At eight o'clock a grand dinner, was set on the table in the same room where breakfast had been prepared, at which upwards of 170 Brethren, belonging to the different Lodges, sojoarners, and also visitors not Masons, who favoured the Fraternity with their company, were present. The Right Worship. ful Master Boddam, supported by the Brethren Reproorth and Wodsworth in the west and south, performed the arduous offices of the east, to the admiration of every one present. After dinner a number of toasts were given, appropriate tunes being played by the band which attended.

The following beautiful verses, which, though not sung, were written for the occasion, by a brother, I have much pleasure in communicating to you for the information of your readers.

Come, let our free and social Band, Accord in heart, join hand to hand, With Love and Unity ; For we true Brother-masons are: Who lived upon th' unerring Square, In Peace and Harmony. To know our Mysr'RIES thousands comes And bear the Rale, the Separe, the Plan,

To form their Morals right ; But none within our lodge is found, Whose mind and hody are not sound, To view the MYSTIC LIGHT!

RELIGION, of our Craft's the spring, We're honest, faithful, love our king, And act with Equity; the GRAND ARCHITECT above,

We homage pay with hearts of love, And Alial piety.

Here FAITH directs our fainting sight, And guides fand HOFE, our footsteps right, To Immortality;

Till FAITH, and HOPE, are lost in Love, Accomplish'd in the Lodge above, And bounteous CHARITY.

. At one o'clock the " Parting Song" was sung, and the Masonic rites terminated in the most mutual harmony and "True Friendship."

Upon the whole, (which was in a manner entirely owing to the abilities of the Brother Presiding in the East) no Masonic party has probably over been conducted with more propriety, or productive of more real gratification. Several of the votaries of the Rosy God did not depart till after partiking of a second Supper, which was prepared at four b'clock.

LATE MARRIAGES IN EUROPE.

The Hon. Mr. Eliot, brother to Lord Eliot, to Miss Robinson, daughter of General R.

Sir John Blunden, Bart : of Castle Blunden, Kilkenny, to Miss Heisnan, daughter of John H. Esq. and niece of C. Brown, Esq. of Bath.

Sir Humphrey Davy. fessor, to Mrs. Apreece. . The Right Hon. Lord Charles Townsend, to Miss Loftus, daughter of General, and the late Lady Elizaheth Loftus.

at the London Tayern, Alderman Christopher Smith, in the Chair.

After dunner, Non nobis Domine, was most expressively sung by Messrs. Dignum, Taylor, Smith, Leste, Pyne, Terrail, Doyle, and Master Doyle.

".The King," with three times three, was drunk with most unbounded applause. The popular air of "God save the King," followed.

" The Prince Regent," with three times three, was then given, and received with reiterated plaudits.

Mr. Taylor sang, "The Prince and Old England for ever." " The Queen and Royal Family," was then drunk with similar symptoms of probation. The House of Brunswick, and may it never forget the principles which seated the Family on the throne of these realms.

The Chairman then addressed the Meeting, to propose a toast, which he was convinced all would drink with sentiments of regret. After the assassination of the Right Honorable Spencer Perceval, be should be wanting in those feelings which he owed to the Meeting ; feelings which all descriptions of persons trad shewn, if he were to detain them by any encomium. on the merits of the lamented person to whom he had alluded; those merits had been fully acknowledged by his very enemies, it enemies he had. All parts of the kingdom had been loud in detestation of the act which deprived the country of his services; and therefore he would not detain them further than to propose,-

" The immortal memory of the Right Honorable Spencer Perceval," which he recommended to be drank in silence.

" This sentiment was accordingly drank in the manner proposed.

" Peace to the souls of the heroes," was then sung with the most happy effect.

Mr. Brown then proposed the health of the worthy Chairman, observing that the Livery were assembled for the most important and beneficial purposes, to tell the country and the world that they were sensible they lived under, and enjoyed in its utmost purity, the blessing of liberty and the free exercise of the Constitution. They had been grossly traduced and misrepresented by those persons who had got possession of the Common Hall on a late occasion, and held forth doctrines as those of the Livery of London, calling for firedress of grievances under the specious Mame of Reform, and holding out inflamillatory language not calculated to benefit the state. In reference to such men he would say " we desire no change, and least of all such change as you would give us."

The health of the worthy Chairman was then drunk, amidst the most unqualified applause

Mr. Alderman Smith returned thanks in a neat spread, in which, after a due tribute to the loyal Livery of Loudon, he express sed himself in the most feeling terms of abhorrence at the late atrocions assassination of Mr. Perceval.

On the third reading of the Peace Pre-

Lord HOLLAND adverted to the evidence anot qua nature to ground upon it such a measure as the present: It chiefly consisthave been brought from thence with tacil? ity to testify as lo the actual state of those districts - a measure which he considered the more necessary, as in point of time they had no evidence of the sactions, or of the state of those districts later than the 23d of June. It had been admitted by the Nobili Mission apposited that necessity alone could justify of measure like the presont-but it was equally true that the necessity ought to be clearly proved. He (Lord Molland) was far from saying, thatno case of necessity could exist which could justify the enactment of a measure like the present; but what he meand to contend was, that the necessity ought to be satisfactorily proved to exist, and he would apply to this subject an expression of a Noble and Learned Lord on a memorable occasion, that what necessity creates ought to be limited by that necessity. In the Report of the Second Committee, he could see no case-made out which called for the strong encoments of the present Bill. The disturbances had not assumed any malignant political character-'any character which tended to endanger the Governmen --- they appeared to have originated in certainly most mistaken notions -but notions, which is was very likely. would be corrected by that return of employment which recent measures would probably create. It appeared also from evidence adduced on a trial, at the Special Commission at Lancaster, that of the 40 persons assembled on Dane Moor (a meeting much relied upon for the purpose of establishing the alleged character of these disturbances), ten of these forty persons were actually the spies of the Magistrates. With this fact therefore known, and with the additional fact which he believed 'also to be correct, that these spies were the most active in what was called twisting in, there was surely great reason to doubt how far the evidence before them was sufficient to adthorize the present Bill. The Bepert their Lordships' Secret Committee also was contradicted by interence, by the Report of the Secret Committee of the House of Commons, in not mentioning oircumstances on which the former mainly relied; and was also contradicted by a Petition he had presented from one of the districts referred to in that Report, which Petition was signed by respectable persons who had been appointed by the Magistrates, 'Constables of watch and ward, and who stated that tranquillity was completely restored in that district; and that the provisions of the Watch and Ward Act had in conser-guence ceased to be enforced. He maintained therefore that the necessity of the case did not justify the principle of this Bul, and he was prepared to shew that the detail of the Bill went even beyond the principle itself. The Bill might be stated to gonsist of three, parts, the first giving authority to Magistrates to search for and seize arms concealed, or suspected to be stolen; the 2d giving them a power to take arms from persons whom they suspected to be unable to defend themselves, and the third for the purpose of preventing untawful assemblies. In this latter object he was disposed to acquiese, but, at the same time, thought that by executing this purpose the former provisions of the Bill would be rendered unnecessary, as if arms were stolen in consequence, as stated, of the organization of secret meetings, to destroy these unlawful assemblies would be to destroy the organization which led to the stealing of arms. With respect to the power, of searching for arms, he could not think that any ground half been daid for its enactment. There was no proof of the discovery of any concealed depot of arms, Mr. Marten returned thanks as one of armed capa-pee, of assembling as an e Committee who went up with the Ad-ers. The beach of Marshal Barafard and Principle which distinguished a free The beach of Marshal Barafard and the Stranger of th constitution from an arbitrary government, was the right of bearing arms for self-defence. This was a right secured to the subjects of this country by the Bill of Rights ; it was a right essential to the exis-

Imperial Parliament, tence of a free constitution. De did not, in the off morthowever, mean to state that no case, could HOUSE OF LORDS, JULY 27, 1812 ..... sexist in which this sight ought met to be W tunnerson infringed; all be contended for was, that THE DISTUBBED DISTRICTOR the necessity longht to be distinctly proved. This Bitt, However, gave to one justice of the peace or magistrate power, upon more suspiciony to search a man's house upon which this Bill was founded, 1851 de- wards which were inserted in the Act stalled in the Report of the Committee of wards which were inserted in the Act Swerecy; and concended (though he did applying to Ireland, in 1807, namely, "rea-not mean to impeach its truth) that is was the present Bill the present Bill, so that a party aggrieved by an infust seizure of his arms, was demeasure as the present: At chiefly consist-ed of letters from Magistrates, stating rather prived of all remedy, with a view to sub-runnous and remets than while simila with sequent compensation for the injury, as a any strictness be called evidence, and magistrate might, from mere whim or catherefore he thought, that parole evidence, and price, from the impulse of suspicion, for ought to have Beer examined, particu-larly as from the comparative vicinity of seize the arms of any individual. He the disturbed districts, witnesses might not intending to cast may reflection and which he could state no reasonable ground, not intending to cast any redection upon the Magistuce, a school he considered denerally, as w most respectede body of men, but he must be allowed to say, that he would rather entrast the power given by! this Bill to his Majesty's Government than ? to the Magistrates. With respect to the Noble Viscount (Sidmouth) opposite, he was satisfied that there was no, man in the country less likely to abuse nower carries, ed, to him than that Noble Viscount, he believed the same also of his Nonie Friend, near him (Lord Liverpool), but he could, not forget that there were persons in the, Cabinet which ad either proposed or been instrumented in centering measures of a similar character to this in a neighbouring country, inclusion of which they had peaped the bitter fouits. He knew it had been answered to an accusation relative to these measures in Ireland, on the part of those who were instrumental in enacting them, by saying, we knew there were great atrocities practised, but we could not help it, we could not prevent it. Why then this was the strongest argument against the present Bill, against giving a power which might be exercised from whim or caprice. from party matives, or from prejudice, or from an honest but mistaken zeal, ite the great oppression and injury of individuals. He should therefore nieve to amend the Bill by inserting two magistrates instead of one and that they should only act upon a reasonable ground of suspicion. He hope ed, however, at all events, that Noble Lords on the other side would agree up an anendment the her h should go himself to make the search, and not leave it to the delegated power of the constable, who might then go with a mob to the house of an individual to search for arms, from which act the most dangerous consequences might ensue what, for int stance, sould have been an act of greater injustice than to have taken away the arms of Mr. Cartwright, who so bravely de-tional Advery was held on the 97th May, dear a relative.

The next toasts were, "The Army and Nawy. "The Lord Mayor" then followed. "Lord George Berestord, and the Loyal and Independent Irish,"

Lord G. Berestord addressed the Meeting in very impressive terms; and, after doing justice to the disposition of the people of Ireland, paid a most neat and elegant compliment to the conduct of the Prince Regent. His Lordship concluded by giving—"The Loyal and Independent Livery of London, who signed the De-claration of May, 1810."

" Earl Wellington, and our brave and gallant Army in Portugal and Spain."

This toast was drauk amidst the loudest acclamations.

The Chairman then proposed the healths of the Representatives, Sir W. Curtis and Sir J. Shaw; Sir C. Price being absent on account of the lost of a valuable and near relation. The Chairman observed, that had not business in the Hoase of Commons detained the Honorable Gentleman, Mr. Mellish would have been present.

Sir W. Curtis and Sir J. Shaw returned thanks, in short, but loyal and impressive speeches.

Mr. Alderman Atkins then proposed the health of the Gentlemen who this day carried up the Address, and enforced the hecessity, in an energetic speech, of preserving the Constitution entire, of acting with vigour and energy, and of convigcing the country, that, in the conduct of the loyal and independent Livery could they hope for success.

GOVERNMENT GAZETTE.

BATAVIA, MARCH 20, 1813.

During the last week the ship Charlotte has arrived from Bombay, and we have been favored with the perusal of a Madras Courier Extraordinary of the 30th January last, from which the following extracts appear in addition to the intelligence already received from other quarters:

Heads of Intelligence by H. M. ship Mendea.

His Majesty's health experienced little alteration.

No change in Administration.

Lord Wellington had advanced beyond Madrid, in pursuit of the French army, after their two defeats near Salamanca.

Lord Wellington made a Marquis.

Accounts had been received; both Russian and French, of two battles having taken place between these powers, in which each party claims the victory. The French and Russian armies are each about 200,000 strong.

The Mendea spoke a ship at sea (an English trader bound to Buenos Ayres) on the 27th September, from which they learned that just before she left England, an Envoy had arrived from America, and the adjustment of our differences with that power was confidently expected to take place without delay.

The French General Moreau, had arrived in Sweden, also General Bluscher, and were to have commands either in the Swedish or Russian armies.

A motion in the House of Commons to address the Regent, stating the regret of that House that the desire expressed in the Address presented to His Royal Highness on the 21st May had not been realized; and praying for the formation of such a Ministry "as might deserve and possess the confidence of the Nation" was negatived, there being for the motion 164, against it 289, Majority for Ministers 125.

The Administration, after the above was carried, were receiving a daily accession of strength.

Letters from Riga assert, that the French have commenced their retreat from Wilna. It is also alledged, that five thousand Prussians had gone to the Russians, shooting the French over General who commanded them, and carrying with them the whole of their Artillery and Baggage.

Lord Cathcart appointed on an important Mission to the Russian Head Quarters. Lord Wal-pole accompanies him as Secretary of Legation.

In the South of Spain, General Hill, with an inferior Force, keeps Soult in complete check.

A Letter from Oporto, dated 9th_July, says it is reported there that General Bonnet with 1500 Men have been made Prisoners by the Guerillas, that the French were flying before our Troops, that our Force is 72,000, the Enemy's 36,000, and that Joseph Bonaparte, is said to be with Marmont, and that Madrid is left to its fate.

The King of Spain and Family are arrived in Rome.

By Letters from the Eastward we learn that H. M. Sloop Hecate, has sailed from Samarang in prosecution of her Voyage to the Eastern Islands, and that the Transport Ship Matilda for Bengal, via Batavia, would probably leave Sourabaya for Batavia on the 19th Instant.

The usual accusations against the Executive Authority of that day was, that steps of a firm and decisive nature were not taken sufficiently early; but for whatever blame attached on either account; he (Lord Camden) was perfectly ready to be responsible. He could not, however, in candor allow that those who were not concerned should suffer unmerited odium. A Noble Viscount (Castlercagle), whose name was always coupled with some epithat of cruelty, when the affairs of Ireland, of that day, were referred to, boxe no share of the Government, but was only an active and zealous Magistrate, to, whom Ireland was much indebted for his exertions, not only for her tranquillity then, but for her subsequent welfare. The obloquy that had been thrown on that deserving personage was entirely unmerited; and his Lordship rejoiced in having this opportunity of beaning testimony to the acknowledged abilities, and to the mild conciliatory disposition of

He hoped that the Noble Viscount would receive the approbation of a British, as he had secured the gratitude of the most respectable portion of the Irish public. With respect to the measure un-der, consideration, his, Lordship insisted that Ministers had called for the aid of Parliament as soon as circumstances had allowed, and that the Orders in Council could not be justly deemed the author of the prevailing disturbances; to prove this assertion, he appealed to the evidence taken at the Bar, by which it appeared, that although the town of Birmingham was almost the only place that was materially injured by their operation, yet that there perfect tranquillity had prevailed, and that at Huddersfield, which had not suffered at all, the riots had been carried to the great. est extent. His Lordship regretted that topics wholly unconnected had been introreviving the cry of incompetency. It was true, that one House had so voted ; but the numbers were comparatively small, and the notice short: that Resolution had been subsequently, reversed, in a full attendance, and, after some experience, i The same Noble Lord had expressed his opinion de-cidely against the greater part of the Bills but Lord, Livenpool, Trusted that a short trial would prove the sufficient could change his opinion, was known from the censure which he bestowed upon the prosecution of the war in the Peninsula, which some time Since he termed little short of madness, and now as extravagantly eulogised, Minis-ters at that time were contending in fayour of continued resistance, at a time when our

Singular and Interesting Narrative. 019W

In the wars betwixt the Russia hound the Turks, there are many barbarities conf. mitted by the troops of both nations, and they frequently rather contrive which shall lay a plan for a murder with more lngenuity, than fight with the open bravery and generosity of Eleftpoan warfate. The following story, told and youched as a truth by a respectable affect in the service bfithe Court of Muscovy 1 is a most fer markable instance of Mil. co preo two and mics, he said, were entannyed at nongreat distance (from 'each other on the banks of the Danube, and there was a deep morass between them, at the approaches to which each of the armies had bignets. Owing to the length of time the wat had been carried on in the country, necessaries were becoming some what scales ; and the of fiders, in particular, having been deprived of many of those little laxuries which are considered of so much importance in a camp, were very liberal to any one who could provide for them.

Among others; whom the love of money tempted to engage in this traffic, there was an old woman of a very singular character and appearance. She was accustomed to bargain with the officers, to afford them every thing, at a very inconsiderable price, on condition, that if they were killed before that time, she should have their property. Many of them were extremely willing to make an agree? ment on these terms, as they had no prose pect of fighting for a Tong while after the time she mentioned i and they were ach cordingly supplied in every thing they wished.

Every one, to the great surprise of their comtades, were killed almost at her day, and almost in such a mauner as could excite no suspicion that she had the smallest connection with it; it was perbaps their turn always one justice for England, and an- consolation to men like him, who five to go out on a foraging party, and they other for the rest of the world. She, to be years ago, had been concorned in the ore were met by a detachinent of the enemy sure, was totally blameless in the exercise ders issued for seiding on the Navy of on the same errand, or same dangerous they were attacked, and their whole party out to pieces. The thing, however, hapatrocity; that eternal blot upon our annals; hagen Expedition; who pretended is pened so naturally, that others only crused the soizure of the Danish fleet at Copenha- could ) not be justified by any but forged the luck of the old witch, and continued to make agreements with' her ; "among others," said the officer, "I was tempted, and Sweden to engage in a war against through curiosity, as much as other mos tives, to visit her, and bargained for some? thing, on condition that she should have my gold watch and scals, should have before the expiration of a forthight. The time passed on till the last evening, and at that there it was not in which to do any duty, other word ays' after inerry upon the subject of Mullame Grini's historical and the subject of Mullame Grini's disappointment, and tdök a walk out to see the guard march off for a post on the outs side of the camp, to which a great deal of importance had been always attacked, as others, and would at least stand against Turks, though much superior in number till I could send for assistance. The r was on the side of a d. ep morass, and o accessible by two ways, one from the Tu ish camp, and oue backwards, by whi we reached it. Nothing seemed to d turb us, and I had entirely forgotten superstitions; the night was very bea tiful, and the dead stillness of every th around, interrupted only at slow interry by the neighing of the horses, or the litary voice of the sentinels, made the sce all solemn. We were in this situation a considerable, time, when, as if it h been thunder, the shouts of men, the cl been thunder, the should of men, the cu tering of horses, and the sound of an were heard close upon our post; and, in monion, several troops of Turkish hi sars, half paked, and brandishing th cimetars in defence, were, seen gallopi down the descent of the opposite graun The moon shone full upon then an I th The moon shore the Brow Aveny is the savage appearance, together, wild the number, which gas more than double of made is all tremble.
