Wiki Education Dashboard

build passing  test coverage 76%  maintainability ?  code helpers 13

The Wiki Education Dashboard is a web application that supports Wikipedia education assignments, edit-a-thons, and other editing projects. It provides data and course management features for groups of editors — instructors, students, and others — who are working on Wikipedia, Wikidata, and other Wikimedia wikis. Users log in with their Wikipedia accounts (through OAuth) and allow the Dashboard to make edits on their behalf. The Dashboard automates many of the standard elements of organizing and participating in a Wikipedia classroom assignment, edit-a-thon, or other wiki contribution campaign.

The Dashboard code runs two main sites: the Wiki Education Dashboard — dashboard.wikiedu.org — and the Wikimedia Programs & Events Dashboard — outreachdashboard.wmflabs.org. dashboard.wikiedu.org is used for Wiki Education programs, primarily focused on higher education in the United States and Canada. outreachdashboard.wmflabs.org is for the global Wikimedia community to organize all kinds of programs, including edit-a-thons, education programs, and other events.

This is a project of Wiki Education.

Appalachian stereotypes

Discrimination against Appalachian individuals

Discrimination against Appalachians is significant enough that some municipalities, such as Cincinnati, have enacted laws making it illegal to discriminate against peoples of Appalachian identity.^[15] The Human Rights Ordinance policy was passed in 1992 by the City of Cincinnati, which explicitly proclaimed it forbidden to discriminate against characteristics such as race, national origin, sex, religion.^{[16][17]} Before the policy was declared, the U.S. District Court declined the admission of Appalachians in the Civil Rights Act of 1964.^[16]

Appalachia's social, cultural, and economic features establish an identity that consistently defines characteristics that infuse prejudices and distinguishes them from other minority groups. The Appalachians are often victims of locational prejudice, where people often discriminate against due to their location and where they identify as home. The people of Appalachia are stereotyped as the poor White minority, tending to fuse Appalachia into one community, one state, which would make Appalachia the third largest state in the nation due to population.^[16]

Derogatory language against Appalachians includes the terms "Redneck" and "Hillbilly." These terms often come up in comedic use, stereotyped as the role of the "hillbilly fool".^[18] The term "Hillbilly" was first coined in 1899, around the time coal industries made an appearance in the Appalachian communities.^[19] In reference to Appalachia, the utilization of the word "Hillbilly" has become such a commonplace that the term is often used to characterize the sociological and geographical happenings of the area. A major example of this occurrence is the characterization of the emigration of residents of the Appalachian Mountains to industrial cities in northern, midwestern, and western states, primarily in the years following World War II as the "Hillbilly Highway". The term Redneck is often met with pride among mountain people.^[19]

For many years, the term "Mountain Whites" existed as an official Library of Congress Subject Heading. Criticized for its false representation of Appalachia as a racially homogeneous region and because it was a term applied by outsiders to a group of people who do not necessarily identify as a specific ethnic group, it was replaced with the subject heading "Appalachians (people)".^[20]

Amplifying Appalachia 2022 Edit-a-thon

We invite you to participate in a WVU Wikipedia Edit-a-thon in order to develop pages about people important to West Virginia and the rest of the region, but are often overlooked. Our Edit-a-thon is focused on amplifying the stories and figures of under-represented Appalachian artists, writers, and other creators, particularly women, people of color, LGBTQ individuals, and other disenfranchised communities.

This event is asynchronous, which means that from March 21-March 25, you can make edits to related Wikipedia pages at any time that is convenient for you. See <https://twitter.com/wvuLibraries> for live updates during the event!

WAYS TO PARTICIPATE AND ARTICLES TO EDIT

There are a number of ways to participate in an Edit-a-thon. You could add sources to support information already on pages. You could also add content to help develop pages that need some more verifiable, credible information.

To see what articles we've identified as in need of attention, navigate up to the "Articles" tab at the top of this page, then to "Available Articles." The list is organized alphabetically, with indicators on the left
