TECHSTORM 2018

ALL INCLUSIVE

Logo: Hay Kranen - CC-BY-SA-4.0

Key factors for a Techstorm:

- Social character
- Small scale
- Invite newbies to the event
- Invite mentors
- Have entrance-level workshops
- Plan time to ‘hack’

Blog, Blogs, blō̰g ...
Blog, Блог, بلوگ

Why blog?

The Wikimedia Blog is a great way to communicate with…

- Colleagues
- Communities
- Everyone else*!*

WIKIMEDIA
FOUNDATION

My blogging in 2018

Five blog posts in 2018:

- Multi-script languages (e.g., blog, блог, بلوگ)
- Searching for names can be hard
- Deep dive into search—
  - Tokenization, normalization (в̪l̪ōɠ), and stemming (blogs) so far!

WIKIMEDIA FOUNDATION

Trey's blogging advice

- Write what you know
- Make things as simple as possible (but no simpler)
- Melody & Ed are great to work with!
- Let your personality & passion come through*

  * Humor and brief, interesting tangents are good—and I personally like footnotes way too much!

Other channels

Other channels of communication—

- “Did you know?” blurbs in status reports
- Recording talks and presentations
- Podcasts
- Lightning talks! [obviously]

WIKIMEDIA
FOUNDATION

Benefits of blogs, etc.

- Reach new audiences and communities
- Encourage engagement
- Non-technical documentation/overview

P.S.: Links!

- Trey's recent blogs
- Search Platform status updates
- Recorded presentations on Commons—search & refactoring
- Podcast interview about search

Inclusion practices

Safe spaces

80% of programs are only open to people with gender identities that are marginalized on Wikimedia projects.

Intersectionality

Advancing equity is an intersectional effort that extends beyond gender.

Updates from the Movement Strategy Core Team

CC0 1.0 Bflores (WMF)

Introducing Working Groups (behind the scenes)

- Let’s get to know the Working Group members aka Agents of Change :)
- Why did they join the Working Group?
- What have they been doing?

WIKIMEDIA FOUNDATION

Mervat Salam, Community Health Working Group

- Composition of the Working Group
- How does a Working Group ‘work’?
- Upcoming steps of the Working Group

WIKIMEDIA
FOUNDATION

What to expect next?

- Scoping documents
- Analysis of Scope with community participation and course correction
- Launch into analysis and building recommendations
- Wikimedia Summit

WIKIMEDIA
FOUNDATION

Feedback is helpful!

So we can understand what we don’t understand.

We studied Thanks, and here is what we learned

https://meta.wikimedia.org/wiki/Research:Understanding_thanks

WIKIMEDIA
FOUNDATION

Who uses Thanks?

- Across all projects, only 5% of the editors have sent or received Thanks.
- Active editors use Thanks more frequently.
- Less experienced editors Thank more experienced editors more often (with exceptions such as Norwegian Wikipedia)

Disparity in Thanks

- More experienced editors are Thanked more often.
- The top 20% of the editors in a project can receive 260 times more Thanks than the bottom 20%.

Thanks usage over time

- The usage of Thanks feature has increased over time
- The upward trend exists even for projects in which the total number of editors has decreased.

Thanks and edit activity

Thanked editors consistently have higher edit counts the day after receiving a Thank when compared to their unThanked peers.

Consider ...

- making the feature more easily discoverable by editors.
- giving Thanks. They increase short term edit activity and can act as motivators.

Thank You

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

"Thank you" is a common expression of gratitude. It often refers to a thank you letter, a letter written to express appreciation.
