PREFACE

The accomplishment of the author's original intention, which was to produce an English-Malay Vocabulary containing some three or four thousand words, has been so long deferred through pressure of other literary work, that it has been thought better to abandon it altogether, especially in view of the fact that other vocabularies have appeared meanwhile which supply the need for a limited word list. The scope of the original work has therefore been greatly extended, with the object of producing not a mere Vocabulary but a Dictionary which would be as complete as possible.

An intimate acquaintance with Favre's French-Malay and with Klinkert's Dutch-Malay dictionaries, and the constant use of these valuable works during a period of many years, has enabled the author to profit by the experience gained by these writers, and it is hoped that all the essential information contained in these more voluminous works will be found in this volume in a more convenient and accessible form.

SUBSIDIARY ENGLISH MEANINGS.

The great defect of many dictionaries of Oriental languages is that in looking up an English word one finds a long list of unfamiliar equivalents, without any indication as to the precise shade of meaning which is to be given to each. The English student is therefore quite at a loss as to which word he should select; and similarly the Oriental student who is seeking the precise meaning of an English word finds so many almost synonymous equivalents in his own language that he is very little the wiser for his search. In order to obviate this difficulty as far as possible, we have followed the plan of the best English-French and English-German dictionaries, giving a number of English meanings wherever necessary for each English word, and arranging the Malay equivalents under these various headings. These English meanings have been taken in the main from Webster's International Unabridged Dictionary, and in the same order as they are found there, so whenever the student finds any ambiguity in these meanings he should refer to Webster's dictionary. The typographic arrangement of Roman and Italic letters, and the placing of the subsidiary English meanings in parentheses, has been designed so that the particular meaning of the word of which the student is in search will readily meet the eye, and thus the necessity for reading through a whole column of meanings (such as will be found, for instance, in Klinkert's dictionary) will be avoided, thereby saving much time.

PRONUNCIATIONS OF ENGLISH WORDS.

Another feature which we believe is rather unusual in dictionaries of Oriental languages is that for the sake of Asiatic students we have given the pronunciation of every English word. These pronunciations are based for the most part on Webster, but we have been careful to follow the English usage rather than the American, and for this purpose have consulted three or four other English dictionaries. This feature has added enormously to the labour of the final preparation of the work, and is responsible for some delay, but we believe that it will be greatly appreciated by Malay students and Malay-speaking Chinese.

DIALECTIC DIFFERENCES IN MALAY.

The Malay language is so widespread, and is spoken by such a variety of different races (Malays proper, Javanese, Sundanese, Achinese, Siamese, and Chinese) that the differences of dialect are very considerable. The Malay spoken on the three great islands of Borneo, Java and Sumatra is not by any means the same. There are variations in different parts of these islands, and along the coast of the Peninsula, the East Coast especially differing from the West. But for the purpose of the English student of Malay or of the Malay student of English it is not at all necessary to consider all the differences of dialect. For practical purposes there are four main divisions of the Malay language. The first of these is the pure Malay, which is spoken in Malacca and Johore and the opposite coast of Sumatra (Siak, Indragiri and Jambi) and is known to the Dutch as the Riouw-Lingga Malay. This is the language of Malay literature, and is understood by educated Malays everywhere. Secondly should be placed the Malay spoken in the north of the Peninsula, which may be called Perak or Penang Malay, and in which Kedah influences appear to predominate. Thirdly there is the Malay spoken by the Babas or Straits-born Chinese, which is a very distinct dialect, and is of great importance in a work of this kind, owing to the fact that the Babas nearly all speak English as well as Malay, and that perhaps the majority of Europeans come in touch with them and learn Malay from them rather than from the Malays. And fourthly we have considered the Malay spoken in the Netherlands Indies as a separate dialect, and by this we mean not the so-called Batavia Malay, which contains a very large proportion of Sundanese words, but the Malay spoken in places so widely separated as Banjermasin, Pontianak, Palembang and Medan, which approximates more nearly to the pure Malay, and as compared with the Malay of Java contains only a small admixture of Javanese and Dutch words. For the benefit of Englishmen and Americans living in the Dutch Indies, and for the increasing number of Chinese who through the schools of the Tiong Hoa Hoe Koan are learning English, we have given a large number of the words which are in general use throughout Netherlands India.

HELP RECEIVED WITH THE DIALECTS.

The author has been very fortunate in being able to obtain valuable assistance in regard to all these dialectic differences. The first draft of this dictionary from A to L was made in collaboration with a Perak Malay, Mr. Masohor bin Kulop Endut, and the remainder with a Riouw Malay, Said Abdu'r-rahman. The latter has assisted with the final revision of the whole work, and having living for some years in Palembang, was of great assistance in regard to the Netherlands Indies words. A great deal of help in regard to such words was also received from Mr. E. A. Van Wulven, who worked with the author all through the preparation of the first draft, turning up words in the Dutch and French dictionaries, and thus rapidly placing these sources of information at his disposal. Many valuable suggestions in regard to words used in the Dutch Indies have also been received from Mr. Goh Leng Inn, a Banjermasin Chinese, and in regard to Perak and Penang words, from Mohamed Said bin Mahomed Hussain, of Alor Star, Kedah, and from Mr. G. M. Laidlaw, of the Civil Service, who for many years was stationed in Perak, and from Mr. Hellier of the Education Department, who read the proof sheets with his visiting teacher, Haji Osman, of Province Wellesley. It is to be regretted that pressure of time prevented the author from making use of a great number of Penang words suggested by Guru Abdu 'l-aziz, a Penang man, who is a visiting teacher in Singapore. These valuable suggestions have been filed for use in a future edition, if such be required. Haji Mohamed Said, Secretary to the Sultan of Johore, has also read the proof sheets and made many helpful corrections and additions. All the work connected with the Baba dialect was done by Mr. Chew Cheng Yong, who translated the Baba version of the New Testament in collaboration with the author, and further help in regard to Baba words has been given by Mr. Goh Hood Keng, by Mrs. Chew Cheng Yong, and by the linotype operator who set the dictionary, Mr. Tan Keng Watt, who is himself a Baba.

MALAY ROOT FORMS USED.

In every Malay-English dictionary the Malay words are of necessity to be found only in their root forms, derived forms being grouped under the root heading. Similarly it has appeared to the author to be best in this English-Malay dictionary to give the Malay equivalents for the most part in the root form only. This is contrary to the plan adopted by Favre and by Klinkert, who under "couper" and "sniijden," for example, give mēmotory, mērgĕrat, mēmĕrggal, etc., and Klinkert feels it necessary to add (van potory) (van kĕrat) (van pĕrggal). It seems much simpler to give only the root, and to trust to the intelligence of the student to give the proper derived form when using the word. The author has made this innovation in spite of the fact that a Malay will give the words every time in the forms mmotory, mrgrat, etc., rather than in the root form. For the proper use of the prefix m, and other derived forms, the student is referred to the author's Practical Malay Grammar.

DERIVATIONS.

It is customary in Oriental dictionaries to give derivations, and in a dictionary of Malay words the derivations are of unusual value, owing to the language containing such a large proportion of foreign words. In an English-Malay dictionary, however, the real importance of knowing the derivation of a word is merely to give an indication as to whether the word is likely to be known by the class of person to whom one is speaking or to whom one is writing. Thus words of Portuguese, English and Dutch origin are not much known except in the great centres of population, and Arabic words are for the most part only known to Mohammedans, and many of them only to those Malays who have some knowledge of Moslem literature. Some Arabic and Sanskrit words have, however, become so thoroughly incorporated in the Malay language by long usage that they are universally known, and are no longer to be considered as foreign words. In this work the derivation of such words is not given, as for instance, smoa, fikir, umor, bacha, etc. As regard Arabic, Sanskrit, Persian and Hindustani words, it has been thought convenient to omit the derivation from those words which are current to such an extent as to be known to the Baba Chinese.

THE BABA-MALAY DIALECT.

The importance of this dialect, as being the business language of the Straits Settlements—the medium of communication of the Chinese merchants and shopkeepers with the Europeans on the one hand, and the Malays on the other, seems to justify the attention which is given to it in this work. Words and phrases which are not used by the Babas, and would be unfamiliar to them, and perhaps hardly understood, are marked with an asterisk [*], and those which are peculiar to them, being corruptions of the pure Malay or actually Chinese words, are marked (B). By this plan it is hoped to accomplish two purposes—(1) to make the dictionary useful to the Babas, and thereby introduce them to many Malay words which they do not know, and which would greatly enrich their vocabulary, and (2) to indicate to European students of Malay those words which are most commonly used in the colloquial language of the Settlements, which we think will be a great assistance to the vast majority of those who come to these lands, and have no ambition to make a thorough study of the language as spoken by the Malays. A dissertation on the subject of “Baba Malay” will be found in the Appendix.

CHINESE “LOAN” WORDS.

A considerable number of Chinese words have become thoroughly incorporated in the Malay language, and are well known to the Malays. Perhaps the most familiar are chat, chenterg, korgsi, locherg, loterg, sampan and sergkek, certain terms connected with gambling, and words used by Chinese doctors, such as sergse, mek, po'ho, koyok, etc. The Chinese words used by the Babas form a far larger class, and a great number of these have not found a place in this dictionary, for where there is a Malay equivalent in common use among the Babas we have not thought it necessary to always give the Chinese word. Moreover the Babas use an immense number of Chinese words in connection with their marriage and other ceremonials, which we have not yet had an opportunity to collect. In order to make these loan words accessible to the student of Chinese, we have added in most cases the correct Chinese spelling with the tonal marks as they will be found in Douglas' Dictionary of the Amoy Colloquial, without which it would be exceedingly difficult to recognise them. It should be remarked that it would appear that nearly all the Chinese words which have come into the Malay language are from the so-called Hok-kien or Amoy dialect, and many of them have the Chang-chew sounds, so that the connection between the Baba pronunciation and the real Amoy sound as given by Douglas is not always evident to a person unfamiliar with the peculiarities of the Chinese dialects. For instance boek is from the Chang-chew boeh, and not from the Amoy beh; and paksui is from the Chang-chew phah-süi, which looks quite different to the Amoy phah-sÿ, though it is really the same. Similarly one would hardly guess that the word chiau for oar could come from the Amoy chiü if one were not acquainted with the Chang-chew sound, and it is not easy to recognise mÿ-li in the Baba word muli.

ARABIC WORDS.

To find an Arabic derivation from the sound of the word as it is pronounced by a Malay is almost as difficult as to discover the Chinese. This difficulty arises from the fact that the Arabic has two h's, and two t's, which the Malay pronounces just alike, and he makes very little if any distinction between k, q and kh, and between sîn, shîn, sâd and thâ, all of which he sounds like our letter s. Consequently one often does not know where to look for a word in either a Malay or an Arabic dictionary. Moreover many Arabic words are utterly mispronounced by Malays, having apparently been picked up from the spelling rather than the sound; thus to the average Malay who does not know Arabic wahyu becomes wahi, and fatwa has become ptua, the letter z is often changed to j, and where the accent in Arabic falls on the last syllable it is almost always changed to the penultimate, as in the very common words jawab and kitab, which in Arabic are jawâb and kitâb. Hence in order to assist the student who desires to know the correct form of the Arabic words, and at the same time to avoid the use of letters with dots under them, we have adopted a system of spelling found in Faris' Arabic Grammar, using small capitals h, t for the Arabic hâ, tâ and sâd, and q for kaf, the other Arabic letters being represented in the usual way by th for thâ, kh for khâ, dz for dzâl, z for zâ, sh for shîn, dl for dlâd, tl for tlâ, and gh for ghain. Much of the dictionary was already in type before this arrangement was decided upon, and the necessary changes could not always be made, but as far as possible the Arabic spelling has been given wherever the difference from the Malay spelling is such as to make it difficult to find the word in a dictionary. Generally the Arabic form is not given more than once in a group of English words of similar meaning, so if not found under any particular word it should be looked for under similar English words on the same page.

PERSIAN AND HINDUSTANI WORDS.

A considerable number of Persian words are to be found in the Malay language. Probably all of these have come to us through the Hindustani. Mr. Ishwar Das, the District Court interpreter, Singapore, was kind enough to give me some information in regard to a few words, and to lend me his copy of Forbes' dictionary, with the aid of which I have been able to trace several words to their original source. Further investigation along this line would certainly yield very interesting results. It seems quite possible that many Arabic words have also come to us through Hindustani. For instance, Forbes tells us that the Arabic word ḥuqqah signifies a casket or box, and only in India does it have the meaning "pipe," from which the Malays get their word ogah. It is remarkable that the Arabic letter q very frequently becomes g in Malay. I am told that this is the pronunciation in Hadramaut, whence most of the Arabs in this part of the world have come.

DUTCH AND NETHERLANDS INDIES WORDS.

Most of the words used exclusively in the Netherlands Indies, which in this work are marked (N.I.), are of Javanese origin, but a number of them are from the Dutch, sometimes in a very much corrupted form. As far as possible the correct Dutch spelling of such words has been given, which will be appreciated by English and Americans living in Netherlands India, and also by many of the English-speaking Chinese. When a word is simply marked (D.) without the (N.I.), it may be taken that it is generally known by Malays and Babas in the British possessions also. Some words marked (D.) are really French, but have come into Malay through the Dutch, and the fact that such words are in most cases pronounced by the Dutch people with the French accent will account for the form in which they appear in Malay; thus "gag" becomes gaji, "loge" becomes losi, and "sergeant" is the Malay sersan. For many of the Dutch derivations I am indebted to Mr. van Wulven. In most cases where I have been in doubt in regard to any Dutch word I have referred the matter to him, but it is quite possible that some errors may have crept in for which he is not to be held responsible.

NAUTICAL TERMS.

Great pains has been taken to obtain the most complete and accurate renderings of nautical terms. For years past the author has besieged with all sort of questions the Malay officers and sailors of the local boats on which he has made many coasting voyages. Boatmen at Malacca and in Singapore have supplied many words, but the greatest assistance has been rendered by Captain Matsum, the Indragiri pilot, who has been kind enough to spend many days in going carefully through all the material available, and explaining the Malay terms with the assistance of the diagrams in a large book on seamanship. Unfortunately lack of time has prevented a more thorough investigation of this interesting subject.

NATURAL HISTORY.

In regard to plant names the work of the Malay lexicographer has been immensely simplified by the splendid lists of Malay plant names published years ago by Mr. H. N. Ridley in the Journals of the Royal Asiatic Society, Straits Branch, to which the author is indebted for practically all such material to be found in this work. The Malay names of birds, beasts, fishes and reptiles have been much more difficult to obtain and to verify, but our thanks are due to Dr. Hanitsch, the Curator of the Raffles Museum, Singapore, for his assistance in reading all the proof sheets and making some corrections. Latin names have only been given where it seemed necessary for the sake of a clearer identification. The words burong, ikan, pokok, etc., which are usually prefixed by Malays to all names of birds, fish and plants, have in most cases been omitted, and should be supplied by the student.

OTHER TECHNICAL TERMS.

Our thanks are due to the Wardens of Mines in Perak, Pahang and Banka for their kindness in supplying the correct terms used in the different methods of tin and goldmining. Also to Mrs. H. B. Mansell and other ladies who have taken infinite pains to try and discover and explain to a man the technology of needlework. In the matter of medical terms it is to be regretted that the Malay language is lamentably deficient, and even the anatomy of the human body appears to be somewhat vague in Malay terminology. The vocabulary of medical terms prepared by the late Dr. Gerrard being a mere complication from all the dictionaries does not help to decide "where doctors disagree." Dr. Lim Boon Keng was kind enough to read the proof sheets, and made a number of valuable suggestions, with special reference to the words in use by the Baba Chinese. Dr. Connolly began to revise the medical terms, but unfortunately his removal from Singapore put an abrupt termination to his work on the dictionary. It is to be hoped that some medical man will take up his special department of Malay literature and publish a monograph in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society.

OUR PRINTERS.

Great credit is due to the Methodist Publishing House for the rapidity and excellence of the work done in the printing of this dictionary. Over 400 pages of the book were in type before a single sheet was printed off. This enabled the author to send proof sheets for criticism to a number of persons, and to make an immense number of corrections which otherwise could not have been made. Thus it was possible to take full advantage of the experience gained during the progress of the printers' work.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

In addition to the works of Favre and Klinkert already referred to, the author desires to acknowledge his indebtedness to Wilkinson's Malay-English dictionary, to which constant reference has been made in determining the exact meanings of Malay words. A few Malay words given by Wilkinson which are not to be found in Klinkert's Malay-Dutch dictionary, second edition, and which are unknown to my Malay assistants and others of whom I have inquired, have been inserted with the sign (W.), which indicates that I have found no other authority for the use of the word. After the first draft was practically finished and while the printing was in progress, the parts of Winstedt's new English-Malay Dictionary were published from time to time, but as it seemed unfair to make use of Mr. Winstedt's material for a rival work which was in course of preparation practically at the same time, I have abstained from using any of the new words which have appeared in his dictionary, except in so far as I had already gleaned them myself from books published in the Malay Literature series and from other sources. The author's special thanks are due to Guru Hussain of the Kampong Glam Vernacular School, Singapore, and to his assistant teachers, who in the last few weeks of the final correcting of the proof sheets have answered innumerable questions in regard to many of the most difficult and almost unknown words, and obscure dialectic forms. A great many of these difficult points have not by any means been settled to the author's satisfaction, and all, whether Europeans, Malays or Chinese, who use this dictionary, are cordially invited to assist in the detection of any mistakes which may be found, and to send their criticisms to the Book Editor of the Methodist Publishing House, Singapore.

INTRODUCTION.

The Vowels.

The five vowels have the continental sounds:—

a as in father.

o as in hole.

e as the ey in they.

u as in rude.

i as in ravine.

In open syllables these vowel sounds have always a greater degree of intensity than in closed syllables.

In addition to the above, there is in Malay, as in nearly all Oriental languages, another simple vowel sound which is often called the short vowel sound. In the different systems of Romanizing, this short vowel sound has been variously represented by a, ă, e, ě, i, ĩ, u, ũ; but all these different methods of representing this vowel sound are open to the great objection that they mislead Europeans and even natives into giving it an incorrect pronunciation, and in a dictionary they have the additional disadvantage of giving rise to so much diversity and uncertainty in the spelling of words containing the short vowel that prolonged search is often necessary before it can be discovered which of these vowels has been used by the lexicographer to represent the short vowel in the particular word which is being sought for. Experience has shown that the best way to spell words containing the short vowel with a view to helping the student to a correct pronunciation, is to omit the vowel altogether. The exact sound of the short vowel should be learnt if possible from a Malay; it is almost identical with the half-vowel sound in the first syllable of such words as “machine” and “balloon.”

When two vowels come together, both must be sounded, but the first must be run into the second: thus au has very nearly the sound of ow in “cow,” as pisau, mau; and ai has almost the sound of the English i in “ice,” as, surgai, pakai.

Consonants.

The Malay consonants are pronounced as in English, except that the r should always be sounded much more clearly and with more of a ring than in English. The consonant ŋ represents a single sound in Malay, and should be pronounced like ng in “singer,” never as in “single;” the latter sound is represented in Malay by ŋg; thus the two sounds are found in the words: si-ŋa and siŋ-gah. The letter k in Malay, when it occurs at the end of a word, is not sounded like the English k, but the syllable in which it occurs must be pronounced very short indeed, and the breath drawn in so as to produce the shortening of the sound. The apostrophe at the end of a syllable indicates a similar abrupt sound.

In the transliteration of the purely Arabic letters no distinction has been made between ت and ط ; س and ص ; ح and ه ; or ق and ك .

The other Arabic letters have been transliterated as follows:— ث th, خ kh, ذ dz, ز z, ش sh, ض dl, ظ tl, غ gh, ف f. The nasal letter 'ain ع which changes its sound according to the vowel written with it, is represented by a rough breathing (‘) placed before the vowel.
 The purely Arabic letters given above are very generally mispronounced by Malays, dz being pronounced as z, th as s, and sometimes f as p, and z as j.

Orthographic Signs.

As already stated, the inverted comma represents the Arabic nasal letter 'ain. It is placed before the vowel which has the nasal sound, as in the words 'alam, 'ilmu, m'alim, do'a.

The apostrophe represents the Arabic sign hamzah, both at the end of a word as described above, and also in the middle of a word between two vowels, where it indicates that the vowels must be pronounced separately; this is also the case where the short vowel sound is followed by another vowel, as in the words s'isi, k'atas, t'akan, the hamzah being used in such cases in the Malay character. The apostrophe is further used to indicate an initial short vowel before the consonants m and n, as in the words 'mbek, 'ntah, 'ngan, etc.

The hyphen is used where a word is reduplicated, in compound words, or to separate from the words to which they are attached those prefixes, suffixes and other particles which do not form an integral part of the word itself; these are: the preposition k-, the abbreviated numeral s-, the passive prefix di-, the pronominal suffixes, -ku, -mu, and -nya, and the particles
-lah, -kah, -nah, -tah. The preposition di is distinguished from the passive prefix di- by the absence of the hyphen.

Root Words and their Derivatives.

In the Malay language a very large number of words are derived from root words by the addition of prefixes or suffixes.

Some prefixes and suffixes are only used to form nouns, and others are used with verbs. The former are:

Prefix p, which denotes the agent.

Prefix p and suffix an, forming abstract nouns from verbs.

Prefix per and suffix an, forming verbal nouns from verbs.

Prefix k and suffix an, forming nouns from adjectives and nouns.

Suffix an forming nouns from verbs, and usually expressing the thing which is affected by the action.

The verbal forms are:

Prefix ber, which forms present participles with intransitive verbs.

Prefix ter, which forms past participles.

Prefix di-, which forms the passive voice.

Prefix m, used with transitive verbs.

Suffixes kan and i, which form transitive verbs.

In derived words formed with the prefixes ber, ter, per, di- and k, the first syllable of the root undergoes no change, but with the prefixes m and p the root in many cases changes its form. A reference to the following list of changes will usually enable the student to determine what the root is:—

If the root commences with l, m, n, or r, it undergoes no change;

b, the prefix becomes mm or pm, as buka, mmbuka;

p, the prefix becomes mm or pm, and the initial p of the root is elided, as putus, mmutus;

d or j, the prefix becomes mn or pn, as dapat, mndapat;

t or ch, the prefix becomes mn or pn, and the initial t or ch of the root is elided, as taroh, mnaroh;

g or h or a vowel, the prefix becomes mrg or prg, as gali, mrygali;

k, the prefix become mrg or prg, and the initial k of the root is elided, as karang, mrgarang;

s and sometimes ch, the prefix becomes mny or pnny, and the initial s or ch of the root is elided, as suroh, mnyuroh.

The Peculiarities of Baba Malay Explained.

The following signs and abbreviations have been used in this dictionary in order to distinguish (a) those words which are peculiar to the Babas, and (b) those which they do not use.

1. Words marked (B) are used by the Babas, and also of course by others who speak the colloquial Malay of the Straits Settlements, but are not used by Malays when speaking among themselves, and in many cases would not be understood by them.

2. Words and phrases marked * are not used by Babas, and for the most part would not be understood by them.

3. If words unfamiliar to the Babas are derived from some other Oriental language, then instead of the * they have the signs (Ar.) (Sk.) (Pers.) or (Hind.), according to the source from which they were derived. In some cases, however, where the Malay spelling is different from that of the language from which the word is taken, the spelling of the original is given, and then the absence of the * shows that the word is used by the Babas.

4. Words of European and Chinese origin, marked (D.) (E.) (Eur.) (F.) (Port.) (Ch.), and also Tamil words (Tam.), are practically all familiar to the Babas.

5. Words peculiar to the Netherlands Indies (N.I.), are not used by Babas in the Straits unless they also have the sign (B.).

6. Nautical terms, and also many other technical terms, and the names of animals and plants, are for the most part unknown to the Babas.

The differences in Baba pronunciation are not usually shown, as it has been thought better to adhere to a uniform system of spelling. The principal differences are as follows: ai becomes e, au becomes o or u, oh becomes o or u, eh becomes i, and ah becomes a, final h being never aspirated as it is by Malays, f becomes p, kh becomes k, the verbal prefix per becomes ber, and u sometimes becomes o, especially final ut becomes ot. Where the changes are not regular as here indicated, the Baba pronunciation is often given as well as the Malay.

Transitive verbs formed with the suffix -i, are not used by the Babas; these are not usually marked *, but the suffix -kan should in almost every case be substituted for the -i, except in the word mula'i, which the Babas pronounce as a two-syllable word, mulai.

In paraphrases the reader is expected to substitute Baba words where necessary; for instance, sama for the preposition akan, and pada for bagi, satu macham for s-jnis in names of animals, plants, etc., prajajaran or kpandaian for 'ilmu in names of the sciences ('ilmu meaning "magic" in the Baba Malay), hal for pri in the translation of nouns expressing state or action, and so forth. Similarly in compound words and examples, as under the word "ear," the Baba word kuping should be substituted for the Malay telinga.

It should also be noted that the verbal prefix m has a different use among the Babas to that of the Malays. In many words the Babas consider it an inseparable part of the word, as mnangis, mleleh, etc., the root forms tangis, leleh, etc., being never used by them. On the other hand the Babas often omit the m where it would be used by Malays; for instance, Babas would say yang trangkan instead of yang mnrangkan. The sign * does not always mean that the word is wholly unknown to the Babas, but that it is not used in the particular sense given, similarly 'ilmu is not marked (Ar.) under the word "magic," but under "science" it is so marked.

Where the sign (a) is used to show that a word which is usually a noun is to be used adjectivally, that is to say is to follow a noun, it must be understood that the Babas would use punya, the word preceding the noun instead of following it; thus, for "the headman's house" the Malays might say rumah prghulu, and the Babas prghulu punya rumah.

BRIEF NOTES FOR READY REFERENCE.

The root form of Malay word is given, as a general rule.

The proper derived form to be used, must be learned from the Grammar.

The verbal form is given with roots which are seldom used as verbs, thus: mmanjarg, to stretch, from panjarg; mnpî, to step aside, from tpî.

The derivation of foreign words familiar to the Babas is not given.

Arabic Transliteration.

ت ث ح خ ذ ز س ش ص ض ط ظ ع غ ق ك ه h k q gh t t dl s sh s z dz kh H th t

Accented letters â î û indicate alif yâ and wâw respectively in the Arabic.

عالم مشهور حاضر طبيعة صفة خط صحيح قبول طبع ذكر dzikir tam'a qabûl saHîH khat sifat tabî'at Hâdlir mashhûr 'âlam

If the Malay spelling sufficiently indicates the letters, the Arabic spelling is omitted.

The Arabic form is given only once in a group of similar words.

Notes on Baba Malay.

Words marked thus:—

Ar. Sk. Pers. Hind. Turk. are not used by Babas.

Ch. D. E. Eur. Port. are generally known to Babas.

N.I. are not known by Babas unless also marked B.

B. are peculiar to the Babas.

Naut. are generally unknown to Babas.

Changes in Pronunciation.

APPENDIX.

An Introduction to the Language of the Straits-born Chinese (Baba Malay).

The terms High and Low Malay, which appear to have originated with the Dutch, have given rise to a great deal of controversy, and to some confusion and misunderstanding.

As used in Java and other parts of the Netherlands Indies the term means the language of Malay literature, and as the classical literature of the Malays was written when Malacca and Acheen were the great centres of Malay power and learning, it is not surprising to find that the language of Malay literature is the language which is spoken to-day all along the sea coast on both sides of the Straits of Malacca, with only this difference, namely that a few words of foreign origin used in the classical literature never became assimilated in the spoken language, and therefore continue to be purely literary words, and are not understood by the common people. It is a remarkable fact that the Malay language in the Straits of Malacca has remained practically the same for centuries. The English of the time of Queen Elizabeth is now almost unintelligible to those who have not made the literature of that time a special study; but the letters written in Malay from the court of Acheen to Queen Elizabeth and King James I. of England could to-day be read and thoroughly understood by any 4th standard boy in the Malay vernacular schools of the Straits Settlements. In the Dutch Indies, however, the only parts where this language is now spoken are the Riouw-Lingga Archipelago and the East coast of Sumatra: hence to the vast majority of Dutch residents in the East the Malay of the Straits of Malacca is an unknown tongue, and those who have studied it for the most part know it only as the language of Malay literature, and look upon it as being practically a dead language, whereas it is really a very live language in those parts of the Archipelago where it is spoken.

On the other hand the term

is used in the Netherlands Indies to describe the language employed by Europeans, Eurasians, Chinese, and other foreigners in Java as a common means of communication between themselves and the Javanese, Sundanese and other inhabitants of that most populous of all the islands of Malaysia, which contains probably more than three-fourths of the entire population of the Archipelago. The immense numerical preponderance of the Javanese and Sundanese has resulted in the admixture of a very large proportion of the words of those two languages in the "Low Malay" of Java, so that the Malays of the Straits of Malacca have difficulty in understanding it. On the island of Java there are very few people of the Malay race properly so called, and the "Low Malay" of Java is not the spoken language of the Malays at all, but merely a jargon concocted by the mixed multitude of various tongues who live together in that island, and must necessarily have a common language as a means of communication. Having been made the official language of the Dutch government, Low Malay is fostered by the strong arm of the law, newspapers are published in this bastard dialect, and it promises to be the permanent colloquial language of the southern part of the Archipelago.

In the British possessions on the Malay Peninsula the linguistic conditions are entirely different. Here the strongest native race numerically is the Malay, and there is absolutely no other native language to compete with the Malay language for the ascendancy. There are, however, two very distinct dialects of the Malay language spoken on the Malay Peninsula, namely, (1) The pure Malay as it is spoken by the Malays among themselves, with its peculiarly terse idiom, its grammar of prefixes and suffixes, and its immensely rich vocabulary of words of pure Malay origin; and (2) The so-called colloquial Malay of the Settlements, the common means of communication between Europeans, Chinese, Tamils, Malays, and all the other nationalities of these great trading centres, which has comparatively a very small vocabulary, and makes but little use of those grammatical changes in the form of words which make the pure Malay language so expressive.

Of these two dialects we will first deal with

THE SPOKEN LANGUAGE OF THE PURE MALAYS.

As already stated above in our remarks on what the Dutch call "High Malay," the spoken language of the Peninsula Malays is in fact the language of Malay literature, and has undergone practically no change whatever in the past three centuries. This is due very largely to the fact that the Malays hold themselves almost entirely aloof from the peoples of other races who come here to trade and to develop the natural resources of the country, leaving the heavy manual labour of the mines and plantations, and all the wholesale and retail trade to be done by the Chinese. The only important changes which have taken place in the spoken language of the Malays in the past 300 years appear to have been through the addition of those Arabic words required to express the religious ideas which have come to them through the teachings of Mohammedanism. Even when the Malays are in the closest proximity to the busy life of our great trade centres their speech is only very slightly affected, so little do they come in contact with people of other nationalities; hence it comes that the Malay language is spoken with practically the same purity at Telok Blanga, or in any of the other outlying villages of Singapore as it is in the villages of the interior of Malacca or Johore. Those who have dealings with the Malays, and desire to speak their language correctly, as they themselves speak it, must study Malay literature, and especially such modern works as the writings of the famous Munshi Abdullah, or the recently published Riddles written by Guru Sleiman of the Malay College at Malacca, which are in an excellent conversational style.

From what has just been said, it is plain that throughout our British possessions the pure Malay language is the language of the villages. On the other hand the language of the great Settlements and large towns and of the markets and shops everywhere, in fact the business language of the Malay Peninsula, is that is to say, Malay as it is spoken by the Malay-speaking Chinese. This is quite a distinct dialect, the prevailing characteristic of which is its tendency to follow the Chinese rather than the Malay idiom. It is true that the number of Chinese words which have become assimilated with this dialect is not very large, and that many words have been borrowed from English, Portuguese, Dutch and Tamil, and from other neighbouring tongues, but it is rightly called "Baba Malay," for it is largely the creation of the Baba Chinese, and is their mother tongue, so that it belongs to them in a sense that no other people can or do claim it as their own. In this respect it differs greatly from the so-called "Low Malay" of Java, for though those Chinese who are born and live in the Dutch Indies all speak that language, yet they have not by any means had the strongest influence in its formation, for "Low Malay" has a very much stronger affinity with Javanese and Sundanese than it has with Chinese, and has not been so much affected by the Chinese idiom as the Baba Malay of the Malay Peninsula, the Chinese in the Dutch Indies having always been few in number as compared with the natives of the country. In the British Settlements, on the other hand, the Chinese have always had a commanding influence in all business affairs, and in a proportionate degree have left their impress upon the language in which the business of the Settlements has always been transacted, and in which it will probably continue to be carried on long after the present generation has passed away. The fact that Baba Malay is now, and is likely to be for an indefinite period, the business language of Singapore, Penang, and the Federated Malay States, would in itself be a sufficient reason why it should be studied as a distinct dialect; but a still more weighty reason is found in the fact that it is the mother-tongue of the majority of the Chinese women and children in the Straits Settlements, and of a considerable and increasing number in the Federated Malay States. It is the language of the homes of the Straits-born Chinese—the most highly educated and the most influential section of the Chinese community in the British possessions, and therefore it is the language in which the women and children of this important class can most readily and most successfully be educated. The pure Malay language, as the Malays themselves speak it, the Babas will never learn, for they despise it, calling it Malayu hutan—the language of the jungle. Their dialect—Baba Malay—they look upon as the language of the refined and wealthy class of Malay-speaking Chinese. That being the case it is hopeless to try and force upon them what others consider to be “Classical Malay,” however much superior it may be from the view-point of the scholar and the historian. Baba Malay is the language of the man of the street; it is a strong and virile tongue, more easily acquired than the pure Malay, and sufficiently expressive for all ordinary purposes; moreover it has a remarkable capacity for borrowing and assimilating such words as it needs from other languages. It is sure to live. When the principles of its grammatical construction are better understood, when those who speak it are able also to read and write it correctly, and when it has a literature of its own, Baba Malay will prove itself to be an adequate medium for conveying thought and for imparting instruction.

THE EVOLUTION OF BABA MALAY.

Malacca, being the oldest foreign settlement in Malaysia, is the most favourable place to study the history of Chinese immigration to this part of the world, and the origin of the dialect which they now speak. It is now nearly 400 years since Europeans first made their appearance at Malacca, but the Chinese were there some time before that. Bukit China, the burial ground of the Chinese from time immemorial, was so called before the time when the Malay history “Sjarah Malayu” was written, which is more than 300 years ago. The first immigrants were probably from Amoy, for nearly all the words of Chinese origin which have come into the Malay language approach more closely to the sounds of Hok-kien than to those of any other dialect, and the Babas of all the old families claim to be Hok-kiens. There is also very little doubt that the Chinese who came to this part of the world in the early days were exclusively males, that they married Malay women, but brought up their children as Chinese. Even to the present day the marriage customs of the Baba Chinese approximate more closely to those of the Malays than to those of the natives of China, but intermarriage between the Babas and the Malays has entirely ceased, and probably for hundreds of years past the Babas have married exclusively amongst their own people.

The Baba community, however, is still growing by the same process which must have been going on for centuries, something after the following manner:—An immigrant comes from China, and as soon as he has saved up enough money he opens a small shop in a Malay village, where he soon learns to make himself understood in the Malay language. When he is able to support a wife, he looks out for a girl from some of the poorer Baba families, or perhaps a daughter of one of the numerous concubines to be found in the homes of the wealthy. Baba women of this class are to be found to-day in all the villages of Malacca, married to small shopkeepers, who were born in China, and speak Malay very imperfectly; their children, however, are Babas pure and simple, and in many cases know nothing whatever of the Chinese language. They have learnt the Malay language from their mothers, and from constant association with Malay children in the village where they live; in fact they know much more Malay than they are generally given credit for. Nevertheless there is a marked difference between the Malay spoken by these Chinese children and that spoken by the Malay children with whom they seem to mix so freely; but this is of course easily accounted for by the influence of the Chinese parent upon the language spoken by their children, for however intimately the children of different nationalities may be thrown together in their games, the language of the home must necessarily have the strongest influence upon them. As time went by and the Babas became more numerous, they would begin to form a community by themselves and would not come so much into contact with the Malays; this would be especially the case in the town of Malacca rather than in the villages, in fact it is noticeable even at the present day that the Babas in the villages speak much more like the Malays themselves than those who live in the town. As the Babas in the town ceased to associate with the Malays, their peculiarities of idiom would tend to become fixed, and their speech would be influenced less and less by the Malay standards of pronunciation, grammar or the use of words. The Malays have had a literature of their own for hundreds of years, and a considerable proportion of the population have been able to read and write for probably at least 300 years, and their literature has undoubtedly tended to maintain the purity of their spoken language; the Babas on the other hand have never learned to read and write Malay, hence their knowledge of the language has always been purely colloquial, and therefore the more liable to be corrupted.

The differences between the Malay language as spoken by the Babas and the colloquial language of the Malays themselves are principally as follows:—(1) They have introduced a number of words of Chinese origin most of which are wholly unknown to the Malays; (2) They are entirely unacquainted with a large number of Malay words which are in common use among the Malays themselves; (3) They mispronounce many Malay words, and in some cases have altered the pronunciation so much that the word is almost unrecognisable; and (4) to a great extent they use the Chinese idiom rather than the Malay, putting their sentences together in a way which is quite different from the colloquial language of the Malays. We will consider these different points one by one.

1. Words of Chinese origin.

In dealing with the question of the Chinese words used by the Babas it must first be remarked that their pronunciation of such words is Malay rather than Chinese. The Hok-kien Chinese in the pronunciation of their words use seven very clearly defined "tones," and the meaning of a word depends entirely upon the tone of voice in which it is pronounced. Of the use of these tones the Babas for the most part know absolutely nothing, and if they ever pronounce a Chinese word correctly as far as the tone is concerned, it is by accident rather than by design. I am referring of course to those Chinese words which have become incorporated with the Baba Malay language; many of the Babas can speak Hok-kien Chinese with some fluency, and when doing so must of necessity use the tones, though usually very imperfectly, yet when speaking Malay they use Chinese words without attempting to give the correct tones, and in some cases Chinese words have been so much corrupted that it is difficult to recognise their derivation. This we will illustrate later on.

The Chinese words which are most frequently used in Baba Malay are undoubtedly the pronouns goa, "I," and lu, "you." In speaking amongst themselves the Babas never use the Malay pronouns aku and engkau, but curiously enough for the pronouns of the 3rd person singular and 1st person plural they invariably use the Malay dia and kita, and never use the Chinese equivalents. It is well known that in polite conversation the Malays avoid the use of pronouns as far as possible, whereas the Chinese use pronouns with much greater freedom; in this respect the Babas conform to Malay usage. Children would never think of using the pronoun lu to their parents, and in conversation with their seniors the greatest care is taken to use the proper form of address, so that all the little children know the proper titles to be given to all their relations; it is a remarkable thing, however, that these relationships are expressed by Chinese and not by Malay words, exceptions to this rule being the words for mother (mak) and younger brother or sister (adek) and elder brother (abang). The Chinese words for the various relationships have in most cases the prefix ng which is used by the Chinese in addressing relatives, but this is corrupted sometimes to n and m by the Babas: for instance for father the Babas do not use the ordinary Hok-kien word pē or lāu-pē, but the more unusual word tia-tia in the form 'ntia; for grandfather, kong has become 'ngkong; elder sister, tāa-chi has become tachi; father's elder brother, peh, is 'mpek; father's younger brother, chek, is 'n*chek*; sister's husband, chiá-hu, is chau; and so forth.

Another very large class of words which the Babas have borrowed from the Chinese language are those relating to household affairs. The construction of their houses is Chinese in plan rather than Malay, and they have given Chinese names to the different parts of the house—the front room or hall where the idols are placed is called the tiaⁿ (Chinese thiaⁿ); the centre court open to the sky is chimche (chhim-chiⁿ); the upper floor is lotery (lâu-téry); the inside balcony is largkan (Chinese lârg-kharg, open space); bedroom is pargkery (pârg-kery); the outer balcony open to the sky is la-peⁿ (? lâu-piⁿ); a lamp is tery or targlory (terg-liôrg); a carpet or rug is tanak (thán-à); paint is chat (chhat); and even a cockroach is kachuak (ka-tsoâh). Kitchen utensils are called by Malay names, but anything peculiar to the Chinese receives a Chinese name, as, tea pot, tekuan (tê-koân); soup spoon, trysi (thry-si); kettle, teko (tê-kó); chopsticks however are known as sumpit, presumably a corruption of the Malay spit; the table at which they eat their meals is invariably known by the Chinese name toh; to cook by steaming is known by the Chinese name tím (tím), but Malay words are used for all other cooking operations; many kinds of food are known by Chinese names, such as, bami (bâh-mi), tauyu (tâu-iû), kiamchai (kiâm-chhài), kuchai (ku-chhài), pechai (peh-chhài), chaipo (chhài-pó), kueh chary (ké-chârg); kueh tiau (ké-tiâu), etc. Several articles of clothing have names of Chinese origin, that which is most familiar being of course the queue, tauchary (thâu-tsary); also we have Chinese mourning, toaha (toâ-hâ); a child's binder, oto (io-tó); a man's purse, opau (io-pau); a woman's purse, kotoa (khó-toâ); stockings, boek (bêh); to adorn one's self, chrgkan diri (tsrg); and we might here mention the flat-iron, utau (ut-tâu).

As might be expected, nearly everything connected with the religious ceremonies of the Babas is known by names of Chinese origin: the Chinese temple is bio (biô), the Buddhist priest is hoe-sio (hê-siûⁿ); the idol is topekory (tôa-peh-kory), sio-hio (sio-hiûⁿ) is to burn incense, kui (küi) is to kneel, and teyan (tôe-iên) is to give a subscription.

Business affairs, medicine, and games (gambling) also contribute a number of words of Chinese origin, such as, korysi (kory-si) association or company, tauke (thâu-ke) head of a firm, jihô (ji-hô) shop sign; koyok (ko-iôh) plaster, po'ho (pôh-hô) peppermint, pekak (poeh-kak-hiûⁿ) aniseed, sergse (sten-siⁿ) teacher; and the following games, pakau (phah-kâu), susek (sù-sek), chki (chit-ki), kau (kau), tan (tán), etc.

The Babas also used a good many words of Chinese origin to express abstract ideas, but not always to express the same meaning that the word conveys to the Hok-kien Chinese. For instance, for ungrateful the Babas use bo-jin-cherj (bô-jin-chêrg), for a sarcastic or ironical remark they use siaupi (sau-phî), to be satisfied kam-guan (kam-guân), nice, homia (hó-miâ), etc.

It should be remembered that for nearly all the ideas and objects mentioned above the Malays have their own proper words, which they would use among themselves. Those Malays who come frequently into contact with the Chinese are of course well acquainted with such words as goa and lu, lotery, tekuan, kuchai, pechai, toaha, taukeh, and so forth, but with many of the words of Chinese origin given above even the Malays in the town of Malacca are quite unfamiliar. Similarly the Babas are utterly unacquainted with the Malay equivalents of nearly all these words.

2. Malay words which are unknown to the Babas.

From what has been said above it is evident that the Babas are unfamiliar with those Malay words of which they are accustomed to use the Chinese equivalents, but there are also a large number of other words in common use among the Malays of which the Babas are entirely ignorant. It is of course well known in European countries that those who cannot read their own language use but a very small number of words in ordinary conversation; we can only hope to acquire a large vocabulary in our own language by constant reading. With few exceptions the Babas read absolutely nothing in the Malay language, and consequently their knowledge of Malay words is very limited. The Malay language is rich in synonyms, and has words to express the finest shades of meaning; but where a number of words have somewhat similar meanings, the Baba uses only one or two to express them all. For instance, for looking and seeing the Malays use the words lihat, pandang, tergok, nampak, tampak, tingadah, mnoleh, tilek, belek, etc.; but the Babas hardly ever use any of these except tergok and nampak, and occasionally lihat and pandang. Similarly they make the one word taroh serve the purpose where the Malays use taroh, buboh and ltak; and the word angkat is used by them where the Malays would say pikul, kelek, tatang, kandong, kendong, junjorg, dokong. Many of the Babas would know some of these words if they heard a Malay use them, but they for the most part do not know the exact shades of meaning which they express, and consequently they do not attempt to use them. Where the Malays use two words of somewhat similar meaning, the Babas generally use one to the entire exclusion of the other, for instance they use berjumpa and not bertemu, tuang and not churah, pegang (for pgang) and not chapai, tingkar and not bantah, spak and not tampar, kosong and not hampa, panas and not hargat. Of the formation of derived words from roots by means of prefixes and suffixes the Babas as a rule know nothing whatever; in many cases however they use derived words, but do not seem to understand their connection with the root word: as for instance the word pyapu, broom, is well known, but they would not understand its connection with sapu,

to sweep, and if one should use the form mnyapu they would probably not know what was meant. In some cases they use only the derived form, and do not know the root at all: mnaryis, to weep, and mnari to dance, are of course in common use, but the root words taryis and tari are utterly unknown. On the other hand if a Baba knows the root word it does not at all follow that he will understand the derivative, he knows suroh, but knows nothing about pyuroh: tuigg he uses, but pnuygu is practically unknown. All the prefixes and suffixes are used by the Babas in connection with certain words, but not with others, in fact they use them without knowing why or how they should be used. The suffix i, however, which forms transitive verbs, is practically never used, and in the one word mula'i in which they do use it, they have no idea that they have a derivative from the well-known word mula, for they pronounce it simply mulai, and then go so far as to make it a transitive verb over again by adding the other similar suffix -kan, making the extraordinary combination mulaikan. In the same way the Babas make other derivatives of their own manufacture which are never used by the Malays, and sound to them exceedingly barbarous; for instance I have actually seen in print such forms as kbersehan, bharukan for bharui, mmbikinkan, etc. Even some of the simple prepositions are never used by the Babas: instead of k-, to a place, they always use di, which properly means "at;" bagi, for, is almost unknown, and digan, with, is very little used, sama being made to do duty where the Malays use digan, pada and even akan. Such words as are used in the polite phraseology of the Malays are never used by the Babas, and few of them would even know the meaning of such words if they were to hear them: I refer particularly to such words as bonda, adinda, kakanda, which the Malays of all classes use in their private correspondence, and also the form of address to persons of superior rank, and pronouns used by inferiors to superiors, the various words for speaking, such as, firman of God, titah of a king, sabda of a prophet or person of high rank, kata of equals, smbah of inferiors addressing a royal person. This whole system of phraseology is practically unknown to the Babas, and so is also the great bulk of the religious phraseology of the Malays. It is however unnecessary to go further in these matters, for enough has been said to show very plainly how much of the Malay language is a sealed book to the Babas.

3. Malay words mispronounced by the Babas.

The Babas have no difficulty in pronouncing every letter in the Malay language. In this respect they are entirely different from the immigrant Chinese, who find it utterly impossible to sound the letter r or d, and who always change final s into t, and make sundry other changes to suit their own peculiarities of speech. The Babas mispronounce Malay words either because they find their own way easier, or because they think it more elegant. They have no difficulty in sounding the letters b and l, but instead of ambil they say ambek or even amek, and for tinggal one sometimes hears tinggek. Final ai is always toned down to e and au to o, as surge and pulo for surgai and pulau. Final h is never sounded at all, so that rumah becomes ruma, bodoh is bodo, and boleh is bole; thus they make no distinction between the sound of final ai and eh, both being e to the Baba. On the other hand final a is generally sounded as ak, and sometimes final i becomes ik: thus instead of bapa, bawa and pula, we have bapak, bawak and pulak. These corruptions of the sounds of the final letters cause a great deal of confusion in some words; for instance the Babas always pronounce chari as charik or charek, and have no idea that this is quite a different word, and means to tear; there is also a similar confusion between bawa, to bring, and bawah, below. The Babas also frequently drop the h in the middle of a word, as baru for bharu, saja for sahaja, saya for sahya; and they have a slight tendency to drop the h at the beginning of a word, as in the words hati, hanyut; etc. The Malays sometimes fail to sound initial h, but they never fail to sound the final h, and sometimes go so far as to carry the h over to the beginning of the next word, as rumah horang, tlah hada, etc. Other corruptions can hardly be classified, so it is best to give a few examples at random, for instance, bergitu for bgitu, ktawa for tertawa, rta for arti, kreja for kerja, piara for plihara, pegang for pgang, sumpit for spit (chopsticks), mimpi for mimpi, kmantin for pyantin, smoyek for smbunyi. Words of Arabic origin are generally corrupted more than pure Malay words, for example, pe'du for fa'idah, jerki for rzki, akérat for ákhírat.

4. The Baba idiom is Chinese rather than Malay.

Perhaps the most striking peculiarity in the way that the Babas make up their sentences is the very frequent use of the possessive particle punya, which they use precisely as the Hok-kiens use the particle ê; but punya being a longer word is much more cumbersome, and produces awkward sentences, thus, "Dia punya mak-bapa ada dudok makan di sblah punya meja." Such phrases as "tiga bulan punya lama," "sperti macham itu punya kreta," are in constant use, and sound ludicrous to a Malay. These sentences are all taken from the writings of the Babas themselves. Here is another typical sentence, "Ini macham punya orary fikir apa yang banyak salah ta'patut buat, dan apa yang sdikit salah boleh buat. Apa punya bodoh satu fikiran ini?" The redundancy of the "punya" is not, however, the only peculiarity of this sentence, the writer of which, though he is unable to speak Chinese, has given us a very close approximation to the Chinese idiom, and the whole sentence is absolutely unlike anything that a Malay would say. In the first place such expressions as ini macham and apa yang are never used by Malays; instead of ini macham punya orang fikir, a Malay would say pada fikiran orang yang dmikian; and instead of apa yang banyak salah, a Malay would say ksalahan yang bsar; a Malay would probably say the whole sentence somewhat as follows:—Pada fikiran orang yang dmikian, ksalahan yang bsar tiada patut di-perbuat, dan ksalahan yang sdikit boleh di-perbuat. The last clause "Apa punya bodoh satu fikiran ini?" is even more utterly foreign to Malay idiom. It will be noticed that in the above sentence as reconstructed in the Malay idiom, the passive form di-perbuat is used; the Malays of course make a great deal of use of this construction both in writing and in conversation, but the Babas hardly ever use it at all. Another peculiarity is that the Babas almost always make the adjectival pronouns itu and ini, that and this, precede the noun which they qualify instead of following it, as it should be according to Malay idiom. Again the Babas use the verb "to be" quite differently from the Malays; take such sentences as, "Ini ada btul salah;" "ini macham punya orang yang bodoh"—no Malay would ever use ada in such a connection at all. They also follow the English idiom of placing the verb "to be" at the end of a sentence, thus, "brapa chantek dia-orang ada," "how beautiful they are." Another Chinese idiom is the use of datang for "here" or "hither," as the Chinese use lái, as, "knapa l'ada bawa dia datang?" and "Kalau lu jalan datang." Pernah is used in the sense "at some time," as opposed to ta'pernah, "never," in the same way that the Hok-kiens used bat and m̄-bat, as, "kuda yang sudah pernah targong seksa," "a horse which has suffered at some time;" "kuda yang sudah pernah jatoh," "a horse which at some time has fallen;" these quotations are from the translation of "Black Beauty" by Mr. Goh Hood Keng, who speaks very little Chinese. The following may also be given as examples of phrases which are distinctly Chinese—" Di-piarkan sampai mnjadi orang," "taken care of until he grew up" = Chinese chiá"-lâng; "orang yang kna dia pukol," "the man who was beaten by him" = hō̄ i phah.

The list of words on the following pages, though not by any means complete, will be useful for reference.
