EUROPEAN WAR—WHO FOR?

I saw a great multitude of strong, beautiful boys—the best that the loving mothers of their country had raised. It was on one side of a wide, level valley that stretched from ranges of hills on either side, like a great table of food spread out before them, which indeed, it was, all growing and ripening with the necessities of human life. On the other side of the valley I saw, also, another great multitude of boys, who were friends to the boys on the opposite side of the valley—hundreds of them. Many of them studied and sang together in the same university. They could each speak in the other's language, and their sisters were the others' sweethearts.

Now, these two great multitudes of boys (the flower of their respective nations) began forming for a great battle, in which this beautiful valley, with its unharvested crops and late peaceful homes are all to be destroyed, and thousands of these boys to be mangled in the machinery of war—and their souls sent into eternity in the excitement of mortal strife, which they must take with them, instead of their enjoying the natural privilege, and a Christian's right to a tranquil and peaceful passing. And I asked their captain "For what is all this? These young men are not mad at each other; these fields are not theirs to devastate. These late peaceful homes, the shelter of toiling men and women. Why, I ask, should these be destroyed, and their innocent tenants be killed, or turned adrift, as if Almighty God were consuming his world with fire?" And in military "machiene" pacity the captain said, "It's for the ruler."

Already the hills on both sides of the valley were studded with forts, breastworks and cannon. The soldiers were equipped with the latest and most rapid working machines for killing human beings; machines that they would spurn to even touch, except for the mandates of their king; for well they knew the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill."

Their king takes them out of useful employment to teach them murder, and the only grim merit of their education under the king is that they learn how to murder by the wholesale and "scientifically." For all this proud accomplishment he lays so heavy a tax on their miserable homes that the very name of "home" has died from the language of Europe, and for the great mass of the people the haunting ghost of fear is always about them, and the specter of starvation stalks only a few weeks or days before them—all the time in the prison-like path in which they are obliged to walk.

'Twas but the other day, in the space of one hour, more than 8000 human lives were needlessly and wickedly sacrificed to this fetish of the divine right of kings. What started this war in Europe, which has paralyzed the nations of the world? Absolutely nothing but the ambition and greed of kings. If the people are to stay and make the earth a fit place on which to live, the craft of kings must go.

PARKS AND FOUNTAINS

A public park and water fountain are needed in Glendale, and in addition to these, a rest-room is also needed. Strangers are arriving in our city every day. Some come expecting to remain, some come on business, and others come as sight-seers. It makes no difference for what purpose these people come, they should be treated with great courtesy.

Beginning about November 1, an information bureau should be established in connection with rest-rooms, where strangers might be given helpful information. Such a bureau should be maintained by the citizens in general. It is time for us to become awake to the fact that Glendale will have many tourist visitors within the next few months, and it is in place for us to see the weeds are cleared from the vacant lots, that drinking fountains are installed and rest-rooms are established.

NEVER GROW OLD

But there are ways of not letting the calendar know how old we are. The secret of perennial youth seems to have been whispered to a few fortunate souls. We do not think of them as growing old, for their hearts are always young within them and the spirit of play alive.—Pomona Review.

CALIFORNIA PRODUCING STATE

California in fifty years has been converted from one of the great stock states of the union, producing hundreds of thousands of cattle and sheep and millions of pounds of wool, first into one of the greatest cereal-producing states, producing hundreds of cargoes of wheat and barley for Europe, one county turning out in one crop 14,000 carloads of wheat, finally into the great fruit-producing section of the world.

The San Fernando valley, a wheat field a few years ago, is being rapidly developed into an orchard section, where two-year-old peach trees are yielding two boxes of fruit apiece and where one company is planting 200,000 deciduous fruit trees in one little section of the valley. In the production of many varieties of fruit, California has a monopoly on the markets of the world and in others a monopoly of the American continent. Almonds come in this last category, California and Southern Spain being the only competitors for the markets of the world. Almonds are uncertain bearers, but when the crop is short the prices are high. The California Almond Growers' Exchange says of the crop of this year that it will be about one-third of normal, say 1000 tons, but they will bring $500,000. The cheapest are selling at 11 cents wholesale and the best at 18 1/2 cents. Southern California produces nearly all the English walnuts marketed on the American continent, amounting last year to a crop of 9500 tons, which sold at an average price of 14 cents a pound, bringing $2,500,000. The crop of the present year is estimated at $3,000,000. The deciduous fruit crop for the whole of Southern California for this year is estimated to produce an income of $15,000,000.

CHARM IN CALIFORNIA NOMENCLATURE

Charles Edward Russell comments in Harper's Weekly on a certain base imitateness in Americans, maintaining that our geographical nomenclature, as well as our manners, fashions and architecture, are slavish copies of prototypes across the water. Cocktails, skyscrapers, weather and sleeping cars are almost the only evidences of originality he is willing to allow us. He reminds us, to our sorrow, that we call our cities Canton, Troy, Oxford, Manchester, and so forth, while the old historic names die out of men's speech. But California need not blush. She has her faults, but in the names the traveler meets most frequently as he journeys up and down the timetable she has cherished the genius of her history. Consider the lingering beauty of Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, San Bernardino, San Joaquin, Mojave, Tulare, and, again, the ring of Siskiyou and Tehama. There is charm in Los Angeles, rolled not too trippingly over the tongue. And what great city on the face of the earth is blessed with a name more euphonious, more peculiarly her own, than San Francisco? California should thank poets, were her moon and her stars and her brown hills and oaks, and her magic days and nights set aside altogether, by the influence of her names alone.

Theoretically, Europe holds to the principle that right makes might. But practically, it is adhering to the primitive rule that might makes right.
