THE

ANNALS OF ALBANY, New York

BY JOEL MUNSELL.

VOL. X.

ALBANY:
MUNSELL & ROWLAND, PRINTERS.
1859.

CONCLUDING AND GENERAL ADDRESS TO THE READER.

Agreeably to the announcement made in the last volume, this work is now brought to a close. Although ten volumes have been published, they are very far from containing all that has been written, not to mention what remains unwritten, on the opkomst, aanwas en geschiedenis—the origin, progress, and history, of Albany.

A peculiar and unique interest attaches to Albany, as the eldest born of existing settlements in the original United States: and, during the entire two and a half centuries that have elapsed since her origin, she has not ceased to be regarded as a place of public consideration and importance. In the Colonial times, Albany was the great entrepôt of the Indian trade. Here the lordly Iroquois met their white brethren in council; and treaties were entered into, and leagues were formed. And here, under the leadership of Franklin, the assembled delegates of the different colonies first learned to exercise the confederated power that, some thirty years later, achieved their independence of all foreign rule. And, on the surrounding hills, or covering the lowlands by the river side, here were gathered and marshaled those brilliant hosts, that marched forth to contest, with various fortune but final success, the French supremacy in America. And, as the patriotic statesmen of the Colonies had here essayed their nascent powers, so here did the youthful Provincial chivalry first learn to emulate the strict discipline and trained courage of their veteran companions in arms, the gallant soldiers of England. And years after, when marching to the national air they here first appropriated as their own, they met their former allies on the battle field, they showed that the lessons thus commenced had not been learned in vain. In truth, the history of Colonial Albany is filled with brilliant scenes and soul-stirring memories. Nor is the Albany of the Revolution deficient in similar, and, for us, prouder pictures. When to Albany the army of Burgoyne was led captive, from the glorious field of Saratoga, the first great success of the war was achieved ; and the happy event of the struggle, though distant, became assured. The writer regrets that he has only been able to indicate scenes, that would afford the fullest scope to the life-giving pencil of the historian. And, warned by his limited space, he must turn to a homelier theme—yet one that is not wanting in deep interest to many of his readers.

Earlier travelers have presented the inhabitants of Albany in a light far from flattering ; and Irving's gracefully humorous pen has scattered far and wide, ridiculous pictures of the race that long constituted the great bulk of the population. The Dutch require no defense at our hands. If Irving's amusing sallies have somewhat lowered the popular appreciation of the Dutch character, another American of English blood has more than atoned for the wrong. The brightest chaplet woven in honor of Holland and her people, has, in our day, been laid upon the altar of Fame by the New Englander, MOTLEY.

As regards the faults of the early inhabitants of Albany, we may well pause, when we witness the vices that, even in this enlightened day, seem inseparable from the prosecution of the Indian trade; and, learning humility from the sight, we can not fail to extend the broad mantle of charity over the misdeeds of the rude burgers of another age. But, if need be, there are other arguments to be urged in extenuation of the unpolished manners and other short-comings of our predecessors. Lying on the very verge of civilization, for a long time in her history, trade and self-defence were the paramount objects of solicitude with the people of Albany. It could hardly be expected that such an outpost would become eminent for luxury and refinement, while surrounded by innumerable perils. The town that was "really the frontier of all North America" (p. 107), could not neglect the trade to which it owed its origin, or the vigilance necessary to its existence, in order to indulge in the sophisticated pursuits of a community surrounded by all the blandishments of peace, and ease, and plenty. And finally, when the danger, to which they had become roughly inured, was removed, it could not reasonably be anticipated that these sturdy men would, at once, become shining examples of refinement — that wealth in beaver skins would at once give place to wealth in letters.

But years have passed since those "troubulous times;" and it is believed that during the interval the progress of Albany, in every thing that elevates and adorns civilized life, has been commensurate with that of her neighbors. Literature, science, and the arts have many votaries in our midst; and recent travelers, as well as the assembled scientific magnates of the Union, have not failed to bear testimony to the elegant, refined, and generous hospitality, of the citizens of Albany.

It gives the editor much pleasure that he is able to close this sketch by an extract from the Illustrated London News of Jan. 15, 1859, fully sustaining the opinion above expressed. The extract is from the "Transatlantic Sketches," addressed to the News by its editor, the distinguished poet and cultivated gentleman, Dr. CHARLES MACKAY, during a recent tour through the United States.

"Travelling thus on the left bank of the river for upwards of one hundred miles, I arrived at Albany, and betook myself to Congress Hall, in the upper part of the city. This hotel was recommended to me as an establishment much frequented by members of the two houses of the legislature, who here in the capital of the "Empire State," undertake the local government of a commonwealth almost as large as England, and nearly doubly as populous as Scotland. I had no reason to repent my choice, and during a residence of ten days was enabled to see the Senators in déshabillé, and to learn something of the mode and the agencies by which public and private bills are brought into and carried through parliament in an ultra democracy. * * * * * Albany — beautifully situated on ground rising steeply from the banks of the Hudson — contains about fifty thousand inhabitants, and is one of the most attractive, cleanly, well-ordered, and elegant cities of America. Though overshadowed by the commercial greatness of New York, which in this respect it can never hope to rival, it is, next to Washington, the greatest focus of political life within the limits of the confederacy. Between the commercial and the political capital of this great state (which it has recently been proposed to call Ontario instead of New York), there is a great contrast. New York city is busy, unscrupulous, energetic, ill-governed, full of rowdyism, and the most violent manifestations of mob-law and mob-caprice; but Albany is staid, decent, and orderly. The tone of society is quiet and aristocratic; and the whole appearance of the place gives the traveller an idea of wealth and refinement. Further acquaintance only tends to confirm the impression. State street — at the top of which, in the Park, a beautiful open space, adorned with noble elms and maples, stand the Capitol and other principal public buildings — rises steeply from the water's edge to the crown of the hill. It is a broad and handsome thoroughfare, and at various points commands a picturesque view over the Hudson to the lofty green hills beyond. Albany is a place of considerable trade and manufacture. It produces very excellent cabinet-work of all kinds, and is particularly celebrated for its stoves, grates, and ornamental iron-work. It has two, if not three daily newspapers, and a flourishing literary and scientific institution. The Roman Catholic Cathedral is internally one of the largest and most magnificent ecclesiastical edifices in America. Here high mass is sometimes performed with a splendor and completeness, orchestral and vocal, not to be excelled even in Paris or Vienna, and to which London, as far as I know, can make no pretensions. Albany is the proposed site of what promises to be the noblest observatory in America, to the foundation of which the public spirit of a private citizen (if the term be applicable to a lady) has contributed the sum of 80,000 dollars."

The editor will not apologize for the length of this extract, for he feels that it can not but prove both interesting and agreeable to his readers. He must, however, beg that they will bear him company a little longer, while he turns aside to speak of the work completed with the present volume.

He has been told by friends, who sympathize with the feelings that prompted the undertaking, that it is due, as well to his readers as to himself, that he should give a sketch of the origin and progress of the work, and of the difficulties that have made it incumbent on him to bring it to a close, while so rich a store of materials for the history of Albany yet remains unpublished to the world. Guided by the judgment of these — perhaps too partial — friends, he will conclude this notice by giving a concise bibliographical account of the Annals of Albany. The very nature of the subject requiring that he should speak of himself — of his trials, troubles and disappointments — he trusts that his readers, with a generous indulgence, will pardon the seeming egotism with which he confides to them the story of his personal connection with the work.

This work was begun as an annual almanac in the year 1849. It was soon evident that its more costly bulk, and the limited circle of patrons to whom its purely local character commended it, would forbid the hope of its competing with the various general almanacs, scattered cheaply over the land. But the editor still believed that a work of more permanent character, addressed to the retrospective curiosity — the historic instincts — of his fellow-citizens, would meet with, at least, an adequate support. New material was therefore added to that already collected, and, in 1850, the first volume of the Annals appeared. The anticipations of the editor and publisher were not realized; but being somewhat deeply imbued with the antiquarian spirit, and still hopeful that a responsive feeling might be awakened by his very efforts, he continued his labors; and volume after volume was produced. At length it became but too evident that such hopes were illusory and vain. It will surprise many of his readers to learn that the whole body of his patrons, at home and abroad, numbered but little more than one hundred. And a very limited acquaintance with the book trade will be sufficient to assure them that one hundred dollars will fall far short of the simple cost of the engravings, paper, printing, and binding—even of a book so little pretentious to typographical luxuriousness as is the one they are now perusing. His not too plethoric purse admonished the editor that he must bring his labors to a close. And it only became a question with him how to round off the series in a manner that would not disappoint the kind friends who, at the outset, bidding him God speed, had ever since welcomed his annual offerings. He would not wish to leave a fragmentary and altogether incomplete work upon their hands: and he has continued the series until now that he can close it without dishonor. This tenth volume completes the Notes from the Newspapers, to the year 1847, when the annual chronicle of the work commenced. And having thus presented a continuous chronology of the principal events, as found in the newspapers, for the past eighty-eight years (from 1771 to 1859), the editor trusts that he may be permitted to retire from his labors, with the friendly sympathy and kind adieus of those who have accompanied him on his way.

He regrets that the transcripts from the City Records must remain incomplete, terminating as they do, with the year 1753. They were begun in the second volume with the year 1686, when the charter was received from Gov. Dongan, and have been published nearly entire, embracing a period of almost seventy years. These records are preserved in the Chamberlain's office, but are not wholly safe from the danger of loss, and having no indexes, they are as a sealed book to those who wish to consult them. The portions yet unpublished comprise the periods of the old French war, and of the Revolution; and they abound with valuable and most interesting historical matter. Let us hope that some future board of the Common Council will undertake the task—which proved too great for the unaided means of the writer — of presenting to the world a complete edition of the City Records of Albany.

Should these volumes at any future time, fall into the hands of a stranger, the editor and publisher trusts that the statement here given will account for and excuse such imperfections as may exist. Had his enterprise received a more liberal support, it would have delighted him to secure to the work a higher grade of literary labor, to embellish it with more expensive illustrations, and to issue it to his patrons, a specimen of sumptuous typography. But it was not to be. As strict economy required, the literary labor devolved almost wholly upon himself.

But he will not dwell upon the hours stolen from that repose rendered necessary by the toilsome avocations of the day, and devoted to turning over the dusty files of old newspapers, or to the deciphering of the crabbed writings of a past generation. He will not speak of days of rest passed among the tombs, and employed in copying the brief mementos of those sleeping their last sleep beneath. Nor will he complain of these tasks, for they have, indeed, been labors of love.

Perhaps, in after years, when his own form has long lain mouldering in the dust, some kindred spirits will pleasantly recall his memory, and thank him for these memorials of the past he has helped to rescue from oblivion. In dreams like these the antiquary finds his cherished, though unsubstantial recompense.

1732. August 12. The following letter was sent to his Excellency:

We the Mayor, Recorder and Commonality of the city of Albany haveing heard of your Excellencies safe arrivell do with the greatest alacrity congratulate the same, and hope that your Ex'ly may be received in the Publick Station in which his sacred Majestie has been pleased to place you as Chief of this Government with tranquility and unanimity, which we hope may be attended with health and happiness is the sincere wishes of who are with a perfect Difference due Regard and Esteem,

Your Ex'ly most Obedient humble Servants. Was signed as above.

1732, August 16. Sould unto Petrus Douw the use of half of the Creek by which his lott in the first ward is bound nigh the Dutch church, for him, his heirs and assigns for ever, that is to say not lower than six foot above low water mark to build upon, but to leave a free passage for the course of the water and nor to stop up the same, in consideration of which he is to pay the sum of two pounds current money of the Colony of New York.

Albany, the 25th Aug^t 1732.

May it please your Ex'ly,

We think it our duty to acquaint your Ex'ly of a Surprizeing accident that happend in his Majesty's Fort here on Tuesday the 22d Instant, between the hours of Eight and nine of the Clock at night. That by a Train of Powder or some other Villainous means some of the Bumbs and a great many of the Granados in the Store were sett fire to which went off in such a Sudden and Surprizeing manner that put this city in a great Consternation for that Time; but upon Immediate Enquiry into this affair by us, the Mayor, Recorder and Aldermen of this city; It appeared that a Negro man belonging to Captin Henry Holland was found Lying close to the Powder house (when this accident happened) Very much burnt in his face and other Parts of his body, and who is strongly supposed to have committed the aforesaid Villainy, we have strictly Examined into this affair but there is as yet no Positive proof against the Negro; the little Hutt called the Magazine was consumed with what Powder there was in it by this Villainous Action.

Sir: We Live here in a Country where we are Daily in Dread of our Neighbouring Enemies the French at Canada and what is worse are in no posture of Defence either in city or county to receive them in case they attacked us, and while his Majesty ever since the first Establishment of his Subjects here has been Graciously pleased to give us such a number of Soldiers under pay as he in his great wisdom thought sufficient for the better Preservation of our lives and Fortunes, and it is too apparently known that upon Inspection into the Garrison it will seldom be found that there is above twenty or five and twenty men and sometimes not so many and those Invalid old men fitt rather to be put in an Hospitall then to Mount a Guard while the lusty young men are tolerated to work abroad in the Country, which we think is not only an abuse done to his Majesties most Gracious Intentions but a hardship on us and the rest of his Subjects here.

We must allow that Captain Holland has been an officer sufficiently qualified to Command this Garrison till within these few last years he (by the Providence of Almighty God), is renderd incapable to Command the same, and it is with much concern for the Publick Good as well as for him that we are obliged to express it.

Who are, may it Please your Ex'ly, with much Esteem and respect

Your Ex'ly most ob't & most humble Serv'ts.

Was signed by the Mayor, Recorder and Aldermen alone.

1732, Sept. 2. Resolved to take this Petition into consideration.

1733, Sept. 6. Resolved by this Board to make an Address to his Ex'cy William Cosby, Esqr. &c. which is as follows:

To his Excellency William Cosby Esqr. Cap^t General and Gov'r in Chief of the provinces of New York, Newjersey and Territories thereon depending, in America and Vice Admiral of the same, and Collo. in his Majesties Army, &c., The humble Address of the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen and Commonalty of the city of Albany:

May it please your Excellency,

We his Majesties duteful Subjects, the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen and Comonalty of the city of Albany, do with great Joy humbly take leave to congratulate your Excellency on your safe arrival in this part of your Government and heartily wish your Excellency may meet with success and satisfaction in the ensuing Treaty with the Six Nations of Indians, Subjects to the King of Great Britain

As we are seated on the frontiers of this Province and have very dangerous neighbors to the northward (the french of Canada) who have made encroachments on us by posting a Garrison at the Crown point on the south end of Corlaers Lake which we conceive will be of very dangerous consequence, in case of a Rupture between the Crown of Great Britain and that of france. Wherefore we humbly beg leave to mention to your Excellency the present ruinous and defenceless condition of his Maje'es ffort here, tho' shall desist to enlarge on the particulars since your Ex'cy has been pleased to view the same, and thereby can better judge than we are able to inform.

We therefore humbly desire your Ex'cy will be pleased to lay the deplorable and defenceless condition of these fronteers before the Gen'll Assembly of this province at their next meeting to recomend it to their care and consideration that provision may be made for building a new ffort here in such manner as your Excellency, the Council and Gen'll Assembly shall judge most convenient for the defence of his Majesties frontier.

We are may it please your Ex'cy, with much esteem and respect, your Ex'cys most ob't humble ser'ts.

The following order was directed to Bar^t Bratt, treasurer, by order of this Board:

Sir: please pay to Mr. Jacob Stenhouse or order ten shillings and this shall be your warrant.

1734, May 13 [sic]. Resolved to send the following Petition to the General Assembly:

To the Honourable the Representatives of the Province of New York, in General Assembly convened. The humble Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the city of Albany most humbly sheweth:

That whereas the Wall now begun to be built around the city will be a work of some years and great expence, and that in the mean time we may be provided against any sudden surprize that may happen in case of a rupture betwixt the Crowns of Great Britain and France, the inhabitants of this city are generally very much inclined to have the same fortified with Stockadoes, and in case that by the stubbornness of some ill designing people it may not be carried on so regularly and speedily as it ought to be, your Petitioners humbly pray that an act of General Assembly may be passed to enable the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen and Comonalty of the said city to oblige the assessors to meet at such time and place as they the s^d mayor, recorder, aldermen and comonalty, or the major part of them shall think meet to assess and rate all the inhabitants, freeholders, residents and sojourners of the s^d city to furnish and sett up Stockadoes in an equal and due proportion according to their abilities, and that a fine may be imposed upon those who shall be remiss or negligent in complying with the directions of said act; and that the mayor, recorder and aldermen, or the major part of them may be impowered by said act to order and give directions how, where and in what manner the same Stockadoes shall be set up.

And whereas besides the stockadoes there will be wanted other materials for building batteries, making gates in their proper places and carriages for the great Guns which are all out of order, your Petitioners humbly pray that the sum of one hundred and fifty pound may be taxed on the county to help to enable the defraying of the charges of the same.

And whereas the scituation of this city along the water side is very irregular and inconvenient for building, and as it is said pretensions are made on some lotts lying there, tho by our most diligent enquiry can find no body to show any title to the same, your Petitioners therefore humbly pray that an act may be passed to oblige those persons to make their claim w^tin three months after the publication of s^d act and dock out the same w^tin three years, or that your Pet^rs may be the better enabled to fortifie the same, further humbly pray that the right may be confirmed to this corporation who will oblige themselves to do it in that time.

Hoping your Honours will be pleased to take the premises into your consideration and to pass an act or acts for the same, your Petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray, &c.

This board allows John Van Alstyn and Ryckart Hilton each forty shillings for work done to the two new block houses by Jesse Dffreests, Van Alstyne not to receive his forty shillings till he puts a good and sufficient Roof on the new block house by the water side. An order was drawn on the treasurer to pay Jan Van Alstyn forty pounds pursuant to an order of the 18th December last which he had not received because he had not given bond according to the directions of the said order.

1734, June 24. Resolved to sell at publick Vendue this day 400 Skipple of wheat to the highest bidder, notice being given by publick advertisement of said sale three days agoe, to be paid in ready on the delivery, which is to be this week:

Ditto	-	50 Do	2:9	-	6:17:6
Ditto	-	100 Do	2:9	-	13:15:0
Barent Bratt,	200 Do	2:9	-	-	27:10:0

Amount is fifty-five pounds, £55: 0:0

This board this day agreed with Gerrit Lansigh and Anthony Bratt to sett up 400 Stockadoes at 9d. a piece, beginning at the Block House on the Reuse Bergh and so on as they shall be directed, with Tennons of good dry oak wood of one and a half inch thick, to be drove in five inches, the Stockadoes to be 13 foot long, three foot in the ground, to have loop holes at proper distances.

To allow them six shillings for furnishing timber for the Tenons. No Stockadoes to be put up but what will work one foot at least of good fresh wood.

Mattys flensburgh has undertake to sett up 300 Stockadoes in the same manner and on the same conditions as the above 400 to begin by the Blockhouse on the Gallows Hill, to be allowed 4:6 for Tenons.

1734, July 20. The following Letter was writt and sent to Mr. Johannis Cuyler:

Sir: The Mayor, Aldermen and Comonalty being intended to have a friendly conversation w^t you concerning the ground in dispute betwixt the city and you, desire to meet w^t you at the City hall on tuesday next at three o'clock in the afternoon, and if your conveniency will not then allow, desire you may appoint another day.

This Board this day agreed w^t Mattys Flensburgh to sett up 300 Stockadoes more in the same manner and on the same conditions as those agreed for the 24th June last.

1734, August 17. Symon Danielse presented a petition to this Board praying that they would dispose of a certain tract or piece of wood land lying contiguous to him and belonging to this city, for which he would pay a reasonable consideration. The petition was in the words following, viz:

To the worshipful Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen and Comonalty of the city of Albany in Comon Council convened, the humble Petition of Symon Danielse sheweth,

That whereas there is a certain tract or piece of pine wood land belonging to the city of Albany, lying at Schaahkook having to the north Schaahkooks Road, to the east part of your Petitioners land and part the hills, which hills adjoins to the afores^d land and stretches southward to where your Petitioners Mill stands and ten yards over the creek on which said mill stands and which said land lyes very contiguous to your Petitioner.

Therefore prays that your worships will be pleased to dispose of the same to your Petitioner who is willing to pay a reasonable consideration for the same, which if your worships be pleased to grant, your worships Petitioner as in duty bound shall ever pray, &c.

This Board having taken the above Petition into consideration Resolve that the Petitioner shall have the s^d certain tract or piece of pine wood land as hereinafter bounded, viz: To the north and west Schaahkooks Road as it now runs, to the east part by his land and part by the hills, which hills joins to the s^d land and stretches southward along said hills to the creek where his Griss Mill now stands and so along the north side of the creek westerly till it comes to Hudson's River, for the sum of sixty pounds, of which thirty pound to be paid the first day of October now next ensuing by the delivery of the deed, and the other thirty pound on or before the first day of January 173⁵/₆, for which he is to give Bond.

Resolved that the mayor in behalf of the comonalty execute said deed and cause the city seal to be thereunto affixed.

Jeremiah Pamerton this day paid his bond of fifteen pound due to the city, which was cancelled by order of this Board.

1734, August 24. Resolved by this Board to write a Letter to David Verplank which was in the following words, viz:

Sir: The Mayor, Aldermen and Comonalty desire that you will be pleased to come up and indeavour to agree w^t them to give libertye to sett the Stockadoes for fortifying the city over your lott where the fence now stands. If you cannot conveniently come up, please to signifie your consent thereto by a letter under your hand, else the mayor, &c. will be obliged to issue out a sumons to appraise the value of s^d ground according to the directions of the act of Assembly made for that purpose. By order of the Mayor, Aldermen and Comonalty.

To Mr. David Verplank. JA. STEVENSON, D Clerk.

Resolved by this Board that the Mayor in the name of the Comonalty shall execute to Benjamin Bratt at the desire of Albert Ryckman, a deed for a lott of ground lying on the Plain, and sold by the mayor, aldermen and comonalty the first day of December, 1686, as by the minutes of that day may appear. It is lott No. 27, having to the west the lott late of Philip Dffreest, to the east the lane, to the north the lott of Jacob Bogaert dec^d, and to the south the lott belonging to the heirs of Jan Janse Bleecker, as the same is in fence.

This Board agreed w^t Evert Wendell and Richard Williams, Esqr's, Atty's at Law, to give their opinions in writing under their hand signed by them, whether or not the Corporation can legally grant a deed to Peter Brower for the land he purchased of the Indians lying at Tienenderogue, which is part of the land contained in the Indian deed which John Depeyster, Esq'r, late mayor of this city, had in his custody w^t other writings and which he says is destroyed for which their advice so given under hand as af^d, this Board is to pay each of them twenty shillings.

1734, Nov. 29. Evert Wendell and Richard Williams Esqrs., Attorneys at Law, gave in their opinion in writing under their hands and seals concerning Peter Brower's deed, according to their agreement last Comon Council which was in the words following. viz:

The Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the city of Albany having desired our opinion concerning a Tract of land comprehended within the limitts and boundaries of one thousand acres of land scituate at Tiennenoroge granted by his city charter to the mayor, aldermen and comonalty of the city of Albany of which tract of land one Peter Brower having made a purchase from the Indian owners and now petition the s^d mayor, aldermen and comonalty that they will confirm his said purchase there if the s^d mayor, aldermen, &c., can comply with said petition.

Upon perusal of the s^d Charter we find a Lycence to purchase and a Grant in fee simple for one thousand acres of low or meadow land at Tiennonderoge to the mayor, aldermen, &c. af^d for part of which said Peter Brower hath obtained an Indian purchase for the term of nine hundred and ninety-nine years.

We are therefore humbly of opinion and do advise the said mayor, aldermen and comonalty upon the said Peter Brower's assigning over the Indian deed they may grant and confirm to said Peter the said tract of land for the term specified in his said Indian deed.

We remain with great Respect,
Your very humble Servants.

EVERT WENDELL,

Albany, November 27th, 1734. RICH'D WILLIAMS.

This day Peter Brower appeared in Comon Council and produced an Indian Lease for a certain tract or parcel of land, scituate, lying and being about one English mile above Fort Hunter on the south side of the Mohawk River, beginning by a certain creek called Ochrachqua or Aries creek, from thence down along the said river to the said small creek or run of water, being about 900 yards, from thence with a southerly line into the woods about an English mile, from thence with a westerly line to the before mentioned Aries creek and from thence along the s^d creek to the place where it first begun, where the s^d Aries creek runs into the river, being about ten or eleven morgan low or meadow land, be it more or less, together w^t all and singular the appurtenances thereunto belonging or in any ways appertaining, for the term of 999 years, which said lease he the said Peter Brower had obtained on the 7th day of July 1730, from David, Gideon, Jacob, Canastadie, Jacomyn and Josina, Sachems of the Mohawk Castle, duly executed under their hands and seals, which said Lease he hath this present day assigned and sett over to this Corporation for the consideration of five shillings; that is to say, such part of the s^d lease as is hereafter mentioned, viz: All that certain tract or parcel of low or meadow land, scituate, lying or being about an English mile above the ffort Hunter at the south side of the Mohawks River, beginning by a certain creek comonly called Ochrachqua or Aries creek, from thence down along the Mohawk River to the second small creek or run of water, being ab^t 900 yards, from thence w^t a southerly line to the foot of the hill, from thence along the foot of said hill w^t a westerly line to the af^l Aries creek, and from thence along s^d creek to the place where first begun. Which said tract of low or meadow land is part of the lands granted to the mayor, aldermen and comonalty of the city of Albany by their Charter.

This Board agreed wth Richard Williams Esq., Att: at Law, to give them his opinion in writing under his hand whether or not they can have an action ag^t John De Peyster, late mayor of this city, for giving over the Indian deed for the land at Tienenderogue to the Gov^r, which deed is destroyed.

1734. Dec. 6. Peter Brower having made application to this Board to have a lease from the mayor, aldermen, and comonalty for the lowland contained in the Indian lease which he made over to them at their last Comon Council as by the minutes of that day may appear, it is therefore Resolved by this Board to give a lease unto the said Peter Brower for the term of 999 years for the land hereafter mentioned, viz: To begin at a certain creek comonly called Ochraqua or Aries creek, from thence down along Mohawks River to the second small creek or run of water, being ab^t 900 yards, from thence with a southerly line to the foot of the hill. from thence along the foot of the hill, till with a north line 36 degrees east, you come to the mouth of the said Aries creek where first begun, containing about six morgans be it more or less. In consideration whereof the said Peter Brower is to pay to this Corporation the sum of six pounds and two skipple of good merchantable Winter wheat yearly, First payment to begin the first day of February 173^s/₉, and ever after on the first day of February in course, for each morgan contained wⁱⁿ s^d boundaries, and that the mayor in behalf of the Comonalty shall execute a deed for the same and cause the seal of the city to be thereunto affixed.

It being put to a vote whether the lott of ground in dispute between this Corporation and Johannis Cuyler, should be agreed for or not carried by a majority to be agreed.

Being again put to the vote for how much they should agree, carr^d by a majority that the said Johan's Cuyler should pay to the corporation ten pounds for their claim, which Cornelis Cuyler agreed to for his father.

Then it was Resolved by this Board to release to the said Johan's Cuyler for the sum of ten pounds to be paid on delivery of the deed, the said lott of ground which lyes in the 2d ward of the said city, bounded on the east by the highway or lane, on the south by the now dwelling lott of the s^d Johan's Cuyler, on the west to the lotts of the said Johannes Cuyler and Johan's Beeckman, and on the north the street that runs by the fronts of the houses of Schieboleth Bogardus, Joh's De Garmoy and others containing in breadth on the east side five rodd and seven foot, on the west side five rodd, in length on the south side nine rodd and two foot and on the north side eight rodd and six foot, all Rynland measure. And that the mayor in behalf of the comonalty execute a deed for the same and cause the seal of the city to be thereunto affixed.

173 $\frac{1}{2}$, February 18. This board orders Barent Bratt, treasurer, to sell 300 skipple of the wheat now in store, for ready money, at least 3s. per skipple, and as much more as he can gett; but if any of the city creditors buys to discount for so much as is owing to them.

The following Letter was writt to Lewis and Peter Fiele, sign'd by the present members.

Gentlemen: According to your request have laid before the Comon Council your grievance threatened by the Indians, and it is resolved by this board, that whenever those Indians who make pretensions on Lewis's creek return from their hunting, you would desire them to come here, and if their pretensions are good we shall make them satisfaction. We are Gentlemen.

Order'd Barent Bratt to pay to Jacob Ten Eyck, 7s. To give Johan's Seger 6 sk. wheat and make him debtor on acc^{tt} his salary for same.

Ordered by this board that Barent Bratt, city treasurer, make Dirck Ten Broeck, Peter Fiele and Hugo Fiele, Dr. for £5 pr annum for the rent of the saw mill on Lewis's creek in room of Johannes Ouderkerk.

Whereas the well in the Joncker street is out of repair, it is ordered by this board that the mayor lay out a sum not exceeding thirty shillings towards the repair of said well.

173 $\frac{4}{5}$, March 4. This day Leendert v Veghten appeared before this board and purchased a certain piece or parcel of ground, scituate, lying and being on the south side of Schaahkook creek, beginning at a certain creek or hill called the fountain Creek or killetie where it empties itself into the said Schaahkook creek and so down along the said Schaahkooks creek as it runs about an English mile to a small hill to the southward of said land, from said small hill to the place where first begun, containing in the whole with low and upland fifteen morgan, to him the said Leendert v Veghten and the heirs of his body, and failing of the heirs of his body to his brother Dirck v Veghten, his heirs and assigns for ever, for which he is to pay fourteen pounds current money of the province of New York, on the delivery of the deed, which is to be perfected on Thursday next, and also the yearly rent of eight skipple good merchantable winter wheat yearly in the month of February, the first payment to begin in the month of February 163 $\frac{6}{7}$ [sic].

Resolved by this board that indentures be drawn accordingly, and that the mayor in behalf of the mayor, aldermen and comonalty execute the same and cause the city seal to be thereunto affixed and the same to be entered upon the publick records.

Harme Van Veghten on behalf of his father, Dirck v Veghten laid the following Petition before this Board:

To the worshipful mayor, recorder, aldermen and comonalty of the city of Albany. The Petition of Dirck v Veghten humbly sheweth,

That whereas there is a certain piece of unimproved lands belonging to the corporation of the city of Albany at Schaahkook, and lyes contiguous and adjoining to the westward of your petitioner's lands, containing about two or three morgans, and whereas the same is very conv^t for your worships petitioner, and would be of great prejudice to him that any other should purchase it, your worships petitioner humbly prays that you will be pleased to dispose of the same to him for a reasonable price and under such conditions as your worships think meet, and your worships petitioner as in duty bound shall ever pray.

1735, April 10. Resolved that Johannis Seger shall have the use of two morgans of land for twenty-five years, lying on the north side of the Road that goes up the Gallows hill and leads into the woods, and on the south side of the Rutten kill, for which he is to pay yearly two good fowls in the month of February.

Sold to Johannis Dewandelaer three morgans of Land lying at Schaahkook, being on the west of Tamheneck's creek under the hill where the comon road runs over, for which he is to pay £10 upon the delivery of the deed and the yearly rent of three skipple good Winter wheat in the months of January or February yearly, the first payment of the afores^d yearly Rent to begin in the months of January or February 173^s. Resolved that Indentures be drawn accordingly, and that the mayor in behalf of the mayor, aldermen and comonalty execute the same and cause the city seal to be thereunto affixed and these presents to be entered in the publick Records.

1735, April 12. Resolved by this Board to draw a Warrant on the Treasurer to pay Jan van Alstyn forty shillings which is in full for finishing the block house.

Resolved by this Board to imploy Rich^d Williams, Esq. attorney at law forthwith to sue Daniel & Jochim Kettelhuyn on breach of coven^t for what they are in arrear to the city.

Resolved likewise to sue Marritie Winne in the same action for what she is in arrear if she does not come and agree by this day fortnight.

1735, April 19. This day Marritie Winne appeared before this Board and it is found by inspecting the treasurer's book that she is in arrear 154 Sk: wheat to this corporation, and we taking her circumstances into consideration abate her 50 Sk, and that she enter into bond for 50 Sk. more in the time of one month to be paid in the months of January or February next, but the other 54 Sk. she must pay on or before the first day of November next. But if she neglect to give bond w^tin the time limited that then she shall be lyable for the whole 154 Sk:

1735, June 28. Daniel Hewson presented a Petition to this Board praying liberty to purchase a lott of ground on the south side of Abraham Vosburgh on the Gallows hill, for which he was willing to pay a reasonable price.

Resolved by this Board to sell said Hewson a lott of ground according to the Petitioner's prayer, to contain in length from east to west twelve rodd, and in breadth from north to south forty foot, on the same course w^t s^d Vosburgh, and bounded by him on the north and on the south by a lott this day sold to Robert Flint, for which he agrees to pay £15 at two equal payments and three shillings per annum; first paym^t to be paid the first day of May next, and the other half the first day of May 1737. Writings to be executed at the first paym^t. Resolved that the mayor shall then in behalf of the mayor, aldermen and comonalty execute a deed for the same and cause the city seal to be thereunto affixed.

Robert Flint presented a Petition to this Board praying liberty to purchase a lott of ground to the southward of the lott ground above sold to Daniel Hewson, on the same course and to contain the same length of twelve rodd from east to west, and in breadth from north to south forty foot, for which he agrees to pay £15: at the same payments as Hewson and the same yearly rent of three shillings per annum. Resolved that the mayor shall execute a deed for the same and cause the city seal to be thereunto affixed.

Resolved by this Board to pay Peter Quackenboss thirty shillings in satisfaction of the loss he sustained by reason of the stones for building the city Wall were laid on his ground, for which a Warr^{tt} is order^d to be drawn on the city Treasurer.

This day a Warrant was drawn on the Treasurer to pay Johan's Ostrande thirty shillings for laying up the ground along the foot of the city Wall.

Drawn also a Warr^t on the Treasurer to pay to Rich^d Williams three pounds for fees, viz: In the action, The Corporation v. John Depeyster. Ditto v. Jochim Bradt and Ditto on acco^{tt} of Peter Brower.

Drawn a Warr^t to pay Evert Wendell £1: on acco^{tt} of said Peter Brower.

Drawn a Warr^{tt} to pay Dirck Tenbroeck nine shillings for cleaning his lott of ground where the stones lay for building the city Wall.

Drawn a Warr^{tt} to pay James Stevenson five shillings for clerk's fees, The Corporation v. Jochim Bratt.

1735, June 28. This day Mary Bratt, widow, gave the refusal of her farm at Schaahkook for £337: according to the Coven^t in her Indenture, which this Board doth not accept off but give her Liberty to dispose of the same.

A Warr^{tt} was drawn on the Treasurer to pay to Johannis Seger three Skipple of wheat.

Advertisements were put up to lett out the Water lotts along Hudsons River and likewise the last notice for the owners to shew their titles.

1735, July 2. Johannis Christianse app^d before this Board and gave the Refusal of ten morgan of his land lying on the flatts at Schaahkook to this Corporation, for that he intended to dispose of the same which this board did not think fitt to accept off, and therefore gave him Liberty to sell the same to Joh's Knickerbacker.

This board taking the poor circumstances of the said Jan Christianse into their consideration abate him 50 Sk: of the rent he is in arrear to the city.

Johan's Knickerbacker app^d before this Board and gave the refusal of 18 morgan of his land lying on the River side at Schaahkook opposite to Anthonys kill to this Corporation, being y^e south part of that tract of Land this Corporation formerly sold to David Schuyler. This Board not enclining to accept of the same gives him liberty to dispose thereof to Jan Christianse.

1735, July 4. This day the following persons produced the following Titles for lotts of ground lying along Hudsons River, pursuant to the directions of an Act of Assembly for that purpose made and enacted.

Sybrant Van Schaick produced copy of a Transp^t from Peter Peterse Lansingh to Sybrant Goose Van Schaick for a half Brewery, Lott & Garden. The lott containing in breadth on the east side or Kings highway six rodd nine foot and six inches, in length on the south by the gang way of Abraham Staats five rodd and eleven foot, on the west by Abraham Staats six rodd and five foot, and on the north side the street seven rodd and one foot. The Garden contains on the west side by the way six rodd and nine foot, on the north side by the way four rodd and seven foot, on the east by the river seven rodd and five foot and on the south side again to Abraham Staats five rodd and five foot.

David A. Schuyler produced a Patent or Confirmation from Richard Nichols, Esq., Governour Gen'l under his Royal Highness James, Duke of York, abutting to the north on Barent Andriese, to the south on the ground formerly belonging to Frans Barentsen on the east side of the river and the west side of the highway, containing in breadth on the east side four rodd and eight foot, and on the west six rodd and a half. In length on the south side nineteen rodd, and on the north sixteen rodd and ten foot.

1735, July 7. Whereas David A. Schuyler shew'd title last Comon Council for the ground lying behind his lott, which is broad on the east side four rodd and eight foot, and on the west six rodd and a half, and whereas the Comonality intend to lay out a street of thirty foot broad over said ground; they have agreed w^t the said David A. Schuyler that in consideration of his allowing the said street to be laid over his ground they will enlarge the same on the east side and give him the same breadth of six rodd and a half on the east as it now is on the west.

This Board agreed this day with Dirck I. Tenbroeck to lay out the Water lotts along Hudson's River, for which they are to pay him twenty-eight shillings.

1735, August 12. This day the following ordinances were published, viz:

A law to prevent strangers from being a charge to this Corporation.

A law for cleaning the streets, lanes and alleys of the said city.

A law for paving the streets, lanes and alleys within the city of Albany.

A law comanding the Constables to be diligent in putting the several laws made and publish'd by the Comon Council in execution.

1735, Sept. 29. In pursuance to the directions of the Charter of the city of Albany being the day appointed for the electing of aldermen, assistants and constables for said city, the following were chosen, viz:

Anthony Bratt.

Johannis Spoor, Constable.

Barent Bratt was chosen City Chamberlain for the year ensuing and order'd to enter into bond with security as usual.

1735, October 29. This day Johannis Wyngaert and Zechariah Zieckelsie appeared before this board and agreed anew to go round the city at Nights at the usual Hours and to call at the usual Places on the same terms and conditions as was agreed last year, and that for six months from this day.

1735, Nov. 1. The following persons were appointed fire masters for the year ensuing, viz:

First Ward—Uldrick van Vranke and Jacobus Hilton.

Second Ward—Abraham Vandeusen and Hendrick M. Roseboom.

Third Ward—Johannis Cloet and Johannis Quackenboss.

This day was published three ordinances, viz: 1 for Tavern keepers to take lycence; 1 for preventing fire; 1 for preventing accidents by hard or unruly riding thro' the streets.

173 $\frac{5}{6}$, Feb. 5. An ordinance was published to lay a fine upon the officers therein named, elected and refusing to serve, ag^t Hogs running at large, and to choose 3 more constables for this city.

173 $\frac{5}{6}$, Feb. 13. This day pursuant to the ordinance published the 5th instant, the following persons were returned constables and took their oaths for the due execution of their offices, viz: For first ward, Johan's E. Wendell, Jun'r; for second ward, Willem van Schelluyne; for third ward, William Rogers, Jun'r.

173 $\frac{5}{6}$, March 24. The Comon Council upon the application of the aldermen of the second ward in behalf of the inhabitants of said ward, grant liberty to build a Market house in the Brewers street over the creek or run of water that comes from the hill and emptys itself into the river, running through the ground of John or Johannis Evertse. Towards y^e building whereof the Comon Council allow seven pounds ten shillings.

Whereas Johannis Dewandelaer never came to gett Title for the three morgan of land lying at Schaahkook, on the west of Tamheneck creek under the hill where the comon road now runs over, according to his agreement w^t the Comon Council the 10th day of April last, and Levinus Winne (by Jesse Deforeest who acted for him) desiring to buy the same three morgans of land, This board thought fitt to sell the same unto the said Levinus Winne for the sum of ten pounds and the yearly rent of three skypple good merchantable winter wheat, to be p^d yearly, the first three skipple to be p^d in the month of Jan'y or February 173^s/₉, and so on for ever after in the same months. Five pound, half of the consideration money to be paid by the delivery of the deed, and the last five pound on or before the first day of May 1737, Jesse Deforest to be security for the payment thereof. Resolved that indentures be drawn accordingly and that the mayor in behalf of the mayor, aldermen and comonalty execute a deed for the same.

This board taking into charitable consideration the poor circumstances of Rachel Winne, wedow, and that her brother, Guilleyn Verplanck, executed a note of hand to this corporation for the payment of five pounds on acco^{tt} of said Rachel Winne, on which note there is yet due £2:16 or thereabout. It is hereby ordered that the Treasurer give up said note cancell'd without further payment.

John Armstrong laid before this board an acco^t for riding sand, &c. amounting to £2:9, which is allowed and the treasurer ordered to pay the same.

A Petition was laid before this board in the words following, viz:

To the worshipful the mayor, recorder, aldermen and comonalty of the city of Albany, The humble Petition of several inhabitants of this city of Albany, Most humbly sheweth:

Whereas the Road now laid out on the west side of the Gallows hill leads through the lands of Mr. Evert Wendell is very comodious and conven^t for the inhabitants of this city (that is to say) in the dry of the Summer and Winter, but in the Spring and Fall it is not fitt for any use either for men or horse, &c., and your Petitioners w^t humble submission to your worships better opinion do conceive that a more conven^t Road may be laid out, to witt, just on the south and east side of the block house that stands near the widow Winne.

Wherefore your Petitioners most humbly pray your worships that you will be pleased to lay out a Road in that place for the ease of us your petitioners and the rest of his Majesties subjects, or that you will be humbly pleased to give leave to your petitioners to lay out the same, and that they may take up so many Stockadoes as the breadth of a gate requires, which Road to be laid out at your petitioners proper cost and charges, and that the same may be recorded in your book of records for a King's highway, and so remain a great ease to his subjects.

And your Petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray.

The Comon Council made the following Resolves concerning the regulating of the streets:

Whereas an ordinance was published the twelfth day of August last for paving the streets, &c. within this city, and that the time limited by s^d ordinance is now expired, the Comon Council think proper for the more conven^t and sufficient paving of the same that it is highly necessary that all and every the inhabitants of the second ward whose drains or gutters empty themselves into that street or lane which leads down from betwixt Johan's Beeckman and Anthony van Schaick lott, between Jacob Vischer and Jacob Lansings, be taken up and laid so as to convey their water into the foxes creek by that way where the old block house stood, and that whoever of said inhabitants doth not comply herewith before the first day of May next shall forfeit thirty shillings to be recovered before the mayor, recorder or any one of the aldermen of the said city.

It is ordain'd by the Comon Council that the drains or gutters leading from the yards or houses of Philip Livingston, Esq. and the Widow Beekman, be so laid by the owners as to empty themselves towards the market house by the first day of May next under the forfeiture as af^d to be recover'd as afores^d.

Complaint being made to this board of the inconveniency of the stoop rais'd before the house of Reyer Gerritse, Esq. that fronts the river, it is ordered that the s^d Reyer Gerritse, Esq. take the same away and carry out the drain from his house so farr that it may empty itself into the river. The same to be done on or before the first day of June next on pain of thirty shillings, to be recovered as af^d.

Order'd that Philip Livingston, Esq., Reyer Gerritse, Esq. be serv'd w^t a copy of this Resolution relating their drains.

1736, March 31. John Schuyler, Jun'r, gave in an account to this board for 12 leather Buckets at 8s., £4:16, which is allowed and an order drawn on the treasurer to pay the same.

Whereas Capt. Henry Holland hath caused to be laid before this board a certain Release for a lott of ground lying and being at the south side of this city adjoining to the burial place, from the north-west corner thereof and so towards the plain, containing in breadth nine rodd, and in length along the street that goes by the burial place eighteen rodd, and in breadth at the end next the creek from north to south seven rodd, executed to him by Richard Willson and bearing date the fourth day of November, 1708, and whereas the said Henry Holland is enclined to dispose of the said lott or part thereof, and being informed that this corporation pretend to some right in the abovementioned p^mes, is enclined to come to an amicable agreement with the mayor, aldermen and comonalty about the same. It is therefore agreed by and between the said Henry Holland and the said mayor, aldermen and comonalty that the said mayor for the time being execute to the said Capt. Henry Holland a release which is to be executed in Comon Council any time after this day for all their right and title of part of the said lott, to witt: Beginning at the north-west corner of the burying place, and so westerly towards the hill nine rodd and four foot, from thence southward towards the stable of Andries Bratt eight rodd and ten foot, from thence eastward to the burying place nine rodd and four foot, from thence northward along the s^d burying place eight rodd and ten foot to the place where first begun. In consideration of which the said Captain Herry Holland is to pay to the Treasurer of this city the sum of twenty pounds on or before the first day of October next for the use of this city. For which sum the Edward Holland, Esq., the present mayor, is to give his own bond on executing of said deed.

1736, April 2. The mayor executed a deed to Capt. Henry Holland for the lott of ground mentioned in the Minutes of Comon Council the 31st day of March last, according to the Resolution of that day.

Edward Holland, Esq. gave his bond for the twenty pound mentioned to be paid for the consideration money of the above lott, payable the first day of October next.

This board orders the Treasurer to pay twelve shillings to Tobias Ryckman.

1736, May 18. The following Letter was wrote to George Clarke, Esq., President of the Council at New York :

The mayor comunicated to this board y^e Letter of the 11th instant, directed to Capt. Collins, whereby we perceived that you would have our opinion of a certain tract of land in the Mohawks country, petitioned for by Messrs. Sam'l Storke and Peter Brugh Livingston to his Maj'ie. We therefore shall endeavour to give you our opinion of it and its consequences according to the best of our capacity and understanding. In the first place we join your Honour in opinion that there is a course left out. However we can partly guess where the lands petitioned for ly's, and are well assured that great part of the said tract is already patented, and we are credibly informed that there are several purchases made from the Mohawks in the regular method for part of the said tract. We are also assured that some of the Mohawk Indians are seated on part of it, but cannot conceive that any of the Mohawk flatts are included in those imperfect boundaries. We are confident that the method made use of by those Gentlemen, first to obtain a patent for lands before a purchase made from the Natives will prove of ill consequence and alienate the Indians from his Maj'es interest and create great animosities and strife between them and us, and in the end drive them from us to the french, so that we most earnestly entreat your Honour that you would in the strongest manner you can to sett forth the ill consequences of such proceedings to the Lords of Trade and desire them to discountenance such practices.

1736, June 26. This day sold unto Johannis De Garmoy, Harmanus Wendell, David Groesbeck and Jelles De Garmoy, a lott of ground scituate, lying and being on the north side of the city of Albany, on the south side of the foxes kill or creek, beginning near the s^d creek, six rods west from where the Stockadoes now stands, running westerly along said Foxes creek, as the creek runs nine rodd, from thence southerly w^t a streight line ten rodd towards the hill, from thence easterly nine rodd, from thence northerly to the place where first begun ten rodd with the use of the said creek for their tan pitts, for which they are to pay fifteen pounds on the mayors executing a deed for the same. Resolved that the mayor for the time being shall execute to them a deed for s^d lott of ground and cause the city seal to be thereunto affixed.

This day sold unto Abraham Harpertse Van Deusen and Hendrick Gerritse Van Ness a lott of ground scituate, lying and being on the north side of the foxes creek, within the limitts of the city of Albany, beginning on the north side of said foxes creek at a stake drove into the ground about four and a half rodd westerly from the south-west corner of the ground belonging to Wynant Vanden Bergh where he makes his bricks, just on the west side of the ground where s^d Wynant Vandenbergh hath digg'd the clay for making his bricks, running westerly along s^d creek as the s^d creek runs seven rodd, from thence northerly with a streight line four rodd, from thence easterly seven rodd, from thence southerly to the place where first begun four rodd, with the use of said creek for their tan pitts, for which they agree to pay ten pound on executing the deed to them for the same. Resolved that the mayor in behalf of this corporation shall execute said deed and cause the city seal to be thereunto affixed.

This day sold unto Thomas Wilkinson a lott of ground scituate, lying and being on the south side of the city of Albany on the old Gallows hill, bounded on the north by a lott of ground sold to Robert Flint the twenty-eighth day of June last, containing in breadth from north to south (ranging on the same course with Robert Flint's lott) forty foot, in length from east to west twelve rodd, all Rynland measure, for which said Thomas Wilkinson agrees to pay fifteen pounds in manner following, that is to say, seven pound ten shillings on executing the deed, and the remaining seven pounds ten shillings on or before the first day of July 1738, for which he is to execute a bond payable to the mayor, aldermen and comonalty or their successors, and three shillings yearly rent for ever; the first payment to begin the first day of July 1738. Resolved that the mayor in behalf of the corporation execute a deed for the same and cause the city seal to be thereunto affixed.

This board agreed with Jesse Deforeest and Anthony Bratt to keep in repair the roads which the city is obliged to repair by virtue of an act of Assembly of this Province, as they shall from time to time be directed by y^e mayor or any one of the aldermen. The bridges within the city excepted, for which they are to have three pounds twelve shillings per annum, paid yearly for the term of six years.

1736, June 30. This day was published the following ordinances:

An ordinance relating to the markets; an ordinance relating to the observation of the Lord's day and the behaviour of the Negroes; an ordinance regulating the fees of the inviters to funerals.

1736, July 21. This board drew an order on Barent Bratt, city treasurer, to send them twelve shillings, which they gave to the poor Prisoners.

1736, July 31. This day the mayor, aldermen and comonalty sold the following lotts of ground unto the following persons for the consideration money after expressed, viz:

He is not to make any other mill on the creek qt. within the bounds of this land than a Griss mill and not to boalt any flour ground on said mill for sale.

This board drew up a Petition to the members of the Assembly in General Assembly convened, viz^t:

The Humble petition, &c., Humbly sheweth,

That whereas your Petitioners by an Act of the General Assembly passed in the present sixteenth year of his majesties reign, were impowered to assess a sufficient number of Stockadoes on the inhabitants of this city and to put the same in a posture of defence, your petitioners have accordingly in every article proceeded according to the directions of the said Act, as far as their ability reaches, but your Petitioners beg leave to represent to the Honourable House the great hardships they labour under, being oblided by the said Act to make all the necessary fortifications directed by the same at the charge of the city only, which we declare we are not able to do, and therefore pray the the Hon'ble House to consider how very reasonable it is that the county of Albany at least should assist this city, which is really the frontier of all North America, and it is very plain and evident that this is the only place if fortified as it ought to be, that must and can protect the people of the county with their wives and children in case of a french war, and prevent the enemy from overrunning the whole country, which must evidently be the case if the city is left defenceless.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray the Honourable House to take into consideration and to pass an Act, that the sum of three hundred pounds be raised as speedy as may be, upon the inhabitants of the city and county of Albany (except Schinechtady and the Mohawks river) in the same proportion as the quota was last year divided, to enable your petitioners to proceed in the fortifying the said city, which said sum of three hundred pounds will however come very far short of what will be wanted.

1743, April 21. This board compounded with Maria Winne for 160 sk. wheat she owes this corporation, for which they have agreed to take £18, for which sum her son Marte Winne has passed his bond payable in two years.

1743, May 3. This board ordered the clerk to draw an order on the treasurer to pay to Kiliaen Van Renselaer £13:12:3, for a p. of ground he sold to this corporation, lying near the Dutch church:

Ordered that the clerk draw an order on the treasurer to pay John Bell £6, for the last half year service as publick whipper, to the first instant.

This board agreed with John Bell for the year ensuing to be publick whipper upon the same terms he agreed last year for twelve pounds, and said Bell agreed with this board that they pay £3:10 of his salary for the year to come to Mr. Depeyster, and £1:10 to Jacob Ten Eyck, and to Elizabeth Van Olinda £3 for house hire for the year to come for said Bell, and that their respective rec^{ts} shall be a discharge to the corporation for so much of his salary as those sums amount to.

1743, June 18. This board allowed an acc^t of Leendert Gansevoort for a barrel beer, 18s. and for house hire 40s. and ordered the clerk to draw an order on the treasurer to pay the same.

The following Letter was wrote to Collo. Philip Schuler:

Collo. Schuyler: Sir—Although severall complaints have been made to you as Colonel, that most of the watches in this city are very negligently kept, and some do not watch at all, and it was hoped you would have given the necessary orders herein, yet no orders have been given, we are of opinion that if stricter orders are not given to the Captains, that you had better order them to give over watching entirely, that we might know what we have to depend on, and take the necessary resolutions accordingly. We desire you will signify your intentions herein. We are.

1743, June 30. The mayor executed a deed to Symon Danielse for a piece of ground at Schaahkook, sold him 20th April last.

1744, August 17. To the Honourable Representatives of the Colony of New York in Generall Assembly convened: The Humble Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonality of the city of Albany, humbly sheweth, Whereas your Petitioners did last year petition your Honourable House to raise the sum of £300 upon this city and county in order to putt this city in a posture of defence, which petition was accordingly granted; and whereas that sum has been expended by your petitioners and considerably exceeded in fortifying the said city, so that your petitioners are now in arrear upon said account, and the fortifications of this city not being yet completed for want of more money, your petitioners do therefore humbly pray the Honourable to pass an Act to enable the supervisors to raise upon this city and county as soon as may be (in the same manner as the other county charges are raised) the sum of £300, to enable your petitioners to go on and finish the fortification of this city, which is necessary should be done with the utmost expedition, and your petitioners shall ever pray.

The following Letter was this day wrote to the representatives sent out of this county, with the petition on the other side inclosed:

Gentlemen: We enclose you a Petition to the Honourable Generall Assembly to raise the sum of £300 upon this city and county for the fortifying this city, which we shall actually want for that purpose, and as we are convinced that you well know how very necessary this is, we desire you to deliver this petition to the House, and we doubt not but you will do your endeavour to gett an Act passed according to the same.

We hope you will remember to gett as much of the powder your House bought at the provincial expence to be sent up to us as you can.
[Annals, x.] 11

1747, July 27. The following Petition was drawn and sign'd in order to be sent to the Representatives of our city and county to be given in to the Assembly:

To the Honourable the Representatives of the Colony of New York convened in General Assembly, The Petition of the mayor, aldermen and commonalty of the city of Albany humbly sheweth:

That the inhabitants of the corporation of the city of Albany are in ciraims of great misery and distress by reason of the present war with Frence and with the Indians in their alliance. That the inhabitants of the said city ever since the commencement of the war by their frequent watching have been very much taken off from themselves and families. That every man of our corporation hve been obliged to attend in person or pay a hired man in their stead upon watch and ward every third or fourth night during the whole time, excepting a small interval of time in the spring the duty was demanded only every fourth night, but now and for sometime past for the safety of this frontier and the poor inhabitants we are obliged again to come upon a fourth night. That our corporation by occasion of the present war are indebted the sum of eight hundred and fifty pounds and upwards, for repairing our fortifications about this city, supplying fire wood and candles for the night watches, and for powder and ball for the poorest of the inhabitants without any fund provided for the payment thereof, besides what the inhabitants have done by a voluntary taxing themselves, for providing and setting up new Stockadoes where the old ones were gone to decay. And whereas this city is now the northern frontier of this Province, your petitioners humbly conceive that whatever charge or expence our corporation have been already at or hereafter may be put to by reason of the present war ought in reason to be a general charge for the whole Province, and not to fall on the inhabitants of this corporation only, who are in no circumstance to support the growing expence or have one penny rent to come in to discharge the debts already contracted, or can we expect any during the war, nor probably for many years after the war is over, Your Hon's Petitioners have never heard that the corporation of the city of New York have been at the charge of building or repairing the fortifications made for the defence of their city, but that the same hath been a general charge to the whole Province, altho' they have had the happiness to enjoy the blessings of peace during the whole war without any alarm, disturbance or molestation from the enemy.

Your petitioners therefore do most humbly beseech your Honourable House in tender consideration of the premises to raise by a general tax on the whole Province the said sum of eight hundred and fifty pounds to discharge the debts contracted by our corporation since the commencement of the war, which the deplorable circumstances of this city is reduced to render us incapable to pay. And your petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray, &c.

ALBANY, July 27th, 1747.

Gentlemen: We inclose a Petition which we beg the favour of you to deliver in to the General Assembly, and beg also the favour of you to use your interest to gett our prayer granted, for unless some method be fallen upon to discharge the debts already contracted it is impossible the publick charge can be longer supported.

You will see by the inclosed what the articles of fire wood and candles for the block houses only amount to, and if you judge necessary we shall send you down a list of the several persons to whom, and the respective sums we are indebted. By order of Comon Council.

JAS. STEVENSON, D. Cl'k.

1747, August 11. The following petition was signed by the present members, who order'd the Recorder and Alderman Van Schaick to go to New York and deliver the same to his Excellency the Governour, and that the corporation would pay their reasonable charges and expences:

To his Excellency the Hon'ble George Clinton, Captain General and Governour in Chief in and over the province of New York and the Territories thereon depending in America, Vice Admirall of the same and Admirall of the Red Squadron of his Majesties Fleet, The petition of the mayor, aldermen and commonalty of the city of Albany, Humbly sheweth:

That whereas the time allowed by Act of Assembly for the Wood Rangers to scout through the woods on the west side of Hudson's river near the city of Albany, is expired, and for want of Wood Rangers both the city and inhabitants that yet remain in the county are liable to be suddenly surprized, the inhabitants both of city and county are much decreas'd since the war begun, many barbarously murdered and schalped, and numbers taken prisoners by the enemy, and others removed from city and county to places of greater security, so that the few that are left, of whom the most part are oblided to labour and expose themselves to great danger to earn a subsistence for themselves and families, are not sufficient to keep the night watches, much less to make a defence in case of a suden attack.

Your petitioners most humbly beseech your Excellency to lay our distressed condition before the General Assembly and to use your Excellency's interest to prevail on their Honourable House to prolong the time allowed for the Wood Rangers or to raise a sum of money to pay a sufficient number of white men and Indians to go on the outshout; and your petitioners also farther pray that a number of men be raised out of the lower counties to be placed in the city of Albany to ease the inhabitants of the hard duty of watching, which now is to every man in town a fourth night, notwithstanding three block houses and one guard house remain still empty for want of men.

And your Excellency's petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray, &c.

Resolved that Major Collins, the Recorder and Alderman Van Schaick go down to New York with the above petition and deliver it to his Excellency and to endeavour to gett what the petition setts forth, or any other thing may be for the good of the city, and that this corporation bear their expenses and allow them at their return what the corporation think reasonable for their trouble, and that the clerk give them a copy of this resolve.

1747, Sept. 14. Resolved to send an Express to the representatives of the city and county of Albany, with a Letter and inclose to them the affidavits of Johannis Wendell, Benjamin Bratt, Johannis V. Douwe and Gerit C. Vandenbergh, and acquaint them that our corporation petitioned his Excellency, our Governour, to recommend to the General Assembly to make provision for a sufficient number of men to be posted in the city of Albany to ease the inhabitants of the hard duty of watching. But as we are informed Collo. Roberts intends to send three companies of the new levies to be quartered in the block houses, which considering how ill they have all along behaved themselves and threatened often to burn the town before they went away, an Collo. Roberts' own behaviour, make the inhabitants unwilling to have them in town, wherefore we beg you will use your endeavour to gett a sufficient number of men from the lower counties to be posted in the city according to the prayer of our petition, presented to his Excellency by Major Collins and Mr. Van Schaick.

1747, Sept. 28. Ordered that a Letter be writt to Collo. Schuyler, one of the members of Assembly for the city and county of Albany, desiring him to gett an Act of Assembly passed to lay a tax on the Province for purchasing and setting up new Stockadoes round the city of Albany where the old ones are daily going to decay, and if the Assembly will not pass an Act for the whole Province to contribute toward the charge thereof, that an Act be pass'd to oblige the inhabitants of the city and county (Schenectady excepted) to do y^t.

Major Collins and Sybrant Van Schaick laid their acco^{ts} before this board amounting to the sum of £1:18:4, which the board allowed, and gave an order on the treasurer to pay the same out of the first money that comes to his hands.

1747, Sept. 29. This being the day appointed by the Charter for choosing and electing corporation officers, the following persons were chosen to serve for the year ensuing according to the directions of the charter :

First Ward—Jacob C. Ten Eyck and Sybrant G. Van Schaick, aldermen; Barnardus Bratt and Egbert Bratt, assistants; Luykas Yates and Johannis Vander Heyden, Jun'r, constables.

Second Ward—Jacob H. Ten Eyck and John Roseboom, Jun'r, aldermen; Jacob I. Lansingh and Barent Ten Eyck, assistants; Isaac Verplanck and William Groesbeeck, constables.

Third Ward—Gerrit Van Ness and Coenraet Ten Eyck, aldermen; Cornelis Maase and John V. Douwe, assistants; Rutger Lansingh and Peter Boghaert, Jun'r, constables.

The Common Council appointed Gerrit Vandenberg for city treasurer or chamberlain; Johannis Seger for marshall; Isaac Verplanck for high constable:

1747, Oct. 2. Collo. Roberts sent yesterday to the mayor a Letter from his Excell'y the Gov'r, dated the 26th day of September, 1747, acquainting the corporation he had directed Collo. Roberts to order three companies of the new levies to be quartered in the block houses in the city of Albany. or in such other places therein as they should provide. The Letter sett forth that his Excellency expected the corporation would provide for them fire wood and candles and assured them he would recommend to the General Assembly to make sufficient provision to defray the expense they might be put to.

Resolved to try to gett fire wood and candles for said three companies as soon as possible, and then to acquaint Collo. Roberts therewith, and that Alderman Ten Eyck and Cornelis Maase, one of the assistants, acquaint him with this resolution.

1747, Nov. 14. This board appointed the following persons to look after the chimneys and other places where the inhabitants kept their fire, &c.

Evert Sixberry agreed to supply the block house N. 1 to pmo. May next, from twesday next, at 3s. per load, to bring one load every day, and on Saturday two loads.

Isaac De Voe agreed for N. 6 at 3s. 6d. per double load.

Peter Benneway agreed for N. 7 at 3s. 6d. per double load.

Evert H. Wendell agreed for N. 5 at 3s. 6d. per double load.

1747, Dec. 7. Hendrick Van Buren agreed to supply the Market house in the third ward to pmo. May next at 3s. 6d. for a double load, two loads every day and four on Saturdays, to begin this week.

Rutger Vandenberg agreed to supply the Market house in the first ward to pmo. May next, as above.

Volkert and Cornelis Vandenberg agreed to supply the Block house No. 8 at 3s. 6d. for the double load, and 3s. for the double load till pmo. May next as the others agreed before.

1747, Dec. 12. This board agreed with Vanderheyden to supply Block house N. 4 on same terms and for same time as the others. He begun last Thursday, being the 10th instant.

Resolved that if anything happen to be wanting to the Sentry boxes or Batteries round the walls of this city, that the mayor or recorder or the aldermen of the ward where such defect happens to be, or any of them, take care that the same be made, mended or repair'd at the charge of the corporation.

Resolved that Johannis Hunn and Cornelis Boghaert make up the deficiencies in the city wall at the several places as mentioned in a memorandum given to Johan's Hunn for that purpose.

Benjamin Bratt undertook to open and shutt the Gates and sweep the snow from off the Batteries in the northern division of this city at seven pound per annum from the first day of February next. N. B. He begun to open and shutt the Gates afores^d the 28th day of January last.

Johannes Seger undertook as above for the southern division at the same price.

Bastiaen Teymesse undertook to supply Block house No. 3 on the same terms and for the same time as the others agreed the 4th and 7th of this month.

1747, Feb. 10. This board agreed with John Fryer to supply the Block houses with candles at the rate of one shilling per pound, from the eleventh day of this month to the fifteenth day of October next, and to deliver every evening as many as will be sufficient for the night then ensuing to Joh's Seger; said Fryer agrees to have his first payment the first of September for the candles he supplies to that time.

1747, March 24. Resolved that Christiaen Lagransie be permitted to set up a Blacksmith's shop near to the shop of William Hogan, Jun'r, on the north side thereof, but to ready to take it down at any time when the corporation may have reason for it.

1748, April 6. Collo. Johnson's Letter to the mayor was read in Common Council desiring he might have the Barrack wherein the Governour's men were lodg'd to keep for a main guard in.

1748, May 26. Ordered that Jacob C. Ten Eyck and Sybrant G. Van Schaick, aldermen, together with the Treasurer, overlook the accounts which are intended to be laid before the treasurer, and make report thereof to the Common Council.

1748, July 18. Ordered by this board that Gerrit Van Ness, Luykas Wyngaart, and Anthony Van Der Zee, make a new bridge behind Johannis Lansingh's on Ruttenkill, in the first ward at the water side; that they likewise repair all the Batteries which are fallen down and all the bridges which want repairing in the round gang.

1748, Sept. 17. Jacob C. Ten Eyck and Sybrant Van Schaicke, together with the Treasurer are by this board allowed further time till next munday to overlook the accounts which are to be laid before the treasury and make report thereof to the Common Council.

Resolved by this board that Barent Ten Eyck and Jhannis Vol: Dow go and desire Langaserie and the other french Gen^t that came with the flag Truces from Canada, to come to Ackerman's to let the mayor and corporation know the meaning of their coming to this town.

The french Gen^t accordingly appeared, and being askd their business, said their Pass was with Collo. Johnson, but if the mayor pleased they would wait on him tomorrow in the afternoon with their Pass, which was resolved to be sufficient.

1748, Sept. 20. The mayor reports to this board that Messrs. Lingrey and Langaserie had been to his house last Sunday in the afternoon, the time appointed by the Common Council last Saturday convened, but did not produce their Pass as they engaged to do, but promised to do it on Munday, which they have not done, and that Major Collins asked them what reason they could give why they did not show their Pass to the mayor, who had an undoubted right to demand it, they replied that they were given to understand by Collo. William Johnson that they were not obliged to do it, as they were directed to him.

1748, Sept. 29. This day being appointed by the Charter for choosing and electing corporation officers the following persons were chosen to serve for the year ensuing according to the directions of the Charter:

1748, Oct. 14. Jacob C. Ten Eyck produced a commission for mayor of the city of Albany, &c. for the ensuing year and took the oaths appointed by law, sign'd the Test and was sworn into the office of mayor and coroner for the city and justice of the peace for the city and county of Albany.

Thomas Williams, Jun'r, produced in Comon Council a commission wherein he was appointed high sheriff for the city and county of Albany, he took the oaths appointed by law, sign'd the Test, and took an oath for the due execution of his office.

1748, Oct. 27. Ordered the clerk to draw a Petition, and send Joh's Seger to the mayor to have it signed, to be laid before the General Assembly of this Province of New York. The Petition is as follows:

To the Honourable the Representatives of the General Assembly of the Colony of New York, humbly sheweth:

That the corporation of the said city of Albany have been put to the Expence of severall hundred pounds in repairing their fortifications about the city and in supplying fire wood and candles for the night watches over and above what the Generall Assembly have already allowed for fire wood and candles and for providing powder and ball for the poorest of the inhabitants, without any fund provided for the repayment of that expence besides what the inhabitants did by voluntary taxing themselves for providing and setting up new Stockadoes where the old ones were gone to decay, and whereas the corporation have received no rent from their tenants since the year 1744, or are like to receive any for some years to come, tho' a peace should be actually concluded, the settlements of their tenants being destroyed by the enemy during the war, and will require some time before they can settle again.

Your W^{cs} Petitioners have directed the Representatives of the city and county of Albany to lay before your Hon'ble House sundry accounts, all attested except a few persons who are dead, removed or absent, amounting to the sum of £1082:9:2 $\frac{1}{4}$, which were actually laid out for the defence of the city against the enemy. Severall other sums of money are due from the corporation which your petitioners think not proper to trouble your Hon'ble house with, tho' they have no fund at present to pay the same.

Your petitioners therefore do most humbly beseech your Hon'ble House to take the premises into your wise and serious consideration and grant to your petitioners such relief as the distressed circumstances of their corporation do call for and as to your wisdom shall seem meet, and your petitioners as in duty bound shall ever pray.

The following Letter with accounts were sent to the Representatives of the city and county of Albany:

ALBANY, 27 Oct. 1748.

Gentlemen: We give you the trouble of a petition to be laid before your Hon'ble House, praying relief to enable us to pay the debts we have contracted by occasion of the war, we have likewise sent a list with the accounts themselves, all attested, except a few persons, some of whom are dead, some removed and others absent from home; our corporation debts are some hundred pounds more, but as they are not for the imediate expence of the war, we have not troubled you with them.

Mr. Philip Livingston, Jr. can well inform you, if you make any doubt of any of the accounts. We begg you will use your endeavours with your Hon'ble House to lay a Provincial tax to extricate us out of this debt or the corporation must fall, for you know the city has not at present one penny of income or like to have for some time should a peace be concluded.

1748, Nov. 12. The Common Councill appoints fire masters for the ensuing year, viz^t:

First Ward—Dowe Van Veghte and Joh's son of Johannis Jan Lansingh.

Second Ward—Gerret Staats and Luykas T.^r Wittbeck.

Third Ward—Johannis Jacobus Lansingh and Johannis Pruyn, Jun^r.

Whereas on the 29th Sep^t last Jacob C. Ten Eyck was elected alderman for the first ward of the city of Albany, and whereas since that time (to wit) on the 14 Oct. following, he produced a comission for mayor, &c. of this city, took the oaths appointed by law, sign'd the Test, and the same day was sworn into his office, Wherefore it is ordered and resolved by this board that a new election be held on the 17th of this instant for chusing another alderman for the first ward of this city, and that John De Peyster, Esq., al'n for first ward do give notice accordingly.

Ordered the clerk to give warrents to the fire masters to go round every mayor's court and from thence once every fortnight and make report every mayor's court to the mayor and aldermen of their proceedings, and that the clerk sign said warrants by order of the Common Councill.

1748, Nov. 22. Pursuant to a resolve made the 12th instant for electing an alderman in the room of the present mayor on the 17th instant, Tobias Rykeman is returned for alderman by plurality of votes.

The mayor this day laid the city before the Comon Councill and said that Dirck Ten Broeck, Esq. late mayor had delivered the same to him as was formerly usual for the mayor going of to do to the new mayor, but that as the present mayor's opinion always was that the city seal should be delivered to the keeping of the clerk of the Comon Councill, he desired the consent of this board that the same may be delivered to Mr. Philip

G. Livingston, the present clerk, and that he may be prohibited by the Comon Council to affix the same to any instrument before the mayor certified the same and gave an order to affix the same to his certificate. That he be prohibited to affix the same to a lease or release without order of Comon Council and in Comon Council, but in the mayor's absence the clerk may affix the same to any instrument by the order of three aldermen, which they are impowered to do by the charter, and that in case the clerk should go out of town that he leave the seal in time of his absence with the mayor or any one of the aldermen, who are not to make use of the same, but pursuant to the above directions, and deliver it back again on his return. Resolved, that the above regulations concerning the city be a standing resolution of the Comon Council, and that no mayor for the future have the keeping of the city seal unless in the absence of the clerk as aforesaid.

Resolved also that no freedom of this city be given privately to any stranger, but that all persons, natural born subjects or naturally desiring to be admitted freeman of this corporation may have their freedoms publicly given in Comon Council and an entry made thereof in their minutes; likewise no honorary freedom be given to any person of distinction but by consent of Comon Council.

The mayor pursuant to the above resolve delivered the city seal unto Mr. Philip G. Livingston in Comon Council.

Madam Van Renselaer agreed this day with this board at her house to let the corporation have the same liberty in the woods of the manor of Renselaerswick as was granted by Collo. Kiliaen Van Renselaear, Esq., late lord of said manor, on the 18th feb. 171 $\frac{6}{7}$, in consideration they pay her eleven pounds per annum. Agreed during her adm'n.

1748, Dec. 21. Ordered the clerk to sign a receipt in behalf of the corporation for a half barrel powder rec^d from Sybrant G. Van Schaick, in lieu of powder he borrowed from the corporation when the Gov'r was here last.

Resolved that it is the opinion of this board that a night watch of fifteen or sixteen men be kept in this city, and hope the inhabitants will not screen themselves from that duty while they think it is absolutely necessary for the welfare of this city.

Robert Lansing agreed with this board to keep the stores belonging to the Gun whereof he is Gunner, and give an inventory thereof to the clerk, and keep the powder, shot and other materials belonging to the same at his own risque till demanded by Comon Councill.

Christiaen Legransey agrees as above for Blockhouse No. 4.

Jellis De Garmow agrees as above for Blockhouse No. 3.

It is further Resolved to send a Letter to the members of the city and county of Albany with the accounts for the matirals and work done, &c. occasioned by the late warr to the following persons, chiefly imployed by order of the corporation, as judging at that time necessary for the security of this city and county, which runs thus:

Gentlemen: We inclose you once more a list and the accounts of the debts contracted the past warr in the defence of this city and county, which we have carefully examined, and what we adjudged did particularly belong to this city we have deducted thereout, as you will find per the inclosed accounts, which are all attested except a few persons, some of whome are absent, some removed and some dead. The debts of this corporation are very considerable and the income hetherto very inconsiderable, so that we are at present in a very deplorable condition. We therefore beg you use your endeavour with the Honourable House to give this corporation such relief as the distressed circumstances of this corporation require, as they in their wisdom shall seem meet. We wish you all helth and are with due respect, Gentlemen,

Your most obliged Humble Servants.

To Mr. Hans Hansen:

Sir—We have this day wrote the members of this city and county, and as you are one of them, we think it needless to give you here the contents thereof, shall therefore only refer you to it, and beg the favour of you that you will use your utmost endeavour to put things forward for a Collony charge, and if that can't be done then desire you to use your endeavour to gitt the same to be paid by this city and county; and as you have lately been a member of this corporation it needs not to informe you of our deplorable condition. We are with due respect.

P. S. This please to keep to yourself, and if you judge proper we desire you to speak to the chief justice whom we doubt not but will assist you to make it a Colony charge.

1751, Oct. 25. This board appointed the following persons fire masters for the ensuing year:

John Williams, Cornelis Clase van den Berg, first ward; Anthony Bleecker, Gerardus Lansingh, second ward; Johannis Jacobse Lansing, Johannis Gansevoort, third ward.

1752, April 28. Resolved and ordered by this board that the old Seal of this corporation now in the hands and possession of the present mayor be changed and altered, and that there be a new Seal in its place, which new Seal being now produced to this board and approved of by them, the same is ordered to be lodged in the hands of our present clerk in his office for the use and behoof of this corporation, and that the present now new Seal be henceforth our Seal and called, deemed and esteemed the Common Seal of this corporation untill it be altered and changed, and the aforesaid former Seal be null and void and dead in law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and that the same be hereafter no more called the Common Seal of this corporation, nor to be made use of as such to any act, instrument, deed or other writeing hereafter at the perill of the possessor thereof. And it is further Resolved and ordered that our present new Seal shall not be made use of to any writeing or instrument whatsoever, except it be in our Common Councill, and that a majority of our Common Councill shall have the direction to what instruments and purposes it shall be made use of and not otherwise.

1752, June 8. The mayor acquainted* this board that Peter Wraxell, Esq. had produced his majesty's Signet and Royal sign manuel to be town clerk of this city in the last mayor's court held for this city, did then and there require of the mayor and aldermen then present to qualify him there in said office; whereupon this board Resolved to send the mayor to said Wraxell, Esq. with the following answer, viz^t: That they desired some time to consult with men of more judgment in such matters as they could pretend, and that this board should then give him their answer; whereon it is further Resolved by this board to write to his Excellency the Honourable George Clinton, Esq. the following Letter, and that the mayor sign the same in behalf of this corporation of this city.

ALBANY, y^e 8 June, 1752.

To his Excellency the Hon'ble George Clinton, Esq. &c.

May it please your Excellency—After our Respects to your Excellency in the most Humblest manner presented, we beg leave and think it our duty to acquaint your Excellency that Peter Wraxell, Esq. appeared on the second instant in the mayor's court then held for this city before the mayor, recorder and some of the aldermen of this city then present, and did then and there produce to us in court his majesty's Signet and Royal sign manuel, unpresidented unto us, whereby the said Wraxell was constituted and appointed town clerk, clerk of the peace and clerk of the common pleas in the city and county of Albany, and to be the secretary or agent for the Government of New York to the Indians; the said commission appeared to us to be recorded in the Secretary's office of New York, in Lib: Comissions C 1, page 4, and also appeared thereon a certificate under Goldbrew Banjard, Esq's hand and seal, that said Wraxwell had taken the oaths appointed by law, and that he the said Banjard had administered unto him an oath for the full execution of the severall offices mentioned in said comission (except the office of town clerk of the city of Albany), further added in said certificate that the office was to be sworn by the Charter of the said city before the mayor and aldermen of the said city, and demanded in said mayor's court of the mayor, recorder and aldermen then and there present, to quallifye him in the office of town clerk, did the same in the court of sessions and common pleas. Whereupon the Common Council of this city met, and it was Resolved as it was a cause of great consiquence and unpresidented to them, and a town clerk already qualified in obedience to a former commission under the great Seal of our province of New York, to reserve our answer untill we had considered and consulted those of more experience and judgment in such matters as we can pretend to, for which reasons we hereby humbly apply to your Excellency to write us a few lines signifying to us therein how and in what manner your Excellency thinks best and safest for us and our Charter to act in this dubious and important affair, as we trust your Excellency and believe will give us better advise as we can expect of any other we can apply to. We conclude wishing your Excellency and all yours, health and prosperity, and are with profound respect,

Your Excellency obedient and most humble servants.

1752, June 16. Resolved by this board to give Mr. Smith three pound for his advise relating the swearing Mr. Wraxel in the office of town [clerk] for this city. Mr. Jacob Ten Eyck disbursed the said three pounds as also eighteen shillings to Joh's Seger, which is allowed to him by this board.

Resolved that an order be drawn upon the Treasurer for so much wheat to be paid to Jacob Ten Eyck for the £3:18, at the rate of 3s. 9d. per skiple, and to charge Joh's Seger account for 18s.

1752, June 25. The mayor produced a Letter from his Excellency the Governour, dated y^e 18 June, 1752, which is an answer to our Letter entered on record the 8 of this instant, June.

The mayor also produced Mr. Smith's advice under his hand what regular steps to be takein relateing the swearing of Mr. Wraxell in the office of town clerk, and according to a Resolve made the 16 of this instant, Mr. Jacob Ten Eyck has paid him three pound.

1752, June 29. Whereas Peter Wraxell, Esq. produced a commission to us, from his majesty, under his Royall Signet and sign manuel, dated at St. James on the 15th November, 1750, and delivered to us a copy thereof certified thereon it to be a true copy of his majesty's signet and sign manual, and the certificates thereon of the deputy secretary of the province of New York to be also true, the same is recorded in the Secretary's office of this province appointing him town clerk, clerk of the peace and clerk of the common pleas in this county and city during his majesty's pleasure, and also hath produced a certificate of Golbrew Bangar, deputy secretary of this province, that by virtue of his majesty's writ of didimus Potestatem to him directed, dated 23 day of October, 1746, to swear all officers then and thereafter to be appointed within the said province, he did on the 27th day of May last administer to the said Peter Wraxell, Esq. the usual State oaths and also the declaration as by law appointed and received his subscription to the said oaths and declaration, and that he did then also administer unto him an oath for the full execution of the several offices mentioned in his majesty's Signet and Royal sign manual, except the office of town clerk of the city of Albany, which officers is by the Charter of the said city to be sworn before the mayor and aldermen of the said city, as by the said certificate dated in the city of New York the twenty-seventh day of May, 1752, doth appear, and the said Peter Wraxell thereupon hath desired us to administer to him the oath required by law for the faithful execution of the said office of town clerk.

And whereas Harme Gansevoort, Esq. hath produced to us a commission in his majesty's name under the Seal of this province, bearing date the twenty-fifth day of September, 1850, appointing him town clerk, clerk of the peace and clerk of the common pleas in this city and county of Albany, to hold the said offices for so long a time as he shall behave himself well, and it appears to us that on or about the second day of October, 1750, he produced the said commission and was duly sworn faithfully to execute the said offices, and thereupon entred upon execution of the said office and took possession of the public records belonging to the offices and now hath possession of the same, and the said Harme Gansevoort still claimeth right by vertue of the said commission to hold the offices and the appurtenances pursuant to the said commission.

We therefore being willing to pay all due obedience to his majesty and the law, and by no means to prejudice the right of the contending parties, but to have them dispute each others title in due course of law, do therefore at the desire of the said Peter Wraxell, Esq., in conformity to what hath been already done by vertue of the didimus potestatem aforesaid, consent to administer to him the oath for the faithfull execution of the office of town clerk, at the same time by no means intending to convey or transfer any right thereby other than what is consistant with law or to prejudice the right of the said Harme Gansevoort.

June 29th, 1752, Peter Wraxell, Esq. was sworn in the said office of town clerk accordingly.

1752, June 30. Whereas Peter Wraxell, Esq. made application yesterday in Common Council and demanded an order from them on Mr. Harme Gansevoort for the records, whereupon it is Resolved by this board to inform themselves further, and that they can not as yet give any such order untill they have further advise, and that the said Gansevoort lays claim thereto by vertue of his commission.

Be it ordained by the mayor, recorder, aldermen and assistants of the city of Albany in Common Council convened, and it is hereby ordained by the authority of the same, that our new Seal which is called the common seal, now in the possession of the present clerk, shall and may be forthwith used to all instruments, writings whatsoever (excepting to such grants, leases, bonds, bills) relateing to this corporation, which are to be executed and sealed in Common Council. And be it ordained by the authority aforesaid, that there shall be paid to the mayor or aldermen three shillings for their fees and to the clerk for putting the seal to any instrument six shillings for the use of the corporation and one shilling for the clerk's own use. If used to a freedom, of every merchantt, trader, shopkeeper, the sum of thirty shillings current money of the colony of New York, and every handicraft tradesman the sum of twelve shillings and not under, to be remitted into the office for which the clark is accountable to the corporation.

1752, August 31. The mayor produced to this board a true copy of the minutes of the Governour and Council where in they desire the mayor, aldermen and comonalty of this city to have such repair done at present as is necessary for this winter season for y^e Sweg Garrison, and that the Governour and Council will strongly recommend to the Generall Assembly for the payment thereof. And be it Resolved by this board that a Letter be wrote to Mr. Holland, now commanding officer of the said Garrison, to procure so much bark to make the roof tyth, and that two glass windows be made and sent by the first oppertunity.

1752, Oct. 12. Resolved by this board that the order was given to Mr. Abraham Douw on the treasurer of New York, by a resolution made on the 26 day of February, 175^o/₁, is hereby countermanded, and that notice be given thereof to the said Abraham Douw.

And it is further Resolved by this board that a new order be given to Mr. James Stevenson on the treasurer of New York for £250, which is allowed by the Generall Assembly to this corporation, and his receipt shall be a sufficient discharge, and that the clerk shall sign the said order by vertue of this resolution.

Resolved by this board that y^e clerk write a Letter, directed to Harme Knickerbaker, Johannis de Wandelaer and Wouter Groesbeek, to consult with the rest of their neighbours to send a proper person to give an answer wether they will consent to leave the disputes for the rent and arrearages due to us to three indifferent persons, and make their answer on or before the 25 day of this instant, December, otherwise they may expect to be prosecuted, and that the clerk sign the same in behalf of the Common Council.

1753, Jan. 9. Resolved that an order be drawn upon the treasurer to deliver unto Joh's Seger all the paper money now in his custody belonging to this city to pay Jacob Ten Eyck part of a bond, and that y^e clerk sign y^e same in behalf of the Common Council.

By vertue of the above order, Joh's Seger delivered here in Common Council the sum of thirty pounds in paper bills.

Mr. James Stevenson has this day delivered in Common Council the sum of one hundred and ten pounds seven shillings, which being the remainder of the two hundred and fifty pounds which he has received by vertue of an order from the Common Council from y^e treasurer in York.

This board has this day in Common Council paid to Jacob Ten Eyck the sum of one hundred and twenty pounds, and also one pound ten shillings interest for y^e same, in part of a bond of two hundred pounds and have taken receipts upon the back of the said bond for the same.

This board sends by Joh's Seger one Bag with eighteen pounds twelve shillings in pennys and one five shilling bill, as also a note of hand from Marta Mynderse for twelve pounds, to deliver y^e treasurer and take a receipt for the same, which receipt is to be delivered to y^e mayor.

1753, April 6. Resolved that an order be drawn on the treasurer to pay Joh's Seger £3:2 in pennis and 3 skipple wheat, and charge his account for y^e same. To John Flansburgh 6s. for mending y^e Stocks.

1743, May 8. This board ordered the clerk to draw an order on the city treasurer to pay Elisabeth van Olinde the sum of three pounds ten shillings out of the seven pounds allowed to John Bell y^e 7th day of December, 1745, for being hangman and whipper and charge the same to his account; the clerk to sign in behalf of the Common Council.

ANCIENT BURIAL GROUND.

[It appears by the following document found among the common council papers, that the plot of ground used for sepulture on the west of Eagle street, between State and Lancaster streets, was appropriated to that purpose in 1789. The property owned by the Lutheran church on Park street was the site of their allotment as a burial place. Before this time each church had its grave yard adjacent to or near the church to which it belonged. The Dutch Reformed Church was at the foot of State street, and its grave yard was where the Middle Dutch Church now stands. The Lutheran Church was where the Centre Market stands and its grave yard adjoined on the south. The Episcopal was in State street opposite to Chapel street, and its grave yard near the present site of St. Peter's. The Presbyterian Church was near the corner of Grand and Hudson streets, and its grave yard adjoined on the east. The High Dutch Church, as it is here called, was between Patroon and Orange streets, west of Ten Broeck, with its grave yard adjoining. It was now proposed to have a common burial place, and the site recommended by the Committee was adopted by the common council.]

The committee appointed to locate a place for a common burying ground for the city report that on the east adjoining the lot on which the barracks were burned lately conveyed by the board to Barent Bleeker on which a vault has lately been made is five acres of ground very proper to be appropriated for that purpose being of excellent soil and a very gradual descent and on the Southern declivity of the hill, will never prove pernicious to the springs which supply the city with water and which is a very important objection to the present burying in the ground of the Episcopal and Lutheran churches the boundaries of which common burying ground we would locate as follows: bounded on the North by Princestreet, on the East by Duke street, on the South by Predeau street, on the West by the lot of Barent Bleeker in which the vault is made which ground contains five acres.

The committee further report that the most eastern acre of the above burying ground be granted to the corporation of the Presbyterian church, and the next acre to the Episcopal church, and the next acre to the Lutheran church, and the east half of the third acre be for the reformed high Dutch church, and the most western acre and remaining half acre to the Dutch church.

AGREEMENT WITH THE WHARF ASSOCIATION.

We the Trustees of the Associated Company of Proprietors of the Wharves and Quays in the City of Albany being fully empowered by the Articles of our Association to receive any additional Associates do hereby covenant and agree to and with the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of Albany, to receive into our Association, the Public Wharves belonging to the said City, for and during the term of our Association. Provided, that the rates of Wharfage shall be continued during the said term at one shilling and sixpence per Ton, and in the same proportion by the day; and we do in behalf of ourselves and Associates further covenant and agree to and with the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the said City of Albany, that we will pay to the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty, or their order, the full proportion of all monies which shall be collected for Wharfage and other Duties arising from or upon the said Wharves and Quays aforesaid, estimated according to the number of feet of Wharf owned by each of the said Associated Proprietors, deducting only the Expense of Collection and the rents of the Wharves leased by the said Proprietors from other persons. And we do further covenant and agree to and with the said Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty that the Books and Accounts of our Wharfinger shall be produced for Examination to the Mayor or Recorder at any time and as often as they shall think proper, or to the Chamberlain by their order. In witness whereof, we the Trustees of the Associated Company of Proprietors of Wharves and Quays in the City of Albany, have hereunto set our hands this twenty second day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred.

WARRANTY DEED OF A NEGRO SWEEP.

This Indenture made the fifth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-four, between the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of Albany, of the first part, and Abraham Bloodgood, of the City of Albany, Merchant, of the second part,

Witnesseth, that the said parties of the first part in consideration of the sum of eighty-five pounds of lawful money of the State of New York, to them in hand paid by the said party of the second part, at or before the en-sealing and delivery of these presents the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have bargained and sold, and by these presents do bargain and sell unto the said party of the second part, his executors, administrators and assigns, a certain Negro Man Slave being a Chimney Sweep, called Cæsar, which Negro, the said parties of the first, shall and will at all times hereafter warrant and defend to the said party of the second part, his Executors, Administrators and Assigns against the lawful claim of all persons whomsoever. And the said party of the second part, for himself, his Heirs, Executors and Administrators, doth covenant with the said parties of the first and their successors in manner following, that is to say, that the said party of the second part, his Executors and Administrators, shall and will during the life of the said Negro or so long as he remains, his or their slave cause him to work in the City of Albany as a chimney sweep, subject to the ordinances and resolutions of the parties of the first part and their successors in common council convened, and that the said party of the second part, his executors or administrators shall not at any time hereafter sell the said Negro, before he or they shall by writing directed and delivered to the said parties of the first or their successors in common council convened, have given them the refusal of the said Negro at the sum of eighty-five pounds or such less sum as he shall bona fide be offered for sale at. In witness whereof, I Abraham Yates, Junior, Mayor of the said City, have hereto set my hand and caused the seal of the said city, to be affixed the day and year first above written. And the said party of the second part hath hereto also set his hand and seal the same day and year.

OPENING OF FERRY STREET.

The Committee appointed to confer with a Committee of the Consistory of the Dutch Church, report that the Committee of the Dutch Church propose as follows :

1st. To lay out a Street of sixty feet wide in the Pasture from the house of Jacob Truax to the Ferry Lot on a straight line.

2d. To give up their ground as present occupie d as a street, leading from the Ferry House to Washington street, and to relinquish their right to a compensation therefore, this Corporation consenting that the consistory stop up the road as it formerly run through their Pasture to the South Ward and of the Ferry House.

3d. The Corporation of the Church to give as much ground in the rear of the lot on which the Ferry House stands, as to replace the quantity of ground of the said lot, appropriated to the use of the said street, leading from the East corner of the Ferry House to Washington street.

The Corporation of the Church to be permitted to remove the Bridge across the Treols Kill so far West as to bring it in the aforesaid sixty feet street, they to be at the expense of removing it.

21 Sept., 1789.

LEONARD GANSEVOORT, Jun.

JOHN PRICE,

HENRY TEN EYCK.

Resolved that the said Committee be authorised to accede to the above proposals on behalf of this Board, 21st Sept., 1789.

PROPOSALS FOR KEEPING THE WATCH, 1787.

Proposals from the Subscribers on which they will undertake and engage to perform in a Rotation their part of the Duty of Watchmen for the City of Albany.

That the said Watchmen be allowed and paid the sum of two shillings and six pence in cash for every night they may do duty as watchmen, which money or wages to be duly paid quarterly at the expiration of every three months.

That the Corporation make an allowance of six pence per night during the winter season for wood and candles, that is from the first of November to the last of April, and three pence a week during the rest of the year.

That the Corporation find a convenient room for a watch house in some convenient part of the City.

That the Corporation allow three shillings per night to be paid as aforesaid, the watchmen finding every thing but a room to watch in on the above conditions, we are willing to undertake and perform our part as watchmen.

COMMON COUNCIL ADDRESS TO THE PUBLIC ON THE GREAT FIRE OF 1793.

The Corporation of the City of Albany viewing the conduct of those who were present at the calamitous disaster occasioned by the late destructive fire in this city, while with pain and regret they recollect the inactivity and seeming unconcern of some few, can not pass by expressing their hearty and unfeigned thanks to all those who in that time of general anxiety and distress, generously and freely stepped forward and gave their aid to the relief of our fellow citizens, in subduing the destructive flames then surrounding us, while we express the gratitude of the citizens whom we represent to the one class, a contemplation of the other fills us with feelings too painful and disagreeable to be uttered, would the exertions of individuals be noticed with propriety, the tribute would gratefully be paid, the thanks of the corporation, however, are hereby publicly given to all those and particularly to our neighbours from the country and adjacent towns who so generously and opportunely give their needed aid, exertions and assistance. The conduct of the citizens and country people at the last fire in the stable of General Gansevoort in Maidens Lane, and their strenuous efforts, particularly demand and have the warmest thanks and hearty approbations of this Board. We must at the same time remark, that if a strict silence was observed by all except those who are intrusted with the command, and who will be at such times distinguished by a white sash, it would be the means of preventing the confusion which is too frequent on those melancholy occasions.

FAST DAY RECOMMENDED TO THE COMMON COUNCIL BY THE CLERGY, ON ACCOUNT OF THE FIRE OF 1797.

Gentlemen: Albany, August 9th, 1797.

Having taken into consideration the late dreadful calamity which has befallen our city, and convinced that the judgment of God and their procuring cause the sins of the community, call for deep humiliation and repentance, we have determined to observe next Wednesday as a day of fasting and humiliation and prayer. This purpose we thought fit to communicate to your worshipful body, in order that you might if it seemed good, recommend it to the citizens at large.

We remain, Gentlemen, with good consideration,
Your very humble servants,

ALEX. MILLER,	DAVID S. BOGART,

A CORPORATION BILL FOR PUNCH.

On the 3d of Sept. 1782, Hugh Denniston, who kept a noted tavern in Green street, furnished certain persons for the benefit of the city, with the following articles :

9 Boals of Punch.....	£1 16 0
1 Mug of Beer.....	0 0 9
1 Boal of Grog for Sager.....	0 2 0

The Mayor was requested to pay the bill out of the corporation money. The following is a facsimile of the signature of the person who drank the two shilling boal of grog.

GEOLOGY OF ALBANY COUNTY.

Some Remarks respecting a point in the Geology of Albany County, submitted to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

BY HENRY R. SCHOOLCRAFT.

The attention of the writer was invited, at an early day, in the area of his nativity, to the mineralogical interest, revealed by the heavy dust deposits of the county. These led him to visit the deep cutting of its streams, which revealed agencies of a prominent kind, which must have had general power of action on the structure of plains and valleys; but which action had long ceased, and exercised but little present influence. Such action came to be regarded, as soon as we got books, as geological.

In offering a few remarks on a feature in the stratification of a part of the country familiar to him from early days, embarrassment is felt in not having recently revisited the localities referred to. What is said therefore, is, to some extent, the reminiscence of past years. Some apology may, indeed, be due for calling attention to the facts at all, under the circumstances; nor should he do so, at a time when there are so many eminent and zealous observers in the field, whose studies are directed to geological phenomena, were the facts I am about to name, of such a character, on the scenic surface of the country, as to be likely to attract general notice.

The most prominent feature of the county is the range of the Helderbergs, an off-shoot of the Catskill mountains. This highest range divides the county into two general levels of unequal width, characterized as being above or below that elevation. The lower level is distinguished for nothing, on the surface, of so striking a character as its diluvial and drift deposits of arable layers, clays, sands, analogic pebbles and boulders. The rock strata, as generally denoted by geologists, and more particularly described by Mr. Hall, are, beginning at the apex of the Helderberg, chert limestone, neutral colored sandstones, fossiliferous limestone, graywacke, sedimentary, horizontal slate, or graywacke slate, and argillite. This stratification, first noticed, it is believed, by the late Dr. T. Romeyn Beck, is exposed to view wherever the streams of the county have worked their beds immediately into it.

The city of Albany rests on the edges and top of the terraceous blue clays and their associated sand strata. I do not know the height of the foundation of the Capitol, above the Hudson river. It can not be less than 140 feet, and the stiff escarpment of the clay beds cut down, at this point, preparatory to the building of the Capitol, were probably 18 or 20 feet. This terraceous clay is covered with a mantel or plateau of diluvial sand, which at the assumed elevation, extends northwestwardly from the Hudson to the valley of the Mohawk. It is sixteen miles from river to river, by about half the distance in breadth, where it is merged in the arable uplands. The area of this sand plain, sometimes called the Honicroisa tract, can not be less than one hundred and twenty square miles. It is not all equally arid, equally barren and unfit for every species of agriculture; but it is, perhaps, to the impeachment of our agricultural acumen, a tract of remarkable dimensions, and that lying in the heart of the state, abstracted from the area of husbandry. Originally covered with a magnificent forest of the pinus resinosa and shrubbery peculiar to arenaceous plains, the surface is now well nigh denuded: the winds have insinuated into the sides of hills, creating a species of dunes.

Across this plain, in their journeys from the West, laid the ancient path of the Iroquois, who, impressed by its peculiarities of soil and growth, whichever way they crossed it, called it, in their expressive language, the Skenektadea *, a term which has been applied, with

* The elements of this compound term are the word ske, meaning through or among; Nek, a pine tree; ta or dah, a formation of rock or hard soil, and dea, a plain or valley. The latter termination is heard in Tahopatatea, the Iroquois name of the Hudson in Canada, &c.

modifications, at successive periods, to each of the cities situated on its eastern and western verge.

This mantle of sand rests, throughout its entire extent, upon the terraceous blue capitoline clay. Rains and atmospheric moisture speedily sink through it, till arrested by its impervious aluminous basis. The effect of this arrangement has been to convert the strata into a vast filtering apparatus, by which the surface waters are at the same time, purified and cooled, and find their outlet, on the surface of the clay beds, into the nearest streams. But this filtering process has had another striking effect on the mineral physiognomy of the central and southeastern parts of the county. The trickling of springs on the line of the aluminous strata, has carried along the quartzose grains of sand, causing the superincumbent beds to cave in. The result of this action has been to cut up the surface of the plains into gulfs, gorges and minor valleys. By throwing the arenaceous on the clay beds, a new soil is produced very favorable to the growth of deciduous trees. These gorges and sub-valleys are therefore filled with hard wood species, while the arid and dry plains bear only pines. They furnish cool retreats for every species of animated nature, during the heats of the day, and it is from the close and vigorous growth of the foliage, in these numerous gorges, that the wolf still maintains his position, and defies the farmer and his sheep-folds from these inaccessible positions.

It is by the union of several of the outlets of these spring gorges of the pine plains, that the Hunger kill is formed. Small in its volume, it is of unsurpassed purity and unfailing supply and flows with a force sufficient to sink its channel through the deep clay stratum, and enter its recipient, the Tawasentha, or Norman's kill, through the boulder and pebble drift. Like other streams of primary or secondary importance, the banks of this stream—the ample space left for its outflow, and the elevation of its bordering hills, force the mind, on one of two conclusions, either that fluvial action was, at former periods of comparatively immense force, or, that the time consumed by the present feeble action on the earth's surface must have been very great. Feeble as the action of the stream is, it has been sufficient to reveal a formation of red sandstone, which, apparently, underlies the under Helderberg series of graywacke and slates, and the upper series of fossiliferous limestone, and its superimposed porous and marly horizontal new sandstones.

This disclosure was made in a depressed part of the Honger kill valley, in the course of excavations made in the heavy embankment constructed by the Western turnpike company, in crossing that valley. The rock, in colors and grain, resembles the Piermont or Haverstraw sandstones of the lower Hudson. It is perhaps, characteristically less quartzose and compact. It is also less apyrous, as was tested by placing a massive block, in the high heat of a glass burner. Another locality of the same rock, penetrates through the soil, in the same valley, at a higher point. * These localities are at the now decayed manufacturing village at Hamilton, within about a mile from the entrance of the stream into the Norman's kill, or Tawasentha. Geologically, but not topographically, the Honger kill sandstone underlies the state.

The deepest cutting into the geological column of the county, is made by the Tawasentha. This stream in its western fork, the Roga or Mad creek, originates on the Helderberg range. In passing through the series of newer sandstones and limestones and graywackes it lays bare the succession of rocks, and hurries with a rapid channel to its junction, with the Swarte, or Black, and the Tiergæa, or north-east branch. Reinforced by these tributaries, it sweeps its way through the alluvial coverings, for the Hudson. In its progress it sinks its level quite through the graywacke, and deeply into the Tawasentha slate, which is a sedimentary or graywacke slate.

* This latter locality was pointed out to me, as an anomaly, by the late John Schoolcraft, Jr., Esq., of Hamilton Village, or Guilderland.

At the rapids of the Globe mills, or French's and other parts of Guilderland, this rock stands in perpendicular facades, from eighty to, perhaps, a hundred and twenty feet high. They are least prominent opposite the Boulder banks at Mulberry hill, near the entrance of the Honger kill. At lower points of its course, the valley assumes a greater expansion ; and its precipices have suffered more from the degradations of elemental action. The river finally enters the Hudson, two miles south of the city, between the ancient Iroquois cemetery of Tawasentha * and Kiddenhooghten.

* This curious natural mound, or hillock, is connected with the diluvial formation, by a narrow rock, or peninsula. It was a spot sacred to sepulture, from the earliest time ; and furnished them a natural cognomen for the stream. There is no object of higher antiquarian interest in the vicinity, and it is worthy of municipal care.

THE CITY'S ANCIENT RAVINES.

Three considerable streams of water, which anciently traversed the city, have within the memory of many inhabitants, been converted into sewers, namely, the Foxen kill, the Rutten kill and the Bever kill. The Foxen kill, when the city was first settled, and for a long time after, afforded abundance of fish. It ran outside of the stockades, which for a great many years formed the northern boundary of the city. It is but little more than a quarter of a century since it was crossed by a bridge in North Pearl street, near Orange.

The Rutten kill was a lesser stream, having its source above Lark street, but which sent down a formidable volume of water in times of freshet. The inhabitants of the upper end of Beaver street, have an inkling of what it may have been when they are refreshed by a heavy rain storm. This also was a never-failing brook, stored with fish, and was the only one that came within the old city walls. Passing down the Hudson street ravine, it crossed Pearl street where the Congregational church stands, and entered the river a few feet below State street. In the oldest map of the city 1676, (see Annals vol. iv, p. 200), a brug marks the spot where it crossed the street now called Broadway. The city records frequently allude to these bridges. In January, 1701, we find the following entry:

“It is further concluded since ye Bridges by Coll. Schuyler’s doth decay, that Mr. Roseboom, Hendrik Oothout and Harpert Jacobse vizite ye same, and make returne ye next court what is required to be repaired.”

A meeting was held on the next day, when the following report was made:

“Relating the bridge at Coll. Schuyler’s, ye gentlemen yesterday appointed to vizite ye same do return that it requires to be repaired with one oak logg, of 17 foot, 12 inches square; four posts, 10 foot, 10 inches square; two pine loggs of 10 foot, 1 foot square; three ditto 17 foot apiece; three ditto of 20 foot; and one of 37 foot."

In 1706 the following entry was made in the common council minutes relating to another of these bridges:

"The petition of William Hogen relating ye bridge by ye Lutheran church being much out of repair desyreing that ye Common Councill will take ye same into there wise consideration yt ye Bridge be repaired. It is

"Resolved that in convenient time ye same shall be made sufficient to passe and repasse without danger."

The Lutheran church alluded to occupied the ground of the Market house in South Pearl street, and its burial ground was the site of the vegetable market adjoining. Pearl Street, for a century after this, was but a lane, many persons now living remembering when a gate swung across it at State street.

On the 13th April, 1706, the following record was made in the common council minutes:

"As to ye Bridge towards ye Lutheriaen church, Mr. Hansen is agreed to make a sufficient and strong new bridge, laid with good plank two inches thick, wherefore he is to receive ye £5: 10 due from Evert Janse."

Two years later we find the following entry:

"The Commonalty being informed yt ye Bridge over ye Ruten kill in ye street lately known by ye name of ye ffuddamart is very much out of repair & decade, doe therefore order yt ye sd Bridge shall be made anew and yt Mr. Robt. Livingston & Coenraet Ten Eyk are appointed to see ye sd bridge made upon ye Citty charges."

"September 28. This day Mr. Robt. Livingston. Jun. & Conraet ten Eyk brought in their acct of makeing of ye Bridge over ye Ruten kill in ye street calld ye fodde mart, amounting in all after £2: 9: is deducted, wh is payd to them £7: 14: 4½ wh is approved of by ye Commonalty & ordered yt those persons are to have credt in ye Citty book for what there is due to them."

Whether the name of this creek is derived from rats, as some suppose, it is infested with myriads of the lusti-est specimens of that vermin to this day. The creek is now a sewer throughout its entire length. The grading of the ravine which it traversed was nearly completed in 1847, from Hawk to Lark street, and from Lydius to State. So late as 1827 it was an unbroken waste. Eagle street then extended no farther than the Lancaster School, now the Medical College. There were not a dozen buildings even on Lydius street from Pearl to Lark. When the unfortunate Strang was executed in its grassy valley in the above mentioned year, its green hills on either side were darkened by a multitude numbering full thirty thousand. The clay banks on Lydius street furnished the city with bricks for a great number of years. During a period of about three years, two hundred and fifty men and sixty teams were employed upon the work of grading and filling this large area. The ravine, three hundred feet broad and fifty feet deep received the lofty banks upon its borders, and was raised to a convenient grade, whereby a large tract was reclaimed for habitation, that had been useless except for brick kilns, or basins where water gathered, furnishing reservoirs for bathing and fishing to truant boys. Not less than six hundred thousand yards excavation was made in blue clay, and an equal amount of filling was done by one contractor. By this improvement Hudson street has become the most inviting avenue to the city, and comely blocks of dwellings already adorn most of the streets which intersect the area of the ancient Rutten kill.

SCRAPS FROM THE DUTCH RECORDS.

The fort at Albany, the first Fort Orange, was built in 1614 by Hendrik Christianse. There is a dispute where it was situated, although it is usually located on the Island at the lower end of the city.

Barent Van Slechtenhorst, agent for the patroon, having quarreled with Gov. Stuyvessant about a question of jurisdiction, was arrested in 1652 and confined at New Amsterdam several months.

There was a great mortality of cattle here in 1661.

Also very high water Oct. 11 of the same year.

Brick imported from Holland sold in 1661 for $4.16 a thousand, payable in beaver skins.

The small pox produced great mortality at this place in 1663.

In the oath of allegiance taken by the officers of government, they swore to "maintain the reformed religion in conformity to the word of God and the decrees of the synod of Dordrecht."

As early as 1628 frequent mention is made of blacks owned as slaves in the colony.

The custom of sons adopting the Christian names of their fathers for their own surnames, came into use as early as 1638, and leads to a good deal of confusion. Thus Gerrit, the son of Wolfert Gerritsen, was known as Gerrit Wolfertsen—that is, Gerrit the son of Wolfert.

Seven morgens of land were equal to fifteen acres.

When two fought with knives, a custom of frequent occurrence at this time, the survivor was held guilty of murder if he stabbed his antagonist and death ensued; but only of manslaughter if he cut or slashed him. In 1642 fighting with knives was wholly prohibited.

A beaver skin was worth 2s 6d in 1641.

An ordinance was passed in 1645 forbidding the sale of powder and ball to the Indians on pain of death.

The trial of an appeal from the court in Rensselaerwyk was held before the governor and council in 1645.

The salary of the Rev. Gideon Schaats, minister at Fort Orange, was 1200 guilders, about $480.

Beaver skins were not to be sold at Boston, 1663.

Claverack received its name in 1664.

About the same time a sloop was permitted to sail every Monday from New Amsterdam to Fort Orange, provided that not more than six passengers at a time be allowed to go in her.

Although the name Ten Broek occurs so frequently in the very entertaining history of New York by Knickerbocker, yet no mention is made of such a family in the Dutch records. It is probable, therefore, that they emigrated to this country after 1664. The name Hardenbroek is found in the records.

MACAULEY'S ACCOUNT OF ALBANY.

In the year 1610 the Dutch East India company sent hither one ship for the purpose of trading with the natives. Ships belonging to the same company visited New York bay and Hudson's river successively, in the years 1611, 1612, and 1613, but no attempt was made at settlement.

The States General of the Netherlands, in the early part of the year 1614, granted a patent to sundry merchants for an exclusive trade on Hudson's river. In the grant the country was styled New Netherlands. The company the same year built a fort and trading house on an island in the river, about half a mile below where the city of Albany now stands. Henry Christiaens was entrusted with the command. This seems to have been the first establishment formed by the Dutch in the New Netherlands. It was judiciously selected for defence against savages. The island at present is called Dunn's island, and contains about seventy acres of land. It is near the west side of the river. It is alluvial and very fertile, being mostly subject to annual inundations. The land was cleared and under cultivation. The Mohawks every year planted it with corn. On this island they had a small village. Dunn's island now contains one house.

Towards the latter part of the same year the company erected another small fort and a trading house at the southerly end of Manhattan island. The fort occupied a part of the battery, and some of the grounds adjoining it on the north. To this establishment they gave the name of New Amsterdam. Both were enclosed with stockadoes and mounted with some small pieces of cannon. The Mohawks, Mohiccons, &c. gave to the Dutch a very friendly reception. They sold them furs and provisions, and treated them like brethren. They imagined that the residence of these strangers would be only temporary.

In 1615 the company constructed a small fort at the mouth of Norman's kill, about a mile and a half southerly of the fort on Dunn's island. The place where the city of Albany stands and the adjoining parts, the Mohawks called Schaunaughtada, that is, a place beyond, on the other side, or over the plains. The designation was, in respect to Ohnowalagantle, on the river Mohawk or Canneogahakalononitade. At the time the Dutch arrived several small bands of Mohawks resided on the west bank of the Hudson, and on the islands in that stream. The eastern bank of that river was occupied by bands of the Moheakanneews. The river was the boundary between those hostile tribes. Violent disputes then existed between the members living on its banks in relation to the islands. The Hudson was called by the Mohawks Cahohatatea, and by the Lenni Lenape, Mahackanegtuck. To Schaunaughtada the Dutch first bestowed the appellation of Aurania, and then Beverwyck.

The company in 1618 built a redoubt at the Kingston landing, and established a post at Esopus, now Kingston, in the county of Ulster. This place is on the south side of Esopus creek, and two miles west of the landing. The banks of the Hudson below Catskill, and those of Walkill and Rondout rivers, and of Esopus creek, were inhabited by bands of the Mahiccons and Mohickanders, or Wabingas. The Mahiccons and Wabingas belonged to the confederacy of the Lenni Lenape, and were kindred tribes.

Between the years 1616 and 1620, about twenty persons belonging to the company went from the fort on Dunn's island, below Albany, to Ohnowalagantle, now Schenectady, where they entered into a compact with the Mohawks, from whom they bought some land on which they erected a trading house. This they surrounded with pickets and fortified. Then Ohnowalagantle was a considerable town, and contained several villages and hamlets. The principal village stood within the bounds of the present city. The rich and beautiful intervale lands on the Mohawk, around the city, were mostly cleared and cultivated. On these the Mohawks grew corn, beans, and squashes, which in part afforded them subsistence. According to tradition, the village of Ohnowalagantle occupied the site of Connughariegugharie, the ancient capital of the Mohawks. The same tradition informs us that it was abandoned some ages anterior to the colonization, and that Icanderago, at the mouth of Schoharie creek, was selected for the new capital. We have no certain information in respect to the number of the Mohawks residing at Ohnowalagantle when the Dutch came to it. According to some accounts there were eight hundred fighting men, and according to others less. The same accounts inform us that three hundred warriors lived upon the lands which have since been included in one farm. Without attempting to reconcile these jarring accounts, we may reasonably infer that the numbers were considerable.

The States General of the Netherlands, in the year 1621, made a grant of the whole country to the Dutch West India company. In 1623 this company built fort Orange on the west side of the Hudson, about half a mile above Dunn's island. A village soon rose in its vicinity. Fort Orange stood in the southeasterly quarter of the city of Albany.

When the Dutch arrived at Albany, violent controversies existed between the Moheakannews and Mohawks, about the alluvial lands on the east side of the Hudson, and some of the islands in the river. To end these controversies, the commander of fort Orange invited the hostile chiefs into the fort, and persuaded them to bury the hatchet.

In the beginning of August, 1678, Colonel Dongan met the Agoneasean chiefs at Albany, and made a speech to them. He advised them not to treat with the French, without consulting him; not to kill their prisoners, but to exchange them for their own people; to dispatch messengers to the Indians, with whom they were then at war, and propose peace, and bury the tomahawk ; telling them at the same time, that whatever things they wanted hereafter, the English would let them have, upon cheaper terms than the French.

Colonel Dongan, in his interview with the Aganuschionian chiefs at Albany, seems to have acted with an overheated zeal in rousing the passions of this ferocious people against the French. Probably not being much acquainted with the savage character, he did not foresee the consequences. The innocent inhabitants of Canada and New York soon became the sufferers.

De Callieres, who went to France in 1688, projected a scheme for the reduction of the province of New York, but the plan miscarried.

The force demanded for this enterprize was one thousand three hundred regulars, and three hundred Canadians. Albany was said to contain only three hundred inhabitants, and to be fortified by an inclosure of stockadoes, and a little fort with four bastions, and that it contained but one hundred and fifty soldiers. New York was represented to contain about four thousand persons.

In 1689, the count de Frontenac, the governor of Canada, proposed peace to the Aganuschioni who called a grand council at Onondaga. The chiefs, from the several tribes, convened to the number of eighty, about the 22d of January, 1690. The people of Albany were notified but did not attend. Sadekanaghtie an Onondaga chief, opened the conference. According to the French accounts, the whole was managed with great art and formality, and concluded in showing a disposition to make peace without perfecting it.

Among other measures to detach the Agoneaseah from the British interest, and to raise the depressed spirit of the Canadians, count de Frontenac thought proper to send out several parties against the English colonies. D'Aillebout, de Mantel and Le Moyne, commanded one against Schenectady, consisting of about two hundred French, and fifty Mohawks belonging to the Caughnawaga clan.

The people at Schenectady, though they had been informed of the designs of the enemy, were in the greatest security; imagining it impossible for any men to march several hundred miles in the midst of winter, through the snow, bearing their provisions on their backs.

After a march of twenty-two days, the enemy reached the vicinity of Schenectady, on the 8th of February, 1690, and were reduced to such straits that they thought of surrendering themselves prisoners of war. But their scouts, who were a day or two in the village, returned with such favorable accounts of the absolute security of the people, that they determined on the attack. They entered on Saturday night, about eleven o'clock, at the gates, which were found unshut; and that every house might be invested at the same time, divided themselves into small parties of six or seven men. The inhabitants were in a profound sleep, and unalarmed till their doors were broke open. Before they were risen from their beds the enemy entered and began the work of death. The whole village was instantly in a blaze. Sixty persons were killed, and twenty-seven carried into captivity. The rest fled, naked, towards Albany, through a deep snow, which fell that night in a terrible storm; and twenty-five of these fugitives lost their limbs in the flight through the severity of the cold.

The news of this dreadful tragedy reached Albany about break of day. A universal dread seized the inhabitants. A party of horse was immediately dispatched to Schenectady. The enemy, in the mean time, pillaged the town till noon the next day; and then went off with their plunder, and about forty of the best horses. The rest, with all the cattle they could find, lay slaughtered in the streets. Several women and children were released, at the instance of Capt. Glen, on the score of his wife's civilities to certain French captives, in the time of Col. Dongan.

A party of Albanians and Mohawks pursued the enemy in his retreat and either killed or captivated five and twenty.

The taking and burning of Schenectady had such an effect upon the people of Albany, that they were almost on the point of abandoning it.

In this state, bordering upon despair, several of the Mohawk chiefs arrived, and urged them to stay. They addressed them affectionately, recommended a union of the colonies, and a perseverance in the war. In their native simplicity they say, "The French have broken open our house at both ends; formerly in the Seneca country, and now here." This expression had reference to entering both ends of their country.

The French, in this expedition, set out from Chambly, on Sorel, and proceeded up lake Champlain to Wood creek, or the head of South bay, from whence they crossed over to the Hudson, at Sandy Hill, and then went down that river on the ice to Saratoga. Here they left it, and marched through the woods to Schenectady. Most of the way was on the ice. The advance went forward on snow shoes. The main followed their trail. Incredible were the hardships suffered by this veteran band.

This summer, 1691, Major Schuyler with some volunteers, and a party of Mohawks, passed through lake Champlain, and made an irruption into Canada, and devastated some of the French settlements on the Sorel. M. de Callieres, the governor of Montreal, to oppose him, collected a small army, and encamped at La Prairie. Several skirmishes took place between the hostile parties, and in these, it is said, that Schuyler slew about three hundred of the enemy, a number which exceeded that of his own force, a thing not at all likely. Major Schuyler's design in this incursion, was to reanimate the Mohawks, and preserve their enmity against the French. They accordingly, with the other members of the nation, continued their hostilities, making numerous inroads into Canada, and keeping the country in constant alarm.

Col. Benjamin Fletcher arrived with the commission of Governor, on the 29th of August, 1692.

Fletcher was brave, active, passionate, bigoted, and avaricious, and withal of inconsiderable talents. In the autumn after his arrival he repaired to Albany, where he had an interview with the Agoneasean chiefs, and confirmed the old league.

While at Albany he became acquainted with Major Schuyler, a man of talents, enterprise and courage. No person then in the province, understood the state of our affairs with the Agoneaseah better than him. He had so great an influence over them that whatever he recommended or disapproved had the force of a law. This influence over them was supported, as it had been obtained, by repeated offices of kindness, and his singular bravery and activity in the defence of his country. These qualifications, so rarely to be found in a single individual, rendered him singularly necessary, both to the province and the governor. Fletcher, who possessed some sagacity, perceived that such a man would be highly useful, not only for himself, as an adviser, but for the country, took him into confidence, and made him one of the council. Under the tutelage of Major Schuyler, the governor became daily more and more conversant with the Agoneasean concerns: his constant application to which procured and preserved him a reputation and influence in the colony.

The indefatigable and gallant count de Frontenac, finding that all his measures for accomplishing a peace with the Agoneaseah had proved abortive, was now meditating a blow upon the Mohawks. He accordingly collected six or seven hundred French, Adirondacks, and Caughnawagas, and supplied them with every thing necessary for a winter's campaign. They set out from Montreal, on the 15th day of January, 1693, and proceeded by the way of lake Champlain; and after a march attended with incredible hardships, they passed by Schenectady on the 6th of February, and that night took five men, and some women and children, at the first castle of the Mohawks. They met with the same success at the second castle, the Mohawks being in perfect security, and many of them at Schenectady. At the third they found about forty men engaged in a war dance, preparatory to going out on some enterprise the next day. Upon their entering the castle a conflict ensued in which the French lost some men. Three hundred of the Mohawks were made captives in this expedition.

The Mohawks were greatly enraged at the people of Schenectady, because, they had not given them notice of the enemy's approach, nor any assistance. But this was atoned for by the succors from Albany. Colonel Schuyler upon hearing of their misfortunes, immediately put himself at the head of two hundred volunteers, and went out against the enemy. On the fifteenth of February, he was joined by three hundred Mohawks badly armed. With these forces, he went in pursuit of the enemy, whom he fell in with, on the seventeenth, when some skirmishes ensued. The French being apprehensive that colonel Schuyler would receive a reinforcement from Albany, continued their retreat on the eighteenth. Indeed this apprehension was well founded; for captain Syms arrived the next day with eighty men. Colonel Schuyler then resumed the pursuit; but did not think it advisable to provoke an attack. When the French had reached the north branch of Hudson's river, it is said, that a cake of ice served them to cross over, being open on both sides, and also above and below.

The frost was now extremely severe, and the Mohawks being fearful of an engagement, dissuaded Colonel Schuyler from pursuing them, and he returned.

On the tenth of April, 1693, six thousand pounds were voted for the payment of three hundred men, to be employed in reinforcing the frontier posts, in the then county of Albany.

In 1701, the British crown gave two thousand pounds for the defence of Albany and Schenectady.

Great were the struggles, at the ensuing election, between the Leislerians and the Anti-Leislerians, but the former prevailed.

Among the opposers of Leisler there was a Mr. Livington. The measures of the convention, at Albany, had been very much directed by his advice, and he was now obnoxious to his adversaries, not only on these accounts but because he was a man of sense and resolution, two qualifications rarely to be found united in one person at that day. His intimacy with the late earl had till that time been his defence against the rage of the party which he had formerly opposed. They were, therefore, now bent upon his destruction. Several charges were made against him which were false; and it was proposed to pass a law to confiscate his estate. One of the charges was his refusing to account for moneys received as commissioner of excise. He could not account because his opponents had, previous to making the charge, drawn out of his hands the books and vouchers, which they declined allowing him access to.

In 1709, a road was opened by the colonial troops from fort Anne to White Hall, near the head of lake Champlain.

The forces under general Winthrop, in 1690, had made a road from the upper part of Saratoga, to the place where fort Anne was built.

Colonel Schuyler was dispatched with five of the Agoneasean chiefs to England, with an address. No man at this time was better calculated for this design, than colonel Schuyler. He had been born and brought up at Albany, then the seat of the Indian trade, and influence. He was perfectly acquainted with the manners, customs, and character of the Indians. His influence with the Agoneaseah was greater than that of any other man. Whenever their chiefs came to Albany, he invited them to entertainments at his house. It was in this way, that he had acquired an ascendancy over them.

Colonel Schuyler's arrival in England with the Agoneasean chiefs excited considerable notice. Wherever he went the people collected in crowds.

The peers, lords, and commons, desired to see them. The queen and her court were no less solicitous.

The court of St. James was then in mourning. The chiefs were therefore dressed in mourning, and had an audience with her majesty. Sir Charles Cotterel, master of the ceremonies, conducted them from their quarters to the court, where they were introduced by the lord Chamberlain, into the royal presence. Their speech on the 19th of April, 1710, is preserved by Oldmixon.

The legislature, on the twenty-fourth of June, 1719, voted a sum of money to construct a bridge over Kinderhook creek, in the county of Albany. The place located for this bridge, was close by the village of Kinderhook in Columbia county.

In the same law, provision was made for altering some roads in the province. Claverack was settled about the same time that Kinderhook was. The first settlers at the latter place were a few Swedish families. The Dutch and English came afterwards.

William Burnet, Esq. superseded colonel Schuyler, the president, as governor of the province, on the 17th of September, 1720.

The year 1722 was remarkable for a congress of several governors and commissioners at Albany. The ancient friendship with the Agoneaseah was renewed at the same time. Mr. Burnet prevailed upon them to send a message to the Eastern Indians, threatening them with a war, unless they concluded a peace with the colonies of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, which were greatly harrassed by their frequent irruptions.

Albany was at this time a great mart for fur. In July, 1723, the house appropriated a sum to defray the expense of two sheds, which had been erected for the accommodation of the Agoneaseah and other Indians, who came there to vend their skins.

In 1724, provision was made for fortifying Albany. In an act passed by the assembly, July 24th, Claverack is described as a precinct in the manor of Rensselaerwick. The Dutch then occupied the flats along Claverack creek.

From an act of the same date, it appears that Schoharie was then called a precinct. The act provided for laying out, and opening a road therein. Schoharie was settled in 1713, by the Germans. Some Dutch families seated themselves there soon afterwards.

In March, 1744, war broke out between England and France. Three thousand two hundred pounds were voted for placing the frontier posts in attitudes of defence; besides an additional sum for the works at Albany.

The English ministry, in the early part of the year 1745, instructed the governor of New York, to carry the war into Canada.

Military sentinels were established in the city and county of Albany, in order to sound the alarm, in case the enemy should send marauding parties into the province. England and France were now preparing to prosecute the war with vigor. The colonies of both countries were also making preparations.

Intelligence had found its way into the province, that the French intended to invade it from Canada, with fifteen hundred veterans, and one hundred Indians. This occasioned considerable alarm. Colonel Schuyler, and Major Collins, who commanded a body of provincials then at Saratoga, were obliged to suspend the construction of six block-houses, which they had begun to make, in consequence of the assaults of the Indians in the employment of France, on their men. These parties in a measure intercepted the supplies of men and provisions, going to Saratoga.

Murders were often committed by the enemy, within a few miles of Albany. Two hundred men were drafted to increase and strengthen the garrisons at the latter place and Schenectady. These were drafted from the militia of Suffolk, Queens, Westchester, Dutchess, Ulster, and Orange. The settlements of Saratoga and Hoosack, were broken up, and the inhabitants retired either to Albany, or those parts near it. Most of the houses were burnt by the Indians, and the districts entirely devastated; and no inconsiderable number of the people were killed, or carried away into captivity.

The assembly, in the month of February, 1746, passed a law giving rewards for such scalps, and prisoners of the enemy, as should be taken. In palliation for the enactment of such a law, the framers alleged it was retaliatory, and made to induce the enemy to conduct the war with more humanity on their part.

In the early part of this year, the enemy and their Indians had become so emboldened with success, that small marauding parties came frequently in the very vicinity of Albany, and there were not instances wanting of their entering the suburbs at night, and carrying off persons.

Thirteen thousand pounds were voted for the defence of the province.

The borders of the province, notwithstanding the measures adopted by government for their defence, continued to be exposed to all the horrors of savage warfare. In May, several persons were murdered hard by Schenectady, and some buildings burnt.

The border inhabitants were filled with consternation. In general, the settlements were deserted, the people having retired to the block-houses, and other places of security. To guard against the inroads and attacks of the enemy, was impracticable, on account of the extent and insular positions of the settlements. All the men in the province would have been inadequate to have completely protected the county of Albany.

Those of Schenectady, Caughnawaga, Esopus, and Minisink, were nearly in a like condition. Even Kinderhook, Claverack, and Poughkeepsie, although on the east side of the Hudson, were not exempt from danger. A thick forest extended all the way from Kinderhook to the St. Lawrence. The forsaken settlement at Hoosack, scarcely formed a highway across it.

An idea may be formed of the feebleness of the settlements of Claverack and Kinderhook, from the consideration that there was only one block-house at each place. Under these alarming circumstances, when destruction menaced the interior and remote parts of the province; several spirited individuals came forward and volunteered their services. Among these was a Mr. Abraham Glen of Schenectady, who headed one hundred volunteers.

The assembly, among the laws which it enacted, passed one whereby ship carpenters, house carpenters, joiners, sawyers, and all artificers, and laborers, were arbitrarily pressed into the public service; and also horses, wagons, and all other things which could tend to the invasion, were placed at the discretion of the officers entrusted with the management of the enterprise. The county of Albany alone had to furnish three hundred men.

The city of Albany in the summer of this year, was visited by a contagious disease, which swept away no inconsiderable number of its inhabitants. The Agoneaseah then encamped in its environs, were not exempt from the same disease, which proved fatal to many, and occasioned the governor to send the survivors home.

In 1747, some differences occurred between the assembly and the governor in respect to the provincial troops. From it, we learn that there were four companies of men stationed at Halfmoon; two at Schaghtikoke; three at Saratoga; three at Connestigunc; two at Schenectady; one at fort Hunter; and one between that place and Schenectady. In addition to these, there were men stationed at Kinderhook, Schoharie, Caughnawaga, Stone Arabia, Canojoharie, and Germanflats; Ulster and Orange had also some small garrisons. The main body of the provincial forces was stationed at Albany.

The Indians of the enemy, this year, waylaid a party of men belonging to Schenectady, who went out for timber, and killed thirty-nine. The place where these men fell, is about four miles north-north-west of the city, in the town of Glenville.

On the eighth of April, 1748, the assembly passed a law, which authorized the inhabitants of Schenectady, to construct two block-houses for its defence.

The treaty of peace concluded between Great Britain and France, on the seventh of October, 1747, put an end to the war; but the Indians did not cease their hostilities till some time in the year 1749.

Albany was settled in the year 1614, by some Hollanders, and very soon after New York, but it was not erected into a county till the first of November, 1683. It is bounded eastwardly by the Hudson, southwardly by Greene, westwardly by Schoharie, and northwardly by Schenectady and Saratoga; the outlines of this county have enough of uniformity. Its greatest length from east to west is about twenty-four miles, and its greatest breadth from north to south is twenty-two. After making some small deductions from its length and breadth, as given, it will be found to contain about three hundred and nine thousand seven hundred and sixty acres of land, or four hundred and eighty-four square miles. The number of acres under improvement, in 1825, was one hundred and ninety thousand five hundred, very nearly two-thirds of the whole. The county, exclusive of the city of Albany, is subdivided into eight towns. Its population is forty-two thousand eight hundred and twenty-one, which gives rather over eighty-eight to every square mile

Albany displays almost every variety of aspect and soil. On the east are extensive sandy plains, interspersed with tolerably productive spots; in the middle are champaigns, beautified with gentle swells, while in the west and south-west there are hills, and the precipitous and craggy Helderberg. The lands along the bank of the Hudson are rich. Those of the champaigns and hills are middling, and very improvable. Most of the plains, which were formerly considered mere barrens, are susceptible of cultivation, and under good husbandry may be made to yield abundant crops. The plains are from five to eleven miles broad, and stretch from north to south nearly through the county.

Exclusive of the Hudson and Mohawk, which wash the county on the east and north as far as the county of Schenectady, there are the Norman's kill, Cat's kill, Fox creek, and some other smaller streams. Norman's kill enters from Duanesburg, and flows south-easterly eighteen miles, and mingles with the waters of the Hudson. Cat's-kill crosses the south-westerly corner of the county from Schoharie into Greene. Several branches of this creek rise in the county of Albany. Fox creek descends westwardly into the Schoharie.

Albany,* the second city in the state in population, commerce, and wealth. is situated on the west side of the Hudson. about one hundred and forty-five miles northwardly of the city of New York, in north latitude forty-two degrees and thirty-nine minutes. It is built partly on a flat, and partly on the side of a hill. The streets are generally crooked and narrow. The hill rises with a pretty steep acclivity, and has an elevation of about one hundred and fifty feet at the distance of half a mile from the river, and two hundred and ten at the distance of one mile; here the plain, spreading westwardly, begins. From the border of this plain there is an extensive view eastwardly. and south-eastwardly.†

Albany in 1825 contained about sixteen thousand inhabitants, and three thousand dwelling houses and stores, twelve houses for public worship, a state-house, three banks, the capitol, a court-house and jail, an academy, theatre, museum, and an arsenal. Its population at present (1829) is about twenty thousand.

The academy is constructed of red sandstone. It is ninety feet square, and three stories high, apart from its basement. The Albany Lyceum is kept in it. It is the handsomest edifice in the city.

*The spot where this city now stands was at first called by the Dutch Aurania; then Beverwyck, till 1625; then Fort Orange, till 1647, and Williamstadt, till 1664. All this time it had also the name of the Fuyck. Fort Orange was built in 1623, and Williamstadt, in 1617. At first a hamlet, then a village, and afterwards a town, and lastly a city. For a long time after its foundation it was enclosed with pickets (palisadoes.)

† By a late survey the distance between New York and Albany, by the road on the west side of the river, has been found only 145 miles. According to the latitudes the distance is still less, being only one hundred and thirty-five miles and a half, and eight rods. The received distances of all the intermediate towns and villages on and near the river from these two cities are incorrect. Hudson, for instance, is about one hundred and eight miles by its latitude from the city of New York. By the river the distance does not exceed one hundred and sixteen miles. The latitudinal distance from Hudson to Albany is about twenty-five miles.

The Capitol, or State-House, stands at the head of State street; its base is about one hundred and thirty feet above the Hudson; the structure is brick faced with red sandstone. It is one hundred and fifteen feet long, ninety broad, and fifty high, exclusive of the basement story and the roof. The legislature of the state, the supreme and county courts sit in it. In the structure of this edifice the rules of architecture, whether Egyptian, Hindoo, Chinese, Grecian, Roman, Saracenic, Gothic, or composite, have been violated.

The Erie and Champlain canals terminate at the city in a spacious basin. Sloops carrying from ninety to one hundred and fifty tons come up to the city. The bars below are serious impediments to the navigation of the river; these might be obviated by a canal ten or twelve miles long, and then vessels of two or three hundred tons might make their way up.

Albany was incorporated in the year 1686, by Colonel Dongan, governor of the colony. In 1750 it contained three hundred and fifty houses. From its foundation till the close of the revolution it was palisadoed and fortified. Here all the treaties with the Agoneaseah, and other Indians, were concluded. It used to be a great mart for fur.

The exact time when Albany was founded is not known. In 1614 the Dutch erected a small fort and a trading house, on an island half a mile below the site of the present city. In 1623 they built fort Orange on the west side of the river, within the bounds of the present city. Some have alleged that they made the latter fort in 1614. If this be true, Albany is the oldest town in the United States, but if the preceding, then New York, Esopus, and Schenectady take precedence. Notwithstanding the allegation, we have no doubt New York is the oldest of the two. A village sprung up near the fort, which was afterwards enlarged and became a city.

Mr. Stuyvesant, the governor of the New Netherlands, in a letter to Col. Nicolls, September 2d, 1664, says, that the Dutch came up the North River, in the years 1614, 1615, and 1616, near fort Orange, where to hinder the invasions and massacres commonly committed by the savages, they built a small fort. A little before in the same letter he says, we have enjoyed fort Orange about forty-eight or fifty years, and the Manhattans about forty-one or forty-two years. See Smith's Hist. p. 28. Albany was called Schau-naugh-ta-da, by the Agoneaseah. The definition of which is, over the pine plains, or across the pine plains, on the Cahohatatea (Hudson's River). The Dutch in after times applied it to the place where Schenectady now stands, as being over the plains from Albany. Hence the radical of Schenectady.

Greenbush is on the east side of the Hudson, over against the lower part of the city of Albany. It is built on the river bottom, and has about one hundred houses. The present village was founded in 1812.

Troy was also situated on the east side of the Hudson, at the head of sloop navigation. It is six miles north of Albany, and one hundred and fifty-one north of New York. The Erie and Champlain canals are joined to the Hudson by side cuts, and locks, so as to benefit this place. Troy is built on a handsome plain, of several miles extent, lying between the river and hill, and contains about eleven thousand inhabitants. There are here two banks, and six or seven houses for public worship; also a court house and jail. After Albany, Troy is the most wealthy, commercial and populous city on the Hudson. It was founded between 1787, and 1790; incorporated as a village in 1801, and as a city in 1816. In point of location, it nearly equals Albany. It is the shire town of the county of Rensselaer. The tide ascends to this place.

Gibbonsville in the county of Albany, west of Troy, contains about eighty houses. There are two large basins here appended to the Erie canal. The one is connected with the Hudson by a side cut, and two locks. There is an arsenal at this place.

RANDOM RECOLLECTIONS.

[The following reminiscences were written by GORHAM A. WORTH, Esq., who was sometime Cashier of the Mechanics and Farmers' Bank in this city, and afterwards president of the City Bank in New York. He died in that city in 1856, aged 73. Like all other Recollections they are occasionally discrepant. An octogenarian, on the publication of Mr. Worth's pamphlet, wrote some strictures upon it for the newspapers, which are appended as notes with his initials. The last one is by another hand.]

In commencing these reminiscences, I prefer to say that my first visit to Albany was just before the election of Mr. Jefferson, or the Great Apostle as he is sometimes called. Not that the visit had any thing to do, either with the election of Mr. Jefferson or the fortunes of his followers, but because it was an epoch in my own personal history, as the election of Mr. Jefferson was, in the history of the country.

I had then just launched my "light untimbered bark" upon the ocean of life; with no guide but Providence, and with no hand but my own to direct its course. Never shall I forget the deep feeling of loneliness that came over me when the receding headlands of my native bay disappeared in the distance, and I found myself, for the first time in my life, alone on the waters.

It was at the age of eighteen, and in the autumn of the year eighteen hundred, that I first set my foot within the precincts of the ancient and far-famed city of Albany. It is true, I had passed through the city some ten or twelve years before, but 'twas on a rainy day, and in a covered wagon; and as the only glimpse I had of the town, was obtained through a hole in the canvas, I set it down as nothing, since, in reality, it amounted to nothing.

I am, however, well aware that an intelligent, sharp-sighted English traveler, such for instance, as Fearon, Hall, or Marryat, would have seen, even through a smaller aperture, and under less favorable circumstances, enough to have enabled him to have given you, not only the exact topography of the town and its localities, but a full and accurate account of its different religious denominations, the state of its society, the number of its slaves and the character of its inns; together with many sage reflections upon the demoralizing tendency of republican governments!

But this faculty of taking in all things at a single glance; this ability to see more than is to be seen, is one of the many advantages which the English traveler possesses over all others, and which in fact distinguishes him from the traveler of every other country on the face of the globe—the land of Munchausen not excepted! I mention these things merely to satisfy the reader that I might have made something out of the affair of the covered wagon, had I been so disposed. But 'tis not my intention, nor was it when I commenced these reminiscences, to draw upon my imagination for a single fact. I have materials in abundance, and can not, therefore, be tempted to go out of my way to recollect incidents which never happened, or to describe things which I never saw.

The city of Albany, in 1800, though the capital of the state, and occupying a commanding position, was, nevertheless, in point of size, commercial importance, and architectural dignity, but a third or fourth rate town. It was not, in some respects, what it might have been; but it was, in all respects, unlike what it now is. Its population could not, I think, have exceeded some seven or eight thousand.

Albany has probably undergone a greater change, not only in its physical aspect, but in the habits and character of its population, than any other city in the United States. It was, even in 1800, an old town (with one exception, I believe, the oldest in the country), but the face of nature in and around it had been but little disturbed. Old as it was, it still retained its primitive aspect, and still stood in all its original simplicity; maintaining its quaint and quiescent character, unchanged, unmodified, unimproved; still pertinaciously adhering, in all its walks, to the old track and the old form.

The rude hand of innovation, however, was then just beginning to be felt; and slight as was the touch, it was felt as an injury, or resented as an insult.

Nothing could be more unique or picturesque to the eye, than Albany in its primitive days. Even at the period above mentioned, it struck me as peculiarly naive and beautiful. All was antique, clean and quiet. There was no noise, no hurry, no confusion. There was no putting up, nor pulling down; no ill-looking excavations, no leveling of hills, no filling up of valleys: in short, none of those villainous improvements, which disfigure the face of nature, and exhibit the restless spirit of the Anglo-Saxon race. The stunted pines still covered the hills to the very edge of the city, and the ravines and valleys were clothed with evergreens, intermixed with briars, and spangled with the wild rose.

The margin of the river, with the exception of an opening at the foot of State street, extending down to the ferry, was overhung with willows, and shaded by the wide spreading elm.* The little islands below the town were feathered with foliage down to the very water's edge, and bordered with stately trees, whose forms were mirrored in the stream below. As far as the eye could

* [It is said that there were docks at this time from Maiden lane to the Watering place, as it was called, now the Steamboat landing. At the latter place was Hodge's dock, and above it the State dock, built in the French war.] At the foot of Maiden lane was Fish slip, where the sturgeon were sold. On Quay street were stores and dwelling houses, and a tavern. If our author, when he first set his foot in this "jewel of antiquity," had taken a walk to this world-renowned sturgeon slip, "a little after sun rise," he would have witnessed a scene that would have cast the willows and elm trees into the deep shade of a forgotten past. There was the quiet ancient burger, elbowed aside by his Old and New England, Scotch and Irish brethren, more clamorous and eager for Albany beef than himself. If he had not beforehand entered into a confederacy with the Etsbergers and Reckhows, lords of the slip, he must infallibly have gone home dinnerless and desponding.

extend, up and down the river, all remained comparatively wild and beautiful, while the city itself was a curiosity; nay, a perfect jewel of antiquity, particularly to the eye of one who had been accustomed to the "white house, green door, and brass knocker," of the towns and villages of New England. Nothing, indeed, could be more picturesque than the view of North Pearl street, from the old elm at Webster's corner, up to the new two steepled church. Pearl street, it must be remembered, was in those days, the west end of the town; for there the town ended, and there resided some of the most aristocratic of the ancient burgers. There, a little after sun rise, in a mild spring morning, might be seen, sitting by the side of their doors, the ancient and venerable mynheers; with their little sharp cocked hats, or red-ringed worsted caps, (as the case might be), drawn tight over their heads.* There they sat, like monuments of a former age, still lingering on the verge of time; or like milestones upon a turnpike road, solus in solo! or, in simple English, unlike any thing I had ever seen before. But there they sat, smoking their pipes, in that dignified silence, and with that phlegmatic gravity, which would have done honor to Sir Walter Van Twiller, or even to Puffendorf himself. The whole line of the street, on either side, was dotted by the little clouds of smoke, that, issuing from their pipes, and, curling round their noddles, rose slowly up the antique gables, and mingled with the morning air; giving beauty to the scene, and adding an air of life to the picture. But the great charm was in the novelty of the thing. I had seen a Dutch house before, but never till then had I seen a row of Dutchmen, smoking in a Dutch city.*

* If the seer had looked a second time, he would have seen the simple side hill street, the grass covering the east half of it. He would have seen the quiet citizens returning from their business or their morning walk—but he would not have seen a single cocked hat, nor red ringed worsted cap, upon the head of one of them, except may be that of the venerable Dr. Stringer on his professional morning tour. He would have seen the upper half of each front door open, and here and there a neat and thrifty house-wife, bending forward over the closed lower half, watching for her husband or her sons, as they came home to breakfast. He might have seen that brass knocker, in the form of a dog, on the door of Lafayette's head-quarters, unlike any "knocker" on any "green door" in New England. J. Q. w.

Albany was indeed Dutch, in all its moods and tenses; thoroughly and inveterately Dutch. The buildings were Dutch—Dutch in style, in position, attitude and aspect. The people were Dutch, the horses were Dutch, and even the dogs were Dutch. If any confirmation were wanting, as to the origin and character of the place, it might be found in the old Dutch church, which was itself always to be found in the middle of State street, looking as if it had been wheeled out of line by the giants of old, and there left; or had dropped down from the clouds in a dark night, and had stuck fast where it fell.†

* Shade of the immortal Diederick! and shall he not smoke? When one of these "ancient and venerable Mynheers," who was coeval with those willows and elms, looked back to the many times when, in his canoe, he breasted the downward and devious current of the Mohawk, with its rifts, falls, and portages, descended into Oneida lake; followed its outlet to Oswego; coursed along the winding shores of Ontario and Erie to Detroit, up that river to the St. Clair, and along the shores of Huron, crossing Saganaw bay to Macinac, where he traded with the Indian for his furs, and of his returns thence to his family in Pearl street, laden with the riches so hardly earned, the labor of which has reduced him to early decrepitude, shall he be jeered at for his apathy? Shall he not smoke, and rejoice to see his quiet and contemplative neighbor, who has been in another way equally prosperous, do so likewise—without being ridiculed for his grave dullness?

† It is now more than forty years since this old edifice was removed, and the only thing left to mark the place where it stood, is a long flag-stone a few feet from the cross-walk between Douw's building and the Exchange, on the north side [since removed by some modern Vandal]. There are very few of the present generation left who remember the position and appearance of this antique but venerable building, and fewer still who can realize the interesting recollections which from tradition cluster around it. The first church was built at a very early day, and of much smaller dimensions. It was placed in the position where it stood, at the intersection of what is now State street and Broadway, as a security against Indian at-

All the old buildings in the city—and they constituted a large majority—were but one story high, with sharp peaked roofs, surmounted by a rooster, vulgarly called a weathercock. Every house, having any pretensions to dignity, was placed with its gable end to the street, and was ornamented with huge iron numerals, announcing the date of its erection; while from its eaves long wooden tacks, commanding Broadway north and south, and State street, east and west. The windows were high from the ground, to guard against an escalade, as it was too far north to be protected by the guns of Fort Orange. It was a little fortress within itself. In those days all the men went armed to church. The young men were seated in the galleries, that they might be ready in case of an attack to sweep the street either way by their fire from the windows. The old men were seated on a raised platform along the walls, and the women were in the slips in the centre and out of the way of any danger.

Those therefore who have been unwise enough to ridicule the position of the church, have done so in their ignorance of the reasons for its location. The condition of these Dutchmen and the Pilgrims of New England were alike; both worshiped their Maker with arms in their hands. The tradition goes that when this old church was to be replaced by a new one, the same spot was selected for it, and the new church was built round the old one, and that during the time the new one was building, public service was regularly carried on in the old one, which was interrupted but one sabbath. The new church was like the old one, and did not differ from it, except in size. The same high windows, the same arrangement of seats, and the same separation of the sexes. There was one striking difference, however. The congregation had become more numerous and wealthy, and each window bore the escutcheon of the several families who were disposed to pay for it, in colored glass. Each window had an outside shutter, which was fastened by a latch. These shutters were never opened, except on Sunday. Such was this church, with its steep roof, uniting in the centre, and surmounted with a belfry and a weathercock. Here in this church, and perhaps also in the old one, the dead of distinguished families were buried. Here Lord Howe, who was killed near Ticonderoga, in the French war, found a resting place, till his remains were removed to England. Here preached "Our Westerlo," by which endearing appellation the old members of the flock used to designate their minister, which in the Dutch language, and from the lips of an aged matron (Elsie Fonda), had an affectionate softness about it which the English translation can not convey. Is it strange that a church from its commencement so ancient, and from its position so interesting, should be dear to the hearts gutters, or spouts, projected in front some six or seven feet, so as to discharge the water from the roof, when it rained, directly over the centre of the sidewalks. This was probably contrived for the benefit of those who were compelled to be out in wet weather, as it furnished them with an extra shower bath free of expense.

But the destined hour was drawing near. The Yanof those whose fathers and grandsires had worshiped and been buried there ?

But this old church might, to the informed sons of the Pilgrims, have called up a train of thought in which it would have been profitable for them to have indulged. Here, in this church, as late as the year 1800, the Dutchmen assembled on the sabbath, coming out of the mixed population which even then existed in the city. Here were to be found the descendants of the generous Hollanders, who in days long passed, had given shelter and protection both to the persecuted Pilgrim and to the Huguenot—and for aught we know, knelt on the shore of Delftshaven, prayed with, and bade God speed to the company on the May-flower—or who had shielded the Huguenots of Rochelle from the hot pursuit of their red assassins. It was on a sabbath in July, of the year above mentioned, when the writer, for the first time, entered this church, fully aware of the kind of people he was to meet there. But the narrow aisles and slips; the separation of the sexes; the raised wall seats filled with old men, and the members of the corporation in their allotted seats; the young men in the gallery; the clerk's desk under the pulpit, and the old Holland made pulpit itself, with its hour-glass and iron movable frame to support it; the high windows with their bright stained glass coats of arms; the stoves standing on platforms raised outside of the gallery and nearly on a level with its floor; the figures in large German text hanging on each side-wall, denoting the chapter of the Bible to be read, and the first psalm to be sung; the reading of that chapter and decalogue by the clerk; the giving out of that psalm by the clerk, the singing, the salutation, and the exordium remotum by the minister—all so new and all combined, had less effect upon the writer than the people themselves—every drop of his Pilgrim and Huguenot blood, and it was all he had, warmed to those whose forefathers had been kind to his—and he felt the full force of the injunction,

“ Thy fathers' friends forget thou not.”

He never has, and he never will.

Nearly all those in that church on that day, of full age, have departed from among us. The fires that warmed the ashes of some of them are hardly yet extinguished. Let no unhallowed heel tread upon them.

kees were creeping in. Every day added to their number; and the unhallowed hand of innovation was seen pointing its impertinent finger at the cherished habits and venerated customs of the ancient burgers. These meddling eastern Saxons at length obtained a majority in the city councils; and then came an order, with a hand-saw, to "cut off those spouts." Nothing could exceed the consternation of the aforesaid burgers, upon the announcement of this order. Had it been a decree abolishing their mother tongue, it could hardly have excited greater astonishment, or greater indignation. "What!" said they, "are our own spouts then to be measured and graduated by a corporation standard! Are they to be cut off or fore-shortened without our knowledge or consent!" But the Dutch still retained the obstinacy, if not the valor of their ancestors. They rallied their forces, and at the next election, the principal author of the obnoxious order (my old friend, Elkanah Watson) was elected a constable of the ward in which he lived! This done, they went to sleep again; and before they awoke, new swarms had arrived, and a complete and thorough revolution had taken place, The Yankees were in possession of the city! and the fate of the Dutch was sealed.

The old families, however, still claimed the lead in all matters relating to good society. The city assemblies were still under their control, as well in regard to time and place, as in the power of admission and exclusion. In the exercise of this prerogative, a little jealousy of the Yankees was occasionally manifested. The difficulty was, to know who was who; to distinguish between those that were entitled to admission, and those that were not. Mere respectability was not of itself sufficient; nor was wealth to be considered as a certain passport. It was necessary that there should be something of rank, of family, or of fashion, to entitle a new comer to a seat among the notables. These matters, however, were, as a matter of course, left to the younger branches of the ancient aristocracy, to regulate as they saw fit.

Now it happened, that into this ancient and somewhat exclusive circle of good society, had slid many families, with their twigs and branches, who had in reality none of the rights and claims of the genuine Knickerbackers; and who were, as far as antiquity was concerned, mere squatters; yet they were found to be greater sticklers for exclusion and probation, than the veritable mynheers themselves. Still, up to 1803 or 4, things went on tolerably well: at all events, there was no complaint. The assemblies were sufficiently select as to quality, and perhaps sufficiently liberal in their range as to number. But, somewhere about the period referred to, the self-constituted managers held a meeting, at which it was determined that the city assemblies should in future be "more select;" and that "a line of distinction," as they termed it, should be drawn. Accordingly a new list was made out, by which it was soon ascertained that several, heretofore admitted, had been left off, and many others excluded, that were thought to be better entitled to admission than many that were retained. The measure, therefore, was taken in high dudgeon by the friends of the excluded parties, and was considered as a piece of arrogance, even by those who had no personal cause of complaint.

A paper war was immediately commenced, and the character and pretension of the managers were ridiculed and satirized in a style as new as it was amusing. A series of poetical epistles, odes, satires, &c., &c., appeared in rapid succession; some of them displaying a good deal of taste and cleverness. One piece in particular, entitled The Conspiracy of the Nobles written in mock heroic verse, contained some capital hits. It gave a highly poetic description of the first meeting of the managers, and an amusing sketch of their persons, pretensions, characters and debates. The most ridiculous speeches were of course put into their mouths, and they were thus made to exhibit themselves in a light that was as laughable as it was absurd. These squibs were answered by the conspirators, but without the wit or the humor that characterized the pieces of their opponents. The fire, however, was kept up on both sides for several weeks, to the great amusement of the town. The result was a mortifying defeat on the part of the exclusionists. The assemblies, as a matter of course, fell into the hands of the victorious party, and to their credit, be it said, were conducted with more taste and propriety, and were indeed more brilliantly attended than they had ever been before.

This was considered as a victory of wit over impudence, or rather of sense over nonsense. It is but just, however, to add, that the real old Knickerbacker families took but very little interest in the contest, and were probably not much displeased at the discomfiture of their quondam allies.

Let us now turn to revolutions of a graver import.

A restless, leveling, innovating spirit, now prevailed throughout the city. The detested word improvement was in every mouth, and resistance was unavailing. The stunted pines became alarmed, and gradually receded. The hills themselves gave way. New streets opened their extended lines, and the old ones grew wider. The roosters on the gable heads, that for more than a century had braved the Indians and the breeze; that had even flapped their wings and crowed in the face of Burgoyne himself, now gave it up, and came quietly down. The gables in despair soon followed, and more imposing fronts soon reared their corniced heads. The old Dutch church itself, though thought to be immortal, submitted to its fate, and fell! not at the foot of Pompey's statue, exactly, but at the foot of State street, which, freed from that obstruction, thenceforward became the Rialto of the city, where pedlers of stale sea-cod, and country hucksters, now do congregate.

Even the dogs now began to bark in broken English: many of them, indeed had already caught the Yankee twang, so rapid was the progress of refinement. In the process of a few brief years, all that was venerable in the eyes of the ancient burgers disappeared. Then came the great eclipse of 1806, which clearly announced the fall and final end of the Dutch dynasty. It is hardly necessary to say, that not an iron rooster has crowed upon the gable heads, nor a civil cocked hat been seen in the ancient city of Albany, from that day to this!

But let it be remembered, that if the growth of Albany was slow, its position rendered it sure. The great west, in 1800, was comparatively a wilderness. With the growth of this vast interior, Albany has grown: it has increased with its increase, and strengthened with its strength. No hand, however strong, no enterprise, however active, could have carried it forward one hour faster than it went. Its trade was necessarily dependent upon the population and products of the west, and with these it has fairly kept pace.

It is, however, true that the ancient Dutch families, though among the most wealthy and respectable, were not the most enterprising, nor the most active. Many of them possessed large landed estates, lived upon their incomes, and left to others the toils and profits of trade. At the head of this class, and distinguished for his many excellent and amiable qualities, stood the late patroon, Stephen Van Rensselaer: a man widely and honorably known; rich without pride, and liberal without ostentation. I may also mention the name of Jeremiah Van Rensselaer, a whig of the revolution, and for several years lieutenant-governor of the state: a frank, stout-hearted old gentleman, universally respected.

General Ten Broek, also of the revolutionary school, distinguished for his activity, intelligence and public spirit.

Cornelius Van Schelluyne, the then best living type of the ancient race; rich, honest, independent, unlettered, and unpretending.

In alluding to these ancient and wealthy families, that of the Gansevoorts should not be omitted: for it is connected with the patriotism and the triumphs of the revolution. "The hero of Fort Stanwix" has left to his descendants a time-honored name—a name that belongs to the history of the country, and to one of its most interesting and important periods.

But those of a more active and business-like character among the Dutch, were the Bleeckers, the Lansings, the Douws, the Van Schaicks, the Ten Eycks, the Ten Broecks, the Pruyns, the Hochstrassers, the Van Loons, and the Staatses. The principal merchants of the city, however—those who gave life and character to its business interests—were citizens of a more recent date, coming from different parts of the Union, but mostly from New England. Among these, were James Kane,* Dudley Walsh, William James, Isaiah Townsend, Gilbert Stewart, Thomas Gould, Thomas Mather, William, John, and Alexander Marvin, Peter and John I. Boyd, John Spencer & Co., John and Spencer Stafford, Isaac and George Hutton, the Messrs. Webbs and many others.

There was still another class, not less active, nor less important, in a business point of view. I allude to a

* James Kane died on the 2d April, 1851, aged 80. The following tribute to his memory was paid by Bishop Alonzo Potter.

“He had been for years the merchant prince of the city in which he lived. His ventures all seemed successful; his mansion was the home of a delightful hospitality; his grounds the delighted resort of all ages and ranks. There was no public charity, no plan of local or general improvement, which he did not gladly help forward. All at once he was arrested by one of those sudden and wide-spread revulsions that sweep like a tornado across our commercial world. The storm left him a complete wreck; everything he had on earth was surrendered to his creditors, and he stood forth rich in character and self-approbation, but penniless in purse. It was too late in life, as he thought, to retrieve his fallen fortunes. He loved books: he had neither wife nor child. He was surrounded by the friends of his youth, at whose houses he was always a welcome guest.

A few creditors remitted their claims, and insisted upon his applying the proceeds to his personal wants. He reluctantly consented. For more than twenty years he lived amidst the scenes of his former prosperity a poor but contented and happy man. Books were friends that rarely parted company with him. They turned on him no cold looks; they gave him no half-welcome; and I verily believe that never, even in the most brilliant days of a career that made him the observed of all observers, did he enjoy himself so well as while his whole stipend was two hundred dollars a year.”

then comparatively new, or recently established body of mechanics, of which Benjamin Knower was confessedly at the head. Mr. Knower was indeed a man of strong mind and persevering energy of character. Through his influence, the charter of the Mechanics' and Farmers' Bank was obtained; and the mechanics of the city of Albany rose in consideration and respect, personal and political, to a height which they had never before reached.

Among the merchants (I speak of the period from 1800 to 1808), Mr. Kane was perhaps the most prominent. He was, indeed, in many respects, the most prominent man in the city: prominent from his extensive operations, and business connections; prominent from his wealths, his liberality, his marked attention to strangers, his gentlemanly style of dress, and bachelor mode of living. He was distinguished, too, by an address and manner so singularly polite and courteous as seemingly to border upon excess. But let it be remembered, to his honor, that as no man in the city was more generally known, so there was no one more generally or more highly respected. The courtesy or politeness of Mr. Kane did not, however, consist in mere words or modes of expression. It had its foundation in good feeling—I may say in humanity, which speaks to the heart, and is understood where words are not; which, rising superior to forms and fashions, borrows nothing from art, nothing from eloquence.

I shall venture, by way of illustration, to give an instance of this sort of politeness. There appeared at the dinner table of the Tontine Coffee House, where Mr. Kane then boarded, and at a time when the house was crowded to excess, an old gentleman and his wife. They were very plainly dressed, but still respectable in their appearance. They were, evidently, country people, "from down east;" and were probably bound on a visit to their relations in the west. The servants, always too few in number, were now altogether insufficient to attend to the wants of the company at table. The old people, therefore, being strangers, and unknown to any one, were totally neglected. It was shameful! I made one or two efforts to get a servant to attend to them, but all in vain: there were too many louder and more authoritative calls. At length, however, they were noticed by Mr. Kane, who looked round for his own servant, but finding him engaged, immediately left his seat and walked down to the lower end of the table where the old couple sat, and politely asked them what they would be helped to; took their plates to a side table, carved for them himself, helped them to vegetables, bread, &c., and then returned quietly to his seat. He was doubtless taken by the old people, and perhaps by other strangers, for the master of the house, or the head waiter! There was certainly no gentleman present who dared to run the risk of being so mistaken. But Mr. Kane could afford it. The politeness, or, more properly speaking, the humanity of the act, did him honor, and far outweighed the momentary, or rather the imaginary loss of dignity.

As a people, we can not be sufficiently grateful to Providence for the character of our ancestors. From the Puritans of England, the Huguenots of France, and the Protestants of the Netherlands, did this country derive the seeds and elements of its greatness: its purity of faith, its principles, and its power. To them, under Providence, are we indebted for our civil and religious liberties, the character of our institutions, and the hardy, resolute and enterprising spirit of the nation. Talents and virtues are alike hereditary, though the stream is not always unbroken by shallows, nor the measure of its greatness always full. There must, I think, have been a strong fund of good sense and native talent in the early Dutch settlers. We have seen it break out occasionally, even in the fourth and fifth generations; and sometimes, too, quite unexpectedly, as in the case of Ex-President Van Buren, whose immediate antecedents gave no promise of such an eruption, or even foreshadowed the probability of such an event. Still, in all such cases, there must have been a living spring (no matter how remote) from whence the waters flowed.

Among the Dutch families of Albany, in which a strong vein of original talent, occasionally manifested itself, were those of the Schuylers, the Van Vechtens, the Lansings, and the Yateses. General Schuyler, of the Revolution, was a man of great vigor of mind, strong sense, and sound judgment; which was happily associated with liberal feelings, and principles of honor and patriotism. He should by right have commanded that army in the revolutionary war, which, in the day of battle, he joined as a volunteer—a man greatly his inferior having been placed over his head. But no neglect or injury could alienate his feelings, or weaken his attachment to the cause of his country.

The talents and character of Abraham Van Vechten, are still fresh in the memory of the living. He was one of the ablest members of the Albany bar, when that bar was studded with eminent names.

Chancellor Lansing, though not possessed of shining talents, was nevertheless a man of good abilities and of strict integrity. His brother, Abraham G., was a man of sound sense and vigorous tone of mind; rough, and somewhat abrupt in his manner, but upright, frank and fearless, in conduct and in character.

Old Judge Yates, one of the members of the convention that framed the Constitution, was a clear-headed, strong-minded man; straight forward, honest and patriotic. His son, John Van Ness Yates, was a man of talents, both natural and acquired. He was equal to the duties of any station, and to the difficulties of any task. He was a wit, a poet, a belles-lettres scholar, and a boon companion, whose joke was ever ready, and whose laugh was contagious. He wanted nothing but industry and self-respect, to have made him eminent as a lawyer. His associations were beneath him, not only in point of talent, but in character; yet they affected his interests rather than his principles. He possessed the readiest apprehension, and the most retentive memory, of any man I ever knew. All that he had ever read, and he read a vast deal, was at his fingers ends. He was often consulted by the younger members of the bar, while walking in the streets; and, without a moment's hesitation, would take out his pencil and write down what was the law in the case, and where it was to be found—volume, chapter and verse! From these frequent street consultations, he was called "the walking library."

But the cleverest man of the name or family, was JOHN W. YATES. He was a man of education, of talents, of natural eloquence, and of extensive reading. He was the best classical scholar in the city—Judge Kent not excepted. He was familiar with the Greek, Latin and French languages and literature; a mathematician, and a passionate lover of belles-lettres. He was bred to the law, but never attempted to practice; yet, I repeat, he was naturally eloquent, and, in his buoyant moments, one of the most lively and agreeable men in conversation that I ever met with.

Such a man, it is natural to suppose, made a figure in his day: no such thing; he made no figure at all. He was not appreciated by the public, because the public knew nothing of him. He was not known even to his friends, for the very good and sufficient reason that his friends knew nothing of Greek or Latin, of mathematics or of poetry. It was curious to find him reading Homer with a pipe in his mouth; and to see him turn from the page of Thucydides, to talk Dutch. Yet this alternation between the languages of Athens and Amsterdam, was in some measure unavoidable; for many of his old friends, and indeed most of the old families, continued to speak, in their domestic circles, the language of their ancestors long after the period to which these sketches refer.

Though no man set a higher value upon literary acquirements than himself, yet he took no pains to exhibit, much less to profit by those he possessed. Political distinction he never sought, and never desired. He had no taste for popular parade, no love for public display. He was, in fact, better acquainted with Pericles and Xenophon than he was with the aldermen of the ward in which he lived. His knowledge of ancient history was more perfect than that of any other man I ever knew, nor was that of modern Europe less familiar. History, poetry and philosophy; Egypt and Asia, Athens and Rome, with all their classic superstitions and diviner arts, were the subjects of many an evening conversation, to which I listen with delight.

To this faint sketch of his literary character, I may add, that no man possessed a higher sense of honor, or was governed in his conduct by purer principles. His talents and his tastes were, indeed, altogether above the position in which he was placed; and hence, instead of giving him celebrity, they served but to render him, in some measure, unsuited to the station he held. But never will that station, or that official rank, be again honored with so much learning, combined with so much talent.

Let it not be supposed that this is a mere fancy sketch, "writ for the sake of writing it." It is a tribute justly due to the memory of a man whose merits were unappreciated, and comparatively unknown. It is a tribute which I owe to the recollection of his partiality and kindness; to the memory of many a friendly lecture—many a social—many a pleasant hour.

Of the public men of Albany, office holders, politicians and jurists, it may be expected that I should say something. Among the most prominent were Geo. Clinton, John Tayer, Ambrose Spencer, James Kent, Chancellor Lansing, Abraham Van Vechten, John V. Henry, John Woodworth, Thos. Tillotson, Abraham G. Lansing, Elisha Jenkins, Edmond Charles Genet, and last, though not least, the editor of the Albany Register, SOLOMON SOUTHWICK! These are names too well known to require any comment. Many of them are identified with the history of the state, and will be chronicled in its pages.

I can not, in courtesy, however, pass over my old friend Southwick, without some other notice than that of a mere casual glance of recognition. Southwick was a man of genius, with all the peculiarities that belong to that temperament—its strength and its weakness, its excellencies and its errors; its delusive dreams and visions, its improvidence and its instability. He had great fertility of mind, united with great enthusiasm. This was the source of his eloquence and his power. His writings were rather outpourings than compositions. Yet he imbued them with so much life and animation, that he seldom failed to carry his readers with them. His style, though well adapted to the popular ear, was redundant in epithet, inflated and declamatory, and his language, though often strong and impressive, was yet in the main, loose and inelegant. He read but little, and only from necessity. He referred to books for particular facts, rather than for general information.

He was, by nature, honest, warm-hearted, and generous to a fault, but seemed to have no fixed or settled principles. In ethics, as well as in politics, he traveled from pole to pole. Yet, the kindness of his nature went with him and never forsook him. His heart and his hand were always open; and as he was credulous to excess, and even superstitious, he was as a matter of course, swindled by every knave, and duped by every impostor, he met with upon the road.

He was extremely fluent and event eloquent in conversation. But he had little knowledge of the world, and the predominance of interest or of passion, left his judgment too often at fault. He had the finest eye and forehead that ever belonged to mortal man, but every other feature of his face was either indifferent or defective. His countenance, therefore, was a correct index to the character of his mind—incongruous, mixed, and full of contradictions.

The Albany Register, which he so long and ably edited, was pronounced, by Judge Spencer, to be the "Political Bible of the Western District." A greater compliment was certainly never paid to the conductor of a political journal.

Mr. Southwick held, at different periods, the office of state printer, clerk of the house of assembly, sheriff of the county of Albany, president of the Mechanics' and Farmers' Bank, and postmaster of the city. Even in the cloudy days of his latter years, when friends, fame and fortune, had forsaken him, when every objectionable act of his life was spread upon the record, and all his faults and weakness blazoned to the public eye; even then he received over thirty thousand votes for governor of the state.

Of the clergy of those days, if I am wise, I shall say but little: first, because I recollect but little; and secondly, because, with me, the subject is not a debatable one. One's opinions, unless moulded early, are often formed by accident, or spring up as the result of circumstances. It has often occurred to me as not a little singular, that my attention should have been turned to the unkindred subjects of politics and religion, at about the same period of time. The noise and triumph of Mr. Jefferson's election to the presidency, led me to look a little into the mysterious philosophy of party politics; and the preaching of Dr. Nott, carried me, nolens volens, into the Presbyterian brick church of South Pearl street. Thus I acquired, at nearly one and the same time, a decided inclination to church and state; or, in other words, a marked taste for politics and preaching. No one, certainly, could have studied under abler masters: and for many of the opinions I entertain to this day, I hold those masters responsible.

But the only names belonging to the church, of which my memory took cognizance, at the period referred to, or of which I have any distinct recollection, are those of Nott, Romaine and Bradford.

Mr. Bradford was a well educated, well read, and gentlemanly man. He was, moreover, one of the handsomest men in the city, which in the minds or fancies of the fairer part of his congregation, added no doubt to his eloquence, and of course to his usefulness in the church. Mr. Romaine was an able man, of a denunciatory and vehement style of oratory—altogether too Calvinistic to suit the taste of his hearers. But it must be remembered

“That no rogue e'er felt the halter draw
With good opinion of the law.”

Doctor Nott, I should say, was neither a Calvinist nor a Lutheran. In other words, he was no bigoted sectarian; and in this respect, he bore, and still bears, I think, but little resemblance to many of his clerical brethren. In mind, as well as in manner, he stood alone.

The narrow dogmas, and common place oratory of the church, were beneath him. His ambition was to make men wiser and better, rather than to promote the sectarian interests and speculative tenets of the church. The eloquent enforcement of that single injunction “to do unto others as you would have others do unto you,” would to an unsophisticated mind be of more efficacy than a dozen dry discourses upon evidence, which no novice requires, or upon those knotty points in theology, which no intellect can comprehend. But it is not my business to preach, nor am I disposed to criticise the preaching of others. All I mean to say is, that Doctor Nott was by far the most eloquent and effective preacher of the period to which I refer; that he drew together the largest congregation—made the deepest impression, and commanded the profoundest respect.

His church was filled to overflowing. His appearance in the pulpit, his style of eloquence, his very look,

“Drew audience and attention still as night,
Or summer's noontide air.”

His elocution was admirable, and his manner altogether better, because more impressive, than that of any other preacher of the day: yet he could not, I think, have been over twenty-eight or thirty years of age when I first heard him, which was in 1803. Shortly afterwards, I had the pleasure of becoming personally acquainted with him, and soon found he possessed powers and qualities of which his congregation little dreamed. His talents were by no means confined to pulpit eloquence, nor even to the wider range of clerical duties. His information extended to almost every department of life; and with the whole fabric of human society, he was perfectly familiar. He understood the animal man, not only in the abstract, but in all the detail of action, passion and propensity. He was, moreover, a mechanist, a political economist, a philosopher, and what is of more consequence in any walk of life, a man of keen observation and sound sense. But he is still living, and too widely known, to require any portraiture from my pen.

BATTLE IN STATE STREET.

Among other incidents and events, falling within the range of these reminiscences, was the famous passage of arms, that took place between an eminent citizen and a distinguished general, in one of the principal streets of the city in open day. It was a perilous, hand to hand encounter, that brought together, at least, one half of the male population of the town—not as spectators merely, but as combatants, who, like the knights of old, entered the lists with an alacrity and a spirit, that would have done honor to the heroes of chivalry, when chivalry was in its prime, and knighthood in its glory. The full breadth of State street, from Pearl down to the intersection of Court and Market, was literally filled with the combatants; while the doors, porches, windows, and even the house tops on both sides, were crowded with astonished and terrified spectators. The street, viewed from any elevated position, resembled a tumultuous sea of heads, over which clattered a forest of canes; the vast body now surging this way, now that, as the tide of combat ebbed or flowed. It was certainly, one of the most classic or Greek-like battles that had been fought since the wars of Ilium, and the heroic days of Hector and Achilles. But as it respects the origin of the war, the names of the combatants, and the details of the fight, are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel! If not, they may perhaps, be found in the chronicles of the lives of the illustrious fathers of the city.

Certain it is that the battle has already been described; and the record, like the Iliad, will be found imperishable!

It is a little curious, when we consider what Albany now is, to look back and recollect, that so late as 1803, there was but one public house in the city; or at least, but one in any respect better than a common signpost tavern, such as no gentleman of the present day would put his foot in: but that one was an excellent one. I allude to the Tontine Coffee House in State street, kept by Mr. Gregory: a house distinguished from all other public houses of that day, by the quiet order that reigned through all its departments; by its perfect neatness, and the total absence of a bar. The higher rates of fare charged at the Tontine, and the fact that no liquors were sold except to its own boarders, nor ever seen except at table, excluded the low and thirsty, and left it, as it were by a law of its nature, open to good company alone. I need not say that it was well filled: it was, at least half the year, redundantly full. All travelers of any note or consequence; all foreigners of distinction; in one word, all gentlemen put up at the Tontine. For a period of some ten or twelve years, Mr. Gregory had no competition, no rival house to contend with; and was therefore compelled, I do not say reluctantly, to make a fortune!

Manners, 'tis said, change with customs; and customs, we all know, change sometimes for the worse. I have seen something of public houses and hotels since Mr. Gregory's day, and am forced to acknowledge, that on the score of gentlemanly habits, politeness, and courtesy among their guests, and in reference also to the civility of their keepers and waiters, the present bears no comparison with the past. The inmates of the best hotels of the present day, are as varied in their aspects, habits and character, as were the motley herd that took lodgings in the ark; while of their keepers and waiters the best that can be said, is, that they are in keeping with the character of their company. An occasional exception does but strengthen the rule.

It was at the Tontine that I became acquainted with many of the leading politicians and distinguished men of the state. It was there I first saw De Witt Clinton, Alexander Hamilton, Aaron Burr, Doctor Mason, Morgan Lewis, Daniel D. Tompkins, John Armstrong, Chancellor Livingston, and many others. It was while there, I had the opportunity and the pleasure of examining leisurely, and with a critical eye, that lightest twig of the great Corsican tree, Mr. Jerome Bonaparte; and of observing the fine form, the careless, abandoned air, and soldierly aspect of the celebrated Moreau, the rival at once of Xenophon and Napoleon. The Tontine was, indeed, for several years, my local observatory, from which I watched the transit of the political planets, and noted the restless movements of the wandering stars. It was, in fact, the best school house I ever entered, and the only one, I am sorry to say, in which I ever took much delight.

I can not resist the temptation (though I know I shall make nothing of it) to relate a ludicrous circumstance which took place at the Tontine, in the summer of 1804. I am well aware that many a good joke has been spoiled, and many a laughable incident rendered grave, by an attempt to put them on paper. 'Tis useless, said Doctor Johnson, to print Quin's jokes, unless you print his face with them. Nevertheless, I shall venture to relate the circumstance to which I have referred. I shall call it.

THE STORY OF MONSIEUR GARROT.

Among the many foreigners at the Tontine in the traveling season of 1804, was a French gentleman by the name of Garrot, apparently about twenty-five or thirty years of age; remarkable for the simplicity of his manners, for his taste in music, and for his inability to speak a word of English. His personal appearance was greatly in his favor; being stout, well made, and of a most agreeable countenance. Sitting near him at table, and speaking a little French, I soon became acquainted with him. He was, I found, a German by birth, born in Frankfort, but a resident of Nantes. He remained several months in the city, was flush of money, and liberal, not to say profuse, in his expenditures.

His object, if indeed he had any, was to obtain information as to the form and character of our government; the institutions and condition of the country; its extent, population, trade, commerce, agricultural products, arts, manufactures, &c., &c. Of all the travelers I had ever met with, he was the most inquisitive. He asked ten thousand questions about things of which I knew nothing, or next to nothing—questions, some of which, it would have puzzled Chief Justice Marshall, Mr. Madison, Mr. Clay, or Mr. Anybody Else, save John Quincy Adams, to have answered off-hand. But as I perceived he entertained a high opinion of my abilities, I had not the heart, nor was it indeed my business, to undeceive him. I was ashamed to confess ignorance upon any point, and therefore gave him prompt and specific answers to each and every question, let it relate to what it might: but the mischief of it was, they were all taken for gospel, and immediately noted down in his tablets.

I could not but laugh at the idea. It was, perhaps, unfair on my part, but the fault was his. To suppose a young man of twenty-two or three, of sufficient authority for the history and statistics of an empire, was absurd. He should have known better. Many a book, however, has been written upon information of an inferior quality to that with which I furnished Monsieur Garrot, and from a less rational, not to say reliable source. It was through the priests and poets of Egypt and Assyria, that Herodotus obtained the materials for his famous history; and who thinks the less of his history on that account? The credulity and child-like simplicity of the author, together with the traditional and poetical character of its testimony constitute, in fact, its greatest attractions.

But Monsieur Garrot, no doubt, congratulated himself upon his good fortune in finding a person so full of information, and so ready to impart it. On the other side, I did the best I could, under the circumstances. I studied day and night to prepare myself for Mr. Garrot's questions; and if monsieur published his book, I flattered myself that it would be found in the truth of its statements and the accuracy of its details, at least equal to the history of Herodotus, or the travels of Basil Hall!

But this has nothing to do with the circumstance which it was my intention to narrate. It may serve, however, as a preface to the story, which runs thus:

Monsieur Garrot and myself after a long walk one Sunday afternoon, returned to the Tontine about six o'clock. The weather was extremely hot; and as the private parlors below were filled with strangers, I accompanied Mr. Garrot to his own chamber, where, complaining of the heat, he threw off his coat, and, somewhat to my surprise, continued the operation of stripping, until he came to the last article, over which, however, he threw a light silk morning gown—light, indeed, as gossamer: this he tied loosely at the neck, and then sticking his toes into a pair of yellow slippers, began walking backward and forward between the window and door, both of which were thrown open to admit the air. The window looked into the street; the door opened into a wide hall, with dormitories on either side. While thus cooling himself in the breeze, which swept his loose drapery from side to side, he suddenly turned to me and inquired whether I was fond of music. I answered, of course, in the affirmative. When, without further ceremony, he opened a long case filled with musical instruments of various kinds, and asked me which I preferred. I could hardly believe it possible that he really meant to exercise his musical talents on that day of the week; but being a little curious, and, I must confess, a little mischievous at the same time, I pointed to the violin, which he immediately took out, and began to twang and tune. The discharge of a 12 pounder in the hall, would not have set the house in greater commotion. The first scrape of the bow brought half a dozen chambermaids to the door; who, catching sight of monsieur's bare legs, &c., ran down stairs, and reported that there was a Frenchman fiddling in the chambers, stark naked! By this time, my friend Garrot had got fairly a going; and, with his head inclined to one shoulder, and his eye turned upwards, stalked up and down the room, fiddling as if the devil, together with Apollo and the whole nine were in him. The figure he cut was so ridiculous, that I thought I should have died in the effort to suppress my laughter.

In less than five minutes from the time he began, it appeared to me that not less than five hundred heads had passed the door, each one catching something more than a glimpse of monsieur's fine form. The wind seemed to increase with the music, and the stride of the performer became more lofty and majestic. At every turn the morning gown filled and swelled with the breeze—now waving and flapping in the cross current, and now extending out, as it were, upon a taught bowline. The hall was literally crowded with spectators, and the several questions Who is he? Where did he come from? Is he mad? were whispered in rapid succession. But Monsieur Garrot saw nothing but the ceiling of his room—heard nothing but the clarion voice of his own fiddle.

I was amazed at his abstraction—at his enthusiasm; and yet found it difficult to prevent myself from laughing aloud. He fiddled with such force and energy, that his elbow seemed to move like a whipsaw driven by steam. I had no idea that 'twas in the power of a single instrument to produce such a tumult of sounds.

The Battle of Prague, roared from ten "forty piazzas" (as Johnny Robison used to call them) would be a mere tinkling, compared with this uproar of Mr. Garrot's fiddle. I could not but confess, that in variety, force and compass, he surpassed even my old friend Mr. Giles. This is no light compliment. A greater, indeed, could not in sincerity be paid to the most celebrated performer.

But Mr. Gregory, at length, made his appearance, and as he worked his way through the crowd at the door, I could perceive that he was not only angry, but a little frightened. He was about to speak to Mr. Garrot, but Mr. Garrot was too much engaged to take the least notice of him ; he therefore addressed himself to me, and said—" For God's sake, Mr. Jones, what is the meaning of all this?" I was so full of laughter that I could not speak, and of course said nothing. He then turned to Mr. Garrot, and raised his hand as a sign for him to stop. Now, Mr. Gregory had no more the appearance of an innkeeper than he had of an emperor. It was natural, therefore, that the Frenchman should consider him as an intruder, and order him out of the room ; which he did. But 'twas in French, which he perceived Mr. Gregory did not understand. He therefore collected all the English he was master of, and exclaimed, in an offended tone, " Vat you vont?" Mr. Gregory was about to reply, when monsieur, waving his hand, cried " Go vay ! go vay !" and thereupon commenced fiddling fiercer than ever. This produced a universal burst of laughter ; and so loud and long was the peal (in which I was compelled to join), that monsieur paused, and seemed now, for the first time, to be sensible that there was an unusual collection in the hall, and that something was wrong somewhere.

The scene at this moment was picturesque in the highest degree. There stood Mons. Garrot, in the middle of the room, with his fiddle in his hand ; his pantaloons hanging upon a chair, and his morning gown floating behind him ; looking first at Mr. Gregory, then at me, then at the cluster of heads at the door, utterly at a loss to know what it all meant. There stood Mr. Gregory, too, in his neat drab colored coat and Sunday inexpressibles, the very impersonation of order, decency and decorum, looking at the brawny, half naked Frenchman, with wonder and surprise. There, too, was the crowd of curious faces, male and female, peering in at the hall door ; exhibiting every variety of expression, from the most serious to the most comic ; all staring in profound silence, at the Frenchman and his fiddle. It was ridiculous enough; and had it continued a moment longer, it would have been discreditable too. At my suggestion, Mr. Gregory left the room. I then closed the door, and endeavored to explain to Mr. Garrot the cause of the collection in the hall, and the motives of the individual who had interrupted him. But I found it difficult to make him comprehend it; for I was not a little puzzled myself to shape the matter in such a way as to render the explanation satisfactory, as well as plausible. At length he seemed to understand it; and taking out his tablets, wrote down what I suppose he considered the substance of my explanation, and then handed it to me and read. It ran thus: "Americans have very little taste for music, and never listen with pleasure to the violin on Sundays, except in church!"

'Tis very well, said I, monsieur; 'tis very well.

Half an hour afterwards, we walked deliberately down stairs, and took our seats at the tea table, as carelessly and as composedly, as if nothing had happened. But I observed, what Monsieur Garrot probably did not, that every eye in the room was occasionally turned upon him. Though in one sense the author of the mischief, and certainly the most censurable of the two, yet I received the thanks of Mr. Gregory, for having put an end to the confusion occasioned by the musical taste of Monsieur Garrot.

It is near the breakfast hour and the city boarders, I perceive, are already dropping in. That well dressed, handsome faced gentleman standing upon the stoop, with his hat under his arm and a rattan in his hand, is Mr. James Kane, of whom you have heard me speak so frequently. The tall, spare man, with whom he is conversing, is Mr. Walter Clark, a merchant of the city, plain and simple in his character and manner, but polite and gentlemanly. The person that has just joined them, is an exceedingly clever man in his way—a little self-complacent, perhaps, but a gentleman and a wit: the latter he inherited, among other goods and chattels, from his father, who had a great deal more, by the by, than he bequeathed to any one. He is, as you perceive, extremely civil and polite; but it is rather because he deems it due to himself, than to others. His wit, though perfectly good natured, is not scattered at random. It has its mark, and is always intended to tell. But notwithstanding his piquancy, and self appreciation, he is a clever companion, particularly over a bottle of good Madeira. His fine rosy face shows this. In short, among the gentlemen of the Tontine, Mr. Caldwell holds no second rank.

That young man standing in the centre of the group on the left, is a Mr. —, somewhat remarkable for his flow of spirits and fluency of speech. He has acquired some reputation in the city, as a business man, and is quite a favorite with Mr. Kane. He is said to be something of a reader too, and, by the aid of a retentive memory, sustains himself in the midst of a class of young men, much better educated than himself. He has a disposition to satire, which he frequently indulges at the expense of others, but without any taint of malignity. In his open and somewhat random mode of talking, he certainly says some things, and tells some truths, which it would be difficult for any other person to utter without giving offence. He has the advantage, too, of being older, if not abler, than he looks; and, under the guise of a frank and heedless manner, is keenly observant of the conduct and character of those around him. I have no doubt that he has, at this moment, in his portfolio, a full length portrait, not only of many of his personal friends and acquaintances, but of most of the distinguished men of the state. But he is no scholar, and can not give to his sketches an abiding interest.

That plain but gentlemanly looking man, now talking with Mr. Kane, is Mr. Sedgwick, a member of the bar, and one of the most promising young men in the city. His character may be read in his countenance: in which, I think, you may also read that he is from Massachusetts. He brings with him the advantages of family reputation, character, and talents; and sustains these antecedents by personal merit, purity of mind, and cleverness of manner. He is the professional partner of Mr. Harmanus Bleecker, a gentleman of sterling merit, and withal the best Dutch scholar in the city.

REMINISCENCES OF ALBANY.

From Memoirs of Elkanah Watson, p. 267.

1788.

Curiosity conducted him to the "old Dutch city of Albany," that he might compare their habits and manners with those of the cities of Holland, from whence their ancestors had emigrated more than one hundred and fifty years before; the one surrounded by the progress and refinement of Europe, and the other in contact with savage barbarism. At that period Albany was the second city in the state, containing about six hundred dwellings, generally constructed on the old Dutch model, but was rapidly modernizing, as well in its architecture as customs. The city he regarded as awkwardly situated upon the declivity of a hill. The houses were principally of brick, and many were elegant. Vessels of eight feet draught plied constantly and in great numbers between the city and New York. The trade was immense, and rapidly increasing. A branch of this trade, formerly of great value, had then become nearly extinct—the traffic in furs, which the British had found means to avert from this avenue, chiefly by the ascendancy they derived from their forts, within our own territory.

The inhabitants were mostly Dutch, attached to their own customs, and cherishing their national prejudices.

As foreigners intermixed with them, these peculiarities were relaxing, and insensibly softening. They had generally adopted in the instruction of their children the English tongue, by the establishment of English schools. Mr. Watson expressed in his journal, the prediction that the Dutch language, in half a century, would be unknown in that city as a spoken language.

He proceeded eight miles from Albany to the new glasshouse, erected by John De Neufville, a former correspondent of Mr. Watson, and an inhabitant of Amsterdam. Mr. De Neufville was the negotiator of the treaty made by Holland with the American congress, which essentially produced the war between the former and England in 1781. He commenced business with an hereditary capital of half a million sterling, and lived in Amsterdam and at his country seat in the highest affluence and splendor. He sacrificed his fortune by his attachment to the cause of American independence, and in his efforts to sustain it. The fragments of his estate he had invested in the hopeless enterprise of establishing this glass factory. Mr. Watson found this gentleman, born to affluence, in a solitary seclusion, occupying a miserable log cabin furnished with a single deal table and two common chairs—destitute of the ordinary comforts of life.

Ibid, p. 275.

My curiosity satisfied, I sent my horse towards Albany, and embarked on board a returning bateau, and proceeded down the Mohawk to Little Falls, anxious to examine that place, with an eye to canals. We abandoned ourselves to the current of the river, which, with the aid of our oars, impelled us at a rapid rate. We met numerous bateaux coming up the river, freighted with whole families, emigrating to the "land of promise." I was surprised to observe the dexterity with which they manage their boats, and the progress they make in polling up the river, against a current of at least three miles an hour. The first night we encamped at a log-hut on the banks of the river, and the next morning I disembarked at German Flats.

The meanderings of the river, by my estimate, about doubles the distance of a direct line. We passed a valuable tract of 16,000 acres of land, situated on the north side of the river, which has been granted by the state to Baron Steuben. From Schenectady I pursued the road across a thickly settled country, embracing many fine farms, to Ashley's Ferry, six miles above Albany. On the east side of the river, at this point, a new town has been recently laid out, named Vanderheyden.* This place is situated precisely at the head of navigation on the Hudson. Several bold and enterprising adventurers have already settled here; a number of capacious warehouses, and several dwellings, are already erected. It is favorably situated in reference to the important and growing trade of Vermont and Massachusetts; and I believe it not only bids fair to be a serious thorn in the side of New City,† but in the issue a fatal rival.

I spent a day in examining this locality, and then walked on the banks of the Hudson, a distance of three miles, to New City, where I continued several days. This place is thronged by mercantile emigrants, principally from New England, who have enjoyed a very extensive and lucrative trade, supplying Vermont and the region on both banks of the Hudson, as far as Lake George, with merchandise; and receiving in payment wheat, pot and pearl ashes, and lumber. But, as I remarked, I think Vanderheyden must, from its more eligible position, attain the ultimate ascendancy.

I crossed the river at Half-Moon, a small hamlet containing about twenty dwellings; and about a mile from this place I visited the Cohoes falls, upon the Mohawk river. Nothing so much charms and elevates my mind as the contemplation of nature in her bold and majestic works. Fixing my position on the margin of the bank, which descends in a vertical precipice of about seventy feet, I beheld the volume of the Mohawk, plunging over a fall of about the same height, and nearly perpendicular. The barrier of rocks—the lofty banks—the roaring and dashing of the waters—and the cloud of mist, presented a spectacle of surprising sublimity. The river divides immediately below the falls into three branches, and empties into the Hudson, nearly opposite New City. The bed of the stream is filled with rocks, among which it rushes and surges in terrific impetuosity.

* The original name of the present beautiful city of Troy.

† The city of Lansingburgh was then known by that name.

In the view of ascending by locks from the Hudson into the Mohawk river, it appears to me that the obstacles at this place will be much greater than to cut a canal across the pine plains, into a grand basin, back of Albany. I took passage in a bateau at New City, to Albany, for the purpose of sounding the river. The result of my examination satisfied me, that in ordinary tides five or six feet may be carried to within a mile of New City, and from thence to that town fifteen to eighteen inches. The tides sensibly rise and fall as far up as Vanderheyden.

Upon careful investigation and mature reflection, it appears to my mind that Albany is one of the most favorable positions in America for the future enjoyment of a vast internal commerce. It is favorably situated in reference to the trade of Vermont, and the extensive eastern country. It may control the fur trade of the lakes; it must occupy the avenues which penetrates into the valley of the Mohawk; and will be the depot of the produce from the luxuriant territory of the Genesee.

From Albany, Mr. Watson proceeded to New York by a packet, and occupied three days in the passage. He speaks of the Overslaugh three miles below Albany, as sounding only eight feet of water, while immediately below it deepens to twelve or fourteen feet, and suggests that the impediment might be removed by closing two channels, and throwing the whole current of the river into the third. This obstacle being removed he expresses the opinion that Albany would become a mart of foreign commerce.

PETITION OF REV. G. DELLIUS FOR PAYMENT OF SERVICES.

1714.

To the Honnerable the Generale Assembly for the collony of New York.

The Humble petition of Godefrius Dellius, by his Attourney Adolph Philipse.

Sheweth: That during the time your Honor's Petitioner was minister to the Dutch Congregation of Albany, he undertook, at his great cost and Labour to Convert the 5 Nations & River Indians to Christianity. And having Laid the first Foundation of that Pious work, and made a Progress therein beyond expectation, It was Esteemed of that utility, not onely in Propagating the Gospel among those Heathens, but Likewise to stedly them in their Interest and Obedience of the Crown of England, That the Then Governor and council allowed to your Petitioner a Sallary of sixty pounds pr. Annum for that service, which was accordingly payd from time to time (as he believes) Except for one year and some odd months, which still Remains unpayd.

That upon the conclusion of the Former Peace with France, the Right Honorable the Earl of Bellmont, then Governor of this Province, sent Coll. Peter Schuyler and your Petitioner on an Ambassy to the Governor of Canada, For which they were to have a Reward of one hundered pounds. And your Petitioner is informed that Coll. Schuyler has Received £50 for his moyety thereof; the other £50 due to your Petitioner for that service Remaines unpayd.

That your petitioner having some Reasons to Remove with his family back to Europe, could not Personally sollissit the obtaining warrants or Payment of the Respective Sumes above mentioned; and the severall Attourneys your Petitioner had here from time to time, have been the more Remiss in procuring Either the one or the other, because they found the Revenue so much Anticipated before. So that the onely Relief Left your Petitioner is from this Honorable House, who having now under their Prudent consideration the Payment of all the Just Debts and Claims of this Collony, and your Petitioner Conceiving the said two sumes to be such,

Doth therefore humbly Pray your Honnors in your great Justice will please to order and enact that the two Respective Sumes of £60 and £50 for the services above-mentioned, may be payd for his use to his said Attourny. In the Like manner as other the Debts and Claims of this Government are to be payd, or in such other manner as to your great Wisdom shall seem meet. And your Petitioner as in Duty bound shall Ever Pray &c.

A. D. PHILIPSE,

For GODFRIEDUS DELLIUS.

NOTES FROM THE NEWSPAPERS.

1834.

May 1. It appears by the semi-annual report of the Chamberlain that the debt of the city was $118,000; that $46,166 had been paid during the previous six months. Among the expenditures were the following:

May 21. Dr. C. Humphrey, eldest son of Chauncy Humphrey, died in Calcutta, aged 33.

June 23. The common council elected Harmanus Van Ingen chief engineer of the fire department. William McElroy and Charles Pohlman were elected assistant engineers.

The canal basin having been constructed without any outlet, became a nuisance, and the corporation was indicted for it. The recorder, James McKown, was instructed to defend the action, on the ground that the bulk head at the lower part of the basin had been placed there by the pier company under the sanction of an act of the legislature, and being private property, the corporation could not be bound to abate the nuisance. The Albany court of sessions decided against the corporation, but the supreme court reversed the decision.

A law was passed to construct a stone arch over Beaver creek in Johnson street. The creek was still an open stream throughout its entire length, to the river.

July 4. The Albany Burgesses Corps made its first public parade, with about fifty rank and file, making a new military feature in the city both as to uniform and tactics.

July 4. The new bell of the Second R. P. Dutch church was rung for the first time on this morning. It was the third bell that had been suspended in the tower of that church. The first was imported from Holland in 1818, and weighed 2842lbs, at a cost of nearly $2000. It was broken the same year. The second was recast from the materials of the first in December of the same year by Julius Hanks, of Gibbonsville, and weighed 2430lbs. It was cracked in May of the present year, and recast by Lewis Aspinwall of this city, on the evening of the 27th June, and suspended in time to announce the day of independence. Its weight was 2737lbs, the largest bell in the city.

July 4. William Cook, an Albany merchant, died at Saratoga Springs.

July 5. Sally Ann, wife of Lemuel L. Steele, died, aged 28.

July 7. The steam boat Helen, built on a new principle by Mr. Burden, arrived on her first trip from New York. She broke some part of her machinery twice during the passage, and made the trip in 9h. 58m.

July 9. Erastus Corning, chairman of the commissioners, gave notice that an election for thirteen directors of the Albany City Bank, and for three inspectors of the first annual election thereafter, would be held at the City Hotel on the 24th July. Subsequently Erastus Corning was elected president, and Watts Sherman, cashier of the bank at Little Falls, was appointed cashier.

July 11. Isaac O. Davis advertised a mercantile general agency and collecting office, No. 67 State street.

July 14. Edmund Charles Genet died at his residence, Prospect Hill, Greenbush, aged 71. He took an active part for many years in the vain endeavor to procure a permanent improvement in the channel of the river near this city.

July 15. James Hunter died, aged 38. He was one of the editors of the Albany Daily Advertiser, from 1823 until October, 1832, and in the course of that period he labored assiduously in maintenance of the principles of the Clintonian party until the death of the governor left it without a head. He had recently been engaged in editing the Albany Daily News, which he relinquished only four days before his death.

July 16. James Parker died, aged 24.

July 17. George Greer died, aged 74.

Ruth, widow of Stephen Lobdel, died, aged 61.

July 18. Charles R. Webster, founder of the Albany Gazette, died at Saratoga Springs, aged 72. He had been ill several weeks of a glandular affection, but was not supposed to be in imminent danger. Only a few minutes before his death he was walking about his room. He was a native of Connecticut, served his apprenticeship with the ancient house of Hudson & Goodwin at Hartford, and in 1782 he established a weekly paper here in connection with S. Ballentine, and two years later commenced the Albany Gazette, at the head of which he remained about forty years, and was also extensively engaged in bookselling. During half a century he was conspicuous for a liberal philanthropy, and an unvarying readiness to give aid and impulse to every enterprise calculated to advance the interests of the city, or secure the beneficial results of a discriminating charity. As a natural consequence he had become identified with the interests and growing prosperity of the city. For a biographical sketch of him see Annals, vol. 5, p. 230. His funeral was attended by a large concourse of citizens, including several societies of which he had been a conspicuous and valuable member.

July 25. The funeral ceremonies in honor of Lafayette were performed in this city with great splendor and effect. The military, firemen, the societies and trades swelled the pageant. Major-General Stephen Van Rensselaer, Jr.

headed the procession as marshal. The pall bearers were nine revolutionary companions of Lafayette, Messrs. Gregory, Winne, Hilton, Van Rensselaer, Ryckman, Kidney, Van Alstyne, Shields and Russell. The Yorktown ordnance, a twelve-pounder, captured by Lafayette at Yorktown, was borne in the procession. The eulogy was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Sprague. A torch light procession by the Burgesses Corps under Capt. Cole and the firemen, at 11 o'clock at night, bore the urn and eagle from the church to the Capitol, and closed the imposing ceremonies of the occasion.

July 28. George G. Simpson died, aged 33.

July 28. At a meeting of the common council G. W. Carpenter, city surveyor, reported a level for that part of the city lying south of Ferry street and west of Pearl street. At the same meeting it was resolved to alter the level of Patroon street from the pavement west.

Feb. 20. A fire broke out in the attic of Washington Hall, in South Pearl street, adjoining the Theatre, which was subdued after considerable damage had been done.

Feb. 22. John D. P. Douw died.

The paternal ancestor of Mr. Douw was a native of Holland, and was one of that chosen band of patriots who with many others of our respected progenitors, estimating the value of civil and religious liberty superior to all other blessings, in the early period of our colonial history left their homes and native land, and relinquishing the superior comforts of civilized life, sought for quiet and repose in the wilds of America. He settled on the eastern bank of the Hudson, in the present town of Greenbush. and it is worthy of remark, when we consider the vicissitudes of human life, and the uncertain changes of human destiny, that the original paternal estate has been retained in the family, descending from father to son, through the line of successive generations, for the period of one hundred and forty years. The father of

Mr. Douw was a native and resident of this city, at the commencement of the American revolution, of strong mind, great energy of character, and a whig of unshaken perseverance. He early took an active and decided part with his countrymen against the usurpations of the British ministry, and the various important offices to which he was elected and appointed, are full of evidences of the estimation in which his services were held by his countrymen. After the close of the war, when through the blessings of Providence our cause had triumphed, and our country under the care of Washington, was moving onward in the course of national prosperity, he retired from public life, and died at an advanced age, leaving to his children the most invaluable of all inheritances, the inheritance of an honest name.

Mr. Douw was just entering into active life at the commencement of the revolution, and served as an officer in the commissary department of the American army in the campaign of 1777, which terminated in the surrender of Burgoyne. On the return of peace he embarked in mercantile business in this city, and for a period of more than forty years was known as one of the most prominent, active and enterprising men in the line of his profession; and after acquiring a sufficient competency, retired from the pursuits of active life. Few men have passed through life more respected, and few will die more regretted. His manners, conversation and deportment, were those of a gentleman of the old school. Instructed in early life in the principles of the Christian faith, his soul was exalted by its exercise, and its hopes, exhibiting in the unvaried tenor of a long life how a Christian should live, and in its last solemn hour, how a Christian can die.

Coffee House, owned by Smith Weed. The stores of A. G. Hindman, Levi Phillips and E. S. Willett, were also burnt.

At the same time a sloop was burnt in the basin.

Dec. 21. At a meeting of the common council Erastus Corning was reelected mayor by 10 votes; Francis Bloodgood received 8.

Dec. 22. A meeting of citizens was held at the Capitol to take into consideration the recent calamitous fire in New York. Erastus Corning was appointed chairman. Among other things it was resolved to send an expression of sympathy to the sufferers, and to assure them of the cordiality with which Albany would contribute her efforts toward the accomplishment of measures of relief, and the adoption of such other steps as the occasion might demand.

The mean temperature in 1834 was 49 deg.

1836.

Jan. 1. The common council assembled at the City Hall and the oath of office was administered to Hon. Erastus Corning by the recorder, James McKown. Mr. Corning made an address on the occasion, alluding to the transactions of the board during the past year; the consolidation of the elections by which the members of the board were now chosen with the town officers annually in the spring; the equalization of the wards; the reduction of the rates of ferriage at the Greenbush ferry from 33 to 50 per cent; the improvements in the basin; the improvements being made by the government in the river; the improvement in the city finances, by which the city debt had been reduced $65,000 in two years, and of nearly $269,000 due in 1817, but $95,000 remained to be liquidated. He called attention to the importance of supplying the city with pure water; of establishing grades between Eagle and Lark streets; to the near completion of the Utica and Schenectady rail road as a source of increased business to the city, and the prospect of an uninterrupted rail road track to Buffalo; and to the great importance of a rail road to connect with the Boston road at Stockbridge.

Feb. 2. Mrs. Lyntie Douw died, aged 66.

Feb. 3. A convention met to nominate Gen. Harrison for the presidency.

Feb. 4. Isaac D. Verplanck died at Coeymans, aged 77. He was formerly one of the judges of the common pleas of Albany county. Although a youth at the commencement of the revolutionary war, he was on duty, and entitled to a pension, but declined applying for it, saying that the services he had rendered had been amply rewarded by the enjoyment of a free government for more than fifty years. Major Verplanck and six of his townsmen, built the Reformed Dutch church at Coeymans at their own expense, of which he was a member, and elder until age induced him to resign his place. He was the last survivor of the original proprietors of Coeyman's patent.

Feb. 8. Prudence, wife of Seth Crapo, died, aged 40. James Puddy died.

Feb. 9. A fire broke out in the rear of Stark's New England Tavern, opposite the steam boat landing; which was extinguished with little damage.

John N. Wilder and William E. Bleecker formed a partnership in business as wholesale dry goods merchants at the old stand of Wilder & Hastings, corner of State and Green streets.

March 6. Maria, widow of the late William Morgan, died.

March 8. Joseph R. Van Zandt died, aged 64.

March 11. The assembly committee reported against a bridge across the Hudson at this city. A writer in the Journal attributed the result principally to the joint efforts of the recorder, James McKown, and John N. Quackenbush, and stated further, that Mr. Quackenbush was the vehement opposer of the Erie canal, its termination at Albany, the building of the pier, and other similar innovations.

March 11. Willard H. Walker died, aged 29.

March 12. William Duffy, manager of the Albany Theatre, who had been stabbed by John Hamilton, died of the wound, aged 33. Mr. Duffy was a native of Albany, and had been an early companion of Edwin Forrest, whose friendship he always retained and reciprocated. In the capacity of manager he displayed an activity and enterprise which gave a high character to the Albany Theatre. His perseverance under discouragements, sufficient to have overcome most men, and a judicious husbandry of the means which favorable seasons gave him, enabled him to manage successfully, and with profit to himself and the public, an establishment in which we believe every one of his predecessors had failed. As an actor he was entitled to a high rank, though his business engagements necessarily prevented the closet preparation which has been pronounced necessary to histrionic excellence. Many of his efforts, notwithstanding, evinced a vigorous and a polished genius, and in some characters in the highest walks of the drama, he was acknowledged to be unsurpassed. As a citizen he was public spirited and upright; as a man, high minded, social and benevolent. Although young, his professional reputation stood high in other cities, and he was for a number of years a manager jointly with William Forest, of a theatre in Philadelphia.—Argus.

The Albany Bethel Union society was formed, with the view of furnishing the means of moral and religious improvement to boatmen and sailors, in providing for them a house of worship, and the stated ministrations of the gospel. The first officers were the following:

Stephen Van Rensselaer, president.

Erastus Corning, vice president.

Nathaniel Davis, do

W. S. Rossiter, secretary.

William Adams, treasurer.

March 13. The Green street Baptist church, which had been injured by the recent heavy snows, was repaired, and open on this day for service.

March 17. Hannah, wife of Col. Wm. Leavenworth, died, aged 79.

The infant schools, which had been closed in May last for want of funds, were opened again in August, and at this time had nearly 400 inmates. The expenses were a little short of $1,000, towards which there was a permanent fund of $200. A call was made upon the benevolent in their behalf.

March 19. There were four fires on this day; Thomas's American Hotel in State street, damage slight; Many's furnace in Beaver street; Stephen Rider's carpenter shop in Dean street; and the house, corner of Lodge street and Maiden lane.

March 24. Abraham Ehle died in New York, of the late firm of Young & Ehle, at 58 State street.

March 27. The stages still ran to Poughkeepsie on the ice.

March 28. The common council closed the doors of the old Lancaster School. Since the introduction of the common school system, the number of scholars had greatly decreased, and it was found that they might be accommodated in cheaper quarters. In the course of debate it was stated that education at the Lancaster school was cheaper than at the district schools, and that upwards of 10,000 boys, many of whom had grown up to great respectability, had there been initiated in the rudiments of learning. The establishment of a medical college and of a normal school, was contemplated at this time, and the Lancaster school building was looked upon as a suitable edifice for one or the other of them.

At the same meeting it was determined to open a space in the pier between the Columbia and State street bridges. Also to allow the Mohawk and Hudson rail road to continue their track from Gansevoort street north to Ferry street. There was a strong opposition by the property holders in the south part of the city to have the rail road brought through their streets.

The Rev. Isaac Ferris, having resigned his pastoral relation over the Middle Dutch church, also resigned the trusteeship of the Female Academy.

Mr. Bloodgood reported to the common council in favor of translating the Dutch records.

- Nov. 5. Francis Bryan died, aged 76.
- Nov. 10. The election terminated in the choice of the democratic candidates.

Nov. 15. The New York Express was enabled to give the news in the morning from the Albany Evening Journal of the evening before, by the great speed of the steam boat Swallow. This was called annihilating time and space, and was thought to be quite as much in the way of speed as was desirable. Capt. McLean took the Evening Journal in his pocket on leaving the dock at Albany, and the next morning at 2 o'clock, walked into the office of the New York Express with it in season to spread its news before the readers of that paper, so that what was served to tea in Albany was given in New York at breakfast.

Nov. 16. A blacksmith and wheelwright shop in Lydius street, near Lark, were burnt.

Nov. 20. Abraham Oakley Miller died, aged 25.

The following were elected officers of the St. Nicholas Benevolent society:

July 14. Leverett Cruttenden, died at Bridgeport, Conn., aged 67. He was long and favorably known as Mine Host of the Hill, or in other words, the landlord of the celebrated public house, afterwards known as Congress Hall, and subsequently as the keeper of the Eagle Tavern. The House of Lords, as his establishment was called from its superior character, was established in 1814, and continued about sixteen years. It was the head quarters of the old judiciary, which was swept away by the Jacobin hurricane of 1821-1822, and also of that glorious galaxy of talent, genius and learning which adorned the bar of New York at that day, and of the most distinguished members of the legislature. It was likewise the principal resort of distinguished gentlemen in other walks of life. Mr. Cruttenden was a man of reading, and of ready and brilliant humor, and from his talents and great popularity, was usually one of the after-dinner social circles, for many years—being not only witty himself, but the cause of wit in others. Here was held the original Kent Club, and the Spencerian judges met; and where were found such men as Williams, Emmett, Storrs, J. R. Van Rensselaer, Riggs, Harrison, Bunner, and a score of others. Mr. Cruttenden relinquished his calling about eighteen months before his death, and retired to Bridgeport, where he had built a house, and hoped to pass the evening of his days. But the change of an active life for one of leisure wrought unfavorably upon his health. He labored much of the time under a religious melancholy, which was followed by a paralytic attack. He was a native of Guilford, Conn.

An account of his life and services may be found in vol. III, p. 281.

Jan. 26. An express was started by Messrs. Baker & Walker, to carry the intelligence of the Patroon's death to New York. A Mr. Dimmick left Albany 14 minutes before 6 p. m. in a sulkey. At Redhook, he found a bridge gone, but mounted his horse and swam the stream drawing the sulkey after him. At Fishkill the obstruction was much more formidable. The bridge was gone, and the road for more than half a mile inundated. He again mounted his horse, who pushed gallantly into the flood and swam, with his rider and sulkey over a quarter of a mile, bringing both safely to the opposite shore. Notwithstanding these and other obstructions the express arrived at the Carlton House at 20 minutes past 8 o'clock in the morning, having rode over the distance of about 150 miles in 14h. 31m. The record of such an enterprise enables us more fully to realize the advantages of the telegraph.

June 10. Stanwix Hall, which had been some time undergoing extensive alterations, was opened this day as a hotel by Wheeler & Bromley.

John L. Winne, Joseph Hall and others, having memorialized the common council in relation to the condition of the burial ground on Ten Broeck street, between Second and Third streets, the subject was referred to the land committee, consisting of George Dexter, H. R. Phelps and Wm. McElroy, who reported: That in 1765, this lot was conveyed by Stephen Van Rensselaer to D. Bradt and others for the purpose of a burial ground, on condition that the same should not be applied to any private purpose or secular use, but should remain as a burial ground for all persons in the manor of Rensselaerwyck; that in 1808, when the Colonie was annexed to the city of Albany, this lot came into the possession of the city authorities. Ever since the original grant it had been used as a burial place by the inhabitants of the north part of the city, but had now fallen into a ruinous condition, and comparatively few interments were made in it. By reason of the excavations which had been made around it, the ground was much higher than the adjoining streets and lots; the soil, loose and sandy, was easily washed away; and hence, from time to time, the coffins and bones of the dead were exposed. This difficulty was likely to become more serious, since the excavation of the adjoining lot would have a perpendicular bank 15 or 20 feet in height, which would be continually giving way, and the coffins and their contents must be precipitated into it. In other respects, the ground was in a deplorable condition; the surface was broken and rough, and presented a ruinous aspect, which was not only painful to surviving friends, but a source of annoyance to a neighborhood daily becoming more populous. The committee proposed to remove the bodies to the projected Rural cemetery, and surrender the premises to Mr. Van Rensselaer, he having agreed to provide a suitable lot for the purpose of reinterment.

Sept. 30. The new route of the Mohawk and Hudson rail road having been completed, the trains began to pass over it on this day. The inclined planes were now dispensed with, and the locomotive passed down the Tivoli creek and into the heart of the city, to the Maiden lane depot and the Boston ferry, where two roads met, and the great mass of the traveling public was landed on the Maiden lane side walk from east and west. A very great change immediately came over this terminus. If any one had been curious about the exact number of carts, coaches, cabs, hacks and hand-carts which the city contained, he could have taken the census here when the cars arrived. Dean street was also metamorphosed. Nothing like the change now going on had been witnessed in that out-of-the-way place since Stewart Dean came home from China in his little Albany craft, when the corporation, in a paroxysm of public spirit, as the cheapest way of doing honor to the renowned skipper, changed its ugly name of Dock street to Dean street. It had outlived its worst days, and its destiny henceforward was onward and upward. Stanwix Hall, too, was no longer a doubtful experiment of desolate granite, splendid as a building, and melancholy as an investment; but a brilliant and thronged hotel; its windows glittering with light, its gay concert room alive with the beauty and fashion of the town, its rooms and its saloons rife with the stir of busy merchants and planning politicians. Old Fort Stanwix had a lively child in this, its namesake; and its enterprising proprietor who had brave and honorable memorial associated with the name, saw brighter days smile at last on his spirit. Even the ice, which kept undisputed sway of Maiden Lane for half the year, the sun having very little personal acquaintance with its pavement, now disappears before the first of July, and horses look less despairingly at its heavy ascent.

He was born in Hanau, Germany, March 7, 1767, and coming to this country at the age of 14 years, became a clerk to Mr. Thomas, an extensive grocer in the city of New York, with whom he remained until he was 21 years of age, His deportment during this time secured to him the confidence and esteem of others, who were anxious to secure his services. Through the solicitations of John Tayler, an Albany merchant, he was induced to come to this city in 1789. He continued in the employ of Mr. Tayler as chief clerk until 1792, when he opened a store on his own behalf, and continued actively and prosperously engaged until 1825, when he retired from business. He was some time agent for John Jacob Astor in the fur business. On the 30th April, 1789, he was on duty as an artillerist at the inauguration of Washington. For very many of the last years of his life he discharged with usefulness and ability, the duties of several offices, both civil and ecclesiastical. He was long an officer of the Second Reformed Protestant Dutch church, and noted for his charities. A tablet to his memory has been placed in that church.

The corporation, having obtained possession of the Arbor hill burial ground, resolved to convey it to Mr. Van Rensselaer. It appears that two lots, Nos. 35 and 36, north of the city of Albany, were conveyed by Stephen Van Rensselaer, 31st Oct. 1764, in consideration of £2, to Dirck Bradt and eleven other individuals, provided they did not apply the same to private or secular use, but the same to remain and be used for a cemetery or church yard, "to bury dead corpses of all persons whatsoever that now dwell in or may hereafter inhabit the manor of Rensselaerwyck, or any part thereof." (Deed Book G, p. 587.) This was not in the city, but what was afterwards Watervliet. In 1801, Colonie, a part of Watervliet, was erected into a separate district, with five trustees. In 1808, the town of Colonie was erected from the town of Watervliet. In 1815, that part of the town of Colonie in which the burying ground was situated, was annexed to the city of Albany, and the other part to the town of Watervliet. In 1842, Sept. 27, the cemetery was sold by the corporation for assessments.

This closes the Notes from the Newspapers, and brings the events of the city down to the time when the Annals were begun in 1847. See vol. 1, p. 159, and 341, and each succeeding volume, in which the events of the year are published to the close of 1858, forming a continuous chronicle of nearly ninety years, since the first newspaper was printed here.

ABRAHAM VAN VECHTEN.

This distinguished lawyer and statesman, was the youngest son of Teunis Van Vechten and Judith Ten Broeck, and was born at Catskill, December 5, 1762; was married May 24, 1784, to Catharine Schuyler, daughter of Philip P. Schuyler and Anna Wendell; and died at Albany, on the 6th January, 1837.

Few men have been called to so extensive a sphere of usefulness and filled it so long and so well as ABRAHAM VAN VECHTEN. He entered upon the scenes of active life shortly after the Revolutionary war. He received his elementary education at a public school in Esopus, which has been the nursery of many of our distinguished men. He pursued his professional studies under the direction of the late Chancellor Lansing, and began the practice of law in the county of Montgomery, but was soon invited to occupy a more extensive field in the city of Albany. The high places at the bar were then filled by a gifted race of advocates, among whom were Hamilton, Harrison, Jones, Burr and Livingston. But the brilliancy of the bar could not cast young Van Vechten in the shade. He soon ranked among his illustrious seniors as an equal and a competitor for the highest professional eminence. Untiring in his efforts, the powers of his highly gifted mind were continually developed and expanded. His intellect was formed to grapple with the most abstruse and difficult subjects of judicial investigation; and he early inured himself to the most intense application of mental industry. In acuteness and the ready comprehension of any subject presented for his investigation, he had few equals. And nature seemed to have furnished him with powers eminently adapted to the illustration of legal principles. He made no display of legal lore, his learning seemed to be incorporated with his thoughts. What he had once read was well digested and remained ever ready for application. A large portion of his life was spent in the discussion of legal questions in our highest tribunals of law and equity; there he was always listened to with profound attention by our most eminent judges. His arguments were calculated to elucidate and instruct, and greatly to aid the tribunals to which they were addressed in forming correct conclusions. His style was remarkable for purity, perspicuity and strength. His train of thought was always logical and correct. In his manner he was usually calm and unimpassioned, yet earnest and forcible. His talents were too conspicuous to allow him to confine his efforts to the bar. He was repeatedly chosen to represent his fellow citizens in both branches of the legislature. The senate chamber was the theatre of some of his highest intellectual efforts. As a member of the court for the correction of errors he has left behind him enduring monuments of his legal wisdom. For a number of years he filled the office of attorney general with distinguished ability. At an early period of his life a seat on the bench of the supreme court was offered to him by Gov. Jay; a similar offer was made to him at a later period. He declined these proffered honors, preferring the labors of the bar as more congenial to his habits and his feelings. The causes in our books of reports in which he took a part as counsel, numerous as they are, give but a faint idea of the amount of professional labor performed by him. For more than half a century his brilliant mind was constantly shedding its light over the jurisprudence of the state. The bar had long delighted to accord to him the highest honors they could bestow. To the younger members of the profession he had greatly endeared himself by his kindness and courteous manners; and by all he was venerated as an illustrious model of professional excellence. In his daily consultations with his clients he was emphatically a peace maker. It was his constant habit to advise to the settlement of disputes whenever it was practicable. He allowed no sordid motives to influence his advice, or to bias his mind in giving his opinions.

He was recorder of the city of Albany from 1797 to 1808; state senator from 1798 to 1805, and from 1816 to 1820; member of assembly from 1805 to 1815; attorney-general of the state for the year 1810, and was again appointed in 1813, and served two years; and was a member of the constitutional convention of 1821.

His character as a citizen in the private walks of life afforded a model of excellence. He constantly displayed in his intercourse with his neighbors and acquaintances the most amiable social qualities which adorn the human heart. To his other traits of character was added one which is justly deemed of far the most importance; he was a sincere believer in the Savior of the world and a venerated member of the Dutch Reformed Church. In her judicatories his paternal counsels were listened to with reverence, as eminently calculated to promote the peace and prosperity of the Church. His disinterestedness was a prominent feature in his character and was the foundation of that unbounded confidence which was reposed in him by all who knew him. In his domestic circle he was remarkable for kindness and affectionate attention to the feelings and wants of those who were dependent upon him.

ALBANY.

The following communication, exhibiting the actual condition of our city, its prospects and advantages, is from a source, it will be perceived, that entitles its statements to entire credit. We lay it before our readers with the more pleasure, as the present indications point not only to the continued prosperity of the city, but to the prevalence of a spirit among us that must lead to a far higher appreciation of the advantages of this most favorable location for all the purposes of extensive business and profitable adventure. The growth of Albany has been steady, and in all respects substantial. At the head of one of the most noble rivers in America—at the confluence of the river and a chain of internal communication stretching west from the Hudson to the Mississippi and north to the St. Lawrence—the recipient of the products, not only of our own west, with its abundance and fertility, but of all the extended and rapidly improving country bordering upon and lying between the two great points referred to—its destiny can not be mistaken. It must become one of the largest cities of the Union. This result will be facilitated by the measures now in progress for opening a direct communication, via Stockbridge and Worcester, to Boston; and particularly by the fresh spirit and energy with which our citizens have entered into that and other improvements.

This communication has been issued in the form of a circular, and addressed to such persons in the adjacent states, as will be likely, from their character, standing and relative situation, to view the matter with interest, and give it circulation among those for whose information it is designed.—Albany Daily Advertiser, 1835.

Albany, the capital of the state of New York, is near the head of navigation on the Hudson river, where the great western and northern canals terminate. Its happy position, at a point where a river navigable to the ocean, and one of the finest in the world, meets the great inland communications with the northern and western lakes, ensures its advancement, and that at no distant period, to the very first rank among the inland cities of this country. Since the completion of the Erie and Champlain canals, its progress in population and business has been almost unexampled.

In 1820, the number of inhabitants was 12,630. In 1830, 24,209, being an increase of 92 per cent, in ten years. No census has been taken since 1830, but one is now in progress, and will shortly be completed. No doubt is entertained, from the increase of business in the city, that it will show a very great increase of population over that of 1830.

The following table shows the increase in the amount of produce and merchandise arriving at Albany by way of the canal in two years, from 1832 to 1834:

COMPARATIVE TABLE FOR THE YEARS

		1832.	1834.

It appears from the above table that the increase in favor of 1834 over 1832 on the three greatest articles of merchandise, viz: lumber in its various shapes, flour and grain, is from 70 to 100 per cent, and a continued increase will no doubt go on. The lumber trade alone at this city, is already immense, it being one of the best lumber markets in the Union, and promises to continue so for a long time to come.

The following is a complete return of the different articles arriving at Albany by way of the Canal during the year 1834.

There is no doubt that the business of this year will very greatly exceed that of the last. By returns from the collector's office at Albany, up to the 1st of August (after which it will be recollected the great business season of the year is yet to come), it appeared that the amount of many of the articles mentioned in the foregoing report which had then arrived, exceeded the entire quantity that arrived during the whole of last year.

The following is a statement of the canal tolls received by the collector at Albany, down to the 1st of September in 1834 and 1835:

To the 1st of September, 1834,	$124,263.49
“ “ 1835,	192,883.10

Being an increase of business by the way of the canal of 56 per cent, since last year. Besides this, a considerable quantity of produce is brought to Albany on the Mohawk and Hudson rail road, which strikes the Erie canal at Schenectady—the amount being about 420 tons per week.

For the future the prospects of Albany are still more encouraging. The rail road from Schenectady to Utica is now constructing, and will be completed by next July or August; thus extending the rail road communication 100 miles west. Rail roads are also constructing between Syracuse and Auburn, and between Rochester and Batavia, which will so far complete the line of rail roads to Buffalo, that it is easy to foresee that but a short time can elapse before a continuous line will be established to Lake Erie, thus making the spring and winter facilities of transportation nearly equal to those of the summer. A company is now engaged in making surveys for a rail road from Albany to Stockbridge in Massachusetts, which with the contemplated rail road from Stockbridge to connect with the Boston and Worcester rail road, will form a chain of rail road communication between Albany and Boston, which will be of great advantage to this city, especially in the winter, when the intercourse by water with New York is suspended. When all these roads are completed, and there is no doubt they soon will be, and the links west of Utica above referred to, filled up, there will be a line of rail road communication from Boston to Buffalo; from the Atlantic to the western lakes, of which Albany will be the business centre.

While private enterprise is doing so much to improve the communication with the west, the state government by a late law has authorized an enlargement of the Erie canal and the construction of double locks, which it is supposed will have the effect to reduce the price of transportation 30 to 40 per cent, and greatly to augment it in quantity.

The present rate of toll on 1000 pounds of flour from Buffalo to Albany is $1.62½. The reduction will bring it to less than one half the cost, for the same distance by any other route, and the valley of the Mohawk must continue to be as it always has been the natural and easiest channel of commerce with the west, and Albany the depot where the exchange takes place between the productions of the interior for those of the sea coast and of foreign countries. This exchange will be much facilitated by the improvement now making in the navigation of the Hudson by the United States government. The removal of the bar, which is the object of this improvement, will, when completed, deepen the channel to about twelve feet, and will give to this place a West India trade, in which the productions of the islands, consumed in the west, will be exchanged for the produce brought down the canal, without being burdened by landing, storage and reshipment at New York.

No doubt is entertained that the coasting and West India trade will be carried on to a very great extent in Albany, and with very great profit and success, so soon as the improvement of the river navigation is completed; and for the reason above given, no place in the country can, in many respects, be more advantageously situated for it. Indeed, the coasting trade carried on between this city and the seaport towns of New England, is already very extensive. There are about twenty-five regular trading vessels between Albany and Boston only, which it is estimated by one of our most intelligent forwarding merchants bring to this place about 25,000 quintals codfish during the season, and about 25,000 barrels of mackerel, besides large quantities of merchandise which passes up the canal, or stops for a market here, not less probably than 5,000 tons. These vessels take from Albany to Boston, in return, about 75,000 barrels of flour per season, together with large quantities of timothy seed, peas, wool, &c. The indirect trade between Boston and Albany, which is transhipped at New York, is also very extensive.

Besides the routes above mentioned, others are making to the north, all directly communicating with this city, and increasing its advantages. A rail road communication already exists between this place and Saratoga Springs, by way of the Mohawk and Hudson and Saratoga and Schenectady rail roads. The rail road now about making from Saratoga Springs to Whitehall, will complete the route to Lake Champlain, and afford the same advantages for a trade with Canada in the fall and spring as are now given by means of the northern canal in the summer.

It necessarily results from the situation of Albany and its easy means of communication with the surrounding country, that an immense travel centres at this city. Some idea may be formed of its extent when we state that it is estimated, and no doubt truly, that from 600,000 to 800,000 persons arrive at and depart from this city in the course of the year, by the several stage routes, rail roads, steam boats and other vessels—and this number is yearly increasing, and no doubt six years will see it doubled.

In consequence of this city being a great depot for the produce of the north and west, raw materials for manufacture are obtained here at the cheapest rates, and provisions are lower than in any of the Atlantic cities. The market is abundant at all seasons of the year, and is well supplied with all the necessaries and luxuries of life, at moderate prices.

Industrious mechanics, and all men of enterprise and character, can not fail to prosper in Albany, as the means of living are cheap, and the market extensive—communicating with almost every section of the country, in the readiest manner. All will here find an almost certain reward for their exertions; almost every branch of mechanical labor is or may be carried on at this city, to very great advantage, and no doubt with great success. Good water power exists in its vicinity for mills and manufactories, and a ready market can easily be found for all products of labor and skill. With the strong conviction that the interest of those who may come to take up their residence in our city will be promoted, as well as the prosperity of the city thereby increased, we hope that you will give circulation to this statement, among such as you may suppose wish to seek in this state additional encouragement for their enterprise and industry. Respectfully, yours, TYRONE POWER'S IMPRESSIONS OF ALBANY.

[Mr. Power, the popular Irish actor, on his return home, published a book of his Impressions of America, which was a readable and liberal work. The following account of the excitement he created at the Theatre is a tolerably correct statement of the affair. Theatrical audiences were extremely jealous of foreign actors, and resented the smallest expressions of disrespect, when they were so imprudent as to let anything of the kind pass their lips. Several theatres exhibited the most decided marks of the vengeance of an offended people.]

This is the capital of the powerful state of New York, and promises at no very distant period to wear an aspect worthy its rank. No situation was ever chosen better adapted to display; for the town is built over the face of a lofty and steep hill, which only affords space for one or two streets about its foot, and this is chiefly occupied by docks and the several canal basins connected with the Hudson.

The principal avenue, a regularly built, grandly proportioned street, with a railway running through its centre, climbs directly up the hill, and is terminated by a well-kept public square, or Grande Place, as the French would call it, about which the State House, City Hall, and other public buildings are ranged. These striking objects, from the nature of the ground, stand boldly out, and have all an appearance sufficiently imposing; whilst there are some buildings that possess strong claims to architectural beauty.

Nearly all the more important public offices have lofty and well-proportioned domes; and these being uniformly covered with tin or other bright metal, impart a gay and picturesque effect to the general mass; and indeed, the city, viewed from a little distance, with all these cupolar and towering domes reflected in the setting sun, assumes quite an oriental appearance; one is immediately reminded of the mosque and minaret of some Turkish capital; the fine marble too used in the construction of all public buildings, and indeed of many private ones, increases the effect which they derive from their style and from the bold eminence they occupy.

Albany was long almost exclusively Dutch, and may be said up to this time to have hardly kept pace with the rapid advance of the country generally; it must have marveled at the spread of the numerous flourishing towns which have grown up around within a few years, and which threatened to eclipse, if not extinguish it wholly. A movement, however, has of late taken place; the inhabitants have awoke, new colonists have superseded the family from Sleepy-hollow, or imparted to them a share of their energy; and Albany begins to assert her claims on the productive country by which she is backed, and to turn into her own channel a portion of its commerce. Building is everywhere going forward; land has doubled and trebled in value; improvements are in steady progress; and should the present prosperous course of things meet with no untoward check to paralyze the industry of the people, Albany will in a few years assume an importance more profitable to its citizens than the empty honor it derives from being styled the capital of the state.

There are several excellent inns; one kept by an Englishman, a Mr. Thomas, in which I dined once or twice with friends, and which bears a high reputation; another, wherein I always resided on my several visits here, kept by Mr. Cruttenden; and if henceforward any stranger who relishes good fare, loves Shakespere, and would choose to make the acquaintance of a Transatlantic Falstaff, passes through Albany without calling at the Eagle, and cracking a bottle with "mine host," he will have missed one of those days he would not have failed to mark with a white stone. Soberly, I do not remember ever to have met with a face and figure which, were I a painter, I would so readily adopt for a beau-ideal of the profligate son of mirth and mischief as those of mine host o' th' Eagle. He has a fellow feeling too with "lean Jack," is as well read in Shakespere as most good men, quotes him fluently and happily, honors and loves him as he should be loved and honored, and in himself possesses much of the humor, much of the native wit, but not a single trait of the less admirable portions of the fat knight's character.

Indebted to Mr. Cruttenden for many pleasant hours, I will not offer an excuse for making this indifferent sketch of him here, since it in no way trenches upon the rule I hold sacred of eschewing comment on private persons, or details of social intercourse, where indeed, men speak oftener from the heart than from the head. Mr. C. I look upon as a public character, and thus I am enabled to say how much I esteem him. Should he be wroth, I vow, if I ever should visit Albany again, never to make one at the "Feast of Shells." On the contrary, I'll fly to the Eagle; forswear "the villanous company" of mine host; I'll disclaim him, renounce him, "and d——n me if ever I call him Jack again."

The theatre here is a handsome building, and well adapted to the purpose for which it was designed; but is, I believe, worse supported than any other on this continent. I had been advised not to visit the city professionally; but being strongly solicited by the worthy manager, "mischief lay in my way, and I found it."

I feel compelled in honesty to state the facts of this trip, though no way flattering to my powers of attraction: however, if there be any thing unpleasant to relate, I ever find it better to tell of oneself, than to leave it to the charity of good-natured friends. The only disagreement I ever had with an audience, in fact, occurred here, and roundly, thus it happened.

On the evening when I was advertised to make my debut to an Albany audience, I at my usual hour walked to the house, dressed, and was ready; but when half an hour after the time of beginning, I went on the stage, there were not ten persons in the house. The stage director and myself now held a consultation on the unpromising aspect of our affairs. He ascribed the unusually deserted condition of the salle to the sultry and threatening state of the atmosphere, which had deterred the neighboring towns of Troy and Waterford from furnishing their quota—those indeed being his chief dependencies. I was opposed, on policy, to throwing away our ammunition so unprofitable; and so, after due deliberation, the manager agreed to state to the few persons in front, that “with their permission” the performances intended for this night would be postponed until the evening after the next following; as, in consequence of the exceeding smallness of the audience, it was to be feared the play would prove dull to them, as it must be irksome to the actors.

Nothing could be received with better feeling on the part of the persons assembled; not a breath of disapprobation was heard. They instantly went away; but soon after I reached home, I found, by the report of one or two gentlemen who had since been at the theatre seeking admittance, that a considerable excitement prevailed, and that at the public bars of the neighborhood the affair was detailed in a way likely to produce unpleasant effects on my first appearance.

The appointed night came, the house was filled with men, and every thing foreboded a violent outbreak; the manager appeared terrified out of his wits; but, as far as I can judge, behaved with infinite honesty; disavowed the truth of the imputations connected with the dismissal, and which it was sought to fasten upon me; and affirmed that he was fully prepared to place the facts simply before the audience, in the event of my suffering any interruption.

It was now found that an actor or two needed in the piece were absent. These worthies, the chief agitators in this affair, were, in fact, in front of the house to assist in the expected assault upon a stranger and one of their own profession. On this being explained to the manager, he said he was aware of it, and had threatened to discharge the individuals; but relying upon the affair terminating in my discomfiture, they did not fear being sustained by the same intelligence which they now directed against me.

On my appearance the din was mighty deafening; the volunteer champions of the public had come well prepared, and every invention for making the voice of humanity celestial was present and in full use. The boxes I observed to be occupied by well-dressed men, who generally either remained neutral, or by signs sought that I should be heard. This, however, was out of the question; and after long and patient abiding, "for patience is the badge of our tribe," I made my bow and retired, when the manager, who had on the night in question dismissed the house, made his bow, and, after silence was obtained, begged that the audience would give me a hearing, assuring them on his own knowledge that I had not contemplated insulting them.

I again came forward, and after some time was permitted to say that I could in no way account for a simple matter of business being so misrepresented as to occasion this violent exhibition of their anger; that, before the audience in question was dismissed, its permission had been obtained; that, if I really contemplated insult, it is hardly probable I should wait two days to encounter the anger to those I had sought to offend. I further said, that on the common principle which they professed, I was entitled to a hearing, since the sense of the majority was evidently with me; and that, if the disorder continued, I should, for the sake of that respectable majority, sincerely regret this, since the character of their city for justice and hospitality would be more impeached than any prospects be injured.

After this the row was resumed with added fierceness; not a word of either play or farce was heard; but I persisted in going through with the performance, being determined not to dismiss a second time.

At the fall of the curtain I begged the manager would not again announce me, as although, for the sake of the many who I could see were opposed to this misjudged outrage, I had gone through the business once, I could not again subject them to the annoyance of such a collision, or myself to continued insult.

I was, however, happily induced to change this determination at the request of many gentlemen of the place, who assured me that the whole thing arose from stories most industriously circulated by one or two ill-conditioned actors, backed by inflammatory handbills and a scurrilous print.

Out of this affair, which threatened me serious annoyance, I really gathered a new proof of the kindness of the people of this country, for I found persons on all sides interesting themselves for me, although I entered the place without an acquaintance; and had I not stood in need of help, so in all probability should I have quitted it; but in this hour of annoyance, men not of theatrical habits put themselves actively forward to shield a calumniated stranger from insult or injury; in consequence of this interposition, on my appearance, nothing could be more orderly than the conduct of the audience.

I concluded my engagement, which was only for four nights, and left the theatre with a promise to return, which pledge, at some inconvenience, I redeemed; and I have never been able to regret a momentary vexation which obtained for me many friends, and made known to me the sterling good feeling existing in Albany, of which I might otherwise have remained ignorant.

The rides about Albany are numerous, the roads the best in the country; and the little city of Troy, with its Mount Ida, worthy even the celestial residents who honored its less beautiful predecessor with their presence. Higher up lies Waterford, a thriving place, also charmingly situated; and, near this, the Fall of the Cohoes, one of the finest natural objects in the country. Indeed a morning's ride in this direction offers a succession of views that can nowhere be surpassed, and which I do not remember to have often seen equaled.

Approaching Albany from the west, and looking across the Hudson over the pine-wooded slopes and verdant meadows on which it fronts, it appears a city bordered by an ornamental park; to the south tower the cloud-capped Catskill mountains; on the north are the blue mountains of Vermont; and about the verge of the landscape on all sides runs a line of boldly undulating hills, whose rugged outline forms no inappropriate framing to this very beautiful picture.

SPANISH ACCOUNT OF ALBANY IN 1778.

[From Noticia del Establecimiento y Poblacion de las Colonias Inglesas en America Septentrional. By Don F. Alvarez.]

The county of Albany is near the Indian plantations that extend hence to Canada. The city of this name is in the midst of fine plantations, is well situated for commerce and formerly bore the name of Fort Orange. The greater part of the inhabitants are of Holland origin and number three hundred families. In this city the governors of other places of New England hold regularly their conferences with the sachems or Indian kings. Albany is defended by a fine stone fort and supports a garrison of two companies.

There is also in this county another city called Schenectady, situated twenty miles further to the north, and in a most delightful valley. The Indian nations who dwell a little distance beyond this city have hitherto retained their lands.

CENSUS OF ALBANY COUNTY.

From the copies of the statistical returns of the late census of this state, presented to the assembly by the marshals of the northern and southern districts, we have compiled the following table of the population, productions, trade, manufactures, &c., of this county.

NOTICES OF THE WINTERS

AT NEW YORK FOR FORTY-TWO YEARS, AND OF THE DATES AT WHICH THE RIVER WAS FROZEN, OR OBSTRUCTED OR CLOSED BY ICE AT ALBANY.

From the New York Daily Advertiser of Dec., 1832.

[It will be seen on reference to the table given in Vol. 1, p. 326, that the agreement is very general. The remarks on the state of the weather require an allowance for latitude in regard to the thermometer, otherwise the difference between the two cities was small.]

1789-90. A very mild winter. The mildest January since 1781. River open till 3d February, though occasionally obstructed by ice before.

1790-91. Very severe weather in December, but more moderate in January and February. River closed on the 8th December.

1791-92. A very severe winter. River closed on 9th December; uninterrupted and severe frost for 4 weeks; lowest degree of thermometer 1 above zero.

1792-93. A very mild winter; river open all winter to Poughkeepsie, though it closed at Albany on the 12th December.

1793-94. A mild winter, with but little snow; river closed on 26th December.

1794-95. A very mild autumn and December; river closed on the 12th January; no ice till 3d January, and but little cold weather and snow this winter.

1795-96. Another very mild autumn and December; no ice till 21st December; river open till 23d January.

1796-97. Early winter and severe till 12th January; river closed on 28th November, intensely cold on 23d and 24th December; mercury at zero in the morning.

1797-98. Very early and severe winter; river closed on 20th November; lowest degree 3 above zero.

1798-99. Very early, long and severe winter, though the weather was moderate for about three weeks in January; river closed on 23d November; lowest degree 2 above zero.

1799-1800. A mild winter; river closed on 6th January, but obstructed by ice before.

1800-01. A mild winter, with but little snow; a very mild December, river closed on 3d January.

1801-02. A remarkably mild winter; river open till 3d February, though obstructed by ice occasionally before. In January the mercury generally ranged between 40 and 50 degrees; and no snow of any consequence fell till 22d February.

1802-03. A mild and variable winter with but little snow; river closed on 16th December.

1803-04. A very mild December; some severe weather and deep snows in January and the latter part of February; river open till 12th January; lowest degree, 12 above zero.

1804-05. A remarkably cold and variable winter, deep snows and heavy rains with high winds; lowest degree, 2 above zero; river closed on 13th December—much distress among the poor.

1805-06. Generally cold in January; though very mild in December and February; river closed 9th January, and opened on 23d February.

1806-07. A severe winter; river closed on 11th December; lowest degree, 4 above zero.

1807-08. A mild winter; December very mild; river closed on 4th January.

1808-09. A long and severe winter, with much snow; river closed on 9th December; lowest degree, 6 above zero.

1809-10. Remarkably mild till 19th January, when the river closed, and the weather was intensely cold for several days; very little snow this winter; lowest degree, 1 above zero.

1810-11. Much snow in February, though not much severe cold this winter. This season was remarkable for a severe snow storm on the 2d November; river closed on the 14th December.

1811-12. A severe winter; river closed on the 20th December; lowest degree, 2 above zero.

1812-13. A severe winter; river closed on 21st December; lowest degree, 4 above zero.

1813-14. A severe winter; river closed on 22d December; lowest degree, 8 above zero.

1814-15. A very severe though variable winter; river closed on 10th December; lowest degree, 1 above zero.

1815-16. A variable though not severe winter; river closed on the 2d December.

1816-17. A very severe winter, though it did not set in till the middle of January; river closed on 16th December; thermometer on 15th February was 6 degrees below zero, and the first time since 1788 that it has fallen below zero in this city. As cold as in January, 1765, when the mercury sunk to the same degree; which the papers state to have been the coldest weather experienced in this city in 50 years.

1817-18. Generally moderate in December and January, though severe in February; river closed on 7th December, opened on 14th and closed again on 21st December; mercury fell to zero this winter.

1818-19. Severe weather for two weeks in December; river closed on the 14th; generally very mild in January and February.

1819-20. A severe winter; deep snows; river closed on 13th December, though obstructed by ice before; lowest degree, 3 above zero.

1820-21. Intensely severe weather during the greater part of January, though mild in February, river closed on the 13th November, opened on the 20th and closed again on 1st December; the mercury fell on the 25th January to 7 degrees below zero, one degree lower than in February, 1817; as cold weather probably as was ever experienced here. The Hudson was crossed on the ice between this city and Paulus Hook for several days. During the last hundred years, the river has been passable on the ice in the same way only four times, viz: in 1740-41, 1764-65, 1779-80, 1820-21.

1821-22. A severe winter with but little snow; river closed on 13th December; mercury as low as 1 below zero.

1822-23. No very severe weather till February and March, river closed on 24th December; lowest degree, 3 above zero.

1823-24. Very mild winter; river closed on 16th December; open in January for a short time.

1824-25. Mild winter with but little snow; river closed on 3d January.

1825-26. Weather generally very mild, though there were two or three excessively cold days this winter. December 14th was a remarkably cold day; thermometer at 8 a. m. 3 and 10 p. m. indicated 2, 7, and 9 degrees; river closed on 13th December.

1826-27. A severe winter; river closed on 24th Dec., lowest degree, 3 above zero.

1827-28. A very cold and blustering November, followed by the mildest winter since 1801-02; river closed only about three weeks at different times through the winter. The mildest February since 1778-79, when vegetation commenced and flowers were gathered in the woods, and in Pennsylvania peach trees blossomed in this month.

1828-29. A long, severe winter; river closed on 1st January and opened on 29th March; lowest degree, 6½ below zero. Much suffering among the poor in February.

1829-30. Weather generally mild till 23d January, when the river closed; weather then very severe for several weeks. As much ice in our harbor as in 1826, 1827; lowest degree, 3 above zero.

1830-31. A very severe winter with several deep snows; ground covered with snow from 6th January to 28th February, a longer period than in any winter since 1808-09. Severe and uninterrupted frost for upward of ive weeks, during which time there were but three days in which the mercury rose as high as the freezing point; lowest degree, 5 above zero. Much distress among the poor—river closed on 23d December, opened again by heavy rains and closed again on 16th January.

1831. December 10th—Thus far the coldest December since 1786; lowest degree, 14 above zero; river closed on 3d December.

19. James McCaffery died, aged 64....Douglass Forsyth died, aged 41.
20. The New World steam boat arrived from New York, the first boat of the season....Jacob Lansing died, aged 68. He was born December 17th, 1782, in the old Dutch house on the north-east corner of North Pearl and Columbia streets. He was descended from a long line of Holland ancestry. His grandfathers, Colonel Henry Quackenbush and Colonel Jacob J. Lansing, were patriots in the Revolution, and commanded regiments at the battles of Stillwater and Saratoga, which resulted in the capture of Burgoyne. Col. Quackenbush was also at one time chairman of the Albany committee of safety, during the Revolutionary war. Judge Lansing received the first rudiments of his education at the Granville academy, Washington county, in this state, and afterwards entered Middlebury college, Vt., where he graduated with distinguished honors. Shortly after his return to the residence of his grandfather—it being the present ancient Dutch mansion still standing at the corner of Broadway and Quackenbush street in this city—the war of 1812 broke out with Great Britain, and he was commissioned, by Governor Daniel D. Tompkins, as quartermaster of the 12th regiment, New York state troops, commanded by Col. John T. Van Dalson. He proceeded with his regiment to Sackett's Harbor, and continued in the service until it was disbanded. On his return to this city, he commenced the study of the law in the office of Philip S. Parker, in Lion street, now Washington avenue, and was afterwards duly admitted to practice. He took an active part in politics, on the democratic side, in the great political contests of those days. In 1828 he was appointed judge of the Albany common pleas, and continued in the office until 1838, when he was appointed first judge of said court. During his term of office, the decisions of that court were highly respected. As a presiding magistrate, he was impartial, honest and capable, and gave character to the bench. Early in life he became a professor of religion, and united himself with the Middle Dutch church, and to the time of his death was always noted as being a most devoted follower of Christ. In all the relations of life he was highly honored and respected, and very few men indeed, could claim the respect of so wide a circle of acquaintances and friends.

27. William McMullen died, aged 38. . . . A formal transfer of the Arsenal property was made by the state to the city in exchange for the lot corner of Eagle and Hudson streets, where it was proposed to erect an arsenal.

28. John Van Zandt died, aged 91. He was a native of Albany, and in his boyhood heard the firing of cannon at Saratoga from the walls of Fort Frederick in State street. He was a trusty clerk in the store of James Caldwell for a number of years. In 1804 he entered the Bank of Albany as a clerk; in 1814 he became cashier, which office he held until 1838, when he resigned with a competency, but continued in the directory of the bank till his death. From newspaper notices we gather the following facts in relation to his personal history: Mr. Van Zandt was born in 1767, and his retentive memory brought down to this day reminiscences of the revolutionary age, and of the troubled times that preceded it, that were full of interest. He was one of the old Holland race—though his father and grandfather were both born in Albany—whose language and customs prevailed here long after the revolutionary era, and are only now becoming extinct. His father, John Van Zandt, resided on the east side of Union street—Hudson street park. His mother, Mary Brooks, was of highly respectable English family, well known in this city. In youth, Mr. Van Zandt was for a short time in a banking house in New York, before the first bank was incorporated. While there he often saw Washington and his associates. After this (in the year of Shays's war) James Caldwell put him and another young man, Mr. Mynderse, in charge of a country retail store, at Bennington, Vt. At that time, Troy was scarcely a village, and the way to Bennington was mostly through an unbroken forest. While residing at Bennington, he became acquainted with and married Mehetabel Jones, of Williamstown, Mass., a most estimable lady, and again became a resident of Albany. With her he enjoyed domestic happiness and tranquillity, in an eminent degree, till by her death they were separated, when he was about 74 years of age. To these habits of life, and being strictly temperate, he always attributed his good health and contented, happy old age—not conscious of having harmed any man in life. He retained, till a great age, an accurate memory of the events of his early life. He well remembered hearing the signal gun fired from the top of the old Schuyler mansion, when the Indians in the night came in the rear way, through the corn field and garden, entering the back door and surprising General Schuyler and a few friends who were spending the evening with him. The signal gun rallied the people and frightened the Indians, causing them to make their retreat with but little booty. He was walking on the ramparts of Fort Frederick (which reared its defence in State street, just south of St. Peter's church) at the very time of the battle of Saratoga, and heard the noise of the cannonade. He asked a soldier, who was with him, if this could be so, and the soldier confirmed it, as they were at a height where the strong north-east wind, then blowing, could bear the sound uninterrupted. He remembered also the surrender of Burgoyne and the marching of the captured Hessians through Albany, and was a witness of the most memorable journey ever made into the old war-worn city of Albany. He was a boy, engaged at play on the wharf which—one of the few that existed—was built out at the foot of the present State street. The boys were told that a company of horsemen were coming down Market street, and that one of them was General Schuyler. He ran up to the street to see the group. There rode a company of gentlemen on horseback, in an easy, familiar, companionable way, one of whom was Philip Schuyler, and another John Burgoyne. He saw the Indians gathered in State street above the old Dutch church, to receive their annuity, and exhibiting their dances, and meeting in a desultory council, to the edification of the Albanians. They were seated for the purpose of enumeration on the sidewalk, and the line extended from the church to the present locality of Pearl street, and it was a policy greatly wondered at by the multitude, that the distribution was made per capita, the little strapped-up papoose receiving as much as the old war-chief who, probably, could have entertained the Albanians with curious statistics concerning the scalps of many of their ancestors. He recollected that from the wagons pressed into the service, as they were engaged in transporting ammunition, which had been landed from the sloops at King's wharf, the cannon balls dropped into the wretched roadway, and men engaged under impressment did not pause to gather up their work. He repeatedly saw men executed in Albany, under the decision and direction of the committee of safety, for being tories or cow boys, or highway robbers; and for the lighter offences the whipping post was resorted to. He had the habits of the race. Integrity, resoluteness, economy, aversion to change and to show, and strong local attachment. Tranquil, unambitious, devoid of care, he prolonged his life, without disease, his faculties unclouded, until the few last days of his life.

30. William N. Staats died, aged 78. . . . William Goodson died, aged 27.

MAY.

1. The steam boat New World brought up from New York 500 tons of freight, the charges on which, with the passage money, &c., was over $2,200. This is believed to have been the largest freight ever brought up at one trip....James Baker died, aged 33....Erastus Perry died, aged 72.

2. James Dey Ermand died, aged 55.

3. Elizabeth Capron died, aged 50....Elizabeth, wife of William Wareing died, aged 56....The old vegetable market, an unsightly range of sheds, was pulled down, attracting a good deal of observation. (See next page.)

4. Mrs. Catharine McHarg died, aged 78....Peter Murphy died, aged 33.

5. Archibald McIntyre died, aged 56. He came to this city at an early age from Scotland, and from 1798 to 1802 was a member of Assembly from Montgomery county. In 1806 he was appointed comptroller of the state, an office which he filled with ability and integrity until 1821, when he was removed in consequence of his refusal to pay claims rendered by Gov. Tompkins for services and disbursements during the war, without the proper vouchers. He was soon after elected to the senate for six years. He then became associated with John B. Yates in the management of the state lotteries, in which he continued till the lotteries were abolished. This firm was also largely interested in the Welland canal. At a later period Mr. McIntyre purchased a large tract of land in the northern part of the state, and gave much attention to its improvement....Harriet G., wife of J. C. Robinson, died at Springfield, Mass., aged 53.

6. Eliza A., wife of Caleb Weaver, died, aged 33.... James Turner died, aged 42.

13. Martha, widow of John Meacham, died, aged 67.

15. Anthony Gould died, aged 56. Mr. Gould came to this city in 1821, and after several years of clerkship in the law bookstore of his uncle William Gould, he became a partner in the business. He had retired from active pursuits but a short time, with an ample fortune, when he was overtaken by death suddenly. He was one of the founders of the Congregational church, to which he contributed with great liberality.

16. Sarah, widow of Nicholas Efner and daughter of Sybrant Kittle, died, aged 50.

19. Mrs. Catharine Landers died, aged 62.

20. Joel White died, aged 46.... Matthew A. Russell died, aged 28.... Morris Labascheiner was drowned at the ferry.

21. The Cathedral was robbed of the money in the poor boxes and of several costly prayer books.... A circus made a procession through the streets preceded by a car drawn by six elephants, and containing a steam organ, termed a calliope.

22. Derike, wife of Dier Newton, died, aged 72.

25. Mary, wife of Robert Hutchison, died, aged 49. Thomas McElroy, formerly of Albany, died at New Scotland, aged 56.

26. Granville Slack died, aged 59.

27. Washington G. Gibson, confined in the station house for abuse of his wife, committed suicide, aged 48.

28. Sarah Ann, wife of Henry Mattice, died.

31. Titus Norton died, aged 64.... William A. Duer, formerly of Albany, died in New York. Mr. Duer was a grandson of Lord Stirling, and claimed the title. He was for several years a distinguished member of the legislature of New York, representing Dutchess county, and was a leader in the old federal party. In 1818 he removed to Albany, where he was again elected to represent this county in the state legislature. He joined the democratic party in 1818, and took ground against Governor Clinton. In 1823, he was appointed circuit judge for the circuit embracing Albany, Columbia, Rensselaer, and some other counties. After filling this office for several years, he removed to the city of New York, and was appointed president of Columbia college. He was the author of a life of his ancestor, Lord Stirling, and of a work on constitutional jurisprudence. It was Judge Duer who presided at the trial of Jesse Strang, indicted for the murder of Whipple at Cherry Hill, in the spring of 1827. . . . Benjamin C. Brainard died, aged 50. . . . Philo C. Hackley died, aged 76.

JUNE.

1. John Woodworth died, aged 89. He was a native of Columbia county, and received an education in Albany under John Lovett. In 1791, immediately after his admission to the bar of the supreme court, he settled in Troy in the practice of the law. In that year the county of Rensselaer was taken from Albany and erected into a new county, and the little village of Troy, which had received its name only the year before, began to make some pretensions to rivalry with Lansingburgh, and contended with her for the courthouse, successfully, which was built in 1794. He was the first postmaster in Troy, and held the office about five years, until 1798 or 1799. In 1802 he was elected a member of the legislature, and in 1806 removed to Albany. In 1800 he was an elector of president and vice president, and was associated with William P. Van Ness in a revision of the laws of the state. In March, 1819, he was appointed by Gov. Clinton a judge of the supreme court, and remained on the bench until 1828, when it was assumed that he had reached the period in life at which the constitution interposed a disqualification; in reality he was but 57 instead of 60. He resisted this assumption, and a suit was pending at the time of his death to recover three years' salary. He had recently prepared an argument in an important case at law which had elicited the admiration of the whole bar. His active habits and temperate mode of life contributed to his good health, cheerfulness and longevity. Until a few weeks before his death his erect form and agile step indicated a person but little past the middle age rather than one who had lived almost through a whole century.

Mrs. Susan Peterson died, aged 86. She was an aged colored woman, who for the past twenty-seven years had lived in the family of Mr. Rufus H. King of this city. Aunt Susan, as she was called by her many friends, was born in 1772. Her mother was a slave in the family of General Ten Broeck of this city, where the subject of this notice was born. As a little girl she remembered waiting upon General Washington at the house of General Ten Broeck, and retained a vivid recollection of the father of his country. At the age of 17, Aunt Susan became a member of the North Dutch church, then under the pastoral charge of Domine Westerlo. Of this church she remained a consistent and exemplary member during her long life. It was supposed that, at the time of her death, she was the oldest member of that congregation. Aunt Susan was once married. She raised a large family of children, but one of whom, however, a daughter, survived her. She was a woman possessing many virtues, and her memory will long live with those who visited the house of Mr. King.... A fire in First street, Arbor hill, destroyed a cabinet shop and the dwelling of Mrs. Griesman, who with her children narrowly escaped with their lives. Loss $1500; no insurance.

2. Jane C., wife of Nelson Bailey, died, aged 47.

3. Mrs. Mary Youds died, aged 47.

9. Benjamin Gibson died, aged 67.... Mrs. Hannah Slingerland died, aged 47.

10. Azor Taber, a distinguished counselor at law, died, aged 60. He came to this city in 1824, and was some time a law partner of Jabez D. Hammond. In 1827 he took an active part in the reelection of John Quincy Adams to the office of president, and wrote for the Albany Morning Chronicle. He was senator in 1852 and 1853, which were the only civil offices he filled; but was noted for his industry and ability as a legal practitioner, during a residence of nearly a quarter of a century. In 1854 he retired from business and resided in Knox, the town of his birth. He took an active part in the temperance movement.

11. Jane, widow of Joseph T. Rice, died, aged 64.... Lawrence Dowd died, aged 59.

15. Isabella, wife of John N. McKaig, died, aged 28. John Hermans died, aged 79.

16. Mrs. Neal McCotter died, aged 72. In a fit of insanity she put an end to her existence.

17. A fire at the corner of Franklin and Bassett streets destroyed several wooden tenements and a grocery; loss $10,000.

18. John Beetham died, aged 49.

20. Harriet K., wife of Edmund Burdick, died.

23. Dr. Nanning Visscher Winne died, aged 52.... A fire broke out at the corner of Orange and Water streets, which destroyed several buildings, and much lumber in the yard of Messrs. Bullock & Many; also swept away the machine shop of Mellen Battel. Loss about $20,000.

24. Mary, wife of John Hurdis, died, aged 57.

25. John Bantham died, aged 89.

27. Thomas P. Waters died, aged 45.

28. Festival of the Turnverein, which continued two days, at Blackman's bush, on the border of Bethlehem.

29. John Cassidy died, aged 29.

30. A building in Arch street west of Grand, used for preparing patent roofing material, was burnt. Loss about $250; no insurance.... The chief engineer of the fire department reported 37 fires during the year, 21 alarms, and 7 false alarms; making 65 times that the department had been called out during the year. The amount of property destroyed was $45,064, of which $34,149 was insured, leaving $11,015 loss to the owners.

JULY.

1. Alarms of fire, real and false, were of unusually frequent occurrence.

2. Powers L. Green died, aged 34.... A fire in Sand street destroyed several wooden sheds of little value.

3. Catharine, wife of Thurlow Weed, died, aged 61.

7. Thomas Bowen died, aged 65....Mrs. Margaret Flansburgh died, aged 79.

10. John Calhoun died, aged 29.

11. Charles A. Vedder died, aged 22....A warm and sultry morning was followed by a tremendous tempest, which spent its utmost fury north of the city, and a fall of 35 deg. in the temperature of the atmosphere succeeded.

13. Joel Courtney died, aged 29....A tempest of rain deluged the city.

15. John N. Wilder died, aged 44. He was a native of New Braintree, Mass., and came to this city in 1828. He commenced active life as a clerk in the dry goods establishment of Wilder & Hastings, corner of State and Green streets, of which firm Ephraim Wilder, his uncle, was chief partner, and at his death left him the principal part of his fortune. He began business for himself in connection with Mr. Wm. E. Bleecker, in the wholesale dry goods business, and was afterwards connected with two or three other establishments; and although a prudent and capable business man, did not give his whole energies to those enterprises, but took a deep interest in civil, religious and educational institutions. He made a donation of ten thousand dollars to the Rochester university, and by public addresses in different parts of the state, and by personal appeals, he procured tens of thousands from others. More than any other man he was regarded as the founder of that institution, and was president of the board of trustees at the time of his death.

16. A fire at 1 o'clock in the morning destroyed a carpenter's shop in Clinton avenue....Oliver Mills died, aged 36.

18. Henry S. Pemberton died, aged 53.

26. James Stack died, aged 47.

27. The steam canal boat Charles Wack, from Buffalo, arrived in six days, intended as an experiment of steam navigation on the Erie canal.....John V. James died in New York, aged 20.

30. D. D. T. Moore died, aged 47.....Michael Caddey died, aged 53.

31. Cortland Schuyler died, aged 72, and was buried from his residence in Tivoli hollow.....Sarah A., wife of John Gordon, died, aged 39.

AUGUST.

1. Joseph J. Wright died, aged 62.

2. The iron bridge over the canal at the foot of Lawrence street, while a drove of cattle were crossing, gave way and fell into the canal, carrying down a hundred cattle. The water was drawn off, and the cattle rescued.

5. News received of the successful laying of the Atlantic telegraph wire.....Calvert Comstock, editor of the Atlas & Argus assumed the duties of postmaster.

6. The telegraph office illuminated in honor of the completion of the Atlantic telegraph. Every office in the United States from Maine to California was illuminated at the same time.

7. A fire in Rotten row, Hamilton street, between Green and Liberty; damage slight.

8. An alarm of fire in Elk street; roof damaged.

9. The common council and others visited the brewery of John Taylor & Sons in the evening to inspect the new clock and bell erected in that establishment. The dial plates of the clock are six feet in diameter, and the bell weighs 1200 pounds. They are elevated nearly 100 feet from the street, and cost $4000. The clock is illuminated by gas burners and reflectors, and the time may be distinguished at considerable distance. After examining the clock, the company was invited into the library, for the purpose of partaking of a collation. Mr. Taylor's library consists of about 10,000 volumes. After several speeches and sentiments were got off, the party dispersed, highly pleased with the entertainment.

The trustees of the North Dutch church undertook the repairing and remodeling of their edifice. It was built in 1798, in the Italian Renaissance style, in which, at that time, almost all public as well as private buildings were erected. Of late years, however, architecture has made rapid progress; and since the early Christian styles have been the subject of profound and patient study, their beauty and symmetry is more and more appreciated; and they have with very few exceptions, been since applied in the construction and ornamentation of modern churches. This church was remodeled in the Romanesque style, which preceded the Gothic. The four brick columns in front, with the Doric gable, were replaced by an arcade of three round arches, from which three doors open into the vestibule. The flat ceiling in the church was replaced by groined vaults, supported by thin and graceful columns, with Romanesque capitals. The old, narrow and high pulpit was removed, and a wide open platform, with a lecturn constructed in its stead. The windows were filled with stained glass after new designs. The towers were carried up higher and covered with slate. In the rear an addition was made to the church, to contain Sunday school rooms, a room for the trustees, a vestry-room, and a large lecture room, capable of seating between 350 and 400 persons, the old one being entirely too small for the purposes to which it was applied. The designs were made by Von Steinwehr and Hodgins, eminent architects, under whose superintendence the improvements were carried out.

13. Thomas S. Knight died, aged 41.

14. John G. Don died, aged 31.

16. The first message across the Atlantic telegraph was received in the evening from the queen of England, whereupon there was a spontaneous outburst from every mouth, and the greatest rejoicings were enacted in all ordinary and some extraordinary ways, which were continued during the whole night Angus McDonald died, aged 53. . . . Ann Rodeau died, aged 72.

18. Mrs. James E. McClure died.

19. John B. Nellegar died, aged 45.

21. Christiana, wife of Hathorn McCulloch, died, aged 79.

24. William A. Wadsworth died, aged 36. . . . Mrs. Joel West, late of Albany, died at West Lee, Mass., aged 60.
25. Abijah Hall died, aged 83. . . . Nancy Tufts died, aged 28.
28. Hamilton Blanchard, aged 26, died at Salem, Washington county.
29. Adaline, wife of Henry T. Meech, died at Buffalo.
30. Mrs. Charles Sayles died, aged 40.

SEPTEMBER.

1. Mary T., wife of B. S. Van Rensselaer, died at Ballston. . . . John J. Fitzpatrick died, aged 24. . . . Great celebration of the success of the Atlantic telegraph. The fete by day was never equaled on any former occasion, and the illumination by night far surpassed any thing every before seen here. All business was suspended by common consent, and the whole city entered into the spirit of the jubilee spontaneously.

3. Elizabeth Parker died, aged 78.

4. Margaret Linacre died, aged 85. . . . Robert Furman died in Williamsburgh, aged 34.

5. Mrs. Anna B., wife of Aaron Ryder, died at Milford, Mass., aged 37; formerly of Albany.

7. John Hilton died, aged 74.

10. Nathan Cornell, who formerly resided on the island below the city, died at Syracuse, aged 88. . . . William O'Donnell died, aged 50.

11 Elizabeth Valentine died, aged 87.

14. Mary Jane, wife of James L. Mitchell, died, aged 35. . . . Jacob Downing, formerly of this city, died at Rochester, Ohio, aged 67. He was an alderman of the 8th ward, and was many years ago the projector of the soup house charity, which came to be a very corrupt charity, the best pieces of meat unaccountably disappearing.

16. Margaret, wife of John O'Conner, died, aged 54.

17. A bell was placed in the tower of the Swan street Methodist Episcopal church, weighing 2000 lbs.

22. Silas C. Parsons died, aged 77.

23. David Bryan died, aged 29. . . . James B. Douglass, formerly of Albany, died in New York, aged 71.

25. Harriet Lavinia Covert, wife of William H. Allen, died at Middle Granville, aged 24.

26. Anna M. Van Allen died, aged 17. . . . William Mahony died, aged 57.

28. Thomas H. Dobbs died, aged 57.

29. Firemen's jubilee. Nearly 3000 firemen from six different states gathered here for a display, from Detroit in the west, Providence in the east and Newark in the south, and numerous intermediate places, to the number of 61 companies, including those of the city. There were 19 bands of music in the procession. First came two carriages, in one of which was Jonathan Brooks, an ancient fireman, with a fire cap of No. 8, of which he was foreman fifty-eight years ago. Exempt firemen to the number of 200 drew old No. 4, built by James Rogers. These old fellows had got so thoroughly warmed up on the occasion, that notwithstanding their long march, when the procession broke up they could not resist the inclination to have a run with der masheene, and accordingly with an old fashioned "Hi yi! give way boys! give way!" they took a run up State street, which called out the hearty cheers of the young firemen and spectators. . . . Ann Bell, aged 22, was killed by the falling of a stone upon her head while witnessing the procession. . . . James Lamb died, aged 40. . . . Catharine Kelley died, aged 90.

30. This day was given by the seventy fire companies to competing for the prizes. It was a time of intense excitement, and continued till the close of day, the prizes, amounting to $1800 being paid to the foremen of the successful engines in gold. The weather had been until 7 o'clock every thing that could be desired. At that hour a violent tempest of wind, rain and electricity burst upon the city, and brought down the top-mast of the lofty flag staff in the parade ground, which had served to mark the prowess of the firemen in the contest for superiority. The streets were nevertheless still redolent of red shirts, and squads of firemen pervaded the streets jubilant with success and excitement.

OCTOBER.

1. The morning again echoed with the music of fife and drum, as the remaining companies of firemen were escorted to the steam boats and rail road cars on their departure homeward, and by 12 o'clock the last red shirt disappeared. The fete was a complete success, eclipsing every thing of the kind that had preceded it in this place, in the memory of man.... Peter White died, aged 56.

2. Rev. Henry Mandeville, formerly pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, died at Mobile. The following obituary notice of him is from the Utica Herald: "By telegraph we have the intelligence of the death at Mobile, Alabama, the 2d inst., of Rev. Henry Mandeville, D. D., well known to our citizens as a scholar and clergyman. It is a quarter of a century since Dr. Mandeville came to this city from Geneva, and became pastor of the Reformed Dutch church, in which capacity and afterwards as pastor of the First Presbyterian church, he made many warm friends, and won a high reputation as a pulpit orator. In 1841, he became Professor of Moral Philosophy and Rhetoric at Hamilton college, and continued in that post for eight years. During that time he published several works on elocution, which possess great value and have become standards in that department in many of our best institutions. During the earlier part of this period he also occupied the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church, and in 1843, or thereabouts, was again unanimously invited to resume the pastorate. This, however, he declined, and remained at Clinton until 1849. He thence removed to Albany, and was for some years pastor of one of the Presbyterian churches there. His health failing, he went to Mobile to spend the winter, and was invited to occupy the pulpit of Dr. Hamilton's church in that city, and before his visit was completed he was pressed to accept a call to take up his residence as pastor of that largest and wealthiest church in the state. Considerations of health and usefulness induced him to yield to the request, and he has there found a grave.

“Dr. Mandeville was a native of this state, and it will be seen from this brief sketch, spent a good part of the summer of his life in Oneida county. He was a genial and broad-hearted man. As a pastor he was popular and useful, and as a preacher evinced more culture, oratory, force and taste, than are often combined in the same person. He was always an attractive speaker, and as a public lecturer, his efforts were very successful. As an author, his system of elocution is original and of conceded value. Dr. Mandeville was much above the average of men in ability, acquirements and usefulness; and as is the case with every faithful pastor, his eulogy as a Christian minister is best written on the hearts of those who have personal experience of the good results of his labors.”.... Thomas Johnson died, aged 50.

Oct. 3. Ebenezer E. A. Roberts died, aged 37.... St. Peter's church was not opened for service on account of the insecurity of the ceiling. The walls had long been in a dilapidated condition, the foundation having settled in several places so as to cause large fissures on the east side. The congregation worshiped in the lecture room of the State Agricultural Society.

Oct. 4. Robert Kirkpatrick died, aged 68..... The comet, which for several weeks had increased in brilliancy, was now at its nearest proximity, and made the finest display that had been witnessed in many years.

5. Rachel, wife of Julius Tremper, died.

6. Eliza Davis died, aged 42..... Dr. David M. McLachlan, formerly professor of materia medica in the Albany Medical College, and a practicing physician here, died at Cleveland, Oneida county, N. Y., aged 55. He was a native of Scotland, and a graduate of Edinburgh college.

8. Alice Harney died, aged 44..... The Burgesses Corps celebrated the 25th anniversary of the organization of the corps, which took place at the Maiden Lane Saloon in 1833. The first captain was John O. Cole, who was succeeded by Capt. Bayeux, Capt. Humphrey,

B. R. Spelman, Rufus King, Franklin Townsend, J. W. Blanchard, Wm. J. Thomas, and B. R. Spelman again. Although it is a quarter of a century since the organization of the corps, but one of the above officers has deceased, namely, Capt. Bayeux. 22. Isaac Newton, manager and principal owner of the People's Line of steam boats, died in New York, aged 63. He was the son of a soldier of the revolution, and was born in the town of Schodack, Rensselaer county, N. Y., on the 10th of January, 1794. When Robert Fulton's first boat, named the Clermont, in honor of Chancellor Livingston, made her trial trip in August, 1807, Mr. Newton was 13 years of age, and through life retained a distinct recollection of the ridicule, astonishment and incredulity which attended the inauguration of steam navigation. His attention thus drawn to the subject, seconded his inclination and constructive talent; and over ninety vessels, consisting of ocean steamers, steam boats, barges, sloops, &c., have been built under his supervision. He established the first line of tow boats on the Hudson, and in 1835 he built the steam boat Balloon, the first of the splendid river craft which have won the admiration of the world. The North America, South America, Isaac Newton, New World, Hendrik Hudson, &c., followed, and gave rise to the term floating palaces, as used to express the magnificence of our river and lake steamers. Mr. Newton commenced his career as master of a river sloop, and was entirely a self-made man. He was a practical Christian. For some thirty years he has been an active member of the Oliver Street Baptist church, and during most of that time a Sunday school teacher.....Helen Louisa Gourlay died, aged 40.

THE

CHURCH OF THE HOLY INNOCENTS.

The church which bears this title was the fifth parish organized in this city by the Protestant Episcopal church. The increase of the population, and the extension of the city had necessitated some special provision for the spiritual wants of the members of that church living in the northern part of the town. A considerable part of them, however, were neither sufficiently settled in their residence, nor pecuniarily able to originate so important an undertaking, of themselves. The claims of this field had not been unobserved by others; but a decisive movement to accomplish the object of building up a congregation in that quarter was first made in 1847 by the Rector of St. Paul's church in cooperation, chiefly, with the layman, then and for many years its senior-warden, who finally assumed the whole expense of the undertaking. It was proposed to erect a chapel in the northern part of the city, and to sustain it as a free church and mission. The disastrous fire of 1848 put a stop to the circulation of the subscription paper which had been commenced, and nothing was accomplished. A sketch of the chapel intended to be built had been obtained from Mr. Frank Wills, an admirable architect, and estimates in accordance with it had been made, the material to be of brick, and the edifice to be as inexpensive as possible. The means to build with were not forthcoming. Eventually Mr. William H. De Witt, who had taken a leading part in the enterprise from the commencement, assumed the entire cost and charge of the work, having already given the site for the building.

The corner stone of the church was laid by the Rt. Rev. the Bishop of Maryland, June 7, 1849, with the usual services, in the presence of a number of clergymen, the Rev. Dr. Kip delivering an address. The work on the building was pushed forward with energy, by Messrs. Orr & Cunningham, masons; Mr. Stuart and Mr. Parsons, wood-workers. Being the first specimen of proper Early English architecture, in the city, the edifice was an object of curiosity to many besides those who felt a deeper interest in it in view of the sacred purposes which it was to subserve.

On Sexagesima Sunday, A. D. 1850, being the 3d of February, the church, being entirely completed and arranged, it was first opened for the solemn services to which it was ever after to be appropriated. The Rev. Sylvanus Reed, who had taken the charge of the parish, officiated and preached on this occasion.

The legal organization of the parish in accordance with the statutes of the state of New York, took place on the 16th of February, 1850. The wardens and vestrymen elected at that time were the following:

Wardens.—William H. De Witt, John Buckbee.

Vestrymen.—Robert Server, John D. Parsons, John H. Bowne, E. H. Clarke, Joshua Rathbun, S. H. H. Parsons, Esq., Wm. Headlam, and Wm. Lacy.

And at the first meeting of the vestry, the Rev. Mr. Reed was elected to the Rectorship of the church.

The certificate of the incorporation of the parish having been laid before the standing committee of the diocese of New York, it was formally approved by them on the 13th of June; and it was admitted to union with the convention of the diocese at the Special meeting of convention, in November, 1850.*

The congregation had not yet been gathered, but as soon as the church was opened, those who signified to the Rector their desire to become members of the parish were registered and visited by him.

The Holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was first celebrated on Sunday the 17th of February, to about twenty persons, there being then about thirty families in the congregation. Holy baptism was administered to an adult at evening prayer on the same day. A daily service was for some time celebrated. The Sunday school was organized at the close of the year, in a school room furnished by Mr. De Witt.

The entire property, consisting of two lots of ground, and of the church edifice, with its furniture, was conveyed by a perpetual lease to the corporation, legally formed, of the Rector, Wardens and Vestry of the Church of the Holy Innocents, upon condition that the church should always be occupied by, and used in the services of the Protestant Episcopal church; that its sittings should always be free; that its donors should have the care of the grounds, edifice and furniture, and temporalities, the privilege of enlarging the building, and of nominating to the rectorship. The donors also reserved the right of re-entering the premises for the purpose of conveying them to any other corporation of the Episcopal church in the city; or to a chartered school; without, however, diverting the church from the sacred uses, originally intended, or altering its character as a Free church. A reservation of a right of nomination to the rectorship, to the donors and their heirs (said heirs to be of the age of twenty-one years, and communicants in the P. E. church), was, subsequently by formal release, changed to a right to descend to their issue; and was limited to three nominations and required to be exercised within a year from the occurrence of a vacancy. They also reserved the right to erect a free school on any part of the church lot.

Arrangements were made for the consecration of the church in July, 1850; but the illness of Bishop Whittingham prevented its taking place at that time, although the clergy and people were assembled in the church.*

*Opposition was made to the consecration of the church and a protest against the Bishop's proceeding was presented to him, signed by three clergymen of the city, one of whom some time after formally retracted his part in it. The ground of the opposition was, the nature of the reservations to the donors, and their heirs, and it was alleged that the deed of conveyance had been altered from the form in

The solemn services of consecration were performed on the 3d September, 1850, by Bishop Whittingham, of the Diocese of Maryland.* There were present and assisting in the services, the Rev. Dr. Potter,† rector of St. Peter's, Albany; the Rev. Dr. Wm. Crowwell‡ of Boston, the Rev. Dr. Williams§ of Connecticut, the Rev. Mr. Reed, rector of the parish, the Rev. Messrs. Geer, Arey, and Babcock. The request to consecrate was presented and read by the Rector, the Sentence of Consecration|| was which it had been drawn up by Mr. J. C. Spencer, and assented to, as satisfactory, on the first opening of the church. The allegation was unfounded. The deed was made out in the office of J. V. L. Pruyn, Esq., and is a verbatim copy of the original draft made by Mr. J. C. Spencer, and admitted by him to contain nothing which could prevent the consecration. The Bishop received the protest; but on a conference with the donors, the right of nomination to the rectorship was limited (as by the release above), when he determined on proceeding.

*The Bishop of Maryland was at that time performing Episcopal functions in the diocese of New York, at the request of the ecclesiastical authority, during the disability of the Diocesan.

|| In the Name of the Holy, Blessed and undivided Trinity, God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Amen.

Whereas the Rector, Churchwardens and Vestrymen of the Church of Holy Innocents in the city of Albany, have by an instrument this day presented to me appropriated and devoted a house of public worship erected by William Henry De Witt and Ann his wife, on the south east corner of North Pearl and Colonie streets, in the said city of Albany, to the worship and service of Almighty God, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, according to the provisions of the Catholic Church of CHRIST, known as the Protestant Episcopal church in these United States of America, in its ministry, doctrines, liturgy, rites and usages, and by a congregation in communion with said church, and in union with the convention thereof in the Diocese of New York.

And whereas the same Rector, Churchwardens and Vestrymen, have, by the same instrument, requested me to receive the said building in behalf of the Bishop of the Diocese of New York, under the spiritual jurisdiction of the said Bishop, and that of his successors in office, and to consecrate the same by the name of the Church of the Holy Innocents, and thereby separate it from all unhallowed, worldly read by the Rev. Dr. Williams. The Bishop proceeded with great solemnity, through the appointed prayers, after which the services of morning prayer and the Holy Communion were celebrated; the bishop preaching, and consecrating the Holy Eucharist. The first confirm-and common uses, and solemnly dedicate it to the holy purposes above mentioned.

Now therefore, know all men by these presents, that I, William Rollinson Whittingham, Bishop of Maryland, and now administering Episcopal functions in the Diocese of New York, at the request of the Standing Committee of the said Diocese, acting under the protection of Almighty GOD, and in His faith and fear, have on this third day of September, being the Tuesday after the Fourteenth Sunday after Trinity, in the year of our LORD one thousand eight hundred and fifty, in behalf of the Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church in the Diocese of New York, and of his successors in office, accepted and do accept, the above mentioned house of worship, and take the same under the spiritual jurisdiction of the Bishop of New York aforesaid, and that of his successors in office, and in presence of divers of the clergy and a public congregation therein assembled, and according to the godly usage of the Catholic Church of CHRIST and the form prescribed by the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States of America, have consecrated the same by the name of the Church of the Holy Innocents.

And I do hereby pronounce and declare that the said Church of the Holy Innocents, in the city of Albany, is consecrated accordingly, and thereby separated henceforth from all unhallowed, worldly and common uses, and dedicated to the worship and service of Almighty GOD, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, for reading and preaching His holy word, for celebrating His holy sacraments, for offering to His glorious majesty the sacrifices of prayer, praise and thanksgiving, for blessing His people in His name, and for the performance of all other holy offices and the administration of all holy ordinances agreeable to His will made known in the terms of the covenant of Grace and Salvation in our LORD and Saviour Jesus Christ, according to the usages of His holy Catholic and Apostolic church and the provisions of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States of America, in its ministry, doctrines, liturgy, rites and usages.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto affixed my Episcopal seal and signature in the day and year above written, and in the tenth year of my consecration.

Bishop of Maryland, administering Episcopal functions in the Diocese of New York at the request of the Standing Committee.

ation in the parish was held by him on this occasion, when he administered the Laying on of hands to sixteen persons.*

The church was designed by Mr. Frank Wills, an architect educated in England, and one of the most accomplished men in his profession.†

The following description of the edifice is taken from Mr. Wills' work on Architecture (Stanford & Swords, N. Y., 1850):

“The Chancel is eighteen feet by twenty feet in the clear. The Nave fifty-eight feet by twenty-eight feet. In the Chancel are Altar, Sedilia, Credence, Bishop's Chair, Stalls, Altar-rails, and Lectern. The Sacristy is on the south side, and the Pulpit in the S. E. angle of the Nave is entered from it through a doorway in the east wall of the Nave. The roofs are open, of pine, of the best quality: the carved ribs and purlins are all molded, the former resting on handsome corbels. The Font‡ is of Caen stone, after the beautiful one of S. Mary's, Oxford, and is situated between the Porch and west doorways. The Organ, of fine rich tone, manufactured by Mr. Jardine, is placed in a gallery at the west end. The seats, as well as all the chancel furniture and pulpit are of black walnut.

“All the windows are filled with colored glass, without doubt the best imitation of old English art yet executed in this country. The east window is a rich mosaic pattern, with the Crucifixion and the symbols of the Four Evangelists within foliated and geometrical borders. The side windows of Chancel (and the four lancets in the west front) are taken from some remains of ancient glass in Salisbury Cathedral. Those of the Nave are of modified design. Mr. Bolton* is the artist who executed this work. In the north wall of chancel is a marble Tablet commemorating the Founder's children; their four names are inscribed each within a wreath of lilies of the valley, at the foot is a lamb sleeping, at the apex is a cross fleuri, the whole being encircled with a hood moulding."

The Communion Plate consists of a Flagon, a Chalice, and Paten, all of silver, of appropriate design and handsomely engraved and chased; the interior of the Chalice being richly gilt. These pieces were furnished by the Founder. At the Feast of Epiphany, 1859, a costly Alms Basin, of silver, gilt, was presented to the Parish. It bears the Offering of the Magi, engraved in the centre, and around the border the text, "For all things come of Thee, and of Thine Own have we given Thee." This was given by Mr. E. H. Clarke.

A fine bell hangs in the bell gable.

The Nave bears the Te Deum in illuminated letters, running around the walls. Over the chancel arch is the text, illuminated, "Though I walk through the valley of the Shadow of Death, I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me, Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me."

The roof of the chancel has been beautifully painted and ornamented, with a blue ground, bearing stars in gold and white lilies.

The following are the members of the Vestry in the year 1859:

Wardens.—Wm. H. De Witt, E. H. De Witt.

Vestrymen.—R. Server, J. Rathbun, J. H. Bowne, G. T. Bratt, T. Young, W. Mason, T. Becket, A. H. De Witt.

John Gregory has been Sacristan of the church since 1851.

The Rector reports to the Bishop at the Diocesan Convention, Sep. 1858, as follows (Journal of Convention, Diocese of New York, 1858):

Families, 125; Individuals, 500; Baptisms (for the year), adults 2, infants 34; confirmed, 24; marriages, 5; burials, 26; communicants, 144; Sunday School Teachers, 16; Sunday scholars, 160.

The Parish has been sustained as a Free Church without pew rents, the Congregation supplying the support by voluntary Offerings, at the time of Divine Service.

For all the tokens of His favour towards this Church of the Holy Innocents,
Thanks be to GOD.

THIRD REF. PROT. DUTCH CHURCH.

The third Dutch Church of Albany was organized on the 19th day of December, 1834, under an act of the legislature entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of religious societies." On the 3d of December, the Rev. Dr. Isaac Ferris received an appointment from the Classis of Albany, to organize a Dutch church, and in consequence of such appointment notice was given in the church edifice in Westerlo st.,* two successive Sabbaths, (according to the provisions of the constitution of the denomination) that all persons desirous of being organized into a third Dutch church should produce the necessary dismissions from other churches. A number were received, and the individuals first assembled resolved on the style of the "Third Reformed Protestant Dutch Church in the City of Albany." Edmund S. Herrick, William C. Miller, and Nathan Lyman were chosen the first elders of the church, and John Van Schaack and James C. Spencer, deacons. Application having been made, the new church was received under the care of the Classis of Albany, in January 1835. The Rev. Edwin Holmes, of Livingston, was now invited to become their pastor, and he commenced his labors on the 26th of the same month.

A suitable location in the southern part of the city was at once sought as a permanent site for a building. Through the liberality of the late Patroon, (Hon. Stephen Van Rensselaer), the land on which the present edifice stands was secured, upon certain conditions, and in the summer of 1835, the plans submitted by H. Rector, Architect, were adopted. The estimated cost of the building was $15,000, and a subscription to secure that amount was circulated among the friends of the church. The corner stone of the new edifice was laid by Christian Miller,* on the 20th of April, 1837, on which occasion the Rev. Dr. Ferris delivered an address. In spite of many and serious obstacles, the trustees pushed forward the work of building, and in the summer of the next year the church was formally dedicated.

Mr. Holmes resigned his charge in October, 1840. Rev. Dr. Andrew Yates of Schenectady succeeded him as a temporary pastor. The debt of the church had become quite large, and the congregation discouraged. Dr. Yates labored with a most devoted zeal to procure the extinguishment of the debt, but in the midst of his efforts, which were by no means unsuccessful, the church building was destroyed by fire. This event took place on the 28th of September, 1841, at noon. The difficulties against which they had contended, and now, the destruction of the church property well nigh disheartened them, and had it not been for the counsels and prayers of Dr. Yates, the enterprise would in all probability have been abandoned. But as has been said of him—he could not be discouraged.

The former building having been insured, the claims against it were now paid up, and renewed efforts made for its reconstruction. These efforts were entirely successful, and in the course of the next summer the congregation took possession of their new church.

About one month previous to the destruction of the church, the congregation had invited Rev. William H. Campbell, of Flatbush, to become their pastor. He accepted the call, and was installed in the Second Dutch church on the 1st Sabbath in Nov. 1841. The sermon on that occasion was preached by Prof. McClelland. Under the guidance of divine providence, the ministrations of Dr. Campbell, both in spiritual and temporal affairs, were conducted in a manner which evinced satisfactorily that he bore most worthily the mantle of Dr. Yates. After a pastorate of about seven years he was compelled to seek employment less laborious, and the position of Principal of the Albany Academy, as successor to Dr. Beck, having been tendered to him, he felt it his duty to accept it. On the 8th of September, 1848, his pastoral connection with the church was dissolved.

Rev. Rutgers Van Brunt was invited to become pastor, Nov. 4, 1848, and he accepted the call. After a brief ministration he resigned, April 17, 1849. He was succeeded by Rev. William W. Halloway, who was called on the 27th of June, and remained pastor until April 12, 1853, when he accepted a flattering invitation to organize and maintain a Dutch Church in a new and flourishing part of Brooklyn.

The Rev. Alex. Dickson succeeded Mr. Halloway on the 10th of October, 1853. He is the present pastor, highly esteemed and beloved.

A device for a seal was adopted January 26, 1835, viz: An anchor surrounded with the words, Third R. P. D. Church, Albany.

MEMOIR OF JOHN LOVETT.

Mr. Lovett was a descendant of an English family which immigrated as early as 1640, and settled in a beautiful location in Connecticut, upon the Quinnebaug river, which disembogues into the Thames at New London. It originally formed a part of the town of Norwich, but when Lisbon was set off from that town, it was included in the latter. The property still remains in the possession of the descendants of the original owners, its ancient burial place filled with monuments whose inscriptions are so worn by time and the elements that the traditions of the place alone tell who are the occupants. Among them is seen the grave of a "Cadet of the house of Lovat," who after a clandestine marriage with a granddaughter of the Lord Sands who figures in Shakspeare's play of Henry VIII, fled to this country, where they found a resting place and a grave amongst those of their fellow Puritans. The wildest and most exciting engagements between the Pequot and Mohegan tribes and the early settlers, took place in this vicinity. These may have fostered the military spirit for which this little settlement was afterwards noted. On the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, the Rev. Andrew Lee gave notice from his pulpit, that early on the following morning a meeting was requested of every male member of his congregation, to pray for the success of their brethren in arms, and to organize a body of volunteers from that parish. They enrolled themselves almost to a man, under Captain Lovett; the pastor also went with them, and every female assisted in fitting them out. It was in the midst of this and other similar scenes that Mr. Lovett received his first impressions. Distinguished for precocity of mind, extraordinary memory, and the great progress he made in his studies, he was placed at Lebanon, then the most noted school in that region, to prepare himself to enter Yale College. In the latter institution he attracted the attention of President Stiles by his uncommon attainments in the classics, as well as by his poetical efforts. At the weekly exercises in oratory, he uniformly recited compositions of his own, which being often humorous, received the applause of grave professors as well as the more youthful auditory. He was graduated in 1782 with distinction, and soon after came to Albany, whither he had been invited with the encouragement that an academical institution would be opened, at the head of which he would be placed. He brought the highest recommendations from President Stiles, not only for attainments in knowledge, but also for excellence and purity of character, which gave him the confidence of the strangers among whom he was to cast his lot for life. Disappointed in the result of the efforts that were made for the establishment of a seminary of learning here, he commenced the study of the law in the office of Richard Sill, then one of the eminent lawyers of Albany, where he had the advantage of making the acquaintance of Gen. Schuyler, Gen. Hamilton, Abraham Van Vechten, Col. Troup, and Col. Burr, who was then at the zenith of his reputation. Here he also became acquainted with Col. Duer, the father of the two distinguished lawyers which have since borne his name. By his representations he was induced, soon after being admitted to practice, to proceed to Fort Miller, where the Colonel had made a very large purchase of land, and begun his settlement in a new country, where the surrounding woods reached the outskirts of his buildings, by erecting a mansion one hundred and forty-four feet long! The Lady Katy, as the courtesy of that day termed the eldest daughter of Lord Stirling, was residing there with her two little sons and their tutor, Mr. Lovett as general agent, and a land steward, who was to sell the land if any one wished to purchase—the wolves howling in chorus around the very purlieus of the Italian piazzas. Here Mr. Lovett and his faithful negro man Juba, commenced professional life—the latter much the most successful of the two, for his gun could supply the daily wants of the family without making drafts upon his master's father. To this peculiarly romantic residence, Mr. Lovett took his youthful wife from Connecticut, a daughter of Gen. McClellan, and remained there several years, gaining the confidence and esteem of the people to such a degree as to lay the foundation of a very large and profitable business in his profession, after his removal to Lansingburgh. The story of the feudal grandeur which was commenced at Fort Miller is soon told. Col. Duer never went up there; Lady Katy and her two little sons returned to New York, and the only advantage resulting from this magnificent scheme was the habit of public speaking which the young Duers acquired, by being placed upon the dinner table by their mother, every day, after the cloth was removed, and there taught to speak unabashed by the company that might be present. The establishment went to ruin, was torn down, and the material sold for a trifle; and thus ended this as well as other similar and equally vain attempts to build up seigniories in this state like those of Canada.

From Fort Miller Mr. Lovett removed to Lansingburgh, which, strange to say, attracted more attention half a century ago, than it has since. Here he enjoyed many years of peace, prosperity and happiness. In 1800 he was elected a member of Assembly from

Hon. John Lovett.

Rensselaer county. The profits of his professional life enabled him to purchase a number of beautiful farms on the Hudson river, and indulge that taste which was almost a passion with him, for agricultural pursuits. In 1807 he removed to Albany, where a large portion of his earliest friends welcomed him again. He took an active part in the exciting political controversies of the day, and his ready pen was brought into constant requisition, for the service of the federal party, to which, from youth, he had been most warmly attached. He continued the practice of the law, to which were added the duties of clerk of the common council, until the breaking out of the war in 1812. This measure, although so strongly opposed by his party, became the law of the land. Gen. Stephen Van Rensselaer, his early friend, was appointed to the command of the troops destined for the defence of the north-western frontier, and at his earnest solicitation Mr. Lovett was induced to accompany him as military secretary. In answer to Mr. Lovett's doubt as to how he should succeed as a soldier, since he had never even trained as a militiaman in his life, the General replied, "It is not your sword, but your pen that I want." It was a fearful crisis in the life of the General, involving his reputation. One party boldly advocated an agrarian law, to divide these overgrown estates among the people, if their owners declined to come out at the call of their government and defend them. Mr. Lovett's personal attachment to the General was such that he did not hesitate to assume this new calling. The party of citizen soldiers marched to Canada, accompanied by many brave volunteers who were destined never to return.

Before the dawn of that disastrous day of the battle of Queenstown, the General requested Mr. Lovett to take charge of a battery erected on the American side, which was to keep in check any body of the enemy that should appear on their own high and broken bank, and by a well directed fire to prevent them from firing down upon the American troops which were crossing the stream below to make the attack. He took his post with alacrity, but when the battle commenced it was too dark to distinguish, without the greatest care, the American troops ascending the heights, from those of the enemy rushing to defend them; and as Mr. Lovett placed his hand upon a heavily loaded cannon, and stooped to see that it was properly aimed, it was touched off, and the shock nearly deprived him of his hearing. He received an injury to his ears which was permanent, and beyond surgical aid. The history of this battle and its results are familiar to all. Gen. Van Rensselaer returned home, leaving Mr. Lovett in attendance upon his tried and attached friend, Gen. Solomon Van Rensselaer, who had been so severely wounded as to be incapable of removal. After a long and tedious convalescence, Mr. Lovett accompanied his companion home. The citizens of Albany turned out to meet them on horseback, and escorted them into the city with all the honors of a Roman triumph.

Hon. John Lovett.

Shortly after, Mr. Lovett was elected to a seat in the 13th Congress, where he renewed his old acquaintance with Gov. Meigs of Ohio, who, as United States surveyor, had become familiar with the best tracts of land offered about this time at public sale. Preeminent among them he regarded the reservation of the Twelve mile square, at the mouth of the Maumee, which was just surveyed, and had never before been offered for sale. It embraced the site of Fort Meigs, directly opposite Gen. Wayne's battle ground. Mr. Lovett purchased it, and commenced the settlement of Perrysburgh. In connection with Dr. Josephus B. Stewart, he built the first steam boat that navigated the waters of Lake Erie, named, in honor of the Indian chief, Walk-in-the-Water; for many years a regular trader between Buffalo and the Rapids of the Maumee, now known as Perrysburgh. The development of the resources of this section of country has shown the correctness of Mr. Lovett's judgment in making the selection. A magnificent bridge now spans the Maumee river at Perrysburgh, over which must pass most of the travel by land from the north-east to the south-west part of the adjoining states. The Wabash and Indiana canal opens in front of the town, and regular steam boats run from Perrysburgh to Detroit every day. Most of those who planned these improvements have long since mingled their remains with the clods of the valley—the fate of those who lead the way in all the openings of the settlements of our country, as well as others. Mr. Lovett withstood for a while the effects of a long protracted illness of lake fever, brought on by exposure, but sunk at last. The memory of his talents and virtues are still cherished by the friends who mourned his early removal from a large and devoted family. He died at Fort Meigs in August, 1818, in the 53d year of his age.
