A FEW THOUGHTS ON CO-EDUCATION

Dr. Lyman B. Sperry Refers to Causes Which Have Operated Against Movement

Speaking on the subject of co-education, to which he has given special attention, Dr. Lyman B. Sperry, who is lecturing in this city at the present time, said he believed that the prospect of failure in connection with the system as it had been tried in the United States were not justified by results, but that while he had not lost faith in co-education as a factor in the training of the young during the period of adolescence, if it was to be successful there would have to be sweeping changes made in the system as actually carried out, and more supervision of the girls.

The ugly stories which had leaked out in the last few years in connection with certain summer-cities had immeasurably injured the cause of educating boys and girls together at a susceptible age, and it was common knowledge that the American girl enjoyed such a large measure of liberty that any attempt to resist that liberty had aroused the greatest opposition.

He recognized that fact in discussing the subject, and the absence of discipline, the love of social pleasures, and the attractions of the theatre had served to create in the girlhood of America, and in a less degree in Canada, that freedom which was fraught with peril little realized by the easy-going parents. The enormous step which had been made in the enfranchisement of women, and he was old enough to be born in the year in which liberal America first granted a bachelor's degree to a woman, had brought with it certain disadvantages, particularly in the high schools, where the children were educated together, and lost much of the mutual respect of the sexes, without often catching that higher inspiration which the hope of the friends of co-education had seen as a result of that intercourse.

The danger was that the modern girl loved freedom and amusement too much, and anxious for attention without responsibility, she might easily become a flirt.

He pointed out that it could hardly be expected that youths and girls could come bright and fresh to their studies after wasting the evenings at theatres or music halls, and yet it was by an example of the tendency of the present day towards the craving for excitement, for something out of the ordinary, and that which satisfieth the soul, that the danger was being met. People in this western continent had learnt to crowd too much into the day and live too fast, and this peril had gripped many of the schools where scholars at a susceptible age were being taught, and its dangers were associated with the culpable ignorance in which parents often left their children about vital matters.

In co-education in its truest sense the girl should imbibe the spirit of the traditional gentleness of the sex, and the boy by example show the girl some of the proverbial school-boy code of honor, which was often lacking in girls' schools. He believed that a recognition of the mutual strength of each of the sexes would far towards living down the undisciplined prejudice against joint instruction of the sexes.

J. N. HARVEY, LTD.

To Hold Big Clothing Sale—Opening Friday Morning Next.

It will be remembered that when J. N. Harvey, Ltd., took over the B. Williams & Co. business last April, Mr. W. T. Williams was confined to the hospital through an accident. This was in the very midst of the buying season for fall. Mr. Williams had previously placed orders in the usual way through a misundersanding many of the lines were re-ordered by the J. N. Harvey Company. This duplication in orders was not discovered until a short time ago, when the goods began to arrive. At a conference of the president, the Victoria resident director, Mr. Williams, and the manager, Mr. Price, when possible extensions to the business were discussed, it was decided to offer this entire stock of high class clothing, hats and furnishings, to the people of Victoria at greatly reduced prices, a sale to open on Friday morning of this week at 9 o'clock. The store will be closed all day Thursday to mark down the prices and get ready for the sale. This will give the people of Victoria an exceptional chance to buy their fall and winter goods from one of the best stocks in the city at a great saving in price.

SEATTLE WAS BORN SIXTY YEARS AGO

ANNIVERSARY WAS HONORED BY DINNER

Businessmen Show Pride in Their City—Warm Tribute to the Pioneers

Victorians take more than a passing interest in the celebration by Seattle merchants on Monday of the sixtieth anniversary of the settlement of that city. This city and Seattle are very much of an age. It might be said that they were "playmates" because for years there was close intercourse between Victoria and Seattle.

On Monday the merchants of the Sound city celebrated its sixtieth anniversary by a banquet which was attended by the principal businessmen of the place. Among the speakers was Thos. W. Prosch, who in comparing the settlement of Seattle with the Jamestown and Plymouth settlements on the Atlantic coast, said that the two latter had the support of church and government while the local settlement had no such support, and that in years to come, and when Seattle took the place she is to take among the great cities, Founders' day in Seattle would be celebrated in all parts of the world.

Mr. Prosch called attention to the establishment, ten years after their coming, of the University of Washington that has just celebrated its semi-centennial, the organization in 1882 of the Chamber of Commerce, and the fact that Judge Thomas Burke and Samuel Frauenthal are the only charter members who have belonged to that body from its beginning.

"From the humble beginning I have outlined," said Mr. Prosch, "our city sprung and has grown, and there is no other city in the world as great as Seattle, of which it can be said that there are yet living and among its citizens people who were present and assisted in its founding."

"We can afford to honor these people while they are still living, and when they are gone this grateful city will commemorate their lives and their deeds by an annual celebration of Founders' day."

"Thus will we honor our first people and their dramatic arrival and deeds as grateful and patriotic citizens should do, and is done under somewhat similar circumstances all over the United States."

Prof. Edmond S. Meany, in the absence of former Senator S. H. Piles, unavoidably detained from the meeting by reason of illness, responded to the toast, "Seattle of the Present." He referred to the purchase of Alaska, the boast of William H. Seward, that he considered it the greatest act of his life; but which the statesman said it would take another generation to uncover.

"And you are that generation," said Prof. Meany, "and I see in the signs of the times a message that that future and that responsibility predicted by the great Seward is yours, and that with it will come changing and that the present revolution, which is not successful, it will be eventually, offering you a still magnificent future in that wondrous country."

The outburst of the evening came with the declaration of Senator John L. Wilson, speaking for "The Present" and "We must stand together," and the simultaneous clasping of hands which Col. A. J. Blithen. The whole company arose and cheered, amid cries of "Do it again; we like it."

Senator Wilson said that the press was the mirror of the community in which it exists, that in its wonderful and rapid makeup errors were inseparable from the work, yet there was no single factor in the development of a community greater than the press.

"What it seeks is the eternal comfort and welfare of all the people," said Senator Wilson, "and hence it is that it is entitled to your support."

After a tribute to the pioneers, who, he said, gave to the people of the Northwest a free gift of a country, "a country," he said, "which had all the metals equal to one-half of all the metallic-currency of the world," Senator Wilson made a plea for all Seattleites "to get together, stick together, feel together and fight together that they might reap the rich fruits of all their advantages."

Col. Blithen, speaking to the toast, "The Future of Seattle," said that of which is arable and tillable, 40,000 sq. miles as in the past the development of Seattle and Northwest Washington and her chief city will astonish the inhabitants of the future, "for," he said, "who can calculate less than 2,000,000 population for Seattle fifty years hence, with Alaska destined to duplicate what already California has done, and, indeed, outstrip that great state."

Aviator Rodgers Plans to Complete Transcontinental Journey Next Week.

Los Angeles, Nov. 15.—Galbraith P. Rodgers, transcontinental aviator, who had such a narrow escape from death on Sunday evening when he fell into a newly ploughed field south of Crowsfoot, announced through his manager, H. Sanger last night, that he would finish his flight Tuesday afternoon.

"We will take Rodgers to the place where he fell," said Mr. Sanger, "and place him on the machine. He will then finish his flight. It is only seven or eight miles to the Pacific Coast, and Rodgers figures that he is strong enough to make the flight."

"The injuries Rodgers sustained," continued Mr. Sanger, "are not so

Notice to Advertisers

Owing to the rapidly increasing circulation of the Times and the growing demands for space, it has become absolutely necessary to place a limit upon the time at which changes for advertisements will be accepted and guaranteed publication.

UNWARRANTED EXPENDITURE

On Friday next the ratepayers will be asked to approve or disapprove a by-law authorizing the city council to purchase twelve acres of the Songhees Reserve from the provincial government for park purposes at a cost of $80,000.

The very most that the city could owe for the land in question, even if the bargain with the city referred to by Mayor Morley be maintained as a factor in the present case, is the interest on the amount of money to purchase the new reserve and remove the Indians to that locality and for the period of time until the government reimburses itself from the sale of the Songhees lands.

The city has an equity in and should hold a title to forty-three acres of the old reserve, and we cannot justify or extend the action of the council in asking that a sum of money be paid the government for a part of this area.

of the city in its admission of ownership of the land by the government. The government does not own the land, and it is the duty of the council to insist on its conveyance in fee simple, thus implementing the promise made in the order-in-council and in the bargain with the federal authorities.

We do not hold the present council so much responsible as we do the mayor. The present council was not as such a party to the correspondence of 1906-7 and 1909, but Mayor Morley was. He allowed himself to be utilized by Mr. McBride in persuading the ratepayers to support the McBride candidates in the election of 1907 by stating that this land would be conveyed, and though he may have been perfectly confiding in his belief that Mr. McBride intended to implement his promise, he does not set himself in opposition to the by-law which it is proposed to have the city forfeit its claim.

Mayor Morley has twice expressed the hope that the government would "on further consideration" deal liberally with the city in respect to this dispute, but neither Mayor Morley nor the city council has taken any known steps to urge such "liberal" consideration upon the attention of the government. The whole situation as to the attitude of the mayor, the city council and the government is one which deserves the unqualified condemnation of the ratepayers, and it is as much the duty of those who oppose the sort of double-dealing characterized and made concrete in this example to vote against the by-law as it is the privilege of those who will profit by the deal to vote and urge that it be carried.

LIBERAL CONSERVATISM

The tentative announcement that the Borden government will probably undertake at once the construction of the Georgian Bay to Ottawa River Canal is being heralded by some of the eastern government organs as an evidence that the new broom intends to sweep something. When it is considered that the Liberal government had this work in contemplation, that surveys of the whole route and estimates of the cost of the undertaking reduced to detail, together with the fact that a commission has held appointment in prospect of this undertaking the new announcement is neither revolutionary nor startling.

Terminal Elevators $26,000,000 Hudson Bay Railway 20,000,000 P. E. I. Tunnel 20,000,000 Georgian Bay Canal 200,000,000 Naval Programme 2,222,222 Public Highways System 222,222 Ross Rifles for Victoria 2,222 Better Terms for B. C. 222 Chilled Meat Bonuses 222

The Fielding surplus of $20,000,000 looks very much like thirty cents in view of these vast undertakings, each one of which, excepting Better Terms, has been already promised as solemnly as a nuptial vow. The people of Canada will be glad to see these pledges carried out, but we have a slight suspicion that the absence of Mr. Fielding from the portfolio of finance will make the raising of the money for these enterprises somewhat more difficult than giving the pledges.

Mr. Borden reminded his Halifax banqueters that he is the third premier that city has given to the Dominion, the other two being Sir Charles Tupper and Sir John Thompson. He omitted moralizing on the fact that neither of the others lasted very long.

Thoughtless—mixing of metaphors. We leave the brains of the dilettante litterateurs who find enjoyment in these succulent morsels to wrestle with the following specimen—a rare species now all but extinct from the editorial columns of the Toronto News.

The Mainland Lumber and Shingle Company of Vancouver, has issued a 1912 calendar which is nothing if not a work of art. The entire piece is a replica of Thomas Moran's "Sunset near Land's End, England," the color-plate being an unusually artistic reproduction of the original.

"Last but not least, that of Asiatic immigration," says Mr. McBride, in enumerating the problems he wants Mr. Borden to settle, said Mr. Borden being a much stronger man than poor weak Laurier. All Mr. Borden has to do to please Mr. McBride is to persuade Great Britain that the anger of the Japanese is not worthy of notice.

It may have been noticed that since the general elections on September 21 conservative speakers have on several occasions taken advantage of opportunities to discuss the reciprocity agreement—the main issue in the elections. They have manifested a desire, even an anxiety, to justify their opposition to the agreement.

The Ottawa and Montreal papers with McBride interviews have come to hand. In his Eastern interviews the Premier does not speak so boldly in hope of the success of his mission to Ottawa as he did in the elaborate programme outlined by him for British Columbia readers through the columns of the Times. He told the newspapers in the East that while he did not expect all the wants of this province to be immediately alleviated, he confidently expected the federal government to approach the questions with a view to mutual agreement.

We quote a remarkable sentence from a contemporary which deals at length with the relations between the Tories of Canada and the Unionists of the United Kingdom. The sentence is: "After all, it is men, not measures, that have carved out for us the heritage which we enjoy under the sheltering folds of the Union Jack." So then if we have men at the head of affairs measures count for nothing? In what way can men demonstrate that they are men excepting by measures? Beginning with Magna Charta, all the "heritages we enjoy under the sheltering folds of the Union Jack" are held by us because "men" have evolved "measures," and there is no other way in which men can leave their footprints in the sands of Time excepting by measures.

FUTURE HOME WILL BE IN VANCOUVER

RALPH SMITH WILL MOVE TO MAINLAND

Where He Expects to Engage in Business—A Useful Public Career

Ralph Smith, ex-M. P. for Nanaimo, is in the city on a brief visit, preliminary to leaving for Vancouver, which will be his future home. It is his intention to engage in business in the Terminal City, where he is as well known as he is in the constituency which he represented so long and ably in the Dominion parliament. In fact, it would be difficult to find a community in the province in which Mr. Smith cannot make himself thoroughly at home on short notice owing to his numerous acquaintances and his marked familiarity with provincial questions. He is looking particularly hearty for one who recently fought a strenuous campaign and therein is visible the silver lining of the cloud which lowered on the ranks of Liberalism on a certain day in September.

The late member for Nanaimo is a devoted admirer of Emerson. He has always been profoundly impressed with the originality and truth of the great Federal parliament, and the Island constituency now embraced by Nanaimo district to a considerable extent becoming vacant, he entered the field as a Labor candidate with Liberal affiliations. As a matter of fact Mr. Smith's policy was very largely Liberal and simple, as he afterwards ascertained, because in the campaign of 1904 he ran as a straight Liberal. He had found in those four years that the Liberal party in this country, as in the old land, had done more for the cause of labor and in democratic legislation in a few years than the Conservative party since it was born. Moreover, he realized the futility of accomplishing anything in a House of more than two hundred members, by sitting in melancholy independence at the "cross-benches." He was a practical course, because in all matters pertaining to labor legislation, such, for instance, as the Lemieux Act and the organization of the Department of Labor, his counsel was sought by the prime minister. Had he converted himself into a bronze statue on a pedestal and treated both sides with icy contempt he would have been inexorably flattened between them.

Mr. Smith was regarded as one of the strongest men in the House of Commons in debate and was as highly respected of the opposition as by his conferees behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He was constantly in receipt of invitations from public bodies to address them, some of which he accepted, but the majority declined, owing to the pressure of parliamentary business. He has addressed the Canadian Clubs of Toronto, Hamilton and other Ontario cities on the leading questions of the day and often took part in public gatherings in the nation's capital.

A few years ago he visited Washington and was invited to the White House by President Roosevelt, who has demonstrated a complete knowledge of philosopher's essay on "Compensation," and, no doubt, he has made a perfectly fitting application of the beautiful law of compensation to his own condition. From his shoulders to those of his successor have passed the burdens involved in the representation of so varied a district as Nanaimo and satisfied that he has borne them well for years, he is in a position to contemplate with tranquillity and interest the course of the honorable gentleman who succeeded him. There is not the slightest doubt that Mr. Smith passed his laurel wreath to Mr. Shepherd with a sigh in which relief mingled very largely with regret and it is also certain that he started his successor on the road with his benediction.

Ralph Smith has served Nanaimo in a public capacity thirteen years. In Newcastle-on-Tyne, where he was born and educated and where he spent his early years, he imbued these democratic principles which became stronger as years went by and of which he has always been a sturdy champion. He learned his politics in the school of Tom Burt and John Burns, and when ill-health drove him and his family from England to British Columbia it was quite natural that he should espouse the cause of Labor in the community which he intended should become his home. Mr. Smith was not an ultra-Radical. He was a moderate Radical and did not believe the cause of democracy could be advanced by extreme, intolerant radicalism. Reform, as his knowledge of political history had taught him, was of gradual growth. It had been in progress in England for many centuries and more had been accomplished by men of moderate ideas than by well-meaning fanatics whose violence defeated the ends they had in view.

Mr. Smith was elected to the British legislature in 1898 and retained it for two years. In 1906 he attracted attention of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who expressed a desire to have Canadian public men. The interview was a memorable one, certainly to the Canadian member, for the strenuous president discussed large subjects of international delicacy, such as the Oriental question, with a freedom and vigor, somewhat unique in statesmen in high and responsible positions. It was during this visit to Washington, that Mr. Smith renewed his acquaintance with the British ambassador, Right Hon. James Bryce, who had from the same country and with whom he discussed at length political conditions in the old land.

Another "North Country man" with whom Mr. Smith was on terms of general intimacy was the late governor-general, who always has a warm spot in his heart for the men of his native country, particularly those who have distinguished themselves overseas, and Mr. and Mrs. Smith were always welcome guests at Rideau Hall.

Regret is general in official circles at the capital that the sturdy tribune from Nanaimo will be absent from his accustomed seat in the House. He and Mrs. Smith, a charming hostess and ideal help-mate for a public man, had a legion of friends of all shades of political opinion who deplore their absence. But they are good British Columbians who have extracted from adverse political circumstances the cheering consolation that they can now spend all their time in their own great province.

FIRE AT DETROIT.
Detroit, Nov. 15.—Fire broke out last night on the fourth floor of a wholesale millinery company's five-story building, spread into the business buildings adjoining and caused a loss of property and contents roughly estimated at $250,000. The firemen fought the blaze in a heavy snowfall. It was after three hours' hard fighting succeeded in getting it under control.

PASSING SHOW

The Empress Theatre.

When Luigi Dell'Orto, the talented Lombard, who appears at the Empress theatre this week giving a repertoire of both classical and popular selections on the harmonica, an instrument which he interprets with wonderful ability, was a youth he was a prodigy such a boy pianist, and his parents looked forward to a career for him in that respect, but owing to some knife wounds received from Italian highwaymen, the Lombard youth found his thumb had stiffened and no longer could he stretch over the ivory keys. Then he turned his attention to the harmonica, and the continued applause which greets his every appearance shows how well he has mastered this. He has a special harmonica designed by himself which contains no less than 170 reeds.

"The Man Who Knew," a rural play-let which forms one of the numbers in a good programme at the Empress theatre this week, is one of the best of the tabloid comedy-dramas seen here. The La Verne Barber players are a company of four capable artists and they make their little play well worth seeing.

Mondam Phillips who is a versatile singer known as "The Girl With the Four Voices," does a unique specialty at the Empress this week. She was formerly a member of the Havana Musical Comedy company which was seen some time ago at the Victoria theatre.

Burgos and Clara do a novel turn. They are nothing if not versatile. Their act includes harlot throwing and Burgos shows himself a master of the rope, ride shooting, head balancing and slack wire work. Not the least interesting feature is that in which Clara swings from the side of the proscenium, clinging to one end of the rope on which her partner swings and balances.

Bernard and Arnold, who recently left the New York halls to join the Sullivan and Condon circuit, contribute some comedy. They have a rapid-fire dialogue which is a mirth-provoker. The Empresscope offers some good films, the picture-story of the Bungalow Craze being a most laughable one.

Majestic Theatre.
"Daddy's Boy and Mammy." Heroic deeds always appeal to our appreciation, more so when performed by an interesting and clever boy, in aid of the cause which inspires his patriotism and loyalty to others. A true scene of war and danger of detection, "Daddy's Boy" helps his father to escape capture by risking his young life in his behalf. It is a story of the Civil War. It will be given a prominent place on the programme at the Majestic to-day and Thursday.

Another big feature, a love story which tells how a mission worker rouses the latent manhood of a young man and starts him upon the right path. "The Making of a Man" is a biograph film, extremely well acted. It is a strong, gripping human picture. "Friday the Thirteenth," or "Just Like the Daytons," has a heap of fun that keeps up a laugh all the time. Mr. and Mrs. Gayton are a delightful pair, always getting into trouble, but never losing their temper.

Romania Theatre.
"A Tale of a Cat" is the newest Rex film. It is a most stirring drama. Mrs. Moore has to do washing, etc., for a living, and to support her blind daughter. The housekeeper of one of her patrons gives her a kitten, the former just of an only child. This kitten consoles the blind girl, until by chance, it strays back to its original home. The girl sets out to look for it and finds it at last in the hands of the boy to whom it once belonged. She demands it of him, and sympathizing with her in her blindness, he returns it to her. They become friends. Mrs. Moore getting anxious about her daughter's future, at last finds her in the company of the boy. She tells her to come, but the boy refuses to let her go. He appeals to his father, who makes Mrs. Moore his housekeeper. Surgical aid is obtained for the little girl and after an operation she regains her sight. Other features are three reels of the "Aviator," a stirring drama entitled "Cain's Retribution," another of the humorous Mett & Jeff's comedies, and "The Black Hand." A Nestor film completes the programme.

"MOTHER"

Presented by Capable Company Headed by Miss Putnam.

Jules Eckert Goodman's wholesome and pleasing play, "Mother," was witnessed by a most appreciative audience at the Victoria theatre last evening. Miss Kate Putnam had the leading character, "Mother," and that she was all that could be desired was assured by the approval accorded her work by the audience. She proved a noble mother, seeing as only a mother can the hidden goodness in an outwardly wayward son. Her supporting company was excellent. Miss Margot Merriam as "Arleth," the elder daughter, being capital. Janet Power as the college-bred daughter took her part well. The role of the elder son was exceedingly well done by Frederic Burt. Paul Kelly and Bert Perrett were most amusing and natural in their interpretation of playful young brothers.

OPERATION AT SEA

Montreal, Nov. 15.—When the storm-battered C. P. R. liner Lake Manitoba came into port Monday, four days behind her schedule, the story of a delicate surgical operation performed during a hurricane in mid-ocean was told. Gunner Sunderholm, a Finnish passenger on his way west, was laid low by an abscess and an operation became necessary to save his life. Dr. Pratt, the ship's surgeon, and a passenger rigged up a temporary operating table, and while the ship was having to perform the operation and the patient is doing well. All the Atlantic vessels have been detained by storms and are several days late.

NEWS OF THE SEVEN SEAS

UNPLEASANT TRIP FROM ANTIPODES

SHIP EXPERIENCES MUCH DIRTY WEATHER

Heavy Gales Off Coast Delay Marama—Quiet Passage—Few Passengers Aboard

Disagreeable weather was experienced by the Canadian-Australian liner Marama, Capt. Morrisby, during her 23 days' run from Sydney to this port. The steamship reached the outer docks early this morning one day late, having been delayed by strong northerly gales when nearing the Pacific Coast. Officers of the vessel state that the trip was exceedingly quiet, the passenger list being small and nothing alarming occurring while the ship was at sea. Rain showers encountered practically throughout the whole of the trip.

RAINBOW FINISHES LENGTHY OVERHAUL

To Be Floated Out of Dry Dock To-morrow—Leaving Shortly on West Coast Cruise

Following a lengthy overhaul in the dry-dock at Esquimalt, H. M. C. S. Rainbow, Commander Hesse, will be floated out some time to-morrow. For nearly a month the warship has occupied the stocks and the repairs which have been conducted by the engineers' staff have been most extensive. Her hull has been given considerable attention and her machinery has been thoroughly overhauled. Larger guns have been placed on the Rainbow during the time she has been in dry-dock. When the warship arrived from England she carried eight six-pounders, besides her other armament, but the government decided to remove these, substituting twelve-pounder quick-firing guns. Four of these new guns have been fastened to the ship's deck, and the gunners are anxious to have a trial with them. It is understood that the Rainbow will leave in a few days on a cruise of the west coast of Vancouver Island.

SNOW FORCES TEES TO LIE AT ANCHOR

Spend One Night at Banfield—Heavy Snowfall on Coast—Has Long Stay Here

When the steamer Tees, Capt. Gilliam, which arrived in port this morning from Chazyopot, was docking at Alberni on her northbound trip, the deckhands were forced to walk through snow hip-deep in order to get the lines on to the mooring piles. The officers of the vessel state that the snow was four feet deep at the West Coast port, which is the largest snowfall the residents there can remember. On the return trip the Tees called at Alberni but the great part of the white mantle had disappeared owing to heavy rains.

R. M. S. MARAMA Which arrived in port this morning from the Antipodes after a dirty trip.

The Tees sailed from here on Friday night and the following day encountered a heavy snowstorm. On Saturday night the weather became so thick that the Tees remained at anchor at Banfield until morning before proceeding. The decks of the steamer were piled high with snow and on reaching Alberni the crew engaged in a fight with those on the dock and a lively scene ensued. The men aboard the Tees were accredited the victory, driving their opponents into the city. Outside of the snowstorms the weather was good, a heavy swell being encountered when rounding Cape Beale. The steamer brought to Victoria about seventy passengers and as freight had sixty barrels of whale oil from Sechart.

The Tees has a long stay in port before her next sailing to the west coast. She is not scheduled to sail for Holberg until next Monday night. Many passengers have been booked on the vessel for that trip and she will also have considerable freight for coast points.

SNOW FALLS THICK DURING RUN SOUTH

Princess May Also Encounters Strong Northerly Gale—Good Passenger List

Making her way south from Skagway through blinding snowstorms and heavy northerly gales, the C. P. R. steamer Princess May, Capt. McLeod, arrived in port yesterday afternoon. The officers of the vessel state that they experienced excellent weather going north but while lying at Skagway a sudden change took place. The mercury in the thermometer fell to freezing point and light winds started to blow.

Although the weather was cold the steamer did not encounter any snow until she was abreast of Port Simpson. When she made Prince Rupert her decks were covered with snow and ice, and she presented a unique spectacle. After clearing from the G. T. P. town the May ran into a heavy snowstorm, and when about to enter Grenville channel it was so thick that Capt. McLeod decided to drop anchor. For two hours the vessel remained in a sheltered harbor, when the weather cleared sufficiently to permit the ship to proceed.

It continued to snow until the steamer reached Queen Charlotte Sound, when a strong northerly gale was encountered. A heavy sea was running and as the big combers broke over her bow they washed the decks clean of the snow. When in Johnson Strait another snowsquall was met, but it did not last long. Coming across the Gulf yesterday the May was bothered little by the heavy gale which was blowing. As passengers of the Princess May brought south about 150, the majority of whom disembarked at Vancouver. The steamer will sail again to-morrow night for the north with a fair number of passengers and considerable freight.

WIRELESS MAST BREAKS

Bremerton, Wash., Nov. 15.—A terrific gale and broke off a portion of the fifty-foot topmast at the United States wireless station at Tatoosh Island Monday night. Word of the accident was received here yesterday. The broken mast hanging in the rigging, was thrashed about the mainmast by the gale and threatened further damage. It was finally secured temporarily. The wireless service was not greatly damaged and the station is still able to communicate with other points. A sixty-mile wind has been blowing at Tatoosh all day preventing permanent work being done.

JUDGMENT GIVEN IN CASE OF LYNDBURST

Officers of British Ship, Which Blew Up, Are Exonerated—Story of Accident

The official inquiry into the loss by fire of the British sailing ship Lyndhurst, 2,348 net tons, has been concluded at Capetown and judgment delivered. The Lyndhurst suddenly caught fire off the South African coast in August and was abandoned by her officers and crew. Earlier in the year the Lyndhurst sustained damage, supposed to have been caused through her striking an unknown object of Cape Recife.

The court, in delivering judgment, expressed surprise that no attempt appeared to have been made in Durban to rectify the damage mentioned by the Durban surveyor. These defects were more or less likely to let gas force itself from the hold to portions of the deck. The court considered the methods adopted at Port Elizabeth regarding saturated ballast were not sufficient for safety, and that the explosion might have been avoided if the ballast saturated with paraffin and naphtha had been jettisoned. They did not entertain the theory of spontaneous combustion. The precise cause of ignition could not be stated to be there. There must have been a direct application of flame to the gas which escaped from the hold.

Although the court considered that the captain made errors of judgment in certain respects, these were not so serious as to warrant their dealing with his certificate, and all other officers were entirely exonerated. The conduct of the crew called for no comment except seeing that no lives were lost, discipline must have been well maintained. As all the ship's papers were lost, the court recommended the issuing of duplicate certificates.

The Lyndhurst, which belonged to the Anglo-American Oil Company, was chiefly engaged in the oil-carrying trade, and on her last voyage had loaded a cargo of naphtha in cases at Aru Bay, in Sumatra, 70,000 cases being shipped. The ship's destination was South Africa, part of the cargo having to be discharged at different ports, among which were Delagoa Bay, Algoa Bay and Cape Town. Cargo had been discharged at the first two ports, and the ship was on her way to Cape Town to complete the discharge of cargo, having left Algoa Bay August 18, when, on the morning of August 24, the ship then being in latitude 35.19 south, longitude 21.50 east, and about 65 miles off Mossel Bay, a terrific explosion took place in the forward part of the ship. Hatches and fore and afters were flung into the air, some going through the topsails.

Capt. Parnell, who was asleep in the chartroom, was aroused by the report and rushed on deck, instinctively guessing what had occurred. Finding in the situation at a glance he at once ordered the helm up and put the ship before the wind, with the object of keeping the fire, which was then leaping to a great height from the hold, to the fore end of the ship until such time as the boats could be got out and the crew out of the ship. Strange as it may seem, not one of the crew was seriously injured, and the captain was pleased to see all hands gather on the after part of the ship, although it was little less than a miracle that they succeeded in doing so. The ship's boats were eventually picked up by the Clan Line steamer Clan Maclean and the men landed at Mossel Bay.

TUG IS BURNED TO WATER'S EDGE

The Chemainus, Gutted by Fire, Sinks at Bunkers at Vancouver

Vancouver, Nov. 15.—On Monday night fire broke out on the tug Chemainus, moored at McDonald-Marpole's coal bunkers, and as a result the vessel was gutted to the water's edge and sank. Only her funnel and mast now show above the waters of Coal Harbor. The Chemainus was built two years ago at Chemainus and is owned by the Victoria Lumber & Manufacturing Co. She is a vessel 110 feet long and valued at $85,000. It is stated that she was not insured.

The outbreak is a mystery and the first alarm was given by the skipper, who was awakened by smoke. He called the crew, but it was soon seen that the boat was well alight. An alarm was rung in and the fire department attended, but the engine had trouble in getting to the scene of the blaze. The situation assumed a serious phase when the burning vessel threatened to set fire to the coal bunkers, so her moorings were cast off and she was towed clear. She sank about 25 yards from the wharf.

CAPTAIN MUST FACE CHARGES

Judgment of Master of Washington in Putting to Sea Will Be Questioned. San Francisco, Nov. 15.—Capt. Geo. Winkel, of the steam-schooner Washington, which so narrowly escaped destruction near Cape Disappointment, will be called to face charges preferred by the federal steamship inspectors when he arrives here from the north. The inspectors say that proceedings will be instituted against Winkel, and possibly others of the vessel's officers. Capt. Winkel's judgment in trying to take the vessel across the Columbia river bar in the face of a gale, it was intimated, will be questioned.

OURS, AND YET THEY ARE MARKED AT SALE PRICES

Our reason for holding this sale is that we are overstocked in some lines, due to the fact that we took over the business right in the midst of the buying season of Fall and Winter goods. Mr. Williams' unfortunate accident and absence from business just at that time caused us to unknowingly duplicate many of the lines of merchandise that had already been purchased.

Although the business done the past few months has exceeded our highest expectations and enables us to look forward most optimistically into the future, yet we are determined to carry none of this surplus stock over the present season and therefore we offer you the entire stock right in the heart of the season at most decided reductions for perfectly new goods.

PLAID IS IMPORTANT IN JUNIOR STYLES

Journal des Modes Paris

THE brightness of plaid in its regular, block effect has always been appreciated by the thoughtful designer. Just as soon as the dull colorings of the winter wardrobe, the contrasting relief of plaid is used by Paris designers. Especially true is this of junior styles.

From the young girl to the growing maiden in her teens, the practical, modish touch of plaid is decidedly pronounced this season. Is not the array convincing to your eye?

Dark navy blue serge is trimmed with an over-Russian blouse in blue and green with a gold stripe. The plain blue serge is used as bands in a circular heading on the blouse and for the side strip. The plain subsleeves are edged with lace and stitched while a gathered lace yoke is used in the blouse. Blue crocheted buttons are good to use on the left fastening.

Back of her stands a young girl of 16. A yoke and cuffs are of plaid silk on serge. The bodice crosses in front and buttons down at the left side. The cuffs are curved on the kimono sleeves. The skirt is plain and has a back panel lined with plaid silk.

A back view of the next model shows the new deep round collar of plaid. A dark green cheviot is trimmed with plaid in green and gold. Gold buttons are also shown effectively on collar and cuffs.

There is an underskirt of plaid and the upper skirt has a deep stitched hem. Cuffs finish the blouse.

Larger plaid in scarlet and gray is the decorative note on the dark gray dress. A band of scarlet broadcloth edges the crossed collar and the under plaid skirt. A line of fastening at the side is shown in gilt buttons and gray cord. Altogether this is a simple, stunning dress. Gray tulle, by the way, shirred over a scarlet ribbon forms the yoke.

In the next design there is emphasized a slashed tunic of garnet serge over garnet-and-black plaid. Buttons are used on each side of the opening. On the bodice there are two strips of plaid with buttons of black velvet on the outer edge. Black velvet forms the narrow girdle and the tie at the neck line. A soft collarette of sheer linen is hemstitched and applied to give a fresh touch to the top.

The little girl's dress is one of the most favored models in Paris juvenile styles. It is of scarlet, not too bright for a little tot, and is trimmed with scarlet-and-black plaid and black silk. Two pointed revers are laid on the top of the bodice and the edges of the revers are plain and button trimmed. Cuffs of plaid are trimmed with buttons and a deep hem finishes the frock. A sash of black is fringed and tied at the side.

The last idea shows an apron effect of plain blue velvet over plaid silk. The bodice is of silk and a front piece is curved at the top and the sides like an apron bib. The long tunic of plain velvet opens over the skirt of plaid. Plain blue silk braid and large enameled buttons trim bodice and skirt.

The remnant idea predominates in this collection. It speaks of a delightful combination of economy and style and should furnish working ideas to all interested mothers.

COLLARETTES OF LACE AND TULLE

THE separate collarette is here in delightful variety. It may be a veritable Pierrot ruff or a flat round effect, but it adds a fresh touch of white to a blouse or dress, and you can trust the well-dressed woman to realize its power as an accessory.

White blonds or tulle is cut in scallops, bound on the edges in the same material and placed in a double ruff under a black velvet band that is tied at the side. There is a slight shirring at the top line and the collar is just a trifle deeper in front and back than at the shoulders.

Lace in a heavy allover design is placed over a net foundation. On the edge is a full of black chiffon or mou-

OUR FRENCH FASHION NOTES

NATURALLY, when the trees in the Bois have been stripped of their jackets, it is time to button our furs over our little frocks. "Button" is used advisedly, by the way, for that is the note on many of the season's petries. Huge fur buttons are pushed or pulled through buttonholes or slits in scarf ends. Buttons are also used for ornaments; the predominance of this mode of trimming has made itself evident in the fur field.

The long coat is still very important. It is in seal musquash generally, and is liked by the Parisienne because of its practical value. When the furriers gave their initial showing in August they did not emphasize the combination sets that have taken Paris by storm within the last few weeks. There are exquisite alliances of metallic tissue and lace with all kinds of fur. As a result, fur is made to show in two pieces—a hat and scarf or a hat and muff—instead of one, as formerly.

Brocades, supple velvets and the ubiquitous black satin are used with beaver, ermine, seal, coyote and skunk. Fur appears on hats also. Indeed, the milliner is making successful use of odds and ends of fur, and the fortunate wearers are profiting by it.

The foin may be said to have triumphed above all others. It is one of the persistently recurrent notes on all kinds of dress. Young girls or their grandmothers are rejoicing in the soft grace that the crossed line of net, lace, silk or gauze gives to any bodice.

Little silk coat effects are being emphasized by Jeanne Lanvin in her new offering. The peplum of a satin jacket over chiffon will be scalloped and piped, and the color note on the costume introduced in a huge woolen flower at the belt and tiny woolen roses in many colors on the chiffon skirt.

Hats are sloping away abruptly from the face toward the back. A puffed crown or a plain, fitted hood-effect may be the finishing line, but this "punch" shape is one of the types that has caught the fancy of designers and wearers.

Some lovely evening wraps are shown in chiffon velvet. The wide band of embroidery or heavy lace is now at the knees and not at the lower edge. A Laborde model showed a hood of black tulle finished with a band of colored embroidery.

Large collars are cut in odd shapes. Some are of lace, some of fur and others of the most gorgeously beaded tissues. Changeable silks and velvets are still strong. Gold and silver lace are used on wraps, hats, muffs, scarfs and gowns.

There is a craze for the silk ribbon and coarse thread roses that grow every day more important in the decorative field.

Woolen embroidery and crocheted roses of wool are exceptionally strong on all types of gowns. This form of ornamentation is used on evening wraps, blouses and hats also.

At Rumpelmeyer's tearoom, was seen yesterday the most charming white corduroy walking suit trimmed with brown fur and tortoise-shell buttons. It was slashed up at one side over brown brocade velvet and had deep revers lined with the same. A soft "hood" of velvet, brocade and fur completed the costume. Even the shoes were of brown with white corduroy tops.

Fancy Dress Costumes

DURING the season in Paris the social ball has been kept rolling at a fast and furious pace. One of the most successful of these many fetes was a fancy dress ball, at which all the guests were invited to attend clothed in the costume of a certain "period." Needless to say, the scheme was carried out to the letter.

There they were, in every costume imaginable, from the earliest, known "period" down to the present day.

The general effect was fairlike, so elegant and beautiful were the costumes.

Among the women the Louis XVI dominated, while a number of men wore the uniforms of the officers of the ancient regime of the empire.

One lovely woman was dressed after a miniature of Isabeau, another as Madame Recamier. There were knights of old and Hussars bold. The Louis XV period was well represented, and one stately woman made an ideal Republic.

The clois of the evening was represented by the Ottoman embassy visiting Louis XV.

The gorgeous costumes of Turkish princes and potentates, preceded by slaves bearing trays of rare fruits and flowers, while other slaves waved long fans over the richly dressed cortege, presented a picture that will long live in the minds of those who were fortunate enough to behold it.

Later, a flower cotillon was danced, led by a rose whose partner was a Vesuvian hobnob.

In Block F, which has only just been subdivided, there are some of the most beautiful building sites and some of the best lots in the whole subdivision still for sale.

Nearly Seventy Lots in Two Days

The Chief Factor in This Remarkable Sale

Is That the Lots are More Than Worth the Price Asked, and Every Buyer is Getting More Than Value for His Money. This is Altogether in Addition to the Remarkable Offer of a $14,000 Premium Which Every Purchaser has a Chance to Get for Nothing.

This Handsome Suburban Home, With 2.35 Acres of Land, Valued at $14,000

IN ONE OF THE FINEST AND MOST BEAUTIFUL SITUATIONS IN VICTORIA

To Be Given Away Absolutely Free

A Small Fortune for you, if you are lucky, Absolutely Free, nay, more than free, for you will double the money you put into the lots you purchase to secure a chance on this house.

How to Secure This $14,000 for Nothing

The lots in the Elliston Orchards Subdivision, the homestead of the late Capt. Elliston, will be placed on the market on Monday morning at 9.30 o'clock at prices which will make a handsome profit for the purchasers. Each purchaser will have given him with his agreement of sale a coupon which will entitle him to a free chance to secure this $14,000 home in a public drawing, probably on Saturday night, November 25.

Each purchaser can select his own lot—it may be a $600 or a $950 lot, according to size and situation. But every lot is more than value for the money paid. You may reserve these lots by telephone (1610) any time up to 9.30 on Monday morning, but your definite selection must be made then, and of course must be subject to any previous selection made from the time this advertisement appears. After 9.30 Monday you may pay a deposit on any lot, and complete the sale after examination. Autos will be ready to take you out.

Remember that these lots are the cheapest and most beautiful homesites on the market today.

This is a photograph of the residence with 2.35 acres of land. Lawns, tennis court, gardens and fruit trees.

The Most Ex- ceptional Offer

THE OBJECT OF GIVING AWAY FREE TO THE PURCHASERS OF THESE LOTS, THE HANDSOME RESIDENCE AND GROUNDS of 2.35 acres, is simply to wind up the whole estate within two weeks.

On Saturday evening, November 25, (if all the lots are sold, of which we have no doubt), in a suitable hall in the city, this drawing will be made in the presence of the purchasers by an independent committee of citizens, and of the press.

The lucky winner will be entitled to this fine home without any payment whatever, except the future payments on his lot or lots.

If you want a lot on which to build your future home, you cannot find a more beautiful or more desirable lot for the money around Victoria.

The Man of the Full Dinner Pail

should pay strict attention to this announcement

All the Lots are Large and Average
