THE OLDEST TOMBSTONE NOW STANDING
IN THE CEMETERY.

THE ANCIENT BURIAL PLACE OF DEDHAM.

THE EPITAPHS UPON THE TOMB STONES.

In every old Massachusetts town, among the localities of special interest, is the spot where the early inhabitants committed to the earth the bodies of their lamented dead. Consecrated anew year after year by the tears of love and sorrow, it becomes hallowed ground; and as we bend over the low headstone and decipher its quaint inscription, we are reminded of the affection which erected it, and which still commends it to our respect and care. We are told by the humblest stone that a loved one had died, and that loving ones survived who desired to honor, and preserve, the memory of the dead. It is indeed a brief story; but it is a story which we love to read, though its age may be reckoned in centuries. So our old cemetery is a record of human affection well fitted to improve the heart and stir the imagination. It is not necessarily a gloomy spot. It speaks rather of rest and peace after the labors and turmoil of life are ended.

We have endeavored to ascertain how early, and where, the original burial place of Dedham was located. The town records do not answer these questions directly, but they do enable us to form a definite opinion on the subject. Ezechiell Holliman, the original Baptist who baptised Roger Williams, is spoken of in the town records, under date of Dec. 31, 1636, as follows: "And for that Ezechiell Holliman hath felled one great Timber tree for clapboard, without his owne lott, contrary to an order made in that behalfe, therefore, he is fined to pay unto the collector, for the use of the towne, the sum of ten shillings." From this it is evident that Holliman had a lot in his possession as early as 1636. Now, in the grant to him, that lot is described as follows: "Twelve acres more or less as lyeth between the way (now Court street) leading from the Keye to the Pond towards the east and Nicholas Phillips towards the west, and butts upon the said way wynding towards the north, and the way leading to the burying place towards the south."

From this we see that in 1636 there was a "way" leading to the burying place. This "way" probably passed between where now stand the house of Mrs. Benjamin Adams and St. Paul's church, and also passed over the ground recently purchased by the town of Mrs. Adams and added to the cemetery.

Having thus located the road to the "burying place," we find the "burying place" itself by the following description of the lot granted to Nicholas Phillips: "Twelve acres more or less, as it lyeth betweene Ezechiell Holliman towards the east, & Lambert Genere towards the west. And butts upon Charles River towards the north & upon the Swampe & 'burying place towards the South.'" Thus it appears that the primitive "burying place" was south of Nicholas Phillips' lot, and was approached by a road south of Holliman's.

But Holliman's lot embraced the land on which now stand the Orthodox, the Unitarian, and the Episcopal churches; while Phillips' lot is now partly occupied by the county prison. Therefore we conclude that the ground first used for interments was a small, oblong piece, beginning near where the ministers' monument now stands, and extending some distance westerly. Such a lot would be south of the Phillips land, and would be approached by a "waye" south of Holliman's. Why this place was chosen we are not informed, but it is a reasonable supposition that it was open land, perhaps an Indian cornfield, and therefore suitable and convenient for immediate use.

When was the first person buried in this ground? The earliest death mentioned in Dedham records occurred in 1637. But it seems improbable that a burial place should be located before anybody had died. When the first death occurred, then, the question of a place of burial would first present itself, and then the whole body of proprietors in the town would decide upon the appropriate spot. Probably the first year of the settlement, 1635, did not pass before some yielded to the hardships and casualties to which colonists in an un subdued wilderness are exposed, and were buried in that ground.

It would be reasonable to assume that the death rate, especially among children, was large, on account of a lack of necessary care and comforts. Consequently it was soon apparent that the first little burial lot would be found inadequate to the wants of the town, and, in 1638, Joseph Kingsbury, who had come into possession of the lot of Ezechiell Holliman, and Nicholas Phillips exchanged, for other lands in the town, a portion of their land at the south end of their lots, to enlarge the accommodation for the dead.

After the building of the church, or about 1639, a "bearing waye," one rod wide, was laid out where Bullard street now is, and led directly from the church, and entered the burying ground at its northwest corner. It is probable that the road leading to the south side of the burying ground was then, or soon afterwards, discontinued.

The boundaries of the burial place, thus enlarged, continued the same for about 175 years. They included an area of about one acre. For a period of one hundred years, this was the only place of burial in the town, and it is needless to say that some parts of it were dug over several times to furnish graves for successive generations. Where a stone was not set up, the place of interment was soon forgotten, and so received another occupant. I think we should be surprised to know how many bodies were buried in that acre of ground. Of course we never can know, but from the nature of things, several thousands have there found their last resting place, and their dust has been commingled more rudely than one would care to know.

Every one must feel that hereafter "The old burying ground" ought to be tenderly cared for, as the final resting place of many noble men and women. One after another, for nearly two hundred years, they were gathered to that little acre of ground, approaching it through that narrow "bearing-way," and, in most cases, conveyed thither by the strong and kindly arms of their neighbors. There let them rest undisturbed, and let not the graves of strangers invade any more the little space which they have so long occupied. It is to be remembered that in every foot of that soil is mingled the dust of those who by their labors changed this town from a savage wilderness to a spot where comfort and refinement rejoice to dwell. As the ashes of thousands are accumulated there, with no monuments to distinguish one from another, it is truly fitting that the most beautiful trees of the forest should weave a canopy over their common resting place, and that the unbroken turf, starred with the daisy and the buttercup, should symbolize their calm and honored repose.

This diagram represents the old Burial Place, and is designed to aid one in finding the stones which bear the Epitaphs. The nineteen spaces represent divisions of the ground, which are called Ranges. The Roman numerals indicate where stones are set along the south side of the Burial Place, to show where the Ranges begin. The number of gravestones, or monuments, in each Range is shown by figures at the right side of the diagram. In the Special Index each name is followed by a Roman numeral and an Arabic number: these refer to its Range and Number in the Record, and also serve to show its approximate position in the Burial Place. The stones in each Range are numbered from south to north in the record; and although there are some irregularities in their position, it is hoped that a little patience will enable a person to find any one of them.

COBB. i, 1. Jonathan Holmes Cobb. Born July 8, 1799. Died March 12, 1882. Register of Probate Court from 1833 to 1879. Town Clerk from 1845 to 1875. Sophia Doggett, wife of Jonathan H. Cobb, born May 23, 1805, died January 13, 1878, aged 72 years, 7 months, and 21 days.

FAIRBANKS. i, 2. In memory of Mr. Ebenezer Fairbanks, who died Nov. 21, 1832. Aet. 75.

Friends nor physicians could not save, Nor can the grave confine it here,
This mortal body from the grave; When Christ doth call it to appear.

FAIRBANKS. i, 3. In memory of Mary, wife of Ebenezer Fairbanks, who died Jan. 7, 1843. Aet. 87. Erected by her children.

Though thou hast left us, mother, each kind deed,
And word, and thought of thine, shall with us live,
And though our hearts at thy departure bleed,
These to our souls a bright example give:
Like the ripe sheaf, when harvest time has come,
Mature in goodness, God has brought thee home.

FAIRBANKS. i, 4. Prudence Fairbanks died Mar. 26, 1871, aged 89 years.

FAIRBANKS. i, 5. In memory of Mrs. Prudence Fairbank, wife of Mr. Ebenezer Fairbank, who died Nov. 11th, 1815, aged 78.

MESSENGER. i, 7. In memory of Mrs. Olive, wife of Mr. Jason Messenger, who died Nov. 5, 1837. Aet. 57.

Her spirit is with God, and this its plea:
My Savior lives, my Savior died for me.

MESSENGER. i, 8. In memory of Henry, son of Mr. Jason and Mrs. Olive Messenger, who died Oct. 8, 1827, Aet. 17 yrs. and 6 mo.

Smitten friends are angels sent on errands full of love;
For us they languish and for us they die:
And shall they languish, shall they die in vain?

NICHOLSON. i, 9. Maria Nicholson died Jan. 10, 1859, aged 65 years.

Elizabeth R. Nicholson, born March 10, 1800, died June 1, 1878.

My mother dear, do not lament, but know
God orders thee to stay and me to go.
Now learn with patience meekly to submit
To whatsoe'er God's wisdom judges best.
To say with humble Job, the Lord thinks fit:
Giving or taking, let his Name be blest.

FAIRBANKS. ii, 2. In memory of Mr. Eben^r Fairbanks, who died Feb. 12th, 1812. Aged 79 years.

I've paid the debt that all must pay,	Tho' cruel Death has conquered me
Tho awful to my view;	The victory is but small,
On frightful rocks where waters poured,	For I shall rise and live again,
And broken buildings flew.	And Death himself shall fall.

LEWIS. ii, 21. In memory of Capt. Samuel Lewis who died July 23, 1854, aged 66 years.

LEWIS. vi, 8. Near this place are deposited the remains of Mr. Joseph Lewis, who died June 9, 1804, aged 66 years.

Here lies entombed beneath this mossy sod
An honest man, "the noblest work of God,"
In whom those beauties of a noble mind,
Faith and good works were happily combined:
A friend and comfort to the sick and poor,
Want never knocked unheeded at his door:
A tender husband, father, brother, friend,
He crowned his virtues with a pious end.

LEWIS. vi, 9. To the memory of Mrs. Molly Lewis, relict of the late Mr. Joseph Lewis, who died Oct. 2, 1816, aged 75 years.

In life how peaceful moved this happy pair,
 How blessed in death released from mortal care.
 Ye angels o'er their dust your vigils keep.
 Calm be their slumbers undisturbed their sleep.
 And ye who tread in solemn silence near
 Repress the sigh, restrain the swelling tear.
 No more to wound, shall earthly sorrows fly,
 Eternal bliss awaits them in the sky.

LEWIS. vi, 10. Sacred to the memory of Miss Sally Lewis, dau. of Mr. Joseph and Mrs. Sally Lewis, who departed this life 13 July, 1797, aged 16 years.

Nature with copious grief laments the dead,
 A mothers tears bedew the verdant sod!
 On outstretch'd wings her cherished hopes are fled,
 But sorrow points to a Redeeming God.

O'er the cold form that rests beneath this sod;
Hope sweetly whispers that the soul sincere
Reposes on the bosom of her God.

TALBOT. xvii, 20. In memory of Mr. Nathaniel Talbot, who died Oct. 17, 1829, aged 81.

Forgive, blest shade, the tributary tear
That mourns thy exit from a world like this,
Forgive the wish that would have kept thee here,
And stayed thy progress to the seats of bliss.
No more confined to grovling scenes of night,
No more a tenant pent in mortal clay.
Now should we rather hail thy glorious flight,
And trace thy journey to the realms of day.
