 groups, ^{or organizations} ~~known~~ as "young officers" groups?
 T- No. As you know, there are groups of various kinds in society generally, but in the Army I believe there were none.
 5 0 6 1 0 2 1

It was often asserted in the press and elsewhere that there were such cliques in the Army. When I was War Minister I investigated the question very thoroughly because I believed that such organizations were not a good thing as they detracted from loyalty to the throne which was of prime importance in the Army.

Q: Is this impression of which you speak the impression you had at the time of the Manchurian war?

 I was the Minister the Emperor gave me strict orders not to permit any such groups.
 That was after this case of the Feb 26 incident.

 Previous to that, the Emperor gave similar strict orders to general Terachi, & who preceded me as War Minister. The problem kept coming up and the Emperor's orders were very strict. I was anxious about this matter all during order that there should be no such private cliques, and there was dissatisfaction among various young officers. However at the end of the war, the Emperor's order against such private cliques was very explicit and, as you know, the mandate was obeyed. This was in 1936.

Handwritten notes on the bottom page of a lined notebook, including a vertical line and various scribbles.

Handwritten notes in a cursive script, possibly representing a list or a set of instructions. The text is mirrored across a vertical line, suggesting it was written on a single sheet of paper that was folded in half. The characters are dense and difficult to decipher, but appear to be a form of shorthand or a specific dialect.

Handwritten notes in a cursive script, similar to the top page, but with some words appearing to be more legible. The text is mirrored across a vertical line. Some words like "T-...", "F-...", and "X..." are visible, though the full context is obscured by the handwriting and the fold. The notes seem to be organized into sections or entries.
