

Night.

Night is the time for rest. The time when those who are tired with labor may be permitted to lay aside their cares for awhile, and kindly welcome rest.

It is a time which we might employ to look back on the labors of the day. we may find that there has been many things not done that we wish were done and those that are done have been done differently from what we intended. By looking over the faults of today we may be <sup>better</sup> able to correct those ~~very~~ <sup>very</sup> ones tomorrow.

But if we do not try to correct our faults they will increase every day. Let us then try to make some improvement every day. we shall find ourselves much ~~more~~ happier and more contented with ourselves when night comes. than we should if we had not tried, nor even thought of doing any better than we did the day before.

Emma F. Peabody.

June 7th 1861. 3rd H. S. School

Emma F. Bradley

3rd
June 21st / 11