P R E F A C E

TO THE SECOND EDITION.

KING JAMES THE FIRST instituted the order of Baronet in 1611, two hundred and thirty years ago; and within that period, brief in the estimation of an antiquary, nearly a thousand patents have become obsolete; nearly a thousand Baronetcies have ceased to exist: not all, perhaps, become absolutely extinct, but all virtually so. The personages who enjoyed those honours have left behind them, however, numerous and widely spread connexions, who, although excluded, by the tenour of the royal grant, from their dignity, inherit, in many instances, their name, in more their lands, in all, their blood:—to those this book especially belongs; to rescue them from the fate of their titled predecessors it is produced, and to their interests it is mainly devoted, under an impression, at the same time, that a work directly appertaining to so large and influential a portion of the community must indirectly be of value to the whole: that it might prove so, much time and vast labour have been bestowed upon its composition; the public records have been carefully explored, private collections and private authorities referred to—in fine, nothing has been left undone to render its statements full, clear, and accurate.

In addition to these few prefatory words, it is necessary to say that, in this Second Edition, various corrections have been made through that part which comprises the Extinct Baronetcies of England, from the further researches of the authors and the communications made to them; and that the work may be rendered complete within itself, the Extinct and Dormant Baronetcies of Ireland and Scotland, which have never before been collected or published, are now added. The Authors have only farther to express their acknowledgments for the facilities afforded them in every channel, public and private, through which it was necessary to seek for information; they would willingly express their thanks to many individuals, but so many occur, that they are obliged to forego the pleasure.

NOTE.—The red hand of Ulster, which is carried upon the shield of a Baronet, is omitted in the armorial ensigns of this work, from the necessity of the engravings being upon a narrow scale.

ANDERSON, OF EYWORTH.

CREATED
13th July, 1664.

EXTINCT
in 1772.

Lineage.

This family, which originally bore the name of L'ISLE, and was seated at Broughton, in the county of Lincoln, is thus spoken of by COLLIER, in his historical dictionary: "Lionel Anderson, esq. lineally descended from the ancient family of the Andersons of Northumberland (as appears by a grant from Clarenceux), afterwards settled in Lincolnshire, from whom this Lionel is in the genealogy the seventeenth. Their first name was (as Sir Richard Anderson, the antiquarian, relates) L'Isle; but marrying an heiress, were obliged to take her name of Anderson. The chief seat of the family is Broughton (now enjoyed by Sir Stephen Anderson, bart.) in Lincolnshire: there are likewise three other branches of it, as, Sir Edmund Anderson, in Hertfordshire, Sir Richard, in Buckinghamshire, and Sir John, of Newcastle." This family intermarried with several of the nobility, and a great many of the principal gentry of several counties; as that of Sheffield, Clinton, alias Fines, Sherwood, Butler, Beaumont, Booth, all noble houses, and as for commoners, they are related by marriage to the L'Estranges, Mounsons, Dallisons, Fitzwilliams, Cottons of Huntingdonshire, Constables of Yorkshire, Johnsons of Lancashire, and to several other families of figure and consideration.

Of the family of L'ISLE of Northumberland, was

ROBERT L'ISLE, who flourished in the reigns of HENRY IV. and HENRY V. and who, on marrying the heiress of ANDERSON, took the name in place of his own. He was ancestor of

ANDRÉ, OF SOUTHAMPTON.

CREATED 4th March, 1781.—EXTINGUISHED 11th Nov. 1802.

Lineage.

MAJOR JOHN ANDRÉ, (descended from a French refugee family, settled at Southampton, in the county of Hants.) adopted the military profession, and was appointed adjutant-general of the British army in America, under Sir Henry Clinton. There he became highly distinguished, and gave promise of one day taking a leading place among the military heroes of his country, but the hopes which the brightness of his early and brief career held out were destined to prove delusive. The gallant soldier—the idol of his comrades, the admiration of his superiors—fell a victim to one of those acts for which the excitement of war was the only and feeble excuse. In Sept. 1789, he was intrusted with the management of the negotiation with General Arnold, previously to that officer's joining the royal army; and being taken, within the American lines, in disguise, his case was referred by General Washington to a board of officers, who adjudged him to be a spy, and he suffered death on the 2nd October following. The melancholy event excited general grief on its announcement in England, and the exquisite lines of a poetic friend of the deceased, the gifted Miss Seward, consecrated the memory of the ill-fated soldier in a mournful and beautiful eulogium. Major André died unmarried, but in honour of his memory, KING GEORGE III. conferred the dignity of a BARONET upon his brother,

I. SIR WILLIAM LEWIS ANDRÉ, at whose decease without issue, 11th November, 1802, the title became EXTINGUISHED.

Sir Charles entered the service on the 27th of February, 1778, as an ensign in the 1st foot guards, and obtained a lieutenancy, with the rank of captain, in that regiment, on the 3rd of February, 1781. He went to America in the same year, joined the army under the command of the Marquis Cozmyallis, served the whole of the campaigns, was taken prisoner with the army in October, at the siege of York Town, in Virginia, and sent up the country, where he remained till May, 1782, at which period all the captains of the army were ordered by General Washington to assemble and draw lots, that one might be selected to suffer death, by way of retaliation for the death of an American officer, Captain Hardy, whom our government refused to deliver up, for political reasons, although General Washington demanded it. The lot fell on Sir Charles Asgill, and he was, in consequence, conveyed under a strong escort, to the place intended for his execution, in the Jerseys, where he remained in prison enduring peculiar hardships for the space of six months, expecting daily that his execution would take place. Sir Charles was unexpectedly released from his confinement by an act of Congress passed at the intercession of the Queen of France, who, deeply affected by a most eloquent and pathetic appeal from his mother Lady Asgill, humanely interfered and obtained his release. He returned to England on parole, and shortly after went to Paris to make his acknowledgments to the Queen of France.

ASTLEY, OF MELTON CONSTABLE.

CREATED
21st Jan. 1642.

EXTINCT
7th Sept. 1659.

Lineage.

THE ASTLEYS, extinct and extant, derived their name from the manor of Astley, or as originally written Estley, in the county of Warwick, of which they were lords so early as the time of HENRY I.

PHILIP DE ESTLEY, grandson of the first proprietor, held three knights' fees, in the reign of HENRY II. (anno 1166), of William, Earl of Warwick, viz. Estley or Astley, in Warwickshire, Wedinton, Hillmorton, Melverton, and Merston Jabet, de veteri feoffamento, by the service "of laying hands on the earl's stirrup when he did get upon, or alight from horseback." His great-grandson,

SIR THOMAS DE ASTLEY, knt. was constituted, in the 26th of HENRY III., one of the king's justices for the good delivery at Warwick, and again the next year, when he paid £15 for his relief. Sir Thomas was afterwards one of the great leaders amongst the barons, and fell at Evesham in 1264, with Montfort, Earl of Leicester, and other rebellious lords. By his first wife, Joane, daughter of Ehnald de Bois, a great man at that time in Leicestershire, Sir Thomas had a son, ANDREW ASTLEY, from whom sprang the Extinct Lords Astley, of Astley, and a daughter, Isabel, wife of William de Birmingham. By his second, Editha, daughter of Peter Constable, of Melton Constable, in Norfolk, and co-heir of her brother, Sir Robert Constable, knt., he left three sons, THOMAS, Ralph, and Stephen, with a daughter, Agnes. The eldest of these sons,

THOMAS DE ASTLEY, inherited Hill Morton, but died s. p. and was s. by his brother,

ASTON, OF ASTON.

CREATED
25th July, 1628.

EXTINCT
22nd Mar. 1815.

Lineage.

In Domesday Book the town of Aston was held by Odard under William Fitzzeigell, Baron of Halton, A.D. 1086. At that time there appears to have been but one place of the name: it was subsequently divided into Aston-juxta-Sutton, and Aston Grange.

About the reign of HENRY II.

GILBERT DE ASTON was proprietor of Aston-juxta-Sutton, and was living in that reign, and in the subsequent reigns of RICHARD I. and King JOHN. His son and heir,

RICHARD DE ASTON gave unto Hugh Dutton, of Dutton, Sex Bovatas Terræ in Aston, in the beginning of the reign of HENRY III. His wife's name was Joan, and he left a son and heir,

RICHARD DE ASTON, who was s. by his son, another RICHARD DE ASTON, who wedded, temp. EDWARD I., Rose, youngest daughter and co-heir of Roger Throssel, of Maxfield, in Cheshire, and had issue,

RICHARD, his heir.

Hugh, prior of Birkenhead Abbey.

This Richard died before his wife, (who was living a widow in the 18th of EDWARD III.) and was s. by his elder son,

RICHARD ASTON, of Aston, who m. Anabella, daughter of Eva de Rode, and sister of William Rode, of Rode, in Cheshire, and had ROBERT (Sir), his heir, Thomas, living in the 7th of EDWARD III. but then very young, and Margery, m. to William Walensis, of Halton. His eldest son,

SIR ROBERT ASTON, knt. of Aston, m. Felice, daughter of John Hawarden, citizen of Chester, about the year 1338, and had four sons, viz.

RICHARD, his heir.

Sir Robert died before the 29th EDWARD III. for in that year his eldest son,

Sir Richard was treasurer to Philippa, Queen Consort of EDWARD III. of her lands and rents in Ambrage, in Wales, and steward of Hopedale. * And MARY his wife, daughter and heir of Samuel Gilly, esq. of High Hall, in the county of Dorset, by Arabella, daughter of the Lord Chief Justice Bankes.

This Hugh had to wife

Cicely, afterwards married to Hocknell; and Hugh married Richard his grandson, son of Richard Aston of Ringley, unto Jonet, daughter of John Hocknell, of Huxley, and they had issue: but Jonet and her children, and Pillote, mother of Richard, died all of the pestilence at Ringley; and afterwards Sir Richard Aston married Ellen, daughter of Geoffrey Dutton; and that he, Hocan, knew Sir Richard Aston, occupying the whole manor of Aston for forty years and more, and Sir Robert, his son, occupying it for seven years and more.

BAKER, OF SISINGHURST.

CREATED
29th June, 1612.

EXTINCT
28th Mar. 1661.

Lineage.

The family of Baker was settled at Cranbrooke, in Kent, so early as the reign of Edward III., and from one of its younger branches descended THOMAS BAKER, of Rushington, whose daughter and heiress, Margaret, m. to John Selden, was mother of the learned John Selden.

THOMAS BAKER, of Sisinghurst, Cranbrook, Kent, was father of

RICHARD BAKER, living temp. HENRY VII., whose son,

SIR JOHN BAKER, knt. of Sisinghurst, adopting the legal profession, attained considerable eminence, and when a young man was sent ambassador to Denmark. On his return he became Speaker of the House of Commons, and was soon after appointed attorney-general and sworn of the privy council, but gained no further preferment until 1545, when, having recommended himself to the King by his activity in forwarding a loan in London and other imposts, he was made chancellor of the Exchequer. HENRY VIII. constituted him an assistant trustee for the minor successor, after whose accession his name is scarcely mentioned in history, except in one instance, which ought not to be forgotten: he was the only privy counsellor who steadfastly denied his assent to the last will of that prince, by which Mary and Elizabeth were excluded from inheriting the crown. He was succes-

Cecilia, m. to the Lord Treasurer Dorset.

Mary, m. to George Tafton, of Heathfield, in Kent.

Sir Richard d. in 1558, and was interred at Sisinghurst, where he possessed a fine estate formerly belonging to the family of De Berham, and a noble mansion built by himself, Sisinghurst Castle, which remained for centuries with his descendants, but has since bowed down its battlements to the unfeeling taste of modern times. BARNARDISTON, OF KETTON.

CREATED
7th Apr. 1663.

EXTING
about 1750.

Lineage.

This was one of the most ancient families of the equestrian order in the kingdom, having flourished in a direct line for twenty-seven generations at least. The name was assumed from the town of Barnarston or Barnston, contiguous to Ketton, of which the Barnardistons were proprietors from the Conquest.

By marrying the heiress of Willoughby, in the time of EDWARD II., the family obtained the noble manor of Great Cotes, in the county of Lincoln, which they hold for several centuries.

Ketton Hall, or Kedyton Hall, they acquired with the heiress of the family of Newmarch, which surname it appears they adopted and anciently bore, in conjunction with that of Barnardiston, as exhibited on the monument of Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Barnardiston, the wife of Sir Hugh Eward, in the church of Great Waltham, Essex. She died in 1660.

The estate of the Barnardistons amounted, in the time of ELIZABETH, to 4000*l.* per annum.

LE NEVE, in his MSS. begins the pedigree with ROGER BARNARDISTON, who m. the daughter and heir of Havering, and was father of

In Kedington church, in the south window, there is to be seen, says Weyner, "a Barnardiston, kneeling, in his complete armour, his coat armour on his breast, and behind him seven sons. In the next pane of the glass is Elizabeth, the daughter of Newport, kneeling, with her coat armour likewise on her breast, and seven daughters behind her, and under it is thus written, now much defaced:

Orate pro Animabus Thome Barnardiston, Militis, et Elizabethæ, uxoris ejus, qui istam Fenestram fieri fecerunt, anno Domini Mcccc . . . Anima . . . Deus, Amen.

Over against the said south window, under the second arch of the said south side of the church, is the monument of the said Sir Thomas Barnardiston, in stone, at length, in his complete armour, and the said Dame Elizabeth his wife by him; and in a table of stone, under their coat armours, this epitaph or inscription:

"This is the monument of Sir Thomas Barnardiston, knight, being buryed in Cotys, in the countie of Lincolne, and of Dame Elizabeth, his Wyffe, buryed under this Tombe: whych Sir Thomas, by his last will, gave certen Loundis in the Towne callyd Brokholes, of the yerly value of vii markis, towards the maintenens of a chantrie, in this church: and the said Dame Elizabeth, after his Deith, opened lycens to amortyse the said Chantrie, perpetually, and made the possession thereof, to the yerly value of xii markis, and besyds beytt the church roof new, and coveryd it with Lede. BARRINGTON, OF BARRINGTON
HALL.CREATED
29th June, 1611.EXTINCT
26th Sept. 1833.

Lineage.

Camden, in his Britannia, says, "Barrington Hall, (heretofore) the seat of that eminent family of the Barringtons, who in the time of King STURTON were greatly enriched with the estate of the Lord Montfitchet; and in the memory of our fathers a match with the daughter and co-heir of Henry Pole, Lord Montacute, son and heir to Margaret, Countess of Salisbury, rendered them more illustrious, by an alliance with the royal blood."

Le Neve (Norrey king-of-arms) deduces the lineage of the Barringtons from BARENTONE, a Saxon, who had the custody of the forest of Hatfield-Regis, temp. WILLIAM the Conqueror, and whose son, EUSTACHIUS DE BARENTONA, servant to King HENRY I., obtained grants of land from that monarch, with the custody of the forest. This Eustachius died in the reign of STURTON, and from him we pass to his (thirteenth) lineal descendant,

JOHN BARRINGTON, living in the 25th of HENRY VIII. who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Bontam, by his wife the Hon. Elizabeth Marney, daughter of Henry, first Lord Marney, of Marney, in the county of Essex, and was s. by his son, (see BURKE's Extinct Peerage); by which illustrious lady Mr. Barrington had, with a daughter, Catherine, m. to William Bourchier, esq. two sons, viz.

FRANCIS (Sir), his heir.

John, who had a very extensive grant of lands in Ireland from Queen ELIZABETH, in 1558, and was of Cullinagh, in the Queen's County, where his descendants remained seated until that property was sold, under an act of parliament, in 1796, by John's descendant, JOHN BARRINGTON, esq. of Cullinagh, who left, besides four daughters, five sons, viz.

1. John, d. s. p. 1834.

2. French, d. s. p. 1836.

3. Jonah (Sir), formerly judge of the high court of admiralty in Ireland, and M.P. for the cities of Tuam and Clogher, d. in 1833, leaving issue,

III. SIR JOHN BARRINGTON. This gentleman was M.P. in 1640, for the borough of Newport, and one of the parliamentary committee for Essex and the Isle of Wight; but when he observed the lengths to which the parliamentarians had determined to proceed, he declined to follow; although it is probable it was expected that he would go to the utmost extremity, as he was one of the members nominated to sit in the mock high court of justice, appointed to try his unhappy sovereign. Sir John, however, refused to attend any of its meetings, and peremptorily declined signing the warrant for King CHARLES's execution. He lived in retirement after the Restoration. Sir John m. Dorothy, daughter of Sir William Lytton, of Knebworth, and dying 24th March, 1682, was s. by the eldest son of Thomas Barrington, esq. by Anne, daughter and co-heiress of Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick, his grand-son,

BASSETT, OF TEHIDY.

CREATED
24th Nov. 1779.

EXTINCT
5th Feb. 1835.

Lineage.

Immediately after the Norman conquest, arose into power and importance, particularly in the midland counties, the great baronial family of BASSETT, which gave a chief-justice to England in the reign of HENRY I. in the person of Ralph Basset; from whom sprang the Lords Bassot, of Drayton, the Lords Basset, of Hedendon, &c. &c. About the middle of the twelfth century, the Bassets, of Cornwall, obtained the estate of Tehidy by marriage with the heiress of the great house of De Dunstanville, from which period they appear to have enjoyed considerable wealth and influence until the civil wars. At that momentous crisis, there were three brothers of the Bassets, all eminently prominent in the royal cause,

Sir Francis Basset, sheriff of Cornwall.

Sir Thomas Bassot, } both majors-general in the Sir Arthur Basset, } royal army.

Sir Francis Bassot, the sheriff, was with the king at Lestwithiel, when Essex's army surrendered; and his majesty, Sir Francis relates, in a letter to his wife, then said to him, "I now leave, Mr. Sheriff, the county of Cornwall to your protection." Owing, however, to the large sums of money disbursed in this unhappy struggle, the family became considerably reduced in circumstances; but its fortunes were at length retrieved by intermarriages with heiresses. The issue and heir of one of those, the heiress of Pendarves,

JOHN-PENDARVES BASSET, esq. m. Anne, daughter of Sir Edmund Prideaux, bart. and dying in 1739, was s. by his son,

JOHN-PRIDEAUX BASSET, esq. at whose decease in minority, 28th May, 1756, the estates reverted to his uncle,

FRANCIS BASSET, esq. who m. Margaret, daughter of Sir John St. Aubyn, bart. of Clowance, in the county of Cornwall, and had

FRANCIS, his heir.

John, in holy orders, m. Mary, daughter of George Wingfield, esq. and had a son, Catherine, d. unmarried, 2nd June, 1817.

The elder son,

I. FRANCIS BASSETT, esq. of Tehidy, b. 9th August, 1757, was created a BARONET 24th November, 1779, and advanced to the peerage as BARON DE DUNSTANVILLE 17th June, 1796. He was further created Baron Bassett, of Stratton, 7th November, 1797, with remainder to his only daughter. His lordship m. first, in 1780; Frances-Susannah, daughter of John Hippisley Coxe, esq. of Stone Easton, by whom (who d. in 1823) he had one daughter, FRANCES, BARONESS BASSETT, of Stratton. BASTARD, OF KITLEY.

Lineage.

WILLIAM BASTARD, esq. of Kitley, descended from a very ancient Devonshire family, having during the war with France rendered essential service to government by conducting from Plymouth to Exeter a large number of French prisoners confined in the arsenal of the former place, for the removal of whom no troops could be spared from the garrison, already insufficient for the defence of the place, was created a BARONET by King GEORGE III. The title was gazetted in 1779, but has never been adopted. Had it been assumed by the family, Edmund Pollexfen Bastard, esq. of Kitley, in Devon, late M.P. for that county, would be the baronet. The third son,

i. SIR THOMAS BATEMAN, a merchant of London, was created a BARONET in 1604, as Sir Thomas Bateman, of How Hall, Norfolk. In 1666 this gentleman and his two brothers, who all appear to have been engaged in commercial pursuits, sustained great losses by the dreadful fire of that year in London: many of their houses were burnt, and their property and papers destroyed. Sir Thomas's house in Coleman Street was so damaged that he left it and went to reside at Isleworth, and soon after at Chelsea, where he rented, in 1670, a house of Mr. Cheney, who married the Duke of Norfolk's daughter. He wedded the only daughter and heiress of Mr. Middleton, high sheriff of the counties of Cambridge and Huntingdon, but dying s. p. the BARONETCY EXPIRED.

III. SIR THOMAS BELAYSSE, second viscount, who m.

first, Mildred, daughter of Nicholas, Viscount Castleton, by whom he had no issue; and, secondly, on the 18th of November, 1637, the LADY MARY CROWWELL, daughter of the PROTECTOR. Of this nobleman Lord Clarendon gives the following account:—"After Cromwell was declared protector, and in great power, he married his daughter to the Lord Fauconberg, the owner of a very great estate in Yorkshire, and descended of a family eminently loyal. There were many reasons to believe that this young gentleman, being then about three or four-and-twenty years of age, of great vigour and ambition, had many good purposes that he thought that alliance might qualify and enable him to perform. His marriage was celebrated at Whitehall (Wood has given the time at Hampton Court,) with all imaginable pomp and lustre. And it was observed, that, though it was performed in public, according to the rites and ceremonies then in use, they were presently afterwards, in private, married by ministers ordained by bishops, and according to the form in the book of Common Prayer, and this with the privacy of Cromwell." In 1637, his lordship was made one of the council of state, and sent the next year, by his father-in-law, with a complimentary message to the court of Versailles. This was the only employment Lord Fauconberg had under the usurper; for, as the noble author before mentioned relates, "his domestic delights were lessened every day; he plainly discovered that his son Fauconberg's heart was set upon an interest destructive to his, and grew to hate him perfectly." Of Lady Fauconberg, Burnet writes:—"She was a wise and worthy woman, more likely to have maintained the post (of protector) than either of her brothers; according to a saying that went of her, 'that those who wore breeches deserved potticoats better; but if these in potticoats had been in breeches, they would have held faster.'" That his lordship forwarded the restoration, is evident from his being appointed, by the restored monarch, in 1660, lord-lieutenant of the bishopric of Durham, and in the same year, lord-lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the North Riding of Yorkshire. He was soon afterwards accredited ambassador to the state of Venice and the princes of Italy, and constituted captain of the band of gentleman pensioners. In 1673, Lord Fauconberg was sworn of the privy council; and, again, in 1680, upon the accession of King WILLIAM and Queen MARY, when his lordship was created EARL FAUCONBERG, by letters patent, dated on the 9th of April, in that year. He d. on the 31st December, 1700, and leaving no issue, the EARLDOM EXPIRED, while his other honours reverted to his nephew (refer to Sir Rowland Belaysse, K. B. third son of the first lord),

BENDISH, OF STEEPLE BUMSTEAD.

CREATED
 29th June, 1611.

EXPIRED
 4th Sept. 1717.

Lineage.

The surname, originally DE WESTLEY, was changed to that of BENDISH, from a considerable lordship in Radwinter, whereof the family became possessed some time in the twelfth century. The first whose name occurs in ancient writings that may be certainly depended upon is

PETER DE WESTLEY, alias BENDISH. He flourished about the reigns of King JOHN and of HENRY III.
 His son,

GEORGE, or GERRARD DE WESTLEY, alias BENDISH,
m. Margaret, daughter and heir of Richard De Burghwell, and had by her

RALPH DE WESTLEY, alias BENDISH, of Radwinter, who by his wife Agnes, daughter and heir of John de Grauncester, was direct ancestor of

THOMAS BENDISH, who was the first of the family who laid aside the surname of WESTLEY, and took up that of BENDISH. He was also the first of the family who purchased lands in Steeple Bumstead, Essex, and marrying Alice, daughter of William Helion, of the adjoining parish, had two sons, JOHN and Robert.
 Departing this life about the year 1342, he was s. by his elder son,

JOHN BENDISH, who m. Alice, daughter of Sir
 Robert Rosse, and had a son,

EDMUND BENDISSE, who accompanied EDWARD III. to the famous siege of Calais in 1347-8, and with John Wythorne, rector of Halsted, gave £100 to the university chest of Cambridge, founded by Walter Neale, about the year 1345. He died in 1392, leaving by Alice, his wife, sister, and at length heir, to William de Beannington, two sons, THOMAS, his heir, and Edmund, who died without issue in 1401.

THOMAS BENDISH, esq. the elder son, married, first,
 Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Bradfield, esq. of Barrington, in Cambridgeshire, and secondly,
 Alice, daughter and sole heir of Sir Walter Clopton, of Hadley, in Suffolk, Knight of Rhodes. By his second wife he had Thomas of Hadley, William, and John, founder of the Suffolk and Norfolk branches of Bendish; also two daughters, Elizabeth, married to John Huntingdon, and Alice, to Richard Ongar, of Yeldham. By his first wife he had EDMUND, from whom are descended the BENDISSES of BARRINGTON, now represented by JOHN BENDISSE, esq. of that place; THOMAS, of whom presently; Joane, m. to W.
 Wilford, esq. of Crocheston, in the county of Southampton; and Alice, to Walter Gerard, of Essex, who had with her a portion of £40. Their father died in 1437-8, and was succeeded in the Bumstead estate by THOMAS BENDISH, his second son by his first wife.

 He m. first, Joane, daughter of — Fitzwilliams, by whom he had RICHARD and Thomas; and by his second wife, Joane, daughter of John de Thockelton, he had Ralph, John, and Maud. He d. in 1484-5, and was s. by his eldest son,

RICHARD BENDISH, who, dying 27th February, 1486, was buried in the north aisle of Essan church, under a monument. He m. Anne, daughter of — Rawden, esq. of Royden Hall, Essex, by whom he had a daughter, Margaret, and a son and heir,

RICHARD BENDISH, who d. 22nd Sept. 1523, and was buried near his father. His wife was Margaret, daughter and heir of James Newport, Esq. of Herts.
 and by her he had JOHN and Margaret.

JOHN BENDISH, only son and successor to his father, departed this life 20th August, 1585, and lies interred near his ancestors. By his wife Margaret, daughter of Thomas Crawley, esq. he left a son and heir,

THOMAS BENDISH, who had four wives; first, Eleanor, daughter and co-heir of John Ford, of Hockesley, in Essex, by whom he had THOMAS, Richard, Barbara,
m. to Thomas Snyth, of Walsoken, in Norfolk; Mary, Elizabeth, m. to James Pepps, of Cottenham, in Cambridgeshire; Eleanor, wife of Robert Bryan, of Bolin-broke, Margaret, and Elizabeth. His second wife was Thomasine, daughter of — Fincham, who was buried in this church. Alice was his third wife. His fourth wife was Margery, daughter of R. Greene, esq. of Little Stamford, but by the three last he had no issue.
 He d. 23rd Feb. 1603, aged 63 years, and lies buried at Frating.

I. THOMAS BENDISH, esq. of Steeple Bumstead, his eldest son and successor, was created a BARONET 22nd May, 1611, and served the office of high sheriff for his county in 1618 and 1630, and made a considerable addition to his estate. He m. Dorothy, daughter of Richard Cutts, esq. of Arkesden, in Essex, by whom he had THOMAS; John, who died young; and two daughters, Dorothy, wife of Sir Thomas Hartop, knt. of Burton Lazars, Leicester; and Eliza, m. to John Fearnley, of Cretling, in Suffolk. He d. in 1636, and was s. by his son,

II. SIR THOMAS BENDISH, then aged about twenty-nine years. "He was," says Morant, "a man of great sense and resolution, and steadfastly loyal to his prince, King CHARLES I. For at the beginning of the national troubles he had a chief hand in drawing up, 18th July, 1642, and presenting to the King a declaration, and afterwards petition, both to his Majesty and the parliament, recommending an amicable accommodation, in order to stop the distractions and bloody miseries wherein this nation was most unhappily involved. For which good office he was imprisoned twenty-two months in the Tower, by order of the House of Commons; and his estate being sequestered, he was forced to pay a composition of £1,000. He also sent £3,000 to his Royal master, when under restraint at Newcastle. However, though he fell at first under the displeasure of the prevailing powers, yet so considerable was he on account of his capacities and integrity, that afterwards they made choice of him to be their ambassador to the Ottoman Porte; but no arguments of theirs could prevail with him to accept of this honourable employ without the King's commission, which his Majesty readily granted him, and also leave to carry with him such seal as the Parliament had given him, and to make such use of it as he should think fit, and might conduce to the advantage of himself and the Turkey company. He entered on his embassy in 1647, and resided at the Turkish court about fourteen years, filling up that great post with admirable sufficiency. For besides his skill in languages, he was a gentleman of consummate prudence and invincible courage. How well he understood his character, and how jealous he was of his prince's and country's honour, appears from the instances set down as follows: first, when the grand vizier would have publicly affronted him at an audience, in causing the chair to be removed out of the room that he might deliver his embassy standing, Sir Thomas made one of his gentlemen kneel down and lean on his hands, and then sat down upon him, before he would deliver his embassy. At another audience, when the grand vizier would have placed the French ambassador above him, he jostled him from his chair, and took his place, telling him that he was ambassador from a crowned head who was king of France as well as England. Another time there happening some disputes between the grand vizier and Sir Thomas, Sir Thomas rose up, and kicking from him the stool whereon he sat, said, his master was dishonoured, and he would have reparation for the affront. This resolute and gallant behaviour made him only the more considerable. King CHARLES I. had such a sense of his gallant behaviour, and the eminent service he had done the Levant Company, beyond any other ambassador, that he wrote him a letter of thanks from the Isle of Wight, about November, 1648. After that King's tragical death, Sir Thomas continued firm to his son's interest, and renewed the capitulation between the Grand Signior and him, by the title of CHARLES II. King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, and this prince confirmed Sir Thomas in his commission of ambassador extraordinary. How he came to escape the resentment of the then usurping powers, and keep out of the reach of men whose hearts were found harder than those of most princes, we cannot explain, especially when Sir Henry Hyde, sent by King CHARLES II. as his agent to the Ottoman Porte, in 1649, was sentenced by the High Court of Justice March, 1650, to be beheaded. However, in 1653, Oliver, the Protector, dispatched Richard Laurence to Constantinople with letters of revocation for Sir Thomas, who shewed the value he had for the King's commission, by telling Laurence, that he was sent by the King, and would not deliver up his commission without his Majesty's order, upon which articles of high treason were exhibited to the parliament against him by one Paul Hagett, but without effect; for Sir Thomas appears to have continued in Turkey until recalled thence in 1662 by King CHARLES II., who gave him a very honourable testimonial of his loyalty and good affection, with promises of doing him service. This renowned gentleman, the chief glory and ornament of his family, after many years spent abroad, at last departed this life at Bower Hall, the place of his nativity, about the year 1674, aged 67 years. His lady, the faithful companion of his travels, died at Constantinople, and her body was brought over and buried here. She was Anne, daughter and co-heir of Henry Baker, of Shoebery, in this county. By her he had Thomas, John, Robert, Henry, Andrew, and six daughters, Dorothy, m. first, to — Williams, secondly, to — Bowyer; Abigail, m. to — Edwards; Anne, m. to Sir Jonathan Dawes, knt.; Elizabeth, m. to — Cartwright; Diann, m. to Sir Stresham Masters, knt.; and Susan, m. to Sir William Hooker, knt.

III. SIR JOHN BENDISH, the second but eldest surviving son and successor to his father, had by Martha, his wife, daughter and heir of Richard Batson, of London, six sons, John, Richard, Charles, Robert, all of whom died young, and HENRY; also three daughters, Anne, Martha, and Sarah, wife of John Pyke Crouch, esq. He died 1706, and was s. by his only surviving son,

This gentleman, one of the four deputy lieutenants of Hertfordshire, was sheriff of that county in 1598, and received the honour of knighthood from King JAMES I. at Theobald's, 7th May, 1603, in his Majesty's journey from Scotland. After he had taken a degree in Arts, he retired to Gray's Inn, and studied the municipal law. He subsequently travelled in France, Italy, and part of Spain, and embarked in 1634 at Venice for Constantinople, in order to make a voyage to the Levant. On his return he became one of the gentlemen-pensioners to King CHARLES I. and received the honor of knighthood at Whitehall, 21st March, 1639-40. Sir Henry remained some time with the King at Oxford, but retiring and coming to London, he was summoned before Parliament for his adhesion to his Majesty, but pleading that he had only fulfilled the duties of his office, was acquitted. When the royal cause declined, accommodating himself to the state of affairs, he was appointed of the committee, 20th January, 1651, to regulate the abuses of the law, and at that time he evinced a determination against the payment of tythes, maintaining that no minister of the gospel should receive more than £100 per annum. Lineage.

The pedigree of the Bowyers, of Knipersley, is traced by Sir William Dugdale up to Aldred Bowyer, temp. HENRY II. and is to be found recorded at full length in the Visitations of Staffordshire, preserved in the British Museum. Aldred's descendant,

THOMAS BOWYER, living 2 RICHARD II. married Katharine de Knipersley,* and thus acquired the estate of Knipersley.† He was direct ancestor of SIR JOHN BOWYER, knt. of Knipersley, living in 1598, whose grandson,

I. JOHN BOWYER, esq. of Knipersley, was created a BARONET in 1660, and the title remained with his children until the demise of SIR WILLIAM BOWYER, his youngest surviving son, the fourth baronet, in 1761. That gentleman had four daughters, his co-heirs, viz.

I. MARY, m. Charles Adderley, esq. of Hams Hall, Warwickshire, and from this marriage descend the present CHARLES BOWYER ADDERLEY, esq. of Hams Hall, RALPH ADDERLEY, esq. of Bartaston Hall, &c. &c. (See BURKE'S Commoners, vol. ii. p. 279.)

II. DOROTHY, m. to Sir Thomas Gresley, bart.

The second son,

SIR WILLIAM BRADSHAW who is represented as a soldier and a traveller, assumed the Cross in the 8th of EDWARD II. and was absent from his lady ten years in the holy wars, which lady was Mabel, daughter and co-heir of Hugh Norris, Lord of Sutton, Raynhill, Whiston, Haigh, Blackrode, and Westleigh, six manors. Sir William possessed as "his property" Haigh and Blackrode, by a twelfth part of a knight's fee, as Hugh le Norris held the same; and as Mabel Bradshaw, his wife held the same as heir of Hugh, for which they paid 3s. 8d. aid, temp EDWARD III. for making the King's eldest son a knight, as appears by the accounts of John Cockayne "late sheriff of that county. At that time Sir William made an alteration in the spelling of his name, changing the last syllable from SHAW to SHAIKH," signifying an addition of two martlets in his coat of arms, and a vine to his crest. During Sir William's protracted stay in Palestine, a report reached home that he had been slain, and on his return he found Mabel, his wife, acknowledging another lord, in the person of Sir Osmond Nevil, a Welch knight to whom she had been married. "Sir William returning," says an old writer, "came in a palmer's habit amongst the poor to Haigh, whom, as soon as his wife beheld, transported with the resembling idea of her former husband, fell a weeping, for which Sir Osmond gave her correction; Sir William thereupon withdrew, and made himself known to his tenants, and upon intelligence of the discovery, Sir Osmond fled towards Wales, but near to Newton Park, in Lancashire, Sir William overtook and slew him. Mabel was enjoined by her confessor to do penance while she lived, by going once every week bare-footed, and bare-legged from Haigh to a cross near Wigan, which from that occasion is called Mab's Cross to this day. They now both lie buried in Wigan Church, under a fair stone tomb adorned with two prostrate figures; the man in antique mail, cross-legged, unsheathing his sword, which hangs on his left side, and on his shoulder his shield, with two hands thereon; she is in a long robe, and veild, her hands elated, and conjoined, in a praying posture; tho' they were formerly placed in a chapel on the south side of the chancel, belonging to the family, which chancel was in being in Mabel's time, as appears by ancient deeds. In the 19th of EDWARD II. Sir William, with John de Horneby, were returned knights of the shire for the county of Lancaster, to serve in the Parliament then to be held at Westminster, having allowance of £7. 14s. for twenty-two days attendance; to Sir William, at the rate of 4s. per day, and John de Horneby, 3s. ROGER, his successor.

Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Preston, esq. of Holker, in Lancashire, and had an only daughter,

CATHERINE PRESTON, heir of her father, who wedded Sir William Lowther, bart. of Marske. (See BURKE'S Commoners, vol. i. p. 479.)

Sir Roger was the first of his family who embraced the Reformation, they had all previously been Catholics, and his conformation was attributable chiefly to his guardian, James, seventh Earl of Derby, under whom he had been educated. At the time, in the civil war, when that nobleman was beheaded at Bolton, Sir Roger fell into the hands of the Parliamentarians, and was consigned a prisoner to the castle of Chester, but nothing could induce him to swerve from his allegiance to his royal master. Doctor Wroe, in his "Memorials and Characters of eminent Persons," describes him as "remarkable for the chasteness of his conjugal love, the goodness of a father's care, and the sweetness of a master's rule. Plenty and welcome (continues the same authority) were never wanting at his table; no man entertained both acquaintance and strangers, with greater freedom and affability. His charity was extended to all who stood in need of it, and he had not only a cheerful heart, but a liberal hand; which I never knew contracted or shut up when any just occasion called to stretch it out; but I have often been a witness of his forward bounty, that he might provoke others by the example of his own cheerful liberality. For two things he is to be honoured: his religion to God, and his unshaken loyalty to his Prince. His religion was true Protestant, in which he was happily educated, and instructed in his greener years, by the care and direction of James, Earl of Derby, to whom he was entrusted by his faithful guardian, John Fleetwood, of Penwortham, esq. to whose religious desires, and the joint endeavours of his virtuous consort, he owed the early impressions of piety and in that family first commenced protestant, and was thence sent to the Isle of Man, where the principles he had already imbibed, were soon cultivated and improved under the umbrage of that religious, loyal, and great man. Next to his religion, his loyalty was most dear to him. In him both commenced together, and he gave early proofs of his loyalty, in an age wherein it was judged a crime; when rebellion looked gay with success, and sacrilege had providence to gild it over; yet even then, he judged not the cause by its success, but by the righteousness of it, and durst be honest spite of bad times. The king was well acquainted with his worth, and entrusted him with those offices, which witnessed the esteem he had both of his faithfulness and ability. His country judged him a true patriot, no less than a good subject, and therefore made choice of him for their representative in Parliament, in which station he served many years with great diligence and fidelity; and in the recesses of that public employ was not less serviceable to his country at home, than faithful to their interest abroad."

This eminent person, who had served in parliament the greater part of his life, either for the county of Lancaster, or Borough of Wigan, died at Chester, 31st March, 1684; was buried in the family vault at Wigan (where his widow erected a marble monument to his memory) and s. by his son,

* James Bradshaigh had a great contest about this lady's paternal estate, which he eventually lost, the decision being in favour of her uncle, Alexander Hoghton.

1. SIR WILLIAM BRERETON, of Honford. This distinguished soldier, incontestably one of the greatest military characters which his country has produced, was in his sixth year at the period of his father's decease. His "notorious aversion for the government of the church," which Clarendon notices, was probably heightened in its effects on his political conduct by several casual circumstances: he was the friend and neighbour of Henry Bradshaw and Colonel Dakinfield, and son-in-law of Sir George Booth, who was considered the corner-stone of the Presbyterian interest in Cheshire. The best and greatest of his kinsmen, Sir William Brereton, of the Shocklach branch, had been sacrificed on the block but a few generations before to the fury of HENRY VIII., which would yet rankle in the breasts of his relatives; and many annoying circumstances attendant on the imposition of the ship money, which had brought him into active collision with the citizens of Chester, and a vexatious opposition by the municipal authorities of that place to his exemptions from tolls and murage in right of the lands of St. Mary's Nunnery, are supposed to have contributed towards making the severity with which he followed up the siege of that place, an act of pre-meditated vengeance.* In 1627, Mr. Brereton, shortly after he had attained majority, was raised to the degree of BARONET, and returned knight of the shire for Chester in the 3rd, 15th, and 16th of CHARLES I. At the outbreaking of the civil war, Sir William arrayed himself under the parliamentary banner, and received the appointment of commander-in-chief of the Cheshire forces. The scene of his action was, however, by no means limited to the palatine, and though the engagements in which he participated, were perhaps not the most distinguished in the history of the unhappy contentions of the era, still their influence and importance tended in no small degree to the final destruction of the royal cause. His early defence and final relief of Nantwich, and his reduction of Chester, deprived the cavaliers of their main point of shelter in the palatinate and the great centre for their exertions. By that fatal coincidence which generally attends civil contests, Sir William was opposed, both at Nantwich and Chester, to his near connexion, the gallant Lord Byron. After the termination of the war, he received a grant, subsequently to the death of Archbishop Laud, of the palace of Croxson, and there fixing his residence, he died a few months after the Restoration, 7th April, 1661. He m. first, Susan, daughter of Sir George Booth, bart. of Dunham, and had by her one son and three daughters, viz.

BRIGHT, OF BADSWORTH.

CREATED
16th July, 1660.

EXTINCT
13th Sept. 1688.

Lineage.

THOMAS BRIGHT, of Bradway, in the parish of Norton, and of Carbrook, was father of

STEPHEN BRIGHT, esq. of Carbrook, lord of the manor of Ecclesall, baptized 27th December, 1583, m. first, Jane, sister of George Westbye, of Ravenfield, by whom he had,

JOHN (Sir), his heir.

Mary, m. to William Jessop, esq. of Broom Hall.

Ruth, m. to Edward Gill, esq. of Carhouse.

He wedded, secondly, Barbara, daughter of Ralph

Matfield, esq. and by her, who m. secondly, Thomas Westby, esq. of Ravenfield, had a daughter, Martha, the wife of William Lister, esq. of Thornton and Midhope. Stephen Bright d. 6th June, 1642, and was s. by his son,

i. SIR JOHN BRIGHT, of Carbrook, a very distinguished partisan of the parliament against CHARLES I. At the outbreaking of the civil war, we find him holding a captain's commission from Fairfax, actively exerting himself to raise forces to oppose the decisive measures adopted by the court, and in 1643, his name occurs as a commissioner for the West Riding for "sequestering the estates of notorious delinquents." In the military transactions which ensued, Capt. Bright took a prominent part, and was made colonel of a regiment of foot, for his gallant conduct in the attack which was made on the head quarters of the Earl of Newcastle, at Wakefield. Colonel Bright accompanied Sir Thomas Fairfax in his Cheshire expedition, and was with him till he joined the confederated armies before York. The battle of Marston Moor soon ensued, and its disastrous event proved fatal to the royal cause in the north. Several fortresses, garrisoned for the king, surrendered to the victorious army, and Colonel Bright was appointed governor of the castle of Sheffield. In 1644, he made a successful attack on a party of the king's forces under Sir William Cobb, and in the following year took Sir Charles Howard, of Naworth, prisoner. After an heroic struggle, the cause of royalty was now almost utterly defeated, and to the strife of arms negotiations succeeded. Colonel Bright continued to serve under Cromwell in Scotland, and at the second siege of Pontefract Castle, which the royalists had recovered by an ingenious but desperate stratagem. In 1650 he accompanied the army marching into Scotland, but threw up his commission in disgust, having solicited a fortnight's leave of absence, and been refused. During the commonwealth, Colonel Bright was successively governor of York and Hull, and one of the six representatives in parliament for the West Riding. He served the office of high sheriff for two years, 1654 and 1656. The measures for bringing about the restoration he appears to have supported, and so soon as the July following that great event, he was created a BARONET. He m. first, Catherine, daughter of Sir Richard Hawksworth, knt. of Hawksworth, and relict of William Lister, esq. of Thornton, who was slain at Tadcaster, in 1642. By this lady he had one son and one daughter,

JOHN, b. in 1660, m. the Lady Lucy Montague, daughter of Edward, Earl of Manchester, but predeceased his father, without issue.

CATHERINE, who m. Sir Henry Liddell, bart. of Ravensworth Castle, and dying 24th February, 1703, left issue,

i. THOMAS LIDDELL, who d. before his father in 1735, leaving by Jane, his wife, daughter of James Clavering, esq. of Greencroft, two sons,

HENRY, created BARON RAVENSWORTH, of Ravensworth Castle, in 1747, m. Anne, only daughter of Sir Peter Delme, and left an only daughter and heiress, ANNE, m. first, to Augustus Henry, Duke of Grafton, and secondly, to the Earl of Upper Ossery.

* The baronetcy is said to have devolved on a younger branch of the family, and Sir John Briggs, bart. described as of Monmouthshire, was plaintiff in a cause tried at Hereford in 1795.

† In the year 1600 an act of parliament was obtained for a more regular partition of the Brigges' estate, which had then centred in three parties, George Brooke, esq. the Rev. Richard Huntley, of Boxwell, and Richard, Viscount Fitzwilliam. The last bequeathed his portion to George Augustus, Earl of Pembroke, with remainder to his second son, the Hon. Sydney Herbert.

Thomas, who m. Margaret, daughter of Sir William Bowes, knt. of Gbide, and was grandfather of HENRY LIDDELL, present LORD RAVENSWORTH.

2. JOHN LIDDELL, who assumed, upon inheriting Badsworth and the principal portion of his grandfather's estates, the surname and arms of BRIGHT. He d. 6th October, 1737, leaving by Cordelia Clutterbuck, his wife, a daughter, Cordelia, m. to Clifton Wintringham, M.D. of York, and a son,

THOMAS BRIGHT, esq. of Badsworth, lord of the manor of Ecclesall, who m. Margaret, daughter and heir of William Norton, esq. of Sawley, by Margaret, his wife, sister and co-heir of John Lowther, esq. of Ackworth. By her, who m. secondly, in 1748, Sir John Ramsden, bart. Mr. Bright left an only daughter and heir, MARY, m. in 1752, to Charles, Marquis of Rockingham, and d. without issue. The Badsworth and other estates of the Bright family passed to the Earl of Fitzwilliam.

3. HENRY LIDDELL, who had Carbrook settled on him. He d. s. p. and left that estate to his wife, Anne Liddell. This lady was the daughter of John Clavering, esq. of Chopwell, in Durham, by Susan, his wife, sister of Edward Thompson, esq. of Marston.

1. Elizabeth Liddell, m. to Robert Ellison, esq. of Hepburn, in Durham.

Colonel Bright m. secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Noeliffe, knt. of Langton, by whom he had an only child, who d. young; thirdly, Frances, daughter of Sir Thomas Liddell, bart. of Ravensworth Castle, and relict of Thomas Vane, esq. of Ruby; and fourthly, Susanna, daughter of Michael Wharton, esq. of Beverley. The last survived her husband, and wedded, secondly, Sir John Newton, bart. of Bars Court, near Bath. Colonel Bright d. at Badsworth, 13th September, 1688, and leaving no surviving male issue, the BARONETCY became EXTINCT. His estates devolved on the LIDDELL family.

The eldest son,

THOMAS CAREW, esq. of Anthony, was M.P. for Saltash, in the 5th of ELIZABETH. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Richard Edgewcombe, knt. of Mount Edgewcombe, in the county of Devon, and was s. by his son,

RICHARD CAREW, esq. the celebrated antiquary, and surveyor of Cornwall, sheriff of that county in the 21th ELIZABETH, and M.P. for Saltash in the 27th of the same reign. Of this learned person, Anthony Wood, in his quaint style, gives the following account: "He was born at East Anthony, of an ancient and genteel family, 1555, became a gent. com. of Christ Church very young, about the time that his kinsman, George Carew, (afterwards Earl of Totness,) and William Camden, studied there; at fourteen years of age, he disputed extempore with the matchless Sir William Sidney, in the presence of the Earls of Leicester, Warwick, and other nobility, at what time they were lodged in Christ Church to receive entertainment from the muses; after he had spent three years in Oxon, he retired to the Middle Temple, where he spent three years more, and then was sent with his uncle, (Sir George Carew, as it seems,) in his embassy unto the King of Poland, whom, when he came to Dantzick, he found that he had been newly gone from thence into Sweden, whither also he went after him. After his return, and a short stay made in England, he was sent by his father into France, with Sir Henry Nevill, who was then ambassador leiger unto King HENRY IV. He was high sheriff of Cornwall, 1586. In 1589, he was elected a member of the college of antiquaries, and about that time he made an historical survey of his native county, which was afterwards printed, he being then accounted a religious, ingenious man, learned, eloquent, liberal, stout, honest, and well skilled in several languages, and the most excellent manager of bees in Cornwall. He was intimate with the most noted scholars in his time, particularly with Sir Hen. Spelman, who in an epistle, (in his treatise, De non temerandis Ecclesia.) to him, doth not a little extoll him, for his ingenuity, virtue, and learning." Camden characterizes him, as a person no less eminent for his honourable ancestors, than his own virtue and learning, who hath described and drawn this county, (Cornwall,) not in little, but at large, and whom I cannot but acknowledge to have abroad to his benefit, he hath reposed himself." He again mentions him thus:—"Master George Carew, (afterwards Sir George) in his younger years, gathered such fruit at the universities, the innes of court, and forrayne travel could yeeld him: upon his returne, he was first called to the bar, then supplied the place of secretarie to the Lord Chancellour Hatton; and after his decease, performed the like office to his two successors, by special recommendation from her Majesty, who also gave him the protonotaryship of the chancery, and in Anno 1595, sent him ambassador to the King of Poland, and other northern potentates, where through unexpected accidents, he underwent extraordinary perils, but God freed him from them, and he performed his duty in acceptable manner, and at this present the commonwealth useth his service as a master of the chancery."

† His younger son, JOHN CAREW, was a gallant soldier, and served with distinction in the Low Countries, and other parts. Having lost his right hand by a cannon ball at the siege of Ostend, in 1601, he was known amongst his friends as "one-handed Carew." And again, speaking of Anthony, in Cornwall, he says, "Richard Carew, lord of it, 1607, who not only lived up to the dignity of his ancestors, but excelled them all in the ornaments of virtue." This gentleman having espoused the cause of the parliament, was accused of treason, and tried at Guildhall, in 1644, "for adhering to the king, and betraying his trust,"† convicted, and sentenced to death. On the Sunday ensuing, his lady presented a petition to the House of Commons, setting forth, that her husband was in a kind of distracted condition, and unfit to die, and therefore prayed he might be relieved: whereupon a committee was sent to visit him, and report his condition, who declared him not to be distracted; that he might have time, however, to settle his estate and prepare himself for death, execution was respited for above a month, viz. until Monday, December 23, 1644, when he was brought by the lieutenant and his officers to a scaffold erected on Tower Hill, and there decapitated. ‡ Lord Clarendon relates, that, at the breaking out of the civil war, Plymouth was esteemed one of the most considerable towns in the west of England; that there was in it a strong castle towards the sea, with good platforms and ordinance; and, about a musket-shot from the town, there was an island with a fort in it, much stronger than the castle; and that the mayor and corporation of Plymouth seized both the castle and island, and kept them for the parliament: that, as a reward for the service thus rendered, the parliament committed the government thereof to the mayor, who was well enough instructed, what respect to pay to their committee, which was appointed to reside there for his assistance, and to conduct the affairs in those parts. His lordship continues, "Of that committee, Sir Alexander Carew was one, a gentleman of good fortune in Cornwall, who served in parliament as knight for that county, and had, from the beginning of the parliament, concurred in all conclusions with the most violent, with as full a testimony of that zeal and fury, to which their confidence was applied, as any man. To him the custody and government of that fort and island, which was looked upon as the security of the town, was committed, and a sufficient garrison put into it. CARTERET, OF METESCHES.

CREATED
9th May, 1645.

EXTINCT
1776.

Lineage.

REGINALD DE CARTERET, son of Sir Philip de Carteret, Lord of St. Owen, preserved, by his prudence and valour, the island of Jersey from falling into the hands of the French in the year 1374, when Bertrand du Guesclin, constable of France, famous for his many victories over the English, passed suddenly from Bretagne into Jersey, with an army of ten thousand men, wherein were the Duke of Bourbon, and the flower of the French chivalry. At that time this Reginald de Carteret secured Mount Orgueil Castle, and defended it so bravely, that after many violent assaults the constable withdrew his forces, leaving many of his best soldiers dead under the walls. For this great achievement, Reginald and his seven sons were all knighted by King EDWARD III. in one day. From this gallant personage we pass to his descendant,

SIR PHILIP CARTERET, who undertook, in the reign of ELIZABETH, to plant such a colony in the island of Sark, as should keep out the French, and he accordingly enlarged the settlement, and thereby improved his own estate. He m. Rachael, daughter and heir of Sir George Paulet, son and heir of Lord Thomas Paulet, of Cossington, in the county of Somerset, second son of William, Marquess of Winchester, and had, with other issue,

PHILIP (Sir), his successor, who m. Anne, daughter of Sir Francis Dowse, knt. of Wallop, in the county of Southampton, and was s. by his eldest son,

PHILIP, in the seigniory of St. Owen. This gentleman was created a BARONET in 1670, as SIR PHILIP CARTERET, of St. Owen, in Jersey. He m. Anne Dumasque, and dying in 1662, was s. by his son,

The second son,

HELLER CARTERET, esq. deputy governor of Jersey, m. Elizabeth Dumasque, and had, with other children,

I. SIR GEORGE CARTERET, a naval officer of high reputation, who, through the influence of the Duke of Buckingham, was appointed in the 2nd of King CHARLES I. joint governor of Jersey, and at the breaking out of the civil war, held the office of comptroller of the navy. Sir George was, however, so much esteemed by all parties, that when the parliament passed the ordinance for the Earl of Warwick to command the fleet, then fully and entirely at their disposal, they likewise resolved that Captain Carteret should be vice-admiral: but he declined the appointment at the express command of the king. Upon which Lord Clarendon observes, "his interest and reputation in the navy was so great, and his diligence and dexterity in command so eminent, that it was generally believed he would, against whatsoever the Earl of Warwick could have done, have preserved the major part of the fleet in their duty to the king."

Having thus retired from the navy, he withdrew with his family to Jersey; but subsequently returned to aid the projects of the royalists, when he was created by King CHARLES a BARONET, 9th May, 1645. He again, however, went back to his government in Jersey, and there, in the ruin of the royal cause, afforded an asylum to the Prince of Wales, (who appointed him his vice-chamberlain,) Mr. Hyde, afterwards Lord Clarendon, and other refugees of distinction. After this he defended the island of Jersey in the most gallant manner against the parliamentarians, and ultimately only surrendered upon receiving the command of King CHARLES II. so to do. Elizabeth Castle, in the island of Jersey, under Sir George Carteret, was the last fortress that lowered the royal banner. At the restoration, Sir George formed one of the immediate train of the restored monarch in his triumphant entry into London; and the next day he was sworn of the privy-council, and declared VICE-CHAMBERLAIN. He was afterwards returned to parliament by the corporation of Portsmouth. Sir George m. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Philip Carteret, knt. of St. Owen, and had issue, PHILIP (Sir), who had eminently distinguished himself during the civil wars, and was governor of Mount Orgueil Castle, when it was invested by the parliamentary forces in 1651. Sir Philip m. Jemima, daughter of Edward Montagu, first Earl of Sandwich, vice-admiral of England, and had issue,

CHESTER, OF CHICHELEY.

CREATED
23rd Mar. 1619.EXTINCT
17th May, 1709.

Lineage.

The family was of ancient standing in the county of Gloucester, and so early as the time of HENRY VI.

ROBERT CHESTRE was of such note, that in the 23rd of that monarch's reign he had a license, with others, to found a gild or fraternity to the praise and honour of the Trinity, in the town of Stow St. Edward, in the said county, to endure for ever: to consist of a warden or master and as many persons as should think fit to be of the fraternity; which warden or master, with the majority of the fraternity, and their successors, are empowered to choose annually a warden, on the eve of Trinity, for the government of the same; also, that they be one body corporate, have a common seal, purchase lands, &c.: and likewise are empowered to erect a chantry, and purchase lands of the value of £10 per annum for the maintenance of a chaplain, to be appointed by the said Robert Chestre and others, who should pray at the altar of the holy Trinity, in the parish of Stow St. Edward aforesaid, for the welfare of the king and Margaret, his queen, and for the souls of their progenitors, and for the welfare of Sir Ralph Boteler, knt. Lord Sudley, treasurer of England, Sir John Bequenchamp, of Powick, knt. and for the wardens of the said society. This Robert Chestre was father of three sons, viz.

WILLIAM.

Richard, an alderman of the city of London, who, in the 16th of EDWARD IV. was one of the executors of his brother William. His wife's name was Alice, who survived him, as appears by her last testament, bearing date the last of August, 1464 (30 HENRY VII.), wherein she desires to be buried in St. Buttolph, without Aldgate, near her late husband, Richard Chestre. She lived after his death among the nuns at the Minories, and bequeaths her black hood of profession to Mrs. Sialand, sister at St. Catherine's; constitutes Thomas Bullison (who had married Joan, her daughter,) executor; and styling herself Dame Alice Chestre, widow, late the wife of Richard Chestre, citizen and skinner of London, and alderman and sheriff thereof, revokes all other wills.

Henry, of Bristol, merchant, who makes his will 3rd February, 1478 (11 EDWARD IV.), bequeaths his body to be buried in the church of All Saints, in that city, and constitutes Alice, his wife, his executrix, who made her will the 10th December, 1485, wherein she desires her body to be buried in All Saints, Bristol, near her husband, Henry Chestre, and constitutes executor her son,

John Chestre, of Bristol, merchant, which

John made his will 22nd December, 1483. He was s. by his son, WILLIAM CHESTRE, alias Chester, an alderman of Bristol, whose testament bears date 2nd September, 1558. This William left sons, one of whom, THOMAS, it is conjectured, was the Thomas Chester who purchased Ambury, in Gloucestershire, in the time of ELIZABETH, and founded the family of that place.

The oldest son,

WILLIAM CHESTRE, who was likewise citizen and skinner of London, and merchant of the staple at Calais, had a grant, in the 7th of EDWARD IV. of the arms and crest afterwards borne by his descendants, under the seal of William Hawkslow, chancery king of arms, dated 22nd May. He was possessed of much wealth, and was a person of great piety, as the charities enumerated in his will evince. That instrument bears date 6th May, 1476, soon after which he died, for it was proved 27th September following. By one clause, he gives Agnes Chestre, his wife, his lands, rents, plate, and household goods, as long as she lives a widow; but if she marry, to have only 500 marks, with his plate and household goods, but none of his lands, which he wills, after her decease or marriage, to John Chestre, his son, except his rents in London and in Sussex, which he desires his executors to sell, and dispose of the money for his soul, and his father and mother's souls. He constitutes Agnes, his wife, and Richard Chestre, his brother, his executors. The said Agnes, whose maiden name was Hill, died in the 3rd of RICHARD III. and her last will bears date 28th June, 1484 (the probate whereof is on the 13th July following). Their son and heir,

JOHN CHESTRE, writes himself citizen and draper of London in his last testament, and died in May, 1513. He appears to have married Joan, widow of — Wells, and to have had, with a daughter Alice, two sons, NICHOLAS and WILLIAM, between whom and his wife he divides all his goods and chattels, his wife one moiety, and his sons the other; which bequests he makes the larger, on condition "she never will marry, as she had said unto him;" and constitutes her sole executrix. The line of the elder son, Nicholas, failing, the representation and fortune eventually devolved upon

SIR WILLIAM CHESTER, knt. son of John, the younger son. This William was bred to his father's occupation, a draper, and thereby considerably augmented his patrimony. Living in great reputation, he was elected one of the sheriffs of London in 1544, 2nd PHILIP and MARY. He had been knighted before, and was a great benefactor to the city, in the time of EDWARD VI. for, following the charitable example of that prince, Sir William Chester, knt. and alderman, and John Calthorp, citizen and draper, at their own expense, made the brick walls, and way on the back side, which lead from the said hospital to the hospital of St. Bartholomew; they also covered and vaulted the town ditch from Aldersgate to Newgate, which before was very noisome and contagious to the said hospital. He was lord mayor in 1500, 2nd ELIZABETH, and was returned to parliament by the city in 1563. He became afterwards so strictly religious, that for a considerable time before his death, he retired from all business, entered himself a fellow commoner at Cambridge, lived there some years, made a great proficiency in the course of the university, and was reputed a learned man. Sir William m. first, Bizabeth, daughter of Thomas Lovett, of Astwell, in Northamptonshire,* and had issue,

He m. secondly, Joan, daughter of John Turner, of London, and widow of Alderman William Beswick, but had no other issue. At what precise time he died does not appear, but he was buried with his wives in the church of St. Edmund, Lombard Street, he having in his lifetime erected a fair monument against the south side of the chancel, in the wall of that church. His eldest son,

WILLIAM CHESTER, esq. m. first, in the lifetime of his father, Anne, daughter of John Fryer, gent. of London, and by her, who d. in 1587, had an only surviving child, Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Heton, elder brother of Martin Heton, Bishop of Ely. He m. secondly, Judith, da. and co-heir of Anthony Cave, esq. of Chichley,* in the county of Bucks, and thereby acquired that manor. By this lady he left, at his decease in 1587, an only son,

I. ANTHONY CHESTER, esq. of Chichley, who attended Queen ELIZABETH, at Tilbury camp, and commanded a troop of horse, to oppose the Spanish invasion. He was constituted sheriff of Bucks, in the forty-fourth year of that queen's reign, and created a BARONET by JAMES I. 23rd March, 1619. Sir Henry m. first, Judith Bankworth, daughter of Mr. Bankworth, of Bow Lane, London, and sister of Dr. Bankworth, and by her had a son, Robert, who died at the age of eighteen. At the breaking out of the rebellion he served in the royal army, and for contributing very largely to the cause, had his estate sequestered and his mansion at Chichley rendered uninhabitable. He behaved himself with singular bravery at Naseby and in other engagements, which forced him to fly into Holland, and to remain there until composition was effected for his life, liberty, and lands, with the usurping powers. Lineage.

This was a branch of the ancient Cheshire stock of Cholmondeley, springing from,

ROBERT, younger son of Hugh de Cholmondeley, deputy sergeant of Cheshire, temp. EDWARD I. and II.

RICHARD CHOLMLEY, great grandson of Robert, was appointed temp. HENRY VII. lieutenant governor of Berwick, and made subsequently governor of Hull. In 1513, he and his brother Roger commanded the garrison of that town, the king's tenants at Hatfield, and others, under the Earl of Surrey at Flodden, and for their gallantry on that memorable occasion, received the honour of knighthood, as well as the thanks of their sovereign. Sir Richard dying without legitimate issue, was s. by his brother,

SIR RICHARD CHOLMLEY, knt. of Roxby, who purchased in 1541, a lease for twenty-one years, of the abbey lands in the neighbourhood of Whitby, and subsequently obtained a grant of all the possessions of the monastery thereof. This gentleman inheriting the martial spirit of his ancestors, joined the expedition under the Earl of Hertford, against the Scotch, and so gallantly distinguished himself, that, after the burning of Edinburgh, he was knighted at Leith, 8th May, 1544. He m. first, Margaret, daughter of Lord Conyers, and had by her,

HENRY, successor to his brother Francis.

Katharine, m. to a gentleman named Dutton.

"Sir Richard," says the Historian of Whitby, "loved pomp, and generally had fifty or sixty servants about his house; nor would he ever go up to London without a retinue of thirty or forty men. He was bred a soldier and delighted much in feats of war, being tall in stature and strongly made. His hair and eyes were black, and his complexion so swarthy, that he was frequently called 'the Black Knight of the North.'" His eldest son,

SIR FRANCIS CHOLMLEY, of Whitby, married about 1570, Jane Bulmer, but dying issueless in 1579, was, under the entail in his father's will, s. by his youngest brother,

On the outbreaking of the civil war, Sir Hugh enrolled himself under the royal banner, and was appointed governor of Scarborough Castle, a general in the northern parts of England, a colonel of dragoons, and judge of all marine affairs in every part on the Yorkshire coast, between the Teese and Bridlington. In Scarborough he continued his residence until the parliament had obtained possession of every place in Yorkshire, except the castles of Pontefract and Scarborough, when an armed force being sent down to besiege these two places, Sir Hugh made a gallant defence for more than twelve months: he disputed every inch of ground with the besiegers, and bravely repulsed all their assaults. Furthermore, on the fall of the castle, when the whole was reduced almost to a heap of ruins, and Sir John Meldrum, who commanded the siege, sent proposals to him mixed with menaces, he resolutely withstood the assault, slew Sir John, and beat off his troops with great loss. During the whole siege, Lady Cholmley continued with her husband in the castle, where she was of great service by attending the sick and wounded. Finally the place being surrendered on honourable terms in 1645, Sir Hugh went into exile, his estate was sequestered, his mansion at Whitby converted into a garrison, and every thing valuable plundered. He remained abroad until 1649, when his brother, Sir Henry Cholmley, finding means to pacify the parliament, he was again permitted to return to England, and on certain conditions once more suffered to enter into the possession of his estate.

CHUDLEIGH, OF ASHTON.

CREATED
1st August, 1622.

EXTINGT
1st August 1745.

Lineage.

This family was of long continuance in Devonshire, and flourished for several generations, at Broad Cleft, in that county, frequently serving the office of sheriff, in the reigns of RICHARD II., HENRY VI., and HENRY VII. ASHTON, in the same county, anciently called ASSHRISTON, and ASSHRISTON, came with other lands to the Chudleighs, so early as the beginning of the fourteenth century, by the intermarriage of

JOHN CHUDLEIGH, with Thomasine, daughter of Richard, son of Sir Richard Prous, knt. when they were conveyed by deed (dated in 1320), from "Richard Prous, and Margaret, his wife, to John Chudleigh and his heirs." From John and Thomasine descended

SIR JAMES CHUDLEIGH, knt. of Ashton, who m. Jane, daughter and heir of Sir John De, knt. and was s. by his son,

JAMES CHUDLEIGH, esq. of Ashton, who m. Margaret, daughter of William, Lord Stourton, of which marriage the beginning of the covenant runs thus: "That James Chudleigh, shall marry Margaret, daughter to William, Lord Stourton, who giveth him an hundred Marks, anno, 15 EDWARD IV. 1476." His son and heir,

WILLIAM CHUDLEIGH, esq. of Ashton, m. Joan, daughter of Sir William Hody, knt. of Dorsetshire. and had a son,

SIR RICHARD CHUDLEIGH, knt.* who m. Mary, daughter of Sir Nicholas Wadhams, knt. of Merifield, in the county of Somerset, and was s. by his son,

CHRISTOPHER CHUDLEIGH, esq. of Ashton. This gentleman m. Christiana, daughter of William Stretchley, esq. of Stretchley, in the county of Devon, and thus added considerably to his paternal fortune. He left a son and heir,

JOHN CHUDLEIGH, esq. of Ashton, "who," according to Prince, "was of a right martial, bold, and adventurous spirit; for, living in the reign of Queen ELIZABETH, the famous actions of Drake, Cavendish, &c. so employed his thoughts, that he had a noble emulation in him, to equal, if not excel the bravest heroes, and their noblest exploits, not at land, where is the least danger, but at sea." He did not live, however, to accomplish his generous designs, but died young, in the Straights of Magellan, leaving, by his wife, daughter of George Speke, esq. of White Lackington, in the county of Somerset, two sons and two daughters, viz.

GEORGE, his heir.

John (Sir), who received the honour of knighthood from King CHARLES I. 22nd September, 1625.

Alice, m. to Sir William Langham, knt. of Cottesbrooke.

Bridget, m. to Sir Richard Carew, bart. of East Anthony.

The elder son,

1. GEORGE CHUDLEIGH, esq., of Ashton, in the county of Devon, was created a BARONET by King JAMES I. 1st August, 1622. At the time of his father's decease, Sir George was a minor of three or four years of age, "but," says an old writer, "by his careful and prudent Trustees, and his own virtuous disposition, had his youth well educated, and his person excellently adorned, with all the accomplishments requisite to a fine gentleman; so that, having been abroad for the most exquisite breeding that age could yield, he retired home, well improved, and fixed his habitation at his seat at Ashton. Here, his demeanour was so courteous and obliging, and withal, so discreet and prudent, that he lived in great esteem and reputation among his neighbours, and was looked upon as an ornament to his country." Sir George Chudleigh was elected to the parliament which met at Westminster in 1646, and at first opposed the court, but afterward both himself and his son took up arms for the king, and he published a declaration in 1643, in vindication of his doing so. He m. Mary, daughter of Sir William Strode, knt. of Newham, in the county of Devon, and had issue,

He fell at Dartmouth when the town and castle surrendered to Sir Thomas Fairfax. Lord Clarendon vindicates his defection, and in mentioning the manner of his death, calls him "a gallant young gentleman, who received a shot with a musquet, in the body, at the siege of Dartmouth, of which he died within a few days, and was a wonderful loss to the king's service." CRISPE, OF HAMMERSMITH.

CREATED
14th April, 1665.

EXTINCT
in 1740.

Lineage.

1. SIR NICHOLAS CRISPE, of Hammersmith, (son of Ellis Crispe, esq. of Hammersmith, by Anne, his wife, daughter of Sir George Strode, knt. of Westerham, in Kent, grandson of Sir Nicholas Crispe, knt. of London, and great grandson of Ellis Crispe, esq. of Marsefield, in Gloucestershire, alderman and sheriff of London in 1625,) who is said to have been the first inventor of the art of making bricks as now practised, was created a BARONET in 1665. This gentleman, who entered into business with a larger fortune than most retire with, was one of the farmers of the Customs, and a merchant of high consideration, trading chiefly to the coast of Guinea. On the breaking out of the civil war, he remained firm in his allegiance, and advanced very large sums to supply the necessities of his royal master. Lloyd, indeed, gives us a very high idea of Sir Nicholas's activity and enterprize, as well as of the signal services he rendered the king: "One while," says he, "you would meet him with thousands of gold; another while, in his way to Oxford, riding in a pair of panniers, like a butter-woman going to market; at other times, he was a porter carrying on his majesty's interest in London; he was a fisherman in one place and a merchant in another. All the succours which the king had from beyond sea, came through his hands, and most of the relief he had at home was managed by his conveyance."* As a farther proof of zeal in the royal cause, Sir Nicholas raised, at his own expense, a regiment of horse, and putting himself at their head, behaved with distinguished gallantry. When the king's affairs grow desperate, he retired to France. The losses which his fortune sustained from the resentment of the parliament, may be imagined, when it is mentioned that three-fourths of a pension of 8000*l.* per annum, granted to the elector palatine, were ordered to be paid out of his and Lord Colpooper's estates. Sir Nicholas returned subsequently to England, and submitting to a composition, embarked again in trade with his usual spirit and his usual success. † He lived to see his master's son restored to the possession of his kingdoms, and after all his losses, left a very considerable fortune. About the beginning of CHARLES the First's reign, Sir Nicholas built of brick, a most magnificent mansion by the water side, at Hammersmith, at an expense, it is said, of nearly 23,000*l.* This house was plundered during the early part of the civil war, and when the army was stationed at Hammersmith, in August, 1647, Fairfax took up his quarters there, Sir Nicholas Crispe being then in France. A newspaper of September 10, (the army being then at Putney,) mentions an odd circumstance of a cook being in custody for using Lady Crispe's name to invite the general to dine with her. ‡

Sir Nicholas died in 1665, and the baronetcy continued with his descendants until the demise, issueless, in 1740, of his great grandson, SIR CHARLES CRISPE, bart. of Oxfordshire. The villa at Hammersmith, which Sir Nicholas erected, was sold, in 1683, to Prince Rupert, who gave it to his beautiful mistress, Margaret Hughes, a much admired actress in the reign of CHARLES II. From her, it was purchased by Timothy Lannoy, esq. and from the Lannoy family passed to George Dodington, esq. afterwards Lord Melcombe, who repaired and modernized the house, giving it the name of La Trappe. His lordship devised it to Thomas Wyndham, esq. and it was subsequently the property of Mrs. Sturt, but in the year 1792, was purchased by the Margrave Brandenburg-Anspach, and became, more recently, celebrated as the residence of CAROLINE, the Queen Consort of GEORGE IV.

CREATED
 17th May, 1627.

EXTINCT
 18th May, 1723.

Lineage.

The manor of Preston, in the county of Kent, with the seat called Preston Hall, situated at a short distance from the River Medway, opposite the village of Aylesford, was possessed in very ancient times by the family of Colepeper, or Culpeper, which spread, in various branches, over the counties of Kent and Sussex, and produced warriors and statesmen of high eminence in the ages in which they flourished.
 The first recorded ancestor of note, THOMAS DE COLE-PEPEP, was a distinguished lawyer, and one of the Recognitores Magna Assise, or judges of the great assize, temp. King JOHN; shortly after his time, the family separated into different branches, one continued at Bayhall, (See Culpeper of Wakehurst;) while another seated itself at Preston Hall.

WALTER COLEPEPER, died in the last year of Edward II. seized, as appears by inquisition taken in that year, of estates in Langley, Boughton, East and West Farleigh, Yalding, Malling, Brenchley, Tunbridge, and Shipboone. By Joano, his wife, he left three sons,

CULPEPER, OF WAKEHURST.

CREATED 29th Sept. 1628.—EXTINCT 28th March, 1740

Lineage.

The family of COLEPEPER, or CULPEPER, is of ancient date in the county of Kent; before the time of EDWARD III. it was divided into chief branches;—the Culpepers of Preston Hall, and the Culpepers of Bay Hall; from the latter descended those of Bedgbury,* Wakehurst, Wigshill, and the Lords Colepeper of Thoresway, in the county of Lincoln. The elder line has not however been established, each claimed seniority, all bore the same coat armour without difference, and carried it in the field of battle; at Poitiers, one Colepeper is stated to have borne in a silver shield, "a bloody bend engrailed."

SIR JOHN COLEPEPER, of Bay Hall, in the parish of Pepenbury, † Kent, was father of

SIR THOMAS COLEPEPER, of Bay Hall, who is recorded in the Chronicles as a partisan of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, in 1321, against King EDWARD II., who was executed at Winchelsea. He left a son and heir, DALSTON, OF DALSTON.

CREATED
15th Feb. 1640-1.

EXTINCT
7th March, 1765.

Lineage.

The family of DALSTON, one of great antiquity in the county of Cumberland, was founded by

ROBERT, second brother of Hubert de Vallibus, Lord of Gillesland in the time of the CONQUEROR, who had the BARONY OF DALSTON conferred upon him by his kinsman, Ranulph de Meschines, Earl of Chester; and his posterity possessed it, in lineal descent, until King STEPHEN gave Cumberland to DAVID, King of Scots. HENRY II. recovering the county, seized the barony of Dalston, and united it to the forest of Englewood, whereof it continued a member until HENRY III. in the fourteenth year of his reign, disforested Englewood, and gave or sold it to Walter Maclerk, then Bishop of Carlisle and Lord treasurer, whose successors in the see of Carlisle ever afterwards enjoyed the estate. The descendants of Robert de Dalston held, however, the old mansion house, with the manor and lordship, of Dalston Parva. Of those descendants, HENRY DE DALSTON, son of Reginald, gave Brownelston, part of his manor, to the priory of Carlisle.

JOHN DE DALSTON, son of Robert, m. a daughter and co-heir of Kirkhide, with whom he had the estate at Kirkhide.

THOMAS DE DALSTON had the manor of Umdale, part of the barony of Utterdale, given him by King HENRY VIII. as a reward for the services he had rendered at the battle of Solom Moss. From this Thomas descended the Dalstons of Acornbank, in Westmoreland,* and

SIR JOHN DALSTON, knt. sheriff of Cumberland in the 10th JAMES I. His son and heir,

SIR GEORGE DALSTON, knt. was M.P. for Cumberland in the 16th CHARLES I. and was sheriff in the 10th of the preceding reign. This gentleman had a son, WILLIAM, and a daughter, Catherine, the wife of Sir Henry Fletcher, knt. of Hutton, in Cumberland. Sir Henry fell at Rowton Heath, near Chester, fighting for King CHARLES I. in 1645, and his widow, who was a lady of great courage and resolution, endured sequestration, incarceration, plunder, &c. from the rebels with a brave and masculine spirit. She lived, however, to see her daughters married into some of the first families in the county. Sir George Dalston's only son and heir,

i. SIR WILLIAM DALSTON, knt. of Dalston, in Cumberland, was created a BARONET by King CHARLES I. 15th February, 1640-1, in which year he was M.P. for Carlisle. "When the rebellion broke out, both he and his father behaved themselves very bravely and dutifully towards the king, and were great sufferers for the royal cause; the latter being obliged to pay £700 and Sir William £3000 to the sequestrators." Sir William resided chiefly at Heath Hall, in Yorkshire (an estate which came into the family by marriage), and died 13th January, 1693, leaving issue, by Anne, the daughter of Thomas Bolles, esq. of Osberton, in the county of Nottingham, and Dame Mary Bolles, his wife, BARONETESS OF NOVA SCOTIA,†

GEORGE (Sir), who received the honour of knighthood, and died in the lifetime of his father. He m. Paul D'Ewes died in 1639, and was s. by his son,

I. SIR SYMONDS D'EWES, of Stowlangtoft, born in 1602, at Coxden, the seat of his maternal grandfather. This eminent antiquary commenced at a very youthful age, even while a student at St. John's College, Cambridge, those historical studies, in which he eventually attained such distinction, and, almost at the same early period, gained the friendship and acquaintance of Cotton, Selden, Spelman, and many others of the first rank in the republic of letters. The labours of Sir Symonds have contributed not a little to illustrate the general history of Great Britain; and his most prominent work, "The Journals of all the Parliaments during the Time of Queen ELIZABETH," exists as an able record of the important transactions of one of the most glorious reigns in English history. In 1630, Sir Symonds served the office of sheriff of Suffolk, having been knighted some time previously; and in the long parliament, which was summoned to meet 3rd November, 1640, was elected member for Sudbury. In 1641, he was created a BARONET by CHARLES I.; yet, upon the breaking out of the civil war, he adhered to the parliament, and took the solemn league and covenant in 1643. He continued to sit in the House of Commons until December, 1648, when he was turned out with others who were thought to retain some little regard for the person of the king, and the old constitution in church and state. He wedded, first, in 1626, Anne, daughter and heir of Sir William Clapton, knt., a lady of exquisite beauty, by whom he had two daughters, namely:

Cecilia, m. to Sir Thomas Darcy, bart. of St. Osith's, Essex.

He m. Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Robert Brett, D.D. and dying in 1644, left two sons,

1. GEORGE (Sir), his heir.

- II. HENRY, whose son COL. ADAM DOWNING, was a distinguished officer in King WILLIAM III.'s army in Ireland. His descendant and representative, is the present GEORGE ALEXANDER FULLERTON, esq. of Westwood, in Hampshire, and of Ballintoy Castle, in Ireland. (See BURKE'S Commoners, vol. iv. p. 298.)

The elder son,

1. SIR GEORGE DOWNING, of East Hatley, in Cambridgeshire, was created a BARONET, 1st July, 1663. This distinguished person, who acted a prominent part in the eventful period in which he lived, was sent, during the Protectorate, ambassador to the States General of Holland. He sat for several years in parliament; and after the Restoration, became secretary of the treasury, teller of the exchequer, and one of his majesty's commissioners of customs. With Sir George Downing, when secretary of the treasury, originated the important act of the 17 CHARLES II. "To make all the money that was to be raised by this bill to be applied only to those ends to which it was given, which was the carrying on of the war, and to no other purpose whatsoever, or by what authority soever." This important innovation, and one which was the origin of estimates being laid before the House of Commons, was the more necessary in that reign, as it was well known the public service was much injured by the application of money to the purposes of the pleasures of the court, instead of the interests and defence of the country. Sir George Downing was opposed violently by Lord Clarendon, who was such a slave to his narrow prepossessions, that he would rather see the disastrous excesses he abhorred derive nourishment from that revenue which had been allotted to maintain the national honour, and which, by its deficiencies thus aggravated, had caused the navy to be laid up, and the coasts to be left defenceless, than suffer them to be restrained by the only power to which thoughtless luxury would submit. In 1670, Sir George Downing proceeded again as ambassador to Holland, on the recall of Sir W. Temple, and remained there until 1672, when the war again broke out. He m. a lady greatly distinguished for beauty, Frances, fourth daughter of Sir William Howard, knt. of Naworth Castle, in Cumberland, and sister to the first Earl of Carlisle, and dying in 1684, left issue,

- I. GEORGE (Sir), his heir.

His eldest son,

- II. SIR GEORGE DOWNING, of East Hatley, one of the tellers of the exchequer temp. JAMES II. m. Catherine, eldest daughter of James, Earl of Salisbury, by Margaret his wife, daughter of John, Earl of Rutland, and had an only son,
- III. SIR GEORGE DOWNING, of East Hatley, knight of the bath, and founder of Downing College, Cambridge. He m. Miss Forester, daughter of Sir William Forester, knt. of Watling-street, in Shropshire, and died s. p. in 1749. By a will dated in 1717, he devised all his property to his cousin and heir, SIR JACOB DOWNING; and in case that gentleman's line failed, he directed the foundation of a College at Cambridge, which latter event, after much litigation, took place in 1800. Sir George represented Dunwich in parliament. His aforesaid cousin and heir,
- IV. SIR JACOB DOWNING m. a daughter of — Price, esq. but died without issue in 1764, when the BARONETCY became EXTINCT. Sir Jacob's widow wedded, secondly, Admiral Sir George Bowyer, bart.

D'OYLEY, OF CHISELHAMPTON.

CREATED
7th July, 1666.

.....

Lineage.

The founder of the family of D'OYLEY, of Chiselhampton, in the county of Oxford, came into England at the time of the Norman Conquest, and the pedigree states that the D'Oyllys were Lords of Olgii, or Oylly, in Normandy, long before that event.

ROBERT D'OYLY, eldest son of the Lord de Oglhi, for his good services at Hastings, was rewarded by his victorious chief with two baronies, and many goodly manors and lordships in England, but principally lying in Oxfordshire, as appears by Domesday-Book and the abbey books of Osney, by Oxford, and of Missenden, in Bucks. Of both which abbies the family were founders, temp. HENRY I. and were also great benefactors to the abbies of Abbingdon, Eynsham, Godstone, and Thame, in England, as well as to several others in France. The family likewise built the castle and bridge at Oxford, A.D. 1071, which was then their ancient seat, and new made the walls about the same city. Robert D'Oyly was king's constable and foudal Baron of Hokenorton in Oxfordshire. He m. Alghitha, daughter and heir of Wigotus, a noble Saxon, Lord of Wallingford, by whom he had an only daughter and heir, MAUD D'OYLY, Lady of Walingford, who inheriting the spirit of her ancestors, valiantly defended the Empress MAUD in her castle of Walingford. She m. first, Miles Crispin, and secondly, Brian Fitz Count, Lord of Bergavenay.

Robert and his wife Alghitha, were buried in the abbey of Abington, to which, and St. Mary's Church there, they were bountiful benefactors. He was s. in the Barony of Hocknorton by his brother,

NIOELL D'OYLY, who was king's constable, temp. WILLIAM Rufus. This Niogell came in the Conquest with his two brothers, Robert, whom he inherited from, and GILBERT D'OYLY who had grants of lands also in Oxfordshire. He (Niogell) m. the Lady Agnes, and had two sons; Foulk, the younger, was buried at Ersham, A.D. 1126. The elder,

ROBERT D'OYLY, succeeded his father as king's constable, and in the barony of Hocknorton. He m. Editha, daughter of Foru, Lord of Greystock, and had two sons and a daughter, viz.

HENRY, his successor.

GILBERT, ancestor of the D'OYLEYS of CHISELHAMPTON.

Editha, m. to Gilbert Bassot, of Bicester, in Oxfordshire.

This Robert built the Abbey of Missenden, and richly endowed it. He likewise founded the celebrated Abbey of Osney, at the request of his wife, anno 1129, and gave lands to it in the 20th HENRY I. He was s. by his elder son,

HENRY D'OYLY, Baron of Hokenorton, and king's constable. He m. Margaret, daughter of Humphry Bohan, Earl of Hereford, and had issue, HENRY, } successively Lord of Hokenorton.

ROBERT, }

MARGERY, heir to her brothers.

Maud, m. to Maurice de Gaunt.

Joan, m. to Simon Fitzwalter, Lord of Daventry.

He was s. by his elder son,

HENRY D'OYLY, Baron of Hokenorton, and king's constable. This feudal lord had two wives, but leaving no surviving issue, was s. at his decease (which occurred in Austria, in his return from Jerusalem, whither he had accompanied King RICHARD I.), by his brother,

ROBERT D'OYLY, Baron of Hokenorton, and king's constable, at whose decease, issueless, the estates devolved upon his eldest sister,

MARGERY D'OYLY, who m. Henry de Newburgh, fifth Earl of Warwick, and was mother of Thomas, the sixth Earl. Thus terminated the male line of the elder branch of the family of D'Oyly, but it was continued (without however the honors and estate) through Gilbert D'Oyly's (the younger brother of the first feudal lord) eldest son,

ROBERT D'OYLY, who was s. by his son,

JOHN D'OYLY, of Wromham, father of

ROGER D'OYLY who removed to his seat of Pus-hall, or Pashil, held under the crown, by the tenure of presenting yearly to the king a table cloth of three shillings price, or three shillings for all services. He was s. by his eldest son, Antient and famous Family of the D'Oyly's, of the same Countie, Founders of the noble Abbies of Osney and Missenden, &c.

Who put on Immortality the 4th of August, in the year of our Redemption 1633

Ask not who is buried here
 Go ask the Commons, ask the Shire, Go ask the Church, They'll tell thee who,
 As well as blubber'd Eyes can do ;
 Go ask the Heralds, ask the Poor,
 Thine Ears shall hear enough to ask no more.
 Then if thine Eye bedew this sacred Urn,
 Each drop a Pearl will turn
 To adorn his Tomb, or if thou canst not vent,
 Thou bringst more Marble to his Monument.

Sacred to the Pious Memory of that rare example of undistained Virtue, Martha,

Wife of the said Sir Cope D'Oyly, knt. eldest daughter of James Quarles, of Rombold, Esq; who receiv'd the Crown of Glory, in the year of Grace, 1618

Wouldst thou, (Reader) draw to life
 The perfect copy of a Wife,
 Read on, and then redeem from shame,
 That lost, that honorable Name,
 This Dust was once in Spirit a Jacl,
 Rebecca in Grace, in Heart an Abigail,
 In Works a Dorcas, to the Church a Hannah,
 And to her Spouse, Susanna.
 Prudently simple, providently warie,
 To the World a Martha, and to Heaven, a Marie.

DUD

DUCK, OF HASWELL-ON-THE-HILL.

CREATED
19th Mar. 1687.

EXTINCT
26th Aug. 1691.

Lineage.

I. SIR JOHN DUCK, of Haswell-on-the-Hill, created a BARONET in 1687, was the wealthiest Burgess in the civic annals of the city of Durham. His birth, parentage, &c. remain in impenetrable obscurity. He was bred a butcher, under John Heslop, in defiance of the whole craft, in whose books there still exists a gentle reprimand to Heslop "to forbear to set John Ducke on worke in the trade of a butcher on paine of 39s. 11d." John Duck, however, was born to greatness, and grew rich in despite of the butchers, and married the daughter of his benefactor.* He built a splendid mansion in Silver Street, Durham, and endowed an hospital at Lumley, in the palatinate. In the former, a pannel still remains recording his happy rise to fortune. The baronet, then humble Duck, cast out by the butchers, stands near a bridge in an attitude of despondency, and in the air a raven is seen bearing in his bill a piece of money, which, according to tradition, fell at his feet, and which, "being put out to use," was the nucleus on which he wound a splendid fortune. On the right is a view of the mansion house in Silver Street, and on the left the hospital at Lumley. He died without issue, and was buried in St. Margaret's 31st August, 1691, where his wife, "pia, prudens, felix," lies buried beside him. Sir John's large property seems to have gone to Lady Duck's nieces, viz. Elizabeth Heslop, who married George Tweddell, alderman of Durham; and Jane Heslop, who married, first, James Nicholson, of Durham, cordwainer (father of James Nicholson, esq. of West Rainton, in the county palatine, M.P. for the city of Durham in 1708, who died in 1727, leaving three daughters and co-heirs, viz. Jane, m. to Thomas, Earl of Strathmore, grandfather to the present earl; Anne, who m. the Hon. Patrick Lyon, brother to the earl; and Mary, who died a spinster); and secondly, Richard Wharton, attorney-at-law. Sir John Duck mentions in his will, Anne, the daughter and only child of his late brother, Robert Duck, who died before 1691, but appears to have been uncertain of her existence; "if she be alive" are the words used. At the demise of Sir John Duck the BARONETCY became EXTINCT.

DUDLEY, OF CLAPTON.

CREATED
1st Aug. 1660.

EXTINCT
15th June, 1764.

Lineage.

This family claimed descent from the PAGANELLS, who were Lords of Dudley soon after the Conquest. Their heir female, HAWYSE PAGNELL, married JOHN DE SOMERIE, and conveyed to her husband the lordship and castle of Dudley, which passed again with a co-heir of that family, MARGARET DE SOMERIE, to the family of Sutton on her marriage with

JOHN DE SUTTON, who thus obtained Dudley Castle, and his son and heir,

JOHN DE SUTTON, was summoned to parliament as Baron Sutton of Dudley in 1342. A descendant of his,

JOHN SUTTON, assumed the name of DUDLEY,† and from him is stated to have derived

THOMAS DE DUDLEY, who settled at Clapton, in the county of Northumberland, and was one of the lords of Clapton Manor. His grandson, — DE DUDLEY, married, in 1394, AGNES HOTOT,

* Prince George of Denmark, the husband of Queen ANNE, in passing through Bristol, went to the Exchange, accompanied by one gentleman only, and remained there until the merchants had pretty generally withdrawn, none of whom had sufficient resolution to speak to him. At length a person of the name of John Duddlestone, a bodice maker, mustered the necessary courage, and going up to the prince, inquired if he were not the husband of Queen ANNE? Having learned that this was the case, Duddlestone said he had observed with much concern that none of the merchants had invited the prince home to dinner; but this was not for want of love to the queen or to him, but because they did not consider themselves prepared to receive so great a man. He added that he was ashamed to think of his royal highness dining at an inn, and therefore entreated that he would go home and dine with him, and bring the gentleman along with him, informing him that he had a good piece of beef and a plum pudding, with ale of his dame's own brewing. The prince admired the loyalty of the man, and though he had ordered dinner at the White Lion, he accompanied the bodice maker home. Duddlestone called his wife, who was up stairs, desiring her to put on a clean apron and come down, for the queen's husband and another gentleman were come to dine with them. She immediately came down with her clean blue apron, and was immediately saluted by the prince. In the course of dinner, the prince invited his host to town and to bring his wife with him, at the same time giving him a card to facilitate the eventual heiress of the ancient family of Hotot, and from that marriage lineally descended

I. WILLIAM DUDLEY, esq. of Clapton, in Northamptonshire, who was created a BARONET 1st August, 1660. Sir William m. first, a daughter of M. de Pleure; secondly, Jane, daughter of Sir Roger Smith, knt. of Edmondthorp, in the county of Leicester, but these ladies both died issueless. Crest.—On a ducal crown or, a woman's head with a helmet thereon, hair dishevelled, throat-latch loose ppr.

Note.—The occasion of obtaining this crest is thus mentioned in a manuscript written in 1390 by a monk who was parson of Clapton:—"The father of AGNES HOTOT, the great heiress who married Dudley, having a dispute with one Ringsdale about the title to a piece of land, they agreed to meet on the disputed ground his introduction at court. A few months after, Duddlestone, with his wife behind him on horseback, set out for London, where they soon found the prince, and were by him introduced to the queen. Her majesty received them most graciously, and invited them to an approaching dinner, informing them that they must have new clothes for the occasion. They were allowed to choose for themselves, when they both selected purple velvet, such as the prince then had on. The dresses were prepared, and they were introduced by the queen herself as the most loyal persons in Bristol, and the only ones in that city who had invited the prince, her husband, to their house. After the entertainment was over, the queen desired Duddlestone to kneel, and a sword on his head, and, as use Lady Duddlestone's own words, said to him, "Ston up, Sir Jan." He was then offered money or a place under government; but he would not accept either, informing the queen that he had £50 out at interest, and he apprehended that the number of people he saw about court must be very expensive. The queen made Lady Duddlestone a present of her gold watch from her side, which her ladyship considered so great an ornament that she never went to market without having it suspended over her blue apron.—Percy Anecdotes.

and decide the affair by combat. Hotot on the day appointed was laid up with the gout, but his daughter AGNES, rather than the land should be lost, armed herself cap-a-pee, and mounting her father's steed, went and encountered RINGSDALE, whom, after a stubborn contest, she unhorsed; and when he was on the ground, she loosened her throat-latch, lifted up her helmet, and let down her hair about her shoulders, thus discovering her sex." In commemoration of this exploit the crest was adopted and ever afterwards used.

DUDLEY, OF KILSCORAN HOUSE.

CREATED 17th April, 1813.—EXTINCT 1st Feb. 1824.

Lineage.

I. SIR HENRY BATH-DUDLEY, who was created a BARONET in 1813, derived from a respectable family settled in Worcestershire and Staffordshire as early as the reign of CHARLES I. He was born at Penny Compton, 25th August, 1745. His father, the REV. HENRY BATH, held for many years the living of St. Nicholas, Worcester; and being afterwards presented to the rectory of North Farmbridge, in Essex, removed with his family into that county, and took up his abode at Chelmsford. In this latter benefice his son Henry, who took holy orders, succeeded him at his death; but the emoluments of the living being but trifling, he turned his thoughts towards the public press, and established the "Morning Post" newspaper. A few years afterwards, in 1780, he originated the "Morning Herald," to which he devoted much of his time; commencing also about the same time the "Courier de l'Europe," a journal printed in the French language, and the "English Chronicle." At this period he was the intimate associate of most of the wits of the day, and was a contributor to the "Probationary Odes," the "Rolliad," and other works of a similar class. In 1781, the advowson of the valuable rectory of Bradwell-juxta-Mare was purchased in trust for him, subject to the life of the Rev. George Pawson; in consequence of which, he is said to have expended during the lifetime of that incumbent upwards of £28,000 in repairs, embankments, plantations, &c. for the benefit of the living. In 1784 he assumed the name of Dudley, in compliance with the will of a relation belonging to that family. Mr. Pawson dying in 1797, Mr. Dudley presented himself to the vacant benefice, but doubts having arisen in the mind of the Bishop of London as to the legality of the transaction, his lordship refused institution, and a compromise was at length effected by the proposed substitution of the Rev. Richard Birch, a brother-in-law of the patron. This arrangement was, however, made too late; inasmuch as the delay had caused a lapse of the living to the crown, which bestowed it on the Rev. Mr. Gamble, chaplain-general to the army. The case was thought a hard one, and a petition signed by the Lord Braybrooke, the Lord Lieutenant of Essex, and most of the magistrates and gentry of the county, was forwarded to ministers, enumerating the services of Mr. Dudley in his capacity as a magistrate, under very trying circumstances, for which he had been publicly thanked by Lord Kenyon when on the circuit. A favourable answer was returned; and in 1804 he was presented to the living of Kilscoran, barony of Forth, Ireland, to which was soon added the chancellorship of the diocese of Ferns. In 1807, the Duke of Bedford, then lord-lieutenant of Ireland, gave him the rectory of Kilglass, in the county of Longford, which he retained until 1812, when he resigned all his Irish preferment for the living of Willingham, in Cambridgeshire; his relation, Mr.

Birch, having been in the meantime instituted to the long-disputed rectory of Bradwell on the decease of Mr. Gamble. Shortly after, Mr. Dudley obtained a Baronetcy; and in 1816, the dignity of a prebend in Ely Cathedral, which he retained till the day of his death, 1st February, 1824.

Of a comprehensive mind and active habits, Sir Henry distinguished himself on many occasions as a useful magistrate; while his literary abilities were manifested in the composition of a variety of dramatic pieces, some of which still maintain their footing on the stage. Among these are "The Fitch of Bacon," written for the purpose of introducing his friend Shield to the public as a composer; "The Woodman;" "The Rival Candidates;" "The Blackmoor Washed White," (at the representation of which, party spirit ran so high as to produce a serious conflict, in which swords were drawn, &c. among the audience); "The Travellers in Switzerland;" and lastly, a short but popular piece, brought out about thirty years since under the title of "At Home." To his discriminating patronage the country is mainly indebted for discovering and fostering the talents of Gainsborough the painter; and he is said to have been one of the first to appreciate those of Mrs. Siddons, whom he introduced to Garrick. His person was handsome and athletic; while, in his earlier years, the warmth of his temperament betrayed him, notwithstanding his cloth, into several quarrels. The cause of two of these rencontres (with Messrs. Fitzgerald and Miles) is said to have been Mrs. Harsley, an actress, celebrated for her beauty, who, singularly enough, after the lapse of half a century, died on the very same day with her quondam champion. A third, of more equivocal character, fought with Mr. Stoney Boves, made a great noise at the time. Sir Henry, at the time of his decease, was a magistrate for seven English counties and four in Ireland. He m. ELLYS, OF WYHAM.

CREATED
30th June, 1660.

EXTINCT
14th Jan. 1742.

Lineage.

The name of ELLYS is of old standing in the county of Lincoln, of which the parish church of Great Panton bore evidence, that ancient structure having been erected by Anthony Ellys, esq. who had married a lady of the family of Ascough, as appeared by his and her arms, and the inscription on the tower of the church.

A younger branch of the family had formerly settled in Bedfordshire, and possessed the lordship of Norhill there, but that branch is long extinct.

SIR THOMAS ELLYS, who received the honour of knighthood from Queen ELIZABETH, was great grandfather* of

I. THOMAS ELLYS, esq. of Wyham, in the county of Lincoln, who was created a BARONET 30th June, 1660, for his eminent services to the house of Stewart. Sir Thomas m. Anne, daughter of Sir John Stanhope, of Elvestan, and niece of Philip, first Earl of Chesterfield, by whom he had issue, other clue to any of the sons.

If these sons were legitimate, the eldest would have succeeded to the BARONETCY at the death of his father. At the decease of their mother, called Dame Johanna Elwes, formerly Bobulia, none of her kin appear to have taken out letters of administration to her effects.

ENGLEFIELD, OF WOTTON BASSET.

CREATED
25th Nov. 1612.

EXTINCT
21st March, 1822.

Lineage.

This ancient family, according to Camden, was named from the town of Englefield, or Englesfeld, in Berkshire, of which place they are stated to have been proprietors, in the second year of King EGBERT, A.D. 803. In several pedigrees

HASCULFUS DE ENGLEFYLD, is first mentioned, as Lord of Englefyld, about the time of Canute, afterwards in the fourth year of HAROLD Harefoot, and again in the reign of HARDICANUTE. He died temp. EDWARD the Confessor. This Hasculf purchased a hide of land, in Englefeld, of Hasculf de Pinkeny, to which deed Hely Englefeld, son to another Hasculf Englefeld, was witness.

GUY DE ENGLEFYLD, son and heir of Hasculf, lived in the time of WILLIAM the Conqueror, and was father of

HELY DE ENGLEFELD, living temp. WILLIAM Rufus, who had two sons, WILLIAM and Peter: the elder,

WILLIAM DE ENGLEFELD, gave the parsonage of Englefeld, to the abbey of Reading, Joseph being then abbot in the reign of HENRY I., as appears by his deed, sans date, sealed with his seal, which deed recites that he gave the said parsonage to the said Joseph, and the convent there, and their successors, in consideration that his ancestors, in time past, had done so, long before his days. This gift of the Church of Englefeld, soon after is mentioned in a charter of King HENRY II. wherein he confirms the several donations to the Abbot of Reading, but without notice of the donor's name. This WILLIAM had three sons,

WILLIAM (Sir), who d. s. p.
ALAN (Sir).
Thomas.

The second son,

SIR ALAN DE ENGLEFELD, was father of

WILLIAM DE ENGLEFELD, who was living in the time of RICHARD I. and was s. by his son,

JOHN ENGLEFELD, of Englefeld, father of

SIR WILLIAM ENGLEFELD, presumed to be the person mentioned with Geoffrey de Leukners, in an inquisition to enquire about lands, given by King JOHN to Margery de Lacy, to found the priory of Acornbury, in the county of Hertford, and by the name of William de Englefeld, is recorded as one of the justices itinerant for the counties of Sussex, Southampton, and Wilts, anno 1255, 39 HENRY III.; and for Norfolk and Suffolk, 41 HENRY III. 1262, for Bedford, Essex, Hertford, and Kent; and 47 HENRY III. 1263, for Southampton and Wilts. Sir William's son and heir,

SIR JOHN DE ENGLEFELD died in the 4th of EDWARD I. 1276. He was likewise Lord of Shiplake, Ascott, &c. His son and successor,

SIR WILLIAM DE ENGLEFELD, died in France, in the reign of EDWARD I. having had issue ROGER (Sir), Andrew, and William. The eldest,

SIR ROGER DE ENGLEFELD, was returned one of the knights for Berkshire, in the parliament 6th EDWARD II. 1313, and dying 36th EDWARD III. 1362, left by Joan, his wife, a daughter, Alice, the wife of Mortely, and two sons, PHILIP (Sir), and William, the elder of whom,

SIR PHILIP DE ENGLEFELD, enjoyed the ancient inheritance, and died 3 RICHARD II. 1390; by Joan his wife he had three sons,

I. JOHN (Sir), knight of the shire for Berks, 21st RICHARD II. He had posterity to the third generation, but the line expiring without male issue, the estate devolved upon the descendants of his next brother.

II. PHILIP.

III. Nicholas, of Ricet, in the county of Oxford, comptroller of the household to RICHARD II. m. Jane, daughter and heir of John Clark, of Lanyston-Gernon, and d. 1st April, 1415, as appears by his epitaph in Ashdon Church, Essex.* He left two daughters, his co-heirs, viz.

CICELY, m. to William Fowler.

SRAT, m. to Richard Quatermains, and Ricote passed to that family, from whom it eventually went to the Norris's, created Baron Norris of Rycote, and eventually centred in the Earls of Abingdon.

The second son,

PHILIP ENGLEFELD, esq. m. Alice, daughter and heir of Walter Rossale, and sister and heir of Sir John Rossale, knt. and thereby acquired the Isle of Rossale, Udlington, Eton, and Yeagden, in the county of Salop. He had issue, PHILIP, his successor.

ROBERT.

The elder son,

PHILIP ENGLEFELD, esq. of Englefeld, served the office of sheriff of Berkshire in 1430, and died in nine years after, without issue, and was s. by his brother,

ROBERT ENGLEFELD, esq. of Englefeld, who d. in 1473, and was s. by his grandson,

SIR THOMAS ENGLEFELD, of Englefeld; (son of John Englefeld, by Joan, daughter of John Milborn,) who received the honour of knighthood on the marriage of Prince ARTHUR, son of HENRY VII. In 1496, he was elected speaker of the House of Commons, and in 1505, was made judge or justice of Chester, which office he held until his death and was speaker of the first parliament called by HENRY VIII. He m. Margery, daughter of Sir Richard Danvers, knt. of Prescott, and had, with other issue,

Richard, who d. without issue.

THOMAS, successor to his father.

Elizabeth, m. to Robert White, esq.

Joan, m. to Henry Bonham, esq.

Anne, m. to William Delabere, esq.

Margaret, m. to John Lyngen, esq.

He was s. by his son,

SIR THOMAS ENGLEFELD, of Englefeld, who was sheriff of the counties of Berks and Oxford in 1520, and having been educated at the Middle Temple, was the next year autumnal reader, and called to the dignity of the coif by letters patent, dated 3rd December, 1524. He had £100 per annum granted to him for life, and three years after was constituted one of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas, having received the honour of knighthood. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Robert Throckmorton, knt. of Coughton, and had issue,

FRANCIS (Sir), his successor.

Thomas.

Anne, m. to Humphrey Coningsby, esq. ancestor of the Earls of Coningsby.

Susan, m. to Humphrey Burdet, esq.

Margaret, m. first to George Carew, esq. and secondly, to Sir Edward Saunders, knt. lord chief baron of the Exchequer, temp. ELIZABETH.

He died in 1532, and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR FRANCIS ENGLEFELD, of Englefeld, who was sheriff of the counties of Berks and Oxford, at the death of HENRY VIII. and first year of Edward VI. and received the honour of knighthood 22nd February, 1547. He was one of the chief officers in the Princess MARY's family, and one of those sent by the protector and council to prohibit the hearing and celebrating mass in her highness's house; but refusing to deliver such orders, and submitting rather to any punishment, he was committed for several months to prison, with Sir Robert Rochester, Sir Walgrave, and Dr. Francis Mallet, the princess's chaplain. Upon Queen MARY's accession to the throne, he was, in consideration of his faithful services, sworn of the privy council, appointed master of the wards, and had from the crown, the manor and park of Fulbrook, in the county of Warwick, to hold in capite, being part of the forfeited lands of the attainted John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland. He sat in parliament, in the same reign, for the county of Berks; but on Elizabeth's accession, he was obliged, with Sir Thomas Gage, Sir Thomas Shelley, and others, to depart the kingdom. In the 6th of ELIZABETH, he was indicted in the King's Bench for high treason committed at Nemures, in partibus transmarinis, and outlawed. He was subsequently attainted and convicted of high treason, at the parliament, 29th October, 23 ELIZABETH, and all his manors, lands, and vast possessions were declared forfeited to the queen; but Sir Francis, having by indenture of the 18th of the same reign, settled his manor and estate of Englefeld on Francis, his nephew, with power, notwithstanding, of revoking his grant, if he, during his natural life, should deliver or tender to his nephew a gold ring; with intent to make void the uses of his said settlement, various disputes and points of law arose, whether the said manor and estate of Englefeld were forfeited to the queen; but the case, after protracted discussion, not appearing clear, the queen, in the ensuing parliament, 35 ELIZABETH, had a special act passed to confirm the attainder, and to establish the forfeiture to herself, her heirs, and assigns; enacting that the queen should take the advantage of revocating an assurance, with a condition made by him upon the tender of a ring of gold to his nephew, &c.; and the queen in consequence tendering by R. Broughton and H. Bouchier, the ring to Englefeld, the nephew, seized and confiscated the said manors and estate, and many other possessions. By this arbitrary stretch of power, the manor and estate of Englefeld, which had been upwards of 780 years in the family, were alienated and transferred to the crown. Sir Francis retired to Valladolid, in Spain, where he was a bountiful benefactor to the English College, and being worn out with persecution and years, died, and was buried there, about the year 1592. He m. Catharine, daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Fettiplace, of Compton Beauchamp, in the Vale of Berks; but having no issue, the representation of the family devolved upon his brother, JAMES ENYON, esq. of Honingham, Warwickshire, who purchased the manor of Flore, in Northamptonshire, died 26th September, 1623, leaving by Constance his wife, a son and successor.

JAMES ENYON, esq. of Flore, who m. Dorothy, eldest daughter of Thomas Coxo, esq. of Bishops Itchington, in Warwickshire, and by her, who m. secondly, John Wyrley, esq. of Dodford, and died in 1678, aged eighty-three, had, with two daughters, Constance, m. in 1631, to Robert Wither, esq. of Sywell, and Alice, m. to Hannibal Horsey, esq. of Honingham, a son.

DOROTHY, m. to Thomas Stanley, esq. son and heir of JANE GARRARD, m. to Montagu Drake, esq. of Shardeloes.

Sir James Enyon, before the expiration of the year in which he was created a baronet, fell in a duel with Sir Nicholas Crispe. Both parties were volunteers in the royal cause, and the dispute arose at their quarters in Gloucestershire. The fatal result made an indelible impression on the mind of the survivor, who ever after wore mourning, except in the field of battle, when he cherished the hope of being united to his friend by a fortunate bullet; and through life, hallowed every return of the melancholy anniversary, by closing his chamber in darkness, and devoting himself to fasting and prayer. Sir James Enyon dying without male issue, the title expired with him. The manor of Flore, after passing through many families, is now the property of that of PACK.

Mills, the tithes of Hexham, Acumbe, Anicke, Sandhoe Wall, and Fallowfield. In 1618 he purchased Rothley, of Lord Eure, and in 1682 the regality of Hexham, with its long train of manors. He was in parliament for Cocker mouth and for the county of Northumberland, 23 JAMES I. and 1, 12, 13, 15, and 16 CHARLES I. which last named king, in 1628, created him a baronet. As a member of the House of Commons in the long parliament, his loyalty was so conspicuous as to procure him the honour of being put into the band of brave men, who, on January 22, 1643, were discharged and disabled for sitting and being any longer members of the House during that parliament, for deserting the service of the house, and being in the king's quarters, and adhering to that party. He died about 1658. Sir John had issue by his first wife, Catharine, daughter of Sir Henry Slingsby, knight of Serium in the west Riding of Yorkshire, three children, John Fenwicke, esq. a colonel of a regiment of dragoons, *m. The eldest son,

II. SIR WILLIAM FENWICKE, of Wallington, aged forty-five in 1666, who was returned in 1613, to the long parliament in the room of his father, then discharged from it, and became a staunch supporter of the Commonwealth. He died in 1676, and left by Jane, his wife, daughter of Henry Stapleton, esq. of Wighill, Yorkshire, a son and heir,

III. SIR JOHN FENWICKE, of Fenwicke and Wallington, a member of the healing parliament 25th April, 1660, and of the successive parliaments of CHARLES II. and JAMES II. He, Sir John, possessed considerable talent, and was romantically attached to the House of Stuart, but his "moral character," as a supporter of him in his trial observed, "was none of the best." He alienated the estates of a long line of ancestry, was attainted of high treason, and beheaded; but he had splendid traits in his character, and good men pitied his death on account of the harsh and unconstitutional measure by which it was accomplished. After the great fire of London in 1666, he built the great Hall in Christ's Hospital, in which the boys dine and sup. His restless spirit had led him, in the year 1694, to assist in concerting plans for the restoration of King JAMES II. but in 1696, finding that government was acquainted with his proceedings, he set out for France, but was apprehended at New Romney, in Kent, committed to the tower, and indicted at the Old Bailey on the oaths of George Porter, esq. and Cordel Goodman, gent. on the 28th of May of that year, for "compassing and imagining the death and destruction of the king, and adhering to his enemies," and finding his case a bad one, he and his friends, by various plans and suggestions, got his trial put off till they had succeeded by golden persuasions in removing Goodman out of the country. There was therefore now only one witness against him, and as parliament had just before passed a law "That no person should be tried or attainted of high treason, when corruption of blood is incurred, but by the oath of two lawful witnesses, unless the party confess, stand mute," &c. he probably began to rely on the uniform practice of the bench to judge by law or precedent, and to hope that proceedings against him would be stayed. He was advised too to try the experiment of softening William's heart, by a full disclosure of his own and his confederates' guilt in a written account of their plans and proceedings. Besides the persons immediately engaged with him in "the plot," Admiral Russell, Lord Marlborough, the Duke of Shrewsbury, Lords Godolphin and Both, Sir Ralph Delaval, and others, all eminently known and believed to be in the interest of the government, and none but which were in some post of trust and employment in it, were accused in his informations, "of correspondencies and intrigues carried on with the court of St. Germain, and though this account is known now to be true in every particular, it neither gained William's favour, nor served the design of Fenwicke. William indeed is said to have entertained a personal enmity against Fenwicke, for some expressions reflecting on his conduct, when he served in the army in Holland. On the 6th of November, 1696, the king laid these informations before the House of Commons, which brought in a bill of attainder against him, summoned him to its bar, and endeavoured to draw further confessions from him, which he steadily declined to do, alleging that he had made a full disclosure to the king. The bill was supported and opposed with great zeal and ability. Powerful arguments were advanced to justify parliament in proceeding to judgment upon bills of attainder, contrary to the rules and maxims of Westminster Hall. On the opposite side it was shewn that parliament could not consistently move an enactment contrary to the salutary law it had passed in the last session, that no one should be convicted of treason but on the oath of two witnesses. But the stern spirit that ruled the land in William's day was a stranger to mercy: Sir John was condemned by a law made on purpose to stain the scaffold with his blood, made after the crime was done for which he was accused by a guilty oppressor, a proceeding "which cannot be too much condemned as a breach of the most sacred and unalterable rules of justice," which will stand as a lasting reproach upon the persons who commenced and supported it.* The ayes for the act were 189, noes 130, majority 59. In the House of Lords the majority was only seven, and forty peers, seven of whom were bishops, entered their protest against it. One act of mercy was allowed to Sir John, he was not dragged through the street to be hanged at Tyburn as the law required, but the king in consideration it is supposed of the high rank of Lady Fenwicke, by his writ of 18th January, 1697, omitted all execution of the act of forfeiture except beheading him on Tower Hill, which was done on the 27th of that month. He met his fate with great firmness and composure in the fifty-second year of his age. His body was buried near the altar of St. Martin's church, near those of his three sons, Charles, who died s. p. of the small-pox, aged sixteen, William died, aged six years, Howard died, aged one and a-half, all buried in St. Martin's, London. His only daughter and eldest child, Jane Fenwicke, was buried in St. Nicholas, Newcastle. Sir John's wife was Lady Mary Howard, eldest daughter of Charles, Earl of Carlisle. This faithful and amiable lady exerted herself with the most devoted zeal and tenderness to save the life of her husband. She endeavoured with the agency of one Chancy to get the two witnesses to withdraw, and succeeded with Goodman, but the upright Captain Porter after taking a bribe of £300, made a discovery to government. She also requested to be a sharer with him in his confinement, which he would not permit, because "he knew it would kill her." The following inscription is on a monument in the Howard aisle, in York Cathedral. "This monumental pillar is erected and dedicated by the Right Honourable the Lady Mary Fenwicke, eldest daughter to Charles Howard, Earl of Carlisle, as a testimony of respect to the memory of Sir John Fen-

FIREBRACE, OF LONDON.

CREATED
25th July, 1608.

EXTINCT
28th Mar. 1750.

Lineage.

This family was presumed to have been Norman, and to have derived its surname from the French words Fier-à-bras, strong of arm, but at what period it came into England is not ascertained.

In the visitation of Leicestershire, anno, 1682, the pedigree begins with ROBERT FIREBRACE, gent. of the town and borough of Derby, who died in 1645, having had issue by his wife, Susanna, daughter of John Hierome, of London, merchant, six sons, and one daughter, viz.

Robert, who d. unm.

HENRY.

Rebecca, m. to Thomas Moseley, esq. of Loughborough, in the county of Leicester.

The youngest son,

HENRY FIREBRACE, esq. b. 2nd October, 1600, of Stoke-Golding, in the county of Leicester, was chief clerk of the kitchen to King CHARLES the First, and adhered with great fidelity to that unhappy prince. When his majesty was confined in Carisbrook Castle, Mr. Firebrace engaged with Mr. Barrow, Mr. Titus, and Mr. Cresset, to effect his deliverance, and for that purpose a vessel was provided, horses procured, and every other matter arranged, but the project proved abortive. The particulars of the affair is related at great length in the life of Dr. Barwick. "Mr. Firebrace had the honour, it seems, to be known to the king, by several services he had done him in the time of the treaty at Uxbridge, at Oxford, and other places; and being at Newcastle, when the Scots delivered his majesty to the English, and new servants were put about him, by his majesty's direction he applied to some of the commissioners, and prevailed to be admitted to that post; in which attending his majesty in his confinement, he found means to concert with him several methods of escape. One, he says, was, that his majesty should come out of his bedchamber window, which having found wide enough for his head, his majesty concluded would not be too narrow for his body, and therefore rejected his proposal of making it a little wider for fear that should occasion a discovery. Mr. Worsley, (the late Sir Edward,) Mr. Richard Osborne, and Mr. John Newland, of Newport, were all engaged in the secret, and very faithful, the two former waiting on horseback beyond the counterscarp, with a good horse, &c. for his majesty, to carry him to Newland's boat that was ready, and Mr. Firebrace prepared to receive him, as he was to let himself down by a cord from the window, and conduct him across

* In the east window of this chapel, are the pictures of men in armour, having on their surcoats the arms of Fetplace, which seem of great antiquity. The family has long flourished in divers parts of the county of Berks, as at North Denclworth, Maidenot, &c. and we find a the court, (no sentinel being in the way,) to the great wall of the castle, and thence let him down by a stick on a long cord. The signal given, his majesty put himself forward but then too late found himself mistaken, he sticking fast between his breast and shoulders, and not able to get forward or backward, but that at the instant before he endeavoured to get out, he mistrusted, and tied a piece of his cord to a bar of the window within, by means whereof he forced himself back. This attempt thus failing, Mr. Firebrace sent for files and aquafortis from London, to make the passages more easy, and to help in other designs which he proposed, but while they were thus concerting new plans for the escape, Hammond was directed from above to have a careful eye on those about the king which occasioned Mr. Firebrace, and others to be dismissed; and in Mr. Firebrace's absence, the other attempt, of which Lord Clarendon gives account, and confounds it with this, was as fruitlessly made." This Henry Firebrace, who afterwards received the honour of knighthood, was appointed by King CHARLES II. chief clerk of the kitchen, clerk comptroller super-numerary of his majesty's household, and assistant to his majesty's officers of the green cloth. He m. first, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Davell, of Stoke Golding, and had issue by her,

I. SIR BASIL FIREBRACE, was a merchant of the city of London, and having served the office of sheriff in 1687, received the honour of knighthood. He was created a BARONET by King WILLIAM III. 28th July, 1698. Sir Basil m. Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Hough, of London, merchant, and had issue,

Sir Edward Fitton, who was a distinguished officer in the royal service, died shortly after the taking of Bristol in 1643, without surviving issue, when the BARONETCY became EXTINCT. After the demise of Sir Edward, a violent dispute arose between Charles, Lord Brandon, and Alexander Fitton, esq. for the inheritance of the estates, and a very curious tract was published in 1663, giving a narrative of the proceedings that ensued. From that statement it appears that Sir Edward Fitton resolved, in 1641, to restore the ancient entail of the Gawsworth estate, and settled the same by indenture on William Fitton, his next male kinsman. The said settlement is said to be confirmed by deed poll dated 3rd April, 18 CHARLES I. by Sir Edward Fitton. This narrative further asserts that when importuned by divers people, and also immediately before his death, he said he would rather settle his estate on Ned Fitton, the bonny beggar, (a man who kept beggars from his gate) than any one of his sisters' children. Nevertheless, a will was brought forward by Lord Gerard, nineteen years after Sir Edward Fitton's death, and after the most singular species of litigation, his lordship succeeded in obtaining possession of the property. From his son the second Earl of Macclesfield, Gawsworth passed to Lady Mohun, daughter and heiress of his sister, and co-heiress, with Charlotte Mainwaring. Having subsequently vested, under Lord Mohun's will, in his second wife, Elizabeth Lawrence, it passed to Anne Griffiths, issue of the said Elizabeth by a first marriage, and was sold by the trustees of her marriage settlement to her husband, the Rt. Hon. William Stanhope, from whom it has descended to Charles, present Earl of Harrington.

Afterwards, being forced for his loyalty to forsake his preferment, he betook himself to the wars, and became chaplain to the regiment of John, Earl of Rivers, and in the quality of a chaplain he continued to the end of the wars. In 1642 he was, by the king's special command, honoured with the degree of doctor of divinity for the service he did him at Edge Hill fight, and soon after was made chaplain to Charles, Prince of Wales, and rector of Sutton Coldfield, in the county of Warwick. After the wars were ceased, and he ejected thence, he became tutor to three earls, viz. to the Earl of Lichfield, Earl of Kilmare, and Earl of Stirling; afterwards, to two dukes, namely, to Esme, Duke of Richmond and Lenox, with whom he travelled into France (where he died), and to Charles, who succeeded him in the dukedom. † Sir William Fleetwood, of Cranford, receiver of the Court of Wards, m. Joan, sister to the Lord Clifton, by whom he had three sons: Miles, the elder, was receiver of the Court of Wards, and George, the third, went out to Sweden, was a famous general there, and created a baron; he was father of Gustavus, Baron Fleetwood of Sweden. CHARLES FLEETWOOD, commonly called LORD FLEETWOOD, was general and commander-in-chief to RICHARD CROMWELL, the Protector, and m. for his first wife, the widow of General Ireton, Oliver Cromwell's daughter, but had no issue. Fleetwood, Clarendon says, "was a weak man, but very popular with all the praying part of the army; a man, whom the parliament would have trusted, if they had not resolved to have no general; being as confident of his fidelity to them as any man's, and Lambert knew well he could govern him, as Cromwell had done Fairfax, and then in like manner lay him aside; and when any intelligence was brought of any murmur amongst the soldiers, by which a revolt might ensue, and he was desired to go amongst them, to confirm them, he would fall on his knees to prayers, and could hardly be prevailed on to go to them; and when he was amongst them, and in the middle of any discourse, he would invite them all to prayers, and put himself on his knees before them: and when some of his friends importuned him to appear more vigorous in the charge he had, without which they must all be destroyed, they could get no other answer from him, than 'God had spit on his face, and would not hear him': so that men ceased to wonder why Lambert had preferred him to the office of general, and had been content with the second command himself."

General Fleetwood's daughter, Elizabeth, married Sir John Hartopp, M.P. and was ancestor of the present Sir Edmund Cradock Hartopp, bart. of Freathby.

His grandfather married Sibill, the second daughter and co-heir of Laurence St. Martin, by Sibilla, daughter and heir of Sir John Losty, which coats of arms are in consequence introduced in the windows at Aldermaston, as is also the coat of Zouche, of Deam, in consequence of another ancestor having married the daughter and heir of Olivia de Zouch. † Anthony Forster, of Cunnor in Berks, so celebrated in the history of Leicester and Amy Robsart, was, as his monumental inscription shows, no relation to this family.

‡ The descent of the Aldermaston property has never been distinctly traced, but there would appear to have been four generations of Richards, beginning with Richard the grantee, temp. HENRY I. and terminating in a daughter and heir, married to a Delamere, perhaps Sir Peter Delamere, and father or grandfather of Sir Thomas Delamere, knight of the holy sepulchre, and sheriff of Berks in 1473. This Anglo-Saxon family, traced on proofs for nine descents in the Visitation of 1620, is of very great antiquity, and is considered to have existed at Fowellscombe, in the parish of Ugborough, Devon, previously to the Conquest. (See BURKE'S Commoners, vol. iv.)

JOHN DE FOCHILL, or DE FOWHILL, son and heir of ROGER, stated to have derived his descent from another John by the daughter and heiress of Coome, lived in the thirteenth century, and m. the daughter and heiress of TREVAZE, of Trevaze, in Cornwall, which manor remained with their descendants until the division of the estates of the elder branch of the family, in 1742, between the sisters of the last baronet. He made a settlement of his estates and property on the marriage of his eldest son and heir; but when on his death bed, his sons being reduced to two in number, the youngest of them, having only daughters, and the eldest only one surviving son, Sir Edmond strictly enjoined them to settle Fowellscombe Park and other manors and lands, on the heir male, William Fowell, of Black Hall. He was s. by his son,

Owing, however, to the omission by the person who drew up the instrument and superintended its execution, of one of the three required attesting signatures, the intentions of the testator, and of his predecessors, were defeated, and the will set aside, by Parker and Champernowne, the husbands of his sisters, notwithstanding these had fortunes indepen-

By them Fowellscombe Park, with all the manors and estates not appropriated by the second baronet to their fortunes, were held in coparcenary until August, 1712, when a partition was made by George Parker, his wife, Elizabeth, being dead, and their son and heir apparent, Edmund Parker; and Margaret Champernowne, at that time a widow. Under this agreement, the manors and estates of Harburtonford and Laudbrooke, &c. which included Higher and Lower Whichcombe, were allotted to the Parkers; and Fowellscombe Park, Bouterscombe, and other lands, to Mrs. Champernowne, who removed from Dartington House to Fowellscombe, and there died, 13th March, 1729. By her will, dated 3rd January preceding, she gave £2000 to Arthur, the eldest son of her eldest son; £800 to her daughter, who had married her relative, John Williams, esq. of Stowford, and other legacies; after which she devised all her freehold manors and estates in Devon and Cornwall, including Fowellscombe Park, to her younger son, Henry. He also made it his residence, and died in 1757, without issue, when his nephew and heir, Arthur Champernowne, of Dartington House, heir also of his grandmother, Margaret Fowell, sold Fowellscombe to Mr. George Hebest, of Plymouth, by deed dated 9th January, 1759. His son and heir, George, banker of Plymouth, sold it on 13th March, 1784, to Mr. Thomas King, of Plymouth, who dying unm. 13th January, 1792, left it to his three brothers, John, Richard, and Robert. This John King, esq. is the present owner; but he has not resided in the county of Devon for several years past, and during that period Fowellscombe, a battlemented mansion of Elizabethan date, originally erected in the form of the sowan initial of the family name, has remained uninhabited. The park was in greater part divided off for tillage after its purchase by Mr. Herbert.

Sir Jacob was a merchant of great wealth, and, says an old writer, "a gentleman of exemplary probity, religiously practising in all his transactions, that excellent maxim, of doing as he would be done unto, of extensive charity to the poor, both by large legacies in money, and by twelve acres marsh land, called Oxleas, in the parish of Westham, Essex, appropriated for ever, many years before his decease, for the binding out of four apprentices, three of the parish of West, and one of the parish of East Ham; also three pounds issuing out thereof, to buy coals for the poor of Graecchurch Street, London, and the overplus to other pious uses: he gave likewise £10 per annum, for ever, for a lecture in the parish church of Needham Market, in Suffolk." GELL, OF HOPTON.

CREATED
29th Jan. 1641-2.

EXTINCT
14th July, 1719.

Lineage.

The GELLS were seated at Hopton, in Derbyshire, so early as the reign of EDWARD III. and the first recorded ancestor, Ralph Gell, is supposed to have married the heiress of Hopton. During the civil wars, he then chief of the family,

I. SIR JOHN GELL,* of Hopton, attained considerable eminence as a parliamentary leader; captured the city of Lichfield, and rendered very important services to his party in his native county. A MS. narrative of the services he performed, written by himself, for the purpose of refuting, as it appears, certain charges brought against him after the independents got into power, gives a full and interesting account of his actions, which tended, in no small degree, to the destruction of the royal cause in Derbyshire; indeed Lord Clarendon observes that, after a period, there was in that county no visible party for the king; the whole shire being under the power of Sir John Gell. Subsequently to the termination of the war, Sir John was much dissatisfied with the treatment he received from the parliament, and in 1650, he

* THOMAS GELL, esq. younger brother of Sir John, was a barrister of the Inner Temple, of extensive practice, recorder of the borough of Derby, and representative thereof in the last parliament of CHARLES I. He was a gentleman of distinguished abilities, and held the rank of lieutenant-colonel in his brother's regiment.

Sir John m. first, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Porcival Willoughby, of Wollaton, in the county of Nottingham, and secondly, Mary, daughter of Sir Francis Radcliffe, of Ordsall, in Lancashire, and widow of John Stanhope, esq. of Elvaston. Lineage.

This family derived its surname from GODOLPHIN, anciently written Godolghan, in Cornwall, which word in Cornish signifies a white eagle, and that emblem became the device on the shield of the family.

JOHN DE GODOLPHIN was living at the time of the Norman Conquest, and amongst other feudal possessions, was lord of the manor of Godolphin, where he resided. His lineal descendant,

JOHN GODOLPHIN, esq. of Godolphin, was sheriff of Cornwall in the 19th and 23rd of HENRY VII. and joint steward, with Sir Robert Willoughby, Lord Brooke, of the mines in Cornwall and Devonshire. His elder son and successor,

Sir William lived to an advanced age, and was several times elected knight of the shire for Cornwall, in the reign of HENRY VIII. and EDWARD VI. He was thrice sheriff in the former reign, once in the latter, and again in the reign of ELIZABETH; and he attained beside a high military reputation, particularly at the siege of Boulogne. Crew, in the survey of Cornwall, says, "He demeaned himself very valiantly beyond seas, as appeared by the scars he brought home, no less to the beautifying of his fame, than the disfiguring of his face." Margaret, m. to Sir Robert Verney.

Grace, m. to Sir John Sydenham, of Brimpton, Somersetshire.

He m. Mary, daughter and heir of Mr. Lawford, of Stapleton, near Bristol, and had an only son, who died before his father unmarried. Sir John having for a series of years lived on bad terms with his younger brother Samuel, threatened to disinherit him in favour of his sister's son, John Foote, esq. of Truro, and cut off the entail of the property before his son's death. This circumstance so alarmed Captain Goodere, that he formed the horrid resolution of murdering his brother, and executed his dreadful purpose 17th January, 1741. On the day of the murder, a friend at Bristol, who knew the mortal antipathy that existed between the brothers, invited them both to dinner in the hope of reconciling them, and they had parted in the evening in seeming amity. Captain Goodere had, however, watched his opportunity, and taken measures to ensure the perpetration of the horrid deed. Several of his crew, placed by the captain's orders in the street near College Green, seized Sir John as he passed, and under pretence that he was disordered in his senses, hurried him by violence to the ship, where the unfortunate gentleman was strangled by two sailors, named White and Mahony, Captain Samuel Goodere himself standing sentinel at the door while the crime was committed. Suffice it to add, that the murder was immediately discovered, and the captain,

III. SIR SAMUEL GOODERE, who of course had succeeded as third baronet, was tried, with his two accomplices, at Bristol, 26th March following, found guilty, and executed on the 15th April. This family by paternal extraction was of the surname of RUSSELL, of the same lineage as the Dukes of Bedford, and derive the name of GORGES from a maternal ancestor.

SIR THOMAS GRESHAM, knt. having become one of the most opulent merchants and eminent citizens of London, immortalized himself by founding the great mart, since so celebrated all over the world as the Royal Exchange. The ground upon which the structure is erected, was given by the city to Sir Thomas, and on the 7th June, 1566, he laid the foundation stone, accompanied by several aldermen, who each put down a piece of gold, which the workmen took up; the building was pursued with so much diligence, that it was completed in the November of the next year, and QUEEN ELIZABETH caused it to be proclaimed by herald and sound of trumpet, THE ROYAL EXCHANGE. Beside his public endowments, this enterprising citizen erected a magnificent structure, called Osterley House, in the county of Middlesex, (which afterwards came into the family of Child, and is now the property of the Earl of Jersey,*) where he entertained QUEEN ELIZABETH in the most sumptuous style. The queen on her arrival happening to offer an opinion that the court would be improved, were it separated in the centre by a wall; Sir Thomas, in the night time, sent for workmen to London, and before the morning dawn, two courts acknowledged the superior judgment of her majesty. "It is questioned, (says an old authority) whether the queen next day, was more contented with the conformity to her fancy, or more pleased with the surprise and sudden performance thereof, whilst her courtiers disported themselves with their several expressions, some avowing it was no wonder he should so change a building, who could build a change." "The House of Commons," we quote Maitland, "not forgetting the great offence committed against them by Sir Richard Gurney, the lord mayor, in causing his majesty's commission of array to be proclaimed in divers parts of the city, preferred several articles of impeachment against him; for which he was, by the sentence of the peers, not only degraded from the office of mayoralty, but likewise for ever rendered incapable of bearing any office and receiving any further honour, and also to remain a prisoner in the Tower of London during the pleasure of the House of Lords." Sir Richard did not long survive these misfortunes, but died a prisoner in 1647, when the BARONETCY became EXTINCT. He had been twice married, first to Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Sandford, esq. of Birchington, in the Isle of Thanet, and secondly, to Mrs. Elizabeth South, a widow, daughter of Richard Gosson, of London, goldsmith.

At the house of this Mr. Hales, Mr. L'Estrange was, when, by the communication which that part of Kent always hath with the ships which lie in the Downs, the report first did arise, that the fleet would presently declare for the king; and those seamen who came on shore, talked as if the city of London would join with them. * STRYPE, in his Memorials Ecclesiastical, says, "Sir James Hales, knt. of Kent, a pious and good man, and a just and able judge, under King HENRY and King EDWARD, was made a prisoner in the King's Bench, by the Bishop of Winchester, Lord Chancellor; and thence removed to the Counter, in Bread Street, and from thence to the Fleet; here, one Foster, a gentleman of Hampshire, laboured to persuade him to embrace the Popish doctrine, by his argument; That the error was without danger, but the truth full of peril. When it was known that Hales was inclinable to relent, Day, Bishop of Chichester, and Portman, a judge, came to him, (it being then the month of April, 1554), and did so earnestly deal with him, that they overcame him at last, after his having lain three weeks in that prison of the Fleet. But the trouble that arose in his conscience for what he had done, filled him with great terror, and overwhelmed him with sorrow; so that he attempted, in the absence of his servant, to kill himself with his pen-knife. For being ill, and lying sobbing and sighing, he sent down his servant upon an errand, and in the mean time wounded himself in divers places of his body; but his servant came in on the sudden, and at that time prevented his death. But after his recantation, being dismissed home unto his own country and habitation, conquered with grief and despair, he drowned himself in a shallow pond near his own house, which is shewn to this day."—The family of Beaksbourne denied, however, that he so destroyed himself, and said, "That Sir James retiring to his seat at Thanington, near Canterbury, amused himself with the pleasures of a country life, and crossing the river over a narrow bridge, as he was walking in his meadows, fell in accidentally, and was drowned, aged eighty-five."

many gentlemen of the country, who wished well, to visit the ships, and they returned more confirmed of the truth of what they had heard. Good fellowship was a vice spread everywhere; and this young great heir, who had been always bred among his neighbours, affected that which they were best pleased with; and so his house was a rendezvous for those who delighted in the exercise, and who every day brought him the news of the good inclinations of the fleet for the king; and all men's mouths were full of the general hatred the whole kingdom had against the parliament as well as the army. In this posture of affairs, Mr. L'Estrange easily induced Mr. Hales to put himself at the head of his own county, that was willing to be led by him; and his lady, who was full of zeal for the king, joining with him, the young gentleman resolved to do something for his majesty's service, at a juncture when the Scots were ready to march into England, and most parts of the kingdom ready to rise; but being not enough conversant in the affairs of the world, he referred himself and the whole business to be governed by Mr. L'Estrange, who was believed by his discourse to be an able soldier. Accordingly letters were sent to particular gentlemen, and warrants to the constables of hundreds, requiring in his majesty's name, all persons to appear at a time and place appointed, to advise together, and lay hold on such opportunities as should be offered for relieving the king, and delivering him out of prison.* And meeting accordingly, they unanimously elected Mr. Hales for their general: a good body of horse and foot was in consequence drawn together at Maidstone, Mr. Hales having taken up, on his own security, nearly eighty thousand pounds to defray the expense; and they were so strong, that the commander of the parliament forces, sent to suppress them, wrote word that he durst not advance. On the news of this commotion (the first in the kingdom), the Earl of Norwich was dispatched to Kent, to command as general. Upon the news of another general being sent, Mr. Hales retired, with his friend, Mr. L'Estrange, to Holland, and lived beyond seas, on account of the great debts he had contracted in the king's service.—The lady alluded to in the above narrative, as Sir Edward's wife, was the Hon. At the Revolution he was confined for a year and a half in the Tower: on his release he went to France, and in consideration of his services was created by the abdicated monarch Earl of Tenterden, with limitations to his brothers, John and Charles. ‡ Abstract from the Patent of Creation:

“James the Second, by the grace of God, &c.

“To our Archbishops, Dukes, &c.—Whereas it is a kingly act, and a singular testimony of our benevolence, to enable those persons we find worthy of our favour, as well that others may see how grateful the faithful duty of our subjects is to Us, as that they themselves may be encouraged to endeavour at great matters. Whereas, therefore, the fidelity of our well beloved and most faithful counsellor, Sir Edward Hales, of Hackington, otherwise St. Stephens, in our county of Kent, baronet, has been by various changes abundantly known to us, and likewise bring to our minds the ancient nobility of his family, as well on the father's as mother's side; and especially the great merit of Robert Hales, formerly Lord High Treasurer of our Kingdom of England, and the Prior of the Hospital, who upon account of a most prudent advice which he gave to our predecessor, King Richard the Second, had, on a popular sedition by the fury of the mob, his head struck off; and his father's great-grandfather, who in a rebellion, by reason of his fidelity towards the most serene kings, our father and brother of happy memory; besides what they otherwise suffered by the loss of liberties and legal possessions; and his great-grandfather, Sir Edward Hales, of Tunstall, in the county of Kent, baronet, suffered five years imprisonment in the Tower of London; and his father, Sir Edward Hales, of Tunstall, aforesaid, suffered banishment and confiscation of goods. His mother sprung from the ancient Earls of Hereford, and from the sister of St. Edward the Confessor; and finally, the said Sir Edward Hales, by his wise administration of many offices, and for his fidelity to us and the Catholic church, has with great fortitude suffered by the present rebellion, &c. &c.

“His oldest son, Edward, in the mean time, a youth, by the brightness of his wit, the politeness of his manners, the greatness of his mind, very dear to us, was killed in Ireland, at the battle of the Boyne, as he was courageously fighting against the enemy, &c. &c.

“Know ye therefore.” &c. &c.

Lineage.

THOMAS HALES, second son of Thomas de Hales, of Hales Place (see HALES OF WOODCHURCH, Extinct Baronets), was father of JAMES HALES, whose son,
JOHN HALES, had a son and heir,
THOMAS HALES, alderman of Canterbury, who a. a daughter of Trefe of Cornwall, and had four sons, viz.

- I. CHRISTOPHER, his heir.
II. JOHN,* clerk of the hanaper temp. HENRY VIII. DUGDALE, in his Antiquities of Warwickshire, mentions that "St. John's Hospital in Coventry was, by letters patent dated 23rd July, 37 HENRY VIII. with all the lands and possessions thereunto belonging, granted unto cepts for the Preservation of Health. When Queen Mary came to the crown, he fled beyond sea as voluntary exile, and settling at Frankfort, in Germany, we find him a zealous man for the uniting of the exiles there in peace. When Queen Elizabeth succeeded he returned, and the first thing that made him then to be noted was an oration to Queen Elizabeth at her first entrance to her reign; it was not spoken, but delivered in writing to her by a nobleman. He also wrote a little book in favour of the house of Suffolk, especially of the children of Edward Seymour, Earl of Hertford, eldest son of Edward, Duke of Somerset, who was married to the Lady Katherine Grey, daughter of Henry, Duke of Suffolk (of near alliance in blood to the queen), the effect of which was to derive the title of the crown of England, in case Queen Elizabeth should die without issue, to the house of Suffolk. This marriage, notwithstanding the Archbishop of Canterbury did by his sentence pronounce unlawful, yet

John Hales, gent. and his heirs; which John, being an active man in those days, and clerk of the hamper (an office then of no small benefit), and having accumulated a great estate in monastery and chantry lands, resolved to erect a lasting monument to his memory (for he had neither child nor wife), and thereupon designing the foundation of a free-school here, and that the king should have the honour thereof (for which respect he had no little favour in his purchases as I have credibly heard), obtained license for the amortizing of lands thereto of CC marks p. ann. value. This John Hales bought also the Whitefriars, in Coventry, of Sir Ralph Sadler, knight. He d. 5th Cal. January, 1572; and by will appointed Hales Place, alias Whitefriars, in Coventry, to be sold. He was buried in the church of St. Peter's the Poor, in Broad Street, London, as his epitaph, on a fair ancient plate in the wall, in Stow's Survey imports. But notwithstanding the before-specified appointment, the estate was not sold, for John Hales, esq. descended from Christopher, his eldest brother, enjoyed it.*

- III. Bartholomew, of Snitterfield, m. Mary, daughter and heir of George Harpur, esq. and was father of Sir Bartholomew Hales, knight, of Snitterfield, who m. Katherine, daughter of Sir Thomas Griesley, of Drakelow, in the county of Derby, relict of Francis De-thick, esq. of Newhall (she married for her third husband, Henry Gibbs, esq.) and by that lady had an only daughter, Elizabeth, who died before her father. I. JOHN HALES, esq. of Coventry, having succeeded his father, was created a BARONET by King CHARLES II. 28th August, 1660. Sir John m. Anne, daughter of Mr. Alderman Johnson, of London, and had issue,

It was purchased by John, Duke of Montagu, who conveyed it in 1722 to Samuel Hill, esq. of Shenston Park, in Staffordshire; the mansion-house was sold to two tradesmen in Coventry. our author Hales, who was esteemed a man very opinionative, though otherwise very learned, did maintain in the said book that their sole consent did legitmate their conjunction. Which pamphlet flying abroad, came straight-way to the court: whereupon the queen and the nobles being highly offended, the author was quickly discovered and forthwith imprisoned in the Tower of London. Soon after, Nicholas Bacon, then lord keeper, was presumed to have had a finger in it, for which he had like to have lost his office, if Sir Anthony Browne, who had been lord chief justice of the Common Pleas in Queen Mary's time, would have accepted of it, which his majesty offered to him, and the Earl of Leicester earnestly exhorted him to take it, but he refused it, for that he was of a different religion from the state: and so Sir Nicholas Bacon remained in his place, at the great instance of Sir William Cecil (afterwards lord treasurer), who though he was to be privy to the said book, yet was the matter so wisely laid upon Hales and Bacon, that Sir William was kept free, and thereby had more authority and grace to procure the others pardon, as he did. Soon after, John Lesley, Bishop of Ross, a great creature of Mary, Queen of Scots, did answer that book, for which he got the good-will of many, of others not. As for our author Hales, he gave way to fate on the 5th of the Kalends of January, in fifteen hundred, seventy and two. He died without issue, so that his estate, which chiefly lay in Warwickshire, of which his principal house in Coventry, called Hales Place, otherwise the White-friars, was part, went to John, son of his brother Christopher Hales (some time also an exile at Frankfurt), whose posterity doth remain there.*

He was afterwards himself condemned by the Protector for the murder of these men, and his life cost him no less a sum than thirty thousand pounds. He was sworn of the privy council, master of the rolls, and afterwards lord keeper of the great seal, temp. MARY. The estates of Sir Nicholas, his sons dying without issue, devolved upon his brother.*

II. JOHN.

The second son,

JOHN HARE, esq. having eventually inherited the estates of his brother, Sir Nicholas, became "of Stow-Bardolph." The name of this gentleman's wife is not mentioned, but it appears he was father of ten children, viz.

I. NICHOLAS, a benchor of the Inner Temple. This gentleman rebuilt, in 1589, the mansion house at Stow Bardolph, at an outlay of £40,000. He also built a very spacious dormitory adjoining to the chancel of Stow-Bardolph church, for depositing the remains of himself and family. He d. in 1591, s. p. leaving his estate to his next brother.

* Sir Nicholas purchased, in the year 1563, the liberty or franchise of the whole hundred of Checkclose, which comprises Stow-Bardolph, and thirty-one towns all adjoining, in which his descendants, as lords paramount, had, in virtue of that office, the execution of all writs whatsoever; held a court, in the nature of sheriff's turn, and a court every three weeks for the trial of actions, &c. within the hundred. In the patent is an express prohibition to the county sheriff and his officers, to enter into the hundred to do any act of authority, on any pretence or occasion whatsoever, except in default of the lord paramount's bailiff. This is a very ancient franchise, having been granted by King EDGAR to the abbey of Ramsey, where it remained, until HENRY VIII. at the dissolution of the monasteries, granted it to Lord North, who sold it to Sir Nicholas Hare.

Sir Ralph m. secondly, Anne, daughter of John Crouch, esq. of Cornbury, by whom (who m. secondly, Edward, Lord Montagu of Boughton) he had no issue. Sir Ralph was very remarkable for his extensive charity to the poor. In 1603 he erected a row of six houses at Stow-Bardolph, for the reception of six poor persons, who were born in the parish, or had resided constantly there, for ten years at least, and endowed the said houses with lands to a considerable value, to be a maintenance for the poor inhabitants thereof for ever. He gave in his lifetime by deed, bearing date 30th April, 1623, to St. John's College, Cambridge, the glebe, tithes, &c. of the impropriate rectory of Marham, in Norfolk, with the advowsons of the vicarage, which his grandfather, John Hare, had purchased from HENRY VIII. at the dissolution of the monasteries, to be employed in erecting a spacious library, and afterwards in maintaining thirty poor scholars in that college for ever. In Memory of Sr. Thos. Hare, Bart. who departed this Life the 1st day of January, 1693, aged 35 years, and left a lady and 4 Sons and 5 Daughters.

The Glorious Sun which sets at Night,
 Appears Next Morn as clear and bright;
 The Gaudy Deckings of the Earth,
 Do every Spring receive new Birth;
 But Life when fled has no return,
 In Vain we sigh, in Vain we Mourn;
 Yet does the Turtle justly grieve her fate,
 When she is left behind without her Mate,
 Not less does she who raised this Tomb,
 And wishes here to have a Room;

With that dear He who underneath does lye,
 Who was the Treasure of her Heart and pleasure of her Eye.

HARRIS, OF BOREATTON.

CREATED
22nd Dec. 1622.

EXTINCT
in 1685.

Lineage.

I. THOMAS HARRIS, esq. of Boreatton, in Shropshire, master in Chancery, son of Roger Harris, draper, of Shrewsbury, and grandson of William Harris, yeoman, of Wheathill, in the parish of Conover, was created a BARONET in 1622: an elevation which rather shocked the feelings of the age, for, at its first institution the baronetcy was confined to men of descent, and Captain Simon Leeke impeached Sir Thomas Harris in the court of Chivalry, as unworthy of the distinction. Nevertheless he transmitted the honour to his son and heir,

II. SIR PAUL HARRIS, of Boreatton, who succeeded his father in 1629, and served the office of sheriff of Shropshire in 1637. At the breaking out of the civil war, he remained firm in his allegiance, and was an active commissioner of array. "He sent out warrants," says Gough, "requiring and commanding all men, both householders with their sons and servants, and sojourners and others, within the hundred of Pimhill, that were between the age of sixteen and sixty, to appear, on a certain day, upon Myddle Hill. I was then about eight or nine years old, and went to see this great show; and there I saw a multitude of men; and upon the highest bank of the hill I saw one Robert More standing, with a paper in his hand, and three or four soldiers' pikes stuck upright in the ground by him, and there he made proclamation, that if any person would serve the king as a soldier in the wars, he should have fourteen groats a week for his pay. Sir Paul was a person," adds our rustic historian, "not well beloved by the ancient gentry of the county, for, being as they termed him, but a buck of the second head; yet being a baronet, and a proud, imperious person, he took place of those of ancient knight's degree: neither was he beloved by the common people." He died in 1644, and was s. by his son,

III. SIR THOMAS HARRIS, of Boreatton, who also devoted himself to the royal cause, and compounded for his estate in the sum of £1542. In the year 1635

he was implicated in the general rising then concerted against the government of Cromwell: the seizure of Shrewsbury was that branch of the enterprise for which he undertook, but it was frustrated by the indiscretion of one of those engaged, Ralph Kynastow, of Maesbrook. "This gentleman," says Blakeway, "publicly enlisted troopers on the 7th March, 1655, and the forces were to have been mustered in Boreatton Park, on the 9th at night; however, on the morning of that day, the governor of Shrewsbury, Humphrey Muckworth, receiving intelligence of the design, instantly impressed the best horses, in the town, marched to Boreatton, and seized the insurgents, with their ammunition, which consisted in part of bullets made from the lead on the roof of that mansion. It is difficult to say how Sir Thomas escaped with his life, but he survived to the Restoration." Sir Thomas m. Mary, daughter of Thomas Mytton, esq. of Halston, in Shropshire, but dying s. p. was s. by his brother,

IV. SIR GEORGE HARRIS, who d. issueless, and was s. by his brother,

V. SIR PAUL HARRIS, who also left no child, and was s. by his uncle, HELE, OF FLEET.

CREATED
28th May, 1627.

EXTINCT
in April, 1677.

Lineage.

Of this very ancient family, fruitful as the county of Devon is known to have been in distinguished houses, it may with truth be stated, that it was one of the most eminent, the most widely spread, and the most affluent which even that quarter of England could boast of. Every printed history of Devon, whether Pole, Risdon, Prince, or Polwhele, abundantly testifies the fact; while Westcott, Chapell, and other collectors, whose works have not yet been published, strengthen those accounts; still more fully confirmed by the different herald's visitations of Devonshire and Cornwall, preserved in the College of Arms, and in the Harleian MSS. Heale, Heal, or Hele, a manor in the parish of Bradninch, in the Hundred of Harridge, in the North of Devon, was from the earliest time of which any record exists, and, as is presumed, from long before the Conquest, in the possession of the family, which had its dwelling there, and gave it name.

The herald's visitations commence with

SIR ROGER DE LA HEALE, Lord of Heale, in the reign of HENRY III. fifth in descent from whom, through several knights named Roger and Nicholas, was

WILLIAM DE LA HEALE, who left issue two sons,

I. NICHOLAS.

II. Roger, who became heir male of the family on the death of Nicholas.

NICHOLAS DE LA HELE, son and heir, died in the first year of King HENRY V. leaving issue by his wife, Alice, cousin and heir of William de Percehay, of Comb Flory, an only daughter, Alice Hele, who married William Fraunceys, esq. of Brixham, in Devon, who, in right of his wife, became Lord of Hele, and succeeded to Comb Flory, where his descendants continued seated, matching, as they descended, with various western knightly families, as Ashforde of Ashforde, Courtenay of Powderham, Barckley, Wyndham of Orghard, Chichester, and others.

ROGER HEALE, second son of William de Heale, and heir male on the death of his brother Nicholas, lived temp. King HENRY IV. having served in the Scotch wars, and been there taken prisoner. His son and heir,

WILLIAM HEALE, settled at Hele, called for distinction South Hele, in the parish of Cornwood, in the South of Devon, and had issue by his wife, Joan, daughter of Simon Cole, esq. of Slade, in that county, five sons and one daughter,

- i. JOHN, of South Heale, who left issue,

Walter Heal, of South Heal, who m. Jane, daughter of Thomas Fowtescue, esq. of Wymeston, in Devon, by whom he had numerous sons and daughters, of whom,

JOHN HELE, esq. of Hele, eldest son and heir, m. Alice, daughter and heir of Richard Brooking, esq. of Holberton, in Devon, and was living s. p. at the time of the visitation in 1620.

- ii. Hugh, of Cornwood, ancestor of the Heles of that place, and of Diptford, in Devon, whose representative, JACOB BICKFORD HELE, esq. of Stert, in the latter parish, great-great-grandson through daughters of Upton of Lupton, Prowse of Moore, Powell of Black Hall, and Bardlett of Exeter, all in Devon, of John Hele, esq. of Diptford, at the time of the herald's visitation, died in July, 1835, aged seventy-eight, unmarried; and was presumed to have been the last male heir of this ancient family. He was interred on the 12th July, with his ancestors in the church of Diptford; and it is a remarkable fact, that there was but just sufficient room left in the vault for his coffin.

iii. NICHOLAS, of whose line we have to treat.

iv. Baldwin.

v. William.

- i. Joan, m. to John Stert, esq. of Devon.

The third son,

NICHOLAS HELE, esq. also of South Hele, m. first, Dyonisia, daughter of Walter Woodley, esq. of Tidbourne St. Mary, in Devon, by whom he had two sons and one daughter,

i. William, of Bridge Revell, or Bridgwell, in Cornwall, who *d. s. p.

- ii. John, of Holberton, in Devon, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Pollexfen, esq. of Kitley, in that county,† and had, with nine daughters, one son,

Walter, of Gnton, in Holberton, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of William Strode, esq. of Newnham Park, in Devon, lineal descendant and heir of William Strode, esq. of Newnham, who m. Elizabeth, sole child and heir, by his wife, Joan, daughter of Richard Powell, of Powellscomb, of Sir Philip Courtenay, knight of Loughton, in Devon; great-grandson of Sir Philip Courtenay, of Powderham Castle, sixth son of Hugh Courtenay, second Earl of Devon, by his wife Margaret de Bohun, daughter of Humphrey, Earl of Hereford and Essex, and the Princess Elizabeth, daughter of King EDWARD I. By her he had issue,

- i. SAMPSON, of Gnton, high sheriff of Devon, 19th King JAMES I. 1621. He m. Joan, eldest daughter of Sir John Glanville, knight of Killworthy, in Devon, lord chief justice of the Common Pleas, (for account of whom and of his sons, see PRINCE'S Worthies, and FOWELL'S OF BLACK HALL, in BURKE'S Commoners, vol. iv. for his representatives), and had issue;‡

8. Susan, m. to Thomas Isaac, esq. of Postillow or Polslow, in the parish

* Branches of the family from other sons settled early in Cornwall, and there flourished. In 1400, John Heale, of St. Ives, in that county, granted lands for ever to John Hicks; and John Heale was at an early date returned M.P. for St. Ives, while Nicholas Hele was M.P. for Liskeard in 1620, in 1623, and again in 1625. Among the Cornish branches of the family, was the one seated at Bennetts, the last of which, George John Hele, esq. was sheriff of Cornwall in 1628; Lucy Hele, his heiress, married, in 1670, or 1674, Francis Basset, esq. of Telydy, in Cornwall, the great grandfather of the late Lord De Dunstanville, father of Frances, the present Baroness Basset, (see BURKE'S Peerage.) who inherited, with her, large possessions including the manor of Penkean.

† Now the seat, by descent, of Edmond Pollexfen Bastard, esq. formerly M.P. for the county of Devon, (See BURKE'S Commoners.)

‡ He was second and youngest son by Elizabeth, the daughter and heir of Hingeston, of Sir Philip Courtenay, knight of Molland, in Devon, and had two sisters,

- i. Elizabeth, who m. her kinsman, Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon, by whom she had William Courtenay, Earl of Devon, who m. the Princess Katherine, daughter of King Edward IV. and had issue, Henry Courtenay, Marquis of Exeter, father of Edward, the second and last marquis, who died unm. at Paris; and mas Hele, esq. of Fleet, father of the first baronet.

§ Sampson Hele's children were, Mathew, of Holwell, in Devon, b. 1616, high sheriff of that county at the Restoration, 1660, when it is said the branches of his family were so numerous, and all of such good estate within the county, that he assembled a grand jury, representing the body thereof, and seldom under twenty, all of his name and blood, gentlemen of estate and quality: "which made the judge observe, when he heard Hele, of Wisdom, esq. called—a gentill seat in the parish of Cornwood—'that he thought they must be all descended from Wisdom, in that they had acquired such considerable fortunes.'" He left issue a son and heir, MATHER, of Holwell, who died s. p. 1674, and was succeeded by his uncle, Sampson.

- vi. John (Sir), kn. of Wembury, in Devon, serjeant-at-law, of whom PRINCE observes "that he was a most eminent person in his profession, of any other in his days, of his rank, belonging to the long robe; an evident proof and demonstration whereof is the vast wealth and riches he acquired (with God's blessing) by his own industry, which in buildings, lands, and monies, amounted to above an hundred thousand pounds, a good part of which he bestowed in charity to the poor. He purchased a fair estate in the parish of Wembury, about four miles east of Plymouth, where he built a most noble house, beyond any other in those days in all this country, and equal to the best now; a sightly seat for show, for receipt spacious, for cost sumptuous, for situation salubrious; near the sea, upon an advanced ground, having a delightful prospect both of sea and land; round which lay a noble park, well stocked with fallow deer, whose reflection, as they were grazing, might be seen in the marble chavels, through the casements, of the chamber chimneys." (See CHURCHMAN'S Baronetcy.) The manor of Wembury was allotted, on partition, to Elizabeth Chudleigh, who sold it in 1737 to William Mosesworth, esq. whose heiress brought it to Lord Camden; and from him Wembury was purchased in 1803 by Thomas Lockyer, esq. of Plymouth.

† No family has been more unfortunate in the loss of property to which they were heirs at law, or bequeathed to them by will, than the Black-Hall Fowells. In addition to the loss of Fleet, as here shewn, in order that it might go to the heirs male, the last of which kin left it to a stranger, they lost Fowellscomb, to which they were the heirs male, and which was bequeathed to them orally or by will by the three last owners of it of their family, owing to some informality in the will of Sir John Fowell, the last baronet, whereon that seat and estates went to the families of Parker, of Boringdon, and Champer-

While, again, in a still more recent period the whole of the large property of the late James Digby, esq. of Red Hall, in Lincoln, heir male of the North Luffenham branch of the noble house of Digby, passed, contrary to every expectation of the family, by will made very shortly before Mr. Digby's decease in 1811, from his nephew and heir-at-law, the late John Digby Fowell, of Black-Hall, to Mr. Digby's younger sister, Henrietta, Mrs. Panncofort, whose only surviving child, Philip Duncombe Panncofort Duncombe, esq. of Erick Hill Manor, in the county of Bucks, succeeded to it on her death intestate. Lineage.

The first of this family upon record is ROBERT FITZ HICKMAN, lord of the manors of Bloxham and Wickham, in the county of Oxford, 56 HENRY III. 1272. He had two sons, JOHN and William, JOHN, the elder was knighted, and according to the custom of those times, was surnamed de Bloxham. He (Sir John) served in parliament for Oxfordshire, 12th and 15th of EDWARD II. but dying without issue, his brother,

* Sir Peter Heyman was reduced so much in circumstances as to be obliged to appeal to the public for relief, and the following advertisement was issued by him in 1783:—

“Under the patronage of several noble personages of the first distinction.—For the benefit of an English Baronet, at Pasquall’s Great Rooms, Tottenham Street, Tottenham Court Road, on Thursday the 22nd of May instant, at noon, will be a Grand Concert of Vocal and Instrumental Music, by the most capital Performers: with refreshments.—Tickets 10s. 6d. each.”

“Sir Peter Heyman, of Windsor, baronet, for whose benefit the concert is to be, is descended from a very ancient family that came to England with the Norman conqueror in 1066; several of which were in parliament, and held places of honour and trust under the crown. His lady is descended from a baronet, and a family equally ancient and respectable. As his family inheritance was dissipated by his grandfather, he only succeeded to the dignity (a creation so early as 1641), which he hath enjoyed near forty years; and it being unaccompanied with any property, is the cause he now suffers real distress, which is rendered more poignant and severe by his age and infirmities. And this concert, which is countenanced by several of the first distinction, is intended as the means of relieving him and his lady from their present distress. He earnestly intreats your kind notice and protection on this very useful occasion, which he will ever most gratefully remember. You will be attended to-morrow by a friend of Sir Peter Heyman with a list of the subscribers, and more tickets should you be disposed to give it support.—20th May, 1783.”

† In the 25th of HENRY VIII. 1534, when the pope issued his bull against the King of England and his kingdom, and posted it up at Dunkirk, this William Lock went over and took it down; for which act Henry gave him £100 per annum, land of inheritance, made him one of the gentlemen of his privy chamber, did him other honors, and knighted him.

HICKS, OF CAMPDEN.

CREATED
1st July, 1629.

1629.

Lineage.

The founder of this family was, ROBERT HICKS, a mercer of London, living in Cheap-side, where by his trade he realized a considerable fortune, m. Julian, daughter of William Arthur, esq. of Clapham, and had three sons,

- i. MICHAEL (Sir), barrister-at-law, and secretary to the Lord Treasurer Burghley, from whom directly derive the extant house of HICKES, of Beverston, in the county of Gloucester, now (1637) represented by SIR MICHAEL BRACH-HICKES, bart. (See BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage.)

ii. Francis.

iii. BAPTIST.

The youngest son,

i. SIR BAPTIST HICKS, being brought up in his father's business, and having great dealings with the court, (through the influence of his elder brother, Sir Michael) for his rich silks imported from Italy, and other foreign parts, thereby amassed a large estate. Upon King JAMES coming to the throne, he was sworn his servant, 1603, and soon after knighted. Sir Baptist was one of the first citizens who kept shop after receiving such an honour; and, in 1607, he had some dispute with the Court of Aldermen about it. He had subsequently a contest with the same body for precedence, standing upon his knighthood, which matter came at last to be decided by the court marshal. Before his death, however, he arrived at far higher honours. On the 1st July, 1629, he was created a BARONET, and King CHARLES I. in the fourth year of his reign, raised him to the peerage, as BARON HICKS, of Rimington, in the county of Warwick, and Viscount Campden, of Campden, in Gloucestershire, with special remainder to his son-in-law, Edward Noel, Lord Noel, of Ridlington. This eminent citizen erected Hicks's Hall, in the city of London, in 1612, and about the same time, built a market house and hospital at Campden, in the county of Gloucester, and founded an almshouse there. JULIANA, m. to Sir Edward Noel, bart. created in 1616-17, Lord Noel, of Ridlington.

* Of SIR MICHAEL HICKS, who was the associate of the learned and witty of his time, and regarded himself as a most accomplished and facetious person, "a very witty and jocosé man, whose company was sought after by persons of rank and fashion," the following circumstance is related:

"QUEEN ELIZABETH, being in her progress, took occasion once to talk with her secretary (who she knew was Mr. Hicks's friend) concerning certain witty verses of Mr. Hicks's writing, (that had come to her ears) burlesquing some of the grave members of parliament: and what entertainment it found with her majesty, the secretary, in his correspondence imparted, viz. That she excused him as much as any; and that when he told her he could not tell what Mr. Michael said for himself, but that what he had writ, was, in his fancy, as pretty and pithy as ever he saw. Ay, marry, (said the queen) but he wrote them not himself. To which the secretary said (swearing to her) he knew he did. Well, (saith she,) when I see him next we shall have good sport. The account of this matter the secretary wrote to Master Hicks, who having heard with some concern, that the queen had seen his rhimes, desired to know the truth of this business; and thereupon he wrote to him, asserting for his satisfaction, that he lied not, and that that was the truth, and the whole truth, as he assured him faithfully." The verses are characteristic of the age in which they were written, exhibiting more grossness than wit, and adapted more to the times of ELIZABETH than of VICTORIA.

HOLTE, OF ASTON.

CREATED
25th Nov. 1612.

EXTINCT
13th March, 1782.

Lineage.

The first of this family traceable is

SIR HUGH HOLTE, who m. Matilda, daughter of Sir Henry de Erdington, Lord of Erdington, and left a son and heir,

JOHN ATTE HOLTE, who m. temp. EDWARD II. Alice de Castello, daughter and at length sole heir of Sir George de Castello, and was s. by his son,

SIMON DEL HOLTE, who left by his wife, Albrede de Bermingham, two sons, JOHN and Walter. The elder,

JOHN ATTE HOLTE, called senior, in respect that his son was living at the same time, 21 EDWARD III. He had also two sons, JOHN and Walter: the first of whom,

JOHN ATTE HOLTE, purchased the manor of Dudston in the 38th of the same reign for forty marks from John de Grimesarwe, and Maud de Grimesarwe in two years afterwards conveyed the manor of ASTON to the said John Atte Holte, denominated of Bermingham, as her charter, dated at Aston on Sunday next before the feast of St. Agapite the Martyr, testifies. He m. Eleanor, daughter and co-heir of William Duvassal, of Sperrall, but dying childless, the estates passed to his uncle,

WALTER HOLTE, of Aston, escheator for the counties of Warwick and Leicester, temp. EDWARD III. and RICHARD I. who m. Margery, daughter of Sir William Bagot, knt. of Bagington, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN HOLTE, styled of Yardley, whose son and heir,

* Through the Duke of Buckingham, to whom he paid £10,000 in the first instance, and £5000 subsequently for the earldom.

† For details of this high spirited nobleman, see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.

AUDOMAR HOLTE, was dispossessed of Aston by his uncle,

WILLIAM HOLTE, who, after great contests and an ultimate reference to the arbitration of Edward, Duke of York, and Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, appears to have retained possession thereof, having had a grant of said estate for life from King HENRY IV. This William, 12 HENRY VI. was one of the chief persons in Warwickshire, chosen to make oath for performance of divers articles concluded in the parliament then held, having the style of "William Holte, de Aston, Armiger." The grant of Aston being, however, but for life, and that estate eventually vesting in the crown, William's nephew,

JOHN HOLTE, son of Simon Holte, procured a patent, confirming it to him, with all the intinancies thereunto belonging. This John was constituted escheator of the counties of Warwick and Leicester 16 HENRY VI. and was afterwards esquire of the body to the same king, who, in recompense of his fidelity, made him ranger of Sutton Chase for life. His son and heir,

WILLIAM HOLTE, esq. of Aston, m. Margaret, daughter of William Cumberford, esq. of Cumberford, in the county of Stafford, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM HOLTE, esq. who m. a daughter of Adam Knight, esq. of Shrewsbury, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS HOLTE, esq. of Aston, a learned lawyer and justice of North Wales temp. HENRY VIII. as also in the commission of the peace and in the commission for taking the surrender of religious houses in that county. He m. Margery, eldest daughter and co-heir of William Wallington, esq. of Barcheston, in the county of Warwick, who surviving him, became afterwards the wife of Sir Ambrose Cave, knt. chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, temp. ELIZABETH. His son and heir,

EDWARD HOLTE, esq. of Aston, sheriff of Warwickshire 25 ELIZABETH, m. Dorothy, daughter of John Ferrers, of Tamworth Castle, and had a numerous family; of which the eldest son and heir,

I. SIR THOMAS HOLTE, of Aston, who was of full age at the death of his father, was sheriff of Warwickshire 41 ELIZABETH, and received the honour of knighthood, 18th April, 1603, from King JAMES I. in his majesty's progress from Scotland to London, and was created a BARONET 24th November, 1612. Sir Thomas m. first, Grace, daughter and co-heir of William Bradburne, esq. of Hough, in the county of Derby, and had by that lady a numerous progeny. By his second wife, Anne, daughter of Sir Edward Littleton, of Pillaton Hall, he had no issue. His eldest son and heir (the only son whose issue survived),

EDWARD, one of the grooms of the bedchamber to CHARLES I. and in attendance on the king during the siege of Oxford, died there of a fever before the surrender, leaving by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. John King, Bishop of London,

Of his daughters, Anne m. Walter Gifford, of Chillington; Catherine became the wife of Roper; and Grace m. Sir Richard Shuckburgh, knt. of Shuckburgh. Sir Thomas was a gentleman of superior education, well versed in several languages, and highly esteemed in his country. Having amply increased his estate by his first marriage, he enclosed the park, and began, in April, 1618, the noble structure at Aston Stocklands, which Sir William Dugdale says "for beauty and state exceeds anything in those parts." He was nominated by King CHARLES I. ambassador to Spain, but by reason of his great age was excused. On the breaking out of the civil war, he heartily assisted the king with his purse; but being very old, and of a quiet disposition, remained at his seat, without following the camp, where he had the honour of a visit from the king, who slept at Aston two nights immediately before the battle of Edge Hill. His disposition to the royal cause being notorious, and his son actually in the field, his house was plundered, himself imprisoned, his estate decimated, and penalties of all kinds inflicted upon him to the full amount of £20,000. He d. in the eighty-third year of his age, A.D. 1634, and was s. by his grandson,

VI. SIR CHARLES HOLTE, M.P. for Warwickshire in 1776, who m. in 1755, Anne, daughter of Pudsey Jesson, esq. of Langley, in the same county, and had an only daughter and heir, MARY-ELIZABETH, m. in 1775, Abraham Bracebridge, esq. of Atherston Hall, and had one son and one daughter, viz.

CHARLES-HOLTE BRACEBRIDGE, esq. of Atherstone Hall. (See BURKE'S Commoners, vol. i. p. 276.)

Sir Charles died 13th March, 1782, when the BARONETCY EXPIRED. Legge, esq. and his issue male; remainder to L. Bagot, Bishop of Norwich, and his issue male; remainder to W. Digby, esq. and his issue male; and lastly, remainder to the right heirs of the said Sir Lister Holte. Sir Charles left only one daughter, and the estates thus in reversion were estimated at about £300,000 in fee. In 1817, an act of parliament was obtained for the dismemberment of the estates, to satisfy the claims of the assignees and mortgagees of Abraham Bracebridge, esq. and other family claims, as well as to indemnify Mr. Egge and Mr. Digby (both being without heirs male) for the resignation of their respective interests. Under this act the estates have been sold.

Subsequently, however, by a course of extravagance, he dissipated his fortune, sold Lethenborough House to Mr. Robinson, his steward, and after mortgaging as far as he could his whole estates, went to London about the year 1673, and in 1670 was admitted a pensioner at the Charter House, where he died 1st October, 1681. When he found the cause of his cousin Richard desperate, he strenuously exerted himself in promoting the restoration of the exiled monarch, and so effectually recommended himself to his favour, that he not only procured his pardon, being the only one of the regicides who had a free one, but was made a knight of the Bath. He m. Anne, daughter of Sir George Croke, one of the judges of the court of King's Bench, and widow of Thomas Lee, esq. of Hartwell, and dying in 1685, left, with a daughter, Jane, the wife of Thomas Marriot, esq. of Ascot, in Gloucestershire, a son and successor,

The fifth son,

1. SIR HENRY INGOLDSBY, born in 1622, held at first a commission in the royal army, but subsequently deserting his ill-fated master, became a colonel in the service of the parliament. He went afterwards to Ireland, and was there most useful to his party, but Lord Clarendon records that he performed acts of barbarity in that oppressed kingdom utterly revolting to humanity. Sir Henry was returned to parliament by the counties of Kerry, Limerick, and Clare, in 1654, 1656, and 1659. Like his brother Richard, he was equally zealous in paving the way for future favour with the exiled monarch, whose restoration he foresaw; with this view he hastened from Ireland, where he had a command, took possession of Windsor Castle, then in the hands of the republicans, and garrisoned it for the parliament, who appeared to be favourably disposed towards the restoration of the monarchy. For this service he was created a BARONET by CHARLES II. 30th August, 1660, having already obtained a similar dignity from the Protector CROMWELL, in 1658. He died in Ireland in 1701, one of the oldest officers in the army, and left by Anne, his wife, daughter of Sir Hardress Waller, a son and successor,

I. SIR JOHN JACOB, of Bromley, in Essex, who was knighted by King CHARLES I. in 1633, being one of the farmers of the Customs in the port of London, and in the enjoyment of a clear estate of £3000 per annum, but adhering to the king, his lands were sequestered, and his personal property considerably reduced by the loans he made at different times to his royal master. Lloyd, in his memoirs of eminent persons who suffered for their allegiance, thus mentions him: "We must not separate Sir Nicholas Crisp from the worshipful Sir John Jacob, his partner, both in the farming of the Custom House, and his sufferings; a man ever forward to assist his majesty, saying, What! shall I keep my estate, and see the king want wherewithal to protect it? If it please God to bless the king, though I gave him all't had I can be no loser; if not, though I keep all I can be no saver; and to relieve the clergy, valuing more their prayers and God's blessing than his own estate, employing under him only those honest cavaliers that suffered with him."

In consideration of his loyalty, so zealous and so generous, Sir John was created a BARONET by King CHARLES II. 11th January, 1665. On the restoration his estate was restored to him, he was made a commissioner of the Customs, and again became one of the farmers thereof. Sir John was at the battle of the Boyne, sieges of Cork and Kingsale, and was severely wounded at Killcranky. Lineage.

This family was originally of Guelderland, and descended from the BARON DE HEZ, who in the troubles of the Netherlands headed a party of those who opposed the Duke of Alva, and was constituted by his associates Governor of Brussels. He was in some years afterwards made prisoner by the Duke of Parma, and beheaded, when all his estate was confiscated. His family being thus dispersed, his youngest son,

THEODORE JANSSEN DE HEZ, sought an asylum in France, and living there to an advanced age, left a large fortune and numerous issue. His eldest son,

ABRAHAM JANSSEN, was father of

I. SIR THEODORE JANSSEN, who removing into England in 1689, with a considerable estate, was naturalized, and in the reign of KING WILLIAM received the honor of knighthood. Having during that monarch and the reign of QUEEN ANNE given ample proofs, on several occasions, of his zeal for the interest of Great Britain, particularly regarding its commercial relations with France, when that subject was pending in parliament, after the treaty of Utrecht, he was created a BARONET at the especial request of the Elector of Hanover (afterwards George I.), 11th March, 1714. Sir Theodore realized by forty years success in trade a very large fortune, but in the year 1729, having the misfortune of being a South Sea director, he was involved in the common calamity of his colleagues, although his innocence was deemed to have been established by the fact of his being a loser, not a gainer, by their proceedings. Lineage.

SAMUEL JEBB, M.D. a native of Nottingham, practised as a physician with great success at Stratford, in Essex, and became eminent by several learned works; among others "The History of the Life and Reign of Mary Queen of Scots." He married a relation of the celebrated apothecary, Mr. Dillingham, of Red Lion Square, and dying 9th March, 1772, left, with other issue, a son,

I. RICHARD JEBB, M.D. b. at Stratford in 1729, who followed his father's profession and became so esteemed a practitioner, that when the Duke of Gloucester fell dangerously ill in Italy, he was requested to go thither to attend the health of that prince, and his conduct on that occasion gave so much satisfaction that he was called abroad a second time in 1777. About the same period he was made physician-extraordinary to the king; and in 1780 appointed physician-in-ordinary to the Prince of Wales. He not only held those offices about the royal family, but was for several years one of the physicians chiefly employed by them. Upon the death of Sir Edward Wilmot in 1786, he was constituted physician-in-ordinary to his majesty, but did not survive the appointment many months; for being in attendance on two of the princesses who were affected with the measles, he was suddenly attacked with a fever in their apartments at Windsor, to which he fell a victim, after a few days' illness, 4th July, 1787, in the fifty-eighth year of his age. He had been created a BARONET in 1778; but, as he never married, the title expired with him.

JUXON, OF ALBOURNE.

CREATED
28th Dec. 1660.

EXTINCT
3rd Feb. 1740.

Lineage.

WILLIAM JUXON, the pious and loyal Bishop of London, the son of Richard Juxon, of Chichester, in Sussex, was born in 1582, and educated, upon the foundation, at Merchant Taylor's School, from which he was elected a fellow of St. John's College, Oxford, in 1598. Entering into holy orders, he became very popular as a preacher; and having risen high in royal favour, was chosen to succeed Laud in the see of London. In less than two years after, his lordship was appointed lord high treasurer of England; but he was not made for the times in which he lived, and when he saw the storm approaching which was to overturn the whole edifice of church and state, he resigned his office 17th May, 1641, shortly after the execution of Strafford. In the unhappy scenes which followed—the trial and death of CHARLES—the good bishop attended his ill-fated master with the most zealous devotion. The words of exhortation which he addressed to the royal martyr on the scaffold are too well known to be more than alluded to here. It was remarked by the regicides that the king, the moment before he stretched out his neck to the executioner, addressed to JUXON, in a very earnest accent, the single word "REMEMBER." Great mysteries were consequently supposed to be concealed under that expression; and the generals vehemently insisted that the prelate should inform them of the king's meaning. Juxon replied that his majesty having frequently charged him to inculcate on his son the forgiveness of his murderers, had taken this opportunity in the last moments of his life, when his commands he supposed would be regarded as sacred and inviolable, to reiterate that desire; and that his mild spirit thus terminated its present course by an act of benevolence to his greatest enemies. Some months after, when the commonwealth was established, Juxon was deprived of his bishopric, and retired to his private estate, the manor of Little Compton, in Gloucestershire, where he continued until consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury at the Restoration. His grace did not long survive that happy event, but died 4th June, 1663, in his eighty-first year, leaving his nephew, KEMEYS, OF KEVANMABLEY.

CREATED
13th May, 1642.

EXTINCT
29th Jan. 1735.

Lineage.

The house of KEMEYS, originally de Camois, Camoes, and Camys, is of Norman extraction, and its founder in England appears on the Battle Abbey roll. The family acquired large possessions in the counties of Surrey and Sussex, and so early as 1258, Ralph de Camois was a territorial baron. His son of the same name had summons to parliament in the 40th HENRY III. and his descendants sate as barons until the decease, issueless, 5 HENRY VI. of Hugh de Camois, who left his sisters his co-heirs.*

A branch of the family which had located in Pembrokehire, enjoyed large possessions there, and as Lords of Camnes and St. Dogmaels, exercised authority little short of regal. In the conquest of Monmouthshire and Glamorganshire, the Camays were distinguished and rewarded with grants of "Kemeys's Commander," and "Kemeys's Inferior."

EDWARD KEMEYS, son of Edward Kemeys, who was at the conquest of Upper Gwent, married Nest, daughter and heir of Andrew de Began, and thus acquired the lordship of Began, which for centuries after was the principal seat of his descendants. His great-great-grandson,

JENKIN KEMEYS, of Began, m. Crisley, daughter of Morgan ap Llowellen, and had issue,

IRVAN, his successor.

Margaret, m. to Ievan ap Morgan. Her grandson,

Morgan Williams, living in the time of HENRY VIII. m. the sister of Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex, and had a son,

Sir Richard Williams, who assumed the surname of CROMWELL, and was great-grandfather of

OLIVER CROMWELL, the protector.

He was s. by his son,

IRVAN KEMEYS, of Began, from whom lineally descended

DAVID KEMEYS, esq. of Kevanmabley, in the county of Glamorgan, who m. Katherine, daughter of Sir William Bawdrripp, and was s. by his son,

RHYS KEMEYS, esq. of Manvary, who married a daughter of the Rev. William Aubrey, D.D. and left a son,

I. NICHOLAS KEMEYS, esq. of Kevanmabley, in the county of Glamorgan, who was created a BARONET by CHARLES I. 13th May, 1642. He was colonel of a regiment of horse, and on the outbreaking of the rebellion, was constituted by the king, governor of Chepstow Castle, and defended that fortress, soon after, gallantly and successfully against a superior force under the command of Cromwell in person; who was replaced in the siege by Colonel Ewer, against whom Sir Nicholas and his son continued to hold out, and to make frequent and brilliant sorties, till at length, worn down with fatigue, the garrison suffered a breach to be effected, when the governor and forty of his men died sword in hand, defending the castle to the last. Sir Nicholas m. Jane, daughter of Sir Rowland Williams, knt. of Llangibby, and was s. by his son and heir, his brave companion in arms,

II. SIR CHARLES KEMEYS, M.P. for Glamorganshire, who m. first, Blanch, daughter of Sir Lewis Mansel, bart. but by her had no issue. He wedded, secondly, Margaret, daughter of Sir George Whitmore, lord mayor of London in 1631-2, and dying about the year 1658, was s. by his son,

JANE TYNTE, who m. Major Hassell, and had an only daughter and heir,

JANE HASSELL, who wedded Colonel Johnstone, and was mother of the present Colonel KEMEYS-TYNTE.

He died in December, 1702, and was succeeded by his son,

IV. SIR CHARLES KEMEYS, knight of the shire for Monmouth in the last parliament of Queen ANNE, and for Glamorgan in the two succeeding parliaments. Sir Charles experienced on his travels much attention from GEORGE I. and frequently joined the private circle of the elector. On his highness subsequently ascending the throne of England, he was pleased to ask, why his old acquaintance, Sir Charles Kemeys, had not paid his respects at court, and commanding him to repair to St. James's, sent him a message, to the purport, that the King of England hoped Sir Charles Kemeys recollected the number of pipes he had smoked with the Elector of Hanover in Germany. Sir Charles who had retired from parliament, and was a staunch jacobite, replied, that he should be proud to pay his duty at St. James's to the Elector of Hanover, but that

Lineage,

I. SIR GODFREY KNELLER, the celebrated painter, was born at Lubeck about 1648, when his father was surveyor-general of the mines, and inspector of Count Mansfeld's revenues. For a long continuance of years Kneller stood at the head of his profession, but he has left behind him few good pictures. According to his own doctrine, he did as much and no more than was necessary to pass current among his employers. "History painters," he said, "make the dead live, and don't begin to live till they are dead; I paint the living, and they make me live." He died in October, 1723, and was buried at his seat at Whitton, in Middlesex; but a monument, was erected to him in Westminster Abbey, executed by Rysbrach, and inscribed with these lines of Pope, more beautiful than just:

"Kneller, by heaven and not a master taught,
Whose art was Nature, and whose pictures thought;
When now two ages he had snatch'd from fate,
Whate'er was beautiful and whate'er was great,
Rests crown'd with princes' honours, poets' bays,
Due to his merit, and brave thirst of praise.
Living, great Nature fear'd he might outvie
Her works; and dying, fears herself may die."

KNOLLYS, OF THAME.

CREATED
1st April, 1754.

EXTINCT
29th June, 1772.

Lineage.

This family was founded by

SIR ROBERT KNOLLYS, K.G. the celebrated general in the martial times of EDWARD III. the companion in arms of the Black Prince, and the most renowned warrior of his day. In 1 RICHARD II. Sir Robert was governor of the castle of Brest, and in the 3rd of the same reign he went with Thomas Plantagenet (of Woodstock), Earl of Buckingham, to assist the Duke of Brittany against the French, when they marched quite through France without resistance. The next year, on the outbreak of Jack Straw's insurrection, he led the citizens of London against the rebels, and thus terminated, at an advanced age, his military career. Independently of those high deeds which rendered his name famous all over the world, Sir Robert left other noble memorials behind him. He erected a stately bridge over the river Medway, near Rochester, known as Rochester Bridge. He enlarged the house of Friars Carmelites, commonly called White Friars, in the city of London, and he founded a college at Pontefract, in Yorkshire, where his wife, the Lady Constance, was born, endowing it with an estate of £180. per annum. He died at the manor of Sconeathorp, in Norfolk, full of honour and years, being at least ninety years of age, 15th August, 1407, and was buried with his lady in the church of the White Friars. He left issue, a daughter, Emma, the wife of Anthony Babington, and a son and heir,

THOMAS KNOLLYS, who was seated at North Myms, in Hertfordshire, and had two sons,

ROBERT, whose daughter married Henry Fordwick, of Weley, and her daughter conveyed the estate in marriage to John Coningsby.

Sir Wilfrid d. in 1704, leaving a character of the highest probity behind him. Amongst other remarkable traits of nice conscientious feeling, was his relinquishing the inappropriate tithes of Isell to the living for ever; which he did with so much exactness, that with the profits he had received himself to that time, he bought a piece of land, which he settled likewise on the living. He acted somewhat similarly towards government regarding his estate, which finding undertaxed, he computed the difference, and left £600 to be paid to make up the loss to the state. Queen ANNE gave the money back, however, to his family. 2nd Sept. 1760.

Lineage.

The first mention we find of this family is by Sir William Dugdale, thus: "At a great just or tournament held at Castle Peveler, in the Peak of Derbyshire, where, among divers other persons of note, Owen, Prince of Wales, and a son of the King of Scots, were present; there were also two sons of the Duke of Breittain, and that the youngest of them, Guy, was called Guy L'Estrange, from whom the several families of the L'Estranges do descend."

HAMON L'ESTRANGE, who obtained, temp. EDWARD II. Hunstanton,* in Norfolk, by gift of his brother, John L'Estrange, sixth Baron Strange, of Knoockyn, m. Margaret, daughter of Ralph Vernon, and was s. by his son,

HAMON L'ESTRANGE, of Hunstanton, who m. Catharine, daughter and heir of John, Lord Camois, and had issue,

SIR JOHN L'ESTRANGE, knt. who m. Eleanor, daughter and heir of Sir Richard Walkefare, knt. and dying in 1417, was s. by his son,

JOHN L'ESTRANGE, esq. who espoused Alice, daughter and heir of Nicholas Beaumont, and was s. by his son,

HENRY L'ESTRANGE, esq. who m. Catherine, daughter of Roger Drury, esq. of Halsted, in Suffolk, and dying in 1455, was s. by his son,

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, of Hunstanton, esquire of the body to HENRY VII. who m. Anne, daughter of Sir Christopher Heydon, knt. and dying s. p. in 1506, was s. by his brother,

SIR ROBERT L'ESTRANGE, of Hunstanton, who m. Ann, daughter and co-heir of Thomas, son of Sir Thomas L'Estrange, of Wellisborn, in Warwickshire, and by her (who m. secondly, Sir Edward Knyvet,) left at his decease in 1511 a son and successor,

SIR THOMAS L'ESTRANGE, high sheriff of Norfolk in 1537, who m. Anne, daughter of Nicholas, Lord VAUX, and had sixteen children; of whom NICHOLAS, the eldest, succeeded at Hunstanton; and RICHARD, settling in Ireland, was ancestor of the L'ESTRANGES of Moystown, in the King's County, now represented by HENRY PAISLEY L'ESTRANGE, esq. of Moystown, lieutenant-colonel of the King's County militia. Sir Thomas L'Estrange died temp. HENRY VIII. and was s. by his son,

SIR NICHOLAS L'ESTRANGE, of Hunstanton, knighted in Ireland, m. Ellen, daughter of Sir William Fitzwilliam, of Milton, in Northamptonshire, and dying in 1579, was s. by his son,

SIR HAMON L'ESTRANGE, knt. of Hunstanton, who m. Alice, daughter and co-heir of Richard Stubbe, esq. of Sedgford, in Norfolk, and had (with a daughter, Elizabeth, the wife of Sir William Spring, of Pakenham,) three sons, viz.

II. HAMON, of Pakenham, in Suffolk, left issue.

III. ROGER (Sir), who became so celebrated. He was born about the year 1617, and having in 1644 obtained a commission from King CHARLES I. for reducing Lynn, in Norfolk, then in possession of the parliament; the design was discovered to Colonel Walton, the governor, and L'Estrange made prisoner. He was immediately after tried by a court martial at Guildhall, in London, and condemned to death as a spy, but was reprieved, and continued in Newgate for several years. At length, with his keeper's privity, he made his escape, and got beyond sea with much difficulty. In 1653 he returned to England upon the dissolution of the Long Parliament, and advertised the council, then sitting at Whitehall, "that finding himself within the act of indemnity, he thought it convenient to give them notice thereof." He was subsequently, after a good deal of trouble, fully discharged on giving two thousand pounds bail. Lord Clarendon calls him "a man of good wit, and a fancy very luxuriant, and of an enterprising nature." After the Restoration he wrote many books, pamphlets, and papers, and his observations made a considerable impression. He was afterwards knighted, and served in the parliament called by King JAMES II. in 1685, for Winchester. He was continued licenser of the press until King WILLIAM's accession, when he experienced some annoyance, being considered a disaffected person. He went to his grave, however, in peace, although he had survived his intellect. Of his works Mr. Winstanley says, "those who shall consider the number and greatness of his books, will admire he should ever write so many; and those who have read them, considering the style and method they are written in, will more admire he should write so well." He d. 11th December, 1704, in the eighty-eighth year of

* GARDEN, speaking of Hunstanton, says: "It is the place where King EDMUND resided near a whole year, endeavouring to get by heart David's Psalms in the Saxon language. The very book was religiously preserved by the monks of St. Edmundsbury till the dissolution of monasteries. But neither is the place to be omitted upon this account, that it has been the seat of the famous family of L'Estrange, knights, ever since John, Baron Le Strange, of Knoockyn, bestowed it upon his younger brother Hamon, which was in the reign of EDWARD II."

By an ancient pedigree in the College of Arms, it appears that the family of LITTLETON, or LYTTLETON, was settled at Frankley, in Worcestershire, about 1235,* when it is recorded that

THOMAS DE LYTTLETON, m. Emma de Frankley, an heiress, lady of the manor of Frankley, but whether he was a stranger in the county, or resided in the town of South Lytletton, in the Vale of Evesham, as there is reason to think he did, is a matter of doubt; they had an only daughter, EMMA, who m. first, Augerus de Tatlington, of Tredington, in the same county, and secondly, Nicholas Whetamstede. LOVETT, OF LISCOMBE HOUSE.

CREATED
23rd Oct. 1791.

EXTINCT
30th Jan. 1812.

Lineage.

The family of LOVETH, LOUETH, DE LUYET, DE LOVET, LOVET or LOVETT, as the name is variously written in Domesday, is of Norman extraction.

RICHARDUS DE LOVET,* de Normania, was living at the time of the Conquest, and was accompanied into England by his two sons, WILLIAM and Robert, from the latter descended the Lovets of Worcestershire.

WILLIAM LOVETT, the eldest son, held considerable estates in the counties of Bedford, Berks, Leicester, and Northampton, in capite, by grant from the Conqueror. He was also appointed master of the wolf hounds, in consequence of which, he took for his arms argent, three wolves passant, in pale, sable. He made Northamptonshire his chief residence, as did his descendants for several generations, until their removal to Liscombe, in Buckinghamshire, which subsequently continued their abode for five hundred years. This William, besides being represented as a man in high favour with the king for his military talents, is said to have been one of the strongest and stoutest men of the day, of which many feats are still recorded. He married a French lady, at whose death he was so deeply affected, that taking her remains over to Normandy to be buried, he retired himself into an adjacent monastery, and every day until the day of his death, paid a visit to her tomb, and on that day caused himself to be carried and laid upon the grave, where he expired. In his family this was long a nursery story, and gave rise to a nursery song. He lived to a great age, and was s. by his son,

WILLIAM LOVETT, whose great-grandson,

SIR ROBERT LOVETT, knt. of Rushton and Newton, in the county of Warwick, left a daughter, Alicia, m. to William de Wever, of Cester Over, in the same county, and two sons, Robert and John. To the younger,

JOHN LOVETT, he gave his estate at Newton, with his manor of Doddishamp, near Peterborough, where he erected (by license from the Bishop of Lincoln), in consequence of the badness of the roads, a chantry chapel for the use of his family. This John purchased Cester Over from his nephew, Robert de Waver, and dying without issue, left all his estates to his great nephew (the grandson of his brother, and eldest son of Sir Richard Lovett, of Newton),

ROBERT LOVETT, who settled at Liscombe, in Buckinghamshire, of which, with Hellington and Soulbury, he levied a fine in 1304. These lordships remained in the family to the time that the male line became extinct, a period exceeding five centuries. He m. Sarah, daughter and heiress of Sir Nicholas De Turville, of Helmeden, in Northamptonshire, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS LOVETT, who, upon making the king's son a knight in 1347, accounted for these manors with his other lordships, amounting to twenty-three knight's fees, and one half and one eighth. By his wife, Clementia, he had issue,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Richard, to whom he gave the manor of Wolford in whose descendants it remained until it passed to the Temple family, by the intermarriage of Jocosa, daughter and co-heir of WILLIAM LOVETT, esq. of Wolford, with Richard Temple, esq. of Temple Hall, in the county of Leicester.

Nicholas, who got from his father the lordship of Rickton. He m. the sister and co-heir of Richard Lyons, of Oakley, which, from him, took the name of Lovett's manor, in Oakley. This branch of the family became extinct in the third generation.

Maud, m. De Arches.

He was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM LOVETT, of Liscombe, who presented to Soulbury in 1376 and 1391. In 1360, he had inherited the estates of his great uncle, John Lovett, of Newton, but being an improvident person, he soon dissipated those, with a great part of his paternal property. In 1366, he conveyed the manor of Overbury to his sister, Maud de Arches; and in 1386, he sold to William Purefoy and his heirs (after the death of his mother Clementia, then the wife of John Parount), his lands at Cester Over, in Warwickshire; and having disposed of estates of large amount to several other people, he died in 1392, and was s. by his son,

ROGER LOVETT, of Liscombe, who presented to Soulbury in 1435. In 1418, he appears again in possession of the manor of Helmeden, which he settled upon his son JOHN, who m. Margaret de Ingleton. John died soon after, in the lifetime of his father, leaving a son,

* This lady died in her eighteenth year, 31st August, 1718, and the following lines compose her epitaph:

Underneath this stone doth lie
As much virtue as could die;
Which when alive did vigour give
To as much beauty as could live.

† In a pocket book of this lady's the following memorandum was found some years since. "Soon after my marriage, I rode over to see Liscombe, the ancient seat of my husband's family, being only about twelve miles from my father's. Mr. Lovett, to whom it belongs, not residing in it, allowed Mr. Sandby, a very respectable man, the clergyman of the parish, to dive in the house, who received us with great politeness. The house is very old and very gloomy, surrounded with high walls and old trees, but it has a venerable appearance. You enter through a great gateway into a court, round which the house and chapel are built. The windows, all of stone, give it more the look of a monastery than a mansion; but Mr. Sandby, to whom I made the remark, assured me I must not judge from appearances, for though it might have a gloomy outside, there were more joyful faces in it than in any house in the county, for there were more marriages in Liscombe chapel than in any three churches in the neighbourhood. From the court you enter the great hall, which is a large room, and is entirely covered with old armour. The gentlemen assured me they were particularly curious, and endeavoured to explain to me their different uses; but I begged to be excused, as I did not intend murdering men. "Well, madam," says Mr. Sandby, "I will shew you something more in your own way presently." From thence we proceeded through a variety of long passages and little rooms, for except the hall and the drawing room over it, which is a large and very handsome room, they are all small, but from their numbers must have held a very large family; as Mr. Sandby assured me, of all sizes, there were more than fifty. But what with the old tapestry, and the dark gilt leather furniture, and black oak, (for I believe this family considered paint as great an abomination in their house as they would on the faces of their wives and daughters,) I never saw any place more calculated to induce one to change this world for another. We came at last to the nursery, and Mr. Sandby directed my attention to a something in a great old frame over the chimney, but which, being in the old black letter, like a church Bible, I could not read a word of. "That, madam," says he, "is the nursery song of this family, founded on the two characters of the warrior and the lover, which tradition represents as eminently united in William Lovett, the founder of this house.

The song is as follows:

May my child be as stout,
May my child be as strong,
And my brave boy live also as long,
As Willy of Normandy.

From the nursery we proceeded to a little closet with a thousand locks. Mr. Sandby shewed us a chest full of papers and parchments, which, he said, were the different grants and appointments for some centuries of this family; and in my lifetime I never saw anything more beautifully illuminated than some of them were. He said the chest contained as curious a collection of letters as were in the possession of any private family in the kingdom. He said the letters were in general from some of the first people in the court of JAMES I. and CHARLES I.

The eldest son and heir,

1. SIR JONATHAN LOVETT, of Liscombe, in the county of Buckingham, was created a BARONET† 23rd October, 1781. Upon the death of his uncle Verney in 1770, he succeeded to the Irish estates, so that in him centred the remnant of the estates of the Lovett family in both kingdoms. In the year 1772 he enclosed the common field of Soulbury and Hollingdon, and expended large sums of money in the reparation of the old house at Liscombe, which, from the non-residence of the family for nearly a century, had fallen into decay. He m. Sarah, daughter of Jonathan Darby, esq. of Leap Castle, in the King's County, and had issue,

He died 12th January, 1812, when the BARONETCY EXPIRED, and the paternal estates, Liscombe, &c. devolved upon his daughter as co-heirs, whilst the estates at Soulbury and in Ireland, devised by Verney Lovet, in 1770, passed to his nephew, HENRY WILLIAM LOVETT, esq. now heir male of this ancient family.

to Sir Robert Lovett; who, from them, appears to have been a man of distinguished abilities, as the letters are upon very important subjects, and those of CHARLES I. allude particularly to the times. One, the contents of which I wished my father to be informed of (I begged to take an account in writing); it was from the secretary of state, Sir Edward Nicholas, in the year 1642. He writes to Sir Robert Lovett as his old friend, wishing him to come to London, as he can assure him he will not have any difficulty to obtain what he long ago should have been in possession of. "I asked," said Mr. Sandby, "the late Mr. Lovett, my patron, what that alluded to. He said, his father had told him, that upon the first creation of baronets, he had been promised to have been one. Why he had been omitted he could never learn, but that he attributes it to a disagreement he once had with Lord Salisbury upon some militia business; but of this he was not certain. However, thinking himself very ill used, he retired into the country, and never went to court again. That upon hearing from Sir Edward Nicholas, he wrote to thank him, but declined the honour on account of the targeness of his family, and that from the declining state of his health, he was unequal to undertake the journey, and which was really the case, for he died soon after. My patron, one of the best of men, never made any application for what I told him, many times, I thought he had such good pretensions. But his answer was always, I do not love obligations, and a refusal I should consider an insult; let things remain therefore as they are." Mrs. Lovett, in continuation, proceeds; "My father was so pleased with the account I gave him, that in a few days after, he went to Liscombe himself. Upon his return, he said he was highly entertained; that they were some of the most interesting letters he had ever read, and put many things in a different point of view from what he had before seen them in; that he had not time to go through the tenth part of them, but that he had promised to spend two or three days with Mr. Sandby to look over them all. I do not remember his ever mentioning whether he did so or not. Happening by accident, many years after, to find the above memorandum, and Mr. Lovett, to whom Liscombe then belonged, being in England, (for the family have long resided in Ireland,) I took the first opportunity of inquiring after my old friends the arms and papers at Liscombe, but sorry am I to record their fate. He said upon the death of his elder brother, who died a few months before he was of age, his mother had ordered some new furniture, which had been put into the house (as he intended residing there) to be sold; but that by some unfortunate mistake, the agent had sold the whole, old and new, and that a trace was not remaining. That a blacksmith, who had purchased some of the old armour, declared he believed it had been made by the devil, for that he could make no use of it; that by an equal degree of inattention, the papers were all lost, that the chest was left open, and that the only account he could ever receive of them was, that the children had made kites of the letters, and that the tailor of the parish told him he had cut up many of the parchments for measures, and he believed others had done the same; that there were very pretty pictures at the tops of them, (alluding to the illuminated letters,) which he had given his child. To the public probably the loss is not uninteresting, but to the family it is irrepavable.

* This gentleman's grandmother, Madame St. Gervais, on the revocation of the edict of Nantes fled to Ireland with her youthful son, afterwards the celebrated Dean Gervais, who, on account of his great wit and talents, Dean Swift used to say was the only person he was afraid of in company.

† The origin of the creation of the title is thus related:—In the summer of the year 1781, the Earl of Chesterfield having been some time absent from court, was asked by King GEORGE III. where he had been so long? "On a visit to Mr. Lovett, of Buckinghamshire," said the earl. "Ah!" said the king, "is that Lovett of Liscombe? they are of the genuine old Norman breed; how happens it that they are not baronets? would he accept the title? Go tell him," continued the king, "that if he'll accept it, it's much at his service; they have ever been staunch to the crown at a pinch." The communication was accordingly made, and the baronetage accepted; and Sir Jonathan, on going to court, was not less gratified than astonished at the cordial reception he met with, his majesty not only shewing a perfect knowledge of his descent and of the loyalty of the family, but likewise making particular inquiries as to the contents of the curious letters mentioned in the note below, as having been at Liscombe. At a later period Sir Jonathan, who possessed great influence in the county of Bucks, was offered a peerage, but having lost his only surviving son, he declined the honour.

LOWTHER, OF WHITEHAVEN.

CREATED
11th June, 1642.EXTINCT
2nd Jan. 1758.

Lineage.

The family of LOWTHER is of great antiquity in the county of Westmorland. The name is local, and has been written LODER, LOUDER, LOADER, LOUTHREY, and LOWTHER, from the town and manor of Lowther.* The manor was part of the great barony of Appleby, and its lords held it in coinage (a sort of military tenure) from the Viponts and Cliffords.

SIR GERVASIVS DE LOWTHER, knt. lived temp. HENRY III., and his great-grandson,

SIR HUGH DE LOWTHER, knt. was attorney-general to EDWARD I. and returned one of the knights for Westmoreland to the parliament held at Lincoln in the 28th of the same reign. He m. a daughter of Peter de Filiol, of Cumberland, and had two sons; HUGH (Sir), and Thomas, one of the justices of the King's Bench 5 EDWARD III. The elder,

SIR HUGH DE LOWTHER, knt. having taken up arms with Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, and others against Piers Gaveston temp. EDWARD II. and being concerned in the death of the said Gaveston, had the king's pardon, according to a special provision, in the parliament held at Westminster 15th October, 1313, wherein it was enacted that none should be called to account for the said offence. In 17 EDWARD II. he was one of the knights of the shire for Cumberland, and the next year was a commissioner of array for the same county on the occasion of a menaced invasion by the French king, as he was again in the 13 EDWARD III. for the counties of Westmoreland and Cumberland. In the 14th of that reign he served for Westmoreland in the parliament held at Westminster. The next year he was again returned, with Peter de Tylol, for Cumberland to the parliament held at Woodstock, and they had a writ for £19. 12s. to be levied on the county, for their expenses in attending forty-nine days. He was sheriff of Cumberland 26, 27, and 28 EDWARD III. In the 23rd of the same reign he served again as one of the knights for Cumberland, in which year a complaint was made by Sir William Lydell, of Scotland, that being taken prisoner at the battle of Durham by John de Standish, whom he had paid for his redemption, was delivered to Sir Hugh de Louthre, knt. to be conveyed safely from his enemies, who, in consideration of a falcon he presented to him, undertook to conduct him and entertain him at his house for three weeks. After which he delivered him to John, son and heir of Thomas de Louthre, his kinsman, to convey him out of the king's dominions; but the said John and Thomas carried him to strange places under close confinement, until he agreed to pay the said John de Louthre and Thomas a fine of 230 marks; whereupon the king commissioned Henry de Piercy, Ralph de Novill, and Thomas de Lucy, to inquire into the fact. He departed this life about the 46th of the same EDWARD, and was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN DE LOWTHER, knt. who was returned to parliament by the county of Westmoreland 66 EDWARD III. and 2 RICHARD II. He was s. by his elder son,†

SIR ROBERT DE LOWTHER, knt. M.P. for Cumberland 15 and 17 RICHARD II. 2, 5, and 8 HENRY IV. and 2 HENRY V. In the 6th of the last reign he was sheriff of the same county. He d. in 1439, was buried in the parish church of Louthre, and s. by his son,

SIR HUGH DE LOWTHER, knt. who, in the lifetime of his father, served under HENRY V. in the wars of France, and was one of the heroes of AGINCOURT. In the 4th, 9th, and 27th, Sir Hugh represented Cumberland in parliament, and was sheriff in the 18th and 34th of the same reign. He m. Anne, daughter of John de Darentwater, of Cumberland, and was s. by his son,

SIR HUGH LOWTHER, who m. Mabel, daughter and heir of Sir William Lancaster, of Stockbridge, and was father of

SIR HUGH LOWTHER, who m. Anne, daughter of Lancelot Thirkeld, knt. and was s. by his son,

SIR HUGH LOWTHER, who was made a knight of the Bath 17th November, 1501, on the marriage of Prince ARTHUR, eldest son of HENRY VII. He m. Dorothy, daughter of Henry, Lord Clifford, and had a son and heir,

SIR JOHN LOWTHER, knt. sheriff of Cumberland 7 and 31 HENRY VIII. In 4 EDWARD VI. he m. Lucy, daughter of Sir Thomas Curven, of Workington, in Cumberland; and was s. by his eldest son,

SIR RICHARD LOWTHER, knt. sheriff of Cumberland 8 and 30 ELIZABETH. He was likewise lord warden of the West Marches, and thrice commissioner in the great affairs between England and Scotland. When Mary, Queen of Scots, sought safety in England; and arrived at Cumberland 17th May, 1568, Queen ELIZABETH sent orders to Sir Richard Lowther to convey her majesty to Carlisle; but he subsequently incurred ELIZABETH's displeasure by permitting the Duke of Norfolk to visit the royal captive. He d. aged seventy-seven, in the year 1607, and was s. by his eldest son (by Frances, his wife, daughter of John Middleton, esq.)

SIR CHRISTOPHER LOWTHER, b. 8th September, 1677, who received the honour of knighthood from King JAMES I. at Newcastle, whither Sir Christopher attended his majesty with "a gallant company" from the Scottish border, 13th April, 1603. He m. first, Eleanor, daughter of William Musgrave, esq. of Hayton, in Cumberland, and had by that lady, with daughters, eight sons, viz.

1. JOHN, his heir.

11. Gerard (Sir), of St. Michael's, Dublin, chief justice of the Common Pleas in Ireland, and afterwards (1654) lord chancellor of that kingdom. He m. first, Anne, daughter of Sir Ralph Bulmer, and relict of — Weilbury, esq.; secondly, Anne, daughter of Sir Laurence Parsons; and thirdly, Margaret, daughter of Sir John King; but died issueless.

* That is, lower than the hills that surround, as that part of the county is called the bottom of Westmoreland.

† His younger son, WILLIAM DE LOWTHER, obtained the king's license, 14 RICHARD II. with Sir Thomas Colville and Sir John Eiton, knts. William Selveyr, Henry Van-Croy-pole, and Simon Ward, to challenge certain persons of the kingdom of Scotland to perform and exercise feats of arms; and thereupon the king appointed John, Lord Roos, to fix a camp and to be judge in the said exercise. In 2 HENRY IV. this William de Lowther was sheriff of Cumberland, and afterwards in the 7th, 8th, and 9th years of the same reign.

MAINWARING, OF OVER PEOVER.

CREATED
22nd Nov. 1660.

EXTINCT
7th Nov. 1726.

Lineage.

RANULPHUS, a noble Norman in the train of WILLIAM the Conqueror, one of the soldiers of fortune, who acquired as their share of the spoil, the county of Chester, had, for his immediate division, fifteen lordships there, amongst which was PRURE (afterwards Over-Peover). His son and heir,

RICHARD DE MASNILVAREN, was ancestor of WILLIAM MANWARING, of Over Peover, who wedded, first, (in 1306,) Catherine, daughter of John Belgrave, of Belgrave, in Cheshire, and secondly, Clementia Cotton, but had no issue. In the 17th of RICHARD II. his seal bore the arms of the family without distinction, viz. "arg. two bars gu." inscribed about S. Willielmi Mainwaring. For at that period, the elder house of Warmincham was extinct, and devolved to a daughter. He made his will in 1394, wherein, amongst other matters, he bequeaths his body to be buried in Aghton Church, and his picture in alabaster to cover his tomb in the said church; giving to the said church, a part of Christ's cross, which the wife of Randle Manwaring, his half-brother, had in her custody, shut up in wax: to the chapel of Over Peover, he gave Unam togam de bluch ut fiat inde vestimentum ibidem. He left also a competent salary for a chaplain to celebrate masses for his soul in the chapel of St. Mary, in Aghton Church, for seven years. He d. in 1399, and was s. by his half-brother,

JOHN MANWARING, of Over Peover, who m. about 13 RICHARD II. The king granted to this John, all the lands and goods of Sir Hugh Browe, which the said Hugh had forfeited by his rebellion, dated 16 August, 4 HENRY IV. He (John) waited on the prince, afterwards HENRY V. and he was made sheriff of Cheshire (quandiu nobis placuerit) 18th September, 4 HENRY IV. and continued in office 5th and 6th of the same king, in which writ, the Earl of Chester calls him, armigerum suum. He had also an annual pension from HENRY IV. of twenty marks, and was constituted, with Matthew Del Mere, and Thomas Meyshawe, judges of the gaol delivery at Chester, hac vice novo, die Aprilis, 5th HENRY IV. He d. in 1410, and was s. by his brother, RANDLE MANWARING, esq. of Over Peover, who m. Margery, widow of Richard Buckley, of Cheshill, in Cheshire, and daughter of Hugh Venables, Baron of Kinderton, and had issue,

JOHN (Sir), his heir.

1. JOHN - MANWARING UNIACKE, who m. Mary, daughter of the Rev. Dixie, Blundell, D. D. and had issue.

2. Catherine Uniacke, m. in 1779, John-Robert Parker, esq. of Green Park, in the county of Cork, and their third son, Roger Manwaring Parker, assumed, in 1800, the surname and arms of Manwaring by desire of his great-aunt, Mrs. Jones.

3. Francis Uniacke, m. to Henry Turner, esq. of Kensington Place, Bath.

IV. Mary, m. to Richard Jones, esq. and d. s. p. in 1808.

V. Catherine, m. first, in 1761, to Daniel Herring, esq. of Bath, and secondly, in 1778, to Thomas Lowfield, esq. also of Bath.

+ He had a bastard son, by Margery Wynnington, called Peter Manwaring.

"A descendant of this branch was (though a younger son) Dr. Roger Manwaring, who was born at Stretton, in Shropshire, and educated in the university of Oxford. He was sometime vicar of St. Giles's in the Fields, and chaplain to K. Charles 1st, before whom, preaching three sermons, entitled Religion and Allegiance, he was called in question for it by parliament, charged with endeavouring to destroy the king and kingdom by his divinity, and sentenced to be imprisoned, and was fined £1000, and ordered to make his submission, and was disabled to have or enjoy any preferment, or office." However, the king soon after pardoned him, and gave him the rich living of Stanford Rivers, in Essex, in 1653, made him dean of Worcester, and two years after nominated him to the bishopric of St. David's; in 1649 his troubles were revived in parliament, and tho' the old charges lay still at the bottom of the prosecution, yet the new crimes of popish innovations, conveying with papists, and being sociable and jovial, were trumped up against him, upon which he was (as Lloyd, in his memoirs, expresses it) apprehended suddenly, confined severely, held heavily, plundered violently, and persecuted from place to place continually, insomuch, that for the two last years of his life, not a week passed over his head without a messenger or an injury; which he desired God not to remember against his adversaries, and adjured all his friends to forget. Under these his troubles he had nothing left but a small temporal estate to support him; and died at Carnarthen, July 16, (A. Wood says, July 1) 1653. He was of a pious life and conversation, and very charitable; as appears particularly, by one of the three great designs which he had in pursuit, namely, the redeeming of captives; and though he laboured under a very severe character, with the Puritans, (and not without reason, if the accusation against him was true, of straining the prerogative in the matter of raising money without the consent of parliament;) yet by the Royalists, he was esteemed worthy of the great function which he bore, being a person of great zeal for the Church of England."

MARKHAM, OF SEDGEBROOKE.

CREATED
15th Aug. 1642.

EXTINCT
in 1779.

Lineage.

MARKHAM, a village in Nottinghamshire, Camden observes, gave name to the Markhams, "a family very famous heretofore both in antiquity and valour," of which was

SIR ALEXANDER DE MARKHAM, constable of the Castle of Nottingham, in the time of HENRY III. He was father of

ALEXANDER DE MARKHAM, whose grandson, JOHN DE MARKHAM, was an eminent lawyer in the reigns of EDWARD II. and EDWARD III. He m. Joan, daughter of Sir Nicholas Bothomsell, knt. and was father of

ROBERT DE MARKHAM, serjeant-at-law, who married a daughter of Sir John Cauntton, knt. of Cauntton, and had a son,

SIR JOHN MARKHAM, knt. one of the justices of the Common Pleas from 20th RICHARD II. to the 9th of HENRY IV. This learned person m. first, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John de Cressy, knt. and coheir† of her brother, Sir Hugh de Cressy, who d. s. p. temp. HENRY IV.; by this lady the judge acquired great possessions in Lincolnshire, and by the partition of the property made at Retford, 10 HENRY IV. the manors of Risegate, Braytoft, and Exton, in that county, fell to his posterity. He had issue,

ROBERT (Sir), who m. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir Nicholas Burdon, knt. and was ancestor of the Markhams, of Coatham and Allerton, Notts, of which family was the Right Rev. William Markham, Archbishop of York. (See BURKE'S Commoners, vol. ii. page 263.)

Sir John m. secondly, Millicent, daughter and co-heir of Sir John Bekerlinge, knt. relict of Sir Nicholas Burdon, knt. and had another son, JOHN (Sir).

The judge died in 1400, and was interred in West or Little Markham Church, Notts. His son by his second wife,

SIR JOHN MARKHAM, knt. an eminent lawyer, was appointed lord chief justice of the King's Bench, 22 HENRY VI. and his patents renewed on the accession of EDWARD IV. Of this learned and eminent man the following details are given by Fuller :

"John Markham was born at Markham, in Nottinghamshire, descended of an ancient and worthy family. He employed his youth in the studying of the municipal law of this realm, wherein he attained in such eminency, that KING EDWARD IV. knighted him, and made him lord chief justice of the King's Bench, in the place of Sir John Fortescue, that learned and upright judge, who fled away with KING HENRY VI. Yet Fortescue was not missed, because Markham succeeded him; for though these two judges did severally lean to the sides of Lancaster and York, yet both sat upright in matters of judicature.

* This lady m. secondly, Captain Edward Mansel.

† KATHERINE CRESSY, the other co-heir, m. Sir John Clifton, knt.

"We will instance and insist on one memorable act of our judge, which, though single in itself, was plural in the concernings thereof.

"King EDWARD IV. having married into the family of the Woodvills (gentlemen of more antiquity than wealth, and of higher spirits than fortunes) thought it fit for his own honour to bestow honour on theirs: but he could not so easily provide them of wealth as titles. For honour he could derive from himself, like light from a candle, without any diminishing of his own lustre; whereas wealth flowing from him, as water from a fountain, made the spring the shallower, wherefore he resolved to cut down some prime subjects, and to engraft the queen's kindred into these estates, which otherwise like suckers must feed on the stock of his own exchequer.

"There was at this time, one Sir Thomas Cook, late lord mayor of London and knight of the Bath, one who had well lick'd his fingers under Queen MARGARET, (whose wardroper he was, and customer of Hampton) a man of great estate. It was agreed that he should be accused of high treason, and a commission of oyer and terminer granted forth to the Lord Mayor, the Duke of Clarence, the Earl of Warwick, the Lord Rivers, Sir John Markham, Sir John Fogg, to try him in Guild-Hall: and the king by private instructions to the judge appeared so farre, that Cook, though he was not, must be found guilty, and if the law were too short, the judge must stretch it to the purpose. The fault laid to his charge was, for lending moneys to Queen MARGARET, wife to King HENRY VI.; the proof was the confession of one Hawkins, who being rack'd in the Tower, had confessed so much. The council for the king hanging as much weight on the smallest wire, as it would hold, aggravated each particular, and by their rhetorical flashes blew the fault up to a great height. Sir Thomas Cook pleaded for himself, that Hawkins indeed upon a season came to him, and requested him to lend one thousand marks upon good security. But he desired first to know for whom the money should be: and understanding it was for Queen MARGARET, denied to lend any money, though at last the said Hawkins descended so low, as to require but one hundred pounds, and departed without any penny lent to him.

"Judge Markham, in a grave speech, did recapitulate, select, and collate the material points on either side, shewing that the proof reached not the charge of high treason, and misprision of treason was the highest it could amount to; and intimated to the jury, to be tender in matter of life, and discharge good consciences. The jury being wise men (whose apprehensions could make up a whole sentence of every nod of the judge) saw it behoved them to draw up treason into as narrow a compass as might be, lest it become their own case; for they lived in a troublesome world, wherein the cards were so shuffled, that two kings were turn'd up trump at once, which amazed men how to play their games. Whereupon they acquitted the prisoner of high treason, and found him guilty as the judge directed. Yet it cost Sir Thomas Cook, before he could get his liberty, eight hundred pounds to the queen, and eight thousand pounds to the king: a sum in that age more sounding like the ransom of a prince, than the fine of a subject. Besides, the Lord Rivers (the queen's father) had, during his imprisonment, despoiled his houses, one in the city, another in the country, of plate and furniture, for which he never received a penny recompence. Yet God righted him of the wrongs men did him by blessing the remnant of his estate to him, and his posterity, which still flourish at Giddy Hall.

"As for Sir John Markham, the king's displeasure fell so heavy on him, that he was outed of his place, and Sir Thomas Billing put in his room, though the one lost that office with more honour than the other got it; and gloried in this, that though the king could make him so judge, he could not make him no upright judge. He lived privately the rest of his days, having (besides the estate got by his practice) fair lands by Margaret, his wife, daughter and co-heir of Sir John Leke, of Cotham, in Nottinghamshire, whose mother, Joan, was daughter and heir of Sir John Talbot, of Swannington, in Leicestershire."

This gentleman was admitted a fellow commoner of Christ College, Cambridge, 18th April, 1627, whence he removed to the Inner Temple, and entered a student there, 17th June, 1629. In 1638, CROMWELL created him a BARONET, and the patent is now in the possession of Thomas Massingberd, esq. of Candlesby House; § the historians of the family have studiously omitted to notice its existence, and Mr. Dale asserts, that Sir Henry had "maintained an inviolable allegiance to his lawful sovereign." There is some reason to believe that he did not then assume the title. Soon after the Restoration, Sir Henry was recreated a BARONET 22nd August, 1660. He m. first, Elizabeth, youngest daughter of William Lyster, esq. of Rippingale and Colby, and had issue,

‡ Sir Draner's banner represented a knight on horseback, with the motto "Deus, oculi nostri defixi sunt in Te, sic Pacem quærimus."

§ The preamble to the patent sets forth that the honour is conferred "as well for his faithfulness and good affection to us and his country, as for his descent, patrimony, ample estate, and ingenious education, every way answerable, who out of a liberal mind hath undertaken to maintain thirty foot soldiers in our dominion of Ireland, for three whole years." Dame Elizabeth Mawbey, Wife of Sir Joseph Mawbey, Bart.

Of Botleys, in this Parish,
After sustaining a long and painful illness,
with the greatest fortitude and resignation,

Died on the 19th of August, 1790,

In the 40th year of her age.

“Why weep for me,” the blameless woman said,
“We all must die, and I am not afraid;
No good to me affords or sigh, or tear,
I have done no wrong, and therefore cannot fear;
Good works and truth shall cheer life's parting scene,
For virtue only makes the mind serene.”
Yes, we must part! the conflict now is o'er,
And husband, children, friends, in vain deplore!
But ah! blest Saint! to all around impart
Thy settled goodness, thy unerring heart,
Which bade thee shine, in ev'ry state of life,
As Daughter, Maiden, Parent, Friend, and Wife.

A national monument was voted by the House of Commons to his memory, and has been erected in St. Paul's Cathedral, on which is recorded an extract from the following letter, addressed by his illustrious commander, the Duke of Wellington, to Lady Myers, his mother:—

"MADAM,

"I cannot allow the despatches, which I am now sending to England, to go away, without availing a few lines to console with your Ladyship upon the severe loss of which they convey the intelligence.

"Although the mind of the wife and mother of soldiers must be in some degree prepared to receive intelligence of this description, it cannot be expected that you should not be severely afflicted by the loss which you have sustained; and I do not address your Ladyship with the hope that anything I can write will have the immediate effect of alleviating your sorrow.

"It may, however, be some consolation to you hereafter, to know that your son fell in an action, in which, if possible, the British troops surpassed all their former deeds, and at the head of the fusileer brigade, to which a great part of the final success of the day was to be attributed.

"As an officer, he had already been highly distinguished, and if Providence had prolonged his life, he promised to become one of the brightest ornaments to his profession, and to increase the military reputation of his family, and to be an honour to his country."

"I could not deny myself the melancholy satisfaction of communicating to you my sense of your late son's merits, in hopes that, at some future period, the occasion and mode of his death, as well as this evidence of my favour, able opinion of him, and of whose command he had served for some time, may alleviate your affliction."

"I have the honour to be, Madam,

Your Ladyship's most obedient humble servant,

W. WELLSINGTON."

Arms—Arg. on the bend proper, an ancient ship at anchor, with three masts, on each a single yard across, the sails furled, sable, colours flying gu. (and also an honourable augmentation granted to General Sir William Myers, 12th June, 1804, to be borne, by him and his descendants; and also by the descendants of his late brothers Graham Myers, and John Myers, with due and proper differences), on a canton of the last; a baton or, and a sword also proper, point and hilt gold, in saltire, encircled by a mural crown arg. and for the crest, on a wreath of the colours, a mermaid proper, her waist also encircled by a mural crown arg. (a finlet for difference).

The Fusileer Brigade was formed of the 7th and 23rd regiments, and had only left the trenches before Badajos, in the night, and when they arrived at Albuera at nine in the morning, the battle was already far gone, and success more than doubtful; the Spaniards had been driven from heights which commanded the combined lines, the first brigade had fallen back, and the retreat, it was thought, was sound. To General afterwards Sir Lowry Cole, in whose division was the fusileer brigade, Sir William Myers expressed his anxiety for orders to advance, at the moment was critical. Sir William eagerly entreated permission to lead on his brigade, and when, at length, he succeeded in obtaining permission, he showed the highest satisfaction, and, turning to his brigade, he exclaimed, "It will be a glorious day for the fusileers!" slowly they moved on, bearing with them the fate of the army; the order and exact line prescribed by Sir William's exertions in ascending the hill, of which the enemy had gained possession, was remarked by every officer of either army. His horse was wounded under him, he proceeded on foot, giving his men an example of that unconquerable spirit they throughout displayed; another charger was brought which he had hardly mounted, when the fatal shot struck him, passing from under the hip, upward, in an oblique direction, through the intestines; he continued, with his wonted firmness, to address his soldiers. It became necessary, however, to take him from his horse, and he was carried off the field by his trusty comrades, expressing more pride at their conduct, than sense of his own suffering, and only regretting his separation from his gallant fusileers; thus, closing a career no less brilliant to himself, than its premature termination was destructive to the hopes and honours of his family.

The ancient hall at Leighton, once so celebrated for its hospitality, has long been removed; and in the place of the old residence of the Middletons, appears the long line of a modern front, consisting of a centre and two wings. This has, moreover, been coated by a facing of polished limestone, extremely dazzling and oppressive to the eye in sunshine. The massy oak and beech woods, too, the former of great antiquity, and the herd of fallow deer which adorned the park, have also long since disappeared.

Lineage.

Amongst the Norman nobles who entered England with the CONQUEROR, in 1066,

WILLIAM DE MOLESNE appears to have been one of the most distinguished, as well from the Battle Abbey roll, wherein his name standeth the eighteenth in order as from the old chronicles of the duchy, wherein "he is set down and placed as a most especial and chief man in nearness and singular credit" with his royal master. To this William Roger de Poytiers, † who was then possessed of all that tract of land in Lancashire between the rivers Ribble and Mersey, by gift of the crown, gave among other lands the manors of Septon, Thorneton, Kerdon, ten carucates and a half of land, at the service of half a knight's fee, whereof he, William, made Septon his chief seat, and was s. at his decease by his son,

VIVIAN DE MOLESNE, ‡ whose son and heir, ADAM DE MOLINES, Dominus de Sefton, m. Annota, only daughter and heir of Benedict de Garnett, Lord of Speke, in Lancashire, and from him we pass over several generations, each highly eminent, § to

SIR RICHARD MOLYNEUX, who eminently distinguished himself in the wars of France, was at the battle of Azincourt, and received the honour of Knighthood in the reign of HENRY V. He was in favour also with HENRY VI. who by letters patent conferred upon him, his sons, and their heirs, the chief forestership of the royal forests and parks in West Derbyshire, the stewardship of Salford, and the office of constable of Liverpool. He was slain at Blore Heath, with the Lord Audley, in 1400. Sir Richard m. first, Joan, daughter and heir of Sir Gilbert Haydock, knight and relict of Sir Peter Legh, of Lyme, and by her had several sons, of whom RICHARD, the eldest, was ancestor of the EARLS OF SEFTON and SIR THOMAS, the second of the family before us. He wedded, secondly, Helen, daughter of Radcliffe of Radcliffe Tower, and relict of Sir William Harrington, and by that lady had two daughters, Anne, wife of Richard Nevil, of Loversedge, and Margaret, of Sir Peter Leigh, knight of Bradley.

The second son,

SIR THOMAS MOLYNEUX, of Haughton, in Nottinghamshire, was of the privy council to HENRY IV. and behaving valiantly in the expedition into Scotland, anno 1482, was made a knight banneret, by Richard, Duke of Gloucester, at Berwick; in the same year he built the church and fair house at Hawton, and died in 1492. He m. first, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Robert Markham, knight of Cotham, Notts, by whom he had a son, ROBERT, his heir, and a daughter, Elizabeth, who m. first, John Bacard, esq.; and secondly, Stephen Hatfield, esq. of Willoughby. Sir Thomas m. secondly, Catherine, daughter of John Cotton, esq. of Redware, in Staffordshire, and widow of Thomas Poutrell, esq. of Mallam, in the county of Derby, and had by her

EDMUND (Sir), K. B. one of the justices of the Common Pleas in 1556, and died in 1552. Sir Edmund m. Jane, daughter of John Cheyne, esq. of Chesham-boys, Bucks, and had issue,

JOHN, of Thorp, m. Anne, daughter of George

† Called by the Conqueror, his familiar in arms, and styled "de Poytiers," because his wife was a Potaire, or native of the province of Poytiers: he was son of Roger, Count Montgomerie, Arundel, and Shrewsbury, by Mabel, sister and heir of Arnald, Count of Bellesmayne, in Normandy.

‡ Other accounts differ from this, and say, that William, and Vivian de Molines, his brother, were in the first expedition of the army sent by William the Conqueror, under the conduct of Roger de Poytiers, and that the said Roger gave the lordship of Septon, &c. to Vivian de Molines and his posterity, shortly after the entrance of the Normans, which coincides with other authorities. CAMDEN, in his Britannia, speaking of Larpole (Larverpool) observes, "The name is not to be met with in old writings; but only that Roger de Poitiers, who was lord of the honour of Lancaster, built a castle there, the government whereof was enjoyed for a long time by the noble family of the Molyneux, knights (and now Lords Molyneux), whose chief seat is hard by, at Septon, which the said Roger de Poitiers bestowed upon Vivian de Molyneux, a little after the coming of the Normans; for all the land between the Ribbet and the Mersey belonged to the said Roger, as appears by Doomsday."

§ SIR THOMAS MOLYNEUX was constable of Chester, "a man of great power, authority, and especial credit in Lancashire and Cheshire," temp. RICHARD II.

SIR WILLIAM MOLYNEUX distinguished himself at the battle of Navarre, in Spain, under EDWARD the Black Prince, and was made a knight banneret in 1367.

† "It seems probable, that Griffen, immediately previous to the grant of it, by ROBERT the 2nd, to Hugh de Eglintoun, had been the property of the king himself, who had acquired it, while steward, from his grandfather Robert Bruce, or from his uncle David the 2nd; having fallen to the crown by forfeiture, during the contest with the Balfour party. SIR FRANCIS MOORE, knt. an eminent person in the time of ELIZABETH, of whom the following details are given by Anthony Wood. "He was born at East Hildesly, or Ilderley, near Wantage, in Berks, educated in Grammar learning at Reading, entered a Commoner in St. John's College, Oxford, 1574, or thereabouts, continued there till near Bachelor's Standing, and then he retired to the Middle Temple, where after severe encounters had with the crabbed parts of the municipal laws, he became a Barrister, and noted for his great proficiency in his profession, and integrity in his dealings. In the latter end of Queen Elizabeth, and beginning of King James, he was several times elected a Burgess, to sit in Parliament, in which he was a frequent speaker; afterwards he was Counsellor, and Under Steward for several years to the University of Oxford; the members of which conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts, in 1612. Two years after, he was made Serjeant-at-law, and in 1616, March 17, received the honor of Knighthood at Theobalds, from his Majesty, King James I. After his death some of his Works were published, which bear these titles, Cases collected and reported from the original in French, that then (1663) remained in the hands of

Sir Jeffrey Palmer, Attorney General to King Charles the 2nd, which is the same, as I take it, written fairly with the Author's hand in fol. that was lately in the library of Arthur, Earl of Anglesey.

His learned reading 4 James 1st, in the Middle Temple Hall, concerning Charitable Uses, abridged by himself. London, 1676, fol. published by George Duke, of the Inner Temple, Esq.

Our Author, P. Moore, was a member of that parliament, as it seems, wherein the Statute concerning Charitable Uses was made, and was, as 'tis farther added, the penner thereof. At length paying the last debt to nature on the 20th November, 1621, aged 63, was buried in a Vault under the Church at Great Fawley, near to Wantage, before mentioned, in which Vault his posterity (who are Baronets, living in that parish) have been since, and are hitherto interred, as I have been instructed by his grandson, Sir Henry Moore, Bart." I. THOMAS MORGAN, esq. of Llangatock, in the county of Monmouth, who was created a BARONET 1st February, 1668-1, for his great zeal in promoting the Restoration. He had distinguished himself, when Colonel Morgan, as one of the most successful parliamentary leaders in the west of England; during the Protectorate he was promoted to the rank of major-general, and commanded the British auxiliary force which gained the battle of Dunkirk against the Spaniards. He became subsequently general of horse under MONK, and so high in the confidence of his commander, that Monk declared, the November preceding the return of the king, "that the presence and usefulness of Major-General Morgan, in Scotland, was so seasonable to him, that he looked upon his single person as a counterpoise to those hundred and fifty officers who had left the service or had been cashiered." He was subsequently appointed by the king, at the especial recommendation of Monk, then Earl of Albemarle, governor of Jersey, whilst his brother, Sir Henry Morgan (far better known as CAP-TAIN MORGAN, the Buccaneer), was made governor of Jamaica. Sir Thomas Morgan is mentioned at great length by Falle, in the introduction to his History of Jersey, who thus concludes: "Of this brave man, I shall only add, in commendation of his great vigilance, and care of his charge, that he never allowed himself to be long absent from it, and would sit whole days on the carriage of a cannon, hastening and encouraging the workmen employed in the new fortifications of Elizabeth Castle, which were carried on under his order and inspection. Though he fell not in battle, he may be said to have died in the bed of honour, by dying on his post, i. e. in the island, after he had put it in a better state of defence, and every way on a better military foot than it ever had been before." Lady Pridenax attended with great zeal to the education of her son, and under her guidance he became a person distinguished in his time for learning and accomplishments. He resided with her at Churston, in West Putford, a small parish to the west of Bytheford, where he most sedulously followed his studies, and her ladyship, until her decease in October, 1647, had the entire direction of his affairs. Soon after his return home, he was married to one of the granddaughters of his step-father. In 1645, he was elected to the Long Parliament, by the county of Devon, without solicitation on his part, but did not take his seat. In 1651, he was appointed sheriff for Devonshire, having the year before settled at Werrington, in that county, which he had purchased from Sir Francis Drake, and being an intimate friend of General Monk's, was subsequently employed in the restoration of the exiled monarch. MORLAND, OF SULHAMSTEAD BANISTER.

3 B

CREATED 18th July, 1666.—EXTINCT IN NOV. 1716.

Lineage.

I. SAMUEL MORLAND, a man of considerable celebrity at the period in which he lived, was son of the Rev. Thomas Morland, rector of Sulhamstead, in Berkshire, and born about 1625, as we learn from one of his works, dated 1695, wherein he says he had then passed the seventieth year of his age. He received his education at Winchester school, and Magdalen College, Cambridge. In 1653, he went to Sweden, in the famous embassy of Bulstrode Whitelock, and became subsequently assistant to secretary Thurloe. In a few months after he was sent by Cromwell to the Duke of Savoy, to remonstrate against the persecution of the Waldenses, and published on his return, a "History of the Evangelical Churches of the Valley Piedmont." As an ingenious mechanic, however, the

* This Sir William was one of the chief instruments in the Restoration, for though General Monk had the power to execute, yet Sir William's head conducted that great affair. Indeed the publishers of Lord Clarendon's history, have tacitly, though unjustly deprived him of the share he had in that memorable scene, and have accumulated honours on another western family that were only due to him. For proof of his merit in that transaction, nothing can be stronger than the king's giving him the seals at Canterbury, on his return to London, so great and speedy an honour, could only be the reward of the greatest services, and which both the king and Lord Clarendon, had before equally acknowledged by letters under their own hands from Breda."

See the Letters in Thurloe's Collection.

reputation of Sir Samuel Morland stands highest, and amongst his inventions are enumerated the speaking trumpet, the fire engine, a capstan for heaving anchors, and the STRAM ENGINE: others claim this great discovery, but the proofs in favour of Morland are extremely convincing.

In 1675, Sir Samuel (who had been created a BARONET in 1660,) obtained a lease of Vauxhall House, made it his residence, and considerably improved the premises, every part of which showed the inventive genius of the proprietor; the side table in the dining room was supplied with a large fountain, and the glasses stood under little streams of water. His coach had a movable kitchen with clockwork machinery, with which he could make soup, broil steaks, or roast a joint of meat. About 1684, he purchased a house at Hammersmith, near the waterside, and all his letters we have seen in the Lambeth Library, or British Museum, are thence dated. He gave a pump and well, adjoining to his house, for the use of the public, which benefaction was thus recorded upon a tablet fixed in the wall: "Sir Samuel Morland's well, the use of which he freely gives to all persons, hoping that none who shall come after him, will adventure to incur God's displeasure, by denying a cup of cold water (provided at another's cost and not their own) to either neighbour, stranger, passenger, or poor thirsty beggar, July 8, 1695." This pump has been removed, but the stone tablet was preserved in the garden of the house, afterwards known by the name of Walbrough House.

Sir Samuel married four wives; the first was a French lady, Susanne de Milleville, daughter of Daniel de Milleville, Baron of Boessey; the second, Carola, daughter of Sir Roger Harsnet, knt.; and the third, Anne, daughter of George Feilding, esq. After her death, he was entrapped into a fourth marriage, with a woman who pretended to be an heiress of £20,000. This, he himself stated, proved his ruin. Of abandoned character, she probably impaired his property by extravagance, and though he obtained a divorce from her in 1688, the rest of his history is but a melancholy detail of disappointments and distress. In 1689, he wrote a long letter to Archbishop Tenison, giving an account of his life, and concluding with a declaration that his only wish was to retire and spend his life in "Christian solitude," for which he begs the archbishop's "helping hand to have his condition truly represented to his majesty." He died in January, 1696, and was s. by his son, in 1628.

Lineage.

WILLIAM MORYSINE, or MORISON, of this family, possessed lands at Chardwell, in the county of York, about the reign of HENRY VI. which descended to his son, of his own name,

WILLIAM MORYSINE, or MORISON, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Roger Lee, of Preston, in Yorkshire, and had a son and heir,

THOMAS MORYSINE, of Chardwell, and afterwards of the county of Hertford, who marrying a daughter of Thomas Merry, of Hatfield, in that county, had, with a daughter, the wife of Stephen Hales, of Coventry, two sons, viz.

RICHARD (Sir), his heir.

Fines, fellow of Peter House, in Oxford, who after taking a master's degree, and studying the civil law, obtained a license in 1589, at the age of twenty-three, of the master and fellows of the house to travel, and leaving the university, he embarked in 1591, and spent the following seven years abroad; returning in 1598, he became secretary to Sir Charles Blount, lord deputy of Ireland. He died in 1614, and his travels were published in 1617, (London) entitled "An Itinerary, containing ten years travels through the twelve dominions of Germany, Bohmerland, Switzerland, Netherland, Denmark, Poland, England, Scotland, and Ireland, divided into three parts."

The elder son,

SIR RICHARD MORYSINE, or MORISON, spent, like his brother, several years in the university of Oxford, took a degree in arts, afterwards travelled, and became distinguished amongst the most accomplished of his time. In 1537, he was a prebendary of Yatminster Secunda, in the church of Salisbury, and being at length recommended to HENRY VIII. as a person of worth and ability, he was accredited ambassador to the Emperor Charles V. as he was again, by EDWARD VI. He received the honour of knighthood in Italy, and died at Strasburgh, 17th March, 1556. Sir Richard was the author of many works, was esteemed a learned man, encouraged learning, and was liberal to several scholars of note. He realized by his own exertions a fair estate, comprising the manor of Whitesbury, or Whichbury, in Wilts and Hants; the manor of East Chinolk, in Somersetshire; and the manor Cashiobury, where he had commenced the erection of a mansion house. He m. Bridget, eldest daughter of John, Lord Hussey, of Sleaford,* and by that lady (who m. secondly, Henry, Earl of Rutland, and thirdly, Francis, Earl of Bedford,) had issue,

CHARLES (Sir), his heir.

Elizabeth, m. first, to William, eldest son of Henry, Lord Norreys; and secondly, to Henry Clinton, Earl of Lincoln.

Sir Richard was s. by his son,

SIR CHARLES MORRISON, of Cashiobury, in the county of Hertford, who received the honour of knighthood from QUEEN ELIZABETH. This gentleman finished the mansion at Cashiobury, a stately structure in the midst of a park, with beautiful gardens and wood walks. He m. Dorothea, daughter of Nicholas Clark, esq. and had issue,

CHARLES (Sir), his heir.

Bridget, m. to Robert Ratcliffe, sixth Earl of Sussex. (Refer to BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.)

* Beheaded and attainted in 1537.

Sir Charles d. in 1509, and was interred in Watford Church, on the south side of a chapel (in the chancel) which he had built, where a noble monument was erected to his memory. He was s. by his son,

I. SIR CHARLES MORRISON, who was made a Knight of the Bath at the coronation of King JAMES I. and created a BARONET 29th June, 1611. He m. the Hon. Mary Hicks, * daughter and co-heir of Baptist, Viscount Campden, and left an only surviving child,

ELIZABETH, who m. Arthur, Lord Capel, and was mother of Arthur Capel, first EARL OF ESSEX.

Sir Charles d. in 1628, and was interred in Watford Church, where a sumptuous monument was raised to the memory of himself and his wife, with their effigies curiously wrought in marble thereon, as also the effigies of two sons, who died young, and of his daughter, the Lady Capel. The BARONETCY expired with Sir Charles, and his estates passed to the noble house of Capel. Cashiobury has ever since been the chief seat of the EARLS OF ESSEX.

MORTON, OF MILBOURNE ST. ANDREW.

CREATED
1st Mar. 1618-9.

EXTINCT
in 1698.

Lineage.

The family of MORTON, derived its surname from MORRON, (anciently written MARTON,) a hamlet, in the parish of Harworth, in the confines of Nottinghamshire, at the utmost boundary whereof, near to Bautrey Town, in Yorkshire, an hospital was founded by the Mortons, and a chapel wherein they were buried, in consequence of which they were styled indifferently Bautrey, or Morton.

The first we meet with is

WILLIAM DE MORTON, whose son,

PETER DE MORTON, gave to the monks of Blythe, one carucat of land in Marton, with all appurtenances, and timber in his wood, to make them lodging and for fireing; as likewise a toft in the same town, and free multure in the mill thereunto belonging, on condition that they would receive him into their society "when God should give it into his heart." To Peter succeeded,

NICHOLAS DE MORTON, whose wife, Agnes having outlived him, did fealty in her widowhood to the prior of Blythe the Friday next after the Ascension of our Lord, 1289, in the name of ROGER, her son, then under age, for two bovats of land in Marton, which the said Roger claimed to hold of the said prior, and acknowledging to owe 4*s.* per annum, and gave for relief, eight shillings. The said,

ROGER DE MORTON, was father of

THOMAS DE MORTON, whose son, and heir,

SIR ROBERT DE MORTON, knt. of Bautre, served in parliament for the county of Nottingham, in the 35th 39th 40th and 43rd of EDWARD III. in the last mentioned year he is called a knight, and in seven years afterwards he was constituted escheator of the counties of Nottingham and Derby, as he was again in the 1st of RICHARD II. I. JOHN the celebrated CARDINAL MORTON, archbishop of Canterbury, and lord chancellor of England, temp. HENRY VII. of whom ANTHONY WOOD, states, "that he was a wise and eloquent man, but in his nature harsh and haughty—that he was much accepted by the King, but envied by the Nobility, and hated by the people. He won the King's mind with Secrecy and Diligence, chiefly because he was his old servant in his less fortunes, and for that also he was in his affections, not without an inveterate Malice against the House of York, under which he had been in trouble." This eminent man died at the advanced age of ninety, in September, 1500, and was buried in the Cathedral Church, at Canterbury.

II. Thomas, archdeacon of Ely.

Lineage.

The MOSTYNS, as the name was originally written, of Flintshire, sprang from Tudor Trevor, Lord of Bromfield, Chirk, Maelor, Whittington, and Oswaldstree, and for centuries have held high station amongst the leading men of the principality.

RICHARD, the son of Howell ap Jevan Vychan, m. Catherine, daughter of Sir Thomas Salisbury, and had, with five daughters, two sons,

THOMAS, } who assumed the name of MOSTON, from PIERCE, } the seat of the family, by the advice and direction of Richard Lee, Bishop of Lichfield, then (temp. HENRY VIII.) lord president of Wales.

The younger son, Pierce, purchased TALACRE, and from him the extant baronets Mostyn, of Talacre, descend. The elder son,

WILLIAM MOSTON, esq. of Moston,* was chief of the family in the time of ELIZABETH, and was directed, under her majesty's commission, dated in the 9th of her reign, with others of the principal gentlemen of North Wales, to hold an Eisteddfa, or session of the poets, musicians, and bards, at Caerwis (the last convened by royal authority), in which commission it is set forth that his ancestors had the right to bestow the silver harp on the person judged the most worthy by the commissioners. He married Margaret, daughter of Robert Powell, esq. of Park, and had three sons and two daughters, of whom the eldest son and heir,

SIR THOMAS MOSTYN, knt. of Mostyn, alone left issue. He m. Ursula, daughter and heir of William Goodman, esq.† and had three sons and two daughters, viz.

‡ By his wife, Sidney, daughter of Sir William Gerard, lord chancellor of Ireland, in 1576.

§ PENNANT, in his History of Whiteford and Holywell, gives a plate of the monument of the wife of this William Mostyn, with the following account and inscription:

"The first (of the monuments) has the figure of a man and woman kneeling on opposite sides of a desk. Three sons are behind the man, and two daughters behind the woman, in the same attitudes. They are most neatly engraven on a tablet of white marble, and the whole included in a very neat frame. The inscription gives their brief tale:

'Neere to this lieth the body of Elizabeth Mostyn, one of the coheiresses of Richard Aliersey, of the city of Chester, gent. wife of William Mostyn, Arch. Bang. and rector of Chryselton. By whom he had issue three sonnes and two daughters. She departed this life the 10th of April, Ann. Dni. 1647.'

Sir Roger was succeeded at his decease by his grandson,

SIR ROGER MOSTYN, knt. of Mostyn, who took up arms for King CHARLES I. and having his majesty's commission, raised and maintained fifteen hundred men at his own expense for the service; with this corps he took the castle of Hawarden, and entered at its head the city of Chester, then besieged by the parliamentarians. He likewise repaired the castle of Flint at his own charge, and was appointed governor thereof. In this fortress he sustained a long siege, enduring the greatest hardships, and surrendered at last only under the especial order of the king. He thus expended above sixty thousand pounds, and had his mansion house at Mostyn so dilapidated and spoiled, that he was obliged to live for several years at a farm-house, in the vicinity, after he had obtained his discharge from Conway Castle, in which

* Sir Roger and Piers Pennant, of Byehton, seem to have been companions, from the P. S. to the following curious epistle:

"DEAR PYERS,

"I hope you will excuse me for asking for the four pounds you owe me for the pair of oxen; for I want the money to make up twenty pounds, to send my son to Oxford next week.

"I am, dear Pyers, yours, &c.

"ROGER MOSTYN.

"P. S. How does your head do this morning?—mine aches & confoundedly."

At this time money was so scarce, that four pounds bought a pair of oxen, and the baronet was thought very liberal in sending his heir apparent to the university with twenty pounds in his purse.

Whitlock, whose sister was Sir Roger's mother, speaks of him in the following terms, notwithstanding their principles were so widely different: "Then the parliament forces (in 1643) took in Mostyn House, belonging to Colonel Mostyn, the governor of Flint; and in Mostyn four pieces of ordnance and some arms. This Colonel Mostyn is my sister's son, a gentleman of good parts and mottle, of a very ancient family, large possessions, and great interest in the country, so that in twelve hours he raised fifteen hundred men for the king, and was well beloved there, living very nobly."

† Only son of The Hon. THOMAS SAVAGE (second son of Thomas, Viscount Savage), by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter and co-heir of William Whitmore, esq. of Leighton, by Margaret, daughter of Sir Hugh, and sister and heir of Sir George Beeston, of Beeston, in the same county.

Sir Henry espoused the royal cause in the civil wars, and was at the battle of Edge Hill. He was chosen by the town of Warwick, member in the convention parliament which restored CHARLES II.; and was afterwards representative for the same place in the Long Parliament. He was deputy lieutenant for Warwickshire, and was appointed by patent, by King CHARLES II. paymaster-general of the forces. "His good housekeeping and liberality to the poor, who scarcely ever went away unfed from his gates, gained him the general love and esteem of his neighbours, and he was distinguished throughout the kingdom for being a generous benefactor to the poor cavaliers, whose services were not rewarded by King CHARLES II." He d. 22nd January, 1700, at the advanced age of eighty-three, leaving no surviving issue by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Murray, esq. when the BARONETCY became EXTINCT. The name of this family was spelt at different periods, Nycol, Nicoll, Nicolls, Nicholls, and Nicholl. The exact same coat armour was also used by the Nicholls, of Llantwitt Major,* in Glamorganshire, and by the Nicholls of Cornwall, who derived probably from a common ancestor with the Northamptonshire family, but which branch is the senior it is difficult to ascertain.

THOMAS NICOLLS, esq. serjeant-at-law, (son of William Nicolls, who was buried in Hardwicke Church, in 1575, aged ninety-six,) purchased, temp. ELIZABETH from Wiston Brown a third part of the manor of Hardwicke, Northamptonshire. Sir Augustine died in 1616, while on the northern circuit, at Kendall, in Westmoreland; and, Fuller informs us, that a monument was there erected to his memory. O'NEILL, OF UPPER CLANEBOYS.

CREATED
13th Nov. 1648.

.....

Lineage.

This was a branch from the Milesian stock from which the extant noble family of O'NEILL claims descent, the ROYAL HOUSE OF ULSTER.

HUGH BOY O'NEILL, from whom the territories called the Claneboys, in the counties of Down and Antrim, received their name, grandson of HUGH MEYTH, King of Ulster in 1122, recovered those lands from the English (which had been wrested from his family at the invasion temp. HENRY II.), and his descendants enjoyed them until the reign of JAMES I. when a portion was conquered by force of arms from the O'Neills, more purchased by King JAMES from them, and some part left in their possession, which has descended to the O'NEILLS of Shane Castle. King JAMES, when he instituted the order of Baronets, had chiefly in view the subduing the clan O'Neill in Ulster, and the Ulster hand—the red hand of O'Neill—was given as a badge to the order.

I. BRYAN O'NEILL, in consideration of his gallant services at the battle of Edge Hill, was created a BARONET by King CHARLES I. 13th November, 1643. Sir Bryan m. Jane Finch, of the family of the Earl of Nottingham, and dying in 1680, was s. by his son,

II. SIR BRYAN O'NEILL, one of the judges of the Court of King's Bench in Ireland temp. JAMES II. who m. Mary Plunket, sister of Christopher, tenth Lord Dunsany, and dying in 1694, was s. by his son,

III. SIR HENRY O'NEILL. This gentleman m. first, Mary, daughter of Mark Bugot, esq. of Mountarran, county Carlow, by whom he had an only son,

RANDALL, his heir.

He m. secondly, Rose, daughter of Captain James Brabazon, and by that lady had two other sons, Brabazon; Henry.

He was s. at his decease by his eldest son,

IV. SIR RANDALL O'NEILL, who m. Mrs. Margaret Tomkins; and thus terminates any recorded account of the family. The BARONETCY is presumed to be EXTINCT; but a person who called himself

SIR FRANCIS O'NEILL, the sixth baronet, lived a very poor man on the estate of the late Lord Netterville at Douth, near Drogheda; from whom he rented a small farm at one-fourth of its value; but, even unable to pay that, he was dispossessed. This unfortunate descendant of royalty had the patent of baronetcy in his possession, but whether he was in the line of descent does not appear. Baronetcies have been frequently assumed in Ireland by parties who had no claim whatsoever, but being collateral relations of a deceased and extinct baronet, may have discovered the patent amongst his papers. One of the sons of Sir Francis was employed, about twenty-five years ago, at a small inn near Duleck, in the capacity of "boots and ostler"—sic transit gloria mundi.

Arms—Arg. two lions rampant combatant gu. and supporting a sinister hand couped at the wrist gu.; in chief three mullets of the second; in base a salmon naiant ppr.

PAKINGTON, OF AILSBURY.

CREATED
22nd June, 1620.

EXTINCT
6th Jan. 1830.

Lineage.

The antiquity of this family was beyond dispute: it is manifest from the foundation of the monastery at Kenilworth, that it flourished in the time of HENRY I. and it appears to have assumed the surname from one of the Pakingtons, in Staffordshire, Warwickshire, or Leicestershire, for in each of those counties we meet with lordships, so designated, the proprietors of which wrote themselves anciently de Pakington.*

ROBERT PAKINGTON, living in the reign of HENRY IV. was father of

JOHN PAKINGTON, recited in an office found before Robert Russel, escheator of the county of Warwick, 14 HENRY VI. He left a son of his own name,

JOHN PAKINGTON, esq. who m. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas Washbourne, esq. of Stamford, in the county of Worcester, and had three sons, namely,

1. JOHN, of the Inner Temple, constituted chirographer of the Common Pleas in the 24th of HENRY VII. during life, and being learned in the law was elected, 11 HENRY VIII. Lent reader, and in the 20th of the same reign, treasurer of the society of the Inner Temple, in which year he had a grant from the king, "that he the said John Pakington, for the time to come, shall have full liberty, during his life, to wear his hat in his presence, and his successors, or of any other persons whatsoever, and not to be uncovered on any occasion or cause whatsoever, against his will and good liking, also that he shall not be appointed, called, or compelled to take the order of knighthood, or degree, state, or order, of a baron of the Exchequer, sergeant-at-law, or any office or encumbrance thereto relating." In 1532, he was called to be sergeant-at-law, for which the king gave him a special discharge for taking the said degree, and having been appointed a justice of North Wales, was in 1535, commissioned to conclude and compound all forfeitures, offences, fines, and sums of money due to the king, or his father HENRY VII. In 1542, he had a patent for justice of Brecknock, Glamorgan, and Radnor, in South Wales, during life, having a grant of all the manors belonging to the monastery of Westwood, in the county of Worcester, and soon after received the honour of knighthood. The many other honours conferred upon him are too nu-

David de Pakington held it of the bishop by the fourth part of a knight's fee. Richard de Pakington married one of the sisters and co-heirs of Robert de Kaily, Lord of Presley, in Warwickshire, who lived temp. HENRY II., and the late baronets had in their possession two ancient deeds, without date, judged to be at least four centuries and a half old; one of Robert Wittington, clerk, signed and sealed in the presence of Peter Wyke, Hugh Pakington, and Alexander Abbotot, knights, the other attested by Richard Spechell and Hugh Pakington, knights.

At the time of his death, 1560, he was seized of thirty-one manors, and of other lands that he had purchased of seventy different persons, as appears by a large book concerning his estate, which was preserved amongst the family testimonials.* Sir John Pakington's wife was Anne, widow of Tychbourne, and of the family of Rolle.† She d. 22nd August, 1563. SIR THOMAS PAKINGTON, was in ward to the lord privy seal, in the 37th HENRY VIII. when Catherine, his mother, then twenty-three years of age, was found one of the co-heirs of Sir John Baldwin, (who d. 22nd December, in the same year). He received the honour of knighthood from Queen MARY, and on the death of his uncle, the said Sir John Baldwin, succeeded to a great estate. He was sheriff of Worcestershire in the 3rd of ELIZABETH, and dying 2nd June, 1571, at Bath Place, Holborn, was conveyed in great pomp to Ailsbury, the officers of the college of arms attending, and buried in the parish church there. He was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN PAKINGTON, K.B. one of the privy council, and an especial favourite of Queen ELIZABETH. The queen first took notice of Sir John in her progress to Worcester, when she invited him to attend her court, where he lived at his own expense, in great splendour and reputation, with an equipage not inferior to some of the highest officers, although he had no greater honour than Knight of the Bath, which was conferred upon him in the lifetime of his father. He was remarkable for his stature and comely person, and had distinguished himself so much by his manly exercises, that he was called "Lusty Pakington." Having by his expensive life contracted great debts, he took the wise resolution of retiring into the country, and said he would feed on bread and verjuice until he had made up his extravagancies; which coming to the royal ear, the queen gave him a grant of a gentleman's estate in Suffolk, worth eight or nine hundred pounds a year, besides goods and chattels, which hadescheated to the crown, but after he had been in the country to take possession, he could not behold the miseries of the distressed family without remorse and compassion; and the melancholy spectacle of the unhappy mother and her children, wrought so effectually upon his fine feelings, that he repaired to court immediately, and humbly besought the queen to excuse him from enriching himself by such means, and did not leave the presence until he had obtained his request, which involved the restoration of the property to the rightful owner. Soon after this he left the court, but not before he had liquidated all his debts; and then, with great reputation and honour, he commenced his journey into the country, being handsomely attended by servants and tenants to the number of sixty, well mounted and appointed, who came purposely from his estates to pay him this compliment, and waited at the court gates while he was taking leave of the queen. After his settlement in the country, ELIZABETH granted him, for sixty years, (in the 25th of her reign,) for his good and faithful services, several lordships, manors, and lands, which had fallen to the crown, in no less than seventeen counties. He was also constituted lieutenant and custos rotulorum of Worcestershire, and appointed bow bearer of Malvern Chase, one of the best in England, which he retained until he had finished his noble park at Hampton Lovet, and then, that chase being at too great a distance from his dwelling, he obtained the queen's leave to dispose of it. He was in ELIZABETH's favour to the end, as appears as well from other evidence, as from a grant she made him for eight years, (in the 40th year of her reign, he paying into the Exchequer £40 per annum,) that no one should import into the kingdom, or make any starch, but by his permission. By his assiduity and obliging deportment, he acquired the good opinion of his equals and inferiors; and by his courage and resolution, on occasions requiring the

* LELAND takes notice that he resided at a very goodly new house of brick, called Hampton Court, six miles from Worcester, which lordship was purchased from the Lord Mountjoy.

† Another authority states, that Sir John Pakington, knt. m. Anne, daughter of Henry Dacres, late sheriff of London, and widow of Robert Fairthwaite, of London, merchant taylor, and that she was buried at St. Botolph's, 22nd August, 1563, but does not mention her as widow of Tychbourne; by her will, however, she bequeaths to her son, Nicholas Tychbourne, and his children, the greater part of her estate, plate, jewels, &c.

‡ STOW, vol. i. p. 29, says, "ROBERT PAKINGTON, mercer, slain with a gun, as he was going to morrow mass, from his house in Cheap, to St. Thomas of Acars, in the year 1536; the murderer was never discovered, but by his own confession, made when he came to the gallows, at Banbury, to be hanged for felony."

exercise of those attributes, he became formidable to persons in power; a memorable instance of this occurred when he executed the office of sheriff for his county. The Lord Chief Baron Periam, having committed a gentleman at the assizes, Sir John sitting in his sheriff's seat, called to him to stay, telling the judge he would answer for his forthcoming; neither could he be dissuaded, by all the menaces he received from the bench, from adhering to this resolution, boldly alleging in his defence, that the gentleman was his prisoner, and he, as sheriff, was accountable for him. Sir John Pakington m. the daughter of Mr. Humphry Smith, of Cheapside, Queen Elizabeth's silkman, of an ancient family in Leicestershire. The lady was the widow of Benedict Barnham, esq. an alderman of London, "who left her very rich, and that consideration, together with her youth and beauty, made it impossible for her to escape the addresses even of the greatest persons about the court; but Sir John was the only happy man who knew how to gain her, being recommended by his worthy friend, Mr. William Seabright, town clerk of London, who had purchased the manor of Besford, in Worcestershire. This lady had by her first husband four daughters, which were very young when they lost their father, and therefore needed a faithful friend to manage and improve their fortunes, in which capacity Sir John acquitted himself so honourably, that they had ten thousand pounds each for portion, an immense sum in those days.* Sir John Pakington had issue, one son and two daughters, viz.

This great man who lived to see his children's children, departed this life at his house at Westwood,† in the seventy-seventh year of his age, in January, 1625. His widow married thirdly, Lord Kilmurry, and fourthly, Thomas, Earl of Kelly.‡ His son and heir,

1. SIR JOHN PAKINGTON, bart. of Ailesbury, in the county of Bucks, created 22nd June, 1620, m. Frances, daughter of Sir John Ferrers, knt. of Tam-worth, and by that lady, who m. secondly, Alexander Lesley, Earl of Leven, had, with a daughter, who m. first, Colonel Washington, and secondly Samuel Sandys, esq. of Ombersley, in the county of Worcester, an only son, JOHN. Sir John resided at Ailesbury, and was elected to parliament by that borough, in the 21st of JAMES I. but died at the early age of twenty-four, in October, 1624, previously to his father, and was s. by his son,

II. SIR JOHN PAKINGTON, who at the decease of his grandfather, inherited the estates of the family, and resided subsequently at Westwood. He was then in his fifth year, and under the guardianship of Lord Coventry, the then Lord Keeper, "by whose vigilant care of his education, both by travel and other advantages, he became a most accomplished gentleman." He was elected one of the knights for Worcestershire, in the 15th CHARLES I. and when the rebellion broke out, was member for Ailesbury; and having on all occasions given proofs both of his fidelity to the crown, and the rights of the subject, was entrusted by the king, in 1642, with a commission for arraying men for his service in Worcestershire, on account of which he was taken prisoner, committed to the Tower, and fined £5000: had his estate sequestered, his house in Buckinghamshire (one of the best in that county) levelled with the ground, and such great wastes committed in his woods, that an estimate of the loss, still remaining in the hand writing of his lady, amounts to £20,318. His zeal in the loyal cause never swerved, for notwithstanding he had suffered so much for his loyalty, he had the courage to join King CHARLES II. with a troop of horse, at the battle of Worcester, and was taken prisoner there, yet was so popular, that when afterwards tried for his life, not one witness could be procured to swear against him; he was consequently acquitted and set at liberty, but was afterwards fined £7670, and compelled for the said fine, to convey the market house, the tolls, the court leet, and certain grounds called Heydon Hill, parcel of the estate at Ailesbury, to Thomas Scot, (who was one of the king's judges,) and other trustees, for the use of the town, which they kept until after the Restoration, when, by a special act of parliament, the said conveyances were made void. Sir John m. Dorothy, one of the daughters of his guardian, Thomas, Lord Coventry, and had with two daughters, the elder m. to Anthony Eyre,

* Those ladies were married, the eldest to Lord Audley, the second, ALICE, to Sir Francis Bacon, the celebrated chancellor, created Viscount St. Alban's; the third to Sir William Soames, and the youngest to Sir William Comtable.

† After he had finished his stately structure at Westwood, Sir John invited the Earl of Northampton, lord president, and his countess, to a house warming; and as his lordship was a jovial companion, a train of above 100 knights and gentlemen accompanied him, who staid there some time, and at their departure, acknowledged they had met with so kind a reception, that they did not know whether they had possessed the place, or the place them. The delightful situation of his mansion was what they had never before seen; the house standing in the middle of a wood, cut into twelve large ridings and at a good distance, one riding through all of them, the whole surrounded by a park of six or seven miles, with, at the further end, facing the house, an artificial lake of 122 acres. His most splendid entertainment was given, however, to JAMES I. and his queen, at Ailsbury, when his majesty honoured him with a visit, after his arrival from Scotland, before his coronation: upon this occasion he set no bounds to expense, thinking it a disparagement to be outdone by any fellow subject, when such an opportunity offered; and the king and court that they had never met with a more noble reception.

‡ LLOYD, in his lives of the statesmen and favourites of England, since the Reformation, thus speaks of Sir

John Pakington: "His handsome features look the most, and his neat parts the wisest at. He could smile ladies to his service, and argue statesmen to his design, with equal ease. His reason was powerful, his beauty more. Never was a brave soul more bravely seated; nature bestowed great parts on him, education polished him to an admirable frame of prudence and virtue. Queen Elizabeth called him her Temperance, and Leicester his Modesty. It is a question to this day, whether his resolution took the soldiers, his prudence the politicians, his compliance the favourites, his complaisance the courtiers, his piety the clergy, his integrity and condescension the people, or his knowledge the learned, most. This new court star was a nine days' wonder, engaging all eyes, until it set satisfied with its own glory. He came to court, he said, as Solomon did, to see its vanity, and retired as he did, to repent it. It was he who said first, what Bishop Sanderson urged afterwards, That a sound faith was the best divinity, a good conscience the best law, and temperance the best physic. Sir John Pakington in Queen ELIZABETH'S time was virtuous and modest, and Sir John Pakington, in King CHARLES'S time, loyal and valiant; the one did well, the other suffered so. Greenham was his favourite, Hammond his, the one had a competent estate and was contented, the other hath a large one and is noble; this suppresseth factions in the kingdom, the other composed them in the court, and was called by courtiers Moderation. Westmoreland tempted his fidelity, and Norfolk his steadfastness; but he died in his bed an honest and a happy man."

1. WILLIAM PEPPERELL, descended from a Cornish family, but a native by birth of New England, his great-grandfather having settled there, was bred a merchant, and attained high reputation and wealth in the mercantile world; but his private affairs, although numerous and weighty, not entirely engrossing his attention, he devoted the remainder of his time to the service of the public. He was early in life chosen to represent his town in the great and general court, and sooner than customary had a seat at the board as one of his majesty's council, to which place of honour he was ever afterwards elected until the time of his decease. He was also a colonel in the militia of New England, and so highly did he stand in public estimation, that when the project was formed by the New England government for the reduction of Louisbourg, he was made choice of and commissioned by the governors of the several provinces to command the troops upon the important occasion. It was the united voice of the province "that his appointment to the chief command gave them great satisfaction and hopes;" and those hopes were not disappointed, for Louisbourg, after sustaining a siege of forty-nine days, surrendered to the arms of Lieutenant-General Pepperell, with the fortresses and territory thereunto belonging, thus crowning the expedition with triumph. For this signal service he was created a BARONET 15th November, 1746, "as SIR WILLIAM PEPPERELL, of the province of Massachusetts, in North America," and had a grant of arms conferred upon him at the same time to perpetuate the memory of the event. PEYTON, OF ISLEHAM.

CREATED
22nd May, 1611.EXTINCT
18th Oct. 1815.

Lineage.

The PEYTONS, Camden observes, have had a common progenitor with the UFFORDS, who became Earls of Suffolk,* the founder of both being William Mallet, a Norman baron, who was sheriff of Yorkshire in the 3rd of WILLIAM I. and obtained grants of sundry lordships and manors from the crown, amongst which were Sibton and Peyton Hall, which he possessed at the time of the survey. "Iselham (says the same author) formerly belonged to the Bernards, which came to the family of the Peytons by marriage. Which knightly family of Peyton, flowed out of the same male stock, when the Uffords, Earls of Suffolk, descended; albeit they assumed the surname of Peyton, according to the use of that age, from their manor of Peyton Hall, in Boxford, in the county of Suffolk."

The first of the family by the name of PEYTON upon record, was

REGINALD DE PEYTON, second son of Walter, Lord of Sibton, younger brother of Mallet, sheriff of Yorkshire. This Reginald held the lordships of Peyton Hall, in Ramshold and Boxford, in Suffolk, of Hugh de Bigod; he was sewer to Roger Bigod, Earl of Norfolk, and gave lands to the monks of Thetford, to pray for the soul of Hugh Bigod. He had two sons, WILLIAM, who held certain lands in Boxford, of the fee of the abbey of St. Edmundsbury, as appears by charter of his nephew John, and JOHN DE PEYTON, to whom King STEPHEN and his cousin-german, William de Cassineto, Lord of Horsford, granted all his lands in Peyton, to hold, as his ancestors before held the same. This John had four sons, viz.

- I. JOHN (Sir), the elder.
- II. Robert, who was lord justice of Ireland, temp. HENRY III. and EDWARD I. He was Lord of Ufford, in Suffolk, and assumed the surname of Ufford therefrom.
- III. Peter, Lord of Peyton Hall, who held lands in Ramshot and Peyton, in the time of King JOHN. He was father of Robert, who was s. by his son,
Sir John de Peyton, knt. whose male line seemed to fail, temp. EDWARD III.
- IV. John, the younger, who sold to John his eldest brother, all the lands which he had in Boxford, of the fee of the abbey of St. Edmund's and Stoke Neyland, which their father, John de Peyton, and William, their uncle, formerly^o possessed.

The eldest son,

SIR JOHN DE PEYTON, succeeded his father, and was Lord of Peyton Hall, in Boxford, while he possessed lands beside in Stoke Neyland, in Suffolk. He flourished under HENRY III. as appears by a catalogue of knights in that reign. His wife was Matilda de Buerriis,† by her he had three sons and one daughter, viz.

JOHN, his heir.

His eldest son,

SIR JOHN DE PEYTON, knt. who served in the parliament held at Westminster, 29th EDWARD I. as one of the knights of the shire for Suffolk, soon after which he died. He had three wives, Agnes, Agnes, and Clementia, and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT DE PEYTON, who in many of his evidences is styled Chevalier and Monsieur. He had two wives, first, the Lady Christiana de Apleton, widow of William de Apleton, and heir to lands in Haxwell and Boxford, who died 19th EDWARD II. leaving no children, and was buried at Stoke Neyland, with great pomp, the funeral expenses being thus set down: "fifty quarter of wheat £4. 10s. one hoghead of wine £53. 4s. four muttons 5s. each, eight bacon hogs 2s. ten calves," &c. His second wife was Joan de Marney, of the noble family of the Marneys, of Laylor Marney, in Essex, by whom there was issue,

JOHN (Sir), his heir.

William, from whom there was a release to his father, Robert, dated 13 EDWARD III.

John, jun. to whom William Castelayne, John de Rikell, &c. granted the manor of Beedles, in Waddingfield, 5 EDWARD III.

The eldest son,

SIR JOHN DE PEYTON, m. Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Sir John Gernon, knt. of Lees, in Essex, Lord of Wicken, in Cambridgeshire, and of Bankwell, in the county of Derby, and in her right possessed the manor of Wicken, as in the 17th RICHARD II. he jointly, with her, held part of the manor of Esthorpe, by the service of one knight's fee. HENRY VI. his age was proved at Cambridge, viz. twenty-two years, at which time it was sworn by John Welford, that he was born and baptized at Dry-Drayton, in that county, A. D. 1418, many agreeing in the verdict; among whom Robert Chapman alleged, that the day on which he was born being the feast of St. Valentine, there was a great storm; one knew it by the great wind; another broke his leg by a fall from his horse; another, for that his wife was buried; another, for then his lease was burnt; another, for then his daughter Margaret was burnt; another fell from a tree and broke his arm, as the several jurors deposed upon their oaths. This Thomas was sheriff of Cambridge and Huntingdon, 21st and 31st of HENRY VI. and about the 17th of EDWARD IV. he began to rebuild the church at Iselham, agreeing then with John Waltham, alias Sudbury, free-mason for the same. POLLARD, OF KING'S NYMPTON.

Lineage.

SIR LEWIS POLLARD, knt. (son of Robert Pollard, second son of John Pollard, of Way); born in 1465, entering at the Middle Temple, devoted himself to the study of the law, with so much success, that in 20 JAMES I. he was called to the degree of serjeant, and in 1515 constituted one of the judges of the Common Pleas. "In this honourable office," says Prince, "he continued for many years, until age and the consequent infirmities thereof, sned out his quietus est." The same author thus continues: "This high and great trust of a judge (an higher than which is hardly found upon earth, the lives and livelihoods of men being therein concern'd) Sir Lewis Pollard executed with great faithfulness and expectation; the fragrant odour whereof perfumes his memory unto this day."

Sir Lewis acquired by his profession a considerable fortune, and purchased the estate of King's Nympton, in Devon, where he erected a stately mansion, and enclosed a large park. He married Agnes, daughter of Thomas Hext, esq. of Kingston, in the parish of Staverton, and had by her eleven sons and as many daughters. Four of the sons attained the honour of knighthood, Sir Hugh, Sir John, Sir Richard, and Sir George, who "won his title by his stout defence of Bulloin in France;" all the others, especially John, archdeacon of Barnstaple and canon of Exeter, were well advanced. The daughters intermarried with the first families in the county; the eldest becoming the wife of Sir Hugh Stukely; of Afton; the second, of Sir Hugh Courtenay, of Powderham; the third, of Sir Hugh Pawlet, of Stamford Peveril; and the fourth, of Sir John Crocker, of Lincham.

The judge's son,

SIR HUGH POLLARD, knt. of King's Nympton, s. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Valletort, esq. of St. Laurence Clist, in Devon, and was s. by his son,

SIR LEWIS POLLARD, knt. of King's Nympton, an eminent lawyer, who was Lent reader of the Middle Temple 1 EDWARD VI. and recorder of the city of Exeter 2nd of the same reign. He subsequently obtained the coat of serjeant. His son and successor,

SIR HUGH POLLARD, knt. of King's Nympton, was father of

1. LEWIS POLLARD, esq. of King's Nympton, who was created a BARONET 31st May, 1627. He married Margaret, daughter of Sir Henry Berkeley, knt. and was s. by his son,

II. SIR HUGH POLLARD, of King's Nympton. "Sir Hugh," says Prince, "was a gentleman of a noble mind, that no way degenerated from his ancestors; being magnificently hospitable to all persons who came to his house, either occasionally or by invitation. In the time of our late unhappy wars, he adhered (according to the obligations of honour and conscience) to the interest of oppressed royalty; and both by his purse and person endeavoured to support the tottering cause of his dear parents, his mother the church, and his father the king. He was content to hazard all for their sakes, and to stand or fall with them. During the late civil wars he served his majesty in the field, and became governor of Dartmouth (a port of great importance), in his own country, when garrisoned for the king; and afterward, in time of peace, served his son, KING CHARLES II. of gracious memory, in the court, being made by him comptroller of his household. When the garrison of Dartmouth was attacked by the parliamentarians, this gentleman, the governor, with many other honourable persons of this country then there, made at first a resolute and vigorous defence; and at length, the place not being tenable, surrendered upon good articles, when most of the commanders returned to their own homes. Some time after this, when the best cause and the best king fell by the sins of all and the hands of some, Sir Hugh Pollard, able to yield distressed majesty no farther service for the present, retired to his house at Nympton Regis, where he spent the remainder of his fortunes in hospitality among his friends and neighbours; on which a witty poet in his time thus raved:

—at Nymton Regis
Where th' one drinks and t'other pledges."

Sir Hugh married, first, Bridget, Countess Dowager of Berkshire, daughter of Edward, seventeenth Earl of Oxford, and had an only daughter: He sold King's Nympton to Sir Arthur Northcote, bart. and from the Northcotes it was purchased by James Buller, esq. Sir Hugh Pollard died in 1667, and was s. by his brother,

III. SIR ANNAS POLLARD, who inherited but very little, if any, of the ancient estate. He died unmarried 1693, and with him the BARONETCY became EXTINCT.

Viscountess Palmerston,

Daughter of Sir Francis Poole, bart.
She was married to Henry, Viscount Palmerston, Oct. 6, 1767, and died in childbed, June 1, 1769.

With the nobler virtues that elevate our nature,
She possessed the softer talents that adorn it.
Pious, humble, benevolent, candid, and sincere,
She followed the dictates of humanity. And her heart was warm with all its best affections.

Her sense was strong, her judgment accurate, her wit engaging, and her taste refined.
While the elegance of her form, the graces of her manners, and the natural propriety that ever accompanied her words and actions, made her virtues doubly attracting, and taught her equally to command respect and love.
Such she lived, and such she died, calm, and resigned to the dispensation of Heaven, leaving friends to deplore her loss, and cherish the dear remembrance of that worth they honoured living, and lament in death.

To the memory of the best of wives,
the best of friends,
He, for whom she joined those tender names, dedicates this marble.

PORTMAN, OF ORCHARD.

CREATED
25th Nov. 1612.

EXTINCT
in 1605.

Lineage.

So early as the reign of EDWARD I. the Portmans appear to have been persons of distinction in the county of Somerset; at that period

THOMAS PORTMAN flourished, and bore a coat of arms, which he derived from his grandfather, the same ever afterwards borne by the family. His lineal descendant,

WILLIAM PORTMAN, settled at Taunton, in the time of HENRY IV. and was a liberal benefactor to the priory there, where he was buried. His son and heir,

WILLIAM PORTMAN, m. Christian, daughter and heir of William Orchard, of Orchard, and was s. by his son,

JOHN PORTMAN, esq. who d. in 1521, leaving a son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM PORTMAN, knt. an eminent lawyer temp. HENRY VIII. who became one of the judges of the Common Pleas, and afterwards lord chief justice of England. His lordship died in 1555, and was interred in St. Dunstan's church, London, where a monument was erected to his memory. He was s. by his son,

SIR HENRY PORTMAN, knt. of Orchard-Portman,

* This match, we are informed by Roger North's life, was produced by that of her sister, with Mr. Soame, whose seat, at Thurlowe, was about four miles from the residence of the North family, at Catlage. For, on that event, the grave Countess of Downe, as the custom was, attended the new married couple to their habitation, and made some stay there, during which time the visits of joy came in; and amongst the rest, the family from Catlage made their appearance; and the countess and her daughters, in due time, made their return, which happened to be when Sir Francis North was there. His mother laid her eyes upon the eldest unmarried daughter, and when they were gone, turned about and said, "Upon my life this lady would make a good wife for my son Frank." In short, at the next visit, by the consent of her son, she moved it to the countess, who consented that Sir Francis might make his advances. Her fortune was then £14,000. the marriage took place, and there were great feasting and jollities in the neighbourhood. It was a cavalier country, and the Popes eminent sufferers for their loyalty in the late wars; and his lordship having the like character, and being known to be an obliging, as well as a flourishing loyalist, there was scarce a family which did not shew all respect imaginable to the new married folks, by visits, invitations, and festival rejoicing. So that it was about three weeks before Sir Francis could clear himself of these well intended importunities. . . . But after he had enjoyed all possible happiness with his wife for about three years, it was not a little curtailed by the bitterness poured into his cup by her sickness, which began about 1674, and at last brought her to her grave. He took a house for her at Hammersmith, for the advantage of better air, but at length the distemper proceeded from bad to worse; and he went down with her to Wroxton, where she died, 15th November, 1678.

Mr. Preston died at Holker, 9th January, 1678, and was succeeded by THOMAS PRESTON, esq. of Holker, his only surviving son. He was born in 1646. When his kinsman, Sir Thomas Preston, bart. settled the manor of Furness upon the Jesuits, his indignation was so strongly excited, that he prosecuted a suit against them; and after some years and enormous expense, succeeded in proving that it was forfeited to the crown, upon which it was immediately seized; but Mr. Preston having considerable interest, and his services having been properly represented, he obtained from the crown a long lease of the whole estate upon most advantageous terms. He subsequently represented Lancaster in parliament. He m. first, Mary, daughter of George Dodding, esq. of Conishead Priory, but by her had no issue; and secondly, Elizabeth, daughter to Sir Roger Bradshigh, bart. of Haigh (a lady of incomparable prudence), by whom he had Katharine Preston, sole heiress, who m. Sir William Lowther, bart. of Marske, and conveyed to him all the large property in Lancashire of the Preston family.

Mr. Preston d. in London, 31st January, 1696, but was being then under sequestration, a petition was presented to the House by "Mary, the wife of William Preston, of Ellel," praying that she might have a fifth part thereof allowed for her maintenance. In the year 1653 he compounded for his estate. He subsequently resided at Preston, in Lancashire, and there made his will, dated 12th March, 1666, proved 1667, whereby he devised his estate "at Ellel, formerly the property of Thomas Preston, of Cockerham, his grandfather," to his son William, until his son Richard attained to years of discretion. Mr. Preston was succeeded by his son, WILLIAM PRESTON, of Ellel and of Hilhom House, Cockerham, who was twice married. By Alice, his first wife (to whom her father-in-law, in his will of 1666, bequeathed a legacy) and who was buried at Cockerham, 12th February, 1678, he had issue (with two daughters),

1. RICHARD, his heir.
2. John, b. 1666, a naval officer in the service of France; married Ellen Minshull, and had issue,

John Preston, of Leasgill, who by his first wife, Alice Mauleverer, relict of his cousin, John Preston, had a son,

1. John, of Hincaster, who left no surviving male issue.

And by Ann, his second wife, who died in 1767, aged seventy-two, had

2. William, D.D. Bishop of Ferns, died s. p. in 1760, aged sixty.
3. Thomas, father of John, of Leasgill, who died s. p. m. in 1816.

Mr. Preston m. secondly, Miss Janet Walker, but by her had no issue. He died at Ellel, and was buried; 26th April, 1685, at Cockerham, being succeeded by

RICHARD PRESTON, of Ellel and Hilhom House, in Cockerham, born 17th September, 1661, who, partly in consequence of

* He had a second wife, Dorothy, daughter of — Layton, esq. of Dalemaine, in Cumberland, and relict of Richard Redmyne, esq. of Over Levins, Westmoreland, and Harewood Castle, Yorkshire, but had no issue by her.

† THOMAS PRESTON, of Cockerham, had a younger son,

Roger Preston, of Up-Ottery, in the county of Devon, who m. Alice, daughter of William Perry, of Membury, in that county, and dying 1599, left issue one surviving son,

Henry Preston, of Up-Ottery, who was living at the Visitation of Devonshire, 1623, and then had issue (with several daughters) three sons,

1. Christopher, born 1599.
2. Henry,
3. William.

If this branch does not still exist, it must have remained nearly one hundred years after this period, as the late Robert Preston, esq. distinctly remembered being informed by his father, that his father and mother (Richard Preston and Mary Hastings) had, shortly after their marriage, been on a visit to their relations, the Prestons of Devonshire.

‡ WILLIAM PRESTON had a brother, Henry Preston, who held an estate at Hay Carr, and lands in Forton, and also lands at Ellel Grange (which is a portion of the township of Ellel, containing two estates which are both known by the same name, of Ellel Grange). His will is dated 27th November, 1638. He had issue (with three daughters),

He did not, however, long enjoy his dignity, being so severely wounded, at the head of a regiment raised at his own expense, in an engagement with the parliamentary troops, A. D. 1645, that he only survived a few years. He married, in 1637, Jane, daughter and sole heir of Thomas Morgan, esq. of Heyford Hall, in Northamptonshire, and Weston-sub-Weathley, in Warwickshire, and by her, who brought him a vast estate, he had issue,

Sir Thomas, after making this disposition of his property, went over to Flanders, and entering a monastery, there spent the remainder of his days, and died about the year 1710, and with him EXPIRED the BARONETCY of "Preston of the Manor."

Pending which, the baronet and his partners, amongst whom were several noblemen, obtained another act of parliament, 1693, empowering all the subjects of the crown of England, to enjoy and work their own mines, in England and Wales, notwithstanding they might contain gold and silver, provided the king, and those who might claim under him, might have the ore, paying the proprietors for it upon the bank, within thirty days after raising, and before its separation from the lead. Proud Egypt used of old, his head and Heart,

III. SIR WILLIAM RERESBY. This gentleman afforded a melancholy contrast to the high reputation of his distinguished father. "In 1705 (says Hunter) he had sold Thribergh and the estates connected with it. He was alive in 1727, when Wotton's account of the Baronets was published. In that work he is said to be reduced to a low condition. Brooke was informed that he was tapster of the Fleet prison. This is not improbable, for his tastes and habits appear to have been of the lowest order. I have seen one sad evidence. He died in great obscurity, a melancholy instance how low pursuits and base pleasures may sully the noblest name, and waste an estate gathered with labour, and preserved by care a race of distinguished ancestors. Gaming was amongst his follies, and particularly that lowest specimen of the folly, the fights of game cocks. The tradition at Thrybergh is (for his name is not quite forgotten), that the estate of Dennaby was staked and lost on a single main." This profligate person died fortunately unmarried, when the BARONETCY, probably nothing more remained, devolved upon his brother,

IV. SIR LEONARD RERESBY, who d. unm. 11th August, 1748, when the BARONETCY EXPIRED.

RICH, OF LONDON.

CREATED

Lineage.

The RICH's were originally of Hampshire, where

JOHN LE RICH, of Rich's Place, flourished about the reign of EDWARD II. His son and heir,

ROBERT LE RICH, was living temp. EDWARD III. and was father of

JOHN LE RICH, of Rich's Place, who was alive in the 13th of HENRY IV. and had two sons, RICHARD and William. The elder,

RICHARD RICH, was a mercer in the city of London, and one of the sheriffs thereof in 1441. He was a person of note in his time, and distinguished by some charitable foundations. He made his will in 1463, and bequeathed his body to be buried in the chapel of St. Mary, within the church of St. Lawrence, in veteri Judaismo. He appointed Catherine, his daughter, and Thomas, his son, Robert Lane, chaplain, William Marewe, John Walden, and Thomas Urswick, (the husbands of his daughters,) to be clothed, the day of his funeral, in black cloth, and that all the sons of his said daughters, and one servant of Marewe, Walden, and Urswick, and all his own servants in London, be clothed in black cloth; and that the aforesaid Thomas Urswick, have for himself, and his wife, and all his children, to the buying of this vesture, forty shillings. Beside his daughters, this substantial citizen had two sons, viz.

1. JOHN, died in his father's lifetime, leaving a son,

JOHN, citizen and mercer of London, father of

THOMAS, who m. one of the daughters and co-heirs of Sir Edward Shaw, knight-mayor of London, and had a son and heir,

The elder, EDWARD RICH, esq. of Horndon, died in 1599, leaving by Joan, daughter and heir of Edward Sanders, of London; a son and heir,

ROBERT RICH, of Stondon, in Essex, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Dutton, knight, and was s. by his son,

RICHARD RICH, a successful and intriguing lawyer in the time of HENRY VIII. who by pliancy, profligacy, and, it is said, perjury,* made his way to the honours and emoluments of his profession, and became LORD CHANCELLOR OF ENGLAND, when he was raised to the peerage, anno 1547, as LORD RICH. * When solicitor-general, he was sent by the king, (HENRY VIII.) with Sir Richard Southwell and Mr. Palmer, to take away Sir Thomas More's books, then prisoner in the Tower for refusing the oath of succession and supremacy. Mr. Rich pretending friendship to him, and protesting he had no commission to talk with him about the affairs of the supremacy, put a case to him, thus: If it were enacted by parliament, that Richard Rich should be king, and that it should be treason in anybody to deny it, what offence were it to contravene that act? Sir Thomas More answered, he should offend if he said so, because he was bound by the act; but that this was a case of little moment. Whereupon Sir Thomas said, he would propose a higher case; Suppose it were enacted by parliament, that God should not be God, whether it were not an offence to say it according to the act. Mr. Rich replied, yes; but said withal, I will propose a middle case; the king, you know, is constituted supreme head of the church, why should not you, Master More, accept him for such, as you would me, if I were made king? More rejoined, the case is not the same; because, said he, a parliament can make a king, and depose him, and that every parliament man may give his consent thereto, but that a subject cannot be bound so in the case of supremacy. Rich swearing to this pretended conversation with the ex-chancellor, on the trial of that eminent man, was a great means of his condemnation. When he gave evidence in open court, Sir Thomas More exclaimed, "If I were a man, my lords, that had no regard to my oath, I had no occasion to be here as a criminal; and if this oath, Mr. Rich, you have taken be true, then I pray I may never see God's face; which were it otherwise, is an imprecation I would not be guilty of to gain the whole world."

RIDGWAY, OF TORRINGTON.

CREATED
25th Nov. 1612.EXTINCT
7th Mar. 1713-14.

Lineage.

This family, anciently written RIDGWAY, alias PEACOCK (alluding to which the old bearing of arms was three peacocks' heads erased), had been in Devonshire from a very early period, as manifested by the collections of Sir William Pole, the best antiquary of that county. The name may be presumed to have been local, there being two places so called in the shire,—one near Plymouth, the other in the parish of Owlscumb, near Honiton.

The first who advanced the family was

STEPHEN RIDGWAY, who was one of the stewards of the city of Exeter 6 EDWARD IV. 1466, and mayor thereof 7 HENRY VII.; son or grandson to whom, in all probability, was

JOHN RIDGWAY, esq. who purchased from the Mohuns of Dunster the manor of Tor, in the county of Devon, and was elected one of the representatives of the city of Exeter in the two first parliaments called by Queen Mary. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of John Wentford, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS RIDGWAY, esq. who purchased, in 1599, from Sir Edward Seymour the scite of the Abbey of Tor, in Devon. He m. Mary, daughter of Thomas Southcote, esq. and co-heir of her mother, Grace, daughter and heir of John Barnhouse, esq. of Marsh, in Devonshire, and by her had a son and heir,

I. SIR THOMAS RIDGWAY, who was employed in Ireland in a military capacity temp. ELIZABETH, and planted the first Protestant colony in that kingdom. He was high sheriff of Devonshire in 1600, and received the honour of knighthood. At the accession of King James to the throne of England he was elected one of the knights of the shire for the county of Devon in the first parliament called by that prince, who continued to employ him in some of the highest places of trust and command in Ireland, and had him sworn of the privy council. He was advanced to the dignity of BARONET 25th November, 1612; created a peer of the kingdom of Ireland in 1616, as Baron of Gallen-Ridgeway; and advanced in 1622 to the earldom of Londonderry. He m. Cicely, sister and co-heir of Henry Mackwilliam (the lady was maid of honour to Queen Elizabeth), and had issue,

His lordship was s. by his eldest son,

III. SIR WESTON RIDGWAY, third Earl of Londonderry, who m. Martha, daughter of Sir Richard Tem-

LUCY, m. to Arthur, fourth Earl of Donegal, and d. s. p. 16th July, 1736.

His lordship died 7th March, 1713-14, when all his honours, including the BARONETCY, became EXTINCT. Tor Mohun, the old Ridgway estate in Devon, was sold, about 1768, by the Earl of Donegal to Sir Robert Falk, bart. The scite of the Abbey of Tor was purchased from the first Earl of Londonderry, in 1653, by John Stawell, esq. of Indilho, from whom Sir George Cary, knt. purchased it in 1692.

ROBERTS, OF GLASSENBURY.

CREATED
3rd July, 1629.

EXTINCT
7th July, 1745.

Lineage.

This family was said to have derived from a gentleman of Scotland, one

43

WILLIAM ROOKHERST, who came into England and settled at Goudhurst, in Kent, in the third year of the reign of HENRY I. He assumed afterwards, the surname of ROBERTS;* and having purchased certain lands in Goudhurst, called Winchet Hill, he there built a mansion, calling it Rookherst, after his own name. Here his descendants continued for 274 years, until the reign of RICHARD II. when

STEPHEN ROBERTS marrying the daughter and heir of William Tyllye, esq. to whom the manor and lands of Glassenbury belonged, was, in her right, possessed thereof, and built "a fair sumptuous house" on the hill of Glassenbury, which came by lineal descent to

WALTER ROBERTS, esq. who, in the year 1472, caused the same to be pulled down, and the next year erected, at the charge of eighteen hundred pounds, another moated house in the valley of Glassenbury and parish of Cranebrook, which ever afterwards continued the abode of the family.† This Walter became possessed of the whole estate by the death of his brother Stephen, who died without issue. He was a person much famed for his eminent qualifications and hospitality, as also for adhering to the Lancastrian interest, by which he became a great sufferer during the rule of RICHARD III. Having concealed Sir John Guldeford in his house at Glassenbury, where that person was seized by Sir Edward Stanley and Sir John Savage, he was attainted of treason, his lands seized, and forced himself to abscond until the accession of HENRY VII. when he was restored to his possessions. In the 4th of that reign he had a grant from the crown to impart six hundred acres of land and one thousand acres of wood in Cranebrook, Gowdehurst, and Ticehurst, in the counties of Kent and Sussex; as also that he and his heirs should have free warren in all his lands and woods, and fishing in his waters, in the parishes aforesaid, with all liberties and franchisements in such cases granted. He was sheriff of the county of Kent in the same year, and having lived under six kings, HENRY VI. EDWARD IV. EDWARD V. RICHARD III. HENRY VII. and HENRY VIII. departed this life at more than eighty years of age, A.D. 1522. This Walter m. first, 23rd October, 1463, Margaret, daughter and heir of John Penn, esq. of Penn's Place, Herts; secondly (his first wife dying 6th May, 1480), Isabel, daughter of Sir John Culpeper, knt.; and thirdly, Alice, daughter of Richard Naylor, esq. and widow of Lord Abergavenny; by those ladies he had no less than thirty children;‡ His son and heir,

THOMAS ROBERTS, esq. of Glassenbury, was sheriff of Kent 25 HENRY VIII. He m. Elizabeth, daughter of James Frammingham, esq. of Suffolk, and had issue,

WALTER, his heir.

Thomas, who died in 1567.

John, ancestor of the Roberts of Borzell Ticehurst, and Stone House, Warbleton, Sussex.

Mary, m. to Thomas Cheney, of Woodley.

Jane, m. first, to Richard Burston; and secondly, to Richard Love.

Dying in 1557, he was s. by his son,

WALTER ROBERTS, esq. of Glassenbury, who married Frances, daughter of Mr. Alderman John Maynard, of London (which lady was born when the Emperor CHARLES V. visited England, and had the honour to have his imperial majesty for her godfather); by her he had issue,

THOMAS (Sir), his heir.

Edmund, m. Judith, third daughter of William Bird, esq. of the city of London, and widow of Thomas Blunt. He died 12th September, 1628, leaving issue.

Alexander, of Thorp, near Egham, in Surrey. This gentleman was a great traveller. He m. a daughter of Thomas Culwich, esq. of London, and dying in 1619, left issue.

The eldest son and heir,

1. SIR THOMAS ROBERTS, of Glassenbury, who was knighted by King JAMES I. at Whitehall, before his coronation, 23rd July, 1603, and was created a BARONET 3rd July, 1620. He m. Frances, daughter of Martyn James, esq. of Smarden, in Kent, and had issue, Elizabeth, m. to Sir Alexander Culpeper, knt. of Bedbury.

Anne, m. to Thomas Crisp, esq. of Goudhurst.

Sir Thomas is described as "hospitable without excess, and charitable without ostentation." It is farther stated, that "in all other respects he shewed himself a prudent and judicious gentleman, a lover of his country, and a good Christian; he valued the memory of his ancestors, and bore in his mind their good actions, as well as the care they had taken in preserving the estate entire for many generations; whereupon, in the year 1599, he caused an inscription to be set up in the church of Cranebrook, containing a memorial of his family, that his posterity, having it always before their eyes, might be induced to imitate their example, and preserve the credit and repute his forefathers had lived in." He d. 21st February, 1627, and was s. by his son,

II. SIR WALTER ROBERTS, who was knighted by King JAMES at Greenwich 7th May, 1624. This gentleman augmented his estate by marrying Margaret, daughter and heir of George Roberts, esq. of Brenchley, in Kent, and had five sons and three daughters, but none of them survived him. His eldest son, thereon setting forth the descent of his family as here related.

THOMAS, m. Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Sir Matthew Howland, knt. and dying 23rd January, 1638, left two sons, viz.

RODES, OF BARLBOROUGH.

14th Aug. 1641.

EXTINCT
in Oct. 1743.

Lineage.

The family of RODES is one of great antiquity, having flourished for several centuries in the counties of Nottingham, Lincoln, York, and Derby, successively. Its patriarch,

GERARD DE RODES, a baron, the capital seat of whose barony was Horn Castle,* in Lincolnshire, lived in the reigns of HENRY II. RICHARD I. JOHN, and HENRY III. from all of whom he received great favours, and by King JOHN was employed as an ambassador. His lineal descendant,

WILLIAM RODES, of Thorp justa Rotheram, in the county of York, m. Anne, daughter and heir of John Cachehorse, esq. of Staveley Woodthorpe, in the county of Derby, and was father of

JOHN RODES, esq. of Staveley Woodthorpe, whose son,

JOHN RODES, esq. was father of

ROBERT RODES, esq. who m. Elizabeth Wasse, and left a son and heir,

JOHN RODES, esq. of Staveley Woodthorpe, who m. Atelina, daughter of Thomas Hewitt, esq. of Wallis, in Yorkshire. He was sheriff of Derbyshire, and was s. at his decease by his son,

FRANCIS RODES, esq. of Staveley Woodthorpe, one of the judges of the Common Pleas in the time of ELIZABETH. This learned person erected Barlborough Hall in 1583, but died at Staveley Woodthorpe a few years after its completion. He m. first, Elizabeth, daughter of Brian Sandford, esq. of Thorpe Salvine, in Yorkshire, and by that lady had

Sir Edward Rodes, kn. of Great Houghton, whose male line terminated with JOHN, of Horbury, who is said to have been disinherited by his father. There is the strongest presumptive evidence that this John Rodes was the founder of the Devonshire family of RODES of Bellair, now represented by George-Ambrose Rhodes, esq. of Bellair and Shuppwick. ROKEBY, OF SKIERS.

CREATED
29th Jan. 1660-1.EXTINCT in July, 1678.

Lineage.

"A celebrity has recently been given (we quote the learned historian of Yorkshire, the Rev. Joseph Hunter,) to the romantic beauties of 'Rokeby,' by Sir Walter Scott. Few persons visit the neighbourhood without observing with what extreme accuracy of observation and felicity of expression the bard has described the passage through the glen :

A stern and lone, yet lovely road,
As e'er the foot of minstrel-trode;

or view 'Egliston's grey ruins,' or 'Rokeby's turrets high,' without feeling that the charm of poetry is thrown over them."

The poet has touched upon the historical interest which belongs to Rokeby and Mortham, and has given what professes to be a pedigree of their ancient lords, but it was no part of his plan to enter critically into their history. We shall endeavour to do so more minutely, and present the reader with more definite information on the antiquity, the character, and eminent services of the family who held for many centuries this now classic spot.

At the period of the Conquest, all the territory abutting on the Tees, at their northern border, was granted to Alan, Earl of Bretagne, and formed his English Earldom of Richmond. These broad lands were partitioned among the junior members of his family and his followers, and in the distribution, Rokeby became part of the possessions of the Fitz-Alans, a northern baronial house, whose chief seat was at Bedale. But their interest at Rokeby was scarcely more than nominal, for, beneath them, was a subinfeudation, in favour of a family which, residing on the lands of Rokeby, was usually described as "De Rokeby," and eventually assumed that name as a personal appellation.

Tradition asserts that the family had been seated on these lands in Saxon times, but it first appeared prominent in public affairs in the person of THOMAS DE ROKEBY, whose rise in royal favour is circumstantially related by Froissart. "In the 1st year of the reign of EDWARD III." says the old Chronicler, "the Scots, under the command of the Earl of Moray and Sir James Douglas, ravaged the country as far as Newcastle. Edward was in those parts with a more powerful army, and an engagement was expected and wished for, when the Scotch army suddenly disappeared, and no information could be gained respecting the route they had taken. The young king caused it to be proclaimed throughout the host, that whoever should bring certain intelligence where the Scotch army were, should have one hundred pounds a year in land, and be made a knight by the king himself. Immediately fifteen or sixteen knights and esquires passed the river with much danger, ascended the mountains, and then separated, each taking different routes. On the fourth day, Rokeby, who was one of them, gave the king exact information where the Scotch army lay." "This," continues Hunter, "is not a legendary story invented by some family annalist or doating chronicler of public affairs, the veracity of the narrative being here supported by the most authentic records of the realm; and it is a gratifying fact that we are so often enabled to prove circumstances in our old Chronicles, (which on a first view have an air of romance and fable,) by fiscal documents, where least of all anything imaginary is to be found. In the Patent Rolls, 1 EDWARD III. m. 7, is a grant to Thomas de Rokeby of £100, to be taken annually from the Exchequer 'till £100 lands shall be provided for him, in which the service is described nearly as it is related by Froissart, and in the same rolls, 5 EDWARD III. m. 7. is a grant to him in fee of the manor of Paulinesgray, in Kent, with lands in the North which had lately belonged to Michael and Andrew de Hareit, forfeited, in release of his £100 annuity from the Exchequer. Sir Thomas Rokeby subsequently held commands against the Scots, was twice high sheriff of Yorkshire, and became (12 and 13 EDWARD III.) governor of the castles of Berwick, Edinburgh, and Stirling. In 1346, he pre-eminently distinguished himself at the battle of Neville's Cross, and was one of the few magnates present at that engagement to whom the letter of thanks was addressed, of which a copy is to be found in the Foedera. In 1349, he went to Ireland as lord justice, and held that appointment until 1355, when Maurice Fitz Thomas, Earl of Desmond, succeeded him. The administration of Sir Thomas Rokeby, in Ireland, is famous for the attempt he made to abolish the custom of coign and livery, a species of arbitrary purveyance for the persons in authority there, and a tradition has been handed down attested by Hollinshead, that being once censured for using wooden dishes and cups, as not befitting his degree, Sir Thomas replied, that he would rather drink out of such cups and pay gold and silver, than drink out of gold and silver and make wooden payments. In the latter transactions of his life, Sir Thomas appears with the addition, "the Uncle," to his name; and another Sir Thomas Rokeby occurs, styled "the Nephew." He seems to have participated in the triumph of Neville's Cross, and to have accompanied the elder Rokeby to Ireland. A third Sir THOMAS ROKEBY, was high sheriff of Yorkshire, 8th HENRY IV. and during the year of his shrievalty, the Earl of Northumberland made his last attempt to dethrone King HENRY. Sir Thomas collecting the posse comitatus, met the earl at Bramham Moore, and a conflict ensued, in which Northumberland and the Lord Baroloph were slain. The next Rokebys, distinguished in state affairs, were WILLIAM ROKEBY, lord chancellor of Ireland and Archbishop of Dublin, who died in 1321, and Sir Richard Rokeby, his younger brother, comptroller to Cardinal Wolsey. The archbishop was interred in a sepulchral chapel built by himself at Sandal Parva, in Yorkshire, and his tomb still remains. While this eminent churchman was running the race of high preferment, the eldest branch of the family remained quietly on the hereditary patrimony of Rokeby and Mortham. In the reign of HENRY VII. the head of the house was another

SIR THOMAS ROKEBY, who had three sons; the two younger were the ancestors of families of the name resident at Marske and Stanningford. The eldest son,

RALPH ROKEBY, esq. of Mortham, who succeeded to the paternal inheritance, was living in the reigns of HENRY VII. and HENRY VIII. The era of the "jargon" of the Felon Sow of Rokeby, which may be seen in the notes to the poem of Rokeby, refers to the time of this Ralph, and the Mrs. Rokeby mentioned in it, is supposed to be his wife, Margaret, eldest daughter and co-heir of Robert Danby, esq. of Yafforth, and also cousin and co-heir of Sir Richard Conyors, knt. By this lady he had issue,

THOMAS, his heir.

John, D.C.L. a learned divine and civilian.

3. George, who m. first, Joan, second daughter and co-heir of Henry Rokeby, esq. of Kirk Sandall, and secondly, Elizabeth Ferne, widow of Anthony Rothwood, by both of whom he had issue.

4. John, who m. Margery, daughter of Thomas Westby, esq. of Ranfield, and had, with two daughters, Margaret and Faith, one son, Thomas, who m. Mrs. Smith, of Beverley, and was father of Sir Thomas Rokeby, kn. Marshall de Camp in France.

1. Grace, m. to George Mackworth, esq. of Empringham, and d. s. p.

3. Jane, m. to Robert Byard, gent.

4. Mary, m. to William Puleston, esq.

5. Margery, m. to William Headley.

The eldest son,

THOMAS ROKEBY, esq. of Mortham is described by Ralph Rokeby, the historian of the family, as "a plain man as might be, whose words came always from his heart without feigning, a trusty friend, a forward gentleman in the field, and a great housekeeper, whereby he reigned so in the heart and good will of his countrymen, that his son and heir, Christopher Rokeby, being assaulted at a quarterly race by Christopher Neville, (brother to the mighty Earl of Westmoreland,) whom the earl had sent thither with two men to kill him, was both defended and guarded from the violence of adversaries, and was able so to have rebounded the blows given him by them, that should have spilt the best blood in their bodies, of his part had been willing, for then not a gentleman in the field but cried a 'Rokeby': but the good old Thomas, being there in the commission of the peace, commanded and entreated peace, (as he said,) it grieves me to see him bleed that bleeds, yet keep the peace." Thomas Rokeby, m. a daughter of Robert Constable, of Cliff, in Yorkshire, and had, with a daughter m. to Wycliffe, of Wycliffe, four sons,

1. CHRISTOPHER, of Mortham, who m. Margaret, daughter of Sir Roger Lascelles, of Brackenburgh, and had, with daughters, two sons. The younger, Roger, d. s. p. the elder,

JOHN, of Mortham, appears by the visitation of Yorkshire, 1584, to have been then in prison in the Fleet, "religionis causâ." He m. a daughter of the ancient family of Thweang, and was succeeded by his son, who bore the favourite family name of THOMAS, and was knighted. Of his descendants little more than their names are recorded. It would, otherwise have been gratifying to have known something of the personal habits and actions of those in whose time the chief line of the ancient family of Rokeby fell to decay, and especially of Sir Thomas Rokeby himself, whose necessities must have been great, (it may be presumed) when he disposed of the domain at Rokeby. The purchaser was William Robinson, esq. and it remained with the Robinsons until sold to the father of the present proprietor, JOHN B. S. MORRITT, esq.

II. Ralph, master of St. Katherine's, and one of the masters of requests to QUEEN ELIZABETH.

III. THOMAS, of whose line we have to treat.

IV. Anthony.

The third son,

THOMAS ROKEBY, esq. is thus described by Ralph Rokeby, the historian of the family, to whom we have already referred. "Thomas Rokeby I will mention with reverence, for he beareth about him continually an arre and ensign of valour and honourable service done to his country; for being at Norram Chase, lieutenant to his brother, Christopher, he had a spear broken in his face; after, in the chase, he dismounted himself to mount his captain, who had his horse slain under him, where exposing himself to all danger for his brother's deliverance, he was taken prisoner when others fled." Thomas Rokeby married Katherine Leigh, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Thomas (Sir), kn. sometime fellow of Catherine Hall, Cambridge, and afterwards of Gray's Inn, who became one of the judges of the Court of King's Bench. To this gentleman, who d. s. p., there is a sumptuous monument in the chapel of Archbishop Rokeby, at Sandal.

CREATED
9th July, 1762.

EXTINCT
12th Aug. 1816.

Lineage.

Sidney, in his Treatise on Government, affirms that, in antiquity of possession and name, few of the nobility equal the family of Bayntun. From a very curious pedigree preserved in the Museum, it appears that, in the time of HENRY II. the Bayntuns were knights of St. John of Jerusalem. Sir Henry Bayntun was knight-marshal to the king, an office of high authority in those days, and his second son, Henry, a knight of St. John, was slain in Brotagne in 1201. Temp. HENRY IV. Sir Henry Bayntun taking part with the Earl of Northumberland, was beheaded at Berwick; and in 1471, Sir Robert Bayntun fought against the king at Tewkesbury, was made prisoner, and attainted. The Bayntuns were long settled at Falston, in Wiltshire; but upon the demise of Richard Beauchamp, Lord St. Amand,

JOHN BAYNTUN, esq. (son of the attainted Sir Robert Bayntun), who was his cousin and heir, removed to Bromham, anciently the seat of the Roches. This John Bayntun, who was restored in blood 19 HENRY VII. m. Jane, daughter of Thomas Digges, esq. of Chilham, in Kent, and had issue,

RUSSELL, OF STRENSHAM.

CREATED
12th Mar. 1626-7.

EXTINCT
24th Jan. 1705.

Lineage.

The Russells of Strensham, in Worcestershire, established in England at the Conquest, were possessed of Strensham so far back as the close of the thirteenth century, for at that period, SIR JAMES RUSSELL, lord of Strensham, presented to the living; a date which agrees with the inscription on the monument of Sir Francis Russell, buried in 1705, which states that the Russells had flourished in Strensham about 400 years. By the marriage of Sir William Russell, kn. with Agnes, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Hodington, the Russells inherited half the lands of Cassey and Cookesey. In the civil war;

I. SIR WILLIAM RUSSELL,† of Strensham (who was created a BARONET in 1626-7), acted a conspicuous part in support of the royal cause, and devoted a considerable portion of his fortune to the service of the king; yet, notwithstanding that diminution, his estate was valued at £2000 a-year when the order of the Royal Oak was projected. "In the propositions (we quote Dr. Nash's Worcestershire) offered by Mr. Henry Washington, governor of Worcester, for the surrender of that town to Mr. Edward Whalley, commander of the parliament forces, who lay at Ms. Fleet's, of Hollow, in the year 1646, the thirty-first article was, that the several garrisons of Worcester, Evesham, Strensham, Hartlebury, and Madresfield, should be disgarrisoned, and the Bishop of Worcester, Sir William Russell, and Colonel Lygon, be restored to the possession of their houses and estates. In the treaty negotiated soon after concerning the surrender of Worcester between Mr. Washington and Major-General Raynesborough, it was insisted upon by the latter that Sir William Russell should be exempted from the benefit of the treaty. This caused a long delay: Sir William was much pressed to escape in disguise, which he refused, saying he would willingly surrender himself for the public good, he had but a life to lose, and it could not be better spent. Upon his resolute refusal to escape or stop the treaty any longer, the noblemen and gentlemen, thinking themselves bound in honour, signed a letter to Sir Thomas Fairfax, desiring that Sir William Russell might have the benefit of the treaty, and that he could not by any other means so much oblige the county. Sir Thomas replied that Sir William Russell should be used as a gentleman and be prisoner to Major-General Raynesborough. He afterwards compounded with the parliament committee for £1800 and £50 a-year settled upon his estate."

Sir William m. Frances, daughter of Sir Thomas Reude, of Barton, in Berkshire, and had, with other issue,

FRANCIS, his heir.

Mary, m. first, to Wingfield, Earl of Ardglass; and secondly, to Charles Cotton, the poet.

Vir fuit ingenio natalibus suis digno, egregia erga regem temporibus iniquissimis fide, nec capitis periculo nec magna rei familiaris jactura unquam concussus." Sir William was s. by his son, † Sir John Russell, kn. of Strensham, son of Robert-Russell, and representative of the family at the middle of the sixteenth century, died 15th August, 1556.

FRANCIS RAVENHILL, who m. first, Richard Nash, D.D. of Clerkenleap, in Worcestershire; and secondly, to Charles Trubshaw Withers, esq. of Sansomfields, near Worcester.

Sir Francis Russell died 24th January, 1705, aged sixty-eight, when the BARONETCY became extinct, and was buried on the 2nd February following at Stroudham, under a large marble monument, with the figure of a widow weeping over her husband, and this inscription: "M. S. Francisci Russell, baronetti, perillustri majorum stirpe oriundi, qui per 400 plus minus annos amplissimarum in hac vicinia dittonum et cedium dominus erat, quas ipse ornavit, et in melius promovit, ingenio felicissimo-propensissimâque omnibus beneficiendâ voluntate, nominis et patriæ decus uxorem duxit Annam, filiam Rowlandi Lytton, militis, de Knebworth, in agro Hertfordiensi, cum quâ per 43 annos vitam egit, affectu mortuo et verè conjugali, utrique gratam. Sir Francis's estates were equally divided between his three daughters. Two shares were soon reunited by the death of one of the sisters; the third, after passing through different proprietors, was purchased in 1775 by Dr. Treadway Nash, brother of Dr. Richard Nash, who acquired the other two portions in marriage with Frances Ravenhill, lady of the manor of Strensham.

HENRY (Sir), a person of note in the times of ELIZABETH and JAMES I.: to the former he was tutor for the Greek tongue, and from the latter he received the honour of knighthood, at Windsor, 21st September, 1604. He was born in 1549, and entered the university of Oxford in 1561, where he took the degree of bachelor of arts in 1565, and afterwards grew famous as a Greek scholar and mathematician. Through QUEEN ELIZABETH'S influence he was elected warden of Merton College, and in 1596, provost of Eton. He was subsequently employed by her majesty as resident in the Low Countries. On the accession of JAMES I. he still retained the royal favour, and received the honour of knighthood, as stated above. His only son, Henry, dying soon after, leaving him no hope of founding a family, he devoted much of his wealth to publishing books. He collected the best copies of St. Chrysostom, and employed learned men to transcribe, and annotate them, which he fairly set forth at his own cost, computed at £8000, in a superb edition; but the papists at Paris (writes an old author) had their emissaries in England, who surreptitiously procured this knight's learned labours, and sent them over weekly by the post into France, sheet by sheet as here they passed the press; and Fronto Duceus, a French cardinal, printed them, as received out of England, only joyn'ing thereunto a Latin translation, and some

SCROPE, OF COCKERINGTON.

CREATED
16th Jan. 1660-7.

EXTINCT
in 1680.

Lineage.

This was a branch of the ancient and ennobled family of Scrope, of Bolton.

SIR RICHARD LE SCROPE, first Lord Scrope, of Bolton, was summoned to parliament continuously during the reigns of EDWARD III. and RICHARD II. He was renowned in arms, and received the honour of knighthood from the former monarch at the battle of Durham, where the Scotch sustained a defeat in 1346, and he was present the same year at the siege of Calais. "Without attempting to follow this nobleman through all his martial exploits, which, however, stand recorded by these eye-witnesses, the several royal, noble, and knightly deponents in the celebrated controversy sustained by him with Sir Richard Grosvenor, for the right of bearing his family coat of arms, it is enough to say, that between 1346 and 1385, a period of forty years, there was scarcely a battle of note in England, France, or Scotland, where the English forces were engaged, in which Scrope did not gain honour. But as a statesman he was still more distinguished. He was lord high treasurer to EDWARD III. and twice lord chancellor of England in the reign of RICHARD II. by both which sovereigns he was entrusted with many other employments of honour and confidence. Walsingham states him to have been remarkable for his extraordinary wisdom and integrity, and records his firmness in refusing to put the great seal," as chancellor, to the profuse grants made by RICHARD II. to his favourites. When, RICHARD, incensed by this, sent messenger after messenger to Scrope, "desiring him forthwith to return the great seal," he refused to deliver it to any other person than to the king himself.* Lord Scrope erected the stately castle of Bolton, in Richmondshire, and died full of honours at the age of seventy-three, in 1403, 4 HENRY IV. By Blanch, daughter of Sir William de la Pole, he had four sons, viz.

WILLIAM, (Sir), K.G. created Earl of Wiltshire, beheaded in 1399, his father then living.

ROGER, successor to his father.

Richard, Archbishop of York, beheaded temp. HENRY IV.

STEPHEN (Sir), Lord of Bentley, in Yorkshire, and of Castle Combe, in Wilts, ancestor of the present (1838) William Scrope, esq. of Castle Combe, and of Cockerington, in Lincolnshire. (Refer to BURKE'S Commoners, vol. iii. p. 692.)

William, Earl of Wiltshire, dying before his father, the barony of Scrope devolved upon the second son,

ROGER, second Lord Scrope, of Bolton, from whom we pass to

HENRY, sixth Lord Scrope, who married the Lady Elizabeth Percy, daughter of Henry, Earl of Northumberland, and had two sons, HENRY, his heir, seventh lord, and

Sir Adrian died 10th December, 1623, and was buried at Cockerington. His monument is in Cockerington Church, in white marble of excellent Italian workmanship. The knight's full size figure reclines at length on an altar tomb, represented in armour leaning on one arm, full of spirit and dignity. On a tablet adjoining is carved his coat of arms, crest, &c. with two falcons as supporters, and the following inscription. "The thrice noble Sir Adrian Scrope, knight deceased the 10th December, 1623."

"Tombs are but dull log-booke, they onely keep,

Sir Carr was one of those literary men about the court of CHARLES II. whom Pope calls, "The Mob of Gentlemen, who write with ease." He made several translations from Ovid, Virgil, and Horace, with some love songs and lampoons, to be found in the volumes of Dryden's Miscellanies. His name occurs frequently among the wits and poetasters of that day, and he appears to have been, in love as well as verse, a rival of Rochester, who addresses a bitter lampoon to him. SCUDAMORE, OF HOLME LACY.

CREATED
1st June, 1629.

EXTINCT
2nd Dec. 1716.

Lineage.

The SCUDAMORES, one of the most eminent families in the West of England, was established at a remote era, in Herefordshire.

The name is variously written in records of Ekidmore, Esquidmore, Escuedmore, Schidmore, and Skidmore. That the family was anciently of plentiful estate and good esteem, appears evident from their early benefactions to the Abbey of Dore, and other religious houses.

RALPH DE ESKIDMORE gave some of his demesne lands to the Abbey of Dore, which

WALTER DE ESKIDMORE augmented in the 14th of KING STEPHEN. His son,

WALTER DE ESKIDMORE is mentioned in the time of HENRY II. In lineal descent from him comes

SIR GODFREY DE SCUDAMORE, knt. who in the 32d of HENRY III. was one of the four knights returned for the county of Wilts, who, by order of parliament, were to enquire into all transgressions and injuries, committed as well by justices, sheriffs, bailiffs, or other persons; the inquisitions so made, to be sealed with their own seals, and the seals of the jurors; to be delivered in their own proper persons to the king's counsel, at Westminster, eight days after Michaelmas. In the 48th of the same monarch, he was appointed by the king, conservator of the peace for the county of Wilts. He was s. by his son,

SIR PETER DE SCUDAMORE, knt. who was likewise in great power, as appears by a writ directed to him, in the 15th EDWARD I. to put the statute of Winton in execution, and preserve the peace. He had no issue, and was s. by his brother,

SIR WALTER DE SCUDAMORE, who was summoned amongst the knights to attend EDWARD I. in his expedition against the Scots, having been knighted in the 34th of that monarch, when the king to augment the splendour of his projected enterprise, "begirt Edward, Earl of Carnarvon, his eldest son, with the military belt, and the young prince immediately after, conferred the same honour at the high altar in Westminster Abbey, on nearly three hundred gentlemen, sons of earls, barons, and knights;" he sealed with a cross patee fitchee, as appears from a charter of his to Dore Abbey. His son and heir,

SIR PETER DE SCUDAMORE, who flourished in the beginning of EDWARD III.'s reign, had two sons, WALTER and THOMAS. The younger son,

THOMAS DE SCUDAMORE, married the eldest daughter and heir of Clara de Ewyas, by Ivan Whelan, her husband, upon which he assumed the arms of the stirrups and the surname of Ewyas. Their son and heir,

PHILIP DE ESCUDAMORE, alias DE EWYAS, was s. by his son,

SIR JOHN SCUDAMORE, knt. of Ewyas and Holse Lacy, who was escheator of Herefordshire, Gloucestershire, and the Marches of Wales, in the 13th RICHARD II. and was constituted in the 20th of the same reign, constable of Goderick Castle, during the minority of the Lord Talbot. He m. Alice, daughter, and one of the co-heirs, of Owen Glendower, and left a son,

PHILIP SCUDAMORE, esq. father, by Agnes, his wife, daughter and co-heir of John Huntercombe, of

GEORGE SCUDAMORE, esq. who m. a daughter of the old family of Brughill, and was s. by his son,

PHILIP SCUDAMORE, esq. who wedded one of the daughters and heirs of Osborne, of London, and had a son and heir,

WILLIAM SCUDAMORE, esq. of Holme Lacy, who m. Alice, daughter of Sir Richard Mynors, and was s. by his son,

JOHN SCUDAMORE, esq. of Holme Lacy, who m. Sybell, daughter of Watkyn Vaughan, of Hergest, and in the 22nd HENRY VIII. being styled by the king, Generosorum Hostiariorum Camere sue, was constituted steward of the lordships of Usk, Caerlyon, and Crillocke, in Wales, and constable of Uske Castle for life, after the demise or surrender of William Morgan, esq. He had a grant likewise in the 31st of the same reign, of the site of Dore Abbey, Herefordshire, to him and his heirs. This John and his wife have this inscription (praying them that passeth, of their charity, to say for their souls a pater noster and an ave) round their noble alabaster monument in the church of Holme Lacy :

“ Here Lythe JOHN SCUDAMOR Esqir, sometime one of The foure gentyllmen USHERS into our late Sovereigne Lord King HENRY the eighte, and after wardle admittid one of The Esquirs for his highnes body, and SIBEL his Wyef, and JOHN decessed, in The yere Of our Lorde God a Thousand Five hundred ————”

When all was lost, he went with his royal master abroad, and was entrusted with the last letter and message that the prince sent to his father, which delivering the 27th of the same month, in the evening of the day that CHARLES was sentenced to death, his sorrow is stated to have been unbounded. He kissed the king, clasped his legs, and mourned aloud. To him the king imparted his last communication to the prince. In the year 1660, he was elected to the restoration parliament, by the borough of East Loe, and he continued afterwards to represent the same place until his decease. He was appointed a groom of the bedchamber, comptroller of the Customs, and clerk of the hanaper. Mr. Seymour came to reside at Langley, in Bucks, in the year 1666, renting the house and park from the trustees of Sir William Parsons, then deceased, and about the year 1669, purchased the said estate, and got a grant from the King of the manor of Langley, under a reserved rent of £43. 8s. 10d. per annum. At this seat he lived in retirement the latter part of his life, in the general esteem of all who knew him, as a gentleman of great honour, generosity, affability, and charity. He built

He m. Lady Jane Savage, daughter of John, Earl Rivers, and relict of George, Lord Chandos, but by her ladyship (who m. after his decease George Pitt, esq. of Strathfieldsay) had no issue. He died in 1636, and was succeeded by his brother,

V. SIR CHARLES SIDLEY, b. in 1639, distinguished for his wit and gallantry. As a critic, too, he was so much admired, that he became a kind of oracle among the poets, and no performance was approved or condemned until Sir Charles Sidley had given judgment. King Charles used to say, that nature had given him a patent to be Apollo's viceroj. After a long course of profligacy and extravagance, Sir Charles began to apply himself to politics, and sat in several parliaments for the borough of Romney. He took an active part in promoting the Revolution, which at first excited astonishment, as he had received many favours from JAMES II. but those had been cancelled by an intrigue which the monarch carried on with his daughter, afterwards created COUNTESS OF DORCHESTER. This elevation by no means gratified Sir Charles, and on being asked why he appeared so warm for the revolution, he is stated to have replied, "from a principle of gratitude, for since his majesty has made my daughter a countess, it is fit I should do all I can to make his daughter a queen." He married Catherine, third daughter of John, Earl Rivers, and had by her an only daughter, CATHERINE, mistress to JAMES II. by whom she was created COUNTESS OF DORCHESTER for life.

After the dissolution of her connexion with the king, she married Sir David Colyear, Earl of Portmore.

Sir Charles married secondly, (whilst his first wife was living,) Catherine Ayscough, of Yorkshire, by whom he had a son, SIR CHARLES SIDLEY, knt. who

SKIPWITH, OF NEWBOLD HALL.

CREATED
25th Oct. 1670.

EXTINCT
in 1790.

Lineage.

This family, originally written SCHYPPWY, and denominated from a town and lordship so called in the East Riding of York, descends from

ROBERT DE ESTOTVILLE, Baron of Cottingham, in the time of the CONQUEOR, of whom and his descendants, the feudal lords of Cottingham, Dugdale treats at great length in the Baronage. His son,

ROBERT DE ESTOTVILLE, acquired a great inheritance with his wife, Eneburga, daughter and heir of Hugh, son of Baldrick, a great Saxon thane, and among other lands, had the lordship of Schyppwy, or Skipwic. He left three sons, ROBERT, his heir, from whom the territorial lords of Cottingham, whose male line terminated in the 17th of HENRY III.

OSMUND, who d. at Joppa, in Palestine, was ancestor of the Estotvilles, of Gressing Hall.

PATRICK, of Skipwith.

The youngest son,

PATRICK DE ESTOTVILLE, having by gift of his father, the lordship of Skipwith, his descendants took their name therefrom, in accordance with the custom of the age. He m. Beatrix, daughter and heir of Sir Pagan de Langfun, and was s. by his son,

JEFFREY DE SCHYPPWITH, who m. Mariana, daughter and heir of William de Manithorp, and had two sons, REGINALD and Gerard. The elder, REGINALD, was hostage for the Lord Scales, in the barons' wars, 9th of JOHN. His son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM DE SKIPWITH, Lord of Skipwith, was living temp. HENRY III. and marrying Alice, daughter of Sir John Thorp, and heir of Sir William Thorp, knts. became possessed of a great estate in Lincolnshire, and was the last of the family who resided at Skipwith. His son and heir,

SIR JOHN DE SKIPWITH, living at Thorp, was sometimes styled de Thorp; he likewise possessed the manor of Beakby, in right of his mother, and having married Isabel, daughter and heir of Sir Robert de Arches, kat. of Wraby, in the same county, had also possession of that estate. He was s. by his son,

JOHN DE SKIPWITH, who resided at Beakby, and augmented his patrimony by marriage with Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Herbert de Flinton, of Yorkshire,* by whom he had a son and heir;

WILLIAM DE SKIPWITH, who married Margaret, daughter of Ralph Fitz Simon, Lord of Ormsby, in the county of Lincoln, and sister and sole heir of Simon Fitz Ralph, whereby he became possessed of that inheritance, which was the possession of Sir Ralph Fitz Simōn, knt. who in several charters was termed nobilis, and had obtained the estate and manor by his wife, the daughter and heir of Ormsby, of Ormsby; from this marriage with Margaret Fitz Simon proceeded three sons,

JOHN, eldest son and heir, d. s. p. 10 EDWARD III. the same year which his father died.

WILLIAM (Sir).

RALPH (Sir), from whom descended the Skipwiths, of Hobergh, in Lincolnshire, who held lands in Southlinton, Kernington, Heighburgh, Alesby, and Laseby, in the time of HENRY IV.

SIR WILLIAM SKIPWITH, the second son, succeeded his elder brother, in the estate, a few months after his father died. Sir William was bred to the bar, and attained great eminence. He was first chosen one of the king's sergeants, and in the 33rd of EDWARD III. constituted one of the judges of the King's Bench. In three years afterwards, he was sworn in lord chief baron of the Exchequer, and he continued in that high judicial station until the 40th year of the same king, the time of his decease. His lordship married Alice, only daughter and heir of Sir William de Hiltoft, Lord of Ingoldmells,† and had issue,

WILLIAM (Sir), his heir.

JOHN, heir to his elder brother,

Patrick.

Stephen.

Alice, m. to Robert, fourth Lord Willoughby de Eresby.

Margaret, m. to William Vavasor, esq.

The eldest son.

SIR WILLIAM SKIPWITH, pursuing the learned profession of his father, was constituted one of the justices of the King's Bench in the 50th of EDWARD III. and his patent was renewed in the 1st of RICHARD II. when he was senior judge of that court, and deputed himself therein so uprightly, that his name is handed down by our historians with the highest honour. On the accession of Richard, he obtained free warren in all his demesnes at Ormsby, Ingoldmells, Casleton, Covenham, and Bekeby; and in the 11th year of the same reign, had at his own request, a quietus from his office of justice; † "The Collar of Esses;" (says an old writer.) "now worn by the judges, first introduced from the initial letters of SANCTUS SIMON SIMPLICIUS," an uncorrupted justicier in the primitive times, well suited this Sir William Skipwith, who died full of honour, without issue male, leaving only one daughter, married to George, Lord Monboucher, whereupon the bulk of his estate descended to his brother and heir,†

JOHN SKIPWITH, esq. of Ormsby, high sheriff of Lincolnshire, 28 RICHARD II. and one of the knights in parliament for the same county, temp. HENRY V. He m. Alice, daughter of Sir Frederick Tilney, knt. of Tilney, in the county of Norfolk, and had three sons, viz.

William, d. in his father's lifetime issueless.

THOMAS (Sir), his heir.

Patrick, from whom the Skipwiths of Uterby, in the county of Lincoln, and from a younger son of that line sprang the Skipwiths of Snore, in Norfolk.

He was s. at his decease, 9 HENRY V. by his elder surviving son,

SIR THOMAS SKIPWITH, who distinguished himself in the French wars, and was knighted in France by HENRY V. He m. Margaret, daughter of John, Lord Willoughby de Eresby, and died before the 49th of HENRY VI. for in that year, his son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM SKIPWITH, was in possession of the estates. The records in the Tower, style this William, son of the said Thomas, and state that he was seized by inheritance of Skipwith and Menthorp, in the county of York; South Ormsby, Kettleby, Walmesgarre, Calthorp, Covenham, Garmethorp, Wargholme, Laseby, Culdale, and Somercose, in the county of Lincoln. He was sheriff of Lincolnshire in the 37th of that king's reign. In the 1st of EDWARD IV. he was constituted seneschal of the dominion or demesne of Borewell, in the same county: in a charter to RICHARD III. he is mentioned as possessed of Ingoldmells, and the advowson of the church of St. Peter. He m. first, Joan, daughter of Sir Robert Mortimer, knt. but by that lady had no issue. He wedded, secondly, Agnes, daughter of Sir John Constable, knt. of Barton Constable, and widow of Sir — St. Quintin, and had by her,

SIR WILLIAM DE WILLOUGHBY, having two sons, by his wife, ALICE BEKE, heir of the feudal lords of Eresby. The elder, ROBERT, inherited the barony on the decease of his uncle, Anthony Beke, bishop of Durham, and was summoned to parliament as Lord Willoughby de Eresby. The younger, THOMAS DE WILLOUGHBY, m. Margaret, sister and co-heir of Alan de Munby, and took the name; his son, William, dying without issue, the estates passed to Sir William Hiltoft, the husband of his daughter Agnes.

‡ KNIGHTON, in his Chronicle, says, that notwithstanding the threats of the Duke of Ireland, Sir William pretended indisposition, and did not attend the council at Nottingham, when all the judges were summoned to meet there, in order to subscribe to several questions, whereby they might take occasion to work the death of the Duke of Gloucester; this judge wisely foreseeing the event, got his quietus, and his brethren, who were all so overawed, that they gave their opinions illegally, and were afterwards all of them arrested on the bench at the desire of the parliament, being charged with over-ruling the actions and determinations of the lords, by their advice and directions, upon assurance that all was done according to law; yet afterwards had given the king a contrary judgment at Nottingham, and had delivered as their opinion, that the actions of the said parliament were illegal and traitorous. On this charge they were all (except Sir William Skipwith) condemned by the Lords Temporal, with assent of the king, to be drawn and hanged as traitors; their heirs disinherited, and their lands, &c. forfeited; but this sentence, as to their lives, was respited.

SPENCER, OF YARNTON.

CREATED

in 1771.

Lineage.

This was a branch issuing from the stock of the noble houses of Marlborough and Spencer.

From an illustrious line of progenitors arose,

WILLIAM SPENCER, esq. of Redburn, in the county of Warwick, anno, 1 HENRY VII. (an estate forfeited to the crown, by the attainder of William Catesby, esq.) who married Elizabeth, sister of Sir Richard Empson, knt. and had, with a daughter Jane, two sons, JOHN and Thomas. The elder,

SIR JOHN SPENCER, knt. denominated of Snitterfield, in Warwickshire, which estate he acquired with his wife, Isabel, daughter and co-heir of Walter Graunt, esq. purchased in the 22nd of HENRY VII. the great lordship of Wormleighton, in the same county, and soon after began the structure of a fair manor house there, in which, when inquisitions were taken concerning wastes and inclosures of lands, in the 9th and 10th of HENRY VIII. he was certified to have his residence, with sixty persons of his family; being a good benefactor to the church. He was knighted by King HENRY VIII. and by his last will and testament, it appears that he was possessed of a very great estate, was a noble housekeeper, had a great reverence for the clergy, was very liberal to his poor neighbours, as also bountiful to his tenants and servants. He d. 14th April, 1522, and was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM SPENCER, who received the honour of knighthood from HENRY VIII. at York Place, (now called Whitehall,) in 1529, the parliament then sitting: in two years after, he was sheriff of Northamptonshire, and died during his shrievalty. Sir William married Susan, daughter of Sir Richard Knightly, knt. of Fawsley, in the county of Northampton, and had issue,

He was again sheriff in the 13th of ELIZABETH, and in two years after, was appointed by writ, (with other justices of the county, "of prime quality;") a commissioner to enquire after such persons as transgressed the law made in the 1st of ELIZABETH, entitled, "an Act for the uniformity of the Common Prayer, and Service in the Church, and Administration of the Sacraments." Sir John was a great economist, yet kept a plentiful establishment, and enjoins by his last will and testament, hospitality to be kept in his houses at Althorp and Wormleighton, by his heir after his decease, as he had done. He was fond of a country life, an encourager of industry, and a practical husbandman. At his decease he had numerous flocks of sheep and other cattle in the grounds and parks of Althorp and Wormleighton. He married Catherine, daughter of Sir Thomas Kitson, knt. of Hengrave, in Suffolk, and left great estates to his four sons, who were heads of so many families. Those sons and their sisters were,

JOHN (Sir), from whom the Dukes of Marlborough and Earls of Spencer.

Thomas, who built a fine house at Claverdon, in the county of Warwick, and for his hospitality, is called, by Sir William Dugdale, the Mirror of that county. He m. Mary, eldest daughter of Henry Cheeke, esq. and had an only child, ALICE, m. to Sir Thomas Lucy, knt. of Charlecote.

STEPNEY, OF PRENDERGAST.

CREATED
24th Nov. 1621.

EXTINCT
12th Sept. 1825.

Lineage.

The origin of this family is deduced from HENRY STEPNEY, esq. of Aldenham, in Hertfordshire,* who was s. by his son,

RALPH STEPNEY, esq. of St. Alban's, lord of Aldenham, who was interred in Aldenham Church 3rd December, 1548. He left, by the daughter and heir of Cressy, a son and successor,

WILLIAM STEPNEY, esq. lord of Aldenham, whose son and heir,

THOMAS STEPNEY, esq. m. the daughter and heir of John Wynde or Wyld, esq. of Ramsey, in the county of Huntingdon, and had two sons, viz.

ROBERT, whose son and successor,

ALBAN.

The younger son,

Sir Thomas m. secondly, Mary, oldest daughter and co-heir of Sir Bernard Whetstone, knt. of Woodford, in Essex, and by her had Bernard and other issue.†

* CHAUNCY, in his Antiquities of Hertfordshire, says, the manor of Aldenham coming to the crown upon the dissolution, King HENRY VIII. granted it, with the advowson, to HENRY STEPNEY, who died leaving issue RALPH STEPNEY, who held it of King EDWARD VI. in capite.

† GEORGE STEPNEY, an English poet and statesman, who was born in London in 1663, is supposed to be a son of this Sir Thomas Stepney. He received his education at Westminster School, and was removed thence to Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1682, where, being of the same standing with Charles Montagu, afterwards Earl of Halifax, a strict friendship grew up between them. To this fortunate incident was owing all the preferment Stepney afterwards enjoyed, who is supposed not to have had parts to have reached any distinction without the powerful protection of Halifax. When Stepney set out in life he appears to have been attached to the Tory interest, for one of his first poems was an address to JAMES II. upon his majesty's accession. Upon the Revolution he was nominated to several foreign embassies, and was very successful in his negotiations. He died at Chelsea in 1708, and was buried at Westminster Abbey, where a fine monument was erected to his memory with a pompous inscription.

III. SIR JOHN STEPNEY, who m. Justina, daughter and heir of Sir Anthony Vandyke, the celebrated painter; and was s. by his only son, explained by Burnet in speaking of the Gowry conspiracy :

"One thing which none of the historians have taken notice of, and might have induced the Earl of Gowry to have wished to put King James out of the way; for upon the king's death, he stood next to the succession to the crown of England; for King Henry the Seventh's daughter, that was married to King James the Fourth, did, after his death, marry Dowglass, Earl of Angus; but they could not agree; so a precontract was proved against him, upon which, by a sentence from Rome, the marriage was voided, with a clause in favour of the issue, since born under a marriage de facto and bona fide: Lady Margaret Dowglas was the child so provided for. I did peruse the original bulk, confirming the divorce: after that, the queen dowager married one Francis Stewart, and had by him a son, called Lord Methuen by King James the Fifth. In the patent he is called Frater noster uterinus. He had only a daughter, who was mother or grandmother to the Earl of Gowry; so that by this, he might be glad to put the king out of the way, that so he might stand next to the succession of the crown of England. He had a brother, then a child, who when he grew up, and found he could not carry the name of Rathen, which, by an act made after this conspiracy, none might carry, he went and lived beyond sea, and it was given out that he had the philosopher's stone. He had two sons, who died without issue, and one daughter, married to Sir Anthony Vandyke, the famous picture drawer."

This family derived its name from Stoche or Stoke, in Surrey, and "tun," the Saxon word for "inclosure." In the time of STEPHEN, Godwin de Stoctun resided at Stoctun, and in the 3rd of EDWARD III. HENRY DE STOCTUN had royal licence to empark there 100 acres of land. In the early part of the 16th century, the family became divided into two branches. The younger settling itself at St. John's, Warwick, a large and ancient mansion, originally the hospital of St. John the Baptist, remained there for a series of years, maintaining a leading position in the county, until the male line expired with George Stoughton, esq. of St. John's, who left an elder daughter and heiress, Eugenia, who m. JAMES MONEY, esq. of Pitsford, in Northamptonshire, and of Much Marcle, in Herefordshire, and thus the representation of the Stoughtons of St. John's has merged in the MONKYS. "This ancient and knightly family (says Collins) is extracted from the eastern people called Easterlings or Oosterlings, who dwelt near the Baltic Sea."

SIR WILLIAM DE ESTERLING, the first that came into England, was one of the twelve knights who accompanied Robert Fitz-Hammon,* Earl of Gloucester, to the aid of Justin ap Gorgant, King of Glamorgan, against Prince Rese, about the year 1099, temp. WILLIAM Rufus; and the said Robert Fitz-Hammon, on the death of Rese, turning his forces against Justin, and conquering his whole dominion, divided it amongst his followers. For his share of the spoil, Esterling had the manor and castle of St. Donats, which afterwards continued the chief seat of his descendants. His son and heir,

SIR JOHN ESTERLING, m. Matilda, daughter and heir of Sir Robert Corbet, knt. and was father of

SIR MORRIS ESTERLING, who m. Cicely, daughter and heir of Picot de Say, and was s. by his son (the first who abbreviated the name),

SIR PETER STRADLING, knt. having married Johan, daughter and sole heir of Thomas Hawey, acquired in the time of EDWARD I. the manors of Hawey and Alfrejands, in the county of Somerset, with Compton Hawey, in Dorsetshire. He was s. by his son,

SIR EDWARD STRADLING, knt. of St. Donats, who married Eleanor, daughter of Sir Gilbert Stradling, or, by some accounts, Strongbow, and heir of her mother, a daughter of Richard Garron, of whose inheritance he possessed two manors in Oxfordshire. He was s. by his son,

SIR EDWARD STRADLING, who was returned by the county of Somerset to the parliament held at Westminster 17 EDWARD III. and had £12 allowance for thirty-nine days' expenses, "coming, stay, and returning." He m. Gwenlian, sister and heir of Sir Charles, and daughter of Sir Roger Berkrofts, and thereby acquired the lordship of East Orchard, in the county of Glamorgan. He d. 9 HENRY IV. and was s. by his son,

SIR WILLIAM STRADLING, who performed a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and was there made a knight of the Holy Sepulchre. He m. Isabel, daughter and heir of Sir John St. Barbe, knt. and was s. by his son,

SIR EDWARD STRADLING, who accompanied his father to the Holy Sepulchre, and was also made, with him, knight of that order, about the beginning of the reign of King HENRY VI. He m. Jane, daughter of Henry Beaufort, (son of John of Gaunt,) afterwards made Cardinal of St. Eusebius, Bishop of Winchester, and Lord Chancellor of England. He left a son and heir,

SIR HENRY STRADLING, who, in his passage from St. Donats to his seat in Somersetshire, was made prisoner by Colin Boiphin, a pirate of Brittany, and his ransom was rated so highly—2200 marks—that he was compelled to sell for its liquidation his two manors in Oxfordshire, the castle and manor of Rogerstown, called in Welch Tre-Gwilym, together with the lordship of Sutton, in Monmouthshire. He went afterwards, according to the devotion of those times, and visited the Holy Sepulchre and other revered antiquities in Palestine, where he likewise received the order of knighthood of the Sepulchre; but in returning, died in the Isle of Cyprus, being under twenty-six years of age, and was buried in the city of Famagusta, leaving a son and heir,

THOMAS STRADLING, esq. for whom the following cenotaphial memorial was erected in the chapel of St. Donats':

"Here lyeth Thomas Stradling, Esq. son to Sir Harry Stradling, knt. and Elizabeth, his wife (the daughter of William Thomas, of Ragland, in the county of Monmouth?), who dy'd at Cardife, in the Monastery of Preaching-Fryers, the 8th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1480; whose Bones, after the Dissolution of the said Monastery, Sir Thomas Stradling, knt. his Grand-son, caus'd to be taken up and carry'd to St. Donats, and bury'd by his Son the 4th of June, 1537; and afterwards Sir Edward Stradling, knt. the 5th of that Name, translated the said Bones out of the Chancel into the Chapel annex'd to the said Chancel, in the year of our Lord 1573; after whose Death, his Wife was marry'd to Sir Rees ap Thomas, Knight of the Garter, and dy'd at Pictou, in the County of Pembroke, the 5th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1535, and was bury'd at Carmarthen, in the Church of the Monastery of Preaching-Fryers, with the said Sir Rees ap Thomas, her husband."

In 1575, or the year after, he receiv'd the Honour of Knighthood, became a very useful Man in his Country, and was at the Charge of such Herculean Works for the publick good, that no Man, in his Time, went beyond him, for his singular Knowledge in the British Language and Antiquities, for his eminent Encouragement of Learning, and Learned Men, and for his great Expence and indefatigable Industry, in collecting together several Ancient Manuscripts of Learning and Antiquity; all which, with other Books, were reduc'd into a well-order'd Library at St. Donats, to the great Credit and Renown of the Family. THROCKMORTON, OF TORTWORTH.

CREATED
29th June, 1611.

EXTINGUISHED
June, 1682.

Lineage.

THROCKMORTON, or the ROCKMORTON TOWN, from whence the family of Throckmorton obtained its name, is situated in the vale of Evesham, in the parish of Fladbury, anciently written Flandenburg, in Pershire hundred, county of Worcester, a manor containing two hamlets, Hull, alias Hill, and Moor.

JOHN THROCKMORTON, was lord of the said manor, about sixty years after the Conquest, A. D. 1130, which leaves little room to doubt that the family possessed it, at the entrance of the Normans, or long before, the etymology of the name being either British or Saxon; from this John we pass to his descendant, another

JOHN THROCKMORTON, Lord of Throckmorton, in 13 EDWARD III. anno 1330, who had in marriage Agnes or Anne, daughter and heir of Sir Richard Abberbury, of Abberbury, in the county of Oxford, and was s. by his son,

Of this testament he appoints Rauf Bolster, Lord Sudley, then Treasurer of England, his overseer. He died in the same year, as appears by the probate, leaving Eleanor, his wife, surviving, who was daughter and co-heir of Sir Guy de Spineto, Lord of Coughton, in the county of Warwick; by this lady he had issue,

Lineage.

This branch of the ancient family of TICHBORNE, of TICHBORNE, of which the senior line exists, in the person of SIR HENRY-JOSEPH TICHBORNE, bart. of Tichborne Park, Hants, (see BURKE'S Peerage and Baronetage), was founded by

SIR HENRY TICHBORNE, knt. fourth son of Sir Benjamin Tichborne, first baronet, of Tichborne, an eminent soldier, distinguished in Ireland temp. JAMES I. and his ill-fated son, CHARLES. Sir Henry was born in 1581, and acquired his military education in the Low countries. King JAMES gave him the command of an independent company of foot, in Ireland, and constituted him governor of the Castle of Lifford, after which the same king conferred upon him the honour of knighthood, at his late father's seat, at Tichborne, 20th August, 1623. He was colonel of a regiment of foot, at the breaking out of the rebellion in Ireland of 1641, and being then esteemed the best officer in that kingdom, was appointed with his own regiment of 1000 men, Sir Thomas Lucas's troops of horse, to secure the town of Drogheda, and to be governor thereof. Sir Henry arrived at Drogheda on the 4th November, 1641, and subsequently defended the place with great bravery and success. He afterwards obtained several advantages over the rebels, and, on the 12th May, 1642, was appointed one of the lords justices of Ireland, in the room of Sir William Parsons. Of his appointment to this high office, Lord Clarendon says, "Sir Harry Tichborne, being a man of so excellent a fame, that though the parliament was heartily angry at the removal of the other, and knew this would never be brought to serve their turn, yet they had nothing to object against him." Sir Henry continued one of the lords justices, until the Marquiss of Ormonde was sworn lord lieutenant, and was afterwards appointed by the king, field marshal of the forces in Ireland; which honourable post he held till his death, A. D. 1667, when he was buried at Drogheda, with his wife, Jane, daughter of Sir Robert Newcomen, bart. who lived with him many years, and died about 1661. They had five sons and three daughters, viz.

"Notwithstanding," says Collins, "HUGH TALMASHE, who subscribed, about the reign of King STR-PHEN, to the charter, sans date, of John de St. John, made to Eve, the first Abbess of Godstow, in the county of Oxford, is the first of the family I meet with; yet without doubt, it has flourished from the time of the Conquest; and in Doomsday-book, Toedmag (as the name was then spelt) is said to possess lands."

HUGH DE TALMASHE, above mentioned, or another of the same name, took upon him in his old age, the habit of a monk, at Gloucester, and gave to the monastery a moiety of his town of Hampton, which

PETER DE TALMASHE, his son, confirmed in the time of Hamlin, the abbot; from Peter we pass to

HUGH DE TALMASHE, who, in 25 EDWARD I. held of the crown the manor of Bentley, and a portion of the village of Aketon, in the county of Suffolk, by knights' service.

WILLIAM DE TALMASHE, was summoned amongst the knights of the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, to attend the king at Berwick-upon-Tweed, with horse and arms for an expedition into Scotland.

SIR PETER TALMASHE, was foreman of the jury, in the case of John Hasting's claim of the stewardship of the liberty of St. Edmundsbury, in Suffolk, which was tried by inquisition, before the escheator, at the court of St. Edmunds, 30 EDWARD I.

JOHN TALMASHE held, in the time of EDWARD III. the said manor of Bentley from the crown, by knight's service: at the same time, Catherine Talmashe, presumed to be his mother, held half a knight's fee in Bentley, in capite. From this John, who took the black cross, and whose arms were placed in York Minster, descended

In 38 HENRY's the king granted him the manor of Wanden, with the rectory thereof, likewise the manor and rectory of Le Church Hey, and the manors of Buryhall, Wyllows, and Overhall. He m. Edith, daughter and heir of — Joice, esq. of Crekes Hall, in Helmingham, and dying before 7 EDWARD VI. was s. by his son, TRACY, OF STANWAY.

CREATED
29th June, 1611.

EXTINCT
in 1677.

Lineage.

The surname of TRACY accrued to this family from a maternal ancestor, descended from the Tracys, Lords of Barnstaple, in the county of Devon, who came in with the Conqueror, and were seyled from the town of Traci, in Normandy.

HAROLD, according to Dugdale, the son of Ralph, Earl of Hereford, but by other authorities an illegitimate son of King HAROLD, possessed at the general survey, numerous lordships in England, amongst which wore SUDLEY, and TODINGTON, in the county of Gloucester, with the Castle of Ewyas, and other lands in Herefordshire, secured, doubtless, by his intermarriage with Maud, daughter of Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester. This Harold had two sons,

JOHN, his heir.

Robert, who had the Castle of Ewyas, and assumed therefrom the surname of EWYAS.

The elder son assuming his surname from Sudley, the chief seat which he inherited, became

JOHN DE SUDLEY. He m. the daughter and heir of Traci, feudal Lord of Barnstaple, and had issue, RALPH, his successor, for whose descendants refer to BURKE'S Extinct Peerage.

WILLIAM, who adopted his mother's name of Tracy.

The younger son,

WILLIAM DE TRACY,† lived in the reign of HENRY II. and held lands of his brother, Ralph de Sudley, by one Knight's Fee, which was probably the manor of Todington, for it appears by Doomsday Book, that it was held by the Lord Sudley, of the manor of Sudley, and in the reign of EDWARD I. the Tracys are expressly said to be possessed of it, and this William, in a deed of Otwell, Lord of Sudley, son and heir of the said Ralph, is called his uncle; but that this is the same Sir William Tracy, who was concerned in the assassination of THOMAS A BRACKET, does not appear, although FULLER, in his Worthies, makes the assassin to be Sir William Tracy, of Todington, whom he describes as "a man of high birth, state, of stomach, a favourite of the king's, and his daily attendant;" but, says Collins, "I am not of his opinion, and 'tis evident, there were others of the same name living at the time." The son of this William,

SIR OLIVER TRACY, is mentioned amongst the knights of Gloucestershire, that paid scutage in the second of King JOHN, his son,

SIR WILLIAM TRACY, is recorded among the knights of the same county, in the 17th EDWARD I. and with Ralph de Sudley, his kinsman, is stated to have had a command in the Scottish war. He left a son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM TRACY, of Todington, who was in ward to Laurence Tresham, 27th EDWARD I. at which time he is certified to hold £40. lands. In the beginning of the reign of EDWARD II. he was at the tournament at Dunstable, as appears by an old drawing of a knight in armour, bearing a standard with the arms of the family. In the 17th of EDWARD II. he was jointly with John Bernansel, high sheriff of Gloucestershire, which office in those times was of great authority. He left a daughter, Margery, wife of John Archer, of Umberslade, and a son and heir,

HENRY TRACY, whose son, another

THOMAS TRACY, whose son and heir,

SIR JOHN TRACY, was sheriff of Gloucestershire for five years in succession, beginning in 1363, 38 EDWARD III. He was knight of the same shire in the parliaments hold at Westminster, in the 32, 37, 40, and 45 EDWARD III. and again sheriff in 1366. He left a son,

HENRY TRACY, father of

JOHN TRACY, of Todington, high sheriff in 1379, who left issue,

WILLIAM TRACY, of Todington, high sheriff in 1396. His son and heir,

WILLIAM TRACY, m. Alice, daughter and co-heir of Guy de la Spine. He was high sheriff 5 HENRY V. and "one of those persons of quality in the county of Gloucester, who bearing ancient arms from his ancestors, and holding by tenure, had summons in the 7th HENRY V. to serve the king in person for defence of the realm." He was s. by his son,

WILLIAM TRACY, sheriff in the 22nd and 23rd HENRY VI. who left his estate to a son of his own name, a fourth co-heirs of Thomas Baldington, esq. of Adderbury, in the county of Oxford, and had three sons, WILLIAM, Richard, and Ralph, a monk. The oldest.

SIR WILLIAM TRACY, of Todington, was sheriff of Gloucestershire, in the 5th HENRY VIII. anno 1512. He was a gentleman of excellent parts and sound learning, and is memorable for being one of the first who embraced the reformed religion in England, as appears by his last will dated 22nd HENRY VIII. which was condemned in the Bishop of London's Court, after his decease, and an order sent to Parker, chancellor of Worcester, to raise his body; but he too officiously burning the corpse, the recorder only warranting him to raise the body according to the law of the church, he was afterwards fined £400, and turned out of the chancellorship. The will being rather of a curious nature and characteristic of the times, we insert an abstract from it at foot.* Sir William, m. Margaret, daughter of Sir Thomas Throckmorton, of Corse Court, in Gloucestershire, and had, with two daughters, three sons, viz.

WILLIAM, of Todington, ancestor of the VISCOUNTS TRACY, of Rathcove, in Ireland, whose heiress, the daughter of the eighth Viscount, m. CHARLES HANBURY, esq. who assumed the additional surname of TRACY.

The peerage is claimed by JAMES TRACY, esq. and the case is now before the House of Lords.

The second son,

RICHARD TRACY, esq. obtained from his father the manor of STANWAY, in the county of Gloucester, part of the lands of the Abbey of Tewksbury, which came to him by grant from the crown. "This Richard," says an old writer, "was well educated, and wrote learnedly of his father's faith several Treatises in the English tongue, and that most remarkable one, entitled Preparations for the Cross, written experimentally, having suffered much in his estate for his father's reputed heretical will: he also wrote prophetically, anno 1550; (few years before the beginning of Queen MARY,) another Treatise, To teach one to die, which is annexed to his Preparation to the Cross, which was reprinted, and falsely ascribed by the editor, to be composed by John Friths, being one of the three that was found in the belly of a cod brought into the market to be sold at Cambridge, A.D. 1626, wrapped about with canvas, very probably what that voracious fish plundered out of the pocket of some shipwrecked seaman." In the 2nd of ELIZABETH, he was sheriff of Gloucestershire, and having married Barbara, daughter of Thomas Lucy, esq. of Charcoate, had with three daughters, three sons, PAUL, Nathaniel, and Samuel. He was s. by the eldest,

I. PAUL TRACY, esq. of Stanway, in the county of Gloucester, high sheriff in the 20th of ELIZABETH, who was created a BARONET by King JAMES I. 29th June, 1611. Sir Paul m. Anne, daughter of Ralph Shakerley, esq. and had ten sons, and as many daughters, of whom

* "In the name of God Amen." I, William Tracy, of Todington, in the County of Gloucester, make my Testament and last Will, as hereafter followeth:

First and before all things I commit my self to God, and to his Mercy, believing, without any doubt or Mis-trust, that by his Grace, and the Merits of JESUS CHRIST, and by the virtue of his Passion and Resurrection, I have, and shall have, Remission of all my Sins, and Resurrection of Body and Soul, according as it is written: "I believe that my Redeemer liveth, and that at the last day I shall rise out of the Earth, and in my Flesh shall see my Saviour." This my hope is laid up in my bosom.

And touching the Wealth of my Soul, the Faith that I have taken and rehears'd, is sufficient, (as I suppose) without any other Man's Works or Merits. My Ground and Belief that there is but one God, and one Mediator between God and Man, which is JESUS CHRIST; so that I accept none in Heaven or in Earth, to be Mediator between me and God, but only JESUS CHRIST; all others to be but as Petitioners in receiving of Grace, but none able to give Influence of Grace; and therefore will I bestow no part of my goods for that Intent, that any man shall say or do to help my soul, for therein I trust only to the promises of Christ, "He that believeth, and is baptiz'd, shall be sav'd; and he that believeth not, shall be damned."

As touching the burying of my body, it availeth me not whatsoever be done thereto; for St. Augustine saith, De Cura agenda pro Mortuis, that the Funeral Pomps are rather the Solace of them that live, than the Wealth and Comfort of them that are dead, and therefore I remit it only to the discretion of my Executors.

And touching the distribution of my temporal Goods, my purpose is, by the Grace of God, to bestow them to be accepted as the Fruits of Faith; so that I do not suppose that my Merit shall be by the Good bestowing of them, but my Merit is the Faith of JESUS CHRIST only, by whom such Works are good; according to the words of our Lord: "I was hungry, and thou gavest me Meat, &c." And it followeth, "That ye have done to the least of my Brethren; ye have done it to me;" and ever we should consider the true saying, "That a good Work maketh not a good man, but a good man maketh a good work; for Faith maketh a man both good and righteous, for a righteous man liveth by Faith, and whatsoever springeth not of Faith, is Sin."

For any Temporal Goods, &c.

And the House of Lords in that case resolved and adjudged, "That no fine now levied, nor at any time hereafter to be levied to the king, can bar such title of honour, or the right of any person claiming such title under him that levied, or shall levy such fine." On the death, therefore, of Sir Edward Tyrrell, in June, 1656, there were actually two baronetcies of the same precedence, the first patent inherited by the eldest son, the last by the second: the eldest son,

His subsequent disgrace may be attributed to his hostility to the ill-fated Strafford, against whom, it is stated, he was irritated, by that celebrated person's taking the title of Baron Raby, of Raby Castle, an estate then belonging to Sir Henry Vane. Lineage.

I. Lineage.

I. CORNELIUS MARTIN VAN TROMP, (son of Martin Herberston Van Tromp, the celebrated Dutch admiral and competitor of Blake), became himself pre-eminently distinguished in the naval annals of his country, and sustained many hard fought battles against the English. He was one of the commanders in the sea fight of Solebay, in which Otdam was blown up, and the Dutch fleet defeated; but Van Tromp, by a masterly retreat, contributed to lessen the advantage of the victors. For many years after, his name appears conspicuous in history, and in 1677 he succeeded his famous rival, Dé Ruyter, as lieutenant-admiral-general of the United Provinces. Shortly before, during the peace of 1674-5, he had made a visit to London, and been created a BARONET by CHARLES II. He died 20th May, 1693, just as he was about to assume the command of a fleet destined to act against France. His remains were interred in the splendid tomb of his father, at Delft. Since his decease we have no particulars of the BARONETCY.

The only son,

ROBERT WERDEN, in the old papers it is stated, "did eminently distinguish himself in behalf of King CHARLES I. and the royal family, both with life and fortune, the latter of which he very much impaired thereby. He sometime served as a member of parliament, and was colonel of a troop or regiment of horse. He was declared a traitor to the usurper and the realm of England, and a proclamation was issued out for apprehending him." In consequence of this proclamation, "and a price being set upon his head, together with those of Crew and Cotton, &c. &c. being all staunch royalists," he emigrated with his family and joined CHARLES II. and his brother James on the continent, with whom he continued till the Restoration, "having left," (as a descendant of his writes) "his estates and property to all the violence of the parliamentary forces. I have myself seen the marks where the soldiers of Cromwell played 'nine pins' in the drawing of his mansion-house at Chester." On his return with the Royal family at the Restoration, he obtained again possession of his estates. After which at different times "he held several posts of high honour and trust;" amongst others, he was major-general of the land forces to King JAMES II. in 1688, and treasurer to Queen MARY. He was sometime M.P. for Ryegate, in Surrey. In the year 1674 he was created a BARONET by King CHARLES. In "1684 he was made a commissioner of the customs, and upon the abdication of King JAMES II. he managed alone that important post in the customs for some time to the general satisfaction, in which he continued most of King WILLIAM'S reign. Upon Queen ANNE'S accession to the throne he was put into commission again, and she was pleased as a further mark of her esteem and favour for him, through a grateful sense of his own and his family's past services, to declare that he should continue in that commission, if he pleased, as long as she reigned, which he did." WHARTON, OF KIRBY KENDALL.

CREATED
19th Dec. 1677.

EXTINCT

Lineage.

I. GEORGE WHARTON, esq. treasurer and paymaster of the ordnance, temp. CHARLES II. was created a BARONET 19th December, 1677. Sir George was the son of George Wharton, a substantial yeoman in Strickland, near Kendall, who left at his decease an estate of forty or fifty pounds, and his son, an infant, under the guardianship of his two brothers, William and Cuthbert, who brought him up a scholar, and sent him to Oxford in the reign of CHARLES I. where he continued until he commenced master of arts. But being loyally disposed, and concluding that a time of civil war was not the most propitious to literary pursuits, he adopted the profession of arms. Leaving Oxford, he sold his lands, with the produce raised a troop of horse, and presented himself at its head to King CHARLES I. His majesty received him graciously, and placed him and his troop in the regiment of Sir Jacob Astley, where he continued until the regiment was routed and most of it cut to pieces at Stow, in Gloucestershire, the Colonel being made prisoner, and Wharton escaping severely wounded. He for some time afterwards remained concealed in the houses of the royalists, and set himself to compile an Almanac, called in those times, WHARTONS' Loyal Almanac, and much esteemed by the king's friends for foretelling things relating to the restoration, and exposing the practices of the party then in the ascendants, to whom Wharton became so obnoxious, that a reward of £500. was offered for taking him. He passed however for some time undiscovered disguised as a Spaniard, under the name of Capt. Naworth, (the letters of Wharton transposed) but was at length captured and committed to Windsor Castle, where he remained some time a prisoner. After the restoration he received the official employments mentioned above, and was created a BARONET. He m. Miss Anne Butler, and had issue,

In the early ages, when a woman's chastity was questioned, she underwent the ordeal of having the mantle put over her; and if it covered her she was innocent, if not, guilty; in like manner it was used when a person was accused of falsehood.

WILLOUGHBY, OF RISLEY.

CREATED
29th June, 1611.

EXTINCT
in 1649.

Lineage.

This family originally surnamed Bugg, was seated in Nottinghamshire for several generations, and assumed the name of WILLOUGHBY from their estate in that county.

RALPH BUGG, had two sons, RICHARD and RALPH, to the younger, Ralph, King HENRY III. granted in the 50th year of his reign, the manor of Bingham, from which, Ralph's son and heir, RICHARD, assumed the surname of BINGHAM, and was knighted. The elder son,

RICHARD BUGG, having the lordship of Willoughby, it gave name to his son and heir,

SIR RICHARD WILLOUGHBY, who bought the manor of Wollaton from Sir Roger de Mortain, in the 11th EDWARD II. and augmented his patrimony considerably by other purchases, amongst which was a third part of the manor of RISLEY, in the county of Derby. He d. 18 EDWARD II. and was s. by his son,

SIR ROBERT WILLOUGHBY, one of the judges in the reign of EDWARD III. who by his first wife, Isabel, daughter of Sir Roger de Mortain, had several sons, who all died without issue, "so that Risley (says Thoroton) came to Hugh Willoughby, clerk, who died 7 HENRY IV. and is ancestor of the Willoughbys of Risley," but "I rather think them (writes Collins) descended from Sir Henry Willoughby, knight banneret, who was possessed of Wollaton, by lineal descent from the said Sir Richard, was knight of the body to King HENRY VIII. and died 20th May, 1528, as I am informed from the inscription on his monument at Wollaton, in an arch between the south isle and the chancel, whereon is the effigies of a knight in armour, with two wives by his side, and underneath two sons in armour, and two daughters in the dress of the times." He,

SIR HENRY WILLOUGHBY, had two sons, HENRY (Sir), of Wollaton, and

WILLIAM WILLOUGHBY, who died in his father's lifetime, leaving by Helena, his wife, daughter and co-heir of Sir John Egerton, of Wrine Hill, in the county of Chester, a son and heir,

SIR HUGH WILLOUGHBY, knt. of Risley, in the county of Derby, "whom I take (says Collins) to be the famous navigator (for he was of this family) who was sent out with three ships in the reign of King EDWARD VI. A. D. 1553, to discover Cathay, and other Northern parts. He sailed in May, and having spent much time about the Northern Islands, subject to Denmark, where he found no commodity but dried fish and train oil, was forced about the middle of September, to put into a harbour at Lapland, called Arzina, where they could find no inhabitants, and thinking to winter there, was froze to death. However, Richard Chancellor, who commanded the second ship in the expedition, having lost Sir Hugh, made his way for Wardhouse, in Norway, the appointed place if parted by storms, and after seven days stay, proceeded on his voyage, so fortunately, that within a few days he arrived on the coasts of Muscovy, where he was friendly received by the natives, and John Bazilowitz the great duke or czar, with whom he settled a trade and was the first discoverer of Russia." Sir Hugh Willoughby left issue by Johanna, his wife, daughter of Sir Nicholas Strelly, knt. a son and heir,

1. HENRY WILLOUGHBY, esq. of Risley, who was created a BARONET by King JAMES I. 29th June, 1611. Sir Henry married first, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Knolles, knt. of Greys, in the county of Oxford, and secondly, Lettice, daughter and co-heir of Sir Francis Darcy, knt. but dying without male issue in 1649, the BARONETCY became EXTINCT. His only daughter and heiress,

He had received a very liberal education, speaking the German, French, Spanish, Italian, and Latin tongues; and "having made shipwreck of his outward estate to preserve his inward peace," settled in London in the employment of a public notary, making shift, with the small pittance of his property which he had, as it were, snatched out of the fire, to live comfortably till his death, which happened in 1594. He had eight children, four sons and four daughters, Jacob, Abraham, Marcus, William, Christian, Sarah, Mary, and Susanna, who all, with the exception of Jacob and Abraham, (whose daughter wedded Mr. Paggen,) died without issue. The eldest son,

The estate of Dudmaston was acquired in marriage with the daughter and heiress of Hugh de Dudmaston, ninth in descent from Harlewin de Butailles, to whom Herbert, son of Hologed, Lord of Castle Holgate, granted "one half hide of land, which is called Dode-maston," before the year 1167. Andrew Wolryche, the grandson of William Wolryche, and the heiress of Dudmaston, was M.P. for Bridgenorth, in 1435, and his grandson, Humphrey Wolryche,* appears in the list of the lords, knights, esquires, and gentlemen, resident in Shropshire, anno 17 HENRY VII. He was father of Roger Wolryche, whose brother and heir, John Wolryche, wedded "the fair maid of Gatacre," Mary, only daughter of Gatacre, of Gatacre.

For his unbending loyalty, he suffered severely, being according to his epitaph, twice sequestered, and more than once thrown into prison. The monumental inscription speaks likewise of "the lofty majesty of his person," and states, "that to his pre-eminent skill in heraldry, he added the more solid studies of history and mathematics. At length our Ulric (such was the original name) was summoned to the Assembly of the Saints on the feast of St. Ulric, 4th July, 1668, having been honoured with the successive titles of knight and BARONET." WORSLEY, OF APPULDERCOMBE.

CREATED
20th June, 1611.

EXTINCT
10th Jan. 1825.

Lineage.

The family of Worsley (or De Workesley, as it was anciently written), derives from Sir Elias de Workesley, lord of the manor of Workesley, near Manchester, at the period of the Conquest. He is mentioned in an old chronicle as attending Robert, Duke of Normandy, in his expedition for the recovery of the Holy Land, and tradition affirms that he was buried at Rhodes. From this remote era, the Worsleys continued to hold large possessions in Lancashire, until the year 1377, when Elizabeth, daughter of Geoffrey Workesley, being found by an inquisition to have been born out of marriage, the lordship came to Sir John Massey, who had married the sister of Sir Geoffrey, but the estate was again taken possession of by Robert Worsley; and Thomas Brereton, esq. of Cheshire, who married the daughter and heiress of Sir John Massey, recovered it from Robert Worsley by a suit in Chancery. Worsley became, afterwards, by purchase, the property of Lord Chancellor Egerton, and from him it descended to the great Duke of Bridgewater, who made the canal from the mill in the township of Worsley, over the river Irwell, at Barton Bridge, to convey coals from his mines to Manchester. The WORSLEYS OF HOVINGHAM HALL, in Yorkshire,* who diverged from the parent stock, about the year 1307, still possess quit and chief rents

SIR THOMAS WORTLEY, of Wortley, in Yorkshire, son of Nicholas Wortley, by Isabel, his wife, daughter and heir of William Tunstall, of Thurland, and representative of the ancient family of Wortley, was a distinguished personage in the times in which he lived, and knight of the body to four successive sovereigns EDWARD IV., RICHARD III., HENRY VII. and HENRY VIII. "And also (we quote the old illuminated pedigree of Wortley) Sir Thomas did serve them with great credit in their wars, having great government in this commonwealth, being as it may appear in great trust with the said kings; for as yet their remaineth a great number of letters in the house of Wortley, which were sent by the aforesaid kings to the said Sir Thomas, sealed with their private signets; the which letters were for the execution of their laws, musters, collections, and commissions, with other and divers services of great trust and credit, as the only man in these parts. And also had of the said princes gyft the stewardship of Midlane Castell, withall thinges thereunto belonging, with the puttinge in of all the officers into the said Castell. And also he had and was steward of Kimberworth, with all the commodities therunto belonging. . . . Nowe to speake of his recreation. First he was much given to showtinge in the long bowe, and many of his men were cunninge archiers, and in them he did muche delite. Also he had muche delite in huntinge, that he did buldye in the midst in his forest of Wharncliffe, a house or lodge, at which house he did lye at, for the most part of the grease tyne; and the worshipfull of the countrie did ther resorte unto him, havinge ther with hime pastime and good cheare. Many tymes he would go into the Forest of the Peake and set up their tent with great provision of vitales, having in his company many worshipfull persones, with his owne familye and would remaine ther vii weeks or more huntinge and makinge other worthy pastimes unto his companye.

"The said Sir Thomas had such a kinde and brede of hounds, and their cunninge in huntinge it was such, that the fame of them went into Scotland, so that the kinge of Scots did write his letters desieringe him to have some of his houndes; at the which request he did send him x coppie, with his own huntsman, which did remaine ther ii whole yeares. Thus I leave to speake of the worthy fame of this knight, omittinge many thinges worthy to be spoken off."

FRANCIS WORTLEY, esq. of Wortley, who according to the illuminated pedigree before referred to, "was brought up in learning at the Inns of Court, and was well versed in the laws, being on the queen's majesty's council of the North parts: he was also justice of the peace and justice of Coram, and custos rotulorum, and had great government in this West Riding, and was of singular great wisdom and manhood." A similar character is given of him by the Earl of Shrewsbury, in a letter to Walsingham, 1582, which mentions him as "a gentylman bothe wise and of very good credytt in the country;" and in another communication of the same nobleman, addressed to Burleigh, he is stated to be "of greate lyving and accounts." Mary Stuart was at that time a captive in Sheffield Castle, and the Earl of Shrewsbury her keeper, who then meditated a journey to London, proposed to commit the custody of the queen to Mr. Wortley. He m. first, in 1558, Mary, daughter and co-heir of Robert Swyft, esq. of Rotherham and Broomhall, and secondly, Frances, daughter of Thomas Burdet, esq. of Buzthwaite, which lady survived and wedded, secondly, Francis Foljambe, of Aldwark. At the outbreak of the civil wars, Sir Francis, whose devotion to the royal cause shone conspicuous among the most faithful of the cavaliers, fortified his house at Wortley, and raised a troop of horse, with which he maintained a guerilla warfare, extremely harassing to his opponents. In 1641, he was taken prisoner at Walton-House, near Wakefield, his estate sequestered, and he himself sent to the Tower, where he remained in captivity for many years, solacing the hours of his long confinement by literary occupations to which he was much attached. He wrote several small tracts principally connected with the occurrences and controversies of the times, and one larger work to prove that episcopacy is pure divine. The most curious of the former productions is, his "Characters and Elegies." Sir Francis m. first, Grace, daughter of Sir William Brouncker, of Melksham, Wilts, and had by her,

CHRISTOPHER, his heir.

Richard, ancestor of the WRAYS of KELFIELD, the only branch of the family remaining, now represented by the REV. CECIL DANIEL WRAY, A.M. of Strangeways, Manchester. (See BURKE'S Commoners, vol. iv.)

Thomas, of St. Nicholas, Richmondshire, who left by Ann Foster, three sons and a daughter, viz. William, of St. Nicholas, living in 1615, whose son, Thomas, of Beamish, Durham, sold his estates.

Thomas, named in the will of his uncle, Sir Christopher.

Robert.

Elizabeth, m. to A. Wagstaffe, of Hasland, Derbyshire.

* Mr. Wortley Montague disinherited his only son, Edward Wortley Montague, who had manifested very extraordinary eccentricities, and whose varied life is well told in a work entitled "Literary Anecdotes of the 18th Century."

Leonard, of Adwick, in Yorkshire, died 23rd August, 1500, leaving issue.

The oldest son,

SIR CHRISTOPHER WRAY, of Glentworth, born at Bedale, in Yorkshire, was educated at Magdalen College, Cambridge, and having studied at Lincoln's Inn, was called to the bar, at which he attained such eminence, that he became eventually (IG ELIZABETH) lord chief justice of the Queen's Bench, and presided over that court with the highest reputation for seventeen years. An old writer describes him as an upright judge, who respected every man in his proper station, when he was off the bench, but when he was upon it, he had no such regard for the greatest of men, so as to bias his judgment; and Lloyd thus speaks of Sir Christopher, "Five particulars, I have heard old men say, he was choice in: 1. his friend, who was always wise and equal: 2. his wife: 3. his book: 4. his secrets: 5. his expression and garb. By four things, he would say, an estate was kept; 1. by understanding it: 2. by spending not until it comes: 3. by keeping old servants: 4. by a quarterly audit. He was mindful of what is past, observant of things present, and provident for things to come. No better instance whereof need be alledged, than his pathetic discourses in the behalf of those two great stays of this kingdom, husbandry and merchandize; for he had a clear discerning judgment, and that not only in points of law, which yet his arguments and decisions in that profession manifest without dispute; but in matters of policy and government; as also in the little mysteries of private manage, to which, when you add his happy faculty of communicating himself, by a free and graceful elocution, to charm and command his audience, assisted by the attractive dignity of his presence, you will not admire that he managed his justiceship with so much satisfaction to the court, and that he left it with so much applause from the country: for these two peculiarities he had, that none was more tender to the poor, or more civil in private; and yet none more stern to the rich, & meaner, justices of the peace, officers, &c. or more severe in public. He delighted indeed to be loved, not revered; yet knew he well how to assert the dignity of his place and function, from the approaches of contempt." Sir Christopher had served for Boroughbridge in all the parliaments called by Queen Mary, and was chosen speaker of the House of Commons in the next reign. He m. Anne, daughter of Nicholas Girlington, esq. of Normanby, in Yorkshire, and had issue,

WILLIAM, his heir.

Frances, m. first to Sir George St. Paul, bart. of Saarford, and secondly to Robert Rich, Earl of Warwick.

Sir Christopher died 8th May, 1562, and lies buried in the chancel of the church of Glentworth, under a splendid monument, whereon is the effigies, in full proportion, of a judge in his robes, with his lady by him, and this inscription:

Lineage.

RICHARD WYCHE, merchant, of London, son of Richard Wyche, of Davenham, in Cheshire, married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Richard Saltingtall, knt. lord mayor of London, and had twelve sons and six daughters. He died 20th November, 1621, and was buried at St. Dunstan's in the East. His sixth son,

SIR PETER WYCHE, knt. followed commercial pursuits, but was afterwards made one of the gentlemen of the privy chamber to CHARLES I. and for twelve years accredited his majesty's ambassador at Constantinople. While resident at the Ottoman Porte, he appears to have conciliated in no small degree the favour of the Sultan Amurath IV. who in his letter to the English monarch, styles Sir Peter, according to the inflated phraseology of the East, "one of the chief of your most esteemed, Sir Peter Wyche," and again, "your ambassador, the honoured amongst the people of the Messiah, the esteemed and famous Lord, and your trusty Sir Peter Wyche, whose end he happy." The sultan did not confine his approbation merely to these eulogistic expressions, but at the instance of Sir Peter, removed for a while the narge, or duty on all English cloth brought into Turkey. At one period of his continuance at the Porte, the favourite sultana desired most particularly to see Lady Wyche, who then happened to be with her husband, and of whom she had heard much; whereupon Lady Wyche, accompanied by her waiting women, all dressed in their great verdingals, which was then the court fashion, attended her highness. The sultana received and entertained her most graciously, but wondering at her great and spacious hips, enquired if all English women were thus made and shaped, and could scarcely be convinced of the contrary. On his return home, Sir Peter was appointed comptroller of the household, and sworn as a privy councillor, in which capacity he signed the king's declaration, bearing date 15th June, 1642, disavowing all intentions of war. He m. Jane, daughter of Sir William Meredith, knt. of Wrexham, in Denbighshire, paymaster of the army, temp. ELIZABETH, and had issue to survive him, two sons and a daughter, viz.

He purchased Poyning's, in the parish of Hockwold, Norfolk, with other estates in that county, and died 29th December, 1707, being buried in St. James's Church, Westminster. WYNDHAM, OF TRENT.

CREATED 18th Nov. 1673.—EXTINCT in April, 1719.

Lineage.

SIR THOMAS WYNDHAM, knt. of Kentsford, eldest son of Edmund Wyndham, esq. of Kentsford, and grandson of Sir John Wyndham, knt. of Orchard Wyndham, m. Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Coningsby, esq. of Hampton Court, in the county of Hereford, and had several children; most of the sons engaged in the service of CHARLES I. and the fourth,

I. COL. FRANCIS WYNDHAM is memorable for having conducted CHARLES II. after the disastrous issue of the battle of Worcester, to his seat at Trent, where he entertained his majesty with the following remarkable words of his father, Sir Thomas Wyndham, * Who, not long before his death, in the year 1636, called unto him his five sons, (having not seen them together in some years before) and discoursed unto us, (said he) of the loving peace and prosperity this kingdom had enjoyed under its three last glorious monarchs; of the many miseries and calamities which lay sore upon our ancestors, by the several incursions and conquests of foreign nations, and likewise by intestine insurrections and rebellions. And notwithstanding the strange mutations and changes in England, he showed how it pleased God, in love to our nation, to preserve an undoubted succession of kings, to sit on the regal throne. He mentioned the healing conjunction of the two houses of York and Lancaster, and the blessed union of the two crowns of England and Scotland, stopping up those fountains, which by national feuds and quarrels kept open, had like to have drowned the whole island. He said he feared the beautiful garment of peace would shortly be torn in pieces, through the neglect of magistrates, the general corruption of manners, and the prevalence of a puritanical faction, which (if not prevented) would undermine the very pillars of government. My sons, we have seen serene and quiet times, but now prepare yourselves for cloudy and troublesome. I command you to honour and obey our gracious sovereign, and in all times adhere to the crown; and, though it should hang upon a bush, I charge you forsake it not. These words being spoken with much earnestness, both in gesture and manner extraordinary, he rose from his chair, and left us in a deep consultation what the meaning should be of 'the crown hanging upon a bush.' These words, sir, (said the colonel) made so firm an impression in all our breasts, that the many afflictions of these sad times, cannot raze out their indelible characters. Certainly, these are the days which my father pointed out in that expression, and I doubt not, God hath brought me through so many dangers, that I might shew myself both a dutiful son and a loyal subject, in faithfully endeavouring to serve your sacred majesty in this your greatest distress." Col. Wyndham, who became afterwards governor of Dunster Castle, was created a BARONET 18th November, 1673. He m. Anne, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Gerard, esq. of Trent, in Somersetshire, and had three sons, namely,

YEAMANS, OF BRISTOL.

CREATED
12th Jan. 1661-5.

EXTINCT
19th Feb. 1788.

Lineage.

ROBERT YEAMANS, esq. alderman of Bristol, and sheriff in 1642, being zealously attached to the interests of CHARLES I. formed a design, in conjunction with several fellow citizens, to deliver up Bristol to the king's forces, and the night of the 7th March, 1643, was fixed for the execution of the plan. That evening, however, Colonel Nathaniel Fiennes obtained information of the conspiracy, and seized upon the principal leaders, the chief of whom were Mr. Robert Yeamans and Mr. George Boucher. The operations had been thus arranged:—After communication of councils, and many messages interchanged between Oxford and Bristol, it was resolved, that upon Monday, the 7th of March, in the night, Prince Rupert, with a strong party of the king's forces, should advance to Burdon-down, not a full mile from the city, and thence within the city were to seize two of the ports, viz. Froomgate and Newgate; and having secured the guards there, were to open the said gates, and let in Prince Rupert, and his troops, who were to have notice given them to approach, by the ringing of St. John's and St. Michael's bells; the confederates were to be distinguished by white tape in their hats, and the word to be, Charles. According to which project, divers of them were met armed, at Mr. Yeaman's house, and others at Mr. Boucher's, and waiting the appointed hour (which was three in the morning) to fall upon their work. But that evening late, a little boy declared, that divers muskets were carried into Mr. Yeaman's house; whereupon a more diligent eye was kept upon them, and at last a guard ordered to search the house, who were first denied entrance, but afterwards let in, where they found a considerable number of men and arms; there was some small offer of resistance, but the most were endeavouring an escape over the top of the house, and divers were taken, both there and at Mr. Boucher's. Prince Rupert, with his forces, came that night to the Down, expecting, till five of the clock next morning, the signal and opening of the gates, but several pieces of ordnance being in the morning discharged that way, perceiving the design frustrated, his highness drew off. Whereupon several were apprehended, and Alderman Yeamans and Mr. Boucher were condemned by a council of war, for corresponding with Prince Rupert, and designing to deliver the city of Bristol into his hands. Great endeavours were used by the king and the generals of the royalists to save the lives of these gentlemen; as appears by the following letters in Mr. Rushworth's collections:

A letter from Patrick, Earl of Forth, Lord Etterick, and lord-lieutenant of all his Majesty's forces, sent by a drum, and directed to the commander-in-chief and the council of war, in the city of Bristol.

"I have been informed, that lately, at a council of war, you have condemned to death Robert Yeamans, late sheriff of the city of Bristol, who hath his majesty's commission for raising a regiment for his service, William Yeamans, his brother, George Boucher, and Edward Dacres, all for expressing their loyalty to his majesty, and endeavouring his service, according to their allegiance, and that you intend to proceed speedily against divers others in the like manner; I do therefore signify unto you, that I intend speedily to put Mr. Stephens, Mr. George, Captain Huntly, and others, taken in rebellion against his majesty, at Cirencester, into the same condition; and do further advertise you, that if you offer by that unjust judgment, to execute any of them you have so condemned, that those now in custody here, especially Mr. George, Mr. Stephens, and Captain Huntly, must expect no favour or mercy. Given under my hand at Oxford, this 16th of May, 1643."

"Charles Rex.

"Trusty and well beloved, we greet you well: whereas we are informed, that by the power and authority of certain factious and rebellious persons of that our city of Bristol, divers of our good subjects, as namely, Robert Yeamans, George Boucher, William Yeamans, Edward Dacres, and others of that our city, are imprisoned for preserving their duty and loyalty to us, and for refusing to join in, or assist this horrid and odious rebellion against us; and that the said wicked and traitorous persons have presumed to condemn the said innocent men to die, and upon such their sentence, notoriously against the laws of God and man, they intend to execute and murder our said subjects; we have thought fit to signify to you, the mayor, alderman, sheriffs, and the rest of the body of the council of that our city, that if you suffer this horrid and execrable murder to be committed upon the persons aforesaid, and thereby call down the just judgment of God, and bring perpetual infamy upon that our city, we shall look upon it as the most barbarous and inhuman act that hath been yet committed against us, and upon you as the most desperate betrayers of us, and of the lives and liberties of your fellow subjects. And we therefore will and command you not to suffer any violence to be done upon the persons aforesaid, but that if any such be attempted against them, you raise all the power and strength of that our city, for their rescue; and to that purpose, we command all our good subjects of that our city to aid and assist you upon their allegiance, and as they hope for any grace and favour at our hands, and that you and they kill and slay all such, who shall attempt or endeavour to take away the lives of our said subjects: and for so doing, this shall be your warrant, and hereof you may not fail at your utmost peril. Given at our court at Oxford, the 26th day of May, 1643.

"To our trusty and well beloved, the mayor, aldermen, and sheriffs, and the rest of the common council of our city of Bristol."

But these letters could not hinder the execution; for on Tuesday, the 26th May, 1643, Mr. Yeamans and Mr. Boucher were brought from the castle to the main court of guard, and there executed, by order of Nathaniel Fiennes, son to the Lord Say, and then governor of Bristol for the parliament.

In some years afterwards he was chosen speaker of the House of Commons; and in the 44th of the same reign he was constituted one of the judges of the court of King's Bench. HENRY YELVERTON, esq. of Easton-Mauduit. This gentleman having, like his father, adopted the profession of the law, was appointed solicitor-general in 1612, and knighted about the same period. In 1617 Sir Henry Yelverton was made attorney-general; previously, however, he is said to have displeased the king by refusing to appear against the Earl of Somerset, at his trial for the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, and in the October of the year in which he was advanced to the attorney-generalship we find him writing a letter to his royal master, complaining of "his unhappiness to fall under his majesty's displeasure, who had made him almost the wonder of his favour; that he conceived it to arise from some accident, befel in the late business of the marriage of Sir John Villiers; as also from a report, as if he had uttered some speeches to the dishonour of the Earl of Buckingham." He pleaded his cause so successfully, however, that he very soon recovered any ground which he might have lost in JAMES's opinion, but he was not so fortunate with the Duke of Buckingham, who seems, for a long time afterwards, to have regarded him with an evil eye. In 1620, principally through the machinations of that favoured nobleman, he was involved, with the lord mayor of London, and others, in a Star-chamber prosecution, regarding the passing of certain clauses in a charter to the city of London, not authorized by the king's warrant; for this offence, although he made every submission, and that the charter was given up, he was adjudged to pay a fine of £4000, to be deprived of the office of attorney-general, and to be committed to the Tower. He was subsequently prosecuted before parliament upon another account, and the house of Lords, 16th May, 1621, proceeded to sentence, and declare, "that the said Sir Henry Yelverton, for his speeches, uttered here in court, which do touch the king's majesty's honour, shall be fined to the king in ten thousand marks, be imprisoned during pleasure, and make submission to the king; and for those which touched the Marquess of Buckingham, he should be fined five thousand marks, &c." Upon which Buckingham stood up; and did freely remit his portion of the fine; and the prince and the house agreed to move his majesty to mitigate the other part of the judgment. What proportion of the fine was ultimately forgiven is nowhere mentioned, but his misfortunes very soon afterwards terminated. The Duke of Buckingham visited him incognito in the Tower, and Sir Henry making a sufficient apology to his grace, he was presently set at liberty, and became again a practising barrister, until April, 1623, when a gentleman from the duke brought him a warrant from the king, appointing him one of the judges of the court of Common Pleas. In this situation he remained until his decease, 24th January, 1629-30, when his remains were interred in the parish church of Easton-Mauduit. His lordship m. Margaret, daughter of Robert Beale, esq. clerk of the council to Queen ELIZABETH, and was s. by his eldest son, PRENDERGAST, OF GORT.

Lineage.

The name of Prendergast is ancient, supposed to be the same as that written Prenelirlegast, in Holinshed's list of names on the Roll of Battell Abbey. Fuller, quoting Holinshed, writes it Prendir le gast. When the Normans invaded Wales, a baron of the name founded the castle and town of Prendergast, in Pembrokeshire, still existing.

MAURICE DE PRENDERGAST accompanied the first Norman invaders of Ireland, and had large grants of land in the south of that kingdom, where he built NEWCASTLE PRENDERGAST. His descendant,

THOMAS PRENDERGAST, esq. of Newcastle, in the county of Tipperary, born in 1614, married Elinor, sister of Walter, eleventh Earl of Ormond, and had issue, Jeffrey,* THOMAS, and James.* He died in 1725, aged one hundred and eleven, as appears on his tombstone at Newcastle, near Clonmell. His son,

THOMAS PRENDERGAST, esq. colonel in the army of WILLIAM III. and Queen ANNE, discovered a plot against the life of the king, and was rewarded with a BARONETCY and the estate of Gort, in the county of Galway, forfeited by Roger O'Shagnessy. Sir Thomas m. Penelope, only daughter of the first Earl of Cadoogan, and was killed at the battle of Malplaquet in 1709, leaving issue,

SIR THOMAS PRENDERGAST, second Baronet, m. Anne, daughter and heir of Sir Griffith Williams, bart. of Marl, Carnarvonshire, and died s. p. in 1760, when the title became EXTINCT. Sir Thomas was, for many years, member of the Irish parliament for the borough of Clonmel, and was, it is said, about to be raised to the peerage as Viscount Clonmel, but died before the completion of the patent. His estate of Gort devolved on the Smyths, and is now possessed by their representative Charles, Viscount Gort.

ELIZABETH, m. in 1686, to James, first Viscount Strabane, ancestor of the present Marquess of Abercorn.

ROCHE.

Lineage.

DOMINICK ROCHE, esq. son of Jordan Oge Roche, esq. mayor of Limerick in 1639, and descended from the ancient house of Fermoy, laid claim to considerable estates in the county of Limerick, which had been forfeited by his ancestors, and though he had a decree in his favour, he never obtained possession. On the arrival of King JAMES II. in Ireland, he was received with great favour by that prince, and created BARON TARBERT and VISCOUNT CAHERVAHALLA, honours which were of course unacknowledged by the government then existing. Dominick Roche's grandsons were Thomas Roche, esq. of Dublin, and SIR BOYLE ROCHE, in early life a military officer, and subsequently a prominent member of the Irish parliament. His blunders, it is well known, were of calculation, not of intellect, for whenever the Irish ministry had to apprehend the ill humour of parliament, Sir Boyle was put forward to excite a laugh—"pour avoir les rieurs de leur côté," as the French say. He m. Mary, daughter of Admiral Sir Thomas Frankland, bart. of Thirkelby, in the county of York, but d. s. p. in 1801, when the BARONETCY became EXTINCT.

Arms—Gu. three roaches naiant in pale arg.

SIR DOMINICK SARSFIELD, knt. chief justice of the Common Pleas, was created the first BARONET in Ireland, 30th September, 1619, and raised to the peerage of Ireland in 1624, as Baron of Barret's county, and Viscount Kingsale, both in the county of Cork; but the Lord Baron Kingsale, complaining to the king that the title belonged to him, the matter was referred to several learned lords and judges for their decision, which was given in favour of the Lord Kingsale: soon after, Sir Dominick was made VISCOUNT SARSFIELD of Kilmallock, with precedence of the former patent. His son and successor,

WILLIAM SARSFIELD, second Viscount Kilmallock, was father of,

DAVID SARSFIELD, third Viscount Kilmallock, who suffered attainder in 1691, and under that forfeiture the title fell, man distinguished in the service of King William, at the revolution. By Mr. Carter, the co-heirs of Shaen had, with a daughter Susanna, m. to John Kirwan, esq. of Castle Hacket, in the county of Galway, three sons, of whom the eldest,

TALBOT, OF CARTON.

Lineage.

ROBERT TALBOT, esq. younger son of Sir Thomas Talbot, knight, of Malahide, in the county of Dublin, was father of

WILLIAM TALBOT, esq. who acquired the estate of Carton, in the county of Kildare, and was created a BARONET 4th February, 1692. His son and successor,

SIR ROBERT TALBOT, second Baronet, of Carton, was father (inter alios) of

I. ROBERT, his heir, whose line became EXTINCT.

II. RICHARD, who, by patent, dated 20th June, 1685, was created Baron of Talbot's town, Viscount of Balkinglass, and Earl of Tyrconnell†

* Her brother, JAMES WARE, esq. was father of ROBERT WARE, esq. of Dublin, whose daughter and eventual heiress, SARAH WARE, m. in 1780, Samuel Hibbert, esq. and d. in 1813, leaving, with other issue, a son and heir, the present SAMUEL HIBBERT-WARE, M.D. (See BURKE'S Commons.)

† Of RICHARD TALBOT, Duke of Tyrconnel, much ill has been written, and more believed; but his history, like that of his unfortunate country, has only been written by the pen of party steeped in gall, and copied servilely from the pages of prejudice, by the lame historians of modern times, more anxious for authority than for authenticity. Two qualities he possessed in an eminent degree—wit and valour; and if to gifts so brilliant and so Irish be joined devotion to his country, and fidelity to the unfortunate and fated family with whose exile he began life, and with whose ruin he finished it, it cannot be denied that in his character the elements of evil were mixed with much great and striking good. Under happier circumstances the good might have predominated; and he, whose deeds are held even by his own family in such high estimation, might have shed a lustre on his race by those talents and with remainder in tail-male to his nephews; and was subsequently, 20th March, 1689, advanced to the dignity of Marquess and Duke of Tyrconnell, by King JAMES II. in whose service, as Chief Governor of Ireland, he died. The Duke, by Frances, Countess Hamilton, left two daughters, of whom, Charlotte was m. to the Prince de Vintimiglia, and had issue two daughters: the one m. to M. Verac, and the other to the Prince Belmonte; but both dying without issue, Richard Wogan Talbot, now Baron of Malahide, became heir general to the Duke of Tyrconnell, as descendant and sole heir of Frances, the Duke's sister. In the castle there is a half length painting, by Sir Peter Lely, and, notwithstanding all that was written by his successful, yet unforgiving enemies at the revolution, this portrait goes far to support what we find said of the Duke in Count Grammont's Memoirs, that he was "one of the tallest men in England, and possessed of a fine and brilliant exterior; his manners were noble and brilliant;" and that he was "one of the most genteel men in the court of CHARLES II." There is also a painting of the Duchess, who was eldest daughter and co-heiress of Richard Jennings, of Sandridge, in Hertfordshire, and sister to Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough; and her beauty and character are thus depicted by a cotemporary; "She had the fairest and brightest complexion that ever was seen; her hair a most beautiful flaxen, her countenance extremely animated, though, generally, persons so exquisitely fair have an insipidity; her whole person was fine, particularly her neck and bosom. The charms of her person, and the unaffected sprightliness of her wit, gained her the general admiration of the whole court; in these fascinating qualities she had there (CHARLES's court) other competitors; but scarcely one, except Miss Jennings, maintained throughout the character of unblemished chastity." After the death of the Duke, whose sincere attachment to his unfortunate sovereign has never been disputed, the Duchess was permitted to erect a house (still standing) in King-street, Dublin, as a nunnery for poor Clares, and in this obscure retirement, burying all the attractions and graces which once so adorned the court of England, she died at the age of ninety-two, and was interred in Patrick's Cathedral, 9th March, 1703.

iii. Frances, m. to her cousin, Richard Talbot, esq. of Malahide, and by him (who d. in 1703,) had a son,

JOHN TALBOT, of Malahide, grandfather of heroin which gave force to his passions, and celebrity to his errors.

While King JAMES was arming (for the BATTLE OF THE BOYNE) in Slane Castle, another scene, equally striking, was acted in the hall of Malahide. Before the dawn of day, the Talbots, with their kinsmen, to the number of fourteen, assembled, armed to the teeth, round a breakfast table, at which the sister of the king's lieutenant-general (Tyrconnell), the Lady Frances, widow of the head of this loyal party (Richard Talbot, of Malahide, who d. in 1703), presided. They set forth with a light to join their kinsman the Duke, the King's camp lying on the near shore of the Boyne, and found Tyrconnell, with the Duke of Berwick, reconnoitering the position of King WILLIAM on the opposite side of the river. While WILLIAM was the present Richard Wogan Talbot, Lord TALBOT DE MALAHIDE.

TRANT, OF THE QUEEN'S COUNTY.

Lineage.

SIR PATRICK TRANT, son of a London merchant, who realized a very considerable fortune, was, at the time of the revolution, one of the largest landed proprietors in Ireland. In 1686, he obtained a patent of BARONETCY, and stood so high in favour with JAMES II. that letters patent were in progress to create Sir Patrick, Lord Maryborough, when JAMES fled from Dublin. For his fidelity to that ill-fated Prince, Sir Patrick was ATTAINED, and his vast estates being forfeited, were sold at Chichester House in 1703, to The Yellow Bladestone Company, for the inadequate sum of £30,000.

Sir Patrick left at his decease, two daughters, his co-heirs, of whom Ellen, wedded Christopher, Viscount Longford, and was mother of an only daughter, Ellen, who died unmarried in 1748. The other daughter married the Prince d'Auvergne, but had no issue.

Sir Patrick had a brother Dominick, who married a sister of Sir Stephen Rice, and was ancestor of the late Dominick Trant, esq. of the Island of Montserrat, who m. a daughter of P. L. Story, esq. and left at his decease, a son and a daughter. Nearly connected also with Sir Patrick, were two brothers, from one of whom descends William Trant, esq. formerly M.P. for Dover, and from the other, derived Sir James Fitzgerald, bart. and Mrs. Pepper, of Portman-square.

SIR WILLIAM TUFTON, of Vintners, in the county of Kent, Governor of Barbadoes, fifth son of Sir John Tufton, Baronet, and brother of Nicholas, first Earl of Thanet, was created a BARONET of Ireland in 1622. He m. Anne, daughter of Cecil Cave, esq. of Leicestershire, and by her, who died in 1649, he had three sons and one daughter, VERA, eventual heiress, m. first, to mounting his horse, it happened that a man and two horses, standing near him, were killed by a cannon ball. A second bullet rebounding, glanced over the right shoulder of the gallant WILLIAM, and inflicted a flesh wound; his officers crowded round him, and it was thought by the enemy that he was killed. A shout of joy rose from the Irish camp; and Tyrconnell, prompt to avail himself of the great event, sent forth a squadron of cavalry to profit by the consternation. In this petulant attack perished the party of the Talbots, one only returning to the castle to tell the story of the eventful day. This one was a stripling youth, Richard, son, heir, and successor of the then Talbot of Malahide.—LADY MORGAN'S Irish Sketches in the Metropolitan Magazine.

BRUCE, OF KINROSS.

ROBERT BRUCE, third Baron of Blairhall, descended from the house of Clackmanan,* had by Jean, his wife, daughter of Sir John Preston, of Valleyfield, two sons,

THOMAS, who succeeded at Blairhall, and

SIR WILLIAM BRUCE, of Balcaskie, a man of extraordinary parts, a steady loyalist, and a firm and constant friend of the royal family.

"He was," says Sir Robert Douglas, "too young to have been very active in the troublesome reign of King Charles I. but no gentleman in a private capacity contributed more to bring about the restoration of his son than Sir William. Being of a fine address, he found means to get acquainted with General Monk, to whom, 'tis said, that he painted the distress and distractions of our country, and the glory that would be acquired in restoring the royal family, in such lively colours, that the general at last opened his mind to him, and signified his inclination to serve the king; but that their measures were to be carried on with the utmost caution and secrecy. These joyful tidings Sir William had the honour to communicate to the king, the happy consequences thereof are so well known to every body, that we need insist no further on them here.

"The king did not fail to remember his faithful services, and immediately after his restoration, he appointed him clerk to the bills, anno 1660, a very beneficial office in those days."

Subsequently too, in consideration of his great taste and knowledge in architecture, he was made master of the king's works, and designed the stately palace of Holyrood House, as it now stands.

Sir William acquired the lands of Balcaskie, in Fife, and was created a BARONET by the title of Sir William Bruce, of Balcaskie, by his majesty's royal patent, to him and his heirs male, &c. dated 21st April, 1668.

But having acquired from the Earl of Morton the lands and barony of Kinross, he was ever after known by that title. He built a fine seat, which for magnificence, elegance, and the beauty of its architecture, is scarce to be paralleled in the kingdom.

He m. Mary, daughter of Sir James Halkett, bart. of Pifferrane, by whom he had several children, whereof only two came to maturity, viz.

JOHN (Sir), his heir.

Anne, who carried on the line of this family, of whom afterwards.

HAY, OF ALDERSTON.

This family sprang originally from the HAYS of Falla or Linplum, who may be regarded as the eldest collateral branch of the noble house of Tweeddale.

SIR JOHN HAY, of Barra and Lauds, lord clerk register, descended from Edmund, second son of Sir William Hay, of Yester, was a man of considerable ability, and eminently distinguished in the turbulent times in which he lived. While very young he was employed by the city of Edinburgh to welcome King JAMES I. at the Westport, in the name of the town, which commission he executed in an elegant oration, still preserved in a work called the "Muse's Welcome." He became an ordinary senator of the college of justice, and lord of the council and exchequer; and after the death of Sir John Hamilton, kn. of Magdalen, was preferred (8th January, 1633) to be Lord Register. He had received the honour of knighthood from King CHARLES I. 9th March, 1632. He was one of Balmerino's assizers, and things becoming troublesome in 1641, he resigned all his offices into the king's hands. His dismissal is signed the 17th July, 1641.

He was subsequently accused of treason, sent to the castle of Edinburgh, tried by the estates, and ultimately acquitted. After these events Sir John remained quiet until Montrose came south, when he joined him, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Philiphaugh, when his life was placed in jeopardy, but a bribe to the Earl of Lanark averted the danger. He subsequently sunk into repose and comparative obscurity,* and died at Dudingstone 20th November, 1654. Sir John m. first, 16th May, 1602, Marion Johnston, daughter of a younger son of Johnston, of Kewby, and by that lady, who died in August, 1621, he had issue;

- i. Andrew, a Catholic priest, b. 24th March, and baptized the following day, 1623. Of this Andrew, Father Hay gives a singular account. He says that he was called "Grave Andrew" by CHARLES II. and became "a charitable assistant to my Lady Drummond, relict of the conservator with whom it was thought he was married," and gained so much influence over her that she bequeathed him her whole estate. Andrew Hay, who suffered severely during the spoliation of the Catholics by the mob, eventually retired to the Scotch seminary at Paris, where he lost his sight, and died 20th November, 1702.
- ii. THOMAS, ancestor of the HAYS, of ALDERSTONE, of whom presently.
- iii. George, baptized 20th March, 1629; m. Jean, daughter of Sir Henry Spottiswoode, gentleman of the privy chamber, and was father of RICHARD, commonly called "Father Hay," an antiquarian of great research, as is proved by his collection in the Advocates' Library. He was born at Edinburgh in 1661, and according to his own expression "thrust" into the Scots college in France, in 1675 or 1674. He quitted France in 1686, for the purpose of establishing a society of Canon Regulars in Scotland, where he remained until the revolution. Returning to France, he was made prior of Essours 11th August, 1692, and of Bernicourt 1st August, 1694.

KINLOCH, OF THAT ILK.

"Kinloch, of that Ilk, in the shire of Fife, seems," we quote Nisbet, "to be very ancient, and the name amongst the earliest surnames in the kingdom. Their arms are, azure, a boar's head, couped, betwixt three mascles or, as in Sir David Lindsay, of the Mount, his illuminate manuscript and in Espine's illuminate manuscript. Mr. Pent, in his Collections, gives the same arms with others, viz. azure, a bishop's pale or, between three laurel leaves argent. It seems the family hath sometimes made use of the last arms, upon the account that one Kellach or Killoch was the second archbishop of St. Andrew's, as Mr. Martin says in his MS. Reliquiæ Sanctæ Antree. This bishop built a chapel to St. Anna, near St. Andrews, called after him Kinkel, as Sir Robert Sibbald says, in his history of Fife, page 134. There was afterwards another bishop of St. Andrews of the name of Kinloch, in the reign of Gregory the great. They derive the name of Kinloch from their lands situated at the head of a loch. And in the old Scottish language kian, or kin, signifies the head. From hence the surname Kinloch, designed of the same.

* The Kennedys of Bargany are now represented by HEW FERGUSSON KENNEDY, esq. of Bonnamie and Fimnarts, 23d in descent from Duncan de Carrick, and, as representing Sir Thomas Kennedy, of Bargany and Ardstinchar, chief of the Kennedys of Scotland. See BURKE'S Peerage.

SIR ALEXANDER KINLOCH, of that Ilk, had two brothers, Andrew and George Kinloch, who got from their father different portions of the lands of Lithrie and Brunton. Sir Alexander sold the town and lands of Kinloch to Balfour, of Balgarvie, predecessor to the Lord Barleigh, but retained the barony of Weatherbie and built a strong house on Cruvie, being at feud with his neighbours; the greatest part of the house is yet standing. Sir Alexander having three sons who were killed by his said neighbours and their associates, so that he had only remaining two daughters, Isabel and Jean Kinloch. The first was m. to Ramsay, of Leuchars, and got with her the barony of Cruvie. She had only one daughter, who was m. to Sir David Carnegie, predecessor of the Earl of Southesk, who got with her the estate of Levechars and Cruvie. The other daughter, Jean Kinloch, was m. to Sandilands, of Abereromby, and he got with her the barony of Weatherbie and some other fens about it, the old writs of which are in the hands of the lord of Wishaw, possessor of these lands.

Sir Alexander Kinloch, of that Ilk, d. without male issue, so that the above-mentioned Andrew Kinloch, his brother, came to be heir-male and representor of the family of Kinloch and Cruvie. I have seen a disposition by the abbot and monks of Balmirnock, of the lands of little Kirmire to, and in favour of a honourable man, Andrew Kinloch, in Lithrie, for the sum of 200 merks, and for upholding the walls of that abbey, dated at Balmerinock the 6th May, 1520. He had two sons, but one daughter, Elizabeth, who was m. to Robert Paterson, of Dinmure, with whom he got the above-mentioned lands, upon condition that he and his heirs, with his wife, took upon them the name and arms of Kinloch, which failing, the lands were to return to George Kinloch, the uncle, as by the contract of marriage. Robert performed the condition of the contract in taking on the name of Kinloch, and arms, with his lady. He had a son, Andrew, who, after coming to be a man, enters in a contract with his grand uncle, George Kinloch, portioner of Lethrie, that he might freely return to the name of Paterson, and that the said George should take no advantage of him, by virtue of his mother's contract of marriage, which contract I have seen in the hands of Mr. David Kinloch, of Conland, in the shire of Fife, son of Mr. George Kinloch, portioner of Lithrie, great grandson of the above George, with whom Andrew Paterson, of Dinmure, made the last contract, so that the said David is the heir-male and representor of the ancient family of Kinloch and Cruvie.

KIRKALDY, OF GRANGE.

The name of Kirkaldy was of very ancient occurrence in the records of Scotland, and so far back as the reign of EDWARD III. we find, from Prine's History, William Kirkaldy submitting to that monarch. The two principal families were the Kirkaldys, of Inchstaer, the heiress of whom, Marjory, daughter of John Kirkaldy, married Reginald Kinnaird, and the Kirkaldys of Grange, whose representative

SIR JAMES KIRKALDY, High Treasurer of Scotland, m. Janet, daughter of Sir John Melville, of Raith, and had a son and heir,

SIR WILLIAM KIRKALDY, of Grange, famed for his military talents, and not less so for a generosity of disposition, by no means a characteristic of the period. His devotion to Mary Stuart appears in bright relief, even amid the many gallant acts of the faithful followers of the ill-fated Queen, and when her banner sunk on all other sides, it continued still to float over Edinburgh Castle, then defended by Kirkaldy. His dauntless intrepidity might have held out that strong fortress against all the force the Regent could muster within Scotland; but, in conformity with her proclamation she sent Sir William Drury, with a formidable train of artillery, to assist in reducing the Castle. Kirkaldy resisted with firmness worthy of his high military reputation, till his walls were breached and shattered, his provisions expended, the wells choked with ruins and inaccessible, and the artillery silenced. At the last extremity, he surrendered the place to Sir William Drury, on a general promise of favourable terms; but in this, the English Commander had undertaken more than he could make good. By Elizabeth's orders, Sir William Drury saw himself obliged to surrender his prisoners to the vindictive Regent, and the gallant Kirkaldy and his brother Sir James were executed at the Cross of Edinburgh.

Sir William married and had issue. His son-in-law, Sir Thomas Ker, of Fernehurst, (who had m. his daughter Janet in 1561,) adhered also; with devoted fidelity to the cause of QUEEN MARY, and joined in the defence of Edinburgh Castle. In requital for all these brilliant services to the house of Stuart, King CHARLES II. conferred in 1664, a BARONETCY on SIR JOHN KIRKALDY, of Grange, but the title has long been extinct.

Arms—Gu. a chevron arg. between three stars in chief, and a crescent in base or.

The family of Sibbald was one of great antiquity in Fifeshire, and so far back as the reigns of WILLIAM, and ALEXANDER II. We find the name occurring in charters. The Skenes are of great antiquity in the north of Scotland, and have ever been of honourable repute and estimation with their king and country, particularly in Aberdeenshire, where the house of Skene, their principal seat, stands, about eight miles west of the town of Aberdeen, betwixt the rivers Dee and Don, it being, by all traditionary accounts, the first stone built house in Marr. Tradition asserts that about the year 1014, Malcolm II. returning from a battle he had gained over the Danes at Mortlach, was attacked, in the wood of Kilblain, by a ravenous wolf, and would have lost his life, but for the timely assistance of a younger son of Donald of the Isles; who, seeing the king's danger, despatched the enraged animal with his dark or skene, and thenceforward was called Skene. The last GEORGE SKENE, of that ilk, d. at Skene, 27th April, 1825, having made a disposition of his property in favour of his nephew,

JAMES, EARL OF FIFE; but the male representation of the family still exists in the descendant of the SKENES of Hallyards, the present Lieut. ANDREW MORZ SKENE, R.N., of Kilmacow, co. Wicklow. (See BURKE'S Dictionary of the Commoners.)

ROBERT SKENE obtained from King ROBERT I. a crown charter of the barony of Skene, dated 1st June, 1317, and in his descendants the barony remained until the end of the fifteenth century, when we find it in the possession of

This distinguished officer, having evinced an early predilection for the sea-service, was introduced into the royal navy, under the auspices of Lord Mulgrave, on the 5th February, 1779, when he wanted some months of being eleven years of age, and made his first voyage to the East Indies, in the Burford, of seventy guns. From this period, Sir Edward was engaged in continual active service, and reaped an abundant harvest of laurel, during the war previous to the short piece of Amiens, having been the associate of the gallant Nelson, at the Nile, and in other great achievements. Upon the renewal of hostilities, Captain Berry again sailing under the command of the hero of the Nile, engaged in the van division of the fleet in the memorable engagement off Cape Trafalgar, on the 21st of October, 1805, and, as usual, sustained his high and bravely-earned reputation. DOLBEN.

CREATED 1st April, 1704.—EXTINCT 27th Sept. 1837.

Lineage.

This ancient family is descended from that of D'Albini, Earls of Sussex and Barons Dutton, temp. HENRY II. The present genealogy ascends to the reign of EDWARD IV. at which time they had large possessions in Caernarvonshire and Denbighshire, and were connected by marriage with some of the first families in the Principality. In the line of descent they stand thus: Hugh D'Albini, Humphrey Dalbin, John Dalbin, William Dalben; this last was rector of Stanwick, in Northamptonshire, and nominated bishop of Rochester, but died before consecration. He was first cousin to David Doulsen, or Dolben, rector of Hackney, and bishop of Bangor.

JOHN DOLBEN, archbishop of York, prior to entering into holy orders, was a military officer, and distinguished himself upon active service during the civil wars, under the royal standard, particularly at the defence of York, where he was severely wounded. He was lord high-almourer and clerk of the closet to CHARLES II. and, during the prohibition of the Liturgy, was accustomed to read it in a house opposite All Souls' College, of which a memorial is preserved in a fine painting, by Sir Peter Lily, at Finedon, a copy of which hangs in the hall of Christ Church, Oxford. He m. Mary, niece of Archbishop Sheldon, and was s. by his son,

I. GILBERT DOLBEN, one of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas in Ireland, who was created a BARONET, 1st April, 1704. Louisa.

Sir English died 27th September, 1837, when the BARONETCY became EXTINCT. "This remarkable personage," says a recent writer in the Gentleman's Magazine, "was much attached to classical literature and antiquities, and like his father, was a zealous supporter of the Established Church, but a sincere friend to toleration. Previously to his final retirement into the country, he lingered with much affection about the haunts of his youthful studies and amusements, being alike remarkable for his venerable deportment and harmless eccentricity. He was a constant visitor at the commemoration dinners at Christchurch; and he frequently joined the juvenile ranks at Westminster School, whom he would accompany to service at the Abbey, saying he was the youngest among them, beginning to count afresh from the age of seventy. He had his cards printed in black letter type, saying that he was himself "old English," and that was the most appropriate style for him. He carried so many small volumes about with him in his numerous and capacious pockets, that he appeared like a walking library; and his memory, particularly in classical quotations, was equally richly stored. About 1820, he visited Italy, taking with him Mr. G.

Tyler, a Scotch artist, who afterwards published a large panoramic view of Edinburgh, and also several lithographic views in Italy, in which the figure of Sir English frequently occurs."
