The Man Who Never Saw New York

C. L. Edson, in the Kansas City Star

Some day I'm going to New York,
That blooming town of thunder screams—
I'm going where the gods uncork
The fizzing spirit of my dreams.

Across the lake, across the lands
I'll fly upon the humming train,
To where the giant Moloch stands
That long has beckoned me in vain.

New York, the grand New York, it seems
A fairy city filled with sweets;
My earliest boyhood's dippy dreams
Ran riot through her distant streets.

Horatio Alger's silly tales
Of newsboys getting rich as grease,
And young Nick Carter's wicked walls
Of blushing beauties and the p'leece!
They threw a glamor in my brain
That made my boyish heart declare:
"Some day I'm going to grab a train
And never stop till I am there."

The circling seasons swing around
The gay carousal of the years,
And Daddy Time, he still has found
Me husking corn and whacking steers.
But still the New York date line sticks
To all the stories that I read;
I dream of Broadway's stone and bricks,
And learn to know the Gotham breed.

I see the lights of Herald Square,
I hear the waves on Battery Park,
And I could travel anywhere
In old Manhattan after dark.

I know the Bowery like a book;
"I'll ne'er go there." the old song said;
But I am bound to have one look
And down that classic street I'll tread.

Since first of Brooklyn's bridge I read
In geographic days gone by,
They've strung a dozen up instead
Like spider webs across the sky.

The Chinese gods of Mott and Pell,
I want to see them with my eyes,
For long I've heard romancers tell
Their thrilling Oriental lies.

The old p'leece station had to go,
That long was in Mulberry Street;
The old New York I used to know
Is crumbling underneath my feet.

Old Tony Pastor's passed away;
The footlights on his stage are dark.
The Wax Musee will close some day,
And next we'll miss old Central Park.

It makes us old New Yorkers here,
Who never saw New York at all,
Drop many a sad, regretful tear
To see the ancient landmarks fall.

Yes, every youth of Yankee birth,
He bears this dream within his soul,
"New York, the grandest town on earth,
New York shall be my final goal."

Some day I'm going to New York,
Across the lakes, across the lands,
To where the path of dreams shall fork,
And where the shining city stands!

New York and the Bay in 1746.

New York as seen from the Hudson River, 1912.

HUNDREDS of thousands of people pass through New York every year on their way to and from other points. There is a very strong and very natural desire on the part of these many travellers to spend anywhere from a few hours to a few days in this great national Metropolis before continuing their journey, and if they wish to do any sight-seeing, they must make the most of their spare time during that period.

This little guide is the only work published to conveniently meet the needs of that class of visitors. All other works fail to explain the opportunity for a personal examination of the buildings, and objects of interest, which is really the only proper means for settling them in the memory.

The writer has had considerable experience in showing strangers about the city on the lines herein laid out, and always with much saving of time and great satisfaction.

Keep a cool head, and your eyes clear and alert.

Do not be afraid to ask questions from the police, or citizens; you will find most of them polite, and friendly, and perfectly willing to direct strangers. Never mind if some of them imagine your questions foolish, their questions of you might seem far more so. In case of sudden severe illness or accident, send immediately for the nearest policeman without hesitation.

Do not fear to enter any hotel, or public building, during the proper hours, which are usually from 10 to 3 in public places. Very few places will refuse you admittance; most of them will welcome you. If they refuse you, leave without argument.

Read the descriptive article about the next place you are going to visit before reaching there; read it again after you get there, and again as you leave it. It will take but a few moments, and will impress it on your memory.

T. S. AFFLECK.

June 1, 1912.

A Short History of Manhattan

It is said that there are many people who have lived all their lives almost within the sound of the roar of Niagara, but who have never seen its Falls. There are thousands of citizens of New York who know nothing about Coney Island or Rockaway. And it is alike true that there are tens of thousands of natives who know nothing of the history and interesting points of their home city. It seems almost incredible that while the great cities of Europe have a history dating back eight and ten centuries, the first hut built by white men on Manhattan was erected barely three centuries ago. Manhattan Island was discovered in 1524 by John de Verrazana, a Florentine. Sailing under the flag of France, he anchored in the lower bay for three days, and later sailed a short distance up the Hudson. A statue erected to his memory by Italian citizens stands in Battery Park. In 1525 a Portuguese named Gomez visited the island. In 1609 Hendrik Hudson, the third discoverer, arrived and sailed up the North River to a point a little below Albany.

Manhattan was the first or original name of the city. The first knowledge we have of the insatiate desire of New Yorkers to travel to the Old World was in 1611, when Adrian Block carried two sons of an Indian chief to Europe on a visit. Two years later Block built a group of huts at about where is now 45 Broadway, and also built a small vessel, named the Restless, which sailed out, trading along the coast, and which was the pioneer of the vast commerce of the city.

The first male child born in Manhattan (1614) was Jean Vigne, whose mother had a farm at what is now about the corner of Wall and Pearl Streets. The first of that magnificent type, the "New York girl," born in the colony, was Sarah Rapaelje (1625).

In 1624, the Walloons, or French Hollanders arrived, 110 in number, being the first colonizers, bringing their families, stock, farming implements, and seed.

In 1626 came Peter Minuit, the first Director General, whose first official act was the purchase of Manhattan Island from the Indians, paying for it in beads and trinkets worth about $24. The real estate value of Manhattan is now over eight billion dollars. Pearl Street is the oldest street, and Bridge Street next. The first recorded conveyance of real estate was a lot on Bridge Street, for $9.60. In 1658 a good lot could be bought for about $50, and a good house rented for $20 a year, and a man with $3,000 was considered a rich man. In 1745 a lot was sold at the southwest corner of Broadway and Dey Street for $375, and in 1770 for $1,900. On September 1, 1910, the first floor and basement of a new building on this site was rented for $50,000 a year. In 1760 four lots on the southwest corner of Broadway and Murray Street were leased for 21 years at $40 per annum. In 1910 the block front on Broadway, from Barclay Street to Park Place, was bought by Mr. F. W. Woolworth, the owner of the chain of 5 and 10 cent stores, for three million dollars, and he is now erecting on the plot a 57 story building, the entire outlay to cost about eight million dollars. Mr. Woolworth's residence at the northeast corner of Eightieth Street and Fifth Avenue cost $1,500,000.

In 1787 the lot, corner of Broadway and Exchange Place, sold for $500; it was sold in 1909 for $1,700,000. In 1628 the population had reached 270 living in houses of one story, with two rooms, with wooden chimneys and thatched straw roofs, furniture hewn from planks, and wooden platters and spoons. In 1910 the population of Manhattan was over 2,500,000 and New York city entire, over 4,500,000.

In August, 1628, the first public religious services in the city were held in a loft in South William Street.

In 1633 the first schoolmaster arrived from Europe, Adam Rollandsen, and he had barely enough scholars to fill a bench. To-day there are 600 school and training school houses, 18,000 officers and teachers, and 700,000 scholars.

With Rollandsen also came Domine Everardus Bogardus, the first accredited clergyman. In 1633 came General Von Twiller, with 104 Dutch troops, the first soldiers to enter Manhattan. In 1650 the first lawyer, Dirck Van Schellengne, arrived. In 1658 the first fire company, numbering eight men, was organized, called "The Rattle Watch," who were on duty from 9 P. M. until sunrise. They were equipped with hooks and ladders, and 250 buckets, imported from Holland. To-day we have the finest fire-fighting force in the world, consisting of over 5,000 men, 100 engines and 50 trucks, and water towers. The city had a watchman, who, with the mayor, went around at night and locked the gates and told the people when to go to bed. In 1783 after the evacuation by the British, a captain of police was appointed with 20 men, whose pay was a shilling (25 cents) a night. To-day we are watched by over ten thousand police, and many of our worthy citizens never go to bed. In 1656 the Indians attacked the town and suburbs with a force of 2,000, and in 3 days killed 100 settlers and took 150 prisoners.

In 1664 the English took possession of the city and named it New York. In 1692 orders were given for each householder to clean his section of the street, and in 1696 the first regular appropriation of $100, for that purpose, was made. Now, under our efficient department, there are 6,000 men, 2,500 horses, 1,000 wagons, and 50 sweeping machines, who clean two thousand miles of street at a cost of nearly $10,000,000. In 1804 the first post office was opened in a room 12 by 15 feet, at 29 William Street, on the site of the present Lords Court Building, and continued there until 1825, when it was moved into a small school house at Broad and Exchange Place, with eight clerks. Now we have a gigantic post office building, with 50 branches, 250 sub-stations, and 3,000 carriers in Manhattan alone, and an additional one is now building at the Pennsylvania Station which will be twice as large as the one down town.

But coming down to a later date, the part which the city took in the formation of the Federal Government is interesting. In this city, at Federal Hall (now the site of the Treasury Building), the Federal Government was established, and President Washington inaugurated April 3, 1789, and the Government remained here for six years.

Fighting Fire in 1800.

High Pressure Fire Service in 1912. New York Paid Fire Department.

But it is not our purpose at this time to write an extended history of New York. Its history has already been written in a glorious past. It was settled by the decree of Nature centuries ago that this island is to be the grand landing place, warehouse, sample room, and exchange, of the Western Continent, for the simple reason that it is a natural port of entry for ships, and central as a terminal for railroads from the interior, and the open road up the Hudson to the canals and waterways of the West.

I must close by saying that all loyal New Yorkers have the same devotion for their native city as the homesick world-trotter, who, while lying ill in Patagonia, when the nurse asked him if there was anything he wished, feverishly replied: "No, no, only take me back to Broadway, and when I die, let it be in Little Old New York."

From the London Post, August 28, 1910

Americans have plenty of fun in chaffing and criticizing New York, that great maelstrom which often misrepresents the true spirit of the American people. But every American entertains a sneaking fondness for New York just the same, and will take pride in seeing it push forward to its place as the largest city in the world. It is growing at a rate that will make it outstrip London in a few years, while other cities, its former rivals, are badly distanced.

THE BATTERY PARK.

This is a public park at the extreme southern end of the city. It is called the Battery from having been the site of the fortifications, and Custom House, erected by the first Dutch settlers. It was for many years a favorite resort of the citizens, and was skirted on the land sides by the residences of the wealthy.

CASTLE GARDEN.

On the westerly side of Battery Park lies Castle Garden, which was originally erected in 1807, as a fort, called Fort Clinton, and in 1825 converted into a summer garden. It was at that time 1,500 feet from the main land, and reached by plank walks. The surroundings have since all been filled in up to Broadway. It was afterward changed to a concert hall. Here Lafayette was received and a grand ball was given in his honor when he revisited this country in 1824. It is now used as a public aquarium, under charge of the New York Zoological Society, and is the finest in the world. The tanks are constantly replenished with filtered salt water, from wells beneath the building. Admission is free and it is open daily from 10 to 3.

HARBOR FIRE BOATS.

The fire boat station is on the right of the Aquarium, and at most times some of the boats are there, and well worthy of observance.

THE BARGE OFFICE.

Is at the southeast end of Battery Park. This is the gateway by which all emigrants coming from Europe to the Port of New York, get their entrance to the city.

First Post Office, on first floor of 29 William Street, 1809. On site of the present Lords Court Building.

Post Office, Broadway and Park Row, 1912.

ELLIS ISLAND.

(Or Emigrant Station.)

Is in the upper bay, 1½ miles from the Battery. Is used as the landing place of all emigrants entering this port. It can be reached by boat from the Barge Office.

LIBERTY ISLAND.

In the upper bay. Can be reached by boats, which leave the pier at the Battery hourly. Fare 25 cents for the round trip, which also entitles passengers to admission to the Statue, and the use of a bathing suit.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND.

Is about half a mile south of the Battery. It is the U. S. Army headquarters for the Department of the East. It can be reached by boat from the Barge Office pier.

STATEN ISLAND.

Is a large residential island of great beauty, in the Bay, and extending to the ocean. It was purchased from the Indians in 1657 for 10 shirts, 30 pairs of stockings, 10 guns, and some tools. The island is reached by ferry boats from the Battery.

ELEVATED RAILROADS.

The two elevated roads which skirt the east and west sides of the city, start at the extreme end of the Battery, and you can ride to the terminus of each road for a nickel, in that manner seeing a large part of the city.

THE SUBWAYS.

The subway trains also start from the Battery, near the foot of the stairs of the elevated roads. One branch goes up on the west side to Van Cortlandt Park; the other goes on the east side to Bronx Park. The fare is five cents by either line.

CUSTOM HOUSE.

Crossing the Battery easterly, you come to the new Custom House. This stands on the site of Fort Amsterdam, the first fort erected on Manhattan Island. You can enter from the front or side of the building, to the rotunda, where all clearances of vessels are made and customs paid. You need feel no hesitation about going through the building.

BOWLING GREEN.

In front of the Custom House is Bowling Green, the oldest park in the city, and justly called the "Cradle of New York," for in its vicinity cluster the city's oldest traditions. Before 1776 a lead statue of King George III. stood here, but on the evening that the Declaration of Independence was read to the people of the city, the statue was thrown down and the metal moulded into bullets, to be used in the battles for liberty.

PRODUCE EXCHANGE.

Opposite Bowling Green is the large building of the Produce Exchange. It is an imposing structure. The organization is the largest of its kind in the world, having 3,000 members. The visitors' gallery on the second floor is open from 10 to 2 without tickets.

STANDARD OIL BUILDING.

A short distance above, at 26 Broadway, is a large granite building, occupied by the Standard Oil Company as an executive building. The first New York Directory, published in 1786, in the advertisement tells of the excellent rum sold in the tavern at 26 Broadway.

ALDRICH COURT, 39 AND 41 BROADWAY.

This is the site of the first habitations of white men on the Island of Manhattan. Adrian Block erected four houses or huts here in 1613. He also built the first vessel built in Manhattan, called the Restless, in 1614.

FRAUNCES' TAVERN.

This building, at the corner of Broad and Pearl streets, a short distance (one block) to the right from Produce Exchange, is the most historic building downtown. It was built in 1725 as a residence, but afterward became an inn, kept by a former chef of General Washington. Here the Chamber of Commerce was organized and held its meetings for some years. At the close of the Revolutionary War, in 1783, General Washington made it his headquarters for a time. On the 4th day of December, 1783, Washington being about to leave the city, invited his officers to meet him in the long room on the second floor of the building, and after a few words of parting, gave each a loving caress and embrace and bade them an affectionate farewell. A few years ago a society of noble-hearted men, the "Sons of the Revolution," purchased, at a cost of $340,000, and restored the property and presented it to the people as a memorial. Visitors are allowed free access to the building, and should not fail to go to the long room and write their names in the visitors record on the table. This table was once the property of the immortal Father of our Country. Also read the tablet on the wall, giving an account of the farewell by an eye witness of the event.

COENTIES SLIP

is two blocks east of here, on the water front. Here are docked the boats which come down from the Erie Canal, laden with all sorts of produce, mostly flour and grain. At the end of the pier may occasionally be seen one of the fast-disappearing type of merchant ships, three or four masters, bringing the merchandise of the Orient. Thirty years ago the wharves on this river were packed with large vessels of this type, but steamships have driven them out. This vicinity was the site of the first tavern and the first city hall.

DELMONICO'S RESTAURANT.

Turning north a few blocks to the corner of Beaver and William streets, we come to the famous Delmonico's, the catering of which is known all over the world as being of the highest type of gastronomic and culinary culture. Their principal building is now at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street.

COTTON EXCHANGE.

Corner of William and Beaver Streets. Opposite Delmonico's is the Cotton Exchange, where the trading and sales in cotton are principally made, and it is usually a pretty lively spot. It is open from 10 to 2. The visitors' gallery is on the second floor. On this site William Bradford, the first public printer (April 10, 1693), issued the first newspaper printed in Manhattan, "The New York Gazette" in November, 1725.

FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST CO.

A block north of the Cotton Exchange, on William street, is the Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., the largest trust company in the world. This company issues checks and letters of credit to all parts of the world.

CITY BANK.

Continuing through William Street, one block, we come to Wall street, and the first building we see as we turn to the right is the City Bank. This is the largest financial institution in America, and next to the Bank of England, probably the largest in the world. This is sometimes called the Standard Oil Bank; but the only interest that the Standard Oil Co. has in it is through the private interests of individual members. You can enter from the front and view the interior. This building was formerly the Custom House.

WALL STREET.

You are now on the great street whose institutions govern the financial operations of this country, and will eventually those of the whole world, for Europe and the Orient are beginning to know that our securities are the safest and best paying investments in the world. On the block between William and Nassau streets are some of the largest and most important of the banks and trust companies. The street is only about one-half mile long and derives its name from the wall that followed the course of the street and which was the boundary line of the old city. In 1709 the Slave Market was at the foot of the street.

ASSAY OFFICE.

On the right, going toward Broadway, we come to the Assay Office, where all government assays are made and refining done. It is the oldest structure on the street (1823). Jewelers and other manufacturers send their refuse of gold and silver here to be refined, and it is returned to them in blocks of fine gold and silver, bearing the government stamp, which guarantees its purity. Visitors are admitted daily from 10 to 2.

UNITED STATES TREASURY.

Next to the Assay Office is the Treasury Building, where all the financial business of the government is transacted for this district. Visitors are welcome from 10 to 2. On this site originally stood Federal Hall, the first seat of the United States Government, and where Washington took the oath of office as first President of the United States, and the stone in front of the statue is the one he stood on. On the steps of the present building General Garfield stood when the announcement of President Lincoln's death was received in the city, and made his famous speech to a mass of people, who packed every intersecting street, beginning, "God reigns and the government at Washington still lives." It was a remarkable coincidence that Garfield should afterward meet the same fate as Lincoln.

J. P. MORGAN & CO.

Opposite the Treasury is the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., an institution of great interest, for in no part of the world is this great house unknown. The great work which was done by Mr. J. P. Morgan in helping allay the financial convulsion of 1907 deserves the hearty commendation of all the American people.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.

Opposite J. P. Morgan & Co.'s, on Broad street, is the New York Stock Exchange, a magnificent marble building. Admission is only allowed to the gallery by introduction of a member of the exchange.

TRINITY CHURCH.

At the head of Wall street stands Trinity Church, whose church history dates back over 200 years. It is the richest church organization in America. The graveyard surrounding the church contains tombstones dating as far back as the first church itself, among which are those of Robert Fulton and Alexander Hamilton. The beautiful bronze doors in front and on the sides were a memorial gift from the Astor family (who worship here) and cost fifty thousand dollars. The church is always open and visitors are at liberty to walk through the aisles and around the altars

BANK CLEARING HOUSE.

Opposite the Equitable Building, on Cedar Street, is the Clearing House, where all the associated banks of the city make their exchanges every morning at 10 o'clock and receive or pay their balances. This is the most costly building for its size in the city. Its steel vaults are the largest and strongest in the world.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BUILDING.

65 Liberty street. The society is the oldest commercial organization in the United States and was founded in Fraunces' Tavern in 1768

MAIDEN LANE.

The street to the north on the right hand side is Maiden Lane. This is the centre of the wholesale watch, diamond, jewelry and silverware trade. The block from Broadway to Nassau street contains many fine stores, which make a large display of gold and silverware and precious stones.

GOLDEN HILL.

John and William Streets. On block north of Maiden Lane is John street and about this spot was shed the first blood of the Revolution in a battle between the Sons of Liberty and British Regulars, January 18, 1770.

OLDEST BUILDING IN THE CITY.

122 William street. A few doors north of John street stands a sturdy-looking building, built in 1692, of bricks imported from Holland. It is a great many years older than any other building in the city. John street, or First Methodist Church, on the block east between William and Nassau streets, stands the cradle of Methodism in this country, erected in 1818. Many interesting mementos can be seen. Devotional meetings are held daily from 12 to 1.

SINGER BUILDING.

Returning through John street to Broadway on the west side we see the Singer Building, owned by the heirs of the inventors of the Singer Sewing machine. You can go to the top of the tower by the elevator, by paying a fee.

HUDSON TERMINAL BUILDING.

Cortlandt and Church Streets. Back of the Singer Building are the buildings underneath which is the terminal of the tunnel, which runs under the Hudson river to Jersey City and Hoboken, and intersecting the Pennsylvania, Erie and Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad Depots.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

Returning to Broadway and going north two blocks we come to historic old St Paul's Church, belonging to the Trinity Corporation. The building is the oldest church edifice in the city (1767). The building and appurtenances, with the exception of the organ and some of the fittings, are just as it was built. When part of the city was destroyed by fire in 1776 (Trinity included), the roof only of St. Paul's was burned. After that the British used it as a stable. After the evacuation in 1783 it was restored and during the city's occupation by the American troops, General Washington and Governor Clinton worshipped here. The church is open daily from 9 to 4, and visitors are always welcome and may enjoy the privilege of sitting in the pews once occupied by Washington and Clinton.

ASTOR HOUSE.

Across from St. Paul's is the Astor House, the oldest hotel in the city and the only one of any prominence downtown. It is an ancient appearing establishment. It is patronized mostly by traveling salesmen. It gives an excellent service. This property is owned by the Astor family, the head of which was the lamented John Jacob Astor, who so heroically sacrificed his life on the steamship Titanic, April 15, 1912.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH.

Barclay and Church streets. One block west on Barclay street stands St. Peter's Church, the oldest Catholic Church in the city. The first Roman Catholic priest arrived in New York in 1683, but not until 1784 was the denomination allowed its religious liberty. The first church was built on this site in 1786.

THE WOOLWORTH BUILDING.

On the block north of the Astor House is the highest building in the world. It is 750 feet from the sidewalk to the top of the tower. There are 57 stories, with a lookout gallery on the 56th floor, accessible to visitors. The great light on apex of dome can be seen for 50 miles. The building is owned by Mr. F. W. Woolworth, the proprietor of the chain of 5 and 10-cent stores throughout the country. The entire cost is about eight million dollars. The building is constructed of fireproof material throughout. The present office is at 280 Broadway.

POST OFFICE.

To the north of the Astor House is the Post Office. In the upper stories the United States Courts are held. On this site from 1766 to 1776 stood the Liberty Pole, erected by the Sons of Liberty to commemorate the repeal of the Stamp Act. In its defense the first martyr's blood of the Revolution was shed on January 8, 1770.

CITY HALL.

North of the Post Office, in the park, is the City Hall, the headquarters of the City Government. The park itself is one of the oldest pieces of land belonging to the city, the title having been given in 1886. Every spot of the ground is hallowed with historic interest. The hall was built in 1803-1812, and at that time was considered to be on the outskirts of the city. This building is considered to be one of the finest pieces of architecture in the city. On the first floor is the Mayor's office and the Marriage License Bureau. On the second floor is the Governor's room, used for official receptions and other especial occasions. It contains many articles of historical interest, belonging to Washington and other noted personages. This room is open to visitors from 10 to 2.

PRINTING HOUSE SQUARE.

To the east of the City Hall Park is Printing House Square, where most of the large newspaper buildings are located.

BROOKLYN BRIDGE.

At the north of the square is the Brooklyn Bridge, the first great highway to bind Manhattan Island to Long Island. A walk across the bridge is very inspiring, particularly just after dark, when the tall office buildings have been lighted, giving them the appearance of castles on hills.

WORLD BUILDING.

At the entrance to the Bridge is the World Building. The extreme height is 375½ feet. A fine view of the city can be obtained from the tower from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

MUNICIPAL BUILDING.

To the north of the Bridge is the new Municipal Building for city offices.

HALL OF RECORDS.

A massive stone building at the corner of Chambers and Centre streets.

THE TOMBS AND DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

Going north through Centre street, a few blocks we come to the Tombs or City Jail, where persons are held awaiting trial, and opposite is the Criminal Court Building, where trials are held for crimes. A covered bridge connects this building with the Tombs, called the "Bridge of Sighs," because across this bridge persons have to go from prison to trial. The courts are open to the public from 10 to 2.

FIVE POINTS AND PARADISE PARK.

To the east of the Tombs, through Leonard street, we come to Paradise Park. This section was formerly known as the Five Points a generation ago, the centre of all that was vile in city life. It is now the principal Italian quarter downtown.

CHINATOWN.

Two blocks east to Mott street, we come to Chinatown, the far-famed centre of Oriental life in this great cosmopolitan metropolis. Here you can see the Chinese in their native environment; their stores, joss houses, theatres, and everything connected with their mode of life. No one need feel any hesitancy in going about their streets unattended, for they—the Chinese—are the most peaceable of citizens.

THE BOWERY.

We turn through either Pell or Doyer Streets and enter the Bowery, once the great emporium of the East Side, but its glory now departed

THE EAST SIDE.

Going up a block or two past the Manhattan Bridge, we turn east through Canal street to the great Ghetto or Jewish quarter. You can wander around here as long as you have spare time, and find something new to interest you at every block. At Delancey street we see the Williamsburgh Bridge, the second bridge built across the river. The high tide of congestion in these streets is reached on Orchard street, from Delancey to Houston street.

COOPER UNION.

Bowery and 8th street. Returning west to the Bowery, we go north a few blocks to 8th street and reach the Cooper Institute, the great free educational college built and endowed by his heirs. The evening schools of science, art and trades, all of which are free, are attended by over 3,500 students annually.

BIBLE HOUSE.

Opposite Cooper Union is the Bible House, an ancient appearing building containing the office and sales rooms of the various Bible societies of America.

WANAMAKER'S.

Broadway, Ninth and Tenth streets. Across from the Bible House is Wanamaker's (formerly A. T. Stewart's) dry goods house, the acme of department store culture. On the second floor of the new building is a large auditorium, or music hall, beautifully upholstered and decorated and containing a large organ. Free organ, piano, Pianola and vocal recitals and concerts are given almost daily, morning and afternoon, by first class artists. Visitors have the privilege of going in and taking any vacant seat and can remain five minutes or an hour, as their time will permit, going from there into the main building and across a covered bridge into the old building. On the top floor is a fine gallery of valuable paintings and a commodious restaurant. Toilets are on this floor. Everything is done by the proprietor of this es-establishment for the welfare and comfort, as well as the pleasure, of its patrons and the public.

GRACE CHURCH.

Leaving Wanamaker's, on the Broadway side, you go up one block to Grace Church, another branch of Trinity Church, and next to it the wealthiest and most beautiful Protestant church in the city. This organization is widely known for the large number of its wealthy members and for its vast system of benevolence and philanthropy. The church is open daily to visitors.

UNION SQUARE.

Four blocks above Grace Church is Union Square, a noted park formerly surrounded by the residences of wealthy citizens, but now given up entirely to trade. The statue of Washington at the southeast corner stood sixty years ago in the centre of the Crystal Palace, the first international fair held in this country. The statue of Lafayette was presented to the city by citizens of France. Lincoln's statue was erected by the city.

THE DRY GOODS DISTRICT.

Going west through 14th street, we come to the retail goods district. Within the sphere from Fifth to Sixth avenue and north to 23rd street and east to Broadway are centered many large department stores.

HALLORAN'S RESTAURANT.

215 Sixth avenue, West Side, 1 door above 14th street. By this time you must begin to feel the need of a lunch and you can find no more select spot than this far famed restaurant to get a dinner or light lunch served in the finest manner and at very reasonable prices.

GREENHUT-SEIGEL COOPER CO.

Sixth Avenue, between 18th and 19th Streets. Known far and wide as the "Big Store." In the centre of the building is a large fountain and the phrase, "Meet me at the fountain" is a byword for all New Yorkers. A large statue of Liberty enlightening the world, a facsimile of the one which stood in the lake at the Chicago Fair, is in the fountain. The food department and exhibit on the top floor is the largest and finest of any store in the world.

EDEN MUSEE.

West 23rd Street. On 23rd Street, corner of Sixth Avenue, is the Masonic Temple, and a few doors above, on 23rd Street is the celebrated wax figure museum, known all over the country as the Eden Musee. It is a literal art gallery of wax representations of famous personages and events, and should not be missed. Admission is 50 cents weekdays; 25c on Sundays.

FIFTH AVENUE BUILDING.

Broadway, 5th Avenue and 23rd Street, east to Broadway, passing many fine stores, we come to the Fifth Avenue Building, on the site of the world renowned Fifth Avenue Hotel.

FLAT IRON BUILDING.

Broadway, 5th Avenue and 23rd Street. On the opposite corner is the renowned triangular edifice known as the Flat Iron Building from its peculiar shape. The Plaza in front is known as the breeziest spot uptown, and only a hobble skirt or a ding-a-ling hat can withstand the fairy zephyrs which waft around the vicinity on a windy day.

MADISON SQUARE.

Crossing from the Flat Iron Building, we come to Madison Square, on the east side of which stand many noted buildings, foremost of which is the one of the largest office buildings in the world, and which has the highest tower of any building uptown. A magnificent view can be had from the top of the tower. A fee is charged.

METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE BUILDING,

DR. PARKHURST'S CHURCH.

To the north of the Metropolitan Building is the church of Dr. Parkhurst, the renowned clergyman who has done so much to assist in civic betterment and the suppression of vice and crime.

APPELLATE COURT.

One block further north, at 25th Street, is the Appellate Court Building, a very costly structure of white marble. The proceedings of the court are open to the public.

MADISON SQUARE GUARDEN.

At the corner of 26th Street is the Madison Square Garden, a large structure devoted to the holding of large fairs, horse shows, athletic exhibitions, and political gatherings. This building was designed by Stanford White, and he had his office in the tower.

PARK & TILFORD.

One block west, at 26th Street and Fifth Avenue, in the Brunswick Building, is the elegant grocery house of Park & Tilford, where can be obtained everything pertaining to gastronomy, as also the finest wines, cigars and confections. This beautiful exhibit is almost a dream and from the attractive manner that the goods are presented, it would seem as though they were too good to eat. Their exhibit of confectionery, all of their own manufacture, is exceptionally fine. Goods may be ordered and shipped to any part of the country.

BRENTANO'S BOOK STORE.

Fifth Avenue, corner of 27th Street. Adjoining Park & Tilford's on the north, is another establishment of world-wide fame and the acme of delight to the literary epicure, Brentano's. Here can be found almost any book or magazine of any note and if they fail to have it in stock, will get it for you, even from the ends of the earth. This is the only house in the city that has constantly on hand a full line of Baedeker's Guides through Europe.

LITTLE CHURCH AROUND THE CORNER.

29th Street, east of 5th Avenue. Going north two blocks and turning east from 5th Avenue is the noted church which derived its popular name from the fact that when application was made to the rector of another more fashionable church near by to read the funeral service over the remains of George Holland, an actor well known for his virtues, the rector hesitated and remarked that there was "a little church around the corner" where they did that sort of thing. The incident received wide publicity, and the name has clung to the church ever since. The proper name is the Church of the Transfiguration."

PENNSYLVANIA R. R. STATION.

Returning to Broadway (one block west), we turn north to 32nd Street and then west to the new depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad. This is the largest depot building in the world. Trains drawn by electric motors enter from New Jersey through tunnels under the North River. They also pass through subway and tunnels under the East River out to Long Island. The entire station occupies 28 acres. The cost of this great undertaking was over $100,000,000.

THE TENDERLOIN.

The part of the city stretching from 23rd to 59th Street and Fifth to Eighth Avenues, is familiarly known as the "Tenderloin District." It is the centre of all the prominent theatres, dance houses, concert gardens and many notorious places of resort, and through the heart of which runs what is called the "Great White Way."

HERALD BUILDING.

Broadway, 35th to 36th Streets. Coming from the Pennsylvania Depot, we go through 32nd Street east to Broadway, and north to 35th Street, passing in succession the large department stores of we come to the

NEW YORK HERALD NEWSPAPER BUILDING.

This is a unique building, the first floor on the street level being enclosed with large windows, through which can be seen the large printing presses which cost from $250,000 to $500,000 each. In the late afternoons and at night you can see them at work getting out the paper. This exhibition always attracts a great deal of attention.

WALDORF-ASTORIA HOTEL.

Turning back one block to 34th Street and going east to Fifth Avenue, we reach the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, one of the most noted hotels in the world. It accommodates 1,500 guests and has 1,400 servants. It was the first hotel to establish wireless communication. Visitors are welcome.

KNICKERBOCKER TRUST CO.

Northwest corner 5th Avenue and 34th Street. On the opposite corner from the Waldorf is the fine building of the Knickerbocker Trust Co., which stands on the site formerly occupied by the A. T. Stewart mansion, which, in the last generation, was considered the show house of New York.

B. ALTMAN & CO.

Northeast corner 5th Avenue and 34th Street. On the other side of the avenue, at 35th Street, is the handsome dry goods establishment of B. Altman & Co. who deals only in the finest lines of goods.

GORHAM MFG. CO.

Southwest corner 5th Avenue and 36th Street. On the right hand side of Fifth Avenue, at 36th Street, is the building of the Gorham Mfg. Co. It is one of the handsomest and most substantial buildings on the avenue. The Gorham Co. are the largest manufacturers of silverware in the world. Visitors are always welcome.

TIFFANY & CO.

Southeast corner 5th Avenue and 37th Street. On the opposite side, one block above, at 37th Street, is the beautiful white marble building of Tiffany & Co. This firm has an international reputation as dealers in the highest grades of diamonds, jewelry, precious stones and art products. Do not fail to visit it.

NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY.

5th Avenue, 40th to 42nd Street. Going north a few blocks to 40th Street, and passing on the way a number of fine stores, we come to the New York Public Library building, one of the handsomest buildings in the city. It occupies the ground formerly used as the city reservoir.

BRYANT PARK.

6th Avenue, 40th to 42nd Street. In the rear of the Library is Bryant Park. It was originally the site of the Crystal Palace, a large glass and iron building, in which was held the first world's fair held in this country in 1853. The building was burned in 1858.

GRAND CENTRAL TERMINAL STATION.

East from 5th Avenue, two blocks, brings us to the wonderful great depot, which will be the home of the New York Central Lines and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. This is by far the greatest and grandest piece of railroad architecture in the world. The entire station and connecting buildings cover a space of seventy acres. There will be 32 miles of tracks, and will accommodate 1,200 cars. The main terminal building will be ready for use this year. The entire work will be completed in 1915. The cost is close up to four hundred million dollars.

TIMES SQUARE.

Turning back again westerly through 42nd Street to Broadway, we arrive at Times Square. Here is the Times newspaper building, with its fine tower. On the opposite corner is the Knickerbocker Hotel, and two blocks above on Broadway the Hotel Astor. This vicinity is the centre of the hotels, theatres and automobile establishments.

ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL.

5th Avenue, 50th to 51st Street. Returning to Fifth Avenue and going north to 50th Street, we arrive at St. Patrick's Cathedral, the handsomest church edifice in America.

Old Hudson River Railroad Station, corner West Broadway and Chambers St. Containing four tracks.

The church is always open and visitors have free access. When no service is going on you can walk entirely around the interior and past the beautiful altars.

CENTRAL PARK.

From the cathedral we go north a few blocks past many fine residences, the names of which are given in the directory in the back of this book, to 59th Street and the main entrance to Central Park. On the south side of this square is the large residence of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, on the west the Plaza Hotel, and on the east two fine hotels—the Savoy and the Netherlands. If your time will permit you can here enter the Park and walk around, or take a ride in a park carriage for 25 cents, getting a transfer which will allow you to stop off at important points and resume your journey in a following vehicle.

METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART.

If you do not care for the tour through the park you can get on top of a Fifth Avenue stage at 59th Street and ride up the avenue past the elegant residences of the Astors, Goulds and others to 83rd Street. Here stands the Metropolitan Museum of Art and Antiquities. Do not fail to visit it. Admission to the museum is free from 10 to 5 on all weekdays except Monday and Fridays, when an admission fee of 25 cents is charged. On Sundays and holidays it is open from 1 to 6 free.

THE OBELISK.

To the southwest of the Museum is the Obelisk. This great monolith, which stood upon the bank of the River Nile, in Egypt, for over 3,000 years, was presented in 1877 to the City of New York by the Khedive of Egypt and was brought over to this country in an especially prepared ship by Commodore H. H. Gorringe, of the U. S. Navy, at a cost of $75,000. The entire expense was met by the late William H. Vanderbilt.

There are, of course, many more places of lesser interest that could be added to this work, but as it is particularly designed to meet the needs of those whose stay in the city is limited, we feel assured that a person or a party can learn more about the principal places of interest than from any other published.

The publisher is indebted to Mr. T. Wilkerson for copies of fine views of New York contained herein. The illustrations of old New York are from old prints.

To those who do not care for the exertion of walking or trolley riding, a comfortable and agreeable way of seeing the principal places is presented by the various sight seeing automobile companies, who will take you around under the direction of competent guides, who announce and describe the places in passing. They usually start once an hour from different points along Broadway, between 23rd and 42 Streets. The charge is about $1.00 for the round trip.

A sight seeing yacht sails around the harbor, and all around Manhattan Island, every day from Battery Park pier, at 10:30 A. M. and 2:30 P. M.

By Paths

By getting on top of a Fifth Avenue stage, going north from Washington Square or south from 90th Street and Fifth Avenue, you can ride the whole length of the avenue for 10 cents. A finely illustrated book, with an extremely interesting history of Fifth Avenue, called "Both Sides of Fifth Avenue," published by J. F. L. Collins, 1495 Broadway, New York, will be found handy for reference.

RIVERSIDE DRIVE AND GRANT'S TOMB.

One branch of the Fifth Avenue stage line starts from Washington Square, going up the avenue to 57th Street, then across to Riverside Drive, then north, past the Soldiers and Sailors Monument to Columbia College, St. John's Cathedral, St. Luke's Hospital and Grant's Tomb, for 10 cents. This ride will also give you a fine view of the Palisades and the Hudson River.

BROADWAY.

To ride the whole length of Broadway, by trolley, ask the starter at the Battery for a "Broadway only" car. This will take you to 129th Street, and the conductor will give you a transfer to a car there, which will take you to Broadway and King's Bridge. All for 5 cents.

CONEY ISLAND.

There is probably no place in the country so well and favorably known to the mass of the people by name as this great popular resort. Visitors to the city feel that their visit is lost unless they have spent a few hours at least at the Island. It is the one great ocean spot dreamed of by all pleasure seekers travelling eastward, from the Pacific Coast to New York Bay. The handy and rapid means of reaching the beach from the city is a great factor in its favor, as most any of the different lines will bring you there in an hour from the Bridge. The various elevated lines being the most handy and convenient. The boats run frequently from the Battery.

Street Directory of the Borough of Manhattan

Hints for Using the Street Directory.

All numbered East side streets from E. 8th to E. 142d begin at 5th Av. and run to East River. Beginning with E. 11th St. one hundred numbers are used on each block between the avenues (Madison and Lexington Avenues not considered). The location of any given number is thus definitely indicated.

All numbered West side streets from W. 10th to W. 144th begin at 5th Av. (except those from 59th to 109th, which begin at Central Park W.) and run to North or Hudson River, the same principle of numbering being used.

All odd numbers are on the north side of the street, the even numbers on the south side.
