Spring speaks again, and att our woods are stirred, And all our wide glad wastes aflower around, That twice have heard keen April's clarion sound Since here we first together saw and heard Spring's light reverberate and reiterate word Shine forth and speak in season. Life stands crowned Here with the best one thing it ever found. As of my soul's best birthdays dawns the third.

There is a friend that as the wise man saith Cleaves closer than a brother : nor to me Hath time not shown, through days like waves at strife, This truth more sure than all things else but death, This pearl most perfect found in all the sea That washes toward your feet these waifs of Zife.

PRELUDE

TRISTRAM AND ISEULT

LOVE, that is first and last of all things made, The light that has the living world for shade, The spirit that for temporal yeil has on The souls of all men woven in unison, One fiery raiment with all lives inwrought And lights of sunny and starry deed and thought. And alway through new act and passion new Shines the divine same body and beauty through, The body spiritual of fire and light That is to worldly noon as noon to night: Love, that is flesh upon the spirit of man And spirit within the flesh whence breath began; Love, that keeps all the choir of lives in chime : Love, that is blood within the veins of time ; That wrought the whole world without stroke of hand, Shaping the breadth of sea, the length of land, And with the pulse and motion of his breath Through the great heart of the earth strikes life and death,

The sweet twain chords that make the sweet tune live Through day and night of things alternative,

Through silence and through sound of stress and strife,

And ebb and flow of dying death and life ;

Love, that sounds loud or light in all men's ears, Whence all men's eyes take fire from sparks of tears, That binds on all men's feet or chains or wings; Love, that is root and fruit of terrene things; Love, that the whole world's waters shall not drown, The whole world's fiery forces not burn down; Love, that what time his own hands guard his head The whole world's wrath and strength shall not strike dead:

Love, that if once his own hands make his grave The whole world's pity and sorrow shall not save; Love, that for very life shall not be sold, Nor bought nor bound with iron nor with gold; So strong that heaven, could love bid heaven farewell, Would turn to fruitless and unflowering hell; So sweet that hell, to hell could love be given, Would turn to splendid and sonorous heaven; Love that is fire within thee and light above, And lives by grace of nothing but of love; Through many and lovely thoughts and much desire Led these twain to the life of tears and fire; Through many and lovely days and much delight Led these twain to the lifeless life of night.

Yea, but what then ? albeit all this were thus, And soul smote soul and left it ruinous, And love led love as eyeless men lead men, Through chance by chance to deathward—Ah, what then?

Hath love not likewise led them further yet, Out through the years where memories rise and set, Some large as suns, some moon-like warm and pale, Some starry-sighted, some through clouds that sail Seen as red flame through spectral float of fume, Each with the blush of its own special bloom On the fair face of its own coloured light, Distinguishable in all the host of night, Divisible from all the radiant rest And separable in splendour? Hath the best Light of love's all, of all that burn and move, A better heaven than heaven is? Hath not love Made for all these their sweet particular air To shine in, their own beams and names to bear, Their ways to wander and their wards to keep, Till story and song and glory and all things sleep? Hath he not plucked from death of lovers dead Their musical soft memories, and kept red The rose of their remembrance in men's eyes, The sunsets of their stories in his skies, The blush of their dead blood in lips that speak Of their dead lives, and in the listener's cheek That trembles with the kindling pity lit In gracious hearts for some sweet fever-fit, A fiery pity enkindled of pure thought By tales that make their honey out of nought, The faithless faith that lives without belief Its light life through, the griefless ghost of grief? Yea, as warm night refashions the sere blood In storm-struck petal or in sun-struck bud, With tender hours and tempering dew to cure The hunger and thirst of day's distemperature And ravin of the dry discolouring hours, Hath he not bid relume their flameless flowers With summer fire and heat of lamping song, And bid the short-lived things, long dead, live long, And thought remake their wan funereal fames, And the sweet shining signs of women's names That mark the months out and the weeks anew He moves in changeless change of seasons through

To fill the days up of his dateless year Flame from Queen Helen to Queen Guenevere? For first of all the sphery signs whereby Love severs light from darkness, and most high, In the white front of January there glows The rose-red sign of Helen like a rose : And gold-eyed as the shore-flower shelterless Whereon the sharp-breathed sea blows bitterness, A storm-star that the seafarers of love Strain their wind-wearied eyes for glimpses of, Shoots keen through February's grey frost and damp The lamplike star of Hero for a lamp; The star that Marlowe sang into our skies With mouth of gold, and morning in his eyes; And in clear March across the rough blue sea The signal sapphire of Alcyone Makes bright the blown brows of the wind-foot year; And shining like a sunbeam-smitten tear Full ere it fall, the fair next sign in sight Burns opal-wise with April-coloured light When air is quick with song and rain and flame, My birth-month star that in love's heaven hath name Iseult, a light of blossom and beam and shower, My singing sign that makes the song-tree flower; Next like a pale and burning pearl beyond The rose-white sphere of flower-named Rosamond Signs the sweet head of Maytime; and for June Flares like an angered and storm-reddening moon Her signal sphere, whose Carthaginian pyre Shadowed her traitor's flying sail with fire; Next, glittering as the wine-bright jacinth-stone, A star south-risen that first to music shone, The keen girl-star of golden Juliet bears Light northward to the month whose forehead wears

Her name for flower upon it, and his trees Mix their deep English song with Veronese; And like an awful sovereign chrysolite Burning, the supreme fire that blinds the night, The hot gold head of Venus kissed by Mars, A sun-flower among small sphered flowers of stars, The light of Cleopatra fills and burns The hollow of heaven whence ardent August yearns; And fixed and shining as the sister-shed Sweet tears for Phaethon disorbed and dead, The pale bright autumn's amber-coloured sphere. That through September sees the saddening year As love sees change through sorrow, hath to name Francesca's; and the star that watches flame The embers of the harvest overgone Is Thisbe's, slain of love in Babylon, Set in the golden girdle of sweet signs A blood-bright ruby ; last save one light shines An eastern wonder of sphery chrysopras, The star that made men mad, Angelica's ; And latest named and lordliest, with a sound Of swords and harps in heaven that ring it round, Last love-light and last love-song of the year's, Gleams like a glorious emerald Guenevere's. These are the signs wherethrough the year sees move, Full of the sun, the sun-god which is love,

A fiery body blood-red from the heart Outward, with fire-white wings made wide apart, That close not and unclose not, but upright Steered without wind by their own light and might Sweep through the flameless fire of air that rings From heaven to heaven with thunder of wheels and wings And antiphones of motion-moulded rhyme Through spaces out of space and timeless time.

So shine above dead chance and conquered change The spherèd signs, and leave without their range Doubt and desire, and hope with fear for wife, Pale pains, and pleasures long worn out of life. Yea, even the shadows of them spiritless, Through the dim door of sleep that seem to press, Forms without form, a piteous people and blind, Men and no men, whose lamentable kind The shadow of death and shadow of life compel Through semblances of heaven and false-faced hell, Through dreams of light and dreams of darkness tost On waves innavigable, are these so lost ? Shapes that wax pale and shift in swift strange wise, Void faces with unspeculative eyes,

Dim things that gaze and glare, dead mouths that move,

Featureless heads discrowned of hate and love, Mockeries and masks of motion and mute breath, Leavings of life, the superflux of death— If these things and no more than these things be Left when man ends or changes, who can see ? Or who can say with what more subtle sense Their subtler natures taste in air less dense A life less thick and palpable than ours, Warmed with faint fires and sweetened with dead flowers

And measured by low music? how time fares In that wan time-forgotten world of theirs, Their pale poor world too deep for sun or star To live in, where the eyes of Helen are, And hers who made as God's own eyes to shine The eyes that met them of the Florentine, Wherein the godhead thence transfigured lit All time for all men with the shadow of it? Ah, and these too felt on them as God's grace The pity and glory of this man's breathing face; For these too, these my lovers, these my twain, Saw Dante, saw God visible by pain, With lips that thundered and with feet that trod Before men's eyes incognisable God; Saw love and wrath and light and night and fire Live with one life and at one mouth respire, And in one golden sound their whole soul heard Sounding, one sweet immitigable word.

They have the night, who had like us the day; We, whom day binds, shall have the night as they. We, from the fetters of the light unbound, Healed of our wound of living, shall sleep sound. All gifts but one the jealous God may keep From our soul's longing, one he cannot-sleep. This, though he grudge all other grace to prayer, This grace his closed hand cannot choose but spare. This, though his ear be sealed to all that live, Be it lightly given or lothly, God must give. We, as the men whose name on earth is none, We too shall surely pass out of the sun; Out of the sound and eyeless light of things, Wide as the stretch of life's time-wandering wings, Wide as the naked world and shadowless, And long-lived as the world's own weariness. Us too, when all the fires of time are cold, The heights shall hide us and the depths shall hold. Us too, when all the tears of time are dry, The night shall lighten from her tearless eye. Blind is the day and eyeless all its light, But the large unbewildered eye of night

Hath sense and speculation ; and the sheer Limitless length of lifeless life and clear, The timeless space wherein the brief worlds move Clothed with light life and fruitful with light love, With hopes that threaten, and with fears that cease, Past fear and hope, hath in it only peace.

Yet of these lives inlaid with hopes and fears, Spun fine as fire and jewelled thick with tears, These lives made out of loves that long since were, Lives wrought as ours of earth and burning air, Fugitive flame, and water of secret springs, And clothed with joys and sorrows as with wings, Some yet are good, if aught be good, to save Some while from washing wreck and wrecking wave. Was such not theirs, the twain I take, and give Out of my life to make their dead life live Some days of mine, and blow my living breath Between dead lips forgotten even of death? So many and many of old have given my twain Love and live song and honey-hearted pain, Whose root is sweetness and whose fruit is sweet, So many and with such joy have tracked their feet, What should I do to follow? yet I too, I have the heart to follow, many or few Be the feet gone before me ; for the way, Rose-red with remnant roses of the day Westward, and eastward white with stars that break, Between the green and foam is fair to take For any sail the sea-wind steers for me From morning into morning, sea to sea.

THE SAILING OF THE SWALLOW

About the middle music of the spring Came from the castled shore of Ireland's king A fair ship stoutly sailing, eastward bound And south by Wales and all its wonders round To the loud rocks and ringing reaches home That take the wild wrath of the Cornish foam, Past Lyonesse unswallowed of the tides And high Carlion that now the steep sea hides To the wind-hollowed heights and gusty bays Of sheer Tintagel, fair with famous days. Above the stem a gilded swallow shone, Wrought with straight wings and eyes of glittering stone

As flying sunward oversea, to bear Green summer with it through the singing air. And on the deck between the rowers at dawn, As the bright sail with brightening wind was drawn, Sat with full face against the strengthening light Iseult, more fair than foam or dawn was white. Her gaze was glad past love's own singing of, And her face lovely past desire of love. Past thought and speech her maiden motions were, And a more golden sunrise was her hair.

The very veil of her bright flesh was made As of light woven and moonbeam-coloured shade More fine than moonbeams ; white her eyelids shone As snow sun-stricken that endures the sun, And through their curled and coloured clouds of deep Luminous lashes thick as dreams in sleep Shone as the sea's depth swallowing up the sky's The springs of unimaginable eyes. As the wave's subtler emerald is pierced through With the utmost heaven's inextricable blue, And both are woven and molten in one sleight Of amorous colour and implicated light Under the golden guard and gaze of noon, So glowed their awless amorous plenilune, Azure and gold and ardent grey, made strange With fiery difference and deep interchange Inexplicable of glories multiform ; Now as the sullen sapphire swells toward storm Foamless, their bitter beauty grew acold, And now afire with ardour of fine gold. Her flower-soft lips were meek and passionate, For love upon them like a shadow sate Patient, a foreseen vision of sweet things, A dream with eyes fast shut and plumeless wings That knew not what man's love or life should be, Nor had it sight nor heart to hope or see What thing should come, but childlike satisfied Watched out its virgin vigil in soft pride And unkissed expectation ; and the glad Clear cheeks and throat and tender temples had Such maiden heat as if a rose's blood Beat in the live heart of a lily-bud. Between the small round breasts a white way led Heavenward, and from slight foot to slender head

The whole fair body flower-like swayed and shone Moving, and what her light hand leant upon Grew blossom-scented : her warm arms began To round and ripen for delight of man That they should clasp and circle : her fresh hands, Like regent lilies of reflowering lands Whose vassal firstlings, crown and star and plume, Bow down to the empire of that sovereign bloom, Shone sceptreless, and from her face there went A silent light as of a God content; Save when, more swift and keen than love or shame, Some flash of blood, light as the laugh of flame, Broke it with sudden beam and shining speech, As dream by dream shot through her eyes, and each Outshone the last that lightened, and not one Showed her such things as should be borne and done.

Though hard against her shone the sunlike face That in all change and wreck of time and place Should be the star of her sweet living soul. Nor had love made it as his written scroll For evil will and good to read in yet ; But smooth and mighty, without scar or fret, Fresh and high-lifted was the helmless brow As the oak-tree flower that tops the topmost bough, Ere it drop off before the perfect leaf ; And nothing save his name he had of grief, The name his mother, dying as he was born, Made out of sorrow in very sorrow's scorn, And set it on him smiling in her sight, Tristram ; who now, clothed with sweet youth and might,

As a glad witness wore that bitter name, The second symbol of the world for fame. Famous and full of fortune was his youth Ere the beard's bloom had left his cheek unsmooth, And in his face a lordship of strong joy And height of heart no chance could curb or cloy Lightened, and all that warmed them at his eyes Loved them as larks that kindle as they rise Toward light they turn to music love the blue strong skies.

So like the morning through the morning moved Tristram, a light to look on and be loved. Song sprang between his lips and hands, and shone Singing, and strengthened and sank down thereon As a bird settles to the second flight, Then from beneath his harping hands with might Leapt, and made way and had its fill and died, And all whose hearts were fed upon it sighed Silent, and in them all the fire of tears Burned as wine drunken not with lips but ears. And gazing on his fervent hands that made The might of music all their souls obeyed With trembling strong subservience of delight, Full many a maid that had him once in sight Thought in the secret rapture of her heart In how dark onset had these hands borne part How oft, and were so young and sweet of skill ; And those red lips whereon the song burned still, What words and cries of battle had they flung Athwart the swing and shriek of swords, so young; And eyes as glad as summer, what strange youth Fed them so full of happy heart and truth, That had seen sway from side to sundering side The steel flow of that terrible springtide That the moon rules not, but the fire and light Of men's hearts mixed in the mid mirth of fight.

Therefore the joy and love of him they had Made thought more amorous in them and more glad

For his fame's sake remembered, and his youth Gave his fame flowerlike fragrance and soft growth As of a rose requickening, when he stood Fair in their eye, a flower of faultless blood. And that sad queen to whom his life was death, A rose plucked forth of summer in mid breath, A star fall'n out of season in mid throe Of that life's joy that makes the star's life glow, Made their love sadder toward him and more strong. And in mid change of time and fight and song Chance cast him westward on the low sweet strand Where songs are sung of the old green Irish land, And the sky loves it, and the sea loves best, And as a bird is taken to man's breast The sweet-souled land where sorrow sweetest sings Is wrapt round with them as with hands and wings And taken to the sea's heart as a flower. There in the luck and light of his good hour Came to the king's court like a noteless man Tristram, and while some half a season ran Abode before him harping in his hall, And taught sweet craft of new things musical To the dear maiden mouth and innocent hands That for his sake are famous in all lands. Yet was not love between them, for their fate Lay wrapt in its appointed hour at wait. And had no flower to show yet, and no sting. But once being vexed with some past wound the king Bade give him comfort of sweet baths, and then Should Iseult watch him as his handmaiden,

For his more honour in men's sight, and ease The hurts he had with holy remedies Made by her mother's magic in strange hours Out of live roots and life-compelling flowers. And finding by the wound's shape in his side This was the knight by whom their strength had died And all their might in one man overthrown Had left their shame in sight of all men shown, She would have slain him swordless with his sword : Yet seemed he to her so great and fair a lord She heaved up hand and smote not; then said he, Laughing-' What comfort shall this dead man be, Damsel ? what hurt is for my blood to heal ? But set your hand not near the toothed steel Lest the fang strike it.'-' Yea, the fang,' she said, ' Should it not sting the very serpent dead That stung mine uncle? for his slayer art thou, And half my mother's heart is bloodless now Through thee, that mad'st the veins of all her kin Bleed in his wounds whose veins through thee ran thin.'

Yet thought she how their hot chief's violent heart Had flung the fierce word forth upon their part Which bade to battle the best knight that stood On Arthur's, and so dying of his wild mood Had set upon his conqueror's flesh the seal Of his mishallowed and anointed steel, Whereof the venom and enchanted might Made the sign burn here branded in her sight. These things she stood recasting, and her soul Subsiding till its wound of wrath were whole Grew smooth again, as thought still softening stole Through all its tempered passion ; nor might hate Keep high the fire against him lit of late ; But softly from his smiling sight she passed. And peace thereafter made between them fast Made peace between two kingdoms, when he went Home with hands reconciled and heart content,

To bring fair truce 'twixt Cornwall's wild bright strand

And the long wrangling wars of that loud land. And when full peace was struck betwixt them twain Forth must he fare by those green straits again, And bring back Iseult for a plighted bride And set to reign at Mark his uncle's side. So now with feast made and all triumphs done They sailed between the moonfall and the sun Under the spent stars eastward ; but the queen Out of wise heart and subtle love had seen Such things as might be, dark as in a glass, And lest some doom of these should come to pass Bethought her with her secret soul alone To work some charm for marriage unison And strike the heart of Iseult to her lord With power compulsive more than stroke of sword. Therefore with marvellous herbs and spells she wrought

To win the very wonder of her thought, And brewed it with her secret hands and blest And drew and gave out of her secret breast To one her chosen and Iseult's handmaiden, Brangwain, and bade her hide from sight of men Fhis marvel covered in a golden cup, So covering in her heart the counsel up As in the gold the wondrous wine lay close ; And when the last shout with the last cup rose About the bride and bridegroom bound to bed, Then should this one word of her will be said To her new-married maiden child, that she Should drink with Mark this draught in unity, And no lip touch it for her sake but theirs : For with long love and consecrating prayers The wine was hallowed for their mouths to pledge ; And if a drop fell from the beaker's edge That drop should Iseult hold as dear as blood Shed from her mother's heart to do her good. And having drunk they twain should be one heart Who were one flesh till fleshly death should part— Death, who parts all. So Brangwain swore, and kept

The hid thing by her while she waked or slept. And now they sat to see the sun again Whose light of eye had looked on no such twain Since Galahault in the rose-time of the year Brought Launcelot first to sight of Guenevere.

And Tristram caught her changing eyes and said : "As this day raises daylight from the dead Might not this face the life of a dead man?"

And Iseult, gazing where the sea was wan Out of the sun's way, said : "I pray you not Praise me, but tell me there in Camelot, Saving the queen, who hath most name of fair? I would I were a man and dwelling there, That I might win me better praise than yours, Even such as you have; for your praise endures, That with great deeds ye wring from mouths of men.

But ours—for shame, where is it? Tell me then, Since woman may not wear a better here,

Who of this praise hath most save Guenevere?"

And Tristram, lightening with a laugh held in--"Surely a little praise is this to win, A poor praise and a little ! but of these

Hapless, whom love serves only with bowed knees,

Of such poor women fairer face hath none That lifts her eyes alive against the sun Than Arthur's sister, whom the north seas call Mistress of isles; so yet majestical Above the crowns on younger heads she moves, Outlightening with her eyes our late-born loves."

"Ah," said Iseult, "is she more tall than I? Look, I am tall;" and struck the mast hard by, With utmost upward reach of her bright hand; "And look, fair lord, now, when I rise and stand, How high with feet unlifted I can touch Standing straight up; could this queen do thus much?

Nay, over tall she must be then, like me; Less fair than lesser women. May this be, That still she stands the second stateliest there, So more than many so much younger fair, She, born when yet the king your lord was not, And has the third knight after Launcelot And after you to serve her? nay, sir, then God made her for a godlike sign to men."

"Ay," Tristram answered, "for a sign, a sign-Would God it were not! for no planets shine With half such fearful forecast of men's fate As a fair face so more unfortunate."

Then with a smile that lit not on her brows But moved upon her red mouth tremulous Light as a sea-bird's motion oversea, "Yea," quoth Iseult, "the happier hap for me. With no such face to bring men no such fate. Yet her might all we women born too late Praise for good hap, who so enskied above Not more in age excels us than man's love."

There came a glooming light on Tristram's face Answering : "God keep you better in his grace Than to sit down beside her in men's sight. For if men be not blind whom God gives light And lie not in whose lips he bids truth live, Great grief shall she be given, and greater give. For Merlin witnessed of her years ago That she should work woe and should suffer woe Beyond the race of women : and in truth Her face, a spell that knows nor age nor youth, Like youth being soft, and subtler-eyed than age, With lips that mock the doom her eyes presage, Hath on it such a light of cloud and fire, With charm and change of keen or dim desire, And over all a fearless look of fear Hung like a veil across its changing cheer, Made up of fierce foreknowledge and sharp scorn, That it were better she had not been born. For not love's self can help a face which hath Such insubmissive anguish of wan wrath, Blind prescience and self-contemptuous hate Of her own soul and heavy-footed fate, Writ broad upon its beauty : none the less Its fire of bright and burning bitterness Takes with as quick a flame the sense of men As any sunbeam, nor is quenched again With any drop of dewfall ; yea, I think No herb of force or blood-compelling drink Would heal a heart that ever it made hot. Ay, and men too that greatly love her not, Seeing the great love of her and Lamoracke, Make no great marvel, nor look strangely back

When with his gaze about her she goes by Pale as a breathless and star-quickening sky Between moonrise and sunset, and moves out Clothed with the passion of his eyes about As night with all her stars, yet night is black ; And she, clothed warm with love of Lamoracke, Girt with his worship as with girdling gold, Seems all at heart anhungered and acold, Seems sad at heart and loveless of the light, As night, star-clothed or naked, is but night."

And with her sweet eyes sunken, and the mirth Dead in their look as earth lies dead in earth That reigned on earth and triumphed, Iseult said: "Is it her shame of something done and dead Or fear of something to be born and done That so in her soul's eye puts out the sun?"

And Tristram answered : "Surely, as I think, This gives her soul such bitterness to drink, The sin born blind, the sightless sin unknown, Wrought when the summer in her blood was blown But scarce aflower, and spring first flushed her will With bloom of dreams no fruitage should fulfil, When out of vision and desire was wrought The sudden sin that from the living thought Leaps a live deed and dies not : then there came On that blind sin swift eyesight like a flame Touching the dark to death, and made her mad With helpless knowledge that too late forbade What was before the bidding : and she knew How sore a life dead love should lead her through To what sure end how fearful; and though yet Nor with her blood nor tears her way be wet And she look bravely with set face on fate, Yet she knows well the serpent hour at wait

Somewhere to sting and spare not; ay, and he, Arthur"—

"The king," quoth Iseult suddenly, "Doth the king too live so in sight of fear? They say sin touches not a man so near As shame a woman; yet he too should be Part of the penance, being more deep than she Set in the sin."

"Nay," Tristram said, "for thus It fell by wicked hap and hazardous, That wittingly he sinned no more than youth May sin and be assoiled of God and truth, Repenting ; since in his first year of reign As he stood splendid with his foemen slain And light of new-blown battles, flushed and hot With hope and life, came greeting from King Lot Out of his wind-worn islands oversea, And homage to my king and fealty Of those north seas wherein the strange shapes swim, As from his man; and Arthur greeted him As his good lord and courteously, and bade To his high feast; who coming with him had This Queen Morgause of Orkney, his fair wife, In the green middle Maytime of her life, And scarce in April was our king's as then, And goodliest was he of all flowering men, And of what graft as yet himself knew not; But cold as rains in autumn was King Lot And grey-grown out of season : so there sprang Swift love between them, and all spring through sang Light in their joyous hearing ; for none knew The bitter bond of blood between them two, Twain fathers but one mother, till too late The sacred mouth of Merlin set forth fate

And brake the secret seal on Arthur's birth, And showed his ruin and his rule on earth Inextricable, and light on lives to be. For surely, though time slay us, yet shall we Have such high name and lordship of good days As shall sustain us living, and men's praise Shall burn a beacon lit above us dead. And of the king how shall not this be said When any of us from any mouth has praise, That such were men in only this king's days, In Arthur's ? yea, come shine or shade, no less His name shall be one name with knightliness, His fame one light with sunlight. Yet in sooth His age shall bear the burdens of his youth And bleed from his own bloodshed ; for indeed Blind to him blind his sister brought forth seed, And of the child between them shall be born Destruction : so shall God not suffer scorn. Nor in men's souls and lives his law lie dead."

And as one moved and marvelling Iseult said : "Great pity it is and strange it seems to me God could not do them so much right as we, Who slay not men for witless evil done ; And these the noblest under God's glad sun For sin they knew not he that knew shall slay, And smite blind men for stumbling in fair day. What good is it to God that such should die ? Shall the sun's light grow sunnier in the sky Because their light of spirit is clean put out ?"

And sighing, she looked from wave to cloud about, And even with that the full-grown feet of day Sprang upright on the quivering water-way, And his face burned against her meeting face Most like a lover's thrilled with great love's grace Whose glance takes fire and gives; the quick sea shone

And shivered like spread wings of angels blown By the sun's breath before him; and a low Sweet gale shook all the foam-flowers of thin snow As into rainfall of sea-roses shed Leaf by wild leaf on that green garden-bed Which tempests till and sea-winds turn and plough: For rosy and fiery round the running prow Fluttered the flakes and feathers of the spray, And bloomed like blossoms cast by God away To waste on the ardent water ; swift the moon Withered to westward as a face in swoon Death-stricken by glad tidings : and the height Throbbed and the centre quivered with delight And the depth quailed with passion as of love, Till like the heart of some new-mated dove Air, light, and wave seemed full of burning rest, With motion as of one God's beating breast.

And her heart sprang in Iseult, and she drew With all her spirit and life the sunrise through, And through her lips the keen triumphant air Sea-scented, sweeter than land-roses were, And through her eyes the whole rejoicing east Sun-satisfied, and all the heaven at feast Spread for the morning ; and the imperious mirth Of wind and light that moved upon the earth, Making the spring, and all the fruitful might And strong regeneration of delight That swells the seedling leaf and sapling man, Since the first life in the first world began To burn and burgeon through void limbs and veins, And the first love with sharp sweet procreant pains

To pierce and bring forth roses ; yea, she felt Through her own soul the sovereign morning melt, And all the sacred passion of the sun ; And as the young clouds flamed and were undone About him coming, touched and burnt away In rosy ruin and yellow spoil of day, The sweet veil of her body and corporal sense Felt the dawn also cleave it, and incense With light from inward and with effluent heat The kindling soul through fleshly hands and feet. And as the august great blossom of the dawn Burst, and the full sun scarce from sea withdrawn Seemed on the fiery water a flower afloat. So as a fire the mighty morning smote Throughout her, and incensed with the influent hour Her whole soul's one great mystical red flower Burst, and the bud of her sweet spirit broke Rose-fashion, and the strong spring at a stroke Thrilled, and was cloven, and from the full sheath came

The whole rose of the woman red as flame : And all her Mayday blood as from a swoon Flushed, and May rose up in her and was June. So for a space her heart as heavenward burned : Then with half summer in her eyes she turned, And on her lips was April yet, and smiled, As though the spirit and sense unreconciled Shrank laughing back, and would not ere its hour Let life put forth the irrevocable flower.

And the soft speech between them grew again With questionings and records of what men Rose mightiest, and what names for love or fight Shone starriest overhead of queen or knight. There Tristram spake of many a noble thing, High feast and storm of tournay round the king, Strange quest by perilous lands of marsh and brake And circling woods branch-knotted like a snake And places pale with sins that they had seen, Where was no life of red fruit or of green But all was as a dead face wan and dun ; And bowers of evil builders whence the sun Turns silent, and the moon holds hardly light Above them through the sick and star-crossed night ; And of their hands through whom such holds lay waste,

And all their strengths dishevelled and defaced Fell ruinous, and were not from north to south : And of the might of Merlin's ancient mouth, The son of no man's loins, begot by doom In speechless sleep out of a spotless womb; For sleeping among graves where none had rest And ominous houses of dead bones unblest Among the grey grass rough as old rent hair And wicked herbage whitening like despair And blown upon with blasts of dolorous breath From gaunt rare gaps and hollow doors of death. A maid unspotted, senseless of the spell, Felt not about her breathe some thing of hell Whose child and hers was Merlin; and to him Great light from God gave sight of all things dim And wisdom of all wondrous things, to say What root should bear what fruit of night or day, And sovereign speech and counsel higher than man; Wherefore his youth like age was wise and wan, And his age sorrowful and fain to sleep; Yet should sleep never, neither laugh nor weep,

Till in some depth of deep sweet land or sea The heavenly hands of holier Nimue, That was the nurse of Launcelot, and most sweet Of all that move with magical soft feet Among us, being of lovelier blood and breath. Should shut him in with sleep as kind as death : For she could pass between the quick and dead : And of her love toward Pelleas, for whose head Love-wounded and world-wearied she had won A place beyond all pain in Avalon; And of the fire that wasted afterward The loveless eyes and bosom of Ettarde, In whose false love his faultless heart had burned; And now being rapt from her, her lost heart vearned To seek him, and passed hungering out of life: And after all the thunder-hours of strife That roared between King Claudas and King Ban How Nimue's mighty nursling waxed to man, And how from his first field such grace he got That all men's hearts bowed down to Launcelot, And how the high prince Galahault held him dear And led him even to love of Guenevere And to that kiss which made break forth as fire The laugh that was the flower of his desire, The laugh that lightened at her lips for bliss To win from Love so great a lover's kiss : And of the toil of Balen all his days To reap but thorns for fruit and tears for praise, Whose hap was evil as his heart was good, And all his works and ways by wold and wood

Led through much pain to one last labouring day When blood for tears washed grief with life away:

And of the kin of Arthur, and their might; The misborn head of Mordred, sad as night, With cold waste cheeks and eyes as keen as pain, And the close angry lips of Agravaine; And gracious Gawain, scattering words as flowers, The kindliest head of worldly paramours; And the fair hand of Gareth, found in fight Strong as a sea-beast's tushes and as white; And of the king's self, glorious yet and glad For all the toil and doubt of doom he had, Clothed with men's loves and full of kingly days.

Then Iseult said : "Let each knight have his praise And each good man good witness of his worth ; But when men laud the second name on earth, Whom would they praise to have no worldly peer Save him whose love makes glorious Guenevere?"

"Nay," Tristram said, "such man as he is none."

"What," said she, "there is none such under sup Of all the large earth's living? yet I deemed Men spake of one—but maybe men that dreamed, Fools and tongue-stricken, witless, babbler's breed— That for all high things was his peer indeed Save this one highest, to be so loved and love."

And Tristram : "Little wit had these thereof ; For there is none such in the world as this."

"Ay, upon land," quoth Iseult, "none such is, I doubt not, nor where fighting folk may be; But were there none such between sky and sea, The world's whole worth were poorer than I wist."

And Tristram took her flower-white hand and kissed,

Laughing; and through his fair face as in shame The light blood lightened. "Hear they no such name?" She said; and he, "If there be such a word, I wot the queen's poor harper hath not heard." Then, as the fuller-feathered hours grew long, He holp to speed their warm slow feet with song.

"Love, is it morning risen or night deceased That makes the mirth of this triumphant east? Is it bliss given or bitterness put by That makes most glad men's hearts at love's high feast 7 Grief smiles, joy weeps, that day should live and die. " Is it with soul's thirst or with body's drouth That summer yearns out sunward to the south, With all the flowers that when thy birth drew nigh Were molten in one rose to make thy mouth ? O love, what care though day should live and die? " Is the sun glad of all the love on earth. The spirit and sense and work of things and worth? Is the moon sad because the month must fly And bring her death that can but bring back birth? For all these things as day must live and die. " Love, is it day that makes thee thy delight Or thou that seest day made out of thy light? Love, as the sun and sea are thou and I, Sea without sun dark, sun without sea bright ; The sun is one though day should live and die. "O which is elder, night or light, who knows? And life or love, which first of these twain grows? For life is born of love to wail and cry, And love is born of life to heal his woes, And light of night, that day should live and die. "O sun of heaven above the worldly sea, O very love, what light is this of thee ! My sea of soul is deep as thou art high, But all thy light is shed through all of me,

As love's through love, while day shall live and die.

"Nay," said Iseult, "your song is hard to read."

"Ay?" said he: "or too light a song to heed, Too slight to follow, it may be? Who shall sing Of love but as a churl before a king If by love's worth men rate his worthiness?

Yet as the poor churl's worth to sing is less, Surely the more shall be the great king's grace To show for churlish love a kindlier face."

"No churl," she said, "but one in soothsayer's wise

Who tells but truths that help no more than lies.

I have heard men sing of love a simpler way

Than these wrought riddles made of night and day,

Like jewelled reins whereon the rhyme-bells hang." And Tristram smiled and changed his song and sang.

"The breath between my lips of lips not mine, Like spirit in sense that makes pure sense divine, Is as life in them from the living sky

That entering fills my heart with blood of thine And thee with me, while day shall live and die.

"Thy soul is shed into me with thy breath, And in my heart each heartbeat of thee saith

How in thy life the lifesprings of me lie,

Even one life to be gathered of one death

In me and thee, though day may live and die.

" Ah, who knows now if in my veins it be My blood that feels life sweet, or blood of thee, And this thine eyesight kindled in mine eye That shows me in thy flesh the soul of me,

For thine made mine, while day may live and die?

THE SAILING OF THE SWALLOW 33

"Ah, who knows yet if one be twain or one, And sunlight separable again from sun,

And I from thee with all my lifesprings dry, And thou from me with all thine heartbeats done, Dead separate souls while day shall live and die?

"I see my soul within thine eyes, and hear My spirit in all thy pulses thrill with fear, And in my lips the passion of thee sigh, And music of me made in mine own ear; Am I not thou while day shall live and die?

"Art thou not I as I thy love am thou? So let all things pass from us; we are now, For all that was and will be, who knows why? And all that is and is not, who knows how? Who knows? God knows why day should live and die."

And Iseult mused and spake no word, but sought Through all the hushed ways of her tongueless thought

What face or covered likeness of a face In what veiled hour or dream-determined place She seeing might take for love's face, and believe This was the spirit to whom all spirits cleave. For that sweet wonder of the twain made one And each one twain, incorporate sun with sun, Star with star molten, soul with soul imbued, And all the soul's works, all their multitude, Made one thought and one vision and one song, Love-this thing, this, laid hand on her so strong She could not choose but yearn till she should see. So went she musing down her thoughts ; but he, Sweet-hearted as a bird that takes the sun With clear strong eyes and feels the glad god run VOL. IV. D

Bright through his blood and wide rejoicing wings, And opens all himself to heaven and sings, Made her mind light and full of noble mirth With words and songs the gladdest grown on earth, Till she was blithe and high of heart as he. So swam the Swallow through the springing sea.

And while they sat at speech as at a feast, Came a light wind fast hardening forth of the east And blackening till its might had marred the skies ; And the sea thrilled as with heart-sundering sighs One after one drawn, with each breath it drew, And the green hardened into iron blue, And the soft light went out of all its face. Then Tristram girt him for an oarsman's place And took his oar and smote, and toiled with might In the east wind's full face and the strong sea's spite Labouring; and all the rowers rowed hard, but he More mightily than any wearier three. And Iseult watched him rowing with sinless eyes That loved him but in holy girlish wise For noble joy in his fair manliness And trust and tender wonder; none the less She thought if God had given her grace to be Man, and make war on danger of earth and sea, Even such a man she would be ; for his stroke Was mightiest as the mightier water broke, And in sheer measure like strong music drave Clean through the wet weight of the wallowing wave ;

And as a tune before a great king played

For triumph was the tune their strong strokes made,

And sped the ship through with smooth strife of oars

Over the mid sea's grey foam-paven floors,

For all the loud breach of the waves at will. So for an hour they fought the storm out still, And the shorn foam spun from the blades, and high The keel sprang from the wave-ridge, and the sky Glared at them for a breath's space through the rain;

Then the bows with a sharp shock plunged again Down, and the sea clashed on them, and so rose The bright stem like one panting from swift blows, And as a swimmer's joyous beaten head Rears itself laughing, so in that sharp stead The light ship lifted her long quivering bows As might the man his buffeted strong brows Out of the wave-breach; for with one stroke yet Went all men's oars together, strongly set As to loud music, and with hearts uplift They mote their strong way through the drench and drift :

Till the keen hour had chafed itself to death And the east wind fell fitfully, breath by breath, Tired ; and across the thin and slackening rain Sprang the face southward of the sun again. Then all they rested and were eased at heart ; And Iseult rose up where she sat apart, And with her sweet soul deepening her deep eyes Cast the furs from her and subtle embroideries That wrapped her from the storming rain and spray,

And shining like all April in one day,

Hair, face, and throat dashed with the straying showers,

She stood the first of all the whole world's flowers, And laughed on Tristram with her eyes, and said, "I too have heart then, I was not afraid." And answering some light courteous word of grace He saw her clear face lighten on his face Unwittingly, with unenamoured eyes. For the last time. A live man in such wise Looks in the deadly face of his fixed hour And laughs with lips wherein he hath no power To keep the life yet some five minutes' space. So Tristram looked on Iseult face to face And knew not, and she knew not. The last time— The last that should be told in any rhyme Heard anywhere on mouths of singing men That ever should sing praise of them again ; The last that peace should touch them, breast to breast, r

The last that sorrow far from them should sit, This last was with them, and they knew not it.

For Tristram being athirst with toil now spake, Saying, "Iseult, for all dear love's labour's sake Give me to drink, and give me for a pledge The touch of four lips on the beaker's edge." And Iseult sought and would not wake Brangwain Who slept as one half dead with fear and pain, Being tender-natured ; so with hushed light feet Went Iseult round her, with soft looks and sweet Pitying her pain ; so sweet a spirited thing She was, and daughter of a kindly king. And spying what strange bright secret charge was kept

Fast in that maid's white bosom while she slept, She sought and drew the gold cup forth and smiled Marvelling, with such light wonder as a child That hears of glad sad life in magic lands; And bare it back to Tristram with pure hands Holding the love-draught that should be for flame To burn out of them fear and faith and shame, And lighten all their life up in men's sight, And make them sad for ever. Then the knight Bowed toward her and craved whence had she this strange thing

That might be spoil of some dim Asian king, By starlight stolen from some waste place of sands, And a maid bore it here in harmless hands. And Iseult, laughing—" Other lords that be Feast, and their men feast after them ; but we, Our men must keep the best wine back to feast Till they be full and we of all men least Feed after them and fain to fare so well : So with mine handmaid and your squire it fell That hid this bright thing from us in a wile :" And with light lips yet full of their swift smile, And hands that wist not though they dug a grave,

Undid the hasps of gold, and drank, and gave, And he drank after, a deep glad kingly draught : And all their life changed in them, for they quaffed Death ; if it be death so to drink, and fare

As men who change and are what these twain were.

And shuddering with eyes full of fear and fire And heart-stung with a serpentine desire He turned and saw the terror in her eyes That yearned upon him shining in such wise As a star midway in the midnight fixed.

Their Galahault was the cup, and she that mixed;

Nor other hand there needed, nor sweet speech To lure their lips together; each on each Hung with strange eyes and hovered as a bird Wounded, and each mouth trembled for a word; Their heads neared, and their hands were drawn in one,

And they saw dark, though still the unsunken sun Far through fine rain shot fire into the south ; And their four lips became one burning mouth. 39

THE QUEEN'S PLEASANCE

II

Out of the night arose the second day, And saw the ship's bows break the shoreward spray. As the sun's boat of gold and fire began To sail the sea of heaven unsailed of man, And the soft waves of sacred air to break Round the prow launched into the morning's lake, They saw the sign of their sea-travel done.

Ah, was not something seen of yester-sun, When the sweet light that lightened all the skies Saw nothing fairer than one maiden's eyes, That whatsoever in all time's years may be To-day's sun nor to-morrow's sun shall see ? Not while she lives, not when she comes to die, Shall she look sunward with that sinless eye.

Yet fairer now than song may show them stand Tristram and Iseult, hand in amorous hand, Soul-satisfied, their eyes made great and bright With all the love of all the livelong night; With all its hours yet singing in their ears No mortal music made of thoughts and tears, But such a song, past conscience of man's thought, As hearing he grows god and knows it not. Nought else they saw nor heard but what the night

Had left for seal upon their sense and sight, Sound of past pulses beating, fire of amorous light. Enough, and overmuch, and never yet Enough, though love still hungering feed and fret, To fill the cup of night which dawn must overset. For still their eyes were dimmer than with tears And dizzier from diviner sounds their ears Than though from choral thunders of the quiring spheres.

They heard not how the landward waters rang, Nor saw where high into the morning sprang, Riven from the shore and bastioned with the sea, Toward summits where the north wind's nest might be,

A wave-walled palace with its eastern gate Full of the sunrise now and wide at wait, And on the mighty-moulded stairs that clomb Sheer from the fierce lip of the lapping foam The knights of Mark that stood before the wall. So with loud joy and storm of festival They brought the bride in up the towery way That rose against the rising front of day, Stair based on stair, between the rocks unhewn, To those strange halls wherethrough the tidal tune Rang loud or lower from soft or strengthening sea, Tower shouldering tower, to windward and to lee, With change of floors and stories, flight on flight, That clomb and curled up to the crowning height Whence men might see wide east and west in one And on one sea waned moon and mounting sun. And severed from the sea-rock's base, where stand Some worn walls yet they saw the broken strand,

The beachless cliff that in the sheer sea dips, The sleepless shore inexorable to ships, And the straight causeway's bare gaunt spine between The sea-spanned walls and naked mainland's green.

On the mid stairs, between the light and dark, Before the main tower's portal stood King Mark, Crowned : and his face was as the face of one Long time athirst and hungering for the sun In barren thrall of bitter bonds, who now Thinks here to feel its blessing on his brow. A swart lean man, but kinglike, still of guise, With black streaked beard and cold unquiet eyes, Close-mouthed, gaunt-cheeked, wan as a morning moon,

Though hardly time on his worn hair had strewn The thin first ashes from a sparing hand : Yet little fire there burnt upon the brand, And way-worn seemed he with life's wayfaring. So between shade and sunlight stood the king, And his face changed nor yearned not toward his bride;

But fixed between mild hope and patient pride Abode what gift of rare or lesser worth This day might bring to all his days on earth. But at the glory of her when she came His heart endured not : very fear and shame Smote him, to take her by the hand and kiss, Till both were molten in the burning bliss, And with a thin flame flushing his cold face He led her silent to the bridal place. There were they wed and hallowed of the priest ; And all the loud time of the marriage feast One thought within three hearts was as a fire, Where craft and faith took counsel with desire. For when the feast had made a glorious end They gave the new queen for her maids to tend At dawn of bride-night, and thereafter bring With marriage music to the bridegroom king. Then by device of craft between them laid To him went Brangwain delicately, and prayed That this thing even for love's sake might not be, But without sound or light or eye to see She might come in to bride-bed : and he laughed, As one that wist not well of wise love's craft, And bade all bridal things be as she would. Yet of his gentleness he gat not good ; For clothed and covered with the nuptial dark Soft like a bride came Brangwain to King Mark, And to the queen came Tristram; and the night Fled, and ere danger of detective light From the king sleeping Brangwain slid away, And where had lain her handmaid Iseult lay. And the king waking saw beside his head That face vet passion-coloured, amorous red From lips not his, and all that strange hair shed Across the tissued pillows, fold on fold, Innumerable, incomparable, all gold, To fire men's eyes with wonder, and with love Men's hearts ; so shone its flowering crown above The brows enwound with that imperial wreath, And framed with fragrant radiance round the facebeneath.

And the king marvelled, seeing with sudden start Her very glory, and said out of his heart; "What have I done of good for God to bless That all this he should give me, tress on tress, All this great wealth and wondrous? Was it this That in mine arms I had all night to kiss,

And mix with me this beauty? this that seems

More fair than heaven doth in some tired saint's dreams,

Being part of that same heaven? yea, more, for he, Though loved of God so, yet but seems to see, But to me sinful such great grace is given That in mine hands I hold this part of heaven, Not to mine eyes lent merely. Doth God make Such things so godlike for man's mortal sake? Have I not sinned, that in this fleshly life Have made of her a mere man's very wife?"

So the king mused and murmured; and she heard

The faint sound trembling of each breathless word, And laughed into the covering of her hair.

And many a day for many a month as fair Slid over them like music; and as bright Burned with love's offerings many a secret night. And many a dawn to many a fiery noon Blew prelude, when the horn's heart-kindling tune Lit the live woods with sovereign sound of mirth Before the mightiest huntsman hailed on earth Lord of its lordliest pleasure, where he rode Hard by her rein whose peerless presence glowed Not as that white queen's of the virgin hunt Once, whose crown-crescent braves the night-wind's brunt,

But with the sun for frontlet of a queenlier front. For where the flashing of her face was turned As lightning was the fiery light that burned From eyes and brows enkindled more with speed And rapture of the rushing of her steed Than once with only beauty ; and her mouth Was as a rose athirst that pants for drouth Even while it laughs for pleasure of desire, And all her heart was as a leaping fire. Yet once more joy they took of woodland ways Than came of all those flushed and fiery days When the loud air was mad with life and sound, Through many a dense green mile, of horn and hound Before the king's hunt going along the wind, And ere the timely leaves were changed or thinned, Even in mid maze of summer. For the knight Forth was once ridden toward some frontier fight Against the lewd folk of the Christless lands That warred with wild and intermittent hands Against the king's north border; and there came A knight unchristened yet of unknown name, Swart Palamede, upon a secret quest, To high Tintagel, and abode as guest In likeness of a minstrel with the king. Nor was there man could sound so sweet a string, Save Tristram only, of all held best on earth. And one loud eve, being full of wine and mirth, Ere sunset left the walls and waters dark. To that strange minstrel strongly swore King Mark, By all that makes a knight's faith firm and strong, That he for guerdon of his harp and song Might crave and have his liking. Straight there came Up the swart cheek a flash of swarthier flame, And the deep eyes fulfilled of glittering night Laughed out in lightnings of triumphant light As the grim harper spake : "O king, I crave No gift of man that king may give to slave, But this thy crowned queen only, this thy wife, Whom yet unseen I loved, and set my life On this poor chance to compass, even as here, Being fairer famed than all save Guenevere."

Then as the noise of seaward storm that mocks With roaring laughter from reverberate rocks The cry from ships near shipwreck, harsh and high Rose all the wrath and wonder in one cry Through all the long roof's hollow depth and length That hearts of strong men kindled in their strength May speak in laughter lion-like, and cease, Being wearied : only two men held their peace And each glared hard on other : but King Mark Spake first of these : "Man, though thy craft be dark. And thy mind evil that begat this thing, Yet stands the word once plighted of a king Fast : and albeit less evil it were for me To give my life up than my wife, or be A landless man crowned only with a curse, Yet this in God's and all men's sight were worse, To live soul-shamed, a man of broken troth, Abhorred of men as I abhor mine oath Which yet I may forswear not." And he bowed His head, and wept : and all men wept aloud, Save one, that heard him weeping : but the queen Wept not : and statelier yet than eyes had seen That ever looked upon her queenly state She rose, and in her eyes her heart was great And full of wrath seen manifest and scorn More strong than anguish to go thence forlorn Of all men's comfort and her natural right. And they went forth into the dawn of night. Long by wild ways and clouded light they rode, Silent : and fear less keen at heart abode With Iseult than with Palamede : for awe Constrained him, and the might of love's high law, That can make lewd men loyal; and his heart Yearned on her, if perchance with amorous art

And soothfast skill of very love he might For courtesy find favour in her sight And comfort of her mercies : for he wist More grace might come of that sweet mouth unkissed Than joy for violence done it, that should make His name abhorred for shame's disloval sake. And in the stormy starlight clouds were thinned And thickened by short gusts of changing wind That panted like a sick man's fitful breath : And like a moan of lions hurt to death Came the sea's hollow noise along the night. But ere its gloom from aught but foam had light They halted, being aweary: and the knight As reverently forbore her where she lay As one that watched his sister's sleep till day. Nor durst he kiss or touch her hand or hair For love and shamefast pity, seeing how fair She slept, and fenceless from the fitful air. And shame at heart stung nigh to death desire, But grief at heart burned in him like a fire For hers and his own sorrowing sake, that had Such grace for guerdon as makes glad men sad, To have their will and want it. And the day Sprang : and afar along the wild waste way They heard the pulse and press of hurrying horse.

hoofs play:

And like the rushing of a ravenous flame Whose wings make tempest of the darkness, came Upon them headlong as in thunder borne Forth of the darkness of the labouring morn Tristram : and up forthright upon his steed Leapt, as one blithe of battle, Palamede, And mightily with shock of horse and man They lashed together : and fair that fight began

46

As fair came up that sunrise : to and fro, With knees nigh staggered and stout heads bent low From each quick shock of spears on either side, Reeled the strong steeds heavily, haggard-eyed And heartened high with passion of their pride As sheer the stout spears shocked again, and flew Sharp-splintering : then, his sword as each knight drew,

They flashed and foined full royally, so long That but to see so fair a strife and strong A man might well have given out of his life One year's void space forlorn of love or strife. As when a bright north-easter, great of heart, Scattering the strengths of squadrons, hurls apart Ship from ship labouring violently, in such toil As earns but ruin—with even so strong recoil Back were the steeds hurled from the spear-shock,

fain

And foiled of triumph : then with tightened rein And stroke of spur, inveterate, either knight Bore in again upon his foe with might, Heart-hungry for the hot-mouthed feast of fight And all athirst of mastery : but full soon The jarring notes of that tempestuous tune Fell, and its mighty music made of hands Contending, clamorous through the loud waste lands, Broke at once off ; and shattered from his steed Fell, as a mainmast ruining, Palamede, Stunned : and those lovers left him where he lay, And lightly through green lawns they rode away.

There was a bower beyond man's eye more fair Than ever summer dews and sunniest air Fed full with rest and radiance till the boughs Had wrought a roof as for a holier house

Than aught save love might breathe in ; fairer far Than keeps the sweet light back of moon and star From high kings' chambers : there might love and sleep Divide for joy the darkling hours, and keep With amorous alternation of sweet strife The soft and secret ways of death and life Made smooth for pleasure's feet to rest and run Even from the moondawn to the kindling sun, Made bright for passion's feet to run and rest Between the midnight's and the morning's breast, Where hardly though her happy head lie down It may forget the hour that wove its crown : Where hardly though her joyous limbs be laid They may forget the mirth that midnight made. And thither, ere sweet night had slain sweet day, Iseult and Tristram took their wandering way, And rested, and refreshed their hearts with cheer In hunters' fashion of the woods ; and here More sweet it seemed, while this might be, to dwell And take of all world's weariness farewell Than reign of all world's lordship queen and king. Nor here would time for three moons' changes bring Sorrow nor thought of sorrow; but sweet earth Fostered them like her babes of eldest birth, Reared warm in pathless woods and cherished well. And the sun sprang above the sea and fell, And the stars rose and sank upon the sea ; And outlaw-like, in forest wise and free, The rising and the setting of their lights Found those twain dwelling all those days and nights. And under change of sun and star and moon Flourished and fell the chaplets woven of June, And fair through fervours of the deepening sky Panted and passed the hours that lit July,

And each day blessed them out of heaven above, And each night crowned them with the crown of love. Nor till the might of August overhead Weighed on the world was yet one roseleaf shed Of all their joy's warm coronal, nor aught Touched them in passing ever with a thought That ever this might end on any day Or any night not love them where they lay; But like a babbling tale of barren breath Seemed all report and rumour held of death, And a false bruit the legend tear-impearled That such a thing as change was in the world. And each bright song upon his lips that came, Mocking the powers of change and death by name, Blasphemed their bitter godhead, and defied Time, though clothed round with ruin as kings with pride,

To blot the glad life out of love : and she Drank lightly deep of his philosophy In that warm wine of amorous words which is Sweet with all truths of all philosophies. For well he wist all subtle ways of song, And in his soul the secret eye was strong That burns in meditation, till bright words Break flamelike forth as notes from fledgeling birds That feel the soul speak through them of the spring. So fared they night and day as queen and king Crowned of a kingdom wide as day and night. Nor ever cloudlet swept or swam in sight Across the darkling depths of their delight Whose stars no skill might number, nor man's art Sound the deep stories of its heavenly heart. Till, even for wonder that such life should live, Desires and dreams of what death's self might give VOL. IV. E

Would touch with tears and laughter and wild speech The lips and eyes of passion, fain to reach, Beyond all bourne of time or trembling sense, The verge of love's last possible eminence. Out of the heaven that storm nor shadow mars, Deep from the starry depth beyond the stars, A yearning ardour without scope or name Fell on them, and the bright night's breath of flame Shot fire into their kisses; and like fire The lit dews lightened on the leaves, as higher Night's heart beat on toward midnight. Far and fain Somewhiles the soft rush of rejoicing rain Solaced the darkness, and from steep to steep Of heaven they saw the sweet sheet lightning leap And laugh its heart out in a thousand smiles, When the clear sea for miles on glimmering miles Burned as though dawn were strewn abroad astray, Or, showering out of heaven, all heaven's array Had paven instead the waters : fain and far Somewhiles the burning love of star for star Spake words that love might wellnigh seem to hear In such deep hours as turn delight to fear Sweet as delight's self ever. So they lay Tranced once, nor watched along the fiery bay The shine of summer darkness palpitate and play. She had nor sight nor voice ; her swooning eyes Knew not if night or light were in the skies ; Across her beauty sheer the moondawn shed Its light as on a thing as white and dead ; Only with stress of soft fierce hands she prest Between the throbbing blossoms of her breast His ardent face, and through his hair her breath Went quivering as when life is hard on death; And with strong trembling fingers she strained fast His head into her bosom ; till at last.

Satiate with sweetness of that burning bed, His eyes afire with tears, he raised his head And laughed into her lips; and all his heart Filled hers; then face from face fell, and apart Each hung on each with panting lips, and felt Sense into sense and spirit in spirit melt.

"Hast thou no sword? I would not live till day, O love, this night and we must pass away, It must die soon, and let not us die late."

"Take then my sword and slay me; nay, but wait Till day be risen; what, wouldst thou think to die Before the light take hold upon the sky?"

"Yea, love; for how shall we have twice, being twain,

This very night of love's most rapturous reign? Live thou and have thy day, and year by year Be great, but what shall I be? Slay me here; Let me die not when love lies dead, but now Strike through my heart: nay, sweet, what heart hast thou?

Is it so much I ask thee, and spend my breath In asking? nay, thou knowest it is but death. Hadst thou true heart to love me, thou wouldst give This : but for hate's sake thou will let me live."

Here he caught up her lips with his, and made The wild prayer silent in her heart that prayed, And strained her to him till all her faint breath sank

And her bright light limbs palpitated and shrank And rose and fluctuated as flowers in rain

That bends them and they tremble and rise again

And heave and straighten and quiver all through with bliss

And turn afresh their mouths up for a kiss,

Amorous, athirst of that sweet influent love; So, hungering towards his hovering lips above, Her red-rose mouth yearned silent, and her eyes Closed, and flashed after, as through June's darkest skies

The divine heartbeats of the deep live light Make open and shut the gates of the outer night.

Long lay they still, subdued with love, nor knew If cloud or light changed colour as it grew, If star or moon beheld them ; if above The heaven of night waxed fiery with their love, Or earth beneath were moved at heart and root To burn as they, to burn and bring forth fruit Unseasonable for love's sake ; if tall trees Bowed, and close flowers yearned open, and the breeze

Failed and fell silent as a flame that fails : And all that hour unheard the nightingales Clamoured, and all the woodland soul was stirred, And depth and height were one great song unheard, As though the world caught music and took fire From the instant heart alone of their desire.

So sped their night of nights between them : so, For all fears past and shadows, shine and snow, That one pure hour all-golden where they lay Made their life perfect and their darkness day. And warmer waved its harvest yet to reap, Till in the lovely fight of love and sleep At length had sleep the mastery ; and the dark Was lit with soft live gleams they might not mark, Fleet butterflies, each like a dead flower's ghost, White, blue, and sere leaf-coloured ; but the most White as the sparkle of snow-flowers in the sun Ere with his breath they lie at noon undone

Whose kiss devours their tender beauty, and leaves But raindrops on the grass and sere thin leaves That were engraven with traceries of the snow Flowerwise ere any flower of earth's would blow; So swift they sprang and sank, so sweet and light They swam the deep dim breathless air of night. Now on her rose-white amorous breast half bare, Now on her slumberous love-dishevelled hair. The white wings lit and vanished, and afresh Lit soft as snow lights on her snow-soft flesh, On hand or throat or shoulder; and she stirred Sleeping, and spake some tremulous bright word, And laughed upon some dream too sweet for truth, Yet not so sweet as very love and youth That there had charmed her eyes to sleep at last. Nor woke they till the perfect night was past, And the soft sea thrilled with blind hope of light. But ere the dusk had well the sun in sight He turned and kissed her eyes awake and said, Seeing earth and water neither quick nor dead And twilight hungering toward the day to be, "As the dawn loves the sunlight I love thee." And even as rays with cloudlets in the skies Confused in brief love's bright contentious wise, Sleep strove with sense rekindling in her eyes : And as the flush of birth scarce overcame The pale pure pearl of unborn light with flame Soft as may touch the rose's heart with shame To break not all reluctant out of bud, Stole up her sleeping cheek her waking blood ; And with the lovely laugh of love that takes The whole soul prisoner ere the whole sense wakes, Her lips for love's sake bade love's will be done. And all the sea lay subject to the sun.

TRISTRAM IN BRITTANY

III

" 'As the dawn loves the sunlight I love tnee: As men that shall be swallowed of the sea Love the sea's lovely beauty; as the night That wanes before it loves the young sweet light, And dies of loving ; as the worn-out noon Loves twilight, and as twilight loves the moon That on its grave a silver seal shall set-We have loved and slain each other, and love yet. Slain ; for we live not surely, being in twain : In her I lived, and in me she is slain. Who loved me that I brought her to her doom, Who loved her that her love might be my tomb. As all the streams on earth and all fresh springs And sweetest waters, every brook that sings, Each fountain where the young year dips its wings First, and the first-fledged branches of it wave, Even with one heart's love seek one bitter grave. From hills that first see bared the morning's breast And heights the sun last yearns to from the west, All tend but toward the sea, all born most high Strive downward, passing all things joyous by, Seek to it and cast their lives in it and die.

So strive all lives for death which all lives win ; So sought her soul to my soul, and therein Was poured and perished : O my love, and mine Sought to thee and died of thee and died as thine. As the dawn loves the sunlight that must cease Ere dawn again may rise and pass in peace; Must die that she being dead may live again, To be by his new rising nearly slain. So rolls the great wheel of the great world round, And no change in it and no fault is found, And no true life of perdurable breath, And surely no irrevocable death. Day after day night comes that day may break, And day comes back for night's reiterate sake. Each into each dies, each of each is born: Day past is night, shall night past not be morn? Out of this moonless and faint-hearted night That love yet lives in, shall there not be light? Light strong as love, that love may live in yet? Alas, but how shall foolish hope forget How all these loving things that kill and die Meet not but for a breath's space and pass by? Night is kissed once of dawn and dies, and day But touches twilight and is rapt away. So may my love and her love meet once more, And meeting be divided as of yore. Yea, surely as the day-star loves the sun And when he hath risen is utterly undone, So is my love of her and hers of me-And its most sweetness bitter as the sea. Would God yet dawn might see the sun and die !"

Three years had looked on earth and passed it by Since Tristram looked on Iseult, when he stood So communing with dreams of evil and good, 56

And let all sad thoughts through his spirit sweep As leaves through air or tears through eyes that weep Or snowflakes through dark weather : and his soul, That had seen all those sightless seasons roll One after one, wave over weary wave, Was in him as a corpse is in its grave. Yet, for his heart was mighty, and his might Through all the world as a great sound and light, The mood was rare upon him ; save that here In the low sundawn of the lightening year With all last year's toil and its triumph done He could not choose but yearn for that set sun Which at this season saw the firstborn kiss That made his lady's mouth one fire with his. Yet his great heart being greater than his grief Kept all the summer of his strength in leaf And all the rose of his sweet spirit in flower; Still his soul fed upon the sovereign hour That had been or that should be; and once more He looked through drifted sea and drifting shore That crumbled in the wave-breach, and again Spake sad and deep within himself : "What pain Should make a man's soul wholly break and die, Sapped as weak sand by water? How shall I Be less than all less things are that endure And strive and yield when time is? Nay, full sure All these and we are parts of one same end; And if through fire or water we twain tend To that sure life where both must be made one. If one we be, what matter? Thou, O sun, The face of God, if God thou be not—nay, What but God should I think thee, what should say, Seeing thee rerisen, but very God ?-should I, I fool, rebuke thee sovereign in thy sky,

The clouds dead round thee and the air alive, The winds that lighten and the waves that strive Toward this shore as to that beneath thy breath, Because in me my thoughts bear all towards death i O sun, that when we are dead wilt rise as bright, Air deepening up toward heaven, and nameless light, And heaven immeasurable, and faint clouds blown Between us and the lowest aerial zone And each least skirt of their imperial state— Forgive us that we held ourselves so great ! What should I do to curse you? I indeed Am a thing meaner than this least wild weed That my foot bruises and I know not—yet Would not be mean enough for worms to fret Before their time and mine was.

"Ah, and ye Light washing weeds, blind waifs of dull blind sea, Do ye so thirst and hunger and aspire, Are ye so moved with such long strong desire In the ebb and flow of your sad life, and strive Still toward some end ye shall not see alive— But at high noon ye know it by light and heat Some half-hour, till ye feel the fresh tide beat Up round you, and at night's most bitter noon The ripples leave you naked to the moon? And this dim dusty heather that I tread, These half-born blossoms, born at once and dead, Sere brown as funeral cloths, and purple as pall, What if some life and grief be in them all ?

"Ay, what of these? but, O strong sun! O sea! I bid not you, divine things! comfort me, I stand not up to match you in your sight— Who hath said ye have mercy toward us, ye who have might? And though ye had mercy, I think I would not pray That ye should change your counsel or your way To make our life less bitter : if such power Be given the stars on one deciduous hour, And such might be in planets to destroy Grief and rebuild, and break and build up joy, What man would stretch forth hand on them to make-Fate mutable, God foolish, for his sake? For if in life or death be aught of trust, And if some unseen just God or unjust Put soul into the body of natural things And in time's pauseless feet and worldwide wings Some spirit of impulse and some sense of will That steers them through the seas of good and ill To some incognizable and actual end, Be it just or unjust, foe to man or friend, How should we make the stable spirit to swerve, How teach the strong soul of the world to serve, The imperious will in time and sense in space That gives man life turn back to give man place-The conscious law lose conscience of its way, The rule and reason fail from night and day, The streams flow back toward whence the springsbegan,

That less of thirst might sear the lips of man? Let that which is be, and sure strengths stand sure, And evil or good and death or life endure, Not alterable and rootless, but indeed A very stem born of a very seed That brings forth fruit in season : how should this Die that was sown, and that not be which is, And the old fruit change that came of the ancientroot,

And he that planted bid it not bear fruit,

And he that watered smite his vine with drouth Because its grapes are bitter in our mouth, And he that kindled quench the sun with night Because its beams are fire against our sight, And he that tuned untune the sounding spheres Because their song is thunder in our ears? How should the skies change and the stars, and time

Break the large concord of the years that chime, Answering, as wave to wave beneath the moon

That draws them shoreward, mar the whole tide's tune

For the instant foam's sake on one turning wave-For man's sake that is grass upon a grave? How should the law that knows not soon or late, For whom no time nor space is—how should fate, That is not good nor evil, wise nor mad. Nor just nor unjust, neither glad nor sad-How should the one thing that hath being, the one That moves not as the stars move or the sun Or any shadow or shape that lives or dies In likeness of dead earth or living skies, But its own darkness and its proper light Clothe it with other names than day or night, And its own soul of strength and spirit of breath. Feed it with other powers than life or death-How should it turn from its great way to give Man that must die a clearer space to live? Why should the waters of the sea be cleft, The hills be molten to his right and left. That he from deep to deep might pass dry-shod, Or look between the viewless heights on God? Hath he such eyes as, when the shadows flee, The sun looks out with to salute the sea?

Is his hand bounteous as the morning's hand? Or where the night stands hath he feet to stand? Will the storm cry not when he bids it cease ? Is it his voice that saith to the east wind, Peace? Is his breath mightier than the west wind's breath? Doth h's heart know the things of life and death? Can his face bring forth sunshine and give rain, Or his weak will that dies and lives again Make one thing certain or bind one thing fast, That as he willed it shall be at the last? How should the storms of heaven and kindled lights And all the depths of things and topless heights And air and earth and fire and water change Their likeness, and the natural world grow strange, And all the limits of their life undone Lose count of time and conscience of the sun. And that fall under which was fixed above, That man might have a larger hour for love?"

So musing with close lips and lifted eyes That smiled with self-contempt to live so wise, With silent heart so hungry now so long, So late grown clear, so miserably made strong, About the wolds a banished man he went, The brown wolds bare and sad as banishment, By wastes of fruitless flowerage, and grey downs That felt the sea-wind shake their wild-flower crowns

As though fierce hands would pluck from some grey head

The spoils of majesty despised and dead, And fill with crying and comfortless strange sound Their hollow sides and heights of herbless ground. Yet as he went fresh courage on him came, Till dawn rose too within him as a flame;

The heart of the ancient hills and his were one : The winds took counsel with him, and the sun Spake comfort ; in his ears the shout of birds Was as the sound of clear sweet-spirited words, The noise of streams as laughter from above Of the old wild lands, and as a cry of love Spring's trumpet-blast blown over moor and lea: The skies were red as love is, and the sea Was as the floor of heaven for love to tread. So went he as with light about his head, And in the joyous travail of the year Grew April-hearted; since nor grief nor fear Can master so a young man's blood so long That it shall move not to the mounting song Of that sweet hour when earth replumes her wings And with fair face and heart set heavenward sings As an awakened angel unaware That feels his sleep fall from him, and his hair By some new breath of wind and music stirred, Till like the sole song of one heavenly bird Sounds all the singing of the host of heaven, And all the glories of the sovereign Seven Are as one face of one incorporate light. And as that host of singers in God's sight Might draw toward one that slumbered, and arouse The lips requickened and rekindling brows, So seemed the earthly host of all things born In sight of spring and eyeshot of the morn, All births of land or waifs of wind and sea. To draw toward him that sorrowed, and set free From presage and remembrance of all pains The life that leapt and lightened in his veins. So with no sense abashed nor sunless look, But with exalted eyes and heart, he took

His part of sun or storm-wind, and was glad, For all things lost, of these good things he had.

And the spring loved him surely, being from birth One made out of the better part of earth, A man born as at sunrise; one that saw Not without reverence and sweet sense of awe But wholly without fear or fitful breath The face of life watched by the face of death; And living took his fill of rest and strife, Of love and change, and fruit and seed of life, And when his time to live in light was done With unbent head would pass out of the sun : A spirit as morning, fair and clear and strong, Whose thought and work were as one harp and song

Heard through the world as in a strange king's hall Some great guest's voice that sings of festival. So seemed all things to love him, and his heart In all their joy of life to take such part, That with the live earth and the living sea He was as one that communed mutually With naked heart to heart of friend to friend : And the star deepening at the sunset's end, And the moon fallen before the gate of day As one sore wearied with vain length of way, And the winds wandering, and the streams and skies,

As faces of his fellows in his eyes. Nor lacked there love where he was evermore Of man and woman, friend of sea or shore, Not measurable with weight of graven gold, Free as the sun's gift of the world to hold Given each day back to man's reconquering sight That loses but its lordship for a night. And now that after many a season spent In barren ways and works of banishment, Foil of strange fights and many a fruitless field, Ventures of quest and vigils under shield, He came back to the strait of sundering sea That parts green Cornwall from grey Brittany, Where dwelt the high king's daughter of the lands, Iseult, named alway from her fair white hands, She looked on him and loved him ; but being young Made shamefastness a seal upon her tongue, And on her heart, that none might hear its cry, Set the sweet signet of humility.

Yet when he came a stranger in her sight, A banished man and weary, no such knight As when the Swallow dipped her bows in foam Steered singing that imperial Iseult home, This maiden with her sinless sixteen years Full of sweet thoughts and hopes that played at fears

Cast her eyes on him but in courteous wise, And lo, the man's face burned upon her eyes As though she had turned them on the naked sun : And through her limbs she felt sweet passion run As fire that flowed down from her face, and beat Soft through stirred veins on even to her hands and feet

As all her body were one heart on flame, Athrob with love and wonder and sweet shame. And when he spake there sounded in her ears As 'twere a song out of the graves of years Heard, and again forgotten, and again Remembered with a rapturous pulse of pain. But as the maiden mountain snow sublime Takes the first sense of April's trembling time Soft on a brow that burns not though it blush To feel the sunrise hardly half aflush, So took her soul the sense of change, nor thought That more than maiden love was more than nought. Her eyes went hardly after him, her cheek Grew scarce a goodlier flower to hear him speak, Her bright mouth no more trembled than a rose May for the least wind's breathless sake that blows Too soft to sue save for a sister's kiss, And if she sighed in sleep she knew not this. Yet in her heart hovered the thoughts of things Past, that with lighter or with heavier wings Beat round about her memory, till it burned With grief that brightened and with hope that yearned, Seeing him so great and sad, nor knowing what

Seeing him so great and sad, nor knowing what fate

Had bowed and crowned a head so sad and great. Nor might she guess but little, first or last, Though all her heart so hung upon his past, Of what so bowed him for what sorrow's sake : For scarce of aught at any time he spake That from his own land oversea had sent His lordly life to barren banishment. Yet still or soft or keen remembrance clung Close round her of the least word from his tongue That fell by chance of courtesy, to greet With grace of tender thanks her pity, sweet As running straems to men's way-wearied feet. And when between strange words her name would fall,

Suddenly straightway to that lure's recall Back would his heart bound as the falconer's bird, And tremble and bow down before the word.

'Iseult "—and all the cloudlike world grew flame, And all his heart flashed lightning at her name;
'' Iseult "—and all the wan waste weary skies Shone as his queen's own love-enkindled eyes. And seeing the bright blood in his face leap up As red wine mantling in a royal cup To hear the sudden sweetness of the sound Ring, but ere well his heart had time to bound His cheek would change, and grief bow down his head.

"Haply," the girl's heart, though she spake not, said,

"This name of mine was worn of one long dead, Some sister that he loved :" and therewithal Would pity bring her heart more deep in thrall. But once, when winds about the world made mirth. And March held revel hard on April's birth Till air and sea were jubilant as earth, Delight and doubt in sense and soul began, And yearning of the maiden toward the man, Harping on high before her : for his word Was fire that kindled in her heart that heard, And alway through the rhymes reverberate came The virginal soft burden of her name. And ere the full song failed upon her ear Joy strove within her till it cast out fear, And all her heart was as his harp, and rang Swift music, made of hope whose birthnote sprang Bright in the blood that kindled as he sang.

> "Stars know not how we call them, nor may flowers Know by what happy name the hovering hours Baptize their new-born heads with dew and flame : And Love, adored of all time as of ours, Iseult, knew nought for ages of his name.

VOL. IV.

"With many tongues men called on him, but he Wist not which word of all might worthiest be To sound for ever in his ear the same, Till heart of man might hear and soul might see, Iseult, the radiance ringing from thy name.

"By many names men called him, as the night By many a name calls many a starry light, Her several sovereigns of dividual fame;

But day by one name only calls aright, Iseult, the sun that bids men praise his name.

"In many a name of man his name soared high And song shone round it soaring, till the sky Rang rapture, and the world's fast-founded frame Trembled with sense of triumph, even as I, Iseult, with sense of worship at thy name.

"In many a name of woman smiled his power Incarnate, as all summer in a flower,

Till winter bring forgetfulness or shame : But thine, the keystone of his topless tower, Iseult, is one with Love's own lordliest name.

"Iseult my love, Iseult my queen twice crowned, In thee my death, in thee my life lies bound : Names are there yet that all men's hearts acclaim, But Love's own heart rings answer to the sound, Iseult, that bids it bow before thy name."

There ceased his voice yearning upon the word, Struck with strong passion dumb: but she that heard Quailed to the heart, and trembled ere her eyes Durst let the loving light within them rise,

And yearn on his for answer : yet at last,

Albeit not all her fear was overpast,

Hope, kindling even the frost of fear apace With sweet fleet bioom and breath of gradual grace, Flushed in the changing roses of her face. And ere the strife took truce of white with red, Or joy for soft shame's sake durst lift up head, Something she would and would not fain have said, And wist not what the fluttering word would be, But rose and reached forth to him her hand : and he, Heart-stricken, bowed his head and dropped his knee, And on her fragrant hand his lips were fire ; And their two hearts were as one trembling lyre Touched by the keen wind's kiss with brief desire And music shuddering at its own delight. So dawned the moonrise of their marriage night.

THE MAIDEN MARRIAGE

TV

SPRING watched her last moon burn and fade with May

While the days deepened toward a bridal day. And on her snowbright hand the ring was set While in the maiden's ear the song's word yet Hovered, that hailed as love's own queen by name Iseult : and in her heart the word was flame ; A pulse of light, a breath of tender fire, Too dear for doubt, too driftless for desire. Between her father's hand and brother's led From hall to shrine, from shrine to marriage-bed, She saw not how by hap at home-coming Fell from her new lord's hand a royal ring, Whereon he looked, and felt the pulse astart Speak passion in his faith-forsaken heart. For this was given him of the hand wherein That heart's pledge lay for ever : so the sin That should be done if truly he should take This maid to wife for strange love's faithless sake Struck all his mounting spirit abashed, and fear Fell cold for shame's sake on his changing cheer. Yea, shame's own fire that burned upon his brow To bear the brand there of a broken vow

Was frozen again for very fear thereof That wrung his heart with keener pangs than love. And all things rose upon him, all things past Ere last they parted, cloven in twain at last, Iseult from Tristram, Tristram from the queen; And how men found them in the wild woods green Sleeping, but sundered by the sword between, Dividing breast from amorous breast a span, But scarce in heart the woman from the man As far as hope from joy or sleep from truth, And Mark that saw them held for sacred sooth These were no fleshly lovers, by that sign That severed them, still slumbering ; so divine He deemed it : how at waking they beheld The king's folk round the king, and uncompelled Were fain to follow and fare among them home Back to the towers washed round with rolling foam And storied halls wherethrough sea-music rang : And how report thereafter swelled and sprang, A full-mouthed serpent, hissing in men's ears Word of their loves : and one of all his peers That most he trusted, being his kinsman born, A man base-moulded for the stamp of scorn, Whose heart with hate was keen and cold and dark, Gave note by midnight whisper to King Mark Where he might take them sleeping; how ere day Had seen the grim next morning all away Fast bound they brought him down a weary way With forty knights about him, and their chief That traitor who for trust had given him grief, To the old hoar chapel, like a strait stone tomb Sheer on the sea-rocks, there to take his doom : How, seeing he needs must die, he bade them yet Bethink them if they durst for shame forget

What deeds for Cornwall had he done, and wrought For all their sake what rescue, when he fought Against the fierce foul Irish foe that came To take of them for tribute in their shame Three hundred heads of children ; whom in fight His hand redeeming slew Moraunt the knight That none durst lift his eyes against, not one Had heart but he, who now had help of none, To take the battle ; whence great shame it were To knighthood, yea, foul shame on all men there, To see him die so shamefully : nor durst One man look up, nor one make answer first, Save even the very traitor, who defied And would have slain him naked in his pride, But he, that saw the sword plucked forth to slay, Looked on his hands, and wrenched their bonds away. Haling those twain that he went bound between Suddenly to him, and kindling in his mien Shone lion-fashion forth with eyes alight, And lion-wise leapt on that kinsman knight And wrung forth of his felon hands with might The sword that should have slain him weaponless, And smote him sheer down : then came all the press All raging in upon him; but he wrought So well for his deliverance as they fought That ten strong knights rejoicingly he slew, And took no wound, nor wearied : then the crew Waxed greater, and their cry on him; but he Had won the chapel now above the sea That chafed right under : then the heart in him Sprang, seeing the low cliff clear to leap, and swim Right out by the old blithe way the sea-mew takes Across the bounding billow-belt that breaks For ever, but the loud bright chain it makes

To bind the bridal bosom of the land Time shall unlink not ever, till his hand Fall by its own last blow dead : thence again Might he win forth into the green great main Far on beyond, and there yield up his breath At least, with God's will, by no shameful death, Or haply save himself, and come anew Some long day later, ere sweet life were through. And as the sea-gull hovers high, and turns With eyes wherein the keen heart glittering yearns Down toward the sweet green sea whereon the broad noon burns.

And suddenly, soul-stricken with delight, Drops, and the glad wave gladdens, and the light Sees wing and wave confuse their fluttering white, So Tristram one brief breathing-space apart Hung, and gazed down; then with exulting heart Plunged: and the fleet foam round a joyous head Flashed, that 3hot under, and ere a shaft had sped Rose again radiant, a rejoicing star, And high along the water-ways afar Triumphed: and all they deemed he needs must die;

But Gouvernayle his squire, that watched hard by, Sought where perchance a man might win ashore, Striving, with strong limbs labouring long and sore, And there abode an hour: till as from fight Crowned with hard conquest won by mastering might, Hardly, but happier for the imperious toil, Swam the knight in forth of the close waves' coil, Sea-satiate, bruised with buffets of the brine, Laughing, and flushed as one afire with wine : All this came hard upon him in a breath ; And how he marvelled in his heart that death

Should be no bitterer than it seemed to be There, in the strenuous impulse of the sea Borne as to battle deathward : and at last How all his after seasons overpast Had brought him darkling to this dark sweet hour. Where his foot faltered nigh the bridal bower. And harder seemed the passage now to pass, Though smoother-seeming than the still sea's glass, More fit for very manhood's heart to fear, Than all straits past of peril. Hardly here Might aught of all things hearten him save one, Faith : and as men's eyes quail before the sun So quailed his heart before the star whose light Put out the torches of his bridal night, So quailed and shrank with sense of faith's keen star That burned as fire beheld by night afar Deep in the darkness of his dreams; for all The bride-house now seemed hung with heavier pall Than clothes the house of mourning. Yet at last, Soul-sick with trembling at the heart, he passed Into the sweet light of the maiden bower Where lay the lonely lily-featured flower That, lying within his hand to gather, yet Might not be gathered of it. Fierce regret And bitter loyalty strove hard at strife With amorous pity toward the tender wife That wife indeed might never be, to wear The very crown of wedlock ; never bear Children, to watch and worship her white hair When time should change, with hand more soft than snow,

The fashion of its glory ; never know The loveliness of laughing love that lives On little lips of children : all that gives

72

Glory and grace and reverence and delight To wedded woman by her bridal right, All praise and pride that flowers too fair to fall, Love that should give had stripped her of them all And left her bare for ever. So his thought Consumed him, as a fire within that wrought Visibly, ravening till its wrath were spent : So pale he stood, so bowed and passion-rent, Before the blithe-faced bride-folk, ere he went Within the chamber, heavy-eyed : and there Gleamed the white hands and glowed the glimmering hair

That might but move his memory more of one more fair.

More fair than all this beauty : but in sooth So fair she too shone in her flower of youth

That scarcely might man's heart hold fast its truth,

Though strong, who gazed upon her : for her eyes Were emerald-soft as evening-coloured skies, And a smile in them like the light therein Slept, or shone out in joy that knew not sin, Clear as a child's own laughter : and her mouth, Albeit no rose full-hearted from the south And passion-coloured for the perfect kiss That signs the soul for love and stamps it his, Was soft and bright as any bud new-blown; And through her cheek the gentler lifebloom shone Of mild wild roses nigh the northward sea. So in her bride-bed lay the bride : and he Drew nigh, and all the high sad heart in him Yearned on her, seeing the twilight meek and dim Through all the soft alcove tremblingly lit With hovering silver, as a heart in it

Beating, that burned from one deep lamp above, Fainter than fire of torches, as the love Within him fainter than a bridegroom's fire, No marriage-torch red with the heart's desire, But silver-soft, a flameless light that glowed Starlike along night's dark and starry road Wherein his soul was traveller. And he sighed, Seeing, and with eyes set sadly toward his bride Laid him down by her, and spake not : but within His heart spake, saying how sore should be the sin To break toward her, that of all womankind Was faithfullest, faith plighted, or unbind The bond first linked between them when they drank The love-draught: and his quick blood sprang and sank.

Remembering in the pulse of all his veins That red swift rapture, all its fiery pains And all its fierier pleasures : and he spake Aloud, one burning word for love's keen sake-" Iseult;" and full of love and lovelier fear A virgin voice gave answer-" I am here." And a pang rent his heart at root : but still, For spirit and flesh were vassals to his will, Strong faith held mastery on them : and the breath Felt on his face did not his will to death, Nor glance nor lute-like voice nor flower-soft touch Might so prevail upon it overmuch That constancy might less prevail than they, For all he looked and loved her as she lav Smiling; and soft as bird alights on bough He kissed her maiden mouth and blameless brow, Once, and again his heart within him sighed : But all his young blood's yearning toward his bride,

How hard soe'er it held his life awake For passion, and sweet nature's unforbidden sake, And will that strove unwillingly with will it might not break,

Fell silent as a wind abashed, whose breath Dies out of heaven, suddenly done to death, When in between them on the dumb dusk air Floated the bright shade of a face more fair Than hers that hard beside him shrank and smiled And wist of all no more than might a child. So had she all her heart's will, all she would, For love's sake that sufficed her, glad and good, All night safe sleeping in her maidenhood.

But that same night in Cornwall oversea Couched at Queen Iseult's hand, against her knee, With keen kind eyes that read her whole heart's pain Fast at wide watch lay Tristram's hound Hodain, The goodliest and the mightiest born on earth, That many a forest day of fiery mirth Had plied his craft before them; and the queen Cherished him, even for those dim years between, More than of old in those bright months far flown When ere a blast of Tristram's horn was blown Each morning as the woods rekindled, ere Day gat full empire of the glimmering air, Delight of dawn would quicken him, and fire Spring and pant in his breath with bright desire To be among the dewy ways on quest : But now perforce at restless-hearted rest He chafed through days more barren than the sand, Soothed hardly but soothed only with her hand, Though fain to fawn thereon and follow, still With all his heart and all his loving will Desiring one divided from his sight, For whose lost sake dawn was as dawn of night And noon as night's noon in his eyes was dark. But in the halls far under sat King Mark,

Feasting, and full of cheer, with heart uplift, As on the night that harper gat his gift : And music revelled on the fitful air, And songs came floated up the festal stair, And muffled roar of wassail, where the king Took heart from wine-cups and the quiring string Till all his cold thin veins rejoiced and ran Strong as with lifeblood of a kinglier man. But the queen shut from sound her wearied ears, Shut her sad eyes from sense of aught save tears, And wrung her hair with soft fierce hands, and prayed :

"O God, God born of woman, of a maid, Christ, once in flesh of thine own fashion clad; O very love, so glad in heaven and sad On earth for earth's sake alway; since thou art Pure only, I only impure of spirit and heart, Since thou for sin's sake and the bitter doom Didst as a veil put on a virgin's womb, I that am none, and cannot hear or see Or shadow or likeness or a sound of thee Far off, albeit with man's own speech and face Thou shine yet and thou speak yet, showing forth grace---

Ah me ! grace only shed on souls that are Lit and led forth of shadow by thy star— Alas ! to these men only grace, to these, Lord, whom thy love draws Godward, to thy knees— I, can I draw thee me-ward, can I seek, Who love thee not, to love me ? seeing how weak, Lord, all this little love I bear thee is, And how much is my strong love more than this, My love that I love man with, that I bear Him sinning through me sinning ? wilt thou care, God, for this love, if love be any, alas, In me to give thee, though long since there was, How long, when I too, Lord, was clean, even I, That now am unclean till the day I die— Haply by burning, harlot-fashion, made A horror in all hearts of wife and maid, Hateful, not knowing if ever in these mine eyes Shone any light of thine in any wise Or this were love at all that I bore thee?"

And the night spake, and thundered on the sea, Ravening aloud for ruin of lives : and all The bastions of the main cliff's northward wall Rang response out from all their deepening length, As the east wind girded up his godlike strength And hurled in hard against that high-towered hold The fleeces of the flock that knows no fold, The rent white shreds of shattering storm : but she Heard not nor heeded wind or storming sea, Knew not if night were mild or mad with wind.

"Yea, though deep lips and tender hair be thinned, Though cheek wither, brow fade, and bosom wane, Shall I change also from this heart again To maidenhood of heart and holiness? Shall I more love thee, Lord, or love him less— Ah miserable! though spirit and heart be rent, Shall I repent, Lord God? shall I repent? Nay, though thou slay me! for herein I am blest, That as I loved him yet I love him best— More than mine own soul or thy love or thee, Though thy love save and my love save not me. Blest am I beyond women even herein, That beyond all born women is my sin, And perfect my transgression : that above All offerings of all others is my love,

Who have chosen it only, and put away for this Thee, and my soul's hope, Saviour, of the kiss Wherewith thy lips make welcome all thine own When in them life and death are overthrown; The sinless lips that seal the death of sin, The kiss wherewith their dumb lips touched begin Singing in heaven.

"Where we shall never, love, Never stand up nor sing ! for God above Knows us, how too much more than God to me Thy sweet love is, my poor love is to thee ! Dear, dost thou see now, dost thou hear to-night, Sleeping, my waste wild speech, my face worn white,

-Speech once heard soft by thee, face once kissed red !--

In such a dream as when men see their dead And know not if they know if dead these be? Ah love, are thy days my days, and to thee Are all nights like as my nights? does the sun Grieve thee? art thou soul-sick till day be done, And weary till day rises? is thine heart Full of dead things as mine is? Nay, thou art Man, with man's strength and praise and pride of life,

No bondwoman, no queen, no loveless wife That would be shamed albeit she had not sinned."

And swordlike was the sound of the iron wind, And as a breaking battle was the sea.

"Nay, Lord, I pray thee let him love not me, Love me not any more, nor like me die, And be no more than such a thing as I. Turn his heart from me, lest my love too lose Thee as I lose thee, and his fair soul refuse For my sake thy fair heaven, and as I fell Fall, and be mixed with my soul and with hell. Let me die rather, and only ; let me be Hated of him so he be loved of thee, Lord : for I would not have him with me there Out of thy light and love in the unlit air, Out of thy sight in the unseen hell where I Go gladly, going alone, so thou on high Lift up his soul and love him-Ah, Lord, Lord, Shalt thou love as I love him? she that poured From the alabaster broken at thy feet An ointment very precious, not so sweet As that poured likewise forth before thee then From the rehallowed heart of Magdalen, From a heart broken, yearning like the dove, An ointment very precious which is love-Couldst thou being holy and God, and sinful she, Love her indeed as surely she loved thee? Nay, but if not, then as we sinners can Let us love still in the old sad wise of man. For with less love than my love, having had Mine, though God love him he shall not be glad And with such love as my love, I wot well, He shall not lie disconsolate in hell : Sad only as souls for utter love's sake be Here, and a little sad, perchance, for me-Me happy, me more glad than God above, In the utmost hell whose fires consume not love ! For in the waste ways emptied of the sun He would say-' Dear, thy place is void, and one Weeps among angels for thee, with his face Veiled, saying, O sister, how thy chosen place Stands desolate, that God made fair for thee! Is heaven not sweeter, and we thy brethren, we Fairer than love on earth and life in hell?' And I—with me were all things then not well? Should I not answer—'O love, be well content; Look on me, and behold if I repent.' This were more to me than an angel's wings. Yea, many men pray God for many things, But I pray that this only thing may be."

And as a full field charging was the sea, And as the cry of slain men was the wind.

"Yea, since I surely loved him, and he sinned Surely, though not as my sin his be black, God, give him to me-God, God, give him back ! For now how should we live in twain or die? I am he indeed, thou knowest, and he is I. Not man and woman several as we were, But one thing with one life and death to bear. How should one love his own soul overmuch? And time is long since last I felt the touch. The sweet touch of my lover, hand and breath, In such delight as puts delight to death, Burn my soul through, till spirit and soul and sense, In the sharp grasp of the hour, with violence Died, and again through pangs of violent birth Lived, and laughed out with refluent might of mirth : Laughed each on other and shuddered into one, As a cloud shuddering dies into the sun. Ah, sense is that or spirit, soul or flesh, That only love lulls or awakes afresh? Ah, sweet is that or bitter, evil or good. That very love allays not as he would? Nay, truth is this or vanity, that gives No love assurance when love dies or lives? This that my spirit is wrung withal, and yet No surelier knows if haply thine forget,

VOL. IV.

Thou that my spirit is wrung for, nor can say Love is not in thee dead as yesterday? Dost thou feel, thou, this heartbeat whence my heart Would send thee word what life is mine apart, And know by keen response what life is thine? Dost thou not hear one cry of all of mine? O Tristram's heart, have I no part in thee?"

And all her soul was as the breaking sea, And all her heart anhungered as the wind.

"Dost thou repent thee of the sin we sinned? Dost thou repent thee of the days and nights That kindled and that quenched for us their lights, The months that feasted us with all their hours. The ways that breathed of us in all their flowers, The dells that sang of us with all their doves? Dost thou repent thee of the wildwood loves?

- Is thine heart changed, and hallowed? art thou grown
- God's, and not mine? Yer, though my heart make moan,

Fain would my soul give thanks for thine, if thou Be saved—yea, fain praise God, and knows not how. How should it know thanksgiving? nay, or learn Aught of the love wherewith thine own should burn, God's, that should cast out as an evil thing Mine? yea, what hand of prayer have I to cling, What heart to prophesy, what spirit of sight To strain insensual eyes toward increate light, Who look but back on life wherein I sinned?"

And all their past came wailing in the wind, And all their future thundered in the sea.

"But if my soul might touch the time to be, If hand might handle now or eye behold My life and death ordained me from of old, Life palpable, compact of blood and breath, Visible, present, naked, very death, Should I desire to know before the day These that I know not, nor is man that may? For haply, seeing, my heart would break for fear, And my soul timeless cast its load off here, Its load of life too bitter, love too sweet, And fall down shamed and naked at thy feet, God, who wouldst take no pity of it, nor give One hour back, one of all its hours to live Clothed with my mortal body, that once more, Once, on this reach of barren beaten shore, This stormy strand of life, ere sail were set, Had haply felt love's arms about it yet-Yea, ere death's bark put off to seaward, might With many a grief have bought me one delight That then should know me never. Ah, what years Would I endure not, filled up full with tears, Bitter like blood and dark as dread of death, To win one amorous hour of mingling breath, One fire-eyed hour and sunnier than the sun, For all these nights and days like nights but one? One hour of heaven born once, a stormless birth, For all these windy weary hours of earth? One, but one hour from birth of joy to death, For all these hungering hours of feverish breath? And I should lose this, having died and sinned."

And as man's anguish clamouring cried the wind, And as God's anger answering rang the sea.

"And yet what life—Lord God, what life for me Has thy strong wrath made ready? Dost thou think How lips whose thirst hath only tears to drink Grow grey for grief untimely? Dost thou know, O happy God, how men wax weary of woeYea, for their wrong's sake that thine hand hath done Come even to hate thy semblance in the sun ?
Turn back from dawn and noon and all thy light To make their souls one with the soul of night ?
Christ, if thou hear yet or have eyes to see,
Thou that hadst pity, and hast no pity on me,
Know'st thou no more, as in this life's sharp span,
What pain thou hadst on earth, what pain hath man ?
Hast thou no care, that all we suffer yet ?
What help is ours of thee if thou forget ?
What profit have we though thy blood were given,
If we that sin bleed and be not forgiven ?
Not love but hate, thou bitter God and strange,
Whose heart as man's heart hath grown cold with change,

Not love but hate thou showest us that have sinned."

And like a world's cry shuddering was the wind, And like a God's voice threatening was the sea.

"Nay, Lord, for thou wast gracious ; nay, in thee No change can come with time or varying fate, No tongue bid thine be less compassionate, No sterner eye rebuke for mercy thine, No sin put out thy pity—no, not mine. Thou knowest us, Lord, thou knowest us, all we are, He, and the soul that hath his soul for star : Thou knowest as I know, Lord, how much more worth

Than all souls clad and clasped about with earth,

But most of all, God, how much more than I,

Is this man's soul that surely shall not die.

What righteousness, what judgment, Lord most high,

Were this, to bend a brow of doom as grim As threats me, me the adulterous wife, on him?

ISEULT AT TINTAGEL

There lies none other nightly by his side : He hath not sought, he shall not seek a bride. Far as God sunders earth from heaven above, So far was my love born beneath his love. I loved him as the sea-wind loves the sea, To rend and ruin it only and waste : but he, As the sea loves a sea-bird loved he me, To foster and uphold my tired life's wing, And bounteously beneath me spread forth spring, A springtide space whereon to float or fly, A world of happy water, whence the sky Glowed goodlier, lightening from so glad a glass, Than with its own light only. Now, alas ! Cloud hath come down and clothed it round with storm,

And gusts and fits of eddying winds deform The feature of its glory. Yet be thou, God, merciful : nay, show but justice now, And let the sin in him that scarce was his Stand expiated with exile : and be this The price for him, the atonement this, that I With all the sin upon me live, and die With all thy wrath on me that most have sinned."

And like man's heart relenting sighed the wind, And as God's wrath subsiding sank the sea.

"But if such grace be possible—if it be Not sin more strange than all sins past, and worse Evil, that cries upon thee for a curse, To pray such prayers from such a heart, do thou Hear, and make wide thine hearing toward me now ; Let not my soul and his for ever dwell Sundered : though doom keep always heaven and hell Irreconcilable, infinitely apart, Keep not in twain for ever heart and heart That once, albeit by not thy law, were one; Let this be not thy will, that this be done. Let all else, all thou wilt of evil, be, But no doom, none, dividing him and me."

By this was heaven stirred eastward, and there came Up the rough ripple a labouring light like flame; And dawn, sore trembling still and grey with fear, Looked hardly forth, a face of heavier cheer Than one which grief or dread yet half enshrouds, Wild-eyed and wan, across the cleaving clouds. And Iseult, worn with watch long held on pain, Turned, and her eye lit on the hound Hodain, And all her heart went out in tears : and he Laid his kind head along her bended knee, Till round his neck her arms went hard, and all The night past from her as a chain might fall : But yet the heart within her, half undone, Wailed, and was loth to let her see the sun.

And ere full day brought heaven and earth to flower,

JOYOUS GARD

A LITTLE time, O Love, a little light, A little hour for ease before the night. Sweet Love, that art so bitter ; foolish Love, Whom wise men know for wiser, and thy dove More subtle than the serpent ; for thy sake These pray thee for a little beam to break, A little grace to help them, lest men think Thy servants have but hours like tears to drink. O Love, a little comfort, lest they fear To serve as these have served thee who stand here.

For these are thine, thy servants these, that stand Here nigh the limit of the wild north land, At margin of the grey great eastern sea, Dense-islanded with peaks and reefs, that see No life but of the fleet wings fair and free Which cleave the mist and sunlight all day long With sleepless flight and cries more glad than song. Strange ways of life have led them hither, here To win fleet respite from desire and fear With armistice from sorrow ; strange and sweet Ways trodden by forlorn and casual feet Till kindlier chance woke toward them kindly will In happier hearts of lovers, and their ill Found rest, as healing surely might it not, By gift and kingly grace of Launcelot At gracious bidding given of Guenevere. For in the trembling twilight of this year Ere April sprang from hope to certitude Two hearts of friends fast linked had fallen at feud As they rode forth on hawking, by the sign Which gave his new bride's brother Ganhardine To know the truth of Tristram's dealing, how Faith kept of him against his marriage vow Kept virginal his bride-bed night and morn ; Whereat, as wroth his blood should suffer scorn, Came Ganhardine to Tristram, saying, "Behold, We have loved thee, and for love we have shown of old

Scorn hast thou shown us : wherefore is thy bride Not thine indeed, a stranger at thy side, Contemned? what evil hath she done, to be Mocked with mouth-marriage and despised of thee, Shamed, set at nought, rejected?" But there came On Tristram's brow and eye the shadow and flame Confused of wrath and wonder, ere he spake, Saying, "Hath she bid thee for thy sister's sake Plead with me, who believed of her in heart More nobly than to deem such piteous part Should find so fair a player? or whence hast thou Of us this knowledge?" "Nay," said he, "but now, Riding beneath these whitethorns overhead, There fell a flower into her girdlestead Which laughing she shook out, and smiling said-'Lo, what large leave the wind hath given this stray, To lie more near my heart than till this day Aught ever since my mother lulled me lay

Or even my lord came ever ;' whence I wot We are all thy scorn, a race regarded not Nor held as worth communion of thine own, Except in her be found some fault alone To blemish our alliance." Then replied Tristram, "Nor blame nor scorn may touch my bride, Albeit unknown of love she live, and be Worth a man worthier than her love thought me. Faith only, faith withheld me, faith forbade The blameless grace wherewith love's grace makes glad All lives linked else in wedlock ; not that less

I loved the sweet light of her loveliness, But that my love toward faith was more : and thou, Albeit thine heart be keen against me now, Couldst thou behold my very lady, then No more of thee than of all other men Should this my faith be held a faithless fault." And ere that day their hawking came to halt, Being sore of him entreated for a sign, He sware to bring his brother Ganhardine To sight of that strange Iseult : and thereon Forth soon for Cornwall are these brethren gone, Even to that royal pleasance where the hunt Rang ever of old with Tristram s horn in front Blithe as the queen's horse bounded at his side : And first of all her dames forth pranced in pride That day before them, with a ringing rein All golden-glad, the king's false bride Brangwain, The queen's true handmaid ever : and on her Glancing, "Be called for all time truth-teller, O Tristram, of all true men's tongues alive," Quoth Ganhardine ; " for may my soul so thrive

As yet mine eye drank never sight like this." "Ay?" Tristram said, "and she thou look'st on is So great in grace of goodliness, that thou Hast less thought left of wrath against me now. Seeing but my lady's handmaid? Nay, behold ; See'st thou no light more golden than of gold Shine where she moves in midst of all, above All, past all price or praise or prayer of love? Lo, this is she." But as one mazed with wine Stood, stunned in spirit and stricken, Ganhardine, And gazed out hard against them : and his heart As with a sword was cloven, and rent apart As with strong fangs of fire; and scarce he spake, Saying how his life for even a handmaid's sake Was made a flame within him. And the knight Bade him, being known of none that stood in sight, Bear to Brangwain his ring, that she unseen Might give in token privily to the queen And send swift word where under moon or sun They twain might yet be no more twain but one. And that same night, under the stars that rolled Over their warm deep wildwood nights of old Whose hours for grains of sand shed sparks of fire, Such way was made anew for their desire By secret wile of sickness feigned, to keep The king far off her vigils or her sleep, That in the queen's pavilion midway set By glimmering moondawn were those lovers met, And Ganhardine of Brangwain gat him grace. And in some passionate soft interspace Between two swells of passion, when their lips Breathed, and made room for such brief speech as slips From tongues athirst with draughts of amorous wine That leaves them thirstier than the salt sea's brine,

Was counsel taken how to fly, and where Find covert from the wild world's ravening air That hunts with storm the feet of nights and days Through strange thwart lines of life and flowerless ways.

Then said Iseult : "Lo, now the chance is here Foreshown me late by word of Guenevere, To give me comfort of thy rumoured wrong, My traitor Tristram, when report was strong Of me forsaken and thine heart estranged : Nor should her sweet soul toward me yet be changed Nor all her love lie barren, if mine hand Crave harvest of it from the flowering land. See therefore if this counsel please thee not, That we take horse in haste for Camelot And seek that friendship of her plighted troth Which love shall be full fain to lend, nor loth Shall my love be to take it." So next night The multitudinous stars laughed round their flight, Fulfilling far with laughter made of light The encircling deeps of heaven : and in brief space At Camelot their long love gat them grace Of those fair twain whose heads men's praise impearled

As love's two lordliest lovers in the world :

And thence as guests for harbourage past they forth

To win this noblest hold of all the north.

Far by wild ways and many days they rode,

Till clear across June's kingliest sunset glowed

The great round girth of goodly wall that showed

Where for one clear sweet season's length should be

Their place of strength to rest in, fain and free,

By the utmost margin of the loud lone sea.

And now, O Love, what comfort? God most high,

Whose life is as a flower's to live and die,

Whose light is everlasting : Lord, whose breath

Speaks music through the deathless lips of death

Whereto time's heart rings answer: Bard, whom time

Hears, and is vanquished with a wandering rhyme

That once thy lips made fragrant: Seer, whose sooth

Joy knows not well, but sorrow knows for truth,

Being priestess of thy soothsayings : Love, what grace

Shall these twain find at last before thy face?

This many a year they have served thee, and deserved,

If ever man might yet of all that served, Since the first heartbeat bade the first man's knee Bend, and his mouth take music, praising thee, Some comfort; and some honey indeed of thine Thou hast mixed for these with life's most bitter wine,

Commending to their passionate lips a draught No deadlier than thy chosen of old have quaffed And blessed thine hand, their cupbearer's : for not On all men comes the grace that seals their lot As holier in thy sight, for all these feuds That rend it, than the light-souled multitude's, Nor thwarted of thine hand nor blessed ; but these Shall see no twilight, Love, nor fade at ease, Grey-grown and careless of desired delight, But lie down tired and sleep before the night. These shall not live till time or change may chill Or doubt divide or shame subdue their will,

- Or fear or slow repentance work them wrong,
- Or love die first : these shall not live so long.
- Death shall not take them drained of dear true life Already, sick or stagnant from the strife,
- Quenched: not with dry-drawn veins and lingering breath
- Shall these through crumbling hours crouch down to death.
- Swift, with one strong clean leap, ere life's pulse tire,
- Most like the leap of lions or of fire,

Sheer death shall bound upon them : one pang past, The first keen sense of him shall be their last,

- Their last shall be no sense of any fear,
- More than their life had sense of anguish here.

Weeks and light months had fled at swallow's speed

Since here their first hour sowed for them the seed Of many sweet as rest or hope could be;

Since on the blown beach of a glad new sea

Wherein strange rocks like fighting men stand scarred

They saw the strength and help of Joyous Gard. Within the full deep glorious tower that stands Between the wild sea and the broad wild lands Love led and gave them quiet : and they drew Life like a God's life in each wind that blew, And took their rest, and triumphed. Day by day The mighty moorlands and the sea-walls grey, The brown bright waters of green fells that sing One song to rocks and flowers and birds on wing, Beheld the joy and glory that they had, Passing, and how the whole world made them glad,

And their great love was mixed with all things great,

As life being lovely, and yet being strong like fate. For when the sun sprang on the sudden sea Their eyes sprang eastward, and the day to be Was lit in them untimely : such delight They took yet of the clear cold breath and light That goes before the morning, and such grace Was deathless in them through their whole life's space

As dies in many with their dawn that dies And leaves in pulseless hearts and flameless eyes No light to lighten and no tear to weep For youth's high joy that time has cast on sleep. Yea, this old grace and height of joy they had, To lose no jot of all that made them glad And filled their springs of spirit with such fire That all delight fed in them all desire ; And no whit less than in their first keen prime The spring's breath blew through all their summer time.

And in their skies would sunlike Love confuse Clear April colours with hot August hues, And in their hearts one light of sun and moon Reigned, and the morning died not of the noon : Such might of life was in them, and so high Their heart of love rose higher than fate could fly. And many a large delight of hawk and hound The great glad land that knows no bourne or bound, Save the wind's own and the outer sea-bank's, gave Their days for comfort ; many a long blithe wave Buoyed their blithe bark between the bare bald rocks,

Deep, steep, and still, save for the swift free flocks

Unshepherded, uncompassed, unconfined, That when blown foam keeps all the loud air blind Mix with the wind's their triumph, and partake The joy of blasts that ravin, waves that break, All round and all below their mustering wings, A clanging cloud that round the cliff's edge clings On each bleak bluff breaking the strenuous tides That rings reverberate mirth when storm bestrides The subject night in thunder : many a noon They took the moorland's or the bright sea's boon With all their hearts into their spirit of sense, Rejoicing, where the sudden dells grew dense With sharp thick flight of hillsi e birds, or where On some strait rock's ledge in the intense mute air Erect against the cliff's sheer sunlit white Blue as the clear north heaven, clothed warm with light.

Stood neck to bended neck and wing to wing With heads fast hidden under, close as cling Flowers on one flowering almond-branch in spring, Three herons deep asleep against the sun, Each with one bright foot downward poised, and one

Wing-hidden hard by the bright head, and all Still as fair shapes fixed on some wondrous wall Of minster-aisle or cloister-close or hall To take even time's eye prisoner with delight. Or, satisfied with joy of sound and sight, They sat and communed of things past : what state King Arthur, yet unwarred upon by fate, Held high in hall at Camelot, like one Whose lordly life was as the mounting sun That climbs and pauses on the point of noon, Sovereign : how royal rang the tourney's tune Through Tristram's three days' triumph, spear to spear,

When Iseult shone enthroned by Guenevere, Rose against rose, the highest adored on earth, Imperial : yet with subtle notes of mirth Would she bemock her praises, and bemoan Her glory by that splendour overthrown Which lightened from her sister's eyes elate ; Saving how by night a little light seems great, But less than least of all things, very nought, When dawn undoes the web that darkness wrought; How like a tower of ivory well designed By subtlest hand subserving subtlest mind, Ivory with flower of rose incarnadined And kindling with some God therein revealed, A light for grief to look on and be healed, Stood Guenevere : and all beholding her Were heartstruck even as earth at midsummer With burning wonder, hardly to be borne. So was that amorous glorious lady born, A fiery memory for all storied years : Nor might men call her sisters crowned her peers, Her sister queens, put all by her to scorn : She had such eyes as are not made to mourn; But in her own a gleaming ghost of tears Shone, and their glance was slower than Guenevere's, And fitfuller with fancies grown of grief; Shamed as a Mayflower shames an autumn leaf Full well she wist it could not choose but be If in that other's eyeshot standing she Should lift her looks up ever : wherewithal Like fires whose light fills heaven with festival Flamed her eyes full on Tristram's; and he laughed Answering, "What wile of sweet child-hearted craft

As Launcelot, erring, held me ere he wist

No mouth save thine of mine was ever kissed

Save as a sister's only, since we twain

Drank first the draught assigned our lips to drain That Fate and Love with darkling hands commixt Poured, and no power to part them came betwixt, But either's will, howbeit they seem at strife, Was toward us one, as death itself and life Are one sole doom toward all men, nor may one Behold not darkness, who beholds the sun."

"Ah, then," she said, "what word is this men hear Of Merlin, how some doom too strange to fear Was cast but late about him oversea, Sweet recreant, in thy bridal Brittany? Is not his life sealed fast on him with sleep, By witchcraft of his own and love's, to keep Till earth be fire and ashes?"

"Surely," said

VOL: IV.

н

Her lover, "not as one alive or dead The great good wizard, well beloved and well Predestinate of heaven that casts out hell For guerdon gentler far than all men's fate, Exempt alone of all predestinate, Takes his strange rest at heart of slumberland, More deep asleep in green Broceliande Than shipwrecked sleepers in the soft green sea Beneath the weight of wandering waves : but he Hath for those roofing waters overhead Above him always all the summer spread Or all the winter wailing : or the sweet Late leaves marked red with autumn's burning feet,

Or withered with his weeping, round the seer Rain, and he sees not, nor may heed or hear The witness of the winter : but in spring

He hears above him all the winds on wing

Through the blue dawn between the brightening boughs,

And on shut eyes and slumber-smitten brows Feels ambient change in the air and strengthening sun,

And knows the soul that was his soul at one With the ardent world's, and in the spirit of earth His spirit of life reborn to mightier birth And mixed with things of elder life than ours ; With cries of birds, and kindling lamps of flowers, And sweep and song of winds, and fruitful light Of sunbeams, and the far faint breath of night, And waves and woods at morning : and in all, Soft as at noon the slow sea's rise and fall, He hears in spirit a song that none but he Hears from the mystic mouth of Nimue Shed like a consecration ; and his heart, Hearing, is made for love's sake as a part Of that far singing, and the life thereof Part of that life that feeds the world with love : Yea, heart in heart is molten, hers and his, Into the world's heart and the soul that is Beyond or sense or vision ; and their breath Stirs the soft springs of deathless life and death, Death that bears life, and change that brings forth seed

Of life to death and death to life indeed, As blood recircling through the unsounded veins Of earth and heaven with all their joys and pains. Ah, that when love shall laugh no more nor weep We too, we too might hear that song and sleep !"

"Yea," said Iseult, "some joy it were to be Lost in the sun's light and the all-girdling sea, Mixed with the winds and woodlands, and to bear Part in the large life of the quickening air, And the sweet earth's, our mother : yet to pass More fleet than mirrored faces from the glass Out of all pain and all delight, so far That love should seem but as the furthest star Sunk deep in trembling heaven, scarce seen or known,

As a dead moon forgotten, once that shone Where now the sun shines—nay, not all things yet, Not all things always, dying, would I forget."

And Tristram answered amorously, and said : "O heart that here art mine, O heavenliest head That ever took men's worship here, which art Mine, how shall death put out the fire at heart, Quench in men's eyes the head's remembered light, That time shall set but higher in more men's sight? Think thou not much to die one earthly day, Being made not in their mould who pass away Nor who shall pass for ever."

"Ah," she said, "What shall it profit me, being praised and dead? What profit have the flowers of all men's praise? What pleasure of our pleasure have the days That pour on us delight of life and mirth? What fruit of all our joy on earth has earth? Nor am I—nay, my lover, am I one To take such part in heaven's enkindling sun And in the inviolate air and sacred sea As clothes with grace that wondrous Nimue? For all her works are bounties, all her deeds Blessings; her days are scrolls wherein love reads

The record of his mercies; heaven above Hath not more heavenly holiness of love Than earth beneath, wherever pass or pause Her feet that move not save by love's own laws, In gentleness of godlike wayfaring To heal men's hearts as earth is healed by spring Of all such woes as winter : what am I, Love, that have strength but to desire and die, That have but grace to love and do thee wrong, What am I that my name should live so long, Save as the star that crossed thy star-struck lot, With hers whose light was life to Launcelot? Life gave she him, and strength, and fame to be For ever: I, what gift can I give thee? Peril and sleepless watches, fearful breath Of dread more bitter for my sake than death When death came nigh to call me by my name, Exile, rebuke, remorse, and-O, not shame.

Shame only, this I gave thee not, whom none May give that worst thing ever—no, not one. Of all that hate, all hateful hearts that see Darkness for light and hate where love should be, None for my shame's sake may speak shame of thee."

And Tristram answering ere he kissed her smiled : "O very woman, god at once and child,

What ails thee to desire of me once more

The assurance that thou hadst in heart before?

For all this wild sweet waste of sweet vain breath,

Thou knowest I know thou hast given me life, not death.

The shadow of death, informed with shows of strife,

Was ere I won thee all I had of life.

Light war, light love, light living, dreams in sleep,

Joy slight and light, not glad enough to weep,

Filled up my foolish days with sound and shine, Vision and gleam from strange men's cast on mine, Reverberate light from eyes presaging thine That shed but shadowy moonlight where thy face Now sheds forth sunshine in the deep same place, The deep live heart half dead and shallower then Than summer fords which thwart not wandering men.

For how should I, signed sorrow's from my birth, Kiss dumb the loud red laughing lips of mirth? Or how, sealed thine to be, love less than heaven on earth?

My heart in me was held at restless rest, Presageful of some prize beyond its quest, Prophetic still with promise, fain to find the best. For one was fond and one was blithe and one Fairer than all save twain whose peers are none; For third on earth is none that heaven hath seen To stand with Guenevere beside my queen. Not Nimue, girt with blessing as a guard : Not the soft lures and laughters of Ettarde : Not she, that splendour girdled round with gloom, Crowned as with iron darkness of the tomb, And clothed with clouding conscience of a monstrous doom.

Whose blind incestuous love brought forth a fire To burn her ere it burn its darkling sire, Her mother's son, King Arthur : yet but late We saw pass by that fair live shadow of fate, The queen Morgause of Orkney, like a dream That scares the night when moon and starry beam Sicken and swoon before some sorcerer's eyes Whose wordless charms defile the saintly skies, Bright still with fire and pulse of blood and breath, Whom her own sons have doomed for shame to death."

"Death—yea," quoth she, "there is not said or heard

So oft aloud on earth so sure a word. Death, and again death, and for each that saith Ten tongues chime answer to the sound of death. Good end God send us ever—so men pray. But I—this end God send me, would I say, To die not of division and a heart Rent or with sword of severance cloven apart, But only when thou diest and only where thou art, O thou my soul and spirit and breath to me, O light, life, love ! yea, let this only be, That dying I may praise God who gave me thee, Let hap what will thereafter."

So that day

JOYOUS GARD

They communed, even till even was worn away, Nor aught they said seemed strange or sad to say, But sweet as night's dim dawn to weariness. Nor loved they life or love for death's sake less, Nor feared they death for love's or life's sake more And on the sounding soft funereal shore They, watching till the day should wholly die, Saw the far sea sweep to the far grey sky, Saw the long sands sweep to the long grey sea. And night made one sweet mist of moor and lea, And only far off shore the foam gave light. And life in them sank silent as the night.

THE WIFE'S VIGIL

But all that year in Brittany forlorn, More sick at heart with wrath than fear of scorn And less in love with love than grief, and less With grief than pride of spirit and bitterness, Till all the sweet life of her blood was changed And all her soul from all her past estranged And all her will with all itself at strife And all her mind at war with all her life, Dwelt the white-handed Iseult, maid and wife, A mourner that for mourning robes had on Anger and doubt and hate of things foregone. For that sweet spirit of old which made her sweet Was parched with blasts of thought as flowers with heat

And withered as with wind of evil will; Though slower than frosts or fires consume or kill That bleak black wind vexed all her spirit still. As ripples reddening in the roughening breath Of the eager east when dawn does night to death, So rose and stirred and kindled in her thought Fierce barren fluctuant fires that lit not aught, But scorched her soul with yearning keen as hate And dreams that left her wrath disconsolate. When change came first on that first heaven where all Life's hours were flowers that dawn's light hand let fall.

The sun that smote her dewy cloud of days Wrought from its showery folds his rainbow's rays, For love the red, for hope the gentle green, But yellow jealousy glared pale between. Ere yet the sky grew heavier, and her head Bent flowerwise, chill with change and fancies fled, She saw but love arch all her heaven across with red, A burning bloom that seemed to breathe and beat And waver only as flame with rapturous heat Wavers; and all the world therewith smelt sweet, As incense kindling from the rose-red flame: And when that full flush waned, and love became Scarce fainter, though his fading horoscope From certitude of sight receded, hope Held yet her April-coloured light aloft As though to lure back love, a lamp sublime and soft. But soon that light paled as a leaf grows pale And fluttered leaf-like in the gathering gale And melted even as dew-flakes, whose brief sheen The sun that gave despoils of glittering green; Till harder shone 'twixt hope and love grown cold A sallow light like withering autumn's gold, The pale strong flame of jealous thought, that glows deep than hope's green bloom or love's More enkindled rose :

As though the sunflower's faint fierce disk absorbed The spirit and heart of starrier flowers disorbed.

That same full hour of twilight's doors unbarred To let bright night behold in Joyous Gard The glad grave eyes of lovers far away Watch with sweet thoughts of death the death of day Saw lonelier by the narrower opening sea Sit fixed at watch Iseult of Brittany. As darkness from deep valleys void and bleak Climbs till it clothe with night the sunniest peak Where only of all a mystic mountain-land Day seems to cling yet with a trembling hand And yielding heart reluctant to recede, So, till her soul was clothed with night indeed, Rose the slow cloud of envious will within And hardening hate that held itself no sin, Veiled heads of vision, eyes of evil gleam, Dim thought on thought, and darkling dream on dream.

Far off she saw in spirit, and seeing abhorred, The likeness wrought on darkness of her lord Shine, and the imperial semblance at his side Whose shadow from her seat cast down the bride, Whose power and ghostly presence thrust her forth : Beside that unknown other sea far north She saw them, clearer than in present sight Rose on her eyes the starry shadow of night ; And on her heart that heaved with gathering fate Rose red with storm the starless shadow of hate ; And eyes and heart made one saw surge and swell The fires of sunset like the fires of hell. As though God's wrath would burn up sin with shame,

The incensed red gold of deepening heaven grew flame:

The sweet green spaces of the soft low sky Faded, as fields that withering wind leaves dry: The sea's was like a doomsman's blasting breath From lips afoam with ravenous lust of death. A night like desolation, sombre-starred, Above the great walled girth of Joyous Gard ю

- Spread forth its wide sad strength of shadow and gloom
- Wherein those twain were compassed round with doom:

Hell from beneath called on them, and she heard Reverberate judgment in the wild wind's word Cry, till the sole sound of their names that rang Clove all the sea-mist with a clarion's clang, And clouds to clouds and flames to clustering flames Beat back the dark noise of the direful names. Fear and strong exultation caught her breath, And triumph like the bitterness of death, And rapture like the rage of hate allayed With ruin and ravin that its might hath made; And her heart swelled and strained itself to hear What may be heard of no man's hungering ear, And as a soil that cleaves in twain for drouth Thirsted for judgment given of God's own mouth Against them, till the strength of dark desire Was in her as a flame of hell's own fire. Nor seemed the wrath which held her spirit in stress Aught else or worse than passionate holiness, Nor the ardent hate which called on judgment's rod More hateful than the righteousness of God.

"How long, till thou do justice, and my wrong Stand expiate? O long-suffering judge, how long? Shalt thou not put him in mine hand one day Whom I so loved, to spare not but to slay? Shalt thou not cast her down for me to tread, Me, on the pale pride of her humbled head? Do I not well, being angry? doth not hell Require them? yea, thou knowest that I do well. Is not thy seal there set of bloodred light For witness on the brows of day and night?

Who shall unseal it? what shall melt away Thy signet from the doors of night and day? No man, nor strength of any spirit above, Nor prayer, nor ardours of adulterous love. Thou art God, the strong lord over body and soul : Hast thou not in the terrors of thy scroll All names of all men written as with fire? Thine only breath bids time and space respire : And are not all things evil in them done More clear in thine eyes than in ours the sun? Hast thou not sight stretched wide enough to see These that offend it, these at once and me? Is thine arm shortened or thine hand struck down As palsied? have thy brows not strength to frown? Are thine eyes blind with film of withering age? Burns not thine heart with righteousness of rage Yet, and the royal rancour toward thy foes Retributive of ruin? Time should close, Thou said'st, and earth fade as a leaf grows grey, Ere one word said of thine should pass away. Was this then not thy word, thou God most high, That sin shall surely bring forth death and die, Seeing how these twain live and have joy of life, His harlot and the man that made me wife? For is it I, perchance, I that have sinned? Me, peradventure, should thy wasting wind Smite, and thy sun blast, and thy storms devour Me with keen fangs of lightning? should thy power Put forth on me the weight of its awakening hour? Shall I that bear this burden bear that weight Of judgment? is my sin against thee great, If all my heart against them burn with all its hate? Thine, and not mine, should hate be? nay, but me They have spoiled and scoffed at, who can touch not thee.

Me, me, the fullness of their joy drains dry, Their fruitfulness makes barren : thou, not I, Lord, is it, whom their wrongdoing clothes with shame, That all who speak shoot tongues out at thy name As all who hear mock mine? Make me thy sword At least, if even thou too be wronged, O Lord, At all of these that wrong me : make mine hand As lightning, or my tongue a fiery brand, To burn or smite them with thy wrath : behold, I have nought on earth save thee for hope or hold, Fail me not thou : I have nought but this to crave, Make me thy mean to give them to the grave, Thy sign that all men seeing may speak thee just, Thy word which turns the strengths of sin to dust, Thy blast which burns up towers and thrones with fire.

Lord, is this gift, this grace that I require, So great a gift, Lord, for thy grace to give And bid me bear thy part retributive? That I whom scorn makes mouths at, I might be Thy witness if loud sin may mock at thee? For lo, my life is as a barren ear Plucked from the sheaf : dark days drive past me here Downtrodden, while joy's reapers pile their sheaves, A thing more vile than autumn's weariest leaves, For these the sun filled once with sap of life. O thou my lord that hadst me to thy wife, Dost thou not fear at all, remembering me, The love that bowed my whole soul down to thee? Is this so wholly nought for man to dread, Man, whose life walks between the quick and dead, Naked, and warred about with wind and sea. That one should love and hate as I do thee? That one should live in all the world his foe So mortal as the hate that loves him so?

Nought, is it nought, O husband, O my knight, O strong man and indomitable in fight,

That one more weak than foam-bells on the sea

Should have in heart such thoughts as I of thee?

Thou art bound about with stately strengths for bands:

What strength shall keep thee from my strengthless hands?

Thou art girt about with goodly guards and great : What fosse may fence thee round as deep as hate ? Thou art wise : will wisdom teach thee fear of me ? Thou art great of heart : shall this deliver thee ? What wall so massive, or what tower so high, Shall be thy surety that thou shouldst not die, If that which comes against thee be but I? Who shall rise up of power to take thy part, What skill find strength to save, what strength find art,

If that which wars against thee be my heart? Not iron, nor the might of force afield, Nor edge of sword, nor sheltering weight of shield, Nor all thy fame since all thy praise began, Nor all the love and laud thou hast of man, Nor, though his noiseless hours with wool be shod, Shall God's love keep thee from the wrath of God. O son of sorrows, hast thou said at heart, Haply, God loves thee, God shall take thy part, Who hath all these years endured thee, since thy birth

From sorrow's womb bade sin be born on earth? So long he hath cast his buckler over thee, Shall he not surely guard thee even from me? Yea, but if yet he give thee while I live Into mine hands as he shall surely give,

Ere death at last bring darkness on thy face, Call then on him, call not on me for grace, Cast not away one prayer, one suppliant breath, On me that commune all this while with death. For I that was not and that was thy wife Desire not but one hour of all thy life Wherein to triumph till that hour be past; But this mine hour I look for is thy last."

So mused she till the fire in sea and sky Sank, and the northwest wind spake harsh on high, And like the sea's heart waxed her heart that heard, Strong, dark, and bitter, till the keen wind's word Seemed of her own soul spoken, and the breath All round her not of darkness, but of death.

THE LAST PILGRIMAGE

ENOUGH of ease, O Love, enough of light, Enough of rest before the shadow of night. Strong Love, whom death finds feebler ; kingly Love, Whom time discrowns in season, seeing thy dove Spell-stricken by the serpent ; for thy sake These that saw light see night's dawn only break, Night's cup filled up with slumber, whence men think The draught more dread than thine was dire to drink. O Love, thy day sets darkling : hope and fear Fall from thee standing stern as death stands here.

For what have these to do with fear or hope On whom the gates of outer darkness ope, On whom the door of life's desire is barred? Past like a cloud, their days in Joyous Gard Gleam like a cloud the westering sun stains red Till all the blood of day's blithe heart be bled And all night's heart requickened; in their eyes So flame and fade those far memorial skies, So shines the moorland, so revives the sea, Whereon they gazing mused of things to be And wist not more of them than waters know What wind with next day's change of tide shall blow. Dark roll the deepening days whose waves divide Unseasonably, with storm-struck change of tide, Tristram from Iseult : nor may sorrow say If better wind shall blow than yesterday With next day risen or any day to come. For ere the songs of summer's death fell dumb, And autumn bade the imperial moorlands change Their purples, and the bracken's bloom grow strange As hope's green blossom touched with time's harsh rust, Was all their joy of life shaken to dust, And all its fire made ashes : by the strand

Where late they strayed and communed hand from hand

For the last time fell separate, eyes of eyes Took for the last time leave, and saw the skies Dark with their deep division. The last time-The last that ever love's rekindling rhyme Should keep for them life's days and nights in tune With refluence of the morning and the moon Alternative in music, and make one The secrets of the stardawn and the sun For these twain souls ere darkness held them fast; The last before the labour marked for last And toil of utmost knighthood, till the wage Of rest might crown his crowning pilgrimage Whereon forth faring must he take farewell, With spear for staff and sword for scallop-shell And scrip wherein close memory hoarded yet Things holier held than death might well forget; The last time ere the travel were begun Whose goal is unbeholden of the sun, The last wherewith love's eyes might yet be lit, Came, and they could but dream they knew not it. VOL. IV. τ

For Tristram parting from her wist at heart How well she wist they might not choose but part, And he pass forth a pilgrim, when there came A sound of summons in the high king's name For succour toward his vassal Triamour, King in wild Wales, now spoiled of all his power, As Tristram's father ere his fair son's birth, By one the strongest of the sons of earth, Urgan, an iron bulk of giant mould : And Iseult in Tintagel as of old Sat crowned with state and sorrow : for her lord At Arthur's hand required her back restored, And willingly compelled against her will She yielded, saying within her own soul still Some season yet of soft or stormier breath Should haply give her life again or death : For now nor quick nor dead nor bright nor dark Were all her nights and days wherein King Mark Held haggard watch upon her, and his eyes Were cloudier than the gradual wintering skies That closed about the wan wild land and sea. And bitter toward him waxed her heart : but he Was rent in twain betwixt harsh love and hate With pain and passion half compassionate That yearned and laboured to be quit of shame, And could not : and his life grew smouldering flame. And hers a cloud full-charged with storm and shower.

Though touched with trembling gleams of fire's bright flower

That flashed and faded on its fitful verge,

As hope would strive with darkness and emerge

And sink, a swimmer strangled by the swallowing surge

But Tristram by dense hills and deepening vales Rode through the wild glad wastes of glorious Wales, High-hearted with desire of happy fight And strong in soul with merrier sense of might Than since the fair first years that hailed him knight: For all his will was toward the war, so long Had love repressed and wrought his glory wrong, So far the triumph and so fair the praise Seemed now that kindled all his April days. And here in bright blown autumn, while his life Was summer's yet for strength toward love or strife, Blithe waxed his hope toward battle, and high desire To pluck once more as out of circling fire Fame, the broad flower whose breath makes death more sweet Than roses crushed by love's receding feet. But all the lovely land wherein he went The blast of ruin and ravenous war had rent ; And black with fire the fields where homesteads were, And foul with festering dead the high soft air,

And loud with wail of women many a stream

Whose own live song was like love's deepening dream,

Spake all against the spoiler : wherefore still Wrath waxed with pity, quickening all his will, In Tristram's heart for every league he rode Through the aching land so broad a curse bestrode With so supreme a shadow : till one dawn Above the green bloom of a gleaming lawn, High on the strait steep windy bridge that spanned A glen's deep mouth, he saw that shadow stand Visible, sword on thigh and mace in hand Vast as the mid bulk of a roof-tree's beam. So, sheer above the wild wolf-haunted stream, Dire as the face disfeatured of a dream, Rose Urgan : and his eyes were night and flame ; But like the fiery dawn were his that came Against him, lit with more sublime desire Than lifts toward heaven the leaping heart of fire : And strong in vantage of his perilous place The huge high presence, red as earth's first race, Reared like a reed the might up of his mace, And smote : but lightly Tristram swerved, and drove

Right in on him, whose void stroke only clove Air, and fell wide, thundering athwart : and he Sent forth a stormier cry than wind or sea

When midnight takes the tempest for her lord .

And all the glen's throat seemed as hell's that roared;

But high like heaven's light over hell shone Tristram's sword,

Falling, and bright as storm shows God's bare brand

Flashed as it shore sheer off the huge right hand

Whose strength was as the shadow of death on all that land.

And like the trunk of some grim tree sawn through Reeled Urgan, as his left hand grasped and drew A steel by sorcerers tempered : and anew

Raged the red wind of fluctuant fight, till all

The cliffs were thrilled as by the clangorous call

Of storm's blown trumpets from the core of night,

Charging : and even as with the storm-wind's might On Tristram's helm that sword crashed : and the

knight

Fell, and his arms clashed, and a wide cry brake From those far off that heard it, for his sake Soul-stricken : and that bulk of monstrous birth Sent forth again a cry more dire for mirth : But ere the sunbright arms were soiled of earth They flashed again, re-risen : and swift and loud Rang the strokes out as from a circling cloud, So dense the dust wrought over them its drifted shroud.

Strong strokes, within the mist their battle made, Each hailed on other through the shifting shade That clung about them hurtling as the swift fight swayed :

And each between the jointed corslet saw Break forth his foe's bright blood at each grim flaw Steel made in hammered iron : till again

The fiend put forth his might more strong for pain And cleft the great knight's glittering shield in twain,

Laughing for very wrath and thirst to kill, A beast's broad laugh of blind and wolfish will, And smote again ere Tristram's lips drew breath Panting, and swept as by the sense of death, That surely should have touched and sealed them fast

Save that the sheer stroke shrilled aside, and passed Frustrate : but answering Tristram smote anew, And thrust the brute breast as with lightning through Clean with one cleaving stroke of perfect might : And violently the vast bulk leapt upright, And plunged over the bridge, and fell : and all The cliffs reverberate from his monstrous fall Rang : and the land by Tristram's grace was free. So with high laud and honour thence went he, And southward set his sail again, and passed The lone land's ending, first beheld and last Of eves that look on England from the sea :

And his heart mourned within him, knowing how she

Whose heart with his was fatefully made fast

Sat now fast bound, as though some charm were cast

About her, such a brief space eastward thence, And yet might soul not break the bonds of sense And bring her to him in very life and breath More than had this been even the sea of death That washed between them, and its wide sweet light

The dim strait's darkness of the narrowing night That shuts about men dying whose souls put forth To pierce its passage through: but south and north Alike for him were other than they were : For all the northward coast shone smooth and fair, And off its iron cliffs the keen-edged air Blew summer, kindling from her mute bright mouth; But winter breathed out of the murmuring south, Where, pale with wrathful watch on passing ships, The lone wife lay in wait with wan dumb lips. Yet, sailing where the shoreward ripple curled Of the most wild sweet waves in all the world, His soul took comfort even for joy to see The strong deep joy of living sun and sea, The large deep love of living sea and land, As past the lonely lion-guarded strand Where that huge warder lifts his couchant sides, Asleep, above the sleepless lapse of tides, The light sail swept, and past the unsounded caves Unsearchable, wherein the pulse of waves

Throbs through perpetual darkness to and fro, And the blind night swims heavily below While heavily the strong noon broods above, Even to the very bay whence very Love, Strong daughter of the giant gods who wrought Sun, earth, and sea out of their procreant thought, Most meetly might have risen, and most divine Beheld and heard things round her sound and shine From floors of foam and gold to walls of serpentine. For splendid as the limbs of that supreme Incarnate beauty through men's visions gleam, Whereof all fairest things are even but shadow or

dream,

And lovely like as Love's own heavenliest face, Gleams there and glows the presence and the grace Even of the mother of all, in perfect pride of place. For otherwhere beneath our world-wide sky There may not be beheld of men that die Aught else like this that dies not, nor may stress Of ages that bow down men's works make less The exultant awe that clothes with power its loveliness.

For who sets eye thereon soever knows How since these rocks and waves first rolled and rose The marvel of their many-coloured might Hath borne this record sensible to sight, The witness and the symbol of their own delight, The gospel graven of life's most heavenly law, Joy, brooding on its own still soul with awe, A sense of godlike rest in godlike strife, The sovereign conscience of the spirit of life. Nor otherwhere on strand or mountain tower Hath such fair beauty shining forth in flower Put on the imperial robe of such imperious power. For all the radiant rocks from depth to height Burn with vast bloom of glories blossom-bright

- As though the sun's own hand had thrilled them through with light
- And stained them through with splendour : yet from thence
- Such awe strikes rapture through the spirit of sense

From all the inaccessible sea-wall's girth,

That exultation, bright at heart as mirth,

Bows deeper down before the beauty of earth Than fear may bow down ever : nor shall one Who meets at Alpine dawn the mounting sun On heights too high for many a wing to climb Be touched with sense of aught seen more sublime Than here smiles high and sweet in face of heaven and time.

For here the flower of fire, the soft hoar bloom Of springtide olive-woods, the warm green gloom

Of clouded seas that swell and sound with dawn of doom,

The keen thwart lightning and the wan grey light Of stormy sunrise crossed and vexed with night, Flash, loom, and laugh with divers hues in one From all the curved cliff's face, till day be done, Against the sea's face and the gazing sun. And whensoever a strong wave, high in hope, Sweeps up some smooth slant breadth of stone aslope,

That glowed with duskier fire of hues less bright, Swift as it sweeps back springs to sudden sight The splendour of the moist rock's fervent light, Fresh as from dew of birth when time was born Out of the world-conceiving womb of morn.

All its quenched flames and darkling hues divine Leap into lustrous life and laugh and shine And darken into swift and dim decline For one brief breath's space till the next wave run Right up, and ripple down again, undone, And leave it to be kissed and kindled of the sun. And all these things, bright as they shone before Man first set foot on earth or sail from shore, Rose not less radiant than the sun sees now When the autumn sea was cloven of Tristram's prow, And strong in sorrow and hope and woful will That hope might move not nor might sorrow kill He held his way back toward the wild sad shore Whence he should come to look on these no more, Nor ever, save with sunless eyes shut fast, Sail home to sleep in home-born earth at last.

And all these things fled fleet as light or breath Past, and his heart waxed cold and dull as death, Or swelled but as the tides of sorrow swell, To sink with sullen sense of slow farewell. So surely seemed the silence even to sigh Assurance of inveterate prophecy,

"Thou shalt not come again home hither ere thou die."

And the wind mourned and triumphed, and the sea Wailed and took heart and trembled; nor might he Hear more of comfort in their speech, or see More certitude in all the waste world's range Than the only certitude of death and change. And as the sense and semblance fluctuated Of all things heard and seen alive or dead That smote far off upon his ears or eyes Or memory mixed with forecasts fain to rise And fancies faint as ghostliest prophecies, So seemed his own soul, changefully forlorn, To shrink and triumph and mount up and mourn; Yet all its fitful waters, clothed with night, Lost heart not wholly, lacked not wholly light, Seeing over life and death one star in sight Where evening's gates as fair as morning's ope, Whose name was memory, but whose flame was hope. For all the tides of thought that rose and sank Felt its fair strength wherefrom strong sorrow shrank A mightier trust than time could change or cloy, More strong than sorrow, more secure than joy. So came he, nor content nor all unblest, Back to the grey old land of Merlin's rest.

But ere six paces forth on shore he trod Before him stood a knight with feet unshod, And kneeling called upon him, as on God Might sick men call for pity, praying aloud With hands held up and head made bare and bowed; "Tristram, for God's love and thine own dear fame, I Tristram that am one with thee in name And one in heart with all that praise thee-I, Most woful man of all that may not die For heartbreak and the heavier scourge of shame, By all thy glory done our woful name Beseech thee, called of all men gentlest knight, Be now not slow to do my sorrows right. I charge thee for thy fame's sake through this land, I pray thee by thine own wife's fair white hand, Have pity of me whose love is borne away By one that makes of poor men's lives his prey, A felon masked with knighthood : at his side Seven brethren hath he night or day to ride With seven knights more that wait on all his will: And here at hand, ere yet one day fulfil

Its flight through light and darkness, shall they fare Forth, and my bride among them, whom they bear Through these wild lands his prisoner; and if now I lose her, and my prayer be vain, and thou Less fain to serve love's servants than of yore, Then surely shall I see her face no more. But if thou wilt, for love's sake of the bride Who lay most loved of women at thy side, Strike with me, straight then hence behoves us ride And rest between the moorside and the sea Where we may smite them passing : but for me, Poor stranger, me not worthy scarce to touch Thy kind strong hand, how shouldst thou do so much? For now lone left this long time waits thy wife And lacks her lord and light of wedded life Whilst thou far off art famous: yet thy fame, If thou take pity on me that bear thy name Unworthily, but by that name implore Thy grace, how shall not even thy fame grow more? But be thy will as God's among us done, Who art far in fame above us as the sun : Yet only of him have all men help and grace."

And all the lordly light of Tristram's face Was softened as the sun's in kindly spring. "Nay, then may God send me as evil a thing When I give ear not to such prayers," he said, "And make my place among the nameless dead When I put back one hour the time to smite And do the unrighteous griefs of good men right. Behold, I will not enter in nor rest Here in mine own halls till this piteous quest Find end ere noon to-morrow : but do thou, Whose sister's face I may not look on now, Go, Ganhardine, with tiding of the vow That bids me turn aside for one day's strife Or live dishonoured all my days of life, And greet for me in brother's wise my wife, And crave her pardon that for knighthood's sake And womanhood's, whose bands may no man break And keep the bands of bounden honour fast, I seek not her till two nights yet be past And this my quest accomplished, so God please By me to give this young man's anguish ease And on his wrongdoer's head his wrong requite."

And Tristram with that woful thankful knight Rode by the seaside moorland wastes away Between the quickening night and darkening day Ere half the gathering stars had heart to shine. And lightly toward his sister Ganhardine Sped, where she sat and gazed alone afar Above the grey sea for the sunset star, And lightly kissed her hand and lightly spake His tiding of that quest for knighthood's sake. And the white-handed Iseult, bowing her head, Gleamed on him with a glance athwart, and said, "As God's on earth and far above the sun, So toward his handmaid be my lord's will done." And doubts too dim to question or divine Touched as with shade the spirit of Ganhardine, Hearing ; and scarce for half a doubtful breath His bright light heart held half a thought of death And knew not whence this darkling thought might be, But surely not his sister's work : for she Was ever sweet and good as summer air, And soft as dew when all the night is fair, And gracious as the golden maiden moon When darkness craves her blessing : so full soon

His mind was light again as leaping waves, Nor dreamed that hers was like a field of graves Where no man's foot dares swerve to left or right, Nor ear dares hearken, nor dares eye take sight Of aught that moves and murmurs there at night.

But by the sea-banks where at morn their foes Might find them, lay those knightly name-fellows, One sick with grief of heart and sleepless, one With heart of hope triumphant as the sun Dreaming asleep of love and fame and fight: But sleep at last wrapped warm the wan young

knight;

And Tristram with the first pale windy light Woke ere the sun spake summons, and his ear Caught the sea's call that fired his heart to hear, A noise of waking waters : for till dawn The sea was silent as a mountain lawn When the wind speaks not, and the pines are dumb, And summer takes her fill ere autumn come Of life more soft than slumber : but ere day Rose, and the first beam smote the bounding bay, Up sprang the strength of the dark East, and took With its wide wings the waters as they shook, And hurled them huddling on aheap, and cast The full sea shoreward with a great glad blast, Blown from the heart of morning : and with joy Full-souled and perfect passion, as a boy That leaps up light to wrestle with the sea For pure heart's gladness and large ecstasy, Up sprang the might of Tristram; and his soul Vearned for delight within him, and waxed whole As a young child's with rapture of the hour That brought his spirit and all the world to flower,

And all the bright blood in his veins beat time To the wind's clarion and the water's chime That called him and he followed it and stood On the sand's verge before the grey great flood Where the white hurtling heads of waves that met Rose unsaluted of the sunrise yet. And from his heart's root outward shot the sweet Strong joy that thrilled him to the hands and feet. Filling his limbs with pleasure and glad might, And his soul drank the immeasurable delight That earth drinks in with morning, and the free Limitless love that lifts the stirring sea When on her bare bright bosom as a bride She takes the young sun, perfect in his pride, Home to his place with passion : and the heart Trembled for joy within the man whose part Was here not least in living ; and his mind Was rapt abroad beyond man's meaner kind And pierced with love of all things and with mirth Moved to make one with heaven and heavenlike earth And with the light live water. So awhile He watched the dim sea with a deepening smile, And felt the sound and savour and swift flight Of waves that fled beneath the fading night And died before the darkness, like a song With harps between and trumpets blown along Through the loud air of some triumphant day, Sink through his spirit and purge all sense away Save of the glorious gladness of his hour And all the world about to break in flower Before the sovereign laughter of the sun; And he, ere night's wide work lay all undone, As earth from her bright body casts off night, Cast off his raiment for a rapturous fight

And stood between the sea's edge and the sea Naked, and godlike of his mould as he Whose swift foot's sound shook all the towers of

Troy; So clothed with might, so girt upon with joy As, ere the knife had shorn to feed the fire His glorious hair before the unkindled pyre Whereon the half of his great heart was laid, Stood, in the light of his live limbs arrayed, Child of heroic earth and heavenly sea, The flower of all men : scarce less bright than he, If any of all men latter-born might stand, Stood Tristram, silent, on the glimmering strand. Not long : but with a cry of love that rang As from a trumpet golden-mouthed, he sprang, As toward a mother's where his head might rest Her child rejoicing, toward the strong sea's breast That none may gird nor measure : and his heart Sent forth a shout that bade his lips not part, But triumphed in him silent : no man's voice, No song, no sound of clarions that rejoice, Can set that glory forth which fills with fire The body and soul that have their whole desire Silent, and freer than birds or dreams are free Take all their will of all the encountering sea. And toward the foam he bent and forward smote, Laughing, and launched his body like a boat Full to the sea-breach, and against the tide Struck strongly forth with amorous arms made wide

To take the bright breast of the wave to his And on his lips the sharp sweet minute's kiss Given of the wave's lip for a breath's space curled And pure as at the daydawn of the world.

And round him all the bright rough shuddering sea Kindled, as though the world were even as he. Heart-stung with exultation of desire : And all the life that moved him seemed to aspire, As all the sea's life toward the sun : and still Delight within him waxed with quickening will More smooth and strong and perfect as a flame That springs and spreads, till each glad limb became A note of rapture in the tune of life, Live music mild and keen as sleep and strife : Till the sweet change that bids the sense grow sure Of deeper depth and purity more pure Wrapped him and lapped him round with clearer cold, And all the rippling green grew royal gold Between him and the far sun's rising rim. And like the sun his heart rejoiced in him, And brightened with a broadening flame of mirth : And hardly seemed its life a part of earth, But the life kindled of a fiery birth And passion of a new-begotten son Between the live sea and the living sun. And mightier grew the joy to meet full-faced Each wave, and mount with upward plunge, and taste The rapture of its rolling strength, and cross Its flickering crown of snows that flash and toss Like plumes in battle's blithest charge, and thence To match the next with yet more strenuous sense; Till on his eyes the light beat hard and bade His face turn west and shoreward through the glad Swift revel of the waters golden-clad, And back with light reluctant heart he bore Across the broad-backed rollers in to shore ; Strong-spirited for the chance and cheer of fight, And donned his arms again, and felt the might

THE LAST PILGRIMAGE

In all his limbs rejoice for strength, and praised God for such life as that whereon he gazed, And wist not surely its joy was even as fleet As that which laughed and lapsed against his feet, The bright thin grey foam-blossom, glad and hoar, That flings its flower along the flowerless shore On sand or shingle, and still with sweet strange snows. As where one great white storm-dishevelled rose May rain her wild leaves on a windy land, Strews for long leagues the sounding slope of strand, And flower on flower falls flashing, and anew A fresh light leaps up whence the last flash flew, And casts its brief glad gleam of life away To fade not flowerwise but as drops the day Storm-smitten, when at once the dark devours Heaven and the sea and earth with all their flowers ; No star in heaven, on earth no rose to see, But the white blown brief blossoms of the sea, That make her green gloom starrier than the sky, Dance yet before the tempest's tune, and die. And all these things he glanced upon, and knew How fair they shone, from earth's least flake of dew To stretch of seas and imminence of skies. Unwittingly, with unpresageful eyes, For the last time. The world's half heavenly face. The music of the silence of the place, The confluence and the refluence of the sea. The wind's note ringing over wold and lea, Smote once more through him keen as fire that smote, Rang once more through him one reverberate note, That faded as he turned again and went, Fulfilled by strenuous joy with strong content, To take his last delight of labour done That yet should be beholden of the sun VOL. Or ever give man comfort of his hand.

Beside a wood's edge in the broken land An hour at wait the twain together stood, Till swift between the moorside and the wood Flashed the spears forward of the coming train ; And seeing beside the strong chief spoiler's rein His wan love riding prisoner in the crew, Forth with a cry the young man leapt, and flew Right on that felon sudden as a flame ; And hard at hand the mightier Tristram came, Bright as the sun and terrible as fire : And there had sword and spear their soul's desire, And blood that guenched the spear's thirst as it poured Slaked royally the hunger of the sword, Till the fierce heart of steel could scarce fulfil Its greed and ravin of insatiate will. For three the fiery spear of Tristram drove Down ere a point of theirs his harness clove Or its own sheer mid shaft splintered in twain; And his heart bounded in him, and was fain As fire or wind that takes its fill by night Of tempest and of triumph : so the knight Rejoiced and ranged among them, great of hand, Till seven lay slain upon the heathery sand Or in the dense breadth of the woodside fern. Nor did his heart not mightier in him burn Seeing at his hand that young knight fallen, and high The red sword reared again that bade him die. But on the slayer exulting like the flame Whose foot foreshines the thunder Tristram came Raging, for piteous wrath had made him fire; And as a lion's look his face was dire

That flashed against his foeman ere the sword Lightened and wrought the heart's will of its lord,

And clove through casque and crown the wrongdoer's head.

And right and left about their dark chief dead Hurtled and hurled those felons to and fro, Till as a storm-wind scatters leaves and snow His right hand ravening scattered them; but one That fled with sidelong glance athwart the sun Shot, and the shaft flew sure, and smote aright, Full in the wound's print of his great first fight When at his young strength's peril he made free Cornwall, and slew beside its bordering sea The fair land's foe, who yielding up his breath Yet left him wounded nigh to dark slow death. And hardly with long toil thence he won home Between the grey moor and the glimmering foam, And halting fared through his own gate, and fell, Thirsting : for as the sleepless fire of hell The fire within him of his wound again Burned, and his face was dark as death for pain. And blind the blithe light of his eyes : but they Within that watched and wist not of the fray Came forth and cried aloud on him for woe. And scarce aloud his thanks fell faint and slow As men reared up the strong man fallen and bore Down the deep hall that looked along the shore, And laid him soft abed, and sought in vain If herb or hand of leech might heal his pain. And the white-handed Iseult hearkening heard All, and drew nigh, and spake no wifely word, But gazed upon him doubtfully, with eyes Clouded; and he in kindly knightly wise Spake with scant breath, and smiling : "Surely this Is penance for discourteous lips to kiss

And feel the brand burn through them, here to lie And lack the strength here to do more than sigh And hope not hence for pardon." Then she bowed Her head, still silent as a stooping cloud, And laid her lips against his face ; and he Felt sink a shadow across him as the sea Might feel a cloud stoop toward it : and his heart Darkened as one that wastes by sorcerous art And knows not whence it withers : and he turned Back from her emerald eyes his own, and yearned All night for eyes all golden : and the dark Hung sleepless round him till the loud first lark Rang record forth once more of darkness done, And all things born took comfort from the sun.

THE SAILING OF THE SWAN

FATE, that was born ere spirit and flesh were made, The fire that fills man's life with light and shade; The power beyond all godhead which puts on All forms of multitudinous unison, A raiment of eternal change inwrought With shapes and hues more subtly spun than thought, Where all things old bear fruit of all things new And one deep chord throbs all the music through, The chord of change unchanging, shadow and light Inseparable as reverberate day from night ; Fate, that of all things save the soul of man Is lord and God since body and soul began; Fate, that keeps all the tune of things in chime ; Fate, that breathes power upon the lips of time; That smites and soothes with heavy and healing hand All joys and sorrows born in life's dim land, Till joy be found a shadow and sorrow a breath And life no discord in the tune with death, But all things fain alike to die and live In pulse and lapse of tides alternative, Through silence and through sound of peace and strife, Till birth and death be one in sight of life; Fate, heard and seen of no man's eyes or ears, To no man shown through light of smiles or tears,

And moved of no man's prayer to fold its wings ; Fate, that is night and light on worldly things; Fate, that is fire to burn and sea to drown, Strength to build up and thunder to cast down; Fate, shield and screen for each man's lifelong head, And sword at last or dart that strikes it dead ; Fate, higher than heaven and deeper than the grave, That saves and spares not, spares and doth not save; Fate, that in gods' wise is not bought and sold For prayer or price of penitence or gold ; Whose law shall live when life bids earth farewell, Whose justice hath for shadows heaven and hell. Whose judgment into no god's hand is given, Nor is its doom not more than hell or heaven : Fate, that is pure of love and clean of hate, Being equal-eyed as nought may be but fate; Through many and weary days of foiled desire Leads life to rest where tears no more take fire ; Through many and weary dreams of quenched delight Leads life through death past sense of day and night.

Nor shall they feel or fear, whose date is done, Aught that made once more dark the living sun And bitterer in their breathing lips the breath Than the dark dawn and bitter dust of death. For all the light, with fragrance as of flowers, That clothes the lithe live limbs of separate hours, More sweet to savour and more clear to sight Dawns on the soul death's undivided night. No vigils has that perfect night to keep, No fever-fits of vision shake that sleep. Nor if they wake, and any place there be Wherein the soul may feel her wings beat free Through air too clear and still for sound or strife If life were haply death, and death be life ; If love with yet some lovelier laugh revive, And song relume the light it bore alive, And friendship, found of all earth's gifts most good, Stand perfect in perpetual brotherhood; If aught indeed at all of all this be, Though none might say nor any man might see, Might he that sees the shade thereof not say This dream were trustier than the truth of day. Nor haply may not hope, with heart more clear, Burn deathward, and the doubtful soul take cheer, Seeing through the channelled darkness yearn a star

Whose eyebeams are not as the morning's are, Transient, and subjugate of lordlier light, But all unconquerable by noon or night, Being kindled only of life's own inmost fire, Truth, stablished and made sure by strong desire. Fountain of all things living, source and seed, Force that perforce transfigures dream to deed God that begets on time, the body of death, Eternity : nor may man's darkening breath, Albeit it stain, disfigure or destroy The glass wherein the soul sees life and joy Only, with strength renewed and spirit of youth, And brighter than the sun's the body of Truth Eternal, unimaginable of man, Whose very face not Thought's own eyes may scan, But see far off his radiant feet at least, Trampling the head of Fear, the false high priest, Whose broken chalice foams with blood no more. And prostrate on that high priest's chancel floor,

Bruised, overthrown, blind, maimed, with bloodless rod,

The miscreation of his miscreant God,

That sovereign shadow cast of souls that dwell In darkness and the prison-house of hell Whose walls are built of deadly dread, and bound The gates thereof with dreams as iron round, And all the bars therein and stanchions wrought Of shadow forged like steel and tempered thought And words like swords and thunder-clouded creeds And faiths more dire than sin's most direful deeds : That shade accursed and worshipped, which hath made

The soul of man that brought it forth a shade Black as the womb of darkness, void and vain, A throne for fear, a pasturage for pain, Impotent, abject, clothed upon with lies, A foul blind fume of words and prayers that rise, Aghast and harsh, abhorrent and abhorred, Fierce as its God, blood-saturate as its Lord : With loves and mercies on its lips that hiss Comfort, and kill compassion with a kiss, And strike the world black with their blasting breath; That ghost whose core of life is very death And all its light of heaven a shadow of hell, Fades, falls, wanes, withers by none other spell But theirs whose eyes and ears have seen and heard Not the face naked, not the perfect word, But the bright sound and feature felt from far Of life which feeds the spirit and the star, Thrills the live light of all the suns that roll, And stirs the still sealed springs of every soul.

Three dim days through, three slumberless nights long,

Perplexed at dawn, oppressed at evensong, The strong man's soul now sealed indeed with pain And all its springs half dried with drought, had lain

Prisoner within the fleshly dungeon-dress Sore chafed and wasted with its weariness. And fain it would have found the star, and fain Made this funereal prison-house of pain A watch-tower whence its eyes might sweep, and see If any place for any hope might be Beyond the hells and heavens of sleep and strife, Or any light at all of any life Beyond the dense false darkness woven above, And could not, lacking grace to look on love, And in the third night's dying hour he spake, Seeing scarce the seals that bound the dayspring break And scarce the daystar burn above the sea : "O Ganhardine, my brother true to me, I charge thee by those nights and days we knew No great while since in England, by the dew That bathed those nights with blessing, and the fire That thrilled those days as music thrills a lyre, Do now for me perchance the last good deed That ever love may crave or life may need Ere love lay life in ashes : take to thee My ship that shows aloft against the sea Carved on her stem the semblance of a swan, And ere the waves at even again wax wan Pass, if it may be, to my lady's land, And give this ring into her secret hand, And bid her think how hard on death I lie, And fain would look upon her face and die. But as a merchant's laden be the bark With royal ware for fraughtage, that King Mark May take for toll thereof some costly thing ; And when this gift finds grace before the king,

Choose forth a cup, and put therein my ring

Where sureliest only of one it may be seen, And bid her handmaid bear it to the queen For earnest of thine homage : then shall she Fear, and take counsel privily with thee, To know what errand there is thine from me And what my need in secret of her sight. But make thee two sails, one like sea-foam white To spread for signal if thou bring her back, And if she come not see the sail be black, That I may know or ever thou take land If these my lips may die upon her hand Or hers may never more be mixed with mine."

And his heart quailed for grief in Ganhardine, Hearing ; and all his brother bade he swore Surely to do, and straight fare forth from shore. But the white-handed Iseult hearkening heard All, and her heart waxed hot, and every word Thereon seemed graven and printed in her thought As lines with fire and molten iron wrought. And hard within her heavy heart she cursed Both, and her life was turned to fiery thirst, And all her soul was hunger, and its breath Of hope and life a blast of raging death. For only in hope of evil was her life. So bitter burned within the unchilded wife A virgin lust for vengeance, and such hate Wrought in her now the fervent work of fate.

Then with a south-west wind the Swan set forth, And over wintering waters bore to north, And round the wild land's windy westward end Up the blown channel bade her bright way bend East on toward high Tintagel : where at dark Landing, fair welcome found they of King Mark, And Ganhardine with Brangwain as of old Spake, and she took the cup of chiselled gold Wherein lay secret Tristram's trothplight ring, And bare it unbeholden of the king Even to her lady's hand, which hardly took A gift whereon a queen's eyes well might look, With grace forlorn of weary gentleness. But, seeing, her life leapt in her, keen to guess The secret of the symbol : and her face Flashed bright with blood whence all its grief-worn grace Took fire and kindled to the quivering hair. And in the dark soft hour of starriest air

Thrilled through with sense of midnight, when the world

Feels the wide wings of sleep about it furled, Down stole the queen, deep-muffled to her war Mute restless lips, and came where yet the Swan Swung fast at anchor : whence by starlight she Hoised snowbright sails, and took the glimmering sea.

But all the long night long more keen and sore His wound's grief waxed in Tristram evermore, And heavier always hung his heart asway Between dim fear and clouded hope of day. And still with face and heart at silent strife Beside him watched the maiden called his wife, Patient, and spake not save when scarce he spake, Murmuring with sense distraught and spirit awake Speech bitterer than the words thereof were sweet: And hatred thrilled her to the hands and feet, Listening : for alway back reiterate came The passionate faint burden of her name. Nor ever through the labouring lips astir Came any word of any thought of her. But the soul wandering struggled and clung hard Only to dreams of joy in Joyous Gard Or wildwood nights beside the Cornish strand, Or Merlin's holier sleep here hard at hand Wrapped round with deep soft spells in dim Broceliande.

And with such thirst as joy's drained wine-cup leaves When fear to hope as hope to memory cleaves His soul desired the dewy sense of leaves, The soft green smell of thickets drenched with dawn. The faint slot kindling on the fiery lawn As day's first hour made keen the spirit again That lured and spurred on quest his hound Hodain, The breeze, the bloom, the splendour and the sound, That stung like fire the hunter and the hound, The pulse of wind, the passion of the sea, The rapture of the woodland : then would he Sigh, and as one that fain would all be dead Heavily turn his heavy-laden head Back, and close eyes for comfort, finding none. And fain he would have died or seen the sun, Being sick at heart of darkness : yet afresh Began the long strong strife of spirit and flesh And branching pangs of thought whose branches bear The bloodred fruit whose core is black, despair. And the wind slackened and again grew great, Palpitant as men's pulses palpitate Between the flowing and ebbing tides of fate That wash their lifelong waifs of weal and woe Through night and light and twilight to and fro-Now as a pulse of hope its heartbeat throbbea, Now like one stricken shrank and sank and sobbed,

Then, yearning as with child of death, put forth A wail that filled the night up south and north With woful sound of waters : and he said, "So might the wind wail if the world were dead And its wings wandered over nought but sea. I would I knew she would not come to me, For surely she will come not : then should I, Once knowing I shall not look upon her, die. I knew not life could so long breathe such breath As I do. Nay, what grief were this, if death, The sole sure friend of whom the whole world saith He lies not, nor hath ever this been said, That death would heal not grief—if death were dead And all ways closed whence grief might pass with life !"

Then softly spake his watching virgin wife Out of her heart, deep down below her breath : "Fear not but death shall come-and after death Judgment." And he that heard not answered her, Saying-" Ah, but one there was, if truth not err, For true men's trustful tongues have said it-one Whom these mine eyes knew living while the sun Looked yet upon him, and mine own ears heard The deep sweet sound once of his godlike word-Who sleeps and dies not, but with soft live breath Takes always all the deep delight of death, Through love's gift of a woman : but for me Love's hand is not the hand of Nimue, Love's word no still smooth murmur of the dove, No kiss of peace for me the kiss of love. Nor, whatsoe'er thy life's love ever give, Dear, shall it ever bid me sleep or live; Nor from thy brows and lips and living breast As his from Nimue's shall my soul take rest ;

Not rest but unrest hath our long love given-Unrest on earth that wins not rest in heaven. What rest may we take ever? what have we Had ever more of peace than has the sea? Has not our life been as a wind that blows Through lonelier lands than rear the wild white rose That each year sees requickened, but for us Time once and twice hath here or there done thus And left the next year following empty and bare? What rose hath our last year's rose left for heir, What wine our last year's vintage? and to me More were one fleet forbidden sense of thee, One perfume of thy present grace, one thought Made truth one hour, ere all mine hours be nought, One very word, breath, look, sign, touch of hand, Than all the green leaves in Broceliande Full of sweet sound, full of sweet wind and sun ; O God, thou knowest I would no more but one, I would no more but once more ere I die Find thus much mercy. Nay, but then were I Happier than he whom there thy grace hath found, For thine it must be, this that wraps him round, Thine only, albeit a fiend's force gave him birth, Thine that has given him heritage on earth Of slumber-sweet eternity to keep Fast in soft hold of everliving sleep. Happier were I, more sinful man, than he, Whom one love-worthier then than Nimue Should with a breath make blest among the dead."

And the wan wedded maiden answering said, Soft as hate speaks within itself apart : "Surely ye shall not, ye that rent mine heart, Being one in sin, in punishment be twain."

And the great knight that heard not spake again

- And sighed, but sweet thought of sweet things gone by
- Kindled with fire of joy the very sigh

And touched it through with rapture : "Ay, this were

How much more than the sun and sunbright air,

How much more than the springtide, how much more Than sweet strong sea-wind quickening wave and shore

With one divine pulse of continuous breath, If she might kiss me with the kiss of death, And make the light of life by death's look dim !"

And the white wedded virgin answered him, Inwardly, wan with hurt no herb makes whole : "Yea surely, ye whose sin hath slain my soul, Surely your own souls shall have peace in death And pass with benediction in their breath And blessing given of mine their sin hath slain."

And Tristram with sore yearning spake again, Saying: "Yea, might this thing once be, how should I,

With all my soul made one thanksgiving, die, And pass before what judgment-seat may be, And cry, ' Lord, now do all thou wilt with me, Take all thy fill of justice, work thy will ; Though all thy heart of wrath have all its fill, My heart of suffering shall endure, and say, For that thou gavest me living yesterday I bless thee though thou curse me.' Ay, and well Might one cast down into the gulf of hell, Remembering this, take heart and thank his fate— That God, whose doom now scourges him with hate Once, in the wild and whirling world above, Bade mercy kiss his dying lips with love.

But if this come not, then he doth me wrong. For what hath love done, all this long life long That death should trample down his poor last prayer Who prays not for forgiveness? Though love were Sin dark as hate, have we not here that sinned Suffered ? has that been less than wintry wind Wherewith our love lies blasted ? O mine own, O mine and no man's yet save mine alone, Iseult ! what ails thee that I lack so long All of thee, all things thine for which I long? For more than watersprings to shadeless sands, More to me were the comfort of her hands Touched once, and more than rays that set and rise The glittering arrows of her glorious eyes. More to my sense than fire to dead cold air The wind and light and odour of her hair, More to my soul than summer's to the south The mute clear music of her amorous mouth, And to my heart's heart more than heaven's great rest The fullness of the fragrance of her breast. Iseult, Iseult, what grace hath life to give More than we twain have had of life, and live? Iseult, Iseult, what grace may death not keep As sweet for us to win of death, and sleep? Come therefore, let us twain pass hence and try If it be better not to live but die, With love for lamp to light us out of life."

And on that word his wedded maiden wife, Pale as the moon in star-forsaken skies Ere the sun fill them, rose with set strange eyes And gazed on him that saw not : and her heart Heaved as a man's death-smitten with a dart That smites him sleeping, warm and full of life : So toward her lord that was not looked his wife, His wife that was not : and her heart within Burnt bitter like an aftertaste of sin To one whose memory drinks and loathes the lee Of shame or sorrow deeper than the sea : And no fear touched him of her eyes above And ears that hoarded each poor word whence love Made sweet the broken music of his breath. "Iseult, my life that wast and art my death, My life in life that hast been, and that art Death in my death, sole wound that cleaves mine heart.

Mine heart that else, how spent soe'er, were whole, Breath of my spirit and anguish of my soul, How can this be that hence thou canst not hear, Being but by space divided ? One is here, But one of twain I looked at once to see ; Shall death keep time and thou not keep with me?"

And the white married maiden laughed at heart, Hearing, and scarce with lips at all apart Spake, and as fire between them was her breath ; "Yea, now thou liest not : yea, for I am death."

By this might eyes that watched without behold Deep in the gulfs of aching air acold The roses of the dawning heaven that strew The low soft sun's way ere his power shine through And burn them up with fire : but far to west Had sunk the dead moon on the live sea's breast, Slain as with bitter fear to see the sun : And eastward was a strong bright wind begun Between the clouds and waters : and he said, Seeing hardly through dark dawn her doubtful head; "Iseult?" and like a death-bell faint and clear The virgin voice rang answer—"I am here."

VOL. IV.

L

And his heart sprang, and sank again : and she Spake, saying, "What would my knightly lord with me?"

And Tristram : "Hath my lady watched all night Beside me, and I knew not? God requite Her love for comfort shown a man nigh dead."

"Yea, God shall surely guerdon it," she said, "Who hath kept me all my days through to this hour."

And Tristram : "God alone hath grace and power To pay such grace toward one unworthier shown Than ever durst, save only of God alone, Crave pardon yet and comfort, as I would Crave now for charity if my heart were good, But as a coward's it fails me, even for shame."

Then seemed her face a pale funereal flame That burns down slow by midnight, as she said : "Speak, and albeit thy bidding spake me dead, God's love renounce me if it were not done."

And Tristram : "When the sea-line takes the sun That now should be not far off sight from far, Look if there come not with the morning star My ship bound hither from the northward back, And if the sail be white thereof or black."

And knowing the soothfast sense of his desire So sore the heart within her raged like fire She could not wring forth of her lips a word, But bowing made sign how humbly had she heard. And the sign given made light his heart ; and she Set her face hard against the yearning sea Now all athirst with trembling trust of hope To see the sudden gates of sunrise ope ; But thirstier yearned the heart whose fiery gate Lay wide that vengeance might come in to hate. And Tristram lay at thankful rest, and thought Now surely life nor death could grieve him aught, Since past was now life's anguish as a breath, And surely past the bitterness of death. For seeing he had found at these her hands this grace, It could not be but yet some breathing-space Might leave him life to look again on love's own face. "Since if for death's sake," in his heart he said, "Even she take pity upon me quick or dead, How shall not even from God's hand be compassion shed?

For night bears dawn, how weak soe'er and wan, And sweet ere death, men fable, sings the swan. So seems the Swan my signal from the sea To sound a song that sweetens death to me Clasped round about with radiance from above Of dawn, and closer clasped on earth by love. Shall all things brighten, and this my sign be dark?"

And high from heaven suddenly rang the lark, Triumphant; and the far first refluent ray Filled all the hollow darkness full with day. And on the deep sky's verge a fluctuant light Gleamed, grew, shone, strengthened into perfect sight,

As bowed and dipped and rose again the sail's clear white.

And swift and steadfast as a sea-mew's wing It neared before the wind, as fain to bring Comfort, and shorten yet its narrowing track. And she that saw looked hardly toward him back, Saying, "Ay, the ship comes surely; but her sail is black."

And fain he would have sprung upright, and seen, And spoken : but strong death struck sheer between, And darkness closed as iron round his head : And smitten through the heart lay Tristram dead.

And scarce the word had flown abroad, and wail Risen, ere to shoreward came the snowbright sail, And lightly forth leapt Ganhardine on land, And led from ship with swift and reverent hand Iseult : and round them up from all the crowd Broke the great wail for Tristram out aloud. And ere her ear might hear her heart had heard, Nor sought she sign for witness of the word ; But came and stood above him newly dead, And felt his death upon her : and her head Bowed, as to reach the spring that slakes all drouth :

And their four lips became one silent mouth.

So came their hour on them that were in life Tristram and Iseult: so from love and strife The stroke of love's own hand felt last and best Gave them deliverance to perpetual rest. So, crownless of the wreaths that life had wound, They slept, with flower of tenderer comfort crowned; From bondage and the fear of time set free, And all the voke of space on earth and sea Cast as a curb for ever : nor might now Fear and desire bid soar their souls or bow, Lift up their hearts or break them : doubt nor grief More now might move them, dread nor disbelief Touch them with shadowy cold or fiery sting, Nor sleepless languor with its weary wing, Nor harsh estrangement, born of time's vain breath, Nor change, a darkness deeper far than death.

And round the sleep that fell around them then Earth lies not wrapped, nor records wrought of men Rise up for timeless token : but their sleep Hath round it like a raiment all the deep ; No change or gleam or gloom of sun and rain, But all time long the might of all the main Spread round them as round earth soft heaven is spread.

And peace more strong than death round all the dead. For death is of an hour, and after death Peace : nor for aught that fear or fancy saith, Nor even for very love's own sake, shall strife Perplex again that perfect peace with life. And if, as men that mourn may deem or dream, Rest haply here than there might sweeter seem, And sleep, that lays one hand on all, more good By some sweet grave's grace given of wold or wood Or clear high glen or sunbright wind-worn down Than where life thunders through the trampling town With daylong feet and nightlong overhead, What grave may cast such grace round any dead, What so sublime sweet sepulchre may be For all that life leaves mortal, as the sea? And these, rapt forth perforce from earthly ground, These twain the deep sea guards, and girdles round Their sleep more deep than any sea's gulf lies, Though changeless with the change in shifting skies, Nor mutable with seasons : for the grave That held them once, being weaker than a wave, The waves long since have buried : though their tomb Was royal that by ruth's relenting doom Men gave them in Tintagel : for the word Took wing which thrilled all piteous hearts that heard

- The word wherethrough their lifelong lot stood shown,
- And when the long sealed springs of fate were known,

The blind bright innocence of lips that quaffed Love, and the marvel of the mastering draught, And all the fraughtage of the fateful bark, Loud like a child upon them wept King Mark, Seeing round the sword's hilt which long since had fought

For Cornwall's love a scroll of writing wrought, A scripture writ of Tristram's hand, wherein Lay bare the sinless source of all their sin, No choice of will, but chance and sorcerous art, With prayer of him for pardon : and his heart Was molten in him, wailing as he kissed Each with the kiss of kinship-" Had I wist, Ye had never sinned nor died thus, nor had I Borne in this doom that bade you sin and die So sore a part of sorrow." And the king Built for their tomb a chapel bright like spring With flower-soft wealth of branching tracery made Fair as the frondage each fleet year sees fade, That should not fall till many a year were done. There slept they wedded under moon and sun And change of stars : and through the casements

Midnight and noon girt round with shadow and flame

To illume their grave or veil it : till at last

On these things too was doom as darkness cast : For the strong sea hath swallowed wall and tower, And where their limbs were laid in woful hour

For many a fathom gleams and moves and moans The tide that sweeps above their coffined bones In the wrecked chancel by the shivered shrine : Nor where they sleep shall moon or sunlight shine Nor man look down for ever : none shall say, Here once, or here, Tristram and Iseult lay : But peace they have that none may gain who live<sub>9</sub> And rest about them that no love can give, And over them, while death and life shall be, The light and sound and darkness of the sea.

DEDICATION

TO MY MOTHER

LOVE that holds life and death in fee, Deep as the clear unsounded sea And sweet as life or death can be, Lays here my hope, my heart, and me

Before you, silent, in a song. Since the old wild tale, made new, found grace, When half sung through, before your face, It needs must live a springtide space,

While April suns grow strong.

March 24, 1896.

IN hawthorn-time the heart grows light, The world is sweet in sound and sight, Glad thoughts and birds take flower and flight, The heather kindles toward the light,

T

The whin is frankincense and flame. And be it for strife or be it for love The falcon quickens as the dove When earth is touched from heaven above

With joy that knows no name.

And glad in spirit and sad in soul With dream and doubt of days that roll As waves that race and find no goal Rode on by bush and brake and bole

A northern child of earth and sea. The pride of life before him lay Radiant : the heavens of night and day Shone less than shone before his way

His ways and days to be.

And all his life of blood and breath Sang out within him : time and death Were even as words a dreamer saith When sleep within him slackeneth,

And light and life and spring were one.

The steed between his knees that sprang, The moors and woods that shone and sang, The hours wherethrough the spring's breath rang, Seemed ageless as the sun.

But alway through the bounteous bloom That earth gives thanks if heaven illume His soul forefelt a shadow of doom, His heart foreknew a gloomier gloom

Than closes all men's equal ways. Albeit the spirit of life's light spring With pride of heart upheld him, king And lord of hours like snakes that sting And nights that darken days.

And as the strong spring round him grew Stronger, and all blithe winds that blew Blither, and flowers that flowered anew More glad of sun and air and dew,

The shadow lightened on his soul And brightened into death and died Like winter, as the bloom waxed wide From woodside on to riverside

And southward goal to goal.

Along the wandering ways of Tyne, By beech and birch and thorn that shine And laugh when life's requickening wine Makes night and noon and dawn divine

And stirs in all the veins of spring, And past the brightening banks of Tees, He rode as one that breathes and sees A sun more blithe, a merrier breeze,

A life that hails him king.

And down the softening south that knows No more how glad the heather glows, Nor how, when winter's clarion blows Across the bright Northumbrian snows,

Sea-mists from east and westward meet, Past Avon senseless yet of song And Thames that bore but swans in throng He rode elate in heart and strong

In trust of days as sweet.

So came he through to Camelot, Glad, though for shame his heart waxed hot, For hope within it withered not To see the shaft it dreamed of shot

Fair toward the glimmering goal of fame. And all King Arthur's knightliest there Approved him knightly, swift to dare And keen to bid their records bear

Sir Balen's northern name.

Sir Balen of Northumberland Gat grace before the king to stand High as his heart was, and his hand Wrought honour toward the strange north strand

That sent him south so goodly a knight. And envy, sick with sense of sin, Began as poisonous herbs begin To work in base men's blood, akin

To men's of nobler might.

And even so fell it that his doom, For all his bright life's kindling bloom And light that took no thought for gloom, Fell as a breath from the opening tomb

Full on him ere he wist or thought.

For once a churl of royal seed, King Arthur's kinsman, faint in deed And loud in word that knew not heed, Spake shame where shame was nought.

"What doth one here in Camelot Whose birth was northward? Wot we not As all his brethren borderers wot How blind of heart, how keen and hot,

The wild north lives and hates the south? Men of the narrowing march that knows Nought save the strength of storms and snows, What would these carles where knighthood blows

A trump of kinglike mouth?"

Swift from his place leapt Balen, smote The liar across his face, and wrote His wrath in blood upon the bloat Brute cheek that challenged shame for note

How vile a king-born knave might be. Forth sprang their swords, and Balen slew The knave ere well one witness knew Of all that round them stood or drew

What sight was there to see.

Then spake the great king's wrathful will A doom for six dark months to fill Wherein close prison held him, still And steadfast-souled for good or ill.

But when those weary days lay dead His lordliest knights and barons spake Before the king for Balen's sake Good speech and wise, of force to break The bonds that bowed his head.

II

In linden-time the heart is high For pride of summer passing by With lordly laughter in her eye; A heavy splendour in the sky

Uplifts and bows it down again. The spring had waned from wood and wold Since Balen left his prison hold And lowlier-hearted than of old Beheld it wax and wane.

Though humble heart and poor array Kept not from spirit and sense away Their noble nature, nor could slay The pride they bade but pause and stay

Till time should bring its trust to flower, Yet even for noble shame's sake, born Of hope that smiled on hate and scorn, He held him still as earth ere morn

Ring forth her rapturous hour.

But even as earth when dawn takes flight And beats her wings of dewy light Full in the faltering face of night, His soul awoke to claim by right

The life and death of deed and doom, vol. 1v.

When once before the king there came A maiden clad with grief and shame And anguish burning her like flame That feeds on flowers in bloom.

Beneath a royal mantle, fair With goodly work of lustrous vair, Girt fast against her side she bare A sword whose weight bade all men there

Quail to behold her face again. Save of a passing perfect knight Not great alone in force and fight It might not be for any might Drawn forth, and end her pain.

So said she : then King Arthur spake : "Albeit indeed I dare not take Such praise on me, for knighthood's sake And love of ladies will I make Assay if better none may be." By girdle and by sheath he caught The sheathed and girded sword, and wrought With strength whose force availed him nought

To save and set her free.

Again she spake : "No need to set The might that man has matched not yet Against it ; he whose hand shall get Grace to release the bonds that fret

My bosom and my girdlestead With little strain of strength or strife Shall bring me as from death to life And win to sister or to wife

Fame that outlives men dead."

Then bade the king his knights assay This mystery that before him lay And mocked his might of manhood. "Nay," Quoth she, "the man that takes away

This burden laid on me must be A knight of record clean and fair As sunlight and the flowerful air, By sire and mother born to bear

A name to shame not me."

Then forth strode Launcelot, and laid The mighty-moulded hand that made Strong knights reel back like birds affrayed By storm that smote them as they strayed

Against the hilt that yielded not. Then Tristram, bright and sad and kind As one that bore in noble mind Love that made light as darkness blind, Fared even as Launcelot.

Then Lamoracke, with hardier cheer, As one that held all hope and fear Wherethrough the spirit of man may steer In life and death less dark or dear,

Laid hand thereon, and fared as they. With half a smile his hand he drew Back from the spell-bound thing, and threw With half a glance his heart anew

Toward no such blameless may.

Between Iseult and Guenevere Sat one of name as high to hear, But darklier doomed than they whose cheer Foreshowed not yet the deadlier year

That bids the queenliest head bow down,

M 2

The queen Morgause of Orkney: they With scarce a flash of the eye could say The very word of dawn, when day Gives earth and heaven their crown.

But bright and dark as night or noon And lowering as a storm-flushed moon When clouds and thwarting winds distune The music of the midnight, soon

To die from darkening star to star And leave a silence in the skies That yearns till dawn find voice and rise, Shone strange as fate Morgause, with eyes

That dwelt on days afar.

A glance that shot on Lamoracke As from a storm-cloud bright and black Fire swift and blind as death's own track Turned fleet as flame on Arthur back

From him whose hand forsook the hilt : And one in blood and one in sin Their hearts caught fire of pain within And knew no goal for them to win

But death that guerdons guilt.

Then Gawain, sweet of soul and gay As April ere he dreams of May, Strove, and prevailed not; then Sir Kay, The snake-souled envier, vile as they

That fawn and foam and lurk and lie, Sire of the bastard band whose brood Was alway found at servile feud With honour, faint and false and lewd,

Then wept for woe the damsel bound With iron and with anguish round, That none to help her grief was found Or loose the inextricably inwound

Grim curse that girt her life with grief And made a burden of her breath, Harsh as the bitterness of death. Then spake the king as one that saith Words bitterer even than brief.

"Methought the wide round world could bring Before the face of queen or king No knights more fit for fame to sing Than fill this full Round Table's ring

With honour higher than pride of place : But now my heart is wrung to know, Damsel, that none whom fame can show Finds grace to heal or help thy woe :

God gives them not the grace."

Then from the lowliest place thereby, With heart-enkindled cheek and eye Most like the star and kindling sky That say the sundawn's hour is high

When rapture trembles through the sea, Strode Balen in his poor array Forth, and took heart of grace to pray The damsel suffer even him to assay

His power to set her free.

Nay, how should he avail, she said, Averse with scorn-averted head, Where these availed not ? none had sped Of all these mightier men that led

The lists wherein he might not ride,

And how should less men speed? But he, With lordlier pride of courtesy, Put forth his hand and set her free From pain and humbled pride.

But on the sword he gazed elate With hope set higher than fear or fate, Or doubt of darkling days in wait ; And when her thankful praise waxed great

And craved of him the sword again, He would not give it. "Nay, for mine It is till force may make it thine." A smile that shone as death may shine Spake toward him bale and bane.

Strange lightning flickered from her eyes. "Gentle and good in knightliest guise And meet for quest of strange emprise Thou hast here approved thee ; yet not wise

To keep the sword from me, I wis. For with it thou shalt surely slay Of all that look upon the day The man best loved of thee, and lay Thine own life down for his."

"What chance God sends, that chance I take," He said. Then soft and still she spake; "I would but for thine only sake Have back the sword of thee, and break

The links of doom that bind thee round. But seeing thou wilt not have it so, My heart for thine is wrung with woe." "God's will," quoth he, "it is, we know,

Wherewith our lives are bound."

"Repent it must thou soon," she said, "Who wouldst not hear the rede I read For thine and not for my sake, sped In vain as waters heavenward shed

From springs that falter and depart Earthward. God bids not thee believe Truth, and the web thy life must weave For even this sword to close and cleave

Hangs heavy round my heart."

So passed she mourning forth. But he, With heart of springing hope set free As birds that breast and brave the sea, Bade horse and arms and armour be Made straightway ready toward the fray. Nor even might Arthur's royal prayer Withhold him, but with frank and fair Thanksgiving and leave-taking there

He turned him thence away.

As the east wind, when the morning's breast Gleams like a bird's that leaves the nest, A fledgeling halcyon's bound on quest, Drives wave on wave on wave to west

III

Till all the sea be life and light, So time's mute breath, that brings to bloom All flowers that strew the dead spring's tomb, Drives day on day on day to doom

Till all man's day be night.

Brief as the breaking of a wave That hurls on man his thunderous grave Ere fear find breath to cry or crave Life that no chance may spare or save,

The light of joy and glory shone Even as in dreams where death seems dead Round Balen's hope-exalted head, Shone, passed, and lightened as it fled

The shadow of doom thereon.

For as he bound him thence to fare, Before the stately presence there A lady like a windflower fair, Girt on with raiment strange and rare That rippled whispering round her, came. Her clear cold eyes, all glassy grey, Seemed lit not with the light of day But touched with gleams that waned away Of quelled and fading flame.

Before the king she bowed and spake : "King, for thine old faith's plighted sake To me the lady of the lake, I come in trust of thee to take

The guerdon of the gift I gave, Thy sword Excalibur." And he Made answer : "Be it whate'er it be, If mine to give, I give it thee,

Nor need is thine to crave."

As when a gleam of wicked light Turns half a low-lying water bright That moans beneath the shivering night With sense of evil sound and sight

And whispering witchcraft's bated breath. Her wan face quickened as she said : "This knight that won the sword—his head I crave or hers that brought it. Dead,

Let these be one in death."

"Not with mine honour this may be; Ask all save this thou wilt," quoth he, "And have thy full desire." But she Made answer : "Nought will I of thee, Nought if not this." Then Balen turned, And saw the sorceress hard beside By whose fell craft his mother died : Three years he had sought her, and here espied

His heart against her yearned.

THE TALE OF BALEN

"Ill be thou met," he said, "whose ire Would slake with blood thy soul's desire : By thee my mother died in fire ; Die thou by me a death less dire."

Sharp flashed his sword forth, fleet as flame, And shore away her sorcerous head. "Alas for shame," the high king said, "That one found once my friend lies dead;

Alas for all our shame !

"Thou shouldst have here forborne her; yea, Were all the wrongs that bid men slay Thine, heaped too high for wrath to weigh, Not here before my face to-day

Was thine the right to wreak thy wrong." Still stood he then as one that found His rose of hope by storm discrowned, And all the joy that girt him round

Brief as a broken song.

Yet ere he passed he turned and spake : "King, only for thy nobler sake Than aught of power man's power may take Or pride of place that pride may break

I bid the lordlier man in thee, That lives within the king, give ear. This justice done before thee here On one that hell's own heart holds dear, Needs might not this but be.

"Albeit, for all that pride would prove, My heart be wrung to lose thy love, It yet repents me not hereof : So many an eagle and many a dove,

So many a knight, so many a may,

This water-snake of poisonous tongue To death by words and wiles hath stung, That her their slayer, from hell's lake sprung, I did not ill to slay."

"Yea," said the king, "too high of heart To stand before a king thou art; Yet irks it me to bid thee part And take thy penance for thy part,

That God may put upon thy pride." Then Balen took the severed head And toward his hostry turned and sped As one that knew not quick from dead

Nor good from evil tide.

He bade his squire before him stand And take that sanguine spoil in hand And bear it far by shore and strand Till all in glad Northumberland

That loved him, seeing it, all might know His deadliest foe was dead, and hear How free from prison as from fear He dwelt in trust of the answering year

To bring him weal for woe.

"And tell them, now I take my way To meet in battle, if I may, King Ryons of North Wales, and slay That king of kernes whose fiery sway

Doth all the marches dire despite That serve King Arthur : so shall he Again be gracious lord to me, And I that leave thee meet with thee

Once more in Arthur's sight."

So spake he ere they parted, nor Took shame or fear to counsellor, As one whom none laid ambush for ; And wist not how Sir Launceor,

The wild king's son of Ireland, hot And high in wrath to know that one Stood higher in fame before the sun, Even Balen, since the sword was won,

Drew nigh from Camelot.

For thence, in heat of hate and pride, As one that man might bid not bide, He craved the high king's grace to ride On quest of Balen far and wide

And wreak the wrong his wrath had wrought "Yea," Arthur said, "for such despite Was done me never in my sight As this thine hand shall now requite

If trust avail us aught."

But ere he passed, in eager mood To feed his hate with bitter food, Before the king's face Merlin stood And heard his tale of ill and good,

Of Balen, and the sword achieved, And whence it smote as heaven's red ire That direful dame of doom as dire; And how the king's wrath turned to fire

The grief wherewith he grieved.

And darkening as he gave it ear, The still face of the sacred seer Waxed wan with wrath and not with fear, And ever changed its cloudier cheer

Till all his face was very night.

"This damosel that brought the sword," He said, "before the king my lord, And all these knights about his board, Hath done them all despite.

"The falsest damosel she is That works men ill on earth, I wis, And all her mind is toward but this, To kill as with a lying kiss

Truth, and the life of noble trust. A brother hath she,—see but now The flame of shame that brands her brow !— A true man, pure as faith's own vow, Whose honour knows not rust.

"This good knight found within her bower A felon and her paramour, And slew him in his shameful hour, As right gave might and righteous power

To hands that wreaked so foul a wrong. Then, for the hate her heart put on, She sought by ways where death had gone The lady Lyle of Avalon, Whose crafts are strange and strong.

"The sorceress, one with her in thought, Gave her that sword of magic, wrought By charms whereof sweet heaven sees nought, That hither girt on her she brought

To be by doom her brother's bane. And grief it is to think how he That won it, being of heart so free And perfect found in chivalry, Shall by that sword lie slain. "Great pity it is and strange despite That one whose eyes are stars to light Honour, and shine as heaven's own height, Should perish, being the goodliest knight

That even the all-glorious north has borne. Nor shall my lord the king behold A lordlier friend of mightier mould Than Balen, though his tale be told Ere noon fulfil his morn."

IV

As morning hears before it run The music of the mounting sun, And laughs to watch his trophies won From darkness, and her hosts undone,

And all the night become a breath, Nor dreams that fear should hear and flee The summer menace of the sea, So hears our hope what life may be,

And knows it not for death.

Each day that slays its hours and dies Weeps, laughs, and lightens on our eyes, And sees and hears not : smiles and sighs As flowers ephemeral fall and rise

About its birth, about its way, And pass as love and sorrow pass, As shadows flashing down a glass, As dew-flowers blowing in flowerless grass,

As hope from yesterday.

The blossom of the sunny dew That now the stronger sun strikes through Fades off the blade whereon it blew No fleetlier than the flowers that grew

On hope's green stem in life's fierce light.

Nor might the glory soon to sit Awhile on Balen's crest alit Outshine the shadow of doom on it Or stay death's wings from flight.

Dawn on a golden moorland side By holt and heath saw Balen ride And Launceor after, pricked with pride And stung with spurring envy : wide

And far he had ridden athwart strange lands And sought amiss the man he found And cried on, till the stormy sound Rang as a rallying trumpet round

That fires men's hearts and hands.

Abide he bade him : nor was need To bid when Balen wheeled his steed Fiercely, less fain by word than deed To bid his envier evil speed,

And cried, "What wilt thou with me?" Loud Rang Launceor's vehement answer : "Knight, To avenge on thee the dire despite Thou hast done us all in Arthur's sight

I stand toward Arthur vowed."

"Ay?" Balen said: "albeit I see I needs must deal in strife with thee, Light is the wyte thou layest on me; For her I slew and sinned not, she

Was dire in all men's eyes as death, Or none were lother found than I By me to bid a woman die : As lief were loyal men to lie,

Or scorn what honour saith."

As the arched wave's weight against the reef Hurls, and is hurled back like a leaf Storm-shrivelled, and its rage of grief Speaks all the loud broad sea in brief,

And quells the hearkening hearts of men, Or as the crash of overfalls Down under blue smooth water brawls Like jarring steel on ruining walls, So rang their meeting then.

As wave on wave shocks, and confounds The bounding bulk whereon it bounds And breaks and shattering seaward sounds As crying of the old sea's wolves and hounds

That moan and ravin and rage and wail, So steed on steed encountering sheer Shocked, and the strength of Launceor's spear Shivered on Balen's shield, and fear

Bade hope within him quail.

But Balen's spear through Launceor's shield Clove as a ploughshare cleaves the field And pierced the hauberk triple-steeled, That horse with horseman stricken reeled,

And as a storm-breached rock falls, fell, And Balen turned his horse again And wist not yet his foe lay slain, And saw him dead that sought his bane And wrought and fared not well.

Suddenly, while he gazed and stood, And mused in many-minded mood If life or death were evil or good, Forth of a covert of a wood

That skirted half the moorland lea vol. IV.

Fast rode a maiden flower-like white Full toward that fair wild place of fight, Anhungered of the woful sight

God gave her there to see.

And seeing the man there fallen and dead, She cried against the sun that shed Light on the living world, and said, "O Balen, slayer whose hand is red,

Two bodies and one heart thou hast slain, Two hearts within one body: aye, Two souls thou hast lost; by thee they die, Cast out of sight of earth and sky

And all that made them fain."

And from the dead his sword she caught, And fell in trance that wist of nought, Swooning : but softly Balen sought To win from her the sword she thought

To die on, dying by Launceor's side. Again her wakening wail outbroke As wildly, sword in hand, she woke And struck one swift and bitter stroke

That healed her, and she died.

And sorrowing for their strange love's sake Rode Balen forth by lawn and lake, By moor and moss and briar and brake, And in his heart their sorrow spake

Whose lips were dumb as death, and said Mute words of presage blind and vain As rain-stars blurred and marred by rain To wanderers on a moonless main

Where night and day seem dead.

Then toward a sunbright wildwood side He looked and saw beneath it ride A knight whose arms afar espied By note of name and proof of pride

Bare witness of his brother born, His brother Balan, hard at hand, Twin flower of bright Northumberland, Twin sea-bird of their loud sea-strand,

Twin song-bird of their morn.

Ah then from Balen passed away All dread of night, all doubt of day, All care what life or death might say, All thought of all worse months than May:

Only the might of joy in love Brake forth within him as a fire, And deep delight in deep desire Of far-flown days whose full-souled quire

Rang round from the air above.

From choral earth and quiring air Rang memories winged like songs that bear Sweet gifts for spirit and sense to share : For no man's life knows love more fair

And fruitful of memorial things Than this the deep dear love that breaks With sense of life on life, and makes The sundawn sunnier as it wakes

Where morning round it rings.

"O brother, O my brother !" cried Each upon each, and cast aside Their helms unbraced that might not hide From sight of memory single-eyed

> The likeness graven of face and face, N 2

And kissed and wept upon each other For joy and pity of either brother, And love engraffed by sire and mother, God's natural gift of grace.

And each with each took counsel meet For comfort, making sorrow sweet, And grief a goodly thing to greet : And word from word leapt light and fleet

Till all the venturous tale was told, And how in Balen's hope it lay To meet the wild Welsh king and slay, And win from Arthur back for pay

The grace he gave of old.

"And thither wilt not thou with me And win as great a grace for thee?" "That will I well," quoth Balan : "we Will cleave together, bound and free,

As brethren should, being twain and one." But ere they parted thence there came A creature withered as with flame, A dwarf mismade in nature's shame, Between them and the sun.

And riding fleet as fire may glide He found the dead lie side by side, And wailed and rent his hair and cried, "Who hath done this deed?" And Balen eyed

The strange thing loathfully, and said, "The knight I slew, who found him fain And keen to slay me : seeing him slain, The maid I sought to save in vain,

Self-stricken, here lies dead.

"Sore grief was mine to see her die, And for her true faith's sake shall I Love, and with love of heart more high, All women better till I die."

"Alas," the dwarf said, "ill for thee In evil hour this deed was done: For now the quest shall be begun Against thee, from the dawning sun

Even to the sunset sea.

"From shore to mountain, dawn to night, The kinsfolk of this great dead knight Will chase thee to thy death." A light Of swift blithe scorn flashed answer bright

As fire from Balen's eye. "For that, Small fear shall fret my heart," quoth he : "But that my lord the king should be For this dead man's sake wroth with me,

Weep might it well thereat."

Then murmuring passed the dwarf away, And toward the knights in fair array Came riding eastward up the way From where the flower-soft lowlands lay

A king whose name the sweet south-west Held high in honour, and the land That bowed beneath his gentle hand Wore on its wild bright northern strand

Tintagel for a crest.

And Balen hailed with homage due King Mark of Cornwall, when he knew The pennon that before him flew : And for those lovers dead and true

The king made moan to hear their doorn;

THE TALE OF BALEN

And for their sorrow's sake he sware To seek in all the marches there The church that man might find most fair And build therein their tomb.

As thought from thought takes wing and flies, As month on month with sunlit eyes Tramples and triumphs in its rise, As wave smites wave to death and dies,

183

So chance on hurtling chance like steel Strikes, flashes, and is quenched, ere fear Can whisper hope, or hope can hear, If sorrow or joy be far or near

For time to hurt or heal.

Swift as a shadow and strange as light That cleaves in twain the shadow of night Before the wide-winged word takes flight That thunder speaks to depth and height

And quells the quiet hour with sound, There came before King Mark and stood Between the moorside and the wood The man whose word God's will made good,

Nor guile was in it found.

And Merlin said to Balen : "Lo, Thou hast wrought thyself a grievous woe To let this lady die, and know Thou mightst have stayed her deadly blow." And Balen answered him and said, "Nay, by my truth to faith, not I, So fiercely fain she was to die; Ere well her sword had flashed on high, Self-slain she lay there dead."

Again and sadly Merlin spake : "My heart is wrung for this deed's sake, To know thee therefore doomed to take Upon thine hand a curse, and make

Three kingdoms pine through twelve years' change,

In want and woe : for thou shalt smite The man most noble and truest knight That looks upon the live world's light

A dolorous stroke and strange.

"And not till years shall round their goal May this man's wound thou hast given be whole." And Balen, stricken through the soul By dark-winged words of doom and dole,

Made answer: "If I wist it were No lie but sooth thou sayest of me, Then even to make a liar of thee Would I too slay myself, and see How death bids dead men fare."

And Merlin took his leave and passed And was not: and the shadow as fast Went with him that his word had cast, Too fleet for thought thereof to last:

And there those brethren bade King Mark Farewell: but fain would Mark have known The strong knight's name who had overthrown The pride of Launceor, when it shone

Bright as it now lay dark.

And Balan for his brother spake, Saying: "Sir, albeit him list not break The seal of secret time, nor shake Night off him ere his morning wake,

By these two swords he is girt withal May men that praise him, knights and lords, Call him the knight that bears two swords, And all the praise his fame accords

Make answer when they call."

So parted they toward eventide ; And tender twilight, heavy-eyed, Saw deep down glimmering woodlands ride Balen and Balan side by side,

Till where the leaves grew dense and dim Again they spied from far draw near The presence of the sacred seer, But so disguised and strange of cheer

That seeing they knew not him.

"Now whither ride ye," Merlin said, "Through shadows that the sun strikes red, Ere night be born or day be dead?" But they, for doubt half touched with dread,

Would say not where their goal might lie. "And thou," said Balen, "what art thou, To walk with shrouded eye and brow?" He said : "Me lists not show thee now

By name what man am I."

" Ill seen is this of thee," said they, "That thou art true in word and way Nor fain to fear the face of day, Who wilt not as a true man say

The name it shames not him to bear."

He answered : "Be it or be it not so, Yet why ye ride this way I know, To meet King Ryons as a foe, And how your hope shall fare.

"Well, if ye hearken toward my rede, Ill, if ye hear not, shall ye speed." "Ah, now," they cried, "thou art ours at need : What Merlin saith we are fain to heed."

"Great worship shall ye win," said he, "And look that ye do knightly now, For great shall be your need, I trow." And Balen smiled : "By knighthood's vow,

The best we may will we."

Then Merlin bade them turn and take Rest, for their good steeds' weary sake, Between the highway and the brake, Till starry midnight bade them wake :

Then "Rise," he said, "the king is nigh, Who hath stolen from all his host away With threescore horse in armed array, The goodliest knights that bear his sway

And hold his kingdom high.

"And twenty ride of them before To bear his errand, ere the door Turn of the night, sealed fast no more, And sundawn bid the stars wax hoar;

For by the starshine of to-night He seeks a leman where she waits His coming, dark and swift as fate's, And hearkens toward the unopening gates

That yield not him to sight."

Then through the glimmering gloom around A shadowy sense of light and sound Made, ere the proof thereof were found, The brave blithe hearts within them bound,

And "Where," quoth Balen, "rides the king?" But softer spake the seer: "Abide, Till hither toward your spears he ride, Where all the narrowing woodland side Grows dense with boughs that cling."

There in that straitening way they met The wild Welsh host against them set, And smote their strong king down, ere yet His hurrying horde of spears might get Fierce vantage of them. Then the fight Grew great and joyous as it grew, For left and right those brethren slew, Till all the lawn waxed red with dew More deep than dews of night.

And ere the full fierce ale was read Full forty lay before them dead, And fast the hurtling remnant fled And wist not whither fear had led :

And toward the king they went again, And would have slain him : but he bowed Before them, crying in fear aloud For grace they gave him, seeing the proud Wild king brought lowest of men.

And ere the wildwood leaves were stirred With song or wing of wakening bird, In Camelot was Merlin's word With joy in joyous wonder heard That told of Arthur's bitterest foe Diskingdomed and discomfited. "By whom?" the high king smiled and said. He answered: "Ere the dawn wax red, To-morrow bids you know.

"Two knights whose heart and hope are one And fain to win your grace have done This work whereby if grace be won Their hearts shall hail the enkindling sun

With joy more keen and deep than day." And ere the sundawn drank the dew Those brethren with their prisoner drew To the outer guard they gave him to

And passed again away.

And Arthur came as toward his guest To greet his foe, and bade him rest As one returned from nobler quest And welcome from the stormbright west,

But by what chance he fain would hear. "The chance was hard and strange, sir king," Quoth Ryons, bowed in thanksgiving. "Who won you?" Arthur said: "the thing

Is worth a warrior's ear."

The wild king flushed with pride and shame, Answering : "I know not either name Of those that there against us came And withered all our strength like flame :

The knight that bears two swords is one, And one his brother : not on earth May men meet men of knightlier worth Nor mightier born of mortal birth

That hail the sovereign sun."

And Arthur said: "I know them not; But much am I for this, God wot, Beholden to them: Launcelot Nor Tristram, when the war waxed hot

Along the marches east and west, Wrought ever nobler work than this." "Ah," Merlin said, "sore pity it is And strange mischance of doom, I wis,

That death should mar their quest.

"Balen, the perfect knight that won The sword whose name is malison, And made his deed his doom, is one: Nor hath his brother Balan done

Less royal service : not on earth Lives there a nobler knight, more strong Of soul to win men's praise in song, Albeit the light abide not long

That lightened round his birth.

"Yea, and of all sad things I know The heaviest and the highest in woe Is this, the doom whose date brings low Too soon in timeless overthrow

A head so high, a hope so sure. The greatest moan for any knight That ever won fair fame in fight Shall be for Balen, seeing his might Must now not long endure."

"Alas," King Arthur said, "he hath shown Such love to me-ward that the moan Made of him should be mine alone Above all other, knowing it known

I have ill deserved it of him." "Nay,"

THE TALE OF BALEN

Said Merlin, "he shall do for you Much more, when time shall be anew. Than time hath given him chance to do Or hope may think to say.

"But now must be your powers purveyed To meet, ere noon of morn be made To-morrow, all the host arrayed Of this wild foe's wild brother, laid Around against you : see to it well, For now I part from you." And soon, When sundawn slew the withering moon, Two hosts were met to win the boon

Whose tale is death's to tell.

A lordly tale of knights and lords For death to tell by count of swords When war's wild harp in all its chords Rang royal triumph, and the hordes

Of hurtling foemen rocked and reeled As waves wind-thwarted on the sea. Was told of all that there might be, Till scarce might battle hear or see The fortune of the field.

And many a knight won fame that day When even the serpent soul of Kay Was kindled toward the fiery play As might a lion's be for prey,

And won him fame that might not die With passing of his rancorous breath But clung about his life and death As fire that speaks in cloud, and saith

What strong men hear and fly.

And glorious works were Arthur's there, That lit the battle-darkened air : But when they saw before them fare Like stars of storm the knight that bare

Two swords about him girt for fray, Balen, and Balan with him, then Strong wonder smote the souls of men If heaven's own host or hell's deep den

Had sent them forth to slay.

So keen they rode across the fight, So sharp they smote to left and right, And made of hurtling darkness light With lightning of their swords, till flight

And fear before them flew like flame, That Arthur's self had never known, He said, since first his blast was blown, Such lords of war as these alone

That whence he knew not came.

But while the fire of war waxed hot The wild king hearkened, hearing not, Through storm of spears and arrow-shot, For succour toward him from King Lot

And all his host of sea-born men, Strong as the strong storm-baffling bird Whose cry round Orkney's headlands heard Is as the sea's own sovereign word

That mocks our mortal ken.

For Merlin's craft of prophecy, Who wist that one of twain must die, Put might in him to say thereby Which head should lose its crown, and lie

Stricken, though loth he were to know

That either life should wane and fail ; Yet most might Arthur's love avail, And still with subtly tempered tale His wile held fast the foe.

With woven words of magic might Wherein the subtle shadow and light Changed hope and fear till fear took flight, He stayed King Lot's fierce lust of fight

Till all the wild Welsh war was driven As foam before the wind that wakes With the all-awakening sun, and breaks Strong ships that rue the mirth it makes

When grace to slay is given.

And ever hotter lit and higher, As fire that meets encountering fire, Waxed in King Lot his keen desire To bid revenge within him tire

On Arthur's ravaged fame and life : Across the waves of war between Floated and flashed, unseen and seen, The lustrous likeness of the queen

Whom shame had sealed his wife.

But when the woful word was brought That while he tarried, doubting nought, The hope was lost whose goal he sought And all the fight he yearned for fought,

His heart was rent for grief and shame, And half his hope was set on flight Till word was given him of a knight Who said : "They are weary and worn with fight.

And we more fresh than flame."

And bright and dark as night and day Ere either find the unopening way Clear, and forego the unaltering sway, The sad king's face shone, frowning: "Yea,

I would that every knight of mine Would do his part as I shall do," He said, "till death or life anew Shall judge between us as is due With wiser doom than thine."

Then thundered all the awakening field With crash of hosts that clashed and reeled, Banner to banner, shield to shield, And spear to splintering spear-shaft, steeled

As heart against high heart of man, As hope against high hope of knight To pluck the crest and crown of fight From war's clenched hand by storm's wild light,

For blessing given or ban.

All hearts of hearkening men that heard The ban twin-born with blessing, stirred Like springtide waters, knew the word Whereby the steeds of storm are spurred

With ravenous rapture to destroy, And laughed for love of battle, pierced With passion of tempestuous thirst And hungering hope to assuage it first

With draughts of stormy joy.

But sheer ahead of the iron tide That rocked and roared from side to side Rode as the lightning's lord might ride King Lot, whose heart was set to abide

All peril of the raging hour, vol. IV

And all his host of warriors born Where lands by warring seas are worn Was only by his hands upborne Who gave them pride and power.

But as the sea's hand smites the shore And shatters all the strengths that bore The ravage earth may bear no more, So smote the hand of Pellinore

Charging, a knight of Arthur's chief, And clove his strong steed's neck in twain, And smote him sheer through brow and brain, Falling : and there King Lot lay slain,

And knew not wrath or grief.

And all the host of Orkney fled, And many a mother's son lay dead : But when they raised the stricken head Whence pride and power and shame were fled

And rage and anguish now cast out, And bore it toward a kingly tomb, The wife whose love had wrought his doom Came thither, fair as morning's bloom

And dark as twilight's doubt.

And there her four strong sons and his, Gawain and Gareth, Gaherys And Agravain, whose sword's sharp kiss With sound of hell's own serpent's hiss

Should one day turn her life to death, Stood mourning with her : but by these Seeing Mordred as a seer that sees, Anguish of terror bent her knees

And caught her shuddering breath.

The splendour of her sovereign eyes Flashed darkness deeper than the skies Feel or fear when the sunset dies On his that felt as midnight rise

Their doom upon them, there undone By faith in fear ere thought could yie'd A shadowy sense of days revealed, The ravin of the final field,

The terror of their son.

For Arthur's, as they caught the light That sought and durst not seek his sight, Darkened, and all his spirit's might Withered within him even as night

Withers when sunrise thrills the sea. But Mordred's lightened as with fire That smote his mother and his sire With darkling doom and deep desire That bade its darkness be.

And heavier on their hearts the weight Sank of the fear that brings forth fate, The bitter doubt whose womb is great With all the grief and love and hate

That turn to fire men's days on earth. And glorious was the funeral made, And dark the deepening dread that swayed Their darkening souls whose light grew shade

With sense of death in birth.

VI

In autumn, when the wind and sea Rejoice to live and laugh to be, And scarce the blast that curbs the tree And bids before it quail and flee

The fiery foliage, where its brand Is radiant as the seal of spring, Sounds less delight, and waves a wing Less lustrous, life's loud thanksgiving

Puts life in sea and land.

High hope in Balen's heart alight Laughed, as from all that clamorous fight He passed and sought not Arthur's sight, Who fain had found his kingliest knight

And made amend for Balen's wrong. But Merlin gave his soul to see Fate, rising as a shoreward sea, And all the sorrow that should be

Ere hope or fear thought long.

"O where are they whose hands upbore My battle," Arthur said, "before The wild Welsh host's wide rage and roar? Balen and Balan, Pellinore, Where are they?" Merlin answered him :

"Balen shall be not long away From sight of you, but night nor day Shall bring his brother back to say If life burn bright or dim."

"Now, by my faith," said Arthur then, "Two marvellous knights are they, whose ken Toward battle makes the twain as ten, And Balen most of all born men

Passeth of prowess all I know Or ever found or sought to see : Would God he would abide with me To face the times foretold of thee

And all the latter woe."

For there had Merlin shown the king The doom that songs unborn should sing, The gifts that time should rise and bring Of blithe and bitter days to spring

As weeds and flowers against the sun. And on the king for fear's sake fell Sickness, and sorrow deep as hell, Nor even might sleep bid fear farewell

If grace to sleep were won.

Down in a meadow green and still He bade the folk that wrought his will Pitch his pavilion, where the chill Soft night would let not rest fulfil

His heart wherein dark fears lay deep. And sharp against his hearing cast Came a sound as of horsehoofs fast Passing, that ere their sound were past Aroused him as from sleep. And forth he looked along the grass And saw before his portal pass A knight that wailed aloud, "Alas That life should find this dolorous pass

And find no shield from doom and dole ! " And hearing all his moan, " Abide, Fair sir," the king arose and cried, " And say what sorrow bids you ride So sorrowful of soul."

"My hurt may no man heal, God wot, And help of man may speed me not," The sad knight said, "nor change my lot." And toward the castle of Melyot

Whose towers arose a league away He passed forth sorrowing : and anon, Ere well the woful sight were gone, Came Balen down the meads that shone, Strong, bright, and brave as day.

And seeing the king there stand, the knight Drew rein before his face to alight In reverence made for love's sake bright With joy that set his face alight

As theirs who see, alive, above, The sovereign of their souls, whose name To them is even as love's own flame To enkindle hope that heeds not fame

And knows no lord but love.

And Arthur smiled on him, and said,"Right welcome be thou : by my head,I would not wish me better sped.For even but now there came and fled Before me like a cloud that flies A knight that made most heavy cheer, I know not wherefore ; nor may fear Or pity give my heart to hear

Or lighten on mine eyes.

"But even for fear's and pity's sake Fain were I thou shouldst overtake And fetch again this knight that spake No word of answering grace to make

Reply to mine that hailed him : thou, By force or by goodwill, shalt bring His face before me." "Yea, my king," Quoth Balen, "and a greater thing

Were less than is my vow.

"I would the task required and heard Were heavier than your sovereign word Hath laid on me:" and thence he spurred Elate at heart as youth, and stirred

With hope as blithe as fires a boy: And many a mile he rode, and found Far in a forest's glimmering bound The man he sought afar around

And seeing took fire for joy.

And with him went a maiden, fair As flowers aflush with April air. And Balen bade him turn him there To tell the king what woes they were

That bowed him down so sore : and he Made woful answer : "This should do Great scathe to me, with nought for you Of help that hope might hearken to

For boot that may not be."

And Balen answered : "I were loth To fight as one perforce made wroth With one that owes by knighthood's oath One love, one service, and one troth

With me to him whose gracious hand Holds fast the helm of knighthood here Whereby man's hope and heart may steer : I pray you let not sorrow or fear

Against his bidding stand."

The strange knight gazed on him, and spake : "Will you, for Arthur's royal sake, Be warrant for me that I take No scathe from strife that man may make?

Then will I go with you." And he Made joyous answer : "Yea, for I Will be your warrant or will die." And thence they rode with hearts as high

As men's that search the sea.

And as by noon's large light the twain Before the tented hall drew rein, Suddenly fell the strange knight, slain By one that came and went again

And none might see him ; but his spear Clove through the body, swift as fire, The man whose doom, forefelt as dire, Had darkened all his life's desire,

As one that death held dear.

And dying he turned his face and said, "Lo now thy warrant that my head Should fall not, following forth where led A knight whose pledge hath left me dead.

This darkling manslayer hath to name

Garlon : take thou my goodlier steed, Seeing thine is less of strength and speed, And ride, if thou be knight indeed, Even thither whence we came.

"And as the maiden's fair behest Shall bid you follow on my quest, Follow : and when God's will sees best, Revenge my death, and let me rest

As one that lived and died a knight, Unstained of shame alive or dead." And Balen, wrung with sorrow, said, "That shall I do : my hand and head

I pledge to do you right."

And thence with sorrowing heart and cheer He rode, in grief that cast out fear Lest death in darkness yet were near, And bore the truncheon of the spear

Wherewith the woful knight lay slain To her with whom he rode, and she Still bare it with her, fain to see What righteous doom of God's might be

The darkling manslayer's bane.

And down a dim deep woodland way They rode between the boughs asway With flickering winds whose flash and play Made sunlight sunnier where the day

Laughed, leapt, and fluttered like a bird Caught in a light loose leafy net That earth for amorous heaven had set To hold and see the sundawn yet

And hear what morning heard.

There in the sweet soft shifting light Across their passage rode a knight Flushed hot from hunting as from fight, And seeing the sorrow-stricken sight

Made question of them why they rode As mourners sick at heart and sad. When all alive about them bade Sweet earth for heaven's sweet sake be glad

As heaven for earth's love glowed.

"Me lists not tell you," Balen said. The strange knight's face grew keen and red ; "Now, might my hand but keep my head, Even here should one of twain lie dead

Were he no better armed than I." And Balen spake with smiling speed, Where scorn and courtesy kept heed Of either : "That should little need :

Not here shall either die."

And all the cause he told him through As one that feared not though he knew All: and the strange knight spake anew, Saying : "I will part no more from you

While life shall last me." So they went Where he might arm himself to ride, And rode across wild ways and wide To where against a churchyard side

A hermit's harbour leant.

And there against them riding came Fleet as the lightning's laugh and flame The invisible evil, even the same They sought and might not curse by name

As hell's foul child on earth set free,

And smote the strange knight through, and fled, And left the mourners by the dead. "Alas, again," Sir Balen said,

"This wrong he hath done to me."

And there they laid their dead to sleep Royally, lying where wild winds keep Keen watch and wail more soft and deep Than where men's choirs bid music weep

And song like incense heave and swell. And forth again they rode, and found Before them, dire in sight and sound, A castle girt about and bound

With sorrow like a spell.

Above it seemed the sun at noon Sad as a wintry withering moon That shudders while the waste wind's tune Craves ever none may guess what boon,

But all may know the boon for dire. And evening on its darkness fell More dark than very death's farewell, And night about it hung like hell,

Whose fume the dawn made fire.

And Balen lighted down and passed Within the gateway, whence no blast Rang as the sheer portcullis, cast Suddenly down, fell, and made fast

The gate behind him, whence he spied A sudden rage of men without And ravin of a murderous rout That girt the maiden hard about With death on either side. And seeing that shame and peril, fear Bade wrath and grief awake and hear What shame should say in fame's wide ear If she, by sorrow sealed more dear

Than joy might make her, so should die : And up the tower's curled stair he sprang As one that flies death's deadliest fang, And leapt right out amid their gang

As fire from heaven on high.

And they thereunder seeing the knight Unhurt among their press alight And bare his sword for chance of fight Stood from him, loth to strive or smite,

And bade him hear their woful word, That not the maiden's death they sought; But there through years too dire for thought Had lain their lady stricken, and nought

Might heal her : and he heard.

For there a maiden clean and whole In virgin body and virgin soul, Whose name was writ on royal roll, That would but stain a silver bowl

With offering of her stainless blood, Therewith might heal her : so they stayed For hope's sad sake each blameless maid There journeying in that dolorous shade

Whose bloom was bright in bud.

No hurt nor harm to her it were If she should yield a sister there Some tribute of her blood, and fare Forth with this joy at heart to bear,

That all unhurt and unafraid

This grace she had here by God's grace wrought. And kindling all with kindly thought And love that saw save love's self nought, Shone, smiled, and spake the maid.

"Good knight of mine, good will have I To help this healing though I die." "Nay," Balen said, "but love may try What help in living love may lie.

—I will not lose the life of her While my life lasteth." So she gave The tribute love was fain to crave, But might not heal though fain to save,

Were God's grace helpfuller.

Another maid in later Mays Won with her life that woful praise, And died. But they, when surging day's Deep tide fulfilled the dawn's wide ways,

Rode forth, and found by day or night No chance to cross their wayfaring Till when they saw the fourth day spring A knight's hall gave them harbouring

Rich as a king's house might.

And while they sat at meat and spake Words bright and kind as grace might make Sweet for true knighthood's kindly sake, They heard a cry beside them break

The still-souled joy of blameless rest. "What noise is this?" quoth Balen. "Nay," His knightly host made answer, "may Our grief not grieve you though I say

How here I dwell unblest.

"Not many a day has lived and died Since at a tournay late I tried My strength to smite and turn and ride Against a knight of kinglike pride,

King Pellam's brother : twice I smote The splendour of his strength to dust : And he, fulfilled of hate's fierce lust, Swore vengeance, pledged for hell to trust,

And keen as hell's wide throat.

"Invisible as the spirit of night That heaven and earth in depth and height May see not by the mild moon's light Nor even when stars would grant them sight,

He walks and slays as plague's blind breath Slays : and my son, whose anguish here Makes moan perforce that mars our cheer, He wounded, even ere love might fear

That hate were strong as death.

"Nor may my son be whole till he Whose stroke through him hath stricken me Shall give again his blood to be Our healing : yet may no man see

This felon, clothed with darkness round And keen as lightning's life." Thereon Spake Balen, and his presence shone Even as the sun's when stars are gone

That hear dawn's trumpet sound.

"That knight I know : two knights of mine, Two comrades, sealed by faith's bright sign, Whose eyes as ours that live should shine, And drink the golden sunlight's wine

With joy's thanksgiving that they live,

THE TALE OF BALEN

He hath slain in even the same blind wise : Were all wide wealth beneath the skies Mine, might I meet him, eyes on eyes, All would I laugh to give."

His host made answer, and his gaze Grew bright with trust as dawn's moist maze With fire : "Within these twenty days, King Pellam, lord of Lystenayse,

Holds feast through all this country cried, And there before the knightly king May no knight come except he bring For witness of his wayfaring

His paramour or bride.

"And there that day, so soon to shine, This knight, your feion foe and mine, Shall show, full-flushed with bloodred wine, The fierce false face whereon we pine

To wreak the wrong he hath wrought us, bare As shame should see and brand it." "Then," Said Balen, "shall he give again His blood to heal your son, and men

Shall see death blind him there."

"Forth will we fare to-morrow," said His host : and forth, as sunrise led, They rode ; and fifteen days were fled Ere toward their goal their steeds had sped.

And there alighting might they find For Balen's host no place to rest, Who came without a gentler guest Beside him : and that household's hest

Bade leave his sword behind.

"Nay," Balen said, "that do I not: My country's custom stands, God wot, That none whose lot is knighthood's lot, To ride where chance as fire is hot

With hope or promise given of fight, Shall fail to keep, for knighthood's part, His weapon with him as his heart ; And as I came will I depart,

Or hold herein my right."

Then gat he leave to wear his sword Beside the strange king's festal board Where feasted many a knight and lord In seemliness of fair accord :

And Balen asked of one beside, "Is there not in this court, if fame Keep faith, a knight that hath to name Garlon?" and saying that word of shame,

He scanned that place of pride.

"Yonder he goeth against the light, He with the face as swart as night," Quoth the other : "but he rides to fight Hid round by charms from all men's sight,

And many a noble knight he hath slain, Being wrapt in darkness deep as hell And silence dark as shame." "Ah, well," Said Balen, "is that he? the spell

May be the sorcerer's bane."

Then Balen gazed upon him long, And thought, "If here I wreak my wrong, Alive I may not scape, so strong The felon's friends about him throng; And if I leave him here alive, This chance perchance may life not give Again : much evil, if he live, He needs must do, should fear forgive When wrongs bid strike and strive."

And Garlon, seeing how Balen's eye Dwelt on him as his heart waxed high With joy in wrath to see him nigh, Rose wolf-like with a wolfish cry

And crossed and smote him on the face, Saying, "Knight, what wouldst thou with me? Eat,

For shame, and gaze not : eat thy meat : Do that thou art come for : stands thy seat

Next ours of royal race?"

"Well hast thou said : thy rede rings true; That which I came for will I do," Quoth Balen : forth his fleet sword flew, And clove the head of Garlon through Clean to the shoulders. Then he cried Loud to his lady, "Give me here The truncheon of the shameful spear Wherewith he slew your knight, when fear Bade hate in darkness ride."

And gladly, bright with grief made glad, She gave the truncheon as he bade, For still she bare it with her, sad And strong in hopeless hope she had,

Through all dark days of thwarting fear, To see if doom should fall aright And as God's fire-fraught thunder smite That head, clothed round with hell-faced night,

Bare now before her here. VOL. IV. P And Balen smote therewith the dead Dark felon's body through, and said Aloud, "With even this truncheon, red With baser blood than brave men bled

Whom in thy shameful hand it slew, Thou hast slain a nobler knight, and now It clings and cleaves thy body : thou Shalt cleave again no brave man's brow,

Though hell would aid anew."

And toward his host he turned and spake; "Now for your son's long-suffering sake Blood ye may fetch enough, and take Wherewith to heal his hurt, and make Death warm as life." Then rose a cry Loud as the wind's when stormy spring Makes all the woodland rage and ring : "Thou hast slain my brother," said the king,

"And here with him shalt die."

"Ay?" Balen laughed him answer. "Well, Do it then thyself." And the answer fell Fierce as a blast of hate from hell, "No man of mine that with me dwell Shall strike at thee but I their lord For love of this my brother slain." And Pellam caught and grasped amain A grim great weapon, fierce and fain

To feed his hungering sword.

And eagerly he smote, and sped Not well : for Balen's blade, yet red With lifeblood of the murderous dead, Between the swordstroke and his head

Shone, and the strength of the eager stroke

Shore it in sunder : then the knight, Naked and weaponless for fight, Ran seeking him a sword to smite As hope within him woke.

And so their flight for deathward fast From chamber forth to chamber passed Where lay no weapon, till the last Whose doors made way for Balen cast

Upon him as a sudden spell Wonder that even as lightning leapt Across his heart and eyes, and swept As storm across his soul that kept

Wild watch, and watched not well.

For there the deed he did, being near Death's danger, breathless as the deer Driven hard to bay, but void of fear, Brought sorrow down for many a year

On many a man in many a land. All glorious shone that chamber, bright As burns at sunrise heaven's own height : With cloth of gold the bed was dight,

That flamed on either hand.

And one he saw within it lie : A table of all clear gold thereby Stood stately, fair as morning's eye, With four strong silver pillars, high

And firm as faith and hope may be : And on it shone the gift he sought, A spear most marvellously wrought, That when his eye and handgrip caught Small fear at heart had he.

Right on King Pellam then, as fire Turns when the thwarting winds wax higher, He turned, and smote him down. So dire The stroke was, when his heart's desire

Struck, and had all its fill of hate, That as the king fell swooning down Fell the walls, rent from base to crown, Prone as prone seas that break and drown Ships fraught with doom for freight.

And there for three days' silent space Balen and Pellam face to face Lay dead or deathlike, and the place Was death's blind kingdom, till the grace

That God had given the sacred seer For counsel or for comfort led His Merlin thither, and he said, Standing between the quick and dead,

"Rise up, and rest not here."

And Balen rose and set his eyes Against the seer's as one that tries His heart against the sea's and sky's And fears not if he lives or dies,

Saying, "I would have my damosel, Ere I fare forth, to fare with me." And sadly Merlin answered, "See Where now she lies; death knows if she Shall now fare ill or well.

"And in this world we meet no more, Balen." And Balen, sorrowing sore, Though fearless yet the heart he bore Beat toward the life that lay before,

Rode forth through many a wild waste land

Where men cried out against him, mad With grievous faith in fear that bade Their wrath make moan for doubt they had Lest hell had armed his hand.

Lest nell nad armed nis nand.

For in that chamber's wondrous shrine Was part of Christ's own blood, the wine Shed of the true triumphal vine Whose growth bids earth's deep darkness shine

As heaven's deep light through the air and sea ; That mystery toward our northern shore Arimathean Joseph bore For healing of our sins of yore,

That grace even there might be.

And with that spear there shrined apart Was Christ's side smitten to the heart. And fiercer than the lightning's dart The stroke was, and the deathlike smart

Wherewith, nigh drained of blood and breath, The king lay stricken as one long dead : And Joseph's was the blood there shed, For near akin was he that bled,

Near even as life to death.

And therefore fell on all that land Sorrow : for still on either hand, As Balen rode alone and scanned Bright fields and cities built to stand

Till time should break them, dead men lay; And loud and long from all their folk Living, one cry that cursed him broke; Three countries had his dolorous stroke

Slain, or should surely slay.

VII

In winter, when the year burns low As fire wherein no firebrands glow, And winds dishevel as they blow The lovely stormy wings of snow,

The hearts of northern men burn bright With joy that mocks the joy of spring To hear all heaven's keen clarions ring Music that bids the spirit sing

And day give thanks for night.

Aloud and dark as hell or hate Round Balen's head the wind of fate Blew storm and cloud from death's wide gate : But joy as grief in him was great

To face God's doom and live or die, Sorrowing for ill wrought unaware, Rejoicing in desire to dare All ill that innocence might bear With changeless heart and eye.

Yet passing fain he was when past Those lands and woes at length and last. Eight times, as thence he fared forth fast, Dawn rose and even was overcast

With starry darkness dear as day,

Before his venturous quest might meet Adventure, seeing within a sweet Green low-lying forest, hushed in heat, A tower that barred his way.

Strong summer, dumb with rapture, bound With golden calm the woodlands round Wherethrough the knight forth faring found A knight that on the greenwood ground

Sat mourning : fair he was to see, And moulded as for love or fight A maiden's dreams might frame her knight ; But sad in joy's far-flowering sight

As grief's blind thrall might be.

"God save you," Balen softly said, "What grief bows down your heart and head Thus, as one sorrowing for his dead? Tell me, if haply I may stead

In aught your sorrow, that I may." "Sir knight," that other said, "thy word Makes my grief heavier that I heard." And pity and wonder inly stirred Drew Balen thence away.

And so withdrawn with silent speed He saw the sad knight's stately steed, A war-horse meet for warrior's need, That none who passed might choose but heed,

So strong he stood, so great, so fair, With eyes afire for flight or fight, A joy to look on, mild in might, And swift and keen and kind as light, And all as clear of care. And Balen, gazing on him, heard Again his master's woful word Sound sorrow through the calm unstirred By fluttering wind or flickering bird,

Thus : "Ah, fair lady and faithless, why Break thy pledged faith to meet me? soon An hour beyond thy trothplight noon Shall strike my death-bell, and thy boon

Is this, that here I die.

"My curse for all thy gifts may be Heavier than death or night on thee; For now this sword thou gavest me Shall set me from thy bondage free."

And there the man had died self-slain, But Balen leapt on him and caught The blind fierce hand that fain had wrought Self-murder, stung with fire of thought,

As rage makes anguish fain.

Then, mad for thwarted grief, "Let go My hand," the fool of wrath and woe Cried, "or I slay thee." Scarce the glow In Balen's cheek and eye might show,

As dawn shows day while seas lie chill, He heard, though pity took not heed, But smiled and spake, "That shall not need : What man may do to bid you speed

I, so God speed me, will."

And the other craved his name, beguiled By hope that made his madness mild. Again Sir Balen spake and smiled : "My name is Balen, called the Wild

By knights whom kings and courts make tame,

216

THE TALE OF BALEN

Because I ride alone afar And follow but my soul for star." "Ah, sir, I know the knight you are And all your fiery fame.

"The knight that bears two swords I know, Most praised of all men, friend and foe, For prowess of your hands, that show Dark war the way where balefires glow

And kindle glory like the dawn's." So spake the sorrowing knight, and stood As one whose heart fresh hope made good : And forth they rode by wold and wood

And down the glimmering lawns.

And Balen craved his name who rode Beside him, where the wild wood glowed With joy to feel how noontide flowed Through glade and glen and rough green road

Till earth grew joyful as the sea. "My name is Garnysshe of the Mount, A poor man's son of none account," He said, "where springs of loftier fount

Laugh loud with pride to be.

"But strength in weakness lives and stands As rocks that rise through shifting sands; And for the prowess of my hands One made me knight and gave me lands,

Duke Hermel, lord from far to near, Our prince ; and she that loved me—she I love, and deemed she loved but me, His daughter, pledged her faith to be

Ere now beside me here."

And Balen, brief of speech as light Whose word, beheld of depth and height, Strikes silence through the stars of night, Spake, and his face as dawn's grew bright,

For hope to help a happier man, "How far then lies she hence?" "By this," Her lover sighed and said, "I wis, Not six fleet miles the passage is,

And straight as thought could span."

So rode they swift and sure, and found A castle walled and dyked around : And Balen, as a warrior bound On search where hope might fear to sound

The darkness of the deeps of doubt, Made entrance through the guardless gate As life, while hope in life grows great, Makes way between the doors of fate

That death may pass thereout.

Through many a glorious chamber, wrought For all delight that love's own thought Might dream or dwell in, Balen sought And found of all he looked for nought,

For like a shining shell her bed Shone void and vacant of her : thence Through devious wonders bright and dense He passed and saw with shame-struck sense

Where shame and faith lay dead.

Down in a sweet small garden, fair With flowerful joy in the ardent air, He saw, and raged with loathing, where She lay with love-dishevelled hair

Beneath a broad bright laurel tree

And clasped in amorous arms a knight, The unloveliest that his scornful sight Had dwelt on yet ; a shame the bright Broad noon might shrink to see.

And thence in wrathful hope he turned, Hot as the heart within him burned, To meet the knight whose love, so spurned And spat on and made nought of, yearned

And dreamed and hoped and lived in vain, And said, "I have found her sleeping fast," And led him where the shadows cast From leaves wherethrough light winds ran past

Screened her from sun and rain.

But Garnysshe, seeing, reeled as he stood Like a tree, kingliest of the wood, Half hewn through : and the burning blood Through lips and nostrils burst aflood :

And gathering back his rage and might As broken breakers rally and roar The loud wind down that drives off shore, He smote their heads off : there no more Their life might shores the light

Their life might shame the light.

Then turned he back toward Balen, mad With grief, and said, "The grief I had Was nought : ere this my life was glad : Thou hast done this deed : I was but sad

And fearful how my hope might fare : I had lived my sorrow down, hadst thou Not shown me what I saw but now." The sorrow and scorn on Balen's brow

Bade silence curb him there.

And Balen answered : "What I did I did to hearten thee and bid Thy courage know that shame should rid A man's high heart of love that hid

Blind shame within its core : God knows, I did, to set a bondman free, But as I would thou hadst done by me, That seeing what love must die to see

Love's end might well be woe's."

"Alas," the woful weakling said, "I have slain what most I loved : I have shed The blood most near my heart : the head Lies cold as earth, defiled and dead,

That all my life was lighted by, That all my soul bowed down before, And now may bear with life no more : For now my sorrow that I bore

Is twofold, and I die."

Then with his red wet sword he rove His breast in sunder, where it clove Life, and no pulse against it strove, So sure and strong the deep stroke drove

Deathward : and Balen, seeing him dead, Rode thence, lest folk would say he had slain Those three : and ere three days again Had seen the sun's might wax and wane,

Far forth he had spurred and sped.

And riding past a cross whereon Broad golden letters written shone, Saying, "No knight born may ride alone Forth toward this castle," and all the stone

Glowed in the sun's glare even as though

Blood stained it from the crucified Dead burden of one that there had died, An old hoar man he saw beside Whose face was wan as woe.

"Balen the Wild," he said, "this way Thy way lies not: thou hast passed to-day Thy bands: but turn again, and stay Thy passage, while thy soul hath sway

Within thee, and through God's good power It will avail thee :" and anon His likeness as a cloud was gone, And Balen's heart within him shone

Clear as the cloudless hour.

Nor fate nor fear might overcast The soul now near its peace at last. Suddenly, thence as forth he past, A mighty and a deadly blast

Blown of a hunting-horn he heard, As when the chase hath nobly sped. "That blast is blown for me," he said, "The prize am I who am yet not dead," And smiled upon the word.

As toward a royal hart's death rang That note, whence all the loud wood sang With winged and living sound that sprang Like fire, and keen as fire's own fang

Pierced the sweet silence that it slew. But nought like death or strife was here : Fair semblance and most goodly cheer They made him, they whose troop drew near

As death among them drew.

A hundred ladies well arrayed And many a knight well weaponed made That kindly show of cheer : the glade Shone round them till its very shade

Lightened and laughed from grove to lawn To hear and see them : so they brought Within a castle fair as thought Could dream that wizard hands had wrought

The guest among them drawn.

All manner of glorious joy was there : Harping and dancing, loud and fair, And minstrelsy that made of air Fire, so like fire its raptures were.

Then the chief lady spake on high : "Knight with the two swords, one of two Must help you here or fall from you : For needs you now must have ado

And joust with one hereby.

"A good knight guards an island here Against all swords that chance brings near, And there with stroke of sword and spear Must all for whom these halls make cheer

Fight, and redeem or yield up life." "An evil custom," Balen said, "Is this, that none whom chance hath led Hither, if knighthood crown his head,

May pass unstirred to strife."

"You shall not have ado to fight Here save against one only knight," She said, and all her face grew bright As hell-fire, lit with hungry light

That wicked laughter touched with flame.

"Well, since I shall thereto," said he, I am ready at heart as death for me : Fain would I be where death should be And life should lose its name.

"But travelling men whose goal afar Shines as a cloud-constraining star Are often weary, and wearier are Their steeds that feel each fret and jar

Wherewith the wild ways wound them : yet, Albeit my horse be weary, still My heart is nowise weary ; will Sustains it even till death fulfil

My trust upon him set."

"Sir," said a knight thereby that stood, "Meseems your shield is now not good But worn with warrior work, nor could Sustain in strife the strokes it would:

A larger will I lend you." "Ay, Thereof I thank you," Balen said, Being single of heart as one that read No face aright whence faith had fled, Nor dreamed that faith could fly.

And so he took that shield unknown And left for treason's touch his own, And toward that island rode alone, Nor heard the blast against him blown

Sound in the wind's and water's sound, But hearkening toward the stream's edge heard Nought save the soft stream's rippling word, Glad with the gladness of a bird,

That sang to the air around.

And there against the water-side He saw, fast moored to rock and ride, A fair great boat anear abide Like one that waits the turning tide,

Wherein embarked his horse and he Passed over toward no kindly strand : And where they stood again on land There stood a maiden hard at hand

Who seeing them wept to see.

And "O knight Balen," was her cry, "Why have ye left your own shield? why Come hither out of time to die? For had ye kept your shield, thereby

Ye had yet been known, and died not here. Great pity it is of you this day As ever was of knight, or may Be ever, seeing in war's bright way

Praise knows not Balen's peer."

And Balen said, "Thou hast heard my name Right : it repenteth me, though shame May tax me not with base men's blame, That ever, hap what will, I came

Within this country ; yet, being come, For shame I may not turn again Now, that myself and nobler men May scorn me : now is more than then,

And faith bids fear be dumb.

"Be it life or death, my chance I take, Be it life's to build or death's to break : And fall what may, me lists not make Moan for sad life's or death's sad sake."

Then looked he on his armour, glad

THE TALE OF BALEN

And high of heart, and found it strong : And all his soul became a song And soared in prayer that soared not long, For all the hope it had.

Then saw he whence against him came A steed whose trappings shone like flame, And he that rode him showed the same Fierce colour, bright as fire or fame,

But dark the visors were as night That hid from Balen Balan's face, And his from Balan : God's own grace Forsook them for a shadowy space

Where darkness cast out light.

The two swords girt that Balen bare Gave Balan for a breath's while there Pause, wondering if indeed it were Balen his brother, bound to dare

The chance of that unhappy quest: But seeing not as he thought to see His shield, he deemed it was not he, And so, as fate bade sorrow be,

They laid their spears in rest.

So mighty was the course they ran With spear to spear so great of span, Each fell back stricken, man by man, Horse by horse, borne down : so the ban

That wrought by doom against them wrought: But Balen by his falling steed Was bruised the sorer, being indeed Way-weary, like a rain-bruised reed,

With travel ere he fought.

Q

And Balen rose again from swoon First, and went toward him : all too soon He too then rose, and the evil boon Of strength came back, and the evil tune

Of battle unnatural made again Mad music as for death's wide ear Listening and hungering toward the near Last sigh that life or death might hear

At last from dying men.

Balan smote Balen first, and clove His lifted shield that rose and strove In vain against the stroke that drove Down : as the web that morning wove

Of glimmering pearl from spray to spray Dies when the strong sun strikes it, so Shrank the steel, tempered thrice to show Strength, as the mad might of the blow

Shore Balen's helm away.

Then turning as a turning wave Against the land-wind, blind and brave In hope that dreams despair may save, With even the unhappy sword that gave

The gifts of fame and fate in one He smote his brother, and there had nigh Felled him : and while they breathed, his eye Glanced up, and saw beneath the sky

Sights fairer than the sun.

The towers of all the castle there Stood full of ladies, blithe and fair As the earth beneath and the amorous air About them and above them were :

So toward the blind and fateful fight

Again those brethren went, and sore Were all the strokes they smote and bore, And breathed again, and fell once more To battle in their sight.

With blood that either spilt and bled Was all the ground they fought on red, And each knight's hauberk hewn and shred Left each unmailed and naked, shed

From off them even as mantles cast : And oft they breathed, and drew but breath Brief as the word strong sorrow saith, And poured and drank the draught of death,

Till fate was full at last.

And Balan, younger born than he Whom darkness bade him slay, and be Slain, as in mist where none may see If aught abide or fall or flee,

Drew back a little and laid him down, Dying : but Balen stood, and said, As one between the quick and dead Might stand and speak, "What good knight's head

Hath won this mortal crown?

"What knight art thou? for never I Who now beside thee dead shall die Found yet the knight afar or nigh That matched me." Then his brother's eye

Flashed pride and love ; he spake and smiled And felt in death life's quickening flame, And answered : "Balan is my name, The good knight Balen's brother ; fame

Calls and miscalls him wild."

The cry from Balen's lips that sprang Sprang sharper than his sword's stroke rang. More keen than death's or memory's fang, Through sense and soul the shuddering pang

Shivered : and scarce he had cried, "Alas That ever I should see this day," When sorrow swooned from him away As blindly back he fell, and lay

Where sleep lets anguish pass.

But Balan rose on hands and knees And crawled by childlike dim degrees Up toward his brother, as a breeze Creeps wingless over sluggard seas

When all the wind's heart fails it : so Beneath their mother's eyes had he, A babe that laughed with joy to be, Made toward him standing by her knee

For love's sake long ago.

Then, gathering strength up for a space, From off his brother's dying face With dying hands that wrought apace While death and life would grant them grace

He loosed his helm and knew not him, So scored with blood it was, and hewn Athwart with darkening wounds : but soon Life strove and shuddered through the swoon

Wherein its light lay dim.

And sorrow set these chained words free : "O Balan, O my brother ! me Thou hast slain, and I, my brother, thee : And now far hence, on shore and sea, Shall all the wide world speak of us." "Alas," said Balan, "that I might Not know you, seeing two swords were dight About you; now the unanswering sight Hath here found answer thus.

"Because you bore another shield Than yours, that even ere youth could wield Like arms with manhood's tried and steeled Shone as my star of battle-field,

I deemed it surely might not be My brother." Then his brother spake Fiercely : "Would God, for thy sole sake, I had my life again, to take Revenge for only thee !

"For all this deadly work was wrought Of one false knight's false word and thougin. Whose mortal craft and counsel caught And snared my faith who doubted nought,

And made me put my shield away. Ah, might I live, I would destroy That castle for its customs : joy There makes of grief a deadly toy,

And death makes night of day."

"Well done were that, if aught were done Well ever here beneath the sun," Said Balan : "better work were none : For hither since I came and won

A woful honour born of death, When here my hap it was to slay A knight who kept this island way, I might not pass by night or day

Hence, as this token saith.

"No more shouldst thou, for all the might Of heart and hand that seals thee knight Most noble of all that see the light, Brother, hadst thou but slain in fight

Me, and arisen unscathed and whole, As would to God thou hadst risen ! though here Light is as darkness, hope as fear, And love as hate : and none draws near Save toward a mortal goal."

Then, fair as any poison-flower Whose blossom blights the withering bower Whereon its blasting breath has power, Forth fared the lady of the tower

With many a lady and many a knight, And came across the water-way Even where on death's dim border lay Those brethren sent of her to slay

And die in kindless fight.

And all those hard light hearts were swayed With pity passing like a shade That stays not, and may be not stayed, To hear the mutual moan they made,

Each to behold his brother die, Saying, "Both we came out of one tomb, One star-crossed mother's woful womb, And so within one grave-pit's gloom Untimely shall we lie."

And Balan prayed, as God should bless That lady for her gentleness,

That where the battle's mortal stress

Had made for them perforce to press

The bed whence never man may rise

THE TALE OF BALEN

They twain, free now from hopes and fears, Might sleep ; and she, as one that hears, Bowed her bright head : and very tears Fell from her cold fierce eyes.

Then Balen prayed her send a priest To housel them, that ere they ceased The hansel of the heavenly feast That fills with light from the answering east

The sunset of the life of man Might bless them, and their lips be kissed With death's requickening eucharist, And death's and life's dim sunlit mist

Pass as a stream that ran.

And so their dying rites were done : And Balen, seeing the death-struck sun Sink, spake as he whose goal is won : "Now, when our trophied tomb is one,

And over us our tale is writ, How two that loved each other, two Born and begotten brethren, slew Each other, none that reads anew

Shall choose but weep for it.

"And no good knight and no good man Whose eye shall ever come to scan The record of the imperious ban That made our life so sad a span Shall read or hear, who shall not pray For us for ever." Then anon Died Balan ; but the sun was gone, And deep the stars of midnight shone, Ere Balen passed away. And there low lying, as hour on hour Fled, all his life in all its flower Came back as in a sunlit shower Of dreams, when sweet-souled sleep has power

On life less sweet and glad to be. He drank the draught of life's first wine Again : he saw the moorland shine, The rioting rapids of the Tyne,

The woods, the cliffs, the sea.

The joy that lives at heart and home, The joy to rest, the joy to roam, The joy of crags and scaurs he clomb, The rapture of the encountering foam

Embraced and breasted of the boy, The first good steed his knees bestrode, The first wild sound of songs that flowed Through ears that thrilled and heart that glowed,

Fulfilled his death with joy.

So, dying not as a coward that dies And dares not look in death's dim eyes Straight as the stars on seas and skies Whence moon and sun recoil and rise,

He looked on life and death, and slept. And there with morning Merlin came, And on the tomb that told their fame He wrote by Balan's Balen's name,

And gazed thereon, and wept.

For all his heart within him yearned With pity like as fire that burned. The fate his fateful eye discerned Far off now dimmed it, ere he turned His face toward Camelot, to tell Arthur of all the storms that woke Round Balen, and the dolorous stroke, And how that last blind battle broke The consummated spell.

"Alas," King Arthur said, "this day I have heard the worst that woe might say: For in this world that wanes away I know not two such knights as they."

This is the tale that memory writes Of men whose names like stars shall stand, Balen and Balan, sure of hand, Two brethren of Northumberland,

In life and death good knights.

THE ARGUMENT

ALTHÆA, daughter of Thestius and Eurythemis, queen of Calydon, being with child of Meleager her first-born son, dreamed that she brought forth a brand burning; and upon his birth came the three Fates and prophesied of him three things, namely these; that he should have great strength of his hands, and good fortune in this life, and that he should live no longer when the brand then in the fire were consumed: wherefore his mother plucked it forth and kept it by her. And the child being a man grown sailed with Jason after the fleece of gold, and won himself great praise of all men living; and when the tribes of the north and west made war upon Ætolia, he fought against their army and scattered it. But Artemis, having at the first stirred up these tribes to war against Eneus king of Calydon, because he had offered sacrifice to all the gods saving her alone, but her he had forgotten to honour, was yet more wroth because of the destruction of this army, and sent upon the land of Calydon a wild boar which slew many and wasted all their increase, but him could none slay, and many went against him and perished. Then were all the chief men of Greece gathered together, and among them Atalanta daughter of Iasius the Arcadian, a virgin; for whose sake Artemis let slay the boar, seeing she favoured the maiden greatly; and Meleager having despatched it gave the spoil thereof to Atalanta, as one beyond measure enamoured of her; but the brethren of Althæa his mother, Toxeus and Plexippus, with such others as misliked that she only should bear off the praise whereas many had borne the labour, laid wait for her to take away her spoil; but Meleager fought against them and slew them : whom when Althæa their sister beheld and knew to be slain of her son, she waxed for wrath and sorrow like as one mad, and taking the brand whereby the measure of her son's life was meted to him, she cast it upon a fire; and with the wasting thereof his life likewise wasted away, that being brought back to his father's house he died in a brief space; and his mother also endured not long after for very sorrow; and this was his end, and the end of that hunting.

ATALANTA IN CALYDON

CHIEF HUNTSMAN

MAIDEN, and mistress of the months and stars Now folded in the flowerless fields of heaven, Goddess whom all gods love with threefold heart, Being treble in thy divided deity, A light for dead men and dark hours, a foot Swift on the hills as morning, and a hand To all things fierce and fleet that roar and range Mortal, with gentler shafts than snow or sleep; Hear now and help and lift no violent hand, But favourable and fair as thine eye's beam Hidden and shown in heaven; for I all night Amid the king's hounds and the hunting men Have wrought and worshipped toward thee; nor shall man

See goodlier hounds or deadlier edge of spears ; But for the end, that lies unreached at yet Between the hands and on the knees of gods. O fair-faced sun, killing the stars and dews And dreams and desolation of the night ! Rise up, shine, stretch thine hand out, with thy bow Touch the most dimmest height of trembling heaven, And burn and break the dark about thy ways, Shot through and through with arrows ; let thine hair Lighten as flame above that flameless shell Which was the moon, and thine eyes fill the world 248

And thy lips kindle with swift beams ; let earth Laugh, and the long sea fiery from thy feet Through all the roar and ripple of streaming springs And foam in reddening flakes and flying flowers Shaken from hands and blown from lips of nymphs Whose hair or breast divides the wandering wave With salt close tresses cleaving lock to lock, All gold, or shuddering and unfurrowed snow; And all the winds about thee with their wings, And fountain-heads of all the watered world ; Each horn of Acheloüs, and the green Euenus, wedded with the straitening sea. For in fair time thou comest ; come also thou, Twin-born with him, and virgin, Artemis, And give our spears their spoil, the wild boar's hide, Sent in thine anger against us for sin done And bloodless altars without wine or fire. Him now consume thou; for thy sacrifice With sanguine-shining steam divides the dawn, And one, the maiden rose of all thy maids, Arcadian Atalanta, snowy-souled, Fair as the snow and footed as the wind. From Ladon and well-wooded Mænalus Over the firm hills and the fleeting sea Hast thou drawn hither, and many an armed king, Heroes, the crown of men, like gods in fight. Moreover out of all the Ætolian land, From the full-flowered Lelantian pasturage To what of fruitful field the son of Zeus Won from the roaring river and labouring sea When the wild god shrank in his horn and fled And foamed and lessened through his wrathful fords, Leaving clear lands that steamed with sudden sun, These virgins with the lightening of the day

Bring thee fresh wreaths and their own sweeter hair, Luxurious locks and flower-like mixed with flowers, Clean offering, and chaste hymns; but me the time Divides from these things; whom do thou not less Help and give honour, and to mine hounds good speed, And edge to spears, and luck to each man's hand.

CHORUS

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,

The mother of months in meadow or plain Fills the shadows and windy places

With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain; And the brown bright nightingale amorous Is half assuaged for Itylus, For the Thracian ships and the foreign faces, for the Thracian ships and the foreign faces

The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers, Maiden most perfect, lady of light,

With a noise of winds and many rivers,

With a clamour of waters, and with might; Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet, Over the splendour and speed of thy feet; For the faint east quickens, the wan west shivers,

Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.

Where shall we find her, how shall we sing to her, Fold our hands round her knees, and cling?

O that man's heart were as fire and could spring to her,

Fire, or the strength of the streams that spring ! For the stars and the winds are unto her As raiment, as songs of the harp-player ; For the risen stars and the fallen cling to her,

And the southwest-wind and the west-wind sing.

For winter's rains and ruins are over, And all the season of snows and sins; The days dividing lover and lover,

The light that loses, the night that wins; And time remembered is grief forgotten, And frosts are slain and flowers begotten, And in green underwood and cover

Blossom by blossom the spring begins.

The full streams feed on flower of rushes,

Ripe grasses trammel a travelling foot, The faint fresh flame of the young year flushes

From leaf to flower and flower to fruit ; And fruit and leaf are as gold and fire, And the oat is heard above the lyre, And the hoofèd heel of a satyr crushes

The chestnut-husk at the chestnut-root.

And Pan by noon and Bacchus by night, Fleeter of foot than the fleet-foot kid, Follows with dancing and fills with delight The Mænad and the Bassarid ; And soft as lips that laugh and hide The laughing leaves of the trees divide, And screen from seeing and leave in sight The god pursuing, the maiden hid.

The ivy falls with the Bacchanal's hair Over her eyebrows hiding her eyes; The wild vine slipping down leaves bare

Her bright breast shortening into sighs; The wild vine slips with the weight of its leaves, But the berried ivy catches and cleaves To the limbs that glitter, the feet that scare

The wolf that follows, the fawn that flies.

ALTHÆA

What do ye singing? what is this ye sing?

CHORUS

Flowers bring we, and pure lips that please the gods, And raiment meet for service : lest the day Turn sharp with all its honey in our lips.

ALTHÆA

Night, a black hound, follows the white fawn day, Swifter than dreams the white flown feet of sleep; Will ye pray back the night with any prayers? And though the spring put back a little while Winter, and snows that plague all men for sin, And the iron time of cursing, yet I know Spring shall be ruined with the rain, and storm Eat up like fire the ashen autumn days. I marvel what men do with pravers awake Who dream and die with dreaming ; any god, Yea the least god of all things called divine, Is more than sleep and waking ; yet we say, Perchance by praying a man shall match his god. For if sleep have no mercy, and man's dreams Bite to the blood and burn into the bone. What shall this man do waking? By the gods, He shall not pray to dream sweet things to-night, Having dreamt once more bitter things than death.

CHORUS

Queen, but what is it that hath burnt thine heart? For thy speech flickers like a blown-out flame.

ALTHÆA

Look, ye say well, and know not what ye say; For all my sleep is turned into a fire, And all my dreams to stuff that kindles it.

CHORUS

Yet one doth well being patient of the gods.

ALTHÆA

Yea, lest they smite us with some four-foot plague.

CHORUS

But when time spreads find out some herb for it.

ALTHÆA

And with their healing herbs infect our blood.

CHORUS

What ails thee to be jealous of their ways?

ALTHÆA

What if they give us poisonous drinks for wine?

CHORUS

They have their will; much talking mends it not.

ALTHÆA

And gall for milk, and cursing for a prayer?

CHORUS

Have they not given life, and the end of life?

252

ALTHÆA

Lo, where they heal, they help not; thus they do, They mock us with a little piteousness, And we say prayers, and weep; but at the last, Sparing awhile, they smite and spare no whit.

CHORUS

Small praise man gets dispraising the high gods : What have they done that thou dishonourest them ?

ALTHÆA

First Artemis for all this harried land I praise not, and for wasting of the boar That mars with tooth and tusk and fiery feet Green pasturage and the grace of standing corn And meadow and marsh with springs and unblown leaves, Flocks and swift herds and all that bite sweet grass, I praise her not ; what things are these to praise?

CHORUS

But when the king did sacrifice, and gave Each god fair dues of wheat and blood and wine, Her not with bloodshed nor burnt-offering Revered he, nor with salt or cloven cake; Wherefore being wroth she plagued the land; but now

Takes off from us fate and her heavy things. Which deed of these twain were not good to praise? For a just deed looks always either way With blameless eyes, and mercy is no fault.

ALTHÆA

Yea, but a curse she hath sent above all these To hurt us where she healed us; and hath lit Fire where the old fire went out, and where the wind Slackened, hath blown on us with deadlier air.

CHORUS

What storm is this that tightens all our sail?

ALTHÆA

Love, a thwart sea-wind full of rain and foam.

CHORUS

Whence blown, and born under what stormier star?

ALTHÆA

Southward across Euenus from the sea.

CHORUS

Thy speech turns toward Arcadia like blown wind.

ALTHÆA

Sharp as the north sets when the snows are out.

CHORUS

Nay, for this maiden hath no touch of love.

ALTHÆA

I would she had sought in some cold gulf of sea Love, or in dens where strange beasts lurk, or fire, Or snows on the extreme hills, or iron land Where no spring is; I would she had sought therein And found, or ever love had found her here.

CHORUS

She is holier than all holy days or things, The sprinkled water or fume of perfect fire ; Chaste, dedicated to pure prayers, and filled With higher thoughts than heaven ; a maiden clean, Pure iron, fashioned for a sword ; and man She loves not ; what should one such do with love ?

ALTHÆA

Look you, I speak not as one light of wit, But as a queen speaks, being heart-vexed; for oft I hear my brothers wrangling in mid hall, And am not moved ; and my son chiding them, And these things nowise move me, but I know Foolish and wise men must be to the end, And feed myself with patience ; but this most, This moves me, that for wise men as for fools Love is one thing, an evil thing, and turns Choice words and wisdom into fire and air. And in the end shall no joy come, but grief, Sharp words and soul's division and fresh tears Flower-wise upon the old root of tears brought forth. Fruit-wise upon the old flower of tears sprung up, Pitiful sighs, and much regrafted pain. These things are in my presage, and myself Am part of them and know not ; but in dreams The gods are heavy on me, and all the fates Shed fire across my eyelids mixed with night, And burn me blind, and disilluminate My sense of seeing, and my perspicuous soul Darken with vision ; seeing I see not, hear And hearing am not holpen, but mine eyes Stain many tender broideries in the bed

256

Drawn up about my face that I may weep And the king wake not; and my brows and lips Tremble and sob in sleeping, like swift flames That tremble, or water when it sobs with heat Kindled from under; and my tears fill my breast And speck the fair dyed pillows round the king With barren showers and salter than the sea. Such dreams divide me dreaming ; for long since I dreamed that out of this my womb had sprung Fire and a firebrand ; this was ere my son, Meleager, a goodly flower in fields of fight, Felt the light touch him coming forth, and wailed Childlike; but yet he was not; and in time I bare him, and my heart was great; for yet So royally was never strong man born, Nor queen so nobly bore as noble a thing As this my son was : such a birth God sent And such a grace to bear it. Then came in Three weaving women, and span each a thread, Saving This for strength and That for luck, and one Saying Till the brand upon the hearth burn down, So long shall this man see good days and live. And I with gathered raiment from the bed Sprang, and drew forth the brand, and cast on it Water, and trod the flame bare-foot, and crushed With naked hand spark beaten out of spark And blew against and quenched it; for I said, These are the most high Fates that dwell with us, And we find favour a little in their sight, A little, and more we miss of, and much time Foils us; howbeit they have pitied me, O son, And thee most piteous, thee a tenderer thing Than any flower of fleshly seed alive. Wherefore I kissed and hid him with my hands, And covered under arms and hair, and wept,

And feared to touch him with my tears, and laughed ; So light a thing was this man, grown so great Men cast their heads back, seeing against the sun Blaze the armed man carven on his shield, and hear The laughter of little bells along the brace Ring, as birds singing or flutes blown, and watch, High up, the cloven shadow of either plume Divide the bright light of the brass, and make His helmet as a windy and wintering moon Seen through blown cloud and plume-like drift, when ships

Drive, and men strive with all the sea, and oars Break, and the beaks dip under, drinking death ; Yet was he then but a span long, and moaned With inarticulate mouth inseparate words, And with blind lips and fingers wrung my breast Hard, and thrust out with foolish hands and feet. Murmuring ; but those grey women with bound hair Who fright the gods frighted not him ; he laughed Seeing them, and pushed out hands to feel and haul Distaff and thread, intangible; but they Passed, and I hid the brand, and in my heart Laughed likewise, having all my will of heaven. But now I know not if to left or right The gods have drawn us hither; for again I dreamt, and saw the black brand burst on fire As a branch bursts in flower, and saw the flame Fade flower-wise, and Death came and with dry lips Blew the charred ash into my breast; and Love Trampled the ember and crushed it with swift feet. This I have also at heart ; that not for me. Not for me only or son of mine, O girls, The gods have wrought life, and desire of life, Heart's love and heart's division ; but for all

VOL. IV.

There shines one sun and one wind blows till night. And when night comes the wind sinks and the sun, And there is no light after, and no storm, But sleep and much forgetfulness of things. In such wise I gat knowledge of the gods Years hence, and heard high sayings of one most wise, Eurythemis my mother, who beheld With eyes alive and spake with lips of these As one on earth disfleshed and disallied From breath or blood corruptible ; such gifts Time gave her, and an equal soul to these And equal face to all things; thus she said. But whatsoever intolerable or glad The swift hours weave and unweave, I go hence Full of mine own soul, perfect of myself, Toward mine and me sufficient; and what chance The gods cast lots for and shake out on us, That shall we take, and that much bear withal. And now, before these gather to the hunt, I will go arm my son and bring him forth, Lest love or some man's anger work him harm.

CHORUS

Before the beginning of years There came to the making of man.
Time, with a gift of tears; Grief, with a glass that ran;
Pleasure, with pain for leaven; Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance fallen from heaven, And madness risen from hell;
Strength without hands to smite; Love that endures for a breath:
Night, the shadow of light, And life, the shadow of death.

ATALANTA IN CALYDON

And the high gods took in hand Fire, and the falling of tears, And a measure of sliding sand

From under the feet of the years; And froth and drift of the sea;

And dust of the labouring earth ; And bodies of things to be

In the houses of death and of birth ; And wrought with weeping and laughter.

And fashioned with loathing and love With life before and after

And death beneath and above, For a day and a night and a morrow,

That his strength might endure for a span With travail and heavy sorrow,

The holy spirit of man.

From the winds of the north and the south They gathered as unto strife;

They breathed upon his mouth,

They filled his body with life; Eyesight and speech they wrought

For the veils of the soul therein,

A time for labour and thought, A time to serve and to sin ;

They gave him light in his ways,

And love, and a space for delight, And beauty and length of days,

And night, and sleep in the night. His speech is a burning fire;

With his lips he travaileth ; In his heart is a blind desire,

In his eyes foreknowledge of death :

He weaves, and is clothed with derision; Sows, and he shall not reap; His life is a watch or a vision Between a sleep and a sleep.

MELEAGER

O sweet new heaven and air without a star, Fair day, be fair and welcome, as to men With deeds to do and praise to pluck from thee. Come forth a child, born with clear sound and light, With laughter and swift limbs and prosperous looks; That this great hunt with heroes for the hounds May leave thee memorable and us well sped.

ALTHÆA

Son, first I praise thy prayer, then bid thee speed; But the gods hear men's hands before their lips, And heed beyond all crying and sacrifice Light of things done and noise of labouring men. But thou, being armed and perfect for the deed, Abide; for like rain-flakes in a wind they grow, The men thy fellows, and the choice of the world, Bound to root out the tusked plague, and leave Thanks and safe days and peace in Calydon.

MELEAGER

For the whole city and all the low-lying land Flames, and the soft air sounds with them that come; The gods give all these fruit of all their works.

ALTHÆA

Set thine eye thither and fix thy spirit and say Whom there thou knowest; for sharp mixed shadow and wind Blown up between the morning and the mist, With steam of steeds and flash of bridle or wheel, And fire, and parcels of the broken dawn, And dust divided by hard light, and spears That shine and shift as the edge of wild beasts' eyes, Smite upon mine; so fiery their blind edge Burns, and bright points break up and baffle day.

MELEAGER

The first, for many I know not, being far off, Peleus the Larissæan, couched with whom Sleeps the white sea-bred wife and silver-shod, Fair as fled foam, a goddess; and their son Most swift and splendid of men's children born, Most like a god, full of the future fame.

ALTHÆA

Who are these shining like one sundered star?

MELEAGER

Thy sister's sons, a double flower of men.

ALTHÆA

O sweetest kin to me in all the world, O twin-born blood of Leda, gracious heads Like kindled lights in untempestuous heaven, Fair flower-like stars on the iron foam of fight, With what glad heart and kindliness of soul, Even to the staining of both eyes with tears And kindling of warm eyelids with desire, A great way off I greet you, and rejoice Seeing you so fair, and moulded like as gods. Far off ye come, and least in years of these, But lordliest, but worth love to look upon.

MELEAGER

Even such (for sailing hither I saw far hence, And where Eurotas hollows his moist rock Nigh Sparta with a strenuous-hearted stream) Even such I saw their sisters ; one swan-white, The little Helen, and less fair than she Fair Clytæmnestra, grave as pasturing fawns Who feed and fear some arrow ; but at whiles, As one smitten with love or wrung with joy, She laughs and lightens with her eyes, and then Weeps ; whereat Helen, having laughed, weeps too, And the other chides her, and she being chid speaks nought,

But cheeks and lips and eyelids kisses her, Laughing; so fare they, as in their bloomless bud And full of unblown life, the blood of gods.

ALTHÆA

Sweet days befall them and good loves and lords, And tender and temperate honours of the hearth, Peace, and a perfect life and blameless bed. But who shows next an eagle wrought in gold, That flames and beats broad wings against the sun And with void mouth gapes after emptier prey?

MELEAGER

Know by that sign the reign of Telamon Between the fierce mouths of the encountering brine On the strait reefs of twice-washed Salamis.

ALTHÆA

For like one great of hand he bears himself, Vine-chapleted, with savours of the sea,

ATALANTA IN CALYDON

Glittering as wine and moving as a wave. But who girt round there roughly follows him?

MELEAGER

Ancæus, great of hand, an iron bulk, Two-edged for fight as the axe against his arm, Who drives against the surge of stormy spears Full-sailed; him Cepheus follows, his twin-born, Chief name next his of all Arcadian men.

ALTHÆA

Praise be with men abroad ; chaste lives with us, Home-keeping days and household reverences.

MELEAGER

Next by the left unsandalled foot know thou The sail and oar of this Ætolian land, Thy brethren, Toxeus and the violent-souled Plexippus, over-swift with hand and tongue ; For hands are fruitful, but the ignorant mouth Blows and corrupts their work with barren breath.

ALTHÆA

Speech too bears fruit, being worthy; and air blows down

Things poisonous, and high-seated violences,

And with charmed words and songs have men put out

Wild evil, and the fire of tyrannies.

MELEAGER

Yea, all things have they, save the gods and love.

ALTHÆA

Love thou the law and cleave to things ordained.

MELEAGER

Law lives upon their lips whom these applaud.

ALTHÆA

How sayest thou these? what god applauds new things?

MELEAGER

Zeus, who hath fear and custom under foot.

ALTHÆA

But loves not laws thrown down and lives awry.

MELEAGER

Yet is not less himself than his own law.

ALTHÆA

Nor shifts and shuffles old things up and down.

MELEAGER

But what he will remoulds and discreates.

ALTHÆA

Much, but not this, that each thing live its life.

MELEAGER

Nor only live, but lighten and lift up higher.

ALTHÆA

Pride breaks itself, and too much gained is gone.

MELEAGER

Things gained are gone, but great things done endure.

ALTHÆA

Child, if a man serve law through all his life And with his whole heart worship, him all gods Praise ; but who loves it only with his lips, And not in heart and deed desiring it Hides a perverse will with obsequious words, Him heaven infatuates and his twin-born fate Tracks, and gains on him, scenting sins far off, And the swift hounds of violent death devour. Be man at one with equal-minded gods, So shall he prosper; not through laws torn up, Violated rule and a new face of things. A woman armed makes war upon herself, Unwomanlike, and treads down use and wont And the sweet common honour that she hath, Love, and the cry of children, and the hand Trothplight and mutual mouth of marriages. This doth she, being unloved ; whom if one love, Not fire nor iron and the wide-mouthed wars Are deadlier than her lips or braided hair. For of the one comes poison, and a curse Falls from the other and burns the lives of men. But thou, son, be not filled with evil dreams, Nor with desire of these things ; for with time Blind love burns out : but if one feed it full Till some discolouring stain dyes all his life. He shall keep nothing praiseworthy, nor die The sweet wise death of old men honourable, Who have lived out all the length of all their years Blameless, and seen well-pleased the face of gods, And without shame and without fear have wrought Things memorable, and while their days held out In sight of all men and the sun's great light

Have gat them glory and given of their own praise To the earth that bare them and the day that bred, Home friends and far-off hospitalities, And filled with gracious and memorial fame Lands loved of summer or washed by violent seas, Towns populous and many unfooted ways, And alien lips and native with their own. But when white age and venerable death Mow down the strength and life within their limbs, Drain out the blood and darken their clear eyes, Immortal honour is on them, having past Through splendid life and death desirable To the clear seat and remote throne of souls, Lands indiscoverable in the unheard-of west, Round which the strong stream of a sacred sea Rolls without wind for ever, and the snow There shows not her white wings and windy feet, Nor thunder nor swift rain saith anything, Nor the sun burns, but all things rest and thrive; And these, filled full of days, divine and dead, Sages and singers fiery from the god, And such as loved their land and all things good And, best beloved of best men, liberty, Free lives and lips, free hands of men free-born, And whatsoever on earth was honourable And whosoever of all the ephemeral seed, Live there a life no liker to the gods But nearer than their life of terrene days. Love thou such life and look for such a death. But from the light and fiery dreams of love Spring heavy sorrows and a sleepless life, Visions not dreams, whose lids no charm shall close Nor song assuage them waking; and swift death Crushes with sterile feet the unripening ear,

Treads out the timeless vintage; whom do thou Eschewing embrace the luck of this thy life, Not without honour : and it shall bear to thee Such fruit as men reap from spent hours and wear, Few men, but happy; of whom be thou, O son, Happiest, if thou submit thy soul to fate, And set thine eyes and heart on hopes high-born And divine deeds and abstinence divine. So shalt thou be toward all men all thy days As light and might communicable, and burn From heaven among the stars above the hours, And break not as a man breaks nor burn down : For to whom other of all heroic names Have the gods given his life in hand as thine? And gloriously hast thou lived, and made thy life To me that bare thee and to all men born Thankworthy, a praise for ever; and hast won fame When wild wars broke all round thy father's house, And the mad people of windy mountain ways Laid spears against us like a sea, and all Ætolia thundered with Thessalian hoofs ; Yet these, as wind baffles the foam, and beats Straight back the relaxed ripple, didst thou break And loosen all their lances, till undone And man from man they fell; for ye twain stood God against god, Ares and Artemis, And thou the mightier ; wherefore she unleashed A sharp-toothed curse thou too shalt overcome; For in the greener blossom of thy life Ere the full blade caught flower, and when time gave Respite, thou didst not slacken soul nor sleep,

But with great hand and heart seek praise of men Out of sharp straits and many a grievous thing, Seeing the strange foam of undivided seas On channels never sailed in, and by shores

Where the old winds cease not blowing, and all the night

Thunders, and day is no delight to men.

CHORUS

Meleager, a noble wisdom and fair words The gods have given this woman; hear thou these.

MELEAGER

O mother, I am not fain to strive in speech Nor set my mouth against thee, who art wise Even as they say and full of sacred words. But one thing I know surely, and cleave to this ; That though I be not subtle of wit as thou Nor womanlike to weave sweet words, and melt Mutable minds of wise men as with fire, I too, doing justly and reverencing the gods, Shall not want wit to see what things be right. For whom they love and whom reject, being gods, There is no man but seeth, and in good time Submits himself, refraining all his heart. And I too as thou sayest have seen great things; Seen otherwhere, but chiefly when the sail First caught between stretched ropes the roaring west.

And all our oars smote eastward, and the wind First flung round faces of seafaring men White splendid snow-flakes of the sundering foam, And the first furrow in virginal green sea Followed the plunging ploughshare of hewn pine, And closed, as when deep sleep subdues man's breath Lips close and heart subsides; and closing, shone

Sunlike with many a Nereid's hair, and moved Round many a trembling mouth of doubtful gods, Risen out of sunless and sonorous gulfs Through waning water and into shallow light,

That watched us; and when flying the dove was snared

As with men's hands, but we shot after and sped Clear through the irremeable Symplegades; And chiefliest when hoar beach and herbless cliff Stood out ahead from Colchis, and we heard Clefts hoarse with wind, and saw through narrowing reefs

The lightning of the intolerable wave Flash, and the white wet flame of breakers burn Far under a kindling south-wind, as a lamp Burns and bends all its blowing flame one way; Wild heights untravelled of the wind, and vales Cloven seaward by their violent streams, and white With bitter flowers and bright salt scurf of brine; Heard sweep their sharp swift gales, and bowing birdwise

Shriek with birds' voices, and with furious feet Tread loose the long skirts of a storm; and saw The whole white Euxine clash together and fall Full-mouthed, and thunderous from a thousand throats:

Yet we drew thither and won the fleece and won Medea, deadlier than the sea; but there Seeing many a wonder and fearful things to men I saw not one thing like this one seen here, Most fair and fearful, feminine, a god, Faultless; whom I that love not, being unlike, Fear, and give honour, and choose from all the gods.

ŒNEUS

Lady, the daughter of Thestius, and thou, son, Not ignorant of your strife nor light of wit, Scared with vain dreams and fluttering like spent fire,

I come to judge between you, but a king Full of past days and wise from years endured. Nor thee I praise, who art fain to undo things done : Nor thee, who art swift to esteem them overmuch. For what the hours have given is given, and this Changeless; howbeit these change, and in good time

Devise new things and good, not one thing still. Us have they sent now at our need for help Among men armed a woman, foreign born,

Virgin, not like the natural flower of things

That grows and bears and brings forth fruit and dies;

Unlovable, no light for a husband's house, Espoused; a glory among unwedded girls, And chosen of gods who reverence maidenhood. These too we honour in honouring her; but thou, Abstain thy feet from following, and thine eyes From amorous touch; nor set toward hers thine heart.

Son, lest hate bear no deadlier fruit than love.

ALTHÆA

O king, thou art wise, but wisdom halts ; and just, But the gods love not justice more than fate, And smite the righteous and the violent mouth, And mix with insolent blood the reverent man's, And bruise the holier as the lying lips. Enough; for wise words fail me, and my heart Takes fire and trembles fiamewise, O my son, O child, for thine head's sake; mine eyes wax thick, Turning toward thee, so goodly a weaponed man, So glorious; and for love of thine own eyes They are darkened, and tears burn them, fierce as fire.

And my lips pause and my soul sinks with love. But by thine hand, by thy sweet life and eyes, By thy great heart and these clasped knees, O son, I pray thee that thou slay me not with thee. For there was never a mother woman-born Loved her sons better ; and never a queen of men More perfect in her heart toward whom she loved. For what lies light on many and they forget, Small things and transitory as a wind o' the sea, I forget never ; I have seen thee all thine years A man in arms, strong and a joy to men Seeing thine head glitter and thine hand burn its way Through a heavy and iron furrow of sundering spears ;

But always also a flower of three suns old, The small one thing that lying drew down my life To lie with thee and feed thee; a child and weak, Mine, a delight to no man, sweet to me.

Who then sought to thee? who gat help? who knew If thou wert goodly? nay, no man at all.

Or what sea saw thee, or sounded with thine oar, Child? or what strange land shone with war through thee?

But fair for me thou wert, O little life,

Fruitless, the fruit of mine own flesh, and blind, More than much gold, ungrown, a foolish flower. For silver nor bright snow nor feather of foam Was whiter, and no gold yellower than thine hair, O child, my child ; and now thou art lordlier grown, Not lovelier, nor a new thing in mine eyes, I charge thee by thy soul and this my breast, Fear thou the gods and me and thine own heart, Lest all these turn against thee ; for who knows What wind upon what wave of altering time Shall speak a storm and blow calamity ? And there is nothing stabile in the world But the gods break it ; yet not less, fair son, If but one thing be stronger, if one endure, Surely the bitter and the rooted love That burns between us, going from me to thee, Shall more endure than all things. What dost thou, Following strange loves? why wilt thou kill mine heart?

Lo, I talk wild and windy words, and fall From my clear wits, and seem of mine own self Dethroned, dispraised, disseated ; and my mind, That was my crown, breaks, and mine heart is gone, And I am naked of my soul, and stand Ashamed, as a mean woman ; take thou thought : Live if thou wilt, and if thou wilt not, look, The gods have given thee life to lose or keep, Thou shalt not die as men die, but thine end Fallen upon thee shall break me unaware.

MELEAGER

Queen, my whole heart is molten with thy tears, And my limbs yearn with pity of thee, and love Compels with grief mine eyes and labouring breath; For what thou art I know thee, and this thy breast And thy fair eyes I worship, and am bound Toward thee in spirit and love thee in all my soul.

272

For there is nothing terribler to men Than the sweet face of mothers, and the might. But what shall be let be ; for us the day Once only lives a little, and is not found. Time and the fruitful hour are more than we, And these lay hold upon us ; but thou, God, Zeus, the sole steersman of the helm of things, Father, be swift to see us, and as thou wilt Help : or if adverse, as thou wilt, refrain.

CHORUS

- We have seen thee, O Love, thou art fair; thou art goodly, O Love;
- Thy wings make light in the air as the wings of a dove.
- Thy feet are as winds that divide the stream of the sea;
- Earth is thy covering to hide thee, the garment of thee.
- Thou art swift and subtle and blind as a flame of fire;
- Before thee the laughter, behind thee the tears of desire;
- And twain go forth beside thee, a man with a maid ;
- Her eyes are the eyes of a bride whom delight makes afraid;
- As the breath in the buds that stir is her bridal breath :
- But Fate is the name of her; and his name is Death.

For an evil blossom was born

Of sea-foam and the frothing of blood,

Blood-red and bitter of fruit,

And the seed of it laughter and tears, VOL. IV. T And the leaves of it madness and scorn ; A bitter flower from the bud, Sprung of the sea without root, Sprung without graft from the years.

The weft of the world was untorn That is woven of the day on the night, The hair of the hours was not white Nor the raiment of time overworn, When a wonder, a world's delight, A perilous goddess was born ; And the waves of the sea as she came Clove, and the foam at her feet, Fawning, rejoiced to bring forth A fleshly blossom, a flame Filling the heavens with heat To the cold white ends of the north.

And in air the clamorous birds, And men upon earth that hear Sweet articulate words Sweetly divided apart, And in shallow and channel and mere The rapid and footless herds, Rejoiced, being foolish of heart.

For all they said upon earth,
She is fair, she is white like a dove,
And the life of the world in her breath
Breathes, and is born at her birth ;
For they knew thee for mother of love,
And knew thee not mother of death.

What hadst thou to do being born,

Mother, when winds were at ease, As a flower of the springtime of corn,

A flower of the foam of the seas? For bitter thou wast from thy birth,

Aphrodite, a mother of strife ; For before thee some rest was on earth,

A little respite from tears,

A little pleasure of life;

For life was not then as thou art,

But as one that waxeth in years Sweet-spoken, a fruitful wife;

Earth had no thorn, and desire No sting, neither death any dart;

What hadst thou to do amongst these, Thou, clothed with a burning fire,

Thou, girt with sorrow of heart,

Thou, sprung of the seed of the seas As an ear from a seed of corn,

As a brand plucked forth of a pyre, As a ray shed forth of the morn,

For division of soul and disease, For a dart and a sting and a thorn? What ailed thee then to be born?

Was there not evil enough, Mother, and anguish on earth Born with a man at his birth, Wastes underfoot, and above Storm out of heaven, and dearth Shaken down from the shining thereof, Wrecks from afar overseas And peril of shallow and firth, And tears that spring and increase In the barren places of mirth, That thou, having wings as a dove, Being girt with desire for a girth, That thou must come after these, That thou must lay on him love?

Thou shouldst not so have been born : But death should have risen with thee. Mother, and visible fear, Grief, and the wringing of hands, And noise of many that mourn ; The smitten bosom, the knee Bowed, and in each man's ear A cry as of perishing lands, A moan as of people in prison, A tumult of infinite griefs ; And thunder of storm on the sands, And wailing of wives on the shore ; And under thee newly arisen Loud shoals and shipwrecking reefs, Fierce air and violent light; Sail rent and sundering oar, Darkness, and noises of night; Clashing of streams in the sea, Wave against wave as a sword, Clamour of currents, and foam; Rains making ruin on earth, Winds that wax ravenous and roam As wolves in a wolfish horde : Fruits growing faint in the tree, And blind things dead in their birth; Famine, and blighting of corn, When thy time was come to be born.

All these we know of ; but thee Who shall discern or declare? In the uttermost ends of the sea The light of thine eyelids and hair, The light of thy bosom as fire Between the wheel of the sun And the flying flames of the air? Wilt thou turn thee not yet nor have pity, But abide with despair and desire And the crying of armies undone. Lamentation of one with another And breaking of city by city ; The dividing of friend against friend, The severing of brother and brother ; Wilt thou utterly bring to an end? Have mercy, mother !

For against all men from of old Thou hast set thine hand as a curse, And cast out gods from their places. These things are spoken of thee. Strong kings and goodly with gold Thou hast found out arrows to pierce, And made their kingdoms and races As dust and surf of the sea. All these, overburdened with woes And with length of their days waxen weak, Thou slewest; and sentest moreover Upon Tyro an evil thing. Rent hair and a fetter and blows Making bloody the flower of the cheek, Though she lay by a god as a lover, Though fair, and the seed of a king.

For of old, being full of thy fire,
She endured not longer to wear
On her bosom a saffron vest,
On her shoulder an ashwood quiver ;
Being mixed and made one through desire
With Enipeus, and all her hair
Made moist with his mouth, and her breast
Filled full of the foam of the river.

ATALANTA

Sun, and clear light among green hills, and day Late risen and long sought after, and you just gods Whose hands divide anguish and recompense, But first the sun's white sister, a maid in heaven, On earth of all maids worshipped-hail, and hear, And witness with me if not without sign sent, Not without rule and reverence. I a maid Hallowed, and huntress holy as whom I serve, Here in your sight and eyeshot of these men Stand, girt as they toward hunting, and my shafts Drawn; wherefore all ye stand up on my side, If I be pure and all ve righteous gods, Lest one revile me, a woman, yet no wife, That bear a spear for spindle, and this bow strung For a web woven; and with pure lips salute Heaven, and the face of all the gods, and dawn Filling with maiden flames and maiden flowers The starless fold o' the stars, and making sweet The warm wan heights of the air, moon-trodden ways And breathless gates and extreme hills of heaven. Whom, having offered water and bloodless gifts, Flowers, and a golden circlet of pure hair, Next Artemis I bid be favourable And make this day all golden, hers and ours,

Gracious and good and white to the unblamed end. But thou, O well-beloved, of all my days Bid it be fruitful, and a crown for all, To bring forth leaves and bind round all my hair With perfect chaplets woven for thine of thee. For not without the word of thy chaste mouth, For not without law given and clean command, Across the white straits of the running sea From Elis even to the Acheloïan horn, I with clear winds came hither and gentle gods, Far off my father's house, and left uncheered Iasius, and uncheered the Arcadian hills And all their green-haired waters, and all woods Disconsolate, to hear no horn of mine Blown, and behold no flash of swift white feet.

MELEAGER

For thy name's sake and awe toward thy chaste head, O holiest Atalanta, no man dares Praise thee, though fairer than whom all men praise, And godlike for thy grace of hallowed hair And holy habit of thine eyes, and feet That make the blown foam neither swift nor white Though the wind winnow and whirl it ; yet we praise Gods, found because of thee adorable And for thy sake praiseworthiest from all men : Thee therefore we praise also, thee as these, Pure, and a light lit at the hands of gods.

TOXEUS

How long will ye whet spears with eloquence, Fight, and kill beasts dry-handed with sweet words? Cease, or talk still and slay thy boars at home.

PLEXIPPUS

Why, if she ride among us for a man, Sit thou for her and spin; a man grown girl Is worth a woman weaponed; sit thou here.

MELEAGER

Peace, and be wise ; no gods love idle speech.

PLEXIPPUS

Nor any man a man's mouth woman-tongued.

MELEAGER

For my lips bite not sharper than mine hands.

PLEXIPPUS

Nay, both bite soft, but no whit softly mine.

MELEAGER

Keep thine hands clean; they have time enough to stain.

PLEXIPPUS

For thine shall rest and wax not red to-day.

MELEAGER

Have all thy will of words ; talk out thine heart.

ALTHÆA

Refrain your lips, O brethren, and my son, Lest words turn snakes and bite you uttering them.

TOXEUS

Except she give her blood before the gods, What profit shall a maid be among men?

PLEXIPPUS

Let her come crowned and stretch her throat for a knife,

Bleat out her spirit and die, and so shall men

Through her too prosper and through prosperous gods,

But nowise through her living ; shall she live A flower-bud of the flower-bed, or sweet fruit For kisses and the honey-making mouth, And play the shield for strong men and the spear ? Then shall the heifer and her mate lock horns, And the bride overbear the groom, and men Gods ; for no less division sunders these ; Since all things made are seasonable in time, But if one alter unseasonable are all. But thou, O Zeus, hear me that I may slay

This beast before thee and no man halve with me Nor woman, lest these mock thee, though a god, Who hast made men strong, and thou being wise be held

Foolish; for wise is that thing which endures.

ATALANTA

Men, and the chosen of all this people, and thou, King, I beseech you a little bear with me. For if my life be shameful that I live, Let the gods witness and their wrath ; but these Cast no such word against me. Thou, O mine, O holy, O happy goddess, if I sin Changing the words of women and the works For spears and strange men's faces, hast not thou One shaft of all thy sudden seven that pierced Seven through the bosom or shining throat or side,

All couched about one mother's loosening knees, All holy born, engraffed of Tantalus? But if toward any of you I am overbold That take thus much upon me, let him think How I, for all my forest holiness, Fame, and this armed and iron maidenhood, Pay thus much also; I shall have no man's love For ever, and no face of children born Or feeding lips upon me or fastening eyes For ever, nor being dead shall kings my sons Mourn me and bury, and tears on daughters' cheeks Burn : but a cold and sacred life, but strange, But far from dances and the back-blowing torch, Far off from flowers or any bed of man, Shall my life be for ever : me the snows That face the first o' the morning, and cold hills Full of the land-wind and sea-travelling storms And many a wandering wing of noisy nights That know the thunder and hear the thickening wolves-

Me the utmost pine and footless frost of woods That talk with many winds and gods, the hours Re-risen, and white divisions of the dawn, Springs thousand-tongued with the intermitting reed And streams that murmur of the mother snow— Me these allure, and know me ; but no man Knows, and my goddess only. Lo now, see If one of all you these things vex at all. Would God that any of you had all the praise And I no manner of memory when I die, So might I show before her perfect eyes Pure, whom I follow, a maiden to my death. But for the rest let all have all they will ; For is it a grief to you that I have part, Being woman merely, in your male might and deeds Done by main strength? yet in my body is throned As great a heart, and in my spirit, O men, I have not less of godlike. Evil it were That one a coward should mix with you, one hand Fearful, one eye abase itself; and these Well might ye hate and well revile, not me. For not the difference of the several flesh Being vile or noble or beautiful or base Makes praiseworthy, but purer spirit and heart Higher than these meaner mouths and limbs, that feed,

Rise, rest, and are and are not ; and for me, What should I say? but by the gods of the world And this my maiden body, by all oaths That bind the tongue of men and the evil will, I am not mighty-minded, nor desire Crowns, nor the spoil of slain things nor the fame; Feed ye on these, eat and wax fat; cry out, Laugh, having eaten, and leap without a lyre, Sing, mix the wind with clamour, smite and shake Sonorous timbrels and tumultuous hair, And fill the dance up with tempestuous feet, For I will none ; but having prayed my prayers And made thank-offering for prosperities, I shall go hence and no man see me more. What thing is this for you to shout me down, What, for a man to grudge me this my life As it were envious of all yours, and I A thief of reputations? nay, for now, If there be any highest in heaven, a god Above all thrones and thunders of the gods Throned, and the wheel of the world roll under him, Judge he between me and all of you, and see

If I transgress at all : but ye, refrain Transgressing hands and reinless mouths, and keep Silence, lest by much foam of violent words And proper poison of your lips ye die.

ŒNEUS

O flower of Tegea, maiden, fleetest foot And holiest head of women, have good cheer Of thy good words : but ye, depart with her In peace and reverence, each with blameless eye Following his fate ; exalt your hands and hearts, Strike, cease not, arrow on arrow and wound on wound,

And go with gods and with the gods return.

CHORUS

Who hath given man speech? or who hath set therein

A thorn for peril and a snare for sin?

For in the word his life is and his breath,

And in the word his death,

That madness and the infatuate heart may breed From the word's womb the deed

And life bring one thing forth ere all pass by, Even one thing which is ours yet cannot die— Death. Hast thou seen him ever anywhere, Time's twin-born brother, imperishable as he Is perishable and plaintive, clothed with care

And mutable as sand,

But death is strong and full of blood and fair And perdurable and like a lord of land? Nay, time thou seest not, death thou wilt not see Till life's right hand be loosened from thine hand

And thy life-days from thee.

For the gods very subtly fashion Madness with sadness upon earth : Not knowing in any wise compassion, Nor holding pity of any worth; And many things they have given and taken, And wrought and ruined many things; The firm land have they loosed and shaken, And sealed the sea with all her springs; They have wearied time with heavy burdens And vexed the lips of life with breath : Set men to labour and given them guerdons, Death, and great darkness after death : Put moans into the bridal measure And on the bridal wools a stain ; And circled pain about with pleasure, And girdled pleasure about with pain ; And strewed one marriage-bed with tears and fire For extreme loathing and supreme desire.

What shall be done with all these tears of ours?

Shall they make watersprings in the fair heaven To bathe the brows of morning? or like flowers Be shed and shine before the starriest hours,

Or made the raiment of the weeping Seven? Or rather, O our masters, shall they be Food for the famine of the grievous sea,

A great well-head of lamentation Satiating the sad gods? or fall and flow Among the years and seasons to and fro,

And wash their feet with tribulation And fill them full with grieving ere they go?

Alas, our lords, and yet alas again, Seeing all your iron heaven is gilt as gold But all we smite thereat in vain; Smite the gates barred with groanings manifold,

But all the floors are paven with our pain. Yea, and with weariness of lips and eyes, With breaking of the bosom, and with sighs,

We labour, and are clad and fed with grief And filled with days we would not fain behold And nights we would not hear of ; we wax old,

All we wax old and wither like a leaf.

We are outcast, strayed between bright sun and moon;

Our light and darkness are as leaves of flowers,

Black flowers and white, that perish; and the noon As midnight, and the night as daylight hours.

A little fruit a little while is ours,

And the worm finds it soon.

But up in heaven the high gods one by one

Lay hands upon the draught that quickeneth,

Fulfilled with all tears shed and all things done,

And stir with soft imperishable breath

The bubbling bitterness of life and death, And hold it to our lips and laugh ; but they

Preserve their lips from tasting night or day,

Lest they too change and sleep, the fates that spun, The lips that made us and the hands that slay;

Lest all these change, and heaven bow down to none,

Change and be subject to the secular sway And terrene revolution of the sun.

Therefore they thrust it from them, putting time away.

I would the wine of time, made sharp and sweet With multitudinous days and nights and tears And many mixing savours of strange years,

Were no more trodden of them under feet,

Cast out and spilt about their holy places : That life were given them as a fruit to eat And death to drink as water ; that the light Might ebb, drawn backward from their eyes, and night

Hide for one hour the imperishable faces. That they might rise up sad in heaven, and know Sorrow and sleep, one paler than young snow

One cold as blight of dew and ruinous rain; Rise up and rest and suffer a little, and be Awhile as all things born with us and we,

And grieve as men, and like slain men be slain.

For now we know not of them; but one saith

The gods are gracious, praising God; and one, When hast thou seen? or hast thou felt his breath

Touch, nor consume thine eyelids as the sun, Nor fill thee to the lips with fiery death?

None hath beheld him, none Seen above other gods and shapes of things, Swift without feet and flying without wings, Intolerable, not clad with death or life,

Insatiable, not known of night or day, The lord of love and loathing and of strife

Who gives a star and takes a sun away ; Who shapes the soul, and makes her a barren wife

To the earthly body and grievous growth of clay; Who turns the large limbs to a little flame

And binds the great sea with a little sand; Who makes desire, and slays desire with shame;

Who shakes the heaven as ashes in his hand;

Who, seeing the light and shadow for the same,

Bids day waste night as fire devours a brand, Smites without sword, and scourges without rod;

The supreme evil, God.

- Yea, with thine hate, O God, thou hast covered us, One saith, and hidden our eyes away from sight,
- And made us transitory and hazardous,
  - Light things and slight;
- Yet have men praised thee, saying, He hath made man thus,

And he doeth right.

- Thou hast kissed us, and hast smitten; thou hast laid
- Upon us with thy left hand life, and said,
- Live: and again thou hast said, Yield up your breath,
- And with thy right hand laid upon us death.
- Thou hast sent us sleep, and stricken sleep with dreams,

Saying, Joy is not, but love of joy shall be;

Thou hast made sweet springs for all the pleasant streams,

In the end thou hast made them bitter with the sea.

- Thou hast fed one rose with dust of many men; Thou hast marred one face with fire of many tears;
- Thou hast taken love, and given us sorrow again;
  - With pain thou hast filled us full to the eyes and ears.
- Therefore because thou art strong, our father, and we

Feeble; and thou art against us, and thine hand Constrains us in the shallows of the sea

And breaks us at the limits of the land;

Because thou hast bent thy lightnings as a bow,

And loosed the hours like arrows; and let fall

Sins and wild words and many a winged woe

And wars among us, and one end of all ;

Because thou hast made the thunder, and thy feet Are as a rushing water when the skies Break, but thy face as an exceeding heat

And flames of fire the eyelids of thine eyes ; Because thou art over all who are over us ;

Because thy name is life and our name death ; Because thou art cruel and men are piteous,

And our hands labour and thine hand scattereth; Lo, with hearts rent and knees made tremulous,

Lo, with ephemeral lips and casual breath,

At least we witness of thee ere we die

That these things are not otherwise, but thus; That each man in his heart sigheth, and saith,

That all men even as I,

All we are against thee, against thee, O God most high.

But ye, keep ye on earth

Your lips from over-speech,

Loud words and longing are so little worth ;

And the end is hard to reach.

For silence after grievous things is good,

And reverence, and the fear that makes men whole, And shame, and righteous governance of blood,

And lordship of the soul.

But from sharp words and wits men pluck no fruit, And gathering thorns they shake the tree at root ; For words divide and rend :

But silence is most noble till the end.

ALTHÆA

I heard within the house a cry of news And came forth eastward hither, where the dawn Cheers first these warder gods that face the sun VOL. IV.

And next our eyes unrisen ; for unaware Came clashes of swift hoofs and trampling feet And through the windy pillared corridor Light sharper than the frequent flames of day That daily fill it from the fiery dawn ; Gleams, and a thunder of people that cried out, And dust and hurrying horsemen ; lo their chief, That rode with Œneus rein by rein, returned. What cheer, O herald of my lord the king ?

HERALD

Lady, good cheer and great; the boar is slain.

CHORUS

Praised be all gcds that look toward Calydon.

ALTHÆA

Good news and brief; but by whose happier hand?

HERALD

A maiden's and a prophet's and thy son's.

ALTHÆA

Well fare the spear that severed him and life.

HERALD

Thine own, and not an alien, hast thou blest.

ALTHÆA

Twice be thou too for my sake blest and his.

HERALD

At the king's word I rode afoam for thine.

ALTHÆA

Thou sayest he tarrieth till they bring the spoil?

HERALD

Hard by the quarry, where they breathe, O queen.

ALTHÆA

Speak thou their chance ; but some bring flowers and crown

These gods and all the lintel, and shed wine, Fetch sacrifice and slay; for heaven is good.

HERALD

Some furlongs northward where the brakes begin West of that narrowing range of warrior hills Whose brooks have bled with battle when thy son Smote Acarnania, there all they made halt, And with keen eye took note of spear and hound, Royally ranked ; Laertes island-born, The young Gerenian Nestor, Panopeus, And Cepheus and Ancæus, mightiest thewed, Arcadians ; next, and evil-eyed of these, Arcadian Atalanta, with twain hounds Lengthening the leash, and under nose and brow Glittering with lipless tooth and fire-swift eye; But from her white braced shoulder the plumed shafts Rang, and the bow shone from her side : next her Meleager, like a sun in spring that strikes Branch into leaf and bloom into the world, A glory among men meaner; Iphicles, And following him that slew the biform bull Pirithous, and divine Eurytion, And, bride-bound to the gods, Æacides. Then Telamon his brother, and Argive-born The seer and saver of visions and of truth, Amphiaraus; and a four-fold strength,

Thine, even thy mother's and thy sister's sons. And recent from the roar of foreign foam Jason, and Dryas twin-begot with war, A blossom of bright battle, sword and man Shining ; and Idas, and the keenest eye Of Lynceus, and Admetus twice-espoused, And Hippasus and Hyleus, great in heart. These having halted bade blow horns, and rode Through woods and waste lands cleft by stormy streams,

Past yew-trees and the heavy hair of pines, And where the dew is thickest under oaks, This way and that; but questing up and down They saw no trail nor scented ; and one said, Plexippus, Help, or help not, Artemis, And we will flay thy boarskin with male hands; But saying, he ceased and said not that he would, Seeing where the green ooze of a sun-struck marsh Shook with a thousand reeds untunable. And in their moist and multitudinous flower Slept no soft sleep, with violent visions fed, The blind bulk of the immeasurable beast. And seeing, he shuddered with sharp lust of praise Through all his limbs, and launched a double dart. And missed : for much desire divided him, Too hot of spirit and feebler than his will, That his hand failed, though fervent; and the shaft, Sundering the rushes, in a tamarisk stem Shook, and stuck fast ; then all abode save one, The Arcadian Atalanta: from her side Sprang her hounds, labouring at the leash, and slipped,

And plashed ear-deep with plunging feet ; but she Saying, Speed it as I send it for thy sake,

Goddess, drew bow and loosed; the sudden string Rang, and sprang inward, and the waterish air Hissed, and the moist plumes of the songless reeds Moved as a wave which the wind moves no more. But the boar heaved half out of ooze and slime His tense flank trembling round the barbèd wound, Hateful; and fiery with invasive eyes And bristling with intolerable hair

- Plunged, and the hounds clung, and green flowers and white
- Reddened and broke all round them where they came.

And charging with sheer tusk he drove, and smote Hyleus ; and sharp death caught his sudden soul, And violent sleep shed night upon his eyes. Then Peleus, with strong strain of hand and heart, Shot ; but the sidelong arrow slid, and slew His comrade born and loving countryman, Under the left arm smitten, as he no less Poised a like arrow; and bright blood brake afoam, And falling, and weighed back by clamorous arms, Sharp rang the dead limbs of Eurytion. Then one shot happier, the Cadmean seer, Amphiaraus; for his sacred shaft Pierced the red circlet of one ravening eve Beneath the brute brows of the sanguine boar, Now bloodier from one slain ; but he so galled Sprang straight, and rearing cried no lesser cry Than thunder and the roar of wintering streams That mix their own foam with the vellower sea: And as a tower that falls by fire in fight With ruin of walls and all its archery, And breaks the iron flower of war beneath, Crushing charred limbs and molten arms of men;

So through crushed branches and the reddening brake

Clamoured and crashed the fervour of his feet, And trampled, springing sideways from the tusk, Too tardy a moving mould of heavy strength, Ancæus ; and as flakes of weak-winged snow Break, all the hard thews of his heaving limbs Broke, and rent flesh fell every way, and blood Flew, and fierce fragments of no more a man. Then all the heroes drew sharp breath, and gazed, And smote not ; but Meleager, but thy son, Right in the wild way of the coming curse Rock-rooted, fair with fierce and fastened lips, Clear eyes, and springing muscle and shortening limb—

With chin aslant indrawn to a tightening throat, Grave, and with gathered sinews, like a god,— Aimed on the left side his well-handled spear Grasped where the ash was knottiest hewn, and smote,

And with no missile wound, the monstrous boar Right in the hairiest hollow of his hide Under the last rib, sheer through bulk and bone, Deep in ; and deeply smitten, and to death, The heavy horror with his hanging shafts Leapt, and fell furiously, and from raging lips Foamed out the latest wrath of all his life. And all they praised the gods with mightier heart, Zeus and all gods, but chiefliest Artemis, Seeing ; but Meleager bade whet knives and flay, Strip and stretch out the splendour of the spoil ; And hot and horrid from the work all these Sat, and drew breath and drank and made great cheer And washed the hard sweat off their calmer brows.

For much sweet grass grew higher than grew the reed,

And good for slumber, and every holier herb, Narcissus, and the low-lying melilote, And all of goodliest blade and bloom that springs Where, hid by heavier hyacinth, violet buds Blossom and burn; and fire of yellower flowers And light of crescent lilies, and such leaves As fear the Faun's and know the Dryad's foot; Olive and ivy and poplar dedicate, And many a well-spring overwatched of these. There now they rest; but me the king bade bear Good tidings to rejoice this town and thee. Wherefore be glad, and all ye give much thanks, For fallen is all the trouble of Calydon.

ALTHÆA

Laud ye the gods; for this they have given is good,

And what shall be they hide until their time. Much good and somewhat grievous hast thou said, And either well; but let all sad things be, Till all have made before the prosperous gods Burnt-offering, and poured out the floral wine. Look fair, O gods, and favourable; for we Praise you with no false heart or flattering mouth, Being merciful, but with pure souls and prayer.

HERALD

Thou hast prayed well; for whoso fears not these, But once being prosperous waxes huge of heart, Him shall some new thing unaware destroy.

CHORUS

O that I now, I too were By deep wells and water-floods. Streams of ancient hills, and where All the wan green places bear Blossoms cleaving to the sod, Fruitless fruit, and grasses fair, Or such darkest ivy-buds As divide thy yellow hair, Bacchus, and their leaves that nod Round thy fawnskin brush the bare Snow-soft shoulders of a god; There the year is sweet, and there Earth is full of secret springs, And the fervent rose-cheeked hours, Those that marry dawn and noon, There are sunless, there look pale In dim leaves and hidden air, Pale as grass or latter flowers Or the wild vine's wan wet rings Full of dew beneath the moon, And all day the nightingale Sleeps, and all night sings ; There in cold remote recesses That nor alien eyes assail, Feet, nor imminence of wings, Nor a wind nor any tune, Thou, O queen and holiest, Flower the whitest of all things, With reluctant lengthening tresses And with sudden splendid breast Save of maidens unbeholden, There art wont to enter, there

Thy divine swift limbs and golden Maiden growth of unbound hair, Bathed in waters white. Shine, and many a maid's by thee In moist woodland or the hilly Flowerless brakes where wells abound Out of all men's sight; Or in lower pools that see All their marges clothed all round With the innumerable lily, Whence the golden-girdled bee Flits through flowering rush to fret White or duskier violet, Fair as those that in far years With their buds left luminous And their little leaves made wet, From the warmer dew of tears, Mother's tears in extreme need, Hid the limbs of Iamus, Of thy brother's seed; For his heart was piteous Toward him, even as thine heart now Pitiful toward us ; Thine, O goddess, turning hither A benignant blameless brow; Seeing enough of evil done And lives withered as leaves wither In the blasting of the sun; Seeing enough of hunters dead, Ruin enough of all our year, Herds and harvests slain and shed. Herdsmen stricken many an one, Fruits and flocks consumed together, And great length of deadly days.

Yet with reverent lips and fear Turn we toward thee, turn and praise For this lightening of clear weather And prosperities begun. For not seldom, when all air As bright water without breath Shines, and when men fear not, fate Without thunder unaware Breaks, and brings down death. Joy with grief ye great gods give, Good with bad, and overbear All the pride of us that live. All the high estate, As ye long since overbore, As in old time long before, Many a strong man and a great, All that were. But do thou, sweet, otherwise, Having heed of all our prayer, Taking note of all our sighs; We beseech thee by thy light, By thy bow, and thy sweet eyes, And the kingdom of the night, Be thou favourable and fair : By thine arrows and thy might And Orion overthrown ; By the maiden thy delight, By the indissoluble zone And the sacred hair.

MESSENGER

Maidens, if ye will sing now, shift your song, Bow down, cry, wail for pity; is this a time For singing? nay, for strewing of dust and ash, Rent raiment, and for bruising of the breast.

CHORUS

What new thing wolf-like lurks behind thy words? What snake's tongue in thy lips? what fire in the eyes?

MESSENGER

Bring me before the queen and I will speak.

CHORUS

Lo, she comes forth as from thank-offering made.

MESSENGER

A barren offering for a bitter gift.

ALTHÆA

What are these borne on branches, and the face Covered? no mean men living, but now slain Such honour have they, if any dwell with death.

MESSENGER

Queen, thy twain brethren and thy mother's sons.

ALTHÆA

Lay down your dead till I behold their blood If it be mine indeed, and I will weep.

MESSENGER

Weep if thou wilt, for these men shall no more.

ALTHÆA

O brethren, O my father's sons, of me Well loved and well reputed, I should weep Tears dearer than the dear blood drawn from you But that I know you not uncomforted, Sleeping no shameful sleep, however slain, For my son surely hath avenged you dead.

MESSENGER

Nay, should thine own seed slay himself, O queen?

ALTHÆA

Thy double word brings forth a double death.

MESSENGER

Know this then singly, by one hand they fell.

ALTHÆA

What mutterest thou with thine ambiguous mouth?

MESSENGER

Slain by thy son's hand; is that saying so hard?

ALTHÆA

Our time is come upon us : it is here.

CHORUS

O miserable, and spoiled at thine own hand.

ALTHÆA

Wert thou not called Meleager from this womb?

CHORUS

A grievous huntsman hath it bred to thee.

ALTHÆA

Wert thou born fire, and shalt thou not devour?

CHORUS

The fire thou madest, will it consume even thee?

ALTHÆA

My dreams are fallen upon me; burn thou too.

CHORUS

Not without God are visions born and die.

ALTHÆA

The gods are many about me; I am one.

CHORUS

She groans as men wrestling with heavier gods.

ALTHÆA

They rend me, they divide me, they destroy.

CHORUS

Or one labouring in travail of strange births.

ALTHÆA

They are strong, they are strong; I am broken, and these prevail.

CHORUS

The god is great against her ; she will die.

ALTHÆA

Yea, but not now; for my heart too is great. I would I were not here in sight of the sun. But thou, speak all thou sawest, and I will die.

MESSENGER

O queen, for queenlike hast thou borne thyself, A little word may hold so great mischance. For in division of the sanguine spoil These men thy brethren wrangling bade yield up The boar's head and the horror of the hide That this might stand a wonder in Calydon, Hallowed; and some drew toward them; but thy son With great hands grasping all that weight of hair Cast down the dead heap clanging and collapsed At female feet, saying This thy spoil not mine, Maiden, thine own hand for thyself hath reaped, And all this praise God gives thee : she thereat Laughed, as when dawn touches the sacred night The sky sees laugh and redden and divide Dim lips and eyelids virgin of the sun, Hers, and the warm slow breasts of morning heave, Fruitful, and flushed with flame from lamp-lit hours, And maiden undulation of clear hair Colour the clouds ; so laughed she from pure heart, Lit with a low blush to the braided hair, And rose-coloured and cold like very dawn, Golden and godlike, chastely with chaste lips, A faint grave laugh; and all they held their peace, And she passed by them. Then one cried Lo now, Shall not the Arcadian shoot out lips at us, Saving all we were despoiled by this one girl? And all they rode against her violently And cast the fresh crown from her hair, and now They had rent her spoil away, dishonouring her, Save that Meleager, as a tame lion chafed, Bore on them, broke them, and as fire cleaves wood So clove and drove them, smitten in twain ; but she Smote not nor heaved up hand; and this man first, Plexippus, crying out This for love's sake, sweet, Drove at Meleager, who with spear straightening Pierced his cheek through; then Toxeus made for him.

Dumb, but his spear spake; vain and violent words. Fruitless; for him too stricken through both sides The earth felt falling, and his horse's foam

Blanched thy son's face, his slayer; and these being slain,

None moved nor spake ; but Œneus bade bear hence These made of heaven infatuate in their deaths, Foolish ; for these would baffle fate, and fell. And they passed on, and all men honoured her, Being honourable, as one revered of heaven.

ALTHÆA

What say you, women? is all this not well done?

CHORUS

No man doth well but God hath part in him.

ALTHÆA

But no part here ; for these my brethren born
Ye have no part in, these ye know not of
As I that was their sister, a sacrifice
Slain in their slaying. I would I had died for these ;
For this man dead walked with me, child by child,
And made a weak staff for my feebler feet
With his own tender wrist and hand, and held
And led me softly and shewed me gold and steel
And shining shapes of mirror and bright crown
And all things fair ; and threw light spears, and brought Young hounds to huddle at my feet and thrust

Tame heads against my little maiden breasts And please me with great eyes; and those days went And these are bitter and I a barren queen And sister miserable, a grievous thing And mother of many curses; and she too, My sister Leda, sitting overseas With fair fruits round her, and her faultless lord, Shall curse me, saying A sorrow and not a son, Sister, thou barest, even a burning fire, A brand consuming thine own soul and me. But ye now, sons of Thestius, make good cheer, For ye shall have such wood to funeral fire As no king hath ; and flame that once burnt down Oil shall not quicken or breath relume or wine Refresh again ; much costlier than fine gold, And more than many lives of wandering men.

CHORUS

O queen, thou hast yet with thee love-worthy things, Thine husband, and the great strength of thy son.

ALTHÆA

Who shall get brothers for me while I live? Who bear them? who bring forth in lieu of these? Are not our fathers and our brethren one, And no man like them? are not mine here slain? Have we not hung together, he and I, Flowerwise feeding as the feeding bees, With mother-milk for honey? and this man too, Dead, with my son's spear thrust between his sides, Hath he not seen us, later born than he. Laugh with lips filled, and laughed again for love? There were no sons then in the world, nor spears, Nor deadly births of women; but the gods Allowed us, and our days were clear of these. I would I had died unwedded, and brought forth No swords to vex the world; for these that spake Sweet words long since and loved me will not speak Nor love nor look upon me; and all my life I shall not hear nor see them living men. But I too living, how shall I now live?

What life shall this be with my son, to know What hath been and desire what will not be, Look for dead eyes and listen for dead lips, And kill mine own heart with remembering them, And with those eyes that see their slaver alive Weep, and wring hands that clasp him by the hand? How shall I bear my dreams of them, to hear False voices, feel the kisses of false mouths And footless sound of perished feet, and then Wake and hear only it may be their own hounds Whine masterless in miserable sleep, And see their boar-spears and their beds and seats And all the gear and housings of their lives And not the men? shall hounds and horses mourn, Pine with strange eyes, and prick up hungry ears, Famish and fail at heart for their dear lords, And I not heed at all? and those blind things Fall off from life for love's sake, and I live? Surely some death is better than some life, Better one death for him and these and me For if the gods had slain them it may be I had endured it; if they had fallen by war Or by the nets and knives of privy death And by hired hands while sleeping, this thing too I had set my soul to suffer ; or this hunt, Had this despatched them, under tusk or tooth Torn, sanguine, trodden, broken; for all deaths Or honourable or with facile feet avenged And hands of swift gods following, all save this, Are bearable : but not for their sweet land Fighting, but not a sacrifice, lo these Dead ; for I had not then shed all mine heart Out at mine eyes : then either with good speed, Being just, I had slain their slayer atoningly,

VOL: IV.

Or strewn with flowers their fire and on their tombs Hung crowns, and over them a song, and seen Their praise outflame their ashes : for all men, All maidens, had come thither, and from pure lips Shed songs upon them, from heroic eyes Tears; and their death had been a deathless life; But now, by no man hired nor alien sword. By their own kindred are they fallen, in peace, After much peril, friendless among friends, By hateful hands they loved ; and how shall mine Touch these returning red and not from war, These fatal from the vintage of men's veins, Dead men my brethren? how shall these wash off No festal stains of undelightful wine, How mix the blood, my blood on them, with me, Holding mine hand? or how shall I say, son, That am no sister? but by night and day Shall we not sit and hate each other, and think Things hate-worthy? not live with shamefast eyes, Brow-beaten, treading soft with fearful feet, Each unupbraided, each without rebuke Convicted, and without a word reviled Each of another? and I shall let thee live And see thee strong and hear men for thy sake Praise me, but these thou wouldest not let live No man shall praise for ever? these shall lie Dead, unbeloved, unholpen, all through thee? Sweet were they toward me living, and mine heart Desired them, but was then well satisfied, That now is as men hungered ; and these dead I shall want always to the day I die. For all things else and all men may renew; Yea, son for son the gods may give and take, But never a brother or sister any more.

CHORUS

Nay, for the son lies close about thine heart, Full of thy milk, warm from thy womb, and drains Life and the blood of life and all thy fruit, Eats thee and drinks thee as who breaks bread and eats,

Treads wine and drinks, thyself, a sect of thee ; And if he feed not, shall not thy flesh faint? Or drink not, are not thy lips dead for thirst? This thing moves more than all things, even thy son, That thou cleave to him ; and he shall honour thee, Thy womb that bare him and the breasts he knew, Reverencing most for thy sake all his gods.

ALTHÆA

But these the gods too gave me, and these my son, Not reverencing his gods nor mine own heart Nor the old sweet years nor all venerable things, But cruel, and in his ravin like a beast, Hath taken away to slay them : yea, and she She the strange woman, she the flower, the sword, Red from spilt blood, a mortal flower to men, Adorable, detestable—even she Saw with strange eyes and with strange lips rejoiced, Seeing these mine own slain of mine own, and me Made miserable above all miseries made, A grief among all women in the world, A name to be washed out with all men's tears.

CHORUS

Strengthen thy spirit; is this not also a god, Chance, and the wheel of all necessities? Hard things have fallen upon us from harsh gods, Whom lest worse hap rebuke we not for these.

ALTHÆA

My spirit is strong against itself, and I For these things' sake cry out on mine own soul That it endures outrage, and dolorous days, And life, and this inexpiable impotence. Weak am I, weak and shameful ; my breath drawn Shames me, and monstrous things and violent gods. What shall atone? what heal me? what bring back Strength to the foot, light to the face? what herb Assuage me? what restore me? what release? What strange thing eaten or drunken, O great gods, Make me as you or as the beasts that feed, Slay and divide and cherish their own hearts? For these ye show us; and we less than these Have not wherewith to live as all these things Which all their lives fare after their own kind As who doth well rejoicing ; but we ill, Weeping or laughing, we whom eyesight fails, Knowledge and light of face and perfect heart, And hands we lack, and wit; and all our days Sin, and have hunger, and die infatuated. For madness have ye given us and not health, And sins whereof we know not ; and for these Death, and sudden destruction unaware. What shall we say now? what thing comes of us?

CHORUS

Alas, for all this all men undergo.

ALTHÆA

Wherefore I will not that these twain, O gods, Die as a dog dies, eaten of creeping things, Abominable, a loathing ; but though dead Shall they have honour and such funereal flame

As strews men's ashes in their enemies' face And blinds their eyes who hate them : lest men say, "Lo how they lie, and living had great kin, And none of these hath pity of them, and none Regards them lying, and none is wrung at heart, None moved in spirit for them, naked and slain, Abhorred, abased, and no tears comfort them :" And in the dark this grieve Eurythemis, Hearing how these her sons come down to her Unburied, unavenged, as kinless men, And had a queen their sister. That were shame Worse than this grief. Yet how to atone at all I know not ; seeing the love of my born son, A new-made mother's new-born love, that grows From the soft child to the strong man, now soft Now strong as either, and still one sole same love, Strives with me, no light thing to strive withal; This love is deep, and natural to man's blood, And ineffaceable with many tears. Yet shall not these rebuke me though I die, Nor she in that waste world with all her dead, My mother, among the pale flocks fallen as leaves, Folds of dead people, and alien from the sun; Nor lack some bitter comfort, some poor praise, Being queen, to have borne her daughter like a queen, Righteous; and though mine own fire burn me too, She shall have honour and these her sons, though dead. But all the gods will, all they do, and we Not all we would, yet somewhat; and one choice We have, to live and do just deeds and die.

CHORUS

Terrible words she communes with, and turns Swift fiery eyes in doubt against herself, And murmurs as who talks in dreams with death.

ALTHÆA

For the unjust also dieth, and him all men Hate, and himself abhors the unrighteousness, And seeth his own dishonour intolerable. But I being just, doing right upon myself, Slay mine own soul, and no man born shames me. For none constrains nor shall rebuke, being done, What none compelled me doing ; thus these things fare.

Ah, ah, that such things should so fare ; ah me, That I am found to do them and endure, Chosen and constrained to choose, and bear myself Mine own wound through mine own flesh to the heart Violently stricken, a spoiler and a spoil, A ruin ruinous, fallen on mine own son. Ah, ah, for me too as for these ; alas, For that is done that shall be, and mine hand Full of the deed, and full of blood mine eyes, That shall see never nor touch anything Save blood unstanched and fire unquenchable.

CHORUS

What wilt thou do? what ails thee? for the house Shakes ruinously; wilt thou bring fire for it?

ALTHÆA

Fire in the roofs, and on the lintels fire. Lo ye, who stand and weave, between the doors, There ; and blood drips from hand and thread, and stains Threshold and raiment and me passing in Flecked with the sudden sanguine drops of death.

CHORUS

Alas that time is stronger than strong men, Fate than all gods : and these are fallen on us.

ALTHÆA

A little since and I was glad; and now I never shall be glad or sad again.

CHORUS

Between two joys a grief grows unaware.

ALTHÆA

A little while and I shall laugh; and then I shall weep never and laugh not any more.

CHORUS

What shall be said? for words are thorns to grief. Withhold thyself a little and fear the gods.

ALTHÆA

Fear died when these were slain; and I am as dead, And fear is of the living; these fear none.

CHORUS

Have pity upon all people for their sake.

ALTHÆA

It is done now; shall I put back my day?

CHORUS

An end is come, an end; this is of God.

ALTHÆA

I am fire, and burn myself; keep clear of fire,

CHORUS

The house is broken, is broken; it shall not stand.

ALTHÆA

Woe, woe for him that breaketh; and a rod Smote it of old, and now the axe is here.

CHORUS

Not as with sundering of the earth Nor as with cleaving of the sea Nor fierce foreshadowings of a birth Nor flying dreams of death to be Nor loosening of the large world's girth And quickening of the body of night, And sound of thunder in men's ears And fire of lightning in men's sight, Fate, mother of desires and fears, Bore unto men the law of tears ; But sudden, an unfathered flame, And broken out of night, she shone, She, without body, without name, In days forgotten and foregone ; And heaven rang round her as she came Like smitten cymbals, and lay bare ; Cloud's and great stars, thunders and snows, The blue sad fields and folds of air, The life that breathes, the life that grows, All wind, all fire, that burns or blows, Even all these knew her : for she is great ; The daughter of doom, the mother of death, The sister of sorrow; a lifelong weight That no man's finger lighteneth, Nor any god can lighten fate;

A landmark seen across the way Where one race treads as the other trod ; An evil sceptre, an evil stay, Wrought for a staff, wrought for a rod, The bitter jealousy of God.

For death is deep as the sea, And fate as the waves thereof. Shall the waves take pity on thee

Or the southwind offer thee love? Wilt thou take the night for thy day Or the darkness for light on thy way,

Till thou say in thine heart Enough? Behold, thou art over fair, thou art over wise; The sweetness of spring in thine hair, and the light in thine eyes.

The light of the spring in thine eyes, and the sound in thine ears;

Yet thine heart shall wax heavy with sighs and thine eyelids with tears.

Wilt thou cover thine hair with gold, and with silver thy feet?

Hast thou taken the purple to fold thee, and made thy mouth sweet?

Behold, when thy face is made bare, he that loved thee shall hate ;

Thy face shall be no more fair at the fall of thy fate. For thy life shall fall as a leaf and be shed as the rain; And the veil of thine head shall be grief; and the crown shall be pain.

ALTHÆA

Ho, ye that wail, and ye that sing, make way Till I be come among you. Hide your tears, Ye little weepers, and your laughing lips, Ye laughers for a little; lo mine eyes That outweep heaven at rainiest, and my mouth That laughs as gods laugh at us. Fate's are we, Yet fate is ours a breathing-space ; yea, mine, Fate is made mine for ever; he is my son, My bedfellow, my brother. You strong gods, Give place unto me; I am as any of you, To give life and to take life. Thou, old earth, That hast made man and unmade; thou whose mouth Looks red from the eaten fruits of thine own womb ; Behold me with what lips upon what food I feed and fill my body; even with flesh Made of my body. Lo, the fire I lit I burn with fire to quench it; yea, with flame I burn up even the dust and ash thereof.

CHORUS

Woman, what fire is this thou burnest with?

ALTHÆA

Yea to the bone, yea to the blood and all.

CHORUS

For this thy face and hair are as one fire.

ALTHÆA

A tongue that licks and beats upon the dust.

CHORUS

And in thine eyes are hollow light and heat.

ALTHÆA

Of flame not fed with hand or frankincense.

CHORUS

I fear thee for the trembling of thine eyes,

ALTHÆA

Neither with love they tremble nor for fear.

CHORUS

And thy mouth shuddering like a shot bird.

ALTHÆA

Not as the bride's mouth when man kisses it.

CHORUS

Nay, but what thing is this thing thou hast done?

ALTHÆA

Look, I am silent, speak your eyes for me.

CHORUS

I see a faint fire lightening from the hall.

ALTHÆA

Gaze, stretch your eyes, strain till the lids drop off.

CHORUS

Flushed pillars down the flickering vestibule.

ALTHÆA

Stretch with your necks like birds: cry, chirp as they.

CHORUS

And a long brand that blackens : and white dust.

ALTHÆA

O children, what is this ye see? your eyes Are blinder than night's face at fall of moon. That is my son, my flesh, my fruit of life, My travail, and the year's weight of my womb. Meleager, a fire enkindled of mine hands And of mine hands extinguished ; this is he.

CHORUS

O gods, what word has flown out at thy mouth?

ALTHÆA

I did this and I say this and I die.

CHORUS

Death stands upon the doorway of thy lips, And in thy mouth has death set up his house.

ALTHÆA

O death, a little, a little while, sweet death, Until I see the brand burnt down and die.

CHORUS

She reels as any reed under the wind, And cleaves unto the ground with staggering feet.

ALTHÆA

Girls, one thing will I say and hold my peace. I that did this will weep not nor cry out, Cry ye and weep : I will not call on gods, Call ye on them; I will not pity man, Shew ye your pity. I know not if I live; Save that I feel the fire upon my face And on my cheek the burning of a brand.

316

Yea the smoke bites me, yea I drink the steam With nostril and with eyelid and with lip Insatiate and intolerant ; and mine hands Burn, and fire feeds upon mine eyes; I reel As one made drunk with living, whence he draws Drunken delight; yet I, though mad for joy, Loathe my long living and am waxen red As with the shadow of shed blood ; behold, I am kindled with the flames that fade in him, I am swollen with subsiding of his veins, I am flooded with his ebbing; my lit eyes Flame with the falling fire that leaves his lids Bloodless; my cheek is luminous with blood Because his face is ashen. Yet, O child. Son, first-born, fairest-O sweet mouth, sweet eyes, That drew my life out through my suckling breast, That shone and clove mine heart through-O soft knees

Clinging, O tender treadings of soft feet, Cheeks warm with little kissings-O child, child, What have we made each other? Lo, I felt Thy weight cleave to me, a burden of beauty, O son, Thy cradled brows and loveliest loving lips, The floral hair, the little lightening eyes, And all thy goodly glory; with mine hands Delicately I fed thee, with my tongue Tenderly spake, saying, Verily in God's time, For all the little likeness of thy limbs, Son, I shall make thee a kingly man to fight, A lordly leader ; and hear before I die, "She bore the goodliest sword of all the world." Oh ! oh ! For all my life turns round on me ; I am severed from myself, my name is gone, My name that was a healing, it is changed,

My name is a consuming. From this time, Though mine eyes reach to the end of all these things, My lips shall not unfasten till I die.

SEMICHORUS

She has filled with sighing the city,

And the ways thereof with tears ; She arose, she girdled her sides, She set her face as a bride's ; She wept, and she had no pity ; Trembled, and felt no fears.

SEMICHORUS

Her eyes were clear as the sun, Her brows were fresh as the day ;

She girdled herself with gold, Her robes were manifold; But the days of her worship are done, Her praise is taken away.

SEMICHORUS

For she set her hand to the fire,

With her mouth she kindled the same As the mouth of a flute-player, So was the mouth of her ; With the might of her strong desire She blew the breath of the flame.

SEMICHORUS

She set her hand to the wood,

She took the fire in her hand; As one who is nigh to death, She panted with strange breath; She opened her lips unto blood,

She breathed and kindled the brand.

SEMICHORUS

As a wood-dove newly shot, She sobbed and lifted her breast; She sighed and covered her eyes, Filling her lips with sighs; She sighed, she withdrew herself not, She refrained not, taking not rest;

SEMICHORUS

But as the wind which is drouth, And as the air which is death, As storm that severeth ships, Her breath severing her lips, The breath came forth of her mouth And the fire came forth of her breath,

SECOND MESSENGER

Queen, and you maidens, there is come on us A thing more deadly than the face of death; Meleager the good lord is as one slain.

SEMICHORUS

Without sword, without sword is he stricken; Slain, and slain without hand.

SECOND MESSENGER

For as keen ice divided of the sun His limbs divide, and as thawed snow the flesh Thaws from off all his body to the hair.

SEMICHORUS

He wastes as the embers quicken ; With the brand he fades as a brand.

SECOND MESSENGER

Even while they sang and all drew hither and he Lifted both hands to crown the Arcadian's hair And fix the looser leaves, both hands fell down.

SEMICHORUS

With rending of cheek and of hair Lament ye, mourn for him, weep.

SECOND MESSENGER

Straightway the crown slid off and smote on earth, First fallen; and he, grasping his own hair, groaned And cast his raiment round his face and fell.

SEMICHORUS

Alas for visions that were, And soothsayings spoken in sleep.

SECOND MESSENGER

But the king twitched his reins in and leapt down And caught him, crying out twice "O child" and thrice,

So that men's eyelids thickened with their tears.

SEMICHORUS

Lament with a long lamentation, Cry, for an end is at hand.

SECOND MESSENGER

O son, he said, son, lift thine eyes, draw breath, Pity me; but Meleager with sharp lips Gasped, and his face waxed like as sunburnt grass.

SEMICHORUS

Cry aloud, O thou kingdom, O nation, O stricken, a ruinous land.

SECOND MESSENGER

Whereat king Œneus, straightening feeble knees, With feeble hands heaved up a lessening weight, And laid him sadly in strange hands, and wept.

SEMICHORUS

Thou art smitten, her lord, her desire, Thy dear blood wasted as rain.

SECOND MESSENGER

And they with tears and rendings of the beard Bear hither a breathing body, wept upon And lightening at each footfall, sick to death.

SEMICHORUS

Thou madest thy sword as a fire, With fire for a sword thou art slain.

SECOND MESSENGER

And lo, the feast turned funeral, and the crowns Fallen; and the huntress and the hunter trapped; And weeping and changed faces and veiled hair.

MELEAGER

Let your hands meet Round the weight of my head; Lift ye my feet As the feet of the dead;

For the flesh of my body is molten, the limbs of it molten as lead.

JOL. IV.

Y

CHORUS

O thy luminous face, Thine imperious eyes ! O the grief, O the grace, As of day when it dies ! Who is this bending over thee, lord, with tears and suppression of sighs ?

MELEAGER

Is a bride so fair ? Is a maid so meek ? With unchapleted hair, With unfilleted cheek, Atalanta, the pure among women, whose name is as blessing to speak.

ATALANTA

I would that with feet Unsandalled, unshod, Overbold, overfleet, I had swum not nor trod From Arcadia to Calydon northward, a blast of the envy of God.

MELEAGER

Unto each man his fate ; Unto each as he saith In whose fingers the weight Of the world is as breath ; Yet I would that in clamour of battle mine hands had laid hold upon death.

CHORUS

Not with cleaving of shields And their clash in thine ear, When the lord of fought fields Breaketh spearshaft from spear, Thou art broken, our lord, thou art broken, with travail and labour and fear.

MELEAGER

Would God he had found me Beneath fresh boughs ! Would God he had bound me Unawares in mine house, With light in mine eyes, and songs in my lips, and a crown on my brows !

CHORUS

Whence art thou sent from us? Whither thy goal? How art thou rent from us, Thou that wert whole, As with severing of eyelids and eyes, as with sundering of body and soul!

MELEAGER

My heart is within me As an ash in the fire ; Whosoever hath seen me, Without lute, without lyre, Shall sing of me grievous things, even things that were ill to desire.

CHORUS

Who shall raise thee From the house of the dead? Or what man praise thee That thy praise may be said? Alas thy beauty ! alas thy body ! alas thine head !

MELEAGER

But thou, O mother, The dreamer of dreams, Wilt thou bring forth another To feel the sun's beams When I move among shadows a shadow, and wail by impassable streams?

ŒNEUS

What thing wilt thou leave me Now this thing is done? A man wilt thou give me, A son for my son, For the light of mine eyes, the desire of my life, the desirable one?

CHORUS

Thou wert glad above others, Yea, fair beyond word; Thou wert glad among mothers; For each man that heard Of thee, praise there was added unto thee, as wings to the feet of a bird.

ŒNEUS

Who shall give back Thy face of old years, With travail made black, Grown grey among fears, Mother of sorrow, mother of cursing, mother of tears?

MELEAGER

Though thou art as fire Fed with fuel in vain, My delight, my desire, Is more chaste than the rain, More pure than the dewfall, more holy than stars are that live without stain.

ATALANTA

I would that as water My life's blood had thawn, Or as winter's wan daughter Leaves lowland and lawn Spring-stricken, or ever mine eyes had beheld thee made dark in thy dawn.

CHORUS

When thou dravest the men Of the chosen of Thrace, None turned him again Nor endured he thy face Clothed round with the blush of the battle, with light from a terrible place.

ŒNEUS

Thou shouldst die as he dies For whom none sheddeth tears; Filling thine eyes And fulfilling thine ears With the brilliance of battle, the bloom and the beauty, the splendour of spears.

CHORUS

In the ears of the world It is sung, it is told, And the light thereof hurled And the noise thereof rolled From the Acroceraunian snow to the ford of the fleece of gold.

MELEAGER

Would God ye could carry me Forth of all these ; Heap sand and bury me By the Chersonese Where the thundering Bosphorus answers the thunder of Pontic seas.

ŒNEUS

Dost thou mock at our praise And the singing begun And the men of strange days Praising my son In the folds of the hills of home, high places of Calydon?

MELEAGER

For the dead man no home is; Ah, better to be What the flower of the foam is In fields of the sea, That the sea-waves might be as my raiment, the gulf-stream a garment for me.

CHORUS

Who shall seek thee and bring And restore thee thy day, When the dove dipt her wing And the oars won their way Where the narrowing Symplegades whitened the straits of Propontis with spray?

MELEAGER

Will ye crown me my tomb Or exalt me my name, Now my spirits consume, Now my flesh is a flame? Let the sea slake it once, and men speak of me sleeping to praise me or shame.

CHORUS

Turn back now, turn thee, As who turns him to wake; Though the life in thee burn thee, Couldst thou bathe it and slake Where the sea-ridge of Helle hangs heavier, and east upon west waters break?

MELEAGER

Would the winds blow me back Or the waves hurl me home? Ah, to touch in the track Where the pine learnt to roam Cold girdles and crowns of the sea-gods, cool blossoms of water and foam !

CHORUS

The gods may release That they made fast ; Thy soul shall have ease In thy limbs at the last ; But what shall they give thee for life, sweet life that is overpast?

MELEAGER

Not the life of men's veins, Not of flesh that conceives ; But the grace that remains, The fair beauty that cleaves To the life of the rains in the grasses, the life of the dews on the leaves.

CHORUS

Thou wert helmsman and chief; Wilt thou turn in an hour, Thy limbs to the leaf, Thy face to the flower, Thy blood to the water, thy soul to the gods who divide and devour?

MELEAGER

The years are hungry, They wail all their days; The gods wax angry And weary of praise; And who shall bridle their lips? and who shall straiten their ways?

CHORUS

The gods guard over us With sword and with rod; Weaving shadow to cover us, Heaping the sod, That law may fulfil herself wholly, to darken man's face before God.

MELEAGER

O holy head of Œneus, lo thy son Guiltless, yet red from alien guilt, yet foul With kinship of contaminated lives, Lo, for their blood I die; and mine own blood For bloodshedding of mine is mixed therewith, That death may not discern me from my kin. Yet with clean heart I die and faultless hand, Not shamefully; thou therefore of thy love Salute me, and bid fare among the dead Well, as the dead fare; for the best man dead Fares sadly; nathless I now faring well Pass without fear where nothing is to fear Having thy love about me and thy goodwill, O father, among dark places and men dead.

ŒNEUS

Child, I salute thee with sad heart and tears, And bid thee comfort, being a perfect man In fight, and honourable in the house of peace. The gods give thee fair wage and dues of death, And me brief days and ways to come at thee.

MELEAGER

Pray thou thy days be long before thy death, And full of ease and kingdom; seeing in death There is no comfort and none aftergrowth, Nor shall one thence look up and see day's dawn Nor light upon the land whither I go. Live thou and take thy fill of days and die When thy day comes; and make not much of death Lest ere thy day thou reap an evil thing. Thou too, the bitter mother and mother-plague Of this my weary body-thou too, queen, The source and end, the sower and the scythe, The rain that ripens and the drought that slays, The sand that swallows and the spring that feeds, To make me and unmake me-thou, I say, Althæa, since my father's ploughshare, drawn Through fatal seedland of a female field, Furrowed thy body, whence a wheaten ear Strong from the sun and fragrant from the rains I sprang and cleft the closure of thy womb, Mother, I dying with unforgetful tongue Hail thee as holy and worship thee as just Who art unjust and unholy; and with my knees Would worship, but thy fire and subtlety, Dissundering them, devour me; for these limbs Are as light dust and crumblings from mine urn

Before the fire has touched them ; and my face As a dead leaf or dead foot's mark on snow, And all this body a broken barren tree That was so strong, and all this flower of life Disbranched and desecrated miserably, And minished all that god-like muscle and might And lesser than a man's : for all my veins Fail me, and all mine ashen life burns down. I would thou hadst let me live; but gods averse, But fortune, and the fiery feet of change, And time, these would not, these tread out my life, These and not thou; me too thou hast loved, and I Thee; but this death was mixed with all my life, Mine end with my beginning : and this law, This only, slavs me, and not my mother at all. And let no brother or sister grieve too sore, Nor melt their hearts out on me with their tears, Since extreme love and sorrowing overmuch Vex the great gods, and overloving men Slay and are slain for love's sake; and this house Shall bear much better children; why should these Weep? but in patience let them live their lives And mine pass by forgotten : thou alone, Mother, thou sole and only, thou not these, Keep me in mind a little when I die Because I was thy first-born; let thy soul Pity me, pity even me gone hence and dead, Though thou wert wroth, and though thou bear again Much happier sons, and all men later born Exceedingly excel me; yet do thou Forget not, nor think shame; I was thy son. Time was I did not shame thee; and time was I thought to live and make thee honourable With deeds as great as these men's ; but they live,

These, and I die; and what thing should have been Surely I know not ; yet I charge thee, seeing I am dead already, love me not the less, Me, O my mother; I charge thee by these gods, My father's, and that holier breast of thine, By these that see me dying, and that which nursed, Love me not less, thy first-born : though grief come, Grief only, of me, and of all these great joy, And shall come always to thee; for thou knowest, O mother, O breasts that bare me, for ye know, O sweet head of my mother, sacred eyes, Ye know my soul albeit I sinned, ye know Albeit I kneel not neither touch thy knees, But with my lips I kneel, and with my heart I fall about thy feet and worship thee. And ye farewell now, all my friends; and ye, Kinsmen, much younger and glorious more than I, Sons of my mother's sister ; and all farewell That were in Colchis with me, and bare down The waves and wars that met us : and though times Change, and though now I be not anything, Forget not me among you, what I did In my good time; for even by all those days, Those days and this, and your own living souls, And by the light and luck of you that live, And by this miserable spoil, and me Dying, I beseech you, let my name not die. But thou, dear, touch me with thy rose-like hands. And fasten up mine eyelids with thy mouth, A bitter kiss; and grasp me with thine arms, Printing with heavy lips my light waste flesh, Made light and thin by heavy-handed fate, And with thine holy maiden eyes drop dew, Drop tears for dew upon me who am dead,

Me who have loved thee; seeing without sin done I am gone down to the empty weary house Where no flesh is nor beauty nor swift eyes Nor sound of mouth nor might of hands and feet. But thou, dear, hide my body with thy veil, And with thy raiment cover foot and head. And stretch thyself upon me and touch hands With hands and lips with lips : be pitiful As thou art maiden perfect : let no man Defile me to despise me, saying, This man Died woman-wise, a woman's offering, slain Through female fingers in his woof of life, Dishonourable: for thou hast honoured me. And now for God's sake kiss me once and twice And let me go; for the night gathers me. And in the night shall no man gather fruit

ATALANTA

Hail thou : but I with heavy face and feet Turn homeward and am gone out of thine eyes.

CHORUS

Who shall contend with his lordsOr cross them or do them wrong ?Who shall bind them as with cords ?Who shall tame them as with song ?Who shall smite them as with swords ?For the hands of their kingdom are strong.

ERECHTHEUS

MOTHER of life and death and all men's days, Earth, whom I chief of all men born would bless, And call thee with more loving lips than theirs Mother, for of this very body of thine And living blood I have my breath and live, Behold me, even thy son, me crowned of men. Me made thy child by that strong cunning God Who fashions fire and iron, who begat Me for a sword and beacon-fire on thee. Me fosterling of Pallas, in her shade Reared, that I first might pay the nursing debt, Hallowing her fame with flower of third-year feasts, And first bow down the bridled strength of steeds To lose the wild wont of their birth, and bear Clasp of man's knees and steerage of his hand, Or fourfold service of his fire-swift wheels That whirl the four-yoked chariot ; me the king Who stand before thee naked now, and cry, O holy and general mother of all men born, But mother most and motherliest of mine, Earth, for I ask thee rather of all the Gods, What have we done? what word mistimed or work Hath winged the wild feet of this timeless curse To fall as fire upon us? Lo, I stand

Here on this brow's crown of the city's head That crowns its lovely body, till death's hour Waste it : but now the dew of dawn and birth Is fresh upon it from thy womb, and we Behold it born how beauteous ; one day more I see the world's wheel of the circling sun Roll up rejoicing to regard on earth This one thing goodliest, fair as heaven or he, Worth a God's gaze or strife of Gods; but now Would this day's ebb of their spent wave of strife Sweep it to sea, wash it on wreck, and leave A costless thing contemned ; and in our stead, Where these walls were and sounding streets of men. Make wide a waste for tongueless water-herds And spoil of ravening fishes; that no more Should men say, Here was Athens. This shalt thou Sustain not, nor thy son endure to see, Nor thou to live and look on ; for the womb Bare me not base that bare me miserable. To hear this loud brood of the Thracian foam Break its broad strength of billowy-beating war Here, and upon it as a blast of death Blowing, the keen wrath of a fire-souled king, A strange growth grafted on our natural soil, A root of Thrace in Eleusinian earth Set for no comfort to the kindly land, Son of the sea's lord and our first-born foe, Eumolpus; nothing sweet in ears of thine The music of his making, nor a song Toward hopes of ours auspicious ; for the note Rings as for death oracular to thy sons That goes before him on the sea-wind blown Full of this charge laid on me, to put out The brief light kindled of mine own child's life,

Or with this helmsman hand that steers the state Run right on the under shoal and ridge of death The populous ship with all its fraughtage gone And sails that were to take the wind of time Rent, and the tackling that should hold out fast In confluent surge of loud calamities Broken, with spars of rudders and lost oars That were to row toward harbour and find rest In some most glorious haven of all the world And else may never near it : such a song The Gods have set his lips on fire withal Who threatens now in all their names to bring Ruin; but none of these, thou knowest, have I Chid with my tongue or cursed at heart for grief, Knowing how the soul runs reinless on sheer death Whose grief or joy takes part against the Gods. And what they will is more than our desire, And their desire is more than what we will. For no man's will and no desire of man's Shall stand as doth a God's will. Yet. O fair Mother, that seest me how I cast no word Against them, plead no reason, crave no cause, Boast me not blameless, nor beweep me wronged, By this fair wreath of towers we have decked thee with.

This chaplet that we give thee woven of walls, This girdle of gate and temple and citadel Drawn round beneath thy bosom, and fast linked As to thine heart's root—this dear crown of thine. This present light, this city—be not thou Slow to take heed nor slack to strengthen her, Fare we so short-lived howsoe'er, and pay What price we may to ransom thee thy town, Not me my life ; but thou that diest not, thou,

ERECHTHEUS

Though all our house die for this people's sake, Keep thou for ours thy crown our city, guard And give it life the lovelier that we died.

CHORUS.

Sun, that hast lightened and loosed by thy might Ocean and Earth from the lordship of night, Quickening with vision his eye that was veiled, Freshening the force in her heart that had failed, That sister fettered and blinded brother

Should have sight by thy grace and delight of each other,

Behold now and see

What profit is given them of thee ; What wrath has enkindled with madness of mind Her limbs that were bounden, his face that was blind, To be locked as in wrestle together, and lighten With fire that shall darken thy fire in the sky, Body to body and eye against eye

In a war against kind,

Till the bloom of her fields and her high hills whiten With the foam of his waves more high.

For the sea-marks set to divide of old

The kingdoms to Ocean and Earth assigned,

The hoar sea-fields from the cornfields' gold,

His wine-bright waves from her vineyards' fold, Frail forces we find

To bridle the spirit of Gods or bind

Till the heat of their hearts wax cold.

But the peace that was stablished between them to stand

Is rent now in twain by the strength of his hand Who stirs up the storm of his sons overbold To pluck from fight what he lost of right,

ERECHTHEUS

By council and judgment of Gods that spake And gave great Pallas the strife's fair stake, The lordship and love of the lovely land, The grace of the town that hath on it for crown But a headband to wear Of violets one-hued with her hair : For the vales and the green high places of earth Hold nothing so fair, And the depths of the sea bear no such birth Of the manifold births they bear. Too well, too well was the great stake worth A strife divine for the Gods to judge, A crowned God's triumph, a foiled God's grudge, Though the loser be strong and the victress wise Who played long since for so large a prize, The fruitful immortal anointed adored Dear city of men without master or lord, Fair fortress and fostress of sons born free, Who stand in her sight and in thine, O sun, Slaves of no man, subjects of none ; A wonder enthroned on the hills and sea, A maiden crowned with a fourfold glory That none from the pride of her head may rend, Violet and olive-leaf purple and hoary, Song-wreath and story the fairest of fame, Flowers that the winter can blast not or bend; A light upon earth as the sun's own flame,

A name as his name, Athens, a praise without end.

A noise is arisen against us of waters, [Str. 1. A sound as of battle come up from the sea. Strange hunters are hard on us, hearts without pity; They have staked their nets round the fair young city, That the sons of her strength and her virgin daughters

Should find not whither alive to flee.

And we know not yet of the word unwritten, [Ant. 1.

The doom of the Pythian we have not heard; From the navel of earth and the veiled mid altar We wait for a token with hopes that falter, With fears that hang on our hearts thought-smitten

Lest her tongue be kindled with no good word.

O thou not born of the womb, nor bred [Str. 2. In the bride-night's warmth of a changed God's bed, But thy life as a lightning was flashed from the light of thy father's head,

O chief God's child by a motherless birth,

If aught in thy sight we indeed be worth,

- Keep death from us thou, that art none of the Gods of the dead under earth.
  - Thou that hast power on us, save, if thou wilt; [Ant. 2.
  - Let the blind wave breach not thy wall scarce built;
- But bless us not so as by bloodshed, impute not for grace to us guilt,

Nor by price of pollution of blood set us free;

Let the hands be taintless that clasp thy knee,

Nor a maiden be slain to redeem for a maiden her shrine from the sea.

O earth, O sun, turn back [Str. 3.

Full on his deadly track

Death, that would smite you black and mar your creatures,

And with one hand disroot

All tender flower and fruit,

With one strike blind and mute the heaven's fair features.

ERECHTHEUS

Pluck out the eyes of morn, and make Silence in the east and blackness whence the bright songs break. Help, earth, help, heaven, that hear [Ant. 3. The song-notes of our fear, Shrewd notes and shrill, not clear or joyful-sounding; Hear, highest of Gods, and stay Death on his hunter's way, Full on his forceless prey his beagles hounding; Break thou his bow, make short his hand, Maim his fleet foot whose passage kills the living land. Str. 4. Let a third wave smite not us, father, Long since sore smitten of twain, Lest the house of thy son's son perish And his name be barren on earth. Whose race wilt thou comfort rather If none to thy son remain? Whose seed wilt thou choose to cherish If his be cut off in the birth? For the first fair graft of his graffing Ant. 4. Was rent from its maiden root By the strong swift hand of a lover Who fills the night with his breath; On the lip of the stream low-laughing Her green soft virginal shoot Was plucked from the stream-side cover By the grasp of a love like death. For a God's was the mouth that kissed her [Str. 5. Who speaks, and the leaves lie dead, When winter awakes as at warning To the sound of his foot from Thrace. Nor happier the bed of her sister Though Love's self laid her abed

ERECHTHEUS

By a bridegroom beloved of the morning And fair as the dawn's own face. For Procris, ensnared and ensnaring Ant. 5. By the fraud of a twofold wile, With the point of her own spear stricken By the gift of her own hand fell. Oversubtle in doubts, overdaring In deeds and devices of guile, And strong to quench as to quicken, O Love, have we named thee well? [Str. 6. By thee was the spear's edge whetted That laid her dead in the dew, In the moist green glens of the midland By her dear lord slain and thee. And him at the cliff's end fretted By the grey keen waves, him too, Thine hand from the white-browed headland Flung down for a spoil to the sea. [Ant. 6. But enough now of griefs grey-growing Have darkened the house divine, Have flowered on its boughs and faded, And green is the brave stock yet. O father all seeing and all knowing, Let the last fruit fall not of thine From the tree with whose boughs we are shaded. From the stock that thy son's hand set.

ERECHTHEUS

O daughter of Cephisus, from all time Wise have I found thee, wife and queen, of heart Perfect; nor in the days that knew not wind Nor days when storm blew death upon our peace Was thine heart swoln with seed of pride, or bowed With blasts of bitter fear that break men's souls Who lift too high their minds toward heaven, in thought Too godlike grown for worship ; but of mood Equal, in good time reverent of time bad, And glad in ill days of the good that were. Nor now too would I fear thee, now misdoubt Lest fate should find thee lesser than thy doom, Chosen if thou be to bear and to be great Haply beyond all women; and the word Speaks thee divine, dear queen, that speaks thee dead, Dead being alive, or quick and dead in one Shall not men call thee living? yet I fear To slay thee timeless with my proper tongue, With lips, thou knowest, that love thee; and such work

Was never laid of Gods on men, such word No mouth of man learnt ever, as from mine Most loth to speak thine ear most loth shall take And hold it hateful as the grave to hear.

PRAXITHEA

That word there is not in all speech of man, King, that being spoken of the Gods and thee I have not heart to honour, or dare hold More than I hold thee or the Gods in hate Hearing ; but if my heart abhor it heard Being insubmissive, hold me not thy wife But use me like a stranger, whom thine hand Hath fed by chance and finding thence no thanks Flung off for shame's sake to forgetfulness.

- O, of what breath shall such a word be made,
- Or from what heart find utterance? Would my tongue

Were rent forth rather from the quivering root Than made as fire or poison thus for thee.

PRAXITHEA

But if thou speak of blood, and I that hear Be chosen of all for this land's love to die And save to thee thy city, know this well, Happiest I hold me of her seed alive.

ERECHTHEUS

O sun that seest, what saying was this of thine, God, that thy power has breathed into my lips? For from no sunlit shrine darkling it came.

PRAXITHEA

What portent from the mid oracular place Hath smitten thee so like a curse that flies Wingless, to waste men with its plagues? yet speak.

ERECHTHEUS

Thy blood the Gods require not ; take this first.

PRAXITHEA

To me than thee more grievous this should sound.

ERECHTHEUS

That word rang truer and bitterer than it knew.

PRAXITHEA

This is not then thy grief, to see me die?

ERECHTHEUS

Die shalt thou not, yet give thy blood to death.

PRAXITHEA

If this ring worse I know not; strange it rang.

ERECHTHEUS

Alas, thou knowest not; woe is me that know.

PRAXITHEA

And woe shall mine be, knowing ; yet halt not here.

ERECHTHEUS

Guiltless of blood this state may stand no more.

PRAXITHEA

Firm let it stand whatever bleed or fall.

ERECHTHEUS

O Gods, that I should say it shall and weep.

PRAXITHEA

Weep, and say this? no tears should bathe such words.

ERECHTHEUS

Woe's me that I must weep upon them, woe.

PRAXITHEA

What stain is on them for thy tears to cleanse?

ERECHTHEUS

A stain of blood unpurgeable with tears.

PRAXITHEA

Whence? for thou sayest it is and is not mine.

ERECHTHEUS

Hear then and know why only of all men I That bring such news as mine is, I alone Must wash good words with weeping; I and thou, Woman, must wail to hear men sing, must groan To see their joy who love us; all our friends Save only we, and all save we that love This holiness of Athens, in our sight Shall lift their hearts up, in our hearing praise Gods whom we may not; for to these they give Life of their children, flower of all their seed, For all their travail fruit, for all their hopes Harvest : but we for all our good things, we Have at their hands which fill all these folk full Death, barrenness, child-slaughter, curses, cares, Sea-leaguer and land-shipwreck ; which of these, Which wilt thou first give thanks for ? all are thine.

PRAXITHEA

What first they give who give this city good, For that first given to save it I give thanks First, and thanks heartier from a happier tongue, More than for any my peculiar grace Shown me and not my country ; next for this That none of all these but for all these I Must bear my burden, and no eye but mine Weep of all women's in this broad land born Who see their land's deliverance ; but much more, But most for this I thank them most of all, That this their edge of doom is chosen to pierce My heart and not my country's ; for the sword Drawn to smite there and sharpened for such stroke Should wound more deep than any turned on me.

CHORUS

Well fares the land that bears such fruit, and well The spirit that breeds such thought and speech in man.

ERECHTHEUS

O woman, thou hast shamed my heart with thine, To show so strong a patience ; take then all ; For all shall break not nor bring down thy soul. The word that journeying to the bright God's shrine Who speaks askance and darkling, but his name Hath in it slaving and ruin broad writ out. I heard, hear thou : thus saith he : There shall die One soul for all this people ; from thy womb Came forth the seed that here on dry bare ground Death's hand must sow untimely, to bring forth Nor blade nor shoot in season, being by name To the under Gods made holy, who require For this land's life her death and maiden blood To save a maiden city. Thus I heard, And thus with all said leave thee; for save this No word is left us, and no hope alive.

CHORUS

- He hath uttered too surely his wrath not obscurely, nor wrapt as in mists of his breath, [Str.
  The master that lightens not hearts he erlightens, but gives them foreknowledge of death.
  As a bolt from the cloud hath he sent it aloud and proclaimed it afar,
  From the darkness and height of the herror of night.
  - From the darkness and height of the horror of night hath he shown us a star.

Star may I name it and err not, or flame shall I say, Born of the womb that was born for the tomb of the day?

VOL. IV

AA

- O Night, whom other but thee for mother, and Death for the father, Night, [Ant.
- Snall we dream to discover, save thee and thy lover, to bring such a sorrow to sight?
  - From the slumberless bed for thy bedfellow spread and his bride under earth
  - Hast thou brought forth a wild and insatiable child, an unbearable birth.
    - Fierce are the fangs of his wrath, and the pangs that they give;
    - None is there, none that may bear them, not one that would live.

CHTHONIA

Forth of the fine-spun folds of veils that hide My virgin chamber toward the full-faced sun I set my foot not moved of mine own will, Unmaidenlike, nor with unprompted speed Turn eyes too broad or doglike unabashed On reverend heads of men and thence on thine, Mother, now covered from the light and bowed As hers who mourns her brethren; but what grief Bends thy blind head thus earthward, holds thus mute, I know not till thy will be to lift up Toward mine thy sorrow-muffled eyes and speak; And till thy will be would I know this not.

PRAXITHEA

Old men and childless, or if sons ye have seen And daughters, elder-born were these than mine, Look on this child, how young of years, how sweet, How scant of time and green of age her life Puts forth its flower of girlhood; and her gait How virginal, how soft her speech, her eyes

How seemly smiling ; wise should all ye be, All honourable and kindly men of age ; Now give me counsel and one word to say That I may bear to speak, and hold my peace Henceforth for all time even as all ye now. Dumb are ye all, bowed eyes and tongueless mouths, Unprofitable ; if this were wind that speaks, As much its breath might move you. Thou then, child,

Set thy sweet eyes on mine ; look through them well ; Take note of all the writing of my face As of a tablet or a tomb inscribed That bears me record ; lifeless now, my life Thereon that was think written; brief to read, Yet shall the scripture sear thine eyes as fire And leave them dark as dead men's. Nay, dear child, Thou hast no skill, my maiden, and no sense To take such knowledge; sweet is all thy lore, And all this bitter; yet I charge thee learn And love and lay this up within thine heart, Even this my word ; less ill it were to die Than live and look upon thy mother dead, Thy mother-land that bare thee; no man slain But him who hath seen it shall men count unblest, None blest as him who hath died and seen it not.

CHTHONIA

That sight some God keep from me though I die.

CHTHONIA

Thanks all my life long shall he gain of mine.

PRAXITHEA

Short gain of all yet shall he get of thee.

CHTHONIA

Brief be my life, yet so long live my thanks.

PRAXITHEA

So long? so little ; how long shall they live?

CHTHONIA

Even while I see the sunlight and thine eyes.

PRAXITHEA

Would mine might shut ere thine upon the sun.

CHTHONIA

For me thou prayest unkindly; change that prayer.

PRAXITHEA

Not well for me thou sayest, and ill for thee.

CHTHONIA

Nay, for me well, if thou shalt live, not I.

PRAXITHEA

How live, and lose these loving looks of thine?

CHTHONIA

It seems I too, thus praying, then, love thee not.

PRAXITHEA

Lov'st thou not life? what wouldst thou do to die?

CHTHONIA

Well, but not more than all things, love I life.

PRAXITHEA

And fain wouldst keep it as thine age allows?

CHTHONIA

Fain would I live, and fain not fear to die.

PRAXITHEA

That I might bid thee die not ! Peace; no more.

CHORUS

A godlike race of grief the Gods have set For these to run matched equal, heart with heart.

PRAXITHEA

Child of the chief of Gods, and maiden crowned, Queen of these towers and fostress of their king. Pallas, and thou my father's holiest head, A living well of life nor stanched nor stained. O God Cephisus, thee too charge I next, Be to me judge and witness ; nor thine ear Shall now my tongue invoke not, thou to me Most hateful of things holy, mournfullest Of all old sacred streams that wash the world, Ilissus, on whose marge at flowery play A whirlwind-footed bridegroom found my child And rapt her northward where mine elder-born Keeps now the Thracian bride-bed of a God Intolerable to seamen, but this land Finds him in hope for her sake favourable, A gracious son by wedlock ; hear me then Thou likewise, if with no faint heart or false The word I say be said, the gift be given, Which might I choose I had rather die than give Or speak and die not. Ere thy limbs were made

- Or thine eyes lightened, strife, thou knowest, my child,
- 'Twixt God and God had risen, which heavenlier name

Should here stand hallowed, whose more liberal grace Should win this city's worship, and our land

- To which of these do reverence; first the lord
- Whose wheels make lightnings of the foam-flowered sea
- Here on this rock, whose height brow-bound with dawn

Is head and heart of Athens, one sheer blow Struck, and beneath the triple wound that shook The stony sinews and stark roots of the earth Sprang toward the sun a sharp salt fount, and sank Where lying it lights the heart up of the hill, A well of bright strange brine ; but she that reared Thy father with her same chaste fostering hand Set for a sign against it in our guard The holy bloom of the olive, whose hoar leaf High in the shadowy shrine of Pandrosus Hath honour of us all ; and of this strife The twelve most high Gods judging with one mouth Acclaimed her victress ; wroth whereat, as wronged That she should hold from him such prize and place, The strong king of the tempest-rifted sea Loosed reinless on the low Thriasian plain The thunders of his chariots, swallowing stunned Earth, beasts, and men, the whole blind foundering world

That was the sun's at morning, and ere noon Death's; nor this only prey fulfilled his mind; For with strange crook-toothed prows of Carian folk Who snatch a sanguine life out of the sea,

Thieves keen to pluck their bloody fruit of spoil From the grey fruitless waters, has their God Furrowed our shores to waste them, as the fields Were landward harried from the north with swords Aonian, sickles of man-slaughtering edge Ground for no hopeful harvest of live grain Against us in Bœotia; these being spent, Now this third time his wind of wrath has blown Right on this people a mightier wave of war, Three times more huge a ruin; such its ridge Foam-rimmed and hollow like the womb of heaven, But black for shining, and with death for life Big now to birth and ripe with child, full-blown With fear and fruit of havoc, takes the sun Out of our eyes, darkening the day, and blinds The fair sky's face unseasonably with change, A cloud in one and billow of battle, a surge High reared as heaven with monstrous surf of spears That shake on us their shadow, till men's heads Bend, and their hearts even with its forward wind Wither, so blasts all seed in them of hope Its breath and blight of presage; yea, even now The winter of this wind out of the deeps Makes cold our trust in comfort of the Gods And blind our eye toward outlook ; yet not here. Here never shall the Thracian plant on high For ours his father's symbol, nor with wreaths A strange folk wreathe it upright set and crowned Here where our natural people born behold The golden Gorgon of the shield's defence That screens their flowering olive, nor strange Gods Be graced, and Pallas here have praise no more. And if this be not I must give my child, Thee, mine own very blood and spirit of mine,

Thee to be slain. Turn from me, turn thine eyes A little from me ; I can bear not yet To see if still they smile on mine or no, If fear make faint the light in them, or faith Fix them as stars of safety. Need have we. Sore need of stars that set not in mid storm, Lights that outlast the lightnings ; yet my heart Endures not to make proof of thine or these. Not yet to know thee whom I made, and bare What manner of woman; had I borne thee man, I had made no question of thine eyes or heart, Nor spared to read the scriptures in them writ, Wert thou my son; yet couldst thou then but die Fallen in sheer fight by chance and charge of spears And have no more of memory, fill no tomb More famous than thy fellows in fair field, Where many share the grave, many the praise; But one crown shall one only girl my child Wear, dead for this dear city, and give back life To him that gave her and to me that bare. And save two sisters living; and all this, Is this not all good? I shall give thee, child, Thee but by fleshly nature mine, to bleed For dear land's love ; but if the city fall What part is left me in my children then? But if it stand and thou for it lie dead, Then hast thou in it a better part than we, A holier portion than we all; for each Hath but the length of his own life to live, And this most glorious mother-land on earth To worship till that life have end ; but thine Hath end no more than hers ; thou, dead, shalt live Till Athens live not ; for the days and nights Given of thy bare brief dark dividual life, Shall she give thee half all her agelong own And all its glory; for thou givest her these; But with one hand she takes and gives again More than I gave or she requires of thee. Come therefore, I will make thee fit for death, I that could give thee, dear, no gift at birth Save of light life that breathes and bleeds, even I Will help thee to this better gift than mine And lead thee by this little living hand That death shall make so strong, to that great end Whence it shall lighten like a God's, and strike Dead the strong heart of battle that would break Athens; but ye, pray for this land, old men, That it may bring forth never child on earth To love it less, for none may more, than we.

CHORUS

Out of the north wind grief came forth, [Str. I. And the shining of a sword out of the sea.

Yea, of old the first-blown blast blew the prelude of this last,

The blast of his trumpet upon Rhodope. Out of the north skies full of his cloud, With the clamour of his storms as of a crowd At the wheels of a great king crying aloud, At the axle of a strong king's car That has girded on the girdle of war— With hands that lightened the skies in sunder And feet whose fall was followed of thunder,

A God, a great God strange of name,

With horse-yoke fleeter-hoofed than flame, To the mountain bed of a maiden came, Oreithyia, the bride mismated, Wofully wed in a snow-strewn bed

With a bridegroom that kisses the bride's mouth dead;

Without garland, without glory, without song, As a fawn by night on the hills belated, Given over for a spoil unto the strong. From lips how pale so keen a wail [Ant. I.

At the grasp of a God's hand on her she gave, When his breath that darkens air made a havoc of her hair,

It rang from the mountain even to the wave ; Rang with a cry, Woe's me, woe is me ! From the darkness upon Hæmus to the sea : And with hands that clung to her new lord's knee, As a virgin overborne with shame, She besought him by her spouseless fame, By the blameless breasts of a maid unmarried, And locks unmaidenly rent and harried,

And all her flower of body, born

To match the maidenhood of morn,

With the might of the wind's wrath wrenched and torn.

Vain, all vain as a dead man's vision Falling by night in his old friends' sight, To be scattered with slumber and slain ere light; Such a breath of such a bridegroom in that hour Of her prayers made mock, of her fears derision, And a ravage of her youth as of a flower.

With a leap of his limbs as a lion's, a cry from his lips as of thunder, [Str. 2.

In a storm of amorous godhead filled with fire,

From the height of the heaven that was rent with the roar of his coming in sunder,

Sprang the strong God on the spoil of his desire.

- And the pines of the hills were as green reeds shattered,
- And their branches as buds of the soft spring scattered,
- And the west wind and east, and the sound of the south,
- Fell dumb at the blast of the north wind's mouth, At the cry of his coming out of heaven.

And the wild beasts quailed in the rifts and hollows Where hound nor clarion of huntsman follows,

- And the depths of the sea were aghast, and whitened,
- And the crowns of their waves were as flame that lightened,

And the heart of the floods thereof was riven.

- But she knew not him coming for terror, she felt not her wrong that he wrought her, [Ant. 2.
  - When her locks as leaves were shed before his breath,
- And she heard not for terror his prayer, though the cry was a God's that besought her,
  - Blown from lips that strew the world-wide seas with death.
  - For the heart was molten within her to hear,
  - And her knees beneath her were loosened for fear,
  - And her blood fast bound as a frost-bound water,
  - And the soft new bloom of the green earth's daughter

Wind-wasted as blossom of a tree;

- As the wild God rapt her from earth's breast lifted,
- On the strength of the stream of his dark breath drifted,

From the bosom of earth as a bride from the mother,

With storm for bridesman and wreck for brother. As a cloud that he sheds upon the sea.

Of this hoary-headed woe [Epode. Song made memory long ago; Now a younger grief to mourn Needs a new song younger born. Who shall teach our tongues to reach What strange height of saddest speech,

For the new bride's sake that is given to be A stay to fetter the foot of the sea, Lest it quite spurn down and trample the town, Ere the violets be dead that were plucked for its crown,

Or its olive-leaf whiten and wither?

Who shall say of the wind's way

That he journeyed yesterday,

Or the track of the storm that shall sound tomorrow,

If the new be more than the grey-grown sorrow? For the wind of the green first season was keen, And the blast shall be sharper than blew between That the breath of the sea blows hither.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

Old men, grey borderers on the march of death, Tongue fighters, tough of talk and sinewy speech, Else nerveless, from no crew of such faint folk Whose tongues are stouter than their hands come I To bid not you to battle ; let them strike Whose swords are sharper than your keen-tongued wail,

And ye, sit fast and sorrow ; but what man Of all this land-folk and earth-labouring herd For heart or hand seems foremost, him I call If heart be his to hearken, him bid forth To try if one be in the sun's sight born Of all that grope and grovel on dry ground That may join hands in battle grip for death With them whose seed and strength is of the sea.

CHORUS

Know thou this much for all thy loud blast blown, We lack not hands to speak with, swords to plead, For proof of peril, not of boisterous breath, Sea-wind and storm of barren mouths that foam And rough rock's edge of menace ; and short space May lesson thy large ignorance and inform This insolence with knowledge if there live Men earth-begotten of no tenderer thews Than knit the great joints of the grim sea's brood With hasps of steel together ; heaven to help, One man shall break, even on their own flood's verge, That iron bulk of battle ; but thine eye That sees it now swell higher than sand or shore Haply shall see not when thine host shall shrink

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

Not haply, nay, but surely, shall not thine.

CHORUS

That lot shall no God give who fights for thee.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

Shall Gods bear bit and bridle, fcol, of men?

CHORUS

Nor them forbid we nor shalt thou constrain.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

Yet say'st thou none shall make the good lot mine?

CHORUS

Of thy side none, nor moved for fear of thee.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

Gods hast thou then to baffle Gods of ours?

CHORUS

Nor thine nor mine, but equal-souled are they.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

Toward good and ill, then, equal-eyed of soul?

CHORUS

Nay, but swift-eyed to note where ill thoughts breed.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

Thy shaft word-feathered flies yet far of me.

CHORUS

Pride knows not, wounded, till the heart be cleft.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

No shaft wounds deep whose wing is plumed with words.

CHORUS

Lay that to heart, and bid thy tongue learn grace.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

Grace shall thine own crave soon too late of mine.

CHORUS

Boast thou till then, but I wage words no more.

ERECHTHEUS

Man, what shrill wind of speech and wrangling air Blows in our ears a summons from thy lips Winged with what message, or what gift or grace Requiring ? none but what his hand may take Here may the foe think hence to reap, nor this Except some doom from Godward yield it him.

HERALD OF EUMOLPUS

King of this land-folk, by my mouth to thee Thus saith the son of him that shakes thine earth, Eumolpus; now the stakes of war are set, For land or sea to win by throw and wear; Choose therefore or to quit thy side and give The palm unfought for to his bloodless hand, Or by that father's sceptre, and the foot Whose tramp far off makes tremble for pure fear Thy soul-struck mother, piercing like a sword The immortal womb that bare thee; by the waves That no man bridles and that bound thy world, And by the winds and storms of all the sea, He swears to raze from eyeshot of the sun This city named not of his father's name, And wash to deathward down one flood of doom This whole fresh brood of earth yeaned naturally, Green yet and faint in its first blade, unblown With yellow hope of harvest ; so do thou,

Seeing whom thy time is come to meet, for fear Yield, or gird up thy force to fight and die.

ERECHTHEUS

To fight then be it; for if to die or live, No man but only a God knows this much yet Seeing us fare forth, who bear but in our hands The weapons not the fortunes of our fight : For these now rest as lots that yet undrawn Lie in the lap of the unknown hour ; but this I know, not thou, whose hollow mouth of storm Is but a warlike wind, a sharp salt breath That bites and wounds not ; death nor life of mine Shall give to death or lordship of strange kings The soul of this live city, nor their heel Bruise her dear brow discrowned, nor snaffle or goad Wound her free mouth or stain her sanguine side Yet masterless of man; so bid thy lord Learn ere he weep to learn it, and too late Gnash teeth that could not fasten on her flesh. And foam his life out in dark froth of blood Vain as a wind's waif of the loud-mouthed sea Torn from the wave's edge whitening. Tell him this; Though thrice his might were mustered for our scathe

And thicker set with fence of thorn-edged spears Than sands are whirled about the wintering beach When storms have swoln the rivers, and their blasts Have breached the broad sea-banks with stress of sea.

That waves of inland and the main make war As men that mix and grapple; though his ranks Were more to number than all wildwood leaves The wind waves on the hills of all the world,

Yet should the heart not faint, the head not fall, The breath not fail of Athens. Say, the Gods From lips that have no more on earth to say Have told thee this the last good news or ill That I shall speak in sight of earth and sun Or he shall hear and see them : for the next That ear of his from tongue of mine may take Must be the first word spoken underground From dead to dead in darkness. Hence; make haste,

Lest war's fleet foot be swifter than thy tongue And I that part not to return again On him that comes not to depart away Be fallen before thee ; for the time is full, And with such mortal hope as knows not fear I go this high last way to the end of all.

CHORUS

Who shall put a bridle in the mourner's lips to chasten them, [Str. 1.

Or seal up the fountains of his tears for shame? Song nor prayer nor prophecy shall slacken tears nor hasten them,

Till grief be within him as a burnt-out flame; Till the passion be broken in his breast And the might thereof molten into rest,

And the rain of eyes that weep be dry,

And the breath be stilled of lips that sigh.

Death at last for all men is a harbour; yet they flee from it, [Ant. 1.

Set sails to the storm-wind and again to sea;

Yet for all their labour no whit further shall they be from it,

Nor longer but wearier shall their life's work be. VOL. IV B B

And with anguish of travail until night

Shall they steer into shipwreck out of sight,

And with oars that break and shrouds that strain Shall they drive whence no ship steers again.

Bitter and strange is the word of the God most high, [Str. 2.

And steep the strait of his way.

Through a pass rock-rimmed and narrow the light that gleams

On the faces of men falls faint as the dawn of dreams,

The dayspring of death as a star in an under sky

Where night is the dead men's day.

As darkness and storm is his will that on earth is done, [Ant. 2.

As a cloud is the face of his strength.

- King of kings, holiest of holies, and mightiest of might,
- Lord of the lords of thine heaven that are humble in thy sight,
- Hast thou set not an end for the path of the fires of the sun,

To appoint him a rest at length?

- Hast thou told not by measure the waves of the waste wide sea, [Str. 3.
- And the ways of the wind their master and thrall to thee?

Hast thou filled not the furrows with fruit for the world's increase?

- Has thine ear not heard from of old or thine eye not read
- The thought and the deed of us living, the doom of us dead?

Hast thou made not war upon earth, and again made peace?

- Therefore, O father, that seest us whose lives are a breath, [Ant. 3. Take off us thy burden, and give us not wholly to
  - death.

For lovely is life, and the law wherein all things live,

- And gracious the season of each, and the hour of its kind,
- And precious the seed of his life in a wise man's mind;

But all save life for his life will a base man give.

But a life that is given for the life of the whole live land, [Str. 4.

From a heart unspotted a gift of a spotless hand,

Of pure will perfect and free, for the land's life's sake,

- What man shall fear not to put forth his hand and take?
- For the fruit of a sweet life plucked in its pure green prime [Ant. 4.
- On his hand who plucks is as blood, on his soul as crime.
- With cursing ye buy not blessing, nor peace with strife,
- And the hand is hateful that chaffers with death for life.

Hast thou heard, O my heart, and endurest [Str. 5. The word that is said,

What a garland by sentence found surest

Is wrought for what head?

- With what blossomless flowerage of sea-foam and blood-coloured foliage inwound
- It shall crown as a heifer's for slaughter the forehead for marriage uncrowned?

How the veils and the wreaths that should cover [Ant. 5.

The brows of the bride

Shall be shed by the breath of what lover And scattered aside ?

- With a blast of the mouth of what bridegroom the crowns shall be cast from her hair,
- And her head by what altar made humble be left of them naked and bare?
- At a shrine unbeloved of a God unbeholden a gift shall be given for the land, [Str. 6.

That its ramparts though shaken with clamour and horror of manifold waters may stand :

- That the crests of its citadels crowned and its turrets that thrust up their heads to the sun
- May behold him unblinded with darkness of waves overmastering their bulwarks begun.
- As a bride shall they bring her, a prey for the bridegroom, a flower for the couch of her lord; [Ant. 6.
- They shall muffle her mouth that she cry not or curse them, and cover her eyes from the sword.
- They shall fasten her lips as with bit and with bridle, and darken the light of her face,
- That the soul of the slayer may not falter, his heart be not molten, his hand give not grace.
  - If she weep then, yet may none that hear take pity; [Str. 7.

If she cry not, none should hearken though she cried.

Shall a virgin shield thine head for love, O city, With a virgin's blood anointed as for pride?

Yet we held thee dear and hallowed of her favour,

[Ant. 7.

Dear of all men hold thy people to her heart ;

Nought she loves the breath of blood, the sanguine savour. Who hath built with us her throne and chosen her part. Bloodless are her works, and sweet [Epode. All the ways that feel her feet ; From the empire of her eyes Light takes life and darkness flies ; From the harvest of her hands Wealth strikes root in prosperous lands ; Wisdom of her word is made ; At her strength is strength afraid; From the beam of her bright spear War's fleet foot goes back for fear : In her shrine she reared the birth Fire-begotten on live earth ; Glory from her helm was shed On his olive-shadowed head ; By no hand but his shall she Scourge the storms back of the sea, To no fame but his shall give Grace, being dead, with hers to live, And in double name divine Half the godhead of their shrine. But now with what word, with what woe may we meet The timeless passage of piteous feet, Hither that bend to the last way's end They shall walk upon earth? What song be rolled for a bride black-stoled And the mother whose hand of her hand hath hold? For anguish of heart is my soul's strength broken And the tongue sealed fast that would fain have spoken,

To behold thee, O child of so bitter a birth That we counted so sweet,

What way thy steps to what bride-feast tend,

What gift he must give that shall wed thee for token

If the bridegroom be goodly to greet.

CHTHONIA

- People, old men of my city, lordly wise and hoar of head,
- I a spouseless bride and crownless but with garlands of the dead
- From the fruitful light turn silent to my dark unchilded bed.

CHORUS

- Wise of word was he too surely, but with deadlier wisdom wise,
- First who gave thee name from under earth, no breath from upper skies,
- When, foredoomed to this day's darkness, their first daylight filled thine eyes.

PRAXITHEA

- Child, my child that wast and art but death's and now no more of mine,
- Half my heart is cloven with anguish by the sword made sharp for thine,
- Half exalts its wing for triumph, that I bare thee thus divine.

CHTHONIA

- Though for me the sword's edge thirst that sets no point against thy breast,
- Mother, O my mother, where I drank of life and fell on rest.
- Thine, not mine, is all the grief that marks this hour accurst and blest.

CHORUS

- Sweet thy sleep and sweet the bosom was that gave thee sleep and birth ;
- Harder now the breast, and girded with no marriageband for girth,
- Where thine head shall sleep, the namechild of the lords of under earth.

PRAXITHEA

- Dark the name and dark the gifts they gave thee, child, in childbirth were,
- Sprung from him that rent the womb of earth, a bitter seed to bear,
- Born with groanings of the ground that gave him way toward heaven's dear air.

CHTHONIA

- Day to day makes answer, first to last, and life to death; but I,
- Born for death's sake, die for life's sake, if indeed this be to die,
- This my doom that seals me deathless till the springs of time run dry.

CHORUS

- Children shalt thou bear to memory, that to man shalt bring forth none;
- Yea, the lordliest that lift eyes and hearts and songs to meet the sun,
- Names to fire men's ears like music till the round world's race be run.

PRAXITHEA

- I thy mother, named of Gods that wreak revenge and brand with blame,
- Now for thy love shall be loved as thou, and famous with thy fame,
- While this city's name on earth shall be for earth her mightiest name.

CHTHONIA

That I may give this poor girl's blood of mine Scarce yet sun-warmed with summer, this thin life Still green with flowerless growth of seedling days, To build again my city; that no drop Fallen of these innocent veins on the cold ground But shall help knit the joints of her firm walls To knead the stones together, and make sure The band about her maiden girdlestead Once fastened, and of all men's violent hands Inviolable for ever ; these to me Were no such gifts as crave no thanksgiving, If with one blow dividing the sheer life I might make end, and one pang wind up all And seal mine eyes from sorrow ; for such end The Gods give none they love not; but my heart, That leaps up lightened of all sloth or fear

To take the sword's point, yet with one thought's load

Flags, and falls back, broken of wing, that halts Maimed in mid flight for thy sake and borne down, Mother, that in the places where I played An arm's length from thy bosom and no more Shalt find me never, nor thine eye wax glad To mix with mine its eyesight and for love Laugh without word, filled with sweet light, and speak Divine dumb things of the inward spirit and heart, Moved silently ; nor hand or lip again Touch hand or lip of either, but for mine Shall thine meet only shadows of swift night, Dreams and dead thoughts of dead things ; and the bed

Thou strewedst, a sterile place for all time, strewn For my sleep only, with its void sad sheets Shall vex thee, and the unfruitful coverlid For empty days reproach me dead, that leave No profit of my body, but am gone As one not worth being born to bear no seed, A sapless stock and branchless; yet thy womb Shall want not honour of me, that brought forth For all this people freedom, and for earth From the unborn city born out of my blood To light the face of all men evermore Glory; but lay thou this to thy great heart Whereunder in the dark of birth conceived Mine unlit life lay girdled with the zone That bound thy bridal bosom ; set this thought Against all edge of evil as a sword To beat back sorrow, that for all the world Thou brought'st me forth a saviour, who shall save Athens: for none but I from none but thee

Shall take this death for garland; and the men Mine unknown children of unsounded years, My sons unrisen shall rise up at thine hand, Sown of thy seed to bring forth seed to thee, And call thee most of all most fruitful found Blessed; but me too for my barren womb More than my sisters for their children born Shall these give honour, yea in scorn's own place Shall men set love and bring for mockery praise And thanks for curses; for the dry wild vine Scoffed at and cursed of all men that was I Shall shed them wine to make the world's heart warm,

That all eyes seeing may lighten, and all ears Hear and be kindled; such a draught to drink Shall be the blood that bids this dust bring forth, The chaliced life here spilt on this mine earth, Mine, my great father's mother; whom I pray Take me now gently, tenderly take home, And softly lay in his my cold chaste hand Who is called of men by my name, being of Gods Charged only and chosen to bring men under earth, And now must lead and stay me with his staff A silent soul led of a silent God,

Toward sightless things led sightless ; and on earth I see now but the shadow of mine end,

And this last light of all for me in heaven.

PRAXITHEA

Farewell I bid thee; so bid thou not me, Lest the Gods hear and mock us; yet on these I lay the weight not of this grief, nor cast Ill words for ill deeds back; for if one say

They have done men wrong, what hurt have they to hear,

Or he what help to have said it? surely, child, If one among men born might say it and live Blameless, none more than I may, who being vexed Hold yet my peace ; for now through tears enough Mine eves have seen the sun that from this day Thine shall see never more; and in the night Enough has blown of evil, and mine ears With wail enough the winds have filled, and brought Too much of cloud from over the sharp sea To mar for me the morning; such a blast Rent from these wide void arms and helpless breast Long since one graft of me disbranched, and bore Beyond the wild ways of the unwandered world And loud wastes of the thunder-throated sea, Springs of the night and openings of the heaven, The old garden of the Sun; whence never more From west or east shall winds bring back that blow From folds of opening heaven or founts of night The flower of mine once ravished, born my child To bear strange children; nor on wings of theirs Shall comfort come back to me, nor their sire Breathe help upon my peril, nor his strength Raise up my weakness; but of Gods and men I drift unsteered on ruin, and the wave Darkens my head with imminent height, and hangs Dumb, filled too full with thunder that shall leave These ears death-deafened when the tide finds tongue And all its wrath bears on them ; thee, O child. I help not, nor am holpen ; fain, ah fain, More than was ever mother born of man, Were I to help thee ; fain beyond all prayer, Beyond all thought fain to redeem thee, torn

More timeless from me sorrowing than the dream That was thy sister ; so shalt thou be too, Thou but a vision, shadow-shaped of sleep, By grief made out of nothing ; now but once I touch, but once more hold thee, one more kiss This last time and none other ever more Leave on thy lips and leave them. Go; thou wast My heart, my heart's blood, life-blood of my life, My child, my nursling : now this breast once thine Shall rear again no children ; never now Shall any mortal blossom born like thee Lie there, nor ever with small silent mouth Draw the sweet springs dry for an hour that feed The blind blithe life that knows not : never head Rest here to make these cold veins warm, nor eye Laugh itself open with the lips that reach Lovingly toward a fount more loving ; these Death makes as all good lesser things now dead, And all the latter hopes that flowered from these And fall as these fell fruitless ; no joy more Shall man take of thy maidenhood, no tongue Praise it; no good shall eyes get more of thee That lightened for thy love's sake. Now, take note, Give ear, O all ye people, that my word May pierce your hearts through, and the stroke that cleaves

Be fruitful to them; so shall all that hear Grow great at heart with child of thought most high And bring forth seed in season; this my child, This flower of this my body, this sweet life, This fair live youth I give you, to be slain, Spent, shed, poured out, and perish; take my gift And give it death and the under Gods who crave So much for that they give; for this is more.

Much more is this than all we; for they give Freedom, and for a blast, an air of breath. A little soul that is not, they give back Light for all eyes, cheer for all hearts, and life That fills the world's width full of fame and praise And mightier love than children's. This they give, The grace to make thy country great, and wrest From time and death power to take hold on her And strength to scathe for ever; and this gift, Is this no more than man's love is or mine. Mine and all mothers'? nay, where that seems more, Where one loves life of child, wife, father, friend, Son, husband, mother, more than this, even there Are all these lives worth nothing, all loves else With this love slain and buried, and their tomb A thing for shame to spit on ; for what love Hath a slave left to love with? or the heart Base-born and bound in bondage fast to fear. What should it do to love thee? what hath he, The man that hath no country? Gods nor men Have such to friend, yoked beast-like to base life, Vile, fruitless, grovelling at the foot of death, Landless and kinless thralls of no man's blood, Unchilded and unmothered, abject limbs That breed things abject ; but who loves on earth Not friend, wife, husband, father, mother, child, Nor loves his own life for his own land's sake. But only this thing most, more this than all, He loves all well and well of all is loved. And this love lives for ever. See now, friends, My countrymen, my brothers, with what heart I give you this that of your hands again The Gods require for Athens; as I give So give ye to them what their hearts would have

Who shall give back things better ; yea, and these I take for me to witness, all these Gods, Were their great will more grievous than it is, Not one but three, for this one thin-spun thread A threefold band of children would I give For this land's love's sake ; for whose love to-day I bid thee, child, fare deathward and farewell.

CHORUS

O wofullest of women, yet of all Happiest, thy word be hallowed; in all time Thy name shall blossom, and from strange new tongues

High things be spoken of thee; for such grace The Gods have dealt to no man, that on none Have laid so heavy sorrow. From this day Live thou assured of godhead in thy blood, And in thy fate no lowlier than a God In all good things and evil; such a name Shall be thy child this city's, and thine own Next hers that called it Athens. Go now forth Blest, and grace with thee to the doors of death.

CHTHONIA

O city, O glory of Athens, O crown of my father's land, farewell.

CHORUS

For welfare is given her of thee.

CHTHONIA

O Goddess, be good to thy people, that in them dominion and freedom may dwell.

CHORUS

Turn from us the strengths of the sea.

CHTHONIA

Let glory's and theirs be one name in the mouths of all nations made glad with the sun.

CHORUS

For the cloud is blown back with thy breath.

CHTHONIA

With the long last love of mine eyes I salute thee, O land where my days now are done.

CHORUS

But her life shall be born of thy death.

CHTHONIA

I put on me the darkness thy shadow, my mother, and symbol, O Earth, of my name.

CHORUS

For thine was her witness from birth.

CHTHONIA

In thy likeness I come to thee darkling, a daughter whose dawn and her even are the same.

CHORUS

Be thine heart to her gracious, O Earth.

CHTHONIA

To thine own kind be kindly, for thy son's name's sake.

CHORUS

That sons unborn may praise thee and thy firstborn son.

CHTHONIA

Give me thy sleep, who give thee all my life awake.

CHORUS

Too swift a sleep, ere half the web of day be spun.

CHTHONIA

Death brings the shears or ever life wind up the weft.

CHORUS

Their edge is ground and sharpened; who shall stay his hand?

CHTHONIA

The woof is thin, a small short life, with no thread left.

CHORUS

Yet hath it strength, stretched out, to shelter all the land.

CHTHONIA

Too frail a tent for covering, and a screen too strait.

CHORUS

Yet broad enough for buckler shall thy sweet life be.

CHTHONIA

A little bolt to bar off battle from the gate.

CHORUS

A wide sea-wall, that shatters the besieging sea.

CHTHONIA

I lift up mine eyes from the skirts of the shadow, [Str. From the border of death to the limits of light; O streams and rivers of mountain and meadow That hallow the last of my sight, O father that wast of my mother Cephisus, O thou too his brother From the bloom of whose banks as a prey Winds harried my sister away, O crown on the world's head lying Too high for its waters to drown, Take yet this one word of me dying, O city, O crown. Though land-wind and sea wind with mouths that blow slaughter [Ant. Should gird them to battle against thee again, New-born of the blood of a maiden thy daughter, The rage of their breath shall be vain. For their strength shall be quenched and made idle. And the foam of their mouths find a bridle, And the height of their heads bow down At the foot of the towers of the town. Be blest and beloved as I love thee Of all that shall draw from thee breath Be thy life as the sun's is above thee; I go to my death. CHORUS

Many loves of many a mood and many a kind [Str. 1. Fill the life of man, and mould the secret mind; Many days bring many dooms, to loose and bind;

VOL IV.

ERECHTHEUS

- Sweet is each in season, good the gift it brings,
- Sweet as change of night and day with altering wings,
- Night that lulls world-weary day, day that comforts night,
- Night that fills our eyes with sleep, day that fills with light.
  - None of all is lovelier, loftier love is none, [Ant. I.
  - Less is bride's for bridegroom, mother's less for son,
  - Child, than this that crowns and binds up all in one;
  - Love of thy sweet light, thy fostering breast and hand,

Mother Earth, and city chosen, and natural land;

- Hills that bring the strong streams forth, heights of heavenlier air,
- Fields aflower with winds and suns, woods with shadowing hair.
- But none of the nations of men shall they liken to thee, [Str. 2.
- Whose children true-born and the fruit of thy body are we.
- The rest are thy sons but in figure, in word are thy seed ;
- We only the flower of thy travail, thy children indeed.
- Df thy soil hast thou fashioned our limbs, of thy waters their blood,
- And the life of thy springs everlasting is fount of our flood.
- No wind oversea blew us hither adrift on thy shore,
- None sowed us by land in thy womb that conceived us and bore.

- But the stroke of the shaft of the sunlight that brought us to birth
- Pierced only and quickened thy furrows to bear us, O Earth.
- With the beams of his love wast thou cloven as with iron or fire,
- And the life in thee yearned for his life, and grew great with desire.
- And the hunger and thirst to be wounded and healed with his dart
- Made fruitful the love in thy veins and the depth of thine heart.
- And the showers out of heaven overflowing and liquid with love
- Fulfilled thee with child of his godhead as rain from above.
- Such desire had ye twain of each other, till molten in one [Ant. 2.
- Ye might bear and beget of your bodies the fruits of the sun.
- And the trees in their season brought forth and were kindled anew
- By the warmth of the moisture of marriage, the childbearing dew.
- And the firstlings were fair of the wedlock of heaven and of earth ;
- All countries were bounteous with blossom and burgeon of birth.
- Green pastures of grass for all cattle, and life-giving corn;
- But here of thy bosom, here only, the man-child was born.
- All races but one are as aliens engrafted or sown,

- Strange children and changelings; but we, O our mother, thine own.
- Thy nurslings are others, and seedlings they know not of whom ;
- For these hast thou fostered, but us thou hast borne in thy womb.

Who is he of us all, O beloved, that owe thee for birth,

- Who would give not his blood for his birth's sake, O mother, O Earth?
- What landsman is he that was fostered and reared of thine hand
- Who may vaunt him as we may in death though he died for the land?

Well doth she therefore who gives thee in guerdon The bloom of the life of thy giving ; [Epode.

And thy body was bowed by no fruitless burden, That bore such fruit of thee living.

> For her face was not darkened for fear, For her eyelids conceived not a tear, Nor a cry from her lips craved pity; But her mouth was a fountain of song, And her heart as a citadel strong That guards the heart of the city.

MESSENGER

High things of strong-souled men that loved their land On brass and stone are written, and their deeds On high days chanted; but none graven or sung That ever set men's eyes or spirits on fire, Athenians, has the sun's height seen, or earth Heard in her depth reverberate as from heaven, More worth men's praise and good report of Gods Than here I bring for record in your ears. For now being come to the altar, where as priest Death ministering should meet her, and his hand Seal her sweet eyes asleep, the maiden stood, With light in all her face as of a bride Smiling, or shine of festal flame by night Far flung from towers of triumph; and her lips Trembled with pride in pleasure, that no fear Blanched them nor death before his time drank dry The blood whose bloom fulfilled them : for her cheeks Lightened, and brighter than a bridal veil Her hair enrobed her bosom and enrolled From face to feet the body's whole soft length As with a cloud sun-saturate ; then she spake With maiden tongue words manlike, but her eyes Lit mildly like a maiden's : Countrymen, With more good will and height of happier heart I give me to you than my mother bare, And go more gladly this great way to death Than young men bound to battle. Then with face Turned to the shadowiest part of all the shrine And eyes fast set upon the further shade, Take me, dear Gods; and as some form had shone From the deep hollow shadow, some God's tongue Answered, I bless you that your guardian grace Gives me to guard this country, takes my blood, Your child's by name, to heal it. Then the priest Set to the flower-sweet snow of her soft throat The sheer knife's edge that severed it, and loosed From the fair bondage of so spotless flesh So strong a spirit; and all that girt them round Gazing, with souls that hung on that sad stroke, Groaned, and kept silence after while a man Might count how far the fresh blood crept, and bathed How deep the dark robe and the bright shrine's base Red-rounded with a running ring that grew More large and duskier as the wells that fed Were drained of that pure effluence : but the queen Groaned not nor spake nor wept, but as a dream Floats out of eyes awakening so past forth Ghost-like, a shadow of sorrow, from all sight To the inner court and chamber where she sits Dumb, till word reach her of this whole day's end.

CHORUS

More hapless born by far [Str. Beneath some wintrier star, One sits in stone among high Lydian snows, The tomb of her own woes : Yet happiest was once of the daughters of Gods, and divine by her sire and her lord, Ere her tongue was a shaft for the hearts of her sons, for the heart of her husband a sword. For she, too great of mind, Ant. Grown through her good things blind, With godless lips and fire of her own breath Spake all her house to death; But thou, no mother unmothered, nor kindled in spirit with pride of thy seed, Thou hast hallowed thy child for a blameless bloodoffering, and ransomed thy race by thy deed.

MESSENGER

As flower is graffed on flower, so grief on grief Engraffed brings forth new blossoms of strange tears, Fresh buds and green fruits of an alien pain; For now flies rumour on a dark wide wing,

Murmuring of woes more than ye knew, most like Hers whom ye hailed most wretched; for the twain Last left of all this house that wore last night A threefold crown of maidens, and to-day Should let but one fall dead out of the wreath, If mad with grief we know not and sore love For this their sister, or with shame soul-stung To outlive her dead or doubt lest their lives too The Gods require to seal their country safe And bring the oracular doom to perfect end, Have slain themselves, and fallen at the altar-foot Lie by their own hands done to death; and fear Shakes all the city as winds a wintering tree, And as dead leaves are men's hearts blown about And shrunken with ill thoughts, and flowerless hopes Parched up with presage, lest the piteous blood Shed of these maidens guiltless fall and fix On this land's forehead like a curse that cleaves To the unclean soul's inexpiate hunted head Whom his own crime tracks hotlier than a hound To life's veiled end unsleeping ; and this hour Now blackens toward the battle that must close All gates of hope and fear on all their hearts Who tremble toward its issue, knowing not yet If blood may buy them surety, cleanse or soil The helpless hands men raise and reach no stay.

CHORUS

Ill thoughts breed fear, and fear ill words; but these
The Gods turn from us that have kept their law.
Let uslift up the strength of our hearts in song, [Str. I.
And our souls to the height of the darkling day.
If the wind in our eyes blow blood for spray,

Be the spirit that breathes in us life more strong,

Though the prow reel round and the helm point wrong,

And sharp reefs whiten the shoreward way.

For the steersman time sits hidden astern, [Ant. 1. With dark hand plying the rudder of doom,

And the surf-smoke under it flies like fume

As the blast shears off and the oar-blades churn

The foam of our lives that to death return,

Blown back as they break to the gulfing gloom.

What cloud upon heaven is arisen, what shadow, what sound, [Str. 2.

From the world beyond earth, from the night underground,

That scatters from wings unbeholden the weight of its darkness around?

For the sense of my spirit is broken, and blinded its eye, [Ant. 2.

As the soul of a sick man ready to die,

- With fear of the hour that is on me, with dread if an end be not nigh.
  - O Earth, O Gods of the land, have ye heart now to see and to hear [Str. 3.
    - What slays with terror mine eyesight and seals mine ear?
- D fountains of streams everlasting, are all ye not shrunk up and withered for fear?
  - Lo, night is arisen on the noon, and her hounds are in quest by day, [Ant. 3.
    - And the world is fulfilled of the noise of them crying for their prey,
- And the sun's self stricken in heaven, and cast out of his course as a blind man astray.

From east to west of the south sea-line [Str. 4-Glitters the lightning of spears that shine;

- As a storm-cloud swoln that comes up from the skirts of the sea
  - By the wind for helmsman to shoreward ferried,
  - So black behind them the live storm serried
- Shakes earth with the tramp of its foot, and the terror to be.
  - Shall the sea give death whom the land gave birth? [Ant. 4.

O Earth, fair mother, O sweet live Earth,

- Hide us again in thy womb from the waves of it, help us or hide.
  - As a sword is the heart of the God thy brother,

But thine as the heart of a new-made mother,

To deliver thy sons from his ravin, and rage of his tide.

O strong north wind, the pilot of cloud and rain,

[Str. 5.

- For the gift we gave thee what gift hast thou given us again?
- O God dark-winged, deep-throated, a terror to forthfaring ships by night,
  - What bride-song is this that is blown on the blast of thy breath?
  - A gift but of grief to thy kinsmen, a song but of death,
- For the bride's folk weeping, and woe for her father, who finds thee against him in fight.
  - Turn back from us, turn thy battle, take heed of our cry; [Ant. 5.

Let thy dread breath sound, and the waters of war be dry;

- Let thy strong wrath shatter the strength of our foemen, the sword of their strength and the shield;
  - As vapours in heaven, or as waves or the wrecks of ships,
  - So break thou the ranks of their spears with the breath of thy lips,
- Till their corpses have covered and clothed as with raiment the face of the sword-ploughed field.
  - O son of the rose-red morning, O God twin-born with the day, [Str.6.
  - O wind with the young sun waking, and winged for the same wide way,
- Give up not the house of thy kin to the host thou hast marshalled from northward for prey.
  - From the cold of thy cradle in Thrace, from the mists of the fountains of night, [Ant. 6.
  - From the bride-bed of dawn whence day leaps laughing, on fire for his flight,
- Come down with their doom in thine hand on the ships thou hast brought up against us to fight.
- For now not in word but in deed is the harvest of spears begun, [Str. 7.
- And its clamour outbellows the thunder, its lightning outlightens the sun.
- From the springs of the morning it thunders and lightens across and afar
- To the wave where the moonset ends and the fall of the last low star.
- With a trampling of drenched red hoofs and an earth quake of men that meet,
- Strong war sets hand to the scythe, and the furrows take fire from his feet.
- Earth groans from her great rent heart, and the hollows of rocks are afraid,

- And the mountains are moved, and the valleys as waves in a storm-wind swayed.
- From the roots of the hills to the plain's dim verge and the dark loud shore,
- Air shudders with shrill spears crossing, and hurtling of wheels that roar.
- As the grinding of teeth in the jaws of a lion that foam as they gnash
- Is the shriek of the axles that loosen, the shock of the poles that crash.
- The dense manes darken and glitter, the mouths of the mad steeds champ,
- Their heads flash blind through the battle, and death's foot rings in their tramp.
- For a fourfold host upon earth and in heaven is arrayed for the fight,
- Clouds ruining in thunder and armies encountering as clouds in the night.
- Mine ears are amazed with the terror of trumpets, with darkness mine eyes,
- At the sound of the sea's host charging that deafens the roar of the sky's.
- White frontlet is dashed upon frontlet, and horse against horse reels hurled,
- And the gorge of the gulfs of the battle is wide for the spoil of the world.
- And the meadows are cumbered with shipwreck of chariots that founder on land, [Ant. 7.
- And the horsemen are broken with breach as of breakers, and scattered as sand.
- Through the roar and recoil of the charges that mingle their cries and confound,
- Like fire are the notes of the trumpets that flash through the darkness of sound.

- As the swing of the sea churned yellow that sways with the wind as it swells
- Is the lift and relapse of the wave of the chargers that clash with their bells;
- And the clang of the sharp shrill brass through the burst of the wave as it shocks
- Rings clean as the clear wind's cry through the roar of the surge on the rocks :
- And the heads of the steeds in their headgear of war, and their corsleted breasts,
- Gleam broad as the brows of the billows that brighten the storm with their crests,
- Gleam dread as their bosoms that heave to the shipwrecking wind as they rise,
- Filled full of the terror and thunder of water, that slays as it dies.
- So dire is the glare of their foreheads, so fearful the fire of their breath,
- And the light of their eyeballs enkindled so bright with the lightnings of death;
- And the foam of their mouths as the sea's when the jaws of its gulf are as graves,
- And the ridge of their necks as the wind-shaken mane on the ridges of waves :
- And their fetlocks afire as they rear drip thick with a dewfall of blood
- As the lips of the rearing breaker with froth of the manslaying flood.
- And the whole plain reels and resounds as the fields of the sea by night
- When the stroke of the wind falls darkling, and death is the seafarer's light.
- But thou, fair beauty of heaven, dear face of the day nigh dead, [Epode.

- What horror hath hidden thy glory, what hand hath muffled thine head?
  - O sun, with what song shall we call thee, or ward off thy wrath by what name,
- With what prayer shall we seek to thee, soothe with what incense, assuage with what gift,
- If thy light be such only as lightens to deathward the seaman adrift
  - With the fire of his house for a beacon, that foemen have wasted with flame?
- Arise now, lift up thy light; give ear to us, put forth thine hand,
- Reach toward us thy torch of deliverance, a lamp for the night of the land.
  - Thine eye is the light of the living, no lamp for the dead;
  - O, lift up the light of thine eye on the dark of our dread.
  - Who hath blinded thee? who hath prevailed on thee? who hath ensnared?
  - Who hath broken thy bow, and the shafts for thy battle prepared ?
- Have they found out a fetter to bind thee, a chain for thine arm that was bared?
- Be the name of thy conqueror set forth, and the might of thy master declared.
  - O God, fair God of the morning, O glory of day,
  - What ails thee to cast from thy forehead its garland away?
  - To pluck from thy temples their chaplet enwreathed of the light,
  - And bind on the brows of thy godhead a frontlet of night?

- Thou hast loosened the necks of thine horses, and goaded their flanks with affright,
- To the race of a course that we know not on ways that are hid from our sight.
  - As a wind through the darkness the wheels of their chariot are whirled,
  - And the light of its passage is night on the face of the world.
  - And there falls from the wings of thy glory no help from on high,
  - But a shadow that smites us with fear and desire of thine eye.
- For our hearts are as reeds that a wind on the water bows down and goes by,
- To behold not thy comfort in heaven that hath left us untimely to die.

But what light is it now leaps forth on the land

Enkindling the waters and ways of the air

From thy forehead made bare,

From the gleam of thy bow-bearing hand? Hast thou set not thy right hand again to the string, With the back-bowed horns bent sharp for a spring

And the barbed shaft drawn, Till the shrill steel sing and the tense nerve ring That pierces the heart of the dark with dawn,

O huntsman, O king, When the flame of thy face hath twilight in chase

As a hound hath a blood-mottled fawn?

He has glanced into golden the grey sea-strands, And the clouds are shot through with the fires of his hands,

And the height of the hollow of heaven that he fills

As the heart of a strong man is quickened and thrills;

High over the folds of the low-lying lands, On the shadowless hills

As a guard on his watchtower he stands. All earth and all ocean, all depth and all height, At the flash of an eyebeam are filled with his might : The sea roars backward, the storm drops dumb, And silence as dew on the fire of the fight Falls kind in our ears as his face in our sight

With presage of peace to come. Fresh hope in my heart from the ashes of dread Leaps clear as a flame from the pyres of the dead,

That joy out of woe May arise as the spring out of tempest and snow, With the flower-feasted month in her hands rose.

red Borne soft as a babe from the bearing-bed.

Yet it knows not indeed if a God be friend, If rescue may be from the rage of the sea,

Or the wrath of its lord have end.

For the season is full now of death or of birth. To bring forth life, or an end of all ; And we know not if anything stand or fall

That is girdled about with the round sea's girth As a town with its wall;

But thou that art highest of the Gods most high, That art lord if we live, that art lord though we die, Have heed of the tongues of our terror that cry

For a grace to the children of Earth.

ATHENIAN HERALD

Sons of Athens, heavy-laden with the holy weight of years,

Be your hearts as young men's lightened of their loathlier load of fears :

- For the wave is sunk whose thunder shoreward shook the shuddering lands,
- And unbreached of warring waters Athens like a searock stands.

CHORUS

- Well thy word has cheered us, well thy face and glittering eyes, that spake
- Ere thy tongue spake words of comfort: yet no pause behoves it make
- Till the whole good hap find utterance that the Gods have given at length.

ATHENIAN HERALD

All is this, that yet the city stands unforced by stranger strength.

CHORUS

Sweeter sound might no mouth utter in man's ear than this thy word.

ATHENIAN HERALD

Feed thy soul then full of sweetness till some bitterer note be heard.

CHORUS

None, if this ring sure, can mar the music fallen from heaven as rain.

ATHENIAN HERALD

If no fire of sun or star untimely sear the tender grain.

CHORUS

Fresh the dewfall of thy tidings on our hopes reflowering lies.

ERECHTHEUS

ATHENIAN HERALD

Till a joyless shower and fruitless blight them, raining from thine eyes.

CHORUS

Bitter springs have barren issues ; these bedew grief's arid sands.

ATHENIAN HERALD

Such thank-offerings ask such altars as expect thy suppliant hands.

CHORUS

Tears for triumph, wail for welfare, what strange godhead's shrine requires?

ATHENIAN HERALD

Death's or victory's be it, a funeral torch feeds all its festal fires.

CHORUS

Like a star should burn the beacon flaming from our city's head.

ATHENIAN HERALD

Like a balefire should the flame go up that says the king is dead.

CHORUS

Out of heaven, a wild-haired meteor, shoots this new sign, scattering fear.

ATHENIAN HERALD

Yea, the word has wings of fire that hovered, loth to burn thine ear. VOL. IV.

ERECHTHEUS

CHORUS

From thy lips it leapt forth loosened on a shrill and shadowy wing.

ATHENIAN HERALD

Long they faltered, fain to hide it deep as death that hides the king.

CHORUS

Dead with him blind hope lies blasted by the lightning of one sword.

ATHENIAN HERALD

On thy tongue truth wars with error ; no man's edge hath touched thy lord.

CHORUS

False was thine then, jangling menace like a warsteed's brow-bound bell?

ATHENIAN HERALD

False it rang not joy nor sorrow; but by no man's hand he fell.

CHORUS

Vainly then good news and evil through so faint a trumpet spake.

ATHENIAN HERALD

- All too long thy soul yet labours, as who sleeping fain would wake,
- Waking, fain would fall on sleep again; the woe thou knowest not yet,
- When thou knowest, shall make thy memory thirst and hunger to forget.

CHORUS

- Long my heart has hearkened, hanging on thy clamorous ominous cry,
- Fain yet fearful of the knowledge whence it looks to live or die;
- Now to take the perfect presage of thy dark and sidelong flight
- Comes a surer soothsayer sorrowing, sable-stoled as birds of night.

PRAXITHEA

Man, what thy mother bare thee born to say Speak ; for no word yet wavering on thy lip Can wound me worse than thought forestalls or fear.

ATHENIAN HERALD

I have no will to weave too fine or far,

O queen, the weft of sweet with bitter speech,

Bright words with darkling; but the brief truth shown

Shall plead my pardon for a lingering tongue, Loth yet to strike hope through the heart and slay. The sun's light still was lordly housed in heaven When the twain fronts of war encountering smote First fire out of the battle ; but not long Had the fresh wave of windy fight begun Heaving, and all the surge of swords to sway, When timeless night laid hold of heaven, and took With its great gorge the noon as in a gulf, Strangled ; and thicker than the shrill-winged shafts Flew the fleet lightnings, held in chase through heaven By headlong heat of thunders on their trail Loosed as on quest of quarry ; that our host Smit with sick presage of some wrathful God

- Quailed, but the foe as from one iron throat
- With one great sheer sole thousand-throated cry
- Shook earth, heart-staggered from their shout, and clove
- The eyeless hollow of heaven; and breached therewith

As with an onset of strength-shattering sound The rent vault of the roaring noon of night From her throned seat of usurpation rang Reverberate answer; such response there pealed As though the tide's charge of a storming sea Had burst the sky's wall, and made broad a breach In the ambient girth and bastion flanked with stars Guarding the fortress of the Gods, and all Crashed now together on ruin; and through that cry And higher above it ceasing one man's note Tore its way like a trumpet : Charge, make end, Charge, halt not, strike, rend up their strength by the roots.

Strike, break them, make your birthright's promise sure,

Show your hearts hardier than the fenced land breeds And souls breathed in you from no spirit of earth, Sons of the sea's waves; and all ears that heard Rang with that fiery cry, that the fine air Thereat was fired, and kindling filled the plain Full of that fierce and trumpet-quenching breath That spake the clarions silent; no glad song For folk to hear that wist how dire a God Begat this peril to them, what strong race Fathered the sea-born tongue that sang them death, Threatening; so raged through the red foam of fight Poseidon's son Eumolpus; and the war Quailed round him coming, and our side bore back,

ERECHTHEUS

As a stream thwarted by the wind and sea That meet it midway mouth to mouth, and beat The flood back of its issue ; but the king Shouted against them, crying, O Father-God, Source of the God my father, from thine hand Send me what end seems good now in thy sight, But death from mine to this man ; and the word Quick on his lips yet like a blast of fire Blew them together; and round its lords that met Paused all the reeling battle; two main waves Meeting, one hurled sheer from the sea-wall back That shocks it sideways, one right in from sea Charging, that full in face takes at one blow That whole recoil and ruin, with less fear Startle men's eyes late shipwrecked ; for a breath, Crest fronting crest hung, wave to wave rose poised, Then clashed, breaker to breaker; cloud with cloud In heaven, chariot with chariot closed on earth. One fourfold flash and thunder ; yet a breath, And with the king's spear through his red heart's root

Driven, like a rock split from its hill-side, fell Hurled under his own horsehoofs dead on earth The sea-beast that made war on earth from sea, Dumb, with no shrill note left of storming song, Eumolpus ; and his whole host with one stroke Spear-stricken through its dense deep iron heart Fell hurtling from us, and in fierce recoil Drew seaward as with one wide wail of waves, Resorbed with reluctation ; such a groan Rose from the fluctuant refluence of its ranks, Sucked sullen back and strengthless ; but scarce yet The steeds had sprung and wheels had bruised their

lord

Fallen, when from highest height of the sundering heaven

The Father for his brother's son's sake slain Sent a sheer shaft of lightning writhen and smote Right on his son's son's forehead, that unhelmed Shone like the star that shines down storm, and gave Light to men's eyes that saw thy lord their king Stand and take breath from battle ; then too soon Saw sink down as a sunset in sea-mist The high bright head that here in van of the earth Rose like a headland, and through storm and night Took all the sea's wrath on it ; and now dead They bring thee back by war-forsaken ways The strength called once thy husband, the great guard

That was of all men, stay of all men's lives, They bear him slain of no man but a God, Godlike ; and toward him dead the city's gates Fling their arms open mother-like, through him Saved ; and the whole clear land is purged of war What wilt thou say now of this weal and woe?

PRAXITHEA

I praise the Gods for Athens. O sweet Earth, Mother, what joy thy soul has of thy son, Thy life of my dead lord, mine own soul knows That knows thee godlike; and what grief should mine, What sorrow should my heart have, who behold Thee made so heavenlike happy? This alone I only of all these blessed, all thy kind, Crave this for blessing to me, that in theirs Have but a part thus bitter; give me too Death, and the sight of eyes that meet not mine. And thee too from no godless heart or tongue Reproachful, thee too by thy living name, Father divine, merciful God, I call, Spring of my life-springs, fountain of my stream, Pure and poured forth to one great end with thine, Sweet head sublime of triumph and these tears, Cephisus, if thou seest as gladly shed Thy blood in mine as thine own waves are given To do this great land good, to give for love The same lips drink and comfort the same hearts, Do thou then, O my father, white-souled God, To thy most pure earth-hallowing heart eterne Take what thou gavest to be given for these, Take thy child to thee ; for her time is full, For all she hath borne she hath given, seen all she had

Flow from her, from her eyes and breasts and hands Flow forth to feed this people; but be thou, Dear God and gracious to all souls alive, Good to thine own seed also; let me sleep, Father; my sleepless darkling day is done, My day of life like night, but slumberless : For all my fresh fair springs, and his that ran In one stream's bed with mine, are all run out Into the deep of death. The Gods have saved Athens; my blood has bought her at their hand, And ye sit safe; be glorious and be glad As now for all time always, countrymen, And love my dead for ever; but me, me, What shall man give for these so good as death?

CHORUS

From the cup of my heart I pour through my lips along [Str. I.

The mingled wine of a joyrul and sorrowful song;

- Wine sweeter than honey and bitterer than blood that is poured
- From the chalice of gold, from the point of the twoedged sword.

For the city redeemed should joy flow forth as a flood,

- And a dirge make moan for the city polluted with blood.
- Great praise should the Gods have surely, my country, of thee, [Ant. 1.
- Were thy brow but as white as of old for thy sons to see,
- Were thy hands as bloodless, as blameless thy cheek divine ;
- But a stain on it stands of the life-blood offered for thine.
- What thanks shall we give that are mixed not and marred with dread
- For the price that has ransomed thine own with thine own child's head?
  - For a taint there cleaves to the people redeemed with blood, [Str. 2.

And a plague to the blood-red hand.

The rain shall not cleanse it, the dew nor the sacred flood

That blesses the glad live land.

In the darkness of earth beneath, in the world without sun, [Ant. 2.

The shadows of past things reign;

And a cry goes up from the ghost of an ill deed done, And a curse for a virgin slain.

ATHENA

Hear, men that mourn, and woman without mate, Hearken; ye sick of soul with fear, and thou

Dumb-stricken for thy children ; hear ye too, Earth, and the glory of heaven, and winds of the air, And the most holy heart of the deep sea, Late wrath, now full of quiet ; hear thou, sun, Rolled round with the upper fire of rolling heaven And all the stars returning ; hills and streams, Springs and fresh fountains, day that seest these deeds, Night that shalt hide not ; and thou child of mine, Child of a maiden, by a maid redeemed, Blood-guiltless, though bought back with innocent blood,

City mine own; I Pallas bring thee word, I virgin daughter of the most high God Give all you charge and lay command on all The word I bring be wasted not; for this The Gods have stablished and his soul hath sworn. That time nor earth nor changing sons of man Nor waves of generations, nor the winds Of ages risen and fallen that steer their tides Through light and dark of birth and lovelier death From storm toward haven inviolable, shall see So great a light alive beneath the sun As the awless eye of Athens; all fame else Shall be to her fame as a shadow in sleep To this wide noon at waking ; men most praised In lands most happy for their children found Shall hold as highest of honours given of God To be but likened to the least of thine, Thy least of all, my city; thine shall be The crown of all songs sung, of all deeds done Thine the full flower for all time : in thine hand Shall time be like a sceptre, and thine head Wear worship for a garland; nor one leaf Shall change or winter cast out of thy crown

Till all flowers wither in the world; thine eyes Shall first in man's flash lightning liberty, Thy tongue shall first say freedom; thy first hand Shall loose the thunder terror as a hound To hunt from sunset to the springs of the sun Kings that rose up out of the populous east To make their quarry of thee, and shall strew With multitudinous limbs of myriad herds The foodless pastures of the sea, and make With wrecks immeasurable and unsummed defeat One ruin of all their many-folded flocks Ill shepherded from Asia; by thy side Shall fight thy son the north wind, and the sea That was thine enemy shall be sworn thy friend And hand be struck in hand of his and thine To hold faith fast for ave; with thee, though each Make war on other, wind and sea shall keep Peace, and take truce as brethren for thy sake Leagued with one spirit and single-hearted strength To break thy foes in pieces, who shall meet The wind's whole soul and might of the main sea Full in their face of battle, and become A laughter to thee; like a shower of leaves Shall their long galleys rank by staggering rank Be dashed adrift on ruin, and in thy sight The sea deride them, and that lord of the air Who took by violent hand thy child to wife With his loud lips bemock them, by his breath Swept out of sight of being ; so great a grace Shall this day give thee, that makes one in heart With mine the deep sea's godhead, and his son With him that was thine helmsman, king with king, Dead man with dead ; such only names as these Shalt thou call royal, take none else or less

To hold of men in honour; but with me Shall these be worshipped as one God, and mix With mine the might of their mysterious names In one same shrine served singly, thence to keep Perpetual guard on Athens; time and change, Masters and lords of all men, shall be made To thee that knowest no master and no lord Servants; the days that lighten heaven and nights That darken shall be ministers of thine To attend upon thy glory, the great years As light-engraven letters of thy name Writ by the sun's hand on the front of the earth For world-beholden witness; such a gift For one fair chaplet of three lives enwreathed To hang for ever from thy storied shrine, And this thy steersman fallen with tiller in hand To stand for ever at thy ship's helm seen, Shall he that bade their threefold flower be shorn And laid him low that planted, give thee back In sign of sweet land reconciled with sea And heavenlike earth with heaven; such promise pledge

I daughter without mother born of God To the most woful mother born of man Plight for continual comfort. Hail, and live Beyond all human hap of mortal doom Happy; for so my sire hath sworn and I.

PRAXITHEA

O queen Athena, from a heart made whole Take as thou givest us blessing; never tear Shall stain for shame nor groan untune the song That as a bird shall spread and fold its wings Here in thy praise for ever, and fulfil The whole world's crowning city crowned with thee As the sun's eye fulfils and crowns with sight The circling crown of heaven. There is no grief Great as the joy to be made one in will With him that is the heart and rule of life And thee, God born of God ; thy name is ours, And thy large grace more great than our desire.

CHORUS

From the depth of the springs of my spirit a fountain is poured of thanksgiving,

My country, my mother, for thee,

That thy dead for their death shall have life in thy sight and a name everliving

At heart of thy people to be

- In the darkness of change on the waters of time they shall turn from afar
- To the beam of this dawn for a beacon, the light of these pyres for a star.
- They shall see thee who love and take comfort, who hate thee shall see and take warning,

Our mother that makest us free;

And the sons of thine earth shall have help of the Waves that made war on their morning,

And friendship and fame of the sea.
