LETTER OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS TO THE TREASURY.

SIR,

Rolls House, November 9, 1863.

I BEG to acquaint you, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, that, in consequence of your letter of the 22d July 1863, stating that their Lordships accepted the offer of Mr. Hardy and Mr. Brewer to make such an inquiry and report into the Carew Papers in Lambeth Palace, and the Irish Papers in the Bodleian Library, as that suggested in your letter, and requesting me to take the necessary steps for that purpose, I have acted in accordance with the desire expressed by you, and I have now the pleasure to forward the very able and valuable report of Mr. Hardy and Mr. Brewer; but at the same time I think it desirable to state, for the consideration of their Lordships, my view of the course which it seems to me it would be most expedient to adopt.

In the first place, it appears to me that it would be very desirable, not only that the Report, but the Appendices also should be printed, as their bulk renders them inconvenient for consultation in manuscript, and it is probable that they will be much sought for, especially in Ireland, inasmuch as the Appendices show the general nature of Carte's collection, which may not be fully known even to the Curators of the Bodleian, and still less to the public. They also identify a large mass of very curious letters, printed by Carte, which no one but himself knew where to find. The printing and circulation of the Report will show that Her Majesty's Government have not been unmindful of the wishes expressed by the Irish nation to have the materials for Irish history collected, and that they have made an attempt to discover and disclose important documents connected with the historical literature of Ireland.

In the second place, it would appear to me to be expedient, not to have a calendar made of the Carte Papers under the authority of Her Majesty's Government, but instead thereof, to have duplicate copies made of such Irish official documents as are in that collection; that one copy should be sent to Dublin, and deposited in some proper place, which the Government may select for that purpose, and that the other copy should be placed in the Public Record Office in London, for the use of the public generally, and more especially for the information of Irish scholars in London.

In the third place, I would beg to suggest the propriety of having the Carew Papers at Lambeth, including the six volumes among the Laud MSS. in the Bodleian, calendared chronologically on the same plan as that hitherto adopted in the calendars of State Papers under my direction; the editor for that purpose to be selected and appointed by the Treasury. It is, however, my duty to state that I am unable to concur with the recommendation in the Report which I forward, to omit from the Calendar of the Carew MSS. the papers relating to the reign of Henry VIII., which are calendared by Mr. Brewer, and will appear in his forthcoming volumes. Such an omission would in my opinion operate injuriously, inasmuch as it would deprive the Calendar of the Carew Papers of its character for entirety. On the contrary, I am of opinion that it is desirable that the Irish Papers calendared by Mr. Brewer should re-appear in the Irish Calendar. In the first place, as the number of such Papers will be very few, the circumstance of their appearing twice in different publications will not create any expense worth consideration. In the second place, it will obviate an evil which would be justly complained of, if every historical student who desired to obtain a knowledge of the Carew Papers should be compelled for that purpose to purchase not merely the Calendar of the Carew Papers, but also a Calendar of all the documents relating to the reign of Henry VIII., to complete what ought to be included in the former calendar. The completeness of the work itself is the principle on which all the works published under the authority of the Government are edited, as far as it is possible to do so. With this exception, the Report and its recommendations meet with my high approbation, and will, I think, be equally approved by their Lordships.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant,

Public Record Office, Rolls House,
November 3, 1863.

SIR,

IN conformity with your instructions that we should ascertain "the nature and extent of the Papers in Carte's Collection in "the Bodleian Library at Oxford relating to Ireland," with a view of enabling the Lords of the Treasury to judge "whether it "would be desirable to make a Calendar of those Papers, or to "have any of them printed at the public expense," and, in conjunction with this investigation, to make similar inquiries in reference to the Carew MSS. at Lambeth Palace, we beg leave to submit to you the following Report:

In regard to that portion of our inquiry which relates to the Carte Collection in the Bodleian Library, we have to state that a minute examination has been made of those papers. They are contained in 178 vols. in folio, and 37 vols. in quarto. Besides their importance in reference to the public affairs of England they are of great value for the history of Ireland; commencing with the administration of Lord-Deputy Chichester and closing with the reign of George I.

The collection may be divided into four classes, viz.:

- I. Papers collected by Carte in connexion with his History of England.
- II. Letters to Carte and his father, from various persons, on friendly, family, and literary subjects.
- III. Letters and papers on public affairs concerning both England and Ireland.
- IV. Letters, papers, and public instruments having reference to Ireland alone.

The classes I. and II., though interesting and valuable for specific purposes, are not of sufficient importance to be calendared at the public expense.

Some notion of their general nature, however, may be obtained by reference to Appendix A.

Classes III. and IV. are exceedingly valuable, and their contents ought undoubtedly to be made public. In Appendix A a general view of their nature and contents will be found.

It was from these last two classes that Carte derived the materials for his Life and Letters of the Duke of Ormonde, published in 1735-6, in three volumes folio, and lately reprinted at the Oxford University Press; his collection of papers in two volumes octavo, printed in 1739, relating to the Civil Wars; and the more interesting of the documents inserted in his General History of England. We can give no better proof of the value of these collections than is to be found in the fact that almost every historian who has treated upon the period of our history, extending from the outbreak of the Civil War to the end of the reign of George I., has made constant reference to them. The Earl of Hardwicke, editor of the Hardwicke Papers, paid Mr. Jernegan (who had married* Carte's widow) 200*l.* for permission to peruse them. James Macpherson obtained the use of them for his History of Great Britain from the Restoration to the Accession of the House of Hanover, by a present of 300*l.* Dalrymple also refers to them as vouchers for information not to be obtained elsewhere. In short, all who have had an opportunity of consulting them, however different their purposes or political principles, have been unanimous in assigning the highest importance to these papers for the history of the period through which they extend.

But the value of Carte's collection, so far as Ireland is exclusively concerned, arises from the fact that great portions of the original records relating to that country have been totally destroyed or have disappeared, from one casualty or another. How far that loss can be supplied by these papers your Honour will be able more clearly to infer from a short account of the mode in which these papers were first obtained and have since been preserved.

When Carte was first employed to write his account of the life and administration of the Duke of Ormonde in 1730, 153 bundles of correspondence were placed in his hands by the Earl of Arran. These bundles contained papers formerly in the possession of the first Duke of Ormonde, Earl Arran's grandfather, and were all indorsed by the Duke himself with the name of writer, the date of each letter, and the time of its receipt. Some attempt had been made by Captain Brydall in the year 1698 to arrange and catalogue those papers, but as he had fallen into many mistakes Carte re-arranged the papers to suit his own purposes, bound them up in 27 large volumes folio, disarranging the chronological sequence, and numbered each page, distinguishing each volume by one or more letters of the alphabet. As these 27 volumes only contained papers to the end of the year 1651, Carte found it necessary to seek for further information to enable him to complete his work; and as he had heard that a large mass of materials was preserved in Kilkenny Castle, he obtained the permission of the Earl of Arran to bring to England such letters and papers as he might find fit for his purpose. Armed with this authority he proceeded to Ireland, and found in the evidence-room at Kilkenny "about fourteen wicker " bins, each large enough to hold a hogshead of wine in bottles,

* The Carte Collection was bequeathed by Mrs. Jernegan to her husband for his life, and afterwards to the University of Oxford. Mr. Jernegan, however, disposed of his interest in it to the University in 1778 for a valuable consideration. As late as 1775 he advertised the use of the papers for hire.

“ covered with unwieldy books of stewards’ accounts,” which upon inspection he found to contain a series of State Papers and other public documents connected with the Ormonde administration in Ireland, from the Restoration to the year 1686. Carte spent several months in digesting this accession to his literary materials, arranging them according to his own plan, convenient enough undoubtedly for his immediate object, but quite unsuitable for general purposes. He bound them up in folio volumes similar to those containing the papers which he had previously obtained from the Earl of Arran, and marked them successively with double, treble, and quadruple letters. The papers in quarto were also bound with their distinguishing marks, which are awkward and inconvenient for citation.

Not content with this acquisition, Carte excerpted from the Journals of both Houses of Parliament all passages relating to Ireland, and procured copies of all “ news letters and intelligences ” which he thought likely to throw light upon the exciting period then engaging his attention. These fresh materials he also bound up in several volumes, marking them “ Ireland I.,” “ Ireland II.,” &c. While he remained in Ireland several persons threw open their papers to his use, and permitted him to take copies of any he chose. Among them was the Journal of Owen O’Neile, and the curious collection formed by Tully O’Neil. The Earl of Huntingdon communicated to him all the papers which had belonged to his great-grandfather Sir John Davys, Attorney-General of Ireland. He also had access to the collections of the Bishop of Clogher, among which he found six volumes compiled by Matthew Barry, Clerk of the Council of Ireland, from the time of Lord Strafford’s government down to the year 1682. Dr. Madding’s manuscripts, a catalogue of which is in the “ Catalogus Manuscriptorum Angliæ et Hiberniæ,” were also placed before him by the Bishop of Clogher. From these he extracted a variety of interesting papers written previously to the Rebellion, and several contemporary with it. Among them may be mentioned “ An Account of the Affairs of Ireland from 1641 to 1652,” by N. S., who styles himself secretary to Owen Roe O’Neile. Another account communicated to him by Mr. Pluncket, whose uncle compiled it, contains a collection of “ Relations ” of what happened in the Irish War by eye-witnesses. There is a further account in Latin, entitled “ De Hæresis Anglicanæ Intrusione et Progressu, et de Bello Catholico ad annum 1641 cæpto, exindeque per aliquot annos gesto, Commentarius,” and written by an Irish Catholic priest whom Thomas Baptista Rinuccini, Great Chamberlain to the Grand Duke of Tuscany, employed to digest the papers of his brother the Archbishop of Fermo, and reduce them into the form of a narrative. To these may be added the “ Memoires ” of the Marquis of Clanricarde—we do not allude to those published in the imperfect sketch of the Lorraine treaty—also lent to Carte. They contain a series of letters to and from the Marquis, with his reflections upon the orders he received from the Lords Justices of Ireland and others, together with his narrative of events which happened in Ireland from the 23rd of October 1641 to 30th August 1643, when he was going to Sigginston to assist at the treaty for a cessation of arms.* We cordially join with Carte in his deep regret that the continuation of this valuable and important correspondence has been lost; we say "lost," because he was assured by several gentlemen (particularly by Mr. Nicholas Wogan of Rathcossey) that they had seen a complete collection of that correspondence down to the end of the public troubles. Several copies of the early portion of these "Memoires" were then extant in Ireland; but the best and probably the original manuscript (written throughout in the hand of the Marquis of Clanricarde himself, and in that of his secretary—the one interspersed with the other) was in the possession of the then Archbishop of Cashel. The copy used by Carte belonged to the Earl of Egmont, who likewise supplied him with several other curious papers, among which was the account and defence of the cessation by Sir Philip Percival. We may here remark that these "Memoires" of the Marquis of Clanricarde are well worthy of publication.

Besides this large collection of papers relating to the history of this country, and especially of Ireland, there is a vast body of evidence among the Carte Papers referring to the private life of the Duke of Ormonde, and which was sent to Carte by the then Bishop of Worcester, who lived several years in the Duke's family. Among these was a manuscript of about 100 pages, prepared by Sir Robert Southwell, and containing such domestic information touching the Duke of Ormonde's life as he had received from his Grace's own lips.

In addition to the collection which Carte amassed in Ireland, he had free access to the papers belonging to the noble families of Montague and Wharton. To what extent he made use of them may be seen in Appendix A.

However lofty the estimate which Carte was inclined to set upon these papers, your Honour will see from the remarks already made that that estimate was not overcharged. Carte unquestionably had obtained possession of letters and documents without which no one could hope to write or master the history either of Ireland or of England in those eventful times. He supposed that they would have supplied all the omissions to which we have already referred; but, unfortunately, even before these papers had come into his hands, many portions were destroyed by fire.† He complains that many of the bound books of the collections had been lost by the Duke lending them too freely. Among others, he insinuates that some had been lent to Lord Chancellor Clarendon "in order to his drawing up that historical "view of the affairs of Ireland during the Rebellion," and had never been returned, notwithstanding repeated applications to Lord Clarendon's executors. It is possible that careful search among the Clarendon Papers for copies of the missing Irish

† The Council Books of Ireland were lost in the fire which happened at Dublin Castle in 1711.

Council Books might clear up this charge, and some trace of others be discovered.

Besides these, other injuries are noticed by Carte. He states that the Duke "lent several bound volumes containing all the papers which were interchanged in his treaties with the Irish Confederates, and all passages in those treaties, and that he had seen among his Grace's loose papers various references to those books, but which he had not the good fortune to find." Two other books also seem to have been lost, one containing the letters of the Lords Justices and Council of Ireland to the King, the Lord Lieutenant, and the English House of Commons, from the breaking out of the Irish Rebellion down to January 1643-4, when Lord Ormonde entered upon the Government of Ireland; the other containing all the papers presented or prepared by different parties to be offered to the King and Council of England in order to the settlement of Ireland after the Restoration. This loss, however, is repaired by copies taken in 1680 of these two books, which were at that time in the library of the Duke of Chandos and Carte transcribed. This indefatigable collector mentions that "when Dr. Nalson was making the collections which he afterwards published, he was obliged to the Duke of Ormonde for the loan of papers for that work." These papers were traced by him, and found in the possession of Dr. Williams, senior Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, who had them bound up in about 20 volumes. A catalogue of those relating to Ireland, and copies of such as Carte required, were transmitted to him by Dr. Zachary Gray. A notice of these may be seen at p. 34 of Appendix A.

Since the Carte papers came into the possession of the authorities at Oxford they have been re-bound, but without any attempt at re-arrangement. Not only Carte himself, as we have before stated, but those who had the use of these valuable materials, appear to have been totally regardless of their primitive order, and to have disturbed their chronological arrangement as it suited their convenience; the consequence has been that papers of different years, and sometimes of different centuries, have been mixed and confused in volumes to which they do not belong. Thus great inconvenience is entailed on the historical inquirer, which can only be surmounted by a chronological calendar similar to those prepared under your Honour's sanction. It is due, however, to the Curators of the Bodleian to state that they adhered to the old arrangement on the consideration that any re-arrangement would create great difficulty in finding such papers as might be required by applicants at the library.*

Availing himself of the written permission of the Rev. Robert Payne Smith, sub-librarian of the Bodleian Library, acting in the absence of the Rev. H. O. Coxe, the librarian, Mr. Hardy proceeded to Oxford on the 3rd August to commence operations by examining these papers; but Mr. Coxe, on his return, informed your Honour that he did not consider himself authorized to concede the privilege of inspecting the Carte Papers with a view to this Report until he had obtained the sanction of the Curators, who could not be called together for some months;* at the same time stating that it was the intention of the Curators to have a catalogue prepared of these papers, under their own superintendence, as soon as the catalogue of the Clarendon Papers now in preparation was finished; but Mr. Coxe, upon his own responsibility, and with the utmost courtesy, afforded every facility for the examination of the MSS. in question.

The whole of the Carte collection has been carefully examined with a view of ascertaining what portion of it had been printed, and of determining the value and proportion of the rest. The task was one of difficulty, as many of these materials had been made use of and were dispersed in different publications. The difficulties were the greater from the confusion of the papers; enclosures had been separated from the letters which contained them and placed in different parts of the collection; many of the writers wrote letters under assumed names, which Carte and others printed in their real names without any notice of the change. Thus, for instance, Sir Edward Nicholas, secretary to King Charles I., rarely used the same signature twice; sometimes he signed himself "Charles Ledison," sometimes "Cha. Johnson," &c. Again, of many letters deciphered by Carte and his friend Mr. Davis, the decipherers were printed, of which no indication is attached to the originals. In this laborious investigation we have succeeded in identifying the printed papers, amounting to 872, with their originals now among the Carte collection, with the exception of about 55. Some of those which escaped our notice are valuable as literary curiosities, and for that reason may have been stolen, or perhaps presented by Carte to favoured collectors. Others may have been restored to their owners at Carte's death, as applications were made to his widow to return papers borrowed by her husband. Some few may have been overlooked in consequence of the confused manner in which the papers are arranged, and some might have got into the collection of Admiral Montague, whose papers were afterwards nearly all destroyed by fire. But as the results of these laborious inquiries now for the first time instituted, the facts of which may not be fully known even to the Curators of the Bodleian themselves, cannot fail of being useful to the literary inquirer, we have thought right to subjoin them in an Appendix to this Report (B).

Profoundly interesting as are the papers in Carte's collection, of which scarcely a fourth part is known to the world, and important as they are to the student of Irish history, it may be questionable whether, in the event of the Curators acting on Mr. Coxe's statement, it would be desirable for the Government to make a calendar of the Irish papers in this collection. The calendars prepared under your Honour's sanction differ from all others in two very important particulars, the advantages of which are obvious :—

* The sanction of the Curators was obtained, 4 Nov. 1863.

1. All the papers are arranged chronologically, and so far constitute a history in themselves.

2. The description of each document is so detailed that the inquirer can determine for himself the exact information likely to be found in it without necessarily having recourse to the original.

Now when it is remembered that for every reign, from the time of Henry VIII., the documents count not by hundreds but by tens of thousands, in various handwritings and many languages, and that the labour of wading through, still more of reading, the contents of such voluminous collections, has hitherto deterred the historian from attempting anything more than a superficial and partial examination of the true materials of history, the importance of a calendar giving sufficient information and abridging useless labour will, we think, be readily admitted. Therefore, though we do not doubt that a Calendar of the Irish Papers in the Carte collection, arranged after the plan adopted in the State Paper Calendars issued under your sanction, would be a great boon to the Irish scholar, and though it is unlikely that the Curators of the Bodleian will, in any catalogue of the Carte Papers they undertake, depart from the rules they have hitherto adopted in their catalogues, yet it appears to us that it would not be desirable, under the circumstances, for the Government to frame a Calendar of the Irish Papers alone in this collection; especially in our present uncertainty as to the course which the Curators of the Bodleian may think fit to adopt. But it appears to us desirable that copies of all official papers in Carte's collection should be made and placed in the several offices in Ireland from which the originals were thoughtlessly and improperly removed by Carte.

We also recommend that a copy of the manuscripts should be taken for the use of the Irish scholars in England and deposited in the Public Record Office.

We proceed to the Carew Papers.

The Carew Papers preserved in the Archbishopal Library in Lambeth Palace contain most important materials for the history of Ireland, and extend from the reign of Henry the Second to the end of the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

They were collected by Sir George Carew, President of Munster (afterwards Earl of Totness), when he held office in Ireland, apparently for the purpose of writing a history of that country, but especially of the wars which occurred in the province of Munster during the reign of Elizabeth. Lord Totness died before he had completed his work. It was finished and published under the title of "Pacata Hibernia," by his natural son, Sir Thomas Stafford, in the year 1633, to whom he had bequeathed his manuscripts by his will dated 30th November 1625, and proved 29th May 1629. It does not clearly appear how these manuscripts came to be deposited at Lambeth. Todd, in his preface to the catalogue of the Lambeth manuscripts, says that they were purchased by Archbishop Tenison; and it is affirmed in a pamphlet by "Historicus Hibernicus" that this collection was purchased from the representatives of Sir George Carew by Archbishop Tenison, who, by his will dated 11th April 1715, bequeathed the MSS. in question to the Public Library of Lambeth "for the use of the "See of Canterbury for ever." But in the Archbishop's will no mention is found of the Carew MSS. After a bequest of a picture and maps in the Long Gallery at Lambeth Library, where they were deposited, the will proceeds as follows—"respecting "divers books both printed and in manuscript in the Public "Library of Lambeth, my will is that as many of them as are "either not at all in the ancient Library aforesaid, or not 'in "the same editions, or shall be judged worthy for that place," by Dr. Gibson, Mr. Ibbot, and Mr. Clavering, "shall there continue "for the use of the See of Canterbury for ever." A tradition, however, is preserved that the Carew MSS. were deposited at Lambeth either by Archbishop Laud himself, or in his time; and the fact of a certain number of volumes of the collection being among the Laud MSS. in the Bodleian Library seems confirmatory of that report. There is also a memorandum in Archbishop Sancroft's handwriting in each of the three volumes of the catalogue prepared for Lord Totness, which seems to prove that the Carew MSS. were in Lambeth Library in his time; consequently they could not have been purchased by Archbishop Tenison.

The collection originally consisted of 72 volumes, but only 42 now remain at Lambeth. We have given in an Appendix (C) an account of the 30 missing volumes, in the hope that it may be the means of tracing them hereafter, especially as Todd in his printed catalogue makes no allusion to their loss or their contents.* While on the subject of Todd's catalogue it may not be irrelevant to mention that it is nothing more than a copy of that prepared by Dr. Wilkins in 1720, so far as it goes, and is by no means so full or so accurate as that compiled for Sir George Carew, in three volumes, and now in the Lambeth Library, Nos. 636, 637, and 638.

That collection in its present state, and which Todd describes "as an inestimable mass of the most important evidence," consists of ancient chronicles and histories of Ireland, Journals of the proceedings of the Lord Lieutenants of Ireland, their instructions, state papers, copies of proclamations, Acts of Parliament, orders of council, ordinances, commissions, memorials, petitions, decrees, interrogatories and examination of witnesses in political and criminal proceedings, certificates, declarations, estimates, perambulations, royal charters and letters patent, private grants, indentures and agreements, plans of castles and fortifications, matters connected with the army in Ireland, maps and surveys of towns, counties, and provinces, original warrants and letters (among them a valuable collection in the handwriting of Secretary Cecil) &c., many of which are copies of important documents not now known to exist. Very few of these papers have been made public, and many like the Carte collection, as we have already stated, supply deficiencies in the public collections in Ireland.

* Six of the missing volumes are in the Bodleian Library (MSS. Laud. 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615).

As a catalogue of the Carew papers has been printed, we have not deemed it necessary to annex to this Report such a minute account of their contents as we have given of the Carte collection; although we were compelled to prepare an analysis of them for the purpose of this Report, which can be forwarded to the Treasury if their Lordships desire to see it.

We think, however, that Todd's printed catalogue will be sufficient to give their Lordships some general notion of the nature of these papers.

In conclusion, we deem it necessary to state that we have heard from the Rev. Wm. Stubbs, the present librarian of the Archbishop of Canterbury, that the Carew papers are more frequently consulted than any other manuscripts at Lambeth, and the want of a good catalogue is very much complained of and deplored by all who attend the Library for the purpose of using the papers in question. From our own knowledge of these papers we consider them not only of the utmost importance for the history of Ireland, but that no faithful history of that country can be written until their voluminous contents are made public.

Under these circumstances we have no hesitation in recommending that they should be calendared (in strict chronological order) on the same plan as that pursued under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, with the exception of those papers relating to the reign of Henry VIII., which are calendared by Mr. Brewer, and will appear in his forthcoming volumes; but at the same time we wish to remark that the collection, which is of a very miscellaneous nature, is not of the same value throughout. Many of the papers are copies of originals which exist at the Museum and elsewhere, whilst others are copies of originals which have since perished.

It will, therefore, be necessary that the editor engaged to calendar these papers should be fully aware of these difficulties, and the length of his précis be determined accordingly. Further, owing to the difficulties attendant on Irish names of persons and places, we think that the editorship of such a calendar should be intrusted to a competent Irish scholar, not only familiar with Irish history generally, but with the names of individuals and localities referred to in the correspondence; and we further suggest that the work would be more complete and valuable if the volumes in the Laudian collection in the Bodleian already referred to, and shown to be a portion of the Carew papers, were included in the same work.

We have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servants,

(Signed) T. DUFFUS HARDY.

APPENDIX.

APPENDIX A.

NOTICES of CARTE'S MSS. in the BODLEIAN LIBRARY.

Vol. 1, formerly marked "A," folio.

Copies of Grants and other formal documents, temp. Hen. III., Edw. I., Edw. II., Edw. III., Ric. II., and Hen. V.

James Earl of Ormonde's speech to the parliament of Drogheda, 1444, and other papers relative to his creation as Earl of Wilts and attainder.

Letters from Thomas Earl of Ormonde to Thomas Archer, 1577 to 1612.

Orders of the Councils of England and Ireland.

Letters from Queen Elizabeth to the Council of Ireland, and one from Cecil to the Earl of Ormonde, general in Ireland (1597).

Letter from Sir Francis Bacon to George Duke of Buckingham when the latter became the favourite of James I., without date.

Warrants.

Letters, mostly original, and chiefly addressed to the Earl of Ormonde, from 1633 to 1641, from the King, Archbishop Laud, Lord Strafford, Lord-Deputy Wandesford, the Lords Justices of Ireland, the Earls of Cork and Holland, Secretary Coke, Sir William Saintleger, Sir Charles Coote, Sir H. Bruce, Sir H. Vane, Sir J. Temple, and others. They chiefly relate to the affairs of Ireland. Some of these letters are printed in the "Life of Ormonde," vol. iii. pp. 27-38, and in "Carte's Ormonde Papers," vol. i. pp. 1-5.

A number of miscellaneous papers dated in the reigns of James I. and Charles I. Amongst them are:—A letter of news from an Alderman of Newcastle to a friend in London. A paper concerning the Novations in Religion complained of by the Scots, signed "Ad. Blair." A Plan of the Way leading to Dunbarton Castle. A Narrative of what passed at King John of Portugal's naming his Bishops at Rome. Demands of the Scots in order to a peace.

Vol. 2, formerly marked "B," folio.

Letters, mostly original, and generally addressed to the Earl of Ormonde, from October 1641 to March 1642, from the King, the Lords Justices of Ireland, the Officers in the North of Ireland, the Earls of Leicester and Cumberland, the Marquis of Clanricarde, Lords Montgomery, Muskery, Upper Ossory, Moore, Montgarret, Ranelagh, and Broghill; Sir H. Tichborne, Sir H. Vane, Sir W. Saintleger, Sir J. Temple, Sir James Montgomery, Lieutenant-Colonel Byron, Sir Patrick Wemys, Sir Philip Percival, Sir Thomas Wharton, and others. They chiefly relate to the Rebellion and other Irish affairs. Many of them are printed in the "Life of Ormonde," vol. iii. pp. 37-69, and p. 117. There are also a few drafts and copies of Ormonde's own letters.

Miscellaneous papers relating to various subjects:—Proclamations. Depositions. Appointment of a Committee to confer with the Rebels (in print). An Account of the Insurrection in Tipperary. Petitions from the Lords of the Pale to King Charles I. and Queen Henrietta Maria. Their Apology for taking Arms. Papers concerning a murder at the Silver Mines. Petition from the Officers of the Army to the King on the breaking out of the Rebellion (original, on parchment). The King's commission to hear the Rebels' propositions (Jan. 11, 1643.) Vol. 65, formerly marked "Ireland II."

Most of the papers in this volume are original, and many of the letters are in cipher. They refer to public affairs between the years 1636 and 1652—the Irish Rebellion—the negotiation for a Cessation of Arms—the Solemn League and Covenant in Scotland—the Civil War in England, &c. The letters are generally addressed to the Marquis of Ormonde, and are chiefly from the following persons:—The King and Queen, Prince Charles, Cardinal Mazarine, the Lords Justices of Ireland, Lords Digby and Clanricarde, Sir Edward Nicholas (the King's Secretary), Sir H. Vane, Speaker Lenthall, and Secretary Long. There is also a considerable number of Ormonde's own letters to the above-mentioned persons and the Assembly of the Confederate Roman Catholics. There are also a few letters from O'Hartegan to the Supreme Council of the Confederates, a Relation of the Battle of Edgehill, a printed copy of the Solemn League and Covenant, with other printed papers, &c. &c.

Vol. 66, formerly marked "Ireland IV."

Original papers and letters, with some copies, relative to the affairs of Ireland between the years 1634 and 1684. Some of the papers are printed. There are eleven letters from Lord Strafford to the King dated from 1635 to 1638, which are, with one exception, printed in the "Life of Ormonde," vol. iii. pp. 14-26; and there are two letters of Vice-Treasurer Loftus, one printed in the "Life of Ormonde," vol. iii. p. 27.

Vol. 67, formerly marked "Ireland X."

Copies of letters and papers from 1613 to 1679, of which the greater portion is taken from Dr. Williams's Collection of Papers relating to Ireland.

Vol. 68, formerly marked "Ireland VII."

Original letters to and from Lord Ormonde, the Earl of Ossory, the Earl of Essex, Lord Ranelagh, Primate Boyle, the Earl of Longford, the Earl of Leicester, the Earl of Northumberland, Lord Chancellor Clarendon, and others. Also a considerable number of letters from the Lords Justices and Council of Ireland to various persons, and many important papers (some printed) respecting the disputes between the Roman Catholics and Protestants in Ireland. The period comprised is from 1641 to 1683.

A letter from Lord Digby to the Marquis of Ormonde, contained in this volume, is printed in the "Life of Ormonde," vol. iii. p. 475.

Vol. 69, formerly marked "Ireland III."

The period embraced by the papers in this volume extends from 1646 to 1697. Some of the letters contained in it are original, others copies. There are also extracts from printed books; memoranda concerning the life of the Duke of Ormonde (curious); copies of pedigrees and family papers of the Duke; an original letter from the celebrated Colonel Blood to the Duke of Ormonde, without date; &c.

Vol. 70, formerly marked "Ireland IX."

Nearly all the letters and other papers in this volume are copies, but are important for the history of the period to which they relate (1604-1688). Many of the papers refer to the pedigrees and private affairs of the Ormonde family. There are some original letters from John Antis, the Herald, to Thomas Carte.

Vol. 71, formerly marked "Ireland XI."

Copies of commissions, grants, and Acts of Parliament of no great value. A very large collection of proclamations, orders, and ordinances, all in print, seemingly very rare, and perhaps unique; many during the Commonwealth.

Vol. 72, formerly marked "ZZ," folio.

This volume consists of news letters, both from home and abroad, proceedings and speeches in Parliament, originals and copies of papers relating to Ireland, France, and Germany. The period embraced is from 1642 to 1685.

Vol. 73, formerly marked "AAA," folio.

Original letters and copies of letters to and from General Montague (afterwards Earl of Sandwich), commander at sea, from the Montague collection. The letters to Montague are from Oliver Cromwell, Charles II., Secretary Thurloe, Samuel Pepys, Sir Gilbert Pickering, General Monck, William Penne, Sir William Wheeler, General Blake, Admiral Stoakes, and others. Among the papers are some relative to the Cadiz fleet, the Dutch fleet, the siege of Mardyche, &c. The period embraced is that between 1656 and 1661.

This volume is indispensable for the history of the Navy during the Commonwealth. Many of the papers are printed in "Carte's Ormonde Papers," vol. ii. pp. 96-208.

Vol. 74, formerly marked "BBB," folio.

The contents of this volume comprise the period between the years 1604 and 1683. Letters and papers from the collection of Edward Montague, afterwards Earl of Sandwich, chiefly connected with the Navy and Army. Among them is a paper headed "Memoria de las Pinturas que se vendiéron al Sr Embax<sup>or</sup> de España en el Palacio de Somerset, y que eran del Rey y de la Reyna;" private letters from his family; papers relating to the public revenue, and other matters; petitions, &c.; keys to ciphers before and during the Rebellion.

Some of the above are printed in "Carte's Ormonde Papers," vol. i. pp. 46-48, and vol. ii., pp. 87-92.

Vol. 75, formerly marked "CCC," folio.

The contents of this volume relate to the period between 1662 and 1671. Papers and letters about Tangiers, from the Earl of Peterborough, Lord Teviot, Lord Bellasis, Colonel Fitzgerald, Colonel Norwood, Sir J. Lawson, Sir Charles Harbord, and Consuls of Spanish ports. Articles of peace made with Cidcader Guilun, the Moorish Chief. Letters, orders, and instructions from the Duke of York, Lord High Admiral of England, to the Earl of Sandwich, Vice-Admiral of England, chiefly about the Dutch fleet; letters from Sir W. Coventry to the Earl of Sandwich, relative to the same. Account of the destruction of Chatham Dockyard by the Dutch. Letters of the Duke of Albemarle, Lord Culpeper, Sir Thomas Clifford, and Sir William Penn. Letters from Charles II. to the Duke of York. Papers and letters during the Earl of Sandwich's embassy to Spain to conclude a treaty with that Crown; his speeches to the Queen of Spain; letters of instructions about the treaty from Lord Arlington, Lord Chancellor Clarendon, the Earl of Manchester, and others. Papers and letters relative to the treaty of Breda (August 1667). Letters to the Earl of Sandwich after his departure from Madrid; one from the Duke of Medina. Letters and papers relative to Queen Christina of Sweden. Public and private papers, especially relating to naval affairs.

Vol. 76, formerly marked "DDD," folio.

Papers between the years 1643 and 1715, principally news letters (all original) to the Earl of Huntingdon, from August 1690 to 1695, and some from 1695 to 1715, relative to occurrences both at home and abroad, particularly to the settlement of Scotland and Ireland after the Revolution—the wars in Flanders, Italy, and Germany, and with the Turks—naval affairs, sea fights and captures during those wars—the death of Queen Mary, consort of William III. There is a letter from the siege of Buda in 1686—an account of the action at Brentford (1643)—letters from F. Salisbury to the Earl of Huntingdon, 1663-1670—notes made at the council table at Hampton Court when Keeling was examined about the Rye House Plot, 23 June 1683.—The above papers are seemingly from the Huntingdon collection.
