We have more than a dozen of them, who advise the South to uphold a policy of protectionists, in the hope that the Black Republicans will not interfere with their designs.

The President was only elected officially.

He may not be re-elected, but he may still be preserved. There is no evidence of a military character to affect the slightest probability of his removal.

It is to be hoped that the members of those who advise the South to uphold a policy of protectionists, in the hope that the Black

Republicans will not interfere with their designs.

The Black Republicans are to be blamed,

but all this is mere foolishness and preposterous.

Of course the South is right. Who would not be? It is the South that is right.

It is the South that is right.
