What New England Expects of National Government

We are inclined to believe yesterday's denial by President Harding that he accused New England of hysteria on the coal situation; but on the other hand the government has not given New England the relief it should, and seems to have made little effort. The buck has been passed from one to another and the coal barons have had it all their own way.

Rev. Dr. Edward A. Horton, the chaplain of the Massachusetts Senate noted the "evident lack of earnest purpose, undignified proceedings, and blindness to public welfare" of the National government on Wednesday, in his prayer at the opening of the Senate when he said:

"Almighty Father. The New England spirit is not dead. Even in the new New England, composed of many races, faiths, and classes that spirit inspiringly shines. At the present time it views with sadness the record of the national Congress soon to end. It is alarmed at its evident lack of earnest purpose, undignified proceedings, and blindness to the public welfare. Statesmanship has been lost sight of in personal prejudices and bickerings. Domestic and world-wide problems have been left unsolved and the people's reasonable hopes and eager anticipations dashed aside.

"A day of reckoning will surely come. The people's rebuke will be based on justice, patriotism, and America's need of better days. Meanwhile, O Lord, may New England, true in substance at the present as in the past, keep burning and bright her ideals and her standards.

"And Thine shall be the kingdom and the power and the glory, forever, in His name, Amen".

The National Government should have prevented the coal strike, or when inaugurated, brought it to a speedy settlement. The country demands compulsory arbitration. The same is true relative to the management of railroads and other public service corporations. When the strike was ended the government should have interested itself to see that New England and other Northern States received all the coal needed, in preference to Canada. Further, the coal should be of good quality and at reasonable prices.

TOLD OF ALASKA

At the First Methodist Episcopal church Sunday morning a very interesting and profitable address was delivered by Mrs. William Baldwin of Nome, Alaska, on the country where she lives, the habits and manner of living of the natives and the work which she and her husband are doing among the people of Alaska. Many new and interesting phases of the work in that region were set forth by Mrs. Baldwin. She brought with her a little Eskimo girl whom she had adopted and this child certainly made her way to the hearts of the audience.

AMERICAN LEGION

The executive committee of Post 79 held a meeting in the town offices Wednesday evening and a large amount of business was attended to several recommendations were made and will be submitted to the Post for discussion next Tuesday night

It is the desire of the officers of the Post to have every member attend this meeting next Tuesday night as there is a large amount of important business to be transacted and it is a duty that you owe to yourself and the Post to be present and have a voice in the Post's business.

Friday evening, April 13, is the date selected for the Post's annual show "Three Live Ghosts" to be held in the Gem theatre Weymouth.

The tickets will be on sale next week and as there are several hundred applications for tickets already, it will be wise to purchase your ticket early so as to be sure and see this show that has been shown all over the country with huge success. The Post's monthly social will be held in G. A. R. hall Monday evening, March 19; you remember the last social; some time, was it not? Well this next one is going to be a real one, and if you miss it you will be sorry for a good many moons.

The committee has arranged something entirely different than we have ever had before so set aside all other engagements for that night and get there early and avoid the rush Also bring along some ex-service man with you. Now do not forget the dates. Regular meeting next Tuesday night and the big social event Monday evening, March 19.

COMEDY, KATY-DID

A comedy entitled, "Katy-Did" was given at Pilgrim vestry Tuesday evening by the following cast:

Katherine Pendleton,	Orely Melville
Richard Pendleton,	Herbert Crawford
Margaret Calhoun,	Dorothy Dasha
Madame Lagrae,	Gertrude Culley
Stephen Lagrae,	Thelma Saltzberger
Lloyd Evemount	John Saltzberger
Penelope Taylor,	Minnie Flockhart
Anne Rideout,	Anna Austin
Elspeth Winslow,	Doris Parker
Hope Winthrop,	Emma Arbuckle
John Bradford,	William Blackney

The proceeds are for the benefit of the Sunday School.

CONGREGATIONAL SUPPER

Another "birthday party" was enjoyed at the Congregational church, East Weymouth, on Wednesday evening. This time it was the pastor, who seemed to desire to obscure his age. He says he counted nearly fifty lighted candles before him but he saw double, as he is only 28.

A supper was served by the following ladies: Mrs. Bessie Hunt, Mrs. Florence Corthell, Mrs. Elizabeth Alden, Mrs. Ida Sylvester, Mrs. Alice Rice, Mrs. Fannie Smith, Mrs. Annie Libby, Mrs. Emily McDonald, Mrs. Planche Briggs, Mrs. Beatrice Tirrell, Mrs. Bernice Haskins, Mrs. Anna Garey, Mrs. Nellie Denbroeder, Miss Martha Hawes, Miss Janet Harlow, Miss Elizabeth Taylor, Miss Adeline Canterbury, Miss Clara Reamy, Mrs. Leah Rockwood, and Miss Lillian Keene.

Community singing followed, led by the pastor, who accompanied on violin, with Mr. Garey at the piano. An evening of magic followed by a clever artist.

W. R. C. NOTES

Mrs. Mary G. Deane of Assonet, past Department president of Massachusetts, who was laid to rest a week ago, was the instituting officer of Reynolds Corps on Jan. 31, 1893; 75 members signed the charter upon that date. There are 28 of that number on list at the present time.

Corps 102 will tender a birthday luncheon to members of the corps whose birthday comes in January, February, and March, some time in April. Members will please notify chairman Mrs. Mary E. Mahoney by phone Wey. 136J, or by postal so that arrangements can be made by the committee.

Members of the "Freda Association" are requested to leave on the 4.45 P. M. car March 8 for Quincy via Neponset and Dudley street to Roxbury. Banquet at 6.30 in Olin hall; business session at 8 P. M.

NORFOLK CLUB SUPPER

The annual turkey supper of the Norfolk club was as usual an enjoyable occasion in charge of George Marshall and his committee. The banquet in the Fogg Opera House was followed by an entertainment. The address of welcome was by Jacob Wichert. The program included piano selections by Rose Loman, accordion numbers by Frank Pollynum, readings by William Baker, violin solos by Olga Capula, monologues by Bert Spear, magic by James Krissle, vocal solos by Ernest Johnson, and comedy acts by John Fraser and William Mack.

THE ELEVENTH HOUR

It will be remembered that the subscriber has thru the medium of these columns brought to the attention of the readers the fact of the History of Weymouth, which is in process and particularly of the chapter dealing with musicians which chapter is his particular provence. The response has not been as general as he had hoped, but the reason, at first not clear, has suddenly been revealed thru the answers to several personal letters which he has written. Who were and are the musicians of Weymouth? Are the the not-a-few who have gone from Weymouth and become famous, reflecting a luster upon their native town, or are they the many whose names are scarcely known outside of Norfolk county, but who have spent their lives and their musical ability often unpaid and never paid more than at the rate of country prices.

To me the answer is obvious, but lest some one unconvinced, let me illustrate with a story of three people in my home village, the Landing. Forty years ago or therabout, nearly all of us who studied the piano "took" from either one or the other of two ladies. Both were descended from one family, both were conscience, painstaking, thorough musicians, both succeeded in instilling into most of us good technic, marked rhythm, and a desire to do and know more about music. They have both passed on, but the vibrations which they set in motion have not yet ceased, and their musical children, even to this generation still remember.

Now, within a few days a young man, who is a descendant of this same family, has received a recognition from a foreign nation for the work he has done for their music, but his musical life has been lived entirely OUT of Weymouth, and while those who know him have felt the thrill of the honor he has received, the center of that vibration is Boston and not Weymouth. Do you see? If you do, please write and tell me how many years you have sung in such-and-such a church choir for nothing. Tell me how many times your father, like mine, sang gratuitously at the funeral of a person of whom he had never heard before. For my father and yours, and you my dear friend, from the point of view of this chapter on the musicians of Weymouth are the real musicians after all.

(Signed)

Dozen or More Candidates For Board of Selectmen

Weymouth will have at least a dozen candidates for Selectmen at the Annual Town Election, only three of the present board being candidates for reelection. To date the candidates are:

HARRY E. BEARCE
HENRY B. CHANDLER
WILLIAM B. DASHA
ANNIE G. LYNCH
ALFRED W. HASTINGS
H. FRANKLIN PERRY
FRANK A. PRAY
BENJAMIN F. SMITH
WINSLOW M. TIRRELL
CHARLES N. TURNER
JOHN B. WHELAN

It will be seen that there are five Republican candidates, five Non Partisan candidates, and two Independents.

For the first time Weymouth has as one of the candidates for Selectman a woman, Mrs. Annie G. Lynch of East Weymouth, although there have been rumors that she might withdraw. Mrs. Lynch would make a valued member on the board of Overseers of the Poor, being noted for her charity work.

Of the new candidates Winslow M. Tirrell is one of the best known, having conducted a gent's furnishing store in East Weymouth for many years, and also an efficient tax collector for several years.

Both East Weymouth and Weymouth Landing have three cornered contests while the other wards each have two candidates.

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

The warrant for the Annual Town Meeting is an unusually long one, containing just one hundred articles. Although the warrant was closed on Jan. 15, it was not until this week that the warrant was distributed to the voters, together with the Annual Town Reports.

The Appropriation Committee has also prepared a report in print which has been forwarded to the Town Meeting Members. The appropriations which may cause debate are for the schools, police and fire department, publication of town history support of poor, highways, and certain streets. The committee recommend no action on 44 of the articles.

AUXILIARY INSTALLATION

The Ladies Auxiliary of Div. 1, A. O. H., of South Weymouth installed officers on Sunday at Forresters hall, the installing officers being Mrs. A. T. Mahoney, county president; Mrs. Oldham, county vice-president; Mrs. Feeney, mistress of arms, and Miss Grace Lambert, county director. The new officers are:

President—Mrs. Margaret Hanson
Vice President—Miss Margaret Bresnahan
Recording secretary—Miss Mary Durcell
Financial secretary—Miss Alice Welch
Treasurer—Miss Susan Hannigan
Mistress at arms—Miss May Bresnahan
Committee on sick—Miss Margaret Burke
Sentinel—Mrs. William F. Howe
Chairman of standing committee—Miss Catherine Santry

An entertainment followed, including solos by Mrs. Marjorie Madden and Mrs. Grace Millett with Mrs. Lillian Sullivan at the piano; readings by Miss Dorothy Bailey of Rockland. Refreshments were served.

DELPHI LODGE, K. OF P.

Wednesday night, March 7, Delphi lodge will hold its annual stag party as a grand windup of visitations with Merrymount, Norfolk and Hingham lodges. There will be a banquet at 7.00 P. M. followed by an entertainment. These parties are popular and serve to draw out every member that can find a bone. In past years Castle hall has been far too small so this year the committee will provide plenty of room by holding the same in the new Rogers hall. Get your ticket for the banquet right away or else you will lose out in this year's stag.

HARLEQUIN PARTY

The Ladies Auxiliary of the King Cove Boat club had an all day sewing circle at the clubhouse on Wednesday Mrs. Gertrude Souther and Mrs. Ethel Hayden served a dinner at noon. In the evening the ladies entertained members of the boat club at a Harlequin party. Mrs. Katherine Holbrooke and William Dorley were the prize winners in the series of games played. Mrs. Hannah Abbott was chairman of the entertainment with the following committee: Bertha Clifford, Katherine Pratt, and Bertha Austin on games; Gertrude Souther Agnes Abbot, Lucy Miller, and Ethel Hayden on lunch. After the contests a lunch was served. Community singing and dancing concluded the entertainment.

BOARD OF TRADE

The Weymouth Board of Trade has dissolved. At a special meeting last Friday evening it was voted to send a protest to President Harding relative to the serious coal situation in Weymouth.

After the payment of bills all money in the treasury will be presented to the Weymouth Hospital.

WEYMOUTH, MARCH 2, 1923

WASHINGTON A GENTLEMAN

By Nick Quad

George Washington, the Father of His Country, besides being a great general and President of the United States, he was a gentleman of culture. Here are a few of his "Rules of civility and decent behavior in company" written when he was 13 years of age:

Show not yourself glad at the misfortune of another, though he were your enemy

Go not near the books or writings of anyone so as to read them unasked; also look not nigh when another is writing a letter

Let your discourse with men of business be short and comprehensive

Undertake not to teach your equal in the art he himself professes—it savors arrogancy

Mock not nor jest at anything of importance; break no jests that are sharp or biting

Wherein you reprove another be unblamable yourself, for example is more prevalent than precept

Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of anyone

Speak not injurious words, neither in jest nor earnest

Give not advice without being asked; and when desired, do it briefly

Speak no evil of the absent, for it is unjust

Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience

RANDOLPH STREET CROSSING

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co. announces that on Monday, Feb. 19, the crossing watchmen were withdrawn from the Randolph street crossing which is located 750 feet north of the South Weymouth station in the town of Weymouth.

The Morrison electric flashlight highway crossing signal which has been installed at this point will be substituted for the crossing men. Such a signal was installed last fall at Grove street. The flashing Morrison signal which has been installed at other crossings on the South Shore and elsewhere operates day and night, thus providing a constant warning for the 24 hours.

As a train approaches the crossing the signal flashes every two seconds a high powered electric red light in both directions on the highway and continues to flash until the train has passed over the crossing.

When the signal is flashing its red warning light it indicates the approach of a train and travellers on the highway must stop before passing over the crossing. If the signal continues to flash after a train has passed it indicates the approach of another train either on the same track or on one adjoining. Attention is attracted more surely to this new warning device than by any other method and many crossings on the New Haven system are now protected in this manner.

SERVICE STAR LEGION

The Old Colony chapter, Service Star Legion, met in Pythian hall, Weymouth, Thursday, Feb. 15. In accordance with a vote taken by the chapter on Jan. 18, this meeting was a postponed annual election and the following officers were chosen for 1923: president, Mrs. Albert E. Avery, vice-presidents, Mrs. Harriet B. Voorhees, Mrs. Joseph Fern, and Mrs. Philip F. Haviland; recording secretary, Mrs. Roger Loud; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Alys Hall; treasurer, Mrs. Edith Morrison; chaplain, Mrs. Mary Talbot; historian, Mrs. Frank Palmer; color bearers, Mrs. Delia Caulfield; delegate to State chapter, Mrs. F. A. Bower; chairman welfare committee, Mrs. Paul Dowd; press correspondent, Miss Elizabeth Caulfield. Members please take notice, hereafter the chapter will meet as formerly on the Second Monday of each month, instead of the third Thursday as has been the custom for the past six months. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Edith Morrison, Morrison Lane, Braintree, on Monday, March 12, at 2 o'clock. The dues for 1923 must be paid at this meeting or as soon as possible thereafter, in order that the National per capita tax may be forwarded by April 1. Every paid-up member will receive "The Service Star", an interesting and instructive magazine published by the National chapter monthly. Although the Service Star Legion is not affiliated with any other patriotic organization it is in perfect harmony with all. The Old Colony chapter is willing to co-operate as far as possible with the American Legion Posts and Auxiliaries in Weymouth and Braintree or with any other patriotic organizations working for the welfare of worthy World War veterans and their families.

AT YOUR SERVICE

The Weymouth Chapter, American Red Cross, maintains for your benefit an "Information Service".

TOWN ACCOUNTING

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

My opinion has been asked several times as to what action the voters should take on the question appearing on the ballot for the annual election reading as follows: "Shall the town petition for the installation of an accounting system by the Commonwealth". This question calls for a "Yes" or "No" vote.

The town of Weymouth at a cost of about $2000 had installed in 1918-1919 a system of accounting which met the requirements of the committee having charge of the work. Some changes in the detail of that system have been made the past two years so that the classification of accounts are in accord with the State system and the accountant readily supplies the Commonwealth with any information desired relative to the finances of the town.

A change from our present system to the State system would cause additional expense place more work on various officials and notwithstanding the fact it would relieve the accountant's department of considerable detail work it would seem to me the wisest move at this time to vote "No" on the question of the installation of the State System.

Respectfully,
EMERSON R. DIZER

To Reach the Homes In the Suburbs

The Merchant and Manufacturer should use the suburban weekly.

First—Because it devotes itself to the good of the community; and in thus becoming a part of the family life, it is necessary to make it purely and simply a family paper—minus the trash and the tragedy of the outside world.

Secondly—Because it is a welcome visitor in the household, and when the daily papers are picked up and placed in the discard, the country weekly retains the place of honor on the family table until the next issue comes out.

That's the Reason It Pays

Because it is thoroughly read by the people in its district—and if they are not interested in your goods today, they will be tomorrow.

If you desire to reach the people within a given radius of the cities of Massachusetts we suggest the following we klies:—

Spirit of Americanism Discussed by Rev. Justice

Rev. J. Caleb Justice of the Union church was the speaker at the meeting of the American Legion in the G. A. R. hall Monday, Feb. 19. His subject was announced as "The Spirit of Americanism". After telling a number of stories he said in part,—

"When I was invited to come here I realized that the date would fall between the anniversaries of two of the most astute statesmen the world has ever seen, Washington and Lincoln. I want to let the meaning of their lives talk to us tonight.

"It is a far cry from our country today with its hundred millions of people back to the first Presidential administration when the country had barely a population of four million. Our problems and theirs are far apart. We live in a different world The span of one hundred and thirty-four years has worked marvelous changes like Alladin with his wonderful lamp. Many would consider that there is no parallel anywhere that can be drawn whereby a lesson can be found for us.

"Yet in one instance recently Washington has been widely quoted as giving valid advice for our policy. In his farewell address on Sept. 17, 1796, George Washington urged a 'cordial, habitual, and immovable attachment to national union'. Americans were to observe good faith and justice toward all nations and keep 'clear of entangling alliances with any portion of the foreign world' Wrenched out of their historical context, applied to an entirely different situation, these words have been propagandized to keep us from joining with the nations of the world in a league to prevent all future wars. Of all that we can learn from Washington, this one point is least applicable to our conditions. From 1789 for a quarter of a century foreign relations constituted a leading feature in our history. France expected the United States to help her against England, and a great many were stirred by the French Revolution to passionate enthusiasm, clamoring to have the administration enter the contest on her side. Appreciating that the very existence of the nation might depend on keeping out of the struggle, Washington determined that the United States should pursue an impartial course toward both England and France. Thus his advice. It was advice to keep from becoming an ally with a foreign nation for war on another foreign nation; NOT AN ALLIANCE FOR PEACE. This simply goes to show how modern politicians can twist American historical facts to their own use.

"But in a far different way Washington has a message for us. No one doubts that we are living in peculiar times. But was the period after the Revolutionary War any the less perplexing? Listen to the words of George Washington uttered when he surrendered his commission to the Continental Congress:—'If I were called upon to draw a picture of the times and of men, from what I have seen, heard, and in part know, I should in one word say that idleness, dissipation, and extravagance seem to have laid fast hold of most of them; that speculation, peculation, and on insatiable thirst for riches seem to have got the better of every other consideration; that party disputes and personal quarrels are the great business of the day; whilst the momentous concerns of an empire, an accumulating debt, ruined finances, depreciated money, and want of credit . . . are but secondary considerations'. Then it was urged upon Washington that for the good of the country, to bring order out of chaos, the army should seize the government and make him king or emperor. At that he rose to the supreme greatness that was in him. Indignantly refusing, he asked if thus his troops had learned of him. An Alexander, a Caesar, a Charlemagne, a Napoleon, seized the opportunity for personal power. Washington unselfishly devoted himself to the American democracy. Herein is he truly great. Of this incident John Lord wrote:—'Many are the precedents of usurpation on the part of successful generals, and few indeed are those who have voluntarily abdicated power from lofty and patriotic motives. It was this virtual abdication which made so profound an impression on the European world, and was not without its influence on the destinies of America, setting a proud and unique example of the superiority of moral excellence over genius and power'. His natural aptitude would have been to enjoy the beautiful rolling hills and fields of Mount Vernon. You know what a charming spot it is. But the people unanimously called him to the helm. He wrote in his diary on April 16, 1789,—'About 10 o'clock I bade adieu to private life and to domestic felicity, and with a mind oppressed with more anxious and painful sensations than I have words to express, set out for New York with the best disposition to render service to my country in obedience to its call, but with less hope of answering its expectations'

"There were many illustrious names of those days that co-operated in shaping the destinies of the young Republic: John Adams, John Jay, General Knox, Edmund Randolph, but the brightest stars of his cabinet were Thomas Jefferson, secretary of state, and Alexander Hamilton, secretary of the treasury, men who represented the most opposite political views. And it is right here that Washington's administration has its message for us.

"Jefferson was the author of the Declaration of Independence, which voices the rights of the people, equality and freedom. It was Hamilton who largely contributed the idea of a strong central executive to the Constitution. Two of the greatest documents in the history of government! These men represented the two tendencies of American history and between which the succeeding administrations have oscillated: popular sovereignity and strong central control.

"Says Lord: 'In nothing were the patience, the patriotism, and the magnanimity of Washington more apparent than in his treatment of these two rival statesmen, perpetually striving to conciliate them,—the one an aristocratic financier, who saw national prosperity in banks and money and central power; the other a democratic land-owner, who looked upon agriculture (labor) as the highest interest, and universal suffrage as the only safe policy for a republic Between the theories of these rivals, Washington had to steer the ship of state'.

"And under various names and platforms, two political parties have ever since voiced these divergent ideas, the union of which is America. Lincoln settled that,—the other supreme statesmen of modern history

"It was on that issue that the country split in 1861.

"Representatives from Virginia urged upon Lincoln the surrender of Fort Sumter which was being invested by Beauregard. They declared it a mere technicality and once yielded there would be no war, the South would come back. The keenness of Lincoln's mind is here revealed, 'Yes,' he replied, 'It's to establish your right to secession with no purpose of exercising it. Then at any future time any state will accept this precedent as a right to secede and the Union is disrupted. Gentlemen, we won't break up the Union, and you shan't even if it means war'. Fort Sumter was fired upon and Lincoln called for 75,000 troops.

"So the two principles of American government have been kept indissolvably united.

"Just what we fail to see in these modern days is that this issue having been settled, our two political parties are useless on the old lines. The issue is no longer political but economic. I said a moment ago that we are living in peculiar times. Look at the coal pile in your cellar and see if you don't think so. The truth of the matter is our capitalistic civilization is near to breaking down. There are problems that it cannot solve, or thru selfishness and greed it refuses to solve.

"At the same time, it fears for itself, as revealed in the fact that we are handed out a lot of scare-bunkum about Russia. I recently read a report that someone had said right here in Weymouth: 'Socialism, Anarchy, Bolshevism, Communism are all of the same breed,—they are grabs'. Of course the speaker thus admitted to anyone with just ordinary intelligence that he didn't know what he was talking about.

"Some of these theories are the very opposite of each other. Anarchy is the theory that men are good enough to get along without any government. Its great example was the idealist, Tolstoi. Of course, the fact is, as we must all admit when we examine our own hearts, it just isn't so. For one thing where are youyou going to get the bunch of you going to get the bunch of GOOD men to try it?

"Bolshevism is the rule of the proletariat. It is getting its trial in Russia. Communism is merely the theory of us all putting our goods in one jackpot and each taking out what he needs. There have been many experiments along that line, Brook Farm communities,—they have all failed. Some were too lazy to work.

"Socialism is anything anywhere between the theory that all industry should be owned and run by the state to the principle that those industries that in the nature of the case must be monoplies, should be publicly owned.

"For instance, Braintree is more socialistic than Weymouth, for we run our own electric light plant and pay 10¢ a K. W. while you are paying 17¢. In fact a short time ago when we were changing our dynamos I believe we were paying 10¢ for your current. I am not presenting arguments either way, there are many considerations that do not enter into my subject tonight.

"But what I am saying is that all these theories are nothing to be afraid of. Let the man who holds any extreme views let off steam—he'll feel a lot better and then he won't be dangerous. When we shut up the other fellow, it is an admission on our own part that we fear everything is not right with our own system.

"And we are scared we may have to change some things, so we resort to star-chamber proceedings of the dark ages. It is only censorship that is dangerous because it is un-American. Washington didn't shut off Jefferson; he found him too valuable a man to counteract the other extreme held by Hamilton.

"The capitalistic system of economics is historically the only one that has stood the test of time. But when it becomes extreme, as it seems to me it does today, it tends to an oligarchy of the fabulously rich. It needs to be mitigated by some elements of Socialism, or if you please, the idea of service and co-operation.

"The feeling should be promoted that we are after all brothers—all Americans. There is too much FEAR in the world and fear is engendered by selfishness. It was really fear that caused the war in 1914—fear on the part of Germany. Whether you hold to the justice of France seizing the Rhur or not.—she certainly has the right under the treaty of Versailles—nevertheless it is fear that drives her on.

"In conclusion: there is a Good Book that I take it we all believe in and its supreme subject is the conquest of fear. 'Fear thou not, for I, thy God, am with thee'. 'Fear not, only have faith. Perfect love (brotherhood) casteth out fear'.

"Fellow Americans, under the principles upon which our Republic was founded, if we keep them, honor them and work them out in our lives, in our nation, we have nothing to fear. Just let's always talk things over and work out our problems together as fellow citizens, with the love of our national unity in our hearts, as did Washington with Hamilton and Jefferson.

"Then, too, let the spirit of the great Lincoln be our spirit. He said 'I have not done much, but this I have done, wherever I have found a thistle growing I have tried to pluck it up, and in its place I have planted a flower'. And once again he said, 'After all, the one meaning of life is simply to be kind'".

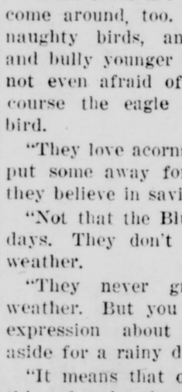
Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER
COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

WINTER BIRDS

"This evening," said Daddy, "I am going to tell you about some of the birds we see in the winter and of their ways.



"Love Acorns."

"In the first place, of course, there are the Evening Grosbeaks. Mr. Grosbeak wears a fine suit of golden brown with touches of white and golden and black.

"Mrs. Grosbeak wears much the same kind of a costume, but her colors are a little paler.

"They whistle and shout and chatter and travel about looking for food.

"Then there are the Pine Grosbeaks. Mr. Pine Grosbeak wears a gorgeous rose-red suit, while Mrs. Pine Grosbeak dresses simply in a gray and yellow frock.

"They dearly love seeds and they come around every winter, looking for seeds in the pine woods. This has given them the name of Pine Grosbeaks.

"They're brave and they're cheery and they warble and call and sing ever so prettily.

"They love to be fed and will become very tame. They are particularly fond of the seeds of fruits such as sumach and of grain.

"The Pine Grosbeaks are more usual than the others, but they both have ways that are much alike.

"You can't mistake Mr. Pine Grosbeak by his gay suit which isn't at all like a dull winter garment such as some of the creatures wear.

"Then there are the Blue Jays who come around, too. They are rather naughty birds, and chase squirrels and bully younger birds, but they are not even afraid of the eagle, and of course the eagle is a much bigger bird.

"They love acorns and nuts and will put some away for a hard time, for they believe in saving for a rainy day.

"Not that the Blue Jays mind rainy days. They don't mind any kind of weather.

"They never grumble about the weather. But you know there is an expression about laying something aside for a rainy day.

"It means that one is saving something for the time when good things will be scarce. Blue Jays do it. Those who put some of their money in savings banks do it, too.

"Then there are the nice Snowflake birds. They can easily be told by the amount of white feathers they wear.

"They come along, too, with the snowflakes and eat seeds which they say they always find have fallen from weed stalks in the late fall.

"They travel in large numbers. Their nests are of soft grass and moss—truly lovely nests, but they are only with us during the winter months.

"There are the Pine Finches, too, sometimes known as the Siskin family.

"They are very much like the Goldfinch family in their ways and in their song and in their call. And they look like the Goldfinch family, too, for in the winter time Mr. Goldfinch doesn't wear his bright gay suit which he wears when the summer is here.

"They love to eat seeds and buds.

"During the Winter."

"They love to eat seeds which they, too, gather from old weeds.

"Mr. Redpoll wears a handsome rose-colored waistcoat and a beautiful greenish coat. Mrs. Redpoll doesn't have the rose-colored waistcoat part of the costume.

"And I'm telling you what the different winter birds like to eat. I think it is nice to have seeds and crumbs and suet about in the winter time. The suet can be put out of reach of cats and so fixed that the snow won't easily cover it up though, of course, the snow can be taken off when it has done that."

"Yes, Daddy, we'll take the hint," said Nick. "We're going to have food for the birds this winter and hope that many will come to visit us," added Nancy.

All Sorts of Corpses.

Donald had been reading a book which contained many war terms. He supposed the word "corps" was pronounced phonetically. He had made a number of paper airplanes, which he displayed proudly to his mother and said: "This is to be the flying corpse of the army. Then I'm going to have reserve corpses and land corpses besides. You know an army has to have all sorts of corpses!"

SPRING SUITS

New York, Feb. 26, 1923

Mr. C. R. Denbroeder,
756 Broad St.,
East Weymouth, Mass.

Dear Sir:—

I'll be mighty glad, Mr. Denbroeder to send you the newspaper cuts, the business cards, and the snappy little fashion books. It's surely gratifying to see you take advantage of these sales stimulators.

Well, Mr. Denbroeder, I'm thinking of the splendid way in which you bombarded me with orders last Spring. Well, I'm still the same old Dick; we've got a finer organization than ever and as for personal painstaking attention to orders from an old friend, why you just leave that to Yours Truly.

We're drifting right into the Easter season—less than five weeks off. I suppose with the ice eight inches thick off the coast of Massachusetts the boys are forgetting this. Can't we get the earlaps off them long enough to whisper "Spring Suits". Save them the trouble of last minute delivery worries.

I can get your orders along to you when you want them and as you want them. Make me prove it.

Yours very truly,

J. L. TAYLOR & CO.

CLUB and SOCIAL

—At the next meeting of the Monday club on March 5 there will be an illustrated lecture on the subject of "The majesty of the mountains" by Prof. Charles E. Fay, dean of graduate work at Tufts College. Prof. Fay is widely known and popular in other than academic fields, having made an enviable reputation for himself as a mountaineer in the Alps, the Canadian Rockies, where a peak has been named after him, and in the Appalachians. He is actively associated with several national and foreign mountain climbing societies, and was recently knighted by the Count of Monaco for his work in exploring and conquering various parts of the Swiss Alps.

—At the next meeting of the Old Colony club on Thursday Mr. Edwin M. Whitney will give as a dramatic reading "The Square Deal". For four consecutive years Mr. Whitney has entertained the club and his popularity increases each year so that a large audience is expected. This is an open meeting. Mrs. Muriel Klingeman will sing a group of songs. "Home management" is the subject of a meeting arranged by the "Home Economics" committee for March 9 at 2.30 at the Nevins school building. Miss Burr is the speaker. All interested are welcome.

—The semi-monthly meeting of the Weymouth Catholic club took place Monday evening, Feb. 26, at Sacred Heart hall, Weymouth The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Charles Y. Berry, who introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. James L. McGovern of Boston College His talk on the "Religion of Shakespeare" was much enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. The club's orchestra rendered pleasing selections.

—A very successful supper and entertainment was given by the Ladies Benevolent Society last Friday evening. The supper was called a "George Washington supper". The waitresses were dressed in the old-fashioned costumes of 1742 and with attractive caps on their heads they were very pleasing. After a most delightful supper came the entertainment of the evening, which was in honor of George Washington's birthday. It depicted life as it was when George Washington was President; showed life at his home; and with the singing of the old darky songs, the effect was most pleasing. The parts were enacted by the following:

George Washington—Earle Moulton
Martha Washington—Ruth A. Nash
Miss Custis—Doris White
A colored Mammy—Isabelle Jones
Rastus—George Bicknell

Chorus: Helen Ries, Helen Nickerson, Mrs. Seward Jarvis, Doris White Allan Perrow, Vincent Perrow, Donald MacDowell, and Charles Killban

The effect which the old-fashioned costumes, powdered hair, and the southern songs made on the audience was very great. Piano solos by Miss Helen Nickerson and reading by Miss Mary Humphrey were also enjoyed.

GEM THEATRE

Manager C. H. Rogers of the Gem theatre catered to a capacity house on Tuesday and Wednesday while presenting "The Storm". As Mr. Roger's motto is "The best is none too good" next week he will present the wonderful picture "My Wild Irish Rose". The following week will come "Blood and Sand". For a beginner Mr. Rogers certainly shows great foresight in selecting his pictures and he certainly is rewarded by the smiling and satisfied expressions of his patrons.

GRAND ENCAMPMENT

Weymouth was largely represented on Thursday at the annual session of the Grand Encampment, I. O. O. F., in Boston. Andrew S. Johnston was elected grand patriarch. John P. Hunt of Weymouth was appointed grand sentinel.

—March did not come in as a lion or a lamb; just betwixt and between. Considerable snow remains, reminding us that winter is not yet over.

—Squad 1 of the Church of Good Tidings gave an excellent concert on Wednesday evening at the church. The Concorde Male Quartet, W. H. Smith, V. W. Monroe, G. A. Young, and N. A. Miller, with Mrs. Bertha Metcalf accompanying, and Miss Josephine Jones of the Emerson School of Oratory in readings, gave a very pleasing program to a large audience.

PERSONAL

A substantial offer from a large western theatrical agency to cover the circuit through the Middle West was turned down by one of our local vaudeville artists, Julian R. Merchant, recently. Mr. Merchant preferring to make this part of the country, namely Massachusetts, his travelling limits for the time being, has turned aside offers from many reputable theatrical agencies to "satisfy the home-folks first", as he puts it.

At present Mr. Merchant's date index shows a list of various points through the South Shore and neighboring towns extending towards Boston. His musical ability is unquestionable, being of wonderful talent from boyhood up, starring in all minstrels, comedy sketches, dramas thus giving him his start.

Being in sort of seclusion for the past few years from the public eye Mr. Merchant has devoted his time to musical study, thus enabling him to put before the public really something worth while.

He Was a Man of Moods

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

A man of moods was Michael Bond. When he was anything, glad, or sad, or mad, he was glad, sad or mad all over. Hence all the joy of the morning was in his singing, as his horse paced soberly along the woods road to the little log church. Never had there been quite such a Sunday—the deep woods were still dewy and all the spread of them scented with the rare sweetness of wild grape blossom. Birds sang, not too loudly, rather in soft, broken snatches; lush young leafage made shadow marvels on the road earth and the sun rays were true gold. Michael felt them shining in his heart the same as on his bare head—for was he not one and twenty, free at last from a curmudgeonly guardian, free to speak out as became a man and claim his sweetheart?

A wonder-woman. Helen of Troy they had raved over at school had nothing on her, he was sure. Josefa Kenyon was older than himself, but what did five years matter? Reticent also—nobody knew more of her than the happenings of two years since she came to teach in the village academy. To be sure, she had brought references of the highest and had reinforced them by a walk and way wholly impeccable. The most explicit of the references, with a bishop's name at the foot, said she had lost a husband under most distressing circumstances six months after marriage. But she had not worn mourning. But what with all the current flitter of talk about self-expression and married individuality, it passed for simple oddity; five years earlier it would have been rated mysteriously criminal.

She had fine, high manners; the most critical could not gainsay that, any more than her low, clear voice, her soft, deft hands—not over white but alluring to view and touch. She dressed with the exact degree of quiet trimness her position demanded, went regularly to church, made neither debts nor confidences and had but one single friendly intimate—Sara Downe, the least promising of her pupils. She had gone home with Sara for the big meeting—the Downe house neighbored the little log church. Squire Downe was, indeed, its prop and stay, as became a ruling elder of the Primitive Baptists, who were still primitive enough to hold fast to the yearly foot-washing as the crown of "June meetin'."

"I Married This Man Seven Years Back."

Services began early—eight o'clock at the latest. Hence Michael's journey while the sun was still young; likewise his choice of the wood road. The big road was certain to be thronged—cars, carriages, even farm wagons, overflowing with happy, laughing humanity and good cheer. Dinner on the ground was as much a feature of the day as the footwashing. Sara Downe had made sure of Michael as her father's guest, bidding him over and over as she drove homeward in the ramshackle carriage with Mrs. Kenyon beside her.

He recalled the fact only incidentally to his memory of Josefa. How he loved the name—they would be Joe and Mike, one to another, in the big Bond house shut up since his father died ten years back. She knew what was in his heart—she must also know what was in his mind. It must be she who had sent him twenty-one roses yesterday—he had clutched them so hard, great baby that he was; his palm had been deeply pricked with a savage thorn. There had been no card, but he fancied he caught a hint of the faint perfume all her belongings exhaled in the blue ribbon binding them. Faint as it was it thrilled him all through. He had the ribbon, tenderly folded, in the pocket nearest his heart.

Which makes it plain that, in the language of adolescence, he had it bad, very, very bad. Of course he was chaffed, but what did that matter? Thrice intoxicated with love and freedom, he was ready to laugh down all the world's laughing. Flinging his reins to a black boy in wait for such harvests he all but ran about the shaded grounds in search of the Downe carriage, only to find it empty. The driver, sprawled on the ground hard by, stirred sleepily to say: "White ladies done gone ter listen at de preachin'." The house was packed, but somehow Michael crushed himself inside, and for five minutes feasted his aching eyes on the face he worshiped. He saw it in profile, hence did not mark the change in it at first. It was not paler than usual, but so tense it seemed gray. As his sun-clouded sight cleared he saw that she sat as might a wild beast crouched for a deadly spring. Her eyes burned upon the narrow pulpit and the man within it. He was ascetic-looking, tall, wasted, with cavernous hollows beneath eyes that gazed downward, and deep graven lines encircling a cruelly beautiful mouth.

In a thrilling voice, low but resonant, trained in every art speech has ever evolved he was beseeching, entreating all within sound of it to forsake the world and its allurements, give up earth for Heaven. His listeners, for the most part solid, stolid farmer folk, swayed and stirred like tall grain in a ruffling breeze. Amazement had begun the stir—June meeting was no time nor place for revival appeals. But as the voice played upon them as a master harper upon his instrument, they lost themselves in the flood-tide appeal. "Foot washing for humility, heart washing for cleansing of sin, soul washing for life everlasting," he ended suddenly, leaping down and almost running along the narrow aisle. Mrs. Kenyon, sitting beside it, arose wraith-like in his path, clutched him, and said, her words dropping like molten lead: "Tell us what washing can make a child-stealer clean?"

"The poor creature is quite mad—she must be," he said, trying to free himself. "I do not know her—has she any friends?"

"A hundred—I'm only the nearest," Michael cried. He had rushed to Josefa as he saw her rise. "They'll follow her—you come with me outside. We'll get at the truth—no matter who it hurts."

"Let me speak it—here in the house of God, in the face of His true followers," Mrs. Kenyon said steadily. "I married this man seven years back—a foolish young girl, bewitched by his eloquence. It was money—money he wanted—money I was due to inherit from my uncle. He died suddenly—in an accident—then it came out that he had been privately married to a pretty, poor girl, whom he had been ashamed to acknowledge.

"But she had given him a child. As a late atonement he had willed his fortune to the baby—with reversion to me if the little one died. It disappeared, nobody knew how. Its mother grieved herself insane for it—then my husband," her voice breaking over the word, "moved to get for me what he called 'my rights.' I defied him—I knew he had made away with the child, though I could not prove it. But I would not touch the money, not even when he threatened to kill me. But I told him I would accuse him openly unless he went out of my sight and knowledge and gave over his pulpit work. War came just then. He rushed into it—I lost all trace of him. Was it wrong in me to pray that he had died? Now I find him here!"—the bitterness of death in the word—"preaching faith and repentance to you clean-souled people. Say—what does he deserve?"

An inarticulate roar as of a stormy sea answered her. Before it broke into words the man fell in a crumpled heap at his wife's feet. Two gasps, and he was dead. She looked at him with burning eyes but sighed: "Thank God for his weak heart."

"Mine is strong enough to shelter you always," Michael whispered as he led her away.

COLOR LINKED WITH POLITICS

Paint Has Played Important Part in History Since the Beginning of World's Division.

Color has played an important part in the politics of many countries over a long period. When Dutch William came to London, orange was naturally the color which greeted him everywhere in his progress to Whitehall, and orange remained his symbol, so much so that the squeezing of an orange was a method of intimating detestation of the "tyrant." White has served more than one political party. The "White Plume of Navarre" was a rallying point in France at one period. the white cockade was the symbol of the royalists at another. The "tricolor" was still more important and more durable than the violet of Napoleon.

Nor was any great difficulty made in changing colors on necessity. An English traveler in France at the beginning of the Hundred Days noticed that the sentries had adapted their cockades to the needs of the moment by painting over the tricolor with a coat of white, through which, however, the original colors could be seen quite plainly.

Damascus Looms Long Famous.

The looms of Damascus have been famous for many centuries. In this city, where everything is still done in the most primitive way—where meal is ground in stone mill turned by camels, the hand looms are worked by a weaver and his draw-boy. On these looms are made the beautiful damasks, woven in silks of brilliant colors, that were known throughout Europe and Asia as early as the time of the Crusades.

Out of the Darkness

"DEAD—WHY—HOW?"

John Bartley, noted criminal investigator, recently returned from Secret Service work during the war, is asked by the governor of New York to investigate a mysterious attempted robbery of the Robert Slyke home at Circle Lake, near Saratoga, and to establish the guilt or innocence of two men in the penitentiary for the crime. A miscarriage of justice is suspected. Bartley finds in it the restaging of an old case, is interested and agrees to solve the mystery. With his friend, Pelt, a newspaper man, Bartley goes to Circle Lake, the pair becoming the guests of Bob Currie, an old friend. The three visit the Slyke home. Slyke resents Bartley's coming, saying he is satisfied the two men in prison are guilty. Bartley is not. Next morning Slyke is found dead in bed, apparently having shot himself. Miss Potter, the dead man's sister-in-law, the village police chief, Roche, and the family physician, Doctor King, all agree Slyke killed himself, but Bartley insists he was murdered. Investigating, Bartley finds evidence that Slyke, after a card party he had given, was shot on the tower of the house, undressed, and placed in bed. During his absence from the room someone removes the revolver from Slyke's hand. A boy working in the garage asserts he heard a shot during the night, apparently "in the air," of course really on the tower.

I scanned the two cards he gave me and then those on the table. The pack was an ordinary one, such as is sold for a dollar. Not only the designs on the backs were the same, but the texture of the cardboards as well.

"Do you realize what that shows?" asked Bartley.

"That the cards we found in the tower are from the pack on this table."

"Yes! They may have been dropped up there by the murderer, or they may have been placed there to make us believe that someone in the poker party had committed the crime."

"Why couldn't it have been done," I suggested, "by someone in the party?"

He was thoughtful for a second or two, then slowly shook his head. "Of course, it might have been, but I think that the odds are against it. This is no ordinary crime, though some one wanted us to think it was a commonplace suicide. The criminal was afraid, however, that we might discover it to be murder and prepared for that emergency."

"How do you make that out?" I asked, astonished.

"An ordinary criminal"—Bartley spoke so softly that Miss Potter could not hear—"would never have taken all the trouble involved in undressing Slyke and placing him in bed. That was intended to give the idea of suicide; but, as the murderer knew there was a chance of some one suspecting that it was murder, he took the cards from the table and placed them where we could find them. He knew that the finding of cards in the tower would throw suspicion upon everyone present at the game. It is to me only an additional link in evidence that proves it was not suicide."

Roche returned, bringing with him the butler, three women and a boy. None of them could give us any information of value. Bartley soon dismissed them.

After they had gone, Bartley turned to the boy who, from the excited way he was wriggling, evidently wanted to say something. It came out with an eagerness that was almost laughable.

"I heard a gun last night," he cried.

"You did?" asked Bartley, startled for a second.

The boy nodded eagerly.

"Yes, sir. Last night, sir."

Bartley placed his hand on the boy's shoulder. "Where were you when you heard the shot? What time was it?"

"Well, sir," the boy began, "you see, I work out in the garage, wash the cars and such things. I sleep over it and eat in the kitchen. Last night, you know, we had the big car out to take some of the gentlemen home that were at the card party. When the chauffeur got back I washed the car."

The chauffeur? We stared inquiringly at each other, and Bartley said sharply to Roche, "Where is he?"

Roche looked confused and shamefaced, then hurried from the room, and Bartley resumed his examination of the boy.

"You said you were washing the car. What then?"

"Yes, sir. I was washing the car. It was after twelve o'clock and it took some time. Then I smoked a cigar a man had given me and went to bed. Just after I crawled in, about half-past one, I guess, I heard a shot. Not very loud, but it was a shot, all right."

"Where did it seem to come from?" Bartley asked.

The boy scratched his head for a moment and looked a bit foolish as he replied. "It's funny, but it seemed to be up in the air near the house."

Bartley threw me a quick glance. This fitted in with his theory that Slyke had been killed on the balcony of the tower. If that theory was right and the shot that the boy had heard was the one that had killed Slyke, he would naturally think that the sound came from the air. I wondered if the boy could tell us anything else of value.

"Did you get out of bed to see if you could discover where the shot came from?"

"No, sir, I did not; but, if I had known that Mr. Slyke had killed himself, you bet your life I would."

From his answer I judged that the servants did not yet know that their employer had been murdered. At least, this boy did not know. He had told us all he knew about the crime, and was soon sent from the room. Only Miss Potter and the butler now remained to be examined.

Roche returned, looking more shamefaced than ever. "I'm sorry, Mr. Bartley, but I can't find him. No one has seen the chauffeur, and he doesn't seem to be anywhere about the place."

Bartley accepted his statement with a shrug of disappointment, and turned his attention to the butler.

He was a man of about fifty-five, tall, with a rather thin face of the unemotional kind common to butlers. Though he refused to meet Bartley's eyes, he did not seem to be in the least nervous. What had taken place that night he evidently accepted as something he could not help and need not worry over.

Bartley asked him first about the men that were at the card party. To my surprise the butler said he was unable to give the names of all the men, though he knew most of them.

Bartley took down in a little red notebook the names of such men as he could remember. Then he asked suddenly, "And what was the name of the man that stayed after the others left?"

The question seemed to surprise the butler, but he answered, "Mr. Lawrence, sir, the lawyer from Saratoga. Mr. Slyke asked him himself to remain after the others had gone. He went with him up to Mr. Slyke's room and stayed there a few moments. I myself waited here in a chair to let him out and lock up. I did not have to wait long; not more than ten minutes or so."

Bartley glanced at the stairs. "Did Mr. Slyke come down with Mr. Lawrence?" he asked.

"No, sir. I never saw Mr. Slyke again." He paused, then added slowly, "That is, alive."

"And you did not hear the revolver shot, the one the boy heard?"

"No, sir, I did not."

I felt that he was carefully choosing his words and was not giving any more information than he had to. I wondered what it was that he was holding back. Bartley's next question and the answer that it brought proved that I was right.

She Was a Handsome Girl, With Beautiful Red Hair and the Creamy White Skin That Goes With It.

"Did you see or hear anything last night out of the way?"

The butler was so long in answering that the question had to be asked a second time.

We were getting impatient before he said, "I heard nothing suspicious, but I saw—"

He paused, and Bartley urged, "You saw what?"

The butler glanced from Bartley to the woman in the chair. Miss Potter was looking at him with a curious expression on her face, one not of fear but of wonder, as if she were curious to know what his statement meant.

After glancing at her, he turned to Bartley and said apologetically, "Why, sir, I don't know if what I saw was anything out of the way. I would not have thought of it again if Mr. Slyke had not been found dead. When I got to bed, I began to wonder if I had locked the windows. We were rather fussy about them since the robbery. The more I thought of it the less sure I was; so I got up and was starting to go down into the living room when I saw Miss Ruth, dressed in a long coat, going into her room."

Miss Potter gasped and asked the butler in great astonishment, "But, Robert, how can you say that! You know Miss Ruth was not at home last evening. She spent the night at Saratoga. She has not returned yet."

For a second no one spoke. Bartley's eyes went from the butler to the woman and back again. We all wondered what his next question would be, but we never found out. Suddenly, from above us, a girlish voice called, "Who is talking about me?"

Astonished, we all turned and looked in the direction from which the voice had come. On the top of the stairway a young girl of nineteen years stood looking down at us.

For several seconds Miss Potter seemed unable to believe her eyes, then she half gasped, "Why, Ruth—"

The girl, surprised at the effect her simple question had made, clutched her blue silk dressing gown closer about her and started down the stairs. It was plain that she had just gotten out of bed and had not yet had time to dress. Her eyes went from one person to another questioningly. Who were we, and what were we doing here?

As she came slowly down the steps we watched her in silence. She was a handsome girl with beautiful red hair and the creamy white skin that goes with it. When she reached her aunt's side, Miss Potter was still too astonished to speak and the girl gave Roche an appealing look. She was beginning to realize that something was wrong.

"Have the burglars been here again?" she asked.

Not trusting herself to speak, Miss Potter shook her head. The girl knew nothing of the tragedy that had taken place, evidently, or she would not have been so carefree. She waited, and as her aunt did not seem able to tell her what had happened she turned again to Roche. After swallowing hard for a moment or two the chief stammered out, "Why, Miss Ruth, you see, we—that is—well, Mr. Slyke has been killed."

The laughing look in her eyes faded and one of surprise, blended with horror, took its place. For a second, that to me seemed an hour, she waited, steadying herself by her hand on the table. Then she asked slowly, almost spelling out each word, "De-ad—dead—why—how?"

Again a silence. No one wanted to tell her what had taken place. Her eyes sought each one of us in turn and then rested on Bartley, as if she recognized that he was in charge. A glance passed between the two, then he told her what we had found.

Though the girl had been startled, I noticed that she was not overwhelmed with grief. Neither had the older woman been. In fact we had yet to hear any word of regret that Slyke was dead. That the girl's astonishment at Bartley's story had been genuine there was no doubt; still the butler's assertion that he had seen her go into her room when she was supposed to have been away from the house had to be explained. Her unexpected presence here this morning seemed to add color to his statement. A glance at her dressing gown with her nightdress peeping beneath it showed that she had just come from her bed. Yet her aunt's surprise at her appearance had also seemed genuine.

"Your aunt told us," Bartley said to her, "that you were away, spending the night with a friend; but the butler says he saw you early this morning going into your own room."

The girl flushed, as if she realized the gravity of her position, and sank into a chair before she answered, "I did intend to spend the night with a friend in Saratoga. On our way home from a dance at the lake our machine lost a tire and it took so long to replace it that, as we were near the house I decided to come home. Not wishing to go through the woods alone at that hour, I got Uncle Richard to come with me."

Seeing that we were puzzled by the mention of her uncle, she explained that he was really a cousin of her stepfather whom she called uncle. He was a retired clergyman who, during the summer, lived on the estate in a little cottage facing the main road near the entrance to the driveway to the house. When asked if her uncle had come into the house with her she replied that he had not; that he had only waited long enough for her to unlock the front door. She herself had gone directly to her own room, passing the door of her stepfather's room, which had been closed. She had seen no one and heard nothing. She had slept until our voices had awakened her.

"He asked me if I wanted to buy some Scotch whisky."

RANGERS' SHOW A SUCCESS

The Rangers A. A. held a moving picture show in Odd Fellows hall, East Weymouth, Monday night and a packed house resulted from their efforts; between 650 and 700 people were in attendance. The Rangers will purchase new baseball uniforms and equipment from the handsome sum netted.

Tony Dalto, who plays first base, was in charge of the affair; Tom Dutson, pitcher, and Paul (Red) Valicenti, the peppery catcher, were in charge of tickets.

A melodious number was a cornet duet by John Cippulo and John Ventre: 'Ida and Dot Polka". Miss Grace Donovan, soprano soloist, of Weymouth, contributed two songs: "Melody of Love", and "My Buddy" and was well received. "Smoky Joe" Clarry of Hingham did a buck and wing.

Daisy Caldwell was awarded $5 in gold for the lucky seat.

The movie feature starred Wallace Reid (now deceased) in "Thirty Days"; Wallace Reid is dead, but he still lives on the screen. An exciting part of the picture occurred when an actor with a long carving knife chased a woman down the street, but was saved by a policeman at the crucial moment—while the children howled with glee.

The Rangers will probably furnish a brand of baseball next season that will whet the appetite of the rabid fans in this section. Then it is that democrats, republicans, socialists, prohibitionists and antis, can sit down on the same bench, or under the same tree and unite for once in the common cause—the home team.

The C. M. A. had two representatives in the N. E. A. A. U. wrestling championships: Martin Zeoli in the 126 lb. class and Robert S. Means, formerly of Harvard College in the 118 lb. class. Zeoli lost on decision in the preliminaries, while Means went through to the final, losing to Harry J. Brumer of M. I. T.

Means represented the N. E. A. A. U. in the National championships in New York on Monday and Tuesday

The Clapp Memorial Celtics, a fast five, journeyed to South Weymouth on Tuesday evening and defeated the South Weymouth Juniors 35 to 9. This was the rubber contest for the season. Mike Daniele, with five baskets from the floor, and Craig and Doherty with four, were the highest scorers. Madigan and Reid, who played backs for the Celtics, were both good caging two apiece. Churchill was the highest scorer for the Juniors, scoring two goals and one from the free-try line. The score at the end of the first half was 20 to 6. The second half the Celtics went strong and scored 15 points to the opponents 3.

To the Honorable the Judge of the Probate Court in and for the County of Norfolk:

Respectfully represents Frederick D. Knight of Weymouth, in said County, and Florence V. Knight, his wife, that they are of the age of twenty-one years or upwards, and are desirous of adopting Mervin E. Tabor, Jr., of said Weymouth, a child of Mervin E. Tabor, late of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and Lila F. Tabor, his wife, which said child was born in Pittsburgh, in the State of Pennsylvania, on the thirtieth day of May, A. D. 1917; that the said Mervin E. Tabor and the said Lila F. Tabor are both deceased; that Alfred E. Haines, an uncle of said Lila F. Tabor, deceased, is the duly appointed guardian of the said Mervin E. Tabor, Jr., and assents to this petition for adoption.

Wherefore they pray for leave to adopt said child, and his name may be changed to that of Mervin Tabor Knight.

Dated this eighth day of January, A. D. 1923.

FREDERICK D. KNIGHT
FLORENCE V. KNIGHT

The undersigned, being the guardian of said child, hereby consent to the adoption, as above prayed for.

ALFRED E. HAINES,
Guardian of Mervin E. Tabor, Jr.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
Norfolk, ss. Probate Court

On the foregoing petition, it is ordered that the petitioners notify the next of kin of said child to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Brookline, in said County of Norfolk, on the twenty-eighth day of March, A. D. 1923, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any they have, why the same should not be granted, by serving them with a copy of said petition and this order, seven days before said Court, or if they be not found within this Commonwealth, by publishing the same once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Weymouth Gazette and Transcript, a newspaper published in Weymouth, Mass., the last publication to be seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, Joseph R. McCoole, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-second day of January, in the year one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three.

Decisive Majority For High School Addition

A decisive majority of the voters were in favor of the $300,000 appropriation for the enlargement of the Weymouth High school, the vote at the special town election on Monday being:

YES	1161
NO	810
BLANKS	7
Total	1978

Five of the seven precincts were in favor, but two of the South Weymouth precincts were against and Precinct 4 gave only one majority for the appropriation.

The vote by precincts was:

	Yes	No	Total
Precinct 1	232	113	347
Precinct 2	152	65	221
Precinct 3	297	143	440
Precinct 4	81	80	161
Precinct 5	162	271	434
Precinct 6	178	58	236
Precinct 7	59	80	139
Total	1161	810	*1978

*Includes seven blanks

It will be seen that Precinct 3 at Weymouth gave the largest majority in favor and Precinct 6 at East Weymouth next.

Precinct 5 at South Weymouth voted 271 to 162 against; and the new precinct at Nash Corner was 21 against.

The Lovell's Corner precinct was nearly equally divided 81 yes to 80 no.

It is rumored that several of the Town Meeting Members were on the point of resigning had the voters repudiated their vote in favor of the High School enlargement.

Now it is said that the minority will further contest the vote at the special election. Whereas the Town Meeting Act provides that the question submitted at the said special town meeting shall be determined by a MAJORITY of the voters at large voting thereon, it is claimed that a State law requires a TWO THIRDS vote where a bond issue is contemplated, as the $250,000 to be raised on twenty-year bonds.

Town officials claim that the vote of Monday was to "ratify" only; that it was the vote at the previous Town Meeting that decided the issue.

In Section 8 of the Weymouth Town Meeting Act the word "ratify" is not used, but the Selectmen are required to "present to the voters at large THE question or questions so involved".

Perhaps the loan will be up to the brokers, they to decide whether they will loan money under the vote of 104 to 4, or under the vote of 1161 to 810, or turn down the loan.

Before any contract is awarded for the enlargement of the High School it may be well to ascertain whether the $250,000 can be raised by bonds.

NEARLY 6000 VOTERS

Registration has closed for the Annual Town Meeting with a total of 5803 voters on the precinct lists. During the period of registration which closed last Saturday night 186 names were added, and the precinct totals are:

Precinct 1	1002
Precinct 2	836
Precinct 3	1171
Precinct 4	405
Precinct 5	1093
Precinct 6	962
Precinct 7	334
	5803

Divided among the four villages of the town, it will be seen that South Weymouth has the most voters:

South Weymouth	1832
East Weymouth	1798
Weymouth Landing	1171
North Weymouth	1002

NON-PARTISAN TICKET

The Non-Partisan Party did not nominate a complete ticket last Friday, but a contest did develop for the Ward One representative for Selectman and Overseer of Poor. The names of Benjamin F. Smith and Charles H. Williams of North Weymouth being presented. The former was nominated, and with him Annie G. Lynch of East Weymouth, H. Franklin Perry of Weymouth, Charles N. Turner of Ward Four and Henry B. Chandler of South Weymouth.

The chairman of the caucus was Frank N. Clapp and the secretary Philip Comstock. About fifty attended the caucus.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN

Only routine business was transacted by the Selectmen at their regular meeting this week, two or three licenses being granted.

OLD COLONY CIRCUIT

The Old Colony Circuit League held their annual banquet in the First M. E. church, East Weymouth, on Washington's Birthday. A banquet was served at 6.30 P. M. under the direction of Miss Olive D. Sylvester, chairman. The vestry was prettily trimmed in red, white, and blue and the tables had miniature Uncle Sam's for favors.

After everyone had eaten their fill, the president of the circuit, Harold Kidder introduced the toastmaster, Fred Almquist of East Braintree, who in turn introduced a speaker from each of the chapters represented on the circuit. Many witty as well as many serious thoughts were expressed together with some very original ideas. After the toasts the tables were cleared and the meeting adjourned to a sing after which the Rev. Mr. Kent of Hingham offered prayer.

The speaker of the evening was E. K. Tsukasaki of Boston University, a young Japanese student, who brought a message to the young people of the work that might be done in his own land. Mr. Tsukasaki was leaving for Japan that night and as an expression of their appreciation for his coming to speak the circuit voted $25 to him for his use in Japan.

The evening closed with a minstrel show put on by the East Braintree League which proved to be a great attraction. Everyone regretted that this part of the program had to be cut down in order that the leaguers might get the last car home. The end men, Roy and Peter Christiansen, rendered some very pleasing numbers.

At the close of the evening Old Colony Circuit felt that they had spent one of the most enjoyable evenings for many a day together.

DANGERS OF A COLD
Weymouth People Will Do Well to Heed Them

Many bad cases of kidney trouble result from a cold or chill. Congested kidneys fall behind in filtering the poison-laden blood and backache, headache, dizziness, and disordered kidney action follow. Don't neglect a cold. Use Doan's Kidney Pills at the first sign of kidney trouble. Follow this Weymouth resident's example:

Mrs. M. McCartney, 46 Granite street, says: "Some time ago while living in Scotland, I was troubled with my kidneys, caused by a cold which settled in them. My kidneys felt dull and heavy and they acted too frequently. My back was lame and I had a constant nagging pain in the small of it which bothered me mornings when I got up. A friend told me of Doan's Kidney Pills so I got a box and they soon relieved the trouble. After using a few more boxes of Doan's the pains left and I was completely cured".

GOOD CARE AND REPAIR PROLONG LIFE OF EXPENSIVE FOOTWEAR

A Treatment of Petroleum Jelly and Beeswax Will Greatly Prolong the Life of Shoes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Shoes, even more than most other articles of clothing, need to be aired after wearing in order to prevent the perspiration from rotting the lining. It is a good plan, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture, in connection with its home economics work, to keep them on shoe-trees or stuffed with tissue paper, because in this way the wrinkles are forced out and the original shape is preserved. Wetting tends to spoil the appearance of shoes and to shorten their period of service; therefore overshoes should be worn in bad weather to protect the shoes. If shoes do get wet, they should be very slowly and carefully dried, for heat tends to crack the leather. It is especially important to restore the shape of wet shoes by shoe-trees or paper stuffing. Even with the most careful drying, moisture tends to rot the threads with which a shoe is sewn, and "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Arctics Afford Protection.

For walking in snow or deep mud, arctics with rubber soles and waterproof cloth tops afford excellent protection, as do also rubber boots. When only a little protection is needed, the slip-on, or sandal, is comfortable and economical, for it covers the sole of the shoe but leaves the heel free. All types of rubber overshoes are now so expensive that they should be treated as carefully as the shoes they protect. They should be kept away from great heat, and set "right side up with care" to prevent their losing shape. They should also be washed, or brushed so that the grit on them may not wear down the surface.

It is economy to keep two pairs of shoes in use and wear them on alternate days; the thorough airing on shoe-trees or stuffed with paper keeps them fresher and more shapely so that each pair gives longer service. All shoes should be kept clean and well brushed. Leather shoes may be rubbed with vaseline to keep them soft, and also to keep moisture from passing so quickly through the leather. Only good polishes should be used. In using paste polishes, a brush is preferable to a cloth, as it will force the paste into all crevices. The shoes should stand a few minutes after the paste is applied; then they should be brushed with a flat, stiff brush and polished with a cloth or a buffer, a brush made of layers of cloth having a napped surface. A glove made of sheepskin with the wool on, such as is used for rubbing furniture, is also very good for polishing shoes.

Clean Canvas Shoes.

White canvas shoes are usually cleaned with one of the commercial preparations for this purpose. If water is used, no more than necessary should be applied on the shoes and they must be cleaned on shoe-trees or stuffed with paper to prevent the canvas from shrinking. If they are badly soiled, they may be washed with soap that contains whiting, dried, and if necessary treated with a commercial cleaner. All traces of the cleaner should be carefully wiped from the edges of a colored sole; otherwise the shoe will have a slovenly appearance. White suede and buckskin shoes are cleaned in much the same general way, but with special cleaners made for the purpose.

If there is sufficient space, a small chest for holding shoes may be added to the furnishings of the bedroom; or shoe bags hung on the inside of the closet door are good. Pairs of bags in different colors are very useful for packing shoes when traveling; they keep the shoes from being scratched or prevent their marking other articles, and make it possible to sort out a particular pair quickly.

Good Care of Shoes.

Run-down heels spoil the shape of shoes and should be leveled at once. If the shoes are of good leather, well-shaped, and well made, it is worth while to have full soles hand-sewed on them and new heels put on when the first set wears through. Shoes thus mended will outwear those repaired with ordinary half soles, and also have a much better appearance. Brass rather than iron nails in the heels make less noise in walking. Rubber heels prevent jarring in walking and for this reason are very comfortable; for some persons they seem to wear longer than leather heels.

HONEY CAKES USEFUL FOR CHANGE IN DIET

One Especially Adapted for Use in Emergencies.

Will Become Hard on Cooling and Will Not Be Soft Enough for Use for Several Weeks—It Will Keep for Long Period.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Honey can be used to advantage in making cakes and cookies and make a pleasing change in the diet. Here is a cake recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture, especially adapted to keeping on hand for emergencies.

Hard Honey Cake.

¾ cupful honey	½ teaspoonful cloves
½ cupful sugar	Speck white pepper
2½ cupfuls flour	Speck salt
1 egg	½ teaspoonful soda
¼ teaspoonful ginger	1 tablespoonful water
1 teaspoonful cinnamon	2 ounces blanched almonds chopped fine
½ teaspoonful ground cardamom seed

Sift together the flour and spices, dissolve the soda in the water, beat the egg and combine all the ingredients. Beat or knead the mixture thoroughly. Cook a small sample. If it does not rise sufficiently, add a little more soda and honey; if it falls, add a little more flour. Roll out the dough to the thickness of about three-fourths of an inch and bake in a hot oven. When the cake is done, glaze it with a thick sirup of sugar and water and allow it to dry in a slow oven or in some other warm place. While it is still warm, cut it into long strips. Or it may be left in one large cake, to be cut into very thin slices when served. This cake will become very hard on cooling and will not be soft enough to eat for several weeks, but will keep in good condition for an indefinite length of time.

The children will like these cookies:

Honey Bran Cookies.

3 cupfuls bran	¼ teaspoonful ginger
½ cupful sugar	½ cupful honey
¼ to ½ teaspoonful soda	½ cupful milk
¼ teaspoonful cinnamon	½ cupful melted butter

Mix the sugar, cinnamon, ginger and soda with the bran and add the other ingredients. Drop from a spoon upon a buttered pan and bake about fifteen minutes.

Household Questions

Iron colored things while still damp.

To clean stains from steel knives rub them with powdered bath brick.

Worn tablecloths may be cut into squares and hemstitched to make extra napkins.

Oilcloth aprons are work savers. They are wiped with a damp cloth when soiled in place of being sent to the laundry.

Zinc utensils can be cleaned with soda water, afterwards polishing them with a cloth dipped in turpentine and bath brick.

Eggs covered with boiling water and allowed to stand seven minutes are more nourishing and easier digested than eggs placed in boiling water and allowed to boil furiously for three and a half minutes.

THE WEYMOUTH HOSPITAL

By Samuel French
Recently one of the inmates

A building large, a building grand,
A wealth of care, a welcome hand,
To lead you in, without a doubt,
To leave your ills, break, pain or gout.

The doctors there are all our own,
The nurses, just like honey in the comb,
And chefs, 'tis said they have the knack
Of making meat from what is fat.

One ward for men, for women five or six,
With white spring beds and four inch feather ticks
There is no choice, they look so nice
Save some of the company and part of the price.

Bones broken, a cut, a fever or ache
Are a few of the troubles they gladly take,
The stork, too, seems to like it well,
For he visits very often, his story to tell.

But then there are facts, we must admit,
It is far better for us, not to be sick,
For many are the treats we do not expect,
Like the alchohol rub on your back and neck.

And lots of other familiar thrills,
Such as those you get from C. C. pills,
But there is no use fussin', we confess,
For it's merely a part of the old process.

This lying so still on a bed of ease,
Makes one weary in mind and weak in the knees.
But folks, what can we ever hope to expect,
By living so careless, we must meet a wreck.

So take it from me—from one who knows,
Keep close to the home fire, away from the shows;
Then cheerily will you wake every morn,
Full o' pep, for the life of another day's song.

But many a time, there will be a slip 'long the line,
When you will need the best o' care you can find.
Then sit down a bit and plan for a rental
With the cheerful lot, at our Weymouth Hospital.

Code of Ethics of Massachusetts Press

The Massachusetts Press Association at its meeting February 12, 1923, adopted the following Code of Ethics:

WHEREAS newspaper space is a commodity on which publishers of newspapers and their employees depend for their livelihood and

WHEREAS the scope and uses of newspaper publicity have been misunderstood and abused to the extent that there has been a wide public misconception of the limits to which a newspaper is justified in extending free use of its space, and in order to effect a code of advertising and publicity ethics which shall be just and equitable to publishers and to the public, the Massachusetts Press Association has adopted the following for the guidance of its members.

IN GENERAL: Inasmuch as the preparation and distribution of free publicity in plate or other form for government, charitable, business, or public interests, entails services for which others are compensated, it is agreed that such material shall be regarded as unpublishable within the meaning of this code, unless appearing as advertising matter and paid for at card rates. It shall not be considered in accordance with the principles of this Association and our profession to allow to one customer privileges or rates for advertising not granted another customer for like service, nor shall cut rates or agency commission be allowed direct advertisers. In conformity with the Standard of Merchandising Practices for newspapers, adopted in 1921 by the National Association of Newspaper Executives, requests for services that are clearly not within the province of newspapers shall be declined. Such requests including selling goods or other canvassing, or payment of bills for printing and postage of letters, broadsides (so-called) or the preparation of same within the publisher's own office at no expense to the advertiser or his agent.

No special services entailing the furnishing of lists of dealers in certain lines of trade, surveys, etc., shall be furnished without the identity of the prospective advertiser being made known and a bona fide advertising contract being furnished by said advertiser or his agent, but this shall not be construed to operate against the furnishing to recognized agencies or their clients general information concerning the field in which the publisher does business.

And for the further guidance and assistance of the members of this Association, the various classifications of publicity are hereby defined as follows:

POLITICAL: Announcements of statements advocating election or defeat of a candidate for public office shall be deemed advertising matter, charged at political advertising rates and labelled "political advertising" in accordance with the statutes of Massachusetts. Statements made by candidates at political rallies and which would form part of the report of same which said newspaper would publish in the course of its service to the readers of its territory shall not be deemed to be in this classification.

AUTOMOBILE: Inasmuch as it is not the custom to extend free privileges of news columns to other lines of business without suitable compensation, it is hereby deemed unethical to grant to the automobile industry or its representatives any of the common forms of "automobile publicity" but this section shall not be construed to prohibit news concerning the progress of a trade or the use of an article of legitimate merit nor construed to influence a publisher against the local dealer or his business.

CHURCH AND RELIGIOUS PUBLICITY: The Massachusetts Press Association recognizes the fact that churches of all denominations, and religious or semi-religious and social organizations connected therewith, have a necessary and distinct function in every community. The Massachusetts Press Association also accords its own calling a like recognition in the progress of the community and in view of the fact that said religious institutions do now purchase and rightly so, various commodities entering into the successful prosecution of their endeavors, it is deemed just that the newspaper of a community should be recompensed, at least to a nominal extent, for the expense involved in the publication of Sunday church announcements and similar publicity. It is the sense of this meeting that the common or calendar form of weekly church announcements shall be charged for at a flat rate per announcement or at a special charity rate per line, but that the courtesies of such departments or other departments of the publication may be extended without charge if the church or religious organization uses display advertising space of equal or greater value. This section shall not be construed to apply to news announcements, contributions by pastors or laymen or other material of news value used in connection with, but not a part of, regular calendar or display announcements.

FRATERNAL, CLUBS, AND SOCIETY NOTICES: Inasmuch as the successful progress of much of the social life of any community depends upon the press and inasmuch as advance notices for fraternal and other associations generally saves heavier expenses for printing, postage, and stationery, it is agreed that a nominal sum to be fixed by the publisher shall be charged for all advance notices of all meetings, whether admission is charged or not, and that the customary line or inch rate shall prevail for all advance notices of events to which admission in any form is charged. This section shall not operate to prevent a publisher from granting a complimentary news item when display advertising is used, neither shall it operate against a differential in favor of strictly charitable societies or their events.

DRAMATIC: The exchange of space for seats or passes to legitimate or moving picture theatres shall not be considered within the scope of these resolutions, but members are urged in justice to themselves and other advertisers, to limit said notices to the value of courtesies received.

WEYMOUTH, MARCH 2, 1923

ADVERTISING

The advertising of American business in American monthlies and weeklies amounts to about $150,000,000 a year, and newspaper advertising to about $650,000,000 a year, $800,000,000 in all, which is about as high as the bill for America's chewing gum, or lip sticks, rouge, and powder.

The value of what the United States produces amounts to about $40,000,000,000, and this advertising bill of $800,000,000 is therefore only about two percent of the total amount of goods produced. Advertising is an important and essential element in distribation. It is more than that,—it is the self-expression of business enterprise, and keeps it wholesome.

Russia tried the abandonment of advertising, and found that advertising and business both departed together.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Bergeron of 171 Commercial street, East Braintree, celebrated their golden wedding on Saturday, Feb. 24. They were married fifty years ago in Weymouth by Fr. Smith and have resided in Weymouth and East Braintree ever since and are a well known couple.

Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bergeron, five of whom survive. At the reception guests were present from Boston, Quincy, the Weymouths, and the Braintrees. The five children who attended were Mrs. Albert A. McCarthy and husband of Bellevue road, East Braintree, Mrs. Leo B. Conroy and husband of East Weymouth, Mrs. Carl W. Ashton and husband of East Braintree, and Miss Mae L. Bergeron of East Braintree. Among the eleven grandchildren who attended were Albert L. Grace Rose, and M. Winifred McCarthy, and Marie E. Conroy.

The happy couple received beautiful gifts and many gold pieces.

A fine collation was served and the house was prettily decorated with cut flowers.

A splendid musical program, consisting of violin solos by Mrs. Carl Ashton and Miss Grace McCarthy, piano solos by Mrs. Albert McCarthy and little daughter Winifred and vocal and piano selections beautifully rendered by Miss Celina Belliveau of Quincy.

The principal feature of the program was the playing on the violin of Irish jigs and reels by Napoleon Bergeron, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. McCarthy, and Joseph Rousseau of East Weymouth, accompanied by Mrs. Rousseau. They received an ovation and were recalled many times.

After a very happy afternoon and evening the friends and relatives separated, showering the happy couple with best wishes for many more years together, with continued good health and happiness.

FREDERICKSON—HOLLIS

Guests from Newton, Allston, Waltham and the Weymouths attended on Saturday the wedding of Miss Vera Loureen Hollis and Clas Arvid Frederickson, which took place at home of bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hollis, 18 Millett avenue, South Weymouth. The rooms were beautifully decorated with roses and streamers and the couple stood beneath an arch of white roses and wedding bells. Rev. L. Weston Atwood of Abington performed the ceremony using the double ring service. Miss Enid Holbrook, pianist, and Miss Grace Baker, violinist, played the wedding march. Miss Ingeborg Ferguson of Waltham bridesmaid and Arthur Ferguson of South Weymouth best man. The ushers were Stanley and Atwood Blanchard.

The bride was gowned in white silk canton crepe trimmed with beads and lace. The tulle veil was held in place by a wreath of pearls, and she carried a bouquet of bride roses. The gown of the bridesmaid was blue canton crepe with silver trimmings and she carried sweet peas.

A reception was held in the evening from 8 until 11 o'clock, the couple being assisted in receiving by the bridesmaid, best man and the bride's parents. There was music by the Weymouth Ladies orchestra and Arthur Whitcomb, cornetist, of Newton. Refreshments were served They received many beautiful gifts of silver, cut-glass, china, and linen.

On their return from a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Frederickson will reside at 18 Millett avenue.

Solomon's Springs Today.

Two of the leading hotels of Jerusalem, whose proprietor recently came to New York on a visit, are supplied with water from King Solomon's pools. These famous pools watered the gardens of the ancient Hebrew ruler 3,000 years ago.

How Freezing Affects Canned Stuff.

The United States bureau of chemistry says "Most canned goods will stand a little freezing without appreciable change. Repeated freezing and thawing causes the foods to become flabby and gives a flat taste. Such a change, however, does not alter the wholesomeness or food value of the material, but it may change the texture, appearance and palatability. The actual damage varies with the different kinds of canned foods ang in general is somewhat similar to damage done by freezing the same food in the fresh condition."

The Shabby Mind.

Haven't you been in houses where lovely flowers stood all about and everything was spick and span, but the library was strewn with papers and magazines of the trashiest description? Is it a good thing to have the furniture of the house the best that money can buy, and to furnish the mind with silly, and disreputable things in the way of reading? Better by far have a shabby house than a shabby mind.—Milwaukee Journal.

The Sufferers.

Lois was the daughter of a singer. When she played with other children she wanted to play the things she knew most about. One day she said to a little friend, "Let's have a concert. I'll be the singer and you be the audience." "What is audience?" "Why, don't you know? They are the ones who can't do it," said Lois.

The Essential.

Yea, and if you be sure that your part be good, and another hold the contrary, yet if it be a thing that maketh no matter, you will laugh and let it pass, and refer the thing to other men, and stick you stiff and stubbornly in earnest and necessary things.—William Tyndale. Sixteenth Century.

A Hard Swim.

From a Fijian boat capsized by a squall five men were drowned, but a woman, accustomed to swim from childhood, reached the shore after swimming for 13 hours. When she reached the coral reef her hair caught in its projections, but she dragged herself to safety.

Oceanic Statistics.

Oceans occupy three-fourths of the earth's surface. At the depth of 3,500 feet waves are not felt. The temperature is the same, varying only a trifle from the poles to the burning sun of the equator. A mile down the water has a pressure of a ton on every square inch.

Ancient Custom.

The salutation of English-speaking races of shaking hands is very ancient. It is mentioned by Homer, Aristophanes and by Virgil. As the confirmation of a bargain it appears in II Kings 10:15. Today it is confined to western races.

Call for Assistance.

Bobbie, amusing himself on the sidewalk in front of the house, stopped Uncle Albert, who was on his way downtown to attend the movies. "Uncle Albert, come in and help me ask mother to coax me to go!" he cried.

AUTO TOURS BIG HELP TO FARMER

Plan Makes It Possible for Agriculturist to Attend Ten Demonstrations in Day.

STOP ACCORDING TO SCHEDULE

Ten to Fifteen Machines Carry Interested Observers to Different Farms to Scrutinize Some Particular Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The automobile tour is the application of quick transportation to the field meeting idea, making it possible for farmers to attend what really amounts to ten meetings in a single day. The usual automobile trip of this sort consists of 10 or 15 machines carrying 40 or 50 interested observers, and stopping according to a previously arranged schedule at different farm demonstrations along the route, such as a particular kind of crop, the results of certain fertilization or cultivation methods, or the effect of orchard management in accordance with extension teaching under the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural college.

Many Trips in One Day.

One Wisconsin trip recently carried the observing party to see 14 demonstrations in the county in a day. Several farmers had 10 acres of alfalfa and 15 acres of soy beans. A fruit tour in Michigan covered parts of three counties. A very fine New England trip was conducted by the Connecticut Poultry association, a fleet of 50 automobiles taking part in the tour. Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Connecticut were visited to examine demonstrations in poultry farming. This tour was expertly handled by having the men in the first car wear white caps, one of whom would wait at all forks to guide the other cars, and then take his place in the last car, which started out empty for this purpose. These men also constituted a crew for minor repairs on the road.

Effective Demonstration.

Farmers from 12 counties came by automobile to visit one demonstration in soil building in Anderson county, South Carolina. The reputation of this farm has been growing for over ten years, and the tour was arranged to let others see what had been accomplished. In this case, as in others where the farmer told his own story, the demonstration was very effective.

MUD SHOE AIDS AUTOMOBILE

Invention of Louisiana Man Acts to Cause Driving Wheel to Grip the Ground.

The Scientific American, in illustrating and describing a mud shoe for an automobile, invented by G. O. Baird of Shreveport, La., says:

Mud Shoe on Automobile.

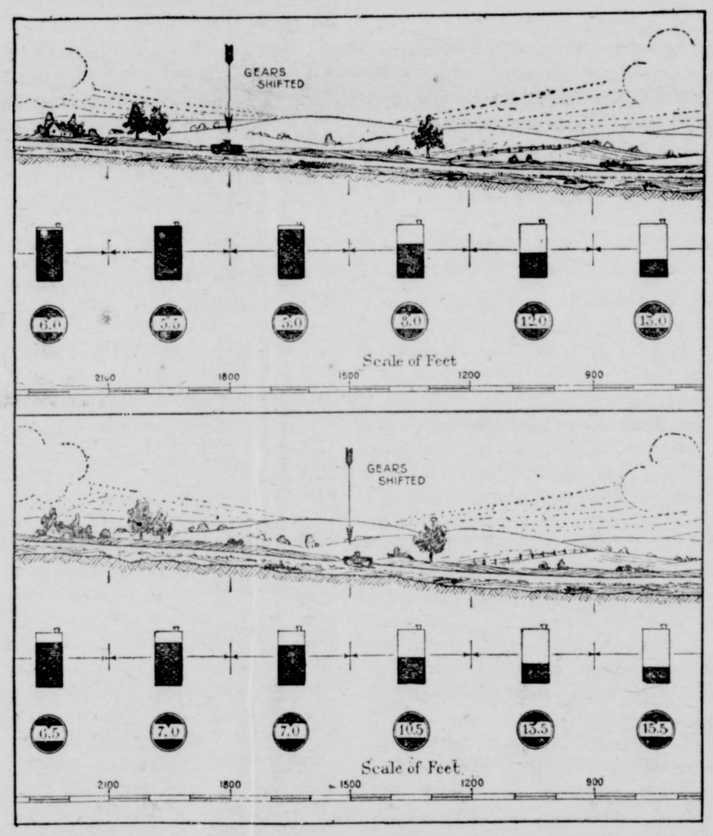
of an automobile to grip the ground and to form a vertical lift which increases during rotation. A further object is to provide a mud shoe wherein independent metallic boxes or frames are connected together by articulate means, so that they may conform to the shape of the tire.

The Car Brakes.

The running brakes of a car, otherwise known as the service brakes, are the brakes operated by the foot pedal.

The hand brake lever controls the emergency brake. Both are usually located at the rear wheels and also usually operate on the same brake drums, one set being the inner expanding and the other outer contracting.

GOOD POINTS ON SAVING GASOLINE



(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Here is a suggestion to motorists for the saving of gasoline which may be small in amount for a single day's drive, but which will be worth while in a year's driving. The common practice of waiting to shift gears on hills until the car has almost come to a stop is one of the causes of waste of small amounts of gasoline. According to the bureau of public roads this fact is shown by tests conducted by Prof. T. R. Agg of Iowa State college in cooperation with the bureau under the auspices of the National Research council.

Means Saving of Gas.

The tests were made primarily to discover the effect of various kinds of highway surfacing material and different grades on gasoline consumption. The conclusion with reference to faulty driving is merely incidental to the tests, but it is one which will mean a small saving to every man who drives a car if the advice of the bureau is heeded.

The vehicles used in the tests were equipped with an ingenious device which makes a continuous record of the gasoline consumed as the vehicle moves over the road and another which makes a simultaneous record of the speed at every instant. Suitable sections of road were selected for the tests and the exact grades of these sections were determined. The specially equipped vehicles, both trucks and pleasure cars, were driven over the various sections, taking the records of the gasoline consumption and speed with the two instruments described. Several trips were made over each section, and the rate of fuel consumption and speed for each trip were plotted on a graph with the profile or grade of the road. It is these diagrams that show the effect of delayed shifting of the gears on hills.

Exact instructions for the most economic driving will vary with the make of the car or truck, but the following pointers will be of value to all motorists.

In ascending a hill don't wait until the last second to shift to a lower gear. If you do you will not only lose speed and overtax your engine, but you will also consume more gasoline.

The accompanying chart shows the result of two trips of a one-ton truck. On one trip the gears were shifted at a speed of 10 miles an hour and on the other at a speed of five miles an hour. The rate of gasoline consumption is indicated by the size of the cans which represent the amount of fuel used in each section of 300 feet, and the speedometers show the variation in speed. Together they show very clearly the economy of the early shift.

With more knowledge concerning economic driving a considerable reduction can be made in the 4,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline consumed each year.

WHOLE NUMBER 2990 — FIFTY-SEVENTH YEAR

VOL. LVII. NO. 10 — WEYMOUTH, MASSACHUSETTS, FRIDAY, MARCH 9, 1923 — PRICE SIX CENTS

Most "Important" Business of Selectmen

Next Monday is election day. Two things cannot be too deeply impressed on the minds of Weymouth citizens. Let every voter who possibly can, get out and vote, rain or shine. Let's abolish that big absent vote, and the officials themselves will feel better if it is a large representative vote that elects them. Secondly, choose those men or women who will best serve you and at all times represent you.

Recently the announcement of the coming to this town of a large corporation that will mean an increase in valuation for Precinct One. Have the town officials tried to get together with these people? To help them to like Weymouth and show them we have some good live officials on the job Is it not the opportune time to get together, straighten, widen the existing streets, giving both town and company good rights of way; not for present day alone, but for the future.

A concern in this precinct will soon be moving out; was any effort made to keep this concern, employing Weymouth men, within the town limits?

It cannot be too strongly impressed particularly this year when there is a large field to choose from, to select those persons who will best represent the town.

A recent perusal of the Town Report brings to light this interesting situation, as to one particular industry, and how much the town officers attempt (if they do that) to help, and patronize business concerns here in town. With all things equal, if the work can be done in town, what does it mean? People in town working; with less unemployment. When working less reason for town help during hard times or thru the severe winter we have just had. Money paid out in Weymouth has a far better chance of circulating around than a case where money is sent (a complete check out of town) and no part of it spent here. Busy times, or continued work for business firms in town, all help the town. Employees get money to spend for groceries, provisions, furnishings, and entertainment. It helps Weymouth more than most people if they do not go into the detail more than can be expressed here in words.

The illustration, the Town Meeting of March, 1922, appropriated $4500 for printing and advertising. There are in Weymouth several prosperous printing concerns, at least four large ones, that can turn out as good work as any of the craft in Massachusetts; one in the South part of town, one in Weymouth, and two at East. Of this $4500, a balance unexpended of $617.20 is reported. Now how much was actually spent of the $3882.70? In Weymouth, just $1190.75, less than one-third. How much went out of town $2675.20 (over one-half) Is this fair to the Weymouth industries?

The sum of $1597.60 was sent to Newburyport the sum of $1077.60 to Abington and other sums to Boston and elsewhere

In the Town Report of 1922 the report of the Selectmen occupies about half a page, only 27 lines. About the only business during the year seems to have been the awarding of the contract for the printing of the Town Reports, which occupies 17 of the 27 lines. Not a word about efforts to supply coal, management of Street department, the Fire department, the Police department etc When none of the local printers submit bids for printing there must be something radically wrong or unfair.

Think it over, Mr. Voter, and see if money spent right here in Weymouth will not only help you, but help the town. A prospering industry pays more taxes, hires more help, more people working in Weymouth, less suffering for want of fuel and food, and a greater demand for houses—more work for carpenters You have set the ball rolling. Choose wisely of your representatives next Monday.

TENEMENT HOUSE ACT

Weymouth now has a law that forbids the erection of any building for more than two families. Do you know of any other town with such a law? Yet many families are looking for small apartments and rooms. They cannot find them in Weymouth so they have to go to Braintree or Quincy.

One of the questions on the ballot for the Annual Town Election is—Will the town repeal its acceptance of the Tenement House Act? Vote YES

Weymouth needs two and three family houses and apartments. Repeal the Act and then adopt building laws.

MEETING OF SELECTMEN

The Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Co. has rendered an account for the month of January, claiming a deficit, but none of the board have been able to decipher the statement to ascertain the amount.

Voted that High School bonds to the amount of $250,000 be placed through the First National Bank of Boston.

The board voted to commend the detective work of Officer Thomas A. Boyle in apprehending the persons who burglarized the shoe shop some months ago.

An auctioneer's license was granted to William A. Thurston of Commercial street

Entertainment and other licenses were also granted.

MRS. LYNCH A CANDIDATE

Mrs. Annie S Lynch of Hillcrest road has accepted the nomination of the Non-Partisan party and will be a candidate for Selectman and Overseer of the Poor at the Annual Town Election on Monday. Mrs. Lynch was born in Boston and came here over thirty years ago, and has made her residence in Weymouth ever since. During the war she served efficiently as chairman of the sewing department of the Weymouth branch of the American Red Cross and devoted a great part of her time to the Special Aid work in this town. She is a member of the visiting committee of the Weymouth Hospital and also the Visiting Nurse Association. She is connected with several Boston and local organizations and has proved herself a capable leader of philanthropic work in this town for several years.

—Vote "Yes" on repeal of Tenement House Act. Now building in Weymouth is discouraged.

DRIVING CLUB BANQUET

With guests from the Brockton Driving Club, Dorchester Club, and Metropolitan Club and other friends, the Old Colony Gentlemen's Driving Club held its annual banquet at the Masonic Temple on Wednesday evening. President H. Parker Hobart presided at the banquet and introduced Harry C. Thayer, a charter member, as toastmaster.

Addresses were made by Fred McLaughlin of Brockton, Frank Kenney of the American Horse Breeder, Harry Briggs of the Brockton Fair racing committee, Bradford C. Wilder of Hingham and Henry A. Baker of Rockland, J. J. Wichert, Alonzo Newbert and others There were selections by an orchestra made up of C. Robert Downey, piano; Ralph S. Downey, drums and traps, and Allen Southard, saxophone, with songs, recitations, dancing, and story-telling by Barney Flynn, George Knox, William Barker, and Edward Knox.

As a silent tribute to the memory of J. W. Linnehan, a former president of th club, whose funeral was held in Boston yesterday, the members of the club stood at attention for one minute at the banquet.

Point prizes, racing prizes, and time prizes for the season of 1922 were awarded, some twenty or more and the winners will be reported next week.

The banquet committee included Gordon C. Green, Matthew C. Sproul, H. Parker Hobart, C. H. Roberts, and Rector D. Stetson.

—Reports of both town meetings are reported at length in this issue, also an illustrated sketch of the proposed Almshouse.

—Weymouth High basketball five gave Reading High a close call on Tuesday at the Clapp Memorial building, tieing the score twice, but lost 34 to 31. Keene scored twelve points and Daniels 9.

Town Meeting Business Concluded

The business of the Annual Town Meeting was completed Wednesday evening, although less than a quorum was present. With one or two minor exceptions all the recommendations of the Appropriation Committee prevailed

Art. 59—No action on appropriation for Pond street

Art. 60—No action on drainage of Pond street

Street Loan

Art. 58, T. J. Kelly moved to reconsider adverse vote on bond issue of $20,000 for streets

Melville Cate said if the gentleman insisted on motion, he would raise question of a quorum

Motion was lost

Art. 61, appropriated $800 for Shawmut street

Art. 62, no action on Summer street

Article 63, drain at Wharf street referred

Art. 64, appropriation for Emerson street referred

Art. 65 no action on Pine street

Art. 66, appropriated $1000 for Chard street

Art. 67, appropriated $1000 for Columbian street

Art. 68, no action on street signs

Art. 69, appropriated $300 for erection of signs to memory of World War veterans

Art. 70, appropriated $100 to purchase drainage right on Granite street

Supt. Johnson understood the appropriation for the work in 1922 was not available

Art. 71, appropriated $1000 for Bradley road

Pleasant Street Culvert

Under Art. 72, committee recommended no action on culvert under Pleasant street near Water street

Selectman Humphrey wanted to hear from Supt. of Streets

Supt. Johnson explained, saying in time of flood there was danger if water was held back, and also danger if gates were opened. Town was taking chance. New culvert might cost $5000

Voted no action

Art. 73, appropriated $400 for better drainage of Broad street near F. H. Sylvester's

Henry E. Hanley said proposed playground might be on meadow in rear

Art. 74, appropriated $500 for Summer street

Art. 75, Hawthorne street referred

Art. 76, appropriated $1000 for sidewalk on Main street under betterment act

Art. 77 and 78, no action on Beals street

Art. 79 and 80, no action on street off Lovell street

Private Way off East Street

Under Art. 83 and 84, committee recommended no action

Mr. Peers advocated appropriation of $300 for accepting private way. Believed town should encourage building. Would increase valuation

Representative P. H. Tirrell thought town had been reckless in past in accepting streets not properly built

Mr. Peers said he had expended $766 and was paying more for loans and more for water rates

A motion to indefinitely postpone prevailed

Art. 85 and 86, May terrace indefinitely postponed

Memorial Day

Under Art. 87, $400 was recommended for Memorial Day

Past Commander Bryan Leonard asked if any part of this was to be expended by the American Legion

Town Accountant Dizer said that was wholly up to the Selectmen

Voted $400 as last year

Alewive Fishery

Under Art. 88, $300 was recommended for alewive fishery

Mr. Cunniff thought this fishery should be conserved, that more herring should be put into the pond, or the business would disappear

Moved appropriation of $400, that no fish be sold to non-residents, and that more fish be put into pond. Voted

Art. 89 Selectmen were authorized to commence suits when expedient

Art. 90, Selectmen authorized to sell real estate

Art. 91, appropriated $3365 for miscellaneous expenses

Art. 92, no action on sale of hose up in Ward Three

Community House

Under Art. 93, committee recommended sale of Hose house in Ward Four to Citizens Association for $1

A Ward Four man (Mr. Halloran) told what the association had done to make the building a center for the community, a real community building which all citizens could use, men, women, and children

Representative Tirrell complimented the Association, but thought it well in the sale to include such restrictions as the Town Counsel thought wise, and so moved. Voted

Weymouth Hospital

Under Art. 94 voted no action on appropriation of $500 for free bed at Weymouth Hospital

Building Laws

Under Art. 95, committee recommended no action on building laws

S. A. Perkins spoke in favor of such laws, as did also Mr. Robinson, the latter moved a committee be appointed by the Moderator. Bicknell opposed, as it would only increase rents and people were not willing to pay more. The tenement act had increased all rents $2 to $5 per month.

Mr. Saunders said lack of building laws had increased insurance rates. Any kind of a shack could now be built anywhere, on our beaches or on the main streets. Public garages could also be built anywhere

Voted to appoint committee

Art. 96, no action on collection of garbage

Town Forest

Under Art. 97, committee recommended no action on town forest

Selectman Dasha said forest would be no expense, but might be a good thing. Moved appointment of committee

Colonel Bauer also favored, saying forests would help out in time of coal famines; besides would be a profitable investment to the town

Voted that Moderator appoint a committee

Art. 98, no action on bathing beach at Whitman's pond

Art. 99, no action on sea wall to protect Wessagusset road

Beach Rights

Under Art. 100, committee recom-

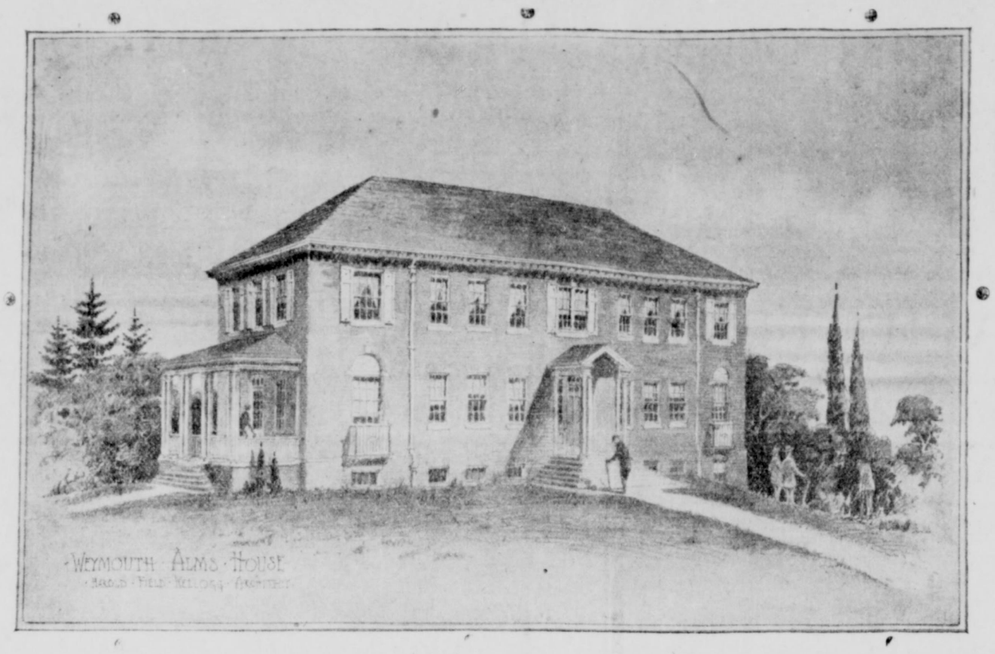
NEW ALMSHOUSE FOR WEYMOUTH WILL HAVE MANY CONVENIENCES



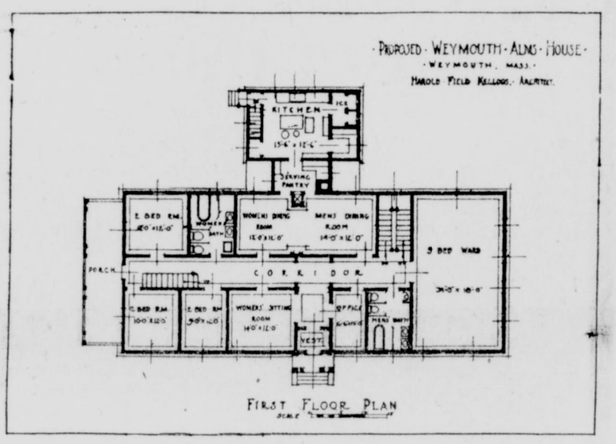
Since the "Town Council" has taken favorable action on an appropriation for a new Almshouse for Weymouth there is increased interest in the kind of a building to be erected, the style, plan, conveniences, etc. These were given in detail in the excellent report of the Committee of Ten, which probably had much to do with the favorable action. Quoting from the report:

"As this Committee consists of the same members as that of the year 1921, we would state that the report of the year may well serve for our report of this year in so far as it goes. We would, therefore, suggest a re-perusal of that report which appears on page 138 of last year's book

"This building will be a modern adoption of the Colonial style. It is two stories and basement in height built of dark red, water-struck brick the boiler room, kitchen and stair-halls being absolutely fire-proof with fire doors, etc., to insure the maximum of protection without the expense of a complete masonry structure.

"In the basement, which will be largely above grade, will be the men's smoking room, laundry, men's bedroom and bath, boilers and storage space. There is no connection between the boiler room and the portion of the house used by the inmates.

"The first floor contains the office a sitting room for women, men and



"As the greater part of the duties with which the Committee was charged were of a technical nature, it was at once apparent that the services of an architect were required Mr. Harold F. Kellogg was employed in an advisory capacity and to prepare plans for the proposed building. The plans have been submitted for the criticism of Mr. Francis Bardwell, State Inspector of Alms Houses and as shown, meet with his entire approval.

"Mr. Kellogg was instructed in the designing of the building, to provide additional space for the possible increase in the number of inmates together with the necessary accommodations for the family of the Superintendent. The building to be located on the present Town Farm on Essex Street, within reasonable distance of the buildings now there.

"We further recommend that the Board of Overseers of the Poor for the year 1923 be appointed as the building committee, and that they be instructed to proceed at once with the erection and completion of such building already designed and laid out as shown on plans furnished by Architect Kellogg and according to his specifications filed with this committee, sketch of the building shown herewith.

"It is recommended that the sum of Forty Thousand ($40,000) Dollars be raised by loan and appropriated for this purpose.

women's dining rooms separated by folding doors, a nine-bed dormitory for men, three double rooms for women, and toilets and baths for both sexes. There is a porch on the women's side which may be glazed and heated.

"The kitchen pantries, etc., are placed on the first floor according to most modern Alms Houses, with serving pantry arranged so that the inmates may do some of the work.

"The second floor contains the superintendent's suite of dining room, sitting room, bedroom, bath, and a kitchenette served from the main kitchen by dumb-waiter. There is also a double room which may be included in the suite. There is also a two-bed contagious room with separate bath and a sterilizing closet so arranged that the dishes used by these inmates are sterilized before they are returned to the kitchen. There are three double rooms for women and three-bed dormitory for men, and one single room for a troublesome inmate. There are toilets for both sexes. A large linen closet is placed so that the Superintendent may check all the linen used

"There is a large storage space in the roof for trunks, etc., and future rooms may be installed there by the addition of dormer windows. The whole is so designed that future wings may be added to each end and at the rear without disturbing the interior arrangements.

"The heating will be of steam, two small boilers being installed instead of one large one, as these inmates require heat for a longer period in the Spring and Fall than the average household, and one small boiler is more economical to run than a larger one.

"Lighting arrangements of gas and electricity and the kitchen fitted with all modern gas cooking equipments will be installed in the building.

"Every comfort has been considered, but without any luxuries, for example; the stairs are made low and easy with safety treads.

"The plans have been approved by the State Department of Public Welfare.

"The Committee fully considered the Joseph Taylor property at South Weymouth, but inasmuch as nothing would be gained decided it would be best to have the building erected on property now owned by the Town of Weymouth.

"The Committee has received an approximate estimate from two very responsible builders that we think undoubtedly either one of which would erect—one at $34,216, and one at $36,000. If blasting is encountered add $5000,—the building within the sum asked for, that would undoubtedly leave a balance sufficient to furnish the same.

Why Fly Can Walk on Ceiling.

The fly has two sharp claws to each foot, by means of which it gets a firm grip of any rough surface it walks over. Besides these claws, it has on each foot a little velvet pad, always kept moist with a special kind of gum which it makes for the purpose. It is by the help of these sticky pads that it can run up a window-pane or take a walk on a ceiling.

Haste Defeats Itself.

In your occupations try to possess your soul in peace. It is not a good plan to be in haste to perform any action that it may be the sooner over. On the contrary, you should accustom yourself to do with tranquility, in order that you may retain the possession of yourself, and of settled peace. —Madame Guyon.

Elusive Clues.

It is owing to successful medical detective work that smallpox and diphtheria have been robbed of much of their terror, the preventive of the one and the antitoxin for the other being the fruit of the following up of certain clues, so elusive as to have escaped observation for generations.

Real Wisdom in Advice.

It was a wise philosopher that invented this saying: "Live as if every moment were your last." If we could heed this advice what a different complexion the world would wear for us. Instantly new values would spring into the mind. The common things of life would take on hues of brilliance.

Satanic Geography.

No person, either historical or legendary, has more places named after him than the devil. The famous explorer, Captain Amundsen, added to the list during his expedition. He gave us "Devil's Glacier" and "Devil's Dancing Room."

Did He Make a Hit?

May—"Really, I don't feel like walking. My feet bother me a good deal." Jack—"Why, you must be nervous!" May—"Nervous! Why?" Jack—"Otherwise you wouldn't let such little things bother you."—Pearson's.

Help That Counts.

He who helps a little child helps humanity with a distinctness, with an immediateness which no other help given to human creatures in any other stage of their human life can possibly give again.—Phillips Brooks.

That's the Point.

Somebody says: "Every cynical bachelor ought to have his nose pulled by the dimpled fingers of a baby." But what good would that do either the bachelor or the baby?—New Orleans States.

Appreciated Earnings.

That which we acquire with the most difficulty we retain the longest; as those who have earned a fortune are usually more careful of it than those who have inherited one.—Colton.

If They Could Be Harnessed.

It has been estimated that there are always 1,000 thunderstorms in progress in different parts of the world, and that their energy is equal to about 100,000,000 horse-power.

Remarkable Vitality of Fleas.

Small water fleas have been known to lie dormant for 40 years in dried mud, without losing their power of actively living when the mud was again moistened.

Combination Needed.

Farming is a business; agriculture is a science. The tiller of the soil who blends these two is the man to whom the future offers success.—McCormick.

Importance of New York City.

With 5 per cent of the popalation of the United States, New York city produces in excess of one-twelfth of all the goods manufactured in the country.

Joy in Forgiveness.

Many persons cut themselves off from one of the highest and greatest joys in life—the joy of magnanimously forgiving an enemy.—Exchange.

Derricks Must Be of Steel.

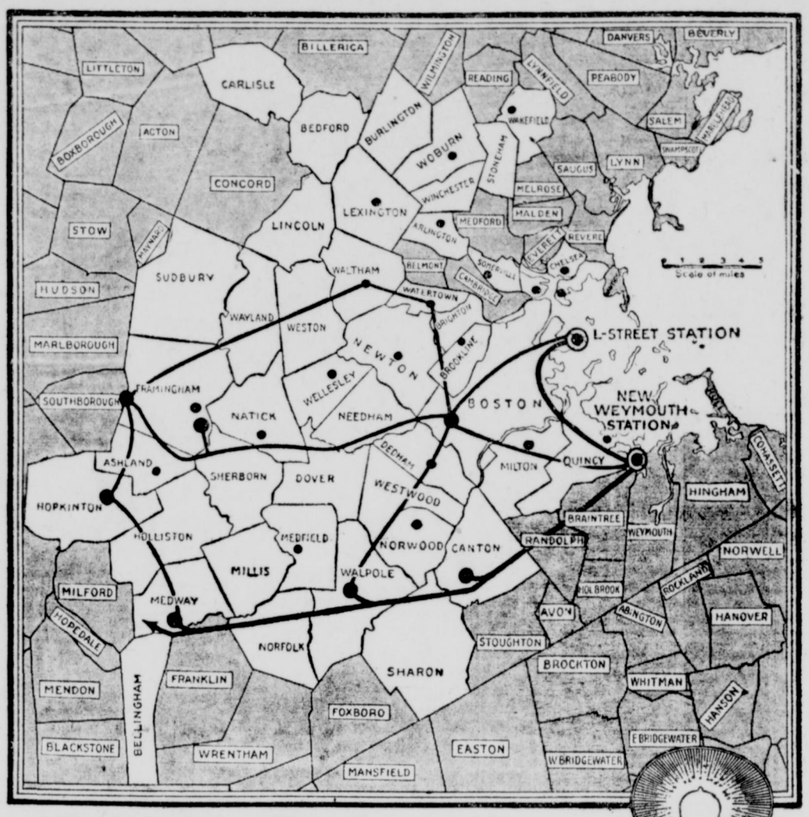
Because of the high winds prevailing in the Alaskan petroleum fields it has been found advisable to build the derricks of steel instead of wood.

Noted Athlete Lived Long.

Henry E. Buermeyer, who lived to be eighty-four years old, held more than 50 medals which he had won in athletic events.

Europe's Growth of Peach Trees.

In England and middle Europe peach trees are usually trained flat against walls or grown in pots under glass.



THE territory served by Boston Edison is shown in white on this map. The sub-stations, shown by black dots—only a few of the 85 in our system—are the distribution points for electric service over the 700 square miles. From the new station at Weymouth main lines will swing south and west and north into the territory now served from L Street at South Boston; Weymouth will be connected with L Street by main lines. The Weymouth station will add mightily to the capacity of Edison service without disturbing existing conditions.

The Friendly Glow

Out of the way— and on the job!

"WHY are you building the new generating station at Weymouth, ten miles from Town?"

This is a query we have often heard since our announcement of the plans for the 400,000 horsepower station which will start rising this spring on the point at Fore River opposite the shipyards.

Because Greater Boston is growing.

Because at any generating station on the coast there must be deep channel for the fleet of ships from Virginia to discharge coal. At Fore River there is deep channel—used for years by the great battleships built across the way—the only available deep water within many miles of Boston.

A great generating station must have elbow room, both for its own growth and for coal storage. There are sixty acres of Boston Edison land at Weymouth—enough room for one of the largest stations in the country and enough to store 300,000 tons of coal.

A new station, serving a vast metropolitan community, must be placed where the electricity can be sent to its territory along the lines of least resistance. Thickly settled districts must not be disturbed. The "arteries" will radiate from the "heart" at Weymouth straight into the territory of present and future growth, avoiding densely settled Boston entirely.

And there must be water, for a central station uses (for condensation) actually more water than all the homes served by the station. Weymouth has an ocean of salt water which costs nothing.

IT is too easy to think of this Greater Boston of ours as the small five-mile circle around the State House, or the smaller hive of activity on the city peninsula itself.

For the two million of us have a lot of varied interests, and a lot of uses for electricity, whether we farm in Millis, or manufacture in Waltham, or commute from Framingham, or spend our summers at Hull. We are all active partners in the supreme effort of making Greater Boston greater.

And wherever we are, we must have more and more electricity to make that effort effective.

Weymouth, being just what it is, and just where it is, will supply us just that.

WEYMOUTH HOSPITAL

The new Weymouth Hospital is a busy place these days and in fact has been busy since its opening less than a year ago. This would seem ample proof that such an institution was needed and wanted by the people. Because of the splendid care, it does render its patients its popularity is fast spreading around Weymouth. At present there is only one vacant bed in the male ward. The nursery is filled up with nine little infants that keep the attendants busy. The staff wishes once more to call attention to the visiting hours which are as follows: 1.00 to 3.30 every afternoon and 7.00 to 8.30 every night.

NORTH WEYMOUTH

Work is well underway at the new Edison plant at Weymouth, the bluff at New Downer Landing being levelled to increase the acreage. The coves and low lands are being filled.

We Can Now Supply You With a Selected Line of

GLIDDEN

PAINTS — VARNISHES — STAINS — ENAMELS

We are proud to announce our new connection with The Glidden Company, nationally known makers of fine paints, varnishes, enamels and varnish stains. ALL AT RIGHT PRICES. Read the following paragraphs, then come in and select the right Glidden Paint or Varnish—don't put it off, put it on.

For Your Home—Endurance Paint

Use Glidden Endurance Paint. All paint looks good when new; but it takes a quality product like Glidden's to give the length of wear that means economy.

For Fine Enamel Work—Ripolin

For either exteriors or interiors use Ripolin, the world's finest enamel paint. Unrivalled for richness of tone, durability, and economy ever since it was first made in Holland 30 years ago.

For Fine Floors—Floorette Varnish

Glidden Floorette Varnish is made expressly for floors and is guaranteed to stand up under constant wear and tear. Holds its lustre, can't chip off, crack or turn white.

For Barns—Glidden Barn Paint

Glidden Barn Red, or Barn Gray looks well, and outwears ordinary barn paint. This long-life quality makes it cheapest in the long run. Also excellent for use on metal roofs, fences, etc.

Come in for Special Combination Color Card

When you see this wonderful new Glidden Combination color card, you'll be glad you came in for it. It covers a representative assortment of the complete Glidden line. It shows the full line of colors of each paint, varnish, enamel and stain referred to in this advertisement. You'll find it a valuable card to have available for reference purposes. You had better drop in early, for owing to the nature of this card, our supply is limited. Read this advertisement carefully, bearing in mind that there's a Glidden Product for every painting need.

For Walls and Ceilings—Flat Wall Finish

For rough or smooth plaster walls and ceilings, wood, cloth, metal or wallboard surfaces, you need Glidden Flat Wall Finish. Washing does not affect its beautiful soft tone. Many shades.

For Porch Floors—Porch and Deck Paint

The paint for your porch floors must be tough and lasting, yet it should be rich in tone. Glidden Porch and Deck Paint means better quality for your money. Try it.

To Make Things New—Genuine Jap-a-lac

It's lots of fun to use Jap-a-lac and you'll find it highly profitable. Easy to put on, never leaves brush marks, dries quickly, wears long. In clear varnish or varnish stains.

For Your Motor Car—Auto Finishes

Use Glidden quality for a rich, lasting finish. So easily applied you can paint your own car, and be driving again in 48 hours. Many shades. A quart is sufficient for average car.

For Implements—Implement and Tractor Paint

Glidden Implement and Tractor Paint pays for itself over and over again. Prevents rust and rot—withstands hardest exposure.

For Your Floors—Inside Floor Paint

For floors that get hard wear, use Glidden Inside Floor Paint. Can be washed and scrubbed repeatedly. Remember that Glidden quality is made expressly for this purpose.

For General Use—JapSpar Varnish

For all exterior varnish purposes use JapSpar, the all-test varnish. Resists the heat of summer and the cold of winter, equally well. Outwears ordinary varnishes.

For Fine Woodwork—Wearette Varnish

Ordinary varnish should never be used on the woodwork of your home. For all interior trim use Wearette Varnish because it's made expressly for the purpose. We guarantee it.

We Recommend Glidden Paints and Varnishes Because WE KNOW They are Fine Products, Fairly Priced

FLEISHMAN'S

PAINTS HARDWARE

Jackson Square, East Weymouth

OUR CONGRESSMAN ACTIVE

Congressman Frothingham got in touch with the National Coal Administrator again last week and found that appeals were bearing fruit. Shipments of anthracite increased in the last few days. Some unauthorized strikes have occurred in the mines recently and consequently have delayed shipments. The largest of these strikes cut off 300 cars a day. This is now settled and miners have gone back to work.

He says that the railroads—the New Haven and Boston & Maine—are making special efforts to increase the transportation of coal and though actual priority of coal to New England was refused by the Interstate Commerce Commission it is in fact being given by the railroads as far as is possible.

Congressman Frothingham appealed to the Interstate Commerce Commission to get busy with the New Haven road, where the delay in passenger trains and in delivering coal is a disgrace. Statistics of the Commission show the following number of locomotives inspected and defects found on this and other New England roads during the period July 1, 1922, to January 31, 1923, both inclusive:

	Inspected	Defects Found
N. Y., N. H. & H.	716	1996
Boston & Albany	278	197
Boston & Main	1059	1944
Central Vermont	42	78

Congressman Frothingham has been in touch with the Navy Department, and recently vessels were sent to break out the ice in Quincy harbor. The work was done successfully and barges enabled to land at the wharves with coal for the people.

REAL ESTATE SALES

The following Weymouth transfers of real estate were recorded in the Norfolk registry last week:

Bertina E. S. Burrell ex to Marion E. Sabens et al, Saunders street

Mary B. Linfield to Bertha N Druley, off Union street

J. Frank Nolan to Mary O. Nolan, Main street, Park avenue

Nelson W. Nye to Olive A. Rollins, Greenvale avenue

Alfred Swinnerton to Arthur W. McGuire, Samoset street, Wampum street

Levi F. Walsh to John Weinheimer et ux, Park street

Weymouth & Braintree Realty Co. to Lillian H. Haun, Westminster road

William H. Wye to George E. Mitchell, Wessagusset road

Comes Natural to Them.

Getting into trouble is generally expensive, but some people must have expensive things.

SERVICE STAR LEGION

Old Colony chapter, Service Star Legion, will meet with Mrs. Edith Morrison, Morrison lane, Braintree Monday, March 12, at 2.00 P. M.

The chapter is out for a membership drive and has a word to say to the mother, wife, sister, and daughter of every ex-service man. The small dues of $1.25 per year afford an excellent opportunity to share in a noble work even though it is impossible to attend all meetings or personally participate in the various activities.

Although the Service Star Legion Inc., is not widely known in the East, it is strong and flourishing in the Middle West and South. It is the oldest and largest independent organization of women connected with the World War. It was formed by the coming together of eleven large groups of women organized during the war in different parts of the country, under various names such as "War Mothers", "Daughters of the Nation", "Daughters of Liberty" etc.

The name "Service Star Legion" was chosen in memory of the blue star that shone in so many windows during the dark days of the war, and because the star is the symbol of the five strong points or principles on which the organization is based, namely,—Sisterhood, Patriotic Education, Relief, Remembrance, and Vigilance. The Service Star Legion is non-secretarian and non-political.

The American Legion Auxiliary is to be commended on its wholehearted relief work among needy ex-service men and their families, but there is plenty of work for all, and the S. S. L. is open to many who are not eligible to membership in the American Legion Auxiliary. The condition of the disabled veterans is worse now than at the signing of the Armistice. Many of our hospitals are filled with maimed, tubercular, and mentally deranged ex-service soldiers and sailors in the flower of early manhood, and new cases are coming in almost daily. Picture your soldier or sailor boy among them. Would you not want him to have all the comforts and encouragement possible? Then join the Old Colony chapter, Service Star Legion, and help to finance the cause of the these brave boys who sacrificed mind and body that we might remain free citizens of a free country.

Mankind Never Satisfied.

You may as soon fill a bag with wisdom, a chest with virtue, or a circle with a triangle, as the heart of a man with anything here below. A man may have enough of the world to sink him, but he can never have enough to satisfy him.—T. Brooks.

"BUY SOME WHISKY?"

John Bartley, noted criminal investigator, recently returned from Secret Service work during the war, is asked by the governor of New York to investigate a mysterious attempted robbery of the Robert Slyke home at Circle Lake, near Saratoga, and to establish the guilt or innocence of two men in the penitentiary for the crime. A miscarriage of justice is suspected. Bartley finds in it the restaging of an old case, is interested and agrees to solve the mystery. With his friend, Pelt, a newspaper man, Bartley goes to Circle Lake, the pair becoming the guests of Bob Currie, an old friend. The three visit the Slyke home. Slyke resents Bartley's coming, saying he is satisfied the two men in prison are guilty. Bartley is not. Next morning Slyke is found dead in bed, apparently having shot himself. Miss Potter, the dead man's sister-in-law, the village police chief, Roche, and the family physician, Doctor King, all agree Slyke killed himself, but Bartley insists he was murdered. Investigating, Bartley finds evidence that Slyke, after a card party he had given, was shot on the tower of the house, undressed, and placed in bed. During his absence from the room someone removes the revolver from Slyke's hand. A boy working in the garage asserts he heard a shot during the night, apparently "in the air," of course really on the tower. Ruth, Slyke's stepdaughter, still further complicates the case.

Her story, of course, would have to be checked up, but her actions were frank and her manner seemed truthful. She could evidently throw no light on our problem. She waited quietly for Bartley's next question, which, when it came, was a surprise even to me.

"Did you see the dog when you came in?"

"Oh, yes! He came to the door and walked to the foot of the stairs with me."

Bartley turned to the butler and asked, "Was the dog in this room when you came down this morning?"

"Yes, sir. He always sleeps here."

There was a long silence after this, broken at last by the girl asking if she might return to her room. Bartley smiled and assented. I could see that he was not satisfied at the way things had gone. His lips were shut tight and his eyes wandered restlessly around the room. He glanced moodily down at the woman in the chair, who had recovered her composure to some extent, and was now watching with keen eyes everything that was going on.

After a while, Bartley turned to the butler. "Did you see anyone near the door of Mr. Slyke's room while we were in there?"

"Why, I don't know, sir. I did see the chauffeur coming down the stairs. But I don't know if he had been up to the room."

"If you can find him, send him to me at once," Bartley commanded.

The butler took this order as a dismissal and left the room. Bartley turned to Miss Potter and asked her if she had returned to Slyke's room after she left us there. She shook her head. There was again a long silence. At length Bartley broke it by telling her that she need not remain any longer. She rose to her feet and started toward the stairway. Half way across the floor she paused, and said in a voice that hesitated more than once, "You asked me, Mr. Bartley, if, when I found Mr. Slyke was dead, I touched the bedclothes."

Bartley turned quickly. The tone of his voice as he answered her question showed that he knew something important was coming.

"Yes, I did."

With her hands playing nervously with a fold of her dress and her eyes on the floor, she continued slowly, "I did not touch the bedclothes, but—I—I—"

"Yes," encouraged Bartley. "You did what?"

She seemed to find it difficult to answer. "When—I went in that room—and found him dead"—her voice was very low—"he looked—I mean, his eyes so frightened me that I—" she paused again—"I closed them."

For a while we looked at her, too surprised to speak. Bartley's brows knit and a curious look came into his face.

All at once I realized the full meaning of her words. If she had closed Slyke's eyes, then it would be hard for Bartley to prove that he had been murdered. He had claimed that, if Slyke had committed suicide, his eyes would have been open. He had gone even further and said it was the murderer who had closed his eyes, thinking that was the way they should look in death. But now Miss Potter had told us that it was she who had closed them. Slyke might, after all, have killed himself! Would Bartley still be able to prove that he had been murdered?

Once more Miss Potter lapsed into her old sullen mood and refused to add anything further. Bartley plied her with questions, but in the end she had added nothing to her first statement that Slyke's staring eyes had frightened her and she had closed them. She insisted, however, that she had not touched the bedclothes, that they had been close around his neck and up over his chin when she found him.

When we were alone, Roche turned to Bartley and said, "There goes your theory of murder. You can't prove now that he did not kill himself."

Bartley listened to Roche with the air of a man whose thoughts were far away. When he paused, he did not reply at once.

"Roche," he said at length, "I am sure it was murder, not suicide. It's one of the most mysterious crimes I have ever heard of. We are up in the air. We know of no reason either for Slyke's having been murdered or for his having killed himself. There is a great deal yet to do. You had better get a couple of your men up here as quickly as possible and search the house."

Roche went out to telephone for his men and Bartley walked over to the window. I followed him and we stood looking out at the view.

He placed his hand on my shoulder. "Pelt, you have a good deal of work to do today. I want you to find out all you can about the men who were at the poker game. Then you must see that man Lawrence and get his story. Find out why he stayed behind the others. If you have any time left, you had better look up in the files of the local newspapers the burglary of last year."

"You don't think that had anything to do with the murder, do you?" I asked in wonder.

He gave me one of those smiles of his that tell nothing, and drawled out, "I am not saying, but you know we came up here on a burglary case, not a murder mystery."

He did not give me time to wonder what his reply meant, but continued, "Better go to Currie's and get the car. Here are the names of the men you are to see."

As I was leaving the room he waved his hand and called after me with a smile, "Good luck! See you tonight."

CHAPTER V

In Which I Hear More About the Burglary.

Currie was sitting on the piazza when I reached the house. He got up hurriedly and advanced to me.

"Where in the devil is John?" he asked.

He apparently knew that we had called over to Slyke's, but he did not know the reason. I answered, "He is over at Slyke's; Slyke was murdered last night."

"I Did Not Touch the Bedclothes, but I—I—"

His large red face grew purple. "Murdered?" he gasped. "My G—, who did it?"

I told him all I knew. He listened with intense interest and growing horror. When I ended by saying that Bartley would be back to dinner, he shrugged his shoulders.

"There goes my visit with John. I have been after him for a long time to come up here; and when he does, he finds a murder right on my doorstep." He paused, then added, "I wonder who killed Slyke. I never liked him very much, but I know of no reason for his being murdered."

I went to the garage and backed out his little runabout, and started for town. In front of the post office I stopped the car and got out. I knew that if the postmaster would give me the addresses of the men who had been at the card party, it would save me a lot of time. Upon explaining my errand, he gave me the desired information. One of the first names on the list was that of the editor of the local newspaper, and it suggested an idea to me.

Arriving at the newspaper office, I found the man I sought just going out to luncheon. When he learned that I had come to ask him some questions about Slyke, he invited me to lunch with him.

We went to his club, and in the small dining room found a table to ourselves. When I mentioned the list of names, he told me all that he knew. A few men, mostly old friends, met every week or so to play poker. They went to Slyke's usually because, as he put it, "Slyke had more booze than the rest of us." The games were friendly affairs and the stakes low. When I asked him if Mr. Lawrence stayed after the others had gone home, he replied that he had and that he thought Slyke himself had asked him to remain, though he did not know for what reason. Suddenly it occurred to him that what he had said might place Lawrence in an awkward position.

"Jim Lawrence," he said, "could have had nothing to do with Slyke's death. Lawrence is so darned nervous himself that he would never have dared to fire a gun. It's too bad he stayed behind last night."

As I wanted to interview Lawrence next, the editor accompanied me in his car to point out the building where Lawrence had his office. Here he left me, saying that if I would call at his office in about an hour, he would have the back files of the newspaper I wanted ready for me."

Lawrence's office was on the second floor of a brick building, and his door bore the sign "Law Office." At a desk, reading a newspaper, was a man of about forty-five, with a very thin, nervous face. He threw down the paper and eyed me questioningly. When I told him that Slyke was dead and that I had come to learn about his interview with him, he moved uneasily in his chair; but when I added that we believed that Slyke had been murdered, and that as far as we knew he was the last person to see him alive, he was absolutely unnerved. I could see that, until I mentioned the word murder, he had thought that Slyke had committed suicide. For a second I wondered if, after all, he had not had something to do with the crime.

Taking a chair by his side, I said, "You were the last person, so far as we can discover, to see Mr. Slyke alive. We know that you stayed for a few moments only, and that he himself asked that you remain. As you were the last one to see him alive, we are much interested in what you can tell us of how he acted. Did he seem nervous or upset?"

My question did not make the man by my side any easier. He answered quickly, in a high-pitched voice that broke several times, "I did stay; but the other men will tell you that I was going home with them until Slyke asked me to wait a moment. I had no idea beforehand what he wanted. I wish to God I had gone with the rest. Some d—d fool will say I killed him."

It was just what some people would say, when it became public that the butler had not heard Slyke's voice again after Lawrence's departure. But for myself, I could not connect guilt with the thin, nervous figure beside me.

"What did he want to see you about?" I asked.

Lawrence flushed, then half grinned, as he answered, "He asked me if I wanted to buy some Scotch whisky."

"Buy some whisky?" I repeated in astonishment.

"Yes, it seems foolish, doesn't it? But that's what he wanted to see me about. He said he had lots more than he needed, and that he could let me have five cases."

I said nothing, trying to digest this astonishing information. I had been wondering what it was that Slyke wanted to see Lawrence about, and had even made several guesses; but never in my wildest imagination had I supposed that it was about whisky. I could understand why Lawrence should want to buy it, for good whisky is hard to get; but why Slyke, presumed to be a rich man, should want to sell five cases was beyond my comprehension.

He saw my surprise and said, "It does seem strange. I was surprised myself. I had heard that he had a lot of booze; but we were not the closest of friends, and nowadays a man lets his liquor go only to his pals. The man who will let you have five cases of whisky is a pretty good friend."

I smiled at his answer. He was right. People with imported liquor were not giving it away. And what was more, few men of Slyke's position were selling their private stock.

"He told me," Lawrence continued, "that he had a great deal more than he could use, and that he would sell me some for one hundred dollars a case. That's pretty cheap for imported stuff."

"And then you left him?" I asked.

"Yes. He told me he was not going to bed yet. Said someone was coming in about half-past one."

Here was a new piece of evidence. Slyke, then, had not gone to bed after Lawrence left, but had waited up for some other visitor. It was curious, to say the least. One o'clock in the morning is not a usual hour for receiving callers.

"Have you any idea who it was?"

"No," he said, shaking his head, "I haven't the least idea. As I was starting to go he said, 'Stay awhile. I am expecting a man about two, and have to wait up for him.' That's all I know about it."

It was not much of a clue, still it was better than nothing. It did establish the fact that there had been someone else with Slyke that night. That is, if he were telling the truth. The burning question in my mind was, who was that second person? Was he the one who had killed Slyke? The odds seemed to favor it. Lawrence had little further information to give me. He said that Slyke had not been especially nervous, nor had he acted like a man afraid of anything.

I rose to go, but paused at a new thought.

"Oh, Mr. Lawrence, did Slyke give you a drink?"

He had accompanied me to the door, and paused, one hand on the knob. "Yes, he did, up in the room over his sleeping room. He got out a bottle and two glasses and we had a drink."

"That's enough to prove those men had nothing to do with the burglary."

AMERICAN LEGION

Post 79, American Legion, held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening in G. A. R. hall and believe me Al it was some meeting. In fact it lasted so long that the commander and several of the North Weymouth members did not get home until midnight.

Comrade Ventre had the Post's Band there and rendered several snappy selections before the meeting and it is the opinion of every member that have heard the band lately that they are "Day by day in every way getting better and better"

In fact Post 79, American Legion Band, are going to give a concert at Shepherd's store in Boston some night within two weeks so listen in all you radio fans of Weymouth and hear Comrade Ventre and his staff of musicians.

March 19 is the date of the Posts social. Senator Shuebruk will be the speaker for the evening and the Post assures every member a mighty interesting talk. Bill Burton, the ventrilloquist, for several years on the Keith circuit, will entertain us with his baby doll, and she can talk some, believe me.

The committee has assured us plenty of smokes and eats, so be sure and be there promptly at 7.30 Monday evening, March 19, at G. A. R. hall and with some ex-service man to come with you and enjoy the evening entertainment.

—Because of the spring thaw Watson's hill on Quincy avenue is in bad condition and must be resurfaced.

Street Appropriation Increased by Council

A town that can afford $300,000 for an addition to its High School building, may well afford to care properly for its poor—that was the argument which secured a $40,000 appropriation at the Annual Town Meeting on Monday evening for a new Almshouse to be erected on the old site on Essex street.

The report of the Appropriation Committee was adverse, but most of the argument was for the appropriation, and it received a decisive two thirds vote,—108 to 25.

Most of the other recommendations of the Appropriation Committee prevailed, but Supt. Johnson secured a larger sum for general highways, and almost a bond issue for continuance of permanent rebuilding.

Only 58 of the 100 articles received consideration when an adjournment was made until Wednesday evening. Detailed report under each article of the warrant is given below. Hon. George L. Barnes was Moderator and the Town Clerk read the warrant.

Article 1

Under Article 1, to choose minor town officers, a motion was made for the appointment of a committee to report.

T. P. Vaille moved to amend to include Appropriation Committee and also Electric Light Committee.

Moderator ruled first part of amendment out of order, as by-laws provided that Appropriation Committee should be appointed by Moderator.

Mr. Vaille appealed, claiming that situation was different under Act of 1921 than under the old by-laws. It was not right that the Moderator should appoint fifteen not Town Meeting Members, who should thereby become members and entitled to all the privileges.

The Moderator was, however, sustained.

Mr. Vaille further protested and suggested that the Selectmen obtain a court decision. If they did not do this he threatened to tie up all the town meeting business.

A committee of six was appointed and later reported a list for public weighers, surveyors of wood, bark and lumber; fence viewers, field drivers, planning board, and Electric Light Committee, which was accepted.

Article 2

To hear reports of town officers

Preston Lewis asked why salaries of school teachers were not printed in Town Report as formerly.

Supt. Pearson said that was in the hands of the Town Accountant

Mr. Dizer said it was to save space

Mr. Lewis further objected

Report of School Committee accepted, also reports of other town officials and boards.

Mr. Vaille said the reports had been accepted, but not adopted. An opportunity should be given to discuss.

Moderator ruled debate was in order on acceptance.

Mr. Lewis said town had three or four tax collectors. Wanted to know which one had been accepted.

Town Counsel Holbrook explained.

Laying Out Streets

The Appropriation Committee reported as follows:

"We believe the town should take some action in relation to the matter of laying out and acceptance of streets. It does not seem to us that the practice of asking the town to accept a layout of a street, and at the same time and in the same warrant ask the town to spend substantial sums of money to build, rebuild, or repair the very same street is the right one. For example, there are at least five instances in the present warrant where that very thing occurs. In one of our neighboring towns, before the town will consider the laying out and acceptance of a street, it is necessary that it be properly surfaced, macadamized, or paved, as the case may be, with paved gutters, sidewalks, curbing, poles, wires, etc. so that the town is at no expense in connection with the street for years. These conditions would, of course, be too severe for Weymouth, but we do believe and recommend that some reasonable rules, regulations, or conditions should be made up and adopted by the town as an amendment to its by-laws, and for that purpose recommend that the Town Counsel, Superintendent of Streets, and Chairman of Selectmen be appointed a committee to further consider this matter, and report at some future meeting, but not later than the next annual meeting; their report to include such amendment to the by-laws as they deem proper".

Report adopted and committee appointed.

Town Treasurer authorized to borrow in anticipation of revenue.

Art. 5, Voted, $14,000 for reserve fund.

Art. 6, Voted, banks as legal depositories

Art. 7, Voted, $7195.07 under protest for maintenance of Norfolk County Hospital

Art. 8, Voted, $740.03 for unpaid bills of 1922.

Art. 9, Voted, $8,500 for publishing History of Weymouth.

300th Anniversary

Appropriation Committee recommended no appropriation for celebration of 300th Anniversary of Weymouth.

H. H. Joy of Anniversary Committee regretted report, and hoped some notice would be taken of anniversary. Favored addresses, music, markers, etc. His committee had expended only $22 of the $1000 already appropriated. He moved that the committee be empowered to use the balance for a celebration.

It was so voted.

Art. 11, Voted, $1500 for town survey

Art. 12, no action on erecting bound stones

Art. 13, Voted, eight mills on dollar for collecting taxes

Art. 14, Voted $11,328.45 for payment of interest

Art. 15, Voted, $4000 for printing and advertising. On motion of Preston Lewis it was voted that salaries of teachers be printed in Town Report.

Art. 16, Voted, $850 for preservation of shade trees, after two amendments for special jobs were defeated

Art. 17, Voted, $5000 for suppression of moths

Art. 18, Voted $3000 for State and Military Aid

Art. 19, Voted $5000 for relief of soldiers and sailors

Art. 20, Voted, $188,000 for support of schools

Art. 21, no action on High School addition

Art. 22, Voted, $300 for James Humphrey schoolhouse bonds

Art. 23, Voted, $1100 for parks

East Weymouth Playground

Art. 24—Committee recommended no action on playground for Ward 2

T. J. Kelly said petitioners did not ask for any appropriation, but a committee of ten to investigate

Voted that Moderator appoint committee of ten

Art. 25—No action on park at Wessagusset

Art. 26—No action on building extension of Bradley road to top of Great hill.

Art. 27, Voted $21,200 for Fire department

Art. 28, no action on pay of firemen

Art. 29, no action on fire alarm box corner West and Summer streets

Qualities That Hold Friends.

Holding friends is harder than winning them. This requires the rare art of "wearing." Wearing implies steadfastness, freedom from vacillation. It comes through the avenue of integrity. The man who wears is the man who can pass through life's severe storms, and come out unharmed. The house of his life is built upon the rock.

Foiled by Fate and Two Ten Spots

By H. IRVING KING

(©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was summer and Amanda Lathrop was visiting her aunt, Miss Jane Perkins. Aunt Jane's farmhouse stood a little back from the road and dominated well-kept acres. It was a most proper farmhouse—everything pertaining to Aunt Jane was proper; it was an efficient-looking farmhouse—everything having to do with Aunt Jane partook of her efficiency. Amanda was as pretty a girl as you would find in a day's journey; abounding in health and vitality, but rather given to day dreams and impressed with the idea that it was incumbent on her to take hold of this wandering old world and set it in a straight and narrow orbit.

Under a great tree in the front yard she and her aunt sat in straight-backed chairs sewing. The bloom of the lilacs had long since faded; but there were other odoriferous shrubs about which sent faint perfumes wandering on the languid air, and from a neighboring field came now and then the breath of new-mown hay; and the voice of the afternoon was punctuated by the twittering or the songs of birds.

You have heard, perhaps, from a distance, or from the top of a high building, that murmuring sound which is the voice of a great city. To a city-bred person the country seems silent, but it is not; there is a voice of the country as well as a voice of the city—only it is pitched in a different key; a drowsy hum made up of the myriad sounds of animal and insect life which lurks in fields and woods, the murmur of streams and the breathing of winds through leafy boughs. As Aunt Jane and Amanda sat and sewed and talked in this all-golden afternoon matrimony was the object of their animadversions—which were no less condemnatory from the fact that for both the old maid and the young maiden the subject was purely academic. They were perfectly agreed with regard to the undesirability of the married state, but disagreed in their statements when it came to the details of the unmarried.

Amanda mapped out a strenuous life as a missionary to some particularly depraved and benighted tribe of cannibals while Aunt Jane declared for the simple life of the farm, mitigated by a round of gayeties consisting of strawberry festivals, church fairs and meetings of the local Red Cross in the neighboring village of Ashville. Amanda today was all the more insistent upon the necessity of her faring forth to somewhere beyond India's coral strand to wrest his nose rings and his idols from the scantily clothed chief of some palm-clothed isle from the fact that, since she had been on this visit to her aunt, she had not infrequently found herself—with a shudder at her own weakness—picturing with half-longing thoughts, the pleasant and comfortable life that might be lived amid the rural scenes by which she was now surrounded.

Such a life might be all right for Aunt Jane, who had no great uplifting work to accomplish in the world, but for Amanda such thoughts were, she well knew, the suggestions of the hero of Mr. Milton's celebrated epic; and she confronted them with a vade retro Satanas—or words to that effect. Had you told her that young Doctor Clinton and not the prince of Eblis was the cause of these wanderings of her maiden mind she would have told you that you were "just too silly for anything"; and believed it, too—besides very likely being right. Dr. Arthur Clinton had come to Ashville the year before to take over the practice of Doctor Kenyon, superannuated and retired, and had, the previous summer, while Amanda was on her usual visit to her aunt attended her for a bruised thumb acquired by well-meant but injudicious attempts at helping put down the new carpet on the front stairs. Somehow, that thumb of Amanda's required a preposterous number of calls and much skillful, not to say tender, handling by her medical adviser before it was cured. And this summer, ever since Amanda's arrival, the doctor had evinced the utmost anxiety with regard to Aunt Jane's health, stopping to inquire after it every time his flivver bore him in the direction of the Perkins farm. And that was so often one might have been justified in thinking an epidemic had broken out in that neighborhood.

Strange to say, Amanda's wandering and sinful thoughts, when they pictured the attractions of life in the country, began to center around the future wife of Doctor Clinton—for, of course, the doctor would marry sometime; he was not, like Amanda, dedicated to celibacy and a great work. Struggle as she would these visions of the life of a country doctor's wife became more and more frequent and she sternly resolved to down them by a severe and more constant contemplation of the joys of missionary existence.

On the afternoon on which our story opens she was just in the midst of a description of the happy state of some cannibal king when she should have brought him to a realization of the superiority of roast lamb over roast enemy, as an article of diet, and of Plymouth Rock pants to the sarong as an article of dress, when, with an anatomical rattle and a bronchial cough, the doctor's machine came up to the gate and the doctor dropped in for one of his little chats, disseminating youth, health, animal spirits and a slight odor of the apothecary shop about him. The longer the doctor stayed the more Amanda felt herself slipping, and when he finally arose to go she took a sudden and desperate resolve. "Good-by," she said, "I probably shall not see you again. I leave for home tomorrow and join a party of missionaries sailing for the Far East the following day. The steamer leaves in the afternoon—I shall have just time to pack. My parents have consented to my trying the missionary life, but I have heretofore delayed doing so. I have resolved to delay no longer. Good-by."

Aunt Jane exclaimed and expostulated; the doctor looked grave and sought his flivver with hardly a word of farewell. Amanda was deaf to all Aunt Jane's pleadings; she was firm with the firmness of panic—there is such a firmness. The secret of her own heart had suddenly been revealed to her; in her startled mind she saw it only a temptation, and therefore something to be fled from. She telephoned to the village garage for a machine to come and take her to the railway station to catch the four o'clock train the next afternoon. The utmost concession she would make to Aunt Jane was not to try and catch the morning train at six o'clock—there were only two through trains a day out of the village.

It was 3:40 when the machine ordered by Amanda arrived to take her to the station.

"Lots of time," said Ruben Hughes, the cheerful chauffeur, "and this old boat is a flier." But scarcely two miles from the house the engine of Ruben's machine went wrong and he had to fuss with it a long time before he got it going again. Even then he might have made the train, had not another machine, unoccupied except by its driver, collided with Ruben's "boat" about two miles beyond the scene of the first delay. The collision was so slight that Amanda scarcely felt the shock, but both drivers, roundly abusing each other for carelessness, declared that their engines had been so dislocated that they could not move—a wrecking party must be telephoned for from the village. Amanda was in despair, when Doctor Clinton's machine was seen rapidly approaching.

"Oh, doctor," cried Amanda, as the young man drew up beside the motionless cars, "do, please, try and get me to the station." "Why, my dear Miss Lathrop," cried the physician, "what has happened? Are you injured? Are you sure? Some internal injury, perhaps, here; let me help you into the car. There. No, you must not think of going on. You must get right home and have your aunt put you to bed."

And before he got Amanda to the house he had really persuaded her that, perhaps, after all, she might have received some injury from the gentle collision. "She must remain absolutely quiet for three days," said he to Aunt Jane as he left. "I will run over in the morning." "Well, doc, everything all right?" asked Ruben Hughes that evening. "All right," replied Doctor Clinton. "Here's the ten dollars for you and here's the ten for Hiram." Having been foiled by fate—and two ten-spots—in her attempt to flee temptation, Amanda consented to remain with her aunt the rest of the summer. And if the missionary service lost an incompetent recruit who would have been a failure in the South Sea islands, Doctor Clinton gained a most efficient wife, who was a great success in Ashville. Aunt Jane lamented Amanda's falling away from celibacy, but Amanda's children reconciled her.

CLING TO ANCIENT CUSTOM

Tyrolese Villagers Still Dance the "Ghost Dance," as Did Ancestors in the Dark Ages.

The attachment of the people of the little village of Imst in the Tyrol to a ghost dance custom that was begun in the Dark ages, was proved when, during a fire that destroyed the larger part of the place, no persons thought of saving their own property until they had devoted themselves to the rescue of the precious masks and head-dresses that are worn during the observation of that custom.

The various parts in the medieval pageant are played year after year by the same men, and are handed down as an inheritance in the same families, like the parts in Passion plays.

Apart from influencing good harvests, the ghost dances are regarded as great helps to matrimony. Though the young women do not join in the revels, they all come out to see the fun, and there is a superstition about a special blessing attaching to engagements made on that day. Good luck is also conferred on any houses where the dancers form a circle and sing the ancient songs.

Royal "Crank" on Clothing.

According to Suetonius, an ancient historian, the Roman Emperor Augustus took great pains to protect his body from the extremes of heat and cold. In the winter he would wear four tunics beneath a thick toga, in addition to a shirt and a woolen under garment. In summer he would sleep with open doors and windows, and often even under the peristyle of his palace. (This, however, does not seem anything extraordinary to us. He was only anticipating the "fresh-air cure.") Even in winter Augustus could not endure the sun, and never walked abroad without a broad-brimmed hat on his head.

Art. 43, Voted, $24,450 for support of poor

Art. 44, Overseers of Poor authorized to employ welfare worker

New Almshouse

Under Art. 45, committee recommended no action, saying:—"Considering the amount necessary to be expended and borrowed for the new High School, an expenditure for a town home seems inadvisable. Another reason why we recommend no action under this article is because the per capita cost of maintenance would be tremendously increased if this town home was built and maintained".

Henry A. Day, secretary of the Committee of Ten on Almshouse moved an appropriation of $40,000 for a new almshouse in substantial conformity to the plans submitted by the committee to be erected near the old site on Essex street, and that bonds be issued payable within twenty years.

Alfred W. Hastings of the Board of Overseers supported the motion. We expect good results from the $300,000 appropriated for High School enlargement; why not also from appropriation for Almshouse? Regretted that Appropriation Committee had put it in the waste basket. The town had once voted 127 to 1 for a new Almshouse, but had struck a snag in raising the money. The labors of the Overseers would be largely increased with an Almhouse, but it was the only thing for Weymouth. With an Almshouse the number of inmates would probably be doubled. Mr Hastings told of several cases which had come under his observation as Overseer, and strenuously objected to sending Weymouth people to Tewksbury, Taunton, and Bridgewater, but it was the only alternative in many cases now. Weymouth should look after her own poor. He favored Mr. Day's motion

Mr. Day was glad to get these facts. Thought committee on Almshouse had made a good report. Considered it the duty of town to take care of its poor.

Frank E. Loud was glad to support appropriation. A town that could vote $300,000 for High School enlargement should be in a position to take care of its poor. (Applause)

Dr. William A. Drake, for many years town physician, favored a new Almshouse. He asked, where are our poor today? Are they getting proper care? Some inmates are an asset. He related several cases where the care of the poor did not meet with his approval, and said present conditions were a tremendous disgrace. (Applause)

Michael W. Coyle was glad town was waking up. The trouble was people had not thought deep enough. We need a Town Home. There was no good excuse for delay.

A voter in the rear of the hall also voiced his views, saying it was a disgrace the way we now treat our poor.

Ex-Overseer Henry E. Hanley considered the Town Farm too valuable a site for the Almshouse. He would allow unfortunates to live with their friends, the town to pay for their board.

Mr. Coyle spoke again in favor of the appropriation.

Mr. Dowd also favored, saying Weymouth should provide a home, rather than send to Braintree. We should be above sending to State institutions.

Mr. McEnroe favored giving the poor what they deserved. Would not object to selling Town Farm and taking some other site.

Mr. Hanley further explained. Thought old age pension would come soon. Would leave people with their friends.

Leonard Bicknell moved previous question. Voted.

As a two-thirds vote was necessary tellers were sworn.

The count showed, Yes 108, No 25 more than the necessary two-thirds for the appropriation of $40,000 (Applause)

On motion of Mr. Day the Overseers of the Poor were authorized to carry out the vote.

Lighting Contract

Art. 46—The Electric Light committee was authorized to contract with Weymouth Light & Power Co. for street lighting.

Art. 47—Appropriated $17,300 for street lighting

Art. 48, 49, and 50 for street lights on Summer, Columbian and Emerson streets was referred to Electric Light Committee.

Art. 51—Voted, $4080 to Board of Health

Art. 52, Voted, $1000 for District Nurse

Art. 53, Voted, $1000 for Dental Clinic

Art. 54, Voted, $51,920 from water revenue for expenses of Water department.

Art. 55, Voted, loan of $10,000 for Water department construction

Repairs of Highway

Under Art. 56 the committee recommended $60,025 for repairs of highway and bridges, street oiling and removal of snow

Supt. Johnson said his budget called for $68,675. The committee had made a cut of $8650. He took up each item and showed that cuts would be serious.

T. J. Kelly favored recommendations of Supt. Johnson, else he could not carry out policy outlined. Moved $5000 additional

Voted to appropriate $65,025

Motions to adjourn at this point were defeated

Street Construction

Under Art. 58 committee recommended postponement of appropriation

Supt. Johnson said bonds were necessary if town wished to continue policy of permanent improvement. A portion of Broad street alongside the Clapp Memorial field, should be rebuilt; the work on Middle street should be continued, and the Washington street hill between Washington Square and Lincoln Square should be rebuilt on the easterly side to conform to westerly side. If permanent work was stopped it would be necessary to remove the stone crusher, now doing good work.

T. J. Kelly favored continuance of permanent work. Asked Supt. Johnson what would be the cost of the three jobs outlined

Supt. Johnson—About $16,500

Mr. Kelly moved $16,500

Representative Tirrell said inasmuch as payments on bonds and interest required about $20,000 per year, town should appropriate $20,000 and put it into the tax levy

The vote on Mr. Kelly's motion for $16,500 in bonds was 56 to 36, not the necessary two-thirds. Lost

Mr. Sheehy asked cost of Broad street rebuilding, but did not get an answer

Report of Committee, no action, was accepted

Voted at 10.35 to adjourn to Wednesday evening, March 7, at High school hall.

SOME SMILES

A MAGNET FOR SORROW

"Is it your practice to go about looking for trouble?"

"No," replied Mr. Grumpson. "It has been my experience that if a person will stand in one place long enough, and look as if he had no friends and no influence, trouble will just naturally gravitate to him."

Poor Chance for Him.

He—What would your father do if I told him I wanted to marry you?

She—He'd refer the matter to me.

He (hopefully)—And what would you do?

She—I'd refer the matter to Mr. Smart, who proposed to me and was accepted while you were trying to make up your mind.

Free Rides.

Blackstone—Jenks and his wife enjoy a motor trip every Sunday morning.

Webster—Why, I never knew they owned a car.

Resourceful Woman.

Artist—That clumsy girl has flicked a dust cloth across the fresh paint on my new picture. It is nothing but a smear.

After the Reception.

"Seems odd."

"I'll say so. Don't see how a lady could walk away without her hat in these dry days."

"Hold on."

"Hey?"

"The lampshade is missing."

Hiram Explains.

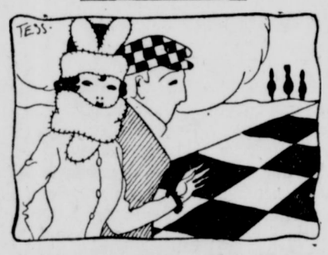
Hank—I don't understand them thermometers.

Hiram—It's simple enough. You see, when it gets durn cold the mercury sorter huddles together down in the bottom, so's to keep warm.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Extreme Measures.

"I undestand you have taken up the study of hypnotism."

"I have," replied Senator Sorghum. "A lot of the folks out home are becoming so dissatisfied the only way to get 'em to vote for me will be to mesmerize 'em."—Washington Star.



FLATTERER

She (relating experience)—Really, for a time I was quite beside myself.
He—You had a charming companion.

True Indeed.

Many a man backs out of wedlock
When he shouldn't;
Many more are backed into it,
Else they wouldn't.

Unnecessary to Repeat.

Wife—John, I'll have to discharge the cook. She uses such dreadful language.

Husband—What kind of language, dear?

Father Makes 'Em.

Tutor—Of course, I admit your son is extravagant. But you must make allowances. He's young.

The Father—That's all right! But the more allowances I make the quicker he spends 'em.

When Truth Will Out.

Mrs. Exe—Some women can never believe a word their husbands say.

Mrs. Wye—Well, I'm not quite so badly off as that—my husband talks in his sleep occasionally.

Stop, Look and Listen.

Subbubs—I've started riding into town in my car. Got tired of missing the train.

Townley—Well, look out that the train misses you.

Love.

Criss—So you and Jack don't speak. What's the trouble?

Chris—We had a dreadful quarrel about which loved the other most.

A Remedy.

Patient—Doctor, what'll I take to cure my kleptomania?

Great Engagement Ring.

Rob—How satisfied a girl seems when she has got an engagement ring.

Bob—Well, it's a good thing to have on hand, you know.

WHO FOR SELECTMEN?

Next week Weymouth will have TWO OR MORE new Selectmen. The question is—How many new?

The only candidates for reelection are Messrs Dasha, Hastings, and Theron L. Tirrell, but the caucuses at which they were nominated were very slimly attended (at one only 22 voters) and this year may not carry an election as in other years Voters are becoming disgusted with the so-called "Republican" causes, the way they are conducted, and now that they have an opportunity may go outside the party and the ward and vote for a change.

Winslow M. Tirrell is the Republican nominee in Ward Two, and Frank A. Pray in Ward Three, but both these gentlemen may go down to defeat, as did the three candidates at South Braintree on Monday. The vote of Ward Two will be divided between three local candidates, and the same is true in Ward Three, as the Non-Partisan party has nominated Mrs. Annie G. Lynch in Ward Two and H. Franklin Perry in Ward Three; and Harry E. Bearce is running independently in Ward Two and John B. Whelan in Ward Three. It was the intention of Mrs. Lynch to have resigned, but she did not realize that it must be done formally in writing until it was too late, and now she proposes to make an active contest for election and is promised support from all the other wards.

In all wards there are rival candidates.

In Ward One, Benjamin F. Smith is opposing William B. Dasha.

In Ward Three, Frank A. Pray, H. Franklin Perry, and John B. Whelan

In Ward Four Theron L. Tirrell and Charles N. Turner.

In Ward Five, Alfred W. Hastings and Henry B. Chandler.

There are rumors that "bullets" will be thrown for some candidates but where one votes for only one he wastes his strength, as he is entitled to vote for five. Surely we want more than one Selectman, and all voters should vote for five this year. If a change is wanted, vote for five new candidates.

WEYMOUTH ON THE MAP

Events are transpiring these days that are putting Weymouth "on the map"—the appropriation of $300,000 for enlargement of High schoolhouse, and the appropriation of $40,000 for a new Almshouse mark the beginning of a new era for the old town. The coming of the Edison Illuminating Co. is giving us courage, and is the forerunner of growth and prosperity.

On page three the Edison Company has a map, and those who doubt that Weymouth is getting "on the map" should just take a glance. Weymouth is there and conspicuous, and the new Weymouth station of the Edison Company will supply electricity to Boston, Quincy, Chelsea, Somerville, Arlington Winchester, Stoneham, Wakefield, Woburn, Burlington, Carlisle, Lexington, Lincoln, Watertown, Waltham, Weston, Wayland, Sudbury, Framingham, Natick, Ashland, Hopkinton, Holliston, Medway, Bellingham, Millis, Norfolk, Medfield, Sherborn, Dover, Wellesley, Needham, Newton Brookline, Dedham, Westwood, Norwood, Walpole, Sharon Canton, Milton, and other cities and towns, over forty municipalities of Greater Boston which are shown in white on the map. As the company say—"The Weymouth Station will add mightily to the capacity of the Edison service".

The advertisement itself is of great interest to the people of Weymouth, who propose to extend the company the glad hand and give them every encouragement. We quote a few paragraphs:

"Why are you building the new generating station at Weymouth ten miles from Town?

This is a query we have often heard since our announcement of the plans for the 400,000 horsepower station which will start rising this spring on the point at Fore river opposite the shipyards.

Because Greater Boston is growing.

Because at any generating station on the coast there must be deep channel for the fleet of ships from Virginia to discharge coal. At Fore River there is deep channel—used for years by the great battleships built across the way—the only available deep water within many miles of Boston.

A great generating station must have elbow room, both for its own growth and for coal storage. There are sixty acres of Boston Edison land at Weymouth—enough room for one of the largest stations in the country and enough to store 300,000 tons of coal.

A new station, serving a vast metropolitan community, must be placed where the electricity can be sent to its territory along the lines of least resistance. Thickly settled districts must not be disturbed. The "arteries" will radiate from the "heart" at Weymouth straight into the territory of present and future growth, avoiding densly settled Boston entirely.

Weymouth, being just what it is, and just where it is, will supply us just that".

ELISABETH AND DOROTHY

So many are interested in the twin daughters born Feb. 9 to Mr and Mrs. Carl Fisher Prescott, that it is a pleasure to report that mother and babies are all fine and dandy. Mrs. Prescott will probably return home next week.

The names now favored for the little ones are Elisabeth and Dorothy to which will be added middle names those of their respective grandmothers, Fannie and Ida.

With so many congratulations, flowers, plants, cards, and gifts, the happy couple have been overwhelmed, and desire to show their appreciation, and in this way extend their earnest and sincere thanks for such spontaneous expressions.

Several of the Gazette exchanges have commented on the added responsibilities of the junior editor, and added their congratulations.

MONDAY CLUB

The Monday club program this week was an extremely full and interesting one. After the opening exercises the guest of honor, Mrs. William Rowe of Wollaston district director, spoke briefly on State Federation work. The club members listened with interest to the excellent report of Mrs. John Easton on the mid-winter conference at Somerville. This was followed by the reading of the state president's letter by Mrs. John Leighton. Three sort readings by Hazel Hollis were greatly enjoyed.

So much time was consumed by this part of the meeting that the very interesting lecture scheduled for the afternoon was begun at a late hour and of necessity had to be shortened somewhat.

Prof. Charles E. Fay, dean of graduate work at Tufts College, proved an eloquent speaker, who was thoroughly familiar through personal experiences with his subject: "The majesty of the mountains". Through his vivid descriptions and an unusually fine set of stereopticon slides those present felt the fascination and grandeur of the mountains.

Mrs. Perley Buchanan, as chairman of the educational committee made arrangements for the splendid program. The meeting of March 19 will be held in East Weymouth Congregational church and the program will be in charge of the Arts and Crafts Committee.

At the business meeting the following were appointed to serve on the 1923—24 nominating committee: Mrs. Edwin E. Merchant, Mrs. Paul Garvin, Mrs. Wallace H. Drake, Mrs. J Franklin Perry, Mrs. Leon J. Dodion

APROPOS APPROPRIATIONS

The Appropriation Committee met in the Town Offices recently to sit in judgment on the numerous articles inserted in the warrant for the annual town meeting.

The members of the Appropriation Committee are the guardians of the town finances, and serve without pay. Whoever inaugurated the idea of having this committee, builded better, perhaps, than he knew. We know from experience. Our particular "axe to grind" happened to be a drain that we felt was badly needed at a curve in the road of a busy thoroughfare.

We sat and listened for an hour or more to the ebb and flow of oratory having to do with the articles constituting the warrant for this year; but of course the arguments about roads, drains, etc., were most interesting (to us) because we were getting tips, so to speak. One favorite expression was "very dangerous condition" that we decided must be part of the formula—so we put that away in the back of our head for use when our turn came.

To digress for a moment, the members of the committee must have read the signs in the street cars, about smoking when ladies are present, for when the word was passed along that a lady wished to enter, all favorite pipes and cigars were laid aside, all other business was side-tracked, and the lady was heard and ushered out ceremoniously; then pipes and cigars relighted and business as usual. Somehow or other we can never get the complete satisfaction from a smoke that someone else seems to be getting. As we have given up smoking during Lent, as an atonement, the committee, without malice aforethought led us into temptation, but we successfully resisted.

But this article is about a drain. Mr. Barker, the secretary, gave us a special invitation to appear before the committee; (he is not at all like his name). Mr. Bicknell, the chairman, seemed to think that our drain was too much of a drain—on the treasury.

We launched into fervent appeal for our drain, mentioned skidding automobiles, "very dangerous condition", et cetera, and thought we were making headway when we saw some of the committee looking at the clock. Our argument ceased abruptly. One of the committee "euchered" us out of the drain probably when he got the consent of one of the petitioners to raise his lawn if the sidewalk was raised. Hats off to the Appropriation Committee of Weymouth.

HOW

YELLOWED PIANO KEYS MAY BE MADE SIGHTLY.—There is nothing more unsightly than to have the white ivory keys on a piano turn yellow in spots, which is due to perspiration of the fingers in the summer time and to a slight oiliness of them in winter. An experimenter claims that he has found that the original whiteness can be restored by using a weak solution of nitric acid and water, says the New York World. Put one ounce of nitric acid and 12 ounces of soft or distilled water in a bottle having a rubber cork. If the latter is not handy, an ordinary cork dipped into melted paraffin wax will do.

Be sure to pour the acid very slowly into the water and stir it with a stick. Do not reverse this proceeding or the acid will fly up into your eyes. In using this solution, pour a little of it into a glass dish; then dip a brush into the liquid, wiping off the surplus on the edge of the dish.

If no brush is handy, tie a piece of cheesecloth on a stick and use that; in fact, cloth on a stick makes a very good brush for this work. Apply the solution sparingly to the stained keys, taking care that no acid get on the black keys or woodwork. Then rub the surface lightly with a piece of cheesecloth to remove the stain. Next wash off all acid with a piece of flannel dipped in clear water and wipe with a dry cloth.

CLING TO PRIMITIVE CUSTOM

How the Modern Arab Takes His Coffee, as Told by American Consular Official.

Coffee houses in Aden are crowded day and night, says Consul Raymond Davis in response to an inquiry from the Department of Commerce on the market for percolators, but they have shown no improvement in the methods of preparing cups that cheer but do not inebriate.

The Arabian method of coffee making, as described by the consul, requires the use of small clay mugs, made locally, which cost 6 to 12 annas each. In one corner of the shop a charcoal fire is kept burning and on it are placed the mugs containing water, powdered coffee and sometimes a little ginger and sugar to be brought to a boil. As soon as it comes to a boil the coffee is consumed, with or without sugar, and always without milk. The coffee-house price is one-half anna a mug. Patrons seem to be satisfied with this primitive method, and cafe proprietors say it would cause too much trouble and take too much time to familiarize the servants with the modern coffee machine.

How Temperature Affects Fish.

Fish are very quick to feel a change of temperature in their native element, and sudden cooling or heating of the water is very injurious to them.

A hot summer has been known to drive herring to find cooler waters at a distance. Some years ago a fearful storm raged along the eastern coast of North America. After it had subsided the sea was strewn with millions of tile, a fish like a cod, but attaining a weight of 50 pounds or more. A vessel was sent to discover the cause of the strange phenomenon. It plowed straight ahead for 150 miles and estimated that an area of 5,000 square miles was covered with dead fish. It was discovered that the storm had brought icebergs in its train, and the consequent great cold had proved too much for the fish, accustomed as they were to warmer waters. The cod has an objection to sudden changes of climate, and if put in colder water than that to which he is accustomed will be numbed. Experiments have been tried to acclimatize English salmon in Tasmania, but the difference in temperature has caused these experiments to fail.

How Fuel Supply May Be Increased.

Researches have been made in France with respect to the use of grape pommace as fuel. Moreover, attention has been invited to various kinds of material that might be used in this way to a good advantage, and the calorific power of which possesses considerable value. It has been found that grape pommace, when well dried, is an excellent fuel and has a good heating quality. In the researches mentioned, it was demonstrated that the substance dried at 115 degrees centigrade shows 4,400 calories.

It is also shown that as this substance has much resemblance to dried peat, it can be used in suitable producer gases, and it has an advantage over peat in that it can be dried rapidly. Combustion allows of recovering most of the phosphorus compounds and potash contained in the ash, and only the nitrogen is lost. A ton of well dried pommace has the same heat value as 0.4 ton of coal. By this estimate the annual wine production in France of 1,250,000,000 gallons represents at least 175,000 tons of coal, so that the interest of this application is considerable. Pommace of other fruits could no doubt be employed.

LADIES NIGHT

The annual ladies night of Clapp Memorial Men's club was held on Wednesday evening, about one hundred members and guests being present.

The stage and tables were attractively decorated with flowers, ferns, and potted plants furnished by one of the club members Myron P. Ford

A banquet made up of the following menu: roast beef, baked potato, cole slaw, corn, rolls, cocoa, ice cream, cake and candies was ably served and enjoyed by all.

Following the banquet a musical program was presented, rendered by the following well known artists Miss Hazel L. Hollis, reader, Samuel B. Bates, baritone soloist, and Richards' orchestra.

Following the musical program which was very well rendered, dancing was enjoyed for an hour and a half.

The following were among those present:

Mr. and Mrs. Horace R. Drinkwater Mrs. Edwin Clapp, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Holbrook, Rev. and Mrs. Story, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Bates, Mr. and Mrs. William Wheaton, Mrs. Edith W. Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Whitman, W. A. Hodges

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Conathan, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Taber, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brennock, Mr. and Mrs. L. H Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Fagyan, W W. Grimes, Seward R. Jarvis, John H. Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. McIntosh, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Sylvester, M. Sheehy

Mr. and Mrs George W. Perry, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Alden, Mr. and Mrs. J D. Bosworth, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Merchant, Mrs. L. P. Brigham, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Doucett, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Doble

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Covill, Mr. and Mrs. James Ford, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Farrar, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Earle, Mr. and Mrs. F. Wayland Preston, Mr. and Mrs. Shelton R. Houx, Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Jones

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

Driving her machine into a telegraph pole in order to avoid striking Julius W. Zimmerman of Roxbury Mrs. Arthur McGrory, wife of the manager of the Weymouth A. A. basketball team and the moving picture shows in East Weymouth, wrecked the machine. Her plucky move was unsuccessful, however, and Zimmerman was struck by one of the mudguards and quite badly injured.

Officer Edward Butler of the Weymouth police was called and took the injured man to the Quincy Hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list. The police say that Zimmerman, who was residing at the Birches on the shore of Whitman pond, was intoxicated and walking in the street.

—Braintree has a new draft of building laws which are being considered in town meeting. About what Weymouth needs as they apply to all new buildings and also to alterations.

UNION CHURCH

First Town to Elect Woman As "Selectman"

MRS. ANNIE S. LYNCH

Who was Third in List of Twelve Candidates for "Selectman"

Mrs. Annie S. Lynch, who was elected a member of the Weymouth Board of Selectmen and also as an Overseer of the Poor, has been showered with congratulations and flowers since Monday. Inasmuch as she is the first woman in Massachusetts to be elected as a "Selectman", she has reason to feel proud of her success.

But she is a level headed woman, who carries her honors well, and when interviewed by a representative of the Gazette-Transcript proved that she proposed to take an active part in the deliberations of both boards. She believes in encouraging local industries, and also in home trade, and the purchase of town supplies from local merchants. Efforts will be made to retain the industries we have and to invite others.

The Selectmen organized at 9.30 A. M. Tuesday with the reelection of Theron L. Tirrell as chairman, and C. W. Hastings as clerk.

Notes to amount of $100,000 in anticipation of taxes were awarded to the First National Corporation, the lowest of four bidders. The notes are dated March 12, and are due Nov. 26, 1923.

Voted, to pay the Braintree bill of $300 for care of the Quincy avenue bridge.

Voted to oppose the application of Donnelly for a large billboard on Broad street, opposite Broad Street place.

Minor licenses were granted, and minor officers appointed.

Two bouquets adorned the table of the Selectmen, one a gift to Mrs. Lynch, and the other a gift to the board. Several floral tributes were sent to the residence of Mrs. Lynch.

There was quite a transformation in the Town Offices previous to the organization, as all the departments had had a house cleaning.

When some one remarked in the presence of Mrs. Lynch that a sign "No Smoking" might soon be placed on the walls, the lady replied, that it was unnecessary, that she loved a good cigar.

But, says the man, town officials cannot afford good cigars; we sometimes smoke a pipe.

"Well, I don't object to a pipe", retorted Mrs. Lynch.

Town Clerk Merchant has appointed Emerson R. Dizer as assistant town clerk to act in the absence of Mr. Merchant.

AMERICAN LEGION

Monday, the 19th, is the night of the big social, boys. The committee has arranged a program that is better than anything we ever had. There will be plenty of music, speaking, and enough eats and smokes for everyone.

Senator Shuebruk from Cohasset will deliver one of his famous addresses, and you can be assured that it will be mighty interesting. Bill Burton with his partner, Wallace, who has travelled all over the country, will be there, and anyone that has heard these two talk to each other know what a big hit they are. The band will furnish plenty of jazz so get there early and also invite some ex-Service man to come with you and see the good times that we have at our socials.

The committee for the show that is to be held in the Gem theatre on Friday, April 13, will have the tickets ready for distribution and it is up to every member to sell as many tickets as possible, so as to make this a grand success. Be sure and be there, buddies, Monday night, March 19, at 7.30 in G. A. R. hall.

LAYMEN IN PULPIT

Sunday evening a very novel service was held in the vestry of the church when three of the laymen spoke in place of the usual preaching service. After a song service and scripture and pray by the pastor, spoke on "What the church means to Rev. Earl E. Story, B. B. Sylvesterme". W. A. Hodges spoke on "Why tithe your income" and Harold Burgoyne on "The Young Man's relation to the church". Due to illness C. H Chubbuck was unable to bring his message on "Why join the church". It aroused a great deal of interest to hear the arguments which these laymen brought to bear on the subjects in hand.

—The snow is fast disappearing but winter is not yet over.

PENTALPHA LODGE

Thursday night was gala night for Pentalpha lodge of Royal Arch Masons, it being the official visitation of R. E. Harold J. Weston, D. D. G. H. P. of the Seventh Capitular District, assisted by Ex Edward C. Holmes as D. D. Grand Captain of the Host and suite.

A large number of the members sat down to the usual good supper at 6.30 and still more gathered in the rooms for the visitation and entertainment.

This consisted of a snappy amateur minstrel put on by Robinson troupe of Braintree lodge. New songs were sprung on the audience and in one of the songs those present rolled in in perfect harmony as the old favorite, "When we meet again" was sung. The singing of "Old Black Joe" pleased many. The work of the evening was put on in excellent style, which was typical of the fine work of Pentalpha lodge can do. This year under the leadership of Newland H. Holmes the lodge is gaining in numbers and attendance.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

The Sewing Circle met in G. A. R. hall on Thursday. Supper at 6.00 o'clock under the direction of P. I. Harriet Fern, followed the circle. The regular meeting at 8.00 o'clock presided over by Mrs. Nellie G. Loud with a class of candidates to be initiated, made the meeting an interesting one. A candy sale followed the meeting with a social hour

WEYMOUTH SAVINGS BANK

The annual meeting of the Weymouth Savings Bank was held on Tuesday. Two new trustees in place of deceased members, Field and Flint, were elected, viz: Frank W. Bryant of A. B. Bryant & Co. and George Walker of Alden, Walker, & Wilde. To succeed Vice-president James H. Flint, Clarence P. Whittle was elected.

SCOUTS WAR ON RATS

The campaign against rats by Weymouth Boy Scouts progresses H. C. Mosman of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, who is instructing the Boy Scouts, says, in connection with rats and their relation to us that bubonic plague, because of its epidemic character and high mortality, is the most feared of all transmissable diseases

Until assured that neither human nor rodent cases exist, there is need for the utmost effort by boards of health, municipal authorities and individual citizens to establish conditions which will insure protection The entire state should assist, each parish, town, and city should inaugurate a local campaign against rats and the conditions that foster their perpetuation. There should be, first a rat survey. Rats should be trapped in all sections and if any are found sick, or dead, they should be sent for examination to the labratory.

It is possible that rodent infection may have spread to areas which are yet unknown, and the history of plague shows a record of development of human plague from one to two years from the date of infection from rats or squirrels.

The best protection is a knowledge of danger, should it exist, and in so serious a matter no community can afford to be derelict.

A war on rats and fleas means a fight for cleanliness. Rats and fleas thrive in unclean places. Rats live on refuse and unprotected foodstuffs; therefore care in disposal of garbage and in the storing of foods either in large or small quantities, cooked or uncooked, are of primary importance. This is largely in the hands of the individual, the storekeeper, the housewife, and others who sell or handle foods.

No community which establishes proper measures of sanitation need fear the invasion of plague. The cause of the disease is known, therefore, prevention is possible, or in case of introduction, control is possible. It is deplorable that so many are not convinced of the need of "a stitch in time" in the safeguarding of public health which means personal welfare as well. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure". It is also to be deplored that communities do not take more seriously their own health problems. The State Department of Public Health can only suggest, direct, and point out the danger; it cannot take local work to any extent except by way of illustration or in time of epidemics.

The law places responsibility on the local unit, where it should be, and it is only through efficient health officers and well organized health boards that effective work can be accomplished in the saving of lives and the prevention of unnecessary sickness and suffering.

Plague is carried by the rat and they suffer both acute and chronic forms. The infection may be transferred from rat to rat through the agency of the rat flea.

The chief refuges of rats in cities are sewers, wharves, stables, provision houses, markets, out-buildings and uninhabited structures.

Modern sewers are highways, not nesting places for rats.

To leave open garbage cans or to leave food on the ground or in gutters invites the rat. Remnants of lunches in office buildings also offer nourishment for rat occupation

There are three kinds of rats, the muss Norvegicus, the muss Rattnus, and the muss Alexandrinus.

The mus Norvegicus rat is a native of Norway and is also called the Norway rat. It is a large, gray, lazy rat, slow thinking, slow in motion, but a great eater. He is classed as the bully of the crowd and whenever one sees him, one will never see his cousins, the muss Ratthus or the muss Alexandrinus. He lives on the ground floor and has his home in the sewer; he will burrow under any planking or pile of debris. There he will take up housekeeping and stay until the harborage is broken up.

The muss Ratthus is a native of India and is a sleek black or blue-black rat, with long, slim body, big lobe ears, and pointed nose, is very supple and quick of action. The tail stretches more than to the point of his nose. A Ratthus has been seen to jump off a building forty feet from the ground and run off none the worse for his jump.

The muss Alexandrinus is light in color and has a white, sometimes a yellow belly. Wherever they find a foothold they will go. They will go under a rafter as if it was child's play. Whenver a U-shaped mark is seen on a rafter or beam inside a building it signifies the presence of either a Ratthus or an Alexandrinus. The rats make this black mark with their long tail. When in doubt as to how old the mark is, whitewash it to see if the rat is travelling over it still.

Now, if the Weymouth Boy Scouts and all get together we can greatly lessen the population of its abundance of rats which I am quite sure consist of only one kind, namely, the Norway.

Put On a Paint That Stays Put
Hold on a minute, and say this to yourself before you put another cent into paint. Say that it costs just as much to put on a poor paint as a good one. Generally more.
A poor paint doesn't stay put. Doesn't, because you can't get out of anything what isn't in it. We have proven to our entire satisfaction that Lowe Brothers put stay-putness in every gallon of paint they make.
Stay-put is just another way of saying it stands weather's wear and tear. Drop in and we will show you a color card and tell you some paint facts, which, have a notion you have never been told.

THE BIG TROUT

Tell us, reader, how's your mind?
Is it one to doubt inclined?
Does this "fishy" seem to you?
Just the same, 'tis strictly true.

That is what we have always called him. Of course, if you have caught speckled trout at Rangeley lakes, or taken the big Rainbow and Brown trout of the West, a trout weighing between one and two pounds isn't uncommon. But if your fishing has been in this state, or in the brooks of New Hampshire, you will surely agree that a trout of his dimensions can fairly be called a big trout. A friend of the writer's, who has caught hundreds of trout in the New Hampshire brooks when a boy, told me that his largest was one-quarter pound.

The writer, with another friend, took 64 trout one day down on Cape Cod, the largest one-half pound. However much you may be inclined to question his being uncommonly big, you surely will agree that the place and conditions of his capture were very much out of the common.

Fishermen and Anglers

Do you ever catch fish? If so, then you are a fisherman, and it may be, an angler. No difference? Oh yes, a lot. For instance, Joe Sherman is a fisherman when he dips out herring at the brook.

When he and Oliver Peaslee go trouting over in Hingham, they are anglers. Trowlers and seiners fish for Boston markets, but they don't use rods, reels, flies, spinners, snelled hooks, wooden minnows, and other things dear to anglers.

Anglers use rods, not poles. I once heard a man speak of a steel-jointed rod as "one of them iron poles". He lived within one hundred feet of a pond all his life, and probably never caught a fish.

Perhaps when you can find nothing else to do you hunt up a birch or bamboo pole, tie on a cotton string and a stone or nail for a sinker, dig some worms, and start for the pond. But that does not make you a fisherman, not a bit of it.

The simon-pure fisherman (who often becomes an angler) is one who is bitten early in life by "the fishing bug", and never gets it out of his system. Once people sneered at the man who went fishing for pleasure, but President Grover Cleveland, President Chester A. Arthur, Daniel Webster, and lots of other really big men, put a muzzle on that kind of talk.

But what is all this to do with that big trout? Not much to be sure; it is pretty thin stuff; but so is soup, and soup is often brought in before the fish.

Well is was a beautiful May morning nearly forty years ago, when Ben and Harry left East Weymouth for a drive to Marshfield in quest of trout. It was a new thing for Harry, who was an "on and off" (mostly off) fisherman. Ben, though, was a "dyed in the wool fishing crank". He had been down several times, mostly on the midnight freight, which reached there about daylight. There was no stocking of brooks then, and the season was rather late for good fishing.

But they had hopes, more especially Ben. It was a beautiful drive through Hingham, and Norwell over the North river via Union bridge. It was a new territory to both, and they were told to pass the "Old Skunk Meeting House", which tradition says got its name from having one or more of its meetings broken up by a family of skunks beneath the building.

As they neared the locality where it was likely to be, Harry a little diffidently inquired of a passer by if they were on the road to that historical building, thinking that he might be a member of its congregation and resent the name. Evidently taking the name as a matter of course he told them it was just ahead. Thanking him, they proceeded, and in due time reached their destination—the Marshfield Fair Grounds.

They had a word of introduction to an old gentleman living opposite the fairgrounds. He, too, was an "old timer", having often fished with Daniel Webster in days gone by. He gave them a hearty welcome, and leaving the horse with him, they went over to a brook running through the fairgrounds, but it had been fished hard and the trout were few in number and small in size.

Leaving this brook and crossing the South river, they struck a larger one, running under the railroad near the station and into the South river. This brook was not much better than the other, and they decided to go back to the farm house. The old gentleman, born and raised in Marshfield, told them of a brook some miles away, and where to turn off on the way home in order to reach it. Thanking him for his kindness they started out once more.

But there arose a difference of opinion as to where they should turn off the main road, and when it was straightened out it was decided that it was too late to go back. They had eaten their lunch while on the road, but the horse had not been fed, and it was decided to investigate the first brook reached on the way home, while the horse was feeding.

This proved to be a brook by the roadside in the midst of Norwell village. Following a cartroad they came to a mill pond, into which the brook emptied. Taking the horse from the shafts they gave him his oats and tackled the stream below the mill which was running at the time. It didn't take long to convince them that it was no trout brook Harry quit first, and when Ben came up the bank had taken his rod apart and was looking into the mill windows. The horse was still feeding, so Ben followed Harry, but took his rod with him; hence this tale.

In order to have a clear idea of what follows, something must be said of Ben's outfit on that particular occasion. As a rule, he used a reel but a jointed rod and a reel in going through a swamp or brush is a nerve racking affair and Ben had no use for it. Using a three-jointed 10½ foot rod, he put the tip and joint together, then fastened near the lower end of the joint a piece of brass wire, bent like a boat cleat, winding on this some fine silk line, running it out through the guides, lengthening and shortening at the cleat, tip and joint connected with butt separate, made two pieces 7 and 3½ feet long respectively, easily carried at the side and when the butt was connected made a rod of 10½ feet, very convenient.

He didn't count on catching anything longer than nine inches, and a quarter of a pound, in weight. And his hook was a No. 6 Aberdeen, the slenderest hook made, about as big as a pea bean, dry.

On reaching Harry, who stood near the flume, Ben noticing the current, dropped his hook into the running water. Instantly there was a smart, quick tug, but Ben failed to connect. Another bite, with the same result.

What could it be? They concluded that it might be a big hornpout, but a good fish anyhow. So Ben rebaited and tried a third time. This time he fastened him, and the fight was on, and the odds were all with the fish. Seven and one-half feet of fine line and hook just right for a shiner. Down went the tip a foot below the surface of the water. Back and forth went Ben along the wall of the dam, rod at arm's length, and bending like a whip.

Meanwhile Harry was craning his neck to see what it was. As the fish weakened a little and was drawn near the surface, Harry shouted that it was a big trout.

Still the fight went on, but the trout was tiring, and Ben drew him near to Harry, who seized the line, but dropped it at a yell from Ben, who knew that neither hook nor line would stand the weight of the fish.

Following Ben's instructions Harry laid flat on the wall and as Ben drew him within reach, grasped the trout by the back and lifted him from the water. As he did so the hook nearly straightened, fell from the fish's mouth; then went up a shout that fairly split the air.

When they got back to earth they found beside them the old man who ran the mill, pop-eyed, mouth open, and as excited as they. He had shut down the mill, and had come out to see the fun. "Why", said he, "I never knew of a trout being caught in this pond; nothing but hornpouts, and we draw it down to just a mud hole every summer".

But a trout it was, fifteen inches in length and weighed one and one-half pounds some hours later.

Ben and Harry rigged up with reels and leaders and fished awhile, but got nothing. Plainly, he was the lone trout of that pond, "monarch of all he surveyed". Hanging near the flume he picked up his food as the current carried it into the mill race. A native, to whom they showed him, said that he was familiar with all the fishing in that region, but never heard of a trout being taken from that pond.

How he got there is a mystery. Ben has taken many good trout since two as large, none larger. In view of his size, the place where he was taken, and all the circumstances connected with his capture, he has, and always will be to Ben in a class by himself. Green is his memory.

CLUB and SOCIAL

—Despite the storm on Monday several members of the Old Colony Chapter, Service Star Legion, met at the home of Mrs. Edith Monroe, 51 Morrison road, Braintree, and spent a pleasant and profitable afternoon. In the course of the meeting the president, Mrs. Albert E. Avery, translated a letter of thanks from the little French girl whom the chapter adopted two years ago. One of the features of the chapter's Christmas work is to play "Santa Claus" to the child, each member donating a small gift. The pleasure that she derives from these Christmas boxes can only be appreciated by those who are privileged to hear her childish expressions of gratitude. After the business meeting tea and cakes were served by the hostess, Mrs. Morrison. The chapter will meet at the home of Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Larchcroft, East Braintree, Monday, April 9. A large delegation from the chapter attended the regular monthly meeting and annual installation of officers of the state chapter at the Army and Navy club, Park Square, Boston, on Wednesday, March 14. The new form of installation which was used for the first time in Massachusetts is beautiful and impressive. Luncheon was served at the Unity House.

—Miss Geraldine Mulready, daughter of Mr. and Mrs P. V. Mulready of Pleasant street, entertained about twenty little friends at her home on Saturday afternoon, the occasion being her eighth birthday. The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion with green and white crepe paper with streamers extending from the electrolier to the table on which rested a large birthday cake with candles. Each child present was presented with a crepe paper hat and little doll as favors. Music and games were enjoyed and refreshments served by Mrs. Mulready. Miss Geraldine received many presents.

—The Sienna Circle met at the home of Mrs. Charles Lamer on Wednesday afternoon and enjoyed an hour of whist. Favors were awarded to Mrs. Bart J. Coughlan, Mrs. Charles J. Lamer. Tea was served by the hostess.

The next meeting of the Monday Club is on March 19. The program is in charge of the arts and crafts committee and will consist of an entertainment by Mrs. M. Gertrude Cutter entitled: "Aunt Clarissa lends her heirlooms of two centuries" Tickets will go on sale at this meeting for the annual dramatics. A very interesting play is now nearly ready under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frederick L. Alden.

—The Weymouth Catholic club met at Sacred Heart hall, Weymouth, on Monday evening and discussed plans for a play and dance to be held next month. The evening's entertainment was given by Supt. of Schools Parker T. Pearson. In his talk on "Across the Continent" he related many interesting and amusing incidents of his trip. It was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

—Mr. and Mrs. Leo Cushing of Common street, Weymouth, are the happy parents of a baby girl born on Feb. 23 at Weymouth hospital.

—On Wednesday last week Ruth, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McCarthy of 475 Bridge street entertained a party of young friends at the home of her parents. The occasion was in honor of the fifth anniversary of her birth. Eighteen guests were present and a pleasant afternoon was spent in playing games A dainty luncheon was served to the little ones. Miss Ruth was made happy by a multitude of gifts.

—The Winona Campfire Girls had a social and supper in the vestry of the Third Universalist church on Monday evening. The tables were prettily decorated, the color scheme being red and white. Mrs. George Ames, who is coaching the girls in the preparation of a play to be given in April, was the guest of honor.

—The Primavera Whist club held a costume party at the home of Miss Nellie Coneen of Beals street Monday evening. The prizes were awarded to Mrs. Thomas Gray, Mrs. Edward Howe, Mrs. Charles Murphy, and consolation to Mrs. Henry Dewey. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

—On Monday evening the Monday Night club were guests of Miss Muriel C. Sowden in her home, 24 Central street. The house was attractively decorated for the occasion the color scheme being pink and white. The table center piece was of ophelia roses. During the evening Miss Sowden surprised the guests by announcing her engagement to Mr. J. Stanley Barnes of Arlington. There was a social evening with entertainment furnished by Master Johnnie Gifford, who pleased his audience with recitations. There were vocal and instrumental solos, including banjo and mandolin selections Guests were present from Dorchester, Cambridge, Hingham, Arlington and the Weymouths. Mr. Barnes is a World War veteran having served with the Y. D. 26th Division, 101st F. A., Battery A, and was in France thruout his entire period of enlistment.

—The birthday anniversary of Mrs. Addie Bean, which occurred on Tuesday, was made a memorable one for Mrs. Bean, who is convalescing from a severe illness. Fellow members of the Star Service League sent her a shower of postcards beside other tokens of regard.

—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred V. Coleman and children are visiting Mrs. Coleman's mother, Mrs. Sherrard of Detroit where Mrs. Coleman and the children are to make a month's visit. Mr. Coleman will remain but a few days.

—The Fountain Square Whist club met on Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. William H. Taylor in her home on Main street. The highest honors at whist went to Mrs. H. H. Goodale and Mrs. Myrick Poland consolation. During the social hour, a collation was served by the hostess.

—Miss Ethel Keene, who has been spending the winter with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Chessman Keene, left today for Mechanics Falls, Maine, where she conducts a millinery business.

W. R. C. NOTES

At the meeting of Corps 102 on Tuesday, Mrs. Loring, department president, was present and all were glad she had recovered from the grippe and neuritis

"THE CATHOLIC CHURCH"

An interesting sermon on "The Catholic Church" was delivered at the Immaculate Conception church Tuesday evening Mar. 6, by Rev. Fr. Cunningham, professor at Brighton Seminary. Fr. Cunningham has given the sermon every Tuesday evening since Lent began. He said in part:

"The 26th Division, composed largely of Massachusetts boys, fought in more battles and spent more days in the front-line trenches than any other National Guard unit, in the World War. This fact will be emblazoned on its banners o'r all time. It is a great honor to the Old Bay State. But the Catholic Church has won 10,000, and more victories. In the beginning she held aloft the torch of Christianity and the blood of her martyrs was shed that the light might be kept burning, and in the defence of religion. The blood of her children has stained the battlefields of many lands, for she teaches the defence of home and country. The blood of her children has been washed up on the shores of the United States; their bodies now mingle with its soil.

"The early missionaries in North America were practically all Catholic and they braved hardship and danger that her teachings might be spread.

"The Catholic Church is the foe of anarchy, of violence, of immorality, of divorce. She stands like a rock against the forces of evil that undermine and disintegrate the home—the foundation of government.

"She is a friend to the oppressed, the needy, and the fallen; comforter of the afflicted".

GEM THEATRE

The patrons of the Gem theatre were very pleasantly surprised on Saturday evening when the talented young singer, Miss Grace Donovan, sang several selections which were greatly appreciated by the large attendance. The Gem is a magnet for crowds; they fill the auditorium at each picture featuring.

A great deal of credit is due Mr. Rogers for the wonderful pictures he has shown for the people to enjoy in their own town. Next week comes the great picture: "The town that forgot God" direct from its Boston run. The requests were so great Mr. Rogers made arrangements to show "Ninety and Nine" again the coming week. Watch the Gazette "Ads". Always something new at the Gem.

TUFTS LIBRARY

The "Health" posters which were awarded the prizes are now on exhibition in the reading room, and will remain there until March 24. Jessie Wichert, Eighth Grade, Nevin school was awarded the grand prize; Gladys Pelitier, Eighth Grade, Pratt school, and Edward Kuplast, Ninth Grade, Athens school were awarded prizes for originality; Ruth Bennett, Ninth Grade, Athens school, and William DeCoste, Eighth Grade, Hunt school, were awarded prizes for execution. The work is creditable to the drawing teacher, Miss Sylvester, and her pupils. Funds contributed by the Monday Club and the Wessagusset Club made possible these prizes.

Have you read the annual report of the Tufts Library for 1922 in the Weymouth Town Report? The books which were purchased during the year are listed there. Many of them have not been listed elsewhere. If you would like to read some of these books and have no library card, you can sign an application at the library or at the North Weymouth branch, or at any one of the delivery stations. Come, "join the library".

WHISKY RUNNERS

John Bartley, noted criminal investigator, recently returned from Secret Service work during the war, is asked by the governor of New York to investigate a mysterious attempted robbery of the Robert Slyke home at Circle Lake, near Saratoga, and to establish the guilt or innocence of two men in the penitentiary for the crime. A miscarriage of justice is suspected. Bartley finds in it the restaging of an old case, is interested and agrees to solve the mystery. With his friend, Pelt, a newspaper man, Bartley goes to Circle Lake, the pair becoming the guests of Bob Currie, an old friend. The three visit the Slyke home. Slyke resents Bartley's coming, saying he is satisfied the two men in prison are guilty. Bartley is not. Next morning Slyke is found dead in bed, apparently having shot himself. Miss Potter, the dead man's sister-in-law, the village police chief, Roche, and the family physician, Doctor King, all agree Slyke killed himself, but Bartley insists he was murdered. Investigating, Bartley finds evidence that Slyke, after a card party he had given, was shot on the tower of the house, undressed, and placed in bed. During his absence from the room someone removes the revolver from Slyke's hand. A boy working in the garage asserts he heard a shot during the night, apparently "in the air," of course really on the tower. Ruth, Slyke's stepdaughter, still further complicates the case. Pelt interviews the members of the card party. He finds to his surprise that Slyke, apparently wealthy broker, had offered to sell his friends whisky. He finds evidence that the men in jail for attempted robbery of Slyke were "framed." Bartley decides the murder was not planned in advance.

CHAPTER VI
—10—

The Vault in the Woods.

We found Currie waiting for us in one of his large cars, with his chauffeur. There were few cars on the road, and in a very short time we arrived in Saratoga.

We left the car before one of the hotels and followed Bartley to the public library. Bartley spent several moments glancing through the card catalogue before he crossed to the loan desk, and asked the pretty young librarian for "Griffeth's Mysteries of Crimes." She returned in a moment with two volumes, bound in red cloth. Bartley opened one to the place where the date when a book is taken out is stamped. There was only one date on the white slip, and Bartley copied it in his notebook. Then, turning to the librarian, he asked her how they had happened to buy the book, and if she knew who it was that had taken it from the library the one time it had gone out.

Looking through her cards, she told him that the book had been a gift, and that the only person that had ever taken it out was James Briffeur. Bartley raised his eyebrows in surprise but did not ask her anything more.

As soon as we were again on the street, he told us that so far as he knew the only account of the Edlingham burglary, other than the one in the rare pamphlet that he owned, had been published in the volumes he had been glancing at. Currie, of course, did not understand what he was talking about; and Bartley gave him the details of the English crime, and ended by saying that, from the very first it had been his opinion that whoever had faked the burglary at Slyke's had read the account of the English crime. Then, with a little rueful smile, he added that the one person who had taken the book from the library was Slyke's chauffeur.

He might have said more had we not reached Currie's club just then. We sat and talked until about eleven o'clock; then we started to walk home.

As we were leaving the club, we met a young man whom Currie introduced to us as Captain Lowe, commander of the local branch of the state police. As he was going in our direction, we fell into step together; and he told us of his work and how the state troopers had reduced crime so much that farmers' wives now had a sense of security, even in the most remote country districts. The greatest trouble they had at present, he told us with a laugh, was with the smuggling of whisky, not only into Saratoga but even as far as Albany and Troy. Though they knew that a good deal of whisky was getting through, they could not discover who was running it. At the barracks he bade us goodnight.

As we passed the driveway that led into the Slyke grounds, Currie told us that it ran through nearly a mile of dense woods before it reached the house. We were about a thousand feet beyond the entrance when Bartley suddenly stopped.

"What's that?" he asked in a low voice.

I listened a moment, but the only thing I could hear was the horn of a distant automobile.

Bartley continued, "I thought I heard a car in the woods, there on the left."

Currie, who was a few feet in front of us, laughed. "John," he said, "you're hearing things. No car can be in those woods. Those are the trees you see from my house, and they stretch for some miles without a break. Slyke owns this part of them. You could not have heard a car."

Bartley placed his hand on his friend's shoulder. "That's what I thought, Bob. But I did hear a motor; of that I am sure."

He paused, then added suddenly, "Listen! There it is once more."

This time we all heard the faint sound of a motor running slowly and with difficulty. There was no doubt of it; it came from the woods before us. It sounded as if a car were running a few feet, then stopping, as it would do on a very bad road when having difficulty in getting through.

As we stood listening to the strange sound coming through the woods, Bartley said: "You say, Currie, that there is no road there, yet by the sound of it I should say that was a truck. What do you say to going and finding out what it means?"

Currie gave an exclamation of disgust. "But it's none of our business, John."

"Just at the present moment, everything that takes place on Slyke's estate is our business. I want to know what a car is doing in those woods at this time of night."

"Oh, I'm game if the rest of you are," Currie responded.

With a caution from Bartley not to make any noise, we left the road and entered the woods. It was lucky for us that there were not many vines or much underbrush, or we should not have gotten very far. There was no path, and we fell over stumps and broken branches and bumped into trees at almost every step. Bartley had a pocket torch with him, but he did not want to use it. Once or twice, though, he did flash it for a second so that we could disentangle ourselves from the vines that had wrapped themselves around our feet.

We had not heard the motor for several moments when a car loomed so suddenly out of the shadowy darkness ahead of us that we almost fell over it. It was a great truck, loaded with small cases. Upon its top, a little darker than the night, we made out the figures of two men, while a third disentangled itself from the gloom in front of the car with a muffled oath, and climbed to the driver's seat. The car started forward with a lunge along the road, if it could be called such, that had been made by felling trees and leaving their stumps still standing. The driver must have been familiar with it, for no one who was not could have driven that truck over it without lights.

"John," He Said, "You're Hearing Things."

"I want to get the number," Bartley whispered, as it lurched ahead.

He crept softly up behind the slowly moving car. For the faintest part of a second I saw the flash of his light. The next he was back at our side.

"There is no license plate on the car. There's something wrong there. Come along!"

As the truck, lurching from side to side, was not going faster than three miles an hour, we had no difficulty in keeping up with it. We had followed it for perhaps five minutes when it came out suddenly onto the road that Currie said led to Slyke's house. Here it paused, the motor running softly. We crept closer and heard a voice say, "Well, Jim, here's to luck. We will make a run of it."

Just at this moment Currie tripped over a root. He tried to save himself, grabbed at my arm, missed, and went to the ground with a loud crash. As he fell, Bartley jerked me to one side and threw me on my face. The sound of Currie's fall was like a young earthquake, and did not escape those on the truck. As I went down I saw one of the men turn and fire. The next second, gaining speed with every foot, the truck shot down the road.

With the truck gone we no longer needed to hide; we rose and rushed to Currie to see if he were shot. As Bartley's light flashed over him, we discovered that he was sitting up, and swearing to himself. His face was covered with dirt and one eye was beginning to turn black, but he was otherwise unhurt.

"John," he demanded, "what the devil made that tire explode?"

"That was not a tire, Bob. Someone on the truck heard you as you fell and took a shot at you."

"Took a shot at me?" cried Currie, in utter disbelief. "My G—, why?"

Bartley helped him to his feet and brushed the dirt from his clothes before he answered: "It's a darned good thing they missed you. Those men on top of the boxes were there to protect them. I wonder what was in them."

Bartley was anxious to learn what that truck was doing in the woods, and why the men on it were so determined that no one should know what they were carrying, that they were willing to fire upon anyone who interfered. As we followed the tracks with the aid of Bartley's pocket torch, we saw that the wheels had sunk a foot into the sod in places, and that more than one heavily loaded truck had passed this way.

We followed the road for about half a mile before it ended in a clearing, a quarter of an acre square.

Bartley examined the four sides of the clearing carefully before he came back to us and said, in a voice that sounded strange in the darkness, "The road ends here. I have an idea that this is where they got their load."

Currie had been peering through the darkness as the flashes of Bartley's light shot between the trees. "I have a fool idea, John," he said slowly, "that I know where we are."

"You do?" came the eager response.

"Yes. If I am not mistaken, we are within a hundred yards of the old cemetery that is on Slyke's ground. It must be over a hundred years old, and was founded by the early settlers. Several years ago Slyke showed me the place. We had the devil of a time reaching it, for there was no path to it. All there is left of it is an old vault and half a dozen stumbling tombstones."

I was unable to see Bartley's face, but his voice was eager.

"A vault! What kind?" he asked.

"Why," replied Currie, "just a vault. One of those things dug into the side of a hill where dead bodies are placed. If I am right, there is a small hill only a few yards from here."

Bartley turned and, flashing his light on the ground, moved it slowly back and forth as he advanced. He paused and bent to examine the ground.

"I guess I have it," he called to us. "Here are footprints."

Without giving us time to examine them, he went deeper into the woods, and we followed. Some fifty feet from the clearing, the little path we were on ended abruptly in a small mound.

"It's your vault, Currie," said Bartley.

His light rested on the massive wooden door of an old-fashioned burial vault dug out of the hillside and fastened securely by a large lock. As Bartley examined it, he gave a little whistle. "Well, Currie, that may be an old vault, and an old door, but the lock on it is modern. It has been placed there within a short time. I am going to open it."

With a thin piece of wire and a bit of steel, Bartley picked the lock, then flung the door open and turned his flashlight into the darkness within. I think that Currie and myself both held our breath as the light swept back and forth over the walls and floor. It disclosed nothing more startling than a number of boxes, similar to those we had seen on the truck, piled one on the other against the walls. It was plain enough where the load had been gotten.

Bartley led the way in and closed the door behind us. Once more he swept the vault with his torch, and this time we noticed a lantern on a box and lit it.

The vault was about twenty-five feet long and had been dug into the side of the hill, but the sides and roof were of stone. Along the walls were niches for coffins, and these were piled high, and the floor as well, with hundreds of small boxes. The flame of the lantern flickered in a draft and queer shadows danced on the walls, while a musty, earthy smell rose half chokingly. It was not the most pleasant place to be in.

But Bartley did not seem to mind it. He stood in the center of the floor, glancing around the vault with such an amused smile that I knew that something had pleased him particularly. Suddenly he went to the nearest box, ripped off the cover, and drew out a bottle. We crowded around him as he removed the paper and disclosed the label of a well-known brand of imported whisky.

"That's what I expected," Bartley commented. "We know now what was on that truck. Captain Lowe won't have to hunt any longer for the place where they hide smuggled whisky."

Currie cried, "Why, it's Slyke's chauffeur!"

Combination of Head and Heart.

Friendship is sentiment, but it is more than that. It is of the head, but chiefly of the heart. He who has intellectualism only can have no friends. LOYAL ORDER OF MOOSE

At its meeting on Wednesday evening Weymouth lodge elected Charles Reidy as dictator for the coming lodge year. The other officers were V. D., George H. Batchelder; prelate, Gidion Murray; treasurer, John W. French, and trustee, George S. Lamroch. These officers will be installed at the next meeting, March 28. The dictator-elect was instructed to appoint a committee to arrange for the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the institution of the lodge on May 26.

TOWN AND VICINITY

—The Commercial Square "Forum" held open house Monday night and received election returns. A grab lunch, consisting of doughnuts, cheese and coffee was served by Joseph A. Fern, chieftan, assisted by a few warrior braves. The political pot, as well as the coffee, were kept boiling while the gang made merry. Any palefaces who strayed into the wigwam were invited to help themselves.

—W. G. Shaw of Quincy has purchased the stock of the Barron Furniture Co. at Brockton, and isingng ing a bankrupt sale in that city. Unsold goods of the Barron Company will also be placed on sale at the Quincy store March 24. See "Ad" on page 11, and watch for full page advertisement next week.

—Keep the water running

—The days will be longer than the nights next week

—At the Sunday morning service of the First M. E. church Rev. Earl F. Story preached on "Stewardship of possessions". A goodly attendance was on hand to hear this message which is of such vital importance.

—All dogs must be licensed on or before March 31, says the annual notice of Town Clerk Merchant in this paper.

—Dr. Hunt of Pittsfield has been visiting his father the local news agent, George P. Hunt, the past week while attending a Boston convention.

—Elbridge Nash Drug Store of Columbian Square have installed a new modern and up-to-date in every way two-stand soda fountain to meet the increasing demands of this department. All the latest ideas that provide for clean, sanitary conditions, constant hot water for glasses, and iced containers should insure to the customers excellent service.

—The annual notice relative to the return of births will be found in this paper. Returns are required within forty days.

—Spring top coats and the "Robin Hood" hats are leaders this week at Remick's big store at Quincy., Both are real harbingers of spring.

—Clark & Tabor sell the Dupont paints and varnishes

—The advertisement of the Old Colony Gas Co. this week is profusely illustrated.

—The latest records can always be found at Nash's Music store. Have you heard the in clover songs?

—Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Taylor of Main street, is confined to her home with chicken pox.

—Christopher Sinnett, who has been receiving treatment at the Massachusetts General Hospital during the past two weeks has returned to his home on Torrey street.

—Wildey lodge, I. O. O. F., held their weekly meeting in the Odd Fellows building on Monday evening Merton Loud, N. G. presiding. At the close of the meeting an illustrated address was given by a representative of the Metropolitan Park Commission regarding the work of the organization. The lecture was instructive and interesting.

NORTH WEYMOUTH

From Gazette Correspondents

—Mrs. Carl Hanson of North street has as guests her sister, Mrs. Betty Rhoads and nephew Master George Rodgers, both from New York city.

—Next Monday evening the Home and School Association will tender a reception to the teachers of the Athens school in the vestry of Pilgrim church. Music and refreshments and remarks by Mr. Perkins of Quincy are on the program.

—The annual meeting of Pilgrim parish was held Thursday evening, March 8. A supper was served at 6.30 by a corps of helpers headed by Mrs. William Drake. At the business meeting following Dr. William Drake acted as moderator and the following elections were made: clerk, Murray Parker; treasurer, Mrs. Laura Libby; collector, Mrs. Velma Ford; auditor, J. Herbert Libby; parish committee, Dr. W. H. Drake, Thomas Allen, and Herbert Rosetter; nominating committee, Mrs. Parker, Bernard Ruggles and H. O. Tutty; music committee, Mrs. Sidney Dunbar, Mrs. Wallace Drake, and Mrs. Abbie Beals.

—Vesper service will be held at Pilgrim church at 5.00 Sunday afternoon. The Pilgrim quartet of Boston will furnish music.

—Mrs. George Weatherbee of Hough's Neck was the guest of Mrs. Albert Webber of North street on Monday.

—Mrs. Willis Rand of Norton street left Friday to visit her son Frank in Chicago. Mr. Rand, who is on a western business trip, accompanied her as far as that city and will also stop there for a few days.

—James McAlpine and family, formerly of Weymouth Heights, are occupying the house at 11 Lincoln street.

—There's a whole heap of genuine pleasure in taking a shabby house and making it into a beautiful, livable home. Out side and inside, the great transformer is Bay State Liquid Paints. These paints are proof against wind, foul weather or baking sun. They go further and look better. You save money by using Bay State. And there is a cr enamel for every painting job, to be had at J. H. Murray Hardware Co., Broad street, East Weymouth.—Advertisement

—The funeral of Leon R. Johnston was held from his late home, 99 North street, last Friday afternoon. Rev. T. B. Bitler conducted the services. The bearers were Frank L. Cushing, Richard Hesse, Marcus Keene, Manuel Page, Herman Nadell, and William Dasha. The body was placed in the tomb at North Weymouth cemetery.

—Miss Orely Melville of Evans road entertained a party of classmates at dinner last Friday evening. Miss Helen Mayer, instructor in French at the High school, was the guest of honor.

—Mrs. Grace Walker has been confined to her home on Pratt avenue during the past two weeks with an injured knee, the result of a fall on the ice.

—Mrs. Joseph Teague of Church street is spending the week with relatives in Maine.

—Walter Beck and Herbert Crans have purchased the Solomon Ford estate at 124 Green street and are occupying it with their families.

—Mrs. Jennie Perkins of Bridge street is confined to the house with a sprained ankle.

—The L. A. K. C. B. club are to have a "St. Patrick's" supper in the clubhouse tomorrow evening.

—Miss Isabelle Swarbrick entertained the S. E. C. club at her home 19 Saunders street, Tuesday evening. Games and music were enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess.

—Mr. and Mrs. Donald Francis of Saunders street announce the birth of a daughter on Sunday, March 11.

—Trueman Marr has recovered from an attack of influenza and is able to be out again.

—The Service League connected with Pilgrim church held its regular monthly business meeting at the home of Mrs. Ann Winters on Sea street Tuesday evening. After the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served by the hostess.

—The Fellowship Class of Pilgrim church held their monthly supper in the church vestry Tuesday evening. The supper was served by the Philathea Associates. Rev. Caleb Justice of the Union church, Weymouth, was the speaker for the evening.

—Dr. Wallace Drake is driving a new Ford sedan.

—An all-day meeting of Pilgrim Circle was held in the church parlors on Wednesday.

—Clarence Bragg of Bellows Falls, Vt., was a guest at the Alden home on Sea street over the week-end.

—Mrs. Margaret Culley is ill at her home on Pratt avenue.

—Sunday afternoon Combination 1 was called to the new Edison plant to extinguish a fire in a trolley car operated by John Murphy of Quincy. Fire was caused by short circuiting of the controller. The presence of mind of the operator who opened the door, pulled the trolley from the overhead wire and ordered the thirty passengers from the car prevented a panic. One woman whose identity could not be obtained, fainted away and was taken to the office of Dr. Drake for treatment.

—Mrs. Ebed Litchfield of Thomas Corner entertained a party at whist Saturday evening. The favors went to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Howe and Mrs. Litchfield and Mrs. Souther.

"GET TOGETHER"

The semi-annual "get together" of the sales force of Edwin Clapp & Son, Inc., of East Weymouth opened early Monday morning with a general inspection of the plant, particular interest being shown in the new six-story addition to the main factory which is to be occupied after April 1 and also to the additions to the north and northeast wings, which have already been occupied, the former being given over to the new cutting room and the latter to the upper leather and lining department.

A column report of this enjoyable gathering is in type, but cannot be printed until next week.

First Town to Elect Woman As "Selectman"

Again Weymouth is prominent in the news of the day, having elected a woman on Monday as a member of the Board of Selectmen, Mrs. Annie S. Lynch of East Weymouth. She finished third in a list of twelve candidates, five being elected, and is said to be the first woman to be elected a "Selectman" in the state of Massachusetts.

In the total vote, Dasha was high man with 1146. The next four were closely bunched: T. Tirrell with 1140; Mrs. Lynch 1082; W. Tirrell with 1061; Hastings 1054; all being elected. The sixth man was Whelan with 921; Perry with 831; and Pray with 817. All the others had less.

In Ward Three, Perry was high man with 411, Whalen second and Pray third, but in the town Whalen finished sixth, Perry seventh, and Pray eighth.

Ward Three made possible the election of Mrs. Lynch, almost defeated Mr. Hastings, and accomplished the defeat of all three of her own candidates

It was after midnight before the official returns were received by the Town Clerk from Ward Three, but at 9.10 the Gazette printed complete returns from all other precincts, and conceded the election of Mrs. Lynch, and the four Republicans elected, and congratulated Mrs. Lynch

For other offices these were elected:

Town Clerk—Clayton B. Merchant

Town Treasurer—John H. Stetson

Assessors (three years)—Charles H. Clapp, Richard Halloran

Collector of taxes—A. Wesley Sampson

Auditors—Frank E. Loud, Marshall T. Tirrell, Wallace L. Whittle

School Committee (three years)—Sarah S. Howe, Edwin R. Sampson

Water Commissioner (three years)—George E. Bicknell

Board of Health (three years)—Frederick L. Doucett

Park Commissioner (three years)—Charles W. Burgess

Trustees of Tufts Library (three years)—Wallace H. Drake, Arthur E. Pratt, Alfred S. Tirrell

Trustee of Tufts Library (to fill vacancy)—Joseph Kelley

Commisioner of Sinking Fund of James Humphrey School House (for three years)—Henry A. Nash

Tree Warden—Charles L. Merritt

Constables—Charles W. Baker, James L. Brennan, Edward F. Butler, John A. Carter, George W. Conant, Thomas Fitzgerald, Bertie T. Hobart, George W. Hunt, Arthur H. Pratt, Willie F. Tirrell

Moderator—George L. Barnes.

MORE BLANKS THAN VOTERS

Each person was entitled to vote for five candidates for Selectmen, but on the average more than one blank was cast by every voter. Undoubtedly some voted for five, but many voted for only one.

The number of blanks was the largest in Precinct 3 where the average was over two to a voter; and the average was nearly as large in precinct six. In precinct seven it was the smallest.

The blanks are compared below with the total vote of the precinct:

	Total Vote	Blanks for Selectmen
Precinct 1	349	513
Precinct 2	461	685
Precinct 3	821	1652

LEGION AUXILIARY
The American Legion Auxiliary is very pleased and grateful for the help and co-operation of the teachers and pupils of the Hunt school in their donations for the hospital work of the Auxiliary.

As a result of their goodness and kindness they turned over to Mrs. Riley, chairman of the hospital committee, to take to the West Roxbury Hospital on Tuesday, 600 oranges, 600 apples, 20 pounds of candy and jelly, also $17.10 in cash.

That Mr. C. Y. Berry, principal, did his part in explaining to the children about this work is easily shown by the results obtained.

The local post of the American Legion gave cigarettes, and Thomas J. Terry, a World War veteran, very kindly gave his services and automobile to take the ladies to the hospital.

As this was the first visit made to the hospital by this unit this year the committee was very glad to have so many things to take.

The boys in the hospital are very well taken care of and the conditions excellent.

It would please the Auxiliary very much to receive donations from anyone wishing to help in this work. The second Tuesday of each month is set aside for the Weymouth unit to visit the hospital and if anyone wishing to help will notify or send things to Mrs. Mary T. Riley, 25 Foye avenue, Weymouth, she will be glad to take anything to the hospital.

DOGS

MUST BE LICENSED

On or Before March 31st

Extracts from Chap. 140, General Laws of Massachusetts.

Section 137. The owner or keeper of a dog which is three months old or over shall annually, on or before March 31, cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed for one year from the first day of April following, if the dog is kept in Boston in the office of the police commissioner, or if kept in any other city or town in the office of the clerk thereof. The license shall be subject to the condition expressed therein that the dog which is the subject of the license shall be controlled and restrained from killing, chasing, or harassing sheep, lambs, fowls, or other domestic animals. The owner or keeper of a licensed dog shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered number.

Sec. 138. The owner or keeper of a dog may at any time have it licensed until the first day of April following and a person who becomes the owner or keeper of a dog after April first which is not duly licensed, and the owner or keeper of a dog which becomes three months old after March 31 in any year shall, when it is three months old, cause it to be registered, numbered, described, licensed, and collared as required by the preceding section.

Sec. 139. The fee for every license shall .... be $2.00 for a male dog and $5.00 for a female dog, unless a certificate of a registered veterinarian who performed the operation that said female dog has been spayed and has thereby been deprived of the power of propagation, has been filed with the city or town clerk, in which case the fee shall be $2.00. A certified copy of such certificate on file in the office of any town or city clerk within the commonwealth may be accepted as evidence that the said operation has been performed.

Sec. 140. The owner or keeper of dogs kept for breeding purposes may annually receive a license authorizing him to keep such dogs upon the premises described in the license. If the number of dogs so kept does not exceed five, the fee for such license shall be $25.00, and if the number of dogs exceed five, the fee shall be $50.00 and no fee shall be required for the dogs of such owner or keeper which are under the age of six months. The three preceding sections will not apply to licenses under this section.

Sec. 141. Whoever violates any provisions of sections 137, 138, or 140, shall forfeit not more than $15.00, which shall be paid, if the dog was kept in any city or town in Suffolk county, to the treasurer of the city or town, or if kept in any other county, to the treasurer thereof.

Sec. 142. No person shall keep or have in his care or possession any bloodhound, excepting an English bloodhound of pure blood, whose pedigree is recorded or would be entitled to record in the English bloodhound herd book, or any dog classed by dog fanciers or breeders as Cuban Bloodhound or Siberian bloodhound, whether such dog is in whole or in part of such species, unless such dog is kept solely for exhibition. In such case he shall at all times be kept securely enclosed or chained, and shall not be allowed at large even though in charge of a keeper, unless properly and securely muzzled.

Sec. 143. Whoever violates the preceding section shall forfeit $50.00, $10.00 of which shall be paid to the complainant and $40.00 shall, if the dog was kept in any city or town in Suffolk county, be paid to the treasurer of the town, or if kept in any other county, to the treasurer thereof.

Sec. 145. Every license issued to the owner of a dog shall have a description of the symptoms of hydrophobia printed thereon

WEYMOUTH WOMAN TESTIFIES

The Dorothy Gordon guardianship case assumed a new interest in Weymouth this week when a Boston daily printed the testimony of Tuesday. The report says:

Testimony of a woman detective, at one time a chorister, who took her two children with her while seeking evidence, featured Tuesday's proceedings before Judge John C. Leggart, in the East Cambridge probate court where the Dorothy Gordon guardianship case is being tried.

The detective, Mrs. Jane Merchant of East Weymouth, who was a visitor at the various Boston apartments in which Mrs. Susan Jordan lived, testified as to the relationship of Mr Jordan and William F. Jardine, temporary guardian of Dorothy Gordon, now an inmate in the McLean Insane Hospital at Waverly.

Last week Jardine was named in a $25,000 alienation of affection by Elmer L. Jordan of Arlington, former husband of Mrs. "Sue" Jordan The suit is yet to be tried.

Jardine earlier in the case denied undue intimacy with Mrs. Jord He said he visited Mrs. Jordan in her apartment a few times only for business reasons, declaring visits involved inspection and sale of jewelry.

Mrs Merchant appeared as a witness for John D. Gardiner of Baldwin, N. Y., uncle of Dorothy Gordon, who is seeking to have Jardine ousted and himself appointed permanent guardian. She was examined by Atty. John L. Sheehan, who asked her to describe episodes in the apartment of Mrs. Susan Jordan, wife of Elmer Jordan, when Jardine visited there.

Under direct examination the witness said that terms of endearment were exchanged by Jardine and Mrs. Jordan. She said that at one time Mrs. Jordan asked Jardine "Whose sweetie are you?" and he answered "Yours, I hope".

Mrs. Merchant said that once while she, Mrs. Jordan and Jardine were in the Jordan apartment on Commonwealth avenue, the bell rang and Mrs. Jardine appeared at the door. She added that Jardine immediately picked up his bag and went into the bedroom.

She declared Mrs. Jardine inquired of Mrs. Jordan if Jardine was in the apartment. The witness said that Mrs. Jordan denied that Jardine was there at the time.

Continuing her testimony she said that Jardine, when he came out of the room, after his wife had left, said "It was a close shave". She placed the day on which the above incident happened as the Monday after Easter Sunday of last year.

In response to further questions Mrs. Merchant said she had seen Jardine kiss Mrs. Jordan. She described this as being "a good-by kiss"

Asked whether Jardine had discussed with Mrs. Jordan the Dorothy Gordon case the witness said Jardine declared he was ready for every move. She also stated that Jardine told Mrs. Jordan "not to answer the bell at all". The instructions, according to the witness, were given after Mrs. Jardine had called at the apartment.

Asked if Jardine called at the Jordan apartment in 1923, the witness answered in the affirmative. She said that Jardine telephoned before coming down and then came in through the back door.

"Who let him in?" asked Atty Sheehan

"I did" replied the witness. The witness also said that on some of her visits to the Jordan apartment she was accompanied by her two children

In the testimony given earlier in the day Mrs. Merchant said she had seen Jardine under the influence of liquor and that she had observed him giving money to Mrs. Jordan.

"What did you see Jardine and Mrs. Jordan do at the apartment?" was one question put by Atty Sheehan to the witness.

"I saw them hug and kiss each other?" came the answer.

Atty. Robert W. Nason, counsel for Jardine, subjected the witness to a grilling cross-examination.

She described her first meeting with Mrs. Jordan and her subsequent visits to the Jordan apartments. She said the acquaintanceship ranged over a four-year period.

"Do you get just your mileage and subpoena fees for coming here to testify?" asked Atty Nason.

"Yes, and my salary for the day".

"What salary?" asked the attorney.

"The salary I get as an investigator".

"Whom do you work for as an investigator?" asked Nason.

"The Watts detective agency", answered Mrs. Merchant.

Asked if she knew a "Harry Forsyth of Melrose", the witness answered in the affirmative. The next question shot at her was

"You have letters from Harry Forsyth?"

"Yes" was the answer

"You collected money from him under threat that you would show some of these letters to his wife? asked Atty. Nason.

"No", almost shouted the witness.

"You asked him for money?" was the next question.

The witness admitted having asked Forsyth for some money as a gift. She said that she is still in posession of the letters.

"When did you make love to Harry Forsyth?" was the next question.

"About four or five years ago", was the answer.

"You are still fond of him" asked Nason.

"I am fond of him", answered Mrs. Merchant

She amplified her answers with the statement that she believed Forsyth was single, that he had separated from his wife, and that his total gifts during their four years acquaintanceship did not amount to more than $50 She said that as soon as she found that Forsyth had lied as to his being single, she notified Mrs. Forsyth of the real state of affairs.

On re-direct examination Mrs. Merchant, asked to recall the conversation between Jardine and Mrs. Jordan said that the latter told Jardine he had not got half enough out of the Dorothy Gordon case. She said Jardine's answer to this was "Just watch me".

The Gazette and Transcript assumes no financial responsibility for typographical errors in advertisements, but will reprint that part of an advertisement in which the typographical error occurs. Advertisers will please notify the management immediately of any errors which may occur. When possible advertisements should be forwarded by mail rather than by telephone.

When changes in advertisements are desired notice should be given on Monday or Tuesday, as part of the paper goes to press early in the week. New advertisements should be forwarded as early as possible but not later than Thursday.

WEYMOUTH, MARCH 16, 1923

TIME AND SPACE

The publishers of the Gazette-Transcript were greatly disappointed at the last moment last week to find that they had two or three more columns of advertising and news than they could possibly crowd into pages one, four, five, and eight. All the other pages had been printed earlier in the week.

We realize that many others were disappointed—some pastors and church people, because their regular Sunday notices were not printed; some moving picture houses, because their "readers" were omitted; some organizations because their meetings and entertainments were not reported; some advertisers because their "Ads" did not appear.

But sometimes people expect too much from the home weekly. The Gazette-Transcript was overflowing last week with reports of two town meetings, an illustrated sketch of the new Almshouse, and the other regular features.

Repeatedly we have asked people to forward advertisements and news letters, when possible, on Monday or Tuesday. Announcements of Sunday services should reach the Gazette office before 3.00 P. M. on Wednesday ALL news which reaches the office on Thursday or Friday must "take a chance". If possible, it will be printed, but please don't expect us to do the impossible. Advertisements and important news always have preference. Your favors will not be omitted if forwarded Monday or Tuesday.

It is imperative that the Gazette-Transcript go to press before 10.00 A. M. every Friday. Therefore TIME is a big factor every week. We must make a start early in the week. We must have copy on Monday and Tuesday. We must print four pages on Wednesday, four pages on Thursday and four pages on Friday

The other big factor every week is SPACE. If all the new advertisements and news stories were in Monday, it would be easy, but where so much comes in on Thursday it will always be a problem to find room on the last four pages (pages one, four, five, and eight) to accommodate everything. Every week these four pages are filled to overflowing. We never find it difficult to fill the Gazette.

Therefore, please simplify our work by forwarding advertisements and news stories early in the week. Then so many will not be disappointed. Kindly remember we cannot do the impossible. We work overtime Thursday nights; we get to work early Friday morning; we strive to print all the news; but there are limits on time and space which must be respected.

TENEMENT HOUSE ACT

Many voters received, just before the Annual Town Election the following letter. But evidently they felt insulted, for they voted 922 to 841 to repeal the Act. The letter in full:

"WEYMOUTH PLANNING BOARD
M. P. Garey, Secretary
March 9, 1923

"To You as a Voter:—

"It is for your interest to read this thoroughly.

"In the year 1912 Weymouth adopted a State law protecting her from cheap and dangerous building construction. Every town in the Metropolitan Area has done the same thing. This seems to show that it is the right thing.

"Now, an attempt is to be made to make Weymouth give up this protection.

"If you vote "yes" on the question "Shall the Town of Weymouth revoke its acceptance of Chapter 635 of Acts of 1912, being an act relative to tenement houses in towns", you will vote to throw the town open to slum building.

"Moreover you will vote to make Weymouth a dumping ground for all the bad building of the surrounding towns.

"Don't upset the good law that you have enjoyed for so many years.

"If you let the wooden three-decker in, it will jump your tax rate until you cry with pain, but your cry will then be in vain.

"It will be too late! Act now.

"Vote 'NO' on the question 'Shall the Town of Weymouth revoke its acceptance of Chapter 635 of Acts of 1912, being an act relative to tenement houses in towns.

"Yours truly,

M. P. Garey"

Many would like to know by what authority Mr. Garey uses the type written letterhead "Weymouth Planning Board". No meeting has recently been held by the Planning Board to consider the Tenement House Act.

Every town in the Metropolitan Area has not adopted the State law. Mr. Garey cannot name ten towns in the whole state that have adopted the Act.

With the repeal of the Tenement House Act should come the adoption of building laws. Tenement houses have been the only houses in Weymouth that have come under building laws, and the eighty odd sections made a too stringent law for Weymouth.

At the recent Annual Town Meeting a member of the "Town Council" made the statement that the adoption of the Tenement House Act had increased all rents in Weymouth $2 per month Evidently he does not agree with Mr. Garey, who says with the repeal, "Your tax rate will jump until you cry with pain".

Mr. Garey should now resign from the Planning Board. Certainly he has usurped the rights of other members of the board. Some of the buildings which Mr. Garey owns, and others which he sells, are more objectionable than new up-to-date apartments, steam heated with modern conveniences.

REPORTED DEAD

One of the reasons why Benjamin F. Smith was defeated for election as Selectman and Overseer of the Poor was because in the Town Report he was reported as deceased (see page seven).

Further, the list of Registrars of Voters is incomplete, in that it does not contain the name of the Town Clerk, and Patrick E. Corridan is not happy because the honors are given to "Patrick E. Corrigan".

Under the circumstances Mr. Smith made a very good run.

VOTE OF THANKS

Before adjournment, the annual town meeting extended a vote of thanks to the Moderator, Hon. George L. Barnes, for impartial services, and to the Appropriation Committee, which did much to expedite business.

TOWN COUNCIL

The following were elected as Town Council Members:

Precinct 1 (nine for three years)—William Hyde, Joseph H. McEnroe, Edward P. McManama, Raymond P. Stein, Charles A. Tobin, Stanley T. Torrey, Herman Collyer, Alton W. Jones, and George Hunt

Precinct 2 (three years)—Arthur A. Cicchese, Charles R. Denbroeder, Peter A. Gallant, Ralph H. Haskins, John H. Moran, Carl F. Prescott, David J. Toomey, Thomas L. Howley

Precinct 3 (three years)—Charles Y. Berry, Harry I Bicknell, George E. Bicknell, Patrick Casey, Edward A Hunt, Henry S. Litchfield, Arthur H. Lohnes, Dennis McCarthy, Arthur E. Pratt, John B. Whelan

Precinct 4 (three years)—Gertrude C Andrews, Charles DeRusha, Samuel S. French

Precinct 4 (two years)—Joseph E. Gardner, Frederick T. Merrill, John F. Robinson, Mary W. Tirrell

Precinct 4 (one year)—Darwin C. Adams, Chesley Carmack, Richard Halloran, Alfred S. Tirrell

Precinct 5 (three years)—Frederick C. Bauer, Melville F. Cate, Richmond Litchfield, Percy L. Bickrell, Matthew O'Dowd, Howard H. Joy, Josiah B. Reed, Oswald Ralph, Calora C. Shepherd, Chandler W. Smith

Precinct 6 (three years)—Bartholomew Coughlan, Patrick H. Dwyer, Nicholas Garofalo, H. Frank Holmes, John E. Mulligan, George W. Perry, Daniel Reidy Jr., Thomas B. C. Wade

Precinct 6 (two years)—Frederick Humphrey

Precinct 7 (three years)—Irving E Johnson, Walter W. Pratt, Alston A. Shaw

Precinct 7 (two years)—George O. Chamberlain, John L. Maynard, Ronald A. MacDonald

Precinct 7 (one year)—James C. Stever (two vacancies)

FEW STRAIGHT TICKETS

Great variation was shown in the vote for the Republican candidates as will be seen by this summary:

	High	Low
Precinct 1	260	121
Precinct 2	237	117
Precinct 3	285	167
Precinct 4	188	60
Precinct 5	202	81
Precinct 6	271	92
Precinct 7	94	58

And the same was true of the Non-Partisan candidates; in fact each voter and each precinct had a favorite son (or daughter).

Theron L. Tirrell was high man in Precincts four and seven, second in Precinct 2, third in precinct 3, fifth in precincts 5 and 6, and sixth in precinct 6

William B. Dasha was high man in Precinct 1, second in precinct 2, third in precincts 4 and 5, fourth in precincts 6 and 7, but sixth in Precinct 3.

Alfred W. Hastings led in Precinct 5, was second in Precincts 4 and 7, fifth in Precinct 2, but fell outside the charmed circle in the other precincts.

Winslow M. Tirrell was high man in Precinct 2, second in Precinct 6, third in Precinct 7, fourth in Precincts 4 and 5, but sixth in Precinct 5 and eighth in Precinct 3.

Frank A. Pray, the Precinct 3 Republican, was fourth in Precinct 3, and fifth in Precinct 5, but outside the first five in other precincts.

Of the Non-Partisan candidates, Mrs. Lynch was the leading candidate in Precinct 6, second in Precinct 3, third in Precinct 2, but below five in other precincts.

H. Franklin Perry received a phenomenal vote in Precinct 3, his home precinct, 411 out of a total 821, over a majority, but could not get a standing in any of the other precincts.

The other three candidates of the Non-Partisans were at the bottom of the list.

John B. Whelan, who ran as an Independent, made an excellent showing, and would have won with Mrs. Lynch or Mr. Perry out of the field. He was third in Precincts 3 and 6, fourth in Precinct 2, and fifth in Precinct 4.

Harry E. Bearce, the other independent candidate, did not get a place in any precinct, but had a total of 480.

HIGH SCHOOL CONTRACTS

Editors Gazette-Transcript:

The following letter was sent to the Building Committee for the new Weymouth High School, and is self explanatory. I trust you will publish in your next issue.

R. L. BAKER

Building Committee,
Weymouth High School,
Weymouth Massachusetts

Gentlemen: Having repeatedly requested of your chairman the privilege of estimating on the cost of heating the addition to the High School, we are now favored with a reply, stating three responsible heating firms have been chosen to submit such estimate and that no desire (up to the time of writing) had been expressed by the members of the committee to increase this number.

Undoubtedly, this is so, the committee, possibly, not having been informed of the desire of many contractors to enter this competition. In fact, we have understood that, at least, three of the committee were not at the meeting when these three contractors were selected, or not notified that there was to be a meeting for this purpose.

For this reason, we are communicating with each of the committee, trusting they will be governed somewhat by outside opinion and make the competition somewhat more pronounced.

We also understand we have been severely criticised for our interference in this matter and our letters called impertinent. Our excuse is, if one is required, we at least expected the courtesy of a reply to our correspondence.

Our latest information is that the committee have taken the trouble to have Bradstreet look up our rating. It is, at least gratifying to know that the committee should take upon themselves this trouble, and as the report proved satisfactory to the inquirer, may we ask who prompted the investigation?

It is the first time, to our knowledge, that a firm has been asked for a rating because he requests the privilege of estimating. It is quite equivalent to requiring a financial rating from one who proposes to teach at school, or for a lawyer to try a case, or an architect to draw his plans.

This probably would not have been done unless someone, knowing us to be a new firm, wanted an excuse to keep us out, and made the suggestion. But what excuse can be offered J. J. Hurley & Co., who have heated so large a percentage of Boston Schools, and why were not the plans forthcoming to them, that had been indirectly promised? Why, also, has a small plumber in Everett been working on the plumbing plans for many weeks? Why this privilege?

Please be advised we are a new firm, so new, in fact, that as yet our conscience does not trouble us with wrong doing, and did Bradstreet rate their subscribers by their morals, together with their finances, committee work would be simple, and our intentions for the welfare of Weymouth understood.

We have understood that your architect mentioned, in the course of conversation with your committee, the possibility of contractors conspiring together for high prices, and yet, in the face of this information placed before you, only three heating contractors are chosen to bid on this work making it as easy as possible for this collusion, to which your architect referred, should they be tempted in this direction.

It would seem that it would be the best judgment that any committee (in fairness to the contractors, at least) should make their arrangements so that criticism or suspicion would not fall upon those with whom they are dealing. While this intimation does not reflect upon those concerned in this particular transaction, similar circumstances warranted the wide investigation that took place in New York, in the past two years, which resulted in the indictment of about thirty heating and plumbing contractors.

Of course it is not to be believed that such a condition could exist in Boston, nevertheless the peace of mind of not a few seemed badly shaken with the thought of such an occurrence in this city.

Again, the writer makes the request for the benefit of the heating and piping contractors of Boston, for whom he held the office of field secretary (as well as himself, although not a member of this organization at this time) that you will not smother competition by refusing to allow those who desire, to estimate on this work.

Yours very truly,
GEORGE E. SORR CO.

RECEPTION TO FORMER PASTOR

Members of the First Congregational church and parish in Saugus tendered their pastor, Rev. Edward J. Yaeger, a reception in the vestry Thursday evening, March 8, in honor of the completion of the first year of his pastorate. In behalf of the gathering Dr. Ralph Danforth presented Mr. Yaeger with a purse of gold.

The church has grown substantially in membership, has tripled its attendance at the Sunday evening service and has practically cleared itself of a large debt during the year. Recently it has augmented its usefulness in the community by adding to its force of workers Earl Smith as director of young men and boys work

Thought for the Day.

Dedication of Pond Plain New Bungalow

The Pond Plain Improvement Association, assisted by the Ladies Auxiliary, opened their new home to the public on Saturday evening.

They have almost completed the building on Pond street and it promises to be an ornament to the locality and a feature to be enjoyed by every one who cares to avail themselves of th privilege it extends.

The hall was crowded to the utmost capacity and parking of autos showed that many of the participants came from quite a distance.

South Weymouth's best were in attendance and everyone seemed to greatly enjoy the entertainment, dance, and refreshments furnished by the committee.

The program was as follows: Leland Winchenbach, president, made the opening address introducing Mr. Harms, who was chairman of the building committee, who formally turned over the key to the building.

The exercises were opened by the singing of th National Anthem, followed by a few remarks by Mr. Hartt who concluded with a prayer.

Jacob Harms as chairman of the building committee gave a brief outline of the work accomplished and made special mention of the gentlemen outside of the building committee who had in any way given their time to assist his committee in their work. He then presented the keys to the association.

A telegram was read from Frederick Kent, a past president, and Mrs. Kent of Yonkers, N. Y., congratulating the society on their new building and wishing them success and prosperity.

Robert C. Polson then made the dedication speech which was enjoyed by all. Miss Mary Lindsay followed with an address in behalf of the Ladies Auxiliary. The entertainment committee, of which M. E. Caswell was chairman, then presented the following program: violin solo by Miss Eloise Pierce, vocal solo by Mrs. Dodge, fancy dancing by Doris Silva and Ruth Muhr, reading by Mrs. Gertrude Siven, fancy dancing by Edna Tyldsley, Louise Russell, Hazel Talbot, Glarys Talbot, Elsie Talbot, and Emily Snow. This was followed by dancing and refreshments which continued until about 12.00 o'clock. The music was furnished by Mason's orchestra. Everyone pronounced the occasion a complete success.

The building is 40x60 with a stage suitable for such entertainments as they wish to produce. It is a substantial building and well lighted. When completed the basement will be equipped with a kitchen, banquet hall, committee room, etc.

The association hope to meet all their friends and enjoy many occasions in the future.

MASONIC DEGREES

District Deputy Henry P. Tilden of the 26th Masonic district announces an exemplification of the work of the three degrees at the Masonic Temple at East Weymouth on Saturday, Mar. 24 Different lodges in the district, including those at Quincy, Braintree, and Weymouth will participate.

Wessagusset lodge of South Weymouth will attend divine service at the Old South Union church on the afternoon of April 15, when Rev. Bro. Francis A. Poole will address the brethren. Members of Orphans Hope and John Cutler lodges have been invited.

HOLY WEEK

J. CALEB JUSTICE.

The days lying between Palm Sunday and Easter have special significance to all people who value the Christian ethics. To the true church-man they are sacred days. To the man who in some measure appropriates Jesus Christ for his own life, words fail to express their spiritual meaning. For it was during this short span of time that Jesus passed from the Triumphal Entry into the city over which he wept, thru the experience of his Passion, trial, rejection and crucifixion, on to His victory over death on that first Easter morn.

All our sorrows for evil doing, our joy for sins forgiven, our hope of eternal life center upon the Saviour's work during Holy Week. The least the people can do is to honor Christ during this short period of time, by some self-denial, by attending the services in their chosen place of worship and by reverence of His Name.

To those who have neglected the faith of their childhood, to those indifferent to the hunger of the heart for God, to the careless—can you not at least honor the Christ for one week? It is true that our civilization fails to come up to the Christian standard.

That is not the fault of the Gospel, but our own—but it is not a Moslem nor a Buddhist civilization. Not these, but Christ is our leader tho we wayward children follow afar off. Salvation, and Joy and Peace and Strength and Courage await us at the Master's feet. O human soul, whoever thou art—

"Speak to Him, thou, for He hears,
And Spirit with spirit can meet,
Closer is He than breathing,
Nearer than hands or feet."

MEETING OF SELECTMEN

The Selectmen at their regular meeting this week reappointed Irving E. Johnson as superintendent of streets. Any other action would have been a disappointment to the voters and taxpayers.

Patrick E. Corridan was also reappointed for three years as a member of the Board of Registrars, and Emerson R. Dizer as agent to represent the State Industrial Accident Board.

Robert H. Healey was drawn for the grand jury.

Winslow M. Tirrell was granted an auctioneer's license.

Minor licenses were granted.

MEMORIAL DAY

Reynolds Post, 58, G. A. R., are already making plans for the observance of Memorial Day. The post has accepted an invitation to attend Sunday services at the Old South Union church at South Weymouth and has requested Rev. Frank Kingdon, a former pastor, to deliver the Memorial Day address.

G. A. R. CONVENTION

Bradford Hawes of Weymouth presided on Wednesday at the Norfolk County convention of the Grand Army held at Quincy in the Universalist church, the convention being the guests of Paul J. Revere post of that city.

The county convention of the Women's Relief Corps was held at the same place, Mrs. Lillian K. Holt of Needham presiding. A dinner was served at noon.

BROAD STREET LAND VALUES

A comparison of assessed land values is always of interest, but all attempts in recent years to have a "Valuation Book" printed have been defeated.

This week the Gazette-Transcript begins the publication of land values in the business centers of the town, presenting the facts without comment

First—Broad street from "William E. Johnson Square" at Madison street to Commercial Square, including Jackson Square and a few side streets.

Third—Columbian Square, South Weymouth

Fourth—Thomas Corner including Sea street and a part of Bridge street at North Weymouth.

Fifth—Central Square and vicinity

Sixth—Front street near Washington Square.

Seventh—Independence Square

Eighth—Weymouth Heights

By taking lots as located on the street in regular rotation an excellent opportunity is given for comparison, but one should be familiar with the location and the character of the land before passing judgment.

Beginning on Broad street, East Weymouth, at Madison street, the Alden, Walker & Wilde shoe factory lot is assessed at less than 11 cents per square foot, the Hodges lot at less than 10, and the Bosworth lot at less than 9. The Pecoraro lot is valued at less than 4 cents per foot, and the Queen lot with block and tenements at over 10 cents.

At Cottage street the Assessors make quite a difference in the value of the two corners—the Savings Bank lot is assessed at 18 cents per square foot, while the Hunt lot is valued at 33 cents.

The next lot owned by Mr. Lincoln upon which he refuses to set a price is valued at 30 cents, as is the next lot.

Then values begin to increase; the M. L. Denbroeder lot is assessed at 40 cents; the C. R. Denbroeder store lot at 48 cents; the Bates lot at 50 cents; and the corner estate owned by Mrs. Tirrell at 54 cents, the highest on the east side of Broad street.

The Merchant lot on which the

Semi Annual Get Together of Edwin Clapp & Son

The semi-annual "get-together" of the sales force of Edwin Clapp & Son, Inc., of East Weymouth opened early Monday morning last week with a general inspection of the plant, particular interest being shown in the new six-story addition to the main factory, which is to be occupied after April 1 and also to the additions to the north and northeast wings, which have already been occupied, the former being given over to the new cutting room, and the latter to the upper leather and lining department.

The cutting room is finished over head in gloss white, while the side walls are done in a soft grey tint, finishing without gloss so as to avoid glare. The benches are all of modern steel frame construction, with pine tops; finished in shellac, so as to keep them bright and clean, and the floors throughout are of maple.

The lighting is general in center and aisles, and individual over the cutting boards, the latter fixtures being equipped with the new blue nitrogen lamps, so arranged with shades as to avoid any direct rays being thrown into the eyes of the cutter.

An excellent system has been provided for handling the patterns, and the whole layout combines to make one of the lightest, cleanest, and most attractive cutting rooms it has ever been the writer's pleasure to visit and inspect.

The large, airy, upper leather stock room opening right off the cutting room, is finished in the same tones as the main room, among the unique features being the sorting benches, made of steel construction, topped out with pine, which in turn is surfaced with fine maple, finished and polished like the floor of a show window.

Another feature of this department is the arrangement of steel units for upper leather, each equipped with light steel doors, as an added protection to the choice stock they are designed to carry. All agreed that the upper leathers were receiving attention, such as their value warranted.

At the close of the visit to the new departments, the balance of the morning was spent in an inspection of the samples. At 12.30 luncheon was served after which consideration of the samples was resumed lasting through till 6.00 o'clock.

A social half hour was then enjoyed, during which an exciting game of pool between S. Preston Moses and Charlie Hauser on the one side and George W. R. Hill and K. L. Summers on the other, held the center of attention. A garrison finish, requiring all the skill and finesse of these masters of the green table, found George and Bob victorious and enjoying to the full the well earned applause of their friends.

Promptly at 6.30 the doors were thrown open and dinner announced. The tables were very attractive with their decorations of cut flowers, palms, and ferns; the rear of the head table was banked with palms and potted plants and at each plate was found a handsome boutonniere.

The gathering numbered about fifty of the salesmen, foremen, and executives, and at the close of the dinner the treasurer, Horace R. Drinkwater, acting as toastmaster called the meeting to order and after extending the official greeting and welcome of the firm, gave a short address, touching upon salesmen and salesmanship, past and present and closed by thanking the sales force for the close cooperation that had been so instrumental in bringing about the steady growth and progress of the concern all down through the years.

He then presented T. J. Evans, the "grand old man" of the Clapp organization, who, while now a resident of Brockton and prominent in the Shoe Manufacturers Association of that city, was for years one of the leaders in the Clapp organization. He was very happy in his reference to many little incidents and episodes of former days, his remarks being enthusiastically received and applauded to the echo.

S. Preston Moses followed with an interesting account of the early days of his connection with the concern, and told some "hair raising" tales of his pioneer days down in Texas when train holdups really happened outside of story books. Preston certainly has a way with him before an audience and his discourse was listened to with rapt attention.

Mr. Moses was followed by genial George W. R. Hill of the "Recorder" always a favorite at these gatherings and at the conclusion of his remarks he rendered by special request, as only he can, that amusing old poem entitled "Impediment Joe".

As this is a time when the salesmen are especially interested to hear from the credit department, it was evident that Mr. Hodges was very welcome as the next speaker. He reported things in excellent shape so far as his department was concerned and predicted a fine season, with plenty of business, which naturally made a hit.

"The Rosary" by Ethelbert Nevin rendered by the well known baritone Bert Wetmore, was next on the program. Mr. Wetmore was in excellent voice and made an instant conquest of his audience, responding to an insistent encore by singing "The Palms".

Mr. Marschalk, senior member of the Marschalk & Pratt advertising agency of New York gave an interesting account of the results of some of his experiences in research work, followed by Mr. Malloy, who brought the greetings of the "Shoe Retailer" which were very well received.

The program closed with a couple of numbers from "Robin Hood", Mr. Wetmore outdoing himself in his rendition of "Brown October Ale", which seemed to awaken tender memories in the minds of many of his audience. The balance of the evening was spent in an inspection of the samples.

Much credit is due Edwin Clapp Lincoln, Mr. Hodges, and Mr. Whitmarsh, the committee in charge, for the unqualified success of the affair.

Tuesday morning was spent on the new models and after luncheon the real packing began, the men leaving on Wednesday and Thursday for their respective territories. They are very enthusiastic over the way the samples have come through and are greatly pleased over the outlook for business.

Among those present were: Horace R. Drinkwater, Edwin Clapp Lincoln, Robert L. Summers, S. Preston Moses, T. J. Evans, George W. R. Hill, Bert O. Wetmore, H. C. Mershchalk, H. F. Malloy, Maurice R. Gondey, Willis H. Fletcher, J. Charles Hauser, Harry H. Wilson, Guy P. Moses, W. A. Hodges

P. Augustus Conathen, Louis H. Burgess, Burton E. Durgin, Shelton R. Houx, Fred A. Drinkwater, George F. Farrar, J. E. Fabyan, William Borden, Fred Townsend, Ellsworth J. Our, Edward Gaillardet

Henry T. Burke, Thomas J. Dalton, E. A. Whitmarsh, C. A. Rogers, Willard H. Holbrook, E. W. Thayer, Louis K. Jones, Thomas F. Greaney, E. F. McIntosh, F. J. Harrington, W. L. Stowell, J. W. Covill, Thomas F. Lynch, E. F. Doble, Alfred Thayer

WHAT IS IN A NAME?

Two little French words "Tres Bien" bring back to the minds of those who were "Over There" during 1917 and 1918, not only the sterner realities of war which they do not care to recall, but also the humorous incidents—rays of sunshine from out the dark clouds—which will always be recalled with a smile.

Some of these events, true to life, we will place before you in our four-act musical comedy "Tres Bien", at the Town Hall, South Braintree, on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, April 3 and 4, and at Bates Opera House, East Braintree, Friday evening, April 6. This play was written by Braintree Post, No. 86, American Legion, and arranged and staged by Comrade Joseph A. Crossen, who is an overseas man.

In order to properly produce this show, it has been necessary to construct special scenery, painted by an artist, not working from his imagination, but a buddy of ours who actually saw the scenes he has put upon canvas. He gives you a correct and detailed idea off things as actually seen by those in the front line.

The musical numbers are made up of familiar tunes sung and resung by the men "Over There", and of others written especially for this production The comedy and dancing features rank with the best on any stage, and the entire show, produced by a large and carefully selected cast, will furnish unalloyed enjoyment for all who attend.

For tickets see advertisement in another section of this paper.

FORE RIVER MANAGEMENT

Workers at the Fore River Shipbuilding plant by means of an employee's representation plan, are to work in conjunction with the management in shaping the future policies of the shipyard, according to an announcement made this week by General Manager S. W. Wakeman.

Committees of employees and committees appointed by the management will co-operate in all questions of industrial relations, including matters of wages, bonuses, safety methods, tonnage schedule, working conditions, living conditions, education, recreation, continuous employment, etc.

The plan is similar to those which for many years have been in effect in subsidiary plants of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation with satisfactory results to all concerned. Manager Wakeman also announced that the company will soon adopt a pension system, the details of which will be worked out in the near future.

Daddy's Occupation.

It was the first day of school and the teacher was taking the names of the children, those of their fathers and the business of each one. Small Lucy gave her name and that of her father, but hesitated and became silent when it came to his business. Urged by the teacher, she blushingly said: "He is Aunt Jane that does the woman's page and the beauty column of the newspaper."

GO RIGHT AT IT

Friends and Neighbors in Weymouth Will Show You a Way

Get at the root of the trouble.

Rubbing an aching back may relieve it,

But won't cure it if the kidneys are weak.

You must reach the root of it—the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right at it. Reach the cause; attack the pain.

Are recommended by many Weymouth people. Ask your neighbor!

Mrs. Llewelyn Thomas, 1 Granite street, Weymouth, says: "I was troubled with my back and kidneys and had sharp, cutting pains in the small of my back which seemed to be worse in the morning. My kidneys acted irregularly. A few boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills which I got at Kempl's Drug Store rid me of the attack. I have since used Doan's as a kidney tonic with great relief".

Price 60¢ at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Thomas had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

WEYMOUTH AND E. BRAINTREE

From Gazette Correspondents

—Braintree Point Women'sclub entertained at the new clubhouse at Red Pier with a St. Patrick's party. Solos by Mrs. F. R. Cogswell and piano selections by Mrs. Frank Hopkins. Games were played, the prizes being won by Mrs. Clarence Ford, Mrs. Lance Lowell, Mrs. Philip Cook, Mrs. Brock, and F. R. Cogswell. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Quinlan, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Furse, Mrs. Hess.

—At Harlow's the Busy Drug Store in Washington Square, Weymouth, Easter novelties in candies and favors. We have a big variety to choose from and hope we have what you want. Trade at Harlow's for good drug store products at right prices.—Advertisement

—Save Friday, April 13, to see "Three Live Ghosts" to be presented by Weymouth Post, 79, A. L., at Gem Theatre, Weymouth.—Advertisement

—Robert E. O'Connor and Joseph McRae, doing business as R. E. O'Connor & Co., garage and repair shop, East Braintree, have filed a petition in bankruptcy. Liabilities $600, assets $247.

—"All sold out" was the record established on the opening day of the Capeway bakery. Customers were privileged to inspect the work room as well as the salesroom and found it large and light and the equipment up to date. The ovens, the mixer, etc., are all modern.

—Whist party at Pythian hall, Weymouth, Tuesday night, March 27, admission only 25¢. Come and have a good time.—Advertisement

—Specials at Hunt's Market Grocery this week are: N. B. Co.'s Chocolate Delight 31¢ lb.; Bonita Red Salmon 25¢ can; Aunt Jemima's Pancake flour 14¢ pkg; Hunt's Quality coffee 41¢ lb; Fine Granulated sugar 11 lbs. for $1.00; Fancy Florida grapefruit, 5 for 25¢; tel. Wey. 970.—Advertisement

—The hot cross buns of the Home Town Bakery are always popular, and the company will make a specialty of them Easter week. It would be difficult to excell the products of the "Home Town".

MASONS AT CHURCH

Sunday afternoon at 4.00 o'clock a vesper service was held in the First M. E. church at East Weymouth with the members of Orphans Hope lodge, A. F. & A. M., as the guests of honor. A very pleasing musical program was rendered by the regular choir assisted by F. E. Holcombe, baritone. A very good number of Masons attended and the service was one full of inspiration for all. The pastor, Rev. Earl E. Story preached very ably on "Fulfilling the Royal Law". The address was full of practical suggestions and one that everyone felt repaid for going to hear.

EASTER PROGRAMS

Next week the Gazette will issue a special Easter number, and would appreciate the hearty cooperation of all the churches in the Weymouths. Please send your musical programs, special sermon subject and other information not later than Tuesday.

EAST WEYMOUTH

From Gazette correspondents

—Rev. Merrill E. Barter, who went from East Weymouth as missionary to Congo, Africa, has been put in charge of the largest Alliance church in the mission fields numbering 964 members and also teacher of a training school fitting native young men for preaching the gospel among their own people.

—Mrs. Lucy M. Loring, 80 years of age, passed away at her home on Shawmut street on Tuesday evening after a lingering illness. Mrs. Loring was stricken with a shock three years ago last August and was practically helpless ever since. Although confined to her bed she never lost interest and was always cheerful despite her condition. Funeral services will be held from her late home this afternoon.

—Miss Anna McCloskey of Hillcrest road has resumed her position at the local exchange after several weeks absence due to illness.

—Div. 9 and L. A., A. O. H., conducted a moving picture and vaudeville show in Odd Fellows hall last Friday evening. The picture given was "The Rosary" and vocal solos by Thomas Doherty of Avon, Miss Mae Morgan of Randolph, dances by Helen Merchant and Buddy Rousseau and O'Leary Bros. from Loew's circuit.

—Henry Tobin is confined to his home on Shawmut street by illness.

—Mrs. Rhoda Pratt, aged 75, passed away at her home on Hawthorne street on Sunday. Funeral services were held from her late home on Tuesday afternoon. A delegation from the W. R. C., of which she was a member, attended.

—The alarm rung in from box 26 shortly after 9.00 Tuesday evening proved to be a false alarm.

—The L. A., A. O. H., held a social following their last business meeting Supper was served by Mrs. Catherine Conathan and a corps of women. A farce "Not on the program" was given by the following cast: Ophelia, Mrs. Alyice Shields, Erastus, Catherine Howley; Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Mary Upton; Mrs. Whitney, Agnes Sullivan; Officer Hogan, Alice Cullen; Mrs. Fielding, Helen Condrick; Miss Sue Sheehan had charge.

—Miss Theresa Condon of Weymouth was the recent guest of local friends.

—Save Friday, April 13, to see "Three Live Ghosts" to be presented by Weymouth Post, 79, A. L., at Gem Theatre, Weymouth.—Advertisement

—Mrs. Sylvia Tirrell, 83 years of age, passed away at her home on Monday. Funeral services were held from her late home on Wednesday.

—About 250 members of Weymouth Circle, Daughters of Isabella, attended a reception given to Mrs. Annie S. Lynch in K. of C. hall on Tuesday evening in honor of her recent election as selectman and overseer of the poor. Mrs. Lynch came to the hall presumably to attend the regular social meeting and was very much surprised to find it had been changed to a reception for her. A supper was served in charge of of Mrs. Catherine Conathan and a corps of women. The musical program consisted of solos by Miss Elizabeth A. Donovan and duets by the Misses Marion and Barbara White. Thomas McCarthy, grand knight of Weymouth council, K. of C., gave an interesting address. Mrs. Lynch was presented a handsome basket of carnations and two large bouquets. Guests were present from Randolph, Quincy, and Milton circles.

—There will be a grand missionary rally in Faith Mission church on Easter Sunday. Several young people from the Boston Y. P. Society who are under appointment for different foreign fields, will be present and give short addresses. Further notice of this next week.

CLUB and SOCIAL

The program given at the regular meeting of the Monday club proved to be a very unusual one. Mrs. Gertrude Cutter took as her lecture subject: "Aunt Clarissa lends her heirlooms of two centuries". To carry out this theme Mrs. Cutter was appropriately costumed in a very handsome brocaded satin gown of the 1700 period and wore some interesting pieces of antique jewelry. A Marie Antoinette lichu gave the final touch to her costume. While giving her lecture Mrs. Cutter exhibited many exquisite examples of gown and handwork of the 18th and 19th centuries, most of the fabrics being handwoven. Beautiful embroidery and fine handwork delighted the audience of present-day women, who marvelled at the time required to do the work and also at the splendid condition in which these articles had been kept through all the years. Interesting to the people of this vicinity were some very fine handwoven towels which had been woven on Boston Common by women who carried their spinning wheels there in order to enjoy that spot while doing this work.

Preceding and following the lecture Miss Myrna Chamberlain of Wollaston gave charming groups of songs.

The next meeting of the club will be the annual dramatics meeting and the members taking part in the play are working faithfully to make it a success.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

The columns of the Gazette-Transcript are open to all communications on pertinent subjects. The name of the writer must be forwarded with the letter, not necessarily for publication. The views expressed may or may not be in accordance with those of the Editor, and he takes no responsibility therefor.

LETTER FROM REX

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

So Mr. Joy wants me to join the Historical Society and help to move it to Tufts Library building. Well, I am somewhat of a "jiner", but not an extremist in that line. I would rather sit in a gilt chair on a low pedestal and tell how things ought to go. But, no joking, the place for that society is in the Tufts Library hall. I am told that numbers of people visited the library just to look at that little case of articles from the Fifield home. I can seem to see the hall in question fitted up with wonderful old relics and hold it open to the public two or three afternoons a week. Have a small admittance fee that will pay a good looking young lady to stay during the hours it is open.

I can see so many things I would like to see come to pass as I sit on my pedestal, and from week to week shall speak of them in our good Gazette. REX

INROADS ON COAST LINE

How the Atlantic ocean is gnawing into the New England coast and undermining the cliffs near Scituate is told graphically by W. S. Jordan of Weymouth in an illustrated article in the April Popular Mechanics Magazine. The undermining of Third Cliff by the waves and the manner in which the water broke over the strip of land between Third and Fourth Cliff are told in detail, while the illustrations show the extent to which inroads on the coast line have gone. To readers in the inland states to whom the action of the waves is unfamiliar, the information given in the article will appear as a revelation of the extent of the damages wrought by storms.

REAL ESTATE SALES

The following Weymouth transfers of real estate were recorded in the Norfolk registry last week:

Oberlin S. Clark to Laura C. Webb, River street.

Lindley D. Deane et al to Raymond E. Stein.

Nellie E. Holden to Elizabeth B. McDonald, Squanto road, Pecksuot road.

Town of Weymouth to Michael J. Curley, Cottage Park.

Ann Tracy to Katherine V. Tracy, Summit street.

SELWYN THEATRE

"The Fool", Channing Pollock's powerful and interesting drama now in its seventh week at the Selwyn theatre, Boston, is not only the latest but the most ambitious contribution so far made to the stage.

"The Fool" might be called a modern morality play or a revival play, for the principal character is an idealist fighting injustice and materialism tooth and nail. As assistant rector of a fashionable church in New York, he is banished from the pulpit for denouncing greed and hypocrisy, which to him are synonyms for wealth and success. He casts his lot with labor, to help in the conflict with capitalism; but here, too, he meets rebuffs and is saved from attack as if by a miracle, when a crippled girl walks for the first time and so awes the mob of disgruntled strikers that taunts and threatens him. So the play is brought to a thrilling climax, which points the theme of spiritual regeneration.

TREE PLANTING BEE

The committee appointed at the Annual Town Meeting on forestry in Weymouth should secure some of the trees to be distributed by the State.

Massachusetts will have the biggest tree planting bee in its history this spring when 2,000,000 pines and spruces are set out by cities, towns and private citizens on waste land. Most of the young trees will be sold at nominal cost by the State.

"There has been a decided awakening in Massachusetts to the need of forest conservation", said Chief Forester H. O. Cook recently. "In our state nurseries, in which we raise pines and spruces, we have 1,500,000 trees of the best age for transplanting There is such an increased interest in this subject that we expect to produce transplantable trees in our nurseries at a rate in excess of 4,000,000 annually".

The lowest estimated cost of the forest plantings is two cents for each little tree. The entire cost probably will exceed $40,000. In fifty years the trees should be worth $200,000.

Water supply companies are particularly active in creating forests as a means of conserving rainfall on the sloping lands surrounding reservoirs, said Forester Cook, and cranberry growers are increasing the number of trees planted in the bare acreage around their bogs.

Pittsfield will plant 75,000 trees this year, mainly spruce, in the campaign for forest conservation started by foresters of New England at a meeting in Boston this winter. Other community forest plantings will be made in various parts of the state.

In general the trees to be set out in the western counties are spruce. In the eastern counties the plantings will be of white pine. As a means of combatting the serious ravages of white pine blister rust, the State is offering the immune Scotch pines to be mingled in the new forest areas.

Overcoming Sleeplessness.

For sleeplessness a supper of fresh lettuce leaves, whose juice contains a powerful sedative, will induce a sound, refreshing sleep. Another soporific is the onion, which, stewed and eaten last thing, answers the double purpose of promoting sleep and curing a chill.

REBEKAH SOCIAL
At the regular meeting of Steadfast Rebekah lodge held Monday night a chafing dish social was enjoyed by all. Wednesday night the first social dance was held in G. A. R hall. Mrs. Lotta Bearce, the noble grand, was chairman. Under the auspices of the lodge a very successful party was enjoyed, and the entertainment furnished by Mrs. Charles Gibson added much to the party. Another of these parties will follow in April.

PARISH SUPPER
A parish supper was held Tuesday evening for the members and friends of the First M. E. church where all enjoyed a roast beef supper after which reports from the various church organizations were made. Rev Earl E. Story welcomed the friends and members and introduced the speakers during which time an invitation to unite with the church was extended to any who had been thinking it over seriously and really desired to come in.
C. R. Denbroeder spoke as superintendent of the Sunday School; Sumner W. Chandler, president of the Epworth League; Olive D. Sylvester, superintendent of the Junior League; Mrs. E. A. Chandler, representating the Ladies Social Circle, Mrs. S. C. Burgoyne, the W. H. M. S.; B. B. Sylvester, trustees and official board; F. W. Preston, treasurer of the church; C. H. Chubbuck, the men's club; Arthur A. Eddy, representing the Boy Scouts. Mrs. G. Ralph Young sang several soprano solos accompanied by Mrs. W. A. Hodges.
A report of the every-member canvass was given under the direction of W. A. Hodges and it is hoped that even though the budget is larger than ever this year the full amount will be raised before the end of this week The whole event was a great success and all those present declared it was a fine get-together time.

OLD COLONY CLUB
—The Old Colony club met as usual in Universalist church on Thursday. Mrs. Mary Wilbar Bauer gave a most delightful review of her trip last spring through Central Europe in 21 days. The Lorelei Ladies Quartet rendered selections which were properly applauded by the audience. Tea was served in the social room by Mrs. George Shaw as hostess. Preceding the tea a short talk was given by Mrs. Sarah Beall representing the Dromdary Fruit Co. who served dainties from their product.

LAND VALUES
stores stand has been referred to as the "diamond mine", but is valued at only 52 cents.
The Dunbar lot which includes about four acres of back land, is assessed at less than two cents and the Spear estate which includes nearly two acres of land in the rear at 3 cents.
The small Reidy lot is valued at 15 cents, and the French lot at 7c.
Around the corner on Commercial street, the Miller lot is taxed at 15; the Smith lot at 8, and the Keegan lot at 4 cents.
A summary from the Assessors' Books of 1922 accompanies this article giving the number of square feet in each lot and the assessed value of the lot. Another column tells the value placed on all buildings on each lot. Taxpayers will find it an interesting study.

WEST SIDE BROAD STREET
Beginning on Broad street at Fairmount avenue, the Fennell lot is assessed at 12½ cents per square foot, and the Dr. Chase lot at less than 11 cents. The Dr. Doucett lot at 17 cents, the McGrath lot at 16 cents, the Dr. Fraser lot at 12 cents, the Dr. Libby lot at less than 9 cents, and the Raymond lot at less than 11c
The M. P. Garey estate opposite the Town Offices is valued at only 11 cents per square foot. The Webster lot between the Methodist church and Shawmut street with stores at 18 cents.
The French lot on the opposite corner of Shawmut street at 37 cents, and the Garey lot next at 53 cents. The Sylvester lot is valued at 57 cents, the Cassasa lot at 54 cents, the Flint lot which has two buildings at 55 cents.
The highest value is placed on the lot occupied by the Reidy drug store $1.24 per square foot.
The Bicknell house next door on which is an old house, is assessed at 51 cents, the McCarthy lot at 24, and the Peaslee lot at 12 cents.
Mr. McCarthy has another lot beyond which is assessed at 11 cents, the Pratt lot at 9 cents, the Connell lot at 7 cents, the MacFawn lot at 2 cents, the Sprague lot at 6 cents; and the lot where the car barn stands at 2 cents.
Coming back to Jackson Square on the other side of Pleasant street, the Weymouth Light & Power Co. get away with a land tax of 5 cents per square foot, while the Reidy lot pays 3 cents.
The Spencer lot is taxed at 23 cents, the Randall lot at 8 cents and the White lot at 15 cents.
The Greeley lot nearby is assessed at 10 cents, the Peakes lot at 54 cents, the Petrucceli lot at 32 cents, the Maloney lot at 11 cents, and the Murphy lot in Commercial Square at 10 cents.
Next week, land values in Washington Square will be printed, to be followed by other squares.

UNION MEN'S CLUB
The Union Men's Club of Weymouth and East Braintree held their regular monthly roast beef supper in the dining room of Union church on Wednesday evening with Selectman Edward Avery of East Braintree, the president, in the chair. The supper under the direction of L. H. Hyde, was served by Mrs. Chester Howe, Mrs. George Lentz, Mrs. J. F. Appleyard, Mrs. Bradford Knight, Mrs. Clarence Rich. The musical trio, Ingles, Rankin, and McGonnigal, rendered selections and led the popular songs. Several new members were voted into membership. It was voted to hold the next supper April 18 as ladies night.
President Avery introduced the speaker, ex-Senator McIntosh of Quincy, who talked from his own experiences, formerly as a member of the granite cutters union and later as an employer. He said in part:
"I have come to you having been thru a labor war. Our country had been drunk with prosperity and business in consequence has been demoralized since the war. I want to tell you that the open shop is a disaster. Never lend your aid to what is called the American plan. Quincy's experience was a terrible disaster and put us back many years.
"The open shop is not compatable with the principles under which the eastern manufacturer does business. It may work our West, but the West cannot tell us what to do. Our laws such as those relative to child labor are far in advance We should have restricted immigration laws, even more restrictive than at present. There are too many radicals coming into this country who have no respect for American ideals nor religious institutions".
The speaker favored compulsory arbitration in labor disputes, the doing away with the high-salaried labor leaders, who draw upward of $15,000 a year and ride around in their limosines He said that the great middle class must be taken into the counsels of capital and labor.
"In condemning the American plan I do not mean to condone methods frequently used by labor unions", he said. "We must win the labor unions over by reason. Grant them the right to organize, then ask them to recognize our reciprocal right to protect the rights of the public".

Free and Frank Opinion.
"You ask me," said the harassed editor, "if you ought to write on both sides of the paper. In my opinion you ought not to write on either side of the paper."

Trade in Washington Square

Good Stores of All Kinds — Local Merchants Are Your Friends

Enthusiastic Meeting of Merchants at Gem Theatre

In response to a call issued by these business men of Washington Square, Edward W. Hunt, Howard B. Hall, Charles G. Jordan, Thomas F. Marshall, Clarence M. Price, and Chester H. Rogers to consider the feasibility of organizing for the development of Weymouth and East Braintree, resulted in a very large gathering of men at the Gem theatre on Monday night. Every store was represented; the clergy were also represented and took an active interest and other prominent men of the locality voiced their hearty approval of the project. The theme of nearly all was the benefits of cooperative efforts, with any line of endeavor By united action it was felt that business can be developed in Washington Square; it should be the logical center for trade for those living in the vicinity. The stores are there, all they need is the trade. Now is the time for the merchants to get together, discuss their problems, advance thoughts and ideas, and thru a united cooperation the square can be made a prominent trading center, but it needed concerted efforts of all the business men.

If every merchant showed the spirit and willingness as shown by Chester H. Rogers, the genial proprietor of the Gem theatre, who not only gave the use of the Gem theatre, lights and heat, but furnished, thru the Donovan Sisters and Florence McKenzie some pleasing musical numbers on the piano and organ, accompanied by songs. Both the Misses Donovan and Miss McKenzie are talented when it comes to singing and their solos were enjoyed.

Howard B. Hall acted as moderator of the meeting, saying it was an open meeting and wanted the expressions pro and con as to the project suggested. It is hoped that all the merchants of East Braintree and Weymouth would unite (and here the Gazette would suggest that the boundaries of the Square be from the Monatiquot River at Quincy avenue to the top of the hill at Lincoln Square from the hill on Front street to the lumber yard) Mr. Hall asked "Do all here present do their trading here? If not, why not? Do you make your show windows attractive enough to draw attention? Do you keep your back yards clean and picked up?" He spoke of Brooks-Skinner leaving town and no effort made to have them reconsider.

Mr. Hall said it took nerve to start or advance any new project, but saw no harm in it as he had seen the results in other places thru cooperative or collective efforts. To the idea that this locality is a good place to sleep should be added it is a good place to trade.

He said he had been fortunate in securing for the first speaker George Dunning, one of our valued citizens, and a man that knows the value of advertising and cooperative effort. The Gazette has Mr. Dunning's remarks in full, and regrets space will not permit the use of it this week, but next week it will be printed, and should be read by all, for it touches on many important points. The speaker told an interesting story of a driver cleverly using his whip to snap off a fly on a horse's ear, then on a leaf at the end of a twig, and finally when a companion asked him to do it to a hornet's nest the driver replied, "Hey, Boss, a fly is a fly, a leaf is a leaf, but this hornets' nest is an organization and I have great respect for an organization". That was Mr. Dunning's feeling and he thought it would be of a great benefit to Washington Square.

Wilbur, the shoe man, was next called upon. He felt an organization either a Board of Trade or Chamber of Commerce would be a good thing. Many problems could be solved like early closing and regulations as to closing time. Felt that cooperative advertising and good feeling existing among merchants would bring results.

Fr. J. B. Holland, who loves Washington Square and has worked hard for it, said that it was years ago he received his mercantile training at Quincy Market, and while his ideas might now be a little old-fashioned he felt what a nearby city had done towards building up a wonderful trade Washington Square could do likewise. Why was it cash there and credit here. He felt if the merchants worked together, bought and sold together, the stock could be turned over more frequently and better prices would prevail. The Golden Rule is a good rule for all, merchant, customer, and even the town. Felt there was a lack of public spirit in Weymouth. He spoke of war times when he and Joseph Kelley were the sole committee to raise the quota for the American Library Association that furnished the reading for the boys on land and sea. How poor the response from the men's clubs, women's clubs, and only thru the hard efforts of these two men the drive went over the top. Then when the Liberty Bonds came along, yes all took them because they got something for their money. He felt the lack of public spirit was holding Weymouth back. By getting together retail trade conditions could be improved. A campaign like that on the street cars "Trade at your neighborhood store" was a good one and should be enlarged. He said the world is big enough for all, and put yourself out to do little favors for those around you. Stores depend on the public, and need them. Favored organization, place better for it, his contribution was ready and his parting words were to all to leave the world a little better for your living here.

Mr. Cahill spoke of the many towns that he had visited that had active organized bodies. It would be a grand thing here, and was willing to help aid such a body in every way that he could.

Rev. J. Caleb Justice spoke quoting Mr. Dooley, describing the modern business idea says: "If anybody offers you something for nothing, or something for less'n its worth, take no chances, call a policeman". Now the business men ought to take a chance and have an organized body. The clergymen had a club and it was a good thing; the merchants should have one. Had been here three years and at first he hardly knew whether he was in Weymouth or Braintree. Had to maintain a mail box at Weymouth postoffice. Felt that the Smelt brook kept the settlement apart, kept it from growing, and prevented an organization. Wondered if the merchants realized the absolute need of organization and cooperation. He said there was no common interest between the different parts of Weymouth. Town government was only connecting link. There is room for every kind of a business here; felt that with new stores and a theatre the boom was here. The appearance of the new Washington Square was a credit to Weymouth and East Braintree. His advice to merchant, disregard the Smelt brook, get together —bring trade here.

E. S. Jordan spoke of a movement years ago to bring about a consolidation of East Braintree and Weymouth

Rev. William Hyde thought it was strange that the clergymen had been invited. Thought perhaps the merchants had got together to issue an edict against program advertising. Said it was an evil; his church was not guilty of and felt it was a practice that should be cut out. There had been a business organization before, but public interest lagged; he acted as secretary, and personally delivered the calls for meetings Poor attendance; found men in groups smoking or playing cards, having forgotten all about the meeting. All should be loyal to an organization if formed. The old saying, there are too many churches, may be true, but would not be so if all attended church which they should do. And true of stores, if more trading was done in Washington Square there would not be enough stores. Trade with local grocer, it is best all around —many do trade with same store for years. There was Sladen's store at the Heights, a good store, with good goods. It was needed and filled an important place. Yet daily in the vicinity were autos or wagons from almost everywhere, but when these people wanted anything in a hurry they picked on this store, and if refused, wondered why they did not keep a bigger variety; also ask for credit, yet they pay cash outside. Felt organization would make it possible for stores to carry larger stocks. Organization should create more helpful interest away from selfish purposes. It was a disgrace that sufficient interest could not be raised to properly celebrate 300th anniversary. The Historical Society will itself have a celebration and put a memorial on Great Hill.

Howard M. Clark thought such an organization would be a great good in the locality for many reasons, and hoped it would be formed and correct many existing evils. He spoke of juvenile delinquency that found boys digging in dumps for questionable products that they later sold. Thought this organization could correct this.

Frank W. Stewart said such an organization should be formed, that all would get into harmony. Favored the cleanup of backyards.

Frank A. Pray said Weymouth has a wonderful chance to forge ahead. Already the boom is noticed in his real estate activities. At one time he was a merchant, and had not forgotten the trials of storekeepers. He had graduated into the real estate business and predicted a sudden growth. There were not stores enough. Shoe factories were thriving and all should be given a chance to make good.

John Laing of Laing Bros. of Hayward street said there was a good chance to build the place up. He said they were practically newcomers here. At first by outsiders they were advised to go to Braintree, but the local people discouraged them. Business had been good and they had hoped to build an addition this spring He had travelled over the country, seen the rapid growth almost over night of many towns. Absence from your home locality will sooner show up the changes. He spoke of the rapid growth of Quincy, his home town; thought if the people were willing to cooperate just such a growth could be made here.

Plans of organization were then taken up. On a motion made and carried Howard B. Hall was chosen moderator, and Howard Wilbur temporary secretary. By-laws were discussed and suggestions made.

Rev. Justice moved that the gentlemen that called this meeting be elected a committee on organization to be ready to report in two weeks. The same committee to send out some temporary by-laws to be discussed and voted on at the next meeting. A vote of thanks was given Chester H. Rogers for the use of the Gem theatre. A rising vote of thanks to the young ladies for their entertainment.

It was a very profitable evening; the splendid gathering of over one hundred men should and can be taken as good omen for the future prosperity and growth of Washington Square.

—The grand concert and ball of Div. 6, A. O. H., and the Ladies Auxiliary held at the Gem theatre last Friday evening was a big social and financial success; more than 250 couples from this and other towns attended. There was an entertainment consisting of solo and fancy dancing by Miss Anna Garrity and James Gilligan, readings by Miss Helen Spillane and the comedy "The $100,000 club paper" was given by a cast composed of Miss Ruth Shannahan, Miss Margaret Haviland, Miss Helen Lyons, Miss Viola McCarthy, Edward Cleary, Timothy McCarthy and Thomas Cassidy. DeNeill's orchestra furnished the music for the dance and it was the finest music heard at a dance in this town for a long while. They were obliged to respond to encore after encore. The affair was in charge of President Thomas Hayes assisted by an efficient committee.

—Miss Margery Worster was taken ill with appendicitis Sunday and was removed to the Bay State Hospital where an operation was performed. She is reported as getting along nicely.

—Miss Elisabeth Bachrie, who had her leg broken by a fall on the ice some time ago, has been taken to the Bay State Hospital for treatment.

—The public schools close today for the annual spring vacation and will open again Monday, April 2.

—Miss Bertha Beals of Federal street, who has been training for a nurse for sometime at the Jordan Hospital, Plymouth, underwent an operation at that place for appendicitis a short time ago and is now convalescing at her home.

—Joseph Lemeire of Montreal has been here on a visit to his brother in law, Godfred Rondeau of Summer street.

—Mrs. Arthur Bussiere sailed on Saturday for Liverpool, England, where she will visit her parents for a few months.

—There is to be a two-weeks mission at the Church of the Sacred Heart next month.

—Patrick E. Corridan, who has for years been in the leather business with Boston firms, has embarked in business for himself as a dealer in sole leather and cut soles.

—Carl Everson of 481 Front street has purchased a Fordson tractor. This is the first one in this vicinity.

—The Summer Street baseball club, which is one of the best amateur teams on the South Shore will start practice April 1 according to Manager Edward Lukeman. The team has played Sunday afternoons at Raymond's field for the past two years and always before large crowds. It is planned to have a stronger team than ever before in the field this year.

—Henry Griffin of Phillips street was hit by an automobile on Harrison avenue, Boston, last Friday. He was taken to the City Hospital where his wounds consisting of a bad cut on the head and face were dressed and Sunday he was able to return home.

WASHINGTON SQ. LAND VALUES

Land values in Washington Square as appraised by the Assessors of 1922 will soon be printed in the Gazette-Transcript, probably April 6. The area and value of each lot on Washington street, beginning at the Braintree line, will be printed. Land values in Jackson Square will be printed March 30.

GEM THEATRE

The presentation of "The town that forgot God" at the Gem theatre this week was another of the many fine pictures Mr. Rogers has in store for his patrons. The audience gasped with astonishment at the spectacular and realistic flood scene. It surely seemed as though the wrath of God was in the torrent. Next week Mr. Rogers will present Rudolph Valentino in "The Young Rajah" and the beautiful Gloria Swanson in "The impossible Mrs. Bellew"

MADE TO GREET THE SPRING OF SMART, NOVEL FABRICS

WHEN its tulip time in Manhattan—or anywhere else—our eyes are going to be gladdened by out-of-the-ordinary suits like that shown here. They will be refreshing for they are made to greet the springtime, of new fabrics, skillfully used, in simple designs. Texture of the materials, colors and color combinations account for more than half their charm. These are the new knitted weaves in silk that lend themselves to the sort of dress that American women seem to like best—dress that is smart, and has a casual quality, that registers a vivid, pleasing impression at first glance and that is simple.

As for simplicity, the suit illustrated hardly needs a description—the picture tells its story so well. You can imagine it in blue and gray with a bodice of plain gray crepe de chine to which bands of plain blue, cut from the silk, are applied, with rows of little, round, gray pearl buttons set across the top of each band. The sleeves are banded with the striped material and the skirt and sleeveless jacket are made of it—the jacket lined with plain crepe de chine.

There are many color combinations and patterns in the new weaves that are inspiring to designers, for there is distinction in the suits made of them, and the mode demands distinction in suits with an insistence that has furthered the cause of the costume suit and put it in a place of first importance in spring wardrobes.

FROCKS FOR ALL-DAY WEAR SIMPLE AND WELL TAILORED

HOW remote the days seem when the neat but unromantic shirt-waist and the trim, tailored skirt occupied nearly all the horizon, in the realm of dress for all-day wear! They play but a small part now. Frocks began displacing suits a decade ago.

The all-day dress may be a one or two-piece affair. All interpretations of the blouse do their part to lend it variety. The mode decrees that it should have slenderizing lines, with the waistline low—that it shall not be shorter than seven inches from the floor, that the sleeves may indulge in vagaries, and, if it is simple, so much the better. Ingenious and original little touches in cut or in details of finishing are at a premium. Designers make a national reputation for themselves, turning out models that have individual touches, and the shops are full of "Sally" and "Betty" and "Barbara" and "Peggy" creations.

Two models that may be made in either wool or silk fabrics are pictured here as good examples of both the one and two-piece dress. The black crepe dress at the left has an interesting drapery drawn closely about the hips and quite full in front, where a many-colored bead ornament is placed.

A plain skirt shorter than fashion demands and a plain blouse with several novel points, tell the story of the dress at the right. The wide belt is covered with folds of the material—the sleeves are draped and lined with contrasting crepe, which appears again in a cut-out portion of the blouse. It is decorated with stitchery.

Barbecue Under Southern Skies

Charles W. Barrows of Hingham writes from Orlando, Florida, under date of March 5:

"We look forward to receiving our Weymouth Gazette each Monday afternoon.

"Am sending a picture of a barbecue at Orlando, Florida, taken on Christmas Day. The party was made up of tourists from New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Michigan, North Carolina, Georgia, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sullivan, cousin of Dr. D. G. Underwood of Hingham, and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Barrows and family of Hingham, formerly of Weymouth Heights were among those present.

"Southern hospitality is hard to beat, I can assure you, and this party was held at the home of real Floridians, and was a sure enough all-day entertainment.

"If possible I would like to have the enclosed picture put into the Weymouth Gazette, the finest little paper we have seen yet".

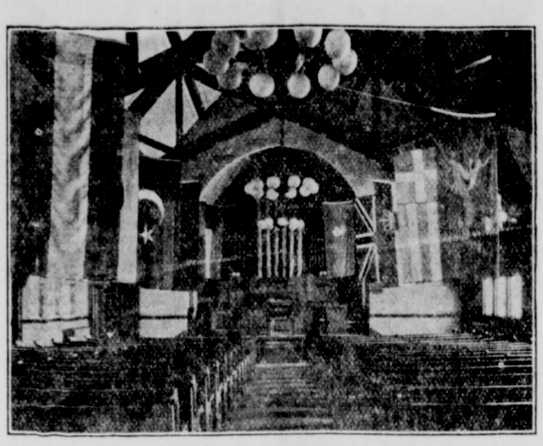
The World in Weymouth

A Missionary Exhibit

The Missionary Exhibit, "The World in Weymouth" held at the East Weymouth Congregational Church on Feb. 4—7, which was reported extensively in the Gazette at that time, has aroused considerable interest in Congregational circles everywhere. In this and the next few issues of the Gazette, thru the courtesy of the "Congregationalist", pictures of the exhibit will be printed describing the events of the four-day program. These pictures were taken by a Weymouth photographer, Arthur W. Cook.



THE AUDITORIUM

The exhibit program opened on Sunday with special services in the auditorium of the church. Sixteen large banners hung from the beams arranged on either side of aisle, forming a lane, at one end of which hung the American flag illuminated. The missionary address in the morning was delivered by Mrs. Hannah Hume Lee and in the evening by Bhasker P. Hivale of Bombay, India.

THE A. M. A. EXHIBIT IN THE PARLOR OF THE CHURCH

The material had been distributed under four headings: a.—The Negro in Africa. b.—The Negro in Slavery. c.—The Negro Freed, and d.—The Negro Educated. The table in the center of the picture shows the exhibit of the G. A. R. under the heading, "The Negro Freed". The G. A. R. men of the local post displayed the relics and mementoes of the Civil War and attended themselves to tell their story. On the tables is some of the handwork of the pupils in the A. M. A. schools. More than six tables were needed for this display. On black screens around the room hung pictures of the schools and the pupils. Young men of the Christian Endeavor Society built the models of the church, schcolhouse and bed on the table at the left of the picture.

THE INDIA BOOTH

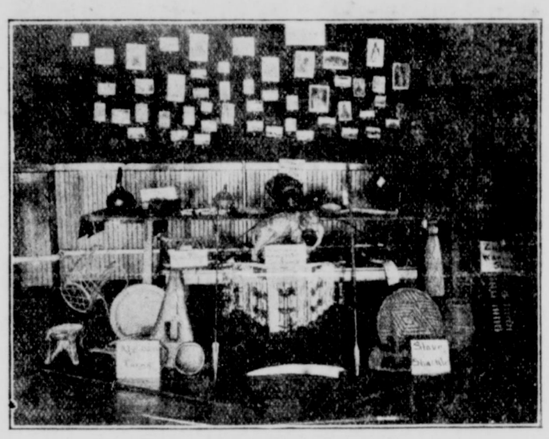
The first of five sections and booths in the American Board exhibit. Missionary pictures and pictures illustrating the customs and life of the people of India hung on screens at right of picture. The curios on the table at the right were loaned by Mrs. Hannah Hume Lee and the Woman's Board of Missions. The young men of India are taught rug weaving by the missionaries on looms similar to that shown in the center of the picture. The women of the church built the booth, decorated it with flowers and later attended in costumes of India and served delicacies peculiar to the country. The statuaries, vases and mats were borrowed locally.

THE TURKISH BOOTH

The Near East Relief loaned some unusually delicate handwork of refugees from Armenia. The Red Cross also sent a large and varied collection of material from the Washington Museum of the Society for display. Dolls dressed in costumes of the country were loaned by the Near East Relief. The medal in the center of the picture was one presented for bravery by Sultan Hamid. The Mohammedan prayer rug on the floor, the Persian rug on the wall and saddle bags were loaned by a dealer in Oriental rugs. A young lady artist of the church drew the large hanging at the right. She drew the picture of the local church in the circle. The mission work of the American Board was told in pictures on the screens at the extreme left. The women in Turkish costumes served Turkish coffee, lokoum (Turkish paste) and paklava (Armenian pastry).

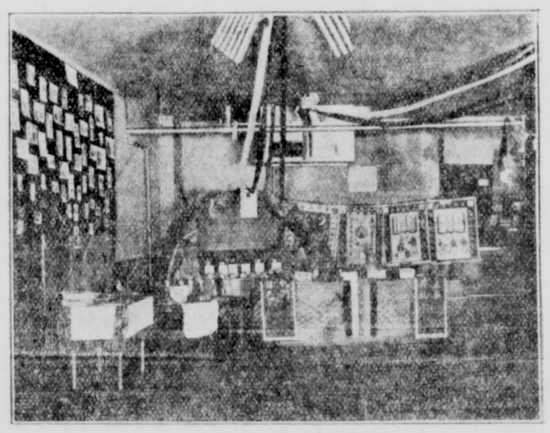
THE JAPANESE BOOTH

The Japanese booth has a sloping thatched roof. Besides the material loaned by missionaries were shawls, vases, frames, etc., loaned by people locally. Pictures on the screen not shown in the photograph told the story of mission work.



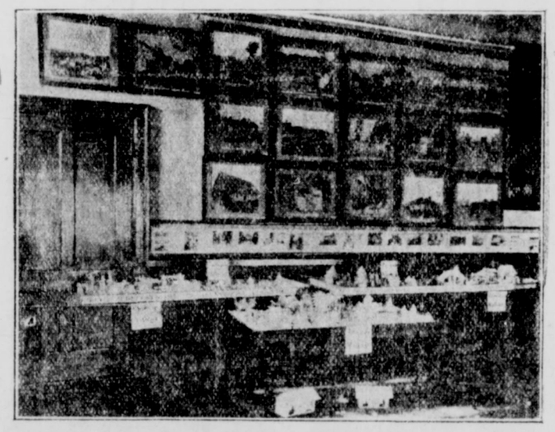
THE AFRICAN EXHIBIT

While no booth was erected for the African display, the committee had the largest and best collection to show. The hand-printed cards indicate some of the objects in the collection. Rev. William C. Bell, returned missionary from Africa, attended the exhibit and told about mission work conversationally as at the same time he described the curios. The American Board owns a large part of this unusual collection.



THE CHINESE BOOTH

The women built the booth in the form of an arch and covered it with red paper and printed Chinese characters around the sides. An unusual display of dolls, each typifying life and customs of the Chinese, can be seen on the table at the left. The Chinese phonetic script posters hang in a row against the wall. A large collection of curios of China were loaned by the Woman's Board. At the booth, "Chinese" women served Chinese tea, etc. The picture display of mission work is shown on the screen at the extreme left.



SAND TABLE STUDIES

One room in the church was devoted to the sand table studies of foreign villages, and to the display of sixty large colored, framed pictures of our mission work, such as hang on the wall. In the sand table work the committee utilized the sand table in the Primary Department for the Arabian village and four other tables hastily constructed for this purpose. Ordinary tables with low wooden sides were covered with common sand sifted fine. The American Board loaned the large framed pictures with booklets describing the pictures, giving an account of the story of each. Very impressive and appropriate were the strips nailed upon the sand tables reading: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you".

DOGS

MUST BE LICENSED

On or Before March 31st

Extracts from Chap. 140, General Laws of Massachusetts.

Section 127. The owner or keeper of a dog which is three months old or over shall annually, on or before March 31, cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed for one year from the first day of April following, if the dog is kept in Boston in the office of the police commissioner, or if kept in any other city or town in the office of the clerk thereof. The license shall be subject to the condition expressed therein that the dog which is the subject of the license shall be controlled and restrained from killing, chasing, or harassing sheep, lambs, fowls, or other domestic animals. The owner or keeper of a licensed dog shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered number.

Sec. 138. The owner or keeper of a dog may at any time have it licensed until the first day of April following and a person who becomes the owner or keeper of a dog after April first which is not duly licensed, and the owner or keeper of a dog which becomes three months old after March 31 in any year shall, when it is three months old, cause it to be registered, numbered, described, licensed, and collared as required by the preceding section.

Sec. 139. The fee for every license shall . . . . be $2.00 for a male dog and $5.00 for a female dog, unless a certificate of a registered veterinarian who performed the operation that said female dog has been spayed and has thereby been deprived of the power of propagation, has been filed with the city or town clerk, in which case the fee shall be $2.00. A certified copy of such certificate on file in the office of any town or city clerk within the commonwealth may be accepted as evidence that the said operation has been performed.

Sec. 140. The owner or keeper of dogs kept for breeding purposes may annually receive a license authorizing him to keep such dogs upon the premises described in the license. If the number of dogs so kept does not exceed five, the fee for such license shall be $25.00, and if the number of dogs exceed five, the fee shall be $50.00 and no fee shall be required for the dogs of such owner or keeper which are under the age of six months. The three preceding sections will not apply to licenses under this section.

Sec. 141. Whoever violates any provisions of sections 137, 138, or 140, shall forfeit not more than $15.00, which shall be paid, if the dog was kept in any city or town in Suffolk county, to the treasurer of the city or town, or if kept in any other county, to the treasurer thereof.

Sec. 142. No person shall keep or have in his care or possession any bloodhound, excepting an English bloodhound of pure blood, whose pedigree is recorded or would be entitled to record in the English bloodhound herd book, or any dog classed by dog fanciers or breeders as Cuban bloodhound or Siberian bloodhound, whether such dog is in whole or in part of such species, unless such dog is kept solely for exhibition. In such case he shall at all times be kept securely enclosed or chained, and shall not be allowed at large even though in charge of a keeper, unless properly and securely muzzled.

Sec. 143. Whoever violates the preceding section shall forfeit $50.00, $10.00 of which shall be paid to the complainant and $40.00 shall, if the dog was kept in any city or town in Suffolk county, be paid to the treasurer of the town, or if kept in any other county, to the treasurer thereof.

Sec. 145. Every license issued to the owner of a dog shall have a description of the symptoms of hydrophobia printed thereon

BIRTH RETURNS

Town Clerk's Office,
Weymouth, March 12, 1923

Attention is hereby called to the following extracts of the General Laws relating to births in Weymouth

Clayton B. Merchant,
Town Clerk

Section 3. Every physician, or hospital medical officer registered under section nine of chapter one hundred and twelve, in this chapter called officer, shall keep a record of the birth of every child in cases of which he was in charge, showing date and place of birth, the name, if any, of the child, its sex and color, the name, age, birthplace, occupation and residence (including the street number, if any, and the ward number, if in a city) of each parent, the maiden name of the mother and the name of the physician or officer, if any, personally attending the birth. If the child is illegitimate the name of and other facts relating to the father shall not be set forth except upon written request of both the father and mother Said physician or officer shall, within fifteen days after such birth, mail or deliver to the clerk or register of the town where such birth occurred, a report stating the facts hereinabove required to be shown on such record and also the written request, if any; provided, that if said report is not so made within forty-eight hours after such birth, said physician or officer shall, within forty-eigth hours, mail or deliver to said clerk or register a notice stating the date and place of birth, the street number, if any, the ward number, if in a city, and the family name. Upon presentation to him of a certificate of the town clerk stating that any such birth has been duly reported, the town treasurer shall pay to such physician or officer a fee of twenty-five cents for each birth so reported. Any physician or any such officer violating any provision of this section shall forfeit not more than twenty-five dollars.

Section 4. A member or servant of a family in which a child is born, having knowledge of the facts required for record relative to such birth shall furnish the same upon request of the clerk of the town where such child was born or its parents reside, or of any person authorized by him. Such member or servant refusing to furnish such facts shall be punished by fine not exceeding ten dollars

Section 6. Parents, within forty days after the birth of a child, and every householder within forty days after a birth in his house, shall cause notice thereof to be given to the clerk of the town where such child is born 3t,12,14

JAMES FRANKLIN BLANCHARD
[From Exeter News Letter]

James Franklin Blanchard of Hampton, formerly of South Weymouth, passed quietly away from the earthly life on Saturday noon after a period of 15 years of sickness. More than a month ago he was attacked with bright's disease, which was the direct cause of his death. The funeral service was held on Monday afternoon at Hampton conducted by Rev. G. W. Clark, who spoke most impressively upon the Heavenly City, toward which we are all travelling.

The deceased leaves a wife, who has been very devoted in her care during his long illness, and in her loneliness the sympathy of a large circle of friends will go forth. Two sisters and a brother, who live in Weymouth, Mass., are the only surviving relatives.

For a number of months the deceased knew his life was soon to end and with strong and unfailing courage he faced the inevitable and made his funeral arrangements. Although he requested that no flowers be sent, there were several beautiful pieces from those nearest and from the Ladies Aid of the Congregational church.

Before coming to Hampton in 1895, Mr. Blanchard was engaged in the shipping department of a company in Boston. In young manhood he followed the sea and had travelled extensively. He was a great reader and maintained his interest in international relations up to his death. He enjoyed history, biography, and works of travel particularly. Mr. Blanchard lived a very quiet life. He was not a member of any social order, but made warm friends among men with whom he came in contact, to whom he was always faithful and loyal.

The deceased was born in South Weymouth in 1856. In 1884 he was married to Miss Frances Thomas and they took up their residence in Hampton in 1895. Their only child, Winslow, died in 1907.

Mr. Blanchard was president of the Hampton Beach Improvement Co. for a number of years and held that position to the time of his death. Interment was in the Hampton cemetery.

LAND CRABS

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

Did you ever go land-crabbing? Or perhaps you do not know what a land crab really is! Land crabs in the United States and those we are going to think of are two very distinct varities of fish. Let us go down to Cuba for a short visit during these winter months; just the place and the proper season to find them.

Did I say find them? Yes, but without the semblance of a search, for these crabs which are very similar to our Northern crabs, save their size and habits come forth at dusk in unbelievable numbers.

Let us think of about one thousand to the acre crawling forth from their hidden homes. Big crabs, little crabs, yellow crabs, black crabs, white crabs, and orange crabs, the largest with a spread of about fifteen inches.

I have brought you to the few square miles of undergrowth adjacent to the Morro Castle of Hobson fame, for that is where the writer found these thousands of crabs. If we gaze along the railroad track which connects the harbor with the Siboney copper mine we will find Mr. Crab most numerous.

Here it was that the writer slashing rapidly to the right and left, killed one hundred or more in a short dash along the rails. Crabs with staring eyes, aware of their apparent fate scrambled wildly in their efforts to climb the rail and roll down the embankment to safety. They have a great tendancy to climb; trees buildings, and jagged cliffs being their homes.

Their pinch-like claws on the extremity of either arm are powerful enough to press inward the boxtoe of the strongest shoe. If one of these claws becomes injured, Mr. Crab gently pulls the entire member from its socket, using the good member to do the work. It is believed new claws grow from the same socket, as many crabs have one large pair and one smaller pair.

The writer's delight was to adjust a lighted candle to a crab's back and watch it roam about. Cuban folks utilize some portion of these crabs as a food, for many heaps of dried shells are to be found, albeit we do envy their table.

Perhaps this is the land all crabs are being deported to; a matter merely for conjecture and this story food for thought alone.

"NOT PLANNED"

John Bartley, noted criminal investigator, recently returned from Secret Service work during the war, is asked by the governor of New York to investigate a mysterious attempted robbery of the Robert Slyke home at Circle Lake, near Saratoga, and to establish the guilt or innocence of two men in the penitentiary for the crime. A miscarriage of justice is suspected. Bartley finds in it the restaging of an old case, is interested and agrees to solve the mystery. With his friend, Pelt, a newspaper man, Bartley goes to Circle Lake, the pair becoming the guests of Bob Currie, an old friend. The three visit the Slyke home. Slyke resents Bartley's coming, saying he is satisfied the two men in prison are guilty. Bartley is not. Next morning Slyke is found dead in bed, apparently having shot himself. Miss Potter, the dead man's sister-in-law, the village police chief, Roche, and the family physician, Doctor King, all agree Slyke killed himself, but Bartley insists he was murdered. Investigating, Bartley finds evidence that Slyke, after a card party he had given, was shot on the tower of the house, undressed, and placed in bed. During his absence from the room someone removes the revolver from Slyke's hand. A boy working in the garage asserts he heard a shot during the night, apparently "in the air," of course really on the tower. Ruth, Slyke's stepdaughter, still further complicates the case. Pelt interviews the members of the card party. He finds to his surprise that Slyke, apparently wealthy broker, had offered to sell his friends whisky. He finds evidence that the men in jail for attempted robbery of Slyke were "framed."

"You did not see three glasses, did you?"

"No," he answered, surprised at my question. "No, only two."

Thanking him, I said goodby and left.

When I returned to the newspaper office, I found the files of the past year awaiting me. The story that Rogers told us in Bartley's library, and the account of the crime in the paper were substantially the same. There were, however, one or two slight differences that seemed to me important. I had understood Rogers to say that the step-daughter, Ruth, had positively identified the men now in prison; but nowhere in the newspaper was it stated that this had been the case. What she had actually said was, "I think one of them is the man I saw in the room." There had been no positive identification of the men by her, or by anyone else, for that matter. Slyke himself had testified that he did not know whether they were the men or not.

Three things had convicted them. First, the piece of paper found in the room where the burglary had taken place, and which fitted into a torn corner of a newspaper discovered later in the coat of one of the men; second, the piece of cloth said to have been found on a rose bush beneath the window of the room entered, and which fitted the torn place in a pair of trousers belonging to one of the men—there was some doubt as to whether the trousers had been torn at the time the man was arrested—and last of all, the footprints under the window. Thus their conviction rested on a piece of torn newspaper and a hole in a man's trousers—rather feeble evidence, it seemed to me. Moreover, the police had not discovered any of it until some days after the crime. The more I thought of it, the more I agreed with Bartley that the case was remarkably like that old burglary case in England.

Leaving the newspaper office, I called on some of the other men who had been at the card party. They all agreed that it was Slyke who had suggested Lawrence's staying, and laughed at the idea that he knew anything about his death. One of them told me that, several weeks before, he had bought three cases of whisky from Slyke. I could not understand why a man of Slyke's position should wish to sell whisky to his friends.

As I passed the court house on my way home, I noticed the words "District Attorney's Office" on a window, and it occurred to me that stored away somewhere in there would be the exhibits in the burglary case. I entered and asked to see the torn piece of paper and the bit of cloth. The only person in the room was a boy of eighteen, who went into a back room and returned with a box under his arm. Opening it, he shook out on the desk before me a newspaper, saying, "This is the paper they found in the man's pocket. You can see the torn edge."

He pointed to the front sheet of the newspaper, one corner of which had been torn away. Lifting another piece of paper from the box, this time a small one, he fitted it into the torn corner. I glanced at the heading of the paper. It was a copy of the Boston Evening Times, and the date was that of the day before the burglary.

I felt that I had accomplished very little by my afternoon's work. The only new evidence was Lawrence's statement that Slyke had been expecting some one after he left. I wished that he had accepted Slyke's invitation to remain until this other person came. With the exception of this and Slyke's having offered to sell whisky to two different men, a fact that could have no bearing on the murder, I had found out nothing.

I found Bartley talking with Mrs. Currie, who had returned during the afternoon. I was introduced and we went in to dinner at once.

When the dessert was over and we were drinking our wine and smoking comfortably, Bartley leaned back in his chair with such a deep sigh of contentment that Currie laughed.

"Better than murders, eh, John?"

Bartley joined in the laugh. "Anything is."

"I have often wondered," Mrs. Currie said, thoughtfully, "what causes people to commit murder. They always get found out."

"Not always, Laura," answered Bartley. "I know it's the opinion of most people that a person who commits murder is discovered in the long run, but that is not true. I should say that about 80 per cent of the murders are never solved. You ask why people kill. As a rule, it is done in rage or in a sudden passion of some kind. Such crimes are easy to solve. It is the small percentage that are planned that are difficult. You see, we first look for the motive of a crime, and if we can find that we can usually solve it."

Currie, who had been listening carefully, broke in with, "I presume you will solve this Slyke affair quickly."

Bartley was silent, watching the smoke of his cigar curl toward the ceiling. His face was expressionless

It Was a Copy of the Boston Evening Times.

when he replied: "Oh, I can't tell, Bob. I have not found anything of importance yet."

I glanced at him in surprise. It seemed impossible that he could have spent a whole day at Slyke's and not have discovered something of value.

Mrs. Currie turned to her husband. "Bob, what are you men going to do this evening? You know this is the night of my musicale."

Currie gave such a groan that we all laughed. "There is a long-haired tenor coming here tonight, and a crowd of women who will roll their eyes at him and lie like the devil, murmuring 'How beautiful!' It's no place for us. We'll go to Saratoga and come back when it is all over."

Before we started Currie said he had to give some orders to his men, and Bartley and I went to our rooms. I gave him a brief outline of what I had discovered in Saratoga. He did not ask any questions until I mentioned that the newspaper from which the corner had been torn was a copy of the Boston Evening Times, then he asked the date of the issue. When I told him it was that of the day before the robbery, he took his cigar from his mouth, grinned, and threw out his hands in an expressive gesture.

"That's enough to prove those men had nothing to do with the burglary. You know the Times is an evening paper, and is not sold on the newsstands far from Boston—not up here, at any rate. If a copy of the paper had been mailed here, as it would have to be, it could not have reached Saratoga until hours after the robbery had taken place. Such being the case, the men that broke into the house could not have had it with them, nor could the police have found a piece torn from it in the room the next morning."

I saw his point and was eager to learn what he thought of the other things I had discovered. Above all, I wanted to know what his opinion would be of Lawrence's statement that Slyke was expecting some one to call after he left. To my surprise he was much more interested in the fact of Slyke's having offered the whisky for sale. I had expected, when I had finished with my story, that he would tell me what he had discovered after I left him at Slyke's. But as he did nothing of the sort, I finally found courage to inquire.

"Well, Pelt," he said with a quizzical smile, "there are two things that I want very much to discover. The first thing I would like to know is, what has become of Slyke's chauffeur?"

Seeing I did not understand, he went on: "You know we sent for him but they could not find him. Up to the time I left the house they were still looking for him. Not only that, but the chauffeur and Slyke had a quarrel yesterday afternoon."

"A quarrel?"

"Yes. No one was near enough to hear all that was said, but the cook heard the chauffeur say, 'I don't dare to do it,' and Slyke reply, 'I should have done it before.' The butler, you remember, told us that while we were in the tower he saw the chauffeur on the steps leading to the second story. The chap has disappeared, no one knows where. The police are looking for him and may get him. I hope so. There are a few things I should like to ask him."

"Maybe it was he who took the revolver," I suggested.

"Has it occurred to you that it is a strange thing that a man like Slyke should spend most of his time up here? For the past two years he has lived here almost entirely. His office in New York is closed, and he is rumored to have lost money. Why did he stay here all the year round?"

Bartley suddenly changed the subject. "Miss Potter cleared up one thing for us today. I knew that, if the murderer was shrewd enough to go to the trouble of placing Slyke in bed, he knew enough to know how the eyes should look. Their being closed puzzled me. I wondered how he had made such a mistake. But when Miss Potter told us it was she who had closed them, I knew that I had not been mistaken. Whoever killed Slyke knew what he was doing. There was only one chance in a thousand that he would not get it across."

"It was well planned," I suggested.

"It was not planned at all. It was a sudden impulse, a quarrel. I don't believe that, when the murderer went into that tower room to see Slyke, he had the least idea of killing him."

"But think of the pains he took. It must have been planned."

"No," he replied, "the planning was done afterward."

"After he was killed?"

"Yes. Look at the facts, Pelt. Slyke was killed on the balcony of a tower, fifty feet above the ground. A man who planned a murder would not pick out such a place. It was the last place in the house he would have chosen. Just suppose that some one had heard the shot and investigated. The murderer would have been trapped with the dead body of his victim. To escape he had to go down two flights of stairs and through the big room. Let us say that Slyke invited the man to go upon the balcony—for what, we cannot say—and then they quarreled and the person killed him on the impulse of the moment. The next thing to do was to get rid of the body. Finding the coast clear, he took it into the next room and undressed it, and carried it down to the bedroom and placed it in bed. He knew how a body should look after suicide and that a gun could be placed in its hand."

"He seemed to be pretty sure no one would disturb him at it," I ventured.

Bartley nodded. "Yes, there is no doubt of that. That brings up another astonishing fact. Down in the big room was a young dog that did not like strangers. The murderer, in order to get out of the house, had to go through that room, yet the dog did not bark."

"Then it was someone in the house!" I interrupted.

"The coolness with which the murderer took plenty of time in undressing the body and the fact that he did not seem to be afraid of being found out makes it seem probable. Why didn't the dog bark? Because he knew whoever it was. That makes it seem as if it were someone in the house, or at least as if it were someone that knew both the house and the dog well.

"Of course, Pelt, until we discover the motive we cannot get very far. At present there seems to be none. There is nothing missing and no apparent reason for Slyke's murder. It seems an absurd sort of a crime. That's why I think it was done on impulse, not premeditated." He thought a moment, then added, "I did think I knew the kind of a person that might have committed a crime like this. But—"

"But what?" I asked eagerly.

He opened the door with a little smile on his lips, and it was not until we were half way down stairs that he completed his sentence, "But—I don't know."

"He removed the paper and disclosed the label of a well-known brand of imported whisky."

WEYMOUTH HEIGHTS

From Gazette Correspondents

—Mrs. Mabel Jones and Mrs. Abbie Beals are spending the week in New York city.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Macker entertained a number of relatives from Brockton to dinner on Sunday.

—The missionary meeting of the Old North church met at the home of Mrs. Charles C. Taylor with Mrs. Newcomb leading the meeting. A very interesting meeting was enjoyed by all.

—The Ladies Benevolent Society held a "snipping party" at the home of Mrs. Charles Taylor last week on Thursday. Each person was asked to bring an article, wrapped in paper, which was tide to a string hung across the room. Each person in turn was then blindfolded, given a pair of scissors and led to the line where he snipped his gift. This caused a great deal of merriment and fun. Admission of ten cents was charged, thereby realizing a goodly sum.

—A very successful St. Patrick's day supper was held at the chapel of the Old North church last Friday, being under the auspices of the Ladies Benevolent Society and in charge of Mrs. J. C. Nash, chairman, Mrs. Annie Bradford, Mrs. Benjamin Smith, and Mrs. Parker Farren. The tables were very prettily decorated with green crepe paper, green candles were in evidence being stuck into the fancy cakes, also a green pipe was placed at each person's plate as a souvenir of the pleasant occasion. A goodly sum was realized from this supper.

—Home Town Bread is good day by day the year around; it is always good, so why not use it every day. Order from your grocer, Home Town Bread.—Advertisement

—Mr. and Mrs. R. Edward Bates of Quincy Point, formerly of Weymouth Heights, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby daughter, Eleanor.

—The weekly card party of the Sufoneetxis club was held at the home of Mrs. Gold. The party this week was a "poverty party", each one wearing the oldest costume he could find. The prize for being the poorest dressed was awarded to Mrs. Jacobs. The evening was enjoyed by playing their usual games of cards, and the prizes for these were awarded to the following: first, Mrs. Albert Day; second, Mrs. Delory; third, Mrs. Clarence Pratt; fourth, Mrs. Wingfield; fifth, Mrs Bickford, and consolation, Mrs Schlimper. The evening was the evening of Mrs. Gold's birthday, which made the occasion one of interest and pleasure, and from the members of the Sufoneetxis club, a beautiful plant was presented to Mrs. Gold in honor of her birthday. After a delightful repast was enjoyed, the party broke up after a very enjoyable evening.

—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Smith are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby boy.

—Mr. and Mrs. Herman Bates of Worcester, formerly of Weymouth Heights, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby boy.

—There's a whole head of genuine pleasure in taking a shabby house and making it into a beautiful, livable home. Out side and inside, the great transformer is Bay State Liquid Paints. These paints are proof against wind, foul weather or baking sun. They go further and look better. You save money by using Bay State. High School Loan Held Up by Injunction

The contract for the enlargement of Weymouth High schoolhouse has been awarded by the Building Committee, of which Prince H. Tirrell is chairman.

The contractors have already started work, batter boards having been erected which show better the location of the addition.

The minority still maintain that the money for the enlargement has not been legally appropriated, inasmuch as a two-thirds vote was not obtained at the special town meeting.

Members of the minority have filed a petition with the clerk of courts of Norfolk county, praying for a temporary and permanent injunction restraining the Selectmen from issuing bonds to the amount of $250,000, as voted by a vote of 1161 to 810.

As a result of the petition, summons have been issued by the Norfolk Superior court requesting the Selectmen, the Building Committee, and other town officials to appear and show why the injunction should not be made permanent.

The Selectmen are Theron L. Tirrell, Winslow M. Tirrell, Mrs. Annie S. Lynch, William B. Dasha and Alfred W. Hastings.

The Building Committee are: Prince H. Tirrell, Parker T. Pearson, John H. Tower, William J. Fitzsimmons, E. Clifton Barker, Theron L. Tirrell, and Mrs. Louise R. Crawford.

The hearing will take place next week.

TO IMPROVE SERVICE

A few weeks ago the Gazette-Transcript was informed by one of the superintendents of a postoffice in Weymouth that his office could not guarantee the delivery of the paper on the day of publication, because of increase of business, stormy weather bad travelling, etc.

The publishers immediately took up the subject with postal authorities in Boston, and correspondence has followed.

Yesterday Postmaster General New wired Postmaster Roland M. Baker that he may organize the Postoffice here beginning April 1 on a basis of adequate clerical and carrierservice. The Postmaster General said in his telegram that he would see that there was a sufficient sum of money set aside for the Boston office so that the service may be restored to normal. The telegram follows:

"Submit estimate for needs clerical and carrier forces June quarter so as to provide service absolutely required to meet just needs of public, having due regard for necessity of exercising judicious economy. You may organize on basis of such estimates effective April 1".

First Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett arrived in Boston yesterday to interpet the telegram and to assist in carrying out its terms. Postmaster Baker said that this means that the postal service of Boston will immmediately be restored to the basis which it was before the recent drastic cuts made by the Department on account of insufficient appropriations.

PROBATE COURT

Many Weymouth estates figure in the week's report of Probate court, among them the estate of Edward O. Burrows, late of Weymouth, was allowed. Hattie S. Burrows, widow, was named as executrix. The deceased left $5250 personal estate.

Mary E. Downing of Weymouth was named as the administratrix of the estate of Cora B. Hussey, late of Weymouth. The deceased left $900 personal estate, and as her only heir, Mary E. Barnes of Brookline.

Minnie I. Bean, widow, was named as the administratrix of the estate of John I. Bean, late of Weymouth. The deceased left $500 personal estate.

Frederick D. and Florence V. Knight of Weymouth were given leave to adopt Mervin E. Taber Jr. and to change his name to Mervin Tabor Knight.

The will of Richard Seeley, late of Weymouth, was allowed. John B. Whelan of Weymouth was named as its executor. The deceased left $7000 real and $5000 personal estate. In his will, drawn Jan. 25, 1923, he bequeathed $1000 to Rev. John B. Holland for the Rev. John B. Holland building fund; $1000 to Rev. Fr. John B. Holland "for masses for Annie Seeley, Rebecca Seeley, and for the repose of my soul and the soul of my mother"; to his friend, John J. Norton $500; $300 to Rev. Fr. Dennis P. Crimmins and his successors, in trust, the income for the perpetual care of his burial; $500 to John B. Whalen to be used to erect a monument on his lot in St. Francis Xavier cemetery, Weymouth, and the rest of his estate in equal shares to Hannah Currier, Thomas D. O'Connell and to O'Connell's sister, "whose name is unknown to me".

The will of Francis H. Lord, late of Weymouth, was allowed. Pearl E. Lord, widow, was named as its executrix. The deceased left $7000 real and $500 personal estate and as heirs his widow and Minnie T. Sellars of Brooklyn, N. Y. In his will, drawn Feb. 19, 1918, he bequeathed his entire estate to his widow.

The first and final account of C. Sumner Holbrook, as administrator of the estate of Deborah F. Holbrook, late of Weymouth, for $2000 was allowed.

Weymouth Does Good Work at Nantasket Conflagration

The pumping engine of Combination 2 of East Weymouth never did better work than on Wednesday night at the conflagration at Nantasket which destroyed Paragon Park and about fifty or more houses. A cold biting northwest gale prevailed at the time, the mercury touching the zero mark before morning.

Chief Carley received a call for aid about 8.50 P. M. and immediately responded with the Combination 2 company, which included Engineman Harold Hawes, First Lieutenant George Maynard, Second Lieutenant Harry Jones, Clerk Allen D. Lennox, Frank Larney, John Nelson, Fred Webb, Roderick Ells, Edward Austin, John Sullivan, Earl McDonald, Joseph Nosiglia, Harold Pratt, and Ira Sturtevant.

A remarkably quick run was made with Robert Whitmarsh at the wheel and the Weymouth engine and firemen were soon in the thickest of the fight near Hotel Napoli. The company had the great satisfaction of saving two houses, cottages on each side of these houses being destroyed.

For eight hours the Weymouth engine played three powerful streams into burning buildings and it was not until 6.30 Thursday morning that the crew returned to East Weymouth.

The conflagration was plainly seen from all parts of Weymouth and many citizens went to Nantasket in their autos.

AMERICAN LEGION

The executive committee of Post 79, American Legion, held its regular meeting in the Town Offices on Tuesday evening. The chairman of the show committee reported that practically all the tickets had been sold, but that some of the members had a few so it would be well for those that had not procured their tickets to get in touch with some of the Legion members and get tickets now, as they will all be sold before the night of the show.

There will be a National Daisy drive April 13 and 14 for the welfare and relief of ex-service men.

The Legion Band has procured new uniforms and will make a mighty fine showing when they appear in public.

The band will give a concert April 18 in the Shepherd store in Boston. It will be broadcasted all over the country, so listen in all you people that have radios and hear Comrade Ventre and staff of musicians. Don't forget the date, April 18.

It is very unfortunate that the senior class of the High school are to have their dance on the same night as the Legion show, but as the Post advertised their show six weeks ago it was impossible to change the date. But, however, the Post wishes the seniors of the High school all the success possible and hope that next year things will be arranged differently.

How many of the members have forgotten the last social? Very few; they are still talking about Bill Burton and partner Wallace; some baby was he not? Well, fellows there will be another social next month and the committee assures us a mighty good evening's fun.

WEYMOUTH, MARCH 30, 1923

LAND ASSESSMENTS

Not many years ago, when Weymouth and Quincy were in the same Representative district and entitled to three men in the General Court, Weymouth was larger than Quincy, and had two members in six years out of ten. How different now! Quincy is in a district by herself and has THREE Representatives, while Weymouth is in a district by herself and has only ONE Representative. Quincy has had a remarkable growth, while Weymouth is almost at a standstill.

In Quincy it is almost impossible to purchase a houselot of 5000 or 6000 feet in any part of the city for less than $1500, but in Weymouth many acres could be bought for that sum.

Quincy is fast filling up and many residents of that city and greater Boston might be attracted to Weymouth if we had "improvements". The growth of Weymouth depends on improvements—a better water supply, a sewerage system, building laws, health rules, lower gas rates, lower rates for electric light and power, better transportation, up-to-date stores, and modern houses and apartments.

Mayor Bates of Quincy believes that higher assessments on land will bring these improvements to Quincy. Why not to Weymouth?

In a recent interview these opinions are credited to Mayor Bates, which Weymouth people will read with interest at this time:

"Quincy is suffering from the white plague". This is the verdict of Mayor Bates of that city. But his honor is not talking about the dread disease that ravages the human system. He's talking, as usually, straight from the shoulder, about a disease that has weakened and is continuing to weaken the "constitution" of the municipality.

He is talking about real estate and real estate values and taxation and assessments. His honor has looked the patient over pretty carefully and has given time and attention to his diagnosis. He has charted the symptoms. Those charts show great big white blotches all over Quincy. They appear in every section of the city, eating the cause of the white spots, and usually bear an inscription indicating "clinical experience" and not "laboratory research".

His charts are the atlases that show the lands within the confines of the city of Quincy and indicate the uses to which those lands have been placed. The "white spots", which spell the "white plague" are the lands that have been put to no uses—the waste, vacant, unused lands which mean, in revenue, nothing to the city—which are held by owners in many cases waiting for the rise in values that means more profit; and in the meantime people are looking for homes, lots to build on, and the city is looking for revenue—something to stop the soaring tax-rate.

The mayor looks to the vacant lands. He wants to make live things "Tax them and they'll let go—Mayor Bates never minces words. "For a quarter of a century the so-called 'common people' of this city have been carrying the tax burden for about half a dozen people.

It's about time this thing stopped. Look at this spot—and this fine area—see these connected stretches—all vacant; and this fine water-front. And nothing in it for Quincy. Why its absurd".

The mayor was pointing to the white spots on the atlas while he spoke. The men who own these lands also own the buildings or many of them in the city proper. There is no competition. They won't build on those lands. Why should they"

"I gave a few of these 'white spots' a little bit of 'color' when I was mayor before", said Mayor Bates. "I found them dedicated, as it were, to a flimsy 'charitable' purpose. It was all a subterfuge.

"I had them assessed just the same. What happepned? Away flew the beautiful dove and in a few days you found the territory opened up for house-lots. Rather prosaic use, wasn't it? But Quincy got something out of it.

"These vacant lands have got to be brought within the pale of the activities of Quincy. The men and the estate that own or control them, and you can count them on the fingers of one hand, must bear their share of the burden. It would help wonderfully to equalize that burden if they would".

The mayor was asked about his "ambitions" as far as the standardizing of land values in the heart of the city, along Hancock street and through and in the vicinity of the square, was concerned.

"Why our land valuations are ridiculous" said the mayor. "Look at the other cities of the commonwealth. It has been said recently that our lands in the center of the city are assessed at about $4.50 a foot. And that was termed the lowest in any city of similar size in the state.

"But, look, there are only about two or three pieces of property that are even valued that high. All the rest of the property along Hancock street, for example, is far below that figure—and some of it is so low as to be laughable. We must raise that valuation. We ought to raise the land value in the heart of the city to at least $10 a foot if we are to get the needed revenue and the buildings that Quincy ought to boast of".

HEALTHY TOWN

Persons born in Weymouth generally live to be 70 or 80 years of age, and oftentimes 90, but one man born in Weymouth has passed the century mark. News comes from Danvers that many of the townspeople took part March 22 in celebrating the 100th anniversary of their oldest citizen, Jaazaniah C. Pierce. Mr. Pierce who resides with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leland J. Ross of 46 Locust street, has a wonderfully clear mind and recalls many interesting things which happened as far back as 1828, when he was only 5 years of age.

Mr. Pierce has much to say of the snowstorms of this winter and claims that never before during his 100 yeyayrs of activities has he seen such storms.

He was born in Weymouth in 1823 and attended the public schools here. Until very recently he has been able to read the daily papers, but now his eye-sight is failing.

In his younger days he was a druggist, but until a few years ago he had worked as superintendent of the Danvers Rubber Co., which was burned last May. His father fought in the war of 1812 and he had a brother who was a major in the Union Army.

Mr. Pierce's grandfather, Charles Pierce, lived to be 90; his brother to be 84, and both his father and mother lived to be 75.

SECOND ANNUAL SHOW OF A. L.

The second annual show of the Weymouth Post of the American Legion is scheduled for the Gem theatre, Weymouth Landing, on April 13.

In accordance with the usual daring of ex-service men, the Post is defying the fates by holding the show on Friday, the Thirteenth. Let us say right here, however, that the pepople who come to the show are not taking any chances; they are not flirting with Fate; but they are facing an evening of wholesome enjoyment and fun.

All the "actors" are putting their whole heart and soul into the farce comedy, "Three Live Ghosts", and are sparing no effort to make for themselves the reputation of being the most de luxe actors and actresses in the Post.

The purpose of this little article is to urge all those good people who want to see how well the Legionnaires and their Auxiliary can act, to get their tickets right away. At this writing the house is nearly sold out. See any Legion member for tickets, and he'll give them to you, if he hasn't them he will get them.

If you who reads this happens to be a Legion member you can get tickets from Comrade Stanley Heald, 40 Fogg road, South Weymouth, or telephone Weymouth 1163M.

Just remember the 13th.

Dear Mr. Prescott,

"I am enclosing herewith our check for advertising in the Gazette and Transcript, as per bill rendered.

"This seems to be an opportune moment for me to express to you that we derive great satisfaction from the advertising placed in your publication, and we feel that it must be on account of the effort you make to give the readers of your paper the news that appeals to them.

"I have examined the Gazette each week on its arrival, and have always found it well printed, the advertisements well "laid out," and plenty of news in its columns. I sincerely trust your efforts to furnish a live weekly to the good people of your town will be continued and that it will always meet with a hearty response on the part of those you endeavor to serve.

"With best wishes and regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

WASHINGTON SQUARE, WEYMOUTH

BROAD STREET LAND VALUES

Because of the wide-spread interest in assessed land values in Jackson Square, many were unable to secure a copy of the Gazette-Transcript last week. By request, therefore, the figures are reprinted this week.

One error crept into the figures last week which has been corrected. The valuation of the office lot of the Weymouth Light & Power Co. in Jackson Square is $2000, not $200 which makes the assessed value a little under 48 cents per square foot which is more in keeping with other business lots.

A comparison of assessed land values is always of interest, but all attempts in recent years to have a "Valuation Book" printed have been defeated.

This week the Gazette-Transcript begins the publication of land values in the business centers of the town, presenting the facts without comment

First—Broad street from "William E. Johnson Square" at Madison street to Commercial Square, including Jackson Square and a few side streets.

Third—Columbian Square. South Weymouth

Fourth—Thomas Corner including Sea street and a part of Bridge street at North Weymouth.

Fifth—Central Square and vicinity

Sixth—Front street near Washington Square.

Seventh—Independence Square

Eighth—Weymouth Heights

By taking lots as located on the street in regular rotation an excellent opportunity is given for comparison, but one should be familiar with the location and the character of the land before passing judgment.

Beginning on Broad street, East Weymouth, at Madison street, the Alden, Walker & Wilde shoe factory lot is assessed at less than 11 cents per square foot, the Hodges lot at less than 10, and the Bosworth lot at less than 9. The Pecoraro lot is valued at less than 4 cents per foot, and the Queen lot with block and tenements at over 10 cents.

At Cottage street the Assessors make quite a difference in the value of the two corners—the Savings Bank lot is assessed at 18 cents per square foot, while the Hunt lot is valued at 33 cents.

The next lot owned by Mr. Lincoln upon which he refuses to set a price is valued at 30 cents, as is the next lot.

Then values begin to increase; the M. L. Denbroeder lot is assessed at 40 cents; the C. R. Denbroeder store lot at 48 cents; the Bates lot at 50 cents; and the corner estate owned by Mrs. Tirrell at 54 cents, the highest on the east side of Broad street.

The Merchant lot on which the stores stand has been referred to as the "diamond mine", but is valued at only 52 cents.

The Dunbar lot which includes about four acres of back land, is assessed at less than two cents and the Spear estate which includes nearly two acres of land in the rear at 3 cents.

The small Reidy lot is valued at 15 cents, and the French lot at 7¢.

Around the corner on Commercial street, the Miller lot is taxed at 15; the Smith lot at 8, and the Keegan lot at 4 cents.

A summary from the Assessors' Books of 1922 accompanies this article giving the number of square feet in each lot and the assessed value of the lot. Another column tells the value placed on all buildings on each lot. Taxpayers will find it an interesting study.

WEST SIDE BROAD STREET

Beginning on Broad street at Fairmount avenue, the Fennell lot is assessed at 12½ cents per square foot, and the Dr. Chase lot at less than 11 cents. The Dr. Doucett lot at 17 cents, the McGrath lot at 16 cents, the Dr. Fraser lot at 12 cents, the Dr. Libby lot at less than 9 cents, and the Raymond lot at less than 11¢

The M. P. Garey estate opposite the Town Offices is valued at only 11 cents per square foot. The Webster lot between the Methodist church and Shawmut street with stores at 18 cents.

The French lot on the opposite corner of Shawmut street at 37 cents, and the Garey lot next at 53 cents. The Sylvester lot is valued at 57 cents, the Cassasa lot at 54 cents, the Flint lot which has two buildings at 55 cents.

The highest value is placed on the lot occupied by the Reidy drug store $1.24 per square foot.

The Bicknell house next door on which is an old house, is assessed at 51 cents, the McCarthy lot at 24, and the Peaslee lot at 12 cents.

Mr. McCarthy has another lot beyond which is assessed at 11 cents, the Pratt lot at 9 cents, the Connell lot at 7 cents, the MacFawn lot at 2 cents, the Sprague lot at 6 cents; and the lot where the car barn stands at 2 cents.

Coming back to Jackson Square on the other side of Pleasant street, the Weymouth Light & Power Co. is assessed at 48 cents per square foot, while the Reidy lot pays 2 cents.

The Spencer lot is taxed at 23 cents, the Randall lot at 8 cents and the White lot at 15 cents.

The Greeley lot nearby is assessed at 10 cents, the Peakes lot at 54 cents the Petrucceli lot at 32 cents, the Maloney lot at 11 cents, and the Murphy lot in Commercial Square at 10 cents.

Next week, land values in Columbian Square will be printed, to be followed by other squares.

RAT EXTERMINATION IN WEYMOUTH

Report of the "Rat Extermination" committee for Weymouth:

The idea of this campaign was originated by Scoutmaster Arthur Eddy and suggested at the November meeting of the Scoutmasters Association of the Old Colony council, Boy Scouts of America. A committee of three was appointed to look into the situation and to make recommendations for a campaign. Arthur Eddy, scoutmaster of Troop 2, East Weymouth; Howard M. Clark, assistant scoutmaster of Troop 1, Weymouth, and Duncan McKellar, scout executive for the Old Colony council, were named. The committee found conditions as bad as had been pictured, and laid plans for the campaign.

Dr. O'Donnell of the State Department of Health, was called upon, and met a great many of the scoutmasters and the junior leaders at a meeting in the town offices at East Weymouth, where he gave an interesting talk, showing us exactly what we were up against, the magnitude of the job, and the good that could be done both to the community and to the state, as well as individual concerns. This was followed by another meeting in the High school hall where Dr. O'Donnell of the State Department of Health, and Dr. Paul Eaton, medical officer of the United States Public Health Service, stationed in this district, spoke on rats and their relation to mankind, and the damage they do, both from an economic standpoint and also from a health point of view. H. C. Mossman, special investigator for the State Department of Health, spoke on the different methods of trapping rats, the different varieties of rats, and at great length on the damage that this pesky rodent does to property and to the peace of our lives.

The campaign was then launched and Mr. Mossman volunteered to assist us by instructing different groups of boys as to modern rat catching methods, or which he is a past master. Traps were secured of the latest pattern from the Department and a squad of boys was detailed to set them under the direction of Mr. Mossman. The first setting was in three barns and one shoe factory on Saturday, Feb. 24. A total of approximately seventy traps were set and twenty odd rats caught in the succeeding 24 hours. In the Stetson shoe factory in South Weymouth fifteen large specimens were secured from less than thirty traps. Large specimens were of the Norway variety which were caught in Dwyer's barn and Sheppard's barn, just over the line in East Braintree. For the succeeding two weeks Mr. Mossman, with different groups of boys and scout leaders from different parts of the town had set traps in likely places and secured large catches of rats. All of the rats which have been caught are of the Norway variety.

There are two hundred or more active Boy Scouts in Weymouth with seven active troops. The several leaders are as follows: Troop 1, Rev. C W. Allen, scoutmaster, (Gray Stevens and Howard M. Clark, assistants); Troop 2, East Weymouth Arthur A. Eddy, scoutmaster; Troop 3, East Weymouth, Sumner Peers, scoutmaster; Troop 4, Weymouth Heights, Elmer Lunt, scoutmaster, (Gordon Rauch, assistant); Troop 5, Arthur Sargent, scoutmaster, (Louis Barcello, assistant); Troop 6, John Tower, scoutmaster; Troop 7, East Weymouth, Roland Smith, scoutmaster. All of the troops with the exception of Troop 6 and Troop 7 have had very efficient instruction under Mr. Mossman in the art or trick of catching rats The boys who have received this instruction will now pass on the knowledge to the rest of their troop.

Suitable prizes are to be awarded to the boys, but no bonus is to be paid for rats as this is the "Community Good Turn" which the Boy Scouts organization plans at least once a year. It is a part of our program and our "good turns" are their own reward.

Too much cannot be said for the tireless and efficient help which H. C Mossman has given us in launching this campaign. The other members of the committee, Arthur Eddy and Duncan McKellar, scout executive, have also given a great deal of effort toward making this campaign a success. We now hope that every scout leader and every scout in town will proceed in earnest to catch every rat that they possibly can, thus doing his bit toward ridding us of this menace to our public health.

In Mr. Mossman's previous articles he has pointed out that the rat is a carrier of bubonic plague germs, and that our Atlantic coast is the only place in the whole world where the rat has not brought the plague. All the rats which are caught in this campaign are to be sent to the laboratories at Gallup's island for examination. In this way we are not only doing a great service to our own community, but we are assisting the Public Health authorities greatly in their untiring watch that the plague does not appear in this part of the country.

This report covers the activities of the committee up to the date of the real opening of the campaign, and its success now depends upon each and every one—scoutmaster and Boy Scout.

FOR THE COMMITTEE

Combination of Head and Heart.

Friendship is sentiment, but it is more than that. It is of the head, but chiefly of the heart. He who has intellectualism only can have no friends. He who has a great heart, and little intellectualism may win the respect of many, but the deep friendship of few. This is because both the mind and the heart enter into the cultivation of friendship.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of little Allan Drysdale, who went away March 28, 1922. Gone, but not forgotten, by his Mother, Sisters, and Brothers.

I loved our darling Allan,
And when beside his little bed
He said, "Mamma, I want to get well".
In memory I have his picture
Taken that morning so sad
When God came and took him
To a much better home than he had.

WASHINGTON SQUARE LAND VALUES

A year ago the most valuable lot of land, per square foot, in Washington Square was owned by J. E. Ludden, the plumber; not the estate, however, that he occupies, but the one adjoining C. M. Price, which, was assessed at 71 cents per square foot. Since then the Gem theatre and postoffice building have been erected, and the new Savings Bank building is nearly completed, which may change values in 1923.

The lot occupied by Mr. Ludden is valued at 59 cents, for second place is across the street owned by George R. Kempl, who is assessed 65 cents per foot, while the corner of F. S. Hobart, is valued at 60 cents.

Rogers lot, occupied by billiard hall, 39 cents; Catler front lot 25; Catler rear lot 7 cents.

C. M. Price lot 16, two Ludden lots 71 and 59; Hunt's Market lot 41.

Rogers building by Co-operative Bank and others, 31 cents; Rogers building upon which Gem theatre was being erected 16 cents.

The Rhines lot at 11 cents; the Jennie Worster estate at 8 cents, and the A. G. Worster lot at 12 cents

Across the street the corner lot of the Stewart's is assessed at 10 cents, the Richards estate at 10 cents, and the Cowing lot which has since been sold at 6 cents.

Returning to Washington street the Dr. Jacoby estate is valued at only 6 cents; the Bullock estate at 9 cents, and the Clancy lots at 10¢.

Up the hill the Nadell store lot is valued at 14 cents; the Lourie lot at 7 cents; the Mullin lot at 5; the Sanborn lot at less than 4; the M. G. Conry at 3 cents and the Mary Conry estate at the corner of Richmond street at 10.

On the opposite corner, the Jewell lot is valued at 10 cents; the Haskins lot next door at 8 cents, the estate occupied by Mrs. Richards at only 7¢

The Pratt lot is valued at 9 cents, the Keefe lot at 8 cents, the M. P. Bryant at 9 cents, the Cohen at 11 cents, and the corner lot of A. B. Bryant at 13 cents.

On the opposite corner of Field avenue the Bates lot is assessed at 19 cents, and the Bates lot with stores on the corner of Broad street at 35 cents.

On the opposite corner of Broad street the Turner lot is valued at 14 cents. If one gets into the lockup it may cost $1 to get out.

The Phillips estate is taxed at 12 cents; the Davis at 5 cents; the Pray at 8 cents and the Ambler at the corner of Vine at less than 4¢.

WASHINGTON ST. (WEST SIDE)

Beginning again at the Braintree line on the west side of Washington street, that part of the Bates lot with stores which is in Weymouth, is valued at 45 cents per foot; and the Richards lot with stores at 43 cents.

The Weymouth Savings Bank lot taxed at the corner of Front street included the old drug store and the house on Front street and was assessed at 15 cents.

Names of Weymouth Men Killed in King Philip's War

By Rev. William Hyde

After the close of the Piquod war, for some years there was peace with the Indians, but the feeling among them against the Whites was growing. There were still some of the Piquods left and there was also the Narragansetts, the Tarratines, the Wampanoags, and the Nipinucks.

Although the Standish fight and the Piquod war had weakened the Indians, yet they were growing stronger as the years went by and their hatred for the settlers was increasing. The Indians were badly treated by the Whites and they resented it. There were murmerings and plottings going on, but they did not break out into hostilities. The influence of the chief, Massasoit, was felt as he was favorable to the Whites, but after his death there was not the same restraint. Massasoit had two sons, Wamsutta and Pometacom, whom the English named Alexander and Philip. When the great chief was old, before he died he came into Plymouth bringing his sons Philip and Alexander with him. He renewed the treaty of friendship with Plymouth, and included his two sons in that treaty so that it might go on after his death; but events did not turn out as Massasoit hoped. As soon as he was gone other chiefs and other tribes began to make their influence felt. They worked upon Alexander and Philip as they never could have done with Massasoit.

There were many things that made the Red man hate the White man. The Whites had kidnapped and sold into slavery many of the Indians. At the close of the Piquod war the prisoners taken by the Whites were carried to Jamaica and elsewhere and sold as slaves, and among the Indians there was fierce anger because of this

Then, there was also a religious side to the hatred. John Eliot, called the "Apostle to the Indians" had been converting many to Christianity and the chiefs felt that they were losing their people as they were deserting their religion and taking up Christianity. Added to this they felt that the Whites were taking possession of their lands and hunting grounds and if it went on the Indians thought they would be driven from their homes and the White man could take possession of everything.

Plans were being formed to drive the Whites out of their settlements. The Narragansetts and other tribes were very eager to do the work and they influenced the Wampanoags, a branch of the tribe over which Massasoit had been chief. Alexander was won over by them and he decided to try and stop the growth of the Whites. Massasoit died in 1660 and in 1662 there were so many reports that Alexander was plotting with the Narragansetts against the settlers that he was summoned by the Governor to appear before the general court at Plymouth. He refused to appear, but was captured and was brought to Plymouth; then he took sick and died and the Indians believed that the people at Plymouth had poisoned him. Philip, the younger brother succeeded him, and became the chief sachem of his tribe. He was one of the most remarkable men of his race that ever lived, and his name has gone down in history as a great chief. The settlers of the Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth colonies had so many doubts of his intention that he was summoned to Plymouth to explain his actions. Philip obeyed the summons and there he solemnly declared that he knew nothing of, nor was in any way concerned in any plot against the Whites. The former covenant of friendship was renewed. Philip, and five of his officers signed a paper binding themselves to peaceful and loyal conduct as subjects of the King of England, and the court agreed to give Philip and his tribe such help as they might need. The result of all this was five years of peace.

There have been various reasons given for the cause of King Philip's war, but it is thought that the real cause will never be known. Philip had many grievances against the Whites, and perhaps he came to believe, as the widow of his brother Alexander always insisted, that the rulers in Plymouth had poisoned him. His soul no doubt was roused by the increase of power on the part of the Whites, and the thought that it meant the extinction of his own race, unless the invaders could be swept into the sea.

By 1670 the Indians had obtained a great many firearms and had become so expert in their use that they were not so unequal a match for the White men as formerly. It seems that there was now some kind of an arrangement between the three tribes the Narragansetts, Wampanoags, and Nipinucks that at the first opportunity the White settlers would be attacked.

In 1674 there were 4000 Indians in New England who had accepted Christianity, and many of these had learned to read and write; John Eliot had translated the Bible into the Indian tongue, and the missionaries taught them to read, but the chiefs and many of the Indians were very much opposed to this. They felt that the people were being led astray and that the White men's aim was to become their masters and for that reason they only waited for a good chance to destroy them. Among the converted Indians was one named Sausaman, who was allowed to mingle freely with the Whites and Indians and to the settlers he told all he could learn about Philip and his plans. The Indians became suspicious of this man and looked upon him as a traitor and one day in the winter of 1674 his body was found under the ice in a Middleborough pond. When the body was examined evidence was found that he had been slain and the body placed under the ice afterwards. Investigation was made and an Indian found, who testified that from the top of a hill he saw three of his own people kill the warrior and thrust his body under the ice. The accused Indians were arrested and tried before a jury of six White men and six Indians, and being found guilty they were sentenced and put to death.

Philip now made up his mind for war as he was continually suspected and accused, and the settlers would believe nothing but evil of him. He then with his warriors displaying their firearms marched boldly to the head of the peninsula where his stronghold was. This was a ridge of woody hills near the present city of Bristol. The settlers watched them closely and discovered that bodies of Indians were making their way to that station as if summoned to a gathering for war-like purposes while the squaws and children were sent to Narragansett, and the sound of beating drums and firing muskets made it plain that the warriors were bound for war. The alarm among the settlers now became general and they made ready for defence.

The first attack of Philip and his men was upon the little town of Swansea, which was near Philip's territory. This was on the 24th of June, 1675, and while the people were returning home from church the Indians attacked them; they were suddenly fired upon, one of the settlers drooping dead and some were wounded. Two White men rushed for a surgeon, but the Indians killed both of them, and also slew six others near the garrison and mutilated and scalped their bodies. The Indians then burned several houses and barns and finally withdrew as swiftly as they came.

About the same time the town of Mattapoisett was attacked eight men killed and houses and barns burned. The war spread all over New England, lasting for two years which were years of horror. The towns of Rehoboth, Taunton, Dartmouth, and Middleborough were attacked with great fury, lives lost, and houses and barns burned down.

The war at first was confined to Plymouth Colony, but Weymouth did not escape. On Feb. 12, 1675, an assault was made upon Weymouth when several houses and barns were burned and some men killed and in March, 1676, the town was again attacked by a band of Indians on their way to the Plymouth Colony. On that occasion seven houses and barns were burned.

GOVERNMENT SAVING SYSTEM

A very attractive booklet issued by the U. S. Savings System tells what the Government is doing to encourage the people to practice economy and thrift. About twelve years ago the Postal Savings System was established, chiefly for the benefit of the foreign-born who would trust their earnings only with the Government for safe-keeping.

During the war the national savings movement grew in importance when war savings stamps and certificates were sold to persons of small means who wanted a safe investment and who patriotically wished to meet the requests of the Government for money to carry on the war.

But these savings securities were not adapted to after-war conditions, and a new method to carry on the savings movement was devised. The Government Savings System was reorganized and treasury savings certificates were issued to take the place of war savings securities.

New life was injected into the system and it is now working upon broad lines. It is conducting a campaign of education to teach the people to save; to have them avoid the swindling operations which take hundreds of millions of hard-earned money from them; and, it is offering for sale a sound, safe, and convenient form of investment in denominations within the reach of all, and which are fully explained in the booklet.

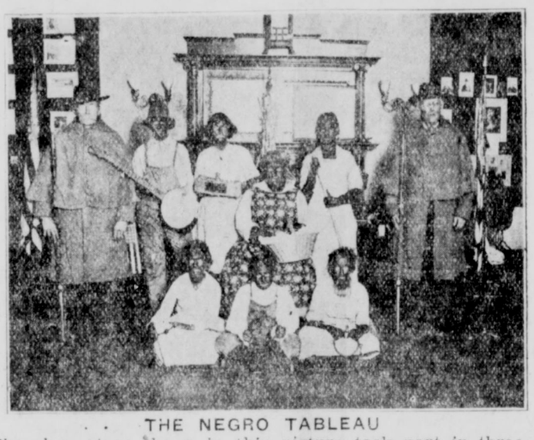
The World in Weymouth

A Missionary Exhibit

The Missionary Exhibit, "The World in Weymouth" held at the East Weymouth Congregational Church on Feb. 4—7, which was reported extensively in the Gazette at that time, has aroused considerable interest in Congregational circles everywhere. In this and the next few issues of the Gazette, thru the courtesy of the "Congregationalist", pictures of the exhibit will be printed describing the events of the four-day program. These pictures were taken by a Weymouth photographer, Arthur W. Cook.

THE JOHN ELIOT TABLEAU

John Eliot in the picture is seated in the middle surrounded by seven Indian characters each representing one of the seven praying villages which this first missionary to the Indians visited every week to carry the gospel. In the tableau, the names of the villages were printed on cards hanging above the heads of the seven Indian characters. In one part of the tableau John Eliot was shown translating the Bible, and in another part he was shown preaching to the Indians. The story of the A. M. A. work with the Indians was told in a prepared dialogue of questions and answers in which Rev. A. V. Bliss, secretary of the A. M. A., took part. Other features of the tableau were the singing of a duet of a hymn about the Bible, the playing of a phonograph record illustrating the character of the song and language of the Indians, and finally the showing of some exhibit material of handwork of the pupils of Santee Normal School.



THE NEGRO TABLEAU

The characters shown in this picture took part in three tableaux relating to the Negro work of the A. M. A. They have in their hands some of the articles used in the course of the several presentations. In the first tableau they were just a group of slaves standing in line holding in their hands their slave chain, slave shackle, banjo, basket of cotton, a bundle of ragged clothes, etc. Two G. A. R. men and a character representing the slaveholder, also took part in the first scene, while A. M. A. missionaries and a school teacher were in the succeeding two scenes. The first tableau told about the slave after the Civil War. A lady soloist sang the Negro Spiritual "Nobody Knows de Troubles I've Seen". The second tableau presented a picture of a room in our A. M. A. schools. A teacher, pupils, desk, blackboard, and A. M. A. charts were used. The dialogue continued, telling about the work of the A. M. A. in the South. The third tableau showed a modern Negro home in the South. This was intended to illustrate the good influence of the A. M. A. schools. It told about the domestic science, manual training and agricultural courses in the schools as well as about the regular academic work.

AMERICANIZATION PLAY

The Congregational Home Missionary Society does special work with the foreigner who comes to America and enters at Ellis Island, while the A. M. A. does a similar work with the Orientals in California and the West. This whole story was told in a short play, the scene of which was Ellis Island. The characters in that play are shown in this picture. The play was one modified from the Americanization play by Charles F. Fuller of the Central Congregational church, Worcester. The foreigners—Armenian, Russian, Chinese, Greek, Italian, Slovak, etc.—entered America on the platform through a simply constructed screen gate, they were examined by immigration and medical officers, answered questions, and told about their sufferings in the homeland and their search for freedom in America. Those that were admitted were met by the missionaries, who attended to their spiritual and material needs. Each foreigner, upon entering, also came forward and laid his contribution of life, culture, and service upon America's altar. The reader at the desk told about the work of the missionary societies giving illustrations and statistics.

THE HAYSTACK MEETING

On the second evening of the exhibit, there were tableaux presenting the work of the American Board. There is nothing that appeals to the imagination more than the story of the Haystack Meeting. With that the evening's program opened. Five young men were seated around a small haystack reading the Scriptures, while the reader at the desk related the story, and gave information about the progress of the work of the American Board. The tableau ended with the duet rendering of a missionary hymn. (To be continued)

Put On a Paint That Stays Put

Hold on a minute, and say this to yourself before you put another cent into paint. Say that it costs just as much to put on a poor paint as a good one. Generally more.

A poor paint doesn't stay put. Doesn't, because you can't get out of anything what isn't in it. We have proven to our entire satisfaction that Lowe Brothers put stay-putness in every gallon of paint they make.

Stay-put is just another way of saying it stands weather's wear and tear. Drop in and we will show you a color card and tell you some paint facts, which, have a notion you have never been told.

W. R. C. NOTES

Members of Corps 102 and of Post 58 G. A. R., intending to attend the "Camp Fire" on Wednesday evening, April 11, at the close of W. R. C. convention and desire accommodations to get home will notify Mrs. M. E. Mahoney, chairman on conveyance

The press correspondent of Corps 102 attended the Middlesex County Association meeting at Wakefield on Tuesday.

P. P. Mrs. Green and the press correspondent attended the farewell party tendered by Corps 103, Quincy, to Mrs. Cora Carman on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Carman is to reside in Los Angeles, Cal.

Mrs. Delia Caulfield, C. B. No. 3, of Corps 102, has the honor of being State color bearer of the Service Star Legion for the ensuing year.

We are sorry to report the serious illness of Assistant Adjutant General Wilfred Wetherbee, also Comrade Edwin Pike, clerk of G. A. R. headquarters.

PROSPEROUS NEWSPAPER

Congratulations to Bro. Wingate, the publisher of the Medford Mercury who announces that a permanent home will be erected for that paper, one of the most successful of our exchanges. The lot purchased contains 15,536 square feet and the plans call for a brick building with stores on front and six on an arcade which runs through the center to the Mercury plant. The newspaper will have roomy, light and well equipped quarters the whole building heated by steam from a central plant. Work has already started on Forest street, Medford Square.

A TIRRELL TOWN

Weymouth now has a Mr. Tirrell as chairman of the board of Selectmen, a Mr. Tirrell as clerk of the Selectmen, a Mr. Tirrell as Representative to the General Court, a Mr. Tirrell as chairman of the School Committee, a Mr. Tirrell as constable, and there are other Mr. Tirrells,—all good men.

Speaker Young On Income Taxation

Speaker Young, in his address before the Men's Club of the East Weymouth Congregational church last week, discussed various tax bills which are before the Legislature. He said in part:

The Legislature now has under consideration several proposals to increase the rate of the Massachusetts income tax. The tax rate on the income of intangible property is now six percent. It has been suggested that the rate be raised to seven, eight or even to ten percent. The idea is to obtain more revenue from this class of property in order to reduce the taxes on real estate.

I am strongly opposed to any increase in the present rate of six per cent. My principal reason for opposing an increase is that I believe it would defeat its own purpose. I believe that the increased rate would produce less revenue than the present rate of six percent.

It is very easy to kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

The first year in which the Massachusetts income taxe became law was 1917; 196,900 people filed returns, and the tax collected was $9,099,573. Five years later the number of returns had increased 296,218, but the tax collected at the same rate of six percent was only $8,081,121; 100,000 more returns were filed and the receipts were $1,000,000 less.

The reason is clear. Taxable securities have been sold and in their place non-taxable securities have been purchased. Liberty bonds, Massachusetts state and municipal bonds, federal farm loan bonds, stocks in Massachusetts corporations, mortgages on Massachusetts real estate are all non-taxable.

An increase in the tax rate would lend added impetus to this movement. It would result in an exchange of a large amount of taxable property for non-taxables. I am firmly convinced that the proposal is extremely short sighted and that an increase from six merely to seven percent would, in fact, reduce the amount of taxes collected by not less than $1,000,000.

This is not a question of taxing the rich. The Massachusetts income tax on the income from intangible property is levied upon every dollar of income of a person whose total income is $600 a year. A man or woman who has saved $100 and invested his savings in bonds or stocks of the great productive industries of America would have to bear this increased burden.

When people argue that six percent is after all not an exorbitant rate, let them consider the fact that the state income tax of New York is only one percent on incomes of less than $10,000, where the rate is six percent in Massachusetts. Let them remember also that the Massachusetts income tax is levied in addition to the federal tax which begins at four percent, and on the largest incomes exceeds fifty percent.

The people realize today that the cost of government is a large part of the cost of living. They also realize that taxes levied on the rich are not paid by the rich alone, but by the entire community through the cost of living. Just as water finds the lowest point for its final resting place, so the cost of government, whatever the initial tax may be, is gradually shifted to the everyday man and woman. It may be held behind the dam of some special tax like the tax on a corporation or a rich man's income, but no more than water running down hill can it be held or hidden long. In the end it adds its portion to the great reservoir which fixes the level of living costs for all the people.

The man who pays no direct tax except a poll tax is nevertheless charged for all taxes in proportion to his property and expenses just as much as the millionaire. The landlord shifts the real estate tax to the tenant by adding it on the rent bill through an increase in rent. The butcher and grocer collect their own tax bills from the purchasers of commodities at their stores. The business corporation figures the taxes charged against its products and sales and adds them to the selling value of its merchandise. The rich man who buys government bonds and another tax-empt securities to escape the enormous surtaxes on income imposed by the federal income tax law thus withdraws his capital from those productive industries which might give employment and might also provide more cheaply the necessaries of life for all the people. Tax statutes can never repeal economic laws, and the fellow who says that taxes levied on the rich men make things better and cheaper for th poor man is the fellow Mr. Barnum had in mind when he said, "There is one born every minute".

The job of government today is to reduce expenses instead of to increase taxes. The proposal filed by Mayor Curley of Boston that the income tax rate be increased from six to ten percent has been rejected by the committee on taxation and was rejected today by the House of Representatives without a dissenting vote or even a word spoken in debate. The other bills and proposals for an increase in the Massachusetts income tax should, in my opinion, receive the same fate.

That remarkable fish, the seahorse, has been growing scarcer in the northranges of the Atlantic coast waters. The gradual extinction of this picturesque animal is believed to be due to the heavy fuel oils used in vessels.

At the evening worship at 7 an Easter pageant, "The Questioner". This is a beautiful pageant presenting in a convincing way the meaning of Christ's Resurrection to the world of today. "The Questioner" is the leading character and is supported by a caste of 22 others. The following lines taken from the pageant give a fair introduction to the thought of the theme "The Questioner. But what if Jesus did rise from the dead? What meaneth that to me? Wisdom: I will teach thee what it meaneth to thee. For this cause am I sent and many of God's messengers shall aid me in this instruction. Nature shall teach thee, and Reason shall teach thee; History shall teach thee, and Religion shall teach thee: Experience and Sorrow shall teach thee, and Faith also; yea, Death himself; and when thou hast learned thy lesson, Joy shall come and abide with thee!" A quartet will render several numbers in connection with the giving of the pageant.

1. EASTER

"It must be so:—
Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire,
This longing after immortality?
Or whence this secret dread, this inward horror
Of falling back to naught? Why shrinks the soul
Back on herself, and startles at destruction?
'Tis the divinity that stirs within us—
'Tis heaven itself that points out an hereafter
And intimates eternity to man"—Addison

BIRTH RETURNS

Town Clerk's Office,
Weymouth, March 12, 1923

Attention is hereby called to the following extracts of the General Laws relating to births in Weymouth

Clayton B. Merchant,
Town Clerk

Section 3. Every physician, or hospital medical officer registered under section nine of chapter one hundred and twelve, in this chapter called officer, shall keep a record of the birth of every child in cases of which he was in charge, showing date and place of birth, the name, if any, of the child, its sex and color, the name, age, birthplace, occupation and residence (including the street number, if any, and the ward number, if in a city) of each parent, the maiden name of the mother and the name of the physician or officer, if any, personally attending the birth. If the child is illegitimate the name of and other facts relating to the father shall not be set forth except upon written request of both the father and mother. Said physician or officer shall, within fifteen days after such birth, mail or deliver to the clerk or register of the town where such birth occurred, a report stating the facts hereinabove required to be shown on such record and also the written request, if any; provided, that if said report is not so made within forty-eight hours after such birth, said physician or officer shall, within forty-eigth hours, mail or deliver to said clerk or register a notice stating the date and place of birth, the street number, if any, the ward number, if in a city, and the family name. Upon presentation to him of a certificate of the town clerk stating that any such birth has been duly reported, the town treasurer shall pay to such physician or officer a fee of twenty-five cents for each birth so reported. Any physician or any such officer violating any provision of this section shall forfeit not more than twenty-five dollars.

Section 4. A member or servant of a family in which a child is born, having knowledge of the facts required for record relative to such birth shall furnish the same upon request of the clerk of the town where such child was born or its parents reside, or of any person authorized by him. Such member or servant refusing to furnish such facts shall be punished by fine not exceeding ten dollars.

Section 6. Parents, within forty days after the birth of a child, and every householder within forty days after a birth in his house, shall cause notice thereof to be given to the clerk of the town where such child is born. 3t,12,14

SACRED HEART CHURCH

The Easter Sunday services at Sacred Heart Catholic church will be of more than ordinary interest because of the unveiling of a beautiful oil painting entitled "Blessing Little Children". The service will be in charge of Rev. Fr. Holland, the pastor.

The painting, handsomely framed, is nine by five feet and will occupy a place on the wall above and behind one of the side altars. The painting is a striking piece of work from the brush of Frederick Millson of Winthrop and though richly colored the scene is delicately worked out in a pearly tone color scheme. The picture shows our Lord in the center with one hand upraised, tenderly bestowing his blessing on two little children. In the immediate rear is a group of saints and angels and hovering over all is seen a white dove representing the Holy Ghost. In the foreground is the lamb. Beneath are the words "For such is the Kingdom of God".

GEM THEATRE

As an Easter attraction the Gem theatre offers the great Cosmopolitan picture "Suspicious Wives" with Mollie King. The hand that rocks the cocktail rules the world. Is this true of the jazz-mad young people? See the wonderful picture "Nice People". Their high life is exposed in a most sensational manner, but all ends in a wholesome love story.

The following week Mr. Rogers offers the beautiful Alice Brady in "Missing Millions".

OLD-TIME MINSTREL

On Tuesday the body of Daniel Haley, one of the last of the old-time black-face minstrels and a champion tamborine player, arrived at his home, 53 Keith street, Weymouth from Detroit, Mich. The coffin was covered with flowers, one floral tribute being a broken harp, the gift of his fellow-players in the George Primrose Company. He was with that company in Detroit when death came.

Mr. Haley was born 64 years ago in the Fort Hill district of Boston, the son of Daniel and Anna (McCabe) Haley. At the age of 20 he came to Weymouth which had since been his home.

At an early age he attracted no small amount of attention by his ability in blackface minstrel work and also for his clog dancing, his plantation negro acts and his clever tamborine solo work.

As a young man he went into business for himself as a boot and shoe "crimper", later going to work for the Edmund Hunt Pyrotechnic Works where he remained for more than ten years, rising to the position of foreman and becoming quite noted as a mixer of high-grade explosives.

Deciding later to take up a professional career, Mr. Haley began his real stage career as a member of the "Big Four", which included besides himself (known in those days as "Tickle"), Nate Wheeler, George Shaw, and Johnny Goodwin.

As a member of various minstrel troupes, he had traveled far and wide through this country. In between times he achieved no small reputation as a teacher of clog dancing, his pupils including a number of pugilists who were particularly anxious to learn the intricacies of the side-step.

At one time Mr. Haley and his brother Mike formed a successful dancing team.

In 1885 he married Miss Margaret Stack, who survives him and who in response to a telegram sent to her from Detroit, was able to reach the Michigan city in time to be with her husband when he died.

He was a member of Weymouth council, K. of C., and members of the council gathered in the home of the deceased and paid their tribute to the departed brother on Tuesday evening. Funeral services were held in the Church of the Sacred Heart on Wednesday morning at 9.30.

OPEN LETTER TO MERCHANTS

Editors Gazette-Transcript:

At the meeting held Monday night in Gem Theatre there seemed to be an appreciable amount of enthusiasm for the organization of some sort of "commercial club" for this good sized community. There is great need for it and there should be a great demand for it on the part of all the merchants; that is, if all want to make money.

Boom this community and the community will boost the merchants. Organize, co-operate, and you will catch the imagination of the people, and we'll all trade at home. That's where your store comes in.

A few ideas about your getting together are crackling in my head that I want to get them across to the tradesmen, manufacturers, and business men of this community. I consider these very important:

In the establishment of a commercial organization:

First—You must disregard the political division of these towns. For business purposes, Weymouth and East Braintree are one. In fact they are one logical community for most any other purpose. The congestion of population is just about on the line

The relationship of Weymouth to the other Weymouth and that of East Braintree to the other Braintrees are forced, arbitrary and strained relationships.

Even tho tied together in ancient history into towns by geography rather than population, they are virtually, for all intents and purposes, separate communities; while Weymouth and East Braintree together IS one community with common interests.

This is especially so when it comes to our business center, the biggest business center between Quincy and Brockton or Plymouth.

My first idea then is that your Chamber of Commerce will be a success if it sticks to the one big logical community right here and does not take in any of the smaller communities 'round about.

Second—Just as concentration in one community is essential to success, so will be concentration in membership. Better have a definite pointed constitution and by-laws that can be readily broadened out by revision later if thought advisable, than to have a general, loose-jointed affair that spreads the object and the membership of the society all over the map.

In this latter way you'd be nowhere in trying right off the bat to do everything. Why not have your voting members confined to merchants, trades-people (both sexes) builders, business men whose store, office or factory is in this community.

Then, I might suggest for consideration an associate membership, non-voting, and at perhaps half dues for any resident who is interested in booming our community industrially.

The professional men, lawyers, physicians, perhaps the clergy, might well be either voting or non-voting associate members as the merchants themselves determine. But you have to draw the line somewhere and it seems to me it might well be here.

Third—In regard to purpose and objects for discussion and work to be undertaken, here again, the society had better be limited. Don't undertake everything under the sun. Industrial and trade co-operation; co-operative buying on the part of the grocers; booming the town as a fine residential settlement and the consequential building boom; inviting industries and factories to come here, etc, as well as dressing up the stores and making our squares attractive; methods of attracting motorists this coming summer to stop and consider the advantages of building here: these are some of the ideas that would suggest themselves to a Board of Trade or Chamber of Commerce with definite purpose or aim.

In writing this letter my purpose has been merely suggestive and to start discussion among the merchants and business men themselves. Let everyone talk it up and boost for an organization of commercial enterprise and co-operation for East Braintree and Weymouth. We can accomplish great things if we will, and our merchants can make more money than ever before, and the town will grow. Boston's overflow of population must go somewhere. Why not here?

Sincerely yours
J. CALEB JUSTICE

—11—

He made a careful search of the vault. The boxes lined the walls to a height of six feet on all sides. A few cigarette stubs on the dirt floor showed that some one had been smoking, but there was nothing to indicate whom he might have been. As he finished his examination, Bartley said, "I guess we may as well go now."

I had taken off my hat when I entered the vault, and placed it on one of the boxes, and now when I looked for it I could not find it. It occurred to me that it must have fallen behind a box; and, taking Bartley's torch, I climbed upon the box and flashed the light into the niche behind the one on which I thought I had laid it. There it lay. As I reached for it my hand came in contact with something hard. I knew, even as my fingers groped for the object, that it was a revolver. Climbing down from the box, I went up to Bartley.

"Look what I found!" I exclaimed.

"Where did you get that?" he asked excitedly as he took it from me.

I told him of my hat falling behind the boxes, and how the revolver had been in the niche back of them. There seemed no reason for his being so excited over the find, but his next words enlightened me.

"That's the gun that was in Slyke's hand this morning. I recognize the worn place on the barrel."

"But how did it get there?" I asked in wonder.

"I don't know," was the reply. "It looks as if the person that threw it back of the boxes, did it to hide it. He may intend to come for it later."

To my surprise, he bent over suddenly and blew out the lantern. In a second the vault was in darkness. Currie started to remonstrate, but a warning whisper from Bartley stopped him.

"Both of you get back of that door at once. There is someone outside. Don't make a move or a sound. I think he is going to come in."

I heard Currie mutter in surprise as we groped our way behind the door. At first I could hear nothing; then on the other side of the wooden door I heard some one stumble and a hand fumble for the lock. What could it mean? If the truck had come back for another load we were in a bad fix indeed. The men who had fired at us before would not hesitate to shoot to kill this time, and when we were missing no one would think to search for us in this vault. In a fight, the odds were heavily against us, as Bartley alone was armed.

Currie and myself had been placed by Bartley so that when the door opened we would be hidden by it. He took up his position on the other side, crouching flat against the wall. It was too dark to make out his figure, or even that of Currie at my side. I listened to his uneasy breathing, and for a second wondered what he was thinking about.

Whoever was opening the door had no fear of making a noise. He stumbled into the vault and swung the door behind him with a little click. Then a slit of light pierced the darkness and we crouched against the wall, scarcely daring to breathe, expecting every moment that he would see us. Just what he had come for I never knew. He played the light rather aimlessly along the walls, then turned in onto the floor. All at once it paused, and I heard an astonished gasp. No wonder, for the light was resting on Bartley's shoes.

The next second he had extinguished it and was making for the door. Almost before he had moved, Bartley had flashed on his own torch and was saying, "Put up your hands. I have you covered."

The light in Bartley's hand had been focused on the man's body, leaving his face in darkness. As he began to move it upward to his face, the man made a swift, flying dive at Bartley's legs. The attack was so sudden that he was taken unawares, and they fell to the floor together. As Bartley went down, he struck the button of his torch and extinguished it, leaving us in darkness. We could hear the two men thrashing about on the floor, but could not tell who was getting the best of it. Then I remembered the lantern and searched for that. Relighting it, I held it above my head so that the light fell on the floor. Bartley was sitting on the man that had attacked him, his face and white suit streaked with dirt and a lump reddening over one eye, but he was smiling. He directed me to find his torch, which had rolled half under a box, and relight it. When I had complied, he rose to his feet, and, pulling the man up with him, told me to throw the light on the face of his prisoner.

Currie cried, "Why, it's Slyke's chauffeur!"

The man did not deny it, but stood silent and glowering. Remembering what Bartley had told me of the butler having seen him on the stairs while we were in the tower rooms, I wondered if he were the one who had placed the revolver here. When Bartley questioned him as to why he had come to the vault he replied that it was none of his business; and when Bartley suggested that the police might make it their business, he only laughed sneeringly. We were discussing what we should do with him, since there was no charge on which he could be arrested, when we received another shock.

The chauffeur had closed the door of the vault when he entered, but in some way it had become unfastened during the struggle, and now stood wide open, the lighted interior plainly visible to anyone without. We were standing grouped together near the center of the room, our backs to the door, when a voice said, "Up with your hands, the whole four of you. Be quick about it! I have you all covered, and will shoot the first one that moves."

There was but one thing to do, and we all did it. With our hands high in the air, we turned to the doorway to see who the intruder was. He was a tall, heavy-set man, with a round face, holding a revolver in his right hand.

Who could this second man be? For a second I thought it must be some friend of the chauffeur; but one look at his astonished face told me he knew no more who the man was than we did. Bartley looked puzzled, yet a little smile never left his face.

The man stood still for a moment before advancing into the vault. It seemed to me that he was startled at finding four of us there. He came to the center of the vault, and stopped, keeping several feet away from us.

"Starting with the man on the right," he said, "come over here, one by one. I am going to search you. No foolishness, now; I will kill the first man that starts something."

"My, what a pleasant man," I heard Currie mutter.

The first man on the right happened to be Bartley. He stepped forward, his hands high in the air. I wondered if he would submit quietly to being searched. He allowed the left hand of the man to go over his clothing until it reached the revolver in his pocket; then like a flash he grasped the hand holding the gun at his chest, and gave it such a quick jerk that the weapon fell to the floor.

The fight was on. Both Currie and myself started to assist him, but Bartley called to us to watch the chauffeur. I picked up the revolver and covered the man.

It was not a long fight, and Bartley soon had his antagonist subdued. As he dragged him to his feet, and began to search him, he stopped with an amused cry. On the man's vest was a little badge.

"Why didn't you tell us you were a detective?" he asked.

The man, his face red with rage, answered, "Why in h—l should I?"

Bartley explained who he was, and the detective was delighted at the encounter. After we had given him back his gun and helped him brush himself off, he seated himself on a box, saying, "I will say you work quick, Mr. Bartley."

We grinned at this. We were much relieved to find that he was a detective, and not one of the gang engaged in running whisky. He told us that he was in the revenue department and had been watching Slyke's house for some time, or I should have said, rather, his chauffeur's. He had given him the slip and he had been searching for him already. He had encountered him about ten o'clock and had been trailing him ever since. When the chauffeur had come to the vault, he had waited for him outside; then the door had swung open and he had seen a chance to capture what he thought was the gang.

He pointed at the chauffeur and said, "That's the chap, I believe, that killed Slyke."

Up to this time the chauffeur had not said a word. His face turned white with rage, and he cried, "You lie!" and would have taken the detective by the throat if Bartley had not prevented him.

Bartley and the detective, whose name was Black, decided that the best thing to do with the chauffeur was to place him in the hands of the police. When Black learned that the vault was filled with whisky, he asked Bartley to remain and help him guard it until the police could relieve him; he seemed to fear that the rest of the gang would return. Bartley told me to go to the house and call up Roche, and ask him to come at once with his men, and then to bring back his car.

I reached the main road without meeting anyone, and, breaking into a run, was soon at the house. I telephoned at once to Roche; and he was so much startled at my story that I had great difficulty in making him understand where he was to go, and what he was to do. At last he agreed to come at once.

It took me only a few moments in Bartley's car to reach the woods again; but, when I arrrived, I saw two other cars already parked on the roadside, and knew that the police had preceded me.

I found Roche and two of his men in the vault, conferring with Bartley and Black. It had been decided to guard the place until morning, when the whisky could be removed. The chauffeur was to be taken to the Saratoga jail and locked up.

When we reached the house, Mrs. Currie came to meet us. At the sight of her husband's black eye, which by this time was very noticeable, and the ruin of Bartley's white suit, she gave a little cry.

"What under heaven have you been doing?" she asked.

Currie gave me a wink. "Lookin. for whisky," he answered.

He went to a nearby table, took something from each pocket and placed them carefully upon it. He then stood looking down at them proudly.

"A little souvenir of the night's work," he remarked, pointing to two bottles of whisky which he had taken, without our knowing it, from the box that Bartley had opened in the vault.

CHAPTER VII

In Which Bartley Talks of Many Things.

Mrs. Currie wanted to hear the story of our adventures; and when Bartley recounted what had taken place, I noticed that he expressed no opinion as to what was back of it all.

It was after one when we reached our rooms, and I expected that Bartley would want to go to bed at once. I knew how tired I was, and supposed that he must be even more weary. But, after he had gotten into his pajamas, he dropped into a chair by the window, curled one leg over the arm, lighted his pipe, and turned to me.

"Well, what do you think of it all?" he drawled.

That was a hard question to answer. We had been through so much, so many apparently unconnected events, that I scarcely knew what to think. Then, too, I knew very little of what had taken place after I had left him at Slyke's, or what new things he had observed there. The finding of whisky and the sudden appearance of the chauffeur, coupled with my discovery of the revolver, seemed to me to still further complicate the problem. What had he come to the vault for? I remembered that the detective had said he thought the chauffeur had killed Slyke. I wondered if this was simply a wild guess, or whether there was something behind it.

Bartley watched me with that little smile on his lips that meant so many things. "Well, Pelt," he said, "it looks as if we were engaged upon as mysterious a case as ever came our way. The more I look it over, the less sure I am of anything. Do you know, I picked up very little after you left the house?"

I had been wondering all day if he would find any clues of value. I knew what a careful search he must have made, and his statement that he picked up very little of importance surprised me.

Bartley watched me for a moment or two before continuing. Then he told me of his day's work. They had been unable to find the chauffeur either at the garage or anywhere else around the estate. No one had seen him since the butler saw him on the stairs early in the morning. The cook had later volunteered the information that Mr. Slyke and he had quarreled over something. What it was she did not know; she had only heard the few words he had repeated to me. The house had been searched from top to bottom, but without result. So far as he could tell, nothing had been stolen.

Bartley had learned also that there was ill feeling between Miss Potter and the chauffeur, and he had questioned her about it. She refused to say what it was, and seemed to consider Bartley's presence as an intrusion. He had secured nothing new from her. When asked if she knew whether Slyke had any enemies who might want to take his life, she replied she did not. Repeated questioning could not shake her story that the step-daughter Ruth had not been expected home that night, and that she had not known the girl was in the house until we had all heard her voice on the stairs. As the girl carried her own key, she could easily, she said, have returned without her knowing it.

Then there was the dog to be considered. He had slept as usual in the big living room on the night of the crime. The girl's story of his walking to the foot of the stairs with her when she came in, proved that he was there the entire night. Bartley remarked that it was very strange that the dog should have made no sound.

DOGS

MUST BE LICENSED

On or Before March 31st

Extracts from Chap. 140, General Laws of Massachusetts.

Section 137. The owner or keeper of a dog which is three months old or over shall annually, on or before March 31, cause it to be registered, numbered, described and licensed for one year from the first day of April following, if the dog is kept in Boston in the office of the police commissioner, or if kept in any other city or town in the office of the clerk thereof. The license shall be subject to the condition expressed therein that the dog which is the subject of the license shall be controlled and restrained from killing, chasing, or harassing sheep, lambs, fowls, or other domestic animals. The owner or keeper of a licensed dog shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered number.

Sec. 138. The owner or keeper of a dog may at any time have it licensed until the first day of April following and a person who becomes the owner or keeper of a dog after April first which is not duly licensed, and the owner or keeper of a dog which becomes three months old after March 31 in any year shall, when it is three months old, cause it to be registered, numbered, described, licensed, and collared as required by the preceding section.

Sec. 139. The fee for every license shall . . . . be $2.00 for a male dog and $5.00 for a female dog, unless a certificate of a registered veterinarian who performed the operation that said female dog has been spayed and has thereby been deprived of the power of propagation, has been filed with the city or town clerk, in which case the fee shall be $2.00. A certified copy of such certificate on file in the office of any town or city clerk within the commonwealth may be accepted as evidence that the said operation has been performed.

Sec. 140. The owner or keeper of dogs kept for breeding purposes may annually receive a license authorizing him to keep such dogs upon the premises described in the license. If the number of dogs so kept does not exceed five, the fee for such license shall be $25.00, and if the number of dogs exceed five, the fee shall be $50.00 and no fee shall be required for the dogs of such owner or keeper which are under the age of six months. The three preceding sections will not apply to licenses under this section.

Sec. 141. Whoever violates any provisions of sections 137, 138, or 140, shall forfeit not more than $15.00, which shall be paid, if the dog was kept in any city or town in Suffolk county, to the treasurer of the city or town, or if kept in any other county, to the treasurer thereof.

Sec. 142. No person shall keep or have in his care or possession any bloodhound, excepting an English bloodhound of pure blood, whose pedigree is recorded or would be entitled to record in the English bloodhound herd book, or any dog classed by dog fanciers or breeders as Cuban bloodhound or Siberian bloodhound, whether such dog is in whole or in part of such species, unless such dog is kept solely for exhibition. In such case he shall at all times be kept securely enclosed or chained, and shall not be allowed at large even though in charge of a keeper, unless properly and securely muzzled.

Sec. 143. Whoever violates the preceding section shall forfeit $50.00, $10.00 of which shall be paid to the complainant and $10.00 shall, if the dog was kept in any city or town in Suffolk county, be paid to the treasurer of the town, or if kept in any other county, to the treasurer thereof.

Sec. 145. Every license issued to the owner of a dog shall have a description of the symptoms of hydrophobia printed thereon

BRIDGE STREET WIDENING

Representatives of the Massachusetts Highway Commission were in town last Friday relative to a contemplated widening of Bridge street at North Weymouth, between the Quincy Point bridge and Bicknell Square, where automobile accidents are of almost daily occurrence during the summer season because of the tremendous travel between Greater Boston and the South Shore.

All the traffic must go via Bridge street, or via Quincy avenue and Washington street, and there is great need of widening Bridge street, particularly now that the Edison Illuminating Company has underway vast improvements on both sides of this street.

The tremendous increase in automobile travel to and from the South Shore and Plymouth demands a 100-foot boulevard between the Quincy bridge and Bicknell Square, if not to the Hingham bridge at Weymouth Back river. It is not a local affair but an improvement for the safety of through travel. A boulevard with a reservation for the street railway in the center would be ideal. This would make one-way streets on either side of the railway,—the side on the east for travel to Quincy and Boston, and the side on the west for travel from Greater Boston to the Nantasket, the South Shore and Plymouth.

The widening cannot come too soon, and it should be more than five to fifteen feet as proposed. It is up to the Selectmen, the Planning Board and our Men's Clubs, yes, women's clubs, to be active NOW, and secure this wide State highway through the northerly part of our town. We must get active at once and not delay, as it will be too late in a few months.

WHY ORGANIZE

At the meeting of the merchants in Washington Square last week one of the speakers was George Dunning, a Washington Square man with country-wide experience, who spoke as follows:

Every day while we are at our offices—our shops—there is a great commotion in twenty-four million homes of the land: The commotion comes about because shopping time has arrived. Thirty-five million of our women folks start out food shopping and they spend forty-nine million dollars in the grocery and meat shops of the country before sundown.

Our women folks are intensely interested in your shops—they ought to be. Your well kept stores, your smiling clerks, the very air of welcome which pervades your stores, comes very close to our women folks, and to us, too, principally because we have to pay the bill.

Very few of your customers realize that fourteen cents out of every dollar they spend goes into the running of your store. "Why", says the intelligent purchaser, "that means that one-seventh of my monthly grocery bill goes to maintain your establishment", and the grocery man if he is a student of statistics, says "You are right, madam".

We are very much interested in the store problem because stores are very close to us. There is one for every 22 families—in fact there are a million stores in the country and there is one grocer, for instance, for every 52 families.

Thirty-eight percent of all the money earned today will be spent in stores and shops today; 45 cents will be spent today for every man, woman and child of the 105,000,000 of us.

According to statistics, only five out of every hundred grocery men succeed in business; 80 out of every 100 last seven years or less.

Grocery stores must earn more than 15 percent of the capital invested every year to keep in business

The butchers get nine million dollars a day from us. The thirty-five million women shoppers today will buy from 122,000 butcher shops.

Butchers have a little bit better chance of succeeding than grocery men; fifty percent of butcher men are successful; 25 percent do not last seven years. A butcher must make 24 percent gross profit to live.

The average man, woman, and child of the country eat four pounds of food a day—so you see we are vitally interested in the shops of the country—and particularly in the shops of our own village. We are vitally interested because of the high cost of retailing, which we, the consumers, have to pay.

There can be no question about the advantage of combination or association. What would have happened to the raisin industry of California—or to the prune industry if it wasn't for association? The dairy men of the North, the cotton growers of the South, the apple growers of New York state, where would they have been if it were not for association; in fact the East is, of necessity, following the West in the question of association for their own production. You know, as well as I do, how the Pacific Coast growers have almost flooded the markets of the East to the detriment of Eastern growers, simply because the Westerners have the idea of association and its possibilities worked out to a nicety.

Only recently have the Eastern growers and producers seen fit to consult with Aaron Sapiro to lead them out of the wilderness into the land of promise. Mr. Sapiro, by the way, is the recognized leader of the co-operative marketing movement among farmers.

You know your own business best; you know the possibilities of the town far better than I, but it seems to me as if an association could profitably be formed. Surely nothing is lost by contact with your fellow men and if the letter and spirit of your association be the golden rule, everyone concerned will be benefited.

Now getting down to this organization business. The individual worker really doesn't get very far. It is the organization builder that counts. The man, or men, who work for the furthering of their own firm or their own organization.

Charles Schawb puts it this way, 'We can go further if we take others with us".

You may think that you are in the shoe business or the shirt business or the furniture business, but you are mistaken. After all is said and done, we are all in the same business—the MAN business—no matter what we make or sell. Some of the "big fellows" see that point more clearly than the rest of us do, and multiply their power and profits accordingly.

Arthur Nash of the A. Nash Co. of Cincinnati says: "Today I find myself possessed of an abiding belief that the Golden Rule is the only infallible principle for the operation of any industry. It does not merely solve problems, it eliminates them. I do not know of a single instance where it has been honestly applied without troubles immediately vanishing".

FURNITURE AUCTION

The large building on Commercial street, heretofore known as Young's stable, has been opened by E. A. Thurston and will be known as the "Commercial Storage", which will deal in new and second hand furniture, etc. Saturday, April 7, there will be an all-day auction sale to include not only furniture but horses cows, auto truck, farm equipment and tools. A large advertisement will be found in this paper enumerating some of the goods.

Habit of Catfish.

Some South American catfish have a remarkable way of getting upstream. Being encased in a stiff armor, they cannot jump. So they deliberately leave the water, using their side fins which have sharp spines, like feet; and crawl around the falls, entering the water on the other side.

LAND VALUES LOW

Editor Gazette-Transcript:

After reading you valuable summary of land values in Jackson Square and vicinity, as assessed in 1922, my first impression is that they are generally too low, and probably out of proportion to many residentials lots on side streets.

Personally, I should say that the land occupied by the East Weymouth Savings Bank and the Town Offices is more valuable than the land occupied by Hunt's news stand and the post office, yet the Assessors put a value of 18 cents per square foot on the former and 33 cents on the latter Both should be assessed at 50 cents or more per foot, and both buildings should be doubled in valuation.

Across Broad street is the corner lot of the Garey estate, with a large open church lot on one side, very valuable as a business site, which should also be assessed at 50 cents or more per foot instead of 11 cents.

None of the fine estates on the southerly side of Broad street, between Randall avenue and Fairmount avenue, all high and dry and very desirable, should be assessed for less than 25 cents, yet one is as low as 9 cents and another as high as 17 cents.

The Alden, Walker & Wilde factory is practically surrounded by streets, and 11 cents per foot seems altogether too low.

Recognizing Jackson Square as the business center of East Weymouth, should any of the land between Cottage street and Jackson Square be taxed at less than 50 cents per foot? The Tirrell estate at the junction of Broad street and Commercial street should be worth as much as the Reidy drug store lot, or the Tirrell shoe store lot opposite.

Perhaps all the land in Jackson Square in the vicinity of the Congregational church should be assessed at $1 per foot,—including the Merchant property which is covered with stores, the Tirrell estate, the Sylvester, the Cassasa, the Flint, the Reidy, the Bicknell, the McCarthy and the Weymouth Light & Power Company.

Five cents, as a minimum price, seems low enough for any of the estates in the list published in the Gazette last week, including the Dunbar property, the Spear property, and the car barn of the Eastern Massachusetts street railway company.

If there was a revaluation of the list of estates included in the Gazette last week, along the lines herewith suggested, there would be an increase of about $90,000 in the valuation. A similar revision in other business centers, and in the whole town, would make possible a lower tax rate in 1923, although the appropriations are larger.

Let us have the views of other taxpayers on the valuations, not in the way of criticism, but that justice may be done to all. A. B. C.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

The success of an entirely colored troupe in the musical comedy "Shuffle Along", which will come direct from Chicago where it has been enjoying a run of twenty weeks, since its marvelous success at the Selwyn in Boston last fall, is due to the fact that "Shuffle Along" is the one and only real all-colored show of the year.

Because of its brightness, humor, and bewitching melodies and all around novelties, which the Boston critics declare it possesses "Shuffle Along" promises gladsome diversions during its Arlington theatre engagement of two weeks The book is by Miller and Lyles, and the musical numbers, the best ever written, are by Sissle and Blake, and include the following song hits "Love will find a way", "Honeysuckle Time", "Everything reminds me of you", with many others, make up this scintillating score.

LAND VALUES

The Weston estate which includes nearly four acres is assessed at less than 4 cents.

The Hall lot is valued at less than 8 cents, the same as the Cate lot, while the Baker lot and Hollis lot are each valued a little under 7 cents

The large tract of land known as a part of the Weston estate (507,360 square feet) is now taxed to William Endicott, trustee, and is assessed for less than 2 cents per foot.

The lot of Carrie Virgin is valued at 11 cents, and the lot of Charles Virgin at 7½ cents.

Across Broad street, the Bloom market lot, assessed to Mr. Hobart, is valued at 20 cents, the Salis store lot at a little less than 15 cents; the Rideout lot at 15 cents; the Seeley lot at less than 3 cents, the Sanborn lot at 3 cents, the Spillane lot at 8, and the Cochrane lot at the corner of Common street at 8 cents.

Next week the Gazette-Transcript will print assessed values on Pleasant street from Independence Square to Columbian Square and on to Park street, and then values at Thomas Corner at North Weymouth, to be continued several weeks,.

Taxpayers who think their assessed values too high or too low are invited to write letters for publication in the Gazette.

RHINES CO. WIN

An old-time dispute of two years standing between the Rhines Lumber Co. and the Quincy Lumber Co. was settled March 23. The Quincy players were good sports, but that was far as it went, for when it came to a tight place they were not there. E. I. Loud was the main stay for Rhines Lumber Co. The match was for four points, Rhines Lumber taking the first by four pins, Quincy taking the second by ten pins, leading by six pins for the final string. Then the baloon went up and Rhines Lumber sailed away for the third string and total pinfall.

The summary:

EASTER "REDEMPTION"

A group of soloists of the first eminence should make notable the performance of Gounod's popular oratorio "The Redemption" by the historical Handel and Haydn Society which is to be given in Symphony Hall, Boston, at 3.30 on Easter Sunday afternoon, April 1.

Florence Hinkle will be the soprano and Marion Telva, the contralto. The tenor will be Richard Crooks, the young American singer who, appearing earlier with the Handel and Haydn Society, made a striking impression as one of the finest new singers of the present Boston season. Reinald Werrenrath will be the baritone and Clifton Wood the bass singer.

The four hundred singers of the Handel and Hayden Society will be conducted by Emil Mollenhauer with orchestral forces and organ added in the performance of this imposing score, which has been called the greatest Easter music ever written.

Skillful Workers With Gems.

One of the most interesting features of Manila industrial life is the wonderful skill of its women lapidaries and gem setters, whose tastes and workmanship have far surpassed the powers of the men.
