State of any assessor is open to question as not in accordance with, or not giving full effect to the requirements of, these rules. See S. C. R. 1879, No. 8.

34. As to the assessors being taken in order of rotation in their class or subclass, and as to their classification and qualifications, Ibid. Preamble.

35. There are four classes, viz. :—

Class I. Mercantile Marine Masters.—

(a) Five years' service as a master in the merchant service, of which two years must have been service in command of a sailing ship, with a certificate of competency; (b) Five years' service as a master in the merchant service, of which two years must have been service in command of a steamship, with a certificate of competency.

Class II. Mercantile Marine Engineers.—Five years' service as an engineer in the merchant service, with a first-class certificate of competency.

Class III. Royal Navy.—Rank of admiral or captain and three years' service in command of one of her Majesty's ships at sea, or rank of staff commander and three years' service in that rank in one of her Majesty's ships at sea.

Class IV. Persons of Nautical Engineering or other special Skill or Knowledge.—(a) Such qualification as is in the opinion of the Secretary of State requisite for ordinary cases; (b) such qualification as is in the opinion of the Secretary of State requisite for special cases. Ibid.

36. As to the list of assessors being in force for three years, with power to add or remove, see the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 3, sub-s. 1.

37. Subject to any special additional appointment the Secretary of State may make in any case where special circumstances appear to him to require it, assessors shall be appointed as follows: (1) Where the investigation appears likely to involve the cancelling or suspension of the certificate of a master or mate, at least two assessors shall be appointed from Class I.; (2) Where that of a master or mate of a sailing ship, one at least of the assessors from sub-section (a) of Class I.; where that of a master or mate of a steamship one at least of the assessors from sub-section (b) of Class I.; and (3) where that of an engineer, one at least of the assessors from Class II. See S. C. R. 1879, Nos. 5 and 6; and the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 3, sub-s. 3.

38. The Board of Trade informs the Secretary of State when and from which class assessors ought in their opinion to be appointed in order to give due effect to these rules; but the Board must not request the appointment of any individual assessor. See S. C. R. 1879, No. 7.

See also No. 40, infra.

39. In all cases of investigation one assessor at least must concur in the report, or the officer's certificate cannot be cancelled or suspended. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23, sub-s. 6.

40. See also No. 74, p. 2205.

5. Local Marine Boards.*

41. If the Board of Trade has reason to believe that any master or mate is from incompetency or misconduct unfit to discharge his duties, the Board of Trade may institute an investigation or direct the nearest local marine board, convenient for the parties and witnesses to attend, to do so, and such local marine board shall, with the assistance of a local stipendiary magistrate (if any), and if none such, of a competent legal assistant to be appointed by the Board of Trade, conduct the investigation, and summon the master or mate to appear, and give him full opportunity of making a defence, and shall for the purpose of such investigation have all the powers given by the first part of this act to inspectors appointed by the Board of Trade (see as to same, c. 2, p. 2197), and may make such order as to costs as they may deem just; and shall on the conclusion of the investigation report to the Board of Trade. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 241.

42. A local marine board may suspend or cancel the certificate of competency or service of any master, mate, or engineer, if, upon any investigation in pursuance of the preceding sections, he is reported to be incompetent or to have been guilty of any gross act of misconduct, drunkenness, or tyranny. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 242,* as amended by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23, sub-s. 1 and 2.

43. Where there is a local marine board, and a stipendiary magistrate is a member of such board, all such investigations shall, whenever he happens to be present, be made before such magistrate. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 241.

44. As to rehearing before the wreck commissioner after an investigation by a local marine board, see No. 322, p. 2240.

6. Scotland.†

(a) Generally.

45. As to any investigation to be held in Scotland, the Board of Trade may, if it thinks fit, remit the same to the Lord Advocate to be prosecuted as he may direct. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 437, as amended by M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), Sched.

46. As to the delivery up and dealing with the certificates of the officer whose conduct is in question, Ibid. s. 438, and M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23, and M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 3, sub-s. 4.

* (21) It seems a local marine board is put in action by the Board of Trade when a master or officer has misconducted himself, but there has been no loss of life or loss or damage of property.

† (22) In Scotland, there are no stipendiary magistrates whose services are available for inquiries: and they are held either before the wreck commissioner, before justices, or before a sheriff or sheriff's substitute, under sect. 501 of the M. S. Act, 1854. See Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 53.

‡ (23) It has not yet been found necessary to make such an appointment.

47. In Scotland the person or persons directed by the Lord Advocate to conduct the investigation have the same powers as two justices or a magistrate in England. Ibid. s. 438, and Ibid. s. 2.

48. All matters and things that may, in pursuance of the eighth part of this act, be done by or to any justice or any two justices may, in Scotland, be done also by or to the sheriff of the county, including the sheriff substitute. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 501.

(b) On Appeal.

See c. 18, p. 2243.

7. Ireland.

(a) Generally.

49. If it becomes necessary to appoint a wreck commissioner in Ireland, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland has the appointment. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 29.†

50. As to any of the justices of the peace for Dublin, and any resident magistrate being, for Ireland, included under the term "stipendiary magistrate," Ibid. s. 42.

(b) On Appeal.

See c. 18, p. 2243.

8. Isle of Man.

51. As to a high bailiff being, for the Isle of Man, included under the term stipendiary magistrate, Ibid. s. 43.

9. Naval Courts.‡

52. See as to the jurisdiction and proceedings of naval courts generally, and in the investigation of shipping casualties, tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. II. p. 690, and Ibid. in Addenda.

missioner being for the United Kingdom, he may exercise jurisdiction in Ireland, though he has not yet been requested to hold an inquiry there. See Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, p. 55, n.

(25) In Ireland, cases are remitted to resident magistrates, and, failing these, to justices. Ibid. p. 55.

(26) But no inquiry has been heard by a resident magistrate or by two justices for many years. Ibid.

‡ (27) See also as to such investigations by naval courts, and their jurisdiction, powers, and procedure, Ibid. pp. 158—179.

10. *British Colonies.(a) Generally.

53. If the respective legislative authorities in any British possession abroad, by any acts, ordinances, or other appropriate legal means, apply or adapt any of the provisions in the third part of this act contained, to any British ships registered at, trading with, or being at any place within their respective jurisdictions, and to the owners, masters, mates and crews thereof, such provisions shall in respect of the ships and persons to which the same are applied be enforced, and penalties and punishments for the breach thereof recovered and inflicted throughout her Majesty's dominions in the same manner as if such provisions, penalties and punishments had been hereby adapted, applied, or imposed. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 288.

54. Every act, ordinance or other form of law to be passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, or other legislative authority, in pursuance of this act, shall be subject to the same right of disallowance or repeal, and require the same sanction and formalities, and be subject to the same conditions as are required for the validity of any other act, ordinance, or other form of law passed by such authorities. Ibid. s. 289.

55. If in any matter relating to any ship or to any person belonging to any ship there appears to be a conflict of laws, then if there is in the third part of this act any provision on the subject which is hereby expressly made to extend to such ship, the case shall be governed by such provision, and if there is no such provision, the case shall be governed by the law of the place where the ship is registered. Ibid. s. 290.

56. The legislative authority of any British possession shall have power by any act or ordinance confirmed by her Majesty in Council, to repeal wholly or in part any provisions of this act relating to ships registered in such possession. Ibid. s. 547.

56a. The provisions of this act do not apply to any vessel employed exclusively in going from place to place in any river or inland water of which the whole or part is in any British possession. The M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 44.

57. The powers of every court of inquiry authorized by legislative authority in any British possession to inquire into charges of incompetency or misconduct of masters, mates or engineers, or as to shipwreck or other ship casualties, are in cases of British ships as therein mentioned, extended as therein mentioned to certain cases beyond such British possessions. See M. S. (Colonial Inquiries) Act, 1882 (c. 76), s. 3.

58. The legislative authority in any British possession is empowered to authorize courts or tribunals to make inquiries into such cases. Ibid. s. 4.

58a. No inquiry shall be held under this act into any casualty or charge of incompetency or misconduct which had once been the subject of an inquiry, as therein mentioned, and reported on by a competent court or tribunal in any part of her Majesty's dominions, or in respect of which the certificate of a master, mate, or engineer has been suspended or cancelled by a naval court, and where an inquiry has been commenced in the United Kingdom, no inquiry shall be made in the same case under the authority of this act in any British possession defined as therein mentioned. See the M. S. (Colonial Inquiries) Act, 1882 (c. 76), s. 3.

59. The power of suspending or cancelling the certificate (whether of competency or service) of any master or mate or engineer, after investigation made by any court or tribunal authorized or to be authorized by the legislative authority in any British possession to make inquiry into charges of incompetency or misconduct on the part of masters or mates or engineers of ships, rests with such court or tribunal when it finds that he has been guilty of any gross act of misconduct, drunkenness or tyranny, or that the loss or abandonment of or serious damage to any ship, or loss of life, has been caused by his wrongful act or default. Ibid. s. 242, as amended by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23.

* (28) Statutory provisions relating to shipping casualties investigations have been made in British India, and in the following British Colonies: Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Guiana, British Honduras; Canada—British Columbia, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario, Prince Edward Island—Cape of Good Hope, Ceylon, Falkland Islands, Fiji, Grenada, Hong Kong, Jamaica; Leeward Islands—Antigua, Anguilla, Dominica; Malta, Mauritius, Natal, Newfoundland, New South Wales, New Zealand, Queensland, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Sierra

60. The powers of suspending or cancelling any certificate of any master, mate or engineer, in the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1880, are applicable to any such court or tribunal. See M. S. (Colonial Inquiries) Act, 1882 (c. 76), s. 5.

(b) Rehearing or Appeal.

61. A rehearing of the case may be ordered, and if there has been no rehearing, or it has been refused, an appeal lies to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice in England, if the certificate has been granted under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), or the M. S. (Colonial) Act, 1869 (c. 11). See M. S. (Colonial Inquiries) Act, 1882 (c. 76), s. 6.

11. Foreign Courts.

62. Whenever it has been made to appear to her Majesty that the government of any foreign state is desirous that any of the provisions of the M. S. Acts, 1854 to 1876 (cc. 104—80), or of any act amending the same, shall apply to the ships of such state, her Majesty may, by Order in Council, declare that such of the provisions with such limitations as are in such order specified shall apply, and they shall thereupon apply to the ships of such state, and to their owners, masters and crews when not within the jurisdiction of such state, in the same manner as if they were British ships. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 37.*

(b) Germany.

(aa) Generally.†

63. See tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. IV. p. 785.

64. If the marine court has suspended the certificate of a master or mate, or has not complied with the petition to this effect of the commissioner, then in the former case the master or mate, and in the latter case the commissioner, may appeal to the superior marine court. See Law of 27 July, 1877, sect. 27.

4. Owners.

1. Generally.

65. For cases in which the owner was held to blame for the ship being badly stowed, overladen, unstable, undermanned or otherwise unseaworthy, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. p. 1258, and same title and Part in Addenda; and for cases in which he was to blame in respect to the loading or stowage of grain cargo, Ibid. Pt. V. p. 1323, and same title and Part in Addenda.

66. For provisions authorizing the condemnation of the owners in all or part of the costs of the inquiry, see tit. COSTS, p. 415, Nos. 811, 813; and for cases of such condemnation, see same title and chapter in Addenda.

2. Machinery.

67. It is the duty of owners to see that the engines are entrusted only to engineers holding Board of Trade certificates, but their responsibilities do not end there; they are equally bound, if they think fit to entrust the sole care of the engines to the chief engineers, to see that they are qualified to perform that duty. A man may be quite fit to take charge of the engines of a small vessel on a short run, and yet not fit to be left in the uncontrolled management of them in harbour, without any supervision by anyone.

* (31) No such Order in Council, with respect to formal investigations, has yet been published. See remarks in Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, pp. 82—84.

† (32) At the request of the commissioner, and after it has been proved that a German master or mate has caused the casualty or its consequences owing to the want of proper qualifications, the permission to execute his calling may be withdrawn by decision of the marine court. A master whose certificate has been suspended may also be prevented from doing the duties of a mate. See Law of 27 July, 1877, s. 26. [GERMAN.]

Owners are bound, independently of any statutory obligation, to act as reasonable men, and as reasonable men they ought to take every means in their power to ascertain that the chief engineers whom they appoint are fully equal to the duties with which they are to be entrusted, and more particularly after they have ceased to employ either a superintending or consulting engineer. If they choose to dispense with the services of such a person, they should at any rate cause the vessel to be regularly surveyed by Lloyd's surveyor, or by some other competent and independent person. The Jones Brothers, No. 544, March 12, 1880.

3. Boilers.

68. Loss of life and damage from the explosion of a boiler on board a steamer of 743 tons gross register, at Bilboa. Held, that proper measures were not taken by the chief engineers to ascertain the thickness of the plates for twelve months before the explosion; that the boilers were, on the day of the accident, worked at too high a pressure, i. e. 33 lbs., considering their state; that the cause of the explosion was the bursting of the bottom plate of the port combustion chamber, owing to the neglect to which the boilers had been subjected for some time, and to the consequent reduction of that plate at the place of fracture to a bare sixteenth of an inch thick; and that the owners did not take proper measures to ensure the safety of the steamer and her machinery, and were to blame for the explosion and loss of life resulting therefrom. The managing owner condemned in £100 nomine expensarum, £50 towards the expenses of the court, and £50 towards those of the Board of Trade. Ibid.

69. Loss of life and damage from a boiler explosion on board the paddle-wheel steam-tug T., of 14·84 tons register. While engaged in towing a vessel, a joint of one of the mud-hole doors of the star-board boiler gave way and commenced to leak. Some months previously the owner had caused alterations to be made in the boiler, in effecting which the doors and the joints were placed on the outside of the boilers, and it was the joint of one of these doors which leaked. Repairs having been executed, the water was again let into the boiler. The joint, however, not being quite tight, two men were securing the mud-hole door, tightening the blow up and standing on the spanner, forcing it down with all their might, when suddenly the cast-iron door inside the boiler gave way, releasing the mud-hole door, and allowing the steam and water to rush from the boiler into the stoke-hole, and a fireman was severely scalded and died. Held, that cast iron should not be used for such a purpose as mud-hole doors or their fittings, and that outside joints in such doors were highly objectionable. The owner was severely censured. The Traveller, April 16, 1880.

69a. For further cases as to boilers, see The Louvain, No. 2189, May 31, 1884; The Maid of Orleans, No. 2553, May 21, 1885.

4. Insurance.*

70. On an inquiry into the loss of a vessel, questions as to her cost and insurance held relevant. The Roscote, Jan. 28, 1885.

71. The barque R. was built in 1863 for £12,000, and was well kept up. She was insured for £6,000. The court considered she was not over insured though fully insured. Ibid. Jan. 29, 1886.

71a. The value of the vessel was held to be £14,000. She was insured for £21,000. The owner unduly, and improperly prolonged the proceedings on the investigation by refusing to give information to the Board of Trade as to the insurances on the vessel, and, when called as a witness, to give evidence thereon, in consequence of which an adjournment took place, and certain underwriters were made parties, and certain further witnesses were called by the Board of Trade. He was condemned in £70, part of the costs of such witnesses, and in £50, part of the costs of the underwriters. The Furius, No. 2825, 11th February, 1886.

5. Cancellation or Suspension of Certificates of Masters and Officers.†

1. Generally.

72. The wreck commissioner may suspend or cancel the certificate (of competency or service) of any master, mate, or engineer, when, upon any investigation conducted under the provisions contained in the eighth part of this act, it is reported that the loss or abandonment of or serious damage to any ship or loss of life has been caused by his wrongful act or default. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 242, as amended by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23, sub-ss. 1, 2, and M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 9.

72a. A naval court constituted as therein mentioned may similarly cancel or suspend such a certificate. Ibid.

73. When a master, mate, or engineer is superseded by any Admiralty court or naval court, his certificate may be similarly treated. Ibid.

73a. When a master, mate, or engineer is shown to have been convicted of any criminal offence, his certificate may be so treated. Ibid.

74. When, upon any investigation before a local marine board, a master, mate, or engineer is reported to be incompetent, or to have been guilty of any gross act of misconduct, drunkenness, or tyranny, his certificate may be similarly treated. Ibid.

74a. When, upon any investigation made by any court or tribunal authorized by the legislative authority in any British possession to make inquiry into charges of incompetency or misconduct on the part of masters or mates of ships, or as to shipwrecks or other casualties affecting ships, a report is made by it to the effect that he has been guilty of any gross act of misconduct, drunkenness, or tyranny, or that the loss or abandonment of or serious damage to any ship or loss of life has been caused by his wrongful act or default, and such report is confirmed by the governor or person administering the government of such possession, his certificate may be similarly treated. Ibid.

75. Such power extends to cancelling or suspending the certificates of engineers. Ibid.

75a. No certificate shall be cancelled or suspended under this section unless a copy of the report or a statement of the case upon which the investigation is ordered has been furnished to the owner of the certificate before the commencement of the investigation, nor unless one assessor at least expresses his concurrence in the report. Ibid.

76. The court may hold an inquiry involving an officer's certificate, notwithstanding that the officer has been proceeded against criminally, and has been found innocent. The Agnes, Feb. 19, 1878; The Benbow and The Ostrich, Feb. 7, 1878.

76a. The court will not deal with an officer's certificate, unless expressly asked to do so at the time of handing in the questions. The Guadiana, July 30, 1885.

77. The court has no power to deal with the certificate of service granted under the Canada Act (c. 17), and Order in Council of Aug. 19, 1871. The Chillianwallah, No. 226, March 9, 1878. Nor in the case of a Guernsey vessel. The Rifleman, Feb. 16, 1886.

77a. The court has clearly no power to deal with United States' certificates. Ibid.
See also Nos. 21—25, supra.

78. For cases in which the master was held to blame for the ship being overladen, unstable, badly stowed, improperly ballasted, or otherwise unseaworthy, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. in Addenda.

79. And in respect to the loading or stowage of a grain cargo, see No. 96a, p. 2209, and tit. OWNERS, Pt. V. in Addenda.

79a. And in respect of explosion or combustion in a coal cargo, see No. 163, p. 2218.

2. Suspension of Certificate of Service during Suspension of Certificate of Competency.

80. Application that a master whose certificate of competency was suspended should have his certificate of service returned to him refused, as this would have enabled the master to present himself with his certificate of service before some shipowner, and obtain the command of a vessel while his certificate of competency was under suspension, and the certificate of service was therefore also suspended for the same time. The Hispania, Aug. 18, 1879.

by the wreck commissioner to amount to a "wrongful act or default" in cases in which the master, mate's or engineer's certificate has actually been dealt with, see Murton's Wreck Inquiries, pp. 90—92.

(35) When a master or officer is charged with blame for a shipping casualty, certificates and evidence of previous good conduct are invariably received by the court of inquiry. See Wreck Commissioner's Evidence before Royal Commission on Loss of Life at Sea, anno 1885, p. 94.

3. Delivery up and Transmission to Board of Trade of Certificate.

81. The wreck commissioner, justices, magistrate, board, court or tribunal by which the case is investigated or tried, may require the officer whose conduct is in question to deliver up his certificate, but no master, mate or engineer shall be required to deliver up his certificate, unless it is suspended or cancelled. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 438, as amended by the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 3, sub-s. 4.

82. Every master, mate or engineer whose certificate is suspended or cancelled must, upon demand of the tribunal, deliver his certificate to them, or, if not so demanded must, upon demand, deliver it to the Board of Trade, or as it directs. Penalty for default not exceeding £50. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 242, and M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 24, as amended by the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 3.

83. The tribunal, if it determines to cancel or suspend the certificate, is to transmit it to the Board of Trade with its report. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23, sub-s. 3.

4. Return or Grant of New Certificate.

84. The Board of Trade may return any certificate which has been cancelled or suspended, or shorten the time for which it is suspended, or grant a new certificate of the same or any lower grade in lieu thereof. Ibid. and Ibid. s. 23, sub-s. 4.

5. Attempt to scuttle Ship.

85. Loss by abandonment of the four-masted iron ship, F. A., of 1,899 tons register, laden with iron, coal, coke, &c., and bound from Glasgow for Calcutta. Four days after leaving port a heavy gale sprang up, during which the vessel received some damage, and it was subsequently found that she was making water. On the 28th the master and crew abandoned the vessel, which was subsequently picked up, with three feet of water in her, by a vessel whose master found that the pipe which led from the after sea-cock had been cut. He stopped the pipe, and took the F. A. to Madeira. The master was found guilty, on his own confession, of cutting the pipe and improperly abandoning the ship, and was sent to England for trial, but the summons against him was ultimately dismissed on the ground of insufficient evidence. Held, on an inquiry before the wreck commissioner, that the master was guilty of very grave misconduct in allowing the sluice in the collision bulkhead to remain open, and in cutting the suction pipe in the after-peak, and turning on the water into the hold, and further that the vessel was improperly and prematurely abandoned, and his certificate was cancelled. The Falls of Aston, 1st July, 1882. See also The Furius, Feb. 11, 1886.

6. *Bad Navigation.

86. Inquiry into the stranding of the brig R. on the rocks north of Alnmouth, while on a voyage from Norway to Sunderland, and laden with wood (pit props). Held, that as the vessel was running on a lee shore, the master, knowing his position only from dead reckoning, ought to have been specially careful, and to have obtained correct casts of the lead, which would have prevented the casualty; and his certificate suspended for six months. The Rescue, December 18, 1876.

87. Stranding and loss with ten lives of the iron-screw steamship C., of 333 tons gross register, bound from Bilboa for Newport, Monmouthshire, and laden with about 350 tons of iron ore. She was, after leaving Bilboa, laid on a N.- $\frac{1}{2}$ -W. course, and so continued until the rocks off Pennarche Point were seen, when her course was altered more southerly for half-an-hour, after which a more northerly course was resumed, and shortly afterwards she struck on the easternmost rocks of the Saints. Held, that the stranding and loss was due to the master having mistaken the rocks off Pennarche Point for those off the west point of the Saints, and to his having omitted to get sufficiently far to the west before he again resumed his course to the north. That whether or not proper precautions were taken by the master to ascertain the deviation of his compasses, it was clearly his duty to have taken every opportunity to correct his compasses, and not to trust to his deviation card alone. That it was quite possible for the master to have ascertained his position, and that the neglect to use the lead after the rocks had been sighted off Pennarcho Point, and before he again laid his course to the north, was not justifiable, and undoubtedly tended to the loss of the C., but the court was not asked by the Board of Trade to deal with the master's certificate. The Cerwyn, July 19, 1880.

88. Abandonment and loss of the wooden barque, C., of 356 tons gross register, built in 1857, laden with 539 tons of coal, and 30 tons of coke, and bound from Sunderland to Motril, near Malaga, in Spain. The master determined to go north about, and after passing through the Pentland Firth had got, on the 6th of February, to the westward of the Isle of Lewis. Up to this time the C. had not made much water, but on the 6th she began to make a good deal of water, keeping the crew almost continually at the pumps; she was then put about for Long Hope, at the south end of the Orkneys. Before reaching it, however, the wind came away from the eastward, and the master, after various changes of his course, tried to get into Stornoway. The pumps had been kept continually at work, and the crew had to clear them several times from the small pieces of coal which got into them. At length they became choked, and the water then increased rapidly, the vessel began to get unmanageable and to settle down, and she then foundered. Held, that the pumps were not sufficiently protected from the cargo, that the vessel was not navigated with proper and seamanlike care, that the master was to blame in that respect and for having attempted to go north about at that time of the year, and also for having neglected to get the vessel into a port of safety, or to obtain assistance for that purpose, and that the owner was to blame for having sent the vessel to sea in an unseaworthy state. The court ordered master's certificate to be suspended for twelve months, but recommended the allowance to him of a first mate's certificate in the interval. It appeared that the master had within three or four years lost three vessels, and out of the nine or ten vessels he had commanded he had lost five by foundering. The Cowslip, March 11, 1885.

89. Stranding of a vessel of 420 tons gross register, laden with a general cargo of about 450 tons, bound from Liverpool to Bristol. She took the ground on the western end of the Scarweather Sand. As the tide rose she floated, but it was found that she had lost her rudder and rudderpost; upon which a steam-tug was engaged, and she was taken into Swansea. Held, that the stranding of the vessel was due to her having been kept E.- $\frac{1}{2}$ -S. until she had passed the Scarweather Lightship, and got close to the Scarweather Sand, due allowance not having been made for the strong ebb tide which was running at the time, and which caused her to take a N.E. course from off Ilfracombe; that the master was not on deck for two hours before the stranding, and until it was about taking place, during which time the safety of the vessel required his personal supervision, that the order given by him to the mate to keep her close-hauled to the wind was not a proper order, that the vessel should, before the stranding, have been put about, that the master was not justified in leaving the deck in charge of the boatswain, who held no certificate, without giving him special instructions as to the course he was to follow. And that the mate, knowing that the vessel was drifting on the sand, was not justified in leaving the deck in charge of the boatswain, or in going below, without giving the master any warning of the danger in which the vessel was. That the vessel was not navigated with proper and seamanlike care, and that the master, mate, and boatswain were all of them responsible for the casualty. The court suspended the master's certificates both of competency and of service for six months, and the master's certificate of competency of the first mate for three months; but recommended that they be allowed first mates' certificates during the suspension. The Hispania, Aug. 18, 1879.

90. Stranding of the barque C., of 741 tons gross register, laden with 915 tons of coal, and bound from South Shields to Leghorn. At 6.30 Cape Grisnez was sighted nearly right ahead, or a little on the port bow, bearing S.W. by W., distance from six to seven miles. Soundings were thereupon taken which gave fifteen fathoms, and the C. was kept away a couple of points, at 8 p.m. Cape Grisnez was abeam bearing S.E., distant about five miles; upon which the vessel was put upon her original course, and so continued until she struck on the S.W. extremity of the Ridge Sand. Held, that the stranding was due to the wrongful acts and defaults of the master in having, after Cape Grisez Light had been observed bearing S.E. distant five miles, kept the vessel too long on a course which, if continued, would inevitably land her on the Ridge. The court accordingly suspended the master's certificate for three months. The Caldera, March 4, 1879.

91. The steamship L. in May left Mercyna, in Asia Minor, with a cargo of grain bound for Leghorn. On the evening of the 14th, shortly after passing the Faro light in the Straits of Meseina, she struck the rocks abutting on Lisabianca, a small island between Stromboli and Lipari, and became a total loss. Held, that the cause of the loss was that the master had allowed the vessel to get out of a course intended to take the vessel between the Lipari Islands and Stromboli. The court was also of opinion that the vessel was not sufficiently manned, that there were not enough hands on deck to do the work required in navigating the vessel; that there was a failure of duty in respect of those in charge of the vessel in not taking steps to verify her position, and that the master was to blame in not having reduced the speed when the weather became thick. On the whole, the court was of opinion that the vessel had not been navigated with proper or seamanlike care, and that the casualty was due to the master's default, and it suspended the certificate of the master for six months. The Llamshen, July 16, 1885.

92. The barque R. was built of iron at Liverpool in 1863, and her tonnage was 586-92. She left Calais for Glasgow in ballast on December the 23rd, 1884, with a crew of fourteen hands, the seamen being runners shipped at Calais. The Maiden's Light was sighted at 6 p.m. on the 31st, bearing W. distant from four to five miles, Corsewall Light was sighted right ahead, distant five to six miles, at 10-10 the same evening, and the master then set a course north-east by north, to make Pladda Light. By midnight the weather had become very thick. She was kept away gradually until Corsewall Light bore S.S.E., with the wind blowing hard from the south. The master brought the ship up to wind, and she lay to under lower topsails, heading east-south-east. He expected to pick up Pladda Light, but it was not visible, and the fog-horn was not heard. A few minutes after 7 a.m. land was seen on the lee bow, distant about a mile. An attempt was made to wear the ship, but before this could be done the vessel struck on a reef and became a total wreck. The crew got ashore. The court was of opinion that the cause of the casualty was probably the master's miscalculation as to the distance from Corsewall Point to the Pladda Light, and the distance which the vessel had run before midnight. Proper courses had been set, but the master, who had only a crew of runners, and uncertificated officers, ought not in thick weather to have left the vessel from 12 to 7 drifting to leeward before the southerly gale, and ought to have made more allowance for the force and set of the tides and such leeway. His certificate, however, was not dealt with. The Roscote, January 28, 1885.

93. The iron steamer J. R., schooner rigged, 716 tons gross register, with engines of 90 h-p. combined, left Sunderland in February with a crew of fourteen hands and 740 tons of coal for London. At 5.30 p.m. she was put on a S. by E. course, and proceeded at full speed, though the weather was thick and hazy. At 7.30 the master went below; about half an hour afterwards the mate saw a flare of a shore light on the starboard quarter, and shortly afterwards what he took to be a black fog bank. Then breakers were seen, and he gave the order to starboard, but the vessel, before it could be carried out, struck, and went ashore abreast of the village of Boulby, Yorkshire. Held, by the wreck commissioner, that if the master chose to put the vessel so close to the land, he ought not to have left the deck; that it was necessary in the thick weather that special precautions should have been taken going at full speed, that the look-out was bad, and that both master and mate were in default: the master for putting her on a dangerous course, and going below, without leaving special instructions with the officer of the watch; the mate for not having, when he saw the supposed fog bank, called the master, or put her head off the land. Considering, however, the very high character they both received, the court only suspended the master's certificate for three months, and the mate's for one month, the master being allowed a chief mate's certificate during the suspension. The Joseph Rickett, March 3, 1886.

94. Upon an inquiry into the stranding of the steamer D., held, that the casualty happened through misjudgment of distance and absence of use of the lead, and also, that the D. was not navigated with proper and seamanlike care. The master ordered to pay £20 towards expenses. The Devonian, Jan. 13, 1885.

7. Improper Abandonment.

96. Loss of a sailing ship of 299 tons register, laden with resin and staves, and bound on a voyage from New York to Antwerp, held due to the conduct of the master in abandoning her with the crew without sufficient cause, and for damaging her and taking away her pump boxes to make her sink more rapidly. The master's certificate would have been cancelled had not the court been prevented by the nature of it from dealing with it. The Chillianwallah, No. 226, March 9, 1878.

96a. The V. was an iron steamer of 2,401 tons gross and 1,570 tons net register, built in 1871. She left New Orleans for Bremerhaven with twenty-eight hands, and a cargo of 10,000 bushels of maize and 6,406 bales of cotton, and about 500 tons of bunker coals. When she left New Orleans she was in a good and seaworthy condition, the cargo was properly stowed, and there was apparently no danger of shifting. In the course of the voyage the ship developed a list which, it was contended on behalf of the owners and master, was due to her having taken in water, but which the court thought was due to the north-west wind; and the master thereupon abandoned and set fire to her, though he was then only 200 miles from the Lizard. The V. was of the estimated value of £19,000, and was insured for £19,000, and her freight for £1,000. Held, that the master had acted prematurely in abandoning her, and was not justified in setting fire to her, and was alone to blame, but as it was his first command, and he received a high character, the court did not deal with his certificate. The Viceroy, Jan. 20, 1886.

8. Drunkenness.

97. On an inquiry by way of re-hearing before the wreck commissioner and assessors into the stranding and loss of a small iron ketch of 135 tons gross register, built to be sent out to Santos, to bring down goods from the interior to the coast, held, that the stranding and loss of the vessel was due to her having been allowed to get too near to the shore before any attempt was made to put her about, and, upon her then missing stays, to the helm having been put up to wear her instead of the anchor having been let go; that the master was to blame for having been down in his cabin, and in a state of intoxication, for some hours before the vessel went ashore, and when the safety of the vessel required his personal supervision; and that the chief mate was also to blame for having kept the vessel on her course heading direct for the shore until she was too close to enable her, after missing stays, to wear, and for not having thereupon dropped her anchors. The court cancelled the certificate of the master, and suspended the master's certificate of the chief mate for six months. The Bertioga, January 3, 1883.

98. Stranding and loss of a steamship; Held, due partly to her having been sent to sea without being sufficiently ballasted, and partly to the unskilful navigation of the master, who was incapable of the efficient performance of his duties through drink at different times during the voyage, and his certificate ordered to be cancelled. The Beverley, March 28, 1877.

99. The master of a leaky vessel remained in his cabin under the influence of drink, and when a fire broke out on board improperly refused at first to allow it to be extinguished, and broached a cask of rum which he partook of with his crew. Held, that he was unfit to command a ship, and his certificate cancelled, but he was recommended for a first mate's certificate. The Falcon, March 23, 1883.

100. Loss of a ship. The master was proved to have suffered throughout the voyage from the effect of over-indulgence in drink, and his certificate suspended for twelve months, the court intimating it would have cancelled it altogether had he been proved to have been an habitual drunkard. The Oleander, Nov. 29, 1880.

9. Neglect of Duty.

101. Inquiry into the loss of the wooden sailing ship O., of 647 tons register, built in 1869, laden with 900 tons of pig iron, and bound from the Tees for Philadelphia. Shortly after sailing she met with heavy weather, and was found to be making water; and six days after sailing the master and crew abandoned the vessel. Held that, considering the nature of the cargo, the materials she was built of, and her age, the vessel was much overladen; also that the master was to blame in that respect, and also for going to sea, knowing that only one pump was in working order; for neglecting to have the ballast ports properly caulked, and for prematurely abandoning the vessel. The court suspended his certificate for six months. The Othere, May 10, 1880.

102. Inquiry into the loss of the iron screw steamer A., of 230 tons, laden with 410 tons of iron ore, and about 33 tons of coal in her bunkers, and bound from Bilbao for Swansea. Shortly after leaving port stormy weather set in, and some of the coal was washed into the bilges, choking the pumps. The boilers, which were in a dirty condition, primed so much that the pressure of steam had to be reduced. At length the engines stopped, and the vessel began to drift. The master refused assistance, but when off the Lizard the weather became worse, and finally the master and crew abandoned the vessel, and she shortly afterwards went down. Held, that the loss of the vessel was due partly to the defective state of her machinery, partly to the weight of her cargo, and partly to the insufficient supply of coal which she had on board for the return voyage. Held, further, that the master was to blame for not taking a sufficient quantity of coal on board, and for not accepting the services of the steamer when the coal had run out, and the water was gaining on the vessel, and that the chief engineer was also to blame for not informing the master of the state of the engines and boilers before leaving Bilbao; but their certificates were not dealt with. The Athlete, July 20, 1882.

10. Misconduct not occasioning Loss or Damage.

104. The M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), does not extend the jurisdiction to suspend or cancel the certificate of the master to cases not within the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 242, 432. There is, therefore, no power to suspend the master's certificate where there has been no loss of life, nor material damage to life or to the ship. Ex parte Story, 3 Q. B. D. 166; 47 L. J. Q. B. 266; 38 L. T. 29; 26 W. R. 329; The Ayton, Nov. 28, 1877; The Albert Edward, May 4, 1876.

105. On an investigation as to damage to a sailing ship off Cape Horn, held, that the master was guilty of very grave acts of misconduct, but that none of those acts in any way contributed to the casualty, which was due entirely to the extreme severity of the weather, and to the ship having been pooped when the first officer was in command, without fault on his part. Held, further, that as none of the acts of misconduct of the master contributed to the casualty, the court had no power to deal with his certificate. The Kate Kellock, January 9, 1879.

11. Collision.

106. As to the power to order a formal investigation in a case of loss of life by collision, see No. 72, p. 2204.

107. As to the stay of proceedings by the wreck commissioner in a case of collision where an action between the two ships was pending in the Admiralty Division, see The Gerarda and The Benares, Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 43.

108. Inquiry into a collision between the steamships I. and M. off the Sunk Light on the 4th inst., resulting in the loss of the first-named vessel and two lives. The wreck commissioner held, that the two ships were vessels crossing so as to involve risk of collision, within the meaning of Article 16 of the Sea Collision Rules, the M. having the I. on her starboard side; it was, therefore, her duty to have got out of the way. The master of the M. said that he would have ported his helm, but that he was close to the West Rock Buoy. Held, however, that the collision took place a mile and a-half from the buoy; that there was therefore no reason why he should not have ported; and that, assuming he had been close to the buoy, it was his duty to have stopped his engines, and reversed full speed, instead of starboarding as he did. The court suspended the certificate of the master of the M. for three months, with a first mate's certificate during the suspension. The Isle of Arran and The Mayfield, October 25, 1885.

109. On an inquiry as to a collision in Sea Reach in the Thames between the steamer T. and the sailing ship M., attended with loss of life, held, that the collision was due to the negligent navigation of the T. by her master (1) in having allowed her to get so far over to the south shore as to be inside the Middle Blyth Buoy, where the M. was at anchor; (2) in not having stopped and reversed full speed as soon as he saw the M. ahead; and (3) in having, when his helm was hard-a-port, ordered it to be put hard-a-starboard on sighting the M. The court suspended his certificate for three months, but recommended the allowance of a first mate's certificate in the interval. The Masonic and The Thetford, December 22, 1881.

110. Inquiry into the cause of a collision between the Greek barque P. and the British emigrant ship H., by which eight lives were lost on board the P. Held, that there was a want of proper discipline on board the H. in transmitting the reports of the look-out, and a delay in giving the proper orders thereon, and that the collision was due to a neglect of proper precautions by the master of the H., but his certificate would not on that account be suspended. The Hurunui and The Pater, November 28, 1876.

111. On an investigation into a collision between a barque and a steam ship, held, that the collision was caused by a want of due care and caution on the part of the second officer of the steamship in not slowing when he entered a fog bank, and he was admonished to be more careful in future, but his certificate was not dealt with. The Dinorah and The Dorunda, July 27, 1876.

112. On an investigation into the circumstances attending damage to a sailing ship by collision with a steamer, held, that both vessels were to blame; the sailing ship, because her lights were improperly placed, and the steamship, for not having given way in time. The Brothers and The Vindolana, No. 199, January 15, 1878.

(c) Neglect to stay by other Vessel.

113. Every master or person in charge of a British vessel who, after collision with another ship, fails without reasonable cause to render assistance or give the information by this act required of him is to be deemed to have caused the collision through his wrongful act, neglect or default, and is guilty of a misdemeanour; and if he is a certificated officer, an inquiry into his conduct may be held, and his certificate may be cancelled or suspended. See M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 16.

114. On an investigation into the loss of the sailing ship H., attended with loss of life, through collision with the sailing ship E., held, that the H. was not to blame for the collision, and that the master of the E. was to blame for a bad look-out, and for not having taken more active measures to save those on board the H., and his certificate suspended accordingly for three months. The Helena and The Electryon, Nov. 27, 1878.

115. A collision occurred between the H. and the P. The master of the H., after the collision, neglected, without sufficient cause, to render assistance to the P., which was sunk with the loss of eight lives. The court suspended the master's certificate for a year. The Hurunui and The Pater, November 28, 1876.

116. Held, that the master of a steamer was to blame for not giving way in due time, and for not staying by the other ship after the collision, when he could have done so without danger to his own vessel, and his certificate accordingly suspended for six months. The Brothers and The Vindolana, No. 199, Jan. 15, 1878.

See also as to Canada, No. 121, p. 2212.

117. On an application that a master whose certificate was suspended might be allowed a first mate's certificate during the interval, the court consented to recommend to the Board of Trade that he be allowed a first mate's certificate, considering that it was better that he should be employed at sea, although in an inferior capacity, in the study and practice of a seaman's duties rather than that he should be detained on shore doing and learning nothing. The Hispania, Aug. 18, 1879.

118. The wreck commissioner decided that when a master's certificate is suspended, it will generally recommend his being allowed a mate's certificate in the interval. The Rescue, December 18, 1876.

119. The court, on suspending a chief mate's certificate as master, left it to the Board of Trade to say whether, having regard to his antecedents, he should be allowed a first mate's certificate during the suspension. The Bertioga, January 3, 1883.

14. Colonial Courts.

121. Every person in charge of a British Canadian ship who fails without reasonable cause to render such assistance, or to give such information as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and if he is a certificated officer under Canadian authority, an inquiry into his conduct may be held, and his certificate may be cancelled or suspended. See Canada Dominion Act, 43 Vict. c. 27, in 15 Hertslet's Treaties, p. 972.

122a. A master or mate whose certificate has been suspended may be reinstated by the chancellor after the lapse of a year, if it can be taken for granted that in future he will satisfy the requirements of his calling. See Law of 27 July, 1877, sect. 34. [GERMAN.]

6. Engineers.

123. The powers given to the Board of Trade or to any local marine board of instituting investigations into the conduct of any master or mate whom it has reason to believe to be from incompetency or misconduct unfit to discharge his duties, are extended to certificated engineers. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 11.

123a. Inquiry into loss of life on board the screw steamer M., of 634 tons register. The M. arrived at Gravesend from the Tyne, and as she was about to proceed to London the chief engineer instructed the second engineer to open the main stop valves upon the boilers. Whilst the second engineer was engaged in doing this a rush of steam and boiling water, consequent upon the sudden lifting of one or both of the safety valves, caused him injuries of which he died. Held, that the safety valves were not in good order, that the lifting gear of one of them worked so stiffly that it failed to be of use, that the covers of the boxes were most inefficiently fastened, and that the pressure gauges were not reliable; and the court blamed the owner in respect thereof. Held, further, that the cause of the casualty was—(1) Undue pressure in the boilers, and probable great variation of the pressure in one as compared with the other; and (2) the safety valves hanging up and then becoming suddenly released, and opening to such an extent as to cause the water to mix with the steam and rush out so violently that the escape pipe failed to relieve the pressure, so that an imperfectly fastened cover of the valve box had such a strain brought upon it as to blow out the substance forming the joint, partially raise the lid, and allow of the escape of steam and boiling water; and the court blamed the chief engineer for his neglect in not ascertaining the load per square inch on the safety valves, and in not getting up steam to lift the load on the safety valves to ascertain whether they and the gear connected with them were in good working order. The Meredith, August 21, 1880.

ployed at the various ports, and the descriptions of coal exported, is given in the Report and Appendix thereto of the Royal Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Spontaneous Combustion of Coal in Ships, 1876, c. 1586.

Harbour of the steel screw steamer A., of 5,588 tons gross register, while the A. was lying alongside the quay, taking in coals through the bunker ports on the starboard side. The master observed that the vessel had a list to starboard, and he had her moved out to moorings in the bay so as to enable her to be coaled on both sides at the same time. By 8 a.m. on the 9th November she had taken in 1,621 tons of coal. No further coaling was done until about midnight on the 10th, but next day, while taking in coals at the forward bunker ports on the starboard side, the vessel sank, drowning five of her crew. She was afterwards raised, and returned to the United Kingdom. Held, that the casualty was the result of a series of small mistakes; that the owners sent the ship to sea without having her curves of stability calculated, and the position of her centre of gravity and metacentric height ascertained, and should have supplied that information to the master; that the number of certificated officers on board, viz., four, was not sufficient; that the master should have been warned by previous occasions on which the vessel had taken a list while coaling, and should not have turned in when he came aboard on the morning of the casualty without seeing that the chief officer was attending to his duties, knowing that coaling had been going on for more than two hours on the starboard side; and that the chief officer should not have turned in, but stayed up to see the coaling shifted round to the port side. The Austral, 6th October, 1883.

2. Stowage.

127. Inquiry into the loss, with all hands, of the sailing ship P., of 276 tons register, bound from Cardiff for Rio Grande do Sul with 422 tons of South Wales steam coal, known to give off explosive gas very freely. Midships a space large enough to hold forty tons of coal was left, another space being left forward. Held, that the vessel was exposed to danger from the cargo not having been properly stowed and trimmed, rendering it liable to shift in heavy weather; but that there was no evidence to show the cause of the loss. The Penwith, 17th February, 1881.

128. On an inquiry into the loss of the iron barque M. R., of 1,085 tons, laden with 1,623 tons of coal, and bound from Newport for Valparaiso: Held, that the casualty was due to the shifting of the cargo, which was not properly stowed or secured from shifting, the shifting boards extending only between the main and mizen hatches, and there being nothing to prevent cargo shifting in the fore part of the hold. The master and managing owner held to blame. The Moel Rhiwan, 19th March, 1884.

129. On an inquiry into the loss of the steamer N., of 93 tons register, laden with 171 tons of steel rails, and bound from Workington for Bowling in the Clyde, and lost off the Mull of Galloway. Held, that the master did not act prudently in putting to sea, knowing that bad weather was prevailing, and with the barometer falling; that the cargo was not properly stowed, there being a space of from eight to ten feet in length from the ends of the cargo to the two bulkheads of the hold, and a space of four feet in depth from the top of the cargo to the underside of the deck, and that means ought to have been taken for securing the cargo by shoring or otherwise. The Norseman, 27th February, 1880.

10. Explosions of Coal Gas.

1. Generally.*

130. Explosion and spontaneous combustion of coal originate from distinct

* (40) Some coals are liable to explosion—i. e., to develop large quantities of gas, the ignition of which causes an explosion, blowing up the ship, or large parts thereof. See the Report and Evidence of the Royal Commissioners appointed to inquire into the Spontaneous Combustion of Coal in Ships, 1876, c. 1586. I. p. xxiii.

(40a) The commissioners report that certain descriptions of coal are intrinsically dangerous for shipment on long voyages. Ibid. pp. viii. and xxiv.

(41) The commissioners recommend, in order to avoid the shipment of dangerous coal, thorough inquiry on the part of shippers into the character of the coal they propose to ship, and subsequently a careful scrutiny of the coal before shipment, in order to see that the coal contracted for has been actually supplied. Ibid. p. viii.

(42) The commissioners recommend water and steam as the most effective agents in extinguishing fire in coal cargoes, and do not approve of the modes for generating carbonic acid gas and applying it to the ignited portions of coal, as, though the gas may be causes inherent in coal, so distinct that they can hardly co-exist. Explosions generally occur soon after the vessel has left port, and when the gases are more freely given off, and are allowed to accumulate on the surface. Spontaneous combustion is a slow process originating in the body of the coal, and due to the presence in the coal of iron pyrites and other substances. The Richmond, Dec. 20, 1878.

131. The court expressed its approval of the practice adopted by shippers of coal of giving written notices as to its gaseous qualities, and suggested that the notices should be more widely distributed. The Uganda, 24th April, 1880.

132. The ordinary evaporation or loss of gas from coal when stored in open sheds and exposed to the influence of the atmosphere, is from eight to twelve per cent. in six months. The coal in question contained 8,000 cubic feet of gas in every ton; so that in six months it would give off about 800 cubic feet, taking the mean of ten per cent. as the loss in that period, which would be at the rate of 4·4 cubic feet per ton per day. The 400 tons then stored in the mainhold would, upon this assumption, give off 1,760 cubic feet upon the average in the twenty-four hours after allowing a very wide margin; 1,760 cubic feet of gas, if mixed with ten times its volume, that is to say, with 17,600 cubic feet of atmospheric air, would produce a mixture of the most violently explosive character. The cubical capacity in the 'tween-decks was about 15,000 feet. Therefore the 1,760 cubic feet of gas given off from the 400 tons of these coals in twenty-four hours would be quite sufficient to render the whole of the air in the 'tween-decks violently explosive. The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

133. The gas of South Wales coals when mixed with more than sixteen times its own volume of atmospheric air is perfectly safe; when, however, the proportion of the air is six parts or under six parts to one of gas, it will burn but not explode; all mixtures in which the proportions of atmospheric air are between six and sixteen to one of gas are more or less dangerous, the most explosive mixture being one volume of gas to ten of air. Evidence quoted with approval by the wreck commissioner in The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

See also No. 203, p. 2225.

2. Ventilation generally.*

134. With a view to guard against explosion, free and continuous egress to the open air, independently of the hatchways, should be provided for the explosive gas by means of a system of surface ventilation, which would be effective in all cases whatever. Report of Royal Commissioners, quoted, with approval, by the wreck commissioner. The Amadine, June 11, 1877.

135. The coal gas which by its mixture with oxygen is productive of an explosive atmosphere, is a light gas which will readily find its way to the surface of the coal. All it requires, therefore, is to have free and constant egress from the surface of the coal into the open air. Report of Professor Abel and Dr. Percy, quoted, with approval, by the wreck commissioner in The Amadine, June 11, 1877; The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

136. The majority of the casualties from explosion seem to occur from making the gas dependent for its egress upon the hatchways, which in the event of rain or heavy weather are liable to be covered and battened down. The gas then accumulates between the surface of the coal and the deck, and mixing with the air with which it is confined, forms an atmosphere which only needs the application of a flame to explode. Report of useful in excluding atmospheric air, which is essential to support combustion, it will not, like water, exert any very sensibly cooling effect. Ibid. p. xxiv.

(43) A scientific paper by Dr. Percy and Professor Abel, describing the chemical conditions tending to produce explosion of coal gas, is appended to the Report. Ibid. p. xxvi.

* (44) Important information in regard to the ventilation of coal-laden ships and the fittings to be used therein for such purpose is given in the Report.

the Royal Commissioners, quoted, with approval, by the wreck commissioner in Ibid.

137. The only danger in the Cardiff smokeless steam coal is from the inflammable gas emitted by it. All coals give out inflammable gas and are dangerous, especially when taken rapidly from the mine and placed on board vessels in large quantities. Surface ventilation is therefore highly necessary. The hatchways and ventilators should be kept as open as possible, and every means adopted to cause a current of air to pass over the coals. Perfect immunity may be attained by adopting the simple precaution of ventilation. Evidence quoted, with approval, by the wreck commissioner in The Sardinian, Jan. 27, 1878.

3. Proper Ventilation.*

138. The Royal Commissioners appointed to inquire into the causes of explosion and combustion of coal on board ship, recommend (among other things), that, with a view to guard against explosion, free and continuous egress to the open air, independently of the hatchways, should be provided for the explosive gases by means of a system of surface ventilation, which would be effective in all circumstances of weather. See Board of Trade Official Cautions of September, 1885, p. 3.

139. An aperture at one end and another aperture at the other end of the hold, by creating a current of air over the surface would facilitate the escape of the gas, but this is all that is needed; no expensive or complicated machinery, nothing, in fact, but an aperture or apertures for the gas to escape into the open air. The Richmond, December 20, 1878.

140. Loss of life and damage from explosion on board a steamer of 1,179 tons register, laden with 2,180 tons of coal from the Ferndale Collieries. The only ventilation was by four holes cut along the side of the lower deck, with a view to the carriage of grain. Forward of the fore-hatch there was no means for the gas to escape, and the lower fore-hatch was quite filled up with coal halfway up the coamings. The coal had been freshly worked, and was in a condition to give off large quantities of gas. Held, that had the vessel been fitted with two ventilators, one in the fore part of the lower hold, passing through the seamen's berths and up through the deck, and another at the other end of the vessel, the casualty would not have occurred. The Caduceus of London, 1st August, 1878.

141. Loss of life and damage from explosion on board a steamer bound from Cardiff for Gibraltar, and laden with South Wales coal, called Davis's Merthyr steam coal. In consequence of heavy weather the hatches were battened down, and two days afterwards an explosion occurred. Held, that the explosion was clearly due to the want of proper ventilation, and that vessels carrying such cargoes should be fitted with efficient deck ventilators. The Levant, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885.

142. Loss of life and damage from explosion the day after the loading of a steamer of 2,577 tons register, bound from Liverpool for Quebec, laden with 405 tons of Nixon's, Crawshay's, and Ebbw Vale coal. The coal was stowed in the lower main-hold for the ship's use, and allowed to accumulate in the 'tween decks, there being no ventilation whatever from either the main-hold or the 'tween decks. A light was taken into the 'tween decks when the air was in a highly explosive state, and an explosion followed. Held, that ventilating shafts fitted with cowls, causing a continuous current of air over the surface of the coal, would effectually prevent such explosions. The Sardinian, 27th June, 1878.

143. Held, by the wreck commissioner, that simple, adequate, and inexpensive

* (48) The commissioners recommend that every coal-laden ship should be fitted with shafts or ventilators piercing the upper deck, but not carried down on to or through the coal, with cowls always trimmed so as to form a downcast and upcast for the current of air, which would then pass continuously, and in all weather, over the surface of the coal, carrying with it any explosive gas as fast as it is evolved. Report of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the Spontaneous Combustion of Coal, p. xxiv.

(49) Surface ventilation is necessary in all cases of cargoes of coal laden on board large vessels, and the ventilation should be so arranged that there should be at least one or more tubes going through the main deck into every hold. Statement of Government Inspector of Mines for South Wales in Board of Trade Official Caution as to Coal and Coal Gas of September, 1885, p. 19.

ventilation may be secured by having two ventilators, one in the fore and the other in the after part of the vessel, fitted with cowls, so adjusted as to allow the air to go in at the one and pass out at the other, space being left between the coal and the under side of the deck, so as to allow a free passage of air. The Union, 20th February, 1879.

144. Every coal-laden ship should be fitted with shafts or ventilators piercing the upper deck, but not carried down to or through the coal, with cowls always trimmed so as to form a down-cast and up-cast for the current of air which would then pass continuously and in all weathers over the surface of the coal, carrying with it any explosive gas as fast as it is evolved. Report of Royal Commissioners, quoted with approval by the wreck commissioner, in The Amadine, June 11, 1877; The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

145. On an inquiry into the loss of the iron screw-steamer P., of 1,043 tons register, laden with coals, and bound from Cardiff to Genoa. Held, that the vessel was not properly ventilated, and that she should have had two ventilators to each hold, one in the fore part and the other in the after part, piercing the upper deck, and with a clear space under the deck between the ventilators, in order that there might be always a free current of air passing over the surface of the coals in the 'tween decks. The court, however, thought the loss of the vessel was due to other causes. The Prometheus, 18th February, 1880.

146. All steam-coals give off inflammable gas, which is liable to explosion if allowed to accumulate. By the adoption of simple and inexpensive precautions for ventilation, the serious consequences to be otherwise apprehended are entirely obviated. In addition to the hatchways being kept open during the process of loading, and partially so during the first few days, weather permitting, at sea, we recommend the placing of two upright pipes, say six feet in length and twelve inches diameter, one fore and the other aft, in each bunker or hold of the vessel containing the coal, and descending until flush with or within two or three inches of the under side of the deck. The top of each pipe should be fitted with a moveable cowl, so as to be subject to the action of the wind, and a space left in the trimming of the coal immediately below the deck, so as to allow a free circulation of air between the two pipes placed in each bunker or hold. By such an arrangement a continual current of air would be conveyed by one of the pipes into one end of the bunker or hold, and escape at the other end, and in its passage sweep away gas. Evidence quoted with approval by the wreck commissioner in The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

147. Held, that whenever large quantities of coal are stored in one compartment, a current of air should be made to pass continually over the surface of the coal to carry off the explosive gases as soon as they are evolved, and which could be readily effected by having two ventilating shafts, one at each end of the compartment, fitted with cowls trimmed so as to form a downcast and upcast for the current. The Sardinian, 27th June, 1878.

4. Improper Ventilation.*

148. The Board of Trade give notice that they are advised that vessels laden

* (50) To depend on ventilation from the hatchway is unwise in the highest degree, because, as soon as the vessel meets with bad weather and takes in water over on the deck, the hatches are put on to prevent the water getting down into the hold. Statement of Government Inspector of Mines for South Wales in Board of Trade Official Caution as to Coal and Coal Gas of September, 1885, p. 19.

(51) The S., carrying a cargo of coal of 2,050 tons from Hull to San Francisco, was detained by the Board of Trade for imperfect ventilation. The ship when detained was fitted with a box ventilator in each of the fore, main, and after hatches (Venetian on two sides similar to ventilators used in rice cargoes), passing down through the body of the coal, and having the lower end pointed and stopped up. There was also one 14-inch iron cowl ventilator passing through the fore-castle and main decks; one trunk ventilator with skylight top leading through midship house and main-deck; one 18-inch iron cowl abaft mainmast, leading to water-tanks; and two 12-inch cowls through poop and main-decks to store-room right aft. The alterations made were as follows: The two after-ventilators were boxed, and continued through the store-room deck to cargo. The tank ventilator was opened out to cargo at main deck, and the trunk and fore-castle ventilators were accepted, being suitable for surface ventilation. The three wood-box with coal, and not provided with surface ventilation, are dangerous to human life, and it is their intention to prosecute those persons who send or take, or attempt to send or take to sea, or are parties to doing so, any British coal-laden ships which, on account of the absence of sufficient surface ventilation, are in such unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be thereby endangered. See Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885, p. 1.

149. Certificated masters and officers are especially warned that neglect on their part will, in the event of accident, be brought to the notice of the wreck commissioner or of the court investigating the case. Ibid.

150. The iron screw steamer R. was lost with all on board. She was 1,382 tons register, laden with coals, bound from Cardiff to Bombay. The R. had five cowl ventilators, of which four went down to the lower holds, one of them to each hold. She had also twelve ventilating bollards; her masts were hollow, having openings into the lower holds and the 'tween decks; and she had a trunk or shaft ventilator of considerable size from the tank, forward of the engine-room. In addition to all this she had immediately beneath the upper deck a box ventilator, about 6½ inches square, running the whole length of the 'tween decks, with the two ends closed up, but with the openings at every 8 feet, and leading finally into the main funnel at about 10 or 12 feet up. Held, that, although the system of ventilation adopted might be well suited for the carriage of cattle (for which it was provided), it was not well suited for coal cargoes, having regard to the danger of explosion by the gas not being sufficiently diluted before it passed into the funnel, and to the danger of its there coming in contact with flame or a burning cinder. The Rathmore, July 23, 1880.

151. In the after hold in which the explosion occurred, and in which were stowed 673 tons of coal, there were two ventilators; one in the fore part of the hold, about a foot abaft the bridge, and the other about the middle of the hold, immediately abaft the after hatchway. Both were from 3 feet to 4 feet out of the centre line of the ship, the former being on the starboard side and the latter on the port side. They consisted of cowls some 4½ feet high, made of sheet iron, which fitted over iron combings standing about 9¾ inches above the deck, and with a diameter inside of about 12 inches. In case of bad weather the cowls could be unshipped, wooden plugs inserted, and covered with tarpaulins. These were the only means, apart from the hatchways, for ventilating the after hold. Held, that these ventilators were neither sufficient, nor were they properly constructed so as to be serviceable in heavy weather. The Blythville, January 26, 1886.

152. The iron schooner A., of 106 tons gross register, left Glasgow, bound for Exeter, laden with 176 tons of coal, and was not after heard of. The only ventilation for the hold, besides the hatches, was a booby hatch on the after hatch. Held, that the means of ventilating the hold were wholly insufficient, and that no clear space was left between the top of the coal and the deck for ventilation; but that the loss of the vessel was probably not owing thereto, but to her being overladen. The Adina, November 22, 1880.

153. Whilst the loading was going on, and until shortly before the vessel left Liverpool, the hatches were kept open; but before leaving Liverpool the hatches on the steerage deck were put on, and part of the hatches on the orlop deck. There was no ventilation whatever, except by the hatches, from either the lower main hold or the 'tween decks, and there was no means for the gases to escape when the hatches were covered up. The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

154. The schooner M., of 93 tons register, bound from West Hartlepool for Ramsgate, with 156 tons of coal, had no means of ventilation except through the hatchways. Held, that the vessel, therefore, was not properly ventilated, but that there was not sufficient evidence to show the probable cause of her loss. The Merton, August 17, 1880.

155. See also, as to the insufficiency of ventilation by the hatches only, The Magic, March 10, 1880.

156. As to the insufficiency of four pairs of ventilating bollards which would ventilators in the hatchways were removed, and testing-pipes in each hatch put in their places. The result of the tests in these pipes is stated. See Board of Trade Handbill, No. 62, July, 1884, as to the detention of The Sutherlandshire.

be closed in bad weather, see The Kensington, March 25, 1880.

157. Loss with all hands of the wooden vessel G., of 199 tons, laden with gas coal, and bound from Gijon for Valencia. Held, that the ventilation, consisting only of two small ventilators in the fore-castle, was insufficient. The Garmouth, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1884.

158. As to the impropriety of leaving no space over coals to allow of a current of air, see The Kensington, March 25, 1880.

159. For further cases of defective ventilation, see Nos. 140—142, supra, and Nos. 184—191, 195, 201, pp. 2220—2224, and 235, p. 2228.

5. Breakage of Coal.*

160. Monsieur Vassard, a French chemist, having an intimate knowledge of English coals, says that the Cardiff coal is hard and brittle, and contains light carburetted hydrogen; that the emission of gas in such coal is caused by the breaking up of the larger fragments, thus opening the cells in which the gas is contained. Each cell contains gas, and it is the fracture or leakage which liberates the gas. This description of the gas was assented to by the manager of the Warrington Gasworks, and quoted with approval by the wreck commissioner. The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

See also Nos. 171, 177, 182, 205, 206, infra.

6. Freshly-worked Coal.

161. Fresh-worked coal is a more powerful fuel than coal which has been worked for some time. The fresher the coal, and the larger the lumps put on board steamers, the greater the quantity of gas given off in the holds and bunkers of steamers. Evidence quoted with approval by the wreck commissioner. Ibid.

162. Of the 405 tons of coal put into the main hold, 200 had been sent from the colliery between the 19th and the 30th of April, and were put on board on the 3rd and 4th of May. The remaining 205 tons which were put in on the 7th had only been sent from the colliery between the 1st and 4th of May. Semble, they were shipped too soon. Ibid.

See also No. 137, supra, and Nos. 171, 173, 177, 178, 180—182, infra.

7. Bad Stowage.

163. Inquiry into loss of life and personal injury by explosion of gas on board the steamship C., laden with coals and bound from Cardiff to Bordeaux. The cargo in the after-hold was so trimmed as to form a heap which filled up the hatchway, a large space being left at each end, thus affording no means of escape for any gas which might collect. There was also in the same compartment a quantity of patent fuel, and some bark from a cordwood cargo. Shortly after passing the Cefny Wrack an explosion occurred, killing an able seaman, severely injuring the second engineer, and doing considerable damage. Held, that the explosion was due to the ignition of gas, which had leaked from the after-hold into the shaft, and thence into the steerage. And that the master was to blame for allowing the vacant spaces in the after-hold, and for not seeing that the cargo was properly stowed and trimmed, so as to afford sufficient ventilation. The court suspended his certificate for three months. The Columbine, February 25, 1880.

See also Nos. 187—189, and 201, infra.

8. Shifting Boards.

164. On an inquiry into the loss with all hands of the iron screw steamer E., of 676 tons register, laden with coals, and bound from Cardiff for Marseilles, held, that the stowage of the cargo was defective, for that the vessel should have been fitted with shifting boards fore and aft, both in hold and 'tween decks. The Estepona, December 31, 1880.

165. As to shifting boards in grain-laden ships, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. V. c. 3, p. 1326, and same tit. cap. 2 in Addenda.

9. Inodorous Coal.

166. The gas given off by the South Wales steam coal is inodorous, owing to the very small quantity of sulphur which it contains. The absence of a smell of gas is no proof whatever in the case of South Wales steam coal, that gas is not

* (52) For full particulars and descriptions in regard to the different modes of loading coal and their effect on its breakage, see Represent and in dangerous quantities. The Richmond, Dec. 20, 1878.

167. Some kinds of South Wales coal contain only a small quantity of sulphur, so that its gas cannot be detected by smell. The Bonnie Dunkeld, October 25, 1878.

168. The coal from Nixon's, Crawshay's, and Ebbw Vale Collieries is peculiarly free from sulphur, containing only about .055 per cent., or a little more than $\frac{1}{20}$ th per cent., and is therefore inodorous, whereas some coals contain as much as 7, 8, and 10 per cent. of sulphur, and the general average of Lancashire coals is 2 per cent. The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

10. Characteristics of Coals from different Collieries.*

169. Coal from the Auckland Park Colliery, in the north of England, is not of so gaseous a nature as to cause explosion. The Merton, August 17, 1880.

170. South Wales steam coal, from the Ocean Steam Coal Company, gives off explosive gas very freely, but is not liable to spontaneous combustion. The Penwith, February 17, 1881.

171. All South Wales steam coal is of a very fiery character. It has a tendency to give off gas in large quantities for some time after it has been wrought, and when it has been broken up, as it necessarily would be on being thrown down into the hold of a vessel: the gas so given off, being mixed in the proportion of one part to from six to sixteen parts of atmospheric air, becomes a highly explosive compound, the force of the explosion being greatest when mixed with from ten to twelve parts of atmospheric air. The Richmond, December 20, 1878.

172. Although South Wales coal gives off gas in such large quantities and of so dangerous a character, it readily passes off if it is allowed free access to the air, its specific gravity being only .55. Ibid.

173. There seems no objection to ship South Wales steam coal very soon after it has been wrought, provided that proper precautions are taken by proper ventilators to allow the gas to escape. Ibid.

174. The coal from the Risca and North Dunraven Collieries is a very fiery coal, giving off large quantities of explosive gases. The Blythville, January 26, 1886.

175. Risca black vein coal is a fiery coal giving off large quantities of gas, but quite safe to be carried, with proper ventilation. The Abne Holme, May 9, 1881.

176. Semi-anthracite coal is known to be of a most explosive nature, and the owners of the collieries from whence it is obtained issue notices to captains thereon, warning them to keep their hatches open for several days after the completion of the loading, and not to permit any flame in the hold or any other part of the vessel where gas may collect. There is also a bye-law of the Penarth Dock Company to the same effect. The Caduceus, August 1, 1878.

* (53) For a list of the different kinds of coal and collieries in England, Wales, and Scotland, and their characteristics, see Report and Appendix of Royal Commissioners as to Spontaneous Combustion of Coal in Ships, 1872 (C. 1586, I.), p. 234.

(54) Many of the Scottish collieries from which steam coal is raised give off fire-damp, and explosive gases are also given off in the cannel seams. At some parts of the Scotch coalfield fire-damp has not been seen, but, speaking generally, there are no seams of coal worked in Scotland, either "common" or "cannel," where, at one place or other of the mineral field, fire-damp has not been found. Report of 9th December, 1878, of Inspectors of Coal Mines in Scotland in Board of Trade Official Caution as to Coal and Coal Gas of September, 1885, p. 17.

(55) The South Wales ocean steam coal is a hard semi-anthracite coal, and is used for steam purposes only. There are several collieries belonging to the Ocean Steam Coal Company. The quality of the coal worked in all the company's collieries is practically the same. The coal is a fiery coal, but not more so than other steam coal. It gives off gas during the working of the coal, and in a greater or less degree for several days after it is worked. Statement of Government Inspector of Mines for South Wales in Board of Trade Official Caution as to Coal and Coal Gas of September, 1885.

(55a) The "ocean steam coal" is not a dangerous coal to carry on board ship, provided some ventilation of the hold in which it is put be insisted upon. Ibid. p. 18.

(56) South Wales steam coal seems more likely to cause explosion and less likely to cause combustion. Report of the Royal Commission appointed to inquire into the Spontaneous Combustion of Coal in Ships, 1876, c. 1586, I. p. 235.

177. The coal from the Newport Abercarne Black Vein Steam Coal Colliery is semi-bituminous, and has all the properties of the ordinary South Wales coal, giving off, when newly wrought or broken, a considerable quantity of explosive gas. The Streonshalk, June 24, 1879.

178. Newly-wrought coal from the Newport Abercarne Black Vein Steam Coal Colliery gives off great quantities of inflammable gas. The Magic, March 10, 1880.

179. Coal from the Cyfartha Collieries is semi-anthracite, and of a very gaseous nature, and requires free surface ventilation. The Greece, March 1, 1880.

180. South Wales coal, belonging to Nixon's, Crawshay's, and Ebbw Vale Collieries, is a fiery coal, giving off a great quantity of gas, especially when freshly worked, but admirably adapted for steam purposes. Crawshay's and Nixon's both came from the Aberdare upper four-feet seam; and although the Ebbw Vale did not come from the same seam, it was very like it in character, all being hard smokeless South Wales coal, a semi-anthracite. The Sardinian, 27th June, 1878.

181. Coal from the collieries in the Rhondda, Aberdare, and Merthyr Valleys, when freshly wrought, gives off gas very freely. The Llanishen, November 8, 1880.

182. Coal from the Seven Sisters Colliery, near Neath, is highly anthracitic, giving off a considerable quantity of gas for some time after it has been worked. The coal raised from the mine on the 11th, 13th, and 14th, and shipped on the 16th and 17th, would be in a condition to give off a considerable quantity of gas. The throwing it down the hold would also, by breaking it up, tend still further to liberate the gases. The Bonnie Dunkeld, October 25, 1873.

183. Arley gas coals, from Pearson's and Knowles' mines, in Lancashire, are of an inflammable nature. The Kensington, March 25, 1880.

11. Specific Cases.

184. Personal injury and damage from explosion at Cardiff on board a screw steamer of 676 tons, laden with 1,242 tons (exclusive of 167 tons for the bunkers) of coal from the Rhondda, Aberdare, and Merthyr Valleys, consisting of 535 tons of large coal, the remainder being small.

The steamer had two ventilators in the fore-hold, one in the main-hold, and two in the after-hold. The engineers' mess-room, where the explosion took place, was divided from the after-hold by a single wooden bulkhead, not air-tight, and the only means of ventilation it possessed was a flange fitted in the deck, through which the stove pipe was carried. The flange was fitted with a cap on the outside to prevent rain, &c. from going below, and on the under-side was further protected by a piece of wood buttoned to the deck, so that there was no ventilation of the mess-room except the companion and two screw ports. The fore part of the after-hold was filled with coal up to the coamings of the hatchway, which was closed, and the wings on each side were filled tight-up. At ten p.m. on the day after the loading was completed the third engineer struck a match in the mess-room, and an explosion took place. Held, that the ventilation was defective, the cargo improperly stowed, and the leakage of gas from the hold to the mess-room not properly guarded against by an efficient bulkhead, for which deficiencies the owners were adjudged to pay £10 towards the cost of the inquiry. The Llanishen, November 8, 1880.

185. Explosion and loss of life on board a steamer of 657 tons register laden with 1,369 tons of Risca black vein coals, on a voyage from Newport (Mon.) to Gibraltar. The only ventilation, with the exception of the hatches, was, as regarded the main-hold only, by means of two bollards of fourteen to fifteen inches in height on each side of the vessel, abreast of the foremast, fitted with screws two and a-half to three inches in diameter. Held, that the means adopted for ventilation were quite insufficient, and that the owners were to blame for the deficiency. The managing owners ordered to pay £100 towards the costs of the inquiry. The Abne Holme, May 9, 1881.

186. Inquiry into loss of life and damage from explosion of coal-gas on board the iron screw steamer S., of 4,376 tons gross register. She was laden with 1,604 tons of coal, 405 tons of which were in the lower main-hold. The S. left Liverpool on the 9th of May, bound for Quebec, with a crew of 103 hands, 60 cabin and 355 steerage passengers. Next morning she arrived at Moville, Lough Foyle, and came to anchor. While engaged in checking off cargo there two of the crew went into the hold with a lamp, when a violent explosion took place, setting the ship on fire. Every effort was made to extinguish the flames, but in vain. She was therefore moved into five fathoms of water, and, the injection pipes having been opened, the water was let in, and she settled down, thus extinguishing the fire. She was subsequently raised, pumped out, and brought back to Liverpool. Held, that the explosion was due to the gas from the 405 tons of coal which were stowed in the lower main-hold having been allowed to accumulate in the 'tween decks above it, there being no ventilation whatever from either the main-hold or the 'tween decks, and to a light having been taken down there when the air was in a dangerously explosive condition. The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

187. Personal injury and damage from explosion on board an iron screw steamship of 1,588 tons gross register, bound from Newport to Savona, laden with 1,695 tons of newly-wrought coal, from the Newport Abercarne Black Vein Steam Coal Colliery. 338 tons were stowed in the fore-hold, about 600 tons in the main-hold, and 757 tons in the after-hold. The main-hold was quite full, but in the fore-hold the coal was sloped away forward, and in the after-hold it was sloped away aft, for the purpose of trimming the vessel, thus leaving empty spaces in the fore part of the fore-hold and in the after part of the after-hold, the empty space in the after-hold being sufficient to contain from five to six wagon loads more of coal. The coal was trimmed from the centre into the wings, leaving a manhole or passage down the centre from end to end for the purpose of facilitating the escape of the gas. In each hold there were two ventilating pipes or tubes, each about nine inches in diameter, and fitted with cowls, the one being in the fore part and the other in the after part of the hold. These tubes just pierced the upper deck, and stood about four or five feet above it. In addition to the tubes there were to each hold two pairs of ventilating bits, with orifices of from three to four inches across. The ship left port on the 10th. On the evening of the 12th the wind commenced to blow and the hatches were battened down and the ventilating bits closed. The ventilating tubes were shut from the time of leaving port, and the cowls stowed away. The gas from the coal in the after-hold could, therefore, only escape through the grating in the floor of the store-room; and as the hatchway over the store-room and the ventilating bits were closed, the gas would pass from the store-room through the door into the spare berth, and from thence into the saloon. On the morning of the 13th, the explosion occurred in the after part of the vessel, seriously injuring the master among others. Held, that the explosion was caused by the gas escaping from the after-hold into the store-room through a grating in the floor which was the only means of escape left open, and thence through the door in the cabin bulkhead into the spare berth, and thence into the saloon, where a fire was burning, by which most probably the gas was ignited; that the master was not justified in neglecting to ship the ventilating cowls, and in closing the ventilating bits when the hatches were battened down, but his certificate was returned to him. The Streonshalk, June 24, 1879.

188. Loss of life and damage from explosion on board an iron screw steamship of 1,355 tons gross register, bound from Cardiff to Savona, laden with a cargo of "Colliery Small" coal, consisting of 1,800 tons of coal, exclusive of 250 tons of bunker coal. Of this quantity 725 tons were placed in the after-holds; but the holds not being completely filled the coal was sloped away aft, leaving an empty space in the after part both of the lower hold and of the 'tween decks. The ventilation was, in the forehold, two scuttles, about 14 or 16 inches in diameter, and in the after-hold two similar scuttles, one of which, however, had been included in a small bread tank which had been constructed by the carpenter, thus leaving only one scuttle for the ventilation of the after 'tween decks. These scuttles were fitted with close and open covers, and as they stood only about 7 inches above the deck, would have to be closed in bad weather. A ventilating cowl was also fixed upon each hatchway. The ship left Cardiff on the 12th, and at noon the same day a violent explosion occurred in the after part of the vessel. At the time of the explosion the hatches were being put on the after hatchway, the main hatchway having been previously battened down. Held, that the explosion was due to gas from the coal in the after-hold having accumulated in the empty spaces left in the after parts of the 'tween decks and lower-hold, and to this gas having become ignited probably by a live coal or spark from the funnel, and that the accumulation of gas was due to the coal having been trimmed so close to the deck as to prevent a free current of air passing over the surface of the coals. The Buteshire, April 26, 1879.

189. Injury to the person and damage by explosion in a brigantine of 188 tons gross register, laden with 313 tons of South Wales coals, and bound from Swansea to Torquay. The brigantine had but one hold running the whole length of the ship fore and aft, having three hatches opening into it, a fore, a main, and an after hatch. The cabin was aft below the deck, and forward of the fore-hatch and below the deck was a sail-room. The coals were so trimmed as to slope down from aft forwards, leaving a space more or less between them and the deck. On the evening of the 17th, after the whole of the cargo had been taken in, the fore and main hatches were put on. On the evening of the 18th, the main and after hatches were closed, and the fore-hatch left open. There was no ventilation except by the hatches. On the 19th the weather appearing squally, all the hatches were battened down. On the evening of the 20th a match was lit in the sail-room, and the explosion immediately took place. Held, that the explosion was owing to the closing of the hatches, and the want of ventilation. The Bonnie Dunkeld, October 25, 1878.

190. Personal injury and damage from explosion on board an iron screw steamer of 937 tons register, bound from Penarth to Malta, and laden with 1,685 tons of ordinary South Wales steam coal, freshly worked when shipped. Over the fore-hold and about 10 feet from the forward bulkhead were four ventilating bollards standing about two feet above the deck and about the height of the hatch-coamings, and having orifices of about four inches in diameter. There were also four similar bollards over the after-hold about 10 feet from the after bulkhead. The ship left port on the 25th. Portions of the three hatches were left open for ventilation until the 27th, when the weather becoming stormy, all the hatches were closed and battened down. In the evening of the 28th the chief engineer went into the screw tunnel with a light, and shortly after an explosion occurred in the 'tween decks abaft the after hatchway. Held, that the explosion was due to an accumulation of gas in the after-hold, which gas passed into the screw tunnel and communicated with the light in the mouth of the tunnel; that the small ventilating bollards were totally insufficient for purposes of cargo ventilation; that the owners were blameable for not providing better means of ventilation; and that the master was blameable for proceeding to sea without satisfying himself that the vessel had been provided with adequate means of ventilation. The Charles W. Anderson, January 22, 1879.

191. Personal injury and damage from explosion on board an iron sailing vessel of 188 tons register, bound from Sunderland to Portsmouth, and laden with 288 tons of Tunstall Wallsend house coal from the Ryehope Colliery, freshly worked. In the stern of the vessel, in a line with and under the wheel, were two ventilators four inches in diameter, and rising about two feet six inches above the deck. These ventilators went through the deck, terminating about half an inch below it, and were closed by means of plugs; but held, that these ventilators were for the lazarette, and not for ventilating the cargo. After the loading was completed on the 10th, the main hatch was covered over, but the fore and after hatches were left off. On the 11th, the main and after hatches were battened down, and the ventilators plugged. The fore hatch, however, was left off. On the 12th, preparations were made for sailing, and the plug from the port ventilator was removed, but a match was struck in the lazarette which caused the explosion. Held, by the wreck commissioner, that the explosion was due to the master having improperly battened down the hatches, and to the ventilators used being totally inadequate for ventilating the cargo. The Union, February 20, 1879.

192. A schooner of 138 tons, bound from Swansea to Plymouth, with a cargo of 228 tons of anthracite coal, 70 tons being small screenings, and the remainder large coal. The vessel had only one hold, and the cargo was trimmed from the fore-castle bulkhead to the cabin bulkhead aft, sloping at each end to three or four feet from the deck beams, but there was not less than four inches space at any part beneath the beams. She had three hatchways and two ventilators of five and a-half inches diameter fitted with cowls, one at the extreme after part of the hold and the other abreast the foremast on the port side. On leaving port the main hatch was battened down, and about eleven hours afterwards the fore and after hatches were put on. There was a fire burning in the forecastle, and at eight p.m. an explosion took place. Held, that the ventilators, although they might have ensured sufficient surface ventilation in calm weather, were not properly trimmed, one being altogether unshipped, and the cowl of the other being fixed to the flange by oxidation, that the explosion was owing to defective ventilation, and to the gas having found its way through the forecastle bulkhead to the forecastle fire. The master was severely censured, but he was uncertificated. The Uganda, April 24, 1880.

193. Loss of life and damage from explosion on board an iron screw steamer of 707 tons register, bound from Hull for Hamburg with a cargo of coal and general goods, including sulphate of ammonia. On going down the Humber she was found to be leaking in the forehold. Pumps were set going, but when about sixty-eight miles out at sea, the leak not decreasing, and there being a strong smell of ammonia, she was put back for the Humber. Attempts were made to discover the leak, and on the hatch of the forehold being removed and a light brought to the opening an explosion took place, setting the ship on fire. She was then run on Trinity Sand, where she filled, but was afterwards raised. The forehold was not ventilated, there were stowed there seventy-nine tons of coal (twenty-six tons of Monk Bretton and fifty-three tons of Swaithe Main), and then thirty tons of sulphate of ammonia, forty-eight drums of caustic soda, casks of twist, shoddy, &c. Held, that the explosion was owing to the leak, which caused the coal and other cargo to become wet and greatly heated, thereby generating gas, which was ignited by the light. The Empress, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885, p. 16.

194. Damage from explosion at Penarth on board a screw steamer of 909 tons, laden with ocean steam coal. The steamer had five holds, divided by bulkheads. The lower part of hold No. 3, called the tank hold, was used, when the vessel was light, as a water ballast tank, and was separated from the upper part, forming No. 3 hold, by an iron covering or deck pierced by a hatchway 7 feet 6 inches in diameter, and by a man-hole 18½ inches by 15 inches, which, with a 4-inch pipe carried up to the 'tween decks, was the only means of ventilation.

No. 3 hold was ventilated by 7-inch pipes carried about 4 feet above the upper deck and fitted with cowls. At the time of shipment the coal was newly wrought, and in a condition to throw off a large quantity of gas. The day of the 13th had been very sultry, and the night was excessively hot. At 11 p.m. the explosion occurred in No. 3 hold where trimmers, using naked lights, were employed. Held, that the gas in the tank in the lower part of No. 3 hold found its way through the interstices of the coal which blocked up the hatchway and man-hole in the top of the tank, and, coming in contact with one of the lights, exploded, firing the gas in the tank below. Held, further, that the ventilation of the tank was imperfect, and that when naked lights are used in the trimming of coal cargoes their use should be accompanied by great attention to ventilation. Since the explosion, the owners had provided additional means of ventilation, including two 6-inch ventilators in the lower tank. The Horseguards, September 11, 1880.

195. Loss of life and damage from explosion on board an iron screw steamer of 3,242 tons net register, bound from London for New York, with a general cargo. The explosion occurred at Hoboken, New Jersey. Her bunker, coal being semi-anthracite, and of a very gaseous nature, required free surface ventilation. Of these bunker coal 413 tons were stowed in the midships in the lower hold, beneath the orlop deck, which deck was also partly filled with cargo. Above this another batch of coal was stowed upon the steerage or 'tween decks. The ventilation of the lower mainhold had been entirely neglected when the vessel was loaded. At Hoboken, while the vessel was being hauled alongside the wharf, four stevedore's men went on board, and after removing the hatches of the orlop deck went into the mainhold with a lamp, which caused the explosion. Held, that the casualty was due to the stevedore's men taking a light into the hold, where the gas had accumulated owing to the absence of ventilation. The Greece, March 1, 1880.

196. Explosion on board a steamer of 832 tons net register, laden with a cargo of Dunraven steam coal, and bound from Cardiff to Rochefort. The loading occupied five days, and the coal was received on board in a very wet state from rain, and after leaving Cardiff she met with heavy weather and shipped a quantity of water, and the hatches were put on, thus causing the explosion. The Summerlee, April 11, 1881.

197. Loss of life and damage from explosion on board a steamer in dock. She was berthed in the Alexandra Dock at Newport, and on the same day took in a cargo of Abercarn coal, 300 tons being shipped in the fore-hold and about the same quantity in the after-hold. She then commenced to ship bunker coal, and the hatches were put on. The coal was then tipped on the top of the hatches and wheeled from thence to the bunkers. At two o'clock in the morning the explosion occurred. The court recommended that greater care should be used in shipping gaseous coal, and that bunker coal should be shipped first, in order to obviate the closing of the vessel's hatches while in dock. The Chrysolite, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885, p. 5.

198. Damage from explosion of coal gas on the 22nd November on board an iron screw steamer of 1,390 tons gross register, bound from Newport for Marseilles with a cargo of 1,498 tons of coal, besides 251 tons in her bunkers. She left on the 18th. The weather threatening with rain, the captain did not open the ventilators, but took off the two foremast hatches to allow the gases to escape. On the 19th, as the vessel was shipping heavy seas fore and aft, the hatches were battened down, and remained so until 7 a.m. on the 20th, when the two foremast hatches were again taken off, but about 7.30 p.m., the wind again blowing strong with a heavy sea, the hatches were again closed, and from this time the weather was very bad, and so continued till the explosion occurred in the after-hold, causing serious damage, and rendering it necessary to run for Lisbon. The Blythville, January 26, 1886.

199. Personal injury and loss from explosion of gas of a steamer of 694 tons gross register, laden with 1,233 tons of South Wales coal, and bound from Penarth to Malta. The ship left on the 22nd of November, when a gale sprang up, and a heavy sea having set in, the hatches, which till then had remained open, were put on and securely battened down. On the afternoon of the 23rd the explosion took place. Before the explosion there was no ventilation at all from the holds, the hatches having been battened down, the ventilating bollards closed, and the hole for the ventilating cowl over the lazarette plugged up. The gas thus accumulated was exploded by a lighted candle taken down into the lazarette. Some of the ship's plates in the after-hold were blown out by the explosion, and the ship made so much water that it was necessary to abandon her. Considering the number of these cases, the real or assumed ignorance of captains on the subject, the serious consequences likely to result from the neglect of proper precautions, that in this case the master neglected altogether to use the means provided for ventilating the hold, failed to see that the ventilating bollards were in proper working order, allowed them to remain closed from the time of leaving port, neglected to place the ventilating cowl to the lazarette after it had been unshipped, and failed to raise the hatches to give ventilation to the holds as soon as he might and ought to have done, although he knew that there were no other means of ventilation to the holds; the court suspended his certificate for six months, but recommended that he be allowed in the interval a first mate's certificate. The Richmond, Dec. 20, 1878.

200. The wreck commissioner observed that if it had been proved that a copy of the paper entitled "Explosions of Coal Gas on board Ship, Official Caution" had been served on the master his sentence would not have been so lenient. Ibid.

201. Loss of life, personal injury, and damage from explosion on board a screw steamer of 498 tons register, off Penarth, laden with coals. The main-hold was filled with large steam coal from Messrs. Waynes' pits near Cardiff. The fore-hold was partly filled with small coal, the screenings of the steam coal, and it was trimmed so as to leave a passage under the hatchway, the coal sloping forward. The after-hold was also partly filled with screenings, which were trimmed so as to form a heap of coal which filled up the hatchway and across the vessel, but of which the two ends sloped fore and aft, leaving a large space at each end of the hold. The ship had four ventilators in the main-hold, but no means of ventilation for either the fore or after-hold except the hatchways. Held, that the master was to blame in allowing empty spaces in the after-hold, especially having regard to the fact that no ventilation was provided, except by the hatchways; and also for not seeing that the cargo was properly stowed and trimmed; and his certificate was suspended for three months. The Columbine, February 25, 1880.

11. Spontaneous Combustion of Coal.*

1. Generally.

202. The Board of Trade give notice that as vessels laden with coal which, from its nature, is unfit for carriage on long voyages, are dangerous to human life, it is their intention to prosecute those persons who in future send or take, or attempt to send or take, to sea, or are parties to doing so, any British coal-laden ship which, on account of the nature of the coal on board, is in such unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be thereby endangered. See Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885, p. 21.

203. There are two sources of danger in coal cargoes, one from the explosion of the volatile gases which coal gives out, the other from spontaneous combustion in the coal itself. They are quite distinct and separate, and the causes which tend to produce the one would not produce the other. Per the Wreck Commissioner, The Amadine, 11th June, 1877; and see No. 130, p. 2213.

204. The breakage of coal in its transport from the pit to the ship's hold, the shipment of pyritic coal in a wet condition, and especially ventilation through the body of coal cargoes, conduce to spontaneous combustion, even though the coal may not be unfit for conveyance on long voyages. See Report of Royal Commissioners, quoted with approval by the Wreck Commissioner in The Amadine, 11th June, 1877.

2. Breakage of Coal.

205. The so-called spontaneous development of heat which occasionally takes place in coal is due to chemical changes which certain substances occurring in the coal undergo through the agency of atmospheric oxygen; iron pyrites is one of the principal substances, the oxidation of which is attended by the development of heat. If the heat is confined it may rise to ignition point, and in that case spontaneous combustion follows. Ibid.

206. Other circumstances tend to produce spontaneous combustion, as, for instance, the presence of water in the coal where there are iron pyrites, as the moisture promotes oxidation of pyrites. The breaking up of coal which occurs to a more or less considerable extent before and during its shipment, obviously favours the absorption of oxygen, and consequently increases tendencies to heating. See Report of Professor Abel and Dr. Percy, quoted with approval by the Wreck Commissioner in The Amadine, supra.

See also Nos. 160, 171, 204, supra, and No. 242a, p. 2231.

3. Analysis and Screening of Coal.

207. Held, that immunity from spontaneous combustion in cargoes of bituminous coal is chiefly to be obtained by careful analysis of a fair bulk of the veins of coal intended for shipment, and by throwing out all shale and other substances peculiarly liable to heat. The Eta, June 17, 1882.

208. See also No. 242a, p. 2231.

4. Small Coal.

209. The court observed upon the

(58) The commissioners recommend that, in order to make known the descriptions of coal liable to combustion, the inspectors of mines should be instructed to hold inquiry into all cases of spontaneous combustion occurring in cargoes of coal taken from their respective districts. Ibid. p. xxv.

(59) And that exporters should be required always to record on their specifications the denomination of the coals forming the cargo. Ibid.

evidence in the Report of the Royal Commission on Spontaneous Combustion, as to the danger from an accumulation of small coal in a compressed mass under a hatchway, where spontaneous combustion generally originates. The British Empire, March 7, 1883.

210. See also Nos. 231, 236, 237, 241, 244—249, infra.

5. *Shipment Dry.

211. Held, that every means should be taken to ship the coal in a dry state. The Eta, June 17, 1882.

212. See also Nos. 236, 238—242a, 245—249, infra.

6. Ventilation Improper.

213. So far as spontaneous combustion is concerned ventilation would be an element of danger rather than otherwise. If the air could permeate every part of the coal it might carry off the heat and prevent its arriving at the ignition point, but this is practically impossible, and if the coal is in a condition suitable for generating heat, the introduction of atmospheric air into the hold would tend by oxidation to develop heat and thus induce spontaneous combustion. The Amadine, 11th June, 1877.

214. See Nos. 239, 250, infra.

7. Shipment of Combustible Articles with Coals.†

215. Held, that tallow or other combustible articles should not be carried in coal-laden ships. The Gadskill, March 18, 1882.

216. Held, that the shipment of oil and matches with coals was highly dangerous. The Forest Queen, March 17, 1880.

8. Thermometers.‡

217. The ship was ventilated by vertical shafts, four in number, and all fitted with lattice tops; No. 1 was 5ft. 6in. by 2ft. 6in., and was placed at the after part of the forecabin and just pierced the 'tween decks; No. 2 was about 3ft. 6in. square, and was about midway between the fore and main hatches and went down to the keelson; No. 3 was also 3ft. 6in. square, and was about midway between the main and after hatchways, and just pierced the 'tween decks; No. 4 was likewise 3ft. 6in. square, and was abaft the after-hatchway and close to the mizen-mast and went down to the keelson, so that Nos. 1 and 3 which just pierced the 'tween decks were very well adapted to ensure a system of surface ventilation, whereas Nos. 2 and 4, going down as they did to the keelson, would pass through the body of the coal and in case of heat being generated in the hold a large quantity of oxygen would pass down them which would tend to feed the fire. Held, that Nos. 2 and 4 should have been made to terminate as Nos. 1 and 3 did at the 'tween decks, or taken out altogether and tubes placed in the hatchways as recommended by the Commissioners in their report on Spontaneous Combustion on board Ships. The vessel was provided with six thermometers, three of which were suspended in Nos. 2, 3, and 4 ventilating shafts, but as No. 2 ventilating shaft was about midway between the fore and the main hatchways, No. 3 between the main and after hatchways, and No. 4 abaft the after hatchway and close to the mizen-mast, the thermometers were all at a distance from the hatchways where spontaneous combustion would be most likely to originate. Held, therefore, that the means provided were not well adapted to test the temperature of the coal, and that there ought to have been metal tubes in the vicinity of the hatchways down which the thermometers could have been lowered to the keelson, as it is in the neighbourhood of the hatchways where there is generally an accumulation of small coal that the fire would be first developed. The Cilurnum, 22nd October, 1885.

218. Loss by fire of a vessel bound from Liverpool for Valparaiso, in August, laden with 1,000 tons of coal, part of which was particularly liable to spontaneous combustion. Some of it had been shipped in a wet condition, and it was also much broken in loading. The ventilation of the ship was deficient, and in bad weather there was none at all, as the hatches, when down, covered the mouths of the ventilators. On the 2nd October the cargo was observed to be on fire, and notwithstanding the efforts made to keep it under, the master and crew were finally obliged to abandon the ship. Held, that the master was to blame for having no thermometers, for not having seen that the hose was in a proper state of repair, and for not having examined all the ventilators before sailing, and for not having from time to time examined into the state of the cargo. The Annie Richmond, March 18, 1878.

219. Held, that metal tubes, fitted from the upper part of the coal to the bottom of the hold in each hatchway, as recommended by the Royal Commissioners, would give the most reliable results as regards the detection of cargo heating. The Eta, June 17, 1882.

220. The court recommended that ships carrying coal on long voyages should be fitted with tubes, by which the temperature of the coal can be tested. The Cowden Law, January 21, 1885.

221. The wreck commissioner called attention to the great value, as instanced in this case (for particulars of which see No. 251, infra), of the use of the tubes and thermometers for testing the temperature of the coal. The Alpha, December 12, 1883.

222. See also Nos. 237—243, 246, infra.

9. Force Pump.

223. A force pump should be carried, as the slow process of watering by buckets might keep up the oxidation. The Eta, June 17, 1882.

223a. A fire engine and hose should be carried, and the master should see they are in proper order. The Annie Richmond, March 18, 1878.

10. Characteristics of Coals from different Collieries.*

225. Coal from the Carfin colliery, in the Motherwell district of Lanarkshire, contains more or less iron pyrites in nodules and laminae. Held, that it was unsuitable for long voyages. The Alpha, December 12, 1883.

226. The coal from No. 3 pit of the Bog colliery, in the Hamilton district, Lanarkshire, is a "hard splint" coal, containing pyrites, but not dangerous for long voyages with proper precautions. The Kilmoden, December 8, 1881.

227. Coal from the Middleton or Silkstone main seam of Messrs. Pope and Pearson's colliery in the West Riding of Yorkshire, like the coal from the neighbouring collieries, contain portions of iron pyrites, which can be removed by screening. Underlying this seam there is an inferior coal called "Whetstones," said to contain a considerable quantity of pyrites. The Delaware, December 26, 1881; The Maritime Union, March 1, 1882.

228. Held, that coal from the Swan Lane colliery near Wigan, is not intrinsically dangerous, but should be double screened. The Kismet, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885, p. 31.

229. Coal from the Main Delf seam of the West Lancashire Colliery Company is particularly liable to spontaneous combustion. The Annie Richmond, March 18, 1878.

230. As to how far the West Hartley coal is free from iron pyrites, see The Amadine, 11th June, 1877.

231. The coal from the Garngoch Colliery near Swansea, is a "through and through" (i.e. unscreened) semi-bituminous coal. About 70 per cent. is small, and, being a tender coal and loaded with the ordinary tip and shoot, a very large proportion would be small when it reached a vessel's hold. It is a very dangerous cargo for long voyages. The Leon Crespo, May 8, 1882.

232. Coal from the low main seam of the Cambois Colliery and from the yard seam of the Cowpen Colliery are both very similar in character. They are open burning steam coals, not liable to give off any large quantity of inflammable gas, and contain only a small portion of iron pyrites which can be readily detected and separated from it. It is a coal which, if properly screened and cleaned, is well fitted for shipment on long voyages. The Ciburnum, 22nd October, 1885.

233. The Polkemet coal is stated to be a rich gas coal containing scarcely any pyrites or sulphur, and not liable to spontaneous combustion. The Gilbertfield Ell coal contains pyrites, and gives off fire-damp freely. The Hazel, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1884, p. 30.

11. Specific Cases.

234. Loss of life and of ship by fire caused by spontaneous combustion of coals on board an iron sailing ship of 1,966 tons gross register, laden with a cargo of 2,600 tons, of which 1,600 tons was coal, and bound from the Tyne to San Francisco. She left on the 29th June, and on the 17th August following a slight vapour was observed coming out of the ventilating shaft between the fore and main hatches, accompanied with a strong smell of chemicals, upon which the main hatch was taken off, and a strong smell came up; as, however, the temperature was normal, it was thought it arose from some casks of bleaching powder stove in the main hatchway. On the following morning, the temperature of the hold was still normal, but there was a very strong smell of chemicals in the main hatchway as well as in the ventilating shaft, but the vapour had diminished. In the evening the temperature was still normal, and the vapour scarcely perceptible. The smell, however, continued, and the hatches were taken off to get rid of it. They remained off until 4 a.m. on the following day, the 19th, when rain coming on, they were put on for a couple of hours and again taken off when it was found that smoke was coming up the main hatchway, and although the temperature in the ventilating shaft remained normal, that in the main hatchway rose to 85°. The hatches were then battened down, and every aperture closed up, and holes bored, down which water was poured for some hours into the hold. At about 3 p.m. an explosion carried away the whole of the hatches and the deck between the fore and main hatchways, and broke the deck beams on each side short off, and in consequence of the damage the ship was abandoned, and she afterwards sunk. Held, that the fire was due to spontaneous combustion. The Ciburnum, October 22, 1885.

235. Loss from spontaneous combustion of coal on board a three-masted composite vessel of 547 tons register, laden with 325 tons of Hartley coals, 50 runlets of coal tar, 180 cases of matches, 1,900 cases of gin, 500 cases of brandy, 440 cases of wine, 352 cases of bottled beer, 72 packages, and 102 crates of crockery, and bound from London to Penang. The ship had but one hold, but there was a small space forward divided from the hold by a bulkhead, and which contained the ship's spare coal, provisions, &c., access to which was obtained by the fore-scuttle, just abaft the windlass. On deck was a deckhouse for the crew, the officers being lodged aft. The coals were shot down through the main hatchway, then trimmed across the ship amidships as high as the hold beams, and sloped forward as far as the bulkhead, and aft beyond the mizen-mast. In the fore part the coals were levelled, and the barrels of coal tar laid upon them up to the bulkhead forward. Above these were placed cases of crockery, barrels of beer, and other things. The matches were stowed above the hold beams, and under the deckhouse. All gin, brandy, and wine was stowed aft. For ventilation there was a sliding panel in the fore and aft hatches, with covers to be put on in case of bad weather. The main hatch was battened down. On the afternoon of the 30th August and on the 6th December, there was a strong sulphurous smell in the cabin. On the 7th and 8th the vapour increased, but nothing was done to ascertain the cause. On the 9th the vapour increased considerably, and a ventilator was made, and put down through a hole cut in the cabin floor. There were afterwards clear signs that the ship was on fire. Water was pumped down through the fore hatch with the force pump, and afterwards a number of holes were cut in the deck, and an attempt was made to flood the deck, but the fire increasing, the ship was stranded. There was no explosion, but the ship was on fire from one end to the other. Held, that the mode of ventilating the cargo by means of sliding panels in the fore and aft hatches was not a proper one, but that they in no way contributed to the loss of the ship, which loss was caused by spontaneous combustion of coal on board; that the master was to blame for not having taken any steps to ascertain the cause which ultimately led to the burning of the vessel from the night of the 6th until the 9th when the fire broke out; but that as the only charge made against him was for not attending to the ventilation of the hold, the neglect of which would not have occasioned the explosion, the court returned him his certificate. The Amadine, June 11, 1877

236. Loss by spontaneous combustion on board a wooden ship of 1,500 tons net register, laden with a cargo of 2,264 tons of coal, bound from Hull for San Francisco, and contained portions of iron pyrites not screened, and with probably in the cargo some coal called "Whetstones," said to contain a considerable amount of pyrites. About seventy per cent. was small coal, some of it merely dust, and it was shipped in a saturated state. The ship left Hull on the 17th of May, and on the 6th of October gas and sulphur were detected coming up the fore hatch. The master allowed the hatches to remain open. The next day the smoke and heat increased, but no measures were taken until the 8th, when the crew dug down under the fore and main hatches, but finding that the coal became hotter they left off. Nothing further was done until the 11th, when the master, finding that the fire was gaining and the decks becoming hot, ordered water to be poured down into the hold. The ship was abandoned, and just afterwards she burst into flames and then foundered. Held, that the loss was due to spontaneous combustion, caused by her cargo having been shipped unscreened, wet, and broken up; and that, considering the large quantity of coal the vessel carried and the length of the voyage, the master was blameable for neglecting to have proper thermometers to test the temperature of the cargo from day to day, and for keeping off the hatches, instead of battenning them down, and at once pouring water into the hold. The Maritime Union, March 1, 1882.

237. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board a wooden ship of 928 tons net register, laden with a cargo of 1,367 tons of coal, and 53 tons of iron, cement, turpentine, paint, oil, resin, tallow, &c. The coal was raised in six different Lancashire collieries, and properly screened, picked, and dry when shipped. The ship was bound from Garston for Rangoon. She left on the 19th of July, and on the 19th of October smoke was discovered from the fore hatchway, accompanied by a gaseous smell. On digging down the heat became very perceptible and the smoke dense. The crew then worked day and night, throwing quantities of water on the cargo, and on the 23rd they got down to a quantity of red-hot coal, and also that a hole three feet square had been burnt through the ceiling. Two of the frames and the main keelson were also much burnt. The red-hot coals were thrown overboard, and the turpentine, oil and resin removed. The cargo then became cool, and the smoke disappeared. On the 27th, however, a strong smell of gas came from the after hatchway, and on commencing to dig down the smoke and gas were so overpowering that the men could not continue to work. Holes were then bored in the deck to allow the seas the vessel was shipping to get below. The fire, however, increased, and the ship was abandoned. Held, that the fire arose from spontaneous combustion, and that, although the coal was properly screened and dry when taken on board, yet, owing to the height from which the coal was tipped (22 to 23 feet in the fore and main holds, and about 28 feet in the after hold), a considerable amount of breakage must have been caused, and there must have been a large accumulation of small coal. Held, further, that if the master had been provided with a proper thermometer, he must have discovered that the cargo was gradually getting heated in time to have put into the nearest port or taken steps to prevent combustion. The Gad's Hill, March 18, 1882.

238. Loss from spontaneous combustion of coal on board a new vessel loaded with 2,300 tons of coal at Port Glasgow and bound from Glasgow to San Francisco. The only thermometer on board was broken. The master gave orders for the hatches and ventilators to be kept open as much as possible, and the holds and pump-well to be frequently visited for the purpose of ascertaining any change of temperature. She sailed on the 20th of June, and on the 29th of August she encountered a heavy gale, and at 6 p.m. of the 30th smoke and gas were found coming through the deck-house air-shaft. The fore hatch was opened, when a large volume of smoke came up the hatchway, and the under sides of the hatches were found to have a thick coating on them similar to coal tar. The hatches and ventilators were ordered to be closed, and holes bored in the decks to reach the cargo through the holes by flooding the decks with water. The ship was then put about for the Falkland Islands, and the decks flooded. The cargo shifted during the gale, and the ship had a list of five or six feet to port. Signals of distress were made, and a barque bore down, and the ship was abandoned, and half an hour afterwards was a mass of flame. The coal was a "hard splint" coal containing pyrites from No. 3 Pit of the Bog Colliery in the Hamilton district, Lanarkshire, and was shipped in a very wet condition. Held, that the loss of the vessel was partly to be attributed to the shipment of the coal in a very wet state; but that, had a thermometer been freely used, the danger would have been discovered in sufficient time for the ship to have reached a port of refuge. The Kilmodan, December 8, 1881.

239. Damage from spontaneous combustion on board a ship of 787 tons register, laden with over 900 tons of best Orrell steam from the Wigan four-foot seam coal, and bound from Liverpool for Callao. Over the coal some general cargo of matches, chloride of lime, linsed oil, soda, crystals, and alum, was stowed. During the loading it rained heavily, and the coal became wet. Precautions were used to prevent breakage, but there was a good deal of small coal shipped. The vessel was fitted with two large cowl-head surface ventilators, but in the lower hold there were five wooden trunk ventilators having an opening of about five by four inches, thus establishing a system of through ventilation. There was only one thermometer on board, and this being attached to the barometer was not available for testing the temperature of the hold. The ship left on the 23rd of June. The after hatch was continually and the fore hatch frequently open, the main hatch being kept closed. On September 17th smoke was observed coming up the fore hatchway. The cargo was dug into, and the coal found very hot. Water was then poured down the hold, and the vessel's course altered for Brazil. The hatches were battened down, and the ventilators stopped. On the 19th land was sighted. At 4.30 p.m. an explosion, and at 7.30 a.m. a second explosion, and at 5 p.m. a third more violent explosion took place, and the vessel was run aground and scuttled. The keelson was afterwards found to have been nearly burnt through; the sister keelsons and dunnage wood at the bottom of the ship were also burnt, the stanchions charred, and the coal to the extent of twelve feet partially converted into coke and cinders. Held, that the master was to blame for not having a thermometer for testing the temperature of the cargo; and that the system of through ventilation in the ship was unsafe and improper. The Forest Queen, March 17, 1880.

240. Loss from spontaneous combustion of a wooden barque of 1,000 tons net register, bound from Garston for Callao, and laden with 1,520 tons of coal and 20 tons of rock salt. The coal came from the Swan Lane Colliery, near Wigan—two-thirds being from the six-foot seam and the remainder from the four-foot seam. The weather during the loading was fine, with the exception of a few showers. The vessel was fitted with cowl-head surface ventilators. She left on June 23, and on August 24 the cargo was found on fire, dense smoke coming up from the coal. The hatches were put on, and holes bored through which water was pumped. At 7.30 p.m. both hatches were blown off, and on the 25th she was then abandoned. Held, that the coal was not intrinsically dangerous for shipment on long voyages, but that it ought to have been double instead of single screened; that the coal was dry when shipped; that some breakage occurred which might have been avoided; that the cargo was properly ventilated, but that the master should have provided himself with a proper thermometer for testing the temperature of the cargo, and should have visited the hold more frequently. The Kismet, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885, p. 31.

241. Loss from spontaneous combustion of a wooden ship of 1,446 tons register, laden with a cargo of 1,954 tons of coal, and bound from Hull for San Francisco. She left port on the 11th of July, and on the 19th of November the master noticed a strong smell of kerosine. The kerosine tank was examined and found to be all right. The same morning smoke was observed coming up the main hatch. Eight men dug down, and a considerable quantity of coal was jettisoned. Digging was continued until 5 p.m. on the 20th, when, owing to the density of the smoke, it was discontinued, and on the 22nd the vessel was abandoned. The coal was from the Middleton and Silkstone main seam of Messrs. Pope & Pearson's Yorkshire colliery, and was shipped in a damp condition. Held, that the heating of the cargo was due to the coal when shipped being unscreened, wet, and much broken, and to its having probably contained a quantity of pyrites; that it was possible that the spontaneous combustion which ensued was accelerated by a through current of air passing beneath the platform on which the cargo was stowed; that the removal of the hatches was calculated to feed the fire, and add to the danger; and that although it was necessary to remove the hatches to dig into the coal, the master was not justified in leaving them open when the work ceased. Held, further, that the master ought to have had proper thermometers for ascertaining the temperature of the cargo. The court recommended that coal-laden ships should carry an engine to be used in the event of fire for pumping water into the holds. The Rowellana, April 8, 1882.

242. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board a ship of 1,427 tons laden with coal, and bound from Hull to San Francisco. Held, that her loss was owing to the spontaneous combustion of her cargo, owing to the nature of the coal, and to its having been shipped, for the most part, in a wet state. The court recommended that tubes should be fitted in coal-laden vessels from the deck to the lower hold to enable a thermometer to be lowered from time to time, and that the readings should be entered in the log-book. The Norval, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885, p. 24.

and openings, except one or two bollards, were closed, canvas was placed over the top of the mainmast, and the vessel was steered for the Falkland Islands, where the cargo was flooded, but the ship was ultimately burnt down to the water's edge. Held, that the loss was due to spontaneous combustion caused by this dangerous coal being shipped unscreened and in a wet state; and the master was blamed for not having made proper arrangements to ascertain from time to time the temperature of the cargo. The Leon Crespo, May 8, 1882.

243. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board a barque of 427 tons net register, bound from Newcastle for Bangkok, with a cargo of 557 tons of West Hartley coal. She had heavy weather in the Channel and became leaky, and put into Falmouth, where all her cargo except 90 tons was discharged and stored under cover. The vessel was repaired, and the cargo re-stowed, and she left Falmouth on September 17. On March 11 a strong smell was perceived, and on the next day smoke issued from the port side of the main hatch. Water was thrown on the coal until the smoke abated. On the 13th four tons of coal were jettisoned, and more water poured into the hold. On the 14th the decks blew up, and the vessel was afterwards abandoned. Held, that the loss was due to spontaneous combustion, owing to the voyage having been unusually protracted, and to the vessel not being provided with thermometers for testing the temperature of the cargo. The Palestine, April 3, 1883.

244. Loss from spontaneous combustion of an iron barque of 1,233 tons net register, bound from Dundee for San Francisco, and laden with 1,150 tons of coal from No. 3 pit of the Bog Colliery, Lanarkshire, and 500 tons of pig iron. The coal was dry when shipped, but contained pyrites, and there were 30 tons of small coal under the main hatchway. The ship left on the 17th of August, and on the 16th of October a strong smell of gas and smoke were noticed. The pumps were worked and water pumped into the hold, the fire being under the main hatchway. Sixty tons of coal were jettisoned, when the smoke became dense. The hatches were put on, and water pumped into the holds until 7 a.m. on the 17th, when the explosion occurred. At 2.50 p.m. the whole of the coal cargo was on fire, and on the 18th the ship was abandoned. The vessel was fitted with surface ventilators, but her three lower masts were made of iron and served to ventilate the bottom of the lower hold and 'tween decks. Five thermometers were carried for testing the temperature of the holds, but there were no means of testing the temperature of the body of the cargo except through the pump-well. Held, that the loss was attributable to spontaneous combustion from the vessel having passed through the tropics with a cargo containing pyrites, and with a quantity of small coal under the main hatchway, the seat of the fire. The master was held justified in pouring water upon the coal, and was not found in default for the vessel's loss. The Lennox, February 23, 1883.

245. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board a ship of 1,414 tons net register, bound from North Shields for Bombay, and laden with 1,788 tons of West Hartley steam coal, very small, with a great deal of dust and fine coal shipped dry. The vessel was fitted with surface ventilators, but her fore and main masts which communicated with the hold were made of iron, and had cap ventilators. The ship left on the 15th of August, met with heavy weather, and on the 6th of November a vapour was observed from the coal in the fore hatch, due to a leakage round the coamings. The damp coal was then spread out and dried. On the 4th of January a smell came from the after hatchway, and also up the main hatchway. About 30 tons of coal were then dug out from under the main hatch and left on deck, and the thermometer was put on the coal at the bottom of the hole, registering 87°. The hatches were left open, the smell of gas passed off, and the coal when last tested was cool and dry. On the morning of the 5th smoke came up the main hatch, and as the cargo was thought to be on fire, the coal on deck was thrown back into the hold, and the hatches battened down. Just before this, a column of smoke came up the main hatch, and gas from the after hold. A little before mid-day the main hatch moved up and down, and great heat was noticed there, and on the starboard side of the deck, and the pitch oozed out of the seams. The vessel was abandoned, and she was seen to be burnt down to within two or three feet of the water's edge. Held, that the loss was due to the spontaneous combustion, the coal being small, and there being an accumulation of fine slack and dust at the bottom of the ship, liable to get heated, and that the length of the voyage contributed to the combustion, the vessel having been 142 days at sea when the fire broke out. The British Empire, March 7, 1883.

246. Damage from spontaneous combustion on board a wooden barque of 495 tons net register, bound from Swansea for Valparaiso with a cargo of 746 tons of Garngoeh coal, a very dangerous coal for long voyages. She left on the 9th of August; the temperature of the hold was tested daily by a thermometer, and, forty-eight days after the vessel sailed, showed an increase of temperature from a previous average of 80° to 100°. The thermometer was then buried under the coals, and rose to 136°. The crew, on digging down through the coals, found them very warm. The temperature of the hold then gradually decreased until, at 8 a.m. on the 12th of October, the thermometer showed 76°; at 6 p.m. of the same day smoke was seen issuing from the fore-hatchway, accompanied by a strong sulphurous smell. The hatches were put on, and two holes cut in the deck, through which water was poured down. A hole was also bored below the water line in the fore-castle, and a force pump was procured from a passing vessel. Cargo was thrown overboard, and at noon on the 14th the crew had worked down to the main-hold beams, two of which were on fire. The ship was put about for Falkland Island, and arrived at Port Stanley, about half her cargo having been jettisoned, and the remainder was discharged, the vessel taking in stone ballast and proceeding to Valparaiso. Held, that the fire was due to spontaneous combustion caused by the decomposition of iron pyrites and sulphur contained in the coal, part of which was shipped in wet state, and that the arrangements for lowering the thermometer between the shifting boards was unsatisfactory. The Eta, June 17, 1882.

247. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board a vessel bound from Liverpool for Valparaiso, with a cargo of 752 tons of coal. She left on the 10th of January, and on May 16th steam was noticed coming up from the hold. The hatches were put on, but the fire became gradually worse, and the vessel was abandoned on June the 8th, and about an hour afterwards was seen to burst into flames. She was not fitted with tubes for testing the temperature of her cargo, the coal was wet when received on board, and there was a large quantity of very small coal under the main hatch. Held, that the loss was due to the coal having been shipped in a wet condition. The Harkness, Board of Trade Official Caution of September, 1885, p. 32.

248. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board an iron screw steamer of 448 tons gross register, bound from Greenock for Limerick, and laden with coal. She was fitted with two bell-mouth ventilators in the fore hold, and three in the after hold, and also with a steam pipe leading into each hold for use in the event of fire breaking out. She sailed on March 8. At eight a.m. next day smoke was observed coming out of the ventilators in the fore hold. Steam was turned on to the hold, and the coal played on with water until the smoke ceased. She then proceeded on her voyage, and landed her cargo in an undamaged condition. On returning to the Clyde she was fitted with a partial bulkhead of 2½-inch boards, extending about 6½ feet on each side of the midship line, leaving a space of from 9 to 11 inches between the iron bulkhead before the boiler and the wooden bulkhead, this space being filled up with salt as a non-conductor of heat, and afterwards carried several cargoes of coal and one of grain. On the 23rd of June she loaded a cargo of coal at Glasgow for Barcelona. The cargo consisted of 70½ tons of Polkemet coal, and about 485 tons of Gilbertfield Ell coal, 20 tons of measurement goods, and about 150 tons of bunker coal. During the loading a quantity of rain fell. She left Glasgow for Barcelona on June 26. At four p.m. of July 1 smoke was observed coming up through the casing that covered the engine-room telegraph, followed by smoke which came through the deck seams. Steam was turned on to the hold, but at 7.45 p.m. the bulkhead in the engine-room was getting red hot. The steam was then shut off from the hold, and the after hatches taken off to enable the crew to trim some of the coal on to the upper deck, and to play the donkey hose on the coal at the after part of the hold; but the fire increased, and the vessel was abandoned. Held, that the loss was due to spontaneous combustion, and that the coal was dangerous for shipment, as containing pyrites and shipped in a wet state. The Hazel, Ibid. p. 30.

249. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board a wooden barque of 339 tons register, laden in August with a cargo of smelting coal, and bound from Swansea for Valparaiso. The cargo was ventilated by planks each side of the stanchions, forming a trunk-way fore and aft to the bottom of the ship. The vessel had also surface ventilators. On the 25th of November she was found to be on fire, and the next day was abandoned. Held, that the vessel was lost owing to spontaneous combustion of her cargo, a part of which was loaded during wet weather, and was small and caked from damp. The court considered that all vessels carrying coal cargoes should be furnished with one or more force pumps and hose. The Delaware, Dec. 26, 1881.

250. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board an iron ship of 1,668 tons net, bound from the Tyne for Bombay, with 2,543 tons of West Hartley Main coal, shipped in fair condition, and free from water. There was an efficient system of surface ventilation; and a daily record of the temperature of the cargo was taken from a thermometer left lying on the coal. The vessel was fitted with iron masts open at the ends, and perforated more or less. The masts were stepped on to the keelson, from which they acted as perpendicular ventilators, a half-moon space being left on each side of the keelson. The mastheads were fitted with covers kept in their places by long legs which went inside the masts. The vessel left on March 30. From the 8th to the 13th June she encountered very bad weather in the Indian Ocean, during which the hatches were battened down. On the 14th vapour was seen issuing from the ventilator abaft the mainmast, but the thermometer did not show any change of temperature until the night of the 15th, when it rose 20° in the after hatchway, after four or five feet of coal had been taken out. Everything was then battened down, but during the morning of the 16th two explosions took place, and fire was seen burning strongly in the lower hold in the vicinity of the mizenmast, which at 4.45 a.m. had sunk three feet. At 6.30 a.m. flames issued from the companion and cabin skylight, and the ship was abandoned. Held, that the spontaneous combustion was probably caused by the hollow iron mast acting as a ventilator, but no blame was attached to any one. The Shive More, July 24, 1885.

251. Damage from spontaneous combustion on board a wooden barque of 398 tons register, bound from Leith for Buenos Ayres, and laden with 542 tons of coal from the Carfin colliery in the Motherwell district of Lanarkshire. She was fitted with iron tubes, which went down to within eighteen inches of the skin, and down which a thermometer could be passed to test the temperature of the coal. She left on the 13th June. On the 2nd August, when near the equator, the temperature in the fore hatch was 90°, while that in the main and after hatches was only 84°. In the next two days, the main hatch rose to 109°, but for the next few weeks fell to 104°, the heat in the other hatchways being 84°. On the 30th the main hatchway, which with other openings had been kept securely fastened to keep air out of the hold, was opened to get anchors and cables. On the 31st, the temperature there increased to 112°, and on the 1st September to 142°, and afterwards to 150° and 180°. A hole was cut, and water poured down, decreasing it to 136°; but on the third it again increased, and the main hatchway and skylight were blown out, and flames came out of the hatchway. More water was poured in until the 4th, when, the crew being exhausted, the vessel was abandoned. She was afterwards towed to Buenos Ayres Roads and filled with water. Held, that the fire arose through spontaneous combustion from pyrites. The Alpha, Dec. 12, 1883.

252. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board a sailing ship of 1,596 tons register, bound from the Tyne for San Francisco, with a cargo of coal and general merchandize. When rounding Cape Horn she encountered very bad weather, and water got into the hold through the main-hatch. She left on the 30th of August. On the 16th of January the coal was found to be on fire. Water was pumped on it, but as the fire increased jettison of the cargo was commenced. On the 17th the smoke became very dense, and the fire continued to get worse until the 19th, when flames appeared above the hatchway coamings, and the vessel was abandoned. Held, that the abandonment was justifiable. The Cowden Law, Jan. 21, 1885.

253. Loss from spontaneous combustion on board a wooden barque of 1,027 tons, bound from Liverpool for Valparaiso with a cargo of 1,600 tons of coal. She left on May 24th, and on the 1st of August a quantity of smoke issued from the hatches. Endeavours were made to find the seat of the fire but without success, and it increased so rapidly that the ship was abandoned. Held, that the abandonment was justifiable. The coal was shipped dry, but it was not stated whether it was "small" coal or screened. The vessel was not fitted with temperature test tubes, and the only means for putting out fire (except the ordinary buckets) was a small portable fire-engine out of order. The Alfred, March 14, 1883.

13. Deck and Grain Cargoes and Dangerous Goods.

14. Place of Hearing.*

254. An investigation into a shipping casualty may be held at any place appointed by the Board of Trade, and all enactments relating to the authority holding the investigation shall, for the purpose of the investigation, have effect as if the place so appointed were a place appointed for the exercise of the ordinary jurisdiction of that authority. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 33.

255. Investigations into shipping casualties shall be held in some town hall, assize or county court, public building, or other suitable place to be determined according to general rules, and unless no other suitable place is in the opinion of the Board of Trade available, shall not be held in a court ordinarily used as a police court. See the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 3, sub-s. 5.

* (68) As to the considerations which influence the Board of Trade in their selection of the place of hearing, see Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, p. 67.

15. Practice.

256. Every formal investigation into a shipping casualty is to be so conducted that if a charge is made against any person that person shall have an opportunity of making a defence. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 30.

257. The Lord Chancellor is empowered (with the consent of the Treasury so far as relates to fees), to make, revoke, or alter general rules for carrying into effect the enactments relating to investigations into shipping casualties; such rules are to have the force of enactments in this act. Ibid.

258. They are to be laid before Parliament. See the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), ss. 4 and 5.

259. In these rules "judge" means the wreck commissioner or other authority empowered to hold a formal investigation into a shipping casualty. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 3; and S. C. (A. & R.) R. 1880, No. 3.

260. In computing the number of days within which any act is to be done, reckon exclusive of the first and inclusive of the last day, unless the last day is a Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday, or a day of public fast or thanksgiving, when reckon exclusive of that day also. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 23.

2. Notice of Investigation.†

261. When a formal investigation into a shipping casualty has been ordered, the Board of Trade may cause a notice of investigation to be served upon the owner, master, and officers of the ship, and upon any person who may appear to have in any way contributed to the casualty. For form of notice, see Appendix, No. 1. Ibid. No. 5.

262. A copy of the notes of a solicitor who had been instructed by the Board of Trade to attend a coroner's inquest on the body of a person drowned in consequence of a shipping casualty had been served upon an officer. Held, a good notice within this rule. Ex parte Ferguson, L. R. 6 Q. B. 280.

263. Four days' notice held sufficient. The Vesper, December 21, 1876.

3. Statement of Case on which Investigation ordered.

264. No certificate shall be cancelled or suspended under this section unless a copy of the report or a statement of the case upon which the investigation is ordered has been furnished to the owner of the certificate before the commencement of the investigation. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23, sub-s. 6.

265. A short report by a receiver of wreck, a copy of which was annexed to the notice of investigation, held, "a sufficient statement of the case" required to be furnished to the owner of the certificate before the commencement of the investigation. See The Dinorah and Dorunda, 21 Sol. Journ. p. 31.

4. Parties to Proceedings.

266. The Board of Trade, and any certificated officer upon whom a notice of investigation has been served, are parties to the proceedings. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 6.‡

5. Additional Parties.

267. Any other person upon whom a notice of investigation has been served, and any person who shows that he has an interest in the investigation, shall have a right to appear, and shall thereupon become a party to the proceedings. Ibid. No. 7.

268. Held, by the wreck commissioner, that when owners have appeared under this rule they are before the court for all purposes for which the court can deal with them, even though they withdraw before the conclusion of the case. See Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 111.

(69a) See, for the general rules for investigations into shipping casualties, 2 Pollock & Bruce (4th ed. by Maude & Pollock), No. 54, p. cccclxxx.; and for further and additional rules and rehearings, Ibid. pp. 193—196; and the rules may be purchased at Potter's, 31, Poultry; Knight & Co., 90, Fleet Street; and Stanford, 55, Charing Cross, London.

† (70) For the practice pursued by the Board of Trade as to service of the notice of investigation, see Murton's Wreck Inquiries, pp. 107—109.

‡ (71) It follows from the above rule that the mere service of a notice of investigation upon a certificated officer is sufficient to make him a party to the formal investigation, and together with the furnishing of the report or statement of the case upon which the investigation is ordered, to render him liable to the quasi-penal consequences defined by the M. S. Acts and the rules, in case he is reported guilty of wilful neglect or default causing a casualty or loss of life. Ibid.

269. Any other person may, by permission of the judge, appear, and shall thereupon become a party to the proceedings. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 8.

270. In the absence of objection by the Board of Trade, a relative of a deceased passenger, although not the legal personal representative, allowed to appear upon filing an affidavit. See The Princess Alice, October, 1878, and Report of 6th November, 1878, and Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 111.

271. Held, that a party may appear at any time. The Dinorah and Dorunda, October 30, 1876, and Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 111.

6. Duty of Board of Trade to state Questions.*

272. On the completion of the examination of the witnesses produced by the Board of Trade, that Board shall state in open court upon what questions in reference to the causes of the casualty, and the conduct of any persons connected therewith, they desire the opinion of the court; and if any person whose conduct is in question is a certificated officer, they shall also state in open court whether in their opinion his certificate should be dealt with. See Supreme Court Rules, 1878, No. 16.

272a. It is the duty of the Board of Trade, where the circumstances require the expression of the court's opinion upon the unseaworthiness of the ship, to make a charge accordingly. The Brightman, February 26, 1877.

273. On an investigation into the stranding of a steamer, after an adjournment of the inquiry, counsel for the Board of Trade stated to the owners' solicitors that no charge would be preferred against the owners, because the court had no power to punish them, except by condemning them in costs, but that the court would be asked to express an opinion as to the unseaworthiness of the ship. The owners thereupon stated they should retire from the case, and they appeared no further. The court considered that the Board of Trade ought to have charged that the vessel was unseaworthy. Ibid.

274. The Board of Trade should frame the questions in writing. The Leader, Nov. 14, 1878.

7. Who may be charged.*

275. A charge can be made by the Board of Trade against any person who has conducted in any way to a shipping casualty, whether certificated or uncertificated, and whether owner, stevedore, or whoever he may be. The Chillianwallah, No. 226, March 9, 1878.

8. Sufficiency of Charge.*

276. A charge was made against the master of a vessel under the repealed Rules of 1876 that he had been guilty of default by non-observance of Articles 15, 16 and 20 of the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea, but without more particularly specifying the default charged. Held, a good charge. The Cyma and Vigilant, Nov. 17, 1876.

9. Effect of no Charge.*

277. Where no charge is made the court will not deal with the officers' certificate. Ex parte Minto, 35 L. T. N.S. 808; 21 W. R. 274; 25 ibid. 251; Murton, p. 122.

278. Held, that the court will not cancel or suspend an officer's certificate unless the Board of Trade in the questions submitted to the court first require it to be dealt with. The Guadiana, March 15, 1885.

279. On an inquiry held before a stipendiary magistrate at Shields, an intimation was made by the Board of Trade at the and technical charges, but is at liberty to take a broad survey of the facts of the case, with a view to report upon them in accordance with the statutes, for the purposes which the inquiries were intended to serve. The Board of Trade enjoys a similar freedom in framing questions which raise the real issues involved in a casualty, whether those issues relate simply to the supposed cause of loss, or implicate in addition the conduct of any person connected with the casualty as constituting in itself the cause of loss, or as contributing to the casualty. See Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 120.

* (72) No. 15 of the Supreme Court Rules of 1876 required that, upon the completion of the evidence, the Board of Trade should state in writing whether they had any, and if so, what, charge to make against any, and what, person. Some difficulty was felt in formulating charges against persons (other than certificated officers), with respect to whom the court was clothed with no other jurisdiction than that of inflicting costs. Accordingly the above rule, No. 16 of 1878, was substituted for No. 15 of 1876. The effect of the rule is, that the court is not now limited to the strict consideration of formal proper stage of the proceedings to the master's solicitor that no charge would be preferred against the master. The master thereupon retired from the court, but the magistrate, desiring further inquiry, demanded his subsequent attendance. On application to the Queen's Bench for a prohibition to restrain the magistrate from proceeding further, the court refused the application, and held, that the magistrate was independent of the Board of Trade, and that his power to proceed could not be affected by their action in not charging the master with default. The magistrate accordingly proceeded with the inquiry, and a charge was preferred against the master, and he was found in default and his certificate suspended for three months. On this order being brought up by certiorari before the Queen's Bench it was quashed, on the ground that the Board of Trade having formally intimated to the master that no charge would be made against him, the counsel for the Board of Trade could not charge him, even on the suggestion of the judge and under the sanction of the Board of Trade. Ex parte Minto, 35 L. T. N.S. 808; 21 W. R. 274; 25 Ibid. 251; Murton, p. 122.

See also No. 273, supra, and No. 280, infra.

10. Opportunity of Defence.

280. If no charge is made against a person he cannot be said to have had an opportunity afforded him of making his defence within the meaning of the 30th section of the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80) (for which see No. 256, p. 2235). The Sardinian, 27th June, 1878; The Damietta, 14th November, 1877.

11. Evidence.

(a) Generally.

281. An erasure in a log book throws grave suspicion upon it, and is calculated to destroy its authority, and should never be made. If a mistake is made and it is desired to amend it, this should be done by interlining, so as to show clearly what the original entry was. The Caldera, 4th March, 1879.

282. The protest of the master, although formally deposited to, cannot be received as evidence on behalf of the owner or master of the ship, but it may be used as evidence against them. Rea v. Scriveners Co., 10 B. & C. 511, and Senat v. Porter, 7 Term Rep. 158; and see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 270; and Murton, p. 115; and see as to protests generally, tit. EVIDENCE, p. 438.

283. See also as to log books, tit. EVIDENCE, p. 437; and No. 290, infra.

284. See as to evidence generally, Ibid. p. 418; and No. 291, infra.

(b) Affidavits.

285. Affidavits may, by permission of the judge, be used as evidence at the hearing, when sworn to in any of the following ways, viz.:—In the United Kingdom, before the judge, or before a person authorized to administer oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature, or before a stipendiary magistrate, or before a justice of the peace for the county or place where it is sworn or made. In any place in the British dominions out of the United Kingdom, before any court, judge, or justice of the peace, or any person authorized to administer oaths in any court in that place. In any place out of the British dominions, before a British minister, consul, vice-consul, or notary public, or before a judge or magistrate, whose signature is authenticated by the official seal of the court to which such judge or magistrate is attached. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 12.

286. Upon an affidavit being tendered by the Board of Trade, to be read as evidence of contradiction, objection was made by the master that if so used an opportunity should be given him of cross-examination. The affidavit was admitted under the above rule, even though it appeared that it at least involved some contradiction. The Vesper, Dec. 21, 1876; and see Murton, p. 115.

287. Affidavits were accepted from masters passing the same locality to account for the probable loss of a vessel from colliding with icebergs, known to be then floating in the North Sea. The Fernwood, 13th June, 1885.

288. Affidavits were accepted in the case of a missing ship, as to the cargo with which she was laden, from persons who superintended the loading. The Preston, 23rd July, 1885.

(c) Notice to produce.

289. A party may give to any other party notice in writing to produce any documents (saving all just exceptions) relating to the matters in difference between them, and which are in the possession or under the control of such other party; and if the notice is not complied with, secondary evidence of the contents of the documents may be given by the party who gave the notice. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 9.

290. An objection having been taken to the production of a ship's log on the ground that there was no right of discovery given by the rules, held, by the wreck commissioner, that under sect. 31 of the M. S. Act, 1876, he had the power given to an inspector under sect. 15 of the M. S. Act, 1854, and therefore that he could order the log to be produced. The Dinorah and Dorunda, 21 Sol. Jour. 9; and Murton's Wreck Inquiries, 1884, p. 112; and see as to the powers of inspectors, c. 2, p. 2198.

291. Statements or examinations of witnesses taken by the receiver of wreck for the purposes of the inquiry, held privileged documents, and not subject to production. Nor can a party to a formal investigation require the production of a document in the possession of the Board of Trade, notwithstanding that it may have influenced them in ordering the inquiry. Ibid.

292. A party may give to any other party notice in writing to admit any documents (saving all just exceptions); and in case of neglect or refusal to admit after such notice, the party so neglecting or refusing shall be liable for all the costs of proving the documents, whatever may be the result, unless the court is of opinion that the refusal to admit was reasonable; and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice be given, except where the omission to give the notice has, in the opinion of the officer by whom the costs are taxed, been a saving of expense. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 10.

12. Service of Documents.

293. Any notice, summons, or other document issuing out of the court may be served by post. Ibid. No. 24.

294. As to service of documents generally under the M. S. Acts, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1253.

13. Proof of Service of Documents.

295. The service of any notice, summons, or other document may be proved by the oath or affidavit of the person by whom it was served. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 25.

14. *Subpœnas.

296. The wreck commissioner may issue subpœnas for the attendance of witnesses either before himself or before any other judge, and such subpœnas shall be as nearly as possible in the form used in the High Court of Justice, and may be served and shall have effect in any part of the United Kingdom. Ibid. No. 11.

15. Hearing.†

297. At the time and place appointed for holding the investigation, the court may proceed to hear and adjudicate upon the case, whether the parties, upon whom a notice of investigation has been served, or any of them, are present or not. Ibid. No. 13.

(b) Examination of Witnesses.

298. When the whole of the evidence is concluded, the parties shall be heard in such order as the judge may direct, and the Board of Trade shall be heard in reply. Ibid. No. 18.

299. As to the place of hearing, see c. 11, p. 2234.

300. Held, by the wreck commissioner, under the Rules of 1876, that the inquiry is one continuous proceeding from beginning to end, and that the court sits for the purpose of the whole inquiry, and not merely to try the charge formulated by the Board of Trade in the midst of the proceedings. The Dinorah and Dorunda, 21 Sol. Jour. 9.

301. Two inquiries may be held together when the same officer is concerned, even if the casualties happened on different voyages. The Amcott, L. T. Oct. 29, 1881, and see Report of Sept. 30, 1881.

302. The Board of Trade shall first produce any witnesses whom they may wish to examine, and who can give material evidence in regard to the casualty, whether they were or were not on board the ship at the time. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 14.

303. The witnesses shall be cross-examined by the parties in such order as the judge may direct, and may be re-

* (73) In practice no difficulty has been experienced in securing the attendance of seafaring witnesses. The control over them by payment of subsistence money while detained to give evidence has been found effectual. See Murton's Wreck Inquiries, p. 113.

examined by the Board of Trade. Ibid. No. 15.

304. On the completion of their examination, the Board of Trade shall state in open court upon what questions in reference to the causes of the casualty, and the conduct of any persons connected therewith, they desire the opinion of the court; and if any person whose conduct is in question is a certificated officer, they shall also state in open court whether in their opinion his certificate should be dealt with. Ibid. No. 16.

305. The Board of Trade and any other party may thereupon produce further witnesses, who shall be examined, cross-examined, and re-examined in such order as the judge may direct. Ibid. No. 17.

306. On an inquiry into the loss of a vessel by collision, it was objected that as the Board of Trade produced the witnesses, their examination of them should be limited to such an examination as would be allowed to counsel in an examination in chief, but the wreck commissioner considered that in many cases, and in particular in inquiries where the Board of Trade and the incriminated persons are the only parties before the court, this limitation would result in the witnesses going away without being cross-examined at all, and in the whole object of the inquiry being defeated. Held, therefore, that the Board of Trade is at liberty to put all such questions as are calculated to elicit the truth even to the extent of cross-examining the witnesses with a view to ascertain whether their statements are or are not true. The Dinorah and Dorunda, 30th October, 1876; 21 Sol. Journ. p. 9.

307. The practice which has hitherto been pursued in the court of calling as a witness the master of the vessel to give his account of the facts at the commencement of the inquiry, is well founded, and should not be discontinued. The Masonic and The Thetford, December 22, 1881.

308. The court would never compel an officer to answer a question which would be likely to lead to a criminal prosecution against him. Ibid.

309. Held, that it is more especially in the interests of the master and the certificated officers themselves that they ought to be called to give an account of the circumstances which have led to the casualty, and not to leave it to their subordinates alone to give their view of the transactions, when they would generally know very little about them. Ibid.

310. On inquiries into casualties by collisions, it has been the practice for the Board of Trade to produce the masters of both the vessels in order that they may give their own account of the circumstances. But in the present case, the master of the T. was not so called, semble, on the ground that his position in regard to the casualty, a life having been lost, would throw some suspicion on his evidence, and as the case might form the subject of a criminal charge against him, he ought not to be called upon to answer questions which might possibly incriminate him. But the court observed, that before the evidence has been taken, the Board of Trade should not assume that blame attaches more to the one captain than to the other, and that if the fact that the master had an interest in the result of the inquiry were to be considered as a ground for not calling him as a witness, the court would in every case be unable to examine certificated officers, for it would be impossible to say until the evidence was given that the certificates of one or other of them might not be suspended, and the court would thus be deprived of the best and most reliable evidence in the case, for it is, as a general rule, only the master and the certificated officers who can say why a particular course has or has not been taken. Held, further, that whether a master ought or ought not to be called upon to answer questions which might tend to subject him to a criminal prosecution is a question for the master and his legal adviser to decide, and it should be left to him to claim his right not to answer any question which might tend to criminate him. Ibid.

16. Adjournment.

311. The judge may adjourn the court from time to time and from place to place, as he may think fit. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 19.

17. Decision.

312. Except when the certificate of an officer is cancelled or suspended, in which case the decision shall always be given in open court, the judge may deliver the decision of the court either vidæ voce or in writing; and, if in writing, it may be sent or delivered to the respective parties, and it shall not be necessary to hold a court merely for the purpose of giving the decision. See the M. S. Act Amendment

Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23, sub-s. 3, and S. C. R. 1878, No. 20.

313. Under the 20th rule of the Shipping Casualties Rules, 1878, a decision with respect to suspending certificates must be given in open court by the commissioner or other authority. The reasons given in court form no part of such decision, and different reasons may be given in the annex to the report made under the 22nd rule and the 23rd section of the M. S. Act, 1862. The Kestrel, 6 P. D. 182; 4 Asp. 433; 45 L. T. 111; 30 W. R. 182.

18. Report.

314. At the conclusion of the case the judge shall report to the Board of Trade: for form of report see Appendix No. 3. See S. C. R. 1878, No. 22, and M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 23.

315. Each assessor, as well as the wreck commissioner, must sign the report made on the investigation, or report to the Board of Trade his reasons for his dissent therefrom. See M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 30.

316. Where the certificate of a master, mate, or engineer has been cancelled or suspended, the Board of Trade shall, on application by any party to the proceedings, give him a copy of the report made to the Board. S. C. (A. & R.) R. 1880, No. 5.

19. Assessors.

See c. 4, p. 2199.

20. Local Marine Boards.

(a) Right of Representation by a Solicitor.

317. An inquiry before a local marine board into the conduct of a master is penal, if not criminal, and should be as public as possible; and, semble, the defendant is entitled to be represented there by a solicitor. The Queen v. Collingridge, 34 L. J. Q. B. 9; 12 W. R. 1109.

(b) Summonses for Witnesses.

318. A local marine board, appointed under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, to inquire into a charge of alleged misconduct against the master or mate of a vessel, has a discretionary power as to granting summonses for witnesses for the defence. Ibid.

319. It is a proper course for such court before granting the summonses to inquire who the witnesses are, and what they are expected to prove; and to refuse the summons in respect of any witness who can only speak to matters clearly irrelevant. Ibid.

320. The witnesses summoned for the defence are witnesses of the court, and their expense is borne not by the defendant but by the public. Ibid.

16. Costs.

See tit. Costs, c. 41, p. 415, and same title and chapter in Addenda.

17. Rehearing.

321. Where an investigation into the conduct of a master, mate, or engineer, or into a shipping casualty, has been held under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), or any act amending the same, or under any provision for holding such investigations in a British possession, the Board of Trade may, in any case, and shall, if new and important evidence which could not be produced at the investigation has been discovered, or if for any other reason there has in their opinion been ground for suspecting a miscarriage of justice, order that the case be reheard, either generally or as to any part thereof, and either by the court or authority by whom it was heard in the first instance, or by the wreck commissioner, or in England or Ireland by a judge of her Majesty's High Court of Justice exercising jurisdiction in Admiralty cases, or in Scotland by the senior lord ordinary, or any other judge in the Court of Session whom the lord president of that court may appoint for the purpose, and the case shall be so reheard accordingly. See the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 2, sub-s. 1.

322. On an inquiry under sect. 241 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), before a local marine board at Shields, into the conduct of an engineer who, the master alleged, had been drunk upon the voyage, the court found that the engineer had been drunk, but it was not satisfied that any loss had been occasioned thereby, and the court reprimanded him and returned him his certificate. The Board of Trade ordered a rehearing before the wreck commissioner sitting at Newcastle, who, having read the evidence, held, that the engineer had been guilty of repeated acts of intoxication while on board, incapacitating him for the discharge of his duties, and his certificate was suspended. Upon motion in the Queen's Bench Division for a rule for a certiorari to bring up the order of the wreck commissioner for the purpose of quashing it, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction, no casualty having occurred, held, that the act gave the Board of Trade the power of rehearing either in cases of misconduct or casualty, and rule refused. In re Mitchelson, August 5, 1884.

323. On the rehearing of an inquiry into the loss of a steamer, further evidence on behalf of the owners received. The Joseph Ferens, No. 731, 20th September, 1880.

324. A rehearing directed by the Board of Trade of a case originally heard at Céara, in Brazil, by the British vice-consul and three assessors, which court had held that the vessel was lost owing to the misconduct of the master, and that he had been the worse for liquor during the day of the casualty, but the court had erroneously supposed that it was for the Board of Trade and not for the court to deal with the master's certificate. The Bertioga, Jan. 3, 1883.

325. On an inquiry before justices, held, that the casualty was caused by a serious error in the ship's reckoning, which may have arisen either from an extraordinary or unknown current, or from an easterly deviation in the compass not allowed for or discovered by the master, and that, as he steered by the deviation card and had no means of testing its correctness, the court did not find him in default. The Board of Trade being dissatisfied with the finding ordered a rehearing before the wreck commissioner. The Cerwynn, July 19, 1880.

326. On an inquiry into the loss of a steamer, the court held that the vessel was overloaded. The Board of Trade, on the application of the owners, allowed a rehearing, when, further evidence having been produced, the court reversed its former decision, but made no order as to costs. The Joseph Ferens, No. 731, Sept. 20, 1880.

327. A refusal by the Board of Trade to grant a rehearing of an investigation into the conduct of a certificated officer is not a decision within 42 & 43 Vict. c. 72, s. 2, sub-s. 2, and therefore no appeal lies from it. The Ida, 11 P. D. 37; 54 L. T. 497.

328. The Board of Trade under the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 72), s. 2, "may" in any case, and "shall" if new and important evidence is discovered, order a rehearing. These words impose on the Board of Trade a duty when new and important evidence, which could not be produced at the investigation, is discovered, to grant a rehearing, and they may be compelled by mandamus to grant it. Ibid. 11 P. D. 38.

2. Practice.*

329. Where the Board of Trade direct a rehearing, they shall cause such reasonable notice to be given to the parties whom they consider to be affected by the rehearing as the circumstances of the case may, in the opinion of the Board of Trade, permit. S. C. (A. & R.) R. 1880, No. 7, div. (a).

330. The following rules apply to a rehearing as if it were an appeal, and as if the court or authority before whom the rehearing takes place were the court of appeal: As to the assessors by whom the court rehearing the case is to be assisted (see No. 343, infra); as to the making of additional parties on the rehearing (see No. 351, infra); as to the right of objection to the appearance of any such parties (see No. 352, infra); as to the proof on the rehearing of the evidence given on the previous hearing, and of the report to the Board of Trade and the decision thereon and the mode of obtaining the same (see No. 354, infra); as to the further evidence which may be given on the rehearing (see No. 355, infra); as to the powers of the court rehearing the case over the costs of the rehearing (see tit. Costs, No. 160, p. 396);

* (76) Any rehearing shall be subject to and conducted in accordance with general rules made under sect. 30 of the M. S. Act, as to the mode of conducting the rehearing (see No. 347, infra); as to pleadings therein (see No. 353, infra); and as to the report to be made by the court rehearing the case to the Board of Trade (see No. 359, infra). See S. C. (A. & R.) R. 1880, No. 7, div. (b).

18. Appeal.

1. Generally.*

331. Any rehearing or appeal under this act is to be conducted according to the conditions and regulations prescribed by general rules. See the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 2, sub-s. 3.

332. A shipowner has no appeal under sect. 2 of the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72). The Golden Sea, 7 P. D. 194; 51 L. J. P. D. 64; 5 Asp. 23.†

333. Where a court of inquiry into a shipping casualty held under the eighth part of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), orders the suspension of a master's certificate, in pursuance of the powers given by the 242nd section of the same act and the 23rd section of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), the Court of Appeal, having jurisdiction under the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), will on appeal consider the evidence on which the judgment of the court of inquiry proceeded, and will reverse the judgment if the evidence is insufficient to justify the suspension of the certificate. The Arizona, 5 P. D. 123; 49 L. J. P. D. & A. 54; 42 L. T. 405; 28 W. R. 704; 4 Asp. 269.

334. Where a court of inquiry ordered a master's certificate to be suspended, and the only ground on which the decision could be supported was that the serious damage to the ship had been caused by the wrongful act or default of the master within the meaning of sect. 242 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), sub-s. 2; and, on appeal, it appeared to the Court of Appeal that there was no evidence that the damage had been caused by the wrongful act or default of the master, the Court of Appeal reversed the decision and restored to the master his certificate. Ibid.

335. An error of judgment committed by a master of a ship, under circumstances of great difficulty and danger, is not such a wrongful act or default within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 242, as will justify the suspension of his certificate, even where there has been loss of life. The Famenoth, 7 P. D. 207; 5 Asp. 35.

336. A master who was himself directing the course of his vessel through a narrow channel left the bridge, where the first mate was at the time, to summon the second mate. Before the master's return the vessel ran aground. The master's certificate having been suspended by the decision of a Board of Trade inquiry, the court affirmed such decision, holding that the rule that the officer in charge of a vessel in such circumstances must not leave his post, unless compelled by unavoidable necessity, must not be relaxed. Ever v. Board of Trade, 4th Series, vol. 7, p. 835. [SCOTCH.]

337. A master who was not placed by his owners under any restriction as to price bought improper ballast, which became converted into mud and choked the pumps, which consequently failed to work, and bad weather coming on the vessel was lost. For these wrongful acts and defaults the wreck commissioner suspended the master's certificate for three months. Affirmed on appeal. The Golden Sea, 7 P. D. 194; 51 L. J. P. D. 64; 5 Asp. 23.

338. The court of inquiry (borough magistrates), assisted by nautical assessors, suspended the certificate of the master of the steamship K., holding the commissioner, in seventy-seven of which the certificate of the master or officer was dealt with, the only appeals from the wreck commissioner's decisions were four, of which one was abandoned, one affirmed, one varied, and one reversed; and see the Evidence thereon of the Wreck Commissioner before the Royal Commission on the Loss of Life at Sea, 1885 (c. 4577), p. 227.

master in default for not having himself taken the four point bearing of the Nora Udder light, so as to make sure of the position from which he took his departure down the coast, and for leaving the deck at a time when the safety of the vessel required his personal supervision. On appeal to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, held, that any one, who had such important matters as the safety of a ship confided to his charge, should use discretion as to the time he remained on deck, and take his rest at a convenient time. Held, also, in accordance with the opinion of the assessors in the court below and of the Trinity Brethren in this court, that the master, when about to take so important a departure as that from the Nora Udder light, should have taken the bearing himself in order to make certain of his position. Held, further, that the master was aware that his compasses were faulty, and should, therefore, have taken extra precautions. The court, therefore, though with considerable hesitation, dismissed the appeal. The Katy, Feb. 16, 1886.

2. England.

339. An appeal from a decision given in England in any investigation as to the cancelling or suspension of the certificate of a master, mate or engineer, when no application for a rehearing has been made or it has been refused, lies to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice. See the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), s. 2, sub-s. 2.

3. Scotland.

340. If the decision is given in Scotland, the appeal lies to either division of the Court of Session. Ibid.

4. Ireland.

341. If the decision is given in Ireland, the appeal lies to the High Court of Admiralty, or the judge or division of her Majesty's High Court of Justice exercising jurisdiction in Admiralty cases. Ibid.

5. From Naval Courts.

342. If the decision is given by a naval court, the appeal lies to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice. Ibid.

6. From Colonial Courts.

342a. See No. 61, p. 2203.

7. Assessors.

343. The Court of Appeal shall be assisted by not less than two assessors, to be selected, in the discretion of the court, having regard to the nature of each case, from either or both of the following classes:—1. Elder Brethren of the Trinity House. 2. Persons approved from time to time by the secretary of state as assessors for the purpose of formal investigations into shipping casualties, under sect. 30 of the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), and sub-sect. 1 of sect. 3 of the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72). S. C. (A. & R.) R. 1880, No. 6, div. (d).

344. See as to the lists of such assessors, c. 3, s. 4, p. 2199.

8. Practice.

(a) Generally.

345. Subject to the previous provisions of this rule, every appeal is to be conducted under and in accordance with the general rules and regulations applicable to ordinary proceedings before the Court of Appeal to which it is brought. S. C. (A. & R.) R. 1880, No. 6, div. (j).

(b) Notice of Appeal.

346. The appellant shall, within seven days after the day on which the decision appealed against is pronounced, serve on such of the other parties to the proceedings as he may consider to be directly affected by the appeal, notice of his intention to appeal. Ibid. No. 6, div. (a).

347. The appellant shall, within seven days after the day on which the decision appealed against is pronounced, leave with the officer for the time being appointed for that purpose by the Court of Appeal a copy of the notice of appeal. Ibid. No. 6, div. (c).

348. The officer shall thereupon set down the appeal by entering it in the proper list. Ibid.

(c) Notice of Grounds of Appeal.

349. The appellant must, within two days after the appeal is set down, serve notice of the general grounds of the appeal on the parties on whom he has served notice of appeal. Ibid. No. 6, div. (a).

(d) Security for Costs.

350. See tit. Costs, p. 369.

351. The Court of Appeal may, if it thinks fit, order any other person or persons, body or bodies, other than the parties served with the notice of appeal, to be added as a party or parties to the proceedings for the purposes of the appeal, on such terms with respect to costs and otherwise as to the Court of Appeal seems meet. S. C. (A. & R.) R. 1880, No. 6, div. (e).

352. Any party to the proceedings may object to the appearance on the appeal of any other party to the proceedings as unnecessary. Ibid. No. 6, div. (f).

(f) Pleadings.

353. Nothing in the nature of pleadings on appeal, other than the notice of the general grounds of the appeal, will be allowed except by special permission of the Court of Appeal. Ibid. No. 6, div. (j).

(g) Evidence.

354. The evidence taken before the judge from whose decision the appeal is brought is proved before the Court of Appeal by a copy of the notes of the judge, shorthand writer, clerk, secretary, or other person authorized by him to take down the evidence, or by such other materials as the Court of Appeal thinks expedient; a copy of the evidence, of the report to the Board of Trade containing the decision from which the appeal is brought, and of the notice of the general grounds of the appeal, is to be left with the officer for the time being appointed for that purpose by the Court of Appeal before the appeal comes on for hearing.

Copies of the notes of evidence and report are to be supplied to the appellant, on request, by the person having charge thereof, on payment of the usual charge for copying. Ibid. No. 6, div. (g).

355. The Court of Appeal has power on questions of fact to receive further evidence, either oral, by affidavit, or by deposition taken before an examiner or commissioner. Evidence may also be given by special leave of the Court of Appeal as to matters which have occurred since the date of the decision from which the appeal is brought. Ibid. No. 6, div. (h).

356. In appeals under the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), evidence on matters of nautical skill and knowledge is inadmissible. The Kestrel, 6 P. D. 182; 4 Asp. 433; 45 L. T. 111; 30 W. R. 182.

357. When it is desired to adduce further evidence on an appeal under the 2nd sect. of the Shipping Casualties Investigations Act, 1879 (c. 72), application for leave to do so should be made before the hearing. The Famenoth, 7 P. D. 207; 5 Asp. 35.

358. Where the certificate has been suspended upon a charge of which the officer had had no notice prior to the inquiry, he may be allowed to produce rebutting evidence on appeal. Ibid.

(h) Report.

359. On the conclusion of an appeal, the Court of Appeal shall send to the Board of Trade a report of the case, similar to that required to be sent by the judge from whose decision the appeal is brought. S. C. (A. & R.) R. 1880, No. 6, div. (k).

Part I.—GENERAL FUNCTIONS.

1. Generally.*

1. "The Board of Trade" in this act means the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council appointed for the consideration of matters relating to trade and foreign plantations. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 2.

2. The Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for matters relating to trade may be described in all acts of parliament, deeds, contracts, and other instruments, by the official title of "The Board of Trade." See the Harbours and Passing Tolls, &c. Act, 1861 (c. 47), s. 65.

3. The duties of Commissioners of Customs under ss. 23, 27, 28, 29 of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 14 of M. S. Act, 1855 (c. 91), and s. 4 of M. S. Act, 1871 (c. 110), relating to the measurement and re-measurement of ships and allowance of deductions for the purposes of the calculation of tonnage are now transferred to Board of Trade by M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 3.

4. All the powers conferred and the duties imposed upon Emigration Commissioners by the provisions of the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), and of the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (c. 51), are transferred to the Board of Trade by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5; and see as to the survey and control of passenger steamers, tit. OWNERS, Pt. IV. p. 1273.

5. The Board of Trade is divided into the following departments:—the Marine Department; the Harbour Department; the Railway Department; the Financial Department; the Commercial Department; and the Bankruptcy Department. See Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices, 1879, p. 96, and the forthcoming Second Report and Evidence of the Royal Commission on Loss of Life at Sea, 1886.

6. The Railway Department embraces the following subjects:—Railways, Telegraphs, Water Companies, Gas Companies, Joint Stock Companies, Charters, Partnerships, Copyright and Trade Marks, Registry of Designs, Art Unions, Industrial Exhibitions Act, Electric Lighting and Tramways Act. Ibid. p. 98.

7. The Commercial Department embraces the following subjects:—Statistics generally, Cotton Statistics Act. Ibid. p. 98.

7a. The Bankruptcy Department, under the Inspector-General of Bankruptcy, has the administration of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. Ibid.

* (1) In the early part of the 14th century the aid of a Consultation Board in the consideration of questions relating to commerce was found requisite by the State, and in cases of sufficient urgency councils were to this end summoned to deliberate with Parliament. In 1655, Cromwell appointed a commission to inquire how the traffic and navigation of the country might be best promoted and regulated. Charles the Second, by patent of 7th Nov. 1660, instituted a Council of Trade, and by patent of 1st of December, a Council of Foreign Plantations. These two boards were afterwards amalgamated. By patent of 16th Sept. 1672, Charles the Second constituted a standing council to take charge of the welfare of the colonies and plantations, and of the trade and navigation of the kingdom. In Dec. 1675, this commission was revoked. It was, however, revived in 1695 by William the Third, under the title of the Board of Trade and Plantations. In 1782, by 22 Geo. 3, c. 82, the council or commission was abolished, and its powers were transferred to such committees as his Majesty should appoint. In 1786, a permanent committee was formed by Order in Council of 23rd August, 1786, which still regulates the constitution of the Board of Trade. See the Board of Trade, its origin, authority, and jurisdiction, issued by the Board of Trade, Feb. 1880, and presented to the Royal Commission on Loss of Life at Sea, 1886.

(2) See as to the old and present duties of the Board of Trade, its permanent establishment and staff in 1880, and the duties of the Marine, Harbour, Railway, Financial, and Commercial Departments (the Bankruptcy Department not having been then created), Ibid.

(3) In correspondence with the Board of Trade in any of its departments, all answers should commence with a reference to the official letter and number of the letter from the Board, and these should also be written legibly on the outside of the envelope in the bottom left-hand corner. The letter should be on foolscap paper, and be addressed to the Assistant-Secretary, — Department, Board of Trade, London, S.W., adding in the left-hand corner the initial of the department as "M." for Marine Department; "H." for Harbour Department, &c. See Board of Trade Instructions in respect of Wrecks, Casualties and Salvage, 1886, tit. POSTAGE.

(4) The Bankruptcy Department is in Great George-street, Westminster, and letters to the Board in that department should be addressed to the Inspector-General in Bankruptcy.

2. Forms.*

8. The Board of Trade may sanction and alter forms of the various books and papers required by this act other than those required by the second part thereof (i. e. as to the ownership, measurement and registry of British ships); and cause every such form to be sealed or marked with a distinguishing mark, and to be supplied at the custom houses and mercantile marine offices at such prices as it may fix, or may licence any person to print and sell them; and no such book or paper, unless in such form, shall be admissible in evidence in any civil proceeding on the part of any owner or master of any ship; and every such book or paper, if purporting to be in a proper form, and so sealed or marked, shall be taken to be made in the form required, unless the contrary is proved. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 8.

9. Every person forging or concerned in forging or altering the seal or distinguishing mark to any form issued by the Board of Trade, is guilty of a misdemeanour. Ibid. s. 10.

10. Penalty for printing, selling or using any form under the third part of this act (i. e. relating to masters and seamen), not so sanctioned, not exceeding £10. Ibid.

11. All instruments which by the fourth part of this act (i. e. safety and prevention of accidents) are required to be made in forms sanctioned by the Board of Trade, if made in such form, and all instruments used by or under the direction of the Board of Trade in carrying such part of this act into effect, are exempt from stamp duty. Ibid. s. 9.

* (5) Many new forms have accordingly been issued by the Board of Trade under this section.

(5a) See for forms generally issued by or with the approval of the Board of Trade under the M. S. Acts, 2 Poll. & Bruce (4th ed. by Maude & Poll.), pp. cccxxi—cccclxxxviii.; and as to forms in connection with wrecks, casualties, and salvage, Board of Trade Instructions thereon, 1886, tit. STATIONERY AND PRINTED FORMS.

† (6) The Albert medal, which comes under the direction of the marine department and the Home Office, is a decoration for bravery shown in saving life from perils of the sea. It has a first and second class, and is given for acts of conspicuous bravery in any part of the world, and to a person of any nation, and whether connected with shipwreck or not.

3. Evidence.

12. All documents purporting to be issued under the direction of the Board of Trade, and to be sealed with its seal, or signed by one of its secretaries or assistant secretaries, are to be received in evidence, and as issued by the Board, without further proof, unless the contrary be shown; and all certificates issued by the Board in pursuance of this act, and sealed with its seal, or signed by one of the officers of the marine department of the Board, are to be received in evidence as such certificates, unless the contrary be shown. Ibid. s. 7.

See also No. 8, supra.

4. Exemption from Tolls and Taxes.

13. The ships and boats belonging to or used by the Board of Trade may use any harbours, ports, docks or piers in the United Kingdom without payment of any dues or rates. Ibid. s. 431, and as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 48.

14. Property belonging to the Board of Trade is exempt from all rates and taxes. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 430.

Part II. MARINE DEPARTMENT.1. Generally.†

15. The Marine Department embraces the following subjects:—Measurement of

(7) The marine department also embraces apprenticeships to the sea service under the M. S. Acts, and the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883, c. 41.

(8) This department also embraces boats and life-saving gear on board ship.

(9) It also includes inquiries under the Boiler Explosions Act, 1882 (chiefly land boilers). See thereon Report of Mr. Hicks' Committee, House of Commons, Sessions Paper, 1884, C. 3903, and Sessions Paper, 1886, C. 4571. It also includes the superintendence of boilers in passenger steamers.

(10) This department has also the supervision of all bye-laws for seamen's lodging-houses.

(11) It also includes the supervision of changes of ships' names, the regulation of crews of fishing vessels, the discipline of tonnage, registration of ships, survey of passenger ships and boats, berthing of crews, lime and lemon juice and anti-scorbutics, scales of medicine for merchant ships, chain cables and anchors acts, training ships, examination of masters, mates, and engineers, mercantile marine offices and local marine boards, registrar of seamen's office, naval reserve, inquiries into misconduct, inquiries into wrecks and casualties, the wreck registers, rockets and lifeboats, the Albert medal, rewards for saving life, relief of distressed seamen (rules and principles), and claims upon owners, commercial code of signals, Admiralty Courts, international questions concerning shipping, and all other questions affecting a ship or her crew. See Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of Mercantile Marine Offices, 1879, p. 96, and the forthcoming Second Report of the Royal Commission on Loss of Life at Sea.

16. The Board of Trade undertakes the general superintendence of matters relating to merchant ships and seamen, and is authorized to carry into execution the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, and of all other acts relating to merchant ships and seamen, other than such acts as relate to the revenue. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 6.

17. All consular officers, and officers of customs abroad, and all local marine boards and shipping masters, are to send to the Board of Trade such returns on any matter relating to British merchant shipping or seamen as the Board requires; and all superintendents of mercantile marine offices, whenever required by the Board of Trade, are to produce to the Board or its officers all official logbooks and other documents delivered to them. Ibid. s. 12; and Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, pp. 66—69.

18. For provisions enabling the Board of Trade in any legal proceedings under the M. S. Acts, 1854—1873, to take such proceedings in the name of any of their officers, see the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 31.

18a. Nothing in the third section of 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, as to summary proceedings before justices, except so much as provides for the payment of fees due to the clerk of the justices, shall apply to any proceeding under the direction of the Board of Trade, or the provisions of the principal act or this act, or any act amending the same. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 65.

2. Local Marine Boards.

1. Generally.

19. Local marine boards for carrying this act into effect under the superintendence of the Board of Trade are established at those seaports of the United Kingdom at which they have been appointed, and at such other places as the Board of Trade may appoint; each board is constituted as follows:—the mayor or provost and stipendiary magistrate, or such of them as the Board of Trade appoints, are members ex officio; the Board of Trade appoints four members from persons residing or having places of business within seven miles of the port; and the owners of foreign-going ships and home-trade passenger ships registered at the port elect six members; such elections take place on the 25th day merchant ships, the engagement, health, and discharge of their crews, the transmission of seamen's wages, the inspection of Atlantic and Irish cattle-ships, the regulation of the international code of signals and of private and distress signals, regulations for the prevention of crimping and for the licensing and control of shipping agents, and for the supply of seamen and substitutes.

(11a) This is partly dealt with in the Harbour Department.

(12) It also includes the regulations as to draught of water. See Board of Trade Instructions to Surveyors thereon, and tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. pp. 1195, 1197.

(13) It also includes the consideration of international questions concerning shipping and seamen, and the interference of foreign authorities with British merchant seamen.

(14) It also includes instructions to and supervision of naval courts, and the regulations of the naval reserve and of training ships.

(15) For further information under the above heads, and as to the undermanning of ships, the scientific staff of the Board, and its tests of iron and steel, see the forthcoming Second Report and Evidence of the Royal Commission on Loss of Life at Sea, 1886.

(16) Tables of freeboard are no longer issued by the Board of Trade. Lloyd's Register now fixes load-lines with the concurrence of the Board. See as to same, tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. c. 1, s. 14 (c), in Addenda.

(17) Quarantine, Salvage, and Wreck are now in the Harbour Department.

of January in every third year, and such appointments take place within one month afterwards when the old board ceases and the new board takes its place; any vacancy in the interval is filled up within a month; and the person so elected or appointed continues a member until the next constitution of a new board; the mayor or provost fixes the place and mode of conducting all such elections, and gives ten days' notice thereof; and the Board of Trade has power to decide any questions concerning such elections. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 110.

20. Every registered owner of such ships has one vote for each member for every 250 tons of shipping, not exceeding ten votes for any one member. If a ship is registered in the name of one person, he is deemed the owner. Ibid. s. 111.

21. As to the calculation and apportionment of votes among the different owners, when a ship is registered in several shares. Ibid.

22. As to the lists of all such voters made by the collector or comptroller of customs in each of such ports, on or before the 25th of December in every third year, and the printing and fixing up thereof on or near the doors of the custom house at such port for two weeks next after the list has been made, and the permitting the list to be perused without fee at reasonable hours during such two weeks. Ibid. s. 112.

23. As to the revision of such lists of voters and production of the registers, and the payment by the Board of Trade of the expenses of makings such lists. Ibid. ss. 113, 114, 115.

24. Every person whose name appears on such revised list and no other is qualified to vote at the election of members of the local marine board at such seaport. Ibid. s. 116.

25. Every male person entitled according to such revised list to a vote is qualified to be elected a member of the local marine board of such seaport, and any member who ceases to be an owner of the requisite quantity of tonnage can no longer continue a member. Ibid. s. 117.

26. No act of any local marine board shall be prejudiced by reason of any irregularity in the election of any of its members, or in the list of voters. Ibid. s. 118.

27. Every local marine board keeps minutes of its proceedings in such mode as the Board of Trade prescribes; and such minutes, and all books or documents used or kept by the Board, or by any officers or servants under its control, are open to the inspection of the Board of Trade and its officers; and every local marine board makes and sends to the Board of Trade such reports and returns as it requires; but, subject hereto, every local marine board may regulate the mode in which its meetings are to be held and its business conducted. Ibid. s. 119.

28. If any local marine board, by reason of any non-election or other cause fails to meet or discharge its duties, the Board of Trade may either perform these duties until the next triennial election, or direct a new appointment and election of such local marine board. Ibid. s. 120.

29. The Board of Trade may, upon complaint, if any appointments or arrangements of any local marine board are unsatisfactory, annul or alter the same. Ibid. s. 121.

30. Three members are necessary to form a quorum of every local marine board. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 14.

31. As to the powers of local marine boards to establish and manage mercantile marine offices under the control of the Board of Trade, see c. 3.

2. Clerks or Servants.

32. Any person appointed to any office or service under any local marine board is a clerk or servant within the meaning of sect. 68 of 25 Vict. c. 96. And if any such person fraudulently applies or disposes of any property whilst so employed, he is guilty of embezzlement within the meaning of that section, and on conviction is liable to the pains and penalties thereby imposed. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 16.

3. Mercantile Marine Offices.*

1. Generally.

33. In every seaport in the United Kingdom in which there is a local marine thereon, and the overtime allowances, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of November, 1884.

board, such board shall establish a mercantile marine office or offices, procure the requisite premises, and appoint, remove, and reappoint superintendents of such offices, with any necessary deputies, clerks and servants, and regulate the mode of conducting business at such offices, and control the same; and every act done by or before any deputy duly appointed shall have the same effect as if done by or before a superintendent. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 122, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 15.

31. The sanction of the Board of Trade is necessary as to the number of persons appointed by a local marine board, and the amount of their salaries and wages and other expenses; and the Board of Trade has the control of such offices as to the receipt and payment of money thereat; and all superintendents and servants so appointed, before entering upon their duties, give such security (if any) for the due performance thereof as the Board of Trade requires; and if any one of them does not properly discharge his duties, the Board of Trade may cause the case to be investigated, and remove him from his office, and provide for the proper performance of his duties until another person is appointed. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 123.

35. All or part of the business of a mercantile marine office may, with the consent of the commissioners of customs, be ordered by the Board of Trade to be transacted at the custom house at any place where no mercantile marine office is established, and the officer of customs there shall be the superintendent. Ibid. s. 123, as amended by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 15.

36. London sailors' homes may be made mercantile marine offices, and persons connected therewith superintendents. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 129.

37. The Board of Trade may dispense with the transaction before a superintendent, or in a mercantile marine office, of any matters required to be so transacted. Ibid. s. 130.

38. As to the punishment for embezzlement in mercantile marine offices, see M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 16.

39. For provisions enabling the Board of Trade to constitute mercantile marine offices branch savings banks for seamen, see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 41, s. 2, and tit. SEAMEN, Pt. I. c. 8, p. 2132.

2. Examination of Masters, Officers, and Men.

See c. 4, p. 2252.

3. Superintendents.

40. For provisions enabling the Board of Trade to require any superintendent of a mercantile marine office to act as agent of a branch savings bank for seamen, and directing that his duties as such shall be part of his duties within the meaning of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 41, s. 2. And as to seamen's savings banks generally, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. I. c. 8, p. 2132.

41. As to the list of the changes in the crew of a foreign-going ship, before leaving the United Kingdom, to be sent by the master to the nearest superintendent, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1251.

(b) Duties.

42. The general business of superintendents of mercantile marine offices is— To afford facilities for engaging seamen by keeping registries of their names and characters: To superintend and facilitate their engagement and discharge according to the act: To provide means for securing their presence on board at the proper times: To facilitate the making of sea-apprenticeships: To perform such other duties as to merchant shipping and seamen as may be committed to them. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 124, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 15.

43. As to the duties of superintendents in witnessing shipping agreements with crews and explaining the same to them, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. c. 1, p. 2140.

44. All superintendents of mercantile marine offices and officers of customs, shall take charge of all documents under this act, delivered, transmitted to, or retained by them, shall keep them for such time as may be necessary for any proper purpose, and, if required, produce them, and shall then transmit them to the registrar-general of shipping and seamen to be by him recorded. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 277.

(cc) Arbitration.

45. Every superintendent shall hear and decide any question whatever between a master or owner and any of his crew which both parties agree in writing to submit to him; and every award so made by him shall be binding on both parties, and shall in any legal proceeding which may be taken in the matter before any court of justice be deemed conclusive as to the rights of the parties; and no such submission or award shall require a stamp; and any document purporting to be such submission or award shall be prima facie evidence thereof. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 173.

46. As to the duty of superintendents to hear and decide disputes between owners and skippers of fishing vessels and fishermen under the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1863 (c. 41), see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. No. 58, p. 2135.

(dd) Sea Apprentices.

47. For provisions as to superintendents of local marine offices giving assistance in binding sea apprentices, and as to their fees in respect thereof, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 141.

48. As to indentures of sea apprentices, and the production thereof to a superintendent, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. c. 6, p. 2130; and as to fishing boats' apprentices, Ibid.

4. *Fees.

49. Such fees, not exceeding those in table P. in the schedule as are fixed by the Board of Trade, are payable upon all engagements and discharges effected before superintendents of local marine offices, and scales of fees are to be conspicuously placed in the shipping offices. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 125, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 15.

50. Every owner or master of a ship engaging or discharging any seaman before a superintendent of a mercantile marine office is to pay the fees, and may deduct in respect thereof from the wages of all but apprentices sums not exceeding those specified in table Q. in the schedule. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 126.

51. Penalty not exceeding £20 against any superintendent, deputy superintendent, clerk or servant in any mercantile marine office, who demands any remuneration except the lawful fees. Ibid. s. 127.

52. For provisions as to the fees of superintendents for giving assistance in binding sea apprentices, Ibid. s. 141.

4. Examination and Certificates of Masters, Officers and Men.

1. Generally.†

53. Local marine boards, under the supervision of the Board of Trade, provide for the examination at their respective ports of persons intending to become masters or mates of foreign-going ships, or of home-trade passenger ships, who wish certificates of competency, appoint examiners and regulate the examinations; and members of the local marine board may be present and assist thereat. Ibid. ss. 131, 132.

54. No foreign-going ship or home-trade passenger ship shall go to sea from any port in the United Kingdom unless the master, and in the case of a foreign-going ship the first and second mates, or the only mate, and in the case of a home-trade passenger ship the first or only mate, possess certificates of competency or service appropriate to their several stations in such ship, or of a higher grade;

* (19) For tables of fees payable to superintendents sanctioned by Board of Trade, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of November, 1884, pp. 391—393, 484—486.

† (20) As to the application for examination, examination and grant of certificates to masters, mates, and engineers, and the practice thereon, Ibid. August, 1879, p. 57.

(21) As to examinations as to colour blindness and colour tests, and the ports where they may take place, see Board of Trade Instructions to Examiners and Superintendents of May, 1880, and January, 1886.

(22) As to service in auxiliary scrawhaling vessels being counted as service in sailing, not steam, vessels, Ibid. July, 1881.

(23) The superintendent of the mercantile marine office delivers the certificate to the owner, agent, or master on his applying for it at the mercantile marine office, and paying the expense (if any). If not taken up in fourteen days the fact is reported to the board. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Passenger Accommodation, &c., B. 1148 : 1 : 79, p. 7, par. 2.

and no such ship, if of one hundred tons burden or upwards shall go to sea therefrom, unless at least one officer besides the master possesses a certificate appropriate to the grade of only mate therein or a higher grade. Penalty for breach against any person so going to sea as such master or mate without possessing such certificate, and against any person so employing such master or mate, not exceeding £50. Ibid. s. 136.

55. Every steamer required to have a certificated master shall also have a certificated engineer or engineers. (1) Engineer's certificates are of two grades, first-class and second-class; (2) Every foreign-going steamer of 100 nominal horse-power or upwards must have as its first engineer an engineer possessing a first-class certificate, and as its second engineer an engineer possessing a first or second-class certificate; (3) Every foreign-going steamer of less than 100 nominal horse-power must have as its first or only engineer an engineer possessing a first or second-class certificate; (4) Every sea-going home-trade passenger steamer must have as its first or only engineer an engineer possessing a first or second-class certificate. Penalty against every person who, having been engaged to serve in any of the above capacities in any such steamer, goes to sea in that capacity without having the certificate required, and against every person who employs any such person in any of the above capacities in such ship without ascertaining that he has such certificate, not exceeding £50. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 5.

56. As to the powers of the Board of Trade to make rules for the conduct of such examinations of masters, mates and engineers, and the qualifications of the applicants; and as to the qualification of the examiners, their number, remuneration, appointment and removal, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 132, as amended as to engineers by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 6.

57. As to the powers of the Board of Trade to require and authorize the local marine boards for two or more ports to act together as one board for conducting examinations, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 132.

58. The Board of Trade, where serious inconvenience exists at a port from the distance, applicants for certificates have to travel to be examined, may, with the concurrence of the local marine board, send the examiners of that board to the port where such inconvenience exists; and the examiners shall proceed and there examine the applicants in the presence of such persons (if any) as the Board of Trade may appoint; and such examinations shall be conducted as other examinations under the act. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 17.

2. Not under Local Marine Boards.

59. When the business of a mercantile marine office is not conducted under a local marine board, the Board of Trade may establish a mercantile marine office, procure the requisite buildings and properly appoint the requisite superintendents, deputies, clerks and servants, and exercise all such powers as to the holding of examinations for certificates of competency as masters, mates or engineers, as exercised by a local marine board. See the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 10.

3. *In British Possessions Abroad.

60. For provisions enabling her Majesty, by Order in Council, to declare

* (24) Certificates of competency of the following grades which have been granted in the following colonies since the dates specified below, and under an Order in Council issued in accordance with the provisions of sect. 8 of the M. S. (Colonial) Act, 1869 (c. 11), are now recognized by the Board of Trade as of the same validity as if granted in the United Kingdom, viz.:—VICTORIA: master, first mate, only mate, second mate, first class engineer and second class engineer; Jan. 4, 1870. DOMINION OF CANADA: master and mate (equivalent to first mate in the United Kingdom); August 19, 1871. NEW ZEALAND: master extra, master, first mate, only mate, second mate, first class engineer extra, first class engineer and second class engineer;

May 1, 1872. NEW SOUTH WALES: master, first mate, second mate, first class engineer and second class engineer; June 18, 1872. SOUTH AUSTRALIA: master, first mate, only mate, second mate, first class engineer and second class engineer; May 12, 1874. MALTA and its Dependencies: master, first mate, second mate, first class engineer and second class engineer; May 12, 1874. TASMANIA: master extra, master, first mate, only mate, second mate, first class engineer and second class engineer; April 1, 1876. BENGAL: master, first mate, only mate, second mate, first class engineer and second class engineer; June 27, 1876. NEWFOUNDLAND: master, first mate, only mate, second mate; May 14, 1877. BOMBAY: master, first mate, only that the certificates of competency of masters, mates and engineers granted under the authority of British Colonial legislatures, after examination shall be of the same force as if granted under the Merchant Shipping Acts, see the Merchant Shipping (Colonial) Act, 1869 (c. 11), s. 8.

4. Of British Fishing Boats.

61. The Board of Trade may issue certificates under sect. 134 of the M. S. Act, 1854, that the holder thereof is competent to act as skipper, or as second hand of fishing boats, or of a particular class of fishing boats, in every case according to the report made by the local examiners with reference to the applicant for a certificate, and according as the Board of Trade may prescribe in any rules made by them under sect. 132 of the M. S. Act, 1854; but no skipper's certificate shall be granted to anyone who has not previously held a certificate as second hand for two months. See the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41), s. 37.

62. Every such certificate shall only entitle the person to whom it is given to be an officer of the class of fishing boats referred to in the certificate, and none other, and of the grade therein named, or of a lower grade. Ibid. s. 38.

63. The provisions in the M. S. Acts, 1854, with respect to the examination of applicants for certificates, the suspension and cancellation of certificates and inquiries into the conduct of the holders, and other provisions connected therewith, shall apply to the certificates under this act and their holders. Ibid. s. 39.

64. Every person who has before 1st September, 1883, served as a skipper or second hand in fishing boats to which this act applies, or is applied, or such other boats as the Board of Trade may think shall have afforded sufficient experience, shall be entitled to a certificate of service as skipper or second hand (as the case may be) of a fishing boat. Ibid. s. 40.

65. The Board of Trade may establish a register of skippers and second hands certificated under this act, and a copy or extract therefrom duly certified shall be evidence. Ibid. s. 41.

66. No fishing boat shall go to sea from any port in the United Kingdom unless the skipper thereof is holder of a mate, second mate, first class engineer and second class engineer; July 11, 1877. QUEENSLAND: master, first mate, only mate, second mate, first class engineer and second class engineer; Oct. 1, 1877. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, p. 17, par. 45.

(25) The provisions of s. 8 of the M. S. (Colonial) Act, 1869 (c. 11), have been extended to certificates of competency granted to masters, mates, and engineers by the Governor of Hong Kong. See Order in Council of December 31, 1883, in 15 Hertslet's Collection of Treaties, p. 995.

(26) As the colonial certificates of competency referred to are to have the same force as the similar certificates granted by the Board of Trade in the United Kingdom, they must be accepted as occupying in every respect the place of the latter, and as entitling their bonâ fide holders to act in the capacities stated on them, or any inferior (but not superior) capacity in any British ship all over the world without the possession of a Board of Trade certificate. Colonial certificates will have to be used, produced and delivered at the times and on the occasions at and on which imperial certificates of competency would have to be used, produced and delivered. See Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, p. 17, par. 45.

(27) Consular officers are empowered by the Orders in Council under which these certificates have been recognized to demand, and, if necessary, detain, any such colonial certificate which they have reason to believe has been improperly issued, or has been forged, altered, cancelled, suspended, or to which the person using it is not justly entitled. Whenever this power is exercised a report of the facts and circumstances must be sent by the consul with the least possible delay to the Board of Trade and to the government of the possession in which the certificate was originally granted, or may purport to have been granted. As the withdrawal of a certificate would in some cases entail inconvenience, not only upon its possessor but also upon the owners of the ship and cargo, it is scarcely necessary to caution consuls that the exercise of the power should only be resorted to when the evidence is perfectly clear; and if the ship is bound to the United Kingdom and the report above mentioned has been sent to the possession, the Board of Trade shall nevertheless be informed of the facts. Every case of death of a colonial certificate-holder, which may come to the consul's knowledge, should be reported, and the certificate, if it has come into the consul's possession, forwarded to the government of the possession by which it was granted without delay. Ibid. p. 18, par. 46.

certificate of competency, or service under this act; penalty for breach against owner not exceeding £20, and against person acting as skipper, and anyone employing him not exceeding £20. See the M. S. (Fishing Boats) Act, 1883 (c. 41), s. 42.

67. The Board of Trade, subject to its powers to remit a case for further examination and testimonials in the cases of masters and mates, shall deliver to every applicant for a master's, mate's, or first or second-class engineer's certificate, duly reported by the examiners to have passed the examination satisfactorily, and to have given satisfactory evidence of sobriety, experience, ability and general good conduct on board ship, a "certificate of competency," to the effect that he is competent to act as master, or as first, second or only mate of a foreign-going ship, or as master or mate of a home-trade passenger ship, or as first or second-class engineer, as the case may be. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 134, as amended by the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 8.

(b) A. B's.

67a. As to certificates as able seamen, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. I. c. 5, p. 2130.

(c) Service.

68. As to the masters and mates entitled to "certificates of service" in respect of services prior to 1st January, 1851, and as to the contents of such certificates, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 135.

69. As to the engineers entitled to "certificates of service" in respect of services prior to 1st April, 1862, and as to the contents of such certificate, see M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 9.

(d) Rank.

70. Every certificate of competency of a master or mate for a foreign-going ship is of a higher grade than that for a home-trade passenger ship, and entitles the holder to go to sea in the corresponding grade in such last ship; but the certificate for a home-trade passenger ship does not entitle the holder to go to sea as master or mate of a foreign-going ship. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 137.

(e) Record and Evidence.

71. All certificates of competency or service shall be in duplicate, one part shall be delivered to the person entitled to it, and the other recorded by the registrar-general of shipping and seamen, or such other person as the Board of Trade appoints. The Board shall give to such officer notice of all orders for cancelling, or otherwise affecting any certificate, and the officer shall make a corresponding entry in the record of certificates; and a copy purporting to be certified by such officer of any certificate, shall be prima facie evidence thereof, and a similar copy of any entry so made shall be prima facie evidence of the truth of the contents of such entry. Ibid. s. 138, as amended as to engineers by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 10.

(f) Production.

72. The master of every foreign-going ship shall, on signing the agreement with his crew, produce to the superintendent of the mercantile marine office the certificates of competency or service which the master and his first and second or only mate are required to possess; and in the case of steamers the like certificates as to the engineers or engineer of such ship; and thereupon and on the due execution of the agreement, the superintendent shall sign and give the master a certificate to that effect. In the case of running agreements for foreign-going ships the superintendent shall, before the second and every subsequent voyage after the first commencement of the agreement, sign and give to the master, on his complying with the provisions herein contained with respect to such agreements, and producing to the superintendent the certificate of competency or service of any first, second or only mate then first engaged by him, and in the case of steamers the like certificates as to the engineers or engineer of such ships, a certificate to that effect. The master of every foreign-going ship shall, before proceeding to sea, produce the certificate so to be given to him by the superintendent to the collector or comptroller of customs, and no officer of customs shall clear any such ships outwards without such production. If any such ship attempts to go to sea without a clearance, any such officer may detain her until such certificate is produced. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 161, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), ss. 10, 15.

73. The master or owner of every home-trade passenger ship shall, within twenty-one days after the 30th June and 31st December in every year, besides transmitting or delivering to a superintendent in the United Kingdom the agreement made within the six months preceding, shall also produce to the superintendent the certificates of competency or service of the master and his first or only mate, and in the case of steamers, of his engineers or engineer. The superintendent shall thereupon give to the master or owner a certificate of such delivery and production; and no officer of customs shall grant a clearance or transire for any such ship without the production of such certificate; and if any such ship attempts to ply or go to sea without such clearance or transire, any such officer may detain her until the certificate is produced. If the agreement for any home-trade ship is not delivered or transmitted by the master or owner to a superintendent at the time and in the manner hereby directed, such master or owner shall for every default incur a penalty not exceeding £5. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 162, sub-ss. 2, 3, as amended as to engineers by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 10.

(g) Lost.

74. For provisions in case of lost certificate for a copy to be granted to have the effect of the original, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 139, as amended as to engineers by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 10.

(h) Fraud or Misuse.

75. For penalties for false representations for the purpose of obtaining a certificate of competency or service, and for provisions making persons forging or altering, or fraudulently using or lending any certificate guilty of a misdemeanour. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 140, as amended as to engineers by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 10.

6. *Fees.

76. The applicants for examination are to pay such fees, not exceeding those in tables R. and B. in the schedules, and to such persons as the Board of Trade directs. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 133, as amended as to engineers by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 7.

76a. The salaries of the surveyors by whom examinations for certificates of masters, mates, and engineers are conducted, are paid out of monies provided by parliament (see M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), s. 39), and the fees paid by the applicants for examination are paid into the exchequer. See M. S. (Fees and Expenses) Act, 1880 (c. 22), s. 4.

5. General Register and Record Office of Seamen.

77. The "General Register and Record Office of Seamen" is at the Custom House, London. The Board of Trade has control over it. The Board of Trade may direct the business of the register office at any of the outports to be transacted at the mercantile marine office, or, with the consent of the Commissioners of Customs, at the custom house of the port, and may appoint the superintendent, or, with such consent, some officer of customs, to conduct the same, subject to the control of the Board of Trade. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 271, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 15.

6. Wreck or Depositions Register.

78. There is at the Board of Trade a register called the "Wreck Register," in which all copies of depositions taken by receivers of wreck and other officers, and other documents relating to wrecks and such like casualties under the M. S. Acts are recorded. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Wrecks, Casualties, and Salvage, 1886.

7. Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen.

79. The registrar-general of shipping and seamen, his assistants, clerks and servants are appointed by the Board of Trade, which, with the consent of the Treasury, regulates their salaries and allowances, and other necessary expenses. These are paid by the Treasury. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 271, as amended by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 4.

80. The registrar-general of shipping and seamen is to keep a register of all persons who serve in ships, subject to the provisions of this act. Ibid. s. 272; and Ibid. s. 4.

81. The collector or comptroller of customs at every port in the United Kingdom shall on or before the 1st February and the 1st August in every year transmit to the registrar-general of shipping and seamen a list of all ships registered in such port, and of those whose registers have been transferred or cancelled in such port since the last return. Ibid. s. 278; and Ibid. s. 4.

82. The registrar-general of shipping and seamen is to record all documents transmitted to him by superintendents of mercantile marine offices and officers of customs under this act, and, with or without payment of a fee as fixed by the Board of Trade, shall allow any person to inspect the same. In cases in which the production of the original of any such document in any court of justice or elsewhere is essential, he shall produce the same, and in other cases shall make and deliver to any person requiring it a certified copy of all or part of such document, and every copy purporting to be so made and certified shall be received in evidence, and have the effect of the original. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 277.

8. Powers of Emigration Commissioners.

83. All the powers conferred and the duties imposed upon emigration commissioners by the provisions of the Passengers Act, 1855 (c. 119), and of the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863 (c. 51), are transferred to the Board of Trade by the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 5.

9. Inspectors.

84. The Board of Trade may appoint an inspector, to report to them upon the following matters:—(1) Upon the nature and causes of any accident or damage which any ship has or is alleged to have sustained or caused. (2) Whether the provisions of this act, or any regulations under it have been complied with. (3) Whether the hull and machinery of any steamer are sufficient and in good condition. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 14.

85. Every inspector (1) may go on board and inspect any ship, and any part thereof, or of the machinery, boats, equipments, or articles on board to which the provisions of this act apply, not unnecessarily detaining her; (2) may inspect any premises requisite to his report; (3) may, by summons under his hand, require the attendance of any person to be examined, and require returns to any inquiries; (4) may enforce the production of all books or documents; (5) may administer oaths, or take declarations of the truth of the statements made to him. Penalty for breach not exceeding £10. Ibid. s. 15.

85a. Every witness so summoned shall be allowed such expenses as would be allowed to any witness attending on subpoena to give evidence before any court of record, or if in Scotland on the court of justiciary, and in case of any dispute as to amount the same shall be referred to one of the masters of the Court of Queen's Bench in England or Ireland, or to the Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer in Scotland, who, on request under the hand of the inspector, shall certify the proper amount. Ibid.

86. For provisions extending to the registrar and deputy-registrar of the High Court of Admiralty the powers conferred by this section on Masters of the Court of Queen's Bench, see the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), ss. 24, 25.

86a. Penalty for wilfully impeding any such inspector in the execution of his duty, not exceeding £10, and the offender may be seized and detained until he can be taken before a justice of the peace or other officer having jurisdiction. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 16.

10. Medical Inspectors.

87. As to medical inspectors, their appointments by local marine boards, their duties and remuneration, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. I. c. 12, p. 2133; and as to the inspection of medical stores, provisions, and water, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. IV. pp. 1298—1300.

11. Officers of Customs.

88. All officers of customs and superintendents of mercantile marine offices shall take charge of all documents delivered, transmitted to or retained by them under this act, shall keep them for such time as may be necessary for any proper purpose, and, if required, produce them, and shall then transmit them to the registrar-general of shipping and seamen, to be by him recorded. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 277.

12. Other Officers.

89. Every officer of the Board of Trade, every commissioned officer of any of her Majesty's ships on full pay, every British consular officer, the registrar-general of seamen and his assistant, every chief officer of customs in her Majesty's dominions, and every superintendent, may, in cases where he suspects the law has not been complied with, exercise the following powers:—He may require the owner, master, or any of the crew, of any British ship to produce any official log-books or other documents relating to such crew or any member thereof in their possession or control; he may require any such master to produce a list of all persons on board his ship, and take copies of such official log-books, or documents, or of any part thereof; he may summon the crew of any such ship; he may summon the master to appear and give any explanation concerning such ship or her crew or the said official log-books or documents. Penalty for refusing or neglecting to obey any such requirements, not exceeding £20. Ibid. s. 13.

13. Chain Cables and Anchors Acts.

1. Generally.*

90. For provisions as to chain cables and anchors, see the Chain Cables and Anchors Acts, 1864 (c. 27), the Act of 1871 (c. 101), and the Act of 1874 (c. 51).

91. The Board of Trade may grant to public bodies or persons mentioned in the schedule licences for the testing of chain cables. See Chain Cables and Anchors Act, 1864 (c. 27), s. 2.

92. Her Majesty, by Order in Council, may direct licences to be granted to other public bodies than those mentioned in the schedule for the testing of chain cables and anchors. Ibid. 1871 (c. 101), s. 3.

93. The Board of Trade may appoint inspectors of proving establishments, apparatus, and machinery under this act, and make regulations for the performance of such inspector's duties. Ibid. 1864 (c. 27), s. 3.

94. As to the fees on such licences, Ibid. s. 5.

95. As to the salaries and allowances of inspectors, Ibid. s. 6.

96. Whenever any ship is surveyed or detained by the Board of Trade under the M. S. Act, 1873, on the ground of alleged unseaworthiness, the Board of Trade may direct an inquiry into the conditions of the cables and the anchors, and if they have not been duly tested may make such further order as they may think fit before her release. Ibid. 1874 (c. 51), s. 5.

97. Licences for the testing of chain cables and anchors are to be renewed annually, after inspection of the machinery, &c., and on certificate of inspector. Ibid. 1864 (c. 27), s. 4.

98. As to the duties of testers of chain cables and anchors, the mode of testing same, the tests thereof to be approved by the Board of Trade, the charges for testing and affixing proof marks, the powers of testers to detain chain cables tested until the charges are paid, and the certificates to be given by testers, Ibid. ss. 6—10.

98a. As to the punishment for illegal stamping thereof, Ibid. s. 12.

99. As to the testing of every fifteen fathoms of chain, and the mode of doing so, Ibid. 1871 (c. 101), s. 5.

100. For the sale of proofs showing the breaking strain for chain cables, see schedule to Order in Council of May 12, 1874, approved by the Board of Trade, January 1, 1875.

101. Every contract for the sale of a chain cable implies a warranty that it has been duly tested and stamped, and the proof of its having been so is on the

102. No maker or dealer in chain cables or anchors, or other person, is relieved from responsibility in respect of any chain cable or anchor to which, but for this act, he would have been subject. Ibid. 1864 (c. 27), s. 13.

103. As to the prohibition of sale of improved cables and anchors, and the penalties for using unlicensed testing machines, Ibid. 1871 (c. 101), ss. 7 and 10, and Ibid. 1874 (c. 51), s. 3.

104. This act does not extend to contracts of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty for the supply of chain cables or anchors for her Majesty's ships or dockyards. Ibid. 1864 (c. 27), s. 14.

2. Inquiry.

105. Whenever any ship is surveyed or detained by the Board of Trade under the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), on the ground of alleged unseaworthiness, the Board of Trade may direct an inquiry into the conditions of the cables and anchors, and if they have not been duly tested may make such further order as they may think fit before her release. Ibid. 1874 (c. 51), s. 5.

3. Fees.

106. All fees paid to the Board of Trade and the Trinity House in pursuance of the Chain Cables and Anchors Acts, 1864 to 1874, are to be carried to the mercantile marine fund, and all expenses under these acts, including the salary of and allowances to inspectors are paid out of the mercantile marine fund. Ibid. s. 2.

Part III.—HARBOUR DEPARTMENT.

1. Generally.

172. For provisions transferring from the Admiralty to the Board of Trade their powers and duties relative to harbours and navigation under local and other acts, see the Harbours Transfer Act, 1862 (c. 69).

173. Sections 7 to 11 of the General Pier and Harbour Act, 1861 (c. 80), and all provisions relative thereto in any other act or provisional order of the Board of Trade, are to be construed as if the Board of Trade were named therein in lieu of the Admiralty. Ibid. s. 14.

174. As to the powers of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to retain authority over piers in places where dock-yards, naval stations, and the like are situate, on giving a notice of their intention to do so to the Board of Trade, Ibid. s. 9.

175. For provisions for the transfer from the Commissioners of the Admiralty to the Board of Trade of the harbours of Portland, Dover (outer harbour), St. Catherine's, Jersey, and Alderney, and the works connected therewith in trust for the public service, see the Harbours Transfer Act, 1865 (c. 100).

176. The Harbour Department embraces the following subjects:—harbours, lighthouses, pilotage, protection of navigable channels, ports, &c., fisheries, local charges on shipping, registration of ships; provisional orders, piers and harbours; provisional orders; loans to harbour authorities; standards.* See the forthcoming Second Report and Evidence of Royal Commission on Loss of Life at Sea, 1886.

177. Passing tolls and differential dues were abolished from 1st January, 1862, and dues levied by charitable corporations were abolished from 1st January, 1872. See the Harbours and Passing Tolls, &c., Act, 1861 (c. 47).

178. For provisions facilitating the construction and improvement of harbours by authorizing loans to harbour authorities, Ibid.

178a. For provisions for the transfer of the management of the rights and interests of the crown in foreshores from the Commissioners of her Majesty's Woods and Forests to the Board of Trade, see the Crown Lands Act, 1866, c. 62.

2. Harbours, Docks and Piers.

179. As to the powers of the Board of Trade in connection with the works of the undertakers, see the General Pier and Harbour Act, 1861 (c. 80), and the Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 19), ss. 7—12, as amended by the Harbours Transfer Act, 1862 (c. 69), s. 14.

180. For provisions enabling the Board of Trade to exercise the powers relative to harbours and navigation given to the Admiralty by the Preliminary Inquiries Act, 1851 (c. 49), see the Harbours Transfer Act, 1862 (c. 69), s. 3.

181. For provisions exempting the Thames and Mersey from the operation of the act, Ibid. s. 10.

182. As to the meaning of the terms "harbour, dock, or pier," "harbour master," "the undertakers," and other terms in this act, see the Harbours,

* (31) Quarantine, Salvage, and Wreck have recently been transferred from the Marine Department to this Department.

Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 2.

183. As to the powers of the Board of Trade in reference to provisional orders, and over the works of the undertakers, see the General Pier and Harbour Act, 1861, Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 19), ss. 19—27.

184. As to provisional orders of the Board of Trade and the mode of application for the same, Ibid. ss. 2—6.

185. For provisions for the protection of harbours, docks, and piers from fire or other injury, removal of combustible matter, guarding of the same during the night, penalties for breach of such regulations and powers to search for and extinguish fires and lights, see the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), ss. 69—72.

186. As to the providing of life-boats, mortars, rockets, and apparatus by persons authorized under this act to construct harbours, docks, or piers, Ibid. ss. 16, 17, as amended by the Harbours Transfer Act, 1861 (c. 69), s. 8.

187. As to the buoys to be laid down by the undertakers for the guidance of vessels within the limits of the harbour, dock, or pier, under the direction of the Trinity House, the Corporation of Dublin, or the Commissioners of Northern Lights, and prohibiting the undertakers from erecting lighthouse, beacon, or sea marks without the sanction of those authorities, see the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), ss. 77, 78.

188. For penalties against persons discharging any ballast or other matter into a harbour, dock or pier, Ibid. s. 73.

189. For penalties not exceeding £5 against wharfingers or other servants of the undertakers, or of their lessees, or the servants of such lessees, giving undue preference, or showing any partiality in loading or unloading goods on any of the quays, wharfs, or other works belonging to the undertakers, Ibid. s. 67.

190. As to tender of amends before action brought, and after action brought payment into court of money by anyone trespassing or doing any wrongful act while in the execution of this or the special act, or any act incorporated therewith, Ibid. s. 91.

191. For penalties not exceeding £5 for misconduct of harbour master, or any of his assistants, Ibid. s. 54.

192. Penalty not exceeding £5 against any person other than the harbour master wilfully cutting, breaking, or destroying the mooring or fastening of any vessel in the harbour or dock, or at or near the pier. Ibid. s. 62.

193. For provisions authorizing the undertakers to make bye-laws for regulating the admission of vessels into or near the harbour, dock, or pier, and their removal therefrom, and their government therein, and for preventing injury or damage to vessels or goods therein, Ibid. s. 83; for the ratification, alteration, enforcement, and proof of such bye-laws, see ss. 84—90.

194. As to rates and audit of accounts, Ibid. ss. 25—50; and the General Pier and Harbour Act, 1861 (c. 80); and the Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 19), ss. 13—18.

2. Powers of Harbour, Dock, and Pier Masters.

(a) Generally.

201. As to the powers of harbour, dock, and pier masters in reference to vessels mooring, docking, or unmooring, or anchored or moored, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. VIII. c. 3, pp. 284—291.

202. The harbour master may give directions for regulating the quantity of ballast or dead weight in the hold which each vessel in or at the harbour, dock, or pier shall have during the delivery of her cargo, or after having discharged the same. See the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 52.

(b) Floats of Timber.

203. As to damage by floats of timber, and the removal thereof when causing obstruction, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. IV. p. 240, and tit. WRECK, p. 2333.

See also No. 226, p. 2264, and Nos. 260, 261, p. 2266.

(c) Hawsers, Tow-lines and Fasts.

204. Every vessel in the harbour or dock, or at or near the pier, shall have substantial hawsers, tow-lines, and fasts fixed to the dolphins, booms, buoys, or mooring posts, when required by the harbour master. Penalty for breach against the master, after notice from the harbour master, not exceeding £10. See the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 61.

(d) Removal of Vessels after discharging.

205. The master of every vessel entering the harbour or dock to discharge cargo shall cause her to be so discharged as soon as convenient, and, after being so discharged, to be removed, without loss of time, into that part of the harbour or dock set apart for light vessels, and which is to be set apart accordingly. Penalty against master for breach, after twenty-four hours' notice signed by the harbour master, not exceeding £10, and the harbour master may cause such vessel to be so removed, and recover the expenses from the master. Ibid. s. 64.

(e) Removal of Vessels to repair or clean Works.

206. Whenever the undertakers deem it necessary, for repairing or cleansing the harbour, dock, or pier, that any vessel should be removed, the master shall, within three days after notice in writing, signed by the harbour master, remove his vessel accordingly. Penalty for breach, not exceeding £5. Ibid.

207. If the master cannot be found, or neglects or refuses to remove the vessel as required, the harbour master may remove her, and the expenses of such removal shall be paid to the undertakers by the owner or master; but previous to the repairs the harbour master shall give three days' notice of such repairs, and of the necessity for such removal to the collector and comptroller of the customs of the district, and cause a like notice to be affixed on some conspicuous part of such custom house and of the office of the undertakers. Ibid. s. 65.

(f) Removal of Goods.

208. As to the removal of goods, and powers to charge the owner with or sell the goods for the expenses of removal, Ibid. s. 68.

(g) Removal of Vessels, Wrecks and other Obstructions.

See tit. WRECK.

3. Thames Conservancy.*

209. For the principal acts of parliament relating to the Thames, see the Thames Act, 1810 (c. 204), the Thames Conservancy Act, 1857 (c. 147), the Watermen and Lightermen's Amendment Act,

* (33) The different bodies exercising jurisdiction on the banks and waters of the Thames are THE CONSERVATORS OF THE THAMES, exercising the general powers of a harbour and conservancy board over the lower river and estuary, as well as those of conservancy on the upper river as far as Cricklade; THE TRINITY HOUSE, which licences pilots for the river and its approaches, and maintains the lighthouses and buoys thereon; the Watermen's Company, the members of which have a monopoly of the navigation of craft plying between Teddington and Gravesend; the Board of Trade, which has certain powers in respect of passenger-steamboats on the Thames, in common with those over other passenger steamers, and is also the department of the Government to which under the acts relating to the Conservancy Board and the Trinity House certain questions arising under these acts are referred; and THE METROPOLITAN POLICE. See the Report of 16 June, 1879, of the Committee appointed by the Board of Trade to inquire into the Navigation of the Thames, presented to Parliament, Sess. Paper, C. 2338, p. xii.

(34) The Conservators of the Thames consists of the lord mayor, two aldermen, four common councilmen, the deputy master of the Trinity House, two conservators appointed by the Admiralty, one by the Board

210. This Act and the Thames Conservancy Acts, 1857 to 1880, may be cited together as the Thames Acts, 1857—1878, and shall be read as one act. See the Thames Act, 1878 (c. 216, L.), s. 1.

211. Sects. 63 and 64 of the Thames Navigation Act, 1866, are altered from three to ten miles. Ibid. s. 3.

212. Sect. 7 of the Thames Navigation Act, 1870, is repealed by Ibid.

213. For provisions appointing conservators for the management of the Thames and regulating their appointment, powers, management and duties, see the Thames Acts, 1857—1878.

214. For further provisions as to the election of conservators as to ferries, pleasure-boats, improvements of bridges, inspection of steam-boats' pier at Gravesend, tonnage-dues, bye-laws, &c., see the Thames Act, 1870 (c. 149, L.).

215. As to the powers of the conservators to make bye-laws, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. IX. p. 301.

216. The jurisdiction of the conservators extends from Cricklade in Wiltshire to Yantlet Creek in Kent. See Bye-laws of 1872, No. 2.

217. For powers of the conservators as to public inquiries, ballastage, buoyage, beaconage, lighting, discharge of colliers, fisheries, &c., see the Thames Act, 1864 (c. 113).

217*a*. For further provisions as to ballastage and sewage pollution, Ibid.; and 19 Geo. 2, c. 22; 34 & 35 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 6; and Thames Act, 1866 (c. 89); and see No. 323, p. 2270.

218. For provisions extending the powers of the Metropolitan Board of Works for the purification of the Thames and the main drainage of the metropolis, see the Metropolitan Local Management Acts, 1855 and 1858 (cc. 120 and 104).

219. As to watermen, regulations as to apprenticeship, &c., see the Thames Act, 1864 (c. 113).

220. For powers to conservators to appoint one of their officers to assist a harbour master or deputy harbour master in the execution of his duties, and with similar powers, see the Thames Act, 1878 (c. 216, L.), s. 6.

221. As to conservators in cases of emergency, of which they are the sole judges, exercising the powers conferred by sect. 8 of the Thames Act, 1857, without having given notice as therein provided, see the Thames Act, 1870 (c. 149, L.), s. 27.

of Trade, and one by the Trinity House. See the Report of Harbour Authorities, ordered by the House of Commons to be printed, 17th August, 1883, Sess. Paper, No. 313, p. xxxii.

(35) As to the powers of the conservators, Ibid.

(36) The Watermen's Company is an old guild dating from the 14th century. The acts relating to the company were, in 1827, repealed and consolidated by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 75. The principal act now governing the company is 22 & 23 Vict. c. 133. In 1860, a code of bye-laws was made by the company under this act, and approved by the Conservators of the Thames. The 27 & 28 Vict. c. cxiii, contains provisions affecting the company. Ibid. p. xli.

(37) See further as to the powers and authorities and the extent of the monopoly of this company and recommendations thereon, Ibid. pp. xli—xlviii.

(38) As to the powers and authorities of the Trinity House in reference to pilotage in the Thames, and recommending the abolition of compulsory pilotage above Gravesend, Ibid. p. xxxiv.

(39) As to the staff of the conservators, Ibid. p. xxxiii.

(40) As to passenger steamers on the river Thames, and appliances for saving life in cases of emergency, Ibid. p. xxix.

(41) The Thames Conservancy Bye-laws, allowed by Order in Council of Feb. 5, 1872, annul all previous bye-laws of the Conservators, excepting those of Feb. 4, 1785, and Jan. 23, 1860, as to fisheries, and those of 1869 for the regulation of the Upper Thames. Certain of the bye-laws of Feb. 5, 1872, are amended by bye-laws of March 15, 1875; July 11, 1877; and March 18, 1880.

(42) As to the annulling of certain of these bye-laws and that of Nov. 20, 1873, see tit. COLLISION, p. 300, note 475.

(43) The Conservancy Bye-laws of Nov. 28, 1874, and of May 17, 1879, relate only to tolls and ferries above Teddington Lock.

(44) By various bye-laws the portion of the river from Cricklade to the City Stone, near Staines, is called the "Upper River" or "Upper View." See L. R. Index to London Gazette, anno 1885, p. 1700.

222. For provisions for making a dock and works at Dagenham in Essex, with powers to the company to make bye-laws, and as to powers of dock masters, see the Thames Deep Water Docks Act, 1881 (c. 142, L.).

223. As to the upper navigation and the transfer to the conservators of the works and powers of the upper navigation commissioners, see the Thames Act, 1866 (c. 89).

224. For provisions for the navigation of the Thames and regulating the pleasure traffic therein above Teddington Lock, the making of bye-laws, &c., see the Thames Preservation Act, 1885 (c. 76).

225. As to offences in the Thames or on board vessels in the Thames and docks thereof, see 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, ss. 26—37.

226. For provisions as to the navigation of the Thames by rafts or floats of timber, and of what dimensions, see the Thames Conservancy Bye-laws, allowed by Order in Council of February 5, 1872, No. 13.

227. As to the powers and duties of harbour master in the Thames, see tit. COLLISION, p. 305.

227*a*. As to the conservancy bye-laws connected with collision, and the cases decided thereon, Ibid. pp. 300—308.

228. For provisions exempting from the operation of this act (transferring the powers of the Admiralty over harbours and navigation to the Board of Trade) sect. 3 of the Thames Act, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 147, L., empowering the Admiralty to appoint two conservators, see the Harbours Transfer Act, 1862 (c. 69), s. 10.

228*a*. Held, that a dumb barge is not a "vessel" within the meaning of ss. 100 and 101 of the London and St. Katharine Docks Act, 1864 (c. clxxviii), notwithstanding the definition of the word "vessel" in the interpretation clause (s. 3) of the Harbours, Docks and Piers Clauses Act, 1847, incorporated in the former act, and consequently that the owner was not liable to a penalty for allowing her to remain in the docks regulated by the former act without any person on board. Hedges v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co., 16 Q. B. D. 597.

4. The Mersey Docks and Harbour Board.

1. Generally.*

229. The principal acts now in force relating to the Mersey are—The Birkenhead Docks Act, 1855 (c. 171, L.); the Mersey Docks and Harbour Act, 1857 (c. 162, L.) (consolidating the Liverpool and Birkenhead Docks in one estate, and incorporating the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board); The Mersey Docks and Harbour (Works) Act, 1858 (c. 90, L.); the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.); the Mersey Docks (Money) Act, 1859 (c. 20, L.); the Mersey Docks (Ferry Accommodation) Act, 1860 (c. 150, L.); the Mersey Docks (Corporation Purchase) Act, 1861 (c. 188, L.); the Mersey Docks Act, 1864 (c. 213, L.); the Mersey Docks (Various Powers) Act, 1867 (c. 200, L.); the Mersey Docks Act, 1874 (c. 30, L.); the 37 & 38 Vict. c. 52, for preventing collisions in and near the

* (45) The acts relating to the Mersey prior to 1857 are repealed by the Mersey Docks Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.), excepting sects. 31 to 39, and 56 and 57 of the Birkenhead Docks Act, 1855 (c. 171, L.).

(46) This Act of 1858 also repeals part of sects. 22 and 57, and the whole of sects. 6, 14, and 15 of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Act, 1857 (c. 162, L.).

(47) The Act of 1861 repeals sects. 38 and 39 of the Act of 1858 (c. 92, L.).

(49) The Act of 1881 amends sects. 21 and 22 of the Act of 1857 (c. 162, L.), and sects. 3, 21, 140, 247, and 254 of the Act of 1858 (c. 92, L.), and repeals sub-sects. 1 and 2 of sect. 21 and sects. 27 and 28, 150 to 158, and part of sect. 163 of the Act of 1858 (c. 92, L.).

(50) The Mersey Docks and Harbour Board consists of twenty-eight members, of whom twenty-four are elected by parties paying rates and dues on vessels and goods, one by the Mersey Conservancy Commissioners, one by the First Lord of the Admiralty, one by the President of the Board of Trade, and one by the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. See Return of Harbour Authorities, ordered by House of Commons to be printed, August 17, 1883, Sess. Paper, No. 313, p. 198.

(51) As to the anchorage dues, dues on ships, rates of dock warehouses and transit sheds, gridiron rates, miscellaneous rates, charges at the foreign animals' wharves and slaughter-houses, regulations and rates for the use of cranes and masting sheers for the Port of Liverpool, including Birkenhead, Ibid. pp. 191—274.

230. For powers as to the making of bye-laws, see the Act of 1858 (c. 92, L.), ss. 221—229; the Act of 1860 (c. 150, L.), s. 12; and the Act of 1861 (c. 188, L.), s. 37.

231. Penalty not exceeding £10 against any person assaulting, resisting, or impeding any dock officer in the execution of his duty, disobeying his lawful orders, or using offensive language or inciting others to do so. See the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.), s. 97.

232. Penalty £100 against any person opening or attempting to open or shut any dock gate, sluice or clow without the harbour, dock or pier master's consent; and of £20 for opening any swing-bridge. Ibid. s. 51.

233. For rates and regulations in connexion with the high level coal trade at the Bramley Moor and Wellington Docks, and rates for the shipment of coal at the High Level Railway, Liverpool, see rates and regulations thereon of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board of November, 1884.

234. For rules as to the weighing materials department and the duties of the superintendent and staff, Ibid. April 6, 1881.

235. For rules and charges as to the stages, wharves, and landing places at which foreign animals may be landed, see Bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board thereon of August, 1885.

236. For provisions for the working of appropriated berths, see Bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, sanctioned by the Board of Trade, Aug. 25, 1880.

237. For provisions for the working of the Wallasey landing-stage, see Regulations of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board of June 6 and July 4, 1878.

238. For provisions as to Birkenhead Dock Railways, see Bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, sanctioned by the Board of Trade for seven years, December, 1885.

239. For provisions for the regulation and good government of master porters, with a schedule of their charges, Ibid. February, 1884.

240. For provisions for the regulation and government of the docks, basins, quays and other property of the board, Ibid. January, 1882.

241. For regulations and rates for the use of cranes, masting, sheers, and hoists on the dock quays, Ibid. February, 1886.

242. For provisions in regard to riggers and their charges for assisting vessels, Ibid. Dec. 2, 1882.

243. For provisions enabling the Board to run dry any dock, or lower the water therein for repair or cleaning it, and remove any vessel therefrom after notice to the master, without responsibility for any damage thereby caused to any such vessel or cargo, and for the recovery of the expenses of such removal, see the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L. & P.), s. 56.

244. For provisions as to fires and lights, and smoking and combustible matters, and penalties for breach, Ibid. ss. 208—214; and Bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, approved by the Board of Trade, Dec. 3, 1878, and Feb. 6, 1883; and Resolution of the Board of April 29, 1881.

244a. For provisions exempting from the operation of this act (transferring the powers of the Admiralty over harbours and navigation to the Board of Trade) the act of 5 & 6 Vict. (c. 110, L.), for better preserving the navigation of the Mersey, see the Harbours Transfer Act, 1862 (c. 69), s. 10.

2. Loading, Discharging, and Warehousing.

245. For provisions as to the loading and discharge of cargoes in the Mersey Docks, and the employment of master stevedores, master surveyors, and master pilots, see the Mersey Docks (Corporation Purchase) Act, 1861 (c. 188, L.), ss. 10—32.

245a. And as to transit, sheds, and warehouses, and the landing and warehousing of goods in the Mersey Docks, see the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.), ss. 65—192.

246. When any delay, which one of the harbour masters may consider unnecessary or inconvenient, takes place in loading or discharging any vessel the Board may employ persons to do so, or assist in doing so, and charge the owners with the expenses. Penalty against the master of any such vessel for not clearing deck of articles impeding the loading or discharging not exceeding £5. Ibid. s. 44.

247. For provisions as to quay rent of goods, or timber remaining on any quay or pier beyond the time therein mentioned, for penalty for the delay not exceeding £5 against the consignee, and for powers to the Board or their officers to warehouse and sell the goods and pay their rates and expenses out of the proceeds, see the Mersey Docks (Corporation Purchase) Act, 1861 (c. 188, L.), ss. 27—29, 32, 35.

3. Rates and Dues.

248. For provisions as to dock, harbour, wharf, and tonnage rates, and town dues, and the vessels liable thereto, in the Mersey, see the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.), ss. 230—274, and Return of Harbour Authorities, ordered by House of Commons to be printed, August 17, 1883, Sess. Paper, 313, pp. 199—274.

249. As to rates and differential rates, see the Mersey Docks (Various Powers) Act, 1867 (c. 206, L.), ss. 10—12, and Return of Harbour Authorities, Ibid.

250. As to rates generally, the scale of rates to be taken, and the powers to the Board to alter them, see the Mersey Docks Act, 1874 (c. 30, L.), ss. 3—12.

251. And as to powers of the Board to make agreements with owners of vessels trading and cargoes carried coastwise to or from the port of Liverpool, as to the town dues on such cargoes, Ibid. s. 12.

4. Graving Docks.

252. For provisions as to the Mersey graving docks and their rates, see the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.), ss. 275—280, and the Mersey Docks Act, 1864 (c. 213, L.), s. 6, and Return of Harbour Authorities, 1883, Sess. Paper, 313, p. 230.

253. For provisions as to graving docks, see Bye-laws thereon of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, approved by the Board of Trade, June 14, 1880.

5. Liverpool Landing Stages.

254. For regulations as to the Liverpool landing stages, see Bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board thereon, approved by the Board of Trade, July 29, 1876.

255. For further regulations of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board in pursuance of the bye-laws for regulating the use of the landing stages, see Resolutions of the Board of 28th October, 1884, and 19th February, 1885.

6. Ballast, Rubbish, &c.

256. For provisions against ballast or rubbish being thrown into the river or any dock, or laid near the margin of any dock, and penalties for breach, see the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.), ss. 85, 86, 87, 101, 102.

257. As to the rates and regulations for the shipment of coal and salt and discharge of ballast at Birkenhead, see Rules of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board of 17th January, 1884, and Return of Harbour Authorities, 1883, Sess. Paper, 313, p. 272.

258. As to the duties of the keepers and assistant keepers of the coal tips, ballast, weighing machines, &c. at Birkenhead, Ibid. February 10, 1881.

7. False Reports of Draught of Water.

259. Penalty on master for giving to dock officers false report as to draught of water, not exceeding £100. See Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L. & P.), s. 62.

8. Timber.

260. For provisions as to timber, and as to the discharge and removal thereof, Ibid. ss. 201—207, and the Act of 1861 (c. 188, L.), s. 23.

261. For provisions with regard to the discharge of timber in the docks appropriated for that purpose, and penalties for breach, see Bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board of April 27, 1866, Nos. 85 to 98.

9. Boats and Small Craft.

262. For provisions for the general government of owners and boatmen of boats and small craft, not being steam ferryboats plying for hire within the port, see Bye-laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, approved by the Board of Trade, July 11, 1878, and Resolutions of the Mersey Board of June 6, 1878.

10. Collision.

263. As to provisions relating to collision in the Mersey, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. I. p. 295.

11. Dangerous Goods.

See tit. OWNERS, Pt. V. c. 4, p. 1329.

12. Pilots and Pilotage.

See tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. p. 1178; and tit. PILOTS, p. 1429.

13. Penalties and their Recovery.

264. When the importer or consignee of any goods, or the master of any vessel or other person is compelled under this act to pay any penalty or damages by reason of the act or default of the servant or of the owner of any goods, every person so in default shall be liable to pay such importer or other person the amount and the costs paid by him, and the amount may be recovered by distress of the goods of the person in default. See the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L. & P.), s. 325.

See also tit. COLLISION, Pt. II. c. 9, p. 199.

5. The Humber.

1. *Generally.

265. For provisions as to lights and steps to be taken to avoid collision in the Humber, see tit. COLLISION, Pt. IX. p. 295.

266. For provisions requiring Humber pilots in charge of any vessel lying in, or navigating any of the basins or docks, or the old haven or harbour of the port of Kingston-upon-Hull, or the entrances, or roadsteads near to such entrances, to obey the orders of the dock and haven master, or his assistants, relating to the mooring, or navigating of any such vessels (penalty for breach, £5), see 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 105, s. 50.

267. For similar provisions requiring persons holding pilotage certificates from the Trinity House, Hull, similarly to conform themselves to all such directions, see Bye-laws of Trinity House, Hull, No. 13; confirmed by Order in Council of July 31, 1858.

268. For further provisions as to pilots in the Humber, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. VII. p. 1372; and tit. PILOTS, p. 1439.

For the convention of August, 1839, between Great Britain and France as to the fisheries in the seas between those kingdoms, the act of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, for giving effect thereto, amended by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 101, the further convention of November 11, 1867, and the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868 (c. 45), giving effect thereto, and the North Sea Convention of 1882, and the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22), giving effect thereto, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1238.*

10. Lighthouses.

1. General Lighthouse Authorities.†

317. Subject to existing rights of local authorities and others the superintendence and management of all lighthouses, buoys and beacons is vested, in England, Wales, the Islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Sark and Alderney, the adjacent seas and islands, and in Heligoland and Gibraltar, in the Trinity House. In Scotland, and the adjacent seas and islands, and in the Isle of Man, in the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses. In Ireland, and the adjacent seas and islands, in the Port of Dublin Corporation. The Trinity House, these commissioners, and this corporation are termed "general lighthouse authorities." See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 389.

318. The Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses are defined and made a corporate body, with power to elect certain new members. Ibid. ss. 390 and 391.

319. Each of the general lighthouse authorities, after notice, shall have power, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, to compel any local authority over lighthouses, buoys or beacons within the jurisdiction of such general lighthouse authority, to lay down buoys, or to remove or discontinue or alter any existing lighthouse or beacon; and no such local authority shall erect any new lighthouse, or remove, discontinue, or vary the character of any lighthouse or the mode of exhibiting lights therein, without the sanction of the general lighthouse authority. Ibid. s. 394.

320. The powers of the above s. 394, extend to local buoys and beacons other than those erected for temporary purposes, as well as to local lighthouses. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 43, sub-s. 5.

321. If any such local authority fails to obey any direction given by such general lighthouse authority, her Majesty may, by Order in Council, direct such power to be transferred to such general lighthouse authority. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 395.

322. Every local authority holding any lighthouse, buoy or beacon within the jurisdiction of any of the general lighthouse authorities may surrender the same to such general lighthouse authority, with the consent of the Board of Trade. Ibid. s. 413.

323. Her Majesty in Council may fix the establishments to be maintained by each of the general lighthouse authorities for lighthouses, buoys and beacons, and by the Trinity House for lastage and ballastage in the Thames. No increase of any establishment so fixed shall be made without the consent of the Board of Trade. Ibid. s. 420.

* The provisions of this last convention and act have, however, practically superseded the previous conventions and acts.

† (57) Besides these three public bodies there are numerous local authorities who deal with local lights. See, as to same, a description and list of Lighthouses of the World, 1884-5, 24th ed., by Alexander George Findlay, London, published by Laurie, p. 30.

324. The general lighthouse authorities may, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, grant to persons who are discharged or retire, superannuations or compensations not exceeding the proportion of salary, under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24, or under any other act for regulating the same. Ibid. s. 421.

325. Each of the general lighthouse authorities is to submit to the Board of Trade estimates of all expenses to be incurred by them, other than those allowed by Order in Council, and the Board of Trade may approve such estimates and accounts, with or without modification. Ibid. s. 422.

326. No other expenses than those so allowed of the general lighthouse authorities shall be paid out of the mercantile marine fund. Ibid. s. 423.

327. The ships and boats of any of the general lighthouse authorities, or the Board of Trade, are privileged to enter, and use any harbours, ports, docks or piers in the United Kingdom, without payment of any tolls, dues or rates of any kind. Ibid. s. 431, as amended by M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 48.

328. Property belonging to any of the general lighthouse authorities or the Board of Trade, is exempt from all rates and taxes. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 430.

329. "Lighthouses" in this act, in addition to the ordinary meaning of the word, includes floating and other lights exhibited for the guidance of ships, and "buoys and beacons" include all other marks and signs of the sea. Ibid. s. 2.

2. Erection, Continuation or Alteration.

(a) Generally.

330. Each of the general lighthouse authorities has power within its jurisdiction: (1) To erect new lighthouses, or alter or remove existing lighthouses. (2) To erect new, or alter or remove existing buoys or beacons. (3) To purchase land necessary for the above purposes, or for maintenance of the works, or residence of the light-keepers. (4) To vary the character of any lighthouse, or the mode of exhibiting lights therein. (5) To sell any land belonging to it. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 404.

331. This power in the case of the commissioners or corporation is subject to the approval of the Trinity House, and the sanction of the Board of Trade. Ibid. s. 405.

332. As to the mode of obtaining the sanction of the Board of Trade, Ibid. s. 406.

333. As to the communication by the Trinity House of the directions of the Board of Trade thereon to the commissioners or corporation, and their being bound to act in conformity therewith, Ibid. s. 407.

334. As to the power of the Trinity House to direct the commissioners or corporation: (1) To continue any existing lighthouses, buoys or beacons. (2) To erect new lighthouses, buoys or beacons, or alter or remove those already existing. (3) To vary the character of any lighthouse, or the mode of exhibiting lights therein, subject to the sanction of the Board of Trade, Ibid. s. 408.

335. As to the mode of obtaining such sanction of the Board of Trade, Ibid. s. 409.

336. The Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and The Lands Clauses Consolidation Act (Scotland), 1845, are incorporated in this act and apply to all lighthouses to be constructed, and land purchased under the powers thereof. Ibid. s. 412.

(b) In the Channel Islands.

337. No powers given to the Trinity House in respect of any lighthouse, buoy or beacon to the islands of Guernsey or Jersey are to be exercised without the consent of her Majesty in Council. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 411.

(c) Inspection.

338. The Board of Trade may, upon complaint, authorize persons to inspect any lighthouse, buoy or beacon under the management of the general lighthouse authorities; and all officers and others having the care, or concerned in the management thereof, shall furnish all such information and explanations required in relation thereto; and the general lighthouse authorities and their officers shall at all times give to the Board of Trade all such returns, or information in relation to the lighthouses, buoys or beacons within their jurisdiction, as the Board may require. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 393.

339. The Trinity House and their servants may at all times inspect any lighthouses within the jurisdiction of the commissioners or corporation. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 392.

340. Each of the general lighthouse authorities, or such persons as may be authorized by them, are to inspect all lights, buoys and beacons within their jurisdiction, but under any local authorities, and make such inquiries in respect thereof as they think fit; and all officers and others having the care thereof, or concerned therein, are to furnish all such information and explanations, and give all such returns, explanations, or information as may be required of them, and the results of such inspection shall be communicated to the local authority and to the Board of Trade; and such reports shall be laid before parliament. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 43.

3. Damage to Lights, Buoys or Beacons.

341. Any person who injures any lighthouse or the lights exhibited therein, or any buoy or beacon; or removes, alters or destroys any light ship, buoy or beacon; or rides by, makes fast to, or runs foul of any light ship or buoy; penalty, in addition to the expenses of making good any damage so occasioned, not exceeding £50. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 414.

4. False Lights.

342. General lighthouse authorities may prohibit false lights, and if not obeyed may extinguish such lights. Ibid. ss. 415, 416.

5. Forms and Instruments exempted from Duty.

343. All instruments by the sixth part of this act (i.e. as to lighthouses) required to be in forms sanctioned by the Board of Trade, if made in such form and used by or under the direction of that Board, or by the general lighthouse authorities, in carrying that part of this act into effect are exempt from stamp duty. Ibid. ss. 9, 430.

11. Light Dues.

1. Generally.

344. The light dues in force when this act came into operation are to be continued until altered. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 396.

345. Light dues are payable by all ships except Queen's ships, and ships specially exempted from payment. Ibid.

346. They are made subject to revision by her Majesty in Council. Ibid. s. 397.

347. Each of the general lighthouse authorities has power, with the consent of her Majesty in Council: to exempt any ship or classes of ships from payment of light dues receivable by them, and annex any conditions thereto; to alter the times and modes of payment of light dues receivable by such authority, and to substitute other dues or classes of dues. Ibid. s. 398.

348. Tables of all light dues, and a copy of the regulations in force in respect thereof, shall be posted up at all custom houses in the United Kingdom; and each general lighthouse authority shall furnish copies thereof to the Commissioners of Customs in London, and to the principal officers of customs at all places where light dues are collected on account of such authority; and such copies shall be posted up by the commissioners at the Custom House in London, and by such officers at the custom houses where they reside. Ibid. s. 399.

349. A receipt for light dues shall be given by the person appointed to collect them, and no officer of customs at any port where light dues are payable shall grant a clearance or transire for any ship unless this receipt is produced to him. Ibid. s. 400.

350. If the owner or master of any ship fails on demand of the authorized collector to pay the light dues in respect thereof, the collector, in addition to any other remedy which he or the authority is entitled to, may enter such ship and distrain the goods, tackle or other things on board, and detain them until the light dues are paid; if payment is not made within three days next ensuing, he may cause them to be appraised and sold, and apply the proceeds in payment of the light dues and expenses, paying the surplus (if any) on demand to the owner or master. Ibid. s. 401.

351. Every person appointed to collect light dues by any general lighthouse authority shall collect all light dues payable at that port, and pay over to the general lighthouse authority by whom he was appointed, or as it directs, the whole light dues received by him; and the authority receiving them shall keep accounts thereof, and cause them to be remitted to her Majesty's paymaster-general in such manner as the Board of Trade directs. Ibid. s. 402.

352. All light dues coming to the hands of any of the general lighthouse authorities under this act, shall be carried to the account of the mercantile marine fund. Ibid. s. 403.

353. Upon the completion of any new lighthouse, buoy or beacon, her Majesty may, by Order in Council, fix dues in respect thereof to be paid by the master or owner of every ship which passes the same or derives benefit therefrom, and from time to time alter them; and they shall be paid and collected like light dues authorized by this act. Ibid. s. 410.

354. All light dues and other sums received by the Trinity House, the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses, and the Port of Dublin Corporation under the sixth part of this act (lighthouses), are to be carried to the mercantile marine fund. Ibid. s. 417.

355. Light dues are exempted from all rates and taxes. Ibid. s. 430.

2. By Local Authorities.

356. If any lighthouse, buoy, or beacon is erected, reconstructed or repaired by any local authority having such jurisdiction, her Majesty may, on the application of that authority, by Order in Council, fix dues to be paid to it by every ship which enters the port, harbour or estuary, and passes the lighthouse, buoy or beacon, and derives benefit therefrom. The dues so fixed shall be paid by the master or other person by whom light dues, if levied by one of the general lighthouse authorities, would be payable, and be recoverable in the same manner. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 46.

357. All light dues leviable by any local authority under this act are to be applied solely for the construction, maintenance, construction or improvement of the lighthouses, buoys and beacons in respect of which they are levied, and the local authority is to keep an account of the receipt and expenditure of such dues, and furnish yearly to the Board of Trade a copy thereof in such form and with such particulars as that Board may require. Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, alter all such dues, so that they may be sufficient and only sufficient for payment of the expenses for which they are levied. Ibid. s. 47.

358. Any local authority not otherwise empowered is authorized, with the consent of her Majesty in Council, to reduce all or any dues receivable by such authority in respect of lighthouses, buoys or beacons, and the term "local authority" is defined. See the Local Light Dues Reduction Act, 1876 (c. 27), s. 2.

3. In the Channel Islands.

359. No dues for any lighthouse, buoy or beacon to be erected in or near the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Sark or Alderney shall be taken without the consent of the states of the islands. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 411.

4. In the Colonies.

360. As to any lighthouse, buoy, or beacon erected on or near the coasts of any British possession, with the consent of the legislative authority thereof, her Majesty may, by Order in Council, fix and alter dues in respect thereof, to be paid by the owner or master of every ship which passes the same or derives benefit therefrom, and the same shall be leviable throughout her Majesty's dominions.* See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 2.

361. No such dues are to be levied in any colony without the consent of the colonial legislature. Ibid. s. 3.

362. The dues in respect of colonial lighthouses, buoys, and beacons shall in the United Kingdom be collected like light dues leviable under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and abroad shall be collected by such persons as the governor of such possession may appoint, and, so far as circumstances permit, like light dues leviable under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), or as the legislative authority in such possession may direct. Ibid. s. 4.

363. All dues levied under this act shall be paid over to her Majesty's paymaster-general as the Board of Trade may direct, and be applied by him as such Board may direct. Ibid. s. 5.

364. Such dues shall, after deducting expenses of collection, be applied in paying the expenses incurred in erecting and maintaining such lighthouse, buoy, or beacon. Ibid. s. 6.

365. For the purpose of constructing or repairing any such lighthouse, buoy, or beacon, the Board of Trade may raise money upon the security of the dues; and the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treassury, out of moneys provided by Parliament, the Public Works Loan Commissioners, or other persons, may advance the same accordingly, such advances to be made, so far as circumstances permit, like advances under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), upon the security of the mercantile marine fund. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1855 (c. 91), s. 7.

366. Accounts are to be kept of all sums expended in the construction, repair, or maintenance of every lighthouse, buoy, or beacon in the British possessions abroad for which dues are levied under this act, and of the dues received, as the Board of Trade may direct, and are to be laid before parliament annually, and audited as her Majesty may, by Order in Council, direct. Ibid. s. 8.

5. Payment by Consignees or Agents.

367. The owner or master, or such consignees or agents thereof as have paid or made themselves liable to pay any other charge on account of the ship in the port of her arrival or discharge, are liable for light dues. Ibid. 1862 (c. 63), s. 44.

368. In default of payment, light dues may be recovered like penalties under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). Ibid. See as to penalties, tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1254.

368a. Every such consignee and agent (not being the owner or master) liable for light dues may, out of any moneys received by him on account of such ship, or belonging to the owner, retain the amount of dues so paid by him, and any reasonable expenses he may have incurred by reason of such payment or liability. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 45.

12. Pilotage.

13. Quarantine.

See tit. OWNERS, Pt. IV. p. 1306.

14. Salvage of Life and Property.

See tit. SALVAGE, p. 1778.

15. Wreck.

See tit. WRECK, p. 2315.

16. Foreshores.

369. For the powers of the Board of Trade in reference to the foreshores of the United Kingdom, see 10 Geo. 4, c. 50; 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 69; and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 62. For the transfer of the Crown's rights and interests therein to the Board of Trade, see the Crown Lands Act, 1866 (c. 62).

Part IV. FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

1. Generally.

370. The financial department embraces the following subjects:—Estimates and accounts of all the other departments of the Board of Trade, accounts of lighthouse boards, accounts of mercantile marine officers, accounts of consuls and colonial shipping masters (including accounts of relief of distressed seamen), wages and effects of deceased seamen, money orders, seamen's savings banks, seamen's temporary deposit bank (Liverpool), pensions, merchant seamen's fund. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Wreck, Casualties, and Salvage, 1872, p. 35.

371. Provision is made respecting the superannuation allowances of officers whose salaries were formerly paid out of the mercantile marine fund, and as to grants of pensions to existing officers, by the Superannuation (Mercantile Marine Fund Officers) Act, 1877 (c. 44).

2. Mercantile Marine Fund.

1. Generally.*

372. There is carried to a common fund, entitled the "Mercantile Marine

(62) Sect. 3, part of sect. 4, all sect. 15, part of sect. 20, all sects. 23, 39, and 40, and parts of sects. 45, 50, and 59, are repealed by Statute Law Rev. Act, 1875 (c. 66). Sects. 27, 28, 36, 51, and 55 are repealed by 16 &

17 Vict. c. 131, s. 25. And sects. 29 to 38 and sect. 61 are repealed by the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120). See the parts unrepealed in 2 Pollock & Bruce, p. 17.

(63) For provisions enabling the Board of Trade to remit a forfeiture under sect. 43 of the Seamen's Fund Winding-up Act, 1851 (c. 102), under the circumstances therein mentioned, and applying such amendment to Fund"—(1) all fees and other sums (other than fines and forfeitures) received by the Board of Trade under the provisions of the third and fourth parts of this act (i. e., masters and seamen, and safety and prevention of accidents); (2) all light dues or other sums received by the Trinity House, the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses, and the Port of Dublin Corporation, under the sixth part of this act (i. e., as to lighthouses); (3) all rates and moneys received by the Trinity House under the local act, 7 Vict. c. 57, for the regulation of lastage and ballastage in the river Thames; (4) all fees and other sums mentioned in the table V. in the schedule, and received by receivers under the eighth part of this act (i. e., wrecks and casualties). An account of this fund, intitled "The Mercantile Marine Fund Account," is kept with her Majesty's paymaster-general. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 417.

373. Subject to other provisions, all fees and payments to the Board of Trade under the third and fourth parts of this act (i. e., as to masters and seamen, and as to safety and prevention of accidents), are to be carried to the mercantile marine fund; and all fines to the Board of Trade under this act are to be paid into the Exchequer, and carried to the consolidated fund. Ibid. s. 11.

374. Subject to any prior charges subsisting thereon, this fund is chargeable with the following expenses—(1) the salaries and other expenses connected with the local marine boards, the examinations, and the shipping offices, provided for by the third part of this act; (2) expenses of the general lighthouse authorities in the works and services of lighthouses, buoys and beacons under the sixth part of this act, or in the execution of works for permanently reducing the expense thereof; (3) all expenses of the Trinity House in respect of lastage and ballastage in the Thames; (4) such expenses for establishing and maintaining on the coasts of the United Kingdom proper life-boats, with the necessary crews and equipments, and for affording assistance towards the preservation of life and property in cases of shipwreck and distress at sea, and for rewarding the preservation of life in such cases, as the Board of Trade directs; (5) expenses of provisions as to receivers and the performance of their duties contained in the eighth part of this act; (6) expenses specially charged thereon by act of parliament. Ibid. s. 418.

375. As to certain expenses connected with lighthouses, wreck being paid out of the mercantile marine fund, see M. S. (Fees and Expenses) Act, 1880 (c. 22), ss. 2, 5, 6.

376. As to the charges on and payments to the mercantile marine fund, the audit of accounts thereof, the grant thereof of pensions and costs of prosecutions for offences at sea, see the M. S. (Expenses) Act, 1882 (c. 55).

377. The Treasury may, on the application of the Board of Trade, advance out of the consolidated fund such sums, upon such terms as they think fit, to the mercantile marine fund account, not exceeding £200,000; and the Board of Trade shall make such provision for the repayment thereof out of the fund as the Treasury may require. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 424.

378. The Board of Trade may raise money by mortgaging the mercantile marine fund in such form as the President of the Board may direct. Ibid. s. 425.

379. The Public Works Loan Commissioners may advance money upon mortgage of the mercantile marine fund, but every such mortgage shall be made according to the acts of parliament regulating the proceedings of those commissioners. Ibid. s. 426.

380. All expenses incurred by the Commissioners of Customs in the conduct of suits or prosecutions, or in otherwise carrying into effect the provisions of this act, are to be considered as expenses having reference to the revenue of customs, and paid out of the consolidated customs; but the Board of Trade may, with the consent of the Treasury, repay out of the mercantile marine fund any masters, see the M. S. (Fees and Expenses) Act (c. 22), s. 3.

(64) Further information in reference to the control and management of the mercantile marine fund will be found in the forthcoming Second Report and Evidence of the Royal Commission on Saving Life at Sea.

(65) See also as to the contributions to be paid to the merchant seamen fund (semble, mercantile marine fund), and the provisions granted thereon, Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents, of August, 1879, pp. 77—86.

such expenses as are by this act chargeable on that fund. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 548.

381. The Board of Trade is to render to the commissioners for auditing the public accounts periodical accounts of the receipts and expenditure of the mercantile marine fund, and to lay them before parliament every year. Ibid. ss. 428 and 429.

382. For provisions that all fees received under the Chain Cables and Anchors Acts, 1864 to 1874, are to be carried to the mercantile marine fund, and all expenses under these acts to be paid out of that fund, see the Chain Cables and Anchors Act, 1874 (c. 51), s. 2.

383. For further provisions in reference to this fund, see the Merchant Shipping (Fees and Expenses) Act, 1880 (c. 22), s. 6.

2. Light Dues.

384. All light dues coming to the hands of any of the general lighthouse authorities under this act shall be carried to the account of the mercantile marine fund. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 403.

385. Each of the general lighthouse authorities is to account to the Board of Trade for their receipts from the light dues and ballastage rates, and for their expenditure out of the fund, in such form as the Board of Trade requires, and permit all books of accounts to be examined by the appointees of the Board. Ibid. s. 427.

386. All lighthouses, buoys, beacons and light dues, and other rates, forming part of the fund, and all property belonging to any of the general lighthouse authorities or the Board of Trade, used for any of the services for which such dues and rates are received, are exempt from all taxes and rates. Ibid. s. 430.

3. Trinity House Ballastage Rates in the Thames.

387. The rates and moneys received by the Trinity House under the local act of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 57, subject to the payment of prior charges on the mercantile marine fund in the discretion of the Board of Trade, and to the powers of raising money upon the credit of the fund, are applicable only to services for supplying ballast to or providing for the safety or convenience of ships navigating the Thames, and the seas and channels leading thereto between Orfordness and Dungeness: but if, in addition to these duties, the Trinity House, with the consent of the owners, masters or agents, load or unload ballast, they are entitled to such additional duties for such ballast as her Majesty in Council approves. Ibid. s. 419.

4. Life Boats and Equipments, and Rewards for saving Life.

388. For provisions enabling the Board of Trade to direct payment out of the mercantile marine fund of expenses of establishing and maintaining on the British coasts lifeboats, with their crews and equipments, and for affording assistance for the preservation of life and property in case of shipwreck or distress at sea, and for granting rewards for the preservation of life in such cases, see tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. p. 1847.

5. Exemption of Documents from Duty.

389. All instruments which by the seventh part of this act (i. e. the mercantile marine fund) are required to be made in forms sanctioned by the Board of Trade, if made in such form, and all instruments used by or under the direction of the Board of Trade in carrying such part of this act into effect, are exempt from stamp duty. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 9.

390. All instruments of any of the general lighthouse authorities or the Board of Trade in carrying on any of the services for which dues or rates forming part of the mercantile marine fund are received, are exempted from all duties. Ibid. s. 430.

1. Generally.*

1. Mariners are the favourites of the law, and placed particularly under its protection. The court is anxious to protect them against circumvention, and even misapprehension and error. The Hoghton, 3 Hagg. 112; The Minerva, 1 Hagg. 358; The Elizabeth, 2 Dodson, 407; The Jupiter, 2 Hagg. 221; The Madonna D'Idra, 1 Dodson, 39; The Juliana, ibid. 463. See also tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. p. 2137.

2. Officers are justly the objects of equal attention from the court with common mariners. An injury done to their character is of wider extent, and is attended with consequences of a more serious nature. The Robinett v. The Exeter, 2 C. Rob. 261.

3. In suits for wages the court is anxious that seamen should not be harassed with litigation. It is desirable that questions of wages should be speedily settled. The Prince George, 3 Hagg. 377.

4. In a suit for wages, service and good conduct are to be presumed unless disproved. The Malta, 2 ibid. 166.

5. A ship's carpenter, performing certain services on land, with the permission of the master, and for which he received remuneration, held, entitled to his wages also during such time, though not employed in the service of the ship. The Bulmer, 1 Hagg. 167.

6. Negotiations with seamen, even before action brought, are conducted more to the satisfaction of the court when entrusted to their proctors. The Frederick, 1 Hagg. 220.

7. For the construction of the following terms—her Majesty's dominions, the United Kingdom, British possessions, master, seaman, ship, foreign-going ship, home-trade ship, home-trade passenger ship, see the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 2.

8. The officer heretofore denominated the Registrar General of Seamen is now the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen, see the M. S. Act, 1872 (c. 73), s. 4.†

9. So much of the third part of this act as relates to rights to wages and remedies for their recovery, applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad when they are out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

2. Jurisdiction.

1. Superior Courts.

(a) Generally.‡

10. No proceeding for wages under £50 shall be instituted by or on behalf of any seaman or apprentice in any Court of Admiralty or Vice-admiralty, or in the Court of Session in Scotland, or in any superior court of record in her Majesty's

* (1) The acts relating to merchant seamen are—2 Geo. 3, c. 13; 31 Geo. 3, c. 39; 2 Geo. 4, c. 36; 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 19; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 116; and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 131. They are all repealed, except ss. 12—14, 24, 28 and 29 of the last-named act, by the M. S. Acts, 1854 (cc. 104 and 120). The acts now in force, except as above, are—The M. S. Acts, 1854—1883, and Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10).

(2) Application for an attachment for a contempt against a magistrate first seized of a seaman's suit, for having issued a warrant and arrested a seaman whilst attending his proctor for the purpose of bringing a suit, rejected. The Isabella, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 134. [LOWER CANADA.]

(3) See also The Jane, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 258 [LOWER CANADA]; Harden v. Gordon, 2 Mason, 561; The David Pratt, 2 Ware, 495. [AMERICAN.]

† (4) A seaman is bound to work on Sunday. Ularly v. The Washington, Crabbe, 204. [AMERICAN.]

(5) To a suit by a seaman for the balance of his wages, it is a good answer that he could neither steer, furl, nor reef. The Venus, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 92. [LOWER CANADA.] See also Batten v. Butler, 4 East, 479.

‡ (6) The words in the repealed act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 16, were "unless the owner shall be bankrupt or insolvent," and the amount in dispute to which the justices' jurisdiction was limited was £20. As to the meaning of the words "bankrupt or insolvent" in that act, see The Princess Royal, 2 W. Rob. 373; 9 Jur. 433; 4 Notes of Cases, 70; The Great Northern, 2 W. Rob. 509; 5 Notes of Cases, 71; 10 Jur. 104; The Repulse, 9 Jur. 739; 2 W. Rob. 399; 4 Notes of Cases, 165; The Simlah, 15 Jur. 865; The Tecumseh, 6 Notes of Cases, 533; 3 W. Rob. 109.

(7) Only in the Admiralty Division can that principle of the maritime law, which holds the ship in specie to be subject to the claim of wages earned in its service, be carried into effect. See Abbott on Shipping, 12th ed., p. 489.

dominions, unless the owner of the ship is adjudged bankrupt or declared insolvent, or unless the ship is under arrest, or is sold by the authority of any such court, or unless any justices acting under the authority of this act refer the case to be adjudged by such court, or unless neither the owner nor master is or resides within twenty miles of the place where the seamen or apprentice is discharged or put ashore. The M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 189. See also The Harriet, 5 L. T. N.S. 210; 1 Lushington, 285.

11. A place of occasional business is not a residence within the meaning of sect. 189. The Blakeney, Swabey, 428; 5 Jur. N.S. 418.

12. The owner's usual place of residence was Blakeney in Norfolk, but he regularly attended the corn-market in London, and on those occasions frequented a house of business in Mark Lane. It did not otherwise appear that he had a residence in London. The port of discharge was London. Held, that the owner did not reside within twenty miles of that port, so as to prevent the master from suing for his wages in the Court of Admiralty. Ibid.

13. The provisions in the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 19, s. 16, giving the summary proceeding for wages under £20 before justices, in all cases where the plaintiff might have had "as effectual a remedy," and giving the court power to certify to deprive the plaintiff of his costs, held, not to apply to a case where the construction of the articles as to the termination of the voyage was doubtful, and the justice had decided in favour of the mariners, but made no direction as to wages, and the master still withheld them, under the impression that he was legally justified. The King William, 2 W. Rob. 231.

14. Under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 16, held, that when the aggregate amount of the claims of a crew for wages exceeded £20, but the claim of each individual was less than £20, the action of the seamen would be dismissed. The Fairy Queen, 3 (IRISH) Jur. 283 (Adm.)

15. A suit by a mariner being entered at above £50, the Court of Admiralty cannot (on a question as to the admissibility of pleadings) enter into a preliminary investigation as to such amount, so as to bring it below £50, and oust the jurisdiction of the court. The Nymph, Swabey, 86.

16. The plaintiff having brought an action for wages as a seaman for an amount less than £50, together with a claim for damages for an assault, the court allowed the defendant (upon terms) to plead a plea founded upon sects. 188 and 189 of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104. Rossi v. Grant, 5 C. B. N.S. 699; 5 Jur. N.S. 895.

17. Quere, whether section 189 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), applies to a claim for wages earned on board an American ship. Burns v. Chapman, 5 C. B. N.S. 481.

18. Held, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 112, s. 16, that an action for wages by the master of a vessel against the owner, who had become a bankrupt, might be maintained, although the wages commenced to be earned before the commission of an act of bankruptcy. The Simon Glover, 3 (IRISH) Jur. 284 (Adm.).

19. Seamen may sue in the Admiralty Court for the wages of a coasting voyage, as for navigating a vessel from one port of England to another. Anon. (1678), 1 Vent. 343.

20. Or for wages earned in fitting out a ship for a voyage, though she do not actually proceed on the voyage. Wells v. Osmond (1703), 6 Mod. 238; 2 Ld. Raym. 1044; S. P. Mills and another v. Gregory, Sayer, 127. See also The City of London, 1 W. Rob. 88.

21. The jurisdiction conferred by this act on the High Court of Admiralty may be exercised either by proceedings in rem or by proceedings in personam. The Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 35.

22. (b) *Special Contracts.

24. The Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction in rem or in personam over any claim by a seaman of any ship for wages earned by him, whether under a special contract or otherwise, but if the plaintiff does not recover fifty pounds, he is not entitled to costs, unless the judge certifies that the cause was a fit one to be tried in that court. 5. Courts Abroad.

(a) Generally.

36. No seaman engaged for a voyage or engagement to terminate in the United Kingdom is entitled to sue in any court abroad for wages, unless discharged with such sanction as therein required, and with the written consent of the master, or proves such ill-usage on the part of the master, or by his authority, as to warrant reasonable apprehension of danger to his life if he remained on board. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 190.

(b) Naval Courts.

37. Every naval court may decide any question as to wages, fines, or forfeitures between the parties before it; all such orders are conclusive in any subsequent legal proceedings. Ibid. s. 263, sub-s. 4.

10. Foreign Seamen.

(a) Generally.*

52. The Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction in actions for wages by foreign seamen against foreign vessels, as questions of general maritime law. The exercise of such jurisdiction is, however, discretionary in the court, and to be permitted or withheld according to the circumstances of the case. The consent of the foreign minister or consul is not essential to found such jurisdiction. It is necessary, however, that notice of intended proceedings should be given in the first instance to the representative of the government to which the vessel proceeded against belongs. In an action for wages brought by foreign seamen, an appearance for the master, a foreigner, under protest to the jurisdiction of the court, overruled, but without costs, as being a case prima impressionis. The Golubchick, 1 W. Rob. 143, 148, 153, 154; The Mil- ford, Swabey, 362; 4 Jur. N.S. 418; 31 L. T. 42; The Vrow Mina, 1 Dodson, 234; The Alexandre, 5 (Irish) Jur. 379.

53. With regard to foreign seamen the court is in the habit of giving them the benefit of their own laws. The importation of foreign law is not, however, a matter of course. The court should not adopt it if the effect would be to work injustice on others. The proceeds of sale of a foreign ship being insufficient to pay the preferable claims, motion to bring in freight to answer master's wages refused. The Johannes Christoph, 2 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 100.

54. The Court of Admiralty will, without the consent of the representative of the nation to which the seamen belong, entertain an action for wages against a foreign ship belonging to an alien enemy, and coming to the ports of this country under a British licence. The Vrow Mina, 1 Dodson, 234. See also The Franz and Elise, 5 L. T. N.S. 290.

55. Quere, whether section 189 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), (which, under certain circumstances, excluded the jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty in wages suits under £50), applies to a claim for wages earned on board an American ship. Burns v. Chapman, 5 C. B. N.S. 481.

56. The crown, on being memorialized by certain Greek mariners of a foreign ship sold under the authority of the Court of Admiralty, directed the King's proctor to take proceedings to recover their wages. 1 Dodson, 37; and The Alexandre, 5 (Irish) Jur. 379.

57. A claim for wages at the instance of foreign mariners against a foreign ship pronounced for, with costs, on the ground that the vessel had become a British ship, having been assigned over by her foreign

* (26) The exercise of Admiralty jurisdiction in suits by foreign seamen for wages is matter of comity rather than of duty, and, generally speaking, is exercised only under such circumstances as might infer the presumption of a request from the foreign state, as, for example, where a voyage is ended or broken up and the seamen discharged, or where there is strong reason to believe that there would be a failure of remedy in case the mariners were compelled to await an opportunity of obtaining redress in their own courts. *Gonzales v. owners to British creditors, and that an agreement between the owners and the seamen not to bring any suit for wages was disclaimed by the assignment. The Wilhelm Frederick, 1 Hagg. 138.

58. In an action before the water baillie of Clyde against the master of an American ship, by American seamen, engaged in America for wages, and for damages on account of maltreatment on a voyage from America to Ireland, during which the vessel had been driven into a Scotch port and was arrested by the seamen, held, that the courts of this country had jurisdiction to do justice between the parties. Bernard v. Connar, June 11th, 1811; 16 F. C. 275; Ivory, 68. [SCOTCH.]

59. A Portuguese vessel was arrested, and a cause of wages was instituted by the mate, an English subject, who had signed an agreement to submit himself to the provisions of the Commercial Code of Portugal, which code requires that any dispute between the masters and seamen of a Portuguese ship shall be submitted to the arbitration of the Portuguese consul residing in the country where the vessel may chance to be. Notice of the suit was given to the Portuguese consul in London, who entered a protest against the proceedings. Held, by the Privy Council (affirming the decision of the Admiralty Court), that under the circumstances the suit ought not to be proceeded with. The Nina, L. R. 2 P. C. 38; L. R. 2 A. & E. 44; 37 L. J. Adm. 17; 3 Asp. 10, 47; 5 Moore, P. C. N.S. 51.

60. But condemnation of the plaintiff by the Admiralty Court in costs and damages, reversed. Ibid.

61. The 10th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, gives jurisdiction in the case of foreign ships as well as in the case of British ships, but does not alter the practice of giving notice to the consul of the country to which the foreign ship belongs. Ibid.

62. In a suit for wages by seamen (whether British subjects or otherwise) for service on board a foreign vessel, the Court of Admiralty will not exercise its jurisdiction without first giving notice to the consul of the nation to which the foreign vessel belongs, and if the foreign consul by protest objects to the prosecution of the suit, the court will, in its discretion, decide whether the suit shall proceed. Ibid.

63. In an action by seamen (English subjects domiciled in England) for wages and damages for wrongful dismissal, it appeared that the vessel was Spanish, and that the articles were signed in Spain. The articles did not contain any submission by the plaintiff to Spanish law. The Spanish consul having protested against jurisdiction on the ground that by Spanish law the matters in dispute should be submitted to Spanish tribunals or Spanish consuls; held, on application by the shipowners, that the action must be dismissed. The Leon XIII., 8 P. D. (C. A.) 121; 47 L. T. N.S. 659; 5 Asp. 73.

64. Under ordinary circumstances, if the consul of a foreign country objects to the continuance of a suit for wages by a seaman of the country which he represents, the court will dismiss the action; but in this respect there is a great distinction between proceedings against the ship and against the proceeds of a ship sold. The Octavie, 9 L. T. N.S. 695; B. & L. 315.

65. The 2 Geo. 2, c. 36,* held, to be confined to voyages on board British ships, and not to apply to the case of a British seaman acting on board a foreign ship in a foreign port. Dickman v. Benson, 3 Camp. 290; 1 Holt, 464.

(b) Notice to Consul.

66. In an action of wages the affidavit to lead the warrant of arrest shall state the national character of the vessel proceeded against; and if against a foreign vessel, that notice of the commencement of the action has been given to the consul of the state to which the vessel belongs, if there be one resident in London, and a copy of the notice shall be annexed to the affidavit. 2. Masters.

(a) Generally.†

79. Every master of a ship shall, as far as the case permits, have the same rights, liens, and remedies for the recovery of his wages as by this act or any law or custom any seaman has; and if in any proceeding in any Court of Admiralty or Vice-Admiralty touching the claim of a master to wages any right of set-off or counter-claim is set up, such court may inquire into and adjudicate upon all questions and settle all accounts arising or outstanding between the parties, and direct payment of any balance due. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 191.

80. A master suing for wages and disbursements is bound to furnish accounts before bringing his suit; if he do not, he will not be entitled to his costs. The Fleur-de-lis, L. R. 1 A. & E. 49.

(b) Also Part-Owners.

81. The maritime lien possessed by a master under sect. 10 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, for his wages and disbursements, is not impaired by the mere fact that he is also a part-owner. The Feronia, L. R. 2 A. & E. 65; 37 L. J. Adm. 60; 3 Asp. 54. See also The Darling, L. R. 2 A. & E. 260; 37 L. J. Adm. 29, 94.

82. A master held entitled to sue for wages earned on board a vessel, although he claimed to be owner of a moiety of such vessel; half the wages to be paid

* (32) In order to entitle persons to sue in the Admiralty for wages, the services rendered must be necessary, or at least contributory, to the navigation of the vessel or preservation of her, or of those who are employed in the navigation. Trainer v. The Superior, Gilpin's Rep. 514. [AMERICAN.]

(33) Musicians, hired on board a vessel as such, refused the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty. Ibid.

(34) The pilot deck-hands, engineer, and firemen on board of a steamer, are mariners to the extent of being entitled to sue for their wages in the Admiralty. Wilson v. The Steamer Ohio, ibid. 505.

(35) The clerk of a steamer has the same lien on the boat as the crew for his wages. Abbott v. Steamboat Co., 4 Md. Ch. Decis. 110. [AMERICAN.]

(35a) And a female cook on board a vessel is a mariner, and may sue as such. The Brandywine, 1 Newb. Adm. 5. [AMERICAN.]

(36) No lien exists in the Admiralty for services performed by a stovedore in loading and storing the ship's cargo. M'Dermott v. The S. G. Owens, Wallace, jun., 370. [AMERICAN.]

(37) Persons shipped on board a vessel sailing on a seal-catching voyage, to serve as sealers (i. e. to kill and dress the seal and not in navigating the ship) are entitled to a lien for wages. The Ocean Spray, 4 Sawyer, 105. [AMERICAN.]

† (38) A master of a ship has no valid claim for wages, until he has rendered a full and satisfactory account of the moneys received, and of the disbursements and expenditure of the ship during the voyage. Robinson v. Hinckley, 2 Paine, C. C. 457. [AMERICAN.]

by the owner of the other moiety. The Joseph Dexter, 3 Asp. 248. [IRISH.]

82a. In an action for wages the court cannot take cognizance of a claim by the master to an equitable share in the vessel. The D. Jer, 13 L. T. 22.

3. Seamen being Part-Owners.*

4. Stowaways.†

83. As to the responsibilities of stowaways, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. V. p. 2186.

4. Insurance.‡

84. A mariner cannot insure his wages. The Juliana, 2 Dodson, 509; The Neptune, 1 Hagg. 239; The Lady Durham, 3 ibid. 201.

85. Or perquisites in the nature of wages. Webster v. De Tastet, 7 T. R. 157; 1 Park on Ins. 11.

86. But a different rule holds as to the captain who may insure his commission, privileges, wages, &c. King v. Glover (1806), 2 N. R. 206.

5. Property liable.

87. The ship is the primary security to the seaman for his wages as long as a plank remains. The Golubchick, 1 W. Rob. 143; The Neptune, 1 Hagg. 238; and see c. 15, s. 1, p. 2298.

88. The fact that the master has been hired by one who has fraudulently obtained possession of a ship will not prevent the master having a lien upon the ship for his wages and disbursements, if he has discharged his duties in ignorance of the fraud. The Edwin, 4 N. R. 382.

88a. As to the liability of freight, see c. 15, s. 2, p. 2299.

6. Parties liable.

1. Generally.§

89. The master, the ship, and the owner, are severally liable to a mariner for his wages, and the mariner is entitled to his option as to which he will proceed against. In some respects a proceeding against the master is more convenient. The Jack Park, 4 C. Rob. 311.

90. In an action by a purser's steward against the purser of a king's ship to recover wages from him beyond his pay as an able seaman, on an implied contract with him (the purser) for his services as purser's steward: held, that as a person receiving a specific salary from the Crown in respect of his situation could not recover upon an implied contract for a remuneration for his services from the officer under whose immediate authority he acted, and as the purser had no funds allowed him out of which such services were to be paid, the action could not be supported. Carter v. Hall, 2 Stark. 861.

91. The captain of a ship-of-war detaining an impressed apprentice after notice, is liable to the master for wages for the service of the apprentice. Eades v. Vandeput, 5 East, 39, n.; 4 Dougl. 1; and see Foster v. Stewart, 3 M. & S. 191.

92. Even if the captain have knowledge of the fact from the apprentice's assertion merely. Ibid.

93. A shipowner assigned 15-16ths of a ship to his creditor, in trust to sell and retain his debts, and afterwards became bankrupt; the ship was afterwards sold. Held, that the creditor must bear his proportion of the seamen's wages, and other expenses on account of the ship. Douglas v. Russell (1831), 4 Sim. 533.

94. The principle of equity, that he who takes a benefit should bear his share of the burthen attaching to it; held, to apply in the case of demands for pilotage and wages against ship and freight, where the property in these was vested in different owners, as the exertions of the pilot and seamen contribute equally to the preservation of ship and freight: but quere, as to the application of that principle in all cases. The Dowthorpe, 2 W. Rob. 85.

* (39) A mariner, though a part-owner of the vessel, may sue the ship for his wages. The Pilot (No. 2), 1 Newb. Adm. 215. [AMERICAN.]

† (40) One who secretes himself on board a vessel before sailing, and discovers himself after the vessel is at sea, is not one of the crew, though the master requires him to work, as a condition of his having food, and he does work. United States v. Small, 2 Curtis, C. C. 241.

‡ (41) Seamen cannot insure their wages. M'Quirk v. Ship Penelope, 2 Pet. Ad. 276. [AMERICAN.]

§ (42) Seamen have a triple security for their wages; the vessel, the owner, and the master. Bunde v. Haven, Gilpin, 592; Carey v. Schooner Kitty, Bee, 254. [AMERICAN.]

2. Owners.*

95. Ship totally lost. Action for seaman's wages against the owners personally allowed. The Stephen Wright, 12 Jur. 732.

96. The owners of a ship let it out to freight, and by the charter-party it was agreed that no freight should be paid to the owners until six days after the ship should return to the port of London and make a full delivery of her lading, but the master might detain the imprest money, and if the ship should be lost in her voyage, the master and owners should not expect any other satisfaction than the imprest money for the freight and demurrage of the ship. The ship was lost, and upon a question who was liable to pay the seamen's wages, it was held, that the master was liable in the first instance, as having hired them, but that he had his remedy against the owners. Buck v. Rawlinson, 1 Bro. P. C. 137.

96a. In a suit for wages by the master of a vessel against her owners, who had chartered her to a third party, the master will be decreed the amount of his demand, though the services were rendered while she was in the possession of the charterer, and the court will not, when dealing with the case, take an account as between the owners and charterer, who is no party to the proceeding, as against the claim of the master, which it would do, if the account was between the owners and masters, in pursuance of its statutory jurisdiction. The Shamrock, 5 (IRISH) Jur. N.S. 159.

(44) When a vessel is let to the master to be employed by him, and he to pay to the owners a certain portion of her earnings, the owners will be liable to the seamen for their wages, though by agreement the master is to have entire control of the vessel to victual and man her, and furnish supplies at his own expense, unless at the time of shipping this contract is made known to them, and they are informed that they are to look to the master as the only owner. Scholfield v. Potter, Daveis, 392. [AMERICAN.]

(45) A sailor cannot sustain an action for wages against the general owner of a vessel which he has let to another on a contract that the latter shall have the use and control of her, and shall man her at his own expense, and who made the contract with the sailor. Giles v. Vigoreux, 35 Maine (5 Red.), 300.

97. Part-owners may be sued in the Admiralty by the mariners of their vessels for their wages. Alleson v. March (1689), 2 Vent. 181; Wheeler v. Thompson (1738), 1 Stra. 707; Ragg v. King (1729), 2 Stra. 858.

98. In a suit for wages, a protest on the ground of non-liability, pending a question in the Court of Chancery as to the ownership of the vessel under an assignment, overruled, and the parties directed to appear absolutely, they having in their answer to a bill in Chancery sworn that they were the owners. The St. Johan, 1 Hagg. 334.

3. Mortgagees.

99. A master may enforce his lien for wages even against persons who as mortgagees have in the interim become interested in the ship, without notice of the lien. The Chieftain, 3 N. R. 251.

4. Masters.†

100. It is an established rule, so ancient that its origin is unknown, that the seamen may recover their wages by action against the master. The Salacia, 7 L. T. N.S. 440; 11 W. R. 189; Bayly v. Grant, 1 Salk. 33; 12 Mod. 444; 1 Ld. Raym. 632; Holt, 48; Anon., 2 Show. 86; Hook v. Moreton, 1 Ld. Raym. 397; Armstrong v. Smith, 1 N. R. 299.

5. Underwriters on Abandonment.‡

(46) The charterers, and not the general owners of a vessel, are liable for seamen's wages on the voyage for which she is chartered. Goodridge v. Lord, 10 Mass. 483. [AMERICAN.]

(47) Trustees holding the title to a vessel, and controlling and managing her for the benefit of others, are liable for the wages of the master. Winsor v. Sampson, Sprague, 548. [AMERICAN.]

† (48) The master is liable for the wages of mariners, if he admit them to serve on board the vessel, although they were originally shipped by the owner. Farrel v. M'Clea, 1 Dall. 392. [AMERICAN.]

(49) A person was hired to go on a voyage as nominal master, but was never master in fact. Held, that his contract for wages with the real master was binding on the vessel and owners. L'Arina v. The Exchange, Bee, 198. [AMERICAN.]

‡ (50) After abandonment the assurer is liable for the subsequent wages of the crew

7. Actions by Seamen of Foreign Ships.

1. Generally.*

101. If foreign sailors stipulate in their own country, before the commencement of a voyage, that they will not sue the captain for any money abroad, but be satisfied with what he may advance them in deduction of their wages till they return home, they cannot maintain an action against him for wages in the courts of this country. Johnson v. Machielene, 3 Camp. 44.

102. Even though the ship and cargo be confiscated in an English port, and the voyage thereby ended. Geinar v. Meyer, 2 H. Black. 603.

103. Action by American seamen, discharged in England, for their wages. The court, after remarking on the jurisdiction in favour of British seamen, stated that there were cases in which, to prevent a total failure of justice, the court had gone a step farther, and as wages are due by the general maritime law, however modified by the particular regulations of different countries, had, with the consent of the accredited agent of their own government, entertained proceedings for wages at the suit of foreign seamen against their vessels lying in England, and would do so in this case. The Courtney, Edwards, 239.

103a. As to the jurisdiction of British courts in reference to foreign masters and seamen, see c. 2, ss. 9, 10, pp. 2283, 2284.

2. Ships of War.†

104. As to proceedings generally against British and foreign ships of war, see tit. JURISDICTION, p. 668.

3. Compensation for Wrongful Discharge.

See c. 14, s. 1, p. 2296.

8. Proceedings by Board of Trade.

1. On behalf of Seamen lost with Ship.

(a) Generally.

105. The wages of seamen or apprentices who are lost with the ship to which they belong, may be recovered by the Board of Trade from the owner like other wages are recoverable. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 21, sub-s. 1.

106. The Board of Trade deals with such wages like wages of other deceased seamen and apprentices under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). Ibid. sub-s. 4; and see as to same, tit. SEAMEN, Pt. VI. p. 2192.

as owner, but not as insurer. M'Bride v. Marine Ins. Co., 7 Johns. 431. [AMERICAN.]

(51) After an abandonment of a vessel is accepted by the underwriters, they become owners for the voyage, and are liable for seamen's wages from the time they become owners. Hammond v. Essex F. & M. Ins. Co., 4 Mason, 196. [AMERICAN.]

(52) See also Dunlap's American Admiralty Practice, 240.

* (53) A seaman may sue for wages in a foreign port, though he has signed articles agreeing not to commence such suit, if the master changes the voyage after such articles are signed, and promises to pay. Vibus v. Wirting, 2 Yeates, 350. [AMERICAN.]

(54) A claim for wages and his discharge by a Swedish seaman in consequence of the cruelty of the master, was sustained in the Admiralty, although it appeared that Swedish mariners are not permitted, by the law of Sweden, to sue in the courts of foreign nations. Weiberg v. The St. Oloff, 2 Pet. Adm. 428. [AMERICAN.]

(55) The court will not interfere in disputes between the master and seamen of a foreign vessel when they are bound by the articles to submit all disputes to a home tribunal. Aertson v. The Ship Aurora, Bee, 161. [AMERICAN.]

(56) It seems that a deviation from the voyage for which foreign seamen shipped is not a ground upon which our courts should entertain jurisdiction of a suit for wages, where by the articles the libellants have stipulated to sue in their own country only. The Infanta, 1 Abb. Adm. 263; Graham v. Hoskins, Olcott, Adm. 254.

(57) But where the interests of justice require it to be disregarded, e. g., where the voyage is broken up in an American port by some other cause than the wreck of the vessel, or where the man is discharged or becomes entitled to a discharge by reason of improper treatment, the American courts will entertain a suit by a foreign seaman for his wages, notwithstanding his stipulation in the articles not to sue until his return home. Ibid.

(58) See also Dunlap's American Admiralty Practice, 102, 107.

† (59) Mariners enlisting on board a ship of war, or vessel belonging to a sovereign state, cannot libel against the ship for wages due. Moitez v. The South Carolina, Bee, 422. [AMERICAN.]

(b) Evidence.

See tit. EVIDENCE, p. 463.

9. Shipping Agreements.*

107. As to shipping agreements, running agreements on the hire of seamen, and the execution thereof, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. pp. 2136—2145.

108. As to the construction thereof in regard to rate of wages, Ibid.

10. Commencement of Earning.

109. A seaman's right to wages commences at the time he commences work or at the time specified in the agreement for his commencement of work or presence on board, whichever first happens. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 181.

110. As to the compensation to seamen discharged after signing agreement and before commencement of voyage, or before one month's wages are earned, and as to the recovery of such compensation like wages, see c. 14, s. 1, p. 2296.

11. Commencement of Right of Action.†

111. So much of the third part of this act as relates to the shipping and discharge of seamen in foreign ports, applies to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad, when out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

112. The master or owner of every ship shall pay to every seaman his wages in the case of a home-trade ship within two days after the termination of the agreement or when such seaman is discharged, whichever first happens; and in the case of all other ships (except ships employed in the southern whale fishery or on other voyages for which by the terms of their agreement they are compensated by shares in the profits of the adventure) within three days after the cargo has been delivered, or within five days after the seaman's discharge, whichever first happens; and in all cases the seaman at the time of his discharge is entitled to be paid on account a sum equal to one-fourth part of the balance due. Ibid. s. 187.

113. In the case of foreign-going ships—The owner or master shall pay to each seaman on account, when he lawfully leaves the ship at the end of his engagement, two pounds, or one-fourth of the balance due to him, whichever is least; and the remainder of his wages within two clear days (exclusive of any Sunday, Fast Day in Scotland, or Bank Holiday) after he so leaves the ship. See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 4.

114. No seaman engaged for a voyage or an engagement to terminate in the United Kingdom is entitled to sue in any court abroad for wages, unless discharged with such sanction as therein required and with the written consent of the master, or proves such ill-usage on the part of the master or by his authority as to warrant reasonable apprehension of danger to his life if he remained on board. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 190.

115. A master compelled by pressing necessity of ill-health to leave his ship at a port in one of the British colonies,

* (60) As to the power now given by statute to the court or functionary having jurisdiction in the matter to rescind an inequitable shipping agreement, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. c. 2, p. 2148.

† (60a) For old cases on this head, see Edwards v. Child, 2 Ver. 728; Sigard v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 72; White v. Mattison, 2 Stark. 325.

(61) A mariner is entitled to his wages as soon as he is voluntarily discharged from the vessel; and if not paid within ten days after his discharge, he may have process from a Court of Admiralty against the vessel to enforce the payment. The Mary, Ware, 456. [AMERICAN.]

(62) Where seamen are discharged by the master before the expiration of the time mentioned in the articles, an action accrues for their wages immediately. The Cadmus v. Matthews, 2 Paine, C. C. 229. See also 2 Parsons on Admiralty Law, 665 et seq. [AMERICAN.]

(63) A master of a ship has no valid claim for wages until he shall have rendered a full and satisfactory account of the moneys received, and of the disbursements and expenditure of the ship during the voyage. Robinson v. Hinckley, 2 Paine, C. C. 457.

(64) An agreement not to sue in a foreign port in shipping articles does not deprive a seaman of that right when the voyage, as respects him, is ended, and that by the act of the master, as a deviation, or cruel treatment. Shulenburg v. Wessells, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 70. [AMERICAN.]

held, entitled to sue immediately for his wages. The Rajah of Cochin, Swabey, 473.

116. The master of a vessel is not entitled to recover in an action for wages until "the service has terminated" or he has been discharged. The Hemisphere Borealis, 5 (Irish) Jur. N.S. 180.

117. The court will not pay much attention to the objection that the action for wages was brought before the legal time for the payment of the wages under the articles had elapsed. The Test, 3 Hagg. 313, 316.

See also No. 80, p. 2286.

1. Freight not earned.*

118. No right to wages is dependent on the earning of freight, and every seaman and apprentice who would be entitled to recover wages, if the ship in which he has served had earned freight, is now, subject to all other rules of law and conditions applicable, entitled to recover them notwithstanding that freight has not been earned: but in all cases of wreck or loss of the ship, proof that he has not exerted himself to the utmost to save the ship, cargo, and stores shall bar his claim. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 183.

119. If any seaman or apprentice so entitled to wages dies before they are paid they shall be paid and applied in the manner therein specified, with regard to the wages of seamen who die during a voyage. Ibid. s. 184.

120. See further, tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, Nos. 1058—1066, p. 595.

2. Embargo.†

121. Wages are due to a seaman during the period of the vessel's detention by an embargo in a foreign port, freight having been earned. Thompson v. Millie, May 28, 1806; 13 F. C. 560.

122. And this without the seaman's producing the order by which the embargo was taken off, on proof that the crew were restored to the ship, and that she completed her voyage and earned freight. Delamainer v. Winteringham, 4 Camp. 186; Pratt v. Cuff, 4 East, 43, n.

123. The Russian Government laid an embargo on British ships in Russian ports, until an alleged convention between the Russian and British Government should be fulfilled by the latter. The crews were taken out of the ships, marched up the country, and there detained for six months, and treated as prisoners of war, and at the end of that time they were marched back to their ships, and the vessels with their cargoes restored. Held, that this was an embargo, and not a hostile capture, and that the seamen were entitled to wages during the time of the detention. Beale v. Thompson (1805), 1 Dow. 299; 4 East, 546; 1 Smith, 144; reversing the judgment in 8 B. & P. 405.

124. It was so held where the plaintiff was a foreign seaman. Johnson v. Broderick, 4 East, 566; 1 Smith, 153.

3. In cases of Wreck or Loss of Ship.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. III. c. 19, p. 2157.

4. When injured in Service of Ship.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. IV. c. 2, p. 2163.

* (65) As to the previous state of the law by which the right to wages was made, in certain cases, dependent upon the earning of freight, see Anon., 2 Show. 283; Saunders v. Drew, 3 B. & A. 455; The Juliana, 2 Dodson, 510; The Sydney Cove, 2 Dodson, 13; The Neptune, 1 Hagg. 232; The Lady Durham, 3 Hagg. 202; Campion v. Nicholas, Str. 405; *Harris v. † (66) The wages of the crew during the detention by an embargo are not chargeable to the ship, nor are they general average, but fall exclusively on the freight. M'Bride v. Marine Ins. Co., 7 Johns. 431. [AMERICAN.]

(67) In such a case they are not to attempt to get extraordinary wages, and if they do they are to forfeit half what they have had. See Browne's Civ. and Adm. Law, 179.

(68) If a ship is forced to winter in a strange country the sailors get no extra wages. Ibid. 181.

5. *When Seaman left Abroad through Illness.

125. Where the service of a seaman terminates before the period contemplated in the agreement by reason of his being left on shore at any place abroad under a certificate of his unfitness or inability to proceed on the voyage, granted as there-in mentioned, the seaman is entitled to wages for the time of service prior to such termination, but not further. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 185.

126. As to the procedure on a seaman being left abroad under such circumstances, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. IV. c. 6, p. 2165.

127. But as to illness of a seaman wilfully caused by him, see c. 17, s. 15, p. 2312.

6. Extra Pay.

128. A contract for reward beyond the wages stipulated for in the mariner's contract is illegal and void. The Isabella, 2 C. Rob. 241; The Araminta, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 224; 24 L. T. 43; 18 Jur. 793; White v. Wilson, 2 B. & P. 116; Dafter v. Cresswell, 7 D. & R. 650; Harris v. Watson, Peake, N. P. C. 72; Still v. Myrick, 2 Camp. 317; Thompson v. Havelock, 1 Camp. 527; Elsworth v. Woolmore, 5 Esp. 84; Rogers v. Lacy, 2 B. & P. 57; 3 Esp. 43; Harris v. Carter, 3 El. & Bl. 559; 18 Jur. 1014; 23 L. T. 66; 23 L. J. Q. B. 295; Fraser v. Hatton, 2 C. B. N.S. 512; 3 Jur. N.S. 694; 26 L. J. C. P. 226; The Prince Edward, 5 (Irish) Jur. N.S. 110; The Lockwoods, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 123 (Lower Canada).

129. The contract signed when the seaman undertook the voyage regulates the payment due to them on its termination. Claim for extra wages for having remained by the ship when the other seamen deserted, disallowed. The Prince Edward, 2 L. T. N.S. 139; 5 (Irish) Jur. N.S. 110.

130. A mariner, who has signed articles for a voyage at a certain pay per month, cannot claim any further wages or gratuity by usage or custom. Elsworth v. Woolmore, 5 Esp. 84.

131. A vessel at Geelong, half of the crew of which had gone to the diggings, being about to start on the return voyage vid Bombay, the master proposed to the remaining crew to divide amongst them the wages due to the deserters on the condition of their working the ship short-handed to Bombay. The proposal was accepted by the crew, the forfeited wages were divided amongst them, and the ship was taken so short-handed in safety to Bombay. On arriving at Liverpool the owners deducted as wages advanced the sum paid to each of the crew out of such forfeited wages. Held, first, that whether a contract for reward beyond the wages stipulated for in the mariner's contract be compulsory or not it is illegal. The Araminta, 1 Spinks' Eccl. and Adm. Rep. 224; 18 Jur. 793; 24 L. T. 43. See also note (75) infra.

132. Secondly, that a payment made by the master under such contract might be recovered at law by the owner. Ibid.

132a. Thirdly, that instead of driving the owner to law for his remedy the Court of Admiralty should give it him by allowing the deductions. Ibid.

into a fresh agreement with the plaintiff and the other remaining seamen, to raise their wages for the remainder of the voyage. Held, that the plaintiff never was, under the circumstances, released from the obligation of the original articles, and could not, therefore, maintain an action to recover the increased rate of wages for the voyage home. Harris v. Carter, 3 El. & Bl. 559; 2 C. L. R. 1582; 18 Jur. 1014; 23 L. J. Q. B. 295; 23 L. T. 66.*

136. Seamen had engaged by the run from Liverpool to Dublin, and the vessel was driven into Milford Haven, and owing to the weather detained sixteen days. Held, that the seamen were not entitled to any extra wages on that account, the chance of such accidents being provided for by the extra remuneration included in the run money. The James, 2 Browne's Civ. and Adm. Law, App. 533.

137. The crew of a vessel having signed ship's articles, are bound to perform their usual duties, and are not to be held entitled during the performance of them to any increase of wages on account of an increase of peril, unless it appears clearly that they have been released from those articles. The Christiana, 5 Ir. Jur. N.S. 63.

138. A man, rated on board an East India ship as a seaman, and who signed the ship's articles, and received pay as such, held, not entitled to maintain any action upon a parol agreement subsequently made for wages as cuddy servant during the voyage. Dofter v. Cresswell, 7 D. & R. 650; 2 Car. & P. 161.

139. A mariner, who has signed articles for a voyage at a certain pay per month, cannot claim any further wages or gratuity by usage or custom. Elsworth v. Woolmore, 5 Esp. 84.

140. If it appear that the seamen were released from the articles, the owners of a vessel are bound by the special agreement of the captain to give extra wages to the crew who had signed ship's articles for navigating a vessel home in a leaky or unseaworthy condition. The Christiana, 5 Ir. Jur. N.S. 63.

141. A promise by a captain on behalf of his owners to pay monthly wages to one of the sailors, in order to induce him to become a hostage, is binding on the owners, although they abandon the ship and cargo. Yeates v. Hall, 1 T. R. 73; and see Helly v. Grant, 1 T. R. 76.

142. In an action by a purser's steward against the purser of a king's ship to recover wages from him beyond his pay as an able seaman, on an implied contract with him (the purser) for his services as purser's steward, held, that as a person receiving a specific salary from the Crown in respect of his situation could not recover upon an implied contract for a remuneration for his services from the officer under whose immediate authority he acted, and as the purser had no funds allowed him out of which such services were to be paid, the action could not be supported. Carter v. Hall, 2 Stark. 861.

143. Evidence was offered on the part of a mate to show that, besides the stipulated wages, it was the custom to allow the mate a privilege of carrying one slave, and he libelled for the value of that privilege, according to average price at the port of delivery. Held, that the claim and evidence were inadmissible. The Isabella, 2 C. Rob. 241; White v. Wilson, 2 B. & P. 116.

144. When seamen sign articles for a specified service, and before the voyage is concluded the master agrees to give one or more of them increased wages, the court will not bind the owners to such an agreement. The Patriotto, 11 L. T. N.S. 149; 8 Ir. Jur. N.S. 317; 2 Asp. 129.

145. The plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, a captain in the royal navy, agreed to enter on board his ship as captain's cook, the defendant undertaking to pay the plaintiff wages over and above the government pay to which his rating would entitle him. The plaintiff having performed the service, held, that there was a sufficient consideration to enable the plaintiff to maintain an action for such wages. Clutterbuck v. Coffin, 4 Scott, N. R. 509; 1 D. N.S. 479; Car. & M. 273; 3 M. & G. 842; 6 Jur. 131; 11 L. J. C. P.

* (72) The principle which pervades all the above cases seems to be, that if in the course of a voyage circumstances not contemplated by the articles arise which render the original contract with a seaman void, he is at liberty to enter into a new engagement for the remainder of the voyage at a greater remuneration. This doctrine is carefully affirmed by the learned judge in the case of The Araminta, supra, but applied by him with a different result to that of Hartley v. Ponsoby, supra, in which latter case the question of fact was decided by a jury.

65;* and see England v. Davidson, 11 A. & E. 856.

146. When a seaman signs articles at a foreign port there is an implied warranty of seamanship, and if the ship is unseaworthy, there is consideration for a new contract for extra reward to induce him to sail in her. Turner v. Owen, 3 F. & F. 176.

147. A vessel, in consequence of the desertion of some of the seamen, was left short-handed in harbour, before the voyage was completed. The master, to induce the remaining seamen to perform the rest of the voyage, promised to pay them a sum of money in addition to their wages. They accordingly performed the rest of the voyage with the diminished number of hands. On an action by one of the seamen against the master for the sum promised, the jury found that the master made the agreement without coercion, for the best interests of the owners, that he could not have obtained additional hands at a reasonable price, and that it was unreasonable for so large a ship to proceed on the completion of the voyage with the diminished number of hands. Held, that on this finding, which the court understood to mean that it was unsafe so to proceed, the plaintiff was entitled to recover, as the seamen were not bound, by their original contract of service, to proceed with the diminished number of hands, and their undertaking to do so was therefore a good consideration for the master's promise. Hartley v. Ponsonby, 7 El. & Bl. 872; 3 Jur. N.S. 746; 26 L. J. Q. B. 322.†

148. Special agreements with the owners by the master of a tug steamer, as to a per centage on the earnings of the tug, and by seamen as to increased wages, for foregoing all claims for salvage, will not be upheld by the Court of Admiralty, as being repugnant to general principle and prejudicial to the public interest, as the effect of such agreements would be to take away from the actual salvors the motives for enterprise and energy. The Mary Anne, 11 L. T. N.S. 85; 9 Ir. Jur. N.S. 60.‡

* (73) This case differs from those cases (see Harris v. Watson, Still v. Myrick and Thompson v. Havelock), in which contracts for extra remuneration were made by persons not at the time competent to contract, having already bound themselves to give their entire services under a prior existing contract, as in this case the agreement for services was entered into while the plaintiff was in another employment and perfectly free to contract in the manner he did. There being no plea but non assumpti, the objection to the contract on the ground of illegality was not open to the defendant. Abb. Sh. (12th ed.), p. 461.

† (74) A promise made by the master at an intermediate port on the voyage to give an additional sum over and above the wages stipulated in the articles is void for want of consideration. The Lockwoods, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 123. [LOWER CANADA.]

(75) On the principles of the common law applicable to the contract of hiring of labour and service, a party cannot ordinarily claim an extra compensation on the ground that by some unexpected event the service which he has agreed to perform becomes more laborious and dangerous than was anticipated at the time of the contract. The Dawn, Daveis, 121. [AMERICAN.]

(76) A master has no power to bind his owners and their vessel to the payment of mariners' wages for three months after their discharge, and after all services at sea and elsewhere had ceased. Canizares v. Santissima Trinidad, Bee, 353. [AMERICAN.]

‡ (77) From the above case it would seem that not only no stipulation barring a seaman's right to a share of salvage will be allowed, but also that any stipulation for increased wages, if the consideration for the increase be an abandonment of a right to salvage, would also be inoperative.

§ (78) A seaman who is injured in the service of the ship, without fault on his part, is entitled to his wages for the whole voyage or other period of his engagement, and to be taken care of at the expense of the ship. The Steamboat Springer, XXIII. Alb. Law Jour. 197. [AMERICAN.]

|| (79) Shipping articles having been signed by a seaman and delivered to the master, and the amount of wages omitted by mistake or accident, without fraud, it is competent to construction thereof, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. p. 2136.

2. Quantum meruit.*

153. As to claims for wages on a quantum meruit, see Eaken v. Thom, 5 Esp. 6; Hillyard v. Mount, 3 C. & P. 93; White v. Mattison, 2 Stark. 325; Jesse v. Roy, 1 C. M. & R. 316; 4 Tyrw. 626.

154. In fixing a rate of wages at a quantum meruit, there having been no specific agreement as to the amount, the court will be influenced by the conduct of the owner and the length of time during which the seaman may have been kept out of his money. The Providence, 1 Hagg. 393, 394.

3. Promotion during the Voyage.†

155. When the master of a vessel dies, or any particular circumstance occurs, such as insanity, that renders the master utterly incompetent to the discharge of his duties, the first mate, as a matter of course, succeeds to the command of the ship, but not necessarily to the whole of the original contract subsisting between the former master and the owner. The Tecumseh, 3 W. Rob. 146.

156. A claim for a gradation of wages, first as mariner, afterwards as second mate, and then as chief mate, preferred by a person originally taken on board as supernumerary, and without any fixed rate of wages, pronounced for, with costs. The Porcupine, 1 Hagg. 381.

157. The court would not support, as against a second mate appointed chief mate, and suing for wages as such chief officer, on a quantum meruit, an agreement with him on such appointment, that his amount of pay was to depend on the discretion of the owner on the return of the ship to Great Britain. The Providence, Ibid. 391.

158. Claim of a second mate, who succeeded to the office of chief mate, to the rate of wages given to chief mates on similar voyages, pronounced for, with costs. An alteration in the ship's articles, held, not necessary to support his title. Wages as chief mate, at a quantum meruit, estimated according to the common usage of such voyages, decreed. Ibid. 391, 393.

159. A seaman who entered as second mate, but afterwards, and without any new agreement, did the duty and acted as first mate (the first mate having deserted), held, entitled during such period to wages after the same rate as those paid to the former chief mate. Wages after that

(80) If a seaman is, by a verbal agreement, shipped on a general trading or freighting voyage without any limitation of time or any fixed determination of the voyage, he is entitled, under the statute, to the highest rate of wages paid at the port where he shipped, and parol evidence is inadmissible to prove that a lower rate of wages, or a different mode of compensation, was agreed upon. The Crusader, Ware, 437.

* (81) In fixing a quantum meruit for wages on a whaling voyage, it is competent for the court to take into view the unusual protraction of the voyage, and the condition of the vessel and the crew, though not specially alleged or relied on in the libel. *Allen v. 1. Compensation for wrongful Discharge.

(a) Generally.

R. 1 A. & E. 384; 36 L. J. Adm. 15; 2 Asp. 553. See also The Northumbria, 3 Asp. 562, note; The Blessing, L. R. 3 P. D. 35; 3 Asp. N.S. 561.

163. As to the right of a seaman improperly discharged before the commencement of the voyage, or one month's wages earned, to compensation in respect of such discharge, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. III. p. 2152.

(c) Masters.

164. The plaintiff, a master mariner, was engaged on a voyage from England to South American ports and back. It would have lasted about six months. He was discharged about a fortnight after the engagement, and when the vessel had put back into a port of distress. The dismissal having been held to be wrongful, the amount of the wages he would have earned had he completed the voyage was awarded him as damages. The Northumbria, 3 Asp. 562, n.

165. A wrongful discharge enures to a reimbursement of necessary expenses consequent thereon. The Frederick, 1 Hagg. 218.

166. A master engaged for a voyage out and home if wrongfully dismissed abroad is entitled to wages until he can obtain other employment, or semble, until the termination of the voyage. The Camilla, Swabey, 312; 6 W. R. 840; 31 L. T. 282.

167. Semble, a master, if discharged abroad in consequence of his misconduct, is entitled to his wages so long as he continued in actual command. Ibid.

2. Compensation for wrongful Discharge in this Country of Crews of Foreign Ships.*

168. Foreign seamen engaged for a voyage out and home are entitled, upon being discharged in this country against their own consent, to receive out of the proceeds of the ship passage-money for their return home; but not so seamen engaged during the course of a voyage. The San Jose Primeiro, 3 L. T. N.S. 513.

169. Greek mariners of a Greek vessel sold by the authority of the court, held to be entitled, according to the law of their country, to the means of subsistence and return to their country. The Madonna d'Idra, 1 Dodson, 37; The Alexandre, 5 (Irish) Jur. N.S. 379. See also The Hendrica Gazina, Ibid. 110.

170. When foreign seamen discharged in Great Britain recovered their wages against the foreign ship, the court refused to grant them their passage-money home, except on the production of a certificate from their consul that they had gone or were going home. The Raffaeluccia, 3 Asp. N.S. 505.

171. The seamen also claimed for three months' pay, directed to be paid to their consul by the act of the United States of Feb. 28, 1803; but this was printed on the back of the contract, but not referred to in it. As this part of the claim did not arise out of the general maritime law, but called for an enforcement of a municipal regulation of the United States, the court declined to entertain it. The Courtney, Edwards, 239.

* (86) The master is not at liberty to discharge the crew in a foreign port without their consent, and if he does so the maritime law gives them entire wages for the voyage with the expenses of return. Circumstances, as a semi-naufragium, may vest in him the authority to discharge the crew, but he must then provide them with a return passage and pay their wages up to the time of their arrival at home. The Jane, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 256. [LOWER CANADA.] See also Dunlap's American Adm. Prac. 45.

172. It intimated, however, that if the statute regulation had been embodied in the contract, so as to compose a part of it, the whole might have been carried into effect as an article of contract between the parties. *Ibid.

173. Application on behalf of the mate and crew of a foreign ship deserted by the master, and sold under a decree of the court in a cause of bottomry, for an order for the payment of their wages, and board as part of their wages, the men being left entirely destitute, granted. The Tremont (1841), 10 Monthly Law Mag. (Notes of Cases), 137.

3. Compensation when left behind Abroad.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. IV. c. 6, p. 2165.

4. Compensation for Deprivation of Right to sue Abroad.

174. If any seaman (engaged for a voyage to terminate in the United Kingdom) on his return to the United Kingdom proves that the master or owner has been guilty of any conduct or default which (but for the provisions in this section disentitling him to sue except as therein mentioned in any court abroad for wages) would have entitled the seaman to sue for wages before the termination of the voyage or engagement, he is entitled to recover in addition to his wages such compensation not exceeding £20 as the court thinks reasonable. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 190.

5. Compensation for Delay in Payment.

(a) Ten Days' Double Pay.

(aa) Masters.†

175. For the statutory provisions as to the allowance of ten days' double pay in certain cases, see No. 181, infra.

176. Every master of a ship shall, so far as the case permits, have the same rights, liens, and remedies for the recovery of his wages which by this act or by any law or custom any seaman, not being a master, has for the recovery of his wages. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 191.

177. A master is entitled under sections 187 and 191 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), to double pay for the number of days (not exceeding ten) during which the payment of his wages is improperly withheld; but

(88) If a seaman be discharged abroad without justifiable cause, and without his own consent, the measure of damages is the full amount of wages till the return of the vessel, and the expenses of his own return; Hutchinson v. Coombs, 7 Jur. 37; Ware, 65; Sullivan v. Morgan, 11 Johns. 66: or three months' extra pay. See Orne v. Townsend, 4 Mason, 541; The Saratoga, 2 Gallis. 18; and 1 Conkling's Admiralty Law, 128. (91) Where a person is employed on board a steamboat for one trip and is wrongfully discharged before its completion, he has by the statute of this State a lien on the boat and may recover wages up to the completion of the trip, deducting any wages he may in the meantime have earned on any other boat. Grant v. Steamboat Maria Denning, 28 Mis. (7 Jones), 280.

(93a) The master, besides double pay, claimed £320 on a balance of £4,845. The owner filed a counter-claim of £500, of which the registrar allowed £200. Held, that the wages had not been withheld without sufficient cause, and that the owner was entitled to have the accounts between the master and himself allowed. Claim for double pay disallowed accordingly. The Strathallan, No. 349, March 12, 1861. R. & M.

(94) The master claimed £52, besides the ten days' double pay. The owner filed a counter-claim of £12, of which the registrar allowed £2. 178. An owner of a ship refused to pay wages to a master for a voyage, unless credited with salvage money received by the master under an award, and kept by him for his own share, the master refusing to account for a subsequent voyage, except on a condition of a settlement for the former voyage without reference to the salvage money. Held, that the payment of wages was improperly withheld, and that the master was entitled to ten days' double pay. Ibid.

179. In a cause of master's wages and accounts the master claimed £72, besides the statutory ten days' double pay for non-payment of his wages. The owner filed a counter-claim against the master amounting to £150, of which the registrar allowed £23, but which the court reduced to £11. Held, that the master was not entitled, under the circumstances, to the statutory ten days' double pay. The Agnes, No. 948, April 16, 1862.

180. The master, besides ten days' double pay, claimed £290 on a balance of £830. The owners filed a counter-claim of £2,700, of which the registrar and merchants allowed £25 only. Held, that the master was entitled to the statutory ten days' double pay. The British Empire, 1 Aug. 1859.

181. Every master or owner who neglects or refuses to make payment of wages (at the periods therein mentioned, as to which see No. 307, p. 2313) without sufficient cause, must pay to the seaman a sum not exceeding the amount of two days' pay for each of the days, not exceeding ten days, during which payment is delayed, and such sum is recoverable as wages. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 187.

182. In a suit for seaman's wages the court decreed, under similar provisions in 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 19, s. 11 (now repealed), in addition to the wages ordinarily due, two days' pay for each day not exceeding ten since his dismissal. The Elizabeth, 6 Jur. 156.

ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad, when out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. Ibid. s. 109.

185. By the general maritime law the ship is the primary security to the mariner for his wages. The Golubchick, 1 W. Rob. 143; Edmonson v. Walker (1690), 1 Show. 177.

186. The mariner's lien for wages extends over the whole ship, one part as well as another, and no one part more than another. A part separated by a storm is not disengaged by that accident from that lien. If it be recovered, it is recovered as a part of the primitive pledge mortgaged to the mariner. The Neptune, 1 Hagg. 238.

187. As long as a plank remains the sailor is entitled to the proceeds as a security for his wages. The Madonna d'Idra, 1 Dodson, 40; The Sydney Cove, 2 Ibid. 13.

188. The Court of Admiralty has no authority to restrain seamen from proceeding against the ship for their wages, and to drive them to a different remedy in another court,—to a personal action against the owners, even though the court may be satisfied that the owners are solvent. The Arab, 5 Jur. N.S. 417.

189. Ship totally lost. In a suit for seaman's wages motion against the owners personally granted. The Stephen Wright, 12 Jur. 732.

190. The Court of Admiralty had in an action for wages pronounced them due. The parties liable for their payment paid them before a shipping master. Held, that the proctor for the seamen had a lien upon the wages for his costs, and that therefore the wages could be paid only to the proctor of the parties entitled to receive them. The Araminta, Swabey, 81; 2 Jur. N.S. 310; 26 L. T. 317; 4 W. R. 396.

191. As to the priority of wages over other liens, see tit. LIENS, pp. 831, 832.

191a. As to liens generally, Ibid. p. 807.

2. On Freight.*

192. Seamen may arrest the ship and the freight for wages. Neelanham v. Foljamb and Another (12 Ann.), 6 Vin. Abr. 439.

193. If the ship only be in the first instance arrested by them, and it appears there are bottomry claims thereon, they may afterwards apply to have the freight arrested, and the court would be bound, ex debito justitiæ, to grant such a motion. The Mary Ann, 9 Jur. 94. See also The Juliana, 2 Dodson, 510, 516.

194. By the law of Scotland seamen have over the freight a hypothec or maritime lien for their wages, even after the cargo has been removed from the ship. Ersk. 3, 2, 34; 2nd Rep. Merc. L. Comm. 75.

3. On Cargo.†

195. A mariner has no lien for wages on the cargo as cargo; his lien is upon the ship to the last plank, and upon the freight as appurtenant thereto; and so far as the cargo is subject to freight, he may attach it as security for the freight that may be due. The Lady Durham, 3 Hagg. 200, 201; The Riby Grove, 2 W. Rob. 59.

196. Quære, as to a seaman's claim against cargo, where freight has been earned, though not paid, and where the owner of the ship is the owner of the cargo, and the ship is lost, but the cargo saved. The Riby Grove, 2 Rob. 59.

4. Insurance Money.

197. An insured ship was lost, and the insurance recovered by the assignees of the owner, who had become bankrupt. Held, that the seamen were entitled to be paid in full out of the insurance money. Dawson (In re), 1 Fonb. N. R. 229; 17 L. T. 100.

* (102) The freight is hypothecated for the wages, and every part of the freight is liable for the whole wages. The owners who have received freight under such a contract with the master are liable for wages to the full amount of the freight in their hands, and not merely pro rata in proportion to what they have received. Poland v. The Spartan, Ware, 124, 134; The Skolfield v. Potter, Daves, 392; The Dawn, Daves, 121; Shep- pard v. Taylor, 5 Peters, 655; 9 Curtis, 531; Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumner, 443; Pitman v. Hooper, 3 Ibid. 50. See also 1 Conkling's Admiralty Law, 109 et seq. [AMERICAN.]

5. *Masters.

198. A master has no lien upon one ship for services rendered in another belonging to the same owner. The Julundur, 1 Spinks' Ecl. and Adm. Rep. 71.

199. Semble, he might sue in respect of services rendered in the same ship on a previous voyage. Ibid. 76.

200. The release by the master of his claim against the shipowner for wages does not operate as a release of the ship. The Chieftain, 3 N. R. 251.

200a. A master is not deprived of his lien for wages and disbursements by having taken a mortgage on the ship for the balance thereof, more especially if the shipowner has concealed from him the fact of a prior mortgage. The Albion, 27 L. T. N.S. 723.

201. A master appointed by a person fraudulently in possession of the ship, has, nevertheless, if innocent of the fraud, a claim against the ship for his wages and disbursements. The Edwin, B. & L. 281; 10 L. T. N.S. 658; 33 L. J. Adm. 197; 12 W. R. 992.

202. A master may sue for wages earned on several voyages within six years. The Olive, Feb. 27, 1858.

203. Giving up possession of the ship is not ceding a demand against it, and the master can still sue for his wages. The Nymph, Swabey, 88.

204. As to how far the wreck or loss of the ship discharges the master's lien, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. III. c. 19, p. 2157.

6. Attachment, Assignment, or Incumbrance.†

205. No wages due or accruing to any seaman or apprentice is subject to attachment or arrestment from any court, and every payment of wages is valid, notwithstanding any previous sale, assignment, attachment, incumbrance, or arrestment, and no assignment or sale of such wages made prior to the accruing thereof is binding; and no power of attorney or authority for the receipt of any such wages is irrevocable. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 233.

7. Transfer.

206. Other parties having claims against the ship or the proceeds of its sale, may apply to the court for permission to pay the wages due and to have a lien to that extent on the property, ranking accordingly. See tit. LIENS, p. 811.

206a. As to the effect by payment without such leave, Ibid.

8. Waiver.‡

207. A master who after receiving a portion of his wages from the managing owners, elects to allow the balance to remain in their hands at interest, by so doing loses his lien and cannot recover the balance in rem, but if he has had no opportunity of receiving his wages, or has been refused payment of them on demand, the mere fact of his allowing them to remain in the managing owner's hands will not deprive him of his remedy. The Rainbow, 53 L. T. 91.

‡ (106) A vessel sailed with a cargo on a voyage from New York to New Orleans and back. She remained at New Orleans more than a year after her arrival, waiting for freight, when the master discharged the seamen, and persuaded them to return with him in another vessel to New York, and get their wages. Afterwards the vessel was sold while at New Orleans, and went a voyage to Liverpool, and thence to New York. Upon her arrival in New York, she was libelled by the seamen for their wages. Held, that the forbearance of the seamen to libel the vessel in the port of their discharge was no waiver of their lien, and that they were entitled to full wages to the time of their return to New York. The Mary, Paine, 180. [AMERICAN.]

(107) A vessel was sold under a decree of the Admiralty at Providence, R. I., at the suit of others of the crew. The libellants had notice of the proceedings, but did not apply for their wages. Held, that their lien on their vessel was at an end. Trump et al. v. The Ship Thomas, Bee, 86. [AMERICAN.]

9. Release.

(a) Generally.*

208. No seaman by any agreement forfeits his lien upon the ship, or is deprived of any remedy for the recovery of his wages to which he would otherwise have been entitled; and every stipulation in any agreement inconsistent with any provision of this act, and every stipulation by which any seaman consents to abandon his right to wages in the case of the loss of the ship, is wholly inoperative. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 182.

209. An award by magistrates of a balance of wages, notwithstanding the production of a receipt for the same, fraudulently obtained, affirmed with costs. The Minerva, 1 Hagg. 54.

210. In a suit for wages a protest by the master, alleging that the seaman had elected the jurisdiction of a magistrate, who had dismissed the claim on the ground of forfeiture by desertion, overruled, the court holding that the object of the statute was to give to magistrates a summary jurisdiction in cases of mere quantum only, involving no legal question. The Edwin, 3 Hagg. 364.

(b) Bankruptcy.

211. Though a bankrupt owner may have received his discharge, the master of the vessel still retains a lien on the ship and a right to enforce payment of his wages in the Admiralty Court. The Tecumseh, 3 W. Rob. 111; 12 Jur. 985; 6 Notes of Cases, 533.

211a. A master arrested in the Admiralty Court, for his wages and disbursements, a vessel the property of an insolvent. The Bankruptcy Court refused to restrain the action except on the terms of lodging in court the sum in question, and undertaking to answer costs. In re J. C., L. R. 11 Eq. 151.

212. A master had recovered judgment in an action at common law for his wages, which judgment remained unsatisfied in consequence of the defendant's bankruptcy. He had also proved his debt under the defendant's bankruptcy. Held, entitled to sue the ship in the Admiralty Court, notwithstanding the ship had been sold. The Bengal, Swabey, 468.

(c) Laches.

See tit. LACHES, p. 805.

(d) Bill of Exchange.†

213. A seaman took at Calcutta a bill of exchange on the owners instead of cash in payment of wages. Held, that he could not sue the ship on payment of such bill being refused, the owners having become bankrupt. The William, 2 Hagg. 136.

214. The master took a bill of exchange from the owner of a ship in payment of the balance of a debtor and creditor account which included his wages as master as well as other disbursements on account of the ship. Held, that he was entitled to sue for his wages. The Simlah, 15 Jur. 866.

16. Forfeiture.

215. The whole of the third part of this act applies to all sea-going ships registered in the United Kingdom (except those

(110) A seaman, in return for money and goods amounting in value to about one-third of the wages due, gave an order on the owner for payment of his wages (a share in a whaling voyage). Held, that the order, though presented and accepted, was no defence, except as to the amount received. The Barque Rajah, 15 Law Reporter (5 N.S.) 208. ‡ (114) The arrest and imprisonment of a seaman in a foreign port, and sending him home by the public authority as a prisoner, charged with an indictable offence, does not exclusively employed in fishing on the coasts, and those belonging to the Trinity House, the commissioners of northern lighthouses, the port of Dublin corporation, and pleasure yachts), and also to all ships registered in any British possession, and employed in trading between any place in the United Kingdom, and any place not situate in the possession in which such ships are registered, and to their owners, masters, and crews wherever they may be. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 109.

215a. So much of the third part of this act as relates to discipline, to naval courts on the high seas and abroad, and to crimes committed abroad, applies also to all ships registered in any of her Majesty's dominions abroad, when out of the jurisdiction of their respective governments, and to their owners, masters, and crews. Ibid.

216. Any question of forfeiture of or deductions from the wages of any seaman or apprentice may be determined in any proceeding lawfully instituted with respect to such wages, although the offence is hereby made punishable by imprisonment as well as forfeiture, and has not been made the subject of criminal proceedings. Ibid. s. 254.

217. The sections of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), arranged under the head of "discipline," have reference to British ships only. Leary v. Lloyd, 6 Jur. N.S. 1246; 29 L. J. M. C. 194.

218. Misconduct on the part of a previous master and officers, as necessarily weakening the discipline of the ship, is a circumstance worthy of consideration in adjudicating as to a forfeiture of wages on the ground of subsequent misconduct of a mariner. The Blake, 1 W. Rob. 76.

219. The dictum that any cause which will justify a master in discharging a seaman during the voyage will also deprive the seaman of his wages, held to be an insufficient test; but that the rule should be, that wages may be forfeited, not in cases of discharge for mere misconduct alone, but for such as renders the seamen's discharge imperatively necessary for the safety of the ship and the due preservation of discipline. Ibid. 73.

220. In a suit for wages, where the misconduct of the mariner is set up in bar to his claim, the court has no power to mitigate the penalty (except as provided by statute), but must pronounce for or against the whole claim. Ibid. 87.

221. Quære, are wages already earned forfeitable for subsequent misconduct? Cross v. Hyne, 3 Asp. 80.

222. The plaintiff shipped as mate under articles for a voyage to several named places, if required, and home to a final port of discharge; voyage not expected to exceed twelve calendar months; amount of wages per calendar month, £5 10s., in consideration of services to be duly performed. The mate was left behind at Sulina, and in an action by him claiming wages up to such time as he had been left behind, the jury found that he had been guilty of drunkenness and abusive language, subversive of discipline, and that he was not left behind by wilful misconduct or negligence of the captain, but through his own negligence and misconduct. They declined to find that he had been guilty of desertion. Held, by the majority of the court, (1) that the con-necessarily constitute a bar to a claim for wages for the voyage. Such proceedings do not preclude the court from inquiring into the merits of the case, and making such a decree as the justice of the case requires. Smith v. Treat, Daveis, 266. [AMERICAN.]

(117) Where seamen had forfeited their wages by misconduct on the voyage, and afterwards earned wages, held—(1) that the advance wages stipulated in the shipping articles should be a charge on the forfeited funds; (2) that money advanced on the voyage for clothes, &c., and not stipulated for, should be a charge on the unforfeited wages; (3) that hospital money should be apportioned pro rata on the wages of the whole voyage. The Mentor, 4 Mason, 102. [AMERICAN.]

(118) Strict proof of misconduct in a seaman will be required to prevent him from recovering his wages. Benton v. Whitney, Crabbe, 417. [AMERICAN.]

See 1 Conkling's Admiralty Law, 122; and see generally as to forfeitures, Ibid. 129 et seq.; and 1 Parsons on Admiralty Law, 468, 469, 473, n. 1. [AMERICAN.]

tract was for a succession of voyages of indefinite duration, and that the monthly wages became vested and a debt at the end of each month of service, liable, it might be, to forfeiture under certain circumstances provided for by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104); (2) that as a fact, however, the wages due had not been forfeited under any of the provisions of the statute; and (3) that independently of the statute the findings of the jury did not work a forfeiture of the wages due. Held, by Brett, J., that the consideration for the stipulated wages was the mate's services for the whole voyage out and home; and that, having by his misconduct made it impossible that such services should be rendered, he had forfeited his claim to any part of the stipulated wages. Button v. Thompson, L. R. 4 C. P. 330; 3 Asp. 231.

223. Any question concerning the forfeiture of or deductions from the wages of any seaman or apprentice may be determined in any proceeding as to such wages, notwithstanding that the offence, though made punishable by imprisonment also, has not been made the subject of any criminal proceeding. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 254.

224. An information laid by the mariner against the vessel for trading in slaves, not being a false and malicious act, cannot work a forfeiture of wages. The Malta, 2 Hagg. 172.

2. Masters.*

225. When a loss has been sustained by the owners of a vessel through the negligence or misconduct of the master, mate, or any of the crew, the amount of the loss alone would, according to the practice of the Admiralty Court, be deducted from the wages of the master or mariners so offending. Cases may occur of an attempt to commit barratry, gross incapacity, or continual drunkenness, working an entire forfeiture of wages. The Thomas Worthington, 3 W. Rob. 132, 133; 12 Jur. 1051; 6 Notes of Cases, 570.

226. In the management of the concerns of a vessel in a foreign port, nothing more can be required of a master than the honest exercise of his own discretion, according to the degree of ability and experience in business which a master may fairly be supposed to possess. A mere error in judgment on the part of a master of a vessel, even though loss be thereby sustained by the owners, will not justify a forfeiture of his wages. Ibid. and see The Atlantic, 1 Lushington, 566; 11 W. R. 188; 7 L. T. N.S. 647; 9 Jur. N.S. 183; 1 Asp. 274.

227. Semble, error of seamanship in a master, or neglect to communicate to a Lloyd's agent the stranding of the vessel, or to sign a bottomry bond, may be set up as a counter-claim to his wages. The Camilla, 1 Swabey, 312.

228. A mortgagee took possession of the mortgaged vessel, and gave notice thereof to the master, who, by direction of the mortgagor, went to sea with the man in possession on board. Held, that the master had by such conduct forfeited all claim to wages except those earned before the mortgagee took possession. The Fairport, 10 P. D. 13; 54 L. J. P. D. 3; 5 Asp. 348.

229. If the owners of a vessel were bankrupt, and the master colluded with their agents in a foreign port for the purpose of giving those agents a fraudulent preference in the earnings of the ship, he might forfeit his wages. The Thomas Worthington, 3 W. Rob. 137; 12 Jur. 1051; 6 Notes of Cases, 570.

230. Semble, the loss of the ship's boat may, if ascribed to the master's intoxication, work pro tanto a forfeiture of wages.

chants against the master. The John, Jan. 1858.

231. If the owner of any vessel or float of timber makes satisfaction for such damage, wilfully or negligently done by the master or person having charge of such vessel or float of timber, or has been compelled to pay any penalty or costs by reason of any act or omission of any other person, the person who actually did the damage or who committed the offence shall repay to the owner the amount of the damage or penalty and costs, with the costs of the proceedings to enforce such repayment. See 10 Vict. c. 27, s. 76.

232. And if such damage or penalty respectively does not exceed £50, the sum may, in England or Ireland, be recovered before two or more justices, and in Scotland before the sheriff. Ibid.

See also Nos. 222, 225, supra.

3. Mates.*

234. A chief mate suing for wages in the Court of Admiralty is bound to show that he has discharged the duties of that situation with fidelity to his employers. Amongst the most important of these duties are a due vigilance, care, and attention to preserve the cargo from robbery, but he is not responsible for any embezzlement that may occur, not arising from any neglect of duty on his part. The Duchess of Kent, 1 W. Rob. 285.

235. General neglect of duty or a neglect of duty in a particular instance leading to a robbery of the cargo, would entail a forfeiture of the wages of a chief mate; but neglect of duty in a particular instance (viz. going on shore without leave during the landing of the cargo, and being absent for a long period of time), unless followed up by consequences injurious to the owners, would not entail such a forfeiture. Ibid. 287.

236. The onus of proving such injurious consequences rests with the owners, but direct and positive testimony thereon is not necessary; evidence fairly leading to that presumption is sufficient. Ibid.

237. It is not necessary to prove wilful negligence to bar a claim of a mate for wages. Proof of habitual inattention to the ordinary duties of his station, exposing the ship to danger, is sufficient. Robinett v. The Exeter, 2 C. Rob. 263.

238. Damage to the cargo (for which a deduction of freight had been made) arising from gross negligence of the second mate, held to be pleadable as a set-off against his claim for wages. The New Phoenix, 2 Hagg. 420.

239. In a suit for wages preferred by the mate, the owners claimed to deduct the value of a hogshead of sugar which had fallen overboard while being conveyed from the wharf to the ship's boat, in Jack's Bay, Jamaica, in the absence of the wharfinger, who would have been responsible for the damage had he been present, and it being a rule in Jamaica not to remove goods in the absence of this responsible person. The court, holding that for the interests of commerce it was necessary to protect the principle of law that the owners of vessels are entitled to deduct the losses occasioned by the negligent conduct of seamen, allowed the

(128) The mate and two seamen were sent on shore with a boat, and one of the hands was detached on the business of the ship from the boat; and afterwards, the mate and the other seaman having left the boat, it was stolen. deduction claimed, but without costs. Ibid.

243. If a ship be lost or captured before the end of the voyage the wages are lost. Yeates v. Hall (1785), 1 T. R. 79; Hernaman v. Bawden (1798), 3 Burr. 1844.

244. An officer or seaman engaged to serve on board a privateer having letters of marque for certain wages during the voyage and a share of all prizes, is not entitled to any wages if the ship is taken before she completes her voyage, although he was sent from the ship before the capture as prizemaster on board a prize taken in the course of the voyage. Abernethy v. Laudale, 2 Dougl. 539.

245. If the ship is afterwards recaptured and arrive at her port of destination, the seamen are entitled to their wages. Bergstrom v. Mills, 3 Esp. 36.

246. Where a seaman had been on the capture of the vessel taken out by the enemy and carried to France, and was not on board at the time of a subsequent recapture, held, that the recapture did not revive his right to wages. The Friends, 4 C. Rob. 143.

247. In an action for the wages of a seaman after a capture and ransom of the ship, held, that the seaman was entitled to nothing, he being unable to prove that by the custom of merchants he was entitled pro ratâ, as was insisted on his behalf. See Chandler v. Meade, mentioned at the end of the case of Wiggins v. Ingleton, 2 Ld. Raym. 1211.

248. The master of a vessel which had been seized and restored claimed his wages for the period of detention, although during that time he had been separated from her, she having afterwards earned her freight. The wages for the voyage, exclusive of that period, were paid without dispute, and the defendant is reported to have acquiesced in a verdict given against him for the further sum, by reason of a strong opinion expressed by his lordship at the trial in favour of the claim. Pratt v. Cuff, cited in Thompson v. Rowcroft, 4 East, 43.

5. Illegal Voyages.†

249. Wages cannot be earned, so as to give a lien on the vessel, on an illegal

* (130) Quære, how far does the authority of these cases rest upon the old principle now abrogated (see the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 183, and c. 12, s. 1, p. 2291), that there can be no wages where no freight has been earned?

(131) The capture of a neutral ship does not of itself operate as a dissolution of the contract for mariners' wages, but at most only as a suspension of it. Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumner's Rep. 443. [AMERICAN.]

(132) If the ship is condemned by a sentence of condemnation, the contract is dissolved, the seamen are discharged from further duty on board, and lose their wages; but if there is a subsequent restitution of the property or of its equivalent value upon an appeal or by treaty with an allowance of freight, their claim for wages revives. Ibid. 442; The Saratoga, 2 Gallison's Rep. 178. [AMERICAN.]

† (133) The second section of 7 Geo. 1, c. 21, enacted that all agreements for the wages of any person serving on board any ship in the service of foreigners, and bound or designed to trade in the East Indies or parts therein mentioned, and employed in such voyages, are declared void, but this enactment, though not directly repealed, has been held by the court to be obsolete. See The India, 3 N. R. 442; 33 L. J. Adm. 193; 12 L. T. N. S. 316.

(134) Seamen's wages on an illegal voyage are not a lien on the vessel. The Langdon, 2 Mason's Rep. 58. [AMERICAN.]

(135) Wages are not due if the further prosecution of the voyage becomes illegal by a war, for the original contract is thereby dissolved. The Saratoga, 2 Gallison's Rep. 178. [AMERICAN.]

(136) But if the mariners, after such legal effect of the loss of the voyage, with the consent of the master, remain on board and do duty for the preservation or equipment of the ship, they are entitled to a reasonable compensation in the nature of wages, pro opere et labore. Ibid.

(137) The claim of seamen for wages, and voyage or on an unauthorized expedition of a naval or military character. The Leander, Edwards, 85; and see Delamarier v. Winteringham, 4 Camp. 186; Bergstrom v. Mills, 3 Asp. 36.

250. Claim of a mate of a slave ship for wages, &c., under a contract repugnant to the provisions of the stat. 30 Geo. 3, c. 33 (for the regulation of the slave trade), pronounced against as a turpis contractus, which the court would not lend its assistance to carry into effect. Under the circumstances, the owners being also to blame, no costs given. The Vanguard, 6 C. Rob. 207.

251. A suit for wages on the part of a British pilot, for navigating a foreign ship to an enemy's port, dismissed, but, under the circumstances, without costs. The Benjamin Franklin, Ibid. 350.

252. The condemnation of a vessel for illegal trading, and before freight is earned, does not work a forfeiture of wages to the mariners, unless implicated in the illegal act. The Malta, 2 Hagg. 163.

253. To trade with a blockaded port is not an offence against the municipal law of this country. The law of nations has never declared that a neutral state is bound to impede or diminish its own trade by municipal restriction. The Helen, L. R. 1 A. & E. 1; 35 L. J. Adm. 2; 2 Asp. 293.

254. Action for wages. Pleading in answer that the agreement between the parties was "for the purpose of running the blockade of the Southern ports of the United States, and was and is contrary to law," disallowed. Ibid.

255. Semble, the serving on board a vessel used as a store ship in aid of a belligerent ship, the fitting out of which to be so used is an offence within the 7th section of the 59 Geo. 3, c. 69, is a serving on board a vessel for a warlike purpose in aid of a foreign state within the 2nd section of that act, and is therefore illegal. Burton v. Pinkerton, L. R. 2 Ex. 340; 36 L. J. Ex. 137; 2 Asp. 494, 547.

6. *Mutinous Conduct.

256. Insolent expressions and acts of a mutinous tendency not apologized for, and for which the mariner had been put in irons, held to amount to a forfeiture of wages. The Susan, 2 Hagg. 229, n.

257. Mariners are not discharged from their duty to the owners of a ship in consequence of a mutiny. They are bound, if possible, to recover the ship by using their best endeavours whenever there is a reasonable prospect of success, but not to sacrifice their lives wantonly. The Governor, 2 Dodson, 18.

258. A chief mate, who, unknown to the master, signs, and is active in getting signed, a document tending to mutiny, incurs a forfeiture of his wages. The Lima, 3 Hagg. 356.

259. A chief mate, after having served in that capacity for six weeks while the of material men for supplies, where the parties were innocent of all knowledge of, or participation in, the illegal voyage will be preferred to the claim of forfeiture on the part of government. The St. Jago de Cuba, 9 Wheat. 409. [AMERICAN.]

(138) Seamen cannot claim wages for a voyage, in violation of the slave trade acts, out of the proceeds of the sale of the forfeited vessel in the registry. Ibid. See also 1 Conkling's American Admiralty Law, 138.

* (139) Mutinous and rebellious conduct of the mariners, if persisted in, forfeits their rights to wages. Relf v. The Ship Maria, 1 Fet. Adm. 186. [AMERICAN.]

(140) Seamen are authorized under the general maritime law to prevent or restrain their officers from the commission of open and flagrant crimes in the ship, attempted in the presence of the seamen. The Mary Ann, 1 Abb. Adm. 270. [AMERICAN.]

(141) The crew are not justified, by circumstances affording reasonable ground of suspicion merely, that the master is about to engage the vessel in the slave trade, in taking possession of her at sea, or in a foreign port, and bringing her back to her home port; and their undertaking so to do, forfeits both the wages already earned and those for the residue of the voyage. Ibid.

(142) If the crew combine together not to do duty, it is an endeavour to make a revolt within the Crimes Act of 1790, c. 9 (36), s. 12, although no orders are actually given afterwards. United States v. Barker, 5 Mason, 404; Carey v. Schooner Kitty, Bee, 255; United States v. Gardner, 5 Mason, 402. [AMERICAN.]

(143) An assault by a mariner on the master will produce a forfeiture of wages, and justifies the master in discharging the mariner unless he makes an apology. Buck v. Lane, 12 S. & R. 266. [AMERICAN.]

ship was fitting out, and also between eight and nine months at sea (having been suspended during that time for a week, but afterwards reinstated), was then finally disgraced for neglectful conduct, disrespectful language, and the loss of a boat in his charge, arising from disobedience of orders, and by which two lives were lost. His subsequent conduct while in the ship tended to the creation of mutinous misconduct. In a suit for wages brought by him, held, that such conduct enured to a forfeiture of his wages, and the suit dismissed accordingly, but without costs, the court holding that there were fair grounds for bringing the case before the court, and that there was some degree of passion and imprudence imputable to the master, the sole owner. Decision affirmed on appeal. Ibid. 346.

260. Action for wages. During the voyage the captain died, and the chief mate took upon himself the duties of master. A seaman refused obedience to his orders. Held, that a refusal to navigate the vessel, except to an English port, was mutiny against the master de facto. Renno v. Bennett, 3 Ad. & Ell. 768; 3 G. & D. 54; 6 Jur. 902; 12 L. J. Q. B. 17.

261. The use of intemperate language by the seamen does not touch the merits in a suit for wages, except at a very great distance. The Eliza, 1 Hagg. 185.

7. Insubordination.

(a) Masters.

262. The instructions given to the master of a vessel may be so precise and positive that if he wilfully disobeys them, his disobedience, even though no evil consequences arise, may entail an entire forfeiture of his wages. It must, however, be first shown that he was in possession in the most intelligible form of the real intentions of the owners. The Thomas Worthington, 3 W. Rob.

134; 12 Jur. 1051; 6 Notes of Cases, 570.

263. A master, instead of taking his vessel direct to the port ordered, took her several intermediate voyages on freight for owner's benefit, alleging that, owing to war, it was dangerous to take the vessel to the port ordered. The alleged dangers were known, and were the subject of discussion between the owner and master at the time the port was named. Held, that the master had forfeited his wages for the time the vessel was on the intermediate voyage. The Roebuck, 2 Asp. N.S. 387.

264. A master, through an error in judgment, took in payment of freight an ordinary bill instead of a bank bill, which he had been ordered to take; the bill having been dishonoured: Held, that the master had not forfeited his wages, and that the owners could not deduct the amount of the bill from his wages. The Dunmore, 2 Asp. N.S. 509.

(b) Seamen.*

265. Disobedience of orders being an offence of the grossest kind, it is not a peremptory or harsh tone, or an overcharged manner in the exercise of authority, that will justify resistance. It will not be sufficient that there has been a want of that personal attention and civility which usually takes place on other occasions and might be wished generally to attend the exercise of authority. The persons subject to authority on shipboard are not to be captious, or to take exception to a neglect of formal and ceremonious observance of behaviour. Robinett v. The Exeter, 2 C. Rob. 261.

266. Refusal of mariners to perform their duties is insubordination, not desertion. The Westmoreland, 1 W. Rob. 222.

267. It is not a single neglect of duty nor a single act of disobedience which ordinarily carries with it the forfeiture of wages. The Lima, 3 Hagg. 362, n.

* (145) The wages of seamen are forfeited for gross offences, but not for slight faults, either of negligence or disobedience; there must be either an habitual neglect or disobedience, or a single act of a heinous and aggravated nature. The Ship Mentor, 4 Mason, 84; Drysdale v. The Ranger, Bee, 148. [AMERICAN.]

(146) A refusal to do duty at a moment of high excitement from punishment inflicted on the party, if not followed by obstinate perseverance, is not a forfeiture of wages. Orne v. Townsend, 4 Mason, 541. [AMERICAN.]

(147) It is a mixed question of law and fact whether a mate is bound to obey the order of the master when commanded to punish a mariner. Frost v. Hammatt, 11 Pick. 74. So also, whether the mate used any unnecessary violence in inflicting punishment. Wood v. The Nimrod, Gilpin, 83. [AMERICAN.]

268. The court draws a strong line of distinction between disobedience of orders in port, and any insubordination whatever when the vessel is on the high seas. The Blake, 1 W. Rob. 87, 88.

269. Disobedience of orders and refusal to work by a mariner, during seven days, while the vessel was in a foreign port and in charge of the chief mate (the master being on shore), who was so quarrelsome that he was there discharged with others of the crew, the mariner being admitted to be quiet and inoffensive, and to have conducted himself properly before and afterwards during a long voyage, held, not to work a forfeiture of, nor deduction from, his wages. The Test, 3 Hagg. 315.

270. Disobedience of orders committed in a state of intoxication upon one occasion only, while the vessel was in port, and followed by an efficient performance of duty during the remainder of the voyage, held, though highly reprehensible, not to enure to a forfeiture of wages. Wages accordingly pronounced for, with costs. The Blake, 1 W. Rob. 73.

See also No. 261, supra.

8. Desertion.

(a) Generally.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. V. p. 2179.

(b) After Leave to go Ashore.

271. Mariners having obtained leave to go on shore at a foreign port, got drunk there, and solely in consequence thereof failed to return by the time prescribed. Held, that such conduct was criminal, and a just subject of punishment, but did not amount to desertion enuring to a forfeiture of wages. The Ealing Grove, 2 Hagg. 22.

272. Permission of absence given by a master to a mariner, held, to imply a stipulation to return, though such obligation of return may not have been expressed. The Bulmer, 1 Hagg. 167, 168.

9. Habitual Drunkenness.

(a) Masters and Officers.

273. When it is sought to affect an officer with intemperance, it is material whether the specific acts of drunkenness proved were on shore or on board; for in a mode of life peculiarly exposed to severe peril and exertion, and therefore admitting in seasons of repose something of indulgence and refreshment, that indulgence and refreshment is naturally enough sought in grosser pleasures; and therefore the proof of a single act of intemperance committed in port is no conclusive proof of disability for general maritime employment. Robinett v. The Exeter, 2 C. Rob. 261.

274. Occasional drunkenness of the master will not work a forfeiture of wages, but aliter as to habitual drunkenness. The Roebuck, 2 Asp. 387.

275. Habitual drunkenness on the part of a master works a forfeiture of his wages. The Macleod, 5 P. D. 254; 50 L. J. P. D. & A. 6.

(b) Seamen.*

276. Slight and occasional intoxication will not enure to a total forfeiture of wages, but aliter as to habitual drunkenness. The New Phoenix, 1 Hagg. 198; The Atlantic, 11 W. R. 188; 7 L. T. N.S. 647; 9 Jur. N.S. 183; 1 Lushington, 566; The Duchess of Kent, 1 W. Rob. 285, 286.

277. A single instance of intemperance, particularly when a vessel is at anchor or in port, does not work a forfeiture of wages. Habitual drunkenness must be proved in order to produce such an effect. The Malta, 2 Hagg. 168.

278. In a claim for wages preferred by the steward, two acts of drunkenness on the outward voyage, and more frequent acts on the homeward voyage, arising probably from the undue force given by bodily disease to the moderate use of liquors, held, not to work a forfeiture of wages. The Lady Campbell, 2 Hagg. 5.

279. A seaman's entering the master's cabin in his absence, with three or four others of the crew, and drinking three bottles of wine from a locker left open, and afterwards, though rather tipsy, re-

* (148) Where drunkenness is habitual and gross, so as to induce a general incapacity to perform duty, it is a ground of forfeiture of wages. But where it is only occasional, or leaves much meritorious service behind, it is quite sufficient to recover in damages the amount of the actual or presumed loss resulting from such a violation of the mariner's contract. Orne v. Townsend, 4 Mason, 541. See also Sherwood v. M'Intosh, Ware, 109. [AMERICAN.]

turning to his work, held, to be an irregularity too trivial to incur a forfeiture of wages. The Gondolier, 3 Hagg. 191.

280. For the stipulations usually inserted in shipping agreements as to deductions from pay for occasional drunkenness, see tit. SEAMEN, p. 2142.

10. Smuggling, causing Loss.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. V. p. 2186.

11. Calculation of Forfeiture.

See No. 301, p. 2312.

12. *Waiver.

281. A master who suffers the mutinous conduct of a mariner at the very outset of the voyage to pass with perfect licence and impunity, when it was within his power and duty to redress himself, comes into court with a very ill grace to require redress, by forfeiture of wages, for subsequent ill behaviour. The Ealing Grove, 2 Hagg. 19.

282. A master in a foreign port hired a partially new crew, retaining in the service of his vessel a man, whom, on his afterwards bringing a suit for wages, he charged with having been guilty of embezzlement and disobedience of orders at a time prior to the hiring of the new crew, at which time the embezzlement was known to him. Quære, is not the retention of the man under such circumstances a condonation of those offences? The Test, 3 Hagg. 315.

283. When it is provided by a ship's articles, that any of the crew who shall absent themselves from the ship without leave, shall forfeit their wages, if after one of the crew has so absented himself the master receives him back again and

* (149) A master has power to remit a forfeiture, and his pardon is a reintegration of the seamen in the right of wages. The Ship Mentor, 4 Mason, 84. [AMERICAN.]

(150) When seamen have been guilty of inflamed offences, and serious violations of duty under circumstances of an aggravated nature, if they testify by their subsequent conduct a thorough repentance, and offer amends for the wrong, and show a subsequent exemplary diligence, there is no stubborn rule of law that prohibits the court from mitigating the forfeiture, and giving them the whole or a portion of their wages, according to its discretion. Ibid.

(151) After a mariner has voluntarily left his vessel in a foreign port without leave of the officer in command, and his place has been supplied by another, he cannot acquire a right to be reinstated and to wages, by coming clandestinely on board and remaining concealed from her officers until she is out at sea. The Philadelphia, Olcott, Adm. 216. [AMERICAN.]

(152) The master, under such circumstances, is authorized to compel him to work his passage whilst he continues with the ship, and no engagement to pay him wages can be implied therefrom. Ibid.

(153) If a captain voluntarily discharge a seaman guilty of mutinous and disobedient conduct, and promise to pay his wages, it is a waiver of the forfeiture. Austin v. Dewey, 1 Hall, 238. [AMERICAN.]

(154) If after desertion a seaman offers to return to duty in a reasonable time, and repents of the offence, the master is bound to receive him back unless his previous misconduct justifies his discharge. Cloutman v. Tunison, 1 Sumner, 373; Hutchinson v.

Coombs, Ware, 65. [AMERICAN.]

(155) And if he is again received on board it is a pardon and waiver of the forfeiture. Whitton v. The Brig Commerce, 1 Pet. Ad. 160; Whiteman v. The Ship Neptune, Ibid. 180. [AMERICAN.]

(156) When seamen have been absent without leave, the master by punishing them, and continuing to employ them, waives all claim to forfeiture of wages. The Ship Elizabeth v. Rickers, 2 Paine, C. C. 291. [AMERICAN.]

(157) Shipping articles contained a clause that for certain misconduct the seaman's wages should be forfeited, and in case he should be reinstated or employed afterwards it should not do away with such forfeiture. One who had offended had been discharged, and was afterwards received on board and his wages allowed in his account, was held entitled to recover them. Lang v. Holbrook, Crabbe, 179. [AMERICAN.]

(158) But in such case his wages while absent were deducted, and he was charged with losses and expenses occasioned by his misconduct. Ibid.

(159) A seaman who returns to a vessel after a week's absence without leave, and continues during the rest of the voyage, is to receive his wages at the rate originally contracted for in the shipping articles, unless a new contract is explicitly made. Snell v. The Independence, Gilpin, 140. [AMERICAN.]

(160) The owners of a vessel, by taking the cargo of their master, and saying they find no fault with him, were held to waive his disobedience of orders in sailing on a different voyage from the one he was instructed to follow. Codwise v. Hacker, 1 Caines, 526. [AMERICAN.]

allows him to work like the others, the forfeiture is waived, and the wages are recoverable. Miller v. Brant, 2 Camp. 590; Beale v. Thompson, 4 East, 546.

284. If seamen have incurred a forfeiture of their wages, and in time of distress, when the ship is aground, the captain calls on those seamen to assist in getting her off, this is no waiver of the forfeiture, but if the captain continues them in their work after the peril is over, it is otherwise. Train v. Bennett, 3 Car. & P. 3; M. & M. 82.

285. The master of a ship dismissed for drunkenness, and reinstated on condition of having no spirits on board, violated this condition, and was frequently drunk during the voyage. Held, that he thereby forfeited his wages from the time of his violation of the condition, although he brought the vessel in safety to the end of her voyage. McKellar v. McFarlane, 2 S. M. & P. 123; 15 Court of Sessions Cases (Scotch), 246.

See also No. 287, infra.

17. Deductions.

1. Generally.*

286. The master is to set forth in the account to be delivered to the seaman, twenty-four hours before his discharge (as to which see c. 19, s. 3, p. 2313), all deductions to be made therefrom on any account whatever. Penalty for default not exceeding five pounds, and no deduction from the wages of any seaman (except in respect of any matter happening after such delivery) is allowed unless included in that account. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 171.

286a. The master must, during the voyage, enter the various matters in respect of which such deductions are made, with the amounts of the respective deductions, as they occur, in a book to be kept for that purpose, and must, if required, produce the book on payment of wages, and also upon the hearing before any competent authority of any complaint or question relating to such payment. Ibid.

287. Whenever any seaman contracts for wages by the voyage, the run, or the share, and not by the month or other stated period of time, the amount of forfeiture incurred under this act is an amount bearing the same proportion to the whole wages or share as the calendar month or other period bears to the whole time of the voyage; and if that does not exceed the period for which the pay is to be forfeited, the forfeiture extends to the whole wages or share. Ibid. s. 252.

288. As to the right of any court or functionary to determine any question of

* (161) Loss or damage, accruing to the owner or master by any negligence or crime, may be set off against wages. Thorn v. White, 1 Pet. Ad. 168; Macomber v. Thompson, 1 Sumner, 384. [AMERICAN.]

(162) But only the damage actually sustained by the owner in consequence can be deducted from the wages. Freeman v. Walter, 6 Greenl. 68; Willard v. Dorr, 3 Mason, 161; Macomber v. Thompson, 1 Sumner, 384. [AMERICAN.]

(163) When a seaman ships for a particular service and is found to be not qualified for that duty, the master is authorized to put him to a different service, and make a reasonable deduction from his wages. Sherwood M'Intosh, Ware, 109. [AMERICAN.]

(164) Steward displaced and punished without cause is not bound to serve as cook, and may recover his wages. The Sarah, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 87. [LOWER CANADA.]

(165) A master has no right to withhold a part of the seaman's wages, to indemnify the owners against damages claimed in a suit depending at common law. The Ship Washington, 1 Pet. Ad. 219. [AMERICAN.]

(166) Debts or liabilities of seamen to the master or owner of a vessel for other cause than for misfeasance or non-performance in the duties of their position cannot be set up against their demand of wages. The Hudson, Olcott, Adm. 396. [AMERICAN.]

(167) When a seaman engages for a certain voyage at a fixed rate, his wages shall not be diminished on account of the diminution of the risks of the voyage after its commencement. M'Culloch v. The Ship Lethe, Bee, 423. [AMERICAN.]

deduction from wages in any proceedings for wages, see No. 22, p. 2280.

289. In a case of alleged desertion, the Court of Admiralty can and will inquire into the legality of an order of magistrates under which the mariner had been imprisoned for desertion, so far at least as that imprisonment bears on the question of desertion. The Westmoreland, 1 W. Rob. 224.

2. Agreement as to—

290. For the regulations for maintaining discipline sanctioned by the Board of Trade, and which may be adopted by mutual arrangement in the shipping agreement between master and crew, and the deductions and fines therein allowed, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. p. 2142.

291. In a suit for wages the ship's articles contained a printed clause (usual in the Baltic trade) to the effect that should the vessel winter abroad, on account of the ice, the officers and men agreed to accept half wages during such detention. The ship went out in search of a freight, when the ice prevented her from getting a cargo, but not from sailing without one, and she wintered abroad. Held, that there having been no negligence in endeavouring to procure a freight, the crew were entitled only to such half wages during such her detention. Claim of mariner for whole wages pronounced against, but without costs. The Houghton, 3 Hagg. 100.

3. Detention from Stranding.

292. The detention of a vessel during the winter by stranding in the river St. Lawrence on her voyage to Quebec does not defeat the claim of the seamen to wages during the detention. The Factor, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 183. See also Beale v. Thompson, 3 B. & P. 405; 4 East, 546; 1 Dow. 299, 309; Hadley v. Clarke, 8 T. R. 266; Beystrom v. Mills, 3 Esp. N. P. C. 37.

9. Quitting Ship before secured without Leave.

293. Whenever any seaman lawfully engaged or sea apprentice is guilty of quitting the ship without leave after her arrival at her port of delivery, and before she is placed in security, he is liable to forfeit out of his wages a sum not exceeding one month's pay. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 243, sub-s. 3.

10. Wilful Damage or Embezzlement.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. V. p. 2185.

11. Smuggling, causing Loss.

Ibid. p. 2186.

12. Neglect or refusal to work.

294. No seaman or apprentice is entitled to wages for any period during which he unlawfully refuses or neglects to work when required, whether before or after the time fixed by the agreement for his beginning work. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 186.

295. If a seaman's claim for wages be resisted on the ground that he would not do his work, it is a good answer to this defence to show that the refusal to work was caused by the misconduct of the master, which went to induce the men to incur such forfeitures. Train v. Bennett, 3 Car. & P. 3; M. & M. 82.

13. Wilful Disobedience.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. V. p. 2184.

14. Drunkenness.

296. For stipulations usually inserted in shipping agreements as to deductions from pay for occasional drunkenness, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. II. p. 2142.

297. As to forfeiture of wages for habitual drunkenness, see c. 16, s. 9, p. 2308.

15. *Illness wilfully caused.

298. Where a seaman is by reason of illness incapable of performing his duty, and it is proved that his illness has been caused by his own wilful act or default, he is not entitled to wages during the time he is by reason of such illness incapable of performing his duty. See M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 8.

16. Continued Wilful Neglect of Duty.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. V. p. 2184.

17. Wrongful Complaint of Provisions.

299. If the officer to whom the complaint of the quality or insufficiency of provisions is made, certifies that there was no reasonable ground for such complaint, each of the parties so complaining is liable to forfeit to the owner out of his wages a sum not exceeding one week's wages. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 222.

18. During Imprisonment.†

300. No seaman or sea apprentice, unless the court hearing the case otherwise directs, is entitled to wages for any period during which he has been lawfully imprisoned for any offence. Ibid. s. 186.

19. False Statement of Name and Ship.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. V. c. 18, p. 2186.

20. Calculation of—

301. Whenever any seaman contracts for wages by the voyage the run or the share, and not by the month or other time, the amount of forfeiture to be incurred under this act shall be taken to be an amount bearing the same proportion to the whole wages or share as a calendar month or other period mentioned in fixing the amount of such forfeiture bears to the whole time spent in the voyage; and if the whole time spent in the voyage does not exceed the period for which the pay is to be forfeited, the forfeiture shall extend to the whole wages or share. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 252.

18. Discharge of Seamen.

302. As to the discharge of seamen generally, and in the particular cases there referred to, the mode of such discharges, and the wages to be paid thereon, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. III. p. 2125.

19. *Payment.*1. In Money.‡

303. The payment of seamen's wages required by the 209th section of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is, whenever practicable, to be made in money, and not by bill. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 19.

2. By Bill of Exchange.

304. Where payment of seamen's wages required by the 209th section of the M. S. Act, 1854, c. 104 (on a seaman being left behind abroad, as to which see tit. SEAMEN, p. 2167), is made by bill drawn by the master, the owner of the ship is liable for the amount for which it is drawn to the holder or indorsee. It is not necessary in any proceeding against the owner upon such bill to prove that the master had authority to draw it; and any bill purporting to be so drawn and indorsed, if produced out of the custody of the Board of Trade or of the registrar-general of shipping and seamen, or of any superintendent of any mercantile marine office, is to be received in evidence; and any such indorsement on any such bill made and signed by one of the functionaries therein mentioned is to be received in evidence, and deemed prima facie evidence of the facts stated in such indorsement. See M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 19.

305. For the old cases on this head, see Forsboorn v. Krugor, 3 Camp. 197.

3. Account of Wages and Deductions deliverable Twenty-four Hours before Discharge.

306. Every master shall, not less than twenty-four hours before paying off or discharging any seaman, deliver to him, or to the superintendent before whom he is discharged, a full and true account on a Board of Trade form of his wages and all deductions therefrom. Penalty for breach not exceeding £5; no deduction from the wages of any seaman (except as to any matter happening after such delivery) shall be allowed unless so included. The master shall during the voyage enter the various matters in respect of which such deductions are made, with the amounts of the respective deductions, as they occur, in a book to be kept for that purpose, and, if required, produce such book on payment of wages, and upon the hearing before any competent authority of any complaint or question relating to such payments. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 171, as amended by the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 80), s. 4, sub-s. 2.

4. Period of—

307. The master or owner of every ship shall pay to every seaman his wages in the case of a home trade ship, within two days after the termination of the agreement or at the time when such seaman is discharged, whichever first happens; and in the case of all other ships (except ships employed in the southern whale fishery or on other voyages for which seamen by the terms of their agreement are wholly compensated by shares in the profits of the adventure) within three days after the cargo has been delivered, or within five days after the seaman's discharge, whichever first happens; and in all cases the seaman shall at the time of his discharge be entitled to be paid on account a sum equal to one fourth part of the balance due to him. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 187.

5. Before Superintendent.

(a) *On Discharge.

308. If the seaman consents, the final settlement of his wages may be left to the superintendent of a mercantile marine office under Board of Trade regulations, and the receipt of the superintendent in that case operates as a release by the seaman under sect. 175 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). See the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 80), s. 4, sub-s. 3.

308a. In the event of all or any part of the seaman's wages not being thus settled, then, unless the delay is due to the act or default of the seaman, to any reasonable dispute as to liability, or to any other cause not being the act or default of the owner or master, the seaman's wages shall continue to run and be payable until the time of the final settlement thereof. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

309. When a question as to wages is raised before the superintendent of a mercantile marine office between the master or owner, and a seaman or apprentice, if the amount does not exceed £5, the superintendent may adjudicate, and his decision shall be final; but if he is of opinion the question ought to be decided by a court of law, he may refuse to decide it. Ibid. sub-s. 5.

309a. As to the jurisdiction of superintendents, see c. 2, s. 4, p. 2282.

See tit. SEAMEN, Pt. III. p. 2151.

settlement, the master or owner and each seaman shall in the presence of the superintendent sign on a Board of Trade form a mutual release of all claims, and the superintendent shall also sign and attest it, and shall retain and transmit it as directed: (2) Such release so signed and attested shall operate as a mutual discharge and settlement of all demands between the parties as to the past voyage or engagement: (3) A copy of such release certified under the hand of the superintendent shall be given by him to any party requiring it; and shall be receivable in evidence upon any future question touching such claims, and have all the effect of the original: (4) In cases in which discharge and settlement before a superintendent are required, no payment or discharge otherwise made shall operate or be admitted as evidence of the release of any claim: (5) Upon any payment being made by a master before a superintendent, the superintendent shall, if required, sign and give such master a statement of the amount paid; and such statement shall as between the master and his employer be evidence that he has made the payments therein mentioned. 1. Generally.*

1. Where a man, a dog, or a cat escape quick out of the ship, such ship, or barge,

* (1) The laws relating to wreck were consolidated by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 99, but that act has been repealed, and many of its provisions re-enacted with additional provisions, by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 120.

(2) Wreck, deriving its name from the Saxon wrecc, signifying outcast or abandoned; in Norman French, varech; in Latin, wreccum, or warectum, or ejectus maris, may be divided into two kinds:—1. Wreck cast upon land, which is wreck properly so called, or wreck at common law. 2. Wreck found in or anything in them, shall not be adjudged wreck, but the goods shall be saved and kept by view of the sheriff, coroner, or the king's bailiff, and dethe sea, which, strictly speaking, is improperly called wreck, not constituting wreck at common law, but falling under the cognizance of the Admiralty. Wreck found in the sea may be subdivided into wreck at sea, flotsam, jetsam, lagan, and derelict. Palmer on Wreck, 2.

(3) Nothing shall be called wreck but such goods only as are cast or left upon the land by the sea: quæ naufragio ad terram appellantur, 5 Rep. 106, a.

(4) Wreck at sea is taken to signify a vessel at sea totally disabled by wind and waves, livered into the hands of such as are of the town where the goods were found; so that if any sue for those goods, and after prove that they were his, or perished within his keeping, within a year and a day, they shall be restored to him without delay, and if not, they shall remain to the king or to such others to whom the wreck belongeth. See 3 Edw. 1, c. 4.*

distinguished from flotsam as not a fragment or part of a vessel, and from derelict as not abandoned. 2 Browne's Civil Law, 49; Palmer on Wreck, 2.

(5) Wreck at common law includes vessels or part of vessels, or goods cast by the sea upon land within the body of some county, and there left, not continuing in the possession of the owner, his agents, or mariners. Ibid.

(6) While still in the sea, even when floating between high and low water mark, such things were not regarded by the common law, but were under the jurisdiction of the Admiralty; cast upon the beach, though within the same limits, they came under the cognizance of the common law. Ibid.

(7) Flotsam, according to Lord Coke, is when a ship sinks or otherwise perishes, and the goods float on the sea. 5 Rep. 106. Perhaps all fragments of a vessel or goods found floating on the sea and not reclaimed would come under this denomination. Palmer on Wreck, 3.

(8) Jetsam, is where goods are cast out of a ship to lighten her when in danger of sinking, and afterwards the ship perishes. 5 Rep. 160; Palmer on Wreck, 3. Perhaps it includes all goods so cast out sinking and remaining under water. 1 Black. Comm. 293.

(9) Ligan, lagan, or lagon, according to Lord Coke, who derives it a ligando, is when heavy goods are, to lighten the ship, cast out and sunk in the sea tied to a buoy or cork, or something that will not sink, in order that they may be found again and recovered. Palmer on Wreck, 3; 5 Rep. 106; 1 Black. Comm. 292. It seems rather derived from the Saxon Lizgan, to lie, signifying all goods so laid or sunk in the sea. Palmer on Wreck, 3.

(10) In Scotland, under a law of Alexander 2 (c. 25), corresponding to the English statute (3 Edw. 1, c. 4), when any creature escapes alive from a wrecked vessel, the goods cast away are not accounted wreck, but are to be preserved by the sheriff for those who within a year shall prove their property therein, otherwise escheating to the crown. The admiral is considered the king's donatory of wreck where no special right is shown in another. The prior owners may reclaim wrecked goods on proving their title and paying salvage, though no creature escape alive, and, according to a decision of the year 1725, notwithstanding the year has elapsed. Palmer on Wreck, 49.

(11) Much valuable information with regard to the old law of Scotland upon the subject of wreck as connected with royal and manorial privileges, may be found in the printed papers of the case of M'Dowall v. M'Dowall, House of Lords, 1825.

(12) For the old law as to wreck, flotsam, jetsam, lagan, and derelict, see 2 Browne's Civil and Admiralty Law (2nd ed.), 37, 46—51.

(13) The masters of all vessels, on reporting inwards at the custom-house, are to state whether they have fallen in with or picked up any wreck, and the particulars thereof, and a copy thereof is to be sent by the customs officer to the receiver of wreck for the district. See Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers of Wreck, 1886, App. K. p. 132.

* (14) This statute being but declaratory of the common law, these three instances are put but for examples. 2 Inst. 167, 168.

(15) Although the statute only speaks of wreck, yet it refers also to flotsam, jetsam, and lagan. Ibid.; 22 Vin. Abr. 539.

(16) By the general law, things found in the open sea, common to all nations, still belong to the first occupant. The posthumous treatise of Lord Hale expressly states that "flotsam, jetsam, lagan, and other sea estrays, if taken up in the wide ocean, belong to the taker of them, if the owner cannot be known," limiting the right of the crown to such things taken up within the king's seas. Hale, de Jure Maris, c. 7; Hargrave's Law Tracts, 41; see also 1 Comm. 295; 2 Comm. 402; Palmer on Wreck, 8.

(16a) For further information as to the wreck register, annually compiled by the Board of Trade, see the forthcoming Second Report and Evidence of the Royal Commission on Loss of Life at Sea, and in particular the evidence of Mr. Gray, Under-Secretary of the Board, thereon.

(17) For instructions to the constabulary of Ireland as to wrecks and wrecked property, see same of April 22, 1870, in Appendix I. to the Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers and others as to Wrecks, Casualties, and Salvage, 1886, Appendix I. p. 131.

(17a) If treasure be found in the sea, the finder shall have it. 2 Inst. 168; 22 Vin. Abr. 541.

(18) Vessels sunk at sea are not "wrecks," but when found are derelict, and he who finds and recovers them has a lien on them for salvage. Baker v. Hoag, 3 Seldon, N. Y. 555. [AMERICAN.]

(19) The owner's right of property is not lost by abandonment, but the possession is left vacant. The Bee, Ware, 332; Whitwell v. Wells, 24 Pick. 25. [AMERICAN.]

(20) No length of time will divest the owner of property found derelict upon the

2. As to the construction of the term "wreck" as including jetsam, flotsam, lagan, and derelict found in or on the shores of the sea or any tidal water, and of the term "receiver," as meaning any person appointed in pursuance of this act receiver of wrecks, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 2.

3. Any officer in command of any ship of her Majesty on any foreign station, or, in his absence, any consular officer may summon a naval court, (1) Whenever the interest of the owner of any British ship, or of the cargo of any such ship, appears to such officer to require it. (2) Whenever any British ship is wrecked or abandoned or otherwise lost at or near the place where such officer may be, or whenever the crew or part of the crew of any British ship which has been abandoned or lost abroad arrives at such place. Ibid. ss. 260, 261—266.

4. Wreckum maris, or wreck of the sea, is in legal understanding applied to such goods as, after shipwreck at sea, are by the sea cast upon land. Sir H. Constable's case (1369), 5 Rep. 106; 2 Inst. 167.

5. Wreckum maris is not such in legal acceptation till it comes ashore, until within the land jurisdiction; while at sea it is flotsam, jetsam, or lagan. Above high water mark it belongs to the lord of the manor, but below low water mark he can have no claim. Between high and low water marks it is divisum imperium; when the tide covers this space it is sea; when it recedes it is land, and within the jurisdiction of the manor. If the article be floating, it belongs to the sea, and is not wreckum maris, but flotsam. If it become fixed to the land, though there be some tide round it, it may be considered as wreckum maris; but if it have merely touched the ground, and be again floating about, its character will depend upon its state when seized. The King v. Two Casks of Tallow, 3 Hagg. 298.

6. Wrecks of the sea or shipwrecks are bona waviata, and when the sea has brought them to land they are within the land jurisdiction; but to constitute a legal wreck the goods must come to land. If they continue at sea they are jetsam, flotsam, or lagan. The King v. Forty-nine Casks of Brandy, 3 Hagg. 276, 292.

7. Neither flotsam, jetsam, nor lagan are called wreck of the sea so long as they remain in or upon the sea; but if any of them are driven to the land by the sea, they shall then be called wreck; so that flotsam, jetsam, and lagan pass by the grant of wreck. Sir R. Constable's case (1369), 5 Rep. 106; 2 Inst. 167; but see 5 Co. 107.

8. Things which have once touched the ground, though afterwards afloat, do not thereby necessarily become the property of the lord of the manor. Things having become fixed on the shore, and afterwards the sea leaving them and then returning, quare wreck or droits. The King v. Thirty-two Casks of Tallow, 3 Hagg. 299.

9. Casks picked up, having taken the ground between high and low water mark, though still moved by the waves, the sea at one time surrounding them and at another leaving them dry, held to be wreck of the sea. The King v. Forty-nine Casks of Brandy, ibid.

10. Goods cast into the sea to disburthen a ship in a storm, and never intended for merchandize, are wreck when cast on the shore, without any shipwreck. Shepherd v. Gosnold (1671), Vaugh. 168.

11. Spanish dollars more than 100 years old, found in the sands of a sea-shore, will be presumed to have come there by the loss of some vessel which was wrecked, although no part of any vessel be found near them. Talbot v. Lewis, 6 Car. & P. 603. (Parke.)

12. A ship was struck by another ship during a storm, and deserted by her crew for some hours, and when again taken possession of was on shore much damaged and full of water. Her cargo was also much damaged, and was taken out to lighten the ship, which was then got off, and sold for one-third her previous value. Held, that neither ship nor cargo were "wreck" within the meaning of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 50 (Customs Act) now repealed. Legge v. Boyd, 1 C. B. 92; 9 Jur. 307; 14 L. J. C. P. 138.

13. Timber found floating, without an apparent owner, at sea, having drifted sea. It will be restored upon the payment of salvage according to the circumstances. Wilkie v. Brig St. Peter, Bee, 82. [AMERICAN.]

(21) Restitution upon payment of salvage will be adjudged in all cases, if the original owners can be found. British Consul v. Smith, Bee, 178. [AMERICAN.]

from the place where it was moored in a river, is not "wreck" within the meaning of that word as defined by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 2. Palmer v. Rouse, 3 Hurl. & Nor. 505.

14. Priority of seizure is a fact of no importance in determining whether property be wreck of the sea or a droight of Admiralty. The Pauline, 2 W. Rob. 358; 9 Jur. 286; 3 Notes of Cases, 616.

15. Accidental loss to various portions of property (wreck and droights) claimed by two parties, it not being ascertainable to which party in particular the property damaged belonged, decreed to be apportioned between the parties in proportion to their claims on such property. The King v. Forty-nine Casks of Brandy, 3 Hagg. 293.

16. Goods to constitute wreck must be actually cast on to the shore. It is not sufficient that they have been taken while floating close to the shore by some one wading out to them. The Derelict Timber, 9 Ir. Eq. 619. [IRISH.]

17. Goods thrown up by the sea between high and low water mark shift and vary in character with circumstances. They are wreck while the tide is out and they lie on the beach, and if then taken by the grantee by patent of wreck cast upon the shore, they become his property. But if they are left to the action of the waves, and are again floated by the tide coming in, they then become droights of Admiralty. Ibid.

18. Harbour commissioners were empowered to levy dues on goods, merchandise, wares or commodities imported into the harbour, in any ship or unloaded out of any ship, coming into the harbour or landed within the precincts of the harbour. A vessel was wrecked in the harbour, and the wreckage partly drifted, and was partly brought ashore within the precincts of the harbour. Held, that the commissioners could not exact dues on the wreckage. Wallace v. Fraserburgh Harbour Commissioners, 4th Series, vol. 3, p. 368. [SCOTCH.]

19. A barge found adrift near the West India Docks, in the river Thames, held, not to be "wreck" within the meaning given to that word by sect. 2 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). The Zeta, L. R. 4 A. & E. 460; 44 L. J. Adm. 22; 3 Asp. N.S. 73.

20. As to the liability of the hundred for damages in the case of a ship wrecked being plundered by a tumultuous assemblage, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 477.

21. As to the powers of the Board of Trade, with the consent of the Treasury, to purchase rights to wreck, Ibid. s. 474.

22. For provisions as to wreck and salvage in various British Colonial Courts and British Courts in foreign countries, see tit. SALVAGE, Pts. II. and III. pp. 1899—1901.

2. Jurisdiction.

1. Of the Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice.

See tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. p. 638.

2. Of the High Court of Admiralty.*

23. It is accorded and assented that the admirals and their deputies shall not meddle from henceforth of anything done within the realm, but only of a thing done

* (22) Although, strictly speaking, the Court of Admiralty has no jurisdiction over questions of wreck, yet incidentally in suits for salvage the court has jurisdiction. 2 Chitty's Gen. Prac. 531.

(23) The Court of Vice-Admiralty for Lower Canada has no jurisdiction in a claim of property to an anchor, &c., found in the river St. Lawrence, in the district of Quebec. The Bonulus, Stuart's Vice-Adm. Rep. 208. [LOWER CANADA.] See also Hamilton v. Fraser, Stuart's Lower Canada Rep. 21, 36 et seq.; and Barnes' case, 2 Roll. Rep. 157, cited in 1 East, 308.

(24) When it is said by the common law authorities that the Admiralty has not jurisdiction over wreck of the sea, the term is to be understood to signify not that which is in the sense of the maritime and commercial law deemed wreck or shipwrecked property, but "wreck of the sea," in the purely technical sense of the common law, and constituting a royal franchise and a part of the revenue of the crown of England, and often granted as such royal franchise to lords of manors. This and this only is excluded from the Admiralty jurisdiction in England. The United States v. Coombs, 12 Peters, 72. [AMERICAN.]

(25) If goods of the description of flotsam, jetsam, and lagan, are taken up at sea and brought on shore, the Court of Admiralty has jurisdiction. Aliter, if they are cast on the land by the sea. Lacaze v. Pennsylvania, Addis. 63. [AMERICAN.]

upon the sea, as it hath been used in the time of the noble prince, King Edward, grandfather of our lord the king that now is. 13 Rich. 2, c. 5.

24. It is declared, ordained, and established that of all manner of contracts, pleas, and quedeles, and all other things rising within the bodies of the counties, as well by land as by water, and also of wreck of the sea, the admiral's court shall have no manner of cognizance, power, nor jurisdiction; but all such manner of contracts, pleas, and quedeles, and all other things rising within the bodies of counties, as well by land as by water, as afore, and also wreck of the sea, shall be tried, determined, discussed, and remedied by the laws of the land, and not before nor by the admiral, nor his lieutenant in any wise. 15 Rich. 2, c. 3.

25. Prohibition lies to the Court of Admiralty in a suit there for wreck; for by the stat. 15 Rich. 2, c. 3, wreck is expressly mentioned to be determined by the law of the land. 4 Inst. 134, 154.

26. So also, if the suit there be for goods floating upon the sea and afterwards cast upon the land, for that is wreck. 1 Rol. 531, l. 40.

27. So if the suit there be for flotsam when it was wreck. 1 Rol. 529, l. 25; 2 Mod. 294.

28. If flotsam come to land, and be taken by him who has no title, the action shall be brought at common law, and no proceedings shall be had thereon in the Court of Admiralty, for there is no need of condemnation thereof as there is of prizes. Lady Wyndham's case (1697), 2 Mod. 294.

29. The Admiralty has jurisdiction over things flotsam, jetsam, and lagan, as being in and upon the sea. 2 Inst. 167; Sir H. Constable's case (1369), 5 Rep. 106;

The King v. Forty-nine Casks of Brandy, 3 Hagg. 282; S. P. Raym. 96.

30. The Admiralty has no jurisdiction over wreck of the sea, for that must be cast on the land before it becomes wreck. Ibid.

31. The jurisdiction of the Admiralty subsists as long as the shore is covered with water. The jurisdiction of the common law attaches when it is left dry. The Pauline, 2 W. Rob. 358; 9 Jur. 286; 3 Notes of Cases, 616.

32. The Court of Admiralty of Ireland, although possessing to the fullest extent its ancient jurisdiction in cases of wreck and droits of Admiralty, is not since the passing of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 99, bound to enforce its jurisdiction upon the application of the Queen's Proctor, where the wreck and droits of Admiralty have been properly taken possession of by the receiver-general of droits appointed by that statute, or his deputy lawfully authorized. Receiver-General of Droits v. Watt, Her Majesty's Procurator-General, 4 Ir. Jur. 253.

3. Receivers of Wreck.

1. Generally.*

33. For provisions as to the appointment and jurisdiction of receivers of wreck, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 439, 440.

34. Receivers hold their offices during the pleasure of the Board of Trade. See the M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), s. 11.

35. As to the duties of receivers in the cases of ships stranded or in distress off the coasts of the United Kingdom, see tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. c. 4, p. 1795.

36. For powers of receiver to suppress plunder and disorder by force, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 444.

37. As to penalties for plundering, wreck to be sent by receivers to the secretary at Lloyd's, and the fees for such reports, Ibid. pars. 110—114, p. 27.

(31) As to the mode of dealing by receivers with owners' claims to wreck property, Ibid. pars. 102—109, pp. 25—27.

(32) As to priority, telegrams from receivers of wreck to the Board of Trade, in regard to wrecks and shipping casualties, Ibid. par. 83, p. 21.

(33) As to the co-operation of the coast-guard with receivers of wreck, Ibid. pars. 217—230, pp. 50—52, and in Ireland of the constabulary, Ibid. pars. 231, 232, p. 52, and App. I. p. 131.

* (26) As to the duties of receivers in regard to sunken, stranded, or abandoned vessels, see Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers of Wreck and other Officers, 1886, par. 84, p. 22.

(27) As to what constitutes wreck, derelict, jetsam, flotsam, and lagan, Ibid. pars. 88—92, p. 23.

(28) As to the master when present being treated by the receiver as the agent of the owners until it is proved such agency has been put an end to, Ibid. par. 195, p. 46.

(29) As to wrecked property of the general lighthouse authorities, Ibid. par. 96, p. 24.

(30) As to notices of wreck to be posted at the custom-house and as to the reports as to selling abroad, and obstructing the saving of shipwrecked property, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), ss. 478, 479.

38. As to the importation duties on foreign goods wrecked, and powers for the transmission of such goods to their port of destination, Ibid. ss. 499, 500.

39. As to the duties of receivers in regard to wreck as connected with salvage, see tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. c. 4, p. 1794.

2. *Custody.

40. All cargo and other articles belonging to any ship or boat stranded or in distress off the coast of the United Kingdom washed on shore, or otherwise lost or taken from such ship or boat, shall be delivered to the receiver; penalty not exceeding one hundred pounds against any person, whether the owner or not, who secretes or keeps possession of any such cargo or article, or refuses to deliver the same to the receiver or to any person authorized by him; and the receiver or other person so authorized may take such cargo or article by force from the person so refusing to deliver the same. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 443.

41. For provisions imposing a forfeiture of salvage on persons finding or taking possession of wreck without giving up possession thereof, or the required notice thereof to the receiver of wreck of the district, Ibid. s. 450.

42. For provisions that in cases of concealed wreck being seized by receiver of wreck in consequence of information given to him, the informer shall be entitled by way of salvage to such sum not exceeding £5 as the receiver may allow, Ibid. s. 451.

3. Foreign Consuls in the United Kingdom.

See c. 4, s. 2, p. 2323.

4. Sale.†

43. If no owner or grantee of the crown establishes his claim to wreck before the expiration of such period of a year, the receiver shall forthwith sell the same, and after payment of all expenses attending such sale, and deducting therefrom his fees and expenses, and paying salvage to the salvors as the Board of Trade may determine, pay the same into her Majesty's Exchequer as the Treasury may direct, and the same shall be part of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom. Ibid. s. 475.

44. Whenever any ship, boat, cargo, apparel, or wreck is detained by any receiver for non-payment of salvage, and the parties liable to pay the same are aware of such detention, then, in the following cases:—(1) Where the amount is not disputed, and payment is not made within twenty days after it is due; (2) Where the amount is disputed, but no appeal lies and payment is not made within twenty days after the decision; (3) Where the amount is disputed, and an appeal lies to some other tribunal, and payment is not made within such twenty days, or process or other proceedings in the appeal are not taken out or instituted within such twenty days; the receiver may forthwith sell the property, or a sufficient part thereof, and out of the proceeds after payment of all expenses defray all sums of money due in respect of expenses, fees, and salvage, paying the surplus, if any, to the owners or other parties entitled to receive the same. Ibid. s. 469.

5. Delivery.‡

45. Upon delivery of wreck or of the proceeds of wreck by any receiver to any person in pursuance of the provisions of the eighth part of the principal act, such receiver shall be discharged from all liability in respect thereof, but such delivery shall not be deemed to prejudice or affect any question concerning the right or title to the wreck which may be raised by third parties, nor shall any such delivery prejudice or affect any question concerning the title to the soil on which the wreck may have been found. See the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 52.

* (34) As to the delivery by the finder of wreck, whether ship or property, to the receiver, see Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers of Wreck and other Officers, 1886, pars. 117, 120, 121, p. 28.

(35) As to the custody of wrecked property by receivers, Ibid. pars. 84—121, pp. 22—28.

† (36) As to the sale of wreck or other property by receivers, Ibid. pars. 138—147, p. 33, and par. 211, p. 50.

(37) As to the commission to auctioneers on the sale of anchors and chains by receivers, Ibid. par. 144, p. 33.

‡ (38) As to the delivery up of wrecked property when arrested by the Admiralty Court, but reserving the receiver's rights to his fees, Ibid. pars. 132—137, p. 30.

(39) As to the delivery up by the receivers of wreck property to its owners, Ibid. pars. 189—198, p. 45.

46. As to the delivery up of wreck to owners, see No. 1, p. 2315; Nos. 55, 56, infra, and to lords of manors, Nos. 47, 48, and 92—107, infra.

6. Lords of Manors, &c.

47. In cases where any admiral, vice-admiral, lord of the manor, or other person is entitled for his own use to unclaimed wreck found on any place situate within a district for which a receiver is appointed, such person shall deliver to such receiver a statement containing the particulars of his title, and the address to which notices are to be sent; and upon such statement being so delivered, and proof made to the satisfaction of the receiver of the validity of such title, it shall be his duty, whenever he takes possession of any wreck found at any such place, to send within forty-eight hours thereafter a description of the same and of any marks by which it is distinguished, directed to such address as aforesaid. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 454.*

48. In the event of no owner establishing a claim to wreck found in any place in the United Kingdom, before the expiration of a year from the date at which the same has come into the possession of the receiver, then, if any such admiral, vice-admiral, lord of any manor, or other person as aforesaid has given notice to and has proved to the satisfaction of the receiver that he is entitled to wreck found at such a place, the receiver shall, upon payment of all expenses, fees, and salvage due in respect of such wreck, deliver up possession thereof to such person; and in case of dispute as to the amount payable, and also in case of default in payment, such dispute shall be determined and payment enforced as in cases where any owner establishes his claim to wreck. Ibid. s. 471.

7. Fishing Vessels and Gear.†

49. All fishing boats, all rigging, gear, or other appurtenances of fishing boats, all nets, buoys, floats, or other fishing implements whatsoever found or picked up at sea shall, as soon as possible, be delivered to the receiver of wreck if the article saved be taken into the United Kingdom, and to the commissary of marine if the article saved be taken into France. See the Sea Fisheries Act, 1868, (c. 45), 1st Sched. Art. 22.

50. The receiver of wreck or the commissary of marine, as the case may be, shall restore the articles saved to the owners thereof, or to their representatives, and fix the amount which the owners shall pay to the salvors. Ibid.

51. All fishing boats, all their small boats, all rigging, gear, or other appurtenances of fishing boats, and other fishing implements whatsoever, found or picked up at sea, shall be as soon as possible delivered to the competent authority of the first port which the salvor boat returns to or puts into. Such authority shall inform the consul or consular agent of the country to which the boat of the salvor belongs, and of the nation of the owner of the articles found. The same authority shall restore the articles to the owners or their representatives as soon as the articles are claimed, and the interests of the salvors properly guaranteed. See Art. 25 of the International Convention for regulating Fisheries in the North Sea, in Schedule to the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22).

51a. Fishing implements of any kind found unmarked shall be treated as wreck. Ibid.

See also tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. pp. 1797, 1850.

8. Carcasses.‡

* (40) The Board of Trade, not the receiver of wreck, will judge of the sufficiency of such proof. Ibid. par. 200, p. 48.

(41) In most cases of such manorial rights, only wreck washed ashore is included, and not wreck found floating. Ibid. par. 203, p. 48.

(42) And see as to wreck bumping. Ibid.

(43) As to the duties of the receiver when such claims are admitted by the Board of Trade, in sending notice of such wreck and in dealing therewith, Ibid. pars. 109—209, p. 48.

(44) As to payments to lords of manors, Ibid. par. 210, p. 49.

† (45) As to fishing-boats, nets and tackle, except those used for salmon fishing, being included under wreck, Ibid. par. 94, p. 24.

(46) For a list of the distinctive marks which have, pursuant to Art. V. of the International Convention, scheduled to the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22), been assigned by the respective foreign governments parties to that convention to their fishing-boats and appliances in the North Sea, Ibid. and App. D. p. 125.

‡ (47) As to the burial in Great Britain and Ireland of carcasses of cattle, animals, and fishes royal washed ashore, Ibid. pars. 122—131, p. 29.

9. *Fees and Expenses.

52. As to the fees of receivers of wreck, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 455, Table V. annexed thereto, and Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers as to Wreck, Casualties, and Salvage, anno 1886, pars. 234—283, pp. 53—63.

52a. As to the determination by the Board of Trade of disputes as to fees and expenses payable to receivers of wreck, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 456.

53. See as to fees of receivers for taking depositions, and as to such fees being recoverable like salyage, Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers of Wreck and others as to Wrecks, Casualties, and Salvage, anno 1886, pars. 234—242, pp. 50—55.

10. Serjeants of the Cinque Ports.

54. The serjeants of the Admiralty of the Cinque Ports, their deputies or other officers, shall perform their duties during the pleasure and subject to the directions of the Board of Trade; and all such officers shall possess in their districts the same powers, rights, and privileges, and perform the same duties, as are by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), committed to receivers, save that they shall not be entitled to take the command in cases of ships or boats stranded or in distress, unless authorized so to do by the Board of Trade. See M. S. Repeal Act, 1854 (c. 120), s. 11.

54a. As to the payment of such serjeants, deputies, and other officers, Ibid. ss. 12, 13.

4. Consuls.

1. British Consuls Abroad.†

* (48) As to the fees, expenses, and remuneration of receivers and coastguard, see Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers of Wreck and other Officers, 1886, pars. 234—264, pp. 53—60; and as to their accounts and returns, Ibid. pars. 265—283, pp. 60—63.

† (49) If parts of the ship or goods are washed on shore, or otherwise found out of the custody of the master or crew, the consul will, so far as he is able, claim and keep the goods for the owners or insurers, or their agents; he will communicate with Lloyd's agent, and will do his utmost to co-operate and act in harmony with him; he will give to the owners notice of the wreck and of the goods in his possession, and will deliver or deal with them subject to the payment of proper fees and expenses, as the lawful claimants may direct. Board of Trade Instructions to Consuls, 1883, par. 208, p. 60.

(49a) The consul's duties with respect to wrecked goods apply not only to vessels stranded within the bounds of the consulate, and their cargoes, but also to any portion of such ship or cargo which may be brought into the consulate in consequence of any wreck or disaster at sea. Ibid. par. 209.

(50) If any ship's papers are found, the consul will collect them, and after marking them and keeping a note of them, will restore them to the owners. For this purpose the consul may send them either to the Board of Trade or otherwise, as he thinks best. Ibid. par. 210.

(51) The consul will, at the earliest opportunity, communicate any particulars relating to the wreck or damage of British ships and their cargoes to the persons interested. This may be done either directly or through the Board of Trade, if the parties reside in this country, or in any other way the consul may think best. Ibid. par. 211.

(52) In cases in which wrecked property comes into the possession of the consul, and neither the owner nor the master, nor any authorized agent, can be found or communicated with, the consul may, if the case requires it, sell the property, or such part of it as is perishable or not worth the expense of warehousing, for the benefit of those interested; but in such cases, neither the consul, nor those employed by him, must be interested to any extent, directly or indirectly, in the purchase of the articles. If the lawful claimants cannot be found, and the property is not claimed by the local authorities, he will, after the expiration of a reasonable time, sell the property and remit the proceeds to the Board of Trade, to be dealt with as droits of Admiralty. Ibid. par. 212.

(53) The consul will interpose his good offices with the local authorities to obtain the reduction or remission of duties on goods, which, on account of shipwreck or jettison, it is necessary to sell in the country. In this he will be guided by the treaties, and will bear in mind that the principle adopted in this country, and which her Majesty's Government would wish to see universally adopted, is that such goods should be admitted for consumption in the country where the wreck takes place to the same extent and on the same terms as if they had been imported in a ship of that country. Ibid. par. 213, p. 61.

(54) When cases of general average occasioned by jettison are brought before the consul, he will take all the means in his power to ascertain if the jettison was necessary, and the loss thereby occasioned real,

2. Foreign Consuls in the United Kingdom.

55. In case of wreck of foreign ships on or near the coast of Great Britain, the consul-general of the country to which the ship belongs, or any consular officer of such country authorized in that behalf by any treaty or agreement with such country, is to be deemed the owner. See 18 & 19 Vict. c. 91, s. 19.*

56. Whenever any articles belonging to or forming part of any foreign ship which has been wrecked on or near the coasts of the United Kingdom, or part of the cargo thereof, are found on or near such coasts, or are brought into any port in the United Kingdom, the consul-and if he has any reason to suppose that any fraud or improper act has been committed by the captain or crew to the injury of the owners, or insurers of the ship or cargo, he will take steps to inform them, and to enable them to procure the requisite evidence. He will also report the case to the Board of Trade, sending the depositions or other evidence in manner mentioned in paragraph 200. Ibid. par. 214.

(55) Whenever any British ship is wrecked, lost, or abandoned within the limits of the consulate, it will be the British consul's duty to give every assistance in his power towards saving the lives of those on board, and preserving the property for the owners. Ibid. p. 59, par. 202.

(56) In countries where the consul is authorized by treaty to interfere he will, so far as the treaty permits, require the local authorities to allow him to act accordingly, and to prevent the interference of improper and unauthorized persons. He will also demand the restitution of property saved, subject to salvage and other proper expenses. If any difficulty is thrown in his way, contrary to the spirit of the treaty, he will represent the case to the British Minister, or to her Majesty's Secretary of State. Ibid. par. 203.

(57) If the master, or any other competent officer of the ship, is present, the consul will not, unless there is reason to suspect foul play, interfere with any steps they may take for saving the ship or cargo, but will give such assistance as may be in his power, and so if any other authorized agent of the owners is present. The consul will, however, consider himself bound to do whatever may be necessary with the local authorities, and will require the master or agent to pay any expenses which he (the consul) has properly incurred. Ibid. par. 204.

(58) In cases of death on board the vessel the consul will endeavour to ascertain the identity, will see they are buried, and will report their names and descriptions to the general of the country to which such ship, or, in the case of cargo, to which the owners of such cargo, belong, or any consular officer of such country authorized in that behalf by any treaty or agreement with such country, shall, in the absence of the owner, master, or other agent, be deemed to be the agent of the owner, so far as relates to the custody and disposal of such articles. See M. S. Act Amendment Act 1855 (c. 91), s. 19.

5. The Crown and its Grantees.

1. Generally.†

57. The king shall have wreck of the Board of Trade. Ibid. par. 205.

(59) The consul will give his best assistance in settling the claims of salvors at the place, which claims will be determined according to the law of the place. Ibid. par. 206.

(60) Where the salvor, whether in her Majesty's service or not, and the master of the ship saved, agree between themselves for the purpose, they may enter into an agreement for the former to abandon his lien upon the property saved, and for the latter to abide the adjudication of the Court of Admiralty, or of any Vice-Admiralty Court, and give security for payment of the salvage to be adjudged. See thereon, and as to the statements on both sides to be thereupon made and transmitted, tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. Nos. 951, 952, p. 1877.

* (61) The countries with which such treaties or agreements have been made are—Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Chili, Columbia, France, Greece, Honduras, Italy, Netherlands, Peru, Portugal, Prussia, Russia, Salvador, Sandwich Islands, Spain. See Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers of Wreck, &c., 1886, par. 196, p. 47.

(62) As to the duties of the receiver in such cases, and to communicate the wreck or stranding to the consul or consular authority with as little delay as possible, Ibid.

(63) In the case of those countries with whom no treaty exists, the receiver will do his utmost to act in harmony with the consul or consular agent, but will not deliver the property to him except on proof that he is acting as agent for the owners of the property, or as agent for the consul-general of the country to which the owners of the property belong. Ibid.

(64) For the declaration between the British and French Governments for regulating the mode of dealing with the proceeds of vessels wrecked upon the coasts of the two States, signed at London, June 16, 1879, see 14 Hertslet's Collection of Treaties, p. 1202.

† (65) The king shall have flotsam, jetsam, sea throughout the realm. See 17 Edw. 2, c. 11.*

58. Wreck of the sea is a perquisite royal. Sir Henry Constable's case, Dav. Rep. 56 b.; 5 Rep. 107.

59. By the ancient common law all property stranded belongs to the king until the owner is found. He is to protect it for the owner for a year and a day, after which it belongs to him entirely. When a claim is made with a reasonable prospect of proof, his right of custody ceases, and he has no further interest in the property. The Augusta, 1 Hagg. 18, 20.

60. The sea is the property of the king, and so is the land beneath it, except such part of that land as is capable of being usefully occupied without prejudice to navigation, and of which a subject has either had a grant from the king, or which he has exclusively used for so long a time as to confer on him a title by prescription. Benest v. Pipon, 1 Knapp, P. C. C. 67.

and lagan when a ship perishes, or when the owner of the goods cannot be known. This right attaches though they are in or upon the sea, for the sea is of the allegiance of the king, and parcel of his crown of England. 5 Rep. 107; 16 Vin. Abr. 577.

(66) By the common law, as declared by the statute De Prerogativa Regis, 17 Edw. 2, stat. 2, c. 11, the king is entitled to wreck. 1 Black. Comm. 290.

(67) The prevention of the barbarous practice of destroying the property of the shipwrecked was the object of the law in conferring this prerogative on the king. Cro. Jur. Belli, 117, 132, 141; 2 Inst. 167; Molloy, 237; Moor, 224; Hale de Jure Mar. 40.

(68) Wreck may belong to the subject either by grant from the king or by prescription. 2 Inst. 168.

(69) The law of England gave to the sovereign, jure coronæ, all wreck cast upon land, and it similarly gave to the sovereign by his prerogative, afterwards to the Lord High Admiral jure regis, as of the sovereign's gift, flotsam, jetsam, lagan, and all wreck found in the sea, at all events in the narrow seas, or in any haven, port, or creek, or arm of the sea, on the coasts. In many places wreck cast upon the land was granted by the crown to lords of manors or others. In some places it has been long enjoyed by prescription, presumed founded on a grant from the crown. The right to wreck by prescription may be attached to an honour, as to that of Arundel, or to a county, as all wreck on the Cornish coast belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall unless otherwise specially prescribed for. A subject may also have flotsam and jetsam by the king's grant, and may have flotsam between high and low water mark by prescription. All unreclaimed wreck, however, cast upon land, where not so granted out by the crown or enjoyed by prescription, is still vested in the sovereign, forming part of the casual revenues of the crown placed at the disposal of parliament by her present Majesty during her life, and, by statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 2, to be carried to the consolidated fund. So unreclaimed wreck at sea, flotsam, jetsam, lagan, and derelict (where there is no grant or prescription to the contrary), having been anciently annexed to the office of lord high admiral, still constitute droits of Admiralty. These droits are now vested in the sovereign as lord high admiral, but are included in the casual revenues of the crown surrendered as before mentioned. Palmer on Wreck, 5.

(70) In the Isle of Man unreclaimed wreck, whether cast on the shore or found in the sea within the headlands of Man, now belongs to the crown. Ibid. 50.

(71) Property lagan belongs to the king if no owner appear to claim it, but if any owner appear he is entitled to recover the possession; for even if it be cast overboard without any mark or buoy in order to lighten the ship, the owner is not by this act of necessity construed to have renounced his property; much less can things lagan be supposed to be abandoned, since the owner has done all in his power to assert and retain his property therein. 1 Black. Comm. 292.

(72) As to the right of the crown to property derelict, see Maclachlan on Merchant Shipping (3rd ed.), p. 630; and to wreck, Ibid. p. 640.

(73) An arm of the sea is where the sea flows and reflows. 2 Rol. 169, l. 12.

(74) And every arm of the sea or navigable river, so high as the sea flows and reflows, belongs to the king, and he has the same property therein as in alto mari. Dav. 56; 2 Rol. 170, l. 20.

(75) The king has the property tam aquæ quam cæli, and all profits in the sea and all navigable rivers. Cal. 17; Dav. 56, 57; 14 Com. Dig. 260.

(76) So the property of the soil in all rivers which have the flux and reflux of the sea belongs to the king, and not to the lord of the manor adjoining, without grant or prescription. 1 Sid. 148, 149; 14 Com. Dig. 260.

(77) Every haven and port of common right belongs to the king. Dav. 56.

(78) And a grant to the subject is not good, for a subject cannot have it. 1 Rol. 5.

(79) A subject may by grant or prescription have the interest in the water and soil of navigable rivers, as the city of London has the soil and property of the Thames by grant. Dav. Rep. 56 b; 4 Com. Dig. 260.

* (80) This is not a new law, but only a declaration of the common law, which existed antecedently to the statute. Bl. Com. 315; Britt, 27, cap. 17; 16 Vin. Abr. 577.

61. The bed of all navigable rivers where the tide flows and reflows, and of all estuaries or arms of the sea, is by law vested in the crown, but subject to the right of navigation by subjects of the realm, and anchorage is one of the rights of navigation. The grantee of the crown, therefore, takes, subject to this right of navigation, and is not entitled to demand any payment for anchorage, although such payments have been made time out of mind, unless he has given some consideration for them, as the creation of a port or harbour. Gann v. Free Fishers of Whitstable, 35 L. J. C. P. (H. L.) 29; 2 Asp. 179.

62. During the Russian war, one of the Queen's ships of war, on her passage to Odessa, fell in with and took possession of a raft of timber, having the Russian imperial mark painted on the several spars composing the same. Held, that such timber must be condemned as a droit of the crown, and not a droit of Admiralty. Anon. Raft of Russian Timber, 5 Jur. N.S. 1109.

63. A ship was seized in port for the king, as for a forfeiture by reason of importation of prohibited goods; she was also seized in port by the officers of the Admiralty as a droit and prize of war. Held, that the importation was a forfeiture to the crown antecedent to the seizure for the lord high admiral. The 9th of June, 1709, cited in The Dickenson, Hay & Marriott, 18.

64. The grantee of wreck has a special property in all goods stranded within his liberty, and may maintain trespass against a wrong-doer for taking them away, though such goods were part of a cargo of a ship from which some persons escaped alive to land, and though the owners within a year and a day claimed and identified them, and though the taking was before any seizure on behalf of the grantee. Dunwich, Bailiffs, &c., of v. Sterry, 1 B. & Ad. 8, 831.

65. A vessel without any living creature on board had been driven against a precipitous cliff, and the timbers and cargo washed on shore at some distance. Held, that this was not the case of a vessel stranded or run ashore, the custody of which by statute belonged to the officers of the customs, but a wreck, and that the goods belonged to the donatory of the crown. Marquess of Breadalbane v. Smith (Exchequer), Jan. 28, 1850; 12 D. 602. [SCOTT.]

66. As to the rights of the king as lord high admiral when he held that office, see next section.

2. The Lord High Admiral.*

67. The king holds the office of lord high admiral in a capacity distinguishable from his regal character. The Mercurius, 1 C. Rob. 81.

68. The rights of the lord high admiral are of great antiquity and splendour, and are entitled to great attention and respect. At the same time, it is not to be understood that an extension of these rights beyond their absolute limits is to

* (81) The office of lord high admiral being now in commission, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty are entitled to droits of Admiralty. These, however, are to be distinguished from droits of the crown belonging to the sovereign, jure coronæ. See Anon. Raft of Timber, 5 Jur. N.S. 1109.

(82) As to the droits or perquisites of the lord high admiral, see 2 Brown's Civil and Admiralty Law (2nd ed.) 45.

(83) As to prize droits, see a learned report, dated 31st March, 1857, by the then registrar of the High Court of Admiralty (H. C. Rothery, Esq.), now the Wreck Commissioner to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, on the nature and origin of such droits and the disposal thereof, from the earliest period to the close of the late Russian war.

(84) See further as to prize droits, Pritchard's Admiralty Digest (1st ed. p. 145), and Pritchard's Prize Digest, preparing for publication.

(85) As to bona piratarum, see Pritchard's Admiralty Digest (1st ed.), tit. PIRATES, 288; and Pritchard's Prize Digest, preparing for publication.

(86) All derelict res being primâ facie droits of the Admiralty, their owners can neither obtain restitution of the res nor defend an action for salvage, until they have proved their ownership. This is done by an affidavit and claim of the claimant accompanied by documentary evidence of the ownership, such as the register of the ship or the bill of lading of the cargo. These proofs are delivered to the Admiralty proctor, and are submitted by him to her Majesty's advocate-general and the advocate of the Admiralty. If the evidence be satisfactory, the Admiralty proctor will consent to the res being restored to the claimant, and the court on such consent will decree the restitution, on the Admiralty proctor's expenses being paid and bail given to answer the salvage. Coote's Admiralty Practice, 101.

be favoured by construction; they are parts and parcels of the ancient rights of the crown, communicated by former grants to that officer under a very different state and administration of his office from that which now exists in practice. The Rebeckah, 1 C. Rob. 229; The Maria Françoise, 6 C. Rob. 297.

69. As long as the office of lord high admiral, though now residing in the person of his Majesty, continues in this kingdom to have a legal existence, it is extremely proper that the droits and perquisites of the office should continue as anciently distinguished, and that they should be strictly determined, as if the proceeds were carried in the ancient and distinct course. The Gertruyda, 2 C. Rob. 218.

70. Semble, that the possessions of the East India Company have been so incorporated with the rights and interests of the kingdom, that the claims of the lord high admiral would extend there, and attach on seizures made there, as well as in other ports. The Maria Françoise, 6 C. Rob. 282.

71. Wreck may be claimed by prescription and may belong to the lord high admiral by prescription, for it is an ancient office, time whereof, &c. Wigan v. Branthwaite (1700), 12 Mod. 260.

72. The grants from the crown of these rights will be construed strictly against the grantee, as all grants of the crown are. The Rebeckah, 1 C. Rob. 229; The Gertruyda, 2 C. Rob. 219.

73. All ships forsaken by the company belonging to them are the lord high admiral's, unless a ship commissioned have given occasion to such dereliction, and the ship so left be seized by such ship pursuing, or by some other ship commissioned then in the same company, and in pursuit of the enemy; and the like is to be understood of any goods thrown out of any ship pursued. Order in Council of 6 March, 1605-6.

74. Droits of Admiralty are, with other hereditary revenues of the crown, directed to be carried to the credit of the consolidated fund, certain fixed revenues having been granted to the crown in lieu thereof; but power is reserved to the crown of granting out of the proceeds of droits rewards to seizers or informers. See 1 Will. 4, c. 25, s. 2; 1 Vict. c. 2, s. 2; and the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 53.

75. By the general law all goods found afloat and derelict on the high seas belong, as droits, to the crown in its office of Admiralty. The King v. Forty-nine Casks of Brandy, 3 Hagg. 270.

76. Derelicts are prima facie droits. They are so until a claim is allowed, though they do not become actual droits until a year has expired without such a claim, till when they are only derelicts. The Thetis, ibid. 235.

77. By the marine law the lord high admiral has the custody of derelicts found at sea; and if no owner appear, they become perquisites of Admiralty. The Aquila, 1 C. Rob. 42; The King v. Property Derelict, 1 Hagg. 384.

78. As to what is derelict, see The Aquila, 1 C. Rob. 42; The Clarisse, Swabej, 130; and tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. p. 1881.

79. A vessel derelict, waterlogged, and very disabled, was met with by another vessel, the master and mate of which fished down the hatchway of the derelict, and dragged up certain property, which they afterwards used up and shared amongst their crew. A monition at the instance of the king in his office of Admiralty was decreed against them to show cause why the same should not be brought into the registry, to be proceeded against as droits of Admiralty. The property having been afterwards brought in by the master pursuant to the monition, and with an affidavit as to the goods found, and his ignorance of the law requiring a condemnation thereof, the property was condemned as a droit of Admiralty, and on a prayer of the master for a salvage remuneration, a moiety thereof decreed to him. The King v. Property Derelict, 1 Hagg. 383.

80. The goods of pirates go to the crown as droits of Admiralty. The Helen, 1 Hagg. 144.

81. The proceeds of sale of a cargo piratically seized condemned as droits of Admiralty, and an application of the original owners for the same refused. Decision affirmed on appeal. Ibid. 142.

81a. Property recaptured from pirates, if unclaimed, belongs to his Majesty, in his office of Admiralty, as bona vacantia. The Marianna, 3 Hagg. 208.

82. Bona piratarum, i. e. goods or property strictly belonging to pirates, are droits of Admiralty, to which the lord high admiral is entitled, but goods or property found in their possession are not droits, and the admiral is not therefore entitled thereto. Certain dollars taken from pirates and unclaimed, held, under the circumstances, to be bona piratarum and condemned as droits. An application for a monition against all persons having interest to show cause why they should not be condemned to her Majesty, jure corona, refused. The Panda, 1 W. Rob. 423, 435.

83. The grant to the lord high admiral of bona piratarum must be construed to be of the proper goods of the pirates themselves, and not of those which the pirates stole from other men, to which the owners are entitled. Roll. Rep. 285, pl. 1; 6 Vin. Abr. 526.

84. When the lord high admiral proceeds pro interesse suo upon his royal grant of bona piratarum, i. e., the goods of pirates, not of others unlawfully taken on the seas by them, he must show that the party has been attainted of piracy. The Hercules, 2 Dodson, 373.

85. It is essential to the validity of the lord high admiral's claim to bona piratarum that the persons charged as being pirates should have been convicted, or where this is impossible, as in the case of the total destruction or escape of all the pirates, that there should be a judicial declaration that the property captured was the property of pirates. Such a demand of law is satisfied by the fact of pirates having been convicted in a court of the United States, which is tantamount to a conviction in a criminal court of this country, as the courts in both countries are equally courts of nations. The Panda, 1 W. Rob. 437.

86. The proceeds of sale of a cargo piratically seized, and afterwards condemned as a droit of Admiralty, granted to the original owners upon a memorial to the crown, the expenses having been first deducted. The Helen, 1 Hagg. 143.

87. Priority of seizure is a fact of no importance in determining whether property be wreck of the sea or a droit of Admiralty. The Pauline, 9 Jur. 286; 2 W. Rob. 358; 3 Notes of Cases, 616.

88. Of fifty-nine casks of brandy claimed (though forty-nine only were proceeded against), six picked up on the high sea upwards of three miles from low water mark decreed to be droits of Admiralty; thirty-eight picked up outside low water mark, but within three miles thereof, similarly decreed to be droits; five picked up afloat between high and low water mark, but never having touched the ground, and not having therefore become wreck of the sea, similarly decreed to be droits; three picked up aground, the tide being out, between high and low water mark, decreed to the claimant as wreck of the sea; five picked up, having taken the ground between high and low water mark, though still moved by the waves, the sea at one time surrounding them and at another leaving them dry, held, as not on the high sea, but as wreck of the sea, and decreed to the claimant; one picked up afloat, though the land underneath was dry at low water, even in neap tides, decreed to be droits; one picked up aground, decreed to the claimant. The King v. Forty-nine Casks of Brandy, 3 Hagg. 257.

3. *The Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports.

89. Seem, that wreck belonged to the admiral about the Cinque Ports and such places where he was most conversant in ancient time. Wiggin v. Branthwaite (1700), 12 Mod. 260.

90. A whale discovered by some fishermen three miles from the shore, and towed by them on to Whitstable beach, held, to belong to the lord warden of the Cinque Ports, as found and taken within his jurisdiction, and not to the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral of England, on the ground that the crown was entitled to the whale as a royal fish, and that having apparently from the patents of both functionaries granted such rights to both the claimants, the grant to the lord warden, as being held to be the more ancient office of the two, excluded the like grant to the lord high admiral. The Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports v. The King in his Office of Admiralty, 2 Hagg. 438.

91. As to the jurisdiction of the lord warden, his court and officers within the Cinque Ports, see tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. I. p. 676; and in cases of salvage, see tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. p. 1793.

4. Lords of Manors.†

92. Lords of manors are grantees of the crown of those royalties and privi-

* (87) The barons of the Cinque Ports claim to be wreck free by charter of Edw. 1. Plac. t. Edw. 1; Palmer on Wreck, 38.

† (88) In Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark, all wreck cast upon the shore or within reach of a person standing on the shore (ex-leges which may be established by the grants themselves or by immemorial custom, but the grantees cannot stand on higher ground than the crown, nor can their grants avail against the general principle of law as to property stranded. The Augusta, 1 Hagg. 19.

93. Manors being part of the corpus comitatús, manorial rights are land jurisdictions, but the crown in many instances has granted the royalties of certain manors to subjects. In most manors on the sea coast the lords claim the royalty of wrecks, and prove their right as against the crown by the usage of taking them, and by the exercise of such right never having been questioned. The King v. Two Casks of Tallow, 3 Hagg. 297.

94. Usage is not in itself good, as against the crown, except as evidence of a grant from it. Prima facie all goods without an owner belong to the crown, and if a claim be set up against it, the party setting it up must show an actual grant or usage from which such a grant may be presumed as might have been made conformably with the law. Ibid.

95. Unless the place where a wreck is situated at the time of taking possession thereof be intra corpus comitatús, the lord of the manor claiming in that capacity merely can have no right or title thereto. Regina v. The Pauline, 9 Jur. 288.

96. Wreck of the sea is land revenue, and is generally granted to the lord of a manor on the coast. The King v. Forty-nine Casks of Brandy, 3 Hagg. 288.

97. The rights of lords of manors can exist only as long as the land is left dry. The Pauline, 2 W. Rob. 358; 3 Notes of Cases, 616; 9 Jur. 286.

98. A vessel stranded within low water mark and abandoned, and taken possession of on the part of the lord of the manor, at a time when the tide being on she was surrounded with deep water, was claimed by the crown as a droit of Admiralty, and by the lord of the manor as wreck of the sea. Claim of the crown allowed. Ibid.

99. Things which have once touched the ground, though afterwards afloat, do not thereby necessarily become the property of the lord of the manor. Things having become fixed on the shore, and afterwards the sea leaving them and then returning, quære, wreckum maris or droits? The King v. Two Casks of Tallow, 3 Hagg. 299.

100. Claim of a lord of a manor against the king in his office of Admiralty and founded on certain ancient grants from the crown of the castle and manor of Corfe, its rights and privileges, wreck of the sea, &c., to the ancestor of the claimant and his heirs, privileged thereunder to exercise the office of admiral in those parts, pronounced against, so far as the same extended to an asserted jurisdiction of three miles from low water mark on the high sea, or to things flotsam, jetsam, or lagan thereon; such grants being held to confer immunities to the extent of the usual land jurisdiction only, that is, to low water mark at low water. The King v. Forty-nine Casks of Brandy, 3 Hagg. 257.

101. A ship cannot be considered wreckum maris, nor the claim of the lord to wreck sustained, unless at the time of taking possession, she is either on the actual shore itself, or left high and dry on land. A derelict seized on land covered by the sea condemned as a droit of Admiralty, and claim of the lord of the manor thereto as wreckum maris pronounced against. The Pauline, 9 Jur. 286; 2 W. Rob. 385; 3 Notes of Cases, 616.

102. When in the grant of an island or coast estate the word "wrak" stands in connection with the word "waith" (derelict), it has the same meaning as wreck, and does not mean sea ware. Lord Advocate v. Hebdien, 3rd Series, vol. 6, p. 439. [SCORCH.]

103. A crown charter of 1632, granted an island enumerated inter alia in the tenendas clause "wrak, waith, ware," as conveyed to the defender's predecessor in title, but the words did not occur in the dispositive clause. In subsequent crown charters by progress, the above rights were enumerated in the dispositive clauses. In an action by the crown claiming wreck (wrak) against the defender, held (Lord Curriehill dissenting), that the defender had produced a sufficient title to form the foundation of a prescriptive right, and that on the evidence he had established uninterrupted perhaps the island courts would admit the prior owner's claim if proved though a year and a day had elapsed. Palmer on Wreck, 49.

possession for more than forty years. Ibid.

104. Held, by Lord Curriehill, in the minority that the defender was bound to establish exclusive and uninterrupted possession for forty years, and had failed to do so. Ibid.

104a. Claim of a lord of a manor to two casks of tallow picked up on the coast pronounced against, such casks being held having only touched the ground, and being afloat, though between high and low water mark, to be flotsam and not wreck, and to belong therefore to the king in his office of Admiralty, as droits. Claimant's costs allowed out of the droits. The King v. Two Casks of Tallow, 3 Hagg. 294.

105. No admiral, vice-admiral, or other person, under whatever denomination, exercising Admiralty jurisdiction, shall as such, by himself or his agents, receive, take, or interfere with any wreck except as hereinafter mentioned. See M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 440.

106. If any dispute arises between the receiver and any such admiral, vice-admiral, lord of any manor, or other person, as to the validity of his title to wreck, or if divers persons claim to be entitled to wreck found at the same place, the matter in dispute may be decided by two justices like disputes as to salvage. Ibid. s. 472.

107. If any party to such dispute is unwilling to refer the same to two justices, or, having so referred the same, is dissatisfied with their decision, he may within three months from the expiration of such year, or from the date of such decision, take such proceedings as he may be advised in any court of law, equity, or Admiralty having jurisdiction in the matter, for establishing his title. Ibid. s. 473.

See also c. 3, s. 6, p. 2321.

6. Droits of Admiralty.

See c. 5, s. 2, p. 2325.

7. Fishes Royal.*

108. The king shall have wreck of the sea throughout the realm, whales and great sturgeons taken in the sea or elsewhere within the realm, except in certain places privileged by the king. See 17 Edw. 2, c. 11.

109. The king shall have the great fishes of the sea, as whales, sturgeons, &c., which are pisces regales, and no subject can have them without special grant of the king. Ibid. Dav. Rep. 56 a; 7 Co. 16 a; Stamford, Prer. R. 37, 38; Bracton, lib. 3, cap. 3; 39 Edw. 3, 35 a.

110. The right of the sovereign to royal fish, by which appellation whale and sturgeon are characterized, is a clearly established prerogative of the crown. It may transfer these rights. The Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports v. The King in his Office of Admiralty, 2 Hagg. 441.

111. Every navigable river, so high as the sea flows and reflows therein, is flumen regale, and the fishery of it is also royal fishery, and belongs to the king by his prerogative. Royal Fishery of the Banne, Dav. Rep. 56; 16 Vin. Abr. 577; 2 Rol. 170, l. 20.

112. According to Selden, it is sufficient if the king have the head, and the queen the tail, of a whale. Seld. Fleta, 61, lib. 1, cap. 46. But of a sturgeon the king shall have the whole by his royal privilege. Ibid. cap. 45; 16 Vin. Abr. 577.

113. A lord of the manor prescribed to have royal fish, and thereby claimed a porpoise taken; but by Belknap, where a fish is taken in the high sea, it belongs to the taker. 39 Edw. 3, 35 b; Br. Prerogative, pl. 35; 16 Vin. Abr. 577.

114. A man by grant or prescription may claim royal fish, as balanus et sturgesiones, within his manor, or have a free fishery in a bay or creek of the sea. Dav. 57 a; 4 Com. Dig. 448.

8. Removal of—

1. Generally.†

115. For removing unserviceable vessels and other obstructions from the harbour,

* (89) The lord high admiral is entitled to royal fish, as whales, sturgeons, &c., not granted to the lords of manors and others. Sir L. Jenkins, vol. i. p. 89.

(90) As to the delivery up to the receiver of fishes royal, i. e., whales, porpoises, sturgeons, and other very large fish, see Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers of Wreck and other Officers, 1886, par. 118, p. 28.

But in Scotland caaing (or small) whales are not fishes royal. Ibid. par. 119 and App. F. p. 128.

† (91) The modern enactments relating to the removal of obstructions to navigation are contained in the Harbours, Docks and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), the Dockyard Ports Regulation Act, 1865 (c. 125), and the Removal of Wrecks Act, 1877 (c. 16). In addition dock, or pier, and keeping the same clear, see The Harbours, Docks, and Piers' Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 52.

116. The terms "harbour," "tidal water," "harbour authority," "conservancy authority," and "general lighthouse authority" are defined by sect. 3 of the Removal of Wrecks Act, 1877 (c. 16), s. 3.

117. The Removal of Wrecks Act, 1877, does not apply to ships belonging to her Majesty. Ibid. s. 2.

118. Where any vessel is sunk, stranded, or abandoned in any harbour or tidal water under the jurisdiction of a harbour or conservancy authority, or near any approach thereto, so as in the opinion of the authority to be, or be likely to become, an obstruction or danger to navigation there, the authority may take possession of and raise, remove, or destroy the whole or any part of the vessel, and may light or buoy it in the mean time, and sell, as it thinks fit, the vessel or part so raised or removed, and any other property recovered under these powers, and out of the proceeds reimburse themselves for their expenses; and hold the surplus, if any, in trust for the persons entitled thereto. Ibid. s. 4.

119. But except in the case of perishable property, or which would deteriorate by delay, no sale shall be made until seven clear days' notice has been given by advertisement in some local newspaper circulating in or near the district. Ibid. s. 4, sub-s. 1.

120. At any time before sale the owner is entitled to have the property delivered to him on payment of the fair market value, to be ascertained by agreement between the authority and the owner, or, failing such agreement, by some person to be named for the purpose by the Board of Trade, and the sum so paid shall be deemed the proceeds of sale. Ibid. s. 4, sub-s. 2.

120a. Where any vessel is sunk, stranded, or abandoned in any fairway, or on the sea-shore, in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man, or any of the adjacent seas or islands, and there is no harbour or conservancy authority having power to raise, remove, or destroy it, the general lighthouse authority for that part of the United Kingdom in or near which the vessel is situate shall, if in their opinion the same is or is likely to become an obstruction or danger to navigation, have the powers in relation thereto conferred by this act upon a harbour or conservancy authority. Ibid. s. 5.

121. All expenses incurred by the general lighthouse authority, and not reimbursed as provided by this act, are to be paid out of the mercantile marine fund. Ibid.

122. This act applies to every article or collection of articles forming part of the tackle, equipments, cargo, stores, or ballast of a vessel as if included in the term "vessel," and any proceeds of sale of a vessel and her cargo, or any property recovered therefrom, is regarded as a common fund. Ibid. s. 6.

123. Any question arising between a harbour or conservancy authority and a general lighthouse authority, as to their respective powers under this act in relation to any place in or near an approach to a harbour or tidal water, is, on the application of either, to be referred to the Board of Trade, whose decision is final. Ibid. s. 7.

124. The powers of this act are in addition to and not in derogation of any other powers. Ibid. s. 8.

125. See tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. c. 6, p. 1234; and Board of Trade Instructions to Receivers of Wreck and others as to Wrecks, Casualties, and Salvage, anno 1886, par. 84, p. 22.

126. The harbour-master may remove any wreck or other obstruction to the harbour, dock, or pier, or the approaches to the same, and also any floating timber impeding the navigation, and the expense of such removal shall be repaid by the owner. The harbour-master may detain such wreck or floating timber for the expenses, and on non-payment, on demand, may sell the same, and out of the proceeds pay such expenses, rendering the overplus, if any, to the owner on demand. See the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 56.

127. For provisions in case of any vessel sunk or stranded in any harbour, port, channel, or navigable river, to summons the owner, master, or person in charge before one or more justices, who, on conviction, shall issue his warrant for its removal; and unless the owner gives security within five days to do so, shall make sale thereof, and thereout pay the charges of such removal. The conviction is to be final, but the sale is not to be made until five days after the distress. See 19 Geo. 2, c. 22.

128. As to the liability of harbour authority for non-removal of obstruction, see Dormont v. Furness Railway Company, 11 Q. B. D. 496; 5 L. J. Q. B. 331; 49 L. T. 134; 5 Asp. 127.

(c) *In the Jurisdiction of Lighthouse Authorities.

129. See for the powers of the general lighthouse authority in parts where there is no harbour or conservancy authority, Nos. 116, 120, 121, and 123, supra.

(d) In Dockyard Ports.

130. The Queen's harbour-master may remove any wreck, floating timber, or other obstruction to the dockyard port or its approaches. See the Dockyard Ports Regulation Act, 1865 (c. 125), s. 13.

131. The expenses incurred by the Queen's harbour-master in the removal of any such wreck, timber, or other thing, or in the removal or placing of any such vessel, shall be repaid by the owner; the Queen's harbour-master may detain, and in case of non-payment of the expenses, on demand, may sell the property, and out of the proceeds pay the expenses, rendering the surplus (if any) to the owner, on demand; any deficiency may be recovered from the owner. Ibid. s. 15.

(e) The Thames.

132. For similar provisions in the Thames, see the Thames Conservancy Act, 1857 (c. 147, L.), ss. 86, 87.

(f) The Mersey.

133. Section 59 of the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act of 1858 (c. 92, L.), in regard to the removal of wrecks, and charging the expenses thereof on the master or owners referred to in the Digest, p. 183, No. 519, is repealed by the Mersey Docks Act, 1874 (c. 30, L.), s. 16, which empowers the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board to remove wrecks of vessels or cargo sunk or stranded in any docks or elsewhere within the port of Liverpool, or the sea channels leading thereto, forming an obstruction to the safe and convenient navigation thereof, and to sell the same, and apply the proceeds thereof towards the expenses of such removal.

134. The Board may also remove or destroy wrecks, timber, anchors, or other obstructions, in the dock, or elsewhere in the persons causing such obstruction are, if the obstruction is of a character to injure the property of the public, to take all precautions to avoid such injury. Jolliffe v. The Wallasey Local Board, 2 Asp. 146; 29 L. T. N.S. 582. Without statutory authority, no one has a right to cause an obstruction in a navigable river, though at the time it may not be a nuisance, lest it become in future an impediment to navigation. Att.-Gen. v. Terry, 2 Asp. 174; 29 L. T. N.S. 716. This even applies to the case of a private river where there are two riparian owners each entitled to the soil ad medium filum aque, and one of the owners erects an obstruction on his own half of the soil. Birkett v. Morris, 14 L. T. N.S. 835; The Douglas, 5 Asp. 15.

* (92a) The expenses incurred by general lighthouse authorities in pursuance of the Removal of Wrecks Act, 1877, are subject to the provisions of ss. 422, 423 and 427 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854. See the Merchant Shipping (Fees and Expenses) Act, 1880 (c. 22), s. 5.

the port or its approaches, at the owner's expense, and on non-payment may sell and retain the expenses out of the proceeds, and if the proceeds are insufficient, may recover the expenses like penalties. See Mersey Dock Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.), s. 59.

135. Masters of vessels in the river obstructing the entrance to any dock, pier, or stage, are to remove them when required by dock officers. Penalty for breach £10, and the expense of removal by the Board to be also paid by the master. Ibid. s. 53.

135a. For provisions enabling the Board to run dry any dock, or lower the water therein for repair or cleaning it, and remove any vessel therefrom after notice to the master, without responsibility for any damage thereby caused to any such vessel or cargo, and for the recovery of the expenses of such removal, see the Mersey Dock Acts Consolidation Act, 1858 (c. 92, L.), s. 56.

136. Unserviceable vessels encumbering the docks may be removed after four months and sold, and the expenses of the removal retained out of the proceeds. Ibid. s. 58.

See also TRADE, BOARD OF—, Pt. III. p. 2265, No. 243.

(g) The Gloucester and Berkeley Canal.

137. For provisions as to removal of vessels sunk or otherwise obstructing the navigation of the canal, see the Gloucester and Berkeley Canal Act, 1870 (c. 61, L.), s. 68, and Bye-law of Nov. 21, 1884.

137a. Penalty against the master, 20s. for every hour the obstruction is wilfully continued after notice. Ibid.

138. If the master neglects to remove the obstruction, the company's officers shall remove it without delay, unloading the vessel if necessary; and shall seize and distrain all or part of the lading until the charges have been paid. Ibid.

(h) Falmouth.

139. If any vessel is sunk or stranded in the harbour, the harbour master may, if the owner or master neglects to remove it within a reasonable time, not exceeding twenty-eight days, cause it to be weighed and raised, and the expense shall be repaid by the owner of the vessel and cargo. The harbour master may retain the vessel and cargo for the expenses, and on non-payment after one week from demand, may sell the vessel and cargo, pay such expenses, and render the overplus, if any, to the owners on demand. The harbour master may remove any wreck or floating timber which impedes the navigation, and the expense of removal shall be repaid by the owners. The harbour master may retain the property until repayment of such expenses, and on non-payment, after one week from demand, may sell it, pay such expenses, and render the overplus, if any, to the owner on demand, or if no owner, to the receiver of wreck. See Falmouth Harbour Bye-laws, allowed June 5, 1871, No. 11.

139a. Subject to the powers of receivers of wreck, every owner, master or other person who attempts or causes to be broken up, any vessel or wreck in the harbour, without permission of the harbour master, penalty, not exceeding £5. Ibid. No. 10.

140. All vessels laid by as unfit for sea, the harbour master may cause to be, at the expense of the owner, placed in or removed to such part of the harbour or other locality where it may, without injury, be placed, and the charges of such removing or placing may be recovered from the owners in conformity with the 57th section of the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27).

(i) Penarth.

141. As to the removal of vessels unserviceable or obstructing navigation, see Bye-laws of the Penarth Harbour Dock and Railway Authorities, allowed, Aug. 18, 1882, No. 1 (d).

(j) Great Yarmouth.

142. For provisions for the raising by the harbour master or other duly qualified officer of the commissioners, of sunken vessels after twenty-four hours' notice to the owner or master, and in default of security being given for the removal and the removal taking place within seven days after such security is given, see the Great Yarmouth Port and Haven Act, 1866 (c. 247, L.), s. 65.

143. For provisions authorizing the harbour master or other officer, if the removal be impracticable, or practicable only at a disproportionate expense, to blow her up or otherwise get rid of the remains, Ibid.

144. The expenses incurred by the harbour master or other officer in weighing or removing or destroying the vessel and getting rid of the remains, are to be repaid to the commissioners by the owner or master, and if not paid within three days after demand the commissioners may sell all or part of the vessel and its furniture or the remains, and apply the net proceeds to the repayment of the expenses, returning the overplus (if any) to the owner. Ibid.

145. For provisions authorizing the commissioners to remove any nuisance or obstruction in or near the haven or rivers likely to be injurious thereto, or to the navigation thereof, after notice in writing to the person committing or permitting the nuisance or obstruction served personally upon him or left at his last known place of abode or business, to remedy or remove the same within a reasonable time to be therein specified. Penalty for non-removal after notice within the time specified not exceeding £5, and £5 a week during the time the offence continues. Ibid. s. 66.

146. For provisions in case of failure after such notice to remove any nuisance or obstruction authorizing the commissioners after the time specified in the notice to effect such removal, and charge to the owner or occupier the expenses, which are made recoverable in any court of competent jurisdiction, or as a penalty under the act. Ibid. s. 68.

3. Vessels laid by or neglected.

(a) Within Limits of Harbours, Docks, or Piers.

147. For provisions enabling the harbour master to cause any vessel laid by or neglected as unfit for sea service, and lying within the limits of the harbour, dock, or pier, to be removed therefrom at the expense of the owner and laid upon any part of the strand, sea-shore, or other place where it may be placed without injury to any person, and to recover the expense of such removal from the owner by summary complaint in England or Ireland before a justice, and in Scotland before the sheriff, and, in case of refusal or neglect to pay such charges within seven days after they are awarded by such justice or sheriff, empowering the harbour master to levy such charges by distress and sale of the property or any part thereof, and the justice or sheriff to issue his warrant accordingly, see the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 57.

(b) In Dockyard Ports.

148. No vessel laid by or neglected as unfit for sea service is permitted to lie in any part of a dockyard port specified by Order in Council under this act. The Queen's harbour master may cause every such vessel to be removed therefrom, and laid on the strand, sea-shore, or other place where it may without injury be placed. See the Dockyard Ports Regulation Act, 1865 (c. 125), s. 14.

4. Timber.

149. For provisions empowering harbour masters to remove floating timber in the harbour, dock, or pier, or the approaches thereto, to detain the same for payment of expenses, and to charge the owner with the expenses, and in default of payment to sell the property and pay the balance, if any, to the owner, see the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 27), s. 56.

149a. Timber which was moored in a river, and drifted to sea in consequence of its fastenings giving way, held, not to be wreck within the meaning of sects. 458, 460 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). Palmer v. Rouse, 3 H. & N. 505; 27 L. J. Exch. 437.

See also tit. COLLISION, p. 240.

9. Inquiries into Wrecks.

150. For provisions empowering receivers to institute examination with respect to ships in distress, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 448.

151. As to investigation in cases of wreck and shipping casualties, see tit. SHIPPING CASUALTIES INVESTIGATIONS, p. 2195.

10. Foreign Law.

1. *France.

152. As to property derelict, and the salvage thereof, see tit. SALVAGE, Pt. IV. p. 1903.

* (93) By the 24th art. tit. 9, book iv. of the Ordinance of 1681, vessels stranded or wrecked, and the property coming from the same, found on the shore or in the sea near

2. Other Foreign Countries.

153. For provisions as to wreck and salvage in various other foreign countries, see tit. SALVAGE, Pt. IV. pp. 1901, 1919.

the shore, shall be returned to the owners or agents of the same, deducting salvage, provided they be claimed within a year and a day of the advertisement thereof. D. A. vo. Propriété, No. 225.

(94) After that period the property, or the produce of the sale of such part of the same as cannot be preserved, goes to the marine fund, and by law is vested in the same, but in practice is always returned, even after the period of a year and a day, to the rightful claimant. Beaussant's Code Maritime, vol. ii. p. 61. D. A. vo. Propriété, Nos. 225, 697, 698, and 711.

(95) The property found about a dead body picked up on or near the sea-shore shall be, by the same ordinance, delivered to those who can lay claim to the same, subject to salvage, but the clothes found on the body are given to those who have landed the body and taken it to the cemetery. The money and other valuables, if not claimed within a year by the owners, are apportioned one-third to the salvor and two-thirds to the Marine Fund. D. A. vo. Propriété, No. 225.

(96) The burial and other expenses are to be deducted from the amount of the property found on the body before any division. Beaussant's Code Maritime, vol. ii. p. 75.

(97) The officers of the marine administration are alone competent to receive and decide upon the applications of those who claim the property recovered by them from a wreck. Jouve's case, D. P. 25:2:134; likewise Case of the Administration de la Marine, D. P. 46, 4, 83.

(98) Held, however, on the contrary, by the Court of Rennes, that such claim belongs to the Tribunal of Commerce. Guillevie's case, D. P. 50:2:20.

(99) Anchors lost or abandoned without marks recovered in the sea become the property of the discoverer, unless they be claimed by the proprietor within two months after the declaration of the discovery to the proper authority. Art. 28, Ordinance of 1681. D. A. vo. Propriété, No. 233.

1. To the House of Lords.

1. Generally (and see p. 4).

1. As to appeals generally to the House of Lords, see 1 Mews' and others' Digest, founded on Fisher, anno 1884, pp. 127—135, and Mews' Annual Digest, anno 1884, p. 6; Ibid. anno 1885, p. 7.

2. To the Privy Council (Judicial Committee).

1. Generally (and see p. 5).

2. As to appeals from British colonial courts generally, and to the Privy Council, see tit. JURISDICTION, Pt. II. pp. 693—761.

3. From Vice-Admiralty Courts.

(d) In Actions of Salvage (and see p. 7).

3. When the claim of loss, damage, and expenses has been ascertained and allowed with exactness, the rate of salvage remuneration pure and simple to be allotted in addition must be estimated on a more moderate scale than when the amount of losses, &c. cannot be fixed with precision. In a case where the losses, &c. had been ascertained with exactness, the Privy Council reduced the total amount awarded from £8,535 to £6,000. The De Bay, 8 App. Cas. (P. C.) 559; 52 L. J. P. C. 57; 5 Asp. 156.

5. From the High Court of Admiralty before the Judicature Act.

(b) In Actions of Damage by Collision (and see p. 7).

4. Semble, the owners of a vessel proceeded against in a cause of collision, and decreed solely to blame, having been dismissed from the suit by reason of the vessel being in charge of a compulsory pilot and having neither appealed from the decree nor adhered to the appeal brought by the owners of the vessel injured (the plaintiffs in the court below), cannot, in such circumstances, raise the question whether their vessel was free from blame, or whether both vessels were equally in fault, but are confined to the points raised by the appeal, whether the pilot was solely to blame, or whether there was not contributory negligence on the part of the master and crew of the vessel causing the damage. The Calabar, L. R. 2 P. C. 238.

4a. Cross causes of damage having been instituted in the Admiralty Court between the vessels F. & C. respectively, the court considered that the case made on behalf of the F. in her petition was not substantiated, and held both parties equally to blame. On an appeal by the owners of the C., held, by the Privy Council, that, as the owners of the F. had not appealed from the decree declaring she was to blame, such decree operated as res judicata that the allegations made in her suit were not substantiated. The City of Antwerp and The Friedrich, L. R. 2 P. C. 25; 37 L. J. Adm. 25.

(c) In Actions of Salvage (and see p. 8).

5. The Appellate Court will not disturb an award of salvage by the court below on the ground that it is too large a sum, unless they are quite satisfied that the judge has formed an exorbitant estimate of the services. The Fusilier, 3 Moo. P. C. C. N.S. 51.

See also No. 14, infra.

3. To Her Majesty's Court of Appeal in England.

1. Generally (and see p. 9).

6. For provisions appointing the Master of the Rolls to be a judge of appeal only, and that the number of ordinary judges of the Court of Appeal should after the passing of this act be five, see the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1881 (c. 68), ss. 2, 3, amending s. 4 of the Judicature Act, 1875 (c. 77).

7. A judge not present and acting as a member of a Divisional Court of the High Court of Justice at the time when any decision appealed from was made, or at the argument of the case decided, shall not, for the purposes of the fourth section of the Judicature Act, 1875, be deemed to be, or to have been, a member of such divisional court. Ibid. s. 11.

8. The president, for the time being, of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division is an ex officio judge of her Majesty's Court of Appeal. Ibid. s. 4.

8a. When the Court of Appeals equally divided in opinion so that the judgment below stands, it will, if the same point comes before it again, exercise an independent opinion. The Vera Cruz (No. 2), 9 P. D. (C. A.) 96; 53 L. J. P. D. 33; 5 Asp. 270.

9 (in lieu of No. 70 on p. 10). Every order by a judge of the High Court in chambers, except orders made in the exercise of such discretion therein mentioned, may be set aside or discharged upon notice by any divisional court, or by the judge sitting in court, according to the course and practice of his division; and no appeal shall lie from any such order to set aside or discharge which no such motion has been made, unless by special leave of the judge by whom such order was made, or of the Court of Appeal. The Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 50.

10. In an action for general average contribution by owners of ship against owners of cargo in respect of money paid to pilots for salvage services, the jury found that the services were pilotage. A divisional court directed a new trial. On appeal, the Court of Appeal, having all the material facts before it, set aside the verdict for the defendants, and ordered judgment to be entered for the plaintiffs without another trial Akerblom v. Price, 7 Q. B. D. 129.

11. As to appeals to the Court of Appeal, see 1 Mews' and others' Digest, founded on Fisher, anno 1884, pp. 135—181, and Mews' Annual Digest, anno 1884, p. 6, Ibid. 1885, p. 7.

2. From Admiralty Branch of Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division.

(a) Generally (and see p. 11).

12. Though the Court of Appeal will always act on the rule that credit is to be given to the judgment of the court below on facts depending on the credibility of witnesses, yet when it sees that, irrespective of such credit, the findings of the court below are and must be wrong, that rule does not apply. Per the M. R., The Hector, 9 March, 1883.

(b) From what Orders (and see p. 11).

13. An order made by a registrar sitting as judge under Ord. LIV. is not, for the purposes of the Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 77), s. 50, an order made by a judge in chambers, and hence, where such an order has been reviewed by a judge in court, an appeal from the judge's decision will lie without special leave. The Vivar, 2 P. D. 29; 35 L. T. 782; 25 W. R. 453—C. A.

(f) In Actions of Salvage (and see p. 12).

14. An appeal against the amount of salvage awarded will be dismissed unless the judge has acted on wrong principles, or under a misapprehension of the facts, or the amount is exorbitant in the sense of being beyond reason. The Lancaster, 9 P. D. (C. A.) 14; 5 Asp. 174.

See also No. 5, supra.

15. Six thousand pounds was awarded for services rendered to a steamer which had run aground on a reef in the Red Sea, nearly five miles from Suez, and which, owing to the heavy sea and the nature of her position, was in imminent peril. The services were rendered at much risk to the salving ship. The Court of Appeal refused to alter the award. Ibid.

(g) From Decisions on Appeal from Admiralty County Courts.

15a. In cases raising important points of law, the court will give leave to appeal to the Court of Appeal, where such leave is necessary. The Rona, 4 Asp. 520; 45 L. T. 601; 30 W. R. 614.

5. To the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division.

1. Generally (and see p. 13).

16. All Probate and Admiralty appeals from inferior courts, and from justices, shall be to a Divisional Court of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division. See Ord. LIX. r. 4, No. 887.

See also Nos. 17—22, infra.

2. From Admiralty County Courts and Magistrates. (and see p. 13).

17. The County Courts Act, 1875 (c. 50), s. 6, gives an additional mode of appeal in certain cases, and does not take away the right of appeal to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division under the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), ss. 26, 27. The Humber, 9 P. D. 12; 53 L. J. P. D. 7; 5 Asp. 181.

See also No. 16, supra, and Nos. 18—22, infra.

6. To the Admiralty Branch of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division.

2. From Admiralty County Courts and Cinque Ports Commissioners (and see pp. 13—17).

(a) Generally (and see p. 13).

18. Admiralty appeals from inferior courts now lie to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, and not to the Admiralty branch of that Division. See Ord. LIX. r. 4, No. 887.

19. Therefore appeals from Admiralty County Courts, City of London Court, Liverpool Court of Passage, Cinque Ports Commissioners, and Magistrates, now lie to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division. Ibid.

(c) In what Time (and see p. 14).

20. Appeal allowed, although the instrument of appeal was not lodged within ten days from the decree appealed from. The Humber, 9 P. D. 12; 53 ib. 7; 5 Asp. 181; 49 L. T. 604.

5. From Awards of Magistrates.

(a) Generally (and see p. 15).

21. Appeals from awards of magistrates now lie to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, and not to the Admiralty branch of that Division. See Ord. LIX. r. 4, No. 887.

(d) In Wages Actions.

22. The award of magistrates in cases of seamen's wages not exceeding £50 is made final by the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 188.

6a. To the Court of Admiralty of the Cinque Ports.

23. In all cases arising within the jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports, as defined by the act 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 18, appeals may be made to the Court of Admiralty of the Cinque Ports in lieu of the Court of Admiralty; and the instruments of appeal are to be lodged in the registry of the Cinque Ports, and the same discretion vested in the judge of the Cinque Ports Court as is by this act vested in the judge of the Court of Admiralty. See the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (c. 71), s. 33.

10. Practice in the House of Lords.

1. Generally (and see p. 18).*

4. Petition, Appeal, Schedule, Certificates (and see p. 18).

24. The forms of petition of schedule, of certificate of counsel, and of certificate of service and notice, are the same as those set forth in notes 35, 36, and 37 of pp. 18 and 19. See forms of appeal, method of procedure, and standing orders of August, 1884, p. 3.

25. The appeal must be written on parchment. Ibid. p. 4.

6. Lodging of Petition of Appeal (and see p. 19).

26. In the event of the autograph signatures of counsel not being subscribed to the parchment appeal, the draft containing them must be shown to the clerks of the judicial department at the time of lodging the appeal. Ibid. p. 3.

12. Proceedings on objection to Substitute or Sureties (and see p. 20).

27. (In lieu of No. 183.) In the event of the clerk of the parliaments requiring a justification of the sureties, the appellant's agent must within one week from the date of an official notice to him to that effect, lodge in the parliament office an affidavit or affidavits by the proposed sureties setting forth specifically the nature of the property in consideration of which they claim to be accepted as sureties in respect of the bond, and also declaring that the property in question is unincumbered. A copy of the affidavit or affidavits must be served on the agent of the respondents before lodging the same in the parliament office. Ibid. p. 5.

17. Preparation of Cases (and see p. 21).

28. The title-page of the appellant's case must contain, at the top, a reference to the report of the cause below, if reported, or, if not reported, "catch words"

* (1) (In lieu of note 32, on p. 18.) As to the forms and practice on appeals to the House of Lords, see Wilson's Jud. Acts and Rules (4th ed.), pp. 801, 812; and Chitty's Archbold's Practice of the Queen's Bench Division (14th ed.), vol. 2, pp. 995--1013.

(2) (In lieu of note 33, on p. 18.) The practice on appeals to the House of Lords is now regulated by the forms of appeal, method of procedure, and standing orders of August, 1884. They are the same as those of January, 1880, mentioned in the first volume of this work, with the exceptions set forth in the text above.

or "index words" similar to those prefixed to reports of causes in the law reports. See Forms of Appeal, &c., of August, 1884, p. 7.

29. Where reference is made to a document printed in the appendix, the case must contain a marginal note of the page of the appendix containing such document. Ibid.

30. For directions for binding printed cases and printed copies of the appeal for the use of the law lords. Ibid. p. 18.

See also No. 42, infra.

20. Setting down Cause for Hearing (and see p. 23).

31. No. 220, on p. 23, is no longer in force. See, in lieu thereof, No. 28, supra.

32. Causes, the hearing of which has been postponed on the ground of their being under compromise, are placed at the bottom of the effective cause list in the event of no compromise being arrived at. Ibid. No 33, p. 8.

21a. Petition on Incidental Applications.

33. Petitions for extension of time, lodged during the prorogation of Parliament (unless the House of Lords be sitting for judicial business), in cases in which time has been already extended on petition, do not prevent the dismissal of an appeal. Ibid. No. 20, p. 6.

34. For form of petition for extension of time to lodge cases, &c., see App. C. to Form of Appeal, Method of Procedure, and Standing Orders of August, 1884, p. 19.

23. Abatement and Revival of Appeal (and see p. 23).

35. No. 225 on p. 23 is no longer in force. See Forms of Appeal, Method of Procedure, and Standing Orders of August, 1884.

36. In the event of the death of any of the parties to an appeal, immediate notice should be given by letter addressed to the clerk of the parliaments, and lodged in the judicial office. Ibid. No. 37, p. 9.

37. The letter must state whether the appeal abates or does not abate by reason of the death in question. Ibid.

38. An appeal is held to abate through death, when it becomes necessary to add a new party or parties to the appeal to represent the deceased person's interest. Ibid.

39. An appeal is held not to abate through death when the interest of the deceased person is represented by any of the surviving parties to the appeal. Ibid.

40. In appeals from England and Ireland, in which it is necessary to add new parties to the appeal, an order must be first obtained in the court below making such persons parties to the cause, and an office copy of the order must be annexed to the petition for revival presented to this house. Ibid.

41. In appeals from Scotland, the record being closed in the court below, the petition for revival is presented directly to the house, and a certified copy of the confirmation of the executors of the deceased person must be annexed to the petition. Ibid.

42. In the case of appeals which do not abate through death, it is necessary in the printed cases to print the words "(since deceased)" against the name of the deceased person in the title of the appeal. Ibid.

43. In the case of an appeal which becomes defective through the bankruptcy of any of the parties, a letter must be addressed to the clerk of the parliaments, and lodged in the judicial office, stating the fact of such bankruptcy, and to this letter must be annexed an office copy of the order of the court adjudicating bankruptcy. Ibid.

44. In the event of abatement by death or defect through bankruptcy, an appeal shall not stand dismissed for default under Standing Orders Nos. III., IV., V., provided that notice of such abatement or defect be given by letter addressed to the clerk of the parliaments, and lodged in the judicial office prior to the expiration of the period limited by the standing order under which the appeal would otherwise have stood dismissed. Ibid. and Standing Order No. VIII. p. 15.

45. All appeals marked on the cause list of the house as abated or defective shall stand dismissed unless within three months from the date of the notice to the clerk of the parliaments of abatement or defect, if the house be then sitting, or, if not, then not later than the third sitting day of the next ensuing sittings of the house, a petition shall be presented to the house for reviving the appeal or for rendering the same effective. Ibid.

24. Additional Parties (and see p. 24).

46. Omit from No. 226, on p. 24, the words "party or parties in the court below have been omitted to be made a party or parties in the appeal before this house and." See Standing Order No. VIII. and Forms of Appeal, Method of Procedure, and Standing Orders of August 1884, p. 15.

25a. Dismissal for want of Prosecution.

47. In cases in which an appeal is dismissed for want of prosecution, the appellant shall be at liberty to serve a notice of such dismissal according to the form in Appendix D. upon the agent of the respondents. See Forms of Appeal, Method of Procedure, and Standing Orders of August, 1884, No. 41, p. 10.

48. Such service is to be verified if necessary by affidavit. Ibid.

49. If the respondent does not, within four weeks from the date of such service, lodge in the office of the taxing master of the house his bill of costs, the £200 lodged as security may be paid out to the appellant. Ibid.

50. As to the taxation of the respondent's costs when lodged, see tit. Costs, c. 27, s. 3, p. 381.

51. For form of appellant's notice to the respondent of the appeal having been dismissed for want of prosecution, and of the appellant's intention to apply for payment out to him of the £200, under Standing Order No. IV., Ibid. App. D., p. 20.

26. Costs.

See tit. Costs, c. 30, s. 1, p. 390.

11. Practice in the Privy Council.

22. Time for Appeal* (and see p. 32).

52. A party desiring to appeal from a decree or order of a Vice-Admiralty Court shall, within one month from the date of the decree or order appealed from, file a notice of appeal (a form of which is therein provided), and give bail in such amount not exceeding £300, as the judge may order to answer the costs of the appeal. See Rules of Practice for Vice-Admiralty Courts made under Order in Council of August, 1883.

44. Hearing.

53. Action for damage by collision, defendants' ship held solely to blame, but defendants dismissed on the ground that their ship was in charge of a compulsory pilot. The plaintiffs appealed, but the defendants did not adhere to the appeal. Held, that the defendants could not, in such circumstances, raise the question on the appeal whether their vessel was free from blame, or whether both vessels were in fault, but were confined to the points raised by the appeal, whether or not the pilot was solely to blame. The Calabar, L. R. 2 P. C. 238.

See also No. 4, p. 3340, and No. 62, infra.

47a. Unlivery and Sale.

54. On application of the respondents in a pending appeal, order made for unlivery of the cargo and sale of a mortgaged ship, the unlivery and sale of which had been decreed by the Court of Admiralty. The Jeff Davis, 5 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 25; L. R. 2 P. C. 19.

12. Practice in Her Majesty's Court of Appeal, England.

1. Generally (and see p. 51).

55. For decisions in what cases an appeal lies, see 1 Mews' and others' Digest, founded on Fisher, anno 1884, pp. 137—139, and Mews' Annual Digest, anno 1885, p. 7.

56. As to the parties to an appeal, Ibid. p. 148, and Ibid. since.

57. As to hearing generally on appeal, Ibid. pp. 173—176.

* (3) The practice as to appeal in the Vice-Admiralty Courts followed that of the High Court of Admiralty, by which it was required that an appeal apud acta or in scriptis (as to which see p. 34, n.) should be interposed within fifteen days from the decree (see pp. 32, 33). This is now altered by the Rules of Practice of 1883 for Vice-Admiralty Courts, No. 150, mentioned in the text, and accordingly the cases on pp. 33, 34, Nos. 332, 333, 342, 343, 344, inserted before the issuing of those rules of practice, are now obsolete.

(4) The rules as to appeal in the Rules of Practice of 1883 for Vice-Admiralty Courts relate to the proceedings to be taken on appeal in those courts, and do not affect the statutory regulations in regard to the commencement and prosecution of the appeal in the Appellate Court, as to which see p. 33, Nos. 334, 335.

3. Time of Appeal (and see p. 52).

58. As to the times within which appeals must be brought generally, and as to extension of time generally, Ibid. pp. 150—159.

4. Notice of Appeal (and see p. 52).

59. As to notices of appeal generally, Ibid. p. 160.

7. Application for Stay.

(a) Proceedings in Court below
(and see p. 53).

60. In an action in the Admiralty Division by the owners of the S. C., plaintiffs, against a ship belonging to the L. & N. W. Rail. Co., the defendants, in respect of a collision between the two vessels, held, that both ships were to blame. Decision reversed on appeal, and defendants' ship condemned in the damages. Defendants entered an appeal to the House of Lords. Plaintiffs took proceedings in the Admiralty Division to assess the damages, which were large. Motion in the Court of Appeal to stay such proceedings rejected, but execution directed to be stayed on the appellants agreeing to give a guarantee by Baring Brothers for the payment of damages, and the usual solicitor's undertaking for costs. Owners of Santa Clara v. The L. & N. W. Rail. Co., Feb. 10, 1886.

61. For further cases as to stay of proceedings generally pending appeal, see 1 Mews' and others' Digest, founded on Fisher, anno 1884, pp. 167, 170, and Ibid. 1885, p. 12.

8. Respondent's Notice to vary (and see p. 53).

62. Where the respondent to an appeal gives a cross notice under Ord. LVIII. r. 6, and the appellant withdraws his appeal, the respondent may elect whether to proceed on his cross notice. If he elects to proceed the appellant may give a cross notice that he intends to bring forward his original appeal on the hearing of the respondent's appeal. The Beeswing, 10 P. D. 18 (C. A.); 54 L. J. P. D. 7; 5 Asp. 335.

See also Nos. 4 and 4a, p. 2340.

10. Evidence (and see p. 54).

11. Setting down.

(a) Generally (and see p. 55).

64. As to setting down appeal for hearing, Ibid. p. 162.

16. Interest.

65. On an appeal from the High Court, interest for such time as execution has been delayed by the appeal shall be allowed unless the court or a judge otherwise orders, and the taxing officer may compute such interest without any order for that purpose. Ord. LIX. r. 19, No. 883.

65a. See as to the allowance of interest generally, tit. REGISTRAR AND MERCHANTS, p. 1715.

13. Practice in Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division.

1. Generally.

66. Appeals from Admiralty County Courts, City of London Court, Liverpool Court of Passage, Cinque Ports Commission, and magistrates, now lie to the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, see No. 16, p. 2341.

67. As to re-arrest of a vessel to answer further claims on appeal, see tit. PRACTICE, p. 1522, Nos. 583, 584.

68. On any motion by way of appeal from an inferior court, the court to which any such appeal may be brought shall have power to draw all inferences of fact which might have been drawn in the court below, and to give any judgment and make any order which ought to have been made. No such motion shall succeed on the ground merely of misdirection or improper reception or rejection of evidence, unless, in the opinion of the court, substantial wrong or miscarriage has been thereby occasioned in the court below. Ord. LIX. r. 7 of 1884.

2. Evidence.

See Nos. 70—73, infra.

14. Practice in the Admiralty Branch of Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division.

1. From Admiralty County Courts
(and see pp. 56—59).

(a) Generally.

69. These appeals now lie to the Probate,

Divorce and Admiralty Division, see No. 16, p. 2341.

(d) Evidence (and see p. 56).

70. Application to admit fresh evidence on an appeal from a county court refused. The Humber, 9 P. D. 12; 53 L. J. P. D. 7; 5 Asp. 181; 49 L. T. 604.

71. In the absence of the judge's notes of evidence the Court of Admiralty, on appeal, allowed a witness to be examined who had given evidence in the court below. The C. S. Butler, L. R. 4 A. & E. 238; 31 L. T. 549; 23 W. R. 113.

72. On any motion by way of appeal from an inferior court, the court to which any such appeal may be brought shall have power, if the notes of the judge of such inferior court are not produced, to hear and determine such appeal upon any other evidence or statement of what occurred before such judge which the court may deem sufficient. Ord. LIX. r. 8 of 1884.

73. As to the powers of the court to draw inferences of fact, and as to the effect on appeal of improper reception or rejection of evidence in the court below, see No. 68, supra; Ord. LIX. r. 7 of 1884.

4. From Awards of Magistrates.*

(a) Generally (and see p. 58).

74. On appeal from an award of magistrates, the appellants held entitled to begin and to reply. The Jeune Adolphe, 2 (Irish) Jur. N.S. 285.

* (5) If it is desired to detain the property in legal custody pending an appeal from a magistrate's award, this may be done by application to the receiver of wreck to exercise the powers conferred on him for that purpose by the 468th section of the M. S. Act, 1854

(c. 104).

(6) If the owners are desirous of obtaining a release of their property before the hearing of the appeal, they may do so by giving bail to the receiver under the provisions of the same 468th section.

Agreement and London Average Agreement, see Marine Insurance, Notes and Forms, by Douglas Owen; Sampson Low, Marston & Co., London, 1883, pp. 105—111.

4. Expenses entitling to General Average.

2. In Port of Refuge.

(e) Unloading and reloading Cargo (and see p. 81).

1. Where a vessel is compelled for the safety of ship and cargo to put into port to repair an injury which is the subject of particular average, the expense of reloading the cargo, necessarily unloaded for the purpose of repairs to the ship, and other expenses incurred for pilotage and port charges, are not chargeable to general average. Svensden v. Wallace, 10 App. Cas. 404; 5 Asp. 453; affirming the decision in 5 Asp. 232.

7. Salvage.

(a) Of Ship and Cargo (and see p. 85).

2. Where a master enters into a towage contract rendering the shipowners liable to pay a sum of money named in the contract, whether the services prove beneficial or not, and the ship and cargo are thereby saved, the remuneration agreed upon may be the subject of a general average contribution. Anderson, Tritton & Co. v. Ocean Steamship Co., 10 App. Cas. 127; 5 Asp. 401; reversing the decision, 5 Asp. 202; and Ocean Steamship Co. v. Anderson, Tritton & Co., July 31, 1886.

See also tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. p. 1855, Nos. 732, 733, 740—742.

8. Recovery of General Average.

1. Generally (and see p. 99b).

3. The fact that a shipowner has become liable to pay, and has paid, a sum of money for services rendered to the ship and cargo, and that such payment was reasonable, does not show conclusively that the whole of such sum is chargeable to general average. Before the owners of cargo can become liable for a general average contribution, it must be left to the jury to find what sum should properly be charged to general average under the circumstances. Ibid.

3. Bond to pay.

(a) Duty of Shipowner to require— (and see p. 99d).

4. When there has been a general average loss incurred, and the contributions have not been ascertained, the shipowner is not entitled to make delivery of the cargo conditional upon the consignee signing an average bond in the form known as the Liverpool average bond, and making a deposit of ten per cent. on the estimated value of their goods in the joint names, as provided by the bond, of the defendants, and their average adjuster, or in the names of the defendants alone, or in the name of the average adjuster alone; a bond in such a form is unreasonable. Huth & Co. v. Lamport; Gibbs & Son v. Lamport, 5 Asp. 543; 16 Q. B. D. 442; 54 L. T. N.S. 334, 663.

10. Germany (and see p. 99i).†

* (3) The new Danish Code, referred to on p. 99h, No. 275, has not yet been published.

† (4) The cargo contributes to general average, (1) with the goods still existing at the end of the voyage when the discharge commenced; or, if the voyage terminated by the loss of the ship, with the goods brought into a place of safety so far as at the time of the casualty these goods, in both cases, were on board the vessel or a lighter; (2) with the goods sacrificed. See the German General Maritime Law Code, Art. 720.

(5) In estimating the amounts, the following points have to be taken in consideration:

—With respect to goods which are undamaged, the market's value as fixed by competent persons of the goods at the end of the voyage when and at the place where the discharge was commenced; or, if the voyage is terminated by the loss of the ship at the time and place of the salvage, after deducting freight duties and other expenses. Ibid. Art. 721.

(6) If goods thrown overboard are picked up, they only contribute to a general average occurring at the same time or subsequently, in case the owner demands compensation. Ibid. Art. 722.

Part I.—BRITISH LAW,

1. Generally (and see p. 102).

1. A vessel bound for a foreign port in ballast put into Cowes owing to contrary winds, and the master there took on board some goods of the plaintiffs to be sold by the master for the plaintiff in the foreign port. £100 of the proceeds of these goods the master employed in repairing the vessel at the foreign port, and executed a bottomry bond to the plaintiff. Bond pronounced for. Decision affirmed on appeal. Day v. Walters, Marsden's Rep. 325.

4. What are Bottomry Bonds (and see p. 106).

2. A foreign vessel being in an English port, and the owner, temporarily in England, being in want of funds for the purchase of necessaries for the ship, entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs, by which, in consideration of their advancing him by cash or acceptance £600 for necessaries supplied to and for the use of the vessel, he undertook to return them the amount so advanced with interest, and all charges on the return of the vessel from her voyage. And the plaintiffs were thereby authorized "to cover the amount advanced the owner by insurance on the ship, &c., out and home at owner's cost." Held, by the Court of Appeal (Bowen and Fry, L.JJ., Brett, M. R., dubitante), that the agreement was not equivalent to a bottomry bond. The Heinrich Bjorn, 10 P. D. 44.

5. Bonds, good in part (and see p. 107).

3. The fact that one of the items making up the amount advanced on bottomry, was a premium of insurance by the bondholder, held, not to affect the validity of the bond. The Lovely Ann, Marsden, 337.

6. Maritime Risk.

1. Generally (and see p. 108).

4. A bottomry bond can only hypothecate what is subjected to maritime risk. Therefore freight to be earned on a voyage after the maritime risk is ended, and the bond is no longer obligatory, cannot be hypothecated. Smith v. Bank of New South Wales, The Staffordshire, L. R. 4 P. C. 194; 8 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 443; 41 L. J. Adm. 49; 27 L. T. 46; 20 W. R. 557.

4. Commencement and Termination.

(a) Generally (and see p. 108).

5. A bottomry bond executed at Lisbon and expressed to be payable on the ship's arrival in London, held payable, though the ship having put into Plymouth was there condemned on a survey and never reached London. The Neptune, Marsden, 365.

9. By Masters.

1. Generally (and see p. 116).*

6. A master, however appointed, if bond fide appointed, can, under circumstances, grant a bottomry bond for the purpose of enabling the ship to proceed on her voyage. The Cynthia, 16 Jur. 748.

6a. A vessel, owing to a mortality which prevailed in the West Indies, had a succession of masters, who were appointed under various circumstances in different islands, and by the agents or consignees. Some of such masters gave bottomry bonds. Held, that they were sufficiently appointed to qualify them to give such bonds. The Wakefield, cited in The Kennerley Castle, 3 Hagg. 8.

7. A master appointed abroad by the British consul at that place may give a bottomry bond. The Zodiac, 1 Hagg. 320.

8. The appointment of a master of a post-office packet by the postmaster, held a sufficient appointment to bind the owners for necessary repairs to the vessel ordered by the master. Stokes v. Carne, 2 Camp. 339.

9. The master putting into a foreign port in distress has no authority to insure the ship and freight there for the rest of the voyage, nor power to bottomry the ship for the premiums of insurance. The Serafina, B. & L. 277.

10. Where, from the recital in a bond, it was clear that the meaning was to bind the ship, though the condition only bound the master, the bond was upheld as a bottomry bond. The Grace, Marsden, 334.

11. An infant master borrowed from D. in a foreign port £95 to pay wages, and gave bills on the owner which were returned unpaid. The master subsequently sold part of the cargo to D. to raise funds for the repair of the vessel. D. then refused to pay for the cargo so sold until the master gave him a bottomry bond for the £95. In a suit on the bond in the Admiralty Court, bond decreed for, with interest, damages, and costs. Day v. Wolfe, Marsden, 88.

2. Necessity.

(aa) Generally (and see p. 123).

12. Where a lender finds money on bottomry to pay for work and goods it is not sufficient for him to prove the general validity of the bond; he must prove that the items of expenditure were necessary, and the bond will be bad as regards each item to the extent by which such item exceeds the amount which was actually necessary. The Pontida, 9 P. D. 102; Ibid. C. A. 177; 53 L. J. P. D. 44; Ibid. 78; 5 Asp. 284—330.

4. Notice to Owners (and see p. 129).

13. See The Lizzie, L. R. 2 A. & E. 254; 19 L. T. 71; and Nos. 254, p. 132; 303—316, p. 138.

14. The master's communication should state not only the necessity for expenditure but also the necessity for hypothecation. Kleinwort v. Cassa Maritima of Genoa, 2 App. Cas. 156; 36 L. T. 118; 25 W. R. 608.

12. On Freight (and see p. 135).

15. Where freight is pledged by an instrument in the nature of a bottomry bond, and the ship is totally lost, whilst the freight is at risk, by a collision with another ship which admits and limits her liability under the M. S. Acts, paying the amount of her liability into court, the holders of the bottomry bond are entitled to rank against the fund paid into court for the freight so pledged to them. The Empusa, 4 Asp. 185.

16. Semble, the bondholders are entitled to recover out of the fund in court applicable to the payment of damages for loss of freight the same proportion of the sum secured by the bond as the total sum apportioned in respect of loss of freight bears to the whole freight of the ship lost. The Empusa, 4 Asp. 185.

13. On Cargo.

1. Generally (and see p. 136).

17. Cargo laden after the execution of a bottomry bond on ship, cargo, and freight, is liable to contribute rateably with the cargo laden before, in so far as there is a deficiency after applying the proceeds of ship and freight. The Trial, Marsden, 338.

17a. See for a collection of the cases on the hypothecation of cargo, The Gratitude, Tudor's Leading Cases in Merc. and Mar. Law, 3rd ed. anno 1884, p. 34.

3. Remedy over, against Shipowner (and see p. 140).

18. A master of a French ship contracted in the West Indies to carry goods of an Englishman from thence to Liverpool, and on the voyage was obliged to put into a port of refuge, and to borrow there money on bottomry of ship and cargo. On the ship's arrival at Liverpool the bondholder sued upon the bond, and the cargo owner was obliged to contribute to the payment of the bond in order to redeem his goods. Held, that the owner of the goods had no claim against the owners of the ship, inasmuch as by the law of France it was lawful for them to free themselves from the acts and engagements of the master, in all that concerned the ship and voyage, by the abandonment of the ship and freight, and they had done so. Lloyd v. Guibert,

L. R. 1 Q. B. Exch. 115; 10 Jur. N.S. 949; 33 L. J. Q. B. 241; 12 W. R. 953; 10 L. T. N.S. 570.

18. Payment.

6. Priority.

(b) Bonds inter se (and see p. 149).

19. If on a voyage bottomry bonds are given at different ports the posterior bond is preferred; but where a master having borrowed an insufficient sum on bottomry, afterwards, at the same port, takes up more on a second bond, both bonds will rank together. Mackenzie v. Ogilvie, Marsden, 134.

20. Two successive bottomry bonds were given at different ports on the same voyage. No particular distress appears to have happened at the second port. Held, on the particular facts, that the first bond must have priority. Dunlop v. Proceeds of the Neptune, Marsden, 97.

21. In 1768 a bottomry bond was given at Leith by or with the assent of owners, who resided in Scotland, to secure advances made to the vessel two years before. In 1872 another bond was given at Cowes with (semble) the consent of the owners, for the purpose of repairing the vessel. The court held that neither bond was such as could properly be enforced in the Admiralty Court, but that no objection being taken to the jurisdiction the rules of equity must prevail, and that the bonds must rank together and be paid in proportion. Mackenzie & Co. v. The St. Andrew, Marsden, 124; Mackenzie v. Ogilvie, ib. 134.

Part II.—FOREIGN LAW.

1a. Brazil.*

2. Denmark (and see p. 151).†

* (3) A contract of bottomry, if made out of the realm, must be visé by the Brazilian Consul, if there is one, and in all cases noted on the ship's register; failing these conditions, though valid as between the contracting parties, it is of no effect as against third parties who have claims on the ship. Art. 633, C. C.

(3a) A contract of bottomry may be for the money worth of goods supplied, or services rendered to the ship without money actually passing. Ibid.

† (4) The new Danish code has not yet been promulgated.

(4a) The owner as well as the captain may bottomry in a case of distress, and when the loan on bottomry is taken, in order to the continuance of the voyage. Code of 1683 of King Christian the Fifth, vol. 4, c. 5.

(5) The captain may bottomry not only when authorized by owner under the conditions allowing him to do so, but also on his own responsibility, viz., when he is absent from his owner in foreign countries, and in a case of distress. The captain may pledge in bottomry the ship, her tackle and freight, but it is regarded as doubtful whether he may, without authority from the owner, bottomry the cargo. At all events, he is bound to give the owner of the cargo the opportunity of avoiding bottomry of his cargo by providing the funds required by other means. Ibid.

(5a) The bottomry holder has an effectual pledge or mortgage, taking special precedence of all former mortgages and bottomry bonds on ship and freight, but his lien is postponed to claims for wages of crew, salvage and average contribution, and the expenses of realization thereof. If the properly bottomried is lost or deteriorated through accidents, the holder's claim is lost or diminished pro tanto. Ibid.

(6) Respondentia bonds were introduced into Denmark by Ordinance of December 19, 1794.

* (7) Bottomry (prestato a cambio marittimo) is a contract in which money is lent on ship or cargo, or both, on condition that if the security perishes from peril of the sea, the debt is extinguished, but if it arrives safely, then it is payable with maritime interest; that is, interest above the ordinary legal rate. C. C. M. 149.

(7a) If the ship during the voyage requires necessaries, and by reason of the distance from the residence of the owners of ship and cargo, or other circumstances, the captain cannot obtain their permission, he may, on showing what the necessity is, by writing, signed by himself and his principal officers, obtain authority to borrow money in bottomry of ship and apparel; and, in case of necessity, of the cargo, from the tribunal of commerce; failing it, the governor; and in foreign ports the Ottoman consul; and failing him, the proper local authority. Where cargo is sold or pledged for the necessities of the ship, the charterers or shippers may, if they prefer it, have their cargo delivered to them at the port of distress, paying freight pro rata itine-ris. Ibid.

(8) The instrument of bottomry must contain the following things:—(1) The sum lent, and the maritime interest agreed on; (2) the things which are the security for the loan; (3) the name of the ship, and the names and surnames of the owners and captain and also of the lender; (4) the voyage or time for which the loan is made; (5) the date for repayment; (6) the date and place at which the loan was made. Ibid. 150.

(9) Bottomry bonds may either be made under legal authority, before the tribunal of commerce or Turkish consul, or by a private contract between the parties. If the latter, it should be registered before the proper authority within ten days. Ibid. 151, 152.

(10) A bottomry bond entered into without these formalities ceases to have any priority over other debts, and renders the borrower personally liable to pay the money in any event, but only with ordinary legal interest. Ibid. 153.

(11) Loans on security of freight to be earned by ship, and profits to be obtained by sale of cargo, and also on wages to be earned, are prohibited, and the lender can only recover his principal without interest. Ibid. 158, 159.

Part I.—RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF OWNERS AND OTHERS GENERALLY IN REGARD TO COLLISION.

1. Generally* (and see p. 183).2. Between Three Ships (and see p. 184).

1. A large iron steam dredger, the property of the respondents, was moored in the river Liffey, below the Pigeon House Fort, for the night, three men being on board. She had two anchor lights exhibited one at each end. The Annie, while proceeding down the river, ran into the front of the dredger, driving her from the position in which she had been moored towards mid-channel, and making a large hole in front of the dredger, through which the water rushed, causing the front part to sink, while the after part remained afloat. The anchor light on the fore part of the dredger was put out, but the stern light remained burning. It could not, however, be seen by vessels coming down the river, the view being obstructed by the elevated machinery of the dredger. The three men on board the dredger got into the dredger's boat almost immediately after the collision with The Annie, and remained sitting in the boat on the star-board side of the dredger. About twenty minutes after the collision the D. L., on a voyage from Dublin to Glasgow, ran into the dredger, and sustained such injuries that she sank. Held, in an action for damages by the D. L. against the dredger, that the dredger was not to blame. On appeal to the Court of Appeal in Ireland, held, that the dredger was to blame. The Dublin and Glasgow Steam Packet Company v. The Dublin Port and Docks Board, 2nd April, 1886.

2. On appeal to the House of Lords, held, affirming the decision of the Court of Admiralty, and reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the owners of the dredger were not to blame, and that the action had been brought against the wrong ship. Ibid. Ho. Lo. 2nd April, 1886.

7. A collision occurred through the fault of both vessels. Three persons on board one of them, an engineer and a passenger who had nothing to do with the navigation, and an officer responsible for it, were drowned. Held, following Thorogood v. Bryan, 8 C. B. 115,† that their representatives could not maintain an action, under Lord Campbell's Act, against the owners of the other vessel, and that the Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 85), s. 25, sub-s. 9, did not apply. The Bernina, 11 P. D. 31; 55 L. J. P. D. 21; 54 L. T. 499.

* (2) Action for damages from collision by owners of the E. and her cargo against the owners of the W. and her cargo. The owners of the cargo of the W. appeared and protested against the arrest of their cargo, but the decree seems to have gone against cargo as well as ship, and to have been affirmed on appeal. Tomlinson v. Voguel, Marsden, 313.

(3) In an action of collision brought by the owners of the T. and her cargo against the J. and her cargo, held, on appeal to the Delegates, that the owners of the J. and her cargo ought to contribute rateably in proportion to their property not lost in the collision, towards the loss of the T. and her cargo by a common disaster (ex causâ communis), to the extent of a moiety of the value of the T. and her cargo. Harbyn v. Berry, Marsden's Rep. 235.

7a. Submarine Telegraph Cables.

1. Generally.

9. For the general provisions of the convention between the United Kingdom and various foreign states for the protection of telegraphic communication by submarine telegraphs, see tit. OWNERS, in Addenda, c. 10a.

10. It is a punishable offence to break or injure a submarine cable wilfully or by culpable negligence, so that it might interrupt or obstruct telegraph communication wholly or partially, except in saving life or property, and after necessary precautions, and such punishment is without prejudice to any civil action for damages. See the Convention, Art. II., annexed to, and confirmed by, the Submarine Telegraph Act, 1885 (c. 49), s. 2.

11. The owner of a cable who, on laying or repairing his own cable breaks or injures another cable, must bear the cost of repairing the breakage or injury, without prejudice to the application, if need be, of Art. II. (for which see No. 10, supra) of the Convention, Ibid. Art. IV.

12. But this article does not apply to that part of a cable laid in a depth of water exceeding 100 fathoms; and nothing in the convention or this act shall prejudice any right or remedy to which any party may be otherwise entitled. Ibid. s. 4.

2. Jurisdiction.

13. On heaving anchor it was discovered that the C. K. had got foul of the submarine telegraph cable between England and France. By the direction of the master the cable was cut. Held, that the Court of Admiralty had jurisdiction to entertain an action by the owners of the cable against the C. K. The Clara Killam, L. R. 3 A. & E. 161; 39 L. J. Adm. 50; 3 Asp. 463; see also Submarine Telegraph Co. v. Dixon, 15 C. B. N.S. 759; 2 Asp. 9; 33 L. J. C. P. 139.

3. Signals (and see p. 236).

14. Vessels engaged in laying or repairing submarine cables shall conform to the regulations as to signals which have been, or may be, adopted by mutual agreement among the high contracting parties, with the view of preventing collisions at sea. See the Convention, Art. V., annexed to the Submarine Telegraph Act, 1885 (c. 49).

15. When a ship engaged in repairing a cable exhibits the signals, other vessels which see them, or are able to see them, shall withdraw to or keep beyond a distance of one nautical mile at least from the ship, so as not to interfere with her operations. Ibid.

16. Fishing gear and nets shall be kept at the same distance, but fishing vessels which see, or are able to see, a telegraph ship exhibiting the signals shall be allowed twenty-four hours at most within which to obey the notice so given, during which time they shall not be interfered with. Ibid.

17. The operations of the telegraph ships shall be completed as quickly as possible. Ibid.

18. Vessels which see, or are able to see, the buoys showing the position of a cable when the latter is being laid, is out of order, or is broken, shall keep beyond a distance of one-quarter of a nautical mile at least from the said buoys. Ibid. Art. VI.

18a. Fishing nets and gear shall be kept at the same distance. Ibid.

See also c. 9, Nos. 91—93, p. 2363.

4. Lights (and see p. 245).

19. The enactments of the M. S. Act, 1862 (c. 63), and of the acts amending the same, touching regulations as to lights and signals and for the avoiding of collisions, shall extend to authorize regulations for carrying into effect Articles V. and VI. of the schedule to this act (for which see Nos. 14—18, supra), within as well as without the territorial waters of her Majesty's dominions, and regulations may be made, applied, altered, and revoked, and the contravention thereof punished accordingly under these enactments; and section 6 of the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883, shall extend to the enforcement of the regulations as regards sea fishing boats within the limits of that act. See the Submarine Telegraph Act, 1885 (c. 49), s. 5 (1).

20. See also Nos. 109, 110, pp. 2364, 2365.

Part II.—JURISDICTION.

1. The Admiralty Branch of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division.

2. Loss of Life or Personal Injury (and see p. 191).

21. The Admiralty Division has no jurisdiction in rem (under the 7th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, or otherwise) over a claim under Lord Campbell's Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93). The Franconia, 2 P. D. 163 (for which see No. 73 on p. 191), overruled. The Vera Cruz (No. 2), 10 App. Cas. 59; 9 P. D. C. A. 96; 53 L. J. P. D. 33; 54 L. J. P. D. 9, overruling 9 P. D. 96; 5 Asp. 254, 270, 386.

22. But semble, in a suit for limitation of liability the court would be able to entertain a claim brought by a person claiming under Lord Campbell's Act. Per Brett, M. R. Ibid.

23. Semble, however, the court has jurisdiction for personal injury in actions in personam. The Bernina, 11 P. D. 31.

24. If an action in personam, under Lord Campbell's Act, were brought in the Admiralty Branch of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division, that would be a case over which the High Court had jurisdiction, and there would then be only the question whether or not the action should be transferred from the Probate to the Queen's Bench Division. Per Lord Esher, M. R., The Vera Cruz (No. 2), 9 P. D. 98.

25. Section 527 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104) (for which see No. 91, p. 193), is confined to damage to property, and does not extend to injury to the person. Harris v. Owners of The Franconia, 2 C. P. D. 173.

26. Held, by the majority of the Court, that the Admiralty had no jurisdiction to try offences by foreigners on board foreign ships within or without the limits of three miles from the shores of England, and that therefore the criminal courts of this country have no power to do so. The Queen v. Keyn, 2 Exch. D. 63.*

27. The ratio decidendi of the judgment in The Queen v. Keyn is that for the purpose of jurisdiction (except where, under special circumstances and in special acts, Parliament has thought fit to extend it), the territory of England and the sovereignty of the Queen stop at low water mark. Harris v. Owners of The Franconia, 2 C. P. D. 177.

28. Therefore in an action in the Common Pleas Division, under Lord Campbell's Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. 93), by the administratrix of a person on board a British ship, and killed in a collision beyond the territory of England though within three miles of the coast, between that vessel and a foreign ship, caused by the negligence of those on board the foreign ship, held, that the ordinary courts of this country had no jurisdiction, and that service of the writ out of the jurisdiction could not be allowed. Ibid. 173.

2. The Court of Admiralty before the Judicature Acts.

2. Foreign Ships (and see p. 193).

29. Section 527 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), is confined to damage to property, and does not extend to injury to the person. Harris v. Owners of The Franconia, 2 C. P. D. 173.

Part III.—NEITHER SHIP OR BOTH IN FAULT.

1. Inevitable Accident.†

1. Generally (and see p. 200).

30. A steamer moored at a wharf in the

* (6) This was the celebrated case of The Franconia, a foreign vessel, the foreign master of which was indicted for the manslaughter of a passenger on board a British ship, with which The Franconia came into collision within three miles from the English coast, the collision resulting in the death of the passenger. The nature and extent of the jurisdiction within the limits of three miles from the English coast, was very fully considered by the learned judges who formed the majority and minority of the court.

† (7) Collision held to be the result of inevitable accident, and the damages ordered to be equally divided. Nelson v. Fawcett, Marsden, 332.

(8) Collision from a common disaster (ex causa communis), moiety of damages decreed. Harbyn v. Berry, Ibid. 235.

(9) Case of fortuitous collision (casu fortuito), between two vessels, the P. and the W., from the W. bringing up to windward of the P., and driving foul of her. The W. condemned in a moiety of the damages. Trew v. Pierce, Marsden, 264.

harbour of Halifax, Nova Scotia, broke loose in a gale of unexampled violence and damaged the wharf. Held, that those in charge of the vessel were not bound to take precautions against an extraordinary gale like that which was blowing at the time, but were bound to take such precautions against an ordinary gale as a prudent and competent man of nautical science would have taken, and that certain enumerated precautions which would have been taken by a prudent and competent man were not taken, and judgment of court below condemning the vessel in the damage affirmed. The Chase (P. C.), 22nd July, 1873.

31. Case of collision held to be merely accidental, and no damages or costs given on either side. Baker v. Malin, Marsden, 322.

2. Inscrutable Fault (and see p. 203).

32. Action of collision dismissed, no fault being proved. Strong v. Teesdale, Marsden, 269; Faye v. Graham, Ibid. 331.

33. In an action of collision, defendant, on account of the uncertainty of the proofs (ob incertitudine probationum, &c.), condemned in a moiety only of the damages. Beckham v. Chapman, Marsden, 270.

4. Both Ships to blame.*

1. Generally (and see p. 204).

34. Both ships held to blame. Damages directed to be equally divided, Stoker v. Hutton, Marsden, 328; and this though one was more to blame than the other. Wildman v. Blakes (The Petersfield and The Judith Randolph), Ibid. 332.

35. Collision actions damages divided between the two ships, Rennen v. Humble, Marsden, 280; Gull v. Carswell, Ibid. 295; The Marquis of Granby, Ibid. 323. Same rule applied, but full damages awarded to owners of cargo; Mason v. Johnson, Ibid. 282. Same rule of half damages applied to ship and cargo. Marsingill v. Taylor, Ibid. 288; Noden v. Ashton, Ibid. 290.

36. Case of collision in which half damages were decreed, Harper v. Grosvenor, Marsden, 251; Beckham v. Chapman, Ibid. 270.

2. Pilot in Fault.

37. Where two vessels are to blame for a collision, but the owners of one are exempt from liability owing to compulsory pilotage, such owners are entitled to recover a moiety of their damage without any deduction on account of the damage sustained by the other vessel. The Hector, 8 P. D. (C. A.) 218; 52 L. J. P. D. 51; 5 Asp. 101.

Part IV.—DUTIES FOR AVOIDANCE OF COLLISION.

2. Sea Collision Rules of 1885—1863.

1. Generally (and see p. 209).

38. The Sea Collision Rules of 1884 are substituted for those of 1879 by Order in Council of 11th August, 1884.†

3. To Ships of what Nations applicable (and see p. 211).

39. No. 248, on p. 211, as to the Rules of 1879, to the effect that the rules shall not interfere with special rules made by any foreign government as to additional station and signal lights for ships of war or sailing under convoy, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 26; and see same in Appendix.

40. The Sea Collision Rules of 1884 are made applicable to the ships of the following nations:—France (see Order in Council of September 16, 1884, L. G. p. 4116), Greece, Italy, and Portugal (see Order in Council of January 1, 1885, L. G. p. 1), Sweden, Norway, and Brazil (see Order in Council of May 22, 1885, L. G. p. 2234), Turkey (see Order in Council of July 14, 1885, L. G. p. 3234).

4. Construction.

(a) Generally (and see p. 212).

42. No. 258, on p. 213, as to the Rules

* (10) Collision between the C, with the wind free, and the A. M. by the wind. The A. M. was damaged, and the C. sunk; held, that both vessels were to blame, but the C. was most to blame, and could not therefore recover. The Ann of Mostein, Ibid. 263.

† (11) They are substantially the same as those of 1879, except with regard to fishing vessels. Their exact resemblance and divergence, and the rules of January and June, 1885, as to fishing vessels, are stated infra, and all are printed in the Appendix.

of 1879, to the effect that nothing in those rules is to interfere with rules duly made by local authorities for harbours, &c., is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 25. See same in Appendix.

43. No. 259, on p. 213, as to the Rules of 1879, not exonerating any ship, &c. from neglect to take proper precautions, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 24; and see same in Appendix.

44. The rules are made not merely to prevent collisions, but to prevent danger of collisions, and they must, therefore, be strictly enforced. The Ebor, 11 P. D. (C. A.) 25.

(b) Lights (and see p. 213).

45. No. 265, on p. 213, as to the Rules of 1879 not exonerating any ship, &c. from neglect to carry lights, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 24; and see same in Appendix.

46. A sailing vessel, seeing the mast-head and red lights of a steamer approaching on her starboard bow, showed a flare-up light to attract attention. A collision having ensued, held, that the showing of a flare-up light was not prohibited by Art. 2, and that it depends upon the circumstances of each case whether or not the showing of a flare-up light is calculated to mislead, and that the steamer ought not to have been misled, and was alone to blame. The Merchant Prince, 5 L. J. P. D. 79.

47. The R., in charge of a tug, was brought athwart the tide in the Humber to go into dock. The R. had, in addition to her masthead and side lights, a bright light at the main peak. The Humber Rules made pursuant to the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 32, incorporate the Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea. The E. came into collision with the R., and it was admitted that the E. was to blame; but held, that as the R., by carrying a light at her peak, had not complied with Art. 2 of the Regulations, she had infringed a statutory rule within the purview of s. 17 of 36 & 37 Vict. c. 85, and was also to blame; for it was impossible to say that this infringement could not have contributed to the collision, or that it was a necessary departure from the regulation. The Ripon, 10 P. D. 65; 54 L. J. P. D. 56; 5 Asp. 365.

(d) Proper Precautions (and see p. 213).

48. No. 267, on p. 213, as to the Rules of 1879, not exonerating any ship, &c. from neglect to carry lights or signals, or to keep a proper look-out, or take proper precautions, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 24.

49. See also Nos. 209—217, p. 209; Nos. 688, 699, p. 269, notes 59—65, 72—78, p. 207; No. 635, notes 356, 357, p. 262; and Pt. VII. p. 271.

(e) Proviso for Special Cases (and see p. 214).

50. No. 274, on p. 214, as to the Rules of 1879, requiring, in construing those rules, that due regard should be had to dangers of navigation, and special circumstances rendering a departure from the rules necessary, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 23.

5. Effect of Breach.

(a) Generally (and see p. 215).

51. If the non-observance of an important rule of navigation can by any possibility have contributed to the accident, the party guilty of such non-observance is to blame. The Arklow, 9 App. Cas. 136; 53 L. J. P. C. 9; 5 Asp. 219;* 50 L. T. 305.

52. A steamer came into collision with a trawler, which, contrary to the Sea Collision Rules, was carrying a masthead light as well as side lights. It appeared that those on board the steamer did not see the white light. The court refused to hold the trawler to blame under s. 17 of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), holding that the white light could not possibly have contributed to the collision. The Chusan, 5 Asp. 476; 53 L. T. 60.

(c) Lights (and see p. 217).

53. A vessel held to blame for not having proper lights exhibited, on the ground that their absence might have contributed to the collision, and judgment of the court below reversed. The Arklow, 9 App. Cas. 136; 53 L. J. P. C. 9; 5 Asp. 219.

(e) Crown Ships.

54. The provisions of s. 17 of the M. S.

* (12) See also note (a), 5 Asp. 221.

Act, 1873 (c. 85), semble, applicable to a Queen's ship. The Hochung; The Lapwing, 5 Asp. 43, n.

5. Look-out.

1. Generally (and see p. 219).

55. Nothing in these rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, master, or crew thereof from the consequences of any neglect to keep a proper look-out. See the Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 24, in Appendix.

56. A ship in charge of a duly licensed pilot came in collision in the Clyde with a dredger. One of the bye-laws of the Clyde Navigation Commissioners required that every vessel should, during the daytime, have one person, and from sunset to sunrise and in time of fog two persons, properly qualified, stationed at the bows as a look-out. The master and officer and a third man were on the bridge, and there was no look-out forward. Held, that the look-out was sufficient. The Clyde Navigation Co. v. Barclay, 1 App. Cas. 790.

7. Speed.

1. Steamers.

(a) Generally (and see p. 222).

57. Eight to nine knots an hour held not to be an improper rate of speed for a steamer in the North Sea on the Dogger Bank, the night being fine and clear though somewhat dark. The Pacific, 9 P. D. 124; 53 L. J. P. D. 67; 5 Asp. 263.

(b) In Fog, Mist, or Snow (and see p. 225).

58. No. 354, on p. 225, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 13. See same in Appendix.

2. Sailing Vessels.

(b) In Fog, Mist, or Snow (and see p. 227).

59. No. 378, on p. 227, as to the Rules of 1879, that every ship shall in fog, mist, or snow go at a moderate speed, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 13.

60. The term "moderate speed," in Art. 13, is a relative term depending on the circumstances. When a sailing ship, in a dense fog in the Bristol Channel, was going faster than was necessary to keep her under command, held, that she had infringed Art. 13. The Beta, 9 P. D. (C. A.) 134; 5 Asp. 276.

61. A sailing vessel should, in the case of a fog coming on where other vessels are likely to be, reduce her speed to as low a rate as is consistent with her keeping a good steerage way. The Zadok, 9 P. D. 114; 53 L. J. P. D. 72; 5 Asp. 252.

62. A sailing vessel held to blame for going five knots an hour in a fog where numerous vessels were to be expected. Ibid.

63. Under Art. 13, a vessel in a river or narrow arm of the sea should, in a dense fog, even before the whistle or fog-horn of another vessel is heard, be brought as nearly as possible to a standstill, so as to be just under command. Per Brett, M. R., The Dordogne, 10 P. D. 6; 54 L. J. P. D. 29; 5 Asp. 328.

64. In the open sea the rule need not be so strictly construed, unless a whistle or fog-horn is heard. Ibid.

(c) Slackening of Speed on Risk of Collision.

65. Although Art. 18 does not apply to a sailing vessel, she ought, under similar circumstances, to take off sail until she brings herself as nearly to a standstill as is possible whilst being under command. Per Brett, M. R., The Dordogne, 10 P. D. 6; 45 L. J. P. D. 29; 5 Asp. 328.

3. Slackening of Speed of Steamers on Risk of Collision.

(a) Rules of 1885—1863 (and see pp. 228—230).

66. No. 386, on p. 228, as to Rules of 1879, requiring every steamer approaching another ship with risk of collision to slacken speed or stop, and reverse if necessary, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 18, and see same in Appendix.

67. Two steamers, the C. and the S., were meeting at night so as to pass starboard to starboard. When the S. had got about three points on the starboard bow of the C., and a quarter of a mile distant, the master of the C. saw the white and green lights of the S. coming into line. This showed that probably the S. was porting, as she in fact was. The engines of the C. had been previously stopped, and afterwards, but not until the red light of the S. was seen, they were reversed. A collision ensued. The S. having been held to blame: Held, also, that the C. should have reversed her engines when the lights of the S. were seen coming into line, as this indicated a probable risk of collision, and that the C. was to blame under Art. 18. The Stanmore, 10 P. D. (C. A.) 134; 54 L. J. P. D. 89; 53 L. T. 10; 33 W. R. 197.

69. See also The Dordogne, No. 78, infra.

70. Collision between the T. and L. The T. held solely to blame in the court below, the Court of Session. On appeal, held, that the L. was also to blame under the 18th Sea Collision Rule of 1879, for not having eased or stopped her engines earlier. Maclaren v. Compagnie Francaise de Navigation à Vapeur, H. L. 9 App. Cas. 640. [SCOTCH.]

71. Vessel held to blame for not reversing pursuant to Rule 18. The Emmy Haase, 9 P. D. 81; 53 L. J. P. D. 43; 5 Asp. 216.

72. Compliance with Rule 18 at the very moment when danger becomes apparent is not necessary, for a man must have time to consider. Ibid.

73. Art. 18 becomes applicable before there is actual risk of collision, and while risk of collision can be avoided. The Beryl, 9 P. D. (C. A.) 137; 53 L. J. P. D. 75; 5 Asp. 321.

4. Stopping and Reversing of Steamer's Engines on Risk of Collision.

(a) Rules of 1884—1863 (and see p. 230).

75. No. 393, on p. 230, as to Rules of 1879, requiring every steamer approaching another ship with risk of collision to slacken speed or stop and reverse if necessary, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 18. See same in Appendix.

5. Slackening of Steamer's Speed and Stopping in Fog, Mist, or Snow (and see p. 231).

76. A steamer in a dense fog, when it hears a whistle at no great distance, should not merely slow but should stop. The Kirby Hall, 8 P. D. 71; 52 L. J. P. D. 31; 5 Asp. 90.

77. A steamer should stop and reverse, if in a dense fog, if a whistle or fog-horn is heard in the vicinity on either bow and approaching, because there must then be a risk of collision. The John M'Intyre, 9 P. D. 135 (C. A.); 53 L. J. P. D. 115; 5 Asp. 278.

78. The steamship D., in a dense fog off Ushant, was proceeding slow when a whistle was heard about three points on her starboard bow. This whistle was heard several times and was answered. In about a quarter of an hour the steamer E. appeared crossing the bows of the D. from starboard to port, about a ship's length away. The engines of the D. were then put full speed astern, but a collision occurred. Held, by the Court of Appeal (affirming the judgment of the court below), that the D. had infringed Arts. 13 and 18, and was therefore to blame as well as the E. The Dordogne, 10 P. D. 6; 54 L. J. P. D. 29; 5 Asp. 328.

79. It is the duty of a steamer hearing the whistle of another several times, and being in a state of uncertainty as to her position, not only to stop her engines but to reverse, so as to take her way off by the time the vessels come within hailing distance. The Ebor, 11 P. D. 25; 54 L. T. 201.

80. A steamer which in a fog neglected to do so held to blame, notwithstanding the Trinity Masters were of opinion she was navigated with due care. The Palermo, December 11, 1883.

81. The steamer T., in a fog off Cromer, heard a whistle almost right ahead; she was then going slowly, about three knots an hour, and she continued at this speed for about a minute, until a second whistle was heard, when her engines were stopped and reversed; but the steamer E. coming into sight, a collision occurred. The owners of the E. admitted at the trial that their vessel was to blame. Held, by the Court of Appeal, affirming the Admiralty Division, that the T. was also to blame for having infringed Art. 18 by going on at the same speed after the first whistle was heard. The Ebor, 11 P. D. (C. A.) 25; 54 L. T. 201.

82. Held, also, by Lord Esher, M. R., that the plaintiffs were also to blame as having infringed Art. 13. Ibid.

83. Held, that the term "moderate speed" in the rule meant moderate under the circumstances. And if the master of a vessel heard a whistle ahead, no matter whether dull or not, yet, as it would indicate there was a vessel ahead and it might be coming towards his vessel, it was his duty at once to slacken his speed and go as slowly as he could, and, even if it were necessary with that object, to stop, and go on again at as slow a rate as possible. Ibid.

8. Steamers and Ships in Tow.1. Actions between Tug and Tow.(a) Generally (and see p. 231).

84. Tug owners are under an implied obligation to supply an efficient tug, and one properly equipped, and a term in their contract that they will not be responsible for the default of the master does not release them from this obligation. The Undaunted, 11 P. D. 46.

85. It is not the duty of those in charge of a tow, which is being towed with a long scope of hawser, by night at sea, to direct the movements of the tug. The circumstances are different to towing by day in a river. The Stormcock, 4 Asp. 410; 53 L. T. 53.

86. As to towage generally, see tit. SALVAGE, Pt. I. c. 6, s. 15, p. 1835.

9. Ships out of Command.1. Rules of 1885 and 1863.(a) Generally.

87. No. 429, on p. 235, as to the Rules of 1879, requiring balls or shapes to be carried by day by ships out of command, is the same as those in Art. 5 (a) of the Rules of 1884. See both sets of Rules in the Appendix.

(b) Lights.

88. As to the lights to be carried at night by such ships, see Nos. 112, 113, infra.

(c) Signals (and see p. 235).

89. The lights and shapes required to be shown by this article are to be taken by other ships as signals that the ship showing them is not under command, and cannot, therefore, get out of the way. See Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 5, sub-art. (d).

90. For the signals to be made by ships in distress and requiring assistance, see No. 94, infra.

See also No. 87, supra.

(d) Ships engaged on Telegraph Cables.(aa) Generally.

91. A ship, whether a steamer or sailing ship, employed in laying or in picking up a telegraph cable, shall by day carry in a vertical line one over the other, not less than six feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three shapes not less than two feet in diameter, of which the top and bottom shall be globular in shape and red in colour, and the middle one diamond in shape and white. See Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 5 (b).

92. As to the lights to be carried by such ships at night, see Nos. 109, 110, infra.

(cc) Signals (and see p. 236).

93. The lights and shapes required to be shown by this article are to be taken by other ships as signals that the ship showing them is not under command, and cannot, therefore, get out of the way. The signals to be made by ships in distress and requiring assistance are contained in Art. 27. See Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 5, sub-art. (d).

See also No. 91, supra.

9a. Ships in Distress.

94. When a ship is in distress and requires assistance from other ships or from the shore, the following shall be the signals to be used or displayed by her, either together or separately; that is to say, in the daytime: (1) A gun fired at intervals of about a minute; (2) the International Code signal of distress indicated by N.C.; (3) the distant signal, consisting of a square flag, having either above or below it a ball or anything resembling a ball; at night, (1) a gun fired at intervals of about a minute; (2) flames on the ship (as from a burning tar barrel, oil barrel, &c.); (3) rockets or shells, throwing stars of any colour or description, fired one at a time, at short intervals. See Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 27.

12. British and French Fishing Vessels under the Sea Fisheries Acts.1. Generally (and see p. 239).

95. See tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. c. 14, p. 1238, and same title, part and chapter in Addenda.

Part V.—DUTIES AS TO LIGHTS.

1. Rules of 1885—1863.

1. Generally (and see p. 240).

96. The lights mentioned in the following articles, numbered 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11, and no others, shall be carried in all weathers, from sunset to sunrise. Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 2, and see same infra, in Appendix.

97. The fact that an improper light is carried by direction of a pilot in charge by compulsion of law will not relieve the owners from liability, as it is the master's duty to prevent the rules as to lights being infringed. The Ripon, 10 P. D. 65; 54 L. J. P. D. 56; 5 Asp. 365.

98. Instructions as to lights issued by the Board of Trade to their surveyors are not, except so far as they are authorized by statute, binding upon the owners of either British or foreign ships. The Magnet, L. R. 4 A. & E. 417; 44 L. J. Adm. 1.

2. Sea-going Steamers under Way.(a) Generally (and see p. 241).

99. No. 472, on p. 241, as to the Rules of 1875, in regard to steamers' masthead lights is to the same effect as Rules of 1884, Art. 3. See both sets of Rules in Appendix.

(b) Masthead Light.

100. No. 477, on p. 241, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to steamers' masthead lights, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 3(a). See same in Appendix.

(c) Side Lights (and see p. 241).

101. Nos. 481 and 482, pp. 241, 242, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to ships' side lights, are the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 3 (b) and (c). See same in Appendix.

(d) Screens to Side Lights (and see p. 242).

102. No. 484, on p. 242, as to the Rules of 1879, as regards the screens to side lights, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 3 (d). See same in Appendix.

3. Steamers towing (and see p. 243).

103. No. 486, on p. 243, as to Rules of 1879, in regard to lights of steamers towing, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 4. See same in Appendix.

4. Sailing Ships under Way or in Tow (and see p. 244).

104. No. 490, on p. 244, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to the lights of sailing ships under way or in tow, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 6. See same in Appendix.

5. Ships being Overtaken.(a) Generally (and see p. 244).

105. No. 494, on p. 244, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to the white light to be shown astern by an overtaken ship, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 11. See same in Appendix.

106. A smack was on the port tack, with her trawling gear down, and she was making about one knot an hour. A globular white light was exhibited from her weather crosstree, but this light was partially obscured from overtaking vessels by the smack's sails. The smack did not exhibit any other light to an overtaking steamer. Held, that the smack had infringed Art. 11. The Pacific, 9 P. D. 124; 53 L. J. P. D. 67; 5 Asp. 263.

107. Action by the owners of the Norwegian ship H. G. against the steamer M. P., in respect of a collision in the Straits of Gibraltar about midnight. As the steamer continued to approach, flare-up lights were burnt on board the H. G. to attract her attention. The M. P. then opened her green light, but almost immediately afterwards shut it in again, leaving her masthead and red lights visible. Another flare-up was then burnt, but the M. P. struck the H. G. on the starboard bow, and sunk her, drowning her captain and seven of her crew. Held, that the H. G. was justified in burning flare-up lights, and that the M. P. was alone to blame. The Merchant Prince, 10 P. D. 139; 54 L. J. P. D. 79; 53 L. T. 914; 34 W. R. 231.

108. On the question, what is the meaning of being overtaken in Art. 11, held, that where one vessel ought to see that another was coming nearer to her into a position which might lead to danger, and so as not to be able to see her red or green side lights, then the obligation to show a white light arose. The leading vessel must give an intimation of her presence to the other in reasonable time. Per the Lord Chancellor, The Main (C. A.), June 3, 1886.

6. Ships engaged on Telegraph Cables (and see p. 245).

109. No. 500, p. 245, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to the lights to be carried by ships laying or picking up telegraph cables, is the same as Art. 5 (b) of the Rules of 1884, except that instead of all these lights being red, the highest and lowest are to be red and the middle white, and the lights are to be not less than six feet apart, and they are to be of such a character that the red lights shall be visible at the same distance as the white light. See both sets of Rules in the Appendix.

110. The ships referred to in this article, when not making any way through the water, shall not carry the side lights, but when making way shall carry them. The lights and shapes required to be shown by this article are to be taken by other ships as signals that the ship showing them is not under command, and cannot therefore get out of the way. See the Sea Collision Rules, 1884, Art. 5.

111. For the signals to be made by ships in distress and requiring assistance, see No. 94, supra.

7. Ships out of Command (and see p. 245).

112. No. 502, p. 245, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to the lights to be carried by ships under command is the same as Art. 5 (a) of the Rules of 1884, except that these red lights are to be visible in a dark night and clear atmosphere at least two miles. See both sets of Rules in Appendix.

113. These ships, when not making any way through the water, shall not carry the side lights, but when making way shall carry them. The lights and shapes required to be shown by this article are to be taken by other ships as signals that the ship showing them is not under command, and cannot therefore get out of the way. See the Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 5, sub-arts. (c) and (d).

113a. For the signals to be made by ships in distress and requiring assistance, see No. 94, supra.

7a. Ships in Distress.

114. See No. 94, supra.

9. Ships at Anchor (and see p. 246).

115. No. 511, on p. 246, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to the lights of ships at anchor, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 8. See same in Appendix.

116. Collision between a vessel under way and a vessel showing an anchor light but actually in motion. The latter held to blame in the court below and Court of Appeal. The Tiber, 6th June, 1886.

10. Pilot Vessels on Pilotage Duty (and see p. 246).

117. No. 517, on p. 246, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to the lights of pilot vessels engaged on pilot duty, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 9. See same in Appendix.

11. Pilot Vessels not on Pilotage Duty (and see p. 247).

118. No. 519, on p. 247, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to pilot vessels not on pilotage duty, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 9. See same in Appendix.

12. Small Vessels in bad Weather (and see p. 247).

119. No. 521, on p. 247, as to the Rules of 1879, in regard to the lights for small vessels in bad weather, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 7. See same in Appendix.

12a. Sea Fishing Boats.

120. The regulations respecting lights for the time being in force under the M. S. Acts, shall, so far as they relate to sea fishing boats, be deemed to be provisions of this act, and may be enforced accordingly, and a sea fishing officer shall for that purpose, in addition to his other powers, have the same powers as are given to any officer by the M. S. Acts. See the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22), s. 6.

121. As to sea fishing boats generally, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. II. p. 1235, and same tit. and part in Addenda.

13. Open Fishing and other Boats.

(a) Generally (and see p. 247).

122. In lieu of No. 524, on p. 247, see Sea Collision Rules of 1884 and 1885, infra, Nos. 123—144, infra, Art. 10 of 1884 and 1885, and its subdivisions in Appendix.

(b) Under Way (and see p. 247).

123. In lieu of No. 528, on p. 247. Open boats and fishing vessels of less than twenty tons net registered tonnage, when under way and when not having their nets, trawls, dredges, or lines in the water, shall not be obliged to carry the coloured side lights; but every such boat and vessel shall in lieu thereof have ready at hand a lantern with a green glass on the one side and a red glass on the other side, and on approaching to or being approached by another vessel such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side. See Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 10.

13a. Fishing Vessels and Fishing Boats in the European Seas, North of Cape Finisterre.

(a) Generally.

124. All fishing vessels and fishing boats when in the sea off the coast of Europe lying north of Cape Finisterre and of twenty tons net registered tonnage, or upwards, when under way and when not required by the following regulations in this article to carry and show the lights therein named, shall carry and show the same lights as other vessels under way. See Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 10(a).

(b) Steam Vessels Trawling (and see p. 248).

125. Steam vessels in the European seas, north of Cape Finisterre, engaged in trawling when under steam, if of twenty tons gross register tonnage or upwards, and having their trawls in the water, and not being stationary in consequence of their gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, shall between sunset and sunrise either carry and show the lights required by Art. 3 of the Regulations of August, 1884 (for which see No. 472, on p. 241, and No. 99, supra, p. 2364), or shall carry and show in lieu thereof, but not in addition thereto, the following, for which see Nos. 126, 127, infra. Ibid. of December, 1884, in Appendix.

126. (1) On or in front of the foremast head and in the same position as the white light which other steamers are required to carry, a lantern showing a white light ahead, a green light on the starboard side, and a red light on the port side, so constructed and arranged as to show an uniform and unbroken white light over an arc of the horizon of four points of the compass, an uniform and unbroken green light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, and an uniform and unbroken red light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, and so fixed as to show the white light from right ahead to two points on the bow on each side of the ship, the green light from two points on the starboard bow to four points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and the red light from two points on the port bow to four points abaft the beam on the port side; and (2) a white light in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light all round the horizon; the lantern containing such white light shall be carried lower than the lantern showing the green, white, and red lights, so, however, that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than six feet, nor more than twelve feet. Ibid. Sched. I.

127. These lights are to be of such a character as to be visible at a distance of not less than two miles on a dark night with a clear atmosphere. Ibid.

128. Such steamers when not having their trawls in the water shall carry the lights required in Art. 3 of the Rules of August, 1884 (for which see No. 472, on p. 241, and No. 99, supra, p. 2364). Ibid.

129. The rules in No. 126, supra, do not apply to foreign vessels until made applicable thereto by Order in Council. Ibid.

(c) Sailing Vessels Trawling (and see p. 248).

130. Sailing vessels in the European seas, north of Cape Finisterre, engaged in trawling, if of twenty tons net register tonnage or upwards, and having their trawls in the water, and not being stationary in consequence of their gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, shall between sunset and sunrise either carry and show the lights required by Art. 6 of the Regulations of 1884 (for which see No. 490, on p. 244, and No. 104, supra), or shall carry and show in lieu thereof, but not in addition thereto, the following (for which see No. 131, infra). Ibid. in Appendix.

131. On or in front of the foremost head a lantern having a green glass on the starboard side and a red glass on the port side, so constructed, fitted, and arranged that the red and green do not converge, and so as to show an uniform and unbroken green light over an arc of the horizon of twelve points of the compass, and an uniform and unbroken red light over an arc of the horizon of twelve points of the compass, and so fixed as to show the green light from right ahead to four points abaft the beam on the star-board side, and the red light from right ahead to four points abaft the beam on the port side; and (2) a white light in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light all round the horizon; the lantern containing such white light shall be carried lower than the lantern showing the green and red lights, so, however, that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than six feet, and not more than twelve feet. Ibid. Sched. II. in Appendix.

132. These lights are to be of such a character as to be visible at a distance of not less than two miles on a dark night with a clear atmosphere. Ibid.

133. Such sailing vessels when not having their trawls in the water shall carry the lights required in Art. 6 of the Rules of August, 1884 (for which see No. 490, on p. 244, and No. 104, supra). Ibid.

134. The rules in No. 131, supra, do not apply to foreign vessels until made applicable thereto by Order in Council. Ibid.

135. As regards sailing vessels engaged in trawling, such vessels having their trawls in the water and not being stationary in consequence of their gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, if they do not carry and show the lights required by Art. 6 of the Regulations of 1884 (for which see No. 490, on p. 244, and No. 104, supra), or the lights required by the Regulations of December, 1884 (for which see No. 131, supra), shall carry and show in lieu thereof a white light in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light all round the horizon, and visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, for a distance of at least two miles; and also a sufficient supply of red pyrotechnic lights which shall each burn for at least thirty seconds, and be visible for the same distance under the same conditions as the white light. The white light shall be shown from sunset to sunrise, and one of the red pyrotechnic lights shall be shown on approaching, or on being approached by, another ship or vessel in sufficient time to prevent collision. Ibid. of June, 1885, in Appendix.

136. These lights are to be carried and shown in lieu of, but not in addition to, the lights required by the Sea Collision Rules of August and December, 1884. Ibid.

(d) Vessels Drift-net Fishing (and see p. 248).

137. All vessels in such localities, when engaged in fishing with drift-nets, shall exhibit two white lights from any part of the vessel where they can be best seen, placed so that the vertical distance between them shall be not less than 6 feet and not more than 10 feet; and so that the horizontal distance between them measured in a line with the keel of the vessel shall be not less than 5 feet and not more than 10 feet. The lower of these two lights shall be the more forward, and both of them shall be of such a character, and contained in lanterns of such construction, as to show all round the horizon, on a dark night with a clear atmosphere, for a distance of not less than three miles. See Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 10 (b).

138. A vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out shall carry the same lights as a vessel when engaged in fishing with drift-nets. Ibid. Art. 10 (c).

(f) Vessels becoming Stationary during Fishing.

139. If a vessel when fishing becomes stationary in consequence of her gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, she shall show the light and make the fog-signal for a vessel at anchor. Ibid. Art. 10 (d).

(g) Use of Flare-ups.

140. Fishing vessels and open boats may at any time use a flare-up in addition to the lights which they are by this article required to carry and show. All flare-up lights exhibited by a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net, shall be shown at the after part of the vessel, excepting that, if the vessel is hanging by the stern to her trawl, dredge, or drag-net, they shall be exhibited from the bow. Ibid. Art. 10 (e).

(h) At Anchor.

141. Every fishing vessel and every open boat, when at anchor between sunset and sunrise, shall exhibit a white light visible all round the horizon at a distance of at least one mile. See Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 10 (f).

(i) In Fog, Mist, or Snow.

142. In fog, mist, or falling snow, a drift-net vessel attached to her nets, and a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag-net, and a vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out, shall, at intervals of not more than two minutes, make a blast with her fog-horn and ring her bell alternately. Ibid. Art. 10 (g).

15. Fishing Vessel Trawling (and see p. 248).

143. A trawler attached to her trawl to be stationary within Art. 9 of the Regulations, 1863 (temporarily substituted for Art. 10 of the Regulations, 1880), must not be going faster than is necessary to enable her to keep herself under command. The Dunelm, 9 P. D. (C. A.) 164; 53 L. J. P. D. 81; 5 Asp. 304.

144. A trawler attached to her trawl was going $2\frac{1}{2}$ knots an hour through the water and $4\frac{1}{2}$ knots an hour over the ground. She carried a single white light. Held, that she was not stationary within Art. 9 of the Regulations, 1863, and that she was subject to Art. 3 of the Regulations of 1879, and ought to have carried side lights. Ibid.

Part VI.—DUTIES IN FOG, MIST, OR SNOW.

1. Signals.

1. Rules of 1884—1879.

(a) Generally (and see p. 251).

145. Nothing in these rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, master or crew thereof, from the consequences of any neglect to carry signals. See the Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 24, in Appendix.

(b) Steamers (and see p. 252).

146. No. 557, on p. 252, as to the Rules of 1879, requiring steamers to have whistles, fog-horns, and bells, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 12. See same in Appendix.

(c) Sailing Ships (and see p. 252).

147. No. 559, on p. 252, as to the Rules of 1879, requiring sailing vessels to have fog-horns and bells, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 12. See same in Appendix.

(d) Steamers under Way (and see p. 252).

148. No. 561, on p. 252, as to the Rules of 1879, requiring steamers to sound their whistles in fogs, &c., is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 12 (a). See same in Appendix.

(e) Sailing Ships under Way.

(aa) Generally (and see p. 252).

149. No. 564, on p. 252, as to the Rules of 1879, requiring sailing ships to sound their fog-horns in fog, &c. is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 12 (b). See same in Appendix.

150. Proof that a fog-horn was blown, yet was not heard at a distance it might be expected to be heard, cannot be accepted as proof that there was negligence on the part of those who did not hear it. The Zadok, 9 P. D. 114; 53 L. J. P. D. 72; 5 Asp. 252.

(f) Steamers and Sailing Ships not under Way.

(aa) Generally (and see p. 253).

151. No. 567, on p. 253, as to the Rules of 1879, requiring vessels not under way to ring their bells in fog, &c. is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 12 (c). See same in Appendix.

152. A steamer having let go her anchor in consequence of a sudden fog and whilst swinging to the tide with the assistance of a tug, is justified in ringing her bell, and there is no duty on her to sound her whistle. The Consul, 1st May, 1885.

153. But there may be circumstances in which a vessel with her anchor down, and a considerable scope of chain out, may be so under way as to make it her duty to whistle instead of to ring her bell. Ibid.

154. See Nos. 139—142, supra.

5. Steering (and see p. 254).

155. Held, that captains of ships have no right to assume, on first hearing the whistle of another steamer in a fog, that that steamer is on an opposite course to themselves, and at once to alter the course of their own vessel. In this case both vessels altered their courses immediately on hearing the whistle of the other, and were held to blame for having done so. The Bellcairn, Jan. 19, 1885.

See also p. 231, Nos. 398—404, and Nos. 76—83, p. 2362.

Part VII.—DUTIES AS TO STEERING.

1. Rules of 1885—1863.

1. Generally (and see p. 255).

156. A manœuvre made too late to affect the collision does not make the ship liable as having contributed to the collision, even if the manœuvre was erroneous. The Bougainville, The James C. Stevenson, L. R. 5 P. C. 316; 28 L. T. 822; 21 W. R. 653.

1a. Defects in Steering Gear.

157. The defendants' steamer while proceeding down the Thames, owing to some sudden derangement of the patent steam steering gear, ran into the plaintiffs' vessel which was lying at a wharf. A few days before, a similar difficulty had arisen with the gear, but on examination the cause could not be discovered. Some 500 of these gears were in use on steamers. Held, that negligence must be proved against the defendants to render them liable. The European, 10 P. D. 99; 54 L. J. P. D. 61; 52 L. T. 868.

158. Held, also, that having regard to what had taken place a few days before, the defendants were guilty of negligence. Ibid.

2. Steamers meeting.

(a) Generally (and see p. 254).

159. Nos. 583—587, on pp. 254, 255, as to the Rules of 1879, for steamers meeting end on, are the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 15. See same in Appendix.

(c) One Vessel misled by wrong Lights of the Other.

160. The steamer G. on seeing a green light about three-quarters of a mile distant starboarded. Shortly afterwards the port side of the B. was seen without a red light. As the only chance of avoiding a collision the G. hard astarboarded, and kept on at full speed, but the B. struck the G. on the starboard side. Held, that Art. 18 did not apply to the G., and that Art. 23 did, and that the B. was alone to blame. The Benares, 9 P. D. (C. A.) 16; 53 L. J. P. D. (C. A.) 2; 5 Asp. 52, 171.

161. See also p. 249, No. 545.

3. Steamers crossing (and see p. 256).

162. No. 596, on p. 256, as to the Rules of 1879, for steamers crossing, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 16. See same in Appendix.

163. Article 16 becomes applicable before there is actual risk of collision, and while risk of collision can be avoided. The Beryl, 9 P. D. 137 (C. A.); 53 L. J. P. D. 75; 5 Asp. 193, 321.

164. Two steamers, the A. and the B., were on crossing courses at about right angles, the A. having the B. on her starboard side. At a distance of from a quarter to half a mile the B., finding that the A. was not giving way, eased. As the A. still did not get out of the way the B., at a distance of about 300 yards, stopped and reversed. A collision was then unavoidable. Held, reversing the judgment of the court below, that the B. ought to have stopped and reversed earlier, and that, therefore, the B. was to blame as well as the A. Ibid.

165. Where a vessel is both overtaking and crossing, the overtaking rule (Art. 20) is to prevail. The Seaton, 9 P. D. 1; 53 L. J. P. D. 15; 5 Asp. 191.

4. Indications of Courses by Steamers (and see p. 258).

166. No. 604, on p. 258, as to the Rules of 1879, for the indications of courses by steamers, is the same as the Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 19. See same in Appendix.

5. Steamer and Sailing Ship* (and see p. 258).

167. No. 609, on p. 258, as to Rules of 1879, requiring steamers to keep out of

* (13) An American ship bound for New York came into collision, at night, about fifty miles from New York, with a British steamer bound from New York to Liverpool. The ship averred that she was close-hauled on the starboard tack, heading a little S. of the way of sailing vessels, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 17. See same in Appendix.

168. A steamer and sailing vessel, on opposite courses, came into collision. The sailing vessel saw the steamer a good distance off port to port, and observing that the steamer took no steps to avoid her, the sailing vessel, when so near that it was dangerous to keep her course, ported. The steamer shortly afterwards starboarded. Held, that the steamer was alone to blame, as it was her duty to keep out of the way either by starboarding or porting; and that she had a bad look-out. The Velasquez, L. R. 1 P. C. 494; 4 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 426.

6. Steamer with Ship in tow, and Sailing Ship (and see p. 260).

169. No. 620, on p. 260, as to Rules of 1879, requiring steamers with ships in tow to keep out of the way of sailing vessels, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 17. See same in Appendix.

8. Sailing Ships on opposite tacks.

(a) Both free (and see p. 261).

170. No. 624, on p. 261, as to Rules of 1879, when both vessels are running free, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 14 (c). See same in Appendix.

(b) Both close-hauled (and see p. 261).

171. No. 629, on p. 261, as to the Rules of 1879, when both vessels are close-hauled, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 14 (b). See same in Appendix.

172. Collision between two sailing vessels, the B. on the starboard tack and the W. on the port tack. Each vessel kept her reach until the collision was inevitable. Held, in the Privy Council, overruling the judgment of the court below, that the B. was close-hauled, and, therefore, it was the duty of the W. to get out of her way, and that she was to blame for not having done so. The Byfoged Christensen — The William Frederick, 4 App. Cas. 669; 4 Asp. 201.

(c) One free, the other close-hauled (and see p. 262).

173. No. 638, on p. 262, as to the Rule of 1879, when vessels are on opposite tacks for the one free to give way to the one close-hauled, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 14 (a). See same in Appendix.

(d) One having the Wind aft (and see p. 263).

174. No. 643, on p. 263, as to the Rule of 1879, for the ship which has the wind aft to keep out of the way of the other ship, is the same as Sea Collision Rules, 1884, Aug. 14 (c). See same in Appendix.

9. Sailing Ships on the same tack (and see p. 263).

(a) Both free.

175. No. 647, on p. 263, as to the Rules of 1879, that when both sailing ships are running free on the same tack, the ship to windward of the other shall give way to that other, is the same as Sea Collision Rules, 1884, Art. 14 (d). See same in Appendix.

(c) One free, the other close-hauled (and see p. 264).

176. No. 652, on p. 264, as to the Rules of 1879, as to the vessel free giving way to the vessel close-hauled, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 14 (d). See same in Appendix.

W., that she saw the lights of the steamer on her starboard bow, at a distance of several miles, and kept her course till just as the vessels were coming together, when her helm was altered, but too late to affect her course. The steamer averred that she was heading E. by S. $\frac{1}{4}$ S. when she saw the green light of the ship two or three miles distant, a little on the port bow, that her helm was ported, but the bearing of the light was not changed, that when the collision was inevitable her helm was put hard a-port, and her speed checked, but not before, and she struck the ship on the starboard bow, and sunk her. Held, that the steamer was to blame in continuing to port, although the bearing of the ship's light was not changed, and in not stopping until the collision was inevitable. Dyer v. The National SS. Co., 4 Asp. 27; Circuit Court of New York. [AMERICAN.]

(d) One having the Wind aft (and see p. 264).

177. No. 655, on p. 264, as to the Rules of 1879, as to the vessel having the wind aft keeping out of the way of the other ship, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 14 (e). See same in Appendix.

10. Overtaking Ship (and see p. 264).

178. No. 657, on p. 264, as to the Rules of 1879, as to the overtaking ship keeping out of the way of the overtaken ship, is the same as the Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 20. See same in Appendix.

179. Where a vessel is both overtaking and crossing, the overtaking rule (Art. 20 of the Regulations of 1879 and 1884) is to prevail. The Seaton, 9 P. D. 1; 53 L. J. P. D. 15; 5 Asp. 191.

180. Collision between two sailing vessels, the R. and the N., the N. overtaking the R. The R. commenced tacking when at least half a mile from the N., but missed stays, and was struck in her stern. Held, that the N., as the overtaking vessel, was to blame. The North, 1st Nov. 1885.

181. It does not follow because a vessel misses stays, that her crew are to blame for her having done so. Ibid.

182. Action by the owners of the French steamer S. A. against the steamer S. in respect of a collision in the River Usk. The S. A. was going down the river against the flood tide ahead of the S., and stopped to pick up a pilot boat a few turns astern, her whistle at the same time being blown to call the attention of those on board the S. to her manœuvres. By the reverse action of her screw her head canted slightly across the river to starboard, but there was plenty of room left on each side of her for the S. to pass clear. The S. however struck and damaged the S. A. on the starboard side. Held, that the S. A. performed a common manœuvre of stopping to pick up her pilot boat, and did so in a proper manner, at the same time whistling to warn the S. astern of her; that there was ample room for the S., if properly navigated, to have passed clear on either side of her, and plenty of time for the captain of the S. to have stopped and reversed his engines and so avoided the collision, and that the S. was solely to blame. The Solent, 22nd Jan. 1885.

12. Duty of the Ship out of whose way the other is to keep (and see p. 268).

183. No. 682, on p. 268, as to the Rules of 1879, that when one ship is to keep out of the way the other ship is to keep her course, is the same as Sea Collision Rules of 1884, Art. 22. See same in Appendix.

184. The words "keep her course," in Art. 22, mean that a vessel is to keep in the same direction as before. It has nothing to do with the question of speed. The Beryl, 9 P. D. 137 (C. A.); 53 L. J. P. D. 75; 5 Asp. 321.

Part VIII.—IN PORTS, HARBOURS AND DOCKS.

1. Steamers in Narrow Channels.

1. Rules of 1879.

(a) Generally (and see p. 273).

185. Article 21 of the Regulations, 1880, is applicable to steamers entering or coming out of Falmouth Harbour. The Clydach, 5 Asp. 336; 51 L. T. 668.

186. The Strait of Messina is a narrow channel within the meaning of the above Article. As to what particular width and length will constitute a narrow channel, quære. The Rhondda, 8 App. Cas. 549; 5 Asp. 114.

186*a*. The steamer A. L. improperly kept on the port side of a narrow channel, in breach of Art. 21. The steamer R. coming from the opposite direction hard-a-ported her helm, and this would have determined the risk of collision but for the action of a variable current. On discovering that the R. was not obeying her helm her engines were reversed, but too late to prevent a collision. Held, that there had been no infringement of Arts. 16 or 18 by the R. and that the A. L. was alone to blame. Ibid.

187. The Bristol Channel, in the neighbourhood of the English and Welsh grounds, held to be a narrow channel within the meaning of Art. 21. The Brooklyn City, 12th June, 1885.

3. Harbours, Docks, and Piers.

3. Actions by Dock Proprietors (and see p. 282).

188. By the Regulations for Falmouth Harbour, masters of vessels are to cast off and remove them when required, and in the event of refusal they may be removed by the dock master, and vessels are to strike their yards and masts if required.

The master of the E. was desired by the dock master to remove her to the western pier, and to strike his topgallant masts, &c. On his refusal, the vessel having only three persons on board, the dock master removed her to the western pier, where, during a gale, she broke from her moorings and did damage to the wharf. Held, that the master was bound to obey the order and assist in the removal of the ship, even though, if the interests of the ship alone were to be considered, such removal was injudicious; that it was the duty of the master to have kept a sufficient crew on board to protect his ship against ordinary perils; that the damage was caused by the negligence of the master, and his refusal to obey the orders of the dock master; and that the vessel was liable for the damage. The Excelsior, L. R. 2 A. & E. 268; 3 Asp. 151.

189. The respective duties of a dock company and the master of a ship depend in a measure upon the actual condition and place of the dock, as well as upon the statutes which regulate their authority. Ibid. 3 Asp. 154.

4. Actions against Dock Proprietors.

(a) Generally (and see p. 283).

190. The port or harbour of W., in New Zealand, belongs to the government, who have the control and management of it, with power to remove obstructions, and the public have a right to navigate therein, subject to the harbour regulations and without payment of harbour dues; the staiths and wharves belong to the government, which receives wharfage and tonnage dues in respect of vessels using them. Held, that it was the duty of the government to take reasonable care that vessels using the staiths in the ordinary manner could do so without damage. Reg. v. Williams, 9 App. Cas. 418.

191. Reasonable care is not shown when after notice of danger at a particular spot no inquiry is made as to its existence and extent, and no warning is given. Ibid.

192. The principle of liability for negligence established by Parnaby v. Lancaster Canal Co., 11 A. & E. 223; and The Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs, L. R. 1 H. L. 93, approved of and applied. Ibid.

193. The R. was anchored in Falmouth outer harbour, and was to be beached in the inner harbour. S., the harbour master, directed the master of the R. where to beach her, and before the R.

left the outer harbour S. came on board, although a Trinity pilot was there. When the R. arrived near the place where she was to be beached, S. gave directions as to the lowering of her anchor. The R. overran her anchor, and grounded on it just outside the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners. She sustained damage, and her owners brought an action against the harbour commissioners and S. in respect of such damages. Held, that there was negligence on the part of S., and that the place where the R. grounded was outside the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners. Held, also, that the duties of S. as harbour master comprised directions as to the mooring and beaching of vessels; that, by giving directions when he went on board, S. had resumed his functions as harbour master; that he was guilty of negligence; and that he and the commissioners were liable for the damages. Held, further, that S. was personally liable as a volunteer. The Rhosina, 10 P. D. 24; affirmed on appeal, Ibid. 131; 5 Asp. 460.

194. Action by the owners and underwriters of the B. A., of 1,700 tons, for damages for the loss incurred by the sinking of the vessel in the Royal Victoria Dock. The vessel arrived in the Royal Victoria Dock with a cargo early in December, and at the end of some ten days was moved to another jetty, which was admittedly much more exposed to the then prevailing gales from the west. The jury found that the B. A. was not properly moored at the second jetty; that the dock company was guilty of negligence in the mooring, and undertook the responsibility of the mooring; and that there was no negligence on the part of the plaintiffs' servants. Judgment for plaintiffs accordingly. M'Cunn v. London & St. Katherine's Dock Co., 19 May, 1886.

194a. Action by the owners of the schooner St. D. against the Sutton Harbour Improvement Company to recover damages for injuries sustained by the St. D., through grounding in Sutton harbour in December, 1884. The plaintiffs alleged that the St. D. entered the harbour in tow of a steam-tug; that while proceeding up the harbour those in charge of her were directed by the harbour master's assistant to moor at certain buoys, and that while doing so the vessel took the ground on a large stone or rock in the fairway of the harbour, and as the tide fell became so strained that she filled with water. Held, that the St. D. came into the harbour at a time when there was not sufficient water for her, and did so at her own risk; that she was not acting under the orders of the harbour master's assistant; that she had grounded in the fairway because there was not enough water for her; that the fairway was not a proper place for vessels to lie; and that the harbour authorities could not be supposed to warrant that vessels lying there would not suffer damage. Judgment for the defendants. The St. Devenick, Nov. 18, 1885.

196. Collision between the barque A. coming to an anchorage, and the N. at anchor. Held, in the court below, where there was a difference of opinion between the Trinity Masters, that the officer of the A. was not acting wrongly in bringing his vessel to anchor in the Downs among the shipping; but held, in the Court of Appeal, that a vessel about to come to anchor has to consider not only her own safety but also that of other vessels already at anchor, and whether she would be justified in causing peril to them must depend upon circumstances. The court put the question to its assessors—Ought an officer of ordinary care and skill, having regard to the safety of his own ship and also of the ships at anchor in the Downs, considering the state of the weather and the fact that his anchor had dragged under Dungeness, and that he had only one anchor left available, to have entered the Downs to endeavour to anchor there ahead of ships at anchor without the assistance of the tug which he had the opportunity of employing? The assessors answered in the negative, and the court held, that the A. might have made for Margate Roads, where she would have been better sheltered, but that the master endeavoured to anchor in the Downs for his own convenience, to communicate with the shore, and not to go too much out of his way, and was therefore to blame for the collision. The Annot Lyle, 11 P. D. 114.

6. Ships anchored or moored.

1. Generally (and see p. 289).

197. The defendant, under a local act, constructed a solid pier and floating landing-stage. The latter was moored by anchors and chains, one of the mooring chains was insufficiently buoyed to mark the anchor's position under the water. Held, in an action for injury by the anchor to a boat properly navigated, that there was a cause of action against the defendant for negligence in not sufficiently buoying the anchor. Jolliffe v. Wallasey Local Board, L. R. 9 C. P. 62; 43 L. J. C. P. 41; 29 L. T. 582.

198. In an action by the owners of the W. and her cargo, against the S. for damages caused by the W. coming in contact with the anchor of the S., the S. held to blame for having left her anchor unbuoyed. Clarke v. Scattergood, Marsden, 243.

See Bye-laws, allowed 21st November, 1884, of the Sharpness New Docks and Gloucester and Birmingham Navigation Company, made under the Gloucester Canal Acts, 1870 and 1874, the Sharpness Docks Act, 1879, and the acts incorporated therewith. Preamble.

202. As to all vessels at the entrances of or within the canal, being there at the risk of their masters or owners, Ibid. No. 6.

203. As to the power of the harbour-master to regulate by which of the two entrances to the canal from the Severn vessels shall enter, see 33 & 34 Vict. c. 61, s. 54.

204. Owners of vessels and floats of timber, and masters of vessels, are liable for all damage done to the canal by their vessels or floats of timber, or by any person employed about the same, and the vessel or floats of timber causing such damage may be detained as security for the damage done. The amount of damage may be recovered by distress and sale. See 10 Vict. c. 27, ss. 74, 75.

205. As to requirements that vessels are to be seaworthy, to have a sufficient crew, and to have no part of their side cloths under water, see Bye-Laws of Gloucester and Berkeley Canal Navigation Company, 1884, No. 2.

206. All steamers shall sound their whistle on approaching any turn in the canal, and until they are round the turn. Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 13.

207. No master shall navigate his vessel in the canal under sail. Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 1.

208. As to vessels with lowering masts and gear, unless from the nature of the cargo it cannot be done, lowering their masts before commencing to navigate the canal, and keeping them lowered until they have passed under the Severn Bridge, and that no such vessel shall be taken in tow until this has been done; but this does not apply to vessels having topmasts or mizens: Ibid. sub-n. 16.

209. Penalty of £10, after notice, against any master of a vessel entering the canal, or approaching the piers without his vessel being dismantled, as directed by the harbour-master. See 10 Vict. c. 27, s. 59.

210. The master of any vessel shall send such hands ashore as are necessary to assist in opening and closing the bridges, locks and gates. See Bye-Laws of November, 1884, No. 4, sub-n. 10.

211. As to vessels exceeding 150 tons register passing along the canal or through any of the locks or bridges, having proper persons with ropes on shore to check them; as to no wire rope being allowed as a check rope, and as to fenders, Ibid. sub-n. 9, 12.

212. Barges and boats without masts, or having their masts lowered, when tracked by other than steam-power, shall be allowed to keep on the towing-path side of the canal when other vessels are passing them. Ibid. sub-n. 6.

213. No vessel or raft shall be tracked or propelled on the canal by other than manual or horse-power, unless by permission of the company. Ibid. No. 29.

214. Whose officers shall determine the order and manner thereof. Ibid. No. 30.

215. As to no trawling for fish being allowed in the canal, and penalty against master doing so, or resisting search for nets by any officer of the company. Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 21.

216. The penalty against any person offending against any of the bye-laws, where the sum is not specifically stated, is a sum not exceeding £5. Ibid. Preamble.

2. Pilotage.

217. Pilotage in the canal is not compulsory, but if any person besides the master is employed in that capacity it must be one of the licensed pilots. The company will not be responsible for any damage done to or by any vessel whilst in the charge of a licensed pilot. Ibid. No. 10.

3. Speed.

218. As to passenger steamers meeting vessels or trains of vessels slackening their speed; and as to the speed of the tug when overtaken being slackened, and every facility given for the passenger steamer to pass, Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 14.

4. Easing and stopping of Engines.

219. As to vessels passing down the canal outward bound to the old entrance being stopped 250 yards from the Lock Gates, and having good and sufficient stern ropes fast to the shore, Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 8.

5. Steamers and Vessels in Tow.

220. See Nos. 212, 213, 218, supra, and Nos. 223, 224, and 243, infra.

6. Lights.

221. For limitations as to vessels navigating the canal from one hour after sunset until one hour before sunrise, and the lights they are then to carry, viz., a white light at the bow and a red light at the stern, or if a train of more than one vessel the white light at the bow of the first, and the red light at the stern of the last, see Bye-laws of November, 1884, No. 3.

7. Steering.

222. The rule of the way on the canal, except as otherwise ordered in Regulations, Nos. 4, 5, and 6 (for which see No. 212, supra, and Nos. 223—225, infra), is, that when vessels meet each other, those going towards Gloucester shall keep on the towing-path side of the canal, and those going towards Sharpness on the opposite side. Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 2.

223. Steamboats propelled only by their own power shall observe rule No. 2 in passing steamboats similarly propelled; but in meeting or passing all vessels that are being towed they shall keep on the side of the canal opposite the towing-path. Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 5.

224. Vessels not using check-lines, when they shall require to pass vessels employing check-lines, shall pass on the side of the canal opposite the towing-path, whichever way they may be going. Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 4.

225. Whenever two vessels meet, or will probably meet, in a part of the canal where there is not room to pass, the direction of any officer or bridge-keeper of the canal shall be obeyed. Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 7.

8. Vessels Overtaking or Overtaken.

226. When one vessel overtakes another, the one overtaken shall haul over to the side of the canal opposite the towing-path, and there remain, if necessary, until the other has passed. Ibid. September, 1884, sub-n. 3.

8a. Obstructions.

227. If any vessel shall be fastened or moored, or shall be in the Severn, near any of the company's locks or basins, or shall be sunk in any part of the canal, or of the river contiguous thereto, so as to obstruct or interrupt the passage of vessels through the canal, the master shall forfeit 20s. for every hour of such obstruction wilfully continued, after written notice of the company; and the company's officers may remove the same, and unload the vessel, if necessary; and seize and detain such vessel or lading for payment of the charges. See 33 & 34 Vict. c. 61, s. 68; 10 Vict. c. 27, s. 66.

9. Powers of Harbour Masters, Bridge Keepers and Others.

228. As to the general powers of harbour masters of the canal, see Bye-laws of 21 November, 1884, No. 1.

229. As to their powers for regulating the time at which, and the manner in which any vessel shall enter into, go out of, or lie in or near to the canal, and within the prescribed limits, if any, and its position, mooring, or unmooring, placing and removing, whilst therein, Ibid.

230. As to their powers for regulating the manner in which any vessel entering the canal, or coming to the piers, shall be dismantled, Ibid.

231. Masters of vessels within the canal, or at or near the piers, must regulate their vessels according to the directions of the harbour master. Penalty against masters for breach, £20. See 10 Vict. c. 27, s. 53.

232. See also Nos. 203, 209, 213, 214, 215, 225, 227, supra, and Nos. 233—240, infra.

10. Vessels Mooring, Docking, or Unmooring.

233. Masters of vessels in the canal, or at or near the piers, not having proper hawsers, tow-lines, or fasts properly fixed after notice from the harbour master, are liable to a penalty of £10. See 10 Vict. c. 27, s. 61.

234. As to penalty, if any vessel in the canal is improperly fastened or moored or left without a competent person in charge, see Bye-laws of November, 1884, No. 7.

235. No vessel shall be moored on the towing-path side of the canal, except with the consent or by order of the harbour master. Ibid. No. 4, sub-n. 15.

236. As to no person being allowed, without the authority of the harbour master, to unmoor or remove any vessel in the canal, or cut, cast off, or break any rope, chain, or fastening; and the offender is also liable for all damage beside penalty: see Bye-laws of September, 1884, No. 8.

237. As to masters of vessels after notice from the harbour master, removing their vessels from the canal when it is deemed necessary to repair or cleanse the canal; penalty for default, not exceeding £10; and the harbour master may remove it at the expense of the owner or master: see 10 Vict. c. 27, ss. 64, 65.

238. No vessel, except by permission of the harbour master, shall lie in either entrance to the canal. Penalty, £5 against masters for non-removal when required by the harbour master; and further penalty of £1 every hour they remain. Ibid. s. 63.

See also No. 210, supra, and Nos. 240—243, infra.

10a. Rafts of Timber.

239. No person shall float any timber upon the canal, or suffer the lading or cargo of any vessel entering or using the canal, to project on the outside of, or beyond the bulwarks of such vessel, so as to interfere with or obstruct the passage of any other vessel; but shall immediately upon notice given to him for that purpose remove such obstruction. See Bye-laws of November, 1884, No. 4, sub-n. 11; No. 31, Ibid. sub-nn. 1—9.

11. Sharpness Docks.

240. As to vessels stopping near the bridge, and as to the signals for opening it, see Bye-Laws of September, 1884, No. 4.

4. The Mersey.

6. Lights (and see p. 296).

241. Every vessel exceeding ten tons in the Mersey is to obey the Sea Collision Rules of 1884. See Order in Council of June 24, 1885, as to the Mersey, r. 1.

241a. The rule on p. 297, No. 971, as to lights for canal flats and vessels without masts while towed, is the same as Ibid. r. 2.

242. The rule on p. 296, No. 970, as to lights for steamers towing, is the same as Ibid. r. 3.

242a. The lights for vessels at anchor on p. 297, No. 973, are substantially the same as those in Ibid. r. 4. The lanterns are to be eight inches in diameter, and the light visible a mile. Ibid.

234. The light mentioned on p. 297, No. 972, as to be continuously shown by an overtaken vessel, is the same as Ibid. r. 5.

243a. The lights mentioned on p. 297,

No. 976, as marking obstructions, are the same as Ibid. r. 6, and the signals in No. 979, are the same. Ibid.

7. The Thames.

8. Construction and Effect of Breach.

244. The Thames Rules do not fall within the operation of s. 17 of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85), and therefore, though the court found in an action of collision that a steamer ought to have reversed under Rule 14, yet it did not find the steamer to blame, as reversing would not have made any difference in regard to the collision. The Harton, 9 P. D. 44; 5 Asp. 213; The Margaret, 9 P. D. 47; 8 Ibid. 126; 54 L. J. P. D. (H. L.) 18; 53 Ibid. 17; 52 Ibid. 65; 5 Asp. 137, 204, 371.

10. Speed of Steamers.

(d) Slackening on Rounding Points (and see p. 302).

245. A collision occurred off Blackwall Point between the steamer C. S., proceeding down the river against the tide, and the steamer M., coming up the river with the tide. It was alleged that the C. S. had not complied with Rule 23 of the Thames Rules. The judge of the Admiralty Division held the M. alone to blame. The Court of Appeal held that the C. S. had infringed Rule 23, and was also to blame. The House of Lords held that, assuming the C. S. had infringed the rule, her doing so had not, in fact, contributed to the collision, and that, therefore, she was not to blame, as the Thames Rules are not within the purview of s. 17 of the M. S. Act, 1873 (c. 85). The Margaret, 9 App. Cas. 873; 8 P. D. 126; 9 Ibid. 47; 52 Ibid. 65; 54 L. J. P. D. (H. L.) 18; 53 L. J. P. D. 17; 5 Asp. 137, 204, 371; 52 L. T. 361; 33 W. R. 281.

246. Notwithstanding the heading prefixed to the Thames Rules following Rule 16, the application of Rule 23 is not confined to the seaward side of a line drawn from Blackwall Point to Bow Creek. Ibid. 54 L. J. P. D. (H. L.) 18; 5 Asp. 371.

247. A "point" within the meaning of the Thames Rules, No. 23, begins where a vessel going round the point or promontory commences using her steerage power for the purpose of rounding, and it ends where the necessity for using that steerage power ceases. The words "before rounding" apply not only before a vessel begins to round the point, but they include the whole time during which she is rounding it. Ibid. 9 P. D. 47; 53 L. J. P. D. 17; 5 Asp. 204.

248. Quære, how far is the above strictly accurate? Ibid. 54 L. J. P. D. (H. L.) 18; 5 Asp. 371.

249. The meaning of the words "ease their engines and wait" in Rule 23 of the Thames Rules is that the vessel shall go as slowly as possible consistent with safety. Ibid. 9 P. D. 47; 53 L. J. P. D. 17; 5 Asp. 204.

250. Quære, is not the above too strict a construction of the words? Ibid. 54 L. J. P. D. (H. L.) 18; 5 Asp. 371.

16. Steering.

(d) Steamers crossing and Vessels going up or down (and see p. 304).

251. In an action for damages from a collision in the River Thames between two steamers, held, that one vessel was to blame under Art. 24 of the Thames Rules, which provides that "steam vessels crossing from one side of the river towards the other side shall keep out of the way of vessels navigating up and down the river." The Hispania, July 24, 1885.

(b) Complement of Crew (and see p. 308).

252. By the Thames watermen's bye-laws as to the navigation of barges on the Thames, it is provided by Bye-law 66, that no barge, &c. shall be navigated unless there be in charge of it a lighter-man licensed or an apprentice qualified. By the Bye-laws of the Company of Watermen, No. 35, it is required that in all cases in which it is required that two able and skilful persons shall be employed in the navigation, one waterman or lighter-man licensed, or an apprentice licensed, shall be deemed to be able and skilful persons. By the Bye-laws of the Thames Conservators, No. 16, it is required that all barges shall have at least one competent man on board constantly, and, when under way, one man in addition to assist in the navigation. In this case there was one licensed man on board and a longshore man not licensed. The magistrate convicted the owners, but stated a case. Held, that under the 16th Bye-law of the Conservancy Rules of 1872 and Bye-law 35, the two men to be on board must be competent, but a competent man did not mean a licensed man. Perkins v. Gingell, Q. B. D. Nov. 4, 1885.

8. The Tyne.

1. *Generally (and see p. 308).

253. A person while intoxicated shall not navigate any vessel. See Bye-laws of the Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 96.

254. A competent person in charge shall at all times, both by day and by night, be on board every boat or other vessel lying at or alongside any stairs, causeway or landing-place, and on board every sea-going vessel, whether serviceable, unserviceable, stranded, disused, or laid up. Ibid. No. 78.

255. Every steam vessel and every sailing vessel while under way shall be manned by a properly-qualified master, and a sufficient number of able-bodied and experienced men. Ibid. No. 16.

256. Every vessel before entering and while in the dock shall have its sails furled, its anchors stowed on deck, its standing and flying jibboom and mizen-boom rigged close. Ibid. No. 106.

257. For provisions for the control and management of the moorings by the harbour master, see the Tyne Improvement Act, 1852 (c. 110, L.), ss. 16—20.

258. As to the recovery of damages and penalties for damaging moorings, cutting ropes, and destroying boats of the commission, Ibid. ss. 23—26, 32.

259. As to the liability of the owner or master of any vessel or float of timber for such damages committed by persons on board, Ibid.

262. For provisions authorizing the commissioners to regulate the rate of speed of steamers on the Tyne, and penalties for breach, see the Tyne Improvement Act, 1861 (c. 91, L.), ss. 64, 65.

2. Look-out.

(a) Generally.

263. The master of any steam vessel carrying passengers shall, while the same is under way, be in such a position above the deck as to have an unobstructed view all round, clear of the vessel. See Bye-laws of Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 51.

264. Every steam vessel and every sailing vessel while under way shall during the day-time have one person, and during the night-time two persons, properly qualified, stationed at the bow as a look-out, and to give notice in due time of any obstruction or danger. Ibid. No. 46.

(b) In Fog, Mist, or Snow.

265. Every steam vessel and every sailing vessel while under way shall during the day-time have one person, and during the night-time, or in time of fog or snow, two persons, properly qualified, stationed at the bow as a look-out, and to give notice in due time of any obstruction or danger. Ibid.

3. Steamers and Sailing Vessels.

(a) Generally.

266. Every steam vessel and every sailing vessel while under way shall be manned by a properly-qualified master and a sufficient number of able-bodied and experienced men. Ibid.

See also No. 263, supra.

4. Speed of Steamers.

(a) Generally (and see p. 309).

267. Sea-going steam vessels shall not be navigated in the port above the low lighthouse at a greater speed over the ground than six knots or seven statute miles per hour, whether going with or against the tide. Ibid. No. 25.

(b) Steamers and Vessels in Tow or Sailing Vessels.

268. When any steam vessel (except a steam vessel when towing sailing vessels) is approaching any sailing vessel or steam-tug with sailing vessels in tow proceeding in the opposite direction, the speed of such steam vessel shall, if necessary, be slackened when it is within thirty yards of, and until it shall have passed, the sailing vessel, or steam-tug and towed vessels. Ibid. No. 24.

5. Easing or Stopping of Engines.

269. See No. 302, p. 2382.

(b) Overtaking or Overtaken Vessels.

See No. 304, p. 2382.

(c) For Pilot.

270. Every steam-tug, or other steam vessel, towing a vessel into the port, not having a pilot already on board, and whether showing a signal for a pilot or not, shall be eased or stopped if necessary, to enable a pilot to board the towed vessel, unless the master thereof shall have previously informed the master of the steam-tug or other steam vessel that he did not intend to take a pilot, but unless prevented by stress of weather, every pilot intending to take charge of a vessel coming into the port shall board such vessel outside the port, that is, seaward of the ends of the Tyne piers; and every pilot in charge of a vessel going to sea shall not leave such vessel within the port. See Bye-laws of Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 29.

(d) For Divers, Dredgers, &c.

271. For provisions for all steamers easing their engines, and for steamers and all other vessels keeping well clear when passing the divers' boats, diving bells, screw keels, weigh keels, dredgers, or other craft or appliances of the commissioners, at work or being used, and for the engines of steamers to go dead slow for the distance therein named, and for a white flag being hoisted on board the boat or appliance in use at least six feet above the highest part of the vessel or appliance. Ibid. No. 40.

271a. For further provisions that when the white flag is so exhibited within fifty yards of the end of either the north or south pier, no boat or other vessel shall pass between such flag and the pier, but shall be kept outside of such flag; and well clear of the commissioners' craft and appliances; and that no vessel shall, even if the flag is not so exhibited, pass between the buoy, at the end of the submerged rubble base of either the north pier or south pier, and such pier. Ibid.

(e) For Obstructions.

272. When sunken vessels or other obstructions are being lifted or removed, or moorings drawn or fixed by or under the direction of the commissioners' officers or servants, all steam vessels shall go dead slow when within 100 yards of the place where the operation is being performed; and all vessels are to be kept well clear. Ibid. No. 41.

(f) Launch.

273. See p. 309, No. 1089.

6. Steamers and Vessels in Tow.

(a) Generally.

274. A steam-tug or other steam vessel shall not tow at one time two or more vessels in line so that the stern of the hindmost vessel is distant more than 450 feet from the stern of the towing vessel, or two or more vessels abreast, or rafts exceeding 250 feet in length, and 40 feet in breadth. See Bye-Laws of Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 32.

275. A steam-tug or other steam vessel shall not tow at one time more than one sea-going vessel of a registered tonnage exceeding two hundred tons (200 tons). Ibid. No. 31.

276. Every steam vessel having any vessel in tow shall attend upon such vessel until it is properly moored or secured. Ibid. No. 47.

(b) Tow-line.

277. The scope of tow-line used in towing any hopper barge in any part of the river above the Low Lighthouse shall not exceed sixteen fathoms. Ibid. No. 73.

278. Subject thereto, a tow-line shall not be used with a scope exceeding twenty fathoms for towing any steam or other vessel, except eastward of a line running due south from the Low Lighthouse at North Shields. Ibid. No. 30.

(c) Steamers and Hopper Barges.

279. A red flag shall be hoisted on every steam hopper barge and on every steamer having a hopper barge in tow when the ballast or substance therein is about to be, and is being, discharged; and the doors of such hopper barge shall not be struck for the purpose of discharging until such flag is hoisted. Ibid. No. 74.

280. As to sounding lines, in good order and properly marked, being carried on every hopper barge and steamer towing it; and as to the depth of water being ascertained to be not less than fifteen fathoms before the barge is discharged, Ibid. No. 75.

7. Vessels out of Command.

(a) Drifting.

281. A vessel shall not be allowed to drift in any part of the river or port. Ibid. No. 35.

8. Lights.

282. Every steamer while steaming under way and engaged in towing any other vessel during night time shall, in addition to the lights prescribed by Bye-law 12 (for which see No. 288, infra), carry on or in front of the foremast, or if there be no foremast on the staff mentioned in that bye-law, a second bright white light, similar to and placed vertically at least three feet above or below the bright white light prescribed in that bye-law. Ibid. No. 13.

283. The owner of any landing-stage, or place for the embarkation or disembarkation of passengers upon or from any vessel, shall provide sufficient gangways for the accommodation of such passengers, and shall keep such landing-stage or place well and sufficiently lighted while in use during night time. Ibid. No. 56.

284. Every steamer shall be provided with a steam whistle or other efficient steam sound signal, so placed that the sound may not be intercepted by any obstructions, and with an efficient fog-horn, and with an efficient bell. Every sailing vessel shall be provided with a similar fog-horn and bell. In fog, mist, or falling snow, whether by day or night, the following signals shall be used:—
(a) Upon a steamer under way a prolonged blast shall be made with the steam whistle, or other steam sound signal, at intervals of not more than two minutes. (b) Upon a sailing vessel under way a like blast shall be made with the fog-horn at intervals of not more than two minutes. (c) Upon a steam vessel and a sailing vessel, if and when anchored, the bell shall be rung at intervals of not more than two minutes. See Bye-laws of Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 18.

285. Upon every vessel at anchor, and upon every outside vessel of a tier of vessels moored, there shall at night be exhibited, where it can best be seen, but at a height not exceeding twenty feet from the upper deck, a bright white light in a globular lantern, of eight inches in diameter, so as to show a uniform and unbroken light all round the horizon, of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least one mile. If the harbour master shall consider it advisable for the safe navigation of the river that a like light shall be exhibited during night upon any other vessel moored, whether one of a tier or not, and shall leave an order on board such vessel to that effect, such light shall be exhibited accordingly, and in a similar position to that hereinbefore prescribed. This bye-law, except the last preceding paragraph thereof, does not apply to boats. Ibid. No. 16.

286. Every steamer in tow, or under sail only, and every sailing vessel when under way, is to carry side lights only. Ibid. No. 14.

287. For provisions that upon every open fishing and other boat, and every raft under way at night shall be exhibited the proper green and red side lights, or a lantern with red and green slides, Ibid. No. 17.

288. Steamers between sunset and sunrise while under way are to carry a white light at the foremast head, and red and green lights on the port and starboard sides, similar to those required by the Sea Collision Rules, and the side lights are to be similarly screened. Ibid. No. 12.

288a. Subject to Bye-law 13 (for which see No. 282, supra), the under-mentioned lights, and no other light, shall be carried and displayed upon every steamer while steaming under way during night time:—(1) On or in front of the foremast, at a height above the hull of not less than twenty feet; and if the breadth of the vessel exceeds twenty feet, then at a height above the hull not less than such breadth, a bright white light, so fixed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over a horizontal arc of twenty points of the compass, and to throw the light ten points on each side of the steamer (that is to say, from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on each side), and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles; provided always, that in the case of a steamer having no foremast, it shall be sufficient if the said white light be at a height not less than twelve feet above the hull, fixed on a staff not more than thirty feet from the stem, and in the case of a steam vessel not exceeding twelve feet in breadth, it shall be sufficient if such light be at a height not less than six feet above the hull, fixed on a staff not more than twelve feet from the stem. (2) On the starboard side a bright green light, so fixed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over a horizontal arc of ten points of the compass, and to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least one mile. (3) On the port side, a bright red light, so fixed as to show a uniform and unbroken light over a horizontal arc of ten points of the compass, and to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the port side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least one mile. The said green light and red light shall each be fitted with an inboard screen, projecting at least three feet forward from the light, so as to prevent such light from being seen across the bow of the steamer. Ibid.

9. Lights and Signals.

(a) Dangerous Dredgers.

289. When any dredger's working chains are taut, so as to be dangerous, the master of such dredger shall hoist, by day, a red flag, and by night a red light, on the dangerous side of the dredger, and all passing vessels shall proceed on the opposite side accordingly. Ibid. No. 42.

289a. As to the height and place where the danger light or signal shall be hoisted, Ibid.

290. As to the signal being taken down when the necessity for it has ceased, Ibid.

290a. For provisions that when a dredger, not working, is moored in a situation where, in the master's judgment, there is not a proper passage left, the danger signal (red flag or red light) shall be shown on the side where the passage must not be taken, and all passing vessels shall proceed on such opposite side accordingly, and that the danger signal shall be removed so soon as the dredger is shifted, or the passage clear, Ibid. No. 43.

(b) Sunken Vessel or Craft.

291. For provisions for immediate notice of any vessel sunk or stranded in the port being sent to the nearest river police station, or to the harbour master's or dock master's office, and for exhibiting over such vessel at night two bright white lights, and during day a green flag, or wreck buoy painted green, Ibid. No. 86.

10. Signals.

292. See Nos. 289—290a, supra.

(b) Steamers and Hopper Barges.

292a. See No. 279, supra.

11. Bells, Whistles, and Fog-horns.

(a) For Steamers.

293. Every steamer shall be provided with a steam whistle or other efficient steam-sound signal, so placed that the sound may not be intercepted by any obstructions, and with an efficient fog-horn and bell. See Bye-laws of Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 18.

(b) Sailing Vessels.

294. Every sailing vessel shall be provided with a similar fog-horn and bell. Ibid.

12. In Fog, Mist, or Snow.

(a) Signals of Steamers and Sailing Vessels.

295. In fog, mist, or falling snow, whether by day or night, the following signals shall be used:—(a) Upon a steamer under way, a prolonged blast with the steam whistle, or other steam-sound signal, at intervals of not more than two minutes. (b) Upon a sailing vessel under way, a like blast with the fog-horn, at intervals of not more than two minutes. (c) Upon a steamer and sailing vessel, if and when anchored, the bell rung at intervals of not more than two minutes. Ibid.

(b) Speed of Steamers and other Vessels.

296. Every vessel under way, when overtaken by a fog, shall be navigated at a very moderate speed, and shall, as soon as practicable, be moored or anchored out of the navigable channel. Vessels shall not, without the permission of the harbour master, be got under way during a fog. Ibid. No. 39.

(c) Look-out.

13. Steering.

(a) Side of Mid-channel (and see p. 311).

297. Every vessel under weigh shall when proceeding seaward be kept to the south of mid-channel, and when proceeding inward from sea or up the river to the north of mid-channel, and so that in either case such vessel shall, with a port-helm, always be and be kept clear of any vessel proceeding in the opposite direction. See Bye-Laws of Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 19.

298. Every steam or other vessel (whether towing any other vessel or not, or being towed), shall, unless prevented by stress of weather, be brought into the port to the north of mid-channel, and be taken out of the port to the south of mid-channel. Ibid. No. 20.

299. Every vessel under weigh, and required to pass over a part of the channel not reserved for its navigation, to proceed to or from any landing, mooring, or other place, shall be navigated so as to cause no obstruction or damage to any other vessel; and every vessel after reaching such place shall be navigated, as soon as practicable, on its proper side of the river. Ibid. No. 21.

300. Every vessel proceeding to the Northumberland, Tyne, or Albert Edward Dock, and arriving off the entrance of such dock before the signal for its admission is hoisted, must keep on either side of the navigable channel, and out of the fairway of the river or dock traffic until the signal is hoisted for its admission. Ibid. No. 35.

301. The meaning of No. 20 of the Bye-laws for the Regulation of the River Tyne, is that a vessel about to enter the Tyne coming from the S. is not to cross from the S. to the N. of mid-channel close up to the pier heads, but is to get on to her proper course some considerable distance outside the pier heads. A vessel ought not to cross the line of mid-channel to get on to her proper side at only two cables length outside the pier heads.

The Harvest, 11 P. D. 14, 90.

(b) Vessels in opposite Directions.

302. When steamers proceeding in opposite directions are approaching each other they shall be kept on their proper sides, and, if necessary, speed slackened, the vessel going against the tide in all cases giving way to the one going with the tide; and when steamers are approaching so as to involve risk of collision, their helms shall be put to port, and, if necessary, their engines stopped or reversed. See Bye-Laws of Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 23.

(c) Vessels crossing and turning.

303. Every vessel crossing the river, and every vessel turning, shall be navigated so as not to cause obstruction or damage to any other vessel. Ibid. No. 22.

(d) Vessels overtaking and overtaken.

304. Every sailing or steam vessel overtaking any other vessel shall be kept out of the way of the overtaken vessel, which shall be kept on her course, and no obstruction shall be wilfully caused by the overtaken vessel to the passage of the overtaking vessel; and any vessel having passed another shall not cross the bows of the passed vessel until at such a distance as will not necessitate the stopping or easing of the passed vessel to avoid a collision. Ibid. No. 28.

14. Powers of Harbour Master (and see p. 312).

305. See Nos. 308—311, 314, 319, 329—333, infra.

15. Vessels mooring, docking, or unmooring.

306. Vessels (unless belonging to or employed by the commissioners) shall not be moored at the moorings provided for the commissioners' dredgers, hopper barges, steam-tugs, or other craft. The buoys of such moorings are painted white. See Bye-laws of Tyne Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 44.

307. Every vessel shall be and be kept properly and effectually moored whilst at any public or private mooring place, quay, wharf, jetty, staith, drop, spout, or landing place, and especially during high winds, freshes, or accumulation of ice, and otherwise than by means of anchors, except in case of emergency. Ibid. No. 5.

308. No anchor shall be put down from any vessel, whether at moorings or in any other place in the port, except in case of emergency, or with the sanction of the harbour-master; and if such sanction is granted, the anchor shall be placed clear of the navigable channel, and so as not to endanger any other vessel. Ibid.

309. Any anchor put down shall be removed as and when the harbour-master directs. Ibid.

310. If any vessel parts from its anchor, the fact shall be reported to the harbour-master as soon as practicable. Ibid.

311. Every vessel moored or anchored, or about to be so, shall be subject to any directions of the harbour-master as to its berth or place, and manner of mooring or unmooring, or removal, or otherwise. Ibid.

312. Any craft, raft, boat, timber, or other obstruction shall not lie, or be placed, made fast, or moored between any tiers and the shore nearest to them, so as to prevent the free transit of any ferryboat or any other vessel, or in the river so as to form an obstruction to the approach to any public or private landing place. Ibid. No. 88.

16. Vessels anchored or moored.

(a) Generally.

313. A competent person in charge shall at all times, both by day and by night, be on board every boat or other vessel lying at or alongside any stairs, causeway, or landing place, and on board every sea-going vessel, whether serviceable, unserviceable, stranded, disused, or laid up. Ibid. No. 78.

314. The sails of every vessel, whether moored or at anchor, shall be furled; the standing and flying gibboom and mizen-boom rigged close in, and all booms and boom irons taken off the yards; the bumpkins and boats davits swung in or unshipped; and the topsail and lower yards peaked or braced sharp up, and the vessel otherwise dismantled, if and as the harbour-master directs. Ibid. No. 6.

315. While any steamer remains attached to any mooring buoy, mooring post, dolphin, jetty, or landing place, the engines of such steamer shall not be set in motion, so that damage may be caused to any such moorings, vessel or thing. Ibid. No. 11.

(b) Carriage of Anchors.

316. See No. 256, p. 2377.

17. Launch, Regatta and Crowds (and see p. 312).

317. See p. 293, No. 921; p. 309, No. 1089, and p. 312, No. 1130.

18. Northumberland Dock.

(a) Generally.

318. For provisions that vessels generally shall be navigated in this dock, see Bye-laws of Tynes Improvement Commission of 1884, No. 119.

319. Steam-tugs are to take their turn to tow as appointed by the dock-master, and shall not, without his permission, tow at the same time more than one vessel into or out of dock. Ibid. No. 110.

320. Vessels shall not be moved across the dock whilst the dock gates are open, and shall not be worked under sail in dock. Ibid. No. 108.

321. Ropes, chains, or tackle shall not be made fast from any vessel to any post, jetty, quay, ring, fender, mooring, or other thing not assigned for the purpose. Ibid. No. 127.

322. No vessel shall enter or approach any basin or lock to enter it while any vessel is passing out, or until a blue flag by day and a red light by night is exhibited. Ibid. No. 102.

323. For provisions that persons shall not be nor loiter about the dock or any of the premises of the commissioners without business there, and for the removal of such persons, Ibid. No. 137.

324. As to vessels having proper port sails, Ibid. No. 123.

(b) Responsibility of Dock Commissioners for Damage.

325. Every vessel and its boats, stores, tackle and cargo, while entering or leaving, or in the dock or any basin or lock thereof, shall be in the custody, care and management of the master, crew, watchman or shipkeeper employed by the owner or master; and the commissioners shall not be responsible for the same or for the insufficiency of any rope, chain or warp which they may lend or allow to be used, or for any accident or damage happening in consequence of any voluntary assistance rendered by any of their vessels, officers or servants. Ibid. No. 120.

(c) Damage to Works.

326. See previous No.

(d) Duties and Responsibilities of Pilots.

327. For provisions as to pilots keeping themselves acquainted with the depth of water in the dock, and the entrances thereof, and with other matters necessary to qualify them to navigate vessels into, in and out of the dock, Ibid. No. 116.

(e) Speed of Steamers.

328. Steamers shall not be navigated in the dock at a greater speed than two miles an hour. Ibid. No. 109.

(f) Vessels mooring, docking or unmooring.

329. For provisions against any vessel entering or leaving the dock until the proper signal is exhibited for her to do so, and for the dismantling of vessels before entering the dock, Ibid. Nos. 102, 103, 106 b.

330. For provisions for each vessel entering to be taken to such mooring place as the dock master shall direct, and not being removed therefrom without his or the staith master's permission, Ibid. No. 113.

331. For provisions against vessels or timber being moored in the entrance of the lock or basin of the dock without the dock master's permission, Ibid. No. 125.

(g) Vessels anchored or moored.

332. For provisions that vessels in the dock shall not have their sails loose after sunset or in squally weather, and that the topgallant masts of vessels lying up in the dock shall be struck if required by the dock master, Ibid. No. 107.

333. A watchman or other competent person shall at all times be on board every sea-going vessel in the dock, and if and when required by the dock master, on board any other vessel, and such person shall cause ropes, chains or other fastenings to be slackened, tightened or thrown off, as and when the dock master or staith master shall direct. Ibid. No. 114.

9. Other Ports and Places in the United Kingdom (and see p. 313).

334. For bye-laws to prevent collisions in the port of Belfast, see Parliamentary Return as to Pilotage, No. 325, of 1882, p. 148, reg. 8.

Part X.—FOREIGN LAW.

1. America (United States).

2. *International Collision Rules (and see p. 314).

335. The following revised international rules and regulations for preventing collisions at sea, shall be followed in the navigation of all public and private vessels of the United States upon the high seas, and in all coast waters of the United States, except such as are otherwise provided for. See the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved 3rd March, 1885, c. 354.

3. Collision Rules in Gulfs, Lakes, Rivers, §c.†

(a) Generally (and see p. 316).

* (18) The international rules and regulations above referred to are the same as those of August, 1884 (set forth in the Appendix to this work), except that in Article 10 (g), the words "mist or falling snow" are left out, and except that in Art. 12 the word "signals" is used for "signal."

(19) All laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the above revised International Rules and Regulations of the United States, are hereby repealed, except as to the navigation of such vessels within the harbours, lakes, and inland waters of the United States. See Revised Statutes of the United States, approved March 3, 1885, c. 354.

(20) The above Act came into operation 1 Sept. 1884.

(21) The above statutory enactments of the United States, adopting the revised international regulations, have superseded those of the Treasury department mentioned in note 491 c, p. 314.

(22) Such Treasury department regulations will not, therefore, be printed in the Appendix, as was originally intended.

(23) For the same reason note 491 c, with its additions set forth in pp. 314, 315, may be cancelled as obsolete.

† (24) Every vessel propelled, in whole or in part, by steam, shall be deemed a steam vessel within the meaning of this title. Revised Statutes of the United States, tit. LII. c. 1, s. 4399.

(25) All steam vessels navigating any waters of the United States which are common highways of commerce, or open to general or competitive navigation, excepting public vessels of the United States, vessels of other countries, and boats propelled in whole or in part by steam for navigating canals, shall be subject to the provisions of this title. Ibid. s. 4400. [AMERICAN.]

(26) All coastwise sea-going vessels, and vessels navigating the great lakes, shall be subject to the navigation laws of the United States when navigating within the jurisdiction thereof; and all vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, and navigating as aforesaid, shall be subject to all the rules and regulations established in pursuance of law for the government of steam vessels in passing, as provided by the title. Ibid. s. 4401. [AMERICAN.]

(26a) On any steamers navigating rivers only, when from darkness, fog, or other cause, the pilot or watch shall be of opinion that the navigation is unsafe, or, from accident to or derangement of the machinery of the boat, the chief engineer shall be of opinion that the further navigation of the vessel is unsafe, the vessel shall be brought to anchor, or moored as soon as it can be prudently done, provided that if the person in command shall, after being so admonished by either of such officers, elect to pursue such voyage, he may do the same; but in such case both he and the owners of such steamer shall be answerable for all damage which shall arise to the person of any passenger or his baggage, from such causes in so pursuing the voyage, and no degree of care or diligence shall in such case be held to justify or excuse the person in command, or the owners. Ibid. c. 2, s. 4487. [AMERICAN.]

(27) Whenever damage is sustained by any passenger, or his baggage, from explosion, fire, collision, or other cause, the master and the owner of such vessel, or either of them, and the vessel shall be liable to each and every person so injured, to the full amount of damage. Ibid. s. 4493. [AMERICAN.]

(28) If such damage happens through any neglect or failure to comply with the provisions of this title, or through known defects or imperfections of the steering apparatus or of the hull; and any person sustains loss or injury through the carelessness, negligence, or wilful misconduct of any master, mate, engineer, or pilot, or his neglect or refusal to obey the laws governing the navigation of such steamers, he may sue such master, mate, engineer or pilot, and recover damages for any such injury caused by any such master, mate, engineer, or pilot. Ibid. s. 4493. [AMERICAN.]

(b) Look-out (and see p. 316).*

(c) Rules of Supervising Inspectors.

(aa) Generally.†

336. THE BOARD OF SUPERVISING INSPECTORS have revised to February, 1886, their regulations for the navigation of SEAS, GULFS, LAKES, BAYS, SOUNDS OR RIVERS, except rivers flowing into the Gulf of Mexico, and these revised regulations are set forth in the Appendix to this work.

(bb) Lights.‡

337. The mast-head and side lights to be carried by steamers under these Regulations are the same as Art. 3 in the Sea Collision Rules of 1879, except that as to the position of the bright light, it is only indicated that it shall be shown at the foremast head. Regulations revised to February, 1886, p. 45, r. 3.

338. The rule prescribing two white lights for steamers towing is the same as Art. 4 of the Sea Collision Rules of 1879. Ibid. p. 45, r. 4.

339. The rule for sailing vessels carrying side lights and no mast-head light in Art. 6 of the Sea Collision Rules of 1879, is made to apply only to steamers not being ocean-going steamers, nor carrying sail. Ibid. p. 45, r. 5.

340. The rule for lights for vessels at anchor is the same as Art. 8 of the Sea Collision Rules of 1879, except that it does not indicate the size of the light, and prescribes only that it shall be at least twenty feet above the surface of the water. Ibid. p. 49.

(cc) In Fog or thick Weather (and see p. 316).§

341. Steamers when drifting or at anchor in the fairway of other vessels in fog or thick weather shall ring their bells at intervals of not more than two minutes. Ibid. p. 43, r. 4.

(dd) Steering and Signals indicating Courses (and see p. 317).||

(ee) In Narrow Channels.¶

4. As to Rivers flowing into the Gulf of Mexico.

(a) *Generally.

342. The Board of Supervising Inspectors have revised to February, 1886, their regulations for the navigation of rivers flowing into the Gulf of Mexico and their tributaries, and these revised regulations are set forth in the Appendix to this work.

(b) Lights.††

(28a) The Regulations of the Board of Supervising Inspectors, in notes 1 to 6 on p. 316, are the same as those revised to February, 1886, with the exceptions following:—

(29) Note 3, p. 316, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 33), r. 5, sub-r. 8, but the rule is therein made to apply to every steamer above 100 tons burthen, and every such pilot is limited in his licence to the particular service for which he is adapted.

(30) Note 4, p. 316, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 35), r. 5, sub-r. 17, but it is therein further required that the report should be both in person and in writing, except when, from distance, a personal report may be inconvenient, when the written report must be sworn to; and see Revised Statutes, s. 4448.

(31) Note 5, p. 316, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 44), r. 8.

(32) Note 6, p. 316, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 44), r. 9.

* (33) Note 7, p. 316, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 33), r. 5, sub-r. 8.

† (33a) Their Regulations under this head, revised to February, 1886, are the same as those set forth on pp. 316, 317, with the exceptions following:—

(34) The interpretation clause, rule 1 of these Regulations, is the same as Art. 1 of the Sea Collision Rules of 1879. See Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 45), r. 1.

‡ (34a) Notes 14 and 15 are the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 44), r. 9.

§ (35) The Regulations of the Board of Supervising Inspectors as to certain fog signals in notes 17—23, on pp. 316, 317, are the same as those revised to February, 1886. See pp. 51 and 52 of same.

(35a) Note 16, p. 316, is the same as those revised to February, 1886 (p. 43), r. 4.

2a. Brazil.

1. Generally.

343. The commercial judge is the only person to decide causes of collision and decree damages, whether in port or on the high seas. Decree No. 2,030 of 1857.

344. Captains of ports can only decide as to breaches of port regulations, and the infliction of the penalties therefore. Ibid.

345. If there is a doubt as to which vessel is to blame for a collision, each bears its own loss. Art. 750, C. C.

346. The judge avails himself of the assistance of skilled arbitrators. Ibid.; Decree No. 737 of 1850, Art. 189.

347. Damages by collision are in cases particular average losses. Art. 752, C. C.

348. Except in the case where a vessel, to avoid a worse collision, slips her anchors and falls foul of another to preserve herself. Ibid.

to the lights of steamers under weigh, are the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (pp. 50 and 51), rr. 10 and 11.

(39) Note E, as to the lights of steamers at anchor, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 51), r. 11, except that it is not to exceed twenty feet above the hull.

(40) Notes F, G, and H, as to the lights of steam ferry boats, and barges in tow of steamers, are the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 51), rr. 12, 13, and p. 50, r. 9.

* (41) Note I, p. 318, as to whistling in fog, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 50), r. 5.

† (42) Note J, p. 318, as to signals for passing, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 49), r. 1, but it relates to steamers approaching each other in opposite directions, and provides that the pilot of the ascending (not descending) steamer is to be the first to indicate the side he desires to pass. Ibid.

(42a) But if the pilot of the descending steamer shall deem it dangerous to take the course so indicated, he shall at once indicate with his steam whistle the side on which he desires to pass, and the pilot of the ascending steamer shall govern himself accordingly, the descending steamer being deemed to have the right of way. Ibid. p. 49, r. 1.

(43) But in no case shall pilots on steamers attempt to pass each other until there has been a thorough understanding as to the side each steamer shall take. Ibid.

(44) The signals for passing must be made, answered and understood before the steamers have arrived at a distance of 800 yards of each other. Ibid.

(45) (In lieu of note K, p. 318.) If the signals for passing are not made at the proper time, or not promptly understood, and either boat becomes imperilled thereby, the pilot on either steamer may be the first to sound the danger signal. Ibid. r. 2.

(46) The danger signal shall consist of three or more short blasts of the steam whistle in quick succession. Ibid.

(47) Whenever the danger signal is given, the engines of both steamers must be stopped and backed until their headway has been fully checked, and the engines of neither steamer shall be again started until the steamers can safely pass each other. Ibid.

‡ (48) Note L, p. 318, as to narrow channels, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886, r. 3, except that when two boats unavoidably meet, it is the duty of the pilot of the ascending (not descending) boat to make the proper signals, and when answered the ascending boat shall lie as close as possible, &c. Ibid. p. 50, r. 3.

(49) Notes M and N, p. 318, as to narrow channels, are the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 50), rr. 4 and 6.

§ (49a) (In lieu of note O, p. 319.) When steamers are running in the same direction and the pilot of the boat astern shall desire to pass either side of the boat ahead, he shall give the signal, as in rule 1 (for which see n. J, p. 318), and the pilot of the boat ahead shall answer by the same signal, or if he prefers to keep on his course, he shall make the necessary signals, and the boat astern must govern herself accordingly, but the boat ahead shall in no case attempt to cross her bow or crowd on her course. Ibid. p. 50, r. 7.

|| (50) Note P, on p. 318, as to mooring or unmooring, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 50), r. 8, except that after clearing their berths, &c., they shall be governed by rule 1, for which see notes 42-44, supra.

(50a) Note Q, on p. 319, as to the lower limits of New Orleans, is the same as Regulations revised to February, 1886 (p. 51), r. 14.

349. Then the damages of ship and cargo are apportioned as general average upon ship, freight, and cargo. Ibid.

350. Captains and persons legally authorized to conduct a vessel are responsible if they do not at once render assistance after a collision. Decree 4,678 of 1871, Art. 21.

2. Sea Collision Rules.

351. Brazil has acquiesced in the Regulations of 1880 for Preventing Collisions at Sea. See Order in Council of Nov. 27, 1880, in 5 P. D. 286.*

352. Owners and masters are liable for damages caused by ignorance or breach of the regulations. Decree No. 4,678 of 1871.

353. In the absence of local regulations, these regulations apply to the rivers and internal waters of Brazil. Ibid.

354. The regulations apply to men-of-war and merchant vessels in time of peace. Ibid. Preamble and Arts. 20, 26.

355. In time of war men-of-war and merchant vessels under convoy will carry such lights as may be ordered. Ibid.

356. Other regulations for vessels entering and leaving harbour and dragging are contained in Decree No. 447 of 1846, tit. V., but are practically superseded by the international regulations contained in Decree No. 8,943 of 1883.

3. Canada.

5. Sea Collision Rules † (and see p. 320).

358. If her Majesty in Council should annul or modify any of the Sea Collision Rules of August, 1879, or make new regulations in addition thereto, or in substitution therefor, the Governor in Council may make corresponding changes as therein mentioned. See the Canadian Act, 44 Vict. c. 20, in 15 Hertslet, 986.

359. All owners, masters, and persons in charge of any ship, vessel, or craft, shall obey the rules prescribed by this act, and shall not carry or exhibit any other lights, nor use any other fog-signals, than such as are prescribed by those rules. Penalty not exceeding 200 dollars; nor less than twenty dollars, for wilful default against master or person in charge or owner. See the Canadian Act, 43 Vict. c. 29, in 15 Hertslet, 970.

360. Whenever foreign ships are within Canadian waters, the rules for preventing collisions prescribed by this act, and all provisions relating to such rules or otherwise relating to collisions, shall apply to such foreign ships, and in any case arising in any court of justice in Canada concerning matters happening within Canadian waters, foreign ships shall, so far as regards such rules and provisions, be treated as if they were British or Canadian ships. Ibid. 971.

361. In case any damage to person or property arising from the non-observance by any ship or raft of any of the rules prescribed by this act, such damage shall be deemed to have been occasioned by the wilful default of the person in charge of such raft or in charge of the deck of such vessel at the time, unless the contrary is proved, or it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that the circumstances of the case rendered a departure from the rules necessary; and the owner of the vessel or raft in all civil proceedings, and the master or person in charge, or the owner—if it appears that he was in fault—shall, in all proceedings civil or criminal, be subject to the legal consequences of such default. See the Canadian Act, 44 Vict. c. 20, in 15 Hertslet, 970.

362. If in any case of collision it appears to the court before which the case is tried, that such collision was occasioned by the non-observance of any of the rules prescribed by this act, the vessel or raft by which such rules have been infringed shall be deemed to be in fault, unless it can be shown to the satisfaction of the court that the circumstances of the case rendered a departure from the rules necessary. Ibid.

6. Masters.

(a) Generally.

364. See No. 362, supra.

(b) To assist Colliding Ship, and give Name of Port.

365. For provisions in case of collision, that the person in charge of each ship, if and so far as he can do so without danger to his own ship and crew, do render to the other ship, crew, or passengers (if any), such assistance as may be practicable and necessary to save them from any danger caused by such collision, and to give the name of his ship and her port, or whence and whither bound, see Canadian Act, 43 Vict. c. 29.

366. In case he fails to do so without reasonable excuse, the collision shall, in absence of proof to the contrary, be deemed to have been caused by his neglect or default. Ibid.

7. Rafts.

367. Rafts shall be so navigated and anchored as not to cause any unnecessary impediment or obstruction to vessels navigating the same waters. Ibid. in 15 Hertslet, 969.

368. Rafts while drifting or at anchor on any of the waters of Canada, shall have a bright fire kept burning on them from sunset to sunrise. Ibid.

369. Whenever any raft is going in the same direction as another, which is ahead, the one shall be so navigated as not to come within twenty yards of the other, and every vessel must on overtaking a raft keep out of the way thereof. Ibid.

8. Harbour of Sorel.

370. Unless it is otherwise ordered by the Harbour Commissioners of Montreal, ships and vessels entering or leaving the Harbour of Sorel shall take the port side. Ibid.

4. The Danube.

1. Regulations of European Commission (and see p. 320).

371. By Article 34, Chapter II. of the Danube Commission Rules, a vessel going down the river shall keep to the right bank. The Y. was going down and the S. was coming up the river. When the Y. had got near the place of collision there was a degree of mist sufficiently great to prevent those on board her seeing across the river, and the Y. improperly went to the left side of the river, and so caused a collision with the S. Held, that the Y. was to blame under the rules for doing so. Held, also, that the S. was to blame for not having lights. The Yourri v. The Spearman, 10 App. Cas. 276; 5 Asp. 458; 53 L. T. 29.

5. Denmark.

1. Generally* (and see p. 234).

* (53) The new Danish Code, mentioned in note 518, on p. 324, has not yet been promulgated.

(54) If the damage cannot be brought home to either captain, various rules of law apply, according to whether both ships are under way at the time, or one of them is at anchor: viz.—

(55) When both ships are under way the damage is divided, that is to say, the total of the damage which both ships have sustained is divided, and each ship pays half.

(56) This rule of equal division applies, even though one ship sustains damage, and though the half which has to be paid by the one ship reaches, or even exceeds, the value of the vessel. But when the half of the damage exceeds the value of the ship, the owner is never personally bound to pay the balance.

(57) When one ship is at anchor, and the other is under way, and the ship under way alone sustains damage, she bears her own loss. If the ship at anchor alone sustains damage, that damage is divided according to the estimate of impartial men, a rule which is also in force when two ships in motion collide and sustain damage. The strict principle of equal division does not however apply in the case of the two ships, but in the assessment of the damage regard will be had to the value of each ship, the damage each ship has sustained, &c.

(58) There are special rules applicable to cases of ships sustaining damages from the

There were difficulties in the navigation of the canal in that locality, but the E. M. had no pilot on board. Held, that the conclusion from such circumstances was that the collision was owing to negligence of those on board the E. M., as it could not be allowed that such a collision under no difficulties of weather was an inevitable accident. The Egyptian Monarch, 19th January, 1886. (C. A.)

anchors of another ship. If the anchor is furnished with a buoy, or the buoy has drifted away, and the captain has not been neglectful by omitting to lay out another buoy, the damages are equally divided. On the other hand, if the buoy is wanting, and this want can be attributed to the neglect of the captain, his ship pays all the damages of the other ship.

(59) If a ship drives before a storm, and other ships, to avoid her, slip their anchors and chains, the loss sustained by them in so doing is divided between the driving ship and those ships which have slipped their anchors and chains. The damages are estimated according to the opinion of impartial men.

* (60) The Suez Canal Company is responsible for damage done to ships by collision—When the collision is caused by default in preservation and maintenance of the canal (bonero police et entretien), as, for example, (a) if the canal has not the regular width and depth; (b) or if the passage is obstructed, or if it enforces the employment of pilots who do not know their business; or if it has allowed a vessel to pass without a pilot, when she was bound to have one by the Regulations (Art. 4), and by her fault a collision happened; or, generally, if it has not furnished every security for navigation which it is bound to furnish, or which may reasonably be expected from it. Philippe v. Comp. de Canal de Suez, Ismailia, Journ. de Droit Int. Privé, 1878, p. 168.

(61) According to general maritime law the master is responsible for the conduct of his ship, and for collisions of which that ship is the cause. Ibid.

† (62) The mixed commission court of Egypt has jurisdiction in an action for collision in the Suez Canal, brought by the owners of the ship injured against the Canal Commissioners, alleging negligence on the part of a pilot supplied by the company. Ibid.

(63) See as to the mixed commission courts of Egypt, tit. JURISDICTION, p. 797.

‡ (64) In cases of collision on the high seas between ships of different nationalities, the court will decide according to the law of France. Morell v. Com.-Gen. Transatlantique, Journ. de Droit Int. Privé, 1883, p. 145.

(65) To entitle a person to bring an action for collision in France, he must have conformed to the French law as to protest (Arts. 435, 436, C. C.) If the captain of the ship finds himself in England after the collision, he must, in the absence of the other ship, give notices of his protest at the Consulate of the ship's nationality. Riviere v. Malmroes, Ibid. p. 148.

§ (67) See also, as to the apportionment of damages by French law when both ships are to blame, tit. REGISTRAR AND MERCHANTS, p. 1777, notes 360, 361.

|| (68) All persons who have suffered damage from the act or negligence of another have an action for damages against the wrong-doer. See C. C. Arts. 1382, 1383.

(69) Husbands and wives, parents and children, are in the first rank of parties entitled to claim the benefit of such provisions.

(70) This right extends to the representative of a person killed by the tortious act of another.

(71) The masters or employers of those to whom a tortious act is attributable are also liable for the act, if arising in the course of such employment. C. C. Art. 1384.

(72) Such a liability is made specially applicable to shipowners. See C. C. Art. 216, subject to their power of exonerating themselves by abandonment of ship and freight under the same article.

(73) The regulations of the French Code requiring the making and notification of a protest against the wrong-doer within twenty-four hours, and the institution of the action within a month after the occurrence of the act complained of, do not apply to the case of an action by a widow claiming damages for the loss of her husband drowned in a collision. * (74) Actions for damage by collision may be brought either at the place of the collision or at the first port reached after it, or at the place of destination, saving the disposition of Art. 14 (a) of the Mercantile Marine Code, Art. 873. The captain of the port in the capitals of provinces and port officers in other ports arbitrate in cases of collision, fouling anchors, salvage, tonnage, pilotage, injury, and other maritime causes, when the damage does not exceed 400 lire, and the accident occurred in harbour.

† (75) If a vessel under weigh does damage without fault to another vessel anchored or moored, the vessel doing the damage bears half the damage of the other vessel and cargo, unless this latter vessel ought to be responsible for the damage. See C. C. Art. 1581.

(76) This damage shall be shared in the form of general average by vessel and cargo. Ibid.

(77) This indemnification shall not take place if the captain of the vessel moored was able to prevent or diminish the damage by manœuvring without damage to himself. Ibid.

(78) Should there be a doubt as to the cause of the collision, the damage occasioned to the ships and cargoes, after being valued by arbitrators, are thrown into one, and are borne by each in proportion to the respective values of the ships and cargoes. This damage is apportioned in the shape of general average to each ship and cargo. Ibid. Art. 1570.

(79) The damage from fouling of vessels from fortuitous accident is borne by the vessel which sustained it, subject to the provisions of Article 1581. Ibid. Art. 1569.

(80) In cases of collision, the tribunal of the nearest port, and which is at the same time the port of refuge, has jurisdiction. The City of Mecca (Sup. Trib. 21 June, 1880), Journ. de Droit Inter. Privé, 1881, p. 177.

(81) If a vessel drags her anchor and fouls the tackle of another vessel anchored near her, the vessel that dragged her anchor is responsible for all the damage. See C. C. Art. 1571.

(82) Should a vessel be run into by another through the fault of her master or any of her crew, the entire damage to the vessel and her cargo must be borne by the master of the vessel which caused it, and is regulated by arbitrators' experts. Ibid. Art. 1567.

(83) Damage by collision not being one of the privileged liens enumerated in the Commercial Code, Art. 1300 (for which see tit.

LIENS, p. 840), it follows that a vessel can only be arrested in such an action, subject to the regulations in Art. 298 of the Novissima Reforma Judicial (for which see tit. JURISDICTION, p. 791), that is to say, after proof by clear preponderance of testimony, that the vessel sought to be arrested is solely to blame for the collision, thereby establishing the certainty of the debt referred to in the last-mentioned article, or on proof of change of state, and of absence of effects or suspicion of flight, also referred to in that article, and in heading 31 of book 3 of the Ordinance (for which see tit. JURISDICTION, p. 791), ex relatione Dr. Alvez de Sa.

(84) When, however, proof of this vessel being solely to blame is thus established, a maritime lien attaches upon her for the damage from the moment of the collision, and follows her into the hands of innocent purchasers. See C. C. Art. 1298.

§ (86) If a person notoriously incapable is put in charge of a steamer, or if no proper supervision is exercised over those in charge, and in consequence any person is killed or injured, the guilty party is liable to suspension for three months or more, or a fine not exceeding 300 roubles, or to imprisonment for not less than two or more than six months. Decree of January 25, 1878.

(87) The proprietors of a steamer are also bound to pay damages for loss of life or personal injury in accordance with the Civil Code, except when occasioned by force majeure or without any fault on the part of themselves or their agents. Ann. de Leg. Et. 1877, vol. 8, p. 650.

|| (88) Sea-going steamers passing through the Bosphorus must keep in mid-channel, in order to avoid causing difficulties and danger to the "Shirket-i-Hairieh" steamers, and to small craft. See Regulations of the Sublime Porte of 1868, re-issued in May, 1872, and Notice of July 14, 1881, kept at the British Consulate, Constantinople.

(89) Steamships navigating the Bosphorus must keep in mid-channel and not close to the shore, on account of danger to small craft and passenger steamboats.

(90) See Notice of the Sublime Porte of June 3, 1872, kept in the British Consulate at Constantinople, and set out in 15 Hertset's Collection of Treaties, &c., 831.

(91) Steam-tugs must keep clear of the imperial palaces at Beshiktash, passing outside the inner line of iron clads, so as not to cause inconvenience by the smoke. See Notice of the Sublime Porte of June 3, 1872, kept in the British Consulate, Constantinople, and British Consul's Notice of July 14, 1881, in 15 Hertslet, 832.

(92) All steamers going up and down the Bosphorus must, in order to avoid collision, keep far from the shores and capes, and pass in mid-channel. Penalty for breach, TL.10 to TL.30 in gold, and the transgressor must repair the damage done. See Rules of the Prefecture of the Port of Constantinople (2), Feb. 14, 1883, in 15 Hertslet, 832.

(93) Sailing vessels towed from shore which, according to an old custom, pass close to the shore, are, when they go before the wind, subjected to the same rule and penalty as steamers. Ibid.

(94) These provisions are applicable to all steamers or sailing vessels under Ottoman or foreign flags. Ibid.

ceiver of wreck at £746 on December 3. On the 8th the salvors instituted an action in £2,500; on the 18th they applied for an appraisal of the vessel; on January 14 following they gave notice that they proceeded no further in the action. Salvors condemned in costs, on the ground that they must have been aware within a short time of taking out the appraisal that the value fixed by the receiver was substantially correct. The court also condemned the salvors in damages from December 22 to January 14. The Margaret Jane, L. R. 2 A. & E. 345. But see tit. PRACTICE, Pt. II. c. 16, p. 1542.

* (3) On reference, the objections by the defendants to the accounts in a bottomry bond report were not sustained, the whole sum claimed being allowed; but as some of the accounts investigated did at first sight appear extravagant, the defendants were not condemned in the costs. The Romulus, No. 4928, July, 1870. R. & M.

† (4) The plaintiff's claim was reduced by nearly two-thirds, but as certain items, representing the greater portion of the disallowances, were taken off under the decree in the action, and therefore before the claim came before the registrar, each party was ordered to bear his own costs of the reference. The Trossacks, No. 4762, April, 1869. R. & M.

(4a) Plaintiff's costs of the reference disallowed, although less than one-fourth of the claim was struck off. More than one-fourth of the claim, however, consisted of the Thames Conservancy charges for raising the vessel, which were not questioned by the defendants. The John Brogden, No. 3538, 3 September, 1867. R. & M.

(5) More than one-fourth was struck off the plaintiff's claim, but, the defendant having largely increased the expenses of the reference by objections which he failed to sustain, the registrar allowed the plaintiff his costs. The Lizzie Aisbitt, No. 3894, March, 1868. R. & M.

this discretion is to be exercised in each individual case, and it is wrong to lay down a hard-and-fast rule that the claimant shall be condemned in the costs of the reference where more than a third of the claim is disallowed, and have no costs of the reference where as much as a fourth is disallowed. (The Empress Eugenie, Lush. 40, overruled.) The Friedeberg, 10 P. D. 112; 5 Asp. 426; 54 L. J. P. D. A. 75; 52 L. T. 837; 33 W. R. 687.*

17. The plaintiff, in a reference in a collision action, withdrew a portion of his claim at the hearing. The registrar awarded less than two-thirds of the original claim, but more than two-thirds of the reduced claim. Held, that the plaintiff must pay the costs of the reference. The Eilean Dubh, 5 Asp. 154; 49 L. T. 444.

18. In an action of damage the plaintiff's claim, which was very large, was reduced by considerably more than one-third, in consequence of an objection taken by the defendants at a very and unnecessarily late period in the proceedings. As the defendant's laches had caused additional expense and delay, the registrar recommended that each party should pay his own costs of the reference, but the court condemned the plaintiff in costs. The Atalanta, No. 6056, August, 1875. 19. Security.‡

1. Generally (and see p. 363).

20. A plaintiff ordinarily resident out of the jurisdiction may be ordered to give security for costs, though he may be temporarily resident within the jurisdiction. Ord. LXV. r. 6a, No. 42.

21. The day on which an order for security for costs is served, and the time thenceforward until and including the day on which such security is given, shall not be reckoned in the computation of time allowed to plead, answer interrogatories, or take any other proceeding in the cause or matter. Ord. LXVI. r. 6, No. 966.

22. Two actions were instituted by plaintiffs against a vessel for necessaries. The plaintiffs in both actions stopped payment and assigned their goods to trustees. On motion of the defendant, the mortgagee and owner of the vessel, for security for costs, the court ordered the plaintiffs in each action to give security in £300. The Palm Tree, January 14, 1868.

(7) Salvors obtained a reference to the registrar and merchants to report as to the amount (if any) available for the payment of salvage. After marshalling of proceeds, the registrar reported that no funds were available, and that the salvors ought to pay the costs of the reference. The Mary A. Way, No. 7163, November, 1875. R. & M.

(8) For precedents of bills of costs of reference to the registrar and merchants, see Roscoe's Adm. Prac. (2nd ed.) App. pp. 540—543.

(9) The plaintiff, who was claiming for the total loss of his vessel, filed an affidavit containing serious mistakes as to the date of his purchase and the amounts expended in repairs. To rebut this affidavit the defendants brought up a witness from Liverpool, thereby incurring expenses which would have been avoided if the affidavit had correctly stated the facts. The plaintiff was left to bear his own costs of the reference, although only one-fifth of his claim was disallowed. The Appendix, Nos. 5853, 5854, and 5876, February, 1872. R. & M.

* (10) The court, however, though exercising its discretion in each case, is still influenced by similar considerations as before.

† (11) In an action of co-ownership, it appeared on the reference that the defendant, the managing owner, had been remiss in rendering his accounts; his accounts, as first filed, were incorrect, and an amended account had to be filed. The plaintiff took objection to the amended accounts, but failed therein. The registrar ordered the defendant to pay all costs incurred up to the date when the amended account was filed, and the plaintiff to pay the costs incurred subsequently. The Idas, No. 1460, May, 1865. R. & M.

2. Counter-claim (and see p. 364).

24. The Court of Admiralty may, on the application of the defendant in any cause of damage, and on his instituting a cross cause for the damage sustained by him in respect of the same collision, direct that the two causes be heard at the same time and upon the same evidence; and if in the principal cause the ship of the defendant has been arrested or security given by him to answer judgment, and in the cross cause the ship of the plaintiff cannot be arrested, and security has not been given to answer judgment therein, the court may, if it think fit, suspend the proceedings in the principal cause, until security has been given to answer judgment in the cross cause. See the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 34.

26. The court has jurisdiction under the above 34th section to order a plaintiff in an action for damage by collision to give security for the damages to a defendant who brings a counter-claim, and this even when plaintiff is a foreign sovereign whose ship cannot be arrested. The Newbattle, 10 P. D. 33.

2a. On Discovery.

27. In every cause or matter, the costs of discovery by interrogatories or otherwise, shall, unless otherwise ordered by the court or a judge, be secured in the first instance, as provided by Rule 26 of this Order, by the party seeking such discovery, and shall be allowed as part of his costs where, and only where, such discovery shall appear to the judge at the trial, or, if there is no trial, to the court or a judge, or shall appear to the taxing officer, to have been reasonably asked for. Ord. XXXI. r. 25, No. 367.

28. Any party seeking discovery by interrogatories shall, before delivery of interrogatories, pay into court to a separate account called "Security for Costs Account," to abide further order, the sum of £5, and if the number of folios exceeds five, 10s. for every additional folio. Any party seeking discovery otherwise than by interrogatories shall, before delivery, pay into court to a like account, to abide further order, the sum of £5, and may be ordered to pay into court an additional sum. The party seeking discovery shall, with his interrogatories or order for discovery, serve a copy of the receipt for this payment into court, and the time for answering or making discovery shall commence from the date of such service. The party from whom discovery is sought shall not be required to answer or make discovery unless and until this payment has been made. Ibid. r. 26, No. 368.

29. Unless the court or a judge shall at or before the trial otherwise order, the amount standing to the credit of the Security for Costs Account, shall, after the cause or matter has been finally disposed of be paid out to the party by whom it was paid in on his request, or to his solicitor on such party's written authority, if costs are adjudged to him, but if he is ordered to pay costs it shall be subject to a lien for the costs. Ibid. r. 27, No. 369.

30. In a co-ownership action, brought by the managing owner, the plaintiff sought to interrogate the defendants, who were numerous, and to be relieved from making the usual deposit, the defendants objected that a deposit ought to be made in respect of each defendant interrogated, the court ordered a deposit of £5, and 10s. for each additional folio over five, but refused to order the plaintiff to pay in a sum in respect of each defendant. The Whichham, 5 Asp. 479.

62. A cause of damage was instituted, and, by arrangement, the defendant's vessel was not arrested, bail being given in £7,200. The vessel went on a long voyage, and before her return her owners and one of the sureties suspended payment; and, on application by the plaintiffs the court, on the return of the vessel, decreed a warrant to issue under which she was arrested. The defendants moved for a release, on an affidavit that the vessel had changed owners since the institution of the action, and that one of the sureties was a merchant of large means. ‡ (20) As to when costs of former actions are recoverable, see Mayne on Damages (4th ed.), p. 76.

The defendant, to obtain the release of the ship, paid into court the sum of £500 in lieu of bail. The defendant then sold the ship for an amount insufficient to satisfy the sum secured by his mortgage. The plaintiff, when the cause was ripe for hearing, abandoned the suit, and the £500 was paid out to the defendant. Held, that the defendant was entitled to interest at the rate of £4 per cent. per annum on the £500 for the time that it remained in court. The Western Ocean, L. R. 3 A. & E. 38.

66. Mortgagees having commenced an action against a vessel, material men, with a possessory lien, intervened, and the vessel was sold. The claim of the material men exceeded the amount of the proceeds. Held, that the mortgagees were entitled to their costs up to date of sale out of such proceeds. The Sherbro, 5 Asp. 88.

67. The C. was arrested in an action for necessities supplied by the plaintiff. The owners appeared, but did not give bail or deliver pleadings. The mortgagees of the C. intervened, and took possession under the mortgage, but the C. still remained in the custody of the marshal, and was subsequently sold by him under an order of the court obtained by the interveners. Judgment with costs by consent for the interveners was afterwards entered. Under it the interveners claimed from the plaintiffs the amount due to the marshal for the expenses of sale. Held, that as the interveners, though able to obtain the release of the C. by giving bail had not done so, but had obtained an order for the sale of the C., and had received the proceeds of such sale, they must bear the expenses of it. The Colonsay, 11 P. D. 17; 5 Asp. 545.

36a. In Actions between Co-owners.

68. A managing owner who had not delivered accounts for nine years instituted a co-ownership action, and money was found due to him, but the court refused him his costs, on the ground of the delay in rendering his accounts. The Charles Jackson, 52 L. T. 631; 5 Asp. 399.

38. In Actions of Salvage.

1. Generally.*

(a) Since the Judicature Acts.

69. Agreement between the masters of the steamers W. and N., the latter being in need of assistance, that the W. should tow the N. to Queenstown for £200, and the N. was towed there accordingly. Subsequently thirteen of the officers and crew of the W. brought an action of salvage against the N. Agreement upheld, and salvors condemned in costs, on the ground of excessive bail taken, and that the suit should have been brought in an Admiralty county court. The Nasmyth, 10 P. D. 41.

10. When Excessive Bail taken (and see p. 409).

70. Where the plaintiffs in a salvage action arrested the defendant vessel for an exorbitant sum they were condemned to pay the defendant's costs and expenses of taking bail. The George Gordon, 9 P. D. 46; 5 Asp. 216; The Saga, March 13, 1885; The Earl Grey, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 180; The Nasmyth. No. 69, supra.

70a. Action of salvage against a steamer valued at £14,000. Arrest and bail for £3,000 required and given. Award, £450. Plaintiffs condemned in the costs and expenses of the giving of bail. The George Gordon, 9 P. D. 46.

71. Half costs only allowed on account of excessive bail. The British Queen, May 19, 1866.

72. It is no excuse that the plaintiff's solicitors were ignorant of the facts at the time, and that the defendants did not apply to have the bail reduced. The Camelia, 9 P. D. 27.

13. Appraisalment (and see p. 411).

73. A cause of salvage was instituted against ship, cargo, and freight in the sum of £1,000, and the defendants filed an affidavit stating the value of ship and cargo at £1,058. Upon valuation by the receiver of wreck at the plaintiff's request, under the 50th section of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), the vessel and her cargo were valued at £955. On motion by the defendants to dismiss the defendants and their bail from the suit, on the ground that the value of the property salvaged was under £1,000, the court held, that, under the circumstances of the case, it could not act upon the assumption that the value was under £1,000, and dismissed the motion with costs. The Dart, 1870.

39. In Actions of Wages.

74. On reference of a master's claim for wages and disbursements, two-thirds of the amount claimed and two-thirds of a counterclaim set up by the owners being disallowed, each party was ordered to pay his own costs of the reference. The Ocean Belle, No. 3314, August, 1866. R. & M.

75. In a master's action for wages and disbursements the claim as filed was reduced on the reference to less than one-half its original amount. The master, however, was allowed his costs of the reference, as the objections to his claim were not taken until the hearing. The Pharamond, May, 1865. R. & M.

76. A master's claim for wages and disbursements was rejected in toto as being fraudulent. It appeared, however, that the owner had managed the ship's affairs very carelessly and improperly, and the registrar therefore ordered each party to bear his own costs, and pay a moiety of the reference fees. The Vectis, No. 4755, April, 1869. R. & M.

41. Of Investigations into Shipping Casualties.

1. Generally* (and see p. 415).

77. It is not the intention of the legislature that costs should be given as a matter of course in all cases, and the object of Rule 21 of the Rules of 1878, is to enable the court to give costs, but in exceptional cases only. The Dimorah and The Dorunda, July 27, 1876.

4. Against the Board of Trade.

78. Held, by the wreck commissioner, that the power to order the Board of Trade to pay costs was only intended to be exercised in a case where there was no foundation for the charge or for any inquiry at all. The Vigilant, Sol. Jour. xxi. p. 31.

79. On an investigation into the stranding and loss of a steamer on the coast of Holland, where no blame could be imputed to the master, officers, or any one on board, but the loss was due to the violence of a storm, costs against the Board of Trade refused, it being admitted that the case was a proper one for inquiry, and it appearing that the master would receive detention money as a witness at the usual rate. The Nora, April 1, 1879.

80. On an investigation into the stranding and loss of a steamer on Whitby Rocks, held, that the only fault of the master was not having starboarded his helm, so as to bring the vessel's head round to the south when he found that she would not come up under her port helm with her head to the north; and as this was a mere error of judgment, his certificate was returned; but held, further, that it was a proper case for inquiry, and therefore no costs given. The Lorentzen, April 1, 1879.

81. In the case of a casualty from the defective state of one of the soil-pipes, but for which the owners were held not to blame, the court, though admitting their conduct throughout to have been most proper, refused to give them their costs against the Board of Trade, as the pipes were defective, and the Board of Trade was clearly not to blame. The Broomhall, March 7, 1877.

82. Where the loss of a steamer was held to have been due to the defective state of her machinery, to the weight of her cargo, and to an insufficient quantity of coal, for which the court held the master and engineer chiefly to blame, application of the owner for costs refused, on the ground that he also was not free from blame. The Athlete, July 20, 1882.

83. In a case of re-hearing, where the first decision had been overruled and the master held to blame, but the Board of Trade did not ask that his certificate should be dealt with, application of the owner and master for costs rejected, as the owner must share the responsibility of the master's appointment, and the master was to blame. The Cerwyn, July 19, 1880.

84. Where a charge of unseaworthi-tained for inquiries and prosecutions, see Board of Trade Instructions to Superintendents of August, 1879, p. 87.

ness had been made by seamen, and on the inquiry instituted thereon fully disproved, application of the owners for costs against the Board of Trade rejected, the result of the inquiry being an advantage to the owners in clearing away all suspicion. The May Fly, November 21, 1885.

5. Against Owners.

85. Where, though the vessel was not seaworthy, the Board of Trade made no charge against the owners, application of the Board of Trade to condemn the owners in costs refused. The Brightman, February 26, 1877.

86. The counsel of the Board of Trade, after all the witnesses produced by the Board of Trade had been examined, stated he should make no charge against the owners, the master, or any of the officers of the S., but should ask the court to condemn the owners in costs; but the court rejected the application, because no charge had been made, and because costs would be in the nature of a punishment against the owners, when, according to the statement of the representative of the Board of Trade, they had been guilty of no offence. The Sardinian, June 27, 1878.

87. The court condemned an owner, to blame for the ship being overladen and undermanned, in £250 nomine expensarum. The Marlborough, No. 565, March 23, 1880.

88. The owner was held to blame for the unseaworthy state of the ship, which was lost with twelve men. The court ordered him to pay £200 towards the costs of the inquiry. The Secret, No. 1613, Dec. 13, 1882.

89. The owner held to blame for the grossly unseaworthy state of his vessel, and condemned in £150 towards the costs. The Yanikale, Nov. 1880.

90. Loss of ship and twenty-one men from being overladen. The court condemned the owners in £100 nomine expensarum. The Calliope, No. 1236, Jan. 13, 1882.

91. A ship was held to have been allowed by the owner to leave port in an unseaworthy state, she was sunk with the loss of ten men, the court condemned the owner in £100 nomine expensarum. The Jackal, No. 1228, Jan. 20, 1882.

92. The owner held to blame for the unseaworthy state of the vessel, and condemned in £100 towards costs. The Oleander, February, 1883.

93. A ship was lost from improper ballast, and the owner was held to blame for not having seen that proper ballast was taken. The owner was ordered to pay £100 towards costs. The Golden Sea, Dec. 15, 1881.

94. The managing owner held in default, and ordered to pay £20 towards costs. The Joseph, Jan. 29, 1883; The Commodore, Feb. 25, 1881.

95. For cases of part costs given against owners in connection with the explosion of coal gas on board their ships, see The Alne Holme, No. 185; The Llanishen, No. 184, in tit. SHIPPING CASUALTIES INVESTIGATIONS, p. 2220.

95a. As to costs against owners in connection with injuries as to unsafe ships, see tit. OWNERS in Addenda, Pt. III. c. 1, Nos. 55, 64, 65, 67, 91, 92, 94, 97, 98, 107.

96. An owner having unduly prolonged proceedings by refusing to give information to the Board of Trade as to the insurance of the vessel, and by refusing to give evidence on those points until he was compelled to do so, condemned in part payment of the expenses of certain witnesses who had in consequence been necessarily subpoenaed, and in part of the costs of the underwriters who had appeared. The Furius, February 11, 1886.

97. On an inquiry into the loss of a barque, on which inquiry the court held that the owner was to blame for having sent the ship to sea in an unseaworthy state, considering the nature of the voyage and the time of the year, and it appeared that the owner had owned eleven vessels and lost nine, application of the Board of Trade to condemn the owner in costs rejected, the court observing that a condemnation of an owner in some £50 or £100, nomine expensarum, as a punishment for having sent an unseaworthy ship to sea, was not a satisfactory way of dealing with such a case; for that if the owner had committed so grave an offence, a condemnation in costs was not a sufficient punishment, and the court would not give him the opportunity of saying that he had been already punished in this court for the offence, and of urging it as an excuse for his not being punished if he deserved it in any other court. The Cowstip, March 11, 1885.

See also The Elephant, May 14, 1884, and The Linhope, July 18, 1884.

6. Against Masters.

98. The court generally considers that the suspension of the master's certificate is a sufficient punishment, and will in general refuse to condemn him in the costs. The Rescue, December 18, 1876.

99. On an investigation into the stranding and loss of the steamers A. and H. while the former was in tow of the latter, held, that the masters of both vessels largely contributed to the losses, and that had they held certificates the court would have suspended them, but costs of the Board of Trade against them refused. The Augusta and The Flying Hurricane, March 18, 1879.

7. From Collision.

100. On an investigation into the loss of the sailing barge, K., from a collision in Northfleet Hope, in the Thames, with the steamer M., the pilot of the M. was held solely to blame. Costs were asked for on behalf of the owner of the K. against the owners of the M., but refused, as the inquiry was instituted by the Board of Trade, and both the K. and the M. had intervened to protect their respective interests, and the collision had been caused not by any act done by the owners, master or officers of the M., but by the pilot. The Kathleen and The Maas, Sept. 20, 1879.

101. Where on an investigation into the loss of the ship H., attended with loss of life, from collision with the ship E., the H. was held not to blame, and the master of the E. was held to blame, and his certificate suspended, the court nevertheless refused to give costs to the owners of the H. The Helena and Electryon, Nov. 27, 1878.

102. Though on an inquiry into the circumstances of a collision between the ships H. and P. no charge was made against those in charge of the P., and the collision was held to have been caused by the want of proper precautions by the master of the H., and his certificate was suspended for a year for not rendering assistance to the P. after the collision, the court refused to condemn the master in the costs of the inquiry, but left each party to pay his own costs. The Hurumui and The Pater, Nov. 28, 1876.

44. In Naval Courts.

1. *Generally (and see p. 415).

2. Allowances to Witnesses.†

* (24) In all cases of danger or damage to property, where a naval court is held purely in the interests of owners of property, the court should carefully exercise its powers relating to costs. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Naval Courts, anno 1885, p. 9.

(25) When the court is held at or near a port where there is a British consul, the consul will pay the expenses of the court unless otherwise ordered, and will charge them in his account with the Board of Trade. When there is no British consul at hand, the expenses will be paid by the paymaster of the ship of war under the authority of the senior naval officer. Ibid. p. 18.

(26) All expenses should be entered in the report of the court as part of the costs, and no expenses will be allowed unless so entered. Ibid.

† (27) No allowances can be authorised to witnesses except in cases of great hardship, or where experts are called to assist the court by their evidence. Ibid. p. 17.

(28) When a crew has been detained a long time at considerable loss, the court may make them an allowance not exceeding the rate of the pay they were last receiving provided that they have not been in receipt of wages during the time, and have been detained solely for the purposes of the court, and have no interest in the investigation. Ibid.

(29) The only allowances are as follows:—For British shipmasters or merchants on the court, £2 2s. a day. For expert witnesses, £1 1s. or £2 2s. a day, according as the court may think right. For the clerk of the court, £2, if the court sit but one day; if more than one day, then for each day (including the first), £1 10s. This allowance is to include copying expenses and all clerical work necessary before and after the court sits. For a petty officer of the royal navy for acting as provost marshal, 5s. a day. Interpreters, surveyors, medical men, and translators, when not holding appointments under her Majesty's government, the charges customary at the port. No charge should be made for the serving of summonses, except money actually paid out of pocket for boat hire and other necessary expenses incurred in serving them. Ibid. p. 18.

In considering the international status of the Khedive of Egypt, held, that the court may inquire into the general history of the government of Egypt, the firmans of the Porte, and European treaties concerning the relations between Egypt and the Porte, and that the court may also obtain direct information from the Foreign Office. The Charkieh, L. 2. The evidence was conflicting, and the court was unable, from the demeanour of the witnesses, to say which story was the true one, and the Elder Brethren were unable to say, as a matter of seamanship, that there was negligence on either side. Held, therefore, that each party had failed to sustain the onus of proof resting on him to establish negligence; and claim and counter-claim dismissed, each party to bear his own costs. The Frigorifique, May 27, 1884.

1. Generally (and see p. 430).

24. Acts of parliament, proclamations, orders, or other documents by the government printer, the Queen's printer, or other printing authorized by her Majesty, and purporting to be printed under the superintendence of her Majesty's Stationery Office, shall be receivable in evidence. See the Documentary Evidence Act, 1882 (c. 9).

24a. As to evidence affecting charter-parties, see tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, p. 475; as to usage in regard to reasonable time under charter-parties, ibid. p. 608; as to evidence affecting bills of lading, ibid. pp. 518, 520, 610, and of usage under bills of lading, ibid. p. 575; as to evidence of implied contract, ibid. p. 586.

24b. Any document required by this act to be executed in the presence of, or to be attested by, any witness or witnesses, may be proved by the evidence of any person who is able to bear witness to the requisite facts without calling the attesting witness or witnesses, or any of them. See the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 526.

24c. As to documentary evidence of various kinds, see Mews' and others' Digest, founded on Fisher, 1886, vol. 3, p. 1226, and Annual Digests since.

7a. Engineer's Logs.

25. Entries in an engineer's log are evidence against his owner. The Earl of Dumfries, 10 P. D. 31; 54 L. J. P. D. 7; 5 Asp. 342.

10. Protests (and see p. 438).

26. In cases where salvage services have been rendered it is the duty of the owners of the vessel salvaged to cause a protest to be made as speedily as possible after the services are rendered. The protest will then be received by the court with great attention. The James McQueen, 4 W. R. 91; The Alawal, Nov. 21, 1853.

* (1) For the old practice in the Court of Admiralty as to answers, see The Protector, 3 Hagg. 240, and the Admiralty Court Act, 1854 (c. 78), ss. 7, 8.

26a. The protest of the master, although formally deposed to, cannot be received as evidence on behalf of the owner or master, but it may be used as evidence against them. Rex v. Scriveners' Co., 10 B. & C. 511; Senat v. Porter, 7 T. R. 158; and see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 270; and Murton's Wreck Enquiries, 1884, p. 115.

11. *Depositions before Receiver of Wreck and others * generally* (and see p. 438).

As to the Depositions, or Wreck, Register, see tit. BOARD OF TRADE, p. 2256.

12. Registers and Certificates of Registry (and see p. 440).

27. In an action of tort for negligence on the part of the ship keeper in charge of the defendant's vessel, held, by the majority of the court, that the fact of ownership, as proved by the production of the ship's register, was, if unexplained, evidence to go to the jury of the ship keeper being employed by the defendants. Hibbs v. Ross, L. R. 1 Q. B. 534; 35 L. J. Q. B. N.S. 193; 2 Asp. 397; 7 B. & S. 655.

28. A British register is at most only prima facie proof of British ownership, and may be contradicted by other circumstances. The Princess Charlotte, B. & L. 75.

29. Seemle, the register is not even prima facie proof where the question is that of the vessel's nationality. Ibid.

29a. The Laura, in No. 217, p. 441, is also reported in 3 Moore, P. C. N.S. 181; 2 Asp. 225.

30. The English certificate of registry showing the tonnage is not conclusive evidence of such tonnage, and consequently the Order in Council of June 26, 1873, made under s. 60 of the M. S. Act, 1862 (c. 63), directing that German steamers measured after January 1, 1873, should be deemed to be of the tonnage denoted in their registers, in the same manner and to the same extent in and to which the tonnage denoted in the certificate of registry of British ships is deemed to be the tonnage of such ships, does not make the registers of such German ships conclusive evidence of their tonnage. The Franconia, 3 P. D. (C. A.) 164.

13a. Copies of Documents.

See tit. PRACTICE, Pt. II. p. 1618.

15a. Letters of Masters to Owners.

31. In an action for non-delivery of cargo shipped in defendant's vessel, held, that a letter from the master to his owners, the defendants, was admissible in evidence against the owners as to the facts stated therein, but not as to his opinion. The Solway, 10 P. D. 137; 54 L. J. P. D. 83; 5 Asp. 482.

together with the freight, when repaired, the master is justified in abandoning the voyage, and is not bound as agent of his owner to send the goods on in another bottom. De Cuadra v. Swann, 16 C. B. N.S. 772; Worms v. Storey, 11 Ex. 427.

10. Interference by Mortgagees (and see p. 486).

4. Where a ship is mortgaged, but left by the mortgagee in the possession of the mortgagor, the mortgagor may make any contract in respect of the ship which an ordinary owner may make provided he does not impair the security, and hence may enter into a charter-party for the earning of freight, even though by such charter-party the freight is payable to a third party; and the mortgagee cannot interfere with the performance of the charter-party upon taking possession after the same is entered into, and if he does attempt to interfere an interim injunction will be granted restraining him from interference with the performance of the charter-party. Cory Bros. & Co. v. Stewart, C. A., April 7, 1886.

13. Conditions Precedent.

3. Representations and Warranties.(b) Seaworthiness (and see p. 491).

5. The warranty of seaworthiness implied in a bill of lading is an absolute

* (1) See as to the rights and duties of charterers by German law, tit. LIENS, p. 857, Nos. 248, 256.

warranty that the ship shall be in fact fit for the voyage, and not merely that the shipowner shall take all reasonable care to make her so fit, and hence a latent defect in a screw-shaft existing prior to the commencement of the voyage, and resulting in the breaking of the shaft, is a breach of the shipowner's warranty of seaworthiness, although the shipowner may have taken all reasonable precaution in the selection of the shaft. The Glenfruin, 5 Asp. 413; 52 L. T. N.S. 769; 10 P. D. 10.

6. See also Nos. 8 and 15, infra; and p. 531.

5. Sailing (and see p. 493).

7. The word "port" in a charter-party means the port as commonly understood by shipowners and merchants in its popular or commercial sense, and not the port as defined by Acts of Parliament or by-laws for the purposes of revenue or pilotage, and is to be so construed in determining whether a ship has "finally sailed from her last port." Sailing Ship Garston Co. v. Hickie & Co., 5 Asp. 499; 15 Q. B. D. 580.

7a. A provision in a charter-party that a ship shall sail from a named port before a fixed date is a condition precedent; and "perils of the sea, &c., throughout this charter-party always excepted," do not affect the operation of the condition, and hence, if the ship sail after the date, the charterer is released from the obligation to perform his contract. Crookevit v. Fletcher, 1 H. & N. 893; 26 L. J. Ex. 153.

6. Arrival (and see p. 494).

8. The cancellation clause in a charter-party, being for the benefit of the charterers, and the arrival of the ship on a date therein named, being a condition precedent to the duty of the shipowner to load, the excepted perils mentioned in the charter-party, have no application to such a clause, and hence where the ship is prevented by these perils from arriving at the port of loading by the date mentioned, the charterers have the right to cancel. Smith v. Dart, 14 Q. B. D. 105; 5 Asp. 360; 52 L. T. N.S. 218; 54 L. J. Q. B. 121.

See also Shubrick v. Salmond, 3 Burr. 1697.

F.

7. Ready to receive Cargo (and see p. 495).

8a. A charter-party provided for lay days for loading the cargo at a Russian port. Whilst the ship was in the port of loading, and before the lay days expired, a war was declared between England and Russia. Before and after the declaration of war, the master asked for his cargo, and was told there was none, and that he had better go. He did not sail at once; but after some delay, and before the lay days had wholly expired, sailed with another cargo. Held, that the master not having treated the refusal as a breach before the declaration of war, which dissolved the contract, there was no right of action against the charterer. Avery v. Bowden, 6 E. & B. 953; 26 L. J. Q. B. 3.

16. Deckload (and see p. 500).

9. Words in a charter-party providing that a deckload of timber is to be carried at full freight but "at merchants' risk" do not preclude the owner of the deckload from recovering general average contribution if the cargo is carried on deck by the custom of trade, and is jettisoned. Burton v. English, 5 Asp. 187; reversing on appeal the decision in this case, in No. 285, p. 500.

22. Safe Port (and see p. 503).

10. In an action for breach of charter-party, an expression of opinion by the judge that a certain port is a safe loading place is not a misdirection if he leaves the question to the jury. Smith v. Dart, 14 Q. B. D. 105; 5 Asp. 360; 52 L. T. N.S. 218; 54 L. J. Q. B. 121.

30. Avoidance or Dissolution.

3. Perils of the Seas.

(b) As affecting outward Voyage (and see pp. 494, 508).

See also No. 8, supra.

30a. Option to cancel.

11. Where a charter-party provides that if "the steamer be not ready to load on or before the 31st May, 1882, the charterers to have the option of cancelling the charter-party, the same to be declared on the steamer being ready to receive cargo," the fact that the steamer has partly discharged her outward cargo, and can begin to take in her chartered cargo whilst discharging the remainder before the cancelling date will not operate to deprive the charterer of his option to cancel, as he is entitled to have the whole reach of the ship's hold at his disposal before the cancelling date. Groves, Maclean & Co. v. Volkart Bros., C. A., 5 May, 1886.

11a. See also No. 8, supra, and pp. 494, 509.

Part III.—BILLS OF LADING.

5. Rights of Consignees, Indorsees, and Assignees.

1. Since 18 & 19 Vict. c. 111.

(a) Generally (and see p. 515).

12. Indorsees of a bill of lading can only sue in respect of rights arising out of the contract contained in such bill of lading, and hence cannot sue for the loss of goods brought alongside of a ship, but not shipped on board of her, as the contract relates to goods shipped only. Thorman v. Burt, C. A., 3 March, 1886.

2. Before 18 & 19 Vict. c. 111.

(a) Generally (and see p. 518).

13. When, from all the facts, it may fairly be inferred that it was the intention of a seller to pass the property in goods shipped to order, the mere circumstance of the bill of lading being taken in the name of the seller and remaining undorsed will not prevent its passing. Joyce v. Swann, 17 C. B. N.S. 216.

6. Liabilities of Consignees, Indorsees, and Assignees (and see p. 519).

14. A shipper of goods who has endorsed a bill of lading in blank, and delivered it to the indorsee simply by way of security for money advanced, does not thereby pass the property in the goods to the indorsee so as to transfer to him all liabilities in respect of them within the meaning of sect. 1 of the Bills of Lading Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 111.), and consequently such an indorsee cannot be made liable in an action by the shipowner for freight. Sewell v. Burdick (H. L.), 10 App. Cas. 74; 5 Asp. 376; 52 L. T. N.S.

445; 54 L. J. Q. B. 156; reversing Burdick v. Sewell (C. A.), 5 Asp. 298; 51 L. T. N.S. 453; 13 Q. B. D. 159; which reversed (Q. B.) 5 Asp. 79; 48 L. T. N.S. 705; 10 Q. B. D. 363; 52 L. J. Q. B. 428.

12. Barratry (and see p. 534).

See also tit. MARINE INSURANCE, pp. 1019—1038.

22. Exceptions.

4. Negligence (expressly excepted).

(a) Generally (and see p. 530).

15. The excepted perils in a bill of lading have no application to the case of a vessel sailing in an unseaworthy condition, and hence they are no defence to an action brought for loss or damage to the charterer's goods occasioned by such unseaworthiness. The Glenfruin, 10 P. D. 103; 5 Asp. 413; 52 L. T. N.S. 769.

9. Leakage and Breakeage (and see p. 532).

15a. The ordinary exception in a bill of lading of perils of the seas does not exempt a shipowner from liability for damage caused to one part of a cargo by leakage of another. Gillespie v. Thompson, 6 E. & B. 477, n.

11. Rats (and see p. 534).

16. Damage to cargo caused by water getting through a hole made by rats in a ship's bottom is not damage by "perils of the sea" within the meaning of the exceptions in a charter-party or bill of lading. Quare, in a policy of marine insurance. Pandorf & Co. v. Hamilton, Fraser & Co., C. A., August, 1886; reversing 54 L. T. N.S. 536.

Part IV.—STOPPAGE IN TRANSITU.

2. Who entitled to stop (and see p. 543).

17. M. & Co., merchants, of Jamaica, ordered of P. & G., merchants, of Baltimore, goods to be shipped from Baltimore to Jamaica at the risk and expense of

M. & Co. The goods were shipped on board the ship C., and were by the terms of the bills of lading deliverable to M. & Co. or their assigns on payment of freight. The goods were not paid for. While the vessel was on her voyage M. & Co. became bankrupt. On her arrival at Jamaica the agents of P. & G. went on board and demanded a package of the cargo in the name of the whole on behalf of P. & G. Before the arrival of the goods at Jamaica, P. & G. wrote to their agents, saying, "In disposing of the cargo use your own judgment," and forwarded a power of attorney for that purpose, but the letter did not arrive at Jamaica till the agents had seized the cargo. Held, first, that the agents at the time of the seizure of the goods had authority to stop the goods in transitu on behalf of P. & G. Hutchings v. Nunes, 1 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 243; 10 Jur. N.S. 109.

17a. Held, secondly, that there was an effectual stoppage of the goods in transitu by the agents. Ibid.

Part V.—GENERAL DUTIES OF CARRIERS.

4a. Discharge during Voyage.

18. A vessel having been chartered to convey a cargo of coals to China, and having become damaged, the master was forced to discharge the cargo, and the owner declined to re-ship it, on the ground that, having become wet, it was liable to spontaneous combustion. On a bill by the charterers to restrain the owner from employing the ship in any manner inconsistently with the charter-party, the court directed an inquiry as to the state of the cargo, and granted an injunction pending such inquiry. Heriot v. Nicholas, 12 W. R. 844—L. J.

18a. When a cargo has been shipped, and the voyage is delayed by an accident not within the perils excepted in the contract of affreightment, in consequence of which the cargo has to be discharged, the shipowner has a lien on the cargo for the purpose of enabling him to earn her freight, and the cargo owner is not entitled to insist on delivery of the cargo without payment of freight before the completion of the voyage on which the freight is to be earned, but the shipowner may insist upon re-shipping the original cargo if it is capable of being carried on. The Blenheim, 5 Asp. 522.

Part VI.—DAMAGE OR LOSS.

1. Generally (and see p. 558).

19. Action by charterers against the owners, for damages, through negligent navigation, and consequent loss of cargo. The E. of D. left Taganrog, in the Black Sea, in July, 1884, with a cargo of rye, for delivery at Altona. It was stated for the defence that she passed Cape St. Vincent at the distance of about half-a-mile; that she then shaped a course N.- $\frac{1}{2}$ -E. towards Cape Roca, on the coast of Portugal, the weather being fine, though rather hazy, and the sea smooth; that from that time the vessel proceeded at about eight knots an hour, until 9 p.m., when she suddenly entered a dense fog; that thereupon she was slowed to about six knots, and her course altered to N.- $\frac{3}{4}$ -W. magnetic; that early on the morning of the 5th the fog became so dense that the speed was reduced to three knots; that at 4 a.m. the second officer came on deck to take the watch, and was joined by the master, and about twenty minutes afterwards the sound of breakers was heard; that the master ordered the helm to be put hard-a-starboard, and the engines to be stopped and reversed, but a moment or so afterwards she struck on some rocks about half-a-mile to the westward of Cape Guia Light. She was afterwards got off and taken into Lisbon, temporarily repaired there, and then proceeded to Cardiff. It was admitted that no soundings had been taken to test the position of the vessel; the defendants contending that the course which the E. of D. had shaped ought to have carried her clear of the land; and, therefore, there was no necessity for soundings; that from the nature of the bottom about that part of the coast any soundings were unreliable; that to have stopped to take them would have been dangerous both to their vessel and others, and that some unknown and abnormal force had carried the vessel on to the rocks. On the other hand it was contended that the course steered was, looking at the dangerous and well-known indraught current at that part of the coast of Portugal, running too close to Cape Razo, even in fine weather; that she ought to have been given more sea room; and that when she got into the fog and the course was altered, the lead should have been used; and if it had been used half an hour before the accident the ship's danger would at once have become apparent. Verdict for the plaintiff on the ground of negligence of the defendants, and judgment accordingly. Scaramanga, Manhouse & Co. v. Martin & Marquand, 27 January, 1885.

19a. Action in rem against a foreign ship for damage to cargo. The pleadings stated that while the vessel was on a voyage to a British port with the cargo, the master, and sole owner, wilfully cut down and destroyed parts of the vessel, and abandoned her, and she was afterwards taken possession of by salvors and brought into a British port, and the plaintiffs were compelled to pay salvage to obtain their cargo, the delivery of which was delayed by such circumstances. Held, that the facts disclosed a breach of duty, or of contract, within the meaning of sect. 6 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), entitling the plaintiffs to damages, although no criminal proceedings had been taken against the master, who appeared as defendant, and was a foreign subject. The Princess Royal, L. R. 3 A. & E. 41; 39 L. J. Adm. 43; 22 L. T. 39.

19b. See further as to negligence of master and crew, p. 530; as to bad navigation and other misconduct of master and officers causing shipping casualties, see tit. SHIPPING CASUALTIES INVESTIGATIONS, pp. 2206—2209.

5a. Railway and Canal Traffic Acts.

20. The provisions of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), restricting the power of railway companies to limit their liability in respect of goods carried by them are extended to steamers belonging to railway companies and carrying on communication between towns or ports. See the Railway Clauses Act, 1863 (c. 92), s. 31, and the Regulation of Railways Act, 1868 (c. 119), s. 16.

20a. Such provisions also apply to contracts made with railway companies who procure goods to be carried in steamers owned by other persons. See the Regulation of Railways Act, 1871 (c. 78), s. 12.

21. By sect. 16 of the Regulation of Railways Act, 1868 (c. 119), sect. 7 of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), is incorporated, and its provisions extended and made applicable to luggage conveyed by railway companies on board steamers used by them for the purpose of carrying on communication between any towns or ports. (Stewart v. London & North-Western Rail. Co., 19 L. T. N.S. 302, discussed.) Cohen v. South-Eastern Rail. Co., L. R. 2 Exch. D. 253; 3 Asp. N.S. 248.

22. Where a railway company, having no steamers of their own, make a contract with a person to carry that person's goods by a route which involves a sea transit, and procure a steamship company to carry the goods over the sea transit for them, such contract is, as far as regards the sea transit, governed by the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7, and any stipulation in it which is unreasonable is void, and hence the railway company cannot exempt themselves from the negligence of the steamship company's servants during the sea transit. Doolan v. Midland Rail. Co., L. R. 2 App. Cas. 792; 3 Asp. N.S. 485.

23. As to what conditions have been held to be "just and reasonable," and vice versa, see Doolan v. Midland Rail. Co., L. R. 2 App. Cas. 792; 3 Asp. N.S. 485; Peek v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co., 10 H. L. Cas. 473; Rooth v. N. E. Rail. Co., L. R. 2 Ex. 173; Ashenden v. L. B. & S. C. Rail. Co., 5 Ex. Div. 190; Allday v. G. W. Rail. Co., 34 L. J. Q. B. 5; Wise v. G. W. Rail. Co., 25 L. J. Ex. 258; Lewis v. G. W. Rail. Co., 29 L. J. Exch. 425.

24. All conditions limiting the liability of a railway company as carriers must be set out in a written contract signed by or on behalf of the consignor or owner of the goods, and must be such as, in the opinion of a court or judge, are just and reasonable. Peek v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co., 10 H. L. Cas. 473; 32 L. J. Q. B. 241; Aldridge v. Great Western Rail. Co., 15 C. B. N.S. 582; 33 L. J. C. P. 161.

28. Practice in Actions for Damage to Cargo (and see p. 566).

25. The Admiralty Court rule that in cases of collision the damages are to be equally divided where both ships are to blame, does not apply to actions for breach of contract brought by owners of cargo against the carrying ship to recover damages for loss of or injury to their goods, and hence the plaintiffs in such actions are entitled to recover their full damages from the owners of the carrying ship. The Bushire, 5 Asp. 416; 52 L. T. N.S. 740.

And see tit. PRACTICE, p. 1680.

29. Measure of Damages.

26. Where, owing to negligent navigation, a ship is cast ashore, and her cargo thereby suffers damage and loss, money paid by the underwriters of the cargo to a salvage association who were employed with the assent of the shipowner for salving a portion of the cargo is not a voluntary payment, and is recoverable by the owners of the cargo from the shipowners, being money paid on behalf of the cargo owners to avert a loss which would have fallen on the shipowners if the cargo had not been sent to its destination. Scaramanga v. Martin, Marquand & Co., 5 Asp. 410, 506.

27. Premiums paid for the insurance of cargo are recoverable by the charterers from the shipowners for breach of the contract of carriage in not delivering the goods; the value of the cargo at the port of destination, including all the reasonable mercantile expenses of taking it there, among which are premiums of insurance. Great Indian Peninsular Railway Co. v. Turnbull, 5 Asp. 465; 53 L. T. N.S. 325; and see Pt. VII. c. 2, s. 4, infra, and p. 570.

See also tit. REGISTRAR AND MERCHANTS, p. 1738.

30. Passenger's Luggage.

See tit. OWNERS, p. 1310, Nos. 1103—1105.

Part VII.—PAYMENT.

1. Generally* (and see p. 566).

28. Where a cargo is shipped by vendors to become the property of the shipowners on payment of price and other contingencies, and the master signs bill of lading binding himself to deliver to order on payment of freight, but no rate of freight is specified, and the shipowners fail to pay the price, and the bills of lading are presented by persons who have taken up the bill of exchange drawn for the price by the shipper, the holders of the bill of lading must pay freight for the cargo. Swann v. Tyrie, 4 B. & P. 680; 33 L. J. Q. B. 97.

2. Under Charter-parties.

4. Advanced Freight (and see p. 570).

29. The words "steamer lost or not lost" in a clause in a charter-party providing for payment of freight in advance within a certain time of the ship sailing, do not preclude the charterer recovering the advanced freight paid under such clause as damages for breach of contract, where the ship has been lost through the negligence of the shipowners, semble, because the words "lost or not lost" are applicable only to the perils excepted in the contract of carriage, and negligence of the master and crew was not one of the exceptions. Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company v. Turnbull, 5 Asp. 465; 53 L. T. N.S. 325.

4. Under Charter-parties and Bills of Lading (and see p. 578).

30. Where, by a bill of lading, freight is payable at a certain rate, and "other conditions as per charter-party," and by the charter-party freight is payable at a higher rate, and the shipowner is given an absolute lien on the cargo for freight, the shipowner has no right, as against the consignees who were not the charterers, to detain the cargo to enforce payment of freight at the rate mentioned in the charter-party; the conditions as to such freight not being incorporated in the bill of lading, and the consignees being entitled to delivery upon payment of the freight mentioned in the bill of lading. Gardner v. Trechmann, 5 Asp. 558; 15 Q. B. D. 154.

16. On Abandonment of Ship (and see p. 585).

31. When a salving ship takes a crew off a vessel in distress, and puts men on board of her, refusing to allow her own crew to return, and the two vessels are in company navigated into port, there is no such abandonment of the ship as to put an end to the contract of carriage, and consequently there will be freight due upon the consignees requiring delivery of the cargo, such freight being pro rata, assuming the port not to be the port to which the cargo ought to have been taken under the contract of carriage. The Leptir, 5 Asp. 411; 52 L. T. N.S. 768.

* (2) See, as to freight according to German law, tit. LIENS, p. 836, Nos. 235—247 and Nos. 257—276.

20. Computation.

3. By Measure (and see p. 587).

32. By a charter-party making goods deliverable in England freight was payable "at and after the rate of thirty-five shillings per 180 cubic English feet taken on board as per Gothenburg custom." Held, on appeal, that freight was payable according to the quantity as ascertained by Gothenburg and not English measurement. The Skandinav, 51 L. J. P. D. 93; 50 L. J. P. D. 46.

24. Set-off prior to the Judicature Acts (and see p. 590).

33. In an action for freight the defendant pleaded a set-off, to which the plaintiff replied, on equitable grounds, that while the freight was in the course of being earned, he assigned it for value to A., of which the defendant, before the debt became due, and before the action was brought, had notice; and that the plaintiff was suing only as trustee for A. Held, no answer to the plea. Wilson v. Gabriel, 4 B. & S. 243.

Part IX.—DEMURRAGE.

2. Under Charter-parties.

4. Running Days (and see p. 606).

34. Running days in a charter-party in the absence of custom are consecutive days, but a custom of a port, by which days occupied in moving the ship from one part of the port to another are not counted as lay days, is consistent with a charter-party providing for so many running days as lay days, and it is a good custom. Nielsen & Co. v. Wait, James & Co., 5 Asp. 553; 16 Q. B. D. 67; 54 L. T. N.S. 344.

35. By charter-party it was agreed that the plaintiff's steamer, having loaded a grain cargo, should therewith proceed to a port in the B. Channel as ordered, "or so near thereto as she may safely get at all times of the tide, and always afloat, eight running days, Sundays excepted, to be allowed the merchants, if the ship be not sooner despatched, for loading and discharging." The ship was ordered to discharge at G., and having arrived at S. Dock, which is within the port of G., but some miles from the basin where grain cargoes are discharged if the ship's burden will admit; partial delivery was there made, owing to the ship not being able to get to the basin until part of her cargo was discharged. The consignees then required the ship to be taken to the basin where the discharge was completed, when the ship returned to S. Dock. In an action for demurrage the following custom of the port of G. was proved, viz., that the ordinary place for discharging grain cargoes was at the basin, that when vessels laden therewith were of too heavy a burden to get there they were lightened at S., that during the discharge at S. the lay days counted, but that the time occupied in going up to the basin and returning to S. was not counted. Held, that the custom was reasonable, and that it was not inconsistent with the express terms of the charter as to "running days," and that, therefore, the time occupied by the ship in going from S. to the basin and in returning ought to be excluded from the lay days. Ibid.

8. Port of Discharge (and see p. 607).

36. Where, by the terms of a charter-party, a ship was to load a cargo "and therewith proceed to D. and deliver the same alongside consignee's or railway wharf, or into lighters, or any vessel or wharf where she may safely deliver as ordered;" and upon her arrival at D. she was ordered to discharge at the railway wharf, but, owing to all the discharging berths being occupied, she was not berthed until twenty-four hours after her arrival in dock: Held, in an action for demurrage, that the voyage was not completed until the ship was berthed at the railway wharf, and, therefore, the defendants were not liable for demurrage for the period between the ship's arrival in dock at D. and her being berthed at the railway wharf. Murphy v. Coffin & Co., 5 Asp. 531, n.

37. Where, by a charter-party, it was agreed that the plaintiff's vessel, after loading a cargo, should proceed "to London or Tyne dock, to such ready quay berth as ordered by the charterers," demurrage at an agreed rate per day, and the master or owners to have an absolute lien on the cargo for all freight, dead freight, and demurrage, and the vessel was ordered by the charterers to a London dock, and upon her arrival there was no quay-berth ready for her reception, and a delay of one day was thereby caused in discharging her cargo: Held, in an action by the shipowner claiming a lien upon the cargo for demurrage, that, in the true construction of the charter-party, the charterers were bound to name and provide a ready quay-berth, and that, for a delay caused by their neglecting to do so, the plaintiffs were entitled to a lien on the cargo for demurrage, the damages being sufficiently in the nature of demurrage to come within the demurrage clause in the charter-party. Harris & Dixon v. Marcus Jacob & Co., 5 Asp. 530; 15 Q. B. D. 247; 54 L. T. N.S. 61; 10 App. Cas. 247.

Part XI.—LIENS.

1. Generally* (and see p. 611).

* (1) By the general maritime law, and the law of America, the master has a lien on the freight for his necessary disbursements for incidental expenses and the liabilities which he contracts for those expenses during the

10. Landing of Goods under M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (and see p. 619).

38. Where goods are landed for assortment under the 6th sub-section of section 67 of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862, the 7th sub-section, which relates to the case of a vessel discharging overside, is not applicable, and the goods owner is not entitled to insist on the twenty-four hours' notice in writing referred to in the 7th subsection. The Clan Macdonald, 8 P. D. 178; 52 L. J. P. D. 89; 5 Mar. L. C. N.S. 148.

38a. Even if the 7th sub-section applies to the case of goods landed for assortment, it is still the duty of the goods-owner to take away the goods within a reasonable time after he has notice, whether written or verbal, that he can receive them. The notice in writing is only required as a condition of the shipowner's right to land or unship the goods at the goods-owner's risk and expense. Ibid.

5. A collision occurred on the high seas between the C. and the J., two foreign vessels. An action in rem was commenced against the C., in Holland, by the owners of the J. and her cargo.

The C. was arrested in the action; but was released by the Dutch court with the consent of the agent of the J. on certain underwriters interested in the C. guaranteeing the plaintiffs to answer judgment in the action. Cross proceedings were instituted in the Dutch court by the owners of the C. Proceedings in respect of the same collision were then commenced by the owners of the J. and her cargo against the C. in the Admiralty Division, and the C. was arrested. The plaintiffs offered to abandon the proceedings in Holland. Held, by the majority of the Court of Appeal (affirming the judgment below), that whether the guarantee was equivalent to bail, or was a private agreement by which the release was purchased, the proceedings in this country must be stayed, and the C. released. Held, by Lord Esher, M. R., that the guarantee was not equivalent to bail, and that as the plaintiffs' remedy in Holland was not so good as in England, the action should be allowed to continue. The Christianborg, 10 P. D. 141 (C. A.); 54 L. J., P. D. 84.

10. Res Judicata.1. Generally (and see p. 659).

6. A collision occurred between the ships K. & A., when the K. and its cargo were lost. The owners of the K. brought an action against the owners of the A. in respect of the collision, but the action was discontinued by consent of all parties, without costs, on the ground of inevitable accident, and this was embodied in an order of court in this form:—"Upon consent of both solicitors, it is ordered that this action be discontinued, without costs, on the ground of inevitable accident."

The owners of the cargo on the K. then brought an action against the owners of the A., when the court found both vessels to blame for the collision. The owners of the A. instituted an action to limit their liability to £8 a ton (the statutory limit). The owners of the K. then took out a summons to have the consent order rescinded, so as to allow them to come in and prove, and it was rescinded accordingly. On the claims coming before the registrar, the cargo owners objected to the claim of the owners of the K. on the fund. The registrar admitted the claim, and his decision was affirmed by the President. On appeal, held, that the agreement in question was only an agreement to treat the action as at an end, and in fact to discontinue it; and judgment affirmed, Coleridge, C. J., dubitante. The Ardandhu, March 18, 1886, and in court below, 11 P. D. 40.

9. Action for damage by collision brought by the owners of the Em. against the El., held, in the Admiralty Division, by Sir R. Phillimore, and by the Court of Appeal, that the El. was solely to blame. Subsequent action for damage in respect of the same collision, brought by the owners of the cargo of the Em., and tried before the President of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division. In that action the El. admitted her liability, but contended that the Em. was also to blame, on the ground that she was going at the time at a speed which was immoderate according to the Sea Collision Rules of 1879. This defence had been set up in both courts in the former action, but some of the witnesses on both sides examined at the hearing before Sir Robert Phillimore had not been called on the second trial. The President observed, that though in respect of the number of witnesses the plaintiff's case in the first action might have been stronger, yet, as in other respects, the facts in this action were substantially the same as those in the action tried before Sir Robert Phillimore and the Court of Appeal, and as those two tribunals had held, the Em. was in no way to blame, there would be judgment for the plaintiff, with costs, although had the case come before the court for the first time, he should have held the defendants had established their case, and that the Em. was going at an improper speed, and was therefore jointly to blame. Decision affirmed on appeal, and also in the House of Lords, three peers voting against the appeal and two in its favour. The Elysia, in the Admiralty Division, March 16, 1883; in the Court of Appeal, Feb. 25, 1884; and in the House of Lords, May 11, 1885.*

Part II.—BRITISH COURTS IN COLONIAL OR FOREIGN POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

1. Courts of Vice-Admiralty.

1. Generally (and see p. 686).

22. Vice-Admiralty Courts abroad had, prior to this act, only the ordinary jurisdiction exercised by the Court of Admiralty before the passing of the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65. The Australia, Swabey, 480; 13 Moore, P. C. C. 132; The John, 2 Hagg. 305.

3. Concurrent Jurisdiction (and see p. 689).

23. Proceeds of a ship and cargo sold abroad and transmitted from a Vice-Admiralty Court to the registry of the High Court of Admiralty, decreed on motion to be paid out to the respective consignees of the cargo, on the consent of the purchaser of the cargo. The Lady Banks, 1 Hagg. 306.

2. Naval Courts.

1. Generally* (and see p. 690).

* (2) Naval courts are British tribunals to investigate facts and try cases connected with British shipping in ports or places out of her Majesty's dominions, when occasion demands the prompt interference of British authority. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Naval Courts, anno 1885, p. 3.

(3) They must not, therefore, be held in Great Britain nor in any British possession abroad. Ibid.

(4) They should not be held in any case in which a consul can deal satisfactorily with the matter, and where practicable a consultation should be held between a naval officer and a consul before summoning a naval court. Ibid.

(5) A naval court may be summoned—(a) If a master or any of the crew of a British ship make a complaint to a consul or a naval officer, which appears to such officer to require immediate investigation. (b) Whenever the interest of the owner of any British ship, or of the cargo of any such ship, appears to such officer to require it. (c) Whenever any British ship is wrecked or abandoned, or otherwise lost, at or near the place where such officer may be, or whenever the crew or part of the crew of any British ship which has been wrecked, abandoned, or lost abroad, arrives at such place. Ibid.

(6) These cases may be classed under the following heads:—1. Crimes committed on the high seas and abroad. 2. Offences against discipline. 3. Misdemeanours and other offences against the M. S. Acts. 4. Wrecks and casualties. 5. Misconduct and incompetency of officers of the mercantile marine, holding certificates granted by the Board of Trade, or colonial certificates of the same validity. 6. Loss of or danger to health or life on board British ships, however caused. 7. Danger or damage to property in ships or cargoes. Ibid.

(7) Naval courts, when they punish by inflicting imprisonment or forfeiture of wages, or both, under sect. 243 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), should not also punish by inflicting forfeiture of wages under the 263rd section of the same act. Ibid. anno 1885, Offences and Discipline, p. 5.

(8) Naval courts, before exercising jurisdiction under sect. 18 of the M. S. Act, 1885 (c. 91), should bear in mind that—1. A complaint must be made which appears to the officers summoning the court to require immediate investigation. 2. A complaint must be made to such officer by the master of a British ship, or by a certificated mate, or by one or more of the seamen belonging to such ship. 3. The complaint must touch the conduct of the master or one of the crew of such ship. See Board of Trade Instructions as to Naval Courts, anno 1885, p. 6.

(9) When the offenders are masters holding certificates, it will generally be better to use only the court's power to suspend or cancel their certificates, and supersede them in command, treating the cases as those of gross misconduct. Ibid.

(10) For a list of offences against the M. S. Acts, in respect of which two justices would, if the case were tried in the United Kingdom, have power to convict summarily, with their penalties and punishments, and as to which a naval court has similar power. Ibid. pp. 75, 76.

* (11) The court is to be called by an officer in command of a ship of her Majesty on a foreign station, or in his absence by a consular officer. It is to consist of not more than five and not less than three members. Ibid. p. 9.

(12) No person can form one of a naval court who is not either an officer in the naval service of her Majesty, a consular officer, the master of a British merchant ship, or a British merchant. For the definition of a consular officer, see sect. 2 of M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104). A person who possesses a master's certificate, but has never commanded as master, is not eligible. Ibid.

(13) Except it be impossible to procure their attendance, a naval court is not legally constituted unless one of the court is an officer in the naval service of her Majesty not below the rank of lieutenant, one a consular officer, and one a master of a British merchant ship. More than one consular officer cannot sit on a naval court. When there is no naval officer, one of the court must be a master of a British merchant ship when possible. Ibid.

(14) Where it is impossible to obtain the services of either a naval officer or a master of a British merchant ship, a court composed of one consular officer and two or more British merchants is legally constituted, and then only, or where there is no consular officer and there is a naval officer, the court may be composed of one naval officer and two or more British merchants. Ibid. p. 13.

(15) In cases of danger to life and health, a medical officer of the royal navy shall, when possible, be a member of the court, and, when necessary, medical men may be examined as experts. Ibid.

(16) Neither the master nor the consignee of the ship to which the parties complaining or complained against may belong can be a member of a naval court. Ibid. p. 13.

(17) The president of the court must be either a naval or a consular officer, and if there is both a naval and a consular officer in such court, then the president of the court must be the naval or consular officer who is of the highest rank, according to regulation, whether he has summoned the court or not. Ibid.

(18) No power is given for the appointment of an engineer or surveyor as a member of a naval court; but where the court needs advice relating to machinery, ship-building, local navigation, or any other point involved in the case, it can call experts as witnesses, and examine them on the evidence given. Ibid. p. 7.

† (19) There are two things which should always be made the subject of the fullest possible inquiry. The cause or causes of the casualty, the conduct of the officers and crew, and in every notice of a naval court issued to masters, or to others, it will be well to mention both subjects of investigation. Where the facts are clear, the officers and crew free from blame, and no public benefit can be derived from a formal investigation, a naval court should not be held. But every other case of a wreck abandonment or important casualty to a British ship outside British jurisdiction should, if possible, be investigated by a naval court. Ibid. p. 6.

(20) Where there is reason to believe that the ship was unseaworthy, a most careful inquiry and report should be made as to the character of the unseaworthiness, and its cause, the time when it began, and any defect in the ship, its machinery, stowage, equipment, or crew, which caused the danger. Ibid. p. 7.

(21) Whenever the misconduct or incompetency shown by an officer is connected with a casualty to a ship it will be best to deal with it by an inquiry into the casualty. Ibid. p. 8.

(22) In any grave case of loss of or danger to health or life by improper or insufficient water, accommodation, medicines, or anti-scorbutics, where several of a crew have died, or are suffering severely from scurvy or other sickness due to such causes, a naval court should be held, the ship and stores surveyed, and evidence carefully taken as to how far the provisions of the law relating to provisions, health, and accommodation on board ships have been complied with. Ibid.

(23) Loss of or danger to health or life, if attended by a casualty to the ship, should be inquired into at the same time as the casualty. Ibid.

(24) In cases of loss of or danger to health or life by defective equipment, &c., the court has no power to do more than make inquiry, unless there has been default on the part of the master or officers. Ibid. p. 9.

(25) Cases of danger or damage to ships or cargoes when unattended with danger to life or health, or the misconduct of officers, will rarely require the holding of a naval court, except at the express request of those interested in the property, and should only be held in exceptional cases. Ibid.

* (26) The parties, and all necessary witnesses, should be summoned by the court, and their attendance may be compelled, and the production of all necessary documents may be ordered. Ibid. p. 14.

(27) Unless there is any special reason to the contrary, the court should be open to the public. Ibid.

(28) Parties to the proceedings include only parties on whose complaint the court has been held, or who have been complained against, or person on whose application the court has been held. Ibid. p. 18.

(29) The court has, in general, inherent power to control the right of audience before it, but, under suitable circumstances, it should permit an accused person to plead through his advocate. Ibid. p. 14.

(30) All evidence should be, whenever practicable, taken on oath. Ibid.

(31) A copy of the report or statement of the case upon which the investigation is ordered should be furnished before the commencement of the investigation to the master and any of the crew holding certificates. Unless this is done, the court cannot cancel or suspend such certificates. Ibid.

(32) Every person against whom a charge is made should be informed in writing of the precise nature of the charge, and of the time and place at which the court is to sit; he should also be allowed to be present when evidence is taken to cross-examine, and to bring any evidence and make a statement in defence. Ibid.

(33) The decision of the court on the points in question, or with regard to the cancelling or suspending of certificates, should be stated in open court at the conclusion of the case, or as soon afterwards as possible. Ibid.

(33a) In cases of gross misconduct or incompetency, it will be better not to suspend the certificate, but to cancel it, with a recommendation to the Board of Trade to return it at a stated time on being satisfied that the officer is again fit to be in possession of it. Ibid. p. 16.

† (34) When the proceedings are concluded, a report must be made to the Board of Trade, and as to the particulars to be contained in the report, Ibid. p. 15.

4. North-West Provinces (and see p. 706).

54. In Oudh there are four grades of civil courts:—(1) The court of the Munsif. (2) The court of the subordinate judge. (3) The court of the district judge. (4) The court of the judicial commissioner, the last being the highest, and to which there is a right of appeal. See the Oudh Civil Courts Act, 1879; Act No. 13 of 1879; and the second edition of the Oudh Code, published under the authority of the Government of India, and containing the regulations and unrepealed local acts in force in the provinces in March, 1886.

5. Bombay.

(a) Generally (and see p. 706).

55. The Bombay Act, No. 2 of 1864, and No. 4 of 1873, as to the survey of steamers, &c., are repealed by the Government of India Act, No. 6 of 1884.

55a. For further provisions as to the port of Bombay, see the Government of India Act, No. 12 of 1875.

56 (in lieu of No. 695, p. 707). For the rules as to coasting and other British vessels in the Presidency of Bombay, and their naming, marking and registering, Ibid. No. 19 of 1838.

57 (in lieu of No. 697 on p. 707). For provisions for the collection of land customs on certain frontiers of Bombay and Madras, see the Indian Tariff Act, No. 11 of 1882, ss. 5 and 8; and see also No. 29 of 1857.

58 (in lieu of No. 698 on p. 707). As to courts for proceedings against Sardars and others in the Dekhan, see Khândesh Reg. No. 29 of 1827; the Government of India Act, No. 19 of 1835; and Reg. No. 1 of 1834, in the Bombay Code.

(b) High Court (and see p. 707).

59 (in lieu of No. 702 on p. 707). Appeals lie to the High Court from decrees and orders of the district courts. See Reg. No. 2 of 1827, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 104, s. 9. Also from the consular court of Zanzibar, see p. 776, No. 1611.

60 (in lieu of No. 703 on p. 707). The High Court enforces the hearing of suits and complaints by the district courts, and directs and controls such courts. See Reg. No. 2 of 1827, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 104, s. 9.

61. Held, upon a construction of the Bombay charter (of December, 1823), that the rules and practice of the High Court of Admiralty in England governed the proceedings in the Supreme Court at Bombay in maritime causes. Loughman v. Bhulladina (The Hydroos), 7 Moore, P. C. C. 373.

(c) Inferior Courts (and see p. 707).

62 (in lieu of No. 711 on p. 707). As to the jurisdiction of civil courts in caste questions, see Reg. No. 2 of 1827, c. 208.

63 (in lieu of No. 712 on p. 707). This act, No. 16 of 1838, is now obsolete, and the code of civil procedure regulates proceedings in all the courts.

7. Madras.

(a) Generally (and see p. 708).

64 (in lieu of No. 730a on p. 708). For provisions as to port dues and fees at ports within the Presidency, see Indian Act, No. 12 of 1875.

66 (in lieu of No. 732 on p. 708). For provisions consolidating the several charges in the port of Madras into a port duty, Ibid.

67 (in lieu of No. 733 on p. 708). For provisions for the management of Indian boats and catamarans in the Madras roads, and for harbour regulations, Ibid., No. 4 of 1842, and Madras Act, No. 4 of 1869.

68. The Regulations No. 9 of 1803 in No. 735, p. 709, are repealed by Act, No. 12 of 1876.

69. For further provisions as to tolls, &c., and for the construction and improvement of lines of navigation within the Presidency, see the Madras Act, No. 4 of 1878.

70 (in lieu of No. 737 on p. 709). For provisions as to ships carrying native passengers, see Indian Acts, No. 8 of 1876, and No. 17 of 1883.

71 (in lieu of No. 738 on p. 709). For provisions as to Madras and other piers, see Madras Acts, No. 5 of 1873, and No. 7 of 1871.

(b) *High Court (and see p. 709).

72 (see No. 741, p. 709). The amended letters patent of the High Court of Madras are dated 28 Dec. 1865, and the edition of 1883 of the Rules and Orders of the High Court is now published by Higginbotham & Co., Madras.

(c) Inferior Court (and see p. 709).

73 (in lieu of No. 745 on p. 709). As to the District Courts of Madras, see Indian Act, No. 3 of 1873, ss. 3—30, and Nos. 674—680, p. 706.

74 (in lieu of No. 750 on p. 709). As to the ministerial officers of the district courts, Ibid. ss. 22—24, and No. 19 of 1877.

75 (in lieu of No. 752). The jurisdiction of a district munsif extends to all civil proceedings (not otherwise exempted from his cognizance) not exceeding 2,500 rupees. Ibid. s. 12.

76 (in lieu of No. 755 on p. 710). For a digest of the rules and orders regulating the practice and procedure of the courts subordinate to the High Court and on appeals therefrom, see Digest of Rules and Orders, Higginbotham & Co., anno 1883.

77 (in lieu of No. 756 on p. 710). For provisions for investing district munsifs in this Presidency with the jurisdiction of courts of small causes, and for powers of investing other courts with such jurisdiction, see Indian Act, No. 3 of 1873, s. 28.

78 (in lieu of No. 757*a*, on p. 710). For provisions for conferring civil jurisdiction in certain cases upon cantonment joint magistrates, see Indian Act, No. 3 of 1859, and Madras Act, No. 1 of 1866, s. 9.

79. The provisions in No. 758, on p. 710, are repealed by Madras Act, No. 2 of 1881.

14. The Straits Settlements.

1. Generally (and see p. 711).

80. As to the annual survey of steamships plying exclusively between ports of the colony, the appointment of surveyors, grant of certificates of survey, examination and certificates of officers and engineers, with various other general enactments relating to shipping matters, see Ord. No. 2 of 1882, amended by Ord. No. 2 of 1885, and Rules under the Ord. of 1882, approved by the Governor, 30th May, 1882.

81. As to lighthouse dues, see Ord. No. 8 of 1882.

82. As to pilots and pilotage, see Ord. No. 8 of 1879, amended by Ord. No. 5 of 1885.

83. As to passenger ships, see Ord. No. 6 of 1874, amended by Ord. No. 12 of 1885.

2. Supreme Court (and see p. 711).

84. There are to be three puisne judges instead of two, of the Supreme Court as a Court of Appeal. See Ord. No. 15 of 1885, amending No. 5 of 1873.

85. The arrangements for the dates and residences of the judges are to be made by a majority of the judges, with the concurrence of the governor, but so that the Chief Justice shall ordinarily reside at Singapore, and the senior puisne judge in Penang, and whenever there are more than two judges in the colony, two judges shall ordinarily be stationed in Penang. See Ord. No. 15 of 1885, amending No. 8 of 1875.

86. Appeals are to be heard by not less than three judges. Ibid.

87. For further provisions as to appeals from the Supreme Court to the full court, see Ord. No. 1 of 1883, and No. 11 of 1884.

3. Vice-Admiralty Court (and see p. 712).

87*a*. The commission empowering the Lords of the Admiralty to appoint a vice-admiral or judge and other officers for the Vice-Admiralty Court of the Straits Settlements, is dated 27th March, 1867. Vice Admiralty jurisdiction had been previously conferred by Letters Patent of 25th February, 1837, upon the Court of Judicature at Prince of Wales Island, Singapore and Malacca, now included in the Straits Settlements. The Hochung—The Lapwing, 5 Asp. 39, n.

94. For further provisions as to the port and harbour of Natal, see Ord. No. 3 of 1884.

95. For further provisions as to shipping casualties, see Ord. No. 4 of 1884.

96. As to customs and customs regulations, see the Law, No. 6 of 1855 and No. 11 of 1855.

97. As to the fishery laws, see Ord. No. 8 of 1868, No. 13 of 1880, and No. 21 of 1884.

97*a*. As to cases in the English courts relating to Natal, see Davis v. Shepstone, 11 App. Cas. 187.

97*b*. As to wills, see Salmon v. Duncombe and others, in the Privy Council, 25th June, 1886.

17. South African Provinces.

1. Generally (and see p. 715).

98. The limits of the district within which courts are established are defined by the South African Jurisdiction Order in Council, Jan. 30, 1885, Art. 1.

99. The jurisdiction conferred by the order includes all powers and jurisdiction possessed by her Majesty under the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts, 1843—1878, or under a treaty made with Mankovoane, chief of the Batalpins, on the 3rd of May, 1884, and with Montsioia, chief of the Baralongs, on the 22nd of May, 1884. Ibid. Art. 2.

100. The High Commissioner may establish such courts, and appoint and remove such judges, magistrates, and other officers as he may consider necessary. Ibid. Art. 3.

101. The civil and criminal law to be administered under the order is to be the civil and criminal law in force in the colony of the Cape of Good Hope at the date of the order. Ibid. Art. 6.

102. For the treaties or agreements between Great Britain and various African chiefs, for the encouragement of peace and good order, the settlement of the boundary between Natal and Zoolah, and between the Orange Free State and Basutoland, and between the Orange Free State and British territory, see 15 Hertslet's Collection of Treaties, pp. 847—870.

2. Basutoland.

103. The Act, No. 12 of 1871, mentioned in No. 843, p. 716, is repealed, and Basutoland disannexed from the Cape. See Act, No. 34 of 1883, Order in Council of Feb. 2, 1884, and Governor's Proclamation of March 21, 1884.

104. Basutoland is thenceforth to be governed by the High Commissioner, to whom authority is given to make laws for the district, and to appoint resident magistrates for its government. Ibid.

3. Bechuanaland.

105. Her Majesty has assumed the Protectorate over the territory known as Bechuanaland and the Kalahar, extending over the parts of South Africa, situate west of the boundary of the South African Republic, north of the colony of the Cape of Good Hope, east of 20th meridian of east longitude, and south of 22nd parallel of south latitude; and the governor and commander in chief of the colony of the Cape of Good Hope, for the time being, has been appointed governor thereof. See Proclamation of Sept. 30, 1885, of the Governor in the Cape of Good Hope Government Gazette of Oct. 7, 1885; and Government Notice, dated Oct. 1, 1885.

106. An administrator and chief magistrate has been appointed. Ibid.

107. For the laws of Bechuanaland, see the Proclamation of the Governor of the territory, dated Oct. 6, 1885, and published in the Cape of Good Hope Government Gazette of Oct. 7, 1885.

108. A court of the chief magistrate has been constituted. See laws in Cape of Good Hope Government Gazette of October 7th, 1885, s. 1.

109. All the powers of the Supreme Court, of the Appeal Court, and of the Court of Criminal Appeal of the Cape Colony shall, in British Bechuanaland, be exercised by the chief magistrate. Ibid. s. 28.

110. Courts of resident magistrates are constituted for each of the territories of Vrijburg, Taungs, and Mafeking, and the governor may establish such courts in any other district if necessary. Ibid. s. 2.

111. The pleadings and proceedings shall be in the English language, and in open court. Ibid. s. 6.

112. The trial of any person for an offence punishable by death shall be held before the chief magistrate, and any two of the resident magistrates. Ibid. s. 16.

113. An appeal lies from the decisions of resident magistrates to the court of the chief magistrate. Ibid. s. 22.

114. An appeal to her Majesty the Queen in Council lies from the court of the chief magistrate of Bechuanaland in all cases in which appeals are allowed from the Supreme Court of the Cape of Good Hope. See Governor's Proclamation of 4th March, 1886, published in Cape of Good Hope Government Gazette of March 8th, 1886.

115. The magistrate for Vrijburg has jurisdiction and authority within the district of Hellaland, and the magistrate of Taungs has jurisdiction within Batlassing territory. See Governor's Proclamation of 6th October, 1885, published in Cape of Good Hope Government Gazette of October 7th, 1885.

116. The resident magistrate for Mafeking has jurisdiction and authority within Baralong territory. Ibid.

18. Cape of Good Hope.

1. Generally (and see p. 715).

117. For provisions sanctioning the use of the Dutch language in legal proceedings, upon the application of any of the parties, see Act, No. 21 of 1884.

118. Act No. 1 of 1847, as to the removal of stranded vessels (mentioned in No. 834, p. 715), is repealed. See the Wrecks Removal Amendment Act, 1885, No. 46 of 1885.

119. See for extensive powers as to removal of wreck similar to those of the Imperial acts thereon, Ibid.

6. Basutoland (and see p. 716).

See Nos. 103, 104, supra.

7. Further Territories.

120. The districts of Tembuland, Emigrant Tembuland, Gealakeland, and Bomvanaland, are annexed to the Cape (as from the date of the governor's proclamation) under letters patent of her Majesty, dated Oct. 2, 1884, and Act, No. 3 of 1885. They are subject to the laws in force in the Cape, except as modified in the governor's proclamation. See Act, No. 3 of 1885, s. 1.

121. The court of the eastern districts has a concurrent jurisdiction with that of the Supreme Court over these territories. Ibid. s. 3.

122. An appeal lies in civil cases from the decisions of the resident magistrates of the territories to either the chief magistrate, under sect. 26 of the Governor's Proclamation of Jan. 26, 1882, or to the Supreme Court or the court of the eastern districts, at the option of the suitor. Ibid. s. 6.

123. The governor has been authorized to annex the territory of St. John's River. See Letters Patent of her Majesty, dated Oct. 10, 1881.

124. That district has accordingly been annexed to the Cape Colony. See Act, No. 35 of 1884.

125. The court of the eastern districts has a jurisdiction concurrent with that of the Supreme Court over the territory of St. John's River. Ibid. s. 2.

126. The district of Walfish Bay on the West Coast of Africa is annexed to the Cape. Ibid.

19. The Government of the Settlements of West Africa.

1. Generally (and see p. 716).

127. Consular courts are established. See the West Africa Order in Council of March 26, 1885.

128. The limits of the district within which courts are established defined. Ibid.

129. All powers and jurisdiction conferred by the order are vested in the consular courts. Ibid. Art. 3.

130. Every consul-general, consul or vice-consul, or person acting in any of such capacities by authority of a secretary of state, shall, when a district has been assigned to him, hold and form a consular court for such district. Ibid.

131. In the case of any crime committed on the high seas, or within the Admiralty jurisdiction, by any British subject on board a British ship, or on board a foreign ship to which he did not belong, a court acting under this order shall have jurisdiction. Ibid. Art. 6, s. 2.

132. The civil and criminal law to be administered under this order shall be the civil and criminal law in force in England at the date of the order, subject to the modifications of the order. Ibid. Art. 7.

133. A secretary of state may from time to time declare any of the laws or ordinances for the time being in force in the West Africa Settlements, or the Gold Coast Colony, in force within the limits with which the order deals. Ibid. Art. 7, s. 2.

134. The consular court may from time to time make rules and forms of procedure as to all civil or criminal matters within its jurisdiction, subject to the approval of a secretary of state, and, until they are made, may use those in use under the West Africa Order in Council of 1872, or such as are for the time being in force in the Supreme Court of Sierra Leone. Ibid. Art. 21.

135. For the registration, at the consular courts, of British subjects resident within their districts, Ibid. Art. 31.

136. For the code of laws and procedure enacted by the order, Ibid.

137. For provisions for the establishment of an equity court in the River Cameroons to carry out the byelaws for the better regulation of trading matters between the supercargoes and native traders, see Bye-laws of the River Cameroons, in 10 Hertslet's Collection of Treaties, p. 30.

138. See also the Treaty of Oct. 15, 1877, with Onitsha, on the River Niger, in 14 Hertslet, p. 50.

1a. Supreme Court.

139. The powers and duties of the chief justice of Sierra Leone are transferred to and vested in the chief justice of the West Africa Settlements, and the office of chief justice of Sierra Leone is abolished. See Ord. No. 1 of 1880.

140. The Supreme Court shall, from the 31st March, 1880, consist of, and be holden by, a judge, to be called the chief justice of the West Africa Settlements. See the Supreme Court Ord. 1881, No. 9 of 1881.

141. The chief justice shall usually reside at Freetown, and hold the sittings there of the Supreme Court. Ibid. s. 5.

142. The Supreme Court is a superior court of record, and possesses all the jurisdiction vested in H. M.'s High Court of Justice in England, as constituted by the Supreme Court of Judicature Acts, 1873 and 1875, save the jurisdiction possessed by the High Court of Admiralty. Ibid. s. 15.

143. The court also has the jurisdiction of the Lord High Chancellor of England over guardians, infants, idiots, lunatics, and their estates. Ibid. s. 17.

2. Sierra Leone.

(a) Generally (and see p. 717).

144. The general statute law of England in force on the 1st January, 1880, is in force in the Settlement, but not English statute law subsequently passed. Ibid. s. 19.

145. For provisions as to quarantine, see Ord. No. 18 of 1882, and No. 14 of 1883.

146. As to the Freetown harbour regulations and dues, see Ord. No. 1 of 1883, and No. 24 of 1883.

147. For provisions abolishing compulsory pilotage, see Ord. Nos. 7, 11 of 1884.

148. For provisions exempting pleasure-yachts from port dues, see Ord. No. 1 of 1885.

149. The Krim country is annexed to this settlement. See Proclamation of the Administrator-in-Chief of 7th August, 1883.

(b) Supreme Court (and see p. 717).

150 (in lieu of Nos. 853—856, on p. 717). The office of chief justice of Sierra Leone is abolished, and his powers and duties transferred to the office of chief justice of the West Africa Settlement. See No. 139, supra.

3. Gold Coast.

(a) Generally (and see p. 718).

151. As to the revision of the statute law of the Gold Coast and Lagos, see No. 1 of 1886.

152. Ord. No. 3 of 1878, mentioned in No. 863*b*, p. 718, as to the harbour of Lagos, and the pilots, pilotage, and seamen mentioned therein, is amended by Ord. No. 13 of 1882.

153. As to the importation and stowage of explosives, see Ord. No. 4 of 1884.

(b) Courts (and see p. 718).

154. The Ord. establishing the Supreme Court is Ord. No. 4 of 1876.

154*a*. Apparently no appointment has been made under a commission dated Sept. 6, 1880, empowering the Lords of the Admiralty to appoint a vice-admiral or judge for the Gold Coast Colony (settlements on the Gold Coast and Lagos united), instead of the separate vice-admiralty courts then existing. See The Hochung—The Lapwing, 5 Asp. p. 39, n.

4. Settlements on the Gambia.

(a) Generally (and see p. 718):

155. The Ord. of October 7, 1856, mentioned in No. 870, on p. 718, and semble, that of 18th April, 1860, as to quarantine, are repealed. See Ord. No. 4 of 1885, which consolidates and amends the law on the subject.

(b) Courts (and see p. 719).

156. For the procedure of the court of civil and criminal justice, see Ords. No. 4 of 1882, No. 4 of 1883, and No. 5 of 1884.

156*a*. There is a court of requests at Bathurst and M'Carthy's Island for the recovery of small debts. At Bathurst, it is held before the chief magistrate or two commissioners of the court at Bathurst, and at M'Carthy's Island before the manager. It is a court of record, and there is an appeal in any matter involving the value of £5 to the court of civil and criminal justice. See Ord. No. 6 of 1882.

20. St. Helena (and see p. 719).

157. As to the apprehension of deserters from foreign vessels, see Ords. No. 1 of 1873, No. 5 of 1882, and No. 3 of 1886.

2. Courts (and see p. 720).

161. The exchequer court has concurrent original jurisdiction with the courts of the several provinces in all suits of a civil nature at common law or equity, as therein mentioned, in which the Crown in the interest of the Dominion of Canada is plaintiff or petitioner. See Dominion Act, 38 Vict. c. 11, s. 59.

161a. The chief justices and judges of the supreme court are also the judges of the exchequer court. Ibid. s. 60.

161b. The process of the supreme court runs throughout the Dominion, and is tested in the name of the chief justice, or, in his absence, of the senior puisne judge of the court. Ibid. s. 75.

161c. See for powers to the judges to make rules and orders, Ibid. s. 79.

3. Quebec.

(a) Generally (and see p. 721).

162. Additional regulations for the pilotage district of Montreal, approved by the Governor-General in Council, July 29, 1882, are on pp. 69—73 of the Dominion Statutes of 1882.

162a. For provisions as to procedure by petition of right, see Provincial Act, 46 Vict. c. 27.

162b. As to cases in the English courts relating to Quebec, see as to the rights of the Crown, The Exchange Bank of Canada v. The Queen, 11 App. Cas. 157; as to the powers of the Quebec legislature, Attorney-General for Quebec v. Read, 10 App. Cas. 141; as to sheriff's sale of an immeuble, *Prévost v. 164. See further as to the equity jurisdiction of the supreme court, 45 Vict. c. 8, and 49 Vict. c. 9.

164a. See further as to the probate courts of New Brunswick, 45 Vict. c. 10.

165. For further provisions as to the county courts, see 45 Vict. c. 9, and 49 Vict. c. 18.

165a. For further provisions as to the town of Portland civil court (referred to in No. 919, p. 722), see 45 Vict. c. 16, and as to the Parish civil courts, see 45 Vict. c. 13.

5. Nova Scotia.

(b) Courts (and see p. 722).

166. For provisions for the constitution of a supreme court of judicature for Nova Scotia (analogous to that of England), see the Nova Scotia Judicature Act, 1884 (c. 25).

166a. The act came into operation in October, 1884. Ibid. s. 2.

166b. The supreme court so constituted includes the equity court or court of the judge in equity, and whether administering common law or equity. Ibid. s. 3.

167. The bench of the supreme court consists of a chief justice and six other judges, including the judge in equity. Ibid. s. 4, sub-s. 1.

167a. The judges of the supreme court are to hold no other offices under government, except that the judge of the vice-admiralty court and the judge ordinary for divorce and matrimonial causes may also hold those offices. Ibid. sub-s. 3.

167b. The supreme court has within the province the jurisdiction formerly exercised by the courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, in England; and also the same powers as are now exercised in England by the Supreme Court of Judicature, save in respect of Probate and Surrogate courts. Ibid. s. 9.

168. For provisions as to the sittings of the court, and the distribution of business therein, including circuits, and for making Rules of Court, see Nova Scotia Judicature Act, 1884 (c. 25), s. 9.

168a. The Rules of Court are on p. 148 of the Year's Statutes.

168b. The provision as to the Supreme Court in No. 922 on p. 722, are repealed by the Nova Scotia Judicature Act, 1884 (c. 25).

169. For further provisions as to the Probate Court of the province, see 46 Vict. c. 3.

169a. The rules and regulations of the port of Halifax, in Nova Scotia, approved by the Governor General in Council the 18th August, 1883, are on p. 99 of Dominion Statutes of 1883.

169b. As to cases in the English courts relating to Nova Scotia, see as to composition deeds, The Exchange Bank of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia v. Blethen, 10 App. Cas. 295; 54 L. J. P. D. A. 57; as to payment of money by mistake, The Colonial Bank v. The Exchange Bank of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, 11 App. Cas. 85.

6. Ontario.

(b) Courts (and see p. 722).

170. For provisions constituting a Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario (analogous to that of England), see the Ontario Judicature Act, 1881 (c. 5).

170a. The various courts in existence at the time of the act are amalgamated in the High Court of Justice and High Court of Appeal. Ibid.

170b. For provisions for making rules of court, Ibid. These rules of court are to be found on p. 51 of the Ontario Statutes for 1881. Ibid.

171. The Court of Appeal for Ontario, constituted under the Ontario Judicature Act, 1881 (c. 5), is composed of the chief justice of Ontario and four other judges (instead of three, as provided by the creating act), to be called justices of appeal. See the Administration of Justice Act, 1883 (c. 6), s. 2.

171a. It shall be the duty of one of the judges to assist from time to time in the transaction of the business of the High Court, and especially of the Chancery division thereof, when his duties as a justice of appeal permit. Ibid. s. 3.

171b. No new judge of the Court of Appeal is to be appointed until the number are less than four, it being intended that the permanent number of judges of the Court of Appeal shall not exceed four, including the chief justice. See the Administration of Justice Act, 1885 (c. 13), s. 2.

172. When the judges of the Court of Appeal shall be reduced to four, there shall be appointed (as provided by the British North America Act, 1867), a judge of the High Court of Justice, in addition to the number of judges of that court authorized to be appointed by the Ontario Judicature Act, 1881. The judge appointed in pursuance of this act shall be attached to the Chancery division. Ibid. s. 3.

172a. For further provisions as to the Court of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, see 49 Vict. c. 12.

172b. For further provisions as to county courts and local courts, Ibid. c. 13.

173. For further provisions as to the surrogate courts, Ibid. c. 14.

173a. For further provisions as to division courts, see 43 Vict. c. 8; 47 Vict. c. 9; 48 Vict. c. 14, amended by 49 Vict. c. 15.

173b. Except as by this act excepted, all persons shall have in the province of Ontario the like rights and remedies in all matters (including cases of contracts and tort, and proceedings in rem or in personam) arising out of or connected with navigation, shipping, trade, or commerce on any river, lake, canal, or inland water of which the whole or part is in the province of Ontario, as such persons would have in any existing British vice-admiralty court, if the process of such court extended to such province. See the Maritime Jurisdiction Act, 1882 (c. 34), s. 1.

174. There is hereby constituted in the province of Ontario a superior court of maritime jurisdiction under the name of the "Maritime Court of Ontario," which shall be a court of record, which shall, save as by this act excepted, have as to the matters aforesaid all such jurisdiction as belongs in similar matters within the reach of its process to any existing British vice-admiralty court. Ibid. s. 2, sub-s. 1.

174a. In any matter referred to in the first section, but arising within reach of the process of the vice-admiralty court at Quebec, the court shall have the same jurisdiction as any existing British vice-admiralty court has under like circumstances in any matter arising beyond the reach of its process. Ibid. sub-s. 2.

174b. The jurisdiction of the court in respect of claims touching the ownership, possession, employment, or earnings of ships, shall extend to the case of a ship registered in a port in the province of Quebec, but navigating the waters aforesaid. Ibid. sub-s. 3.

175. No right or remedy in rem given by this act shall be enforced as against any subsequent bonâ fide purchaser or mortgagee of a ship unless the proceedings for the enforcement thereof are begun within ninety days from the time when the same accrued. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

175a. The court shall not have jurisdiction save as aforesaid in any matter to which the process of any existing British vice-admiralty court extends, nor in any prize case, nor in any criminal matter, or in any case of breach of the regulations and instructions relating to her Majesty's navy, or arising out of droits of admiralty, or out of any seizure for breach of the revenue, customs, trade, or navigation laws, or out of any violation of the Foreign Enlistment Act, or of the laws relating to the abolition of the slave trade, or to the capture and destruction of pirates and piratical vessels. Ibid. s. 3.

175b. The principal seat of the court shall be at Toronto, but sittings may be held at any city, town, or place within the province of Ontario. Ibid. s. 4.

176. The judge of the court may make rules of court for regulating the practice and the appointment of assessors. Ibid. ss. 6—10.

176a. The governor in council may from time to time appoint one or more judges of any county court in Ontario surrogate judge or judges. Ibid. s. 11.

176b. An appeal lies from all final orders or decrees of the court to the supreme court of Canada. Ibid. s. 19.

7. Manitoba.

(b) Courts (and see p. 722).

177. The various acts relating to the constitution and procedure of the Court of Queen's Bench are amended and consolidated. See the Court of Queen's Bench Act, 1885 (c. 15).

177a. The court is to sit at Winnipeg. Ibid. s. 11.

178. The court consists of a chief justice and three puisne judges. Ibid. s. 13.

178a. The law and procedure of the Court of Queen's Bench is consolidated and codified. See the Administration of Justice Act, 1885 (c. 17).

179. Former acts in regard to the constitution and procedure of the Court of Queen's Bench and the law and procedures thereof, are superseded by the Court of Queen's Bench Act, 1885 (c. 15), and the Administration of Justice Act, 1885 (c. 17).

179a. For further provisions as to county courts, see 46 & 47 Vict. c. 21, and 48 Vict. c. 22.

264. This colony is divided into nine provincial districts, viz., in the north island, Auckland, Hawke's Bay, Taranaki, and Wellington; and in the south island, Nelson, Marlborough, Canterbury, Otago, and Westland. See Act, No. 21 of 1875, ss. 34, 35.

265. The provisions of the Imperial Merchant Shipping Acts of 1854 and 1862, which are not by those acts themselves made applicable to all her Majesty's dominions, viz., the second part of the Act of 1854, relating to British ships, their ownership, measurements, and registry, and the ninth part of the same act, and sects. 54 and 56 of the Act of 1862, relating to the liability of shipowners, are, with the exceptions noted below, mutatis mutandis, reproduced in the colony. See the Shipping and Seamen's Act of 1877, No. 54, and the Mercantile Law Act of 1880, No. 12, ss. 29—40.

265a. Exceptions—As to the particular procedure in the matter of inquiries into wrecks and casualties, and the cancelling or suspending of certificates (Part VIII. of Imperial Act of 1854), see the above Shipping and Seamen's Act of 1877, No. 54, ss. 119—122, and ss. 237—248.

* (39) Kindly contributed by J. Channon Lee Bassett, Esq., of Auckland, New Zealand, barrister-at-law.

† (39a) The laws of England as they existed on the 14th January, 1840, are in force in New Zealand, so far as they are applicable to the colony, and subject to subsequent enactments by the colonial legislature, see Act 2 of 1858. The main departures by subsequent legislation are:—1. Real estate in cases of intestacy devolves in the same way as personal property. 2. Mortgage of land does not convey the legal title, but this principle does not apply to other mortgages. Foreclosure does not exist. 3. Vendor has no lien for unpaid purchase-money. 4. Deposit of title deeds, with or without a memorandum, does not create an equitable mortgage. 5. A voluntary conveyance is not defeasible by the conveyor. 6. Conveyance for valuable consideration without qualification imports a warranty of title. 7. Marriage with deceased wife's sister is allowed. 8. Children may be adopted so as to have the rights of natural-born children. 9. Power of attorney continues in force after death of donor till the donee has actual notice of such death. 10. Ship is liable for cost of maintenance of any infirm, incapable, or imbecile emigrant, and master must give bond. 11. All lands may be brought under the Land Transfer Act after investigation, and title thereto and subsequent dealings therewith (duly registered) are absolutely indefeasible and guaranteed by the government. 12. All conveyances must be registered, and priority of title is given according to priority of registration.

(40) The civil courts are the appeal court, the supreme court, the district courts, and the resident magistrate's courts.

3a. District Courts.*

289. The civil jurisdiction of the district courts extends to all suits between £20 and £100, and may be extended by the governor to £200, except—(1) when title to real property is in question; (2) when validity of a devise is in question; (3) cases wherein a limitation under a bill or settlement is disputed; (4) cases of malicious prosecution; (5) libel; (6) slander; (7) crim. con.; (8) seduction; (9) breach of promise. And by consent of both parties these courts have jurisdiction in the excepted cases. See No. 4 of 1865; No. 5 of 1866; No. 12 of 1867; No. 14 of 1879.

290. District courts, where no Supreme Court Judge resides within the district, have also jurisdiction as to probate and administration. See Act No. 33 of 1880, s. 4.

4. Courts of Bankruptcy.

291. For further provisions as to the Bankruptcy Court, see the Bankruptcy Act, 1883; Amendment Act, No. 29 of 1884; and No. 22 of 1885.

292. District courts within the limits of their jurisdiction are local courts of bankruptcy, unless specially excluded by the governor in council. See Act No. 10 of 1883, s. 6.

4a. Magistrates' Courts.†

293. The civil jurisdiction of the resident magistrates' courts is limited to suits of £20, unless where the same is extended to £50 or £100 by the governor, and is subject to the same exceptions as that of the district courts. See No. 13 of 1867; No. 24 of 1870; No. 27 of 1872; and No. 28 of 1879.

294. For provisions as to magistrates, see the Justices of the Peace Act, 1882, amended by No. 44 of 1885.

311. For provisions that in the administration of justice by the company to the people of Borneo or any of the inhabitants thereof, careful regard shall always be had to the customs and laws of the class, tribe, or nation to which the parties respectively belong, especially with respect to the holding possession, transfer and disposition of lands and goods, and testate and intestate succession thereto, and marriage, divorce, legitimacy and other rights of property and personal rights, Ibid. Art. 9.

312. In case provision is made by Order in Council for the exercise of her Majesty's extra-territorial jurisdiction and authority in Borneo, and the appointment of the company's officers to discharge judicial or other functions, the expenses shall be borne by the company. Ibid. Art. 11.

313. The company shall freely afford all facilities requisite for her Majesty's ships in the harbours of the company. Ibid. Art. 12.

3. Corea (and see p. 773).

315. As to the Corean ports to be opened to British commerce, the powers to British subjects to acquire land in Corea, to import and export goods, the duties thereon, tonnage dues, &c., see the Treaty of Friendship and Commerce between Great Britain and Corea of Nov. 26, 1883, Arts. 1, 4 and 5, in 15 Hertslet, 880.

316. For the regulations under which British trade is to be conducted in Corea, Ibid. Arts. 5, 6 and 7.

317. Jurisdiction over the persons and property of British subjects in Corea is vested exclusively in the duly authorized British judicial authorities. Ibid. Art. 3, sub-s. 1.

Part IV.—FOREIGN COURTS.

4. Brazil.*

1. Generally (and see p. 781).

328. The written maritime law of Brazil is very similar to that of Portugal, and is contained in Part II. of the Commercial Code, published in 1850, and a variety of laws and regulations subsequent thereto; commercial usage also forms part of the law. Decree, No. 737 of 1850, Art. 2.

329. Merchant ships are not allowed to leave port after sunset or before sunrise, Decree, No. 447 of 1846, Art. 20. The above decree is relaxed so far as to allow vessels to leave Maranham before sunrise, Order, No. 204 of 1852. And see as to vessels belonging to regular lines of Transatlantic steamers, Decree, No. 4955 of 1872, Art. 8.

2. Courts.

330. The jurisdiction of the courts in commercial and maritime matters, and the procedure in such cases, are regulated by the Commercial Code, and Decree, Nos. 737 and 738 of November 25, 1850, and No. 1597 of 1855.

331. All rights and obligations which are subject to the enactments of the Commercial Code are within the jurisdiction of the judge of the commercial court if one of the parties is a trader, that is, a person legally engaged in commercial affairs. Art. 18, C. C. P., Decree, No. 737 of 1850, Art. 10.

332. The courts take cognizance of foreign law so far as concerns the legal capacity of a foreigner to enter into a contract, Decree, No. 737 of 1850, Art. 3.

333. All commercial actions for less than 100 mil reis (say £10), and all actions for seamen's wages and necessities, may be determined summarily. Ibid. Art. 236.

334. Ships may be arrested and detained for privileged debts, except in exceptional cases. Art. 479, C. C.; Ibid. Art. 338.

335. There is an appeal in cases over 200 mil reis (say £20), and a further appeal to the Supreme Court in cases over 5,000 mil reis. Decree, No. 737 of 1850, Art. 646, 665; No. 1597 of 1855, Art. 82.

336. The composition of the tribunals of commerce is settled by Decree, No. 1597 of 1855.

3. Arrest and Detention of Ships.

337. A ship cannot be arrested or detained for the unproved debt of the owner when she has got as much as a quarter of her cargo on board. Art. 481, C. C.

338. Foreign vessels cannot be arrested or detained in a Brazilian port for debts contracted outside Brazilian territory, unless secured by a bottomry bond or bill of exchange, payable within the empire. Arts. 482, 651, C. C.

4. Owners of Ships.

339. Foreigners cannot own ships under the Brazilian flag. If the whole, or a share in a Brazilian ship is found to belong to a foreigner, or even that a foreigner has an interest in it, it is forfeited and sold, half the proceeds of sale going to the informer, and the other half to the treasury of the tribunal of commerce. Art. 457, C. C.

340. The tribunal of commerce is not competent to order this forfeiture. Order in Council, Oct. 15, 1873.

341. Every part owner or owner is liable in solido for the debts which the captain has contracted for repairing, refitting or provisioning the ship, and for damages caused to third parties by his negligence, but can free himself from further liability by abandoning the ship and freight, except in the case when the owner or part owner is also master. Art. 494, C. C.

5. Rights of Owners inter se.

342. The majority in value decide as to the employment of the ship, but if the minority are of opinion that she should be repaired, they can have an official survey, and if the surveyors are of opinion that the repairs are needed, they are carried out at the common expense of all the owners. Art. 484, C. C.

6. Managing Owner or Ship's Husband.

343. It is necessary that an owner, or one or more of the part owners (or if all concerned agree in the appointment of a person who is not an owner), who has the necessary qualification for persons engaged in commerce, as laid down by law, should be appointed managing owner, or ship's husband. Arts. 484, 491, 492, C. C.

344. The passing of the managing owner's accounts by the majority in value of the part owners, does not preclude the minority from suing him on them, an exception to the general rule laid down in Arts. 488, 495, C. C.

7. Masters.

345. A master who induces any person to leave another ship to join his own is liable to a fine of 100 mil reis = £11 5s. at full exchange—now, however, only about £7 10s. for each person,—and also to the costs of the other vessel's demurrage, if she is in consequence of loss of hands unable to get away. Art. 500, C. C.

346. A master must, before leaving port, examine the cables, anchors, sails and rigging, in the presence of the mate and boatswain, and draw up a declaration of their condition which is signed by the master, mate and boatswain. Art. 506, C. C.

347. A master can only bottomry ship and cargo, or sell cargo for necessary repairs, and, either in the absence of the owners or their agents or with their consent, and under the authority of the court. Art. 515, C. C.

8. Security for Costs.

348. A foreign plaintiff, even if he has a commercial domicile (i. e., place of business) in Brazil, must give security for costs if, in fact, he is resident beyond the limits of the empire. Rozo, Lemos & Co. v. Charles Roulina, J. D. I. P. 1880, p. 515. Court of Appeal, Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 21, 1878.

9. Carriage of Goods.

349. If a master dies or is discharged after signing bills of lading and before sailing, the shippers can require the bills to be re-signed by his successor, who may compare them with the cargo; if he signs without comparing them he is liable for losses which the shippers sustain. The expense of comparing them is borne by the shipowner if the master dies or is wrongfully discharged, by the master if his discharge was his own doing. Art. 581, C. C.

350. A contract of affreightment of a foreign ship, to be performed in Brazil, must be construed and adjudicated upon in accordance with this code, whether the freight is payable within the realm or elsewhere. Art. 628, C. C., and Decree No. 737 of 1850, Art. 6.

10. Mortgage.

351. The Brazilian law recognizes mortgages (hypothecas) of ships as distinct from contracts of bottomry or respondentia (contrato de emprestimo a risco or cambio maritimo). A mortgage is invalid unless witnessed by a notary (per cocriptura publica), and entered at the Registry of the Tribunal of Commerce and noted on the shipping register. Arts. 468, 472, 474, 633, 873, 876, 879, C. C. Decree No. 738 of 1850, Art. 58, and Memo. No. 96 of 1866.

11. Salvage.

352. Masters and other members of the crew are entitled to salvage reward in addition to their wages. Art. 737, C. C.

353. Salvage reward is settled by arbitrators, having regard to the danger and nature of the service, the promptitude with which it was rendered, and the care taken of the goods salvaged. Art. 736, C. C.

353a. Public servants are entitled to extra remuneration out of the proceeds for salvage services. Decree No. 5865 of 1875.

12. Wages.

354. No member of the crew can bring an action for his wages before the end of the voyage, except in case of ill-treatment, when he can demand the rescinding of the contract. Art. 557, C. C.

355. No wages are due if the vessel is captured or lost in the course of the voyage. Art. 558, C. C.

356. Nor in such case can advances be reclaimed by the owner. Ibid.

357. The crews, however, have a claim for their entire wages if the vessel is recovered after capture, and in preference to other claims against wreck saved. Art. 559, C. C.

358. No defence to an action for seamen's wages when the voyage is completed is allowed, except the defendant pays the amount of the claim into court. Art. 564, C. C.

4a. The Congo Free State.

1. Generally.

359. Complete freedom of trade is accorded to all nations in all the regions forming the basin of the Congo and its outlet, in the littoral of the Atlantic Ocean, from Sette Canuna to the mouth of the Lage, and in the zone of territory stretching eastwards from the Congo basin to the Indian Ocean, as respectively therein defined. See the General Act of the West African Conference signed at Berlin, February 26, 1885, by the representatives of Germany, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Spain, the United States, France, Great Britain, Italy, Holland, Portugal, Russia, Sweden, Norway, and Turkey, c. I. Art. 1.

360. For provisions for the protection of natives, missionaries, and travellers, and for the free and public exercise of all forms of Divine worship, Ibid. Art. 6.

361. The convention of the universal postal union, as revised at Paris, June 1, 1878, is applied to the conventional basis of the Congo. Ibid. Art. 7.

362. For provisions for prohibiting slavery and the slave trade throughout the conventional basis of the Congo, Ibid. c. II. Art. 9.

363. As to the neutrality of the territories comprised in the conventional basis of the Congo, Ibid. Arts. 10, 11, and 12.

2. International Commission.

364. For the institution of an international commission charged with the execution of the provisions of the General Act, Ibid. c. IV. Art. 17.

365. As to the powers of the International Commission generally, and for construction of works, fixing pilotage tariff, navigation dues, and superintending quarantine establishments, Ibid. c. IV. Arts. 18—25.

3. Act of Navigation for the Congo and its Affluents.

366. As to the act of navigation of the Congo and its affluents, and its being open to merchant ships of all nations equally, and the establishment of harbour dues and pilotage dues, Ibid. c. IV. Arts. 13—16.

4. Act of Navigation for the Niger and its Affluents.

367. As to the act of navigation for the Niger, and its being open to merchant ships of all nations equally, Ibid. c. V.

8. France.

1. Generally (and see p. 782).

368. The French courts are not generally held to be competent, even in commercial matters, except by the consent of both parties, in suits between two non-domiciled foreigners, except where such suits may be brought under Art. 420 of the Code of Procedure which gives jurisdiction to the court of the locality where the promise was made and has been executed, and to that of the locality where the contract was to be carried out. D. A. vo. Droit Civil, No. 339 (an article which has been held to apply to collision in the French waters between two foreign vessels). See Caumont, vo. Competence, Nos. 51 and 74 to Average Adjustments; D. A. and ibid. No. 345, and to actions for wages, where all the mariners are foreigners and not of the same country. See, upon the question, D. A. Nos. 339 et seq., and Caumont, No. 71 et seq., and the authorities therein.

369. The authorities are not agreed as to whether, in cases where the French judges are not authorized to decide upon the action, they are entitled to authorize provisional measures of protection, such as an attachment. See, for the authorities pro and con, D. A. ibid. Nos. 331 and 332, and Caumont, vo. Competence.

370. Questions of damage arising out of loss of life and personal injury, and those from maritime causes in particular, are not provided for by any special law. They come under the general rules as to damage caused by fault or negligence, which are laid down by the Articles 1382 to 1386 inclusive of the Code Civil.

371. Where they are not attributed expressly or by implication to another jurisdiction, they are to be adjudicated upon by the civil tribunals of the First Instance, and the Courts of Appeal. D. A. vo. Responsabilité, No. 771. Their jurisdiction is the rule. See D. A. vo. Competence Civile, &c., Nos. 5 and 215, and Responsabilité, Nos. 771 and 796.

372. Held, that for personal injuries affecting mariners employed in commercial navigation, where they have occurred in the course of their duties, such a jurisdiction exists by virtue of the principle laid down by the Code of Commerce with respect to actions brought against the shipowner or ship's husband, where the injury has been caused by imprudent orders given by the officers to the mariners. Their actions in such a case arising out of a contract which the law considers as commercial. Rouen, August 14, 1872; J. H. 1873:2:13; Cassation, July 9, 1873; J. H. 1874:2:103. But held, contra, by the judgment of the civil tribunal of Havre, of February 15, 1872; J. H. 1872:2:89.

373. The Tribunal of Commerce shall take cognizance, 1st, of suits concerning engagements and transactions between merchants, tradesmen and bankers; 2nd, of suits between partners concerning commercial partnerships; 3rd, of suits concerning commercial dealings between all persons. C. C. Art. 631.

374. Among the dealings which are to be held as commercial are, All contracts for the building, and all purchases, sales and resales of vessels for internal or external navigation; all maritime adventure; all purchases or sales of spars, apparel and victuals; all freightings or charterings, lendings or borrowings on bottomry or respondentia; all insurances or other contracts concerning maritime trade; all agreements and contracts for the hire and salaries of seamen; all engagements of seamen for the service of commercial vessels. C. C. Art. 633.

375. Appeals from Tribunals of Commerce shall be carried before the Courts (of Appeal) within the jurisdiction of which they are situate. C. C. Art. 644.

376. In maritime suits in which the parties are not domiciled in France, and in those concerning apparel, provisions, equipments, and caulking of vessels, ready to sail, and other urgent and provisional matters, a citation from day to day and from hour to hour may be given without the authorization of the president, and judgment by default may be given immediately. Code of Civil Procedure under title of "The Procedure before the Tribunals of Commerce."

377. Concerning the attachment or provisional seizure of a vessel without judgment, under a mere order of the president of the tribunal of commerce which Article 417 of the Code of Procedure allows on "movable effects" in cases which require celerity, the law has said nothing. Some authors (see Dutruc, vo. Navire, No. 196), from the omission of vessels in that article, and in that of provisional seizure in the article immediately following, which specially concerns them, are of opinion that that measure is not applicable to vessels. The majority of authorities, however, decide the contrary. Dutruc, vo. Navire, No. 196; Caumont, vo. Navire, No. 57.

378. The seizure of a vessel on the point of sailing is interdicted, except for debts contracted for the voyage it is undertaking, and then not if the debt is bailed. The vessel is to be considered as on the point of sailing if the master is provided with his papers for the voyage. C. C. Art. 215; Caumont, vo. Navire, No. 67.

379. Held, that all creditors, not privileged as well as privileged, may prevent the departure of the vessel by lodging an opposition with the captain of the port against the delivery of its "billet de sortie" (Rennes, February 17, 1813, D. A. No. 99), provided such opposition be notified to the captain of the port before the master of the vessel has his papers for the voyage. Rebecquis' case, Aix, August 22, 1819; Ibid.

379a. Held, that though in cases which require expedition the provisional seizure of the vessel and cargo may take place under an order of the President of the Tribunal of Commerce, the sale cannot be made without a judgment of the Tribunal. Rennes, May 22, 1867, J. H. 1868:2:52.

380. Whether the prohibition laid by Article 215, C. C., against seizing the vessel when on the point of sailing applies to foreign vessels is a moot question. For the affirmative, see Caumont, vo. Navire, No. 68; contra, D. A. No. 112. For other authorities, pro and con, see Caumont, Ibid.

380a. For the agreements of January and February, 1878, between Great Britain and France respecting the independence of the New Hebrides group, see 15 Hertslet, 915.

3. Tunis (and see p. 784).

381. The Decree of 5 May, 1883, of the Bey of Tunis, respecting French jurisdiction in Tunis, is set forth in 15 Hertslet, 1062; and the French law of 27 March, 1883, for the organization of French jurisdiction there, is set forth in 15 Hertslet, 1059.

11. Holland * (and see p. 787).

382. The superior courts in Holland are the Court of Justice and the National Court. These colleges are judges either in the first instance or on appeal. See Vanderlinden's Manual of the Law Practice and Mercantile Law of Holland, translated by Juta, anno 1884, p. 249.

383. An appeal lies to the National Court from all judgments in cases heard in the first instance in the provincial or departmental courts. Ibid.

384. As to the original jurisdiction of such court, Ibid.

385. The court of justice of Holland is chiefly a court of appeal. Ibid. p. 251.

386. As to its original jurisdiction, Ibid. pp. 251—253.

387. The general rule in the institution of all suits is that the plaintiff must follow the court of the defendant, and consequently no one can be sued in the first instance except before his ordinary daily and competent judge. The College of Schepenen must generally be regarded as such court in the towns and villages. Ibid.

388. At the head of this college there is generally a sheriff (schoot), whose duty consists principally in superintending the due administration of justice, convoking the College of Schepenen, holding the court, &c. Ibid.

389. As the College of Schepenen, especially in the large towns, was inadequate to settle all the cases which came before it, and as many of the small cases, often of importance, were delayed, inferior courts were established at various places. Thus, at Haarlem there is an inferior court of justice; at Enkhuizen a court for small cases; at Rotterdam, a college of arbitrators, with jurisdiction up to 300 guilders (£25); at Leyden, a college of arbitrators, before which all the cases, without exception, must first be brought, in order to attempt to bring about an amicable settlement; at Dordrecht there is a college of water jurisdiction; at Amsterdam there are various similar colleges, such as commissioners of matrimonial causes, commissioners of the insolvent estates, chambers, commissioners of the insurance and maritime causes, &c. Ibid.

390. The authority of the Schepenen, however, is limited to cases which affect rights of private persons. They are incompetent to interfere with municipal matters. Ibid.

391. All suits connected with maritime matters and averages must be brought before the board of maritime law or commissioners of maritime causes at Dordrecht, Amsterdam, or Rotterdam. Ibid. 259.

19. Turkey.

3. Egypt.

(a) Generally (and see p. 797).

392. The existence of the mixed courts is prolonged to Feb. 1, 1889. See the Decree of the Khedive of January 19, 1884, in 15 Hertslet, 166.

392a. As to the international commission at Alexandria for dealing with the claims arising out of the insurrections in Egypt in June, 1882, see Decrees of the Khedive of 13 January and 4 February, 1883, in 15 Hertslet, 586.

- (b) Liability (and see p. 870).

1. Where a mutual ship insurance company—the practice of which was that after the expiration of the first time policy no new policy was issued, but instead thereof stamped receipts were given for calls—duly passed resolutions, with its members' assent, transferring its business and effects to a new company, on the terms of the new company paying all the debts and liabilities of the old, and one of the members of the old company continued to keep his vessels on the books of the new company, but in accordance with the practice of the old company he received no policy of insurance, such member is liable to the new company for calls as moneys paid at his request, notwithstanding the fact that no stamped policies of insurance had been given him. Barrow-in-Furness Mutual Ship Insurance Company v. Ashburner, 5 Asp. 443, 527.

2. Where goods are consigned to persons who, knowing that the consignor is acting for an undisclosed principal, insured the goods whilst on their voyage in their own names for the benefit of all parties interested, and on the ship carrying the goods being totally lost receive the money due on the policy, the undisclosed principal is entitled to recover this money (less expenses in respect of insurance) against the consignees, who cannot set it off against the balance of their general account with the consignor. Mildred, Goyeneche & Co. v. Maspons y Hermano (H. L.), 8 App. Cas. 874; 5 Asp. 182; 49 L. T. N.S. 685; 53 L. J. Q. B. 33; affirming (C. A.), 9 Q. B. D. 530; 47 L. T. N.S. 318; 51 L. J. Q. B. 604.

Part VII.—SUBJECTS OF INSURANCE.

3. Description of Subject-matter insured.

3. Freight.(a) Generally (and see p. 888).

3. A charter-party provided for the payment of freight at a specified rate, and contained the clause "if any portion of the cargo be delivered sea-damaged, the freight on such sea-damaged portion to be two-thirds of the above rate." Plaintiffs, the charterers, effected an insurance "to cover only the one-third loss of freight in consequence of sea-damage as per charter-party." A portion of the cargo became sea-damaged, and one-third of the freight payable in respect of that portion was deducted by plaintiffs from the whole freight. Held (affirming Denman, J.), that the policy sufficiently described the subject-matter insured, which was the one-third loss in consequence of sea-damage and not the whole freight, and that plaintiffs were entitled to recover the loss of freight. Griffiths v. Bramley-Moore, 4 Asp. 66; 4 Q. B. D. 70.

Part VIII.—INSURABLE INTEREST.

2. Of Mortgagee and Mortgagee (and see p. 895).

4. When mortgagees of a ship by agreement with their mortgagors effect a policy on ship at the mortgagor's expense, and hold it as part security, they have an insurable interest entitling them to sue thereon, even if the mortgage has been paid off, where they have been compelled, by reason of their own default, to pay the value of the ship to the mortgagors who have ceded to them their rights under the policy on receipt of such payment. Levy v. Merchants' Marine Ins. Co., 5 Asp. 407; 52 L. T. N.S. 263.

3. In Cargo.

5. Where goods are shipped f. o. b., even although mixed with other goods of the same sort, and not specifically appropriated to the buyer, if it appear that it was the intention of the parties in the ordinary course of business that the goods should be at the risk of the buyer, the buyer has an insurable interest in them. Inglis v. Stock (H. L.), 10 App. Cas. 263; 5 Asp. 422; 52 L. T. N.S. 821; affirming (C. A.) 10 Q. B. D. 504; 5 Asp. 295; 51 L. T. N.S. 449; and reversing (Q. B.) See Nos. 430, 431, p. 897.

5a. D. & Co., sugar merchants of London, agreed, in writing, to sell to the plaintiff, a merchant at Bristol, 200 tons of sugar of a certain quality, as regards saccharine matter, at the price of 21s. 9d. per cwt. f. o. b. Hamburg. The sugar was to be shipped from Hamburg to Bristol, and payment was to be made by cash in London in exchange for bills of lading. D. & Co.'s agents at H., in performance of this contract, and also of another Bristol contract for another 200 tons of sugar shipped thence per steamer C. of D., 400 tons of sugar, and consigned the same to Bristol. D. & Co.'s usual course of business was (as plaintiffs knew) not to apportion particular bags of sugar to particular buyers at the time of shipment, but to apportion the various bags and bills of lading, representing them between their various buyers at a particular port after the sugar had been shipped, and after D. & Co. had received the bills of lading. This was done in order that D. & Co. might, with comparative accuracy, make up to each buyer the amount of saccharine matter contracted for by him. The C. of D. was lost on the voyage from H. to B. before any appropriation of sugar had been made by D. & Co., but D. & Co. afterwards appropriated 200 tons to the plaintiff, and sent him an invoice, and the plaintiff thereupon paid for the sugar so appropriated by him. The plaintiff had a floating policy on goods, and on hearing of the loss declared thereunder in respect of these 200 tons of sugar in the C. of D. Held, in an action on such policy, that the plaintiff had an insurable interest in such sugar, because, although the property had not passed to him, the words f. o. b. in the contract made between the parties, having regard to their knowledge of the course of business, showed it to be their intention that the 200 tons bought by the plaintiff should be at his risk, and that he should be liable to pay for it whether it arrived or not. Stock v. Inglis, L. R. 12 Q. B. D. 564; 5 Asp. 295; 51 L. T. N.S. 449; affirmed (Inglis v. Stock), L. R. 10 App. Cas. 263; 5 Asp. 422; 52 L. T. N.S. 821; and reversing Q. B. See Nos. 430, 431, p. 897.

Part XI.—RE-INSURANCE.

6. Plaintiffs, a marine insurance company, entered into an agreement with the defendants, a fire insurance company, that defendants should re-insure them against loss by fire only by all coal-laden ships which should be insured by plaintiffs between certain ports, so long as the agreement remained in force; and successive policies to cover risks insured against by ships as might be declared were subscribed and issued by defendants to plaintiffs. It was admitted that in marine insurances in open policies on ships to be declared, there was a usage of merchants and underwriters that such policies attached to the goods as soon as, and in the order in which, they were shipped, in which order the assured were bound to declare them; and in case of mistake, the assured should be bound to rectify the declaration which was sometimes done after loss. Held, that the admitted usage with regard to marine insurance applied, though there-insurance was against fire only, it being a contract of fire insurance in respect of a marine risk. Maritime Marine Insurance Co. v. Fire Re-insurance Corporation, 4 Asp. 71; 4 C. P. D. 166.

See also Nos. 15—17, p. 2454.

Part XII.—VOYAGE POLICIES.

3. Duration of Risk.

1. On Cargo.

(f) In Lighters.

7. A policy of insurance on goods which includes "all risk of craft until the goods are discharged and safely landed," does not cover the risk on the goods while waiting on lighters at the port of delivery for transhipment into an export vessel. Houlder Bros. & Co. v. Merchants' Marine Insurance Co., 17 Q. B. D. 354.

Part XIII.—TIME POLICIES.

3. On Freight (and see p. 945).

8. A time policy on chartered freight for six calendar months provided for payment of loss of hire, which may arise in clause 6 of charter-party for accidents occurring between the 15th April and the 15th October. The charter, after fixing the vessel for six months certain, with the option to the charterers of continuing the charter for a further period, provided by clause 6, "that, in the event of loss of time by deficiency of men, collision, break down of engines, and the vessel becomes incapable of proceeding on her voyage, payment of hire should cease until the vessel is able to resume her voyage (the act of God, the Queen's enemies, &c., excepted). During the currency of the policy the vessel sustained injury, but was able to complete her voyage; owing, however, to the injury sustained the charterers, who had exercised their option of extending the charter, refused to pay hire for the vessel during this extended time until she was fit to resume her employment. In an action by the shipowner under the policy to recover the loss of freight for the extended time, held, that, although the accident occasioning the loss had occurred during the currency of the policy, the loss of freight had occurred subsequent to that time, and such loss was not covered by the policy. Hough v. Head, 5 Asp. 447, 505; 52 L. T. N.S. 861; 54 L. J. Q. B. 294.

Part XV.—PREMIUM.

3. Recovery.

3. By Charterers.

9. Premiums paid for the insurance of cargo are recoverable by the charterers from the shipowners for breach of the contract of carriage in not delivering the goods, the value of the cargo at the port of destination, including all the reasonable mercantile expenses of taking it there, among which are premiums of insurance. The Great Indian Peninsular Railway Co. v. Turnbull, 5 Asp. 465; 53 L. T. N.S. 325.

Part XVII.—CONCEALMENT.

1. Generally (and see p. 961).

10. All facts which a prudent and experienced underwriter would take into consideration in estimating the premium are material, and ought to be disclosed. Tate v. Hyslop, 53 L. T. N.S. 581; 5 Asp. 487; 15 Q. B. D. 368.

10a. The London lightermen have two contracts as to the carriage of goods, the one as common carriers, the other on the terms that they will not be liable for loss unless caused by negligence, and the rates of premium on goods carried under the latter contract being greater than that under the former. Held, that the fact of the goods being carried under the latter contract is material, and ought to be disclosed to the underwriters, and its concealment will avoid the policy. Ibid.

2. By the Assured or his Agents (and see p. 962).

11. Where an agent who is employed to effect an insurance for his principal deliberately omits to communicate to that principal material facts which, in the course of his employment, have come to his knowledge, and which it is his duty to disclose to his principal, there is a concealment which will have the effect of vitiating an insurance subsequently effected by such innocent principal through another agent, who is unaware of any such concealment of material information. Blackburn, Low & Co. v. Vigors, 5 Asp.; 54 L. T. N.S. 852.

Part XXI.—PERILS INSURED AGAINST.

3. Excepted Risks.

2. The Common Memorandum.

(f) Five per Cent. and Three per Cent.
(and see p. 1026).

11a. A ship was insured with a warranty free from average under 3 per cent. unless general or the ship be stranded. Her sternpost was damaged by perils of the seas, causing a leak, but such injury was not at first discovered. Subsequently the ship was docked to have her bottom scraped, cleaned and painted, and on survey the injury to the sternpost was discovered. She was in dock for seven days; the painting, &c. could have been completed in about three days; the repairs to the sternpost occupied the whole seven days. In an action against the underwriters for an average loss, the plaintiffs contended that the whole cost of docking was to be charged to the repairs of the sternpost, and that, as this was over 3 per cent., they were entitled to recovery. The defendants contended that the cost should be apportioned, in which case the sternpost repairs would have been less than 3 per cent. Held (by Brett, M. R., and Fry, L. J., Baggallay, L. J., dissenting), that the proper mode of dividing the expense was halving it between the painting, &c., and the sternpost repairs, and as this brought the cost over 3 per cent., the underwriters were liable. China Transpacific Co. v. Marine Ins. Co., C. A. July 9, 1885.

Part XXII.—LOSSES BY PERILS INSURED AGAINST.

10. By other Perils and Misfortunes.

1. To Ship (and see p. 1042).

12. The bursting of the chamber of the donkey-engine through the pressure of the cold water, whilst being used for the purposes of the voyage in the ordinary course of the navigation of the ship is ejusdem generis with a peril of the sea, and is covered by a general clause against "all the perils, losses and misfortunes that had or should come to the hurt, detriment, or damage of the aforesaid subject-matter (vessel and machinery) of insurance, or any part thereof." Hamilton, Fraser & Co. v. Thames and Mersey Marine Insurance Co., C. A. (Lindley and Lopes, L.J.J., Lord Esher, M. R., dissenting, and distinguishing West India Telegraph Co. v. Home and Colonial Insurance Co.), April 24, 1886.

Part XXIII.—PARTICULAR AVERAGE AND PARTIAL LOSS.

5. Adjustment.

2. On Ship.

(a) Generally (and see p. 1050).

13. A ship was insured by a time policy, free from average under three per cent. unless general, or the ship be stranded, sunk, or burnt. Several separate and distinct voyages were made, and particular average losses incurred, each loss being under three per cent., but in the aggregate amounting to more than three per cent. Held, that in a time policy on ship, the amount of the particular average loss must be calculated at the end of each separate and distinct voyage, and the losses incurred on the different voyages cannot be added together, and therefore the underwriters were protected from liability under the warranty. Stewart & Co. v. Merchants' Marine Insurance Co., 5 Asp. 506; L. R. 16 Q. B. D. 619.

Part XXIV.—TOTAL LOSS.

2. Absolute.

1. Generally (and see p. 1054).

14. A policy against absolute total loss only covers any such loss of the thing insured as is sufficiently complete to entitle the owners to recover without notice of abandonment. So, where a ship is driven ashore, and by the continuous action of the perils of the seas becomes a total loss, the assured may recover, although when first driven ashore she was but a constructive total loss. Levy v. Merchants Marine Ins. Co., 5 Asp. 407; 52 L. T. N.S. 263.

4. Abandonment.

1. Generally (and see p. 1081).

15. Notice of abandonment need not be given to the underwriters of a policy of re-insurance upon a constructive total loss of the ship insured. Uzielli v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 15 Q. B. D. 11; 5 Asp. 405; 52 L. T. N.S. 787; 54 L. J. Q. B. 142.

7. Effect on Ownership.

(c) Of Freight (and see p. 1086).

16. Freight which has not been earned is not an incident of the ownership of a vessel, and does not pass to the underwriters on ship upon abandonment, hence where shipowners insure ship with one set and freight with another set of underwriters, and whilst proceeding to her port of loading under charter-party, and before she has earned freight, she is sunk by another ship, and her owners recover damages for loss of ship and for loss of freight, the underwriters on ship have no right to the freight on abandonment. Sea Insurance Co. v. Hadden, 5 Asp. 230; 13 Q. B. D. 706; 50 L. T. N.S. 657; 53 L. J. Q. B. 252.

Part XXVI.—SUE AND LABOUR CLAUSE.

1. Generally (and see p. 1098).

17. Underwriters under an ordinary Lloyd's policy on a ship containing a suing and labouring clause in favour of the assured, their "factors, servants, and assigns," reinsured with the plaintiffs, who further reinsured with the defendants for £1,000, subject to the same terms as those contained in the original policy but to cover total loss only. The ship having gone ashore, her owners gave notice of abandonment to the original underwriters alone, who, having refused to accept the notice, floated the ship at considerable cost, and ultimately settled with her owners at eighty-eight per cent. The plaintiffs having paid the original underwriters this eighty-eight per cent., plus the expenses of floating the vessel, making in all a loss of twelve per cent., sought to recover the same from the defendants. Held, that, notwithstanding the settlement come to between the shipowners and the original underwriters, there had been a constructive total loss, that notice of abandonment to the defendants was unnecessary, that the defendants having insured only to the extent of £1,000, they were liable for no more, and that they incurred no liability under the suing and labouring clause, because the original underwriters who had floated the vessel were not the "factors, servants, or assigns" of the defendants. Uzielli v. Boston Marine Insurance Co., 15 Q. B. D. 11; 5 Asp. 405; 52 L. T. N.S. 787; 54 L. J. Q. B. 142.

17a. Where in an action by the shipper of goods against the shipowner for non-delivery the defendant admits that the goods were not delivered, and alleges that he was prevented from delivering them by the perils excepted in the bill of lading, interrogatories for the purpose of showing that the ship was unseaworthy when she left port, and sank soon afterwards in consequence of a cock being left open, are inadmissible, the interrogatories not being based on facts which must inevitably occur in the ordinary course of the voyage, and there being nothing to show that they were not purely hypothetical, as well as being objectionable on the ground that the plaintiff's case was complete on the admission of non-delivery, and that they were administered merely for the purpose of anticipating the defendant's case. Grumbrecht v. Parry, 5 Asp. 176; 49 L. T. N.S. 570.

Part XXVIII.—FOREIGN LAW.

1. France.

1. Generally.

18. In French law, three elements are essential to the contract of insurance,—an insurable object; a maritime risk to which the object is liable at least in the opinion of the parties at the time of the loss; a premium paid or promised to the person who takes upon himself the risk insured. Arts. 336, 337, 349, 365, 383. D. A. 1427. Caumont, vo. Assurance Maritime, Nos. 6 and 7.

18a. The most absolute good faith is essential therein. Caumont, No. 11. Any misstatement or concealment or difference between the policy and the bill of lading, of a nature to diminish the opinion of the risk, avoids the policy. Art. 348, C. C.

18b. The insured must have an interest in the property. Wager policies are void. Caumont, No. 7.

18c. Maritime insurance is a contract of indemnity, it must not procure a profit to the insured. Arts. 336, 347, 348, C. C. D. A. 1429.

19. The deterioration, deficiency, and loss occurring from the inherent vice (vice propre) of the subject insured, and the damage caused by the act and fault of the owners, freighters, or shippers, are not chargeable upon the underwriters. Art. 352, C. C.

19a. The underwriter, except with respect to the acts of the assured himself, which it is not lawful for him to cover

(D. A. 1867), may by special agreement extend his liability.

19b. He may also restrict it. A very frequent stipulation to that effect is the clause "franc d'avaries," free of average. D. A. 1941.

2. What may be Insured.

20. Save the exceptions stated in Art. 347 (for which see No. 10), all things which may be the object of a commercial transaction are insurable when submitted to maritime risks. Art. 334, C. C. See in the same article an enumeration of the principal subjects of maritime insurance.

20a. Article 335 permits the insurance of "all and any of those subjects jointly or separately in time of peace or in time of war, before or pending the voyage of the vessel for both the voyage out and the return, or either singly, for the whole voyage or for a limited time" for all voyages and carriage by sea, rivers, and navigable canals.

20b. Article 347, C. C., declares void the insurance of the profit expected on the goods on board, of freight not yet earned, of the maritime interest of the sums lent, and of the capital borrowed on bottomry or respondentia, and of the wages of the ship's company. Art. 347, C. C.

20c. Where it is optional for the carrier to discharge the goods at a certain port or to convey them further at an increased freight, it is a moot question whether, after having left the first port behind him, the carrier may insure that proportion of the freight which he would have received had he discharged the goods there. D. A. 1580.

21. The ship's company may insure the goods on which they have invested the advance or instalments of wages they have received during the voyage. D. A. 1584.

21a. Whether enemy's property may be insured is a question which has been variously decided. D. A. 1574.

21b. It is generally admitted that where objects of which the law prohibits the insurance are covered by the same policy with others of which the insurance is lawful, the contract is not void in toto, but stands with respect to the latter. D. A. 1607.

3. Who may Insure.

(a) Generally.

22. The property in risk may be insured as well by an agent as by the party interested, the authority to insure need not be express. D. A. 1438.

22a. The agent should execute literally the order to insure. D. A. 1448.

22b. The policy may be made in the name of a given person, or to order or to bearer. D. A. 1545; P. Caumont, No. 24.

22c. The title of a policy to order can be transferred only by a regular endorsement, dated and naming the value. D. A. 1546; Caumont, Nos. 154, 155.

(b) Agent and Principal.

23. The agent need not name his principal, but he may act for the account of whom it may concern (pour le compte de qui il appartiendra), in which case the benefit of the insurance may be claimed by any legitimate bearer of the bill of lading. D. A. 1439.

23a. Where the conditions have not been specified by the principal, the agent is justified in insuring according to the usage of the port, for example, at Marseilles, free of average (franc d'avaries). D. A. 1451.

23b. The agent is not answerable for the insolvency of the underwriter unless he has undertaken so to be, or unless such insolvency was known to the broker or notorious in the place. D. A. 1452.

23c. But should the underwriter fall into a state of bankruptcy the broker might be made liable, if he neglected to secure the interests of his principal by the means afforded in Art. 346, C. C., which allows the insured, if the underwriter should fall into bankruptcy before the risk is terminated, to demand security or the rescission of the contract, and gives the same right to the underwriter in case of bankruptcy of the assured.

(c) Agent and Underwriter.

24. The authorities are generally agreed that though the agent has disclosed his principal in the policy, he is, notwithstanding, personally liable to the underwriters. D. A. 1440.

24a. But the agent may plead the defences peculiar to the contract of insurance, though the principal in consequence of mala fides may be disqualified from claiming that protection. Thus, where an agent, deceived by his principal, has procured for him a policy on goods not laden, for the account of whom it may concern, and subsequently disclosed his principal, he may plead the limitation of five years of Art. 432, C. C., against the action of the underwriter in recovery of the indemnity paid by him, though the principal, from his bad faith, is incapacitated from taking advantage of this short limitation which the law has established for the contract of insurance, and has no other protection than the general limitation of thirty years. D. A. 1440.

25. But the agent, by agreement with the underwriters, may exonerate himself from all personal liability for the execution of the policy. D. A. 1441.

(d) Principal and Underwriter.

26. Where the agent has rejected all personal liability the party liable to the underwriters for the premium is the principal, unless he has paid the premiums to the agent. D. A. 1443.

4. The Premium.

(a) Generally.

27. A premium is essential to the contract of insurance; it is usually in money, but might be a share of profit, a quantity of goods, or any other valuable consideration. D. A. 1539.

28. Insurances are frequently made at one premium denominated "prime li  " for the voyage out and home.

29. The underwriter is entitled to the premium only when the risk has begun. D. A. 1738.

30. But however short the duration of the risk, should it have lasted only a moment, the underwriter is entitled to the entire premium agreed on, except in policies out and home under one single premium for the round voyage (prime li  ). Ibid.

31. In such a case where there is no return the underwriter is entitled only to two-thirds of the premium agreed on for the round voyage. Art. 356, C. C.

31a. Where the return voyage has only been partially performed, the underwriter is entitled to a share of the whole premium for the return voyage, proportionate to the quantity of cargo loaded, and to two-thirds of the premium upon the cargo deficient. Ibid. D. A. 1998.

32. "If the voyage be given up before the departure of the vessel, even by the will of the assured, the assurance is avoided, and the underwriter receives as indemnity one-half per cent. on the sum insured." Art. 349, C. C., and see infra, No. 36.

33. In such a case the premium must be returned by the underwriter, should he have received it, minus the indemnity of one-half per cent. D. A. 1733.

34. The indemnity of one-half per cent. is due to the underwriter though the voyage be given up from necessity, for example, in consequence of a fire. D. A. 1778; Caumont, 244.

35. Secus, if the voyage be prevented by act of authority, interdiction of commerce or embargo before the commencement of the risk, in such a case no indemnity can be claimed by the underwriters. D. A. 1780; Caumont, Ibid.

36. The expression used by Art. 349 is "before the departure of the vessel;" but it should be construed to mean "commencement of the risk." D. A. 1777.

37. For though the vessel has not left the port the risk may have begun in consequence of the agreement of the parties, or the subject of the policy (for instance, where the insurance is on goods, Arts. 341—358, C. C.). Caumont, 124, and the authorities therein.

(b) War.

38. Where a policy underwritten in time of peace has stipulated that, in case of war pending the insurance, the premium shall be increased, without the rate being specified, Art. 343, C. C., rules that it shall be settled by the court taking into account the risk, the circumstances, and the agreement in each policy.

5. The Contract.

(a) Legal Essentials.

(aa) Writing.

39. Art. 332, C. C., rules that the contract of insurance is to be reduced into writing, bearing the date of the day on which it has been subscribed, and the mention whether before or after noon. It may be under private hand. It should contain no blank. It should state the name and domicile of the party who applies for the insurance, and whether he acts as owner or agent; the name and description of the vessel, the name of the master, the place where the goods have been or are to be loaded, the place from which the vessel has sailed or is to sail, the places where it has to load and discharge, the ports where it has to call, the nature and value or the estimate of the value of the property insured, the date at which the risk is to begin and end, the sum insured, the premium on the insurance, the reference to arbitrator (if so agreed); and generally all the agreements entered into between the parties. Art. 232, C. C.

40. Semble, that no omission of the particulars required by the article is fatal, if the object and the risk are determinable in the degree necessary for the contract contemplated by the parties.

41. The subject of the insurance and its value need not be specified beyond the degree necessary for its determination, according to the contract between the parties. D. A. 1527—1530.

42. Art. 332 (for which see No. 39) is not drawn with scientific precision. It has not determined, or given any clue to determine, the effect of the omission of any of its requirements. Many are not essential, and in practice are disregarded; several are not applicable to all descriptions of maritime insurance. Notwithstanding the peremptory terms of the first paragraph of Art. 332, "le contrat d'assurance est rédigé par écrit," several authorities have held that a writing might be dispensed with. D. A. 1459, 1460; Caumont, 26 et seq.

43. In the view which dispenses with a writing, see, for the evidence admissible, D. A. 1464 and 1465.

(bb) Duplicates.

44. For the question whether the contract must be made in two copies, in accordance with the rules of the Code Civile, see D. A. 1465.

(cc) Date.

45. Where there are several distinct insurances in the same policy the date of each should be mentioned. D. A. 1479, 1480.

46. But neither the date nor the hour is essential to the validity of the policy. D. A. 1480, 1481; Caumont, 44—48.

(dd) Draftsmen.

47. If not under private hand, policies of assurance may be drawn by courtiers d'assurance (official insurance brokers), notaries and chancellors of the French consulates abroad. D. A. 1468.

48. They may be received in authentic form by the two latter officers. D. A. 1468.

(b) Name of Ship and Master.

49. The name of the vessel is essential in the policy where it is on the ship. But a mistake therein is not fatal where there is no doubt as to the identity of the vessel. D. A. 1494; Caumont, No. 102. The policy should state whether the ship is laden or not, and in time of war the flag it sails under. Caumont, No. 106.

50. A mistake in the description of the vessel is fatal only where it is likely to diminish the opinion of the risk. Caumont, No. 104; D. A. 1503.

51. Where the insurance is on the goods the specification of the ship is not essential to the contract, for the ship may not be material in the minds of the parties. D. A. 1493.

52. Article 337 has expressly permitted insurance in which neither the vessel nor the master are named in cases of shipments for Europe from other parts of the world, and in practice the requirement is not regarded. Caumont, No. 164.

53. Where there is a doubt as to the name of the vessel, or that of the master, the insured frequently adds the clause "ou tel nom qui plus exact sera," or words to that effect, which words prevent the underwriter from taking advantage of the mistake. D. A. 1494—1497; Caumont, No. 105.

54. The name of the master need not be specified, but if specified is material. Should the master be changed without absolute necessity, the underwriter would be discharged from liability. To avoid difficulty and reserve the liberty of changing the master, the clause "ou autre pour lui" is often inserted after his name. D. A. 1513; Caumont, No. 109.

55. The clause "ou tel nom qui plus exact sera" is also often employed to provide for a mistake in the name. Caumont, No. 105.

56. Notwithstanding the clause "ou autre pour lui," if the master substituted were not a French master properly qualified, the underwriter might refuse to bear the loss if caused by the want of skill of the master. D. A. 1517.

(c) Name of Goods.

57. The policy should specify the goods when the insured is aware of their nature if they are particularly liable to deterioration or diminution, such as those enumerated in Art. 355, C. C.

58. Unless it bears the clause "en quoi que tout consiste ou puisse consister," or any other to the same effect. D. A. 1534.

59. If the policy does specify the goods insured, the insurance is void if those loaded are not of the description stated. D. A. 1532.

(d) Names of Terminus a quo and ad quem.

60. Many policies do not specially mention the port of loading, and simply specify the port of departure for the voyage insured. D. A. 1519.

61. Where the port of loading has been mentioned, the policy is voidable if the goods have been loaded in another port. Caumont, No. 112.

62. The omissions of the terminus a quo and the terminus ad quem do not affect the validity of the policy, if the limits of the risk may be determined, and if the underwriters have not been deceived. D. A. 1522—1524.

6. Construction of Contract.

63. Where the meaning of a clause is doubtful, it should be in general interpreted in favour of the underwriter, who is the obligee, unless it has been introduced on his behalf, it being his duty to explain his intention clearly. D. A. 1549, 1550.

64. For the same reason the construction of the clauses introduced by the assured should, where doubtful, be settled in favour of the underwriter. D. A. 1551.

7. Duration of Risk.

65. By Art. 341, C. C., where the policy has not determined the duration of the risk, it shall be defined according to the rules laid down for bottomry and respondentia by Art. 328, C. C., namely: for the vessel and its appurtenances, from the time of its sailing till that of its anchoring or mooring in the port of destination; for the goods, from the time when they are loaded on board the vessel or the boats which are to convey them there, till the time when they are landed.

8. Particular Stipulations in Policies.(a) Right of transhipping.

66. The party who insures the goods may in specifying the vessel reserve the freedom of transhipping on other vessels left indeterminate, D. A. 1507; Caumont, No. 108; or specified, D. A. 1508.

(b) Liberty to touch and stay.

67. The policy should specify not only the ports at which the vessel is bound to call for any purpose, but also those where it will be likely to do so, unless the policy contains a clause giving the vessel a general licence to touch and stay at any port on the road (clause de faire echelle). D. A. 1525.

(c) Liberty to deviate.

68. See p. 2463, Nos. 132—134.

9. Particular Policies.(a) Time and Voyage,

69. Both time and voyage policies are known to the law of France. D. A. 332, C. C.; D. A. 1524; Caumont, 124, 373.

70. Time policies are inoperative if the date from which the risk is to begin has not been fixed before the loss. Caumont, No. 131.

(b) Valued and open,(aa) Generally.

71. The statement of a specific sum limiting the liability of the underwriter is not essential, it may be determined by the subsequent valuation of the object insured. D. A. 1536.

72. The valuation, whether of ship or goods, is not necessary for the validity of the policy on either side. Ibid.

72a. Where the value is not stated, the policy in France, as in England, receives the name of open policy (police ouverte). An insurance may be made on ship alone (sur corps), or both ship and cargo (sur corps et facultes), or on the goods (sur facultes), but an insurance (sur facultes), would not cover the goods loaded during the voyage unless the policy contained an agreement to that effect, or permission to visit ports of call, and it would not include goods purchased at the port of destination for the outward voyage nor for the voyage home, unless the policy were on the voyage out and home. D. A. 1527.

73. If the insurance be made on the "facultes chargées ou à charger," it covers the goods loaded or to be loaded in the ports designated in the policy or during the voyage, if the liberty to touch and stay has been reserved. D. A. 1531.

74. Art. 339 provides that if the value of the goods be not stated in the policy it may be established by the invoices or the books; and failing these, by the market value at the place of loading, adding the duties paid and the expenses incurred.

75. The underwriter may insure all the goods loaded for the account of the insured on a specified ship, without determining the amounts beforehand; but the insurance then covers only the goods on board at the date of the policy. D. A. 1531.

76. Article 338 rules that, where the goods have been valued in foreign currency, the value is to be reckoned at the rate of the foreign currency in French money at the date of the signature of the policy.

77. Article 340 rules that, where the subject of the insurance consists of goods from a land where trading is carried on exclusively by barter, and there is no valuation of the goods in the policy, they are to be estimated at the value of those given in exchange, adding the expense of carriage.

78. Article 357, C. C., rules that a policy underwritten for a value exceeding that of the goods insured, if the exaggeration has been fraudulent on the part of the assured, is voidable at the suit of the underwriters alone. Art. 357, C. C.

79. Should the exaggeration be innocent, the contract is valid to the extent of the value of the goods; for the excess, no premium is allowed to the underwriters, but only half per cent. of the sum insured. Art. 358, C. C.

80. The clause valeur agréée (value agreed) in the policy proves the value of the subject insured, but only primâ facie. Caumont, 152, 153.

81. Held that, notwithstanding such clause, the underwriters are entitled to prove the exaggeration of the value stated and to have them valued by experts. Marseilles, April 24, 1856, J. H. 1856:2:149; Paris, April 15, 1857, J. H. 1857:2:117; Havre, August 28, 1858,

J. H. 1858 : 1 : 180 ; Rouen, April 9, 1859, J. H. 1860 : 2 : 64.

82. But, held, that the evidence adduced by the underwriters must prove such exaggeration in the most unequivocal and positive manner. Cassation, February 20, 1873, J. H. 1873 : 2 : 79.

(c) Floating and continuing Policies.

83. A policy which insures to the extent of a given sum all the goods of a nature specified which the assured may, within a specified time, load from and to the designated ports, goes by the name of "police flottante." D. A. 1537 ; Caumont, 166.

84. Continuing insurance policies, by means of which the assured is permanently covered against certain habitual risks, are not unfrequently contracted by navigation companies and others. The policy in such cases goes by the name of police d'abonnement (continuing policy). The vessel need not be specified, nor the master nor the goods. Caumont, No. 174.

85. Held that, in a floating policy (police flottante), the underwriter and the assured are finally bound for the amount and the time determined by the contracts, and that the policy produces all its effects without its being necessary to declare to the underwriter each lot of goods loaded. Held, that the goods are covered by the mere fact that they are on board, though unknown to the assured, and independently of any declaration. The only requisite in that respect is, that the assured should inform the underwriter of the loading as soon as he is himself aware of it. Havre, September 11, 1866, J. H. 1866 : 1 : 226.

(d) On Goods, for Account of whom it may concern.

86. A policy made "pour le compte de qui il appartiendra" on goods, without any specification, is applicable to any goods belonging to the insured on board, though they may not be those for which, in his intention, the policy was entered into. D. A. 1487.

87. The lawful holder of a policy made "pour le compte de qui il appartiendra," may claim the benefit thereof for any goods on board for his account, and should it cover the whole value of those goods, he is entitled to cancel (ristourner) a policy taken by him upon the goods on board the same ship, after the date of the first, and though he may have become holder of the latter subsequently to contracting the second insurance. D. A. 1488.

88. The clause "pour compte de l'assureur et de ses intéressés" has not so extensive an effect as the clause "pour compte de qui il appartiendra." The former applies only to the goods on board belonging to the insured and the parties in interest with him, but not to the goods merely consigned to him, and in case of loss he has to specify or prove the reality of the interests connected with his own in the policy. See D. A. 1489, and the case therein.

(e) On Goods in whatever Ship they may come.

89. Insurances are frequently made in France on goods in whatever ship they may come—insurances "in quovis," as they are called. D. A. 1504 ; Caumont, No. 164—174.

89a. The goods also may be left undetermined. Caumont, No. 163.

(f) On Goods in several Vessels.

90. A policy may be made insuring goods on several vessels, but it should state whether the insurance be on such vessels jointly or separately. In the latter case the sum on each vessel should be specified. In the former the first vessel sailing extinguishes the insurance to the extent of the amount loaded. Caumont, No. 108.

91. Should several of the vessels leave together the insurance applies proportionately to the goods on board each vessel. D. A. 1511.

10. Perils insured against.

(a) Generally.

92. Where there is no agreement to the contrary, the losses chargeable on the underwriter are "All losses and damages which are suffered by the subject insured from storms, wreck, stranding, accidental collision, compulsory change of course of voyage or vessel, and from jettison, fire, capture, pillage, arrest by order of a government, declaration of war, reprisals, and generally by any maritime event." Art. 350, C. C.

93. As a rule, the policy only covers such losses as occur on the water, or are the immediate consequence of perils of the sea; as where goods discharged to allow of the vessel being repaired could not subsequently be reloaded in consequence of a storm which drove the vessel to sea; Caumont, No. 287; or in consequence of their having been stolen. D. A. 1823, 1824.

94. But such land risks must be the immediate consequence of the perils of the sea, D. A. 1824; and the policy must have attached on the property by the risk having begun upon it. Ibid.

(b) Land Risks.

95. Policies may, and not unfrequently are, made which extend the liability of the underwriters to certain land risks resulting from the circumstances of the voyage insured.

96. Held, that, where in a policy on goods destined for Panama, which were to be carried to a port to be transhipped for their destination, the underwriters had made themselves liable for all risks of land and transhipment whatsoever, this includes not only those of the conveyance across the isthmus, but also those of landing in the port of transhipment, such as a fire in the custom's warehouse. Seine, November 19, 1856; J. H. 1857: 2: 2; and see Nos. 93, 94, supra.

(c) Thieves.

97. Same decision as to losses from thieves, though the assured does not prove at what point of the voyage the thefts were committed, provided he establishes the reality of the loading and of the theft of the goods. Seine, 9 Sept. 1857; J. H. 1857: 2: 241; Paris, 6 Aug. 1858; J. H. 1858: 2: 249.

(d) War.

98. The clause excluding the risks of war is not to be construed as exonerating the underwriters from the losses caused by sedition or civil war. Marseilles, 29 June, 1858; J. H. 1859: 2: 34; Aix, 27 July, 1859; J. H. 1859: 2: 282.

(e) Consequential Loss.

99. The underwriter is liable not only for such losses as are the immediate and material effect of the accident, but for the depreciations in the value of the property resulting from the peril for which the underwriter is liable (with the exception of the expected profit where the policy is on goods, which profit is not insurable); such as the difference between the price fetched by the sale at a port of refuge and their value at the time of loading. D. A. 1820.

100. The same rule applies whatever the peril by which such a depreciation occurs (D. A. 1820), war excepted. D. A. 1822; contra, D. A. 1821.

101. So also the underwriter is liable for extraordinary expenditure of which the perils may have been the cause (D. A. 1819). Cassation, 23 Dec. 1857, J. H. 1858: 2: 1.

102. To come under the policy, the loss must be a direct consequence of the perils accepted or included. Rouen, 1 August, 1855, J. H. 1855: 2: 127; 2 April, 1856, J. H. 1856: 2: 91; Cassation, 11 August, 1858, J. H. 1859: 2: 56.

103. Held, that the loss of a vessel from a deviation determined upon to avoid the enemy which was approaching the port, was not to be considered as a loss from war. Rouen, 14 March, and 1 May, 1872; J. H. 1872: 2: 85, and 129.

104. Sed contra, that stranding occurring after a change of destination in consequence of a declaration of war, was not chargeable on the underwriter on a policy excluding the risk of war. Nantes, 6 Oct. 1860, and 22 May, 1861; J. H. 1862: 2: 55.

105. A commentary on Art. 350, which settles the liability of the underwriter supported by cases, is to be found in D. A. 1817 et seq. Caumont, No. 282 et seq.

11. Notification of Casualty to Underwriters.

106. Art. 374, C. C., requires the assured to notify to the underwriters within three days from its reception, all news concerning the accidents for which the underwriters are liable.

107. But in practice such notice is often dispensed with where the accident is not of a nature to justify the abandonment to the underwriters. D. A. 1743.

108. No particular form is dictated by the law for the purpose. Caumont, No. 490.

109. To the limit of three days is to be added, the term granted by Article 1033 of the Code of Procedure, allowing for the distance from the place from which the order is to be sent, to that where the notice is to be made. D. A. 1748.

110. The right of the assured is not forfeited by the omission of the notice, but he is liable in damages. D. A. 1745; Caumont, No. 488.

12. Avoidance of Contract.

(a) By Concealment.

111. The assured should not deceive the underwriter as to the risk he is to undertake, Article 348 enacts that "every concealment, or misrepresentation on the part of the assured, or difference between the policy and the bill of lading, which may diminish the opinion of the risk, or change the subject thereof, avoids the insurance. The insurance is void, even where the concealment, the false statement, or the difference has not had any influence on the damage, or the loss of the property insured." The effect is the same, whether they are innocent or fraudulent, for the error and fraud are equally fatal to the contract. D. A. 1679; Caumont, Nos. 421 and 451; Paris, June 14, J. H. 1885 : 2 : 123.

112. And this though the insurance has been made with the clause "sur bonnes et mauvaises nouvelles." Aguirevengoa's case, Bordeaux, April 7, 1835. D. A. 1679.

113. For example, where the assured did not disclose to the underwriter that the vessel had been away for two months and a half on a voyage which is generally of not more than six weeks' duration. Caumont, No. 426; Rouen, February 6, 1866; J. H. 1866 : 2 : 40.

114. But the concealment or misrepresentation to avoid the insurance should be really of a nature "to diminish the opinion of the risk." D. A. 1680; Rennes, Dec. 26, 1871; J. H. 1873 : 2 : 198; Bordeaux, March 8, 1873; J. H. 1873 : 2 : 117.

115. Art. 365, C. C., rules that "every insurance made after the loss or the safe arrival of the property insured is void, if there be a presumption that before the signature of the contract the assured may have been informed of the loss, or the underwriter of the arrival, of the property insured."

116. Art. 366, ruling that "such a presumption exists, if, reckoning three-quarters of a myriameter per hour, without prejudice to other proofs, it is established that from the place of the arrival or of the loss of the vessel, or from the place where the first news thereof has arrived, the news of such arrival or loss may have been brought to the place where the contract of insurance has been made, before the signature of the contract."

117. The presumption of knowledge established by Art. 366 is absolute, and cannot be rebutted by any proof, but is not admitted where the policy is "sur bonnes et mauvaises nouvelles." D. A. 1802, 1807, Art. 367, C. C.

118. Where the case does not admit of the presumption, evidence of actual knowledge may be produced, Art. 366 expressly allowing of "other proofs." D. A. 1806.

119. Such proofs may be produced to set aside an insurance "sur bonnes et mauvaises nouvelles," there being a distinction between such an insurance and the others only with reference to the exclusion of the presumption. Art. 367, C. C.

120. Art. 368 rules that where the knowledge of the loss is proved against the assured, he shall pay a double premium to the underwriter; and where the knowledge of the safe arrival is proved against the latter, he shall pay to the assured an equal amount; and that in either case the delinquent shall be prosecuted before the Tribunal of Correctional Police.

(b) By Change of Risk.

121. The liability of the underwriters cannot be enforced if the assured does not conform to the essential stipulation of the insurance. D. A. 1870.

122. The assured forfeits his right to indemnity if there is a change, without necessity, in the vessel, or destination, or track of the voyage, specified in the policy (A. 351, C. C.), without the insertion of the necessary clauses to permit such substitution.

123. The unauthorized change of the ship named in the policy rescinds the insurance, though the substituted ship be as good as that specified in the policy, or better; and the premium is returned by the underwriter if such change occurs before the commencement of the risk. If such a change is made at any time after the commencement of the risk, and it is a change which, though for the better, is without necessity, and unauthorized by a clause of the policy or by the underwriter, the underwriter is discharged ipso facto from all liability, but is entitled to the premium. D. A. 1895 and 1896.

124. There is a change of voyage within the meaning of A. 351, C. C., where the vessel, after having gone a certain way in the direction of the terminus specified by the policy, has turned off and sailed for another destination. Such a change puts an end to the underwriter's liability, though the voyage made be shorter and less dangerous than that contemplated by the policy. D. A. 1874 and 1875.

125. Held, that where the vessel has cleared out from the terminus a quo, with a cargo for a destination different from that specified in the policy, the voyage insured is to be considered as given up, and the underwriter is entitled to one-half per cent. under Art. 349, C. C., though such destination be nearer than that in the policy, if out of the direction of the risk. Arnaud's case, D. A. 1784.

126. In such a case the assured can claim no indemnity from the underwriter, though the loss occurred before the vessel left the track which leads to both destinations. D. A. 1891.

(c) By voluntary Deviation.

127. Voluntary deviation, unauthorized by the underwriter, puts an end to his liability. Art. 351, C. C.; D. A. 1871.

128. It is a deviation whenever the vessel swerves from the course for the port of destination specified in the policy, though the vessel afterwards resumed the authorized course. D. A. 1871.

129. And where the policy does not determine the course to be followed by the vessel, there is a deviation where it has travelled out of the usual track. D. A. 1872.

130. But held, that compulsory deviation does not put an end to the liability of the underwriter, even if it takes place when the vessel has already entered the harbour of the port of destination;—at least in a policy on goods, the risk on which terminates only when the goods are landed.

131. And held, that running from such harbour in consequence of the port being threatened by the enemy's force, is a case of compulsory deviation. Rouen, 1st May, 1872; J. H. 1872: 2: 129.

132. The usual clauses which authorize deviation are that which gives the liberty to go backwards (retrograder), that which allows the vessel to go to the right and to the left of the usual track (aller adroite et d gauche), and, that which gives the liberty to touch and stay (faire echelle), the second licence does not imply the first, nor the third the two others; the liberty to touch and stay only permitting the vessel to enter the ports which are on its onward track. D. A. 1879 et seq.

133. Nor does either allow of changing the destination of the voyage. D. A. 1878.

134. Usage may be appealed to for the construction of such clauses; thus held by the court of Bordeaux, that according to the usage of that port, the various ports of the island of La Réunion were to be considered as one lieu d'escale (place of call), and that liberty to call at that island implied that of visiting all the ports of the island, and not merely those on the course of the voyage. Assurance v. Foussat, Bordeaux, 11 April, 1837; D. A. 1883, 1884.

135. Should there be no deviation nor change in the direction or destination, but merely an abridgment of the voyage, the policy stands unimpaired. Art. 364, C. C.

136. Intended change of destination prepared in one of the ports on the road in which the vessel was at liberty to call, by taking out a conditional policy for another destination, if such intention be abandoned in the authorized port of call, does not affect the assurance. Chiusses's case, D. A. 1878.

(d) By Barratry, unless specially insured against.

137. Barratry of the master or crew is expressly excluded from the perils covered by the general effect of the insurance. A special agreement is necessary in the policy to extend its protection to that risk. Art. 353, C. C.

138. In French law an act to be accounted barratry need not be either fraudulent, criminal, or grossly neglectful; "baraterie" includes not only crime and fraud, but also neglect, imprudence, and want of proper skill. The term "baraterie de patron" applies as well to the faults of the ship's company as to those of the master, for which the owner of the vessel is made liable. D. A. 1918; Caumont, vo. Baraterie, No. 13 et seq.

139. See, for barratry in French law, D. A. 1918—1920 et seq.; Caumont, vo. Baraterie, No. 13 et seq.

140. Held, that deviation by the master, unauthorized by the owner, is a case of barratry, which, where the policy covers the assured against barratry, justifies him in abandoning to the underwriters, where the vessel has been lost after such deviation on the road to the port of destination. Havre, Nov. 28, 1871; J. H. 1872: 1: 26.

141. The epithet "fortuit" (accidental) added in Article 350 to the word "abordage" (collision), is not to be taken as an absolute restriction of the liability of the underwriter to that particular class of collision, but as implying that he has always, and, by the mere effect of the policy, to bear the loss resulting from such collisions, without recourse against any other person. As to other collisions, where attributable to the master of the vessel covered by the policy, they come under the head of barratry, for which the underwriter is not liable (see supra), except under a special clause (Art. 353), and such a special clause does not prohibit the underwriter from making the master reimburse to him the loss he has made good to the owner, and where attributable to the fault of the master or crew of the other vessel, the underwriter can cover himself by making its owner responsible for his agent, under Art. 216, C. C., subject to his right of abandonment. Ibid. D. A. 1828 et seq.

142. A distinction similar to that implied with reference to collision by Art. 350, exists as already remarked (see supra) with reference to such other perils which may befall the subject insured as are caused by the fault of man. If by that of the master or crew of the insured vessel, they amount to barratry for which the underwriter is not liable, unless expressly included among the risks covered by the policy.

143. Thus, where a loss has been caused by fire on board which is attributable to the fault of the master or crew. D. A. 1835, 1836.

144. When the cause of the fire is unknown or doubtful, many authorities have contended that the underwriter is not liable, fires being generally caused or allowed to increase by the fault or neglect of those on board, or by the inherent vice of the thing itself, and the onus of proof resting on the assured, who must establish not that the loss has been caused by fire, in the abstract, but by such a fire as will come under the policy. See the argument and cases pro and con in D. A. 1837 et seq.; Caumont, Nos. 313 et seq.; 318 et seq.

145. Held, that the consequence of the very comprehensive character of barratry in French law is that, however completely a loss from the nature of its cause would come under the protection of the policy, it is withdrawn from the pale of the insurance by the operation of Article 353, C. C., if attributable to the fault or neglect of the master or crew, unless the insurance be extended to it by a clause covering risk of barratry.

146. Held, that a policy covering "baraterie de patron" makes the underwriter liable for damages given by the court against the owner at the suit of the owner of another vessel for damages caused to that vessel by a collision attributable to the fault of the master of the vessel insured. Cassation, December 28, 1857, J. H. 1858: 2: 2; March 4 and February 12, 1861; D. P. 61: 1: 163; Marseilles, Feb. 28, 1859, J. H. 1859: 2: 230; Aix, Jan. 20, 1859, J. H. 1860: 2: 102. But contra, Paris, June 23, 1855, J. H. 1855: 2: 117; Tribunal of Commerce of Rouen, Jan. 22, 1858, J. H. 1858: 2: 68.

2. Portugal.

147. The assurer is bound to communicate without delay to the assured, or the first signatory, all intelligence he may receive as to any disaster to the vessel or goods assured, otherwise he will be responsible for damage. See C. C. Art. 1778.

148. Until abandonment, the assurer is bound, in case of shipwreck, stranding, capture, or hostile arrest, to employ all diligence to save the articles insured. It is not necessary for this purpose that the assured should hold the power of attorney of the assurers, and he may demand the advances necessary to meet his expenses for such purpose, though his efforts may have been fruitless. Ibid. Art. 1779.

149. On the assurer paying the damage sustained, he becomes, pleno jure, subrogated to the rights of the assured, who is responsible if he prejudices the rights of the assurer. Ibid. Art. 1788.

3. Russia.

150. For provisions as to the commercial code of Russia as to marine insurance, see The Nautical Magazine for February, 1885, Vol. 54, No. 2, p. 191.

151. For provisions of the commercial code of Russia, that all difference between assurer and assured shall be examined, adjudged, and decided by two arbitrators selected by the disputants from merchants carrying on wholesale exterior trade, with power to appoint an umpire, and that the decision of the arbitrator and umpire shall be final and without appeal, Ibid. Art. 1233, p. 190.

2. As to the sufficiency of the appointment of masters abroad for the purpose of giving valid bottomry bonds, see tit. BOTTOMRY, Pt. I. p. 118, No. 123a, and p. 2349, Nos. 6—11.

3. Dismissal (and see p. 1118).

3. Held, in an action by the majority of owners, against the master and part owner, that the master must be removed, and order made against him accordingly. Adams v. Crouch, Marsden Rep. anno 1771, p. 117.

3a. As to effect of wrongful discharge, see tit. WAGES, p. 2296.

5. Authority (and see p. 1120).

4. A master has no authority to bind his owners by writing forward to a broker in a foreign port, prior to the ship's arrival there, authorizing the broker to charter his ship. The authority of a master to bind his owners by charter-party arises when he is in a foreign port, and his owners are not there, and there is difficulty in communicating with them. The Fanny, The Matilda, 5 Asp. 75; 48 L. T. 771. (C. A.)

5. A master is not the agent for his owners to hold out a person as authorized to charter his ship, so as to bind the owners. Ibid.

6. If the master makes a particular engagement or warranty relating to the conveyance of merchandise, according to the usual employment of the ship, the owners will be bound thereby, although made without their consent. Ringuist v. Ditchell, 3 Esp. 64; 2 Camp. 556, n.

7. A captain of a ship has no authority, as such, to agree to the substitution of another voyage in the place of one agreed upon between his owners and the freighters in England, and on which he which infected the ship, went ashore for medical advice, and remained there until another master was, with his consent, appointed. Held, that he had thereby assented to his own discharge. The Cornelia Henrietta, No. 2881, January 1866, R. & M., and for further facts, see p. 1727, note 43.

has sailed to a foreign country. Burgon v. Sharpe, 2 Camp. 529.

8. Where the owner has let the ship to freight for a specific voyage, the master is the agent of the freighter. James v. Jones, 3 Esp. 27.

9. The master only becomes agent for the owners of the cargo, ex necessitate rei. Durants v. Hart, The Hamburgh, 10 Jur. N.S. 600; 33 L. J. Adm. 116; 12 W. R. 628; 10 L. T. N.S. 200, P. C. See also tit. GOODS, CARRIAGE OF—, Pt. XI. p. 611, Nos. 1202, 1203.

9a. As to the mate's authority as representing the master, when the latter is on shore, see The Northampton, 1 Spinks' Eccl. & Adm. Rep. 157, and tit. OWNERS, p. 1232, No. 478.

10. The master is not a fellow-servant of the sailors, but is the agent or representative of the owners of the vessel during the voyage, and the owners are responsible for the injury to or death of a sailor resulting from the negligence of the master during the voyage. Ramsay v. Quinn, 8 C. L. 322. [IRISH.]

11a. As to the powers of correction of seamen by masters, see tit. SEAMEN, Pt. IV. p. 2160.

6. Duties and Responsibilities.

1. Generally (and see p. 1122).

12. For provisions as to the duty of masters to answer inquiries and produce documents on request of every officer of the Board of Trade, commissioned officer on full pay, British consular officer, superior officer of customs, superintendent of a mercantile marine office, or the registrar-general of seamen, having reason to suspect that any law relating to merchant seamen and navigation are not complied with, penalty for breach not exceeding £20, see M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 13.

13. Personal action by owner against master in a cause of damages. Taylor v. Thompson, anno 1714; Marsden, Rep. p. 302.

13a. As to forfeiture of or deductions from wages, see tit. WAGES, pp. 2303, 2307, 2308.

14. As to master's responsibility in reference to damage to submarine telegraph cables, see tit. OWNERS in Addenda, Pt. II. c. 10a, p. 2475.

14a. As to the suspension and cancellation of masters' certificates in respect of shipping casualties, see tit. SHIPPING CASUALTIES INVESTIGATIONS, p. 2205; in respect of unsafe ships, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. p. 1258, and Ibid. in Addenda, p. 2477; and in respect of deck cargoes and grain-laden ships, Ibid. Pt. V. p. 1323, and Ibid. in Addenda, p. 2494.

7. Accounts.

2. Under M. S. Act, 1854 (and see p. 1125).

15. A master, with the assent of the owners, drew bills on the charterers for necessaries supplied. The charterers having failed, the holders, in July, 1881, obtained judgment against the master during his absence at sea. The owners sold the vessel to the defendants in October, 1881. On the 23rd November, 1881, the master, without having satisfied the judgment, issued a writ against the vessel, and bail was put in. Held, that the action would lie, and that there had been no laches to prevent the master from maintaining it. The Fairport, 8 P. D. 48; 52 L. J. P. D. 21; 5 Asp. 62, 349.

15a. Where a master has incurred a liability to pay for necessaries supplied to the ship, such liability is a disbursement within section 10 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, and gives a maritime lien. Ibid.

16. By charter-party, it was agreed that the owners of the ship should provide and pay for provisions and wages, and that the charterers should provide and pay for coals and other expenses. The master was to be appointed by, and was to follow the instructions of the charterer. The master, with notice of the charter-party, ordered and made himself liable for provisions and coals for the vessel at a foreign port. These were necessary for the voyage. Held, in an action by the master against the vessel, that he was entitled to recover for the provisions, but not for the coals, as, by the terms of the charter-party, he had no power to pledge the owner's credit in respect of them. The Turgot, 11 P. D. 21.

17. A ship was chartered under a charter-party which provided that the master should be appointed by the charterers, that the owners were to provide and pay for all provisions and wages of the master and crew, and for the necessary equipment and working of the ship, and that the master was to be dismissed by the owners, if he did not give satisfaction. The charterers were to provide and pay for all coals, pilotages, port charges, &c. Held, that the master was still the servant of the shipowners, and had a right in rem for his wages, and for repayment of such disbursements as were necessary for the navigation of the ship, and which the charterers had not undertaken to pay. The Beeswing, 53 L. T. 554. (C. A.)

18. Semble, where the master is the servant of the charterers, and not of the shipowners, he has no claim against the owners in respect of wages and disbursements. Ibid.

19. A master on his appointment agreed with the managing owner that he the master should find the provisions for the officers and crew at a certain rate per day. The master subsequently agreed with the managing owner, who was also a ship's storedealer, that the managing owner should supply the provisions, and should charge them against moneys of the master which he held in his hands. The managing owner, however, debited his co-owners with the costs of the provisions, and fraudulently applied the money to his own purposes. Held, in an action in rem against the owners by the master to recover wages and disbursements, that the master was entitled to credit for such an amount in the settlement of his accounts with the owners, the fraudulent application of his money by the managing owner being a wrong done to the co-owners for which he was not responsible. The Dora Tully, 5 Asp. 550.

20. A ship was chartered under a charterparty, providing that the master was to be appointed and dismissed by the charterers, that the shipowners were to provide and pay for all provisions and wages of the master and crew, and for the necessary equipment for the efficient working of the ship, and that the charterers were to pay for all coals, port charges, and other expenses. The master brought an action in rem against the ship in respect of disbursements for provisions and coals, and in respect of which latter item gave a draft on the shipowners, which draft was dishonoured. Held, that the master, having notice of the charterparty, was agent for both owners and charterers in respect of the liabilities of each as determined by the charter, and that therefore the owners were liable in respect of the provisions but not in respect of the coals. The Turgot, 11 P. D. 21; 5 Asp. 548.

21. As to the priority over other liens of the master's liens for his accounts, see tit. LIENS, p. 831; and Ibid. in Addenda, p. 2448, Nos. 3 and 7.

2. Jurisdiction (and see p. 1132).

3. A mortgagee sold the vessel under his power of sale contained in his mortgage deed, but by mistake a discharge of the original mortgage was indorsed on the mortgage deed, and when the purchaser presented his bill of sale registration of it was refused. The mortgagee and vendee instituted an action to have the vendee pronounced to be the sole owner. The court held, it had jurisdiction to entertain the case and subsequently decreed as prayed. The Rose, L. R. 4 A. & E. 6; 42 L. J. Adm. 11; 1 Asp. N.S. 567.

Part II.—FRENCH LAW.

1. Owner's Liability.

1. The owner is personally and directly liable to the creditor for necessaries for the ship, though the master may have ordered them in his own name. D. A. 201. But this is subject to the owner's right of abandonment, as to which, see 42—44, infra.

2. Held, that an action by the material man lies against the owner of a new vessel, when the material man has furnished the vessel with necessaries for the fitting out of the vessel, at the order of the master, or according to accounts settled by him, even though in the place of residence of the owner. Such liability is not impaired by the fact that the contractor for the building and fitting out of the vessel, had engaged to provide the necessaries in question, if the material man was in ignorance of the contract. Havre, February 8, 1869, J. H. 1869 : 1 : 110.

3. The dealers who furnished victuals to the men, before sailing, without the order or the consent of the master, have neither privilege nor action against the owners, unless they prove that no victuals were provided on board. D. A. 258.

4. Held, that an action lies against the owner of a vessel for necessaries furnished to the master at sea at a moment of distress, although at the time the vessel was in the employment of a charterer, but this is subject to recourse by the owner against the charterer. Marseilles, July 7, 1865, J. H. 1866 : 2 : 119.

2. Master's Authority.

5. The master is the agent of the owner in the employment of the ship. As such, by virtue of his functions, he has authority to bind the owner for all that is requisite for the vessel and the voyage, except in the places of residence of the owner or his agent. See Articles 223, 232, 233, 321, C. C. ; D. A. 200 ; Caumont, vo. Capitaine, Nos. 41—45.

6. Held, by several decisions, that the owner is bound to pay bills of exchange drawn in the course of the voyage by the master, "Value in settlement of the accounts of the vessel." See the authorities in Caumont, vo. Capitaine, Nos. 47, 48. See D. A. 201.

7. The master in the place of residence of the owners and their agents cannot, without their special permission, order repairs to the hull, purchase sails, ropes, tackle, or other things for the ship, nor borrow money on the ship, nor charter it. See C. C. Art. 232.

8. The master is considered as "in the place of residence of the owners and their agents for the purpose of Art. 232, C. C., when he is within the 'arrondissement maritime,' " in which they have their domicile or present residence. D. A. 361.

9. The "arrondissement maritime" is a territorial division of considerable extent, limiting the jurisdiction of the respective maritime authorities.

10. It follows from A. 232, C. C., that the material man who has dealt knowingly with the master contrary to its prohibition, is not, by the operation of the contract itself, entitled to a direct action against such owners as were personally or by an agent present within the limits of the "arrondissement maritime" in which the port is situate. D. A. 362.

11. But if the material man were kept in ignorance of their residence there, he would have his action against the owners, and the owners would be entitled to recover against the master. Ibid.

12. Moreover, the material man, though aware of the residence there of the owners or their agents, would be entitled to recover against them to the amount of the benefit they have received from necessary work, materials or victuals provided by him. Ibid.

13. The master, if he has paid the material man, would have the same remedy. Ibid.

14. Beyond the arrondissement maritime of the residence of the owner or his agent referred to in Article 232, C. C., the master requires no special authority to enable him to order work or necessaries for the vessel. So far as outsiders are concerned, he derives the requisite authority from his office of master.

15. Article 234, C. C., which requires certain forms to be observed where the master bottomries the vessel, or sells or pledges the goods, is no derogation from such authority. That article is generally considered as intended to provide him with special and conclusive means of justifying his conduct where he has thought it necessary or expedient to do so. Caumont, vo. Capitaine, No. 45.

3. Master's Liability.

16. The master, unless he has personally bound himself (D. A. 201, Caumont, vo. Capitaine, 49, 50) for the payment of the debt, is not liable to the creditor for debts lawfully contracted within the limits of his authority, and in the fulfilment of his duty. For example, the master cannot be condemned personally to pay bills of exchange dishonoured by the owner, and which had been drawn by him, the master, as master only, to the knowledge of the creditor. D. A. 201, Caumont, vo. Capitaine, Nos. 47, 48.

16a. The vessel, though chartered, is subject to the abandonment of the owner, liable to the material men who have given credit to the apparent owner, and have a privileged claim upon the vessel. Caumont, vo. Abandon Maritime, No. 37.

17. Held, however, by several courts, that it is otherwise where the creditors were aware that the vessel was chartered, and the voyage was not for the account of the owner. See the authorities in Caumont, Ibid. No. 38. Contra, Caumont, Ibid.

4. Privileged Claims in the Nature of Liens.

1. Generally.

18. The privileges established by Article 191 on the vessel are secured by no special lien. They reach the vessel through the owner, and are, in point of remedy and process, not more favoured than any of the other claims against him when prosecuted against the vessel. Though a vessel, from being a movable (meuble) is classed as personal property, it has, in consequence of its value and importance, character, and employment, been submitted by the Code de Commerce for the protection of the creditors, to a temporary jus in re, which allows them to follow it until the claims against it have been extinguished or expunged in the proper manner. Arts. 190, 193, C. C.

See also No. 20, infra.

2. Proof.

19. Art. 192, C. C., disallows the privileges granted by Art. 191, where the creditors do not produce and prove their claims in the manner which it requires.

3. Creation and Ranking.

20. Art. 191, C. C., grants a privilege of preference, ranking No. 7, for "the sums lent to the master for the wants of the vessel during the last voyage, and for the price of the goods sold by him for the same object," and ranking No. 8 for "the sums due to the vendors, material men, and workmen employed in the building of the vessel if it has made no voyage, and for the sums due to creditors for materials for work and labour, for caulking, victualling, fitting out and equipment, before the departure of the vessel, if it has already made a voyage." See the Order of ranking of liens in Art. 191, C. C.

21. The terms of No. 7 are to be construed liberally. The privilege is admitted as well in favour of simple loans as for bottomry or respondentia loans, and in whatever lawful form they may appear, and without the creditor having to prove, that the credit he has given has been properly employed, D. A. 246.

It is extended also to the creditors, who, by order of the master, have provided the men in the course of the voyage with lodging, victuals, washing, attendance, medicines, &c., in case of sickness, all which are considered as loans to the master for the last voyage, coming under No. 7, D. A. 246 and 247.

22. It may be said to apply also to all necessaries furnished during the course of the voyage, but this privilege of No. 7 exists only for the credit given during the last voyage, and not for those previous to the voyage, nor for any preceding voyage. See Art. 191, C. C. No. 7, and D. A. 246.

23. The creditors applying for the privilege of No. 7 need not prove that the necessaries or money for which they claim have been properly employed, but only that they were necessary; whatever use may have been made of them, innocent creditors should not suffer by the dishonesty of the master. D. A. 246 and 250.

24. Art. 291, C. C., substituting under preference No. 8, where the vessel has made a voyage, the creditors for necessaries to the vendor, builders, etc., would seem to have been drafted under the impression that repairs, victuals, &c. would never be required for the vessel before it has been to sea; such is, however, not always the case, especially where the vessel has remained a long time in the port where it has been built. Where any of the creditors coming under the two sets ranking under No. 8 happen to concur, they are to be marshalled together pro rata on the whole price of the vessel. D. A. 254.

25. But though the claims mentioned in Art. 191, C. C., would always be marshalled in the same order respectively, they may occupy a more remote rank in the distribution than is given to them in Art. 191. The special privileges on the ship enumerated in that article come in the distribution after the general privileges of Art. 2101 of the Civil Code; Caumont, vo. Navire, No. 17.

26. The order in which the privileged claims obtain preference is that established by the law, which depends upon the favour they deserve, except as to the privileged claims No. 7. It is questionable whether such as are in the same rank are to be marshalled together or by order of date. See Dutruc, vo. Navire, No. 115.

27. But each successive loan or credit for necessaries is considered as having preserved the common security of the preceding creditors. The later the claim, therefore, the more worthy of preference, if incurred for successive necessities (in successive ports, says Caumont, vo. Navire, No. 31). Should different credits have been given for the same repairs they would be marshalled in the same rank, and be paid pro rata. D. A. 249.

28. Should the vessel be broken up by wreck, or any other cause, the claims enumerated in Art. 191, C. C., have their privileges on its remains, but after the salvage dues and expenses, which take precedence over all the other privileges. D. A. 282.

4. Arrest.

29. Whether a vessel may be provisionally arrested, as other movables (meubles) may be, is a question which is not decided by any text of law of France, and upon which the authorities differ, the majority, however, inclining to consider the arrest as lawful. Confer D. A. 99 et seq., Caumont, vo. Navire, 57 and 67.

30. A vessel on the point of sailing cannot be arrested except for debts contracted for the voyage on which it is sailing, and, even in that case, giving bail for the debts prevents the seizure. The vessel is accounted to be on the point of sailing when the master has his papers for the voyage. Art. 215, C. C.

5. Extinction.

(a) By Judicial Sale.

31. A judicial sale accomplished according to the forms prescribed under the second title of the second book of the Code of Commerce extinguishes, ipso facto, all claims upon the vessel, and gives a clean title to the purchaser. Art. 193, C. C.

(b) By Voluntary Sale.

32. A voluntary sale of the vessel in the course of a voyage is entirely inoperative as against the creditors; but where the vessel is not in the course of a voyage when sold, the sale effects an inchoate exclusion of the rights of the creditors. To complete this exclusion, the vessel must have accomplished, under the name and at the risk of the purchasers such a voyage as will satisfy Art. 194, C. C. See Art. 193, C. C., D. A. 286, 300 et seq.; Caumont, vo. Navire, 42; Dutruc, vo. Navire, 171 et seq.

33. The law does not require the sale to take place in the port of registry. If a sale takes place in a port where the voyage is to begin, or where it has ended, Art. 193, C. C., will apply; D. A. 300; Dutruc, vo. Navire, 181.

34. A voyage of thirty days, under the name, and at the risk of the purchaser, is accounted sufficient by Art. 194, C. C., if it has begun and ended in two different ports, otherwise an absence of sixty days or more is necessary. When that term has elapsed, without opposition of the creditors, their lien is expunged, whether the voyage has or has not terminated, or whether the vessel has or has not entered port. Art. 194, C. C.

35. Entering a neighbouring port for repairs is not accounted ending the voyage. Dutruc, Ibid. No. 179.

36. But the distance, however short, between the two ports, is immaterial. Dutruc, Ibid. No. 178.

37. For the voyage to be accounted as having been made in the name, and at the risk of the purchaser, according to Art. 198, C. C., in such a manner as to give the creditors an opportunity of protecting their rights, the instrument of sale must be endorsed on the certificate of registry (Acte de Francisation), and the congé necessary before leaving port must have been applied for and obtained in the name of the purchaser. Caumont, vo. Navire, No. 42, and the authorities therein; and Francisation, No. 7.

38. Held, however, that the congé need not mention the name of the purchaser if it appear on the Acte de Francisation. Collin v. Tamisie, D. A. 288.

39. An apparent or fictitious sale, made for the purpose of creating a lien on the vessel, operates as well as a real sale for the purpose of expunging the privileges when followed by the requisite voyage, Dutruc, Ibid. 171.

40. The voluntary sale of a vessel is required by the first paragraph of Art. 195, C. C. "to be made in writing; it may be either by a notarial, or a private contract." This requirement, however, is not to be construed as absolute, except with reference to outsiders. D. A. 91.

41. So far as the creditors are concerned, a sale not in writing is inoperative, so, also, where the sale has not been inscribed on the certificate of registry (Acte de Francisation), Caumont, vo. Navire, No. 45.

(c) By Abandonment.

42. The owner who has not bound himself personally may exonerate himself from all liability for the acts and engagements of the master concerning the vessel, except for the premium of insurance on the vessel (Caumont, vo. Abandon Maritime, No. 39), by abandoning to the creditors the vessel and the freight (Art. 216, C. C.); it is otherwise if he has given special authority (see D. A. 209, Caumont, vo. Arma-teur, No. 45, Abandon, Nos. 33, 34, 35), or expressly ratified the engagement. Caumont, Ibid. Nos. 33, 52; D. A. 209.

43. If the master is part owner, abandonment discharges him for the proportion exceeding that of his interest in the vessel. D. A. 206; Caumont, vo. Arma-teur, 45.

44. The abandonment of the vessel by the owners to the creditors, under Art. 216, C. C., does not include that of the indemnity due to the owner by the underwriter, which, notwithstanding the abandonment, the owner is entitled to retain. The effect of the abandonment to the creditors of an insured vessel, which the assured has likewise abandoned to the underwriters is to charge the underwriter who has accepted it, and does not himself abandon the vessel to the creditors, with the liabilities which have to be discharged out of the value of the vessel. D. A. 220, 221; Caumont, vo. Abandon Maritime, Nos. 3, 19, 57, and vo. Assurances Maritimes, No. 521.

5. Limitation of Actions.

1. Generally.

45. All actions for victuals provided by the order of the master, as for wood or other necessaries furnished for the building, equipment and victualling, are limited by the lapse of one year from the time when they have been furnished. Art. 433, C. C.

46. But several authorities contend that the defendant may be required to make oath that the debt has really been paid. D. A. 2268.

2. Acknowledgment.

47. The limitation may be extended by the issue of proper legal process or by a voluntary acknowledgment of the debt. Whether the term requisite for limitation, after such an interruption, is the same as before, namely, one year, or whether it is the general term of thirty years is not yet settled. D. A. 2269.

9. Deck and Load-Lines.

- (a) Generally (and see p. 1195).

3. As to the report of Sir J. E. Reed's load-line committee as to freeboard, with tables of freeboard recommended by the committee, amended for steam and sailing ships, see Board of Trade Instructions to Surveyors as to Freeboard, of Jan. 1886.

3a. The rules and tables give minimum freeboards applicable to ships of the highest class only, and no ships except of the highest class are to be loaded so deeply as those rules and tables allow. See notice of the Board, in Board of Trade Instructions to Surveyors as to Freeboard, of January, 1886, p. 2.

3b. For suggestions and agreements between the Board of Trade and the Committee of Lloyd's, as to the construction and application of certain of the load-line rules, see notes to the tables of freeboard. Ibid.

4. The Board of Trade will not assign a load-line for any ship, whether classed or unclassified. Ibid. p. 1.

4a. Ships having insufficient freeboards, and ships having freeboards according to the above tables, but which freeboards, having regard to the time of year or voyage are deemed by Board of Trade surveyors insufficient, will be liable to detention. 26. Non-qualified Owner becoming entitled.
(a) Order for Sale (and see p. 1205).

5. The court ordered the sale of a British ship, the property in which had become vested in a person not qualified under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), to be the owner. The Meggie, L. R. 1 A. & E. 77.

8. Sale of Ship.

2. From Builder (and see p. 1215).

6. The principles applicable to the sale of part of a ship are equally applicable to the sale of part of any corpus manufactum in course of construction, and it follows that it is competent for parties to agree for a valuable consideration that a specific article shall be sold and become the property of the purchaser as soon as it has reached a certain stage, but it is a question of construction in each case at what stage the property shall pass, and a question of fact whether that stage has been reached. On the other hand, materials provided by the builders as portions of the fabric, whether wholly or partially finished, cannot be regarded as appropriated to the contract or as "sold," unless they have been "affixed," or, in a reasonable sense, made part of the corpus. Seath v. Moore, 11 App. Cas. 350—H. L.

6a. See the cases of Wood v. Bell in tit. OWNERS, Pt. I. p. 1216, No. 331, and Woods v. Russell, Ibid. p. 1217, No. 342 (except as to rudder and cordage); Clark v. Spence, No. 7, infra, and Tripp v. Armitage, 4 M. & W. 687, as to the building of a hotel, reviewed and approved in Seath v. Moore, 11 App. Cas. 350—H. L.

7. P. contracted with a shipbuilder to build him a ship for a certain sum, to be paid by instalments as the work proceeded. An agent for P. was to superintend the building, and all the materials were approved by him before they were used. Two instalments became due and were paid, and the builder subsequently became bankrupt, but his assignees finished the vessel, and the subsequent instalments were tendered. In an action of trover by P. against the assignees of the builder, held, that on the first instalment being paid the property in the portion then finished became vested under the contract in P., subject to the builder's right to retain it to complete the ship, that each material subsequently added became, as it was added, the property of P. as the general owner, and that under these circumstances the ship did not pass to the assignees as in the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Clarke v. Spence, 4 Ad. & Ell. 448.

6. What Property passes (and see p. 1216).

8. The decisions in Woods v. Russell as to rudder and cordage, No. 342, p. 1217, in tit. OWNERS, Pt. I., disapproved in Seath v. Moore, 11 App. Cas. 350—H. L.

Part II.—GENERAL AND SUNDRY RESPONSIBILITIES OF OWNERS AND THEIR REPRESENTATIVES.

6. Acts of Harbour and Dock Masters (and see p. 1233).

9. The R. was anchored in Falmouth outer harbour, having to be beached in the inner harbour. S., the harbour-master, instructed the master where the R. was to beach, and came on board her the next morning before she left the outer harbour. To reach the spot where she was to beach, the R. had to proceed over water out of the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners. While in such water, S. ordered the lowering of her anchor, and the R. grounded on it. In an action against the harbour commissioners and S., held, that S. was guilty of negligence, that he was acting within the scope of his authority as harbour-master, and that, therefore, the commissioners were liable as well as S. The Rhosina, 10 P. D. 24; Ibid. C. A. 131; 54 L. J. P. D. 42; 5 Asp. 350. Held, further, by the court below, that S. was personally liable even though a volunteer. Ibid.

7a. Under the Employers' Acts.

10. O., a labourer, was in the service of the defendants for a considerable period, and in September, 1882, was acting as fireman on board a screw steamer belonging to them and employed on the Firth and Clyde canal, and perished in a collision between that steamer and another vessel. Action for damages by the widow of O. against the owners of the steamer; defence, that O.'s death was caused by the fault of his fellow-servants, and that the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (c. 42), did not apply. Held, overruling the decision of the court below, that the term "seaman" in the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), did not apply to a person employed on board a vessel plying in a canal or artificial water, and that such person was a labourer within the meaning of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880 (c. 42), for that the word ship, as defined in the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), meant every description of vessel used in navigating the seas. Oakes v. The Monkland Iron Co., Court of Session, 21 February, 1884.

10a. Submarine Telegraph Cables.

1. Generally.

12. For the convention between Great Britain and Germany, the Argentine Confederation, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Costa Rica, Denmark, the Dominican Republic, Spain, the United States, Colombia, France, Guatemala, Greece, Italy, Turkey, the Netherlands, Luxemburg, Persia, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Salvador, Servia, Sweden, Norway, and Uruguay, for the protection of telegraphic communication by submarine telegraphs, see the Convention annexed to and confirmed by the Submarine Telegraph Act, 1885 (c. 49), s. 2.

12a. The convention applies outside territorial waters to all legally established submarine cables landed on the territories, colonies, or possessions of one or more of the high contracting parties. Ibid. Art. 1.

13. It is a punishable offence to break or injure a submarine cable, wilfully or by culpable negligence, so that it might interrupt or obstruct telegraphic communication, wholly or partially, except in saving life or property, and after necessary precautions. Ibid. s. 2.

13a. As to the punishment for such offences being without prejudice to any civil action for damages, Ibid.

14. As to the punishment of such offences when committed by British subjects, Ibid. s. 3.

14a. If any vessel engaged in the laying or repairing of a submarine cable to which the convention for the time being applies, interferes contrary to the regulations or articles with any vessel engaged in fishing, or if the operations of any vessel in connection with any such submarine cable are wilfully delayed so as to interfere with sea fishing, the master of the vessel, or the owner thereof, if he was in fault, is guilty of a breach of the regulations, and may be punished accordingly. Ibid. s. 5 (2).

15. As to the provisions of this act being in addition to and not in derogation of other provisions for the protection of submarine cables, but so that no person shall be punished or required to pay compensation twice for the same offence or injury, Ibid. s. 10.

15a. The convention remains in force for five years, and afterwards and until denounced twelve months before its expiration, it shall continue in force for a year, and so on from year to year. If one of the signatory powers denounce the convention, such denunciation shall have effect only as regards that power. See the Convention Act, Art. 16.

16. The convention is applicable to the colonies and possessions of her Britannic Majesty, with the exception of Canada, Newfoundland, the Cape, Natal, New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, Tasmania, South Australia, Western Australia, and New Zealand. Ibid. (Add. Art.).

17. But the stipulations of the convention shall be applicable to any of the above-named colonies on whose behalf notice is given by Great Britain to the French Minister for Foreign Affairs. Ibid.

18. Each of the colonies which may have acceded to the convention may withdraw from it. Ibid.

2. Jurisdiction.

19. As to the tribunals competent to take cognizance of infractions of the convention being those of the country to which the vessel on board of which the offence was committed belongs; or, where this cannot apply, by each of the contracting states in accordance with their laws or international treaties, see the Convention Act, Art. 8.

19a. As to prosecutions being in the name of the state, and being summary, Ibid. Arts. 9 and 11.

20. As to the officers empowered to enforce the convention, penalties for obstruction or disobedience, the limitation of actions against them, tender of amends, the courts in which such actions are to be brought, and the application thereto of Part X. of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and the enactments amending the same, Ibid. s. 6.

3. Master deemed Offender.

21. As to the master of the vessel or boat by means of which the offence was committed being deemed the offender until some other person is shown to have been in charge of and navigating the vessel or boat, Ibid. s. 9.

4. Evidence.

22. As to documents drawn up in pursuance of Arts. 7 or 10 of the convention being admissible in evidence in any proceedings civil or criminal, and as to the punishment for forgery thereof, Ibid. s. 8.

23. As to the evidence in proof of offences, and the right to demand from the master official documents proving the nationality of the vessel, Ibid. Art. 10.

5. Compensation for Losses in avoiding Telegraph Cables.

24. Owners of ships or vessels who can prove that they have sacrificed an anchor, a net, or other fishing gear in order to avoid injuring a submarine cable shall receive compensation from the owner of the cable. Ibid. Art. 7.

24a. As to the statement confirming the claim supported by the evidence of the crew to be drawn up immediately after the occurrence, and to the declaration to be made by the master within twenty-four hours after his return to, or next putting into port, and to the communication of the information to the consular authorities of the country to which the owner of the cable belongs, Ibid.

11. Sea-going Fishing Vessels.

1. Generally* (and see p. 1235).

25. As to the registry of sea fishing boats, see the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22), s. 8.

25a. As to the lettering, numbering, and registering of British sea-going fishing vessels, see Order in Council of 3rd May, 1884, in 15 Hertslet's Collection of Treaties, p. 649.

26. For the purpose of giving jurisdiction to courts under this act, a sea fishing-boat shall be deemed to be a ship within the meaning of any act relating to offences committed on board a ship, and every court shall have the same jurisdiction over a foreign sea fishing-boat, within the exclusive fishery limits of the British Islands, and persons belonging thereto, as such court would have if the boat were a British sea fishing-boat. See the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22), s. 18.

26a. If any convention, treaty, or arrangement respecting sea fisheries is made between her Majesty and any foreign state, her Majesty may, by Order in Council, direct that all or any of the provisions of this act shall apply to the fishing vessels of such foreign state, and they shall apply accordingly. Ibid. s. 23.

26b. When the provisions of this act are so applied to any convention in substitution of the convention in the first schedule to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79, the convention in such schedule shall, after the date fixed by such Order in Council, be repealed, but until then shall continue in force within the limits therein mentioned. Ibid. s. 24.

27. As to the application of the act generally, and so far as regards foreign sea fishing-boats outside of the exclusive fishery limits of the British Islands, and persons belonging thereto, and to foreign sea fishery officers, Ibid. s. 25.

27a. As to who may be British and foreign sea-fishery officers under this act, and as to the powers of British sea fishery officers, Ibid. ss. 11—14.

27b. Any compensation specified in a document signed in accordance with Art. 33 of the first schedule to this act, or fixed by a sea fishery officer in accordance with any submission to arbitration, may be recovered as a simple contract debt,

* (2) The principal Sea Fisheries Acts are the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 79; the Sea Fisheries Act) and in England may also be recovered as a civil debt before a court of summary jurisdiction. Ibid. s. 15, sub-s. 2.

1868 (c. 45); the Act of 1875 (c. 15); the Act of 1883 (c. 22); and the Act of 1885 (c. 70).

28. In a proceeding against any person for the recovery of such compensation, the formal document referred to in Art. 33, or an award of a sea fishery officer, in pursuance of a submission to arbitration signed by the person liable to pay such compensation, shall be sufficient evidence that such person is liable to pay the compensation specified in such document or award. Ibid. s. 15.

28a. As to service of process, evidence, and the recovery of fines and forfeitures in proceedings under the act, Ibid. ss. 17, 19, 20.

28b. As to the courts in which offences under this act may be prosecuted (in England, before a justice or justices, under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49); in Scotland, Ireland, and the Isles of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, and Sark; and as to the right of appeal where imprisonment is awarded without the option of a fine, or the sum adjudged exceeds £5; and as to the courts of appeal (in England, quarter sessions), see the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883 (c. 22), p. 16.

29. Where, on the conviction of any person under this act for an offence, it appears to the court that any injury to person or property has been caused by the offence, the court may by such conviction adjudge the person convicted to pay, in addition to any fine, a reasonable sum as compensation for such injury, and such sum may be recovered as a fine under this act, and when recovered shall be paid to the person injured. Ibid. s. 15, sub-s. 1.

29a. As to the rights of owners of fishing vessels suffering damage through the laying of submarine telegraph cables, see Nos. 13 and 24, supra.

Part III.—UNSAFE AND UNSEAWORTHY SHIPS.

1. Unsafe Ships (British).

14. Inquiries.

(a) Generally.

32. For the statutory provisions as to unsafe British ships, and their detention for survey, see tit. OWNERS, Pt. III. p. 1258.

32a. As to courts of survey, Ibid. p. 1265.

33. As to the wreck commissioner's and other courts for inquiries into casualties to ships, see tit. SHIPPING CASUALTIES INVESTIGATIONS, c. 3, p. 2198.

34. As to explosions of coal gas in ships, Ibid. p. 2213.

34a. As to spontaneous combustion of coal in ships, Ibid. p. 2225.

35. The three-masted iron ship B., of 1,429 tons gross register, laden with 1,700 tons of jute and twenty-five tons of linseed, and bound from Calcutta for Dundee, on her way through the Bay of Bengal, and as well before as after passing the Cape, experienced severe weather, and laboured and strained considerably, and she had a strong list to starboard, although there was no water in the well. Search was made, and the middle soil pipe (the vessel had six water-closets, three on each side) on the starboard side was found to be broken through, with the exception of about three-quarters of an inch at the top; and a large quantity of water was coming through the tube into the between decks. The pipe was cut and the outlet plugged, and the inflow of the water stopped. The pipes of the other four water-closets were found more or less damaged and letting the water through, and they were all plugged. There was but one sound pipe. It took the crew seven days to get at and plug the five pipes, and they had to throw overboard from 1,400 to 1,500 bales of jute out of 9,800 bales, the damage sustained by the cargo being between £8,000 and £9,000. Held, that the fracture of one of the soil pipes which caused the principal damage was due partly to the working and straining of the ship, and partly to the force of the waves beating into the open mouth of the pipes. No blame was attributed to the owners, master, or officers for the casualty, but the court was of opinion that when the outlets of the soil pipes are under water or awash, the lower parts thereof, for a length of about 18 inches, should be of iron or gun metal, and that the outlets should be protected by storm-valves placed inside the pipes 9 or 10 inches from the outside. The Broomhall, 7th March, 1877.

35a. Loss with all hands of the iron screw steamer E., of 356 tons gross register. She left London in February for Portsmouth with a cargo of machinery and boilers, of the estimated weight of about 426 tons, and twenty-six tons of bunker coal. Two of the six boilers carried as part of the cargo were stowed on deck over the forward hatchways, extending to within 15 inches of the bulwarks, and with their tops reaching 10 or 11 feet above the deck. The other four boilers were stowed in the after part of the main hold, one of them riding on two others, and rising out of the main hatchway to a height of 9 feet above the deck. Other portions of the cargo were also stowed in this hatchway and on each side of it filling up the whole space between the bulwarks and coamings, the whole forming a mass extending about 40 feet forward of the bridge. To enable the crew to work the vessel three planks 9 inches wide were placed along the various pieces of this cargo. There was nothing to prevent the cargo from getting adrift when the vessel pitched heavily, there being no eye bolts in the deck to secure it. Held, that the vessel was seaworthy as to hull, equipments, and machinery, but that her deck cargo was not properly placed or secured, inasmuch as it prevented the crew from getting about the deck, obstructed the view from the bridge, and was liable in a seaway to get adrift; that the vessel's freeboard of about 1 foot 2 inches or 1 foot 4 inches in salt water was wholly insufficient; that it was not possible, with the cargo stowed as it was, to put the tarpaulins on the hatchways, so as to prevent the water from getting into the hold, and that this, with the ship's low freeboard and small stability, was an element of great danger; that the vessel was unstable as laden, and that the owner was to blame for having sent the ship to sea in such a condition, but the court would not condemn him in costs, considering it a wholly inadequate punishment for his offence. The Elephant, 14th May, 1884.

36. In April, 1881, the A., a wooden brig of 201·63 tons register, loaded at Cardiff a cargo of 300 tons of steel rails, but when the loading was completed she was found to be making water. She was therefore placed on the mud for examination, and an open seam being found it was caulked and payed with coal tar instead of pitch. Several other bad places had also to be repaired. On the 30th April the A. was towed to Penarth Roads, still making water, and on the 10th May she sailed for Caravalles, Brazil. On the 25th May the vessel began to leak more, and continued to do so, and on the 6th June the water had increased so rapidly that the master and crew were compelled to abandon the ship, which shortly afterwards foundered. Held, that the A. was not in a good and seaworthy condition when she left Newport, nor when she sailed from Penarth Roads, and that the leaks discovered were not properly repaired; also that the freeboard (2 feet 3 inches) was not sufficient, and that the cargo, having regard to its nature and to the construction and condition of the vessel, was too heavy. Held, also, that the master was not justified in proceeding to sea with the vessel in her then condition, and to be blamed for not taking her into port. The master's certificate suspended for six months. The Eron Vale, July 25, 1881.

36a. Loss by stranding of the iron screw steamer F., of 1,160 tons gross register, bound from Bona, in Algiers, for Leith, with a cargo of between 600 and 700 tons of barley and compressed hay. The F., having fallen short of coals, was steered for Corunna, but while on her way ran on the Pedrido reef, and subsequently became a total wreck. The F. was insured for £21,000, and her value was £14,000. Held, that the casualty was caused by the wrongful if not wilful default of the master, and his certificate was suspended for twelve months. Held, further, that bond fide efforts were not made to get the vessel off, although this might easily have been accomplished, and that there were circumstances of grave suspicion pointing to the existence of a conspiracy on the part of the owner, and his brother, the master, to throw away the vessel. The owner, having endeavoured to throw obstacles in the way of the inquiry, was condemned to pay £70 towards the costs of the inquiry, and £50 towards the costs of the underwriters. The Furius, 11th February, 1886.

37. As to inquiries into machinery and boilers, see tit. SHIPPING CASUALTIES INVESTIGATIONS, c. 4, pp. 2203.

37a. As to insurance connected with inquiries into shipping casualties, Ibid. p. 2204.

(b) *Instability.

38. A vessel of good proportions, having a beam of 21·2 feet as against 9·8 feet depth of hold, and whose masts were afterwards reduced four feet, and her iron bulwarks taken away, held, to have had, under the circumstances, sufficient stability. The Adina, 22nd November, 1880.

39. Mr. W. E. Smith, a naval architect, examined the plans and calculated the vessel's stability, and found that at the time of her leaving New York on her last voyage, "her meta-centre was only six inches above the centre of gravity, and that consequently her margin of stability was extremely small . . . much too small, seeing that she was about to cross the Atlantic." Evidence quoted, with approval, by the Wreck Commissioner, in The Joseph Pease, 9th July, 1880.

40. Mr. White, the author of the well-known treatise on marine architecture, and one of the highest authorities on the subject of the stability of vessels, stated that "he had gone very carefully through the plans and drawings of the vessel, and had made the most minute and careful calculations of her stability when she left San Francisco. Having taken the weights and disposition of the cargo, as deposited to by the master, giving the ship in every instance the benefit of the doubt, they gave as the result that the vessel, when she left San Francisco, had a meta-centric height of only six inches, whereas, in order that she should be reasonably safe, she ought to have had a meta-centric height of from 1 foot to 15 inches; that her angle of maximum stability was 27 degrees, and that at an angle of 49 degrees her stability disappeared; that her maximum righting moment was 1,315 tons; that heeled over to an angle of 16 degrees, which would be the angle of inclination with the gunwale touching the water, 60 tons of water on her deck would be sufficient to balance the righting moment; that with the same angle of heel the quantity of water on her deck might be 180 tons; and that with the rail under she would have a heel of 32 degrees, which was more than the angle of maximum stability, and from which, therefore, it would be impossible for her to right herself." Per the Wreck Commissioner, in The Escambia, 28th November, 1882.

41. A question was raised as to whether a vessel had not as laden so much stability as to make her uneasy and laboursome in a seaway, and evidence was produced as to her having a meta-centric height of 4·4 feet. The vessel, however, had never been inclined, and consequently it was quite impossible to say with accuracy where her centre of gravity was; and without that the meta-centric height would be more or less guess work. An adjournment, therefore, was arranged to allow of the vessel being inclined, and it was subsequently shown that by the disposal and weight of her cargo the meta-centric height would, as estimated, be over four feet. The Wreck Commissioner, being advised that with merchant vessels when laden the meta-centric height ought not to exceed 3 to 3½ feet, held, that the charge of want of stability against this vessel was substantiated. The Palgrave, 15th March, 1886.

42. Mr. White, the naval architect, states that on an average 39 cubic feet of sugar in bags equal in weight 1 ton; 42 cubic feet of coal equal in weight 1 ton; 45 cubic feet of wheat in bulk equal in weight 1 ton; 48 cubic feet of wheat in bags equal in weight 1 ton, therefore a vessel laden with wheat in bags would have its centre of gravity higher, and therefore have less stability than if laden with either wheat in bulk, or with coal, or with sugar in bags. Quoted, with approval, by the Wreck Commissioner in The Escambia, 28th November, 1882.

43. The stability of a vessel depends of course upon the height of the meta-centre above the centre of gravity. The Ballina, per the Wreck Commissioner, 29th March, 1882.

44. The cargo should be so disposed that the ship may be duly poised, and maintain a proper equilibrium, neither too stiff nor too crank—qualities equally pernicious. If too stiff she may carry much sail, whilst her masts are endangered by sudden jerks and excessive labouring. If too crank she will be unfit to carry sail, without the risk of over-setting. Stevens on Stowage, quoted, with approval, by the Wreck Commissioner in the case of The Emblehope, Feb. 14, 1880.

45. Loss by abandonment of the iron screw steamship L., of 878 tons net register, which left the Tyne on a voyage to Genoa with a cargo of 1,773 tons of coal, besides 198 tons of bunker coal. She encountered very strong gales, and on the 28th commenced making water rapidly. The fires were put out, the boats were carried away, and on the 29th the vessel lying on her beam ends, her master and crew abandoned her. Held, that, having regard to the season of the year, and the nature of the intended voyage, to the fact that the vessel had somewhat less than three feet of free-board, and that she was poop-decked, the L. was very greatly overladen; that considering her construction, her high centre of gravity, and her consequent lack of stability, she was not qualified to carry such a cargo, and that the leakage was due to the weight of the cargo and bunker coal in the poop sinking her below the tonnage or main deck for a great part of her length. Held, further, that the loss was attributable to her instability, and to her being too deeply laden. The Lufra, Feb. 13, 1880.

46. Loss with all hands of the iron screw steam ship R., of 1,382 tons register. In January she sailed from Cardiff for Bombay with a cargo of coal, and has not been heard of since. Held, that no means were taken to ascertain the stability of the ship, and the position at which the load-line should be placed; that looking to the construction of the vessel, and the depth to which she was laden, it was very doubtful whether she had sufficient stability for a winter voyage; that she had not sufficient free-board for a voyage across the Bay of Biscay; that her load-line should not have been placed at four feet; but that there was no evidence to show the precise cause of loss. The Rathmore, July 23, 1880.

47. Loss with all hands but one of the iron screw steamship P., of 517 tons net register, bound from Newport, Monmouthshire, for Havre, with 983 tons of coal, and about 124½ tons of bunker coal, of which about 24 or 25 tons was placed on the bridge above the bunker hatches. The weather became stormy, and early the next day the vessel took a sudden list to port, and finally went down. Held, that the casualty was due to the vessel having fallen over on her side, probably owing to the large amount of bunker coal which was stowed on the bridge deck, that the master was chiefly to blame for allowing the coal to be so stowed, and that the managing owner was also to blame for not having taken steps to prevent the coal being so placed. Held, also, that with the bunker coal on her bridge she must have had insufficient stability. The Pelton, April 25, 1882.

48. Loss with all hands of the iron screw steamer E., of 676 tons register, laden with coals, and bound from Cardiff for Marseilles. Held, that the stowage of the cargo was defective for want of shifting boards, and that the facts that the water ballast tank was at least two feet eight inches above the floors, that the 'tween decks were laid throughout, and that the cargo was stowed close to the upper deck, tended to show that the vessel's stability in heavy weather was questionable, but that the evidence was not sufficient to prove how the loss of the vessel actually took place. The Estepona, Dec. 31, 1880.

49. Loss with all hands of the iron screw-steamer K. She sailed in November from the Mersey, bound for Havannah, with cargo and bunker coal on board weighing 2,038 tons. On the afternoon of that day the pilot left her off the Bar Light, and she has not been heard of since. Held, that the load-line which was placed at four feet from the deck, without any calculation being made as to the depth to which the vessel might be safely laden, was not placed in the proper position; that the vessel was overladen, her freeboard being four feet six inches; that looking to the construction of the vessel and depth of loading, and the nature of the cargo, she had not sufficient stability, having a beam of 33 feet, as against a depth of hold of 22·4 feet, and a deck house amidships. The Kensington, March 22, 1880.

50. As to whether owners are bound at their own cost to incline their vessel with a view to prove its stability, see The Palgrave, March 15, 1886.

(c) *Insufficient Freeboard.

51. Loss by foundering with loss of twelve lives, of the steamer C., of 635 tons, which sailed from Cardiff, bound for Malta, with 1,376 tons of coal. The vessel was much injured by a heavy sea, and was thrown on her starboard beam ends. The water came into the engine room, and the fires were put out, and the C. taking a sudden lurch, foundered, and twelve seamen perished. Held, that the steamer was overladen when she left Cardiff, and that her freeboard in salt water which would be 2 feet 1 inch, was insufficient. The Constance, 18th March, 1880.

52. Loss by foundering of an iron screw steamer, the G., of 386 tons net register, which left Swansea on the 28th November, 1882, for Nantes, with a cargo of 100 tons of copper in ingots, and 525 tons of coal besides what she had in her bunkers, her total amount being 685 tons. Her mean draught of water was 12 feet 6 inches. The following morning a heavy gale came on, during which the tarpaulins of the after hatch were washed away, and the water got into the vessel. At 7 a.m. the vessel was settling down by the stern, and the lifeboat was therefore got out. Eight of the crew got into her, but the remainder went down with the vessel. Held, that the vessel was sent to sea too deeply laden, and too much down by the stern; that the upper tarpaulin of the after hatchway was too short, and on its being washed away the water found its way into the hold, and caused the vessel to sink. The managing owner was censured for having without due care and consideration raised the position of the load-line, so that, if loaded down to it, the vessel would have had only 18 inches of freeboard, when she should have had at least 2 feet or more of freeboard, and that she had only about 1 foot 8 inches. He was also blamed for striking out of the charterparty the usual words authorizing the master to supervise the stowage of the cargo, the result being that 100 tons of copper ingots were stowed in the centre of the after-hold, which put the vessel two feet by the stern, giving her a freeboard aft of not more than 9 to 12 inches. The St. George, 5th January, 1883.

53. Abandonment and loss of the wooden vessel, P. T., of 198·88 tons register, built in 1872. In December she sailed from Tucacas with a cargo of 391 tons of copper ore. On the 4th January she encountered a heavy gale, which increased to a hurricane. Gales of more or less violence continued until the 19th, and the vessel being seriously damaged by the heavy seas which struck her, the master and crew abandoned her. Held, that when the vessel left Tucacas her equipment was defective, as she had no spare spars on board; that considering her age, build, and tonnage, and the nature of the voyage, she ought not to have taken so heavy a dead weight cargo as 390 tons of copper ore; that the freeboard was not sufficient, being scarcely 2½ inches to each foot depth of hold, and the master and owner were censured for the overloading. The Penelope Tutton, 4th March, 1881.

54. Held, further, that in vessels engaged in ore trade, some difference of load-line should be insisted upon during the winter months. Ibid.

55. Damage with loss of life to the iron barque P., of 588 tons register. She sailed in October from Liverpool for New Zealand with a general cargo of 1,062 tons, 716 of which was dead weight, consisting of iron goods, being 64 per cent. above the gross tonnage. Shortly after a strong gale came on, and the vessel began to labour heavily. The crew refused work and demanded that she should be put back, and the master returned to Queenstown, where the men were prosecuted and sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment. The P. then proceeded on her voyage. From the 14th November she encountered a succession of heavy gales, in which she sustained considerable damage. The master had retired to his cabin on the plea of illness, leaving the navigation practically to the first mate, who on a persisted application from the crew put back for the Lizard. On the 23rd the mainmast broke and went overboard, carrying with it four men who were aloft, and two were drowned. On the 24th the P. arrived in Mounts Bay, and was shortly afterwards grounded off Penzance. Before the vessel sailed from Liverpool the owners' overlooker raised the load-line about three inches above where it had been placed. In 1879 the load-line was altered from 3 feet 5 inches to 3 feet 6 inches, and subsequently to 3 feet 8 inches. Held, that the vessel was overladen and had not sufficient freeboard, and that the owners were responsible for the act of their agent in raising the load-line; that the damage sustained, though partly due to stress of weather, was also attributable to the great weight of cargo which the vessel had and the depth to which she was sunk, which caused her to roll more heavily than she would have done, and led to the straining and parting of the lanyards, and to the mast going over the side. The owners condemned to pay £100 towards costs. The Pampero, 11th December, 1881.

56. Loss of the iron screw steamer E., of 759 $\frac{2}{3}$ tons register. In February she left the Tyne for Hamburg, with 1,357 tons of cargo coal besides bunker coal, and has not been heard of since. Held, that there was no evidence to show the cause of the loss of the vessel, but that her freeboard of 2 feet 2 inches was not sufficient for a vessel on such a voyage. The Elsie, 2nd June, 1880.

57. The iron schooner A., of 106 tons gross register, built in 1878, left Glasgow bound for Exeter, laden with 176 tons of coal, and was not afterwards heard of. The load-line was put 17 inches below the top of the deck, and the cargo would sink her in salt water about 10 feet

1 inch, leaving a freeboard of about 16 inches. Her co-efficient of fineness was 58°, and according to Mr. Martell's tables her freeboard should have been 18 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches at least. Held, therefore, that her freeboard was wholly insufficient; that she was consequently overladen, and that this was the cause of her loss. The Adina, 22nd Nov. 1880.

See also Nos. 3 and 4, p. 2473, and Nos. 35, 36, 46, and 49, supra, and Nos. 60, 62, 64, 65, 67, 71, 74, 75, 83 and 84, infra.

(d) Overladen.

58. The legislature throws the obligation upon the master as well as upon the owner of seeing that the vessel is not overladen. The Damietta, No. 157, Nov. 14, 1877.

58a. If a vessel has on board a cargo more especially of steel or iron rails, to the extent of thirty-three per cent. above her registered tonnage, she is generally sufficiently laden. The Kate, No. 167, December 12, 1877.

59. Abandonment and loss of the screw-steamer K., of 969 tons gross register. She left Barrow-in-Furness in November, with a cargo of 1,015 tons of steel rails for Riga. She drew 14 ft. 4 forward, and 17 ft. 9 aft, and had a freeboard of 2 ft. 1. Her crew consisted of eighteen hands. After passing the Downs and the Ship Wash, the vessel steered north $\frac{3}{4}$ east, going eight knots an hour. The same day a noise was heard in the low-pressure cylinder, and the engines were brought to a stand. The cover of the cylinder was removed, and it was found that a portion of the guard plate 8 in. long by 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. broad and $\frac{1}{8}$ in. deep, had occasioned the noise. The master then ordered the jibs and square foresails to be set, a squall however caught her and carried away the sails, and the vessel broached to and fell into the trough of the sea. The cargo shifted to port, and there was a space of six or seven inches between the cargo and the side. Attempts were made to fill up this space with planks and pieces of wood, but owing to the rolling of the ship these got smashed up almost as soon as they were put in, the cargo shifting from side to side as the vessel rolled. The engineers got the engines to go ahead again, but the piston rod became bent, the piston jammed in the cylinder, and the engines stopped. All efforts to get them to move were unavailing. They then disconnected the low pressure from the high pressure cylinder and worked the engines by the high pressure for two or three turns, until the condenser became heated, when they again stopped. Signals of distress were hoisted, the vessel drifting helpless before wind and sea. The H. came up and began towing the K. ahead. Two hawsers parted, but after some difficulty two others were passed, and thirty fathoms of chain attached to each. Some hours after the donkey engine stopped, probably choked with coal from the bilges. The ship was then abandoned, and on the following day disappeared. Held, that, considering the time of the year in which the vessel left port, she was much too heavily laden. Ibid.

60. Loss by abandonment with all but one of the crew of the iron-screw steamship W., of 1,247 tons, which left Odessa on the 29th October, 1882, for Rotterdam, with a cargo of 11,880 quarters of wheat and rye. At Gibraltar she took in 110 tons of coal. Held, that on leaving Odessa, the freeboard was 3 ft. 4 in., and on leaving Gibraltar 3 ft. 7 in., and that the vessel was greatly overladen, which was the cause of the loss. Held, further, that the managing owner was to blame for the load-line being placed at 3 ft. 8 in., and that it was his duty to have told the master not to load the vessel down to that mark when bound on a winter voyage, and across a stormy sea. The Winton, January 23, 1883.

61. Abandonment of the iron-screw steamer L., of 1,365 tons gross register, laden with a cargo of 1,773 tons of coal, besides 198 tons of bunker coal. She left the Tyne in February for Genoa with a crew of twenty-one hands. She met with severe weather, and about the 5th day of her voyage the water was making rapidly in the engine-room. Shortly afterwards a heavy sea struck her astern, carrying away the afterwheel and smashing in the companion and cabin doors. She continued to labour and strain, and the water was found to be gaining on her. There were no suction pipes to either of the holds, but only sluices at each end of the engine-room, and on each side of the ship. There was no water coming into either of the holds. The port and starboard after boats were soon carried away, and the starboard lifeboat stove. The same afternoon the remaining boat — the port lifeboat — was smashed to pieces. Every effort was made to discover where the water was coming in, but without effect; in the chief engineer's room it came in in great quantities, and continued to gain. The fires were put out. The sails were blown away in an attempt to set them, and the ship was lying on her beam ends, the scuppers being nearly on a level with the water. The crew then patched up the starboard lifeboat, which had been stove, and all got in, but were upset and obliged to regain the ship. On the following day an English barque took them off. Held, that the ship was overladen, having regard to the season of the year and to the nature of her intended voyage; that all proper measures were taken by the master to find out the whereabouts of the leaks. The court was not asked to deal with any certificates, or to make any order as to costs. The Lufra, No. 517, February 14, 1880.

62. The iron ship D., of 1,163 tons register, left San Francisco for Queenstown on 18th August, with a cargo of 1,745 tons of wheat in bags. When three days out she encountered bad weather, and a heavy sea carried away the hatch over the after peak, filled the cabin and lazarette with water, killed one of the crew, injured another, and threw the vessel on her beam ends. Part of the cargo was jettisoned, such of the rest as had shifted was re-trimmed, and the vessel recovered. In subsequent gales the cargo shifted and was re-trimmed five times. The vessel reached Queenstown, but, in attempting a further voyage to Bristol with the same cargo, was driven to the north, narrowly escaped running ashore on Grassholme Island, and eventually took shelter in Holyhead. Held, that the vessel was not seaworthy on leaving San Francisco, as she had a defective rudder, had no spare rigging, and the davits of her boats had been unshipped and put below; that two out of her four boats were also unfit for use; that the cargo was very well fitted with strong and substantial shifting boards, but the bags of grain were not "married," nor were any special precautions taken to prevent the upper tiers of bags going over to leeward when the ship rolled heavily; that the vessel was too deeply laden, having a freeboard of only 4 feet 14 inches, whereas Lloyd's Rules required 5 feet 3 inches. She was insured very much beyond her value, and her freight was fully insured. The master and managing owner censured. The Derbyshire, March 21, 1884.

63. The iron screw steamer T., of 395 tons gross register, left Blyth, in Northumberland, in October, for Drontheim, in Norway, with a crew of twelve hands and a cargo of 484 tons of coal, besides sixty-four tons in her bunkers. Meeting with bad weather, she put into Aberdeen and again into Cromarty before crossing over to Invergordon. The whole of the able seamen, four in number, and one fireman refused to go in her to Drontheim unless they went coastwise. They were discharged, and new hands sent from Aberdeen. The vessel then proceeded on her voyage, but has not been heard of since. Held, that the ship was overladen and undermanned, and not in a fit state for crossing the North Sea at that time of the year, and that the managing owners were responsible for having so sent her to sea. The court made no order as to costs. The Thames, No. 2411, December 27, 1884.

64. Loss with all hands of the iron screw steamer M., of 2,308 tons gross register, bound from Cardiff with a cargo of coals to Genoa, with a crew of twenty-five hands. After passing Nash Point her pilot left her, and she was not afterwards seen or heard of. Held, that the ship was overladen, that she was not sufficiently manned, and had not sufficient stability; that 4 feet was not a sufficient freeboard, that the load-line was placed 4 feet below the upper deck by order of the managing owner, who was held to blame for her being overladen and undermanned. The court condemned him in £250 nomine expensarum. The Marlborough, No. 565, March 23, 1880.

65. Loss by foundering of the wooden sailing vessel C., of 156 tons register, which on the 13th January, 1881, sailed from Cardiff bound for Lisbon, with a cargo of 264 tons of railway bars. When off the Portuguese coast bad weather set in, during which the cargo shifted, giving the vessel a list to starboard. The water rapidly gained and the ship soon became unmanageable, and finally the master and crew took to the boat and reached Vigo. The C. foundered shortly after her abandonment. Held, that the vessel was overladen, and that her freeboard of 22 inches was insufficient for a winter voyage, that the central spaces should have been tightly wedged to prevent any lateral movement of the cargo, and that the owners were responsible for the vessel being overladen and not having sufficient freeboard. They were ordered to pay a sum of £20 towards the costs. The Commodore, February 25, 1881.

66. On the 18th October, 1882, the schooner J., of 90·84 tons register, sailed from Garston for Drogheda, with 167 tons of coal on board, and has not since been heard of. Held, that there was no evidence as to the cause of the casualty, but that the vessel on leaving Garston was not in a good and seaworthy condition so far as hull and equipments were concerned; and also, that in her condition she could not at any time have carried so heavy a cargo as she did without considerable risk. The managing owner found in default, and ordered to pay £20 towards costs. The Joseph, January 29, 1883.

67. Foundering, with loss of life, of the iron screw steamer C., of 1,449 tons gross register, bound from Odessa to Bremerhaven, with a crew of twenty-two hands, six passengers, and a cargo of 1,717 tons of barley. When between the entrance to the Tagus and the Burlings, on the 19th of October, the wind at the time blowing a moderate gale, with a heavy sea upon the port quarter, she took a heavy list to starboard. After having twice to heave the vessel to, the links of the wheel chains broke, and the vessel took a heavy list to port. The gale increased, and on the same day the vessel went down by the head with all her passengers and crew, except one man. Held, that the C., on leaving Odessa, had a freeboard of only 2 feet 6 inches, which was wholly insufficient for a vessel making a winter voyage, that she was overladen as well as insufficiently provided with shifting boards for the voyage, and that the managing owner of the vessel was responsible for her being so overladen. The court accordingly condemned him in the sum of £100 nomine expensarum. The Calliope, No. 1236, January 13, 1882.

68. Abandonment, in March, and loss of the wooden vessel P. L., of 99·63 tons register, which left Newport bound for Gijon, in Spain, and having a cargo of 175 tons 4 cwt. 13 lbs. of steel rails, and 4 tons 15 cwt. of points and crossings. On reaching the mouth of the English Channel the vessel, which was rolling and labouring much, was struck by a heavy sea, and the cargo began to shift in the hold, subsequently it was found that the shores were all down, and the cargo was completely adrift and could not be secured, the vessel was evidently settling down, and the master and crew abandoned her. Held, that, considering the nature of the cargo, the time of the year, and the nature of the voyage, the vessel was very much overladen; that although the cargo was properly stowed it was not properly secured, hence it shifted, and the vessel was consequently strained and made water. The master found in default for neglecting to see that the vessel was not overladen, and that the cargo was properly secured, and his certificate suspended for six months. The Phæbe Lewis, June 2, 1881.

69. Loss of the wooden sailing ship O., of 647 tons register, built in 1869, laden with 900 tons of pig iron, and bound from the Tees to Philadelphia. Held, that considering the nature of the cargo, the materials of which the vessel was built, and her age, she was much overladen. The Othere, May 10, 1880.

70. The B. was an iron screw steamer of 925 tons register. She left Liverpool for Demerara on the 29th of September, having 1,255 tons of general cargo and 588 tons in her bunkers, making altogether a dead weight of 1,843 tons. On the 1st October a heavy gale sprang up, during which the ports on the starboard side became jammed, and the vessel being well-decked, the water had no means of escaping. The vessel was severely damaged by the heavy seas which swept over her, and finally the master and crew abandoned her. Held, that the loss of the vessel was due to her being overladen, and to the water which came on deck not being able to get away owing to the jamming of the ports, and that the managing owner was responsible for having sent the vessel to sea overladen, and the master for having taken her to sea in that state. The Bendigo, 7th November, 1882.

71. The iron screw steamer L., of 673·29 tons register, sailed from Nico-laeff in November with a cargo of 6,400 quarters of linseed in bulk, bound for Western Europe. At Gibraltar she took in eighty tons of bunker coal, and sailed for Dunkirk, and after leaving Gibraltar nothing was heard of her. Held, that the condition of the L. was satisfactory, but that 2 feet $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch was not a sufficient freeboard at that season of the year; that a ship so constructed, with a well deck with solid bulwarks, capable of holding at least 100 tons of water, would, in case the ports were not open at the time, be unequal to contend against exceptionally heavy weather. Notwithstanding this vessel had previously carried similar cargoes under similar conditions, the court strongly condemned the practice of loading vessels of this class to the utmost possible limit. The Llanedarne, 12th April, 1880.

72. Loss, with all hands, of the wooden barque H., of 1,112 tons gross register, bound from San Francisco with a crew of sixteen men and a cargo of 1,727 tons of wheat, in bags, to Queenstown. The pilot left her about seven miles outside the port, and there was some evidence that she was in company with an American barque, the S. L. some fourteen days afterwards, but from that time nothing more was heard of her. Held, that her loss was probably due to her having been overladen and undermanned, and to her want of stability. The court made no order as to costs. The Hildegarde, No. 1826, 7th June, 1883.

73. Foundering, with loss of life, of the iron screw steamer L., of 2,319 tons gross register, bound from Newcastle for Port Said with a crew of twenty-four hands, and a cargo of 2,543 tons of coals, besides 616 tons in her bunkers. The day after passing Ushant she suddenly took a heavy list to port, putting the lee rail under water, and continued to go over till she lay on her beam ends, and water coming down the port ventilators put out the four lower fires. The shrouds on the starboard side were cut, and the foremast went overboard, but the mainmast remained standing. The three boats on the port side had been carried away, and as the vessel still continued to lay over on her port side, and was fast filling, the starboard life-boat was got out, and all hands, with the exception of the second engineer and two firemen, got into her, and had hardly pushed off before the vessel foundered. Held, that the loss of the vessel was due to her being overladen and unstable; that she was insufficiently manned, and that the managing owner and the master were responsible for her being at sea in that condition. The court was not asked to deal with the master's certificate, and made no order as to costs. The Linhope, No. 2242, 18th July, 1884.

74. On an investigation into the loss of an iron schooner of 92 tons register, on a voyage from the Clyde to Exeter, laden with coals, held, that the loss was due to the vessel being overladen, her freeboard being from 1 foot $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches to 1 foot 4 inches only, and wholly insufficient. The Adina, November 22, 1880.

75. Loss of a wooden brig of 201 tons register, laden with steel rails, and bound from Cardiff for Brazil. Held, that the cargo was too heavy for the vessel in the leaky and unseaworthy state in which she left Cardiff; that her freeboard of 2 feet 3 inches was insufficient; that the master was not justified in going to sea with a vessel in such a condition, and ought to have taken her into port. His certificate suspended for six months. The Aeron Vale, July 25, 1881.

76. Loss, with the lives of the crew, of the iron screw steamer M., of 2,005 tons gross. She left Garston, in the Mersey, in January, bound for Havannah, with a cargo of 2,712 tons of coal, including bunker coal. She put into Holyhead on the 28th January to land her pilot, sailed again, and since that time nothing has been heard of her. Held, that the vessel was seaworthy as to hull, equipments, and machinery, and that her cargo was properly stowed and ventilated, but that she was overladen, and to this cause the loss was to be attributed. The Mangerton, ibid. p. 40, 2nd July, 1883.

77. Loss, with twenty-two men, of the iron screw steamship B. C., of 1,376 tons gross register, bound from Alexandria for Hull with a crew of twenty-two hands, a cargo of 1,804 tons of cotton seed and beans, and about 140 tons of coal in her bunkers. At Malta she took in 45 tons more, and at Gibraltar 115 tons. She was afterwards signalled from point Carvoeiro near the Burlings, but from that time nothing more was heard of her. Held, that she was overladen and probably foundered in the heavy gale prevailing in the Bay of Biscay when she was crossing it. The Bywell Castle, No. 1807, May 23, 1883.

78. Abandonment and loss, with loss of life, of the iron screw steamship B. T., of 3,096 tons gross register, bound from Baltimore to Liverpool, with a crew of thirty hands, two stowaways, and a cargo of 3,773 tons, of which 2,035 tons were grain, besides about 500 tons of coal in the bunkers. About the seventh day of the voyage the wind blew with hurricane force, several seas broke over the B. T., the steam steering gear parted, two of the hands were washed overboard, and the vessel broached to and fell off into the trough of the sea; all the boats were smashed, and water was coming into the engine-room through the sides, between the seams and at the butts, and continued to gain on the vessel for a day and a night. The crew of the B. T. then left her. Held, that her loss was partly due to the violence of the gale and partly to her being overladen and undermanned, that the owner was responsible for having sent her to sea in that state, and that no blame attached to the master or officers for the abandonment. The Benwell Tower, No. 2740, November 26, 1885.

79. Loss of the master of the H., an iron screw steamship of 1,693 tons gross register, bound from Gibraltar for Amsterdam, with a crew of twenty-one hands and a cargo of 2,120 tons of rye. Off Cape Finisterre it blew a strong gale, the vessel shipped much water forward, and heavy seas broke over her, causing her to take a list to port, and while the master and mate were engaged in repairing a forelock of one of the block pins of the steering gear, the master was washed overboard, the mate saving himself by clinging to one of the ventilators. The sea was running so high it was impossible to lower a boat or put the ship about, two lifebuoys were thrown to him but he failed to reach them, and in a short time sank and was not seen again. Held, that the ship was too deeply laden, and that the loss of the master was due partly to the violence of the gale and partly to her being so deeply laden. The Hathersage, No. 2837, Feb. 27, 1886.

(e) *Undermanned.

80. Loss, with all hands, of the iron sailing ship S., of 1,621 tons register, built in 1833. She left the East India Doeks on January 17, 1885, with a crew of twenty-eight hands, the master's wife, and a cargo of about 2,200 tons of general merchandize, bound to Calcutta, and at Gravesend took in about five tons of gunpowder which was placed in a magazine specially constructed for the purpose. Held, that the ship when she left this country was not sufficiently manned, but

* (11) As to cases of undermanned ships, see the evidence of H. C. Rothery, Esq., Wreck Commissioner, in First Report and that there was nothing to show how she was lost. The Shannon, Feb. 12, 1886.

80a. Abandonment and loss of the iron screw steamship B., of 128 tons gross register, bound from the Tyne to Amsterdam, with a crew of five hands all told, and a cargo of 112 tons of machinery. On the second day of the voyage, the wind blowing a hard gale, the cargo shifted, and the vessel had a list to starboard. Soon afterwards the engine-room skylight with the tarpaulin attached was washed away, and the water came down into the engine-room in large quantities. On the following day there being 4 feet of water in the hold she was abandoned. Held, that she was unmanned, that the cargo was not properly secured from shifting, and that the loss of the vessel was due to the machinery in the hold having got adrift so as to damage the vessel causing her to make water, and that the abandonment was justifiable. The Blanche, No. 2740, November 26, 1885.

81. The C. was a British ship of 1,554 tons gross and 1,461 net register. She left San Francisco for Queenstown with a cargo of wheat and twenty-two hands. In the course of the voyage, the wind at the time blowing a fresh gale from the S.S.E. with a heavy cross sea, and the vessel making about nine knots an hour, while two of the crew were engaged in clearing the fore-sheet, they were washed overboard and drowned. Held, that the vessel was insufficiently manned. The Cromartyshire, Dec. 19, 1884.

See also Nos. 63, 64, 72, & 78, supra; and Nos. 123, 127, pp. 2497, 2498.

(f) *Cargo badly stowed.

82. Abandonment and loss of the sailing vessel P., of 1,059.73 tons register. She left Dublin in November for Philadelphia, with 1,060 tons of old rails and 90 tons of scrap iron, 600 tons of which were placed in the lower hold, commencing at the fore part of the fore hatchway, and extending to the upper part of the after hatchway. On the between-deck beams 460 of the rails were stowed to a height of about 3½ feet, extending each way to within five feet of the extremities of the bottom of the cargo in the lower hold. On the between-deck beams, in addition to the permanent midship stanchions, there was a stanchion on each side of the vessel under each beam of the deck, above and resting on a board laid upon the iron, and these extra stanchions were secured by cleats at top and bottom. The stanchions or shores in the lower hold from the top of the iron there to the between-deck beams were placed and secured in a similar manner, but were not put up until after 460 tons had been stowed on those beams, thus causing a heavy strain on the beam fastenings and upper works of the ship. In the beginning of December she encountered a succession of heavy gales, in which part of the cargo broke adrift, and the masts were carried away, and the vessel being thus disabled, was abandoned on the 12th December. Held, that the cargo was not properly stowed, nor the between-deck beams properly trimmed and supported, the cargo not being placed sufficiently high in the vessel (thus causing the centre of gravity to be too low), and the shores under the between-deck beams not being put in their places until after 460 tons of iron had been stowed on the beams. Held, further, that the centre of gravity being too low, led to the vessel's rolling and straining excessively in the rough weather, and the straining and leakage were aggravated by the improper shoring of the between-deck beams. The master exonerated from blame. The Peruvian, February 14, 1880.

83. Loss, with fourteen men, of the iron screw steamer P., of about 492 tons gross register, laden with 630 tons of pig iron, and bound from Middlesbrough for Grangemouth. She was last seen off the Souter Light, near the entrance to the Tyne, where she was afterwards found by divers. When fully loaded her draught of water was 13 ft. 10 in. forward, and 15 ft. 7 in. aft, and she had a freeboard of 1 ft. 10 in. The stowage of the pigs in the main and afterholds was proper, but in the forehold there were four tiers occupying a space of 15 to 16 ft. fore and aft of the hold. The hold was 41 ft. long, and as the tiers were placed in the after part close against the bulkhead, there would be an empty space of from 25 ft. to 26 ft. in front of them; all four tiers were of equal height, and came to within 2 ft. or 3 ft. of the maindeck; and as the height of the hold was about 13 ft., the fore part of the tiers would stand straight up from the bottom of the hold to a height of from 10 ft. to 11 ft. The upper part of the three foremost tiers consisted of about 15 tons of pigs laid fore and aft, with the centre raised some 2 ft. above the wings, and not secured by cross bars or otherwise. Held, that this was a most insecure structure, and that if the vessel pitched violently, the upper part of the tiers would naturally get under way, and run into the empty space forward; but if the fore part of the tiers in the fore hold had been built in steps, like the after part of the tiers in the main hold, there would have been a better foothold, and less chance of shifting forward. The court considered it possible that the cargo in the fore hold shifted into the empty space forward, thus putting her down by the bows, and rendering it impossible for her to keep the sea against the strong gale then blowing, and making it necessary for her to run before the wind and sea for a place of shelter; that in trying to enter the Tyne she broached to, got broadside to the sea, and being unable to keep away, was overwhelmed by the heavy sea breaking at the entrance; that the vessel, with a freeboard of only 1 ft. 10 in., and a cargo which prevented her rising to the waves, would be unable to continue her course lest her cargo should shift laterally, and a sea break over her and swamp her, and unable to keep her head to sea lest the cargo in the fore hold should shift into the empty space forward, and this in a gale of wind not exceptionally violent; that the vessel was therefore not in a condition to meet the risks which she might reasonably anticipate on such a voyage and at such a season. No costs given. The Prince, April 23, 1877.

84. Loss of the iron sailing ship G., of 1,477 tons register, laden with 2,049 tons of coal, and bound from Birkenhead for Bombay. Eight days after leaving port the vessel was struck by a heavy squall which threw her over on her port side. While the mizen mast and maintopmast were being cut away, the lower maintop-sail yard of steel fell, making a hole in the deck, through which the water poured in. The starboard lifeboat was then launched, and eight of the crew were saved, the master and remainder of the crew being lost with the vessel. Held, that the casualty was due to an empty space being left in the after part of the 'tween decks into which the cargo shifted; that the vessel was very fully laden, that the cargo was not properly stowed, as there should have been a bulkhead abaft the coals in the 'tween decks to prevent them from shifting into the empty space aft, and that the freeboard of 4 feet 11 inches was hardly sufficient for a vessel of her size for a winter voyage. The Galatea, December 17, 1880.

85. Loss of the wooden vessel L., of 889 tons register, laden with 1,200 tons of pig iron, and bound from Troon for Montreal in March. When 500 tons of the pig iron had been stowed, the captain ordered the stevedore to take in 350 tons more, and throw them down into the hold without stowing it, and 200 tons were thrown down the main hatchway, and 150 tons down the after hatchway. This was not stowed, and remained loose in two heaps. In addition, there were twenty tons of broken iron put loose under the fore hatch. On the 'tween deck beams (there being no deck laid) were stowed 350 tons of pig iron. The cargo was secured as follows:—At every beam, both in the lower hold and 'tween decks, there were four stanchions on each side of the permanent stanchion. These extra stanchions were of three-inch deal, and cleated top and bottom. Shortly after sailing, the L. met with strong north-westerly winds, and began to labour and roll, causing the cargo to shift on the 'tween decks, and fourteen days after leaving port she was found to be leaking in every part. Three days after she was abandoned. Held, that the cargo was not properly stowed, and might have been better secured, and that the master should have taken the L. to the nearest port when she was found to be labouring and rolling. The Lebanon, May 15, 1880.

86. Loss of the iron screw steamer P., of 517 tons net register, bound from Newport, Monmouthshire, for Havre, laden with 983 tons of coal and about 124½ tons of bunker coal, of which about 24 or 25 tons was placed on the bridge above the bunker hatches, the bunkers being only capable of containing a little more than 100 tons. The weather became stormy, and early the next day the vessel took a sudden list to port, and finally went down, all the crew but one being drowned. Held, that the casualty was due to the vessel having fallen over on her side, probably owing to the large amount of bunker coal which was stowed on the bridge deck, that the master was chiefly to blame for allowing the coal to be so stowed, and that the managing owner was also to blame for not having taken steps to prevent the coal being so placed. The Pelton, April 25, 1882.

87. Loss, with all hands, of the iron steamer G., of 604 tons register, bound from Gothenburg for London, with 1,200 tons of iron, stowed on a platform consisting of 2½ to 3 inch deals, upon which the iron was placed, the bars being secured from shifting by the pig iron being placed at the top of the bars. The skin of the ship was unprotected, no decks were laid, and the beams were neither tomed nor shored. Held, that the cargo was not properly stowed, but that there was no evidence to show the immediate cause of the loss. The Galeed, May 4, 1880.

88. There is great danger in constructing in the holds of vessels an upright wall of metal some ten or eleven feet high with a large open space before it and without any security against its falling forwards. The Prince, April 23, 1877.

89. It appeared to the wreck commissioner to be a good method of construction of vessels to carry heavy cargoes to have in the centre a trunk with the sides falling in towards the top of the hatchway, but for the trunk, instead of being close, to have open pillars ten inches apart, fitting into iron shoes fixed at the bottom and shored against the side, taking the iron high up in the ship, packed in an almost solid mass, but keeping the centre of gravity in the same place in the ship, and getting rid of all double or single chequers. Ibid.

90. Loss, with loss of life, of the H. B., a three-masted iron sailing ship of 1,642 tons gross register, bound from Lassem in Java to Queenstown, with a cargo of paraffin oil, in cases, and 2,532 tons of sugar. When off the east coast of South Africa, a sudden squall struck the vessel, throwing her upon her beam-ends with the lee rail under water. As she did not right herself the main and mizen topmasts were cut away, but the vessel remained in the same position till the next morning, when she turned bottom upwards and went down. Three of the crew had got into the life-boat and pushed off clear of the sinking vessel, and they picked up seven others including the master. Held, that the loss was due to the cargo having shifted owing to its not having been properly stowed. The Hudson Bay, No. 2848, March 12, 1886.

See also No. 68, supra; and No. 98, infra; and No. 127, p. 2498.

(g) Improper Ballast.

91. The owner and master of a ship lost from improper ballast, held to blame for not having seen that proper ballast was taken. The owner was ordered to pay £100 towards costs, and the master's certificate was suspended for three months. The Golden Sea, December 15, 1881.

92. Abandonment and loss of the wooden sailing ship, G. S., of 1,418 tons register, which left Bristol in October in ballast, on her return for St. John, N. B. On the 14th, she encountered a severe gale, during which the pumps became choked with ballast, and the vessel began to list heavily to port. The masts were cut away, but as the water increased, the master and crew abandoned the ship. The vessel was seventeen years old, and being found to be in a leaky condition, was overhauled before leaving St. John, but not in a very thorough manner. The ballast carried consisted of brick, stones, gravel, dirt, &c. This ballast being saturated with the water which got into the ship was reduced to mud, and soon choked the pumps. Held, that this ballast was altogether improper for a voyage across the Atlantic at that season of the year, and in a vessel with close floors without limbers, and that the master was to blame for allowing the vessel to be supplied with such ballast. The master's certificate was suspended for three months. The owner was also held to blame for not seeing that proper ballast was taken, and he was ordered to pay £100 towards costs. Ibid.

93. On an investigation into the stranding of a steamer, held, that the loss of the vessel was due partly to her having been sent to sea without being sufficiently ballasted, and partly to the unskilful navigation of the master. The Beverly, March 28, 1877.

(h) Otherwise Unseaworthy.

94. The S. was an iron steamer, schooner-rigged, of 397 tons gross register, with engines of fifty horse-power. She left the Tyne on the 14th October, bound for Plymouth, with a crew of fourteen hands and a cargo of 472 tons of coal, besides seventy-two tons of bunker coal, of which fifty-two tons were in the bunkers and the remainder in the fore hold. At the beginning of the voyage the master, finding that he could make no way against the wind, put back with the object of having the bottom cleaned, one of the furnace tubes bursting just as she arrived. She remained there about ten days, during which time seven of the men, finding that nothing was to be done to her, refused to proceed any further, and were accordingly discharged. Fresh hands were thereupon engaged in their places, and she left Hartlepool with a crew of thirteen hands. She passed Flamborough Head, and, on the following day, the wind being from the east, she had to continue tacking to work off the Sand, and ran through Cockle Gat, being brought up at noon off Corton Church. It came on to blow harder, and water was found over the stokehole plates; both the cables then parted, and the captain ordered the engines to be started, but although they got a pressure of 25 lbs. in the boiler they could make no way against the wind and tide, and she began to drift to leeward. Ten minutes afterwards she struck on the N.E. point of the Newcome Sand, her head at the time pointing towards Lowestoft Ness Light. Signals for assistance were made by burning flares, but on the vessel striking, the captain at once ordered out the boats. They were all, however, stove in succession. One was launched, but no sooner did she touch the water than she became half-full. All the hands, with the exception of the one surviving witness, returned to the ship, under the belief that the lifeboat was coming to their assistance. The boat was afterwards upset, and the man reached the shore by swimming. The vessel herself came ashore at nearly the same place a complete wreck, and nothing more was ever seen or heard of the crew. Held, that the loss of the S. was due to the defective condition of her machinery, boiler, and cables, by which she was riding in Corton Roads. Held, further, that she was in an unseaworthy condition as regards her hull, equipments, and machinery, and was overladen, and that the managing owner was responsible for her having been sent to sea in that state. The court accordingly ordered him to pay £200 on account of the expenses of the inquiry. The Secret, No. 1613, December 13, 1882.

95. Loss by foundering, with loss of fourteen lives, of the iron screw-steamer M., of 408 tons register. On the previous voyage she struck something, but it was then thought no damage was done. After delivering her cargo, and being partly reladen, orders were given to pump out her after-ballast tank, which extended from the after-bulkhead of the engine-room to the run of the vessel, and formed a species of double bottom in that part.

On this being done a big dings was found in the port bilge, and the plates between the two frames were rent open wide enough to put open hands through. An unsuccessful attempt was made to stop the hole, and it was then decided to proceed on the voyage as she was. She did so; arrived at Santander, and delivered her cargo. She left Santander on the 8th of January with a crew of fifteen hands, and with 650 tons of iron ore, besides seventy tons of coal in her bunkers. On the 10th the vessel was on a N. $\frac{3}{4}$ E. course, the wind blowing a hard gale from the W.N.W. when the fore boom got adrift and swept away the bridge and ladders, and a ventilator just forward of the bridge. The captain ordered the helm hard down, which brought the ship up into the wind; and, having secured the fore boom, every effort was made to stop up the hole in the deck. Owing, however, to the quantity of water that was being shipped, it was found impossible to do so. The vessel was accordingly put before the wind, but the sea then lapped in on each side just forward of the break of the poop, washing away the men from the hole. It was afterwards found that the vessel was fast settling down, upon which she was abandoned. Held, that the loss of the vessel was due to the water having got into the hold through a hole made in the deck by the carrying away of one of the ventilators, but that the condition in which the vessel was sent to sea, with a hole in her bottom under the after-ballast tank, and the quantity of cargo which she had in her, in all probability contributed to the casualty, by taking away a large portion of the buoyancy of the after part, and preventing her from freeing herself, as she might otherwise have done of the water which came upon her deck; and that the owners, as well as the master, were responsible for the state in which the vessel was sent to sea, and consequently for her loss. The Matador, No. 2468, Feb. 18, 1885.

96. The S. was a small fishing smack of 38 tons gross register, and bound from Lowestoft on a fishing voyage in the North Sea. She left on the 18th of June, and was, on the 28th, about forty miles N.E. of the Leman and Ower lightship when the cabin floor was found to be under water. Pumping was commenced, but the water gained on the pumps, and, as the vessel was sinking, the master ordered the boat to be got out, and they had only just time to push off when the vessel went down. Held, that the loss of the S. was due to her unseaworthy condition, and that the managing owner was responsible for having sent her, and the master for having taken her, to sea in that state. The court accordingly suspended the certificate of the master for twelve months. The Superior, No. 2243, July 19, 1884.

97. Loss, with all hands, of the iron screw steamer J., of 115 tons gross register, bound from Preston to Port Natal with a crew of ten hands, and about 61½ tons of coal on board. Having met with some strong contrary winds and stormy weather, she put in at several ports, and was last seen by a boatman belonging to the coastguard at Padstow. She was then about abreast of Trevoze Head, clear of the land; seas were breaking over her, the men on deck were running fore and aft, and volumes of steam and smoke were coming out of the funnel as if the seas had got down into the stokehole, and had partly swamped the fires. The engines had apparently been stopped, but were set on again, though she seemed to make little or no way. A heavy squall then came on; and it blew very heavily that night. The next day a ship similar to the J. was seen close to the land near St. Agnes Head; she got off Carter's rock, a little short of the next headland, and was then lost sight of. The same evening a hatch belonging to the J. was picked up in Porthcotham Bay, and a piece of a life-buoy. Held, that the vessel either foundered, or struck and went to pieces somewhere between St. Agnes and Trevoze Heads; that she was unfit to proceed to sea when she left Padstow, and that the owner was responsible for having sent her therefrom. He was accordingly condemned in £100, nomine expensarum. The Jackal, No. 1238, Jan. 20, 1882.

98. Loss by abandonment of the barque Y., of 298 tons register, built in 1854. On the 12th September, 1880, the Y. arrived at Shields on her return from a voyage to Spain and the Baltic, and on the 17th proceeded thence to Gloucester, her port of destination. She had on board a cargo of 250 tons of iron, and 110½ standards of deals. The 250 tons of iron consisted of square pieces two or three feet long, and laid in the bottom of the vessel on the ceiling right fore and aft, and rising only a little above the top of the keelson. After passing Beachy Head the provisions and oil ran short, and the crew was finally reduced to flour and water. When off the coast of Cornwall a heavy gale was encountered, during which the sails were blown away, and the vessel began to leak, and was carried almost helpless up and down the coast, and on the 8th the master and crew abandoned her. Held, that the Y., when she left Gefe on her homeward voyage was not in a good and seaworthy condition; that her cargo was not properly stowed; that the iron should have been stowed by building it up in the centre with the deals on each side protected from the iron by wooden slabs; that the vessel was overladen; having regard to her state and condition and the weakness of her bottom; that there was not a sufficient quantity of provisions put on board at Gefe; that the vessel was not properly repaired on her arrival at Shields; that she was in the same unsatisfactory condition when she proceeded on her voyage to Gloucester; and that the master was not justified in neglecting to put into some port for repairs and provisions. The master's certificate cancelled. Held, also, that the owner was to blame for the casualty, and that he as well as the master was well aware of the unseaworthy condition of the vessel on leaving Shields, and he was condemned in £150 towards the costs. The Yanikale, November, 1880.

99. Damage by fire and stranding, and subsequent loss of the wooden barquentine F., of 318 tons gross register, built in 1864. In January, 1883, she left Greenock for Buenos Ayres with a cargo of 522 tons of coal and a crew of ten hands. The ship was delayed on her voyage, and the master was superseded by the owners while the vessel was in the port of Campbell Town. The crew on their own request were there discharged; new hands were found, but before leaving port they too asked for their discharge, as the vessel was even whilst in port making more water than she should do. The master, however, persuaded them to remain on board, and the vessel proceeded on her voyage. When near the Isle of Wight, the crew requested the captain to put back to a port of safety, as the vessel was making so much water. The captain refused, and the crew accordingly did no more work except one man at the helm. The weather became worse, and the vessel was drifting before the gale with her sails all loose, heading to the eastward. After seven hours the crew set to work again with the mate, who agreed to steer them to port; but while they were at the pumps the captain insisted on going on to Buenos Ayres. The ship, making so much water, the crew dared not to leave the pumps. The gale increased in the night, and most of the sails were lost. The next morning the crew refused to proceed on the voyage, and the ship was brought into Loch Ryan, opposite Cairn village. There the chief officer of the coast-guard went on board. Next morning the ship was discovered to be on fire; some attempts were made by the crew to extinguish the flames, but on the smoke and fire decreasing, the captain ordered them to leave off and get out the long-boat. No attempt was made to ascertain how the fire originated, and no signal was made to the shore for assistance. On the fire again bursting out, a few things were rescued from the cabin. The custom-house officer, with some eight hands from shore, then boarded the vessel, and, after some resistance on the part of the master, took charge of her, and beached her opposite the village. Shortly afterwards, however, she slipped off the bank into deep water, and both vessel and cargo were totally lost. Held, that the vessel was unseaworthy; that the master and owner were responsible for her being at sea. The master's certificate was therefore cancelled for his misconduct and for drunkenness, but no order was made as to costs. The Falcon, No. 1744, 23rd March, 1883.

100. Abandonment of the iron screw steamer E., of 137 tons gross register, bound from London for Dumfries, with a cargo of 152 tons of patent manure, and above thirty tons of bunker coal, and having a crew of seven hands. Shortly after leaving Portland, where she had put in owing to stress of weather, she began to leak, and the pumps becoming choked, the water rose a foot above the stoke-hole plates. She was accordingly steered for Falmouth, where the surveyor to the Board of Trade came on board, and, after examining the vessel, informed the captain that she was, in his opinion, too deeply laden, and that he would report her to the Board of Trade. The captain, however, got the vessel under weigh, and proceeded on his voyage. Off the entrance to Holyhead Bay the rod of the air-pump broke, and the vessel was brought up in about 10 fathoms of water near Ravensglass. The vessel having but one boat, the master and the whole of the crew got into it, and went ashore.

The master hired a steam-tug at Maryport, and on the following morning went with the tug to look for the ship, which was nowhere to be seen, and must have gone down during the night. Held, that it was doubtful whether the ship was in a seaworthy condition, that she was not properly found in boats, that she was overladen, and that the master was conscious of the fact. The Express, No. 894, February 1, 1881.

101. Held, further, that the master was not justified in abandoning the ship, or leaving her at anchor without a light. His certificate was accordingly suspended for six months, but he was allowed a first mate's certificate during that time. The court made no order as to costs. Ibid.

102. For particulars, see No. 59, p. 2482. Held, that the master left port without being properly supplied with sails, that he was not justified in going to sea without his foretopsail being properly repaired, and that he ought to have informed his owners if the square foresail was not in good condition. The Kate, No. 167, December 12, 1877.

103. The S. was a barque of 277 tons gross register, built in the year 1841, bound from Lisbon for Garston in the Mersey, and laden with a cargo of about 400 tons of phosphate of lime. She left Lisbon in September in fine weather, but had to be pumped out every two hours, and on encountering a gale began to make a good deal more water. Later on the mainmast with all the gear attached was carried away, and before it could be cut adrift, struck the vessel under the quarter, causing her to make still more water. The master, however, refused assistance, and the vessel was blown off the coast, but on the 22nd was off Crookhaven, when the crew came aft and requested the master to put in; he refused, and the crew, for the safety of their lives, again went to the pumps. Soon after the foretop and the foretop-gallant masts were carried away with the foremast head, and as the pumps were choked with the cargo which had got into the well; the men exhausted, and the vessel had at least 3 feet of water in her, the whole of the crew were transferred to a vessel which came up, and landed them at Newport, with the exception of the master. Held, that the S., when she left Lisbon, was not in a good and seaworthy condition, that the master was not justified in refusing assistance off Cape Clear and in not endeavouring to put into Crookhaven. That she was not navigated with proper and seamanlike care, that the abandonment of the vessel when it took place was justifiable, that the chief blame attached to the master who was the principal owner, and had the entire management of the ship. No order made as to costs. The Salopian, No. 798, November 20, 1880.

104. Loss by abandonment of the Q., a small wooden brig of 193 tons register, which, on the 2nd January, 1882, sailed from Coosaw, in the Bull River, South Carolina, for Belfast, with a cargo of about 351 tons of phosphate rock. About the 12th, bad weather set in, and the vessel began to make water, the crew having to be almost constantly at the pumps. On the 1st February, the master and crew abandoned their ship, which shortly afterwards was picked up with only 10 inches of water in her and taken to Fayal. Held, that the Q. was overladen, and not in a good and seaworthy condition on leaving Newport for Brazil on the outward voyage, nor on leaving Bull River on the homeward voyage, and that the master and managing owner were to blame, but no order made as to costs. The Queen Emma, March, 1882.

105. The iron screw steamer S., of 487 tons net register, built in 1865, was originally a double well-decked vessel, but in 1870 her after-well was covered in, and she was taken off Lloyd's list. She left the Tyne on the 11th December, 1883, bound for Cadiz, with a cargo of nearly 908 tons of coal, including bunker coal, and was not afterwards heard of. Held, that the sides of the space formed by covering the after-well should have been strengthened, and that the vessel left port unseaworthy, being very heavily laden, 4 feet down by the stern, and having a deck erection aft of insufficient strength. The Staffa, February, 1884.

106. Stranding, with loss of life, of an old wooden schooner of 57 tons, built in 1838, and bound from Sunderland to Bonar Bridge, in Sutherlandshire, with a crew of three hands, and a cargo of 84 tons of coal. She left Sunderland on Nov. 20, 1882; was seen off Roseheart Point dismasted, with a flag of distress flying from a short staff, and drifting before a gale from the N.W. She struck on the rocks west of Sandhaven, and settled down. The crew were washed overboard, the sea making a clean breach over her, and in about half-an-hour she went to pieces. Held, that the loss of the ship and those on board was due to her unseaworthy condition, and that the owner was greatly to blame for having sent her to sea in that state. The Acheen, No. 1670, Jan. 29, 1883.

107. Loss of the wooden barque O., of 340 tons, laden with 505 tons of coal, and bound from Cardiff for Algoa Bay. During a continuance of bad weather, the vessel made a quantity of water, and on the return voyage water was found in the lazarette, coming in through a hole in the ship's side. The master was standing close by when the discovery was made, and, being suspected of an attempt to scuttle the ship, was placed under restraint by the mate and crew. Held, that the ship was not in a seaworthy condition when she left port, and that the owner was responsible for not seeing to her condition and remedying defects. The court ordered him to pay £100 towards costs. The Oleander, Feb. 1883.

108. The M. was a screw steamer built of steel, of 513 tons net register, bound from London for Singapore, with a cargo of telegraph cable and other stores, and 223 tons of coal, making a total dead weight of 708 tons. She left Greenwich with a crew of forty hands and nine passengers. The pilot left her off Portland, and she has not been heard of since. The vessel, which was to be stationed at Singapore, had been constructed with a view to being used for picking up and repairing cables on that station, and also as a residence for the officials of the telegraph company. There was consequently on the main deck, and running down the sides of the vessel, a row of houses more than a hundred feet long, with ten doors and seventeen windows on each side opening into the alley ways. Held, that the loss was probably due to these large openings in her sides, through which the sea would, deeply laden as she was, be liable to enter and burst in some of the doors or windows of the deck houses, and fill the ship. The Magneta, No. 2566, June 4, 1885.

110. Loss of the sailing ship B., of 290·96 tons register, built in 1873. In November, 1879, she was surveyed for Lloyd's and her classification was suspending. In December, 1879, she sailed for Wilmington, U.S., and then loaded a cargo of 2,762 barrels of resin, 861,940 lbs. weight. She also carried a deck load of two large spars of timber, and in addition a quantity of other timber. The vessel finally sailed from Smithville on the 20th January, 1880, and has not since been heard of. Held, that the B. was not in a good and seaworthy condition when she sailed from London, and that the carrying on deck of such a heavy load, especially at such a season of the year was improper, and that with the deck load the vessel was overladen. The Blackpool, 25th November, 1880.

the 25th a list to port, which had already been observed, increased so much that the vessel became unmanageable, and in consequence of the severe injury which she sustained through shipping a heavy sea she was abandoned. Held, that the loss of the ship was due to—(1) defective construction; (2) to overloading; (3) to insufficient depth of the shifting boards; and (4) to the sluices between the engine-room and main hold having been left open. As to No. 1, the vessel had two holds, under which were ballast tanks, which (the vessel being laden) were empty. Above the tonnage deck she had erections of different kinds, with a capacity of above 203 tons, and with a tonnage under the tonnage deck of only 953 tons. The main deck, which was uncovered, was flanked with solid iron bulwarks, liable to catch any seas breaking over the bows. As to No. 2, there was a freeboard of only about 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches. As to No. 3, the court, from the evidence, inferred that the shifting boards extended only between 4 and 5 feet from the deck, and that in consequence of this defect the cargo shifted, and this was the proximate cause of the casualty. The wreck commissioner observed that cargo in bulk could also be prevented from shifting by having two rows of bulkheads. He also referred to the stowage regulations in force at Montreal and New York, which do not allow any ship exceeding 400 tons to be loaded entirely with grain in bulk, and he suggested that some such regulation might be necessary in the case of large Baltic steamers. As to No. 4, the court considered that it was the duty of the master to see that the sluices were in proper working order, and could be readily closed when necessary, and that he neglected to do this. Held, further, that for the acts and omissions which led to the loss of the vessel the master and owner were almost equally culpable. The court intimated it had no power to deal with the owner, but it considered the master greatly to blame for the overloading; for the insufficiency of the shifting boards; and for not attending to the sluices; and they therefore suspended his certificate for six months. The Danae, 29th January, 1878.

112. Abandonment of a vessel laden with wheat, stowed partly in bulk and partly in bags. The cargo shifted through the giving way of a temporary wooden bulkhead fitted in the main hold. The vessel had no shifting boards, and the bags were not laid on top of the grain. Held, that the casualty was owing to the shifting of the cargo, and that the ship had not been properly laden as required by sect. 22 of the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), and that the master was in default for fitting an insufficient bulkhead and not taking more sufficient means to prevent the cargo from shifting, and his certificate suspended for six months. The Alfonso, 7th January, 1880.

113. The mate reprimanded for neglecting to see that the temporary bulkhead was properly fixed before taking in cargo. Ibid.

114. Loss with all hands of the iron screw steamer M., a well-decked ship of 882 tons register. She left New York in September bound for Marseilles, with 60,702 bushels of wheat, of which 50,503 were in bulk and 10,199 in bags, and 300 tons of bunker coal, making in all 1,927 tons of dead weight, her freeboard being 2 feet 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches, she has not since been heard of. Held, that the loss was due to her having been too deeply laden, having regard to her construction and to the well-deck with which she was fitted. The Mildred, 10th February, 1881.

114a. Held, that vessels with a "well-deck" carrying grain, are not, if deeply laden, adapted for the Atlantic trade, especially in winter. Ibid.

115. In the case of grain ships of over 400 tons, the load draught must be regulated by the depth of the hold, allowing three inches to every foot depth of hold, measured from the lowest line of deck amidships to the water when upright. Held, that a vessel with such a cargo of grain and at such a time of the year (October) ought to have had a freeboard of four feet instead of twenty-six inches. The Damietta, November 14, 1877.

115a. As to the carriage of bags of grain, see No. 62, p. 2483.

(b) Instability.

116. Abandonment of the iron screw steamer B., of 1,944 tons gross register, laden with 12,760 quarters of grain, partly barley and partly rye, and bound from Sùlina to Antwerp. At Malta, the master took in about 264 tons of coal and twenty-five sacks of barley. Shortly after passing Cape Finisterre she met with bad weather, a very heavy sea broke on board, stove in the deck houses, galley and engine-room skylight, and letting tons of water down into the engine-room. Steps were taken to stop up the hole, but the men were swept away from it, the sea making a complete breach over her. The water continued to rise in the engine-room, and the fires having been put out the vessel fell off into the trough of the sea. The crew then began to bale her and continued baling through the night. In the morning they abandoned the ship and boarded the S. Held, that the vessel had not sufficient stability for the carriage of a full cargo of grain; that her loss was not due to the master neglecting to secure the cargo from shifting, as required by sect. 22 of the M. S. Act, 1876 (c. 80), or to his taking the vessel to sea too deeply laden, but rather to the vessel's defective construction, and to her great depth in proportion to beam. The Emblehope, No. 516, February 14, 1880.

117. The T. was an iron screw steamer of 1,839 tons gross register, laden with 2,293 tons of cotton seed, and bound from Alexandria to Hull, with a crew of twenty-six hands. The vessel met with bad weather off Cape Finisterre and was struck by a very heavy sea. The wind and sea continued to increase in force, and the engines had to be stopped, the vessel at the time having a considerable list to port. She immediately fell off with her starboard broadside to the wind and sea. Soon afterwards water was observed coming into the engine-room, over the top of the door on the port side, showing that there was at least five feet of water in the No. 2 hold. The vessel continued to heel over more and more until she was gunwale under. The crew continued pumping during the night but without being able to clear the holds. Some of the bulwarks and stanchions on the port side were carried away, there being at the time a great weight of water on the deck. Some of the cargo was cleared away, and the vessel did not fall over any further but appeared to be somewhat lighter. On the engines, however, being stopped she again fell off into the trough of the sea, and the top of the rail was nearly on a level with the water. All hands then left her and she must have foundered soon afterwards. Held, that the loss of the ship was principally due to her unstable character, and to her having been too deeply laden; that the master was partly to blame for having placed additional weight above the mean centre of gravity of the ship, machinery and petty officers' quarters with seed, such space not having been originally intended for the reception of cargo, and for neglecting to replenish his coal bunkers at Gibraltar, but his certificate was not dealt with. The Tiara, No. 518, February 14, 1880.

118. Loss, with all hands but one, of the iron screw steamer H. of 618 tons register. She left Odessa in August with a full cargo of barley, bound for Bristol. After passing Gibraltar the vessel was observed to have a list to starboard, which increased, until having shipped a very heavy sea, she heeled over with her rail under water, and subsequently turned bottom upwards. Held, that the shifting boards, going from the upper deck to the hold beams, were not carried sufficiently low; that the vessel was very deeply laden, having a freeboard of only one foot seven inches; that looking to the construction of the vessel as a well-decked ship, the height of her empty ballast tanks, and her low freeboard, she had not sufficient stability. The Hardwick, December 8, 1880.

119. The iron screw steamer J. P. of 1,170 tons register, sailed from New York in September, laden with grain for Marseilles, with a crew of twenty-six hands, and has not been heard of since. Held, that there was nothing to show that the vessel was not in good condition, or that the cargo was improperly stowed. In connexion, however, with the fact that the vessel had a very small margin of stability, the court noticed that whilst the grain in the fore and main lower holds was in bulk, that in the fore 'tween decks was in bags, and so stowed that there was no security against their falling into an empty space forward, if the vessel got into a heavy sea; and that, although there were double rows of stanchions from the upper deck to the hold, below the beams there was only a single row of stanchions, so that if the shifting boards extended below the hold beams it would be very difficult if not impossible to secure them effectually. Held, therefore, that, having regard to her construction, and to the height of the water ballast tank in her fore hold, the vessel as laden had not sufficient stability, and that she probably foundered in bad weather owing to this cause. The Joseph Pease, July 9, 1880.

See also No. 128, p. 2498.

(c) Shifting Boards.

120. The legislature throws the obligation upon the master, as well as upon the owner, of seeing that in grain cargoes the grain is properly secured by shifting boards or bulkheads. The Damietta, No. 157, 14th November, 1877.

120a. In grain cargoes of ships of over 400 tons register, the shifting planks should be fitted tight under and between the beams and earlines, and should extend not less than six feet downwards. Stevens on Average, quoted, with approval, by the wreck commissioner. Ibid.

121. In cases where almost the whole of the cargo consists of grain in bulk, it may be questionable whether the shifting boards should not go from top to bottom; at any rate they ought not to be less than six feet downwards. Ibid.

121a. Six hundred tons of the wheat were stowed in bulk in the main hold, about fifty tons in the fore hold, and the remainder, about 250 tons, in the after hold. The depth of the hold from tonnage deck to ceiling amidships was 16 feet 3 inches; and the vessel had shifting boards in the main hold and in the fore part of the after hold, but none in the fore hold. Both in the main and after holds the shifting boards were composed of five planks each, from nine to ten inches broad, giving a total depth of about four feet, or four feet six inches down, instead of a minimum depth of six feet. The after hold was divided into two parts by a bulkhead across the ship, going down below the hold beams; forward of this bulkhead, grain in bulk was filled in right up to the deck, but aft of it the grain in bulk rose to about the hold beams; above this was laid one tier of grain in sacks, and above that were coils of rope and ship gear. On Friday the after hatch and the fore hatch were opened for the purpose of taking out the sails, cordage, and other things to assist the fires. At that time there was no displacement of cargo nor any list, but after this a slight list took place. Held, that the shifting boards and the arrangements in the after hold were defective, and were not such as would insure the cargo against shifting in such weather as might naturally be expected. Ibid.

122. Abandonment and loss of the ship L., of 71,223 tons register, which sailed from Philadelphia in October for Limerick, with a cargo of 5,257 quarters of maize in bulk. On the 2nd November, the vessel was struck by a heavy squall, throwing her on her beam ends, and causing the cargo to shift. During the gale which continued considerable damage was done, and the pumps becoming choked, the vessel was abandoned. The vessel had been fitted with three shifting boards between the fore and main hatches, extending from the beams about 2 ft. 6 ins. They were $1\frac{1}{4}$ to $1\frac{1}{2}$ inch boards, and nailed double on each side of the stanchions, and trimmed off at an angle of about 45° , and cleated top and bottom. In the way of the main-hatch they were shored from the bilge. There was no lower deck laid. In the 'tween decks there were shifting boards fitted from the beams to the upper deck secured in a similar manner. The cargo was not properly trimmed, as from twenty to thirty tons had to be shifted aft, leaving one empty space in the fore hold, and when the shifting boards gave way, there was nothing to prevent the grain from shifting and eventually settling. Had some of the cargo been shipped in bags and placed over the grain in bulk this might have been prevented. Held, that the abandonment was justifiable, but that the shifting boards were insufficient to withstand the heavy weather which might have been anticipated at that season of the year. The Impero, December 31, 1880.

123. For facts, see No. 67, p. 2484. Held, that the shifting boards in the poop and after hold did not comply with the regulations which require that there shall be longitudinal shifting boards from end to end and from top to bottom of each of the holds. The master was blamed for not having proper shifting boards. The Calliope, January 13, 1882.

124. Loss, with all hands, of the iron screw steamer T., of 1,130 tons register. She sailed from New York in October for Antwerp with 84,314 bushels of grain (chiefly Indian corn), and has not been heard of since. Held, that when the vessel left New York her crank shaft was damaged, but was repaired on the voyage, and that, though repaired, she was unseaworthy in that respect. Held, also, that the cargo was not properly stowed, the grain in the lower hold being in bulk, whilst that in the 'tween decks was in bags, so that as the cargo settled in the lower hold it would leave an empty space immediately below the 'tween decks. Held, also, that the shifting boards were not sufficient, being only carried down to the hold beams instead of to the keelson, at all events, in the fore and main holds. Held, also, that the loss of the vessel was principally due to her being disabled by the failure of her crank shaft, and to the shifting of cargo owing to the insufficiency of the shifting boards, and to no means having been provided to feed the lower holds as the cargo settled. The Telford, July 10, 1880.

125. Abandonment and loss of the iron barque K., of 795 tons register, which left New York in August on a voyage to Liverpool, with 43,750 bushels of corn and 789 bales of cotton. Shortly after the vessel had sailed the cargo shifted on two or three occasions, and had to be readjusted. On the 6th October a gale came on, during which the vessel was thrown on her beam ends, and lost her main and foremasts. The cargo completely shifted, and the master abandoned the ship. She was subsequently boarded by the boatswain and three seamen of the B., by whom she was taken to Falmouth. Held, that the cargo was not properly stowed according to the New York rules, the grain being carried wholly in bulk, and more than 12,000 bushels being stowed in one compartment; that the wooden stanchions or uprights to which the shifting boards were nailed were not secured at top and bottom, and that the shifting boards were not carried to the upper deck. The master was held responsible for the defective stowage and premature abandonment, and his certificate suspended for six months. The Killeena, November 24, 1880.

126. Loss of the iron screw steamer A. A., of 753 tons register. On the 16th November she left Cronstadt for London with a cargo of about 1,200 tons of grain (wheat and oats) and 115 tons of bunker coal. After passing Copenhagen she encountered a heavy gale, during which she took a list to starboard, and the cargo constantly shifted. The gale increased, and the vessel was struck by a tremendous sea, which caused serious damage, and she lay over on her starboard side and was abandoned. Held, that the shifting boards were not sufficient for the purpose; that there was a space of from nine to ten feet long in the fore part of the fore 'tween decks, and a like space in the fore part of the after 'tween decks, where there were no shifting boards at all, and in the after part of the fore hold in the lower hold, and in the 'tween decks there were also for a length of some three to four feet no shifting boards; that the shifting boards were improperly secured, and that there were no beam fittings in the 'tween decks. The master held to be in default for the defective stowage of the cargo, and his certificate suspended for six months. The Annie Arbib, January 6, 1882.

2a. Rice.

1. Inquiries.

(a) Bad Stowage.

127. Loss, with all hands, of the wooden sailing ship E., of 1,225 tons register, on the 28th April, 1879, bound from Bassein to Queenstown, laden with 1,679 tons of rice. She left on the 28th of April, and on the 7th May she sprang a leak, and was afterwards fallen in with by a vessel which rendered assistance towards stopping the leak, but was not heard of after the 22nd. Held, that the E. had too heavy a cargo, considering that she was about to round the Cape of Good Hope in the depth of winter; that the cargo was not properly stowed, and that the system of forming ventilating tunnels with the bags of rice without any support to the sides was not a proper or safe system; that the bags, or at least every alternate tier, should be stowed athwartships or a-burton rather than fore and aft or as longers; that box ventilators are better, and less liable to collapse and so set the cargo in motion, than ventilating tunnels without supports to the sides. That although bags of rice, if not filled quite so full, might lie closer and be less liable to shift, there is no reason why, if stowed a-burton, they should not be capable of efficient stowage. The court attributed the loss to the quantity of cargo on board, and to the mode in which it was stowed. The Essex, July 31, 1880.

2b. Manganese.

1. Inquiries.

(a) Generally.

127a. Held, that manganese waste is a dangerous cargo to carry without proper means to prevent its shifting. The Bruce, 22nd February, 1882.

128. The iron screw steamer B., of 45.81 tons register, left Irvine in January for Port Dundas with 100 tons of manganese. When about one and a half miles outside the bar the master put the helm up, and on bringing the sea abeam the vessel heeled to starboard and capsized. The boat into which some of the crew managed to get also capsized, and all hands were drowned except the master. Held, that the vessel, laden with a semi-fluid cargo, with nothing to prevent its shifting, had not sufficient stability, and that when she lurched to starboard the whole cargo must have gone bodily over to leeward. Ibid.

3. Grain Cargoes in British Ships from particular Ports (and see p. 1325).

7. Exemption of Ships loaded under Board of Trade Rules.

(b) *Board of Trade Rules (and see p. 1326).

129. For the Board of Trade Official Notice of 1882 as to grain cargoes set out on p. 1326 in No. 1246, and the first and second schedules therein referred to, there have been substituted the Board of Trade Official Notices of 1886, and Schedules Nos. I.—VIII.

129a. The several regulations mentioned in note 421, on p. 1326, as contained in the first schedule of the Board of Trade Official Notice of 1882 are the same as those contained in Schedules Nos. I.—VIII. to the Board of Trade Official Notices of 1886, including the Canadian Acts for the lading of grain in ships in the ports of Montreal and Quebec, May 12, 1863, Sept. 18, 1865, April 14, 1871, and May 3, 1873. See Board of Trade Official Notices, Nos. I.—VIII. as to Grain Cargoes, 1886, pp. 5—47.

130. In all cases where the regulations as to stowage of grain cargo set forth in the first schedule do not contain the express provisions contained in this second schedule, then such of the following regulations, if any, as are not so contained must also be complied with. If such of these regulations as may not be included in those of the first schedule are not also complied with then the precautions required by the M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (c. 43), must be taken. See Second Schedule to Board of Trade Official Notices of 1886, p. 4.

130a. Shifting boards must extend to the keelson. Ibid.

131. There shall not be carried between the decks, or, if the ship has more than two decks, between the main and upper decks any grain in bulk, except what may be necessary for feeding the cargo in the hold, and is carried in properly-conducted feeders. Ibid.

131a. Grain carried in bulk must be supplied by proper feeders, or else secured by bags of grain, or other cargo. Ibid.

132. The Board of Trade Rules or Official Notices contained in Nos. 1246—1251, on pp. 1326—1328, are re-issued in the Board of Trade Official Notices of 1886, p. 48—54.

132a. But, with regard to the Official Notice set out on p. 1327, No. 1247, cotton seed being now shipped at Mediterranean and Black Sea ports in a cleaned instead of an uncleaned state, that notice is withdrawn as from December 1, 1885, as far as regards cotton seed, but remains in force as regards oats. See Official Notice of September 23, 1885, in Board of Trade Official Notices of 1886, p. 55. But this notice is temporarily suspended. Ibid.

132b. In the case of vessels, having two or more decks, loading a cargo of oats or cotton seed at a port in the Mediterranean or Black Sea and bound to ports outside the Straits of Gibraltar, oats or cotton seed may be carried in bulk between the decks, provided (1) that the between decks' hatches shall not at any time be put on; and (2) that the strakes of the deck shall be lifted, or, if the deck is an iron deck, sufficient openings shall be provided to admit of the cargo in the between decks feeding the lower hold; and (3) that the precautions specified in ber, 1879, of the Phoenix Insurance Company of Boston for vessels loading grain from and to such ports; for the regulations of July, 1876, of the Board of Underwriters of Philadelphia for vessels loading grain, see Rules and Regulations for the stowage of grain cargoes, published by Ainsley, South Shields.

sections 4 (c) and 4 (d) of the M. S. (Carriage of Grain) Act, 1880 (for which see Nos. 1242 and 1243, on p. 1326), be adopted. See Official Notice of January 1, 1886, No. 314 of 1886, in Board of Trade Official Notices of 1886, p. 56.

133. The last-mentioned notice remains in force until December 31, 1886, when it will be continued or modified as circumstances may require. It suspends the Official Notice of September 23, 1885, in No. 132*a*, supra.

133*a*. For the regulations of November 13, 1879, in force in Adelaide, South Australia, for loading in the ports of that country grain and flour cargoes, see Board of Trade Official Notices of 1886, p. 57.

4. Explosive Substances and Dangerous Goods.

1. Generally* (and see p. 1329).

* (18) For further provisions as to the carriage of explosives in ships, and embodying previous instructions thereon, the definition of explosives into classes, the particulars of such classes, and the general rules for packing them, see Board of Trade Instructions to its principal officers of August, 1877.

(19) Dynamite in small quantities, and when it is in the ordinary plastic state, may be burned without the occurrence of an explosion; the flame produced by it being, however, an extremely fierce one. In a frozen state, and it freezes in very moderate cold weather, i. e., considerably above 32° F., even very small quantities are liable to explode when set fire to. Large quantities of dynamite, if exposed to an intense heat, would be very likely to explode violently, and it is consequently desirable to stow dynamite in the most easily accessible part of a ship, proper precautions being taken to keep it dry. Minute by Professor Abel in Board of Trade Instructions to principal detaining and other officers, January, 1886.

(20) Dynamite should be stowed in the square of the [hatch] hatches. It should be efficiently covered with tarpaulins, and every other necessary precaution should be taken to keep it dry. In the event of such pre-

9. Inquiries.

(a) Gunpowder.

134. The composition of gunpowder and patent wood gunpowder fully considered in The Great Queensland, 21st July, 1877.

134*a*. Loss, with all hands, of the three-masted iron sailing ship the G. Q., of 1,793 tons gross register. She left the East India Docks on a voyage to Melbourne, laden with a cargo of about 2,300 tons of general merchandise, twelve second, and twenty-one steerage passengers, and a crew of thirty-six hands. Off Gravesend she took in about thirty-four tons of gunpowder, and on the 6th of August proceeded on her voyage, and was last seen in about latitude 48° N. and longitude 9° W. The gunpowder and the explosives which she had on board consisted of about thirty tons of ordinary black gunpowder, two tons of patent wood powder, four kegs of fuses, three kegs of percussion caps, four kegs of foreign detonators, and two small packages of sample detonators. The fuses, caps, and sample detonators were stowed in the 'tween decks. The four kegs of detonators were placed in the berth of one of the cabins in the saloon under the control of cautions not being taken, the vessel is to be deemed improperly loaded, and provisionally detained as unsafe. Ibid.

(21) The attention of the Board of Trade has recently been called to the practice existing, it appears, chiefly on the Clyde, of stowing dangerous acids under deck in vessels carrying inflammable and other cargoes, although the greatest care may be exercised in the stowage of dangerous acids in a vessel's 'tween decks; the practice is one likely to endanger the safety of the ship, and may render the ship liable to be provisionally detained as unsafe. Board of Trade Official Caution Handbill, No. 66, May, 1885.

(22) For provisions as to combustible and dangerous goods, their conveyance, loading, and unloading, for the marking, removal, and guarding thereof in the Mersey Docks, see the Mersey Docks Acts Consolidation Act, 1858, c. 92, L., and the Bye-Laws of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board thereon, of January 25, 1882.

(23) As to the regulations of the Sharpness New Docks and Gloucester and Birmingham Navigation Company under the Explosives Act, 1875, and the Petroleum Acts, 1871—1879, see Bye-Laws of those Authorities, of June, 1876, and October, 1881.

the steward. The ordinary black gunpowder was in ordinary kegs or barrels, and was stowed in a compartment the sides of which were composed of floor boards laid flat one on the other across and fore and aft, and projecting from $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 ft. from each side, the two ends being composed of measurement goods, jams and pickles, and London goods. The patent wood powder was contained in 183 square cases, and was stowed in the fore part, on the port side. The rest of the powder was packed all over the remainder of the compartment, the barrels being laid on their bilges. Held, that the gunpowder compartment was fairly well constructed, and that the loss of the vessel was not to be attributed to any defect in the construction of the chamber containing it, but that a regularly-constructed magazine would have been better considering the large amount of powder on board; that the loss of the vessel with all on board was probably due to the spontaneous combustion of the two tons of wood powder; that the ignition of the powder was caused by the impure state in which it was when shipped, and for which the gunpowder company were alone to blame, and that the owners were also to blame for having, in violation of the 49th Article of the Thames Conservancy Bye-Laws of January, 1876, shipped the powder, which was a nitro compound, in the same ship and in the same space or compartment with thirty tons of ordinary black powder. No costs. Ibid.

Part VI.—EXEMPTIONS FROM, AND LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS.

2. Limitations under M. S. Acts.

1. Generally* (and see p. 1336).

135. If the loss is occasioned by the actual fault of one of the part owners, his co-owners are not thereby precluded from claiming a limitation of their liability. The Spirit of the Ocean, Br. & Lush. 336.

135a. The word "owners" in the 54th section of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), includes unregistered as well as registered owners. Ibid.

136. On 24th July, Cary, junr., a registered part owner of a vessel, transferred his shares by bill of sale to Cary, sen. The bill of sale was not registered until after 22nd November, on which day a collision took place, Cary, junr., being on board and in command of the vessel as master. It was not denied that Cary, junr., was personally in fault. In an action for limitation of liability instituted by Cary, sen., and other registered owners, but not including Cary, junr., held, that all the plaintiffs were entitled to claim limitation. Ibid.

136a. Where a ship is held liable for a collision caused by a defect in her machinery, and such defect is due, not to her master or crew but to the default or negligence of other persons who are employed by the shipowner to repair the machinery on shore before the commencement of the voyage, and for the purposes of the voyage, the collision is occasioned by improper navigation within the meaning of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54, sub-s. 4, so as to entitle the owner to limit his liability under the provisions of that act. The Tyne Steam Shipping Co. v. The British Owners Co., 77 L. T. 176. (C. A.)

136b. In an action of collision an order was made by consent that the action be "discontinued without costs on the ground of inevitable accident." An action was afterwards brought by the owners of cargo on the plaintiff's vessel against the defendant in respect of the same collision, and both ships were found to blame. The defendants limited their liability and paid the statutory amount into court. The plaintiffs in the first action, then with the defendant's consent, obtained a judge's order setting aside the discontinuance, and claimed against the fund in court. On objection by the cargo owners, held, that the claim was valid, as the agreement and order operated as a discontinuance and not as a release of the first action. The Ardandhu, 11 P. D. 40; 55 L. J. Adm. 9; 54 L. T. 469. See also The Stormcock, p. 1837, No. 538. But see The Belcairn, No. 1405a, p. 1344.

* (24) For Canadian statutory provisions analogous to those of the M. S. Act Amendment Act, 1862 (c. 63), s. 54, for which see p. 520, Nos. 1337, 1338, limiting the shipowners' liability to 32 dollars 92 cents., equivalent to £8 per ton as therein mentioned, see the Canadian Act, 43 Vict. c. 27, in 15 Hertslet's Collection of Treaties, 973.

2. The Crown (and see p. 1339).

137. The Crown, if it elects to do so, may come in with other suitors and claim rateably against the fund in court in a limitation action. The Zoe, 11 P. D. 72.

7. Notice to Board of Trade before Action (and see p. 1341).

138. A refusal by the Board of Trade to institute an inquiry under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 512, is not a condition precedent to an action in rem against a foreign ship. The Vera Cruz (No. 1), 9 P. D. 88; 53 L. J. P. D. 33; 5 Asp. 254.

9. Proceedings for limiting Liability.(c) Calculation of Tonnage (and see p. 1345).

139. The owners of a foreign ship having on the upper deck a closed-in space solely appropriated to the berthing of the crew, are entitled in limiting their liability to deduct such space under the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 21, sub-s. 4, though the provisions of the M. S. Act, 1867 (c. 124), s. 9, have not been complied with. The Palermo, 10 P. D. 21; 54 L. J. P. D. 46; 5 Asp. 369.

14. Practice.

See tit. PRACTICE, Pt. III. p. 1683.

Part VII.—COMPULSORY PILOTAGE.

13. *Trinity House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.*1. Generally (and see p. 1375).

140. The judgment in the case of The Johan Sverdrup in the Newcastle County Court, mentioned in note 522, p. 1375, reversed on appeal to the P. D. & A. Division, the provisions of sect. 6 of the local act, 41 Geo. 3, c. lxxxvi. relied on in the court below having been held to be superseded by a provisional order of the Board of Trade as to the Tyne confirmed by the Tyne Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1865. The Johan Sverdrup, 11 P. D. 49.

26. Port of Liverpool (and see p. 1381).

141. For provisions as to pilots and pilotage for the port of Liverpool, see Bye-laws thereon of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board of February, 1885.*

38. *Pilot in Charge.*1. Generally (and see p. 1398).

142. Collision in the Thames between the dumb barge K. and the steamer O. The O., with her stem and anchor, struck and sunk the K. The O., in breach of the rule, was carrying her anchor hanging from the hawsepipe, stock awash. Held, that the collision was caused by the O., and the damage by the O.'s anchor, which was hanging from the hawsepipe with the stock above water, in such a position that the pea of the fluke penetrated the K.'s side, and that for this breach of the Thames Conservancy Rules the owners of the O. were responsible, notwithstanding there was at the time a duly licensed pilot on board the O. by compulsion of law, and in charge of her. The Odiel, Dec. 2, 1885.

142a. Collision between the H. and the A. Both ships held to blame, but the fault on board the H. held to be solely that of the compulsorily taken. Held, that the H. should contribute nothing, but should receive half her damages. The Hector, 8 P. D. 218; 52 L. J. P. D. 51; 5 Asp. 101; 48 L. T. 890; 31 W. R. 881.

142b. See as to pilot not being allowed to take the helm, Nos. 1990, 1999, and 2023, pp. 1393—1395.

3. Master and Crew generally (and see p. 1402).

143. A vessel compulsorily in charge of a pilot was got under way when the weather was foggy and hazy, but vessels could be seen at 300 yards distant. Held, that this was not so manifestly dangerous as to call for the master's interference, and that the owners were not liable for damage caused by the vessel under weigh. The Oakfield, 11 P. D. 34; 55 L. J. Adm. 11; 51 L. T. 578; 34 W. R. 687.

5. Interference with Pilot (and see p. 1403).

144. Held, that the exhibition of a stern light contrary to the regulations, although the ship was under the orders of the pilot compulsorily taken and in charge, did not exempt the owners from responsibility, as the master should not have permitted an infringement of the regulations. The Ripon, 10 P. D. 65; 54 L. J. P. D. 56; 5 Asp. 365.

144a. The master of a vessel compulsorily in charge of a pilot, expressed the opinion that it would be proper to starboard and go across another vessel's bows. The pilot adopted this opinion, and thereby brought about a collision. Held, that this was not such an interference by the master as to render his owners liable. The Oakfield, supra, No. 143.

Part VIII.—PART OWNERS.

3. Actions of Restraint.

1. Generally (and see p. 1418).

145. Action by one part owner against another to oblige him to give security for ship's safe return, Grove v. Hedges, Holt, 470, 471, cited in Adams v. Crouch, Marsden, 118.

145a. Bail given for the safe return of the ship to Newcastle. The ship returned to Hartlepool, when the majority of the owners designing her for another foreign voyage, the minor owners again arrested her. Held, that the security in the first action still attached, as the ship had not returned to Newcastle, and the second action accordingly dismissed with costs. The Regalia, 26th November, 1884.

4. Actions for Accounts (and see p. 1420).

146. The Admiralty Division has no jurisdiction under the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), s. 8, over an action in rem, claiming an account of the earnings and sale of a ship when the ship is registered at the Port of Guernsey, and not at any port in England or Wales. The Robinsons and The Satellite, 5 Asp. 338.

6. Managing Owner, or Ship's Husband.

1. Generally (and see p. 1424).

147. Quære, Is a managing owner under ordinary circumstances entitled to judgment against his co-owners in respect of sums of money due to third parties on account of the ship, but which he has not paid? The Charles Jackson, 5 Asp. 399.

19. Bail.

8. To Counterclaim or in Cross Actions (and see p. 1548).

4. When the owners of a ship which has sunk, and the owners of the cargo laden on board her, join in an action against another ship for damages sustained by collision, the court will order the claim by the owner of the ship to be dismissed, unless security for the counter-claim is given, but will allow the owner of cargo to proceed without security. The Carnarvon Castle, 38 L. T. 736; 26 W. R. 876.—C. A.

5. The power of the Admiralty division under sect. 34 of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861 (c. 10), to order an action to be stayed until bail has been given to answer a cross-action or counter-claim, does not extend to making an absolute order to give bail; and in a damage action in which the plaintiffs had discontinued after the defendants had counter-claimed, the court refused to enforce an order made by the registrar to give bail to answer such counter-claim. The Alexander, 48 L. T. 797.

6. In an action and cross-action, if the proceedings are in personam, and the ship has not been arrested, nor bail given in the principal cause, the court cannot stay the proceedings in the cross-action until the plaintiff in the principal cause has given security for costs as defendant in the cross cause. The Amazon, The Osprey, 36 L. 2. Amendment (and see p. 1589).

11. Where the questions in the preliminary act are improperly answered, the court is disposed to view that party's case with suspicion; and if they are intentionally so answered, the court will scrutinize the case most closely, and approach it with the gravest suspicion. The Godiva, 11 P. D. 20; 5 Asp. 524; 55 L. J. P. D. 13; 54 L. T. 55.

12. Art. 9 of the defendants' preliminary act, which stated that "the L. (the plaintiffs' vessel) when first seen was at anchor," was ordered to be amended, as not containing a proper statement of the distance and bearing of the L. when first seen. Ibid.

13. The defendant, in his preliminary act, in answer to the question as to his vessel's course and speed answered, "manœuvring to get alongside the S. at anchor." The court, at the hearing, of its own motion, objected to this answer as insufficient, and it was then and there altered. The Portugueselete, August 11, 1884.

34. Pleadings.

6. Statement of Defence and Counter-claim.

(a) Statement of Defence (and see p. 1593).

14. In a cause of damage by a collision, alleged to have been caused by the acts of the owners, and their servants, of the vessel proceeded against, a general denial in answer was pleaded, with a special defence that the damage complained of had already been adjudicated upon in an action at law, and judgment obtained and satisfied. It was proved by the principal defendant at law that the damage was occasioned by acts done by him on his own responsibility, and in the assertion of a right claimed by him as consignee for the sale of the vessel, and not as agent of the owners. Held, that the action could not be maintained; but as the defence thus disclosed had not been specially pleaded, defendants were refused their costs, and not allowed to go into the special defence, though the judgment of the court thereon was asked for. Held, on appeal, that the general traverse and denial of the averments in the petition was sufficient to justify the evidence produced; and that the defendants were entitled to have the judgment of the court on the special defence pleaded. The Orient, 8 Moore, P. C. C. N.S. 74.

35. Proofs.

28. Examination of Witnesses out of Court before Trial.

(b) By Commission (and see p. 1621).

15. Where, in any civil proceeding in any court of competent jurisdiction, an order for the examination of any witness or person has been made, and a commission, mandamus, order, or request for the examination of such witness or person is addressed to any court or to any judge of a court, in India or the Colonies, or elsewhere in her Majesty's dominions, beyond the jurisdiction of the court ordering the examination, it shall be lawful for such court or the chief judge thereof, or such judge to nominate some fit person to take such examination, and any deposition or examination taken before an examiner so nominated shall be admissible in evidence to the same extent as if it had been taken by or before such court or judge. The Evidence by Commission Act, 1885 (c. 74), s. 2.

16. For provisions applying 22 Vict. c. 20 (for taking evidence in proceedings before tribunals in her Majesty's dominions in places out of their jurisdiction), to proceedings under this act, for making rules as to costs of examinations under this act, and allowing the taking of the oaths or affirmations of the witnesses, according to the law in force at the place of their examination, and as to such examination in criminal proceedings, Ibid. es. 3—6.

38. Trial.

8. With or without Jury (and see p. 1636).

17. Ord. XXXVI. r. 6, gives no absolute right to a jury in actions which, before the Judicature Act, 1873, would have been tried without a jury; and, therefore, an action in rem for disbursements in the Admiralty Division falls within Ord. XXXVI. rr. 4 and 7a, and there is a discretionary power only to allow trial of such an action by a jury. The Temple Bar, 11 P. D. 6.

18. In an action in personam for damage to cargo, the President granted an application for the cause to be tried by a special jury. Schroeder, Gebruder & Co. v. Myers, Son & Co., May 26, 1886.

39. Judgments and Orders.

6. By Consent (and see p. 1644).

19. Final as well as interlocutory decrees and orders may be obtained by consent, without an order of the judge in person, but the consent must be express. The Buenos Ayres, 17 W. R. 627.

REGISTRAR AND MERCHANTS.

Part II.—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

2. In Actions of Damage to Cargo.

1. Generally (and see p. 1738) p. 2507

Part II.—MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

2. In Actions of Damage to Cargo.

1. Generally (and see p. 1738).

1. In an action against a shipowner by the vendor of goods sold "to arrive" for the loss of the goods, the measure of the damages is the price at which the goods were sold, and not the market price at the port of destination on the day on which the ship would in due course have arrived. Rodoconachi v. Milburn, 17 Q. B. D. 316.

2. A cargo of seed was shipped by the plaintiffs on the defendants' ship under a charterparty, which provided, inter alia, that the master was to sign bill of lading at any rate of freight, and, as customary at port of loading, without prejudice to the stipulations of the charterparty; sufficient cash for ship's disbursements, to be advanced, if required, to the captain by charterers on account of freight, subject to insurance only. The bill of lading contained an exception, which was not in the charterparty, protecting the owners from liability for any act, neglect, or default of the master. Money was advanced under the charterparty, at the port of loading, for disbursements. The plaintiffs did not insure this sum. The cargo was lost by the negligence of the master. Held, that the defendants were liable, that the clause in the bill of lading limiting their liability could not control the contract contained in the charterparty, but that the plaintiffs were not entitled to deduct from the freight due to the defendants the sum advanced, subject to insurance, for that the meaning of that clause was that the shipowners were to allow to the shippers a sum equal to the premium payable on the insurance of the advanced freight, and that the plaintiffs could not, if they did not insure, deduct the money so advanced from the freight due to the defendants. Ibid.

Part I.—IN ENGLISH COURTS.

1. Generally (and see p. 1781).

1. Where salvors, in answer to a request for assistance, render services which, through no fault of theirs, are ineffectual, and leave the vessel in distress in a worse position than they found her, they are entitled to no reward, even though the vessel is ultimately saved by other salvors. The Cheerful, 11 P. D. 3; 5 Asp. 525.

2. The C. broke down and was then in a position of risk. The H. took the C. in tow, but after towing some time the hawsers parted, and the C. then anchored and was in a position of greater danger than when the H. took her in tow. The H. was unable to make fast a hawser again and left the C. The C. was then brought into safety by two tugs. Held, that as no actual benefit was conferred by the H. she was not entitled to salvage. Ibid.

3. On grounds of public policy it is most important, and particularly so at the present time, that awards of salvage should be made which will tend to counteract an inducement to owners of large Atlantic steamers to decline rendering salvage services, except where life is in imminent danger. The Cephalonia, 14th April, 1886.

4. Both the salving vessel, the V., and the salved vessel, the C., were large Atlantic steamers of great value. The C., in mid Atlantic, with seventy-five passengers on board, broke and lost her shaft, and was proceeding under sail. The weather was moderate, but the wind was adverse, though it afterwards became favourable, and the weather worse. The C. was drifting out of the track of North Atlantic steamers. The V. towed the C. for six days, a distance of 600 miles. The V., in doing so, committed a deviation in law, but there was no great deviation. The values of the C., her cargo and freight, were £110,000. A tender was made of £2,500. The court, under the circumstances, and on grounds of public policy, awarded £3,500. Ibid.

5. Action by the owners, master, and crew of the steamship D. C. for salvage services to the steamship B. The D. C., which was under charter by the government as a transport, and lying at Suakim, laden with forage, when she was ordered by the officer of transports to proceed to the assistance of the B. which was aground on a reef about twenty miles to the northward of Suakim, and having taken on board an officer and forty-five seamen of the Royal Navy she left Suakim, found the B., and after several trials, and with much difficulty, towed her off the reef. The defendants contended that the plaintiffs were not entitled to salvage on the ground that the D. C. was bound to render the services as a government transport, and under the terms of her agreement with government, relying on Art. 35 of the Regulations for the Transport Service. But held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, and on a value of £16,000 award made of £560. The Bertie, June 3, 1886.

1. Generally (and see p. 2279).

1. Held, that a master appointed by the owners, and by the terms of the charter-party the charterer's agent, is, as between the owner and the seamen, the owner's agent for engaging them, and that the seamen are not bound to look into the title of the master to ascertain whether he is the agent for the owner or the charterer in engaging them. Re The Great Eastern Steamship Co., Claim of Williams and others, 5 Asp. 511.

14. Claims in the nature of—

5. Compensation for delay in Payment.
- (a) Ten Days' Double Pay.
- (aa) Masters (and see p. 2297).

2. Action by master for his wages and disbursements. At the institution of the suit accounts were outstanding between the owners and the plaintiff, and within two days afterwards the wages were paid. Held, that the owners had not refused to pay without sufficient cause within the meaning of sect. 187 of the M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), and that therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to recover ten days' double pay. The Turgot, 5 Asp. 548.

15. Lien.

1. Generally (and see p. 2298).

3. Seamen engaged by the owners or their agent for a voyage on board a foreign-going ship, are entitled to a lien on the ship and the proceeds of its sale for their wages, although the engagement of the seaman was not in writing, and the ship did not proceed on the voyage. Re The Great Eastern Steamship Company, Claim of Williams and others, 5 Asp. 511.

19. Payment.

4. Period of (and see p. 2313).

4. In the case of foreign-going ships, the owner or master of the ship shall pay to each seaman on account, at the time when he lawfully leaves the ship at the end of his engagement, £2, or one-fourth of the balance due to him, whichever is least; and shall pay him the remainder of his wages within two clear days (exclusive of any Sunday, fast day in Scotland, or bank holiday) after he so leaves the ship. See Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 4, sub-s. 1.

5. In the event of the seaman's wages, or any part thereof, not being paid or settled as in this section mentioned, then, unless the delay is due to the act or default of the seaman, or to any reasonable dispute as to liability, or to any other cause not being the act or default of the owner or master, the seaman's wages shall continue to run and be payable until the time of the final settlement thereof. Ibid. sub-s. 4.

6. The words "at the end of his en-agement," mentioned in the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 4, sub-s. 1, as the time of payment of the seaman's wages, mean the time at which his actual service terminates, and include the natural effluxion of the agreement as well as the discharge of the seaman on breach of the contract, so that to entitle the seaman to wages it is not necessary that the whole term of his engagement should have expired, but it is sufficient if his actual service on board has ended. Re The Great Eastern Steamship Co., Claim of Williams and others, 5 Asp. 511.

7. The period of "final settlement" up to which seamen are entitled to wages

* (1) The men may be engaged either by the month, the voyage, or à la part, in which last case their salary is either a certain proportion of the freight, or a certain share in the profits, according as they are engaged à la part de fret, or à la part de profit. D. A. 630, 631.

(2) Held, that the men who are engaged at a salary contingent on the profits of the voyage (à la part), are joint owners of the freight, and that their share is to be delivered to them, notwithstanding any attachment of the creditors of the master, even for a bottomry bond. D. A. 682; Dutruc, Gens de l'Equipe, No. 54.

(3) No change can take place in the agreement between the master and a seaman unless in the presence of the commissary of classes, and a reduction of wages agreed to by a seaman not in the presence of that officer would not be binding on the seaman. D. A. 638; Dutruc, ibid. No. 10.

(4) As a rule, seamen's wages cannot be attached unless the debt be for house rent, food, or clothing of the seamen and their families, and with the authority of the commissary of classes. Art. 37 of the Ord. of Nov. 1, 1745; Caumont, vo. Gens de Mer, No. 20; Dutruc, vo. Gens de l'Equipe, No. 34, or for alimony under Arts. 203, 205, and 214, C. Civ.

(4a) The same rule applies to the officers. Decree of March 4, 1852; Dutruc, ibid. No. 41.

(5) All rules made for seamen's wages are applicable to the officers and other members of the ship's company. C. C. A. 272.

† (6) It is usual that just before the departure of a vessel for a long voyage (voyage de long cours—the opposite of a coasting voyage), the crew should receive three months' advance on their wages; and they may claim the same should their engagement show nothing to the contrary. Renaud and others, Dutruc, ibid. 32.

‡ (6a) The wages of the seamen, or their share, if à la part, cannot be insured. C. C. A. 347.

under the Merchant Seamen (Payment of Wages and Rating) Act, 1880 (c. 16), s. 4, sub-s. 4, is, in cases of litigation, the date of the chief clerk's certificate in Chancery or the report of the registrar in Admiralty. Ibid.

3. Insurance and Respondentia Bond.‡

4. Abandonment of Voyage.§

(7) Nor be hypothecated under a respondentia contract (contrat à la grosse). Ibid. 319.

(7a) Unless there have been accounts stated, or bill given, or notice of action (citation). Ibid. 434.

§ (8) Should the voyage for which the men are hired be voluntarily given up by the owner, charterer, or master before the commencement of the voyage, the men, where engaged by the month or by the voyage, are to be paid for the time during which they have been employed in the equipment of the vessel. And as indemnity for the non-execution of the contract, they are entitled to retain the advances which have been made to them. Where they have received none they may claim one month's wages. Art. 252, C. C. If they have been hired for the voyage, the wages agreed for it are to be divided by the number of months of its probable duration, and one month at that rate allowed. The indemnity is sometimes fixed by local usage. D. A. 696; Dutruc, Ibid. 70; Caumont, Ibid. No. 33.

(9) And they would be entitled to that indemnity though they were engaged immediately for another vessel, and had therefore suffered no loss from the breaking up of the voyage. D. A. 695.

(10) Should the voyage last a shorter time than expected, or the cargo be landed at a nearer port by the free will and act of the master, no reduction shall be made in the wages of the men hired by the voyage. C. C. A. 256; D. A. 698.

(11) Should the voyage be voluntarily given up after it has begun, the men who are hired by the voyage are entitled to the whole of their wages. C. C. A. 252; D. A. 696. The abandonment of the vessel made by the owner to exonerate himself from liability is tantamount to a voluntary breaking up of the voyage. So, also, if the voyage is abandoned, in consequence of unseaworthiness from the fault of the owner. Dutruc, Ibid. No. 75.

(12) Seamen, where hired by the month, are entitled to their wages for the time that has elapsed, and to an indemnity besides, amounting to their wages for half the probable duration of the voyage. C. C. A. 252. In both cases they are entitled to expenses back to the port of departure. C. C. A. 252 (see infra, Notes 19, 20). But for their labour in equipping the vessel they can claim nothing but their food. Dutruc, Ibid. No. 74.

(13) The voyage is considered as begun when the vessel has been on its way for twenty-four hours. D. A. 696; Dutruc, Ibid. 73.

(14) A mere change of destination is not to be considered as a breaking up of the voyage, and men engaged for a particular voyage cannot be compelled to make a different one; but should they break off they can claim no indemnity. D. A. 698; Dutruc, Ibid. No. 76.

* (15) Should the voyage be prevented before its commencement by vis major, such as an interdict of commerce or an act of the authorities, the men hired by the month or voyage are entitled to nothing but wages for their labour in equipping the vessel. C. C. A. 253. The men engaged à la part can claim nothing. C. C. A. 257.

(16) Should an interdict of commerce take place in the course of the voyage, the same distinction is applicable; the men engaged by the voyage or month may claim for the time elapsed, the men à la part receive neither wages nor indemnity. C. C. A. 254, 257.

(17) An arrest of princes after the voyage has begun entitles the men engaged by the month to claim half the stipulated wages for the time of the suspension. C. C. A. 254.

(18) Those by the voyage can claim the sum agreed for the same, and those à la part nothing beyond their shares. Ibid.

† (19) The men hired by the voyage, or by the month, if the voyage be interrupted, may claim their expenses back at the rate settled by the regulations (Dutruc, ibid. No. 127), unless their passage is procured for them in another vessel back to their quartier.

(19a) Held, that the men are not to be understood to have given up the right to the allowance for their journey back, though their engagement states that the vessel may be unloaded at any other port than that originally intended. Dutruc, ibid. 81.

(20) Held, however, by the tribunal of Marseilles that, where the voyage was stopped by the owner, the men were entitled to their return expenses, though engaged on another vessel. Dutruc, ibid. No. 79.

(20a.) Should the breaking up, stoppage, or prolongation of the voyage be attributable to those who make up the cargo, the men engaged à la part may claim their due proportion of the indemnity paid to the vessel, as if it were freight. If they are caused by the master or owner they are liable for the indemnity to the men engaged à la part. C. C. A. 257.

‡ (21) Should the voyage be prolonged, not by accident, but by the free will of the master or owner, the men engaged by the voyage are entitled to a proportionate increase of the wages agreed (C. C. A. 255); those by the month are, of course, paid at the rate of the duration of the voyage. Dutruc, ibid. No. 89. Should the prolongation be without satisfactory reason they would be entitled to damages. Dutruc, ibid. No. 91.

§ (22) The owner cannot exonerate himself from the payment of the wages to which the ship's company are entitled by the abandonment of the ship and freight. Caumont, ibid. No. 72; Dutruc, ibid. No. 145.

|| (23) When there is a total loss of the vessel and the cargo through capture or wreck, the men, whatever be the nature of their engagement, can claim no wages; but they are entitled to retain what they have already received. C. C. A. 258.

(24) When the vessel has been lost on the return voyage, it has been doubted whether the crew was entitled to wages for the previous voyage, but the generally-received opinion now is that the loss of the vessel destroys their claim only with respect to the wages of the last voyage. See the authorities in Dutruc, ibid. No. 103.

(25) Should any portion of the vessel have been saved, the men engaged by the month or voyage are to be paid their wages out of the produce of the sale of the same, and they have a privileged claim thereon, deducting costs and salvage. C. C. A. 259; D. A. 732.

(25a) If there are no remnants of the vessel saved, or if they are insufficient, or if goods only are saved, the men engaged by the voyage, by the month, and au fret, have a privileged claim on the freight due. Ibid. But this privileged claim is only for the wages of the last voyage. C. C. A. 191; Arts. 259, 260; Caumont, ibid. No. 44; Dutruc, ibid. No. 109.

(26) But their right is forfeited if they refuse to assist in the salvage, ibid.; Dutruc, ibid. No. 112; but see the authorities, contra, ibid. Whatever be the nature of the engagement of the men, they are entitled to a salary for their labour in salving the wreck and goods. C. C. A. 261.

10. *Seaman wounded or Sick.11. *Seaman made Prisoner.†*12. *Seaman's Death.‡*13. *Dismissal.§*14. Limitations of Actions.||

* (27) The men are entitled to their wages though ill during the voyage; and also if they are wounded, provided the wounds have been incurred in the service of the vessel, or in fighting with enemies or pirates. C. C. A. 262, 263. They are also similarly entitled to their food and medical expenses. Ibid.

(28) It is immaterial whether the wound has been received before the sailing of the vessel. It is otherwise with sickness. Should a man fall ill after his engagement, and before sailing, he can claim nothing but his wages for the work he has done in loading the vessel. D. A. 736; Dutruc, ibid. 148.

† (29) If a man is made prisoner on board, and put into slavery, he is entitled to his wages till the day he was captured, should the vessel not be taken or lost. C. C. A. 266; Dutruc, ibid. No. 177.

(30) The seaman who, when sent out of the vessel for the service of the ship, has been captured, and put into slavery, may claim the whole amount of his wages. He may likewise claim an indemnity for his redemption should the vessel arrive in safety. C. C. A. 267.

(31) The indemnity is due from the owners of the vessel if the seaman has been sent out of the vessel on the service of the vessel only; and jointly by them and the owners of cargo, if the seaman has been sent on shore in their common interest. C. C. A. 268. The same distinction applies to the wages falling due after the capture. D. A. No. 763; Dutruc, ibid. Nos. 179, 180.

(32) The indemnity shall amount to six hundred francs. C. C. A. 269; Dutruc, ibid. No. 181.

‡ (33) Should a seaman engaged by the voyage die on the voyage out, his heirs and successors may claim half the stipulated wages; should he die on his way back, they may claim the whole. C. C. A. 265. But if his death be caused by his own fault, damages to the owner or charterer may be deducted. D. A. 754; Dutruc, ibid. No. 170. The wages are due for the whole voyage if the man is killed in defending the vessel, and it arrives safely. C. C. A. 265; Dutruc, ibid. 171.

(34) If he has been engaged by the month, his representatives are entitled to his wages up to the day of his death; if à la part, they may claim the whole of his share, though he died at the very outset of the voyage. C. C. A. 265.

§ (35) The master cannot dismiss a French seaman in a foreign country. Dutruc, ibid. No. 185; C. C. A. 270.

(35a) Should the master dismiss (after the closing of the role d'équipage), in French territory, a seaman without proper cause before the beginning of the voyage, the seaman may claim a third of his wages. C. C. A. 270; Dutruc, ibid. 189.

(36) If his engagement is à la part, his share should be valued at the rate fixed by Art. 270, C. C.; Dutruc, ibid. 192.

(37) Should the dismissal occur out of the home of the man, he can claim his return expenses. Dutruc, ibid. 189.

(38) If he proves that he has been dismissed without cause in the course of the voyage, he may claim the whole amount of the stipulated wages and the expenses of his return home. C. C. A. 270.

(39) The captain in the above case shall have no action against the owners for the return of the indemnity he may have had to pay. Ibid.

(40) The dismissed seaman who has received the proper indemnity, is not entitled to wages for his labour in equipping the vessel. Dutruc, ibid. 189.

|| (41) All actions for payment of wages are limited to one year from the end of the voyage. C. C. A. 433.

International Regulations for preventing Collisions, issued under Order in Council of August 11, 1884.*

Art. 1. In the following rules every steam ship which is under sail and not under steam is to be considered a sailing ship; and every steam ship which is under steam, whether under sail or not, is to be considered a ship under steam.

Rules concerning Lights.

Art. 2. The lights mentioned in the following Articles, numbered 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11, and no others, shall be carried in all weathers, from sunset to sunrise.

Art. 3. A seagoing steamship when under way shall carry—

(a) On or in front of the foremast, at a height above the hull of not less than 20 feet, and if the breadth of the ship exceeds 20 feet, then at a height above the hull not less than such breadth, a bright white light, so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 20 points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light 10 points on each side of the ship, viz., from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least five miles.

(b) On the starboard side, a green light so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to 2 points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

* These regulations came into force on the 1st of September, 1884. See the Order in Council of 14th August, 1884.

(c) On the port side, a red light, so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 10 points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to 2 points abaft the beam on the port side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(d) The said green and red side lights shall be fitted with inboard screens projecting at least three feet forward from the light, so as to prevent these lights from being seen across the bow.

Art. 4. A steamship, when towing another ship, shall, in addition to her side lights, carry two bright white lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, so as to distinguish her from other steam ships. Each of these lights shall be of the same construction and character, and shall be carried in the same position, as the white light which other steam ships are required to carry.

Art. 5. (a) A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, which from any accident is not under command, shall at night carry, in the same position as the white light which steam ships are required to carry, and, if a steam ship, in place of that light, three red lights in globular lanterns, each not less than 10 inches in diameter, in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night with a clear atmosphere at a distance of at least two miles; and shall by day carry in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three black balls or shapes, each two feet in diameter.

(b) A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, employed in laying or in picking up a telegraph cable, shall at night carry in the same position as the white light which steam ships are required to carry, and, if a steam ship, in place of that light, three lights in globular lanterns each not less than 10 inches in diameter, in a vertical line over one another, not less than six feet apart; the highest and lowest of these lights shall be red, and the middle light shall be white, and they shall be of such a character that the red lights shall be visible at the same distance as the white light. By day she shall carry in a vertical line one over the other not less than six feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three shapes not less than two feet in diameter, of which the top and bottom shall be globular in shape and red in colour, and the middle one diamond in shape and white.

(c) The ships referred to in this Article, when not making any way through the water, shall not carry the side lights, but when making way shall carry them.

(d) The lights and shapes required to be shown by this Article are to be taken by other ships as signals that the ship showing them is not under command, and cannot therefore get out of the way. The signals to be made by ships in distress and requiring assistance are contained in Article 27.

Art. 6. A sailing ship under way, or being towed, shall carry the same lights as are provided by Article 3 for a steam ship under way, with the exception of the white light, which she shall never carry.

Art. 7. Whenever, as in the case of small vessels during bad weather, the green and red side lights cannot be fixed, these lights shall be kept on deck, on their respective sides of the vessel, ready for use; and shall, on the approach of or to other vessels, be exhibited on their respective sides in sufficient time to prevent collision, in such manner as to make them most visible, and so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side.

To make the use of these portable lights more certain and easy, the lanterns containing them shall each be painted outside with the colour of the light they respectively contain, and shall be provided with proper screens.

Art. 8. A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, when at anchor, shall carry, where it can best be seen, but at a height not exceeding 20 feet above the hull, a white light, in a globular lantern of not less than 8 inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear uniform and unbroken light visible all round the horizon, at a distance of at least one mile.

Art. 9. A pilot vessel, when engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall not carry the lights required for other vessels, but shall carry a white light at the masthead, visible all round the horizon, and shall also exhibit a flare-up light or flare-up lights at short intervals, which shall never exceed fifteen minutes.

A pilot vessel, when not engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall carry lights similar to those of other ships.

Art. 10. Open boats and fishing vessels of less than 20 tons net registered tonnage, when under way, and when not having their nets, trawls, dredges, or lines in the water, shall not be obliged to carry the coloured side lights; but every such boat and vessel shall, in lieu thereof, have ready at hand a lantern with a green glass on the one side and a red glass on the other side, and on approaching to or being approached by another vessel, such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side.

The following portion of this Article applies only to fishing vessels and boats when in the sea off the coast of Europe lying north of Cape Finisterre:—

(a) All fishing vessels and fishing boats of 20 tons net registered tonnage, or upwards, when under way and when not required by the following regulations in this Article to carry and show the lights therein named, shall carry and show the same lights as other vessels under way.

(b) All vessels when engaged in fishing with drift nets shall exhibit two white lights from any part of the vessel where they can be best seen. Such lights shall be placed so that the vertical distance between them shall be not less than 6 feet and not more than 10 feet; and so that the horizontal distance between them, measured in a line with the keel of the vessel, shall not be less than 5 feet and not more than 10 feet. The lower of these two lights shall be the more forward, and both of them shall be of such a character, and contained in lanterns of such construction as to show all round the horizon, on a dark night with a clear atmosphere, for a distance of not less than three miles.

(c) A vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out shall carry the same lights as a vessel when engaged in fishing with drift nets.

(d) If a vessel when fishing becomes stationary in consequence of her gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, she shall show the light and make the fog-signal for a vessel at anchor.

(e) Fishing vessels and open boats may at any time use a flare-up in addition to the lights which they are by this Article required to carry and show. All flare-up lights exhibited by a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net shall be shown at the after part of the vessel, excepting that, if the vessel is hanging by the stern to her trawl, dredge, or drag net, they shall be exhibited from the bow.

(f) Every fishing vessel and every open boat, when at anchor between sunset and sunrise, shall exhibit a white light, visible all round the horizon at a distance of at least one mile.

(g) In fog, mist, or falling snow, a drift net vessel attached to her nets, and a vessel when trawling, dredging, or fishing with any kind of drag net, and a vessel employed in line fishing with her lines out, shall, at intervals of not more than two minutes, make a blast with her fog-horn and ring her bell alternately.

Art. 11. A ship which is being overtaken by another shall show from her stern to such last-mentioned ship a white light or a flare-up light.

Sound Signals for Fog, &c.

Art. 12. A steamship shall be provided with a steam whistle or other efficient steam sound signal, so placed that the sound may not be intercepted by any obstructions, and with an efficient fog-horn to be sounded by a bellows or other mechanical means, and also with an efficient bell.* A sailing ship shall be provided with a similar fog-horn and bell.

In fog, mist, or falling snow, whether by day or night, the signals described in this Article shall be used as follows; that is to say,—

(a) A steam ship under way shall make with her steam whistle, or other steam sound signal, at intervals of not more than two minutes, a prolonged blast.

(b) A sailing ship under way shall make with her fog-horn, at intervals of not more than two minutes, when on the starboard tack one blast, when on the port tack two blasts in succession, and

* In all cases where the regulations require a bell to be used, a drum will be substituted on board Turkish vessels.

when with the wind abaft the beam three blasts in succession.

(c) A steam ship and a sailing ship, when not under way, shall at intervals of not more than two minutes ring the bell.

Speed of Ships to be moderate in Fog, &c.

Art. 13. Every ship, whether a sailing ship or steam ship, shall, in a fog, mist, or falling snow, go at a moderate speed.

Steering and Sailing Rules.

Art. 14. When two sailing ships are approaching one another, so as to involve risk of collision, one of them shall keep out of the way of the other, as follows, viz. :—

(a) A ship which is running free shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled.

(b) A ship which is close-hauled on the port tack shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled on the starboard tack.

(c) When both are running free with the wind on different sides, the ship which has the wind on the port side shall keep out of the way of the other.

(d) When both are running free with the wind on the same side, the ship which is to windward shall keep out of the way of the ship which is to leeward.

(e) A ship which has the wind aft shall keep out of the way of the other ship.

Art. 15. If two ships under steam are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, each shall alter her course to starboard, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

This Article only applies to cases where ships are meeting end on, or nearly end on, in such a manner as to involve risk of collision, and does not apply to two ships which must, if both keep on their respective courses, pass clear of each other.

The only cases to which it does apply are, when each of the two ships is end on, or nearly end on, to the other; in other words, to cases in which, by day, each ship sees the masts of the other in a line, or nearly in a line, with her own; and by night, to cases in which each ship is in such a position as to see both the side lights of the other.

It does not apply, by day, to cases in which a ship sees another ahead crossing her own course; or by night, to cases where the red light of one ship is opposed to the red light of the other, or where the green light of one ship is opposed to the green light of the other, or where a red light without a green light, or a green light without a red light, is seen ahead, or where both green and red lights are seen anywhere but ahead.

Art. 16. If two ships under steam are crossing, so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other.

Art. 17. If two ships, one of which is a sailing ship, and the other a steam ship, are proceeding in such directions as to involve risk of collision, the steam ship shall keep out of the way of the sailing ship.

Art. 18. Every steam ship, when approaching another ship, so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed or stop and reverse, if necessary.

Art. 19. In taking any course authorized or required by these Regulations, a steam ship under way may indicate that course to any other ship which she has in sight by the following signals on her steam whistle, viz. :—

One short blast to mean "I am directing my course to starboard."

Two short blasts to mean "I am directing my course to port."

Three short blasts to mean "I am going full speed astern."

The use of these signals is optional, but if they are used the course of the ship must be in accordance with the signal made.

Art. 20. Notwithstanding anything contained in any preceding Article, every ship, whether a sailing ship or a steam ship, overtaking any other shall keep out of the way of the overtaken ship.

Art. 21. In narrow channels every steam ship shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fairway or mid-channel which lies on the starboard side of such ship.

Art. 22. Where, by the above rules, one of two ships is to keep out of the way, the other shall keep her course.

Art. 23. In obeying and construing these rules due regard shall be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances which may render a departure from the above rules necessary in order to avoid immediate danger.

No Ship, under any Circumstances, to neglect proper Precautions.

Art. 24. Nothing in these rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, or master, or crew thereof, from the consequences of any neglect to carry lights or signals, or of any neglect to keep a proper look out, or of the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen, or by the special circumstances of the case.

Reservation of Rules for Harbours and Inland Navigation.

Art. 25. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of a special rule, duly made by local authority, relative to the navigation of any harbour, river, or inland navigation.

Special Lights for Squadrons and Convoys.

Art. 26. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of any special rules made by the government of any nation with respect to additional station and signal lights for two or more ships of war or for ships sailing under convoy.

Art. 27. When a ship is in distress and requires assistance from other ships or from the shore, the following shall be the signals to be used or displayed by her, either together or separately; that is to say,—

In the daytime—

1. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute;

2. The international code signal of distress indicated by N C;

3. The distant signal, consisting of a square flag, having either above or below it a ball or anything resembling a ball.

At night—

1. A gun fired at intervals of about a minute;

2. Flames on the ship (as from a burning tar barrel, oil barrel, &c.);

3. Rockets or shells, throwing stars of any colour or description, fired one at a time, at short intervals.

No. 2.

International Regulations made as to Fishing Vessels under Order in Council of Dec. 30, 1884.

(Extract from Order in Council.)

Her Majesty, by virtue of the powers vested in her by the said act, and by and with the advice of her Privy Council, is pleased to direct that on and after the 1st day of January, 1885, the regulations contained in the schedule to the said recited Order in Council of the 11th day of August, 1884, shall, as regards British fishing vessels and boats when in the sea off the coast of Europe, lying north of Cape Finisterre, be modified and added to as follows, viz. :—

(Steam Trawlers under way.)

As regards steam vessels engaged in trawling when under steam, such vessels, if of 20 tons gross register tonnage or upwards, and having their trawls in the water, and not being stationary in consequence of their gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, shall, between sunset and sunrise, either carry and show the lights required by the said recited Art. 3 of the regulations aforesaid, or shall carry and show in lieu thereof and in substitution therefor, but not in addition thereto, other lights of the description set forth in Part I. of the schedule hereto:

(Sailing Trawlers under way.)

As regards sailing vessels engaged in trawling, such vessels, if of 20 tons net register tonnage or upwards, and having their trawls in the water, and not being stationary in consequence of their gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, shall, between sunset and sunrise, either carry and show the lights required by the said recited Art. 6 of the regulations aforesaid, or shall carry and show in lieu thereof and in substitution therefor, but not in addition thereto, other lights of the description set forth in Part II. of the schedule hereto.

(Steam and Sailing Trawlers under way.)

The red and green lights, which are by this order permitted as aforesaid to be carried in lieu of the lights required by Arts. 3 and 6 of the said recited regulations respectively, shall be of such a character as to be visible at a distance of not less than two miles on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere.

And her Majesty is pleased further to direct that steam vessels of 20 tons gross register tonnage or upwards, and sailing vessels of 20 tons net register tonnage or upwards, engaged in trawling, when under way between sunset and sunrise, but not having their trawls in the water, shall, if steamships, carry and show the lights required by Art. 3 above recited, and if sailing ships, shall carry and show the lights required by Art. 6 above recited.

Proviso.

Provided, however, that the modifications and additions set forth in Parts I., II. of the schedule hereto shall not be applicable to the fishing vessels and boats of any foreign country, unless and until the same shall have been made applicable thereto by Order in Council.

SCHEDULE.

PART I.—STEAM VESSELS.

(Trawlers.)

(1) On or in front of the foremast head, and in the same position as the white light which other steamships are required to carry, a lantern showing a white light ahead, a green light on the starboard side, and a red light on the port side; such lantern shall be so constructed, fitted, and arranged as to show an uniform and unbroken white light over an arc of the horizon of four points of the compass, an uniform and unbroken green light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, and an uniform and unbroken red light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, and it shall be so fixed as to show the white light from right ahead to two points on the bow on each side of the ship, the green light from two points on the starboard bow to four points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and the red light from two points on the port bow to four points abaft the beam on the port side; and (2) a white light in a globular lantern of not less than 8 inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform, and unbroken light all round the horizon; the lantern containing such white light shall be carried lower than the lantern showing the green, white, and red lights as aforesaid, so, however, that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than 6 feet nor more than 12 feet.

(PART II.—SAILING VESSELS.)

(Trawlers.)

(1) On or in front of the foremast head a lantern having a green glass on the starboard side and a red glass on the port side, so constructed, fitted, and arranged that the red and green do not converge, and so as to show an uniform and unbroken green light over an arc of the horizon of twelve points of the compass, and an uniform and unbroken red light over an arc of the horizon of twelve points of the compass, and it shall be so fixed as to show the green light from right ahead to four points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and the red light from right ahead to four points abaft the beam on the port side; and (2) a white light in a globular lantern of not less than 8 inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear uniform and unbroken light all round the horizon; the lantern containing such white light shall be carried lower than the lantern showing the green and red lights as aforesaid, so, however, that the vertical distance between them shall not be less than 6 feet and not more than 12 feet.*

* But see No. 3, infra.

No. 3.

International Regulations as to Fishing Vessels made under Order in Council of June 24, 1885.

(Extract from Order in Council.)

Whereas the Admiralty and the Board of Trade have, in pursuance of the said recited act, jointly recommended to her Majesty that the regulations contained in the schedule to the said recited Order in Council of August 11, 1884, shall, as regards sailing vessels when engaged in trawling, be further modified and added to in manner following; that is to say,—

(Sailing Trawlers under way.)

As regards sailing vessels engaged in trawling, such vessels having their trawls in the water and not being stationary in consequence of their gear getting fast to a rock or other obstruction, if they do not carry and show the lights required by Art. 6 of the Regulations aforesaid, or the other lights of the description set forth in Part 2 of the Schedule to the said recited Order in Council of Dec. 30, 1884, shall carry and show in lieu of the lights required by Art. 6 of the Regulations aforesaid, or the other lights of the description set forth in paragraph 2 of the schedule to the said recited order, other lights as follows; that is to say,—

A white light in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear uniform and unbroken light all round the horizon, and visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, for a distance of at least two miles; and also a sufficient supply of red pyrotechnic lights which shall each burn for at least thirty seconds, and shall, when so burning, be visible for the same distance under the same conditions as the white light. The white light shall be shown from sunset to sunrise, and one of the red pyrotechnic lights shall be shown on approaching, or on being approached by, another ship or vessel in sufficient time to prevent collision.

Now, therefore, her Majesty, by virtue of the powers vested in her by the said act, and by and with the advice of her Privy Council, is pleased to direct that on and after June 24, 1885, the regulations contained in the schedule to the Order in Council of August 11, 1884, shall, as regards British sailing fishing vessels and boats, when in the sea off the coast of Europe lying north of Cape Finisterre, be further modified and added to accordingly; that is to say, such sailing vessels shall, whatever be their tonnage, be at liberty to carry the substituted lights hereinbefore described in lieu of, and in substitution for, but not in addition to, the lights prescribed to be carried by such sailing vessels by the Orders in Council dated respectively August 11, 1884, and December 30, 1884.

No. 4.

International Regulations for preventing Collisions at Sea, under Order in Council of August, 1879 (now annulled).

Preliminary.

Art. 1. In the following rules every steam ship which is under sail and not under steam is to be considered a sailing ship; and every steam ship which is under steam, whether under sail or not, is to be considered a ship under steam.

Rules concerning Lights.

Art. 2. The lights mentioned in the following articles, numbered 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11, and no others, shall be carried in all weathers, from sunset to sunrise.

Art. 3. A seagoing steam ship when under way shall carry:—

(a) On or in front of the foremast, at a height above the hull of not less than twenty feet, and if the breadth of the ship exceeds twenty feet then at a height above the hull not less than such breadth, a bright white light, so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of twenty points of the compass; so fixed as to throw the light ten points on each side of the ship, viz., from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side; and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least five miles.

(b) On the starboard side, a green light so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass; so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the starboard side; and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(c) On the port side a red light, so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass; so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the port side; and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles.

(d) The said green and red side lights shall be fitted with inboard screens projecting at least three feet forward from the light, so as to prevent these lights from being seen across the bow.

Art. 4. A steam ship, when towing another ship, shall, in addition to her side lights, carry two bright white lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, so as to distinguish her from other steam ships. Each of these lights shall be of the same construction and character, and shall be carried in the same position as the white light which other steam ships are required to carry.

Art. 5. A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, when employed either in laying or in picking up a telegraph cable, or which from any accident is not under command, shall at night carry, in the same position as the white light which steam ships are required to carry, and, if a steam ship, in place of that light, three red lights in globular lanterns, each not less than ten inches in diameter, in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart; and shall by day carry in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, in front of but not lower than her foremast head, three black balls or shapes, each two feet in diameter.

These shapes and lights are to be taken by approaching ships as signals that the ship using them is not under command, and cannot therefore get out of the way.

The above ships, when not making any way through the water, shall not carry the side lights, but when making way shall carry them.

Art. 6. A sailing ship under way or being towed shall carry the same lights as are provided by Article 3 for a steam ship under way, with the exception of the white light, which she shall never carry.

Art. 7. Whenever, as in the case of small vessels during bad weather, the green and red side lights cannot be fixed, these lights shall be kept on deck, on their respective sides of the vessel, ready for use; and shall on the approach of or to other vessels be exhibited on their respective sides in sufficient time to prevent collision, in such manner as to make them most visible, and so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side nor the red light on the starboard side.

To make the use of these portable lights more certain and easy, the lanterns containing them shall each be painted outside with the colour of the light they respectively contain, and shall be provided with proper screens.

Art. 8. A ship, whether a steam ship or a sailing ship, when at anchor shall carry, where it can best be seen, but at a height not exceeding twenty feet above the hull, a white light in a globular lantern of not less than eight inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear, uniform and unbroken light visible all round the horizon, at a distance of at least one mile.

Art. 9. A pilot vessel, when engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall not carry the lights required for other vessels, but shall carry a white light at the mast-head, visible all round the horizon, and shall also exhibit a flare-up light or flare-up lights at short intervals, which shall never exceed fifteen minutes.

A pilot vessel, when not engaged on her station on pilotage duty, shall carry lights similar to those of other ships.

Art. 10. (By successive Orders in Council the operation of this Article was suspended until the Regulations of 1884 came into force.)

(a) Open fishing boats and other open boats, when under way, shall not be obliged to carry the side lights required for other vessels; but every such boat shall in lieu thereof have ready at hand a lantern with a green glass on the one side and a red glass on the other side; and on the approach of or to other vessels, such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side.

(b) A fishing vessel, and an open boat when at anchor, shall exhibit a bright white light.

(c) A fishing vessel, when employed in drift net fishing, shall carry on one of her masts two red lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart.

(d) A trawler at work shall carry on one of her masts two lights in a vertical line one over the other, not less than three feet apart, the upper light red, and the lower green, and shall also either carry the side lights required for other vessels, or, if the side lights cannot be carried, have ready at hand the coloured lights as provided in Article 7, or a lantern with a red and green glass as described in paragraph (a) of this Article.

(e) Fishing vessels and open boats shall not be prevented from using a flare-up in addition, if they desire to do so.

(f) The lights mentioned in this Article are substituted for those mentioned in the 12th, 13th and 14th Articles of the Convention between France and England, scheduled to the British Sea Fisheries Act, 1868.

(g) All lights required by this Article, except side lights, shall be in globular lanterns, so constructed as to show all round the horizon.

Art. 11. A ship which is being overtaken by another shall show from her stern to such last-mentioned ship a white light or a flare-up light.

Sound Signals for Fog, &c.

Art. 12. A steam ship shall be provided with a steam whistle or other efficient steam sound signal, so placed that the sound may not be intercepted by any obstructions, and with an efficient fog horn to be sounded by bellows or other mechanical means, and also with an efficient bell.* A sailing ship shall be provided with a similar fog horn and bell.

In fog, mist, or falling snow, whether by day or night, the signals described in this Article shall be used as follows; that is to say,

(a) A steam ship under way shall make with her steam whistle, or other steam sound signal, at intervals of not more than two minutes, a prolonged blast.

(b) A sailing ship under way shall make with her fog horn, at intervals of not more than two minutes, when on the starboard tack one blast, when on the port tack two blasts in succession, and when with the wind abaft the beam three blasts in succession.

(c) A steam ship and a sailing ship when not under way shall, at intervals of not more than two minutes, ring the bell.

Speed of Ships to be moderate in Fog, &c.

Art. 13. Every ship, whether a sailing ship or steam ship, shall, in a fog, mist, or falling snow, go at a moderate speed.

Steering and Sailing Rules.

Art. 14. When two sailing ships are approaching one another, so as to involve risk of collision, one of them shall keep out of the way of the other, as follows, viz. :—

(a) A ship which is running free shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled.

(b) A ship which is close-hauled on the port tack shall keep out of the way of a ship which is close-hauled on the starboard tack.

(c) When both are running free with the wind on different sides, the ship which has the wind on the port side shall keep out of the way of the other.

(d) When both are running free with the wind on the same side, the ship which is to windward shall keep out of the way of the ship which is to leeward.

(e) A ship which has the wind aft shall keep out of the way of the other ship.

Art. 15. If two ships under steam are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, each shall alter her course to starboard, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

This Article only applies to cases where ships are meeting end on, or nearly end on, in such a manner as to involve risk of collision, and does not apply to two ships which must, if both keep on their respective courses, pass clear of each other.

The only cases to which it does apply are, when each of the two ships is end on, or nearly end on, to the other; in other words, to cases in which, by day, each ship sees the masts of the other in a line, or nearly in a line with her own; and by night, to cases in which each ship is in such a position as to see both the side lights of the other.

It does not apply by day to cases in which a ship sees another ahead crossing her own course; or by night, to cases where the red light of one ship is opposed to the red light of the other, or where the green light of one ship is opposed to the green light of the other, or where a red light without a green light, or a green light without a red light, is seen ahead, or where both green or red lights are seen anywhere but ahead.

Art. 16. If two ships under steam are crossing, so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other.

Art. 17. If two ships, one of which is a sailing ship, and the other a steam ship, are proceeding in such directions as to involve risk of collision, the steam ship shall keep out of the way of the sailing ship.

Art. 18. Every steam ship, when approaching another ship, so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed or stop and reverse, if necessary.

Art. 19. In taking any course authorized or required by these Regulations, a steam ship under way may indicate that course to any other ship which she has in sight by the following signals on her steam whistle, viz. :—

One short blast to mean "I am directing my course to starboard."

Two short blasts to mean "I am directing my course to port."

Three short blasts to mean "I am going full speed astern."

The use of these signals is optional; but, if they are used, the course of the ship must be in accordance with the signal made.

Art. 20. Notwithstanding anything contained in any preceding Article, every ship, whether a sailing ship or a steam ship, overtaking any other shall keep out of the way of the overtaken ship.

Art. 21. In narrow channels every steam ship shall, when it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fairway or mid-channel which lies on the starboard side of such ship.

Art. 22. Where, by the above rules, one of two ships is to keep out of the way, the other shall keep her course.

Art. 23. In obeying and construing these rules due regard shall be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances which may render a departure from the above rules necessary in order to avoid immediate danger.

No Ship, under any Circumstances, to neglect proper Precautions.

Art. 24. Nothing in these rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, or master, or crew thereof, from the consequences of any neglect to carry lights or signals, or of any neglect to keep a proper look-out, or of the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen, or by the special circumstances of the case.

Reservation of Rules for Harbours and Inland Navigation.

Art. 25. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of a special rule, duly made by local authority, relative to the navigation of any harbour, river, or inland navigation.

Special Lights for Squadrons and Convoys.

Art. 26. Nothing in these rules shall interfere with the operation of any special rules made by the Government of any nation with respect to additional station and signal lights for two or more ships of war or for ships sailing under convoy.

No. 5.

Regulations for preventing Collisions at Sea, under Order in Council of January, 1863.

Preliminary.

Art. 1. In the following rules every steam ship which is under sail and not under steam is to be considered a sailing ship; and every steam ship which is under steam, whether under sail or not, is to be considered a ship under steam.

Rules concerning Lights.

Art. 2. The lights mentioned in the following Articles, numbered 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9, and no others, shall be carried in all weathers, from sunset to sunrise.

Art. 3. Sea-going steamships when under way shall carry :

(a) At the foremast head, a bright white light, so fixed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of twenty points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light ten points on each side of the ship, viz., from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side ; and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least five miles :

(b) On the starboard side, a green light, so constructed as to throw an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the starboard side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles :

(c) On the port side, a red light, so constructed as to show an uniform and unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of ten points of the compass, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on the port side, and of such a character as to be visible on a dark night, with a clear atmosphere, at a distance of at least two miles :

(d) The said green and red side lights shall be fitted with inboard screens, projecting at least three feet forward from the lights, so as to prevent these lights from being seen across the bow.

Art. 4. Steam ships, when towing other ships, shall carry two bright white masthead lights vertically, in addition to their side lights, so as to distinguish them from other steam ships. Each of these masthead lights shall be of the same construction and character as the masthead lights which other steam ships are required to carry.

Art. 5. Sailing ships under way, or being towed, shall carry the same lights as steam ships under way, with the exception of the white masthead lights, which they shall never carry.

Art. 6. Whenever, as in the case of small vessels during bad weather, the green and red lights cannot be fixed, these lights shall be kept on deck, on their respective sides of the vessel, ready for instant exhibition ; and shall, on the approach of or to other vessels, be exhibited on their respective sides in sufficient time to prevent collision, in such manner as to make them most visible, and so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side.

To make the use of these portable lights more certain and easy, the lanterns containing them shall each be painted outside with the colour of the light they respectively contain, and shall be provided with suitable screens.

Art. 7. Ships, whether steam ships or sailing ships, when at anchor in roadsteads or fairways, shall exhibit, where it can best be seen, but at a height not exceeding 20 feet above the hull, a white light, in a globular lantern of 8 inches in diameter, and so constructed as to show a clear uniform and unbroken light visible all round the horizon, and at a distance of at least one mile.

Art. 8. Sailing pilot vessels shall not carry the lights required for other sailing vessels, but shall carry a white light at the masthead, visible all round the horizon, and shall also exhibit a flare-up light every fifteen minutes.

Art. 9. Open fishing boats and other open boats shall not be required to carry the side lights required for other vessels ; but shall, if they do not carry such lights, carry a lantern having a green slide on the one side and a red slide on the other side ; and on the approach of or to other vessels, such lantern shall be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision, so that the green light shall not be seen on the port side, nor the red light on the starboard side.

Fishing vessels and open boats when at anchor, or attached to their nets and stationary, shall exhibit a bright white light.

Fishing vessels and open boats shall, however, not be prevented from using a flare-up in addition, if considered expedient.

Rules concerning Fog Signals.

Art. 10. Whenever there is fog, whether by day or night, the fog signals described below shall be carried and used, and shall be sounded at least every five minutes ; viz. :—

(a) Steam ships under weigh shall use a steam whistle placed before the funnel, not less than eight feet from the deck :

(b) Sailing ships under weigh shall use a fog horn :

(c) Steam ships and sailing ships when not under weigh shall use a bell.

Steering and Sailing Rules.

Art. 11. If two sailing ships are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, the helms of both shall be put to port, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

Art. 12. When two sailing ships are crossing so as to involve risk of collision, then, if they have the wind on different sides, the ship with the wind on the port side shall keep out of the way of the ship with the wind on the starboard side; except in the case in which the ship with the wind on the port side is close-hauled and the other ship free, in which case the latter ship shall keep out of the way; but if they have the wind on the same side, or if one of them has the wind aft, the ship which is to windward shall keep out of the way of the ship which is to leeward.

Art. 13. If two ships under steam are meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to involve risk of collision, the helms of both shall be put to port, so that each may pass on the port side of the other.

Art. 14. If two ships under steam are crossing so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other.

Art. 15. If two ships, one of which is a sailing ship, and the other a steam ship, are proceeding in such directions as to involve risk of collision, the steam ship shall keep out of the way of the sailing ship.

Art. 16. Every steam ship, when approaching another ship so as to involve risk of collision, shall slacken her speed, or, if necessary, stop and reverse; and every steam ship shall, when in a fog, go at a moderate speed.

Art. 17. Every vessel overtaking any other vessel shall keep out of the way of the said last-mentioned vessel.

Art. 18. Where by the above rules one of two ships is to keep out of the way, the other shall keep her course, subject to the qualifications contained in the following Article.

Art. 19. In obeying and construing these rules, due regard must be had to all dangers of navigation; and due regard must also be had to any special circumstances which may exist in any particular case rendering a departure from the above rules necessary in order to avoid immediate danger.

Art. 20. Nothing in these rules shall exonerate any ship, or the owner, or master, or crew thereof, from the consequences of any neglect to carry lights or signals, or of any neglect to keep a proper look-out, or of the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen, or by the special circumstances of the case.

No. 6.

American Pilot Rules for Lake and Seaboard.

RULES AND REGULATIONS for the government of pilots navigating seas, gulfs, lakes, bays, sounds or rivers, except rivers flowing into the Gulf of Mexico and their tributaries. Revised and adopted by the Board of Supervising Inspectors, June 10, 1871, as authorized by Act of Congress, "to provide for the better security of life on board of vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, and for other purposes." Approved, Feb. 28, 1871; to take effect Jan. 1, 1872 (and in force in 1886).

Rule I. When steamers are approaching each other "head and head," or nearly so, it shall be the duty of each steamer to pass to the right, or port side of the other; and the pilot of either steamer may be first in determining to pursue this course, and thereupon shall give as a signal of his intention one short and distinct blast of his steam whistle, which the pilot of the other steamer shall answer promptly by a similar blast of his steam whistle, and thereupon such steamers shall pass to the right or port side of each other. But if the course of such steamers is so far on the seaboard of each other as not to be considered by pilots as meeting "head and head," or nearly so, the pilot so first deciding shall immediately give two short and distinct blasts of his steam whistle, which the pilot of the other steamer shall answer promptly by two similar blasts from his steam whistle, and they shall pass to the left or on the starboard side of each other.

Note.—In the night, steamers will be considered as meeting “head and head,” so long as both the coloured lights of each are in view of the other.

Rule II. When steamers are approaching each other in an oblique direction (as shown in diagram of the 4th situation) they shall pass to the right of each other, as if meeting “head and head,” or nearly so, and the signals by whistle shall be given and answered promptly as in that case specified.

Rule III. If when steamers are approaching each other the pilot of either vessel fails to understand the course or intention of the other, whether from signals being given or answered erroneously, or from other causes, the pilot so in doubt shall immediately signify the same by giving several short and rapid blasts of the steam whistle; and if the vessels shall have approached within half a mile of each other both shall be immediately slowed to a speed barely sufficient for steering way until the proper signals are given, answered and understood, or until the vessels shall have passed each other.

Rule IV. When steamers are running in a fog, or thick weather, it shall be the duty of the pilot to cause a long blast of the steam whistle to be sounded at intervals not exceeding one minute.

Steamers when drifting, or at anchor, in the fair way of other vessels in a fog or thick weather, shall ring their bells at intervals of not more than two minutes.

Rule V. Whenever a steamer is nearing a short bend or curve in the channel, where, from the height of the banks, or other cause, a steamer approaching from the opposite direction cannot be seen for a distance of half a mile, the pilot of such steamer, when he shall have arrived within half a mile of such curve or bend, shall give a signal by one long blast of the steam whistle, which signal shall be answered by a similar blast, given by the pilot of any approaching steamer that may be within hearing. Should such signal be so answered by a steamer upon the farther side of such bend, then the usual signals for meeting and passing shall immediately be given and answered; but if the first alarm signal of such pilot be not answered, he is to consider the channel clear, and govern himself accordingly.

Rule VI. The signals by the blowing of the steam whistle shall be given and answered by pilots in compliance with these rules, not only when meeting “head and head,” or nearly so, but at all times when passing or meeting at a distance within half a mile of each other, and whether passing to the starboard or port.

Rule VII. When two steamers are approaching the narrows known as “Hell Gate,” on the East river at New York, side by side, or nearly so, running in the same direction, the steamer on the right or starboard hand of the other (when approaching from the west), when they shall have arrived abreast of the north end of Blackwell’s Island, shall have the right of way, and the steamer on the left or port side shall check her way and drop astern. In like case, when two steamers are approaching from the east, and are abreast at Negro Point, the steamer on the right or starboard hand of the other, shall have the right of way and shall proceed on her course without interference, and the steamer on the port side of the other shall keep at a safe distance astern (not less than three lengths), until both steamers have passed through the difficult channel.

Rule VIII. When steamers are running in the same direction, and the pilot of the steamer which is astern shall desire to pass on the right or starboard hand of the steamer ahead, he shall give one short blast with the steam whistle as a signal of such desire and intention, and shall put his helm to port, and the pilot of the steamer ahead shall answer by the same signal, or if he prefer to keep on his course, he shall give two short and distinct blasts of the steam whistle, and the boat wishing to pass must govern herself accordingly, but the boat ahead shall in no case attempt to cross her bow or crowd upon her course.

N.B. The foregoing rules are to be complied with in all cases except when steamers are navigating in a crowded channel or in the vicinity of wharves; under such circumstances steamers must be run and managed with great caution, sounding the whistle as may be necessary to guard against collision or other accidents.

Section 4233, Revised Statutes.—Rule 24. In construing and obeying these rules, due regard must be had to all dangers of navigation, and to any special circumstances which may exist in any particular case, rendering a departure from them necessary in order to avoid immediate danger.

Rule IX. All double-ended ferry boats on lakes and seaboard shall carry a central range of clear, bright, white lights showing all round the horizon, placed at equal altitudes forward and aft, also such side lights as specified in section 4233, Revised Statutes, Rule III., paragraphs B. & C.

Local inspectors in districts having ferry boats shall, whenever the safety of navigation may require, designate for each line of such boats a certain light, white or coloured, which shall show all around the horizon, to designate and distinguish such lines from each other, which light shall be carried on a flagstaff amidship, 15 feet above the white range lights.

The line dividing jurisdiction between Pilot Rules on western rivers and lakes, and seaboard at New Orleans, shall be the lower limits of the city.

No. 7.

American Pilot Rules for Western Rivers.

RULES AND REGULATIONS for the government of pilots of steamers navigating the rivers flowing into the Gulf of Mexico and their tributaries. Revised and adopted by the Board of Supervising Inspectors, June 12, 1871, as authorized by Act of Congress "to provide for the better security of life on board vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, and for other purposes." Approved, Feb. 28, 1871; to take effect Jan. 1, 1872. Amended, Jan. 1875, and Feb. 1880 and 1883, to take effect Sept. 3, 1883 (and in force in 1886).

Rule I. When steamers are approaching each other from opposite directions, the signals for passing shall be one blast of the steam-whistle to pass to the right, and two blasts of the steam-whistle to pass to the left. The pilot on the ascending steamer shall be the first to indicate the side on which he desires to pass; but if the pilot on the descending steamer shall deem it dangerous to take the side indicated by the pilot of the ascending steamer, he shall at once indicate with his steam whistle, the side on which he desires to pass, and the pilot on the ascending steamer shall govern himself accordingly, the descending steamer being deemed to have the right of way. But in no case shall pilots on steamers attempt to pass each other, until there has been a thorough understanding as to the side each steamer shall take. The signals for passing must be made, answered, and understood, before the steamers have arrived at a distance of 800 yards of each other.

Rule II. If from any cause the signals for passing are not made at the proper time, as provided in Rule I., or should the signals be given, and not promptly understood, from any cause whatever, and either boat become imperilled thereby, the pilot on either steamer may be the first to sound the alarm, or danger signal, which shall consist of three or more short blasts of the steam-whistle, in quick succession. Whenever the danger signal is given, the engines of both steamers must be stopped, and backed until their headway has been fully checked, nor shall the engines of either steamer be again started ahead, until the steamers can safely pass each other.

Rule III. When two boats are about to enter a narrow channel at the same time, the ascending boat shall be stopped below such channel until the descending boat shall have passed through it; but should two boats unavoidably meet in such channel, then it shall be the duty of the pilot of the ascending boat to make the proper signals, and, when answered, the ascending boat shall lie as close as possible to the side of the channel the exchange of signals may have determined, as provided by Rule I., and either stop the engines or move them so as only to give the boat steerage way, and the pilot of the descending boat shall cause his boat to be worked slowly until he has passed the ascending boat.

Rule IV. When a steamer is ascending and running close on a bar or shore, the pilot shall in no case attempt to cross the river when a descending boat shall be so near that it would be possible for a collision to ensue therefrom.

Rule V. When any steamer, whether ascending or descending, is nearing a short bend or point, where from any cause a steamer approaching in an opposite direction cannot be seen at a distance of 600 yards, the pilot of such steamer when he shall have arrived within 600 yards of that bend or point, shall give a signal of one long sound of his steam whistle as a notice to any steamer that may be approaching, and should there be any approaching steamer within hearing of such signal it shall be the duty of the pilot thereof to answer such signal by one long sound of his steam whistle, when both boats shall be navigated with the proper precautions as required by the preceding rules.

Rule VI. When a steamer is running in a fog or thick weather, it shall be the duty of the pilot to sound his steam whistle at intervals not exceeding one minute.

Rule VII. When steamers are running in the same direction, and the pilot of the boat astern shall desire to pass either side of the boat ahead, he shall give the signal, as in Rule I., and the pilot of the boat ahead shall answer by the same signal; or if he prefer to keep on his course, he shall make the necessary signals, and the boat wishing to pass must govern herself accordingly; but the boat ahead shall in no case attempt to cross her bow or crowd upon her course.

Rule VIII. When boats are moving from their docks or berths, and other boats are liable to pass from any direction towards them, they shall give the same signal as in case of boats meeting at a bend; but immediately after clearing the berths, so as to be fully in sight, they shall be governed by Rule I.

Rule IX. All barges in tow of steamers between sunset and sunrise shall have their signal lights, as required by law, placed in a suitable manner on the starboard bow of the starboard barge, and on port bow of the port barge, which lights shall not be less than 10 feet above the surface of the water.

Rule X. Signal lights for steamers under way are provided by law as follows, the same to be carried between sunset and sunrise.

For ocean steamers and steamers carrying sail, a bright white light at the foremast head, to throw the light through ten points of the compass on each side of the ship, viz., from right ahead to two points abaft the beam, and to be visible at least five miles. On the starboard side a green light, and on the port side a red light, each to throw the light through ten points of the compass on their respective sides, viz. from right ahead to two points abaft the beam, and to be visible at least two miles. These coloured lights are to be fitted with inboard screens, projecting at least three feet forward from the light, to prevent them from being seen across the bow.

For steamers navigating waters flowing into the Gulf of Mexico and the Red River of the North, a red light on the outboard side of the port smoke-pipe, and a green light on the outboard side of the starboard smoke-pipe, these lights to show both forward and abeam on their respective sides.

For coasting steamers and those navigating bays, lakes, or other inland waters, other than ferry boats and those above provided for, the red and green side-lights as prescribed for ocean steamers, and a central range of two white lights, the after light being carried at an elevation of at least 15 feet above the light at the head of the vessel; the head-light to show through twenty points in the compass, viz. from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side of the vessel, and the after light to show all around the horizon.

For steamers towing other vessels, the coloured lights will be the same as prescribed for ocean steamers, and two white mast lights shall be also carried vertically, to distinguish them from other steamers; the white lights to show through twenty points of the compass, viz., from right ahead to two points abaft the beam on either side of the vessel, white lights shall also be placed on the extreme sides of the tow on either hand, and also on the extreme after part of the same.

Rule XI. A bright white light, not exceeding 20 feet above the hull, shall be exhibited by all steamers when at anchor between sunset and sunrise, in a globular lantern of 8 inches in diameter, so placed as to throw a good light all around the horizon.

Rule XII. Steam ferry boats with chimneys shall in all cases carry the same signal lights as passenger steamers.

Rule XIII. All other steamers, ferry or otherwise, having but one chimney, shall have brackets securely fastened to each side of the same, so as to carry the red and green lights the same as passenger steamers.

Rule XIV. The line dividing jurisdiction between the Pilot Rules on western rivers and lakes and seaboard at New Orleans, shall be the lower limits of the city.

No. 8.

American Rules of Supervising Inspectors in force in 1886, recommending certain Fog-signals to be observed by Steamers, Sailing Vessels, and other Craft.

Every steamer, when under way, shall use a steam whistle. Sailing vessels, and all other craft propelled by sails, shall use a fog-horn.

Whenever there is a fog, whether by day or night, the fog-signals described below shall be sounded.

Sailing vessels, and every craft propelled by sails upon the ocean, lakes and rivers, shall, when on their starboard tack, sound one blast of their fog-horn; when on their port tack, they shall sound two blasts of their fog-horn; when with the wind free or running large, they shall sound three blasts of their fog-horn; when lying to or at anchor, they shall sound the bell. In each instance the above signals shall be sounded at intervals of not more than two minutes.

Sailing vessels, when not under way, and anchored or moored in the channel or fairway of commerce, shall sound the bell-signal at intervals of not more than two minutes; and all steamers navigating in a fog or thick weather shall, by the rules governing pilots, sound their steam whistle at intervals of not more than one minute.

Sailing vessels shall at all times, on the approach of any steamer during the night time, show a lighted torch upon that point or quarter to which such steamer shall be approaching. And upon any craft navigating rivers without being in tow of a steamer, such as rafts, flat-boats, wood-boats, and other light craft, they shall sound a fog-horn at intervals of not more than two minutes.

It shall at all times be the duty of steamers to give to the sailing vessel, or other craft propelled by sails, every advantage, and keep out of her way.
