Q. Holding that the court had jurisdiction?—A. Holding that the court had jurisdiction under the bill. We then argued the equities of the bill, and during the course of that hearing the judge, as I recall it, several times made the comment that there being only a demurrer these various allegations of course would have to be taken as true—that is, the allegations to which you have referred with reference to the forgeries and the fraudulent representations, and so on, in connection with the signatures to the bill.

Mr. Highes. The petition.

A. In connection with the petition for the recall, I should say. At the conclusion of the argument the court took the matter under advisement. Briefs were filed, and I might say—your statement to the committee was that they were largely confined to the question of jurisdiction; our briefs had no reference whatever to the question of jurisdiction, because we considered that that matter had been already passed upon by the court at the hearing, and we submitted the original briefs, and our brief was confined solely to the equities of the bill itself, with no reference to the jurisdictional feature, except a statement that the jurisdiction had been passed on. The court then handed down a memorandum decision, and the day after that memorandum decision we appeared before him on the question of the form that the order was to take.

Mr. Preston. Who do you mean by "we"?

A. All the counsel who had participated in the argument. There was Mr. Blewett and myself, who had argued the matter for the complainant, and Mr. Calhoun and Mr. Tucker, who had appeared in behalf of the defendants. At that time Mr. Calhoun or Mr. Tucker—I don't remember from whom the suggestion came—suggested that they might desire to file an answer, and the court said that if they would file an answer he would at once set down any motion they might make to dissolve the bill—to dissolve the injunction on bill and answer.

Q. Your complaint prayed, I think, as I recall it—you correct me if I am wrong——

Mr. Preston. I am using this form to hurry along, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman. Do so.

Mr. Preston. You were asking for an injunction against the election. Then I think you asked an injunction against the city comptroller incurring any indebtedness in the matter of the election?

A. My recollection is that that is correct, and that we also asked that the injunction against incurring any indebtedness that we prayed for in our complaint was also against the city officials and the comptroller from incurring any indebtedness or expending any money.

Q. Well, now you presented an order that you had prepared along the lines of your complaint to the judge for signature, did you not?—A. Yes; we did that——

Q. (Interrupting.) When I say "your complaint," I mean the prayer of your complaint.—A. It seems to me, Mr. Preston, that we appeared first on the same day that the judge's decision was handed down. I think on that hearing—at that time we appeared with a temporary—a form of a temporary injunction exactly as prayed for in the complaint. My recollection is that in drafting it we simply took the prayer of the complaint and followed that literally in preparing the form of injunction. We presented that, and Judge Hanford said that he would not under any conditions enjoin the city council from doing anything whatever, as he was not going to enjoin any legislative act by the city, that they could go, so far as he was concerned; he didn't propose to interfere in any way with the city council in the exercise of its legislative function. We then prepared a new form of injunction, and in that injunction we were enjoining—we asked that the city council—that the city comptroller be enjoined from either incurring any indebtedness or expending any money on account of the recall election. When we presented that the defense presented a form of order, which was signed, which merely enjoined the city comptroller from spending any money—left out the feature concerning the incurring of indebtedness.

Q. What did Judge Hanford say in deciding between those two proposed forms of order?—A. Well, we, of course, had some considerable argument. We were in chambers, or in the library there, included in the judge's chambers. Judge Hanford said to me at one stage of the argument that "the difference between you and me is that you want to stop this election; I don't. The only thing that is before me is a bill by a taxpayer asking me to stop an illegal expenditure of money, and that is all I am going to enjoin. People dealing with a public official always do so at their peril; and if they want—and if people want to do business with him and do things on the faith of his—of the obligation that he may confer—that is their lookout."

The CHAIRMAN. Did he distinguish there?

A. Of course I don't——

The CHAIRMAN (interrupting). You say he said you wanted to prevent an election; that he wanted to prevent the illegal expenditure of money; but as the expenditure of money was for the very election that you wanted to prevent, where did the difference come in between his position and yours?

A. Well, the difference between his position and mine—the remark was called forth by a statement of mine that if he did not follow the form of order—of course I don't intend to convey the impression that I am giving exact language in all cases of this argument that took place. I am giving its substance, however, and I remember exactly those words that "you want to prevent an election, and I don't." That is as far as I wish to be understood as giving the exact language, but the substance of my argument at that time was that if he did not enjoin the comptroller from incurring any indebtedness that the comptroller——

Q. (Interrupting.) You don't mean from incurring any indebtedness? Oh, that is right.—A. Yes; from incurring the indebtedness. (Continuing.) Then the comptroller would go out and make contracts, for example, for advertising the election under the charter provisions as to notice, for the rental of polling places, and printing of ballots, and other things, and that the people with whom he contracted would later be unable to get their money because of the fact that this injunction against the payment of any money would be in force.

The CHAIRMAN. But you said that feature was abandoned—that is, to prevent the comptroller from going in debt or contracting an indebtedness—and that you changed from that to requesting an order preventing him from expending any money.

A. We didn't change; the judge changed; that is, the judge changed for us. He declined to sign our form and signed the other form. We were still as anxious to get the form that we had originally proposed. We were always anxious to get that, but we were unable to do it. I think possibly I ought to add, Mr. Preston—a fact that does not appear of record, I think—when this matter was originally presented to Judge Hanford—I think Mr. Hoyt and I presented it on the first day—we asked at that time for the temporary restraining order.

Q. Without notice?—A. Without notice. And Judge Hanford denied that and simply, instead of issuing even a show-cause order, simply set the motion for a temporary injunction for hearing on a day which he then fixed, the defendants to have notice of the hearing.

Mr. PRESTON. I think that is all the inquiries I wish to make of the witness.

Witness excused.

WILMON TUCKER, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. PRESTON. Mr. Tucker, you are a member of the bar here in Seattle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have been for a considerable——

The CHAIRMAN. What is the name?

Mr. PRESTON. Wilmon Tucker.

A. Twenty years.

Q. Were you one of the attorneys for the defendant in the case of Scobey v. the City Comptroller and others?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Shaffner's narrative of certain things that occurred that are not in the record in that case——A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing.) Here on the witness stand?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell the committee if he erred in any way or omitted anything material along that line of inquiry?—A. I think everything that Mr. Shaffner said is substantially correct.

Mr. MCCOY. Of course, Mr. Tucker does not know anything about the application for the restraining order without notice. I think Mr. Tucker ought to be asked just what part of it he knows about.

Mr. PRESTON. Yes; that would be fair.

A. My first appearance in the case was in return to the order to show cause.

Mr. MCCOY. Yes.

A. I did not know about the presentation of the original bill and the application for the original order. We appeared in answer to the citation.

Mr. PRESTON. I don't think I will ask any further questions; it simply will take time to go over it again.

By Mr. McCoy:

Q. You were present, Mr. Tucker, when the orders—two forms of order were presented and when Judge Hanford refused to enjoin the incurring of any indebtedness?—A. Yes.

Q. Refused to enjoin the election?—A. As I recollect, Judge Hanford signed our form of order. We very strenuously opposed the signing of the order that they proposed, because it embraced everything under the sun, and they had a lot of stuff alleged in the bill that we didn't think had anything to do with the questions that we were presenting, and we narrowed the order as far as we possibly could to come within the purview of the judge's ruling.

The CHAIRMAN. We should have the order that was signed.

Mr. McCOY. It is in the record.

The CHAIRMAN. It is already in.

Mr. McCOY. We might have the order that was presented by the complainants, too.

Mr. HUGHES. I think you could get a full idea from the prayer.

The WITNESS. There was something said by Mr. Shaffer to the point that the judge had indicated the order would be dissolved if the bill had been answered. Well, I don't recollect the judge said that at the time of argument upon the demurrer or at the time of presentation of the order. He, I believe, said—asked if we intended answering the bill. Of course, I knew the rule that if the bill was answered probably the order would be dissolved, but I did not want to pursue that method, because an election was coming on and any form of order entered in that case would have a tendency to throw cold water on the acts of the comptroller; and even when we went to Portland and applied and got a stay in aid of our appeal from the order the comptroller had telegraphed to Mr. Calhoun, or the word got to Mr. Calhoun at Portland, that the comptroller had withdrawn his contract made with people to put up the booths to hold the election, and it was only upon Mr. Calhoun telegraphing from Portland that we had the stay, that the comptroller would act. In form the order there would have effectually restrained that election, so I did not propose, from my point of view, having the judge pass upon the thing further at all if I could get in any other court, so I prosecuted my appeal and got a stay in aid of the appeal. But I do remember, when we came back and the bill was answered, after we had obtained the stay and it was set down for hearing on the bill and answer and application to dissolve, that Judge Hanford said from the bench that he supposed the lawyers would understand, if the newspapers did not understand, that if we had answered the bill he would have dissolved the order in the first instance; but I was afraid that the judge might die or be sick or some other unavoidable circumstance come in between the time that I could get a hearing, and the time was short, and I deemed it most advisable—Mr. Calhoun and myself did—to go directly up to the circuit court of appeals.

The CHAIRMAN. Any further statement you wish to make concerning it, Mr. Tucker?

The WITNESS. No.

Mr. McCOY. The papers, of course, show dates when the election was to be held, and all that sort of thing, don't they?

Mr. PRESTON. Yes; I think the bill alleges the date of the election.

The WITNESS. Oh, yes.

Mr. PRESTON. I would not be positive.

The WITNESS. That is all in the bill.

Mr. MCCOY. Then is there anything in the files which you have submitted which show the application to the circuit court of appeals for a stay, and all that sort of thing?

Mr. PRESTON. I think not; they are not in the files here.

The WITNESS. Well, I have copies in my files at the office of the application that we made. It was made in the nature of an application for prohibition; or, in the alternative, for a stay in aid of the bill. We found—Mr. Calhoun and I—that the procedure had only been, I think, tried two or three times in the history of this country, and it was not a certainty that we would get the stay.

Mr. MCCOY. Will you furnish the committee copies of those papers, Mr. Tucker?

A. Yes; I would be glad to do that.

Mr. HIGGINS. Whom did you represent?

A. I beg pardon.

Mr. HIGGINS. Whom did you represent?

A. I represented the Public Welfare League; employed by the Public Welfare League.

Mr. MCCOY. During any of these proceedings did you hear Judge Hanford give any expression of opinion as to the recall system, recall practice, or whatever you want to denominate it?

A. No. The only expression, I believe, that I heard Judge Hanford make was at the time the order was signed; Judge Hanford said to Mr. Shaffner, "You want to restrain this election and I don't want to restrain this election. The people want to agitate this thing and they will agitate this thing and they will keep agitating it and they have got to agitate it and the newspapers will agitate it, and let them agitate it and let them hold their election." That is all that he said—the substance of what he said.

Mr. MCCOY. You never heard him say anything about putting the recall law out of business?

A. Oh, no; I never heard anything of that sort; no. I always felt that Judge Hanford was absolutely sincere in his opinion in the case, though I did not agree with him at all; I don't agree with him now.

Mr. HUGHES. On the jurisdictional question?

A. On the jurisdictional question. I always considered there was only one question in the case. I never bothered about the other questions that the other gentlemen argued. It seemed to me that there was only one question, but the court did not agree with me in that, and other lawyers at the bar did not agree with me on that subject, but it was a question that I presented with every confidence. I thought there was only one question in the case.

Mr. HIGGINS. Who was Schobey?

A. Oh, Schobey was a traveling man. He used to live at Fayette, Utah, and afterwards, at the time of the commencement of this action, was living in Chicago. He had never lived out here, but I think the record displayed that a piece of property for which he was claiming there would be an increase in taxes was a piece that was transferred to him just about the time of the commencement of this action.

Mr. PRESTON. I would suggest another question. Do you remember the case of O'Connor against the same defendants?

A. Yes; I remember. Mr. Martin appeared for the complainant in that.

Mr. PRESTON. Were not those two things heard as one?

A. Well, it was understood by counsel in all the cases that the determination of one would terminate the other.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the nature of the O'Connor case?

Mr. PRESTON. It is the same. I explained that to you. I guess you did not catch it.

The CHAIRMAN. Had he been a real-estate holder here for some time before the election?

A. Yes; I think he had been; and it was charged in the bill that his holdings were of considerable amount, I believe a couple of hundred thousand dollars or thereabouts, the exact amount of which I am not sure.

Mr. PRESTON. Two hundred and fifty, I think.

The CHAIRMAN. Where did he live?

A. New York, I think.

Mr. PRESTON. Elmira, N. Y., I think. Isn't that right?

The WITNESS. I recollect the bill recited it was in New York.

Mr. HUGHES. Represented a business house in New York?

A. I don't know what he represented in New York, but it was charged in the bill he resided in New York.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything further with Mr. Tucker?

Mr. PRESTON. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Unless you have something to add, Mr. Tucker, I guess that is all.

The WITNESS. Nothing.

Witness excused.

Mr. PRESTON. I have in that case the same sort of a review of the record, like an index to what you have. If you would like to have it you are welcome to it.

The CHAIRMAN. We would, of course.

Mr. PRESTON. It is a little more than an index, but it will serve the purpose of an index to the transcript which you have.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a résumé of the bill of complaint?

Mr. PRESTON. Also all the papers in the case.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Calhoun is here, but I suppose it would be only cumulative testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. What?

Mr. HUGHES. I say Mr. Calhoun, the corporation counsel, is here, but it is, however, only cumulative testimony—unless the committee want it.

The CHAIRMAN. You may use your judgment about it. As long as he is here I suppose he might as well go on.

Paper above produced by Mr. Preston was marked "Exhibit No. 87."

SCOTT CALHOUN, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. PRESTON. What is your full name, please?

A. Scott Calhoun.

Q. You are an attorney at the Seattle bar?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have been practicing quite a number of years?—A. Yes, since 1896.

Q. And are corporation counsel at the present time of the city?—A. No, not now.

Q. Oh, not now; that is right. You were at the time the Scobey litigation was on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the O'Connor litigation?—A. Yes.

Q. Had been for a number of years prior to that, is my belief?—A. About seven years.

Q. Now, you have heard Mr. Shaffner's testimony here this morning?—A. No; I heard the last part of Mr. Tucker's.

Q. Oh, I thought you were in all the time. Do you recall the time—an occasion in Judge Hanford's chambers when the disputation arose between the counsel in the case as to the form of the order?—A. Well, I have not a very clear recollection of it. I remember we appeared there in chambers.

Q. Do you remember the difference between the two orders in their essential features—the two orders that were pressed, one by your side and one by the other side?—A. My impression is—I haven't looked that up carefully—my impression is we wanted an alternative order and they were asking for a restraining order, but I would not be positive about that.

Q. Well, it has been testified here that the plaintiff asked an order first restraining the city council as well as the comptroller. Mr. Calhoun, it has been suggested to me that perhaps you do not understand the time I am referring to. I am referring to the time in the library connected with the judge's chambers, after the judge had made his ruling and when it came to the point of getting that ruling put in the form of an order—a temporary injunction?—A. Yes; I remember now.

Q. Now, at that time it has been testified that the complainant presented an order which carried an injunction against the members of the council—an injunction against the holding of the election, an injunction against the incurring of any indebtedness in connection with the election, and an injunction against the expenditure of any public funds?—A. Yes.

Q. Whereas on your side you presented an order only restraining—enjoining, I should say, the expenditure of public funds.—A. Yes. I remember that now.

Q. Is that a correct statement of the orders as they were presented?—A. Yes; that is. We did not want the order to be in form to restrain the running of time in which notices had to be given in order to hold the election; that is the reason we asked for the modification—the running of time on the giving of notices.

Q. Of an election?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, have you a recollection about any remarks made by Judge Hanford at that time to you gentlemen assembled there about the kind of an order he was going to sign or was willing to sign?—A. Well, he said that it was very clear in his mind that this was an illegal election that was attempted to be held.

Q. On what ground; did he specify on what ground, whether it was an illegal election or an illegal expenditure of public funds?—A. Well, an illegal expenditure, an illegal procedure which would not justify the expenditure of public moneys.

Q. You mean that that was apparent to him from the allegations of the bill; there was nothing else before him, was there?—A. That was all there was before him; yes.

Q. Now, do you remember the reason that Judge Hanford expressed at the time of choosing your form of order instead of theirs? Do you remember he said he would not restrain the city council at all; do you remember that?—A. He said he would not restrain the city council, that he would allow the notices, he would sign an order which would allow the notices to be published and be running, and the matter could be disposed of prior to the election.

Mr. PRESTON. I think that is all the questions I want to ask Mr. Calhoun.

By Mr. McCOY:

Q. Mr. Calhoun, have you ever heard Judge Hanford express any opinion as to the recall system?—A. No other than remarks made in the library adjoining his chambers at that time.

Q. You never heard him say, in substance, that he would put the recall system out of business?—A. No; he never said that. He did say that there was a lot of newspaper agitation starting these things, but it was not legal and it was not law, under the allegations of the bill, the form of action that was being taken by the city in holding this election at that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other questions?

Mr. PRESTON. No: nothing further. But I want to ask Mr. Calhoun a question in the Peabody case. Shall I ask it? It is only a single question.

The CHAIRMAN. I think you had better do it so that he can be at liberty.

By Mr. PRESTON:

Q. Mr. Calhoun, I gather from the records in the case of Peabody against the city, in which a temporary restraining order was issued, about the division of transfer money—you know the case I refer to?—A. Yes.

Q. The record shows, if my recollection serves me now, and I think my dates are correct, from memory, that the restraining order was issued on the 21st of August, and do you know what time of day it was that it was issued?—A. I didn't catch your question.

Q. Do you know what time of day it was on the 21st that the restraining order was issued, afternoon or forenoon?—A. My impression is that it was in the afternoon.

Q. Yes.—A. About 5 o'clock.

Q. On the morning of the 22d of August there was quite a disturbance down on the line of the Renton & Southern Railroad, was there not?—A. Yes.

Q. And that was reported in the morning paper, was it not?—A. Well, not in the morning paper——

Q. (Interrupting.) A news item of it.—A. In the afternoon paper, I guess. The trouble occurred in the morning, forenoon following the issuance of the restraining order. Of course those troubles then were recited in the afternoon paper.

Q. Was not there some trouble occurred in the evening of the same day, which was reported in the morning paper?—A. Well, that might be so, yes; but the big trouble was the next morning.

Q. Do you recall receiving a telephone message from Judge Hanford, asking you if you were going to take some proceeding before him in the matter in that case? That on the morning of the 22d I am referring to.—A. I received telephone messages nearly all night and in the morning; different attorneys, I think, Mr. Earle, an attorney down in the valley, telephoned me suggesting some line of procedure and a lot of voluntary suggestions. I learned afterwards, or was told, that Judge Hanford called me up. I did not know that the judge was speaking to me over the phone at the time. I was asked over the phone if the city was going to make any application before the Federal court for a modification or take any action in regard to the restraining order which had been issued. This was about 11 o'clock in the forenoon. I stated no, we would not. We just had a conference in the mayor's office with members of the city council and had decided—I was then drafting an ordinance making it a penal offense—that is, providing a fine and imprisonment for the standing of street cars, other than through mechanical breakdown, on the streets of the city for over five minutes. We thought that by that action we could keep the cars moving. That was the important thing at that time.

Q. Well, now, you say you have since been told that that particular telephone message came from Judge Hanford?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you so himself?—A. He told me—oh, about a month ago. But when we were returning from the court room after a hearing in that matter, Mr. Hughes, who had charge of the case in my office——

Q. You mean Mr. H. D. Hughes?—A. Mr. H. D. Hughes, assistant corporation counsel, had made the argument in that case, and on our returning to our office he said he thought Judge Hanford was pretty sore at me. I said "Do you mean personally?" "Well," he says, "I think so," he said "from the way you treated him over the telephone." That was the first intimation that I had had that I had been talking to Judge Hanford at all. He said he thought he was entitled to more consideration, because he was suggesting a way out of the difficulty. Afterwards Judge Hanford confirmed the fact of his having stated that to me, that he was on the phone. I didn't know it at the time.

Mr. PRESTON. That is all I wanted to inquire.

By Mr. HIGGINS:

Q. Did you appear in that case?—A. I appeared, but did not make the argument.

Q. When did you first appear?—A. I appeared immediately in the case, as attorney for the city.

Q. Mr. Hughes——A. Mr. Hughes, an assistant in my office, was assigned to the case.

Q. You appeared with Mr. Hughes?—A. Yes.

Q. Speaking of the hearing that you had before Judge Hanford, how soon after that was it that Judge Hanford telephoned you?—A. Oh, that was, I think, two or three days after.

Q. What was that hearing?—A. That was a hearing on a demurrer. We demurred to the jurisdiction, and asked—Mr. Hughes asked—at the opening the case before the court that the allegations of the answer—we had prepared an answer, but had not filed it; we were afraid that by filing that answer we would perhaps waive our demurrer—and asked, in order to facilitate the argument, that court consider and counsel consider the allegations in the answer along with the argument on the demurrer, as similar questions were coming up. The court said that he thought it would be better practice to dispose of the demurrer first. The argument was had, the demurrer was overruled, and leave was given the city to file an answer. The judge then suggested—and I think he cited a case that was in point——

Mr. PRESTON. In the Supreme Court of the United States?

A. My impression is it was. I don't recall the citation. That a plea in abatement to be filed along with the answer, and then the denial—the denials in the answer and the plea in abatement——

Mr. PRESTON (interrupting). Let me interrupt you. Wasn't it a plea to the jurisdiction instead of a plea in abatement?

A. Yes; a plea to the jurisdiction. And he said that under the Federal equity practice that would dissolve the restraining order as a matter of course.

By Mr. HIGGINS:

Q. Was the restraining order dissolved?—A. The restraining order was dissolved then; yes.

Q. And you were present at the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did the court say—the judge say from the bench—upon the order dissolving the restraining order?—A. Well, I have a stenographic report of it in my office, but I would not want to——

Q. (Interrupting.) Will you furnish it to the committee?—A. I can; yes.

Q. Was the court room crowded?—A. Yes; I think at both hearings.

Q. Was it a matter of wide public concern?—A. Very wide public concern down in the Rainier Valley.

Q. Was there a great deal of feeling manifested—public feeling?—A. Down in the Rainier Valley.

Q. Well——A. (Interrupting.) That is, from people down in the Rainier Valley; they were the people who were interested in this matter. It was a car-line fight with them.

Q. They had partisans even in the center of the city, didn't they?—A. They had some; yes.

Q. It was a matter that was generally agitated and widely agitated through this section, wasn't it?—A. It was agitated very generally; yes.

Q. Can you furnish the committee, this forenoon, Mr. Calhoun, with that stenographic report?—A. I think I can; yes.

Q. Is that a complete report of everything that Judge Hanford said before dissolving that injunction, when he was on the bench?—A. I think it is; yes. It is a copy I got from the stenographer. I can learn who the stenographer was and determine that fact.

Q. You think you had it transcribed?—A. Yes; I had the stenographer make a copy of it and leave it at the office.

Mr. PRESTON. Mr. Higgins, I have it among my papers, or else it is in your transcript; one of the two.

Mr. HIGGINS. Well, I would like to see it. I don't care where it comes from, so that I am sure it is correct.

By Mr. McCoy:

Q. Mr. Calhoun, how generally was the public interest that was shown in the suits that were tried or in the agitation—this is, the suits that were tried in the State court—affecting the question of transfers and the 5-cent fare?—A. Well, that was, I think, more general than the trouble that arose and the agitation that arose in connection with the running of cars down the valley, because there every one was allowed transfers on a 5-cent fare, although it more particularly affected the Rainier Valley. As a result of all this agitation—I think the agitation outside of the Rainier Valley was confined almost exclusively to municipal-ownership advocates—municipal ownership of street railways—and as a result a bond issue was voted by the people shortly after that for $800,000 in bonds to acquire a line down into the valley and to extend it on up through the city.

Q. But there were two cases which originated in the superior court, as I understand it, one affecting the question of the additions of new territory and whether or not when new territory was added to the city they were not within the original ordinance——A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing.) Providing for fares, and then later on the same thing, or previously the same sort of agitation, or at least the same matter was brought into the superior court in connection with the transfers?—A. Yes.

Q. And now what I wanted to ask you was this: Was there a pretty general discussion of these two cases or these two matters in the newspapers and amongst the people in the city of Seattle at the time the cases were pending in court?—A. Yes; there was a general discussion of it, both in the newspapers and by the public. As I say, the real interest in the case was taken by the people down in the Rainier Valley, because it was their transportation problem. The people in the north end were not interested at all, to amount to anything, other than those who were interested in all matters of public concern, and particularly interested in the acquirement of street railways to be owned by the public; this was a good opportunity to get that question before the public.

Q. Were not a great many people who did not live in the Rainier Valley—were not they interested in the question of whether or not a double fare could be charged after certain new territory had been brought into the city?—A. Well, I suppose people are interested in——

Q. (Interrupting.) I mean financially affected. For instance, the ordinance covered the city with certain boundaries——A. Yes, sir.

Q. (Continuing.) Providing for a 5-cent fare; that is what I understand about it; subsequently territory was added and the railroad company claimed that the 5-cent fare was limited to the territory as it existed when the ordinance was passed giving them their rights?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, was the added territory over which the dispute arose in the Rainier Valley or was it this side of it? I don't really know.—A. It was out there beyond the Rainier Valley; yes.

Q. But the whole thing affected just the Rainier Valley?—A. Yes.

Q. Where does that begin?—A. The Rainier Valley begins pretty close to the Union Depot.

Q. Oh, that was the point?—A. Yes.

Q. I had a notion it was farther away.—A. And runs clear on out. The line was about 13 miles long and 6 or 7 miles of territory beyond the limits of the city were added and included that car line. That is the reason it was of special interest to the Rainier Valley.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any towns down the valley, Mr. Calhoun, with separate and distinct names?

A. There used to be, but they all have been annexed to the city of Seattle except the terminus of this line, the city of Renton.

Q. Have they preserved their names in any way?—A. Just in sort of a local way. I think perhaps they keep their post-office name.

The CHAIRMAN. What is the name?

A. Columbia, Hillman City, Brighton Beach, Rainier Beach.

The CHAIRMAN. Do they constitute a continuous town?—A. Yes; part of the city all the way along, built up all along.

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Preston has handed me a paper which purports to be the statement of the judge made before deciding that case. Will you look it over and see if it is your recollection that that is all that the court said before announcing his decision in that case [handing paper to witness]?

A. I can't think of anything else the court might have said. I think that is a statement of everything the court said.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything further with Mr. Calhoun?

Mr. PRESTON. No, sir.

Witness excused.

Mr. PRESTON. I would like at this point, if it is agreeable to the committee, to call Mr. H. D. Hughes in regard to the same case.

HOWARD D. HUGHES, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. PRESTON. State your full name, please, Mr. Hughes.

A. Howard D. Hughes.

Q. You are a member of the bar of Seattle?—A. I am.

Q. Have been practicing here how long?—A. Five years, I believe.

Q. Have you been connected and are you now connected with the office of the corporation counsel of the city of Seattle?—A. I have been connected with the office for a little over four years, and still am.

Q. Did you have to do with the case that Mr. Calhoun has just been talking to us about, of Peabody against the——A. (Interrupting.) Yes; I had charge of that under Mr. Calhoun, and I gave it my personal attention.

Q. I wish you would tell the committee what happened in court when your demurrer came up. I don't mean to tell the committee the arguments of counsel or things of that kind, but what happened there in regard to the arrangement of the presentation of the matter, the form of presentation of the matter in its different phases to the court.—A. You are now referring to the return day—the order to show cause day?

Q. Yes.—A. That was set for the morning. I forget the day now, but this was set for 10 o'clock in the morning. I interposed a demurrer and argued that during the morning session. The demurrer was to the jurisdiction of that court to take hold of the case at all. I realized that there was some doubt as to whether or not the court had jurisdiction, and therefore had prepared an answer which set forth the facts of the case; the facts which constituted our defense to this action, with the intention of filing that answer if the demurrer was overruled, so that a temporary injunction would not issue. The demurrer was argued in the morning. We concluded—both sides concluded their argument shortly before noon. At the close of my argument I had referred to certain of the facts which constituted our defense and which had been set forth in the answer——

Q. The answer was not filed yet?—A. The answer had not been filed yet. And stated to the court that I wished to have the answer filed before any order should issue—that is, in case he should overrule that demurrer I wished it understood that I would have the option of filing my answer at the same time and arguing that question, and attempted to present both arguments at that time, but the court said that the logical way to take it up was to argue the demurrer first and subsequently the answer. So shortly before 12, when the arguments on the demurrer were concluded, the court made some remarks which were of considerable value to us when further outlining our defense of the case, and for that reason——

Mr. HIGGINS (interrupting). What were they?

A. The court said, "It does not seem fair to the court to ask him to decide this question when he only has one side of it before him: it would be fairer to the court if you would place in his grasp all the facts of the case; then he could give a proper decision." He says, "From your statements as to what your answer will contain when filed, I am of the opinion that that will leave this court without jurisdiction, if properly pleaded," and he said, "I would suggest that you file your answer. In the meantime I will take the demurrer under advisement, so that no temporary injunction will issue in case I overrule your demurrer." He then went on and read from a case in the Supreme Court of the United States, found, I think, in the 197 U. S. The case, as I recall it, was the City of Dawson v. The Water Works of that city—Dawson, as I recall it—which was a case very much in point with this, where a similar attempt had been made by the bondholders of a waterworks company. The waterworks company had engaged in litigation with the city over their right to charge a certain rate. The city had won its contention in the State court. The bondholders then came in the Federal court and attempted, being nonresidents, to have the matter readjudicated in the Federal court, with the view, of course, of overriding the decision of the State court, and arraigned the waterworks company and the city as defendants. The case was very much in point, and the court there held that such an action could not be maintained, that the placing of the waterworks as a party defendant was an arbitrary relation, that their interests were really identified with the plaintiff, and hence that the court would not be bound by the arbitrary position which the parties placed the defendants in; but if the interest of one of the defendants was the same as the plaintiff, it would arraign that defendant on the side of the plaintiff, which would leave citizens of the State on both sides of the case, which would, of course, divest the Federal court of jurisdiction. That point—we looked that up at noon and found further authorities to the same effect; and, as I say, it was this statement and the procedure outlined by the court at the close of the morning's argument which led, for our help in the future, to employ a stenographer to take down his remarks. It seems to me that that is all that occurred that morning in the argument of the demurrer.

Q. Now, you came in when again; wasn't it the next day?—A. Let me see; it seems to me that we appeared again that afternoon, and that statement that you have there I think was made on the afternoon of the same day.

Mr. HIGGINS. What statement do you refer to?

A. This stenographic report. When we came back after noon at 2 o'clock on that day I had a stenographer up there.

Mr. HIGGINS. You mean the one that was prepared or given to us by Mr. Preston?

A. Yes.

By Mr. HIGGINS:

Q. And identified by Mr. Calhoun?—A. Yes, yes.

Q. There was before that some other statement of the court?—A. The statement to which I have just referred was made that morning when there was no stenographer present. Of course, there would be, ordinarily, no stenographer present.

Q. Have you stated all that you recollect as to what the judge said on that occasion? You digressed in the discussion of some other case and I didn't know but what——

Mr. HUGHES. He stated that as showing what the court meant.

A. I stated that the court read from that case——

Mr. HIGGINS. Oh, yes.

A. (Continuing.) And said that he thought that if I properly pleaded the matters which I had referred to in my argument as being contained in my answer, that under the authority of that case the court would be without jurisdiction.

Q. The judge called up the case; you didn't?—A. He called up the case of his own motion; yes. He came into the court room that morning, or else sent out after—I believe he sent out, after I had stated what the facts of our answer would be—sent out and got that case, as I recall, sent the bailiff out, and then he read that to us.

Q. Were you familiar, Mr. Hughes, with the typewritten paper which Mr. Calhoun looked over?—A. I would like to glance at that. [Examining paper.] Yes.

Q. You have recalled the remarks of the judge on one occasion that purports to report them on another. Is there any other statement that the judge made from the bench?—A. With reference to any particular point?

Q. With reference to this litigation?—A. Why, he stated, in a general way, of course, in making his rulings, that under the facts of record after the answer was filed that the temporary restraining order would have to be dissolved; that the application for a temporary injunction would have to be denied; that this would happen, as a matter of course, from the filing of an answer denying the equities of the bill; but we went further than that, and stated that under the defenses contained in the plea of abatement or the plea to the jurisdiction that he doubted very much whether the action could ever be maintained. That was in response to Mr. McCord's request for leave to amend. The court had indicated very clearly and strongly that he was going to hold against Mr. McCord and dismiss the case. Mr. McCord then said he thought he might amend so as to state a cause of action and give the court jurisdiction.

Q. Well, now, I am getting down a little nearer to what I want. You have got those remarks transcribed, haven't you?—A. I think all of those were transcribed. Now, this is only one of the papers and it seems——

Q. (Interrupting.) Will you be good enough, Mr. Hughes, to look through your files to see if you can't bring to the committee those remarks of the court in that connection——A. I doubt if I have them.

Q. (Continuing.) If there are others than what is indicated by Mr. Preston as to the argument.—A. Yes; there are others. This one appears to be September 1, 2 o'clock. Now——

Q. (Interrupting.) That is not a full report of all that the judge said, and that is what I would like to get. If your office can furnish it, I would be obliged to you.—A. Yes. This was after we had filed the plea. That afternoon the first day we came back and I simply filed the answer and he made some rulings or certain remarks than which were taken down, as I recall it. Then these are the remarks which he made the following afternoon.

Q. Well, that closed the incident?—A. This closed the incident; yes.

Q. Well, I want the remarks that were made preceding that.—A. Well, I can get those from Mr. Kimple, who was the reporter. I haven't got any copy of it, but we doubtless can get it.

Mr. PRESTON. Mr. Kimple is East. You will have to get it from Mr. Bolster, I suppose——

Mr. HIGGINS. Very well.

Mr. PRESTON. Now, I want to ask you about that. We may not be able to get the stenographic report, so I am going to ask you for your memory about it. You came in that afternoon with the answer——

Mr. HIGGINS (interrupting). Hadn't we better wait and find out if we can get it?

Mr. PRESTON. I will do just as you suggest.

The CHAIRMAN. What is it you want to get at?

Mr. HIGGINS. He wants to question him on the assumption that he can't find the stenographic reports, when Mr. Calhoun thought he had them and when Mr. Hughes thinks he has them.

Mr. PRESTON. I don't urge it at all. I know that this——

The CHAIRMAN. If they are found, the question that you now propose to ask would be superfluous?

Mr. PRESTON. Not all of them, but that particular one would be; yes. Now, I will go further than that——

The CHAIRMAN (interrupting). Anything else to ask him?

Mr. PRESTON. You came in that afternoon with counsel in the case, that same afternoon, and filed your answer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when was it that some suggestion was made from the bench that the proper practice to raise the jurisdictional question was to file also a plea to the jurisdiction, setting out the facts going to defeat the jurisdiction?—A. That was at that time. I filed my answer at 2 o'clock, when court reconvened that afternoon. The court then read the answer over—it was a long one—and after reading it over he made some remarks, which, as I say, I think I can get a copy of—I had a stenographer there—and in substance stated that the facts set forth in the answer he thought would be sufficient to dismiss the case, but that the proper procedure to adopt was to follow the old common-law practice of a plea, a plea in abatement or plea to the jurisdiction, although he said that that was merely a technical rule. But he said that in view of the fact that this case might be appealed that we had better comply with the technical rules of procedure, and therefore he advised that I file a plea in abatement setting forth the same facts.

Mr. PRESTON. Was it a plea in abatement or a plea to the jurisdiction?

A. A plea to the jurisdiction, I think it is called.

Mr. PRESTON. I think that is all I want to interrogate Mr. Hughes about.

Mr. HIGGINS. When can you get that report, Mr. Hughes?

A. Well, sir, I can't answer that. I don't know that I can get it.

Mr. HIGGINS. Probably this afternoon?

A. Well, I will look through all my files and try to find it, but I did look through them and this was the only one that I could find. If I haven't got it I don't suppose anybody has, because I had these made for my own personal use.

Mr. HIGGINS. You understand what I want?

A. Oh, yes; I understand what you want.

The CHAIRMAN. Were there other lawyers present when the matter was discussed in the morning?

A. Oh, a great many; the court room was crowded.

The CHAIRMAN. A matter of keen public interest?

A. Particularly, of course, to the residents of Rainier Valley, who were the ones directly affected.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know if they constituted the assembly, the people of Rainier Valley, or was it the public generally who filled the courthouse?

A. Well, they constituted the great part of that assemblage; they were people who had been interested in this litigation which I had been conducting for them in the State courts for several years past.

The CHAIRMAN. How long prior to that hearing was this public excitement to which reference has been made in this case started?

A. The public excitement started about the time the restraining order was issued.

The CHAIRMAN. That was how long before this first hearing?

A. I think the restraining order—the order to show cause—was set down for the week following the issuance of the temporary restraining order.

Mr. PRESTON. Your record shows, I think, either seven or eight days intervened. I forget now.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any further questions?

Mr. PRESTON. Just one question. Was the time extended on your application in order to give you some further time to get ready?

A. It was. The questions were of great difficulty. There were a large mass of affidavits that had to be prepared. I had to do most of that myself, and I was compelled to ask for an extension of time in order to properly brief the case.

By Mr. HIGGINS:

Q. What was Mr. McCord urging?—A. Mr. McCord was representing the bondholders, and was asking for an order to——

Q. (Interrupting.) What was he urging, I asked?—A. Urging?

Q. Yes.

Mr. HUGHES. What do you mean, as against his request for time?

Mr. HIGGINS. What was he urging upon the court—upon the judge?

A. He was urging the issuance of a temporary injunction at the time the case came on for hearing.

Q. Just before the final determination as indicated by what is denominated the argument?—A. Oh. I suppose you are now referring to the final attempt which he made, which was to invoke a Federal statute which took away from the power of a single Federal judge the right to issue injunctions in cases such as this, in a way, although this did not come under that head, which appointed three Federal judges and gave them alone that power. Now, he attempted to bring his case under that statute and under certain decisions construing it and attempted to get the case removed——

Mr. PRESTON (interrupting). May I interrupt?

The WITNESS. Yes.

Mr. PRESTON. Wasn't it his attempt after getting the temporary restraining order to continue that in force by invoking that Federal statute bringing in two more judges?

A. Yes; that is true.

Mr. HIGGINS. I am always glad to have Mr. Preston interrupt, but I want to get an answer to my question, and then the opportunity will be given him to question the witness.

A. Well——

Mr. HIGGINS. At that time the court made some remarks, did he not?

Mr. PRESTON. I was leading up to it, sir. I have the stenographic report.

Mr. HIGGINS. Is that also a part of our files?

Mr. PRESTON. No, sir; I was going to offer it.

Mr. HIGGINS. Is that what I am asking about?

Mr. PRESTON. I took it to be. It is about the ruling on the application for two more judges.

Mr. HIGGINS. Is that the record that I have called for?

Mr. PRESTON. No; no; that is a later one.

Mr. HIGGINS. Well, then, I will ask you to get that record.

By Mr. MCCOY:

Q. Mr. Hughes, the relief sought applied not only to the question of fares and transfers, but also involved other matters, didn't it?—A. It did.

Q. Now, was the temporary restraining order obtained on affidavits?—A. It was obtained on the sworn complaint.

Q. But no affidavits in addition to the complaint?—A. I believe that no affidavits were filed at that time. The records will of course show those matters.

Mr. MCCOY. How is that, Mr. Preston? Was the temporary restraining order issued on the bill or were there affidavits?

Mr. PRESTON. Well, I will answer you in just a moment, as soon as I can find my notes. From my recollection that I can give you now, there were no affidavits filed with the complaint; that is my recollection. I will find my paper.

Mr. McCoy. Mr. Hughes, did you ever examine the papers on which the temporary restraining order was issued so that you can now state what the allegations were of a showing of possibility of an irreparable damage so far as transfers and fares were concerned, or was the showing of irreparable damage confined to the other acts which it was alleged the city was about to perform and which would injure the plaintiff?

A. Why, the whole case consisted of a lot of separate causes of action which had been combined in one suit——

Q. (Interrupting.) Well, I will ask you——

A. (Continuing.) Under the heading of a conspiracy, that the whole thing was a part of a conspiracy.

Q. Well, now, what I want to ask you is this: What is your present recollection as to the sufficiency of the allegations in the papers presented to Judge Hanford when the temporary restraining order was issued, to justify the issuance of it on the ground of irreparable damage, so far as the fares and the transfers were concerned?—A. I can't recall all of the allegations of that complaint so far as that particular element was concerned. I do know that——

Q. (Interrupting.) I will ask you another way——A. Oh, well, yes, I do recall what you—one part at least of the feature to which you refer, and that is they said that the issuance of transfers and the collection of a single fare would depreciate the income of that road I think over 50 per cent, and that that would result in the company's being unable to pay any interest on their bonds or even to pay their own debts, and that the property would go bankrupt.

Q. Well, that is assuming, of course, that the city's action became final and were upheld in the matter, but I mean were you satisfied that the allegations as to irreparable damage that might occur between the time when the order was applied for and when the matter could be brought up for argument were sufficient to warrant the issuing of a temporary restraining order on the ground of irreparable damage? I mean taking them for what they were, at their face value.—A. Well, under the practice that prevails, I don't see how any court could have done otherwise than to issue a temporary restraining order.

Q. I mean on just this point, not the other points in the case. I have read the bill part way through, and there are a lot of allegations in there about what the city was going to do, they were going to repeal ordinances and a whole lot of things.—A. Yes.

Q. Now, I am not concerned with that feature of it at all, but I mean just on the question of the fares and the transfers.—A. Well, of course the main reason, I suppose, for that, was to prevent a financial loss during the period that would intervene before the cause could be heard, and there would have been a loss of a good many hundreds of dollars every day.

Q. That is not the point. Was there any such allegation that the loss would be really substantial?—A. I believe there was, and I know as a fact that there has been a daily substantial loss since the decision has gone into effect—a very substantial loss.

Mr. McCoy. That is all.

The Chairman. Anything further with Mr. Hughes?

I suppose you will be in town for some time, Mr. Hughes, so that if we should need you we can find you.

A. Yes.

Mr. PRESTON. May I ask one question?

Mr. HIGGINS. Are you willing to wait until Mr. Hughes reports to the committee whatever he can find——

Mr. PRESTON. Certainly, except——

Mr. HIGGINS (continuing). Without further examination?

Mr. PRESTON. I thought while he was on the stand I would identify that other stenographic report of the later matter that came up.

Mr. HIGGINS. Well, there appear to be a number of other matters.

Mr. PRESTON. I have here, Mr. Chairman, an index of the files in that case, which you gentlemen are welcome to if you care for it [handing paper to the committee].

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Preston, the paper you have handed us now is a synopsis of the court files in the case of Augustus S. Peabody, trustee, against the city of Seattle, and the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co.?

Mr. PRESTON. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. It may go in the record as "Exhibit No. 88."

Paper referred to was marked "Exhibit No. 88."

The committee here took a short recess.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order. Who do you suggest that we call next?

Mr. DORR. I suggest that we have Mr. McCord called.

E. S. MCCORD, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. Will you examine him, Mr. Dorr?

Mr. DORR. If you wish.

By Mr. DORR:

Q. Mr. McCord, state your full name, please.—A. E. S. McCord.

Q. A member of the firm of Kerr & McCord?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Attorneys of this city?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall some patent litigation that was carried on in Judge Hanford's court, between the Alaska Packers' Association, as plaintiff, and Letson & Burpee, as defendants?—A. I do.

Q. And also some other cases involving the same patents, by the same plaintiff against various other defendants?—A. Yes; a half a dozen other cases probably.

Q. When was that, Mr. McCord?—A. That was in the years 1902, 1903, and 1904, I think.

Q. That was a suit, so far as Letson & Burpee were concerned, as manufacturers, for an infringement upon certain patents claimed by the plaintiff or the plaintiffs?—A. Well, the suit by the Alaska Packers' Association against Letson & Burpee was a suit against them as manufacturers, for infringing upon the Jensen patent owned by the Alaska Packers' Association and certain other patents. The other cases were injunctions brought by various parties against users of these machines that had brought them from Letson & Burpee.

Q. Brought by the same plaintiff against various defendants, you mean?—A. Yes, sir; among others one against the Apex Fish Co., the Fildalgo Island Packing Co., Carlisle Packing Co., the Pacific-American Fisheries receivers, and the Pacific Packing & Navigation

Co. receivers, and practically every fish concern or canning company on the Sound, I think.

Q. For whom did you appear, Mr. McCoy?—A. We appeared in the case of the Alaska Packers' Association against Letson & Burpee for the defendants Letson & Burpee.

Q. Was that case prosecuted to a final decree?—A. Yes, sir; it was prosecuted during the year 1902, and the decree was entered, I think, on December 19, 1902, if I remember correctly.

Q. December 16?—A. December 16, 1902.

Q. [Handing paper to witness.] What occurred, after the final decree in this court, with reference to that suit?—A. The case was appealed by Letson & Burpee to the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit, in San Francisco.

Q. What was the disposition made there of the case on appeal?—In that case the decision of Judge Hanford was affirmed, and I think there was one additional claim that the circuit court of appeals held was infringed upon in addition to the claims of infringement allowed by Judge Hanford.

Q. Where was the appeal reported, if at all, in the Federal Reporter?—A. 130 Federal, at page 129.

Q. Do you recall the fact that Judge Hanford himself became a patentee of a can-topping machine at any time?—A. Yes, sir; I remember that shortly after the announcement of the decision by Judge Hanford on December 16, 1902, Judge Hanford told me that in the consideration of that case and the examination of the various models and the various patents, that he himself had invented a machine that—a can-topping machine that did not, in his judgment, infringe upon either the Letson & Burpee patent or upon the Jensen patent and the other patents owned by the Alaska Packers' Association.

Q. Do you remember of having any conversation with Mr. Burpee regarding Judge Hanford's invention at any time; and, if so, I want you to state, if you will, fully all that occurred between you and Mr. Burpee regarding that matter, and fix the time as nearly as you can of those conversations?—A. Well, I fixed the time on yesterday, when I returned from San Francisco. I saw Mr. Burpee's testimony, and I had not thought of this matter for nearly 10 years, so—I had known Mr. Burpee for many years; he had been a client of mine for a good many years while I lived at Bellingham, Wash., where he resided. I asked him to go down to my office with me, and we would go through my correspondence to get a starting point to refresh my memory as well as his own. He went to the office with me, and I turned to my letter-press copy book for the year 1903 and 1902, and so on, for some months afterwards, ran through the correspondence, and the only letter that I found that bore upon the subject at all was the letter of which I gave Mr. Burpee a copy and which was introduced in evidence on yesterday. I don't remember having talked with Mr. Burpee prior to the time of writing that letter. I wrote him the letter, telling him that I had been shown by Judge Hanford in his chambers a plan, a diagram of a machine that he had invented, and that he wanted Mr. Letson to make a sample machine for him, and suggested that he come to Seattle and meet Judge Hanford, who was then gone away—going away to Spokane or some other place to hold court—and on his return, which would be on a Sunday, and I wanted Mr. Burpee to come down and meet Judge Hanford then and go over the matter, stating to him that I wanted him to bring a plan of his own machine, modified as Burpee had modified it after the decision by Judge Hanford so as to avoid the infringement. Mr. Burpee, after Judge Hanford's decision, had made certain modifications of his machine, which he thought obviated the infringement features, and he was going to use them in carrying on his business and making the machines in the modified form.

If you will notice, in that letter I asked him to bring the plan of his modifications so that we could show them to Judge Hanford before Judge Hanford showed to Burpee the plan of his machine, my idea being that as Burpee was an excellent machinist and a very successful inventor and a successful manufacturer of canning machinery and other machinery, shingle-mill machinery, and so on, that Hanford might think, if they had arrived at the same results, that Burpee might be put in the position of having gained something from Judge Hanford, so I wanted him to show his design before he saw Hanford's design. And I told him, further, that I thought it would be worth his while to come down and go over with Judge Hanford his machine, and make it, if he could, so that if there was any way to utilize that machine, why, I wanted him to have an opportunity to do it. You see, Mr. Chairman, in the manufacture of canning machinery one man like Letson & Burpee—or one firm—will manufacture an entire line of machinery—the fish-cleaning machine, the wiper, the topper, the crimping machine, and the soldering machine, and others clean through the cannery. Now, the granting of this injunction restraining Letson & Burpee from using this can-topping machine broke up their line of machinery, and would have very materially damaged their business, because when a man wanted a cannery he wanted to go to one concern and get the whole thing, and he was put out of business with the topper. I thought that if he could get an opportunity to get Judge Hanford's ideas, if they were worth anything, why, we might be able to make some arrangement to use that and go on with the business. Well, after talking it over with Mr. Burpee, when he came to Seattle in response to this letter, he says, "I think I will stand on my own modifications, because if Mr. Dorr and the Alaska Packers' Association undertake to enjoin us we can keep the matter in court for another year anyway"—at least I told him I thought I could, and at the end of a year or a year and a half the Jensen patent would have expired by limitation, and he could go on anyway. So Burpee, as I remember it, told me that he did not want anything to do with Judge Hanford's machine, because the other patent had such a short time to run.

We then went up to Judge Hanford's office—I think Mr. Burpee is correct in saying that it was several days later than the date I have named—and went in and took up the discussion of the matter. Mr. Burpee had his plan, the design of his machine. He showed it to Judge Hanford, but he expressed no opinion on it whatever, and did not show Mr. Burpee the plans of his machine. My idea throughout the whole transaction was in the interest of Letson & Burpee, to get Mr. Burpee in possession of any ideas that were valuable if they would enable him to modify his machine and go on with the manufacture so as not to interfere with or come in contact with the injunction.

Q. Were there any negotiations carried on at all between Judge Hanford and Mr. Burpee, or yourself representing Mr. Burpee, with respect to the acquisition of the Hanford invention?—A. I have absolutely no recollection of ever discussing the purchase of Judge Hanford's machine with him on behalf of Mr. Burpee.

Now, Mr. Burpee testified before this committee, and I think that he testified as he honestly believed, in fact, I know he did; he says that I read to him a letter of what purported to be a letter or telegram from Judge Hanford saying that he did not want to discuss the matter with Mr. Burpee unless it was with a view of Burpee acquiring the ownership of his patent.

Mr. McCoy. A telephone message was what he said.

A. Well——

Mr. McCoy. A memorandum which you had made of some telephone message.

A. Yes; something that I had read. I understood him to say it was a letter or telegram, the way I read his testimony—I may be mistaken about that, but as a matter of fact if it was a telegram, that might have been—I mean a telephone, I might have had merely a memorandum of what he said, but I am sure that I never received any telegram or telephone and I don't know why I should have received any letter from Judge Hanford, unless it was when he was in Spokane; but if I received any such telegram or letter—possibly not a telephone message, I might not have kept that—but the other would have been signed and filed among my files in the office. I went through them yesterday, with Mr. Burpee, trying to find such a letter or telegram. I found absolutely nothing, and I have no recollection of ever having read any such thing to Mr. Burpee, and I have no recollection of ever receiving any such letter, telegram, or telephone message from Judge Hanford in regard to the sale of his machine. That never was contemplated by Judge Hanford. What he wanted was to find somebody to manufacture a sample machine, to see whether it would work or not, and I remember at this meeting with Mr. Burpee Judge Hanford indicated that he preferred having the machine—his machine—manufactured, if he could have it manufactured at all, in the city of Seattle, rather than in Bellingham, where he could supervise it and be present. It was my suggestion to him possibly—I don't recall it—that Mr. Burpee was the man to develop his machine and make—his idea—and make it a workable machine, because I knew Burpee was an exceedingly competent man.

The Chairman. How long had the patent been issued?

A. The patent, as I remember it had——

The Chairman (interrupting). At the time you and Burpee called on him?

A. I don't think, Mr. Chairman, that that patent had been issued at all. I think he had filed only—I have forgotten what they call them—caveats?

The Chairman. Caveat.

A. Caveat; yes. I think he had filed that, but I think the patent was not issued until some time later than that.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Who acted as attorneys in securing the patent?—A. I don't know.

Q. Was his device used in the canning concern over which Mr. Kerr was receiver?—A. No, sir. You mean Judge Hanford's?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir.

Q. Was it tested there?—A. I am inclined to think that it was tested. I am not sure, but that may have been later. It was tested, I think, by the Pacific-American Fisheries, a corporation that is now in existence at Bellingham, and one of the——

Q. (Interrupting.) I mean during the receivership.—A. I don't think so. I don't think it was tested then.

Q. Have you knowledge on that subject?—A. No; I don't know. I don't think so, though. I think I would have known if it had been, probably.

By Mr. DORR:

Q. Do you know where the Hanford machine was manufactured, if there was a sample made?—A. Why, some time after this I went out on Western Avenue, somewhere up toward Pike Street, I think, don't recall just now—Railroad Avenue——

Q. In Seattle?—A. In Seattle; and saw a very crude model of the machine.

Q. How did you happen to go out there?—A. I went out there with Judge Hanford; he wanted to show it to me.

Q. Was that in a shop?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Manufacturing shop?—A. Yes. I think that——

Q. (Interrupting.) Was that the shop where the machine was being built?—A. Yes, sir. I think subsequently a full-sized machine—that was a model—a full-sized machine was made, I think, at the Washington Iron Works, in this city, later on.

Q. In this city?—A. Yes. That was made, I believe, during the year 1904. That machine I never saw after it was completed.

Q. Was there ever any discussion between Burpee and Judge Hanford, or yourself and Judge Hanford, with relation to purchasing the Hanford patent, as far as you know?—A. Mr. Dorr, all I can say on that subject is this: I have absolutely no recollection of ever discussing the purchase of that machine with Judge Hanford. Now, I am going to modify that in this way: I have known Mr. Burpee for a good many years, and he is positive that I read some statement to him, in accordance with what he testified to. I think he is mistaken, but I want to say that to the best of my recollection I never received any such letter and never heard any discussion or any negotiation with Judge Hanford for the purchase of that machine. I did have in mind with Mr. Burpee that I wanted him to see Judge Hanford's machine to see his ideas.

Q. What for; why?—A. I wanted Mr. Burpee to be in a position that if it was worth anything after he saw it that he might attempt to make some sort of an arrangement to get the use of it to fill in his line of machinery and prevent the ruin of his business.

Q. Then your efforts were entirely in Mr. Burpee's interest, as you understood it?—A. Yes, sir; I was trying my best to do everything I could to minimize the injury to Mr. Burpee by reason of the unfortunate decision that was rendered against him. I might say in this connection, Mr. Dorr, that so far as the termination of the case was concerned the thing that I was interested in and that Burpee was interested in was not the question of damages for the profits made in the manufacture of the machine, but it was to prevent the destruction of our business by the elimination of one element or one unit in the line of machinery of a cannery, and that is the point that I had in mind. I regarded the litigation as ended so far as this court was concerned——

Q. (Interrupting.) Well, was it ended?—A. Yes; ended. Of course if the case went on to the Circuit Court of Appeals and was affirmed and sent back here, why, then, possibly—then the accounting would follow, and after the case did come back I settled it for Letson & Burpee with the Alaska Packers' Association by paying them—I have forgotten how much now, two or three——

Q. (Interrupting.) That was all outside of court, wasn't it?—A. Yes, sir. About two or three thousand dollars. I have forgotten what the figures were; maybe it was——

The CHAIRMAN (interrupting). At what period of the litigation was the stipulation entered into as to what the damages would be if there were damages?

A. There was no stipulation, Mr. Chairman, entered into with regard to the first suit; that is, the suit brought by the Alaska Packers' Association against Letson & Burpee. There was no stipulation made. After it was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals, then we stipulated for a settlement. In all of the other cases—that is, the cases brought against the users of these machines by the Alaska Packers' Association—we entered into a stipulation that we might use them. The injunction was granted and then suspended by the giving of a bond or entering into a stipulation that we would pay 5 cents a case in the event that the courts ultimately held that there was any infringement.

Mr. MCCOY. That is, in the suits against the users?

A. Against the users.

Mr. DORR. Well, had this matter of Judge Hanford's patent ever come up until after the litigation had been ended in this court over the validity of the patent?

A. No, sir; no, sir; not for some time after that. The first I ever heard of this patent of Judge Hanford's, I think, was just about within a day or two of the time that I wrote that letter on the 15th or 13th day of April, 1903—the letter that is introduced in evidence—a copy of it. I know that at the time that Judge Hanford told me of the invention of this machine of his I was not very greatly surprised, because he always went to the bottom of all sorts of mechanical devices and machinery and was about as good a machinist or as good a mechanic as you could find anywhere.

Q. You had known of other judges who invented can-topping devices, hadn't you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Judge Wheaton, do you remember that?—A. Oh, yes, yes; that is right.

Q. The attorney for——A. (Interrupting.) Yes; I might say that I don't know much about machinery, Mr. Dorr.

The CHAIRMAN. Was the inference to be drawn from that that judicial work stimulates invention?

Mr. DORR. I think it does in some cases of patent rights.

The WITNESS. A man who works over these machines and can form an intelligent and write an intelligent opinion on them, he has got to know something about it; and I found, along with Mr. Dorr, of Dorr & Hadley, on one side, and we were on the other—I found that we needed attorneys, so we both employed a skilled patent attorney.

Mr. DORR. I think that is all I wish to ask Mr. McCord on this line.

The CHAIRMAN. I think that is all.

The WITNESS. Well, do you want to ask me about anything else now while I am here?

The CHAIRMAN. Well, I don't think we had better go in on some new subject now; it is about lunch time.

The WITNESS. All right, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Unless some one has some question to ask on the testimony you have given. If not, we will take a recess now until 1.30 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Continuation of proceedings pursuant to recess. All parties present as at former hearing.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will come to order—are you ready, Mr. Dorr?

Mr. DORR. Yes, sir.

E. L. GRONDAHL, being first duly sworn, testifies as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. Who is this witness?

Mr. DORR. This is Mr. Grondahl of the Scandinavian-American Bank.

The CHAIRMAN. I thought you were to call all of these witnesses while Mr. Finch was here—was Mr. Grondahl away anywhere?

Mr. DORR. No; he was here a great many times, but there was not any opportunity to use him, and I told Mr. Finch—I notified him publicly yesterday that he would be called, and Mr. McCoy requested that Mr. Finch have permission to read his testimony—the testimony of this witness—after Mr. Finch's return, and if he wanted to make any answer to it, to so notify the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. What good will that be? The committee will be out of reach.

Mr. DORR. I could not keep Mr. Finch here, and these witnesses have been constantly in attendance.

Mr. MCCOY. We have taken them up. We announced that we wanted all the evidence in reference to the Heckman & Hansen case in by Wednesday, and we shoved everything aside for that because Mr. Finch was going away, and now he is gone away and the situation is this: On account of our unfamiliarity with the record we may not be able to fully appreciate the significance of what testimony Mr. Grondahl will give here. We do not know where to refer in the testimony to find anything there which will direct or enlighten the committee in Mr. Finch's absence. However, we will do the best we can; that is all. I think, at least, Mr. Grondahl might have testified while Mr. Finch was here.

Mr. DORR. I certainly made every effort I could to have these witnesses called, but they were always put aside. Shall I examine the witness?

The CHAIRMAN. Proceed.

Mr. DORR. What relation, if any, did you sustain to the Scandinavian-American Bank in 1901 and 1902?

A. Vice president.

Q. I beg your pardon?—A. Vice president part of 1902.

Q. Do you recall the receivership of Heckman & Hansen?—A. I do.

Q. Can you state whether or not the receiver kept his bank account with your bank?—A. He did not.

Q. With what bank did he keep his account?—A. He kept it with another bank.

Q. Do you know what bank?—A. With the Washington National Bank.

Q. That is the general account?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the transactions with Heckman & Hansen when the bank made the $5,000 loan to them?—A. Yes, sir; I kept in touch with the matter.

Q. Will you please state to this committee just what happened at that time?

Mr. MCCOY. Just a minute before you go ahead, Mr. Dorr—did you testify before Judge Smith?

The WITNESS. Yes, sir.

Q. Has your testimony, so far as you know, ever been reduced to typewritten form?—A. I think it has.

Q. Do you know?—A. I know it has.

Mr. MCCOY. All right, Mr. Dorr.

Mr. DORR. It is in the record, Mr. McCoy, of the proceedings before the master that have been the subject of much inquiry in this case. I will submit, if the committee pleases, the record that was made in the hearing before the master in chancery without reexamining him on those points. It appears to be contained in the general transcript marked "Exhibit A–1," commencing at page 404.

Mr. MCCOY. As we are going to take that with us, I suggest you just call attention to it in the record and then we can read it for whatever is in it.

Mr. DORR. I find in this record which I have just referred to Mr. Grondahl, what purports to be the testimony of A. L. Grondahl.

A. That is E. L. Grondahl.

Q. Well, it is written here, "A. L." Is this your testimony that is here under the name of "A. L." instead of "E. L."?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just a mistake in the initial?—A. Just evidently a mistake.

Q. But that is your evidence given before Judge Smith?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Commencing on page 404 of that transcript?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. MCCOY. Is that the only place, Mr. Dorr, where he testified in the matter so far as you know?

Mr. DORR. The index shows that the witness testified on direct examination, commencing at page 404 of the transcript, on cross-examination commencing at page 424, and redirect examination at page 425, and was recalled at page 846 of this transcript; reference is made to the general transcript containing 886 pages of the testimony which was taken before Judge Smith and which has been frequently referred to in these hearings and which is to be taken with the committee to Washington, the transcript being marked for identification "A–1." That is all that I wish to ask him.

The CHAIRMAN. That is all.

Mr. MCCOY. Just a minute. Did you testify at that hearing that Mr. Heckman or Heckman & Hansen kept, or rather that the receiver of Heckman & Hansen kept, their accounts in the Washington National Bank?

A. I do not recollect whether that question was asked in my previous testimony.

Q. Well, how do you know that he kept it there?—A. I remember the time that he placed his account in another bank and I have seen the pass book of the Washington National Bank issued to the receiver to-day, which refreshes my memory.

Witness excused.

A. H. SOELBERG, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. How do you spell your name?

A. S-o-e-l-b-e-r-g.

Mr. DORR. Mr. Soelberg, what relation, if any, did you sustain to the Scandinavian-American Bank in the years 1901 and 1902?

A. I was cashier.

Q. Are you the same A. H. Soelberg who testified before Judge Eben Smith in the hearing on the petition to reopen the bankruptcy case in the Federal court?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I find in the transcript of the evidence taken before Judge Smith in that hearing certain evidence recorded commencing at page 335, commencing again at page 427, commencing again at page 533, and commencing again at page 535; I want to know if you are the witness who gave this evidence before Judge Smith?—A. Yes, sir; I am.

Q. You looked over this recently, have you?—A. I did.

Mr. DORR. Certain of this evidence is in the report of the master that has been identified as coming out of this book [showing]; is that your evidence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Larsen, as receiver, kept his bank account with your bank at that time?—A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. What bank did he keep his account with?—A. The Washington National Bank, I think.

Q. Do you remember the time of the sale of the assets?—A. I remember something about it; yes.

Q. Do you know whether the receiver deposited any of the proceeds of that sale with your bank?—A. Well, he took out a certificate of deposit for a check which covered, I think, 90 per cent of the bid.

Q. I refer you to certificate of deposit that was identified by Mr. Finch yesterday [showing document to witness].

The CHAIRMAN. Is it an exhibit?

Mr. DORR. Yes, sir; it was one of the exhibits that he asked to go in yesterday when he was here.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it numbered or is it a part of an exhibit?

Mr. DORR. It is numbered "H" and "H-2." It is identified in that way and it purports to be a certificate of deposit executed by the Scandinavian-American Bank to Peter L. Larsen, receiver, for $21,712.50, dated March 12, 1902.

I will ask you if you can testify about that any further?

A. Yes, sir; I can.

Q. What is that paper?—A. That is a certificate that was issued to Mr. Larsen in payment of a check on us for a similar amount.

Q. A check on you for a similar amount?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that represented what, if you know?—A. So far as I recollect, it represented 90 per cent of the bid for the Heckman & Hansen assets.

Q. Who indorsed the certificate of deposit, if you know?—A. Peter L. Larsen, as receiver.

Mr. DORR. That is all I want to ask the witness.

Mr. MCCOY. Who drew the check on you?

A. M. F. Mayhew.

Q. Where did he get the money?—A. The money came from a loan that was made by the bank to three other gentlemen who appointed Mr. Mayhew their agent to negotiate this purchase.

The CHAIRMAN. Who were the three other gentlemen?

A. Mr. Kelley, Mr. Chilberg, and Mr. Grondahl.

Q. And yourself?—A. No, sir; I am not interested.

Q. What were the names?—A. Kelley, Chilberg, and Grondahl.

Q. What relations were theirs to the Scandinavian-American Bank?—A. They were all directors of the bank at that time.

Q. Are they now interested in the Seattle Shipyards Co?—A. I do not know. Mr. Grondahl is not, and I do not know about the others.

Q. Was Mr. Grondahl ever interested in it or did he own any stock in it or in any other way?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did they keep their account in your bank?—A. They did at that time. I am not connected with the bank now, and I do not know.

Mr. DORR. I now show you a check that was identified yesterday by Mr. Finch [showing] for $21,712.50, purporting to have been drawn by M. F. Mayhew on your bank, and I will ask you if that is the check which you just referred to.

A. Yes, sir; this is the check I just referred to.

Mr. MCCOY. May I see those?

Check and certificate of deposit are handed to Mr. McCoy by Mr. Dorr.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything further, Mr. Dorr?

Mr. DORR. Not from this witness.

Witness excused.

ALFRED BATTLE, recalled, testified as follows:

Mr. DORR. Judge Battle, do you desire to make any further answer to Mr. Finch's testimony, or any part of it?

A. I would like to call the attention of the committee to this phase of Mr. Finch's testimony: on pages 2227 and 2228 of the evidence taken before this committee in this proceeding, Mr. Finch alludes to what he claims to be a proposition made by Heckman, or Heckman & Hansen, to the bank to purchase the bank mortgages upon the Heckman & Hansen properties. In his testimony he states that the proposition was to purchase the mortgages and that that proposition was evidenced by a letter which Heckman caused his attorneys, Messrs. Metcalfe & Jurey, to write to Ballinger, Ronald & Battle.

Q. Now, do you wish to make any statement about that letter [handing letter to witness]?—A. The letter speaks for itself.

Q. Do you have the letter there?—A. Yes, sir. And I wish to read the letter into the record.

The CHAIRMAN. Has the letter been in evidence before?

Mr. DORR. No, sir. This was brought out on Mr. Finch's last testimony.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you wish it read into the record?

Mr. DORR. I want it to go as an exhibit.

The CHAIRMAN. It is not necessary to have it read—you can ask any questions based on it.

The WITNESS. The letter is dated.

SEATTLE, WASH., July 8, 1901.

MESSRS. BALLINGER, RONALD, & BATTLE,
Attorneys at Law, Seattle, Wash.

GENTLEMEN: Referring to the suit of the Scandinavian-American Bank, of Seattle, against Andrew Heckman and Martin Hansen, copartners as Heckman & Hansen, in the Superior Court of the State of Washington, in and for King County, for the foreclosure of a note and mortgage in the sum of $5,000, with interest, upon their shipyards at Ballard, Wash., we beg to say on account of the serious illness of Mr. Hansen he is unable to execute the necessary papers to enable Heckman & Hansen to procure the money necessary to pay the note and mortgage in question; but we have a party who will immediately advance sum necessary to satisfy this note and mortgage if the Scandinavian-American Bank will assign the same to him. Heckman & Hansen will cause the amount due upon this note and mortgage and all proper costs to date to be immediately paid into the Scandinavian-American Bank if they will assign the note and mortgage in question to whomsoever they may direct. Please let me know at once if the bank will assign the note and mortgage, as above suggested, upon the amount due thereon and all proper costs to date being paid to them.

Yours, truly,

METCALFE & JUREY.

Q. Now, is that the letter that Mr. Finch referred to?—A. So far as I know or believe.

Q. Do you know of any other letter that was written?—A. I do not. Whether or not this is a copy of the letter or the original I have no knowledge, but I do understand there was such a letter by Metcalfe & Jurey to Ballinger, Ronald & Battle along those lines. The reason I make this statement is that I notice the signature of Metcalfe & Jurey seems to be typewritten.

Q. Was that letter presented before Mr. Smith, or is it referred to in the testimony?—A. That is my belief. I think it bears his exhibit signature.

The CHAIRMAN. It states on the face of it that it is a copy.

The WITNESS. I did not observe that.

Mr. DORR. I think it is identified on the back as one of the exhibits, is it not?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

The WITNESS. That was the document, I take it, that was used before Judge Smith as being either a conceded copy or proven to be such.

Q. Now, Judge Battle, on the hearing before Judge Smith I want to ask you whether the account books of Heckman & Hansen were present?—A. Yes, sir. Before I get on that I would like to complete this additional feature in reference to this proposition.

Q. Very well.—A. The committee will remember there were four indebtednesses, so to speak, by Heckman & Hansen to the bank, namely, the $5,000 note and mortgage, the $3,000 note and mortgage, the $650 note and mortgage on the personal property, and the overdraft indebtedness. The proposition was to purchase only one of the four indebtednesses, and not the mortgages, as Mr. Finch says in his testimony, but only one of the three mortgages.

Q. As is shown by this letter?—A. As is shown by that letter.

Q. I hand you a book, the same one I showed Mr. Finch on yesterday [handing book to witness], and I will ask you if you can identify that as one of the Heckman & Hansen account books that was introduced as an exhibit in the hearing before Judge Smith?—A. I can only state this to the committee: That during the hearing before Judge Smith, either in open court, so to speak, or else as a result of conferences between myself and Mr. Finch, he wanted the books of Heckman & Hansen brought into court, they being then in the possession of either the purchasers at this sale, represented by Mr. Mayhew, or in the Seattle Shipyards Co., whichever it was, at that time. I do not now call to mind; at any rate, the books—I think a whole box full of old books of Heckman & Hansen—were brought into court and Mr. Finch given free access to them—in fact, returned into the possession of the court—my best belief, and so far as I have any definite recollection about the matter—I say that because I can not express it any more definitely—is that this is one of the books that was produced by Mr. Mayhew or the Seattle Shipyards Co. at that time as being the records coming to them as purchasers at the sale.

Now, what does this book purport to be?—A. I can not answer any more definitely what it purports to be than this, that an examination of it would indicate that it was a ledger of Heckman & Hansen. That I gather only inferentially from looking through the contents of the books.

Q. Is it marked by Judge Smith's exhibit stamp?—A. It is marked by Judge Smith's exhibit stamp, but not bearing his signature, but has the words "Exhibit United States master in chancery, district of Washington, northern division."

Mr. McCoy. Whereas the letter which was used there has "Eben Smith" on it in addition to the rubber stamp?—A. Yes, sir. Whether or not this was offered in evidence and omitted to be signed by the master in chancery after this lapse of time I can not state, but I know that all the books were produced there, a whole boxful, and all of them were exhibited, in a sense.

Mr. Dorr. Well, Judge Battle, is there any doubt in your mind that this is the ledger of Heckman & Hansen?

A. No; I have not any doubt of it, Mr. Dorr; I can not state any more definitely, though, regarding the matter than I have.

Q. To the best of your judgment it is the same book?—A. To the best of my judgment and belief it is.

Mr. Dorr. I will state to the committee that I found this book on file with the exhibits in this case in the Federal court—personally I know nothing more about it—it purports to be the ledger of Heckman & Hansen.

The Witness. I will state to the committee that knowing as I do that Mr. Mayhew would know definitely, after Mr. Dorr asked me about this, whether it was or not, I undertook during the noon recess of the committee to ascertain the whereabouts of Mr. Mayhew, so that he can appear here and testify. I understand he is probably out at Kent, about 20 miles from here.

Mr. DORR. I would like now, Mr. Chairman, to have added to the exhibits which are already identified in this case two pages out of this ledger.

The CHAIRMAN. You really have not made any proof yet that would justify it in going in evidence. It is not in the handwriting of either of those men. It was found among some other lumber that probably was traceable to them. The exhibits which were filed with Judge Eben Smith not only have his stamp, but his signature, and this has not his signature. A stamp proves nothing at all. On what theory do you offer it?

Mr. DORR. I will concede that if it were offered under the strict rules of evidence there might be some question about the identification of the books.

The CHAIRMAN. No; there would not be any question at all.

Mr. DORR. I say if it were being offered under strict rules of evidence——

The CHAIRMAN. There would be no question whatever—it would not go in under those rules in that case.

Mr. MCCOY. The point with me about the admission of it would be, not so much whether it was a book that Heckman & Hansen used in their business; that is, it would not turn on the question of whether those entries were made in that business, but we do not have any explanation anywhere of how the entries were made or anything of that kind. If it were testified about at the hearing before Judge Smith, why, then we need not be concerned with that. Usually when one puts in books you have to prove that the books were regularly kept and all the other things which would give them authenticity. What is the nature of it?

Mr. DORR. One of these pages, Mr. Chairman, shows the bank account and the other one the mortgage account.

The CHAIRMAN. Pass those pages up.

Book is passed up to the chairman.

Mr. MCCOY. Which pages did you say, Mr. Dorr?

Mr. DORR. Pages 142 and 293.

The CHAIRMAN. What particular entries do you refer to?

Mr. DORR. On page 142 it shows the bank account, and the amount appears to check with the other evidence which has been introduced in the case as to the amounts of those overdrafts, so called, or whatever they may be; in other words, this ledger shows a debit account in favor of the bank of sixty-nine hundred and some odd dollars balance.

Mr. MCCOY. That relates to the issue as to whether or not that was an overdraft or a payment, doesn't it—that money that was drawn out by them?

Mr. DORR. I think so; yes, sir.

Mr. MCCOY. Mr. Finch said either in the evidence or to me privately the other day that he understood, he remembered, that the finding made by Mr. Smith was to the effect that Heckman & Hansen was right about that, that that money was paid to them and not an overdraft.

Mr. DORR. I do not know.

Mr. MCCOY. I do not either; I did not see the finding, but Mr. Finch mentioned it to me or else he mentioned it in the evidence. The findings of Judge Smith should be here—I remember Mr. Finch's stating the fact that he ultimately found in favor of Heckman & Hansen's contention—how about that, Mr. Battle?

A. I think Mr. Finch gave that in his testimony. I think I remember hearing him testify, and it occurred to me at the time to look up the record.

Q. What is the fact about it?—A. I do not know what the fact is. I think he is in error about that. I think if Judge Smith made any finding at all it was to the effect that it was an overdraft, but I think if you will examine the report, I think that you will find it does not cover specifically that phase of the matter.

Mr. DORR. I think it is certain, from any view which may be taken of the matter, that whether it was an overdraft or an advance, it was paid ultimately by the sale of that schooner Alice.

Mr. MCCOY. I do not understand that that is controverted.

Mr. DORR. No, sir; I do not think there is any controversy over that report.

Mr. MCCOY. I think Mr. Finch reiterated the fact that it was taken care of in that stipulation, but he gave a number of other explanations about other features which would have to do with that stipulation which is in evidence here providing that the receiver should buy that boat at the sale and that he should bid up to the full amount of the claim of Heckman & Hansen against the boat. I mean, assuming that the decree of sale was entered, and if the claim was found to be a valid claim against the boat, then the amount of his bid should be on offset against the claim that the bank made, and in that way the claim was liquidated.

Mr. DORR. My real purpose in exhibiting this ledger account, which, by the way, is itemized, showing in detail the items of each credit, is to show the committee that Heckman & Hansen carried their account as an indebtedness to the bank and that it not only involved pay rolls, but a good many other things that are entirely outside of the schooner Alice. It seems to be a general account.

Mr. MCCOY. That is just the trouble with bringing this book in in this way—it just illustrates what I said, I think, that when you get a book in you have got to know how it is kept and you have to have some one testify as to how they kept it. I do not care, because I do not think it makes any difference. It is admitted there was a controversy. Now, Heckman & Hansen may have been wrong or they may have been right in regard to the matter. The fact is there was a controversy and the complaint was that Metcalfe & Jurey conceded, by filing the libel, that Heckman & Hansen were right. That is Mr. Finch's complaint.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you think that the committee should take the whole page of the book?

Mr. DORR. I was going to copy those pages and send them along with the exhibits.

The CHAIRMAN. You may do that.

Mr. MCCOY. We might as well let them go in anyway; only let Mr. Finch get at it, because we rely on him as an expert in this matter. What is the other page, Mr. Dorr?

Mr. DORR. Page 293.

The WITNESS. I think, if the committee will read the master's report, you will find Mr. Finch is mistaken in regard to what his report was.

Mr. DORR. Well, the report will speak for itself and it is not necessary to go into it.

Mr. MCCOY. You mean to introduce just the mortgage account.

Mr. DORR. The mortgage account and the bank account. That is all I want to offer unless the committee may want to ask you some more questions.

Mr. MCCOY. Just one question. Judge Battle, who were the trustees when the Seattle Ship Yards Co., if that is the concern, that took over this property, was organized?

A. I can not answer that definitely, because if I ever knew, it was some while ago, and I would not like to testify from memory as to just who the incorporaters were.

Q. Did your firm organize the company?—A. That is, act as attorney for the organizers?

Q. Yes.—A. I think so.

Q. Will you supply that information?—A. I think I can.

Q. As to who were the trustees and who were at or about that time the stockholders of the company.—A. Yes, sir; I think I can.

Mr. DORR. I think I have seen—if the committee would like it I will get it—a copy of the articles of incorporation of this shipyards company in the exhibits.

The WITNESS. That is filed in this county.

Mr. MCCOY. That would answer one question, and we will see who, within six months after the concern was organized, were on the list of stockholders. Well, that will do, I guess.

The CHAIRMAN. You may stand aside, Mr. Battle. Have you any other witnesses on this line, Mr. Dorr?

Mr. DORR. No; that is all I have to offer.

Witness excused.

Mr. MCCOY. As part of the testimony, there is offered in evidence a pass book of Peter L. Larsen, receiver, with the Washington National Bank, which purports to have been marked as an exhibit before Judge Smith. This pass book and the ledger will go along with the other papers in the matter to be made such use of as the Judiciary Committee may see fit, calling especial attention to the pages which are referred to by Mr. Dorr in the ledger.

R. C. HASSAN, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. Do you live in Seattle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your business?—A. Mill business—flour mill.

Q. Are you a member of the Merchants & Credit Men's Association?—A. I am.

Q. Did you attend a meeting of the committee of that association at the Washington Hotel a week or two ago?—A. I did not.

Q. Were you present at any meeting of the officers or the committee at which the question of assisting the congressional committee in obtaining evidence in this investigation was discussed?—A. I was.

Q. When was that?—A. Several weeks ago; I do not remember the date.

Q. Where was it?—A. It was in the Polson Building, down on the water front, the headquarters of the association.

Q. What time did you get there, with reference to the time the meeting was called to order?—A. I was there before it was called to order.

Q. Did you hear any discussion of the question before the meeting?—A. I did.

Q. By whom?—A. Oh, several people.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Goldsmith discuss it?—A. I did.

Q. And Mr. Anderson?—A. I did.

Q. And Mr. Klock?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you tell the committee, to the best of your recollection, what those respective gentlemen said on that occasion?—A. Well, I do not believe I can quote what they said.

Q. Well, the substance of it.—A. Well, the substance of it, as nearly as I could see, was that Mr. Klock was endeavoring to get the association, as an association, to sort of pull his chestnuts out of the fire, and we did not care to stand for anything of that kind.

Q. Explain what you mean by the use of that phrase.—A. Well, he seemed to have some kind of a—I don't know exactly whether it was feeling or not, but the line of his conversation would indicate that he thought that we ought to go ahead and take up a matter which we knew nothing about.

Q. If you can give the substance of what he said that would be the best way.—A. Well, I don't know that I could do that, Mr. Graham.

Q. Was the question of aiding the congressional committee in its work discussed?—A. I think he brought that up.

Q. Was there any discussion as to the management of bankrupt estates here in Seattle or in the Federal court here?—A. I think that was touched on.

Q. Who began the discussion?—A. I could not tell you as to that.

Q. Well, can you recall the substance of what Mr. Anderson said on either of those subjects?—A. Well, not exactly, but I think he thought that there ought to be some changes made along that line for the betterment of conducting those cases or something of that sort; I don't remember exactly what he said.

Q. Do you recall what Mr. Goldsmith said?—A. Well, there was a general discussion there for quite a long while and it was all informal, and so far as Mr. Goldsmith went I think that he seemed to think that some people were of the opinion that the party under discussion had somewhat worn out his self in the services.

Q. You mean Judge Hanford?—A. Yes, sir; and he thought—well, I took his conversation to be favorable to Judge Hanford; that is the way I sized it up.

Q. Did you take any part in it?—A. Somewhat; I made a few remarks, I think.

Q. What was your position on the question you have been referring to now; that is, the conversation of the assets of bankrupt estates?—A. Well, I do not think I had anything to say as to Judge Hanford at all on that question.

Q. Did you on the question I have just mentioned?—A. Which.

Q. As to saving the property of bankrupt estates for the creditors.—A. Yes; I had something to say along that line. I do not remember just what it was at the present time.

Q. Had you any personal knowledge of any bankrupt estate that you thought had not been handled advantageously to the creditors?—A. No personal; no, sir.

Q. Did you mention any estates?—A. I did not.

Q. That night?—A. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Have you any questions to ask of this gentleman? You are excused.

Witness excused.

H. D. HUGHES, recalled, testified as follows:

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Hughes, at my request and suggestion your testimony was halted and somewhat interrupted until you could get an opportunity to go through your files and see if you could find a transcript of the proceedings taken in Judge Hanford's court in the case of Augustus Peabody against the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co.; have you made such a search of your files?

A. I did.

Q. And have you found the—all of the proceedings which were transcribed and which the stenographer, as far as you know, made a record of in Judge Hanford's court at that time?—A. I was compelled to go to the original notes taken down by the stenographer at the time of the trial, and those original stenographic notes were reread and retranscribed.

Mr. HIGGINS. I think, Mr. Chairman, that the committee is under obligations to Mr. Preston for the work he has done in compiling these records, and I wish that he might examine the witness to ascertain if we now have, in connection with what he has furnished us, all of the available court records and stenographic records in that case.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you do so, Mr. Preston?

Mr. HIGGINS. You may want to examine the paper which the witness has just identified.

Mr. PRESTON. I do not care to see it, sir.

Mr. Hughes, I understood you to testify that either all or some part—my memory is not clear—of Judge Hanford's remarks you had taken down stenographically.

A. I testified that every remark made by Judge Hanford during the entire course of that trial was taken down by a stenographer, save the few remarks made by him shortly before noon on August 31. That was at the time I argued my demurrer. That was the first hearing. At that time he made certain remarks in regard to the answer which I had advised him as being on file, and read from those cases, as I told you. From that time I had a reporter present to take down every remark that Judge Hanford made until the case was closed.

Q. Now, you have already this morning, as I recall it, told the committee what those remarks were on that occasion, when you did not have the stenographer present.—A. I have.

Q. Have you omitted anything; can you recall anything which you omitted, if you have omitted anything?—A. No. I have stated, in brief, of course, the substance of his remarks. He dwelt on no other topics than those which I have mentioned, if that is what you refer to.

Q. Now, the committee already has a stenographic report that I handed to them this morning on the course of your examination. If it be available I would like to have it so that we can get these things in their proper order.

Mr. HIGGINS. I tried to find it awhile ago, and perhaps you can identify it if you come here.

The CHAIRMAN. What was it entitled?

Mr. PRESTON. I do not think it had any title to it. It was in the Peabody case. Perhaps it went in evidence.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you mean the synopsis of the Peabody case?

Mr. PRESTON. No, sir; the stenographic report of Judge Hanford's remarks which I passed up to the committee.

Whereupon the document referred to is produced; also another document which is by Mr. Preston at this juncture shown to the witness.

Mr. PRESTON. Now, you have got a transcript before you which you just had this minute—I am handing it to you now—the paper which Mr. Hughes has brought in from the stenographer's notes.

Mr. HIGGINS. I think it should be marked.

The CHAIRMAN. Present them in the order in which you think they should be presented and have them marked.

Mr. PRESTON. They are of date August 31, September 1, and—well, first I will offer the one purporting to be a stenographic copy of the remarks of the court in the case of Peabody against the city, August 31, 1911; that should be marked first.

Document marked "Exhibit No. 90."

Next would be the one dated September 1, 1911, following the word "argument," with the same title in the same cause.

Document marked "Exhibit No. 91."

Now, I have in my hand the one that I passed to Mr. Higgins, which was passed back, which must be the last in date.

Document marked "Exhibit No. 92."

Q. Now, I will show you the one that is marked "Exhibit No. 90," and I will ask you if you can state when it was that those remarks were made by the court?—A. That was at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of August 31, on the first day of the argument.

Q. Now, is that the first stenographic record that you can find of remarks made by Judge Hanford in that case?—A. It is the first stenographic record that was made

Q. Now, this one that is marked "Exhibit No. 91," that appears to be September 1.—A. That was the following day.

Q. Is that the second which you can find, or can you find any intervening between them?—A. This states what Judge Hanford said on the following session of the court, following Exhibit No. 90.

Q. Is there nothing between them, or is there something between them?—A. There was nothing between them. This was the next time this case was called—the next time the court convened.

Q. Now, take Exhibit No. 92, and state when was that; that does not bear any date; if I could have at this time the transcript in this case certified by the clerk, I think, Mr. Higgins, that it is with the mass of transcripts that were here on the desk.

The WITNESS. Well, Exhibit No. 92 contains the remarks of the court after the—some time after the injunction was denied and the restraining order dissolved. This was the ruling and remarks of the court made upon the application of Peabody to have the case transferred to three Federal judges. He amended his complaint and set up a lot of new facts and then brought it on again in the application to have the case transferred to three Federal judges.

Mr. HIGGINS. You and Mr. Hughes thought that was what I was referring to when I asked you this morning. You and I simply failed to coordinate, and my suggestion was that before we got into what the court said we should, if possible, have the stenographic report, and for that reason you left the stand and now you have returned.

The WITNESS. You now have, with these exhibits and my statement as to what occurred this morning, a full statement of every remark that the court made during that entire trial.

Mr. MCCOY. So far as they were taken down.

A. Yes, sir. I have stated what occurred that morning.

Mr. PRESTON. I am trying to fix the date of that; if you will wait a moment, I will find the order, and that will help us. I find here in the record which the committee has in that case a petition of the complainant, filed September 21, 1911, in which they ask the court to call to his assistance two additional Federal judges, and under date of October 30 an order by Judge Hanford denying that application. Having given you those two dates, can you indicate to the committee when it was, or, as nearly as you can, when it was that the remarks contained in Exhibit No. 92 were made?

A. I think three days after the date on which that application was made. What date did you say that was?

Mr. PRESTON. September 21.

The WITNESS. I would say, then, on September 24 the remarks were made contained in Exhibit No. 92.

Q. Now, do those three exhibits contain all the stenographic reports of the remarks of the court in that case which you have been able to find?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, this one, Exhibit No. 90, how did you make that up? I understood you to say that you did not find it in your files; now, what process did you use to reproduce it?—A. I employed Mr. Kimple to act as our stenographer at the time of this trial. This paper—the original of this paper was lost—I mean my original copy; but, of course, he took down his notes in shorthand, just as the stenographer here is using his book, and we went back to his book—Mr. Kimple's book.

Q. Is he here; could you find him?—A. I believe he is away; we could not find him.

Q. Now, how did you get it transcribed?—A. One of his partners——

Q. What is the name?—A. Palmer, I think; and I believe Mr. Bolster, I think, assisted him in it.

Q. Now, there are some blanks left in here, as you will notice.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you account for those blanks?—A. Each of those blanks represents a word that they were not certain of.

Q. Do you mean to say a single word, or words in combination, or what; does your memory serve you about that?—A. Well, in no instance more than two or three words are missing.

Q. Were you present when they were transcribing the notes?—A. Yes, sir. This contains everything that was said, with the exception of possibly a half a dozen to a dozen words—separated.

Q. Are you able to recognize Exhibits 92 and 91?—A. I do.

Q. Where did they come from; do you know?—A. Those are from my files.

Q. Did you get them from your files now?—A. Just now.

Q. To-day?—A. No; I did not.

Mr. PRESTON. The record may show that Exhibits Nos. 91 and 92 are the two documents which I passed up from my files to the committee, which I may say that I found in Mr. Hughes's files some week or 10 days or two weeks ago.

Q. Now, Mr. Hughes, I have heard the suggestion that at some time or on some occasion when Judge Hanford was making remarks in that court, when there was a crowd in the court room, he said something about a mistake, or his mistake—I do not know any more about it—I want to ask you to try to recall, if you can, anything which you heard Judge Hanford say on that subject to use that word that is not in the stenographic report which you have.

The WITNESS. As I say, those stenographic reports contain every remark made by Judge Hanford, except on the morning of August 31, at the first or morning session of the trial, and I have already stated what he said at that time. He did not go into any explanation of his reasons for granting the temporary restraining order or anything of that kind. That was not before him. He was simply ruling on my demurrer, and he ruled on the demurrer without any comment on matters that did not pertain to the question before it.

Q. Let me ask you whether he made any explanation there of how the practice works.—A. He did.

Q. How a temporary restraining order is applied for without notice?—A. He did.

Q. And then the matter comes up on hearing upon the application for temporary injunction, or words to that effect.—A. I do not know that he said anything about the temporary restraining order. He did say, in reference to my statement, that I had an answer ready for filing, that it was a well-recognized rule of equity that if an answer denied the equities of the bill, the temporary injunction would be denied and the restraining order dissolved.

Q. I am trying to refresh your recollection, if it can be refreshed, as to whether or not anything was said along this line: that a temporary restraining order was applied for, in practice, without notice and if a sufficient emergency was shown, it was issued without notice, and then notice was given to the opposite side and they had an opportunity to come in and point out to the court, at their time, wherein he had erred, if at all, in granting the temporary restraining order; do you recall anything of that kind?—A. I recall nothing of that kind.

Mr. PRESTON. Has the committee any suggestions to make further to me in regard to the examination?

Mr. HIGGINS. Were there any questions, Mr. Hughes, or were there any statements which the court made during the consideration of this matter which were not involved in the record of the case and the pleadings which were before him?

A. No; nothing. If you mean, did Judge Hanford make any statement that might be construed as an explanation or an apology for issuing a temporary restraining order, he did not.

Q. What was the occasion for his going into an explanation as to the practice in United States court or in equity causes?—A. That was with reference to the fact that I had already stated that I had an answer on file. I had brought that point up, you see, at the time when I was asked that the matters be considered together. I did not want the demurrer overruled and a temporary injunction issue on the theory that the equities of the bill were confessed, and I stated that I had my answer ready and wanted it considered as being on file, and then he went ahead and made this statement in regard to that, but said it would not be necessary to file it in order to protect our rights, because he would delay the decision of the demurrer until the answer was filed.

Q. This was a matter of wide public interest, wasn't it?—A. The matter had been a matter of interest to the citizens of Rainier Valley for the past year or more during the State suits which I had fought for them and brought for them. It had been a matter of no public interest until this time. Then, when this temporary restraining order was issued, the people down there started rioting and that, of course, gave it a lot of newspaper publicity which it had not received before, and it did cause a large public interest for a time here; yes, sir.

Q. And the attendance in the court room was very large, wasn't it?—A. The attendance in the court room was composed, nine-tenths, of faces that were very familiar to me, residents of Rainier Valley, who had been following this litigation throughout its entire length in the State court.

Q. The court room was full, wasn't it?—A. The court room was full; yes, sir. All the seats were taken; I do not believe there were many standing.

Q. It was a matter of such public concern that the newspapers of the city devoted considerable space to it and took different views, didn't they?—A. It was not a matter of any public concern. It concerned only the residents of Rainier Valley. It was a matter of public interest by reason of the fact that there had been rioting down there.

Q. You were in the corporation counsel's office for some time later, were you not, Mr. Hughes?—A. And I still am.

Q. You still are in there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are going to be in the city some days?—A. I expect to be here the major part of next week.

Mr. MCCOY. Perhaps the committee may want to call you after hearing some other testimony with reference to matters and things that occurred in reference to this suit, not, as far as I am concerned, on the matter that you have just covered in your testimony.

The WITNESS. There is one point that I think has never been brought out, and that is this: At the time when all this uproar occurred it amused me very much, because of the fact that this restraining order was of no more effect or value than the paper on which it was written, because the company at that time owed no duty of either issuing transfers or of carrying for a single fare. Therefore, so far as the public was concerned, the restraining order did not injure them at all. We had had decisions in our favor in the State supreme court; one of those had been superseded and stayed to the United States Supreme Court; the other one had not yet become effective. So that at the time this restraining order was issued the people's rights were not affected at all, because the company did not owe any duty of issuing transfers or carrying for a single fare, even without the restraining order, so that it did not change the status of things at all so far as the practical effect was concerned.

Mr. McCoy. Had it not been finally decided by the supreme court that the company did owe the duty to issue transfers and to let people ride for 5 cents?

A. Yes, sir; we won both those cases. As I say, one of them was superseded and a bond put up and a stay obtained, so that it did not become effective. The other case had been just decided a few weeks before, and the time for a petition for rehearing had not expired. The remittitur had not been sent down, and that judgment had not become effective.

Q. So far as the law was concerned, the courts of this State had held that the people were entitled to transfers and they were entitled to ride for 5 cents; is that not so?—A. That is true.

Q. And then when they were enjoined from insisting on riding for 5 cents and insisting on a transfer, why the only way the injunction could have any effect would be by people deliberately violating it, would it not?—A. Why, the company had not any duty on it at the time the restraining order was issued.

Q. Yes; that is the very contention, and that is just the point that is made, that after there had been, at least as I understand it, the initial decisions, at any rate, in the superior court in favor of the contention of the people who used the road, then Judge Hanford stepped in with the restraining order. Now, with those decisions in the State court and without Judge Hanford's restraining order and the risk of going to jail for contempt if people violated it, then they would have an even-handed fight with the railroad company—now, is not that the gist of the complaint?—A. Well, Mr. McCoy, those judgments had been superseded and stayed; they were——

Q. (Interrupting.) That does not make any difference, to my mind, Mr. Hughes, that they had. I don't care how much they had been superseded, they were the law of the case at that time; and it was just because somebody sees fit to appeal and to stay the operation of any order by the State court. That does not change the law for that purpose at all, and if the rights of the people to their 5-cent fares and their transfers had not been enjoined by Judge Hanford, why they could have said the law of the State has been decided by the superior court.—A. I agree with you that it would be unfortunate to have the Federal court override the decisions of a State court in local matters of that kind.

Q. You spoke about there being no public agitation; was it not a fact at this time that the Post-Intelligencer had a pretty savage editorial about this injunction?—A. I think it was about the Scobey injunction.

Q. Was that the Scobey case?—A. Yes, sir; that was the Scobey case.

Q. By the way, who applied for the restraining order in this matter—in this Peabody case, if you know?—A. The bondholders.

Q. What attorney actually presented the application to Judge Hanford?—A. Of course, I do not know that. It was somebody in the office of the attorneys who represented the bondholders; Kerr & McCord were their attorneys—now, who presented that application I do not know.

Q. I did not know but what you might know.—A. Of course that complaint did not state anything in regard to the fact of these State decisions. I mean the court was not advised of the fact of those matters having been litigated, and when he was advised he indicated that he would dismiss the cases.

Q. As I say, that just emphasizes the point that I have made; very likely if Judge Hanford had been informed by the pleadings of the decisions by the State court he might not have issued the temporary restraining order, notwithstanding he might have also been informed that the supersedeas had been issued, and appeals taken and stays granted.—A. That is quite possible.

Q. In other words, the law of the State of Washington was, as far as he was concerned, that those people were entitled to what they were demanding.—A. That seemed to have been his position at the final hearing, that those State decisions were controlling on him and therefore he dissolved the restraining order, finding the matter had been litigated, and denied the temporary injunction.

Mr. HIGGINS. Do you know anything about the other litigation that the receivers are now in—the receivers of the Renton railroad?

A. Hearsay only.

Q. You are not interested in the case?—A. No.

The CHAIRMAN. Is that all with Mr. Hughes—you are excused.

Witness excused.

E. S. MCCORD, recalled, testifies as follows:

Mr. MCCOY. You were attorney for Mr. Kerr as receiver of the two fisheries companies, the names of which I have forgotten.

A. Yes, sir; I was attorney for Mr. Kerr and Mr. T. B. McGovern, John R. Winn and George D. Hallock, receivers of the Packing & Navigation Co., and also attorney for James A. Kerr, T. B. McGovern, and George D. Hallock, as receivers of the Pacific-American Fisheries Co.

Q. You were attorney for the receivers respectively in those cases throughout the entire proceedings from the time they were appointed as receivers until the time they were discharged?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were your fees in the American Co. case?—A. The Pacific-American Co. I have not examined the record, but I think it was $36,000 in the two cases; $24,000 in the Pacific Packing & Navigation Co. matter, and $12,000 in the Pacific-American Fisheries Co.; that is my recollection now.

Q. And those were allowed you by Judge Hanford?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, state briefly what the nature of the legal services rendered by you was, say, in the Pacific-American Fisheries Co. first and then in the other company afterwards.—A. Well, in the Pacific-American Fisheries, that was the corporation that owned the canneries—three or four or five canneries on Puget Sound and fishing properties and boats and paraphernalia; and the canneries were operated by the receivers during two years, 1903 and 1904. My duties were those of counseling the receivers in all of their matters affecting the business operations, the drawing of Chinese contracts, the drawing of contracts for tin—tin plate and all of the materials that went into the operation of those canneries. The preparation of petitions authorizing the issuance of receiver's certificates and all of the various matters that would be connected with a business of that magnitude during those two years. Of course the records show, as I understand it has been introduced in evidence, the number of petitions and orders that were prepared and filed and taken in that case; also they show in a general way the amount of litigation that was conducted during the two or three years.

Q. Was there in the Pacific-American Fisheries matter any amount of actual litigation of considerable moment or amount?—A. I do not know that there was any considerable amount of litigation other than the attacks that were made in connection with the fishing locations. I think there were one or two cases that went to the supreme court of the State involved in that. The Pacific-American Fisheries owned the stock of a certain corporation that owned a fishing location, and one of the most valuable ones, as I remember it now, was attacked and fought through very vigorously through the courts.

Q. That was an essential asset of the business, I take it.—A. Yes.

Q. Is there any way in which you could estimate the amount of time, roughly, that was given by you in legal services in the Pacific-American Fisheries Co. as distinguished from the services and the time which you gave in the other case?—A. Well, it was considerably larger in the Pacific Packing & Navigation Co.—two or three times as great—twice as great, anyway. I remember at the time the compensation was awarded by Judge Hanford in both cases. At that time I had a list of all of the cases that had been tried and a summary of the important matters that had been passed upon and handled by me during that time in behalf of the companies, and I testified on the stand on that occasion.

Q. You mean you testified for the purpose of permitting the court to estimate the value of the services?—A. Yes, sir; I did that on a stipulation with Mr. John P. Hartman, who represented practically all of the debenture bondholders or note holders who resided in New York—a very large majority of them. The time for the hearing of this matter of fixing the compensation was agreed upon by Mr. Hartman and myself, and I think notice of it was given and I appeared in the court room, and preliminary to the taking of testimony it was stipulated by the attorneys who were present representing the creditors and myself that I should go on the stand and state what was done, what had been done, and that no testimony should be offered either for or against it, but that the whole matter should be left to the discretion of Judge Hanford.

Q. Was that done in both of the receiverships?—A. That was done in both of the receiverships.

Q. Do you know whether any stenographer took down your testimony?—A. Yes, sir; I know that it was taken down. It was taken down—I do not remember the name of the stenographer. I thought it was Mr. E. E. Richards, who was, I think at that time, associated with Mr. Bowman here, but he was unable to find it, and I told him to investigate it and get hold of that testimony if he possibly could, but he has been unable to find it. It may have been that it was reported by Mr. Dan Kennedy, who, I think, died shortly after that.

Q. Do you remember whether it was transcribed at all or submitted to Judge Hanford?—A. No, sir; it was never transcribed—never run off at all. Mr. Hartman, who represented the majority of the creditors—a very large majority—made no objection to the amount of the compensation awarded by Judge Hanford and he made no motion to have it modified and took no appeal. I am inclined to think that Mr. Kennedy took that testimony. If he did it would be utterly impossible to have it transcribed by any other stenographer, as I found out in one or two other cases, as nobody can read his notes.

Q. Did anybody at any time, any party in interest, object to the fees that were allowed you in those cases?—A. I never heard of any objection.

Q. That is, either formal or informal objection?—A. You mean any parties interested?

Q. Any parties in interest?—A. No, sir; I never heard any protest by anyone at all. Now, recurring for a moment to the Pacific American Fisheries, there were a great many matters of importance that came up that never got into the courts that I passed upon. Among other things, for instance, was the First National Bank of Chicago, I think it was, some Chicago bank, that had a claim against the old company which was secured by a so-called warehouse receipt. The Pacific American Fisheries Co. while operated in the year 1902 by the corporate management had borrowed some money, a considerable amount of money, and they had made a lease of a portion of their warehouse space and put a fence around it and put it in the hands of some individual. This individual undertook to act as a warehouse man and issue warehouse receipts—no, I am wrong about that. A storage company in Chicago leases this space at Bellingham, Wash., then Fairhaven, and that company issued its warehouse receipts to the bank in Chicago and that claimed a preference for a good many thousands of dollars on a lot of salmon. That matter I took possession of---the salmon for the receivers—and succeeded in holding it, and they never did attack it. My theory, of course, being that it was not a bona fide warehouse man or a bona fide lease, but the property still remained in the custody of the company; consequently the warehouse receipts would not be a lien preference. That was one of the matters. Then there was another matter of some considerable importance where the Pacific American Fisheries Co. had indorsed notes for $700,000 or $800,000 for the Pacific Packing & Navigation Co. and the attempt was made on the part of the note holder to enforce their claims against the assets of both corporations; and that we succeeded in defeating and I do not believe we had an action on that, but it took a great deal of time.

I spent an immense amount of time in connection with the business of the Pacific American Fisheries. Another thing we had up there, the fish traps were constantly robbed by pirates, and we had some criminal matters, and we had them arrested and convicted for interfering with the property in the hands of the receiver—contempt.

proceedings. Then the Pacific Packing & Navigation Co., there was a great deal more litigation—actual litigation involved in that than there was in the other company. For instance, the Pacific Packing & Navigation Co. was engaged in the transportation business, owning a number of steamers that operated between Seattle and ports in Alaska, carrying the United States mails, and one of those vessels, I remember, was the Nome City that was libeled for in one case over $75,000 and in another case for something like $20,000, and then she went down to Portland and was released on bonds and went to Portland and was relibeled there. and the litigation extended over a long period of time, I do not remember how long, but I know I was taking testimony morning, noon, and nights, and Sundays to get rid of it, and there were a very large number of witnesses involved in that case, which probably took me altogether 30 or 40 days in taking testimony. I do not remember. I know that we succeeded in defeating all of the claims. Then there was a lot of litigation growing out of the operation of steamboats—personal-injury cases; a lot of litigation growing out of claims of Chinese contractors for a violation of the guaranties of the company and failure to put up the number of fish that we had guaranteed them. With offsets on our part that they were not able to carry out their contracts—we had fish there on certain days which if they had enough men there would have enabled them to put up the guarantee, and a vast number of questions were involved in those matters; and then there was some litigation growing out of the Pacific Selling Co. on account of commissions, and Mr. Corby, on litigations, and I do not know how many more; the records in the courts here, which I understand have been introduced in evidence, will show some of that litigation.

But during the progress of that receivership there was an immense amount of counsel work necessary to be given by somebody in the drawing of their various contracts. For instance, they operated up in Alaska and had in their employ several hundred fishermen. When the fishermen got up into Bering Sea, or wherever it was being operated, why they all quit work and demanded that their wages be very largely increased. The company was helpless, and they were unable to get new men and take them up there in order to catch the fish for that season—the period within which the fish are caught being very limited—so that there was nothing for the managements or the superintendents in the various canneries to do but to conform to the demands of those claimants or those fishermen. They acceded to their demands. and when they came down in the fall we insisted on settling with them upon the terms of their original contract, claiming that they had procured the modification of the contract by coercion and without consideration; and we succeeded in adjusting the matter with them upon the original basis of the contract, as I now remember it, saving a good many thousands of dollars between the contract price and the modified contract as made by the superintendents in Alaska. Then it involved the drawing of numerous contracts with regard to the handling and disposition and selling of salmon after it was packed. You can imagine the amount of work connected with the operation of a business of that magnitude, operating 17 or 18 canneries as I remember it. during the year 1902 and 1903. I think if the records are examined here it will show that I appeared in court at least a couple of hundred times, as shown by the records, and probably a great many more, and I should say, however, that in this matter—in the business of these corporations, as in the business of most corporations, a great amount of time of the lawyer is consumed in counsel fees more than in the actual trial of cases—that has been our experience.

Q. In other words, a very large part of your time was taken up during the years when the receiverships were running both in litigation and work in the office.—A. A considerable portion of the time was; not all of it.

Q. I say, a large amount of it.—A. Yes, yes, sir; a large amount of it. I do not think I ever worked quite as hard in any two years in my life as I did then trying to take care of the business. I think most nights you would find me at my office working in some way in connection with this business.

The CHAIRMAN. Any other questions you wish to ask, Mr. McCord, on this line? That seems to be all.

The WITNESS. Well, do you want me to testify anything in connection with the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.?

The CHAIRMAN. We probably will.

The WITNESS. But would you rather do it some other time?

The CHAIRMAN. We are in the midst of an investigation now in reference to the application for land by the company, and I think we would be prepared to hear you on that after we have heard the others.

The WITNESS. It is entirely satisfactory to me. I will be in town, and if the commission will allow me to go to my office you can call me at any time and I can come up and be here in a few minutes.

Mr. MCCOY. I would like to ask you one question, for assistance, so to speak. We have had some vague information given to us—I might say anonymously, as a great deal of it is—about some coal properties that Judge Hanford was at one time interested in, or said to be. Do you know anything about that?

A. No, sir; I never heard of it. Where were they located, in this State?

Q. Oh, I believe, Mr. Ashton was said to be interested in them. Do you know anything about that?—A. I know nothing at all about that matter in any way, except what I saw in the newspapers. I think there was some litigation in regard to some commission agreement by which Gen. Ashton and some of the other people, possibly Judge Hanford, was interested, but I do not know anything about it personally.

Mr. HIGGINS. How long ago was that?

The WITNESS. About three years ago, I should say.

Q. From the newspaper account?—A. I just remember seeing a suit in the newspapers.

Q. In which Judge Hanford was a party?—A. I think he was; yes, sir. I think he was. It was decided in his favor.

The CHAIRMAN. That suit, or that matter, involved the question of a bond issue?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the sale of bonds?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. What court was it litigated in?—A. Why, I think it was decided in the superior court of this county and went——

Mr. PRESTON. Mr. Chairman, I happened to be in the supreme court, and I heard a part of the argument in that case in the supreme court and so——

The CHAIRMAN. What is the title of the case?

Mr. PRESTON. I could not tell you that, but I could find it out for you.

The CHAIRMAN. Is it decided in the supreme court reports—reported in the supreme court reports?

Mr. PRESTON. It must be; they report everything.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you find it for us?

Mr. PRESTON. I will try to; yes, sir.

The WITNESS. I do not think Judge Hanford's case ever went to the supreme court. I think that he was granted a nonsuit in the case.

Mr. PRESTON. I do not know about that. I just remember that coal-land commission case and hearing it argued in the supreme court when I was up there on some other business.

Mr. HUGHES. The case was tried before Judge Gay in the superior court of this county, Mr. Roup informs me, and that as to Judge Hanford it was nonsuited; as to Gen. Ashton and the others, judgment was rendered against them, and they went to the supreme court on appeal. I do not remember the result of it in the supreme court.

Mr. PRESTON. I want to state to the committee while I am on the floor——

The CHAIRMAN (interrupting). What was the title of the case? Do you remember, Mr. Hughes?

Mr. HUGHES. I do not remember, but I can find it out for you.

The WITNESS. I do not know a thing about it except what I saw in the papers.

Mr. HUGHES. The title of the case was Wilkinson Trip Co. v. Church.

Mr. PRESTON. I want to state, Mr. Chairman, at your suggestion yesterday, that Mr. Ross could be got here by phone; that a phone message was sent up to Olympia, and it was learned that he was not in Olympia but was probably at Toppenish, across the mountains, so I had a telegram sent in my name stating that this committee desired to have him appear before it. Now, I have just had a telephone from my office in answer to that saying that he is 80 miles out in the country from Toppenish and will get the telegram this evening, and if he gets it this evening he will be here in the morning. I had caused it to be sent to him, and so you can probably count on Mr. Ross being here to-morrow morning.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. That was with reference to the acquisition of the school lands by the Hanford Irrigation Co.?

Mr. PRESTON. That was with reference to the acquisition of the school lands; yes, sir. You made some inquiry about the custom, or how the thing was done, and we suggested that Mr. Ross would be the best source of information, he having been for a number of years the State land commissioner.

Mr. MCCOY. There was submitted to the committee by Mr. Schaffner the order which was proposed by the complainant in the case of J. J. O'Connor v. Bothwell, comptroller, and which was not signed, and he states that it is similar, identically similar, with the order that was submitted in the Scoby case and not signed. It will accompany the papers in the case of Scoby against Bothwell and others.

Document marked "Exhibit No. 89."

Mr. HUGHES. There are two or three short matters. This seems to be a convenient opportunity to offer a little documentary evidence. Mr. Chairman, at an earlier stage of these proceedings we suggested that we would obtain and submit a comparative statement of the work of the various Federal judges of the United States, showing the relative rank and number of decisions as reported in the Federal Reporter. Such a statement I have got, and I herewith submit it.

The CHAIRMAN. It may go in.

Statement marked "Exhibit No. 93."

Mr. HUGHES. There was also suggested, Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. With reference to the exhibit just gone in, does it give any information as to the results on appeals, whether affirmed or reversed?

Mr. HUGHES. This simply shows the relative number of cases—I do not think it shows that. I have Judge Hanford's decisions, which I am about now to offer.

The CHAIRMAN. Very well.

Mr. HUGHES. It was also suggested that we prepare and submit an abstract of Judge Hanford's published decisions containing a brief statement of what they were and what the result was, and I think it shows in each case whether affirmed or reversed. It also shows the book and page of the Reporter in which they are reported. As to each of the cases it is a very brief abstract, but sufficient to indicate what was the subject matter of the decision and the result.

The CHAIRMAN. It may go in.

Document received in evidence and marked "Exhibit No. 94."

Mr. HUGHES. Now, Mr. Chairman, I have here a copy of an application for pardon of one P. L. Lathrop—I will give the paper to the committee without any comment on the character of it, and the committee can determine whether they desire to have it introduced in evidence.

I desire also to call the attention of the committee to the fact that Arthur O. Smith, who is a married man residing at 2127 Second Avenue, apartment No. 317, was the bartender at the Rainier Grand Hotel, on duty every evening after January 6 of the month referred to in the testimony of the witness Peterson, and he can be called by your committee for the purpose of testifying as to whether Judge Hanford was there during the month of January, after the 6th, at the time fixed by Mr. Peterson, being, I believe, the 26th of January, and what, if anything, he saw respecting Judge Hanford.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you want the witness called?

Mr. HUGHES. I think in the interest of ascertaining the full facts it would probably be just to have the witness called.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, it can be done—there is no need of making any statement for the record about it. Give his name and address to the sergeant at arms.

Mr. HIGGINS. Do you know whether by telephone we could get the witness now?

Mr. HUGHES. No, sir; I do not know whether we could get him on the telephone.

The CHAIRMAN. You can get him to-morrow. Are there any other odds and ends that we can take care of now? If not, we will adjourn.

Whereupon further proceedings are adjourned until to-morrow morning, July 20, 1912, at the hour of 9.30 o'clock.

TWENTIETH DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

JULY 20, 1912—9.30 A. M.

Continuation of proceedings pursuant to adjournment. All parties present as at former hearing.

G. H. PLUMMER, recalled, testifies as follows:

Mr. HIGGINS. When you were on the witness stand on Thursday you had gone through your letter files as to the purchase of the first large tract of land.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. There were, as I recall it, eight transactions which the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. had with either Judge Hanford or the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.?—A. Yes, sir; eight.

Q. When were the negotiations opened for the purchase of the second large tract?—A. In February, 1907.

Q. How many acres were sold as the result of those negotiations?—A. 8,749.22 acres.

Q. Did they join the tract of the 12,000 acres?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you furnish the committee when you return to your office with a certified copy of the contract or the memorandum which you have in your files there which shows the acreage purchased and the prices paid and the terms of the sale?—A. Yes, sir; I will be glad to do that.

Q. I wish you would now read into the record, Mr. Plummer, the letter of January 21, 1907, from E. C. Hanford to you.—A. What was the date of that letter?

Q. January 21, 1907.—A. (Reading:)

SEATTLE, WASH., January 21, 1907.

Mr. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Northern Pacific Railroad, Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: We wish to make application for the purchase of the following land for the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. Please give me the price per acre.

W. ½ sec. 35, S. ½ sec. 27 and secs. 33, 31, T. 13, R. 27; secs. 3, 5, 7, 9, 11; T. 12, R. 27; sec. 1, T. 12, R. 26; secs. 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 17, 21, 23, 25, 27, 35, T. 13, R. 26.

We wish to acquire these lands and by increasing our plant place them under irrigation, providing the price is such that we are enabled to buy them.

Yours, very truly,

E. C. HANFORD, General Manager.

Q. Won't you read the pencil memoranda and the notations in ink on the letter and explain them?—A. The pencil memorandum reads: "A. H. G."

Q. Who does that refer to?—A. That refers to one of the clerks in my office, the sales clerk, A. H. Gilchrist. The inquiry is, "Do we own and are the lands clear? E. A. P."

Q. Who is E. A. P.?—A. E. A. P. are the initials of my chief clerk, E. A. Plummer, the chief clerk at the time. The ink memoranda is

"E. A. P. Herewith plats colored red to show Ry. lands. Lands clear. Not covered by any option or agreement. A. H. G. Jan. 22, 1907."

Q. Is the description which you have read the land that was subsequently acquired by the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.?—A. Subject to some changes, it is.

Q. It is substantially the same?—A. Substantially the same; yes, sir.

Q. About that date, do you recall whether anyone connected with the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. called on you?—A. I have a memoranda in the file that Mr. E. C. Hanford called at the counter—that is, the counter in our office—on February 9, 1907, and talked with my chief clerk about this application, and Mr. Hanford was told that the application would have the attention of Mr. Cooper when he came to Tacoma the following week.

Q. Do you recall whether—did you see him at that time?—A. No, sir. In view of this memorandum I should judge that I did not see him, because my chief clerk would not have taken the message.

Q. Won't you read the letter of date February 22, 1907, to you from E. C. Hanford?—A. (Reading:)

SEATTLE, WASH., February 20, 1907.

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: On January 21 I wrote you to the effect that the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. desired to make application for the purpose of obtaining the land below enumerated, and requested that you give me the price per acre for the same.

W. ½ sec. 35, S. ½ sec. 27 and secs. 27, 33, 31, T. 13, R. 27; secs. 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, T. 12, R. 27; sec. 1, T. 12, R. 26; secs. 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 17, 21, 23, 25, 27, 35, T. 13, R. 26. Benton County.

I have had no word from you in answer to this letter and presume it was not received by you. Our surveys show that this land can be irrigated by us.

Thanking you for an early reply I remain,

Yours, very truly,

E. C. HANFORD, General Manager.

Q. That refers to the same land?—A. The same body of land.

Q. As the letter of January 21, 1907?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall why nearly a month, or a little over a month, elapsed and there was no reply to E. C. Hanford's letter of January 21?—A. I do not recall, but it appears from the file that the papers were held by my chief clerk, presumably pending the investigation of the status of title to the lands that they applied for.

Q. Do you mean the legal title of the railroad in the land?—A. The status of the title; whether or not the lands were patented to us and we were in position to sell them or whether they were reserved or otherwise tied up; however, there was an unnecessary delay there which there ought not to have been in them; we could check it up in our office in half an hour; it should have been handled quickly. This delay I do not understand.

Q. Is the delay explained in any way by the letter of February 19, 1907, being a letter from Thomas Cooper to Mr. D. C. Henny, which I will ask you to read?—A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., February 19, 1907.

Mr. D. C. HENNY,
Supervising Engineer,
United States Reclamation Service, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR SIR: You will recall the sale that this company made to the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. of lands bordering on the Columbia River and which underlie their proposed pumping project. The irrigation company have made further progress with its plans and now find that they can irrigate economically to a much higher elevation and have applied to us for an additional area of lands, as shown on the map inclosed herewith. Before considering this application further we would like to be advised whether the sale of these lands to the irrigation company will in any way interfere with any project of the Reclamation Service.

My understanding has always been that there was a surplus of land over and above all water available in the Yakima Valley, and such being the case it was to the interest of all concerned to irrigate the maximum quantity from the Columbia River. Be good enough to address your reply to me at St. Paul, sending Mr. Plummer a copy of your letter to Tacoma.

Yours, truly,

THOMAS COOPER, Land Commissioner.

There is a notation on the bottom of this letter, "Copy for Mr. Plummer." That had something to do with the delay of action on the application. As suggested before in that memorandum, the matter was held up pending the arrival of Mr. Cooper on the coast, and the matter was then submitted to Mr. Cooper and he wrote this letter to Mr. Henny to ascertain whether or not the Reclamation Service was willing to relinquish this tract of land from the agreement that we had made with the Reclamation Service in the same manner as they relinquished the other lands below the first lift. That was the purpose of that letter to Mr. Henny.

Q. It does not appear, however, I think, from your letter files that you had written Mr. Cooper about this new proposed sale?—A. No, sir. Well, I will see [examining files]. No, sir; I did not write Mr. Cooper. I held the application until he came to Tacoma for the purpose of discussing it with him personally.

Q. What called for the letter of February 19, 1907?—A. The letter from Mr. Cooper to Mr. Henny?

Q. Yes.—A. The railway company had——

Q. I do not know whether you understand my question—how did Mr. Cooper happen to write that letter; do you know?—A. Why, to get from the Reclamation Service the release of the lands from the agreement that had previously been made between the Reclamation Service and the railroad company to withhold our lands underlying any project that the Reclamation Service was investigating, pending the decision on the part of the Government whether or not they would go ahead and construct irrigation works. These lands were reserved in connection with a plan which was being investigated for irrigating the lands from the Yakima River. That project was subsequently abandoned by the Government. They decided not to construct the ditch.

Q. Before February 19, had you called this matter to Mr. Cooper's attention?—A. I do not remember, unless there is something in the file that would refresh my memory.

Q. Will you look through your files, please, and indicate and read any letter there which appears as apprising Mr. Cooper of the wishes of the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co., so far as requiring this second large tract.—A. The first letter to Mr. Cooper——

Q. That is of date when?—A. Explaining this application in writing——

Q. Give the date of it.—A. Is dated March 7, 1907. [Reading:]

TACOMA, WASH., March 7, 1907.

Mr. THOMAS COOPER,
Land Commissioner, St. Paul, Minn.

DEAR SIR. I sent you in package of papers forwarded to St. Paul by express on 5th instant a blue-print map showing the lands recently applied for by Judge Hanford which he proposes to irrigate from his Priest Rapids plant. The map also shows the lands previously sold to his company.

The price at which the lands were sold in the former sale was $10 per acre for lands lying below the ditch that were susceptible of irrigation, which are included in the first and second classes as classified by the United States Reclamation Service, and $1 per acre for the third-class lands, which embrace all lands that lay above irrigation or that are worthless. The total area of lands now applied for is 14,206.34 acres, classified as follows:

First and second classes, 12,537.59 acres, at $10 per acre	$125,375.90
Third class, 1,668.75 acres, at $1 per acre	1,668.75
Total	127,044.65

The above figures include secs. 3, 9, and 11, T. 12–27 E., which are unsurveyed. I think, however, these should be eliminated from the sale and not disposed of until they are surveyed. I have written to the surveyor general to ascertain whether the survey of these lands is applied for or contemplated.

You have already written Mr. Henny for consent of the Reclamation Service to the sale of these lands, and Mr. Henny suggested that the matter be taken up with the department at Washington. Judge Hanford has requested that an agreement be reached between the two companies regarding price and terms, conditioned, however, upon obtaining the approval of the United States. I recommend rates of $10 and $1 per acre as heretofore adopted, as I think this is a fair price for the land, and I believe it is all they can afford to pay. The cost of irrigating these lands will be much more than the lower lands, and while the soil is generally of a better character I believe this is more than offset by the increased cost of placing water on the higher level.

Yours, truly,

WESTERN LAND AGENT.

Q. Please give the date of that again.—A. March 7, 1907.

Q. Is that the only letter you can find in your files which explains Mr. Cooper's letter to Mr. Henny of date February 19, 1907?—A. That is the only letter that I find at that time. There is a letter to Mr. Hanford in which we explained the situation regarding the Reclamation Service agreement.

Q. What is the date of that letter which you referred to, Mr. Plummer?—A. The letter written by me to Mr. E. C. Hanford is dated March 2, 1907.

Q. You may read that now, if you please.—A. [Reading:]

TACOMA, WASH., March 2, 1907.

Mr. E. C. HANFORD,
General Manager Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.,
1218 Alaska Building, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Referring to the application of your company for purchase of lands in Tps. 12–26, 12–27, 13–26, and 13–27, Benton County, Wash., which lands you propose to irrigate in connection with the project that you are now at work upon, I beg to advise you as follows:

These lands underlie the Benton project of the United States Reclamation Service and we have an understanding with the service that we will not dispose of any of our lands underlying any of its contemplated projects without first consulting them. We are also informed that the even numbered sections in the district covered by your application to us are withdrawn. It is suggested, therefore, that you submit your plan for irrigating these lands to the Reclamation Service with a view to securing the rescindment of the withdrawal; if successful in this we would construe such action on the part of the United States as an approval of your scheme and would then feel at liberty to consider your application.

Yours, truly,

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent.

There was a copy made of this letter for Mr. Henny, with the notation, "Mr. Henny: Please note above in connection with your letter to me of the 28th ultimo, Thomas Cooper, Land Commissioner," dated February 2, 1907. That date must be a mistake—that February is intended for March 2, 1907. It is in figures "2/2/7," and I should judge there is a mistake in the first figure.

Q. You state the correct date should be March 2?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then follows the letter which you already read from Thomas Cooper to you, dated March 7.—A. No, sir; that is from me to Thomas Cooper. That is my letter to Mr. Cooper explaining the application.

Q. Of date March 7?—A. March 7, 1907.

Q. Who is Mr. Henny?—A. Mr. Henny is an engineer, or was at this time the supervising engineer—I believe his title was—of the Reclamation Service, with headquarters at Portland, and he had under his charge the Reclamation Service projects in Oregon and Washington, which included the Yakima Valley, Wash.

Q. Is he now in the Government service?—A. I do not know whether he is regularly in the service; he is retained, I believe, as a consulting engineer.

Q. As you explained to the committee in your testimony the other day where he was located, I will not ask you to repeat it.—A. His headquarters are in Portland.

Q. Who is in charge now of the Reclamation Service in this section of the country?—A. The State of Washington is under the charge of Charles H. Swigert, supervising engineer, at North Yakima.

Q. Then, on the 12th of March, 1907, you wrote to Thomas Cooper with reference to this same contract for the sale of this 8,000 acres; I wish you would please read that letter to the committee.—A. That has reference only to the status of the unsurveyed sections. [Reading:]

TACOMA, WASH., March 12, 1907.

Mr. THOMAS COOPER,
Land Commissioner, St. Paul, Minn.

DEAR SIR: Referring to my letter, 7th instant, regarding lands applied for by Judge Hanford, I am advised by the surveyor general that no application for survey of the 12 sections unsurveyed land in Tps. 12–27 E. has been filed. I think it would be advisable to have this land surveyed, and so recommend.

Yours, truly,

WESTERN LAND AGENT.

Q. I notice in that letter that the lands are referred to as having been applied for by Judge Hanford.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he call on you up to that time?—A. No, sir; I don't think so.

Q. Do you know whether he had seen Mr. Cooper?—A. I do not; no, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he talked with any of the officials of the Northern Pacific Railway Co.?—A. The only officials he would have talked with about this matter are Mr. Cooper or myself.

Q. Now, you are speculating, are you not, Mr. Plummer?—A. No, sir.

Q. You have not any information about it, have you; if so, I wish you would give it.—A. No; but I am quite certain that any land matters would either have been taken up with Mr. Cooper or myself, because weare the only ones who know anything about the land matters in this district.

Q. I think we are dealing now in the realm of speculation, but, however, if that is so, why should letters with reference to this transaction have been sent to Mr. Elliott, who is the president of the Northern Pacific Railroad?—A. Simply to inform him of the negotiations—that is customary and quite proper.

Q. Why should subsequent letters, which I will ask you, if you please, to read for the record, state that this very contract of sale would have to be submitted to the executive committee or the board of directors of the Northern Pacific Railroad?—A. That is customary, also, in the sale of a large block of lands.

Q. So that it is entirely possible that other officials of the Northern Pacific Railroad may have been seen by people interested in acquiring these lands without your knowing anything about it?—A. It is possible, but not very likely.

Q. Well, it is true, Mr. Plummer, that the executive officers of the Northern Pacific Railroad were kept informed as to the progress being made on this contract, is it not?—A. I do not know what was done at St. Paul. The likelihood is that when the deal was agreed upon with the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. that the matter in its completed form was submitted to the executive committee of our company, or to the board of directors of our company, for final approval.

Q. Why should you refer to it as the land that Judge Hanford wanted? If you are able to offer any explanation to the committee further, I wish you would do so, inasmuch as the correspondence indicated by your files had been with the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.—A. We referred in all these transactions you will find in our correspondence to the Irrigation & Power Co. sometimes and to Judge Hanford at other times. It does not mean—it has no significance—except that it is all a part of the Hanford irrigation deal.

Q. He was a managing trustee of the company, as you understood it?—A. I don't know, sir; but I had a good deal of the early negotiations with Judge Hanford in connection with the first trade.

Q. Have you told the committee all that you can recall of those negotiations?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your testimony the other day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you now please read the letter of March 17, 1907.—A. The letter of March 17?

Q. To you from Thomas Cooper.—A. (Reading:)

ST. PAUL, MINN., March 17, 1907.

MR. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Replying to yours of the 12th instant, in reference to the 12 unsurveyed sections in Tps. 12 N., 27 E., I suggest that you advise Judge Hanford of the situation, and I think likely the judge could exert sufficient influence with the authorities to have this land ordered surveyed in connection with the regular surveys of the public domain. If he is unsuccessful, we can make application under the special act, and will do so, but would rather avoid this, as it involves our advancing the cost of the survey, and we already have several hundred thousand dollars tied up in this manner.

Yours, truly,

THOMAS COOPER,
Land Commissioner.

Q. Did you at that time know that Judge Hanford had taken the matter up with the Reclamation Service or with other people with a view to getting the Reclamation Service to release this land?—A. I do not know, sir; but I may have known that. I do not know whether Judge Hanford took the matter up at all with the Reclamation Service or whether he left that with us to work out with them.

Q. Subsequent correspondence, I think, may clear that up.—A. Well, that may be so—that he has done that, or that he had done that.

Q. Now, will you please read the letter of March 17, 1907, to G. H. Plummer from Thomas Cooper.—A. (Reading:)

ST. PAUL, MINN., March 17, 1907.

MR. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Referring to yours of the 7th instant, in reference to application of the Hanford Irrigation Co., the president desires to submit this matter in person to the executive committee the next time he is in New York, which will probably be within the next month; therefore there may be a little delay in handling this, and you can explain the matter to Judge Hanford should he make inquiry.

Yours, truly,

THOMAS COOPER,
Land Commissioner.

Q. Will you now read the letter of March 25, 1907, to Judge Hanford from you?—A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., March 25, 1907.

HON. C. H. HANFORD,
Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: There are 12 sections, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16, unsurveyed in T. 12 N., 27 E., a part of which underlie your canal, and I find upon inquiry of the surveyor general that there is no application for survey now before the department. These sections should be surveyed as quickly as possible, and on taking up the matter with Mr. Cooper he suggests that you might be able to exert sufficient influence with the authorities to have this land ordered surveyed in connection with the regular surveys of the public domain. We could, of course, make application under the special act for the survey of unsurveyed lands within railroad limits, but I anticipate that if handled in the other way it would expedite matters, and we would also prefer that method because of the fact that if applied for under the special act we would be compelled to advance the cost of the survey, and as we already have several hundred thousand dollars tied up in the hands of the Government for surveys applied for, we prefer not to make any additional applications. Ordinarily we would not apply for the survey at this time, but I have thought that inasmuch as a part of section 1 is covered by your ditch and a portion of the other sections will fall below the proposed high-line canal, you would like to get the survey started.

Yours, truly,

WESTERN LAND AGENT,

Q. That is the first letter that appears in your files addressed to Judge Hanford relative to this contract for the eight thousand and some odd acres, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you read the letters you read "Western land agent" and did not read your name—the fact is that you signed the letters?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that you are reading now from a carbon copy of the letter?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish when you are reading the letters which you signed where this signature appears on the letter you will indicate it for the reporter.—A. Yes, sir. You can insert "G. H. Plummer" in the previous letters, or any others which I have given you the title of "Western land agent" under.

Q. Read the letter of April 5, 1907.—A. (Reading:)

ST. PAUL, MINN., April 5, 1907.

Mr. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Referring to the application of the Hanford Irrigation Co., as set forth in your letter to me of the 7th ultimo, you are authorized to say to the irrigation company that we will enter into a contract for the sale of said lands at the price recommended by you upon their securing the rescindment of the withdrawal of the even-numbered sections, and further provided they secure such rescindment within one year from date. The contract will contain the usual provision requiring the irrigation of the lands within a reasonable time and no conveyance of the lands to be made until they are irrigated.

Yours, truly,

THOMAS COOPER, Land Commissioner.

Q. That was the first authorization that you had received from the St. Paul land agent of the road to carry out this contract?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are there any notations on that letter, Mr. Plummer, in pencil?—A. The notation only of my chief clerk, with my initials on it, which meant that it was for my personal attention.

Q. Will you read the letter of April 10, 1907, to E. C. Hanford from G. H. Plummer?—A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., April 10, 1907.

Mr. E. C. HANFORD,
General Manager Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.,
No. 1218 Alaska Building, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your letter of January 21, in which application is made for the purchase of certain lands in Tps. 12 and 13, 27 E., and 12 and 13, 26 E., lying above your canal, I beg to state that in view of the understanding we have with the Reclamation Service that we will not dispose of any of our lands underlying their project without first consulting them, as explained in my letter, March 2; we are not prepared at this time to sell the lands, but if you can arrange with the Reclamation Service for the rescindment of the withdrawal of the even-numbered sections within one year from the date hereof, which would, in effect, mean the release of that district from their project, we will enter into a contract for the sale of our lands at the rate at which the lands below the present canal were sold, viz, $10 per acre for first and second class lands below the ditch and $1 per acre for the third-class lands below the ditch and all lands above the ditch. Contract will contain the usual provision requiring the irrigation of the lands within a reasonable time, and no conveyances to be made until they are irrigated. Terms of the contract to be agreed upon hereafter.

Yours, truly,

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent.

Q. Now, will you read the letter of February 7, 1908, to G. H. Plummer from C. H. Hanford?—A. This is a letter written on the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.'s stationery and is dated Seattle, Wash., February 7, 1908.

Mr. HIGGINS. Read it.

A. (Reading:)

SEATTLE, WASH., February 7, 1908.

Mr. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Northern Pacific Railway Co., Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: I inclose herewith a list of odd-numberd sections and parts of sections of land not heretofore purchased, which will properly come under the irrigation system of the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. below Priest Rapids, also a map showing the location of said lands.

In behalf of the company, I make application for an option to purchase all of said lands on or before the 1st day of July, 1909, at the lowest price you can offer, payable in six installments. To show good faith and to make the contract legally binding, I offer to pay $100, to be forfeited if the purchase is not consummated within the time above indicated, and I will pay the taxes for the year 1908.

To be of any value these lands must be irrigated, and there is no practicable scheme for getting water there except by an extension of the system of this company. Our perfected surveys show that part of the lands will come under the second distribution canal which we have projected on a level of little more than 100 feet above the Columbia River. Most of the lands included in the list which are higher than 100 feet above the river can be irrigated by a third canal, which will be supplied by pumping from a basin on the 100-foot level; and it is our design to construct and maintain this third distribution canal if we can purchase these lands.

The cost (approximately) of the works and machinery, which will be completed within the next two months, is $325,000, and we are confident of success in distributing water by our first canal during the irrigation season of 1908. The additional cost of extending our system as proposed will be a large sum of money, and in order to perfect financial arrangements we find it necessary to make definite arrangements now for the purchase of the lands indicated.

We are assured that consent of the Reclamation Service to the sale of these lands to this company can be obtained, if that is necessary.

Respectfully,

C. H. HANFORD.

And then there is a P. S.

Q. Now, the P. S. is in his own handwriting?—A. The P. S. is in Judge Hanford's own handwriting.

Mr. HUGHES. The former part being typewritten?

A. Typewritten.

Mr. HIGGINS. The body of the letter being typewritten?

A. The body of the letter being typewritten.

P. S.—Some of the lands in this list are stony and very poor and will not be salable for a long time. The general classification of the lands we purchased will be fair if applied to this purchase. That is to say, $10 per acre for first and second class, and $1 per acre for third class.

Attached to that letter was a list of Northern Pacific lands applied for by the irrigation company.

Mr. HIGGINS. What is the meaning of the notation at the corner of that letter, "Copy"?

A. There is a lead-pencil notation "E. A. P. Check descriptions and plat and see if we own. Show acreage. G. H. P. 2/8/8." That is a memoranda of my chief clerk to check the descriptions and see if the lands were owned by the company and to prepare a statement of the descriptions with the acreage.

Q. And also to make a copy of the letter?—A. I do not know, sir, whether the letter was copied or not. I beg pardon, there is another lead-pencil memorandum here with the word "Copy" in lead pencil within a circle. We may have made a copy, but I do not see the reason for it here.

Q. In the final contract which was closed with the Hanford Co. on this land, how many classifications of land were there?—A. Only two.

Q. That letter of February 7, 1908, refers to three classifications?—A. Yes. The reason for that is——

Mr. HIGGINS (interrupting). I will allow you later to explain that. In the three classifications which were then contemplated, won't you state the prices at which the three classes were to be sold and what determined the classification.

A. The arrangement that I had with Judge Hanford in the beginning of the negotiations for the first large sale were that the company was to pay $10 per acre for all irrigable lands below the canal and $3 per acre for nonirrigable lands, which were nonirrigable either on account of the character of the soil or because they lay above irrigation. The plan was at that time to classify the lands into those two classes; but, as I explained in my testimony on Thursday, before we got to the point of making that classification we found that the Reclamation Service had classified those lands into three different classes, which they termed first, second, and third class. They classified under the first and second classes the lands that properly went into our one class of irrigable lands and, therefore, in making our trade finally, or making our contract finally, with the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.——

Q. (Interrupting.) You are referring now to the second contract?—A. Both contracts. In making both these contracts to the irrigation company we embraced two classes of the Reclamation Service in the one class for which they were to pay us $10 per acre. I do not know whether I have made myself clear, but the arrangement, as I stated that I had with Judge Hanford, was that he was to pay $10 an acre for the irrigable land, whether they were first-class soil or inferior soil. Therefore there were only the two classes that we had to deal with in making our sale to the Hanford Co.

Q. You mean that class 3 in the classification of the Reclamation Service became class 2 under this contract?—A. Yes.

Q. And class 2 and class 1 were included in class 1.—A. Yes.

Q. In the contract which the railway made?—A. Yes. We did not class them as classes 1 and 2 in this contract. We termed them the irrigable lands and the nonirrigable lands, and charged them $10 an acre for the irrigable lands, whether the soil was first class or inferior in quality and, as I explained before, that $3 rate that we had first agreed upon was reduced to $1, so that the contracts—both of those contracts were made finally on the basis of $10 per acre for the irrigable lands and $1 per acre for the nonirrigable lands.

Q. The second-class land at $1 an acre was the third-class land in the Reclamation Service classification?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the Reclamation Service classifications what sort of land was embraced in class 3?—A. Lands that contained so much rock that it was impracticable to remove it, and also lands that, while they were within the district or below the canal, might have been just a little too high for gravity irrigation. I mean by that that there might have been an island in the desert where the ground was a little too high to be reached by water carried by gravity from the ditch, and such land, while lying within the boundaries of the project, would be considered nonirrigable, therefore would be of very little value, because you could not get water on it.

Q. What lands were classified by the Reclamation Service as class 2 lands?—A. Lands that were irrigable and could be plowed but were so sandy as to require some special fertilizing or building up of the soil, as we call it in irrigation, and might be considered to include all other lands except the first-class lands.

Mr. HUGHES. All other irrigable lands?

A. That were irrigable.

Mr. HIGGINS. What were the circumstances which you referred to in your letter, or is referred to in Mr. Cooper's letter, which brought about the reclassification?

A. Did I get that right—reclassification, or the three classifications?

Mr. HIGGINS. Well, the change of the classification made by the Reclamation Service. You did not accept the classification of the Reclamation Service when the contract was finally made, did you?

A. Yes, sir; we did.

Q. Well, you contracted for two classes of land, didn't you?—A. Apparently I have not made myself clear——

Q. Let me ask you in that connection: In the contract which you made with the Hanford Co., both on this tract and the tract of 12,000 acres, there were two classes of land.—A. Yes.

Q. And only two.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the price for the first class was $10 an acre.—A. Yes.

Q. What was the price for the second class?—A. $1 per acre.

Q. What were the circumstances that led your company, if you know, to change the classification made by the Reclamation Bureau of those lands?—A. We did not make any change. At the time the negotiations started I made this arrangement with Judge Hanford, that we would charge him one price, $10 per acre, for all the irrigable lands. Now, that includes any land that is irrigable, whether it is inferior soil or first-class soil.

Q. Let me ask you in that connection, if it will not disturb you: You understood that this project was more than a gravity project?—A. It is not a gravity project.

Q. It is not a gravity project at all?—A. Not any portion of it; no, sir; no portion of the lands lay below the gravity flow.

Q. How many lifts are there in the project?—A. At the time the matter was first taken up with us there was only one lift.

Q. How many were contemplated?—A. I do not know that they had any definite plans for two lifts at that time, but later they did survey a location of a canal higher up above the first lift, which thereupon made two lifts within their project.

Q. Are you able to state that in your comprehension and understanding of the plan that it might have been possible to have irrigated all of this land by the system that they were to install?—A. I believed that they could irrigate successfully the lands below that first lift, but I questioned the feasibility of the second lift.

Q. Do you know whether they did or not?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Did they represent to you, through their engineers or anybody else, that they intended to irrigate all the land?—A. No, sir; I assumed, of course, by the fact that they purchased and paid quite a sum on the second batch of land lying above that second lift that they considered it feasible.

Q. The first lift provided for the irrigation of how much land, approximately?—A. Approximately, 30,000 acres.

Q. And the second lift for how many?—A. The second lift about—somewhere between 17,000 and 20,000 acres, I believe.

Mr. HUGHES. Pardon me; may I ask whether the witness includes in these estimates the odd and even numbered sections as the total amount of land which could be irrigated as distinguished from the odd sections which they own.

The WITNESS. Yes, sir; I assumed that Mr. Higgins's question was with reference to the total area irrigable from the two different lifts, and not the lands in which our company were interested or that we owned. You wanted to know the total acreage irrigable from the two different lifts, didn't you?

Mr. HIGGINS. Yes.

The WITNESS. Then my answer is correct.

Q. You were about to make some explanation as to the classification—you can do so if you wish.—A. At the time the negotiations for this large block of lands was started Judge Hanford and I agreed upon the price that was to be paid for the irrigable lands, and the price to be paid for the nonirrigable lands. It was then necessary to classify those lands into those two classes, and I had the understanding with Judge Hanford that when it came time to make that classification that he should appoint a representative and I would appoint a representative, and those two representatives would make a joint classification. That, of course, we understood was going to be somewhat expensive because the men who are able to intelligently classify lands cost money, and before we had got to that work I learned that the Reclamation Service had done all of that work sometime before in connection with their investigation of the Yakima projects; that they had a map showing the classification of all the lands, but they did not classify it into two different classes; they classified it into three different classes; the first class—what they called first-class lands—being the lands that were of the first-class soil and susceptible of irrigation; and then in a second class, lands which were irrigable, but the soil was inferior. Now, you see that that brought—under my arrangement with Judge Hanford that brought both of those classes into our one class of irrigable lands on which they were to pay $10 an acre. You see that brought them both into that one class, so that we eliminated one of the classes. Then that left only the nonirrigable lands, or, which, of course, included lands that were so rocky that they could not be plowed or else were so high in altitude that they could not be irrigated from the ditch.

Mr. MCCOY. At one time you had negotiations about those lands at which you had reached the conclusion that they should go in at $3?

A. $3 an acre; that was my first arrangement with Judge Hanford.

Q. Now, you testified the other day, and perhaps you read a letter to the effect that you thought it was not fair that that price should be paid for those lands, and you recommended a $1 an acre price for those lands?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what were the circumstances which led you to that conclusion?—A. The circumstances were these: At the time Judge Hanford and I agreed upon the $10 and $3 rates, we both of us supposed that there was a much larger proportion of those lands which would go into the cheap class than the Reclamation Service's map finally showed. In other words, Judge Hanford expressed the view, and it is in one of his letters, that about 50 per cent of the lands would come into the $3 class.

Q. That is what you were testifying the other night?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you testified when you got to the Government classification you found that a much smaller proportion of those lands were in the poorer class than Judge Hanford estimated?—A. That was the point.

Q. Well, was that the circumstance that led you to recommend the reduction to $1 an acre for those lands?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what did that have to do with it?—A. It had this to do with it, that under the first idea that we had of the poor lands being about 50 per cent of the area; that you will observe made the average of all the lands under the canal $6.50 an acre, one half being $10 and the other half $3 would have made the average $6.50 per acre. Then when we got the Reclamation Service map and figured the areas up, the propositions, instead of being one-half of each, were about 75 per cent or three-quarters in the $10 class and 25 per cent in the $3 class, which made the average, as I say, $6.50 per acre.

Q. In short, you had made a better bargain with Judge Hanford than you thought; isn't that right?—A. That is about the size of it.

Q. Why did you turn around and make a worse bargain than you were able to make if you had stuck at your original price?—A. Because I felt that they could not afford to pay that price; that is the reason, and I so recommended and so expressed myself in my letter to Mr. Cooper.

Q. You mean by your statement that they could not afford to pay, that they did not have the money, or that the operation, or at least the lands were not worth the money.—A. Yes, sir; that the lands were not worth it, that is the point exactly.

Q. Now, then, if there was more good land than you expected, why should not the price have been raised instead of diminished; in other words, what finally turned out to be the case was that there was more good land there than you had calculated on.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Consequently they really, on any business basis, could have afforded to pay more rather than less in the aggregate.—A. Well, that is hardly correct, Mr. McCoy, in connection with an irrigation project. In constructing an irrigation project and in fixing your prices you have to base them upon the average cost per acre, which is charged against the land for building the system. In other words, if you have got 10,000 acres of land and it costs you a million dollars to build your pumping system and your distributing system, there is that average charged against your lands. Now, there is a limit that you can get for your lands that are remote from transportation, as these lands were. The whole distribution of the cost and your arrangement on prices is based on the average for the entire system.

Q. Well, I do not see it that way, Mr. Plummer, as an argument on the facts. The argument is that, they being about to get so much more good land than they expected, were in better shape to pay a good price; but if the situation had been reversed and instead of getting some 3,000 acres of bad land it turned out that on the reclamation estimate they were going to get about 10,000 acres of bad land and 2,000 acres of good land—now, under those circumstances, of course, they could not afford to pay so much.—A. As I explained, the matter was figured at the time on the average basis. It was presumed that the average of all the lands, embracing about 12,000 acres would not exceed $6.50 per acre. As a matter of fact, I was surprised that they had figured that they could afford to pay that. Now, when we come to change that proportion your average runs up. Now, let me figure that average. [Witness figures.] Under the first arrangement made with Judge Hanford where we considered the proportion 50 per cent, the average price that they figured they would pay for those lands was $6.50 an acre. Now, under the classification by the Reclamation Service, the average price that they would have to pay was $8.50 an acre. It is the difference—the difference between $6.50 and $8.50.

Q. That is perfectly apparent, but they were getting more, and why shouldn't they pay more?—A. Well, there is a limit to what an irrigation company can pay for lands, regardless of their character.

Mr. HIGGINS. Is there any limit on the price which a railroad company can charge, if they could get the money?

A. Yes, sir; yes, sir.

Q. What is it?—A. It is the limit which would be placed by the other fellow who was willing to buy them.

Mr. MCCOY. Well, Mr. Cooper in one of those letters said, reviewing the whole situation, it was quite apparent that they could afford to pay $10.

A. Mr. Cooper expressed his opinion in the first letter after I submitted the application to him that he thought we should get $2.50 an acre, and I was authorized to sell them at that price. I expressed the opinion that they could afford to pay $10 an acre, I don't think Mr. Cooper did.

Mr. HIGGINS. Will you read the letter of February 11, 1908, from you to Mr. Henny.

A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., February 11, 1908.

Mr. D. C. HENNY,
Supervising Engineer, United States Reclamation Service,
No. 351 Washington Street, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR SIR: The Hanford Irrigation & Power Co., owners of the canal near Priest Rapids, are figuring on irrigating a considerable area of lands above their present ditch, and they have made application for an option to purchase all of the railroad lands within the district colored in red on the map attached. I do not think the canal to irrigate these lands has been definitely located, but it is presumed that its location will be along the southerly edge of the lands applied for. The lands colored blue belong to the railway company, but as they lie on Gabel Mountain above irrigation by gravity from said canal they do not apply for same.

I do not know what action our people will take on this application, but before submitting the matter to Mr. Cooper I would like to ascertain whether the sale of these lands would interfere with any project now under consideration by the Reclamation Service, and if not, whether you see any objection to disposing of them. I am assured that the Hanford people will commence furnishing water this spring, and if their project proves a success they will want to buy these lands, and we will, of course, require them to place the lands under irrigation within a reasonable time, so that if they do not carry out their plans for watering the lands they will revert to us. If their scheme is a success, I think we should encourage them to go ahead and irrigate as much as they can water by practical means.

Please return the inclosed map with your reply.

Yours, truly,

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent.

Q. So that it took some time to get the Reclamation Service to release the land?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nearly a year or about a year?—A. From the time the matter was first submitted to us it was about—the matter came to us in February, 1907.

Q. That was something over a year.—A. It was later than that; it was in June, 1909, that I was advised by the supervising engineer, Mr. Swigert, that the directors had advised him that there is no longer objection by the Reclamation Service to the sale by the Northern Pacific of the railroad lands embraced within this area.

Q. That was when they were finally released?—A. Yes, sir; that was June 8, 1909.

Q. Will you read the letter of February 12, 1908, to you from C. H. Hanford.—A. Is that date correct—February 10, is it not, from C. H. Hanford to me?

Q. I thought that was the last letter which you read.—A. No; the last letter I read was the letter to D. C. Henny of February 11, 1908.

Q. Now, will you read the letter of February 10, 1908.—A. (Reading:)

SEATTLE, WASH., February 10, 1908.

Mr. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent Northern Pacific,
Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Permit me to express the hope that your company will grant my application for an option on land subjacent to the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.'s project without taking into consideration, to effect the price, the extraordinary newspaper stories respecting recent transactions. According to one published report the company sold 1,260 acres for the round price of $252,000 to Messrs. Todd & Cover, and another published report, stated as having been confirmed by Mr. Todd, is that those gentlemen sold two sections of land which they purchased from the Northern Pacific Co. four years ago for the price of $5 per acre to the Hanford Co. for $250,000. Both of thes stories are so far untrue that they may be justly characterized as pure fakes. The real transaction is a contract by which Todd & Cover are to sell the land in connection with water rights for irrigation to be furnished by the Hanford Co., and the proceeds to be divided. The land is to be sold in small tracts and the price has not yet been agreed upon, but there is no expectation of realizing an aggregate amount of $250,000 for both land and water rights.

In my last conversation with you the relatively high prices for which the company has contracted to sell land was mentioned. If this should be considered in connection with any future trade with your company I wish to have you understand that the only sales which have been consummated are of land considered the most valuable in near proximity to the town of Hanford, and mostly in even numbered sections to which a complete title can be given as soon as the purchaser elects to make full payment. The only sales of railroad lands are with extended payments of installments, so that our company can realize but little until our works are so far completed that we can claim a fulfillment on our part our contract of purchase from your company.

Respectfully,

C. H. HANFORD.

Q. That was before you had reached the agreement with Judge Hanford on the prices for the land?—A. Yes, sir; I had recommended to our people that we sell the lands under the upper list at the same rate as under the first list, however.

Q. You apparently call his attention to some newspaper reference to the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. and the prices that were gotten on the lands which you had sold them before that?—A. I do not remember whether the suggestion came from me or whether Judge Hanford was a little worried that we might boost up the price on account of those newspaper stories about fabulous prices received over there. I do remember that I had a conversation with him. I do not remember now whether it was in my office or whether I met him on the street; but we discussed that, and I rather think I "jollied" him a little about it and told him, in view of the high prices they were getting, that——

Q. (Interrupting.) You discussed what? Just relate, if you can, what you did say to him.—A. The question of the prices they were to pay, merely, in view of all these newspaper stories.

Q. You discussed with him also the price which the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. were getting for the land?—A. According to the newspaper stories; that is all.

Q. How did those prices compare with other irrigation projects in that section?—A. There were no other irrigation projects in that district with which the prices could be compared and, as a matter of fact, there was no other similar irrigation scheme which you could compare them with. The prices were much higher than prices being charged for lands under gravity project, and, of course, that was necessary because it was a more expensive project.

Q. I believe it appears in that letter which you have just read of date February 10 that Judge Hanford refers to having a talk with you?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you able to tell the committee any more of your conversation with him at that time?—A. That is all I remember about that talk; that we discussed the high prices that were referred to in the newspapers at the time. I could not have talked with him very much at that time. because the matter was not yet passed upon and settled by our people at St. Paul.

Q. As an expert on land values, was the price which the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. were getting high, in your judgment?—A. Yes, sir; I think their prices were pretty high.

Q. Will you read the letter of February 12, Mr. Plummer, from Judge Hanford to you?—A. Do you mean the letter of February 12 from me to Judge Hanford? I have just read the letter of February 10 from Judge Hanford to me.

Q. To whom is the letter of February 12?—A. It is addressed by me to Judge Hanford.

Q. That is the one I refer to.—A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., February 12, 1908.

HON. C. H. HANFORD,
Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.,
Seattle National Bank Building, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Your letter 10th instant received, and I would assure you that no notice will be taken of the newspaper articles referred to in fixing price on the lands for which you apply. In arriving at prices I endeavor to find out what the irrigation company can reasonably afford to pay after taking into account the cost of placing water on the land and of maintaining the plant, and no attention whatever is paid to wild stories circulated through boom literature or articles published by newspapers. I have read the article to which you refer, but sized it up as a newspaper yarn printed for the purpose of exciting intending purchasers. I question the value of such advertising to a bona fide project.

Mr. HIGGINS. You meant as a boom to the Hanford Co. sales of land?

A. How's that?

Q. You meant it was intended to boom the Hanford Co. sales?—A. Yes, sir; boom prices.

Q. Boom prices for the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.?—A. Boom the irrigation prices under that project. [Continuing reading:]

I question the value of such advertising to a bona fide project.

I already have under consideration your application for the higher lands, and as soon as I have the matter in shape I will submit it to Mr. Cooper, at St. Paul, and will then advise you. I am somewhat in doubt as to whether we would want to make an agreement to reserve these lands for 15 months; but after I have looked into the question more thoroughly I will take it up with you again.

Yours, truly,

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent.

Q. Well, what did you do in the way of looking into it more thoroughly?—A. The correspondence with the Reclamation Service officials was then going on; we had not yet obtained their consent to the sale of the lands, and pending the getting of that consent and preparing a statement of the lands I told Judge Hanford that it was under consideration. That is all we were doing at that time that I remember.

Q. Do you recall whether you had discussed it with Mr. Cooper on one of the trips that he made to your office?—A. I do not remember about that; no, sir; and there is nothing in the file to show that he was out here at that time.

Q. Will you read the letter of March 14, 1908, being a letter to Judge Hanford from you, is it not?—A. Yes, sir. [Reading:]

TACOMA, WASH., March 14, 1908.

Hon. C. H. HANFORD,
Seattle National Bank Building, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Referring to our recent correspondence regarding the reservation of lands above your present ditch, I desire, before submitting the matter to the land commissioner, to procure from your company a statement of the situation regarding the present project. This is desired in order to fully inform the land commissioner of the conditions connected with your canal and the necessity for the reservation of the higher lands. Will you kindly give me the following data:

Number of miles of main canal already constructed.

Number of miles of laterals already constructed.

Length of power canal and condition of same, including power and pumping station.

Approximate number of acres to be placed under irrigation this year.

What proportion of the entire contemplated project is finished.

What date do you expect to begin operations for supplying water?

I assume that there is no objection to giving me this information.

Yours, truly,

WESTERN LAND AGENT.

Now, that inquiry was brought about by the request of the supervising engineer of the Reclamation Service for some data as to what they had already done to be used in deciding whether or not they wanted to relinquish any additional land from their project.

Q. Why didn't you take that up with the engineer, H. K. Owens?—A. All my negotiations had been had with the other officers of the company, and I do not know whether I had occasion to discuss the matter with Mr. Owens up to that time; I do not remember that I had.

Q. What other officers of the company had you taken this second transaction up with?—A. Mr. E. C. Hanford and Judge Hanford were the only members of the Hanford Co. that I had had this matter up with.

Q. Not with Mr. Haynes?—A. I do not remember of having had anything to do with Mr. Haynes in regard to this, and there is nothing in the file to show it, unless I have overlooked it.

Q. Will you read the letter of March 21 to you from C. H. Hanford?—A. This letter is written on the official letterhead of the district judge. [Reading:]

SEATTLE, WASH., March 21, 1908.

Mr. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Northern Pacific Railway Co.

DEAR SIR: Answering inquiries in your letter of the 14th instant, I have to say:

The Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. has now completed one main distribution canal extending from its pumping station to the town of Hanford, its length being a fraction less than 20 miles.

The aggregate length of lateral ditches, with wooden-stave pipe lines necessary to carry over depressions, is about 8 miles; these lines are nearly completed.

The length of the power canal is 2 miles, and it is 70 feet wide on the bottom.

In addition to these works we have installed the first unit of pumping machinery, including wooden-stave pipe line for delivering water to the ditch, 66 inches in diameter. This machinery is installed in a substantial concrete building. The electrical power machinery is being installed in a concrete building at the foot of the power canal. We have a copper wire transmission line from the power station to the pumping station, a distance of about 14 miles, and a telephone line from the power station to the town of Hanford, a distance of about 35 miles.

Our work originally projected is more than half completed, but we can see that to meet the demands of the country it will be necessary to enlarge our power canal and install a great deal more machinery than at first contemplated.

If no unforeseen calamity happens, we will be delivering water for irrigation purposes on about 3,000 acres before May 1 this year.

The quantity of land which can be irrigated by the completed canal is not less than 16,000 acres. About one-half of this amount is held by private owners and lessees from the State. Eventually they will deal with our company for water, but it is difficult to make contracts with them at present.

A definite contract with respect to the additional land which the company has applied to purchase is necessary to enable the company to complete financial arrangements for the enlargement of our works.

Yours, truly, C. H. HANFORD.

Q. Have you there a letter of March 25 from C. H. Hanford to you—March 25, 1908?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Read it, please.—A. Written on the same official stationery.

Q. Read the whole heading, so that the reporter can take it.—A. (Reading:)

CHAMBERS OF UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE, WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON,
CORNER FOURTH AVENUE AND MARION STREET,
Seattle, Wash., March 25, 1908.

Mr. G. H. PLUMMER,

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 23d received. We are willing for officers of the Government Reclamation Service to have the information furnished in my letter of the 21st, and I inclose a copy which you may send to Mr. Henny.

In looking at it I notice that in copying a line was omitted.

Yours, truly, C. H. HANFORD.

Q. That appears to be in Judge Hanford's own handwriting, does it?—A. Yes, sir. That was brought about by an inquiry of mine of Judge Hanford as to whether he had any objection to my giving that information to the Reclamation Service.

Q. Now, will you read the letter of April 2, 1908, to Thomas Cooper from you?—A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., April 2, 1908.

Mr. THOMAS COOPER,
Land Commissioner, St. Paul, Minn.

DEAR SIR: I inclose herewith copy of letter from Judge Hanford, applying on behalf of the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. for an option on 10,000 acres of land above their present project, a map and list of which are attached. From conversation with Judge Hanford since his application was filed, I infer that, while they are figuring on irrigating this additional area at some time in the future, the main object in securing this option is to enlarge the scope of their project by an additional 20,000 acres of irrigable land to aid them in securing additional funds to carry their present project to completion. Their scheme has been successful so far; they have gone ahead with their works and will probably be ready to furnish water for 3,000 acres by May 1st. They have sold considerable area of land at high prices, but on long-time contracts, and the returns from these sales have not been large. I have no doubt that they had arranged for funds to carry the project through to completion, and had it not been for the recent money stringency they would have had no trouble in getting the necessary funds locally, but this source of supply is apparently cut off, and they are seeking aid elsewhere for completion and further extensions of their system, and I assume will use the option on our lands in carrying out the plan.

I submitted the matter to Mr. Henny, and hand you herewith copy of his reply. I am also sending you copy of Judge Hanford's statement of present status of their works. In view of Mr. Henny's position, I think we should make no promises with reference to these lands; if the Hanford Co. were prepared to go ahead with the irrigation of these lands, I would be in favor of eliminating them from the Benton project, but as neither the Hanford Co. or the Reclamation Service have any definite plans for immediate construction of works, I think we should leave the land unoptioned, so that we will be free to deal with anyone when ready to go ahead. I think we should say to Judge Hanford that these lands are within the Benton project and that we have agreed with the Reclamation Service to hold everything we own until they have completed their investigations, though if he were prepared to go ahead with the work we would consider his application, but would not care to take them out of one reservation and put them under another reservation with no immediate prospect of irrigation.

I will be glad to have your advice on this matter.

Yours, truly,

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent.

Q. From whom did you get the assurance as to the financial resources of the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. which you referred to in that letter?—A. I think that was gotten from Judge Hanford at the time of that talk with him, though I am not sure.

Q. Do you recall where you had that talk with him?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Or what the talk was?—A. No, sir; except that——

Q. (Interrupting.) Will you read the letter of March 30, 1908?—A. The letter of March 30, 1908, from the supervising engineer of the Reclamation Service to me?

Q. Yes.—A. (Reading:)

PORTLAND, OREG., March 30, 1908.

Mr. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Northern Pacific Railway, Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: We are, in receipt of your letter of March 27, inclosing statement from Judge Hanford. Permit me to express my thanks for your courtesy in sending this communication.

Yours, very truly,

E. E. HOPSON,
Acting Supervising Engineer.

Q. Have you a copy of that communication in that file that is referred to in that letter?—A. The letter that I sent to Mr. Hopson was a copy of Judge Hanford's to me explaining what had been done in constructing their works, which he sent me.

Q. No more than a copy of the letter which you already read.—A. Yes, sir; it was a copy of his letter which I already read.

Q. Will you read the letter of April 6, 1906, to you from Thomas Cooper?—A. (Reading:)

ST. PAUL, MINN., April 6, 1908.

MR. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent, Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your favor of the 2d instant, in regard to the application of the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. for an option on 10,000 acres above their present project, it will be necessary for you to explain to Judge Hanford the position of the Reclamation Service with reference to these lands, as we can not consistently make any other disposition of them until they are released by the Reclamation Service. Also explain to the judge that this does not mean that if released the option will necessarily be granted, as that question has not as yet been taken up with the board of directors, whose approval would be necessary, but until they are released as above it will be useless to take the matter up with the board.

Yours, truly,

THOMAS COOPER,
Land Commissioner.

Q. Now will you read the letter of April 13, 1908, to C. H. Hanford from you?—A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., April 13, 1908.

HON. C. H. HANFORD,
Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.,
Seattle National Bank Building, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: I submitted to the land commissioner your application for an option on certain lands lying above your present canal, and am advised that in view of our agreement with the Reclamation Service and of their position with reference to these lands, he thinks it advisable not to grant the option at this time. I discussed this matter with Supervising Engineer Henny, of the Reclamation Service at Portland recently, and he explained to me that the elimination of additional lands from the so-called Benton project is likely to affect its feasibility, and while they do not wish to stand in the way of any immediate development of lands by private enterprise, especially in view of the uncertainty of the Benton project being carried out, at the same time he feels that as there is no immediate prospect of irrigation of these lands, he would prefer to see the present status maintained, so that they can properly be considered a part of the Benton project. If you were prepared to proceed with the immediate irrigation of these lands, I am inclined to think the Reclamation Service would look more favorably upon an application for their restoration, but in view of the fact that the Benton project is having serious consideration, they prefer that the area tributary to that project be not diminished.

While explaining the position of the Reclamation Service in this matter, I do not wish it understood that their consent to this application would result in favorable action on the part of this company, as the matter would still have to be referred to our board of directors It will be necessary to secure the approval of our board to an option, but until they are released it would be useless to submit the matter to them.

Yours, truly,

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent.

Q. That is addressed to Judge Hanford?—A. Yes, sir; that is to Judge Hanford.

Q. Now, you may read the letter of May 1, 1908, to C. H. Hanford, from Mr. Cooper.—A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., May 1, 1908.

HON. C. H. HANFORD,
Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.,
Seattle National Bank Building, Seattle, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Confirming our conversation of yesterday, your company is hereby granted an option to June 30, 1908, to purchase the lands for which you applied in your letter to Mr. Plummer of February 7, 1908, the price to be the same as for the lands already purchased by your company, and the sale to be made on a five-year contract, if desired. If the option is exercised, your company will pay the taxes on the land for the year 1908, also interest on the purchase price at the rate of 6 per cent per annum from the date of this letter up to the date that the contract for purchase is entered into; also, there will be a provision in said contract that no lands will be conveyed by us until provision for their irrigation by your company has been completed.

It is further provided that this option shall not be effective until the United States Reclamation Service has signified to this company in writing that they have no objection to the sale by us of the lands in question by your company.

Yours, very truly.

THOMAS COOPER,
Land Commissioner.

Copy to Mr. Howard Elliott, Mr. G. H. Plummer.

Mr. HUGHES. What is the date of that letter?

A. May 1, 1908.

Mr. HIGGINS. In furtherance of the plan they outlined in that letter the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. did acquire this land?

A. Yes, sir; and in accordance with the terms explained by Mr. Cooper they paid taxes and interest in addition to that rate of $10 per acre for irrigable lands and $1 per acre for the nonirrigable lands.

Q. What is the date of the contract?—A. The date of the contract is June 18, 1909.

Mr. MCCOY. That is the contract entered into after they had notified the company that they would exercise their option?

A. Yes.

Mr. HIGGINS. Was there a formal option given to them before the contract was executed?

A. That is the option that I have just read—that constituted the option.

Q. No other option than that letter?—A. No, sir; I do not think so, Mr. Higgins. I think that we considered that the option. In going through the file I do not see that there is any other option drawn up.

Q. Were you present at the conversation which Mr. Hanford had with Mr. Cooper just referred to?—A. I think so; I think that is the one of the two conversations that I remember that Mr. Cooper and I had with Judge Hanford.

Q. What is the practice of your company in disposing of lands of this character in the way of giving an option before the final contract is signed?—A. It is not a general custom, but wherever we think it necessary or advisable to aid in the carrying out of an irrigation scheme we have granted such options.

Q. What is the form of that option—do you have a form which is used in such cases?—A. No, sir. Sometimes we make it in the form of a letter like this, and sometimes a more formal agreement is drawn up. It is nothing more or less than an agreement to sell within a limited time.

Q. Who was present besides you and Mr. Cooper with Judge Hanford at the meeting?—A. Nobody that I remember.

Q. That meeting was at Tacoma?—A. Yes.

Q. In the railroad office?—A. I think this meeting was held in Tacoma in my office.

Q. Had there been any meeting with Mr. Cooper before that?—A. Yes, sir; there was one other meeting which Mr. Cooper and I had with Judge Hanford that I remember—was at the Tacoma Hotel, and, I think, at noontime.

Q. How long before the one which resulted in the giving of the option?—A. It is difficult to fix that time, but it was along sometime in 1906, I think.

Q. 1906?—A. Yes, sir. Not with reference to these lands.

Q. Well, that was with reference to the acquirement of the other first large tract?—A. Yes, sir; the other sale.

Q. So that, so far as you know, there was only one meeting between Mr. Cooper and Judge Hanford as to the second tract?—A. Yes, sir; that is all I recollect, Mr. Higgins.

Q. You may now read the letter of April 3, 1909, to Mr. Hopson from you.—A. (Reading:)

TACOMA, WASH., April 3, 1909.

Mr. E. S. HOPSON,
Supervising Engineer,
United States Reclamation Service, Portland, Oreg.

DEAR SIR: The Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. has perfected plans for the irrigation of a considerable area lying above their present ditch, and they have applied to us to purchase the lands shown in the list attached in accordance with an option granted them on May 1, 1908, by Mr. Cooper. The option provided that they would be allowed to purchase these lands at any time before June 30, 1909, but conditional upon the Reclamation Service signifying to this company in writing that they have no objection to the sale. The irrigation company has notified us of its intention to exercise the option, and I am now submitting this matter to you for advice as to whether or not the Reclamation Service objects to the sale. I think you understand the situation fully; the lands lie at the far end of any of the projected canals from the Yakima River, and I understand that it is the policy of the Reclamation Service to encourage the development of irrigation projects by private companies, providing they do not interfere with the projects of the service. The same question was submitted to the Reclamation Service with reference to the lands of the company now being irrigated by the Hanford people and consent was given to that sale.

Will you be good enough to consider this matter, and advise me as promptly as possible so that we can inform the Hanford Co. of the situation?

Yours, truly,

G. H. PLUMMER, Western Land Agent.

The CHAIRMAN. With your signature?

A. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. What is it? Give it.

A. I read the signature "G. H. Plummer, Western land agent."

Mr. MCCOY. In this connection, I want to make this statement for the record. I have the transcript of the record on appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, in the action entitled "King County, Wash., and Matt H. Gormley, as treasurer of King County, Wash., appellants, v. Northern Pacific Railway Co., a corporation, appellee." It appears from the complaint that the action, among other things, was brought to strike from the amount of taxes under the assessment on the Northern Pacific Railway the sum of $60,690.75. The complaint was filed in the United States Circuit Court for the Western District on April 6, 1908. The defendants demurred to the complaint by demurrer filed June 1, 1908, and the demurrer was overruled by Judge Hanford on June 22, 1908. The answer was then filed by the defendants on July 22, 1908, and the replication to the answer on June 4, 1910. I think that is all that is necessary to state, up to the time of the rendering of the opinion by Judge Hanford, which was filed on August 3, 1911. And I will give this record on appeal to the reporters to copy that and will not read it.

Mr. HUGHES. You mean to copy the opinion?

Mr. McCOY. To copy the opinion on the decision of the case. Well, the substance of it was that the prayer of the complaint was granted and the taxes were cut down, I think—not the assessment, but the tax levy is cut down.

Whereupon the opinion above mentioned is copied into the record as follows:

United States Circuit Court, Western District of Washington, Northern Division.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY CO., A CORPORATION, complainant, v.
KING COUNTY, WASH., AND MATT H. GORMLEY, AS treasurer of King County, Wash., defendants.

No. 1655.
Filed August 3, 1911.

MEMORANDUM DECISION ON THE MERITS.

The controversy involved in this suit relates to alleged excessive valuation of the complainant's operative property in King County, for the purpose of taxation for the year 1907 by the King County board of equalization; and the listing by the assessor of King County for taxation as a part of its personal property of intangible property, including its franchise for doing business in King County, on which a valuation of $100,000 was placed, which is alleged to be illegal.

Federal jurisdiction is invoked on the ground of diversity of citizenship, as well as on the ground that the complainant has been invidiously discriminated against and excessively taxed in violation of the Constitution of the United States; and equity jurisdiction is invoked on the ground that the complainant has no adequate remedy at law.

The important facts of the case are that in this State there is a board of tax commissioners empowered by law to supervise the assessments of property for valuation throughout the State, and for the year 1906 the board classified the complainant's operating property, placing a valuation of so much per mile on each of the different classes for the entire State, and apportioned the same between the several counties according to the miles of trackage in each, and directed the assessors of the several counties to assess said property for taxation according to that valuation. The directions given were observed in all of the counties of the State, except the county of Snohomish, where the assessors placed a higher valuation on railroad property than that fixed by the board of tax commissioners. In litigation which ensued the supreme court of the State sustained and enforced directions of the board of tax commissioners. No new or different classification and valuation of railroad property for the purpose of taxation for the year 1907 was made by the board of tax commissioners, and the 1906 schedules were used, and the complainant's property was accordingly assessed for that year in all the counties of the State, except King County, in which the board of equalization raised the assessment on its operating property, and the assessment of $100 for the complainant's franchise was retained. The complainant has tendered payment of the amount of taxes admitted to be due, contesting merely the amount of taxation on the excess valuation of its operating property above the valuation fixed by the board of tax commissioners, and the franchise tax.

The ground of defense chiefly relied upon is alleged lack of jurisdiction in a court of equity to interfere in the proceedings for the collection of taxes. The jurisdiction is disputed upon an assumption that legal remedies available to the complainant are adequate for its protection and an attempt has been made to point out specific methods of procedure which the complainant might have resorted to for the legal determination of this controversy, viz:

a. An application to the board of tax commissioners to correct the assessment, to be supplemented, if necessary, by an action for a writ of mandate to compel the county assessor to obey directions of the board of tax commissioners.

b. An application to the State board of equalization to correct the assessment.

c. Payment of the whole of the tax, under protest, and an action at law to recover the amount unlawfully exacted.

d. A writ of certiorari.

The first and second and fourth of these supposed remedies all involve relinquishment of the complainant's right to invoke the jurisdiction of a Federal court, which is not compellable by any State law.

Cowles v. Mercer County (7 Wall., 122); Insurance Co. v. Morse (20 Wall., 445); Doyle v. Continental Insurance Co. (94 U. S., 543); Hess v. Reynolds (113 U. S., 77); Steamship Co. v. Kane (170 U. S., 111); Davis Manufacturing Co. v. Los Angeles (189 U. S, 218); Traction Co. v. Mining Co. (196 U. S., 252–253).

The test of equity jurisdiction in the courts of the United States—namely, the adequacy of the remedy at law—is the remedy recognized as a legal remedy when the judiciary act was adopted, and not statutory remedies created by local authority. (11 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, pp. 200–201; Boyle v. Zacharie & Turner, 6 Pet., 648–658; Kirby v. R. R. Co., 120 U. S., 137–138; McConihay v. Wright, 121 U. S., 201.)

The third of the supposed remedies involves circumlocution and risk, and it is impractical as a general rule, for if a taxpayer happens to be not supplied with a surplus of cash, that remedy will be unavailable to him. It is surprising that the suggestion was ever considered to be plausible. (A., T. & S. F. Rwy. Co. v. Sullivan, 173 Fed., 456.)

There is a contention on the part of the defendants that in raising the valuation of complainant's property for the 1907 assessment the King County board of equalization acted pursuant to authorization by the board of tax commissioners, and testimony was introduced to prove that members of the board of tax commissioners attended meetings of the board of equalization and discussed the subject in a way to justify an inference that as individuals they approved the raise. It is the opinion of the court that all of this evidence is irrelevant, for the reason that under the revenue law of 1897, which governed the assessment for 1907, the tax commissioners, either acting as a board or as individuals, could not lawfully confer authority upon the board of equalization of a single county to segregate the trackage of a railroad within that county and assess it for taxation on a higher valuation than other parts of the same lines of railway in other counties.

The supreme court of this State, in overruling the demurrer in the bill of complaint in the case of the Great Northern Railway Co. v. Snohomish County (48 Wash., 478; 93 Pac., 924), established five propositions, as follows:

1. The main track and rolling stock of a railroad extending through two or more counties in this State are an entirety for the purpose of assessment and taxation.

2. The entire value of such main track and rolling stock must be apportioned between the several counties through which the road passes, in the proportion that the mileage in each of such counties bears to the entire mileage in the State.

3. Such main track and rolling stock must be assessed at their true and fair value in money.

4. The assessment must be equalized between the different counties so that equality of taxation shall be secured according to the provisions of law.

5. The State board of tax commissioners is given general supervision over assessors and county boards of equalization to that end.

Subsequently to that decision, on a final hearing the superior court of Snohomish County denied relief to the complainant in that case from the invidious assessment made by the county authorities, and upon an appeal the supreme court reached the conclusion that the State board of tax commissioners had in conformity to law classified and valued the operating property of railways in the State, and in its opinion said:

"This court, then, having decided upon the former trial of the cause that the tax commission had power to classify railway property, and that it is its duty to so classify and superintend its assessment, and it having directed the different assessors of the State as to their duties in the premises, there is no escaping the conclusion that the commission acted under the provisions of the law, and it was the duty of the assessor to obey such instructions."

The judgment of the superior court was accordingly reversed, with instructions to grant the injunction prayed for, which was an injunction restraining the exaction of the tax upon the excessive valuation above the schedules issued by the board of tax commissioners. (G. N. Ry. Co. v. Snohomish County, 154 Wash., 23.)

In the present case it is contended on the part of the defendants that it was necessary to raise the valuation of the complainant's property in King County to make the assesssment equal and uniform with the valuation of other property in the county; and it is contended that equality in valuation of property within the county is essential to a legal assessment. That same argument was made to the supreme court and was overruled in the decision above referred to. That decision by the highest tribunal of the State is an authoritative declaration of the law of the State, to which the judgment of this court must conform.

The State board of tax commissioners, either intentionally or unintentionally, by not revising the classification and valuation of railway property for assessment for the year 1907, left the schedules issued in 1906 to govern the assessments in the different counties, except King County, the valuation of the operating property of railroads for the latter year were made in conformity to those schedules. Therefore the action of the King County board of equalization in placing a higher valuation on the complainant's property was an invidious discrimination, contrary to the law of the State, and the complainant in this suit is entitled to relief in the form sanctioned by the supreme court of the State in the Snohomish County case.

In the light of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Western Union Telegraph Co. v. Kansas (216 U. S., 1), the attempt to tax the complainant on its franchise appears to be wholly indefensible.

I direct that a decree be prepared for my signature granting the relief prayed for by the complainant in its bill of complaint.

C. H. HANFORD.
United States District Judge.

Indorsed: Memorandum decision on the merits. Filed United States Circuit Court, Western District of Washington, August 3, 1911.

Mr. McCOY. Here is the decree in the same case, and I will read that into the record. [Reading:]

It is further ordered that the tax levied and assessed by the defendant, King County, for the year 1907 upon complainant's said railway property described in said bill of complaint in the sum of $106,208.84 is hereby declared excessive to the extent of $45,518.09, and said sum of $45,518.09 and all interest, cost, and penalties accrued on said tax are hereby ordered to be canceled and stricken from the assessment rolls of King County upon the payment into court or to defendant by complainant of the sum of $60,690.75, which the court finds to be the full sum of money justly due and payable by complainant as and for taxes upon the property hereinbefore described situated in King County, Wash., for the year 1907, being the same sum heretofore tendered by complainant in full payment of its said tax for the year 1907, and the defendants are hereby ordered and directed to receive and accept said sum of $60,690.75 full payment of all taxes due and owing by complainant upon its said railroad property in King County, Wash., for the year 1907; and defendants are hereby ordered and directed to issue to complainant, upon payment of said sum, a receipt in full for all taxes for the year 1907 upon said property and that the rolls of defendant county be marked, "Paid in full."

It is further ordered and decreed that complainant recover its costs and disbursements herein to be taxed by the clerk in the sum of $152.37.

Dated this 14th day of August, 1911.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

Indorsed: Final decree. Filed United States Circuit Court, Western District of Washington, August 14, 1911.

I believe that the record shows that there was tried at the same time an action in the same court, in which the Great Northern Railway Co., a corporation, was complainant against King County and Matt H. Gormley, treasurer of King County, Wash., defendants.

I have here also, and I will ask to have it marked as an exhibit, the opinion of the circuit court of appeals, which, in part, reversed the judge of the lower court. In the first place, it is said that on the face of the bill it stated an action for equitable relief and practically amounted to saying the demurrer was rightly overruled. There had also been an assessment of the franchise of the railroad company for taxing purposes, and Judge Hanford had held that that was a wrong assessment; and the circuit court of appeals sustained him on that. The decision of the circuit court of appeals reversed, however, the decision as to the assessment on the railroad property.

The opinion just referred to by Mr. McCoy is marked as "Exhibit No. 95."

Mr. McCoy. I might say that, apparently, in the beginning of my statement, when I stated that the application was to strike off some sixty thousand and odd dollars, that I was wrong; it apparently was forty thousand and odd dollars.

The Chairman. Do you wish to make any additional statement for the record, Mr. Hughes?

Mr. Hughes. I have not had time, and I have not any familiarity with the case; but, as to this one fact, it seems to me that it would be proper to also show in the record at this time, Mr. McCoy, that the counsel for the railway company have applied for a certiorari to the Supreme Court, and the case is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States from the decision of the circuit court of appeals reversing Judge Hanford.

Mr. McCoy. Let that go in there.

Whereupon a recess is taken until 1.30 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

1.30 o'clock.

Continuation of proceedings pursuant to recess. All parties present as at former hearing.

The Chairman. The committee will please be in order.

William E. Holmes, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. Higgins. State your full name to the committee.

A. William E. Holmes.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. At Dunlap, in the southern part of the city.

Q. Is that on the line of the Seattle, Renton & Southern Street Railway?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you interested in the controversy over the matter of fares and transfers on that road?—A. Yes, sir; as one of the patrons of the line.

Q. What committees, Mr. Holmes, did you serve on with a view of carrying out the result which the patrons of the line were endeavoring to establish?—A. I do not recall; I was on perhaps a dozen committees.

Q. Well, what were they?—A. Well, there would be a mass meeting to take up some particular subject and a committee would be named to see the city officials or some attorney with reference to litigation, and so on.

Q. What attorneys did you call on as a member of any of those committees?—A. We called upon Mr. Erl, I think Mr. Calhoun, and Mr. Hughes, and Mr. Hastings, and Mr. Smith—Everett Smith—and perhaps others.

Q. Was Mr. Hastings a member of any committee with you at any time?—A. I won't be sure, but I think possibly he was.

Q. Did he live on the line of the road?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall whom you called upon with the committee that Mr. Hastings was on?—A. No, sir; I do not; perhaps those matters extended over several years, and there have been so many phases of it, and so many different committees appointed that I do not recall any special features about it.

Q. Were you present in the court room when the injunction was heard before Judge Hanford?—A. I was at one hearing; yes, sir.

Q. Had you seen Judge Hanford before that time?—A. Not that I knew him.

Q. You would know it if you did?—A. No, sir; I do not remember faces very well—probably I had seen him on the streets a number of times.

Q. Did you ever call on him before that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you call on him after that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of anybody that did, with reference to this litigation, any committee?—A. No; I never heard until you mentioned it a few minutes ago that there was any committee called on him with reference to this litigation.

Q. You do not remember whether such a committee did, and you did not call on him?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Mr. HIGGINS. That is all.

The CHAIRMAN. You are excused.

Witness excused.

G. H. PLUMMER, recalled, testified as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Hughes, have you any questions to ask of Mr. Plummer?

Mr. HUGHES. I do not think there is anything that I could ask Mr. Plummer which would throw additional light on the subject of the inquiry, except possibly some questions might be propounded to him which would give to this committee better conception of the matters involved in the matter of the irrigation, the different levels and the significance of those matters, but it does not seem to me that it is important to this inquiry to take the time. In other words, I merely suggest this matter, that if water is pumped up to a level of 80 feet it is pumped into a canal or small reservoir, which is the beginning of a canal, and from there it flows, descending just enough to carry it a distance of 25 miles, we will say, which it appears was the length of this canal; and then below it must follow the irregular lines of the country, which would give it, starting with the 80-foot level at the river, the necessary descent; below that the irregularities of the surface would leave a certain amount of the land above the canal, although below it geographically according to the contour survey—that is to say, take 160 acres, the hummocks or the elevated portion of the 160 acres could not be irrigated. Now, there are some pieces of land——

The CHAIRMAN. He made that clear—that is, if all the land below this ditch was flooded certain portions of it would be above the surface of the water like islands.

Mr. HUGHES. Certain portions of it would be too high to be irrigated by it.

The CHAIRMAN. He made that clear. Is that all?

Mr. HUGHES. I do not think there is anything else that is worth while going into.

Mr. HIGGINS. You think you had a memorandum of all the copies which you wanted to send the committee in response to their request?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The custody of such letters and papers as you brought with you in response to the subpœna of the committee—the regular place of their custody would be in your office, would it not?—A. Yes.

Q. In the regular course of business they would remain there?—A. Yes, sir; these files were a part of my regular record.

The CHAIRMAN. Any correspondence between the agent, Mr. Cooper, at St. Paul with other persons might or might not get to your files?

A. Yes; sometimes I get copies of the correspondence, and all of those copies appear in the files.

Q. That is, when copies were sent you?—A. Yes.

Q. But you are not quite sure that all the copies of the correspondence between Mr. Cooper and others did actually reach you?—A. No, sir; I am not sure of that.

Q. Well, might there be correspondence other than with Mr. Cooper relative to this matter which he would not have in his files?—A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. For instance, if Mr. Elliott or some one above him had communication with anyone about it, what would the probabilities be as to copies of that correspondence being in Mr. Cooper's files?—A. The probability would be that Mr. Cooper's files would have copies of the correspondence, but it is possible, of course, that they would not appear there.

Q. Well, now, Mr. Plummer, subject to your promise to furnish the files—that is, to furnish the committee with such copies as you told Mr. Higgins you would furnish—I think you are excused.

The information promised is as follows:

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

LAND DEPARTMENT.

THOMAS COOPER, Land Commissioner, St. Paul, Minn.	GRAFTON MASON, Land Attorney, St. Paul, Minn.	J. L. WATSON, Principal Right-of-Way Agent, St. Paul, Minn.
J. M. HUGHES, Eastern Land Agent, St. Paul, Minn.	G. H. PLUMMER, Western Land Agent, Tacoma, Wash.	D. E. WILLARD, Development Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

NOTICE.—All prices quoted subject to change and lands subject to sale without further notice.

TACOMA, WASH., July 26, 1912.

MY DEAR MR. GRAHAM: In accordance with your request, I am handing you herewith certified copies of "memorandum of sales" to Hanford Irrigation & Power Co., which show the dates of sale, dates when payments were to be made under the contracts, and the dates when payments were actually made, all of which I think will be clear to you, but if not, I shall be glad to give you any further information you require in connection therewith. I am also inclosing copy of letter from Supervising Engineer Charles H. Swigart, dated June 8, 1909, advising me that the Director of the Reclamation Service had no objection to the sale of the lands embraced within a certain area described in the letter, which included the lands sold to the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. under the second sale. I do not have a copy of the director's letter, which is doubtless on file at the office of the Reclamation Service at North Yakima, but I presume you can procure a copy from the director's office at Washington, if you desire it.

I believe these are the only papers which you wished me to furnish the committee, but if there are any others please advise me and I will be glad to furnish them.

Yours, very truly,

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent.

Hon. JAMES M. GRAHAM,
Chairman Subcommittee of Judiciary Committee,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

OFFICE OF SUPERVISING ENGINEER.

Subject: Restoration of Northern Pacific lands.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES RECLAMATION SERVICE,
North Yakima, Wash., June 8, 1909.

Mr. G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent Northern Pacific Railway,
Tacoma, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Referring again to your letter of April 3 regarding the sale of a portion of the Northern Pacific lands covered by list attached to your letter in sections 13 and 15, T. 13, R. 25; secs. 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 15, 17, 21, and 25, T. 13, R. 26, and secs. 3, 5, 11, 27, 29, 31, 33, and 35, T. 13, R. 27, I have been advised by the Director of the Reclamation Service that there is no longer objection by the Reclamation Service to the sale by the Northern Pacific Railway Co. of the railroad lands embraced within this area.

Respectfully,

(Signed.) CHAS. H. SWIGART,
Supervising Engineer.

Copy to Director.
Copy to Mr. Conway.

I certify that this is a true and correct copy of the original letter on file in my office at Tacoma, Wash.

G. H. PLUMMER,
Western Land Agent Northern Pacific Railway Co.

Dated TACOMA, WASH., July 25, 1912.

NOTE.—Secs. 3, 5, and 11 referred to as being in T. 13, R. 27 E., have reference to secs. 3, 5, and 11, T. 12, R. 27 E.

G. H. P.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.—LAND DEPARTMENT, WESTERN DISTRICT.

Memorandum of sale, Washington division.

Contract No. 7590.
Purchaser, Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.
Residence, Seattle, State of Washington.

Dated, June 18, 1909.

Part of section.	Sec.	Tp.	R.	Acres.	First and second class.	Third class.
		N.	E.
All	13	13	25	640.00	445.00	195.00
S. ½	15	13	25	320.00	320.00	.....
NW. ¼ of SW. ¼ and S. ½ of SW. ¼	1	13	26	120.00	120.00	.....
Lot 1, S. ½ of N. ½ and S. ½	3	13	26	521.74	521.74	.....
SE. ¼ of NE. ¼ and S. ½	5	13	26	360.00	200.00	160.00
E. ½, E. ½ of W. ½, and lots 2, 3 and 4	7	13	26	597.54	359.66	237.88
All	9	13	26	640.00	640.00	.....
All	11	13	26	640.00	640.00	.....
All	15	13	26	640.00	560.00	80.00
All	17	13	26	640.00	600.00	40.00
All	21	13	26	640.00	640.00	.....
All	25	13	26	640.00	640.00	.....
Lots 1, 2, and S. ½ of NE. ¼	5	12	27	148.20	148.20	.....
SW. ¼ and S. ½ of SE. ¼	27	13	27	240.00	240.00	.....
S. ½	29	13	27	320.00	320.00	.....
All fractional	31	13	27	641.74	641.74	.....
All	33	13	27	640.00	640.00	.....
NW. ¼ of NW. ¼, S. ½ of NW. ¼, SW. ¼, and W. ½ of SE. ¼	35	13	27	360.00	340.00	20.00
Total	.....	.....	.....	8,749.22	8,016.34	732.88

SUMMARY.

First and second class lands..	8,016.34 acres, at $10, equals	$80,163.40
Third class lands	732.88 acres, at $1, equals	732.88
Total	8,749.22 acres	80,896.28
Interest on purchase price from May 1, 1908, to June 30, 1909, at 6 per cent		5,662.74
Taxes on land for the year 1908		310.80
Total consideration		86,869.82

Benton County, Wash. 8,749.22 acres.
Amount $86,869.82.

Payable as per contract.			Payments received.
Dates.	Principal.	Interest.	Dates.	Principal.	Interest.	Paid to—
June 18, 1909	$14,478.30	.....	June 18, 1909	$14,478.30	.....	.....
1910	14,478.31	$4,343.49	July 13, 1910	.....	$4,669.25	July 15, 1910
1911	14,478.31	3,474.79	Oct. 24, 1910	14,478.31	234.08	Do.
1912	14,478.30	2,606 09	June 17, 1911	14,478.31	3,214.19	June 18, 1911
1913	14,478.30	1,737.40
1914	14,478.30	868.70
Total	86,869.82	.....	Total received.	.....	.....

Correct.
This contract not yet paid in full.

G. H. PLUMMER, Western Land Agent.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY CO.—LAND DEPARTMENT, WESTERN DISTRICT.

Memorandum of sale, Washington division.

Contract No. 6769. Dated June 22, 1906.

Purchaser, Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.

Residence, Seattle, State of Washington.

Description.	Sec.	T.	R.	First class; good land, all irrigable.	Second class; inferior land, but irrigable.	Third class; non-irrigable.	Total acreage.
Lots 2, 3, 4, NE. ¼ NW. ¼	11	13	23	.....	.....	122.55	122.55
Lots 2, 3, 4, 5, and S. ½	11	13	24	60.00	332.00	.....	392.00
N. ½ and NE. ¼ SE. ¼	13	13	24	.....	270.00	90.00	360.00
N. ½ N. ½	15	13	24	.....	80.00	80.00	160.00
Lots 6, 7, 8, 9, S. ½ of SE. ¼	1	13	25	.....	.....	253.35	253.35
Lots 6, 7, 8, 9, S. ½ of SW. ¼	3	13	25	.....	248.10	.....	248.10
Lots 2, 3, 4, 5, E. ½ of SW. ¼, SW. ¼ SW. ¼ and SE. ¼	5	13	25	.....	406.00	.....	406.00
All fractional	7	13	25	.....	620.05	.....	620.05
All	9	13	25	.....	440.00	200.00	640.00
All	11	13	25	80.00	490.00	70.00	640.00
N. ½	15	13	25	.....	185.00	135.00	320.00
N. ½ and N. ½ of S. ½	17	13	25	.....	320.00	160.00	480.00
Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, S. ½ of N. ½, NE. ¼ SW. ¼ and SE. ¼	1	13	26	363.20	75.00	85.00	523.20
Lots 2, 3, and 4	3	13	26	5.00	15.00	104.62	124.62
Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, SW. ¼ of NE. ¼ and S. ½ NW. ¼	5	13	26	.....	141.84	143.38	285.22
Lot 1	7	13	26	.....	.....	38.88	38.88
All	13	13	26	80.00	355.00	205.00	640.00
Lots 4 and 5	21	14	26	.....	.....	59.00	59.00
All	27	14	26	200.00	160.00	280.00	640.00
Lot 7	29	14	26	.....	.....	12.00	12.00
Lot 9	31	14	26	.....	.....	18.20	18.20
All	33	14	26	.....	240.00	400.00	640.00
That which, when surveyed, will be described as NW. ¼ and NW. ¼ SW. ¼	1	12	27	.....	105.00	95.00	200.00
Lots 3, 7, and SW. ¼ SW. ¼	3	13	27	104.90	.....	.....	104.90
All fractional	5	13	27	607.58	40.00	.....	647.58
All fractional	7	13	27	200.00	446.02	.....	646.02
All	17	13	27	380.00	260.00	.....	640.00
N. ½ NE. ¼, SE. ¼ NE. ¼, lot 1, NE. ¼ NW. ¼	19	13	27	.....	.....	201.58	201.58
N. ½, N. ½ SW. ¼ and SE. ¼	21	13	27	80.00	375.00	105.00	560.00
N. ½, N. ½ SE. ¼	27	13	27	80.00	172.00	148.00	400.00
NE. ¼, NE. ¼ NW. ¼, E. ½ SE. ¼	35	13	27	.....	190.00	90.00	280.00
All fractional	5	12	28	86.95	367.00	90.00	543.95
Lots 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, W. ½ NW. ¼, SW. ¼	9	12	28	.....	146.00	209.25	355.25
Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, SE. ¼ NW. ¼, E. ½ SW. ¼, W. ½ of SE. ¼ and SE. ¼ SE. ¼	31	13	28	487.60	.....	.....	487.60
Total	.....	.....	.....	2,815.23	6,479.01	3,395.81	12,690.05

RECAPITULATION.

First and second class lands	9,294.24	acres, at $10	$92,942.40
Third class lands	3,395.81	acres at $1	3,395.81
Total	12,690.05		96,338.21

Yakima and Benton Counties, Wash. 3,395.81 acres, at $1; 9,294.24 acres, at $10.

Amount, $96,338.21.

Payable as per contract.			Payments received.
Dates.	Principal.	Interest.	Dates.	Principal.	Interest.	Paid to—
June 22, 1906	$16,063.04	.....	June 22, 1906	$16,063.04	.....	.....
1907	16,055.04	$4,816.51	June 29, 1907	16,055.04	$4,816.51	June 22, 1907
1908	16,055.04	3,853.21	Oct. 23, 1908	.....	3,853.21	June 22, 1908
1909	16,055.03	2,889.91	Nov. 19, 1908	16,055.04	393.35	Do.
1910	16,055.03	1,926.60	Dec. 22, 1908	14,543.08	378.12	Do.
1911	16,055.03	963.30	June 18, 1909	16,055.03	2,006.62	June 22, 1909
			July 13, 1910	.....	1,121.35	July 15, 1910
			Oct. 24, 1910	8,783.49	142.00	Do.
			Dec. 15, 1910	975.60	24.40	Do.
			June 22, 1911	7,807.89	438.56	June 22, 1911
Total	96,338.21	.....	Total received	96,338.21	.....

Correct.

G. H. PLUMMER, Western Land Agent.

Mr. HUGHES. Might I ask just a question or two which I think will be important? Have you testified to everything which you recall or know of involving any communications or negotiations for the disposition of this land for this irrigation project?

A. I have, sir, everything that I can recall. Yes, sir; everything that I can recall in connection with the transaction. As a matter of fact, our files are very complete.

Q. Was there anything in those dealings, in the prices fixed or the terms or conditions, different from those made by your company in other similar projects?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any consideration paid to these negotiations or to the terms or conditions or prices because Judge Hanford was connected with them?—A. No, sir; none whatever. We would have made an exactly similar deal with anybody—any responsible person or company that was willing to undertake the construction of that ditch and power plant.

Q. What, in brief, has been the policy of your road respecting arid lands that it owned in the large arid districts of the West?—A. The policy has been to encourage any feasible project. We have had submitted to us a good many plans for the irrigation of lands that we have refused to consider, because after investigating them we have considered that they were not practicable, either from a physical or a financial standpoint. Such schemes we have refused to lend our encouragement to by granting an option on the land. We have refused to do that, but it has been our policy wherever a practicable scheme was submitted to us by people of responsible means and with the understanding of irrigation to encourage them by either granting an option on all lands or selling them to them outright.

Q. Why was that policy adopted?—A. We are a railroad company; we are in the business of transporting freight and passengers, and the settlement and development of the country is one of the most essential things to the success of our business.

Q. In other words, your purpose was to promote the settlement and development of the country?—A. Yes, sir; that is so, and it always has been.

Q. And those arid lands, in the main, were of little, if any, value unless they were irrigated?—A. Yes; they were absolutely unproductive, and for a very large area there was no development of the lands; there was not a settler in that district, and we were anxious to see the district developed.

Q. How much land does your company have of this general character in eastern Washington? I speak of arid lands.—A. I do not know the exact figures, but it must be in the neighborhood of 1,000,000 acres.

Mr. HUGHES. I think that is all.

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Plummer, you stated, in answer to Mr. Hughes, that the policy of your railroad was to develop those lands, if I caught it?

Mr. HUGHES. To encourage development.

Mr. HIGGINS. To encourage the development of the lands?

A. Yes.

Q. Who determined upon that policy?—A. That is pretty hard to say, but the enforcement of the policy has been in the hands of Mr.

Elliott and Mr. Cooper, our land commissioners, and through Mr. Cooper——

Q. And the board of directors?—A. And the board of directors; yes, sir.

Q. To determine the general policy of the railroad?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not determine the general policy of the railroad?—A. No, sir.

Q. With reference to the development of arid lands?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not understand that Mr. Cooper does, do you?—A. Why, not officially; no, sir. I think the questions of policy are discussed and determined largely by Mr. Elliott, and with reference to the development and disposition of the lands of the company largely with Mr. Cooper—Mr. Cooper and Mr. Elliott together.

Q. But as to the broad, comprehensive scope, having in mind the development and settlement of these arid lands, on a matter of that kind, of interest manifestly to the railroad company, that is controlled, in ordinary administration, by the board of directors, is it not?—A. I think the general rule is, the general policy is probably laid down by the board of directors.

Q. And of course that accounts for the reference in the letters which you have read to the fact that this contract was submitted to the board of directors, or the executive committee, and to the president of the railroad?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much or what information do you furnish a prospective buyer of your lands?—A. It is not customary to furnish them much information. We expect, in order to prevent any misunderstanding, that purchasers of our lands shall satisfy themselves as to the character of the lands and their value. We do not try to induce sales by making any representations as to the quality, character, or condition of our lands.

Q. That is to say, you tell the prospective purchasers, "There are the lands," and they can have them at such a price?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that your usual and ordinary policy?—A. That is the policy that we follow, and it prevents a good deal of misunderstanding between purchasers and the company.

Q. The fact remains, Mr. Plummer, and if it is not a fact I wish now that you would correct it, that from the correspondence which you read this morning, and which embraces substantially all of your correspondence on this second transaction—the fact remains that that was with Mr. E. G. Hanford—you knew that he was the son of C. H. Hanford?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with C. H. Hanford—now, I think you stated this morning that those were the only persons that you recollect you had any talk with at all; that is, any of the persons connected with the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. that you had any talk with at all with reference to this second transaction?—A. I think that is correct, Mr. Higgins, up to the time of entering into the contract. After that time I had correspondence and I think with some talks about the payments and the terms of the contract with Mr. Walthew and possibly with Hayesn, although I am not sure about that.

Q. Your duties in a transaction involving the question of as large an acreage as this are to report to your superiors, are they not?—A. Yes.

Q. The matter of the terms and conditions and the classification and circumstances that happened to be determined before the contract was made rests with others connected with the Northern Pacific Railroad?—A. No, sir; hardly that. The acceptance and final approval of the terms rests with the higher officials, but it is my duty to size up the situation and work out the plan and recommend the terms and conditions, and those are either approved or modified.

Q. Are those usually approved by the board of directors or the executive committee?—A. No, sir; not always. They are usually; yes, I can answer your question yes.

Q. A development by the Government of the North Yakima project, as contemplated by the Reclamation Service, would have put under irrigation a much larger acreage than the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. ever contemplated, wouldn't it?—A. Yes, sir. The plan that the Government had under investigation at the time was a scheme for the irrigation by gravity of about 125,000 acres, and recently our company has, at its own expense, made quite an exhaustive investigation of that same scheme—I have just received a copy of our engineer's report. The project contemplates the diversion of the water from the Yakima River at about Prosser, and bringing it as I say by gravity around the foot of the easterly end of Rattlesnake Hills to a point above the Hanford land. The Hanford lands, however, lie at the far extreme end of the ditch. That was known at the time of this application that came from the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co., but as I suggested in some of my letters—perhaps you will notice them—that as the lands were at the far end of the canal, and in view of the fact that the supply of water for irrigation from the Yakima River was very limited, that notwithstanding the fact that the Hanford project was a pumping scheme, that I felt that the most feasible and practicable way of irrigating those lands was from the Columbia River under this scheme that Judge Hanford had proposed.

Q. Although that was not the plan which the Government engineers at first developed?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why did they change their plan—do you know?—A. No, sir; I don't know, but I think that it was on account of the fact that the water supply from the Yakima River was limited and had been appropriated and they had not yet worked out a complete system of storage reservoirs, which has not been worked out by the way, and the policy adopted by the Government for the creation of very large storage reservoirs at the headwaters of the Yakima River, which will supply very much more water than was expected would be available at the time this project was under consideration.

Q. And it would also irrigate lands adjoining the Hanford project?—A. Yes, sir; it is expected now that water will be available for the lands adjoining and above this Hanford project.

Q. Will that project, as now determined upon by the Government, irrigate these very same Hanford lands, which the railroad sold?—A. It is possible; yes, sir.

Mr. Hughes. I think by the last question and answer that an erroneous impression may be conveyed—do you mean to testify that the Government has determined upon this project of the Benton County canal?

A. No, sir. The Government has determined not to take up that project. As I stated in my answers when I commenced to speak about this project, that they had determined not to do it, and our company took it up and we have just made ourselves an exhaustive investigation of that project, the idea being that if the time should come that any responsible parties wanted to take up an irrigation scheme, we will have all the information ready to show to them so that they will be saved that expense.

Mr. HIGGINS. That is to say, that your company has now finished all plans and determined upon a definite irrigation scheme which will irrigate a very large acreage of this land, including the lands which the Northern Pacific Railway Co. sold to the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.?

A. No, sir; that is hardly correct, Mr. Higgins.

Q. Well, that is the way I understand your testimony. If it is not so, I want you to correct it.—A. No, sir. The railway company has completed only a preliminary investigation of the project to irrigate 125,000 acres of land lying adjacent to and above—some of it above—the lands of the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.; but these lands are at the far end of the canal.

By Mr. HUGHES. You mean by above—at a higher level?

A. At a higher level.

Mr. HIGGINS. Has either the Government or the Northern Pacific Railway Co. determined upon a scheme of irrigation which would irrigate the Hanford lands?

A. No, sir; we have left these out of consideration entirely.

Q. Oh, but would your scheme irrigate them?—A. It could; yes, sir; but it is a question whether under that scheme they can be irrigated as a unit of the whole project—it is still a question whether they could be irrigated as cheaply as they can from the Hanford project.

Q. Apart entirely from the cheapness and apart entirely from what, as a matter of fact, your company is going to do, is the scheme which is completed such that it would put water on the Hanford lands?—A. No, sir; it is not contemplated to do so at all.

Q. I understand that; but I say, is it possible or feasible to do so?—A. Physically, yes; any canal lying above the Hanford canal, if there is a gravity flow from the upper canal, would irrigate those lands.

Q. And it is planned to irrigate lands that adjoin them?—A. It is. Under the scheme as surveyed it is possible to do so. There is no plan to do it. All that we have done is to investigate that system; that is all. We have no idea of doing it ourselves, nor have we anybody in mind that is ready to construct it.

Q. Who made those plans?—A. The survey was made by W. I. King, of Portland.

Q. Portland, Oreg.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was the chief engineer?—A. He was the chief engineer.

Mr. HUGHES. This is getting into a broad field, and it is apparent to me that it would require considerable explanation of this witness to make the whole situation clear. Now, I will ask one or two questions, however.

As a matter of fact, there is not now nor is there any prospect of there being for many years to come any water which would be available for such a ditch as would be contemplated in the survey of which you have last spoken—any unappropriated water?

A. There is not water available now, and I do not know when water will be available for it.

Q. Do you know to what extent the present reservoirs contemplated, and in which something has been done by the Government for which money is available, are already taken up by the new ditch in the Kittitas Valley and the other irrigation projects farther up the Yakima Valley?—A. Yes, sir; I think that is true, yes, sir, that they have only provided storage water—although I am not sure about this. I have not the land figures as to the storage capacity of the reservoirs; but my understanding is that they have only provided storage enough for the ditches that are already completed or that are at such a point that they are about ready to make an agreement with the Government for the storage of water, such as that Kittitas project.

Mr. HIGGINS. I think that we might save time if you will let me make a statement as to my understanding of this witness's testimony. As I understand, he testified that either the Northern Pacific Railway Co. or the Government, perhaps both, have either a plant now completed or have completed plans and a completed scheme of irrigation which could irrigate the Hanford lands, and they propose to irrigate sometime in the future lands adjoining the Hanford lands. That is his testimony as I have got it.

Mr. HUGHES. I do not so understand it, and I do not so understand the facts at all.

Mr. HIGGINS. Well, I am taking his testimony. Am I correct?

The WITNESS. No, sir; not exactly. What I intended to state to the committee was simply this, and it was having in mind that feature about encouragement of irrigation schemes—that our company had undertaken at its own expense to determine whether or not it was a feasible project for lands lying above and back of the Hanford lands.

Q. And they have determined upon such a——A. (Continuing.) Now they have determined that there is a feasible project there, so far as the feasible nature of it is concerned. Now, that did not determine the feasibility of a project. If the expense of irrigating the particular unit of that system is more than the lands will stand, it then takes it out of the feasible class.

Mr. HIGGINS. I am utterly unable to differentiate between his statement and mine.

Mr. HUGHES. You would if you understood the problem as it exists over there; you would see how entirely erroneous your conclusion is. Let me ask a couple of questions.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly, Mr. Hughes, I think you have a right to go into this matter with the witness.

Mr. HUGHES. As a matter of fact the surveys which you have made, which you say are not for the purpose of being carried out by your company but merely for the purpose of having the information, demonstrate that it is physically possible to take out water from the Yakima River and carry it around at the proper elevation along the foothills of the Rattlesnake Mountains northward to a point where it would irrigate lands lying at a higher elevation than the Hanford lands—that is what you testified?

A. That is it; yes, sir.

Q. Now, is it a fact that if such a project were to be undertaken, there is now or in prospect the possibility of water to irrigate the lands which would be below that ditch?—A. No, sir; there is no water available for those lands from the Yakima River. That is the point exactly.

Q. And is not the problem of the sufficiency of water the great one which the Government engineers have been studying and the one which involves the question of the cost and advisability of irrigating other lands which lie in the valleys of the Yakima River?—A. Yes, sir. Now, you might locate—an engineer could locate an intake on the river and he could survey a canal which would run along on the contour line, and it would be physically possible to construct that canal, but that is a long way from having an irrigation ditch, because there is still another question and that is the question of the water supply. If you have not got any water to run in that ditch, you have not got any irrigation project.

Q. Now, the fact is that, with the cooperation of the Government, it withdrew those lands from its arrangement with you because of the desirability of taking water out of the Columbia River to irrigate a portion of those lands on account of the paucity of water in the Yakima River?—A. That was just the consideration.

Mr. Higgins. How do you know that?

A. Because they said so. It is so stated in the correspondence, I think, that the Reclamation Service found that this land, that the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. proposed to irrigate was at the far end of this system, and they concluded that the most practicable and quickest way to irrigate those lands around Hanford was by pumping from the Columbia River, and therefore they released it.

Mr. Higgins. If you can find any letters in your files that will bear you out on that, I wish you would furnish them to us.

Mr. Hughes. I think you will be very easily able to get all that from the Irrigation Department of the Government.

Mr. Higgins. I think the best way to get all this information is from the Reclamation Service and from the engineer he referred to—he is not an engineer, and it is necessarily hearsay.

Mr. Hughes. Have you had any estimates of what it will cost per acre to irrigate lands, assuming that water were available, under this scheme which you have spoken of, of carrying a ditch around the foothills of the Rattlesnake Mountains?

A. No, sir; I just got that report a few days ago and I haven't had a chance to make any deductions or figure out the cost of actually placing the water on the lands.

Mr. Higgins. Is that report in such shape that you can send a copy of it to the committee?

A. I think so. I would like to get Mr. Cooper's consent to do that. I have no doubt but that he will be very glad to furnish a copy of the report to the committee.

Mr. McCoy. You might as well furnish it to us, as we could subpœna Mr. Cooper.

Mr. HUGHES. You can fully advise yourselves on all these questions from the Reclamation Service.

Mr. MCCOY. Mr. Plummer, I live in a State where we have plenty of water and I do not know anything about irrigation, and I want to find out one or two things—is the problem in a country which needs irrigation to be productive, a problem which has existed before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the storage of that water is the prime element in the whole situation?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it also a fact that large quantities of water annually run to waste?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Millions and millions of gallons, is it not?—A. Yes, sir; if it is in the State, of course.

Q. Well, anywhere—there are millions and millions of gallons of water running to waste, going down the Mississippi River, and overflowing all the lowlands down there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, does the Government have any scheme to store any of that water at the headwaters of those rivers?—A. They have at the headwaters of the Yakima River.

Q. I mean, that is a well-recognized scheme?—Yes, sir.

Q. There is nothing novel about it, anyway—in fact, they had it in Egypt and built an enormous dam there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is it not a fact that if the Government had been left alone to work out that project, it could eventually, although there had been some considerable delay, they could have worked out a storage scheme which would have irrigated nearly all of these lands?—A. No, sir; I do not think so, for these reasons: That it was determined some years ago that when all of the possible storage at the headwaters of the Yakima River were taken care of, and that includes all of the flood waters of the winter season—in other words, if all the water from the snow that falls on the upper Yakima watershed were impounded that there would then be only enough water to irrigate the lands within the Yakima watershed.

Q. How many thousands of acres?—A. I can not say that, but it was in the neighborhood of 500,000 or 600,000 acres.

Q. And that would include these particular lands of the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co.?—A. No, sir. This land of the Hanford Irrigation & Power Co. is in the Columbia watershed.

Q. Well, let us take it on the Columbia River watershed. Could any storage project furnish water which would reach the Hanford lands and the lands which you say now you have mapped out a sort of scheme of your own for?—A. You mean storage on the Columbia River?

Q. I don't know anything about the geography—storage anywhere.—A. Well, there are only two sources of supply for this land. One of them is the Yakima and the other is the Columbia River. I have already explained that it was thought at that time——

Q. How long ago was that?—A. Five or six years ago when this matter of the development of the Hanford project came up—that there was not sufficient water available from the Yakima River to irrigate these lands. Then the only other source that was available was the Columbia River.

Q. Well, was it estimated that between the two rivers there would be sufficient water to irrigate the land?—A. Yes, sir; of course, in the Columbia River there is water enough for all the lands tributary to that stream and a lot besides.

Q. Then, the fact was that they could store water from the Columbia River?—A. It is not necessary to store water from the Columbia River.

Q. They could take it by flowage?—A. There is plenty of water in the natural flow of the river to irrigate all the lands, and that is what this company did.

Mr. HUGHES. What they do not understand probably is that it could not be taken by gravity out of the Columbia River on account of the height of the banks?

The WITNESS. No, sir.

Mr. HUGHES. On account of the height of the banks of the Columbia River?

A. The Columbia River runs in a canyon almost its entire length, and it was not practicable to take it out in a gravity ditch.

Mr. MCCOY. Of course, when I referred to this going into the Mississippi River, I was mistaken; it goes the other way; it runs this way.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, the Columbia River does overflow quite a good deal?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have testified to a number of acres or to a large tract of submerged land that was valueless because of the overflow on the banks of the Columbia River?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any knowledge as to the formation of the ground toward the source of the river, or whether it would be feasible to impound that excess of water at a reasonable cost?—A. There are a number of large lakes. For instance, one is Pend d'Oreille, Cœur d'Alene Lake, and others that would serve as storage reservoirs, but there is no storage necessary on the Columbia River, because the natural flow of the river is sufficient to irrigate all the lands along its banks.

Q. All the irrigable lands within reach of it?—A. Yes, sir.

Witness excused.

J. F. LANE, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. MCCOY. State your name to the committee.

A. J. F. Lane.

Q. Where do you live—Seattle?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what is your occupation?—A. Cashier of the Scandinavian-American Bank.

Q. You were served with a subpœna to produce a certain note. Did you make search for that note?—A. I did; yes, sir. However, I will say I only had about 10 minutes from the time the subpœna was served on me until I was to appear in court.

Q. Did you ever hear of such a note?—A. No, sir. Pardon me, we have to-day a note of Mr. Hopkins and a mortgage, but nothing on old records, which your subpœna appears to call for.

Mr. MCCOY. I am sorry to trouble you, Mr. Lane, but I wish you would take the time. If the chairman approves of it, you will be excused to make the search.

The WITNESS. I did this. We have a record in our bank showing the liability of all borrowers back for seven or eight years. I referred to those cards, and I found no card in which Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Hanford had had any dealings with the bank. I have been chief cashier of the bank during that time, and I do not know Mr. Hopkins personally. I may have seen him.

Q. How long have you been cashier?—A. I have been cashier of the bank for 12 years, but this record goes back 8 years, and we have no record of Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Hanford having made any note to the bank except real-estate mortgage, which is still in existence and which was made about 2 years ago.

Q. Have you any papers of any kind in the bank which bear Judge Hanford's name in any way?—A. No, sir.

Q. I wish you would make a search—a complete search—Mr. Lane, and go back about as far as 1900 and see if you can find any record. Do your records show—does your notebook or your note ledger show the indorsement on notes that are discounted by your bank?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is your bank—do you know whether your bank has contributed anything toward the expense of Judge Hanford in conducting this investigation?—A. No, sir.

Mr. McCoy. That is all, if you will just make that search.

The Witness. When do you want me to appear before the committee?

The Chairman. Monday.

Witness excused.

Juliet Adams Shumaker, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. McCoy. State your full name, please.

A. Juliet Adams Shumaker.

Q. You are a stenographer?—A. I am.

Q. How long have you been a stenographer?—A. About 20 years.

Q. Where are you now employed?—A. The firm of Kerr & McCord.

Q. How long have you been employed with them?—A. Seven years this month.

Q. Continuously?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The subpœna that was served on you called upon you to produce certain notebooks of dictation that you used in their employment, covering the months of April and May, 1912. Have you produced those books?—A. I have.

Q. Have you there the book of about May 14, 1912?—A. From May 13 to May 20. Yes, sir; I have it from May 13 to May 20, or May 12 to May 20.

Q. From May 12 to May 20?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever see that paper before [handing paper to witness]?—A. No, sir; I do not recognize that paper. It is not my typewriting.

Q. The paper bears date the 14th day of May, 1912?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I wish you would look in your book from May 12, we will say, to May 15.

Witness examines notebooks.

A. No, sir; I have not got anything of the kind.

Q. You have gone through those three or four days?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was it you were looking for?—A. I was looking for the order which you showed me.

Q. Did you use more than one sort of book for your minutes?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you have more than one book at the time; that is, covering a given period?—A. No.

Q. Are those books which you have with you all the books that you brought with you this morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are sure of that?—A. I am certain.

Q. What became of the book which you took out of that bundle which you had with you on the back seat there and which you put under you and sat down on for a part of the time?—A. I thought that was one that you did not require, and I went away and forgot it, and Mr. McCord handed it to me later. I have it here.

Q. Does that book cover this period?—A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that?—A. It is much earlier. It was an April book. I can give you the date. From April 6 to April 23. I thought you did not require that, and I had taken it out and was looking at something else, and I forgot it.

Q. Why did you think we didn't require it?—A. I had an idea—my subpœna called for books for May and June and I brought one of April by mistake.

Q. Have you brought all your April books now?—A. Every one.

Q. When did you bring those?—A. I brought all those—I brought them all this morning.

Q. Did you bring some April books this morning?—A. I brought an April book this morning.

Q. Why did you think we didn't want that?—A. It was a mistake, my bringing it.

Q. Why did you think we didn't want it? Why do you say it was a mistake?—A. Because I thought you wanted the May and June books.

Q. But you brought some April books with you?—A. I brought another April book with me this morning—I gathered them up very hastily this morning and I was mistaken in what I brought, that is all.

Q. And you are sure you never saw that paper before to-day?—A. No, sir; I never saw that paper—I know my typewriting when I see it.

Q. Does it look like the typewriting of anybody in your office?—A. It is not mine.

Q. Is it the typewriting of anybody in your office?—A. Well, it may be.

Q. You say it may be; can you tell whether it is or not?—A. Why, no.

Q. You do not recognize it?—A. I know my own typewriting.

Q. You do not recognize this as having been done on any machine in your office?—A. No, sir; I can not recognize it positively as such.

Q. Do you have more than one typewriter in the office?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many typewriters do you use there?—A. Four; the employees of the office, however, only use three.

Q. Have you ever had any occasion to compare with the others who use the typewriting machines there the work that they have done, for the sake of accuracy, to see whether it is correct or not?—A. We read back to each other; yes, sir.

Q. Having that in mind, are you sure you do not recognize this?—A. I could not absolutely recognize it; no, sir. I never had it in my hand before to my knowledge; neither have I seen it before.

Q. Well, can you see anything about it which would enable you to say whether or not it was made on any machine in your office?—A. No. The work of the machines looks very much alike.

Q. You are positive that you did not make the notes from which that order was typewritten?—A. I know that I did not. I never make dashes on each side of the numbers of my paragraphs, for one thing; I invariably use the capital I, and there you will notice the small l is used. I never use the small l for the Roman "1." I page my work at the bottom invariably, and I always put brackets around my heading. That is not my work.

The CHAIRMAN. Can you give us your best judgment as to whether it was done in your office by anybody—do you wish to look at it further [handing document to witness]?

A. Well, I have no way of identifying it further than to say that we frequently use covers of that color; that is about the only thing I could tell you, and there are a great many of those in use.

Q. What are the names of the others who take dictation and do typewriting in the office of Kerr & McCord?—A. Mrs. Harrah.

Q. What is her full name?—A. Margaret E. Harrah.

Mr. McCOY. Who else?

A. There is the telephone girl, who does work for the clerks, but not for the firm.

Q. And what is her name?—A. Mary Habernal.

Q. And the other one?—A. Margaret Harrah.

Q. And you three are the only ones?—A. We three are the only ones.

The CHAIRMAN. Three altogether?

A. Three altogether. Mrs. Harrah is Mr. Kerr's sister and does his work almost exclusively, and I do Mr. McCord's work almost exclusively.

Witness excused.

WALTER S. FULTON, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. McCOY. State your full name, please.

A. Walter S. Fulton.

Q. You are an attorney, practicing in Seattle?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you one of the solicitors for the complainants in the action in the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, entitled "William R. Sterling et al., complainants, v. The Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway, de-defendants"?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you what seems to be an order or injunction, or, rather, an order appointing receivers in that matter, and I will ask you when and where you first saw that [handing document to witness]?—A. The first time I saw it was when it was presented to Judge Hanford in open court.

Q. And who presented it?—A. It was handed to me, as I recall, by Mr. Little, and I handed it to the clerk, who handed it to the judge.

Q. And Mr. Little is who?—A. Mr. Little represents Peabody, Houghtling & Co.—their Chicago representative.

Q. Is Mr. Little an attorney?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you the bill of complaint in the same action, and I will ask you when you saw that [showing document to witness]?—A. I first saw this when Mr. Little handed it to me.

Q. And where? In court?—A. As I recall it, Mr. Little came to my office, was introduced to me by Mr. McCord, and this complaint was prepared, and I was then associated with him as attorney.

Q. You mean it was prepared in your office when Mr. Little and Mr. McCord were there?—A. No, sir; Mr. Little had the complaint when he came to me.

Q. And you signed it as one of the solicitors for the complainants?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the first time that you had heard anything about the proposition to bring this action?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Never heard of it before?—A. No; I never did.

Q. Had you ever been asked by anybody whether there was anything in your professional associations with any of the parties in interest which would prevent you from properly representing the plaintiffs?—A. As I recall, Mr. Little asked me that question—whether I was associated with the Renton Railway Co. in any way, or connected with them.

Q. The usual sort of question that might be asked of any attorney?—A. Yes, sir. He asked, I think, if I had any actions pending against them at that time.

Q. And that was at the time the bill of complaint was produced?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. McCord was present at the time, was he?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, you have already stated that you saw the order appointing the receiver for the first time in court?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When it was handed to the court?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that Mr. Little produced it?—A. Yes, sir; that is my recollection. It was handed to me in open court.

Q. And when it was handed to you there were two blank places in it, in which were subsequently inserted the names of the two receivers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the court—who was presiding in court when the order was presented?—A. Judge Hanford was on the bench; and when he went up on the bench he asked if there were any ex parte matters—the usual notification—and I arose and presented this matter, asking for the appointment of receivers, stating the substance of this complaint very briefly.

Q. What did Judge Hanford say?—A. He indicated that he desired to see the complaint, and I handed it to the clerk, who handed it to the judge. The judge then examined the complaint quite at length—some little time—and then announced that he would appoint the receivers.

Q. Did he ask for suggestions as to the names or the name?—A. The judge said, as I recall it, the judge said "I will appoint; upon this showing I will appoint or grant the application." He said "I will appoint two receivers." He said "I would prefer to appoint one who has had some practical experience, who is an experienced man who would be able to operate the road and direct its affairs, and I will. Are there any suggestions as to such a person?" Mr. McCord then suggested the name of a Mr. Mills. Judge Hanford announced then that he would appoint Mr. Mills as one of the receivers, and would take under consideration as to who he should appoint for the second, and then left the bench after he had been handed the order.

Q. Well, you then, Mr. McCord and you, then left the court room?—A. Mr. Little and I and Mr. McCord. I don't know that he went out with us, but Mr. Little and I then went to the clerk's office, and I filed the papers, together with a precipe for the appearance of Mr. Little and myself.

Q. That is, you filed the complaint?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of course, not the order, because that had not been signed?—A. Judge Hanford had that.

Q. Did Judge Hanford confer with you about the appointment of the other receiver?—A. I never spoke to Judge Hanford about it in my life, outside of the statements I made to him in open court.

Q. Did Mr. Little confer with him?—A. With Judge Hanford?

Q. Yes.—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did Mr. McCord confer with him?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Do you know whether—did you go to Judge Hanford's chambers in regard to the matter?—A. No, sir; I went right to the clerk's office.

Q. At any time, I mean?—A. No, sir; at no time.

Q. Did Mr. Little go in there?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. About that time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. McCord go there?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Now, who was E. M. Mills?—A. Mr. Mills. I didn't know Mr. Mills at the time. I only came to know him since. At that time he was the president of the road—of the Seattle & Renton Railroad. He was out here representing the Peabody Houghtling people.

Q. Is he a practical railroad man?—A. As I understand, he is. I don't know.

Q. Is he a resident of Seattle?—A. He is now; he came here from Chicago, I think.

Q. Do you know how long he had been president; did you say that he was the president?—A. I think he was the president.

Q. When did you first ascertain who had been appointed receivers?—A. Well, Judge Hanford announced from the bench that he would appoint Mr. Mills. Then he retired from the bench, as I stated, and Mr. Little and I then went to the clerk's office, where I made out the precipe for our appearance and where I paid the appearance fee and filed the papers. After I had done that—that took some 5 or 10 minutes, I should judge—the announcement was then made that Judge Hanford had named the second receiver.

Q. Who made that announcement?—A. I don't know who it was.

Q. Where were you when it was made?—A. Right there in the clerk's office.

Q. Was it some clerk made it?—A. I don't know who it was. The statement was made that Judge Hanford was on the bench and had named the second receiver, which was a surprise to me—I did not know he would name him so quickly. So then I went back to the court room, and Mr. McCord, who at that time was in the clerk's office, also went into the court room; and Mr. McCord said to the court—remarked, "I understand your honor has appointed the second receiver." And Judge Hanford said he had; he had appointed Mr. Colvin.

Q. O. D. Colvin?—A. O. D. Colvin.

Q. And who is Mr. Colvin?—A. Mr. Colvin is a citizen of this community and has been for a great number of years.

Q. What is his business?—A. He is connected with an iron and steel works here.

Q. In what capacity?—A. I think he is one of the officers of the company, one of the principal stockholders in it.

Q. Was he formerly a clerk in Judge Hanford's court, or a stenographer or something of that sort?—A. No, sir; I do not think Mr. Colvin ever was. Mr. Colvin years ago was receiver of the Front Street Cable Railway Co. That was a cable road that we had at that time that was running on First Avenue. It was then called Front Street.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any further questions of this witness?

Whereupon a short recess was taken.

WALTER S. FULTON resumed the stand.

Mr. McCOY. Mr. Fulton, have you stated now substantially all that was said and done in the court on the day when the order for the receiver in this case was presented to Judge Hanford?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you say anything in support of the application?—A. For the appointment?

Q. Yes.—A. Well, I just simply stated what the complaint charged, that the complaint charged the insolvency of the defendant, and stated briefly the facts upon which that charge of insolvency was based, and stated, as I recall, that the defendant company was represented in court, as it was, by Mr. McCord.

Q. Well, was that day the same day when this thing was presented to you—this complaint was presented to you—in your office?—A. That was the same day; yes, sir.

Q. And did you come right to the courthouse directly from your office, with Mr. Little and Mr. McCord?—A. No. I came up to court about an hour after that. That was about a quarter of nine or 9 o'clock, and I came up to court about five minutes of 10, and met Mr. Little there.

Q. That was by appointment?—A. I told Mr. Little that I would be in court prepared to make the application.

Q. You say Mr. McCord appeared for the defendant?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he say anything in regard to the application for a receiver?—A. Mr. McCord, as I recall, had an answer, and stated to the court that the facts charging insolvency were admitted by this answer, and upon my statement and upon Mr. McCord's statement, the court requesting the papers, I handed the complaint up; Judge Hanford read the complaint, rather carefully as I thought, and announced that he would grant the application.

Q. What information had you about the alleged insolvency of the company when you signed the bill of complaint?—A. I had none save the statements to me of Mr. Little relative to it and the facts contained in the complaint. Of course, I had a general knowledge of the condition of the company. It has been in litigation here almost continually for some time.

Q. Well, did you know that a temporary receiver had at one time shortly prior to this been appointed by the superior court?—A. Yes; I knew that.

Q. Was that matter discussed at the time you had this bill of complaint before you or——A. (Interrupting.) No; I don't think it was discussed. I knew that a temporary receiver had been appointed, and that upon a hearing upon an order to show cause why the appointment should not be made permanent the court discharged the temporary receiver.

Q. Well, did you know that the action was pending in the State court?—A. Yes; I knew it was pending.

Q. In which the application was denied for a receivership?—A. Yes; I knew it was pending.

Q. Did you or did anybody at that conference between you and Mr. Little and Mr. McCord mention that fact?—A. The fact of the case pending in the superior court? Mr. Little and I discussed that.

Q. What was the nature of your discussion: what was said?—A. That the court having discharged the temporary receiver that the property of the road was no longer in custodia legis, and that the Federal court would have jurisdiction on the application of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., who had not appeared in that action at that time.

Q. Have you ever had any correspondence with the plaintiffs in the action—in this action in the district court?—A. Peabody, Houghteling & Co.?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, sir; I have had considerable.

Q. Had you had any prior to the application for the receiver?—A. No; I had not.

Q. Do they deal with you as attorney in the matter or do they deal with Mr. Little?—A. They deal with me direct, and all their communications are signed "Peabody, Houghteling & Co."

Q. Do I understand you rightly, that Mr. Little is an attorney in the State of Washington?—A. No, no; he is their—an attorney of Chicago, Ill., and had come out here in behalf of Peabody, Houghteling & Co.

Q. How long prior to the filing of this bill did he come here, do you know?—A. That I don't know.

Q. How long after it did he remain here?—A. He remained here several days after that. He appeared in the State court after that, in the suit that was pending there—that is, he was present in court. I know that he took an active—I don't think he addressed the court in the matter.

Q. Do you remember whether there are any matters in this complaint stated to be alleged on information and belief?—A. I don't recall that, Mr. McCoy.

Mr. McCoy handed paper to witness.

A. (After examining.) They all appear to be positive statements.

Q. Did Mr. Little claim to have positive information?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say he knew about the insolvency?—A. Well, he simply stated to me that the facts were as they were charged.

Q. Was there any general discussion as to the condition of the business or any of their contracts or mortgages or anything of that kind?—A. No, sir; there was not. The statement was made to me that it was necessary to employ a local attorney to make this application formally to the court; that Kerr & McCord, because of their connection with the railway company, could not represent and would not represent Peabody, Houghteling & Co. in that matter, and that my name with others had been suggested.

The CHAIRMAN. Any further questions with Mr. Fulton?

By Mr. HUGHES:

Q. Who made that report to you—made that statement to you?—A. As to Kerr & McCord?

Q. Yes.—A. Mr. Little did, and Mr. McCord also, when he introduced——

Q. (Interrupting.) When Mr. McCord introduced you, what, if anything, did he say on the subject?—A. Mr. McCord introduced Mr. Little to me as the legal representative of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., from Chicago, and stated that he desired to employ my services in the matter, and that Mr. McCord said that he had recommended me with others—given my name to him, with others; that I had been decided upon.

Q. Did he say anything about——A. (Interrupting.) Then I was asked whether I had any connection with Mr. Crawford or Mr. Calhoun or with the Seattle & Renton Railway Co. that would preclude me from accepting the employment. I said that I had not.

Q. Did Mr. McCord say anything about his connection with the railway company or whether he was at liberty to represent Peabody, Houghteling——A. (Interrupting.) Mr. McCord said that he was not at liberty and could not represent them, or would not; that it was necessary to have a local attorney to be employed other than some one from their office.

Q. Did Mr. McCord remain there after that or return to his own office?—A. Mr. McCord went to his own office.

Mr. HUGHES. That is all.

By Mr. McCOY:

Q. Since the commencement of the action, Mr. Fulton, have you had the sole advice, or have you been the only one who gives advice to the plaintiffs in regard to the matter?—A. Well, there is a Mr. Evans here who is a lawyer and who was sent out from Chicago to locally represent them. I think Mr. Evans is not a man who appears in court. He advises with me, and then I advise direct with Peabody, Houghteling & Co.

Q. Did you ever advise with Kerr & McCord in regard to any of the steps to be taken in the matter since that time?—A. No, sir; I have not. As a matter of fact, there have been no steps taken in this suit that was commenced in the Federal court since the appointment of the receivers. The fight has waged around the suit that Mr. Crawford started in the State court, and that was afterwards removed to the Federal court upon the ground that there was a separable controversy, and I briefed that and argued it before Judge Rudkin, who recently decided it in favor of my contention, handing down a written opinion.

Q. Has there been any amended pleadings filed in the matter since Judge Rudkin's decision?—A. I received a couple of days ago a notice of an application for an order to permit the filing of an amended complaint.

Q. And has that been argued?—A. No; that has not been heard yet. It was to have been heard this morning, but Judge Cushman could not be here.

Q. Have you at any time appeared in Judge Hanford's chambers in this matter when Mr. Crawford was present?—A. Never.

Q. Did you know that——A. (Interrupting.) I don't think I have been in Judge Hanford's chambers for years.

Q. Did you know that he intended to be in Judge Hanford's chambers in regard to some phase of this matter?—A. That Mr. Crawford intended to be?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Didn't he give notice to you a few days ago that he would appear in Judge Hanford's court in regard to some phase of this matter? I think it was the application to——A. To amend?

Q. (Continuing.) For leave to file the amendment?—A. Yes; I was served with notice.

Q. Did you appear there?—A. No, sir. I was served with the—I was just leaving town—I was served with notice at 1 o'clock—served with notice that it would be called up at 2 o'clock that day. I telephoned the clerk that I was leaving town and that I could not be there at that time, and requested the clerk to so inform Judge Hanford, that I could be there the day following. The next morning I phoned to Mr. Sachs—Judge Sachs, Mr. Crawford's lawyer—and told him that I had been served with his notice just as I was leaving town, giving me but an hour's notice, and asking him what had been done, and he stated that Judge Hanford had declined to hear the matter, and that it was to be heard by Judge Cushman this morning.

Q. Did Mr. Sachs state to you who were present at the time Judge Hanford declined?—A. He said that Mr. McCord was there and had agreed to the matter being heard by Judge Cushman to-day.

Q. What is the necessity for any hearing on the leave to file an amended pleading?—A. Well, it is Mr. Crawford's contention, made to me this morning, that the serving of notice upon me of their intention to ask for this order was a mere act of courtesy, that no notice was required as a matter of fact, but he gave me notice, nevertheless, as he says, through mere courtesy. I feel, though, that the giving of the notice was entirely proper, and I expect to object to the filing of the complaint.

Q. What are the grounds of the objection?—A. Well, I think he is changing his cause of action.

Q. Well, is he, as a matter of fact, changing it, or simply eliminating one cause of action?—A. Well, in the original complaint he prays for a million dollars damages against Peabody, Houghteling & Co., and by this amendment he seeks to eliminate that and claim the million dollars as damages to the railroad company, and that seems to me a departure from the allegations of the original complaint—a complete departure.

The CHAIRMAN. Anything further with Mr. Fulton?

Mr. HUGHES. Nothing further.

Witness excused.

WILLIAM R. CRAWFORD, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Mr. McCOY. Your full name, Mr. Crawford.

A. William R. Crawford.

Q. You lived in Seattle?—A. I do now; yes; for the last six years.

Q. You are an attorney?—A. Well, I have not taken out any license to practice in this State, but I have been admitted since July, 1889, to practice.

Q. It has been charged, Mr. Crawford, that the suit of Peabody, trustee, against the city of Seattle—is it?—A. City of Seattle and Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co.

Q. (Continuing.) And others was a collusive suit. You were president of the railroad company, as I understand it, at the time the suit was brought, weren't you?—A. I was.

Q. State to the committee any facts which bear on the question of collusion in that connection.—A. Well, I can't state any facts bearing on it, because there was no collusion, Mr. McCoy. I could tell the facts of the relationship of the different parties to that litigation.

Q. Well, do that.—A. Did you want a history—a short history of it, or——

Q. Well, as bearing on that point, yes; make it as brief as you can.—A. The railway company had been sued in the State court for the purpose of enforcing the rights, under its ordinance to issue and receive transfers from the Seattle Electric Co., which suit was called the Linhoff suit. It was also sued by a man named Denison, to enforce a 5-cent fare within territory which had become annexed to the city after the acceptance of the franchise by the company. Those two suits were determined against the contentions of the company in the lower court and were appealed to the supreme court. They were afterwards decided by the supreme court in favor of the contention of the lower court and the orders entered in the lower court affirmed The Linhoff case was—the petition for rehearing was denied I think in the first part of August—I haven't looked this up; it is simply from my memory—1911. Almost—well, in a few days thereafter a writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States was sued out by the railway company and Justice Dunbar fixed a supersedeas bond, which was given by the railway company, and that suit now is pending in the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error, with supersedeas granted and bond filed. No action was ever taken in the other case; that is, the 5-cent fare matter—the Denison case. In the early part of the summer of 1911, although still retaining my office as president of the company, I had surrendered practically the control of the company's property and the company's affairs to Peabody, Houghteling & Co. and Peabody—Augustus S. Peabody—trustee of the first trust deed, trustee of a collateral trust agreement of May 1, 1911, under which had been issued $300,000 worth of collateral trust notes, and I was under instructions to report to Kerr & McCord and advise with them in connection with matters arising on the road as representing such interests.

Q. Now, do you mean by that that Mr. Peabody, as trustee, was in possession?—A. I should consider, for all purposes, that Mr. Peabody, trustee, was in possession of the corporate property of this company.

Q. What was the nature of the arrangement you made with him that leads you to that conclusion?—A. Well, the board of trustees under the collateral-trust agreement had resigned, leaving only two representing stockholders on the board of five, and the remaining three had been chosen by Peabody, Houghteling & Co., being Mr. Mills, who was and is now a—not a member of the firm, but an office manager of the company—and James L. Houghteling, jr., a member of the firm, and Mr. E. S. McCord, a member of the first of Kerr & McCord. The question of this transfer then coming up here in August, the matter was taken up by me with Mr. McCord, and, with his advice and consent, the company filed their writ of error and filed their supersedeas bond. After that the people demanded that the judgment of the court should be put into effect and that the company should issue and receive transfers. Then——

Q. (Interrupting.) Well, you haven't stated any facts yet on which you base your conclusion that Mr. Peabody was trustee in possession?—A. Well, as I say, I can't say anything more than that the attorneys for Peabody, Houghteling & Co., and Peabody, trustee, were to have full consultation on everything that the company did, and that the majority of the board of trustees of the company had resigned and other trustees representing those interests had been put in, in charge and control of the corporate affairs of the company.

Q. Well, had the corporation at any meeting of its trustees voted to surrender possession——A. (Interrupting.) No; there was no formal action ever taken by the board of trustees in connection with the matter. As I say, theoretically the company was in possession, but actually they were under the situation as I have described here. But, as I have explained, in August this matter came up and Mayor Dilling asked me if I would not come up to his office and take up this situation. I went up to Mayor Dilling's office then and I explained to Mayor Dilling that I had absolutely nothing whatever to do with any settlement and could make no settlement; that Peabody, Houghteling & Co. were the parties to see and to make the settlement with; and that their representative was out here, Mr. L. L. Sommers, of L. L. Sommers & Co., or that he would be in a few days; and that I would notify him and he could take it up directly with the mayor. Just at this point I will say that on the 15th of August, 1911, or June 24, 1911, at which the directors' meeting was held of the company for the purpose of resigning, three directors resigning and three others being substituted; after that time I was asked to allow a contract to be made, or rather informed that a contract would be made in Chicago for turning over all of the property and the operations of the property to L. L. Sommers & Co., of Chicago, Ill. A draft of that contract was forwarded to me either—I think it was the middle or the latter part of July, and on or about the 15th of August Mr. Sommers, of the firm of L. L. Sommers, arrived here in Seattle, and I handed over the property under their contract to L. L. Sommers & Co. in person, which was on or about the 15th of August, although at that time he didn't desire to come out and actively take it over through a man whom he had brought out with him named Mr. Perine.

Q. What was the arrangement under which the majority of trustees resigned and three others were elected?—A. That was under the contract in the collateral-trust agreement which was made on the 1st of May, 1911.

Q. What was that agreement?—A. Well, that was an agreement by which the company placed with Peabody, Houghteling & Co. $300,000 of what are called collateral trust notes, bearing 6 per cent interest and due in five years, and is quite a lengthy agreement, and——

Q. (Interrupting.) Well, what was it that would involve the question of resignation of the stockholders—I mean trustees?—A. It provided in there that the trustees—as I recall, that I should be on the board of trustees always, but provided the voting power was lodged in Peabody, trustee, of all the stock of the company, which was put up under the terms of the collateral-trust agreement as security for the repayment or the payment of the interest and the repayment of this loan on maturity.

Q. All the stock, you say?—A. All the stock of the company was put up and new certificates issued in the name of Peabody, trustee, for all the stock of the company outside of five qualifying shares.

Q. Was that agreement reduced to writing?—A. Yes; and is on file in the files of the company.

Q. Signed by whom?—A. It is signed by me as president and also by me as guarantor and by the railway company.

Q. Who owns the stock?—A. I owned all but a small portion of it, and it was signed by the other owner of the stock, Mr. John B. Berryman, of Chicago, Ill.

Q. Was there any agreement—any term in that agreement which called for the disposition of the receipts of the company?—A. Yes; it provided that all the net receipts of the company should be deposited with Peabody, Houghteling & Co. monthly for the purpose of preventing defaults on their securities—on the securities of the company.

Q. After the election of the three new trustees was any action taken by the corporation, as a corporation, looking to the surrender of the physical property to the trustee?—A. None whatever. There was no meeting of the board of trustees after that time, I don't think, until later on in the fall, when some question in regard to these notes came up, and a meeting was held by request of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., as I recall it. There was some question in regard to the issuance of these notes or some portion of them. I think we held a meeting—it may have been in October or September or October—simply taking up that matter.

Q. Well, now, coming to the institution of this suit by Mr. Peabody as trustee.—A. Mr. Sommers—after my meeting with the mayor, as I have stated, I informed him the company had nothing—I had nothing to do with this situation whatever; that it was all in the hands of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., and their representative, Mr. Sommers, was in the vicinity and would see him, and did see him, as I understand. I was not present and never had any further communications, directly or indirectly, with the mayor in regard to the situation, but I understand that negotiations were carried on between the mayor and Mr. Sommers; that is merely what I have heard, and I was not present at any one of them.

Q. The two suits in the State court, one involving the question of fares and the other the question of transfers, who were the parties to each of those suits?—A. The parties were Linhoff against The Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co. and the Seattle Electric Co., Denison against The Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co.

Q. Were the parties to those actions the same as the—or the parties defendant to those actions the same as the parties in the Peabody, trustee, suit?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, then, your claim is that the action of Peabody, trustee, against The City of Seattle and others was in no way a collusive suit?—A. In no respect.

Q. Well, why not? Didn't it involve substantially the same questions as those that were involved in the two actions in the State court?—A. Yes; it did; yes.

Q. And why, therefore, do you think it was not collusive, or why not, under those circumstances?—A. Well, I think that the committee understands the law to be that there is no such thing as a privity between a mortgagor and a mortgagee, and that the rights of the mortgagee to protect the mortgaged property can not be foreclosed out of the jurisdiction of a Federal court, if there is a diversity of citizenship, by reason of any judgment in a State court to which the mortgagee is not a party, provided there is only one thing in the suit, and that is that when the contract which the mortgagee sues under is made prior to any determination in the State court as to the meeting of that contract. The Supreme Court has passed on that so many times I don't think you desire any authorities. I can give them to you.

Q. Isn't it true that the question turns on whether or not the mortgagee is in possession?—A. I don't think it does at all. I don't think that it has any—there is no necessity for the mortgagee to be in actual physical custody of property to enable him or it to appear in a Federal court—being the necessary diversity of citizenship—to protect that property, no matter whether it is in the hands of the mortgagee or the mortgagor, from being wasted and depreciated.

Q. Well, if the mortgagee is not in possession, why can't the mortgagor protect all those rights?—A. It can if it wants to, or it can submit—the privity of contract does not exist between a mortgagor and a mortgagee. There is no such thing as a privity of contract which would bind the actions of the mortgagee by whatever action or nonaction the mortgagor might take.

Q. Well, in a suit brought by a mortgagee out of possession, wouldn't he have to allege that the mortgagor was collusively or corruptly or whatnot failing to protect the rights of the mortgagee?—A. That is the rule of the Federal court in regard to a stockholder's bill, by equity rule 94, but it does not apply to the question of a mortgagee.

Right in that connection, if the committee please, I would like to say that there seems to be a little difference of opinion or views——

The CHAIRMAN. What, Mr. Crawford?

A. A little difference of opinion or views in regard to a mortgagee in possession or out of possession and his rights to bring an action, and I was present here when Mr. Howard D. Hughes brought up the case of Dawson against The Columbia Finance Co., which was presented at the hearing on demurrer by Judge Hanford to consideration of the counsel at that time as being a reason for the collusive character of this suit. This case has been commented on and distinguished in the case of The Mercantile Trust Co. against Columbus, and the opinion in the Supreme Court in the Dawson case fails to set up the facts upon which the opinion is based, which facts are reported in 158 Federal Reporter, that show that there was an ordinary contract in that case entered into between the city of Dawson and the Dawson Waterworks Co., and that there were moneys due under that contract, and there was a suit brought in the State court, and in that suit it was finally determined that the contract was at an end and that there could be no recovery by the Waterworks Co. for the rental to be charged to the city of Dawson, and after all of that determination the Waterworks Co. assigned its claim under this contract to the Columbia Finance Co., who then went into the Federal court to establish its rights as a nonresident to bring that action, the whole matter having been settled by a final decision in the supreme court of the State prior to the assignment to the Columbia Finance Co.

The case of the Citizens Street Railway Co., a case which went up from Indianapolis and through the circuit court of appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, is absolutely in point to the right of the court to have heard and decided the Peabody, trustee, case. There was an ordinance by the city of Indianapolis making it a crime for anybody to pay more than 3 cents on a street car, and the city of Indianapolis instituted proceedings against a man named Navin, in which suit the Supreme Court sustained the lower court in a fine against Navin for having disobeyed this ordinance. The railway company appeared in the Federal court, I think before Judge Wood, who was then circuit judge, and got an injunction. The same question exactly was raised by the city of Indianapolis as was raised before Judge Hanford in this case, namely, that there was a decision on this ordinance, and the city of Indianapolis was a party to it, although the railway company was not, and that that was a final determination, and it absolutely prevented the Federal court from taking jurisdiction or passing upon the question as an original proposition. The Federal court did not look at it that way, and their position was sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Federal court looked at the contract and the rights of the parties under it in an entirely different light than the State court, reversing absolutely the State court.

There is a Minneapolis case. I could sit here and cite lots of cases, but I don't think you care to have them in the record.

Q. You think those bear on the question of the right of Peabody to bring this suit, and the question of collusion in it?—A. Absolutely. The Trust Co. against the city of Cincinnati, in the 79 Federal, by Justice Lurton, now justice, now circuit judge; Judge Taft and Judge Swan had the same questions exactly presented to them there in regard to the incline railway.

Q. Mr. Crawford, you made an application for the appointment of a receiver of the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railroad Co. in the superior court of King County, I believe, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the plaintiff's attorney in that suit?—A. Morris B. Sachs and myself in proper person.

Q. What was the title of the case?—A. William R. Crawford against W. R. Sterling and Alexander Smith and James L. Houghteling, jr., composing the firm of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., and Augustus S. Peabody, trustee, and First Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, Ill., and Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co.

Q. Now, Mr. Crawford, I wish you would give to the committee a complete history of that litigation, with all the facts connected with it, in any way, shape, or manner, the removal of that case to the Federal court, and bring into the narrative, chronologically, so far as it affects that litigation or affects the matter in any way, the action in the United States district court, in which William R. Sterling and others are plaintiffs, and the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co. is defendant, up to and including the service or delivery to Judge Hanford of a mandate from the circuit court of appeals and including anything else that you think has any bearing on the matter in any way, shape, or manner. Give us the narrative and we can follow it better than if the committee asks questions, I think. You can go back as far as you want to with the Renton Street Railway Co., so as to make the story intelligible from the beginning down through.—A. That is a pretty large order. Do you want me to take up the charges of my bill, or do you want—I don't know exactly—and do you want me to state what is in the bill, how I arrived at the charges in the bill, or the court procedure on the bill?

Q. Everything, going back to the time when you surrendered your stock, if you please, to Houghteling & Co., or whatever their names are?—A. Well, after the 24th of June, at this meeting of the board of trustees of the company at which the resignations of three of the board were accepted and three nominees of Peabody, Houghteling & Co. were installed in their places——

Q. (Interrupting.) I don't like to interrupt, but before that you had made arrangement, hadn't you——A. (Interrupting.) I explained first—I thought I had explained that. You mean in regard to the collateral-trust agreement of May 1?

Q. Yes; your guaranty and all about it.—A. I was a guarantor on that for $300,000, and as a surety placed with Peabody, Houghteling & Co. the entire capital stock of the railway company. The stock certificates held by myself and John B. Berryman were surrendered, and one stock of preferred, being for $250,000 worth of the stock, and one for $999,500 of common stock, was issued in the name of Augustus S. Peabody, trustee. Then this contract was entered into between L. L. Sommers & Co. and the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co., and on about the 15th of August, 1911, the firm of L. L. Sommers & Co. under their contract nominated one G. F. Perine as general manager of the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co., and took possession of the physical property and operations of the company, and continued under the terms of that contract in the active management and operation of the corporate properties until some time in December, 1911.

On or about the 1st of December, 1911, Mr. E. M. Mills came here from Chicago and requested my resignation as president of the company. After conferences lasting several days I resigned as president. We had a meeting of the board of trustees and Mr. Mills was elected in my place, having resigned, and Mr. James L. Houghteling, of Chicago, Ill., was elected vice president in place of Mr. E. M. Mills. After that time I have not even been out on the line of the railroad except once—on the 16th of January I made a trip out to Matheson Station and back again. I have had nothing whatever to do as an officer of the company, although I have been a trustee and am now a trustee of the company.

This matter continued along and we had only one meeting of the board of trustees, in February, which adjourned to meet again, I think, within a few days, but there has never been another meeting of the board held. On the 15th of April, 1912, I received a communication signed by Peabody, Houghteling & Co., in connection with the affairs of the company, which was that they had been informed by Mr. Mills, as the president of the company, that the company would not pay and would default on the interest on the collateral-trust notes amounting to $9,000 on the first——

Q. (Interrupting.) Nine thousand?—A. $9,000 on the first—this is the letter—$9,000 on the 1st day of May, 1912, and in such letter demanded of me, as guarantor, that I should make good for the interest or the default would be made on May 1, and under the terms of the collateral trust agreement a declaration of the maturity of the entire sum of $300,000 would be made and that the provisions of the collateral trust agreement would be carried out, which included, of course, the sale at private sale of all of the stock of the company. The 17th of April, 1912, was the day upon which the annual stockholders' meeting of the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co. was to be held, for which formal notice had been, prior to the 15th of April, sent out, so that I then appeared on the 17th of April with Mr. Frank J. Friend, who was then and is now a trustee of the company and its secretary, and going into the doorway of the office we met Mr. E. M. Mills and Mr. Thomas Evans. They opened the door and we walked in with them. Mr. Mills then excused himself and went out and came back accompanied by Mr. James Kerr. The meeting was not called to order, but Mr. Evans, as soon as Mr. Kerr appeared in the room, said, "I move we adjourn the stockholders' meeting until the 12th day of June, 1912, representing Augustus S. Peabody, trustee, and holding his proxy for all of the stock of the company except five shares." Immediately I suggested that there had been no meeting called to order and it was a little premature. Mr. Kerr then asked if I objected to Mr. Mills being elected chairman. I said no. Mr. Mills was elected, and immediately that motion was renewed. I then notified both Mr. Mills and Mr. Evans that I declared the contract under which the voting power of all the stock of the company had been vested in Mr. Augustus S. Peabody at an end, as Peabody, Houghteling & Co. and Augustus S. Peabody, trustee, had vitiated and set aside the terms and conditions of the collateral trust agreement by failure to pay—or failure to conserve the net earnings to take care of and protect the collateral trust agreement.

Q. Now, you haven't gone into sufficient detail about that aspect of the agreement, Mr. Crawford, I think, to make the record show clearly what the basis was upon which you thought you had any right to make any such contention.—A. When this collateral trust agreement was made—was being drafted in Chicago—and these different conditions to be inserted upon the request of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., one of the requests, and I think the only one, that I made was that the entire net earnings of this property, simply paying out merely for operations, should be monthly forwarded to Chicago to Peabody, Houghteling & Co., so that there could be no defaults in the payment of the interest or the obligations of the company, and especially of this collateral trust agreement, as I was surrendering to them all of the stock of said company and would be absolutely at their mercy, and that clause was inserted in the agreement.

Q. Well, is there anything in these papers—any copy of that agreement in these papers that came over from the State court on the removal to the Federal court?—A. There may be, attached to an affidavit presented by E. M. Mills. I am not sure whether the collateral trust agreement itself was attached to the affidavit, or a preliminary agreement which was made prior to the execution and the making of the collateral trust agreement.

Q. Well, now, was it distinctly agreed in that collateral trust agreement that that money should be received—forwarded from Seattle to Peabody & Co., or whatever the name is, Houghteling or Peabody—and used for the purpose of taking care of these fixed charges?—A. That is what the fund was there for—the purpose of paying the interest on the bonds and the collateral trust notes and to create a fund for the retirement of the collateral trust notes at maturity.

Q. It was so agreed in this written agreement?—A. That is the written agreement as I recall it. It may not be just in that language, but it is very close to it.

Q. And you claim that, at a matter of fact, that money was not remitted, but was used for some other purpose, and that if these Peabody and the rest of them didn't have money to meet the interest, and what not, or fixed charges which they had agreed to meet, it was because of their own violation of this agreement?—A. That was my contention.

Q. And that was the contention that you made at this meeting of the trustees?—A. Not in full length; no. No; not in full length because it was very short.

Q. They understood what the basis of it was?—A. They should have.

Q. Did Mr. Mills know that that agreement existed?—A. He was in Chicago at the time it was drafted, and in consultation with the firm about it, and myself.

Q. All right; now go ahead.—A. Where was I?

Q. You had got down where you were making a protest against the holding of that meeting, or its adjourning, rather.—A. Then from that meeting Mr. Friend and myself, as directors of the company, served a written notice on Mr. Mills, as president, demanding an immediate meeting of the board of trustees of the company to consider the business of the company. We did not hear from Mr. Mills for a day or so, and then we received word that owing to the absence of Mr. McCord that he would hold no meeting of the board of trustees. I desire to say there that right after—the very next day—that is, the 18th of April—I received a letter from Mr. Mills, as president of the company, inclosing two or three copies of letters received by him from Peabody, Houghteling & Co., all dated on the same day, which day was the same day that the letter which I had received on or about the 15th of April, was dated. I think the date of all these letters was the 9th day of April, 1912. These three letters from Peabody, Houghteling & Co. to Mr. Mills were first in regard to the loaning to the company $10,000 on a demand note, and showed that they were that day sending the money to him, or an authorization for a draft, which was the 9th day of April. The next one was calling his attention to the fact that the company had outstanding now, together with this new note issued that day, $34,400 of demand notes, and that they thereby demanded payment of those notes on the 1st of May, 1912, being the same day on which the interest fell due on the bonds secured by the trust deed and the note secured by the collateral trust agreement, and further that they noticed by his letter of March 27, as I recall the date, that he would not be able to pay the interest of $9,000 on the 1st day of May, 1912, being the interest on the collateral trust notes; that the company would be compelled—that is, Peabody, Houghteling & Co.—to a strict payment, and if that money was not paid, why, they would declare the entire principal due and would proceed to carry out the terms of the collateral trust agreement in regard to the security, and demanded that the money should be paid. Immediately on receipt of these communications—and I desire to say here that the notes of $34,400 mentioned in the letter was the first time that I as a trustee of that company ever heard of any paper ever having been issued by the company and it was the first time that the secretary and the other trustee, Mr. Friend, of that company, ever heard of the issuance of any such paper: that immediately on receipt of this communication from Mr. Mills we, Mr. Friend and myself, again demanded an immediate meeting of the board of trustees to take up the matters and business of the company, that they needed to meet. We received a communication that Mr. McCord was out of the city and they didn't know just when he would be expected back and declined to hold a meeting. We called the attention of Mr. Mills to the fact that there were three trustees in the city of Seattle, Mr. Mills, Mr. Friend, and myself, being a majority of the board, and again demanded a meeting, which was refused us. Then it was getting on to about the 20th or 22d of the month, and I had already received in my office word that Mr. Mills had not yet quite made up his mind whether or not he would apply for the appointment of a receiver of the railroad. Having all this——

Q. (Interrupting.) I didn't hear that.—A. I said that I had received word in my office that Mr. Mills had not quite made up his mind whether or not he would apply for the appointment of a receiver of the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co.

Q. How did you receive that word?—A. I received that word from Mr. Price in March, who was then working as a claim agent for the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co.

Q. What did he tell you?—A. He told me, or rather he told Judge Sachs in my presence—it was in relation to a small claim that Judge Sachs had representing an Italian out there for personal injuries, and it was a question that Mr. Price told him he had better have his client take $75, because Mr. Mills had not quite yet made up his mind whether or not he would apply for a receiver of the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co., and if he did, why, of course the man would not get anything. So that I then asked Mr. Price and said, "What has Mr. Mills got to do with it?" "Well," he says, "that is what my information is from him." Then, taken in connection with these defaults to be pulled off on the 1st of May, why, I concluded that there was going to be something in the nature of a suit brought for a receiver, and I thought, for the protection of my interest and the interest of John B. Berryman, as stockholders and guarantors, that we had better proceed ourselves to put this road in the hands of a receiver, which would be a contested receivership if brought. By contested receivership I mean where orders would not be entered as of course and without contest.

So that I drafted a bill and that on the 30th of April, 1912, Judge Sachs presented the same before his honor, King Dykeman, in department 9 of the superior court of King County, Wash., in open session, and made an argument in open session for the appointment of a temporary receiver, the grounds for the appointment of the temporary receiver being, first, that I had information which led me to believe that an application would be made to the Federal court for the appointment of a receiver, and suit brought there for the purpose of vesting jurisdiction over the property in the Federal court, and second——

Q. (Interrupting.) What was your information, if any, besides the conversation in regard to this claim of somebody that had been heard?—A. Information that came to me from Judge Sachs, who had a conversation with another gentleman in the city, just about the 27th, I imagine, somewhere along there, of April. I am not quite sure: I am not sure of that date, but it was—I think it was Saturday, the 27th of April, if I am not mistaken. And the second fact, that I believed that a notice was given that the files of the company would be depleted and correspondence which should be on the files would not be there, and his honor, King Dykeman, appointed a temporary receiver, with an order to show cause why a permanent receiver should not be appointed, returnable on May 3, 1912. On May 2, I believe, or May 1, I don't know what date, Merr & McCord, appearing by Mr. James Kerr, representing the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co., appeared before Judge Dykeman and without notice presented an application for a change of venue from the judge on account of prejudice.

Q. On account of the judge's prejudice?—A. Yes. The judge then transferred the case into the department of Judge A. W. Frater—I think it is No. 7—and on the 3d of May we appeared to take up the question of the appointment of a receiver permanently on the order to show cause.

Q. In the papers that were removed into the district court from the State court is the affidavit alleging prejudice contained, or is that not such a paper as would come over?—A. Why, I have not examined the files in the Federal court.

Q. Well, briefly, what was the allegation of prejudice?—A. Oh, why, it is a statutory ground in this State, since 1911—since our——

Q. (Interrupting.) Do you have to state any facts?—A. No; it is as of course. All you have to say is that you believe that either on account of the attorney or on account of the party that you can't get a fair trial, and ask to have it changed, and that is all that is done, and it is changed; it is a mere matter of course.

The matter was taken up and argued on May 3, affidavits filed, taken up again later on another day, more affidavits filed and more arguments; finally on the 8th of May we filed a supplemental bill alleging the insolvency of the company since on the 1st of May it had defaulted as alleged that it would in the original bill on May 30, and prayed for the appointment of a permanent receiver. That is a second appointment instead of the one to show cause appointment—a new application for an appointment of the receiver on the ground of the insolvency of the corporation, it having become insolvent by its failure to pay its debts as they matured on the 1st day of May, 1912.

In this State, for the information of the committee, we have a statute which is a mandatory statute, as decided by the Supreme Court. The first case is the Oleson case against the Bank of Tacoma, in the 15 Washington, which provides absolutely that wherever any party interested in a corporation or corporate affairs shows to the court that a corporation is in imminent danger of insolvency or is in insolvency the court must appoint a receiver of such corporation. This application was on May 8, as well as the application for a permanent receiver on the motion to show cause, denied by Judge Frater.

Q. On what ground?—A. On the ground, as expressed by him—I don't know whether his opinion is taken down or not, if it is I haven't got a copy of it; if it is, I think I can get a copy of it; I think it was taken down, but I don't know—as I understood it was that although the corporation was hard up for money, yet that it had assets shown to be twenty-four hundred and odd thousand dollars, and that at this time he would not appoint a receiver. That is my remembrance of his grounds.

Q. You mean on the ground that it was not insolvent, is that it?—A. Well, just hard up for money.

Q. Was the contention made in the affidavits resisting the application?—A. Well, the affidavits resisting the application went on the ground that the company was solvent, and Mr. Mills swore so.

Q. Well, I say the opposition to the motion was on the allegation of solvency?—A. The denial of the motion was on affidavits of being solvent.

Q. The opposition to the motion was on the basis of solvency, it was denied on that opposition, is that right?—A. It was. The judge in taking up that matter took up a report that was made by Price, Waterhouse & Co., showing the situation of the affairs of the company up to the 1st of March, 1912, which should be attached to the affidavit of E. M. Mills.

Q. Were they trying to float bonds about that time?—A. No; oh, no; this was 1912. This was made herein—I think it covered up until 1912. And referring to that—or Judge Frater referred to that statement in his remarks concerning the financial condition of the company. Then during that time of the receivership, which continued from the afternoon of April 30, 1912, until the end of the day of May 8, 1912, the receiver had accumulated a fund of over $10,000.

Q. The temporary receiver?—A. The temporary receiver. I appeared and filed a motion in the cause, asking that the court order the temporary receiver to forward to Peabody, Houghteling & Co. $9,000, so as to save the final default under the terms of the trust deed due on June 1, 1912, and prevent the sale of the securities. Kerr & McCord appeared for the railroad company and resisted the application of this money for this purpose. I believe the record will show that I filed a second motion, directed against the railway company, and asked the court to decree or order that the railway company then use this money, or so much thereof as was necessary, to pay the interest. This was resisted and the court refused to make such order. That was practically the way the matter stood for an interim of a few days.

Then on or about the 14th of May, 1912, there was an application made in the Federal court before Judge Hanford for the appointment of receivers of the property.

Q. If you heard anything about the matter from anybody during that interval, just state what it was you heard and who told you.—A. Well, while Mr. Scott Calhoun was temporary receiver I was asked the question whether or not Mr. Will H. Parry would be acceptable to me as receiver of the property. I informed this gentleman that I had nothing whatever to do with the appointment of a receiver; that Mr. Scott Calhoun had been appointed receiver, and that the court would appoint whoever he pleased; and that I would not make any suggestion to the court as to who should be appointed. I also informed him I didn't see how it would be possible for Mr. Parry to be appointed, and he informed me that——

Q. (Interrupting.) Giving him what reason?—A. Giving him the reason that a court generally in appointing a temporary receiver will upon an order appointing a permanent receiver always appoint the temporary receiver, appoint the same man and continue his appointment. And that was my reason why, as I say, I didn't see what would be the use of Mr. Parry or anybody for Mr. Parry taking the matter up. As far as I was concerned or Judge Sachs, why we, of course, would not take the matter up.

Q. Have you yet stated whether the order appointing the temporary receiver was vacated?—A. I don't—I think this was at the time Scott Calhoun was the temporary receiver of the road—I am very sure of it.

Q. A few minutes ago had you reached the point where you stated that Judge Frater vacated the order appointing Mr. Calhoun receiver?—A. Yes. This should have been—this conversation was prior to the 8th day of May on which it——

Q. (Interrupting.) Was that the day on which the order was entered vacating the order?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, then, you said, as I remember, that an interval of some few days elapsed and then something else happened, or——A. (Interrupting.) Well, not covered by this; no.

Q. That is not the point.—A. But you asked me a question there and——

Q. (Interrupting.) But you said that on the 8th day of May, was it, or April—8th day of May, yes—that the order was entered vacating the temporary receivership?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you started to say, or you did say, that an interval elapsed, and then you started to say something else happened; is that right?—A. Then I started in to explain the action here o the 14th.

Q. Well, then, I say during that interval between the time when the order was vacated and the application on the 14th of May for the receivership, did you hear anything about the probability that a receiver was to be applied for in the United States court; and if so, what did you hear and from whom?—A. No; I didn't hear anything between that time. The only knowledge that I had was prior to the 30th of April and just prior to April 8, or May 8. The first time was in April that I was informed by Judge Sachs that he had had interview with a certain gentleman in the city and that my affairs were discussed—brought up by this gentleman and discussed, and wanted to know who was running the road and matters of that character, and wanted to know whether or not I was protected in my stock holdings, and Judge Sachs—this, of course, is all hearsay, Mr. McCoy.

Q. You have not been confined to direct evidence.—A. What is that?

Q. I say, you haven't been confined to direct evidence in any way. We want to know the story.—A. And Judge Sachs informed this gentleman that he was satisfied that my interest would be protected; and, if necessary, why, I would apply for a receiver. And this gentleman immediately said, "Well, of course that will be in the Federal court," and Judge Sachs said, "No; it will not be in the Federal court, because Mr. Crawford is a citizen of the State of Washington and the railway company is also a citizen of the State of Washington. It will be in the State court." As I say, I had this in mind, together with the statement of Mr. Price and together with the statement of Judge Sachs with an interview with John Powell, of this city, as a basis for my belief that they were preparing to go into the Federal court and ask for a receiver of this property.

Q. Well, now, go ahead from May 14.—A. On May 14 the application was made as related, I presume, by Mr. Fulton. I was not present in court before Judge Hanford and had received no word or intimation that such an application would be made. My knowledge of it came to me from reading the newspaper, saying that the appointment had been made. Immediately after the appointment had been made I was kindly furnished a copy of the bill and answer by Mr. Fulton and Kerr & McCord. I then drafted a motion in the State court, basing my motion upon the bill and answer in the Federal court, and moved the State court for appointment of a permanent receiver, upon the ground of the confession of insolvency filed by Kerr & McCord on the 14th day of May in such suit.

Q. That is, in their answer they admitted the allegations of the complaint in the action for the appointment of a receiver, such allegation being to the effect that the company was insolvent?—A. Yes, sir. Then that matter was taken up, we argued the matter before his honor Judge Frater, and he appointed Mr. Scott Calhoun as permanent receiver. Messrs. Kerr & McCord, appearing for the railway company, objected to the appointment of a receiver again.

Q. On what ground?—A. Well, I believe it was on the ground that the matter was in the Federal court and the State court had no jurisdiction now to entertain a motion for the appointment of a receiver. The matter was argued, and Judge Frater held that he did have jurisdiction over the res and did appoint a receiver.

Q. Who was appointed?—A. Scott Calhoun. The prayer immediately was made for the fixing of a supersedeas bond to supersede the functions of that receiver and Judge Frater fixed the bond at $300,000. Immediately——

Q. (Interrupting.) How much?—A. $300,000. Immediately the bond was presented, signed by Kerr & McCord as representing the railway company, with the National Surety Co. on it as the surety.

Q. Do you mean it was signed Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co. by Kerr & McCord?—A. Yes.

Q. It was "Attorneys"?—A. Attorneys.

Q. Attorneys in fact?—A. No; just attorneys. I think you have a copy of the bond; is it not in the record there?

Q. Well, had there been any meeting of the trustees authorizing this?—A. I will come to that just now. I immediately gave notice to the court that I desired, within the time allowed, to file exceptions to the bond. The next morning—this happened in the afternoon—the next morning I filed exceptions to the bond, which exceptions are, I believe, on file—are they, Mr. Fulton; did you bring them up?

Mr. Fulton. I think there is a complete record.

The Witness. One of the exceptions being the fact that this was not the bond of the railway company, but was the bond of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., and that there had been no meeting of the board of trustees of that company that had authorized Kerr & McCord or any officer of the company to enter into an engagement binding that company for $300,000——

Q. Well, had there been any such meeting?—A. The record is confessed that there never was any such meeting, which I will come to later. [Continuing.] And naming numerous other exceptions to the bond. That was filed, as I recall it, on the 21st day of May. On the 31st of May an affidavit was filed by Messrs. Kerr & McCord, of E. M. Mills, as reaching to the exceptions, an affidavit supporting the exceptions which I had made on the 21st of May, 1912, which confessed that there was no meeting of the board of trustees, but said that he, as president of the company, had given full power and authorization to Kerr & McCord to sign that bond for the railway company, admitting and confessing all of the different matters set up in my affidavit on the exceptions, namely, that there had been no meeting of the board of trustees of the company to act or pass upon this question of becoming liable or perfecting an appeal from this order appointing a receiver in the State court where there were at such time receivers of a Federal court in possession of the res.

On the 23d, I believe, of May, 1912, through my attorney, Judge Sachs, we served notices on Mr. Fulton and Kerr & McCord that at 2 o'clock there would be presented for filing before Judge Hanford a petition supported by affidavit, in Peabody, Houghteling & Co. against—or, rather, W. R. Sterling—I think is the title of the case—et al., against the Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co., and the matter was taken up before Judge Hanford at 2 o'clock on the same day and this petition and affidavit presented for leave to file the same. I was not present in court, and all the information I have about it is hearsay from Judge Sachs.

Q. Give the information.—A. Judge Sachs returned to the office and informed me that he had presented this matter to the judge, and he said that he would allow it to be filed. Mr. McCord was present, but Mr. Fulton was not, and Mr. McCord objected to the filing of it. The judge then said that he would look it over—would not allow it to be filed, but would look it over and would act as he saw fit under the circumstances. The judge returned to the office, and about half past 3 he was called on the phone and informed——

Q. (Interrupting.) You mean Judge Sachs?—A. Judge Sachs; and informed that his presence was desired up at the Federal court at half past 4 that same day. He went up at half past 4 and returned and informed me that Judge Hanford refused to allow the petition, and affidavit in support thereof would be filed.

Q. On what ground?—A. On the ground, stated to me by Judge Sachs, that it was too voluminous, and he did not care to encumber the records of his cause with such a voluminous document.

Q. The records of his court?—A. Of his court in this cause.

Q. Is that the paper [handing paper to witness]?—A. It is.

Q. About how many pages are there in it—typewritten?—A. I will have to—they are differently numbered here, different—there is no consecutive numbering.

Q. There are about 50 pages in it—I have counted them—typewritten pages.—A. Also, that Judge Hanford informed Judge Sachs that this was no proper way for this matter to come before him, and that if Mr. Crawford desired to present such facts he had his method by intervening and becoming a party in the cause. That was the report made to me by Judge Sachs. I asked Judge Sachs if he had requested Judge Hanford to sign an order to the effect that he refused to allow this petition, supported by affidavit, to be filed, and we prepared one and Judge Hanford signed it, and that is in the record, I believe, in the case—is an order refusing to allow this to be filed.

Q. All right. The order was filed?—A. The order was filed—signed and filed, which order recites that this petition was presented and he refused to allow it to be filed.

Q. That was on the 23d day of May, as it appears from the order?—A. Yes.

Q. What happened after that?—A. On his return to the office with this information I immediately started to draw up a petition for a mandate—a petition for leave to file a writ of mandamus to compel Judge Hanford to allow this petition to be filed and to take up and consider the matters contained therein. That writ and petition for mandate were drafted and notice served on Judge Hanford that the matter would be presented to the circuit court of appeals at San Francisco on June 3, 1912. On June 3, 1912, the matter was presented to the circuit court of appeals by Judge Sachs, and Judge Hanford was represented by Mr. McCord. The proceedings—of course I was not present and my knowledge of all this is hearsay.

Q. Well, is Mr. Sachs in town? I mean he is not away on a vacation?—A. Yes. No; he is here.

Q. So far as anything that occurred down in San Francisco, we will allow Mr. Sachs to tell that, but did you obtain the mandate that you wished?—A. An order was entered on the 3d day of June which recited, as I recall it——

Q. (Interrupting.) Have you a copy with you?—A. I have not. I have got a copy of the mandate, but I haven't got a copy of the order that was entered on June 3.

Q. I beg your pardon; I thought it was granted. All right; go ahead.—A. The order was, as I recall it, that this matter—that I appeared by counsel and Judge Hanford appeared by counsel, and the matter was heard and submitted for decision to Judges Gilbert, Ross, and Morrow, and would be taken up on the 15th day of July, 1912, at San Francisco. On the 15th day of July the matter was taken up at Frisco and Judge Morrow drafted an order of mandate granting the petition. This is a copy of it, forwarded to Judge Sachs from Mr. Monckton, the clerk of the court [referring to paper].

Q. The original of it seems to be here in the files.—A. Yes.

Q. All right; go ahead.—A. In the meanwhile there became activities in the State court——

Q. (Interrupting.) Well, just a minute. Just for the sake of making the record show it at this time, this mandate seems to be on file here in this cause, and I will read, just for the record, what the mandate was, to see what the end of it was.—A. Did you say for me to read in the record, Mr. McCoy, this——

Q. (Interrupting.) Well, yes; I think so. It is entitled "in the cause" and it is entitled "a writ of mandamus." You might read the whole thing right in here.—A. Eliminating the title of the case?

Q. Eliminating the title; yes.—A. And the greeting, and so forth?

Q. Yes. Will you read it?—A. Yes; I will.

Q. Or if your voice is tired, I will read it.—A. Well, I would rather have you read it. I don't know how long you are going to keep me here. It would save my voice.

Mr. McCoy. (Reading:)

WRIT OF MANDAMUS.

The President of the United States of America, to the Hon. Cornelius H. Hanford, as judge of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, greeting:

Whereas it has been made to appear to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit by the petition of William R. Crawford, filed in the above-entitled matter on the 1st day of June, A. D. 1912, that you, the Hon. Cornelius H. Hanford, as judge as aforesaid refused to make and cause to be made and entered an order in the cause entitled "William R. Sterling, Alexander Smith, Augustus S. Peabody, James L. Houghteling, jr., and Burton Thoms, copartners doing business under the firm name of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., complainants, v. Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Co., a corporation, defendants," No. 2158 in the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, permitting the said William R. Crawford to file in said cause and court a petition asserting that the said district court has no jurisdiction over the said cause; and

Whereas in view of the allegations of the said petition and of the authorities appertaining thereto it was your duty as said judge to make and cause to be made and entered said order:

Therefore, you, the Hon. Cornelius H. Hanford, as judge of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, are hereby directed and commanded forthwith to make and enter said order in said cause permitting said petition to be filed, and that you proceed to consider and determine the said petition. Hereof fail not.

Witness: The Hon. Edward Douglass White, Chief Justice of the United States, and the seal of this, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, in the city of San Francisco, in the State of California, this 15th day of July, A. D. 1912. And bearing the seal of the circuit court and the name of the clerk.

Mr. McCoy. All right, Mr. Crawford, you may go ahead.

A. At the hearing at Frisco, or rather at the time of the decision at Frisco, Judge Morrow delivered an oral opinion, of which we have now no copy, but we understand he is to have a written opinion in the matter, so I can't furnish or we can't furnish the commission any opinion of the decision of the circuit court of appeals in connection with this matter now.

Q. Well, did Mr. Sachs bring this mandate back from San Francisco with him?—A. Oh, no; this mandate was dictated by Judge Morrow himself and was forwarded by the clerk. We got it by mail on Thursday morning.

Q. Of this present week?—A. Of this week, yes.

Q. And what did you do with it?—A. Why, I was going to take up the other case which will come along now, to show what——

Q. (Interrupting.) All right, go ahead.—A. We will get down to them together.

After this matter had been taken up and notice served, as I recall it, on Judge Hanford—I would like to refer to what date—this is the date of the filing in this court of these papers in the removal—I would like to get right that date.

Q. June 3 it appears to be filed.—A. June 3, yes. Well, that was—June 3 was on Monday, wasn't it? Let's see, it was the 1st of June, wasn't it, Fulton, that you served notice on us? Do you recall the date?

Mr. FULTON. No; I don't.

A. Well, about the 1st of June, 1912, we were served with a petition or notice, rather, of an application to the State court to remove the suit which I had instituted against the firm of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., Sterling, and so forth, Peabody, trustee, First Trust & Savings Bank, and the railway company, into the Federal court. This application, as I recall it, was made after we had noticed—as I say, I am not sure of this, as I recall it, not having the dates—was made after we had given notice that we would appear and file or ask leave to file in the Federal court this petition supported by affidavit, calling attention to Judge Hanford of the question of his jurisdiction over the case then pending in his court, instituted by Sterling et al. against the defendant railway company on the 14th of May, and it was after that day that this application made on behalf of Sterling et al., Augustus S. Peabody, trustee, and the First Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago, Ill., represented by Mr. Walter S. Fulton, appeared in the State court with a petition to remove the Crawford case against the same defendants, with the addition of the railway company, into the Federal court. This application was heard and argued and was based upon the ground that the defendant railway company was not an interested party that would be aligned on the side of Peabody, Houghteling & Co., but should be aligned on the side of Crawford, as their interests were similar, and further that there was a separable cause of controversy existing in that case, in which the citizenship was diverse of the parties aligned as plaintiff and defendant, and therefore within the jurisdiction of the Federal court, and the motion to remove should be allowed.

The State court did not consider, after an argument, that it was a case in which there was existing a separable cause of action existing between diverse citizens, and then after that I appeared in the suit, as under the Federal practice a defendant seeking to remove a cause from a State court has a right to file a record of the proceedings that had taken place in the cause in the State court up to the time of the filing in the State court—that is, petition and bond to remove—and thereupon filing that in the Federal court, gives the Federal court jurisdiction of the cause, which jurisdiction the court can sustain by proper writs in case a State court refuses to take cognizance of the fact that there is on file in the Federal court the pleadings on the cause removed. Then I appeared in the proceedings and filed a motion of the Federal court to remand. That motion was argued by Judge Sachs and Mr. Fulton before his honor Judge Rudkin. Last Saturday Judge Rudkin handed down an opinion holding that there was a separable cause of action between diverse citizens, as this was a stockholder's bill, and as a stockholder bringing such a bill I had no right to a personal judgment for $1,000,000.

Then immediately after having received a notice from Judge Sachs that the circuit court of appeals had issued this writ of mandate, I drafted amendments—short amendments—to the original bill in the State court proceedings, which were and are now on file as a bill filed in the Federal court, which exceptions were to strike out the separable cause of action as found to exist by Judge Rudkin.

Q. You don't mean your exceptions; you mean your amendments, don't you?—A. My amendments. I didn't mean exceptions. The exceptions will probably come later. Then that matter was taken up and notice served, yet we don't consider that a notice in the equity practice, under rule 28, is required; but we served a notice on Mr. Fulton and Mr. McCord, saying that we would appear at 2 o'clock on Thursday last—Judge Sachs just having returned on Wednesday night from San Francisco—before his honor Judge Hanford, and would present this motion to be allowed to file these amendments and to thereby amend the bill. We appeared—his honor was not holding court in the court room—we appeared, Judge Sachs and myself and Mr. McCord, before his honor, Judge Hanford, in chambers, and Judge Sachs presented this application or petition or motion to be allowed to amend, and Judge Hanford stated that the matter was—he did not desire to take up the matter at all; that he did not desire to take any action in any of these cases under the present conditions. I asked if that would apply also to the Sterling matter, in which a writ of mandamus had been issued, and he said it would and that we could take those matters up before Judge Cushman.

Q. Did he say whether or not he had this mandamus from the circuit court?—A. Why, no; he did not; but I knew—I had seen it in the clerk's office—I knew it was here.

Q. Has he yet acted on the order of the circuit court?—A. Oh, no; he simply said that he did not care to take up these matters, under the circumstances, and that Judge Cushman would be over here Saturday and that we could take up not only the motion to amend but also this matter of the entering of this petition and affidavit and take up the questions involved in that before Judge Cushman.

Q. Well, what was said there in regard to amending your complaint?—A. Why, Mr. McCord said that he had not had time to look it over, it had just been served on him, and he would like to know that it was so that if necessary he might object and that he didn't think it should be made until he had had a chance; but Judge Hanford stopped, practically stopped, all argument by announcing that he did not care to take the matter up, as this was a case of such a character, and under these conditions he didn't think that he should.

Q. Did you question Mr. McCord's right to object in any way to your filing this; and, if so, on what ground?—A. Why, I object to anybody objecting to the allowance of the amendment of a bill.

Q. Well, Mr. Crawford, the question is, did you at that time object; and, if so, what did you state was the ground for your objection?—A. Why, I simply stated—as I say, there was no extended argument. We fairly did not get into any argument, but I simply made the presentation to the judge that the matter was entirely of course, a motion absolutely of course.

Q. Did you raise the point that Mr. McCord had not filed any answer in the case and therefore had no standing?—A. No. As I say, the matter was in a very short space of time, and, as far as that goes, I think I asked Mr. McCord whether or not he had filed any pleading in the case, and surely, if he had filed no pleading in the case, we had a right to amend our bill, and Mr. McCord said that he did not know whether he had—the record would show what it was; and as I say, the judge stopped all talk or argument and simply refused to take up the matter under the present circumstances.

Q. Well, did the judge take any exception to your saying anything?—A. Well, he didn't think that I should be allowed to present my own case, which he did under a misapprehension, which he apologized to me for by saying that he did not know that I had entered my name as an attorney in proper person on the record and could present my matters under the rules; but I called his attention to that fact, and so he said that under those circumstances it was different.

Q. What is the business of Mr. Parry—I think, W. H. Parry, was it—of whom you spoke?—A. Why, I don't know whether he is now engaged in any business or not. He has not been a well man for the last couple of years.

Q. What is he, a professional man? Is he an attorney or what is he?—A. No; he has been heavily interested here in many matters of public improvement of the city. He has been at the head and front of filling this whole south part of what is known as the tide; he has been practically responsible for that, having devoted a great many years to the efforts to fill all our tide flats here in the southern portion through the Lake Washington Waterway Co. and the Seattle Contract Co., I think, it was originally. I don't know much about it except in a general way.

Q. Who is O. D. Colvin?—A. Why, Mr. Colvin is connected in an official capacity, I believe, with the Seattle Car Manufacturing Co., that has a plant out at Renton.

Q. What railroad experience, if any, if you know, has Mr. Mills?—A. I never knew that he ever had any. He has been an accountant and was the owner or interested in what was called the Western Audit Co.—I think was the name of it—in Chicago, a concern that did public accountant work as certified accountants, went over reports; and about 1908, in the fall, he either sold his interest out or severed his connection to take employment with Peabody, Houghteling & Co. in the same line, namely, going over reports of different companies, as he had done a great deal of their work as a public accountant, and he took up that class of work with Peabody, Houghteling & Co. when he went in with them.

Q. Who, if you know, is the practical man in the management of the road now?—A. Why, I don't know anything about the management of the road. I don't know who is the manager. I don't know who is operating it. I have not been out on that line but once since the 18th day of September, 1911.

Q. Is there anything further that you want to add to your testimony, Mr. Crawford?—A. I don't recall anything.

The CHAIRMAN. Gentlemen, are there any questions you wish to ask Mr. Crawford?

Mr. HUGHES. I have nothing, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there anything more, Mr. Dorr?

Mr. DORR. No.

The CHAIRMAN. A copy of the application for pardon by Mr. P. N. Lathrop, of Salem, Oreg., will go in as a collateral exhibit.

Paper referred to was marked "Exhibit I."

The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Stenographer, I hand you a paper marked "Mass meeting at Dreamland Rink, Seattle, Wash., August 25, 1911, evening," which you will mark as a collateral exhibit.

Paper referred to was marked "Exhibit J."

An adjournment was here taken until 9 o'clock next Monday morning.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

JULY 22, 1912—10.40 A. M.

Continuation of proceedings pursuant to adjournment. All parties present as at former hearing.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order. Gentlemen, some conditions have arisen which make it necessary for us to take a short adjournment or rather a recess at this time. The committee will be in recess until 2 o'clock. All witnesses in attendance will be here promptly at that hour. The committee is now in recess.

Thereupon the committee, at 10.45 o'clock a. m., took a recess until 2 o'clock p. m. the same day.

AFTER RECESS.

2 O'CLOCK P. M.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will please be in order. Gentlemen, owing to the resignation of Judge Hanford these hearings will be discontinued. On behalf of the committee I want to thank the gentlemen who have represented Judge Hanford during those hearings. They have been of immense help to the committee, and the committee appreciates keenly their labors in the matter. I think it would not be regarded as invidious if I would say for the committee that it is particularly under obligations to Mr. Preston for the marvelous work he has done in summarizing the many and very voluminous records which have been before the committee and putting them in such shape that they are easily understood. I think it would not be doing justice to these people who have attended the hearings if I did not also on behalf of the committee express our keen appreciation of their excellent conduct and demeanor. There have been many, many times when the seats were all occupied and the aisles packed and yet there was never the slightest suggestion of disorder. I want to assure you on behalf of the committee that we appreciate it very keenly. And, by way of conclusion, I would add what you doubtless already know, that the duty assigned to this committee was a very delicate and in some sense a very disagreeable duty. But the committee came out here, as the chairman stated at the very outset of these hearings, to perform its duty without fear, favor, or prejudice. We think we have done that.

This concludes the work of the committee here for the present, and the committee now stands adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

Thereupon, at 2.15 o'clock p. m., the committee adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 10, 1912.

I, Robert R. Brott, official stenographer to the above subcommittee, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct transcript of the evidence taken in the investigation of Judge C. H. Hanford by the subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary of the United States House of Representatives, at Seattle, Wash., June 27 to July 22, 1912.

ROBERT R. BROTT.

56249°—H. Rept. 1152, 62-2——93

EXHIBITS.

Exhibit No. 1.

[H. Res. 576, Sixty-second Congress, second session.]

Congress of the United States,
In the House of Representatives,
June 13, 1912.

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be directed to inquire and report whether the action of this House is requisite concerning the official misconduct of Cornelius H. Hanford, United States judge for the western district of the State of Washington, and say whether said judge has been in a drunken condition while presiding in court; whether said judge has been guilty of corrupt conduct in office; whether the administration of said judge has resulted in injury and wrong to litigants in his court and others affected by his decisions; and whether said judge has been guilty of any misbehavior for which he should be impeached.

And in reference to this investigation the said committee is hereby authorized to send for persons and papers, administer oaths, take testimony, employ a clerk and stenographer, if necessary, and to appoint and send a subcommittee whenever and wherever it may be necessary to take testimony for the use of said committee. The said subcommittee while so employed shall have the same powers in respect to obtaining testimony as are herein given to said Committee on the Judiciary, with a sergeant at arms, by himself or deputy, who shall serve the process of said committee and the process and orders of said subcommittee and shall attend the sitting of the same as ordered and as directed thereby, and that the expense of such investigation shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Attest: South Trimble, Clerk.

Exhibit No. 2.

Excerpts from the Minutes of the Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, U. S., Thursday, June 13, 1912.

Mr. Webb offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That James M. Graham, Walter I. McCoy, and Edwin W. Higgins, members of this committee, be appointed the subcommittee by virtue of the authority given under H. Res. 576, passed by the House of Representatives on June 13, 1912, authorizing an inquiry into the alleged misconduct of Cornelius H. Hanford, United States judge for the western district of the State of Washington, and that said subcommittee shall have all the powers authorized by said resolution hereinbefore named."

I hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy taken from the minutes of the Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, United States, for Thursday, June 13, 1912.

J. J. Speight,
Clerk, Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, United States.

District of Columbia:

Personally appeared before me, A. E. S. Gitterman, a notary public in and for said District of Columbia, J. J. Speight, known to me to be the clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, United States, who, being by me duly sworn deposes and says that the above is a true and correct copy taken from the minutes of the Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, United States, for June 13, 1912.

J. J. Speight.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on this the 21st day of June, 1912.

[seal.] A. E. S. Gitterman, Notary Public.

My commission expires May 16, 1916.

EXHIBIT No. 3.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
Seattle, Wash., June 26, 1912.

DEAR SIR: The subcommittee of the Committee of the Judiciary of the House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., will convene to-morrow, June 27, in the court room, Federal Building, in Seattle, for the purpose of taking testimony under House resolution 576, a copy of which is attached hereto. You can, of course, be present at the session of the subcommittee in person and by counsel if you so desire.

Respectfully, yours,

JAMES M. GRAHAM, Chairman.

To the Hon. C. H. HANFORD,
Seattle, Wash.

EXHIBIT No. 4.

Whereas charges have been made in Congress against the personal character and official conduct of Judge C. H. Hanford;

And whereas the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives has been directed to inquire and report whether the action of the House is necessary concerning the same;

And whereas this board believes that the members of this association have the highest respect for Judge Hanford's personal character and the utmost confidence in his integrity;

And whereas this board believes said charges are unfounded in fact and is desirous of lending Judge Hanford such aid and assistance as is in its power in securing a thorough and impartial inquiry on the part of said Committee on the Judiciary of said charges; now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the Board of Trustees of the Seattle Bar Association, That a committee of three members of this association, consisting of E. C. Hughes, Esq., Harold Preston, Esq., and such other person as they may select, be appointed for the purpose of rendering Judge Hanford, professionally, such aid and assistance in the matter of said inquiry as is in their power.

Be it further resolved, That said committee of three be empowered and requested to call to their aid and assistance such other members of this association as in its judgment may be deemed necessary to accomplish said purpose.

A true copy.

IVAN L. HYLAND.
Secretary of Board of Trustees.

EXHIBIT No. 5.

[Presented by Mr. Hughes, etc., attys. (Stamped;) June 27, 1912. Committee on the Judiciary, U. S. House of Representatives.]

United States of America, petitioner, vs. Leonard Olsson, respondent. No. 1688.

PETITION.

To the honorable judges of the above entitled court:

The petition of the United States of America respectfully represents and shows to the court:

I. That the above named respondent, Leonard Olsson, is now a resident of the city of Tacoma, Pierce County, State of Washington.

II. That before the filing of this petition and the commencement of this proceeding an affidavit was made by John Speed Smith, and presented to the United States attorney for the Western District of Washington, showing good cause for the institution of this proceeding, which said affidavit is hereto attached and made a part hereof.

III. That the respondent herein, Leonard Olsson, on the 10th day of January, 1910, obtained an order from the Superior Court of Pierce County, Washington, granting his petition and admitting him to become a citizen of the United States of America, which said petition was filed under the provisions of the act of Congress of June 29, 1906; that pursuant to said order of said court, a certificate of citizenship was issued out of said court and delivered to the said Leonard Olsson, and that since said date the said Leonard Olsson has claimed and now claims to be a citizen of the United States.

IV. That contrary to the provisions of said act of Congress the said Leonard Olsson being the petitioner in the aforesaid proceeding in the said Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for said Pierce County, did, for the purpose of obtaining said certificate of citizenship, wilfully, knowingly, and intentionally represent and state to the court upon the hearing on said petition that he was attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same, whereas in truth and in fact the said petitioner, Leonard Olsson, was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States at the time he represented himself so to be, and was not a person well disposed to the good order and happiness of the United States, and had not been for a period of several years prior to his so testifying at said hearing; that the said petitioner, Leonard Olsson, well knew said testimony and representations to the court to be false and in violation of law, and that the said certificate of citizenship was obtained through fraud and perjury, and thereafter did testify in said Superior Court in Pierce County, Washington, on or about the 12th day of September, 1910, as a witness in the petition of one Carl Olsen for naturalization, that he, the said respondent herein, was not then so attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and had not been for a period of two or three years prior to the date of said last hearing, to-wit: September 12th, 1910.

Wherefore, Your petitioner prays that process issue out of this court in accordance with the law and rules and practices of this court, requiring the said respondent, Leonard Olsson, to be and appear in the above entitled court on a day certain, to-wit: Sixty days after the date of service of such process upon him, exclusive of the day of service, and answer the petition of the petitioner herein, and further prays that the order of the said Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for Pierce County, made on the 10th day of January, 1910, admitting the respondent herein to be a citizen of the United States of America, to be set aside and held for naught, and that the said certificate of citizenship issued out of the said Superior Court of Pierce County, Washington, on the said 10th day of January, 1910, and delivered to the respondent herein, be revoked and cancelled, and that the said Leonard Olsson be restrained and enjoined from using or enjoying the rights and privileges thereunder, and that your petitioner have such other and further relief as to this Honorable Court may seem meet and equitable.

W. G. McLaren,
United States Attorney.

Assistant United States Attorney.

State of Washington, County of King, ss.

Jno. Speed Smith being first duly sworn according to law deposes and says, that he is now and has been for two years last past a duly appointed and acting chief naturalization examiner of the United States for the district of Washington, with headquarters at Seattle, Washington; that the records of the Superior Court of Pierce County, Washington, at Tacoma, show that Leonard Olsson filed petition for naturalization No. 517 in said court on the 27th day of September, 1909, and was admitted to become a citizen of the United States by said court, January 10, 1910, and a certificate of naturalization, No. 117750 issued to him; that said petitioner made oath in said petition for naturalization, No. 517 as follows: "I am attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States;" that said Leonard Olsson appeared as a witness for petitioner for naturalization, Carl Olsen, in said Superior Court of Pierce County, Washington, September 12, 1910, and under oath ,said Leonard Olsson as such witness for Carl Olsen, stated in open court in answer to interrogatories propounded by affiant that he, the said Leonard Olsson, was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States; that he believed in radically changing it; that he had maintained such view for a period of between two and three years and at the time he, the said Leonard Olsson, was admitted to become a citizen of the United States he was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, therefore, affiant believes that the said Leonard Olsson was not a fit subject, at the time of his naturalization, to become a citizen of the United States and was not naturalized in accordance with law.

Jno. Speed Smith.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 21st day of September, 1910.

[seal.]

R. M. Hopkins,
Clerk U. S. Dist. Court, Western Dist. of Washington.

In the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Western Division.

United States of America, plaintiff, vs. Leonard Olsson, defendant. No. 1688.

ANSWER.

Comes now Leonard Olsson, defendant in the above entitled cause, and for his answer to the petition therein alleges:

I. Defendant admits the statements of Paragraph I.

II. Answering Paragraph II of said petition defendant denies that said affidavit shows good cause or any cause for this proceeding.

III. Admits the allegations of Paragraph III.

IV. Admits the allegations of the first part of Paragraph IV, to wit, down to and including the word "same," in the 16th line thereof, excepting that defendant alleges that said proceedings were done in harmony with the provisions of the said act of Congress, and not contrary thereto. And from and including the word "whereas," in said 16th line, defendant denies all the remainder of said paragraph and every allegation thereof.

Wherefore defendant prays that this proceeding be dismissed and that he have an order for the return of his costs expended herein.

J. W. A. NICHOLS,
Attorney for Defendant.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of Pierce, ss.:

Leonard Olsson, duly sworn, deposes and says: That he is the defendant named in the foregoing answer; that he has read the same, knows the statements thereof, and the same are true as he verily believes.

LEONARD OLSSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 7th day of April, 1911.

[SEAL.] J. W. A. NICHOLS.
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Tacoma.

United States District Court, Western District of Washington, Southern Division.

United States of America, petitioner, vs. Leonard Olsson, respondent. No. 1688. Filed May 11, 1912. Suit in equity for annulment of naturalization of an alien. On final hearing.

DECREE FOR THE UNITED STATES.

W. G. McLaren, assistant United States attorney; J. W. A. Nichols, for respondent.

Hanford, district judge:

This suit is prosecuted by the United States district attorney for this district, pursuant to the 15th section of the naturalization law of June 29, 1906 (34 U. S. Stat. 596); U. S. Compiled Laws Supp. 1907 (p. 419); F. S. A. Supp. 1909 (p. 365); Pierce's Fed. Code (sec. 8292), to obtain a decree setting aside and canceling a certificate of naturalization alleged to have been fraudulently obtained by the respondent. The grounds for the suit as set forth in the Government's petition are that the respondent on the 10th day of January, 1910, obtained an order from the Superior Court of Pierce County, Washington, admitting him to become a citizen of the United States of America, and that a certificate of citizenship was issued out of said court and delivered to him, and that since said date he has claimed and now claims to be a citizen of the United States; that for the purpose of obtaining said certificate of citizenship the respondent intentionally represented to the court on the hearing of his application that: "He was attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same." Those averments and the jurisdictional facts set forth in the petition are admitted by the respondent's answer; he makes an issue, however, by denying the charge contained in the petition that the representations which he made to the court respecting his attitude toward the Constitution and Government of the United States were and are contrary to the truth.

On the trial of the case the respondent appeared in person and by an attorney, and after the introduction of evidence on the part of the Government tending to prove that he is now and was at and previous to the time of being admitted to be a citizen of the United States opposed to the form of government of this country and to the principles of the Constitution, he offered rebutting evidence and gave testimony in his own behalf, which in the opinion of the court materially aided the Government's case. Answering direct interrogatories propounded by his own attorney, he denied that he is an anarchist; denied that he is opposed to organized government, and denied that he is in favor of overthrowing this Government by force or violence, but omitted to make any declaration affirming his loyalty to the Constitution of the United States, and, on the contrary, when tested by cross-examination his answers to all questions respecting his attachment to the Constitution of the United States were evasive. He admitted that he is a socialist and frequenter of assemblages of socialists, in which he participates as a speaker, advocating a propaganda for radical changes in the institutions of the country. He claimed to have a clear understanding of the Constitution of the United States and knew that by one of its articles deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law is forbidden, and yet the evidence introduced in his behalf proved that the party with which he is affiliated and whose principles he advocates has for its main object the complete elimination of property rights in this country. He expressed himself as being willing for people to retain their money, but insisting that all the land, buildings, and industrial institutions should become the common property of all the people, which object is to be attained, according to his belief, by use of the power of the ballot, and when that object shall have been attained the political government of the country will be entirely abrogated, because there will be no use for it. And he further admitted that his beliefs on these subjects were entertained by him at and previous to the date of the proceedings in the Superior Court admitting him to become a citizen of the United States.

In order to procure a certificate of naturalization, the respondent was required to comply with the provisions of the statute above cited, which is mandatory and stringent in prescribing the necessary qualifications of aliens to become citizens of the United States, and in limiting the power of the courts in naturalization proceedings. The 4th section of the act requires, among other things, that each applicant shall make and file a petition in writing setting forth that he is not a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government, or a member of or affiliated with any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in, or opposed to, organized government; and that he shall, before he is admitted to citizenship, declare on oath in open court that he will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and bear true faith and allegiance to the same; and provides further that it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court admitting an alien to citizenship, that he is attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same. The 7th section of the act provides:

"That no persons who disbelieves in, or who is opposed to organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining and teaching such disbelief in, or opposition to organized government, * * * shall be naturalized or made a citizen of the United States."

The 15th section makes it the duty of United States district attorneys upon affidavit showing good cause therefor, to institute proceedings in any court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens in the judicial district in which the naturalized citizen may reside at the time of bringing the suit, for the purpose of setting aside and cancelling the certificate of citizenship on the ground of fraud, or on the ground that such certificate of citizenship was illegally procured; and provides further that the court shall make an order cancelling any certificate of citizenship fraudulently or illegally procured. The 23rd section provides:

"That any person who knowingly procures naturalization in violation of the provisions of this act shall be fined not more than $5,000, or shall be imprisoned not more than five years, or both, and upon conviction the court in which such conviction is had shall thereupon adjudge and declare the final order admitting such person to citizenship void. Jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the courts having jurisdiction of the trial of such offense to make such adjudication."

The people of this country ordained the Constitution of the United States to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to themselves and their posterity, and thereby established a national government, to endure permanently. The notion that citizens of this country may absolve themselves from allegiance to the Constitution of the United States, otherwise than by expatriation, is a dangerous heresy. The nation generously and cordially admits to its citizenship aliens having the qualifications prescribed by law, but recognizing the principle of natural law, called the law of self-preservation, it restricts the privilege of becoming naturalized to those whose sentiments are compatible with genuine allegiance to the existing government as defined by the oath which they are required to take. Those who believe in and propagate crude theories hostile to the Constitution are barred.

The evidence in this case including the respondent's admissions above recited do not have to be analyzed, interpreted or weighed in order to determine any doubtful question as to his attitude. He has no reverence for the Constitution of the United States, nor intention to support and defend it against its enemies and he is not well disposed toward the peace and tranquillity of the people. His propaganda is to create turmoil and to end in chaos. But in order to secure a certificate of naturalization he intentionally made representations to the court which necessarily deceived the court, or his application for naturalization would have been denied. Therefore, by the petition which he was required to file and his testimony at the final hearing of his application and by taking the oath which was administered to him in open court, he perpetrated a fraud upon the United States and committed an offense for which he may be punished as provided by law. The case, therefore, comes clearly within the provisions of the law requiring the court to set aside and cancel his certificate of naturalization, and it will be so decreed.

C. H. HANFORD,
United States District Judge.

United States District Court, Western District of Washington, Southern Division.

United States of America, petitioner, vs. Leonard Olsson, respondent. No. 1688.

DECREE.

This matter came regularly on for hearing upon the petition of the United States of America, seeking to vacate and set aside the order of the superior court of the State of Washington in and for Pierce County, made on the 10th day of January, 1910, admitting the respondent herein, Leonard Olsson, to become a citizen of the United States of America, and to revoke and cancel the certificate of citizenship issued out of said superior court of Pierce County, Washington, to the respondent herein, the petitioner appearing by W. G. McLaren, United States attorney for said district, and the respondent, Leonard Olsson appearing in person and by J. W. A. Nichols, his attorney, and the court having heard the evidence submitted by the respective parties, and the argument of counsel herein, it appearing to the court that the said respondent was naturalized by an order of the superior court of the State of Washington, in and for Pierce County, on the 10th day of January, 1910, and that said certificate of citizenship issued out of said superior court and delivered to said respondent was illegally and fraudulently procured by him, in this, that the said respondent at the time of making application for his said naturalization papers, and at the time of receiving the same from said superior court, represented himself to be attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; whereas said respondent was not so attached and so disposed as he represented himself to be, and is not now attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, or well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; and it appearing to the court that good cause exist why the order of said superior court granting said certificate of citizenship be vacated and set aside;

It is therefore hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That the order of the superior court of the State of Washington, in and for Pierce County, made on the 10th day of January, 1910, admitting the respondent herein, Leonard Olsson, to become a citizen of the United States of America, be and the same hereby is set aside and vacated, and the certificate of citizenship issued out of said court and delivered to said respondent be and the same hereby is revoked and cancelled.

It is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed, That said respondent, Leonard Olsson, be, and he hereby is required to deliver up said certificate of citizenship to the chief naturalization examiner of the district of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana, at Seattle, Washington, or to the clerk of this court.

It is further ordered, That the clerk of this court send a certified copy of this judgment to the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization, at Washington, D. C., and a copy to the clerk of the superior court of Pierce County, at Tacoma, Washington.

Done in open court this 22nd day of May, 1912.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

In the United States District Court in and for the Western District of Washington, Western Division.

United States of America, petitioner, vs. Leonard Olsson, respondent. No. 1688.

PROCEEDINGS ON PETITION FOR NEW TRIAL AND REHEARING.

Be it remembered, that at this time, to-wit, the 19th day of June, 1912, the above entitled cause coming regularly on for hearing before the Honorable C. H. Hanford, Presiding Judge, on the petition for new trial and rehearing herein, and the United States being represented by Honorable W. G. McLaren, United States attorney, and the respondent being present in person and represented by his attorneys, J. W. A. Nichols, Esq., J. H. Easterday, Esq., George M. McKay, Esq., and R. Winsor, Esq., and Honorable G. D. Emery, amicus curiae, being present, the following proceedings were had and done:

The COURT. The case in hearing to-day is the United States of America against Leonard Olsson, petition for a new trial.

PETITION IN INTERVENTION.

Mr. ENSLOW. If your honor please, will you entertain at this time a petition in intervention in this case of the United States against Olsson? I have the petition here in words as follows:

"Comes now Charles A. Enslow and represents to the court that he is a citizen of the United States over 21 years of age; that he is a party in interest in the above entitled case in that he has vested interest in the same as a citizen of the United States, and entitled to all the rights, privileges, and immunities of a citizen; that his said interest is jeopardised by certain acts done or threatened to be done in connection with this case; that his interests are such as to be properly cognizable by and within the jurisdiction of this court, and that he has no other remedy at law or in equity. Wherefore he prays the order of the court joining him as a party plaintiff in the above entitled case."

The COURT. You may file the petition subject to any motion that may be made by either party to contest it or strike it.

Mr. NICHOLS. If the court please, the defendants in this case have not been served with any notice of any intention to ask leave to intervene. We know nothing of the grounds upon which the petition is based. Under those circumstances it makes it a little difficult to know now just how to proceed, after leave has been granted to file the petition.

This matter comes on to-day for hearing before your honor on the petition of the defendant here asking for alternative relief; the first relief asked is that the case be reconsidered by your honor upon the merits, and if upon such reconsideration it should appear that the defendant is entitled to the first relief asked, it will be that he have judgment, and that the petition filed against him be dismissed, and that in the event your honor should not think, upon reconsideration, that the defendant was entitled to that relief, then we ask that your honor grant a rehearing in this case for the purpose of enabling the defendants to complete a record. Upon the first hearing of this case no evidence was transcribed and there is no evidence in the record at this time except such facts as are shown in your honor's opinion, which is on file in this case; and in order that a record may be made which a court of review should take into consideration if the first relief asked should be denied by your honor, then we ask that this secondary relief be granted for that purpose. Argument upon the matter so far as the first relief is concerned would depend upon the memory of your honor and of counsel as to the evidence which transpired upon the former hearing, and we feel that it would not be right for us to urge that matter unless we got an expression from your honor that you would at least be willing to hear us upon that branch of the case. If your honor is willing to take that matter up, the argument upon that branch of the case would devolve upon myself, as I was the only counsel present for defendant at that time. If your honor were not willing or should feel unwilling to hear a review upon the merits, based upon the merits, then the other relief asked will depend upon matters of law which Mr. McKay of Seattle would present to your honor upon what we consider to be the law of the case as outlined by other decisions of the Federal courts in similar cases.

This petition in intervention has been allowed to be filed, and I hardly know how we ought to proceed without some suggestion from your honor. We would not want to proceed with the argument now upon the merits subject to be again taken up at some future time by the intervener. If your honor should think it proper to hear this intervener it might be well to adjourn this hearing to some other time when all parties could be here, but it does not seem to me to be justice to the defendant or good procedure to hear the case piecemeal. This argument is now upon the merits. If your honor should see fit to hear that part of the case now, and intervener's argument at some later date, the defendant may find it necessary to reargue the case. I think I would like to ask an expression from your honor as to the procedure at this time.

The COURT. Well, I will give it to you. It is always a condition of allowing a new party to intervene voluntarily in pending litigation that it should not delay the proceedings, and I would not postpone this hearing to give an intervener time and opportunity to make new issues. As I understand the present situation of the case new issues cannot be injected now.

As to your first suggestion, I will answer that about the same way I answered Mr. Enslow. I allowed him to file his intervention subject to any attack that might be made upon it. If you want to argue for a rehearing in this case on the merits, I certainly am not going to refuse to hear you before I decide against you. This court has never yet decided a case against a party without hearing him.

Mr. NICHOLS. I am satisfied your honor would not. Shall I proceed now?

Mr. ENSLOW. May I ask your honor a question at this time, whether or not under the ruling of the court I in propria persona may represent my interest at this time, that is in the matter of such argument as I may feel called upon to make to the court.

The COURT. Well I will make this intimation now. It has been suggested to me that as the case has attracted attention the issue in it is one of real importance to the whole people of the country, that other lawyers than those that have been engaged in the case wish to appear amicus curiae and argue the case. If that is true, if there is anyone present that has come here expecting to make that offer, I will allow them to be heard, but you must select someone to make the argument; I will allow only one to be heard.

Mr. EMERY. If your honor please I came here for that purpose and I would like at this time to ask your leave to appear as amicus curiae in this matter.

The COURT. Can you arrange with Mr. Enslow.

Mr. ENSLOW. The matter has already been arranged so far as I am concerned. I had no intimation that Judge Emery was here for that purpose, and I am entirely agreeable, and I will therefore not intrude myself upon the court and members of the bar present. I will leave it to Judge Emery entirely, not withdrawing, however, my petition in intervention.

United States District Court, Western District of Washington, Southern Division.

United States of America, petitioner, v. Leonard Olsson, respondent. No. 1688.

PETITION FOR NEW TRIAL AND REHEARING.

The above-named respondent asks that the judgment or decree heretofore entered in this case be set aside, and the cause dismissed, or if not dismissed that the respondent be granted a rehearing and a new trial for the following reasons, to wit:

I. There was no evidence produced on the trial of said cause that the respondent was an anarchist or a polygamist or that he was a disbeliever in, or was opposed to organized government or a member of, or affiliated with, any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in organized government, or that he is not or was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same.

II. The evidence produced on the trial of said cause that the respondent is and was a Socialist and a member of the Socialist Labor Party, does not prove that he is an anarchist or that he is opposed to organized government for the reason that Socialists, including the respondent, believe in a highly organized form of government, not in the abolition or destruction of government, nor do Socialists teach or believe in the change of constitutions or forms of government by force; the testimony showed and the respondent reaffirms that he is now and at all times has been in favor of organized government and that his purpose is and was to support the Constitution and laws of the United States.

III. That Socialists do not believe in or teach, nor does the respondent believe that any man's life, liberty, or property should be taken without due process of law. They teach and believe and the respondent believes that the instrumentalities of production should be owned collectively and that exploitation of the laborer should cease, and that he should receive the full product of his labor. But Socialists do not teach and the respondent does not believe that these instrumentalities of production can be acquired except by due process of law, and on condition that compensation be made on their acquisition.

IV. That no evidence was produced on the trial of this cause that the respondent is not or was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States. Proof that he is and was in favor of changes in that Constitution does not disprove his devotion to the Constitution, for the Constitution itself provides for its amendment, and even radical changes and amendments are entirely within the constitutional right of the people, and it is the political right of every citizen to advocate such changes, even though such advocacy may create political disquiet. The "peace" which the Constitution was designed to secure was not the peace which prevails where political discussion is absent.

V. That on the trial of this action no record was made or kept of the testimony; and no statement of a case embodying the testimony, or bill of exceptions can be settled, except on the memory of counsel and the court as to the testimony, which might involve counsel for the respondent in an unseemly controversy with the court as to such testimony.

VI. The court erred in its opinion in this action in the following particulars:

1. In holding that on the trial the respondent was required "to make any declaration affirming his loyalty to the Constitution of the United States."

2. In holding that "his answers to all questions reepscting his attachment to the Constitution of the United States were evasive." His answers were not evasive, but if they were, that such evasiveness was no ground for setting aside and annulling his naturalization.

3. In holding that it is a legal ground for annulling his naturalization because "he is a Socialist and a frequenter of assemblages of Socialists in which he participates as a speaker advocating a propaganda for radical changes in the institutions of the country."

4. In holding that the Socialist party or organization "has for its object the complete elimination of property rights in this country."

There was no proof that it ever was or now is the purpose of the respondent or any organization or party to which he belongs to eliminate property rights in this country, or detract in any degree from the sacredness of property rights. The Socialist believes in the sacredness of private property.

5. In holding that it is ground for annulling the respondent's naturalization because he believes that an industrial organization of the State and Nation should displace the present political organization. Every citizen worthy of the name is seeking by some means or in some way to change the political government of this country. An industrial organization of the Government would be a beneficial change.

6. In holding that it was the purpose of the people of the United States, in adopting the Constitution, to "establish a National Government to endure permanently." The people who adopted the Constitution made a clear distinction between the people or the Nation on the one hand and the Government on the other; the Nation or the people was the principal, the Government a mere agency of the people; they believed that all Governments derive "their just power from the consent of the governed," and that "it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it (the Government) and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers on such form as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness." The only permanent and enduring principle recognized in the Constitution is the right of the people to govern themselves and to make and unmake constitutions and forms of government, and it is a dangerous heresy to hold that any part of the Constitution is beyond the power of the people to annul or repeal.

7. In holding that the United States has restricted "the privilege of becoming naturalized to those whose sentiments are compatible with genuine allegiance to the existing Government." The restrictions on naturalization are well defined by law and the applicant for naturalization is not required to possess a sentiment of devotion "to the existing Government." Such a doctrine would compel him to refrain from an agitation for the most necessary amendment. Such a doctrine would have compelled every naturalized citizen to oppose the fifteen amendments to the Constitution, one of which (the fourteenth) was cited and emphasized by the court.

8. In holding that "those who believe in and propagate crude theories hostile to the Constitution are barred" from naturalization. The law defines the only crude theories which shall bar a foreigner from naturalization; they are opposition to organized government. Besides who is to be the judge whether the theories are crude or hostile to the Constitution? Again, is a wish to change some provision of the Constitution hostility to the Constitution?

9. In holding that it was necessary to his naturalization that the respondent should have a "reverence for the Constitution of the United States."

No such restriction is written into or implied in the law. Such reverence is incompatible with the critical spirit necessary to the securing of much needed changes in that instrument.

10. In holding that it was necessary to his naturalization that he have an "intention to support and defend it (the Constitution) against its enemies." No such restriction exists by law and the court possesses no power to add one word to the written law on the subject. One who merely believes in changing the Constitution is not its enemy; if so, the Constitution has more enemies than friends.

11. In holding that "he is not well di-posed toward the peace and tranquillity of the people. His propaganda is to create turmoil and to end in chaos."

This imposed on the respondent an extra legal condition and required of him by the decree what the law does not require. The judgment of the court should be the voice of the law.

12. In eliciting and considering over the objection of respondent's counsel and rendering judgment upon evidence upon irrelevant and immaterial matters, viz, the political beliefs and doctrines of the respondent when the only issue was the question of fraud in obtaining his naturalization certificate.

This application is based on the records and files in this action and on this petition.

LEONARD OLSSON, Petitioner.

J. W. A. NICHOLS,
GEO. MCKAY,
R. WINSOR,
J. H. EASTERDAY,
Attorneys for said Petitioner.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, King County, ss:

Leonard Olsson, being duly sworn, says he is the respondent in the foregoing action; that he has read the same, knows the contents thereof, and that the statements of facts therein made are true; that he has fully and freely stated the facts of this cause to his attorney and counsel herein, J. W. A. Nichols, of Tacoma, and who, after such statement as aforesaid, advises him that he has a good and meritorious defense on the merits.

LEONARD OLSSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 7th day of June, 1912.

J. W. A. NICHOLS,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Tacoma.

We, the undersigned counsel for the respondent, hereby certify that we have examined the foregoing petition and that in our opinion the same is meritorious and well founded in law.

J. W. A. NICHOLS.
GEO. MCKAY.
R. WINSOR.
J. H. EASTERDAY.

United States District Court, Western District of Washington, Southern Division.

United States of America, plaintiff, vs. Leonard Olsson, defendant. No. 1688.

MOTION OF PLAINTIFF TO VACATE JUDGMENT.

Comes now the plaintiff by W. G. McLaren, United States attorney, and by direction of the Attorney General, respectfully moves and petitions the court to vacate and set aside the judgment heretofore rendered by it in the above-entitled cause on the 22d day of May, 1912, in order that a retrial may be had of the issues herein.

W. G. MCLAREN,
United States Attorney.

ARGUMENT BY MR. M'KAY.

Mr. MCKAY. If the court please, what I have to say relates entirely to the matter of procedure, and I will have nothing to say if your honor grants this motion.

Mr. MCKAY. Perhaps you did not hear. I say what I have to say relates entirely to a matter of procedure and placing the record so that an appeal may be taken and the case may be heard by the appellate court the same as your honor heard it. If your honor grants this motion I have nothing to say, and if your honor refuses it I have a suggestion to make so that an appeal can be heard in the way this case was heard.

The COURT. As far as the argument is concerned, I think it would be best that the whole field should be covered before any response should be made to the argument, and counsel for the petitioner or counsel for the Government, in behalf of the last motion, have the concluding argument. So I think you had better present your views now before I hear either Judge Emery or Mr. McLaren.

Mr. MCKAY. All I have to say relates to the condition of the record and to the argument in this case. The petition is filed under a special statute, section 15 of the naturalization act. That statute does not give any name to this procedure. It does not make it a matter at law; it does not make it a matter of equity; it does not name it or make it a special proceeding. Now, in looking back through the history of the country—judicial history of the country—I find, in two other cases before this statute was enacted, that the United States Government had filed a bill in equity in its own name against the grantee of this franchise to vote, and its asks the annulment on this proceeding admitting him to citizenship, and those cases were suits in equity, were brought in the name of the United States, and regular bills were filed, regular subpœnas issued, and regular replications filed and testimony taken in some of them in the ordinary way, and the question came before the court as to the jurisdiction of the court.

Thereupon counsel proceeded with his argument—(1) to the effect that this is an equity proceeding. (U. S. v. Norsch, 42 Fed., 418; U. S. v. Gleason, 90 Fed., 778.)

ARGUMENT OF MR. NICHOLS.

Mr. NICHOLS. If the court please, this is a petition for rehearing; I do not know whether your honor has read it or not.

The COURT. No, I have not.

Mr. NICHOLS. Then I will read it in portions so as to give your honor at least an outline of the grounds upon which the petition is based.

Now, in proceeding upon this branch of the matter before the court for hearing, I shall have to rely, of course, upon your honor's remembrance of the testimony, and my own remembrance of it so far as I am able to remember it, and that part of your honor's opinion filed in this case, which to some extent sets out portions of the testimony, and it is to that part of the case particularly that I desire to call your honor's attention.

I am not disposed to take exception to the order of this court or to the attitude taken by this court in safeguarding the government of our Nation. I am not among that class of persons who criticize the courts for their decisions. I am among that class of attorneys who believe that when the court has inadvertently erred it is the duty of counsel, not only to himself and to his client but to the court also, to advance his belief upon that matter, and if it shall appear upon the argument that he is correct and inadvertent error has been entered into, I am one of those who believe our courts will correct their errors; and that is the spirit in which we come to this court at the present time. It is not with a spirit of adverse criticism; it is not in the spirit that we have been supposed to possess by the reports that have gone abroad regarding this case. I would not have referred to that matter had not your honor referred to the wide extent to which this case has been published. It is our intention to call your honor's attention to what we believe to be an inadvertent error. It is a duty we owe to our client, and as I said to the court itself, and in that spirit it is our duty to call your honor's attention to some of the expressions which your honor used in the opinion filed in this case, which I think indicate that the court has inadvertently gotten into an error in this case, and to ask your honor's consideration with me as to whether my view of that matter is correct or whether it is the court's.

Your honor's opinion, after setting forth the nature of the suit and the parties, and purpose of the suit, and the relief sought, proceeds on the second page with this language:

"On the trial of the case respondent appeared in person and by an attorney, and after the introduction of evidence on the part of the Government tending to prove that he is now and was at and previous to the time of being admitted to be a citizen of the United States opposed to the form of government of this country, and to the principles of the Constitution, he offered rebutting evidence and gave testimony in his own behalf, which in the opinion of the court materially aided the Government's case. Answering direct interrogatories propounded by his own attorney he denied that he was an anarchist."

Of course that part of the facts, as shown by the evidence and as recited by your honor here, instead of being a foundation for annuling his citizenship certificate, would be in support of granting the certificate, because the statute requires he should not be an anarchist.

"Denied that he is opposed to organized government, and denied that he is in favor of overthrowing this Government by force or violence."

Of course these matters are set forth by your honor for the purpose of laying a foundation for the decree. The following sentence comes after that, "But omitted to make any declaration affirming his loyalty to the Constitution of the United States." To that part of it I desire to give the view I take of that matter for your honor's analysis. As counsel for the defendant I do not quite see the necessity for expression at that time declaring or affirming his loyalty to the Constitution of the United States, because I did not then understand and do not now understand that the defendant at that time was being heard upon examination as to his qualifications for citizenship. The issue at that time was whether or not he had perpetrated a fraud upon the superior court of the State of Washington in obtaining his citizenship papers. If he had been then on trial upon examination as to his qualifications for citizenship, it would have been his duty to affirm his loyalty to the Constitution of the United States, to make declaration to that effect, and doubtless, when he was on examination before the superior court he did make such declaration; in fact, I think later on in your honor's opinion it is so found he did. On the trial here, however, for having perpetrated a fraud, instead of being reexamined as to his qualifications, my understanding was, and is now, that the issue should be confined entirely to the question of fraud, and not the question as to his qualifications, and hence I did not bring that out. I think inadvertently your honor fell into an error there in not holding strictly to the issues. I think if this had been a case on trial before a jury in which the question had been asked as to his loyalty to the Constitution, and objection offered to the question on the ground of irrelevancy, your honor certainly must have sustained the objection on the ground that was not the issue being tried. I think that would have been an error to have introduced such evidence before a jury. It certainly is an inadvertent error, in your honor's opinion, upon which to base the conclusion which your honor has reached in this case.

"Omitted to make any declaration affirming his loyalty to the Constitution of the United States, and on the contrary when tested by cross-examination his answers to all questions respecting his attachment to the Constitution of the United States were evasive."

Your honor, of course, in this statement, if I might so refer to it, in the statement of fact or in the recital of the facts upon which your honor's conclusion later on expressed, is founded, gives here a conclusion as to the wintess's testimony, instead of stating the substance of the testimony, It seems to me if your honor had had the time and if the idea had occurred to your honor in writing the opinion to have given the substance of the tesimony as your honor did above in the previous statement, instead of putting down merely the statement here that his answers were evasive, so as to have shown in what way they were evasive.

"He admitted that he is a Socialist and frequenter of assemblages of Socialists in which he participates as a speaker advocating a propaganda for radical changes in the institutions of the country."

I think it is error for your honor to base judgment here canceling the certificate of citizenship upon the fact that this man belongs to or failed to belong to any political party. Socialists, I think, are recognized not only in this country but in other countries as a political party. In some States of our Union they have been so considered as a political party, so recognized and treated, candidates elected, even seated in the legislative bodies of our States and in the legislative body of the United States. To say, therefore, that belonging to a party which is recognized, which elects officers, and whose officers are now holding office, to say that in this State we must take up the position of saying that to belong to that party, so recognized by other States and so recognized by the United States Government, should be considered in a declaration for citizenship and as a reason for canceling his certificate of citizenship, seems to me must have been inadvertent error on your honor's part. That is not, in my opinion, the ground upon which your honor's conclusion should have been based, a sufficient ground upon which that conclusion may be reached. While I do not wish to argue further upon that matter, I think it is an important point in this case. I want your honor if you shall be pleased to do so, to consider fully that States of this Union can not be put in a position where they shall be antagonistic to one another; the civil rights of a man in one State can not be held in another State to disqualify him from citizenship. The fact that a man has some crude belief in which he thinks the public should have a community interest in various forms of property does not mean that he has beliefs which are so hostile to the Government of the United States or to our institutions as to deny him the rights of citizenship or to take from him the right of every subject, the right to advocate those doctrines and try to get to himself others of the same belief.

Now your honor proceeded with another statement of evidence there in this language: "Claimed to have a clear understanding of the Constitution of the United States, and knew that by one of its articles deprivation of life, liberty, or property without due process of law is forbidden, and yet the evidence introduced in his behalf to prove that the party with which he is affiliated and whose principles he advocates, has for its main object the complete elimination of property rights in this country."

That statement by your honor as a basis for the conclusion later reached, it seems to me, is error in two particulars. In the first place, I think your honor's memory must be at fault as to the evidence; if not, mine is greatly at fault. I do not think the evidence established the fact that the Socialist Party or Socialist-Labor Party advocates the entire elimination of property rights in this country, and in the second place I do not think the Socialist party or its beliefs or docrtines was on trial here under the issues in this case. I think the evidence as to the objects of the Socialist party would have been ruled out by your honor as wholly immaterial, and therefore could not have formed a basis for your honor's judgment in this case, even if such evidence were introduced and were of the character which the language of your honor, as used here, would indicate.

The COURT. It may be mentioned, and right there in line with your statement, that Mr. McLaren did offer some literature of a character I presume to show the doctrines and beliefs of Socialists. The court rejected them.

Mr. NICHOLS. I think that is correct, and as I remember it in that connection Mr. Olsson offered some papers which he stated contained the principles and platform of the Socialist Party and Socialist Labor Party with the idea of showing your honor a distinction, which also your honor rejected, and I think correctly.

Then your honor proceeds with a recital of facts here. "He expresssed himself as being willing for people to retain their money, but insisting that all the land, buildings, and industrial institutions should become the common property of all the people, which object is to be attained, according to his belief, by use of the power of the ballot."

In that particular recital of the facts I think your honor is correct. The error which I would call your honor's attention to occurs to me would be in basing the judgment which your honor has reached upon that fact. The fact a man may believe in the power of the people through the ballot changing the rights of holding property seems not to me to be a ground for annuling his citizenship. The rights under which we hold property are very often changed by the legislature of the State.

The COURT. You are making the mistake that most of the newspapers have made by putting a period where I put a comma.

Mr. NICHOLS. Let me read that again. I do not wish to in anywise misstate your honor. The language used by your honor in this statement, and I know that your honor will not put me in the same catagory with the newspapers because I never yet have expressed an opinion of this court or any court of the United States or of this State such as have been expressed by the newspapers unfortunately while this case has been pending. I do not take second place to any lawyer at the bar in my respect to the court, and I think my record during the last twenty years I have been practicing in this city will bear me out fully in the assertion, and it is with the highest respect to this court I come now asking for the review of this court.

The COURT. I do not want you to understand my remarks implied a censure to you. As we go along we want to avoid some of the mistakes that other people make. Let's meet this matter fair and in its true light.

Mr. NICHOLS. That is the common desire of myself with your honor. The language used then is, "But insisting that all the land, buildings, and industrial institutions should become the property of the people, which object is to be attained, according to his belief, by the use of the power of the ballot, and when that object shall have been attained the political government of the country will be entirely abrogated because there will be no use for it."

The COURT. You will observe that there is a comma after the word "ballot."

Mr. NICHOLS. That is true. I did not at first read to the end of the sentence as I have done now. However, I do not see how that changes the evidence as therein stated by your honor so as to give it sufficient basis for the conclusion later reached. It simply shows that the defendant's beliefs as to property rights are what we would all consider to be very crude, or at least what I consider to be in my private belief very crude. I, however, concede to the defendant the right to entertain any beliefs which he may have so long as he only undertakes to promulgate those beliefs and to get proselytes to those beliefs by fair means. He may be a crazy man, but being crazy does not form a basis for depriving him of citizenship. I think that the language which the defendant used in that case would not justify your honor's opinion here as stated in this case. I think that his theories in regard to property rights may possibly be crude theories. I do not care to argue that point. I wish to ask your honor's judgment about that point, as to whether or not it is a sufficient basis for the judgment canceling his citizenship papers.

Now proceeding: "And he further admitted that his beliefs on these subjects were entertained by him at and previous to the date of the proceedings in the superior court admitting him to become a citizen of the United States." Possibly that might have been a subject which the superior judge might have considered when Mr. Olsson was on examination before him for the purpose of obtaining citizenship papers, and which possibly may have been a subject which the superior court in its discretion might have deemed sufficient for rejecting citizenship to Mr. Olsson at that time, but that was a question for the court to pass upon in rendering its decree and judgment. If it was a proper matter for trial it was a matter for trial then, and it was then determined by the court, because it is a familiar principle of law which I think will be conceded that all things which might have been tried in the hearing of a case upon trial are considered to have been tried and adjudicated by the court when it renders its decree. The matter can not again be opened up and gone into for new trial and for reexamination as to the rights of that man to obtain his citizenship papers. The only question upon which he may again be brought to trial is, as suggested a little while ago, whether the decision in the superior court was obtained, not erroneously, not by inadvertence in not considering matters that might have been considered at that time, but whether the court was purposely deceived. Those are the questions, and the only ones, it seems to me which were on trial here at that time. Hence his expressions as to his beliefs in property rights and so forth are immaterial matters.

Now, your honor, in the further part of the opinion sets out some sections of the law. It is not necessary to read that, and the purpose of the law, and what the object to be attained is, and after setting out those matters in your honor's opinion, your honor proceeded at the bottom of page four in this language:

"The evidence in this case, including the respondent's admission above recited, do not have to be analyzed, interpreted, or weighed in order to determine any doubtful question as to his attitude. He has no reverence for the Constitution of the United States."

I shall take these conclusions up separately instead of combining them together, for the purpose, as it occurs to me, of better analyzing the position necessary to be taken in this case. Your honor says the defendant here has no reverence for the Constitution of the United States. It seems to me your honor certainly must have used the word "reverence" there inadvertently, and I am willing to think your honor meant respect instead of reverence. A person who has no respect for the Constitution of the United States would certainly be in a position to make his application for citizenship at least very doubtful, if it were an original inquiry before this court. I should say if I were a judge upon the bench that a man who had no respect for the Constitution of the United States would not be entitled to citizenship. Certainly we all know that the Constitution of the United States is entitled to the highest respect, and not only do the United States receive that respect, not only from our own citizens, but from all the greatest men of the world. The statesmen of Europe have expressed opinions which would not be hard to find in which they say that the Constitution of the United States is one of the greatest documents that has ever been promulgated. We are all willing to admit that, and I take that position myself, but if it comes down to the statement here, the recital of fact in your honor's ruling, then I should have to write another word there, and not that word reverence, because no citizen of the United States, I dare say in this court before your honor, who is worthy of that honor of being a citizen of the United States, will have reverence for any instrument or any work of man's hands. The word is too broad. The men who framed the instrument themselves were not entitled to reverence and certainly the work of their hands would not be entitled to reverence. The American citizen is a king. The American citizen stands on a plane higher than any king in Europe or any king of the Old World. The American citizen has a higher title of honor than any title of nobility held by any men in any country on earth, and a man holding that position, a citizen of the United States, would not have reverence for the work of any man's hands. It is impossible. Reverence is not the word to use there, and it is not the proper basis, in my opinion, for the cancellation of a man's citizenship. I think as I said before your honor must have used that word inadvertently. Whether or not that is so is for you to say. If it is not used inadvertently I think your honor has inadvertently fallen into an error, and it should be considered.

"He has no reverence for the Constitution of the United States, nor intention to support and defend it against its enemies, and he is not well disposed towards the peace and tranquillity of the people." Now, if that were a fact instead of a conclusion, if the defendant did testify to those things, or if there were evidence before your honor which would force that conclusion which your honor has recited there, then I would be almost willing to concede and confess that I think Olsson, as I said before, was not showing fit qualifications for citizenship. If this were the evidence, if the evidence necessitated that conclusion, I would almost think your honor were right even though perhaps it was irrelevant at that time, but my remembrance of the evidence as it was at that time certainly would not justify the conclusion your honor has set out. In his examination, as said before, before the superior court in this county, undoubtedly it was made a part of that examination that it was his intention to support and defend the Constitution of the United States against its enemies. The statute requires that evidence of that kind, a declaration of that kind, as I remember it, should be made when the application for citizenship is made. The statute recites he shall, before he is admitted to citizenship, testify on oath in court that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he will absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty whatsoever. Undoubtedly when he was on examination before the superior court he made these declarations. It would not be presumed the superior court of the State admitted him to citizenship unless proper qualifications were made and appeared before that court. Now, then,

I do not remember any testimony was given here by the defendant himself or by any witnesses which would contravene that, except as it be from a conclusion drawn from other statements which he made at that time, that he was a member of the Socialist-Labor Party. If the fact that he was a member of the Socialist Labor Party would justify those conclusions, then perhaps those conclusions might be correct. I think however, no one will contend that the fact that a man belongs to the Socialist Party or the Socialist Labor Party or any other party will justify a conclusion as to his own beliefs. A man may belong to a party without fully knowing or understanding what its beliefs and what its platforms are.

It can not be said because a man belongs to a party therefore he advocates all the theories of that party, and that the party controls his own beliefs and his own actions so as to disqualify him or condemn him.

Your honor reached the conclusion "He is not well disposed towards the peace and tranquillity of the people. His propaganda is to create turmoil and end in chaos." Undoubtedly your honor's conclusion must have been drawn from the fact that this man belonged to the Socialist-Labor Party. If your honor will remember, he denied emphatically that he belonged to the Socialist Party, and undertook to state the difference between them as expressed in their platforms was radical. He was not permitted to go into that explanation. I do not myself think it was material, your honor did not wish to hear it, and from the very fact it was immaterial I was satisfied at that time your honor would not base any conclusion upon it, would not use it as a basis for judgment in that case, but in that your honor has set out those facts in this opinion I think I must have been mistaken myself at that time; that I ought to have called your honor's attention more particularly to that part of the testimony as being wholly inadmissible under the issues of the case then on trial.

Now, with regard to rebutting your honor's statement of a portion of the facts that appeared at that time, and going back to our memory of the case a little bit, I think perhaps we can agree upon some features of it, and directing your honor's attention to the requirements of the statute as applicable to the conditions in this case, your honor has recited in here in this opinion that this man Leonard Olsson was not attached to the principles of the Constitution at the time he acquired from the superior court his papers in naturalization. How, under the statute, would attachment to the Constitution be shown? Certainly not by the political party to which the man belongs. There are certain things set out in the statute which disqualify a man from attaining citizenship. Among other things, he must not be a polygamist, and I apprehend that in his application to the superior court that fact was made to appear, that he was not a polygamist. I apprehend also if that was not the fact, if he falsely so represented himself to the superior court, that he was not a polygamist, and it was discovered afterwards that at that time he was a polygamist, it would be sufficient ground for annulling his citizenship papers. There is no question as to that. So that I think the fact would be as to his residence in the country. He was required to show to the court that he had been a resident of the United States for a period of five years, and if it should be made to appear afterwards that that was not a fact and susceptible of proof, it would be sufficient ground without doubt for the cancellation of his citizenship papers. I may call your honor's attention now to the nature of these facts. In the same way the fraud which the statute is aimed at when it says if his citizenship papers are obtained by fraud they may be cancelled, the fraud which is intended to be punished is fraud as to some physical fact which is susceptible of demonstration, and not to opinions entertained. If he was a polygamist and if his residence here was not for the prescribed time, if he was a Mongolian, did not belong to the proper race of people which are entitled to become citizens, and he deceived the court as to those facts, physical facts capable of demonstration, it could be said he perpetrated a fraud. It could be said with all certainty that he perpetrated a fraud upon the court, and his papers necessarily under the statute would have to be revoked, but when a man expresses an opinion, an opinion is never susceptible of demonstration. I may be of the opinion that this book here is of red color. I may express that opinion. No man on earth can say that I am deceiving the court or defrauding the court if I am color-blind and if I am honest in my expression. When this man said that he was attached to the Constitution of the United States, and he had his witnesses to that effect, they expressed an opinion as to his belief, which they expressed in sufficient firmness to justify the judge of the superior court at that time in saying that that was true. It does not seem to me, and I so argued upon the hearing of this case on demur, it does not appear to me that is one of the questions of fact which are susceptible to demonstration or capable of being called in question on rehearing.

I desire to call your honor's attention to the language of the statute. It does not say that he shall be attached to the Constitution of the United States, but it does use this language with regard to what shall be made to appear at the hearing when he is making application for his citizenship papers, "It shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court before admitting any alien to citizenship that immediately preceding the date of his application he has resided continuously within the United States for five years at least, and within the State or Territory where such court is at the time held one year at least, and during that time." Now, here is the clause I wish to direct your honor's attention to: "It shall be made to appear that during that time hè has behaved as a man of good moral character attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same." Let me go over that clause once more and separate these clauses so that we may more particularly analyze the directions so given by the statute. "It shall be made to appear that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character." It should be made to appear that during that time he has behaved as a man attached to the principles of the Constitution. It shall be made to appear that during that time he has behaved as a man well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same. Those three qualifications required there by the law as to attachment to the Constitution, good moral character, and proper disposition toward the well-being and happiness of the people of the United States are required to be determined during the five years of residence here by his behavior. I want to ask your honor to go over the evidence in your honor's mind and see if there is a single word in that trial derogatory to the man's behavior during that five years. The evidence was he was a hardworking man, that he resided here for five years, he was a longshoreman; that he has earned his living by working with his hands; that he spent his evenings in study—I think the testimony was in the study of his peculiar beliefs in regard to Socialism. The evidence on cross-examination, I think, perhaps, was partly, at least, brought out by your honor's own questioning, and was to the effect that he had at times distributed tracts of the Socialist-Labor Party upon the street, and that he occasionally made speeches in the hall of the Socialist-Labor Party, but was there a single word of evidence anywhere as to any tumultuous conduct on the part of the defendant? Was there a single word that he had not in any way behaved as a quiet, peaceful, law-abiding citizen of the United States during those five years? Was there a single word in the evidence which would brand him as a criminal in any respect, or doing anything to injure the rights of person or property of his fellow men or of the public? Not one word. Of course your honor will bear me out in the assertion when I say that there was not one word of evidence there to show that any act of Leonard Olsson during the five years preceding the time when he made application for his citizenship papers was not an act which any good citizen of the United States might not have done without interfering with the rights of any person. And his acts in passing out those tracts upon the street may be looked upon as being a vagary of his. Certainly those of us who hold opinions in some respects different from the opinions of our fellow beings are not so dangerous to the community at large that our citizenship could be taken away from us. If such were the fact, I do not know who would be left as citizens of the United States. I am afraid there would not be citizens enough left to manage the affairs of state.

What I want to call your honor's attention to is that these qualifications required by the statute of good moral character and being well disposed to the good order and happiness of the people of the United States, and his attachment ot the principles of the Constitution, are to be determined not by his theories. The statute does not provide that, but they are to be determined by his behavior during those five years. Those witnesses he had on the stand had known him continuously during that time, and longer some of them. He is a neighbor of theirs. He had visited their houses. They had met him on the street and they had met him in the halls of the Socialist-Labor Party, but I call your honor's remembrance to the fact that in response to the same question they said directly each and every one of them that they had seen nothing in the behavior of Mr. Olsson during their entire acquaintance with him which would brand him as in any way a bad citizen, and that they would and did recognize him as a citizen of good behavior, entitled to the respect of the community, and were willing to recommend him, and did recommend him then, in answer to my direct question, as a good citizen of the United States. This was based upon their knowledge of his behavior, not upon his political theories, not upon his vagaries as to rights of property, or what would be the rights of citizens under a different condition of affairs, but upon his behavior, the very thing which the statute requires.

In fact, under this evidence it seems to me in going over this thing again, your honor can see that the evidence in this case does not fall within the requirements of the statute, which says that a man's citizenship papers may be annulled when it says they may be annulled for fraud. His citizenship papers may be cancelled on the ground of fraud, or on the ground that such certificate was illegally procured. A man's belief in regard to these matters is not susceptible of proof so as to fasten upon him the condemnation of fraud practiced upon the court before whom he obtained his citizenship papers.

I have gone over these matters very briefly. I hope your honor will not go over them so briefly as I have done. I am not now arguing to a jury before whom a case is being presented and points of argument are being presented and re-presented in different lights. Your honor has had more experience than I have had in analyzing these matters. I know if the points I have suggested are meritorious your honor will give them sufficient consideration to see their merit and pass judgment on them accordingly. I am not going to weary your honor or this court by reiterating what I have said, and I am only going to make this suggestion, so that your honor will see why I have made this argument brief, that it was out of deference to your honor, it is not because I do not believe my argument is well-founded; it is not because I do not believe error has been committed which has worked a grievous mistake to this defendant, but it is because I have confidence in your honor enough to know if there is anything in this contention your honor will recognize it and render judgment accordingly.

Upon the other branch of the case, as to whether, if your honor should not deem this matter which I have presented sufficient to warrant the dismissal of the case, then as to the alternative relief of granting a rehearing for the purpose of getting a record, Mr. McKay, of Seattle, will present that branch of the case, with your honor's permission.

MR. M'LAREN'S REMARKS.

Mr. McLaren. May it please the court, counsel's petition is stated in the alternative. He is asking first for the dismissal of the case. I am here opposing that branch of the motion. I see no occasion for the case being dismissed, no matter what else may become of it. I am put here in this position: The attorney general has ordered me to cooperate with the defendant in seeking a reopening of the case, in order that a new trial may be had. I make that statement to the court in order that the court may know why I am here taking a position contrary to the position which I am in on the record in this case.

I therefore present to the court, addressed to its discretion, a formal motion asking that the judgment made by this court be vacated and set aside. I submit that motion without any argument.

The Court. Does your motion state that you are doing it by direction of the Attorney General?

Mr. McLaren. It certainly does, your honor.

The Court. Mr. McLaren, when you conducted the trial of this case for the Government, you were acting in good faith, were you not?

Mr. McLaren. I certainly was, your honor.

The Court. And afterwards a decree, final decree, entered in this case, came from your office. That met your approval, didn't it?

Mr. McLaren. It certainly did, and I may add——

The Court. I wish simply to have the record made clear, so that all who are in any way connected with the case will bear the responsibility for what they individually did, that is all.

REPLY OF MR. NICHOLS.

Mr. Nichols. If the court please, there is no argument—no response has been made to this motion by counsel for the Government. The only argument I could reply to would be the argument of the last speaker.

Mr. McLaren. I am objecting to that part of your motion asking for a dismissal of the case. Do not misunderstand me.

Mr. Nichols. I meant to have said that there was no argument made. I recognize your position. I could not repeat my argument in favor of the first part of my motion in the absence of the argument by the Government attorney; so that the only argument that has been presented to be answered is the argument of the last counsel, and as the only knowledge which that counsel has of the facts of the case is what he say he learns from hearsay evidence I could not take the time to answer that argument upon that line. I shall have to be excused from attempting to make any answer to that part of his argument. He reads a letter from Congressman Berger containing some lurid expressions, and I would like to ask a consideration of the fact as to whether that letter ascribed to Congressman Berger is just as authentic as a great many newspaper reports and current reports of this case have been during the last few weeks. If there is no greater authenticity to Mr. Berger's letter than there is to some of those reports, the letter requires no answer at my hands. The position of counsel for the intervenor could be made here only on one or two grounds. Either he speaks here in defense of this court or he speaks here from some knowledge of the record. This court needs no defense. No attack has been made on this court by the respondent in this case or his counsel. If inadvertent expressions have been published by unauthorized persons we will not be held responsible for that I am sure at the hands of this court. I can not therefore reply to counsel on that line, and as to his argument as to what he hears or learns of the evidence, I decline to make any response.

COURT'S REMARKS OVERRULING MOTION.

The COURT. I will first dispose of the petition for a new trial and rehearing. This petition in twelve paragraphs cites the assigned reasons for the court vacating the decree which has been entered, and asks to dismiss the case or retry it. I will pass these in review briefly.

The first is that, "there was no evidence produced on the trial of said cause that the respondent was an anarchist or polygamist, or that he was a disbeliever in or was opposed to organized government, or a member or affiliated with any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in organized government, or that he is not or was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same."

If that statement is true there should be no hesitation on the part of the court in granting this petition. It is true as counsel has stated that the issue on the trial of the Olsson case was whether he had committed a fraud at the final hearing of his application for naturalization, in the superior court. That was the issue raised by the petition filed by the United States district attorney in this court, and it was because that issue was raised that Judge Donworth overruled the demurrer to the petition. It was for the trial of that issue that the case was brought to a hearing, and if the court made its decision and granted its decree without evidence of the facts as stated in this first paragraph, then the court was greviously wrong and the whole case should be entirely decided in Mr. Olsson's favor. But I must say emphatically that the statements of the first paragraph of the petition are untrue. The fraud alleged in the petition was that Mr. Olsson had at the hearing in the superior court represented and stated that he was attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same. That allegation in the petition is, by Mr. Olsson's answer on file in this case, expressly admitted. He did so represent, he did so state. Then to sustain this petition it was necessary for the Government to prove by evidence on the trial that that representation, that statement, was not true. There was evidence.

The argument made in support of this petition is to a large extent a presentation of the recital in the opinion of the court of things said or admitted by Mr. Olsson as a witness and by his other witnesses who testified for him, and combined with the conclusion that those things are not grounds for depriving a man of his citizenship. Those recitals are merely put into the opinion in accordance with the habit of the court to treat fairly the party whose case is decided adversely, and give him a fair statement of his case as he made it. There was introduced on the trial of the case evidence on the part of the Government, positive evidence. What is recited in the opinion is that which was presented in opposition to it. It was that which had to be weighed against the evidence introduced on the part of the Government.

I have taken pains to prepare a statement of the evidence introduced on the trial of Mr. Olsson's case, which may be useful hereafter in further proceedings in the case, but at least it will serve for the purpose of basing the decision of the court now upon the evidence that was heard by the court upon the trial. I will read that statement as I have made it of what the evidence was:

United States District Court, Western District of Washington, Southern Division.

United States of America, petitioner, vs. Leonard Olsson, respondent. No. 1688.

On the trial of this case, Mr. Smith who made the initiatory affidavit, testified that in the Superior Court of the State of Washington for Pierce County, Olsson appeared as a witness supporting an application for naturalization when he, Smith, representing the Government, interrogated the applicant and his witnesses and in the examination of Olsson at that time propounded to him the question: Are you yourself attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed toward the good order and happiness of the same? To which Olsson made a direct answer saying that he was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States. Mr. Smith testified further that Olsson again appeared in the superior court as a witness for another applicant for naturalization and he, Smith, again propounded the specific question: Are you attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed toward the good order and happiness of the same, and that Olsson again answered specifically saying—that he was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and in answer to a further interrogatory stated that he had entertained the same sentiments regarding the Constitution of the United States for a period of two or three years, which antedated his naturalization. Mr. Charles A. Enslow, another witness for the Government, testified that Olsson had attracted his attention by his participation in assemblages engaged in propagating doctrines hostile to the Government of the United States, and he then told of an interview with Olsson in which he exploited his theories and beliefs which the witness regarded as dangerous. Said witness further testified that he had previously been connected with the Bureau of Naturalization charged with the duty of examining applicants for naturalization and their witnesses, and while so employed he interrogated an applicant for naturalization in the Superior Court for Pierce County which refused to admit said applicant to citizenship for the reason that he declared himself to be not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and appeared to be unfriendly to our Government, and that Olsson was then and there present as a witness for the said rejected applicant.

The evidence given in behalf of Olsson consisted of testimony of Gustave Rust, Mrs. Catherine Gelderman, Antone Esklund, and Mrs. Antone Esklund to the effect that in their estimation he is a good citizen. Either Mr. Esklund or Rust stated that he and Olsson are pledged supporters of a propaganda, the nature of which he failed to explain.

Mr. Olsson testified as a witness in his own behalf and the examination in chief by his counsel consisted mostly of direct and leading questions eliciting negative answers to the questions: Are you an anarchist? Are you a polygamist? Are you in favor of the destruction of the Government of the United States, by force or violence? Other questions propounded by his counsel elicited his version of the testimony given by him on the two occasions referred to by Mr. Smith, differing from Mr. Smith's testimony only as to the precise words of the questions propounded, Olsson saying that Mr. Smith asked him the question: Are you devotedly attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States?—that being the question which he answered negatively and being asked to explain what he meant by saying that he was not "devotedly attached" to the Constitution of the United States, he said he meant that he was not idolatrously attached to the principles of the Constitution; and he was further interrogated as to what he meant by that and he said that he did not worship the Constitution as an idolator worships his idol.

On his cross-examination he stated that he had read the Constitution of the United States and understood its provisions—that he knew that one of its articles is that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and being asked to explain the propaganda referred to in the testimony previously given by one of his witnesses he said the object of it was to do away with private ownership of property; and being asked how that was to be accomplished he said by the power of the ballot; and being asked if he believes it to be right to deprive owners of their lands, and improvements, and buildings which they have placed thereon, and their money, and all other property, by merely voting to do so, he answered saying: Oh, let them keep their money, but all lands, and buildings, and mines, and industrial works will be held in common for all the people and then the political government will be abrogated because there will be no use for it when there is no property, and he repeated a second time that without individual ownership of property to be protected by law there will be no use for the political government of this country and it will be succeeded by an industrial democracy.

He explained his party affiliations saying that there are two kinds of Socialists, the difference between the two branches being that the Trade-Union Party to which he belongs, believes in working along industrial lines, to substitute industrial control of the country, in place of the present political government; whilst the other branch believes in proceeding according to the usual methods of other political parties.

The Government called as a witness in rebuttal, Mr. McFarland, who testified that he was present in performance of his duties as deputy clerk of the superior court on the occasions when the respondent appeared as a witness in the naturalization proceedings referred to in the testimony given by Smith and Enslow, and that he had never heard the word "devotedly" used in questions propounded to applicants for naturalization or their witnesses.

[Exhibit No. 6 not printed.]

EXHIBIT No. 7.

[Presented by Leonard Olsson. (Stamped:) June 27, 1912. Committee on the Judiciary. U. S. House of Representatives.]

SOCIALIST LABOR PARTY PLATFORM.

[Adopted by the national convention of the party April 10, 1912.]

The Socialist Labor Party of the United States of America in national convention assembled in New York on April 10th, 1912, reaffirming its previous platform pronouncements, and in accord with the international socialist movement, declares:

Social conditions, as illustrated by the events that crowded into the last four year, have ripened so fast that each and all the principles, hitherto proclaimed by the Socialist Labor Party, and all and each of the methods that the Socialist Labor Party has hitherto advocated, stand to-day most conspicuously demonstrated.

The capitalist social system has wrought its own destruction. Its leading exponents, the present incumbent in the presidential chair and his "illustrious predecessor," however seemingly at war with each other on principles, can not conceal the identity of their political views. The oligarchy proclaimed by the tenets of the one, the monarchy proclaimed by the tenets of the other, jointly proclaim the conviction of the foremost men in the ruling class that the republic of capital is at the end of its tether.

True to the economic laws from which socialism proceeds, dominant wealth has to such an extent concentrated into the hands of a select few, the plutocracy, that the layers of the capitalistic class feel driven to the ragged edge, while the large majority of the people, the working class, are being submerged.

True to the sociologic laws, by the light of which socialism reads its forecasts, the plutocracy is breaking through its republic-democratic shell and is stretching out its hands toward absolutism in government; the property-holding layers below it are turning at bay; the proletariat is awakening to its consciousness of class, and thereby to the perception of its historic mission.

In the midst of this hurly, all the colors of the rainbow are being projected upon the social mists from the prevalent confusion of thought.

From the lower layers of the capitalistic class the bolder, yet foolhardy, portion bluntly demands that "the trust be smashed."

Even if the trust could, it should not be smashed; even if it should, it can not. The law of social progress pushes toward a system of production that shall crown the efforts of man, without arduous toil, with an abundance of the necessaries for material existence, to the end of allowing leisure for mental and spiritual expansion. The trust is a mechanical contrivance wherewith to solve the problem. To smash the contrivance were to reintroduce the days of small-fry competition and set back the hands of the dial of Time. The mere thought is foolhardy. He who undertakes the feat might as well brace himself against the cascade of Niagara. The cascade of social evolution would whelm him.

The less bold among the smaller property-holding element proposes to "curb" the trust with a variety of schemes. The very forces of social evolution that propel the development of the trust stamp the "curbing" schemes, whether political or economic, as childish. They are attempts to hold back a runaway horse by the tail. The laws by which the attempt has been tried strew the path of the runaway. They are splintered to pieces with its kicks, and serve only to furnish a livelihood for the corporation and anticorporation lawyer.

From still lower layers of the same property-holding class, social layers that have sniffed the breath of socialism and imagine themselves Socialists, comes the iridescent theory of capturing the trust for the people by the ballot only. The "capture of the trust for the people" implies the social revolution. To imply the social revolution with the ballot only, without the means to enforce the ballot's fiat, in case of reaction's attempt to override it, is to fire blank cartridges at a foe. It is worse. It is to threaten his existence without the means to carry out the threat. Threats of revolution, without provisions to carry them out, result in one of two things only—either the leaders are bought out, or the revolutionary class, to which the leaders appeal and which they succeed in drawing after themselves, are led like cattle to the shambles. The Commune disaster of France stands a monumental warning against the blunder.

An equally iridescent hue of the rainbow is projected from a still lower layer, a layer that lies almost wholly within the submerged class—the theory of capturing the trust for the working class with the fist only. The capture of the trust for the people implies something else besides revolution. It implies revolution carried on by the masses. For reasons parallel to those that decree the day of small-fry competition gone by, mass-revolutionary conspiracy is, to-day, an impossibility. The trust-holding plutocracy may successfully put through a conspiracy of physical force. The smallness of its numbers makes a successful conspiracy possible on its part. The hugeness of the numbers requisite for a revolution against the trust-holding plutocracy excludes conspiracy from the arsenal of the revolution. The idea of capturing the trust with physical force only is a wild chimera.

Only two programs—the program of the plutocracy and the program of the Socialist Labor Party—grasp the situation.

The political state, another name for the class state, is worn out in this, the leading capitalist nation of the world, most prominently. The industrial or socialist state is throbbing for birth. The political state, being a class state, is government separate and apart from the productive energies of the people; it is government mainly for holding the ruled class in subjection. The industrial or socialist state, being the denial of the class state, is government that is part and parcel of the productive energies of the people.

As their functions are different, so are the structures of the two states different.

The structure of the political state contemplates territorial "representation" only; the structure of the industrial state contemplates representation of industries or useful occupations only.

The economic or industrial evolution has reached that point where the political state no longer can maintain itself under the forms of democracy. While the plutocracy has relatively shrunk, the enemies it has raised against itself have become too numerous to be dallied with. What is still worse, obedient to the law of its own existence the political state has been forced not merely to multiply enemies against itself; it has been forced to recruit and group the bulk of these enemies, the revolutionary bulk, at that.

The working class of the land, the historically revolutionary element, is grouped by the leading occupations, agricultural as well as industrial, in such manner that the "autonomous craft union," one time the palladium of the workers, has become a harmless scare-crow upon which the capitalist birds roost at ease, while the industrial unions cast ahead of them the constituencies of the government of the future, and, jointly, point to the industrial state.

Nor yet is this all. Not only has the political state raised its own enemies; not only has itself multiplied them; not only has itself recruited and drilled them; not only has itself grouped them into shape and form to succeed it; it is, furthermore, driven by its inherent necessities, prodding on the revolutionary class by digging ever more fiercely into its flanks the harpoon of exploitation.

With the purchasing power of wages sinking to ever lower depths; with certainty of work hanging on ever slenderer threads; with an ever more gigantically swelling army of the unemployed; with the need of profits pressing the plutocracy harder and harder recklessly to squander the workers' limbs and life; what with all this and the parallel process of merging the workers of all industries into one interdependent solid mass, the final break-up is rendered inevitable and at hand.

No wild schemes and no rainbow chasing will stead in the approaching emergency. The plutocracy knows this—and so does the Socialist Labor Party—and logical is the program of each.

The program of the plutocracy is feudalic autocracy, translated into capitalism. Where a social revolution is pending, and, for whatever reason, is not enforced, reaction is the alternative.

The program of the Socialist Labor party is revolution—the industrial or socialist republic, the social order where the political State is overthrown; where the congress of the land consists of the representatives of the useful occupations of the land; where, accordingly, a government is an essential factor in production; where the blessings to man that the trust is instinct with are freed from the trammels of the private ownership that now turn the potential blessings into a curse; where, accordingly, abundance can be the patrimony of all who work; and the shackles of wage slavery are no more.

In keeping with the goals of the different programs are the means of their execution.

The means in contemplation by reaction is the bayonet. To this end reaction is seeking, by means of the police spy and other agencies, to lash the proletariat into acts of violence that may give a color to the resort to the bayonet. By its maneuvers it is egging the working class on to deeds of fury. The capitalist press echoes the policy, while the pure and simple political Socialist Party press, generally, is snared into the trap.

On the contrary, the means firmly adhered to by the Socialist Labor Party is the constitutional method of political action, backed by the industrially and class-consciously organized proletariat, to the exclusion of anarchy and all that thereby hangs.

At such a critical period in the Nation's existence the Socialist Labor Party calls upon the working class of America, more deliberately serious than ever before, to rally at the polls under the party's banner. And the party also calls upon all intelligent citizens to place themselves squarely upon the ground of working-class interests, and join us in this mighty and noble work of human emancipation, so that we may put summary end to the existing barbarous class conflict by placing the land and all the means of production, transportation, and distribution into the hands of the people as a collective body, and substituting for the present state of planless production, industrial war, and social disorder, the Socialist or industrial commonwealth—a commonwealth in which every worker shall have the free exercise and full benefit of his faculties, multiplied by all the modern factors of civilization.

Exhibit No. 8.

PRINCIPLES OF THE SOCIALIST LABOR PARTY.

A perfect understanding of capitalism is necessary to a clear comprehension of socialism.

Under capitalism society is divided into two classes of people, as follows:

A possessing, or capitalist class, among the members of which is distributed in unequal shares and various forms of ownership of the whole existing wealth, including land, the machinery of production, and the commodities that must be consumed in the sustenance of life;

A dispossessed, or proletarian class, whose members own nothing but their labor power, which is useless unless it can be exerted upon nature through the machinery of production.

Since machinery is owned exclusively by the capitalist class, each proletarian must sell his labor power to a capitalist or to an association of capitalists in order to obtain the necessaries of life.

Of the wealth produced by his labor power the portion which he receives is called "wages"; the other portion is appropriated by his employer and is called "profit."

Wages naturally depend upon competition among workers, and this competition increases with the displacement of labor by machinery. Each capitalist conducting his own business with a sole view to his own immediate profit, regardless of the present or future public welfare, no provision is made for the reemployment of the labor displaced.

Not only, then, is the rate of wages steadily falling, but the number of proletarians who must starve in enforced idleness, is constantly increasing. In other words, the struggle for existence among the workers becomes more intense as invention supplies the means of greater abundance with less effort.

But while progressive competition is the law of wages, progressive concentration is the law of capital.

First, as a tool develops into a machine, the artisan is driven from his shop into the factory of a small capitalist. Then, as the machine develops into a greater machine, the small capitalist is driven out of business by his more powerful competitor; and so on until the greatest capitalists, unable singly to possess themselves of the vast machinery required to carry on industry, unite into corporations, which in turn unite into trusts. Concentration in productive industry necessitates a corresponding concentration in the distributive agency, i. e., commerce.

Thus does individual capitalism develop into collective capitalism, less and less competitive; while individual labor develops into collective labor, more and more competitive. A point at last is reached where the class struggle culminates; a point where "to be or not to be" is the question for the majority of the people. The end is in sight. The issue is plain. "The dispossessors must be dispossessed." The instruments of collective labor must be owned collectively by the whole people—that is, by the cooperative commonwealth; "a commonwealth in which every worker shall have the free exercise and full benefit of his faculties multiplied by all the factors of modern civilization."

How shall this great social revolution be accomplished?

In any form of society the economic organism depends for its development and preservation upon its political organ; the organ which, under the name of "government" is simply the public agent of the economic rulers. In capitalism, government is necessarily the right arm of the capitalist class; its function is to promote by all means the interests of that class, to promptly obey its commands, and especially to protect at all hazards the very fundament of the capitalist structure, namely, capitalist ownership of the means of production. Were government the organ of collective labor instead of collective capitalism, the capitalist structure would fall and the socialist structure would rise. The proletariat must, therefore, constitute itself into a political party of its own class in order to possess itself of the Government, which, adapted to the changed requirements of the modified social organism, will no longer be, as it ever was in the past, a class executioner, but will be transformed into a public executive of the administrative measures adopted by a free people.

[Exhibit No. 9 not printed.]

EXHIBIT No. 9½.

SEPTEMBER 21, 1910.

Hon. ELMER E. TODD,
United States Attorney, Seattle, Wash.

SIR: By direction of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, I have the honor to transmit herewith my original affidavit, and two copies thereof, upon which to institute proceedings, under section 15 of the act of Congress of June 29, 1906, to cancel certificate of naturalization No. 117750, issued to Leonard Olsson, January 10, 1910, by the superior court of Pierce County, Washington, at Tacoma, upon the ground that the said Leonard Olsson was not at the time he was admitted to become a citizen of the United States attached to the principles of the Constitution thereof.

This Leonard Olsson, appeared as a witness in the superior court of Pierce County, Tacoma, Wash., for Carl Olsen, petitioner No. 682 in said court, and testified in open court that he was not at that time, to-wit; September 12, 1910, nor had he been for a period of between two or three years, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States. The witnesses who heard the testimony of witness, Leonard Olsson, are myself, William S. Graham, naturalization examiner, 406 Federal Building, Seattle, and R. E. McFarland, deputy clerk superior court, Tacoma, Wash.

The address of Leonard Olsson is No. 304 Wallace Building, Tacoma, Wash.

It is respectfully requested that proceedings be instituted to cancel said certificate of naturalization at your early convenience, and when instituted, it will be appreciated if you will advise this office of the date of filing, and docket number.

Very respectfully,

JOHN SPEED SMITH.
Chief Naturalization Examiner.

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
County of King, ss:

Jno. Speed Smith being first duly sworn according to law deposes and says; that he is now and has been for more than two years last past a duly appointed and acting chief naturalization examiner of the United States for the district of Washington, with headquarters at Seattle, Wash.; that the records of the superior court of Pierce County, Wash., at Tacoma, show that Leonard Olsson filed petition for naturalization No. 517 in said court on the 27th day of September, 1909, and was admitted to become a citizen of the United States by said court, January 10, 1910, and a certificate of naturalization, No. 117750 issued to him; that said petitioner made oath in said petition for naturalization, No. 517 as follows: "I am attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States"; that said Leonard Olsson appeared as a witness for petitioner for naturalization, Carl Olsen, in said superior court of Pierce County, Wash., September 12, 1910, and under oath, said Leonard Olsson as such witness for Carl Olsen, stated in open court in answer to interrogatories propounded by affiant that he, the said Leonard Olsson, was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States; that he believed in radically changing it; that he had maintained such view for a period of between two and three years and at the time he, the said Leonard Olsson, was admitted to become a citizen of the United States he was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, therefore, affiant believes that the said Leonard Olsson was not a fit subject, at the time of his naturalization, to become a citizen of the United States and was not naturalized in accordance with law.

JNO. SPEED SMITH.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 21st day of September, 1910.

[SEAL.]

R. M. HOPKINS.
Clerk U. S. District Court Western District of Washington.

EXHIBIT No. 10.

SEPTEMBER 21, 1910.

To the CHIEF, DIVISION OF NATURALIZATION,
Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C.

SIR: Herewith is inclosed copy of letter this day written to Hon. Elmer E. Todd, United States attorney, Seattle, requesting that proceedings be instituted to cancel certificate of naturalization No. 117750, issued out of the superior court of Pierce County, Washington, at Tacoma, January 10, 1910, to Leonard Olsson.

Very respectfully,

JNO. SPEED SMITH,
Chief Naturalization Examiner.

EXHIBIT No. 11.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR,
NATURALIZATION SERVICE, OFFICE OF CHIEF EXAMINER,
Seattle, Wash., May 13, 1912.

The CHIEF, DIVISION OF NATURALIZATION, Washington.

Yesterday I forwarded to the division, copy of decision in the United States district court for the western district of Washington, at Seattle, in the cancellation case of one Leonard Olsson, in connection with which please refer to my letter of September 21, 1910, inclosing copy of my letter to the United States attorney and affidavit in connection therewith. I also inclose clipping from Seattle Daily Times of the 12th instant, and the Seattle Star of the 13th instant, which will show the widespread interest taken in this matter throughout the country.

I deem it proper to inform the division fully as to how the issue arising in this case came about. On September 27, 1909, Leonard Olsson filed petition No. 517 in the superior court of Pierce County, at Tacoma, Wash., and on the 10th of January, 1910, after a hearing in open court, he was duly admitted to citizenship. Naturalization Examiner F. S. Becker represented this office at that hearing. On August 8, 1910, Leonard Olsson appeared as a witness in petitions Nos. 650 and 651 of Victor Emanuel Eslon and Camille Stoessle, respectively, both of which petitions were investigated by Examiner Enslow of this office, and he reported that said petitioners were Socialists, as well as witness Olsson. When petition No. 650 of Eslon was heard, the said petitioner admitted in open court that he was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and upon motion the court denied said petition with prejudice. Petition No. 651 of Stoessle came on for hearing, but the petitioner being in the court room when the previous petition was heard, and knowing of course that he would be denied if he failed to state that he was attached to the principles of the Constitution, testified that he believed in the principles of the Constitution, and he was accordingly admitted to citizenship.

In petition No. 651, I questioned Olsson as to his attachment to the principles of the Constitution and he then stated that he was not attached to them, but I omitted to ask him how long he had entertained those views. Remembering his sentiments as expressed at this time and looking over the Tacoma docket, I found that he had appeared as a witness in petition No. 682, filed June 11, 1910, by Carl Olsen, and when this latter petition was heard September 12, 1910, Leonard Olsson was questioned by me as to his attachment to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and he then stated in open court that he was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same. I had previously asked the clerk of the court to make a note of his reply, having in mind at that time an action to cancel his own certificate, and in giving his testimony he stated that he had entertained those views between two and three years, which of course antedated his own naturalization, and showed that when he took the oath of allegiance to support the Constitution of the United States he perjured himself, and upon that ground I made the necessary affidavit and referred the matter to the United States attorney to cancel his certificate.

At the trial of the case on May 1, 1912, myself, former Naturalization Examiner Charles A. Enslow, and former deputy clerk R. F. McFarland testified on behalf of the Government. Olsson was represented by an attorney who introduced testimony of several witnesses as to his good moral character, in addition to his own testimony, and the court after hearing the testimony handed down his decision on May 10, 1912, and a copy of the same was forwarded to the division by me yesterday.

This man's membership in the Socialist and I. W. W. organizations was developed at the trial and he was carefully questioned by the United States attorney and the court itself in regard to his peculiar beliefs as to government, when he stated that he fully understood the principles of the Constitution of the United States, especially that clause with reference to property rights; and in answer to the direct question, stated that the organizations he belonged to proposed to change the organic law of this land, and that he did not approve of the Constitution of the United States. His certificate of naturalization was canceled on the ground that at the time he took the oath of allegiance he swore to that which he did not believe in.

JNO. SPEED SMITH.

EXHIBIT No. 12.

Court No. 120. Petition No. 682. Date of filing, June 11, 1910. Date of hearing, Sept. 12. Name, Carl Olsen. Address, 2317 N. Tacoma Ave. Occupation, sailor. Born, Mar. 12, 1883, Denmark. Emigrated from Hamburg, Dec. 4, 1904, on vessel Thistle. Ar. San Fran., Cal. Declared intention at Tacoma in sup. court, on Dec. 8, 1906. Married (No.) Name of wife, ——— ———; born at ———; resides at ———. In U. S. since June 5, 1905. In State of Washington since Jan. 15, 1906. Any former petition? ———. Ever serve in Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or merchant marine? ———. Certificate of registration filed ———.

Witnesses:

Name, Leonard Olsson; occupation, longshoreman; address, 304 Wallace Bldg. Name, Carl Blendheim; occupation, laborer; address, Garfield Hotel, Tacoma.

(O. k. 6/17/10. S. N. S. 4/4/12. Sub. A. L. Petterson—A. Olson. ———.)

(Reverse:)

Report of examination. Department of Commerce and Labor, Naturalization Service.

Examiner's report.

6/16/10. 15b. Ptc. ——— (2). 6/7/10.

Carl Olson examined O. K. Leonard Olsson, socialist, says he met Olsen, petr., in San Francisco, Calif., a day or two after Olsen landed, early in June, 1905, and more than 5 years ago. Witness Blendheim says identically the same as Olsson. Witnesses are both Socialists, but state that Olsen has no leaning that way. Enslow.

Witness Leonard Olsson to be asked from what time he has failed to believe in the form of Gov't in the U. S.

Action: Sept. 12, 1910. Dismissed without prejudice one witness could not personally testify to five years' residence in U. S.

EXHIBIT No. 13.

No. 517. Original.

United States of America. Department of Commerce and Labor. Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization. Division of Naturalization.

PETITION FOR NATURALIZATION.

Superior court of Pierce County, Wash. In the matter of the petition of Leonard Olsson, to be admitted a citizen of the United States of America.

To the Superior Court of Pierce County, Wash.:

The petition of Leonard Olsson respectfully shows:

First. My full name is Leonard Olsson.

Second. My place of residence is No. 304 Wallace Building, City of Tacoma, State of Washington.

Third. My occupation is Longshoreman.

Fourth. I was born on the 14th day of January, anno Domini, 1879, at Christianstad, Sweden.

Fifth. I emigrated to the United States form Malmo, Sweden, on or about the 15th of March anno Domini 1900, and arrived at the port of New York, in the United States on the vessel [1] Isold.

---

[1] If the alien arrived otherwise than by vessel, the character of conveyance or name of transportation company should be given.

Sixth. I declared my intention to become a citizen of the United States on the 2d day of November, anno Domini 1904, at San Francisco, Cal., in the Superior Court of City and County of San Francisco.

Seventh. I am not married.

Eighth. I am not a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government or a member of or affiliated with any organization or body of persons teaching disbelief in organized government. I am not a polygamist nor a believer in the practice of polygamy. I am attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and it is my intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce absolutely and forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, State, or sovereignty, and particularly to Gustavus V, King of Sweden, of which at this time I am a subject, and it is my intention to reside permanently in the United States.

Ninth. I am able to speak the English language.

Tenth. I have resided continuously in the United States of America for a term of five years at least immediately preceding the date of this petition, to wit, since the 27th day of March, anno Domini 1900, and in the State of Washington for one year at least next preceding the date of this petition, to wit, since the 7th day of February anno Domini 1902.

Eleventh. I have not heretofore made petition for citizenship to any court.

Attached hereto and made a part of this petition is my declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States, required by law. Wherefore your petitioner prays that he may be admitted a citizen of the United States of America.

LEONARD OLSSON.
(Signature of petitioner.)

Dated September 27, 1909.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, county of Pierce, ss:

Leonard Olsson, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is the petitioner in the above-entitled proceeding; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to matters therein stated to be alleged upon information and belief, and that as to those matters he believes it to be true.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 27th day of September anno Domini 1909.

[SEAL.] J. F. LIBBY, Clerk.
By R. E. MCFARLAND, Deputy Clerk.

Declaration of intention filed this 27th day of September, 1909.

J. F. LIBBY, Clerk.
By R. E. MCFARLAND, Deputy Clerk.

AFFIDAVIT OF WITNESSES.

Superior court of Pierce County, Wash.:

In the matter of the petition of Leonard Olsson, to be admitted a citizen of the United United States of America.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, county of Pierce, ss:

C. D. Robinson, occupation lineman survey party, residing at General Delivery, Tacoma, Wash., and J. P. Hansen, occupation real estate, residing at 1509½ Tacoma Avenue, Tacoma, Wash., each being severally, duly, and respectively sworn, deposes and says that he is a citizen of the United States of America; that he has personally known Leonard Olsson, the petitioner above mentioned, to be a resident of the United States for a period of at least five years continuously immediately preceding the date of filing his petition, and of the State in which the above-entitled application is made for a period of 5 and 5 years immediately preceding the date of filing his petition; and that he has personal knowledge that the said petitioner is a person of good moral character, attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and that he is in every way qualified, in his opinion, to be admitted a citizen of the United States.

C. D. ROBINSON.
J. P. HANSEN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 27th day of September anno Domini 1909.

[SEAL.] J. F. LIBBY, Clerk.
By R. E. MCFARLAND, Deputy Clerk.

Subs.:

HARRY PETERSON,
WALTER HERRON.

(Written on margin:) Cancelled. Vacated and held for naught by order of judge of U. S. Court (District). Western District of Washington, Southern Division. Order entered May 22, 1912. C. H. Hanford, judge. A. W. Engle, clerk, U. S. Court. Copy filed in Superior Court, May 24, 1912. E. F. McKenzie, clerk; by B. Cohueck, Dep.)

In the matter of the petition of Leonard Olsson. To be admitted a citizen of the United States of America. Filed Sept. 27, 1909.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE.

I hereby declare, on oath, that I absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly to Gustavus V, the King of Sweden, of which I have heretofore been a subject [and that I further renounce the title of an order of nobility, which I have heretofore held] [1] that I will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same.

LEONARD OLSSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, in open court this 10th day of January, A. D. 1910.

[SEAL.] R. E. MCFARLAND, Deputy Clerk.

ORDER OF COURT ADMITTING PETITIONER.

Upon consideration of the petition of Leonard Olsson, and affidavits in support thereof, and further testimony taken in open court, it is ordered that the said petitioner, who has taken the oath required by law, be, and hereby is, admitted to become a citizen of the United States of America, this 10th day of January, A. D. 1910.

By the Court:

JOHN A. SHACKLEFORD, Judge.

Certificate of naturalization, No. 117750, issued on the 10th day of January, A. D. 1910.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington for Pierce County.

In the matter of the petition of Leonard Olson, for admittance to citizenship in the United States of America.

CERTIFICATE.

I, E. F. McKenzie, county clerk and by virtue of the laws of the State of Washington, ex-officio clerk of the superior court of the State of Washington, for Pierce County, do hereby certify that the annexed is a true and correct copy of the petition for naturalization, and order admitting, entered in volume 3, naturalization records, page 117, now on file and of record in this office.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal of the said superior court, at my office, in the city of Tacoma, this 27th day of June, 1912.

E. F. MCKENZIE, Clerk.
By B. COHUECK, Deputy.

(Filing on back:) No. 1688–C. In the district court of the United States for the western district of Washington, southern division. United States of America, plaintiff, vs. Leonard Olsson, defendant. Certified copy of naturalization papers of Leonard Olsson, deposited with clerk of court.

EXHIBIT NO. 14.

No. 117750. To be given to the person naturalized.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

CERTIFICATE OF NATURALIZATION.

(Original.)

Petition, volume 3, page 117. Stub, volume 5795, page 50. Description of holder: Age, 30 years; height, 6 feet — inches; color, white; complexion, light; color of eyes, blue; color of hair, brown; visible distinguishing marks, none; name, age, and place of residence of wife, none; names, ages, and places of residence of minor children, none.

LEONARD OLSSON.
(Signature of holder.)

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
County of Pierce, ss:

Be it remembered that at a regular term of the superior court of Pierce County, Wash., held at Tacoma on the 10 day of Jan., in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and ten, Leonard Olsson, who, previous to his naturalization, was a subject of Sweden, at present residing at number 304 Wallace Building, Street, city of Tacoma, State of Washington, having applied to be admitted a citizen of the United States of America, pursuant to law, and the court having found that the petitioner had resided continuously within the United States for at least five years and in this State for one year immediately preceding the date of the hearing of his petition, and that said petitioner intends to reside permanently in the United States, had in all respects complied with the law in relation thereto, and that he was entitled to be so admitted, it was thereupon ordered by the said court that he be admitted as a citizen of the United States of America.

In testimony whereof the seal of said court is hereunto affixed on the 10 day of Jan. in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and ten and of our Independence the one hundred and thirty-third.

[Seal of superior court of Pierce County, Washington.] J. F. LIBBY, Clerk of Superior Court, Pierce County, Tacoma, Wash.
(Official character of attestor.)

(Department of Commerce and Labor.)

(Indorsed:) Filed, U. S. district court, western district of Washington, May 22, 1912. A. W. Engle, clerk. R. W. Jamieson, deputy.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

I, A. W. Engle, clerk of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, do hereby certify the foregoing and attached to be a full, true, and correct copy of

The naturalization paper of Leonard Olsson, delivered by him to me as clerk, and filed in the within-entitled cause, as the original thereof appears on file in said court at the city of Tacoma, in said district.

Attest my official signature and the seal of the said district court at the city of Tacoma this twenty-seventh day of June, A. D. 1912.

[SEAL.] A. W. ENGLE, Clerk.
By JAMES C. DRAKE, Deputy Clerk.

EXHIBIT NO. 15.

In the circuit court of the United States for the western district of Washington, western division.

United States of America, petitioner, vs. Leonard Olsson, respondent. No. 1688.

DEMURRER.

Comes now the respondent in the above-entitled matter and demurs to the petition herein and to the affidavit upon which the same is based upon the ground and for the reason that it appears upon the face thereof that the same do not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against this respondent.

J. W. A. NICHOLS,
Attorney for Respondent, 506–7 Bank of California Building, Tacoma, Wash.

Received copy this 1st day of December, 1910.

CHAS. T. HUTSON,
Assistant U. S. Attorney.

(The following penciled notations in handwriting of Judge Donworth:)
Nichols cites: U. S. v. Aakerbik, 180 Fed., 137.
McLaren cites: Ex parte Sauer, 81 Fed., 355; U. S. vs. Nesbit, 168 Fed., 1005.
(Indorsed:) Filed U. S. circuit court western district of Washington. Nov. 30, 1910. A. Reeves Ayres, clerk. By Sam'l D. Bridges, deputy.

In the United States circuit court for the western district of Washington, western division.

United States of America, plaintiff, vs. Leonard Olsson, defendant. No. 1688.

ORDER OVERRULING DEMURRER.

This cause coming on regularly for hearing upon the demurrer of the defendant to the petition filed herein, and said demurrer having been argued by counsel, upon consideration thereof, it is now ordered by the court that said demurrer be, and the same is, hereby overruled, and the defendant is granted ten days in which to file his answer herein.

Dated this 3rd day of April, A. D. 1911.

GEORGE DONWORTH, Judge.

(Indorsed:) Filed U. S. circuit court, western district of Washington. Apr. 3, 1911. Sam'l D. Bridges, clerk. G. O. B. 212.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

I, A. W. Engle, clerk of the district court of the United States for the western district of Washington, do hereby certify that I have compared the foregoing copy with the original demurrer and order overruling demurrer in the foregoing entitled cause, now on file and of record in my office at Tacoma, and that the same is a true and perfect transcript of said original and of the whole thereof.

Witness my hand and the seal of said court, this 27th day of June, 1912.

[SEAL.]

A. W. ENGLE, Clerk.
By JAMES C. DRAKE, Deputy.

(Filing on back:) No. 1688–C. In the district court of the United States for the western district of Washington, southern division. United States of America, plaintiff, vs. Leonard Olsson, defendant. Certified copy of demurrer and order overruling demurrer.

EXHIBIT NO. 16.

C–117750

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, June 18, 1912.

MY DEAR SIR: In response to your letter of the 14th instant, the department incloses herewith a copy of a report, bearing date the 13th ultimo, by Chief Examiner John Speed Smith, of Seattle, Wash., in the matter of the cancellation of the certificate of naturalization of one Leonard Olsson by the Hon. C. H. Hanford, judge of the United States district court at Seattle, Wash.

Responding to the second paragraph of your letter, in which you ask for any other papers or information in the possession of the department which it thinks your subcommittee should have, it may be stated that an examination of the file, which is rather large, does not disclose anything that would appear to be of assistance to you. This, however, is simply the view of the department, expressed without any precise information as to the scope of your inquiry, and it may, therefore, be well for you to call at the office of the Division of Naturalization, No. 1333 F Street Northwest, and determine by a personal inspection of the papers whether any of them will be of assistance to you.

Very truly, yours,

CHARLES EARL, Acting Secretary.

Hon. JAMES M. GRAHAM,
Chairman Subcommittee Committee on the Judiciary,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

EXHIBIT NO. 17.

[Post-Intelligencer, March 25, 1912.]

DEFENDS RED FLAG—SOCIALIST COMMITTEEMAN TELLS WHY THEY IGNORE STARS AND STRIPES.

To the EDITOR:

When a State committeeman of the Socialist Party, in the Seattle convention of that party, suggested adjournment until the United States flag be added to the decorations, he started a near-riot and his motion was overwhelmingly voted down.

The most rudimentary regard for the bourgeois intelligence of the community makes pertinent an unequivocal statement from the Socialists in the premises and really there seems no need to beat about the bush or beg the question in any manner.

We do not regard the American flag in any greater degree than we do the Russian, German, or English flags, or that of any other capitalist or feudal nation whose people depend in the main for their food, clothing, and shelter upon the capitalistic mode of production involving the essential exploitation of labor through a system of wage slavery. We propose to abolish all such systems and governments and to substitute therefor a manner of human society by cooperation and mutual aid, pretty much like the present-day trusts, and based directly upon the industries. To be absolutely direct, we propose the entire overthrow of the government of the United States and to establish an industrial republic wherein all present-day political functions will become extinct.

In this view I am quite free to say that we may not be accurately regarded, by whoever may be concerned, as other than revolutionists. Such indeed is the case.

The socialists are an internation and as such we think infinitely more of our fellow workers in "foreign" countries than we do of the capitalists in our own country, say, for example, the workingmen of Canada, Mexico or Timbuctoo, for that matter, than we do of the mine, mill, and factory owners of the United States who so readily send troops against us under the Stars and Stripes to jab their bayonets into the pregnant loins of our women, and whose police beat our wives across pulsing nursing bosoms.

As an internation we have chosen a flag—a blood red banner, symbolical of the common ichor of the aspiring human heart. It was the first flag raised in all the world and when the world was young. It was woven of the spangled rays of the first clear dawn o' civilization. It was the daylight signal of our fathers who by night built their beacon fires on a thousand hills. It was the ensign of Spartacus and the rebelling gladiators. It inspired the early Christian communists and in later days became the first standard raised in the American revolution at Breed's hill by Gen. Warren. The Moravian sisters of Bethlehem, Pa., wove a red silk flag and presented it to Count Pulaski and it was carried at the head of the continental cavalry, and the daring Pole was buried in its folds. We have chosen it. To it alone are we loyal and we will follow it until we have made a place fit to live of this wolf-den world when we have restored the earth and the machinery to labor.

BRUCE ROGERS,
State Committeeman, Socialist Party.

EXHIBIT No. 18.

OFFICE OF UNITED STATES ATTORNEY,
Seattle, Wash., May 27, 191?.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I am in receipt of yours of the 21st instant (W. R. H.–W. W. L. 162150–1) in re United States v. Leonard Olsson.

The testimony in this case was not reported and I am therefore able to give you only an outline of the same from memory.

Olsson is a longshoreman by occupation. He was naturalized by the superior court of Pierce County, January 10, 1910, at which time he stated that he was attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same. Thereafter, in August or September following, he appeared as a witness for another applicant for naturalization and during his examination as such witness by the chief examiner of naturalization, John Speed Smith, he stated that he was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, nor well disposed to the good order and happiness of the same; also stating in response to questions that he had entertained his present views for a number of years past, and had so entertained them at the time he himself was naturalized. The substance of this statement made by him as a witness was testified to by the naturalization examiner, John Speed Smith, and also by one or two witnesses who had been particularly requested by Mr. Smith beforehand to take notice of Olsson's testimony.

At the trial of the cancellation proceedings Olsson himself stated that he had merely testified to the fact that he was not "unalterably opposed" to the principles of the Constitution of the United States. When questioned as to what he meant by not being "unalterably opposed" the defendant stated in substance and explained with some heat, "I mean that I have no superstitious reverence for the Constitution, that I do not get down on my knees and worship it as a heathen does his idol." Mr. Smith and the other witnesses, however, flatly contradicted "the unalterable" qualifications of Olsson's previous testimony as a witness.

It also appeared that at least one of the applicants for whom Olsson was appearing as a witness was denied citizenship by the superior court at the hearing on account of the views which this applicant entertained regarding our form of government.

When confronted with certain statements and doctrines of prominent Socialists in this community, Olsson testified that he belonged to the Socialist Labor Party, as distinguished from the Socialist Party, the exact nature of this distinction he did not, however, make clear. It appeared, however, that the Socialist Labor Party was not any less radical in its views than the Socialist Party. He also admitted belonging to the I. W. W. organization, but when confronted with copies of its official publication and constitution and by-laws, stated that he belonged to some different faction than the faction responsible for such publications. The nature of the distinction here again was not at all clear or satisfactory. The defendant admitted being an active participant and leader in frequent meetings held by himself and associates, at which they discussed governmental matters.

In response to questions put by the court as to his views upon the Constitution of the United States, he claimed to be familiar with it, but that he did not believe in our present form of government at all; that all land, as well as all other property which was "the product of collective labor should be owned by the people as a whole." That he and his party were in favor of abolishing entirely the present form of government and substituting therefor what he dominated "an industrial democracy."

Four witnesses beside the defendant testified in his behalf as to his general reputation of being a good citizen. Their testimony may be summarized as follows:

Mrs. Gilderman and Mrs. Estlund each admitted that they never had discussed the Government or politics with Olsson at all, but simply knew him as an acquaintance of theirs whom they occasionally saw or met on the streets in Tacoma.

Mr. Estlund testified that he had known Olsson five or six years; that he was in sympathy with Olsson's views as to "industrial changes in our form of Government."

Mr. Rush, who was naturalized in October, 1896, testified that he had known Olsson for seven years; that he never heard Olsson make any remarks from which he would suppose Olsson not to be a good citizen, or opposed to the Government of the United States. This witness himself attends regularly the meetings of a certain small association at which they discuss different propaganda regarding changes in our form of government. This witness also admitted that any one desiring to join this association must first sign a certain pledge.

I should add also that Olsson testified that he frequently took part in street corner meetings, and was devoting as much of his time as he could to the dissemination and adoption of his views.

His general attitude and demeanor upon the stand evidenced an entire lack of sympathy with, or a belief in, our form of government, not merely in some one or more few particulars, but the entire scheme of government, and that he had entertained those views at and for a long time prior to securing naturalization papers.

I have already referred to the fact that at least one of Olsson's friends and associaties was denied citizenship by the superior court of Pierce County on account of entertaining views similar to those held by Olsson.

I am informed that some effort is likely to be made by the defendant to have the case reopened in order that a copy of the proceedings may be secured. Of this, however, I have as yet not positive information.

Respectfully,

W. C. McLaren, United States Attorney.

Exhibit No. 19.

162150–14. W.–H.

Department of Justice,
Office of the Attorney General,
Washington, D. C., June 17, 1912.

Hon. James M. Graham,
Chairman Subcommittee Committee on the Judiciary,
House of Representatives.

My Dear Mr. Graham: I have yours of 14th instant. I beg to enclose a copy of a report made to me by the district attorney of the case of United States v. Oleson; also a copy of the opinion of Judge Hanford in that case.

There are no other papers or information in my possession regarding the matter.

Very truly, yours,

Geo. W. Wickersham,
Attorney General.

EXHIBIT No. 20.

W.-H.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., June 4, 1912.

Hon. VICTOR L. BERGER,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. BERGER: After you left here yesterday, I found upon investigation that the department had already caused inquiries to be made into the case of which you spoke to me, namely, the proceeding in the western district of Washington to cancel the naturalization certificate of Leonard Oleson, and, upon examining the report, I found that the proceeding was initiated at the instance of one of the local officials of the Department of Commerce and Labor, and brought by the district attorney without previous communication with this department. I found, moreover, that no report had been taken on the trial of the testimony of the witnesses and that the counsel for Mr. Oleson had requested that the decree be opened in order to enable him to make a record. I have instructed the United States attorney to facilitate him in every way within his power towards the opening of the decree and the securing of a new trial, or, failing that, of an appeal to the circuit court of appeals. I have further notified the United States attorney that, upon the facts stated by Judge Hanford in his decision, the department was of the opinion that a gross injustice had been done to Mr. Oleson in cancelling his certificate of naturalization.

I am, yours, very truly,

GEO. W. WICKERSHAM,
Attorney General.

EXHIBIT No. 21.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 3, 1912.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY,
Seattle, Wash.

Your letter May 27 reporting upon case of Leonard Oleson. Department thinks Judge Hanford has committed grave error in cancelling Oleson's certificate of naturalization upon grounds stated in his opinion. You are instructed to cooperate with respondent in effort to have case reopened and judgment set aside.

WICKERSHAM.

EXHIBIT No. 22.

W. R. H.-W. W. L. 162150-1. W. W. L.-B. G. L.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, D. C., May 21, 1912.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY,
Seattle, Wash.:

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 13th instant, enclosing a copy of Judge Hanford's opinion in the case of United States v. Leonard Oleson, in which the naturalization certificate of Oleson, who is a socialist, was canceled upon the ground that he had concealed from the court naturalizing him that he was not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, etc.

The department would like to have a reoport of the facts of this case, indicating the exact character of Oleson and also, if the testimony was reported, a copy of the proceedings.

For the Attorney-General:

HARR, A. G. G.

EXHIBIT No. 23

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 20, 1912.

MCLAREN, United States Attorney, Seattle, Wash.:

Your telegram Olson case received. Cooperate with his counsel in effort to have decree of cancellation set aside on appeal.

WICKERSHAM.

EXHIBIT No. 24.

"Labor is entitled to all it produces."

INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD.

[Founded at Chicago June 27-July 8, 1905. Preamble and constitution amended 1906, 1907, and 1908. Ratified by referendum vote. General headquarters, Hamtramck, Mich.]

PREAMBLE.

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want are found among millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life.

Between these two classes a struggle must go on until all the toilers come together on the political as well as on the industrial field and take and hold that which they produce by their labor through an economic organization of the working class without affiliation with any political party.

The rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the management of industries into fewer and fewer hands make the trades-union unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employing class, because the trades-unions foster a state of things which allows one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping defeat one another in wage wars. The trades-unions aid the employing class to mislead the workers into the belief that the working class have interests in common with their employers.

These sad conditions can be changed and the interests of the working class upheld only by an organization formed in such a way that all its members in any one industry, or in all industries, if necessary, cease work whenever a strike or lockout is on in any department thereof, thus making an injury to one an injury to all.

Therefore, without endorsing any political party, we unite under the following constitution:

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. This organization shall be known as "The Industrial Workers of the World."

SEC. 2. The Industrial Workers of the World shall be composed of actual wage-workers brought together in an organization embodying thirteen national industrial departments, national industrial unions, local industrial unions, local recruiting unions, industrial councils, and individual members. (a) Individual members shall be those actual wage-workers who, in isolated positions, desire to attach themselves to the Industrial Workers of the World until such time as a body of this organization to which they are eligible shall be organized in their locality.

(b) Local recruiting unions shall be composed of wage-workers in whose respective industries in a given locality there does not exist during their membership a local industrial union.

(c) Local industrial unions shall be composed of all the actual wage-workers in a given industry in a given locality, welded together in trade or shop branches or as the particular requirements of said industry may render necessary.

(d) A national industrial union shall be comprised of the local industrial unions of the various localities in America in a given industry.

(e) An industrial department shall be made up of national industrial unions of closely kindred industries appropriate for representation in the departmental administration, and assigned thereto by the general executive board of the Industrial Workers of the World.

(f) Industrial councils for the purpose of establishing general solidarity in a given district may be organized, and shall be composed of delegates from not less than five local industrial or local recruiting unions, and shall maintain communication between said district and general headquarters.

SEC. 3. The industrial departments shall consist of not less than ten local unions, aggregating a membership of not less than ten thousand members. The industrial departments shall be subdivided in industrial unions of closely kindred industries in the appropriate organizations for representation in the departmental administration. The subdivisions, industrial and national industrial unions, shall have complete industrial autonomy in their respective internal affairs, provided the general executive board shall have power to control these industrial unions in matters concerning the interests of the general welfare.

SEC. 4. The departments shall be designated as follows:

Department of mining industry.
Department of transportation industry.
Department of metal and machinery industry.
Department of glass and pottery industry.
Department of the foodstuffs industry.
Department of brewery, wine, and distillery industry.
Department of floricultural, stock, and general farming industries.
Department of building industry.
Department of the textile industries.
Department of the leather industries.
Department of the woodworking industries.
Department of public-service industries.
Department of miscellaneous manufacturing.

SEC. 5. The financial and industrial affairs of each national industrial department shall be conducted by an executive board of not less than seven (7) nor more than twenty-one (21), selected and elected by the general membership of said national industrial department, provided that the executive board and general membership of the said national industrial department shall be at all times subordinate to the general executive board of the Industrial Workers of the World, subject to appeal, and provided the expenses of such referendum shall be borne by the national industrial departments, or national industrial union, or unions involved.

ARTICLE II.

OFFICERS—HOW SELECTED AND THE DUTIES THEREOF.

SEC. 1. The officers of the Industrial Workers of the World shall be a general secretary-treasurer, an assistant secretary and general organizer, an editor, and a general executive board composed of one member of each industrial department.

SEC. 2. The general secretary-treasurer, the assistant secretary, and general organizer and editor shall be nominated and elected from the floor of the convention.

DUTIES OF THE OFFICERS.

SEC. 3. (a) The duties of the general secretary-treasurer shall be to take charge of all books, papers, and effects of the office. He shall be nominated and elected as provided for in Article II, section 2, and shall hold office until his successor is duly elected, qualified, and installed, except in case he shall be removed from office, when his place shall be filled temporarily by the general executive board. He shall furnish a copy of all proceedings to each affiliated local union regardless of their affiliation, if any, with any of the departments of the Industrial Workers of the World.

(b) He shall conduct the correspondence pertaining to his office; he shall be the custodian of the seal of the organization and shall attach the name to all official documents over his official signature; he shall provide such stationery and office supplies as are necessary for the conducting of affairs of the organization; he shall act as secretary at all meetings of the general executive board and all conventions and furnish the committee on credentials at each convention a statement of the financial standing of each national industrial department, national industrial union, industrial council, and local union.

(c) He shall have a voice but no vote in the governing bodies of the organization.

(d) The general secretary-treasurer shall close his accounts for the fiscal year on the last day of June for each year. He shall make a monthly financial report to the general executive board and a quarterly financial report to the general membership, through the general executive board, and he shall make a complete itemized report of the financial and other affairs of his office to each annual convention.

(e) He shall prepare and sign all charters issued by the general executive board. He shall receive all moneys for charters, dues, assessments, and supplies from national industrial departments, national industrial unions, industrial councils, local unions, and members at large; he shall receipt for same and care for and deposit all moneys as instructed to do by the general executive board in some solvent bank, or banks, which shall be drawn out only to pay indebtedness arising out of the due conducting of the business of the organization, and then only after bill shall have been first duly presented by the creditor when, in payment thereof, a check shall be drawn and signed by him.

(f) For the honest and faithful discharge of his duties he shall give a bond in such sum, or sums, as may be fixed by the convention or general executive board, the bond so given to be approved by the general executive board and kept in their custody.

(g) He shall devote his entire time to the affairs of the organization and shall at all times be under the supervision of the general executive board, and shall receive for his services a compensation as determined by general convention.

(h) He shall, with the approval of the general executive board, employ such assistance as is necessary to conduct the affairs of his office. Remuneration for such employees shall be fixed by the general executive board and paid as other bills and indebtedness, as hereinbefore provided for; he shall convene the general executive board as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 4. (a) It shall be the duty of the assistant secretary and general organizer to at all times assist the general secretary-treasurer in the discharge of his duties as above outlined.

(b) He shall supervise the work of organizers in the field, shall have a voice but no vote in the governing bodies of the organization, and for his services he shall receive a compensation as determined by general convention.

SEC. 5. It shall be the duty of the editor to edit the official organ, under the supervision of the general executive board.

DUTIES OF THE GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD.

SEC. 6. The general executive board shall be composed of one member from each national industrial department, as provided for in Article II, section 1, and shall be elected by their respective national industrial departments.

SEC. 7. The general executive board shall have general supervision of the entire affairs of the organization between conventions, and watch vigilantly over the interests throughout its jurisdiction. They shall be assisted by the officers and members of all organizations subordinate to the Industrial Workers of the World.

SEC. 8. They shall appoint such organizers as the conditions of the organization may justify. All organizers shall at all times work under the instruction of the general organizer. All organizers, while in the employ of the Industrial Workers of the World, shall report to the general organizer in writing on blanks provided for that purpose at least once each week. They shall receive as compensation for their services three dollars per day and legitimate expenses. All national organizers must be members at large during the term of their employment.

SEC. 9. The decisions of the general executive board on all matters pertaining to the organization or any subordinate part thereof shall be binding, subject to an appeal to the next convention, or to the entire membership of the organization, provided that, in case of a referendum vote of the membership is demanded by any subordinate, or subdepartment, part of the organization, the expense of submitting the matter to the referendum shall be borne by the organization taking the appeal, except wherein the decision of the general executive board shall be reversed by a vote of the membership; then the expense shall be borne by the general organization.

SEC. 10. The general executive board shall have full power to issue charters to national industrial departments, national industrial unions, industrial councils, and local unions, as provided for in Article I, section 2. They shall also have power to charter and classify unions, or organizations, not herein provided for.

STRIKE AND LOCKOUT.

SEC. 11. (a) In case the members of any subordinate organization of the Industrial Workers of the World are involved in strike, regularly ordered by the organization, or general executive board, or involved in a lockout, if in the opinion of the general executive board it becomes necessary to call out any other union, or unions, or organization, they shall have full power to do so.

(b) Any agreement entered into between the members of any local union or organization and their employers as a final settlement of any difficulty or trouble which may occur between them shall not be considered valid or binding until the same shall have the approval of the general executive board of the Industrial Workers of the World. (c) A local union shall be entitled to assistance from the general organization in cases of strike only when the general organization has allowed or endorsed the said strike.

SEC. 12. The general executive board shall meet twice within the fiscal year to audit the books of the general secretary-treasurer and transact such other business as may come before them.

SEC. 13. The general executive board shall, by a two-thirds vote, have power to levy a special assessment when subordinate parts of the organization are involved in strikes and the conditions of the treasury make such action necessary, but no special assessment shall exceed 50 cents per member in any one month nor more than six (6) such assessments in any one year, unless the same shall have been approved by a referendum vote of the entire membership.

SEC. 14. The general executive board shall have full power and authority over the official organ and guide its policy.

ARTICLE III.

CONVENTIONS.

SEC. 1. (a) The convention of the Industrial Workers of the World is the supreme legislative body of the organization, and its actions and enactments are of legal force unless reversed upon a referendum vote by the whole membership touching any and all amendments to the organic law which the convention may adopt.

(b) As to such actions and amendments, they shall be submitted to a referendum vote by the G. E. B. within thirty days after the adjournment of the convention. The vote shall close sixty days after the date of the call for the referendum.

SEC. 2. The annual convention of the Industrial Workers of the World shall be held on the third Monday in September of each year at such place as may be determined by previous convention.

SEC. 3. The general executive board shall draw up a list of delegates against whom no contest has been filed at the general office. The general secretary-treasurer shall call the convention to order and read the aforesaid list. The delegates on the said list shall proceed to form a temporary organization by electing a temporary chairman and a committee on credentials.

SEC. 4. A true and complete stenographic report of the proceedings of all general conventions and of the meetings of the general executive board shall be printed in bound form as soon as possible after the adjournment of the convention.

SEC. 5. Delegates to the annual convention shall be as hereinafter provided for:

(a) Members of the general executive board shall be delegates at large with one vote each, but shall not be accredited delegates nor carry the vote of any union or organization.

(b) National industrial departments shall have two delegates for the first 10,000 of its members, and an additional delegate for each additional 5,000 of its members or major portion thereof.

(c) Local unions, chartered directly by the Industrial Workers of the World, shall have one delegate for 200 members or less, and one additional delegate for each additional 200 or major fraction thereof.

(d) When two or more delegates are representing any local union, national union, or industrial department in the convention, the vote of their respective organization shall be equally divided between such delegates.

SEC. 6. Representation in the convention shall be based on the national dues paid to the general organization for the last six months of each fiscal year, and each union and organization entitled to representation in the convention shall be entitled to one vote for the first fifty (50) of its members and one additional vote for each additional fifty (50) of its members, or major fraction thereof.

SEC. 7. No delegate shall cast more than ten votes.

SEC. 8. On or before the 10th day of July of each year the general secretary-treasurer shall send to each local union and national industrial department credentials in duplicate for the number of delegates they are entitled to in the convention, based on the national dues for the last six months.

SEC. 9. The unions and national industrial departments shall properly fill out the blank credentials received from the general secretary-treasurer and return one copy to the general office not later than August 1st. The other copy shall be presented by the delegate to the committee on credentials when the convention assembles.

SEC. 10. Delegates to the convention from local unions must have been members in good standing of their local union at least six months prior to the assembling of the convention; provided their local union has been organized that length of time.

SEC. 11. Delegates from national industrial departments, to have a seat in the convention, must have been members of their local union at least six months and of their national industrial union at least one year; provided it has been organized that length of time.

SEC. 12. The expense of delegates attending the convention shall be borne by their respective organization.

SEC. 13. Two or more local unions in the same locality, with a total membership of 500, or less, may jointly send a delegate to the convention and the vote of said delegate shall be based on the representation hereinbefore provided for, provided said delegate is a member in good standing of one of the locals so sending him.

SEC. 14. No local shall be admitted to representation unless it has been duly chartered at least three months before the call for the convention and is otherwise in good standing.

ARTICLE IV.

THE LABEL.

SEC. 1. (a) There shall be a universal label for the entire organization. It shall be of a crimson color and always the same in design. The use of the universal label shall never be delegated to employers, but shall be vested entirely in our organization. Except on stickers, circulars, and literature proclaiming the merits of the Industrial Workers of the World, and emanating from the general offices of the Industrial Workers of the World, the universal label shall be printed only as evidence of work done by I. W. W men.

(b) When the label is so printed, it shall be done by the authority of our organization, without the intervention of any employer.

SEC. 2. Whenever the universal label is placed upon a commodity as evidence of work done by industrial workers, it shall be accompanied by an inscription, underneath the label, stating what the work is that industrial workers have done, giving the name of the industrial department to which they belong, and the number or numbers of their local unions; and the universal label shall never be printed as evidence of work performed without this inscription.

ARTICLE V.

REVENUE OF THE ORGANIZATION.

SEC. 1. The revenue of the organization shall be derived as follows: Charter fees for national industrial departments shall be $25; for national industrial unions $15; for district councils, local unions, and branches shall be $10.

SEC. 2. National industrial departments and national industrial unions shall pay as general dues into the treasury of the Industrial Workers of the World the rate of 3 cents per month per member; industrial councils shall pay a flat rate of $1 per month for the organization; local unions shall pay 5 cents per member per month, together with such assessments as may be levied as provided for in Article II, section 14.

SEC. 3. Individual members may be admitted to membership at large in the organization as provided for in Article I, section 2, on payment of 50 cents initiation fee and 25 cents per month dues, together with such assessments as may be levied by the general executive board, all of which shall be paid to the general secretary-treasurer, provided members at large shall remain such so long as they are outside the jurisdiction of a local union subordinate to the general organization; but on moving within the jurisdiction of a local union of the Industrial Workers of the World, or any of its subordinate organizations, they shall transfer their membership from the union at large to the local union in whose jurisdiction they are employed.

SEC. 4. The initiation fee for members of local unions shall not exceed $5. The regular monthly dues shall be not more than $1 per month, together with such assessments as may be levied, as provided for in Article II, section 5, provided no part of the initiation fee or dues above mentioned shall be used as a sick or death benefit, but shall be held in the treasury as a general fund to defray the legitimate expenses of the union.

SEC. 5. National industrial departments and unions shall charge for initiation fee an amount not exceeding $5.

SEC. 6. All national industrial departments and national industrial unions subordinate to the Industrial Workers of the World shall collect from the membership of their organization a per capita tax at the rate of not more than 25 cents per member per month, provided that no part of the above mentioned moneys shal be used for sick, accident, or death fund, but shall be held in the treasury of national industrial departments for the purpose of paying the legitimate expenses of maintaining the organizations.

ARTICLE VI.

MEMBERSHIP, ETC.

SEC. 1. None but actual wage workers shall be members of the Industrial Workers of the World.

SEC. 2. A majority vote cast shall rule in the general organization and its subordinate parts, except as otherwise provided for in this constitution.

SEC. 3. No member of the Industrial Workers of the World shall be an officer in a pure and simple trade union.

SEC. 4. No member of one industrial or trade organization in the Industrial Workers of the World can at the same time hold a card in another industrial or trade organization of the Industrial Workers of the World.

SEC. 5. No member of a trade which is organized in his locality is qualified for admission in a mixed local in the same locality, and no member of a mixed local can remain a member of the same after his trade has been organized in that locality.

SEC. 6. The general executive board, or not less than ten (10) locals in at least three (3) industries, may initiate a referendum on any subject. The issuance of the referendum to be governed by Article III, section 1*b*.

SEC. 7. So soon as there are ten (10) local unions with not less than 10,000 members in any one industry, the general executive board shall immediately proceed to call a convention of that industry and to organize them as a national industrial department of the Industrial Workers of the World.

SEC. 8. All unions, departments, and individual members must procure supplies, such as membership books, seals, official buttons, labels, badges, and dues stamps from the general secretary-treasurer, all of which shall be of uniform design.

SEC. 9. There shall be a free interchange of cards between all organizations subordinate to the Industrial Workers of the World and any local union, or national industrial union, or industrial department shall accept, in lieu of initiation fee, the paid-up membership card of any recognized labor union or organization.

SEC. 10. All departments and other subordinate organizations of the Industrial Workers of the World shall use the official I. W. W. stamps in union membership book, or the dues to be paid in advance, and to be in good standing a union member must not be more than three months in arrears for dues.

ARTICLE VII.

PLEDGES FOR OFFICERS, ETC.

SECTION 1. All officers in the I. W. W. when being installed into office shall be required to give the following pledge:

"Having been entrusted by my fellow wage workers with the position I am about to assume, I do solemnly pledge my word and honor that I will obey the constitution, rules, and regulations of the Industrial Workers of the World, and that, keeping always in view its fundamental principles and final aims, I will to the best of my ability perform the task assigned to me. I believe in and understand the two sentences: 'The working class and the employing class have nothing in common,' and 'Labor is entitled to all it produces.'"

INITIATING MEMBERS.

SEC. 2. Applicants for membership upon being presented to the presiding officer of the local union shall have read to them the preamble and shall be asked the questions following:

(a) Do you agree to abide by the constitution and regulations of this organization?

(b) Will you diligently study its principles and make yourself acquainted with its purposes? The applicant answering affirmatively shall be declared a member of the Industrial Workers of the World.

ORGANIZERS—DUTIES.

SEC. 3. No organizer of the I. W. W while on the platform for this organization shall advocate any political party or political party platform.

SEC. 4. No member of the I. W. W. shall represent the organization before a body of wage earners without first having been authorized by the general executive board or a subordinate part of the I. W. W.

ARTICLE VIII.

CHARGES, TRIALS, AND APPEALS.

SEC. 1. All charges must be preferred in writing, in duplicate form.

SEC. 2. Charges must specifically state offense, time and place of same, and must be signed by member or members making the charge.

SEC. 3. The charges shall be read at the meeting of the union of which the accused is a member, whereupon said body shall set a date for trial, same to be not less than seven nor more than thirty days from date of meeting at which charges were read.

SEC. 4. If the accused is present at the meeting he shall be served with a copy of the charges. If absent, the corresponding secretary shall send to his last address, by registered mail, a copy of the charges attested by seal of the union, also notice to appear and answer the charges on the date set for trial.

SEC. 5. Failure of the grievance or investigation committee, if any, to present its report on the trial date shall not interfere with the holding of trial.

SEC. 6. At the time specified for trial the body shall, after a full hearing of the report of the grievance or investigation committee, if any, and of the testimony of both sides, proceed to vote by ballot on the charges preferred.

SEC. 7. In the event of the charges being sustained by a majority vote of the members present, the accused shall retire, after which the body shall determine by vote the punishment to be imposed on the accused.

SEC. 8. All decisions for suspension or expulsion must be published in the earliest issue of the official organ of the I. W. W.

SEC. 9. Any member notified to appear for trial and failing to appear shall be suspended and the case declared against him by default.

SEC. 10. Any member found guilty upon trial shall not be entitled to any benefits or privileges until the terms of the decision rendered shall have been complied with.

SEC. 11. Appeals shall be taken to the next superior body—i. e., from branch to local, from local to industrial council, to general executive board, and finally to convention. In a national industrial union or department the course of appeal to be as provided by the constitution of such body. While appeals are pending the appellant, if suspended or expelled, shall be excluded from all meetings of branches, locals, or industrial councils.

SEC. 12. All appeals must be filed within two weeks after the decision has been rendered. One copy of the appeal to be served on the corresponding secretary of the body that imposed sentence, as a notice that appeal has been taken. The body receiving such notice must file its answer witin two weeks, or case will be declared against it by default.

BY-LAWS FOR LOCAL UNIONS.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

1. Election of presiding officers.
   NOTE.—Omit this when officers are elected for term.
2. Roll call of officers.
3. Reading of minutes.
4. Propositions for membership.
5. Payment of dues.
6. Admission and obligation of members.
7. Correspondence and bills.
8. Report of officers.
9. Report of committees (special and regular).
10. Report of delegates.
11. Election of officers and committees.
12. Official journal and literature.
13. Unfinished business.
14. New business.
15. Labor question.
16. Reading of receipts and expenses since the last meeting, by secretary.
17. Adjournment.

ARTICLE I.

SEC. 1. Local unions shall be composed of not less than ten members and shall not surrender their charter if seven members in good standing object thereto.

SEC. 2. They shall meet at least once a month, seven members to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

ARTICLE II.

SEC. 1. No working man or working woman shall be excluded from membership because of creed or color.

SEC. 2. Candidates who do not appear within thirty days for initiation, after their election to membership, shall forfeit their initiation fee.

SEC. 3. When a question arises as to eligibility of an applicant or member, the G. E. B. shall decide.

ARTICLE III.

SEC. 1. The officers of the local union shall consist of a recording, corresponding and financial secretary, treasurer, sergeant at arms, three trustees, and such other officers and committees as the local union may deem necessary.

SEC. 2. Officers shall be elected semiannually. Nominations to be made at the first meeting and election to take place at the last meeting of June and December. New officers shall be installed on the day of election.

SEC. 3. When an officer is absent from three consecutive meetings without valid excuse, his office shall be declared vacant. Election to fill vacancies for the unexpired term to be held at the next regular meeting.

SEC. 4. The corresponding secretary shall at once furnish the general secretary-treasurer of the I. W. W. with the names and adresses of the new officers for the purpose of compiling the official directory.

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 1. The recording secretary shall keep a correct record of the proceedings of each meeting, and record the financial statement at the close of each meeting.

SEC. 2. The corresponding secretary shall receive all communications and attend to all correspondence assigned to him. He shall issue all warrants on the treasury for moneys ordered paid, and shall be the custodian of the official seal. (Locals can at will combine this office with that of the recording or financial secretary.)

SEC. 3. The financial secretary shall keep accurate accounts between his local, its members, and the general headquarters; he shall receive all initiation fees, dues, fines, assessments, and all other moneys belonging to the local, and for all dues and assessments collected by him he must place a separate stamp in the member's book for each month's dues or assessment paid, and shall cancel same with a dating stamp, showing day, month, and year when payment was made. He shall report before the close of the meeting all income since the last meeting and turn same over to the treasurer and take receipt therefor. He shall keep a complete list of the addresses of all members and note changes when reported. He shall at all times have his books ready for inspection by the proper officials and shall give a full report monthly to his local and the general secretary-treasurer.

SEC. 4. The treasurer shall receive moneys from the financial secretary, and give receipt. He shall pay all bills ordered by the local, and submit monthly a report of all receipts and expenditures. He shall deposit all moneys above a specified amount in a bank named by the local.

SEC. 5. The sergeant at arms shall have charge of the door and see that none but members enter, except by order of the meeting. He shall examine every person's book and see that same are correct and paid up, and shall report every member who is delinquent to the presiding officer.

SEC. 6. The trustees shall hold in trust all bonds, securities, and property of the union, shall keep a correct account of all bank deposits, and sign all orders for withdrawal of such money if ordered by the local, shall examine all books and accounts of the financial secretary and treasurer once every three months, and report their findings to the local union. Local unions can elect auditing or special committees for the purposes of auditing the books of their officers.

SEC. 7. All officers must turn over at the end of their terms to their successors or at any time to a committee elected for that purpose all books and property of the union that they may have in their possession and perform such duties as may be assigned to them. They must furnish bonds through some responsible surety company at the expense of the local union.

ARTICLE V.

SEC. 1. Members transferring to other locals must pay up all dues and assessments, the financial secretary to note the transfer, if granted, in the membership book. When a local union to which a member transfers collects for delinquent dues and assessments, 25 per cent of such moneys shall be retained by the local making the collection and 75 per cent shall be remitted to the local to which the member formerly belonged.

SEC. 2. Members leaving the organization whose dues and assessments are paid, may, upon application, receive withdrawal cards. Same shall not be used in place of transfer cards, and do not confer any rights or privileges, and serve only as a certificate that the person holding such card left his local honorably. A withdrawal card exempts the holder from payment of initiation fee upon application for readmittance, but he shall not be entitled to any benefits until 30 days after he has been accepted and has paid at least one month's dues. Withdrawal cards to be refused during a strike or when a strike is expected.

SEC. 3. Resignations must be put in writing, stating reasons, but no action shall be taken by the local until the resigning member has settled all accounts with the organization up to date.

ARTICLE VI.

SEC. 1. Locals may decide their own initiation fee, dues, and assessments, same to be in conformity with the general constitution.

SEC. 2. Members in arrears for six months shall be stricken from the books.

SEC. 3. Only members in good standing to take part in voting on any subject at a regular or special meeting.

ARTICLE VII.

SEC. 1. Members changing their address shall at once notify the local financial secretary.

SEC. 2. Local unions changing time or place of meetings shall advise immediately the general secretary-treasurer, so that the official directory of the I. W. W. may be correct at all times.

ARTICLE VIII.

SEC. 1. Locals can make their own by-laws, subject, however, to inspection of the industrial district council of the locality and the approval of the general executive board.

SEC. 2. All questions of a parliamentary nature shall be decided by Roberts's Rules of Order.

EXHIBIT No. 25.

[Tacoma Ledger, Sept. 13, 1910.]

DENIES DEVOTION TO CONSTITUTION—RECENTLY NATURALIZED CITIZEN MAY GET IN TROUBLE FOR STATEMENTS REGARDING GOVERNMENTAL BELIEFS.

While testifying in favor of an applicant for naturalization papers yesterday afternoon in Judge C. M. Easterday's department of the superior court, Leonard Olson, a naturalized citizen of the United States, said he was not devotedly attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and was not when he was admitted to citizenship. The announcement came as a sudden shock in the proceedings that had progressed without a hitch up to that point. One of the particular sections in the oath of allegiance to the United States requires the applicant to swear support to the Constitution.

Olson's statement of his ideas is in direct violation of the oath he took last January and will perhaps involve him in a serious predicament. He stated to Examiner J. Speed Smith that he had held these views for several years and said he believed certain changes could be made in the Constitution for the betterment of the Nation as a whole. A memorandum of his assertions was taken by Examiner Smith, and it is probable that proceedings will be started shortly to cancel his certificate of citizenship. Assistant Examiner William S. Graham said last night that Olson's statement was in violation of his oath.

"The statement of Olson was a surprise," said Mr. Graham. "When the oath requires one to swear support to the Constitution one would naturally suppose any man to be sincere when performing a serious act of that sort. It is the duty of the prosecuting attorney to decide whether he shall be prosecuted for perjury or not. The violation of the oath and the cancellation of his admission papers must be taken up with the United States district attorney."

The application of Carl Olson, for whom Leonard Olson was testifying, was denied when another witness failed to show that he had known him five years. Guido Luzi failed in his attempt owing to the incompetency of one of his witnesses who had not known him during the five years required by law.

NOTE: There is no exhibit numbered 26. Mistake was made in numbering.

EXHIBIT No. 27.

Before the House of Representatives of the United States of America.

In the matter of the impeachment of Cornelius H. Hanford, judge of the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division.

I. That Cornelius H. Hanford is now and for many years last past has been the duly appointed, commissioned, confirmed, and acting judge of the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, and pursuant to Revised Statutes, section 712, took the following oath of office:

"I, Cornelius H. Hanford, do solemnly swear that I will administer justice without respect to persons and to do equal right to the poor and to the rich, and that I will faithfully and impersonally discharge and perform all the duties incumbent on me as judge according to the best of my abilities and understanding agreeably to the Constitution and laws of the United States. So help me God."

And complainants ask that this allegation be taken, considered, and made a part of every article herein contained.

II. That Cornelius H. Hanford during said incumbency in office has constantly violated his oath of office and by his unlawful acts of commission and omission, by his malfeasance and misfeasance in office, together with his immoral conduct during said incumbency in office, has rendered himself unfit and incompetent to fill the position of said judge, and that because of his gross misbehavior in office he should be forthwith impeached and removed, and for these reasons among others.

III. That during all the times mentioned herein the said Cornelius H. Hanford has on many and divers nights remained out in the various saloons and bar rooms in Seattle, indulging in drunkenness and immoral dissipation to such late hours after midnight that he rendered himself unfit morally, mentally, and physically to perform his judicial duties the following day; that during said period of years he has become addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and that from the effects of said intoxication he is tyrannical, impatient, intolerant, unfair, and unjust toward many clients and attorneys who have business before him.

Wherefore, the said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, misbehaved himself and was and is guilty of gross misconduct and misdemeanor in office.

IV. That said Cornelius H. Hanford is now and for many years last past has been a grossly immoral and dissolute man; that he is a libertine, and for these reasons and among others; that prior to the closing of the tenderloin district in Seattle (which had existed many years prior to the year 1911, when it was closed) he habitually frequented said district and sought and had therein the company and society of lewd and dissolute women, and that by reason of keeping such late hours by night and dissipating in the aforesaid manner he rendered himself unfit morally and physically to properly attend to his judicial duties the following day.

Wherefore, the said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge aforesaid, misbehaved himself and was and is guilty of gross misconduct and misdemeanor in office.

V. And that since the closing of the district hereinbefore mentioned and at all times since while judge as aforesaid, said Cornelius H. Hanford visited and associated with one "Jane Doe," whose true name to the complainants is unknown, a resident of Seattle, Washington; that in visiting said "Jane Doe" defendant would usually go at the late hours of night and he would employ a code of signals to inform her that he was about to enter her house and in order that he would not be detected by anyone said "Jane Doe" employed a code of signals by a certain arrangement and motion of the window shade whereby said judge was informed that he would not be detected upon his entrance to said place, and that he did remain with her until such late hours of night and would return therefrom in such a drunken and dissolute condition that it would render him unfit morally and physically to perform his judicial duties the following day. And that in furtherance of the allegations herein contained complainants attach hereto a flashlight photograph taken of said judge leaving the said "Jane Doe" in the late hours of the night and ask that said photograph be marked "Exhibit A" and made a part of this complaint.

Wherefore, said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, misbehaved himself and was and is guilty of gross misconduct and misdemeanor in office.

VI. That Cornelius H. Hanford has been guilty of gross and wilfull malfeasance and misfeasance and has grossly abused and misused the powers of his office in the following manner, among others: On the 21st day of August, 1912, in the case of Augustus S. Peabody, trustee, plaintiff, against Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway, City of Seattle, et al., defendants, No. 2012, said suit being openly and notoriously conceived in collusion; said judge abused and misused the writ of injunction by issuing on that day an injunction without notice and without a hearing forbidding, among other things, the following: The Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Company from refusing and failing to collect an additional five-cent fare from all passengers transported north and south of Kenyon Street; enjoining the street railway from issuing any transfers except on the payment of an additional five-cent fare (a few days later arbitrarily and unlawfully modified to three cents); enjoining the giving of receipts to the traveling public for the fares thus collected; enjoining the people from even asking for a transfer. That said act was an attempt to override the franchise granted by said city to said railway company and the law of the State of Washington as decided by the supreme court of said State on July 14, 1911, in the case of State of Washington ex rel J. A. Dennison, respondent, against Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Company, appellant, compelling said company to carry passengers and issue a transfer for a five-cent fare as per their franchise terms, and in violation of the United States Revised Statutes, sec. 720, to wit:

"The writ of injunction shall not be granted by any court of the United States to stay proceedings in any court of the State except in cases where such injunction may be authorized by any law relating to proceedings in bankruptcy."

That said writ of injunction was issued under the guise of this fictitious and collusive action brought by said Augustus S. Peabody, trustee, as aforesaid; that his action therein was unlawful, oppressive, high-handed, unjust, and a violation of his oath of office.

Wherefore, the said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, misbehaved himself and was and is guilty of gross misconduct and misdemeanor, malfeasance, and misfeasance, and abuse of his judicial power in office.

VIII. That said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, wilfully and unlawfully usurped and abused the judicial powers in a manner contrary to law, reason, justice, and common sense, and attempted to thwart the will of the people of Seattle, Washington, in this, to wit: The citizens and electors of the city of Seattle undertook, endeavored, and purposed to hold a recall election in said city on March 7, 1911, for the purpose of recalling the mayor of said city; that at the instance of one Frank H. Scobey, plaintiff, a nonresident of the State of Washington, an action before said Cornelius H. Hanford was brought against William J. Bothwell, city comptroller, and others; said city was enjoined and restrained from holding or attempting to hold said election; that the financial and property interests of said Scobey situated in said city, which he claimed would be affected and endangered by his portion of the expenses of said recall election, amounted to the sum of seven cents, and the issuance of said writ of injunction was a gross abuse of the judicial powers of said office, whereby said Hanford sought to subvert and thwart the will of more than seventy thousand voters of said city of Seattle.

Wherefore the said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, misbehaved himself in office, and was and is guilty of wilful, corrupt, and gross usurpation of power, and of a high misdemeanor in office.

IX. That said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, unlawfully and wrongfully abused his trust and misused his judicial power in this, to wit, that heretofore in the year 1905 a certain cause, No. 1083, in the United States Circuit Court, entitled the Alaska Packers' Association, complainant, against Thomas B. McGovern, et al., receivers of the Pacific Packing & Navigation Company, et al, was pending before said court, a receiver for said corporation was pending before said court, a receiver for said corporation was appointed; that Messrs. Kerr & McCord were attorneys for said receiver; that said Cornelius H. Hanford allowed said attorneys and receivers the exorbitant sum of approximately one hundred forty thousand dollars ($140,000.00) and that said fees were so grossly exorbitant that the assets of said corporation were thereby largely consumed, to the financial injury of the stockholders and creditors of the said corporation. That as a motive for the allowance of such an exorbitant fee said attorneys were commercially and financially associated with Cornelius H. Hanford and did become associated with him in this, that on December 2, 1905, said Cornelius H. Hanford, together with said attorneys, E. S. McCord and James A. Kerr, among others, promoted, organized, and incorporated the Hanford Irrigation & Power Company, with a capitalization of two hundred fifty thousand dollars ($250,000.00); that a large tract of land was purchased from the Northern Pacific Railway Company in Benton County, Washington; that after its organization and incorporation Cornelius H. Hanford, together with Attorneys Kerr & McCord, became one of the stockholders and trustees of said corporation; that the allowance of the above exorbitant fee was a prearranged and corrupt plan on the part of said Cornelius H. Hanford with Messrs. Kerr & McCord and their subordinates in order to advance the personal interests of said Cornelius H. Hanford and his business associates.

Wherefore, the said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, misbehaved himself in office and was guilty of misconduct and misdemeanor in office.

X. That said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, has repeatedly violated that portion of his oath of office "to do equal right to the poor and to the rich"; that he is a tool of corporate wealth and privilege seeking corporations, and looks with scorn and hatred upon the struggle of the great masses of mankind for better conditions and a more equitable distribution of this wealth which labor by its toil creates, and as one of the many instances of such gross misconduct and absolute unfairness is the case in said United States district court of Eli Melovich, complainant, against the Stone-Webster Engineering Company, a corporation, defendant, wherein the complainant, a laborer, lost his arm while working about the machinery of said defendant, and after trial the jury returned a judgment in favor of the plaintiff in the sum of twelve thousand two hundred sixty-two dollars ($12,262); on October 10, 1911, Messrs. Kerr & McCord, business associates of said Cornelius H. Hanford, moved to set aside the judgment. Upon the argument Judge Cornelius H. Hanford used the following language:

"I do not wish to hear you upon any subject except the use of the word 'any,' Mr. Myers (attorney for complainant). It is for you to show me that the word was properly used."

Turning to Mr. Kerr, Judge Hanford said:

"I would not hesitate to grant the nonsuit in this case were it not for the number of times this court has been reversed by the Court of Appeals."

Further the court said:

"He (referring to the plaintiff) was able-bodied and lost his arm, it is true, but in keeping with other causes he got five times as much as he should, and the verdict is unjust."

And upon a petition for a rehearing Judge Hanford used the following language:

"While it is true that cases of this sort must be decided by a jury, nevertheless when a verdict is unconscionable the court in the exercise of discretion may require that two juries may be given an opportunity to pass on the case. The superstructure is based on the word 'any.' I explained the use of this word 'any' by the fact that from weariness my mind was not as acute as it should have been at the time, and although no exception was taken at the time, it is a matter that appeals to my discretion, and justice requires the granting of a new trial."

That the plaintiff in said cause was an able-bodied laborer, capable of earning three dollars ($3.00) a day at manual labor and in the prime of his manhood; that his arm was ground off in the cogwheels of the machinery completely up to his shoulder; that the pain and torture suffered was enormous; that Cornelius H. Hanford was guilty of an abuse of his judicial power in setting aside said verdict on either the ground of the use of the word "any" or on the ground that the verdict was "he got five times as much as he should"; that it was only just and reasonable compensation to the said plaintiff for his future incapacity to work and earn a living, and the pain and suffering he endured. Hereto is attached a photograph of Eli Melovich, plaintiff, showing said injury, and is made a part of this allegation as "Exhibit B."

Wherefore, the said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, was and is guilty of judicial usurpation and intolerance for the rights of the poor as against the rich and misbehaved himself in office, and was guilty of misconduct and misdemeanor in office.

XI. That Cornelius H. Hanford, judge as aforesaid, has lost the respect, esteem, and confidence of the law-abiding people of the State of Washington to such an extent that his power for useful service as such judge is past; that he brings the judiciary into public scorn, contempt, disrespect, and disgrace; that during all the years herein mentioned, while said Cornelius H. Hanford has been judge, he has been and is a moral bankrupt by night and a judicial pervert by day; that his commercial relations with corporations and individuals have caused him over a period of years to constantly violate the spirit of the United States Revised Statutes, section 601.

XII. And complainants by protestation saving to themselves the liberty of exhibiting any further articles of accusation of impeachment against the said Cornelius H. Hanford, judge of the United States Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, and also of replying to his answers which he shall make unto the charges herein preferred against him, and in offering proof to the same, and of every part thereof, and to all and every other article or accusation of impeachment which shall be exhibited by them as the case shall require, do demand that the said Cornelius H. Hanford may be put to answer the high crimes and misdemeanors in office herein charged against him, and that such proceedings, trials, and judgments may be thereupon had and given as may be agreeable to law and to justice.

(Signed) JOHN H. PERRY.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

John H. Perry, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is a resident citizen of Seattle, King County, State of Washington, a member of the bar of the State of Washington and of the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division; that he is cognizant of the charges contained in the matter herein set out; that he has investigated or caused to be investigated the allegations therein contained and that he believes the same to be true and correct.

(Signed) JOHN H. PERRY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 22d day of May, A. D. 1912.

[SEAL.] (Signed) IRVING M. CLARK,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

EXHIBIT No. 28.

Certificates of respective clerks of the court showing number of days in which Judge Hanford has been in attendence in open court from June, 1890, to June, 1912, covering a period of twenty-two years, as follows:

	Days.
Seattle	3,500
Tacoma	979
Bellingham	22
Spokane	679
Walla Walla	160
North Yakima	23
Helena	5
San Francisco (district court)	45
San Francisco (circuit court of appeals)	88
Total	5,501
Number of days in the year	365
Average number of days per year	250
	115
Number of Sundays per year	52
Average number of days per year not in court	63

EXHIBIT No. 29.

Judge Hanford attended sessions for the circuit court of appeals for the 9th circuit at the February and October sessions in the year 1910, and the May session in the year 1911, being required to do so by being designated for that service under a provision of the law constituting that court. As a member of the court he participated in the hearing and decision of the following list of cases:

The Calif. Nav. & Impr. Co. v. The Union Transportation Co. (176 Fed., 533).

S. W. Bollinger & F. F. Bollinger vs. The Central National Bank et al. (177 Fed., 609).

The Southern Pac. Company et al. vs. The Arlington Heights Fruit Co. et al. 911) Fed., 101).

T. R. Sheridan vs. The Southern Pacific Co. (179 Fed., 81).

F. E. Earnhart vs. John B. Switzler (179 Fed., 832).

United States of America vs. Frank Grosjean et al. (184 Fed., 593).

The San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake R. R. Co. vs. Maggie Thomas and John Thomas (187 Fed., 790).

In the matter of the estate of Fred Dorr, a bankrupt, vs. John J. Forbis (186 Fed., 276).

The Barkentine Aurora vs. Maggie Boyce (191 Fed., 960).

William Hanley vs. United States of America (186 Fed., 711).

Steamship Indrapura vs. Gilbert Palache et al. (190 Fed., 711).

Boise City, Idaho, vs. Boise Artesian H. & C. Water Co. (186 Fed., 705).

The North American Dredging Co. vs. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. (185 Fed., 698).

S. H. Stewart vs. O. G. Laberee, Receiver (185 Fed., 471).

The Northwestern S. S. Co. vs. O. D. Cochran (191 Fed., 146).

Lew Quen Wo vs. United States of America (184 Fed., 685).

George W. Dwinnell et al. vs. United States of America (186 Fed., 754).

Maritime Investment Co. vs. Hanos (184 Fed., 596).

Calif. Nav. & Impr. Co. vs. Stockton Milling Co. (184 Fed., 369).

Steamship Wellesley Co. vs. C. A. Hooper & Co. (185 Fed., 733).

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. vs. Alice M. Gilliland (193 Fed., 608).

Corcoran vs. United States Dist. Court for Dist. of Alaska, Division No. 1 (187 Fed., 813).

E. M. Barnes vs. Lyons, Judge of Dist. Court of Alaska, Division No. 1 (187 Fed., 881).

Sandidge vs. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (193 Fed., 867).

Thomas Nagle vs. United States of America (191 Fed., 141).

Amalgamated Sugar Co. vs. United States National Bank (187 Fed., 746).

Spencer, Claimant (Charles R. Spencer, ss). vs. Dalles, Portland & Astoria Nav. Co. (188 Fed., 865).

Western Transportation & Towing Co. vs. French Barque Europe (190 Fed., 475).

1942. Weiser Valley Land & Water Co. vs. Colonel W. Ryan and Frank D. Ryan (190 Fed., 417).
1960. Weiser Valley Land & Water Co. vs. Colonel W. Ryan (190 Fed., 425).
Great Northern Ry. Co. vs. Sloan.
Hyoma Matsumura vs. Martin L. Higgins, Sheriff (187 Fed., 601).
Kuratura Suzuki vs. Higgins, Sheriff (187 Fed., 603).
John E. Davis vs. McEwen Brothers (193 Fed., 305).
Copper River & Northwestern Ry. Co. vs. John Phillips.
Fred Willison et al. vs. Swan Ringwood (190 Fed., 549).
City and County of San Francisco vs. United Railroads of San Francisco (190 Fed., 507).
United States of America vs. Rudolph Axman (193 Fed., 644).
Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R. Co. vs. M. Feintuch (191 Fed., 482).
Choemon Ki Kuchi, Claimant (Tokai Maru—schooner) vs. United States of America (190 Fed., 450).
Frank N. Chaplin et al. vs. United States of America (193 Fed., 879).
Pelton Water Wheel Co. vs. May B. Doble (190 Fed., 760).
Of the cases in the above list the opinion of the court was written by Judge Hanford in the following cases:
The Calif. Nav. & Impr. Co. vs. The Union Transportation Co. (176 Fed., 533).
T. R. Sheridan vs. The Southern Pacific Co. (179 Fed., 81).
The San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake R. R. Co. vs. Maggie Thomas and John Thomas (187 Fed., 790).
The barkentine Aurora vs. Maggie Boyce (191 Fed., 960).
The North American Dredging Co. vs. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. (185 Fed., 698).
Calif. Nav. & Impr. Co. vs. Stockton Milling Co. (184 Fed., 369).
Corcoran vs. United States Dist. Court for Dist. of Alaska, Division No. 1 (187 Fed., 813).
Amalgamated Sugar Co. vs. United States National Bank (187 Fed., 746).
Western Transportation & Towing Co. vs. French barque Europe (190 Fed., 475).
Hyoma Matsumura vs. Martin L. Higgins, Sheriff (187 Fed., 601).
Kuratura Suzuki vs. Higgins, Sheriff (187 Fed., 603).
John E. Davis vs. McEwen Brothers (193 Fed., 305).
United States of America vs. Rudolph Axman (193 Fed., 644).
Choemon Ki Kuchi, Claimant (Tokai Maru—schooner) vs. United States of America (190 Fed., 450).
In the following cases Judge Hanford filed dissenting opinions:
The Southern Pac. Company et al. vs. The Arlington Heights Fruit Co. et al. (191 Fed., 101).
The Northwestern S. S. Co. vs. O. D. Cochran (191 Fed., 146).
Frank N. Chaplin et al. vs. United States of America (193 Fed., 879).
Great Northern Ry. Co. vs. Sloan.
In the case of City and County of San Francisco v. United Railroads of San Francisco (190 Fed., 507), Judge Hanford filed a special concurring opinion.

EXHIBIT No. 30.

SULLIVAN ESTATE.

In State court: In re Sullivan Estate, 36 Wash., 217; 37 Wash., 696; 40 Wash., 202; 48 Wash., 631.
In Federal court: 116 Fed., 934; 125 Fed., 657; 199 U. S., 89.
The decision in 199 U. S., 89, is cited in Waterman v. Canal Louisiana Bank, Exr., 215 U. S., 33, 44.
See citation of last case in McLellan v. Carland, 217 U. S., 269, 281.
Richardson v. Green is reported in 61 Fed., 423; certiorari denied, 159 U. S., 264.

EXHIBIT No. 31.

United States Circuit Court, District of Washington, Northern Division.

In the matter of the petition of H. C. Littooy for a writ of habeas corpus. No. 1207. Filed July 6, 1904.

MEMORANDUM DECISION ON THE QUESTION OF JURISDICTION.

By the record in this case it appears that the petitioner has been convicted in a court of this State of a violation of a statute requiring all dentists, under a prescribed penalty, to obtain a license to practice that profession.

The petitioner alleges that he has the qualifications of education, skill, and experience required for doing satisfactory work as a dentist, and that he has complied with all the conditions which may be lawfully exacted of an applicant for a license, but that the board of dental examiners have refused to grant him a license to practice dentistry for noncompliance on his part with arbitrary and unreasonable exactions, and that for practicing dentistry without a license, after it had been refused, he has been arrested and deprived of the liberty guaranteed to citizens of the United States by the Constitution of the United States.

The police power of the State undoubtedly includes the right of the State government to prescribe regulations for the protection of sufferers requiring treatment by professional dentists, and to prohibit dentists from practicing their profession if they fail to conform to the prescribed regulations. The natural right of an individual to pursue a useful calling, without unreasonable interference and obstruction by the government, is important, and among the important rights which the Constitution was intended to preserve to the people. It is a right, however, that is subordinate to the power of the State to make reasonable laws and regulations for the general welfare. Keeping these principles in view, if the petitioner has any grievance cognizable in a Federal court, it must be on one of two grounds, viz: First, that the statute under which he has been prosecuted is in some of its provisions repugnant to the Constitution of the United States; or, second, that the proceedings against him or the punishment inflicted are unusual and not authorized by the laws of the State. The issues to be determined being thus narrowed, the court is required to go further and exercise a discretion in interfering with the administration of the laws of the State, by means of the writ of habeas corpus. This is so because it would be practically impossible to carry on our system of dual government, State and National, if, as a matter of right, every person considering himself aggrieved by being convicted of an offense in a State court may require a review of the proceedings against him in a national court, and the volume of litigation in the national courts would be far beyond the capacity of the judicial system which Congress has provided, and if the national courts granted writs of habeas corpus to all applicants, the State governments would be obstructed to the extent of suspending the enforcement of criminal laws through the instrumentality of State tribunals. It is settled by numerous decisions of the Supreme Court that the United States courts may and must exercise discretion in granting or refusing writs of habeas corpus to persons convicted under State laws, and that unless extraordinary conditions demand that the writ issue it should be refused in all cases where irregularities, errors, and injustice may be corrected by a review of the proceedings in an appellate court of competent jurisdiction, and where the way remains open for the aggrieved party to submit his cause finally to the Supreme Court of the United States.

This court in the exercise of its discretion has heretofore deemed it proper to protect petitioners from vexatious prosecutions for past violations of statutes of the State or municipal ordinances which upon inspection appeared to be necessarily and obviously absolutely void, but when only irregularities have been complained of in proceedings founded upon valid statutes, the petitioners have been required to exhaust their remedies in the appellate courts.

The case now under consideration does not present any extraordinary features which seem to require or justify a departure from the practice in preceding cases. All that can be claimed in favor of immediate action for the petitioner's relief is, that he desires to be spared the consequential injuries and annoyance of being prevented from practicing his profession during the pendency of a test case in the appellate courts. But these are consequences which can not be avoided. The constitutionality of a statute of this State, and the integrity of the State board of dental examiners are challenged by the petition, and there is every reason to suppose that a decision of this court, if in his favor, would be brought for review before the court of highest authority, as it should be. The statute which the petitioner attacks is not so obviously void that intelligent and reasonable minds may not honestly differ in their opinions with respec to it, and the courts of the State which have so far sustained it, will not be required to defer to a contrary opinion until the highest court of the State or the Supreme Court of the United States has an opportunity to render a decision of binding force. Therefore, if discharged, the petitioner would be unable to practice dentistry in this State, unlicensed, without risk of being again arrested and prosecuted and convicted and sentenced in the courts of the State during the pendency of proceedings in the appellate court, and as the Supreme Court of the United States is the only national court which can shield him from repeated prosecutions, it is expedient for him to go to that court in the most direct way, which is by an appeal or writ of error in the case in which he has been convicted. No advantage whatever in the saving of time or expense can be gained by having the disputed questions passed upon in this court.

For the foregoing reasons, I direct that the writ be discharged, and the case dismissed.

(Signed) C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

Filed in the U. S. Circuit Court, Dist. of Washington, July 6, 1904, A. Reeves Ayres, clerk; H. M. Walthew, deputy.

EXHIBIT No. 32.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division.

In the matter of C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners doing business as Heckmann & Hanson, and C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, individuals, bankrupts. Amended petition of Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, to reopen estate, and for other relief. No. 2203.

To the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division, Honorable C. H. Hanford, judge:

Your petitioners, Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, of the above-named bankrupts, respectfully represent:

I. That heretofore, to wit, on the 17th day of January, 1902, your petitioners filed in this honorable court their petition in voluntary bankruptcy asking this court to adjudge them bankrupts and to grant to them the benefit of the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that on the same day, by order duly made and entered, your petitioners were duly adjudged to be bankrupts; and on the 18th day of January, 1902, by an order duly made and entered all matters thereto pertaining were referred to the Honorable John P. Hoyt, a referee of this court residing at Seattle, Washington, in said district, to take such further proceedings therein as required by said bankruptcy acts; all of which matters more fully appear by the records and files of this court in the above-entitled matter, and to which reference is hereby made.

II. That at the time of filing said petition and with the said petition your petitioners prepared and filed in this court a schedule of all their property (real and personal) showing the amount and kind, the location thereof, and its money value in detail; and also prepared and filed with their petition a list of their creditors, showing their residences, the amounts due each, the consideration thereof, and the security held by them, all in triplicate, as required by law and the rules of this court. And in all other respects your petitioners have fully complied with the law relating to bankruptcy and with the rules and orders of this court and in all respects since their adjudication as bankrupts they have been ready and willing to cooperate with this court, with their creditors, and with the trustee in the administration of said estate and all matters pertaining thereto.

III. Your petitioners further represent that at the time of their adjudication as bankrupts the property of your petitioners, both real and personal, was in the possession of the superior court of the State of Washington for King County, acting through its receiver, one Peter L. Larsson, and this court was so apprised in the said petition for adjudication. That the cause in the said State court in which the said Larsson was appointed receiver of the property of your petitioners was entitled "William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, versus Heckmann & Hanson, defendants, Peter L. Larsson, receiver," and was known as file number 32817 in said court. That said superior court of the State of Washington for King County was at all times without jurisdiction over the said property, and without jurisdiction to sell or dispose of the same, as more fully appears from the complaint filed in said cause, the motion made for the appointment of said receiver, the affidavit of plaintiff filed in support of said motion, and the order of the court appointing said receiver, copies of which are hereto attached marked, respectively, Exhibits "A," "B," C," "D," made a part of this petition, and reference to which, for greater certainty, is hereby made. That said Exhibits "A," "B," "C," "D" are true copies of said complaint, motion, affidavit, and order, respectively. That after obtaining the said order appointing the said receiver no other or further proceedings were ever taken in the said cause by the said plaintiff or his attorneys in said State court, and no judgment or decree was ever rendered in said cause.

IV. That owing to the fact that at the time of preparing and filing said schedule of property and list of creditors heretofore referred to these bankrupts were not in possession of their property, nor any part thereof, nor of their books of account, stock books, inventories, records or papers, and had not access thereto, and had no reliable data from which to prepare said schedule, and ever since said time, have been unable to gain possession of or access to their said property or their said books of account, stock books, inventories, records, or papers, the said schedule of property as filed was and is inaccurate, incomplete, and defective in that it fails to include all the accounts, owing the bankrupts and fails to include a large amount of the personal property belonging to the estate of the bankrupts and which was at the time of filing said schedule in the possession of the said receiver in the said State court; and is further inaccurate and defective in that the liabilities therein scheduled are too high by at least the sum of $6,872.12. That the value of the personal property in the hands of said receiver was upwards of the sum of $20,000.00; that the value of the real estate was upwards of the sum of $40,000.00; that the liabilities of the copartnership were not to exceed the sum of $23,000.00. That, in truth and in fact, the total value of all of the property belonging to the bankrupts' estate was and is far in excess of all the debts owing by the bankrupts, and, if properly administered, will pay the debts of the bankrupts in full and leave a considerable amount in the estate to be returned to the bankrupts, your petitioners. That all the matters and things in this paragraph contained were at all times known to the creditors of these bankrupts, to the trustee, and to the referee to whom reference of said bankruptcy matter in the first instance was made.

V. Your petitioners further represent that one of the creditors of your petitioners, the Scandinavian-American Bank, of Seattle, Washington, well knowing the value of said property and well knowing the value to be far in excess of the debts owing by said bankrupts, and contriving to obtain possession of said property and to convert the same to its own use without making just compensation therefor, and also conspiring and colluding with the said receiver of said State court, said Peter L. Larsson, to conceal certain frauds of the said Larsson committed in connection with said receivership and to part of which frauds the said bank was a party, procured the said Larsson to obtain from said superior court of the State of Washington for King County an order to sell and dispose of said property at the pretended price of $24,125.00; and the said court, after the adjudication of these petitioners as bankrupts, and with knowledge of said adjudication, and after proper motion made to stay proceedings in said State court, and over and against the protests of these bankrupts, made an order pretending and assuming to sell and dispose of said property to one M. F. Mayhew, and directing its said receiver to execute to the said Mayhew a deed of the real estate and a bill of sale of the personal estate of said bankrupts then in the possession of said court; and the said receiver as directed, did, on the 7th day of March, 1902, execute and deliver to the said Mayhew a deed of the said real property and a bill of sale of the said personal property then in the hands of the said receiver belonging to the estate of these bankrupts; and the said receiver on the same day turned over and delivered to the said Mayhew the possession of the said real and personal property, being the same property set forth in the schedule prepared and filed by these bankrupts with their petition heretofore filed, as aforesaid, or so much thereof as had not previously been fraudulently converted and disposed of by said receiver, and, in addition, being the rest and residue of the property belonging to the estate of these bankrupts and not scheduled, owing to the inability of these bankrupts to schedule the same, as hereinbefore related. That the said transfer of personal property included as well the books of accounts, stock books, records, and papers belonging to the estate of these bankrupts, and also the books of account and records of the said receiver. And afterwards, and on the 7th day of March, 1902, the said court, with knowledge of the adjudication of these petitioners as bankrupts, and after proper motion made to stay proceedings in said cause and over and against the objections of these petitioners, entered an order confirming its acts and doings and the acts and doings of its said receiver in the premises. And afterwards and on the 24th day of March, 1902, said receiver was discharged as such by said court.

VI. Your petitioners further represent that upon receiving the possession of the said property, the said Mayhew, at the instance of the said bank, immediately transferred the same, or a large part thereof, without consideration, to a corporation known as the Seattle Shipyards Company, which corporation was formed at the instance of the said bank, and your petitioners believe and therefore allege that it was so formed for the purpose of receiving the said property and losing the identity thereof and of hiding and concealing the present pretended owners thereof. That the said The Seattle Shipyards Company is now in possession of the said property.

VII. Your petitioners further represent that in truth and in fact the receiver of said State court did not receive from said M. F. Mayhew or from any one else the said sum of $24,125.00 or any other sum whatsoever, or any other consideration for the delivery of said property. But that after the discharge of said receiver by said State court the said Scandinavian-American Bank, in order to straighten the records of said court in that respect, without notice to the defendants in said suit obtained from the said State court an order of distribution of the funds pretended to be held by said State court, and after obtaining said order of distribution caused to be deposited in the registry of said court on the 15th day of April, 1902, the sum of $20,064.77, and on the same day withdrew from said registry the sum of $17,981.69 upon an alleged indebtedness of the bankrupts to said bank but the claim of which had never been filed or allowed in said action. That within the following three days the balance of said sum so deposited was withdrawn from said registry by other alleged creditors of your petitioners on the basis of 30 per cent on the amount of their respective claims, none of which claims, with two exceptions, had ever been proved or filed in said court, and all of which claims were afterwards presented to the Bonding Company on the bond of the said receiver and the balance due on the said claims over and above the 30 per cent thus paid by said bank through said court was paid by said bonding company. That said receiver and his attorney received from the Scandinavian-American Bank for their services in so delivering the property and betraying said court as aforesaid, a sum equal to 10 per cent of the amount so deposited in said court, being the amount of $2,006.45.

VIII. Your petitioners further represent that said State court had absolutely no excuse for selling or attempting to sell the said property. That it was attempting to foreclose no lien, either mortgage, attachment, or otherwise. That it had never rendered a decree or judgment in said cause and was not attempting or pretending to sell said property to pay or satisfy any judgment or decree. That no creditor had ever asked the said court to make the said sale, nor had any of the creditors of your petitioners, with two exceptions, ever filed any claim in said court. Nor was the pretended sale done in any other manner or for any other purpose than as hereinbefore stated.

IX. Your petitioners further represent that said alleged sale of the property of these bankrupts was made by said State court to the said M. F. Mayhew, subject to the incumbrances due against the said property, said incumbrances being in the neighborhood of $20,000. And that the said Scandinavian-American Bank and other secured creditors participating in the distribution of the said sum of $20,064.77, participated in the same with knowledge of that fact, and with the further knowledge of the adjudication of these bankrupts as such and that in any event said State court had no right or jurisdiction to pay over the said money or any part thereof to them or to any other than the trustee in bankruptcy.

X. Your petitioners further represent that at the time reference of these matters was made to the referee in bankruptcy, as aforesaid, the said referee was attorney for and an officer of the bonding company which had bonded said receiver in the said State court, said Peter L. Larsson, and against which said receiver gross charges of fraud and mismanagement had been made in said court, and further charges were about to be made, and the said referree, with knowledge of said charges and the truth thereof, and with knowledge of said adjudication and of the reference of all matters thereto pertaining to him as referee, as aforesaid, became engaged in the said State court in an effort to free his said client from the said bond of said receiver, and to that end the said referee conspired and colluded with the said Scandinavian-American Bank to postpone and delay proceedings in these bankruptcy matters until after the alleged sale of the said property of these bankrupts had been made in the said State court, as aforesaid, and the evidence of the fraud of said receiver concealed and removed as far as possible, and until the said bonding company, his client, should be released from the said bond of said receiver; and, in furtherance of said conspiracy the said referee wilfully failed and neglected to call the first meeting of creditors of these bankrupts to elect a trustee, or to set in motion in any manner whatsoever the machinery of this court looking toward the administration by this court of the said estate, as by law and duty to these bankrupts he was required to do, until after the said alleged sale by said State court had been made and the property delivered to the said Mayhew as aforesaid, and the evidence of the fraud of said receiver to that extent removed and covered up, as aforesaid, and after the said bond of said receiver had been discharged by said State court. That said first meeting of creditors was not called by said referee until the 14th day of April, 1902, as more fully appears from the records and files of this court in this matter, reference to which is hereby made.

X½. Petitioners further allege that the attorney who filed in this court their petition in bankruptcy on January 17, 1902, was one C. A. Reynolds. That after filing said petition and obtaining the adjudication of your petitioners as bankrupts, the said Reynolds assisted in every way possible said receiver of the State court in delivering the said property of your petitioners to the said Scandinavian-American Bank, and on the 6th day of March, 1902, the said Reynolds appeared in the said State court and against petitioners' protests and instructions advocated before said court and assisted in consummating said pretended sale. That between the time of said adjudication and the delivery of said property on the 6th day of March, 1902, as aforesaid, the said Reynolds was paid the sum of $100 by the said bonding company and was by it engaged at the same time as attorney for said bonding company in three or four other matters in which said company was interested; and the said Reynolds was, on the 17th day of April, 1902, paid the further sum of $150 by the Scandinavian-American Bank. Your petitioners believe and therefore allege that the said $150 was paid by the said bank as a consideration for the said Reynolds's assistance in betraying your petitioners and helping to deliver said property as aforesaid; and that the said $100 was so paid by the said bonding company and the services of the said Reynolds so engaged by the said bonding company as consideration for his services in helping to deliver the said property and making possible the discharge of said receiver by said State court and the release of said bonding company from the bonds of said receiver.

XI. Your petitioners further represent that at the instance of your petitioners a subsequent reference of the matters to these bankruptcy proceedings pertaining was made to the honorable Warren A. Worden, a referee of this court residing at Tacoma, without this said district, and the adjourned meeting of said first meeting of creditors for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee was held before the said the honorable Warren A. Worden on the 28th day of May, 1902.

XII. That at said adjourned meeting of creditors, held for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee, the said Scandinavian-American Bank, still contriving and conspiring to retain possession of said property and to convert the same to its own use, and contriving and conspiring to prevent the administration of said estate by this court and to defraud these bankrupts and this court, procured to be proved some four or five assigned claims owned by it, the said bank aggregating in amount about twenty-five dollars, and with said claims elected as trustee one E. F. Fisher, a bookkeeper in the employ of a former creditor of these bankrupts; and in anticipation of the election of said trustee said bank, acting as aforesaid, employed or procured to be employed for said trustee a firm of attorneys whose efforts, with those of said trustee, were to be devoted to stifling any and all proceedings in this court looking to the collection and administration of said estate; that afterwards, and in pursuance of said plan, on the 11th day of July, 1902, the said trustee, through said attorneys, filed with said referee his report to the effect that these petitioners had no property or estate and, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, procured said referee to accept and approve said report; that afterwards and on the 5th day of December, 1902, the said trustee filed with said referee his final report, and on the 2nd day of January, 1903, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, obtained his discharge as such trustee, and the said referee, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, filed with this court his report declaring the said estate closed. All of which matters more fully appear from the records and files of this court, reference to which is hereby made.

XIII. That since the last-mentioned date, the 2nd day of January, 1903, no trustee for the estate of the bankrupts has existed, and the creditors of your petitioners, with knowledge that there is property in the estate of these bankrupts which has not been administered, have failed and neglected since said date to recommend the appointment of a said trustee.

XIV. Your petitioners further represent that, aside from the said Scandinavian-American Bank, there are no creditors of these bankrupts now interested in the said estate, for the reason that before the alleged sale had been made by said State court the said Scandinavian-American Bank and the said bonding company on the bond of said receiver in said State court had arranged between themselves to take care of the said others of said creditors in manner satisfactory to said creditors, and the said creditors have long since been paid and their claims assigned for the benefit of said bank. That the terms of the said arrangement between said bank and said bonding company your petitioners are unable of their own knowledge to give.

XV. Your petitioners further represent that they have other and further property and equities than those herein enumerated which are not in the hands of the said the Seattle Shipyards Company, and which were possessed by these bankrupts at the time of their adjudication as such and which said property has never been collected and administered and is being lost to these bankrupts and their estate.

XVI. Your petitioners further represent that in the spring of 1901, and before the property of these bankrupts was taken possession of by the said State court as aforesaid, M. E. Hanson, one of the members of said copartnership of Heckmann & Hanson, was afflicted with a very severe illness in the nature of a brain disorder which left him very weak in body and mind and absolutely unable to attend to his business affairs and that he still feels the effect of the illness and is unable physically and mentally to attend to such affairs. That he knows nothing of his own knowledge of affairs as they were administered in the said State court and very little of matters as they have occurred in this court, and that at all times herein mentioned he has been and now is unable physically to concern himself with them.

XVII. That at all times herein mentioned C. A. Heckmann, the other member of said firm of Heckmann & Hanson, has had charge of the interests of the said firm so far as said firm could manage its own affairs. That he has endeavored by every means within his power to obtain for the firm a proper administration by this court of the estate of said partnership. That when, finally, on the 28th day of May, 1902, a trustee was elected by the said creditors and approved by this court the said Heck-mann, in the belief that the estate of the said firm would be administered by this court, determined upon a business trip to Alaska, and, accordingly, on the following 8th day of June, 1902, went to Alaska. That at said time said Heckmann fully intended to return to Seattle, his said place of residence, in the following September or October. That, in fact, he did start from Alaska for Seattle October 6, 1902, by boat, the only means of transportation between the two points, and in the usual course of events would have reached Seattle about thirty days thereafter. That, in fact, the boat upon which he was making the voyage became disabled at sea and was some eighty days overdue before reaching Seattle and did not reach Seattle until the 28th day of January, 1903, and the said Heckmann was unable by any means to reach Seattle or communicate therewith before that date. That upon arrival at Seattle, in said district, said Heckmann first learned that the said trustee had not administered the partnership property, but had made a report to said referee in substance denying that these bankrupts had any estate and that the said report without notice to the bankrupts or their attorney, had been approved by said referee; and, further, learned that the said trustee, on the 2nd day of January, 1903, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, had obtained his discharge; and, further, learned that the referee last named had, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, filed his report in this court declaring said estate closed.

XVIII. Your petitioners further represent that unless this estate is reopened, a trustee provided, the property of the estate collected, and the estate administered, as in their petition for adjudication prayed, your petitioners and this court will be defrauded and your petitioners will be denied the benefits of the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy vouchsafed them by law.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that an order be made and entered herein as follows:

1. Reopening the said estate, and referring said matter and all things pertaining thereto back to the said Honorable Warren A. Worden, or to some other disinterested referee of this court, to take such further proceedings therein as are required by the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy.

2. Appointing a trustee of the estate of these bankrupts, your petitioners.

3. Granting such other relief as to the court may seem just and appropriate, if your petitioners have misconceived their remedy.

HECKMANN & HANSON,
Petitioners.

J. L. FINCH,
Attorney for Petitioners.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, King County, ss:

C. A. Heckmann, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says that he is a member of the firm of Heckmann & Hanson, who subscribed the foregoing petition, and makes this affidavit in behalf of said firm; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is true, as he verily believes.

C. A. HECKMANN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 8th day of February, 1904.

[SEAL.] JOHN PEIRCE,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

EXHIBIT "A."

In the Supreme Court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, copartners doing business in the firm name and style of Heckman & Hanson, defendants. No. ——. Complaint.

The plaintiff complains of the defendants, and for cause of action alleges:

I. That the defendants, C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, are now, and were at all times hereinafter mentioned, copartners doing business in the firm name and style of Heckman & Hanson.

II. That heretofore, to wit, during the past two years, the plaintiff sold and delivered to the defendant goods, wares, and merchandise, and performed labor for them, at their special instance and request, upon an open and running account, and the defendants have at divers times made payments thereon, and there is now due and owing to the plaintiff upon the said account, the sum of fifteen hundred and twenty-eight and 18/100 dollars ($1,528.18) which said account and balance due thereon, has been heretofore, to wit, on or about the 1st day of July, 1901, rendered and submitted to the defendants and it was then and there agreed between the plaintiff and the defendants that the said balance due thereon in the sum of $1,528.18 was just and correct, and due and owing from the defendants to the plaintiff.

III. That thereafter, and on or about the 1st day of July, 1901, the plaintiff demanded payment of the said sum of $1,528.18 from the defendants, but they have failed, neglected, and refused to pay the same, or any part thereof, and still fail, neglect, and refuse, to plaintiff's damage, in the said sum of $1,528.18 and interest thereon at the legal rate from the 1st day of July, 1901.

Wherefore plaintiff prays judgment against the defendants for the sum of fifteen hundred and twenty-eight and 18/100 dollars ($1,528.18) and costs of suit.

BENNETT, WHITMAN & LUND,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss.

William M. Curtiss, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: that he is the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. That he has read the foregoing complaint, knows the contents thereof, and believes the same to be true.

WILLIAM M. CURTISS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of July, 1901.

BURTON E. BENNETT,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

EXHIBIT "B."

In the Superior court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, copartners, doing business in the firm name and style of Heckman & Hanson, defendants. No. ——. Motion for appointment of receiver.

Now comes the plaintiff by the undersigned, his attorney, and moves this honorable court for an order appointing a receiver in the above-entitled cause to take possession, charge, and control of the business and property of the defendants and to care for and manage the same and conduct and carry on the business of the defendants in the usual course of the business and trade pending the final determination of this action, upon the ground that the defendants are engaged in divers and sundry litigation, wherein parties not justly entitled to the same are obtaining, and are about to obtain, unjust and unfair advantage of the defendants and of their creditors, and that the properties of the defendants are thereby being wasted and the business of the defendants destroyed to the extent that the whole thereof will be appropriated to parties not justly entitled to the same, and there will be nothing or not sufficient remaining to pay the just creditors of the defendants, including the plaintiff.

This motion is based upon the affidavits of the plaintiff and C. A. Heckman, filed herewith.

BENNETT, WHITMAN & LUND,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.

EXHIBIT "C."

In the Superior court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, copartners, doing business in the firm name and style of Heckman & Hanson, defendants. No. ——. Affidavit of plaintiff for receiver.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

William M. Curtiss, being first duly sworn, on his oath says: That he is, and was at all the times hereinafter mentioned, a citizen of the United States and a resident of King County, State of Washington, above the age of 21 years, and plaintiff in the above-entitled action; that the properties of the said defendant consist of a shipbuilding plant of great value at Ballard, in said King County, and the shipbuilding business carried on thereat; that the defendants have heretofore carried on a large and lucrative business at their said shipyards; that during the latter part of the month of June of the present year a controversy arose between the defendants and the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, E. L. Grondahl, A. H. Soelberg, its vice president and cashier, respectively, and William M. Calhoun, acting for them, and others, as to certain repairs theretofore made by the defendants upon the schooner "Alice" at the instance and request of the said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, and Calhoun, amounting to the aggregate sum of about $7,000, and as to certain money theretofore advanced by said bank to defendants, amounting to the aggregate sum of about $7,000, the defendants contending that the said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, and Calhoun were personally liable for the said repairs so made at their instance and request, and that the money so advanced to the defendants by said bank was in lieu of payment for said repairs and to be repaid not by the defendants but by said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, and Calhoun, as payment for said repairs. On the other hand, the said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, and Calhoun, denied all liability upon said repairs, and the said bank contended and claimed that the said money advanced was an overdraft by the defendants; that the said dispute resulted in the defendants libeling the said vessel about the first of the present month for the said repairs in the United States district court for the district of Washington, in admiralty, and also commencing a suit in personam in the same court against the said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, Calhoun, and others, for the same amount, both which said suits are now pending and undetermined; that the said controversy also resulted in the said bank sueing the defendants in the above-entitled court for the money so advanced to them, claiming the same to be an overdraft, and also at the same time commenced two suits in the same court against the defendants foreclosing certain mortgages held by it against the defendants on their said shipbuilding plant, which, though overdue, have been overdue for a long time and carried by the said bank as such by mutual agreement between them and the defendants that the same should be so carried; that immediately upon commencing said suit upon the said alleged overdraft the said bank caused divers writs of garnishment to be issued and served, garnishing all available outstanding accounts due the defendants, and threaten to and will continue to so sue out writs of garnishment for all outstanding accounts due the defendants, and which may become due to them, and by so sueing out such writs of garnishment the said bank have completely and effectually stopped all business of the defendants and rendered it impossible for them to do any business whatever during the pending litigation, and have obtained, and are obtaining, an unfair and unjust preference and advantage over the creditors of the defendants and, among others, the plaintiff.

That affiant is informed, and believes, that the said alleged overdraft is not a just debt of the defendants to the said bank, and that the said mortgage debts sued on as aforesaid, are amply secured, and that the said foreclosure suits and the suit on said alleged overdraft and garnishment were commenced and are being prosecuted for the sole purpose of harrassing and annoying and crippling and destroying the business of the defendants and obtaining an unjust and unfair advantage of the defendants, and an unjust and unfair advantage and preference over the creditors of the defendants, including the plaintiff, and that unless a receiver is appointed by this honorable court to take charge of the properties and business of the defendants, and case for and manage and carry on the same, pending said litigation and this action, the purpose aforesaid of said bank will be accomplished; and the business and properties of the defendants will be dissipated, wasted, ruined, and destroyed and appropriated by the said bank, and there will not be sufficient left to pay the just creditors of the defendants, including the plaintiff. That the defendants are not insolvent, in that they have ample property if justly administered to pay their debts, and is a going concern, and could and would earn large profits if permitted to run and carry on their said business, and if so permitted to carry on their business they could and would earn enoughto pay off all of their indebtedness within a reasonable time. That the defendants have many contracts on hand, and could procure many others from which a large profit could be realized for the benefit of their creditors, but that under existing conditions created by the unfair and unjust action of the said bank they can not perform any of such contracts and can not procure any others and can not pay the plaintiff or any of their just creditors. That the good will and business of the defendants is a valuable asset for their creditors, and unless the same is carried on through a receiver the whole of their good will and business will be destroyed to the irreparable injury and damage of their creditors including the planitiff.

WM. M. CURTISS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of July, 1901.

BURTON E. BENNETT,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

EXHIBIT "D."

In the superior court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William H. Curtiss, plaintiff, v. C. A. Heckman et al, defendants. No. ——. Order appointing receiver.

Be it remembered that the above-entitled cause came on regularly this day for hearing upon the application of the plaintiff for the appointment of a receiver herein. The plaintiff appeared in person and by Bennett, Whilam A. Lund, his attorneys, and the defendants appeared in person and by their attorneys, Metcalfe & Jurey, and the court being fully advised in the premises, and good cause appearing herein,

It is by the court ordered, adjudged, and decreed that Peter L. Larsson be and he is hereby appointed receiver of the defendants to take immediate charge, possession, and control of all their properties and assets, to care for, manage, and control the same, and operate and carry on the business of the defendants in the usual course of business and trade, pending the final determination of this action or until the further order of this court.

This order to take effect upon said Peter L. Larsson giving a bond to the clerk of this court in the sum of twenty thousand dollars and upon said bond being approved by this court.

Done in open court this 11th day of July, 1901.

ARTHUR E. GRIFFIN, Judge.

Indorsed on back, "Filed July 11, 1901. C. A. Koepfli, clerk."

(Filing on back:) No. 2203. In the district court of the United States for the district of Washington, northern division. In the matter of Heckmann & Hanson, bankrupts. Amended petition to reopen estate, etc. Copy. Feb. 15, 1904.

EXHIBIT NO. 33.

In the district court of the United States for the district of Washington, northern division.

In re R. A. Ballinger, J. B. Metcalfe. Richard Saxe Jones, and C. A. Reynolds. No. ——. Petition.

To the Honorable C. H. HANFORD,
Judge of the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division:

Your petitioner, J. L. Finch, an attorney and officer of your honorable court, respectfully states:

I. That on the 16th day of July, 1903, in open court before your honor your petitioner, as attorney for Heckmann & Hanson, bankrupts, was advocating certain rights relevant to matters suggested in a certificate sent to your honor by the Hon. Eben Smith, a special referee appointed by your honor to determine certain facts in relation to a petition filed by said Heckmann & Hanson to reopen their estate in bankruptcy, from which certificate it appeared that a certain witness had been duly subpœnaed to appear before said special referee and bring with him certain books in his care and under his control, and that the witness so subpœnaed appeared and failed to bring with him the said books, and the said referee being without power to deal with the situation had certified the matter to your honor. In the course of argument upon the matters brought before the court by said certificate your honor asked of petitioner, in effect, whether if he had the books he could show anything which would reflect in any way upon any parties involved in the matters under investigation before said special referee; to which inquiry petitioner replied in effect that if your honor would allow him to have the books which had been subpœnaed he would bring to you the evidence which would disbar Judge R. A. Ballinger, General J. B. Metcalfe, Mr. Richard Saxe Jones, and Mr. C. A. Reynolds, officers and attorneys of your court. To which promise your honor replied in effect that the statement thus made should be made good by petitioner and that unless he did so your honor would in turn disbar him, and your honor duly made and entered an order that the books called for in said subpœna should be produced. In the course of subsequent proceedings before your special referee the books referred to were produced and by the aid of them and from other sources petitioner has presented before said special referee the testimony and documentary evidence which he believes ought and will disbar from practice before your honor's court the parties heretofore referred to and named in the caption hereof. And that your honor may have an understanding of the matters indicated in petitioner's promise as above related, he presents to your honor as an officer of your court the facts which have been brought out before said special referee and which is in the evidence submitted to him, and upon this his petition respectfully asks your honor to make such order as may to your honor seem fitting in the premises.

II. C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners doing business under the firm name and style of Heckmann & Hanson, were shipbuilders, and until their business was wrecked and their property converted as hereinafter alleged, were engaged in building and repairing seagoing vessels of all descriptions, in the city of Ballard, King County, Washington. Mr. Hanson, of the firm, confined his attention entirely to matters and things going on in and about the yards and pertaining entirely to the labor expended about the premises. Mr. Heckmann attended entirely to the office, to all the outside business, and especially to the financial affairs of the firm. In actual practice between the partners Mr. Hanson had and exercised no voice in the management of the business of the firm; but in the matters hereinafter referred to Mr. Heckmann acted for and on behalf of the firm.

III. From the formation of the partnership in 1898 until the spring of 1901, Judge R. A. Ballinger of the firm of Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, was the attorney for Heckmann & Hanson and to whom the firm was in the habit of going for professional advice and assistance when in need of legal services. In the fall of 1900 the firm being desirous of borrowing $5,000, Mr. Heckmann consulted with Judge Ballinger, their attorney, who recommended an application to the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, Washington. With Judge Ballinger's assistance a loan of $5,000 was arranged to be made by the bank to the firm for the period of five years to be repaid in installments at the rate of $1,000 per year. Before the arrangements were consummated Mr. Heckmann was called out of the city to be gone for a period of about 30 days. At Judge Ballinger's suggestion he left with him written authority to consummate the arrangements thus made, which written authority afterwards proved to be a general power of attorney. In his absence Judge Ballinger drew and signed Mr. Heckmann's name to a note for $5,000 running to said bank and due in ninety days thereafter and to a mortgage upon the firm property to secure the same. He also induced Mr. Hanson of the firm to sign said note and mortgage under the impression that he was consummating arrangements made by Mr. Heckmann. The $5,000 so loaned was paid by the bank to Judge Ballinger and by him applied to the purposes for which it was obtained. The note was dated October 25, 1900, and fell due the following January. Mr. Heckmann knew nothing about the variations in the terms of the loan until notified by the bank of its maturity. When the facts were learned Mr. Heckmann protested to Judge Ballinger and the bank, and it was agreed that the papers should be changed to conform with the arrangements originally made. The papers were never changed, as will hereinafter appear.

IV. About a month after the maturity of the note and in February, 1901, a schooner called the Alice was brought to the ship yards of Heckmann & Hanson for repairs. The Alice was owned by one William M. Calhoun as trustee for the orginal owner, Captain Milnor, and some of the boat's creditors, among them being said Scandinavian-American Bank which held a mortgage on the Alice for $20,000. Negotiations for repairing the boat were carried on by Mr. Calhoun as trustee, one E. L. Grondahl for the bank, and Judge Ballinger. The negotiations ultimated in a contract for the repairing of the boat by Heckmann & Hanson. The firm were told by the parties to the negotiations to draw upon the Scandinavian-American Bank for their pay as the work progressed. Under these arrangements they placed upon the boat about $7,000 worth of repairs, and while so doing checked out of the bank something like $6,800 more than their deposit. With the account in that condition the bank repudiated its agreement, and on June 12 sent to the firm for its signature a paper purporting to assign to the bank what it chose to designate Heckmann & Hanson's claim against the schooner Alice and giving to the bank a right which it assumed to exist in Heckmann & Hanson to enforce a lien against the boat. Mr. Heckmann refused to sign the paper or to return it. The next day, June 13th, the bank notified Heckmann & Hanson that the firm's overdraft at the close of business that day was $6,917.62, and that they must cover the same by noon of the following day. Mr. Heckmann immediately consulted his attorney, Judge Ballinger, and then learned from him that he, Ballinger, was the attorney for the Scandinavian-American Bank, and that he had drawn the paper purporting to assign to the bank the alleged claim of Heckmann & Hanson against the Alice, and further, that unless Heckmann & Hanson adjusted immediately the Alice account and the said $5,000 note, he, Ballinger, would bring suit thereon for the bank against the firm.

V. Thereupon Mr. Heckmann consulted General Metcalfe, of the firm of Metcalfe & Jurey, attorneys of Seattle, Washington, laying before them all the facts and paying them $350 retainer to look after the firm's interests. Two days later, June 15th, Metcalfe & Jurey, for the firm, libeled the Alice in your honor's court. The cause is known therein as Heckmann & Hanson, libelants, v. Schooner Alice, etc., No. 2051. Three distinct claims were made: 1st, for repairs so far completed, $6,834.50; 2nd, for moneys advanced to pay off the crew at the time when the boat was brought to the yards for repairs, $370; 3rd, for a balance due on a bill for repairing the Alice at a previous period, $812.78.

VI. The bank, through Judge Ballinger, retaliated with a palpable effort to wreck the business of the firm. July 3rd Judge Ballinger, for the bank, began suit in the superior court of the State of Washington for King County to foreclose a $650 mortgage on some personal property of the firm, which mortgage secured a valid debt owing the bank by the firm, but which debt had been further secured by an assignment to the bank of the claim of $812.78 against the Alice, practically the bank's own boat, because of the large mortgage held upon her as hereinbefore stated.

July 5th Judge Ballinger brought a second suit for the bank to foreclose the $5,000 mortgage secured by him for it in the manner hereinbefore related.

On the same day Judge Ballinger brought a third suit for the bank upon the alleged overdraft of the firm, and taking advantage of his knowledge gained as the confidential advisor of the firm sued out four different writs of garnishment and directed them against those of the firm's creditors where they would do the firm the most harm. The complaint in the case was filed and the writs of garnishment were issued and served. No papers were ever served in any manner upon the firm or any member thereof, or attempted to be served in any manner whatever. But the service of the writs of garnishment accomplished the purpose of the bank and Judge Ballinger and was the last thing necessary to completely annihilate the firm in the commercial world.

In the meantime, in your honor's court, William M. Calhoun, the trustee owner of the Alice, at the instance of the bank, vexatiously brought a cross libel against the firm for nearly $30,000.

VII. July 7th, the North Star Gold Mining Company brought suit on a claim afterwards abandoned, and in regard to which there is very strong evidence before your referee tending to show that the suit was inspired by said bank.

Some four other creditors filed intervening libels against the Alice, claiming in the aggregate $4,345.09.

VIII. July 11, 1902, a few days later, with the affairs of the firm in this situation, one William M. Curtiss began suit in said State court against the firm to recover upon a simple account stated in the amount of $1,523.18. No equities were shown in the complaint nor any relief asked other than a simple money judgment, but on the same day a motion was made to have a receiver appointed for the firm. The motion was supported with the affidavit of the plaintiff to the effect that the firm was not insolvent, but, on the other hand, had assets four times in excess of their liabilities; that the Scandinavian-American Bank by its wicked and wanton course was destroying the business, credits, and assets of the firm which could be protected by the appointment of a receiver, and that if a receiver were appointed he could soon pay off the debts of the firm from the profits which the plant was making. Mr. Heckmann supported the motion with an affidavit as to the truth of the matters stated by the plaintiff. An order was made by said State court appointing Peter L. Larsson receiver with instructions to take possession of the properties of the firm and manage the same and carry on and operate the business. And on the following day possession of all the property of the firm passed to Mr. Larsson as such receiver.

After obtaining said order appointing said receiver no other or further proceedings were ever taken by the plaintiff or his attorneys in said action and no judgment or decree was ever rendered therein by said court.

IX. During the time when these various actions were begun, the said courts, State and Federal, were not in session. Between the times when the suits were brought and the convening of the courts in the fall of the year 1901, said Scandinavian-American Bank had entered into a general conspiracy with the receiver, Mr. Larsson, and his attorney, Mr. Jones, and Messrs. Metcalfe & Jurey, attorneys for Heckmann & Hanson, to wipe out of existence the latter firm and to convert the properties of the firm to the use of the said bank. The conspiracy on behalf of the bank was entered into and carried out by Judge Ballinger, and the method pursued and steps taken in annihilating the firm and converting the property appears from the evidence before your special referee to have been and is alleged by your petitioner to have been as shown in paragraphs X to XVI, inclusive, following.

X. August 31st, in the schooner Alice case in your honor's court, a stipulation was entered into between the libelants, cross libelants, and claimant to the effect that judgment might be entered by the court in favor of all parties excepting the claimant, who withdrew his cross libel entirely. It was thus left to your Honor to determine simply the priorities, and the decision as subsequently rendered was made inevitable under the stipulation. Your Honor granted judgments for the following amounts and in the following order:

1. Costs, afterwards taxed as follows:
Heckmann & Hanson	$591.40
S. A. Bank & Cal. E. & Co	23.50
Arndt Thiele	60.25
		$675.15
2. Heckmann & Hanson		7,305.52
3. Scandinavian-American Bank		275.00
Calhoun, Ewing & Co		634.50
4. Henry B. Klamroth		1,522.37
5. Scandinavian-American Bank		332.50
Calhoun, Ewing & Co		1,667.70
6. Arndt Thiele		66.65
7. Heckmann & Hanson		812.78
Total		13,292.17

With the entering into of the stipulation above referred to, the bank and the receiver of Heckmann & Hanson entered into a secret arrangement whereby they were to defraud the court, the estate of Heckmann & Hanson, and the intervening libelants, and which arrangement was to become effective as soon as your honor had rendered your decision. Briefly, the agreement was this: The receiver was to bid in the Alice at marshal's sale, bidding as high as necessary, and in turn hand her over to a party to be named by the bank, and take from the bank therefor a credit of $6,000 on the alleged overdraft; should the receiver, in order to carry out the plan, find it necessary to bid more than the amount of his claim and thus become obligated to pay any cash into your honor's court, it was provided that the party whom the bank would name to receive the boat would also hold the receiver harmless and provide the cash thus made necessary; further, the receiver agreed to pay the costs of the libel out of the estate of Heckmann & Hanson and to that end the parties stipulated that a fund of $889.49 belonging to the firm, and which had been tied up by the garnishment proceedings brought by the bank in the State court, as related in paragraph VI hereof, would be released and would be held by the receiver as a special fund to pay the costs of the proceedings against the boat; further, that if any balance remained of that fund over and above the amount necessary to pay those costs it, too, would be paid over to the bank or the agent whom the bank was to name. (It appears from the evidence of the receiver before your special referee that the costs already had been paid out of the estate of Heckmann & Hanson, having been paid as the proceedings progressed.)

This arrangement was carried out in detail. The bank named one A. J. Tennant, a law clerk in Judge Ballinger's office, as the one to whom delivery of the boat should be made and to whom the residue of the $889.49 be paid. The Alice was struck off at marshal's sale to the State court's receiver for $6,000.00, on September 23, 1901, and thereafter transferred for the benefit of said bank. This arrangement was made and consummaed through Judge Ballinger, General Metcalfe, and Mr. Jones, and was wholly unknown to Mr. Heckmann and his firm.

The net result of that manipulation, as your honor will see, was this: The bank obtained free from all incumbrances the absolute ownership of the Alice, upon which previously it had had a $20,000 mortagae and against which were established libels for $13,292.17, and which libels the bank in the unobstructed course of justice would have had to pay in order to protect its mortgage; the libelants other than Heckmann & Hanson lost their entire claims; Heckmann & Hanson's estate lost $3,599.19; Metcalfe & Jurey received upwards of $500 out of the deal, but testified that they could not remember how much more.

The Alice has ever since been sailed under the title thus obtained.

XI. With the passing of the schooner Alice case from your honor's court and as a part of the fraudulent agreement above set forth, Judge Ballinger, Mr. Jones, and Messrs. Metcalfe & Jurey, without consulting Heckmann & Hanson, dismissed "with prejudice" the suit in the State court brought on the so-called overdraft, the bringing of which with the ancillary garnishment suits served to ruin the firm of Heckmann & Hanson. This suit was dismissed October 4, 1901.

XII. October 12th the attorneys of record in the case brought by the North Star Gold Mining Company withdrew from the State court certain depositions theretofore taken, sealed them up, and returned them; the case was then abandoned and left as a specific legacy to the alleged purchaser of the Heckmann & Hanson property as hereinafter stated. What the depositions so sealed may contain petitioner does not know. Mr. Heckmann was not consulted about the disposition of the case and has only learned same as the records of the court disclose it.

XIII. December 9th the attorneys of record without Heckmann & Hanson's consent or knowledge stipulated that judgment might be taken for want of answer in the suit brought for the foreclosure of the $650 chattel mortgage.

XIV. On the same day a like stipulation without the knowledge or consent of Heckmann & Hanson was entered into in the case brought for the foreclosure of the $5,000 note and mortgage. This mortgage was not signed by the wife of one of the members of the firm and your petitioner believes that for that reason, if no other, the same was void.

XV. As another instance of the utter abandon of counsel and unprecedented boldness in perpetrating a fraud, and in the consummation of which fraud they have not hesitated to involve your honor's court, appears this instance in the record before said special referee: While the firm's matters were in the hands of the receiver and for a long time prior thereto, Mr. Heckmann was living in a house situated upon the front of the real property owned by the firm but quite disconnected from the shipbuilding plant. Here Mr. Heckmann had made a home for himself and his dependent sister. The furnishings, amounting to upwards of $500 in value, were his. On the 10th day of December, about two months after the consummation of the Alice fraud and the next day after his attorneys had stipulated that judgment by default might be taken against his firm, Mr. Jones, for the receiver, obtained from the State court without notice to Mr. Heckmann an order that he remove forthwith from those premises; and early the following morning before Mr. Heckmann was out of bed the sheriff, at Mr. Jones's instance, served said order upon Mr. Heckmann and ejected him from his said home, giving him time only to dress and allowing him to take with him only the clothes which he placed upon his back. The papers served upon Mr. Heckmann were taken by him within a few hours thereafter to Messrs Metcalfe & Jurey, his attorneys, and the circumstances fully related to them. They advised Mr. Heckmann that he had no redress whatever and that they could do nothing for him. The receiver, Larsson, was given possession of said home and retained same with the furnishings, including the sister's wearing apparel, until his discharge as receiver and the property under his control passed to the alleged purchaser thereof as hereinafter related. To complete that outrage, and apparently to see to what extent the machinery of the law could be perverted, the trustee in bankruptcy, elected at the behest of Judge Ballinger, as will hereinafter more fully appear, sold and disposed of the household furniture of Mr. Heckmann, obtained in the manner above related. In charging your honor's court with selling parlor furniture, a dining-room set, kitchen utensils, family pictures, lady's wearing apparel, sewing machine, and other household goods in a proceeding relating to the bankruptcy of a shipbuilding plant, your petitioner in nowise means to reflect upon your honor, but only upon those to whom, by law, was delegated the duty to protect those entrusting their interests to your honor's care.

XVI. While the various cases in court were being disposed of and Mr. Heckmann personally eliminated the parties engaged in said conspiracy were also perfecting proceedings whereby the property as a whole should be delivered to said bank. On November 25 Mr. Jones for the receiver took an order from the State court for all parties concerned to show cause within a week why the property should not be sold. Mr. Heckmann was not consulted and only by accident learned of the matter upon the return day. No creditors appeared in court to oppose the granting of the order, and on December 3 the receiver was ordered to entertain private bids for the sale of the property and to report to the court by January 14.

On the day appointed the receiver made his report, saying that two bids had been presented; one by said Scandinavian-American Bank, which bid the amount of its mortgages; the other by one M. F. Mayhew, who bid the sum of $24,125. Mr. Mayhew represented the bank, and Judge Ballinger had drawn both bids; though neither fact was ever known to said State court. The receiver recommended the acceptance of the Mayhew bid, and the matter was set down by the court for hearing four days later, the 18th of January. Hearing on the report was interrupted by the beginning of bankruptcy proceedings in your honor's court on the 17th of January as hereinafter related, but finally, on the 6th of March the report of the receiver was approved and he was ordered to deliver the property to Mr. Mayhew and accept payment therefor. Two days later he reported the delivery of the property and also alleged the receipt of the alleged purchase price, namely, $24,125; and a few days later, and on the 24th day of March, 1902, the receiver was by the said court discharged as such.

The allegation made by the receiver in his report that he had received said sum of $24,125 was a deliberate misrepresentation, and a fraud upon said court. The receiver received neither that or any other sum or any consideration whatever for the delivery of said property. In truth, the said receiver was indebted for running expenses of said receivership in the sum of $570.30 and said receiver was unable even to pay the said indebtedness without the assistance of said bank.

At the time of his discharge the record of the State court was left showing the receiver in possession of the alleged purchase price of the property, and also to be owing as debts of the receivership said sum of $570.30. After his discharge the Scandinavian-American Bank furnished to him the money necessary to pay the debts of the receivership, and with which the receiver paid the said debts, and on the 14th day of April the bank, in order to straighten the record of said State court, also furnished and caused to be deposited in the registry thereof the sum of $20,064.77. On the same day it withdrew therefrom the sum of $16,531.18 upon an alleged indebtedness of the bankrupts to it, but which indebtedness had never been proven in the cause. The balance of said sum was likewise withdrawn within the next two or three days by other alleged creditors of said bankrupts, none of whose claims had ever been proven in said court.

The receiver, Larsson, and his attorney, Mr. Jones, were not paid by the said court their compensation as receiver and attorney, respectively, but, on the contrary, on the day the receiver was discharged as such the Scandinavian-American Bank paid to said receiver the sum of $2,006.45, being 10% upon the amount afterwards deposited in the State court. Out of this sum the receiver paid the debts owing by him as such receiver at the time of his discharge, being the sum of $570.30, as above related, and the balance of the 10% so paid to him by the bank was divided by him between himself and Mr. Jones, the latter receiving for his betrayal of the court, as above related, the sum of $940.00 the receiver himself netting $496.15.

XVII. In the meantime, and shortly after Mr. Heckmann was ejected from his home, as hereinbefore related, and had been told by Metcalfe & Jurey that he had no rights in the premises, and soon after his discovery that Metcalfe & Jurey had stipulated a judgment against his firm in a case which he had paid them to defend and that they were assisting in bringing the property of his firm to a supposed sale, Mr. Heckmann engaged the services of Mr. C. A. Reynolds, an attorney of your court. Mr. Reynolds, on the 17th day of January, 1902, filed in your honor's court the petition of Heckmann & Hanson, asking to be adjudged bankrupts and for the benefits of the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; and on the same day he obtained an order of adjudication and a further order of reference of all things to said bankruptcy pertaining to your referee in bankruptcy, the Honorable John P. Hoyt.

With the petition Mr. Reynolds filed an application for an injunction to restrain the State court from making the sale proposed to be made on the following day, the 18th, as above related. The application was supported by the affidavits of Mr. Heckmann and one C. S. Hills, an employee of the local representatives of the American Bonding & Trust Company, the surety on the receiver's bond in the State court. The showing made was a general showing of fraud. Your honor granted an injunction prohibiting the State court from proceeding further.

Three days later, January 21st, Judge Ballinger and Mr. Jones appeared in your honor's court, disavowing a general appearance and openly stating in their moving papers that they came for the special purpose of informing your honor that you knew nothing about the real facts. They made no attempt to show what the real facts might be, but in some manner induced your honor to enter an order of reference to United States Commissioner A. C. Bowman, and directing said commissioner to try out two facts, namely, whether an adequate price was being obtained for the property by the State court and whether a better price could be obtained from a sale by your honor's court; and your honor's order further recited that no further proceedings be taken in the bankruptcy proceedings in your honor's court without special notice to them, Judge Ballinger and Mr. Jones.

Hearing was had before Commissioner Bowman. At the hearing Mr. Reynolds suppressed most material evidence, kept his client off the stand in the interests of Mr. Jones and Judge Ballinger, and later submitted the matters to Commissioner Bowman without argument. The proofs were closed without Mr. Heckmann's knowledge, and he learned of the fact only when he read in the newspapers the commissioner's decision. The commissioner reported favorably for Judge Ballinger and Mr. Jones, and an order was entered by your Honor on March 3rd, 1902, dissolving the injunction against the State court and permitting said court to confirm the sale if so advised. Mr. Heckmann was then advised by Mr. Reynolds that the order which your honor had entered on January 21st meant that no further proceedings could be taken in your honor's court without the consent of Mr. Jones and Judge Ballinger.

Mr. Reynolds returned to the State court and three days later on the 6th of March when the court directed the alleged sale to be made by the receiver, Mr. Reynolds was present, sanctioned and advocated the same, and the very order taken by the parties on that day, the granting of which Mr. Heckmann had hired Mr. Reynolds to oppose, names Mr. Reynolds as the attorney for the American Bonding & Trust Company, the surety on the bond of the receiver.

From the evidence submitted to your special referee it appears that while said hearing was in progress before Commissioner Bowman, the said American Bonding & Trust Company paid to Mr. Reynolds $100 in cash and employed him as its attorney in the receivership proceeding and in three or four other matters in which it was engaged; and it also appears that the Scandinavian-American Bank paid to Mr. Reynolds the further sum of $150, the latter sum being paid at the instance of Judge Ballinger. From the fact that your special referee was compelled to coerce the witness (Mr. Mayhew) who passed the $150 to Mr. Reynolds before he would tell of said payment, and from the fact that Mr. Reynolds claims the sum to have been a contribution from the bank to Mr. Hanson of the firm and that he, Reynolds, now has said money in his office and is willing and desires to turn the same over to Mr. Hanson, and from the further fact that he did assist the said bonding company and the said bank in effecting a delivery of the said property to the said bank, and from other circumstances, your petitioners believes and therefore alleges that the said sum of $150 was paid by the bank to Mr. Reynolds for the purpose of inducing Mr. Reynolds to simulate protection of the bankrupt's interests before Commissioner Bowman and your honor, and to assist in the delivery of the said property to the bank. Your petitioner also believes and therefore alleges that the said sum of $100 was so paid by the bonding company and the services of the said Reynolds so engaged by said bonding company as consideration for his services in helping to deliver the said property and making possible the discharge of the said receiver by said State court and the release of said bonding company from the bond of said receiver.

XVIII. Previous to the receivership proceedings said American Bonding & Trust Company had bonded Heckmann & Hanson to the United States Government to complete repairs on the United States Transport Seward and so save the Government harmless from any claims of laborers and material men for labor or material entering into such repairs. At the time the receiver was applied for, there were unpaid the claims of laborers and material men against the Seward aggregating in the neighborhood of $3,000 or $4,000 and for which said bonding company was contingently liable. Afterwards, when the receiver was appointed said bonding company bonded said receiver for the faithful performance of his duties.

It further appears from the evidence that the regular referee in bankruptcy for this district, the Honorable John P. Hoyt, was the attorney for the said American Bonding & Trust Company, and in the fall of 1901, before bankruptcy proceedings were begun as above set forth, Judge Hoyt as such attorney was looking after the interests of said bonding company as such interests related to the so-called Seward claims.

With the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, January 17, 1902, said bonding company assisted said bankrupts in making a showing of fraud against the said receiver, as set forth in paragraph XVII hereof. At that time the State court was proposing to sell said property for $24,125.00. The indebtedness and expenses of the receivership were more than said amount, leaving said bonding company liable to make up the deficiency on the Seward claims. The property was worth upwards of $60,000.00. At that time it was the understanding and belief of the bankrupts and said bonding company that the receiver and the said bank were conniving to gain said property at a grossly inadequate price. And the object of the said bonding company in thus assisting to stop said sale appears from the evidence to have been to bring said property to a fair sale, in order that a larger price might be obtained and a loss on the Seward claim reduced or avoided entirely.

Later and while hearing was had before Commissioner Bowman, as before related, the bonding company appears to have discovered the extent of the fraud committed by the said receiver and which at that time was unknown to the bankrupts. And thereupon said bonding company engaged as its own attorney the said C. A. Reynolds, the bankrupts' attorney, as hereinbefore related.

On the 6th of March the said referee was present in said State court and assisted in getting said property delivered by said receiver to said bank, and later in your honor's court said referee further assisted in preventing the bankrupts from obtaining an order from your honor that the money supposed to have been received by said State court for said property be brought to your honor's court for distribution. The said referee also failed and neglected to set in motion the bankruptcy machinery looking towards an administration of the estate until after the delivery of the said property to the said bank and after the receiver had been discharged as such and his bond released by said State court.

Afterwards and between the 8th and 12th of March your petitioner and Mr. Heckmann requested of said bonding company their cooperation in unearthing the fraudulent doings of the receiver and his associates hereinbefore mentioned and were informed by the said bonding company through the C. S. Hills hereinbefore mentioned that said company would decline to enter into such an investigation; that it had once started to do so, but had been advised by their attorney, Judge Hoyt, to pay the so-called Seward claims, and to pursue the matter no further.

Your petitioner believes and therefore alleges that the failure to set in motion the bankruptcy machinery was due to the fact that said referee was the attorney of said bonding company and knew of the fraud perpetrated by the said receiver, and the said referee in so doing was actuated by a desire to get his client released from the bond of said receiver.

XIX. When, in turn, Mr. Reynolds gave evidence to the bankrupts that he was failing to protect their interests, but on the contrary was working in harmony with the bank, the receiver and the bankrupts' former attorneys, Metcalfe & Jurey, Mr. Heckmann felt obliged again to change attorneys, and accordingly employed your petitioner.

Petitioner was called into the receivership proceedings in the State court on said 6th day of March, 1902, about three hours before the order was made by the State court confirming said sale. The bankrupts, owing to the circumstances hereinbefore related, had no accurate knowledge of the status of their several matters. Your petitioner knew even less, and was prepared to oppose the granting of the order confirming said sale on the grounds only of proceedings pending in bankruptcy. At the hearing that day there were present and advocating the granting of the order, Judge Ballinger, who had never made any appearance in the case for any named client; General Metcalfe, who in December previous had been supplanted by Mr. Reynolds, as before related; Mr. Jones, ostensibly the attorney for the receiver, but drawing his compensation from the Scandinavian-American Bank; Mr. Reynolds, who had been hired by Heckmann & Hanson to oppose those identical proceedings; and Judge Hoyt, the referee in bankruptcy and attorney for the surety on the receiver's bond. Three or four other members of the bar were present and added to the proceeding the weight that comes from numbers. Though unknown to said court, they and their clients had no real concern in the proceeding, because already arrangements had been made with said bonding company to pay on the claims so represented whatever sum happened not to be paid through said State court proceedings, and which arrangements were afterwards carried out in toto, and the claims thus paid in full. The court granted the order and confirmed the alleged sale.

The State court having made it apparent that it proposed to proceed even further and distribute the funds supposed to be in its hands, petitioner on the 8th day of March applied to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington for a writ of prohibition to stop the State court from proceeding further, because it was without jurisdiction. Mr. Jones, for said State court, returned to the supreme court that so far said State court had proceeded only in accordance with the orders and requests of your honor's court; and further, in effect, that the State court had no intention of distributing the fund then alleged to be in its hands. The supreme court denied a permanent writ, but whether or not because of the representations made by Mr. Jones petitioner does not know. (See 28 Wash., 25.)

April 3rd, petitioner then asked your honor for an order to stay proceedings in the State court, and after alleging the facts necessary to show its want of jurisdiction, also alleged that said court had under its control the fund of $24,125 received as the purchase price of the alleged sale, petitioner having been misled in that regard by the reports of the receiver and the representations of counsel made in open court to that effect, and that said State court proposed to distribute that fund. Opposed to petitioner upon the hearing before your honor was Judge Ballinger, Mr. Jones, and the said referee, Judge Hoyt. Upon the hearing your honor conceded the law to be with petitioner, but stated from the bench that under all the circumstances, the creditors being satisfied with their proceedings, your honor would deny petitioner's motion.

The parties engaged in said conspiracy then went back into the State court and, without notice to your petitioner or his clients, obtained an order of distribution to various creditors. Thereupon the bank furnished the money as hereinbefore alleged and the sum was passed through the registry of the court as hereinbefore set forth.

XX. As soon as petitioner could become the attorney of record for the bankrupts in your honor's court, he applied to said referee in bankruptcy, Judge Hoyt, to set in motion the bankruptcy machinery. Judge Hoyt thereupon called the first meeting of creditors for April 25.

At said first meeting held on the 25th of April, 1902, said M. F. Mayhew, through the A. J. Tennant hereinbefore mentioned, appeared and filed with said referee his claim in a sum of upwards of $4,000. This claim was comprised of various accounts against the bankrupt firm, and which the bank had bought up in Mr. Mayhew's name. The claim being defective in form, the meeting was adjourned by the referee to allow of amending it.

The record made at the first meeting failed to satisfy those manipulating the court machinery. At the adjourned meeting of creditors there appeared in lieu of Mr. Mayhew some five other creditors, who proposed to prove claims aggregating $21.00. The said A. J. Tennant, from Judge Ballinger's office, appeared as attorney for these creditors. The claims at this time offered had been included by Mr. Mayhew in his claim filed at the previous meeting. Inquiry by your petitioner for Mr. Mayhew's claim developed that it had been suppressed. The referee even disavowed any record of its filing. Thereupon petitioner invited the honorable referee aside, and unoffensively as possible conveyed to him petitioner's dissatisfaction with him as a court, and the reasons therefor, and petitioner expressed his desire that said referee withdraw from the proceedings; petitioner further told said referee that any method that the latter might pursue to become unidentified with said proceedings would be satisfactory to petitioner and his clients, but that if a way were not found by him petitioner would come to your honor in search of one. Whereupon said referee went into his court, adjourned the proceedings without day, and in the course of a few days later petitioner received notice that all matters to said bankruptcy pertaining had been referred by your honor to the Honorable Judge Worden, of Tacoma, for further proceedings.

XXI. At the adjourned meeting held afterwards before said referee, Judge Worden, for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee, the five creditors in the previous paragraph mentioned again appeared and proved their claims. The names of said creditors, with the amount of their claims, follow:

A. J. Tennant, a clerk in Judge Ballinger's office, $4.73; F. E. Brightman, a clerk in Judge Ballinger's office, $7.10; John Larrabee, a clerk in Judge Ballinger's office, $5.25; D. C. Conover, a former clerk in Judge Ballinger's office, $2.50; Charles W. Russell, a bookkeeper in Mr. Mayhew's office, $3.55.

And these were the only claims ever at any time proven in said estate.

The creditors thus appearing elected as trustee one E. F. Fisher, a bookkeeper in the employ of a creditor of the firm. Mr. Fisher qualified, and after the passing of several months' time and while Mr. Heckmann was in Alaska sold and disposed of the household goods which the receiver had taken possession of as related in paragraph XV hereof; and also sold a couple of small pieces of real estate belonging to Mr. Heckmann individually. Said trustee then reported to the court in effect that the bankrupts firm had no property, and on the 5th of December, 1902, filed with the referee his final report, and on the 2nd of January, 1903, without notice to the bankrupts or their attorney, obtained his discharge as such trustee. Whereupon said referee filed with this court his report declaring said estate closed.

XXII. The attorneys of record for said creditors were Messrs. Gray & Tait, attorneys of your honor's court. Mr. Gray of the firm was present and for said creditors elected the trustee. Thereafter Mr. Gray acted as said trustee's attorney.

It appears from the evidence of Judge Ballinger's clerk aforesaid, Mr. Tennant, that Messrs. Gray & Tait were employed by him, Mr. Tennant; further, that the claims proven as above set forth were proved with the idea of "blocking" Mr. Heckmann, who, "they had heard," was going to disturbe the sale made in said State court.

And Mr. Mayhew, on his part, testified that the trustee was procured and his bond furnished by himself, Mr. Mayhew.

XXIII. It further appears that the absence of interest on the part of any and all creditors except as in the previous paragraph set forth, in the bankruptcy proceedings as well as in the State court proceedings, was due to the fact that said Scandinavian-American Bank had bought up the claims of the various creditors, with a few exceptions. The exceptions consisted of those who apparently understood the situation—and who took advantage of same to insist upon payment in full. Such payment they exacted by simply presenting their claims to the State court and taking whatever mgiht be apportioned to them of the amount remaining after the said bank had withdrawn the amount claimed as its own, as set forth in Paragraph XVI hereof; then presenting their accounts to the said American Bonding & Trust Company, the surety on the receiver's bond, when the balance thereof was paid by said bondsman in full.

XXIV. Mr. Hanson of the firm, was seriously injured a short time before the trouble with the bank arose, his brain was effected thereby, a long illness resulted, and he was left and is to-day in a feeble condition, mentally and physically. Of affairs as they occurred in the State court he knows absolutely nothing, and with matters as they passed in your honor's court he has been unable to concern himself.

XXV. When the trustee was elected as hereinbefore mentioned Mr. Heckmann, in the belief that the firm property would be properly administered by your honor's court, went to Alaska, at the time expecting to return in the fall of the year. He did start to return on October 6, 1902, but the ship upon which he took passage became disabled at sea and was some eighty days overdue before reaching Seattle, and Mr. Heckmann failed to reach Seattle until January 28, 1903. March 18th following, having learned of the action of said trustee as hereinbefore related, Mr. Heckmann caused to be filed with your honor the bankrupts' petition to reopen their said estate, stating therein so much of the facts in this petition above set forth as your petitioner, attorney for said bankrupts, deemed necessary and relevant to the right of said bankrupts to have said estate reopened. Your honor thereupon made an order appointing Honorable Eben Smith as a special referee to investigate the matters alleged in said petition and directing said special referee to hear evidence and report to your honor his findings with respect to the right of the bankrupts to have the cause reopened and with respect to the conduct of such attorneys and officers of your honor's court as appeared to be accused by the allegations of said petition.

XXVI. At the hearings had from time to time before said special referee in accordance with your honor's order, the said special referee has permitted to be present and to take part in the proceedings numerous attorneys, none of whom have entered any appearance in said cause either for themselves or any client, and none of whom, with the exception of Judge Hoyt, were in any manner accused by the allegations of said petition to reopen said estate.

In the course of proceedings before said special referee a story was imposed upon said court by parties connected with said Scandinavian-American Bank to the effect that the said M. F. Mayhew, the alleged purchaser of the Heckmann & Hanson property, did not represent the said bank, as alleged by the bankrupts, but, on the contrary, that he represented two directors and a vice president of said bank, being J. W. Kelly, J. E. Chilberg, and E. L. Grondahl; and that, while Mr. Mayhew did use funds furnished by the said bank, yet the said bank had furnished them upon the credit of said Kelly, Chilberg, and Grondahl, who, said witnesses alleged, were behind Mr. Mayhew and had established for him his credit at said bank. Some five or six witnesses swore positively to said story, and it became necessary for petitioner to subpœna the books of said bank to refute said testimony and to show to said court the falsity thereof.

Thereupon petitioner caused to be subpœnaed an officer of said bank, who himself had testified to said story, and to bring with him the books and records of said bank of every name and nature relating to the moneys furnished to Mr. Mayhew and used by him in purchasing the Heckmann & Hanson property. The said witness appeared, but failed to produce said books and records, or any of them, giving as his excuse therefor that they would show nothing had he done so. Said special referee deeming, himself without power to deal with the situation, certified the matter to your honor; whereupon occurred the matters and things set forth in Paragraph I of this petition.

At the hearings before said special referee, prior and subsequent to the entering of the order in Paragraph I referred to, the facts as hereinbefore set forth were fully established.

XXVII. In conclusion, your petitioner states that the record made before said special referee shows that the firm of Heckmann & Hanson was formed in 1898, at a time when the sole assets of the firm consisted of $500 worth or mechanics' tools owned by each partner. Two years thereafter the firm had accumulated property worth upward of $60,000. The receiver himself, when he took possession, inventoried it at $54,421.19. Against the assets there were liabilities of about $23,000, but the maturity of which scattered over a long period of time. When possession of the plant was given over to the receiver the business of the firm was netting over $2,000 cash per month. Such a thing as a creditor presenting a bill which was not paid on the spot the firm never, while their affairs were in their own hands, experienced.

This was the plant, and such was its financial condition, when Judge Ballinger, the firm's attorney, designedly embroiled Heckmann & Hanson with the bank of which, unbeknown to the firm, he was the attorney and a director.

Since the 12th day of July, 1901, the firm's affairs have been in the hands of the courts. Mr. Heckmann has done all within his power to obtain a proper presentation of these matters. But never, until your petitioner placed him upon the stand before your special referee, has he had an opportunity to tell his story to a court. Three years in court, sued right and left, and unable to get so far as an answer, though his property has long since been turned over to the institution which started in with the determination to rule or ruin the firm.

As a climax to his wrongs, with the record showing the price received, respectively, by General Metcalfe, by Mr. Jones, and by Mr. Reynolds, for betraying the firm and the courts to Judge Ballinger and the bank, Mr. Heckmann has recently heard your special referee say that the right to have the bankruptcy estate reopened does not exist.

XXVIII. Your petitioner finally alleges that in all matters and things in this petition set forth he has confined himself entirely to the matters and things which have been presented to said special referee, the honorable Eben Smith, except in those instances wherein he had specifically alleged his belief, and in those instances he has based such belief upon the matters and things presented to said referee and which are in his record. And your petitioner states that he believes and therefore alleges the matters and things thus presented to said special referee to be true.

Wherefore, your petitioner respectively asks that your honor make such order in the premises as to your honor may seem fitting.

J. L. FINCH, Petitioner.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

J. L. Finch on oath deposes and says that he is the petitioner in the above-entitled matter; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; that the same is true, as he verily believes.

J. L. FINCH.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of February, 1904.

[SEAL.] T. M. JEFFERY,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

EXHIBIT NO. 34.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners, defendants, Peter Larsson, receiver. No. 32817.

ORDER OF SALE.

The above-entitled matter coming on to be heard on this, Tuesday, the third day of December, A. D. 1901, pursuant to an order to show cause, heretofore made, rendered and entered in this action on the 25th day of November, A. D. 1901, which order to show cause has been regularly and fully published, as in said order provided, and notice thereof regularly and fully give to all parties in interest in this action and to all creditors of Heckmann & Hanson and to all parties in interest in the property of Heckmann & Hanson, and the court having given to this matter full consideration and being fully advised in the premises, it is hereby ordered and directed that Peter Larsson, receiver of the property of Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, do proceed to sell the same at private sale, subject to the order and approval of this court; that notice of such sale be given as provided in the order of this court contemporaneously entered herewith; that said receiver receive bids for said property at any time on or before the tenth day of January, A. D. 1902, said bids to be private, sealed bids, in accordance with the conditions and directions contained in this order of sale; that on Monday, the 13th day of January, A. D. 1902, the said receiver report said bids to this court with his recommendations in regard thereto; that each and every bid made for any portion or the whole of said property be accompanied by a certified check for ten per cent of the amount bid, to be forfeited to said receiver in case such bid is accepted and the party making the same fails or refuses to make full and complete payment and accept the property for which such bid is offered; that bids be accepted for said property in seven separate parcels or in one or more parcels, as is set forth in the report of the said receiver filed on the 25th day of November, A. D. 1901, and no bid shall be received except for as much as or more than the upset price for each parcel and for the whole of such property set forth in this order:

Parcel A.—The property known as the Winsor property and described as follows, to wit:

Commencing at a point two hundred feet due west of the east line of tract forty-nine of "Farmdale homestead tracts," and fifty feet north, thirty minutes thirty-five seconds west of the meander line of Salmon Bay; running thence north thirty minutes thirty-five seconds west to the line of the Seattle & Montana Railway right of way; thence along the lines of said right of way to a point seventy-five feet due west of the east line of said tract forty-nine of "Farmdale homestead tracts"; thence south thirty minutes thirty-five seconds east to the intersection of the west line of Fourth Ave. west produced as platted by the State Tide Land Board; thence along said west line of Fourth Avenue west, south thirty-two degrees, twenty-two minutes, eleven seconds west to the waterway in Salmon Bay; thence along the line of said waterway to the line between lots six and seven of block nine, and from thence to the place of beginning, including all buildings, machinery, boilers, engines, and other improvements, together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging and situate at Ballard, King County, Washington. Upset price, $6,000.

Parcel B.—The present marine yard of Heckmann & Hanson, the real estate of which is described as follows, to wit:

Beginning on the northerly shore of Salmon Bay at the southwesterly corner of the tract of land heretofore conveyed to the Porter Gage Company, said point being south 45° 3′ west three hundred fifty-four (354) feet distant from a point on the southwesterly line of lot 20 in block 72, Gilman Park, set 22.05 feet southeasterly from the corner common to lots 21 and 20 in block 72, Gilman Park, and running thenceforth 45° 3′ east along the northerly line of said Porter Gage tract a distance of two hundred fifty-four (254) feet to the southwesterly line of Shilshole Avenue and to the northwesterly corner of said Porter Gage tract; thence north 44° 57′ west along the southwesterly side of said Shilshole Avenue a distance of 192.05 feet to the northeasterly corner of the tract of land heretofore conveyed to Paul Hopkins; thence along the line of said Hopkins tract south 45° 3′ west one hundred sixty-seven (167) feet and to the said Hopkins southeasterly corner; thence north 44° 57′ west 65 feet and to Hopkins southwesterly corner; thence 45° 3′ east 32 feet; thence north 44° 57′ west along a line parallel to and uniformly one hundred thirty-five (135) feet distant from the southwesterly line of said Shilshole Avenue a distance of eighty-nine (89) feet, more or less, to the east boundary line of tract No. 49, Farmdale Homestead; thence south along said tract line a distance of two hundred ninety-five (295) feet to the high-tide line of Salmon Bay; thence easterly along said high-tide line to the place of beginning; excepting from the above-described tract of land a strip of land uniformly 55 feet wide, extending from Salmon Bay to Shilshole Avenue and adjoining the tract of land heretofore conveyed to the Porter Gage Company, which said tract of land, 55 feet wide, was heretofore conveyed to Edwin Auld by deed dated February 1st, 1893, and recorded in volume 162 of deeds, on page 637, records of King County.

Also, beginning at a point on the Government meander line situated north 51° 13′ 36″ west 4.566 feet from the most northerly corner of lot 2; thence south 45° 22′ 32″ west 110 feet to a point; thence southerly 187 feet, more or less, to a point on the northerly line of Salmon Bay waterway 25.434 feet from the most southerly corner of lot 1; thence along the line of said waterway north 57° 37′ 49″ west 85 feet, more or less, to the easterly line of Fourth Avenue west; thence along said easterly line north 32° 22′ 11″ east 174 feet, more or less, to the line of ordinary high tide; thence along said line in a northeasterly direction 50 feet, more or less, to the Government meander line; thence along said line south 51° 13′ 36″ east 85 feet, more or less, to the place of beginning, the same being 0.6386 acres in lot 1 and 0.0549 acres in lot 2, block 8, of tide lands in front of the city of Ballard, as the same are shown on the official plat of same filed in the office of the board of State land commissioners December 10, 1894, and altogether containing 0.6935 acres, more or less, according to the official survey thereof. Upset price, $9,000.

Parcel C.—The tide lands or shore lands immediately in front of and adjacent to parcels A and B belonging to Heckmann & Hanson. Upset price, $3,000.

Parcel D.—The marine ways, tools, machinery, machine shops, supplies, and stock on hand of the Heckmann & Hanson yards. Upset price, $5,000.

Parcel E.—Bills receivable for accounts due Heckmann & Hanson at the time when this receiver was appointed and not now paid. Upset price, $100.

Parcel F.—The yacht Vigilant, now under cover in the yards of Heckmann & Hanson. Upset price, $1,000.

Parcel G.—The steamer Clara Hawes, now on the ways in the yards of Heckmann & Hanson. Upset price, $2,000.

Bidders will be allowed to bid on the whole of said property or on one or other number of said parcels and shall have the right of removal of all machinery, tools, buildings, and supplies from any one parcel, with 75 days of time from the time of the acceptance of any bid in which to make such removal.

That the upset price for the whole of said property in any one bid shall be $24,000 and for any two or more parcels less than the whole of said property the sum of the upset price for each thereof.

That a plat of the real property in this order described may be seen at the office of Heckmann & Hanson, in the city of Ballard, and at the office of Richard Saxe Jones, attorney of the receiver of Heckmann & Hanson, at 7–8 Colman Building, Seattle, Washington, at any time on and after the 14th day of December, A. D. 1901.

That all of the property herein ordered to be sold, together with a statement of the bills receivable, tools, machinery, machine shops, supplies, stock on hand, and all other information necessary for properly bidding upon said property may be had and seen at the office of Heckmann & Hanson and of Peter Larsson, receiver for Heckmann & Hanson, in the city of Ballard, County of King, and State of Washington.

That any and all parties having liens upon any parcel or parcels or the whole of said property be allowed to bid upon said property and to apply on their bid or bids the amount due upon their lien or liens, the lien of Carsten & Earles upon the Winsor property, described as parcel A in this notice, being preferred to the lien of the Scandinavian-American Bank thereon; that unless a greater or larger bid shall be received for any parcel of said property subject to any such lien the party holding such lien will be allowed to purchase the same for the full amount of such lien or liens, adding thereto, however, in such manner as shall be determined upon by this court and equitably adjusted among the parties, upon parcel B, the sum of $1,900.40 expended by said receiver in betterments to said parcel B, and further adding thereto, upon such parcels as shall properly distribute the costs and expenses thereof, all of the costs and expenses of this receivership not already paid, together with the sum of one thousand dollars borrowed from the Washington National Bank of Seattle under an order of this court for the purpose of conducting the affairs of said receivership; that the amount of such expenses and the sum so borrowed is estimated by the receiver to be $2,250.

Let this order be entered and such sale made in accordance herewith.

ARTHUR E. GRIFFIN, Judge.

(Filing on back:) No. 32817. In the Superior Court of King County, State of Washington. Wm. M. Curtiss, plaintiff vs. Heckman Hanson, defendant. Order of sale. Filed Dec. 3, 1901. J. B. C. A. Koepfli, clerk. Richard Saxe Jones, atty for receiver.

EXHIBIT No. 35.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, in and for King County.

William Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, defendants, Peter L. Larsson, receiver. No. 32817.

FOURTH REPORT OF THE RECEIVER.

To the honorable the above-entitled court, Judge Arthur E. Griffin, presiding:

Under the order of this court, made, rendered, and entered on the 6th day of March, A. D. 1902, I hereby submit to your honor my fourth report, as receiver of the property of Heckmann & Hanson, defendants in the above-entitled action.

That my actions as such receiver have been respectfully submitted to your honor in the previous reports, reference to which is hereby had, and the same made a part of this report as though more fully herein set forth.

That since the third report which I submitted to your honor, Heckmann & Hanson, defendants, began proceedings in bankruptcy, in the United States District Court for the Northern Division of the Ninth Judicial District, holding terms in the city of Seattle, and obtained a restraining order, restraining me and this court from further proceedings in this cause. I immediately consulted my counsel, Richard Saxe Jones, Esq., and acting under his advice began proceedings in said Federal court for the purpose of dissolving said restraining order and allowing my trust, under the order of this court, to be fully carried out and completed.

Repeated hearings were had before the United States district court, and the matter referred to the Honorable A. C. Bowman to take testimony, trial had before said referee, and his findings and conclusions reported to the Honorable C. H. Hanford, judge of the United States district court; objections were made to those findings and conclusions, trial had before said court, and thereafter the Honorable C. H. Hanford dissolved and vacated said restraining order, and a certified copy of the decree of the Honorable C. H. Hanford dissolving the same has been filed with the clerk of this court in this cause.

In said decree the Honorable C. H. Hanford directed, or requested, this court to proceed and confirm the sale theretofore ordered, of the property of Heckman & Hanson, and further directed this court to properly close up the matters of this receivership.

In pursuance of the orders of your honor, and of the Honorable C. H. Hanford, judge of the United States district court, your receiver has completed the sale of the property of Heckman & Hanson to M. F. Mayhew, has received from said M. F. Mayhew the full sum of twenty-four thousand one hundred and twenty-five dollars ($24,125), by him bid for said property; has executed to said Mayhew a receipt for said money as payment in full for his bid, a deed of all of the real property to Heckman & Hanson belonging, a bill of sale of all the personal property to Heckman & Hanson belonging, and has placed the said Mayhew in possession of each, every, and all of the component parts of said property; has transferred to said Mayhew the insurance policies upon the personal property to him conveyed, and has further transferred all of the accounts of every kind, due and payable, to Heckman & Hanson, and delivered to said Mayhew the account books attesting the same, and there is now in the possession of your receiver, as such receiver, no property of any kind heretofore to Heckman & Hanson in any wise belonging except the money hereinafter, in the accounts of your receiver set forth.

That pursuant to your honor's order, your receiver has paid to himself the sum of five hundred dollars ($500) to apply upon his fees for services, has paid to his attorney the sum of four hundred dollars ($400), has paid off his bookkeeper, E. M. Williams, in full and discharged him from further service, has paid off the watchmen on said property and discharged them from further services, and there is no further duty to be performed by your receiver in this cause, except to dispose of the funds on hand, received as the net result of the sale of the property of Heckman & Hanson.

Your receiver is of the opinion that unless the bankruptcy proceedings in the United States district court shall be dismissed, that it is the duty of your receiver to hold said funds, subject to the demand of a trustee who may be appointed in said bankruptcy proceedings, and that when such demand shall be made it is the duty of your receiver to turn over such fund to the trustee in bankruptcy, and therefore your receiver asks that he be directed to deposit the funds in his possession, after paying all claims against the receivership, in the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, and that he be further directed, if it shall seem best to this court, to pay over said funds to whomsoever may be appointed trustee in bankruptcy, in the proceedings now pending in the United States district court.

Your receiver further reports that judgment has been had upon the suits instigated upon the complaint of the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, against Heckman & Hanson, in which your receiver was substituted, said actions being for foreclosure of mortgage liens upon the real and personal property of Heckman & Hanson, and that said Scandinavian-American Bank has a first right to be paid out of the funds arising from the sale heretofore made of said property.

Your receiver further reports that the action begun by the North Star Gold Mining Company against Heckman & Hanson in this court, arising out of the disputed construction of the steamer Clara Hawes, is still pending; that an agreement was made between your receiver and the attorneys for the plaintiff in said action, by which, if a private sale could be made of the steamer Clara Hawes, the North Star Gold Mining Company was to receive 17/35 of the result of said sale, and your receiver 18/35 thereof.

That no such sale was consummated and the interest of Heckman & Hanson in said steamer was sold to M. F. Mayhew, under the sale heretofore confirmed by your honor, but that the said M. F. Mayhew, at the request of your receiver, and because of the absence of the Honorable Thomas Burke, attorney for the plaintiff in said action, has has consented in all ways to carry out the argument of your receiver, if a private sale can be consumated, as was contemplated at the time such agreement was made.

Your receiver reports that he has received during the term of his receivership the sum of one thousand one hundred and two and 35/100 dollars ($1,102.35); that he has been employed constantly in the affairs of said receivership for the period of two hundred and forty (240) days, to wit, from July 12th to March 8th, and believes he is entitled to receive as compensation for his services the sum of two hundred dollars ($200) per month, or a total of sixteen hundred dollars ($1,600); that under the orders of this court your receiver was absent from the city of Ballard for the period of about twenty days, but left a competent person in charge of his duties and paid him therefor, agreeing that he would be responsible under his bond for the proper performance of his duties during such absence.

And your receiver further reports that during nearly all of said period he has had constantly in his employment Richard Saxe Jones, as counsel, approved by this court; that your receiver has taken no steps in the matter of his receivership without consulting his attorney, and said Jones has been daily employed in advising your receiver and in carrying on the extensive litigation which has resulted from the complicated condition of the affairs of Heckman & Hanson; that your receiver has paid the said Jones the sum of five hundred thirty-seven and 50/100 dollars ($537.50), and said attorney has paid out expenditures in actual cash the sum of fifty-one and 40/100 dollars ($51.40); that your receiver is unable to determine the proper compensation to be paid to his said attorney, but submits the matter to your honor.

That attached to this report are various statements of the condition of the affairs of this receivership, each under their proper heading, to which statements reference is hereby made and the same made a part of this report; that your receiver respectfully prays that this report be approved; that your receiver be directed to deposit the funds in his hands in the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle; that your receiver be directed to hold said funds until proper orders or requests are received from the United States District Court of the Ninth Judicial District, Northern Division, holding terms in Seattle, or until further orders of this court; that all expenses and allowances of this receiver be this day ended and the affairs of this receivership be this day declared to be closed; that the bondsmen of your receiver upon the receiver's bond heretofore given in this action be relieved and the bond discharged.

Very respectfully,

PETER L. LARSSON, Receiver.

SCHEDULE A.

Peter L. Larsson, receiver, in account with R. S. Jones, attorney.

Expense account.

1901.
Aug.	14.	By cash		$137.50
	29.	To Hans Spilde	$10.00
Oct.	2.	To E. B. Herald, serving papers	2.00
Nov.	1.	To Stuart & Hill, stenographers	7.50
Dec.	11.	To clerk of court	.45
	11.	To sheriff	1.80
	31.	To Stuart & Hill, stenographers	4.50
1902.
Jan.	28.	To E. B. Herald, services	5.00
Feb.	1.	To Stuart & Hill, stenographers	.50
Mar.	3.	To E. B. Herald, U. S. Court	2.00
	7.	To E. B. Herald, serving notices	3.00
		To clerk, U. S. Court	.65
		To G. M. Wing, stenographer	14.00
			51.40	137.50

SCHEDULE B.

List of claims filed with receiver, and a statement of the amount shown to be due said claimants upon the ledger of Heckman & Hanson.

	Amount claimed.	Amount shown on ledger to be due claimant.
Acme Iron Works	$11.00	$10.55
A. H. Briggs	10.00	10.00
Ballinger, Ronald & Battle	149.50	149.50
Baker & Richards	7.60	7.60
Bryant & Chapman	16.00	16.00
A. L. Cohen	11.00	11.00
California Saw Works	26.24	26.24
Frye-Bruhn Co	83.50	83.50
W. P. Fuller & Co	6.05	6.05
John Finn Metal Works	46.50	46.50
Frederick & Nelson	19.60	19.60
Galbraith, Bacon & Co	2.50	2.50
Gorham Rubber Co	58.70	58.70
Geo. B. Helgessen	26.75	26.65
E. A. Howard & Co	82.25	82.25
Dr. A. B. Kibbe	250.00	250.00
Kerry Mill Co	69.50	69.50
Lloyd Transfer Co	22.84	22.84
Leonard & Ellis	50.88	50.88
MacDougal & Southwick Co	12.01	12.01
Maritime Exchange	7.00	7.00
Morrison Brass Works	1.00	1.00
Metcalfe & Jurey	305.20	300.00

List of claims filed with receiver, and a statement of the amount shown to be due said claimants upon the ledger of Heckman & Hanson—Continued.

		Amount claimed.	Amount shown on ledger to be due claimant.
Wm. McKeever		$50.00	$53.93
The Marine Engineers Supply Co		99.99	99.99
P. F. Norby		3,103.59	3,123.74
P. F. Norby & Co		293.89	.....
W. W. Philbrick		37.00	37.00
W. H. Peter & Co		10.00	4.50
Seattle Hardware Co		191.14	191.14
Stimson Mill Co		185.13	185.13
Seattle Cedar Lumber Mfg. Co		74.06	74.06
Seattle Brass Co		3.50	3.50
C. G. Sanborn		33.18	33.18
Sunde & Erland		270.11	271.61
Union Brass Foundry		13.35	13.35
Vulcan Iron Works		72.95	72.95
Washington Rubber Co		7.38	7.38
West Coast Iron Works		51.52	51.52
Ballard Boiler Works (Clara Hawes)		317.50	317.50
Chris Sign Co. (Seward)		8.00	8.00
Wm. M. Curtiss (Seward)		1,555.04	.....
Wm. M. Curtiss		78.38	1,516.69
A. Hembach Co		50.41	50.41
Marine Iron Works (Clara Hawes)		315.24	293.04
C. C. Moore & Co. (Seward)		691.00	611.00
Mitchell, Lewis & Staver Co. (Seward)		540.69	540.69
Northwestern Iron Works		124.14	124.14
Rohlfs & Schroeder (Seward)	$117.75
Rohlfs & Schroeder (Vigilant)	32.70
		150.45	150.45
Seattle Lumber Co (Seward)		220.57	126.99
Union Hardware Co. (Seward)		297.76	482.31
Union Hardware Co		192.63
Washington Wire Works		5.00	5.00
City of Ballard, water rent		6.00	.....
Hadfield & Roberts		123.80	123.80

SCHEDULE C.

The following claimants claim to have liens or preferred claims against the steamer Clara Hawes, which has been sold to M. F. Mayhew:

Ballard Boiler Works	$317.50
Marine Iron Works	315.24
Total	632.74

The following claimants claim to have secured claims under the bond given by the American Bonding and Trust Company, for the completion of the repairs upon the Government transport Seward:

Chris Sign Co	$8.00
Wm. M. Curtiss	1,555.04
C. C. Moore & Co	691.00
Mitchell, Lewis & Staver Co	540.69
Rohlfs & Schoeder	117.75
Seattle Lumber Co	220.57
Union Hardware Co	297.76

The following persons claim liens or preferences right against the schooner Vigilant, sold to M. F. Mayhew:

Rohlfs & Schoeder	$32.70

All the above amounts are included in the amount claimed under schedule B, hereinbefore attached.

SCHEDULE D.

The following schedule contains a list of the claims which have been received by this receiver and which the books of Heckman & Hanson show to have been for repairs upon the steamer Seward, and which, your receiver is advised, are claims due under the bond given by the American Bonding and Trust Company.

Your honor will observe that these claims have not all been filed with your receiver as claims against the steamer Seward, but they appear as such on the books of Heckman & Hanson; your honor will further observe that the amounts set forth in this schedule do not agree with the amounts claimed by the various claimants, but your receiver has only allowed said claims for the amount shown on the books of Heckman & Hanson, and believe such amounts to be correct, and that where the amount of the claim does not agree with the books of Heckman & Hanson that the claim is incorrect and should not be allowed.

It is possible that there are claims included in other items of cchedule B which may have been for work upon the Seward, but your receiver is not fully informed in regard thereto.

Seattle Lumber Co	$126.99
Seattle Brass Co	3.50
John Finn Metal Works	46.50
W. M. Curtiss	1,482.09
Westerman Iron works	3.55
Seattle Hardware Co	165.88
Union Hardware Co	297.76
Mitchell, Lewis & Staver	540.69
Washington Wire Works	5.00
Morrison Brass Co	1.00
Achme Iron Works	10.55
C. C. Moore	611.00
A. Hambach Co	21.36
Baker & Richards	7.60
Northwestern Iron Works	124.14
Sunde & Erland	182.02
Lloyd Transfer Co	2.50
Rohlfs & Schoeder	117.75
Washington Rubber Co	.38
Union Brass Foundry	2.00
Galbraith, Bacon & Co	2.50
Chris Sign Company	8.00
Total	3,762.76

SCHEDULE E.

The following is a statement of the receipts of your receiver since taking possession of the property of Heckman & Hanson:

Heckman & Hanson	$131.45
Steamer Puritan	128.73
Wm. F. Meade	24.05
Steamer Wallowa	90.20
Old junk	68.23
Schooner Vida	32.75
Steamer Sophia	293.00
Steamer Ruth	4,196.43
The Washington National Bank	1,000.00
C. A. Heckman	9.77
Labor	13.00
North American T. & T. Co	889.49
Steamer Grace Thurston	81.11
Schooner Vega	2,640.30
F. F. Fisher	2.00
Rent	39.25
Steamer Olympic	791.17
Steamer Rainier	320.82
Schooner Corona	1.50
Schooner Baxter	4.00

Steamer City of Everett	$25.00
Cahn & Cohn	100.00
Steamer Rabboni	96.90
Steamer Pilgrim	37.50
Schooner Anita	994.15
A. McKay	12.50
Schooner Corona	4.85
Steamer I. C. Reed	266.57
Charles Nelson Co	81.50
Bryant & Clark	1.75
Schooner Mildred	361.09
Schooner Alice	293.28
G. B. Sanborn	4.28
W. F. Mayhew's first payment	2,412.50
W. F. Mayhew's second payment	21,712.50
Total	37,161.62

DISBURSEMENTS.

The disbursements of your receiver have been as follows:

Labor	$5,880.44
Merchandise	2,660.37
Discount and commission	383.55
Wing & Guion, bond	100.00
R. S. Jones	537.50
Towage	45.00
Schooner Alice	914.79
Insurance	487.50
Expense	486.80
Watchman	537.00
Bookkeeper	760.38
Foreman	375.15
Receiver, $1,340.35, less expense, $238.00	1,102.35
Washington National Bank	1,046.22
Cash on hand	132.07
	15,449.12

An itemized statement of the item appearing in this schedule as expenses, being a total of $486.80, consists of the following items:

Itemized expenses.

Stationery, printing, etc	$24.10
Office fixtures	4.10
Stamps	7.65
Telephone and telegrams	39.25
Freight and drayage	119.60
Subscriptions to maritime papers	26.45
Sundries	1.40
Typewriting	2.50
Moving small dwelling	20.00
Making three door keys	.75
Boat hire	1.00
H. B. Huntly	2.00
Receiver's expenses	238.00
Total	486.80

Your receiver is indebted for expenses actually incurred for material, labor, merchandise, publishing notice, and sundry items in the sum of $570.30, which your receiver respectfully prays authority to expend.

In conclusion, your receiver regrets that a larger amount could not be realized upon the property of Heckman & Hanson which came into the hands of your receiver. Regrets that Heckman & Hanson have been unable to take care of their debts and prevent the necessity of a sale; but respectfully reports that all the delays and extraordinary expense which may appear from the reports of your receiver have been incurred because of the continual opposition of C. A. Heckman, of the firm of Heckman & Hanson, and the leniency shown to Heckman & Hanson by your receiver in an honest endeavor to assist them in paying their creditors in full, your receiver believing that such actions were for the best interest of the creditors and for the best administration of his trust.

And your receiver herewith presents his books and vouchers for the inspection of this court and all parties in interest.

Very respectfully submitted.

PETER L. LARSSON, Receiver.

(Filing on back:) No. 32817. In the Superior Court King County, Washington. William Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. Heckman & Hanson. Peter L. Larsson, receiver, defendant. Fourth report of the receiver. Copy. Filed Mar. 13, 1902. C. A. Koepfli, clerk. J. B. Richard Saxe Jones. Attorney for receiver.

EXHIBIT No. 36.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, in and for King County.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, defendants. Peter L. Larsson, receiver. No. 32817.

ORDER APPROVING FOURTH REPORT AND DIRECTING RECEIVER.

The above-entitled matter coming on to be heard on this, Saturday, the 22nd of March, A. D. 1902, upon the fourth report of the receiver in this action, and the plaintiff, being represented by Messrs. Whitham, Bennett & Lund, his attorneys, and C. A. Heckman, being represented by J. L. Finch, his attorney, and M. E. Hanson, being represented by C. A. Reynolds, his attorney, and Peter L. Larsson, receiver, being represented by Richard Saxe Jones, his attorney, and the various creditors of Heckman & Hanson, being represented by their respective counsel, as follows:

Messrs. Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, Hoyt & Haight, Burke, Shepard & McGilvra, Ralph D. Nichols, Shank & Smith, C. A. Reynolds, Humphries & Bostwick, and other attorneys in interest, and Messrs. Metcalfe & Jurey appearing for themselves, a motion for the continuance of this hearing, upon the part of C. A. Heckman, being presented and heard, said motion was denied and an exception to the ruling of the court taken by J. L. Finch, attorney for C. A. Heckman, and such exception allowed; thereupon hearing was had upon the motion of Peter L. Larsson, receiver, by his counsel, Richard Saxe Jones, to strike from the files and records in this action the objections and affidavit of C. A. Heckman to the fourth report of said receiver, including objections to the first, second, and third reports of said receiver, upon the ground that such objections and affidavit were scandalous, unwarranted, and undue and unnecessary reflection upon the officers of this court; and further urging that the said C. A. Heckman had no interest remaining in him, in the matters now before this court, upon the ground that he had filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court for this district and had sold all of his interest in the property involved in this litigation. And the court having heard all the parties appearing by their respective attorneys, granted and hereby grants, such motion to strike said objections and affidavit from the records and files in this action.

And thereupon this matter coming on further to be heard upon the motion of Peter L. Larsson, as receiver of Heckman & Hanson, that his fourth report be approved, and that an order be entered directing a disposition of the funds in his hands as receiver of Heckman & Hanson, and it appearing to this court that this matter came on regularly to be heard on the 8th day of March, A. D. 1902, pursuant to notice duly and regularly given to each, every, and all of the parties in interest, and has been regularly continued from day to day until this day, all parties having notice thereof, and the court having regularly and duly heard the fourth report of said receiver, and no objection being made thereto by any of the creditors of said Heckman & Hanson, and the court being in all ways fully advised,

It is hereby ordered and directed:

First. That the receiver, Peter L. Larsson, pay to himself, as final and full compensation for his services as such receiver, the sum of sixteen hundred dollars ($1,600), deducting therefrom any compensation heretofore received, not consisting of moneys actually expended for the expense of such receivership.

Second. That said receiver pay to Richard Saxe Jones, his counsel, in addition to all sums by the said Richard Saxe Jones heretofore received, for the purpose of paying the expense of litigation pending in this cause, the full sum of fourteen hundred dollars ($1,400), as full compensation to said Jones.

Third. That said receiver pay from the funds in his hands, to the parties entitled to the same, all sums due as the indebtedness of this receiver for expenses incurred by said receiver, amounting to the full sum of $570.30, and file in the registry of this court receipts for the same.

Fourth. That said receiver deposit the remaining funds in his hands in the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, accepting a certificate of deposit therefor in his name as receiver of Heckman & Hanson, payable only upon the endorsement, by the clerk of this court, until the final disposition of such funds by this court, upon condition, however, that said Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle execute a bond payable to the clerk of this court, with good and sufficient sureties thereon, for the full amount of said deposit, and $500 in addition thereto, for the payment of said sum whenever demanded by the order of this court.

Fifth. That the bond heretofore given by the receiver in this action be cancelled and the bondsmen thereon fully released from any liability thereunder.

Sixth. That Peter L. Larsson be, and he is hereby, discharged from all and every duty as receiver of Heckman & Hanson, except the disposition of said funds so to be deposited until the further order of this court, and that should said Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle fail to give the bond herein required, that the moneys in the hand of said receiver be deposited in the registry of this court.

To all of which proceedings, orders, and direction C. A. Heckman, by his counsel, duly objected and excepted thereto, and in open court, on said 22nd day of March, A. D. 1902, gave notice of appeal to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington, from each, every, and all of said orders and direction, and every part and portion thereof.

Let this order be entered.

ARTHUR E. GRIFFIN, Judge.

(Filing on back:) No. 32817. In the Superior Court, King County, Washington. Wm. M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman et al., defendants. Order approving 4th report and directing receiver. Original. Filed Mar. 24, 1902. C. A. Koepfli, clerk. Richard Saxe Jones, attorney for receiver, Peter Larson.

EXHIBIT NO. 37.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, in and for the county of King.

William Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, copartners, defendants. No. 32817.

ORDER.

The above matter coming on to be heard on this, Saturday, the 29th day of March, A. D. 1902, upon the regular continuance of the same from the hearing had on March 22, 1902; and all the parties in interest being represented in court, and arguments of counsel being heard upon the motion and petition of the creditors of Heckman and Hansen that this court, through the proper channel, proceed to distribute the funds heretofore deposited in the registry of this court by the receiver in this action; and arguments of counsel on behalf of all parties interested being heard, we hereby,

Order and direct, that this court will proceed to distribute said funds under and by virtue of the power in it vested, to each, every, and all of the creditors of Heckman and Hansen as the same appear in the fourth report of the receiver on file and approved herein, allowing, however, the claim of Hatfield & Roberts this day presented to the court with proper affidavit and proof of its genuineness, to share in the distribution.

This matter is continued until Friday, April 11, A. D. 1902, at 1.30 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of hearing proofs and determining the preferences and priorities claimed by the different creditors herein, and at said time a final order and distribution shall be made.

Let this order be entered.

Done in open court this 31st day of March, 1902.

ARTHUR E. GRIFFIN, Judge.

(Filing on back.) No. 39817. In the Superior Court, King County, Washington. William Curtis, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckmann et al., defendants. Order of distribution. Copy. Filed Mar. 31, 1902. C. A. Koepfli, clerk. J. B. Ballinger, Ronald & Battle.

EXHIBIT No. 38.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, bankrupts.

PETITION FOR DISCHARGE.

To the Honorable C. H. HANFORD,
Judge of the District Court for the District of Washington, Northern Division:

C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners doing business as Heckmann & Hanson, and C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson individually, of the city of Ballard, county of King, State of Washington, in said district, respectfully represent that on the 17th day of January, 1902, they were duly adjudged bankrupts under the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that they and each of them have duly surrendered all their property and rights of property, both firm and individual, and have duly complied with all the requirements of said acts and of the orders of the court touching their bankruptcy.

Wherefore they pray that they and each of them may be decreed by the court to have a full and complete discharge from all debts, firm and individual, provable against their estate, both firm and individual, under said bankrupt acts, except such debts as are excepted by law from such discharge.

Dated this 15th day of January, 1903.

HECKMANN & HANSON.
M. E. HANSON.
C. A. HECKMANN,
By J. L. FINCH,
His Attorney.

J. L. FINCH,
Attorney for bankrupts.

EXHIBIT No. 39.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, bankrupts. In bankruptcy.

ORDER OF DISCHARGE.

Whereas C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners doing business as Heckmann & Hanson, and C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, individually, all of the city of Ballard, county of King and State of Washington, in said district, have been duly adjudged bankrupts under the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy, and appear to have conformed to all the requirements of law in that behalf: It is therefore Ordered by this court that said C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners as Heckmann & Hanson, and C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, individually, be discharged from all debts and claims which are made provable by said acts against their estate, both firm and individual, and which existed on the 17th day of January, 1902, on which day the petition for adjudication was filed by them, excepting such debts as are by law excepted from the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy.

Witness the honorable C. H. Hanford, judge of said district court, and the seal thereof this 16th day of February, A. D. 1903.

[SEAL.] (Signed) C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

R. M. HOPKINS, Clerk.
JEROLD LANDON FINCH,
Attorney for Bankrupts, Seattle, Wash.

(Filed in the U. S. District Court, Dist. of Washington. Feb. 16, 1903, 10 a. m. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. H. M. Walthew, deputy.)

(Filing on back.) No. ——. In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of R. A. Ballinger, J. B. Metcalfe, Richard Saxe Jones, and C. A. Reynolds. Petition. Copy.

EXHIBIT No. 40.

Know all men by these presents: That I, Andrew Heckmann, of Seattle, King County, Washington, have made, constituted, and appointed, and by these presents do make, constitute, and appoint R. A. Ballinger, of the same place, my true and lawful attorney for me and in my name, place, and stead and for my use and benefit to ask, demand, sue for, recover, collect, and receive all such sums of money, debts, dues, accounts, legacies, bequests, interests, dividends, annuities, and demands whatsoever, as are now or shall hereafter become due, owing, payable, or belonging to me, and have, use, and take all lawful ways and means in my name, or otherwise, for the recovery thereof, by attachments, arrest, distress, or otherwise, and to compromise and agree for the same, and to make, sign, seal, and deliver acquittances, or other sufficient discharges for the same, for me and in my name, to bargain, contract, agree for purchase, receive, and take lands, tenements, hereditaments, and accept the seizin and possession of all lands, and all deeds, and other assurances in the law therefor; and to lease, let, demise, bargain, sell, remise, release, convey, mortgage, and hypothecate lands, tenements, and hereditaments, upon such terms and conditions and under such covenants as he shall think fit. Also to bargain and agree for, buy, sell, mortgage, hypothecate, and in any and every way and manner deal in and with goods, wares, and merchandise, choses in action, and other property, in possession or in action, and to release mortgages on lands or chattels, and to make, do, and transact all and every kind of business of what nature and kind soever. And also for me and in my name, and as my act and deed, to sign, seal, execute, deliver, and acknowledge such deeds, leases, and assignments of leases, covenants, indentures, agreements, mortgages, hypothecations, bottomries, charter parties, bills of lading, bills, bonds, notes, receipts, evidences of debt, releases and satisfaction of mortgage judgment, and other debts, and such other instruments in writing, of whatever kind or nature, as may be necessary or proper in the premises:

Giving and granting unto my said attorney full power and authority to do and perform all and every act and thing whatsoever requisite and necessary to be done in and about the premises, as fully to all intents and purposes as I might or could do if personally present, hereby ratifying and confirming all that my said attorney, R. A. Ballinger, shall lawfully do or cause to be done, by virtue of these presents.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal the 12th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred.

ANDREW HECKMANN. [SEAL.]

Signed, sealed, and delivered in the presence of—
A. J. TENNANT,
NELLIE HECKMANN.
(Internal-revenue stamp, .25.)

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

This is to certify that on this 12th day of Oct., A. D. 1900, before me, A. J. Tennant, a notary public in and for the State of Washington, duly commissioned and sworn, personally came Andrew Heckmann, to me known to be the individual described in and who executed the within instrument, and acknowledged to me that he signed and sealed the same as his free and voluntary act and deed for the uses and purposes therein mentioned.

Witness my hand and official seal the day and year in this certificate first above written.

[SEAL.] A. J. TENNANT,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Filing on back:) 197945. General power of attorney from Andrew Heckmann to R. A. Ballinger. Dated Oct. 12, 1900. Filed for record at request of Ballinger, Ronald & Battle on the 31st day of October, 1900, at 44 minutes past 11 a. m., and recorded in volume 4 of Pow. of Atty., page 514, records of King County, State of Washington. E. H. Evenson, auditor of said county. By Ellen S. Fish, deputy. Aug. 28, 1903. Respts. exhibit. Even Smith, United States master in chancery, Dist. of Washington, Northern Division. Compared by O. & O.

EXHIBIT No. 41.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division.

In the matter of C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners, doing business as Heckmann & Hanson, and C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, individuals, bankrupts. Petition of Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, to reopen estate and for other relief. No. 2203.

To the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division, Honorable C. H. Hanford, judge.

Your petitioners, Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, of the above named bankrupts, respectfully represent:

I. That heretofore, to wit, on the 17th day of January, 1902, your petitioners filed in this honorable court their petition in voluntary bankruptcy, asking this court to adjudge them bankrupts and to grant to them the benefit of the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy; that thereupon, and on the same day, by order duly made and entered your petitioners were duly adjudged to be bankrupts; and on the 18th day of January, 1902, by an order duly made and entered, all matters thereto pertaining were referred to the Honorable John P. Hoyt, a referee of this court, residing at Seattle, Washington, in said district, to take such further proceedings therein as required by said bankruptcy acts; all of which matters more fully appear by the records and files of this court in the above-entitled matter, to which reference is hereby made.

II. That at the time of filing said petition, and with the said petition, your petitioners prepared and filed in this court a schedule of all their property (real and personal) showing the amount and kind, the location thereof, and its money value in detail; and also prepared and filed with their petition a list of their creditors, showing their residences, the amounts due each, the consideration thereof, and the security held by them, all in triplicate, as required by law and the rules of this court. And in all other respects your petitioners have fully complied with the law relating to bankruptcy, and with the rules and orders of this court, and in all respects, since their adjudication as bankrupts, have been ready and willing to cooperate with the court, with their creditors, and with the trustee in the administration of said estate and all matters pertaining thereto.

III. Your petitioners further represent that at the time of their adjudication as bankrupts, the property of your petitioners, both real and personal, was in the possession of the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for King County, acting through its receiver, one Peter L. Larsson, and this court was so apprised in the said petition for adjudication. That the cause in the said State court in which the said Larsson was appointed receiver of the property of your petitioners was entitled "William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, versus Heckmann & Hanson, defendants. Peter L. Larsson, receiver," and was known as file number 32817 in said court. That said Superior Court of the State of Washington for King County was at all times without jurisdiction over the said property, and without jurisdiction to sell or dispose of the same, as more fully appears from the complaint filed in said cause, the motion made for the appointment of said receiver, the affidavit of plaintiff filed in support of said motion, and the order of the court appointing said receiver, copies of which are hereto attached, marked, respectively, Exhibits "A," "B," "C," "D," made a part of this petition, and reference to which, for greater certainty, is hereby made. That after obtaining the said order appointing the said receiver no other or further proceedings were ever taken in said cause by the said plaintiff, or his attorneys, in said State court, and no judgment or decree was ever rendered in said cause.

IV. That owing to the fact that at the time of preparing and filing said schedule of property and list of creditors heretofore referred to these bankrupts were not in possession of their property, nor any part thereof, nor of their books of account, stock books, inventories, records, or papers, and had not access thereto, and had no reliable data from which to prepare said schedule, and ever since said time, have been unable to gain possession of or access to their said property or their said books of account, stock books, inventories, records, or papers, the said schedule of property as filed was and is inaccurate, incomplete, and defective in that it fails to include all the accounts owing the bankrupts and fails to include a large amount of the personal property belonging to the estate of the bankrupts and which was at the time of filing said schedule in the possession of the said receiver in the said State court; and is further inaccurate and defective in that the liabilities therein scheduled are too high by at least the sum of $6,872.12. That the value of the personal property in the hands of said receiver was upwards of the sum of $29,000.00; that the value of the real estate was upwards of the sum of $40,000.00; that the liabilities of the copartnership were not to exceed the sum of $23,000.00. That, in truth and in fact, the total value of all the property belonging to the bankrupts' estate was and is far in excess of all the debts owing by the bankrupts, and, if properly administered, will pay the debts of the bankrupts in full and leave a considerable amount in the estate to be returned to the bankrupts, your petitioners. That all the matters and things in this paragraph contained were at all times known to the creditors of these bankrupts, to the trustee, and to the referee to whom reference of said bankruptcy matter in the first instance was made.

V. Your petitioners further represent that one of the creditors of your petitioners, the Scandinavian-American Bank, of Seattle, Washington, well knowing the value of said property, and well knowing the value to be far in excess of the debts owing by said bankrupts, contriving to obtain possession of said property and to convert the same to its own use without making just compensation therefor, in fraud of these bankrupts and the bankruptcy law and this court, and conspiring and colluding with the said receiver of said State court, said Peter L. Larsson, to conceal certain frauds of the said Larsson committed in connection with said receivership, and to part of which frauds the said bank was a party, procured the said Larsson to obtain from said Superior Court of the State of Washington for King County an order to sell and dispose of said property at a grossly inadequate price, to wit, for the sum of $24,125.00; and the said court, after the adjudication of these petitioners as bankrupts, and with knowledge of said adjudication, and after proper motion made to stay proceedings in said State court, and over and against the protests of these bankrupts, and without any jurisdiction to sell or dispose of said property, made an order pretending and assuming to sell and dispose of the same to one M. F. Mayhew, and directing its said receiver to execute to the said Mayhew a deed of the real estate and a bill of sale of the personal estate of said bankrupts then in the possession of said court; and the said receiver, as directed, did, on the 7th day of March, 1902, execute and deliver to the said Mayhew a deed of the said real property and a bill of sale of the said personal property then in the hands of the said receiver belonging to the estate of these bankrupts; and the said receiver on the same day, turned over and delivered to the said Mayhew the possession of the said real and personal property, being the same property set forth in the schedule prepared and filed by these bankrupts with their petition heretofore filed, as aforesaid, or so much thereof as had not previously been fraudulently converted and disposed of by said receiver, and, in addition, being the rest and residue of the property belonging to the estate of these bankrupts and not scheduled, owing to the inability of these bankrupts to schedule the same, as hereinbefore related, and which transfer of personal property included as well the books of accounts, stock books, records, and papers belonging to the estate of these bankrupts. And thereupon the said Mayhew, on behalf of the said bank, paid into the said court the sum of $24,125.00. And afterwards, and on the 7th day of March, 1902, the said court, with knowledge of the adjudication of these petitioners as bankrupts, and after proper motion made to stay proceedings in said cause, and over and against the objections of these petitioners, entered an order confirming its acts and doings and the acts and doings of its said receiver in the premises.

VI. That the money tendered in payment for the said property to give color to the said transaction and induce the said State court to make said order of sale, and deposited in the said State court in payment for the said property, as aforesaid, unknown to said State court, was furnished to the said Mayhew by the said Scandinavian-American Bank, and the property so delivered to and received by the said Mayhew was received by him in trust for the said bank. And the money so furnished to him and by him paid into court was furnished and paid with full knowledge on the part of the said bank and the said Mayhew, and any and all others connected with said transaction of the adjudication of these bankrupts as such, and with full knowledge that the said State court had no jurisdiction over the said property and no title to the same, and had no right or jurisdiction to sell or dispose of the same.

VII. Your petitioners further represent that upon receiving the possession of the said property the said Mayhew, at the instance of the said bank, immediately transferred the same, or a large part thereof, to a corporation known as the Seattle Shipyards Company, which corporation was formed at the instance of the said bank, and your petitioners believe, and therefore allege, that it was so formed for the purpose of receiving the said property and losing the identity thereof and of hiding and concealing the present pretended owners thereof. That the said The Seattle Shipyards Company is now in possession of the said property.

VIII. Your petitioners further represent that the said alleged sale of the property of these bankrupts was made by said State court to the said M. F. Mayhew subject to the incumbrances due against the said property, said incumbrances being in the neighborhood of $20,000. That after the alleged sale of the said property, as aforesaid, and the receipt of the said sum of $24,125, as aforesaid, the said Superior Court of the State of Washington for King County, with knowledge of the adjudication of these bankrupts as such, and after due proceedings had been taken by them to stay proceedings in said court, and against the protests of these petitioners, and with knowledge that the said property had been sold, if sold at all, and the money paid subject to the incumbrances existing against it, and with knowledge that no one held any liens against the said money, and that if the said sale was valid the title to the said money vested in the trustee in bankruptcy, paid out, through its register, about $20,000 of said moneys to certain of the creditors of these bankrupts holding liens, mortgages, and incumbrances against the said property, in fraud of these bankrupts and the bankruptcy law; and of which said amount of $20,000 so paid as aforesaid some $17,000 was repaid to said Scandinavian-American Bank, a secured creditor to said amount; that the said secured creditors so receiving the said money received the same with knowledge that the said property, if sold at all, was sold subject to the liens, mortgages, and incumbrances existing against it, and that they, the said creditors, had no right or claim to the moneys received therefor, and with knowledge of the adjudication of these bankrupts as such, and that the said court had no right or jurisdiction to pay over the said money, or any part thereof, to the, or to any other than the trustee in bankruptcy. That the balance of said sum of $24,125 over and above the amount so paid to said secured creditors has been wrongfully paid out by said State court in various directions, and no part of the same has been paid into the estate of these bankrupts.

IX. Your petitioners further represent that at the time reference of these matters was made to the referee in bankruptcy, as aforesaid, the said referee was attorney for an officer of the bonding company which had bonded said receiver in the said State court, said Peter L. Larsson, and against which said receiver gross charges of fraud and mismanagement had been made in said court and further charges were about to be made, and the said referee, with knowledge of said charges and the truth thereof and with knowledge of said adjudication and of the reference of all matters thereto pertaining to him as referee, as aforesaid, became engaged as attorney for said bonding company in the said State court in an effort to free his said client from the said bond of said receiver, and to that end the said referee conspired and colluded with the said Scandinavian-American Bank to postpone and delay proceedings in these bankruptcy matters until after sale of the said property of these bankrupts had been made in the said State court, as aforesaid, and the money received therefor again distributed, as aforesaid, and the evidence of the fraud of said receiver concealed and removed, as far as possible, and until the said bonding company, his client, should be released from the said bond of said receiver; and, in furtherance of said conspiracy, the said referee wilfully failed and neglected to call the first meeting of creditors of these bankrupts to elect a trustee or to set in motion in any manner whatsoever the machinery of this court looking toward the administration by this court of the said estate, as by law and duty to these bankrupts he was required to do, until after the said alleged sale by said State court had been made and the property delivered to the said Mayhew, as aforesaid, and the evidence of the fraud of said receiver to that extent removed and covered up, as aforesaid, and after the said money had been distributed by said court and after the said bond of said receiver had been discharged by said State court. That said first meeting of creditors was not called by said referee until the 14th day of April, 1902, as more fully appears from the records and files of this court in this matter, reference to which is hereby made.

X. Your petitioners further represent that at the instance of your petitioners a subsequent reference of the matters to these bankruptcy proceedings pertaining was made to the Honorable Warren A. Worden, a referee of this court residing at Tacoma, without this said district, and the adjourned meeting of said first meeting of creditors for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee was held before the said the Honorable Warren A. Worden on the 28th day of May, 1902.

XI. That at said adjourned meeting of creditors held for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee the said Scandinavian-American Bank, still contriving and conspiring to retain possession of said property and to convert the same to its own use, and contriving and conspiring to prevent the administration of said estate by this court and to defraud these bankrupts and this court, procured to be proved some four or five assigned claims owned by it and the said bank aggregating in amount about twenty-five dollars, and with said claims elected as trustee one E. F. Fisher, a bookkeeper in the employ of a former creditor of these bankrupts; and in anticipation of the election of said trustee, said bank, acting as aforesaid, employed or procured to be employed for said trustee a firm of attorneys whose efforts, with those of said trustee, were to be devoted to stifling any and all proceedings in this court looking to the collection and adimnistration of said estate. That afterwards and in pursuance of said plan, on the 11th day of July, 1902, the said trustee, through said attorney , filed with said referee his report to the effect that these petitioners had no property or estate, and, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, procured said referee to accept and approve said report. That afterwards, and on the 5th day of December, 1902, the said trustee filed with said referee his final report, and on the 2nd day of January, 1903, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, obtained his discharge as such trustee, and the said referee, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, filed with this court his report declaring the said estate closed. All of which matters more fully appear from the records and files of this court, reference to which is hereby made.

XII. That since the last-mentioned date, the 2nd day of January, 1903, no trustee for the estate of the bankrupts has existed, and the creditors of your petitioners, with knowledge that there is property in the estate of these bankrupts which has not been administered, have failed and neglected since said date to recommend the appointment of a said trustee.

XIII. Your petitioners further represent that, aside from the said Scandinavian-American Bank, there are no creditors of these bankrupts now interested in the said estate, for the reason that before the alleged sale had been made by said State court the said Scandinavian-American Bank and the said bonding company on the bond of said receiver in said State court had arranged between themselves to take care of the said others of said creditors in manner satisfactory to said creditors, and the said creditors have long since been paid and their claims assigned for the benefit of said bank. That the terms of the said arrangement between said bank and said bonding company your petitioners are unable of their own knowledge to give.

XIV. Your petitioners further represent that they have other and further property and equities than those herein enumerated, which are not in the hands of said the Seattle Shipyards Company, and which was possessed by these bankrupts at the time of their adjudication as such, and which said property has never been collected and administered, and is being lost to these bankrupts and their estate.

XV. Your petitioners further represent that in the spring of 1901 and before the property of these bankrupts was taken possession of by the said State court, as aforesaid, M. E. Hanson, one of the members of said copartnership of Heckmann & Hanson, was afflicted with a very severe illness in the nature of a brain disorder, which left him very weak in body and mind and absolutely unable to attend to his business affairs, and that he still feels the effect of the illness and is unable physically and mentally to attend to such affairs. That he knows nothing of his own knowledge of affairs as they were administered in the said State court, and very little of matters as they have occurred in this court, and that at all times herein mentioned he has been and now is unable physically to concern himself with them.

XVI. That at all times herein mentioned C. A. Heckmann, the other member of the firm of Heckmann & Hanson, has had charge of the interests of the said firm so far as said firm could manage its own affairs. That he has endeavored by every means within his power to obtain for the firm a proper administration by this court of the estate of said partnership. That when finally on the 28th day of May, 1902, a trustee was elected by the said creditors and approved by this court, the said Heckmann, in the belief that the estate of the said firm would be administered by this court, determined upon a business trip to Alaska, and accordingly, on the following 8th day of June, 1902, went to Alaska. That at said time said Heckmann fully intended to return to Seattle, his said place of residence, in the following September or October. That in fact he did start from Alaska for Seattle October 6, 1902, by boat, the only means of transportation between the two points, and in the usual course of events would have reached Seattle about thirty days thereafter. That in fact the boat upon which he was making the voyage became disabled at sea, and was some eighty days overdue before reaching Seattle, and did not reach Seattle until the 28th day of January, 1903, and the said Heckmann was unable by any means to reach Seattle or communicate therewith before that date. That upon arrival at Seattle, in said district, said Heckmann first learned that the said trustee had not administered the partnership property, but had made a report to said referee in substance denying that these bankrupts had any estate, and that the said report, without notice to the bankrupts or their attorney, had been approved by said referee; and further learned that the said trustee on the 2nd day of January, 1903, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, had obtained his discharge; and further learned that the referee last named had, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, filed his report in this court declaring said estate closed.

XVII. Your petitioners further represent that unless this estate is reopened, a trustee provided, the property of the estate collected, and the estate administered, as in their petition for adjudication prayed, your petitioners and this court will be defrauded and your petitioners will be denied the benefits of the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy vouchsafed them by law.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that an order be made and entered herein as follows:

1. Reopening the said estate and referring said matter and all things pertaining thereto back to the said Honorable Warren A. Worden or to some other disinterested referee of this court, to take such further proceedings therein as are required by the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy.

2. Appointing a trustee of the estate of these bankrupts, your petitioners.

3. Granting such other relief as to the court may seem just and appropriate, if your petitioners have misconceived their remedy.

HECKMANN & HANSON,
Petitioners.
J. L. FINCH,
Attorney for Petitioners.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, County of King, ss:

C. A. Heckmann, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: That he is a member of the firm of Heckmann & Hanson, who subscribed the foregoing petition and makes this affidavit in behalf of said firm; that he has read the foregoing petition and knows the contents thereof; and that the same is true, as he verily believes.

C. A. HECKMANN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me by the said C. A. Heckmann this 16th day of March, 1903.

F. M. JEFFERY,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

EXHIBIT NO. 42.

In the United States District Court, District of Washington, Northern Division.
In re Heckman & Hanson, bankrupts. No. 2203.

To the honorable the District Court of the United States, District of Washington, Northern Division:

In pursuance, and by virtue, of an order of reference in the above-entitled cause, made by Honorable C. H. Hanford, judge, on April 11th, 1903, to the undersigned, as special referee, to investigate the matters alleged in said petition; and that said special referee should proceed with convenient speed to hear such evidence as might be submitted to him by affidavits or upon oral examination of witnesses and report to the court his findings with respect to the right of the bankrupts to have the cause reopened, and with respect to the conduct of such attorneys and officers of this court as appear to be accused by the allegations of said petition. And the undersigned, special referee, to whom such order of reference was directed, does respectfully certify, return, and report:

First. That on April 24th, 1903, and on subsequent adjourned days, J. E. Finch, attorney for said bankrupts petitioners, and Alfred Battle, in behalf of the respondents, appeared before me at my office in the city of Seattle, King County, Washington, and I, then and there, entered upon an investigation of the matters in said reference, and the following-named witnesses were on behalf of said petitioners bankrupt, and the said respondents, produced, cautioned, and duly sworn by me to testify to the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth referring to the matters in said reference; and the testimony of said witnesses was so taken by the office of Bowman, Bolster & Eaton, stenographers, satisfactory to all of the parties interested in said matter, and such testimony so taken was not translated from stenographic notes into long hand, and the same can not be by me returned to this court. That the names of said witnesses are as follows: Peter Larsen, Ernest Fisher, Charles S. Hills, Hiram Hennigar, A. J. Tennant, M. F. Mayhew, J. Fred Linderberg, J. E. Chilberg, A. H. Soelberg, C. A. Heckman, Frank M. Guion, ——— Brewster, J. L. Finch, M. S. Anderson, R. S. Jones, C. E. Reynolds, John P. Hoyt, John S. Jurey, J. B. Metcalfe, and R. A. Ballinger.

That the documentary evidence duly exhibited before me was received in evidence and in the form of exhibits numbered and lettered, is herewith returned as such, reference to which is here and now made. Upon closing proofs arguments were submitted by J. E. Finch, Esq., on behalf of said petitioners, and by Alfred Battle, Esq., on behalf of said respondents, and thereupon said matter was submitted to me for findings, as in said order of reference directed, and therefrom I find as follows:

Second. That said Heckman & Hanson were copartners engaged in the general business of shipbuilding and ship repairing, etc., at Ballard, King County, Washington, and on September 8th, 1899, went into the possession of property known as the Hennigar property under a lease.

Third. That in a cause pending in the Superior Court of the State of Washington for King County, in which William M. Curtiss was plaintiff and Heckman & Hanson, defendants, one Peter L. Larson was duly appointed receiver, the order of the court appointing said receiver appearing as exhibit in this matter; that said receiver entered upon the discharge of his duties and from time to time reported his proceedings, having taken possession of the properties of said Heckman & Hanson, and under and pursuant to an order of the Superior Court of the State of Washington, in and for King County, made upon a report filed by said Peter L. Larsen, receiver, sold and disposed of said property and reported the same to said superior court; and thereupon, upon an order of said superior court, sold and disposed of said property for the sum of twenty-four thousand one hundred and twenty-five ($24,125.00) dollars; and said sale was confirmed by said court and said receiver on or about the 7th day of March, 1902, did execute and deliver to M. F. Mayhew, the purchaser, a deed of the said real property and a bill of sale of the personal property then in the hands of the receiver as the property of said bankrupts, and the said property was by said receiver turned over and delivered to the said Mayhew.

That theretofore, to wit, on the 17th day of January, 1902, said Heckman & Hanson, petitioners, filed in this honorable court their petition in voluntary bankruptcy, asking the court to adjudge them bankrupts and granting them the benefit of the acts of Congress relating to bankruptcy, and on, to wit, the 18th day of January, 1902, by an order of said court, duly made and entered, all matters thereto pertaining were referred to the Honorable John P. Hoyt, a deputy of this court, residing at Seattle, Washington, in said district, to take such further proceedings therein as required by said bankruptcy acts. That at the time of filing said petition said petitioners prepared and filed with it in this court a schedule of all their property, real and personal, showing the amount, kind, location thereof, and money value in detail, together with a list of their creditors, showing their residences, amounts due each, consideration therefor, and the security, if any, held by them, in triplicate, as required by law and the rules of this court.

That said petitioners have fully complied with the law relating to bankruptcy and with the rules and orders of this court, and since their adjudication as bankrupts have been ready and willing to cooperate with this court, with their creditors, and with the trustees in the administration of said estate and in all matters pertaining thereto.

That before, and about the time of said sale by said Peter L. Larsen, receiver, to said Mayhew of said property as aforesaid, one J. W. Kelly, J. E. Chilberg, and E. L. Grundahl arranged a credit at the Scandinavian American Bank for the sum of thirty thousand ($30,000.00) dollars at the time A. H. Soelberg was one of the officers of said bank, who represented the bank, in company with Mr. Lane, cashier or assistant cashier of the bank. This arrangement was made in the latter part of November or the first part of December of that year. Under the arrangement, so as aforesaid, which was by a note for said sum of thirty thousand ($30,000.00) dollars, given by said named makers, they were authorized and empowered to check against said sum of thirty thousand ($30,000.00) dollars. Said note was dated January 9th, 1902, signed by J. E. Chilberg, J. W. Kelly, and E. L. Grundahl by A. H. Soelberg, his attorney in fact, and checks were from time to time so drawn by said M. F. Mayhew, who was so authorized and empowered, against said credit fund of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000.00).

That thereupon soon after the confirmation of said sale, said Mayhew and Mildred A. Mayhew, his wife, on or about the 14th day of March, 1902, by warranty deed, by them executed and acknowledged and by bill of sale by them so executed and acknowledged, transferred and conveyed the whole of said property to the Seattle Shipyards Company, a corporation then existent, which was duly organized on the 12th day of March, A. D. 1902, as such corporation, and said property, real and personal, was thereby turned over to said Seattle Shipyards Company, which said shipyards company thereupon entered into possession of said property.

In July, 1900, Heckman & Hanson bought a one-half interest in the real property from the owner, Charles Hennigar, paying therefor forty-five hundred ($4,500) dollars, and then and there agreed to buy the other half interest at forty-five hundred ($4,500) dollars, which other half interest was owned by the minor children of Hennigar, heirs of Hennigar's wife, which sale had to be perfected through the probate court. Judge R. A. Ballinger, of the firm of Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, had acted as attorney for Heckman & Hanson from the filing of their copartnership and Heckman conferred with Judge Ballinger touching the matter of said purchase and the raising of necessary funds to pay for the same. Judge Ballinger accompanied Heckman to the bank and Heckman made application to borrow five thousand ($5,000) dollars, which loan the bank consented to make and Heckman authorized Judge Ballinger to close the transaction. A note and mortgage were executed running to the bank, dated October 25th of that year and was made payable ninety (90) days after date. The note matured and Heckman received a notice of the maturity of the note and that he make arrangements to meet it. The business of Heckman & Hanson went forward until some time in February, 1901; a boat called the schooner Alice, owned by one William M. Calhoun, as trustee for one Captain Milnor, the original owner, and some of the boat's creditors, was brought to the shipyards for repairs; the Scandinavian-American Bank held a mortgage on the boat for something like twenty thousand ($20,000) dollars; negotiations for repairing the boat were carried forward by Calhoun, as trustee owner, and E. L. Grundahl for the bank; said negotiations ultimated in the employment of Heckman & Hanson under a contract to repair the boat. They were told by the parties to the negotiations to draw upon the Scandinavian-American Bank for their pay as the work progressed. Under these arrangements they placed upon the boat about seven thousand ($7,000.00) dollars' worth of repairs, and while so doing checked out of the bank something like six thousand eight hundred ($6,800) dollars more than their deposit. Judge Ballinger drew for the bank a paper purporting to assign to the bank said claim of Heckman & Hanson against the schooner Alice, giving the bank the right to enforce a lien against the boat. Mr. Heckman refused to sign the paper or to return it. The next day thereafter the bank notified Heckman & Hanson that the firm's overdraft at the close of business that day was six thousand nine hundred seventeen dollars and sixty-two cents ($6,917.62) and notified them to cover the same by noon of the following day. Judge Ballinger and Mr. Heckman had another interview, which resulted in Mr. Heckman concluding to employ Metcalfe & Jurey, as his attorneys, which he did, paying them $350.00 retainer to look after the firm's interest. Thereupon, to protect Heckman & Hanson's interest in the matter they libeled the schooner Alice, filing a libel June 15th, 1901. Previous to this time, Mr. Hanson, of the firm of Heckman & Hanson, received a serious injury by an accident and was sent to the hospital, where in a few days an operation was performed and an abscess removed from the brain, and as a result thereof, he became very weak and unable to attend to business.

June 22nd following the Scandinavian American Bank filed an intervening libel against the Alice for $589.88, Ballinger, Ronald & Battle appearing as the attorneys for them.

June 27th, Calhoun, Denny & Ewing filed an intervening libel against the Alice for $2,210.21, and in the meantime William M. Calhoun, trustee owner of the vessel and claimant in the suit, filed a cross libel against the firm for nearly $30,000, on July 9th. It appears that an answer to said cross libel was filed July 1st.

On July 1st one A. Thiele filed an intervening libel through James Caper, his attorney, claiming $80.00 to be due.

July 3rd one Henry Klamroth filed an intervening libel against the boat, Messrs. Gleason & Cole, his attorneys, claiming $1,465.00 and interest to be due.

On July 3rd the Scandinavian American Bank, through its attorneys, Messrs. Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, began suit in the Superior Court of the State of Washington for King County to foreclose the mortgage of $650.00 which existed on the Heckman & Hanson personal property when the firm rented the Hennigar ground and was past due. The bank had bought it up and were carrying it for that firm. The sum of $812.00 was included in the libel which Metcalfe & Jurey brought for the firm against the schooner Alice.

On July 5th Ballinger, Ronald & Battle brought a second suit for the bank to foreclose the $5,000.00 mortgage hereinbefore mentioned, and also brought a suit upon the overdraft, in which suit they filed a complaint and caused writs of garnishment to be issued and served. It does not appear that service was made upon either one of the firm of Heckman & Hanson.

On July 8th the North Star Gold Mining Company brought a suit on a claim by another firm of attorneys, which suit was afterwards abandoned.

This was the condition, in brief, of Heckman & Hanson's affairs when, on July 11th, William M. Curtiss began a suit in the Superior Court of King County against Heckman & Hanson to recover upon an account stated, in amount of $1,528.18, and in which suit Peter L. Larsen was appointed receiver with instructions to take possession of the properties and assets and manage the same and carry on the business as hereinbefore found. Three days after the appointment of Mr. Larsen by petition in the receivership case an application to have Mr. Larsen removed as receiver and another substituted was made. On July 22nd the court denied the petition to remove Mr. Larsen.

That at the time of the sale of the property of Heckman & Hanson, made under order of the State court to said Mayhew, there were encumbrances on said property that were due, being in the neighborhood of $20,000, and the Superior Court of the State of Washington for King County caused to be paid through the register of said court about $17,000.

At the time of the adjudication of Heckman & Hanson as bankrupts and reference of the matters therein to the referee, Honorable Judge Hoyt, he, said Hoyt, was an officer of the American Bonding & Trust Company and had acted, and was acting, as such in certain matters of litigation in which it had been engaged, and the only official connection he had with the said American Bonding & Trust Company was that of local vice president, his sole duty as such officer being to authenticate bonds attested by the assistant secretary of said corporation for the State of Washington and was charged with no responsibilities or duties whatever in connection with the transaction of its general or local business, except to countersign such bonds, his only connection with said corporation, as an attorney, being to look after matters in which litigation had been commenced or was expected, and which had been especially referred to him by the home office of said corporation, or its local agent, or under instructions from said home office, and that as such attorney he had no duty or responsibility whatever in connection with any of its business, except such as was thus especially referred to him, and that he did not pay any attention whatever to any part of the business of the corporation except that which had been so especially referred to him as above stated, and all the knowledge that he had of any interest which said American Bonding & Trust Company had in the firm of Heckman & Hanson or in its business grew out of the fact of its having executed, as a surety, with said Heckman & Hanson as principals, a bond to the United States of America in connection with a contract by said Heckman & Hanson for the making of certain repairs to the United States transport Seward; that said Hoyt did not know that said bonding company was in any way, directly or indirectly, interested adversely to said Heckman & Hanson and in so far as he knew, as the proofs show, the interests of said bonding company were in harmony with the interests of said Heckman & Hanson and that the company's interest would be best subserved by anything which would subserve the interests of Heckman & Hanson. In so far as the proofs show, said Hoyt never knew that the American Bonding & Trust Company was surety upon the bond of said Peter L. Larsen, the receiver mentioned, and he never knew of the same until reading the petition in this matter. As the proofs show, he, the said Hoyt, had no knowledge whatever of any charges of any fraudulent conduct on the part of said Larsen, receiver, and the only action which said Hoyt, referee, took in the Superior Court of King County, Washington, in the cause in said petition mentioned, was to suggest to the court as a friend of the court, at the time when the confirmation of the sale made by said receiver first came up for consideration, that the matter should be continued long enough to allow any application to be made to this court to stay further proceedings in the superior court, that it might determine whether or not the superior court, after the institution of the bankruptcy proceedings, had jurisdiction to proceed, and the superior court granted an adjournment for that purpose.

That said referee, Hoyt, received, on the 21st day of January, 1902, the usual order of reference in the bankruptcy proceeding referred to in said petition; that in said order of reference the bankrupts were ordered to appear before said referee on the 24th day of January, 1902; that neither of said bankrupts appeared by himself or attorney before said referee on the day named in said order and neither of said bankrupts nor anyone in their behalf appeared before said referee until the 14th of April, 1903; that on said 14th day of April C. A. Heckman, one of the firm of Heckman & Hanson, appeared with his attorney, J. L. Finch, who is the attorney in this matter, and made proof of the necessary jurisdictional facts, and thereupon said Hoyt, as referee, made and filed an order of the first meeting of creditors on April 25th, 1902, and on said day mailed notice of such meeting to each and all of the creditors of said bankrupts, as shown by the schedule, and made and filed certificate of such meeting, and on the same day gave a copy of the notice of such meeting to the Post-Intelligencer Publishing Company for publication. That on said 14th day of April, 1902, the usual deposit of $10.00, to cover the expenses of the referee's office, was not made, and the referee consented to waive such deposit, stating to said Finch, attorney, that he would look to him for reimbursement for the cash outlay incident to the expenses of his office in said matter, and never, at any time, as the proofs show, did either of said bankrupts or their attorney or anyone else or in any manner state that any other earlier or further action on the part of the referee was necessary, advisable, or desired than that which he had already taken, except that one Fred

Sturn, who had filed a claim, objected to the action of the undersigned as referee in adjourning the first meeting of creditors from the 25th of April until the 2nd day of May for the purpose of allowing certain creditors, who had not their claims reduced to form, to prove them so that they could be filed. That said Finch, attorney as aforesaid, who was present on said 25th day of April, in no manner objected to or found fault with the action of the referee in so adjourning said meeting and, as the proofs show, during all of the time and while said matter was pending before said Hoyt, as referee in bankruptcy, he never knew that said American Bonding & Trust Company had any interest, direct or indirect, adverse to said bankrupts, and that said company was interested in seeing the most possible made out of the assets of said firm; and that no intimation whatever was made by either of said bankrupts or their attorney as to any desire that they might have that the matter should be heard before some other referee until the 19th day of May, 1902, when said Finch, attorney for said bankrupts, suggested to said referee that his client had in some way unknown to him become possessed of the idea that it would be better to have the matter heard before some other referee. Whereupon he conferred with the honorable judge of this court, who suggested that the matter could be referred to W. A. Worden, the referee at Tacoma, and that if said Hoyt desired to report the case back he might do so and it would be referred to said Worden, and by consent of all the said first meeting was adjourned from said 19th day of May until the 28th day of May, so that no time need be lost in the further prosecution of the matter before said Worden; and said referee, Hoyt, thereupon made an order reporting the case back with a minute of his proceedings therein, and on the 22nd day of May, 1902, made his return therein and transmitted all papers to the clerk of said court. That thereafter said Hoyt has had no connection whatever with or taken or arranged any action in or any connection with, directly or indirectly, the said bankruptcy proceedings, and, as the proofs show, said Hoyt was informed that at one time the said bonding company acted with and in aid of the said bankrupts in certain attempts made to raise money upon the property of said bankrupts and the good will of the business to pay off all the debts of the firm, and that it at one time did seem probable that something favorable might result from such an attempt, in which effort final success was not achieved.

That a reference was accordingly made to the honorable W. A. Worden, referee at Tacoma, and the first meeting of creditors for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee was held before him on the 28th day of May, 1902; that at said adjourned meeting of creditors held for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee, one E. F. Fisher, a bookkeeper in the employment of a firm creditors of said bankrupts, was elected as trustee; that afterwards, on the 11th day of July, 1902, said trustee, Fisher, filed with said referee his report, as the proofs show, to the effect that said Heckman & Hanson, bankrupts, had no property or estate, which said report was accepted by said referee, and on the 5th day of December, 1902, said trustee filed with said referee his final report and on the 2nd day of January, 1903, obtained his discharge as such trustee; and said referee filed with this court his report declaring the said estate closed, as appears from the records and files of this court; that since January 2nd, 1903, no trustee for the estate of the bankrupts has existed.

That since the injury received by Mr. Hanson and his consequent inability to attend to business C. A. Heckman, the other member of said firm, has had charge of the interests of the said firm, so far as the said firm could manage its own affairs; that he endeavored to obtain for the firm administration by this court of the estate of said bankrupts; that on the 25th day of May, 1902, when a trustee was elected by the creditors and approved by the court, said Heckman determined upon a business trip to Alaska, and on the 8th day of June, 1902, went to Alaska; that about October 6th, 1902, he started from Alaska for Seattle by boat, the then only means of transportation between the two points, and in the usual course of events would have reached Seattle in about thirty (30) days thereafter, but the boat became disabled at sea and was some eighty (80) days overdue before reaching Seattle, arriving on the 28th day of January, 1902; that he was unable by any means to reach Seattle or communicate therewith before that date; that upon arrival in Seattle, in said district, he first learned that the said trustee had made a report to the referee in substance denying the bankrupts had any estate and that the said report had been approved by the referee and that the trustee, on the 2nd day of January, 1903, had obtained his discharge and had filed his report in court declaring said estate closed, since which time the proceedings in this matter in this court on behalf of Heckman & Hanson and by their attorney, J. L. Finch, appear of record, and reference to the same is here and now made.

Subsequent to the sale by receiver of said Heckman & Hanson's properties, reference was made to United States Commissioner A. C. Bowman to inquire into the adequacy or inadequacy of the price paid for said property at said receiver's sale and proofs were taken by said Commissioner Bowman, who thereupon and thereafter made his report to said court, which appears in said court as part of the files in this matter, reference to which is made.

As to the conduct of the respective attorneys and officers of the court who have appeared in the matters of said receivership in said suits brought and said proceedings in this court, from the proofs it appears, and I so find, that R. A. Ballinger was at the time of making the loan by the Scandinavian American Bank to Heckman & Hanson of the five thousand ($5,000) dollars, etc., a member of the directorate of said bank, and that the fact was well known to Heckman & Hanson, and he went with Mr. Heckman to the bank and interviewed others of the officers of the bank touching such loan. The application on the part of Mr. Heckman for the loan of five thousand ($5,000) dollars was granted for the period of ninety (90) days (and not for a period of five years). That Mr. Heckman being absent from the city on his trip to Alaska, Judge Ballinger, acting under power of attorney, executed the necessary note and mortgage running for the period of ninety (90) days, and the transaction was completed on that basis; that upon the dissatisfaction, as hereinbefore found, and the employment of Metcalfe & Jurey as substitutes for said Ballinger by said Heckman & Hanson, Heckman waited upon Metcalfe & Jurey and opened up the matters connected with said note and mortgage and the said overdraft, so called, of account, and stated his side of the case with regard to said mortgages and his claims, and said Metcalfe & Jurey advised him that the firm of Heckman & Hanson had no defense to the suits brought and that the best they could do would be to obtain for him as much time as possible to enable them to adjust their matters, and in that line of conduct of the matters involved they served demurrers and adopted dilatory tactics, thus obtaining all the time they possibly could obtain until a time arrived when they could accomplish nothing further in that direction, and they finally entered into an arrangement by stipulation with the bank and the attorneys representing the bank to the effect that the bank would give them time to arrange to procure the necessary funds with which to adjust their matters with the bank; that their conduct in the matter, as shown by the proofs, was to accomplish the purposes which they did accomplish, and upon the stipulation entered into decrees were taken in the cases.

Mr. Heckman, acting for the firm of Heckman & Hanson, employed C. E. Reynolds January 2nd, 1902, who appeared in this court in the petition to have Heckman & Hanson adjudicated bankrupts, etc., and they were so adjudicated, and a certain sum of money was advanced to him to use in matters of expense, etc., at one time $100.00 and at another time $150.00. Mr. Reynolds expended a portion of this money and the rest of it is in his hands, as appears from the proofs taken.

Mr. Heckman claimed that the assets of the firm were about $50,000.00 and that they owed debts, as stated in the petition in bankruptcy. Mr. Reynolds entered upon an effort to raise money with which to pay off these debts and interviewed Richard Saxe Jones, attorney for Peter Larsen, receiver, and Mr. Jones stated to him that if he could raise $100.00 more than the price bid for said property at the receiver's sale and the expenses, he would advise setting the sale aside. The efforts made to raise money were unavailing, and Mr. Reynolds called Mr. Heckman to his office and notified him that he could do nothing in the way of raising money for him. Mr. Hanson agreed to pay Mr. Reynolds $250.00. An effort was made, among other things in which Mr. Reynolds interested himself, to raise the sum of five hundred ($500) dollars for the benefit of Mr. Hanson of the firm, who was at that time an invalid, and certain steps were taken in the matter, which did not prove successful any further than the sum of $150.00 out of $500.00 was raised. The proofs show that Mr. Reynolds never represented the American Bonding & Trust Company.

Mr. Richard Saxe Jones was the attorney of Peter L. Larsen, the receiver, and acted for him in matters of his receivership, representing him in court at different times, presenting his reports and taking orders, etc. In all of the proceedings in the State court in said case of Curtiss vs. Heckman & Hanson, in which case said Larsen was appointed receiver, he acted for him. Said Larsen's actions are evidenced by his reports made to the court as well as the actions of his attorney, Mr. Jones.

The American Bonding & Trust Company were sureties on the receiver's bond in the State court in the sum of $20,000, and was also under a liability as surety for Heckman & Hanson on this Seward bond, and there were claims against the transport Seward in favor of laborers and material men amounting to some three or four thousand dollars, for which the bonding company was under a liability as such surety.

In and among the proofs and documentary evidence presented, certain books of the Scandinavian American Bank were produced and testimony given with regard to them. Attention is respectfully called to excerpts from testimony of Mr. Finch, a witness on behalf of the petitioners, in which in substance he states in reference to said books of the Scandinavian-American Bank, and what there was in them bearing upon the question of disbarment of General Metcalfe, Richard Saxe Jones, R. A. Ballinger, and C. E. Reynolds. In answer to the questions, in substance, What do you find in those books that would disbar either of said named gentlemen? he answered, in substance, not anything, or I don't think anything, or I don't think I found anything. Said excerpts are hereto attached and herewith returned.

And as findings with respect to the right of the bankrupts to have the cause reopened and with respect to the conduct of such attorneys and officers of this court as appear to be accused by the allegations of said petition, I find that such right on the part of the bankrupts to have said cause reopened is not established by the proofs, and does not exist.

And as the conduct of the officers and attorneys of this court who have been engaged in these several matters, who appear to be accused by the allegations of the petition, such seeming accusations are not well founded in fact, and are not sustained by the proofs.

The proofs in this matter are voluminous, remaining in the stenographic notes in the main. The documentary evidence can be readily produced with this, my report. The parol testimony can not, of course, be produced until translated from the reporter's notes, the desirability of which is clearly apparent.

All of which is respectfully certified to this court.

Dated January 23rd, 1903.

EBEN SMITH,
U. S. Master, etc., as Special Referee.

NAMES OF WITNESSES AND DATES OF HEARING.

1903.
Apr.	24. Mr. Larson.
May	6. Earnest Fisher.
May	8. P. N. Larson.
May	8. Charles S. Hills.
May	15. Charles S. Hills.
May	15. Hiram Hennigar.
May	15. A. J. Tennant.
June	1. M. F. Mayhew.
June	2. M. F. Mayhew.
June	3. J. Fred Linderberg.
June	3. M. F. Mayhew.
June	3. J. E. Chilberg.
June	22. A. H. Soelberg.
July	30. A. H. Soelberg.
Aug.	3. A. H. Soelberg.
Aug.	7. A. H. Soelberg.
Aug.	7. P. L. Larson.

1903.
Aug.	8. Capt. Peter L. Larson.
Aug.	10. C. A. Heckman.
Aug.	17. Frank M. Guion.
Aug.	17. ——— Brewster.
Aug.	18. J. L. Finch.
Aug.	18. C. A. Heckman.
Aug.	18. J. L. Finch.
Aug.	24. C. S. Hills.
Aug.	24. M. G. Anderson.
Aug.	24. C. A. Heckman.
Aug.	24. R. S. Jones.
Aug.	25. C. E. Reynolds.
Aug.	25. John P. Hoyt.
Aug.	28. John S. Jurey.
Aug.	28. J. B. Metcalfe.
Aug.	28. C. E. Reynolds.
Aug.	28. R. A. Ballinger.

EBEN SMITH,
As U. S. Master in Chy., Special Referee.

In the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division.

In the matter of Heckman and Hansen, bankrupts. No. ——.

EXCERPTS FROM TESTIMONY OF J. L. FINCH, A WITNESS IN BEHALF OF PETITIONER, TAKEN BEFORE HON. EBEN SMITH, MASTER IN CHANCERY.

Returned by me with my report.

EBEN SMITH, as Special Referee.

J. D. FINCH on the stand.

Cross-examination:

Q. (Mr. JONES.) Now, you stated in Judge Hanford's court, in open court, that if you could have access to the books of the Scandinavian-American Bank that you would produce evidence from them that would disbar General Metcalfe and others. Judge Hanford said to you: "You shall have that order; but if from those books you do not produce evidence, I will disbar you." What evidence did you produce from the books of the Scandinavian-American Bank to disbar General Metcalfe?—A. That will have to be argued at length, Mr. Jones——

Q. (Interrupting.) I don't care anything about any argument; I want an answer to the question.—A. When I get the transcript of the testimony and the matter goes back to Judge Hanford, where, no doubt, we are going, all of us.

Q. I do not care anything about an argument. I want you to answer the question. (Question read.)

A. Well, if you please, Mr. Jones, that was not the language of Judge Hanford.

Q. Well, you know what the language was—practically to that effect. I do not pretend to quote exactly. But answer the question.—A. Well, there is not any foundation for the question; it assumes things that are not true.

Q. Well, you can state what was said in Judge Hanford's court your own way and then answer the question.—A. Well, I don't know what you mean now.

Q. You refuse to answer the question, Mr. Finch?—A. I have no question to answer.

Mr. JONES. I ask the commissioner to require the question to be answered.

The MASTER. Mr. Finch, the general subject matter about which you are interrogated at this particular point is touching a little colloquy between Judge Hanford on the one part and yourself on the other. Judge Hanford stating, when you applied for those books, and that if you had those books you could produce evidence, etc., and you replied to him—he asked you if you could prove that, and your reply to him, and then Judge Hanford said to you: "Very well, you may have the books or the order, and if you don't prove it I will disbar you." Now, then, you have got the general matter in your mind?

A. Yes, sir.

The MASTER. Now, then, Mr. Jones wants you to answer his inquiry as to what passed between you and Judge Hanford at that time.

Mr. JONES. No. I want him to state what there was in the books of the Scandinavian-American Bank upon which he would disbar; but he can make his statement.

The MASTER. You said first make the statement and then you may answer the question.

A. Why, I find from the books of the Scandinavian-American Bank that they furnished money to Mr. Mayhew to buy the property of Heckman & Hanson, and that Mr. Mayhew bought the property for them. They claimed, in court, that that was not true; and I intended to show from the books of the bank that that was true, and I think that it has been shown.

Q. Well, answer my question. What in that transaction do you find that would disbar General Metcalfe?—A. None.

Q. You stated at that time that if you could have the books of the Scandinavian-American Bank that from them you would obtain evidence by which you would disbar Richard Saxe Jones. Now, just state——A. (Interrupting.) I did not state any such thing.

Q, Well, you know what you stated. Taking your statement as you have it in mind of what you did state, what did you find in the books of the Scandinavian-American Bank that would in any way disbar Richard Saxe Jones?—A. I don't think anything, Mr. Jones.

Q. You stated, as I remember, practically to the effect that if you could have access to these books and papers that you would obtain evidence from them which would disbar R. A. Ballinger. Just tell the commissioner what you find in those books or papers of the Scandinavian-American Bank that would disbar R. A. Ballinger.—A. I did not make that statement. But answering the last part of the question, I state that I do not think I found anything.

Q. You stated, as I remember, practically to this effect, if you could have access to these books and papers, you would from them produce evidence to disbar C. A. Reynolds. Just state in your own way anything you found in connection with those books and papers of the Scandinavian-American Bank that would in any way disbar C. A. Reynolds.—A. I don't think anything.

(Filing on back:) No. 2203. In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington. In re Heckman & Hanson, bankrupts. Report of special referee, Eben Smith on proof, etc.

EXHIBIT No. 43.

United States District Court, District of Washington, Northern Division.

In the matter of C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, individually and as copartners doing business as Heckmann & Hanson, bankrupts. No. 2203. Filed July 11 1904.

MEMORANDUM DECISION ON PETITION TO REOPEN THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE BANKRUPT ESTATE, AND TO SEIZE PROPERTY IN THE POSSESSION OF A TRANSFEREE OF THE PURCHASER AT A JUDICIAL SALE.

This is a case of voluntary bankruptcy of a copartnership. After the termination of administration of the bankrupts' estate and discharge of the trustee, the present proceeding was initiated by a petition of the bankrupts to reopen the case for the purpose of a new administration of the estate, and to have a trustee chosen and authorized to seize and take into custody the property which formerly belonged to the bankrupts, and which by judicial proceedings in another court were transferred to a purchaser for a consideration which their creditors absorbed.

The copartnership was formed in the year 1898, for the purpose of carrying on the business of building and repairing ships. The total capital of the firm at the time of its formation consisted of a kit of tools worth about five hundred dollars, which each of the partners had, and additional tools and implements worth four or five hundred dollars, which they jointly owned, and sufficient cash to pay one month's rent of the leased premises upon which business was commenced, and the mechanical skill and business ability of the two partners. The phenomenal expansion of commerce tributary to Puget Sound, which commenced in the year 1897, made the time propitious for success and the business of the firm grew too rapidly for the capacity of the partners to manage successfully, as the outcome proved. In the summer of 1901, while other litigation was pending, a creditor commenced an action against the firm in the Superior Court of the State of Washington for King County, upon an account stated, for a balance due of something less than sixteen hundred dollars, and in said action, with the connivance and active support of Mr. Heckman, the superior court appointed a receiver to take the firm's assets into custody and assume control of the business, and the receiver so appointed did take charge of the entire plant, books, papers, accounts, and business of the firm. At its inception that proceeding was distinctly hostile to the Scandinavian-American Bank, which was the largest creditor of the firm, and which was then maintaining other suits against the firm for the recovery of money loaned. While the assets and business of the firm were in the custody and control of the receiver, and about to be sold by the receiver pursuant to an order of the superior court, the copartners filed their voluntary petition in this court to be adjudged bankrupts, and obtained from this court an ex parte restraining order against the receiver to prevent the proposed sale. Opposition to the restraining order was made, and upon the hearing the court appointed Mr. A. C. Bowman, a commissioner of this court, to act as a special referee to hear evidence and report to the court whether the amount of a bid for the property and business which the receiver desired to accept was an adequate price or as much as might be obtained at a fair sale, and after hearing evidence the special referee reported to the court, in substance, that there was no ground for supposing that a better bid or a larger price could be obtained, and thereupon the restraining order was dissolved, and the receiver consummated the sale. Afterwards, an application was made to this court, in behalf of the bankrupts, for an order requiring the receiver to pay into the registry of this court or to a trustee of the bankrupt estate, the gross amount of the proceeds of said sale, which application was opposed by all of the creditors of the firm, and after a hearing of the parties interested was by the court denied, and all of the proceeds of the sale, which represented substantially all of the assets of the firm, was disposed of pursuant to orders of the superior court.

At the inception of the bankruptcy proceedings the case was referred generally to Hon. John P. Hoyt, referee in bankruptcy, and afterwards upon his informal request the order was revoked, and the case was referred to Hon. Warren A. Worden, the regular referee in bankruptcy, residing at Tacoma, who supervised the case until the trustee of the bankrupt estate made his final report to this court, showing that he had obtained custody of only a small amount of assets, not handled by the receiver of the superior court, which he disposed of in due course of administration, and thereupon the trustee was discharged and the administration of the estate closed.

The petition to reopen the case sets forth as grounds for such extraordinary proceeding that owing to the fact that at the time of preparing and filing the schedules which accompanied the original petition filed in this court by the copartners to be adjudged bankrupts, their property, books of account, records, and papers were in the custody of the receiver, they had no reliable data from which to prepare the schedules, and the same are inaccurate, incomplete, and defective in this that the schedule of property "fails to include all the accounts owing to the bankrupts and fails to include a large amount of the personal property belonging to the estate of the bankrupts; and the schedule of liabilities is inaccurate and defective in that the liabilities therein scheduled are too high by at least the sum of $6,872.12; that in fact the total value of all the property belonging to the bankrupts' estate was and is far in excess of the total amount of all debts owing by the bankrupts, and if properly administered the estate will pay the debts of the bankrupts in full and leave a considerable surplus for the petitioners."

These vague and uncertain allegations certainly afford no ground for action by the court. They are not connected with any other statements of facts showing that the right of the petitioners to be discharged from their liabilities has been attacked or will be affected by reason of imperfections in the schedules filed, nor is there in the petition any indication of the value of assets not disposed of by the receiver of the superior court or the trustee in bankruptcy, nor is it shown that such additional assets are within the jurisdiction of the court, or that any further action in the bankruptcy case is necessary to enable the petitioners to recover possession or enjoy the use thereof. For these reasons the petition would have been denied upon the first reading of it if the matters above recited were the only grounds specified therein.

The petition was treated seriously by the court on account of other allegations contained therein which are here quoted:

"V. Your petitioners further represent that one of the creditors of your petitioners, the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, Washington, well knowing the value of said property and well knowing the value to be far in excess of the debts owing by said bankrupts, contriving to obtain possession of said property and to convert the same to its own use without making just compensation therefor, in fraud of these bankrupts and the bankruptcy law and this court, and conspiring and colluding with the said receiver of said State court, said Peter L. Larson, to conceal certain frauds of the said Larson committed in connection with said receivership, and to part of which frauds the said bank was a party, procured the said Larson to obtain from said superior court of the State of Washington for King County an order to sell and dispose of said property at a grossly inadequate price, to wit, for the sum of $24,125.00; and the said court, after the adjudication of these petitioners as bankrupts, and with knowledge of said adjudication, and after proper motion made to stay proceedings in said State court, and over and against the protests of these bankrupts, and without any jurisdiction to sell or dispose of said property, made an order pretending and assuming to sell and dispose of the same to one M. F. Mayhew, and directing its said receiver to execute to the said Mayhew a deed of the real estate and a bill of sale of the personal estate of said bankrupts then in the possession of said court; and the said receiver as directed, did, on the 7th day of March, 1902, execute and deliver to the said Mayhew a deed of the said real property and a bill of sale of the said personal property then in the hands of the said receiver belonging to the estate of these bankrupts; and the said receiver, on the same day, turned over and delivered to the said Mayhew the possession of the said real and personal property, being the same property set forth in the schedule prepared and filed by these bankrupts with their petition heretofore filed, as aforesaid, or so much thereof as had not previously been fraudulently converted and disposed of by said receiver, and, in addition, being the rest and residue of the property belonging to the estate of these bankrupts and not scheduled, owing to the inability of these bankrupts to schedule the same, as hereinbefore related, and which transfer of personal property included as well the books of account, stock books, records, and papers belonging to the estate of these bankrupts. And thereupon the said Mayhew, on behalf of the said bank, paid into the said court the sum of $24,125.00. And afterwards, and on the 7th day of March, 1902, the said court, with knowledge of the adjudication of these petitioners as bankrupts, and after proper motion made to stay proceedings in said cause, and over and against the objections of these petitioners, entered an order confirming its acts and doings and the acts and doings of its said receiver in the premises.

VI. That the money tendered in payment for the said property to give color to the said transaction and induce the said State court to make said order of sale, and deposited in the said State court in payment of the said property, as aforesaid, unknown to said State court, was furnished to the said Mayhew by the said Scandinavian-American Bank, and the property so delivered to and received by the said Mayhew was received by him in trust for the said bank. And the money so furnished to him and by him paid into court was furnished and paid with full knowledge on the part of the said bank and the said Mayhew, and any and all others connected with said transaction of the adjudication of these bankrupts as such, and with full knowledge that the said State court had no jurisdiction over the said property and no title to the same, and had no right or jurisdiction to sell or dispose of the same.

VII. Your petitioners further represent that upon receiving the possession of the said property, the said Mayhew, at the instance of the said bank, immediately transferred the same, or a large part thereof, to a corporation known as The Seattle Shipyards Company, which corporation was formed at the instance of the said bank, and your petitioners believe and therefore allege that it was so formed for the purpose of receiving the said property and losing the identity thereof and of hiding and concealing the present pretended owners thereof. That the said The Seattle Shipyards Company is now in possession of the said property.

VIII. Your petitioners further represent that the said alleged sale of the property of these bankrupts was made by said State court to the said M. F. Mayhew subject to the incumbrances due against the said property, said incumbrances being in the neighborhood of $20,000.00. That after the alleged sale of the said property, as aforesaid, and the receipt of the said sum of $24,125.00, as aforesaid, the said Superior Court of the State of Washington for King County, with knowledge of the adjudication of these bankrupts as such, and after due proceedings had been taken by them to stay proceedings in said court, and against the protests of these petitioners, and with knowledge that the said property had been sold, if sold at all, and the money paid subject to the incumbrances existing against it, and with knowledge that no one held any liens against the said money, and that if the said sale was valid the title to the said money vested in the trustee in bankruptcy, paid out, through its register, about $20,000.00 of said moneys to certain of the creditors of these bankrupts holding liens, mortgages, and incumbrances against the said property, in fraud of these bankrupts and the bankruptcy law; and of which said amount of $20,000.00 so paid, as aforesaid, some $17,000.00 was repaid to said Scandinavian-American Bank, a secured creditor to said amount; that the said secured creditors so receiving the said money received the same with knowledge that the said property, if sold at all, was sold subject to the liens, mortgages, and incumbrances existing against it, and that they, the said creditors, had no right or claim to the moneys received therefor, and with knowledge of the adjudication of these bankrupts as such, and that the said court had no right or jurisdiction to pay over the said money or any part thereof to the or to any other than the trustee in bankruptcy. That the balance of said sum $24,125.00 over and above the amount so paid to said secured creditors has been wrongfully paid out by said State court in various directions and no part of the same has been paid into the estate of these bankrupts.

IX. Your petitioners further represent that at the time reference of these matters was made to the referee in bankruptcy, as aforesaid, the said referee was attorney for and an officer of the bonding company which had bonded said receiver in the said State court, said Peter L. Larson, and against which said receiver gross charges of fraud and mismanagement had been made in said court, and further charges were about to be made, and the said referee, with knowledge of said charges and the truth thereof, and with knowledge of said adjudication and of the reference of all matters thereto pertaining to him as referee, as aforesaid, became engaged as attorney for said bonding company in the said State court in an effort to free his said client from the said bond of said receiver, and to that end the said referee conspired and colluded with the said Scandinavian-American Bank to postuone and delay proceedings in these bankruptcy matters until after sale of the said property of these bankrupts had been made in the said State court, as aforesaid, and the money received therefor again distributed, as aforesaid, and the evidence of the fraud of said receiver concealed and removed as far as possible, and until the said bonding company, his client, should be released from the said bond of said receiver; and, in furtherance of said conspiracy the said referee wilfully failed and neglected to call the first meeting of creditors of these bankrupts to elect a trustee or to set in motion in any manner whatsoever the machinery of this court looking toward the administration by this court of the said estate, as by law and duty to these bankrupts he was required to do, until after the said alleged sale by said State court had been made and the property delivered to the said Mayhew, as foresaid, and the evidence of the fraud of said receiver to that extent removed and covered up, as aforesaid, and after the said money had been distributed by said court and after the said bond of said receiver had been discharged by said State court. That said first meeting of creditors was not called by said referee until the 14th day of April, 1902, as more fully appears from the records and files of this court in this matter, reference to which is hereby made.

X. Your petitioners further represent that at the instance of your petitioners, a subsequent reference of the matters to these bankruptcy proceedings pertaining was made to the Honorable Warren A. Worden, a referee of this court residing at Tacoma, without this said district, and the adjourned meeting of said first meeting of creditors for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee was held before the said the Honorable Warren A. Worden on the 28th day of May, 1902.

XI. That at said adjourned meeting of creditors held for the purpose of proving claims and electing a trustee, the said Scandinavian-American Bank, still contriving and conspiring to retain possession of said property and to convert the same to its own use, and contriving and conspiring to prevent the administration of said estate by this court and to defraud these bankrupts and this court, procured to be proved some four or five assigned claims owned by it, the said bank, aggregating in amount about twenty-five dollars, and with said claims elected as trustee one E. F. Fisher, a bookkeeper in the employ of a former creditor of these bankrupts, and in anticipation of the election of said trustee, said bank, acting as aforesaid, employed or procured to be employed, for said trustee a firm of attorneys whose efforts with those of said trustee were to be devoted to stifling any and all proceedings in this court looking to the collection and administration of said estate. That afterwards, and in pursuance of said plan, on the 11th day of July, 1902, the said trustee, through said attorneys, filed with said referee his report to the effect that there petitioners had no property or estate, and, without notice to these bankrupts, or their attorney, procured said referee to accept and approve said report. That afterwards, and on the 5th day of December, 1902, the said trustee filed with said referee his final report, and on the 2nd day of January, 1903, without notice to these bankrupts, or their attorney, obtained his discharge as such trustee, and the said referee, without notice to these bankrupts or their attorney, filed with this court his report declaring the said estate closed. All of which matters more fully appear from the records and files of this court, reference to which is hereby made."

The charges and insinuations contained in the foregoing quoted paragraphs of the petition in connection with the records therein referred to, constitute an assault upon the business and professional character and integrity of the officers of the Scandinavian-American Bank, Richard A. Ballinger, J. T. Ronald, Alfred Battle; the attorneys for said bank, J. B. Metcalfe, John S. Jurey, and C. A. Reynolds, who at different stages of the proceedings were attorneys for the petitioners; John P. Hoyt, referee in bankruptcy; Warren A. Worden, referee in bankruptcy; A. C. Bowman, special referee; Peter L. Larson, receiver of the superior court; Richard Saxe Jones, attorney for said receiver; E. F. Fisher, trustee in bankruptcy; and the law firm of Gray & Tait, attorneys for said trustee, and the local representatives of the American Bonding & Trust Company, and M. F. Mayhew; and in addition to attacking the jurisdiction of the superior court, the petition accuses it of receiving into its custody the proceeds of property sold under its order subject to existing liens and incumbrances, and then knowingly disbursing the fund to mortgagees and secured creditors who had no right to receive any part of said money. I say that all of the persons and officials referred to are traduced by the direct charges or covert insinuations of the petition, because, if the transactions were fraudulent, all the actors therein were necessarily guilty participants in the sense of being either culpable parties to the conspiracies alleged or else grossly negligent or stupid. In an oral argument upon the final hearing of this matter, the attorney for the petitioners made a statement to the effect that the attorneys opposing the petition would not have become personally involved in the matter, if they had not obtruded into the case without having been employed by or authorized to represent any party having an interest to be defended, and upon that statement being rebuked by the court, the attorney murmured of injustice. And now, to show that the court did not misapprehend the nature of the petition, nor the theory upon which the previous proceedings were intended to be assailed, I will here quote a paragraph from the supplemental argument in writing which the attorney has been permitted to file:

"Reluctant as your honor may be to accept the facts, and embarrassing as it may be to counsel to state them, the truth remains that the receivership proceedings had been appropriated bodily by a set of lawyers in the employ of the Scandinavian-American Bank, bent upon the confiscation of the property. There is no other way of stating the situation accurately. The original character of the proceedings had been changed. The parties to the suit had been obliterated. There was no longer any plaintiff; there was no longer any defendants, except in names. The plaintiff had abandoned the suit, having arranged for the payment of his claim by the bonding company on the bond of the receiver (R., p. 117, lines 17 to 30); the defendants had been sold out by their counsel to the bank and to the bonding company. Moreover, the receiver himself and his attorney had abandoned the service of the court which appointed them and were secretly drawing their pay from the bank. Nor was there even a creditor left to raise a voice in opposition to any measure proposed by the bank, for the bank had bought up practically all the creditors; those it had not bought up had an arrangement made with the bonding company whereby their claims were to be paid in full (R., p. 200, lines 5 to 13). Thus, the bank, though in nowise a party to the record, was in absolute control of the proceedings. It proposed then to appropriate to itself the property in the control of the court just as an ordinary robber in a dark alley might appropriate to himself the property on the person of his victim. The course pursued has been pointed out, and we shall not reiterate it."

In view of the assault upon character which the petitioner makes, this court deemed it unwise to shun the labor of an investigation by denying the petition on technical grounds. Therefore the petition was by an order of the court referred to the Honorable Eben Smith, an attorney of this court, and master in chancery of the United States circuit court for this district, with authority to hear evidence, make a full investigation, and report to the court whether there are any grounds for vacating the previous proceedings and reopening the bankruptcy case, and whether any of the officers of this court were guilty of misconduct in the matters specified. Judge Smith took charge of the investigation under the above-mentioned order, and patiently continued through several months, hearing all the evidence offered, and in the proceedings the attorney representing the petitioners took a wide range, inquiring into all the details of the various transactions involved in the litigation in the several cases in which the firm of Heckmann & Hanson were parties, and in his examination of Mr. Fisher, trustee, Captain Larson, the receiver, and the officers of the Scandinavian-American Bank, the attorney assumed the rôle of an inquisitor and plied them with direct and searching questions affecting the matters in issue, and also harassed and vexed everybody concerned by pursuing irrelevant inquiries to an unreasonable extent. Only the testimony of persons who were called to testify at the instance of the petitioners has been transcribed and filed in court, but that part makes a volume of 886 typewritten pages. As a mere sample, showing the trivial character of interrogatories propounded and the method persistently observed in this attempt to make something out of nothing, I will here quote a few pages from the examination of Mr. Fisher, the trustee:

"Q. Now, after your appointment as trustee and before you were finally discharged as a trustee, did you ever talk over the bankruptcy matters, the matters relating to the bankrupts estate of Heckmann & Hanson, with Mr. Ballinger, of the firm of Ballinger, Ronald & Battle?—A. Not to my knowledge. I don't know the gentlemen.

"Q. Or with Mr. M. F. Mayhew?—A. I don't think so; no, sir.

"Q. With R. S. Jones?—A. Not to my knowledge.

"Q. With Peter L. Larson?—A. No, sir.

"Q. With William L.?—A. No, sir.

"Q. With James Campbell?—A. No, sir.

"Q. Any body representing the Union Hardware Company?—A. No, sir.

"Q. With E. L. Grondell?—A. No, sir.

"Q. Any body representing the Scandinavian-American Bank?—A. No, sir.

"Q. With D. C. Conover?—A. No, sir.

"Q. With John Larabee?—A. No, sir.

"Q. With Charles W. Russell?—A. No, sir.

"Q. With F. E. Brightman?—A. No, sir.

"Q. I will ask you if you know D. C. Conover?—A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

"Q. Do you know John Larabee?—A. No, sir.

"Q. Do you know Charles W. Russell?—A. I do not place him.

"Q. Do you know F. E. Brightman?—A. No, sir.

"Q. You are sure none of those last four ever talked with you about——A. I don't know whether they did or not; I don't know them. If they did, they did so as any other strangers to me. I am not acquainted with any of the gentlemen that I can remember—that is, the four that you spoke of.

"Q. When was the subpœna served upon you to appear at this time?—A. What time?

"Q. Well, to appear on the 8th.—A. Here?

"Q. Yes.—A. Why, it was served on me—I think it was day before yesterday. I guess I have got it dated here (producing paper). I think I dated it; no, I did not, either. This is dated the 2nd of May, but I think it was served on Saturday, I guess.

"Q. Have you talked with Mr. Gray since you received that?—A. Yes, sir.

"Q. When?—A. Why, I don't remember; yesterday.

"Q. To whom did he send you?—A. Didn't send me anyone.

"Q. Have you talked with anybody else about it?—A. Why, yes; with the firm I am employed with.

"Q. Who is that?—A. Spicklemire.

"Q. Have you talked with anybody else about it?—A. I may have talked with two or three, I don't know just who they are. I think I have. I spoke to some of the boys, friends of mine at Ballard, because it kind of upset me about going away. I spoke to Judge Smith.

"Q. With whom?—A. Judge Smith.

"Q. Who else have you talked with about it?—A. I don't recollect who.

"Q. You can't recall anybody?—A. I have just told you several.

"Q. Well, you say it preyed upon your mind some?—A. It did not prey upon my mind; it just simply——

"Mr. BATTLE. I object to counsel—have you ever used the word "prey"?

"The MASTER IN CHANCERY. He did not use the word.

"Mr. BATTLE. I object to counsel's method of unfairness in the examination of this witness by attempting to put the witness in the light of stating this matter preyed upon his mind when the witness said nothing to that effect, and nothing to which such a construction could be given.

"The MASTER IN CHANCERY. The answer of the witness was simply that it upset him as to his calculations about leaving.

"Q. I may have used the wrong word; I would not intentionally mislead you; perhaps weighed would be the better word.—A. What is the question?

"Q. This matter you said weighed upon your mind some?—A. It did not. I don't know as it weighed upon my mind; it was a matter that comes the same as everything else in business, comes up in a man's life every day, and he will probably speak of it.

"Q. Now, have you talked with any other attorneys about it besides Mr. Gray?—A. I don't remember.

"Q. You can't recall?—A. No, sir.

"Q. Have you ever talked with any other attorneys to-day about it?—A. No, sir.

"Q. Besides Mr. Gray?—A. Not to my knowledge, except you.

"Q. Did you yesterday?—A. Not to my knowledge.

"Q. You would remember it if you had, would you not?—A. Well, if it happened to be a passing event I don't know as I would or not. I have lots of things that come across my mind in a day the same as anyone else.

"Q. Have you seen the petition which I have filed in this matter asking to reopen the estate?—A. I have not.

"Q. Or any part of it?—A. Not to my knowledge.

"Q. Has anybody called your attention to it?—A. Probably nothing more than this summons. That is all that I know about it.

"Q. They have not referred to this petition in any way?—A. No one that I ever heard of at all. I don't think they did, I don't remember it.

"Q. Do you want to tell the court that you have not talked with Judge Battle about it, Mr. Fisher?—A. Why, I have not talked with the judge—yes, I have, about it, but not directly; I don't know exactly; it was more on the subpœna than anything else.

"Q. You went down to Judge Battle's office and talked with him about it, now, did you not?—A. Yes, I went to his office and asked him what he could do toward having it set for another day.

"Q. When was that?—A. That was yesterday.

"Q. That was yesterday afternoon?—A. Yes.

"Q. And you just recall it, I suppose?—A. Just recall it, yes.

"Q. Now, he called your attention to this petition, did he not?—A. I don't remember whether he did or not.

"Q. Did he state anything about what I have stated to this court that the Scandinavian-American Bank procured to be approved some four or five assigned claims and that the claimants elected as trustee one E. F. Fisher, a bookkeeper in the employ of a firm a creditor of these bankrupts, and in anticipation of the election of said trustee, the bank, acting as aforesaid, employed or procured to be employed for said attorney a firm of trustees whose efforts, with those of said trustee, were to be devoted to stifling any and all proceedings in this court looking to the collection and administration of said estate?—A. Nothing was said about it at all; never heard a word that there was——

"Q. What did you say to Judge Battle?—A. I told him that I had a subpœna to be here on the 8th and I wanted to know what I could do about getting away. I went to Judge Gray on the same line.

"Q. How did you come to go to Judge Battle?—A. Why, I think Judge Gray said that he might be able to—I don't know just how I did come to go there. I think he told me to see Judge Battle, see what he could do. I think that was it.

"Q. You think Mr. Gray suggested that to you, do you?—A. Yes. And I did not get any—let me see now, I don't know whether that was yesterday or day before—Saturday, I guess it was—and I could not get any satisfaction and I telephoned up here to Judge Smith and he told me about it.

"Q. How many times did you see Judge Battle about it?—A. Once.

"Q. How long were you there?—A. About three minutes, I guess; maybe less than that.

"Q. Were you ever employed by the Scandinavian-American Bank?—A. No, sir.

"Q. Are you any relation to the Fisher who is or was?—A. No, sir; I don't know him. Didn't know there was any other man of my name there.

"Q. Have you talked with Mr. Mayhew since you have been subpœnaed?—A. No, sir; have not seen Mr. Mayhew or spoke to him for a year, I guess, to my knowledge—more than that, I guess."

During the progress of the investigation an application was made to the court for a peremptory order requiring the officers of the Scandinavian-American Bank to produce the books of the bank before Judge Smith for examination and to be used as evidence. The application was opposed on the ground that it would interfere seriously with the business of the bank to be dispossessed of its books containing entries of transactions with its customers, and in that connection Mr. Alfred Battle, one of the attorneys for the bank, made a positive statement to the effect that the books, if produced, would not furnish any evidence material in the case additional to or different from the testimony given or which would be given by the officers of the bank. Thereupon the attorney for the petitioner persisted in urging his application for an order requiring the production of the books, and the court interrogated him as to whether he would assume the responsibility of saying to the court that the books do contain evidence tending to prove a right to reopen the case on the ground of misconduct on the part of any attorney or officer of the court, to which the attorney made the audacious response that if permitted to examine the books he would undertake to bring before the court evidence which would make it necessary to disbar Richard A. Ballinger, J. B. Metcalfe, Richard Saxe Jones, and C. A. Reynolds, and upon that statement being made in open court the application was granted, and at the same time the court warned the attorney that if he made use of the order and then failed to make his declaration good the court would disbar him. Reckless of consequences to himself, as well as the rights of others, the attorney persisted in requiring production of the books and has had all the advantage which he could make of their contents.

As the result of his investigation Judge Smith has filed a report in writing, the conclusion of which is as follows:

"And as findings with respect to the right of the bankrupts to have the cause reopened and with respect to the conduct of such attorneys and officers of this court, as appear to be accused by the allegations of said petition, I find that such right on the part of the bankrupts to have said cause reopened is not established by the proofs and does not exist.

"And as to the conduct of the officers and attorneys of this court who have been engaged in these several matters, who appear to be accused by the allegations of the petition, such seeming accusations are not well founded in fact and are not sustained by the proofs.

After Judge Smith's report had been filed and before the court could find an opportunity to review the proceedings, the attorney for the petitioners presented to the judge of this court a petition in writing for the disbarment of Richard A. Ballinger, J. B. Metcalfe, Richard Saxe Jones, and C. A. Reynolds, containing a partisan recital of the business and litigation of the Heckman & Hanson firm, and of alleged fraudulent misconduct of the attorneys mentioned in connection with said matters. Action upon said petition has been stayed until a disposition can be made of the petition to reopen the bankruptcy proceedings by either an affirmance or rejection of Judge Smith's report, the consideration of which has been necessarily delayed several months by reason of the necessity for devoting the time and energies of the court to the performance of other duties. Finally, on the 8th day of June, 1904, the matter was brought on to be heard in open court, and arguments in favor of affirming the report of Judge Smith were made to the court by Mr. Alfred Battle and Mr. Richard A. Ballinger, and in opposition thereto by Mr. J. L. Finch, the attorney for the petitioner, who, in addition to oral argument then made, has since filed two voluminous written arguments which have been carefully read by the court.

As I have already indicated, the object of the court has been to ascertain the merits of the controversy, and to that end technical rules of pleading and practice have not been permitted to have controlling effect. I sincerely hope that this court may never again permit itself to be led into the commission of a like error.

The petition presents two main subjects of inquiry—first, the rights of Heckmann & Hanson; and, second, the question whether the court has been imposed upon by deceitful practices of members of the bar and officers of the court. With respect to the first, the gist of the complaint is that the bankrupts have been despoiled of an estate valued at over fifty thousand dollars, and a successful business has been wrecked by means of fraudulent schemes concocted and managed by a leading financial institution, aided by lawyers who have maintained the highest professional standing in the community for many years, with the connivance and willing acquiescence of officers of this court, and false reports made by them.

In this connection the actual value of the Heckmann & Hanson estate is a matter of prime importance, and the evidence with respect thereto shows that the whole estate was sold by the receiver of the superior court for $24,125.00. Mr. Heckmann could have prevented that sale by finding a bidder who would give for the property one hundred dollars in excess of the above amount, and he was so informed, but failed to bring forward any person who would raise the bid, and this court caused an investigation to be made as to the value of the property and appointed for that purpose, as special referee, Mr. A. C. Bowman, a man of experience and intelligence and recognized integrity, upon whose report the court relied in refusing to interfere by an injunction, on the ground that a better price could not be hoped for and delay in making the sale would be attended with additional expense which would diminish the net proceeds. The property consists of real estate purchased by Heckmann & Hanson for twelve thousand dollars, and such machinery and appliances for a shipbuilding business as the firm had been able to construct and accumulate during a period of about three years in which the business was carried on, after starting with the capital which has been mentioned, the total value of which was approximately $1,500.00. In giving his testimony Mr. Hanson estimated the value at $54,000.00, but it is shown that as a result of an injury he is unable to remember even the language of the country of which he is a native. An estimate of the value of the property by a witness whose faculties are thus impaired is entitled to no consideration. Mr. Heckmann's testimony as to the value is equally untrustworthy. On being interrogated as to the value of the property he gave only an evasive answer, as follows: "I got a statement which was furnished me by Mr. Nelson, the bookkeeper of this firm, that the assets was $52,800.00—some odd dollars—somewhere about the 12th of June, the valuation of the property that we owned." In the written argument in behalf of the petitioners Mr. Finch disposes of this part of the case briefly and beautifully as follows: "It is undisputed that the bankrupts were possessed of a considerable amount of property at the time of their adjudication. As the value thereof is immaterial, it may as well be accepted at the valuation of the bankrupts, namely, $60,000.00."

Credit, when established upon a basis of probity and business ability, is a valuable asset in any business, and is to be taken into account in estimating the value of the good will of an established business. Now, what was the value of Heckmann & Hanson's credit at the time when the Scandinavian-American Bank commenced to litigate with them? Let the record answer. In response to a leading question by Mr. Finch, Mr. Heckmann made the following statement when he was under examination as a witness before Judge Smith: "Every bill that was ever presented to the firm, from the first time we started until we got into this difficulty, was paid right away, whenever it was presented or part payment made, providing it was correct." The schedule of the firm's liabilities annexed to their original petition herein is a flat contradiction of this statement, and shows Mr. Heckmann to be a mendacious witness. It appears by uncontradicted evidence that a bonding company which became surety for the performance of a contract with the United States Government, under which the firm did some work upon the steamer Seward, was by reason of the neglect of Heckmann & Hanson to pay the wages of their employees and pay for materials used in that work, compelled to disburse several thousand dollars in the discharge of that obligation. Mr. Heckmann's conduct in the matter of the schooner Alice was enough of itself to shatter the firm's credit. The Alice was mortgaged to the Scandinavian-American Bank for a large amount, and coming into port in a damaged condition the vessel was placed in charge of Heckmann & Hanson for repairs, and it was then arranged for the bank to pay for the repairs as the work progressed. The bank was also a creditor of Heckmann & Hanson and held mortgages upon their plant for money loaned, aggregating eight thousand dollars. Under these conditions, after issuing checks upon the bank on account of the Alice contract to the amount of nearly seven thousand dollars, Mr. Heckmann attempted to perpetrate a swindle by causing a suit in rem to be commenced against the vessel for the full amount of the bill for repairs, after having refused to either assign the right of his firm to a maritime lien therefor to the bank or repay the money which had been drawn from the bank on his checks. That case was the beginning of the litigation which has culminated in this proceeding. Mr. Heckmann having forced the issue, the bank was obliged to commence suits to foreclose the mortgages and recover what was due, to defeat which Mr. Heckmann aided, if he did not instigate, the proceedings for placing the business of the firm in the control of the superior court by the appointment of a receiver. The business was wrecked, but Mr. Heckmann was the wrecker; and the creditors have only done what was the legitimate by compromising useless litigation in a manner to realize as much as could be realized out of the wreck. The aggregate amount of the firm's liabilities, added to the individual debts of the two partners, is within one or two hundred dollars of being equal to the cash proceeds from all of their assets, and their creditors are losers of whatever sums have been expended in fees and expenses incident to the litigation. In thus balancing their assets and liabilities I have subtracted $6,872.12, the amount of checks drawn on the schooner Alice account, the petitioners claiming that this item was improperly scheduled as a debt of the firm, and I adopt that suggestion, for the reason that according to my understanding of the facts this money, instead of being loaned to the firm was payment for the work done upon the Alice, and in compromising the litigation this account was canceled by the transfer of the title to the vessel which the receiver acquired by purchase thereof from the United States marshal in execution of the decree of this court rendered in the suit above mentioned.

By voluntarily going into bankruptcy the petitioners surrendered their property for the benefit of their creditors. The amount thereof at the highest valuation obtainable in cash was not sufficient to pay their debts in full in addition to the necessary expenses of litigation initiated by Mr. Heckmann. There being no surplus which the petitioners may justly claim, they are not concerned with the precise manner in which the money has been disbursed among their creditors. So long as the creditors are content, there is no occasion for the court to disturb the proceedings by which the administration of the estate has been conducted to completion, and as no question has been raised with respect to the right of the bankrupts to be discharged from their liabilities, there is no equity whatever in the petition affecting the first branch of inquiry.

The petitioner accuses Judge Ballinger of having betrayed the petitioners while acting in the double capacity of attorney for them and as an attorney and officer of the Scandinavian-American Bank. It is claimed that he induced Heckmann & Hanson to borrow five thousand dollars from the bank, and with the design of ruining Heckmann & Hanson he induced Heckmann to sign a writing which he did not understand, which afterwards proved to be a general power of attorney, and then, taking advantage of Heckmann's absence, executed a mortgage to the bank to secure a short-time loan, and induced Hanson to join in the execution of the mortgage. This accusation is not supported by a scintilla of evidence. On the contrary, it appears that he, in connection with Judge Ballinger, applied to the bank for a loan of five thousand dollars, to be furnished when other arrangements were completed for the purchase of a certain interest in the premises upon which the shipyard is located, four thousand five hundred dollars of the money being required to pay for that interest. Heckmann was anxious to have the purchase completed when the conditions were favorable, and having to make a trip to Alaska he left the business in charge of Judge Ballinger, with power to act, and not only executed, but himself wrote, the power of attorney under which Judge Ballinger acted for him in executing the mortgage, and all of the money loaned was used by the firm, as Heckmann designed that it should be used.

In his report, Judge Smith has specifically exonerated other members of the bar and officers of the court who were actors in the various proceedings, and has found the petition to be untrue as a whole. I have now gone sufficiently into the details of the case to indicate the grounds upon which I concur in the findings and conclusions of the special referee. No substantial rights of any party were in any wise prejudiced by the manner or dates of making entries of transactions in the books of the Scandinavian-American Bank, and Mr. Mayhew's position, whether he was a dummy representative of Mr. Chilberg or something else, is not, in view of all the circumstances already set forth, an index of fraud; therefore, I do not feel called upon to comment upon the case further. Let an order be entered denying the petition to reopen the case.

(Signed) C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

Filed in the U. S. District Court, Dist. of Washington, July 11, 1904. R. M. Hopkins, clerk; H. M. Walthew, deputy.

EXHIBIT No. 44.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division.

In the matter of C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners, doing business as Heckmann & Hanson, and C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, individuals, bankrupts. No. 2203. Argument.

To the Honorable C. H. HANFORD, Judge:

In accordance with leave granted on the 8th day of June, 1904, in open court at the time hearing was had orally in the above-entitled matter, the bankrupts submit the following written argument:

This hearing grows out of a petition made to the court on the part of Heckmann & Hanson asking to have their estate in bankruptcy reopened.

The court is without any pleadings in the matter other than said petition and an amended petition, filed by leave of court, after proofs taken. No issues in the case were ever formed. For that reason it becomes necessary to follow closely the course of proceedings subsequent to the filing of the petition if court and counsel are to arrive at a mutual understanding of what is properly before your honor for argument.

The petition to have the estate reopened was presented to your honor ex parte in chambers. It contained, among other things, allegations reflecting seriously upon various parties, among them the referee of this court in bankruptcy. At the request of the bankrupts the entering of any order thereon was deferred by your honor until such time as your honor could acquaint yourself thoroughly with the contents of the petition. This was on March 18, 1903.

On April 6th following word was received by counsel for the bankrupts that your honor would take the matter up in open court on the 11th. This word came by telephone from Messrs. Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, attorneys, and carried with it the information that it proceeded from the court.

On April 11th the bankrupts moved the court to strike certain affidavits which, from the moving papers, it appeared had been served on counsel for the bankrupts on the 8th and which it was assumed had been filed, said motion being made upon the grounds, among others, that the affidavits were not made or filed by or in behalf of any party interested in any matter presented by said petition and failed to meet any material issue contained therein, and that the same were generally incompetent, irrelevant, and immaterial; that even the source from which they came was in doubt. Your honor became impatient at the motion and, without consulting the affidavits, denied the same. At the same time the court announced that, on its own motion, it would refer the matter to Judge Eben Smith "to make a report as to what he finds the facts to be and whether they (the affidavits) are material to reopening the case or only material to the character of the parties affected."

The order of reference, however, was worded somewhat differently than was anticipated by counsel for the bankrupts from the remarks made by your honor in open court, as above quoted. It directed Judge Smith, as special referee, to investigate and report his findings "with respect to the right of the bankrupts to have the cause reopened and with respect to the conduct of such attorneys and officers of the court as appear to be accused by the allegations of the petition."

Hearings upon the reference were had from time to time before the special referee. Those hearings were interrupted, however, and the matter again came before your honor on July 16, 1903, upon a certificate from Judge Smith, from which it appeared that a witness duly subpoenaed duces tecum to appear before the special referee had failed to produce those certain books and records called for by his subpoena. In the course of the hearing induced by said certificate, your honor asked of counsel for the bankrupts, the writer, in effect, whether if he had the books called for he would be able to show anything that would reflect in any way upon any parties concerned in the matters under investigation before the special referee; to which counsel replied, in effect, that if he had those books he would bring to you the evidence sufficient to disbar Judge R. A. Ballinger, General J. B. Metcalfe, Richard Saxe Jones, and C. A. Reynolds. Your honor's reply was to the effect that such remarks should be made good, and that unless they were you would, in turn, disbar the one making them. And an order was accordingly entered that the books desired be produced before the special referee.

Subsequent hearings were had and the matter finally submitted to the special referee in the following September; and on January 26, 1904, he made his report to this court, denying the right of the bankrupts to have the estate reopened.

Exceptions to this report were duly filed by the bankrupts on February 25th following.

May 10, 1904, the Seattle Shipyards Company, by Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, its attorneys, and Messrs. R. A. Ballinger, J. B. Metcalfe, Richard Saxe Jones, and C. A. Reynolds in propria persona, filed in the cause a motion for an order confirming the report of the special referee and disbarring the attorney for the bankrupts.

Thereupon, on May 13, the bankrupts duly filed exceptions to said motion, for the reason that the parties making same had no interest in the subject matter of the proceedings, individually or collectively, and that they had no right to make any motion therein; and further, that there was nothing before the court upon which the court could act.

On June 7th, in the forenoon, on application of the bankrupts, the court signed an order directing the special referee to return the evidence submitted by the bankrupts upon the reference to him, a showing having been made that the costs and expenses to be incurred thereby had already been met by the bankrupts.

In the afternoon of the same day the court on application of Messrs. Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, and without notice to the bankrupts, set the matter for hearing on the motion of the Seattle Shipyards Company and the parties in propria persona, and upon the exceptions of the bankrupts to the report of the referee for June 8th at 10 a. m.

At the hearing the court, of its own motion, eliminated all questions relating to disbarment of counsel. At the same time your honor refused to consider first the exceptions of the bankrupts filed May 13 to the motion of the Seattle Shipyards Company, and others, filed May 8th; but ruled that the same would be given such consideration as it merited on the hearing of the matters in their merits.

This extended résumé of proceedings becomes necessary because of the evident misapprehension of the court as to the relation sustained to the record by the parties who appeared before your honor on the 8th inst., and which misapprehension can be best clarified by a discussion of the bankrupts exceptions filed May 13th to the motion of the parties filed May 8th.

By those exceptions the question is raised that the parties initiating the recent hearing of June 8th have no standing in court. The parties, it will appear by reference to their motion, are the Seattle Shipyards Company, appearing by its attorneys, Messrs. Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, and Messrs. R. A. Ballinger, J. B. Metcalfe, Richard Saxe Jones, and C. A. Reynolds, appearing in propria persona. (The attempt to connect Judge Hoyt with the motion by incorporating his name in the body thereof when he does not sign the same must not be allowed to mislead the court.) Their motion is to confirm the report of the referee and to disbar counsel.

But Messrs. Ballinger, Jones, Metcalfe, and Reynolds, personally or otherwise, or any of them are in nowise connected with the record. Though your honor may think otherwise, we respectfully submit that the first introduction your honor received to them was on the 16th of July, when the writer made the statements in open court heretofore attributed to him, though it is now well known to all that they, or a part of them representing all, had appeared and taken part in the proceedings before the special referee for three months previous to that date. From remarks made from the bench at the time oral arguments were had we believe that your honor must have the impression that these attorneys or some of them were referred to in the petition to reopen the estate as attorneys devoting their efforts to stifling proceedings while the bankruptcy matter proper was in court and that they it was who made, or were supposed to have made, a counter showing to the petition. If such is the case, it is a wrong impression, though it makes quite understandable now why the firm of Ballinger, Ronald & Battle received from your honor notice that you had in your possession the ex parte petition of the bankrupts to reopen the estate and why no greater consideration was given to the motion to strike their affidavits.

The absence of those offidavits from the files is a very important matter to the bankrupts and their counsel, for two reasons: First, they would show conclusively that the parties instigating the hearing on June 8th were not the parties who attempted to make a counter showing to that of the bankrupts when they asked to have their estate reopened; second, they would show whom, if any one, the firm of Ballinger, Ronald & Battle did pretend at that time to represent. The determination of these two points would tend greatly to harmonize your honor's notions of the record with those entertained by counsel for the bankrupts; for, were your honor then to refer to the petition to reopen the estate and later were to acquaint yourself thoroughly with the record which is coming to your honor from the special referee, your honor would have more sympathy with the writer's statement made in oral argument—that but for the appearance of Messrs. Ballinger, Jones, Metcalfe, and Reynolds before the special referee when they had no business there your honor would not have heard from the writer the charges made on July 16. We did not "falsify" when we made that statement; nor did we mean thereby to have your honor infer that you would not have heard the same or similar charges later on, when the time therefor should have been more propitious.

At any rate, the parties now appearing in propria persona can only be interested in a personal vindication, a matter to be accomplished in some regular proceeding. Surely, it is an unheard of proceeding in the law that one feeling himself aggrieved in a personal way may come into a case to which he is an utter stranger, and, in that case, move the court to disbar the attorney of one of the litigants.

And who is the Seattle Shipyards Company, the remaining one of the movents? As a matter of identity, it is a corporation formed by the bank to take over the Heckmann & Hanson property. But never, until the motion of the 8th of May was filed, did it appear in this cause. Therefore it has no standing here now.

But if any of the parties making the motion, or anyone else, had standing in the court, there is nothing upon which the court can hear the matters in the absence of the evidence. Our concern is not that the matter be not heard at all, but that it be not heard until the evidence arrives.

Therefore, our exceptions to the motion, and we respectfully submit the exceptions should be sustained.

The following is on the merits, and with the hope that the evidence will reach your honor as soon as the argument:

The bankrupts were adjudicated such January 17, 1902.

At the time of their adjudication their property was in the hands of the State court, acting through its receiver, one Peter L. Larsson. The receiver had been appointed the preceding July, in a suit brought on an account stated. Such proceedings had been had in the receivership case that, at the time of adjudication, a sale of the property was proposed, a bid therefor had been received, and the court was about to accept same.

With the petition for adjudication, the bankrupts filed general charges of fraud in connection with the sale proposed to be made by the State court, and upon that showing this court, with the order of adjudication, issued a restraining order directed to the State court restraining it from proceeding further with the sale.

Four days later, January 21st, Mr. Richard Saxe Jones, attorney for the receiver in the State court, appeared in this court professing that he came for the sole purpose of suggesting to the court that any and all orders theretofore made had been made upon a misunderstanding of the facts. He set forth no facts that the court thereby might become informed, but took an order from your honor that the bankrupts show cause forthwith before Commissioner A. C. Bowman why all the orders theretofore entered by this court be not set aside; that at the hearings to be had Mr. Jones and Judge R. A. Ballinger, "as counsel for parties in interest" be allowed to be present and take part; that the hearing be confined to two questions: 1st, was the sale proposed by the State court for an adequate price; and 2d, could a better price be obtained by sale in the bankruptcy court; and the order further recited that notice of any and all proceedings in the bankruptcy cause be at all times given to Mr. Jones and Judge Ballinger A peculiar order.

After hearings had before him, a report was made to this court by Commissioner Bowman favorable to Mr. Jones and Judge Ballinger, the same was confirmed by your honor, and the restraining order issued against the State court was dissolved. The parties went back to the State court, and there Mr. Reynolds, the attorney for the bankrupts, assisted Judge Ballinger and Mr. Jones in putting through the very proceedings he was hired by the bankrupts to oppose.

From the evidence submitted to the special referee it appears that while proceedings were being had before Commissioner Bowman the American Bonding & Trust Company, the surety on the receiver's bond in the State court, paid to Mr. Reynolds, the bankrupts' attorney, the sum of $100, and also engaged him as its attorney in the receivership proceedings in the State court and in three or four other matters in which it was engaged; and it further appears that the Scandinavian-American Bank paid Mr. Reynolds a further $150 after the receiver of the State court had turned over to the agent of the bank the possession of the property of the bankrupts then in his custody and control. This money, the bankrupts believe, was paid by the bondsmen of the receiver and by the bank, and the services of Mr. Reynolds in other matters engaged by the same bondsmen, as a consideration to Mr. Reynolds to induce him to simulate protection of the bankrupts' interest before Commissioner Bowman and your honor, and later to help turn the property over to the bank under the guise of a sale by the State court. How the order of January 21st could have been obtained by Judge Ballinger and Mr. Jones without any showing of facts, and without notice, and Mr. Reynolds hauled up forthwith before Commissioner Bowman, without a protest being registered by him, we are unable to understand, unless, indeed, he possessed an understanding with the parties obtaining the order. That he advised Mr. Heckmann that that part of the order to the effect that special notice of all subsequent proceedings must be given Judge Ballinger and Mr. Jones meant that no further action could be taken in your honor's court without their consent is undenied. He admits that he kept his client off the stand before Commissioner Bowman, and says that he did so for fear he (Heckmann) might cast some reflections on Judge Ballinger, Mr. Jones, or General Metcalfe. The evidence is conclusive that he was serving the bonding company. The order of March 6th made by the State court and found in the files of No. 32817 names him as its attorney. And Mr. Hills, the employee of the local agents of the company, testified that the company looked to Mr. Reynolds for advice. The excuse that the money paid him was advanced "for expenses" in investigating a matter of common interest to the bankrupts and the bonding company sounds well enough, yet the only item of expense of any moment was the commissioner's fees, and they have not been paid to this day. But that "explanation," lame as it is, doesn't attempt to explain the motive actuating the company in hiring Mr. Reynolds in other matters, their introduction to him having been obtained in the Heckmann & Hanson "investigation." And when it is considered that the more fraud on the part of the receiver, Mr. Reynolds could uncover for the bankrupts, the greater would become the liability of Mr. Reynolds's other client, the bonding company, the question of good faith to the bankrupts becomes an impossible one.

But what about the $150 paid Mr. Reynolds by the bank. He says it was a contribution to a sick benefit for Mr. Hanson, of Heckmann & Hanson; and what is further, that he has it in his office to-day and is ready and willing to turn it right over to Mr. Hanson at any time that he will come and get it.

The fact that the bank denies the "contribution" and contends that the money was advanced for third parties, when in fact it was advanced by the bank in a matter of its own, no matter for what purpose, as we shall show further along in the argument, disposes of the question.

This circumstance alone, the payment of $250 to the bankrupts' then attorney and the employment of him in the case by parties with adverse interests, and Mr, Reynolds's efforts to forfeit the rights of his clients, to the very party now opposing this proceeding, the party being one of those to pay him the said sum, is sufficient, we believe, to warrant the court in reopening the estate.

Let us not leave this period in the history of the case without calling your honor's attention to the fact that the evidence of the "respondents" before Special Referee Smith recently was to the effect that the property of Heckmann & Hanson was purchased by Mr. Mayhew for a party of three gentlemen, who together had made up a fund of $30,000 and deposited it to his order in the bank for the purpose. The special referee accepted the story and incorporated it in his report.

This man, Mayhew, is the same party who had made a bid for the property in the State court, and which stood as the excuse for your honor's reference to Commissioner Bowman to learn if $24,125, the amount of the bid, was an adequate price for the property. Commissioner Bowman reported that it was.

It must be reassuring to your honor to learn that the same parties who induced a special referee of your court to believe that they had provided a fund of $30,000 with which to purchase the property, can just as readily induce a commissioner of your court to believe that $24,125 is an adequate price therefor.

And then to ask your honor to confirm both reports!

It is undisputed that the bankrupts were possessed of a considerable amount of property at the time of their adjudication. As the value thereof is immaterial, it may as well be accepted at the estimation of the bankrupts, namely, $60,000.

This property is alleged to have been sold by the State court on March 6th to one, M. F. Mayhew, for the sum of $24,125. That the sale is void as a matter of law we shall develop later. That it is void in fact, for fraud, we will try now to show.

We lay down our proposition at the outset, that the "sale" was the culmination of a scheme on the part of the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle to convert the property of Heckmann & Hanson to its own use; that absolutely no money was ever offered or received for the property; that the possession of the property was obtained by the bank through the connivance and with the assistance of the receiver of the State court, for which assistance the receiver was paid a price by said Scandinavian-American Bank.

After your honor (on March 3d) released the restraining order before granted against the State court, the receiver went back to that tribunal and on March 6th took an order to be found in the files of No. 32817 that his report recommending the sale of the property be approved; that he accept the proposed purchase price of $24,125; and that he duly convey the property by appropriate instruments.

Two days later, March 8, he made to the court his fourth and final report, saying that he had received the purchase price of the property; that he had conveyed the same to Mr. Mayhew by deed and bill of sale; and that he had placed Mr. Mayhew in possession.

On March 24th an order was taken approving the fourth report and discharging the receiver.

That the receiver obtained no money for the property, and that it was never contemplated he should, but that the whole proceeding was a scheme on the part of the bank to gain possession of the property, see the order approving his fourth report and discharging the receiver, filed March 24, 1902, in files No. 32817, and note these points:

That Mr. Larsson was discharged while professing to have in his hands the sum of $21,712.50;

That at the same time there were owing and unpaid debts of the receivership to the amount of $570.30;

That the receiver was directed, after his discharge, to first pay those debts from the fund (pretended to be on hand) and then to deposit the balance of the fund in the Scandinavian-American Bank;

That Mr. Jones was granted for his compensation as attorney for the receiver, $1,400, in addition to anything theretofore received;

That Mr. Larsson was allowed as receiver $1,600, less anything theretofore received.

Then, refer to exhibit No. —— the pass book of Mr. Larsson at the Scandinavian-American Bank, and note that on the day of his discharge Mr. Larsson was credited with $2,006.45.

Turning to exhibit No. ——, and from the statement of receipts and disbursements therein, note that the $2,006.45 is ten per cent on the amount afterwards (April 15th) to be deposited in court.

Then, again, in the receivership files No. 32817 refer to a collection of vouchers filed March 25th and note that they were filed the day after the receiver was discharged and that they represent payment of the debts of $570.30 mentioned in the fourth report above.

Finally, turn to exhibit No. ——, the stubs of the check book used by Mr. Larsson in checking out the $2,006.45 in the bank, and note that the names and amounts of the first nineteen checks correspond to the names and amounts of the vouchers.

Also note the last two stubs, R. S. Jones, $940.00, P. L. Larsson, $494.15.

These facts then become self-evident: That on the day Larsson was discharged as receiver the Scandinavian-American Bank paid him 10% on the amount afterwards deposited in the registry of the court; that out of this amount he paid the debts of the receivership, and the balance of the amount he divided between himself and Mr. Jones.

But Mr. Jones and Mr. Larsson were to be paid for their services, according to the order, $3,000.00, less anything Larsson may have received theretofore; that is, Mr. Jones was to receive $1,400.00, in addition to anything theretofore received, and Mr. Larsson $1,600.00 less any amount theretofore paid to himself. This part of the order was a "blind." After it was entered, neither of them ever received a penny from the court. Whatever compensation they received they received from the bank, and it consisted of whatever they could save of the 10% item after they had paid the expenses of the receivership. What they may have paid themselves out of the estate previous to the entering of the order, no one knows—their books were never audited.

They may have the nerve to say to your honor that the amount the bank paid them was really equivalent to the amount the court allowed them; that any discrepancy between amounts is attributable to Mr. Larsson's compensation of $1,400 being reduced by a credit for amounts previously had.

But the spectacle of a receiver receiving his compensation from any one but the court whose servant he was is appalling; nor is our confidence in the transaction increased any when we come to learn that such compensation came from the institution which later became the owner of the property.

But in any event, upon what possible hypothesis consistent with common honesty, can the receiver and his attorney have paid the legitimate expenses of the court? Find any explanation, other than that they were to turn over the property free of debts in return for 10% on the amount which it would cost the bank to buy up creditors and for loans on the property, and your honor will be more successful than we have been in our two years' labors on the case. Perhaps the situation could be clarified if Mr. Jones could be induced to talk upon the point. He poses as the one most conversant with the Heckmann & Hanson litigation, but up to the moment of writing this we have never heard him discourse on the point.

We have also told your honor that not a penny was received by the State court for he property.

We ask the court not to draw a wrong conclusion at the start, from the fact that on April 15th, some three weeks after the receiver was discharged, the bank caused some $20,064.77 to be deposited in court, and pulled right out again on the same day on an "order of distribution." That performance was but a method employed by the parties in control of the receivership proceedings to get figures on the books of the registry of the court, as we shall presently see.

To save a long explanation, it is admitted by the bankrupts that the figures "$21,712.50" may take the place of "$24,125.00," the alleged purchase price of the property. Ten per cent of the latter amount ($24,125.00) is said to have accompanied the bid, and we raise no question at this time that the facts, if such was true, were not always preserved in the orders of the receiver. So we admit for the sake of the argument, that but $21,712.50 remained to be paid.

In the order above referred to, the receiver on March 8th said that he had received the purchase price, in accordance with the directions contained in the order of March 6th.

The evidence of such payment given before the special referee is Exhibit No. —— being a certified check for $21,712.50, drawn by M. F. Mayhew on the Scandinavian-American Bank in favor of Peter Larsson and dated March 7, 1902.

The check appears on its face to have been certified by the bank on the day it bears date, March 7th. But the books and records of the bank fail to reveal any evidence of its certification. On the other hand, positive testimony is given that the check nowhere appears on the books of the bank before March 12 (R., p. 459, line 14 to 25).

The books do show, however, that on March 14th this certified check went of record in "bills receivable" register as having been received on March 12 (see bills receivable register, p. 120, tendered herewith); and that a certificate of deposit for the same amount was issued to Peter Larsson on the 12th (see certificate of deposit register, under date Mch. 12, tendered herewith). And the testimony of the then cashier, Mr. Soelberg, is that the certified check was received by the bank in payment for the certificate of deposit (R. p. 432, line 3 to 8).

The explanation of the transaction by the bank officials is, that on March 12 they issued a certificate of deposit to Mr. Larsson for $21,712.50 in payment of this certified check for that amount; that the certified check then went of record in the note or "bills receivable" register, because the bank treated it, as well as all other items coming from Mr. Mayhew, as the note of Messrs. Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg, three officials of the bank, whose "agent" it professes Mr. Mayhew to have been, and upon whose "credit" the bank was advancing money to Mr. Mayhew (R., p. 432, line 16 to 30).

The "explanation" the bank gives as to why a check for $21,712.50 was certified by it on the 7th and no record of any sort made of the matter until the 12th is that the check was not paid until the 12th (R., p. 459, line 25, to p. 460, line 6; also p. 461, line 24, to p. 462, line 3). As if the payment of the certified check of a bank has anything to do with noting in its records the fact that its own paper—for such a certified check becomes—is outstanding.

The truth is the check had no existence until the 12th, and the statement that the receiver had in his possession the sum of $21,712.50, or anything representing that amount, when he said he had on the 8th after he had delivered the property, is wholly lacking in truth.

The cause for the record being made in the bank on the 12th was an unexpected move on the part of the bankrupts made on that day—the service of a temporary writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court of the State of Washington, with an order to show cause indorsed thereon (R., p. 743, line 24 to 28). On the 6th of March the writer had been called into the case (R., p. 707, line 4 and 5), but his efforts to stop the attempted sale by the State court had been unavailing (R., p. 707, line 23 and 24). The result was an application for the writ of prohibition, and its service on the 12th (R., p. 743, line 24 to 28). It is apparent now, but wholly unknown to the bankrupts then, that the parties in control of the receivership proceedings had been caught in an ugly position. The property had been surrendered under a pretended sale, but no consideration had been received therefor, and a return to the writ of prohibition was due in a few days to the supreme court. Hence the appearance of the certified check and the record in the bank.

But do not think, because the check existed, that Peter Larsson ever saw it or the certificate of deposit issued in lieu of it. The record was made simply for convenience; to guard against "accidents." Had Peter Larsson received the check he would not have had to rely upon the favor of the Scandinavian-American Bank in order to pay the debts of his receivership. Indeed, had he had the check he need not have been owing any debts, Had he received the money he would have done with it as he did with all other items—have placed it of record on the account books of the receiver and then have deposited it in the Washington National Bank—the receiver's regular depositary (R., p. 573; line 2 to 10). He did neither. The receiver's books were closed without the item being entered therein (R., p. 572, line 11 to 14); nor was it deposited in the Washington National Bank (Exhibit No. ——).

The same is true of the certificate of deposit and of subsequent certificates representing the same item, which, with a thimble-rigging process in the books of the bank, are meant to make us believe that all the while Mr. Larsson had the price received for the property on deposit in the Scandinavian-American Bank. We are aware, too, of the order of court directing him to place the same there (same order discharging receiver). But if your honor will refer to Exhibit No. ——, the certificate of deposit for $20,064.77, which eventually, April 14, found its way into the registry of the court, and will read also the entry made of the certificate in the certificate of deposit register under date of March 24th, your honor cannot but notice that the "depositor" is "we," the Scandinavian-American Bank. It don't look like Peter Larsson at all.

The point of course, is not that the payment of a sum of money adequate in all respects was delayed for a short period; but rather that the receiver turned over the property to a stranger without any payment being made therefor, and then falsified to the court in regard to such payment, thus denoting that he was in some sort of a scheme that had not good faith for its foundation.

If, at this period, there is anything lacking in the presentation of the point, it will be made perfectly clear when we come to show from the books of the bank the identity of the bank with Mr. Mayhew, the alleged purchaser of the property.

The following creditors appeared and proved their claims in bankruptcy, and these were the only claims ever proven:

A. J. Tennant, owning a claim in the amount of $4.73.
F. E. Brightman, owning a claim in the amount of $7.10.
John Larrabee, owning a claim in the amount of $5.25.
D. C. Conover, owning a claim in the amount of $2.50.
Charles Russel, owning a claim in the amount of $3.55.
(See files.)

The bankrupts have said of these claims that they were proven at the instance of the Scandinavian-American Bank with the idea and for the sole purpose of stiffling proceedings in your honor's court; and further, that the bank also provided for these "creditors" attorneys (Gray & Tait), whose efforts were to be expended in that same direction. Let us look at the evidence, and first with regard to the identity of the claims.

If your honor will examine each claim as it is on file in this cause you will note that it had been assigned by the original creditor to Mr. Mayhew (the agent of the bank, as we shall later show) and was owned by him at the time when the alleged sale was put through in the State court. Then examine the petition for order of distribution, filed in the State court March 29, 1902, and found in files No. 32817 (Exhibit ——), and note that Mr. Mayhew, as the owner of each of these claims, used them in that court petitioning it to distribute the "fund" over there. Mr. Mayhew then refrained from taking down any dividend on these particular five claims, though pulling down $1,443.59 on his others (Exhibit ——). This was evidently an idea of his lawyers, so that in coming into the bankruptcy court with proof of his claim he would be under no necessity of surrendering as a preference received a payment made thereon within four months from the filing of the petition.

These claims were then distributed by assignment without consideration (R., p. 264, line 2 to 12) to four clerks in the law office of Ballinger, Ronald & Battle (R., p. 187, line 7 to 18; and p. 188, line 23 to p. 189, line 15) and a bookkeeper in the office of Mr. Chilberg (R., p. 259, line 25 to 29). For what purpose these assignments were made Mr. Mayhew himself don't know; he don't know even that the claims were filed in the bankruptcy court (R., p. 263, line 23 to 27). We must therefore look to Mr. Mayhew's attorney for the information. Mr. Mayhew tells us that the attorney doing the work was A. J. Tennant (R., p. 264, line 21 to 24), chief clerk for Ballinger, Ronald & Battle (R., p. 187, line 13 and 14).

Mr. Tennant tells us the reason they filed the claims to be that "they" were led to believe that Mr. Heckmann intended to have proven a claim or claims that would control the creditors' meeting, and through it the trustee, and through the trustee subsequent proceedings, and that it was with the intention of "blocking" that move that they procured these claims to be proven; that up to the time when they received this information about Mr. Heckmann "they had no intention of getting into the bankruptcy matter at all." (R., p. 192, line 20 to p. 193, line 12.)

The story is marred a little by the statement that Mr. Heckmann was back of the Stearn (Sturm) claim, and that the creditors were interested only in seeing that the estate be "fairly and impartially managed." In the first place, Mr. Tennant spoke hastily about Mr. Heckmann being the "star witness" for Mr. Sturm in his contest, afterwards admitting that he was not sure on the point (R., p. 205, line 3 to 21); and if your honor is interested enough in the matter to turn to the record of the Sturm proceeding you will notice Mr. Heckmann did not appear at all. He was in Alaska (R., p. 622, line 10 to 15). On the second point, that these creditors were interested only in getting "an impartial administration of the estate," it is pertinent to remark that the entire estate had been sold by the State court, according to their theory, and nothing remained to be administered. There was in the bankruptcy court a little personal estate of Mr. Heckmann's, it is true, but what interest had partnership creditors in that?

Let us see how the trustee was obtained. He was E. F. Fisher. He says he sought the appointment of his own volition (R., p. 14, line 1 to p. 15, line 14). But we believe the story is more accurately told by Mr. Mayhew, who says:

"I first went to Mr. Fisher's employer, Mr. Campbell, and asked his permission to request Mr. Fisher to act as trustee" (R. ,p. 265, line 19 to 22);

"At first Mr. Fisher did not want to take up the burden but he finally consented." (R., p. 265, line 27 and 28);

"I told him there would be considerable hard work about it, and I left the impression with Mr. Fisher and Mr. Campbell that I was presuming on my trade relations with them a little bit to accommodate me in this instance. I was trading with them at that time." (R., p. 266, line 6 to 12);

And from Mr. Fisher's own testimony as to Mr. Mayhew's conversation with him it is evident Mr. Mayhew sought Mr. Fisher (R., p. 15, line 16 to 22.)

Mr. Fisher says he procured his own bond from Calhoun, Denny & Ewing (R., p. 27, line 9 to 23); and that his attorneys paid them for it (R., p. 28, line 13 and 14).

But Mr. Mayhew says that he himself arranged for the bond and guaranteed the payment of the premium thereon (R., p. 266, line 22 to 25).

Mr. Fisher also states that he hired his attorneys, Gray & Tait, that he employed them after his appointment as trustee (R., p. 22, line 10 to 14), and after inquiry among his friends as to who were good attorneys (R., p. 22, line 13 to p. 23, line 6); that he made no agreement with them for compensation (R., p. 25, line 2 to p. 26, line 10).

But as Gray & Tait were in the cause and had directed proceedings when the trustee was elected, Mr. Fisher's testimony is of no greater importance than to show his evident disinclination to tell the truth. The facts proper are learned from Mr. Mayhew and Mr. Tennant.

Mr. Mayhew says that on the day the trustee was elected, "I was surprised to see Mr. Gray (of Gray & Tait) there in company with Mr. Tennant. I expected to be represented by Mr. Tennant at that time or by some of the firm of Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, and that is the first time that I ever met Judge Gray" (R., p. 268, line 5 to 11).

The record does not seem as clear as it might be as to just when Mr. Tennant did employ Mr. Gray. When asked the question as to whom Mr. Gray represented at the creditors' meeting electing the trustee, Mr. Tennant replied that Mr. Gray had been employed by him to assist him in opposing the Sturm claim (R., p. 195, line 19 to 24). But the conflict over the Sturm claim occurred after the trustee was elected (see return of Referee Worden to your honor). But we think that Mr. Tennant's reply to the further question as to the membership of the firm of Gray & Tait is indicative of the fact that he had hired them, and is sufficient on the point. "John T. Gray and Hugh A. Tait. Mr Gray, however, was the man who had charge of this matter throughout, and Tait had nothing to do with it. They appeared, however, as Gray & Tait, as my attorneys" (R., p. 195, line 9 to 14).

Mr. Fisher admits that he never talked with any of the "creditors," and don't know them to this day (R., p. 38, line 10 to p. 39, line 2); that matters, after his appointment, were left entirely with his attorneys (R., p. 29, lines 4 to 14; also p. 30, lines 20 to 21). Rather strange, after seeking so strenuously this appointment.

It is apparent, then, that the proving of these claims was not done in good faith. Mr. Mayhew, the agent of the bank, remained the owner of them, and hid his identity for a purpose. What his purpose was will become absolutely assured when we develop the next point. It is sufficient now to know that the claims were not proven with the idea of collecting them. One whose object is to further proceedings, that is, to collect a claim or a portion thereof—the only legitimate object of bankruptcy proceedings—does not, on a $23.13 claim (the total of the five proven) furnish a bond for the trustee the premium on which must have amounted to the whole of the claim, and then hire a set of high-priced attorneys to look after proceedings unless the one doing so has ulterior motives. Especially he does not run away from proceedings where they are paying 30% on all claims into those where they pay nothing.

But this creditor even resists the reopening of the estate that his claim might be paid.

Your honor will note that not all the Heckmann & Hanson claims, apparently, were bought up by the bank (Mr. Mayhew). From the statement of disbursements appearing in Exhibit ——, it would appear that some creditors retained theirs and took down a dividend of 30% from the State court. We undertook to show that all those creditors who did not sell their claims to the bank collected them in full. In other words, that those who were "next" received dollar for dollar, by virtue of some arrangement made between the bank and the bonding company, when the latter found out more about the receivership proceedings than it desired to learn, and hired the bankrupts' attorney to protect its interests. But not a soul in Seattle knew just what settlements were made. Judge Hoyt, the attorney for the bonding company, settled a few claims, but kept no record thereof. (This is from memory of the judge's testimony, which has not been returned.) Mr. Guion, of Wing & Guion, the local agents of the bonding company, knew nothing about the matter, everything in their office in relation to the bonding business having been attended to by their Mr. Hills (R., p. 692, line 15 to 19; p. 693, line 4 to 11; p. 694, line 2 to 6 and 23 to 26). Mr. Hills testified from memory to some settlements made, but had no record in his office of the claims paid (w., p. 117, line 8 to 17). In view of this showing, or lack of showing, the "understanding" of Mr. Tennant, one of the "creditors" to prove his claim, the attorney in fact of all the other creditors, the chief clerk for Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, and the attorney for Mr. Mayhew "when he was expecting to be represented by Ballinger, Ronald & Battle," is highly interesting. He says, "I had heard considerable of the Seward claims and that the American Bonding and Trust Company were to pay any balance due on certain debts of Heckmann & Hanson that were not paid either in the receivership or bankruptcy proceeding (R., p. 200, line 5 to 13).

Now, what was this proceeding in your honor's court for, think you? Was it to "stifle" matters, or wasn't it?

And yet your honor has to learn a large part of the case as now made. The greatest piece of jobbery attempted upon this court, in connection with the matter, occurred before your special referee, which point we will take up next.

In the petition to reopen the estate, and in all subsequent proceedings, we have attributed to the Scandinavian-American Bank and its privies responsibility for all fraud perpetrated in connection with the Heckmann & Hanson litigation. In all our pleadings, and in this argument, we have assumed that M. F. Mayhew, the alleged purchaser of the property, is synonymous with the Scandinavian-American Bank. The parties concerned in opposing our present proceedings, by whatsoever name we may call them, have attempted to hide the identity of the bank with the deal, and, incidentally, to show a good-faith transaction in the sale made by the receiver in the State court. The affidavits offered opposing the reopening of the estate was the forerunner of their story and, should your honor ever see them, will be found to have been devoted almost entirely to that subject. Four-fifths of the record made before your special referee consists of a recitation of the bank's story by some five or six gentlemen of supposed veracity, and the evidence of the bankrupts made necessary to refute it. This attempt to hide the bank's connection with the crookedness, and to cover up the evidence of the crookedness itself, is a matter calling loudly to this court for consideration; for it embraces one of the boldest, most brazen pieces of wholesale perjury ever foisted upon a court.

Like the consideration of the disbarment proceedings springing out of the case, the consideration of this matter might well be taken up by itself; but it is necessary for us to treat of it here in order to hold good our allegations running throughout the pleadings, that Mayhew and the bank are one. And the proving of the point—which must be done from the books of the bank—will make doubly certain and clear the truth of the proposition before dwelt upon, that the receiver simply turned over the property to the bank and betrayed his trust for a price.

The situation of the bank relative to the acquisition of the property, as the parties have it in the record, is believed to be fairly stated thus: That J. W. Kelly, E. L. Grondahl, and J. E. Chilberg had determined to procure the Heckmann & Hanson property; that, to that end, they established in the Scandinavian-American Bank a credit of $30,000.00 by giving their note to the bank for that amount; that they then employed M. F. Mayhew to direct operations for them; that Mr. Mayhew was privileged, and the bank was instructed to allow him, to draw against their credit thus established; that Mr. Mayhew did, on checks signed in his own name, draw out money from the Scandinavian-American Bank when no money of his was there, but that the bank treated the items thus drawn out as drawn against the aforesiad credit of Messrs. Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg; that the bank itself had absolutely no interest, directly or indirectly, in the purchase of the Heckmann & Hanson property.

(The cross-examination of Mr. Lane, the cashier of the bank, by Judge Battle, R., p. 397 to 403, inclusive, brings out the position of the parties as above set forth in the clearest and most comprehensive manner and in the shortest space of any place in the record. Time alone prevents us from making more citations at this place. It may be said, however, that J. W. Kelly, E. L. Grondahl, J. E. Chilberg, A. H. Soelberg, and M. F. Mayhew, in addition to Mr. Lane, tell in substance the same story.)

The court will want to know at the outset the relation of the parties alleged to have been behind Mr. Mayhew between themselves and to the bank at the time the money actually expended in the Heckmann & Hanson matter was advanced by the bank to Mr. Mayhew.

J. W. Kelly was a stockholder in and director of the bank (R., p. 207, line 29 to p. 208, line 6).

E. L. Grondahl was vice president (R., p. 404, line 7 to 14) and manager (R., p. 426, line 7 to 10).

J. E. Chilberg was a stockholder and director (R., p. 311, line 19 to 30); Mr. Chilberg is a nephew of A. Chilberg, the president of the bank (R., p. 311, line 30 to p. 312, line 6), and had his office directly under the bank in the basement of the bank building (R., p. 311, line 12 to 19).

M. F. Mayhew, at the time of his alleged employment, was a bookkeeper in the employ of Mr. Chilberg in his office under the bank (R., p. 221, line 20 to 24).

The story of the parties will have to be disproved by the records of the bank, consisting of its books of account and various papers emitted by it, and introduced in evidence.

For the convenience of the court, the bankrupts tender herewith a set of books which have been produced from the evidence as likenesses of the books of the bank used upon the hearings before Special Referee Smith. They are three in number, a "Certificate of deposit register," a "Bills receivable register," and a "Note and collection teller's cash book." Each page in every book cites your honor to the record for verification, a carbon copy of each book has been tendered Messrs. Ballinger, Ronald & Battle, attorneys, and though gotten up hurriedly, we believe no fault can be found with them as to their accuracy.

With the aid of the books we purpose to show that this "credit" idea was an afterthought on the part of those conspiring with the receiver to obtain the property in his hands and under his control, gotten up at a time when the parties deemed it desirable, if not necessary, to create evidence of the story that they might some day have to tell, for just such an occasion as this; and that the exhibits purporting to evidence money in the hands of Larsson were all the while in the possession of the bank and were so much paper supporting the fictitious record—nothing more.

It is by all conceded that the bank did advance money to Mr. Mayhew (for some one's use) to be expended in relation to Heckmann & Hanson matter, chiefly to buy up claims against the estate.

The explanation running all through the testimony of Mr. Soelberg and Mr. Lane, vice president and cashier of the bank, respectively, as to the method or system employed by the bank to identify Messrs. Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg with the various advances made to Mr. Mayhew, is this:

Mr. Mayhew would give his check for the amount advanced him; a "debit slip" would be prepared by a teller in the bank noting the charge as against Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg; to this "debit slip" would be pinned the Mayhew check, and the whole would then be deposited in its proper alphabetical place among "bills receivable" of the bank (R., p. 362, line 18 to 28).

In referring to the books, the writer will make use of a bookkeeper's symbol in a couple of regards: "B/R" for "Bills receivable," and "C/D" for "Certificate of deposit."

The note alleged to have been given by Messrs. Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg to the bank in order to establish Mr. Mayhew's credit there has been introduced in evidence as Exhibit ——.

This note, though dated January 9th, was not placed of record until April 3rd following. It is then found at page 126 of B/R register, that register simply denoting new notes received from day to day by the bank (R., p. 439, line 4 to 11).

On the same day, April 3, it is found upon the credit side of the note and collection teller's cash book, to which we ask your honor to turn.

This note and collection teller's cash book is kept for the purpose of recording the payment of notes and the entry of new loans—new notes—and is also a record of collections, so the cashier tells us (R., p. 370, line 1 to 9).

Turn to the opposite page as the book lies open, and your honor will note a record of six items which appear to have been charged into the account of the Seattle Shipyards Company.

The explanation of the transaction running through the testimony of Mr. Soelberg and Mr. Lane is that on this day (April 3) the $30,000.00 note was put of record, and "against it" the moneys previously advanced Mr. Mayhew were charged (R., p. 398, line 6 to 18; p. 361, line 30 to p. 362, line 28).

It is to be confessed later by the bank officials that this record at which your honor is looking (p. 46, note and collection teller's cash book for April 3) is bogus (R., p. 483, line 10, to p. 484, line 7, and other instances to be cited later); but it will serve as an index to the amounts furnished Mr. Mayhew and an excuse for running down each individual item.

Let us rearrange them in their numerical order, and they will be found to be arranged in their order as to time:

Item 1. No. 11189	$2,000.00
Item 2. No. 11325	500.00
Item 3. No. 11448	2,500.00
Item 4. No. 11840	500.00
Item 5. No. 11956	394.65
Item 6. No. 11957	21,712.50

Item 1, No. 11189.—This was a certificate of deposit for $2,000.00 furnished Mayhew by the bank on December 4, 1901. (See C/D register of that date.) Mr. Mayhew deposited same on that day in the Puget Sound National Bank (see Exhibit ——, Puget Sound National Bank book) and used the amount in buying claims against the Heckmann & Hanson estate (see Exhibit ——, checks in Puget Sound National Bank Nos. —— to ——).

The item on the books of the bank was charged to bills receivable and credited to certificate of deposit account (R., p. 446, line 15 to 20; see also B/R register, p. 87). It was not charged in any account to Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg, or anyone representing them. (R., p. 446, line 3 to 8.)

It is to be noted by the court that this item was furnished (December 4) before the $30,000 note, put of record by the bank on April 3, 1902, even purports to have been given (January 9).

While in some of the instances occurring in the record the so-called "original" debit slip has attached to it the check of Mr. Mayhew, it is to be noted that the debit slip (Exhibit ——), evidencing this item of $2,000 is one purporting on its face to have been gotten up on April 3, 1902, and contains an interest charge to that date. (See Exhibit No. ——.) The original debit slip, if one ever existed, is not here, nor is any check or anything answering its purpose attached. Mr. Soelberg testifies "I do not know why (where) that is." (R., p. 445, line 18; also, p. 513, line 25, to p. 514, line 2.)

We think we will be able to convince the court that no check was ever given by Mr. Mayhew; that the practice of giving a check for the various items did not arise until after a turmoil was created in the courts, when it was deemed advisable by the bank to create a record to hide its identity with the transaction. We do not think the bank had even a receipt from Mr. Mayhew for the money other than his signature, to be seen in the certificate of deposit register, which served admirably that purpose. As very good evidence of the fact, too, is the notation in "bills receivable," record, p. 87, under the head of remarks, "12/9/01," which Mr. Soelberg interprets for us as meaning that the item was charged to bill receivable on that date. (R., p. 444, line 8 to 13.) It was credited to certificate of deposit account on the 4th (R., p. 442, line 21). In the meantime it was carried by the bank as "cash" in order to force a balance of the books (p. 443, line 17 to 24). Now, we opine that if the bank had been advancing the money on the credit of Kelly, Grondahl and Chilberg and had this note (Mr. Chilberg's check) for the amount it would not have taken the bank four days to make up its mind where to charge the item. That it carried the item as "cash" for that length of time was because, no doubt, in the embryonic stage of the Heckmann & Hanson campaign the bank did not know, because it had not determined, just how it was to treat the expenditures on its own books.

Item 2, No. 11325.—The second item was also a certificate of deposit, and was for $500. It was issued December 24, before the note was given (C/D register, under date Dec. 24). It, too, was deposited by Mr. Mayhew in the Puget Sound National Bank (Exhibit ——, under date Dec. 24) and the proceeds were also used to purchase claims against the estate (Exhibit ——, checks Puget Sound National Bank, Nos. — to —).

The item was treated on the books of the bank precisely as the first item was treated; it was charged to "bills receivable" and credited to the certificate of deposit account (R., p. 452, line 10 to 15; also B/R reg., p. 93). It was not charged to Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg, or any one representing them. (R., p. 452, line 15 to 18.)

The original check or receipt purports to be attached to the debit slip (Exhibit ——), but we think we can show your honor, later, that it was made afterwards and pinned on.

Item 3, No. 11448.—This was a certificate of deposit for $2,500, issued January 10, 1902 (C/D register, date Jan. ——).

The State court, by order, had required a certified check for 10% of the amount of the bid to accompany any and all bids for the Heckmann & Hanson property, and the bids were to be in by January 10th.

Mr. Mayhew proposed to and did accompany his bid with a certified check on the Puget Sound National Bank for $2,412.50 (Exhibit ——). The certificate of deposit from the Scandinavian-American Bank was deposited in the Puget Sound National Bank (Exhibit ——) and the proceeds used to obtain the certified check from the bank to put into court with the bid (or at least report that the receiver had the amount).

This item also was charged to "bills receivable" and credited to certificate of deposit account (R., p. 456, line 11 to 16); and was not charged to Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg (R., p. 456, line 16 to 19).

Item 4, No. 11840.—Again a certificate of deposit for $500 was furnished Mr. Mayhew (C/D register, March 1). It, too, was deposited by him in the Puget Sound National Bank (Exhibit ——). We do not have his checks, but learn from his testimony that he used the proceeds for purposes relating to the Heckmann & Hanson matter.

Again the item was charged to "bills receivable" and credited to certificate of deposit account (R., p. 458, line 1 to 6).

Item 5, No. 11956.—This was a check to the county treasurer for taxes on the Heckmann & Hanson property.

Mr. Mayhew (or whomever he represents) has been the owner of the property since the 7th—some five days, and he is now straightening up some back taxes. One would think that the receiver would have paid the taxes out of the fund received for the property, as nothing was said in the record about the purchaser assuming them.

The item was charged to "bills receivable" and credited to (cash) the clearing house (R., p. 470, line 24 to 30).

Item 6, No. 11957.—This is the certified check for $21,712.50 supposed to have been received by Receiver Larsson on the 7th, when he turned the property over to Mr. Mayhew, and which we have already dwelt upon.

It appears upon B/R register under date of Mch. 14 (received the 12th).

Look at the check (Exhibit ——) and your honor will see it is "No. 1." That is the first check Mayhew ever drew in the matter. "No. 2" is item 5 above (Exhibit ——), drawn the same day, but which happened to get upon the books of the bank first (B/R reg., p. 120). Nos. 3, 4, 5, etc., come later (Exhibits ——, etc.) in regular order. It, therefore, is apparent that up to this time the bank had no "vouchers" or "checks" to attach to the "debit slips," and if any are now in evidence they were produced after they purport to have been.

This check must be considered, too, in connection with the certificate of deposit for the same amount said to have been issued the 12th, but not produced (C/D reg., date Mch. 12). The reason for its issuance (on the books) is apparent. The check itself was needed in the bank to pin to the debit slips that the bank might have the "note" of "Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg." But if the bank were to have the check, the books of the bank then ought to show something as given in return for it. There is no other excuse that can be offered for the trade made. Why should Peter Larsson prefer a certificate of deposit to the certified check of the same bank?

But your honor knows that eventually the C/D to be put in court is the paper of the bank, that the "depositor" is "we", the bank, and it is useless to bring in Larsson's name at all. Therefore, the real question, is why does the bank want a record?

We have already told your honor that on the day this record was made, we served on the State court a temporary writ of prohibition, prohibiting it from distributing the fund the record showed it had on hand. But it hadn't any fund. We have no doubt the bank stood ready to put up the money at any time its attorneys should assure it that they had matters so arranged that it could pull it right down again. But the bank was not openly appearing in the proceedings. Mr. Mayhew, the bookkeeper down stairs, was the ostensible purchaser; and was supposed already to have paid over the money for the property. Moreover, a return was due in a few days to the Supreme Court, in which the superior court must admit the possession of the fund. How, therefore, could these things in the record be made to appear as true, if perchance the proceedings just inaugurated, or any others that Mr. Heckmann's new attorney might inaugurate should cause a "show down?" The record of March 12 solves the problem. Check "No. 1" goes upon the books of the bank as the "note" of Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg, while a certificate of deposit for an equal amount is "issued," and supposed to be in the hands of Pete Larsson.

Next, take up the record made April 3, on page 46 of the note and collection teller's cashbook, where these six items appear to have been charged into the account of the Seattle Shipyards Company. That is the next record appearing anywhere on the books of the bank.

The officers of the bank whose business it was to know about the transactions of that institution and the books evidencing the same were wont to indulge in a lot of platitudes before the special referee about the $30,000.00 note being placed of record in "bills receivable" and the six items being "charged against the note" or "charged against that credit" (R., p. 362, line 14 to 28; also p. 342, line 12, to p. 343, line 29; also p. 370, line 22 to 27; and other instances too numerous to mention).

Now, your honor knows, as well as anyone else, that in order to credit an item and charge against it certain other items an account must exist somewhere into which the item is credited on one side and the other items debited on the other side. But these highly salaried bank officials would have us believe that they can accomplish the same thing by a mental process purely. They told the court that no such account existed (R., p. 344, line 13 to 20; also p. 382, line 13 to 24). The cashier, Mr. Lane, even insisted upon the point with his attention called specifically to the record made at page 46 of the note and collection teller's cashbook, wherein it is indicated as plainly as words can indicate that the items were charged into the account of the Seattle Shipyards Company (R., p. 370, line 17, to p. 371, line 16; also p. 384, line 13, to p. 389, line 10). Indeed, before Mr. Lane was through swearing he had told us that the Seattle Shipyards Company had no account with the bank at that time (R., p. 589, line 7 to 10)

Now, the Seattle Shipyards Company did have an account at that time, and these items were charged to it (R., p. 476, line 9 to 17). After the occurrence in your honor's court, July 16, which resulted in the books of the bank being brought into court where we could examine them for ourselves, no difficulty at all was experienced in finding the account.

Why, then, should these witnesses perjure themselves in the matter? Because the record made in the bank on April 3 was a bogus one, as we have hereinbefore told your honor. Mr. Soelberg confesses it (R., p. 477, line 10 to 17; also p. 483, line 15, to 484, line 11; also p. 495, line 3 to 7). The Seattle Shipyards Company was credited with this $30,000.00 note, and on the same day the total of these six items, $27,832.03, was debited in the account (R., p. 483, line 19, to p. 484, line 7); and a few days later the difference between the two amounts was debited to the account to balance the matter (R., p. 495, line 3 to 11). That is, the account was debited and credited $30,000.00, and the books thereby was not affected. And all the while the items did not belong there (R., p. 495, line 3 to 7).

The books, then, not having been changed, and the items as yet having been charged to no one, the original question is, with us, who was back of Mr. Mayhew and furnishing him the money he was using.

Need we argue the question? Listen. The bank professes to have had in its possession a $30,000 note of Messrs. Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg from January 9 to April 3. It had also expended during that period a total of $27,607.15 (B/R reg., p. 46), if we are to include the "certified" check for $21,712.50. On this April 3 the bank became seized of a desire to charge the matters onto its books "in order to have a record of the transaction"—and in pursuance of that desire it immediately charged the items where it knew they didn't belong. If Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg were back of the transaction, would they not have appeared at this time, if they never had before? It is a waste of time to argue further that M. F. Mayhew and the Scandinavian-American Bank are one.

Once again, the motive actuating those manipulating affairs to make a record upon the bank books was a proceeding initiated in court—and this time initiated in your honor's court. Your honor will note from the files in the bankruptcy proceedings that on that day (April 3) an order was issued against the parties to the proceedings in the State court that they show cause why the fund of $24,125.00 (supposed to be on hand) be not brought to your honor's court for distribution. In the petition for the order we had alleged in effect that the State court had sold the property subject to incumbrances. If your honor will now bear in mind that Mr. Larsson had turned over the property without receiving any consideration therefor, the situation of the parties becomes more than interesting; to one with no interests at stake it would be amusing. They had represented to the different courts that they had sold the property for $24,125.00 when the plan all the while had been for the bank to convert the property, and, buying up all the claims against the estate, to concede payment of them and their mortgages. The record of the State court had been made to show the discharge of the receiver with $21,712.50 on hand—when he had never possessed a penny of the amount. It was being pretended that the money was on deposit in the Scandinavian-American Bank—when, were the bank called upon to show a record of such a deposit, it would have nothing at all to show. The record in the State court must be straightened. But the original plan to straighten it, by the bank loaning a piece of paper to be put into the court with one hand only to be pulled out again with the other "as payment of its claims," was threatened with disaster, by our proposal that the property had been sold subject to incumbrances and that the parties who expected to pull the money down again had absolutely no claim upon it. Moreover, an answer was due to your honor in a couple of days. This was a situation liable to result in an exposure before all was over. Hence, a record was deemed desirable in the bank. Not that a record could be made to defeat the proposition that the property was sold subject to incumbrances, if in fact it was so sold, but one to conceal the actual state of facts were infinitely better, under all the circumstances, than none at all. Accordingly, this note and credit idea was hit upon.

Now, that the exposure has been made, your honor might take a considerable interest in the stories set forth by Messrs. Kelly, Grondahl, Chilberg, Lane, Soelberg, and Mayhew. Your honor would then have a better appreciation of why the record before Special Referee Smith assumed such unexpected proportions. As we told you before, four-fifths of it is devoted to the stories of these parties and the evidence of the bankrupts necessary to break it down, to prove that Mayhew and the bank are one.

Your honor may be loath to believe that the whole story is a lie manufactured from whole cloth. We think, ourselves, that it has some foundation, and we think the evidence of it is to be found in "bills receivable" register, page —, date June 17, the last entry in the book, and also "note and collection teller's cash book," page 109, where it appears that Mr. Kelly did give a note for $30,000 and the same was credited into the account of J. E. Chilberg, agent. If that transaction be bona fide, then the motive for Mr. Kelly swearing fasely is apparent. Mr. Kelly has put $30,000 into the Seattle Shipyards Company property (the Heckmann & Hanson property) since the bank obtained possession of same. Moreover, Mr. Kelly is now the bank itself, owning a controlling interest of its stock. Should the bankrupts prevail, Mr. Kelly stands a good show to lose no small amount. Therefore, it behooves Mr. Kelly to swear a little, and Mr. Kelly swears. Now, read his story, and your honor will note that Mr. Kelly knows absolutely nothing about the acquisition of the property, all the details having been left to Mr. Chilberg; that is, we are told to go to the bank which put through the deal, and which Kelly, by a mental process, "nunc pro tunc," now attempts to clothe with a vesture of agency. Were Kelly to attempt any details, the task would not be an easy one.

Lack of time after the record should have been returned to your honor is responsible for whatever defects may be found in the argument. We have had access to the records in its bound form for the past day and a half, though the same has not been returned to the court. The exhibits, being considerable in number, were not marked in such manner that they can be cited to your honor. It will necessitate some little labor on the part of the special referee, assisted by counsel, to mark the exhibits, and we have been unable to devote any time to that object since the record was bound.

Respectfully submitted.

J. L. Smith.

Filing on back:) No. 2203. In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Heckmann & Hanson, bankrupts. Argument. Original. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Dist. of Washington, July 11, 1904. D. M. Hopkins, clerk; H. M. Walthew, deputy.

Exhibit No. 44½.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, Northern Division.

In the matter of C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, copartners doing business as Heckmann & Hanson, and C. A. Heckmann and M. E. Hanson, individuals, bankrupts. No. 2203. Supplemental argument.

To the Honorable C. H. Hanford, Judge:

We tender this supplemental argument to your honor for a double purpose: First, because we desire to present the bankrupts' cause more fully than we could possibly do in the first argument, owing to the record having been in our hands for so short a period before the same was presented. Second, because we have advised your honor that the record which has become such a burden to the bankrupts, and surprise to the court in its volume, is born of a deliberate determination on the part of those who would oppose these proceedings, to manufacture evidence; and the writer, as an officer of this court, believes that your honor should be placed in full possession of all the facts in regard thereto.

In the certificate of deposit register there are two certificates yet to be discussed—both issued March 24th; one for $19,706.05, the other for $20,064.77; one pretending the amount to have been deposited by Peter L. Larsson, receiver, the other confessing the depositor to have been "we," the Scandinavian-American Bank.

Both these certificates are in evidence, marked Exhibits —— and ——, and correspond in all respects to the data given in the C/D register.

The certificate of $20,064.77 is the one deposited later in the State court. This fact is shown from the indorsement on the C/D itself and from Exhibit ——, being a certified copy of the appearance docket of the State court, wherein is found a statement of the receipts and disbursements of the case, and which the deputy clerk also testified to be an accurate statement of all such receipts and disbursements (R., p. 755, line 5 to 24), and which exhibit shows this identical amount to have been paid into the registry of the State court April 14. This certificate is also the one for which the bank itself appears to have been the depositor. It was "issued" the day the receiver was discharged as such, apparently in readiness to be deposited whenever the attorneys should give the signal—a signal that was never given until the Supreme Court had said whether the State court could distribute the amount (see Exhibit ——, files ex rel. Heckmann vs. Superior court, and Exhibit ——, certified transcript of appearance docket in said case), and not until your honor had also said whether or not this court was to interfere in any wise with the program contemplated there (see journal entry April 5), and indeed not until the parties controlling proceedings in that court were armed with the State court's "order of distribution" (order April 14, files No. 32817), a sort of a written guarantee on the part of that court as to just what it proposed to do with the money should they allow it to get its hands upon the same.

It was 10% on the amount represented by this certificate that the bank paid to Mr. Larsson. The day the receiver was discharged, March 24th, and the day this certificate was "issued," was also the day the bank opened an account with Peter Larsson and issued to him the little pass book (Exhibit ——) with $20,064.45 placed to his credit.

We naturally inquire, What are these certificates, and how can it be that two of them are issued to Peter Larsson upon the same day?

An effort is made in the record, which we will point out as we discuss it, to show a relationship between the certificates themselves, and to show that they are a sequel to the certificate of $21,712.50 "issued" March 12th. A part of the proposition only is true. We will show to your honor that, while the first of the certificates ($19,706.05) is a sequel to the fictitious record already made in the bank, the second ($20,064.77) evidences an absolutely different matter; and that there is no relationship between the two.

It is self-evident that the amount of the first certificate is the difference between the $21,712.50 pretended to have been on deposit in the bank at the time, and the 10% ($2,006.45) of the other certificate credited Mr. Larsson on his pass book.

Mr. Larsson would have us believe as the explanation of this record that he got this $2,006.45 on the certificate of March 12, and had issued this new certificate of $19,706.05 for the balance; that the $2,006.45 was just the amount he needed to pay his debts, his own and Mr. Jones' salary, etc. But his evidence is useless, because it only shows us that either he has no knowledge of the matter at all, or he is very unwilling to tell what he knows (R., p. 566. line 14 to p. 575, line 26; also p. 578, l. 11 to 579, l. 30). For instance, his assent to the leading question of counsel that it was the C/D for $19,706.05 that went into the registry of the court (R., p. 579, line 12 to 16) shows him giving his testimony with no thought as to the actual facts, but simply, parrotlike, putting into the record what his counsel would have him put in.

Mr. Larsson later "explains" the relation of the certificate to the other one of the same date in this way: That he had a balance of $338.45 in the Washington National Bank the day he was discharged; that he had the sum of $20.27 in cash; that he took this certificate for $19,706.05, drew a check for $338.45 in the Washington National Bank, added the $20.27 cash, deposited the three items in the latter bank, and received therefor the certificate for $20,064.77. (R., p. 626, line 14, to p. 629, line 21.) Those figures do make up the amount. But your honor must note that this "explanation" comes after a night's conference with the witness' attorney, Mr. Jones. The day before Mr. Larsson testified that it was the C/D for $19,706.05 that he put into court (R., p. 579, line 12 to 16), and that he did not know what he did with the balance he had left in the Washington National Bank (R., p. 573, line 10 to 21), but he was certain he did not deposit it in the Scandinavian-American Bank. (R., p. 574. line 5 to 10.)

Mr. Larsson, it is true, did in March 24 give the Scandinavian-American Bank a check for the amount of $338.45, his balance in the Washington National Bank. The check is in evidence. But it is only a coincidence that the amount comes within $20.27 of equalling the difference between the two certificates.

The item of $20.27 "cash," too, is purely imaginary. Capt. Larsson confesses it in as plain words as could possibly be used. (R., p. 633, line 1, to p. 634, line 2.) Your honor can note he says he put in cash, simply because he don't know what else to say. Indeed, the whole of Mr. Larsson's testimony will convince your honor that we are to look to him for no assistance in untangling matters.

Well, then, what was this certificate for $19,706.05? We think your honor must be convinced it was "issued" simply for the purposes of subtraction; that is, the certificate went through the books of the bank for the purpose of subtracting $2,006.45, the amount paid Mr. Larsson, from $21,712.50, the amount it was pretended Mr. Larsson had at the time on deposit there. This thing of paying a price to the receiver of a court, and paying it in such manner that evidence thereof should ever afterwards exist in black and white, is a thing not commending itself heartily to a prudent mind; and it was, no doubt, deemed wise within the bank to carry the record in its books, which up to this time was a fictitious one, anyhow, a little farther. Why not subtract this payment made Mr. Larsson from his "deposit"? Then, were the transaction ever called into question—as it is to-day—the bank would be in a position to say, "We know nothing about Mr. Larsson's affairs. He had $21,712.50 in the bank and for reasons of his own took out $2,006.45 in cash and a certificate of deposit for the balance, $19,706.05."

It is asking too much of an intelligent being to have him believe that Peter Larsson would furnish three items, a C/D for $19,706.05, a check for $338.45, cash in the sum of $20.27, for a certificate of deposit for $20,064.77, and that the bank, in issuing the latter certificate, would then recite therein and upon its books that the depositor was "we," the bank itself. This fact, with what has gone before, shows conclusively that there is no relationship between the two certificates.

We must therefore determine for ourselves what the latter certificate is.

We are satisfied in our own mind, and we think we can convince the court, that the same represents in amount the amount the bank had invested in the Heckmann & Hanson property in one way and another; that its purpose was to furnish the State court with figures to place upon its books to straighten the record which up to that time showed the delivery of the property without any consideration; that the passing of it through the court was the culmination of a plan of those controlling proceedings in the State court whereby the property in its possession and under its control might be turned over to the bank, in return for which the bank in its own mind would concede payment of the items owing it by Heckmann & Hanson.

We know that the bank had invested in the Heckmann & Hanson plant $16,531.18, because that is the amount it pulled out of the registry of the State court on its mortgages, as shown by Exhibit ——. We know, too, that it spent $5,500 in a campaign after claims against the estate, because that is the amount of the certificates it advanced Mr. Mayhew and which he put in the Puget Sound National Bank and used. Those items make a total of $22,031.18 expended. We know, on the other hand, that the bank pulled down again from the State court a dividend of $1,450.51 on its (Mayhew's) claims, because it is so admitted by indorsement on Exhibit ——, the alleged $30,000 note, and shown by Exhibit ——, the statement of disbursements in the case; and we know, too, that it received from Mr. Larsson $338.45 cash, because that is shown by his check on the Washington National Bank. These two items make a total of $1,788.96, which, subtracted from the expenditures, leaves a net investment for the bank in the Heckmann & Hanson estate of $20,242.22, or less than $200 more than the amount of this certificate. This excess of $200, we can readily imagine, is discounted by the unused portion of the last deposit in the Puget Sound National Bank, which, so far as we could learn, was not entirely used. Any small discrepancy can well be accounted for, too, from the fact that the dividend to be received again from the deposit to be made in the State court was at that time a thing of the future, and could only be estimated. We thus feel certain in saying that this certificate represents in amount the amount the bank had expended in the Heckmann & Hanson matter.

Of course, the bank was aware in depositing the amount in court that the same would be withdrawn again on its claims against the estate. The order of distribution made that certain. The only object, therefore, it could have had in furnishing the money to be put into court and pulled right out again, would be to get the figures on to the books of the registry, that the record of the court, left unfinished by the receiver when he was discharged, might be completed.

The bank, of course, which thus became possessed of the property, ever afterwards has said nothing of the debts owing it by Heckmann & Hanson. It is quite satisfied to call quits; $60,000 worth of property for $20,000 was not a bad piece of manipulation from a financial standpoint.

But the fact that the bank furnished the money to make a "show," that Pete Larsson ought to have furnished in good faith, is proof conclusive that the alleged sale was a fraudulent one. And we think the court can do no better than accept as true the proposition laid down by us at page 12 of the original argument: That the sale was the culmination of a scheme on the part of the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle to convert the property of Heckmann & Hanson to its own use; that absolutely no money was ever offered or received for the property; that the possession of the property was accomplished by the bank through the connivance and with the assistance of the receiver of the State court, for which assistance the receiver was paid a price by said Scandinavian-American Bank—being 10 per cent on its investment in the property.

Let us recur once more to the record made by the bank on April 3, to treat briefly of one subject that logically should have been treated in our former argument. We refer to the so-called "debit slips" which your honor finds among the exhibits.

These "debit slips" are nothing but contrivances of the bank calculated to conceal the truth underlying a given transaction. And they are admirably suited to the purpose. They serve well as memoranda of amounts, and being so susceptible to change, even to the extent of destroying one and substituting another, they make possible a future "explanation" upon any theory suited to the demands arising. Being charged to "bills receivable," and no names going of record on the bank books, they can on a moment's notice be charged to anyone whom the bank can induce to say, "Why, I was back of the transaction all the while; I had established my credit at the bank and these checks are the checks of my agent and are evidences of my indebtedness."

The ones in evidence so amply illustrate their possibilities. They were produced on April 3 for the express purpose of charging the items where they did not belong. Each one recites, "Charge Seattle Shipyards Company," and not a one belonged to the Seattle Shipyards Company (R., p. 495, line 3 to 7). Obviously, then, these "debit slips" took the place of others on April 3. What "others" is of no moment, so long as the court appreciates how easily the change can be made by the system. If we were shown others—and we are, the Seattle Shipyards Company slips being attached in some cases to the "original"—we would have no assurance that the "others" were the originals.

There were six further and different items expended by the bank before it again made up a "record" on its books. These items are found in B/R register under the appropriate dates, and the exhibits evidencing the same are also in evidence.

In the note and collection teller's cashbook, at page 109, where appears a record of transactions for June 17, 1902 (to which we ask your honor to turn), occurs another record similar in time to the one made April 3. J. W. Kelly and J. E. Chilberg appear to have given a note to the bank for $30,000, and on the other side of the page and against this note is charged again, among other items, the net amount expended by the bank up to April 3, being $26,321.37. The other items charged into that account are those expended since that date, as recorded in B/R register.

The note itself is not in evidence, but what purports to be a record of same appears on the last page of the B/R. register.

Mr. Soelberg, the then cashier, treats of this matter, at page 523, line 7, to page 527, line 28, of the record; which being interpreted means this: That Mr. Kelly and Mr. Chilberg (Mr. Grondahl having dropped out) gave a new note in renewal of the note of Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg, dated January 9; that this new note, at the direction of Mr. Chilberg, was credited into the account of "J. E. Chilberg, agent;" and that Mr. Chilberg, "agent," then gave his check to the bank for $28,229.02 to cover the items advanced to date of the check, including those items expended before April 3.

We are immediately struck with wonder that these items can never get to where they belong. The "J. E. Chilberg, agent," account is one that has been running in the bank for ten years (R., p. 524, line 25 to 28). What the character of the account is we do not know, but it can hardly be such an one as to hold appropriately the record of items advanced in regard to the Heckmann & Hanson matter, unless it is in reality an investment account of some nature carried in the bank by that name. However, we are not going to concern ourselves or burden the court with the matter further than as this record goes to emphasize the fictitiousness of the one made April 3.

The amount of $26,321.37 on the left-hand page represents the amount expended by the bank to April 3, less the dividend of $1,450.51 received by the bank (Mayhew) April 16 from the amount paid into court a couple of days before. This is calculated for us upon the back of the note itself (see Exhibit ——). But it does not total the amount of the items as recorded April 3. That record fails to credit the dividend. For that reason the record of April 3 was not brought verbatim into the one of June 17. But the very failure to carry forward the record as already made is indisputable evidence of the abandonment of the record itself.

What the new record may be we do not know, nor care. What we desired to show to your honor was that the record made by the bank up to the time the property was turned over and the money alleged to have been received therefor again distributed was a spurious one. That we have shown. The motive, also, we have furnished. It was stated in our original argument, at page 26, namely, that the bank was attempting to hide its own identity with the proceedings and, incidentally, show a good faith transaction in the sale made by the receiver to "M. F. Mayhew."

With the items in the new record the court is not concerned, with a single exception. The check for $150 dated April 17 (Exhibit ——) and recorded in B/R register at page 132 represents the amount paid Mr. Reynolds, and about which we told your honor in our first argument. It is check "No. 3," payable to cash, and on its face recites "To C. A. Reynolds, Hanson settlement." The B/R register, under head of "Remarks," has the same notation.

The way this money came to be paid is told by Mr. Mayhew (record, p. 284, line 20 to p. 285, line 11).

How unfortunate, not to say in bad taste, they were in choosing words to designate the transaction. It would have been so much more in keeping with their exalted motives to have noted it "Contribution," "Sick benefit," or the like, upon the records. "Hanson settlement" is so prosaic.

Had we time now we would like to take up the record with the idea of showing your honor specific instances of perjury committed by the witnesses. A discussion of those matters is not necessary to our present object of getting the estate reopened, but it would tend materially to show what circuitous methods it was necessary to employ to get plain, ordinary, and well-known facts into the record, consequently the reason for a cumbersome record, the responsibility for the making of which we feel has been placed upon us in your honor's mind.

For instance, Mr. Mayhew says that the reason he tendered with his bid a check on the Puget Sound National Bank was that he had another fund of Kelly, Grondahl, and Chilberg on deposit there, and it was convenient to use it (R., p. 240, line 5, to p. 241, line 21). When your honor has learned that certificates of deposit were furnished Mr. Mayhew by the Scandinavian-American Bank, and deposited by him in the Puget Sound National Bank and used.

Mr. Soelberg, too, attached Mr. Grondahl's name to the $30,000 note and then swore that he did not know for what purpose the money was to be used (R., p. 341, line 14 to 18; also, line 30 to p. 342, line 7).

Mr. Lane, the present cashier, just escaped an order of court directing him to bring in the books of the bank showing the account of the Seattle Shipyards Company by swearing that the Seattle Shipyards Company had no account (R., p. 369, line 15, to page 371, line 16, and p. 381, line 20 to p. 339, line 11). When, after the occurrence before your honor July 16, the books were produced and the account of the Seattle Shipyards put in evidence.

We again commend to your honor, too, the reading of the testimony of some of the principals offering the testimony relative to the establishment of the "Credit" at the bank. For instance, the testimony of Mr. Soelberg, which occasioned the reference back to your honor from Special Referee Smith (R., p. 335, line 8, to p. 357, line 20) and the entire testimony—it is short—of Mr. Kelly.

In the petition to reopen the estate, which was referred to Judge Smith, we alleged further that the property, if sold at all, was sold subject to incumbrances. We have no patience with the proposition that the "sale" was in any wise valid. But we offer this further fact to show that, even if the court should take a contrary view the estate should be reopened for the purpose of administering this item.

Proof of the proposition is found by reference to the various orders of the State court had in reference to the "sale," from the time it was first recommended until its confirmation. For the guidance of the court we set out portions of the orders.

The second report of the receiver, filed November 25th, recommends the sale and suggests as follows: "That parties having liens upon said property should be absolutely protected as though they were foreclosing their liens, being allowed to bid upon the properties upon which they have liens and apply on such bid or bids the full amount of their liens." Also "that the order of this court should be that each party holding liens against said property be allowed to bid such amount for said property as to them should seem best and apply on said bids the amount of their lien or liens * * * and that unless a greater or larger bid shall be received than the bid of the parties so holding said liens that the party holding said liens shall be allowed to purchase the same for the full amount of their liens, adding thereto, however, upon parcel 'B' $1,900.40 expended by your receiver in the betterments and further adding thereto the costs and expenses of this receivership not already paid, together with $1,000 borrowed from the Washington National Bank under order of this court, for the purpose of conducting affairs of this receivership."

The order approving the second report, filed December 3rd, following, provides that the "second report of the receiver be and the same is in all things approved," and "that a sale be had of all the property to the copartners Heckmann & Hanson belonging as in said report advised and according to the terms and conditions of the order of sale this day made, rendered, and entered."

The order of sale on that day made, provided in respect to the liens as follows: "That any and all parties having liens upon any parcel or parcels or the whole of said property be allowed to bid upon said property and to apply on their bid or bids the amount due upon their lien or liens; that unless a greater or larger bid shall be received for any parcel of said property subject to any such lien the party holding such lien will be allowed to purchase the same for the full amount of such lien or liens. * * * Le this order be entered and such sale made in accordance herewith."

The notice of sale and call for bids by the receiver pursuant to the order of sale followed in all respect the order so entered, using the exact words of the order.

January 14th, Mr. Mayhew presented to the receiver his bid reading, "pursuant to order heretofore entered, and to notice duly published, and in accordance with the terms of said order and notice, the undersigned submits the following bid: to wit, the undersigned will pay for and hereby bids the total sum of $24,125.00 subject to the conditions of said order and notice."

The third report of the receiver filed on the same day with the bid of Mr. Mayhew recommends the acceptance of Mr. Mayhew's bid; and the order approving the third report and directing the sale, filed March 7, directs that the receiver complete the sale, make good and sufficient deeds and bill of sale for the property, and receive therefor the sum of $24,125.00.

Apparent effort was made to provide for those holding liens, that they might bid and apply their liens upon their bids. But Mr. Mayhew, the successful bidder, was not a lien holder, nor did he sustain any relation to a lien holder—so they all tell us.

There is no place in the record where any pretense is made that the property was being sold free from incumbrances; and in the absence of any special provision to that effect, the rule is too well known to need the citation of authorities that property is sold subject to incumbrances. The doctrine of caveat emptor applies in full force to judicial sales.

Moreover, the special provisions in the various orders with regard to lien holders would indicate a deliberate intent to grant no special privileges.

The point that the alleged sale by the State court is void in point of law, we will try now to make.

Section 70A of the bankruptcy act reads as follows:

"The trustee of the estate of a bankrupt, upon his appointment and qualification, and his successor or successors, if he shall have one or more, upon his or their appointment and qualification, shall in turn be vested by operation of law with the title of the bankrupt as of the date he was adjudged a bankrupt."

This section is plain, and must be interpreted to mean what it says. But if the title to the bankrupts' property vests in the trustee in bankruptcy, then only the trustee, acting in accordance with the orders of the court, can divest it.

"It is as true of the present law as it was of that of 1867 that the filing of the petition is a caveat to all the world, and in effect an attachment and injunction, Bank vs. Sherman, 101 U. S., 107; and on adjudication title to the bankrupts' property became vested in the trustee, Secs. 70, 21e, with actual or constructive possession, and placed in the custody of the bankruptcy court." (Mueller vs. Nugent, decided by U. S. Supreme Court, 7 Am. Bank. Rep., 234.)

We are aware there are cases wherein State courts have sold property and passed good title, after the owners of the property had become bankrupts and while proceedings in bankruptcy were pending; but in every such instance an examination of the facts will show that the State court had some purpose in view, and which purpose invariably involved the foreclosure of a lien of some character. Numerous instances could be cited illustrating the point, but the proposition seems so self-evident that to do so would unnecessarily encumber these pages.

The rule sustaining the action of the court in those instances is an old one, namely, that where two courts have concurrent jurisdiction over a particular subject-matter, that one which first takes cognizance of a cause falling thereunder will retain such jurisdiction to the end. And yet this rule, when applied in connection with bankruptcy proceedings, is necessarily limited. Using the words of a United States court:

"In cases of concurrent jurisdiction the court first obtaining possession of the property administers it; but where that court loses jurisdiction, and it is transferred by operation of valid laws to a court of the United States, which has exclusive jurisdiction of the subject-matter, the question becomes one of obedience to the paramount authority of the Constitution, and comity can have no influence in determining the right." (In re Tune, 8 Am. Bank Rep., 285.)

Further:

"When the only right of possession by a State court of attached property is based on an attachment lien, which is annulled by the adjudication in bankruptcy, the State court loses all jurisdiction of the rem, which is transferred into the exclusive jurisdiction of the court of bankruptcy. There is no longer any right of possession in the officer of the State court who then holds as bailee for the person rightfully entitled to possession, and becomes a trespasser if he fails to deliver on proper demand." (In re Tune, 8 Am. Bank Rep., 285.)

But in that case the court was foreclosing a lien, which, but for bankruptcy proceedings afterwards inaugurated, was a valid lien. The case at bar is not even that strong. In this case, the State court at the date of adjudication was caught with the naked, legal possession of the bankrupts' property, but with absolutely no purpose in view in attempting to sell same. It was not foreclosing a mortgage; it was not perfecting any lien—attachments, mechanic's or other. It had appointed a receiver in a suit upon an account stated, wherein absolutely no equities were shown or attempted to be shown. The proceedings could not even be termed insolvency proceedings, for in the affidavits supporting the motion for the appointment of the receiver it had been made to appear that the assets of the firm were four times in excess of their liabilities. The complaint that was made to the court to justify it in the exercise of its equity jurisdiction in appointing a receiver was, in effect, that this same Scandinavian-American Bank, even then a creditor of the firm holding mortgages on their property, had made and was making wanton and wicked attacks through the courts upon the business, credits, and assets of Heckmann & Hanson, which business, credits, and assets could be protected by the appointment of a receiver; and that if a receiver were appointed (thus stopping those attacks) he could soon pay off all the debts the firm owed from the profits the plant was then making. The order made appointing Larsson as receiver provided that he should take possession of the property and assets, manage the same, and carry on and operate the business (see complaint, motion, affidavits of Curtiss and Heckmann, and order appointing receiver in files No. 32817).

We do not purpose to ask your honor to determine whether the State court, under its common law jurisdiction had power to appoint a receiver over a partnership for the avowed purpose of continuing the business of the partnership and the implied purpose of interfering with a creditor in the collecting of his claim; nor whether the Washington statutes are broad enough to accomplish a similar object. We have emphasized the situation merely to propose the question, What was the duty of that court finding itself with the property in its possession under such circumstances as those related, when the owners of the property were adjudicated bankrupts and that fact called to its attention? In view of the section of the bankruptcy law before quoted, the question answers itself, and we are not surprised that the authorities are uniform in holding that the State court should surrender the property.

But whether or not the State courts followed its duty, what room is there to contend that it could pass the title to the property—a title that had vested in the trustee in bankruptcy the moment the order of adjudication was entered? A "sale" may be one way of letting go the property, but a sale by the State court under such circumstances passes no title.

Now, what excuse is offered for this alleged sale? Has your honor heard any? Did special referee Smith hear any? We never have. There is no excuse, and none can be offered.

Reluctant as your honor may be to accept the facts, and embarrassing as it may be to counsel to state them, the truth remains that the receivership proceedings had been appropriated bodily by a set of lawyers in the employ of the Scandinavian-American Bank, bent upon the confiscation of the property. There is no other way of stating the situation accurately. The original character of the proceedings had been changed. The parties to the suit had been obliterated. There was no longer any plaintiff; there were no longer any defendants, except in names. The plaintiff had abandoned the suit, having arranged for the payment of his claim by the bonding company on the bond of the receiver (R., p. 117, line 17 to 30); the defendants had been sold out by their counsel to the bank and to the bonding company. Moreover, the receiver himself, and his attorney, had abandoned the service of the court which appointed them, and were secretly drawing their pay from the bank. Nor was there even a creditor left to raise a voice in opposition to any measure proposed by the bank, for the bank had bought up practically all the creditors; those it had not bought up had an arrangement made with the bonding company whereby their claims were to be paid in full (R., p. 200, line 5 to 13). Thus, the bank, though in no wise a party to the record, was in absolute control of the proceedings. It proposed, then, to appropriate to itself the property in the control of the court just as an ordinary robber in a dark alley might appropriate to himself the property on the person of his victim. The course pursued has been pointed out, and we shall not reiterate it.

Infinitely better would be the situation of the parties, from a moral standpoint—the legal situation would not be changed—had they taken a judgment in the case and sold the property to pay the judgment. But a judgment has not been taken to this day (R., p. 755, line 1 to 5). Some charity, too, might be extended had creditors moved in the matter. But, with two exceptions, no creditors ever appeared in the case until after the "sale" had been had, and when a division of the proceeds was proposed. Then it was made evident that the bank owned practically all the claims against the estate.

If your honor will but grasp the situation in the State court, it will become perfectly evident to your honor, as it is to the writer, why a coterie of lawyers, such as appeared in you honor's court, upon oral argument will spend upward of a whole year opposing proceedings in a matter in which no relief is asked against them, and in which they are not even referred to, and, indeed, in which they can not—or dare not—state to your honor what their interest in the matter may be.

The receiver and his attorney are earning that ten per cent.

To summarize, we have tried to establish these points:

First. That the sale of the property by the State court was void, both in law and in fact. Therefore, that the entire estate is in this court for administration.

Second. That the attorney for the bankrupts putting them into bankruptcy sold out his clients for a price to the party gaining possession of the property, and to the bonding company on the bond of the receiver of the State court. Therefore, that the "respondents" are estopped from asserting any advantage to be gained from the fact that proceedings in the bankruptcy court were at a standstill from the date of adjudication until after the alleged sale.

Third. That if any sale of the property was made by the State court, it was made subject to incumbrances. Therefore, that the $24,125.00, the alleged price of the property, belongs in the estate of Heckmann & Hanson, in bankruptcy, for distribution to the unsecured creditors who have proven their claims and, after them, to the bankrupts.

Fourth. That the creditors proving claims and controlling the bankruptcy proceedings before they were declared closed, did so for the purpose of stifling proceedings in your honor's court. Therefore, that the act of Congress vouchsafing to any citizen of the United States who owes debts the benefits of that act (bankruptcy act, § 4a) has been violated.

The proof of any one of these propositions is sufficient to warrant your honor in reopening the estate.

The law governing the situation we believe to be § 2, sub. 8, of the bankruptcy act, which reads that the courts of bankruptcy shall have power to "close estates, whenever it appears that they have been fully administered, by approving the final accounts and discharging the trustees, and reopen them whenever it appears they were closed before being fully administered."

The cases found in which the power has been invoked are few. We know of but two.

"Where it is desired to reopen the estate of a bankrupt after it has been closed and the trustee discharged, the first step is properly the making of an order for that purpose.

"To authorize the court to reopen the estate of a bankrupt under bank. 1898, sec. 2, subd. 8, it should 'appear' by some satisfactory evidence that there are assets unadministered, although no formal or technical procedure is required." (In re Newton, 107 Fed., 429.)

We also refer your honor to the case of Matter of Fulton G. Paine, 11 Am. Bank. Rep., 351, for a discussion of the question of reopening estates. We believe the case will be found suggestive, though the facts were entirely different from the case at bar.

In conclusion, we wish to say to your honor that we believe the one thing that really occasioned the reference to Judge Smith was what we had said in our petition relative to Judge Hoyt. Our position all along has been, as your honor knows, that matters touching the conduct of officers of the court are things to be investigated independently of those things giving rise to rights of litigants. However, we have not urged the position strongly, preferring to show our good faith to the court rather than to seem to want to hedge on anything we might have said.

But we have not presented in our argument anything touching on the conduct of the referee, for two reasons: We fear to exhaust the patience of the court with too lengthy an argument; and we believe, too, from your honor's attitude at the time of oral argument, that we may assume your honor would have personal matters come up at a time special.

However, if your honor deems the truth of the statements made relative to the conduct of the referee in bankruptcy to be of any moment in determining the right of the bankrupts to have their estate reopened, then we ask that your honor so indicate before a decision on the matter is reached.

Respectfully submitted.

J. L. FINCH.

(Filing on back:) 2203. In the district court of the United States for the district of Washington, northern division. In the matter of Heckmann & Hanson, bankrupts. Supplemental argument. Original. Filed in the U. S. district court, dist. of Washington, July 11, 1904. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. H. M. Watthew, deputy.

[Exhibit No. 45 not printed.]

EXHIBIT NO. 46.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE IN RE JEROLD L. FINCH.

To Honorable Cornelius H. Hanford, judge of the U. S. District Court for the District of Washington, Northern Division:

The undersigned were on the 14th day of July, 1904, appointed at a meeting of the bar of your court to investigate the matters arising in connection with the charges made by Jerold L. Finch, Esq., against Richard A. Ballinger, Esq., and other members of the bar of your court, and the petition for disbarment of said Jerold L. Finch filed by certain members of the bar. Prior to our appointment both the master in chancery and your honor had found, and the bar by resolution had expressed their belief, that the charges made by Mr. Finch against the other members of the bar were entirely groundless. By the terms of our appointment we were directed to investigate the matters above specified so far as they might have a bearing upon the petition filed for the disbarment of Mr. Finch and to take such proceedings after that investigation as we might be advised. Upon consideration we have decided to submit to you this report of our proceedings and findings in the matter. As to whether or not it is best that another meeting of the bar should be called in connection with the matter, or that some other appropriate action should be taken upon this report, we most respectfully submit to your judgment.

Upon the appointment of the committee, Mr. E. C. Hughes was elected chairman and Mr. John H. Powell, secretary. By the courtesy of the court all of the records and files of the different actions and proceedings in this court having to do with the affairs and litigation of Heckman & Hanson, and the proceedings connected with the charges above referred to were placed in the hands of the committee, and at the suggestion of the committee Mr. Jerold L. Finch attended before the committee at three separate meetings thereof, and with the aid of the records and files above referred to made a somewhat extended statement regarding said matters. He also freely submitted to examination and so far as we are able to judge answered fully and freely as to all matters concerning which we desired information.

After fully hearing Mr. Finch, and without having heard anyone else, the committee were unanimously of the opinion that the charges made by Mr. Finch against the other members of the bar were entirely wanting in any substantial foundation. Thereupon we caused to be called before the committee Richard Saxe Jones, Esq., James B. Metcalfe, Esq., and Richard A. Ballinger, Esq., and heard from each of them a short statement, and propounded to them such inquiries as seemed to us pertinent for the purpose of advising the committee as to whether or not the groundless charges that had been made by Mr. Finch had been maliciously made. Having heard the statements of these gentlemen and carefully considered the whole matter, we have unanimously reached and hereby submit the following as our conclusions:

1. That the charges made by Mr. Finch against the several members of the bar were all without foundation and were made without a sufficient investigation of the facts.

2. We find that Mr. Finch made the charges believing and relying in great measure upon erroneous statements made to him by his client, Mr. Heckman. We think those statements, taken with certain facts and circumstances connected with the Heckman & Hanson litigation, were sufficient to cause Mr. Finch to make a careful investigation to determine their truth or falsity. They were wholly insufficient without such an investigation to justify the charges made, and in making them the conclusions reached by Mr. Finch were reached by illogical, erratic, and perverted reasoning.

3. In our opinion a member of the bar can not, nor should he, be disbarred for making unfounded charges of fraud against other lawyers if the charges are made with an honest purpose and without malice. We therefore find that no proceedings for disbarment should be taken against Mr. Finch. Nevertheless, we believe that in making such charges without any substantial foundation or reasonable ground for believing that they could be established, Mr. Finch justly deserves the censure of the bar of the Federal court.

4. From the testimony before us we think that certain remarks made by your honor at the time Mr. Finch applied for an order requiring the Scandinavian American Bank to produce its books may have induced the belief in Mr. Finch's mind that, having taken the order, he was then compelled either to maintain his charges or himself suffer disbarment. If such a belief existed in Mr. Finch's mind, which we think probable, it may afford some palliation of his conduct in further prosecuting the matter after the close of the hearing before the master. It would be indeed an unfortunate rule that a member of the bar preferring charges against other members must fully establish them on pain of disbarment, and we do not think that your honor intended to announce any such rule. If the charges made by Mr. Finch had been supported by any reasonable proof, or if the facts before him had, after a proper investigation by him, justified him in believing that they could be proved, it would have been his duty to promptly lay the matter before the district court. The persistency and ability which he has manifested in attempting to establish these charges would in that event have been as commendable as their misuse is now censurable.

Respectfully submitted.

E. C. HUGHES,
L. C. GILMAN,
JOHN H. POWELL,
L. T. TURNER,
JOHN ARTHUR,
Committee.

(Endorsed on cover:) Filed in the U. S. District Court, Dist. of Washington, Sept. 6, 1904. R. M. Hopkins, clerk.

EXHIBIT NO. 47.

ACTION OF THE BAR ASSOCIATION OF SEATTLE IN RE J. L. FINCH.

Whereas in a recent public print the personal integrity and professional character of the Honorable Richard A. Ballinger, a member and former president of this association, has been wantonly and viciously assailed by a recital of alleged facts touching his personal relations and conduct in matters culminating in and growing out of certain litigation in the Federal court at Seattle;

And whereas in said public print it is made to appear that the judicial investigation as to the conduct of R. A. Ballinger by the special referee in bankruptcy and the investigation by the bar of the Federal courts of Seattle were not made in good faith;

And whereas it appears by the records and files in cause No. 2203, in the United States district court, sitting in bankruptcy at Seattle, that in a petition of the bankrupts to reopen that cause the professional relations and conduct of R. A. Ballinger and others in the matters above referred to were assailed; that the court made an order referring that petition to a special referee in the person of the late Eben Smith, Esq., then standing master in chancery of the United States circuit court at Seattle, to hear evidence and to report among other things with respect to such conduct of the accused; that said hearing before said referee extended from April 24, 1903, to August 28th, 1903, during which nineteen days were occupied in hearing the testimony of twenty-one witnesses, the testimony for the bankrupts alone covering over 886 typewritten pages; that after the close of the testimony on January 25, 1904, the referee filed his report in said cause No. 2203, wherein he found among other things, as follows:

"And as to the conduct of the officers and attorneys of this court who have been engaged in these several matters, who appear to be accused by the allegations of the petition, such seeming accusations are not well founded in fact and are not sustained by the proof."

That pending the hearing before the referee, upon application of the bankrupts for an order of court compelling the production of certain books of the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, and upon the statement of the bankrupts' attorney, in open court, that if given access to those books he could bring proof to disbar said R. A. Ballinger, an order was entered directing the production of the books before the referee; that in the report of the referee the court's attention is called to certain excerpts of the testimony of the bankrupts' attorney, J. L. Finch, a witness before the referee, which are attached to said report and are in part as follows:

"Question. * * * Just tell the commissioner (special referee) what you find in those books or papers of the Scandinavian-American Bank that would disbar R. A. Ballinger?

"Answer. * * * I state that I do not think I found anything."

That after said report had been filed, and before the court had found opportunity to review the proceedings, the attorney for the bankrupts presented to the court a petition for the disbarment of R. A. Ballinger and others, action upon which was stayed by the court until a disposition of the bankrupts' petition to reopen the bankruptcy proceedings upon the affirmance or rejection of the report of the referee; that on July 11th following, the court filed its written memorandum decision, consisting of seventeen typewritten pages, on the petition, the referee's report, and the testimony on behalf of the bankrupts transcribed and filed, wherein the court, after reviewing the whole matter at great length, and after declaring that in view of the assault upon character, it deemed it unwise to shun the labor of an investigation by denying the petition upon technical grounds, and that its object had been to ascertain the merits of the controversy, and to that end technical rules of pleading and practice had not been permitted to have controlling effect, finds that there is no equity whatever in the petition of the bankrupts to reopen the administration of the case, and further finds as follows:

"The petitioner accuses Judge Ballinger of having betrayed the petitioners while acting in the double capacity of attorney for them and as an attorney and officer of the Scandinavian-American Bank. It is claimed that he induced Heckman & Hanson to borrow five thousand dollars from the bank, and with the design of ruining Heckman & Hanson he induced Heckman to sign a writing which he did not understand, which afterwards proved to be a general power of attorney, and then taking advantage of Heckman's absence, executed a mortgage to the bank to secure a short time loan, and induced Hanson to join in the execution of the mortgage. This accusation is not supported by a scintilla of evidence. On the contrary, it appears that he, in connection with Judge Ballinger, applied to the bank for a loan of five thousand dollars to be furnished when other arrangements were completed for the purchase of a certain interest in the premises upon which the shipyard is located, four thousand five hundred dollars of the money being required to pay for that interest. Heckman was anxious to have the purchase completed when the conditions were favorable, and, having to make a trip to Alaska, he left the business in charge of Judge Ballinger, with power to act, and not only executed, but himself wrote the power of attorney under which Judge Ballinger acted for him in executing the mortgage, and all of the money loaned was used by the firm as Heckman designed that it should be used" (which transaction is illustrated in said public print by a photograph of the note in question). And the court also concurs in the findings and conclusions of the referee that the accusations against R. A. Ballinger and others are not well founded in fact and are not sustained by the proof.

That from the formal order denying the petition to reopen the case the bankrupts sought a review in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, upon a petition for revision of proceedings of the district court below, pursuant to the provisions of the bankruptcy act, which petition for revision of proceedings was denied and the proceedings dismissed at petitioners' cost by the circuit court of appeals.

That immediately following the filing of the memorandum decision, the judge of the district court called a meeting of the bar of the Federal courts at Seattle, for July 14th, which was attended by about 100 members of the bar, to whom he submitted a consideration of the charges against R. A. Ballinger and others and the charges in the meantime filed against the bankrupts' attorney, J. L. Finch. This bar meeting, after hearing and considering in full the report of the referee and the memorandum decision of the court confirming that report, adopted a resolution fully and completely exonerating R. A. Ballinger and others accused with him, and declaring it the judgment of the bar that each and all of them acted fairly in the entire proceedings involved and were wholly free from blame, and that there was not a scintilla of evidence to sustain any charges brought against them; and upon motion, a committee of five was appointed by the chair to investigate and report to the court on the matter of the charges against the bankrupts' attorney, J. L. Finch. All as appears by the written report of the chairman and secretary of said bar meeting, filed in said cause No. 2203. That the court, on the 26th day of July, 1904, having received the written report of the bar meeting, ordered to be spread upon the minutes of the court its own findings and order exonerating R. A. Ballinger and others accused with him from the charges laid against them.

That the committee of the bar meeting on the 6th of September, 1904, filed its written report with the court upon the charges against J. L. Finch, the bankrupt's attorney, wherein it appears that, upon the statement of J. L. Finch alone, the committee were of the opinion that the charges made by him against R. A. Ballinger and others were entirely wanting in any substantial foundation and that in making them the conclusions reached by J. L. Finch were reached by illogical, erratic, and perverted reasoning; and while the committee find that J. L. Finch was not actuated by malice and that therefore no proceedings for disbarment should be taken against him, he justly deserved the censure of the bar of the Federal court.

Now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the Seattle Bar Association, That we affirm our conviction that the charges against the Honorable Richard A. Ballinger in the matters above referred to were without any foundation whatever in fact; and be it further

Resolved, That the wanton and vicious assault by said public print upon the character of R. A. Ballinger, its reflection upon the integrity of the special referee in bankruptcy, the late Eben Smith, Esq., and its attack on the good name of the bar of the Federal courts of Seattle, in the matters above referred to, warrant the condemnation of every fair and just man, be he lawyer or layman.

EXHIBIT No. 53.

46. Teller's note and collection cashbook.

APRIL 3, 1902.

Number.	Maker.	Remarks.	Amount.	Interest.	Total.
11325	Seattle Shipyards Company.	Charged in account	$500.00	$10.65
11957	M. F. Mayhew	Charged in account Seattle Shipyards Co.	21,712.50	115.80
11189	J. W. Kelly et al	Charged in account Seattle Shipyards Co.	2,000.00	48.90
11448	J. E. Chilberg et al	Charged in account Seattle Shipyards Co.	2,500.00	44.45
11840	J. W. Kelly et al	Charged in account Seattle Shipyards Co.	500.00	3.33
11956	M. F. Mayhew	Charged in account Seattle Shipyards Co.	394.65	1.75
			(27,607.15)	(224.88)	(27,832.03)

For authentication see record as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 440, line 24, to p. 441, line 11; items, p. 441, line 11 to 28.

Number.	Maker.	Whose account.	Amount.	Discount.
.....	J. E. Chilberg et al	Receiving teller	$30,000.00

For authentication see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 441, line 4 to 9; p. 442, line 1 to 4; item, p. 442, line 4 to 7; p. 372, line 15 to 20.

109. JUNE 17, 1902.

Number.	Maker.	Remarks.	Amount.	Interest.	Total.
12093	J. E. Chilberg	Balance check	$26,321.37	$351.15
	J. E. Chilberg	Balance check	474.35	.50
12374	M. F. Mayhew	Balance check	23.47	.15
12240	M. F. Mayhew	Balance check	300.00	3.33
12545	M. F. Mayhew	Balance check	535.10	2.05
12214	M. F. Mayhew	Balance check	150.00	2.00
12467	M. F. Mayhew	Balance check	65.00	.55
			(27,869.29)	(359.73)	(28,229.02)

For authentication see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 440, line 24 to p. 441, line 11; items, p. —, line 4 to 14; p. 380, line 3 to 20.

Number.	Maker.	Whose account.	Amount.	Discount.
.....	J. W. Kelly	Credit account J. E. Chilberg, agt	$30,000.00	.....

For authentication see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 441, line 4 to 11; p. 442, line 1 to 4; item, p. 524, line 11 to 14; p. 380, line 20 to 30.

Ex 48

Seattle, Wash. Apr 17th 1902. No 23

The Snoqualmie American Bank

OF SEATTLE.

Pay to the order of Cash $150.00

One hundred fifty ~~no/100~~ Dollars

(to C. A. Reynolds, Hudson Settlement)

M. F. Mayhew

12214

TUCKER HANFORD CO SEATTLE

EXHIBIT NO. 48

Rec 7-7-13

Offered & Received

United States Master in Chancery

Ex 49

The Scandinavian American Bank

No. 30553

CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT.

Seattle, Wash. May 24 1902

$20064.77

Has deposited in this Bank

Twenty Thousand Sixty Four and 77/100 Dollars payable to the order of C. C. Kobbé Clerk and Peter L. Larsen Receiver on the return of this Certificate properly endorsed

NOT SUBJECT TO CHECK

J. F. Lane Asst Cashier

EXHIBIT NO. 49

Please enter as Exhibit

Attorney

Filed United States Master in Chancery

Clerk of the Supreme Court, Northern District

MAY 15 1907

Dec 3, 1902

Deliver to Kamm Clerk

C. C. Kobbé Clerk

By Frank Kamm Dep

EXHIBIT 50.

—THE—

Scandinavian American Bank

SEATTLE, - WASH.

IN ACCOUNT WITH

Petra L. Larsen

Rheims

NOTICE

☞ Always bring this book with your deposits.
☞ See that the entries agree with your ticket.
Books should be left for balancing as often as once a month.

METROPOLITAN PRESS, INC., SEATTLE

Ex 51

Dr. Scandinavian American Bank In account with [illegible] Cr.

1907
March 28 Dep. 200645.

Exhibit 52.

EXHIBIT NO. 52
Seattle, Wash., 190
The Scandinavian American Bank.
Pay to the order of
$
Dollars
No.
Date Olympia, Wash., 190
To N. Bautze
For Balance $
Total $ This Check $
Deposit $

EXHIBIT No. 54.

Register certificates of deposit.

Date.	Deposited by—	Order of—	Number.	Amount.	Total.	Time.	Rate.	Paid.	Signature of depositor.
[1] Dec. 4, 1901	M. F. Mayhew	Self	27822	$2,000.00				Dec. 5, 1901	M. F. Mayhew.
[2] Dec. 24, 1901	M. F. Mayhew	Self	28456	500.00				Dec. 24, 1901
[3] Jan. 10, 1902	M. F. Mayhew	Self	28839	2,500.00				Jan. 11, 1902
[4] Mar. 1, 1902	J. W. Kelly et al	M. F. Mayhew	29929	500.00				Mar. 3, 1902
[5] Mar. 12, 1902	Peter L. Larsson, receiver	Self	30236	21,712.50				Mar. 24, 1902
[6] Mar. 24, 1902	Peter L. Larsson, receiver	Self	30912	19,706.05				Mar. 25, 1902
[7] Mar. 24, 1902	We	C. A. Koepfli, clerk; Peter L. Larsson, receiver.	30553	20,064.77				Apr. 15, 1902

[1] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 429, line17 to 21; item, p. 429, line 21 to 26.
[2] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 429, line 17 to 21; item, p. 430, line 1 to 5.
[3] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 429, line 17 to 21; item, p. 430, line 10 to 14.
[4] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 429, line 17 to 21; item, p. 430, line 14 to 22.
[5] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 429, line 17 to 21; item, p. 431, line 2 to 5.
[6] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 429, line 17 to 21; item, p. 506, line 29 and 30.
[7] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of columns, p. 429, line 17 to 21; item, p. 509, line 8 to 18.

EXHIBIT No. 55.

Bills receivable.

Number.	Date.	Maker.	Endorser or security.	When due (month, day, year).	Amount.	Interest.	Total.	When paid.	Remarks.
[1] 11189	Dec. 5	J. W. Kelly	E. L. Grondahl, J. E. Chilberg	On demand.	$2,000.00			Apr. 3, 1902	12/9/01.
[2] 11325	Dec. 24	J. W. Kelly, J. E. Chilberg, E. L. Grondahl.			500.00		$500.00	Apr. 3, 1902
[3] 11448	Jan. 10, 1902.	J. E. Chilberg	J. W. Kelly, E. L. Grondahl		2,500.00		2,500.00	Apr. 3, 1902
[4] 11840	Mar. 1	J. W. Kelly, J. E. Chilberg, E. L. Grondahl.	Receipt of M. F. Mayhew	On demand.	500.00			Apr. 3, 1902

[1] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 443, line 24 to p. 444, line 11.
[2] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 448, lines 17 and 18.
[3] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 453, lines 9 to 21.
[4] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 456, line 26 to p. 457, line 4.

EXHIBIT No. 55—Continued.

Bills receivable—Continued.

Number.	Date.	Maker.	Endorser or security.	When due (month, day, year).	Amount.	Interest.	Total.	When paid.	Remarks.
[1] Mar. 14, 1902 11956	Mar. 12	M. F. Mayhew	Certified check, acct. Heckmann & Hanson.		$394.65			Apr. 3, 1902
Mar. 14, 1902 11957	Mar. 12 (or 7)	M. F. Mayhew	Acct. Heckmann & Hanson		21,712.50			Apr. 3, 1902
[2] Apr. 3, 1902 12093	Jan. 9	J. E. Chilberg; J. W. Kelly; E. L. Grondahl, by A. H. Soelberg, his attorney in fact.		On demand.	30,000.00	8% quarterly.		Apr. 17, 1902, p. p. Apr. 3, 1902, p. p. June 17, 1902, p. p. June 17, 1902	$3,618.48. $60.15. $26,321.37.
[3] Apr. 17 12214	Apr. 17	M. F. Mayhew	Check No. 3, Scandinavian-American Bank.		150.00			June 17, 1902	C. A. Reynolds Hanson settlement.
[4] Apr. 22, 1902 12240	Apr. 22	M. F. Mayhew	Kelly, Chilberg, et al		300.00			June 17, 1902
May 9, 1902 12374	May 8	M. F. Mayhew	Check	Demand	23.47			June 17, 1902
May 20, 1902 12467	May 19	M. F. Mayhew	Check		65.00			June 17, 1902
[7] May 29, 1902 12545	Apr. 22	M. F. Mayhew			535.10			June 17, 1902
[8] June 17, 1902 715	June 16	J. W. Kelly	J. E. Chilberg	O. D.	30,000.00	7 per ct.		Oct. 9, 1902, p. p. Jan. 6, 1903, p. p. Apr. 1, 1903, p. p. July 3, 1903, p. p. July 9, 1903, p. p.	60. 60. 60. 60. 29,760.

[1] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; 1st item, p. 440, lines 2 to 7; p. 381, lines 8 to 20; 2d item, p. 440, lines 7 to 10; p. 366, lines 8 to 16.
[2] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 439, lines 16 to 26; p. 378, lines 4 to 20.
[3] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 520, lines 26 to p. 521, line 4.
[4] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 521, lines 6 to 18.
[5] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 522, lines 3 to 6.
[6] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 522, lines 12 to 15.
[7] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 521, lines 18 to 28.
[8] For authentication, see record, as follows: Notations at head of column, p. 439, lines 11 to 16; item, p. 440, lines 15 to 24.

EXHIBIT No. 56.

[Exhibit "A."]

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, copartners, doing business in the firm name and style of Heckman & Hanson, defendants. No. ——. Complaint.

The plaintiff complains of the defendants, and for cause of action alleges:

I. That the defendant C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson are now, and were at all times hereinafter mentioned, copartners, doing business in the firm name and style of Heckman & Hanson.

II. That heretofore, to wit, during the past two years, the plaintiff sold and delivered to the defendant goods, wares, and merchandise, and performed labor for them, at their special instance and request, upon an open and running account, and the defendants have at divers times made payments thereon, and there is now due and owing to the plaintiff upon the said account the sum of fifteen hundred and twenty-eight and 18/100 dollars ($1,528.18), which said account and balance due thereon has been heretofore, to wit, on or about the 1st day of July, 1901, rendered and submitted to the defendants, and it was then and there agreed between the plaintiff and the defendants that the said balance due thereon in the sum of $1,528.18 was just and correct and due and owing from the defendants to the plaintiff.

III. That thereafter, and on or about the 1st day of July, 1901, the plaintiff demanded payment of the said sum of $1,528.18 from the defendants, but they have failed, neglected, and refused to pay the same, or any part thereof, and still fail, neglect, and refuse, to plaintiff's damage, in the said sum of $1,528.18 and interest thereon at the legal rate from the 1st day of July, 1901.

Wherefore plaintiff prays judgment against the defendants for the sum of fifteen hundred and twenty-eight and 18/100 dollars ($1,528.18) and costs of suit.

BENNETT, WHITMAN & LUND,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

William M. Curtiss, being first duly sworn on oath, deposes and says that he is the plaintiff in the above-entitled action. That he has read the foregoing complaint, knows the contents thereof, and believes the same to be true.

WILLIAM M. CURTISS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of July, 1901.

BURTON E. BENNETT,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

[Exhibit "B."]

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, copartners doing business in the firm name and style of Heckman & Hanson. No. ——. Motion for appointment of receiver.

Now comes the plaintiff by the undersigned, his attorney, and moves this honorable court for an order appointing a receiver in the above-entitled cause, to take possession, charge, and control of the business and property of the defendants, and to care for and manage the same, and conduct and carry on the business of the defendants in the usual course of the business and trade, pending the final determination of this action, upon the ground that the defendants are engaged in divers and sundry litigation, wherein parties not justly entitled to the same are obtaining, and are about to obtain, unjust and unfair advantage of the defendants, and of their creditors, and that the properties of the defendants are thereby being wasted, and the business of the defendants destroyed to the extent that the whole thereof will be appropriated to parties not justly entitled to the same, and there will be nothing, or not sufficient remaining to pay the just creditors of the defendants, including the plaintiff.

This motion is based upon the affidavits of the plaintiff and C. A. Heckman, filed herewith.

BENNETT, WHITMAN & LUND,
Attorneys for plaintiff.

[Exhibit "C."]

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman and M. E. Hanson, copartners doing business in the firm name and style of Heckman & Hanson, defendants. No. ——. Affidavit of plaintiff for receiver.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

William M. Curtiss, being first duly sworn, on his oath says: That he is, and was at all the times hereinafter mentioned, a citizen of the United States and a resident of King County, State of Washington, above the age of twenty-one years, and plaintiff in the above-entitled action. That the properties of the said defendants consist of a shipbuilding plant of great value at Ballard, in said King County, and the shipbuilding business carried on thereat. That the defendants have heretofore carried on a large and lucrative business at their said shipyards. That during the latter part of the month of June of the present year a controversy arose between the defendants and the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, E. L. Grondahl, A. H. Soelberg, its vice president and cashier, respectively, and William M. Calhoun, acting for them, and others, as to certain repairs theretofore made by the defendants upon the schooner Alice at the instance and request of the said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, and Calhoun, amounting to the aggregate sum of about $7,000, and as to certain money theretofore advanced by said bank to defendants, amounting to the aggregate sum of about $7,000, the defendants contending that the said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, and Calhoun were personally liable for the said repairs so made at their instance and request, and that the money so advanced to the defendants by said bank was in lieu of payment for said repairs and to be repaid not by the defendants but by said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, and Calhoun as payment for said repairs; on the other hand, the said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, and Calhoun, denied all liability upon said repairs, and the said bank contended and claimed that the said money advanced was an overdraft by the defendants. That the said dispute resulted in the defendants libeling said vessel about the first of the present month for the said repairs in the United States District Court for the District of Washington, in admiralty, and also commencing a suit in personam in the same court against the said bank, Grondahl, Soelberg, Calhoun, and others, for the same amount, both which said suits are now pending and undetermined. That the said controversy also resulted in the said bank sueing the defendants in the above-entitled court for the money so advanced to them, claiming the same to be an overdraft, and also at the same time commenced two suits in the same court against the defendants foreclosing certain mortgages held by it against the defendants on their said shipbuilding plant, which, though overdue, have been overdue for a long time and carried by the said bank as such by mutual agreement between them and the defendants that the same should be so carried. That immediately upon commencing said suit upon the said alleged overdraft the said bank caused divers writs of garnishment to be issued and served, garnishing all available outstanding accounts due the defendants, and threaten to, and will continue to, so sue out writs of garnishment for all outstanding accounts due the defendants, and which may become due to them, and by so sueing out such writs of garnishment the said bank have completely and effectually stopped all business of the defendants and rendered it impossible for them to do any business whatever during the pending litigation, and have obtained, and are obtaining, an unfair and unjust preference and advantage over the creditors of the defendants, and among others the plaintiff.

That affiant is informed and believes that the said alleged overdraft is not a just debt of the defendants to the said bank, and that the said mortgage debts sued on as aforesaid are amply secured, and that the said foreclosure suits and the suit on said alleged overdraft and garnishment were commenced and are being prosecuted for the sole purpose of harrassing and annoying and crippling and destroying the business of the defendants and obtaining an unjust and unfair advantage of the defendants, and an unjust and unfair advantage and preference over the creditors of the defendants, including the plaintiff, and that unless a receiver is appointed by this honorable court to take charge of the properties and business of the defendants and care for and manage and carry on the same, pending said litigation and this action, the purpose aforesaid of said bank will be accomplished, and the business and properties of the defendants will be dissipated, wasted, ruined, and destroyed and appropriated by the said bank, and there will not be sufficient left to pay the just creditors of the defendants, including the plaintiff. That the defendants are not insolvent, in that they have ample property if justly administered to pay their debts, and is a going concern, and could and would earn large profits if permitted to run and carry on their said business, and if so permitted to carry on their business they could and would earn enough to pay off all of their indebtedness within a reasonable time. That the defendants have many contracts on hand, and could procure many others from which a large profit could be realized for the benefit of their creditors, but that under existing conditions created by the unfair and unjust action of the said bank they can not perform any of such contracts and can not procure any others and can not pay the plaintiff or any of their just creditors. That the good will and business of the defendants is a valuable asset for their creditors, and unless the same is carried on through a receiver the whole of their good will and business will be destroyed to the irreparable injury and damage of their creditors, including the plaintiff.

WM. M. CURTISS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of July, 1901.

BURTON E. BENNETT,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

[Exhibit "D."]

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King.

William M. Curtiss, plaintiff, vs. C. A. Heckman et al., defendants. No.——. Order appointing receiver.

Be it remembered that the above-entitled cause came on regularly this day for hearing upon the application of the plaintiff for the appointment of a receiver herein. The plaintiff appeared in person and by Bennett, Whilam A. Lund his attorneys, and the defendants appeared in person and by their attorneys, Metcalfe & Jurey, and the court being fully advised in the premises, and good cause appearing herein,

It is by the court ordered, adjudged, and decreed that Peter L. Larsson be, and he is hereby, appointed receiver of the defendants to take immediate charge, possession, and control of all their properties and assets, to care for, manage, and control the same, and operate and carry on the business of the defendants in the usual course of business and trade, pending the final determination of this action or until the further order of this court.

This order to take effect upon said Peter L. Larsson giving a bond to the clerk of this court in the sum of twenty thousand dollars and upon said bond being approved by this court.

Done in open court this 11th day of July, 1901.

ARTHUR E. GRIFFIN, Judge.

Endorsed on back: Filed July 11, 1901. C. A. Koepfli, clerk. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Dist. of Washington. April 11, 1903. 11.30 a. m. R. M. Hopkins, clerk; A. N. Moore, deputy. Jerold Landon Finch, attorney for bankrupts. Seattle, Wash.

[Copy.

EXHIBIT NO. 57.

Int., $125.00
5,000.00

5,125.00

SEATTLE, WASH., October 31, 1900.

Ninety days after date, without grace, at 12 o'clock noon, for value received, we jointly and severally promise to pay to the order of the Scandinavian American Bank, of Seattle, Washington, the sum of five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars in gold coin of the United States of present standard weight and fineness, with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum from date until paid, interest payable at maturity. And if interest is not paid when the same is due, or if principal is not paid at maturity, then the interest and principal to draw interest from maturity hereof until paid at the rate of twelve (12) per cent per annum. And in case suit or action is instituted to collect this note or any portion thereof we promise and agree to pay, in addition to the costs and disbursements provided by statute two hundred and fifty dollars, as attorney's fee in said suit or action.

The maker hereof, and all sureties and guarantors hereto, for value received, severally waive presentment for payment, protest, and notice of protest for nonpayment of this note, and guarantee payment thereof at maturity, and agree to remain bound, notwithstanding any extension of payment that may be made to any party liable on this note, and consent is hereby given to any such extension.

HECKMANN & HANSON,
By MARTIN HANSON.
ANDREW HECKMANN,
By R. A. BALLINGER,
His atty. in fact.

Due Jan. 29, 1901.
No. 8340.

(Written across end:) Mortgages securing this note duly stamped. $4.00. U. S. Int. Rev. stamps.

(EXHIBIT 57.—Reverse:) 32772. Department No. 4. Plaintiff's Exhibit F. Filed Dec. 18, 1901. C. A. Koepfli, clerk. Cleaves. Mar. 26, 01. Int. to Mar. 29, 01, chgd. to a/c, $208.33. May 29, 01. Int. to June 29, 01, chgd. to a/c, $125.00.

[Copy.]

EXHIBIT No. 58.

Int., $300.00
3,000.00

3,300.00

SEATTLE, WASH., November 22, 1900.

On or before one year after date, without grace, at 12 o'clock noon, for value received, we, jointly and severally, promise to pay to the order of the Scandinavian American Bank, of Seattle, Washington, the sum of three thousand dollars in gold coin of the United States of present standard weight and fineness, with interest thereon at the rate of ten per cent per annum from date until paid, interest payable quarterly. And if interest is not paid when the same is due, or if principal is not paid at maturity, then the interest and principal to draw interest from maturity hereof until paid at the rate of twelve (12) per cent per annum. And in case suit or action is instituted to collect this note or any portion thereof we promise and agree to pay, in addition to the costs and disbursements provided by statute, three hundred dollars, as attorney's fee in said suit or action.

The maker hereof, and all sureties and guarantors hereto, for value received, severally waive presentment for payment, protest and notice of protest for nonpayment of this note, and guarantee payment thereof at maturity, and agree to remain bound notwithstanding any extension of payment that may be made to any party liable on this note, and consent is hereby given to any such extension.

HECKMANN & HANSON,
By ANDREW HECKMANN.
ANDREW HECKMANN,
MARTIN HANSON.

Due Nov. 22, 1901.
No. 8498.

(Written across end:) Mortgage given to secure this note duly stamped as provided by U. S. rev. laws.

(EXHIBIT 58.—Reverse:) 32772. Department No. 4. Plaintiff's Exhibit A. Filed Dec. 18, 1901. C. A. Koepfli, clerk. Cleaves. Mar. 26, 01. Int. to May 22, 01, chgd. a/c, $150.00.

[Copy.]

EXHIBIT No. 59.

Int., $19.50
650.00

669.50

SEATTLE, WASH., Oct. 18th, 1899.

Three months after date, without grace, at 12 o'clock noon, for value received, we, jointly and severally, promise to pay to the order of the Scandinavian American Bank, of Seattle, Washington, the sum of six hundred fifty and no/100 dollars in gold coin of the United States of present standard weight and fineness, with interest thereon at the rate of twelve per cent per annum from date until paid, interest payable at maturity. And if interest is not paid when the same is due, or if principal is not paid at maturity, then the interest and principal to draw interest from maturity hereof until paid at the rate of twelve (12) per cent per month. And in case suit or action is instituted to collect this note or any portion thereof, we, jointly and severally, promise and agree to pay, in addition to the costs and disbursements provided by statute, fifty dollars, as attorney's fee in said suit or action.

The maker hereof, and all sureties and guarantors hereto, for value received, severally waive presentment for payment, protest, and notice of protest for nonpayment of this note, and guarantee payment thereof at maturity, and agree to remain bound notwithstanding any extension of payment that may be made to any party liable on this note, and consent is hereby given to any such extension.

HECKMANN & HANSON,
C. A. HECKMANN,
M. E. HANSON.

Due Jan. 18th, 1900.
No. 5957.

(EXHIBIT 59.—Reverse:) Department No. 4. Plaintiff's Exhibit A. Filed Dec. 18, 1901. C. A. Koepfli, clerk. Cleaves. 32766. (3–5c. stamps.) Feb. 29, 1900. Pd. int. to Jan. 18, 1900, $19.50. May 26, 1900. Int. to June 18, 1900, chgd. to a/c, $32.50. Dec. 24, as int. to Dec. 18, 1900, as chgd. to a/c, $39.00. Mar. 26, 01, int. to Mar. 18, 01, chgd. to a/c, $19.50. May 29, 01, int. to June 18, 01, chgd. to a/c, $19.50.

EXHIBIT No. 60.

THE RIGHT DOCTOR BROWN WAS THE WRONG DOCTOR BROWN.

Many people who are looking for my offices at 713 First Avenue, in the Union Block, see the sign, "The Right Doctor Brown," in front of the Washington Block, and think that they are coming to my offices, but they soon discover that they are in the office of the wrong Dr. Brown.

Dentists of reputation. What do you think of the reputation of a dentist who claims to have practiced dentistry in Seattle for 20 years and is compelled to move next door to some namesake, who is a dentist of reputation, in order to make a living (by grabbing patients)?

Beware of dentists on First Avenue claiming to be the right Dr. Brown. I do not compete with Cheap John dentists. I have always aspired to be regarded as a real dentist. My offices have been located in the Union Block, at 713 First Avenue, for twenty years.

I aspired to be Seattle's leading dentist. I, myself, took charge of the offices on July 15th, 1901, when the offices afforded practice enough for one dentist only. Seattle had a population of about 75,000 those days, and I had become convinced that the dentist who charged reasonably for first-class work would get plenty of first-class work to do. I figured that this was the proper foundation upon which to build a dental practice. All dentists have notions about building a practice, and I have mine. I do strictly a cash practice for small profit.

It does not make any difference whether it is a set of teeth, a bridge, a gold or porcelain crown, a gold, silver, enamel or porcelain filling, treatment of pyorrhea, or your teeth cleaned; in fact, my guarantee is good, and long years of success prove that the people have indorsed my methods.

Read my article in next Sunday's Times on the termination of the Washington dental war.

DR. EDWIN BROWN, D. D. S.,
Seattle's Leading Dentist, 713 First Ave., Union Block.

One door south of the Postal Telegraph Building. Open evenings until 8 and Sundays until 4 for people who work.

EXHIBIT No. 61.

[By William A. Simmonds.]

That he had been selected by the so-called "white-slave syndicate" as a victim because of his many rigid rulings against its traffic; and that the charges caused to be filed against him in Congress by John H. Perry had been actuated by the same

"syndicate," to-day was the counter charge of Federal Judge Cornelius H. Hanford after long and careful gathering to evidence by the jurist and his attorneys.

The sensational turn to the congressional investigation into Perry's charges came during the progress of the morning session, when, after Hanford's attorneys had placed former United States Attorney Charles T. Hutson on the stand and through him placed in the record statistics as to prosecution of cases of this character during the five years Hutson served, and also intimated that further developments would be presented, the jurist himself in chambers declared that he had ample reason to believe that Perry's charges had been brought on by this "syndicate," and that it was financing his prosecution.

BEGINS GOOD WORK.

Judge Hanford first acquired prominence in the prosecution of the so-called "white-slave traffic" in May, 1910, when he called together a Federal grand jury and gave it carte blanche in investigating the traffic. This body indicted a remarkably large number of persons prominently engaged in the work, some of them being deported, others convicted and sent to the penitentiary. Many of the cases were tried in other districts, some of them in New York. The investigation covered the entire country from New York City to Alaska.

Since that time he has been no less active. During the recent Federal grand jury held in this city the indictments returned against alleged "white slavers" were greater than for any other cause, and the indicted persons who pleaded guilty were given rigorous sentences in the Federal penitentiary. One person, who was known to immigration officials to be engaged in the traffic, although the grand jury could not indict under the evidence, was held by order of Judge Hanford until evidence could be obtained, when the prisoner pleaded guilty before Judge Frank H. Rudkin in Tacoma and was sentenced to the penitentiary. Frank Hanford, a brother of Judge Hanford, was foreman of the grand jury.

Judge Hanford and his attorneys made the announcement of their belief only after they had acquired evidence which they plan to sift and draw together for presentation to the congressional investigating committee or to Congress as a body.

It is their belief that the expenses of the Burns investigation concerning the jurist, which still is going on, according to Judge Hanford's attorneys, are being paid indirectly by this syndicate. It is their contention that the attempt to remove the jurist by impeachment proceedings has been made because he is regarded as an enemy of the traffic.

The extent of the investigation was shown by the fact that a letter written by Judge Hanford to Hon. William B. Gilbert of the circuit court of appeals at Portland, was purloined from the mails and opened, presumably by detectives. Government sleuths were to-day placed on the trail of the parties who are believed to be responsible and sensational developments are expected.

The letter of the judge, it is declared, is only one of several which have been opened while in the mail. The one in question was mailed personally by Judge Hanford's secretary on June 18, in the slit at the main post office in this city, and was postmarked June 18. It asked Judge Gilbert to name some jurist to preside in this city while the congressional investigation was under way.

THIEF STEALS LETTER.

On June 21 Judge Gilbert had not yet received the letter, although it arrived in Portland, or at least left Seattle on the night of June 18. In response to a telegram from Judge Hanford, Gilbert replied he had not received it. Shortly afterwards the letter was found, opened, in the Portland mail slit, and the clerk said that it was turned in by a party who said he had found it on the floor of the Portland post office. It had been abstracted from the mails and kept out 48 hours.

Investigation is also being carried on into the motives believed by the Government to have actuated the attack on the House of the Good Shepherd, an institution devoted to rescue work in this city, by an anarchistic publication. It is said that this matter had been under probe for considerable time. Government sleuths also declare that the first Burns shadowing of Judge Hanford did not begin August 26, on the day after the Dreamland Pavilion affair, as alleged by witnesses in the congressional investigation, but had been in progress for some time before that date.

None of those engaged in the defense of the jurist before the congressional committee would go into any details in the matter, saying that they were not yet ripe for publication. It was recalled, however, that attorneys for Judge Hanford, when Manager Walter Thayer, of the Burns agency, was on the witness stand, attempted to ask him who else besides John H. Perry had been interested in the engaging of the agency to shadow Judge Hanford, and Chairman Graham had refused to permit the question to be answered.

PROBE CONTINUED.

The defense of the jurist to the charge filed by Perry alleging gross intoxication, which was opened Wednesday evening, was carried on throughout the entire session to-day, including the testimony of former Assistant United States Attorney Hutson.

J. J. Ward, a general contractor, who was mentioned by Councilman Oliver T. Erickson as on the same car with himself when he had seen Judge Hanford in a state of intoxication, remembered the incident, but flatly contradicted Erickson as to the condition of the jurist. Ward testified that he had seen Judge Hanford on the street cars for six years and had never seen him under the influence of intoxicants. He had seen him drowsy, and when he might have appeared to strangers to be intoxicated.

Ward said that Erickson had remarked to him that Judge Hanford was drunk, but that he had replied he did not think so, and that it was a peculiar habit of the judge's to sleep on the cars.

Elmer E. Todd, former United States attorney, who prosecuted the Holt murder trial during which Judge Hanford, according to Robert Jones, a Wednesday's witness, had dozed for 20 seconds and had not heard an objection made by an attorney for the defense, contradicted Jones's testimony.

EXHIBIT NO. 62.

Memorandum of compromise, settlement, and agreement, made and entered into this 30th day of August, 1901, by and between the Scandinavian-American Bank of Seattle, a corporation, E. L. Grondahl, Calhoun, Ewing & Company, William M. Calhoun, trustee, and Peter L. Larsson, as receiver of the firm of Heckmann & Hanson, copartners, appointed as such receiver in cause No. 32817 in the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King:

Witnesseth that for and in consideration of the mutual concessions, stipulations, and agreements herein contained it is mutually agreed between all the parties hereto as follows, to wit:

1. That the said Scandinavian-American Bank shall immediately dismiss and release any and all garnishments by it had and taken upon the property and credits of the said Heckmann & Hanson in that certain action now pending in the superior court aforesaid in cause No. 32773, entitled "The Scandinavian-American Bank vs. Heckmann & Hanson," brought to recover a certain overdraft therein alleged, and shall permit and allow the said Peter L. Larsson, as receiver aforesaid, to proceed to an immediate collection of such credits and take possession thereof.

2. That said Peter L. Larsson, as such receiver, shall maintain and keep in a separate fund, subject to be accounted for as such separate fund, the sum of $889.64, to be received from the North American Transportation & Trading Company by release of such garnishment, and that he shall apply the same as follows: First, to the payment of all clerk's, marshal's, and commissioner's fees heretofore incurred or hereafter to be incurred in that certain cause in admiralty in the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, entitled "Heckman & Hanson vs. the schooner 'Alice'"; also insurance premiums incurred on said schooner "Alice" by said receiver and fees for libellants' proctors, not exceeding the sum of $200.00; also all keepers' fees, moving and care of said vessel, and other legitimate fees connected with said litigation and accruing until its final determination; and the balance of such fund so maintained in such separate fund shall be paid over by said receiver to A. J. Tennant for the use of said A. J. Tennant or his assigns in making such repairs on said schooner "Alice," now at the yards of said Heckmann & Hanson, as may be necessary to make said vessel seaworthy.

3. It is further agreed that said Peter L. Larsson, receiver, shall proceed at once, if possible, to perfect and establish the lien claimed by Heckmann & Hanson upon said schooner "Alice" under the libel against said schooner and now pending in the court aforesaid.

4. It is further provided that all parties hereto waive any and all exceptions to the libel of Heckmann & Hanson, heretofore filed in said cause in admiralty, and said William M. Calhoun, trustee and claimant, hereby waives his cross libels therein, and also waives all demand for security to answer for the same; and that testimony shall be taken as soon as possible and convenient, or stipulations entered into for the establishment of or disposition of all the claims pending in said action and the disposition of said vessel.

5. That if the court shall allow said receiver to bid upon the sale of said vessel under said libel of Heckmann & Hanson, and offset the claim of said receiver against his said bid, that then and in that event said receiver hereby agrees to bid upon said vessel to the full amount of the claim allowed to him, if necessary so to do for the purpose of purchasing said schooner "Alice" at marshal's sale, and further agrees that if he, the said receiver, shall purchase said schooner at said sale that he will immediately transfer said vessel in its then condition to said A. J. Tennant, or to such person or persons as he shall by said A. J. Tennant be directed, and shall thereupon pay over to said A. J. Tennant the balance of such special fund then in his hands, as aforesaid.

6. It is further agreed that if upon the sale of said vessel by the United States marshal the court shall allow any other claim of lien against said schooner than that of said receiver as of equal or prior rank to that of said receiver, or shall allow any other claim against said vessel to share pro rata with the claim of said receiver in the proceeds of said sale, or if in any way it becomes necessary to pay any sum to any person other than said receiver out of the proceeds of said sale, then such sum so to be paid shall be paid by said A. J. Tennant, and under no circumstances shall said receiver be held liable for any payment of any sum to any person by reason of such marshal's sale and the proceeds of said sale thereat.

7. It is further agreed that upon the transfer of the said schooner "Alice" to said A. J. Tennant, as in the preceding paragraph set forth, by said receiver, the said Scandinavian-American Bank will immediately dismiss its said action No. 32773, now pending in the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for the county of King, upon the alleged overdraft in admitted to be the sum of $6,959.97 for the purposes of this settlement, and shall satisfy and release every claim against said Heckman & Hanson and said receiver arising out of said action and said claim.

8. And it is further agreed that immediately upon said transfer of said schooner as aforesaid, said receiver will dismiss the action now pending in the District Court of the United States for the District of Washington, in personam, No. —— upon the docket of said court, wherein Heckmann & Hanson are libellants, and against the Scandinavian-American Bank, E. L. Grondahl, William M. Calhoun et al., without cost being taxed to either party.

9. It is further agreed that this agreement shall in no wise take effect or be in force until it has been signed by the parties hereto, submitted to a judge of the Superior Court for the State of Washington, in and for the county of King, and by such judge or court approved, whereupon the same shall immediately take effect and be binding upon the parties hereto.

THE SCANDINAVIAN-AMERICAN BANK,
By E. L. GRONDAHL, 1st Vice Pres.
E. L. GRONDAHL,
WM. M. CALHOUN, Trustee.
CALHOUN, EWING & CO.,
By WM. M. CALHOUN.
PETER L. LARSSON,
Receiver of Heckmann & Hanson, copartners.

Executed in the presence of—
R. A. BALLINGER.
J. B. METCALFE.

ACCEPTED.

A. J. TENNANT.

SEPTEMBER 3RD, 1901.

The above agreement approved and P. L. Larsson, receiver, directed to carry out the same as per its terms.

GEO. MEADE EMORY, Judge.

(Filing on back:) No. 32817. In the Superior Court, King County, Washington. Wm. M. Curtiss, pltf., vs. Heckman & Hanson, defts. Stipulation for sale of schooner Alice, &c. Original. Filed Sep. 3, 1901. C. A. Koepfli. R. S. Jones.

EXHIBIT NO. 63.

[Chambers of United States district judge, district of Washington, rooms 32 and 33, Colman Building.]

SEATTLE, WASH., October 20, 1896.

Mr. PAUL S. HOGAN, Mount Vernon, Wash.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of October 19, addressed to Capt. W. D. O'Toole, together with the petition for appointment of Mr. Weppler to be United States court commissioner at McMurray, has been referred to me.

A recent act of Congress has abolished the office of circuit court commissioner, and provides that all commissioners in office shall cease to act on the 30th day of June next, and in lieu of the office abolished, United States commissioners are to be appointed for terms of four years. The law is so obscure that I am in doubt whether any more court commissioners can be appointed at all and whether appointments of United States commissioners can take effect before the 1st day of next July. Therefore, being so much in doubt, I am disposed to allow matters to go on without making any new appointments until next July.

I do not usually inquire about the politics of persons recommended for appointment as commissioners, but loyalty and a belief that the National Government may rightfully exercise its lawful authority in all places are qualifications for the office, and when the time comes for making an appointment I will not regard Mr. Weppler as a suitable person unless I am assured that he is not a supporter of the Chicago platform, or of the candidates for office who subscribe to its declaration.

I say this because I am not personally acquainted with Mr. Weppler and do not know his position in this campaign.

Respectfully, C. H. HANFORD.

EXHIBIT NO. 64.

RE SALMON FISHERIES.

STATEMENT OF MR. PRESTON BEFORE THE SUBCOMMITTEE IN EXECUTIVE SESSION.

FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1912.

Mr. PRESTON. At your suggestion I have examined the files in two cases known as the Fishery cases. The first one I might say was the main one, being the case of the Colonial Trust Company and the Rudolph Pfeiffer Company against the Pacific Packing and Navigation Company, No. 1081. I have here a full statement that I made up. The files in that case are very voluminous; my notes on them cover ten or a dozen pages.

The CHAIRMAN. What would you propose that we should do now—that you should recite this?

Mr. PRESTON. I can recite from the paper that is given here with a brief statement of its contents. Many of them would not interest you.

The CHAIRMAN. Oh, well, you can just check them off on your paper, those that are not needed.

Mr. MCCOY. Perhaps the better way would be to check off those that we do need.

The CHAIRMAN. Suppose we start in and see how it goes.

Mr. HUGHES. Wouldn't it be entirely sufficient for your purpose to have Mr. Preston give a brief synopsis of each paper and then only put in such papers as you may think worth while, after he has given a brief history of the case?

Mr. PRESTON. I understand you are examining the case with a view to taking into consideration the allowance made to the attorneys and the receivers?

The CHAIRMAN. And the distribution of the assets generally and what went to the creditors.

Mr. PRESTON. I can make you a general statement of that.

To start with, the receivers handled $3,255,880. The total allowance to receivers and their attorneys was $87,885, which equals 27 mills on the dollar of the cash handled.

Mr. MCCOY. What was the allowance to each?

Mr. PRESTON. I will come to that in detail later. This is a general statement to start with. The creditors were paid 27 mills on the dollar, or 2.7 per cent. The creditors received seven and a fraction cents on the dollar, but the assets were taken over by a reorganization composed of a very large per cent of the creditors and the stockholders.

Mr. MCCOY. The stock was issued, I presume.

Mr. PRESTON. In the reorganization?

Mr. MCCOY. Yes.

Mr. PRESTON. I do not know; that will show here.

Mr. HIGGINS. That is entirely separate from the receivership proceedings?

Mr. MCCOY. Not necessarily; it might have been on a court order.

Mr. PRESTON. No; it did not appear in the court proceedings at all. It simply appears that there was a reorganization committee composed of the creditors, etc., and something over $2,000,000 of the creditors were present in court when the fees were fixed.

Bills filed March 3, 1903.—The Colonial Trust Company is a small contract creditor. Its cocomplainant, Pfeiffer, was a stockholder. The basis of the claim was the insolvency of the defendants.

Mr. HUGHES. The basis of the action of proceeding?

Mr. PRESTON. Yes; a large amount of outstanding claims and fisheries contracts, which I can explain to you from reading this.

Fisheries are operated by Chinese contractors contracting in advance of the season to supply necessary labor for each cannery, and they gave them a guaranty of so much of a run, and these contracts had been made in advance for the coming season of 1903, but the company did not have means to carry them out and continue its pack or its operation, I should say, and that the assets would be dissipated by suits being brought against the company for debts it was unable to pay in different jurisdictions. The complaint asks for the appointment of McGovern & Hallock, or alleges, I should say, the appointment of McGovern & Hallock as receivers by the United States court in New Jersey, and asking that they be appointed here, with J. A. Kerr. On the same day the answer of the defendant is filed, admitting allegations of the complaint. On the same day an order is made appointing those three receivers, they to be subject to removal by this court and required to report to this court. On the same day the oath and bond of Kerr was filed.

March 5th, Kerr petitions for leave to pay pay roll of $6,600, and insurance premiums that were passed due amounting to $9,120; and an order was made granting the petition.

On the next day, March 6th, the Seattle Hardware Company petitions, alleging that it has sold and partially delivered a large bill of goods in ignorance of the insolvency, and asks to have them set aside and kept separate from the assets or that provision be made to pay for them in cash.

On the same day Kerr petitions for leave to sign checks and conduct the business alone because his coreceivers are absent from the State; which order was granted.

Mr. McCoy. Where was Hallock?

Mr. Preston. Hallock was in New York State, I think, and McGovern in New Jersey.

Mr. Dorr. McGovern was in New York and Hallock in New Jersey.

Mr. Preston. That is right; I got it down wrong here.

On March 9th, Kerr, the receiver, petitions for leave to issue $80,000 of receiver certificates in order to secure supplies and labor to operate the Orca & Kenai canneries for the 1903 season; which order was granted.

On the 13th an order directing the return of the goods to the Seattle Hardware Company.

On the 21st the Pacific Coast Company asks leave to intervene, setting up a claim of $16,000, and the order is made granting leave to intervene.

The same day McGovern petitions for leave to issue receivers' certificates for 1¼ million dollars—$750,000 to be sold now at not less than par, but sets out the necessity for issuing $700,000 in order to operate canneries for 1903, of which I may say inferentially there were two or three in Washington and 12 or 13 in Alaska; $700,000 would be necessary for cannery supplies and $750,000 for cannery labor; $13,000 to protect margin on the 1902 pack, which had been hypothecated by the company. I will explain that a little fuller from my memory. It seems that the 1902 pack had been stored and warehouse receipts for the same hypothecated to borrow money with, and that the price of salmon had fallen so that the margin was so close now that the stockholders of the collateral would sell the salmon and nothing be realized from the margin. This petition was granted, but the order required the receiver to redeem the $80,000 previously issued for receiver certificates.

On the 31st, petition of McGovern was filed and April 23rd his bid.

April 6th, another creditor, the Linen Thread Company, comes in and sets up the same set of facts as the Seattle Hardware Company did in regard to its goods. That petition was granted. It seems they had sold a bill of goods to the receiver in ignorance of the insolvency.

April 7 the inventory is filed, which shows assets of the company of $4,635,827; liabilities, $4,868,973. Of these assets one and a fourth million was said to be in Alaska, $2,000,000 in Washington, and one and a third million in New Jersey—in round figures, $1,330,000. There was fifty pages of this inventory. I have simply brought in the lump of it.

On the 11th of April the National Bank of Commerce petitions to intervene for a preference claim of $25,000 for cash loaned within six months to the receiver to pay supply and labor bills contracted within six months. This petition was granted on the same day and the receiver directed to pay that out of the proceeds of the certificates.

On the 25th of April oath and bond of Hallock was filed.

On the 9th of May petitions of the receivers recited that the New Jersey court and the Alaska court had also authorized a million and a quarter receivers' certificates, reciting sale of $750,000 of them, and asking leave to sell balance, $500,000. Order granted, providing they be sold at not less than par and requiring deposit of all cash that the receivers may receive in a bank to be selected by the receivers.

On the 11th of May the plaintiff petitions reciting that John R. Winn had been appointed receiver in Alaska and New Jersey, and asking that the same be done here, and asking that there may be harmonized action between the different courts so that they would have the same receivers. This order was granted, but the order required Winn to be subject to the orders of this court. Same day his oath was filed and on the 20th his bond was filed.

On the 25th there was an order made——

Mr. McCoy. Who was this receiver?

Mr. Preston. John R. Winn. He was the attorney in Juneau, Alaska.

On the 25th there was an order made reciting that one of the devices used in canning salmon was protected by a patent, and of some infringement suit pending in which an injunction was asked. This order was that the receivers might give a bond and stay the injunction, so as to permit them to use the device which was in dispute.

On the 9th of June, 1903, copy of order of Judge Brown, of the Alaska court, to remove the topping machine from Alaska to Washington.

July 29, 1903, petition of receivers for permission to make good guaranty against swells made to cover the 1902 pack, estimated to involve expenditure of $300, and to make a like guaranty for 1903 pack. Order granting said petition.

July 31, 1903, petition of Johnson and order granting same for leave to sue receivers in justice court for lost baggage.

On the 18th of August affidavit of Receiver Kerr filed, showing that there had been an invasion of the fish traps of the company in Whatcom County by fish pirates and setting a contempt case against them for hearing on August 20th, requiring them to give bond of a thousand dollars each to appear at that time; but there had been previously on the 7th of August a petition of the receivers for an order on the United States marshal to protect the traps from the fish pirates and an order made on the same day to the marshal to protect them.

On the 8th of August there was filed a petition for leave to make contract with salmon brokers in England for $500,000 worth of the 1903 pack and to receive advancements on same. Order granted.

September 3d the Alaska Commercial Company filed a petition for lien on assets of $3,380 for money received from the United States Government on mail contract. It seemed that the Alaska Commercial Company and the Pacific Packing and Navigation Company had taken a contract in the name of the Packing and Navigation Company to carry the mails, and had alternated their steamers so that the money had come to the receivers—all the money—and they were entitled to half of it. An order was made directing the payment of this.

On the 5th of September there was a petition of the receivers for leave to make proof of loss. It seemed that the Kenai cannery had burned and there was a loss claimed of $77,286.20. An order was made granting this.

On September 30th P. F. Nordby petitioned for an order on the receivers requiring them to pay $227.94 for cash collected, and $110 additional for supplies furnished fisheries.

On November 3d petition of receivers recites that the order for receivers' certificates required net proceeds of the 1903 pack to be deposited to create a sinking fund. By an oversight the gross proceeds of certain sales of the pack had been deposited there that amounted to $22,000 and which ought not to have been deposited in the sinking fund; and they prayed for an order to transfer it from the sinking fund over to the general deposit; and this was granted on the same day.

On November 27th the receivers' petition recites that out of the proceeds of receivers' certificates $26,940 was used to pay interest on them which should have been paid out of the general funds; that there was $600,000 proceeds of the 1903 pack in the sinking fund, and there was $900,000 worth of salmon pack unsold, and they asked a transfer of that amount out of the sinking fund.

The Chairman. Where are their warehouses?

Mr. Kerr. We had a warehouse of our own on the Broad Street dock.

Mr. Preston. This was granted.

Then on the 28th of November there was an order permitting $7,800 which had been paid into the sinking fund which did not come from the salmon pack, to be withdrawn to the general fund.

On the 8th of December an order limiting creditors to a period of seven weeks to present their claims, requiring notices of that limitation to be published for five weeks in the Post Intelligencer here in Seattle and mailed to all known creditors.

On December 28th a petition for leave to sell for $65,000 the steam schooners Geanie, Newport, and Excelsior, and the two mail contracts which pertained to them, reciting that those were inventoried at $115,000, but that two of them which were in this jurisdiction had been appraised at $39,000; that the other one, the Newport, was in Alaska, and they could not get to it to appraise it, but that its invoiced value was only $15,000. That petition was granted.

Mr. HIGGINS. That left the receiver with how many schooners?

Mr. PRESTON. I would have to go to the inventory for that.

Mr. KERR. Only the two power vessels and five or six ships. These power vessels were steamships which were carrying mail and passengers—steam tugs.

Mr. HIGGINS. And which was not a substantial part of the outfit which you used?

Mr. KERR. Those vessels were used in connection with the canneries, but we went out of the ocean transportation business.

Mr. HIGGINS. Those ships were used in connection with fishing?

Mr. KERR. They were used exclusively in carrying passengers and mail—those that we sold.

Mr. HIGGINS. But that left you with no passenger ships.

Mr. KERR. Well, it left us with ships so that we carried a few passengers to the canneries and along the coast, but we did not operate them for the passenger business.

Mr. HIGGINS. That is, you personally went out of the passenger-carrying business?

Mr. KERR. Yes.

Mr. HIGGINS. And did that also dispose of your mail contract?

Mr. KERR. Yes.

Mr. PRESTON. This petition, as I remember it, recites that there is no advantage or profit in the receivers handling that business—that they could conduct the cannery business without them.

Mr. KERR. We carried the mail from Seattle to Valdez and from Valdez to Canaie, and during all the time this contract was in effect, especially in the winter season, you will find that practically every trip we made we ran behind and that we lost money.

Mr. HIGGINS. How about carrying passengers; was that profitable?

Mr. KERR. No.

Mr. HIGGINS. Did you maintain the same rates for carrying passengers after you took charge of the property as was maintained before?

Mr. KERR. Just the same; we did not change it at all.

Mr. PRESTON. That petition was granted.

On the 8th of January, 1904, there is a petition for leave to draw out of the sinking fund $16,207 more that was not a part of the net proceeds of the pack. That was granted.

On the 18th of January the receivers' petition for leave to vacate their uptown office, saying that it will save $250 a month rent, and to sell the furniture in it for $1,800, and then to move down to Bellingham. That order was granted.

On the 19th of January the Fireman's Fund petitioned to be paid insurance premiums of $14,869. Order granting leave to file petition, and on the 30th of January receivers answered, contesting their right to that money, and they filed a reply to them on the same day.

On the 30th of January the receivers petitioned the court. Petitioner recites operation of the Alaska and Puget Sound canneries and steamers and that they spent one and a fourth million dollars from receiver certificates and $500,000 from pack and sale of property paid this item of same of property, $82,800 included in the $500,000—that refers to the 1903 pack that was carried on by the receivers themselves; that the pack that year had been disappointing all over the coast, but they had in the sinking fund $640,000, and they had supplies on hand for the next season of the value of $473,500; that the 1903 pack amounted to or involved $800,000 expenses. They advised a continuance of the business another year rather than liquidation; that they be allowed to issue new certificates for $750,000, taking up the outstanding issue of the old out of that; that is to say, they did not have funds in the sinking fund sufficient.

Mr. MCCOY. Was there any profit on the business the first year?

Mr. KERR. About $208,000.

Mr. MCCOY. What was the capital stock of the company?

Mr. KERR. Twenty-five million dollars.

Mr. PRESTON. On the same day there is a petition filed by creditors whose claims aggregated two and a half million dollars asking that that petition of the receiver be granted.

Mr. HIGGINS. How long had the company been in operation when you took it?

Mr. KERR. It commenced operation in the middle of the pack of 1901. 1901 was a disastrous year on the Pacific coast for salmon. About five and a fourth million cases of salmon—they lost the first year they remained in business over $100,000, and the next year was almost as disastrous.

Mr. HIGGINS. What was it the last year?

Mr. KERR. That was the last year they operated.

Mr. PRESTON. On the same day the receivers petitioned for leave to draw $150,000 out of the sinking fund, leaving enough for the purposes of the formal order, and to use the $150,000 to pay outstanding obligations and procure supplies for the 1904 season. That order was granted.

On February 26th there was an order made on the depositary of the sinking fund, which was a bank in San Francisco—I believe the Bank of California, to observe the order of January 30th for taking up the old issue of receiver certificates.

On March 17th petition for allowance of attorneys' fees to Mr. McCord, who appeared as attorney for the receivers from the beginning.

Mr. McCoy. Did that petition have annexed to it any itemized statement of the services rendered?

Mr. Preston. No. It recites that he acted as attorney for more than a year, and there is an order allowing $10,000 to him on account, and directing the receiver to pay it on the same day.

March 23d receivers petitioned for leave to sell gas schooner Duxbury, reciting that she is three years old and that she cost $3,500, and they have a chance to sell it for $2,750; and the order was made granting the petition.

On March 25th there was an order allowing the Fireman's Fund its claim—that was contested as I said before—for $1,108 as a preferred claim, and $13,769 as a common claim.

On April 2d the receivers petitioned for leave to sell the small schooner Maid of Orleans, inventoried at $5,000, and that they have an offer for $4,800; which petition was granted. On the 2d of April, 1904, the receivers petitioned to sell a vacant tideland lot in Anacortez for $1,000, that being the appraised value of it. An order made directing the master in chancery to sell the same at public auction at an upset price of $1,000.

On the 23d of April there is a petition of Judge Winn asking for an allowance to him on account of services as receiver. There is filed with this an order of the Alaska court for allowance of $7,500, and this order here is confirmatory of that one. Now that $7,500 I did not take into consideration in counting up the allowance made by Judge Hanford for that reason—it was simply confirmatory of the order of the other court.

On the 3d of May there is a petition filed by a Chinese firm at Chinmow claiming $850 for wages for firemen and testers, and $10,300 for guaranty on the 1903 pack on a contract, reciting that the contract guaranteed them 44,000 cases, and that it had fallen short of this supply to the Nushagak River cannery.

On the 17th of May there is a master's return of sale on the Anacortez lot, $2,200.

On the 24th of May an order for the master's fees and disbursments amounting to $104.70.

On the 27th of May the receivers petition to order deed for the same; and that is granted.

On the 21st of June the master's report of his deed and order that it be without redemption.

On June 23d another Chinese firm, Wing Hong Shing, filed a petition for leave to intervene, claiming part of the money that Shing Mow claimed to be due to him.

On June 27th petition of the receivers to exchange tideland contract they had for warehouse and building near it, reciting that they had no use for the tideland contract and that the warehouse and building would be useful. That is granted.

On the 30th of June there is an intervention of the Federal Insurance Company having made a preferred claim for $3,581, or for premiums. Order was granted. Then there is an intervention of a company in England for a preferred claim of $181.80, and a common claim of $1,159 for insurance premiums. An order is made granting that.

On July 14, 1904, receivers petition to borrow $125,000 on warehouse receipts for use in putting up 1904 pack. Granted.

I overlooked that on the 10th of May here the receivers petitioned, reciting that they need $100,000 to pay bills preparatory to removing offices to Bellingham. That they have on hand at Seattle salmon worth $160,000, in New York salmon worth $235,000, in England salmon their equity in which is worth $200,000—that is, salmon for which they had received an advance under a previous order from the London brokers, and they pray leave to borrow $100,000 on warehouse receipts. That is granted.

On the 6th of September petition of the Chong Fish Company filed.

On the 1st of October receivers petition to sell bulk of assets. This petition receipts one and a fourth million original issue of receivers' certificates, and that they have been retired, and they have $750,000; that the receivers had operated canneries in 1903, the cannery at Blaine in Washington and 12 canneries in Alaska; packed 386,856 cases of salmon at a cost of $1,200,000 and sold 205,000 cases for $1,000,000 over and above brokerage, transportation, storage, and insurance charges, and also realized $2,900,000 out of sales of assets, most of which was the 1902 pack, including $88,156 under the Alaska court orders; they have on hand of the 1903 pack, in England 125,000 cases pledged for advances, in the east 50,000 cases, in Seattle 25,000 cases; that in the season of 1904 they had operated five canneries in Alaska; the output was 247,000 cases, out of which they have and will realize $1,000,000; that when appointed there were labor claims of $136,000, of which $108,000 were paid, unsecured creditors $3,400,000; recites that the reorganization committee, composed of stockholders and the large creditors, wished a sale to be made of everything except salmon, receivers' bills receivable and supplies on hand; that all the costs of the 1903 operation had been paid except $2,000, and that they will be able to pay all expenses and leave a surplus.

Now, this petition describes the assets sought to be sold divided into 23 groups of eleven pages—each cannery will constitute a group in itself with the surrounding properties and then the steamers, etc.; that the cash on hand at the time they were appointed was $38,000; that they made betterments at an expense of $80,000; that they had handled up to February, 1904, which was the close of the 1903 pack business, $3,320,000; that they had expended $3,175,000; that the balance on hand at the end of the 1903 work was $144,600; that they had received as a result of the 1904 operation $753,000, including $144,600 that was on hand; that they disbursed $659,000, and the balance is $94,294; that it would require $350,000 more to close all the accounts exclusive of all the expenses of the receivership; that the net gain of the 1903 operation was $108,000, and 1904, estimate of $112,000, but not including—not deducting the expenses of administration—that means the receiver's compensation.

Now, they suggest that upset price be set upon each single group, and that there be an upset price put on the whole thing in case it should be sold in the aggregate, when there is on the same day an order to the clerk of the court to pay out of the registry of the court to the receiver the amount received from the sale of the Anacortez lot. On the same day there is an order of sale of the assets, excluding the pack on hand, etc., as it excludes it in the petition, two-thirds of the proceeds to go to the Alaska court and one-third to the Washington court.

Mr. McCoy. Why was that?

Mr. Preston. Why, that was recited to be a fair division of the values of the property according to their locations, as I understand it.

On October 1, 1904, there is an answer filed by the receivers to Shing Mow's intervention, an order of reference on it; an answer to the petition of Wing Hong Shing, an order of reference on it.

On November, 3, 1904——

The Chairman. Those Chinamen were handling the contract labor.

Mr. Preston. You would call them boss Chinamen; they were contractors.

On November 3, 1904, the receivers petitioned for leave to settle a $5,000 salvage claim made against them, for $500. That is granted.

November 18, 1904, they petitioned for leave to sell a $2;800 claim against an insolvent debtor for $750. That is granted.

November 23, 1904, they petitioned for leave to grant order of sale so as to include balance of property because they were not able to effect any sale without it; to permit the creditors to apply—if any creditor is a purchaser—to apply on his bid so much of his claim in amount equal to the dividend which would be coming to him on his claim, and requiring the purchaser, if he were a creditor, to retire the receivers, certificates. Supplemental decree of sale made on that petition.

On December 19, 1904, the receivers object to the confirmation of sale of certain groups—3, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 18.

December 21, 1904——

The Chairman. You mean objected to the results of the bidding?

Mr. Preston. To the results of the bidding. I would explain here that this sale was to be made by the master in chancery. He made the same and sold different groups to different people and the receivers object to certain groups.

December 21, 1904, the master's report is filed on groups 4, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14, for $6,600.

December 24, 1904, there is an order of confirmation of the sale of group 6 for $40,000, $1,982, and $25,000, a mortgage taken for $2,200, and a rejection of all other sales—or a refusal to confirm the other sales.

December 30, 1904, the receivers approve the sale of group 9 for $8,500; group 10 for $750, and object to others.

On January 1, 1905, there was a notice filed of the claim of the Pacific Selling Company. That was the one that was subsequently rejected.

January 9, 1905, the supplementary report of the master showing Alaska sale for $43,375.

January 29, 1905, an order allowing Mr. Kerr $15,000 on account of services as receiver.

February 4th, there is a supplemental report.

March 10th, the receivers petition and report claims filed with them of creditors; debentures $1,698,000, unsecured notes $1,215,000, collateral notes $121,000, which collateral will pay judgments $17,575, general creditors $44,168; total $3,000,097. Their report rejected claims $677,000; contingent liabilities $670,000—that contingent liability is explained more in detail in the report, being the endorsement of this company on the notes of the Pacific American Fisheries Company, an allied company, which was also in receivership at the same time. This company owning all of the capital stock of the other company except either ten or fifteen shares—I forget exactly.

February 15, 1905, there was a lease of the Orca cannery.

February 15, 1905, motion of purchaser of one parcel to shorten the time for confirmation.

February 17, 1905, receivers report recommending acceptance of bid of $205,000 for the large bulk of the groups and the rejection of separate bids, but asking that first notice be given to all the creditors.

February 4, 1905, there is a master's supplemental report of the sale.

February 8, 1905, the receivers' petition to pay $225,000 on account of receivers' certificates out of the sinking fund for interest, reciting that they only got two per cent on the deposit and certificates were bearing six per cent.

February 14, 1905, receivers object to certain bids and recommend certain others, and there was an order confirming the sale of those they recommend. Then Humphreys, the purchaser of one of the groups, moves for confirmation of his sale, and his petition that the time for the consideration of the matter be shortened is granted by the order of February 15.

February 17, 1905, a creditor objects to the sale of Humphreys', and an order then fixing March 6th for the hearing and directing notice to creditors is made.

February 18, 1905, Humphreys again moved for confirmation and gives notice of his motion, and supports it by two affidavits of himself and one of another man. Then the bid of Spencer is received. He is a man who bids $205,000, and he objects to Humphreys' sale.

The CHAIRMAN. What was the amount of Humphreys' bid?

Mr. KERR. $38,000. That was one of the canneries along what we call the westward of Alaska. There was one at Nushigak and one at Karnick and one at Kanai and one at Orca, and we sold to the Northwestern Fisheries Company all this group at the same time that Humphreys bid on the Orca cannery. [Here Mr. Kerr makes some further explanation which is inaudible to the stenographer.]

Mr. PRESTON. February 21, 1905, there is a motion and affidavit of Humphreys filed; on the same day a man by the name of Talton files objections to the Spencer purchase of groups 2 and 3.

March 2, 1905, Humphreys files a bond—I do not remember what that bond was for.

Mr. KERR. Humphreys got a lease of the cannery and the bond was to secure the lease to Humphreys.

Mr. PRESTON. On the 2d of March the court makes an order to the receivers to conform to Humphreys' sale.

March 3, 1905, he makes an order for the lease of the Orca cannery to Humphrey. Now, the reason for that as I gather it from the paper, was that the next season was so close, while that contest was going on for the sale, that they had better lease it for operation—maybe I am not right about that.

Mr. KERR. That is substantially right. It was leased and subsequently it was sold to him for $40,000. I do not know the exact amount; probably it will appear in there later.

Mr. PRESTON. March 6, 1905, Spencer, a large bidder, files objections to certain of the sales and then there is an objection to the sale of a certain tugboat to Spencer. Then the tugboat files objections to the Spencer sale, and then the tugboat files a motion against the master's report and asks for a confirmation of the sale made of the group to it; then Humphreys objects to the confirmation of the Spencer sale, and Humphreys files a motion attacking the master's report and asks for the confirmation of the sale to him. Then a man by the name of Field, who was a personal-injury plaintiff against the receivers, files an objection against any distribution of the funds of the creditors which would leave him out, and gives notice of hearing, and the receivers give notice of hearing his petition. Then there is a petition of the receivers to settle with a certain creditor who holds $100,000 of collateral and pay $22,500 in cash to the receivers—in other words, discounting $2,500. This is granted on the recommendation of the petitioners.

March 10, 1905, there is a petition to sell the tug Alice for $5,150. That is granted. On the same day the purchaser of the Blaine cannery petitions to be paid $1,700 for missing articles, showing that he bought according to the inventory, and when he came to inventory them that there was that much missing. That is granted. Then there is an order on that date establishing claims of the creditors, in accordance with the report of the receivers, rejecting those claims which the receivers rejected.

March 14, 1905, there is an order confirming the sale to Spencer, except the Orca cannery, and in so much as the Alaska judge is absent from his jurisdiction and they can not have a confirmation of that sale in time for the 1905 season the receivers recommend that they lease the canneries to Spencer for the 1905 season pending an opportunity to get a confirmation from the Alaska court.

April 1, 1905, order directing the clerk to pay the receivers the proceeds of the Blaine cannery, the masters having sold it and having returned the proceeds into the registry of the court.

April 3, 1905, the receipt of the receiver to the clerk for that amount is filed.

April 25, 1905, there is an order to retire the balance of receivers' certificates, $462,500.

May 2, 1905, the master petitions for leave to amend his return of sale, Blaine cannery. That is granted.

May 3, 1905, the receivers petition for leave to sell vessels to Humphrey for $38,500. There is a figure ⅓ in there somehow, and I can not translate it on my memorandum.

May 8, 1905, there is an order confirming the Spencer sale.

May 9, 1905, an order that the balance in excess in the sinking fund—that is to say, that is left after the retirement of the receivers' certificates—be paid over to the receivers.

May 25, 1905, there is a petition of the receivers for leave to sell a yacht which they say was built by the company for a pleasure yacht, and they have no use for it, and they can get ten thousand dollars for it, and it costs fifteen thousand dollars. That is granted.

May 29, 1905, an order fixing the master's compensation for the sale and his memorandum of expenditures and costs made in the sale; and then there is an order of the clerk to pay the receivers $29,000 out of the registry, proceeds of one of the master's sales.

June 20, 1905, Humphrey petitions for allowance for shortages on the Orca cannery, $4,454. That petition is the same in effect as the other one for shortages.

June 27, 1905, there is an order exonerating Humphrey from his bond.

June 30, 1905, order to clerk to pay receivers $44,394, proceeds of the master's sale.

August 2, 1905, there is a claim filed by Johnson claiming a preference by virtue of a judgment.

August 21, 1905, there is a stipulation extending time for the proofs in the Chinese cases.

September 11, 1905, the Northwestern Fisheries Company files a petition reciting that it has become the successor in interest of Spencer and Humphreys in their bids. And it claims a shortage of $3,300; that is granted.

Same date receivers report additional claims of creditors and an order of court establishing those claims. Then there is an order by consent dismissing Humphreys' petition for shortage on his own motion.

October 19, 1905, memorandum decision of 12 pages by Judge Hanford disallowing Chinese claims. I will not go into it except to say that it refers to the merits of their claim of guaranty that they are not entitled to any damages for the breach of guaranty.

November 3, 1905, there is a petition of Drew to correct a difference given him by the defendant before the receivership, reciting that there was an error in the description. That is granted.

November 4, 1905, there is a claim of Griffith Deering & Company for brokerage, and then there is a claim of Blair on the $5,000 debenture, a claim of Martin on $3,000 debenture—filed.

On November 6th, there is a claim of a man named Ross for professional services as attorney rendered the company, he claiming a lien on the papers in his hands, so as to entitle his claim to preference. There is a memorandum filed in support of that.

On the same date there is an order made by the court allowing compensation as follows:

To Kerr, reciting previous allowance of $15,000 and allowing $20,000 more; to McGovern, reciting previous allowance of $3,759.15—I can not find that in the records, that previous allowance, it may have been back east—for allowance, or payment or whatever it was, was approved in the order and he is allowed $21,240.85, so much more to bring it up to $35,000, on a par with Mr. Kerr's allowance. Mr. McCord was allowed previously $10,000, and in this order he is allowed $16,000 more, making $26,000 in all.

Now, this order recites an appearance of John P. Hartman and George De Steiguer for creditors whose claims aggregate $1,800,000; and the appearance of Peters and Powell for creditors whose claims aggregate $500,000; of R. A. Ballinger as attorney for the plaintiff; and that these attorneys and the receivers' attorneys have stipulated in open court that the matter be left to the court to decide the amount.

Mr. HUGHES. Is there anything in the record showing any exception to the amount allowed?

Mr. PRESTON. No objection or protest shown. There is a petition filed with the receivers to settle the infringement suit for $1,000, and an order granting that. That recites a very much larger claim for damages on the part of the patentee.

November 14, 1905, the receivers' petition to pay out $170,000 to creditors, which equals five per cent dividend. That is granted.

November 28, 1905, there is some proof filed in support of the Ross claim. An order allowing it in part as a preferred claim and in part as a common claim.

On December 30, 1905, Knowles files a claim against the receivers for alleged services rendered them, $1,150.

May 7, 1907, receivers' petition for leave to correct master's deed to the Anacortez lot for some misdescription, and there is an order directing the present master in chancery to make the correction. The old master in chancery was Judge Eben Smith, who died, and Judge Richard Greene succeeded him.

April 23, 1908, there is a memorandum decision by Judge Hanford disallowing the Knowles claim.

May 5, 1908, there is the receiver's final report showing total receipts $3,255,880.00; total disbursements $3,183,504.98; balance on hand, $72,375.13, which will pay a dividend to creditors of 2.47 or 2.47 per cent. There is an order made directing notice to be given to creditors.

May 22, 1908, proof on the publication of notice is filed and then an order is made directing that .0247 dividend be paid. This order bars all other creditors who had not presented their claims, and directs the receivers to store away and keep the books and records of the receivership for one year thereafter, then to be disposed of as they see fit. At this time is filed a notice of the withdrawal of certain creditors' claims.

February 23, 1909, the receivers' report, that is, Mr. Kerr makes this report of the filing dividend, showing that there is $1,885 left over, and authorizes an order allowing that amount to Mr. Kerr as additional compensation, inasmuch as he alone had done all the later work of closing up the estate, and on the same day an order was made discharging the receiver.

EXHIBIT NO. 65.

Puget Sound Sawmill & Shingle Company, a Washington corporation, plaintiff, vs. Pacific American Fisheries Company, a New Jersey corporation, defendant. No. 1079.

1903.

Mar. 3. Bill of complaint filed. Contract creditor $4,000 alleges capitalization of defendant $5,000,000, $1,000,000 preferred and $4,000,000 common. Defendant indebted to Washington people $50,000, and generally half a million. Defendant insolvent. Defendant's business consists of the operation of canneries in Washington and in connection therewith steam and sailing vessels, pound nets, and fish traps. Receiver necessary to prevent many suits in different jurisdictions tending to waste assets. Wherefore prays for appointment of receiver to operate during the fishing season of 1903. R. A. Ballinger, solicitor for complainant.

Answer admitting allegations. McCord for defendant.

Order appointing Thos. B. McGovern, George D. Hallick, and James A. Kerr as receivers.

Oath and bond of Kerr.

Mar. 9. Petition of Kerr, setting forth the unity of interest between the Pacific Packing & Navigation Co. and defendant, by unity of operation, and suggesting that receivers in this case indorse the $80,000 worth of receivers' certificates issued by the receivers of the P. P. & N. Co. and the certificates become a lien upon the properties of the defendant.

Order granting petition.

Mar. 28. Petition of receivers suggesting the operation of the defendant's canneries; expectation 200,000 cases. Ask leave to issue receivers' certificates $750,000 to obtain money to operate the canneries.

Order granting petition constituting certificates first lien upon all property and the proceeds of the salmon to be packed to be put into a sinking fund for the retirement of the certificates, except $500,000 for operating purposes.

1903.

Mar. 31. Oath of McGovern.

Apr. 3. Bond of McGovern.

Apr. 7. Inventory. Assets, $600,000. Liabilities, $870,000, consisting of canneries, saltery, boats, bills receivable, etc.

Apr. 13. Petition of receivers, reciting offer of $1,000 for three acres of land in Whatcom County; recommending the same.

Order granting the same.

Apr. 25. Oath and bond of Hallick.

May 11. Amended inventory. Assets, $1,100,000. Liabilities, $721,000.

May 25. Order authorizing receivers to enter a bond to suspend injunction in infringement case.

June 25. Receivers' first report, showing cash on hand at appointment $205.00. Receipts to May 31, including that, $170,000. All disbursed except $514.00.

July 2. Second report of receivers. Covers same dates as first report.

July 31. Order permitting receivers to institute action against steam schooner Olympic and owners.

Aug. 28. Second report to July 31st. Disbursed $109,265. Overdraft $120.00.

Oct. 30. Receivers' third report to August 31st. Disbursements $87,511.00, leaving overdraft $314.75.

Receivers' fourth report to September 30, 1903. Receipts $45,671.00; all disbursed except $24.00.

Nov. 18. Receivers' fifth report to October 31, 1903. Receipts $45,530.00 and disbursements $44,326, balance on hand $1,228.00.

1904.

Jan. 7. Receivers' sixth report to November 30, 1903. Receipts $15,256.93, disbursements $16,123.00, balance on hand $362.07.

Feb. 26. Receivers' seventh report to December 31, 1903. Receipts $5,130.00, disbursements $5,392.00, balance on hand $100.00.

Apr. 2. Order directing publication of notice to creditors, and also mailing notice to all known creditors requiring creditors to present claims within 30 days of first publication.

May 27. Petition of receivers for leave to operate at least one cannery during 1904. Expected output 50,000 to 75,000 cases; recommending better to continue operations than to liquidate. Shows a deficit of $55,000 in 1903 operation; that $357,000 only of the receivers' certificates were issued. Suggest the issuance of $300,000 more certificates, of which $100,000 to be issued for 1904 operations and balance for pro rata retirement of old issue.

Order granting petition.

Oct. 1. Petition of receivers recites 1903 operations resulted in 80,000 cases to cost $450,000. Net proceeds thereof $317,000. That in the season of 1904 receivers operated the Fairhaven cannery only. Output 45,370 cases. Will realize $260,000. 1903 run was only 30 per cent of expectations. 1904 run less than 50 per cent. Recites indebtedness of defendant $675,000. That in the opinion of the receivers and the reorganizing committee appointed by the stockholders and creditors the property should be sold. There is outstanding of the 1903 issue of receivers' certificates $76,000. Receivers' additional certificates issued $120,000. That the sales from the salmon pack will retire all of the certificates. Petition describes the assets divided into 16 groups. Recommends upset price on the several groups and upon the aggregate sufficient to clean up the accounts of receivers and the expenses of receivership.

Decree of sale as per plan of petition.

Oct. 15. Receivers' eighth report, January 1, 1904, to February 29, 1904:

Receipts	$41,700.00
Disbursements	41,300.00
Balance on hand	464.00

Receivers' ninth report, March 1, 1904, to May 31, 1904, showing:

Receipts	$28,700.00
Disbursements	28,900.00
Balance on hand	305.00

Receivers' tenth report, from June 1, 1904 to August 31, 1904, showing:

Receipts	$64,240.00
Disbursements	62,250.00
Balance on hand	2,292.00

Nov. 19. Master's report filed. Shows the properties sold as an entirety for $310,000 to W. A. Peters.

1904.

Dec. 12. Order of confirmation, showing that Peters was representing C. H. Payne, Colonial Trust Company, and Stuyvesant Fish, and reciting that Peters has assigned to E. B. Demming and his associates his rights under the purchase.

Dec. 31. Order directing the clerk of court to pay the proceeds of the master's sale from the registry of the court to Receiver Kerr.

Receipt of Kerr to the clerk for the same.

Order fixing compensation of master $3,500.00 and his expenses $318.00.

1905.

Jan. 9. Petition in intervention of the National Bank of Commerce et al., debenture holders of the Pacific Packing & Navigation Company, alleging that the packing company was insolvent but the Fisheries Co. solvent, and that the Fisheries Company had been wrecked by the Packing Company in to the interest of certain of its creditors. They ask to be heard in opposition the allowances of said conspiring creditors whose claims aggregate $500,000.

Order granting leave to intervene, and that upon answer the cause be referred to the master in chancery. In the meantime suspending proceedings on the contested claims.

Jan. 25. Receipt of Kerr, receiver, to clerk for balance purchase money, $24,019.00.

Feb. 1. Report on claims.

Mar. 31. Petition of receivers for compensation to themselves and attorney.

Order making following allowances on account:

To McGovern	$8,000
To Kerr	8,000
To McCord	8,000

May 10. Order to pay dividends to creditors recites withdrawal of objections to all of aforesaid contested claims, except that of Payne and Colonial Trust Company, aggregating $500,000.

Order fixing May 29th for hearing of matter, and directing notice to each creditor of Pacific Packing & Navigation Company by mail.

Protest of the Alaska Packers' Assn. against the said two claims.

June 1. Claim of National Storage Company filed, $4,049.00.

Order allowing that claim for $591.00 only, and other claims.

June 2. Decree allowing the contested claims directing a 30 per cent dividend.

Nov. 4. Claim of Sheehy.

Receivers' report of 357 cancelled certificates.

Nov. 13. Petition to compromise infringement claim for $5,000.

Order granting petition.

Nov. 16. Order of court upon petition of receivers for compensation to themselves and their attorney. Appearance in court for the receivers. Ballinger for the complainant, Peters & Powell for creditors representing $500,000. Hartman & De Steiguer for the syndicate of creditors of the Pacific Packing & Navigation Co. whose claims aggregate $1,800,000 recites stipulation in open court that the amount should be left to the court. Recites previous allowance of $8,000 to Kerr, $8,000 to McGovern, and $8,000 to McCord and makes further allowance of $9,000 to Kerr, $9,000 to McGovern, and $2,000 to McCord.

1906.

Jan. 8. Petition of receivers reciting amount on hand, $38,800.00, which warrants 5½ per cent additional dividend. Recites an agreement between Hallick and Alexander & Green, his attorneys, and the creditors of both companies, by which Hallich was to receive $3,000 and Alexander & Green $2,000.

Order making said allowances and directing 5½ per cent additional dividend.

Mar. 12. Receivers' twelfth report, from March 9, 1905, to March 9, 1906, shows balance on hand March 9, 1905, $292,583. Receipts since, $360,000. Disbursements to receivers and attorneys, $49,000; to creditors, $230,134. to plaintiff's attorney, $250.00. and other accounts, so as to leave a balance of $7,362. It appears from this that there were only six creditors.

Mar. 31. Eleventh report of receivers is an historical report of the operations with the canneries. Shows the total receipts of the receivers to have been $975,507, inclusive of the $310,000 realized at the master's sale.

Mar. 12. Order directing payment of further dividend of 1.7 per cent.

Mar. 19. Vouchers for payment of dividends.

Notice to creditors that receivers are to apply for discharge.

Order discharging the receivers.

EXHIBIT No. 66.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 12, 1901.

The undersigned, Heckman & Hanson, a copartnership composed of A. Heckman and M. Hanson, for value received, hereby sell, transfer, assign, and set over unto the Scandinavian American Bank of Seattle all that certain claim and demand now owned and held by the said Heckman & Hanson against the American schooner Alice, her tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with their maritime lien against said schooner for material and labor furnished in her repair, and for moneys advanced to said vessel, as is more particularly shown by the statements hereto attached and made a part hereof, amounting to the total sum of ——— 8017.26 (in pencil).

And the undersigned hereby assign any and all right to enforce said claim and lien by libel or otherwise against said vessel, her owner or owners, and hereby authorizes said Scandinavian American Bank, in their names or in the name of said bank, to bring such suit or action as may be necessary to enforce the claim and demand aforesaid, together with the maritime lien or liens thereto connected.

This assignment is made as collateral security to the said bank for obligations and overdraft now held by said bank against said Heckman & Hanson; and the undersigned hereby authorizes said bank to apply on their indebtedness to said bank any and all sums received by virtue of this assignment.

In witness whereof said Heckman & Hanson have hereunto set their hands and seal the day and year first above written. Executed in the presence of:

HECKMAN & HANSON, [SEAL.]
By ——— ———.

EXHIBIT No. 67.

THE SCANDINAVIAN AMERICAN BANK,
Seattle, Wash., June 13, 1901.

Messrs. HECHMAN & HANSON,
Ballard, Wash.

GENTLEMEN: Your overdraft at close of business to-night amounts to $6,917.62, which you will please cover by 12 o'clock noon to-morrow.

Yours, respectfully,

E. L. GRONDAHL, 1st Vice Pres.

(Indorsed on back:) Aug. 7/03. Petitioners' Exhibit ——. Eben Smith, United States master in chancery, district Washington, northern division.

EXHIBIT No. 68.

[Cat. No. 528. Off. No. 105396. Ex. 68.]

Abstract of title of the schooner or vessel called the Alice, of Seattle.

Grantor.	Grantee.	Species of conveyance.	Date of conveyance.	Consideration.	Received for record—	Book of record.			Part conveyed.
						B/S.	Mtg.	Page.
J. A. Hooper.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
F. P. Hooper.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....
			1900.		1900.
C. F. S. Lass.....	W. S. Milnor.....	B/S...	May 11	$10	June 27, 9 a. m.	9	.....	97	All.
W. S. Milnor.....	E. L. Grondahl..	Mtge..	June 28	20,000	July 3, 9 a. m.	.....	6	13	All.
			1901.		1901.
W. S. Milnor.....	D. A. McArthur.	B/S...	Mar. 1	1	Apr. 8, 9 a. m.	10	.....	61	All.
D. A. McArthur..	Wm. M. Calhoun, trustee.	B/S...	Mar. 29	1	Apr. 8, 9 a. m.	10	.....	62	All.
C. W. Ide..... / W. S. Marshal....	P. L. Larsson, as receiver of Heekman & Hanson.	B/S...	Sept. 23	6,000	Oct. 11, 9 a. m.	.....	3	416	All.
P. L. Larsson, as receiver of Heekman & Hanson.	Schooner Alice, incorporated.	B/S...	Sept. 28	15,000	Oct. 11, 9 a. m.	11	.....	14	All.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true abstract of conveyances of the schooner or vessel called the Alice, now of Seattle, as appears by the index of conveyances in this office.

CHAS. MILLER, Dep. Coll. of Customs.

CUSTOMHOUSE, PORT TOWNSEND, Jany. 20th, 1902.

(On back:) Aug. 7, 1903. Petitioners' exhibit. Eben Smith, United States master in chancery, district of Washington, northern division.

EXHIBIT No. 69.

United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. No. 2050. The Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, et al., petitioners, v. Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee of the estate of Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, bankrupt, and John Anisfield Company, respondents. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. Transcript of record on petition for revision under section 24b of the bankruptcy act of Congress, approved July 1, 1898, to revise, in matter of law, certain orders of the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division.

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. No. —. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

PETITION FOR REVIEW.

To the Honorable Circuit Judges for the Ninth Judicial District:

Your applicants, Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation; Smith, Daniels, Kelleher & Company, a corporation; Imperial Candy Company, a corporation; Black Manufacturing Company, a corporation; Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation; Tootle, Campbell Co., a corporation; Bradshaw Bros., True Shape Hosiery Co., Sutro Bros. Braid Co., Pioneer Suspender Co., American Paper Co., Harry E. Lewis, Love-Warren-Monroe Co., Gorham Rubber Co., Standard Oil Co., Superior Candy & Cracker Co., Lowman & Hanford Co., Pickard-Garde Co., Chas. Emmerick & Co., E. Reis & Company, J. B. Powles & Co., A. Stein & Co., Clement Dranger & Co., N. Y. & Chemnitz Netting Co., Stone & Co., H. A. Caesar & Co., J. S. Temple, Interwoven Stocking Co., Western Fancy Goods Co., J. B. Crowley, Moore-Watson Dry Goods Co., David Bros., L. Samter & Sons, Luscombe & Isaacs, Spool Cotton Co., Julius Kayser & Co., B. Hart & Bro., Nonotuck Silk Co., Clayburgh Bros., Pacific Coast Biscuit Co., Excelsior Quilting Company, Columbia Shade Cloth Company [1[1]], Green Shoulder Form & Pad Company, T. B. M. Gates, Coronet Manufacturing Company, Givine Manufacturing Company, Central Stamping Company, Western Manufacturing Company, Staadecker & Company, Richmond Paper Company, Armour & Company, Linen Thread Company, L. J. Clayburg, Hugo de Brock & Company, Springfield Knitting Company, George Frost & Company, Reny-Schmidt & Plesnor, Goodman Mandel, Henrietta Skirt Company, Levi Straus & Co., and Olympia Knitting Mills, creditors of the estate of the above-named bankrupt, do hereby represent as follows:

Your applicants will show unto your honors that on the 27th day of February, 1911, the above-named Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, was adjudged a bankrupt by the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, and thereafter, and on said day, one Sutcliffe Baxter was by said court appointed receiver of said bankrupt estate; and thereafter, and on the 20th day of March, the said Sutcliffe Baxter was elected by the creditors of said bankrupt estate as trustee thereof, and during all the times hereinafter mentioned the said Sutcliffe Baxter did act as the receiver and trustee of said bankrupt estate.

On the said 27th day of February, 1911, the said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver as aforesaid, took possession of the estate of said bankrupt, the same consisting of a stock of goods, wares, and merchandise held for sale in the city of Seattle, Washington; and during the remainder of said day, to wit, the 27th day of February, 1911, the said Sutcliffe Baxter did keep the store, in which said stock [2] of goods, wares, and merchandise of the said bankrupt was contained, open for the sale of the said of goods, wares, and merchandise, to customers as they should appear at said store, and late in said day, the said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver as aforesaid, did close said store and did keep the same closed, and thereafter the business in which said bankrupt was engaged at the time of the appointment of said receiver was no longer conducted, and thereupon the said receiver did cause an inventory and appraisement of the stock of goods, wares, and merchandise in the store of said bankrupt to be made, and did advertise for bids for the same; and thereafter, and on the 16th day of March, 1911, the said Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver of said bankrupt estate, did sell said stock of goods, wares, and merchandise, the same comprising all the property of said bankrupt estate, in bulk to John Ainesfield Co., and did thereupon make return of said sale to said district court and the same was confirmed.

---

[1] Page number appearing at foot of page of original petition, etc.

On the 21st day of March, 1911, an order was entered in said district court allowing to the said Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver of said bankrupt estate, the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars on account of his fees as receiver of said bankrupt estate; and thereupon the said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver as aforesaid, did take and appropriate out of the funds belonging to said bankrupt estate the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars on account of his fees as receiver thereof.

That heretofore, and during the course of said bankruptcy proceedings, an allowance was made by said district court to McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, attorneys for said receiver and trustee, in the sum of three thousand [3] dollars, and the said attorneys aforesaid have received out of said bankrupt estate said sum of three thousand dollars.

On the 23d day of September, 1911, the said district court made an order approving the allowance out of said bankrupt estate to said receiver and trustee of the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, and approving the allowance to said attorneys aforesaid of the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars; and thereupon and at the time of the making of said order, your applicants duly excepted to the same and excepted to the allowance of any sum to the said receiver and trustee in excess of the sum of nine hundred ninety-seven and 52/100 dollars ($997.52); and excepted to the allowance of any sum to said attorneys in excess of the sum of nine hundred ninety-seven and 52/100 dollars ($997.52), which said exceptions were at said time duly allowed by said court; and your applicants do aver and urge by this petition that as a matter of law the said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee as aforesaid, was the custodian of said bankrupt estate only, and did not carry on the said business of said bankrupt, and is, therefore, entitled to an allowance of fees as custodian of said estate, and not otherwise.

The said Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver of said estate, received the sum of sixty-one thousand three hundred twelve and 87/100 dollars ($61,312.87), and no more, and as trustee of said estate has received the sum of fifty-four thousand four hundred ninety-six dollars ($54,496.00), and no more, and all the estate of said bankrupt has been sold and converted into cash.

On or about the 26th day of April, 1911, your applicants, as creditors of said bankrupt estate, filed an amended [4] petition herein, praying that the sale of the stock of goods, wares, and merchandise belonging to said bankrupt estate and the order of confirmation of said sale be set aside because of fraud, the items of which were set forth in said amended petition, all of which will more fully appear from the copy of said amended petition, which will be included in the transcript of the record transmitted herewith to this court. And on the 29th day of September, 1911, the said court did make an order dismissing said petition and denying to your applicants the relief prayed for in said petition, or any relief, on account of the matters and things set forth therein.

All of the foregoing facts will be made to appear unto your honors by a transcript of the record which will be transmitted to said court.

In consideration of the error thus apparent, your applicants pray that the order of said district court, dated the 23d day of September, 1911, and any order of said court in said proceedings made, granting an allowance to the said receiver and trustee out of said bankrupt estate in any sum in excess of nine hundred ninety-seven and 52/100 dollars ($997.52), and any order of said court granting to said attorneys out of said estate any sum in excess of nine hundred ninety-seven and 52/100 ($997.52) dollars, be reviewed and revised, and that no further proceedings be taken thereon except that the said receiver and trustee be required to return to said estate all amounts received by him out of said estate in excess of nine hundred ninety-seven and 52/100 dollars ($997.52), [5] and that the said attorneys be required to return to said estate all amounts received by them in excess of said sum of nine hundred ninety-seven and 52/100 dollars ($997.52), and that said order of said court dismissing said petition of your applicants for the setting aside of the sale of the property of said bankrupt estate to John Ainesfield Co. and the order of confirmation of said sale, as hereinbefore referred to, be reviewed and revised.

And your applicants pray that notice shall be given as required by the rules of this court commanding all parties interested at a certain time to show cause why the orders hereinbefore referred to should not be reviewed and revised as prayed for.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
W. T. DOVELL,
Attorneys for Applicants.
HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Of Counsel. [6]

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
County of King, ss:

E. G. Anderson, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I am the president of the Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, one of the applicants named in the foregoing petition for review; I have read the foregoing petition, and the matters and things therein set forth are true.

E. G. ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 30th day of September, A. D. 1911.

[SEAL.] H. J. RAMSEY,

Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [7]

(Indorsed:) Original. No. 2050. In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. Petition for review. Filed Oct. 4, 1911. F. D. Monckton, clerk. [8]

(Indorsed:) No. 2050. United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. The Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, et al., petitioners, vs. Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee of the estate of Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, bankrupt, and John Anisfield Company, respondents. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. Petition for revision under section 24b of the bankruptcy act of Congress, approved July 1, 1898, to revise, in matter of law, certain orders of the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division.

Filed October 4, 1911.

F. D. MONCKTON,
Clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. [24]

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. No. —. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

NOTICE OF FILING OF PETITION FOR REVIEW, ETC.

To Sutcliffe Baxter, Esquire, receiver and trustee of the above-entitled estate, and to Messrs. McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, Esquire, his attorneys, and to John Anisfield Company, and to Harold Preston, Esquire, its attorney.

You and each of you are hereby notified that on the 3d day of October, A. D. 1911, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, we will file in the clerk's office of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, in the city of San Francisco, State of California, a petition for review in the above-entitled cause, a copy of which petition is hereto attached as a part of this notice; and we will then ask to have the case docketed and the necessary order made thereon to have such case set down for hearing.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
W. T. DOVELL,
Attorneys for Petitioners.
HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Of Counsel. [9]

(Here follows copy of foregoing petition for review.)

(Indorsed:) Original. No. 2050. In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. Notice. Filed Oct. 4, 1911. F. D. Monckton, clerk. [17]

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. No. —. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

ACCEPTANCE OF SERVICE OF PETITION FOR REVIEW.

The undersigned each hereby acknowledge the receipt of copy of petition of the Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, et al., for review herein, and of notice thereof and service of the same this 2d day of October, A. D. 1911.

MCCLURE & MCCLURE,
Of Attorneys for Sutcliffe Baxter, as Receiver and Trustee.
HAROLD PRESTON,
Attorney for John Anisfield Co. [18]

(Indorsed:) Original. No. 2050. In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. Acceptance of service. Filed Oct. 5, 1911. F. D. Monckton, clerk. [19]

STIPULATION FIXING TIME TO FILE RECORD.

[Telegram. 357zq. 112-N.L. 30 extra in signature. 1070.]

SEATTLE, WASH., Oct. 2–11.

Hon. F. D. MONCKTON,
Clerk United States Circuit Court of Appeals, San Francisco, Cal.:

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in the matter of Charles Knosher and Co., bankrupt. It is hereby stipulated that the time for hearing of petition of Western Dry Goods Company and others for review herein shall not fixed until after the filing of the transcript of record herein, it being agreed, however, that such trancsript of record shall be filed on or before the 23d day of October, nineteen hundred and eleven.

McCLURE AND McCLURE, [20]
Of Attorneys for Sutcliffe Baxter, as Receiver and Trustee.
HAROLD PRESTON, Attorney for John Anisfield Co.
HUGHES, McMICKEN, DOVELL AND RAMSEY,
Attorneys for Petitioners, Western Dry Goods Company et al.

626–p [21]

(Indorsed:) No. 2050. United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Stipulation rehearing and fixing time to file record. Filed Oct. 3, 1911. F. D. Monckton, clerk. [22]

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. No. —. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, bankrupt.

STIPULATION EXTENDING TIME TO NOV. 3, 1911, TO FILE RECORD.

It is hereby stipulated by and between Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver and trustee, the John Anisfield Company, and the Western Dry Goods Company et al., creditors, that the time for filing of transcript of record herein shall be, and is hereby, extended until and including the 3d day of November, A. D. 1911.

McCLURE & McCLURE,
Of Attorneys for Sutcliffe Baxter, as Receiver and Trustee.
HAROLD PRESTON,
Attorney for John Anisfield Company.
NELSON R. ANDERSON,
HUGHES, McMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Attorneys for Petitioners, Western Dry Goods Company et al. [23]

(Indorsed:) Original. No. 2050. In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, bankrupt. Stipulation. Extending time to file record. Filed Nov. 3, 1911. F. D. Monckton, clerk.

TRANSCRIPT OF RECORD ON PETITION FOR REVISION.

ORDER DIRECTING RECEIVER TO MAKE CERTAIN PAYMENTS.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Chas. Knosher & Company (a corporation), bankrupt.

Order of district judge directing payment of expenses, etc., of petitioning creditors.

On consideration of the separate petitions of the petitioning creditors and of the intervening petitioners for payment of costs incurred, and for allowances, it appearing that there are in the possession of the receiver moneys applicable thereto,

It is ordered:

1. That Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver herein, be, and he is hereby, directed and ordered to pay the following amounts unto the following persons:

Shank & Smith, reimbursement of clerk's fees advanced by them in behalf of petitioning creditors, and marshal's fees..... $34.24
Shank & Smith, fees in the matter of preparing and filing the original petition for adjudication and obtaining adjudication..... 250.00
Calhoun, Denny & Ewing, premium on $5,000 bond of J. B. Locke & Potts, intervening petitioners, in the matter of appointment of a receiver before adjudication..... 25.00

[1] McClure & McClure, attorneys' fees for services as attorneys for said intervening petitioners in re appointment of receiver before adjudication and obtaining adjudication..... $100.00

Done in open court this 21st day of March, 1911.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

(Indorsed:) Order of district judge directing payment of expenses, etc., of petitioning creditors. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western District of Washington. Mar. 21, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [2]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, bankrupt.

REPORT OF RECEIVER.

To the Hon. C. H. HANFORD, Judge of said Court:

I, Sutcliffe Baxter, do hereby make and file my report and account as receiver of the above-named bankrupt.

I. I was appointed receiver herein on the 27th day of February, 1911, and required to file a bond in the penalty of $5,000.00. Having been notified of my appointment, I obtained a certified copy of the order thereof, and filed my bond in the penalty required, and in company with McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, whom I retained as my counsel, I visited the premises of the alleged bankrupt at the southeast corner of James Street and Second Avenue, in Seattle, Washington. I there met and interviewed Charles Knosher, the president of the company, and others.

II. The alleged bankrupt turned over the premises to me and gave me complete charge thereof. I found that the bankrupt was a corporation engaged in the operation of a department store at the time I took possession of said premises. The store was filled with customers who were attending a sale which had previously been extensively advertised. I thought it advisable to permit the business to remain open and the sale to go on for the balance of the day, and accordingly permitted the said store to remain open. [3]

III. During the day I consulted with numerous creditors and representatives as to the advisability of continuing the business at retail, and after such consultation, it was agreed by all parties, and it was also my own judgment, that it would be best to close the store at the conclusion of the day's business and proceed at once to take an inventory of all the property. I accordingly retained practically the entire force of employees in the store from the 27th day of February to the 6th day of March, 1911, inclusive, upon which latter day I concluded the inventory of all of the assets which came into my possession and control, and which inventory I duly filed in the office of the referee in bankruptcy. At the conclusion of said inventory I discharged all the employees excepting a few whom it was necessary to retain to assist me in taking care of the property, collect outstanding book accounts, and otherwise advise me regarding matters of importance to the estate. I also arranged to have a transfer of all insurance policies, and as I did not find sufficient insurance, the premium for which had been paid, I thought it best to place additional insurance on the property.

IV. After the filing of the inventory the referee in bankruptcy appointed J. J. Doheny, E. Y. Barr, and O. A. Kjos appraisers, and said appraisers duly appraised the property shown in the inventory and filed their report of appraisement in the office of the referee in bankruptcy. Thereafter the referee in bankruptcy made an order of sale of said property, which sale was set for March 13, 1911, upon sealed bids to be opened before the referee in bankruptcy, and that upon the opening of said bids it was found that one F. Campbell had bid a sum equivalent to $50,027. I made further efforts to obtain a larger bid for the assets, with the result that [4] the original bids were rejected, and upon the opening of new bids on the 15th day of March, 1911, a bid of $57,000 for said assets was received and accepted.

V. I further report that from the time I took possession of said business up to the present time, I have diligently endeavored to collect the outstanding book accounts, and have reduced the same to cash as rapidly as possible.

VI. I desire to report further that it became necessary for me to have an examination made of the books, and to that end I employed Nelson W. Parker, who is an experienced accountant, and that he rendered services on March 13th and 14th, 1911, in connection with the examination and experting of the books of account, for which service said Parker has rendered me a bill of $25.00, which sum I deem reasonable.

---

[1] Page number appearing at foot of page of original certified record.

VII. Attached hereto is an itemized statement of all the receipts and disbursements during my period of service as receiver, and reference thereto is directed in the consideration of this report.

VIII. I have received no compensation for my services as receiver and in conducting the business of the bankrupt under the order of this court.

IX. I further desire to report that I have given my entire time and attention to the management and care of said business from the time I took possession thereof up to the 16th day of March, 1911, at which time I surrendered possession thereof to the purchaser. [5]

Wherefore I respectfully pray that my said account be passed as filed, and that suitable allowances be made to Messrs. McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, and to the duly appointed appraisers, and to myself as receiver and for carrying on the business of said bankrupt, and that I be discharged as receiver herein.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Seattle, Washington, March 20, 1911.

SUTCLIFFE BAXTER,
Receiver. [6]

SUTCLIFFE BAXTER, RECEIVER.

Cash receipts.

Dr. 1911.
Feb.	27.	To cash on hand	$47.97
Feb.	28.	To cash sales, mdse. acct	1,026.30
		Mail order mdse. acct	.30
Feb.	29.	Cash sales & C. O. D.'s	72.88
Mar.	1.	Cash sales	34.75
		Philip A. Baillargeon, a/c receivable	61.15
Mar.	2.	Mdse. a/c, Mrs. Ritter, C. O. D	4.05
		Stamps & car tickets on hand, mdse. a/c	16.78
Mar.		Cash sales	26.62
Mar.	4.	To a/c receivable, Miss Warner	1.10
		To a/c receivable, Miss Evers	1.35
		To a/c receivable, Mr. Schmidt	3.19
		To a/c receivable, Mr. Henderson	13.84
		To a/c receivable, Miss Golay	.56
		To mdse. a/c, Lillian Tom, C. O. D	6.40
		To a/c receivable, Miss Bertrum	11.38
		To mdse. a/c, Mrs. Crewson, C. O. D	2.00
		To a/c receivable, Mrs. Phillips	6.83
		To a/c receivable, Miss Kroeger	15.58
		To a/c receivable, Miss Hopkins	2.33
		To mdse. a/c Mrs. McQuaid, C. O. D	1.85
		To a/c receivable, Mr. Post	10.55
		To a/c receivable, Ethel McKinstry	5.83
		To a/c receivable, C. H. Winslow	12.50
		To a/c receivable F. H. Kern	21.00
		To a/c receivable, J. W. Rine	18.00
		To a/c receivable, Mabel Kapke	13.00
Mar.	6.	To a/c receivable, Mrs. Dick	7.05
Mar.	7.	To mdse. a/c cash found in cash register	5.00
		Mrs. Shirpser, transferred to her debit of a/c on ledger as per contra entry	8.89
		To a/c receivable, cash from Mrs. Tracy, in payment of balance due on suit sold for	20.75
		To profit & loss, check No. 158326 of State of Washington for a something that I don't know anything about	1.20
		To a/c receivable, Mrs. Dick	7.05
		To a/c receivable, Mrs. St. George	1.80
		To a/c receivable, T. Ryan	13.54
		To a/c receivable, Mrs. Boughman	9.20
		To a/c receivable, Miss Bartino	7.00
Mar.	9.	To a/c receivable, Mrs. Berndt	10.50
		To a/c receivable, Mrs. Mortell	5.18
		To a/c receivable, fire ins. a/c refund on fire ins. a/c policy No. 4213801 Fire Ass. of Phil., cancelled 3/9/11	14.45
		To a/c receivable, Mrs. T. H. Powels	2.10
		To mdse. a/c Miss Wilde, C. O. D	.95

Dr.
1911.

Mar.	10.	To a/c receivable, Yesler Cafe		$30.12
		To a/c receivable, Great Western Refining Co		2.10
		To a/c receivable, fire ins. a/c refund of premium on policy No. 7194 Milwaukee Mechanics Ins. Co., cancelled by the company		12.05
[7]
Mar.	10.	To a/c receivable, Providence Hospital		48.95
		To a/c receivable, J. S. Graham		2.06
		To a/c receivable, J. Redelsheimer		.10
Mar.	11.	To a/c receivable, E. Way		9.77
		To a/c receivable, Mrs. Downey		12.75
		To a/c receivable, J. F. Thorne		6.95
		To a/c receivable, Western Dry Goods Co		3.22
		To a/c receivable, J. W. Bullock		8.00
		To a/c mdse. Miss D. Dalgren, C. O. D		15.00
		To a/c mdse. Miss Stuart, C. O. D		3.65
	13.	To a/c mdse. E. M. Rhodes & Co., C. O. D		.28
		To a/c receivable, F. W. Stetson		2.04
		To a/c receivable, H. G. Stoelting		34.28
		To a/c receivable, J. P. Wall, check		9.25
		To contra a/c for legal services, J. P. Wall		123.65
		To a/c receivable, M. Furuya Co		34.89
	14.	To a/c receivable, Frederick & Nelson		.90
		To a/c receivable, The Moran Co		.10
	15.	To a/c receivable, Trick Printing Co		2.16
		To a/c receivable, Alma Peterson		6.66
		To a/c receivable, John Annon		7.15
	16.	To a/c receivable, A. J. Sagel		5.00
		Sale of mdse. furniture, fixtures, automobile & lease, being lot 5 as advertised for sale	57,000.00
		Less inventoried goods from Ely Walker Sons & Co., ordered withheld from sale	$1,074.38
		Less inventoried goods from Hanover, Arnstein & Sigel	$402.75 @
		@ 78.63%=	1,161.46
				55,838.54
		Memo.—Mr. Libby in making certified check overpaid $1,000.00, for which I gave him check No. 63 in settlement.
				57,772.82

[8]

Cash disbursements.

			Cr.
Feb.	27.	American Express	5.82
		Wells-Fargo Express Co	2.15
		Stamps	.30
Feb.	28.	Express package, L. Connor	.45
		Lowman & Hanford, journals	1.25
		Typewriter ribbon	.50
		Car tickets	1.05
		Philip Nelson, salary	3.70
		F. C. Wolter & Co., paper & carbon	7.20
Mar.	1.	Car fare	.05
		Salary, Irving Benedict	1.15
	2.	Lowman & Hanford, journal	.15
	3.	By refund No. 1122	1.25
		Car fare	.10
	4.	Five locker keys, at 25 cents	1.25
		Pay roll:
		By salary, J. H. Henderson	27.00
		By salary, W. Schmidt	29.50
		By salary, M. G. Howard	16.50
		By salary, Mary Howard	9.00
		By salary, Peblye Behrns	7.50
		By salary, Blance Golay	5.00
		By salary, E. Gierke	10.50

1911.			Cr.
Mar.	4.	By salary, Alice Bertrum	$5.00
		By salary, Mrs. Phillips	7.50
		By salary, T. Evers	8.50
		By salary, Flora Clarence	7.50
		By salary, P. Jeffries	1.33
		By salary, Alice Kroeger	29.00
		By salary, Grace Hopkins	4.17
		By salary, R. C. Post	40.00
		By salary, Motaro Unda	12.00
		By salary, Mrs. B. Wilkins	5.52
		By salary, Jim McDonald	8.00
		By salary, H. Warner	12.00
		By salary, Ethel McKinstry	5.83
		By salary, C. H. Winslow	12.50
		By salary, F. H. Kern	21.00
		By salary, J. W. Rines	18.00
		By salary, Mabel Kapke	15.00
		By salary, A. Ferguson	10.40
		By salary, C. J. Smith	13.75
		By salary, Clara Pederson	7.08
		By salary, Elsie Filmley	7.50
		By salary, Ida Schoenfeld	7.50
		By salary, Clara Olds	5.83
		By salary, Frieda Schultz	5.40
[9]
		Pay roll:
Mar.	4.	By salaries, L. E. Nebelhow	5.40
		By salaries, J. S. Frasier	10.00
		By salaries, Grace McKinnons	4.17
		By salaries, Clara Jorgensen	5.00
		By salaries, M. Opletd	5.00
		By salaries, Edith Rogers	5.00
		By salaries, Mary Miller	4.17
		By salaries, E. Anderson	5.00
		By salaries, H. Strickland	7.50
		By salaries, Cecil Piles	7.50
		By salaries, G. Chambers	5.40
		By salaries, Celia Nist	4.17
		By salaries, Mrs. A. J. St. George	14.50
		By salaries, A. Fountain	4.17
		By salaries, Mrs. Dittenfieler	5.83
		By salaries, Pearl Wasson	8.75
		By salaries, L. Christenson	9.00
		By salaries, M. Cassidy	12.00
		By salaries, E. Barr	28.50
		By salaries, Mrs. Hayman	14.00
		By salaries, Mrs. A. Yeager	8.34
		By salaries, Miss Westover	6.67
		By salaries, A. Skankey	40.00
		By salaries, C. Knosher	12.00
		By salaries, J. W. Lloyd	10.00
Mar.	4.	By expense a/c locker key	.25
		By expense a/c Babcocks, sundry dinner	1.95
	6.	Expense a/c locker key	.25
		Expense a/c F. C. Wolter, paper	1.35
		Expense a/c discount on English gold piece	.20
		Expense a/c clippers	.05
		Expense a/c Peblyn Behens, salary, typewriter, 2 days	5.50
		Expense a/c paper fasteners	.20
	8.	Expense transfer of Mrs. Shirpser a/c to debit on ledger as per contra entry No. 473	8.89
Mar.	8.	By expense a/c rent of typewriter 1 week	1.50
		By mdse a/c refund Mrs. Tracy cash advanced for alteration not made	2.00
Mar.	10.	By expense a/c A. Greenus & Co., sign on office door, 343 Arcade Annex	1.00
		By expense, car tickets	1.00

[10]

1911.
			Cr.
Mar.	10.	By expense a/c J. H. Henderson two days services taking inv. of goods withheld from sale. Inventory awaiting order of court.	$7.50
Mar.	11.	By mdse. a/c discount on Western Dry Goods check No. 929....	.06
		Pay roll:
		By expense a/c M. Unda	12.00
		By expense a/c Jim McDonald	8.00
		By expense a/c Mary Howard	10.50
		By expense a/c Mabel Howard	19.25
		By expense a/c E. Barr	33.25
Mar.	13.	By legal a/c, bill of J. P. Wall for legal services per contra entry.	123.65
Mar.	14.	By expense a/c stamps	.10
Mar.	16.	By expense a/c West & Surrey	1.00
		By fire insurance Stella G. Webster	315.00
		By fire insurance, E. Way & Co.	24.50
		By expense, Independent Tel. Co.	3.25
		By expense, salary E. Barr	19.00
		By expense, salary M. F. Howard	6.00
		By expense, salary Jim McDonald	5.35
		By expense, salary Mataro Unda	8.00
		By expense, salary M. G. Howard	11.00
Mar.	17.	By expense, a/c W. H. Barnes & Son garage, ½ month	10.00
Mar.	18.	By expense, a/c Jim McDonald, message boy	1.50
		By expense, a/c rubber stencil	.35
		By expense, a/c Mrs. H. M. Norton, typewriting	1.50
		By balance, cash on deposit in Seattle National Bank	56,486.17
			57,772.82

[11]

SUTCLIFFE BAXTER, Receiver.

Summary of cash receipts.

To collections of a/cs receivable	$641.80
To merchandise sales	1,199.08
To miscellaneous	55,931.94
	57,772.82

Summary of cash disbursements.

By expense a/c	$811.30
By merchandise a/c	3.31
By miscellaneous a/c	472.04
By balance, cash on deposit in Seattle National Bank	56,486.17
	57,772.82

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, ss:

Sutcliffe Baxter, being first duly sworn, on oath says: That he is the receiver in the above-entitled matter; that he has heard the foregoing report read, knows the contents thereof, and believes the same to be true. [12]

[SEAL.] SUTCLIFFE BAXTER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of March, A. D. 1911.

LEOPOLD M. STERN,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

[Indorsed:] Report of receiver. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, Mar. 21, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [13]

OBJECTIONS OF SEATTLE MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION ET AL. TO ALLOWANCE OF RECEIVER.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

Objections to allowance of receiver.

Comes now the Seattle Merchants' Association, attorney in fact for Excelsior Quilting Company, Columbia Shade Cloth Company, Green Shoulder Form & Pad Company,

T. B. M. Gates, Coronet Manufacturing Company, Givine Manufacturing Company, Central Stamping Company, Western Manufacturing Company, Staadecker & Company, Richmond Paper Company, Armour & Company, Linen Thread Company, L. J. Clayburg, Hugo De Brock & Company, Springfield Knitting Company, George Frost & Company, Reny-Schmidt & Plesnor, Goodman Mandel, Henrietta Skirt Company, Levi Straus & Co., and Olympia Knitting Mills, by Hughes, McMicken, Dovell and Ramsey, and Nelson B. Anderson, their attorneys, and respectfully show the court:

I. That they are unsecured creditors of the bankrupt herein, and that their claims are approved and allowed as follows:

Excelsior Quilting Company	$25.52
Columbia Shade Cloth Company	66.00
Green Shoulder Form & Pad Company	11.94
T. B. M. Gates	13.00
Coronet Manufacturing Company	281.63
[14]
Givine Manufacturing Company	163.00
Central Stamping Company	47.65
Western Manufacturing Company	54.50
Staadecker & Company	770.10
Richmond Paper Company	177.00
Armour & Company	30.05
Linen Thread Company	67.09
L. J. Clayburg	408.80
Hugo De Brock & Company	131.50
Springfield Knitting Company	231.88
George Frost & Company	67.13
Reny-Schmidt & Plesnor	170.65
Goodman Mandel	41.55
Henrietta Skirt Company	64.00
Levi Straus & Co	38.25
Olympia Knitting Mills	73.50

II. That they have read the objections filed in this court on May 15, 1911, by the Western Dry Goods Company et al., and that they hereby adopt them as their own and incorporate them herein by reference as fully as though set out in full herein.

Wherefore your petitioners pray the court to require the said receiver, Sutcliffe Baxter, to repay into the registry of this court the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars ($2,500.00) and take nothing for his services rendered herein as receiver; that the attorney for the receiver, McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, have for their compensation a sum not in excess of $320.00; and that they be required to pay into the registry of [15] this court the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars, less the amount allowed them by the court.

HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Attorneys for Petitioner.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

Nelson R. Anderson, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I am one of the attorneys for the petitioners in the foregoing objections to allowance of receiver; I have read the foregoing objections, know the contents thereof, and believe the same to be true, and make this verification for and on behalf of said petitioners.

NELSON R. ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 24th day of May, 1911.

[SEAL.] GLENN C. BEECHLER,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

Copy of within received and due service of same acknowledged this 24th day of May, 1911.

MCCLURE & MCCLURE.
LEOPOLD M. STERN.

(Indorsed:) Objections to allowance of receiver. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, May 25, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk.
[16]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, bankrupt.

ORDER APPROVING RECEIVER'S REPORT, ETC.

Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver of the above-named bankrupt, having presented his report and account of his doings, receipts, and disbursements as receiver, and having moved to confirm his report, and that allowances be made to him as receiver, and to his counsel for their services; now, therefore, on reading said account and report of the said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver herein;

It is ordered that the same hereby is in all things allowed, approved, and confirmed.

It is further ordered that Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver herein, be, and he is hereby, allowed for his services the sum of $2,500.00, and that the disbursements expended by him in the administration and preservation of the estate and heretofore deducted by him, be, and the same are hereby allowed.

It is further ordered that Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver herein, pay to the following persons, who acted as appraisers, each the sum of $25.00, J. J. Doheny, E. Y. Barr, and O. A. Kjos.

It is further ordered that Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver herein, pay to Nelson W. Parker, for his services in examining and experting the books of account, the sum of $25.00.

It is further ordered that Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver herein, pay to McClure & McClure and to Leopold M. Stern the sum of $2,500.00 as and for an allowance to them as attorneys for the [17] receiver herein.

It is further ordered that Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver herein, after making the payments as herein directed, pay the balance remaining in his hands to the trustee in bankruptcy herein, who shall hereafter be appointed and qualify in this proceeding.

It is further ordered that, upon making such payment, Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver herein, be discharged as receiver of the property, assets, and effects of the above-named bankrupt, and that the bond given by him for the faithful performance of his duties be canceled and discharged, and the sureties thereon released from any further liability thereunder.

Entered in open court this 20th day of March, A. D. 1911.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

(Indorsed:) Order approving receiver's report. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Mar. 21, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [18]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

PETITION OF WESTERN DRY GOODS CO. ET AL. TO SET ASIDE APPRAISEMENT, ETC.

Come now the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, Smith, Daniels, Kelleher & Company, a corporation, Imperial Candy Company, a corporation, Black Manufacturing Company, a corporation, and Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation, by their attorneys, and respectfully show the court:

I. That on the 27th day of February, 1911, Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, was duly adjudicated bankrupt by the above-entitled court, on which day a petition, alleging bankruptcy and an answer admitting bankruptcy was duly filed in said cause and court, and on said day Sutcliffe Baxter was appointed by this court as receiver of the estate of said bankrupt, and the said Sutcliffe Baxter thereupon qualified and acted as such receiver and has been such receiver continuously since the 20th day of March, 1911, and on the said 20th day of March, 1911, the said Sutcliffe Baxter was duly elected and appointed as trustee, and ever since that time he has been and now is the duly qualified and acting trustee herein.

II. Your petitioners are unsecured creditors of the bankrupt herein, and they have filed, proved, and been allowed [19] their claims herein as follows:

Western Dry Goods Co	$5,104.45
Smith-Daniels & Kelleher Co	178.20
Imperial Candy Co	637.91
Black Manufacturing Co	38.40
Seattle Dry Goods Co	512.34

III. On the 9th day of March, 1911, Ole A. Kjos, J. J. Doheny, and E. G. Barr were appointed as appraisers of said estate, and said appraisers did on the 9th day of March, 1911, return a purported appraisement of the estate of said bankrupt, estimating and appraising the same at the sum of sixty-nine thousand five hundred ($69,500.00) dollars.

IV. Your petitioners hereby allege the fact to be that said appraisement was and is grossly erroneous and was induced by fraud and misrepresentation upon and to said appraisers, and that in truth and in fact the fair market value of the estate of said bankrupt, so attempted to be appraised at said time, was, as your petitioners verily believe and allege the fact to be, an amount in excess of ninety thousand ($90,000.00) dollars.

V. On the 16th day of March, 1911, the estate of said bankrupt, consisting of a stock of goods, wares, merchandise, and fixtures, was sold in bulk to the John Ainesfield Co., a corporation, for the sum of fifty-seven thousand ($57,000.00) dollars, which said sale was afterward confirmed by the referee herein. [20]

VI. And your petitioners further represent that the appraisers of said bankrupt estate were induced to return their estimate and appraisement thereof at a grossly inadequate figure, as aforesaid, because of concealment and misrepresentation made to them by the said Charles Knosher & Co. and by the said John Ainesfield Co., whereby the said appraisers were prevented from having a view of the property belonging to the estate of the said bankrupt, and were deprived of an opportunity to truly estimate and appraise the same.

VII. That the said John Ainesfield Co. have taken possession of said estate, and since the date of the purchase thereof have been selling the same at special bankrupt sale, and, as your petitioners are informed and do verily believe, have realized the sum of about fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) in cash from the sale of said estate, and now have on hand a remaining portion of said bankrupt estate so purchased as aforesaid of the value, as your petitioners are advised and do verily believe, of approximately fifty thousand dollars ($50,000).

VIII. Your petitioners verily believe and so allege the fact to be that the said John Ainesfield Co. are now threatening to and will, unless enjoined by order of this court, dispose of the remainder of said stock to an innocent purchaser and place the same beyond the jurisdiction of this court; that the remainder of said estate of said bankrupt is now in the possession of the said John Ainesfield Co. within the jurisdiction of this court. [21]

IX. This application is based upon the affidavits of Eugene G. Anderson and Ole A. Kjos, which said affidavits are hereby expressly referred to and made a part of this petition.

Wherefore your petitioners ask that the appraisement and sale and order of confirmation of sale heretofore made in said proceeding be set aside and that the said John Ainesfield Co. be required to pay into the registry of this court all moneys heretofore received by them out of the sale of the estate of said bankrupt, and that the stock remaining on hand and now unsold be returned to the possession of the receiver herein.

And your petitioners do further pray that an injunctive order be forthwith issued commanding the said John Ainesfield Co., their representatives and agents, from selling, removing, disposing of, or in any way interfering with the remainder of said stock of said bankrupt now in their hands or under their control.

HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY, and NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Attorneys for said Petitioners. [22]

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, County of King, ss:

I, Eugene G. Anderson, president of the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, one of the petitioners mentioned and described in the foregoing petition, do hereby make solemn oath that the statements of fact therein contained are true, and that I make this verification for and on behalf of said corporation petitioner.

EUGENE G. ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of April, A. D. 1911.

[SEAL.] H. J. RAMSEY,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [23]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In Bankruptcy—No. ——. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF EUGENE G. ANDERSON.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

Eugene G. Anderson, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

I am the president and treasurer of the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, one of the creditors of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. About the 12th day of April, 1911, I met one Henderson, who had been one of the department heads of Charles Knosher & Co., and at said time was and now is one of the department heads or employees of J. Ainesfield & Co. in the business now conducted by the latter company in selling the bankrupt stock of Charles Knosher & Co.; the said Henderson voluntarily told me at said time that the said John Ainesfield Co. had already realized from the sale of the bankrupt tsock of the said Charles Knosher & Co. a sum in excess of $40,000, and that there was remaining on hand a portion of said bankrupt stock which would inventory at a sum in excess of $50,000. That then and there the said Henderson told me that he, himself, had taken the inventory [24] of a portion of the stock and assisted in taking an inventory of other portions of the stock upon which inventory the appraisement returned by the appraisers herein was based. That the inventory was reduced so as to falsely represent in value and quantity the stock of said bankrupt; that the purpose in so reducing the inventory was that said stock might be purchased at a grossly inadequate value by the said John Ainesfield Co. under an agreement whereby the said John Ainesfield Co. would purchase said stock at said grossly inadequate value, realize enough therefrom to pay the full amount of their claim against said bankrupt, together with the purchase price at said bankrupt sale, and the balance of said stock would then be returned to the said Charles Knosher & Co.

About 11.40 in the morning of Saturday, April 15th, 1911, I had a conversation with one Hyslop, who is store manager for the said John Ainesfield Co. The said Hyslop, in the course of a conversation, showed me the returns of sales that had been made of said bankrupt stock since the purchase thereof by the said John Ainesfield Co. Said returns showed that there had been realized, over and above all expenses and sums expended for replenishment of stock, the net sum of about $42,000, out of said bankrupt stock, and the said Hyslop then and there stated to me that there was remaining on hand of said bankrupt stock goods, wares, and merchandise of the value of not less than $50,000, and that this could be proven by an invoice thereof.

About 9.30 o'clock in the forenoon of Monday, April 17th, 1911, I had a conversation with E. G. Barr, one of the department heads of Charles Knosher & Co., now an [25] employee of John Ainesfield Co. in the conduct of the sale of said bankrupt stock, and one of the appraisers of said bankrupt estate. The said Barr stated to me that at the time the inventory of the bankrupt estate of the said Charles Knosher & Co. was being taken, he, the said Barr, assisted therein. That at that time there was present in the city of Seattle one Libby, a representative and agent of John Ainesfield & Co., the purchaser of said bankrupt stock; that he, the said Barr, did from time to time confer with the said Libby and did furnish him the inventory figures upon the said stock as the inventory was taken by departments, and at said time furnished to the said Libby statements showing the true value of said stock; that said inventory value was in each instance placed at a sum less than the actual value thereof, and in many instances portions of said stock were omitted from the inventory for the purpose of reducing the inventory of said stock below the actual value thereof; and that as a result thereof the inventory of said stock which was made up and upon which the appraisement thereof was returned, was in a sum far less than the actual value of said stock. That said inventory was so made in pursuance of a plan and conspiracy whereby the said Libby was to purchase said stock at a sum far less than its actual value for the said John Ainesfield Co., and was to hold the same until there should be realized therefrom the purchase price thereof and the claim of the said John Ainesfield Co.; and thereafter the balance of said stock was to be returned to the said Charles Knosher & Co., and that the said Libby and the said Knosher had knowledge of and participated in said plan and conspiracy.

EUGENE G. ANDERSON. [26]

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of April, A. D. 1911.

H. J. RAMSEY,
[SEAL.] Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [27]

In the district court of the United States, for the western district of Washington, northern division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF OLE A. KJOS.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

Ole A. Kjos, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I was one of the appraisers heretofore appointed by the referee in the matter of bankruptcy of the estate of Charles Knosher & Co., on the 9th day of March, 1911. Upon being notified of my appointment as such appraiser I went in company with J. J.

Doheny and E. G. Barr to the store of Charles Knosher & Co. for the purpose of making an estimate and appraisement of the value of said bankrupt estate, and thereupon offered to examine the stock of goods, wares, and merchandise in said store for the purpose of ascertaining the value thereof. I am an experienced dry-goods man and am able to tell from examination the value of such a stock as was comprised within said bankrupt estate. There was present at said store at such time Sutcliffe Baxter, the receiver and trustee, and a man who was represented to me as the attorney for the said Sutcliffe Baxter, whose [28] name I do not now recall. The said attorney thereupon told me that the making of the estimate and appraisement of said estate was a mere matter of form and that I would not be permitted to examine the stock of goods, wares, or merchandise in detail for the purpose of ascertaining their value, but that in making up said estimate and appraisement we, the appraisers, were to be guided by the inventory figures which were then and there shown to us, and that no one was to be permitted to reinventory said goods. At that time the stock in said store was covered and we were not given an opportunity to examine further into the value of said goods in detail for the purpose of verifying the inventory which was offered to us, and thereupon, relying upon said statement as to our duties in the premises, we signed an estimate and appraisement of said stock, being the figures returned upon the inventory which had been theretofore taken.

I have read the affidavit of Eugene G. Anderson, filed herewith, and so far as same relates to a conversation held with Mr. Barr on Monday, the 17th of April, I was present at said conversation and heard the same, and do depose and say that the statements were made by Mr. Barr as stated in the affidavit of the said Eugene G. Anderson; and I do further depose and say that I heard the said Henderson, referred to in the affidavit of Mr. Anderson, make the statements in form and effect as stated by Mr. Anderson in his said affidavit. And the said Henderson, in addition thereto, stated to me that in assisting in the making of the inventory of said bankrupt stock, gross fraud was practiced, and stated in my hearing that in many instances the inventory price was grossly reduced below the actual value of said goods, and that in many instances quantities of goods were omitted from the inventory list; and [29] also stated in my hearing, in particular, that in one instance broadcloth which had cost $2.12½ per yard was inventoried at 50 cents per yard, and afterward sold by John Ainesfield & Co. for $2.98 per yard; and the said Henderson further stated that in another instance a quamtity of Indian linen which had cost $750.00, and was of approximately that value, was inventoried at $250, and the said Henderson generally stated in my hearing that said inventory was knowingly and designedly made so as to show a figure far less than the actual cost of said stock.

OLE A. KJOS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of April, A. D. 1911.

[SEAL.] H. J. RAMSEY,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Indorsed:) Petition. Affidavit of Eugene G. Anderson. Affidavit of Ole A. Kjos. Filed April 20th, 1911, 11 a. m. John P. Hoyt, referee. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western District of Washington. May 5, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [30]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AMENDED PETITION [OF WESTERN DRY GOODS CO. ET AL. TO SET ASIDE APPRAISEMENT, ETC.].

Comes now the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation; Smith-Daniels & Kelleher Co., a corporation; Imperial Candy Company, a corporation; Black Manufacturing Company, a corporation; and Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation, by their attorneys, and respectfully show the court:

I. That on the 27th day of February, 1911, Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, was duly adjudicated bankrupt by the above-entitled court, on which day a petition alleging bankruptcy and an answer admitting bankruptcy was duly filed in said cause and court, and on said day Sutcliffe Baxter was appointed by this court as receiver of the estate of said bankrupt, and the said Sutcliffe Baxter thereupon qualified and acted as such receiver and has been such receiver continuously since the 20th day of March, 1911, and on the said 20th day of March, 1911, the said Sutcliffe Baxter was duly elected and appointed as trustee, and ever since said time he has been and now is the duly qualified and acting trustee herein.

II. Your petitioners are unsecured creditors of the [31] bankrupt herein, and they have filed, proved, and been allowed their claims herein as follows:

Western Dry Goods Co	$5,104.45
Smith-Daniels & Kelleher Co	178.20
Imperial Candy Co	637.91
Black Manufacturing Co	38.40
Seattle Dry Goods Co	512.34

III. On the 9th day of March, 1911, Ole A. Kjos, J. J. Doheny, and E. G. Barr were appointed as appraisers of said estate, and said appraisers did on the 9th day of March, 1911, return a purported appraisement of the estate of said bankrupt, estimating and appraising the same at the sum of forty-two thousand two hundred fourteen and 87/100 ($42,214.87) dollars.

IV. Your petitioners hereby allege the fact to be that said appraisement was and is grossly erroneous and was induced by fraud and misrepresentation upon and to said appraisers, and that in truth and in fact the fair market value of the estate of said bankrupt, so attempted to be appraised at said time, was, as your petitioners verily believe and allege the fact to be, an amount in excess of ninety thousand ($90,000) dollars.

V. On the 16th day of March, 1911, the estate of said bankrupt, consisting of a stock of goods, wares, merchandise, and fixtures, was sold in bulk to the John Ainesfield Co., a corporation, for the sum of fifty-seven thousand ($57,000) dollars, which said sale was afterward confirmed by the referee herein. [32

VI. And your petitioners do further represent that immediately upon the appointment of the receiver and trustee as aforesaid an inventory was taken of said bankrupt stock; that the said inventory was taken by certain employees of the said Charles Knosher & Co., and thereupon said employees conspired with the said John Ainesfield Co. to the end that the inventory of said stock of goods, wares, and merchandise so taken should show an amount greatly less than the fair market wholesale value of said stock. And thereupon said employees of the said Charles Knosher & Co., conspiring with the said John Ainesfield Co., as aforesaid, did fraudulently and for the purpose of deceiving the officers of this court make up an inventory showing the value of said stock of goods, wares, and merchandise as greatly less than the actual market value thereof; and said employees did at said time, in pursuance of said conspiracy, advise the said John Ainesfield Co. of the actual value of said stock, but did at all times conceal said information from all others; and the receiver and trustee did thereupon accept as a true inventory of said stock the false and fraudulent inventory so made up as aforesaid, and upon the assumption that the same did represent the true value of said stock, the said appraisers did return their appraisement and estimate thereof to this court.

VII. And your petitioners further represent that the appraisers of said bankrupt estate were induced to return their estimate and appraisement thereof at a grossly inadequate figure as aforesaid, because of the conspiracy aforesaid and concealment and misrepresentation made to them by the said Charles Knosher & Co. and by the said John Ainesfield Co., whereby the said [33] appraisers were prevented from having a view of the property belonging to the estate of the said bankrupt, and were deprived of an opportunity to truly estimate and appraise the same.

VIII. That the said John Ainesfield Co. have taken possession of said estate and since the date of the purchase thereof have been selling the same at special bankrupt sale, and as your petitioners are informed and do verily believe, have realized the sum of about fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) in cash from the sale of said estate, and now have on hand a remaining portion of said bankrupt estate so purchased as aforesaid of the value, as your petitioners are advised and do verily believe, of approximately fifty thousand dollars ($50,000).

IX. Your petitioners verily believe and so allege the fact to be that the said John Ainesfield Co. are now threatening to and will, unless enjoined by order of this court, dispose of the remainder of said stock to an innocent purchaser and place the same beyond the jurisdiction of this court; that the remainder of said estate of said bankrupt is now in the possession of the said John Ainesfield Co., within the jurisdiction of this court.

X. Your petitioners have heretofore received out of funds distributed by said trustee an amount equal to twelve and one-half per cent (12½%) of the face of their claims as hereinbefore set forth, which said amount your petitioners hold subject to the order of this court, and are ready and willing, and hereby offer, to turn the same, as a part [34] of the estate of said bankrupt, into the registry of this court. That no other or greater sum than an amount equal to 12½% of the face of the claims against said bankrupt estate has been paid.

XI. Reference is hereby made to the affidavits of Eugene G. Anderson and Ole A. Kjos, attached to the original petition herein, which said affidavits are hereby expressly referred to and made a part of this petition.

Wherefore you petitioners ask that the appraisement and sale and order of confirmation of sale heretofore made in said proceeding be set aside and that the said John Ainesfield Co. be required to pay into the registry of this court all moneys heretofore received by them out of the sale of the estate of said bankrupt, and that the stock remaining on hand and now unsold be returned to the possession of the receiver herein.

And your petitioners do further pray that an injunctive order be forthwith issued commanding the said John Ainesfield Co., their representatives and agents, from selling, removing, disposing of, or in any way interfering with the remainder of said stock of said bankrupt now in their hands and under their control.

NELSON R. ANDERSON.
HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Attorneys for Petitioners. [35]

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

I, Eugene G. Anderson, president of the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, one of the petitioners mentioned and described in the foregoing petition, do hereby make solemn oath that the statements of fact therein contained are true, and that I make this verification for and on behalf of said corporation petitioner.

EUGENE G. ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 26th day of April, A. D. 1911.

[SEAL.] NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [36]

Received copy, and I have no objection to amendments, but wish to call Judge Hoyt's attention especially to the new Paragraph VI, as it was not offered at the hearing.

PRESTON.

(Indorsed:) Amended petition. Filed April 26th, 1911, 2 p. m. John P. Hoyt, referee. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. May 5, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [37]

MEMORANDUM DECISION ON PETITION TO SET ASIDE SALE, ETC.

United States District Court, Western District of Washington, Northern Division.
No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

Filed July 19, 1911.

Memorandum decision on petition of creditors to set aside the sale of the bankrupt's stock of merchandise and store fixtures made by the receiver and upon objections of creditors to the allowance of compensation for the receiver and his attorneys.

This is an involuntary bankruptcy case. On the petition of creditors the court appointed as receiver of the bankrupt estate Mr. Sutcliffe Baxter, an experienced business man in whose capacity and integrity I have perfect confidence. The story of his administration of the trust is well told in his report to the court as follows:

"I. I was appointed receiver herein on the 27th day of Frebruary, 1911, and required to file a bond in the penalty of $5,000. Having been notified of my appointment, I obtained a certified copy of the order thereof, and filed my bond in the penalty required, and in company with McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, whom I retained as my counsel, I visited the premises of the alleged bankrupt at the southeast corner of James Street and Second Avenue in Seattle, Washington. I there met and interviewed Charles Knosher, the president of the company, and others.

"II. The alleged bankrupt turned over the premises to me and gave me complete charge thereof. I found that the bankrupt was a corporation engaged in the operation of a department store at the time I took possession of said premises. The store was filled with customers who were attending a sale which had previously been extensively advertised. I thought it advisable to permit the business to remain open and the sale to go on for the balance of the day, and accordingly permitted the said store to remain open. [38]

"III. During the day I consulted with numerous creditors and representatives as to the advisability of continuing the business at retail, and after such consultation it was agreed by all parties, and it was also my own judgment, that it would be best to close the store at the conclusion of the day's business, and proceed at once to take an inventory of all the property. I accordingly retained practically the entire force of employees in the store from the 27th day of February to the 6th day of March, 1911, inclusive, upon which latter day I concluded the inventory of all of the assets which came into my possession and control, and which inventory I duly filed in the office of the referee in bankruptcy. At the conclusion of said inventory, I discharged all the employees excepting a few whom it was necessary to retain to assist me in taking care of the property, collect outstanding book accounts, and otherwise advise me regarding matters of importance to the estate. I also arranged to have a transfer of all insurance policies, and as I did not find sufficient insurance, the premium for which had been paid, I thought it best to place additional insurance on the property.

"IV. After the filing of the inventory, the referee in bankruptcy appointed J. J. Doheny, E. Y. Barr, and O. A. Kjos appraisers, and said appraisers duly appraised the property shown in the inventory and filed their report of appraisement in the office of the referee in bankrubtcy. Thereafter the referee in bankruptcy made an order of sale of said property, which sale was set for March 13, 1911, upon sealed bides to be opened before the referee in bankruptcy, and that upon the opening of said bids it was found that one F. Campbell had bid a sum equivalent to $50,027. I made further efforts to obtain a larger bid for the assets, with the result that the original bids were rejected, and upon the opening of new bids on the 15th day of March, 1911, a bid of $57,000 for said assets was received and accepted.

"V. I further report that from the time I took possession of said premises up to the present time, I have diligently endeavored to collect the outstanding book accounts, and have reduced the same to cash as rapidly as possible.

"VI. I desire to report further that it became necessary for me to have an examination made of the books, and to that end I employed Nelson W. Parker, who is an experienced accountant, and that he rendered services on March 13th and 14th, 1911, in connection with the examination and experting of the books of account, for which service said Parker has rendered me a bill of $25, which sum I deem reasonable.

"VII. Attached hereto is an itemized statement of all the recipts and disbursements during my period of service as receiver, and reference thereto is directed in the consideration of this report.

"VIII. I have received no compensation for my services as receiver and in conducting the business of the bankrupt under the order of this court.

"IX. I further desire to report that I have given my entire time and attention to the management and care of said business from the time I took possession thereof up to the 16th day of March, 1911, at which time I surrendered possession thereof to the purchaser." [39]

By choice of the creditors Mr. Baxter was appointed trustee of the estate under the bankruptcy law.

Subsequent to the approval by the court of the report above quoted, a number of creditors joined in an attack upon the receiver's administration of the trust by objecting to allowances of compensation to him and his attorneys, and by a petition presented to the referee to set aside the sale of the merchandise and store fixtures, alleging conspiracy between the purchaser and employees of the receiver to facilitate the sale for an inadequate price by the making of a fraudulent inventory and charging the receiver with negligence and incompetency. These charges are not supported by the evidence of any witness pretending to have personal knowledge of the facts, but in lieu of such evidence affidavits have been submitted to the court stating, in substance, that certain of the receiver's employees engaged in making the inventory had voluntarily told the affiants that the inventory fraudulently depreciated the value of the stock and that information as to the true value was privately given to the agent of the purchaser. The affidavits also state that the stock was undervalued by the appraisers, who were, by the interference of the receiver and his attorneys, prevented from making their own inventory and denied a fair opportunity to examine the stock. The most important fact in either of the affidavits is that 30 days after the sale one of the employees of the purchaser exhibited to affiant a purported statement of the purchaser's business, showing that in the space of one month, from sales of the stock, $42,000 had been received in excess of expenses and the cost of new goods purchased to replenish the stock, and told the affiant that there was yet on hand in the store an amount of merchandise which would inventory an aggregate amount exceeding $50,000. To corroborate this information the leading attorney for the objecting creditors has made an affidavit asserting "that he has in his possession what purports to be and is represented to him to be the true and original memorandum and data of the inventory as taken in certain departments of the store of said bankrupt; that he has compared such memorandum and data with the receiver's report, and finds a vraiance and difference of over 100 per cent in the items covered, aggregating several thousand dollars, and that he is informed by responsible persons in position to know that this condition was general throughout the store."

It is to be especially noted that there is no pretense that any competitive bidder was deceived as to the value of the stock, or prevented from making his own estimate by an examination thereof in comparison with the inventory, nor that a better price could have been obtained from any would-be purchaser; nor that the bids for the property were in any manner influenced by the appraisement. The affidavits relating to the appraisement do not merit further consideration.

The attorney's affidavit above referred to, I must believe, would not have been made by a more experienced lawyer, for it necessarily creates suspicion as to his own good faith. If the document which he claims to have in his possession were genuine and of any importance, it should have been presented to the court and an opportunity given for scrutiny instead of making it the basis of an affidavit while kept in concealment.

The flimsiness of the evidence relied upon is illustrated by the hearsay statement that broadcloth which cost $2.12½ per yard had been inventoried at 50 cents per yard and after the sale the purchaser had obtained for it the price of $2.98 per yard. The facts as shown by counteraffidavit are that the broadcloth referred to was but a remnant of small value even at the price for which it was finally disposed of.

Since I began to study the record in this case for the purpose of deciding this controversy two additional affidavits have been submitted by the objecting creditors. One of them is made by the general manager of the wholesale department of a dry goods company doing business at Seattle. He claims to have qualifications for the work of estimating the value of bankrupt stocks and of stocks for sale in bulk generally and "that he, after examining the quality and quantities of merchandise in the store of the bankrupt, estimated conservatively that there was at least $80,000 to $85,000 worth of merchandise on hand and so reported to his firm; that his firm, on receiving the report of the receiver, believed, at that time and for the purpose of making its bid, that the receiver's report was a true and correct report and made its bid accordingly."

By this it appears that a man of experience and expert qualifications examined the stock for his firm and found it to be worth at a conservative estimate from $10,000 to $15,000 more than the value [40] shown by the receiver's inventory and so reported to his firm. The firm, however, although in a situation to buy the stock and interested as a creditor in seeing that other buyers should not obtain it for less than its salable value, rejected the report of its expert and relied upon the report of the receiver in making its bid, and now comes as one of the objecting creditors, submitting such an affidavit for the purpose, apparently, of persuading this court to condemn the inventory filed by the receiver which it relied upon and act upon the expert's report which it rejected, as though the mere estimate of value which he made were exact and true.

The other new affidavit referred to is by the proprietor and manager of a large merchandise house in Seattle, who was also one of the bidders for the stock. He states that he has had more than twenty years experience in the dry goods business and that he has made a specialty of estimating the value of stocks of goods in bulk and has handled many such stocks; that he looked at the stock of the bankrupt but had great difficulty in identifying in the shelves goods listed in the receiver's report; that he found it practically impossible to check up from the receiver's report the goods there for the purpose of determining whether the inventory had been taken high, fair, or low; that he estimated that there was from $80,000 to $85,000 cost value of merchandise on hand. This man undoubtedly relied upon his own judgment in fixing the amount which he could afford to pay for a stock in the condition in which it was before the sale, for his affidavit indicates that he was unable to use the inventory. I deem the value of his judgment, as evidenced by his bid for the property, to be much higher, for practical purposes, than his affidavit. His highest bid for the merchandise, store fixtures, and an auto delivery wagon was more than $12,000 less than the amount obtained by the receiver for the same property with the addition of the bankrupt's leasehold interest in the store, which I infer had no salable value separated from the merchandise and fixtures. The receiver obtained no bid for it as a separate item of property.

These two affidavits add nothing to the force of the attack which the objecting creditors are making, because the issue depends, not upon the theoretical value of the assets, but upon the question as to the largest amount of money which by prudence, diligence, and intelligence could have been obtained for the benefit of the creditors.

The entire showing made by the objecting creditors has been candidly met by counteraffidavits, which convince the court that the receiver, his attorneys and employees, transacted the business with fidelity and with due regard for the best interests of all concerned and that they have earned commendation as well as compensation. I will prove this by ciphering.

Assuming as true the statement that the purchaser after obtaining possession of the property realized from sales $42,000 net and adding to that amount $6,000 to cover expenses, which is a high estimate, and deducting $8,000 for estimated difference between cost and selling price, the goods at invoice price would amount to $40,000. Add to this $50,000, the estimated invoice value of unsold goods and $5,000 for store fixtures and we have the total sum of $95,000 as the most extravagant estimate of the value of all the property included in the sale which can be based upon the hearsay evidence relied upon by the objecting creditors. Sixty per cent of that value was obtained by the receiver, and in the light of experience gained by administration of other insolvent estates, including stocks of merchandise, and tested by the bids for this identical property submitted by competent buyers who made their own estimates of its worth, I regard the achievement of the receiver in obtaining such a price in cash for such property by a quick sale as something extraordinary and commendable. A stock of dry goods and general merchandise in a store which has been in trade more than one year necessarily includes odds and ends and things depreciated in value by age. The instances are rare in which so large a stock as the one in question can be readily sold in bulk for spot cash at a price exceeding 50 per cent of the invoice price, or even that much net by selling at retail or in lots. Hence, practical equity dictates that caution should be observed in rejecting the highest bid at a forced sale of such a stock. Without a showing that a better price could have been obtained the court would not have vacated the sale, if an application to vacate had been made before goods had been sold by the purchaser, when no serious injustice would have resulted. There is no such showing now, and upon the consideration of all the papers filed, including the arguments of counsel, there appears to be no substantial ground, legal or equitable, for granting the extraordinary petition to set aside the sale after a large part of the stock of merchandise has been disposed of at retail and passed beyond the each of judicial [41] process whereby it might be restored to the court's custody, rherefore the order of the referee refusing to entertain jurisdiction will be confirmed.

Notwithstanding the objections, compensation will be allowed to Mr. Baxter, in a lump sum, to be computed on the basis of the maximum prescribed by the bankruptcy law, for all of his services as trustee of the estate as well as receiver, and an equal amount will be allowed to his attorneys for their compensation.

C. H. Hanford,
United States District Judge.

ADDENDA.

The attorney for the objecting creditors referred to in this decision has called upon me and exhibited to me the memorandum sheets to which reference was made in his affidavit and has shown that he had substantial grounds for not making profert of the same as evidence, although deemed of sufficient importance to influence him and his clients in instituting these proceedings. I am convinced that he acted in good faith, but the result of my investigations as above announced must remain unchanged.

C. H. Hanford,
United States District Judge.

(Indorsed:) Memorandum decision. Filed in the U. S. district court, western dist. of Washington. July 19, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, Clerk. [42]

ORDER SUSTAINING OBJECTIONS TO AMENDED PETITION.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Chas. Knosher & Co., Inc. (a corporation), bankrupt.

This matter came on to be heard upon the amended petition of the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, and certain other creditors, praying for relief against John Anisfield Co., a corporation, and the objections of said John Anisfield Co. to the original petition, which by stipulation in open court are to be considered as objections to the amended petition, the said petitioners appearing by Nelson R. Anderson and Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey, their attorneys, and said John Anisfield Co. by Harold Preston, its attorney, and the referee, having heard argument of counsel and being sufficiently advised in the premises, does order and adjudge:

That the said objections to the amended petition be, and they hereby are, sustained, and the prayer of the said petitioner for relief denied and said petition dismissed, to which ruling of the referee the said petitioners, by their attorneys, except, and their exception is allowed.

Dated at Seattle, in said district, this 29th day of April, 1911.

John P. Hoyt, Referee in Bankruptcy.

(Indorsed:) Order sustaining objections. Filed April 29, 1911, 11 a. m. John P. Hoyt, referee. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. May 5, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [43]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE.

This matter coming on to be heard and the court having examined the petition filed herein, and it appearing to the court that no notice of the application made herein by Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, and his attorneys was ever given to the creditors herein or to petitioners herein, and it further appearing to the court that the compensation allowed was over and above that allowed by law, and the court being duly advised in the premises,

It is hereby ordered that Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, and Sutcliffe Baxter, trustee, and McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern be and appear before this court on the 10th day of April, 1911, at ten o'clock a. m. to show cause, if any, why the order entered herein on the 20th day of March, 1911, should not be set aside and held for naught, and why the compensation allowed by said order to the receiver, Sutcliffe Baxter, and to his attorneys pursuant to said order, should not be repaid into this court and the proper officer thereof.

Done in open court this 4th day of April, 1911.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge. [44]

RETURN ON SERVICE OF WRIT.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

I hereby certify and return that I served the annexed order to show cause, together with the petition on the therein named McClure & McClure, by handing to and leaving a true and correct copy thereof with Walter McClure, a member of the firm of McClure & McClure, personally, at Seattle, in said district, on the 5th day of April, A. D. 1911.

April 5, 1911.

JOSEPH R. H. JACOBY, U. S. Marshal.
By H. V. R. ANDERSON, Deputy.

Fees: $2.00.

RETURN ON SERVICE OF WRIT.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

I hereby certify and return that I served the annexed order to show cause, together with the petition on the therein named Sutcliffe Baxter and L. M. Stern, by handing to and leaving a true and correct copy thereof with Sutcliffe Baxter and L. M. Stern, personally, at Seattle, in said district, on the 5th day of April, A. D. 1911.

April 5, 1911.

JOSEPH R. H. JACOBY, U. S. Marshal.
By H. V. R. ANDERSON, Deputy.

Fees: $4.24.

(Indorsed:) Order to show cause. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Apr. 4, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [45]

In the District Court of the United States, for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

ORDER REQUIRING RECEIVER TO MAKE APPLICATION FOR HIS ALLOWANCE, ETC.

This matter coming on regularly to be heard on the 10th day of April, 1911, the same being the return day of an order to show cause issued herein on the 4th day of April, 1911, and the petitioners being present by their attorney, Nelson R. Anderson, and the respondents being present in person, namely, Sutcliffe Baxter and McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, and it appearing to the court from the petition and the files herein and from the arguments of counsel that no notice had been given creditors of the application by the receiver for allowances to himself and attorneys, or either of them, and that petitioners and creditors had no notice of the application or of the order making allowances until after same were made and on file, and it further appearing to the court that objection was made to the amount of the allowance to the receiver and also to the attorneys for the receiver, and the court being duly advised in the premises;

It is hereby ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the receiver make application for his allowance required by law, the referee to give ten days' notice by mail to all creditors, specifying the amount asked; that the application previously made herein be allowed to stand as the application required by law to be completed by the notice required aforesaid; that the objections made, or to be made, by the creditors to the allowance made, or to be asked for by, the receiver shall be [46] heard de novo at a time to be fixed by the notice required herein; that the objections made, or to be made, by the creditors to the allowance made, or to be made, to the attorneys for the receiver by the court shall be heard de novo at the same time that objections are made to the allowance to the receiver; that this order shall be, and the same hereby is, entered without prejudice to the rights of either party hereto.

Done in open court this 14th day of April, 1911.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

Service of within order and receipt of copy admitted this 11th day of April, 1911.

We hereby designate room 333–334, New York Building, Second Avenue and Cherry Street, Seattle, Washington, as the place where all subsequent papers herein, except writs and process, may be made upon the Atty. herein, and consent that service of all subsequent papers herein, except writs and process, may be made as the place hereinabove designated upon the said ———.

Dated April 14, 1911.

NELSON R. ANDERSON, Attorney.

(Indorsed:) Order. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Apr. 14, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [47]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

PETITION OF WESTERN DRY GOODS CO. ET AL. FOR AN ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE.

Comes now the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, Smith-Daniels & Kelleher Company, a corporation, Imperial Candy Co., a corporation, Black Manufacturing Company, a corporation, Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation, petitioners herein, by their attorney and counsellor, Nelson R. Anderson, and respectfully show the court:

I. That Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, was duly adjudicated bankrupt by the above-entitled court in the above-entitled cause on the 27th day of February, 1911, on which day and year a petition alleging bankruptcy and an answer admitting bankruptcy were duly filed in said cause and court; that on the same day and year Sutcliffe Baxter was appointed by this court and the honorable judge thereof, C. H. Hanford, as receiver of the estate of said bankrupt; that said Sutcliffe Baxter duly qualified and acted as as receiver herein from that time until the 20th day of March, 1911; that his duties as receiver were merely those of a custodian, and that he did not carry on the business of said bankrupt; that he, the said Sutcliffe Baxter, was on the 20th day of March, 1911, duly elected and appointed trustee herein; that he since that time was and now is the duly qualified and acting trustee herein.

II. That your petitioners herein are unsecured creditors [48] of the bankrupt herein; that they have filed, proved, and been allowed their claims herein as follows:

Western Dry Goods Co	$5,104.45
Smith-Daniels & Kelleher Co	178.20
Imperial Candy Co	637.91
Black Manufacturing Co	58.40
Seattle Dry Goods Co	512.34

III. That on the 20th day of March, 1911, said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, by his attorneys, McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, prayed, inter alia, the court for an allowance for services rendered the estate herein by said Sutcliffe Baxter as receiver, and for an allowance to the said McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern as attorneys, for professional services rendered by them to said receiver; that pursuant to said petition and prayer, the above-entitled court and the honorable judge thereof, C. H. Hanford, made an order allowing Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver, the sum of two thousand five hundred ($2,500.00) dollars as compensation for his services to the estate herein of the bankrupt, and to the above-named attorneys for the receiver the said court and judge allowed the sum of two thousand five hundred ($2,500.00) dollars for their compensation for services rendered the said receiver.

IV. That your petitioners as creditors and claimants with their claims and proofs of record, the same appearing in the schedules of the bankrupt and by separate proof in the manner provided by law, were entitled to the notices provided by law of the application by receivers and their attorneys, [49] in behalf of each and all of them, for compensation for services rendered in their respective capacities.

IV. That the notice to creditors of applications for allowance to receiver and attorneys required by law, or either of them, and in pursuance of which the order complained of here and now was entered, was not given by the above-entitled court nor by any of its officers, nor by the said receiver or his attorneys, nor by anyone whatsoever; that your petitioners had no knowledge, information, or notice of the application for compensation made or of any application, nor did your petitioners know in what amount the receiver or his attorney, or either of them, would ask for compensation or know anything concerning said application and the order entered in pursuance thereof until after the same were entered herein and filed of record on the 31st day of March, 1911.

VI. That by failure of the court to give and by failure of your petitioners, to receive, or either, or in any way waive their right to receive, the notice or notices required by law of such applications for compensation and the order made pursuant thereto, or either, the court herein was without jurisdiction and without right to hear, receive, or entertain such application as was made; that the order entered allowing compensation was made without due process of law, was illegal, void, and of no effect.

VII. In addition to the said failure to give and receive, or either, the notice required by law of applications for compensation required of receivers, your petitioners further show that the compensation of receivers who act as mere custodians and who do not carry on the business of the bankrupt is fixed [50] by law at not more than 2 per centum on the first one thousand dollars or less and one-half of one per centum on all over one thousand dollars on moneys disbursed by him or turned over by him to the trustee and on moneys subsequently realized from property turned over by him to the trustee, and not more; that the receiver herein reported to this court that his cash receipts were $57,772.82 and also certain tracts of land valued at $4,000.00 and not more; that the receiver's compensation according to law was and is $320.00; that the allowance to the receiver's attorneys for services rendered was and is unreasonable, excessive, and contrary to law.

Wherefore, your petitioners pray the court that an order to show cause issue to the said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, to Sutcliffe Baxter, trustee, to McClure and McClure, and to Leopold Stern, commanding them, and each of them, to appear before this court and the honorable judge thereof, C. H. Hanford, at a certain hour and day to be set by the court, to show cause, if any, why the order entered herein on the 20th day of March, 1911, pursuant to their application for compensation as receiver and as attorneys for said receiver, both and each, which application and order were filed on the 21st day of March, 1911, with the clerk of the above-entitled court, should not be set aside and held for naught; and further, to show cause, if any, why the sums allowed by said order to the receiver and his attorneys should not be paid into this court and the proper officer thereof, and for such other further and necessary relief as appear meet.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Attorney for Petitioners. [51]

333–334 New York Block, Seattle, Wash.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss.

Nelson R. Anderson, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: That he is attorney for petitioners herein; that he has read the foregoing petition, knows the contents thereof and believes same to be true; that he makes this affidavit because he is personally acquainted with the facts set forth therein.

NELSON R. ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 4 day of April, 1911.

[SEAL.] GLENN C. BEECHLER,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Indorsed:) Creditors' petition. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Apr. 4, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [52]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

OBJECTION OF WESTERN DRY GOODS CO. ET AL. TO ALLOWANCE OF RECEIVER.

Come now the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation; Smith, Daniels Kelleher & Company, a corporation; Imperial Candy Company, a corporation; Black Manufacturing Company, a corporation; Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation; Tootle,

Campbell Co., a corporation; Bradshaw Bros., True Shape Hosiery Co., Sutro Bros. Braid Co., Pioneer Suspender Co., American Paper Co., Harry E. Lewis, Love-Warren-Monroe Co., Gorham Rubber Co., Standard Oil Co., Superior Candy & Cracker Co., Lowman & Hanford Co., Pickard-Garde Co., Chas. Emmerick & Co., E. Ries & Company, J. B. Powles & Co., A. Stein & Co., Clement, Dranger & Co., N. Y. & Chemnitz Netting Co., Stone & Co., H. A. Caesar & Co., J. S. Temple, Interwoven Stocking Co., Western Fancy Goods Co., J. B. Crowley, Moore-Watson Dry Goods Co., David Bros., L. Samter & Sons, Luscombe & Isaacs, Spool Cotton Co., Julius Kayser & Co., B. Hart & Bro., Nonotuck Silk Co., Clayburgh Bros., and Pacific Coast Biscuit Co., by their attorneys, Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey and Nelson R. Anderson, and respectfully show the court:

I. That Chas. Knoshher & Co., a corporation, was duly adjudicated bankrupt by the above-entitled court in the above-entitled [53] cause on the 27th day of February, 1911, on which day and year a petition alleging bankruptcy and an answer admitting bankruptcy were duly filed in said cause and court; that on the same day and year Sutcliffe Baxter was appointed by this court and the honorable judge thereof, C. H. Hanford, as receiver of the estate of said bankrupt; that said Sutcliffe Baxter duly qualified and acted as receiver herein from that time until the 20th day of March, 1911; that his duties as receiver were merely those of a custodian and that he did not carry on the business of said bankrupt; that he, the said Sutcliffe Baxter, was on the 20th day of March, 1911, duly elected and appointed trustee herein; that he since that time was and now is the duly qualified and acting trustee herein.

II. That your petitioners herein are unsecured creditors of the bankrupt herein; that they have filed, proved, and been allowed their claims herein as follows:

Western Dry Goods Co	$5,104.45
Smith-Daniels & Kelleher Co	178.20
Imperial Candy Co	637.91
Black Manufacturing Co	38.40
Seattle Dry Goods Co	512.34
Bradshaw Bros	148.00
True Shape Hosiery Co	112.50
Sutro Bros. Braid Co	215.57
Pioneer Suspender Co	137.50
American Paper Co	169.47
Harry E. Lewis	95.88
Love-Warren-Monroe Co	122.95
Gorham Rubber Co	3.81
Standard Oil Co. [54]	42.58
Superior Candy & Cracker Co	16.90
Lowman & Hanford Co	89.04
Pickard-Garde Co	29.25
Chas. Emmerick & Co	36.90
E. Ries & Company	549.31
J. B. Powles & Co	160.75
A. Stein & Co	55.03
Clement, Dranger & Co	382.39
N. Y. & Chemnitz Netting Co	30.00
Stone & Co	97.83
H. A. Caesar & Co	178.84
J. S. Temple	71.16
Interwoven Stocking Co	128.40
Western Fancy Goods Co	130.42
J. B. Crowley	59.78
Moore-Watson Dry Goods Co	35.15
Davis Bros	136.25
L. Samter & Sons	113.39
Luscombe & Isaacs	812.21
Spool Cotton Co	226.14
Julius Kayser & Co	416.90
B. Hart & Bro	195.80
Nonotuck Silk Co	1,260.01
Clayburgh Bros	408.80
Pacific Coast Biscuit Co	77.55
Tootle, Campbell Co	26,000.00

III. That on the 20th day of March, 1911, said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, by his attorneys, McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, prayed, inter alia, the court for an allowance [55] for services rendered the estate herein by said Sutcliffe Baxter as receiver and for an allowance to the said McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern as attorneys for professional services rendered by them to said receiver; that pursuant to said petition and prayer, the above-entitled court and the honorable judge thereof, C. H. Hanford, made an order allowing Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver, the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500), as compensation for his services to the estate herein of the bankrupt, which he has received, and to the above-named attorneys for the receiver the said court and judge allowed and said attorneys have received the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500) for their compensation for services rendered the said receiver, to which your petitioners object and except upon the ground that the same were excessive, unreasonable, and contrary to law.

IV. That the services rendered by the receiver herein, Sutcliffe Baxter, were detrimental and prejudicial to the interests of the creditors and all persons in interest therein; that the said receiver by his carelessness and inattention permitted those engaged in taking an inventory of the bankrupt stock to return said inventory in a sum greatly less than the fair value thereof, and by reason thereof the value of said stock was greatly depreciated and in a sum far less than its fair value; that the said receiver has entailed a great loss upon the creditors herein by rendering a false report into this court of the amount and value of the goods, wares, and merchandise of the bankrupt which he had in charge; that the true inventory of the goods, wares, and merchandise in the custody of the receiver exceeded the false inventory rendered [56] into this court by more than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000); that the false and fraudulent inventory was made pursuant to a conspiracy and agreement between the bankrupt and John Ainesfield Co., the purchaser from this court of the assets of the said bankrupt and those who took the inventory in behalf of and for this court.

V. That the appraisement of the bankrupt stock of goods, wares, and merchandise was a sham and a mere fiction, owing to the intervention and interference of the receiver herein in giving the said appraisers instructions that were contrary to law and detrimental to the estate of the bankrupt in this that the appraisers should confine themselves to the inventory and not concern themselves with the stock of goods; that their duties were merely formal; and that they should not survey the stock itself.

VI. That on the date bids were first opened for the purchase of the bankrupt stock, the receiver herein recommended the acceptance of the bid of McCormick Bros., of Tacoma, Washington, which bid was in an amount less than fifty thousand dollars ($50,000); that the creditors, through their own efforts, and without any assistance from said receiver asked the court for permission to offer new bids, which was granted and the bids increased to $57,000.

VII. That the compensation of receivers is limited and fixed by section 48, subdivision D of the bankruptcy act, to certain percentages therein set forth, in case a receiver conducts the business of the bankrupt, and certain other percentages where a receiver acts as mere custodian; that the [57] compensation of a receiver carrying on the business of a bankrupt is fixed by said act at six per cent (6%) on the first $500; 4 per cent on the next $1,000; 2 per cent on the next $8,500; and 1 per cent on all sums in addition; that the fees of a mere custodian are fixed by said act at 2 per cent on the first $1,000, and one half of 1 per cent on sums in excess of $1,000; that section 72 of the bankruptcy act provides that the receiver shall not receive in any form or guise, nor shall the court allow him, any other or further compensation for his services than those expressly authorized and prescribed in this act; that Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver herein, was a mere custodian within the meaning of this act, and in fact; that he did not carry on the business of the bankrupt; that his receiver's report shows the fact to be that he closed the store of the bankrupt at the close of the day of his appointment; that he was appointed in the afternoon of said day, and closed the store at the first opportunity and within a few hours of his appointment, and at the earliest practicable moment; that as such receiver he sold the goods, wares, and merchandise and fixtures of the bankrupt at a sum not exceeding fifty-seven thousand dollars ($57,000); that the real property of the bankrupt does not exceeding in value four thousand dollars ($4,000); that the total of moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, or funds handled by the receiver, do not exceed the sum of sixty-one thousand dollars ($61,000); that the compensation of a receiver carrying on the business of the bankrupt at the percentages fixed by the act in this case do not exceed seven hundred and forty dollars ($740.00); that the compensation of a mere custodian at the percentages fixed by this act, do not in this case exceed three hundred and twenty dollars ($320.00). [58]

VIII. That the said receiver herein, Sutcliffe Baxter, and the trustee herein, Sutcliffe Baxter, are one and the same person; that the said trustee has made application to this court for an allowance for his services, and has been allowed on account five hundred dollars ($500.00); that the services rendered by said receiver in taking an inventory, saved the said trustee, Sutcliffe Baxter, the necessity and labor of taking an inventory; that the compensation of said trustee is not less by virtue of his taking the inventory as receiver; that it would have been his duty as trustee to take an inventory had no receiver been appointed; and that he now, as trustee, is being paid as if he had taken an inventory; that therefore, to take into consideration and to pay for the taking of an inventory by the receiver is in law and in fact to pay said Sutcliffe Baxter, the individual, twice for performing the same labors and duties.

IX. Your petitioners, in addition to the foregoing objections to the compensation of the receiver herein, Sutcliffe Baxter, also object to the allowance made to the attorneys for said receiver, viz: McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, in the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars ($2,500), and for grounds of objection, respectfully show the court:

(a) That McClure & McClure were attorneys for certain creditors who joined with the petitioning creditors, praying for an adjudication against the bankrupt; that said McClure & McClure also prayed the court for the appointment of a receiver herein; that for such services this court allowed, and they have received, one hundred dollars ($100.00);

(b) That the services rendered by the attorneys [59] herein were of a routine character in preparing the notice of sale of the bankrupt stock, and of making the report submitted to the court; that the great labor of making said report was clerical, and not a professional service; that said attorneys rendered no services that added to the estate of the bankrupt; that they resolved no legal questions other than those mentioned; that the time consumed by them could not have exceeded one day; that $320.00 would be a reasonable and ample compensation for services that should be rendered in such a case.

Wherefore your petitioners pray the court to require the said receiver, Sutcliffe Baxter, to repay into the registry of this court the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars ($2,500), and take nothing for his services rendered herein as receiver; that the attorneys for the receiver, McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern have for their compensation a sum not in excess of $320.00; and that they be required to pay into the registry of this court the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars less the amount allowed them by the court.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Attorneys for Petitioners. [60]

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

Nelson R. Anderson, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I am one of the attorneys for the petitioners in the foregoing objections to allowance of receiver. I have read the foregoing objections, know the contents thereof, and believe the same to be true, and make this verification for and on behalf of said petitioners.

[SEAL.] NELSON R. ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this —— day of May, A. D. 1911.

J. S. JACKSON,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [61]

In the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF J. J. DOHENY.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

J. J. Doheny, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: That he was an appraiser of the stock and fixtures of the above bankrupt; that he went to the store of the bankrupt at about 2 p. m. of the 9th day of March, 1911, and met there Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, who told him to return about 4.30 p. m., when his attorneys could be present; that he returned at 4.30 p. m. and met there the said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, and Leopold Stern and Walter McClure, his attorneys, and the other two appraisers; that the said receiver and the said Stern, attorney for the receiver, informed the appraisers that their duties were merely formal; that they should take the receiver's inventory of stock and look at it and from it they should make their report as appraisers; that one of the appraisers, namely, O. A. Kjos, expressed surprise that they should not go through the stock and see the goods; that in answer thereto said receiver told the appraisers that their duties were merely formal; that they should confine themselves to the inventory; that the stock was for the most part covered; that the appraisers did not look at the goods for the purpose of putting a value thereon; that they made no survey of any kind of said stock; that their only information was the summary of assets shown in the inventory; [62] that they did not examine the items of the inventory, but merely inspected the summary; that when they had done this the receiver, Sutcliffe Baxter, asked them what their services were worth; that one of the appraisers, namely, O. A. Kjos, said they were worth a cigar to the man who smoked, but he did not smoke and that they did not owe him anything; that, nevertheless, said receiver later gave me a check for $25.00 for services rendered as an appraiser.

J. J. Doheny.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of May, 1911.

[SEAL.] Nelson R. Anderson,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [63]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF OLE A. KJOS.

United States of America,
Western District of Washington, ss:

Ole A. Kjos, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I was one of the appraisers heretofore appointed by the referee in the matter of bankruptcy of the estate of Charles Knosher & Co. on the 9th day of March, 1911. Upon being notified of my appointment as such appraiser I went, in company with J. J. Doheny and E. G. Barr, to the store of Charles Knosher & Co. for the purpose of making an estimate and appraisement of the value of said bankrupt estate and thereupon offered to examine the stock of goods, wares, and merchandise in said store for the purpose of ascertaining the value thereof. I am an experienced dry-goods man and am able to tell from examination the value of such a stock as was comprised within said bankrupt estate. There was present at said store at such time Sutcliffe Baxter, the receiver and trustee, and a man who was represented to me as the attorney for the said Sutcliffe Baxter, whose name I do not now recall. The said attorney thereupon told me that the making of the estimate and appraisement of said estate was a mere matter of form and that I would not be [64] permitted to examine the stock of goods, wares, or merchandise in detail for the purpose of ascertaining their value, but that in making up said estimate and appraisement we, the appraisers, were to be guided by the inventory figures, which were then and there shown to us, and that no one was to be permitted to reinventory said goods. At that time the stock in said store was covered and we were not given an opportunity to examine further into the value of said goods in detail for the purpose of verifying the inventory which was offered to us, and thereupon, relying upon said statement as to our duties in the premises, we signed an estimate and appraisement of said stock, being the figures returned upon the inventory which had been theretofore taken.

I have read the affidavit of Eugene G. Anderson, filed herewith, and so far as same relates to a conversation held with Mr. Barr on Monday, the 17th of April, I was present at said conversation and heard the same and do depose and say that the statements were made by Mr. Barr, as stated in the affidavit of the said Eugene G. Anderson; and I do further depose and say that I heard the said Henderson, referred to in the affidavit of Mr. Anderson, make the statements in form and effect as stated by Mr. Anderson in his said affidavit. And the said Henderson, in addition thereto, stated to me that in assisting in the making of the inventory of said bankrupt stock gross fraud was practiced and stated in my hearing that in many instances the inventory price was grossly reduced below the actual value of said goods and that in many instances quantities of goods were omitted from the inventory list, and also stated in my hearing, in particular, that in one instance broadcloth, which had cost $2.12½ per yard, was inventoried at 50c. per yard and afterward sold by John Ainesfield Co. for $2.98 per yard, and [65] the said Henderson further stated that in another instance a quantity of Indian linen, which had cost $750.00, and was of approximately that value, was inventoried at $250.00, and the said Henderson generally stated in my hearing that said inventory was knowingly and designedly made so as to show a figure far less than the actual cost of said stock.

Ole A. Kjos.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of April, A. D. 1911.

[SEAL.] H. J. Ramsey,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [66]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF EUGENE G. ANDERSON.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

Eugene G. Anderson, being duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I am the president and treasurer of the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, one of the creditors of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. About the 12th day of April, 1911, I met one Henderson, who had been one of the department heads of Charles Knosher & Co., and at said time was and now is one of the department heads or employees of J. Ainesfield Co. in the business now conducted by the latter company in selling the bankrupt stock of Charles Knosher & Co., the said Henderson voluntarily told me at said time that the said John Ainesfield Co. had already realized from the sale of the bankrupt stock of the said Charles Knosher & Co. a sum in excess of $40,000, and that there was remaining on hand a portion of said bankrupt stock which would inventory at a sum in excess of $50,000. That then and there the said Henderson told me that he, himself, had taken the inventory of a portion of the stock and assisted in taking an inventory of other portions of the stock upon which inventory the appraisement returned by the appraisers [67] herein was based. That the inventory was reduced so as to falsely represent in value and quantity the stock of said bankrupt; that the purpose in so reducing the inventory was that said stock might be purchased at a grossly inadequate value by the said John Ainesfield Co. under an agreement whereby the said John Ainesfield Co. would purchase said stock at said grossly inadequate value, realize enough therefrom to pay the full amount of their claim against said bankrupt, together with the purchase price at said bankrupt sale, and the balance of aid stock would then be returned to the said Charles Knosher & Co.

About 11.40 in the morning of Saturday, April 15, 1911, I had a conversation with one Hyslop, who is store manager for the said John Ainesfield Co. The said Hyslop, in the course of a conversation, showed me the returns of sales that had been made of said bankrupt stock since the purchase thereof by the said John Ainesfield Co. Said returns showed that there had been realized, over and above all expenses and sums expended for replenishment of stock, the net sum of about $42,000, out of said bankrupt stock, and the said Hyslop then and there stated to me that there was remaining on hand of said bankrupt stock goods, wares, and merchandise of the value of not less than $50,000, and that this could be proven by an invoice thereof.

About 9.30 o'clock in the forenoon of Tuesday, April 18,1911, I had a conversation with E. G. Barr, one of the department heads of Charles Knosher & Co., now an employee of John Ainesfield Co., in the conduct of the sale of said bankrupt stock, and one of the appraisers of said bankrupt estate. The said Barr stated to me that at the time the inventory of the bankrupt estate of the said Charles Knosher [68] & Co. was being taken, he, the said Barr assisted therein. That at that time there was present in the city of Seattle, one Libby, a representative and agent of John Ainesfield Co., the purchaser of said bankrupt stock; that he, the said Barr, did from time to time, confer with the said Libby, and did furnish him the inventory figures upon the said stock as the inventory was taken by departments, and at said time furnished to the said Libby statements showing the true value of said stock; that said inventory value was in each instance placed at a sum less than the actual value thereof, and in many instances portions of said stock were omitted from the inventory for the purpose of reducing the inventory of said stock below the actual value thereof; and that as a result thereof the inventory of said stock which was made up, and upon which the appraisement thereof was returned, was in a sum far less than the actual value of said stock. That said inventory was so made in pursuance of a plan and conspiracy whereby the said Libby was to purchase said stock at a sum far less than its actual value for the said John Ainesfield Co., and was to hold the same until there should be realized therefrom the purchase price thereof and the claim of the said John Ainesfield Co.; and thereafter the balance of said stock was to be returned to the said Charles Knosher & Co., and that the said Libby and the said Knosher had knowledge of and participated in said plan and conspiracy.

EUGENE G. ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 13th day of May, A. D. 1911.

[SEAL.] NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [69]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF NELSON R. ANDERSON.

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
County of King, ss:

Nelson R. Anderson, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: That he is one of the attorneys of the creditors herein petitioning this court to set aside the sale of the stock of the bankrupt made by this court, on the ground that the inventory taken by the receiver herein was a false inventory, fraudulent and a gross misrepresentation and undervaluation of the stock of the bankrupt; that said inventory was taken pursuant to a conpsiracy of the bankrupt, the purchaser of said stock, and those employed by the receiver herein to take the inventory.

Affiant further states that he has in his possession what purports to be and is represented to him to be the true and original memorandum and data of the inventory as taken in certain departments of the store of said bankrupt; that he has compared said memoranda and data with the receiver's report and finds a variance and difference of over 100 per cent in the items covered aggregating several thousand dollars, and that he is informed by responsible persons in position to know that this condition was general throughout said store.

NELSON R. ANDERSON. [70]

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of May, 1911.

[SEAL.] GLENN C. BEECHLER,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

Copy of within objections received and due service of same acknowledged this 13th day of May, 1911.

McCLURE & McCLURE,
L. M. STERN,
Attorneys for Receiver.

(Indorsed:) Objections to allowance of receiver. Affidavits. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. May 15, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, Clerk. [71]

In the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

PETITION FOR REVIEW OF REFEREE'S ORDER.

Your petitioners, Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, Smith-Daniels & Kellehr, Co., a corporation, Imperial Candy Co., a corporation, Black Manufacturing Companey a corporation, and Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation, do respectfully show that they are creditors of the bankrupt estate of Charles Knosher & Co., whose claims have been duly presented and allowed, and as such are parties to a certain proceeding in said bankruptcy pending before the Honorable John P. Hoyt, referee in bankrudtcy, which said proceedings were based upon a petition whereby it was sought to have set aside the appraisement and sale and order of confirmation of the stock of goods, wares, and merchandise of said bankrupt estate, and to require John Ainesfield Co., a purchaser at said sale, to pay into the registry of this court all moneys received by them out of the sale of the estate of said bankrupt, and that the stock remaining in the hands of the said John Ainesfield Co. and unsold be returned to the possession of the receiver herein, and for other relief as will more expressly appear from said [72] petition.

Upon the hearing thereof an order was made by said referee dismissing said petition upon the ground that said bankruptcy court is without jurisdiction to hear the matters and things set forth in said petition, and upon the further ground that said petition does not state facts sufficient to entitle the petitioners to relief.

To which said order the petitioners duly excepted.

Said order is erroneous in this:

I. Said bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to determine the matters and things set forth in said petition and to grant the relief demanded, and said petition should not be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

II. The said petition states facts sufficient to entitle said petitioners to relief and the said referee should entertain said petition and, upon the hearing thereof and proof adduced in support thereof, grant the said petitioners the relief demanded, or such other relief as shall be meet the premises considered.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that said order be reviewed and reversed, and that they be restored to all the things they have lost by reason of said order.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Attorneys for said Petitioners. [73]

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

Nelson R. Anderson, being first duly sworn, on oath, deposes and says:

That he is one of the attorneys for the petitioners in the above-entitled action; that he has read the foregoing petition, knows the contents thereof, and believes the same to be true, and that he makes this verification for and on behalf of said petitioners.

NELSON R. ANDERSON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 2d day of May, A. D. 1911.

[SEAL.]

C. J. FRANCE,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

Copy of within received and due service of same acknowledged this 2d day of May, 1911.

HAROLD PRESTON,
Attorney for Respondent.

(Indorsed:) Petition for review of referee's order. Filed May 5, 1911, 1.00 p. m. John P. Hoyt, referee. Filed in the U. S. district court, western dist. of Washington, May 5, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [74]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

OBJECTIONS OF JOHN ANISFIELD CO. TO JURISDICTION.

Comes now John Anisfield Co., a corporation, and appearing specially for the purpose of making this objection to the jurisdiction and for no other purposes, objects to and contests the jurisdiction of the court to entertain or adjudicate upon the petition of the Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation, Smith, Daniels, Kelleher & Company, a corporation, Imperial Candy Company, a corporation, Black Manufacturing Company, a corporation, and Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation, filed April 20, 1911, because of the following facts appearing of record in this cause, to wit:

On the 6th day of March, 1911, an order was made by the Honorable John P. Hoyt, referee in bankruptcy, directing the sale upon sealed bids, after due advertising, of the stock of goods, fixtures, etc., referred to in said petition; that the receiver gave due notice of the time and place of receiving bids, and at that time and place received bids, among them the bids of certain of the petitioners and the bid of this objector, the bid of the latter being for $57,000.00 and being $500.00 higher than any other bid and being eighty per cent of the appraised value of said property, and that bid being $7,000 higher than any bid received at a prior call. Whereupon the sale of said property was made to this objector and was regularly confirmed by the order of the referee. The purchaser paid the receiver the amount of its bid and the receiver made conveyance to the purchaser of said property and delivered the same to the purchaser. Subsequently the trustee made report to this court of his receipt of said money, and pursuant to the order of the court distributed said [75] money to the extent of about one-half thereof in the payment of expenses of this proceeding and in dividends to the creditors of the bankrupt, including the petitioners and the creditors, including the petitioners, have received and do retain the said dividends, and the trustee has no funds in his possession sufficient, or anywhere near sufficient, to repay the purchaser the amount of its bid paid by it, as aforesaid, to the trustee; and because of the following facts admitted in the said petition, to wit:

That approximately one-half of the said stock of goods have been sold by this objector in the usual course of business at retail, necessarily involving a considerable expense for rent and clerk hire; and because of the following facts not appearing of record in the case, but which objector states to be true, to wit:

That the price at which the said property was sold by the receiver was largely in excess of prices usually and customarily realized for such properties in bankruptcy proceedings, and even if said property had been of the value of $90,000, as alleged in the petition, the price realized was sixty-four per cent of the same, which is a higher price than it is or has been customary to realize out of the sales in bankruptcy of like properties; and since said purchase by this objector it has, in order to enable it to conduct the sale of said property, purchased new goods at an outlay of over six thousand dollars, and placed the same in with said stock and sold from the same as it has sold from said stock; that this objector is a wholesale merchant and any judgment which might be recovered against it upon an accounting in respect of the matters set forth in said petition can be immediately collected of the objector, and the objector hereby offers to submit [76] itself to the jurisdiction of the Superior Court of King County or the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division, to any suit in equity which may be brought by any proper party in relation to the matters or any of them set forth in said petition.

If the court shall hold that it has jurisdiction to entertain the said petition the objector, preserving an exception to such holding, and not waiving its foregoing objections to the jurisdiction, or its special appearance, shows the court that the said stock of goods has reached the condition where it is no longer profitable or economical to continue selling same at retail, and such continued sales at retail could only be carried on at a loss; and that it has negotiated, and the negotiation is ready for conclusion, a sale of the balance of said stock and of the fixtures to a company already engaged in business in the State of Washington, the consummation of which sale would be to the interest of all interested; and it is able to give bond, if required by the court, for the safekeeping of the amount of the purchase price agreed to be paid in said negotiation.

JOHN ANISFIELD CO.,
By HAROLD PRESTON,
Its Attorney.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Washington, County of King, ss:

William T. Hislop, being first duly sworn, on his oath says: I am the manager of the property referred to in the foregoing objections to the jurisdiction; I have read the foregoing objections to the jurisdiction; know the facts stated therein and believe the same to be true.

WILLIAM T. HISLOP.

Subscribed in my presence and sworn to before me this 25 [77] day of April, 1911.
[SEAL.] DEVILLO LEWIS,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Endorsed:) Objections to jurisdiction. Filed this 25th day of April, 1911, 2 p. m. John P. Hoyt, referee. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western District of Washington, May 5, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [78]

RETURN OF REFEREE IN BANKRUPTCY.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In Bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Chas. Knosher & Co., Inc. (a corporation), bankrupt.

A petition for the review of the order made herein on the 29th day of April, 1911, having been filed herein, the undersigned referee in bankruptcy before whom said matter is pending, and who made said order, does hereby certify and return as follows, to wit:

That said order, as will appear from the face thereof, was founded upon the pleadings in the proceeding; that said undersigned was of the opinion that the objections to jurisdiction should be sustained for two reasons—

First. That there was no allegation in the original or amended petition of any improper conduct on the part of the trustee of the estate or of his attorneys.

Second. Neither was it alleged that there had been any demand made upon said trustee, or his attorneys, by the petitioning creditors; that said trustee should proceed against the said John Anisfield Co. to obtain the relief sought by said petitioners, or any other relief, in the interests of all the creditors.

That in the opinion of said undersigned an allegation alleging such misbehavior, or such request and refusal on the part of the trustee were necessary to authorize proceedings on the part of any creditor to obtain relief for the benefit of the estate, which could better and with less expense to the creditors be obtained by proceedings by the trustee for the benefit of all such creditors. [79]

Said undersigned was further of the opinion that under the circumstances shown by the proceedings in this matter and the fact that no want of knowledge on the part of the petitioning creditors was alleged of any of these proceedings, they were not entitled to seek relief against said John Anisfield Co. in a summary proceedings, but should procure the same, if entitled thereto, by a plenary action.

Said undersigned was further of the opinion that even conceding the jurisdiction of the court to grant the relief prayed for at the expense of the parties seeking it and in a summary proceedings, it would not be equitable for them to be allowed to do so, for the reason that in a plenary action where bonds and counterbonds could ordinarily be given by the respective parties the rights of all could be better protected.

Said undersigned was further of the opinion that even if jurisdiction could be entertained in this proceeding, neither the petition nor the amended petition, considered in the light of the objections thereto and of the facts disclosed by the records in the bankruptcy proceedings, stated facts sufficient to entitle the petitioners to the relief prayed for, or any other relief, and being advised as hereinbefore stated the said undersigned made and filed the order sought to be reviewed.

He transmits herewith the original and the amended petition hereinbefore referred to, the objections thereto, said order of April 29, 1911, and said petition for review as constituting a sufficient certificate and return, together with what has been hereinbefore said, to enable a judge of the above-named court to review said order.

Dated at Seattle, in said district, this 5th day of May, 1911.

JOHN P. HOYT,
Referee in Bankruptcy. [80]

(Indorsed:) Certificate and return. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. May 5, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [81]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In Bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, Inc. (a corporation), bankrupt.

ORDER OF ALLOWANCE TO RECEIVER AND TRUSTEE, AND TO HIS ATTORNEYS.

This cause hertofore came on for hearing on the objections of certain creditors of said bankrupt estate to the allowance hertofore made to the trustee and receiver and his attorneys herein, said objectors appearing by Nelson R. Anderson and Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey, their attorneys, and the said respondents appearing by McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, Esquire, their attorneys; and it appearing to the court that on the 20th day of March, 1911, on petition theretofore in this cause duly filed, an order was entered allowing the receiver the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500.00) as compensation for his services herein, and allowing to the attorneys of the receiver the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500.00) for their services as attorneys of the receiver, and that on the 4th day of April, 1911, certain of said objectors filed herein objections to said allowances, and that thereupon the court entered an order directing Sutcliffe Baxter as receiver and Sutcliffe Baxter as trustee and the said McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern as attorneys of the receiver and trustee [82] to show cause on the 10th day of April, 1911, why the said order of March 20, 1911, should not be set aside, and that on the 10th day of April, 1911, after hearing, the court ordered that the application previously made stand as the application required by law, the said sum of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500.00) to be treated as the compensation asked by the receiver, and that ten days' notice by mail to all creditors, specifying the amount asked, be given of the receiver's application for his allowance, and that objections to the allowance asked for by the receiver be heard at a time to be fixed by the court after the giving of such notice, and that objections to the allowance of the attorneys for the receiver be heard at the same time; that thereupon, pursuant to order, the referee in charge of said bankruptcy proceeding gave notice of at least ten days to all creditors by mail to the respective addresses of said creditors as same appeared in the list of the creditors of the bankrupt and as filed with the papers in the case, the said notice reciting that said Sutcliffe Baxter as receiver had made application for an allowance in the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,500.00) for his services as such receiver, and that a hearing upon such application would be had before this court at its court room in Seattle, in said district, on the 15th day of May, 1911, at ten o'clock in the forenoon; that on said May 15, 1911, said matter came on for hearing, and hearing thereof was postponed and adjourned by successive orders of continuance until July 10, 1911, on which last date said matter was argued and submitted; with leave to both parties to make such additional showing in writing as might be desired; that at such hearing the matter [83] of the compensation of the said Sutcliffe Baxter as trustee as well as receiver, and of the said attorneys of the receiver and trustee, was submitted by the creditors and said respondents to the court for decision; and it having been stipulated by said parties that the total amount of cash actually disbursed by the said Sutcliffe Baxter as receiver is the sum of sixty-one thousand three hundred twelve and 87/100 dollars ($61,312.87), and that the total cash received by him as trustee, and now being disbursed, is the sum of fifty-four thousand four hundred ninety-six dollars ($54,496), and that said amounts are the sums to be considered by the court in determining the said matter of compensation and said matter having been finally submitted, and it further appearing that the total number of creditors of said bankrupt estate is at least three hundred and ten (310), and that the total indebtedness is at least one hundred sixty-four thousand seven hundred seventy-seven and 58/100 dollars ($164,777.58), and that in response to the notice given by the said referee, setting the date for the hearing of the receiver's petition for allowance, not to exceed sixty-one (61) creditors whose claims do not exceed forty-two thousand one hundred and sixty-four dollars and fifty cents ($42,164.50), appeared in opposition to the said allowances, and that no objection or exception is or has been made or filed by or in behalf of two hundred and forty-nine (249) creditors, whose claims aggregate the sum of one hundred twenty-two thousand six hundred thirteen and 08/100 dollars ($122,613.08), the same constituting the majority of said creditors; and the court, having fully considered said matter, and having made and having caused to be filed herein his memorandum decision in writing, does now [84] find that the matters and things set forth in the receiver's petition for allowance and the papers filed in support thereof and the reports made by the receiver and trustee herein are true, and that the said Sutcliffe Baxter as receiver conducted the business of the bankrupt and is entitled to compensation as receiver on said sum of sixty-one thousand three hundred twelve and 87/100 dollars ($61,312.87) for the performance of his ordinary duties as such officer, at the rate provided in section 48a of the bankruptcy act, and to extra compensation at the same rate on said sixty-one thousand three hundred twelve and 87/100 dollars ($61,312.87) for conducting the business of the bankrupt as receiver, and that the said Sutcliffe Baxter is entitled to compensation on said sum of fifty-four thousand four hundred ninety-six dollars ($54,496.00) for his services as trustee herein up to the date of the final submission of this matter at the rate provided in said section 48a, and that the said attorneys of the receiver and trustee are entitled to an equal amount for their services herein up to the date of the final submission of this matter as above set forth.

Wherefore it is ordered:

1. That Sutcliffe Baxter as receiver and trustee herein be, and he is hereby, allowed as compensation for his services herein, up to the date of the final submission of this matter, the sum of two thousand two hundred one and 20/100 dollars ($2.201.20).

2. That McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, the attorneys of said receiver and trustee, be, and they are hereby, allowed, as compensation for their services herein up to the date of the final submission of this matter, the sum of [85] two thousand two hundred one and 20/100 dollars ($2,201.20).

Dated at Seattle, in said district, this 23rd day of September, 1911.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

At the time of the making of this order the said objecting creditors excepted to the making of the allowance hereinbefore specified to said receiver and trustee and excepted to the allowance of any sum to the said receiver and trustee in excess of the sum of nine hundred ninety-seven and 52/100 dollars ($997.52), and at said time and place the said objecting creditors duly excepted to the making of any allowance to the attorneys for said receiver and trustee, in excess of nine hundred ninety-seven and 52/100 dollars ($997.52), which exceptions were at said time duly allowed.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

(Indorsed): Order of allowance to receiver and trustee, and to his attorneys. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Sep. 23, 1911. F. A. Simpkins, acting clerk. [86]

AFFIDAVIT OF C. H. WINSLOW.

In the District Court of the United States, Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, ss:

C. H. Winslow, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: That he was employed by Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, to assist in taking the inventory of the bankrupt's stock; that he was present when one Henderson and one Post, acting for the said Sutcliffe Baxter to take down the inventory from the clerk's memoranda of yards and prices, took down a certain piece of broadcloth at 1.00 cents per yard; that the cost price of said piece of broadcloth was $2.12½; that it contained 25 or more yards; that he has no knowledge of any remnant of broadcloth in the store; that he was employed in the dress-goods department and knew the stock on hand.

Further, this affiant states that at the same time and place the said Henderson and Post also inventoried a certain piece of serge of the cost value of 47 cents at 25 cents; that there was about 25 yards of said serge; that it, like the broadcloth, was good and salable merchandise.

Further, that this affiant protested at this dishonest and false manner of inventory and was told by the said Henderson to attend to his own business and to keep his mouth shut as to what was going on there. That thereupon this affiant left the said Henderson and said Post and knows nothing more of said inventory.

C. H. WINSLOW. [SEAL.]

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of June, 1911.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [87]

AFFIDAVIT OF LOLA CASSIL.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, ss:

Lola Cassil, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: That in April, 1911, she was a stenographer working for the Western Dry Goods Co.; that on the 18th day of April, 1911, Mr. E. G. Anderson, president of said Western Dry Goods Co., asked her to report a conversation to be had with one E. G. Barr; that she took down said conversation without the knowledge of said E. G. Barr; that then and there said Barr told Mr. Anderson the things and matters set out in the affidavit of Mr. Anderson, which she has read; that in addition thereto the following conversation took place:

Question (by Mr. ANDERSON). You had to make some variations?

Answer (by Mr. BARR). Yes.

Q. You fellows would have been in rather a funny position if the committee had gone through the stock, wouldn't you?—A. Owing to the rules of court, a committee is not allowed to do that. It is only a form as far as that is concerned.

Q. The only reason that you did this was that you fellows were trying to protect Knosher?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you figure the stock (referring to I. H. and K.) was worth about $230,000 instead of $160,000?—A. Yes.

Q. He had about $8,000 worth of underwear invoiced at $2,500. How did he fix that? Had to reduce underwear again, had to be reduced?—A. Yes. That was to make the quantities right rather than reduce [88] the price.

Q. Now, this is the invoice?—A. Yes.

Q. $16,000.00?—A. Yes.

Q. Give me the estimate.—A. You want the real figures?

Q. Yes.—A. L. $6,078.00, K $14,551.00, H $18,199.00. Between you two men I don't want them to know I was down here. Understand?

Q. Now, about how much has been taken out of your departments?—A. I have taken out of them about $8,734.00.

Q. You stated that somebody did not want to let you come down here?—A. They thought they had given me the figures. It was nothing underhand, but Mr. Knosher said to go on down. I have let you have the facts, Mr. Anderson.

LOLA CASSIL.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of June, 1911.

[SEAL.] NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Endorsed:) Affidavits of Lola Cassil and C. H. Winslow. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, Jun. 19, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [89]

In the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF R. C. POST.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

R. C. Post, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

That he was employed with the firm of Charles Knosher and Company, of Seattle, Washington, for about two years prior to the bankruptcy of said firm, in the capacity of manager of the cloak and suit department in the business carried on by said Charles Knosher & Company; that after the store had been closed by reason of bankruptcy, this affiant was retained in the employ of Sutcliff Baxter to assist in taking the inventory of the stock contained in the store, and that he was so employed until Saturday night following the Monday upon which the receiver took possession of the business; that this affiant superintended the taking of the inventory of the merchandise in his particular department, to wit, the ladies' cloak and suit department, and that while this affiant had assistance from the sales people employed in said department, this affiant personally busied himself every day during said period in actually counting the merchandise in his department and setting down the quantities of merchandise as well as the price of said items in his own handwriting on a memorandum which was afterwards handed to Miss Howard, bookkeeper, to be used by her in the typewriting of the entire inventory.

Affiant states further that after the inventory was completed he knows of his own knowledge, that the same was transcribed and put into typewritten form by the receiver, numerous [90] copies of such inventory being prepared; that the original was filed by the receiver in the office of the referee in bankruptcy, and that carbon copies thereof were retained for the purpose of handing the same to bidders for inspection.

Affiant states that he saw such typewritten copies of inventory and had occasion to examine the figures relating to the cloak and suit department and knows that such figures in the typewritten inventory were a true and correct copy of the figures as prepared by this affiant in the form of the pencil memorandum and handed to Miss Howard, the bookkeeper, for transcribing.

Affiant states further that he has had fifteen years' experience in the cloak and suit business, and that the inventory as taken by this affiant, so far as it pertains to the cloak and suit department, was taken properly and correctly, both with respect to quantities of merchandise on hand and the valuation thereof, and that the figures as shown in the typewritten copies of inventory filed in the referee's office and circulated among bidders was correct both as to quantity and value.

Affiant states further that he saw Mr. Baxter, the receiver, in the store every day during the week during which said inventory was being taken.

[SEAL.] R. C. POST.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of June, A. D. 1911.

B. F. WOODS, Jr.
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle, Wash.

Receipt of a copy and due service hereof admitted this 17th day of June, 1911.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Attorney for Creditors.

(Indorsed:) Affidavit of R. C. Post. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, June 11, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [91]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher and Company (Inc.) bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF SUTCLIFFE BAXTER.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, ss:

Sutcliffe Baxter, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I am sixty-nine years of age; have resided in the city of Seattle, State of Washington, thirty-four years, and in the State of Washington thirty-nine years, and have had forty-eight years' experience in merchandising.

On or about the 27th day of February, 1911, I was appointed receiver of Charles Knosher & Company, bankrupt, by order of the district judge in the above-entitled proceedings; and thereafter on or about the 20th day of March, 1911, I was duly elected trustee of said estate by a majority of the creditors in amount and number, and now am acting as trustee of said estate.

Immediately upon being appointed receiver, I qualified by filing a surety bond in the sum directed by the court, and proceeded with my counsel to the place of business conducted by the said bankrupt at the southeast corner of James Street and Second Avenue, in Seattle, Washington, and took possession thereof. Said bankrupt was conducting a general merchandise business more commonly known as a department store. Under the orders of the court I was authorized to continue said business in the usual course of retail trade if I deemed such action advisable. At the time I entered the premises the store was full of customers who had been influenced to come to the store by reason of extensive advertising of a special sale in the daily papers published [92] on the Sunday previous. I thought it best to keep said store open and running until I had an opportunity to determine the future policy of the business and to ascertain the wishes of the creditors.

That same afternoon a small meeting of creditors was held in the office of Leopold M. Stern, one of my attorneys, and at the said meeting the said creditors came to the conclusion that it would be best to close the store at the termination of the day's business and to proceed at once to the taking of an inventory. Learning the sentiment of the creditors, I did close the store at the conclusion of the day's business, and promptly on the morning following began the taking of the inventory, which was not concluded until Sunday, the 5th day of March, 1911.

The premises occupied by the bankrupt constitute a space equivalent to three full-size storerooms with a balcony and a full basement underneath the entire premises, and the basement as well as the main floor and likewise the balcony were occupied with goods. On taking possession of the premises as receiver I retained the entire working force and upon closing the doors for the purpose of taking inventory I thought it best to continue to retain the entire force so as to speed the conclusion of the inventory, the expense of rent and insurance being a considerable item. The general manager of the store was one E. G. Barr, who I learned was a man of reliable character and long experience, and I therefore retained him to superintend the taking of the inven tory. The total number of employees, including department heads, were somewhere between forty and fifty.

With reference to taking the inventory, I found upon inquiry that all merchandise was marked simply with the retail selling price and with absolutely no figures to show the original cost price. I further found that in fixing the selling price of merchandise no specific percentage was added [93] to the original cost price, but that some merchandise would be sold at 25 per cent profit, other merchandise at 50 per cent profit, and other merchandise at 100 per cent profit, so that it was not practicable to ascertain the original cost price by deducting a certain definite percentage to be regarded as a profit from the selling price with which the merchandise throughout the store was marked. I further found upon inquiry that the business had been divided into different departments, such as domestics, ladies' cloaks and suits, crockery and tinware, etc. Each department was under the management of some person who was called the manager of that particular department and who was understood to be experienced in the particular line of merchandise carried in that department and also acquainted with its original cost price, in most cases such department manager being also the original buyer of the merchandise.

After a discussion of the situation with Mr. Barr we came to the conclusion that the only practical way of taking the inventory was to have each department manager take the inventory of his particular department, fixing the cost price of the merchandise carried in his particular department according to his own personal knowledge, where he had a definite knowledge thereof, and where he was uncertain, to refer to the original invoice to be found in the office, if information could be obtained in that manner. I did not personally give the directions to the department heads, but gave them to Mr. Barr, who in turn communicated them to the department managers.

I was present in the store every day from morning until night from Tuesday, the 28th day of February, 1911, when the taking of the inventory began, up to and including Sunday, the 5th day of March, 1911, when the inventory was concluded. I saw to it that the different departments turned in the sheets showing the quantities and values of the merchandise in their particular departments, from day to day as the work was progressing, to the office where the bookkeeper, Miss Howard, superintended [94] the gathering together of the sheets and the transcribing thereof into a permanent inventory with numerous carbon copies thereof; in which work of transcribing Miss Howard was assisted by two stenographers. The original of such inventory, when completed, was filed in the office of the referee in bankruptcy, and the carbon copies thereof, which were seven in number, were retained in the store for the purpose of delivering the same to prospective bidders for examination.

That at the time the inventory was taken and completed and up to the present time this affiant believed, and still believes, that said inventory was taken correctly and properly with only such errors as naturally creep into a labor of that character and that magnitude, regardless of the amount of care taken to preserve accuracy; that very probably there were errors made, but such errors were errors in overestimating the values and quantities of merchandise as well as errors in underestimating the values and quantities of merchandise. As, for instance, in taking said inventory, twelve cash registers contained in the store were scheduled in said inventory as being of the cost value of $75.00 each. That putting that valuation upon said cash registers, this affiant questioned, believing that they were overpriced, and specifically called the attention of Mr. Barr thereto, but said Barr stated that he positively remembered that the cost price thereof was $75.00 each, and under these circumstances that was the price fixed therefor in the inventory. Thereafter affiant learned that the original cost price paid by the said bankrupt to the National Cash Register Company was $35.00 each, thus making a clear overvaluation of $480.00 with respect to said cash registers. The errors thus creeping into the inventory were unintentional and practically unavoidable, and undoubtedly errors of one class were offset by errors of another class.

That immediately upon concluding the inventory I found that the general sentiment of creditors was in favor of [95] an immediate sale of the assets because of the great expense for rent, insurance, watchman's expense, etc., the item of rent alone being close to $75.00 per day, and, furthermore, much of the merchandise was of a character which was rapidly becoming more and more unseasonable, and if there were any material delay in effecting the sale thereof the merchandise would bring a proportionately lower price.

Therefore, I presented these facts to the referee in bankruptcy and procured an order of sale of the assets, which sale was set for the 13th of March, 1911; that in the interim I was in the store every day from morning until night attending to the correspondence and getting the accounts adjusted, attending to office work, getting the books posted to date, the books of account having been neglected for a long period, meeting prospective bidders who desired to look over the stock, and adjusting controversies over the merchandise which had come into the store immediately prior to bankruptcy and which the respective creditors shipping such merchandise desired to reclaim.

That on the said 13th day of March, 1911, I attended the sale for the referee in bankruptcy, and when the bids were opened it was found that there was one bid of approximately $50,000; that after the opening of said bids I was convinced that an appreciably larger bid could be obtained therefor, and after consultation and discussion of the matter with parties who I thought would make a materially higher bid, I finally procured from one bidder a guaranty of an increase of 10 per cent over the bid of $50,000, and thereupon I recommended to the court that all bids be rejected and that new bids be received with the understanding that upon such resale the minimum bid would be $55,000.00; that thereupon a resale was had upon the 15th day of March, 1911, and thereupon, upon the opening of bids on said date, it was found that one E. B. Libby had bid $57,000.00 for said assets, and thereupon, upon my recommendation, [96] the court accepted said bid and ordered the transfer to be made upon the receipt of said consideration.

I have read the objections to my allowance filed by certain creditors, and, referring to paragraph 6 of said objections, wherein it is stated that the creditors, through their own efforts and without any assistance from me, brought about the increase of $7,000 over the highest bid originally filed on March 13, 1911, I desire to state that that allegation is wholly untrue, and that the creditors had absolutely nothing to do with procuring such increased bid.

I desire to state, further, that the total amount of funds which I have handled as receiver approximates $60,800. This includes $57,000 realized from the sale of the assets, refund upon fire insurance premiums, cash sale of merchandise, cash on hand, and collections upon book accounts. Furthermore, there is some real property belonging to the estate which will be sold in the near future and from which approximately $5,000 will be realized.

I further desire to state that I have never received any compensation for acting as trustee in said estate, and the only compensation I have ever received in connection with my services in this estate is that heretofore allowed me as receiver by the district court.

I have read the affidavit of O. A. Kjos in which he swears that my attorney told him in my presence that in making the appraisement of the assets, he, the said Kjos, was not to be permitted to examine the stock of goods, wares, and merchandise in detail for the purpose of ascertaining their value, and that no one was to be permitted to reinventory said goods, and that he was denied the opportunity of examining the value of said goods in detail or to verify the inventory which was produced for the inspection of the appraisers. The statements of the said Kjos are wholly untrue. The facts are—the said Kjos, Barr, and Doheny, the three appraisers, assembled in [97] the store about 4.30 p. m. to make and sign up an appraisement. I was present with these three appraisers. I gave them a copy of the inventory to assist them in making the appraisement. Leopold M. Stern, one of my attorneys, came into the store with a blank form of the appraisement of the character prescribed by the bankruptcy act, which he left there for the purpose of being filled out by the appraisers. Mr. Walter A. McClure, also one of my attorneys, came in a few minutes after Mr. Stern had arrived. Mr. Stern, after turning over the form of appraisement to Mr. McClure, left the store. Mr. Kjos immediately busied himself with checking up the furniture, and fixtures shown in the inventory and to that end he examined the specific items of personal property and compared with the items as set forth in the inventory, and did so completely and thoroughly, and after having done so, he and the other appraisers decided that the same should be appraised at the valuation of 33⅓ per cent of the cost price as set forth in the inventory. With respect to the merchandise, the said Kjos declared that he was a dry goods man and had on two previous occasions during the time the inventory was being taken, been in the store and had on each of these occasions spent considerable time in looking over the stock and he was satisfied in his own mind that the stock would not run over $65,000, and he was satisfied that the inventory was about right, and thereupon he and the other appraisers agreed that the appraisement of the stock should be returned at 60 per cent of the original inventory. Thereupon, the appraisement was so prepared and signed by the appraisers and verified before Mr. Walter A. McClure as notary public. I positively deny that Mr. Kjos or any other appraiser ever signified any desire to examine the stock of merchandise in detail, or that ever I, by inference or otherwise, denied that they had any such right or refused them such opportunity; that it is true that the usual dust curtains which are used nights, Sundays, and holidays, covered the goods, but if any of the appraisers had expressed any [98] desire to take the time and trouble to go through the stock, I would have been perfectly willing that they should do so. Mr. Barr, who was one of the appraisers, was the general manager of the store and had actively participated in taking the inventory, and he was therefore well acquainted with the stock. Doheny, the other appraiser, had come into the store about 1 o'clock in the afternoon and had walked around the store through the various aisles scanning the stock.

I have also read the affidavit of J. J. Doheny, in which he states that I told the said Kjos that he must confine himself to the inventory in making these appraisements, and in reply thereto I desire to state that the said Doheny is mistaken and that I never made any such statement to said Kjos.

Affiant states further that among other creditors who have joined in the objections to my allowance are the Seattle Dry Goods Company; that I am informed and believe the fact to be that the Seattle Dry Goods Company and the Stone-Fisher Company are one and the same corporation, conducting a wholesale business, which is operated under the name of the Seattle Dry Goods Company, and a retail business, which is operated under the name of the Stone-Fisher Company; that among the bidders for the assets were the Stone-Fisher Company, whose bid was approximately $45,050; that the said the Stone-Fisher Company, during the period elapsing between the completion of the inventory and the advertising of the sale of the assets, had a force of some six men almost every day going through the stock with great detail, preparatory to bidding thereon, and thereby had ample opportunity to form an estimate with a reasonable degree of accuracy regarding the true amount of merchandise contained in the store; that among the six so investigating the stock was one Starr, who, affiant is informed, is the general manager of the Stone-Fisher Company; that the said Starr, during the time the inventory was being taken, had also been in the store on many occasions, going through the same very carefully and examining the stock [99] with considerable degree of care and attention, and the said Starr at one time informed me that in his judgment, when the inventory was completed, it would be found that the stock would not run to exceed $75,000.

I state further that excepting as I may have admitted such allegations by this affidavit, I deny each and every allegation contained in the objections of said creditors and in the affidavits attached to the same to the effect that I was careless and inattentive in respect to the taking of the inventory and that I entailed any loss to the estate and that I hindered the appraisers in any way in the task of making a true appraisement, or that any other person than myself and my attorneys were instrumental in procuring the material increase in the price of the assets over the highest bid offered at the time the bids were opened, or that my duties in connection with the management of said business and the disposal of the same were perfunctory and merely those of a custodian.

I pray that this affidavit be construed as an answer to the objections heretofore filed by creditors.

SUTCLIFFE BAXTER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 17th day of June, 1911.

[SEAL.] B. F. WOODS, Jr.,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

Receipt of a copy and due service hereof admitted this 17th day of June, 1911.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Attorney for Creditors.

(Indorsed:) Affidavit of Sutcliffe Baxter. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. June 19, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [100.]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company (Inc.), bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF E. Y. BARR.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, ss:

E. Y. Barr, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says:

I am forty-eight years of age; have resided in the city of Seattle, State of Washington, for seven years, and have had thirty years' experience in the dry goods business.

Up to the 27th day of February, 1911, and for about eighteen months prior thereto, I was engaged as general manager and buyer in the business of Charles Knosher & Company (Inc.), at the southeast corner of Second Avenue and James Street in Seattle, Washington.

From the 27th day of February, 1911, until on or about the 15th day of March, I was in the employ of Sutcliffe Baxter, the receiver in the above-entitled estate, and from the 15th day of March, 1911, to the 27th day of April, 1911, I was in the employ of John Anisfield Company in the capacityof general manager of the business of the bankrupt which had been purchased by the said John Anisfield Company; and from the 27th day of April up to the present time, I was and am now in the employ of McCormack Brothers, who are operating said business, having acquired the same from John Anisfield Company on or about the 27th day of April, 1911.

On the 27th day of February, 1911, Mr. Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver in the above-entitled cause, took possession of the business of the bankrupt and employed me to continue to have [101] general charge of the said business under his direction. Said business was closed on the evening of the 27th day of February, 1911, and Mr. Baxter gave me instructions to begin the taking of the inventory on the morning of Tuesday, February 28, 1911. Mr. Baxter's instructions to me were to see that the inventory was taken at the original cost price, and that the labor be proceeded with as rapidly as possible so as to complete the taking of the inventory by an early day. I, in turn, communicated these instructions to the defferent department heads, who were four in number. I personally actively assisted in taking the inventory of the department embracing the laces, trimmings, neckwear, ribbons, leather goods, jewelry, gloves, and umbrellas, because I was the buyer for these particular lines.

I saw the sheets which were turned in from day to day by the different department heads to the office in order to be transcribed into one complete inventory, and I know of my own personal knowledge that the returns so made, as well as the returns of the merchandise of the particular department that I personally was taking, were approximately correct as to quantities and values, and that while errors may have crept in in making such returns, it was impossible to take an inventory of a stock of that size without making some minor mistakes. One difficulty in taking the inventory was the fact that the merchandise was ticketed only with the retail selling price and without the original cost price, and furthermore, there was no absolute rate of profit at which all the goods were marked, but a different percentage of profit was added to the original cost on different lines of merchandise.

As to the fixtures in the store we, of course, had to estimate the value of these on our best judgment, having no means of obtaining more definite figures; and in this respect for instance we erred in setting down the value of twelve cash registers at $75.00 apiece, while we afterwards learned the original [102] cost of same when purchased from the National Cash Register Company was $35.00 each.

I saw the original inventory after it had been transcribed and I know that the original was filed in the office of the referee in bankruptcy and a number of copies retained in the store for the purpose of exhibiting same to prospective purchasers. It is my opinion from observation at the time the inventory was taken, as well as during my continued employment in the store ever since, that said inventory was taken properly and fairly, and that the inventory prepared and filed in the office of the referee in bankruptcy and exhibited to the purchasers is a fair and correct inventory.

I have read the affidavit of O. A. Kjos in which he mentions that one Henderson had stated in his hearing that an item of broadcloth which cost $2.12½ per yard was inventoried at 50¢ per yard and afterwards sold by John Anisfield Company for $2.98 per yard, and the said Henderson further stated that a quantity of India linen which had cost $750 and was of that approximate value was inventoried at $250.

The merchandise referred to was in the department of the said Henderson, and if the said Henderson placed any unfair valuations thereon, it was without the knowledge of this affiant; I have made inquiry about this broadcloth referred to and I find that this was a remnant of from one-half to one yard, and a remnant of such small size really has no value whatsoever and should never have been taken and figured in the inventory. As to item of India linen, I do not know anything about it.

Affiant states further that he has read the affidavit of E. G. Anderson filed herein, and particularly that portion of the affidavit beginning with line 27 on page 2 and ending with line 27 on page 3. That the statements made by the said Anderson with respect to the subject of conversation held with this affiant on the 7th day of April, 1911, are [103] wholly untrue. That I did state to the said Anderson I knew positively that the inventory had been taken correctly so far as my department was concerned, and so far as the other departments were concerned I believe that the same were taken correctly, although I did not actually do the labor myself. I made none of the statements referred to by Mr. Anderson, or any statements from which he had any right to draw inferences of the character set out by him, and not only did I not make the statements set forth by Mr. Anderson but in fact no such transactions took place or were participated in by me as are mentioned and described by the said Anderson. It is true that I gave Mr. Libby the figures concerning the inventory shortly after this inventory was finished and before the inventory itself had been transcribed, but I gave these figures to Mr. Libby because he was representing a large creditor and was anxious to know the result at as early an hour as possible, and I thought he had a right to know the results. I did not furnish the said Libby with any other figures than those which were embraced in the inventory, and I repeat that the figures given Mr. Libby represent the true and correct figures respecting quantities and values of the merchandise on hand according to the best of my knowledge, information, and belief.

I have further read the affidavits of Kjos and J. J. Doheny with respect to the method by which the appraisement was made, and in answer thereto I desire to state that we had an appointment with the appraisers to meet at the store at 2 o'clock on the afternoon on which the appraisement was made. Mr. Doheny was present at that hour, but Mr. Kjos did not appear. We waited for him until 4 o'clock, when he finally came. When he did come, he suggested that we look over the fixtures first, and thereupon the three appraisers, with inventory in hand, went through the entire store examining all of the fixtures, and there was hardly a single item on which Mr. Kjos did not express the opinion that it had been valued too high in the inventory. [104] When it came to the merchandise, Mr. Kjos said to me that he thought he understood merchandise as well as anybody; that on a previous day he had come into the store and had taken the measurements of the different departments, and that same night he had worked at his office in the Western Dry Goods Company and had figured out the approximate value of the stock in hand, and I said to him, "What figures did you arrive at?" and he said that the stock would inventory $65,000, and I told him that he came very near it. About this time Leopold M. Stern, one of the attorneys for the receiver, came up to the office, bringing with him a blank form which we afterwards signed and filled in and which I learned was a form of appraisement. In response to some suggestion on the part of Mr. Kjos regarding the necessity of the appraisers to go through the entire stock, Mr. Stern did state that the appraisement was a formal matter required by the bankruptcy law; that it was not expected of the appraisers that they should go through the entire stock for the purpose of figuring up the quantities and values of the merchandise, for the reason that it would take a very long time and was impracticable and because the appraisers' fee was small and would not begin to compensate the appraisers for the time they would have to spend on such tasks; that the appraisers had a right to assume that the inventory was correct and the court merely expected them to form some estimate of the character of the stock and in their appraisement return the figures which they thought the stock ought to bring on sale, the purpose of these figures being to guide the court with reference to the amount of bid which they should accept upon the sale. Neither the receiver nor Mr. Stern made any suggestion that the appraisers should not examine the character of the stock if the appraisers desired so to do. After this explanation Mr. Stern left the store. In the meantime Mr. Walter A. McClure, one of the other attorneys for the receiver, had arrived, and after consultation among ourselves the appraisers decided upon the [105] figures which were afterwards incorporated in the appraisement.

I desire to state further that the Western Dry Goods Company, with which firm the said Kjos is associated, had a man come into the store after the appraisement and before the sale. That this man was in the store for a long period of time, going through the store and examining the stock very thoroughly, both on the main floor and the basement. The name of this man was Fairhurst.

I desire to state further that if the three appraisers had attempted to make a thorough appraisement by going through the entire stock, figuring for their own benefit the quantities and values of the merchandise, that it would have taken at least two months for the three men to have concluded their labors.

I desire to state further that Stone-Fisher Company, one of the bidders for the stock, had all their firm and all of their managers and department managers come into the store day after day and examine the stock very thoroughly, and their investigation was so extended and thorough as to make it impossible for men of their experience to fail to detect any material discrepancy between the inventory and the stock itself as situated in the store if such discrepancy had existed.

I desire to say further that I have read the affidavit of Sutcliffe Baxter, and that his general statement of the method and manner by which the inventory was taken and the part that he took therein is correct.

E. Y. Barr.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 16th day of June, 1911.

[seal.] B. F. Woods, Jr.,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [106]

Receipt of a copy and due service hereof admitted this 17th day of June, 1911.

Nelson R. Anderson,
Attorney for Creditors.

(Indorsed:) Affidavit of E. Y. Barr. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. June 19, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [107]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company (a corporation), bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF WALTER A. M'CLURE.

State of Washington, County of King, ss:

Walter A. McClure, being first duly sworn, on oath says: That as one of the attorneys of the receiver he went to the store of the bankrupt about five p. m. on the day the appraisement was made herein, the object of his visit being to make certain that an appraisement would be returned, the appraisers having failed to meet earlier in the day, as had been theretofore arranged; that when affiant entered the store there were present the receiver and the three appraisers and L. M. Stern, one of the attorneys of the receiver; that all of said persons were in the office in the store of the bankrupt, and said Stern handed to affiant a form of return for the appraisers to fill out and sign, stating that he would remain no longer, and he thereupon left the store; that immediately thereupon the appraisers proceeded to make the appraisement, having, as affiant understood, theretofore made an examination of the assets to be appraised; that affiant remained until the appraisement was completed, and said appraisement was thereupon delivered to him by the appraisers and the next day lodged by him with the referee for filing; that no attempt was made by any person whomsoever to influence the appraisers in the making of the appraisement [108] while affiant was present, nor was any attempt made to prevent or induce them from making an examination of the assets; that affiant believes, and at the time the appraisement was made understood, that the appraisers each acted conscientiously in the discharge of their duties as appraisers, and that the figures returned into court were the value of the assets as agreed upon by the appraisers; that there was no disagreement among the appraisers as to the values; that if affiant had known that the figures returned by the appraisers were not their estimate of the value of the assets, or if the slightest suggestion had been made to affiant that the appraisers had not had an opportunity to investigate the assets as fully as they desired, affiant would have required that the appraisement be postponed until the appraisers were each fully satisfied as to the character, condition, and value of the assets and the inventories thereof placed before them by the receiver.

Walter A. McClure.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 23d day of June, 1911.

[seal.] Emory E. Hess,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Indorsed:) Affidavit of Walter A. McClure. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Jun. 24, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk.

Service of within affidavit and receipt of copy admitted this 23 day of June, 1911.

Nelson R. Anderson,
Attorney for Creditors. [109]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company (Inc.), bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF LEOPOLD M. STERN.

Leopold M. Stern, being first duly sworn, on oath, deposes and says:

That he is one of the attorneys who acted for the receiver and trustee in bankruptcy in the above-entitled proceedings; that he has read the objections to the allowance of compensation to the receiver and his attorneys filed herein as well as the affidavits in support thereof; that in so far as said objections state that Tootle Campbell Company, a creditor in the sum of $26,000, opposes the allowance heretofore made to the attorneys for the receiver, said objections are not correct; that at the time said copies of the objections and affidavits were served upon affiant, Nelson R. Anderson advised affiant that said firm of Tootle Campbell Company desired to oppose only the allowance made to the receiver and did not authorize any objection to be preferred to the receiver's counsel.

Affiant further states that he had personal knowledge of all the transactions relating to the sale of the assets by the receiver and that he does not know of any creditors who assisted the receiver or his counsel in procuring an increase of $7,000 over the highest bid received at the time first set for the sale of the assets.

Affiant states further that a true estimate of the value of the services of the receiver's counsel can not be made excepting by an examination of the files and records in the referee's office, which to some extent will show the numerous [110] petitions and orders which had to be prepared and drawn in connection with the administration of the estate; that furthermore, there were many controversies over merchandise which had been received into the store immediately prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the creditors shipping these goods desiring to procure their return; and that many other questions arose in the course of the administration of the estate and prior to the sale of the assets which necessitated the receiver consulting his attorneys every day and several times in each day and also required the receiver's attorneys to appear frequently before the referee.

With reference to the manner in which the appraisement was made by the appraisers, affiant states that when it came to the appointment of appraisers, affiant, knowing that the Western Dry Goods Company was a large creditor, called up said creditor and inquired for Mr. E. G. Anderson, the president of said company, and ascertained that said Anderson was absent from the city. Affiant stated to the party answering the telephone communication that he desired to recommend to the referee the name of an appraiser and believed that Mr. Anderson or some other person connected with the Western Dry Goods Company, should act as appraiser by reason of their experience in the line of merchandise contained in the business of the bankrupt, and further by reason of their being interested as creditor in a large sum; and thereupon the person answering this affiant suggested that O. A. Kjos be named as appraiser, because said Kjos was one of the officers and principal dry goods buyer in the firm of the Western Dry Goods Company, and thereupon this affiant suggested the name of O. A. Kjos to the referee in bankruptcy and procured his appointment as one of the appraisers.

Affiant states that some other person arranged for the meeting of the appraisers in the store of the bankrupt on the 9th day of March, 1911, at 4 o'clock p. m., and that this affiant [111] having the order appointing appraisers in his possession, which form also includes the return to be signed and served by the appraisers, was telephoned to bring same over to the store of the bankrupt and this affiant therefore brought the same over in person to the store and found assembled in the office the three appraisers. While delivering said blank form of appraisement to the appraisers, said appraiser Kjos in the hearing of this affiant made some remark which indicated that he thought it was perhaps the duty of the appraisers to go through the entire stock and examine every item of merchandise in the stock, figuring both the quantities and values and making their returns of appraisement thereon; and thereupon, this affiant informed said appraisers that it was not the duty of the appraisers to undertake a labor of that magnitude; that to do so would take several weeks of time, for which they would of course expect adequate compensation and the court would certainly not allow only a few dollars for their services; that the appraisement was purely a formal matter to guide the referee as to the percentage of the original cost at which the assets should be sold, and that it was not the practice in this jurisdiction and that it was not expected of the appraisers to go through the entire stock or to check up the receiver's inventory or to measure or count the merchandise for themselves or to fix the original cost price themselves, but that they had a right to assume that the inventory was correct, both as to quantity and original cost price and were simply expected to look over the stock and ascertain its character, seasonableness, and its condition and then make up their minds as to what percentage of the original cost the referee should accept upon the opening of bids. After stating to the appraisers substantially the foregoing this affiant left the office and was not present when the appraisement was determined and the return filled out.

Affiant states positively that neither he nor the receiver in the hearing of this affiant ever advised the appraisers [112] that they would not be permitted to examine the stock in detail or that they were not permitted to reinventory the goods, if they so desired, but this affiant simply pointed out to the appraisers that it was not expected of them to go to that extreme in the performance of their duties, and that they certainly could not expect compensation commensurate with the amount of time and labor they would have to expend, if they should endeavor to go into the inventory with as much detail as suggested by said Kjos, and in so advising appraisers he did so as the result of eleven years' personal experience in connection with the administration of bankruptcy estates in this jurisdiction.

LEOPOLD M. STERN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 16th day of June, 1911.

[SEAL.] B. F. WOODS, Jr.,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

Receipt of a copy and due service hereof admitted this 17th day of June, 1911.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Attorney for Creditors.

(Indorsed:) Affidavit of Leopold M. Stern. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. June 19, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [113]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF EDWIN LONDON.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, ss:

Edwin London, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: That he is the president and active manager of the Edwin London Dry Goods Stores; that he has had more than twenty years of experience in the dry goods business, and that he has made a specialty of estimating the value of stocks of goods in bulk and has handled many such stocks; that he looked at the stock of the bankrupt herein and found the greatest difficulty in identifying in the shelf the goods listed in the receiver's report; that he found it practically impossible to check up from the receiver's report the goods there for the purpose of determining whether the inventory had been taken high, fair, or low; that he noted the grade of merchandise to be good, merchantable and that the store was well stocked; that he estimated that there was from $80,000 to $85,000.00, cost value, of merchandise on hand; that in the linen department he noted the fact that the receiver had listed no linens over 60 cents per yard; that in examining some 10 or 15 pieces of linens he saw one bolt of from 8 to 10 yards that was worth at least $1.40, cost value per yard. Further affiant saith not.

EDWIN LONDON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12 day of July, 1911.

[SEAL.] NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle. [114]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF A. H. SANFORD.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, ss:

A. H. Sanford, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: That he is general manager of the wholesale department of Seattle Dry Goods Co.; that he has had forty years of experience in the dry goods business; that he has been in the cities of Seattle and Tacoma for the past twenty-two years; that he had never heard of Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, herein, being in the mercantile business, save as receiver, until he read such a statement in the affidavit of said Sutcliffe Baxter; that he has read affidavits filed herein to the effect that Seattle Dry Goods Co. or its agents had gone through the stock of the bankrupt making careful and detailed notes, memoranda, etc., of the stock, etc., on numerous occasions; that such statements are untrue; that affiant was not in the store of the bankrupt to exceed forty minutes, all told; that affiant has made inquiry and believes the fact to be that the combined time of himself and all others connected with Seattle Dry Goods Co. never executed two hours, all told, in said store; that at no time was a detailed or minute investigation made of said stock;

Further affiant says that he has been employed on many occasions, and has qualifications for such work, to fix an estimate of value upon bankrupt stocks and stocks for sale in bulk generally; that he after examining the quality and quantities of [115] merchandise in the store of the bankrupt estimate conservatively that there was at least $80,000 to $85,000 worth of merchandise on hand and so reported to his firm; that his firm, on receiving the report of the receiver, believed, at that time and for the purpose of making its bid, that the receiver's report was a true and correct report and made its bid accordingly; and further saith not.

A. H. SANFORD.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 13 day of July, 1911.

[SEAL.] NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

Copy of within affidavit received and due service of the same acknowledged this 13th day of July, 1911.

McCLURE & McCLURE,
L. M. STERN,
Attorneys for Trustee.

(Indorsed:) Affidavits of Edwin London and A. H. Sanford. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. July 14, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [116]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

ORDER OR JUDGMENT DISMISSING PETITION.

Came on to be heard the petition of certain creditors of Charles Knosher & Co., heretofore adjudged a bankrupt, that the sale of the bankrupt stock heretofore made to John Ainesfield Co., and the order confirming said sale be set aside and that the remainder of said bankrupt stock in the hands of the said John Ainesfield Co., and the proceeds thereof be paid into the registry of this court, the said petitioning creditors appearing by Nelson R. Anderson and Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey, their attorneys, and the said Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee herein, appearing by Messrs. McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, Esquire, his attorneys, to resist said petition, and the said John Ainesfield Co. appearing by Harold Preston, Esquire, its attorney, to resist said petition, and the court being fully advised in the premises;

It is now considered, ordered, and adjudged that said petition be and the same is hereby dismissed.

Done in open court this 23 day of September, A. D. 1911.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

To the making of the order dismissing said petition, the said petitioners and each of them at said time duly [117] excepted, which exception is allowed.

C. H. HANFORD, Judge.

(Indorsed:) Order. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, Sep. 23, 1911. F. A. Simpkins, acting clerk. [118]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, Inc. (a corporation), bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF HOWARD J. SHEEHAN.

STATE OF WASNIHGTON, County of King, ss:

Howard J. Sheehan, being first duly sworn, on oath says: That he is an experienced dry-goods man, having been in the dry-goods business for the past thirteen years covering every line in the business, and in particular the lines contained in the stock of the above-named bankrupt sold by Sutcliffe Baxter as receiver; that affiant was desirous of submitting a bid for the purchase of said assets, and with that in view carefully examined same during a period of four or five days, and after the inventory was completed spent about five hours in checking the inventory with the merchandise; that affiant became thoroughly familiar with said merchandise and familiar with the inventory thereof by reason of such examination and comparison; that in the opinion of affiant the merchandise was correctly listed on the inventory and the valuations of the merchandise set forth in the inventory were correct; that affiant found no errors in the inventory except that twelve cash registers were inventoried at seventy-five [119] dollars ($75.00) a piece instead of about thirty-five dollars ($35.00) apiece, an error to which he called the attention of the receiver and trustee.

HOWARD J. SHEEHAN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of July, 1911.

[SEAL.] WALTER A. MCCLURE,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Indorsed:) Affidavit of Howard J. Sheehan. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, July 6, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [120]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, Inc. (a corporation), bankrupt.

AFFIDAVIT OF J. J. DOHENY.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

J. J. Doheny, being first duly sworn, on oath says: That pursuant to appointment with other appraisers affiant, as appraiser of the stock of merchandise and fixtures of the bankrupt, went to the store of the bankrupt at about two o'clock p. m. on the day of the making of the appraisement herein, expecting to meet there the two other appraisers, who, affiant afterward learned, were E. G. Barr and O. A. Kjos; that said Barr was at the store, but the said Kjos was not there; that affiant and said Barr waited half or three-quarters of an hour for said Kjos, whereupon said Barr telephoned the Western Dry Goods Company as to the whereabouts of said Kjos, and after the telephone conversation informed affiant that said Barr had been advised that Mr. Kjos was out and could not be at the store until four or five o'clock p. m.; that while waiting for said Kjos affiant and said Barr looked over the stock of merchandise, and then affiant left the store, making an arrangement with the receiver that affiant would return about four-thirty p. m., when said Kjos could be present; that at four-thirty p. m. affiant returned to the store and met there the receiver [121] and L. M. Stern and the said Barr and said Kjos; that thereupon the three appraisers carefully went through the furniture and fixtures, checking same on the inventory, and looked over the merchandise inventory; that no attempt was made by any person to influence the appraisers in their appraisement nor was any attempt made to prevent the appraisers from examining the assets to be appraised or to induce them not to make such examination; that the statement contained in the affidavit of E. G. Barr is correct as to what occurred prior to the filling out of the appraisement; that as far as affiant is concerned he, as appraiser, conscientiously endeavored to perform his duty as such appraiser, and is of the opinion that the other appraisers did the same; that the appraisement was made on the basis of the inventory submitted to the appraisers by the receiver and his attorneys.

That the foregoing affidavit is correct, and is made as supplementary to the affidavit heretofore signed by this affiant, and for the purpose of more fully stating what occurred at the time of making said appraisement.

J. J. DOHENY.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 23d day of June, 1911.

[SEAL.] EMORY E. HESS,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

Service of within affidavit and receipt of copy admitted this 23d day of June, 1911.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Attorney for Creditors.

(Indorsed:) Affidavit of J. J. Doheny. Filed in the U. S. Distict Court, Western Dist. of Washington, June 24, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, Clerk. [122]

ORDER DIRECTING TRUSTEE TO MAKE CERTAIN PAYMENTS.

In the United States District Court, Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, bankrupt.

ORDER OF DISBURSEMENT.

It appearing to the court that the referee has made certain allowances for certain expenses and costs of administration, and for the payment of preferred claims, and a dividend of twelve and one-half (12½%) per cent on the unsecured claims, it is therefore,

Ordered that the trustee herein shall make the payments as herein designated, by checks upon the depository, countersigned by the referee:

J. P. Wall, bankrupt's attorney, fee	$100.00
McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern, for services as attorney for trustee	500.00
Seattle Electric Company, for light	52.80
Seattle Post-Inteliigencer	8.70
Seattle Times	7.90
Treasurer of King County, for taxes	2,729.50
John B. Agen, for rent	2,729.09
Star Publishing Co	785.98
Calhoun, Denny & Ewing, premium on bond	22.50
William Maloney, for wages	28.50
Altman Neckwear Co., 12½ per cent dividend	71.77
American Pin Co., 12½ per cent dividend	23.93
American Express Co., 12½ per cent dividend	1.67
American Paper Co., 12½ per cent dividend	21.18
The John Ainsfield Co., 12½ per cent dividend	2,749.68
Armour & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	1.64
W. H. Barnes, 12½ per cent dividend	7.50
L. Bauman & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	9.37
[123]
J. P. Bauman & Sons	14.06
Beach Quality Candy Co., 12½ per cent dividend	4.33
Black Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	7.30
Blue Wagon Service, 12½ per cent dividend	.72
Blumenfeld, Locher & Brown Co., 12½ per cent dividend	7.63
Bradley Knitting Co., 12½ per cent dividend	37.67
Bradshaw Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	18.50
Buchanan Lawrence Co., 12½ per cent dividend	20.46
T. Buettner & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	1.17
Butler Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	379.52
H. A. Caesar & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	22.35
Carman Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	8.10
Cassady Fairbanks Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	15.18
Central Knitting Co., 12½ per cent dividend	7.73
Chris. Sign & Wallpaper Co., 12½ per cent dividend	.37
Clayburgh Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	51.10
Clement, Dranger & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	47.79
Cluett, Peabody & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	81.36
Coon Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	7.40
Creed, Kellogg & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	1.31
C. H. Crowley, 12½ per cent dividend	3.91
J. B. Crowley, 12½ per cent dividend	7.47
Davis Bros (Inc.), 12½ per cent dividend	17.03
Andrew Demetre, 12½ per cent dividend	16.26
Hugo DuBrock & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	16.34
Ely Walker Dry Goods Co., 12½ per cent dividend	93.08
Chas. Emmerich & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	4.61
Englehart Davidson Merc. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	75.14
Enterprise Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	74.43
Felsenthal Bros. & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	7.25
Marshall Field & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	272.21
Fleischner, Mayer & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	177.04
Fownes Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	148.43
Frank & Miller, 12½ per cent dividend	29.75
[124]
J. L. Frankel & Co	5.14
Foster & Kleiser (Inc.), 12½ per cent dividend	61.87
G. H. & E. Freydburg, 12½ per cent dividend	6.06
G. H. & E. Freydburg, 12½ per cent dividend	4.59
Friedman & Herskovitz, 12½ per cent dividend	135.12
Geo. Frost Co., 12½ per cent dividend	8.39
H. Gallert Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	12.81
Gateway Printing Co., 12½ per cent dividend	6.22
Giaun Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	20.39

H. B. Glover & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	$56.39
L. Goldstein, 12½ per cent dividend	12.68
Gerham Rubber Co., 12½ per cent dividend	.48
L. N. Gross Co., 12½ per cent dividend	24.29
Guiterman Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	277.08
W. H. Hagleberg, 12½ per cent dividend	3.94
B. Hart & Bro., 12½ per cent dividend	24.47
Horwitz & Horwitz, 12½ per cent dividend	7.59
C. P. Howes & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	6.09
Hull Bros. Umbrella Co., 12½ per cent dividend	168.22
Hyman Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	7.58
Imperial Candy Co., 12½ per cent dividend	79.74
Interwoven Stocking Co., 12½ per cent dividend	18.55
Kawana Knitting Co., 12½ per cent dividend	48.87
Julius Kayser & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	52.12
C. Kenyon Co., 12½ per cent dividend	17.84
James Klåber, 12½ per cent dividend	8.89
Nelson Kershaw, 12½ per cent dividend	18.64
Klauber Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	295.49
Kunstadter Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	41.85
Kursheedt Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	19.99
Lamson Consolidated Store Service Co., 12½ per cent dividend	3.06
Levy Simson & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	30.65
Harry E. Lewis, 12½ per cent dividend	11.98
Linen Thread Co., 12½ per cent dividend	8.38
[125]
Alfred Linz	6.99
Lobel & Lausick, 12½ per cent dividend	12.84
Locke & Clarke Co., 12½ per cent dividend	55.37
J. B. Locke & Potts Co., 12½ per cent dividend	136.71
Laeser-Auslander Co., 12½ per cent dividend	19.56
Love-Warren-Monroe Co., 12½ per cent dividend	15.37
Lowman & Hanford Co., 12½ per cent dividend	10.88
Luscombs & Isaacs, 12½ per cent dividend	101.53
Martins, 12½ per cent dividend	45.64
May Malone, 12½ per cent dividend	16.93
Merchants' Towel Supply Co., 12½ per cent dividend	1.62
Minneapolis Knitting Mills, 12½ per cent dividend	6.94
Modern Garment Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	22.84
Moore-Watson Dry Goods Co., 12½ per cent dividend	4.39
Robert Morris, 12½ per cent dividend	50.64
John A. Murphy, 12½ per cent dividend	54.76
McCallum Hosiery Co., 12½ per cent dividend	44.53
R. L. McDonald, 12½ per cent dividend	12.67
N. Y. & Chemnitz Netting Co., 12½ per cent dividend	3.75
Nonotock Silk Co., 12½ per cent dividend	157.50
Novelty Veiling Co., 12½ per cent dividend	28.93
Olympia Knitting Mills, 12½ per cent dividend	9.18
Oppenheimer, Alder & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	145.29
Pacific Coast Biscuit Co., 12½ per cent dividend	9.70
Pacific Neckwear Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	29.83
Palace of Sweets, 12½ per cent dividend	6.75
Pickard-Garde Co., 12½ per cent dividend	3.65
Pioneer Suspender Co., 12½ per cent dividend	17.19
John Pullman Co., 12½ per cent dividend	37.87
J. B. Powles & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	20.09
Puget Sound News Co., 12½ per cent dividend	4.98
Remy Schmidt & Pleissner, 12½ per cent dividend	21.33
J. N. Richardson, Sons & Owden, 12½ per cent dividend	85.93
H. N. Richmond Paper Co., 12½ per cent dividend	22.13
[126]
E. Ries & Co	68.66
J. R. Roberts Agency, 12½ per cent dividend	41.55
Robinovitz & Koen, 12½ per cent dividend	15.75
Rothschild Bros. & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	17.18
Chas. Rubens & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	8.13
Reichenbach & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	50.60
Salem China Co., 12½ per cent dividend	3.25
L. Samter & Sons, 12½ per cent dividend	14.17

Schefer, Schramm & Vogel, 12½ per cent dividend	$21.16
Schlang & Livingston, 12½ per cent dividend	22.59
Schwabacher Bros. & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	29.93
Seabord Oil Co., 12½ per cent dividend	.28
Searight, Waldeck Co., 12½ per cent dividend	18.64
Seattle Electric Co., 12½ per cent dividend	45.12
Seattle Hardware Co., 12½ per cent dividend	3.36
M. Seller & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	.34
Mrs. A. Shirpser, 12½ per cent dividend	5.14
D. Sieher & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	187.14
Smith, Daniels & Keller, 12½ per cent dividend	22.27
Springfield Knitting Co., 12½ per cent dividend	28.99
Staadecker & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	96.26
Standard Fashion Co., 12½ per cent dividend	119.51
Standard Oil Co., 12½ per cent dividend	5.32
Star Skirt Co., 12½ per cent dividend	17.22
A. Stein & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	6.88
A. Steinhardt & Bro., 12½ per cent dividend	5.40
Sterne & Klein Co., 12½ per cent dividend	16.88
Stewart & Holmes Drug Co., 12½ per cent dividend	7.03
Stone & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	12.23
R. S. Stokes and C. J. Erickson, 12½ per cent dividend	250.00
Stone & Fisher (Seattle Dry Goods Co.), 12½ per cent dividend	64.04
Levi Strauss, 12½ per cent dividend	4.78
Sundheimer Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	48.12
Sutro Bros. Braid Co., 12½ per cent dividend	26.93
Superior Candy & Cracker Co., 12½ per cent dividend	2.11
[127]
J. S. Temple	8.89
Thread Agency, 12½ per cent dividend	1.33
Times Printing Co., 12½ per cent dividend	240.94
Tootle-Campbell Dry Goods Co., 12½ per cent dividend	337.76
Tootle-Campbell Dry Goods Co., 12½ per cent dividend	3,380.91
True Shape Hosiery Co., 12½ per cent dividend	13.81
Union Savings & Trust Co., 12½ per cent dividend	3,056.62
Voss & Stern, 12½ per cent dividend	47.55
Warren Featherbone Co., 12½ per cent dividend	2.25
Hubert H. Watkins, 12½ per cent dividend	1.51
Western Dry Goods Co., 12½ per cent dividend	638.06
Western Fancy Goods Co., 12½ per cent dividend	16.30
Western Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	6.81
Wiener Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	146.26
Williams Garment Co., 12½ per cent dividend	1.56
York Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	18.47
Lowengart & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	57.15
Brueck & Wilson Co., 12½ per cent dividend	289.50
H. F. Norton Co., 12½ per cent dividend	60.12
Star Publishing Co., 12½ per cent dividend	92.85
Butler Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	76.89
Gilbert Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	76.23
Burton, Price & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	38.17
M. H. Rosenberg & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	63.85
Friedman Bros. & Son, 12½ per cent dividend	6.75
O'Callaghan & Fedden, 12½ per cent dividend	17.18
C. R. De Bevoise Co., 12½ per cent dividend	8.53
Frank & Bauer, 12½ per cent dividend	31.37
C. E. Bentley Co., 12½ per cent dividend	2.81
Alberts Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	6.00
American Lady Corset Co., 12½ per cent dividend	136.71
M. M. Bernstein & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	17.09
Coronet Mfg. Co., 12½ per cent dividend	35.20
Excelsior Quilting Co., 12½ per cent dividend	3.19
Goodman & Mandel, 12½ per cent dividend	5.19
[128]
Green Shoulder Form & Pad Co	1.49
T. B. M. Gates, 12½ per cent dividend	1.62
Wm. P. Harper & Son, 12½ per cent dividend	.87

Henrietta Skirt Co., 12½ per cent dividend	$8.00
Ireland Bros., 12½ per cent dividend	11.21
J. M. Weissman & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	4.12
United States Glass Co., 12½ per cent dividend	9.53
Regent Shirt Co., 12½ per cent dividend	44.18
Raphael Tuck & Sons Co., 12½ per cent dividend	18.79
Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., 12½ per cent dividend	703.08

Entered in open court this 19th day of April, 1911.

C. H. HANFORD, District Judge.

Certified correct.

JOHN P. HOYT, Referee in Bankruptcy.

(Indorsed:) Order of disbursement. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Apr. 19, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk. [129]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In Bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., Bankrupt.

BOND.

Know all men by these presents: That we, Western Dry Goods Co., a corporation; Smith-Daniels & Kelleher Co., a corporation, Imperial Candy Company, a corporation; Black Manufacturing Company, a corporation; and Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation; as principals, and National Surety Company of New York, a body corporate, duly incorporated under the laws of the State of New York and authorized to transact the business of surety in the State of Washington, as surety, are held and firmly bound unto John Ainesfield Co., a corporation, in the full sum of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500), for the payment whereof well and truly to be made we bind ourselves, our and each of our successors and assigns, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents.

Sealed with our seals and dated this 13th day of September, A. D. 1911.

The condition of the above obligation is such that—

Whereas the above-entitled principals filed a motion in the above-entitled cause seeking to set aside an order of sale and order of confirmation of sale of a stock of goods, wares, and merchandise heretofore made in said cause; and

Whereas Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee of [130] said bankrupt estate, refused to file said motion or undertake the setting aside of said orders;

Now, therefore, if the above-bounden principals shall pay to the said John Ainesfield Co. all costs or damages which it, the said John Ainesfield Co., shall suffer by reason of the filing of said motion or the carrying on of said proceedings, then this obligation to be void; otherwise to be and remain in full force and effect.

WESTERN DRY GOODS CO.,
By NELSON R. ANDERSON, Atty.
SMITH-DANIELS & KELLEHER CO.,
By NELSON R. ANDERSON, Atty.
IMPERIAL CANDY COMPANY,
By NELSON R. ANDERSON, Atty.
BLACK MANUFACTURING COMPANY,
By NELSON R. ANDERSON, Atty.
SEATTLE DRY GOODS COMPANY,
By NELSON R. ANDERSON, Atty.
NATIONAL SURETY COMPANY,
By JOHN W. ROBERTS, Resident Vice President.

Attest:
[SEAL.]

EDW. P. WELCH,
Resident Assistant Secretary.

Copy of within bond received and due service of same acknowledged this 13th day of September, 1911.

HAROLD PRESTON,
Atty. for John Ainisfield Co.

(Indorsed:) Bond. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Sept. 14, 1911. F. A. Simpkins, acting clerk. [131]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt.

STIPULATION CONCERNING PREPARATION AND CERTIFICATION OF RECORD.

It is hereby stipulated by and between the parties hereto that the clerk of the above-entitled court, in preparing and certifying to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals the record herein on appeal or petition for review of the Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation; Smith, Daniels, Kelleher & Company, a corporation; Imperial Candy Company, a corporation; Black Manufacturing Company, a corporation; Seattle Dry Goods Company, a corporation; Tootle, Campbell Co., a corporation; Bradshaw Bros.; True Shape Hosiery Co.; Sutro Bros. Braid Co.; Pioneer Suspender Co.; American Paper Co.; Harry E. Lewis; Love-Warren-Monroe Co.; Gorham Rubber Co.; Standard Oil Co.; Superior Candy & Cracker Co.; Lowman & Hanford Co.; Pickard-Garde Co.; Chas. Emmerick & Co.; E. Reis & Company; J. B. Powles & Co.; A. Stein & Co.; Clement, Dranger & Co.; N. Y. & Chemnitz Netting Co.; Stone & Co.; H. A. Caesar & Co.; J. S. Temple; Interwoven Stocking Co.; Western Fancy Goods Co.; J. B. Crowley; Moore-Watson Dry Goods Co.; David Bros.; L. Samter & Sons; Luscombe & Isaacs; Spool Cotton Co.; Julius Kayser & Co.; B. Hart & Bro.; Nonotuck Silk Co.; Clayburgh Bros.; Pacific Coast Biscuit Co.; Excelsior Quilting Company; Columbia Shade Cloth Company; Green Shoulder Form & Pad Company; T. B. M. Gates; Coronet Manufacturing Company; Givine [132] Manufacturing Company; Central Stamping Company; Western Manufacturing Company; Staadecker & Company; Richmond Paper Company; Armour & Company; Linen Thread Company; L. J. Clayburg; Hugo De Brock & Company; Springfield Knitting Company; George Frost & Company; Reny-Schmidt & Plesnor; Goodman Mandel; Henrietta Skirt Company; Levi Straus & Co.; and Olympia Knitting Mills, creditors of the estate of the above-named bankrupt, shall include therein transcript of the following papers and proceedings, and none other, which papers and proceedings contain a full and complete record in said cause of all that is necessary to a determination of the matters involved in said appeal or said petition for review, and that the same shall be so certified by the clerk of said court, to wit:

1. Order of district judge directing payment of expenses, etc, of petitioning creditors.
2. Report of receiver (including cash receipts and cash disbursements), including summary of cash receipts and summary of cash disbursements.
3. Objections to allowance of receiver.
4. Order approving receiver's report.
5. Amended petition (Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey).
6. Memorandum decision.
7. Order of referee sustaining objections.
8. Order to show cause.
9. Order (April 14th—Nelson R. Anderson, Atty.).
10. Creditors' petition (April 4th).
11. Objections to allowance of receiver, with affidavits by J. J. Doheny, Ole A. Kjos, Eugene G. Anderson, and Nelson R. Anderson.
12. Petition for review of referee's order.
13. Objections to jurisdiction.
14. Certificate and return.
15. Order of allowance to receiver and trustee and to his attorneys. [133]
16. Affidavits of Lola Cassil and C. H. Winslow.
17. Affidavit of R. C. Post.
18. Affidavit of Sutcliffe Baxter.
19. Affidavit of E. Y. Barr.
20. Affidavit of Walter A. McClure.
21. Affidavit of Leopold M. Stern.
22. Affidavit of Edwin London and A. H. Sanford.
23. Order (Sept. 23d) Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey.
24. Affidavit of Howard J. Sheehan.
25. Affidavit of J. J. Doheny, filed June 24, 1911.
26. Bond.

26. Order of disbursement (April 19)—Leopold M. Stern.

Dated October 17, A. D. 1911.

HUGHES, McM., D. & R.,
NELSON R. ANDERSON,
Attorneys for Creditors.
LEOPOLD M. STERN,
McCLURE & McCLURE,
Attorneys for Sutcliffe Baxter, as Receiver and Trustee.
HAROLD PRESTON,
Attorney for John Ainsfield Co.

(Indorsed:) Stipulation. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, Oct. 19, 1911. A. W. Engle, Clerk. [134]

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In Bankruptcy. No. 4541. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company (a corporation), bankrupt. Western Dry Goods Company (a corporation), et al., petitioners, vs. Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver and trustee, and John Ainsfield Company, respondents.

CLERK'S CERTIFICATE TO TRANSCRIPT OF RECORD.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss;

I, A. W. Engle, clerk of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, do hereby certify the foregoing 136 typewritten pages, numbered from 1 to 136, inclusive, to be a full, true, and correct copy of the record and proceedings in the above-entitled cause as is called for by the stipulation of the attorneys for said petitioners and respondents, as the same are of record and on file in the office of the clerk of said court and the same is a full, true, and correct copy of so much of the record and proceedings in the above and foregoing entitled cause as is necessary to a determination of the matters involved on the petition of said Western Dry Goods Company et al., for review, filed in the United States Circuit [135] Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, according to the stipulation of the attorneys for said petitioners and said respondents.

I further certify that the cost of preparing and certifying the foregoing transcript of the record on such petition for review is the sum of eighty-three and no/100 dollars, and that the said sum has been paid to me by Messrs. Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey, of counsel for petitioners.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said district court, at Seattle, in said district, this 28th day of October, A. D. 1911.

[SEAL.] A. W. ENGLE, Clerk.

(Indorsed:) No. 2050. United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. The Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, et al., petitioners, vs. Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee of the estate of Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, bankrupt, and John Anisfield Company, respondents. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. Transcript of record on petition for revision under section 24b of the bankruptcy act of Congress, approved July 1, 1898, to revise, in matter of law, certain orders of the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division.

Filed November 3, 1911.

F. D. MONCKTON,
Clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

EXHIBIT NO. 70.

United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. The Western Dry Goods Company (a corporation) et al., petitioners vs. Sutcliffe Baxter, Receiver and Trustee of the estate of Charles Knosher & Co. (a corporation), bankrupt, and John Anisfield Company, respondents. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. No. 2050. Upon review from the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division.

Under section 24b of the bankruptcy act, approved July 1, 1898, to revise, in matter of law, certain orders of the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division.

On the 27th day of February, 1911, Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation engaged in general merchandise and department store business in the city of Seattle, Washington, was adjudged bankrupt in an involuntary proceeding brought for that purpose in the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, the adjudication being had upon a petition alleging bankruptcy, and an answer admitting the same. Thereupon and on the same day Sutcliffe Baxter, upon the choice of the creditors, was appointed receiver by the court and qualified and took possession of the property of the bankrupt. On March 20th he was elected trustee by the creditors, and continued to act as such.

On the 27th of February when the receiver took possession of the estate of the bankrupt, consisting of goods, wares, and merchandise held for sale, there was a clearance sale going on. He allowed this sale to go on until the close of business on that day, then closed the store, and at once began to take an inventory. The inventory was begun on February 27th and completed March 6th. In taking this inventory the receiver found that the merchandise was marked only with the retail selling price, there being nothing to show the original cost price; that in fixing the price no specific percentage had been added to cost, the merchandise being offered for sale at a profit ranging from 25 to 100 per cent, so that it was not practicable to ascertain original cost by deducting a certain definite percentage to be regarded as profit from the market selling price of the goods.

After the filing of the inventory and on March 9, 1911, the referee in bankruptcy appointed three appraisers, who made a formal but not an actual appraisement of the property shown in the inventory and filed their report of the appraisement on the same day in the office of the referee of bankruptcy. The value of the stock was returned by the appraisers at $42,214.87. Thereafter the referee made an order of sale and the sale was set for March 13th upon sealed bids. Among the bids received was one for $50,027. The receiver adjudged the bids insufficient and they were rejected, and new bids were called for and opened on the 15th. Among these bids was that of the respondent in this case, John Anisfield Company, whose bid was $57,000, which was received and accepted, and the stock of merchandise was sold to him in bulk on March 16, 1911.

On April 20, 1911, the Western Dry Goods Company and other creditors of the bankrupt filed their petition, and on April 26, 1911, their amended petition with the referee reciting the proceedings that had been had in the case and alleging that the employees of the bankrupt had fraudulently conspired with John Anisfield Company for the purpose of deceiving the officers of the court, and had made up an inventory of the stock of goods, wares, and merchandise belonging to the bankrupt, which were sold for an amount greatly less than the fair market wholesale value of said stock, and greatly less than the actual market value thereof; that in pursuance of the conspiracy other employees of the bankrupt advised the John Anisfield Company of the actual value of the stock; but concealed the information from all others; that the receiver and trustee accepted the said false and fraudulent inventory as true, and upon assumption that said inventory did represent the true value of said stock the said appraisers did return their appraisement into court; that John Anisfield Company had taken possession of said estate, and since the date thereof had been selling the same at special bankrupt sale and as petitioners were informed and believed had realized the sum of $50.00 and was threatening to sell the remainder of the stock to an innocent purchaser and remove the same from the jurisdiction of the court.

The prayer of the petition was that the appraisement, order of sale, and confirmation of sale be set aside, and that the John Anisfield Company be required to pay into the registry of the court the money theretofore received by them out of the estate of the bankrupt, and that the stock remaining on hand and unsold be returned to the possession of the receiver. The petition also prayed for an injunction commanding the said John Anisfield Company, their agents and representatives from selling, removing, disposing of, or in any manner interfering with the remainder of said stock of the bankrupt then in their hands and under their control. The petition was supported by the affidavits of Eugene C. Anderson, the president and treasurer of the Western Dry Goods Company, and Ole A. Kjos, one of the appraisers appointed by the referree in bankruptcy. Both affidavits refer to conversations with two employees of the bankrupt, Henderson & Barr, in which it was stated by them that the inventory was reduced in the value and quality of the stock and the information as to such reduction in value and quantity conveyed to John Anisfield Company, so that they might purchase the stock at a grossly inadequate value and thereby realize enough to pay their own claim in full and return the balance to the bankrupt.

To this petition John Anisfield Company interposed the objection that the court had no jurisdiction to entertain the petition, because of the facts appearing of record in the case showing the proceedings therein. This petition came on to be heard before the referee in bankruptcy, together with objections made thereto. The objections were sustained, and the prayer of the petition denied and the petition dismissed.

A petition for review was taken to the district court upon the return of the referee showing that the objection to jurisdiction had been sustained by the referee for two reasons:

First. That there was no allegation in the original or amended petition of any improper conduct on the part of the trustee of the estate, or his attorneys.

Second. That it was not alleged that there had been any demand made upon said trustee, or his attorneys, by the petitioning creditors, that said trustee should proceed against the said John Anisfield Company to obtain the relief sought by said petitions, or any other relief, in the interest of all the creditors.

Without passing upon the question of jurisdiction the district court proceeded to consider the petition upon its merits upon hearing upon affidavits and upon such hearing the court denied the petition.

On March 20th, the receiver having filed a report of his proceedings, an order was entered approving his report and making an allowance to the receiver of $2,500, with a like sum of $2,500 to his attorneys. It later appearing that this allowance to the receiver and his attorneys had been made without notice to the creditors, an order was made requiring the receiver to make application for his allowance and give notice of such application, which was done.

On July 10, 1911, the matter was submitted to the court for its determination, and as a basis for this determination it was stipulated by the parties to the proceedings that the total amount of cash actually disbursed by Baxter as receiver was $61,312.87, and the total amount of cash received by him as trustee and then being disbursed was $54,496, and that said cash amounts were the sums to be considered by the court in determining the matter of the compensation of the receiver and trustee, and the attorneys of the receiver and trustee. Thereafter, on September 23, 1911, the court determined that Baxter as receiver had conducted the business of the bankrupt and was entitled to compensation as receiver in the sum of $61,312.87 for conducting the business of the bankrupt as receiver; and that Baxter was entitled to compensation in said sum of $54,496 for his services as trustee of said estate up to the date of the final submission of the matter at the rate prescribed in section 48a of the bankruptcy act, and that the attorneys of the receiver and trustee were entitled to an equal amount for their services up to the date of the submission of the matter to the court.

Thereupon the court made an order allowing the receiver and trustee $2,201.20 and allowing a like sum of $2,201.20 to the attorneys for such receiver and trustee, in full of all services rendered up to the date of the final submission of the matter to the court.

The questions involved in these proceedings are brought here by petition for review under section 24b of the bankruptcy act.

Nelson R. Anderson, Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey, for petitioners.

Leopold M. Stern, Walter A. McClure, McClure & McClure, for respondents other than John Anisfield Company.

Harold Preston and O. B. Thorgrimson for respondent, John Anisfield Company.

Before Gilbert, Ross, and Morrow, circuit judges.

Morrow, circuit judge (after stating the facts as above, delivered the opinion of the court):

The respondents (not including John Anisfield Company) have filed their motion to dismiss the petition on the ground that the questions are reviewable only by appeal and because the determination of this case involves a consideration of evidence and a determination of disputed questions of fact.

Section 24b of the bankruptcy act provides as follows:

"The several circuit courts of appeal shall have jurisdiction in equity, either interlocutory or final, to superintend and revise in matter of the law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. Such power shall be exercised on due notice and petition by any party aggrieved."

The effect of bringing the proceedings of the district court to this court for revision under this section is to limit the review to matters of law. Where facts are to be reviewed the proceedings must be brought here by appeal or writ of error. The facts recited in these proceedings and material to the question at issue do not appear to be in doubt, or, at most, they are not a subject of controversy upon this petition for review. The only controversy is as to their legal import in the bankruptcy proceedings. Such questions may be reviewed upon a petition for revision. (In re Lee, 182 Fed., 579; In re Frank, 182 Fed., 794; Coder Trustee v. Arts, 213 U. S., 223.)

In Schuler v. Hassinger (177 Fed., 119, 100; C. C. A., 531) the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit had before it appeals and petitions for revision involving among other questions the objection that the property of the bankrupt had been sold for a grossly inadequate sum and the objection that the sale was collusive, and was absolutely unfair, illegal, and void. The appeals were dismissed and the questions reviewed upon the petition for revision. The same construction of the statute applied in this case sanctions the review of the questions presented by the petition for revision in this case.

The motion for the dismissal of the petition is therefore denied.

The first question to be considered upon this review of the proceedings is the sufficiency of the amended petition filed with the referee in bankruptcy by the Western Dry Goods Company and other creditors praying that the appraisement, order of sale, and sale of the stock of goods of the bankrupt estate be set aside, and that John Anisfield Company be required to pay into the treasury of the court the money received by them out of the estate of the bankrupt, and that the stock remaining on hand and unsold be returned to the possession of the receiver. The objection to this petition was in the nature of a demurrer, raising the question as to its sufficiency. No improper conduct is charged in the petition against Baxter, the receiver, or against Baxter, afterwards the trustee, or against his attorneys. It is not alleged that demand was ever made by the complaining creditors upon the trustee to recover the property of the bankrupt estate or its value from John Anisfield Company. It appears that at the time the amended petition was filed the sale of the bankrupt property had been made by the bankruptcy court, and the sale had been confirmed; that the purchaser had gone into possession of the property; had disposed of about one-half of the stock purchased together with new stock mixed with the bankrupt stock; that the purchase price had been paid, and about one-half of the purchase money had been distributed by the trustee to the creditors as dividends and for the expenses of administration; that no tender had been made to the purchaser of the purchase price, and no tender appears to have been practicable under the circumstances, and no surety or indemnity had been offered the purchaser. It is clear that if the creditors of the bankrupt were entitled to any relief by reason of the alleged inadequacy of the price received for the stock of goods it was not by summary proceedings, but should have been obtained through the trustee in an action against John Anisfield Company for an accounting, and if the trustee and his attorneys were hostile to the proceeding, as intimated, but not established, he could have required by order of the bankruptcy court to permit the use of his name in such an action with new attorneys, or failing in that, the trustee could have been removed and a new trustee appointed, with new attorneys instructed to proceed by proper action to determine the rights of the bankrupt estate in plenary action.

We think the petition and amended petition were insufficient, and properly dismissed by the referee.

It is next contended that the referee, having refused to consider the petition by reason of its failure to set up jurisdictional facts, the district court, upon the certificate of review, should have determined the question, and not proceeded as it did to consider the petition upon the merits and upon a hearing upon affidavits. But it appears from the record that the objecting creditors participated in the hearing in the district court upon affidavits without objection, and submitted at least two affidavits upon the merits of the controversy as to the value of the merchandise in the store of the bankrupt at the time of the sale to John Anisfield Company. Having participated in such a hearing without objection and having offered affidavits in support of their petition, the petitioners are not now in a position to raise the objection that the district court heard and determined the matter in controversy upon its merits and by affidavits.

It is next objected that the allowance of compensation to the receiver and trustee and to his attorneys were in excess of the compensation provided by the statute. Section 48a of the bankruptcy act, as amended by the act of June 25, 1910 (36 Stat., 838, 840), provides:

"SEC. 48. COMPENSATION OF TRUSTEES, RECEIVERS, AND MARSHALS. (a) Trustees shall receive for their services, payable after they are rendered, a fee of five dollars deposited with the clerk at the time the petition is filed in each case, * * * as may be allowed by the courts, not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than fifteen hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of fifteen hundred dollars and less than ten thousand.

* * * * * * *

"(d) Receivers or marshals appointed pursuant to section two, subdivision three, of this act shall receive for their services, payable after they are rendered, compensation by way of commissions upon the moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, * * * as the court may allow, not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than one thousand five hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars: Provided, * * * That when the receiver or marshal acts as a mere custodian and does not carry on the business of the bankrupt as provided in clause five of section two of this act he shall not receive or be allowed in any form or guise more than two per centum on the first thousand dollars or less, and one-half of one per centum on all above one thousand dollars on moneys disbursed by him.

* * * * * * *

"(e) Where the business is conducted by trustees, marshals, or receivers, as provided in clause five of section two of this act, the court may allow such officers additional compensation for such services by way of commissions upon the moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, * * * such commissions not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than one thousand five hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars, and one per centum on moneys in excess of ten thousand dollars."

Under this statute the court allowed the receiver under section 48 (d) on the stipulated amount disbursed by him from February 27th to March 20th, namely, on $61,312.87, the following amounts:

Deposit	$5.00
$500 at 6 per cent	30.00
$1,000 at 4 per cent	40.00
$8,500 at 2 per cent	170.00
$51,312.87 at 1 per cent	513.12
Making a total of	758.12

The court also allowed the receiver under section 48 (e) an additional compensation for conducting the business on the percentages, as above (excluding deposit of $5) the sum of $753.12, making a total of $1,511.24.

The court also allowed the trustee under section 48 (a) on the stipulated amount of cash received, and the amount then being disbursed by him, from March 20th to date of final submission, namely, $54,496, as follows:

Deposits	$5.00
$500 at 6 per cent	30.00
$1,000 at 4 per cent	40.00
$8,500 at 2 per cent	170.00
$44,496 at 1 per cent	444.96
Making a total of	689.96
Total compensation of receiver	1,511.24
Total compensation of trustee	689.96
Total amount allowed receiver and trustee	2,201.20

The court also allowed the attorneys for the receiver and trustee as part of the costs and expenses of administration a like amount, namely, $2,201.20.

The objection urged against these allowances is that the evidence does not support the conclusions reached as to the legal compensation to which the receiver and trustee and his attorneys were entitled to under the law. There is no question as to the service rendered by the receiver. The question is as to the compensation which the receiver was entitled to receive for the services rendered. In the receiver's report to the court, dated March 20, 1911, as to his administration of the estate, he stated, among other things:

"The alleged bankrupt turned over the premises to me and gave me complete charge thereof. I found that the bankrupt was a corporation engaged in the operation of a department store at the time I took possession of said premises. The store was filled with customers who were attending a sale which had previously been extensively advertised. I thought it advisable to permit the business to remain open and the sale to go on for the balance of the day, and accordingly permitted the said store to remain open.

"During the day I consulted with numerous creditors and representatives as to the advisability of continuing the business at retail, and, after such consultation, it was agreed by all parties and it was also my own judgment that it would be best to close the store at the conclusion of the day's business and proceed at once to take an inventory of all the property."

In Mr. Baxter's affidavit, filed in the district court on June 19, 1911, he sets forth the same facts as to the closing of the store on the day of his appointment as receiver.

It does not appear from this report that the receiver conducted the business of the bankrupt even for the part of one day. What he did was to permit the employees of the bankrupt concern to go on with the business during the remainder of that day. The store was then closed, and was not again opened, except to deliver the stock in bulk to John Anisifeld Company. Clause 5 of section 2 of the bankruptcy act provides that the courts of bankruptcy are invested with jurisdiction to "authorize the business of bankrupts to be conducted for limited periods by receivers, the marshals, or trustee, if necessary in the best interests of the estates, and allow such officers additional compensation for such services as provided in section forty-eight of this act."

We do not think that the continuing of the business of the bankrupt by his employees for the remainder of one day constituted the carrying on of the business by the receiver within the meaning of the statute. On the other hand, we think the receiver was something more than a custodian, and that he was entitled to compensation as receiver under section 48d. We shall, therefore, disallow the additional compensation to the receiver of $753.12 for conducting the business of the bankrupt. Deducting this amount from the amount allowed, $2,201.20, the allowance for the receiver and trustee will then be $1,488.08.

The petitioners contend that no allowance should be made to the attorneys employed by the receiver and trustee for the bankrupt estate for the reason that no showing is made as to the value of their services. The employment of attorneys for a bankrupt estate is largely a matter of discretion in the court, and the value of the services is a matter generally known to the court. The showing made in opposition to the allowance would call upon this court to consider and determine facts which, as we have stated, we can not do on this petition for revision. We are limited to questions of law. The court appears, however, to have been of the opinion that the attorneys for the receiver and trustee were entitled to receive the same compensation as the receiver and trustee. Treating that as a finding of fact, it follows that the attorneys are entitled to receive for their services a sum the equivalent of the sum allowed the receiver and trustee, to wit, the sum here allowed of $1,448.08 in full for their services for the entire period from the appointment of the receiver up to the period of the submission of their claim to the court.

The orders of the district court will be modified as indicated, and, as thus modified, will be affirmed, with costs in favor of the respondents and against the petitioners.

(Indorsed:) Opinion. Filed June 3, 1912. F. D. Monckton, clerk.

EXHIBIT No. 71.

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. The Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, et al., petitioners, vs. Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee of the estate of Chas. Knosher & Company, bankrupt, and John Annisfield Company, respondents. No. 250.

PETITION FOR MODIFICATION OF OPINION.

In the matter of Chas. Knosher & Company, bankrupt.

Come now Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, et al., petitioners, by their attorneys, Nelson R. Anderson and Hughes McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey, and respectfully show the court:

I. That the following is a copy of that part of the court's opinion relating to the merits of the petition filed against John Annisfield Company:

"It is next contended that the referee having refused to consider the petition by reason of its failure to set up jurisdictional facts, the district court upon the certificate of review should have determined that question and not proceeded, as it did, to consider the petition upon the merits and upon a hearing upon affidavits; but it appears from the record that the objecting creditors participated in the hearing in the district court upon affidavits without objection, and submitted at least two affidavits upon the merits of the controversy as to the value of the merchandise in the store of the bankrupt at the time of the sale to John Annisfield Company. Having participated in such a hearing without objection, and having offered affidavits in support of their petition, the petitioners are not now in a position to raise the objection that the district court heard and determined the matter in controversy upon its merits and by affidavits."

II. That the court was mistaken in its conception of the facts and misunderstood the purpose of the affidavits referred to in its opinion, for the record shows that no affidavits were filed in conjunction with the suit agianst John Annisfield Company before the referee or before the United States district judge, except the affidavits of Eugene G. Anderson and Ole A. Kjoe, filed before the referee, John P. Hoyt, on April 20th, 1911 (record, p. 42); that said affidavits were filed for the purpose of securing an injunction (record, pp. 47–48); that objections to the jurisdiction were filed by the John Annisfield Company (record, pp. 91–95); that said objections were sustained; that a petition for review of the referee's decision sustaining the objections was filed by the petitioning creditors (record, pp. 88–91); that thereupon the referee made his return certifying to the United States district judge the question of law involved for a ruling of said United States district judge (record, pp. 95–97); that upon said record as above given the United States district judge rendered his memorandum decision.

III. That at the time said record relating to the suit of petitioners against John Annisfield Company was presented to the United States district court by a petition for review (which writ of review presents questions of law only) there was pending before the United States district judge certain objections to receiver's allowances, filed by creditors of the bankrupt on the ground as stated in Paragraph IV of said objections (record, p. 74):

"That the services rendered by the receiver herein, Sutcliffe Baxter, were detrimental and prejudicial to the interests of the creditors and all persons in interest therein; that the said receiver, by his carelessness and inattention, permitted those engaged in taking an inventory of the bankrupt stock to return said inventory in a sum greatly less than the fair value thereof, and by reason thereof the value of said stock was greatly depreciated and in a sum far less than its fair value; that the said receiver has entailed a great loss upon the creditors herein by rendering a false report into this court of the amount and value of the goods, wares, and merchandise of the bankrupt which he had in charge; that the true inventory of the goods, wares, and merchandise in the custody of the receiver exceeded the false inventory rendered (56) into this court by more than thirty thousand dollars ($30,000); that the false and fraudulent inventory was made pursuant to a conspiracy and agreement between the bankrupt and John Annisfield Company, the purchaser from this court of the assets of the said bankrupt and those who took the inventory in behalf of and for this court."

And a further ground was set up in Paragraph VII (record, pp. 75–76), that said compensation was made in disregard of the percentages fixed by the bankruptcy act; that to sustain the allegations contained in Paragraph IV numerous affidavits were filed by the petitioning creditors establishing the fraud alleged. Among said affidavits were those of Lola Cassil (record, 104–106); Nelson R. Anderson (record, 87–88); C. H. Winslow (record, 103–104); Edwin London (record, 135–136), and A. H. Sanford (record, 137–139), the last two affidavits being the ones referred to by the court in its opinion; that said affidavits were filed by the receiver and trustee to combat and disprove the showing made by the petitioning creditors' affidavits, including those of Walter A. McClure (record, 128–130); Leopold M. Stern (record, 131–135); Howard J. Sheehan (record, 140–141); R. C. Post (record, 196–209); Sutcliffe Baxter (record, 109–121); E. Y. Barr (record, 121–128).

IV. That the record shows that none of the above affidavits or any other affidavits were ever served by the petitioning creditors or by the receiver or trustee upon John Annisfield Company; that the record shows that John Annisfield Company never submitted a single affidavit relating to the merits of said controversy or any other affidavits in said cause.

V. That it was never intended by the petitonoers herein to submit a controversy involving thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) to the court upon the filing of affidavits; that it was never understood by any of the attorneys in the cause that the matter should be decided by the court on the merits.

Wherefore, your petitioners pray the court for a modification of that part of the opinion holding that the suit against John Annisfield Company was decided upon the merits and by affidavits, and that said opinion make it clearly to appear that said controversy was one of law only involving the right of petitioners to proceed by summary petition.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
HUGHES MCMICKEN,
DOVELL & RAMSAY,
Attorneys for Petitioning Creditors.

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
County of King, ss:

I, Nelson R. Anderson, one of counsel for the petitioners herein, hereby certify that in my opinion the foregoing petition is well founded and that the same is not interposed for delay.

NELSON R. ANRERSON.

EXHIBIT NO. 72.

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. In bankruptcy. The Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, et al., petitioners, vs. Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee of the estate of Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, bankrupt, and John Anisfield Company, respondents, in the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. No. 2050. Upon review from the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division.

BRIEF OF PETITIONERS ON PETITION FOR REVIEW.

STATEMENT.

The facts are these:

On the 27th day of February, 1911, Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, was adjudicated bankrupt in a proceeding brought for that purpose in the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, the adjudication being had upon a petition alleging bankruptcy, and an answer admitting the same. On said day Sutcliffe Baxter was appointed by the court as receiver of the estate of said bankrupt, and he thereupon qualified as such. (Record, p. 17.) The bankrupt concern was engaged at that time in the operation of a dry goods store in the city of Seattle, and was upon that day conducting a clearance sale. (Record, p. 17.) The receiver, immediately upon his appointment, took charge of the store of the bankrupt company and permitted the same to remain open until the evening of that day, when he closed the store. (Record, pp. 17, 18.) The store was never afterwards opened, and the receiver proceeded at once to realize upon the assets, as follows:

He at once commenced the taking of an inventory, employing for that purpose some of the clerks who had been employed in the store, and concluded the taking of the inventory within about one week, or upon the 6th day of March, 1911. (Record, p. 18.) He caused the inventory to be filed, and requested the referee to appoint appraisers of the estate, and thereupon the referee appointed three appraisers. These appraisers came into the store room which contained the stock of goods, made no examination thereof, being told by the receiver or his attorneys that they were not expected to do so, and they thereupon, without examination or investigation, signed up and returned into court an appraisement, returning the value of the stock as it was represented in the inventory. (See affidavit of Ole A. Kjos and J. J. Doheny, two of the appraisers, record, pp. 40, 79, and 81.)

The value of the stock was returned by the appraisers at $42,214.87. (Record, p. 44.)

On the 16th day of March, 1911, the stock was sold to John Anisfield Co., a corporation, for the sum of $57,000, which sale was afterwards confirmed.

On the 20th day of March, 1911, the receiver, having filed a report of his proceedings, an order was entered approving this report and making an allowance to the receiver of $2,500.00 (Record, p. 30), with a like sum of $2,500.00 to his attorneys. It later appearing that this allowance to the receiver and his attorneys had been made without notice to the creditors, an order was made requiring the receiver to make application for his allowance and give notice of such application, which was done. (Record, p. 63.) And on September 23, 1911, the court made an order allowing the receiver and trustee $2,201.20, and allowing a like sum of $2,201.20 to the attorneys for such receiver and trustee. (Record, p. 102.) To the granting of such allowance the petitioners excepted at the time.

On April 26, 1911, the Western Dry Goods Company, and other creditors of said bankrupt, filed an amended petition (Record, p. 43), in which was set forth amongst other things the following facts:

First. That Chas. Knosher & Co. was duly declared a bankrupt, and that Sutcliffe Baxter was duly appointed receiver of said bankrupt estate.

Second. That Ole A. Kjos, J. J. Doheny, and E. G. Barr were duly appointed as appraisers of said estate, and that they did return into court a purported appraisement of the estate of said bankrupt, estimating the same at $42,214.87.

Third. That said appraisement was grossly erroneous and was induced by fraud and misrepresentation upon and to said appraisers, and that the fair market value of said estate at said time was an amount in excess of $90,000.

Fourth. That certain employees of Chas. Knosher & Co., who were retained by the receiver of said estate for the purpose of making an inventory thereof, conspired with John Anisfield Co. to the end that an inventory should be taken of said stock which should represent its value at a sum greatly less than its actual value.

And thereupon "said employees of the said Charles Knosher & Co., conspiring with the said John Anisfield Co., as aforesaid, did fraudulently and for the purpose of deceiving the officers of this court, make up an inventory showing the value of said stock of goods, wares, and merchandise as greatly less than the actual market value thereof."

It was further alleged "that said employees" taking said inventory did "advise the said John Anisfield Co. of the actual value of said stock," but concealed "said information from all others."

And it was alleged that such false inventory was made in pursuance of a conspiracy whereby the stock of the said bankrupt should be inventoried at a sum greatly less than its actual value, and that John Anisfield Co., being one of the principal creditors, should purchase and sell the same at special bankrupt sale until John Anisfield had realized the amount of its claim against the bankrupt, together with the amount paid for the stock, the balance of the stock to be turned over to the bankrupt

It was further alleged that the purchaser, John Anisfield Co., had taken possession of said property and at the time of the filing of the petition referred to had sold sufficient of the same to realize the sum of $50,000 in cash, and that they had on hand the remaining portion of said bankrupt estate of the value of approximately $50,000.

The petitioners asked that the appraisement and sale and order of confirmation thereof be set aside, and that John Anisfield Co. be required to pay into the registry of the court all moneys which had been received by them out of the sale of said stock, and that an injunctive order be issued restraining them from disposing of the remainder of said stock. Accompanying this petition there was filed the affidavits of Eugene G. Anderson (record, pp. 36, 84), and the affidavits of Ole A. Kjos (record, pp. 40, 81); also the affidavit of Lola Cassil (record, p. 104), and the affidavit of J. J. Doheny, one of the appraisers (record, p. 79). In the affidavits of Anderson, Kjos, and Lola Cassil were set forth statements which had been made to the affiants by parties who assisted in the taking of the inventory, which substantiated the allegations in the petition that the figures upon which the inventory was based were falsified for a fraudulent purpose. These affidavits were filed with the petition for the purpose of securing an injunctive order. More specific reference will not be made to them in this statement, but the attention of the court is invited to them as they are set forth in the record.

Upon the filing of this petition the said John Anisfield Co. appeared and filed objections contesting the jurisdiction of the court to adjudicate upon the petition. (Record, p. 91.) These objections were sustained by the referee. (Record, p. 60.) We thereupon filed a petition for review; the referee certified the matter to the district court, setting forth in his return the grounds upon which he sustained the objections to the jurisdiction. (Record, p. 95.)

After the referee had, as aforesaid, certified the matter up to the district court, the attorneys for John Anisfield Co. filed certain affidavits designed to combat the allegations in our petition. (Record, pp. 106, 109, 121, 128, and 131.) The district court thereupon made an order dismissing the petition. (Record, p. 139.)

The opinion filed by the district judge (record, p. 49) indicates that the question of whether or not the bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to entertain our petition (which was the question certified up by the referee) was not considered by the district judge, but he, considering only the affidavits which had been filed, assumed to settle the matter upon its merits and dismissed our petition as not having been sustained.

We thereupon filed a petition for revision by this court. It will appear, therefore, that this petition for revision presents two questions:

First. The question of whether or not the referee had jurisdiction to adjudicate the matters and things set forth in our petition.

Second. The propriety of the allowance made to the receiver and trustee and to his attorneys, which we contend is in excess of the amount contemplated by the statute.

ARGUMENT.

It was unfortunate that we did not have an expression of the district court upon the matter which was certified to that court by the referee; that is, whether or not the bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to entertain the petition. It was the view of the referee in bankruptcy, as expressed in his return, that he had no jurisdiction to entertain the petition for two reasons:

(1) That there was no allegation of improper conduct on the part of the trustee.

(2) That it was not alleged that any demand had been made upon the trustee that he should proceed to obtain the relief which was sought by the petitioners. The referee further stated that he was of the opinion that such relief could not be had in this summary proceeding, but could only be had in a plenary action brought for that purpose. Furthermore, that the petition, considered in the light of the objections thereto, did not state facts sufficient to entitle the petitioners to any relief.

The referee, having given this expression of his views and certified the matter to the district court, we had a right to assume that that court would pass only upon the question of jurisdiction which had been suggested by the objections filed by John Anisfield Co., and that if, in the view of the district judge, these objections were not well taken, the referee would be so instructed, opportunity given to anyone interested in the estate to traverse the allegations in our petition, and that a hearing would then be had, at which the petitioner would be given an opportunity to establish by appropriate evidence the allegations of the petition. (In re John H. Livingston Co., 144 Fed., 971.)

It appears manifestly irregular that the referee, having refused to consider our petition for want of jurisdiction, and his action having been certified for review, the district judge should proceed to determine the matter upon the facts.

We filed certain affidavits with our petition, and in support thereof. We had asked for an injunctive order to restrain John Anisfield Co. from selling the remainder of the bankrupt stock which at that time they were selling at forced sale. The affidavits we filed for the purpose of making a prima facie showing to justify the issuance of such an injunctive order pending the action, and we had no right to anticipate that after the referee had taken the action he had, and the matter had all been certified up, the court would permit the filing of affidavits on behalf of John Anisfield Co. and would determine the matter finally with nothing before it but the affidavits.

We assume, therefore, that the question to be considered by this court is the correctness of the ruling of the referee in dismissing our petition for want of jurisdiction.

It appears to have been the view of the referee that the court could not entertain the petition filed at the instance of objecting creditors in the absence of a showing that demand had been made upon the trustee, or his attorneys, that he should proceed against John Ainsfield Co.

Our answer to this suggestion is that the law never requires the doing of a useless thing.

The affidavit filed by Sutcliffe Baxter, the trustee (record, p. 109), and the affidavits filed by his attorneys, Walter A. McClure and Leopold M. Stern (record, pp. 128 and 131), demonstrates that not only the trustee, but his attorneys, are hostile to our proceeding. In view of the statements made by the trustee and his attorneys in the affidavits, it is quite apparent that any request for them to initiate the proceeding begun by us would have been fruitless.

The principle of the following cases makes them analogous to the case at bar: Howard v. National Telephone Co. (182 Fed., p. 221); Monmouth Investment Co. v. Means (151 Fed., 159); Universal Savings & Trust Co. v. Stoneburner (113 Fed., 251); Harrison v. Thomas (112 Fed., 22).

It was furthermore the view of the referee that the relief we sought could not be obtained in a summary proceeding, such as we sought to initiate, but could only be given us in a plenary action brought for that purpose in an appropriate court of equity. In this view we believe the referee to have been entirely wrong, as we think can be demonstrated by the authorities.

The rule is this: The bankruptcy court may, by a summary proceeding, determine any controversy that grows out of the administration of the bankrupt estate, or any controversy between the estate of the bankrupt on the one hand and one claiming by or under the estate of the bankrupt upon the other hand. The plenary, independent proceeding is required to determine controversies arising between the estate of the bankrupt and one having an adverse claim which did not arise in the course of the bankruptcy proceeding.

The rule is announced in Babbitt v. Dutcher (213 U. S., p. 113) as follows:

"There are two classes of cases arising under the act of 1898 and controlled by different principles. The first class is where there is a claim of adverse title to property of the bankrupt, based upon a transfer antedating the bankruptcy. The other class is where there is no claim of adverse title based on any transfer prior to the bankruptcy, but where the property is in the physical possession of a third party or of an agent of the bankrupt, or of an officer of a bankrupt corporation, who refuses to deliver it to the trustee in bankruptcy.

"In the former class of cases a plenary suit must be brought, either at law or in equity, by the trustee, in which the adverse claim of title can be tried and adjudicated.

"In the latter class it is not necessary to bring a plenary suit, but the bankruptcy court may act summarily and may make an order in a summary proceeding for the delivery of the property to the trustee without the formality of a formal litigation.

"The former class falls within the ruling in the case of Bardes v. Hawarden Bank (178 U. S., 524) and in the case of Jaquith v. Rowley (188 U. S., 620), which hold that such a suit can be brought only in a court which would have had jurisdiction of a suit by the bankrupt against the adverse claimant, except where the defendant consents to be sued elsewhere.

"In the latter class of cases a plenary suit is not necessary, but the case falls within the rule laid down in Bryan v. Bernheimer (181 U. S., 188) and Mueller v. Nugent (184 U. S., 1), which held that the bankruptcy court could act summarily."

The rule as we have stated it is recognized by this court in Graessler v. Reichwald (154 Fed., 478).

The principle is recognized in Mueller v. Nugent (184 U. S., 1); Bryan v. Bernheimer (181 U. S., 188); In re Breslauer (121 Fed., 910); In re Mott (Federal Cases, 9878); In re Hyde (6 Fed., 587); In re Eppstein (156 Fed., 42).

By subdivision 7, section 2, of the bankruptcy act of 1898, courts of bankruptcy are expressly given the power to "cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, reduced to money, and distributed, and determine controversies in relation thereto, except as herein otherwise provided;" and as was stated in Mason v. Wolkowich (150 Fed., 699):

"Aside from the power of the district court with regard to the assets of bankrupts, which is especially given it by the statutes, it has all the authority which any court exercising equitable jurisdiction has to protect its receivers and the contracts made by them."

It would seem clear that the allegations of our petition, wherein it is alleged that John Ainsfield Co. has by fraud obtained from the receiver the estate of the bankrupt, which, because of such fraud, they are not entitled to retain, presents a controversy in relation to the estate of the bankrupt, and if it does, the court of bankruptcy has the power to determine such controversy.

Following the rule which we have attempted to sustain, it would appear that purchasers at judicial sales by trustees and receivers are, until the close of the bankruptcy proceeding, subject to the summary jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, and such is the doctrine announced by Mr. Remington in his work on bankruptcy, volume 1, section 1804.

If, therefore, our petition presented a case which was cognizable in the bankruptcy court, this court should make an order directing the district court to remand the case to the referee, with directions to him to hear proof upon the allegations of our petition.

Upon question of allowance to receiver and trustee and his attorneys.

The statute (see amended bankruptcy act of 1910, sec. 48, 3 Remington on Bankruptcy, p. 853) provides that the trustee shall receive not to exceed 6 per cent on the first $500; 4 per cent on moneys in excess of $500 and less than $1,500; 2 per cent on moneys in excess of $1,500 and less than $10,000; and 1 per cent on moneys in excess of $10,000.

Fifty-four thousand four hundred and ninety-six dollars being the amount upon which he is entitled to assume his allowance as trustee (record, p. 101), he is entitled for his services as trustee to $684.96.

The statute further provides (3 Rem. on Bankruptcy, p. 854):

"That when the receiver or marshal acts as a mere custodian and does not carry on the business of the bankrupt, as provided in clause five of section two of this act, he shall not receive nor be allowed in any form or guise more than two per centum on the first thousand dollars or less and one-half of one per centum on all above one thousand dollars on moneys disbursed by him."

Sixty-one thousand three hundred and twelve dollars and eighty-seven cents is the amount disbursed by the receiver. (Record, p. 101.) Figured upon this basis he would be entitled as receiver to $321.56, or in all as receiver and trustee to $1,006.52.

As if to emphasize the desire of Congress to inhibit any exaggeration of the allowances specified, section 72 of the amended bankruptcy act provides:

"That neither the referee, receiver, marshal, nor trustee shall in any form or guise receive, nor shall the court allow him, any other or further compensation for his services than that expressly authorized and prescribed in this act." (36 Stat. L., Pt. I, p. 842; 3 Rem. on Bankruptcy, p. 868.)

The court below, however, allowed Mr. Baxter as receiver and trustee the sum of $2,201.20, and did this upon the theory that as receiver he had acted as more than a mere custodian and carried on the business of the bankrupt.

The court will appreciate the fact that while the amount involved in this phase of the controversy is the difference between what was allowed the receiver and trustee and what we contend should have been allowed if the statute has been observed, and is not in this particular instance a large sum, it is nevertheless important to these petitioners and to the mercantile interests generally that a rule be laid down which will prevent the diminishing of bankrupt estates in this jurisdiction by improvident allowances to receivers.

The statute is so clear that it would seem difficult to misinterpret it. It provides that the additional allowance shall not be made except when the business of the bankrupt shall be carried on, as provided in clause 5 of section 2.

That clause is as follows:

The courts of bankruptcy are invested with jurisdiction to "Authorize the business of bankrupts to be conducted for limited periods by receivers, the marshals, or trustees, if necessary in the best interests of the estates, and allow such officers additional compensation for such services, as provided in section forty-eight of this act." (36 Stat. L., Pt. I, p. 838; 3 Rem. on Bankruptcy, p. 835.)

It would seem clear that this case does not fall within the provisions of subdivision 5 of section 2 of the act, inasmuch as it is not pretended that the bankruptcy court authorized the receiver to conduct the business of the bankrupt, and the receiver did not conduct the business of the bankrupt, unless his action in keeping open the store for a scant half day, marshaling the assets, and, after taking an inventory, selling them, can be so construed.

Subdivision 5 of section 2 is plainly intended to apply to those cases where the receiver is authorized, pending the appointment of a trustee, to carry on the business which had been carried on by the bankrupt, as, for instance, would have been the case here if the receiver had been directed to keep open the store and sell merchandise in the regular course of business as that business had been theretofore conducted by the bankrupt. The receiver expressly states, however, that he did nothing of this character, but, upon the contrary, within a few hours after his appointment, closed the store and therefore ceased to conduct the business.

It will be borne in mind that the receiver and trustee in this instance were one and the same person, and it certainly cannot be within the spirit or meaning of the bankruptcy act that such a person shall receive additional compensation merely because he performs as receiver certain acts which the law requires him to perform later as trustee.

The purpose of the bankruptcy act is to preserve the assets for the creditors and to so economically administer the estate as to give effect to the statute. It is believed, therefore, that the court will adopt that construction of the statute which tends toward economy and the shutting out of exorbitant allowances.

In Remington on Bankruptcy, volume 2, at page 1247, it is said:

"The policy of the act is that of strictest economy in expenses and cost of administration.

"The greatest foe to the permanency of national bankruptcy laws in this country seems in the past to have been the opportunity they have apparently afforded for extravagance in administration. The framers of the present act repeatedly manifest in the words they have used the utmost solicitude to guard against extravagance. The chief cause of the downfall of the act of 1867 was its extravagance. Estates were swallowed up in fees and expenses, until finally the very name of bankruptcy law became a synonym for licensed plundering of creditors' estates, and its administration became odious in the eyes of the people."

See also In re Mercantile Co. (95 Fed., 123); In re Mercantile Agency Co. (11 A. B. R., 451); In re Daniels (130 Fed., 597).

It was stated In re Woodard (95 Fed., 955):

"One of the purposes of the act of 1898 in establishing a uniform system of bankruptcy was to avoid what was the principal cause of repeal of the bankrupt act of 1867—excessive fees and great expense."

In the case of In re Oppenheimer (17 A. B. R., 60) it is said:

"Economy is strictly enjoined by the well-known policy of the bankruptcy act in the administration of bankrupt estates."

See also In re Goldville Mfg. Co. (123 Fed., 579).

It will not escape the attention of the court that the receiver in this case exercised authority and performed functions which it is doubtful anyone but a trustee was entitled to perform, but inasmuch as the receiver and the trustee were the same person, it would be a strange perversion of the act if the receiver were entitled to receive additional compensation for the performance of acts which in the regular conduct of the estate he would have been required to perform as trustee. (In re Richards, 137 Fed., 772.)

The theory of the bankruptcy act clearly is that the creditors shall appoint a person to take charge of and administer the bankrupt's estate, but inasmuch as this appointment requires some time, it is provided that a receiver shall be appointed by the referee, who will preserve the estate until the trustee shall be selected by the creditors. The function of the receiver, therefore, is that of a mere custodian.

In Remington on Bankruptcy, volume 1, page 253, it is said:

"Receivers in bankruptcy derive their powers from the bankruptcy act and are limited thereby. The object of their appointment is the preservation of the property so as to prevent its deterioration, waste, or loss."

In the case of In re Kelly Dry Goods Co. (102 Fed., 747) it is said:

"The purpose of the appointment of a receiver in bankruptcy is one of mere temporary custody, and the duties are generally of the utmost simplicity."

In the case of In re Benedict (140 Fed., 55) it is said:

"The act * * * provides in case of necessity for the appointment of a receiver, who is practically a custodian."

In the case of In re J. C. Winship Co. (120 Fed., 93) it is said:

"The receiver had no interest. He was a mere caretaker. He had no title."

In Loveland on Bankruptcy (p. 253), the author says:

"He is not a general receiver in the sense that receivers are appointed by courts of equity. A receiver in bankruptcy is a temporary custodian until a trustee is appointed. He does not exercise the powers of a trustee."

Common sense and a fair regard for economy require that the administration of this estate should be viewed as a whole. Waiving the question of his authority to do so, the receiver performed certain functions which he would otherwise have been required to perform as trustee, and it is clear that whatever service Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver, performed by way of taking an inventory and making a sale, he to that extent relieved Sutcliffe Baxter, trustee, of the labor which the law would have otherwise devolved upon him. His compensation as trustee is not abridged on this account, and it would, therefore, appear unfair if his compensation as receiver were increased thereby.

Or it may be put this way: The statute prescribes that there shall be set aside out of the bankrupt estate a certain maximum sum to pay for the services of the receiver and the trustee, except in certain instances where the receiver shall carry on the business of the bankrupt, in which case a larger allowance is made, and it is contemplated by the act that this sum will cover all the expenses of both a receivership and trusteeship of the estate.

Now, it would seem to be a clear perversion of the act if this maximum amount provided for by the act were permitted to be enlarged merely because the receiver undertook to perform certain duties which ordinarily would devolve upon the trustee, and the absurdity of such a condition is more manifest in a case where the receiver and trustee are one and the same person.

It will not escape the notice of the court that the report of the receiver shows that in keeping possession and making sale of this estate Mr. Baxter was employed from the 27th of February until the 16th of March, a period of seventeen days, and that four days later, or on March 20th, he had his report in court showing that all the property of the bankrupt had been disposed of and a detailed account of his receipts and disbursements. For this service he is entitled to receive, according to our contention, $1,006.52.

Surely a court will not be inclined to strain for a construction of the statute which would allow him a sum greater than this, because to do so would scarcely be consistent with the purpose of the bankruptcy act, which is to accomplish the economical administration of bankrupt estates.

Without doubt a full and fair compensation should be made to the party who is chosen to administer a bankrupt estate. This allowance should be commensurate with the services which have been rendered and the effort and time required of the administrator. Surely it cannot be said that one who receives the sum of upwards of $1,000 for work which has occupied him a little more than a fortnight, and which involves merely the taking of an inventory and the sale of a stock, with abundant clerical service at his command, has been poorly paid.

Upon the question of allowance to the attorneys we have only this to say: It appears by the record that Messrs. McClure & McClure and Leopold M. Stern were allowed the sum of $2,201.20 as attorneys for the receiver and an additional sum of $500.00 as attorneys for the trustee. (Record, pp. 102, 144.)

It is a matter of the greatest delicacy to object to the allowance of fees to an attorney. The record in this case does not disclose any extraordinary service which was performed by the attorneys. One of the attorneys, Mr. McClure, presented the original application upon which Knosher & Co. was declared a bankrupt and upon which the receiver was appointed. For this he was allowed the sum of $100.00 in addition to subsequent allowances which were made to him. After the appointment of the receiver it does not appear that any service was rendered by the attorneys except the routine service of advising the receiver and trustee, and assisting him, perhaps, in the preparation of his account. What we have stated as to the impropriety of the allowance attempted to be made to the receiver we believe applies with equal force to the attorneys, and an allowance to them in excess of the amount which the statute permits to the receiver and trustee would seem to be exorbitant and contrary to the spirit of the bankruptcy act.

Respectfully submitted.

NELSON R. ANDERSON,
HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Attorneys for petitioners.

EXHIBIT NO. 73.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. In bankruptcy. No. 4541.

BRIEF OF THE JOHN ANISFIELD COMPANY.

The question is, has the bankruptcy court jurisdiction, and, if it has, ought it to exercise jurisdiction in a summary or other proceeding upon the application by a few of the numerous creditors of the bankrupt to have set aside a sale of a stock of merchandise made by the bankruptcy court and duly confirmed, where the purchaser has gone into possession, disposed of one-half of the stock, purchased and commingled new stock with the old; where the purchase price has been paid and one-half of the purchase money distributed by the trustee to the creditors as dividends; where a tender back of the purchase price was not made and is impossible, and no security or indemnity of any kind is offered to the purchaser?

It is to be noted that the petitioning creditors are asking relief in a summary proceeding where a petition by them would not be entertained in a plenary suit in equity; that since the question arose in its original form as above stated all of the property has been converted into cash by the purchaser, so that the relief sought now in money is the difference between the price which the property would have brought if it had been inventoried at ninety thousand dollars and the price which it did bring, that the property brought sixty-three per cent of ninety thousand dollars, which is rather a large percentage even if the property had been inventoried at ninety thousand dollars; that the sale which is attacked was the second sale made of the said property by the bankruptcy court.

If the creditors of the bankrupt are entitled to any relief at all, it is through the trustee that they should obtain such relief. If the trustee is unfriendly to the proceeding (as volunteered in the brief), he may be required by order of the bankruptcy court to permit the use of his name in a proper action, or, failing that, he may be removed and a new trustee appointed.

If the trustee—the proper party—was seeking relief, it would be for an accounting as above stated, and certainly the bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction to entertain a bill for an accounting. The remedy is a plenary suit in equity in the circuit court of the United States or the State court, at the plaintiff's election.

The referee's ruling upon the question was as follows: "I prima facie hold that the court is without jurisdiction, and I prima facie hold that the petition does not state sufficient facts to entitle to relief. I am inclined to think that when the matter has gone as far as this has it should be plenary; and there is a want of proper parties. I doubt the authority of a creditor to interfere on both grounds."

In the plaintiff's brief no authority whatsoever is submitted in support of the affirmative of the proposition. The case In re Ethier (118 Fed., 107) comes nearer to the question than any other case cited in the brief, but in that case it only appears in an inferential way that the sale there attacked had been confirmed, and it does not appear that the possession of the property had changed in any respect in the interim between the confirmation and the attack.

The cases In re Mott and In re Hyde involved the sale of real estate.

The exact question was passed upon in the case entitled In re Hurdic (40 Fed., 360). In that case the property was sold, the sale confirmed, the price paid, and the purchase money distributed among the creditors. Later the sale was attacked on the ground that the purchase was made in trust for the bankrupt, and that therefore it was a concealed fraud. The court held that even if the bankruptcy court has the power to alter or amend its records at any time until the bankruptcy proceeding is formally ended, still for matters dehors the record the court may not summarily vacate a sale regular upon its face, after distribution of the proceeds, and that the remedy in such a case is by a plenary suit in equity.

In the case of In re Finlay Brothers (104 Fed., 675) it is held that, where a stock of goods has been sold in a bankruptcy proceeding, the money paid by the purchaser must be refunded if the sale is to be set aside; and that, where the purchaser has disposed of the stock of goods in the meantime, the only proper proceeding is a bill in equity by the trustee for an accounting; and further, that in no event should the sale be set aside without security being given for costs, etc.

The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Hinds v. Moore (134 Fed., 221, 224), and of the Second Circuit in In re Rothchild (154 Fed., 194), held that, where a court of bankruptcy has parted with the custody of goods of a bankrupt and they have since been sold by the purchaser, the bankruptcy court has not the jurisdiction to proceed summarily for their value.

It seems to me that, regardless of precedent or authority, it is clear the bankruptcy court has not the jurisdiction to proceed in an accounting, whether the complainant is the proper one, to wit, the trustee, or even if the petitioning creditors were considered proper complainants. A court of bankruptcy has not the means to adjust the equities of the different parties. It has no means to refund the purchase price, and is not a court of equity for such a purpose as a bill for an accounting, and its jurisdiction must be limited by its powers to give complete relief to all parties.

Therefore Judge Hoyt properly declined to proceed since, if the case were within his jurisdiction, nevertheless his court was unfitted, both in respect of the parties and the subject matter, to further proceed.

Respectfully submitted.

HAROLD PRESTON,
Attorney for the John Anisfield Company.

I do not mean to press the point of the sale by consent of the remainder of the stock, as alone defeating the jurisdiction. But the remedy was for an accounting before that happened as well as after.

Received copy of the within and service of the same admitted this 18th day of July, 1911.

HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Attorneys for Western Dry Goods Co.

(Indorsed:) Brief of John Anisfield Company. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, July 19, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk.

56249°—H. Rept. 1152—62-2——106

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. In bankruptcy. No. 4541.

BRIEF.

The petitioners, certain unsecured creditors of the bankrupt, by their amended petition, set forth in effect that on the 27th day of February, 1911, Sutcliffe Baxter was appointed receiver of the bankrupt estate of Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, and that he was afterwards elected as trustee of said estate.

On the 9th day of March, 1911, appraisers were appointed of said estate, and said appraisers returned a purported appraisement of the estate of the bankrupt, estimating the same at the sum of forty-two thousand two hundred fourteen and 87/100 ($42,214.87) dollars.

It is further alleged in the petition that said appraisement was grossly erroneous and was induced by fraud and misrepresentation, and that the fair market value of the estate of the bankrupt was the sum of ninety thousand ($90,000) dollars.

It is alleged that a sale was made of the property so appraised by the receiver to John Ainesfield Co. for the sum of fifty-seven thousand ($57,000) dollars, which sale was confirmed.

It is alleged that immediately upon the appointment of the receiver an inventory was taken of the stock by the employees of Charles Knosher & Co., and that thereupon said employees conspired with the said John Ainesfield Co. to the end that said stock should be inventoried for a sum greatly less than its real value. That in pursuance of such conspiracy, an inventory was returned to the receiver showing a valuation far less than the actual value of said stock, and that the receiver did thereupon accept said false and fraudulent inventory as representing the true value of the stock, and that upon said inventory the appraisers did return their appraisement and estimate. And it is further alleged that the appraisers were induced to return their estimated appraisement at a grossly inadequate figure because of said false inventory, so returned in pursuance of said conspiracy.

It is further alleged that at the time of the filing of the petition, the said John Ainesfield Co. had taken possession of said bankrupt stock and realized from a sale of a portion thereof at said time the sum of about fifty thousand ($50,000) dollars in cash, and that the said John Ainesfield Co. had remaining about fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) worth of stock.

Reference was made in said petition to affidavits of Eugene G. Anderson and Ole A. Kjos, which were filed at the time. These affidavits set forth, amongst other things, conversations had with certain employees of Charles Knosher & Co., some of whom were at the time of the filing of the petition in the employ of John Ainesfield Co., in which conversation these employees stated that they had taken part in the making up of the inventory and had returned the same at a sum less than that which would represent its true value. That during the taking of the inventory, a representative of John Ainesfield Co. was furnished with lists showing the actual value of the stock, and that this course was pursued in pursuance of a plan whereby John Ainesfield Co., who were large creditors of the bankrupt, would purchase said stock at a sum far less than its actual value, being made acquainted, as aforesaid, with its true value, and would hold said stock and sell the same out until it received back the purchase price and the amount of its unsecured claim, and the balance of the stock was then to be turned over to Charles Knosher & Co.

Upon the filing of the petition it was asked that the appraisement and sale and order of confirmation of sale be set aside, and that the said John Ainesfield Co. be required to pay into the registry of the court any moneys received by them out of the sale of the stock of said bankrupt, and that the stock remaining on hand and then unsold should be returned to the possession of the receiver. Later it was stipulated that the stock remaining on hand should be sold for a lump sum by the said John Ainesfield Co. without prejudice in this matter.

John Ainesfield Co. appeared before the referee in bankruptcy and objected to the jurisdiction of the court to entertain this petition as a summary proceeding. The referee sustained the objections to the jurisdiction, and thereupon the proceeding has been certified by this court for review.

It is our contention that our petition is sufficient, if the allegations are taken as true, to establish fraud and conspiracy participated in by John Ainesfield Co. whereby an inventory was returned grossly depreciating the value of the property, and that, therefore, John Ainesfield Co. were able to secure the same for a sum greatly less than its actual value, to the injury of the petitioners and other creditors.

The affidavits, which are referred to in the petition and made a part thereof, set forth the details of this conspiracy, and while they are not made by parties who have actual knowledge of the conspiracy, they nevertheless relate statements made by those who participated in the conspiracy, and are, therefore, in any event sufficient to create the presumption that evidence may be had upon a hearing to establish this conspiracy.

It was once suggested that the bankruptcy court would not entertain our petition in the absence of a showing of a reason why the proceeding was not initiated by the trustee, Sutcliffe Baxter. We are advised now that this objection will not be urged, inasmuch as counsel will concede that Mr. Baxter is unfriendly to this proceeding, and will decline to follow it.

The controversy between the representatives of John Ainesfield Co. and ourselves is over the question of whether or not the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to entertain this proceeding, it being our contention that the controversy may be determined in a summary proceeding of this character, and it being their contention that it can only be contended in a plenary, independent action brought for that purpose.

In many instances the authorities throw but little light upon the question of the summary jurisdiction of bankruptcy courts. We believe, however, this to be the true rule.

The bankruptcy court may by summary proceeding determine any controversy that grows out of the administration of the bankrupt estate or any controversy between the estate of the bankrupt upon the one hand and one claiming by or under the estate of the bankrupt upon the other hand. The plenary, independent proceeding is required to determine controversies arising between the estate of the bankrupt and one whose claim is adverse to that estate. This, we believe, will be sustained by a careful reading of the authorities.

See Babbitt v. Dutcher (216 U. S., 102; 23 A. B. R., 519):

"There are two classes of cases arising under the act of 1898 and controlled by different principles. The first class is where there is a claim of adverse title to property of the bankrupt based upon a transfer antedating the bankruptcy. The other class is where there is no claim of adverse title based on any transfer prior to the bankruptcy, but where the property is in the physical possession of a third party or of an agent of the bankrupt, or of an officer of a bankrupt corporation, who refuses to deliver it to the trustee in bankruptcy. In the former class of cases a plenary suit must be brought, either at law or in equity, by the trustee, in which the adverse claim of title can be tried and adjudicated. In the latter class it is not necessary to bring a plenary suit, but the bankruptcy court may act summarily and may make an order in a summary proceeding for the delivery of the property to the trustee, without the formality of a formal litigation. The former class falls within the ruling in the case of Bardes v. Hawarden Bank (178 U. S., 524; 4 Am. B. R., 163) and in the case of Jaquith v. Rowley (188 U. S., 620; 9 Am. B. R., 525), which hold that such a suit can be brought only in a court which would have had jurisdiction of a suit by the bankrupt against the adverse claimant, except where the defendant consents to be sued elsewhere. In the latter class of cases a plenary suit is not necessary, but the case falls within the rule laid down in Bryan v. Bernheimer (181 U. S., 188; 5 Am. B. R., 623) and Mueller v. Nugent (184 U. S., 1; 7 Am. B. R., 224), which held that the bankruptcy court could act summarily."

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, In re Grassler v. Reichwald (154 Fed., 478), held summary proceedings for the recovery of property taken trom the actual possession of the receiver by attachment from the State court were valid.

The court made the distinction heretofore set out between property in the possession of the bankrupt before adjudication and property in his possession after adjudication.

White v. Schloerb (178 U. S., 542): Held that "the judge of the court of bankruptcy was authorized to compel persons who had forcibly and unlawfully seized and taken out of the judicial custody of that court property which had lawfully come into its possession as part of the bankrupt's property, to restore the property to its custody; and therefore our answer to the first question must be the district court sitting in bankruptcy had jurisdiction by summary proceeding to compel the return of the property seized." (In re Epstein, 156 Fed., 42; In re Rose Shoe Mnfg. Co., 168 Fed., 39; Whitney v. Wenman, 198 U. S. 540 (inferentially).)

A receiver's sale is a judicial sale in which the court is the real seller.

In re Maloney (21 A. B. R., 502): The court has inherent power to protect its own sales and may proceed summarily.

Mason v. Wolkowick (150 Fed., 699; C. C. A., Mass.):

"Aside from the power of the district court with regard to the assets of bankrupts which is especially given it by the statute, it has all the authority which any court exercising equitable jurisdiction has to protect its receiver in the contracts made by them. Whenever a receiver, by direction of the court appointing him, makes a sale of assets in his possession, the parties concerned in the sale are bound to recognize him as an officer of the court; and consequently the court, appointing the receiver, not only has power to influence in a summary manner the completion of the contract of sale, but the parties involved are deemed to have consented to such an undertaking.

Citing the foregoing case to sustain a rule, Remington on Bankruptcy, volume 1, page 1100, says:

"Purchasers at judicial sales by trustees and receivers are subject to the summary jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court."

Confidential information received from the receiver or his agents disbars a purchaser. (In re Frazen v. Oppenheim, 174 Fed., 713.)

It is alleged in the petition filed herein that John Ainesfield Co., respondent, had such information.

Loveland on Bankruptcy lays down the following rule:

"The court will not refuse to confirm a sale or set it aside after it has been confirmed merely because the price is inadequate; there must be circumstances impeaching the validity of the sale or such gross inadequacy as to shock the conscience."

Judicial sales in bankruptcy will be vacated on the ground of fraud or collusion. (In re Ethier, 118 Fed., 107.)

The district court has jurisdiction summarily to set aside a conveyance by an assignee if improvidently, irregularly, or without due authority where rights of third persons have not intervened. (In re Mott Federal cases, 9878; In re Hyde, 6 Fed., 587.)

The statutory law pertaining to this subject is found in section 2 (7).

The bankruptcy court shall be empowered to "cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, reduced to money and distributed, and determine controversies in relation thereto, except as herein otherwise provided."

The exception is found in section 23 (a):

"The United States circuit court shall have jurisdiction of all controversies at law and in equity, as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy, between trustees as such and adverse claimants concerning the property acquired or claimed by the trustee in the same manner and to the same extent only as though bankruptcy proceedings had not been instituted, and such controversies had been between the bankrupts and such adverse claimants."

Respectfully submitted.

NELSON ANDERSON,
HUGHES, MCMICKEN, DOVELL & RAMSEY,
Attorneys for Petitioners.

(Indorsed:) Brief. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, July 19, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk.

Copy of within brief received, and due service of same acknowledged this 14th day of July, 1911.

HAROLD PRESTON.

United States District Court for the Western District of Washington. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, a corporation, bankrupt. No. 4541. Præcipe.

To the clerk of the above-entitled court:

You will please furnish the congressional committee, under one certificate, copies of the following files in above matter: Petition of J. B. Locke & Potts; petition of petitioning creditors; brief of John Anisfield Company; brief of petitioners.

JAMES M. GRAHAM,
Chairman Subcommittee.

(NOTICE.—Attorneys will please indorse their own filings.—Rule 11.)

(Filing on back:) No. 4541. United States District Court, Western District of Washington. In re Chas. Knosher & Co., bankrupt. Præcipe. For process, etc. Filed in the United States District Court, Western District of Washington. July 5, 1912. A. W. Engle, clerk. By B. O. Wright.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Company, a corporation, bankrupt. No. 4541.

PETITION OF PETITIONING CREDITORS FOR REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES, ETC.

To the honorable judges of the above-entitled court:

Come now John Anisfield Co., The Palace of Sweets (Inc.), and F. H. Kern, petitioning creditors herein, and represent and show to the court as follows:

I. That through their counsel, Messrs. Shank & Smith, of Seattle, Washington, your petitioners prepared and filed in this court and in this cause the original petition for adjudication of bankruptcy herein, and caused subpœna to be issued and served by the marshal; that your petitioners also paid to the clerk thirty dollars on account of his fees as required by law, and have paid the marshal on account of such service four and 24/100 dollars.

II. That no compensation has been paid to the attorneys of your petitioners for their services in preparing and filing said petition, and that by reason of the filing of said petition the property and assets of the said Charles Knosher & Company were conserved for all the creditors thereof, and that it is proper that such allowance should be made as to the court shall appear equitable.

Wherefore your petitioners pray that they be repaid the said advancement of thirty dollars so paid to the clerk and the further sum of four and 24/100 dollars paid to the marshal, and that such allowance be made to their attorneys as to the court shall seem proper in the premises.

SHANK & SMITH,
Attorneys for Petitioning Creditors.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Washington, Northern Division, ss:

Corwin S. Shank, being first duly sworn, on oath deposes and says: I am one of the attorneys for the petitioning creditors herein. I have read the foregoing petition for allowances, know the contents thereof, and believe the same to be true.

CORWIN S. SHANK.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 21st day of March, 1911.

[SEAL.]

H. C. BELT,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Indorsed:) Petition of petitioning creditors for reimbursement of expenses, etc. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington, Mar. 21, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In bankruptcy. In the matter of Chas. Knosher & Co. (Inc.), a corporation, bankrupt. No. 4541.

PETITION OF J. B. LOCKE & POTTS, AS PETITIONING CREDITORS HEREIN.

To the honorable judges of the above-entitled court:

Come now J. B. Locke & Potts, petitioning creditors herein, and respectfully represent and show to the court:

1. That through their attorneys McClure & McClure, of Seattle, Washington, these petitioners prepared and filed with the clerk petition for appointment of a receiver before adjudication herein, and also petition and order that they be permitted to intervene herein and join in the petition for adjudication herein, and also obtained and filed herein bond of these petitioners as petitioning creditors for the appointment of a receiver before adjudication, said bond being in the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) and expense of premium thereon being $25.00; that hearing was had upon said petition for a receiver and a receiver appointed, who forthwith took charge of the assets and has since administered same under the direction of the court.

2. That in the opinion of these petitioners the services performed by them as aforesaid were a benefit to the estate and that it is proper that an allowance should be made to these petitioners on account thereof.

Wherefore petitioners pray that such order may be entered as to the court shall seem proper.

J. B. LOCKE & POTTS,
By WALTER A. MCCLURE,
Their attorney hereunto authorized.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss:

Walter A. McClure, being first duly sworn on oath says: That he is one of the attorneys for the petitioners herein, and makes this affidavit in behalf of said petitioners, J. B. Locke & Potts, for the reason that said petitioners are absent from the State of Washington; that he has read the foregoing petition, knows the contents thereof, and believes the same to be true.

WALTER A. MCCLURE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of March, 1911.

[SEAL.]

EMORY E. HESS,
Notary Public in and for the State of Washington, residing at Seattle.

(Indorsed:) Petition of J. B. Locke & Potts, as petitioning creditors herein. Filed in the U. S. District Court, Western Dist. of Washington. Mar. 20, 1911. R. M. Hopkins, clerk.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., bankrupt. No. 4541.

CLERK'S CERTIFICATE TO TRANSCRIPT OF RECORD.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Western District of Washington, ss:

I, A. W. Engle, clerk of the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, do hereby certify the foregoing typewritten pages to be a full, true, and correct copy of the record and proceedings in the above and foregoing entitled cause as is called for by the præcipe of the chairman of the congressional committee, as the same remain of record and on file in the office of the clerk of the said court.

I further certify that the cost of preparing and certifying the foregoing transcript is the sum of nine and 90/100 ($9.90) dollars, chargeable to the United States of America, and that the said sum will be included in my account against the United States for clerk's fees for the quarter ending September 30, 1912.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said district court, at Seattle, in said district, this 13th day of July, 1912.

A. W. ENGLE, Clerk.
By F. S. SIMPKINS.

EXHIBIT NO. 74.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., a bankrupt. No. 4541. Praecipe.

To the referee in bankruptcy of the above-entitled court:

You will please furnish the congressional committee, in brief form, a statement indicating the volume of files in your office in above matter.

JAMES M. GRAHAM, Chairman.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, bankrupt. No. 4541. In bankruptcy.

To the honorable congressional committee:

In compliance with the subpœna or praecipe duly served upon me, a copy of which is attached hereto, I have the honor to report and certify as follows, to wit:

That the files in the above-entitled matter now remaining in my office are briefly summarized as follows:

First. The record in the appearance docket covers 12¼ record pages.

Second. There has been filed in said proceeding 250 proofs of claims.

Third. The attention of the court and counsel was required at meetings and formal hearings had therein on twenty different days.

Fourth. Twelve formal petitions were filed herein.

Fifth. Thirty formal orders were made and filed herein.

Sixth. Five formal reports of the trustee were filed herein.

Seventh. Nine objections to claims were filed herein.

Eighth. The papers on file in my office, exclusive of proofs of claims, cover 311 pages, not including the backs or the endorsements thereon. Certain other papers have been on file in my office but have been transmitted to the clerk of the above-named court as a part of my return upon petitions for review, such papers covering probably fifty pages or more. And the undersigned, the referee in bankruptcy before whom the above-entitled matter is pending, being of the opinion that the foregoing is a compliance with said subpœna or praecipe, hereby certifies the same as appearing from the records and files in his office, with the statement that if anything further is required by the honorable committee it will be supplied at once.

Dated at Seattle, in said district, this 9th day of July, 1912.

JOHN P. HOYT, Referee in Bankruptcy.

(Filing on back:) No. 4541. In the U. S. District Court, Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Charles Knosher & Co., a corporotion, bankrupt. Certificate made in compliance with subpœna.

Exhibit 75 not printed.

EXHIBIT No. 76.

In the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Chas. Knosher & Co. (Inc.), a corporation, bankrupt. No. 4541. In bankruptcy.

This being the day appointed for the first meeting of creditors under the said bankruptcy, of which due notice has been given, the undersigned referee of the said court in bankruptcy sat, pursuant to such notice, to take the proof of debts and for the choice of trustee under the said bankruptcy, and he does hereby certify:

That the creditors whose claims had been allowed and were present, or duly represented, unanimously elected Sutcliffe Baxter, of Seattle, in said district, as trustee of said bankrupt's estate, and fixed the penalty of his bond in the sum of $5,000.00, which action was and is approved by said referee and this order made and filed accordingly.

Dated at Seattle, in said district, this 20th day of March, 1911.

JOHN P. HOYT, Referee in Bankruptcy.

I, John P. Hoyt, the referee in bankruptcy before whom the above-entitled matter is pending, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the original order on file in my office, and of the whole thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 16th day of July, 1912.

JOHN P. HOYT, Referee in Bankruptcy.

(Filing on back:) No. 4541. In the U. S. District Court, Western District of Washington, Northern Division. In the matter of Chas. Knosher & Co. (Inc.), bankrupt. Appointment of trustee. Filed March 20th, 1911, 3 p. m. John P. Hoyt, referee.

EXHIBIT No. 77.

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in Bankruptcy. The Western Dry Goods Company, a corporation, et al., petitioners, vs. Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver and trustee of the estate of Charles Knosher & Co., a corporation, bankrupt, and John Anisfield Company, respondents. In the matter of Chas. Knosher & Co., bankrupt. No. 2050. Upon review from the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, northern division.

BRIEF OF RECEIVER AND TRUSTEE.

Leopold M. Stern, Walter A. McClure, McClure & McClure, attorneys for repondents other than John Anisfield Company.

ON MOTION TO DISMISS PETITION.

Respondents (not including John Anisfield Company) have heretofore served and filed their motion to dismiss the petition upon the following grounds:

1. Because the case involves a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings under either section 24a or section 25a (3) as distinguished from proceedings in bankruptcy under section 24b, and the decision in it is reviewable by appeal only.

2. Because the determination of this case involves a consideration of evidence and a determination of disputed questions of fact.

Before proceeding with the consideration of the case on its merits, we urge our motion to dismiss and support it with the following brief of the law:

I. The petition to revise under section 24b of the bankruptcy law, filed in this court, challenges the propriety of allowances made to the receiver and trustee, and to his attorneys, the sums allowed to each being in excess of $500. In such a controversy arising in a bankruptcy proceeding as may be reviewed by appeal under section 24a or under section 25a (3).

These sections of the act are as follows:

"Section 24a. The Supreme Court of the United States, the circuit court of appeals of the United States, and the supreme courts of the Territories, in vacation in chambers and during their respective terms, as now or as they may be hereafter held, are hereby invested with appellate jurisdiction of controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy from which they have appellate jurisdiction in other cases. The Supreme Court of the United States shall exercise a like jurisdiction from courts of bankruptcy not within any organized circuit of the United States and from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

"Section 24b. The several circuit courts of appeal shall have jurisdiction in equity, either interlocutory or final, to superintend and revise in matter of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. Such power shall be exercised on due notice and petition by any party aggrieved."

"Section 25a. That appeals, as in equity cases, may be taken in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy to the circuit court of appeals of the United States, and to the supreme court of the Territories, in the following cases, to wit: (1) from a judgment adjudging or refusing to adjudge the defendant a bankrupt; (2) from a judgment granting or denying a discharge; and (3) from a judgment allowing or rejecting a debt or claim of five hundred dollars or over. Such appeal shall be taken within ten days after the judgment appealed from has been rendered, and may be heard and determined by the appellate court in term or vacation, as the case may be."

In re Theodore E. Curtis (91 Fed., 737; 4 Am. B. R. 17, C. C. A., Ill.) involved a controversy between the trustees of a bankrupt estate and counsel for the petitioning creditors over the allowance made to the latter for services in procuring the adjudication in bankruptcy. An allowance was made and ordered paid out of the estate. The trustees, regarding the compensation fixed by the district court as excessive, brought the order to the court of appeals for review on appeal. Justice Jenkins, delivering the opinion, said:

"In the administration of an estate in bankruptcy the law permits the allowance of 'one reasonable attorney's fee for the professional services actually rendesed * * * to the petitioning creditors in involuntary cases.' (30 Stat., c. 541, sec. 64b, subd. 3.) The act grants an appeal to this court from an order of the district court sitting in bankruptcy, allowing or rejecting any claim exceeding $500 against the bankruptcy estate. (30 Stat., c. 541, sec. 25a, subd. 3.) This clearly lodges in the appellate court the right to review the allowance of any such claim."

Smith v. Cooper (120 Fed., 230; 9 Am. B. R. 755, C. C. A., Ga.) was likewise a case involving compensation claimed by attorneys for their services on behalf of the petitioning creditors, and for services rendered under employment on authority of the court to the receiver and trustee in the bankruptcy matter. In this instance, the attorneys, being dissatisfied with the allowance fixed by the district judge and desiring a review thereof by the appellate court, and being uncertain in respect to the proper procedure, prosecuted simultaneously an appeal and a petition for review, to review the same judgment. The court of appeals dismissed the petition for review at the costs of the petitioner, but on the appeal amended the decree in favor of the appellants and assessed the costs of the appeal against the trustee.

The court after considering and quoting extensively from In re Curtis, supra, said:

"In this view of the law, both as to the right of appeal and the determination of the amount of a reasonable fee for services actually rendered in involuntary bankruptcy, we fully concur."

Further on the court said:

"It thus appears that the services for which compensation is claimed were actually rendered in the bankruptcy court, in this court, and in the Supreme Court of the United States; that they were meritorious, and so far successful that all the funds brought into the bankruptcy and in the hands of the court for distribution were thereby obtained.

"The section of the bankruptcy act of 1898 (U. S. Comp. St., 1901, p. 3447) authorizing and requiring the payment of such fees as claimed herein is headed 'Debts which have priority,' and clause 'b' provides that such fee shall be paid as a part of the costs of administration, and before wages due workmen, etc."

The allowances sought to be reviewed in this court come within the purview of section 64b (3) of the bankruptcy act referred to in the two cases above cited. These allowances are part of the costs of administration, as are allowances for petitioning creditors' attorneys' fees. The sums awarded exceeded $500; therefore the remedy of the petitioners was by appeal under section 25a (3), and probably also under section 24a.

II. This court may perhaps, without rejecting the rule announced in the two cases above cited, hold that while appeal will lie to bring the controversy here for review, that procedure is not exclusive; that the order complained of is an administrative one, a part of the intermediate administrative steps in the "proceedings in bankruptcy," and the aggrieved parties had their choice between appeal and petition for review under section 24b.

Even so, the petition should be dismissed because it attempts to invoke the consideration of evidence to determine disputed questions of fact, whereas, under the procedure, the court can not do this, but is limited by the terms of the act to the determination of questions of law only, arising in the proceeding, and must accept the facts as found by the district court. It is only in cases of appeal that the court can review the evidence.

This court so construed the act In re Grassler & Reichwald (154 Fed., 478; 18 Am. B. R., 694), wherein Gilbert, J., said:

"Section 24b of the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898, gives the circuit court of appeals authority to superintend and revise in matters of law the proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. It was intended thereby to provide a summary method for revising the orders and decisions of courts of bankruptcy upon questions of law, and the section does not contemplate any review of facts."

(In re Rouse, Hazard & Co., 1 Am. B. R., 231; 91 Fed., 96; In re Purvine, 2 Am. B. R., 787; 97 Fed., 192; 37 C. C. A., 446; In re Whitener, 5 Am. B. R., 198; 105 Fed., 180.)

Likewise, In re Blanchard Shingle Co. (164 Fed., 311; 21 Am. B. R., 142) this court dismissed the appeal, because the case was not appealable, and in response to the request of appellant that the appeal be treated as a petition for review, the court, speaking through Ross, J., said:

"As in the case, a consideration of the facts is essential to any review of the decision of the court complained of, it is clear that the appeal can not be treated as a petition for revision, as is suggested by the appellant may be done. That is only permissible where questions of law only are involved. * * *

"In the light of these authorities, it seems to us that the case at bar is not appealable under section 23a of the bankruptcy act, and, as the record shows that the asserted lien of the appellant depends upon controverted facts, it clearly is not subject to revision under section 24b. The appeal is dismissed."

This subject was also considered at length by this court, and the distinction between appeal and review on petition pointed out, in Morehouse vs. Hardware Company (177 Fed., 337; 24 A. B. R., 180).

Turning to other jurisdictions and examining recent cases, we call particular attention to In re Kirkpatrick (148 Fed., 711; 17 A. B. R., 594; C. C. A. Mich.), because that was a petition to review an order of the district court fixing the receiver's compensation. The court said:

"On this petition for a review of the order of the district judge made in conformity with his opinion as above stated, two questions are stated by counsel for the petitioner:

"1st. Did the judge err in respect to the question of law touching the limitation of the receiver's compensation? and

"2nd. If he did and the amount allowable is not limited by the bankruptcy act as held by the judge, whether the sum allowed by the referee was a resaonable sum?

"We shall have occasion to deal only with the first of these questions."

The opinion then goes on to state that upon the face of the record the district court had followed the wrong section of the bankruptcy act in measuring the receiver's fees, and for that reason directs that the order under review be reversed, but concludes the opinion as follows:

"Inasmuch as upon this petition we can not find facts, but decide only questions of law, and the district judge did not consider the facts upon the proper legal basis, it seems the proper course to simply reverse the order with a direction to proceed in conformity with this opinion. It was competent for the district judge to have ordered a further hearing before himself on additional evidence, if he had not adopted the erroneous rule of law."

In the case of Schuler vs. Hassinger (177 Fed., 119; 24 A. B. R., 184; C. C. A. Ala.) an attempt was made by petition for review to set aside an order of sale of certain property. The court said:

"To determine as the ultimate proposition that the sale was unfair, illegal, and void would require, in the absence of an agreed statement of facts or finding of facts by the referee or court, a consideration of all the evidence in the record entirely beyond inquiries this court can make on a petition for revision in matters of law."

In the matter of Otho L. Hays (24 A. B. R., 691; C. C. A. Ohio), which was a petition to revise an order of the district court approving the account of an assignee of the state court and requiring payment of the balance to the trustee, the court said:

"We are urged to reverse these findings and to determine the question of the assignee's right to further compensation and to the disbursements in question in accordance with the assignee's contentions. But in a proceeding to revise under section 24b this court is limited to a review in matters of law, and only questions of law arising out of the facts found or conceded can be considered. We can not determine questions of fact involved in a finding or order sought to be reviewed. We call attention to the following decisions of this court and of the supreme court." (Court cites numerous cases.)

In re Leech (171 Fed., 662; 22 A. B. R., 600; C. C. A. Ky.) was a review of a summary proceeding instituted by a trustee to compel the bankrupt to surrender concealed property. The court said:

"If this were an appeal, we might ourselves review the evidence, but on a review of the proceedings we are limited by the terms of the act to a determination of questions of law arising in the proceedings, and must accept the facts as found by the district court."

In re Dunlop (166 Fed., 545; 19 A. B. R., 360; C. C. A. Minn.) was a controversy brought to the circuit court, the ruling assigned as error being presented both by petition to revise and by appeal. The court said:

"As it involves the consideration of the evidence of the relation of the parties, and of their acts in making and performing the contract, it will be considered on the appeal, and the petition to revise is dismissed."

Hendricks vs. Webster (159 Fed., 927; 20 A. B. R., 112; C. C. A. Iowa) involved the priority of liens in a bankruptcy proceeding. The court said:

"James Hendricks appealed from said decree to this court and also filed an original petition asking for a review of the same. As we are asked to consider evidence in the record, we dismiss the petition to review, and will hear the case upon the appeal."

In re Frank (25 A. B. R., 486; C. C. A. N. Dak.), involved a summary proceeding to compel a bankrupt to deliver concealed assets to the trustee. An order requiring such delivery having been entered, the bankrupt sought to review the same in the circuit court of appeals by petition for review. The court said:

"The petition to revise under section 24b can properly present for determination only questions of law and not doubtful or disputed questions of fact. But when facts are agreed upon, or are proven or admitted, that leave nothing for determination but their legal import, such a determination of them by a court of bankruptcy may be reviewed upon a petition to revise. But the review of decisions which require the consideration of conflicting evidence, or evidence though not conflicting from which different deductions or conclusions may reasonably be drawn, may not be reviewed upon a petition to revise, but upon appeal only. (In re Lee, C. C. A. 8th Cir.; 25 A. B. R., 436; 182 Fed., 579)."

In re Lee, cited by the court, was a petition to review an order of the district court determining the validity of a lien. The trustee moved to dismiss the petition upon grounds similar to those we urge in support of our motion. The court denied the motion, using the following language:

"Undoubtedly there is a controversy here arising in a bankruptcy proceeding which is reviewable by appeal under section 24a, but there is no prohibition in the bankruptcy law of the revision in matter of law of such a controversy under section 24b, and if no controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings may be reviewed under the latter section, then nothing may be reviewed under it, because where there is no controversy there is nothing to review or to decide. The fact is that the grant of jurisdiction to the circuit court of appeals to review by appeal the final decision of a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings of which that court would have had appellate jurisdiction if it had arisen in any other case in a Federal court under section 24a, and the grant of jurisdiction to revise and superintend in matter of law the proceedings of the inferior courts of bankruptcy under section 24b, are not exclusive of each other, but cumulative or concurrent grants, the former of jurisdiction to review questions of law and of fact, the latter of jurisdiction to review questions of law alone. An aggrieved party often has a choice of these methods. A decision of a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings which involves the validity of the claim of a creditor to a lien upon the property of the bankrupt, or its proceeds, under administration in possession of the court, is a proceeding in bankruptcy within the meaning of section 24b of the bankruptcy law and reviewable in matter of law upon a petition to revise. (The court cites numerous cases.)

"There is no doubt that a petition to revise will not lie to invoke the consideration of evidence to determine disputed questions of fact, but the record is that this controversy was tried and decided upon agreed facts which are spread before us."

In re Irwin (174 Fed., 642; 23 A. B. R., 487; C. C. A. Pa.) involved a review of an order of the district court increasing a bankrupt's attorney's fee above the sum fixed by the referee. The amount to which the fee was raised by the district court was one hundred dollars. The matter was brought up by petition for review filed by the trustee. The court refused to consider the question of the reasonableness of the fee and stated:

"On a petition to this court to revise, we can consider only questions of law. We are not at liberty to disturb the district court's findings on the facts."

In the case of Coder, trustee, vs. Arts (213 U. S. Sup. Ct., 223; 22 A. B. R., 1) the court, speaking through Justice Day, said:

"By paragraph b of section 24 the circuit courts of appeals have jurisdiction to superintend and revise, in matters of law, proceedings of the several inferior courts of bankruptcy within their jurisdiction. The proceeding under this section is designed to enable the circuit court of appeals to review questions of law arising in bankruptcy proceedings and is not intended as a substitute for the right of appeal upon controverted questions of fact under the right of appeal given in controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings (section 24), or the special appeal given in certain cases under section 25."

The court then goes on to discuss a proceeding in bankruptcy as distinguished from a controversy arising in the course of bankruptcy proceedings, and finds that the controversy in that case was a proceeding in bankruptcy, and, the matter involving the priority of a lien and the amount of the claim being in excess of $500, an appeal under section 25a (3) was the proper remedy for reviewing the order of the district court.

In re Friend (134 Fed., 778; 13 A. B. R., 595; C. C. A. Ill.) was a petition for review. The court in an extended opinion discussed the distinction between sections 24b and 25a and speaking of the proceeding under 24b said:

"The intention is expressed that a review of the summary orders and judgments shall not extend to an examination of the correctness of the facts, but only to the law applied to the facts on which the court admittedly acted."

Other cases, ruling along the same lines as the cases from which we have heretofore quoted, and holding in effect that where the record in the case involves a mixed question of law and fact, review must be by appeal and not by petition for revision, and that upon review by petition, an appellate court is not at liberty to disturb the district court's finding of facts, are the following:

Thomas vs. Woods, 170 Fed., 764; 23 A. B. R. 132; C. C. A. Kans.; Steiner vs. Marshall, 140 Fed., 629; 15 A. B. R. 486; C. C. A. Md.; In re Whitener, 105 Fed., 180; 5 A. B. R., 198; C. C. A. Tex.; Francis vs. McNeal, 170 Fed., 445; 22 A. B. R., 337; C. C. A. Pa.; Thompson vs. Mauzy, 174 Fed., 611; 23 A. B. R., 489; C. C. A. W. Va.; In re Moore & Bridgeman, 166 Fed., 689; 21 A. B. R., 651; C. C. A. Tex.; Landry vs. San Antonio Brew. Ass'n, 159 Fed., 700; 20 A. B. R., 226; C. C. A. Tex.; Lennox vs. Allen, 167 Fed., 114; 21 A. B. R., 648; C. C. A. Mass.

To sum up our argument, this controversy was certainly not tried below upon agreed or admitted facts. The character, importance, and efficiency of the services performed by these respondents was a vital issue of fact which was tried upon numerous affidavits filed by the parties to the controversy. The court below read these affidavits, besides examining the records and files reporting the acts and doings of the receiver and his counsel. No separate findings of fact and conclusions of law were made, but the final order of the district judge entered September 23rd, 1911, and brought here for review (record, page 102), amounts to more than a mere order. It is in effect his findings of fact, conclusions of law and judgment.

This court in this proceeding cannot consider the evidence. It cannot review the conflicting evidence in the record. The petition should therefore be dismissed.

Even if our motion to dismiss the petition is denied, this court in the consideration of the petition is limited to the recitals of fact as made by the court below in its order of September 23rd, 1911 (record, page 102), in determining whether the allowances made by the court are within the law. These recitals are conclusive upon this court. The correctness of the facts as found by the court below can not be questioned, although, of course, this court may determine whether the district judge applied the law correctly to these facts.

At this time, also, we desire to object to the consideration of any affidavits as a part of the record. Affidavits are not a part of the record unless incorporated by bill of exceptions.

If our objection is sustained, there is nothing before this court but the order of September 23rd, 1911. The recitals of fact in that order of September 23rd, 1911, legally stand as proven and their legal import only is before this court.

ON THE MERITS.

Without waiving the foregoing motion, and expressly saving and reserving all rights thereunder, these respondents, for the purpose of fully complying with rule 24 of this court, submit the following discussion of the case on the merits, for consideration by the court in case the motion to dismiss shall be denied.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

This is an involuntary bankruptcy proceeding originally brought by certain creditors against Chas. Knosher & Co., a corporation engaged in general merchandise business in the city of Seattle. Another creditor intervened under section 59f of the bankruptcy act, and joined in the petition for adjudication. The intervenor also filed a petition for the appointment of a receiver before adjudication, accompanying said petition with the bon required by section 3e. (Record, pp. 15–16.) The district court thereupon appointed Sutcliffe Baxter receiver before adjudication, the order of appointment authorizing the receiver to continue the business in the usual course of retail trade if such action should be deemed advisable by the receiver. (Record, p. 110.)

The appointment was made February 27, 1911, and Mr. Baxter qualified and took possession on the same day. March 20, 1911, Mr. Baxter was elected trustee by the creditors and has continued as trustee. Mr. Baxter is a first-class business man, having had 49 years' experience in merchandising (record, p. 109), and in his capacity and integrity the district judge had perfect confidence (record, p. 49).

When the receiver took possession he found the store full of customers attracted by extensive advertising of a special sale, and the receiver deemed it best to keep the store open until he had opportunity to determine the future policy of the business and to ascertain the wishes of the creditors. (Record, p. 110.) During the day the receiver consulted with numerous creditors and representatives as to the advisability of continuing the business at retail and after such consultation it was agreed by all parties that it would be best to close the store at the conclusion of the day's business and proceed at once to take an inventory of all the property. (Record, pp. 17, 50, 111.)

The premises occupied by the business were three full sized store rooms (with balcony) and a full basement under the entire store. The main floors, the basement and the balcony were filled with merchandise. (Record, p. 111.)

When the receiver took possession, he retained the entire force of employees, and upon closing the doors for the purpose of taking inventory the same force was retained to speed the completion of the inventory, the expense of rent and insurance being large. The total number of employees was between 40 and 50. (Record, p. 111.)

The inventory was begun February 28, 1911, and completed March 5, 1911. (Record, p. 111.) The receiver found that all merchandise was marked only with the retail selling price, there being nothing to show cost; that in fixing the selling price no specific percentage was added to cost, but that some merchandise was offered at 25 per cent profit, other merchandise at 50 per cent profit, and other merchandise at 100 per cent profit, so that it was impossible to ascertain original cost by deducting a certain definite percentage, to be regarded as profit, from the selling price with which the merchandise throughout the store was marked; that the business was divided into different departments, such as domestics, ladies' cloaks and suits, crockery and tinware; that each department was under the management of a manager, experienced in the particular line of merchandise carried in that department, and acquainted with its original cost, in most cases such department manager having been also the original buyer of the merchandise. (Record, p. 111–112.)

The general manager of the store was E. Y. Barr, 48 years of age, of 30 years' experience in the dry-goods business, a reliable and trustworthy man. (Record, pp. 111, 112.) Mr. Baxter retained Barr to superintend the inventory, and after discussion it was decided that the only practical way to take the inventory was to have each department manager take the inventory of his own department, fixing the cost according to his personal knowledge, and by reference to the original invoices. (Record, p. 112.)

The receiver was personally present in the store from morning until night from Tuesday, the 28th day of February, 1911, when the inventory was begun, up to and including Sunday, the 5th day of March, 1911, when the inventory was completed. He saw to it that the different departments turned in the sheets showing the quantities and values of the merchandise in said departments, from day to day, as the work progressed, to the office, where the bookkeeper superintended the assembling of the sheets and the transcribing thereof into a permanent inventory with numerous copies thereof. The original inventory, consisting of 129 pages, was filled, when completed, in the office of the referee in bankruptcy, and the copies retained in the store for bidders. The inventory was correctly taken and transcribed. (Record, pp. 107–108, 114, 122–124, 127, 128.)

When the inventory had been completed, the receiver found that the general sentiment among the creditors was in favor of an immediate sale, because of the great expense for rent, insurance, watchmen, and similar itens (rent alone being $75 per day), and because the merchandise was largely of such a character that it was rapidly becoming more and more unseasonable and because if any material delay occurred in effecting sale the merchandise would bring a proportionately lower price. (Record, p. 114.)

The receiver presented to the referee these facts and the desire of the creditors for immediate sale and obtained an order that the merchandise and fixtures be offered for sale March 13, 1911, on sealed bids. (Record, p. 114.)

In the interim the receiver was in the store every day from morning until night, attending to correspondence and getting accounts adjusted, attending to office work, getting the books posted to date (the books of account having been neglected for a long period), meeting prospective bidders who desired to look over the stock, and adjusting controversies over certain merchandise which had come into the store immediately prior to bankruptcy and which the respective creditors shipping said merchandise desired to reclaim. (Record, p. 115.)

The receiver also arranged a transfer of all insurance, and placed additional insurance on the property. (Record, p. 18.) He diligently endeavored to collect the outstanding book accounts, and reduced same to cash as rapidly as possible. (Record, p. 19.)

He gave his entire time and attention to the conduct, care, and management of the business from the time he took possession until the business was delivered to the purchaser on March 16, 1911. (Record, pp. 19–20.)

March 13, 1911, the receiver attended the sale before the referee. When the bids were opened the highest bid was $50,000.00. The receiver became convinced that an appreciably higher bid could be obtained, and after effort and trouble obtained from one bidder a guaranty of an increase of 10 per cent over the $50,000.00 bid. Thereupon the receiver recommended to the court that all bids be rejected, and that new bids be received, with the requirement that upon resale the minimum bid should be $55,000.00, and order was entered accordingly. Resale was had March 15, 1911, and a bid of $57,000.00 was received, which was accepted by the court. (Record, p. 115.)

The price so realized was 79.9 per cent of the invoice value as shown in the receiver's inventory, which inventory (not including auto delivery wagon, separately listed and correctly deemed by the receiver as having no place among either the merchandise or fixtures), with the appraisement, was as follows:

	Inventory.	Appraisement.
Merchandise	$66,858.13	$40,114.87
Fixtures	4,477.00	1,500.00
Auto delivery wagon		600.00
	71,335.13	42,214.87

It seems necessary for us to volunteer the foregoing footings of the receiver's inventory and of the appraisement. These figures were brought to the attention of this court by appellants, although the alleged errors in respect to these very figures constitute the gravamen of the attack upon both respondents.

Take the most extravagant estimate of the valuation of the merchandise and fixtures deducible from the assertions made by the appellants (Record, pp. 57–58), at at $95,000.00; the merchandise and fixtures brought 60 per cent of this estimate. Upon the estimate of $90,000.00, suggested by the appellants in their brief as the true valuation of said assets, and upon which valuation they base their attack upon the receiver, the price realized was equivalent to 63.5 per cent.

In the inventory made by the receiver the fixtures are priced by the same standard as the merchandise, to wit, the original cost price to the bankrupt. It will be noted, however, that while the appraises' figures on the merchandise were approximately 60 per cent of the receiver's inventory, their figures on the fixtures were but 33⅓ per cent of the receiver's inventory. No attack has been made on the correctness of either the receiver's or the appraisers' estimates on the fixtures.

The purpose of an appraisement is to advise the court as to the approximate price which a sale of the assets should realize. The appraisers' opinion that the fixtures could not be expected to bring more than 33⅓ per cent of the invoice value, while the stock should bring 60 per cent of the invoice value, will not strike any person of average experience as unreasonable. Fixtures removed from a store in which they were originally built or installed lose 75 per cent of their original cost, while the loss on the merchandise is much less.

In figuring the percentage realized upon the invoice value of the merchandise and fixtures by the sale at $57,000.00, no distinction was made between the merchandise and fixtures; that is to say, we assumed that the purchaser bid a like percentage upon the fixtures as he did upon the stock. This assumption, however, is not correct. Regarding the matter in the light of ordinary business experience, it must be believed by the court that in making up his bid of $57,000.00 for the merchandise and fixtures, the purchaser did not figure the fixtures at 79.9 per cent of the invoice value thereof, but say at 33⅓ per cent of the invoice value thereof. This would mean that of the $57,000.00 bid for the merchandise and fixtures, $1,392.33 was for the fixtures, and $55,607.67 for the merchandise. On this basis the price of $55,607.67 amounted to 83.2 per cent of $66,858.13, the receiver's merchandise inventory.

In considering the above phase of the controversy, the district judge in his memorandum decision pertinently said (record, p. 58):

"A stock of dry goods and general merchandise, in a store which has been in trade more than one year, necessarily includes odds and ends and things depreciated in value by age. The instances are rare in which so large a stock as the one in question can be readily sold in bulk, for spot cash, at a price exceeding 50 per cent of the invoice price; or even that much net, by selling at retail or in lots. * * * In the light of experience gained by administration of other insolvent estates, including stocks of merchandise, and tested by the bids for this identical property submitted by competent buyers who made their own estimates of its worth, I regard the achievement of the receiver in obtaining such a price in cash for such property, by a quick sale, as something extraordinary and commendable."

The same counsel who represented the receiver from the time of his appointment continued to act for him after he had been appointed trustee. Like Mr. Baxter, they are still engaged in the administration of the estate. As stated in the affidavit of one of the counsel (record, p. 132):

"A true estimate of the value of the services of the receiver's counsel can not be made excepting by an examination of the files and records in the referee's office, which to some extent will show the numerous petitions and orders which had to be prepared and drawn in connection with the administration of the estate; that furthermore, there were many controversies over merchandise which had been received into the store immediately prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the creditors shipping these goods desiring to procure their return; and that many other questions arose in the course of the administration of the estate and prior to the sale of the assets, which necessitated the receiver consulting his attorneys every day and several times in each day and also required the receiver's attorneys to appear frequently before the referee."

Appellants did not bring before this court the files and records in the lower court, which would aid in advising this court as to the volume and character of the labor performed by counsel for the receiver. These records were before the district judge in the consideration of this question. They were very material. In his opinion (record, p. 55) the district judge states that he studied the records for the purpose of deciding the controversy. Unquestionably these records were such as to satisfy the district judge that the allowance made to respondents was reasonable. These records should have been brought before this court by opposing counsel. Their failure so to do deprives this court of the opportunity to study these records, and in the absence of such showing, this court must conclude that the court below found ample evidence in these records, substantiating the claim of counsel for the receiver respecting the volume, importance, and necessity of their labors.

Any attorney of experience and standing well knows the labor entailed upon counsel responsible for the administration of an estate of the magnitude of this, and how such labors are greatly enlarged and made more onerous when the insolvent has been as reckless and improvident and careless as the record sufficiently shows the bankrupt to have been, and how such labors are further increased when the assets are crowded to an early sale. The sworn statement in behalf of the objecting creditors that the attorneys of the receiver "rendered no services that added to the estate of the bankrupt, * * * that the time consumed by them could not have exceeded one day" (record, p. 78) shows an ignorance of the duties and labors of attorneys employed in the administration of insolvent estates, and lack of investigation—or a bias—making correct conclusion impossible, which reduce the statement to an absurdity.

In passing upon the question of allowances, the district judge found as facts:

That on March 20, 1911, on petition theretofore filed, an order was entered allowing the receiver $2,500.00 and his attorneys $2,500.00; that on April 4, 1911, certain creditors filed objections to said allowances and thereupon an order was entered that the receiver and his attorneys show cause April 10, 1911, why said order of March 20, 1911, should not be set aside, the petition previously filed to stand as the application required by law, said sum of $2,500.00 to be treated as the compensation asked by the receiver; that ten days' notice by mail to all creditors, specifying the amount asked be given of the receiver's application for his allowance, and that objections to the allowance asked by the receiver be heard at a time to be fixed by the court after the giving of such notice, and that objections to the allowance of the attorneys of the receiver be heard at the same time; that thereupon, pursuant to order, the refereee in charge of said bankruptcy proceeding gave notice of at least ten days to all creditors by mail to the respective addresses of said creditors as same appeared in the list of the creditors of the bankrupt and as filed with the papers in the case, the said notice reciting that the receiver had made application for an allowance of $2,500.00 for his services, and that a hearing upon such application would be had before the court May 15, 1911, on which last date hearing was postponed and thereafter adjourned by successive orders of continuance until July 10, 1911, when the matter was submitted, with leave to both parties to make such additional showing in writing as might be desired; that at such hearing the matter of the compensation of Sutcliffe Baxter as trustee as well as receiver, and of the attorneys of the receiver and trustee, was submitted by the creditors and these respondents to the court for decision; that the total amount of cash actually disbursed by said Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver, was the sum of $61,312.87, and the total cash received by him as trustee and in process of disbursement is $54,496.00, and that said amounts are the sums to be considered by the court, pursuant to stipulation of the parties, in determining the said matter of compensation; that the total number of creditors of said bankrupt estate is at least 310, and the total indebtedness at least $164,777.58; that in response to the notice given by the referee, fixing the date for hearing the receiver's petition for allowance, not to exceed 61 creditors, whose claims do not exceed $42,164.50, appeared in opposition to the said allowance (elsewhere in the record, at page 131, it appears that one of those creditors, the Tootle-Campbell Company, with a claim of $26,000.00, authorized no objection to the allowance to the receiver's counsel, thus leaving only 60 creditors, having claims not exceeding $16,164.50, as objectors to the attorney's allowance), and that no objection was made or filed by or in behalf of 249 creditors whose claims aggregate $122,613.03, the same constituting the majority of said creditors; that the recitals of the receiver's petition for allowance and the papers filed in support thereof and the reports made by the receiver and trustee are true, and that the said Sutcliffe Baxter, as receiver, conducted the business of the bankrupt(record, pp. 99–101); that the entire showing made by the objecting creditors was candidly met by counter-affidavits which convinced the court that the receiver, his attorneys, and employes transacted the business with fidelity and with due regard for the best interests of all concerned, and that they earned commendation as well as compensation (record, p. 57); that compensation should be allowed Mr. Baxter, in a lump sum, to be computed on the basis of the maximum prescribed by the bankruptcy law, for all of his services as trustee of the estate as well as receiver, and an equal amount to his attorneys for their compensation. (Record, p. 59.)

The district judge accordingly found Mr. Baxter entitled to compensation as receiver on $61,312.87, for the performance of his ordinary duties as such officer, at the rate provided in section 48a of the bankruptcy act, and to extra compensation at the same rate on said $61,312.87 for conducting the business of the bankrupt as receiver, and further found him entitled to compensation on $54,496.00 for his services as trustee to the closing of the estate at the rate provided in section 48a, and further found the attorneys of the receiver entitled to an equal amount for their services to the date of the closing of the estate. (Record, p. 101.)

Accordingly an order was entered by the district judge on September 23, 1911, allowing the sum of $2,201.20 to Mr. Baxter in full of all services rendered and to be rendered by him, and the same sum to his attorneys in full of all services rendered and to be rendered by them. (Record, p. 102.)

That is the order sought to be reviewed and revised by this court. (Record, p. 5.)

We have deemed it incumbemt upon us to make the foregoing statement at the risk of being tedious, because the transcript of record is neither chronologically nor logically arranged, nor does the brief of appellants accurately present the necessary history of the case.

In passing we must mention the statement in appellant's brief (p. 21) that an allowance of $2,201.20 was made to the receiver's attorney (record, p. 102) and an additional $500.00 was allowed to the attorneys of the trustee (record, p. 144). The statement is a half truth. The $500.00 allowance to the trustee's attorneys was ordered April 19, 1911. (Record, pp. 144, 151.) Notwithstanding said order, and the fact that the statutory time for appeal had expired, the trustee's attorneys thereafter voluntarily submitted the matter of their fees to the district judge for determination (as did Mr. Baxter, also, his fees as trustee), when the question as to the fees of the receiver and his attorneys was raised by appellants, and Judge Hanford's order (entered September 23, 1911), was that the $2,201.20 should be in full of all fees. (Record, pp. 59, 100–102.) The fact is incontestable (and well known to opposing counsel) that the attorneys finally had in all only the $2,201.20. We are at a loss to know why the statement should have been made. But even if opposing counsel should say that a total of $2,701.20 has been retained (which they will not), that is not the question here. The sole question here for determination is whether or not the order of September 23, 1911 (record, pp. 98–102) shall stand. This court can certainly trust Judge Hanford to enforce his own orders.

We must also call the court's attention to that preliminary recital in the district judge's order dismissing the creditors' petition for vacation of sale, wherein it is stated that the receiver and his attorneys appeared "to resist said petition." (Record, p. 139.) This is an error which is at once clearly apparent when it is remembered that the hearing before the district judge as to the sale was entirely upon the record as certified by the referee, and that neither the memorandum decision of the district judge, nor the referee's record and certificate show any opposition whatever by Mr. Baxter or his counsel. (Record, pp. 60, 95–97.)

What has been above stated applies also to the last paragraph on page 9 of appellants' brief, the statements in said paragraph being purely volunteer and meriting criticism, and we challenge their accuracy and propriety.

The objecting creditors attack the allowance to receiver and his counsel largely upon the ground that they had been negligent and careless in the preparation of the inventory. Of course, we were compelled to defend ourselves against this charge. An issue was also raised between the Anisfield Company, the purchaser, and the objecting creditors regarding the correctness of the receiver's inventory, and that fact alone is the basis of opposing counsel's assumption set forth on page 9 of their brief, that the trustee and his counsel were hostile to the efforts of the objecting creditors to vacate the sale, and that any request upon them to initiate the proceeding would have been fruitless. Such a deduction is wholly unjustified from the mere fact that the receiver and his counsel were forced to defend the correctness of the inventory. We can not permit such a statement to go unchallenged, because it may have the effect, even though mentioned in connection with the controversy between the Anisfield Company and the objecting creditors, of leading the court to believe that the trustee and his counsel were not loyal to their trust.

Situations arise when the trustee and his counsel may in good faith differ from creditors regarding the advisability of pursuing a certain line of action. The courts have recognized such contingency, and have held that if a trustee refuses to commence litigation recommended by the creditors because in his opinion the results will be unfavorable, the trustee may tender to such creditors the right to wage such proceeding in his name, with proper indemnity to the estate against loss or damage which may be sustained by reason of such litigation. If the trustee refuses this privilege, the creditors may appeal to the court for an order to that effect, and such relief will always be granted.

What there is in this proceeding to justify the objecting creditors' insinuation that the trustee and his counsel were recreant to their trust, and that this fact should enter into the consideration of the court in fixing their compensation? Does the record show that any demand was ever made upon the trustee and his counsel to institute proceedings to vacate the sale to the Anisfield Company, and that such demand was refused? The record affimatively shows just the contrary. (Record, pp. 96–97.) If such demand had been made, is there any reason to believe that the trustee would not have been willing to let the action be commenced in his name and under the very direction of creditors' counsel, to insure that is was prosecuted in the best faith?

ARGUMENT.

The question presented by this case is stated by opposing counsel to be "the propriety of the allowance made to the receiver and trustee and to his attorneys," which they contend "is in excess of the amount contemplated by the statute." (Appellants' brief, p. 7.)

1. As to the attorneys' fees.

With respect to the attorneys' fees no explanation is offered as to the contention that they are "in excess of the amount contemplated by the statute." The statute is absolutely silent upon the question of attorneys' fees. Such fees must be reasonable, and what is reasonable is within the discretion of the court.

The court below had before it all of the records and files in this proceeding, which after all are the best evidence of the volume, character, importance, and necessity of the work performed by the attorneys, and this court, in the absence of these records and files, which guided the court below in its determination, cannot hold that there was any abuse of discretion on the part of the district judge in allowing the amount recited in his final order.

(In re Irwin, C. C. A., Pa., 23 A. B. R., 487; 174 Fed. 642; In re Hoffman, D. C., Wis., 23 A. B. R., 19; 173 Fed., 234; In re Berkowitz, Referee N. J., 22 A. B. R., 236; In re Huddleston, D. C. Ga., 21 A. B. R., 669; 167 Fed., 428.)

In re Hoffman (D. C. Wis., 23 A. B. R., 19; 173 Fed., 234), where counsel for the trustee attempted to recover $6,000 in concealed assets by litigation which was unsuccessful, $1,500 was allowed for fees.

In the matter of Berkowitz (Referee N. J., 22 A. B. R., 236), where an estate of $15,000 had been created by counsel for trustee, they were allowed $5,000. The court said on page 238:

"In my opinion the bankruptcy courts should see that the allowance for such services is sufficient to encourage like services in other cases, and to encourage other attorneys of like ability and energy to come into bankruptcy proceedings."

In re Huddleston (D. C. Ga., 21 A. B. R., 669; 167 Fed., 428) the property of the bankrupt brought $2,500. The attorneys for the receiver were allowed $300. The court (Judge Speer), on page 671, said.

"This, it is claimed, is exorbitant; but in view of the fact that they not only acted as attorneys for the bankrupt and for the trustee, but that they acted as auctioneer, * * * and rendered other valuable services to the trustee, while the fee is liberal, I do not regard it as at all exorbitant."

Further, in commenting on the former case of In re Macon Sash, Door & Lumber Co. (Smith v. Cooper, 9 A. B. R., 756; 120 Fed., 231; 56 C. C. A., 578) where an order was entered below reducing attorney's fees to 10 per cent upon the amount in the hands of the trustee, Judge Speer (on page 672) said:

"These views of the court were reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit in the case of Smith v. Cooper (9 A. B. R., 761; 120 Fed., 230; 56 C. C. A., 578), Judge Pardee rendering the opinion in the following language:

"'In considering the master's report the learned judge seems to concede that for the services actually rendered the amount allowed by the master was not in excess of a reasonable fee; but for considerations of economy * * * he considered it proper to reduce the amount recommended by the master, and allow only a small percentage, not of the amount actually recovered, but upon the amount left in the hands of the trustee * * * .While we agree with the learned judge in the bankruptcy court that to aid the parties and under the law there should be an economical administration of the bankrupt's estate, we are unable to concur with him in his reasons for reducing the fee to be allowed appellants in this case.'

"The allowance made by this court was thus increased on appeal by 500 per cent, without any regard to the balance in the hands of the trustee for general creditors, and the fee allowed was that reported by the master and amounted to $1,000 on a $2,500 recovery."

But even if the entire record and files had been brought here, this court will not disturb the finding of the lower court that the fees allowed the attorneys were reasonable, as the finding of the trial judge, made in the exercise of a sound discretion, is conclusive upon the appellate court, unless abuse of discretion is clearly and convincingly shown. In this connection we desire again to cite the case of In re Irwin (C. C. A. Pa., 23 A. B. R., 487; 174 Fed., 642), where the court, on page 489, said:

"In considering the services performed, the district judge had power to review the facts on which the referee had fixed the fee in each case at $37.50. It concluded that a reasonable fee in each case was $100. On the petition to this court to revise, we can consider only questions of law. We are not at liberty to disturb the district court's findings on the facts. The orders of the district court, so far as they relate to attorney's fees, will therefore be affirmed."

We again call the attention of the court to the fact that the allowance of attorneys' fees made by the lower court covers not only their services on behalf of the receiver, but their services on behalf of the trustee, to the final closing of the estate.

2. As to the fees of the receiver and trustee.

The district judge allowed Mr. Baxter full statutory compensation for his services as receiver in conducting the business of the bankrupt, and also full statutory compensation for performing his ordinary duties as receiver and in addition full statutory compensation for his services as trustee, said fees computed on the basis set forth in section 48a.

The contention of appellants is that said fees are in excess of the amount contemplated by the statute.

That contention requires an examination and discussion of the act.

The act of 1898 provided, and the present act provides, that the administration of bankrupt estates shall be by a trustee, or by trustees, appointed by the creditors (bankruptcy act, section 44 and 47). Receivers are to be appointed when necessary to protect and preserve the property and in cases of emergency, and these receivers may carry on the business whenever the best interests of the estate require it (section 2, subdivisions 3 and 5).

The original act allowed to trustees no extra compensation for any service. That was a great injustice which the amendment of 1903 sought to remedy by allowing additional compensation for conducting the business.

(Remington on Bakruptcy, Vol. II, pp. 1303–1305.)

The compensation of receivers was left in the discretion of the court even after the amendment of 1903.

(In re Kirkpatrick, receiver, C. C. A. Mich., 17 A. B. R., 597; 148 Fed., 811; In re Martin Borgeson Co., D. C. N. Y., 18 A. B. R., 178; 151 Fed., 780.)

That led to abuses. Estates were kept for unreasonably long periods in the hands of receivers (with compensation allowable in the unlimited discretion of the court) rather than in the hands of trustees elected by the creditors, with compensation controlled by the act. Therefore the amendment of 1910 was enacted limiting the compensation of receivers to that of trustees. The reasons impelling the enactment of that amendment and its spirit and purpose are important in applying the amendment to the case at bar, and we therefore have deemed it essential to place before the court the substance of the report of the Senate Judiciary Committee of the Sixty-first Congress, second session, resulting in the enactment of the amendment, as follows:

"As the law originally stood there was no provision whatever regulating the compensation of receivers, although the compensation of trustees (* * * for performance of their ordinary duties) was most carefully and economically prescribed and limited. The idea of the framers of the law of 1898 undoubtedly was that the administration of bankrupt estates would be placed in the hands of trustees who were to be elected by creditors and whose compensation was carefully limited. However, it was necessary to provide for the contingency, frequently occurring, of a period of time elapsing after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy and before the election of the trustee, during which interval assets might be in danger of destruction and depreciation, and for this purpose it was provided that receivers might be appointed 'when absolutely necessary for the preservation of the estate' and that these receivers (as well as the trustees afterward) might carry on the business whenever the best interests of the parties required it, though only for 'limited periods.' While the compensation of trustees (at least their 'ordinary' compensation) was carefully limited, yet the compensation of receivers was left wholly to the discretion of the court, a defect which the amendment of 1903 did not correct.

"Such unlimited discretion in the allowance of compensation has offered opportunity for certain serious abuses to creep in. Indeed, in some sections of the country the appointment of receivers and the conducting of the business by them have become the rule rather than the intended exception, a custom which has resulted in estates being kept for prolonged periods, sometimes, indeed, for almost their entire administration, in the hands of receivers appointed by the courts, with compensation allowable in the unlimited discretion of the courts, rather than in the hands of trustees elected by creditors, with compensation carefully and economically limited.

"As to the matter of additional compensation for the conducting of the business by the receiver or trustee, the act of 1898, as originally passed, gave no such additional compensation. This was an injustice, because the conducting of the business of the insolvent is frequently necessary, particularly when adjudications are contested or when the assets consist of an active business which can best be sold as a going concern.

"The amendment of 1903 sought to correct this injustice by an amendment of section 2, clause 5, of the act. * * * The courts have construed the amendment of 1903 as allowing additional compensation for conducting the business, * * * but have held that there is no limit upon the amount allowable * * * except the discretion of the court. (In re Shiebler & Co., 23 A. B. R., 162; 174 Fed., 336.)

"A careful reading of the proposed amendments forming new clauses d and e of section 48, in conjunction with section 48a of the law as the latter clause continues to stand, * * * will exhibit fully the method proposed to be adopted by the present amendment for compensating receivers for their ordinary duties and for giving additional compensation to trustees or receivers for the conducting of business.

"As a basis from which to start, the established rate of compensation already prescribed in section 48a for trustees for the performance of their ordinary duties is adopted. Trustees for their ordinary services already are compensated in section 48a of the act by way of commissions on moneys actually disbursed by them, the rate being 6 per cent on the first $500, 4 per cent, on the next $1,000, 2 per cent on the next $8,500, and 1 per cent above $10,000, averaging in an estate of $50,000 less than 3 per cent on the whole, in an estate of $10,000 less than 2½ per cent on the whole, and in an estate of $20,000 less than 2 per cent,—a very low rate of commission.

"The present amendment fixes the maximum compensation that can be allowed receivers for the performance of their ordinary duties at precisely the same rate, instead of leaving it to the unlimited discretion of the court. It also fixes the extra compensation, whether it be to the receiver or trustee, for the conducting of the business, to once again this same rate.

"So that, at best, the ordinary and extraordinary compensation taken together, in the event that both a receiver and a trustee have successively had charge of the estate and even have both conducted the business, can not exceed four times the amount allowable to a trustee by section 48a of the act for the performance of his ordinary duties. * * *

"The changes proposed will, it is thought, tend to prevent extravagance in the administration of insolvent estates and to remove the temptation which now exists toward the creation of prolonged receiverships, and will also tend to put the administration of bankrupt estates promptly into the hands of trustees elected by the creditors, in accordance with the actual design of the framers of the bankruptcy act, rather than in the hands of receivers appointed by the courts." (Report No. 691, Senate Judiciar Committee of the 61st Congress, second session.)

(Rem. on Bankruptcy, Vol. III, sec. 2116, pp. 640–642.)

Accordingly Congress enacted the amendment of 1910, the material portion whereof as to this case is sound in clauses d and e of section 48, as follows.

d. Receivers or marshals appointed pursuant to section two, subdivision three, of this act shall receive for their services, payable after they are rendered, compensation by way of commissions upon the moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, including lien holders, by them, and also upon the moneys turned over by them or afterwards realized by the trustees from property turned over in kind by them to the trustees, as the court may allow, not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than one thousand five hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars, and one per centum on moneys in excess of ten thousand dollars: Provided, That in case of the confirmation of a composition such commissions shall not exceed one-half of one per centum of the amount to be paid creditors on such composition; Provided further, That when the receiver or marshal acts as a mere custodian and does not carry on the business of the bankrupt as provided in clause five of section two of this act, he shall not receive nor be allowed in any form or guise more than two per centum on the first thousand dollars or less, and one-half of one per centum on all above one thousand dollars on moneys disbursed by him or turned over by him to the trustee and on moneys subsequently realized from property turned over by him in kind to the trustee: Provided further, That before the allowance of compensation notice of application therefor, specifying the amount asked, shall be given to creditors in the manner indicated in section fifty-eight of this act.

e. Where the business is conducted by trustees, marshals, or receivers, as provided in clause five of section two of this act, the court may allow such officers additional compensation for such services by way of commissions upon the moneys disbursed or turned over to any person, including lien holders, by them, and in cases of receivers or marshals, also upon the moneys turned over by them or afterwards realized by the trustees from property turned over in kind by them to the trustees; such commissions not to exceed six per centum on the first five hundred dollars or less, four per centum on moneys in excess of five hundred dollars and less than one thousand five hundred dollars, two per centum on moneys in excess of one thousand five hundred dollars and less than ten thousand dollars, and one per centum on moneys in excess of ten thousand dollars: Provided, That in case of the confirmation of a composition such commissions shall not exceed one-half of one per centum of the amount to be paid creditors on such composition: Provided further, That before the allowance of the compensation notice of application therefor, specifying the amount asked, shall be given to creditors in the manner indicated in section fifty-eight of this act.

On this branch of the case, the propositions set forth in appellants' brief (as we understand them) are as follows:

First. The act requires economical administration and the court must construe same accordingly.

Second. Mr. Baxter was not authorized to conduct or carry on the business, and did not do so, but was a mere custodian; and he therefore is entitled to receiver's fees as a custodian only.

The first proposition we concede. It is too plain for argument. Not only is it manifest from the spirit and purpose of the act, but it sufficiently appears in the letter as well; and it has been declared in many decisions. We concede the proposition and we contend that the allowances made to the receiver and trustee and his counsel do not violate the spirit of economy which all parties agree should prevail in the administration of bankrupt estates. The extent and character of respondent's services have already been discussed in detail in the statement of the case and need not be repeated. The total amount of money which passed through the receiver's hands as stipulated by the parties and as found by the court (record, p. 100), was $61,312.87. The allowances made to Mr. Baxter for all his services, both as receiver and as trustee, amount to exactly 3.6 per cent of that sum, and the allowances made to his attorneys to cover their services during the entire administration of the estate to the final discharge of the trustee likewise amount to 3.6 per cent of the total sum. Certainly this percentage can not be regarded as excessive. We have found no decision which would designate this percentage as anything but economical. In this connection what Judge Holt said In re Sully (13 A. B. R., 22; 142 Fed., 895) with reference to allowances to receivers is equally applicable to allowances made attorneys:

"The amounts paid for services in administering the bankruptcy act should never be lavish or extravagant, and should always be rigidly scrutinized, but I know of no reason why they should not be reasonable and adequate. I think it unwise to establish a scale of compensation for services in administering bankrupt estates at so low a rate that the best class of lawyers will refuse to practice at the bankruptcy bar and the best class of business men refuse to serve as trustees or receivers."

In the second proposition appellants assert that Mr. Baxter as receiver was a mere custodian; that "it is not pretended that the bankruptcy court authorized the receiver to conduct the business of the bankrupt, and the receiver did not conduct the business of the bankrupt, unless his action in keeping open the store for a scant half day, marshaling the assets, and, after taking an inventory, selling them, can be so construed." (Brief, p. 15.) This assertion is made without citation of authority and without setting forth the facts except as a portion of the above quotation may be deemed a recital of fact.

The facts set out in our statement of the case, where the details of the services rendered are shown, establish that Mr. Baxter as receiver did conduct the business of the bankrupt, and the district judge so found. They also show that the receiver was authorized to conduct and carry on the business. There is no question about the original order so providing, and the record shows it (p. 110).

All the authorities defining the word "custodian" use substantially the same words:

"Custodian—A keeper, a curator." (Worcester.)

"Custodian—One who has care or custody, as of some public building; a keeper." (Webster.)

"Custody—The care and possession of a thing." (Bouvier, p. 463.)

"The words 'charge' and 'custody' are frequently used as synonymous. The lexicographers give them as synonyms." (State v. Clark, 86 Me., 194–195; 29 Atl., 984.)

"'Custody' means keeping, and implies responsibility for the protection and preservation of the thing in custody." (Martin v. U. S., 168 Fed., 198.)

The expression "conducting business" or carrying on business" is also clearly defined.

"Conduct (as a verb)—To carry on; to manage; to regulate." (8 Cyc., 561.)

"Conduct (as a verb)—To * * * have the direction of; to manage; to direct; to carry on." (Webster.)

"To 'conduct' is defined by Worcester as to carry on, to manage, to regulate; and hence the use of the term 'as heretofore conducted' * * * refers to how the fishery was carried on, managed and regulated, and has no reference to the extent of the fishery, where the extent of the grant was clearly defined." (Harvey v. Vandergrift, 89 Pa. St., 346.)

"An order of the court directing a receiver to 'conduct and run' a hotel is sufficient authority to perform acts necessary to the conduct of the business, and hence to make purchase of merchandise on credit." (Highland Av. & B. R. Ry. v. Thornton (Ala.), 16 So., 699.)

"The 'conduct of business' of necessity includes necessary agents or servants." (People v. Feitner, 61 N. E., 762.)

The words "conducting business" and "carrying on business" seem to be used by the courts generally as synonymous. See the following:

"The phrase 'power to carry on the business' in a will giving the executor power to conduct the business * * * was construed to imply * * * to carry on all business interests." (Furst v. Armstrong, 51 Atl., 996.)

"Receivers were appointed on an involuntary petition, and for some time 'carried on' the business of the bankrupt. * * * The receiver is not, strictly speaking, performing a part of the duties of a trustee. Under the involuntary petition, the receiver's duty is often to maintain, as far as possible, the continuity of the respondent's affairs, so that if no adjudication is made, his property and business may be redelivered to him damaged as little as possible by the proceedings in bankruptcy." (Re Richards et al., 11 A. B. R., 581; 127 Fed., 772.)

"But two exceptions, therefore, remain; the first of which is directed to a claim made by the trustee * * * incurred in attending and 'conducting' the sale of the bankrupt stock. * * * To accomplish this the trustee had to be on hand every day for a period of nearly three weeks. * * * The bankruptcy act expressly authorizes the business of bankrupts to be 'continued' for a limited period by the trustee when deemed advisable." (Re Dimm & Co., 17 A. B. R., 119; D. C. Pa.)

"All the courts sustain the proposition that the court in bankruptcy has power to authorize a receiver to * * * 'conduct' the business for the purpose of preserving the bankrupt's estate. * * *

"The business was 'conducted' by the trustee. * * * By the general order of the court he was authorized to 'continue' the business." (Re Restein, 20 A. B. R., 832; 162 Fed., 986; D. C. Pa.)

Even adopting the narrow construction of counsel for appellants that "conducting the business" means keeping the doors open for admission of customers and the sale of merchandise at retail, the receiver in this case conducted the business during the greater portion of the day on which he was appointed. His total cash receipts as a result of that day's business are shown in his report to have been approximately $1,026. (Record, p. 20.) We contend, however, that the meaning of the work "conduct" in the connection used in the bankruptcy act is not confined to sale of merchandise at retail. The labors of the receiver in this case, involving as they did the collection of accounts, the adjustment of errors over merchandise, the employment of between forty and fifty employees for a number of days, the transfer of insurance policies and the writing of new insurance in an amount fully covering the assets, and the solution of many other problems which must naturally arise in connection with an estate of the magnitude of this, certainly necessitated close supervision and intelligent business judgment. The receiver undoubtedly conducted the business of the bankrupt if the word is given the meaning suggested in the authorities heretofore cited.

The amendment to the bankruptcy act permits the court to allow to the receiver who conducts the business of the bankrupt additional compensation for such service, according to the scale provided in section 48. The act does not make any distinction between a receiver conducting a business one day and a receiver conducting a business during a longer period of time. If the narrow construction urged by opposing counsel is accepted as to the significance of the words "conducting business," the appellant's counsel can not deny that the receiver conducted the business at least during the first day of his appointment. His services in that connection, even if rendered for less than a day, give him the right to receive the additional compensation for such services authorized by section 2 (5) of the act. The scale of such compensation is set forth in section 48, that scale being not to exceed six per cent on the first $500; four per cent on moneys in excess of $500 and less than $1,500; two per cent on moneys in excess of $1,500 and less than $10,000; and one per cent on moneys in excess of $10,000. These figures represent the maximum percentage which the court may allow for additional services rendered by the receiver and trustee, and it is within the discretion of the court to allow a lesser percentage.

We contend, therefore, that the receiver having conducted the business under the statute, became entitled to this extra compensation, and to have the percentage within the figures above mentioned. The court may in its discretion take into consideration the length of time during which the receiver conducted said business, the amount of money he so realized, the advantage to the estate, the size and importance of the business, and the responsibility undertaken by the receiver, in determining whether the receiver should be awarded the maximum of such percentage or an amount less than the maximum. What we desire to emphasize is that the receiver unquestionably rendered such services as entitled him to additional compensation, not according to the scale provided for a mere custodian, but according to the scale which it was in the discretion of the court to allow for services rendered by the receiver in conducting or carrying on the business.

If the court concedes our position to be correct, then the only remaining ground upon which counsel can criticise the action of the court below is that the court allowed the maximum fee. This court, however, will not disturb the allowance made by the court below where such allowance is within the discretion of the court and the allowance was within the percentage authorized by the bankruptcy act.

"The question of allowance of compensation to receivers and attorneys is largely committed to the sound discretion of the court under whose direction the service was performed." (Dunlap Hardware Co. v. Huddleston, C. C. A. 5th Cir., 21 A. B. R., 731, 167 Fed., 433.)

The appellants concede that the amount which they contend constitutes an overpayment of fees to the receiver and trustee and to his counsel is not a large sum, and their desire for a reversal of the order of the court below in this respect seems based, not so much on any serious complaint of improvident allowance, as upon the desire to obtain from this court a rule which shall guide the bankruptcy courts in this jurisdiction in allowances to be made in estates hereafter. It appears to us that this is an idle request, for no rule can be formulated respecting the amount of compensation to be allowed to a receiver or trustee or to his counsel. In fixing such allowance many things must be considered, including the size and character of the estate, the nature and importance of the business transacted, the intricacy and difficulty of the legal and business problems involved, the results obtained, and many other circumstances peculiar to each individual case. The admission by counsel that the overpayment of fees is not large and is not the primary reason for this review (brief, p. 14) is tantamount to an admission that the court below did not abuse its discretion in making the allowances.

Furthermore, of what practical benefit would it be to the estate if this court should hold that the court below in making its allowances should not have done so upon the theory that these allowances should cover the future services of the trustee and the future services of his attorneys. If this court should hold that the allowances as made by the court below should have been based only upon the services as performed up to the time of the application for compensation, and should send this case back to the district court with directions to consider and allow compensation only to the time of the filing of the application therefor, it would simply mean that the trustee and his attorneys must make new application to the referee for compensation for their services subsequent to the appointment of the trustee. Conceding, for the argument, irregularity in the court fixing the compensation at a point, say, midway in the administration of the estate, and requiring that this compensation should cover services to be thereafter rendered by both the trustee and his counsel to the point of final closing of this estate, still, if this court should believe that the total amount allowed by the court below was not excessive, taking into consideration the future services to be rendered by the trustee and his counsel, this court should not disturb the judgment of the lower court. There is perhaps an equal probability that the trustee and his counsel might have earned even larger compensation had the allowances been made after all the services had been rendered.

"Unless the error be prejudicial it shall be disregarded." (Rem. on Bankruptcy, Vol. III, p. 826, sec. 3010.)

"An omission quite general, and not at all peculiar to this case, arises from the fact, to which we have referred, that parties seem to overlook that it is not sufficient to show that a certain ruling was technically erroneous, but that it must also be shown that it was prejudicial, or at least that there is a presumption that it was prejudicial, within the liberal rules of the Supreme Court in this respect. With all the various matters brought to our attention, we do not recall that there was a single one as to which it was pointed out to us that the alleged error was prejudicial or that there was any presumption that it was so." (Jacobs v. United States, 20 A. B. R., 550; 161 Fed., 694; C. C. A. Mass.)

"Likewise, where only moot questions are involved, the petition for review will be dismissed." (Rem. on Bankruptcy, Vol. III, p. 826, sec. 3010; In re Altieri, 19 A. B. R., 459; C. C. A. N. Y.)

No objection at all has ever been made to the allowances by the great majority of creditors, either in number or amount. Due notice of the application for compensation was given by the referee. Only sixty-one creditors (with claims aggregating $42,164.50) opposed the allowance to the receiver and trustee, and only sixty creditors (with claims aggregating $16,164.50) opposed the allowance to the attorneys. No objection whatever is made or filed by or in behalf of 249 creditors whose claims aggregate $122,613.03. The total number of creditors is 310 and the total indebtedness $164,777.58.

In conclusion we desire to point out that no criticism has been made by the appellants concerning the appointment of the receiver. The necessity of such appointment seems to have been admitted. Likewise, all of the acts and doings of the receiver, barring the controversy over the correctness of the inventory, seem to have been approved by the objecting creditors. That the receiver made a conscientious and earnest effort to consult and follow the best judgment of all the creditors who could be reached, and that he was unselfish in his efforts to promote the interests of the creditors and refused to take advantage of the opportunity to claim for himself larger compensation, is shown by his act in closing the store at the conclusion of the first day's business instead of keeping its doors open, as he had discretion to do, and is evident from all of the remaining facts shown in the record. It is not claimed for him that he is entitled to any larger compensation than the maximum prescribed by the bankruptcy act, but we do claim that his conduct in the entire proceeding has been fair, open, and honorable; that his services have been unusually efficient; and that he is entitled to receive at the hands of the court as liberal compensation as the bankruptcy act will permit. The court below did not go beyond the limit fixed by the bankruptcy act. It did not abuse its discretion in making such allowance as was made. So far as that is concerned, the percentage of fees allowed the receiver and trustee under any circumstances is so moderate that it is no exaggeration to state that it is simply impossible for the court to abuse its discretion in allowing the maximum of such compensation.

It seems to us that the order sought to be reviewed should be affirmed.

Respectfully submitted.

LEOPOLD M. STERN,
WALTER A. MCCLURE,
MCCLURE & MCCLURE,
Attorneys for Respondents other than John Anisfield Company.

EXHIBIT No. 78.

Bond subscription.

A. L. Flewelling, appraiser	10,000	R. M. Hopkins, Seattle	2,000
J. W. Clise, banker, Seattle	15,000	H. M. Walthew, Seattle	500
Thomas Burke, attorney, Seattle	10,000	W. R. Rust, theater manager, Tacoma	12,500
M. B. Haynes, Seattle	5,000	Chester Thorne, banker, Tacoma	12,500
Kerr & McCord, Seattle	5,000	Grant T. Hicks, doctor, Tacoma	2,500
H. K. Owens, Seattle	5,000	Fred T. Fogg, attorney, Tacoma	1,000
A. E. Hanford, Seattle	5,000	F. S. Blattner, merchant, Tacoma	1,000
H. C. Henry, railroad contractor, Seattle	5,000	H. Winchester, merchant, Tacoma	2,500
Clarence Hanford, Seattle	5,000	C. A. Sayer, merchant, Tacoma	2,500
Lester Turner, banker, Seattle	5,000	C. McCutcheon, doctor, Tacoma	1,000
J. B. Howe, attorney, Seattle	2,500	Ellis Fletcher, merchant, Tacoma	1,000
C. H. Hanford, Seattle	2,500	A. C. MacGinnis, merchant, Tacoma	1,000
J. E. Chilberg, banker, Seattle	10,000	William Clark, merchant, Tacoma	1,000
J. M. Frink, manufacturer, Seattle	5,000	G. W. Bullard	500
Hanford & DeVeuve, Seattle	10,000	L. D. Campbell, doctor, Tacoma	2,000
T. J. Gorman, fish packer, Seattle	5,000	G. C. Schemp, merchant, Tacoma	1,000
Gerald Frink, manufacturer, Seattle	5,000	George J. Smith, merchant, Tacoma	500
Michael Earles, Seattle	5,000	R. J. Davis, merchant, Tacoma	1,000
C. E. Patton, lumberman, Seattle	5,000	J. M. Ashton, attorney, Tacoma	1,000
W. D. Mackay, real estate, Seattle	2,500	J. J. Toltz, Tacoma	5,000
Alfred Battle, attorney, Seattle	5,000	F. H. Huggins, capitalist, Tacoma	10,000
J. H. McGraw, exporter, Seattle	5,000
W. T. Dovel, attorney	1,000
E. C. Hughes, attorney, Seattle	1,000
Lester Turner, banker, Seattle	3,500

EXHIBIT No. 78½.

United States circuit court for the western district of Washington. Benjamin H. Greenwood, a minor, plaintiff, vs. Puget Mill Company, defendant. No. 1354.

RULING BY THE COURT UPON DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NONSUIT.

The COURT. There is no doubt but what if this plaintiff were a person of mature years and judgment the case would fall directly within the ruling of the Supreme Court of the United States in what is commonly stated as the Wheland case that went up from one of the Alaska mills, where recovery was claimed on the ground that a foreman in charge of the mill ordered the man who was injured to go into a place of danger to do a dangerous thing, and it was held by the Supreme Court that there was no legal liability on the part of the employer because that foreman was no more than a fellow servant, and they could not require a fellow employee to do a dangerous thing at the risk of the employer. This case involves just the difference I have indicated, and that is that this plaintiff is a boy sixteen years old. Now, from his own testimony, he knew the danger of coming in contact with that revolving shaft. His testimony is that when he stepped upon the sawdust which gave way under him and brought him down upon the shaft he took no thought of the shaft being there. It is simply a question whether on account of his immature years he can be supposed to be there at the risk of his employer—that an employer, by reason of taking a young boy and putting him in that place, must be responsible for injuries that happened to him.

I think this motion ought to be granted for failure of proof to sustain what is alleged in the complaint—in the amended complaint. The wrong that is specifically charged here is that this plaintiff was ordered to go aloft among the machinery, and that there was no safe or convenient method provided for him to get up aloft, and that he was ordered to go up on this pile of sawdust and that he slipped and fell. Now, it appears from the testimony that there was a ladder there by which Pearson got up aloft; he did not go up on the sawdust. It appears by the testimony that there was no order given except a mere motion, which was not certainly a specific order to climb up on that loose sawdust, and the evidence is that he did not slip and fall, but he stepped over from a plank upon the sawdust which was heaped up above the revolving shaft. I think that there is more than an immaterial variance. There is a total failure of proof to prove the substantial ground of the charge in the complaint that there was no safe means provided to get aloft and that there was a specific order to go up on the sawdust, which the plaintiff's testimony all disproves.

Mr. BROWN. I call the court's attention to the fact that there was two belts off and one man was going up to one and the boy was ordered to go up to the other one, and there was no way provided to get up to this particular belt.

The COURT. Well, I do not know how that may be, but I can hardly be mistaken about the fact that there was no order given to go up on the sawdust.

I suppose that this court is bound by the decision of the supreme court in giving consideration to this factory act which changes the law in regard to the assumption of risk, although this court has previously declined an invitation to amend the work of the legislature by making a penal statute effective to change the rights of the parties in a civil action. I can find nothing in the statute that indicated in the remotest degree an intention in the legislative mind to change the rights of the parties in a civil action for injury. There was a plain declaration in making it unlawful to operate machinery which could be protected by being boxed or covered, without being boxed or covered, and providing a penalty which is applicable not only to the employer but to every employee—every person who operates and carries on the operation of dangerous machinery without its being protected as the law requires is subject to a fine and punishment; which would indicate that the legislature, instead of intending to encourage damage litigation, had proposed to have the government take a hand and put a check to the exposure of persons, even those who should voluntarily expose themselves to the risk of being injured by the operation of their own machinery. It would be a legitimate purpose, as much as to legislate against a person committing mayhem or crippling or injuring himself. The supreme court of this State has given that statute an effect entirely different; taking away one of the defenses, which had previously existed in the law, of an employer who is sued for injury happening to an employee. There is not a word or suggestion in the statute itself that the legislature had any such intention.

I will grant the motion for a nonsuit, for the reason I have stated, that there is a failure of proof to prove what is alleged in the complaint.

EXHIBIT NO. 79.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for King County. In the the matter of the guardianship of Benjamin H. Greenwood, a minor.

PETITION FOR APPOINTMENT OF GUARDIAN.

To the Honorable W. P. BELL, judge of said court:

Now comes Sarah Small and respectfully represents to the court:

That the said Benjamin H. Greenwood was sixteen years of age in the month of November, 1904; that your petitioner is the mother of said minor and was, by a decree of this court, granted a divorce from her husband, the father of said minor, and the custody of said minor was awarded to her; that on the 17th day of December, 1904, the said minor was in the employ of the Puget Mill Company, his duties being to supply the furnace with sawdust; that while adjusting a belt on a pully, which was out of the line of his duty, he slipped and fell into a belt and received personal injuries; that in the opinion of this petitioner there is no legal liability on the part of said Puget Mill Company for said injuries; that the said Puget Mill Company have offered to pay tbe expenses attending the treatment and cure of said injuries, amounting to not exceeding the sum of five hundred dollars, for a full release and discharge on account of any claim or demands arising and growing out of, or which may hereafter arise and grow out of, said injuries.

That said minor has no other property or estate. That it the opinion of your petitioner it is for the benefit of said minor that said proposition be accepted.

Wherefore your petitioner prays an order of this court appointing her as guardian of the estate of said minor, Benjamin H. Greenwood, and that she be given authority by this court to accept the said offer of the Puget Mill Company and upon the payment of said expenses and medical services not exceeding the sum of five hundred dollars, she release and discharge the said Puget Mill Company from any and all liability arising and growing out of, or which may hereafter arise and grow out of, the said injuries received by said minor on said 17th day of December, 1904, and while in the employ of the said Puget Mill Company.

SARAH SMALL, Petitioner.

STATE OF WASHINGTON,
County of Pierce, ss:

Sarah Small, being first duly sworn on oath, says: That she is the above-named petitioner; that she has read the foregoing petition, knows the contents thereof, and says the same are true.

SARAH SMALL.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 22d day of December, 1904.

F. S. BLATTNER,
Notary Public.

To the Honorable Judge of the above entitled court:

I have read the foregoing petition and assert that I am the identical Benjamin H. Greenwood named therein; that I am under the age of 21 years, to wit: The age of 16 years; that the statements contained in said petition are true; that I request that Sarah Small, my mother, be appointed my guardian herein for the purpose of effecting the settlement recited in the foregoing petition.

B. H. GREENWOOD.

Witnesses:
C. T. MUNYON.
KENELIN WINSLOW.

Filed Dec. 23, 1904.
C. A. KOEPFLI, Clerk.

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington in and for King County. In the matter of the guardianship of Benjamin H. Greenwood, a minor.

ORDER.

This matter came on regularly to be heard on this the day of December on petition of Sarah Small for the appointment of a guardian of the estate of Benjamin H. Greenwood. It appeared to the court from the petition on file herein and from evidence produced that the said B. H. Greenwood is a minor over the age of 14 and under the age of 21 years; that he has an estate in King County consisting of an offer by the Puget Mill Company to pay the sum of $500 for a full release and discharge of any claim or demand arising or growing out of or which may hereafter arise and grow out of personal injuries received by said minor on December 17, 1904, while in the employ of said Puget Mill Company. That said minor has no other property or estate. It further appeared to the court that there is no legal liability against said Puget Mill Company because of said injuries and that the offer of said sum of $500 is for the benefit of said minor and that it is advisable that the same be accepted. It further appeared to the court that the said minor requested the appointment of said Smalley, who is his mother, as his guardian herein and that his father is divorced. It appeared further that practically all of said sum of $500 will be necessarily expended in and about the cure and treatment of said injuries.

It is therefore ordered that Sarah Smalley be and is hereby appointed as guardian of the estate of said B. H. Greenwood, a minor, and that she file a bond in the sum of $500; it is further ordered that upon the payment of the sum of $500 by the Puget Mill Company to the said guardian, the said guardian execute and deliver to the said Puget Mill Company a full release and discharge of any and all claims or demands which the said minor or his said guardian may have on account of the aforesaid personal injuries received by the said minor on the 17th day of December, 1904, while in the employ of the said Puget Mill Company or which may hereafter arise or grow out of said injuries.

W. R. BELL, Judge.

Filed Dec. 23, 1904.
C. A. KOEPFLI, Clerk:

In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for the county of King. In the matter of the guardianship of Benjamin H. Greenwood, a minor. No. 6003.

STATE OF WASHINGTON, County of King, ss.

I, D. K. Sickels, county clerk of King County, and ex-officio clerk of the Superior Court of the State of Washington for the county of King, do hereby certify that I have compared the foregoing copy with the original petition for appointment of guardian and order appointing guardian in the above entitled matter as the same appear on file and of record in my office, and that the same is a true and perfect transcript of said original and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said Superior Court at my office at Seattle this 5th day of July, 1912.

[SEAL.] D. K. SICKELS, Clerk.

By PERCY F. THOMAS,
Deputy Clerk.

(Filing on back.) No. 6003. In the Superior Court of the State of Washington, for the county of King. In the matter of the guardianship of Benjamin H. Greenwood, a minor. Certified copy. Petition for appointment of guardian. Order appointing guardian.

EXHIBIT No. 80.

In the United States District Court for the District of Washington, Northern Division, in bankruptcy.

In the matter of Seattle Paint & Varnish Company, a corporation. Bankrupt. No. 2817. Statement of administration of Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver.

October 8th, 1904, Sutcliffe Baxter appointed receiver and instructed to continue the business in the usual course until the further order of the court.

Inventory by the receiver:

Book accounts receivable	$21,706.98
Bills receivable	977.83
Advertising matter, as per books	663.30
Formulæ, as per books	5,000.00
Furniture and fixtures, as per books	1,898.44
Horse and wagon	400.00
Insurance unearned premiums	500.22
King County Fair Assn. stock, par value	250.00
C. K. McConnaughey, account	231.89
J. W. and D. F. McConnaughey, acct	1,148.21
J. W. McConnaughey, acct	628.45
Machinery and tools	5,102.67
Stationery and stamps	106.70
Suspense acct	1,834.67
Washington Trust Company, acct	496.96
Cash	812.95
Scandinavian American Bank	223.75
Difference in trial balances	61.69
Cash and credit sales Oct. 10th and 11th, less 25 per cent profit	337.38
Accounts assigned to John Schram within 90 days before filing petition	11,067.40
Collected on above and paid over to receiver and kept in separate account, subject to order of the court	2,769.50
Merchandise sold to John Schram within 90 days before filing petition, and all now in the possession of the receiver, subject to order of the court	11,290.88
Liabilities, accounts payable	63,496.91

Cash statement in final report of receiver:

Total cash receipts	18,937.97
Total cash disbursements in ordinary course	16,987.46
Total cash paid by receiver to trustee	1,950.51
	18,937.97

Merchandise statement in final report of receiver:

Inventory value of merchandise	34,737.56
Merchandise purchased by receiver, including freight, cartage, and sundry items of merchandise returned	8,812.74
	43,552.30
Cash sales by receiver	14,133.45
Merchandise turned over to trustee	29,418.85

Statement in final report of receiver of assets turned over to trustee:

Book accounts receivable	$20,635.69
Bills receivable	776.82
Advertising material	708.80
Cash	1,950.50
Formulae	5,000.00
Furniture and fixtures	1,917.89
Improvements	1,078.83
Insurance unearned premiums	786.32
King County Fair Assn. stock	250.00
Machinery and tools	5,102.67
Merchandise	29,418.85
Stationery and stamps	110.49
Suspense account	1,834.67
Washington Trust Company, account	496.96
Horse and wagon	400.00
C. K. McConnaughey, acct	231.89
J. W. and D. F. McConnaughey acct	1,148.21
J. W. McConnaughey acct	628.45
Miscellaneous dead accounts	43,734.73
Total	116,211.77

The business carried on by the receiver in the usual course of business from Oct. 8, 1904, to Dec. 31st, 1904, pending the adjudication of bankruptcy.

Dec. 23, 1904, stipulation in writing between all parties in interest, fixing compensation, as follows:

Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver	$1,000.00
Metcalfe & Jurey, attys. for receiver	1,000.00
R. S. Jones, atty. for bankrupt	600.00
Tucker & Hyland, McClure & McClure, Pipes & Tifft, and John G. Gray, attys. for petitioners and creditors	1,800.00

Dec. 24, 1904: Order fixing compensation and directing payment as per above stipulation.

Dec. 31st, 1904: Receiver turned over all remaining assets to trustee, and discharged.

Exhibit 81 not printed.

EXHIBIT NO. 82.

Western Steel Corporation, bankrupt.

RECEIPTS.

Oct. 13, 1911, cash on hand and balances in bank	$580.64
Oct. 13 to Dec. 13, 1911:
Receivers' certificate, dated Nov. 28 ,1911, cashed by First National Bank	2,500.00
Miscellaneous collections and settlements of sundry accounts per contra entries	83,218.61
Per receivers' report, dated Dec. 13, 1911		$86,299.25
Dec. 14, 1911, to Jan. 13, 1912:
Trustees' certificate, dated Dec. 28, 1911, cashed by First National Bank	3,000.00
Miscellaneous collections and settlements of sundry accounts per contra entries	20,564.02
Per trustees' report, dated Jan. 13, 1912		23,564.02
Jan. 14 to Apr. 2, 1912:
Metropolitan Trust Co.—
Cash-a/c purchase of properties	80,000.00
Balance of purchase price of properties paid by surrender and cancellation of bonds held by Met. Trust Co	647,010.00
Miscellaneous collections and settlements of sundry accounts per contra entries	18,406.71
Per trustees' report, dated Apr. 2, 1912		745,416.71

April 3 to May 31, 1912:
Miscellanous collections and settlements of sundry accounts per contra entries		$11,834.47
Total receipts		867,114.45

DISBURSEMENTS.

Oct. 13 to Dec. 13, 1911:
S. Baxter, on a/c receivers' compensation	$500.00
L. Turner, on a/c receivers' compensation	500.00
Administrative expenses, payments made on secured loan and allowances per contra entries	82,229.76
Per receivers' report, dated Dec. 13, 1911		83,229.76
Dec. 14, 1911, to Jan. 13, 1912:
Taxes on Graham Island property	4,074.00
Fire insurance on plant	1,888.92
Administrative expenses, payments on secured loans and miscellaneous disbursements and allowances per contra entries	18,643.84
Per trustees' report, dated Jan. 13, 1912		24,606.76
Jan. 14 to Apr. 2, 1912:
Trustees' certificate and interest	3,032.08
Receivers' certificate and interest	2,542.78
Lester Turner, balance receivers' compensation	4,500.00
Sutcliffe Baxter, balance receivers' compensation	4,500.00
Bausman & Kelleher, fees and compensation as attorneys for receivers	10,000.00
Metropolitan Trust Co., cancellation and surrender of note and bonds per contra entry	647,010.00
Administrative expenses, payments on secured loans and miscellaneous disbursements and allowances per contra entries	12,323.28
Per trustees' report, dated Apr. 2, 1912		683,908.14
April 3 to May 31, 1912:
Taxes on Jefferson, Skagit, Snohomish, Pierce, King, and Stevens Counties, Washington, and Lyon County, Nevada	6,143.04
Munn & Brackett, attorneys for trustees on % compensation	7,500.00
John P. Hoyt, referee, on % compensation	6,000.00
Appraisers' compensation	1,000.00
Leopold Stern and A. W. Buddress, attorneys for petitioning creditors	1,000.00
Lyter & Folsom, attorneys for bankrupt	1,500.00
Lester Turner, trustee, on % compensation	2,000.00
Sutcliffe Baxter, trustee, on % compensation	2,000.00
Edgar Ames, trustee, on % compensation	2,000.00
Labor claims allowed and paid	22,762.37
Administrative expenses, payments on secured loans and miscellaneous disbursements and allowances per contra entries	5,107.73
		57,013.14
Total disbursements		848,757.80
Balance in First National Bank May 31, 1912, to credit of trustees		18,356.65
		867,114.45
Total labor claims allowed and paid		23,602.27
Total of labor claims filed and unpaid because of defective proof or because of the filing of conflicting claims, 11; amount		463.60
Total of labor claims filed and payment refused because not entitled to priority under the provision of the bankruptcy act, 12 claims; amount		2,848.90

Administrative expenses of the receivership and trusteeship from Oct. 13, 1911, to May 31, 1912	$11,715.22
Lester Turner, receiver	5,000.00
Sutcliffe Baxter, receiver	5,000.00
Bausman & Kelleher, attorneys for receivers	10,000.00
Lester Turner, trustee, on % compensation	2,000.00
Sutcliffe Baxter, trustee, on % compensation	2,000.00
Edgar Ames, trustee, on % compensation	2,000.00
Munn & Brackett, attorneys for trustees, on % compensation	7,500.00
John P. Hoyt, referee, on % compensation	6,000.00
Leopold M. Stern, attorney for creditors	500.00
A. W. Buddress, attorney for creditors	500.00
Lyter & Folsom, attorneys for bankrupt	1,500.00
Appraisers' fees	1,000.00
Labor claims:
Paid to May 31, inc	22,411.27
Paid June 1 to July 15	1,191.00
Total	23,602.27

Receivers appointed October 12, 1911; qualified October 13, 1912.
Western Steel Corporation adjudicated a bankrupt October 26, 1911.
Receivers discharged and trustees appointed December 12, 1911.

EXHIBIT No. 83.

SEATTLE, WN., April 13th, 1903.

Messrs. LETSON & BURPEE,
Fairhaven, Washington.

GENTLEMEN: We had a letter from Mr. Wheaton this morning saying that he would send us at once a printed copy of the record in your case. We ought to get this within a day or so when we will take up the matter at once and get ready for the oral argument. I also wrote to Mr. Wheaton to send us a copy of his brief as soon as he could let us have it.

On Saturday Judge Hanford called me into his private office and showed me the plan for his proposed machine for can topping. He is desirous of having a sample machine made as soon as possible and says he would like to have you make it for him. He left for Spokane to-day and will return here Saturday night. He would like to have an interview with you next Sunday along with myself. I think it would be well for you to bring down a little drawing of your machine so that you can show it to him in advance. I would like for the court to see your plan of your machine before he submits his plan to you. I think it is worth while for you to come down and see him in regard to this machine. Whether you make any agreement with him about it or not, I very much desire that you meet him next Sunday. Kindly let me know at once whether you can come down on that day. We will consider it a personal favor if you will do so.

Yours, very truly, KERR & MCCORD.

EXHIBIT No. 84.

Western Steel Corporation, a coporation, bankrupt. No. 4746.

1911.

Oct. 12. Creditors' petition filed; Metropolitan Trust Co., of the city of New York; M. Barde & Sons, of Portland, Oregon; Port Townsend Pile Driving Co., a corporation. Metropolitan Trust Company's claim is for $578,504 for cash loaned in addition to a $2,000,000 indebtedness on bonds; Port Townsend Co., labor and materials, $3,896; Barde & Sons, goods sold and promissory notes. $12,756. Bausman & Kelleher for trust company; Budress for Townsend Company; Stern for Barde.

Oct. 12. Petition for appointment of receivers by the same creditors—absolutely necessary for preservation of property in that the estate has been grossly wasted and mismanaged and is being; wages due workmen are in default, supplies exhausted, liens permitted to accrue; enormous sums have been borrowed, numerous suits brought and applications are pending for receiver in State court. The best interests of the bankrupt and its creditors require that its business be continued in order to prevent depreciation and lapse of contracts.

Prayer that Edgar Ames should be appointed with power to continue business.

1911.

Oct. 12. Order approving petitioners' bond, order appointing Sutcliffe Baxter and Lester Turner receivers; bond $20,000; authorized to continue business until qualification of trustee in bankruptcy adjudicated.

Oct. 26. Stipulation of Bausman & Kelleher for petitioners, Lyter & Folsom and Kerr & McCord withdrawing appearances; motion and demurrer of bankrupt and that creditors' petition may stand unanswered and in default.

Oct. 26. Order adjudicating bankruptcy.

Oct. 27. Receivers' petition to sell 675 tons of steel pledged to the Union Savings Bank & Trust Co. for $14,000. The bank is offered $25 a ton, it is worth $30. 69 tons of steel pledged to the Scandinavian American Bank for $1,942. 43 tons of steel pledged to Citizens' National Bank for $85; 79 tons to J. C. Eden, $213. Storage expense is diminishing its value. Receivers have less than $100 cash on hand. Reports employment of Bausman & Kelleher as counsel; compensation to be fixed by the court.

Oct. 27. Order to sell the steel and confirm employment of B. & K.; compensation subject to order of court.

Oct. 27. Order of reference to Hoyt, referee.

Oct. 28. Receivers' petition showing monthly expense of preservation to be $2,000, and receivers have incurred liability of $385 insurance; asks leave to borrow $2,500 to be a first lien.

Order granted.

Nov. 3. Ratification by trust company of acts of B. & K.

Dec. 6. Order directing surrender to vendor of 2,000 tons of Chinese pig iron upon surrender of purchase price note.

Dec. 12. Order reciting that Turner, Baxter, and Edgar Ames have been appointed trustees.

Ordered that the receivers turn over assets to trustees subject to the compensation of the receivers and attorneys; fixes compensation of receivers $5,000 each, of which they may pay themselves $500 each; compensation of attorneys for receivers reserved for future determination.

Dec. 18. Bankrupt's schedule filed.

Dec. 21. Ordered that trustees show cause December 23, '11, why Ernest Wagner's petition that the trustees appear in superior court and defend his action against the bankrupt should not be granted.

Dec. 21. Wagner's petition reciting that before the bankruptcy proceeding be brought an action for personal injuries for negligence for $40,000, and asking that the trustees be substituted for the bankrupt.

Dec. 23. Order granting Wagner's petition.

Dec. 29. Order directing payment of B. C. Custom's claims $4,074.

Dec. 30. Order authorizing payment of sundry small claims aggregating $1,573.

1912.

Jan. 6. Order directing payment of indebtedness incurred in administration, total $2,018.

Jan. 11. Order for the same purpose, $439.

Jan. 24. Order directing trustees to pay to Merchants' Bank of Port Townsend a secured claim of $1,200.

Feb. 1. Order for sundry disbursements, $1,190.

Feb. 6. Objections of Metropolitan Trust Company to claim of the First National Bank of Seattle, alleging that the note which is the basis of the claim was without consideration, was not the corporate act, was fraudulently issued, and is not owned by the claimant.

Feb. 6. Petition of Bausman & Kelleher for compensation as attorneys for the receivers, referring to the files and records as to extent and value of services; praying that the court fix, in its own discretion, adequate compensation, to be paid out of funds which may be available for such purpose.

Order fixing $10,000 and disbursements; that it be paid as one of the expenses of administration but that it is conditional upon petitioners waiving all compensation for its attorneys. (This condition is written in pen upon the typewritten form of order.

Feb. 16. Order authorizing payment of some incidentals of administration amounting to about $150.

Feb. 24. Order upon trustees' petition ratifying their action in paying off $3,000 trustees' certificate and authorizing them to pay the $2,500 receivers' certificate.

Feb. 28. Trustees' petition for leave to pay the receivers $750 more each granted.

Feb. 28. Order directing trustees to disburse sundry incidentals of administration aggregating $1,145.

1912.
Mar. 26. Referee's return upon exceptions of certain creditors recites that the orders to be reviewed grew out of proceedings looking to the sale of the bankrupt's assets; that upon petition for the sale being filed a meeting of creditors was called at which the orders were made; that the objectors participated in the meeting and none of them objected to the making of the order of sale of February 17th or the supplemental order of sale of March 2; that the objecting creditors raised a question as to whether the trust company might use in bidding the bonds it held at their face value or for a lesser amount; that it was subsequently agreed upon and found by the referee that the trust company might use the bonds, for bidding purposes only, to the extent of $650,000.

Referee returns that the question of ownership of the bonds was not thereby determined, but it was determined that if they were used and the user was not the owner, but held them only as security, the extent of use of them would pro tanto cancel the creditor's claim; that the sale took place by sealed bids March 15, 1912, at which sale the reviewing creditors were present or represented and made no objection to the sale proceeding; that the bids made were taken under advisement by the trustees, and they, on March 16, filed their report recommending the acceptance of the bids of the trust company.

The report was set down for hearing for March 19th, at which time the reviewing creditors and one other filed objections to the confirmation. The referee on March 20, at a meeting of creditors, confirmed the sale.

The return is accompanied by the petition for review of the objecting creditors, to wit: First National Bank of Seattle, by Hughes, McMicken, Dovell & Ramsey; Bank of Vancouver, by Hayden & Langhorne, reciting that the objectors are general creditors and reciting that the total claim of the trust company was $600,000, with interest from August 1, 1911, evidenced by promissory note, with which there was deposited as collateral, not otherwise, $2,000,000 of the bankrupt's bonds secured by mortgage covering certain of the assets of the bankrupt estate; recites that the sale had been confirmed without requiring the trust company to cancel the note, leaving them free to assert a claim for $2,000,000 on the bonds, less the amount of the bid; recites that liens had been asserted for $40,000 or more for portions of the property of the bankrupt, the validity of which liens the trustees have attacked, and claims that a sale made while that matter is undetermined must be prejudicial; that the amount of the bid is grossly inadequate; that the appraisement is indefinite, misleading, and confusing; that the property was sold in bulk and not in parcels.

Prays the order of confirmation be set aside, or, in any event, modified so as to require the trust company to surrender for cancellation evidence of all indebtedness held by it.

There is also returned the objections of the objecting creditors filed with referee going into greater detail by parcel; also the referee's order confirming the sale. Order finds that the highest and best bid is that of the Metropolitan Trust Company for $680,000, of which $647,010 is to be paid by first mortgage bonds, the remainder, $32,990, is payable in cash; that the bid received is the appraised value and is a fair price; that the best bid for the other assets brought into the sale by the supplemental order of sale is that of the trust company for $40,000 cash, which is a fair price; that the total bid of the trust company is $261,000 in excess of the appraised value; recites that by the terms of the order of sale it was provided that if the bondholder should be the successful bidder and the net cash proceeds of the sale and moneys in the hands of the trustees should not be sufficient to pay the expenses of administration, taxes and prior labor claims and labor liens, the successful bidder, as a condition precedent to the acquirement of title should be bound to pay to the trustees the amount of the deficit in cash; that the trustees state this further amount to be $12,000, of which the successful bidder must deposit in cash $7,000 and should be bound by the order of confirmation to advance the further sum of $5,000, if necessary; recites further that a notice of which sale was mailed by the referee to each creditor more than ten days prior to March 15th.

Recites that the acts of the trustees under the orders of sale conform to the orders and to the bankrupt act; that the sale was fairly conducted, therefore, the trustees' acts under the order of sale ratified and trustees directed that upon tender of the $2,000,000 bond issue for endorsement and upon trust company paying $72,990 less the amount deposited by the trust company to qualify it as bidder, and upon the trust company depositing with the trustees a further sum of $7,000, for the purposes aforesaid, the trustees execute proper instruments of conveyance.

Further ordered that the $7,000 be used by the trustees in the payment of the expenses of administration, taxes and prior labor claims and liens in the event it is needed, and, if that is insufficient, the trust company must advance $5,000 more, and that any part of the $12,000 advanced by not necessary for the purposes stated shall be refunded by the trustees to the trust company without interest.

The order of sale also accompanies the return, reciting that at the meeting, of which due notice was given all creditors, and all persons in interest having been heard, directs the sale of the assets clear of the mortgage and clear of all lien claims and labor claims, but subject to all other valid liens and encumbrances, and that the rights of the bondholders be transferred to the fund realized; that there be excepted from the sale cash on hand, bills and accounts receivable and all other assets not included in the exhibit; that for the purposes of the sale the bonds shall be considered a first lien upon parcels 1, 2, 3, and 4 described in "Exhibit A" to the extent of $2,000,000 and accrued interest, unless there is modification of the order as provided in it; that the bondholders may use the bonds in bidding for said parcels, but the bondholder, if purchaser, if the moneys in the hands of the trustees and the proceeds of the sale of the property not covered by the mortgage shall be insufficient to pay the costs of administration and prior labor liens, must make payment in cash of any sum required for that purpose. As a condition precedent to the use of the bonds in bidding, the holder must file them with the referee, with proof of ownership; must deliver up all stock certificates of the Western Coal & Iron Company pledged under the mortgage, and these shall go to the purchaser upon the sale; that upon the filing of the bonds any interested person may object thereto, and, upon notice, a hearing shall be had, at which hearing the referee may modify this order respecting the use of the bonds in bidding. Parcels 5, 6, and 7 shall be sold free from the lien of the mortgage and for cash only, and free from labor claims; that the personal property described in parcels 8 to 20 is free from the mortgage and is to be sold for cash, free from labor claims. Sealed bids shall be received up to ten a. m., March 15, 1912. All bidders must accompany their bid with cash or certified check for 10%. The successful bidder's deposit shall be credited on the bid, the other deposits returned. Any bids and coupons deposited with the referee shall, upon being received in payment of any bid, have endorsed thereon the sums in payment of which they have been received, and the indebtedness secured by the mortgage shall be deemed paid only to the extent of such credit.

The trustees shall ask for separate bids upon each parcel, and, in addition, a bid upon the entire property, and if the aggregate bid is the greatest it shall be accepted, otherwise the sales shall be by parcels;

Directs notice of the sale in the P. I. and Times, a daily in Jefferson County, at least ten times prior to date of sale. In the case of a lump sale proceeds shall be apportioned among the several parcels in the proportion that the highest bid made for each parcel when offered separately shall bear to the total amount of the highest of all separate bids, but if there are no separate bids then trustees shall make a just apportionment, but the sales shall be subject to the approval of the court.

Exhibit A attached contains a description of the separate parcels.

Return also has a copy of the order modifying the order of sale. It recites that objections have been filed to the use of the bonds as directed under the order of sale; also that the bonds and stock have been deposited; finds that the bonds are sold by the trust company and bought in by itself in foreclosure of the pledge agreement without fraudulent intent, but the procedure followed was legally insufficient to vest title in the trust company to the bonds and discharge it of its own trust obligation; hold the same as security for the sum of $600,000, with interest and expenses, for which they were pledged; that the bonds constitute a first lien upon the properties described in parcels 1, 2, 3, and 4 to the amount of $650,000, and the trust company having submitted the bonds and stock to the jurisdiction of the court and consented to a sale of the assets free from the lien of the mortgage bonds and to the transfer of the lien of the bonds to the proceeds of the sale there is due the trust company for accrued interest and compensation and counsel fees and expenses incurred in the execution of the trust, $50,000; therefore, it is ordered that the original order of sale be accordingly modified so that the bonds are adjudged a first lien upon parcels 1, 2, 3, and 4 to the extent of $650,000 only, and may be used for that amount and no more, and when used in bidding the trustees shall indorse upon each bond the pro rata credit for the same for which it has been used in bidding, but that this is not an adjudication as to the right of the bondholder to prove up on the balance as a common claim.

There is also attached to the return a supplemental order of sale which directs that all the assest of the bankrupt not uncluded in the original order of sale be sold, except the cash on hand, bills, and accounts receivable, books of account, insurance policies, title papers and records and the bankrupt's interest in manufactured steel; that the added assets be sold for cash, clear of taxes, labor liens, and claims, but subject to all other valid liens or encumbrances; contains directions as to receiving bids, deposits, parcel and gross sale, and requires notice to be mailed by the referee to all creditors.

Attached to the supplemental order of sale is Exhibit "A," setting out parcels by description.

1912.

Apr. 1. Order authorizing payment of sundry administration expenses aggregating about $1,200.

Apr. 1. Order dismissing exceptions and petition for review reciting that the objectors and petitioners had come voluntarily and in open court withdrawn their exceptions and petitions and consented that they be dismissed.

Apr. 2. Order authorizing trustees to pay balance of receivers' fees and receivers' attorneys fees; recites previous allowance to receivers of $5,000 each and part payment of $1,250 each; recites fixing of fees of receivers' attorneys at $10,000; recites that the estate has been reduced to cash and there are funds sufficient to pay all expenses of administration; ordered that Lester Turner be paid $3,750; Baxter, receiver, $3,750; Bausman & Kelleher, $10,000.

Apr. 2. Referee petitions that more than $600,000 have been disbursed and he is entitled to a commission of 1%; that owing to the large number of labor claimants there will be a delay of some months in closing the estate; prays that he be allowed and paid $6,000.

Apr. 2. Order granting.

Apr. 5. Order reciting that the estate has been reduced to cash; there is money enough to pay taxes, labor claims, and costs of administration, including an allowance of $7,500 to Munn & Brackett, as attorneys for the trustees, and the payment of the same having heretofore been allowed and approved by the referee, ordered that that amount be paid them.

Apr. 5. Order directing payment of labor clains aggregating about $5,800.

Apr. 5. Order directing payment of taxes amounting to about $6,000.

Apr. 11. Order directing payment of labor claims aggregating about $3,500.

Apr. 12. Order reciting that by the supplemental order of sale the trustees sold certain contracts for the sale of bankrupt's lands and were directed by the order of sale to hold in trust for the purchaser at the sale all moneys paid by the contract holders subsequent to February, 1912; that of that money there has been received $231; that the sale covered some manufactured stee, but the trustees sold it separately for $448; order directing trustees to pay both these amounts to the trust company.

Apr. 15. Referee's return to petition for review reciting that on April 1, 1912, he made an order finding that the attempted sale of the bonds to the trust company could not be sustained and it being stipulated before him that the trust company, the alleged owner of the bonds and of the indebtedness secured thereby, had received payment thereon to an amount equal to the indebtedness for which it held the bonds as collateral, and therefore all claims of the trust company as to the debt for which it held the bonds as collateral and upon the bonds themselves should be canceled because the full amount of the true indebtedness had been used in bidding in the property and directing that the bonds and the note which they secured should be canceled.

With the return is the trustees' objection to the claims of the trust company, reciting the facts found by the referee.

Attached to the return is also the referee's order referred to which concludes with the rejection of any claim of the trust company on the note or bonds in excess of the amount used in the bid.

Attached is also the petition of the trust company for review of the referee's order.

1912.
Apr. 16. Order directing payment of $1,000 appraisers' fees.
Apr. 16. Order directing payment of labor claims aggregating about $7,500.
Apr. 18. Petition for allowance to two of the petitioning creditors, viz: Barde and Port Townsend Company.
Order allowing $1,000, one-half to Stern and one-half to Budress. and recites that in making the allowance the court takes into account that B. & K., attorneys for the other petitioning creditor, did the greater part of the work and their claim has been waived.
Apr. 19. Order directing the payment of certain expense items aggregating about $85.
Apr. 20. Order directing payment to Stern and Budress of the said $500 each.
Apr. 24. Order directing payment of labor claims aggregating about $2,500.
Apr. 25. Order directing payment of bills for publication of notices of sale in the two Seattle papers, aggregating $480.
Apr. 29. Order directing payment of $460 trust money by the trustees to the trust company, because the trustees sold certain manufactured steel for that amount at private sale when it was covered by the bid of the trust company.
Apr. 30. Order allowing attorneys for the bankrupt $1,500 and directing payment.
May 3. Order directing the payment of certain labor claims aggregating about $700.
May 4. Order directing payment of certain expense items amounting to about $200.
May 9. Order directing payment of certain labor claims aggregating about $700.
May 13. Order directing payment to the hospital of $342 hospital fees collected from laborers.
May 15. Order directing payment of certain labor claims aggregating about $1,500.
May 16. Order allowing the three trustees $2,000 each, reciting previous authorization by the referee.
May 28. Order directing payment of certain labor claims aggregating about $250.
June 3. Order directing payment of certain expense items aggregating about $400.
June 4. Order directing payment of labor claims aggregating $303.
June 6. Order directing payment of $63 trust moneys.
June 27. Order directing the payment of labor claims aggregating about $770.
July 8. Order directing payment of certain administration expenses aggregating about $175.
July 9. Order directing payment of certain labor claims aggregating about $130.

Exhibit No. 85.

[Post-Intelligencer, September 23, 1909.]

Conservation theories and conservationists were subjects of pointed attack in a speech delivered by Federal Judge C. H. Hanford at the Yakima Valley day exercises in the auditorium at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition yesterday morning.

Conservation theories were branded as impractical and reactionary; the "big stick" policy of withdrawing public lands from entry came in for severe criticism, and both John Barrett and former Governor Pardee were recipients of Judge Hanford's sarcasm.

Judge Hanford represented the chamber of commerce on th program of welcome to the people of the valleys of the Yakima. He said in part:

"Twenty years ago the central part of our State, which we call the Yakima country, was mostly a cattle range, and a hundred acres of sage brush plains yielded not more than sufficient to support one cow in addition to the jack rabbits and coyotes which infested it. The aboriginal inhabitants were slothful and incompetent to the task of making the land produce the rich harvests for which it is by nature adapted, and so, in obedience to divine law, they have been displaced by the class of people who have created on this continent one of the foremost nations of the earth.

PROGRESS WITH GOVERNMENT HELP.

"Without aid from the National Government other than the liberal policy by which each citizen or head of a family has been granted the right to acquire the title to one quarter section of land for a nominal price, they have created wealth amounting to many millions of dollars and have founded new cities of which the nation may be proud. With industry and the application of scientific methods of husbandry, the same area of the sage bush lands of central Washington, which in its wild state afforded sustenance for one cow, now yields an abundance for the comfortable maintenance of twenty families.

"The results of individual enterprise and the liberal policy of our Government in its disposition of the public domain are good to contemplate and deserve grateful recognition, and yet, in recent times, impractical theorists have raised an alarm and are now crying that the nation has been despoiled; that the natural resources of the country have been wasted and future generations robbed of their inheritance because individuals have been permitted to acquire vested rights to the wealth which they have created. A new doctrine is being preached that the public domain and all its undeveloped wealth of timber, minerals, and waters belongs to all the people, and that the use thereof should not be permitted except on terms which will yield revenue to the National Treasury.

CALLS NEW DOCTRINE FALSE.

"This is a false doctrine, for by natural law and the divine economy land, timber, minerals, and water are for the benefit of the users; by industry only can they be made to serve the purposes for which they were created. The general public derives benefit from the enterprise of individuals and the taxes which they pay upon the wealth which they acquire, and the general public can not rightfully exact more. Therefore, each individual who claims no more than a reasonable portion of wild, unproductive land and subjects it to a beneficial use has the first and best right to it for his own benefit and as an inheritance for his heirs.

"This theory has become crystallized in the public land laws of the United States, under which public lands in the older States have passed into private ownership, and the changes now advocated by the theorists will necessarily impose upon the industries of the States and Territories in which public lands are now held by the Government, new burdens not shared by the industries of the older States and will augment the evils of bureaucracy and graft.

"We have been told repeatedly by the advocates of the 'big stick' policies that the proposed new system will not hurt the West, but will aid in the development of the natural resources of the regions in which vast areas are reserved and to be reserved. These professions of kindly intentions bring to mind a case tried in one of our courts some years ago in which, according to the testimony, a murderer consoled his victim by beseeching him to not mind having his throat cut because the pain would soon be over and he would be in heaven.

RESOURCES NOT USED.

"In our State the reservations comprise more than 27 per cent of its total area into which no homeseeker dares to set his foot. The water runs down our mountains and most of it now flows idly to the sea without turning a wheel. But to prevent grabbers from acquiring vested rights the theorists insist that it must keep on flowing idly until it can be made to yield tribute to the National Treasury perpetually as agents of the Government shall dictate.

"These new policies have their root in paternalism; their tendency is toward despotism and, if not checked, they will choke to death our boasted Government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

"Happily, we have ground for hope that our wise President and his cabinet and Congress will not be carried by any tide of sentiment to so change our national policy as to work permanent or irreparable injury. But they must be supported in maintaining steadfastly true principles by a strong counter sentiment opposed to ultra doctrines. The people must think and give free expression to their own independent ideas concerning matters which affect the welfare of the nation at large, for now, as in times past, 'Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.'"

Exhibit No. 86.

SPEECH BY JUDGE C. H. HANFORD IN SUPPORT OF HIS MINORITY REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. President, ladies, and gentlemen, I do not consider that the only argument in support of this minority report is contained in the report itself, but it is the argument upon which I am willing to rest it for the judgment of this assembly. My object in speaking, briefly, is to make clear the exact issue which the minority have made the report of the committee.

I should have concurred in the report entirely if there had been left out of it the suggestion that the National Government should participate in the limitation of the use and the burdening of the use of the natural resources of this country in the public domain. I am not here to oppose for a moment the exercise of the governmental power by States in the regulation and conservation of these resources and the imposition of proper and reasonable taxes. We have in this country a dual system of government, the National Government and the State government, each within its own sphere is supreme. When each occupies its own sphere and operates within it, there is no danger of collision, but when both attempt to occupy the same field and to cover the same ground by laws and regulations, we are apt to get too much government for the general good.

Now, in what way can the National Government restrict the acquisition of franchises and rights in the use of the public resources of the country or subject them to the payment of compensation? It is only by reason of its proprietorship of the public lands of the United States. This controversy is to be confined strictly to the consideration of water rights for commercial and power purposes. The committee in their report have restricted their recommendation to waters which may be used for those purposes, thereby eliminating every question with regard to navigable waters and waters for irrigation.

The United States Government as proprietor of the public domain may put its hand on any part undisposed of and say, "This shall not be occupied except as now or in the future regulations prescribed or to be prescribed may limit the use." In that way it is in the power of the National Government to restrict the use and to impose burdens.

Yesterday at sunset the Olympic Mountains were on parade. All of you who may have been looking to the westward from a favorable viewpoint doubtless admired that grand natural outline with its gorgeous tints of coloring at mountain top and sky. But those mountains contain more than a grand picture. They contain power. Their sides are cut into chasms by flowing water perpetually fed and replenished from the clouds. Those streams are now flowing down to the sea without turning any wheels. And they will go on idly until the hand of industry and genius places the machinery to be operated by that grand natural power. That power will be used, and unless this Government of ours becomes a greater trust than the bogeyman with which we have been threatened, it will have to be by the exertion of individuals. The people in their aggregate capacity are not going to put these powers into beneficial use; it requires individuals to do it. It is proposed by the committee that these powers shall not be acquired for beneficial use by individuals, except for limited periods of time and upon payment of rent or taxes, so that this vast power will be made a source of income to the National Treasury perpetually, and the difference between the majority and the minority of the committee is on this point. In other sections of the country where vast wealth has been taken from the public domain the people who have the benefit pay no such revenue to the Government. Therefore, what the committee recommends is unequal taxation, imposing on the industries of the Western States and Alaska, a burden of taxation which is not shared by the people of other sections.

This is the issue which I wish to have considered by this congress.

The undersigned minority of your committee on resolutions concurs in the report submitted, except in so far as the same is suggestive of a change in national policy in disposing of the public domain of the United States whereby water rights, will be held in reserve indefinitely, or disposed of subject to burdens not imposed on lands with appurtenant water rights, which have already become private property pursuant to the land laws enacted by Congress. Heretofore the policy has been to grant fee-simple titles, the grantee paying only the specified price and thereafter paying tribute to the National Government only as other citizens and property owners do.

To apply a new rule granting less than fee simple titles, or subjecting the granted lands to be payment of perpetual rental or taxes into the National Treasury, will be unfair to those States and Territories in which the undisposed of public lands are situated, because, it will subject them to burdens not shared by other sections.

The man who claims one man's share and no more of the natural resources of the country and is first to select it and bring it into beneficial use has, by natural law, the first and best right to it, and that is the true principle of conservation. In recognition of that principle the following additional resolution is respectfully submitted for the consideration of this congress:

Resolved, That this congress views with gratitude the liberal national policy which encouraged the pioneers of this country, to contend against savage foes and all natural obstacles, by giving to home builders, miners and manufacturers, a limited but sufficient amount of land, minerals, timber, and water for actual and beneficial use. Under that policy the public domain east of the Missouri River, with all the natural wealth of minerals, timber, and water power, has passed into private ownership. That policy instead of being wasteful or extravagant, was founded upon the truest principle of conservation and has been vindicated by the subjugation of the wilderness, the maintenance of the American title to the Oregon country south of the forty-ninth parallel, the rapidity with which our Nation has grown great and the general prosperity of our people in every section. Therefore, so long as public land of the United States, not specially adapted by nature for national parks, not required for any particular use by the National Government, nor for protection of the sources of water supply, nor for storage of water in mountainous regions, remains undisposed of, citizens who are bona fide homeseekers should be precluded from selecting, occupying and acquiring perfect titles to land in sufficient quantities, to each, to yield under industrial use, sufficient for the support of a family. And we oppose arbitrary reservations of public land for the mere purpose of preventing the beneficial use of timber, minerals or water.

EXHIBIT NO. 87.

Frank H. Scobey, plaintiff, v. Wm. J. Bothwell, city comptroller, and members of the city council, defendants. No. 1937.

1910.

Dec. 30. Bill of complaint filed; Hoyt & Frye. Plaintiff alleges diverse citizenship. That plaintiff is a taxpayer owning certain described real property situated in the city of Seattle. The plaintiff first attacks the validity of the charter amendment providing for the method of further amendment of the charter. It is alleged, but only in a very general way, that the manner of amendment was contrary to the direction of the State constitution and that, therefore, the amendment never went into effect. That shortly prior to March —, 1906, certain persons presented a petition to the electors of the recall amendment to the city charter. It is alleged that the alleged amendment was not properly published to comply with the constitution and laws of the State, nor ever submitted to vote in the manner required by law; it never became valid. Paragraph 7 of the complaint alleges that Gill was elected mayor for the term beginning March 8, 1910, and ending the same day, 1912, and he duly qualified and is now mayor. Paragraph 8 alleges the organization of the Public Welfare League and that that league immediately began to solicit signatures to the petition for the recall of Gill. That the association canvassed through the summer and fall for signatures, and expended large sums of money in employing solicitors extending up through October. That in September the city council made its estimates for the tax levy. That notice of it was given and that although it was well known that this recall petition was being circulated there was not included in the estimate any amount for it nor was any tax levied for it. Paragraph II alleges that the city council has appropriated by ordinance out of tax levy sums far in excess of its amount. That the expense of holding the recall election would be more than $15,000, and that the city has no funds and will have none legally available for the purpose. Paragraph 12 alleges that the recall petition was presented by the Welfare League to the comptroller December 20, 1910. Paragraph 13 alleges that the requisite number was 8,671. That the recall petition did not have so many as that of genuine signatures of qualified electors. On the contrary, that not one of the signers was authorized to vote at an election of a successor to Gill. Paragraph 14 alleges that the petition is wholly fraudulent and void. That over 800 signatures were obtained by fraudulent representation in that the solicitors represented that it was a petition to the city council praying the condemnation of a site for a museum. In other cases, that it was a system of double tracking of street-car lines and that at least 800 signatures were obtained by signers relying upon said false representations. Paragraph 15 alleges that a large number of the signatures in the petition were forgeries, the number of forgeries exceeding 300. Paragraph 16 alleges that a large number of signatures were obtained by paid solicitors accosting people promiscuously on the street who were unknown to the solicitor, and that a great many signatures were obtained that way by persons absolutely unknown to the solicitors, but nevertheless they made affidavit that the signatures were genuine signatures of the persons whose names were signed. That it was impossible for them to know the fact. The number of these cases exceeds 500. Paragraph 17 alleges that the city comptroller is giving forth and maintaining that on December 31st he will certify to the council that there has been filed with him a petition signed by 8,671 persons entitled to vote, etc., praying for the recall election. That the petition purported to contain over 11,000 signatures. That between December 20, the date of filing, and December 31, the date of transmission, it is impossible for the comptroller to properly check and count the signatures and determine the genuineness thereof. That so far as the checking and comparison has gone it it grossly inaccurate. That the conptroller has counted a number of people not registered and a number of forgeries, all of which go to make up the 8,671 which he proposes to qualify. Paragraph 18 alleges that there are over 800 signatures of women, all of whom prior to November 28, 1910, were not entitled to vote. All of the females registered subsequent to November 28th. That none of them were qualified to vote at the time they signed the petition, but the comptroller is counting their names to make up the 8,671. Paragraph 19 alleges that the city council intends to call the election upon that erroneous certification by the comptroller. That the election will cost more that $15,000 and that the expenditure of that money is wholly illegal and unauthorized. Wherefore prays temporary injunction upon notice, among other things, restraining the expenditure of public funds for that purpose. Also restraining the city comptroller from certifying the petition, enjoining the council from calling or holding the election or appropriating any money for that purpose or incurring any indebtedness for that purpose. Subpoenas issued to 12 of the defendants were served on the 30th, to five of them on the 31st.

1910.

Dec. 30. Order made by Judge Hanford setting down the application for temporary injunction for hearing January 3d, 10 a. m., and directing that notice of the motion and hearing be given to the defendants forthwith. Complainant's solicitors gave such notice and service of the same is accepted and acknowledged on the same day by Scott Calhoun, solicitor for defendants.

1911.

Jan. 3. Filed an amendment to the bill of complaint, setting up that subsequent amendment of the charter annuled by the recall amendment.

There was served and filed demurrer of the defendants in which they object to the jurisdistion and demurrer to the plaintiff's complaint:

1. General.
2. No jurisdiction, and that the amount involved is not certain, and if certain would be less than $2,000.
3. That the plaintiff is without equity.
4. Does not state facts sufficient, etc.

Jan. 6. Memorandum decision on application for injunction. The court points out that after hearing arguments, the demurrer to the jurisdiction was overruled on the authority of 207 U. S., 205; 205 U. S., 332–336. The court says that the litigation cannot be defeated by a demurrer which admits the truth of the averments. The sum of the facts alleged and which the court is obliged to believe to be true in passing upon a demurrer, are that there is a large number of not genuine signatures, many obtained by fraud and misrepresentation, and that a proper check of the petition is impossible so as to segregate the genuine from the spurious. The court says: "It is the opinion of the court that any tax payer, resident or non resident, is entitled to all the relief which a court of equity has power to grant in a suit intended to frustrate the efforts of a minority to reverse the result of a general election by ousting the choice of the majority when the means adopted for that purpose include fraud, forgery, and false official certificates. It is the intention of the court to interfere as little as possible with the members of the city council and other officials of the city in the performance of their duties, but as at present advised it will restrain the misappropriation of public money raised by taxation for the expenses of a special election under this recall petition. Demurrer overruled and injunction granted."

On the same day there is filed a typewritten brief of 36 pages on behalf of the defendants, and on the same day a typewritten brief of 14 pages on behalf of the complainant.

The brief is divided into two questions:

1. Jurisdiction.
2. Is the complainant entitled to relief?

To the first point 10 pages are devoted, the contention being that the jurisdictional amount is tested by the money value of the plaintiff's interest in the litigation. In the course of that discussion it is stated that there were cited on oral argument to the court the Hill case, 41 Wash., 610, a suit by estoppel for an injunction, the individual money interest of the plaintiff being less than $2,000. The cases cited in the brief are largely where plaintiff sought to enjoin a tax levy in which it was held that the plaintiff's own tax must amount to $2,000.

The second point argues that an injunction will not be issued to restrain the election:

2. That any tax on plaintiff's property would be paid by him under protest and recovered back, that if the tax is illegal he could appear before the equalization board and appeal from an adverse decision of the courts.

The complainant's brief is devoted, first, largely to support of the points of legality set forth in its complaint. Points out that insomuch as the fund was created by tax levy, as the statute requires, for the purpose, it necessarily follows that the expense of the election must be derived from some amount levied for another or other purposes, the doing of which is a misdemeanor under section 9211 of Rem. & Bal. Code. They cite 101 U. S., Crampton case, in which the court, in the suit of a tax payer, enjoined the diverting of public money out of a fund created for other purposes.

Notice is given by plaintiff that upon a hearing certain affidavits will be read. Also a certified copy of the comptroller's certificates relating to the submission of the recall amendment. Also certain extracts from the city councils meetings. They are filed with the notice. One of them is that of one of the solicitors, that he secured signatures from absolute strangers, 235 in all, without knowing their names nor asking them, but made the required affidavit on the assumption that the names signed were the names of the signers. To only one of his petitions did he swear to the affidavit. The others he merely signed and turned in without being sworn. Some of the affiants swear that they signed their names to the petition, but their names are not signed by them, but are forgeries.

1911.

Jan. 7. Temporary injunction issued enjoining the defendants "from issuing any warrant or paying out any money of the city of Seattle whatsoever for the purpose of holding an election to elect a successor, etc.," and from ordering or permitting any other person, officer or employee of the city to issue any warrants or expend any money of the city for such purpose.

Order denying stay pending appeal.

Jan. 7. Order requiring plaintiff to give $10,000 bond before injunction operative.

Defendants' petition for appeal indorsed and allowed by the judge.

Order fixing appeal bond $300.00.

Appeal bond filed.

Assignment of error filed:

1. No jurisdiction.
2. Demurrer should have been sustained for want of jurisdiction.
3 and 4. Refusal to permit a stay.
5. Demurrer should have been sustained for want of equity.

Praecipe for record on appeal.

Concluding the court's opinion.

Jan. 13. Petition for appeal dated at Portland, Oregon, 11th of January, indorsed, allowed January 10, 1911. Gilbert, judge.

Citation on appeal, Jan. 7th. Signed by Hanford.

Answer filed; denies exceptions 1 and 5 of article 19 were in force as alleged. Denies that the submission of the amendment relating to further amendment was contrary to the constitution and statutes. Denies the allegation of not proper publication and denies that the further amendment is not in force. Admits Gill's election; denies all the allegations impeaching the recall petition. Denies that there was no provision made in the tax levy for the expense of such an election. Allege that in fact a sufficient sum was levied to pay for any election. Alleges that the female singers were qualified.

Defendants' motion to dissolve temporary injunction because of the filing of the answer under oath supported by affidavits of numerous persons.

Jan. 17. Order upon stipulation dismissing the action without costs. Stipulation for same filed Jan. 17, dated January 16th.

Feb. 24. Stipulation permitting plaintiff to withdraw the injunction bond for cancellation.

Order upon stipulation.

EXHIBIT No. 88.

Augustus S. Peabody, trustee, v. City of Seattle and Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Company. No. 2012.

1911.

Aug. 21. Complaint filed. Complainant citizen and resident of Illinois. Defendants Washington corporations.

Complaint alleges that from 1891 the railway company has operated over its own right of way from Washington Street south to Lake Washintgon, which line, in October, 1896, was extended to Renton over a private right of way.

Paragraph 4 recites a deed of trust made in 1899 to the State Street Trustee Company of Massachusetts to secure a $150,000 bond issue. Subsequently the old owner, Seattle & Renton Railway Company, deeded the property to the defendant railway company subject to said trust deed; then this defendant made another trust deed to the Merchants Loan & Trust Company of Illinois for $285,000, out of which the bonds issued ($105,000) under the first-trust deed were to be retired. There was a change of trustee under the latter, the American Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago succeeding. Later, in May, 1908, the defendant company made another trust deed to the First Trust & Savings Bank of Illinois and Peabody to secure $1,000,000 bonds; $600,000 of these bonds were issued and the former issue taken up by exchange, so that of the $1,000,000 issue there now is outstanding $825,000. Refers to the original franchise ordinance 1441 amended by 1448 and later one under ordinance 15919 as interpreted by 17068.

The railway company surrendered its franchise under 1441, as amended by 1448, and quit-claimed to the city its ownership and right of way from Washington Street to the common corner of sections 26, 27, 34, and 35, known as Kenyon Street.

Ordinance 15919 was amended by 25038, which became effective 17th September, 1910.

February 3, 1909, a franchise was granted under ordinance 20088. Under 15919 railway company built double track here on Fourth Avenue from Washington Street to Pine Street, thence extended to Stewart Street.

After the passage of 25038 the railway company spent $115,000 in complying with their terms.

The complaint sets out various grading work being done by the city necessitating the shifting of railway lines and involving considerable expense to the railway company in paying for grading of its line.

The line Rainier Beach was through unplatted land. The owner platted it, but subsequently the city limits were extended to include that plat. The streets in the plat had not been used at all for over five years and section 3803, Ballinger's Code, vacates such a street after five years, and the Supreme Court held, in Murphy v. King County (45 Washington 587), that the said streets had been vacated by nonuser. Subsequently the city started to grade the streets in that plat, making expenditure of $10,000 necessary for temporary readjustment of tracks; that the grading of streets on said plat over which the line extends, as intended by the city, will destroy the line for nearly half a mile and prevent the railway from operating from Seattle to Renton and thereby impair the security of the plaintiff and the regrading work will really be a taking of a thirty-foot strip of the railway company's right of way for a distance of nearly a mile without compensation, the city never having acquired the right to take it or damage it; that in December, 1910, two ordinances were passed by the city—25963 and 62—purporting to revoke the railway company's franchises for reasons set forth, none of which are true; that the city, in the two later ordinances, acted illegally and contrary to the constitution of the State and of the United States; that the ordinances are void, would cast a cloud upon the title of the property held by the plaintiff as security, and impair the value of the bonds; that since the passage of the two later ordinances the city has been paid and received from the railway company $3,741, being 2 per cent of its gross revenue under the earlier ordinances; that in 1907 the State legislature passed an act bringing interurban railways under the exclusive jurisdiction of the State railway commission; that ordinance 15919 was not passed until after the State law aforesaid, and that portions thereof prescribing regulations for the operation of cars and the regulation of fares were in conflict with the supreme jurisdiction of the railway commission and therefore ultra vires of the city; that the public service commission act was passed by the State legislature and went into effect June 9, 1911, it creating a public service commission, with exclusive jurisdiction to regulate interurban railways like that of the defendant railway company; that the city has been demanding for a long while that the railway company interchange transfers with the Seattle Electric Company, upon an equal division of the fares collected, contrary to the direct provisions of the transfer clause contained in 19519 as amended by 25038, and contrary to the laws of the State and the constitutional laws of the United States; that before the last demand of the city the city construed the transfer clause of the ordinance and found and notified the railway company that it was entitled to receive 59½ per cent of the fare paid and transfers received; that this construction by the city was accepted by the railway company, and since said construction the railway company has extended its mileage, having 14 per cent more mileage, in relation to the transfer right, thus increasing its proper percentage of the fares to 73½ per cent. The city now demands, however, the exchange on an equal basis; that this demand of the city has incited a large number of people to demand transfers, which would be honored by the Seattle Electric only upon equal division, and, upon the railway company's refusal to issue them, these people refused to pay any fare at all, and they entered into a concerted plan and scheme to enter the cars in a body and refuse to pay any fare whatever. Because of those conditions the railway company has for some days last past been unable to operate some of its cars at all, so that the traveling public have been unable to secure transportation; that this has resulted in great confusion and disturbance, and will lead to riots and destruction of the railway company's property, and endangers the lives and personal safety of law-abiding passengers and of the car employees; that complainant has been informed, and upon information and belief, charges the fact to be that unless the unlawful and illegal demands of the city for the equal interchange be complied with, the cars and barns, the power houses, etc., will be seized, damaged, and destroyed by unlawful and riotous people, resulting in the inability of the railway company to pay the interest upon the bonds, and that the city is either unwilling or unable to prevent these threatened acts of destruction by rioters; that the city has, purporting to act under some ordinance, served notice on the railway company that its property within the city limits has been appraised at $380,000, and it is the city's intention to demand that the railway company sell its said properties for such price to the city, or, failing that, the city will construct and operate a double-track line of railroad, with one track on each side of the defendant railroad company's line throughout the entire route within the city; that this demand is a part of the conspiracy aforesaid to destroy the value of the railway company's property to the irreparable loss of the bond holders; that to accede to the demand for equal interchange would result in a loss of 35 per cent of the gross revenues, which would render the railway company unable to pay its operating expenses, fixed charges, and interest, or the principal of the bonds as they become due.

That the original ordinance, 15919, as amended by 25038, specifically describes the franchise route as ending at Kenyon Street on the south. Subsequently the city annexed territory south of Kenyon Street, after the railway line had been constructed and operated there. This annexation brought into the city limits 2¾ miles of the defendants' railway line south of Kenyon Street, all of which is operated upon the railway company's own private right of way and none of it upon any street or highway. Nevertheless, the city demands that the railway company transport passengers at a five-cent fare clear to the present city boundaries, although the railway company has a published rate of five cents to Kenyon Street, and five cents additional for any point south. On account of the aforesaid unlawful action of the city, the railway company has been not for some months able to collect its lawful rates of fare—any attempt to collect them has been met by offense and mob violence. In order to operate at all, it has been compelled to accede to the unlawful demand in regard to fare or else collect none, meaning a monthly loss of $1,500 for six months last past; that the railway company can only operate at a loss upon those terms; that this condition will be carried on unless restrained in this action, and if notice were given to the city and the railway company of an application for temporary injunction, the city will demand and the railway company will yield to the demand, and immediately proceed to construct temporary tracks at Rainier Beach and thereby jeopardize the rights of the bond holders, and the railway company being powerless to resist, will have to yield to the demands in regard to the 50 per cent basis of transfer, or if the railway company does not yield in that respect, the persons will tie up the operation of the railway, and the city will be unable to protect the property and operation of the line, and the properties of the railway company will be destroyed to the damage of the trust.

Paragraph 31 alleges that the amount in controversy, etc., exceeds $2,000.

Section 32 quotes article 15 of the trust deed empowering Peabody to proceed alone if his cotrustee is unable or unwilling to join; that as matter of fact the cotrustee had declined to join and that Peabody is acting alone at its request.

The prayers are: First, for subpœna. Second, temporary restraining order restraining the defendant and its officers from demanding or compelling the railway company from: (a) To remove or adjust its tracks at Rainier Beach off its present right of way; (b) interchange transfers upon the 50 per cent basis; (c) transport passengers throughout the line for a single fare of five cents; enjoining the railway company from the sme things; adjudicating ordinance 15919 as amended by 25038 so far as they conflict with the laws of the State to be void; adjudicating ordinances 25962 and 3 void; adjudicating that the railway company is owner and entitled to peaceable occupation of its 33 feet right of way as located through Rainier Beach. (Signed.) Kerr & McCord. (Verified.) McCord.

Order issued requiring the defendants to show cause August 28, 1911, why temporary injunction should not issue as prayed, and, in the meantime, an emergency appearing, ordered, upon the plaintiff giving $10,000 bond, temporary order is hereby issued temporarily restraining and enjoining the defendant from the three things specified in the prayer above and enjoining the railway company from the same until the hearing be had and until the further order of the court; further, that all persons having knowledge of the order are enjoined from in any manner interfering with the property of the railway company and the operation of the railroad and the moving of the cars; further, that a copy of this order be posted in the cars of the railway company so as to give notice to the traveling public of the issuance of this order.

Restraining order served on the city the same day.

1911.

Aug. 21. Complainant's bond, $10,000, U. S. Fidelity & G. Co., surety.

Aug. 22. Amended complaint filed. The only change that I catch is in paragraph 5. The amendment inserts the date of recording and place of record of the trust deed and the prayer is amplified so as to include a prayer for a permanent injuction upon final hearing.

Aug. 22. Petition of the defendant railway company reciting that upon being served with a certified copy of the restraining order it posted a printed copy of same in all its cars and notified its car men instructing them to notify all intending passengers of the order and call their attention to it; that on the morning of the 22d a number of people residing along the line of the railway by concerted movement boarded the cars and refused absolutely to pay any fare unless they were handed a transfer to the S. E. Co. or a receipt good for 2½ cents. The company refused to accept those persons as passengers, but the conductors and motor-men were crowded out of the way, the people entered and took possession of the cars without paying, and, in fact, declining to pay any money for their passage. The consequence of this was that the railway's operation was suspended for four hours. Wherefore, the railway company asks a modification of the restraining order: First, permitting it to issue transfers to passengers upon their paying 3 cents in addition to 5 cents so that the railway company be allowed to receive transfers from the S. E. Co. upon the payment, with each transfer, of 3 cents, each passenger paying the additional 3 cents being given a receipt, the receipt to be taken up and cash refunded if, upon the final determination, the issue be decided in favor of the lower division of transfer; that the railway company be allowed to charge 10-cent fare to all passengers traveling beyond Kenyon Street north or south and issue a receipt for five cents.

1911.

Aug. 22. Order made modifying restraining order as suggested.
The modified order served on the railway company the same day.

Aug. 26. Order allowing Paul Wilson, Earl & Steinert, his attorneys, to file petition in intervention.

Aug. 26. Wilson's petition filed shows that he lives down near Rainier Beach on the line of the railway and he is dependent upon that line for transportation and his business is dependent upon it also; sets forth passage or ordinances 15919 and 25038 and alleges that under those ordinances which were accepted came the duty of the railway company to carry passengers throughout its line within the city limits for a five-cent fare, and to issue transfers on the payment of a five-cent fare; that the railway company has refused to do this; that in case 74231 in the superior court, State ex rel Dennison, the superior court construed the ordinance as petitioner claims, entered an order requiring its observance, and, on July 14, 1911, the supreme court of the State affirmed. This case related only to the through fare. That the superior court, in case 71874, State ex rel Linhoff, construed that part of the franchises relating to the transfer provision as claimed by the intervenor it ought to be, and this was, on March 23, 1911, affirmed by the supreme court.

Recites the passage of ordinance for the regrading of streets in Rainier Beach. The work was entered on and it became necessary for the railway company to remove its tracks, but the company refused to do it. Later it agreed to and actually began the construction of other tracks in accordance with the agreement; that the track of the railway company crosses intervenor's land—the tracks being laid there by virtue of the lease. It is said that the terms of the lease were to continue until Rainier Avenue was graded, when it should cease; that a large number of people have located in the valley upon the promise of the railway company to charge only a 5-cent fare; that on account of the railway company's refusal to carry out these agreements the growth of the locality has been delayed; that the defendant and complainant are in collusion in this action and are seeking to relitigate the matters aforesaid decided by the supreme court of the State.

Aug. 28. Order permitting the intervention of the Hulbert Investment Co. and H. H. A. Hastings, as executor of the estate of George W. Dunlap.

Aug. 28. That complaint in intervention filed—Hastings & Stedman, attorneys—sets forth that the right of way was donated originally upon an oral agreement for a 5-cent fare; aggregate donations of land and money, $96,000. Dunlap made a donation of 10 acres upon that agreement; that that agreement was carried out from 1891 to 1910, and a great many people have purchased homes in that vicinity upon that agreement; that recently the railway company has ignored it and established a 10-cent fare.

Refers to the Dennison suit and the Linhoff suit and charges that the railway company is endeavoring to ignore those judgments and decisions; that the complainant and the railway company are acting in collusion to that end; that there is no actual controversy between the complainant and the railway company, and that the object of the suit is to avoid or delay the performance of the mandates of the supreme court.

Prayer that the temporary restraining order be vacated and that upon the final hearing the injunction issue against the railway company to require it to carry out the mandates of the supreme court of the State.

Aug. 31. Wilson demurred to complaint filed.

Aug. 31. Demurrer of the city filed. Points as follows:

1. Complainant's own showing is that he is not entitled to relief prayed.
2. That the court had no jurisdiction.
3. That the bill is without equity.
4. That the bill does not state facts sufficient.
5. That there is a misjoinder of defendants.
6. That two or more causes of action are improperly united.
7. That there is another action now pending for the same relief; and
8. That the plaintiff has no legal capacity to sue.

Aug. 31. Answer of the city filed, consisting of admissions and denials and affimative matter.

Sets up the passage of the regrading ordinance of Rainier Avenue. The company refused to remove its tracks, as would be necessary for the regrading, and brought an action—S. R. & S. v. City. Copy of complaint attached. Trial was had of that case before Judge Dykeman, who held that the city had the right to require the tracks to be moved without paying compensation. The judgment went accordingly. Then the railway company entered into a written agreement with the city for temporary removal of the tracks, and no appeal was taken; that the removal of the tracks complained of was necessary and proper under the agreement, and that the city has agreed, in case it should be decided that the company was not bound to remove its tracks, to pay the expense of the temporary removal; sets up the lease referred to by Wilson; that in the case above referred to the court found that the right of way was not privately owned at Rainier Beach but was part of a public street; sets up the passage of ordinance 15919 and amendatory ordinance 25038, and shows that by the terms of it the company is required to carry passengers for a single 5-cent fare and issue transfers on a 50 per cent basis, and that the railway, the S. E. Co., is ready to exchange on that basis, but the defendant railway company has refused.

Refers to the Linhoff case and the Dennison case; that the same contentions that are made here were made there, particularly in the supplemental complaint in the Dennison case, a copy of which is attached; that there is now pending before Judge Donworth the case of Railway Co. v. City, 1932, in which is presented every contention made in this case—copy of supplemental complaint attached—and that a temporary injunction was issued in that case enjoining the enforcement of said ordinances; that the action is brought in collusion between the plaintiff and the railway company and that the railway company is the real complainant. It is a citizen of Washington and there is therefore no jurisdiction; that the trustee was cognizant of the State litigation and consented thereto and they are bound thereby; that the denial of injunction will in no wise injure the railway company or its bondholders, but will greatly increase its traffic and earnings.

Prayer that the temporary restraining order be dissolved and the prayer for temporary and permanent injunction denied and case dismissed.

1911.

Aug. 31. Affidavit of W. R. Crawford, president of the railway company; he says no decision has ever been rendered by the State courts in any way affecting the interpretation of ordinance 15919 and amendatory ordinances; that there is no collusion and the action was not instituted for the sole benefit of the railway company.

Refers to the right of way case by Dykeman; says that it was dismissed with costs, and by stipulation the railway company agreed not to supersede, but did reserve the right to appeal and will, within proper time, appeal, and, on August 30, it did appeal; that the superior court refused to make any findings; that for the city to go ahead with its grading work will stop the operation of the railway. No action has been brought to determine the compensation to be paid. Says that the city work is being done on private property which is not a street.

Refers to the Linhoff case; that the Linhoff case has been taken by writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States on August 2, 1911; that the city was not a party to the Linhoff case.

Refers to the Dennison case and that a petition for rehearing in the supreme court is now pending and that supercedeas bond was given in both cases by the railway company. The city is not a party to the Dennison case. That an action was brought in the superior court by the railway company against individuals who refused to pay the cash fare of 5 cents to and from points south of Kenyon Street; restraining order was granted by Gilliam, but the people refused to obey it; that the railway company endeavored to enforce the provisions of Gilliam's injunctional order, but the police department of the city refused to prevent rioting and arrested a car man for endeavoring in a peaceful manner to eject passengers who refused to pay their fare.

Sets up the passage of the public service commission act since the decisions in the Dennison and Linhoff cases, and that the railway company is now under that jurisdiction; that the railway company has always obeyed the provisions of its franchises; that the action before Judge Donworth is pending, but that the city in its answer claims that the railway company has no rights whatsoever under said ordinances and is occupying its line in the streets of Seattle without authority; that after the order was issued in this case and while the company was trying to enforce it Mayor Dilling appeared with policemen and ordered the arrest of 19 conductors and motormen together with the superintendent, took the men off the cars and the superintendent out of his office, carried them in patrol wagons to police headquarters, 5 to 8 miles distant—all of which was done pursuant to the preconcerted plan of the city and mayor; that the modified restraining order in this action was posted in the cars and on the morning of the 23d the railway company tried to carry it out, but the people announced they would not obey it and would prevent the railway company from obeying it, and the railway company has not been able to obey it. Later warrants were issued out of the justice courts in the city against the officers and agents, etc., of the railway company and arrests made; that later in order further to harass the railway company the mayor called a special meeting of the council for the passage of an ordinance making it a penalty for cars to stop over five minutes. Ordinance passed as an emergency provision. That there is no collusion and the railway company refused to have anything to do with the bringing of this case.

1911.

Aug. 31. Affidavit of McCord filed denying collusion; the action was brought at the direction of L. L. Summers, a representative, at present in Seattle, of Peabody, and setting up that the trustee has never been a party to any proceedings in the State court.

Aug. 31. Appears the following minute in the order book: "Court overruled the demurrer to the complaint and suggested that a plea in abatement be filed by the attorneys for the defendant city of Seattle by two o'clock p. m., Friday, September 1, 1911, to determine the jurisdiction of this court in said action and the restraining order was continued in force."

Sept. 1. The city files the plea setting up the action is collusive for the purpose of avoiding the effect of the State decisions; that the trustee had knowledge of the State litigations and consented to them; sets up the same matter of of the proceedings in court and by ordinance as is set up in the answer, although not so fully.

Sept. 1. Affidavit of Dilling filed in support of the answer.

Sept. 1. Affidavit of Valentine filed for defendant.

Sept. 13. Is filed an order dissolving the temporary restraining order reciting that the matter come on for hearing on the 2d, and the defendant city having filed its plea and answer together with its affidavits, therefore ordered that the temporary restraining order be dissolved and the application for temporary injunction denied.

Sept. 13. Complainant granted leave to file amended and supplemental complaint.

Sept. 16. Amended and supplemental complaint filed.

Sept. 21. Complainant filed petition that the court call to his assistance two additional Federal judges, reciting the application is made under sec. 17 of the act of June 18, 1910, 36 Statutes at Large, p. 557, and asks that the court fix a time for hearing the application.

Sept. 21. Affidavit of Crawford filed.

Sept. 21. Complainant files motion for injunction pendente lite.

Oct. 2. Stipulation filed that the plea and answer stand as against the amended complaint with leave to the city to amend both.

Oct. 2. City demurs.

Oct. 2. Affidavit of H. D. Hughes filed claiming that there have been no prosecutions under any State statute compelling the issuance of transfers; sets out that the public service commission act was foreign to the case.

Oct. 19. City demurrer filed.

Oct. 30. Ordered, after hearing of counsel, holding that this case is not one within the act of 1910, the application, therefore, for additional federal judges is denied.

Oct. 30. Order overruling the demurrer of the city.

Nov. 8. Demurrer of prosecuting attorney filed.

Dec. 4. Answer filed by the city in support of plea.

Exhibit 89 not printed.

EXHIBIT NO. 90.

Remarks of the court in the case of Peabody v. City of Seattle on August 31, 1911, at 2.45 p. m.

The COURT. My suggestion this forenoon about an answer was prompted to some extent by the information previously given that you had an answer ready. It occurred to me that if it had been filed it might place the matter in proper shape for me to grasp it. As at the present time advised I believe that this answer ousts the court of its jurisdiction; that is, the face of their pleading was sufficient to oust the court's jurisdiction. I am skeptical on the point as to whether the complainant can by any amendment sustain the jurisdiction. It may be that he can, but I don't want to be too dogmatic about that now. But I would like to have this record made up with respect to the rules of practice and my suggestion about an answer may have been misleading. The rules of this court, rule 20, contemplate that —— the matters in bar; that is, matters of fact in bar. —— matters in abatement should be by plea and not by answer. You know we have quite a —— equity practice. But there is a difference more in —— than anything else between a plea and an answer. This answer is brought to be on file in support of a plea. I think you ought to specially plead the matters in abatement. Now, a plea in other suit involving matters already in evidence here in this suit that is binding in this court in any injunction that is in force and that should be a subject of plea in abatement.

(The judge quoted chancery rule 93 (33?), and added:)

Matters alleged in paragraphs 16 and 17 of this answer constitute a good plea. In a plea against the jurisdiction of the court. As against the bill as it stands. Whether the court would entertain jurisdiction on the other ground of a Federal question involved is a matter that can be raised on the question of filing an amended bill. The order I make now will be an order taking the case under advisement on the demurrer that has been submitted and continuing the restraining order in force until the further order of the court, and you can have leave to file a special plea in abatement or in bar of the action by to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock, and at the same time—I will not say at the same time—the application now made for leave to amend the bill is denied with leave to renew it. I don't limit you. You can present it to-morrow afternoon if you have it ready; but if you want further time I won't finally dismiss the case until you have had an opportunity to act as you are advised whether you persist in trying to amend. What I expect to do is to hear the case on the plea. When a plea is —— you don't have to amend it with a replication. It can be set down to be heard on the sufficiency of the plea. If the plea in bar is sufficient the case will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

EXHIBIT No. 91.

In the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, northern division. Augustus S. Peabody, of Chicago, Illinois, trustee, v. City of Seattle, Seattle, Renton & Southern Railway Company, a corporation. No. 2012. Before Hon. C. H. Hanford, judge.

SEPTEMBER 1ST, 1911—2 O'CLOCK P. M.

(Argument.)

The COURT. Has the answer that you presented yesterday been filed?

Mr. HUGHES. Yes, your honor; I filed it with the clerk—asked to have it filed.

The COURT. Well, you may take leave to file this plea now, and the answer will be regarded as filed in support of the plea. Especially in cases where there is an application pending for injunction pendente lite, it is a safe practice, where you plead or file a special plea, to support the plea with an answer. Now, the answer, in my opinion, denies the equity of the bill, and while it is a practice that is a little hard to explain, nevertheless it is a fixed rule of practice in the Federal court that when an answer comes in denying the equity of the bill, if an injunction has been issued, the injunction will be dissolved. In the face of this answer I can't continue this restraining order in effect any longer. You can take whatever time is reasonably necessary to work out the case and bring it on, if you want to, to a final hearing for an injunction, but the preliminary injunction that is applied for will have to be denied and the restraining order issued dissolved. That is the order I will make now, and you may set this plea down for hearing on its sufficiency, or reply to it, or take whatever course you are advised.

Mr. McCORD. I would like an exception to your honor's ruling.

The COURT. Exception allowed.

Mr. McCORD. I want to ask the court in this matter at this time about the order dissolving the restraining order. I don't know whether we have a right to appeal or not, but if we have we would like for the court to indicate at this time what amount of supersedeas bond would be required in order to take it up, to continue the restraining order in force?

(Argument.)

The COURT. Well, you may look that up. I am not able to make a good guess right now how much of a bond ought to be required if you are entitled to keep this restraining order in effect by a bond.

(Argument.)

Mr. McCord. We have a right to exercise our legal rights, and upon appeal there is a legal right given to us, at least I construe the law to be that way, and we ask the court to now fix the supersedeas bond, the amount of it.

The Court. The latest amendment to the statute reads as follows: "That where upon a hearing in equity in the district or in a circuit court, or by a judge thereof in vacation, an injunction shall be granted or continued, or a receiver appointed, by an interlocutory order or decree in any cause, an appeal may be taken from such interlocutory order or decree granting or continuing such injunction or appointing such receiver to the circuit court of appeals." Now, the general rule is that you can not appeal from an interlocutory order; you must wait for a final judgment before you can appeal. This is a special statute that allows an appeal from an interlocutory order that grants an injunction or continues an injunction, but it does not allow an appeal from an order denying an injunction. So I will not bother myself to fix any amount of supersedeas bond. It wouldn't do any good.

Exhibit No. 92.

Peabody, trustee, v. City of Seattle et al.

The Court. * * * I think it will be extra burdensome and not just at all to undertake to segregate and have the questions involved tried out in piecemeal between different parties. In the exercise of my discretion I will not be willing to have brought into one lawsuit all the contentions of different parties affecting the rights of the complainant, but where the whole matter is so involved that you can not place this corporation where it belongs, neither as an injured party nor as a wrongdoer in the discharge of its obligations as a public service corporation, without taking into account all these different questions, to adjudicate those questions all parties concerned must be in court and have their day and opportunity to be heard. I will overrule the demurrer.

Now, on the part that you have here as to the application for an injunction, I am pretty doubtful whether you have got a case here that entitles you to call for a hearing on the question of constitutionality of the State law. You allege that sections 25, 94, and 95 of the State utilities law would be unconstitutional if applicable to this case, but you have got an allegation in there that section 25 is not applicable, and, if section 25 is not applicable, the other sections are not applicable, so that you are not attacking the constitutionality of the law, but you are attacking the right of the prosecuting attorney to prosecute under that law. It is a question of applicability of the law to the case.

Mr. McCord. We only say that as to section 25, your honor. The other sections impose penalties for any violation of the act, of a thousand dollars—a gross misdemeanor, and imprisonment.

The Court. You do not allege that there are any prosecutions under any other section than section 25, and if section 25 is not applicable then you have a complete defense of the allegation that the collection of more than 5 cents for passage within the city is not within the terms of that law, and the case can be decided without ever touching the question of constitutionality. If the circuit judges should come here and hear your case, they could pass on the question of your right to an injunction without saying one word about this law, whether it is constitutional or unconstitutional. If they should be of the opinion that you are right when you say section 25 is not applicable, then they would not go a step further, they would not give the least intimation of whether they think the law is constitutional or unconstitutional.

I am very sorry that I can not shirk the responsibility of this case on three other judges, but I don't see how I can call on them to come here and hear this case.

Mr. McCord. The court will allow us an exception to the order refusing to call them in, will you?

The Court. Yes; you may take an order overruling the demurrer, and an order denying the petition for a hearing before three judges, on your application for an injunction. To which an exception is allowed.

Exhibit No. 93.

Comparative statements of number of decisions rendered by Federal judges in district and circuit courts as reported in vol. 42 to advance sheets No. 3, vol. 195, inclusive, Fed. Rep.

Comparative statements showing:

1st. Relative rank of 14 judges now remaining on bench out of 70 judges on bench at commencement of vol. 42, Fed. Rep., as to number of decisions rendered in district and circuit courts. (Page 2.)

2d. Relative rank of 216 judges as to number of decisions rendered in district and circuit courts, reported in vol. 42 to advance sheets No. 3, vol. 195, inclusive, Fed. Rep. (Page 3.)

3d. Relative rank of 216 judges as to average number of decisions per volume of Fed. Rep. rendered in district and circuit courts, vol. 42 to advance sheets No. 3, vol. 195, inclusive, Fed. Rep. (Page 4–5.)

4th. Alphabetical list of 216 Federal judges, with number of their decisions in district and circuit courts, vol. 42, to advance sheets, No. 3, vol. 195, inclusive, Fed. Rep. (Page 6–13.)

I. In number of decisions by the 14 judges in the district and circuit courts remaining on the Federal bench at the close of advance sheets No. 3, vol. 195, Fed. Rep., out of the 70 judges on the bench at the commencement of vol. 42, Fed. Rep., the rank is as follows:

Rank.	Name.	Volume.	Number of decisions.
First	Lacombe	42/195	836
Second	Coxe	do	525
Third	Hanford	do	514
Fourth	Newman	do	294
Fifth	Colt	do	205
Sixth	Speer	do	194
Seventh	Ross	do	172
Eighth	Toulmin	do	160
Ninth	Morris, J. J.	do	142
Tenth	Maxey	do	88
Eleventh	Pardee	do	79
Twelfth	Locke	do	22
Thirteenth	McCormick	do	9
Fourteenth	Boarman	do	1

II. In number of decisions by 216 judges in the district and circuit courts, as reported in vol. 42 to advance sheets No. 3, vol. 195, Fed. Rep., inclusive, the rank is as follows:

Rank.	Name.	Volume.	Number of decisions.
First	McPherson, J. B	91/195	867
Second	Lacombe	42/195	836
Third	Brown, A	42/109	732
Fourth	Wheeler	42/146	663
Fifth	Coxe	42/195	525
Sixth	Hanford	42/195	514
Seventh	Townsend	49/152	505
Eighth	Hazel	102/195	476
Ninth	Adams, G. B	112/188	465
Tenth	Ray	166/195	425
Eleventh	Simonton	42/129	384
Twelfth	Thomas, B. B	84/149	348
Thirteenth	Platt	113/195	343
Fourteenth	Holland	129/195	327
Fifteenth	Archbald	106/105	308

15 judges.
12 judges, between 200 and 300 decisions.
36 judges, between 100 and 200 decisions.
153 judges under 100 decisions.

216 total number of judges.

III. In average number of decisions per volume of 216 judges in the district and circuit courts as reported in Fed. Rep., vol. 42 to advance sheets No. 3, vol. 195, inclusive, the rank is as follows:

Rank.	Name.	Volume.	Decisions.	Average per volume (Fed Rep.).
First	Reed	45/47	35	11.66
Second	Brown, A	42/109	732	10.76
Third	McPherson, J. B	91/195	867	8.25
Fourth	Blodgett	42/53	81	6.75
Fifth	Chatfield	151/195	298	6.62
Sixth	Brown, H. B	42/44	19	6.33
Seventh	Wheeler	42/146	663	6.31
Eighth	Adams, G. B	112/188	465	6.03
Ninth	Lacombe	42/195	836	5.42
Tenth	Sawyer	42/47	32	5.33
Eleventh	Roy	116/195	425	5.31
Twelfth	Thomas, E. B	84/149	348	5.27
Thirteenth	Hand	169/195	132	5.07
Fourteenth	Hazel	102/195	476	5.06
Fifteenth	Holland	129/195	327	4.88
Sixteenth	Townsend	49/152	505	4.85
Seventeenth	Simonton	42/129	384	4.36
Eighteenth	Platt	113/195	343	4.13
Nineteenth	Shiras	42/124	293	3.53
Twentieth	Billings	42/59	62	3.33
Twenty-first	Archbald	106/195	308	3.42
Twenty-second	Coxe	42/195	525	3.40
Twenty-third	Hill	42/46	17	3.40
Twenty-fourth	Benedict	42/87	155	3.36
Twenty-fifth	Hanford	42/195	514	3.33
Twenty-sixth	Butler	42/193	173	3.32
Twenty-seventh	Hough	145/195	163	3.19
Twenty-eighth	Holt	121/195	232	3.09
Twenty-ninth	Hoffman	42/46	15	3.00

29 judges.
12 judges average per volume between 2 and 3 decisions.
57 judges average per volume between 1 and 2 decisions.
118 judges average per volume under 1 decision.

216 total number of judges..

IV. Alphabetical list of 216 Federal judges with number of decisions in district and circuit courts, number of volume in which reported, vol. 42 to advance sheets, No. 3, vol. 195, inclusive, Fed. Rep.:

Name.	Volume.	Number of decisions.	Name.	Volume.	Number of decisions.
Acheson	42/145	163	Bruce	42/111	14
Adams, E. B	72/195	118	Bryant	112/177	1
Adams, G. B	112/188	465	Buffington	48/195	168
Aldrich	42/195	71	Bunn	42/135	34
Allen	42/116	19	Burns	115/195	6
Amidon	78/195	30	Butler	42/93	173
Anderson	120/195	11	Caldwell	42/121	43
Archbald	106/195	308	Carland	79/184	37
Baker, F. E	112/195	17	Carpenter, G. A	173/195	33
Baker, J. H	49/195	192	Carpenter, G. M	42/81	53
Barr	42/91	51	Chatfield	151/195	298
Bean	172/195	41	Clark	64/159	47
Beatty	45/151	47	Cochrane	109/195	39
Bellinger	42/138	203	Colt	42/195	205
Benedict	42/87	155	Conner	168/195	19
Bethea	135/170	3	Cotteral	156/195	4
Billings	42/59	62	Coxe	42/195	525
Blodgett	42/53	81	Cross	135/195	104
Boarman	42/195	4	Dallas	51/166	249
Bond	42/57	15	Day, W. L	185/195	5
Boyd	102/195	8	Dayton	134/195	76
Bradford	82/195	88	Deady	42/54	26
Brawley	59/195	102	De Haven	86/195	190
Brown, A	42/109	732	Denison	185/195	26
Brown, A. L	75/195	197	Dick	42/86	26
Brown, H. B	42/44	19	Dietrich	151/195	36

Name.	Volume.	Number of decisions.
Dodge	134/195	85
Donworth	172/195	20
Dyer, D. P	152/195	16
Edgerton	43/78	3
Elliott	185/195	9
Evans	93/195	164
Ewart	87/101	9
Ewing	146/157	23
Farrington	148/195	22
Finkelnburg	136/151	13
Foster, C. J	42/92	26
Foster, R. E	171/195	23
Geiger	185/195	1
Gilbert	49/195	48
Goff	49/195	40
Gray	93/195	38
Green	42/80	65
Gresham	42/54	34
Grosscup	42/193	103
Grubb	169/195	44
Hale	115/195	123
Hallett	42/139	60
Hammond	42/133	93
Hand	169/195	132
Hanford	42/195	514
Hawley	42/145	205
Hazel	102/195	476
Hill	42/46	17
Hoffman	42/46	15
Holland	129/195	327
Hollister	185/195	5
Holt	121/195	232
Hook	91/195	16
Hough	145/195	163
Hughes	42/87	67
Humphrey	106/195	16
Hundley	151/167	22
Hunt	129/176	43
Jackson, H. E	42/69	35
Jackson, J. J	42/134	19
Jenkins	42/134	66
Jones	111/195	40
Keller	109/195	27
Key	42/71	17
Killetts	185/195	21
Kirkpatrick	82/129	118
Knappen	148/195	17
Knowles	42/128	118
Kohlsaat	93/195	183
Krepel	42/61	2
Lacombe	42/195	836
Landis	132/185	12
Lanning	130/195	125
Lewis	132/195	11
Lochren	76/159	79
Locke	42/195	22
Lowell	87/184	244
Lurton	42/171	29
Marshall	72/195	31
Martin	146/195	81
Maxey	42/195	88
Mayer	192/195	4
McCall	134/195	20
McCormick	42/195	9
McCoy	42/61	3
McCrary	42/81	18
McDowell	110/195	45
McHugh	72/81	1
McKenna	42/79	48
McKennan	42/61	6
McPherson, J. B	91/195	867
McPherson, S	102/195	22
Meek	93/195	22
Miller	42/61	12
Morris, P	124/195	8
Morris, T. J	42/195	142
Morrow	46/195	251
Munger, T. C	150/195	5
Munger, W. H	78/195	32
Nelson, R. R	42/79	53
Nelson, T. L	42/86	23
Newman	42/195	294
Niles	46/195	13
Noyes	154/195	42
Orr	167/195	41
Pardee	42/195	79
Parker	42/79	20
Parlange	61/149	28
Paul	42/110	77
Phillips	42/175	250
Platt	113/195	343
Pollock	125/195	56
Preest	62/69	18
Pritchard	128/195	21
Purdy	161/168	4
Purnell	79/164	142
Putnam	49/195	203
Quarles	134/195	54
Ray	116/195	425
Reed, T. H	127/195	107
Reed, J. H	45/47	35
Rellstab	168/195	45
Rector	47/89	4
Richards	120/167	1
Ricks	42/148	95
Riner	45/195	36
Rogers	76/185	112
Rose	177/195	28
Ross	42/195	172
Rudkin	184/195	18
Russell	177/195	3
Sage	42/90	141
Sanborn, A. L	133/195	75
Sanborn, W. H	49/195	34
Sanford	159/195	22
Sater	150/195	20
Saunders	149/169	8
Sawyer	42/47	32
Seaman	53/195	152
Sessions	184/195	1
Severens	42/188	59
Seymour	42/86	19
Shelby	91/95	24
Sheppard	152/195	10
Shipman	42/113	162
Shiras	42/124	293
Showalter	65/90	40
Simonton	42/129	384
Smith	154/195	3
Speer	42/195	194
Swan	42/184	55
Swayne	42/155	11
Taft	44/99	108
Tayler	133/182	38
Tenney	81/86	5
Thomas, A. D	43/82	12
Thayer	42/135	101
Thomas, E. B	84/149	348
Thompson	88/175	70
Toulmin	42/195	160
Townsend	49/152	505
Tricber	102/195	113
Van de Vanter	140/178	7
Van Fleet	150/195	58
Van Valkenburg	178/195	11
Veedes	184/195	1
Waddill	85/195	102
Wales	42/82	24
Wallace	42/151	143
Wanty	99/144	9
Ward	152/195	83
Webb	42/115	12
Wellborn	65/195	127
Wheeler	42/146	663
Whitson	135/184	21
Willard	168/195	44
Williams	42/102	42
Wing	105/135	26
Witmer	184/195	27
Wolverton	139/195	151
Woods	42/109	31
Woolson	46/98	56
Wright	134/195	10
Youmans	186/195	5
Young	157/195	4

EXHIBIT NO. 94.

ABSTRACT OF JUDGE HANFORD'S PUBLISHED DECISIONS.

The written decisions of a judge during his incumbency in office covering a period of more than twenty-two years must necessarily bear testimony as to his judicial temperament, capacity for work, and industry. This abstract cites the volumes and pages containing 551 opinions written by Judge Hanford with index words or explanatory notes indicating the topics of each. Those blue penciled in the margin [indicated by a *] are cases in which poor litigants have prevailed, or the decisions were adverse to big interests or monopolies. Special attention is invited to cases numbered 84, 99, 389, 477, and 532. Case No. 84 is a decision against a monopoly, the reasoning and conclusions of which are in perfect accord with the opinions and sentiments of the courts, lawyers, and people now, but when rendered it was too progressive and so it was reversed by the circuit court of appeals as the abstract shows.

Case No. 99 was a suit in equity to cancel patents for about 3,000,000 acres of public land obtained by a syndicate of wealthy landgrabbers by glaring fraud. The dissenting opinion given by Judge Hanford as a member of the circuit court of appeals is a strong protest against judicial sanction of fraud and sound according to present day ideas.

Case No. 389, held ocean carriers to accountability for violations of the rights of passengers.

Case No. 477 is a humanitarian as well as judicial affirmance of the rights of sailors.

Case No. 532 defeated a vigorous assault upon the admiralty jurisdiction of the United States district courts of cases of maritime torts in a case involving the right of a widow of a working man to recover damages for negligence causing the death of her husband. The decision overrules an earlier decision of the circuit court of appeals which has embarrassed the courts and litigants.

Abstract of Judge Hanford's Published Decisions.

1. Holland v. Hyde..... 41 Fed., 897.
   Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Suit in equity for cancellation of patent of public land.
2. Emmons v. United States..... 42 Fed., 26.
   Void entries of public lands—Right of assignee to sue the United States—This decision was overruled by Judge Deady (48 Fed., 43), but subsequently followed by Judge Bean in 189 Fed., 415, and is sustained by the Supreme Court 218 U. S., 345.
*3. Craigend, The ship..... 42 Fed., 175.
   Rights of seamen.
4. Steel v. Rathbun..... 42 Fed., 390.
   Jurisdiction of Federal court in action by assignee.
5. A raft of piles..... 42 Fed., 917.
   Salvage.
6. United States v. Harned..... 43 Fed., 376.
   Extortion by public officers.
7. George E. Wilton, The..... 43 Fed., 606.
   Chinese exclusion law—Forfeiture of a vessel for violations of law while in the control of parties wrongfully in possession—Held to be not forfeited.
8. United States v. Budd..... 43 Fed., 630.
   Suit for cancellation of a patent for public lands—For alleged fraud—Decision adverse to the Government—Affirmed by the Supreme Court in 144 U. S., 154.
9. Oleson v. N. P. R. Co..... 44 Fed., 1.
   Suit for an injunction—Jurisdiction denied.
10. United States v. Taylor..... 44 Fed., 2.
    Judgments of Territorial courts—Contempt proceedings.
11. Walla Walla, The..... 44 Fed., 4.
    Appeals in Admiralty.
12. McBride v. Pierce County..... 44 Fed., 17.
    Interpretation of statutes—Injunction denied.
13. Mann v. Tacoma Land Co..... 44 Fed., 27.
    Tacoma tide lands—Valentine script—Surveys of public land—Affirmed by Supreme Court (153 U. S., 273).

14. United States v. Osborn..... 44 Fed., 29.
Unlawful occupancy of public land—Railroad land grant.
15. Isaacs v. McNiell..... 44 Fed., 32.
Female suffrage—Stare de cisis.
*16. Padmore v. Piltz..... 44 Fed., 104.
Damages for abuse of a seaman.
17. Bishop of Nesqualley v. Gibbon..... 44 Fed., 321.
Grant of missionary stations in organic law of Oregon Territory—Claim of the Catholic Church to the Vancouver Military Reserve—Rejected—Affirmed by the Supreme Court (158 U. S., 155–172).
18. Alex Gibson, The..... 44 Fed., 371.
Charter parties—Demurrage—Reversed by C. C. A. (56 Fed., 603).
19. United States v. Wan Lee..... 44 Fed., 707.
Interpretation of act of Congress dividing the district of Washington in four divisions.
20. Carr v. Fife..... 44 Fed., 713.
Jurisdiction of Federal court—Conflicting claims to public land—Affirmed by the Supreme Court (156 U. S., 494).
21. United States v. Brooks..... 44 Fed., 749.
Practice in criminal cases.
22. United States v. Harned..... 44 Fed., 751.
Practice in criminal cases.
23. Walla Walla, The..... 44 Fed., 796.
Fraudulent importation of merchandise.
24. United States v. Opium (two cases)..... 44 Fed., 798.
Fraudulent importation of merchandise.
25. United States v. Manion..... 44 Fed., 800.
Land Office regulations—Perjury—Sustained by Supreme Court in Williamson v. U. S. (207 U. S. 461–2).
26. Carr v. Fife..... 45 Fed., 209.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts.
27. Murray v. Blue Bird Mining Company..... 45 Fed., 385.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts.
28. Murray v. Blue Bird Mining Company..... 45 Fed., 387.
U. S. circuit court as successor of Territorial court.
29. Blue Bird Mining Company v. Murray..... 45 Fed., 388.
Removal of causes.
30. Nickerson v. Crook..... 45 Fed., 658.
Removal of causes.
31. Lathum v. N. P. R. Company..... 45 Fed., 721.
Right of sublessees to dispute landlord's title denied.
32. Smith v. Skagit County..... 45 Fed., 725.
Held that a nonresident owner of property within the limits of a proposed municipal corporation may maintain a bill to restrain the canvassing of the returns of an election held under certain statutes of Washington for the purpose of effecting the incorporation on the ground that it was void because of a failure to comply with the statute.
The newspapers failed to roast the judge for that decision.
33. United States v. Scholl..... 45 Fed., 758.
Suit in equity for the cancellation of a patent to public land.
34. United States v. Perry..... 45 Fed., 759.
Suit in equity for cancellation of a patent to public land.
35. Stimson v. Clarke..... 45 Fed., 760.
Power of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to cancel entries of public lands.
*36. Rainier, The..... 45 Fed., 773.
Seamen's wages.

37. Connor v. Skagit Cumberland Coal Company..... 45 Fed., 802.
Practice on removal of causes.

38. Carson v. Donaldson..... 45 Fed., 831.
Order remanding.

39. Chapman v. Keindel et al..... 46 Fed., 99.
Public land—Contested entry—Injunction.

*40. Spokane St. Ry. Co. v. City of Spokane Falls et al..... 46 Fed., 322.
Injunction against city sued for by a street-railway corporation—Refused.

41. Cowley v. Northern Pac. R. Co..... 46 Fed., 325.
Equity—Adequate remedy at law—Vacation of judgment—Reversed (159 U. S., 569).

42. Renner v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co..... 46 Fed., 344.
Contributory negligence.

*43. Johnson v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co..... 46 Fed., 347.
Action for damages by a lady passenger for being wrongfully ejected from a train. Judgment was rendered in her favor on a verdict for $1,000.

44. Humason, In re..... 46 Fed., 388.
"Due process of law"—Information—Habeas Corpus—Federal courts.

45. Hershberger et al. v. Blewett et ux..... 46 Fed., 704.
Quieting title—Pleading—Community property—Husband and wife—Nonresidents.

46. Magee v. Oregon Ry. & Nav. Co..... 46 Fed., 734.
The plaintiff sued for damages for being elected from a passenger steamboat on which he attempted to travel as a passenger without paying fare—Nonsuit granted.

47. United States v. Trumbull..... 46 Fed., 755.
Chinese—Unlawful landing—Aiding and abetting—Indictment.

48. Manhattan, The..... 46 Fed., 797.
Maritime contracts—Lien—Admiralty jurisdiction.

49. McDougall v. Hayes..... 46 Fed., 817.
Federal courts—Jurisdiction—Parties.

50. Forrest et al. v. Union Pac. R. Co..... 47 Fed., 1.
Removal of causes—Waiver of objections to service—Process—Service on agent.

51. Buckeye Engine Co. v. Donau Brewing Co. et al..... 47 Fed., 6.
Creditor's bill—Return of nulla bona—Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Receivers—Appointment.

52. First Nat. Bank of Clarion v. Hamor..... 47 Fed., 36.
Action on judgment—Variance—Pleading—General denial—Reversed by C. C. A. (49 Fed., 45).

53. Stockstill et al. v. Bart et al..... 47 Fed., 231.
Estoppel—Quitclaim deed—Community property—Separate conveyance by wife—Gifts.

54. Holmes et al. v. Wintler..... 47 Fed., 257.
Suit to try title—When maintainable—Deed and mortgage—Construction—Foreclosure of mortgage.

55. Leo Hem Bow, In re..... 47 Fed., 902.
Deportation of Chinese—Review of habeas corpus.

56. United States v. Ah Toy..... 47 Fed., 305.
Deportation of Chinese laborers—Unlawful imprisonment.

57. The New City..... 47 Fed., 328.
Alien seaman—Foreign ship—Seamen's wages—Failure to complete voyage—Discharge for ill health.

58. United States v. Jim..... 47 Fed., 431.
Exclusion of Chinese—Ratification of treaty—Evidence of former residence.

*59. Evans v. Carbon Hill Coal Co..... 47 Fed., 437.
Personal injury—Master and servant—Fellow servants.

60. Grant v. Spokane Nat. Bank et al..... 47 Fed., 673.
National banks—Receivers—Actions against—Parties—Jurisdiction.

61. Chase v. Cannon et al. ..... 47 Fed., 674.
National banks—Insolvency—Recovery of assets—Jurisdiction—Equity—Pleading—Multifariousness—Execution—Levy—Custodio legis—Courts—Conflict of jurisdiction.

62. Brooks v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. ..... 47 Fed., 687.
Personal injury—Master and servant—Risks of employment—Defective machinery—Contributory negligence.

63. Woodruff v. Northern Pac. R. Co. ..... 47 Fed., 689.
Personal injury—Trespasser on railroad track—Pleading—Unlawful speed.

64. George E. Starr, The ..... 47 Fed., 749.
Collision—Between steamers—Fog—Excessive speed—Lateral motion under port helm—Stopping in fog—Mutual fault—Going ahead instead of astern.

65. McDonald v. Donaldson et al. ..... 47 Fed., 765.
Title to real estate—Partition of syndicate lands—Effect of invalid voluntary partition—Gift of stock—Partition of corporate lands.

66. Boman et al. v. Boman ..... 47 Fed., 849.
Wills—Validity—Disinheriting children reversed by C. C. A. (49 Fed., 329).

67. Gratton v. Weber ..... 47 Fed., 852.
Community property—Rights of nonresident wife—Decree of foreign court—Transfer of title—Estoppel.

68. Richards v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. ..... 47 Fed., 854.
Dower—Abolition by statute—Effect on existing marriages—Affirmed by C. C. A. (54 Fed., 209).

69. Henry Dennis, The ..... 47 Fed., 918.
Libel in rem—When maintainable—Failure to show lien.

70. Stevens v. Ferry et al. ..... 48 Fed., 7.
Courts—Jurisdiction in foreclosure—Lands outside district—Foreclosure of mortgage—Rights of mortgagor—Defective sheriff's deed.

71. English et al. v. Spokane Commission Co. ..... 48 Fed., 196.
Sale—Breach of warranty—Waiver—Acceptance of goods—Reversed by C. C. A. (57 Fed., 451).

*72. Van Dresser v. Oregon Ry. & Nav. Co. et al. ..... 48 Fed., 202.
Corporations—Where suable—Writs—Corporation doing business in State—Service on agent—Service on lessee—Service on foreign corporation—Following State practice.

73. Coulter v. Stafford ..... 48 Fed., 266.
Tax deeds—Limitation of actions—Statutes—Adoption from another State—Construction—Reversed by C. C. A. (56 Fed., 564).

74. Pilot, The ..... 48 Fed., 319.
Shipping law—Foreign waters—Foreign tug boats—Straits of Juan de Fuca—Reversed by C. C. A. (50 Fed., 437).

75. United States v. Baird ..... 48 Fed., 554.
Criminal law—Chinese—Duty of customs officers—Opposing arrests.

76. United States v. Lee Hoy ..... 48 Fed., 825.
Chinese merchants—Re entry without certificate—Decision of collectors—Affirmed by C. C. A. (50 Fed., 271).

77. Blewett v. Front-Street Cable Ry. Co. ..... 49 Fed., 126.
Bonds—Actions—Measure of damage—Penalty—Deeds—Delivery—Escrows—Parol evidence—Harmless error—Interest—Affirmed by C. C. A. (51 Fed., 625).

*78 Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Sanders et al. ..... 49 Fed., 129.
Railroad grants—Reservations—Location of mining claims—Affirmed by Supreme Court (166 U. S., 620).

79. Lem Hing Dun v. United States ..... 49 Fed., 145.
Appeal—Dismissal—Records and briefs.

80. Gee Fook Sing v. United States ..... 49 Fed., 146.
Chinese—Exclusion of immigrants—Habeas corpus—Evidence of place of birth.

81. Lem Hing Dun v. United States; Lee Foo et al. v. United States ..... 49 Fed., 148.
Appeal—Dismissal—Records and briefs.

82. United States v. Durwood..... 49 Fed., 446.
Customs duties—Violation of laws—Breaking open bonded cars—Criminal law.

83. Hinchman v. Kelley et al..... 49 Fed., 492.
Equity—Jurisdiction—Suit to declare trust—Affirmed (54 Fed., 63).

*84. United States v. California & O. Land Co..... 49 Fed., 496.
In a suit in equity to cancel patents to a large body of public land obtained by fraud, the defendants pleaded that they were bona fide purchasers without notice of the alleged fraud and gave testimony, in support of their plea. The trial court refused to admit evidence to rebut their testimony and rendered a decree in their favor. The Government appealed—The case was heard in the C. C. A. by District Judges Hanford, Hawley, and Morrow—The majority of the court affirmed the circuit court, Hanford filed a dissenting opinion. The majority opinion was affirmed by the Supreme Court (148 U. S., 31).

*85. The Karoo..... 49 Fed., 651.
Seamen's wages—British vessel—Jurisdiction—Shipping articles—Informality—Rights of sailors—Kidnaped sailors—Rate of wages—Insufficient food.

86. Norton v. Jensen..... 49 Fed., 873.
Patent case.

87. Blackburn et ux. v. Wooding..... 49 Fed., 902.
Specific performance—Fraud—Equitable relief—Reversed for lack of jurisdiction (56 Fed., 546).

88. The Hope..... 49 Fed., 279.
Maritime liens—Insurance premiums.

89. James G. Swan, The..... 50 Fed., 108.
Penalties and forfeitures—Killing fur seals in Alaska waters—Sovereignty over Bering Sea—Indian tribes—Makah Indians—Treaty.

90. United States v. Meeker..... 50 Fed., 146.
Timber land—Cancellation of patent—Evidence.

91. Pac. Postal Telegraph Cable Co. v. Western Union..... 50 Fed., 493.
Telegraph companies—Grant by railroad—Construction—Exclusive right of way—Ultra vires.

92. Herman, in re..... 50 Fed., 517.
Attorney—Dismissal by receiver—Security for services rendered.

93. Favorite, The..... 50 Fed., 569.
Tugs and tows—Negligence—Unseaworthy tow.

94. Gilmour v. Ewing et al..... 50 Fed., 656.
Mortgage—Insolvency—Assignee—Pleading—Federal jurisdiction.

95. Weber et al. v. Spokane Nat. Bank et al..... 50 Fed., 735.
National banks—Limitation of indebtedness—Construction of statute—Defense—Estoppel—Notice to creditor—Presumptions—Reversed (64 Fed. Rep., 208-211).

96. McDonald v. Hannah et ux..... 51 Fed., 73.
Tax title—Estate acquired—Action to recover lands—Common source of title—Evidence—Prior decision—Dower—Conveyance—Reversed (59 Fed., 977).

97. United States v. Wong Sing..... 51 Fed., 79.
Chinese exclusion—Indictment—Summary proceedings..

98. Haller v. Fox et al..... 51 Fed., 298.
Admiralty jurisdiction—Maritime contract.

*99. Ore. Short Line & U. N. Ry. Co. v. Ilwaco Ry. & Nav. Co... 51 Fed., 611.
Carriers—Use of wharf of railroad company by steamboats—Facilities at railroad wharf—Reversed by (C. C. A. 57 Fed., 673.)

100. Green v. City of Tacoma et al..... 51 Fed., 622.
Eminent domain—Illegal taking—Ejectment.

101. Dexter, Horton & Co. v. Sayward..... 51 Fed., 729.
Contract — Construction — Novation — Action—Defense — Counterclaim—Parties to contract—Pleadings—Federal courts—Action by assignee.

102. Dexter, Horton & Co. v. Sayward ..... 51 Fed., 732.
Attachment—Dissolution—Contract.

103. Friedrich, in re ..... 51 Fed., 747.
Constitutional law—Due process—Modifying verdict—Habeas corpus—Conviction by State court—Criminal law—"Verdict" and "judgment" defined—Affirmed by Supreme Court (149 U. S., 70).

104. Fristad v. The Premier ..... 51 Fed., 766.
Collision—Vessel at anchor—Mutual fault.

105. Cloud v. City of Sumas ..... 52 Fed., 177.
Federal courts—Jurisdiction—Action by assignee.

106. United States v. Chin Quong Look ..... 52 Fed., 203.
Chinese exclusion acts—Mercantile domicile.

107. Rapid Transit, The ..... 52 Fed., 320.
Admiralty pleading—Departure—Shipping—Damage to freight—Fire—General average—Cargo injured in suppressing fire—Basis of shipowner's contribution—Insurance—Costs.

108. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. City of Spakane et al ..... 52 Fed., 428.
Injunction—Preliminary order—Questions of title—Contract rights—city ordinance—Affirmed by C. C. A. (64 Fed., 506).

*109. Seattle & M. Ry. Co. v. State et al ..... 52 Fed., 594.
Removal of causes—Separable controversy—Condemnation proceedings—Federal corporations.

110. Hatch et al v. Fergusen et al ..... 52 Fed., 833.
Fraudulent decree—Equitable relief—jurisdiction.

*111. Hastings v. Northern Pac. R. Co ..... 53 Fed., 224.
Carriers—Injury to passenger—Contributory negligence—Question for jury—New trial—Application—Court rules—Argument to the court—Reading decisions—Presence of jury.

112. Mangels v. Donau Brewing Co. et al ..... 53 Fed., 513.
Federal courts—jurisdiction—Diverse citizenship.

113. Clapp v. City of Spokane et al ..... 53 Fed., 515.
Street railway—Damage to franchise by construction of sewer—Rights of mortgagee—Circuit court—Vested rights—Municipal corporations—Location of sewers—Jurisdictional amount.

114. United States v. Hurshman ..... 53 Fed., 543.
Indians—Sales of liquor.

*115. Wasco, The ..... 53 Fed., 546.
Admiralty—Rights of passengers.

116. Greene v. City of Tacoma et al ..... 53 Fed., 562.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Municipal corporations—Ejectment.

117. Levy v. Brown (U. S. marshal, et al) ..... 53 Fed., 568.
Husband and wife—Community property—Liability to execution for debts of husband.

118. Willamette, The ..... 53 Fed., 602.
Admiralty—Suit in rem—Venue.

119. Guy C. Goss, The ..... 53 Fed., 826.
Admiralty—Practice—Motion to Dismiss—Shipping—Carriage of goods—Liability for damage—Pleading and proof.

120. Guy C. Goss, The ..... 53 Fed., 839.
Corporations—Actions—Proof of corporate existence.

121. Sirius, The ..... 54 Fed., 188.
Admiralty—Agency—Bottomry bonds.

122. State of California, The ..... 54 Fed., 404.
Admiralty—Collisions—Damages.

123. Hofman et al v. Keane ..... 54 Fed., 986.
Vendor and vendee—Cancellation of sale and conveyance—Fraudulent representations.

*124. Puget Mill Co. v. Brown et al ..... 54 Fed., 987.
Public lands—Soldiers additional—Homestead scrip—Affirmed by C. C. A. (59 Fed., 35).

125. Hershberger et al. v. Blewett et ux ..... 55 Fed., 170.
Equity practice—Public lands—Conflicting jurisdiction of State and Federal courts—Heirs.

126. Governor Ames, The ..... 55 Fed., 327.
Maritime law—Rights of seamen.
127. Calif. Safe Deposit & Tr. Co. v. Cheney Elec. Light, Telephone & power Co. et al ..... 56 Fed., 257.
Removal of causes—Mortgages—Jurisdiction in equity—Case remanded.
*128. Nestelle v. Northern Pac. R. Co ..... 56 Fed., 261.
Damages for death by wrongful act—Statute of limitations—This decision adverse to railroad corporation.
129. Marion, The ..... 56 Fed., 271.
Collision—Steam and sail—Lights—Lookouts.
130. Itata, The (concurring) ..... 56 Fed., 518.
Concurring opinion—International law—Neutrality.
131. Hicklin v. Marco et al. (dissenting) ..... 56 Fed., 549.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Parties—Foreclosure of mortgage.
132. Riley et al. v. Jackson ..... 56 Fed., 582.
Patent case.
133. Ross v. Eells et al ..... 56 Fed., 855.
Indian reservation—Railroad right of way—Injunction granted—Reversed by C. C. A. (64 Fed., 417).
*134. Earle et al. v. Seattle, L. S. & E. Ry. Co. et al ..... 56 Fed., 909.
Corporations—Ultra vires—Right of minority stockholders—Receiver appointed.
*135. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. City of Spokane et al ..... 56 Fed., 915.
N. P. R. land grant—Streets in a city—Ultra vires—Injunction sued for by railroad company refused and case dismissed—Affirmed by C. C. A. (64 Fed., 506).
136. Puget Sd. Nat. Bank of Seattle v. King County et al ..... 57 Fed., 433.
Taxation of national bank—Pleadings.
137. Lewis v. Shaw et al ..... 57 Fed., 516.
Public land—Cancellation of entry—Rights of bona fide purchaser—Aff. (70 Fed., 289).
138. A. R. Robinson, The ..... 57 Fed., 667.
Admiralty—Liability of tug for loss of tow.
139. Wash. Nat. Bank of Tacoma v. Eckels, et al ..... 57 Fed., 870.
National banks—Voluntary liquidation.
140. Davidson, Ex parte ..... 57 Fed., 883.
Public land—Littoral rights—Railroad right of way—Jurisdiction of courts.
141. Adams v. Spokane Drug Co ..... 57 Fed., 888.
Insolvent national bank—Rights and liabilities of a depositor who is indebted to bank—Set-off.
142. Hatch v. Ferguson et al ..... 57 Fed., 959.
Indians—Conveyances of real estate—Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Equity—Affirmed by C. C. A. (66 Fed., 669).
143. Hatch et al. v. Ferguson et al ..... 57 Fed., 966.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Venue—Guardian & Ward—Community property—Wills—Affirmed by C. C. A. (68 Fed., 43).
144. Hatch v. Ferguson et al ..... 57 Fed., 972.
Equity—Deeds—Cancellation—Estoppel.
145. Pauly v. State Loan & Trust Co ..... 58 Fed., 666.
National banks—Insolvency—Statutory liability of stockholders—Pledgee of shares—Affirmed by Supreme Court (165 U. S., 606).
146. Grant v. United States ..... 58 Fed., 694.
Seamen—Harboring and secreting.
*147. Atlantic & Pac. R. Co. v. Laird ..... 58 Fed., 760.
Rights of passengers—Amendment of pleadings—Affirmed by Supreme Court (164 U. S., 393).
148. Benson In re ..... 58 Fed., 962.
Indictment for conspiracy—Reversed by C. C. A. (70 Fed., 591).
149. United States v. Warner ..... 59 Fed., 355.
Post office—Obscene sealed letters.

150. United States v. Jarvis..... 59 Fed., 357.
Post office—Obscene sealed letters—Epithets on envelope.
151. Ah Yow, In re..... 59 Fed., 561.
Chinese—Exclusion acts—Laborers.
*152. Premier, The..... 59 Fed., 797.
Admiralty—Collisions—Rights of passengers—Damages for death—Caused by wrongful act—Affirmed by C. C. A. (70 Fed., 874)—Modified by C. C. A. (72 Fed., 79).
153. United States v. Jefferson..... 60 Fed., 736.
United States—Eight-hour law—Seamen.
154. Walla Walla Water Co. v. City of Walla Walla..... 60 Fed., 957.
Constitutional law—Obligation of contracts—Federal jurisdiction—Municipal corporations—Limit of indebtedness—Annual payments for water supply—Affirmed by Supreme Court (172 U. S., 1).
155. Moore v. City of Walla Walla et al..... 60 Fed., 961.
Injunction refused—Municipal corporations—Public utilities.
156. Pac. Rolling Mill Co. v. Hamilton et al..... 61 Fed., 476.
Merchanics' liens—Who entitled to—Construction of statute—Affirmed by C. C. A. (68 Fed., 966).
157. Spokane County v. Clark..... 61 Fed., 538.
National banks—Insolvency—Trust funds—Affirmed by C. C. A. (68 Fed., 979).
158. Seattle, L. S. & E. Ry. Co., In re..... 61 Fed., 541.
Receivers—Master and servant—Railroad companies.
159. Stimson Land Co. v. Rawson et al..... 62 Fed., 426.
Public lands—Annulment of entry—Land office—Suit to determine adverse claims.
160. La Chapelle v. Bubb et al..... 62 Fed., 545.
Allotment to Indians of land entered for homestead—Indian agent—Injunction.
161. Puget Sd. Nat. Bank of Seattle v. King Co. et al..... 62 Fed., 546.
Collection of taxes—Repeal of statute—Saving clause.
162. First Nat. Bank of Walla Walla v. Hungate..... 62 Fed., 548.
Taxation of national bank stock—Collection from bank—Unjust discrimination—Relief in equity—Tender of tax.
163. Flyer, The..... 62 Fed., 615.
Collision—Fog—Steamers passing—Rate of speed.
164. Booth et al. v. Brown et al..... 62 Fed., 794.
Receivers' employees—Sympathetic strike—Reinstatement.
165. Johnson v. Richmond Beach Imp. Co..... 63 Fed., 493.
Mortgage of community property—Foreclosure—Jurisdiction of parties—Summons—Service on absent wife.
166. Matthias' Estate, In re..... 63 Fed., 523.
Decent and distribution—Illegitimate children—Inheritance from father—Parentage—Sufficiency of evidence.
167. Lichty et ux. v. Lewis et ux..... 63 Fed., 535.
Judgment—Res judicata—Community property.
168. J. M. Arthur & Co. v. Blackman et al..... 63 Fed., 536.
Promissory note—Failure of consideration—Contract—Construction.
169. Boyle v. Great Northern Ry. Co. et al..... 63 Fed., 539.
Security for costs—Affidavit for leave to prosecute in forma pauperis—Sufficiency.
170. Winston v. United States..... 63 Fed., 690.
Compensation of U. S. district attorney.
171. Klein v. City of Seattle..... 63 Fed., 702.
Patent case—Affirmed by C. C. A. (77 Fed., 200).
172. United States v. Jose..... 63 Fed., 951.
Contempt—Degree of proof required—Interference with property in receiver's possession.
173. Jensen et al. v. Norton et al..... 64 Fed., 599.
Patent case.
174. Jensen v. Norton et al..... 64 Fed., 662.
Patent case.

175. Front St. Cable Ry. Co. v. Drake, Marshal et al. ..... 65 Fed., 539.
Execution—Real estate—Right of possession—Jurisdiction—Federal question.

176. German Sav. & Loan Soc. v. Cannon et al. ..... 65 Fed., 542.
Mortgage—Death of mortgagor—Rights of executor and mortgagee—Community property—Death of wife—Administration.

177. Cotting et al. v. Grant St. Elec. Ry. Co. et al. ..... 65 Fed., 545.
Corporation—Contract made by officer.

178. Ralston v. Wash. & C. R. Ry. Co. ..... 65 Fed., 557.
Receivers—Appointment of officers of insolvent corporation.

179. Scottish Dale, The ..... 65 Fed., 810.
Admiralty—Settlement of claim—Fees of marshal.

180. Annie Faxon, In re The ..... 66 Fed., 575.
Admiralty—Limitation of liability statute—Rights of Passengers—Rev. and Aff. (75 Fed., 312)—Dismissed (87 Fed., 961).

181. Jensen Can-Filling Mach. Co. et al. v. Norton ..... 67 Fed., 236.
Patent Case.

*182. Selby v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York ..... 67 Fed., 490.
Pleading—Sufficiency of denial—Life insurance—Effect of Warranty—Affirmed by C. C. A. (72 Fed., 980).

*183. Phinney v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of N. Y. ..... 67 Fed., 493.
Life insurance policy—Lex loci contractus—Reversed by Supreme Court (178 U. S., 327).

184. Columbia, The ..... 67 Fed., 942.
Admiralty appeals—Nonjoinder of parties—Limitation of liability.

185. La Chapelle v. Bubb, U. S. Indian Agent et al. ..... 69 Fed., 481.
Public lands—Homestead rights—Jurisdiction of courts—Injunction—Trespass by Army officer.

186. Nelson, In re ..... 69 Fed., 712.
Territorial statutes—Habeas corpus case.

*187. Bolden v. Jensen et al. ..... 69 Fed., 745.
Admiralty—Damages for maltreatment of seamen.

188. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co. ..... 69 Fed., 871.
Railroad receivership—Ancillary jurisdiction.

189. Cookerly v. Great Northern Ry. Co. et al. ..... 70 Fed., 277.
Practice—Nonsuit as to one of two defendants—Election—Removal of causes—Time of application.

190. Lewis v. Shaw et al. ..... 70 Fed., 289.
Public lands—Bona fide purchaser—Immaterial misstatement in application—Entry for benefit of stranger—Good faith—Cancellation of entry—Rights of bona fide purchaser.

191. Sabin v. Fogarty ..... 70 Fed., 482.
Contempt of court—Seizure by sheriff of property in possession of marshal.

*192. Bolden v. Jensen et al. ..... 70 Fed., 505.
Admiralty—Damages for maltreatment of seamen.

193. Cox v. Robinson ..... 70 Fed., 760.
Contracts—Consideration—National banks—Powers of officers—Presumptions—Transfer of judgment—Authority—Affirmed by C. C. A. (82 Fed., 277).

194. Wood v. Drake et al. ..... 70 Fed., 881.
Removal of causes—Suits against Federal officers—Facts not appearing in complaint.

195. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v Northern Pac. R. Co. ..... 71 Fed., 245.
Railroad companies—Receivers—Preferred claims—Res judicata.

196. United States v. Bellingham Bay Boom Co. ..... 72 Fed., 585.
Rivers and harbors—Obstruction to navigation—Act Congress Sept. 19, 1890—Affirmed by C. C. A. (81 Fed., 658)—Reversed by Supreme Court (176 U. S., 211).

197. American Loan & Trust Co. v. Olympia Lgt. & P. Co. ..... 72 Fed., 620.
Chattel mortgage—Validity—Washington statute—Supplying defects—Affirmed (79 Fed., 695).

198. Bausman v. Denny et al..... 73 Fed., 69.
Equity—Jurisdiction—Ancillary suits—Corporations—Subscriptions to stock—Set-off—Equity pleading—Payment and set-off—Reversed by C. C. A. (79 Fed., 172).

199. United States et al. v. Winans et al..... 73 Fed., 72.
Indian tribes—Right of fishery—Yakima Indian Treaty—Right of United States to sue—Jurisdiction local suits.

*200. Dubley v. Front Street Cable Ry. Co. et al..... 73 Fed., 128.
Negligence—Starting street car.

201. Humboldt Lumber Mfg. Ass'n v. Christopherson..... 73 Fed., 239.
Dissenting opinion—Admiralty—Death by wrongful act.

202. Collins v. Bubb..... 73 Fed., 735.
Public lands—Opening Indian reservation—Mining locations—Indian selections—Mineral lands.

*203. Occidental & O. S. S. Co. v. Smith et al. (two cases)..... 74 Fed., 261.
Admiralty—Collision—Damages for death by wrongful act.

204. Farmers' Loan & Trust Co. v. Northern Pac. R. Co..... 76 Fed., 15.
Equity practice.

205. Brigham et al. v. Kenyon et al..... 76 Fed., 30.
Devise to alien—Validity.

206. American Exch. Nat. Bank v. Northern Pac. R. Co..... 76 Fed., 130.
Contract—Suit by third person.

207. Bishop v. Averill et ux..... 76 Fed., 386.
Jurisdiction—Citizenship.

208. Mallon v. Hyde et al..... 76 Fed., 388.
Removal of cause—Federal question—Bank officers—Individual liability—Fraudulent receipt of deposits.

209. Strathnevis, The..... 76 Fed., 855.
Admiralty—Salvage.

210. State of Washington v. Northern Pac. R. Co. et al..... 75 Fed., 333.
Federal courts—Jurisdiction—Ancillary suits.

211. McAleer et al, v. Lewis et al..... 75 Fed., 734.
Equity pleading—Plea in bar—Replication—Res judicata.

212. Hallam v. Tillinghast..... 75 Fed., 849.
Removal of Causes—National bank—Suit against receivers.

213. Carpenter v. Northern Pac. R. Co. et al..... 75 Fed., 850.
Federal court—Jurisdiction—Suit against receiver—Removal from State court.

214. Burleigh v. Chehalis County et al..... 75 Fed., 873.
Receivers—Sale for taxes—Injunction.

215. Stimson Land Co. v. Hollister..... 75 Fed., 941.
Entry of public land—Fraudulent cancellation—Suspended entries—Trial in land office.

216. Hawley et al. v. Diller..... 75 Fed., 946.
Public lands—Bona fide purchaser—Reversed (178 U. S., 476)—Reversed (81 Fed., 651).

217. Mathews v. Columbia Nat. Bank of Tacoma et al..... 77 Fed., 372.
National banks—Increase of stock—Subscriptions—Comptroller's approval—Reversed (85 Fed., 934).

218. United States v. The James G. Swan et al..... 77 Fed., 473.
Seal fisheries—Behring Sea—Forfeitures—Forfeiture of sealskins—Intent—Equipage of vessel.

*219. City of Kingston, The..... 77 Fed., 655.
Admiralty—Rights of passengers.

220. Rudland et al. v. Mastic et al..... 77 Fed., 688.
Equity—Jurisdiction—Statute of limitations—Ignorance of legal rights.

221. Bowers Dredging Co. et al. v. N. Y. Dredging Co..... 77 Fed., 980.
Patent case.

222. Dexter, Horton & Co. v. Sayward..... 78 Fed., 275.
Sales under executions.

223. Harrisburg Trust Co. v. Shufeldt..... 78 Fed., 292.
Action on note—Demand of payment—Reversed (87 Fed., 669).

224. Baker v. Ault et al..... 78 Fed., 394.
Injunction refused.

*225. M. M. Morrill, The..... 78 Fed., 509.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Aff. (83 Fed., 215).

226. United States et al. v. Alaska Packer's Ass'n..... 79 Fed., 152.
Construction of Indian treaty—Right of national Government to dispose of Indian reservations—State control of fisheries.

227. Dexter, Horton & Co. v. Sayward..... 79 Fed., 237.
Liability of sureties in appeal bond.

228. Krug, In re..... 79 Fed., 308.
Habeas corpus.

229. Addison v. Pac. Coast Milling Co. et al..... 79 Fed., 459.
Corporations—Liability of stockholders—Stockholder's lien for wages.

230. Matthews v. Columbia Nat. Bank et al..... 79 Fed., 558.
National banks—Stockholders—Reversed by C. C. A. (85 Fed., 934).

231. City of Great Falls v. Theis et al..... 79 Fed., 943.
Bonds of municipal corporation.

232. Sabin v. Barnett et al..... 79 Fed., 947.
Official bonds.

233. Wilhelmsen v. Ludlow..... 79 Fed., 979.
Admiralty—Collisions.

234. City of Puebla, The..... 79 Fed., 982.
Admiralty—Salvage.

235. American Loan & Trust Co. v. Union Depot Co..... 80 Fed., 36.
Insolvent corporation—Foreclosure of mortgage—Receivers.

236. Bowers Dredging Co. et al. v. N. Y. Dredging Co..... 80 Fed., 119.
Patent case.

237. U. S. v. La Chappelle et al..... 81 Fed., 152.
Public lands—Opening Indian reservation—Invalid treaty—Cancellation of entries—Estoppel against Government—Private rights.

238. Clark et al. v. Great Northern Ry. Co. et al..... 81 Fed., 282.
Specific performance of contracts.

239. Moore, In re..... 81 Fed., 356.
Habeas corpus—Writ denied—Age of consent.

240. Snohomish Co. v. Puget Sd. Nat. Bank of Everett..... 81 Fed., 518.
Insolvent national banks—Jurisdiction of Federal courts.

241. Smithson v. Hubbell et al..... 81 Fed., 593.
Insolvent national banks—Jurisdiction of Federal courts.

242. Follett v. Tillinghast..... 82 Fed., 241.
Insolvent national banks—Jurisdiction of action against receiver.

243. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Kurtzman..... 82 Fed., 241.
Federal courts—Jurisdiction—Equity powers—Attack on judgment of State court—Equity pleading—Judgment for taxes—Threatened sale.

244. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Balthazar et al..... 82 Fed., 270.
Public lands—Grants to Northern Pacific Railroad Company—Forfeiture.

245. Feurer v. Stewart..... 82 Fed., 294.
Attachment—Code of Washington—Motion to dissolve—Appearance.

246. Tillinghast v. Carr..... 82 Fed., 298.
Promissory note—Consideration—Note payable to national bank—Option to pay in stock of another bank.

247. Calif. Safe Deposit & Tr. Co. v. Yakima Inv. Co..... 82 Fed., 542.
Irrigation companies—Preferred debts—Equity rule of priority—Lateral ditches—Cost of construction.

248. Leary v. Columbia River & P. S. Nav. Co. et al..... 82 Fed., 775.
Jurisdiction of suit to wind up foreign corporation—Denied—Rights of stockholders.

249. United States v. Gue Lim..... 83 Fed., 136.
Exclusion of Chinese—Wife of merchant—Certificate of right to enter—Affirmed by Supreme Court (176 U. S., 459).

250. Yee Gee, In re..... 83 Fed., 145.
Offer to bribe officer—Interpreter of Chinese language—Contemplated exercise of official function.

275. Baker v. Beach et al..... 85 Fed., 836.
National banks—Assessments on stockholders—Liability of estates.

276. Baker v. Reeves et al..... 85 Fed., 837.
Transfer of stock in national bank—Insolvency of bank—Liability for assessments—Liability of owner of stock at time of failure.

277. Lyman D. Foster, The..... 85 Fed., 987.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

278. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Soderberg..... 86 Fed., 49.
N. P. R. Land grant—Injunction granted. (See case No. 346 in this list.)

279. McRae v. Bowers Dredging Co..... 86 Fed., 344.
Equity jurisdiction—Insolvent corporation—Liens—wages.

280. Humboldt, The..... 86 Fed., 351.
Maritime contract—Suit in rem—Admiralty—Jurisdiction—Lien.

281. Wasp, The..... 86 Fed., 470.
Admiralty—Tugs and tows.

282. McFadden et al. v. Mountain View Mining & Milling..... 87 Fed., 154.
Mineral lands in Indian reservation—Restoration to public domain—When open to location—Power vested in President—Opening for settlement—This case was reversed by C. C. A. (97 Fed., 670).—Both courts reversed and case remanded to State court by the Supreme Court (180 U. S., 533).

283. Tustin v. Adams et al..... 87 Fed., 377.
Homestead—Husband & Wife—Community property.

284. Occidental, The..... 87 Fed., 485.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

285. Creagh v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. of U. S. et al..... 88 Fed., 1.
Removal of causes—Separable controversy—Alienage of plaintiff—Aliens—Naturalization—Action for libel.

286. United States v. Eisenbeis et al..... 88 Fed., 4.
Federal courtc—Following State decisions—Judgment liens—Equitable interests in lands—Deposits in court—Condemnation proceedings—Rights of creditors—Affirmed (112 190).

287. Lamont v. Leedy et al..... 88 Fed., 72.
Trade-marks What may be appropriated—Descriptive terms—Unfair competition.

288. Highland light, The..... 88 Fed., 296.
Admiralty pleading—Cross libels.

289. Victorian, The..... 88 Fed., 797.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

290. McElroy v. British-American Assur. Co..... 88 Fed., 863.
Fire insurance policies.—This case was reversed by C. C. A. (94 Fed., 990). Subsequently, in a different case, the law as laid down in this opinion was affiremd by the Supreme Court (183 U. S., 308).

291. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. Co. v. Cunningham..... 89 Fed., 594.
Animals—Injunction to prevent trespass—Right of pasturage.

*292. Guardian, The..... 89 Fed., 998.
Admiralty—Rights of passengers.

293. Lawrence v. Times Printing Co. et al..... 90 Fed., 24.
Equity jurisdiction—Parties.

*294. Mary A. Troop, The..... 90 Fed., 307.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

295. McRae v. Bowers Dredging Co..... 90 Fed., 360.
Taxation—Situs of property—Dredges—Collection of tax against insolvent corporation.

296. Lewis et al. v. Johnson..... 90 Fed., 673.
Jurisdiction—Transfer of cause from District Court of Alaska.

297. United States v. Four Bottles Sour-Mash Whisky..... 90 Fed., 720.
Indians—Title to public lands—Extinguishment of Indian title—Introducing liquors into Indian country—Mineral claims within reservation—Transporting liquor across reservation.

298. United States v. Murphy..... 91 Fed., 120.
Criminal law—Importing liquors into Alaska—Jurisdiction of offense.

299. Sommers v. Carbon Hill Co..... 91 Fed., 337.
New trial—Surprise—Trial—Instructions—Commenting on the testimony—Master and Servant—Action for personal injury—Sufficiency of evidence—Affirmed by C. C. A. (107 Fed., 270).

300. One thousand dollars..... 91 Fed., 374.
Indictment for counterfeiting.

301. Provident Life & Tr. Co of Philadelphia v. Mills..... 91 Fed., 435.
Conflicting claims to property levied upon under an execution from State court—Injunction against sheriff granted—Reversed by C. C. A. (100 Fed., 344).

302. Bella, The..... 91 Fed., 540.
Admiralty—Maritime liens.

303. Sharkey v. Port Blakely Mill Co..... 92 Fed., 425.
Removal of causes—Diversity of citizenship—Joinder of separate causes of action—Affirmed by C. C. A. (102 Fed., 259).

304. United States v. Younger..... 92 Fed., 672.
Procedure to recover a penalty for a statutory offense.

*305. Lakme, The..... 93 Fed., 230.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Extra wages awarded for extra work.

*306. A. M. Baxter, The..... 93 Fed., 479.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

307. Retriever, The..... 93 Fed., 480.
Maritime liens—Brokerage commissions for procuring seamen.

308. United States v. Tennant et al..... 93 Fed., 613.
Condemnation of land by United States for fortifications—Procedure—New trial.

309. Durant v. Corbin..... 94 Fed., 382.
Mineral lands—Joint location of placer claims—Rights in claims on Indian lands—Necessity of showing actual mineral character of land.

310. Ledoux v. Forester et al..... 94 Fed., 600.
Mining claims—Validity of location—Prior discovery of vein or lode-marking boundaries of location—Affirmed by C. C. A. (99 Fed., 1004).

311. Evangel, The..... 94 Fed., 680.
Maritime liens—Money supplied to vessel—Effect of sale of vessel in admiralty—Surety on release bond—Subrogation.

312. George et al. v. Riddle et al..... 94 Fed., 689.
Public lands—Northern Pac. Railroad grant—Rights acquired by private entry—Compelling conveyance by patentee.

313. Doremus v. Root et al..... 94 Fed., 760.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Case remanded to State court.

314. Cronenwett v. Boston & A. Transp. Co..... 95 Fed., 52.
Maritime liens—Insolvency of owner—Effect of receivership—Proceeds of insurance.

315. Fees payable by voluntary bankrupts, In re..... 95 Fed., 120.
Bankruptcy—Voluntary—Filing fees—Poverty affidavit.

316. C. F. Sargent, The..... 95 Fed., 179.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

317. South Portland, The..... 95 Fed., 295.
Costs in admiralty—Suits in rem—Expense of procuring release bond—Affirmed by C. C. A. (100 Fed., 494).

318. Yamasaka, In re..... 95 Fed., 652.
Aliens—Deportation of pauper immigrants—Authority of ministerial officers—Reversed by C. C. A. (100 Fed., 404).

*319. Marion Chilcott et al., The..... 95 Fed., 688.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

320. Jane Grey, The..... 95 Fed., 693.
Shipping—Liability of owners—Negligence causing death on the high seas.

*321. Fred E. Sander, The..... 95 Fed., 829.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

322. Credo Mining & Smelting Co. v. Highland Min. & Mill Co..... 95 Fed., 911.
Mining claims—Sufficiency of description—Permanent monuments—Conflicting locations—Evidence of Boundaries.

*323. Adams et al. v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co..... 95 Fed., 938.
Wrongful death—Nature of statutory action—Contract with deceased for limitation of liability—Affirmed by C. C. A. (116 Fed., 324)—Reversed by Supreme Court (192 U. S., 440).

324. Stout v. Weedin..... 95 Fed., 1001.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

*325. Erickson v. Pacific Coast Steamship Co..... 96 Fed., 80.
Action for wrongful death—What law governs—Alaska statutes.

326. McBride v. Sunset Telephone Co..... 96 Fed., 81.
Damages—Breach of contract—Mental suffering—Telephone companies—Failure to deliver message—Measure of damages.

327. Puget Sound Reduction Co., In re..... 96 Fed., 90.
Customs duties—Interpretation of tariff law of 1890.

328. Chung Fat et al., In re..... 96 Fed., 202.
Thirteenth constitutional amendment—Involuntary servitude—Seamen—Habeas corpus—Shipping articles—Deviation of ship from ordinary voyage—Release.

329. United States v. Saunders et al..... 96 Fed., 268.
Indians—Homesteads on public lands—Statutory provisions—Effect of void limitation in patent—Effect of act of 1884—Equity jurisdiction—Suit by United States to annul deed.

330. Sir Robert Fernie, The..... 96 Fed., 348.
Admiralty—Salvage.

331. Jefferson, In re..... 96 Fed., 826.
Examinations in bankruptcy—Competency—Wife or bankrupt—Privileged communications—Constitutional law.

332. Thomas, In re..... 96 Fed., 828.
Bankruptcy—Homestead exemption—Rights of mortgagee.

333. Neustadter et al v. Chicago Dry Goods Co..... 96 Fed., 830.
Involuntary bankruptcy—Procedure.

334. Plastic Fireproof Construction Co. v. City & Co. of San Francisco..... 97 Fed., 620.
Patent case.

335. Humboldt, The..... 97 Fed., 656.
Carriers of passengers—Liability for loss of baggage—Steamship companies.

336. Conhaim, In re..... 97 Fed., 923.
Bankruptcy—Preferences—Payment of money—Proof by preferred creditor—Knowledge of creditor—Surrender of preference.

337. Buelow et ux., In re ..... 98 Fed., 86.
Bankruptcy—Homestead—Exemptions.

338. United States v. Saunders, collector, et al ..... 98 Fed., 196.
Customs Districts—Compensation of collector—Change in statute—Affirmed by C. C. A. (114 Fed., 42).

339. Gilbert v. Seatco Mfg. Co. et al ..... 98 Fed., 208.
Corporations—Rights of stockholders—Subrogation.

*340. Carrier Dove, The ..... 98 Fed., 313.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Extra wages awarded.

341. Aldrich v. Skinner ..... 98 Fed., 375.
Bankruptcy—Insolvent national bank—Assessment of stock.

342. Aldrich v. McClaine ..... 98 Fed., 378.
National banks—Actions to enforce assessment—Limitation—Affirmed (197 U. S., 154), reversing 106 Fed., 791.

*343. Forteviot, The ..... 98 Fed., 440.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

344. Cleveland, The ..... 98 Fed., 631.
Maritime Liens—Release of vessel on bond—Discharge of Lien.

345. United States v. Hadley ..... 99 Fed., 437.
Criminal law—Jurisdiction—Indians—Half-breeds—Citizenship—Jurisdiction.

*346. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Soderberg ..... 99 Fed., 506.
N. P. R. land grant—Mineral land—Affirmed by C. C. A. (104 Fed., 425)—Affirmed by Supreme Court (188 U. S., 526).

*347. Hathaway et al. v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of N. Y ..... 99 Fed., 534.
Life Insurance Policy—Reversed by C. C. A. (106 Fed., 815).

348. Williams, In re ..... 99 Fed., 544.
Bankruptcy—Jurisdiction—Domicile of Bankrupt.

349. Jane Grey, The ..... 99 Fed., 582.
Admiralty—Rights of passengers—Harter Act.

*350. Homer, the ..... 99 Fed., 794.
Admiralty—Damages for a personal injury—In this case an award of $1,200.00 was by the C. C. A. reduced to $6,000 (109 Fed., 572).

351. Cowley et al. v. city of Spokane et al ..... 99 Fed., 840.
Municipal corporations—Assessment for street improvement—Dedication of streets.

*352. Ida McKay, The ..... 99 Fed., 1002.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

353. Conhaim, in re ..... 100 Fed., 268.
Bankruptcy—Collection of taxes—Payment by trustee—Sale of property—Taxes assessed to purchaser.

*354. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of N. Y. v. Dingley ..... 100 Fed., 408.
This decision by the C. C. A. affirms a judgment rendered by Judge Hanford adverse to the insurance company.

355. Dueber v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co ..... 100 Fed., 424.
Wrongful death—Action for damages—Washington statute.

356. Dode, The ..... 100 Fed., 478.
Maritime liens—Enforcement—Intervention—After sale of vessel.

*357. Prussia, The ..... 100 Fed., 484.
Admiralty—Jurisdiction—Procedure—Rights of shippers.

358. Ernest A. Hamill, The ..... 100 Fed., 509.
Admiralty—Collision.

359. Gen. McPherson, The ..... 100 Fed., 860.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—International treaty.

360. Ripon Knitting Works et al. v. Schreiber ..... 101 Fed., 810.
Bankruptcy—Procedure for contempt—Power to coerce bankrupt to surrender assets—Petition for revision dismissed by C. C. A. (104 Fed., 1006).

*361. Occidental, The ..... 101 Fed., 997.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

362. Davenport, In re ..... 102 Fed., 540.
Habeas corpus—Interstate commerce—Constitutional law.

363. Bibbs v. McNeeley et al ..... 102 Fed., 594.
Sherman antitrust law—Reversed by C. C. A. (118 Fed., 120).

364. Rudnick, In re ..... 102 Fed., 750.
Bankruptcy—Sale of partnership property—Title of trustee—Preference.

365. Pierce, In re ..... 102 Fed., 977.
Bankruptcy—Jurisdiction—Property of deceased partner—Administration—Possession of administrator.

366. Calderhead v. Downing et al ..... 103 Fed., 27.
Removal of causes—Separable controversies—Parties.

367. Progreso, The ..... 103 Fed., 504.
Admiralty—Charter parties—Rights of passengers.

368. Hoge v. Canton Ins. Office of Hongkong, Ltd ..... 103 Fed., 513.
Removal of causes—Assignees of contracts—Parties.

369. Ravenscourt, The ..... 103 Fed., 668.
Admiralty—Collisions—Affirmed by C. C. A (109 Fed., 660).

370. Northern Pacific Ry. Co. v. Cunningham ..... 103 Fed., 708.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Amount in controversy—Injunction sued for by railroad company granted.

371. United States v. 246½ pounds of tobacco ..... 103 Fed., 791.
Internal revenue—Forfeitures—Existence of mortgage on property of cigar manufacturer.

*372. Mermaid, The ..... 104 Fed., 301.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Decree awarding wages reversed by C. C. A. (115 Fed., 13).

373. Roberts v. Pac. & A. Ry. & Nav. Co. et al ..... 104 Fed., 577.
Removal of causes—Diverse citizenship of parties—This decision cited with approval by Supreme Court (199 U. S., 259)—Affirmed by C. C. A., but case reversed for error subsequent (121 Fed., 785).

374. Hill et al. v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co ..... 104 Fed., 754.
Release—Impeachment in action at law—Federal courts—Confirming to State practice—Equitable issues in actions at law—Affirmed by C. C. A. (113 Fed., 914).

375. Pellett v. Great Northern Ry. Co. et al ..... 105 Fed., 194.
Removal of causes—Costs on remand.

*376. Peterman v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co ..... 105 Fed., 335.
Wrongful death—Right of action for damages—Idaho statute—Parties entitled to sue—Parent.

377. James G. Swan, The ..... 106 Fed., 94.
Admiralty — Unlawful Sealing — Condemnation — Judgment—Res judicata—Liens—Limitation of lien—State statute—Validity—Application.

378. Charles D. Lane, The ..... 106 Fed., 746.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

379. Northern Light, The (two cases) ..... 106 Fed., 748.
Admiralty—Bottomry—Bonds—Maritime liens.

380. Elm Branch, The ..... 106 Fed., 952.
Admiralty—Salvage.

381. Erickson v. United States ..... 107 Fed., 204.
Action on contract to build a lighthouse for the Government.

382. Santa Ana, The ..... 107 Fed., 527.
Admiralty—Salvage.

383. Brigham-Hopkins Co. v. Gross et al ..... 107 Fed., 769.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Amount in controversy—Joinder of causes of action—Parties—Claims against partnership—Action against surviving partners—Limitations.

384. City of Aberdeen, The ..... 107 Fed., 996.
Admiralty—Collision.

385. White v. City of Tacoma ..... 109 Fed., 32.
Municipal corporations—Assessment for street improvement—Constitutional law.

386. Kromer v. Everett Imp. Co. et al ..... 110 Fed., 22.
Federal jurisdiction—Citizenship—Intervention.

387. Lawler et al., In re..... 110 Fed., 135.
Bankruptcy—Debts having priority—Wages under Washington statutes.

388. United States v. Kopp..... 110 Fed., 160.
Indians—Status of Puyallups—Intoxicating liquors.

*389. Valencia, The..... 110 Fed., 221.
Admiralty—Rights of passengers—Affirmed by C. C. A. (117 Fed., 68).

390. Smith et al. v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co..... 110 Fed., 341.
Witnesses—Depositions—Examination of adverse party—State statute—Overruled by Supreme Court (194 U. S., 303–310).

391. Brown v. Puget Sound Reduction Co..... 110 Fed., 383
Patent case.

392. Del Norte, The..... 111 Fed., 542
Admiralty—Charter party—Affirmed by C. C. A. (119 Fed., 118).

393. Bertha, The..... 111 Fed., 550.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Discharge of officer for intoxication.

*394. South Portland, The..... 111 Fed., 767.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Damages awarded for attempt to coerce seamen to involuntary servitude.

395. Clark, In re..... 111 Fed., 893.
Bankruptcy—Evidence to establish partnership—Evidence considered—Reversed (122 Fed., 561).

396. Van Horn v. Kittitas County..... 112 Fed., 1.
Contracts—Illegal condition—Feigned suit—Federal courts—Jurisdiction—Allegation of jurisdictional facts.

397. Laura Madsen, The..... 112 Fed., 72.
Admiralty—Authority of shipmaster to pledge the credit of the ship—Maritime liens.

398. Flottbek, The..... 112 Fed., 682.
Admiralty—Salvage.

*399. Hill et al. v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. of N. Y..... 113 Fed., 44.
Appeal—Reversal on single point—Retrial—Law of case—Affirmed by C. C. A. (118 Fed., 708)—Reversed (193 U. S., 551).

400. United States v. Freeman et al..... 113 Fed., 370
Eminent Domain.

401. Laurel, The..... 113 Fed., 373
Admiralty—Maritime contract—Liens—Shipmaster.

402. Juneau, The..... 113 Fed., 514.
Admiralty—Rights of Seamen.

403. Lakme, The..... 113 Fed., 772.
Collision—Steam vessels meeting—Negligent navigation—Affirmed by C. C. A. (118 Fed., 972)—Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

*404. Falls of Keltie, The..... 114 Fed., 357.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Foreign ships.

*405. Wade v. National Bank of Commerce of Tacoma..... 114 Fed., 377.
Malicious prosecution of civil action.

406. Monroe, In re..... 114 Fed., 398.
Bankrupts—Discharge—Effect—Setting aside.

407. Stoddart, In re..... 114 Fed., 486.
Bankruptcy—Discharge—Concealment of assets.

408. Celestine, In re..... 114 Fed., 551.
Habeas corpus—Status of Indian allottee—Jurisdiction of Federal courts.

409. Robert Dollar, The..... 115 Fed., 218.
Maritime liens—Supplies—Defense by charterer—State statutes—Constitutionality applicability to foreign ships—Washington statutes—Necessary supplies—Bar fixtures and supplies.

410. Robert Dollar, The..... 116 Fed., 79.
Admiralty—Costs—Disbursement for surety company bond.

411. Schenck, In re..... 116 Fed., 554.
Discharge of bankrupt—Fraudulent conveyance—Gifts—Rights of creditors—Limitation as to time.

412. Carlisle et al. v. Sunset Telephone & Tel. Co..... 116 Fed., 896.
Removal of causes—Diversity of citizenship.

413. O'Callaghan et al. v. O'Brien et al..... 116 Fed., 934.
Jurisdiction of Federal courts—Nuncupative will—Washington statutes—Reversed by C. C. A. (125 Fed., 657)—Reversed by Supreme Court (199 U. S., 89).

*414. Troop, The..... 117 Fed., 557.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Foreign ship affirmed (125 Fed., 672)—Sustained (190 U. S., 170).

415. State of Washington v. Island Lime Co..... 117 Fed., 777.
Removal of causes—Federal question—Case remanded to State court.

416. Lownsdale et al. v. Gray's Harbor Boom Co..... 117 Fed., 983.
Title to real estate—Equity jurisdiction of Federal courts.

417. McCune v. Essig et ux..... 118 Fed., 273.
Removal of causes—Federal question—Public lands—Title acquired under homestead law—Effect of patent to widow of settler—Affirmed by C. C. A. (122 Fed., 588)—Affirmed by Supreme Court (199 U. S., 382).

*418. Troop, The..... 118 Fed., 769.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Foreign ships—$4,000 awarded as damages—Affirmed by C. C. A. (128 Fed., 856)—Certiorari refused by Supreme Court (195 U. S., 632).

*419. Alaska Packer's Ass'n v. Letson et al..... 119 Fed., 599.
Patent case—Affirmed as modified by C. C. A. (130 Fed., 129).

420. Van v. Pacific Coast Co..... 120 Fed., 699.
False imprisonment—Facts justifying arrest without warrant—Malicious prosecution—Probable cause—Malice.

421. Pinmore, The..... 121 Fed., 423.
Admiralty—Salvage.

422. Glenogle, The..... 122 Fed., 503.
Admiralty—Salvage.

423. Kaga Maru, The..... 123 Fed., 139.
Admiralty—Collision.

424. Albion, The..... 123 Fed., 189.
Admiralty—Maritime tort—Pleadings.

425. Seattle Gas & Electric Co. v. Citizens' Light & Power Co..... 123 Fed., 588.
Corporation—Ultra vires—Power of New Jersey corporation as limited by law of its domicile—Injunction granted. This decision was not defended in the C. C. A., the parties having settled their controversy and the judgment was reversed (125 Fed., 1001).

426. Energia, The..... 124 Fed., 842.
Admiralty—Charter party—Liens—Washington statutes.

427. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Shell et al..... 125 Fed., 979.
Jurisdiction of Federal Court—Amount in Controversy. (See 143 Fed., 1004.)

*428. Smith et al. v. Empire State Idaho Mining & Development Co. 127 Fed., 462.
Jurisdiction of Federal Courts—Transitory action—Damages for death by wrongful act—Motion to dismiss denied.

429. Holden et ux., In re..... 127 Fed., 980.
Bankruptcy—Exemptions—Wages—Head of a family—Statutes—Amendment.

430. Page, In re..... 128 Fed., 317.
Customs duties—Live Stock—Animals imported for breeding purposes.

431. Trader, The..... 129 Fed., 462.
Admiralty—Collision.

432. Bird v. Terry..... 129 Fed., 472.
Indians—Allotment of lands in severalty—rights conveyed by patent under Treaty—Appeal dismissed by C. C. A. (128 Fed., 592).

433. Kelly v. Grand Circle, Women of Woodcraft..... 129 Fed., 830.
Federal Courts—Removal of Cause—Special proceedings—Mandamus.
434. Bevis v. Markland et al..... 130 Fed., 226
Adverse claims to mining property.
435. Gaskill et al., In re..... 130 Fed., 235.
Insolvency—Trust fund—Sales in bulk—Statutes—Compliance—Trust funds—Bankruptcy—Preferred claims.
436. Olson v. Buffalo Hump Min. Co..... 130 Fed., 1017.
Foreign corporation—Transitory action—Jurisdiction of defendant—Smith case (127 Fed., 462) distinguished.
437. Clifford v. Williams et ux..... 131 Fed., 100.
Federal Courts—Jurisdiction—Habeas corpus—States—Judgments—Husband and wife.
438. O'Connell et al. v. Pinnacle Gold Mines Co..... 131 Fed., 106.
Mining claims—Statutes—Ejectment—Administrators—Heirs—Nonsuit—Affirmed (140 Fed., 854).
439. Robert Rickmers, The..... 131 Fed., 638.
Admiralty—Collisions—Affirmed by C. C. A., but amount of damages reduced (142 Fed., 305).
440. Alcalde, The..... 132 Fed., 576.
Admiralty—Maritime liens—Authority of ship master.
441. United States v. Ah Sou..... 132 Fed., 878.
Aliens—Constitutional law—Chinese exclusion—Reversed by C. C. A. (138 Fed., 775).
442. Nottage v. Sawmill Phoenix..... 133 Fed., 979.
Master and Servant—Use of Unguarded Machinery—Washington statute—Sawmills—Interpretation of statutes—Damages—Ambiguity.
443. Amiral Cecille, The..... 134 Fed., 673.
Admiralty—Collision.
444. Weir et al. v. Northwestern Commercial Co..... 134 Fed., 991.
Admiralty—Charter party—Demurrage.
445. United States v. Seattle Brewing & Malting Co..... 135 Fed., 597.
Action for Penalty—Statutory crimes—Interpretation of Statutes—Judgment—Pleadings—Cause of action.
446. Cottage City, The..... 136 Fed., 496.
Admiralty—Salvage.
447. Hutchinson, Ex parte..... 137 Fed., 949.
Habeas Corpus—Constitutional law—City ordinance—Trading stamps—Petitioner discharged.
*448. Neck, The..... 138 Fed., 144.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Foreign ship—International treaties.
449. Bellingham et al., The..... 138 Fed., 619.
Admiralty—Collision.
450. Viles, Ex parte..... 139 Fed., 68.
Habeas corpus—Status of Indian allottees—Petitioner discharged.
*451. Elihu Thompson, The..... 139 Fed., 89.
Admiralty—Rights of Seamen.
452. South Bay, The..... 139 Fed., 273.
Admiralty—Salvage.
453. Brown v. Urquhart, sheriff..... 139 Fed., 846.
Habeas corpus — Constitutional law — Petitioner discharged—Reversed by Supreme Court (205 U. S., 179).
454. Jackson, Ex parte..... 140 Fed., 266.
Habeas corpus—Petitioner discharged—Reversed by C. C. A. (143 Fed., 783).
455. Hutchinson et al. v. Smith, Sheriff, et al..... 140 Fed., 982.
Suit against State officers to test constitutionality of State law—dismissed.
*456. Geiger v. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co..... 141 Fed., 169.
Organization of Federal Courts—Rights of passengers—Affirmed by C. C. A. (145 Fed., 504).

457. Royea's Estate, In re ..... 143 Fed., 182.
Bankruptcy—Preferred claims—Trusts—Equity—Creditors.

458. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Shell ..... 143 Fed., 1004.
Jurisdiction of Federal Courts—Amount in controversy—Same as case No. 427 in this abstract.

459. Klenk et al. v. Byrne et al ..... 143 Fed., 1008.
Jurisdiction of Federal Courts—Tax title.

*460. Amazon, The ..... 144 Fed., 153.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

461. Columbia George, Ex parte ..... 144 Fed., 985
Habeas corpus—Petitioner remanded—Kindred case affirmed by Supreme Court (212 U. S., 542).

462. United States v. Simon ..... 146 Fed., 89.
Bankruptcy—Immunity from prosecution.

*463. Barbara Hernster, The ..... 146 Fed., 734.
Admiralty—Rights of Seamen—Affirmed by C. C. A. (146 Fed., 732).

464. Connor, In re ..... 146 Fed., 998.
Bankruptcy—Exemptions—Washington statute.

465. Perfection Pile-Preserving Co. v. United States ..... 147 Fed., 922.
Customs duties—Classification—Round timber.

466. Migliavacca Wine Co. v. United States ..... 148 Fed., 142.
Customs duties—Evidence of origin of goods—Revenue laws.

*467. Caffyn v. Peabody et al ..... 149 Fed., 294.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen.

468. Bartleson v. Feidler et al ..... 149 Fed., 299.
Judgments—Res judicata—Order of distribution of probate court—Partnership—Evidence to establish—Creditors' suit against heirs—Affirmed by C. C. A. (161 Fed., 30).

469. United States v. Newth ..... 149 Fed., 302.
Criminal law — Alaska — Jurisdiction — Venue — Indictment—Interpretation of statutes.

470. Baker v. Duwamish Mill Co ..... 149 Fed., 612.
Removal of causes—Judgment—Jurisdiction—Time.

471. Grace Dollar, The (two cases) ..... 149 Fed., 793.
Admiralty-Rights of seamen—Affirmed by C. C. A. (160 Fed., 906).

472. Charles Nelson, The ..... 149 Fed., 846.
Admiralty—Rights of passengers.

473. Plummer v. Two hundred tons of rails et al ..... 149 Fed., 887.
Admiralty—Contract of affreightment—Liens.

474. Woodward v. Davidson et ux ..... 150 Fed., 840.
Specific performance of contract—Res judicata—Reversed by C. C. A. (156 Fed., 915).

*475. Malloy v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co ..... 151 Fed., 1019.
Employers' liability act of June 11, 1906.

*476. Plummer v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co ..... 152 Fed., 206.
Constitutional law—Employers' liability act of June 11, 1906—Overruled by Supreme Court (207 U. S., 463).

*477. Turtle et al. v. Northwestern S. S. Co ..... 154 Fed., 146.
Admiralty—Rights of seamen—Damages awarded for deceit in securing crew—Affirmed by C. C. A. (162 Fed., 256).

478. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co. v. Pac. Traction Co. et al ..... 155 Fed., 259.
Injunction—Grounds—Establishment of legal right—Necessity—Appeal dismissed (160 Fed., 1023).

479. Printer, The ..... 155 Fed., 441.
Towage—Damages—Ships and shipping—Affirmed by C. C. A. (164 Fed., 314).

480. Dodge v. Frank Waterhouse & Co. et al ..... 156 Fed., 57.
Trusts—Contracts creating—Violation of duty by trustee—Equity—Necessary parties—Affirmed by C. C. A. (162 Fed., 1).

481. Warren et ux. v. Oregon & Wash. Realty Co. et al ..... 156 Fed., 203.
Reversed and remanded (176 Fed., 336)—Quieting title—Jurisdiction of Federal court—Statutory right of action.

482. Adler v. Galbraith, Bacon & Company..... 156 Fed.. 259.
Admiralty—Jurisdiction—Shipping—Charter party—Authority of agent to bind principal—Pleadings—Fraud—Interpretation of contracts—Foreign laws—Foreign ships—Laches—Notice—Demurrage—Damage.

483. Korsstrom v. Barnes et al..... 156 Fed., 280.
Wills—Effect as passing title—Devise to trustees—Limitation of actions—Accrual of cause of action.

484. Alaska Banking & Safe Dep. Co. of Nome, Alaska, v. Insurance Companies..... 156 Fed., 710.
Insurance—Marine insurance—Defenses against liability—Deviation from voyage.

485. Charles E. Falk, The..... 157 Fed., 780.
Maritime liens—Authority of master to pledge credit of vessel—Unauthorized loan—Agency—Ships and shipping.

*486. J. G. Lindauer, The..... 158 Fed,. 449.
Shipping—Negligent obstruction of slip by mooring line—Liability for damages caused—Damages—Personal injury—Amount of award.

487. Osborne et al. v. McDonald et al..... 159 Fed., 791.
Bastards — Property — Inheritance from bastard—Presumptions — Marriage — Proof — Evidence — Affirmed by C. C. A. (167 Fed., 894).

488. Tremont, The..... 160 Fed., 1016.
Collision — Steam vessels crossing—Fog—Affirmed by C. C. A. (161 Fed., 1).

*489. Northwestern S. S. Co. v. Maritime Ins. Co..... 161 Fed., 166.
Insurance—Construction of policy—Law governing—Marine insurance—Policy against war risks—Avoidance of policy—Failure to disclose "material facts."

490. Lung Wing Wun, Ex parte..... 161 Fed., 211.
Habeas corpus—Chinese exclusion law—Writ refused.

491. Roberts v. Great Northern Ry. Co..... 161 Feb.; 239.
Death—Action for wrongful death—Construction of statute—Appeal dismissed by C. C. A. (138 Fed., 711).

492. Morreau Gas Fixture Co. v. Cox..... 161 Fed., 381.
Husband and wife—Partnership—Liability of wife as partner.

493. Tang Tun et ux., Gang Gong, Can Pon, In re..... 161 Fed., 618.
Habeas corpus—Chinese exclusion law—Tang Tung et ux. and Gang Gong discharged—Can Pon ordered to be deported—Tang Tun case reversed (168 Fed., 488)—Gang Gong case reversed (168 Fed., 488)—Can Pon case affirmed (168 Fed., 479).

494. Alaska American Fish Co. et al., In re..... 162 Fed., 498.
Involuntary bankruptcy—Manufacturing corporation.

495. Columbia Val. R. Co. v. Portland & S. Ry. Co..... 162 Fed., 609.
Jurisdiction of Federal Court—Railroad right of way—Public lands—Affirmed by C. C. A. (162 Fed., 603).

496. Ontario Land Co. v. Wilfong et al..... 162 Fed., 999.
Tax title—Reversed by C. C. A. (171 Fed., 51).

497. Buntaro Kumagai, In re..... 163 Fed., 922.
Naturalization of alien—Japanese not eligible.

498. Korsstrom v. Barnes et al..... 167 Fed., 216.
Wills—Charities—Trust estate in perpetuity.

499. Alaska Fishing & Developing Co., In re..... 167 Fed., 875.
Bankruptcy—Marshalling assets—Maritime liens.

500. Perry v. London Assur. Corporation..... 167 Fed., 905.
Fire insurance policy—Affirmed by C. C. A. (167 Fed., 902).

501. United States v. Holt..... 168 Fed., 141.
Murder case—Affirmed by Supreme Court (218 U. S., 245).

502. United States Nisbet..... 168 Fed., 1005.
Naturalization of aliens—Cancellation of certificate.

503. Corrigan v. Brown et al..... 169 Fed., 477.
Constitutional law.

504. United States v. O'Brien et al..... 170 Fed., 508.
Indians—Title to real estate—States title to shore.

505. United States et al. v. Ashton et al..... 170 Fed., 509.
Indian reservations—Tacoma tide land case—Appeal dismissed (220 U. S., 604).
506. United States v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co..... 170 Fed., 854.
N. P. R. land grant—Abandoned homestead entry.
507. Crowder, Ex parte..... 171 Fed., 250.
Habeas corpus—Peddling without license—Writ refused.
508. Alice, The..... 172 Fed., 527.
Admiralty—Carriers of merchandise—Liens.
509. Independent Transp. Co. v. Canton Ins. Office..... 173 Fed., 564.
Marine insurance policy.
*510. United States v. Portland Coal & Coke Co. et al..... 173 Fed., 566.
Fraudulent entries of coal land—Patents cancelled.
511. Gill v. Waterhouse..... 175 Fed., 805.
Liability of guarantor—Statute of limitations.
512. Celtic Monarch, The..... 175 Fed., 1006.
Admiralty—Collisions.
513. United States v. Yamashita..... 175 Fed., 1018.
Customs duties—Construction of Dingley tariff law of 1897.
514. Seattle Brewing & Malting Co. v. United States..... 176 Fed., 125.
Customs duties—Construction of Dingley tariff law of 1897.
515. United States v. M. Furuya & Co..... 176 Fed., 480.
Customs duties—Construction of Dingley tariff law of 1897.
516. Calif. Nav. & Improvement Co. v. Union Transp. Co..... 176 Fed., 533.
Admiralty—Collisions—Measure of damages.
517. Mills v. Smith..... 177 Fed., 657.
Bankruptcy—Chattel mortgages—Washington statute—Reversed by C. C. A. (177 Fed., 652).
518. Nelson v. Svea Publ. Co. et al..... 178 Fed., 136.
Bankruptcy—Fraudulent transfer of assets.
*519. General De Sonis, The..... 179 Fed., 123.
Admiralty—Maritime tort—Personal injury—$1,500 awarded.
*520. Hovden v. Seattle Electric Co..... 180 Fed., 487.
Damages for personal injury—Judgment for $1,500—Affirmed by C. C. A. (190 Fed., 7).
521. Murray v. Seattle Cedar Lumber Mfg. Co..... 181 Fed., 843.
Patent case.
*522. Knohr & Burchard v. Pacific Creosoting Co..... 181 Fed., 856.
Charter party—Damage to cargo.
523. Nippon Trading Co., In re..... 182 Fed., 959.
Bankruptcy—Procedure.
524. David v. McRae et al..... 183 Fed., 812.
Equity practice—Specific performance of contracts—Affirmed by C. C. A. (184 Fed., 988).
525. Calif. Nav. & Improvement Co. v. Stockton Milling..... 184 Fed., 369.
Admiralty—Contract of affreightment—Damage to cargo.
526. Meyer, Wilson & Co. v. Everett Pulp & Paper Co..... 184 Fed., 945.
Sales by sample—Implied warranty—Reversed by C. C. A. (193 Fed., 857).
*527. Pac. Creosoting Co. v. Thames & Mersey Marine Ins..... 184 Fed., 947.
Marine insurance policy.
528. North American Dredging Co. v. Pac. Mail S. S. Co..... 185 Fed., 698.
Admiralty—Obstruction to navigation—Harbor of Honolulu.
529. United States v. Munday et al..... 186 Fed., 375.
Indictment for conspiracy—Alaska coal claims reversed by Supreme Court (222 U. S., 175).
*530. Southern Pac. Co. v. Arlington Heights Fruit Co..... 191 Fed., 113.
Sherman antitrust law—Suit for injunction to restrain increase of railroad rates, pending action by Interstate Commerce Commission—Jurisdiction denied by majority—Dissenting opinion by Hanford.

531. Northwestern S. S. Co. v. Cochran ..... 191 Fed., 146.
Action on assigned cause of action—Attorneys—Alaska code—Judgment for plaintiff affirmed by majority—Dissenting opinion by Hanford.

*532. Aurora Shipping Co. v. Boyce ..... 191 Fed., 960.
Admiralty—Damages for death—Caused by wrongful act—Oregon statutes—Judgment for plaintiff affirmed.

533. Matsumura v. Higgins, sheriff ..... 187 Fed., 601.
Order for deportation of alien—Importer of girl for immoral purpose—Affirmed.

534. Amalgamated Sugar Co. v. U. S. Nat. Bank of Portland, Oregon. 187 Fed., 746.
Banks and banking—Checks—Transfer—Bona fide purchaser—Indorsement—Rights of indorsee.

*535. San Pedro, L. A. & S. L. R. Co. v. Thomas et al ..... 187 Fed., 790.
Damages for death by wrongful act—Judgment for plaintiff affirmed.

536. United States v. Axman et al ..... 193 Fed., 644.
Contractors bond—Decision of appellate court—Law of the case.

537. Corcoran v. Dist. Court for Dist. of Alaska ..... 187 Fed., 813.
Mandamus—Disbarred attorney.

*538. Tacoma Ry. & Power Co. et al. v. Pierce County ..... 193 Fed., 90.
Taxation—Suits for injunction for alleged invidious discrimination in assessment of property of corporation—Dismissed on final hearing.

539. Liberman, In re ..... 193 Fed., 301.
Naturalization of Alien—Application denied for failure to comply with requirements of statute.

540. Davis v. McEwen Bros ..... 193 Fed., 305.
Guaranty—Contract executed by agent of undisclosed principle.

541. Chaplin v. United States ..... 193 Fed., 885.
Indictment for conspiracy—Desert land law—Judgment of conviction affirmed by majority—Dissenting opinion by Hanford.

542. Tokai Maru, The ..... 190 Fed., 450.
Penalty for fishing by aliens in waters of Alaska.

543. Europe, The ..... 190 Fed., 475.
Admiralty—Collision—Vessel at anchor in navigable river.

*544. City & Co. of San Francisco v. United Railroads ..... 190 Fed., 513.
City ordinance—Injunction sued for by street car corporation refused—Concurring opinion by Hanford.

545. Sperry & Hutchinson Co. v. City of Tacoma et al ..... 190 Fed., 682.
City ordinance — Trading stamps — Injunction granted.

546. Loggie v. Puget Sound Mills & Timber Co ..... 194 Fed., 158.
Patent case.

547. Hawley, In re ..... 194 Fed., 751.
Bankruptcy—Unliquidated demands of creditors—Bond of contractor for Government work.

*548. Puget Sd. Sheet Metal Works et al. v. Great Northern Ry. Co. 195 Fed., 350.
Removal of causes—Judicial code—Section 28—Remanded to State court.

549. Young, In re ..... 195 Fed., 645.
Naturalization of aliens—German—Japanese—Half-breed held to be not eligible.

*550. United States v. Chicago M. & P. S. Ry. Co ..... 195 Fed., 783.
Interstate railroads—Penalty for violating hours of service statute.

*551. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Pacific Coast Lumber Mfrs. Ass'n .... 165 Fed., 12.
Interstate commerce—Sherman antitrust law—Injunction against increase of rates pending determination of Interstate Commerce granted—Affirmed by C. C. A. (165 Fed., 1).

EXHIBIT No. 95.

United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

King County, Washington, et al., appellants, vs. Northern Pacific Railway Company (a corporation), appellees. No. 2065.

John F. Murphy and Robert H. Evans, for the appellant.
Geo. T. Reid, J. W. Quick, L. B. da Ponte, and C. H. Winders, for the appellee.
Before Gilbert and Ross, circuit judges, and Wolverton, district judge.

The appellee filed its bill to enjoin the appellants from proceeding to collect a tax levied upon its roadbed and operating property by the county board of equalization of King County in the year 1907. The injunction was sought on the ground that the tax was illegal and in conflict with the statutes of the State. The bill alleged that the State board of tax commissioners in January, 1906, classified the different railroad properties of the State for the purpose of assessment and taxation for the years 1906 and 1907, and that it did fix the valuation and assessment for the purposes of taxation of different classes of railway tracks as follows: All railway tracks classified as first class, at $14,520 per mile; all railway tracks classified under first class B at $10,560 per mile; all tracks classified as second class at $7,920 per mile; all railway tracks of third class, at $4,752 per mile; all railway tracks of fourth class, at $2,112 per mile, and all railway tracks classified as second track at $7,920 per mile. The bill further alleged that the board of tax commissioners gave the various county assessors of the State advice and direction to place the said valuation upon the property of railroad companies for assessment purposes, and that those directions were followed throughout the State in the year 1906. The bill then alleges that for the purposes of assessment and taxation for the year 1907, the county assessor of King County listed the appellee's lines of tracks at the valuation as equalized by the county board of equalization in the year 1906, but that in the month of August, 1907, the board of equalization of King County, acting at the instance and direction of one of the members of said board of tax commissioners, who claimed to represent the board, raised the valuation of the assessment so fixed in the year 1906, for the years 1906 and 1907, to $25,140 per mile for first class railroad tracks, and made similar increase of assessment on other classes of the appellee's property, and that this was done against the protest of the appellee, which was duly made to said board of equalization. The bill alleges that the board of tax commissioners did not give directions to any other assessor or board of equalization in any other county of the State than King County in 1907, to raise the valuation as fixed in 1906, and that as the result thereof, the value of the lines of the track of the appellee was not proportioned among the several counties through which its road passes in the proportion that the mileage of each county bears to the entire mileage of the State. It was further alleged in the bill that the property of the appellee had been overvalued in the assessment complained of, as compared with the assessment and valuation of other property in King County, that the appellee's property had been assessed at 30 per cent of its value, whereas other property had been assessed at but 25 per cent of its value. This ground for relief was subsequently abandoned, and counsel for the appellee withdrew from consideration in the case that feature of the bill. A separate ground of relief alleged was that for the year 1907, the assessor of King County assessed the appellee's operating franchise, and placed a valuation thereon of $100,000 as an assessment against its personal property, whereas the same had been covered by, and formed a part of the valuation fixed and assessed upon the operating property of the appellee, the result whereof was double taxation upon the appellee's property. The appellee alleged due tender of taxes on its property in King County as it had been assessed for the year 1906. The answer denied that the classification made by the board of tax commissioners in January, 1906, was made for any other than that year, and it alleged that the county board of equalization of King County, in the month of August, 1907, acting at the instance and direction of the State board of tax commissioners, raised the valuation of the assessment for the year 1907 on all rights of way and substructures and superstructures of the appellee situated in King County. Upon the issues and the testimony, the court enjoined the appellants from further proceeding to collect the tax, and directed that the appellants issue to the appellee upon the payment of the sum tendered, a receipt in full for all taxes for the year 1907.

Section 2, article 7, of the constitution required that the legislature shall provide by law a uniform and equal rate of assessment and taxation of all property in the State, according to its value in money, and shall prescribe such regulation by general laws as shall secure a just valuation for taxation of all property, so that every person and corporation shall pay a tax in proportion to the value of his or her or its property. The revenue act of 1897 (Laws of 1897, p. 150) in section 32 provides as follows: "The value of the railroad track shall be listed and taxed in the several counties in the proportion that the value of the main line in such county bears to the whole length of the road in the State, except the value of the side or second tracks and all turnouts, and all station houses, depots, machine shops, or other buildings belonging to the road, which shall be taxed in the county in which the same are located." Section 34 provides that "the rolling stock shall be listed in the several counties in the proportion that the length of the main track used or operated in said county bears to the whole length of the whole road used or operated by such person, company, or corporation." Section 42 provides that "all property shall be assessed at its true and fair value in money. In determining the true and fair value of real or personal property, the assessor shall not adopt a lower or different standard of value because the same is to serve as a basis of taxation." By the laws of 1905 a board of tax commissioners was created (Laws of 1905, p. 224), and subdivision of section 2 provides that the commissioners "shall have power, and it shall be their duty to exercise general supervision over assessors and county boards of equalization, and the determination and assessment of the taxable property in the several counties, cities, and towns of the State, to the end that all taxable property in this State shall be placed upon the assessment rolls and equalized between persons, corporations, and companies in the several counties of this State, and between the different municipalities and counties therein, so that equality of taxation shall be secured according to the provisions of existing laws."

Gilbert, circuit judge, after stating the case:

We find no error in the ruling of the trial court that the case was of equitable cognizance. In Dows v. City of Chicago (11 Wall., 108) it is said: "A suit in equity will not lie to restrain the collection of a tax on the sole ground that it is illegal. There must exist in addition special circumstances bringing the case under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction, such as that the enforcement of the tax would lead to a multiplicity of suits, or produce irreparable injury, or, where the property is real estate, throw a cloud upon the title of the complainant." It is not alleged here that there are any special grounds of equitable jurisdiction except the fact that the enforcement of the assessment would throw a cloud upon the title of the appellee's property. In Ogden State v. Armstrong (168 U. S., 224) the doctrine was reaffirmed that a court of equity will interfere to enjoin an illegal tax which will create a cloud upon title to real property. Nor is the case one in which there is an adequate remedy at law. The contention that the appellee may pay the tax and thereafter recover it in an action at law, does not suggest an adequate remedy, nor, indeed, any remedy at all as to a portion of the tax, for a portion of it goes to the State, and no action may be brought against the State to recover the same. (Raymond v. Chicago Traction Co., 207 U. S., 20.)

In the case of Great Northern R. Co. v. Snohomish County (48 Wash., 478) the supreme court of the State held that the act creating the board of tax commissioners gave them general supervision over assessors and county boards of equalization in the matter of assessment of property lying in different counties of the State. In that case the county assessor of Snohomish County had disregarded the instruction of the State's tax commission and had assessed railway property within that county at a higher rate than that adopted in the other counties by order of said commissioners, and the court said: "The acts of the Snohomish County officials in disregard of the lawful orders and directions of their superior officers were void and of no effect." The case was before the court on a demurrer to the complaint. It was subsequently again before the court on the merits in Great Northern R. Co. v. Snohomish County (54 Wash., 23), where further discussion was had of the law applicable to the case. It is contended that the decisions in those two cases are decisive of the questions involved in the case at bar. There is this difference, however, in the issues which were there presented and those which are now before this court. In that case the court assumed that the property of the railroad company had been assessed as high as other property and the fact which controlled decision was that the county assessor in Snohomish County had disregarded the instructions of the board of tax commissioners, and had increased the assessment in that county. In the present case the board of equalization of King County followed and obeyed the instructions of the board of tax commissioners. It is true that the officers of the other counties received no such instructions, but the irregularity of the proceedings consists not so much in the fact that the assessment in King County was increased, as it does in the fact that the assessments in the other counties were not increased proportionately thereto. We are not primarily concerned, however, with what was done in those counties. The question here is, Was the action of the board of equalization of King County, which was done in pursuance of authority from the board of tax commissioners, rendered void by the fact that that board omitted to give like instructions to other county officials?

The appellee comes into a court of equity seeking relief against a tax by which according to the allegations of its bill, its property was assessed at but 30 per cent of its value, in the face of a statute which required that it be assessed at its full value. By the proofs in the case it is established beyond dispute that other property in King County was assessed as high as 60 per cent of its full value, and that the appellee's property by the assessment which is complained of was still underassessed as compared with other property in the county. If the board of tax commissioners had required the board of equalization of all the other counties through which the appellee's road extends to raise their assessments proportionately, confessedly the appellee would have no ground for complaint against the tax of 1907. But it is said that the assessment made by the board of equalization in King County was illegal, not because the appellee's property was overassessed in that county, but because its road was not assessed in the same proportion in the other counties. The statute which requires that all property shall be assessed at its full fair value is certainly not less authoritive than the statute which requires that the value of the railroad track shall be assessed proportionately in each county. It being established that the tax on the appellee's property in King County is not unjust or inequitable and is not greater than the appellee ought to pay, we are unable to see where there is ground for its application to a court of equity for relief. In State Railroad Tax cases (92 U. S., 613, 615), Mr. Justice Miller said: "A court of equity is therefore hampered in the exercise of its jurisdiction by the necessity of enjoining the tax complained of in whole or in part, without any power of doing complete justice by making or causing to be made a new assessment on any principle it may decide to be the right one. In this manner it may, by enjoining the levy, enable the complainant to escape wholly the tax for the period of time complained of, though it be obvious that he ought to pay a tax, if imposed in the proper manner." It is well settled that the collection of a tax will not be enjoined on account of disregard of statutory requirements in the process of assessing property, "which are not of such a nature as to affect the substantial justice of the tax itself or work irreparable injury to the rights of the complainant." (37 CYC., 1262; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. Hubbard, (98 Fed. 465), affirmed in 186 U. S. 458, sub nom; Lander v. Mercantile Bank; Kansas City H. S. & M. R. Co. v. King, 120 Fed., 614; Hixon v. Oneida Co., 82 Wis., 515; McCrory v. O'Keefe, 162 Ind., 534; Ryan v. Commissioners of Lebanon County, 30 Kan., 185; Albany & Boston Min. Co. v. Aud. Gen., 37 Mich., 391; Wagoner v. Loomis, 37 Ohio St., 571; Welch v. Clatsop Co., 24 Oreg., 457.) In Albany State Natl. Bank v. Maher, (6 Fed., 417), Judge Wallace said: "In dealing with the rights of parties to resist taxation, courts of equity proceed upon considerations quite unknown to courts of law, and hold not only that it must appear the tax is one unlawfully imposed, but also one that justice and good conscience do not require the party to pay." In paying the tax which has been assessed against it in King County the appellee will pay no more than its just proportion of the public burdens. King County in collecting it will receive do more than what, under the law had it been complied with, it is entitled to receive. As the resort is to a court of equity, the appellee must show itself entitled to relief which accords with equity and good conscience. This it has failed to do, for it has not shown that any unjust burden is sought to be imposed upon it.

We find no error in the decree of the court below so far as it afforded relief against the assessment on the franchises of the appellee. (Western Union Tel. Co. v. Kansas, 216 U. S., 1.) The decree is reversed as to all thereof excepting the relief awarded against the tax on the franchise of the appellee, and the cause is remanded to the court below with instructions to enter a decree accordingly.

(Indorsed:) Opinion. Filed May 13, 1912. F. F. Monckton, clerk.

J. J. O'Connor vs. Bothwell and members of city council. No. 1939.

1911.

Jan. 3. Complaint filed; William Martin, attorney. This complaint is, I believe, identical with the complaint in the Scobey case, as amended, except that the description of the property owned by the complainant is different—that in this case is said to be worth $550,000—and except that in this case there is an express allegation that the amount in dispute, exclusive of interest and costs, exceeds $2,000.

This complaint bears the acceptance of service of Scott Calhoun and the date of January 3d.

On the same date there is filed a stipulation of counsel that the affidavits and other evidence served and used in the Scobey case may be considered as having been served and may be used upon the hearing of the motion for temporary injunction in this case.

Jan. 3. Demurrer of defendants, identical with that in the Scobey case.

Jan. 17. Stipulation that the action be dismissed without costs.

Jan. 17. Order dismissing upon stipulation.

Benjamin H. Greenwood, a mnior, by Sarah Small, his guardian ad litem, Plaintiff, vs. Puget Mill Company, Defendant. No. 48755.

1905.

Oct. 3. Complaint filed in the Superior Court alleges plaintiff's employment at defendant's sawmill at Port Gamble, his duties being to supply the furnace with sawdust by shoveling and do generally whatever ordered by defendant's superintendents and agents, and especially the defendant's fireman.

That on 17th of December, 1904, while so employed, the defendant disregarded its duties toward him by carelessly and negligently ordering and directing him to go up among the machinery and adjust a belt which had slipped from one of the pulley wheels, the pully being above a large pile of sawdust. The defendant negligently failed to provide any safe way for him to get up to the wheel or any safe way for adjusting the belt on the wheel. Defendant negligently ordered him to climb up on the sawdust pile in order to get up on the conveyor box, and from thence to a point where he could adjust the belt. That the sawdust pile was unsafe and unsecure. That while plaintiff was climbing up on it he slipped and fell, his clothing was caught by a large revolving shaft which the defendant had negligently failed to have safeguarded. Both legs were broken, one in two places. Defendant negligently failed to give plaintiff any warning or instructions whatever of the dangers, he then being only 16 years of age and inexperienced. Also, defendant neglected to keep posted any notice of the danger. Prayer for $15,000 alleging long sickness, great suffering, partial paralysis, one leg one-half inch short.

On the same day was filed in the Superior Court petition of Sarah Small for appointment as guardian ad litem, setting forth that she is the mother; that she appears of record as general guardian, but by reason of irregularities in her appointment that certain false representations made by defendant to her and by reason of nonconsent of the minor to her appointment.

At the same time was filed a petition of the boy himself for the appointment of his mother, and on the same day an order was made by Frater, judge, appointing the mother guardian ad litem.

Oct. 19. Removal papers filed.

Oct. 28. Order of removal made by Albertson, judge.

Nov. 6. Transcript filed in Federal court.

On the same day defendant's motion that the complaint be made more definite and certain so as to take the name and character and nature of employment of the person who gave the order and direction to Greenwood to go up among the machinery and adjust the belt. With it was filed defendant's point relied upon in support of motion, pointing out the allegation in the complaint that the defendant ordered and directed, and it is, therefore, manifestly within the knowledge of the plaintiff who the agent or servant of the defendant was that gave the direction.

Nov. 24. Appearance for the plaintiff of A. J. Speckert and R. B. Brown.

Nov. 27. A memoranda opinion by Judge Hanford "Upon examination of the papers I find no evidence of compliance with rule 37 of this court, nor waiver of the required notice on the part of the plaintiff, and it is my opinion that the motion is one that cannot be properly made ex parte motion."

(Rule 37 referred to requires notices of the motion to be given 5 days before the day named for hearing. It appears, however, that the motion and points were served upon defendant's attorneys, the latter November 6th; the other November 20th).

1906.

Feb. 5. The motion was heard and an order made granting same.

Feb. 14. Amended complaint filed, in which it is alleged that the order and direction was given through the fireman, Gust Strand.

Mar. 14. Defendant's answer filed, containing denials of all the substantive allegations of the complaint, and setting up affirmative defenses as follows:

1. Contributory negligence of the plaintiff and negligence of fellow servants of the plaintiff.
2. Assumption of risk.
3. Appointment by Sarah Small by the superior court as general guardian and qualification as such on December 23, 1904. And that an order was made by the superior court on the same day directing the guardian to compromise the claim of damages embraced in this action for $500.00, which was piad with full satisfaction and converted to the use of the minor by the guardian.

1906.

Mar. 24. Reply filed denying the first and second affirmative defenses and as to the third, alleging that the appointment of the general guardian was secured by fraud and undue influence as follows: That she was sick and her family were sick, and on account of grief, anxiety, etc., she was incapacitated from transacting business or intelligently understanding documents, and that F. S. Blattner stated to her that he was the agent of the defendant and was looking after its interests and the boy's as well; that it wanted to do the right thing by the boy to pay his expenses in the hospital, but before he could do it it would be necessary for her to sign a receipt and some papers to be filed in court which would enable him to show the defendant that he had done so. At the same time prevent the boy's father from interfering. It was not necessary for her to read the papers; he was in a great hurry; must be at the court house, and that she could read copies of the same which he would furnish her later. That her son was not seriously hurt and that he would be well in two weeks and able to go home. That the defendant was not liable to him for any damages, but wanted to pay the expenses incident to his sickness, not to exceed $500. All these statements were false and known to be such and made for the purpose of misleading her, to the prejudice of herself and son and to unduly influence her to sign the papers which she did not fully understand, and had no opportunity to read. Relying upon this representation, she signed the papers without knowing what they were. That the order of her appointment was procured by the same fraudulent representation. That the order was made subsequent to the alleged settlement. That on the same day she signed a receipt for $500.00, induced thereto by said fraudulent statements, but that she received only $120.00. That is all they paid except $150.00 physician's fees. That at that time, prior thereto, and for a long time thereafter, the boy was dangerously sick in the hospital in the care of the defendant's physician and was unconscious, incapable of transacting business or nominating a guardian or consenting to any settlement, which the defendant well knew, but that Blattner, agent of the defendant, knowing that condition and taking advantage of it, procured the boy's signature to some papers which he did not understand, but he was informed that the paper was a petition nominating his mother guardian and giving his consent to the $500.00 settlement. That no notice was given of the application for the appointment of a guardian to the minor, or any time ever set for the hearing of it, nor did he ever appear in court for that purpose, nor was he ever represented there by any person. Prayer that the reported settlement and release be declared null; that the defendant be credited with whatever sum it may be found to have actually paid on the settlement, and that the plaintiff recover, as prayed in the complaint.

Mar. 29. Defendant demurred generally to that, particularly addressed to the third affirmative defense of the answer.

Apr. 12. Defendant's attorneys filed a written statement of points and authorities relied upon in support of the demurrer. Hill v. N. P., 113 Fed. 914; Hill vs. N. P., 104 Fed. 754.

Apr. 19. Order of court over-ruling the demurrer.

June 21. The next paper on file is a motion of plaintiff to set aside the order granting a non suit upon three grounds:

First, error in granting the motion upon the ground of a variance between the allegations of the complaint and plaintiff's proofs. Second, because under the law of this State the court has no right to grant a nonsuit upon the ground of variance. Third, error in holding that the plaintiff failed to prove a sufficient cause for the jury. Fourth, error in holding that the evidence did not sustain the allegations of the complaint.

June 29. Plaintiff's attorneys filed points and authorities in support of the motion, claiming that defendant moved for nonsuit upon the ground of contributory negligence proven by the plaintiff's own testimony, but the motion was granted upon the ground "that the testimony did not support the allegations of the complaint—in other words, that there was a variance between the allegations of the complaint and the proof." Authorities cited are:

1. Sections of the statute of Washington on variance.
2. If there was a variance, the court should have treated the complaint as amended. Citing 5 Wash., 693.
3. When a motion was made for a nonsuit upon one ground that it is a waiver of all other grounds. Citing 52 Am. Dec., 303 and note.

4. Where there is any evidence tending to support plaintiff's case, defendant not entitled to nonsuit upon any ground. Citing 21 Wash., 699; 26 Wash., 606.

In conclusion, that the only right of the court to grant a nonsuit is when the testimony shows the plaintiff so palpably negligent as to enable the court to say, as a matter of law, that he is not entitled to recover. Citing Kirby v. Wheeler-Osgood Co., — Wash., —; Whalen v. Wash. Lumber Co., — Wash., —; Williams v. Ballard Lumber Co., — Wash., —; Hansen v. Seattle Lumber Co., — Wash., —; Hall v. West & Slade Mill Co., — Wash., —.

1906.

Oct. 22. Order taking motion under advisement after argument.

Nov. 6. Order granting new trial.

(The next file is the second amended complaint.)

1907.

May 1. Changes are that where the first amended complaint said that Gust Strand was the fireman, here it calls him a foreman, and that in order to reach the pulley where it was necessary for him to pass over a revolving shaft, which the defendant had negligently permitted to become concealed from view, by it becoming covered with sawdust and that that shaft was not boxed or safeguarded as required by law, and that plaintiff in attempting to pass from the plank paralleling the shaft on the southerly side to a plank paralleling it on the northerly side stepped upon the sawdust pile, the top of which was level or nearly level with the planks and beneath the surface of which sawdust pile was concealed the said shaft, and that the sawdust gave way beneath the plaintiff's feet and he slipped and fell and his clothing was caught by the said shaft.

May 7. Answer filed to second amended complaint. Has the same denials and affirmative defenses as before.

May 21. Reply filed, setting up the same affirmative defenses to the answer as before. Defendant's demurrer to the affirmative matter in the reply, and moves the court for judgment upon the pleadings. Files points and authorities pointing out that the reply admits that $120.00 was paid to the plaintiff in the settlement and $150.00 to the physician in consideration of the release, and that the action cannot be maintained without the returning of that sum, and the setting aside of the release; citing Price v. Connors, 146 Fed., 503; Hill v. N. P., 113 Fed., 914.

July 1. Order taking motion under advisement after argument.

Aug. 1. Memoranda decision by Judge Whitson, pointing out that the doctrine is well settled in this circuit upon the authority of the Hill and Price cases. That one who has executed acquaintance and received money for it must, if he repudiates it, return the money if he would bring an action for damages. The court points out that for the purpose of the demurrer it was admitted that the action of the superior court in appointing the general guardian was fraudulent. The question is whether the release executed by the guardian under such circumstances is an exception to the general rule aforesaid. Judge Whitson points out that the reason underlying the general rule is not equity in allowing one to deny the validity of a contract at the same time retain the fruits of it. Therefore, a person appearing as guardian ad litem who is the same person who, as general guardian executed the release and received the money, can keep the benefits of and, at the same time, repudiate the contract for want of power on her part to execute the same. In Price v. Connor it is alleged that the plaintiff, when he executed the release was in condition of mental incapacity and totally irresponsible, and there the incapacity was mental, here it is legal. Although she was not legally guardian she could not deny her liability to account for any money received, any more than could an administrator de son tort. The rule is one based on common history. Therefore, the question is whether the case rests upon the theory that the action is one of guardian ad litem, or an action by the minor through his guardian ad litem. In either case, the result is the same. If the former theory should prevail, the guardian cannot wage the contest while she retains the money paid to her on behalf of one then supposed to be, but now in fact, her ward. If the latter theory, that is to say an action of the minor through next friend, the action cannot be maintained because the minor is equally bound as one who has reached the age of consent to act in good faith. "To hold otherwise would be to subordinate substantial justice to refinements and to ignore conclusive inferences as to what became of the money which the defendant paid." Directed that demurrer be sustained and that action be dismissed without prejudice, and this excepting an opinion as to whether an action could be maintained in the Federal court upon such pleadings without first setting aside the action of fraud.

1907.

Aug. 15. Plaintiff files motion to set aside Judge Whitson's order of dismissal for the following reasons:

1. No motion was ever made by defendant for dismissal.
   (In point of fact, the motion was for judgment dismissing the action).
2. That the order of dismissal was in violation of rule 17.
   (Rule 17 provides that upon the sustaining of a demurrer the losing party shall have 10 days within which to amend his pleadings; but no party shall have leave to amend after sustaining a demurrer to an amended pleading, except upon special order of the court.)
3. Filing of the demurrer operated as a waiver of the motion. (They are in one document.)

The plaintiff further moves to vacate the order sustaining the demurrer, for the following reasons:

1. The order is based upon statement of facts different from that disclosed in the reply.
2. That the order is contrary to law.

With it is filed under the heading of points and authorities a written argument. It is claimed:

1. That no money was ever paid Mrs. Small in settlement of the claim for damages. It was paid and received for a different purpose. The reference is to subdivision I of the 3rd paragraph of the reply, which alleges that the papers enabling the defendant to pay the hospital expenses, by the answer to which the reply was directed, alleged that the papers constituted a full release and discharge of any and all claims for damages. The next point criticizes the opinion for saying the guardian relied upon the order of the superior court, whereas it is alleged that the money was paid before the order of appointment was made. Reference is to subdivision III of said paragraph III of the reply, in which it is alleged that the order directing the settlement was made after the money was paid and the documents executed. The allegation of the answer is that the appointment and order directing the settlement, and the settlement, were all made on the same day.

The next point is that Mrs. Small could not have supposed she was guardian, not executing the papers when she had been appointed guardian or any steps taken for that purpose.

The next point is that the defendant can not plead equity when it is guilty of fraud itself.

The next point is that the equitable defense can not be interposed to an action at law under rule 10.

(Rule 10 provides that in an action at law the pleadings shall be in accordance with the laws of the state, but no equitable defense can be entertained in an action at law.)

Opinion calls attention to the former order of Judge Hanford overruling the demurrer to the original reply which is identical with the present reply, citing 89 N. W., 68; 104 Fed., 440; 94 Am. St., 158; 66 Fed., 35. In support of the right of the court to grant the present motion cites 15 Enc. P. & Pr., 205; 93 U. S., 412; Sage v. R. R. Co.

Aug. 20. Order by Judge Hanford setting aside Judge Whitson's order and permitting plaintiff to file amended reply.

Aug. 30. Amended reply filed. The only material difference in the two amended replies except that it brought out more clearly that the money was paid and the papers signed before the petition was filed, and that only $120 was paid and that the services of the physicians were furnished as a donation on the part of the defendant.

Sept. 17. Defendant moves for judgment dismissing the action upon the pleadings.

Sept. 16. Recites appearance at the hearing and dismissing the action, directing defendant to recover its costs. That this order carried upon it an O. K. as to form purporting to be signed by R. B. Brown, attorney for the plaintiff.