NEW ORLEANS.—The returns from this city have greatly astonished us. We believe the Democratic Delegation and Senator are elected on at least 3000 majority. How much a revolution in the vote of New Orleans has been brought about since the President's election, we do not positively know, but have strong suspicions that our Whig friends in that region have let the opponents our general them in this way. We have been credibly informed—and we hope for the sake of our party that it is not so—that the "Live Oak Guards" exchanged votes with the "Walker Guards." The proposition, as made by the Walker Guards, was this, so we have learned, viz: that the Live Oak Guards—an association numbering eighty Democrats—would agree to vote for Gen. Walker, if the Walker Guards would agree to vote for Gen. Wm. L. Hodge for Sheriff. We want it distinctly understood that we do not charge this upon the Democratic party, but upon a few young men of whose votes it was composed. We mention it merely for the purpose that we do not charge this upon the Whig press of New Orleans an opportunity to deny the charge.—St. Francisville Chronicle.

We avail ourselves of the interrogatories [illegible] in the above paragraph, to explain the result in New Orleans, which has so greatly astonished our Whig friends in the country. It was generally conceded that three weeks before the election the Whigs of this city did not possess a very large majority. They were very well organized, and had endless means. At the time named, the Democracy were disorganized and [illegible] apathetic. At present, Whig, then, occurred to us as the aspect of the political horizon to discuss the ardent hopes of the Whigs, and to enlist their vigor, energy and enthusiasm in the [illegible]. We can answer the question in a few words. The Crescent and Delta were Whig, and [illegible] the Democratic party, which was [illegible] defeat of Dalcour [illegible] was supported in the [illegible] by the Democrats of the city. It must be evident to the reader that a party [illegible] with a merely local object, and the Democratic party, with a merely local object, and the Democratic party, with a merely local object, and the Democratic party,
