PREFACE.

---

The main object of this treatise is to give in the form of definitions with illustrative examples, a survey of the different meanings which, in the course of the centuries, have been attributed to the English relationship names. The work has been based mainly on the Old English Dictionaries of Bosworth-Toller and of Sweet, the Middle English Dictionaries of Strammann-Bradley and Mätzner, and especially on the New English Dictionary. The material is grouped according to the native or foreign origin of the words, and the different words] are arranged for the most part in alphabetical order. Numerous cross-references are added to enable the reader to establish readily the various meanings of each word.

2. Anna—Cleophas

Mary (mother of Joseph and James, called Jesus' brothers).

Wiclif, writing how Abraham is told that his brother's son, Lot, has been taken by the kings who attacked Sodom and Gomorrah, says :

Loth his [Abraham's] brother takun. —Gen. xiv, 14.

At the well Jacob meets Rachel the daughter of his mother's brother Laban, and :

he shewide to hir that he was the brother of hir fader.
—Wiclif, Gen. xxix, 12.

3. used by sovereigns and princes in addressing each other, and in most cases implying the existence of a more or less distant blood relationship.

King Edward IV. writes to Dr. Alexander Legh, his almoner and ambassador in Scotland :

Maistre Legh, where as our brother and cousin the King of Scotts desireth a mariage to be had betwixt our brother [here = own brother] of Clarence and a suster of the said King of Scotts. . . . —Ellis, Orig. Lett. ix, 1st ser. vol. I, p. 16.

4. in combinations :

a) breperen of blod : brothers having the same father or mother.

Christ speaks to Satan :

Ac to beo merciabile to man · þenne my kynde askep ;
For we beoþ breperen of blod · ac nat in baptisme alle.
—Piers Pl. C. xxi, 420 f.

b) broper german : = own brother, brothers having the same father and mother.

We are all children of God, says Dan Michel in «Ayenbit» :

Be þa goste we byeþ alle godes children be adopcion ; þet is be auouerie | and children of holy cherche | broper german of uader and of moder | be ane broþerhede gostliche. —Ayenb. p. 146.

c) frobroder : = a younger brother.

Amyntas, king of Macedonia, wedded a wife by whom he had two sons :

þe alder hight Alisaunder · as I right tell ;
And sir Philip forsoothe · his frobroder hight.
—Alis. Frag. (Skeat) 22 f.

In his glossary (p. 273) to the Alisaunder Fragment from which the above quotation is taken, Skeat has the following remark :

«Frobroder : n. a younger brother (apparently contr. from frombrother . . . [I cannot find the word elsewhere].)»

Stratman-Bradley identifies this word with the O. E. ἄπαξ λεγόμενον freobroðor (see above p. 5) which is a much more plausible assumption.

d) foster broder : = a male child reared together with another of different parentage.

Sir Ector, who had reared Arthur together with his own son Sir Kay, tells Arthur that he is not his real father, and that Arthur is destined to be king, adding :

«I will aske no more of yow but that ye wille make my sone your foster broder Syre Kay senceall of alle your landes». — Malory, Arthur, I, vi.

e) half broþer: a brother by one parent only. (occurs in Mid. E. from about 1300).

Matilda takes Steven prisoner, but he escapes:

Robert went hir with, Malde's half broþer, & þe kyng Dauid of Scotland was þe toþer.

—Robert, of Brunne, p. 121.

hic germanus, a halfebrodyre. —W.W. 690, 13.

f) ibropren: a plural form for broþer, used in the widest sense.

As the uppermost bough is of kin to the lowest roots, so the last man shall be akin to the first man who was before us:

And for þi bed [beþ] alle man ibropren and isustren. and solden auerihc man loueien oþer. —O. E. Homl. II, p. 219, 17 ff.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

A. Native Word.

brother, (broder, -yr, -ir, bruder, modern Scotch brither).

1. = the son of the same parents; but often extended to include one who has either parent in common, to the brother of one's husband or wife or to the husband of one's sister (more properly known as half brother, and brother-in-law).

A nobleman announces to King Edward that a prisoner has been brought in, whereupon Edward turning to the Dukes of Clarence and Gloster, says:

. . . Go we, brothers, to the man that took him,
To question of his apprehension.

—Sh. 3 Henry VI, III, ii, 121 f.

Edward IV, George, Duke of Clarence and Richard, Duke of Gloster were sons of Richard Plantaganet, Duke of York.

In a vision, Adam sees the murder of Abel by Cain; and the angel Michael says to Adam:

These two are brethren, Adam, and to come Out of thy loins. The unjust the just hath slain,
For envy that his brother's offering found From Heaven acceptance.

—Milton, P. Lost, xi, 454.

2. = half brother:

Lord Stanley, who had married the widowed mother of Henry, Earl of Richmond (afterwards Henry VIII), and by her had a son George, says to Henry:

But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George,
Be executed in his father's sight.

—Sh. Richard III, V, iii, 94.

3. = brother-in-law :

Adriana, the wife of Antipolus of Ephesus, and Luciana her sister, talk to Antipolus of Syracuse thinking he is A. of E. ; Luciana says :

Fie, brother! how the world is changed with you!

When were you wont to use my sister thus?

—Sh. C. Errors, II, ii, 154.

Mrs. Pryor, learning that Elizabeth is to marry Lovel, says to the brothers and sisters of Elizabeth :

«Come here children! come Augustine, Fanny, Louisa, kiss your dear brother, [Lovel] children!» —Thackeray, Lovel, vi.

4. including more distant kin :

In the King James Bible, in the story of Jacob's meeting Rachel, we read :

. . . When Jacob saw Rachel the daughter of Laban his mother's brother, . . . Jacob went near, and rolled the stone from the well's mouth, and watered the flock . . . And Jacob told Rachel that he was her father's brother, and that he was Rebekah's son : . . . —Gen. xxix. 10 ff.

The four kings destroy Sodom and Gomorrah :

And they took Lot, Abram's brother's son, who dwelt in Sodom, and his goods, and departed . . .

And when Abram heard that his brother was taken captive, he armed, his trained servants, . . . and pursued them unto Dan. —Gen. xiv, 12 ff.

5. in combinations :

a) brothers consanguinean :

Brothers born of the same father, often called brothers-consanguinean, are each others agnates. —James Muirhead, Gaius, III, § 10. NED.

b) brother german : = a brother through both parents, a 'whole' brother. Early writers also used it as = 'brother on the mother's side, brother-uterine'; it has been proposed in modern times to restrict it to 'brother on the father's side'. —NED, s. v.

Brother German denotes a brother both by the father's and by the mother's side.

—Chamber's Cyl. s. v. German. NED.

A. Macfarlaine writes :

I use the term brother-german to denote brother on the father's side. —Consanguinity 8. NED.

c) brother uterine : = one born of the same mother but not of the same father. Cf. above, under brother german.

d) foster-brother : a male child reared together with another of different parentage.

A contest takes place between the two clans Quehele, and Chyttan. The chief of Clan Quehele is Eachin Maclan, a foster-son of Torquil of the Oak, who with his eight sons is among the combatants.

«Eachin Maclan placed himself in the second line betwixt two of his foster-brothers». —Scott, Fair Maid of Perth, xxxiv.

e) god-brother: = a male person who has the same godparent as another; or, as in the following example, the relationship of a godson to the children of his godfather.

When George Duke of Clarence held the office of Lieutenant of Ireland, he had as deputies Thomas Earl of Desmond, John Tiptoft Earl of Worcester and others:

«The Butlers thryved under the blood of Lancaster, for which cause the Earle of Desmond remained many years Deputy to George Duke of Clarence his god-brother . . .» —Campion, Historie of Ireland, II, viii, (in Ancient Irish Histories, I, p. 150). (1809).

In the chapter immediately preceding the one from which we quote above, we read that «George duke of Clarence . . . his god-fathers at the front were the Earles of Ormond and Desmond» —the latter being the father of the Earl of Desmond mentioned above.

f) half-brother: = brothers having only one parent in common.

They are termed halfe brothers, or brothers of the halfe blood. —Termes de la Ley (1641) 108. NED.

He is my half brother. the son of my mother, but not of my father. —Jowett, Plato, (ed 2) I, 224. (1875). NED.

In the Dialects sometimes expressed by brother-in-law, cf. Brother-in-law p. 13.

B. Loan Words.

german = Mid. E. germain from O. French germain, used in Early Mod. E. in the sense of brother-german (see above p. 9).

Arthur has a combat with the Paynim brothers Pyrochles and Cymochles, in which he kills the latter:

Which when his german [i. e. Pyrochles] saw . . .

—Spenser, F. Q. II, viii, 46.

After Manild and Mamprise, King Ebranc succeeded to the rule of the land:

An happy man in his first dayes he was,
And happie father of faire progeny:
For all so many weekes as the yere has,
So many children he did multiply;

Of which were twentie sonnes, which did apply
Their minds to praise and chevalrous desire:
Those germans did subdue all Germany,
Of which it hight . . .

—F. Q. II, x, 22.

Likewise in F. Q. I, v. 10.

cadet, from O. French cadet: = a younger son or brother; a younger branch of a family; the youngest son.

«From a younger brother or cadet of this house.» —Holland, Camden's Brit., I, 463. (1610). NED.

«These rambling letters of mine . . . are nought else than a legend of the cumbersome life and various fortunes of a cadet.» —Howell, Letters, II, 61.

Lady Blanchemain meets her young relative Blanchemain, and leads him into a conversation about the two hostile branches of the family — Catholic and Protestant. Blanchemain explains:

«The late lord's great-grandfather denounced his elder brother as a Papist and a Jacobite — nothing more than that. It was after the 'Forty-five. So the cadet took the title and estates.» —Henry Harland, My Friend Prospero, vii.

In Gipsy English the relationship brother is expressed by pal (cf. Cent. Dic. p. 4236/1). In this sense it is not used in English otherwise than by Gipsies, though in slang, especially in Thieves' Slang, the word pal is frequently used in the sense of chum, comrade, companion, confederate.<sup>1</sup> «Pal is a common cant word for brother or friend, and it is purely Gipsy, having come directly from that language without the slightest change. On the Continent it is prala or pral. In England it sometimes takes the form of pel.» — C. G. Leland, Eng. Gipsies and their Language, vi. Cent. Dic.

BROTHER-IN-LAW.

I. OLD ENGLISH.

The Native Word.

tacur, tacor: = the brother of a husband, brother-in-law.

Leuir, tacur. —W.W. 30, 3.

Leuir, tacor, i. frater mariti. —W.W. 174, 38.

Cf. ibid. 672, 13, where we read: «Hic leuir, est frater in lege».

Leuirum, tacor, þæt is brydguma brodor —W.W. 506, 9.

<sup>1</sup> Said also of women. «She has asked me on purpose to meet Lady Ida — they are tremendous pals». — Mrs. Forrester, «Of the World, Worldly» chap. xv, (1892).

II. MIDDLE ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

broder yn lawe, broþer in lawe, etc. = brother-in-law, the brother of one's wife or husband; or the husband of one's sister.

Brodyr in lawe: sororius. — Pr. P. p. 54.

Octiater sygh Salome y-slawe,
He was Daries brother in lawe,
He hadde ywddded Jemeydas, Daries suster heo was.

— Alis. 4398 ff.

App. «in law» = in Canon Law, (in contrast to brother in blood or by nature), with reference to the degrees of affinity within which marriage is prohibited; a brother-in-law or sister-in-law being, as regards intermarriage, treated 'in law' as a brother or sister. — NED.

B. Loan Words.

syster husband: = brother-in-law.

A syster husband; sororius. — Cath. Ang. 341.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

brother-in-law: = properly, the brother of one's husband or wife; the husband of one's sister. Sometimes extended to the husband of one's wife's (or husband's) sister.

With reference to the prisoners which Lord Henry Percy was holding, King Henry says:

Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners,
But with proviso and exception,
That we at our own charge shall ransom straight
His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer.
— Sh. 1st Henry IV, I, iii, 77 ff.

good-brother: = brother-in-law; formed after the pattern of the French beau-frère.

In the Love Letters of Mary Queen of Scots (H. Campbell, 1825, App. 25), occurs the following:

«I pray you tak it in guid part, & not after the interpretation of your fals guid-brother.» NED.

«The King of England his Good brother.» — Sir J. Melvil, Mem. (1610). 7. NED.

brother = brother-in-law, cf. Brother, p. 9.

in the Dialects:

a) brother law: = brother-in-law. Gl<sup>1</sup>. nWil. Cor<sup>1</sup>. w. Som. The in is always omitted; so also in all the similar relationships. —EED.

b) brother-in-law: = a half-brother. (East). —Halliwell, Dic. p. 32.

c) mauf: = brother-in-law. (East Yorkshire). —Reprinted Glossaries, E.D.S. (I, 15), p. 32.

Cf. besides EDD. s. v. maugh, where the word is connected with Mid. E. maghe, mau, mohw, O.E. māga.

B. Loan Word.

cousin: = brother-in-law. Cf. Cousin III. 2. d.

FATHER.

I. OLD ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

fæder:

1. = one by whom a child is or has been begotten; a male parent.

When Beowulf and his comrades step out of their boat, they are met by one of Hroðgar's men who asks them who they are and whence they come. Beowulf answers:

We synt gum-cynnes	Geata leode
ond Higelaces	heard-geneatas.
Wæs min fæder	folcum geeyþed,
æpele ord-fruma	Egþeow haten.

—Beowulf, 260 ff.

2. = a male ancestor more remote than a parent; a progenitor, forefather.

In Eadwin's Canterbury Psalter we read:

Min god . . . on þe hyhton vel hopedon ure federæs on þe hy gehopedon & þu hie alysddest. (in te speraverunt patres nostri speraverunt et liberasti eos). —Eadw. Psalter, xxi, 1 ff. E.E.T.S. 92, p. 31 f.

When brought before Elene, the learned men answer her thus:

«hwæt, we ebreisce æ leornedon, þa on fyrndagum fæderas cudon.»

—Elene, 397 ff.

3. in combinations:

a) ærfæder: = father, late or deceased father: BT. and

Sweet give the meaning ancestor, forefather, but we have found no example of this use.

Wiglaf, to assist Beowulf in his contest with the dragon, draws his sword, 'known to men as the relic of Eanmund' which Weohstan, Wiglaf's father, gave to Wiglaf:

He [Weohstan] frætwe geheold	fela missera
bill ond byrnan,	od-dæt his byre mihte
eorlscipe efnan	swa his ær-fæder.
	— Beowulf , 2620 ff.

b) ealdfæder:

a) = a father who lived long ago.

When the arrival of Beowulf is announced to him, Hrōdgar says:

Ic hine cude	cniht-wesende.
Wæs his eald-fæder	Ecgþeo haten,
dæm to ham forgeaf	Hrēþel Geata angan dohtor.

—Beowulf, 372ff.

Beowulf was the son of Ecgtheow, and grandson (on the mother's side) of Hrethel.

β) = a grandfather.

avus, ealdefæder. —W.W., 173, 6.

γ) = an ancestor, a forefather.

God says to Adam:

þu sodlice fordfærst on sybbe, þonne se tima cymd, on godre ylde to dinum ealdfæderum. (Tu autem ibis ad patres tuos in pace, sepultus in senectute bona.) —Genesis, xv, 15.

In BT. we find also the combination: «eald ealdfæder = a great grandfather; proavus. —Som. Ben. Lye.»

c) fore-fæder (?) BT. mention «forefaderas = majores», without quotations.

d) fordfæder: = a forefather, an ancestor, usually used in the plural.

Fordfaderas, tritavi. —Napier I, 847.

Aelfric writes:

Of Noes yldstan sunu, þe wæs Sem gehaten,
com þæt Ebreisc folc, þe on god gelifde, Abrahames fordfaderas.

—Aelfric. de Vet. Test., (Grein I, p. 4, 19ff.).

e) foster-, fester-fæder: = a man who brings up and cares for a child not his own; one who takes the place of a father; a nourisher.

altor vel nutritor, fosterfæder. —W.W. 309, 1.

f) godfæder: = a male sponsor considered in relation to his god-child.

In the will of Wulfric we read :

«I give to my poor daughter the land at Elford and at Oakley . . . let her have the use of it while she may be deserv- ing of it and let it afterwards go to the convent at Burton :

forþon þe hit wæs mines godfæder gyfu». —Dipl. Angl. Aevi Sax. ed. B. Thorpe, p. 545.

g) steopfæder :<sup>1</sup> = the husband of a person's mother though not his father.

utricius, uel patraster, steopfæder. —W.W. 174, 6.

Orosius speaks of Oedipus :

Eac ic hit forlæte, Adipsus hu he ægþer ofsloh ge his agenne fæder, ge his steopfæder ge his steopsunu. —Alfred's Orosius, (Sweet), p. 42, 21 ff.

ealdor, aldor :

a) = father.

While drunk, Noah lies uncovered in his tent :

da com ærest Cam in sidian eafora Noes, þær his aldor læg ferhde forstolen.

—Genesis, 1577 ff.

b) = forefather, ancestor.

David complains of his slanderous enemies, praying that they may be punished :

Eall þæt unriht, þe his ealdras ær manes gefremedan, on gemynd cume and on ansyne ures drihtnes!
ne adilgode wesan deorc fyrene da his modur ær mane fremede.

—Psalms cviii, 14.

ildra, yldra :

a) = father.

Judas relates how his father told him of the crucifixion of Christ, and what was done with the cross :

da me yldra min ageaf andsware, frod on fyrehde fæder reordode.

—Elene, 462 f.

b) = in the plural, forefathers, ancestors.

In his preface to the translation of Gregory's 'Pastoral Care', Alfred tells how there were many learned books in England but the people did not read them because of the language in which they were written :

Swelce hie cwæden: Ure ieldran da de das stowa ær hioldon, hie lufodon wisdom. —Pastoral Care, Preface, (Sweet), p. 5, 13 ff.

The word ildra, yldra, was prefixed to relationship names in the same way and with the same meaning that grand and great are used in modern English.

auita, yldra fæder. —W.W. 345, 24.

per ataus, þurh ildran fæderas. —W.W. 464, 24.

Cf. also W.W. 492, 34; and 532, 38.

II. MIDDLE ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

fæder, feder, feader, fader, Orm. faderr; south. dial. væder, veder, vader) fadre, fadir(e), -ur(e), -yr :

1. one by whom a child is or has been begotten, a male parent, the nearest male ancestor.

hic pater, A<sup>o</sup> fadyre. hic genitor, idem est. —W.W. 671, 4 f.

hic triavus, the thyrd fadyr.<sup>1</sup>

hic attavus, the thyrd fader.

hic abavus, the secund fro thy fadyr.

hic proavus. the forne fadyre.

—W.W. 689, 34; 36; 38; 40.

Referring to Ascanius we find written in Layamon's Brut :

His moder wes ihoten Creusa

Priames kinges dohter,

þe Aeneas his fader

in Troie for-leas.

—Layamon, 210.

'fleschliche feder' used in contrast to 'uader gostliche'.

þis meiden þe we munnid wes marherete ihaten. ant hire fleschliche feder teodosie hehte of þe hedene folc patriarke and prince. —St. Marherete, p. 2.

2. = a male ancestor more remote than a parent, a forefather, a progenitor; especially with reference to Adam, 'our first father'.

Conscience speaks to the king, who wishes him to marry Meed [Bribery].

Cryst it me forbede!

Ar I wedde suche a wyf · wo me betyde!

For she is frele of hir feith · fykel of here speche,

And maketh men mysdo many score tymes; . . .

þowre fadre [=Adam] she felled · thorw fals biheste.

—Piers Pl. B. III, 119 ff.

<sup>1</sup> Should this not be «the thyrd fro the fader»? Cf. W.W. 689, 35 where we find «hec triava, the thyrd fro the modyre». (Cf. Mother, II. A. 1.)

God calls to Abraham :

Abraham! Abraham! . . . . .
It is I, take tent to me,
That fourmed thi fader adam,
And everything in it degre.

—Townl. Plays, iv, 57 ff.

3. in combinations :

a) aldfader, aldefader, eldfader :

a. = a grandfather.

Penda besieges Brian at Exeter; Cadwālan goes to the assistance of Brian, and with his own hand takes King Penda prisoner :

He wes Merwales fader;
Mildburge aldefader.

—Layamon, 31008 f.

«H' [Henry II, 1154—1189] purh godes ȝefu ængle landes king gret ealle mine bisceopas & ealle mine eorlas & ealle mine scirereuan & ealle mine þeinas frencisce & englisce on þan sciran Teobalt erceb[isceop] & se hiret æt Christes chyrchen on Cantuarabir; habbad land inne freondlice & ic kepe oep þæt ic hebbe heom geunnon þæt hi beon ælc þare lande wurpa þe hi eafdon en Edwardes kinges deȝe. & on Willelmes kinges mines furpur ealdefader. & on Henrices kinges mines ealdefader. . . . .» —Engl. Urkunde von 1155, F. H. Stratman in Anglia VII, p. 220.

socer, el(d)fader. —Prompt. P. p. 137.

A child is ofte lyk to his fadir or to his modir, or ellis to his eelde fadir. —Wiclif, Wks. I, 181. NED, hic avus, A<sup>o</sup> eldfader. —W.W. 672, 7.

In Barbours Bruce we are told that the King married his daughter to Walter Stewart :

And thai weill soyne gat of thar bed
Ane knaiff child, throu our Lordi's grace
That eftir his gude eld-fadir was Callit Robert and syne was king
And had the land in gouernyng.

—Barbour, Bruce, (Skeat) xii, 694.

β. = father-in-law.

We are told that this world is a desert devoid of all virtues;

Nusquam tuta fides non hospes ab hospite tutus: Nis nower non trewde. for nis þe gist siker of þe husebonde; ne noder of oder. Non socer a nuro. Ne þe aidefader of hi[s] oðem. —O. E. Homl. II, p. 165.

Moses, who had married a daughter of Raguel, the priest, sees the burning bush;

Moyses, — þat siþ was sett to kepe all his eüdfadere scepe, þat was þe prist of madian

Quas dogter he has tan, —
þe flok he fedd opon a tid,
Bi a wildrin wod side etc. etc.

— Cursor M. (Cot.) 5729 ff.

Alexander slays King Bebrik, whose daughter was the wife of Caratros. Caratros wants to avenge the death of his father-in-law, but Alexander, who under another name has been for some time the friend of Candoil, the brother of Caratros, pacifies C. telling him it is not worth his while to kill Alexander.

Bot if þe list on þat lede . loke with þin eþen,
Sir Alexander þe athill . þine aldfadire bane, þe þer bot graunt me to geve . quat guds as I craue,
And I sall prestly þat prince . present into þi handis.

— Alexander, 5375 ff.

γ. = ancestor, forefather.

«For mannes sawel is Cristes spouse
That he sal bring til heuin his house . . . .
Than bird our sawel lef other thing,
And luf Crist hir spous and hir king.
Hir ald-fader bird hir lefe
And on hir lemman clep and wete
Hir aldfader cal I Adam.
That broht hir into balful blam.»

— Engl. Metr. Homl. (Small) p. 122.

b) aldurfader = forefather. (Apparently a confusion between ald-fader, ancestor, and allerfader, father of all, first parent. NED.)

In a letter to Alexander, Dindimus writes of the worthlessness of gold, etc., and adds; «Your gods can not heal the dead, yet ye sacrifice to them, þin aldur-fadur, alixandre . al þis haþ used & alle kydde of þour kin . kenden þis dedus.»

— Alex. & Dind. (Skeat). 1050 ff.

c) forfader: = forefather, ancestor.

Just before his death Jacob calls his sons to him and gives them his blessing;

He gaue ilkan seir benissun;
And þan he laid his-heued don, . . .
And til his forfaders fard.

— Cursor M. (Cot.) 5461 ff.

Göt. has 'And to his former fadris ferd'.

Isaac blesses Jacob and sends him to Padan-aram. On the way he lies down to sleep, and in a vision God appears to him saying:

«Jacob Jacob, thi God I am
Of thi forfader Abraham,
And of thi fader Isaac.

— Townley Plays, vi, p. 52.

In this case 'forfader' = grandfather, Jacob being the son of Isaac, and Isaac the son of Abraham.

d) fordfeder: = forefather, ancestor.

Luciana says to Antipholus of Syracuse :

And may it be that you have quite forgot

A husband's office? . . .

If you did wed my sister for her wealth,

Then for her wealth's sake use her with more kindness.

— Sh. Errors, III, ii, lff.

partner : This word is also sometimes applied to a husband or wife.

spouse, from O. Fr. espouse : = a husband (or wife, cf. Wife III. A.)

For her the Spouse prepares the bridal ring,

For her white virgins Hymnæals sing . . .

KINSMAN.

I. OLD ENGLISH.

Native Word.

gelonda: = Kinsman, fellow-countryman (Sweet; BT. gives only the meaning fellow-countryman for this word).

mæg:

1. = a relative, a kinsman.

propinquus, mæg, vël gesibling. —W.W. 173, 40.

2. in combinations:

a) cneomægas, -magas: = relatives of the same generation.

Hine [Terah, Abraham's father] cneowmægas, metode gecorene mid sidedon of þære edelturf, Abraham and Lot.

— Genesis, 1733 ff.

b) fædern magas: = relatives on the father's side.
Agnati, fædern magas. —W. W. 173, 38.

c) gemæg<sup>1</sup>: = a kinsman.

Abraham says to Lot:

. . . Wit synt gemagas.

— Genesis, 1904.

d) (sib)gemagas, pl.: = kinsmen.

Referring to Abraham and Isaac:

---

<sup>1</sup> Cf. Kluge, Lgrph. 1898 col. 13, who supposes the word to be a plurale tantum: gemagas.

. . . heahlond stigon
sibgemagas on Seone beorh.

— Exodus, 385 f.

e) heafodmæg, = a near relation, a relation in the first degree.

Beowulf speaks to Unferth:

þeah du þinum brodrum to banan wurde,
heafod-mægum.

— Beowulf 587 f.

Cf. also Beowulf 2151.

f) leodmæg: = a kinsman.

Abraham answers Pharaoh:

Ac ic me, gumena baldor, gudbordes sweng
leodmagum feor lare gebearh.

— Genesis, 2693 f.

g) meddren mæg: = a relation on the mother's side.
cognati, meddern magas. — W.W. 173, 39.

h) neah-, nea-, neh-mæg: = a near kinsman.

adfinium, neahmaga. — W.W. 342, 18.

And þa he dead wæs and ealla his gebroðru and his neamagas. . .

[Quo mortuo et universis fratribus ejus omnique cognatione illa].
— Exodus, i, 6.

maga (?): = a kinsman.

BT. gives the meaning «relative», but without references.

Sweet does not mention the word.

heafod-maga: = a near relation.

God says to Andreas:

Wat ic Matheus þurh mænre hand hrinan heorudolgum, heafodmag[an] (MS. — magu) searonettum beseted . . .

— Andreas, 941 ff.

NEPHEW.

I. OLD ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

Nefa :

1. = a nephew, the son of a brother or sister.

Fæder was ðær inne ðara ædelinga æghwædres mid,
eam and nefa.

—Rid. xlvii, 6.

By the efforts of their king the two provinces of Northumbria, Deira and Bernicia, were drawn together and united into one league and one people :

Wæs he, Oswald, Eadwines nefa þæs ædelan cyninges, his sweostor sunu. —Beda, II, 6. (Miller) p. 166.

2. = a grandson.

Referring to Higelac the son of Hrethel who was the son of Swerting, we read :

Higelac Geata, nefa Swertinges.

—Beowulf, 1202.

3. = descendants in general.

pronepotum, nefena nefen[a]. —Napier, O. E. Gl. 5029.

pronepotibus, nefena, bearnum. —ibid. 850.

nepotibus, æftergengcum, nefenum. —ibid. 3370.

4. = a stepson.

nefa, prifignus. —W.W. 41, 28.

fornefa : = (Sweet) a great grandson ; designated as a word formed in slavish imitation of Latin.

= (BT.) a nephew's daughter.

Napier (O. E. Gl. 4663, note, and JGPh. II, 359), points out that instead of reading 'pronepotum = fornefena', we must read 'pro nepotum = for nefena', pro in this case being a preposition. Fornefa is therefore a mere 'ghost-word' which must be struck out of the dictionaries.

genefa : = a nephew.

Gaius his [Augustuses] genefa for of Egyptum on Sirie.

—Orosius VI, I, p. 254. (Cotton).

The Latin text reads : Caium nepotem suum Caesar Augustus . . . misit. Cf. Sweet, Orosius, p. 254f. Sweet's text, the Lauderdale MS., has nefa instead of genefa. Kluge (LGRPh. 1898, No. 1, Col. 13f.) doubts the singular genefa, assuming that the word existed only as plural; that such collectives expressing relationship were in olden times only Pluralia tantum. The reading of the Cotton MS., however, contradicts this assumption.

geswiria, geswirga, geswigrā : = a sister's son, a nephew (Sweet).

consobrinus, geswiria, odde swustur sunu. —W.W. 365, 8.

Cf. Cousin I.

suhterga, suchtyrga, suctyria, suhtriga :

1. = a brother's son, a nephew.

Abraham says to Lot his brother Haran's son :

Ic eom fædera þin sibgebyrdum. þu min suhterga.

— Genesis, 1900 f.

Abraham hears that Lot has been made captive :

cwæd þæt him wære weorc on mode sorga sarost, þæt his suhtriga þeownyd þolode.

— Genesis, 2028 ff.

2. = the relationship of those whose fathers were brothers ;
a cousin.

Fratuelis, suhterga. — W.W. 23, 7.

fratuelis, i. e. filius fratris, suchtyrga. — W.W. 404, 8.

fratres patruales, suctyrian, sic dictus est ad patres eorum si fratres inter se fuerunt. — W.W. 410, 39.

Hübschmann's conjecture that this word may have had also the signification of 'grandson' in olden times (cf. Strasbourg Festschrift zur XLVI. Vers. Deutscher Phil. u. Schulm., Straßburg 1901, p. 69 f.) is not warranted by the texts, though quite possible in itself in view of the many fluctuations of the relationship-names.

swustorsunu : = a nephew, the son of one's sister.

Beda writes of the East Saxons :

In dære þeode wæs in þa tid Sæberht cyning, Aedelberhtes swustorsunu. (. . . in qua uidelicet gente tunc temporis Sæberct nepos Aedelbercte ex sorore Rricula regnabat . . .) — Beda, II, iii,
p. 104.

nepos, suster sune, þæt is nefa. — W.W. 173, 29.

suther(ge)fæderan : = uncle and nephew. Cf. Uncle p. 64.

II. MIDDLE ENGLISH.

A. Native Word.

nefe, neve : = a nephew, the son of a brother or sister.

After bidding the priests and nobles swear allegiance to his daughter, King Henry affianced her to Geoffrey the Handsome :

for help to hauene togænes his neue Will'm. — O.E. Chron. an 1127.

William was the son of Robert, who was the oldest son of the Conqueror, and the older brother of Henry I.

sister sone : = a nephew.

Of Jacob the Lesser, first Bishop of Jerusalem, we are told :

he was our lauedi sister sone.
quar-fore men calde him cristis broþer.

—Cursor M (Fairfax) 21130 f.

Mary, Christ's mother, was the daughter of Anna and Joseph; the mother of Jacob (or James) above mentioned was the daughter of Anna and Cleophas.

B. Loan Word.

cosyn : = nephew. Cf. Cousin II. B. 3.

neueu, newew, from O. French neveu, Anglo-French nefu, nevu :

1. = a nephew, the son of a brother or sister.

King Arthur fights a battle with the Romans, in which one of Arthur's allies, King Bedwer of Normandie, falls :

Hyrel, Bedwer's neuen. þo his uncle aslawe he sey.
He verde as a wyteles mon, yt was deol to be hym-ney.

—Robert of Gl. p. 216.

In the Legend of Hysipyle and Meadea, Chaucer relates that Eson, King of Thessaly, gave up his kingdom to his brother Pelleus. Eson had a son named Jason, who in time became so well liked and so powerful that Pelleus began to fear him, and to look for a means of getting rid of him. The story of the Golden Fleece, and the perils and dangers of seeking it coming to his ears :

This Pelleus bethoghte upon this wyle;
That he his newew Jason wolde enhorte
To sailen to that lond.

—Chaucer, Leg. of Good Women, 1439 ff.

In the Legend of Hypermnestra, King Egiste calls his daughter Ypermistra to him just after her marriage to Lino, son of Egiste's brother Danao, and giving her a keen edged knife, bids her that night cut Lino's throat :

For in my dremes hit is warned me
How that my newew shall my bane be.
But whiche I noot, wherefor I wol be siker.

—Leg. of Good Women, 2658 ff.

Neveuw here certainly refers to Lino, and thus cannot have the meaning 'grandson', which Skeat gives in his Glossarial Index to his large edition of Chaucer (p. 175/1). Skeat himself states that Chaucer drew his material for this legend chiefly from Boccaccio, De Genealogia Deorum, and in the passage quoted by him from this work we read : «Danaus Beli Prisci fuit filius, ut asserit Paulus, et illud idem affirmavit Lactantius, qui etiam et ante Paulum Orosium, dicit Danaum Beli filium ex pluribus conjugibus .L. filias habuisse, quas cum Aegistus frater ejus, cui totidem erant melioris sexus filii, postulasset in nurus, Danaus oraculi reponso comperto sé manibus generi moriturum, uolens euitare periculum, conscensis manibus in Argos uenit. . . —Boc. De Gen. Deorum, lib. II, c. 22. Cf. p. xl, Introduction to Leg. Gd. Wm. (Skeat).

There can therefore be no doubt that Chaucer's «Egiste» — Chaucer transposed the names of the fathers — was thinking not of his grandson but of his nephew, when he tells Hypermnestra of the prophecy concerning him.

2. = a grandson :

In Chaucer's House of Fame, we are told of the dream in which the poet is borne up by an eagle, who during the flight tells that at the command of Jupiter he has come to bear the poet to the House of Fame, for :

Certeyn, he [Jupiter] hath of thee routhe,
That thou so longe trewely
Hast served so ententifly
His blinde neuew Cupido,
And fair Venus [goddesse] also,
Withoute guerdoun ever yit.

— Chaucer, House of Fame, 641 ff.

3. = a kinsman :

Robert of Gloucester, in his Chronicle (p. 168), relates that King Arthur, being advised of the arrival in Scotland of a great force of German knights, takes counsel of his Parliament and resolves to seek aid of his kinsman King Howwel :

þo þe messenger wyþ þe tydyng to kyng Howwel com,
Hys conseyl wel hastelyche in such nede he nome,
Vor to helpe ys neueu, and ys kynedom.

— Robert of Gl. p. 169.

On this same page we find (line 13)

þe king Arture's syster's sone þys kyng Howwel was.

King Howwel was therefore the nephew of Arthur, and neueu in the above example has thus the sense of uncle, or better, the more general term kinsman. The Herald's College MS. (MS. of the College of Arms) has the word kynnesman in place of neueu in this passage. (cf. p. 169, note)

neces : = nephew. Cf. Niece II. B. 6.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

L o' a n. W o r d.

cousin(coz) : = nephew. Cf. Cousin III. 2. a.; 6. b.  $\beta$ .
nephewe, nephew :

1. = the son of a brother or sister, a nephew.

King Claudius, in addressing his court and speaking of the claims of Fortinbras, says :

We have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,
Who, impotent and bed-rid scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose.

—Sh. Hamlet, I, ii, 27 ff.

2. = a grandson.

Venus lulls Ascanius to sleep, so that Cupid may take his shape and go to Dido to put love for Aeneas into her heart. As Cupid leaves, Venus says to the sleeping Ascanius :

Sleep, my sweet nephew, in these cooling shades.
Free from the murmur of these running streams.

—Marlowe, Dido, II, i, 335 f.

3. = grandchildren.

But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to show piety at home, and to requite their parents. —1st Timothy, v, 4.

The Greek text has here  $\epsilon\chi\tau\epsilon\rho\nu\alpha$ .

Roderigo and Iago call up Brabantio in the night, and advise him to look to his daughter, who, they say, is with Othello. Iago says :

Because we come to do you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse ; you'll have your nephews neigh to you. —Sh. Othello, I, i, 110 ff.

4. = cousin, or kinsman in general.

Mortimer, Earl of March, tells Richard Plantaganet the cause of his father's death and of his [Mortimer's] own imprisonment :

Henry IV, grandfather to this king [Henry VI], Deposed his nephew Richard, Edward's son,
The first-begotten and the lawful heir
Of Edward king, the third of that descent.

—Sh. 1st Henry VI, II, v, 61 ff.

Henry IV was a cousin of Richard II.<sup>1</sup>

5. used even for brother.

Lyly cites examples of the power of love :

And so farre hath this humour crept into the minde, that Biblis loved hir Brother, Myrra hir Father, Canace hir nephew. —Lyly, Euphues and his England. (Bond) II, p. 113.

Bond quotes : Hyg. Fab. 242. «Macareus Aeoli filius propter Canacem sororem, id est sponsam ipse se interfecit;» and Fab. 243: Canace Aeoli filia propter amorem Macarei fratris, ipsa se interfecit.» and adds : Nephew, 'relative;' 'brother' having just been used for Biblis. —ibid. p. 514.

6. = any lineal descendant.

Spenser, giving in The Faery Queen, II, Canto x, a chronicle of the early British kings, tells us (stanza 43 ff.) that King Morindus had five sons, who after his death reigned successively; following these :

Then all the sonnes of these five brethren raynd
By dew successe, and all their nephews late;
Even thrise eleven descents the crown retaynd.

—Faery Queen, II, x, 45.

«Nephew, Restrained at this present to the son of a brother or a sister; but formerly of much laxer use, a grandson, or even a remoter lineal descendant. In East Anglia it is still so used in the popular language (see Nall. Dialects of the East Coast, s. v.)» —Trench, Sel. Glossary, (8th ed. Mayhew) p. 187.

7. in combinations :

a) grand-nephew : = the son of a nephew or niece.

My two Grand-nephews Albert Morton and Thomas Bargrave. —Wotton, Will, in Walton, Life, 1651, c. 9. NED.

Referring to the dispute for the succession to the crown :

William, Duke of Normandy, grand-nephew of Emma, demanded the succession. —Coman & Kendall, Hist. of England, p. 67. (1899).

b) great-nephew : = the son of a nephew or niece.

The said Mathew Slade also was great nephew, 'tis said, of Mathew Slade who wrote against Vorstius. —Wood, Life, 20 Dec. 1689. NED.

c) half-nephew: = the son of one's half-brother or half-sister; also the husband of a half-niece.

. . . A Frenchman who is her own half-nephew, the son of a sister who was daughter to the same father by a former wife. —Mrs. Carlyle, Lett. I, 14. NED.

To pay a . . . visit to a half-nephew and niece, or rather a half-niece and her husband. —Miss Mitford, Village, Ser. I. (1863) 223. NED.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

1. = a son.

Lost in south Eng. where the modern representative of O.E. bearn would have been bern (cf. fern) or barn (cf. arm). In fact berne survived in the south to 1300, barn still survives in northern Eng. and was used by Shakespeare; bairn is the Scotch form (cf. fairn, airm, wairn) occasionally used in literary English since 1700. It is doubtful whether the berne, bearn of some 17th c. writers was a survival of the early southern form, or a variant sp. of bairn. The pl. bærn in Ormin is the O.N. börn, hence it is probable that the northern sing. barn is as much of O.N. as of O.E. origin. NED.

I am that James king Robert's sonne, the Scot
That was in England prysoner all his youth . . .
Than had my father (you shall vnderstand)
Of lawful bearnes mee, and one only other Nempt Dauy Rothsay, who was mine elder brother.
—Baldwin in Mirror f. Mag. p. 103,
King James II. NED.

To this daie, even the common sort 'doo call their male children barnes here in England, especiallie in the north countrie. —Harrison, Engl. II, v, 108. (1577) NED.

2. = children, male and female.

I wish I could return your compliments as to my wife and bairns. —Swift, Corr. Wks. 1848, II, 527. (1714) NED.

boy : sometimes colloquially used for son; also as in the following example, used for grandson.

It was Big Joe carrying me [the doctor] off to see his grandson, little Joe; . . . He did get better. but Big Joe was dead that night. He had the disease on him when he carried me away from the boat, but his heart was set upon his boy . . . —John Brown, Horae Subsectivæ, I, p. 393. (Scott and Denny Comp.-Literature, p. 113.)

son :

1. = a male child; the male issue of a parent, father or mother.

Petruchio says to Katherina :

Now, by my mother's son, and that's myself
It shall be moon, or star, or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your father's house.

—Sh. Shrew, IV, v, 6 ff.

2. = a son-in-law, the husband of one's daughter.

When Mrs. Prior learns that Lovel is to marry her daughter Elizabeth, she :

. . . Runs up to Lovel: «My son! my son!» says she. —Thackeray, Lovel, vi.

Baptista, whose daughter Katherina had married Petruchio, says to Petruchio :

Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.

—Sh. Shrew, V, i, 13.

3. = a male descendant, however distant.

Beatrice says :

No, uncle, I'll none: Adam's sons are my brethren; and, truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred. —Sh. Much Ado, II, i, 66 ff.

Surely the princes of Zoan are fools, the counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become brutish: how say ye unto Pharaoh, I am the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings? —Isaiah xix, 11.

4. in combinations :

a) foster-son : = one who is brought up as a son though not one by birth.

O of Coelestial Seed! O foster-Son of Jove.

Cf. also Smollett, Rod. Random, (1812) I, 19, 'The cadet of a family.' NED.

mulier : = a legitimate son in contradistinction to one born out of wedlock.

Mulier puisne, a younger son born in wedlock and preferred before an elder brother born out of wedlock, who was called bastard eigne. — Century Dic. s. v. mulier.

In the dialects we find :

a) son : also written sun. Sc. Nhb.<sup>1</sup> and in diminutive form sonny :

Cor. 'Son' and 'sonny' are freely used quite irrespective of paternity. I have heard a lad address his father as 'My son,' and some go so far as to use this form of speech to their wives. — Hammond, Parish, (1897) 345. EDD.

b) auld son : = the oldest son. Sc.

Per. In these parts an oldest son . . . is usually spoken of as my auld son; the 'auld son' may be a child.

—Beowulf, 1162 ff.

---

<sup>1</sup> Another hardly satisfactory explanation of this compound has been given by Abbott, Mod. Lang. Notes XIX (1904), p. 124. He proposes to read the latter part of the compound as the expression of a relationship «which is the product of some external agency, like law or custom . . . like our -in-law . . . compounds . . . The second part of the compound would therefore indicate that this connection came through the father, that is, each had the same father but in different ways, the one by blood, the other by marriage, that, as it were, they were fathered-in-law».

The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle tells us that Earl Godwin's son Swegen killed his cousin Beorn, and that Beorn's body was later carried to Winchester :

and he is þær byrged wid Cnut cyng his eam. —Chron. an. 1046.

Gytha, Godwin's wife was a sister of Ulf, who married Estrith, the sister of Cnut. Swegen, later king of Denmark (not the above mentioned S.) and Beorn were sons of Ulf and Estrith. Thus Cnut was Beorn's uncle. (cf. Freeman O.E. History, pp. 247, 253, 256.)

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

eme, eym(e), eam(e), eem:

1. = the brother of one's father or mother, an uncle.

Spenser tells us in his chronicle of the old kings of Britain, that King Lud, who «built that gate which of his name is hight», at his death left two sons Androgeus and Tenantius, too young, to rule; so:

Whilst they were young, Cassibelan their eme
Was by the people chosen in their stead.

—Spenser, F.Q. II, x, 47.

Cassibelan was the brother of Lud.

Drayton tells the story of the battle of Shrewsbury:

Betwixt Henry the Fourth, the son of John of Gaunt,
And the stout Percies, Henry Hotspur, and his eame
The earl of Wor'ster.

—Polyolbion xxii, 426 ff.

Henry Percy, surnamed Hotspur, was the son of Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, who was a brother of Thomas Percy, Earl of Worcester.

The word eme does not occur in Shakespeare, though used by other writers of his time; cf. e. g. «Locrine», I, i, p. 135; III, iv, p. 166 (cf. Tauchn. ed. Sh.'s Doubtful Pl.)

2. in the Dialects:

Saddletree suggests different lawyers for the defense of Dean's daughter:

«What say you to try young Mackenzie? he has a' his uncle's Practiques at the tongue's end».

«What, 'sir, wad ye speak to me». exclaimed the sturdy presbyterian in excessive wrath, «about a man that has the blood of the saints at his finger's ends? Didna his eme die and gang to his place wi' the name of the Bluidy Mackenzie?» —Scott, Ht. of Midloth. chap. xii (middle).

B. Loan Words.

cousin(coz): = uncle. Cf. Cousin III. B. 3.

uncle, (sometimes familiarly nuncle,<sup>1</sup> with incorrect division of the possessive pronoun).

1. = the brother of one's father or mother; also the husband of one's aunt; the uncle of one's husband or wife.

Prospero telling his daughter Miranda, of his brother's perfidy, says

My brother and thy uncle, called Antonio...
Of all the world I loved and to him put
The manage of my state.

—Sh. Tempest, I, ii, 66 ff.

After the murder of Desdemona, Othello says to Gratiano, brother of Desdemona's father Brabantio:

«I scarce did know you, uncle; there lies your niece».

—Sh. Othello, V, ii, 201.

2. in combinations:

grand-uncle and great-uncle.

The words great- and grand- are prefixed to denote one degree further removed in relationship: the uncle of one's father or mother, after the model of the French grand, which follows the example of the Latin magnus: — avunculus magnus. Great- and grand- are also used together to indicate a removal of two degrees; additional 'greats' are prefixed to indicate still further degree of removal. In Old English, before these Romance customs crept in from the French, these degrees were seemingly expressed by such combinations as 'mines eames fæder; mines eames yldre, or þridde fæder.' NED. Cf. under O.E. eam, p. 64.

«He also . . . was crowned king of Fraunce . . . be the gret mighte . . . of his graunt uncle Henry cardinalle of Englande. —Bk. Noblesse 19 (1475) NED.

«I won't consult grand uncle on that matter, Cousin Hew.» —J. Grant, Cameronians, I, ii, 24, (1880). NED.

In the Will of Henry VIII, we read:

«The tombes and aultars of King Henry VI and also of King Edward IV, our great Uncle and graundfather» —Pote, Hist. Windsor Cas. (1749) 51. NED.

«Above these are, great unkle and great aunt by the father's side, unkle and aunt by the father's side in the third degree. —W.D. tr. Comenius' Gate Lat. Unl. (1656) NED.

Walter Scott, in Mem. of Early Life, (in Lockhart, Life, 1839, I, 5), mentions:

«William Scott of Raeburn, my great-grand-uncle» NED.

«My distinguished great-great-great-uncle Bishop Burnett.» —Ramsay, Remin. I, 4. NED.

«The great-great-grand-uncle of the present Lord Walsingham.» —Illustr. Lond. News, Dec. 20 1884, 602/1. NED.

«The infant's godfathers . . . were . . . his great-great-great-great-uncle; and his great-great-great-uncles . . .» —Hone, Every-day-book, II, 899. (1825—27). NED.

3. in the Dialects:

auld uncle: = the uncle of one's father or mother. (Jam.) EDD.

good-uncle: = an uncle by marriage. EDD.

‡ 2. FEMALE NAMES.

ANCESTRESS.

I. MODERN ENGLISH.

A. Native Word.

foremother : = a female ancestor.

Looking in this glasse of the holie liues of their foremothers.
—Bentley, Mon. Matrones, Pref. B. iijb. (1582). NED.

Ombre, the delight of our forefathers and foremothers. —H. H. Gibbs, Ombre 1. (1878). NED.

B. Loan Word.

ancestress : = a female ancestor.

An Englishe treatise . . . wherein her Majestie's ancestresse is termed base in contempt. —T. Norton in Wright, Q. Eliz. Orig. Lett. (1838) II, 124. (1580). NED.

The ladies of the present day . . . suffer much more waste in their households, than their ancestresses did. —Helps, Soc. Press. ix, 132. (1874). NED.

Besides, the words Mother (O. E. cf. p. 85, Mid. E. p. 86, Mod. E. p. 89), Grandmother (cf. Mother, Mod. E. p. 90) and Grandame (cf. Mother Mod. E. p. 93) are sometimes used in the sense of ancestress, especially with reference to our common ancestress Eve.

AUNT.

I. OLD ENGLISH.

Native Words.

1. = a father's sister, a paternal aunt.

amita mea, min faðu. amita mea magna, minre faða moder.

proamita mea, minre fadan yldre-moder. abamita mea, minre fadan dridde moder. —W.W. 174, 15 ff.

Beda relates that the wife of King Ecgrith, after having been married for twelve years, obtained the king's consent to devote the rest of her life to the Church, and entered the monastery of the Abbess Aebbe;

seo wæs Ecgfrides faðe þes cyninges. [quae erat amita regis Ecgfridi]. —Beda, IV, 19, (Miller). p. 318.

moddrige:

1. = a mother's sister, a maternal aunt.

matertera mea, min moddrige. matertera mea magna, minre moddrige moder. promatertera mea, minre moddrigan eldre moder. abmatertera mea, minre moddrigan þridde moder. —W.W. 174, 28 ff.

Beda tells us of the death of Ercongote, daughter of Erconberht, king of Canterbury, and his wife Sæburg. At the time of her death Ercongote was an abbess in a monastery at Brie, where lived also Aethelburg, who, like Sæburg, Ercongote's mother, was a daughter of Anna, King of East Anglia, and thus the maternal aunt of Ercongote. Beda then proceeds with the story of the life of «hire modrige Aedelburg.» —Beda, III, 8, p. 174.

2. = a cousin, seemingly both male and female (cf. the following quotation).

consobrinus, filius patruelis, uel moderge. —Sweet, O.E. Texts, Corp. 587.

Anna þonne þy syxtan monþe þas þe Sanctus Iohannes on his modor bosm onfangen wæs, þa þæt wuldres bearn on þysne middangeard astæg, & seo heofoncunde weorþung þone fæmlican bosm Sancta Marian gefylde, & þa heo þa into þære hire moddrigan eode þære halgan Elizabethæ, sona þæt cild onsprang & ongean his Hlaford hyhte & hine of his modor bosme on þære fæmnan bosm halette & grette. —Blickl. Homl. p. 165, 28 f.

Mary was the daughter of Joseph and Anna; Elizabeth of Anna's sister Ismaria (cf. Cursor Mundi, 10149 f.).

A rather doubtful gloss occurs in W.W. 442, 15: — «matertera mea materna, minre modrigan moder». BT. gives this gloss as an example of the use of modrige with the meaning of cousin. The O.E. words can signify «the mother of my aunt», or «the mother of my cousin».

II. MIDDLE ENGLISH.

A. Native Word.

môdræ, moddræ: = an aunt, especially a maternal aunt, a mother's sister.

In the story of King Lear and his three daughters, we hear how Cordoille [Cordelia] the youngest, at length obtains control of all the lands which Lear had given to the two older sisters. After the death of Lear and of Cordoille's husband Aganippus, Morgan and Cunedagius, who were the respective sons of Cordoille's two sisters, raised a rebellion, captured Cordoille, and heo werdede heore moddri mare þene heo sulden.

—Layamon, 3771.

B. Loan Word.

ante, aunte; (O. French ante; Latin amita). = a father's or mother's sister, or half sister.

The two sons of Cordelia's sisters deem it not right that Cordelia should be in full control of all the land, so :

Heo gederede up here aunte here ost aboute wyde,
And destruyede hire londes ayder in his syde.

—Robert of Gl. p. 37, 15 f.

In an apostrophe to St. John the Evangelist we read how blessed John was to have such a mother, —that full greatly was grace given him :

for-qui his [Christ's] moder was þi naunt.

—Cursor M. (Cot.) 24675.

Anna, the mother of Mary, had by a third marriage (with Salomas) a daughter who became the mother of St. John the Evangelist.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

Loan Word.

aunt: and by wrong division of the words mine aunt, thine aunt, etc., we find the form naunt, especially in 16th c.; also common in the diminutive forms auntie, and aunty:

1. = a father's or a mother's sister; also, an uncle's wife (more strictly called an aunt-in-law).

While the Duke of York is talking to his nephew Bolingbroke (Henry IV) son of John of Gaunt, the Duchess of York calls from without, desiring admittance :

Boling. What shrill-voiced suppliant makes this eager cry?

Duch. A woman, and thy aunt, great king; 'tis I,

Speak with me, pity me, open the door.

—Sh. Rich. II. V, iii, 75 ff.

Miss Honeyman, the sister of Colonel Newcome's wife, writes to the Colonel concerning Clive, his son :

«Then as he was too small for a great school, I thought Clive could not do better than stay with his old aunt [= Miss. H. herself] and have his uncle Charles for a tutor.» . . . —Thackeray, Newcomes, I, iii.

For an example of the form auntie, see Burns' poem The Young Lassie stanza iv :

«My auld auntie Katie upon me takes pity ;
I'll do my endeavor to follow her plan . . . »

2. in combinations :

grand-aunt and great-aunt (Hybrids) :

Grand and great are prefixed to denote degree of relation.

(Cf. Grand-uncle).

grand aunt : = a father's or mother's aunt.

«Tom . . . had had the good luck . . . to take the fancy of a rich relation, a grand aunt.» —Miss Mitford, Village, Ser. II, (1863), 346. NED.

Referring to the Baroness Bernstein, an aunt of her husband's, Lady Castlewood says to her son :

«Go and shake hands with grand aunt, Esmond » —Thackeray, Virginians, lxxxiii.

great aunt :

«Above these are great unkle and great aunt by the father's side, unkle and aunt by the father's side in the third degree.» —W. D. tr. Comenius' Gate Lat. Unl. 752, 235. NED.

«The infant's godfathers . . . were . . . his great-great great-great-uncle; . . . His godmothers . . . were . . . his great-great-great-great-aunt; . . . his great-great-grand-mother . . . » —Hone, Every-day-book, II, 899; 1825—27. NED.

3. In the Dialects :

a) = a grandmother; also attrib. in phrase aunt grandmother.

Glo. One person will taunt another by telling him to go and complain to his aunt grandmother.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

A. Native Word.

1. = a woman at her marriage; a woman about to be married, or very recently married.

The term is particularly applied on the day of marriage and during the 'honeymoon', but is frequently used from the proclamation of the banns, or other public announcement of the coming marriage. In the parliamentary debate on Prince Leopold's allowance Mr. Gladstone, being criticized for speaking of the Princess Helen as a 'bride', said he believed that colloquially a lady when engaged was often called a 'bride'. This was met with 'Hear! hear!' from some, and 'No! no!' from others . . . NED.

Capulet says:

My child is yet a stranger in the world;
She hath not seen the change of fourteen years;
Let two more summers wither in their pride,
Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.
—Sh. Rom. & Jul. I, ii, 8 ff.

Thus I won my blushing bride
One happy summer-day.

—Mackay, Three Flowers. NED.

MOTHER-IN-LAW.

I. OLD ENGLISH.

Native Word.

sweger: = the mother of one's husband or wife.

socrus. sweger. —W.W. 174, 3; 309, 16.

From henceforth there shall be five in one house divided three against two, and two against three:

Beod todæle fæder on sunu, and sunu on his fæder; modor on dohtor and dohtor on hyre modor; swegr on hyre snore, and snoru on hyre swegre. —Luke, xii, 53. (Bright p. 59.)

II. MIDDLE ENGLISH.

Native Words.

sweger: = mother-in-law.

socrus, sweger. (12th Cent.) —W.W. 538, 16.

Cf. also Gospel of St. Matthew, ed. W.W. Skeat (1887), iii, 14; x, 35.

moder in lawe, modyr-, moodur-, etc.

moodur in lawe, socrus. —Pr.P. p. 341.

eld-modyr: = mother-in-law. Cf. Mother p. 87.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

mother-in-law:

1. = the mother of one's husband or wife.

Referring to Ruth, who had married her son:

Then Naomi her mother-in-law said unto her, My daughter, shall I not seek rest for thee, that it may be well with thee? —Ruth, iii, 1.

To violate so gentle a request of her predecessor, was an ill foregoing of a mother-in-law's harsh nature. —Middleton, Anything for a Quiet Life, i, 1. NED.

2. = a stepmother.

When she tells Lovel's two children that she is to marry their father, Elizabeth asks the children to love her:

But Cissy said when the same appeal was made to her: 'I shall love my dear mamma!' and makes her new mother-in-law a very polite curtsey. —Thackeray, Lovel, vi.

3. stepmother-in-law: = the stepmother of one's husband or wife.

In the description of Castlewood after the marriage of Lydia to Lord Castlewood, we read:

Not even the dowager lady and her two children, who now seldom entered within Castlewood's gates, my lady considering them in the light of enemies — for who, indeed would like a stepmother in law. —Thackeray, Virginians, lxxii.

B. Loan Word.

mamma-in-law: (cf. mamma, above, p. 94.) = mother-in-law; rather a jocular form.

Recalling some of mamma-in-law's dreadful expressions which make me shudder when I hear them. —Thackeray, Newcomes, II. 259. NED.

I do not altogether like my mamma-in-law. — Clive Holland, Jap. Wife, (ed. 11) 36. NED.

mam(m)a: = mother-in-law. Cf. Mother p. 94.

In the dialects:

«Yes, gudemither», screamed the daughter-in-law, «it's e'en sae». — Scott, Antiq. xxvi, NED.

c) eldmother: = mother-in-law. Cf. Mother p. 91.

NIECE.

I. OLD ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

1. = the daughter of a brother or sister, a niece.

The spot where King Oswald fell in battle, Beda tells us, was said to possess miraculous healing powers. A certain man who had experienced these powers, on visiting some friends, found a woman of the household suffering from paralysis; directed by this man, she is carried to the place of wonders, and is immediately cured. Beda tells us that this woman:

wæs nift þes higna ældres þe he sohte. (The Latin original reads: invenit puellam ibi neptem patris familias.) — Beda, III, 9.

In the Ep. and Erf. Glosses (734) we read:

filia sororis, nift. — Sweet, O.E. Texts, p. 84.

2. = a step-daughter.

privigna, nift. — Leyden 123, Ep. & Erf. 734. Sweet, O.E. Texts p. 89.

privigna, nift. — W.W. 41, 5.

3. = a granddaughter.

All the dictionaries give this meaning, but proof is wanting, nefene:

1. = a niece.

neptis, broder dochter vel suster dochter, nefene, þridde dohter. —W.W. 173, 30.

nepotibus, nefenu[m]. —Haupt's Zfda, p. 485.

BT. adds: neptibus? but compare Sievers, Ags. Gr. § 277, Anm. 1: —Von nefa neffe, enkel, begegnet spät dat. pl. nefenum.

2. = a granddaughter.

Cf. the above example, the Latin neptis having the sense of granddaughter as well as that of niece.

brodor-dohdor: = a niece. (Sweet, p. 29).

neptis, broder dochter . . . —W.W. 173, 30.

suster-dohdor (sweostor-dohdor): not mentioned by Sweet, but cf. above, nefene, 1.

II. MIDDLE ENGLISH.

A. Native Words.

nifte:

1. = the daughter of a brother or sister, a niece.

Eliezer meets Rebecca at the well, and learns that she is of the family of Nahor:

ghe was ford nifte of Abraham. —Gen. and Ex. 1386.

Rebecca was the daughter of Nahor, Abraham's brother, and of Milcah, who was the daughter of Aram, a brother of both Nahor and Abraham. Thus Rebecca was not only Abraham's niece, but also his grand-niece.

nypte, nifte, neptis. nypt, broderys douter. —Pr.P. p. 355.

Stratman-Bradley gives also the meaning 'step-daughter,' but in the additions and corrections at the end of the book we find 'nifte, dele stepdaughter.'

nyghte: = a niece.

Melusine's son Urian marries Hermine, daughter of the king of Cyprus. The King dies and the rule of the land falls to Urian. One day some knights come to Urian with tidings of the death of the king of Armenia, who was a brother of Hermine's father; they also bring a letter which this King of Armenia had written shortly before his death:

Thenne toke Vryan the letter & redd it, of the whiche the tenour was this: Ryght dere lord and right wel beloued newew, I recomande me to you as ferfourth as I may, prayeing you right hertyly to haue me to my ryght dere & beloued nyghte your wyf to be recomanded. —Melusine (ed. Donald 1895) p. 179.

The king of Armenia visits the fleet of Guion, Urian's brother, who with the Master of Rhodes was searching the sea for pagans:

And when Guyon wyst of his [the King of A.'s] commyng he went ayenst hym, and eche to oþer made great reuerence. Thenne said the King to the grete Pryour of Rhodes, 'Maister sethen this ying demoyseau [Guion] is brother vnto my nyghtis lord, I were vncurteys when he is arryued in my land, yf I receyued hym not honourably as to hym apparteyneth. — Melusine, p. 162.

In his glossary to Melusine, Donald marks 'nyghtis' as used in this passage as a plural form, — an error, for it is obviously a genitive singular.

B. Loan Words.

nece, neece, nese, neipce: (Anglo-French nece, niece):

1. = the daughter of a brother or sister; a niece.

Pandarus goes to Cressida on behalf of Troilus:

«Whan he was come un-to his neces place,»

Cressida greets him with the words: «Ey, uncle myn, wel-come y-wis.» — Chaucer, Troil. II, 78; 87.

2. = a granddaughter:

hec cognata, a nese. hec neptis, idem est. — W.W. 690, 22 ff.

3. = in plural, grandchildren, male and female.

When Laban at length catches Jacob, he searches the latter's goods, to which Jacob angrily objects:

Laban answeride to him: My dowtres and sones and the flockis and alle that thou beholdist, ben myne, and what may I do to my sones and to my neces? — Wiclif, Gen. xxxi, 43.

The modern version (King James Bible) reads: «and what can I do this day unto these my daughters, or unto their children which they have borne?» And the Latin (Vulgate) has: «Respondit ei Laban: Filiae meae et filii, et greges tui, et omnia quae cernis, mea sunt; quid possum facere filiis et nepotibus meis?»

Moses on Mt. Sinai, lifts up the following prayer to God:

Lord God, mercyable, and goodliche, and pacient, and of much mercy, and verrey, that kepist couenaunt and mercy into thowsandes, that dost awei wickidnes, and hidows giltis, and synnes, and no man anentis thee bi him silf is innocent, that ȝeldist wickidnes of fadris to sones and neces, into the thridde and the ferthe progenye. — Wiclif, Exod. xxxiv, 6 f.

The later Wiclif version has: . . . which ȝeldist the wickidnesse of fadris to sones and to sones of sones, into the thridde and ferthe generacioun. (ed. Forshall and Madden, vol. 1, p. 275.)

4. = grand-niece.

Edward the Confessor had a dream of a tree, which was interpreted as representing the succession of rulers of England. The time when the tree did not flourish was that of the reign of William the Conqueror, and of his two successors. Henry, the fourth king after Edward restored the tree to its rightful verdure by marrying «Seynt Edwardes nece, þat of his fader kunde come».

—Robert of Gl. p. 358, 9.

Henry married Edith (or Matilda), the daughter of King Malcolm of Scotland and his wife Margaret, sister of Edgar Atheling, who was grand-nephew of Edward the Confessor.<sup>1</sup>

5. = a kinswoman in general, a cousin.

hec cognata, a nese. —W.W. 690, 22.

Elizabeth, mother of John the Baptist, when Mary comes to visit her, asks news of Mary's relatives at home :

«And Anna [Mary's mother], my nese, and thi dame, how standys it with him and hir».

—Towneley Pl. xi, p. 98, 23f.

Early in the morning the merchant's wife meets the monk John (who having been born in the same village, calls the merchant his cousin), walking in the garden :

«O dere cosin myn, daun Iohn» she sayde,
«What eyleth yow so rathe for to ryse?»
«Nece», quod he, «it oghte y-nough suffyse Fyve houres for to slepe up-on a night.»

—Chaucer, Shipman's T. 98 ff.

The angel Gabriel announces to Mary that she will have a son :

þat goddes son callid shalle bene,
I shew the redy tokyn to sene
Thyne old nyce Elizabeth .
hath gon with child vj moneth.

—Cursor M. (Fairfax) 10889 ff.

Mary and Elizabeth were cousins, their mothers being sisters.
Cf. Cursor M. 10144 ff.

6. = a nephew.

King Arthur, in reproving Gawain says :

Sir Gawan, nece, why dois yow so?»

And again reproving him for forgetting the battle of the morrow, when he vows to go forth and not return until he has found Launcelot, or some trace of him, he says :

<sup>1</sup> Aethelred the Unready

Edmund Ironside

Edward the Confessor.

Edward Atheling.

Edgar Atheling.

«Neece yow haith al foly vrought
And wilfulness that haith nocht in thi thocht
The day of batell of Galot and me».

—Launcelot of the Lake, p. 66, 2245 ff.

Gawain is wounded during an encounter, and swoons:

Than of the pupel petee was to here
The lemytable clamour and the chere;
And of the king the sorow and the care,
That of his neceis lyf was in dissparé.

—ibid. p. 80, 2717 ff.

Gawa(i)n was the son of King Lot and Morgause, Arthur's sister.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

Loan Word.

This word has undergone the same change and limitation of meaning as nephew, with indeed the further limitation that it is now applied to the female sex alone, to the daughter of a brother or a sister, being once used as neptis was at the first, for childrens' children, male and female alike.<sup>1</sup> —Trench, Select Glossary, (ed. Mayhew) s. v.

1. = the daughter of a brother or sister.

Edburge, daughter of King Ethelbert and Bertha his Queen, decides to devote her life to the Church;

«For better preparation of herself to that happiness, she forsooke the world, entered into the monasterie of her Neece St. Mildred there in Tenet Isle. —Lives of Women Saints, (ed. Horstmann). p. 49, 23 f.

St. Mildred was the daughter of King Morwald and Dompneua his wife, who was the daughter of Ethelbert, and hence a sister of Edburge. (Cf. ibid. p. 64).

Antonio, brother of Leonato, addresses Leonato's daughter Hero:

«Well, niece, I trust you will be ruled by your father». —Sh. Much Ado, II, i, 53 f.

After the murder of Desdemona, Othello says to Gratiano, brother of Desdemona's father Brabantio:

«I scarce did know you, uncle; there lies your niece». —Sh. Othello, V, ii, 201.

2. = the relationship of the daughter of a widow or widower to the brothers and sisters of her stepfather or her stepmother.

<sup>1</sup> Of niece used in the sense of grandchildren of both sexes, only the Biblical examples shown under II, B, 3, page 100 have been found.

Mrs. Prior is told that her daughter Elizabeth is to be married to Lovel the Widower; she says to her children (Elizabeth's brothers and sisters):

«Where are Pop and Cissy [Lovel's two children]? Go and look for your little nephew and niece, dears; Pop and Cissy in the garden, dears. They will be your nephew and niece now». —Thackeray, Lovel, vi.

3. = a granddaughter.

Queen Elizabeth and the Duchess of York meet Anne, the Duchess of Gloucester, with Lady Margaret Plantagenet, Clarence's young daughter; the Duchess of York says:

«Who meets us here? my niece Plantagenet, Led in the hand of her kind aunt of Gloucester?»

—Sh. Richard III, IV, i, 1 f.

George, Duke of Clarence, was the son of the Duchess of York; thus Lady Margaret, Clarence's daughter, was the granddaughter of the Duchess.

In his Will, Shakespeare says:

... «I doe gyve and bequeath one hundred poundes thereof to my niece Elizabeth Hall.» —Quoted from Dyce's ed. of Shakespeares Wks. I, 152 f.

Elizabeth Hall was the daughter of Shakespeare's daughter Susanna, who married John Hall.

Within the compass of which very same time he [Julius Caesar] lost by death first his mother, then his daughter Julia, and not long after his niece by the said daughter. —Holland, Suetonius p. 11. (Quoted from Trench, Sel. Glossary, p. 188).

4. used in combination with great-, grand-, and half-, indicating the degree of relationship.

a) grand niece: = the daughter of a nephew or niece, and (with the addition of in-law) the wife of a grand-nephew.

Lord Baddington the fourth had not deemed his grand nieces worthy of a thought. . . . The grand-niece-in-law had hitherto pertinaciously refused to hold any intercourse with Lord Baddington's widow. —Sala, Baddington Peerage (1860) xlv. NED.

Cf. also in Booth, Analyt. Dict. (1830); and in Marryat, N. Forster, xxxix, «The colonel requested his grand-niece to accept of his hospitality». NED.

b) great niece (Hybrid): = same as grand niece.

«The great niece of Mrs. Barbauld». —Harper's Mag. Feb. 1884. 481/2. NED.

«Can we conceive of a man marrying the great-great-niece of his own brother-in-law?» —Freemann, Norm. Cong. (1876) I, App. 723.

«Trustee to her great-grand-niece». —Eugenia de Acton, Tale without a Title, I, 45.

«That old body that says she is Shakespeare's great-great-great-great-great-grand-niece-in-law». —Lockhart, Reg. Dalton, II, ii, (1824) 105. NED.

c) half-niece (Hybrid) : the daughter of one's half-brother or half-sister.

To pay a . . . visit to a half-nephew and niece, or rather a half-niece and her husband. —Miss Mitford, Village, Ser. I. (1863) 223. NED.

5. The same meaning appears in the dialects.

«One nephew and niece, my eldest son's children.» —Engl. Dial. Dic.

niece, neipce : = a granddaughter : —Jamieson, Scottish Dic. s. v.

And Adad foonde grace before Pharao ful myche, in so myche that he ȝaf to him a wijf, the sister germanyn of his wijf Taphnes, the queen. —3. Kings, xi, 19.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

A. The Native Word.

suster :

1. = the daughter of the same parent or parents.

Richard Pace writes to Cardinal Wolsey :

His Grace [i. e. King Henry VIII] is not contentidde wyth the Scotts for there evyl intreatynge off the Qweane hys suster. —Ellis, Orig. Lett. cxlii, 3d. series, vol. II, p. 53.

Margaret, eldest daughter of Henry VII, and sister of Henry VIII, was married to James IV, of Scotland.

2. applied to queens, etc, by sovereigns and rulers of other countries, and in most cases indicating a more or less distant blood relationship.

Mary Queen of Scots writes to Queen Elizabeth a letter of expostulation concerning her intended removal from Carlisle. (The following is a translation of the time which was probably prepared for Elizabeth).

«Good suster be of an other mynde. Wyn the hart and all shalbe yours and at your commandment. . . . Alas do not as the serpent that stoppeth his heering, for I am no inchanter, but your suster and naturall cousyne.

Your good suster & cousyne

Mary R.

—Ellis, Orig. Lett. exciv, 1st series, vol. II. p. 250 ff.

Mary and Elizabeth were related by blood through the wife of James IV of Scotland, the princess Margaret Tudor, who was the great-aunt of Elizabeth, and at the same time the grandmother of Mary Stuart.

3. in combination:

halfe suster: a female child having only one parent in common with another.

Halfe suster, soevr uterine. —Palsgrave, (1530) 228/2. NED.

It is a curious fact that the native word seems now to be entirely extinct, even in the dialects. The EDD. offers no example of its occurrence, quoting only the Scandinavian loan-form.

B. Loan Words.

sister:

1. = a female child having the same parents in common with another child.

The nakedness of thy sister, the daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother, whether she be born at home, or born abroad, thou shalt not uncover. —Levit. xviii. 9.

2. = a female child having only one parent in common with another, a half-sister.

. . . There stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. —John, xix, 25.

Cf. above p. 104.

3. = sister-in-law.

John of Gaunt and his brothers wife, the Duchess of Gloucester are speaking:

Duch. — Farewell, old Gaunt: thy sometimes brother's wife
With her companion grief must end her life.

Gaunt. — Sister, farewell.

—Sh. Richard II, I, ii, 56.

Lucentio, the husband of Bianca, says to Katharina, Bianca's sister:

. . . sister Katharina, . . . —Sh. Shrew, V, ii, 6.

4. = a title applied to queens, empresses, etc., by sovereigns and rulers of other lands, and in most cases indicating a more or less distant blood relationship.

King James VI of Scotland, writing to Queen Elizabeth of England in behalf of his mother, addresses Elizabeth thus:

Madame and dearest sister, . . .

and closes the letter:

Your most loving and affectionate brother and cousin
James R.

—Ellis, Orig. Lett. 1st Ser. vol. III, p. 18, ccxiv.

James was the great-grandson of Margaret Tudor, who was the great-aunt of Queen Elizabeth.

King Henry speaks to Isabel, Queen of France :

. . . . Will you, fair sister,
Go with the princes, or stay here with us ?
—Sh. Henry V, V, ii, 90.

5. used in combinations :

a) foster-sister : = a female child nursed at the same breast or reared together with another of different parentage.

Scipio Asiaticus . . . pardoned them at the request of his Foster-sister. —Jer. Taylor, Gt. Exemplar 37. NED.

«[Dolly] had ever since been the humble friend of Miss Haredale, whose foster-sister she was.» —Dickens, Barn. Rudge, xx. NED.

b) half-sister : a female child having only one parent in common with another.

In his History of the Norman Conquest, Freeman writes :

«The elder Countess Adelaide has been commonly taken to be only a half-sister of William, a daughter of Herleva by her husband Herlwin.» —Norm. Conq. II, Append. on the Birth of William, (1870) p. 614.

6. in the Dialects :

sister : Sc. Irel. Glo. Brks. Wil. Som. Also in the form zister, Brks<sup>1</sup>.

In dialect, familiar and jocular use we find also the shortened form sis. This form is not mentioned in the EDD.

«The gentleman talks quite earnest,» said Tuck, the mare, to Nip, her brother . . .

«Hesh, sis,» Nip answered. —Kipling, The Day's Work, (Tauchn. Ed.) p. 53.

cadette, from French cadette : = a younger daughter or sister. (Cf. cadet, s. v. Brother, p. 11.)

«The order . . . seemed to exclude my sister as a Cadette.» —tr. Marie Mancini's Apol. 4. (1679). NED.

CHILD.

I. OLD ENGLISH.

Native Words.

bearn:

1. = a child; a son or daughter. (Expressing relationship rather than age. NED.)

Beon mid bearne = gravidam esse (BT.).

In most cases, however, this word has the meaning of son (cf. Son p. 54), and in the plural it is frequently used in the sense of descendant(s) (cf. Descendants p. 130).

2. in combination:

fostorbearn,

Alumne, fostorbearn, W.W. 347, 5.

cild:

1 There seems to be in O.E. no example of the use of this word as correlative to parent. The NED. remarks s. v. Child II: «This [the offspring, male or female] in O.E. was expressed by bearn» (cf. above).

2. in combination :

fostorcild :

child:

1. = the offspring of human parents; a son or daughter; indicating relationship as well as age.

It has been pointed out that child, or my child is by parents used more frequently (and longer) of, and to, a girl than a boy. Shakespeare nowhere uses my child of or to a son, but frequently of or to a daughter. This is perhaps due to the fact that . . . a daughter is more dependant on parental protection. NED.

Lear says, referring to his daughter Cordelia:

For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.

—Sh. Lear, IV, vii, 68f.

2. = descendants, members of a tribe; especially in Biblical language.

The prophetess Deborah says to Barak, the son of Abinoam:

Hath not the Lord God of Israel commanded, saying, Go and draw toward mount Tabor, and take with thee ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali and of the children of Zebulum. —Judges, iv, 6.

A Heliot feeling compounded of awe and hatred is . . . discernible in the children of the vanquished. —Macaulay, Hist. Eng. II, 127. NED.

B. Loan Words.

cosin(e), cosyn(e), cousin, etc.: from French cousin(e): the child of one's uncle or aunt; a collateral relative more distant than a brother or sister; a kinsman or kinswoman; formerly very frequently applied to a nephew or niece. The distinctive forms (feminine with added e) were soon confused, and the gender distinction was no longer made.

Godwin meets Alfred and takes him prisoner. News of this comes to Alfred's mother, Emma, and:

. . . Scho did Edward in haste
Wende to Normundie, for drede of Alfred pyne
To William, hir broþer sonne, was Edwardes kosyne<sup>1</sup>

2. used in a wider sense = kinsman, kinswoman; especially in legal use = next of kin, L. consanguineus.

Christ tells St. John, the Evangelist, to take Mary as his own mother :

þir marters tuin [Mary and John] þat i of mene, Cosins bath and martirs clene . . .

—Cursor M. 24311 ff.

Cf. above O.E. nidmæg p. 123 f.

Orpah, after the death of her husband, leaves her mother-in-law, and returns to her own people; to Ruth, the other daughter-in-law, Naomi says :

Loo! thi cosyn is turned aȝen to hir puple, and to hir goddes;
go thou with hir. —Wiclif, Ruth, I, 14.

(The later text has kynneswoman).

The Emperor Lucius writes in a letter to Arthur that Arthur must be mad to have invaded France :

"Oure cosyn Iulius Cesar Somme tyme conquered þar;
To Rome þu owest hys trybut;
We chargeþ þe to paye vs hyt.

—Arthur (Furnivall) 215 ff.

(cf. Gardiner, Hist. of England p. 84.)

Robert of Brunne leaves one of these two Richards out of his account, and thus makes Robert the brother of Emma, and therefore William the Conqueror and Edward first cousins. Cf. p. 52 «Richard was Robert fader . . . Emma þe queene his douhter . . .»

Anne his Wyf, in hir right as cosyn and heire unto the seid Thomas Lord Dispenser that is to sey, Doughter to Isabell doughter to the same Thomas. — Act 7, Henry VII, c. 15 § 5. NED.

3. = nephew.

In a battle against the Saracens during the Crusades, James of Auenue slays many of his opponents:

Biside com a Sarazins, bituex him & a bank
Sir Kalaphes Duryns, he smote of James schank.
Pan spak James, "þo a kosyn help Richard,

— Robert of Brunne, p. 189 f.

When about to start out against the Romans under Lucius, Arthur appoints as Viceroy Sir Mordred his sister's son: He announces this in a Parliament at York:

He carpes tille his cosyne þane, in counsaile hym selvene, —
'I make the kepare, sir knyghte, of kyngrykes manye.'

Morte Arthure, ed. Brock. 648 ff.

4. = a form of address applied by kings to other sovereigns and to the nobility, and in most cases indicating a blood relationship of greater or less degree.

King Henry V writes:

Furthermore I wold that ye comend with my brothre, with the Chancellor, with my cosin of Northumberland, and my cosin of Westmerland . . . .

— Ellis, Orig.Lett. i, 1st Ser. I, p. 1.

James III, of Scotland writes to King Richard III desiring a safe conduct for certain Lords of his realm:

Right excellent hie and mighti Prince and right trusty and welbeloved Cousin. — Ellis, Orig. Letters, xlv, 3d. Series, I, p. 109 f.

5. cosyn germain: = the child of one's uncle or aunt; an 'own'-cousin.

After Colgreuance had finished telling his adventure Sir Ywain says to him:

'Now sekerly' said sir Ywayne,
'þou ert my cosyn jermayne:
Trew luf suld be us bytwene,
Als sold betwyx breþer bene.'

— Ywain and Gawain, 457 ff.

For al-be-it so that ye be mighty and riche, certes ye ne ben nat but allone. For certes, ye ne han no child but a doghter; ne ye ne han ne bretheren ne cosins germayns, ne noon other neigh kinrede. — Chaucer, Melibeus, § 36. B. 2555 ff.

nyce, neese: = a cousin. Cf. Mid.E. Niece p. 101.

III. MODERN ENGLISH.

Loan Word.

cousin: earlier forms: coosen, coosin, coussin, cousen, couzen, cozen, cuzen:

1. = in the strict modern sense, the son or daughter of one's uncle or aunt; own, first, or full cousin.

Wellbred asks Stephen who he is; Stephen replies:

I am this gentleman's own cousin, sir; his father is mine uncle sir . . . —B. Jonson, Ev. M. in Hum. III, i.

2. used in a wider sense for any kinsman or kinswoman; a common Shakespearean use.

a) = a nephew:

Leonato addresses Antonio:

How now, brother! Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this music? —Sh. Much Ado, I, ii, 1.f.

b) = a niece.

Referring to Olivia, Sir Toby Belch, her uncle, says to Maria, Olivia's woman:

What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Maria. By my troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours. —Sh. Twelfth Night, I, iii, 1ff.

Clarissa and her brother James have a slight quarrel as to whether she shall receive the visits of a certain young man:

Cousin Harlowe said my aunt Hervey [to Clarissa's father], allow me to say, that my cousin Clary's prudence may be confided in. —Richardson, Clarissa Harlowe, I., vi.

c) = an uncle.

Olivia says to her uncle Sir Toby:

Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy? —Sh. Twelfth Night, I, v, 131.

d) = brother-in-law.

Hotspur and Glendower have a heated discussion; Mortimer, whose sister Hotspur had married, says to Hotspur:

Peace, cousin Percy; you will make him mad.

Sh. 1st Henry IV, III, i, 51.

Cf. also b) above, where Clarissa's Aunt Hervey uses the address 'Cousin Harlowe' to Clarissa's father.

e) = a grandchild.

The Duchess of York speaks to the two children of her son, the Duke of Clarence:

My pretty cousins, you mistake me much;

I do lament the sickness of the king.

—Rich. III, II, ii, 8f.

Cf. also, Othello, I, i, 113.

f) = a cousin-in-law.

George Warrington speaks of the actor Hagan, husband of his cousin Lady Maria, as Cousin Hagan. Cf. Thackeray, Virginians, (Tauchn.) III, xxii, p. 308; IV, ix, p. 117.

3. in legal language used for a collateral relative more distant than a brother or sister; direct ancestors or descendants.

Everye one that is his next cosyn collaterall of the whole bloude. —tr. Littleton's Tenures, 2 a. (1574). NED.

After the death of his great great grandfather or grandmother, or any other collateral Cosin, as the great great grandfather's brother. —Sir H. Finch, Of Law, or a Discourse thereof (1636) p. 267. NED.

4. used by sovereigns and princes in speaking of or to other kings, princes, etc.; and also of their nobles, implying in most cases the existence of a greater or less degree of relationship.

In all writs and commissions . . . the king, when he mentions any peer of the degree of an earl, always stiles him 'trusty and well-beloved cousin;' an appellation as antient as the reign of Henry IV; who being either by his wife, his mother, or his sisters actually related or allied to every earl in the kingdom, artfully . . . acknowledged that connection in all his letters. —Blackstone, Comm. I, 386. (1765). NED.

Victoria by the Grace of God . . . to . . . Our right trusty and right entirely-beloved Cousin and Councillor Walter Francis Duke of Buccleuch and Queensbury. —R. Commission Gt. Exhib. in London, Lond. Gaz. Jan. 4, 1850. NED.

5. in combinations:

a) first cousin, second cousin, etc.: expressing the relationship of persons descended the same number of steps in distinct lines from a common ancestor. Thus the children of brothers or sisters are first cousins to each other; the children of first cousins are second cousins to each other, and so on. The term second cousin is also loosely applied to the son or daughter of a first cousin, more exactly called a (first) cousin once removed. NED.

I never knew the marriage of second cosens forbidden, but by them who at the same time forbad the marriage of the first. —Jer. Taylor, Duct. Dubit, (1671) p. 242. NED.

b) half-cousin: = the child of one's father's or mother's cousin, a second cousin. Sometimes applied to the child of one's own cousin, or to the cousin of one's father or mother. NED.

'Sophy' an orphan half-cousin. —Carlyle in Mrs. Carlyle's Lett. II, 231. NED.

c) cousin german : the child of one's father's or mother's brother or sister ; a first cousin.

Whether the marriage of couseins-germans that is, of Brothers or sisters children be lawfull. —Bp. Hall, Cases Consc. IV, v, 434 (1649). NED.

Cf. also, Sh. Troilus, IV, 5, 121.

d) cousin german (once) removed : = 'first cousin once removed' i. e. first cousin's child or (vice versâ), parent's first cousin.

The now Earl of Devonshire, his cousin-german once removed, lent him £1000. —Duchess of Newcastle, Life of Duke (1886) 141. NED.

6. coz, couz, etc. :

a) a shortened form of cousin (cozen) used in familiar address. Especially common in Shakespeare and writers of his time. Used in all the senses that we have indicated above for the full form cousin.

Cf. e. g. Shakespeare, Merry Wives, I, i, 24; Much Ado, III, iv, 39; 103. etc.

Dusterastus writes to the Spectator that his family suggest wives for him :

«Come, come», says a cousin of mine in the family, «I will fit him . . . Pretty Miss Fiddy must please you . . .»

«Oh! your very humble servant dear Coz, she is as much too young as her eldest sister is too old». —Spectator, No. 533, p. 1.

b) used in the wider sense of kinsman or kinswoman in general.

α) = uncle :

Olivia says to the Clown, referring to her uncle who is drunk :

Go thou and seek the crowner, and let him sit o' my coz ; for he's in the third degree of drink, he's drowned. —Sh. Twelfth Night, I, v, 142ff.

β) = nephew.

Tybalt says to his uncle Capulet :

'Tis he, that villain Romeo.

Cap. Content thee, gentle coz, let him alone.

—Sh. Romeo, I, v, 66f.

VITA.

Born August 3, 1877 at Anderson, Indiana, I received my first instruction in the Public Schools of that place. At the age of 17 I left the High School to go to Heidelberg, Germany, where for two years (1894—96) I attended the Heidelberg College. In October 1896 I became a student of the University of Heidelberg where I heard, among others, the lectures of Professors Kuno Fischer, Wilhelm Braune, and Herrman Osthoff. After two semesters I returned to America and continued my studies at Indiana University, from which institution I received the degree of A. B. in 1898. During the following two years I was teacher in the Schools of Indianapolis Indiana. In October 1900 I matriculated at the University of Strassburg, and have worked under Professors Koepfel, Windelband, Ziegler, Baeumker, Jacobsthal, Martin and Henning, to all of whom, especially to Professor Koepfel, who first suggested to me the subject of this work, and whose constant interest and helpful suggestions in its preparation have been a source of great pleasure to me, as well as gain to the dissertation, I take pleasure in expressing my gratitude for the benefit I have derived from their instruction.
